Carter, Kennedy Nearer Accord

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Democratic Party, shaken by internal feuding and sagging ratings in the polls, opens its national convention today amid signs that President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are moving toward an amicable end to their year-long struggle for the presidential nomination.

After Carter acceded Sunday to Kennedy demands for changes in the economic planks of the party platform, the senator said, "Quite frankly, this is getting to be the kind of platform that I welcome to run on and take across this country."

Earlier in the day, Kennedy cited the platform as the major factor that would determine whether he could support Carter if the president is renominated for a second term.

Despite delegate surveys indicating that the president's majority is holding, Kennedy was not ready to concede Carter the nomination or a victory in tonight's critical vote on the convention rule that would require delegates to abide by state primary and convention results.

Also, Carter and Kennedy remained at odds on two major economic proposals in the platform — Kennedy's call for a $12 billion program to create 800,000 jobs and wage and price controls to fight inflation.

"We don't think planks that detailed should go into the platform," Vice President Walter F. Mondale said on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

Kennedy will address the convention Tuesday night during debate on the party platform.

Carter aides described the president's compromise on the platform as a major, unilateral concession to Kennedy. Among the planks the president agreed Sunday to support was one that criticizes Carter's anti-inflation strategy and pledges the party will not "pursue a policy of high interest rates and unemployment as a means to fight inflation."

The unity moves appeared prompted by fear that unless the Democrats close ranks, the Republicans will capture the White House and score major gains in Congress in the November general election.

"There's nothing in the world that can bring a group of Democrats together like Ronald Reagan," said Robert Strauss, Carter's campaign chairman.

But lobbying for today's rules debate was fierce, all the same.

Carter backers led by Mondale visited delegates from various states Sunday night, arguing mightily against Kennedy's bid for an "open" convention. With the binding-delegate rule, Mondale told Pennsylvania's delegation, "the 1980 Democratic Convention will represent the 19 million people who sent voters here."

Kennedy also made the rounds of delegations, but his message mixed arguments against the rule with pleas for party unity.

"No matter what button you wear this evening, I'm going to be proud to work with you," Kennedy told one delegation Sunday as he toured gatherings around Manhattan. "We're going to be together in the fall against Ronald Reagan."

Earlier Sunday, on CBS' "Face the Nation," Kennedy said it would be "a nip and tuck vote either way, but I'm confident that we will be successful" in the effort to break Carter's hold on a majority of the 3,331 delegate votes.

On the "Today" show this morning, Kennedy continued to maintain that he will win the nomination. He said of Carter's platform concessions:

"The reason we've been successful is that frankly, we've had the votes. These are the issues that I've taken to the farms and street corners of this country. The administration opposed them. Now they've acceded to the popular will."

Kennedy must defeat the rule to keep alive his chances for the presidential nomination. If tonight's rules vote commits Carter's 1,985.6 delegates to support him on the first nominating ballot Wednesday night, the president will have clinched the nomination, which requires 1,666 votes. Kennedy has 1,234.4 votes.

Shortly after party chairman John C. White calls the convention to order at 4 p.m. EDT in Madison Square Garden — the same arena where Carter won the 1976 nomination — delegates will begin debate on the rule requiring delegates to abide by the results of state primaries and conventions, which would result in a "closed" convention and assure Carter the majority he needs.

Noted attorney Edward Bennett Williams, one of the leaders of the "open" convention drive, predicted today that most delegates would support the "open" convention move.

"I think we have a tinderbox here. This convention is waiting to be electrified and released," Williams said in an interview with CBS-TV. "I believe if the delegates are left to their own devices, they would vote overwhelmingly for an open convention."

However, in a separate CBS-TV interview, Mondale predicted that the rule binding delegates to their candidate would be adopted by the convention.

Heavy Rains From Allen

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Texas

(AP) — The remnants of Hurricane Allen dumped more rain on southern Texas early today, forcing the evacuation of about 2,500 people from low-lying areas.

Residents left their homes in Alice and Kingsville in the Coastal Bend area where flood waters were reported to be up to 5 feet deep.

"We've been rescuing people from stranded vehicles all night," said Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher Jerry Hutchins in Corpus Christi. He said no injuries had been reported.

As the storm — which has been downgraded to a tropical depression — limps across northern Mexico, forecasters are expecting tides at Baffin Bay near Kingsville to reach 9 to 10 feet above normal. Also, the Nueces River, which empties into Corpus Christi Bay, is expected to rise 7 feet above normal.

Allen caused no direct injuries or deaths in Texas, either as the hurricane that battered the coast or as the tropical storm that cut into the state, but it spun off tornadoes that injured about 20 people.

Two people died of heart attacks while the storm was in the area. More than 100 people had been killed in Allen's rampage through the Caribbean.

Authorities told people who had been evacuated from their homes from Corpus Christi south to Brownsville not to return. Major roads were impassable because of flooding. About 200,000 people fled their homes Friday as authorities predicted Allen would match its deadly Caribbean rage with widespread destruction in Texas.

"We were very, very lucky," said Gov. Bill Clements. "There is a great difference in what we were anticipating and what we received."

"It was like a hurricane with eyes," said Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami. "Every time it threatened a populated area, there was a little zag in its track."

Earlier, at least 100 people were killed as the hurricane swept across the Caribbean, past Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula and into the Gulf. The deaths included 56 in Haiti, 16 in St. Lucia, 8 in Jamaica, 4 in Cuba and 3 in the Dominican Republic. In addition, 13 people died when a helicopter crashed while carrying them from an offshore oil platform and 1 person was missing and feared drowned in the Dominican Republic.

Frank said a high-pressure system that had been driving the hurricane through the Gulf of Mexico weakened as Allen approached Texas, slowing its progress inland from 25 mph to 10 and then 5 mph. That in turn cut Allen's ability to maintain the 170 mph winds at its center, and they dropped off to 110 mph.

The hurricane was downgraded to a tropical storm Sunday as it slogged its way northwest across sparsely populated areas of Texas and into northern Mexico. The highest sustained winds were 45 mph in a few squalls.

At 6 a.m. CDT, the National Hurricane Center in Miami again downgraded Allen, this time to a tropical depression. Its center was over Mexico about 90 miles west-northwest of Laredo.

Allen was expected to continue moving toward the west-northwest at 10 mph or less today with winds of about 35 mph.

More than 75,000 homes along the coast were without electricity Sunday night, including 15,000 in Corpus Christi, according to Central Power and Light Co.

The fishing resort town of Port Mansfield, north of Brownsville, sustained heavy damage. Armed deputies kept people from the town of 120 for fear that leaking butane and ammonia tanks would explode.

"About two-thirds of the place is gone and 90 percent if everything is damaged," said Deputy Glen Fisk.

An overnight curfew was in effect in Corpus Christi — the region's largest city with 230,000 residents — to prevent looting. Sixty-five businesses were torn open by Allen's winds and at six people were arrested on charges of grabbing merchandise from windows.

Corpus Christi Mayor Luther Jones said damage caused by winds, rains and nine-foot tides — the highest in 60 years — was expected to run in the millions of dollars. But city officials said the damage was minor compared to the havoc wreaked by Hurricane Celia, a 1970 storm that killed 13 people and caused a national record $500 million in damage.

Tornadoes spun off of Allen's rim and cut through San Marcos, Austin and Bishop. Damage in the three towns was estimated to total $3 million.

In San Marcos, hardest hit by the high winds, a twister upset mobile homes and ripped the roof off of an elementary school used to shelter those who had left their homes because of Allen.

In Bishop, several businesses were damaged, but the tornado skipped over a high school that housed more than 600 people who sought refuge from the storm.

"All I can say is we're real lucky. It would have been a real bad situation here if that (tornado) had stayed on the ground," said Darryl Hartless, a Bishop police officer.

As Allen had approached the coast, a Liberian oil tanker with 21 million gallons of oil aboard began floundering and officials feared for the lives of the 37 crewmen. The ship ran aground, but the Coast Guard said Sunday it was not in any danger and the crew had decided to ride out the storm rather than be taken by helicopter from the ship.

For American Hostages Freedom Seen As No Closer

By The Associated Press

Iran's Parliament approved Mohammad Ali Rajaie as prime minister today, removing another obstacle to the debate on the 52 American hostages. But their freedom appeared no closer since Rajaie is a hardliner picked by the Moslem fundamentalists who want the captives tried as spies.

Tehran Radio reported that, with the end of the Moslem holy month of Ramadan, some 460 Iranians convicted by anti-narcotics squads were being released from prison in a special amnesty.

There has been some speculation that the end of Ramadan might bring clemency and freedom for the Americans, but there was no mention of them in the broadcasts.

At the same time, the official Iranian news agency Pars said 15 people had been executed in Iran Sunday for anti-government activity, espionage and narcotics trafficking, according to a Tehran dispatch of the Soviet Tass news agency.

A Pars report said 153 deputies voted in favor of Rajaie, 24 against and 19 abstained. It added that Rajaie, the former education minister, "therefore received a majority vote and will now be able to go ahead and form a cabinet."

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has charged the Parliament with deciding the fate of the hostages, now in their 282nd day of captivity.

The last remaining hurdle to be cleared before their fate can be discussed is the installation of a cabinet.

The Parliament accepted President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's nomination of Rajaie on Sunday. Bani-Sadr was pressured into choosing Rajaie — who launched a campaign to purge Iran's schools of Western influences — by a select committee after his first nominee, police chief Mostafa Mir-Salim, was rejected.

In his letter indicating the choice to the Parliament, or Majlis, Bani-Sadr said, "Having heard the consultations of the select committee and the preference that the esteemed Majlis has indicated, I introduce Mr. Mohammad Ali Rajaie as the prime minister."

This irritated some of the deputies of the dominant Islamic Republican Party, who charged Bani-Sadr's choice of words indicated he was railroaded into choosing Rajaie. Despite their annoyance, the formalities proceeded. Rajaie was formally accepted and rubber-stamp approval was expected.

The hostages were seized while Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, ousted by Khomeini's revolution in January 1979, was undergoing cancer treatment in New York. Pahlavi died in Egypt July 27, but the Iranians are still demanding his vast wealth be returned as part of the hostages' ransom.

Other demands they have made are for the U.S. government to apologize for past "crimes" in Iran and guarantee it will stay out of Iran's domestic affairs in the future. On Sunday, a new condition was reported.

"What we want now from the United States is a pledge not to interfere in the internal affairs of all Islamic states or the affairs of this region," Iranian diplomat Mohammed Shirazi was quoted as telling the Lebanese magazine Monday Morning.

"Those are our demands now. If the United States meets them, the hostage crisis will be settled. If it doesn't, we know what the fate of the hostages will be," a reference to trials for spying, a capital crime.

Shirazi, son of Ayatollah Abdulla Shirazi, a major religious figure in Iran, said his remarks reflected official thinking in Iran. There was no immediate confirmation.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie told U.S. News & World Report that the U.S. government was considering new diplomatic initiatives to get the hostages freed. He did not elaborate.

In Wisconsin, the lawyer for Barbara Timm, mother of hostages Kevin Hermening, said she has asked Iranians for permission to make another trip to Tehran. She traveled to Tehran last April and visited her son, a Marine sergeant.

A crowd of Iranian youths staged a peaceful demonstration outside the British Embassy in Tehran for the second day today to protest the detention of 68 of their countrymen in British jails, reports from the Iranian capital said.

The Iranian news agency said they chanted slogans against British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the British police. Tehran Radio put the number of protesters at 3,000, but embassy spokesman David Redaway, contacted by telephone from London, said there were no more than 300.

The Iranians jailed in London — 58 men and 10 women — were arrested a week ago during a violent demonstration outside the U.S. Embassy there.

Girl Bitten On Leg By Shark

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A shark alert was in effect along North Carolina's southeast coast today after a weekend of cautious revelry by swimmers — many of them defying a ban on swimming — ended with a 10-year-old girl being bitten on the leg.

