Kennedy Lying Low After He Wows Convention With Speech

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, the vanquished challenger whose oratory electrified the Democratic National Convention, is lying low today and offering no hint whether he'll stay around for President Carter's triumphant acceptance of the party's presidential nomination.

Kennedy returned to the Waldorf-Astoria late Tuesday after publicly congratulating Carter and predicting the party will reunite and "march toward a Democratic victory in 1980."

He ignored reporters' questions about whether he will formally endorse the president or join him at the podium before the close of the convention Thursday night.

After the speech, which touched off a 40-minute demonstration of cheering and poster-waving, Kennedy strategists struck a deal that resulted in the senator's victory on several key economic planks in the party platform.

Kennedy spokesman Dick Drayne said the senator would spend much of today talking on the telephone to Democratic leaders and other party members.

Those conversations are planned primarily for reasons of courtesy, Drayne said, not consultation on Kennedy's next move in his measured path toward reconciliation with the president he spent nine months trying to drive from the White House.

Asked if the convention remarks were meant to signal an endorsement of Carter, several top Kennedy aides said they would prefer to let the senator's words speak for themselves.

In his nationally televised speech, Kennedy told the cheering throngs on the convention floor:

"I congratulate President Carter on his victory here. I am confident that the Democratic Party will reunite on the basis of Democratic principles — and that together we will march toward a Democratic victory in 1980."

Kennedy's address, the first to capture the attention of the thousands on the convention floor, was scheduled to enable the senator to appeal for delegate support of economic proposals that Kennedy had made the focus of his presidential campaign.

The convention responded by handing him a stunning victory on major elements of his economic program, agreeing by voice vote to the bulk of his proposed platform planks. They rejected one calling for wage and price controls.

Kennedy said it was the difficult economic issues of joblessness and inflation that kept him in the race, and asked the party to offer "new hope" to Americans out of work.

He also attacked Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan as no friend of labor, cities, senior citizens or the environment. The GOP candidate, Kennedy added, "has no right to quote Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

In his acceptance speech at the Republican convention in Detroit last month, Reagan recalled a line from a Roosevelt speech. That led Kennedy to warn that the GOP is trying to usurp the economic issues Kennedy

Carter Arrives In N.Y. To Claim Re-Nomination

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter arrived in triumph today to claim re-nomination, and immediately set about to woo the Kennedy wing of the Democratic party whose reticence about his candidacy clouds his efforts to win re-election.

To cheers of "Four More Years" and strains of "Happy Days are Here Again," Carter told supporters that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Tuesday night convention speech was "one of the greatest I ever heard," and expressed confidence that the party would emerge united to "whip the Republicans" in November.

Carter came from Washington on the day after the convention adopted a platform bearing Kennedy's stamp. His principle political mission was to coax a strong endorsement from Kennedy in an attempt to convert the senator's supporters, many of whom were threatening to sit out the campaign or even bolt to the independent candidacy of John Anderson.

Carter aides hoped to arrange a meeting between the president and Kennedy, but Carter said he didn't know yet if or when that might occur.

"I spoke to him last night and congratulated him on a wonderful speech," the president said of Kennedy, who dropped out of the race Monday night after losing the crucial rules vote on an "open convention."

Kennedy has caused the Carter forces a little trouble here following the "open convention" fight. The senator's speech on the platform prompted the convention to adopt his positions and repudiate Carter's on the economy, the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion.

Asked about Kennedy's support Tuesday night as he returned to the White House from five days at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Carter replied: "That's a decision for him to make."

And does he need that support, he was asked.

"I can win much better with him," Carter replied. "It would certainly be beneficial for me to have his full support during the campaign."

There were some signs, however, that not all Kennedy's supporters would go along with a Kennedy endorsement. Kennedy's deputy campaign director, former Wisconsin Gov. Pat Lucey, resigned as a delegate and said he would consider supporting independent candidate John Anderson. A machinists union official said some members who are delegates would walk out during Carter's acceptance speech to protest the president's economic policies.