The alert covered a 150-mile stretch of the Atlantic shoreline from north of Morehead City to the South Carolina state line, hitting all of the beaches on the state's southern coast.

A ban on public swimming was in effect at Emerald Isle, east of Morehead City Saturday and Sunday morning after 17 sharks were reported along the Carteret County coast Saturday morning. That ban was lifted Sunday, although swimmers had ignored the ban throughout the weekend.

No such ban was in effect at Ocean Isle, a Brunswick County beach about 35 miles south of Wilmington, when swimmer Susan Waters of Greensboro was bitten by a shark that came up behind her as the child played in shallow water.

The girl was pulled from the water by her brother and was taken to a hospital in Supply, but later was transferred to a Wilmington hospital. She was reported in satisfactory condition after undergoing surgery.

Ocean Isle and Brunswick County authorities issued an alert to other swimmers and fishermen along the county's coast late Sunday, warning them of the presence of the shark.

The ban on swimming at Carteret County beaches was lifted after state Marine Fisheries officials strung lines from Atlantic Beach to Bogue Inlet Sunday morning and caught no sharks. Only two sharks were sighted during the early hours Sunday.

"They declared the area clear of sharks, and we lifted the ban," Atlantic Beach Police Chief J. J. Tucker II said. "But it could go back into effect if more shark sightings are reported."

Vacationers flocked to the beaches during the weekend, apparently ignoring the warnings or taking their chances at avoiding the sharks.

Many motels were displaying "no vacancy" signs Saturday, and restaurants had lines of people waiting to get in for dinner Saturday evening.

"Business has never been better," said one motel operator. "There may be sharks here, but it's not stopping people from coming."

One motel's marquee jokingly advertised, "Free Sharks."

High concentrations of sharks were first sighted Friday, and Frank Schwartz, scientist at the University of North Carolina Institute of Marine Sciences, said such numbers of sharks come so close to shore only "once in a blue moon."

Biologists said sharks in schools of 60 or more and weighing from 50 to 300 pounds were sighted in water as shallow as three feet.

Scientists attributed the unusual shark activity to high water temperatures, which were above 80 degrees. The warm water has driven out fish sharks normally feed on, and the sharks moved closer than usual to shore looking for food, according to the marine fisheries division.

N.C. Demos Urge Forget Opinion Polls

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — North Carolina's top elected Democrats urged convention delegates not to be discouraged about President Carter's low standing in public opinion polls as they prepared for today's crucial rules fight.

At the same time, Gov. Jim Hunt told the 69-member Tar Heel delegation that he had been given time on the convention podium Tuesday to speak in support of the Carter platform.

"The best kept secrets are the Democratic administration's accomplishments," Sen. Robert Morgan, vice-chairman of the delegation, said at the initial caucus Sunday. "Don't let the pollsters tell you we're out of it, because we're not."

Of primary concern to Morgan and other Carter leaders is tonight's vote on the convention rule binding delegates to a presidential candidate — a rule which supporters of Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy want to defeat.

An Associated Press survey found only one of North Carolina's 56 Carter delegates was considering voting with the state's 13 Kennedy delegates on that rule. And Hunt, chairman of the delegation, said he would be pleased if that survey proves correct.

"One out of 56 wouldn't be bad," Hunt said. "But I expect we'll have all 56."

The Carter delegates met in a secret session after arriving Sunday to map their strategy on the rules vote, and the Kennedy group planned a similar session today.

So far there has been little evidence that reports that Democratic Rep. Richardson Preyer of Greensboro is on Kennedy's list of seven possible vice presidential candidates has broken loose any North Carolina Carter delegates for Kennedy.

But Morgan was clearly concerned the Kennedy delegates might fail to join in a united party after the convention if Carter is renominated. And he urged them to unite behind the Carter ticket before asking them to leave the caucus so the Carter delegates could talk privately.

"We in the Democratic Party have always been able to come together after our debates," he said. "I would hope we will have a vigorous debate over issues, but do it in such a way that we'll be able to get together back home."

Hunt said he would speak to the convention Tuesday afternoon to oppose a Ken-neddy-backed minority plank on the economy. Hunt said he opposes what he sees as an over-emphasis on fighting unemployment rather than inflation in the Kennedy proposal.

Two Dead In Plane Crash

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two men were killed Sunday when their single-engine Cessna 150 crashed into the backyard of a Mooresville residence.

The plane tore through a car shed and finally came to rest draped across a swing set 30 yards from the home of Hal and Juanita Stewart.

Spoken for the Federal Aviation Administration said the plane apparently was making an approach to the Lake Norman Airport but fell 300 yards short of the runway.

The victims were identified as Phillip Ward Kincaid of Kannapolis and Byron Hayden Hartmann of Mooresville.

Stewart said he and his wife "were sittin' here at the table eatin' when I heard the boom. When I got up from the table I could look out there and see tree limbs falling."

Stewart, 66, said he ran from the house into the backyard and found "this plane was just smashed all to pieces. It looked like the plane was coming straight down."

Perry-Burton Vows Solemnized

GRIFTON — The United Methodist Church here was the scene of the two o'clock Sunday afternoon wedding of Mary Louise Burton of Grifton and David Homer Perry of Fredericksburg, Va.

The Rev. Robert Moore officiated at the double ring ceremony. Wedding music was provided by Brenda Miles of Greenville, organist and flutist, and Tammy Hightower of Mebane.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie David Burton Sr. of Grifton. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Rachel B. Sullivan of Fredericksburg, Va., and the late Mr. Homer Perry.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory sheer chiffon knit over ivory peau de sole designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was embellished with beaded lace over imported English net. The full sheer bishop sleeves featured appliques of alencon lace, with deep embroidered lace cuffs, edged in a ruffle and with buttoned closure. The knife pleated chiffon skirt and attached chapel length train were accented with a deep ruffled flounce of crystal pleating. She wore a chapel length mantilla trimmed in scalloped re-embroidered lace, held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in the matching lace beaded with pearls. Appliques of lace were scattered over the veil. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, white asters, silk violets, baby's breath and English ivy, attached to her mother's bridal prayerbook by ivory streamers.

Marilyn D. Burton of Dallas, Tex., sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a formal princess style gown of dark lavender giana featuring an elasticized pointed-ruffle neckline. Her flowers were a bouquet of yellow daisies tied with lavender and ivory ribbons.

Lewis A. Sullivan of Fredericksburg, Va., stepfather of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included T. David Burton Jr. of Dallas, Tex., brother of the bride, and Dean Luce of Hampton, Va., uncle of the bridegroom.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Serving were Mrs. Emma Whitehurst, Mrs. Nancy Allen, Mrs. Sally Avery and Mrs. Loline Thompson.

The father of the bride entertained the families of the bridal couple and out-of-town guests at Kings Restaurant, Kinston, Saturday.

She will be attending Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va. The bridegroom is a graduate of Fork Union Military Academy and Methodist College. He is employed by Southwestern General Life Insurance.

Ultraviolet light will tend to burn the surface of the eyeball and cornea. The result is a very painful experience often beginning six to nine hours after the time of exposure. At this time, a frightened person may have forgotten the cause of the pain. A sun lamp most certainly can burn the eyes unless eyes are closed before the lamp is switched on. The eyelids provide usually adequate protection to the eye. However, they will, of course, burn along with the rest of the skin of the face. Skiers, unlike beach bathers, receive ultraviolet rays from the snow below directly into the eyes.

Although many cultures have adapted it for their own use, brass is still conceded to have been developed by the Chinese and their imaginative neighbors. While the brass gong is being revived, it is considered a decorating cliché simply because it has been around for a long time. However, there are other Oriental brass effects that are much more original and effective. These include giant brass trays that can be used as decorative shelf pieces or centerpieces. Used in this manner, they are often filled with fresh fruit and flowers, tall candlesticks, oversized ashtrays, show-case plates and bowls perched on teakwood pedestals. Our showroom is filled with beautiful samples of flooring. Stop by or call us for Shop At Home Service. We work hard at LARRY'S CARPETLAND INC., 3010 E. 10th St., 758-2300 to provide you with complete satisfaction. Armstrong, Congoleum and Mannington vinyl, Lee, Milliken, Georgian, Couristan, Calloway and Oriental carpets are carried. Open: Mon. thru Fri. 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; closed Sat. thru August. DECORATING TIP: Vinegar is a must when washing crystal. Rinse in 1 part vinegar to 3 parts warm water. Air dry.

Party Unity A Question

The Democratic National Convention gets underway in New York today, and what a convention it is expected to be.

It will open with immediate controversy as supporters of a rule change which would allow delegates to vote in ways other than which the voters instructed them seek to have the rule changed.

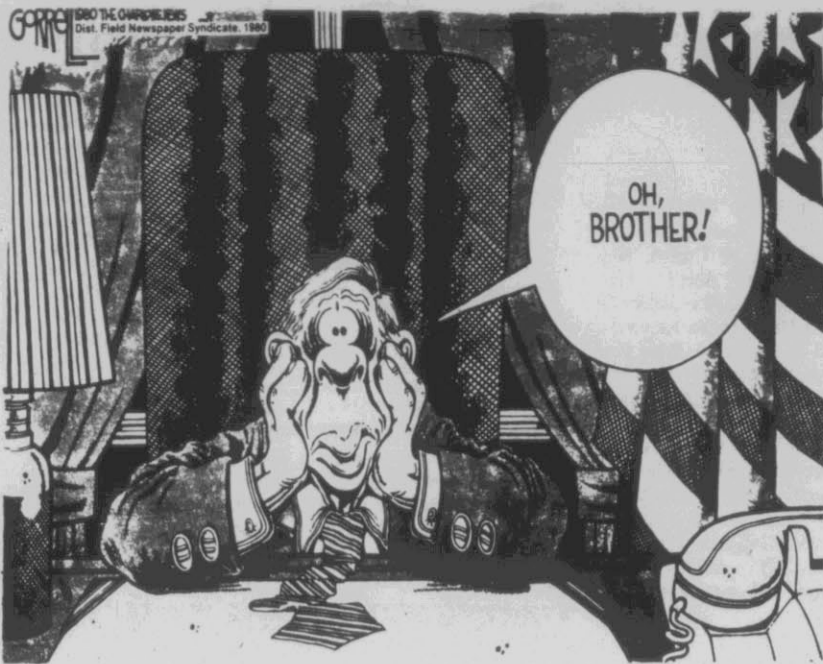

If the forces of President Carter are able to keep the rule change faction in hand, the remainder of the convention might run fairly smoothly. If not, there could be some long nomination speeches and perhaps many roll call votes before a presidential nomination is made.

At this point it appears that Carter will win the nomination no matter which way the rules vote goes. However, the vote on the rules change will give some indication of his strength going into the convention.

Hanging over it all is the dogged campaign of Edward M. Kennedy to wrestle the nomination away. He has said he will address the convention on Tuesday night. From our standpoint it appears that Sen. Kennedy is bent on wrecking the Democratic Party if he can't have his way.

Regardless, national party conventions are not supposed to run smoothly. There are too many delegates and too much personal political ambition involved for that to be. We can expect controversy — lots of it — to surface in this Democratic national convention. Whether the party can rally around after it is all over, only time will tell.

Plan For Convention

NEW YORK CITY — Well, we thought it would never come — the 1980 Democratic National Convention. The big question is: how do the Democrats top the suspense and thrills of the Republican Convention in Detroit?

I believe I have a scenario that would do it.

We're into the third day of the convention in Madison Square Garden. Every Carter and Kennedy delegate has been interviewed four times.

We have heard from every Democratic mayor and governor in the country. But what do we do on Wednesday night?

Here is my plan. Teddy Kennedy appears on Walter Cronkite's show at 7:30. Walter says, "Senator, would you consider being President Carter's vice presidential candidate if it was offered to you?"

Teddy says, "I did not come here to be the vice president here."

"But if President Carter said he wanted you to be his V.P., would you take it?"

"Only under certain conditions."

President Carter and his staff are watching all this in their headquarters suite.

Ham Jordan says excitedly, "He sounds like he'll take it!"

Jody Powell says, "It's the ticket we've always dreamed of. We can't pass up the opportunity. Kennedy has actually committed himself on the Cronkite show. He can't go back on it now."

President Carter says, "Start the negotiations right away. Ham, call up the Kennedy people and tell them we're ready to deal."

Ham calls up the Kennedy suite. "Who is representing your side? You're kidding!" Ham holds his hand over the mouthpiece. "They say they been struck between Carter and Kennedy."

The Chicago Sun-Times comes out with a banner headline: "It's Carter and Kennedy." The entire Garden is in an uproar.

But behind the scenes there is still a lot of tough negotiating going on. Kissinger says that Teddy insists on using Camp David on weekends, and Carter can only fly in Air Force One when no one from the Kennedy family wants the plane.

All the demands seem reasonable as far as the Carter people are concerned. But then Kissinger throws one more in. He says that he wants to be Secretary of want Henry Kissinger to act as their go-between. They're playing hard ball."

"We have no choice," Mr. Carter says. "Tell Kissinger to send up the demands."

In 10 minutes someone slips a piece of paper under the door. Ham reads it. "Teddy wants the large desk in the Oval Office, exclusive use of the Rose Garden, the title of Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, power to make all Cabinet appointments, as well as the right to select the next four Supreme Court justices."

"Can we do that legally?" President Carter says.

Jody says, "I'll check it out."

In the meantime Dan Rather has discovered that Teddy's Secret Servicemen are ejecting all members of the Mondale family from the VIP boxes. He tells Walter that this confirms a deal has been struck between Carter and Kennedy.

Gatherings Of The Past

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — Program notes for the really big show opening here in the Big Apple on Monday:

Long before Republicans were even invented, the Democrats held their first convention in 1832, in Baltimore, giving the nod to the incumbent Andrew Jackson. It wasn't the nation's first party nomination convention, however. Something called the Anti-Masonic party met in Baltimore the previous September and chose William Wirt of Maryland as their Man Who. William who?

Although Baltimore and Chicago have been the most popular convention sites down the years, the quadrennial plague of delegates, alternates and preying media has been visited on such places (among others) as Albany, Buffalo, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Denver, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Houston, Atlantic City, N.J., Harrisburg, Pa. (birthplace in 1840 at the Whig gathering of the nation's first political slogan, "Tippecanoe and Tyler too"), Miami, Philadelphia, Kansas City, Los Angeles and for the first time in New York in 1868 at an insignificant brick building on Park Row called Tammany Hall.

The Democrats in 1860 had to meet in two different cities to get the job done. The delegates first met in Charleston, S.C. in April, but failed to nominate anyone when eight Southern states withdrew in a snit over slavery. They then more or less (actually less) reassembled in Baltimore in June to nominate Stephen A. Douglas, except for the renegade Southerners who came to town a week later to appoint John C. Breckinridge. Meanwhile, in Chicago, the Republicans needed only three ballots to dispose of the pre-convention favorite William Seward and settle on a lanky chap named Abraham Lincoln.

All sorts of pressure groups are apt to turn up at a convention. At the recent GOP clambake in Detroit the Dancing Cuckoos, the local Laurel and Hardy fan club, called on Ronald Reagan to choose a fat man as a running mate, instead of the lean and hungry George Bush, in the interests of rounding out the ticket.

Speaking of open conventions, the Democrats required 99 ballots to nominate Franklin Pierce in 1852, 46 to settle on Woodrow Wilson in 1912 and 103 to choose John W. Davis in 1924. John W. who? Republicans do seem to get on with the business at hand more expeditiously. The 1920 GOP convention in Chicago was deadlocked for only 9 ballots before the seclusion of a smoke-filled room at the Blackstone Hotel produced Warren G. Harding. Experts are divided over whether the room was booked by GOP Chairman Will Hays of Indiana or a party stalwart named Col. George Harvey.

Anyhow, at 5 a.m. on June 12, The Associated Press filed a new lead under the byline of Pulitzer Prize winner Kirke Simpson: "Harding of Ohio was chosen by a group of men in a smoke-filled room early today as the Republican candidate for President."

The 1924 Democratic convention in New York's old Madison Square Garden was the first to be covered live by radio — and almost the last: it lasted for 17 days. Florida began spoiling the fun of the great floor fights and taking the suspense out of things when it held the nation's first primary in 1904.

Conventions have always been known for their hot air, but unless the Democrats can come up with a topper, a lady named Lorrie DuMouchelle may enter the Guinness Book of Records. She was in charge of blowing up the 24,512 balloons that descended on Ronald Reagan in Detroit.

NBC's David Brinkley, who has covered every convention since 1952, ranks as the dean of TV anchor men, going back to the days before sky booths were hung. That being so, Hamilton Fish, who turned up in Detroit last month at age 94, must rank as the doyen of the delegates. Fish, the only surviving member of Walter Camp's original All-America football team, was in Chicago in 1912 when Teddy Roosevelt's Bull Moose supporters vamoosed because President William Howard Taft's delegates were seated.

"National conventions," wrote professional curmudgeon H.L. Mencken, "are almost always held in uncomfortable and filthy places (he excepted San Francisco from his indignation, however). The decorations are carried out by the sort of morons who arrange street fairs. The hotels are crowded to suffocation. The food is bad and expensive. Everyone present is robbed, and everyone goes home

Let's Hold To Requirements

It must be incredible to much of the world that Iranians in this country can take advantage of our constitutional protections to parade and jeer their host nation, while American citizens are being illegally held prisoner in Iran.

Yet the constitution does provide protection, and those rights must be protected lest we become the police state that Iran is today.

We would hope, though, that no more Iranian "students" will be admitted to this country and those that are here will be held strictly to the legal requirements for persons in this country for educational purposes.

THIS AFTERNOON

Acid Rain Study

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Early returns show that acid rain in spreading out of the nation's midsection and industrial Northeast, into section which have previously avoided this pollutant.

That includes North Carolina. Even the haze which gave the Great Smokies their name now appears more often, and contains stuff that hasn't always been there.

Trying to find out what is in the polluted rain, how it got there, and what it is doing to the countryside has developed into a major project for a plant expert at N.C. State University.

"It has changed my life," says Ellis B. Cowling, the leader of a small but determined band of acid rain experts who, with federal backing, are conducting serious research in the matter.

This is not, as some may support, another in a series of environmental scares. It is a real concern with long-term impact not yet known. European scientists have been keeping tabs on polluted rain for a long time. America is starting behind.

Burning

As electric generating plants and other major fuel users turn more to coal in place of oil or gas, indications are that acid rain will increase in importance. The fumes from burning coal appear to be a significant contributor. Not the only one, however. Untold fumes from chemical, metalworking, and textile plants rise into the atmosphere. Even farmlands treated with various nutrients and insecticides and growth retardants make a contribution.

The sky, then, becomes a giant chemical cauldron where various ingredients are mixed and stirred and joined as they move across the land.

Finally, pollutants which might have passed high above without notice are held captive in the clouds and eventually dumped onto fields, streams and woodlands by rain or snow.

BILL NOBLITT

This may be days, weeks, even months later; and many miles from the place where the chemicals first started gathering.

While firm data is sketchy at this time, scientists are convinced that acid rain is having important effects. Some of it may even be good. Soybeans, for instance, appeared to be benefitted by acid rain.

But mostly there are problems. Some lakes have been stripped of wildlife; apples get rust spots; trees display strange symptoms; wax coatings on plants deteriorate allowing insect and disease attacks; fish and wildlife die or fail to reproduce.

Those results may not be immediate or especially noticeable. Even limestone buildings show damage on their exteriors.

"Because things don't simply die the wholesale doesn't mean nothing is happening," Cowling says. "Growth may be stunted, or it may take more soil additives to offset some of the effects."

Monitoring stations have been set up in various locations to keep track of the acid rain as studies continue to determine what is in the rain, and where it came from.

Also, scientists continue to determine the effect the pollutants have on the earth. Rain cleanses the atmosphere, and that is good. But what it carries to the ground may not be helpful.

Some of those involved in the research feel that acid rain, while still relatively unknown to the general public, will eventually take its place alongside primary dumping of hazardous chemicals into the ground and surface waters and direct pollution of the air in the lower atmosphere as major environmental concerns for this nation.

Other Editors Say Timely Revision

(New Bern Sun-Journal)

After four years of doing it wrong, the Pentagon now says it is correctly reading the results of tests it gives to its all-volunteer enlistees.

The admission of errors in evaluating scores, which suddenly saw the percentage of GIs in the lowest four mental categories jump from five to 30 percent, comes suspiciously near a time when the voluntary army concept is close to being superseded by a new draft.

When the military was committed by the political climate of the nation to the volunteer army, it claimed almost all its men were mentally qualified to serve. Now that the pendulum is swinging toward a draft, the military tells us the volunteer system isn't all that adequate, after all.

To further arouse suspicion the military is feeding us Americans "facts" that suit the government's push for a draft rather than facts on which rational judgments can be made, the military actually claims "wise men" from several universities studied the test evaluation methods recently and found them wanting.

So, by reading the same data differently, 30 percent instead of five percent of the volunteer force is of at least questionable mental ability.

If the Pentagon is being truthful about the test evaluations, then we have to wonder how competent our military leaders are, to so grossly misfigure the quality of our fighting men for the past four years.

If they aren't telling the whole truth, or aren't telling it quite as it is, then we have reason to doubt any figures anyone provides to support the idea of reinstating the draft.

Strength For Today

Time For Prayer
Some people fail to pray because they are just too busy to do so. In the morning they have no time for they have to get breakfast and catch an early train or bus. Their customary tasks drive them through the day. In the evening they doze over the newspaper or watch TV. Then off to bed and to sleep.

Prayer is worth all the time it takes. The Lord is, of course, not impressed by the length of our prayers, but if we get to the place where the only prayer we can utter at the end of the day is a trite formula said hurriedly before we go off to sleep — then that is decidedly not enough.

We should be praying for many people besides our loved ones. The projects of the world need the undergirding of our prayers, and particularly the people who guide the destinies of nations.

If you are too busy to pray, then you are busier than the Lord wants you to be. If Jesus could find time in his busy life to pray, we can too, if we will.

Saratoga Suffers From Neglect

By PAT FERGUS
Associated Press Writer

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Visitors still come to bathe in the bubbly mineral spring waters that made this small upstate city famous. Some bathers come from as far as Europe and Japan.

But they don't flock here the way they did in the spa's heyday three decades ago, when nearly 200,000 treated themselves to the bubbly waters annually. Now the baths draw only about 20,000 people a year.

The Depression-era pipes are plugged with minerals and the bath houses are a little dingy. State workers say their budget barely goes far enough to keep the city's treasure clean and presentable, and that the state makes no money on the baths.

There's a move among residents to turn what was designed as a center for the ill into a center for the healthy. They say a new generation of customers could be attracted — if someone could take the right steps to make up for years of neglect.

"The baths are the heart of the city, and the heart's not beating," said Michael London, who with his wife, Wendy, runs Mrs. London's Bake Shop, a restaurant and bakery in the renovated downtown area of this city of about 22,000.

London says Saratoga's baths could be like those they visited in Austria — modern, efficiently-run and popular. He is among business people and residents advocating a private takeover of the baths to reverse their decline.

Such a reversal would come very dear.

Stephen Dyer, general superintendent for the baths, said no estimate has been made on a repair project, but turning even one of the two remaining bath houses into a truly modern facility would cost "millions" and replacing the plumbing alone would be a "monstrous" endeavor.

For $13 in peak season, a bather can buy 15 minutes privately submerged in naturally carbonated water, followed by a mineral oil massage and a nap in warmed sheets. The water, heated to body temperature, relaxes tense muscles and, some say, stimulates circulation and relieves arthritis symptoms.