As for Kennedy, in an impassioned speech that electrified the convention's Tuesday session, he called for a party victory in the fall but offered no direct endorsement of Carter.

After that speech, the convention was momentarily his. But it was a shallow victory for the Massachusetts senator, his presidential bid rejected and his major platform plank spurned by Carter.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Carter would formally notify the convention today that he cannot accept a plank calling for a $12 billion federal program to create 800,000 jobs. That plank was the one on which Kennedy chose to focus his fight "to renew the commitment of the Democratic Party to economic justice."

Asked why Carter was unwilling to accept the plank, White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "I can't imagine Senator Kennedy would expect the president overnight to change the position which he has held throughout this long campaign. I would think the senator and the American people would think less of the president if he changes his policy ... just to obtain some political advantage."

Under party rules, Carter must notify the convention of his disagreement with any platform plank within one hour of final approval of the document.

"Obviously, we have felt since the very beginning that a program such as the $12 billion federal jobs program is not the best way to go about aiding the recovery of the economy," Powell said. "We share the goals, but we disagree with the means and we'll make that clear."

Powell said that while Carter continues his strong support for the ERA, he opposes the platform plank calling on the party to withhold campaign funds and technical assistance from any candidate who opposes the amendment.

The convention also called for continued federal funding for abortions, a position Powell said Carter has opposed throughout his public life.

Among the remaining controversial planks to be taken up when the delegates returned to Madison Square Garden at noon EDT were those dealing with solar energy and the MX Missile.

The solar energy plank calls for a commitment "to a federal program for solar or other renewable sources that exceed the federal commitment to synthetic fuels."

The minority plank on the MX flatly opposes deployment of the missile system favored by Carter.

Powell conceded that Carter faced a tough fight on the MX, but he added that "the president's position ... is clear and not alterable."

But the potential disputes on the remaining planks seemed anti-climactic after the emotional session Tuesday night when Kennedy delivered one of the memo-

Pres. Unsure Of EMK Meeting

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter arrived in New York today to claim the Democratic presidential nomination, predicting he would lead a unified party to "whip the Republicans" in the November elections.

But questions about a reconciliation with his defeated rival, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, hung over his 55-hour visit to the Democratic National Convention city. And the president said he did not yet know whether he would meet with the senator.

"I spoke to him last night after his speech and congratulated him on a wonderful speech," Carter said after Air Force One landed at Newark International Airport across the Hudson River in New Jersey.

He then flew by Marine Corps helicopter to a landing pad on New York's West Side.

Arriving at the Sheraton Centre, his headquarters hotel, Carter told a cheering band of some 200 supporters: "Throughout this year and throughout the last four years you have shown your confidence in me. We have faced formidable odds in the past and we have never been defeated on major issues. I have no doubt we will be victorious in November."

Carter, his party's overwhelming choice for president at its convention in this city four years ago, returned as an incumbent burdened by questions within Democratic ranks about his chances for a second term.

But, he said: "I am ... grateful for a party which at the end of this convention will be united ... and (Vice President Walter) 'Fritz' Mondale and I will be willing to serve four more years beginning in January."

The president noted his success Monday night in the fight to preserve a party rule requiring delegates to vote for the candidate they were elected to represent.

"My heart goes out in thanksgiving to the delegates who did such a wonderful job protecting the integrity of the primary system and honoring the votes of 19 million Democrats who expressed their will this year," he said.

Presidential appointments secretary Phil Wise, asked how Carter would spend today in New York as the convention prepares to nominate him tonight, said he will concentrate on polishing his acceptance speech he will deliver Thursday night.

The president was accompanied on the 45-minute flight from Washington by his wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy, mother-in-law Allie Smith, and two of his grandchildren, Jason, 5, and Sarah, 1½. They are the children of Jack Carter and his wife Judy.

On his arrival in New York, Carter was greeted by Gov. Hugh Carey, Mayor Edward Koch and Sen. Daniel Moynihan.

Renomination was his, needing only the formal vote tonight, but the president came to his day of victory without a unified party offering support from its various constituencies and with many Democrats openly worried that a ticket with Carter at the top will pull them down to defeat in November.

When Carter returned to the White House on Tuesday evening after a five-day holiday at his Camp David, Md., retreat, he told reporters he hoped to have Kennedy's support, but added: "That's a decision for him to make."

"It would certainly be beneficial for me to have his full support during the campaign," Carter said. Asked whether he could defeat Republican nominee Ronald Reagan without Kennedy's help, Carter replied: "I can win much better with him."

Winning that support, and the backing of the Kennedy loyalists, "is not a process that is accomplished in a night or a week," Powell said. He added: "In the end, most good Democrats will act like good Democrats."

Many weren't ready to fall into line Tuesday.

Former Wisconsin Gov. Pat Lucey, Kennedy's deputy national campaign director, resigned as a delegate and

Eight Public Hearings Highlight Council Slate

A long City Council agenda, featuring eight public hearings, is scheduled for consideration at Thursday's regular 8 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The public hearings involve: request by AJHM for rezoning property at the intersection of NC 11 and Club Pines Drive from R-9 to Office and Institutional (O&I); request by Blount and Ball for rezoning property east of Arlington Boulevard behind Blount and Ball Real Estate from Shopping Center to O&I;

Request for rezoning property located at the rear of Orchard Hill Subdivision from R-15 to R-9; request by the engineering department that the zoning ordinance be amended relative to concrete curbs or elevated wheel stops; an amendment to the flood plain zoning district to allow sand mining operations as a special use;

An amendment to the medical arts zoning district to allow a day care facility as a special use; an amendment to the zoning ordinance relative to the classifications in which outdoor advertising signs are allowed; and on an ordinance regulating stormwater detention.

Other items on the agenda include: appointments to boards and commissions; presentation by Greenville Cable TV Inc. of its annual report and a request by the firm for Council's consideration of a resolution approving the guaranty agreement between Greenville Cable TV and Provident National Bank; consideration of two applications for renewal of mobile home permits;

Consideration of six applications for privilege licenses; consideration of two requests for refund of overpayment of privilege license fees; consideration of five budget items; adoption of resolutions declaring 15 parking meters and also property on Roosevelt Avenue as surplus to the city's needs and authorizing sale; scheduling of public hearings on an amendment to the neighborhood commercial zoning classification, on an amendment to the subdivision ordinance, on the annexation of property on

Stantonsburg Road across from Medical Drive, and on a rezoning request;

Consideration of a Traffic Commission recommendation that the speed limit on Fairlane Road and St. Andrews Drive be reduced from 35 to 25 miles per hour; consideration of bids; consideration of tax releases for 1978, 1979, and 1980; request by the engineering department for approval of a right-of-way encroachment agreement between the city and the N.C. Department of Transportation for the proposed 14th Street improvements;

Establishment of the extraterritorial fire protection fee for 1980-81; an agreement for lease of tires for city buses; resolution authorizing the city manager to file the annual community development guarantee performance report with the Department of Housing and Urban Development; and a resolution requesting assistance with flood problems from the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Construction Bids Will Be Received

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission were told last night that bids for construction of the raw water pump station, impoundment basin, high service pumps and filter equipment and instrumentation for the city's new water treatment plant will be received August 28.

Bids for construction of the plant itself were received last month and totaled $5.8 million.

Estimates of the cost of the raw water pump station have been set at $1.11 million, while the cost of the impoundment basin has been set at $1.66 million. The cost of the filter equipment and pumps is estimated at $1.8 million.

Contracts for the construction of the facilities are expected to be awarded in early September.

Director of Utilities Charles Horne reported that there was little or no public response at the PURPA hearing August 4. He added that the commission will receive a transcript of the proceedings and then be able to set standards and policies in accordance with the federal Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act.