The waters, depending on the spring from which they flow, contain varying amounts of salts and minerals — such as calcium, potassium, magnesium and iron — and some radioactive elements. The state warns that drinking some of the waters in large amounts for a long time could be a health hazard.

When they were built in the 1930s, the baths were touted as a health spa, and doctors were on hand to help bathers with arthritis, circulatory ailments and other ills.

Hydrotherapy — use of water to treat illness — has since fallen from favor in the United States. The State Parks and Recreation Commission, which runs the Saratoga Spa State Park and baths, now emphasizes relaxation from the baths, although it takes part in therapy programs with two medical centers.

The oldest of the three famous bath houses — the Washington — was shut down several years ago because its plumbing was deemed beyond repair, and its baths were torn out. The others suffer from antiquated facilities, and some fear the Roosevelt and the Lincoln baths could go the way of the Washington.

Groups have formed to try to save the baths, but some privately fear conditions may already have deteriorated too much. Although there is talk about a private takeover, there have been no concrete proposals.

"In Europe, the spas are flourishing — packed with Americans," said Mary Ann Lynch, head of a loosely-knit coalition known as "Friends of the Spa."

She said she believes the baths can be revived, and blames the state for failing to keep them in the international limelight.

"I don't think the legislators know what a jewel they have in the waters," said Ms. Lynch, a one-time state Assembly candidate. "It astonishes me that people are not able to look past rusty pipes to see a resource as precious as this."

"But," she said, "it's hard to light a fire under a state which is in as difficult a position as ours. It has to be made very clear this is not just a regional plum. It's not. It's a state plum."

Dr. Grace Maguire Swanner, an interim medical director at the spa in the 1930s, says the baths "have a therapeutic value if used under a doctor's direction for what they're intended for."

She said the baths thrived in the 1930s and 1940s, but the state put profits into its general fund rather than returning them to the baths. "It was almost as if they had a planned effort to annihilate the baths," she said, "and they almost did."

State workers admit private management is probably the answer, as the state is unlikely to provide more funds for the baths.

Parks Commissioner Orin Lehman said that while the baths are a high local priority, they are low on the state's list — last, in fact, on a list of improvements at the Saratoga Spa State Park.

Making the baths viable "would need the stimulus of serious interest from a private concern," Lehman said. But he admits no private concern is likely to be interested in the baths unless some work is done on them by the state.

"We have very stringent budgets," he said. "It's hard to keep our head above water."

FBI Has Few Clues To Hijacker Identity

MIAMI (AP) — A name on a passenger list — M. Soto — is the only good clue to the identity of a man who hijacked an Air Florida jet with 34 people aboard and forced it to fly to Cuba, the FBI says.

"We don't know if he was a refugee or lived here or what," a spokesman for the Miami FBI office said Sunday after the fourth hijacking of a U.S. jet to Cuba this year.

The airliner was about to land Sunday in Key West on a trip from Miami when a man told the crew he had a bomb in a small package he was carrying, according to FBI agent William Nettles. Cuban authorities later said the "bomb" was actually a bar of soap, Nettles said.

The Spanish-speaking hijacker had come out of a rear restroom shouting,

"Cuba! Cuba! Cuba!" Nettles said. A bilingual passenger interpreted the man's demands to the crew, Nettles said.

Nettles said the airline had to take the hijacker seriously.

"It looks like he had a bar of soap, but it could have been a plastic explosive," Nettles said.

The plane landed at Havana's Jose Marti Field, where the 28 other passengers and five crew members spent two hours before returning to Miami. The hijacker was taken into custody by Cuban officials, said Air Florida spokeswoman Robin Cohn.

Authorities described the hijacker as 5-foot-7, aged 40 to 45, with wavy black hair streaked with gray. He wore beige pants, a light blue shirt and carried a small flight bag.

"I saw him holding a small lighter and a small package," said passenger Mark Bell of Houston, who sat near the hijacker. "But he didn't look like a terrorist. He didn't look like he wanted to hurt anybody."

"The man wasn't a raving lunatic or anything," said passenger Phil Thompson, 47, Key West. "He just wanted to get to Cuba."

During their stopover in Havana, passengers said, they drank beer and ate lunch at a terminal restaurant. Some bought Cuban rum and cigars.

"We ate very bad food," said Diane Reynolds of Miami. "But they did accept American dollars."

The passengers were flown to Key West after interviews at Miami International Airport with the FBI and the Federal Aviation Administration, Air Florida officials said.

An anti-hijacking treaty signed by Cuba and the United States in 1973 lapsed in April 1977. The communist nation has continued to return passengers, crew members and planes, but not hijackers.

On July 22, a Delta Air Lines jet carrying 157 people from Chicago was forced to Cuba by a man who said he had personal problems.

Protesters Take Over To Keep School Open

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Protesters occupying a high school on the west side of the city say they will stay as long as it takes to force officials to change plans to close the school.

The 45 protesters barricaded themselves inside the school Friday, chaining doors from the inside and boarding up several windows. On Sunday, they met with city officials and the protesters said afterward they would open their own school in the building in September.

Don Pecina, a spokesman for the protesters, said the group would remain inside the school "forever" if necessary.

The city school board scheduled a hearing for tonight to let residents of the Mexican-American neighborhood around the school air their grievances about the closing. The protesters say the school makes an important contribution to the community.

The board scheduled the hearing Sunday after board President Edward Scaggs, Superintendent Robert Wheeler and west side board representative Mary Arne met for about 45 minutes with the protesters, who call their group the Coalition to Preserve Education on the West Side.

School officials declined comment on the coalition's plan to open its own school.

The board decided Tuesday to close the West Business Management Center — a specialized training high school — this fall as an economy measure.

The school had an enrollment of 279 last year, the smallest in the district.

Reading of Will Will Wag a Tail

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last week I celebrated my 92nd birthday. It wasn't much of a celebration because most of my close friends and relatives are gone — only distant relatives remain.

For 50 years I've worked hard, stayed sober and invested cautiously. Today I'm well-off, but not nearly as rich as some of my relatives think I am.

Recently, a great-nephew called me, asking to borrow on his "expectancy." I thought he was referring to his foreign car, until my attorney told me that my great-nephew wanted to borrow on what he expected to inherit from me!

I turned thumbs down. Then I got a call from his wife, bawling me out. "Just what are you going to do with all your money? Leave it to that fool dog of yours?"

Well, that gave me an idea. That "fool dog" is "Sad Eyes," my faithful bloodhound. He's not too smart. He threatens my postman, welcomes door-to-door salesmen and associates with cats. He loves ice cream and has been my devoted companion since he was a pup.

Since love begets love, I called my attorney and told him to rewrite my will and make Sad Eyes the richest dog in Indiana!

He said, "You can't leave your money to a dog! If you make that dog your beneficiary, your relatives will have your will broken before the devil has your cell warm."

Miss Abby, Sad Eyes has never heard of "expectancy." He loves me and wants me to live on and on, which is more than I can say for my great-nephew.

So tell me, if I die first, how can I make sure Sad Eyes will have a good home and all the ice cream he wants?

GETTING ON IN INDIANA

DEAR GETTING ON: You can leave your money in trust to someone on whom you can depend, instructing that person to give Sad Eyes the very best of care, plus all the ice cream he wants. Listen to your lawyer. If you leave your money to your dog, your relatives will surely have a bone to pick with you.

DEAR ABBY: This might not seem like a very big problem to you, but my wife and I have been arguing about it for a long time, so please don't write it off as some kind of joke.

At mealtime I get filled up fast, so in order to feel really comfortable, I unbutton my trousers (just the top button). It sure relieves the pressure.

If we're eating with other people, I make sure nobody notices. My wife says this is a terrible habit, and she wants me to cut it out. She says I am setting a bad example for our son.

What do you think?

STUFFED IN PHILLY

DEAR STUFFED: I vote with your wife. You need bigger trousers or smaller portions.

DEAR ABBY: To settle an argument, I would like your advice on the following:

As an engineer, I frequently have need to write to various large companies for technical data, information about new products, etc. These letters are usually for the purpose of obtaining information only, rather than placing an order with the firm. I do not include a stamped, self-addressed envelope with such business inquiries as I assume that the company can well afford the cost of the postage in responding to my inquiry. I think a SASE (self-addressed stamped envelope) from me would look very unprofessional.

I do, however, include a SASE when writing to an establishment I know to be smaller, and probably less able to absorb the cost of postage.

I am told one should always include a self-addressed stamped envelope when requesting "something for nothing," but I don't want to risk offending the recipient of the letter.

Perhaps you could steam open this problem.
TOM F. IN MONTELO, WIS.

DEAR TOM: When writing to request something for nothing, always enclose a SASE. Your chances for a response are immeasurably better, and the possibility of "offending" the recipient is zilch. Trust me.

To those who have ordered Abby's new teen booklet, please be patient. The demand again has been overwhelming.

Crop Damage Aid Available

RALEIGH — North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham today urged farmers throughout the state who have experienced "excessive crop damage due to drought to contact Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Farmers Home Administration, and Small Business Administration offices in their county to determine what avenues of relief are available to them.

Graham said drought conditions could reach near disaster levels in many sections of the state if farmers do not get any rain within the next week. No widespread substantial amount of rain is in sight for at least the next ten days, according to the National Weather Service Reports today.

"Individual farmers who have experienced a lot of dry weather this year should be aware of the assistance programs available to them and should begin taking steps to take advantage of them," Graham said. "Damages to crops in North Carolina have not yet reached emergency levels yet but the drought has destroyed some corn and has inhibited growth in tobacco and many other crops."

Graham said in most instances representatives from ASCS and FmHA had to verify actual dry weather crop damage before farmers are declared eligible for emergency assistance.

"This is why it is important for farmers to begin investigating assistance programs now if they have dry weather crop damage," he commented.

John Maye Is Appointed Director

John W. Maye Jr., a Greenville native, has been appointed director of the Emergency School Aid Act Program of the Montgomery County Schools.

Maye will coordinate the in-school suspension program in the county's two high schools, will coordinate the guidance services of the school system, and will write a "Comprehensive Guidance Plan" by Dec. 15, in addition to continuing part-time as guidance counselor at West Montgomery High School.

Maye formerly was employed by the Pitt County and Greenville city schools as alcohol and drug education counselor. The son of Mrs. Beatrice C. Maye of Greenville, he graduated cum laude from North Carolina A & T University and has a master's degree in counselor education and educational administration from East Carolina University.

He and his wife, the former Jeanette Wilson of Bethel, have been accepted for graduate school at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, this fall. He will pursue the educational specialist degree in educational Administration and Mrs. Maye, a nurse at Montgomery Memorial Hospital, will work toward a master's degree in nursing.

This, of course, was before Walter Cronkite held open auditions for the job.

TV covered its first conventions in 1948 when both parties met in Philadelphia. Only the East Coast could receive the transmissions.

Rumors were rife (to say nothing of rampant) that NBC toyed with a new sign-off slogan during the GOP convention in Detroit: "This is the 38th day CBS has held Roger Mudd hostage."

Ted Predicts 'Open' Convention Win

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale claimed today that the Carter campaign has the votes to adopt the rule requiring delegates to the Democratic National Convention to support the candidate to whom they are bound by primary results.

But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy again predicted that he would win the open convention fight that would keep his presidential candidacy alive. "I think there's very, very strong, in fact growing, support for our position at the convention," Mondale said in an interview with CBS. "I expect the rule to be adopted and after tonight it will be an issue that will be forgotten."

But Kennedy, who has already released the 1,234.4 delegates bound to him, reiterated on NBC-TV's "Today" show his claim that he will win, throwing open the convention and allowing the 1,985.6 delegates pledged to President Carter to vote their own choice.