Horne reported that completion and implementation of Greenville's 201 Facility Plan is now proceeding on schedule after a number of delays. The plan is required before plans for a new sewage treatment facility here can be finalized.

The director noted that, according to engineers, the construction and operation of a new facility, at an estimated $12.31 million, would be the least costly alternative.

To upgrade and operate the present sewage treatment plant would cost an estimated $13.49 million, while the estimated cost in upgrading the present plant and adding new facilities to increase the capacity was set at $14.11 million.

The commission last night revised the personnel policy to allow compensatory time off for overtime work to be given at time and one-half, rather than on an hour-for-hour basis as in the past. Under the new policy, employees may elect to receive the compensatory time off or be paid at one-and-one-half times the hourly rate of pay, as in the past.

In other business last night, the commission approved the purchase of a number of items for which bids have been received. They include: 100 transformers from Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for $46,000; 30 transformers from Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for $24,253; 90,000 feet of various size cable from Eastern Electric Supply Co. for $61,772; 9,640 feet of various size pipe and fittings from Plexco, Inc. for $28,474; 114 tires from Sutton's Service Center for $7,255; an automotive tune-up tester from Sun Electric Corp. for $4,192, and two one-ton trucks from Service Sales, Inc. of Rocky Mount for $17,600.

The commission also approved the purchase and installation of a new telephone system from Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. at a cost of $40,462.

The purchase of the system, according to officials, is considerably cheaper than the present cost of telephone service and less expensive than a lease or lease-purchase arrangement.

Democratic Platform Will Offer Clear Alternative To Republican

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Democratic National Convention is handing President Carter a campaign platform constructed with liberal party planks that will give voters a clear alternative to the conservative Republican program built around Ronald Reagan.

From Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's job-creating economic policies to strong stands supporting abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment, the Democrats' platform contrasts startlingly to the tax-cutting, anti-abortion, ERA-absent doctrine crafted by the GOP in Detroit last month.

The still unfinished platform that emerged Tuesday night contains planks not only unacceptable to Republican Reagan but to Democrat Carter as well.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Carter would reject the $12 billion jobs program pushed successfully by Kennedy's forces. The president also was described as disagreeing with a plank guaranteeing federally financed abortions for poor women.

A third presidential rejection could come over an MX missile plank scheduled for debate today as the delegates complete work on the platform. The plank opposes deploying the missile system, a position directly conflicting with Carter's stance.

On Tuesday, the delegates adopted much of Kennedy's economic program following a frenzied 39-minute floor demonstration for Kennedy, who came to the convention with an appeal to provide jobs for the out-of-work.

Besides the $12 billion anti-recession program that would create 800,000 jobs, the delegates adopted Kennedy-endorsed commitments not to fight inflation with high interest rates and unemployment and not to advocate any government action leading to a significant rise in unemployment.

The delegates also accepted a Kennedy plank declaring that the need to guarantee a job to every able-bodied American should be the party's top domestic priority.

However, Kennedy's call for wage-price controls was rejected.

While the Democratic platform would fight unemployment through increased federal spending, the GOP platform would achieve the same goal through tax reductions designed to stimulate creation of private-sector jobs.

On the Equal Rights Amendment, the Democratic convention bolstered a pro-ERA plank by voting to withhold financial and technical support from candidates not supporting the amendment.

The Republican platform withdrew its longstanding support for the ERA, saying ratification is an issue to be left to each state.

On abortion, the Democrats supplemented an endorsement of abortion rights with a call to remove restrictions to federally financed abortions for poor women.

The Republicans called for a constitutional amendment outlawing abortions and urged the appointment of federal judges opposing abortion.

The Democrats rejected Kennedy's proposal for prompt enactment of a comprehensive national health insurance bill. Instead they stuck with Carter's plan for a gradual phase-in of health insurance.

The Republicans oppose any form of national health insurance.

On other issues, the Democrats support a federal welfare takeover, gun-control legislation and public financing of congressional campaigns. The Republicans oppose all three.

The Democrats ask full civil rights for homosexuals; the Republicans want legislation to ban school busing and permit non-denominational prayer in school.

The Democratic convention's acceptance of Kennedy's economic proposals came as a consolation to a man who had launched his challenge over an economic policy dispute but who could not win nomination.

Throughout the primaries, Kennedy had accused Carter of abandoning the party's traditional policies for fighting unemployment in favor of Republican-like anti-inflation policies of restrained federal spending and high interest rates that contribute to joblessness.

Carter, countering that current economic realities require that inflation and unemployment be combatted equally, argued that Kennedy's $12 billion jobs program would be inflationary.

But Carter delegates from high unemployment states found the jobs program irresistible.

The knowledge that the platform doesn't bind anyone to a policy made it easier for those delegates to defect to the Kennedy position despite frantic floor lobbying against the plank by top administration officials, including the labor secretary and Carter's chief economic adviser, Charles Schultze.

"When you have a rate of unemployment of 17 percent that we have in Puerto Rico, it is very difficult to reject a proposal to spend $12 billion for 800,000 jobs," said Baltasar Corrada, a Carter delegate.

Under an initial agreement worked out between the Carter and Kennedy forces, a roll-call vote was to have been taken on one Kennedy plank.

Judge Orders Ballots Held

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Distribution of North Carolina's general election ballot was barred Tuesday by a federal judge until the court rules on whether the state legally can keep independent presidential candidate John Anderson's name off the ticket.

U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. scheduled a hearing in Raleigh next Wednesday to hear arguments on a suit filed by Anderson supporters challenging removal of his name from the state ballot.

In Raleigh state Elections Director Alex Brock said other ballots would be distributed as scheduled this week, but his office would hold the presidential ballots.

Brock said his office "has no choice but to comply with the order" by the federal court.

Dupree's action in halting the ballot distribution and in setting an early date for the suit hearing was greeted with optimism by Anderson supporters.

"We're elated, we're happy, we're glad he's going to hear the case and that he's going to hear it as expeditiously as he is," said Jonathan Wood of Durham, the state volunteer coordinator for the Anderson campaign.

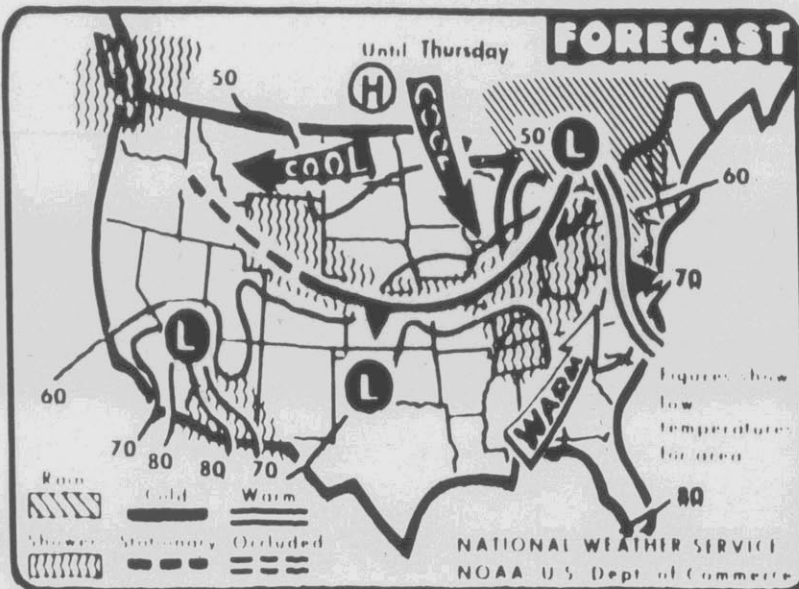

Anderson supporters filed suit in U.S. District Court last week, charging that the State Elections Board has infringed on the rights of voters by removing Anderson's name from the ballot. The board, acting on a challenge filed by the Democratic National Committee, ruled that Anderson's candidacy was illegal because he originally filed as a Republican candidate in the state's May 6 presidential preference primary.