And attorney Edward Bennett Williams, one of the leaders of the "open convention" drive, said in an interview with CBS: "I think we have a tinderbox here. This convention is waiting to be electrified and released. I believe if the delegates are left to their own devices, they would vote overwhelmingly for an open convention. Whatever the outcome of the vote, the result may reverberate for conventions to come.

The "open convention" movement has generated one of the roughest fights in recent history, surpassing the 1976 battle between Republicans Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, which was gentlemanly by comparison. The rhetoric has been over free delegates, moral commitment and preserving the will of the people, but the main issue all along has been the nomination — who has the votes and who can hold them.

Party Chairman John White predicts there will be another rules reform commission to straighten out the real issues once the convention is over, but like most Carter supporters he firmly opposes any change now in the cage of rules the president's men have carefully constructed around the convention.

Tonight's fight dates back three years ago, when several rule changes were introduced — all designed to make it more difficult to challenge the president for renomination.

The critical one was written by Rick Hutcheson, a 1976 Carter campaign chief and then a top presidential aide.

Simply stated, this rule — F-3-c — would require every delegate to vote for the presidential candidate he was selected to support in a state primary, caucus or convention.

A delegate who tries to vote for some other candidate could be replaced with a loyal alternate. Carter floor leaders say they would not throw a defecting delegate out of the convention, that the alternate's vote would just be recorded instead of the defector's.

The philosophical underpinning of this rule and the argument pressed by the Carter campaign now is it guarantees that convention delegates faithfully reflect the will of the voters who elected them.

But it also has the effect of locking up delegates and preventing any real deliberation at the convention on the merits of the candidates. Changes in circumstances between the spring primaries and the late-summer convention could not affect the nomination.

At one briefing, a convention official said even a candidate who had committed "a triple axe murder" would have to be nominated unless the rule were changed.

Kennedy, of course, opposes the rule since his only hope of nomination rests on converting Carter delegates. The president has 1,985.6 delegate votes and Kennedy 1,234.4, with 1,666 needed for nomination. If the rule passes and is enforced, Kennedy could not gain the votes he needs.

A third group, led by Washington lawyer and former party treasurer Edward Bennett Williams and New York Gov. Hugh Carey, says it does not favor Kennedy or any other candidate over Carter but opposes the rule on principle.

This group says there is danger in tying delegates to a candidate who might be discredited before the convention, and they fear a hopelessly deadlocked convention in the future should three or more candidates tie up the delegates with none gaining enough for nomination.

In the immediate future, the fight threatens Carter's political fortunes. Even if he wins the rule fight, the cry of a "straightjacket convention" is sure to persist, possibly long and loud enough to endanger his election.

If Kennedy wins the rule right, the convention could become a runaway and generate animosities that would not die for years.

Traffic Accidents Take 13 Lives Over Weekend

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's 1980 highway toll climbed to 863 during the week as traffic accidents claimed the lives of 13 people.

The Highway Patrol said 901 people had been killed at the same time last year.

An 8-year-old boy, Keith Wayne Strickland of Route 2, Graham, was killed when he drove a motorcycle from a private driveway into the path of a car on N.C. 54 near Graham.

Two Wilmington men were killed in a single-car accident in New Hanover County. The patrol said John Joseph Hines, 24, and Timothy Dennis Smith, 23, died when their car ran off the left side of a rural road, hit a bridge abutment and overturned.

Chris Barry Huff, 19, of Leicester died when his car ran off a rural paved road about nine miles west of Asheville. The car overturned down an embankment.

A Fort Bragg soldier, Earl Jerry Longsbury Jr., 28, was killed on a rural road just north of Troy in Montgomery County when the military jeep he was driving went out of control in a curve and overturned.

A two-car collision on N.C. 87 in Harnett County took the lives of two Fayetteville men, Lindsey Norton, 20, and Frederick Brewington, 18.

Edward Flowers, 59, of Raeford, a pedestrian, was killed when he was hit by a car on a rural road north of Raeford. Edward Reynolds, 60, of Supply was hit by a car as he walked along N.C. 130 near Shallotte. Another pedestrian, Edgar Clark, 54, of Canton, was struck by a vehicle on U.S. 19 near Asheville.

Barrie Franklin Hoke, 37, of Conover was killed when his car ran off the road and overturned on N.C. 63 north of Asheville.

Grady Brent Church, 20, of Elkin died in Surry County when his car ran off a rural road, struck a tree and caught fire.

Daniel Shaver, 24, of Lancaster, Kansas, died when his car ran off Interstate 95 near Benson and overturned.

Holy Day Celebrated, Large Numbers Freed

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Following the sighting of a new moon, most of the world's 750 million Moslems today celebrated the end of Ramadan, the holy month of dawn-to-dusk fasting, with breakfast feasts, amnesty for prisoners and pledges to recover Jerusalem from Israel.

In Iran, Tehran Radio reported that 460 people convicted by anti-narcotics squads were being released from prison to mark Eid al-Fitr, the day-long celebration today officially marking the end of the month.

The brief radio announcement made no mention of the 52 American hostages. U.S. officials had expressed hope the end of Ramadan, the holiest month in Islam, might bring clemency and freedom for the captives, seized 282 days ago.

In Jordan, King Hussein also granted amnesty to "hundreds" of prisoners to honor the breaking of the fast, Amman radio reported.

Israel released 15 Arab prisoners from the occupied Gaza Strip in honor of the holiday, a military spokesman said. All of those whose sentences were reduced were held for hostile activity against Israel, the spokesman said, but none had been convicted of crimes in which Israelis had been injured.

The state radio in Saudi Arabia, where the Islamic world's two most important sites of Mecca and Medina are located, announced Sunday night that a group of Ulema, or learned sheiks, had scanned the sky and sighted the luminous crescent of the new moon. The moon heralds the beginning of a new month of the Moslem lunar calendar.

Ramadan began July 13 and the crescent actually loomed one day early, on the 29th day, causing some Moslems to defer the breaking of the fast until Tuesday.

But most followed the lead of Saudi Arabia and soon after its announcement mosques throughout the Islamic world reported that Ramadan had ended.

Ramadan, which commemorates the first revelation of the Koran, the holy book of Islam, is the ninth month of the Moslem year. During the month, all worldly indulgences are forbidden and Moslems must maintain a daily fast between dawn and dusk.

The month brings to a halt virtually all business in the Islamic world. Contracts, no matter how important, are deferred.

Marine Dealers Meeting Here

North American Fiberglass Corp. of Greenville held its second annual Sea Ox National Dealers meeting today with some 180 marine dealers on hand to preview the firm's 1981 model boats.

Graham Flanagan, president, said that the dealers, representing states from the Gulf Coast to Maine, began their activities today with a breakfast meeting at the Holiday Inn, followed by remarks from Bill Carmichael, president of Crmichael, McNeely, Dusenbury and Alban Advertising Agency, on "Sea Ox, The Beast That Doesn't Need A Beauty."

The dealer contingent traveled to Jack Minges' house at Blounts Creek on the Pamlico River this morning for demonstrations of 1981 models produced at the Greenville facility and had lunch at the river. A 3 p.m. tour of the North American plant followed the river activities.

Flanagan said that a highlight of today's planned activities will be "The Captain's Feast, an 'authentic' Hawaiian Luau at his home west of Greenville, featuring an Hawaiian band flown in from the island of Molokai and seven Hawaiian dancers from the islands.

The dealers arrived Sunday and had a social gathering with North American Fiberglass management. The visitors are scheduled to depart Tuesday morning.

NEW YORK (AP) Stock prices held fairly steady in moderate trading today after climbing to a three year high last week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained 1.71 to 956.40 by midday today after closing on Friday at 954.69. That was the average's highest level since March 18, 1977 when it stood at 961.02.

Overall losing and gaining issues were almost evenly matched in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange trading.

Analysts said there were no specific news developments today to influence the market. But trading may be restrained in advance of a Tuesday meeting of the policy-making committee of the Federal Reserve Board.

Then too, there continues to be uncertainty about the struggle over the Democratic Party's platform and presidential nomination as that political convention gets underway.

Carter, Kennedy...

"I think that there's very, very strong, in fact growing, support for that position at the convention," he said. "I expect the rule to be adopted...and after tonight it will be an issue that will be forgotten."

A CBS poll of 1,900 delegates indicated that both sides were holding their candidates' ground. The network projected 55 percent of the delegates would back the binding rule, with 45 percent opposing it.

"The argument is not whether he'll win it, but by how much," said White, a Carter supporter.

In a last-minute effort to generate support for an open convention, Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., announced his candidacy for the nomination today and urged all 491 black delegates to vote for him.

"Why did we come? To be a whimper and murmur in 1980?" he asked. "I'm suggesting that blacks at this convention take off their Kennedy buttons, take off their Carter buttons and recognize that they are black," he said.

The American Agriculture Movement and the Women's Political Caucus were planning similar moves.

Carter, meanwhile, says he is confident of his renomination and re-election. The president, now at Camp David, Md., was expected to arrive at the convention Wednesday.

In an interview Sunday on CBS' "60 Minutes," Carter brushed off public opinion polls showing him running far behind Reagan, saying, "The polls that count in a democratic society like ours are the polls that are conducted among the people on Election Day."

In his CBS interview, Kennedy maintained his refusal to commit himself to endorse a Carter ticket, linking his support to the outcome of Tuesday's platform debate.

Kennedy said his stance will depend on whether he believes Carter concessions on issues are substantive or "just cosmetic commitments."

If the concessions are substantive, Kennedy said, "there won't be any Democrat in this country that'll work harder for the success of the nominee."

Evacuation Center Life Wasn't Quite Like Home

By SUSAN STOLER
 Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Antonia Perea sat surrounded by her children, safe and happy in her modest wooden house after two nights in a hurricane evacuation shelter. Even without electricity, the two-bedroom structure was like a mansion compared to the cramped quarters at Travis Elementary School.

The small home that her father built 30 years ago had weathered Hurricane Allen's 110-mph winds.

But last Friday, forecasters were predicting that Allen — then spouting 170-mph winds — would devastate the Lower Rio Grande Valley, which has one of the lowest per-capita income levels in the nation.

So Mrs. Perea and a dozen relatives, including her four children, packed blankets, pillows, canned meats, water and clothes into a car and headed to a Red Cross shelter. But it was full, and they were sent on to the school, where 700 other evacuees had already gathered and the only available space was in a hallway.

By 8:30 p.m. Friday, two children and Mrs. Perea's mother had bedded down in the hall. Mrs. Perea thumbed through the National Enquirer while her sister, Jesusa Donez, visited relatives nearby. Sleeping was difficult even after the lights went out at 10 p.m. because children ran through the halls.

The next morning, the school cafeteria served donuts, milk, juice or coffee while Allen howled outside.

After breakfast, the family was assigned to a third-grade classroom with three other families. The men sat around a table in chairs designed for 8-year-olds and played poker, chitl, a vegetable and drinks.

Hurricane Allen's winds soon knocked out electricity across town and by 4:30 p.m. the shelter lost water, lights and air conditioning.

A generator supplied enough power for fans and some lights. Supper offered a choice of sandwiches — peanut butter and jelly or pimento cheese. The shelter, built without windows to cut air conditioning costs, soon became stuffy, smelly and uncomfortable, and evacuees were advised not to drink the water.

"God, it was hot," Miss Donez remembered.

The family worried about what they'd left behind. "I kept thinking it was going to rain in our house," said Miss Donez. "I said, 'We don't have a roof any more and the couches are wet.' My mother said, 'Worry about yourself, not the couches.'"

Two of the women's brothers left the shelter at 8 a.m. Sunday to check the house.

"They said it came through fine with just a ceiling leak. They made some scrambled eggs for the kids and brought them back. Over here, our breakfast was a slice of bread and not even any butter," said Miss Donez.

The family wanted to wait for the "all-clear signal" before going home, but as the winds died and rain slowed, families began leaving.

Mrs. Perea was back on her front porch by 1 p.m. Sunday. The storm's freakish nature was evident in her front yard. A mesquite tree lay in pieces but hanging flower baskets were still attached to other trees.