Anderson withdrew from the state race before the primary, and his supporters then created the Independent Party for Anderson Party. The party filed the required petitions with the state board, which continues to recognize the party while barring Anderson's candidacy.

Brock said an early hearing was desirable because of the state's 60-day period for absentee voting. He said absentee ballots for constitutional amendments, state and judicial races would be mailed today to local election boards in North Carolina's 100 counties.

Brock said mock-up ballots with and without Anderson's name have been prepared, but will not be printed until the legal issue is resolved.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period, Wednesday through Thursday morning, from the upper Mississippi Valley through the Midwest and into the Northeast. A band of showers is also forecast from the western plains to the Midwest. Warm weather is forecast for most of the country. Northern Plains will be cool. (AP Laserphoto)

Parts of the South continued to bake under sweltering temperatures despite a temporary break in the heat wave in Texas because of Hurricane Allen.

In Berryville, Ark., beset by heat and lack of rain, two major employers are cutting back operations in an effort to conserve water. And children will attend classes for a half-day only when schools open next week.

Rain and thunderstorms extended over the upper Mississippi Valley and eastern portions of the upper Plains. Thunderstorms dropped hail on eastern South Dakota and were scattered along the Atlantic Coast from Florida into New Jersey.

Showers were scattered over the northern Rockies and western Arizona.

More thunderstorms were expected over much of the eastern two-thirds of the nation, with scattered storms over the Rockies into the southern Plateau.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 50 degrees in Houghton Lake, Mich. to 94 degrees in Phoenix, Ariz.

Couturies Turn Back To History For Winter

PARIS (AP) — A portrait of a lady — that's the big picture of Paris couture fashion for next winter.

The artists of clothes design here turned back to history for the most opulent evening clothes in years, whether Renaissance with huge puffed sleeves and billowing skirts, or Edwardian with ruffles and ribbons.

As for day wear, you won't have to worry about your skirt length, even if you care about Paris fashion. This time around there were superb and structured minis from Cardin, and also plants hoops in his short skirts. There were also very elegant long and fancy outfits from Ungaro and Scherrer.

On Thursday, the last day of the collections, Scherrer won a prize for creativity, the "Golden Thimble," though one wonders about creativity this season. He's a great designer, but his beautiful Russian ladies, from the Czarist period in their heavily furred and embroidered outfits, were strongly reminiscent of past couture.

Daytime looks elsewhere were usually dresses and suits cut just below the knee, practical and flattering. Toppers for these usually had strongly-shaped shoulders, and were either short and boxy or long and blousy, as at Saint Laurent who did them in hip-length, cuffed suede over narrow leather skirts.

Coats may be gently fitted or boxy, but it's chic to wear them slightly shorter than your skirt. Besides fitted jersey, cashmere or challis day dresses, there are many loose dresses in chemise. They are most frequently ruffled or flounced in keeping with Paris's romantic mood.

Pants are not popular in the couture scene, but that does not mean they are going out. Designers usually put them into the ready-to-wear.

The romantic mood was dominant from day to evening. Givenchy expressed it in ruffles; Madame Gres, with draped capes. Ungaro presented ladies in beautifully ornamented versions of military cloaks with frog buttons, or swathed in luminous shades of silk and lace.

The sleeve is all-important for next winter, and the most popular look is rather puffy at the top and narrowed at the wrist — call it a carrot shape, or modified leg of mutton.

This goes into the huge ballooning puff sleeve for evening on Renaissance or eighteenth-century dresses with belled-out skirts and tight, low bodices.

But the romance of details and décolletés also appears in short black velvet cocktail dresses, excellent sparkling sheaths, slithery sequin dresses, elaborate but usually in good taste, as only Paris knows how to do it.

For both daytime and evening the designers are tuned into black for next winter, and black and white furs, especially dyed fox or astrakhan. But there is also a subtle color palette, with newest looks in the jewel tones of amethyst, emerald, ruby and sapphire, also teal green and blue and iridescent brass gold.