Telephone calls came in from relatives in California, Houston and Corpus Christi, and other family members dropped in to visit.

Mrs. Perea had volunteered in the school cafeteria during the crisis and said the experience might help her find a job this fall.

"I don't work, I'm on welfare, but I need a job," she said.

Would they go back to a shelter if another hurricane struck?

"Well, yes, I guess if we really thought it would be bad and there doesn't seem to be a choice," Mrs. Perea said.

Nicklaus Looks To Further Records

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, noting the historic significance, said he couldn't have been happier to tie the record of the great Walter Hagen by winning his fifth PGA championship at Oak Hill Country Club, Hagen's home course.

And now, with 17 major professional titles in his possession, including his fourth U.S. Open in June, Nicklaus looks forward to setting additional records in the future.

"My goals have not changed after today," the 40-year-old Nicklaus said after winning the 62nd PGA Championship Sunday with a four-day total of 274, a record-breaking seven strokes ahead of Andy Bean. "I've always wanted to win as many majors as I can, and once you tie a record, then you want to beat the record."

Nicklaus, who plays a limited schedule on the tour, said he would go to Marion, Ohio next year and seek an unprecedented fifth U.S. Open title and then to Atlanta for a record-breaking attempt on a sixth PGA championship.

"I've always enjoyed a sense of history, and Hagen being from here couldn't have made me happier," Nicklaus said. "I didn't know Hagen well, although I met him a couple of times. I feel very proud to have done it here."

Nicklaus, who was a non-winner for nearly two years before winning the U.S. Open at Baltusrol, defended his limited schedule, suggesting that his two victories in the four major tournaments — the others are the Masters and the British Open — justified his decision.

"I made the schedule change because I love golf and wanted to play for a long time," he said. "I knew if I kept a regular schedule, I wouldn't do that. I had just lost my incentive for tournaments, but I never lost it for the majors."

"After what happened, it was right for me," he said. "I'll play a long time."

Lee Trevino, one of the pretournament favorites because he had defeated Nicklaus and won the 1968 U.S. Open at Oak Hill, lauded the performance of the Golden Bear.

"He's unbelievable," said Trevino, who finished seventh with a 285. "He waited 12 years to beat me here."

"I never thought he was finished," he said, alluding to the Nicklaus dry spell. "But I'm his No. 1 fan. He's still the player he used to be, it all depends on how much time he wants to spend on his game."

The best thing that could have happened is that he didn't win for two years when he had all those outside interests. Now he has them all established and he's playing more golf now.

"He's got to be the golfer of the year. He's got my vote," Trevino said. "Tom's had a fantastic year but the Bear is hungry."

Tom Watson, Player of the Year for the past three years and winner of five tournaments and the British Open thus far in 1980, finished with a 67 Sunday tie for 10th with a 288. Following Bean, who had 70-281, were Lon Hinkle and Dr. Gil Morgan, who were tied at 283. Hinkle shot 75, and Morgan closed with a 72.

Gary Player, who has had to play against Nicklaus for most of his career, also had nothing but praise for his longtime adversary.

"What he's done is incredible," said Player, who finished in a tie for 26th with 292. "It is absolutely fantastic and I admire it. It's a lesson to the press and public, who had him finished. I take my hat off to Jack."

"He has proved without a question of a doubt that he is the greatest player that ever lived," he said.

Nicklaus, who earlier in the week gave credit to his son, Jack Jr., for a spotting a flaw in his putting, said after the victory that he could not have won the championship without the instruction.

"I was putting awful," he said, citing as an example 40 putts in a recent exhibition round, and had four 3-putt holes at former President Ford's celebrity tournament in Vail, Colo., a week ago. "He spotted what I was doing wrong and told me. And he was right."

Nicklaus also emphasized that his four rounds of 70-69-66-69 should not reflect badly on the revamped 6,964-yard, par-70 Oak Hill course.

"I guess I made it look easier than it was," he said. "I was working pretty hard and playing well. It was about as solid a round as I ever played in a major."

"I just got lucky and stayed ahead of the golf course," he said. "This course is considerably tougher than it was in 1968. If you were to pick the top 12 courses in the country, Oak Hill would be in there. I don't know if it would be first or 12th, but it would fall in there somewhere."

Clerc, Lloyd Capture Clay Courts Victory

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mel Purcell's longshot dream fell a little short, but his runner-up finish in the U.S. Open Clay Court tennis tournament still put the Kentuckian in rather select company.

Only one other player, Jimmy Connors in 1973, ever had reached the finals in any major tournament after having to earn his way into the starting field through qualifying matches.

No one had ever done it in the Clay Court tourney.

Purcell breezed through three qualifying rounds last week, then stunned one opponent after another until he ran up against Argentina's Jose-Luis Clerc in the final.

On Saturday, top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd won her sixth women's Clay Court championship with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over 15-year-old Andrea Jaeger.

"I was pleased," Purcell said, notwithstanding the 7-5, 6-3 loss to the eighth-seeded Clerc. "I played well at times, but Jose really put the pressure on me."

"I wanted to have him on the defensive, but he put me on the defensive and I couldn't do anything about it. He just had too much experience for me."

Defending champion Connors, Guillermo Vilas and John McEnroe all passed up this year's journey to compete in an exhibition in southern France.

"You can't say how I would have done if they were here, because they weren't here," Purcell said. "I still would have felt confident, but it would have made it a lot tougher."

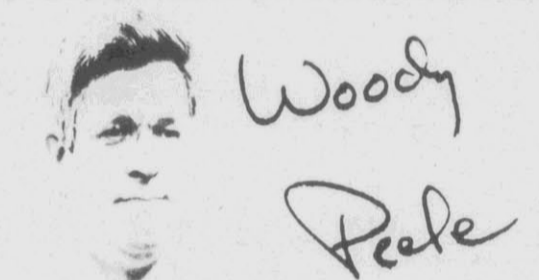

The new Association of Tennis Professionals rankings won't be out for another week, so despite his strong finish, Purcell still will have to qualify for the Atlanta tournament next week. He currently is ranked 155th in the world.

Clerc, a rising star on the pro tennis circuit who has turned in recent victories over Connors and McEnroe, earned $28,000 with the victory. Purcell, who turned pro on his 21st birthday three weeks ago, took home $14,000 from the $350,000 purse.

"He's a good player and he has a good passing shot," Clerc said of Purcell. "He made it very tough for me today — much tougher than it was against McEnroe (a week earlier at South Orange, N.J.)."

Leading 5-4 in the first set, Purcell had Clerc at set point three times. Clerc, who will be 22 next Saturday, rallied to win that game, then won the next 14 points to take the set.

Purcell won the first game of the second set on a service break, but Clerc came right back to tie it at 1-1 on another break. Clerc, seeded eighth, won three more games before Purcell, trying to save the match, made a final rally.

O's Complete Yankee Sweep

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Jimmy Carter can only hope he'll make out as well this week in New York as the Baltimore Orioles did this weekend.

As the Democrats filed into the Big Apple for their national convention, the Orioles flew out of the city on the wings of a three-game sweep of the first-place Yanks and a nine-game victory skein. Baltimore trails New York by only 2½ games in the American League West thanks to Sunday's comeback 6-5 victory.

"I guess I have to remind everyone that the Baltimore Orioles are the American League champions," said Earl Weaver when asked how his club could sweep three games at Yankee Stadium. "We showed why this weekend."

Elsewhere in the American League it was Kansas City 8, Toronto 5; Boston 4, Chicago 3; Minnesota 5, California 2, and Texas 4, Detroit 2. A pair of split doubleheaders saw Milwaukee open with a 5-1 triumph over Cleveland before losing 9-4, and Seattle winning 2-1 in 14 innings over Oakland before bowing 6-1.

The Orioles benefitted from some clutch hitting by Rick Dempsey and Eddie Murray and shoddy Yankee fielding in the decisive ninth inning. Baltimore had grabbed a 4-0 lead off Yankees ace Tommy John, 15-6, with Dempsey contributing a solo home run.

New York rallied to go ahead

5-4 entering the ninth, but Lenn Sakata's deep fly to left field was misplayed into a triple by defensive replacement Bobby Brown. John retired the next two batters and got two strikes on Dempsey before the former Yankee "got just plain lucky."

"John made a good pitch and I think he had it programmed for a ground ball. But I got it up. When I reached first base, it was a great feeling," Dempsey said.

Dempsey's lazy single was followed by a walk to Ken Singleton, and Murray then dumped a shot in front of right fielder Reggie Jackson to drive in the winning run.

"We're making too many mistakes and beating ourselves," Yankees shortstop Bucky Dent said. "You can't keep doing that day in and day out."

The Yankees may have been a bit shellshocked by Baltimore's performance, but they get five more shots at the Orioles later this week in Baltimore.

Mariners 2-1, A's 1-6. Neither Seattle nor Oakland are in a pennant race, but the A's are chasing a major league mark for complete games by a pitching staff.

They got two on Sunday, with Steve McCatty going 14 innings before losing on Dan Meyer's solo homer in the opener, then Rick Langford notched his 15th straight route-going effort in the second contest.

The two complete games gave the A's six complete-game efforts from their staff in the last seven outings and 63 complete games on the season. The modern American League record is 72 by California in 1973. The modern major league record is 77 by San Francisco in 1968.

"I wish I didn't have to go 14 innings. It would have been better to go nine if you're going to lose 2-1," McCatty said. "It's the worst feeling in the world. I would've gone all day long, as long as Billy Martin wanted me to."

Langford also expressed his devotion to his manager.

"I'm happy Billy is showing so much confidence in me. He allows me to go out and pitch and make my mistakes. The pressure is really off. There were a few times in the streak where if he had come out and got me I would have deserved it."

Royals 8, Blue Jays 5. Dennis Leonard made 100 and George Brett continued his climb toward 400 as the Royals won for the sixth time in seven games and increased their first-place margin to 13 games in the AL West.

Leonard, 13-8, grabbed victory No. 100 for his career — he's lost 70 — and Brett had three hits to increase his club-record consecutive game hitting streak to 23. Brett, batting .390, appears a definite challenger to the 400 mark, last reached by Ted Williams in 1941.

Leonard was less than overpowering — five runs and seven hits in 61-3 innings — against Toronto. "I've been lucky to be with a good team," Leonard said.

The way Brett is hitting, he's in a class by himself. The Royals third baseman has hit .441 in the past 23 contests and leads second-place Miguel Dilone by 40 points in the batting race.

"I'm in a good groove, hitting the ball hard," he said. "It's a matter of good fundamentals and good mechanics."

What about hitting .400?

"I'm only thinking about the .390s now."

KC won with a six-run fifth in which 12 Royals went to bat.

Twins 5, Angels 2

Minnesota snapped a nine-game skid behind homers by Roy Smalley, Glenn Adams and Jose Morales and Jerry Kosman's 10th win. The last Minnesota triumph came when Kosman stopped the Yankees on July 30.

"It's up to veteran players to stop a slump," said Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch, who had seen the Twins score two runs or less in eight of their nine losses. "I never had any idea our offense could go from as awesome as it was in my 3½ years here to almost genteel."

Red Sox 4, White Sox 3

A pair of home runs by Tony Perez that boosted him to 34th on the all-time list with 344, powered Boston. Bob Stanley picked up his fourth save of the week in relief of Dennis Eckersley.

Brewers 5-4, Indians 1-9

Mike Caldwell threw a five-hitter for the Brewers' opening victory. The nightcap saw Dan Spillner turn the tables on Milwaukee by pitching a six-hitter while Alan Bannister drove in four runs.

Rangers 2, Tigers 1

Gaylord Perry collected his 285th career triumph with ninth-inning relief from Danny Darwin. It was Perry's seventh try at winning his sixth game this season.

East Carolina's 1980 football season officially get underway this week, as the Pirates open practice for the year.

The freshmen and transfers reported yesterday and were to begin workouts today. They will have several days of special work with the staff prior to the reporting of the veterans later this week. Practice for the entire squad starts Friday.

The Pirates open the season on September 6 against Duke at Durham.

For new coach Ed Emory, the 1980 season offers a number of challenges. First off, the Pirates will be playing their toughest schedule ever. They meet such teams on the road as Florida State, ranked in the Top Ten last year; the University of Miami, said to have its best team in years; North Carolina, said to be a definite contender for Top Ten honors this season; along with Duke, N.C. State and the University of Richmond.

Among the home opponents is Eastern Kentucky, last year's Division II champion; and Southern Mississippi, which many observers say could be the best team on the entire schedule.

Add to that the fact that most of the offensive line will be composed of rookies or relatively inexperienced players, with a rookie quarterback behind them, and you have more problems.

Still, Emory looks to the bright side.

"Our goal is to have another winning season," he said. "But we've got lots of obstacles and a lot of hard work ahead of us if we are to achieve it." Emory, however, said that so far, the players have shown that they are willing to make the sacrifices needed to reach the goals set this year.

"We're going to have to have some good luck this year, also," the coach said. "We don't have much depth, so we're going to have to stay healthy also."

Across the front, only Wayne Inman returns to give any experience in the offensive line. Behind the line, there are a number of veteran backs, led by A.C. Collins and Theodore Sutton, two of the finest runners in the state. But the quarterback position, currently held down by Carlton Nelson, shows nothing but inexperience. Nelson did see some action last year, but there is virtually no one with any experience behind him. And he is coming off a back injury.

The defensive line also shows a lot of inexperience, but Emory feels this is not as critical as on offense. The linebackers look good, as does most of the secondary.

The kicking game should be strong, with Rodney Allen back for punts, Bill Lamm returning for placements, and Vern Davenport back for kickoffs and long field goals.

Certainly, the freshmen and transfers will play a role this year, but how much will depend on how quickly they come around. Emory is hopeful that the defense will be strong enough to carry the Pirates until the offense and the depth begins to come together.

The next few weeks will tell.

Draft Choice No. 214 Steals The Show

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

Act 1 of the Billy Sims Show was upstaged by none other than David Woodley. Who?

And that's a question the Miami Dolphins may have trouble answering.

Woodley, from Louisiana State, was the 214th player taken in this year's National Football League draft, tabbed by the Dolphins for fourth-string quarterback material some 213 players after the Detroit Lions made Sims the No. 1 choice in the country.

But you might of had trouble telling them apart Sunday as Woodley completed 8-of-10 passes, ran for a 5-yard touchdown and engineered both Miami touchdowns as the Dolphins posted a 17-7 victory over Detroit in the exhibition opener for both teams.

"I knew the situation when I was drafted," Woodley said. "There are three established quarterbacks here (Bob Griese, Don Strock and Guy Benjamin) and I'm the fourth man. I don't know whether my chances have changed."

Dolphins Coach Don Shula did.

"It opens up trade possibilities," Shula said. "With every performance like that, he becomes more valuable to us."

And that was something All-Pro guard Larry Little also noticed.

"I'm real impressed with him. He'll have to be reckoned with," Little said.

The Dolphins didn't have to reckon with Sims though. He carried the ball just three times, gaining 11 yards.

"I learned that I got a whole lot more to learn," said Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner. "We all made mistakes and I sure made my share."

In Sunday's other game, the Chicago Bears defeated the New York Jets 21-9.

Meanwhile on Saturday, Philadelphia downed Buffalo 24-9; New Orleans edged St. Louis 17-13; Washington shutdown Baltimore 13-3; Pittsburgh blanked the New York Giants 13-0; Kansas City trounced Cleveland 42-0; Dallas nipped Green Bay 17-14; Minnesota outlasted San Diego 27-17; Denver defeated Cincinnati 17-6 and San Francisco surprised Oakland 33-14.

There are two games on tap tonight and each will be a highlight by a debut. Ken Stabler, one of the NFL's great passers, will strap on a Houston helmet for the first time since being tarder during the offseason from the Oakland Raiders as the Oilers host the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the Los Angeles Rams play their first game in their new home — Anaheim Stadium — when they meet the New England Patriots.

Bears 21, Jets 9
Mike Phipps and Bob Avellini pitched touchdown passes to overcome a 9-7 halftime deficit. Phipps hit James Scott on a 3-yard scoring toss while Avellini connected on a 24-yard scoring strike to running back Willie McClendon.

Vikings 27, Chargers 17
Tommy Kramer threw three touchdown passes as Minnesota posted its first exhibition victory in two years.

Kramer completed 19 of 27 attempts for 229 yards in little more than a half of play. San Diego is winless in two pre-season games.

Steelers 13, Giants 0
Cliff Stoudt threw a 24-yard scoring pass to Theo Bell and Matt Bahr drilled a pair of 42-yard field goals as Pittsburgh rolled up 494 yards of total offense.

The defending Super Bowl champions limited New York to just six first downs and allowed the Giants to cross midfield only once.

Chiefs 42, Browns 0
Quarterback Steve Fuller galloped five yards for a touchdown to ignite a 21-point second quarter as Kansas City rolled over Cleveland.

Charles White, last season's Heisman Trophy winner, saw limited action, rushing for eight yards in three carries.

Eagles 24, Bills 9
Ron Jaworski passed for one touchdown and guided Philadelphia to two other scores as the Eagles posted an easy victory over Buffalo.

"Jaworski was just about as perfect as you can be," said Bills linebacker Shane Nelson. "Thank goodness this was just preseason."

Broncos 17, Bengals 6
Matt Robinson hit running back Rob Lytle on a 32-yard scoring play for the go-ahead touchdown, capping a 4-play, 80-yard drive as Denver defeated Cincinnati. The Broncos defense made seven sacks and held Cincinnati to just 100 yards in total offense.

Redskins 13, Colts 3
Clarence Harmon scored from two yards out and Mark Moseley booted a 52-yard field goal as Washington opened its exhibition season by beating Baltimore.

Baltimore's Bert Jones completed 13-of-21 passes for 139 yards as he attempts a comeback from shoulder problems.

Saints 17, Cardinals 13
Quarterback Archie Manning scored on a 5-yard run and rookie Jimmy Rogers tallied on a 6-yard scamper as New Orleans beat St. Louis.

49ers 33, Raiders 14
Joe Montana passed for one touchdown and ran for another as San Francisco defense forced four turnovers in defeating Oakland for only the third time in 14 exhibition games. Dan Pastorini, acquired in the trade that sent Stabler to Houston, completed 6-of-9 passes for 108 and one interception in his Oakland debut.

Cowboys 17, Packers 14
Backup quarterback Glenn Carano hit tight end Doug Cosbie with a 3-yard TD pass early in the fourth quarter as Dallas defeated Green Bay.

Ed "Too Tall" Jones, returning to football after a year's absence to pursue a boxing career, recovered a fumble to set up the winning score. He also blocked a field goal.

Phillies Don't Get Angry, Don't Get Even In Twin Defeats

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After losing the first game of Sunday's doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates, Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green read the riot act to his team until his neck turned the color of Phillies Red.

But the Phillies didn't get angry — they didn't even get even.

Tamed 7-1 by the Pirates in the opener, the fading Phillies rolled over again in the second game and dropped a 4-1 decision.

The double loss spelled the fourth straight defeat in Pittsburgh for the Phillies and plunged them six games behind the leaders in the National League East, co-leading Pittsburgh and Montreal.

"We didn't play good ball," Green said. "That's what hurts more than anything else."

The Phillies' clubhouse was closed between games, but reporters who gathered outside overheard Green shouting at his team.

"Get up off your rear ends and beat somebody," Green yelled. "You've got to stop being so cool, and if you don't get that through your minds, you're going to be so far buried it won't even be funny."

After the second-game loss,

Green was calm as he met the press.

"I'm just not going to let them quit on themselves," he said. "I won't quit on them. I'm sure the fans in Philadelphia won't quit."

Tim Foli rapped a three-run double, and Jim Bibby earned his 14th victory with an eight-hitter as the Pirates won the opener. Bibby, 14-2, yielded a run-scoring single to Keith Moreland in the sixth.

Mike Easler drove in two runs, and Don Robinson and two relievers combined on a six-hitter as the Pirates won the second game, extending their winning streak to seven games.

Dodgers 7, Reds 1
Davey Lopes collected four hits, including a solo home run, and Steve Garvey belted a two-run homer, pacing Los Angeles over Cincinnati.

Padres 3, Astros 2
Tim Flannery's two-out RBI single in the ninth inning scored Dave Winfield from third base with the winning run as San Diego defeated Houston.

Expos 7, Cubs 3
Bill Gullickson and Woodie Fryman combined on an eight-hitter, and Ron LeFlore capped a five-run seventh with a two-run double to lead Montreal over Chicago.

Mets 4, Cardinals 1
Bill Almon tripled home one run with two out in the fifth inning and then scored on Claudell Washington's double, triggering New York over St. Louis.

Joel Youngblood drew a two-out walk to start the Mets fifth. Almon then tripled to left-center out of the reach of St. Louis outfielder Tony Scott, and Washington doubled over the first base bag to give the Mets a 2-1 lead and their eventual winning runs.

Braves 3, Giants 1
Jerry Royster rapped a two-run, bases-loaded single in a three-run second inning, pacing Atlanta over San Francisco.

Royster's two-out hit came after San Francisco starter Al Hargesch, 2-2, yielded consecutive walks to Chris Chambliss, Dale Murphy and Mike Lum to load the bases.

The GTA is currently 5-2 and will visit the Ebony Racquet Club of Raleigh on August 24.

The association's Third Annual Tennis Classic will begin Thursday at the Evans Park Tennis Courts.

Five strokes back was Eddie Robinson, who shot a 126. Allen Elder followed with a 127 and Carl White was fourth with a 128.

The Beaufort County Open was played earlier in the day with Jock Squires emerging as the champ. Squires shot a 124 to beat Johnny Carrow by six strokes and defending champion LaVern Mayo by seven strokes.

Democratic Convention Could Swing Coverage Sentiment

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If anything can stem the current tide of sentiment against three-network, gavel-to-gavel coverage of political conventions, this week's prime time gather of Democrats ought to do it. This one figures to be fun.

And, where TV had to really work to get a hand in the Republican proceedings last month (all three networks firing the Ford-for-Veep rumor), the medium has already been cast a meaty role in the Democrats' convention, even before it has begun.

All three networks will begin coverage (from New York's Madison Square Garden) at 4 p.m. Monday, earlier than they'd planned. That's because of a compromise between President Carter's forces and Sen. Edward Kennedy's forces that put convention's starting time several hours later than originally scheduled.

In return, Kennedy's folks agreed on five platform issues, eliminating some prime time bickering.

Still, discussion over the economic planks remains, which, with the dump-Carter endeavor, ought to provide plenty of excitement.

With the Republicans, you'll recall, the network's had to content themselves with idle musings over Ronald Reagan's choice of a running mate. That is, until Walter Cronkite and Gerald Ford got the "co-presidency" story going.

Anyway, this may be the last time the three networks go at it full blast, and it's for certain the last time Walter Cronkite will preside over CBS' coverage. It figures to be a good watch.

Cronkite, incidentally, will be reunited with Eric Sevareid, with whom he has covered conventions since 1952. Alas, the erudite Mr. Sevareid will only make brief appearances, at the end of the first and last day's coverage.

CBS will have no special editions of "60 Minutes" during the week, as it did with the Republicans, letting a scheduled Sunday night "60 Minutes" session with Dan Rather and President Carter stand.

ABC, on the other hand, will interrupt its coverage of the convention every night, with special editions of its "20-20" newsmagazine (airing after the convention on the West Coast). ABC only went to "20-20" on two nights with the Republicans, and probably figured it could use the help this time.

ABC finished third in the ratings for the GOP convention, its first convention performance under news chief Roone Arledge, and understandably so. While the Frank Reynolds-Ted Koppel banter was as sardonically amusing as any, ABC was embarrassingly behind on the George Bush candidacy, the only legitimate news development of the week.

And even on that "co-presidency" rumor, ABC seemed to be chasing CBS and NBC.

NBC, overall, gave the steadiest coverage of the Republicans, with the cool professional team of David Brinkley and John Chancellor guiding the proceedings. A similar performance this time wouldn't hurt NBC News' efforts to forge back in front of ABC in the evening news derby.

The morning shows will all focus on the convention, of course, but to different degrees. The straight news show, CBS' "Morning" is really the best bet if you want a no-frills rendering of events.

But the big competition is between ABC's "Good Morning America" and NBC's "Today" show. "Today" clearly outperformed "Good Morning" in Detroit, featuring daily guests that had "Good Morning" principals lining up outside the door hoping for leftovers.

On Wednesday of the GOP convention, for example, "Today" featured live interviews with Ford, Henry Kissinger, Sen. Barry Goldwater and Sen. Paul Laxalt. It was enough, according to "Today" staffers, to bring Barbara Walters over to NBC's turf in rollers and a scarf to try to grab Kissinger for "Good Morning."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR Classified Advertising Rates 752-6166

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠ A J 9 5 3 ♥ 7 ♦ K J 10 3 ♣ Q 9 2
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have a useful hand, particularly if you bear in mind that your queen in partner's suit should be upgraded. However, it is not quite enough to insist on game, especially since there might be a weakness in hearts for no trump. For the moment, simply rebid two diamonds. If partner can't find another bid over that, we doubt that you will make more than a part-score.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ Q 7 6 2 ♥ K 8 5 3 ♦ A J ♠ A 8 4
The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—What would you like to do? Partner has denied a four-card major suit, so you can expect him to have either four good clubs or, more likely, a five-card suit. Since you have a minimum opening bid, pass while you are still in a safe spot.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ K Q 8 5 4 ♥ 6 ♦ 6 ♣ K 9 8 4 3
The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ Pass Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Chances are that your partner has a very good hand but could not act because of his length and strength in hearts. While you do not have much in the way of point count, your hand should take a lot of tricks on offense. Nevertheless, you must be content with a balancing bid of one spade. Partner will expect a substantially better hand from you if you jump to two spades.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ K Q 5 2 ♦ A K J 5 4 ♠ A K 3
The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♠ ? 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ ?
What action do you take?
A.—Pass. This is not a cowardly action—it is forcing. Your original cue-bid created a virtual game force, so now partner must act. It is quite possible that partner's longest suit is hearts and that he wishes to double rather than bid on. If that is the case, you have no reason to doubt his decision. Allow him the freedom of choice.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ K Q 7 2 ♥ Q 10 9 2 ♦ A K 3 ♠ A 5
The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♠ Dble. Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have a good hand indeed, but not quite good enough to commit your side to game. Remember, partner has been forced to respond on what might be a complete yorborough. Still, you should give him every encouragement to go on to game if he has any useful values. Jump to three hearts. That is not forcing, just highly invitational.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠ K 8 ♥ Q ♦ A 10 9 3 ♠ A K J 9 5 4
The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♥ Dble. Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Forget bidding some number of clubs—your hand will produce a lot of tricks at no trump. How many is the question. You might invite with two no trump, but you are not really interested in learning whether partner is maximum or minimum. For instance, if partner has no more than ♠ J, ♠ K and ♠ Q, you are almost sure of nine tricks. We would gamble on three no trump.

Celebrities Gather To Party As Convention Comes To Town

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The chauffeur, a large man with an imposing belly and a somber black suit, was slumped against the front fender of a black limousine parked outside the Copacabana nightclub.

All week, he said, he'd been driving the wife of television producer Norman Lear. The work, he said, is fine. It's the waiting that's rough.

"The only thing I mind is when they don't tell me the truth. She went to a party on East 72nd Street at 5:30. She said she'd be out in an hour and a half. So she comes out at 8:30.

"She told me she didn't know how long this thing would last, so I've got to sit here and wait. I can't go anywhere."

"This thing" was a celebrity-studded fundraiser organized by the National Women's Political Caucus for delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

If most of the delegates didn't realize the wife of the man who created "All In The Family" was one of the hosts, they nonetheless counted celebrities as studiously as the candidates have been tallying delegates.

"Bella Abzug is here. Mo Udall is here. I saw Teddy Kennedy and Shirley Chisholm. Betty Friedan is over there. Is Gloria Steinem here?" a Pennsylvania delegate asked the woman crushed next to her near the bar.

"I just ran into Ellen Burstyn. She's looking for a table. Wouldn't it be wonderful to be able to find a table for Ellen Burstyn?"

said a delegate from Alaska as she prowled among the tables on the nightclub's upper floor.

Eight blocks south, a mob of delegates lined up for 100 yards along 52nd street, awaiting admission to a celebrity-free party at the New York, New York discotheque. The party, organized by New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley, New York City Council President Carol Bellamy and Rep. Chris Dodd of Connecticut, was free. No one seemed to mind the absence of famous faces.

Nine blocks farther south, Bobby Kennedy Jr., presided over a "Kennedy Cousins" disco party at Xenon. Kennedy did not enter the room that throbbed with lights and music. Instead, the unsmiling young man leaned against a wall in the entrance hallway.

"President Carter's people are giving a party here later this week, so the people at Xenon asked if we'd like to give a party, too," Kennedy said. "We invited delegates and Xenon regulars."

There were few delegates among the grating young people, but the South Dakota delegation turned up. For all she cares, said State Sen. Doris Miner, this could be the only party she attended during convention week.

"There's a whole stack of invitations, but I haven't even looked at them yet," she said. "My purpose here is to be on the convention floor."

"I could see nothing but the floor of Madison Square Garden from here on out and that would be fine with me."

While Officials Wait, Allen Loses His Punch

By JAMES KING
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Saturday afternoon advisory from the National Weather Service warned of a possible 15-foot flood surge rolling into the Port of Brownsville. It said Hurricane Allen would be the strongest storm ever to strike the southern tip of Texas.

Grim-faced authorities in the Cameron County Hall of Justice braced for the worst and some admitted they were afraid.

"From now on we must just endure," the NWS statement said. "Many people have had to go through hurricanes and have survived. May God help us."

The advisory clattered onto the weather wire at 4 p.m. CDT and was read on the air by many coastal broadcasters. Hundreds of residents who heard it decided to spend the night in public storm shelters, joining thousands who already had left their homes.

Just nine hours later, the mood of fear in the county building was gone, and many officials and reporters, tired of waiting for the predicted big thrust of the storm, had gone to sleep on the floor.

They were awakened shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday when the NWS issued another advisory, this one saying the hurricane had spent much of its force out in the Gulf and would not be as strong as feared.

"It's just a ferocious little thunderstorm," said one relieved NWS forecaster.

The advisory said the storm's eye had gone ashore at an uninhabited stretch of beach near the Laguna Atascosa Wildlife Refuge and the hurricane was weakening. Brownsville was largely spared what could have been the worst storm in the city's history.

Later Sunday, Allen was downgraded to tropical storm status. It left no injuries, no violent deaths and far less property damage than had been feared.

How could such a powerful hurricane — packing 170-mph winds and chasing an estimated 200,000 residents from their homes — turn into a "thunderstorm" in nine hours?

Meteorologist Richard

Hagan said Allen stalled offshore while half its circulation was over land and the friction of the wind blowing over the land caused it to slow down, much like a rotary lawnmower blade bogging down in high grass.

"If the thing had continued moving right on in on us at the 20 to 25 mph forward speed that it had across the Gulf, there's no doubt in my mind that South Texas would have a much different look today," Hagan said.

"By the time the storm began to go almost stationary, a good portion of its circulation was over land. After a good many hours the drag depleted much of the storm's energy."

He said he did not know why the hurricane's forward motion stopped.

"The prediction of a hurricane's motion is still very much an art, not a science," he said.

He said the warnings issued by the NWS and the National Hurricane Center in Miami were based on the best information available at the time. And the fact that Allen turned out to cause much less misery than expected should not make people complacent next time.

"As a coastal resident, you're dealing with your life when you make a decision about what you're going to do in a hurricane," Hagan said. "And you can't afford to gamble what you can't afford to lose."

Frustrated Truman Wrote When Upset

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — When President Harry S. Truman got upset, he apparently put it down on paper.

That habit is the basis for a book by Indiana University history professor Robert Ferrell, who recently uncovered some letters Truman wrote but neglected to mail.

"Truman apparently vented his feelings (in letters) a lot but never sent them," said Lila Ferrell, the professor's wife. Ferrell was out of town over the weekend on his way to the Truman Library at Independence, Mo., for more research.

In a letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt's press secretary, Jonathan Daniels, Truman decried some of the cabinet members he inherited when Roosevelt died in office.

"There was not a man on the list who would talk frankly at a Cabinet meeting! The honest ones were afraid to and the others wanted to fool me anyhow," Truman wrote in the letter, which Daniels apparently never received.

Truman described Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr. as a "block head — nut," and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins as "a grand lady — but no politician." However, he described Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson as "a real man ... a statesman sure enough."

In a May 6, 1948, letter, Truman wrote he was thrust into the presidency without any preparation.

"I was handicapped by lack of knowledge of both foreign and domestic affairs — due principally to Mr. Roosevelt's inability to pass on responsibility. He was always careful to see that no credit went to anyone else for accomplishment."

To a war buddy who suggested he ease up on civil rights legislation, Truman cited lynchings and beatings in the South:

"I can't approve of such goings on and I shall never approve it, as long as I am here, as I told you before. I am going to try to remedy it and if that ends up in my failure to be reelected, that failure will be in a good cause."

A postscript said Truman, who died in 1972, hoped the friend would regard the letter as personal and confidential "at least until I've made a public statement on the subject — as I expected to do in the South."

Mrs. Ferrell said her husband stumbled across the correspondence while looking for material for a book on World War I.

That book is still in the works, but Ferrell's Truman findings will be published in October as "Off the Record: The Private Papers of Harry S. Truman."

Pitt 4-H'er Cynthia Lilley participated in the Citizenship Washington Focus program August 2-9. She was selected to attend because of her participation in 4-H club projects and activities and her election as County Council president for 1980.

During the week, the 4-H'ers visit their congressional representatives, tour the capitol building, visit Mt. Vernon, the Smithsonian, and go for a performance at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. These tours and visits follow group discussion on government and the historical development of the nation and the capitol.

Lilley is one of 45 4'ers selected from across the state to make up the 1980 N.C. delegation. They are accompanied by two extension agents and two leaders also selected from applicants across the state.

The delegate is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lilley of Grifton. She has been a 4-H'er for five years.

The Citizenship Washington Focus Tour is conducted cooperatively by the National 4-H Council and the Agricultural Extension Service.

Lava Dome Is Building Again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — For the second time in two months, a glowing hot lava dome is bulging up from the crater of Mount St. Helens, but otherwise the southwest Washington volcano is settling into a post-eruption lull, officials say.

"What we've got is a mountain that is behaving itself," said Bob Norris of the University of Washington seismic research center, which recorded little activity over the weekend.

The lava dome — molten rock which builds up as it is extruded — grew about 100 feet over the weekend and by Sunday filled the crater, Forest Service officials said.

Airborne observers reported the dome glowed a bright red Saturday night and early Sunday, said Carey Conway of the Forest Service.

Tim Hait, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist, said the dome had been growing since the volcano's fifth eruption ended. Ash and steam shot eight miles high during Thursday's blast.

The dome is about 1,000 feet wide, tapering down into the throat of the volcano and filling the inner crater left by eruptions since the volcano's first and most devastating blast May 18.

Hait said the dome was level with the floor of the larger crater which resulted when the top 1,300 feet of the peak were blown away May 18.