They like the smokier tones for daytime like mauve and deep midnight blue, plus a range of autumn greens and rusts, and a few touches of bright red.

No matter what length of dress you choose to wear, remember Paris and opt for dark patterned tights or sheer smoky shades in stockings worn with pumps.

Newest and undoubtedly a joy to walk in are the little patent dancing slippers with small, triangular heels, perhaps a perky bow ornament. Ungaro showed some fitted suede boots with high heels — a la 19th century. But most designers don't really give a fig about what to wear on your feet during a Chicago winter.

Hardly anybody wears hats these days, but the designers always think they are a vital touch to these expensive couture outfits. This year, they showed huge velvet Rembrandt berets, or "buccaneer" hats with the brim turned back, a favorite all over — especially when topped with a plume a la Cyrano de Bergerac.

Miss Pam Tyson, bride-elect of Robbie Allen, was honored at a bridal shower last week in the fellowship hall of Red Oak Christian Church.

Hostesses were Mrs. Nancy Beardsworth, Mrs. Ruth Crawford, Mrs. Edith Denton, Mrs. Wilma James, Mrs. Rena Manning, Mrs. Mollie Murphy, Mrs. Sue Pennington, Mrs. Vivian Smith and Mrs. Pattie Worthington.

The honoree was presented a white mum corsage as were the mothers of the couple, Mrs. Amos Tyson and Mrs. Robert Allen.

Mrs. Wilma James invited guests into the shower area which was decorated with floral arrangements, hanging baskets and candles. The serving table was covered with a hand-fashioned organza and lace cloth and was centered with an arrangement of snapdragons and fern flanked by burning yellow tapers.

Mrs. Wilma Tyson, aunt of the bride-elect, poured punch and Mrs. Vivian Smith, aunt of the bridegroom-elect, served bridal cakes.

Miss Donna Worthington and Mrs. Kathy Allen, sister of the bridegroom-elect, assisted at the gift table.

Good-byes were said to Mrs. Beardsworth.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Pridgen of Greenville announce the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn, to Edwin Leon Burney, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Albert Burney of Greenville. The wedding will take place Aug. 23.

Snoring Tape Erases Static

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after I married Mark I discovered that he snored. When I told him he snored, he denied it. Abby, his snoring sounded like a chicken bone in a garbage disposal!

Finally I decided I had had enough of his denials, so two weeks ago I bought a tape recorder and learned how to use it. One night after Mark fell asleep, I held the microphone under his nose and got about 10 minutes of snoring. Then I reversed the tape, turned up the volume and nearly blasted him out of bed. (Thank heavens he didn't hit me.)

Only after I threatened him with a nightly re-run did he agree to see an ear, nose and throat specialist for an examination. The doctor discovered several polyps (small growths) in Mark's nose, which he said could be the cause of his snoring. The polyps were removed in a simple surgical procedure, and now my darling snores no more! Pass this on.

PEACE AT LAST

DEAR PEACE: Not all snoring is due to growths in the nose, but it's well worth a trip to a doctor to find out.

Now a word in praise of the tape recorder: If we could hear ourselves as others hear us, many of the world's ills could be cured. So, if you're living with a whiny child, a screaming (or nagging) mate, or someone who says, "Ya' know" a lot, get it on tape! It will be worth its weight in gold, and we all know how much gold is worth these days!

DEAR ABBY: I am 62 and in good health, but my 58-year-old sister keeps admiring certain things in my home, saying "Will you please leave this to me when you die?" What should I say?

RUTHIE

DEAR RUTHIE: Tell her you will consider it — if she doesn't die first.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for a year to a man I'll call Nick. It's my first marriage and his second. Nick has two children, 12 and 8. He's 36 and I'm 30. I think I should mention that I had nothing to do with Nick's divorce.

My problem: Nick's mother. She is still very close to his first wife, which I do not resent, but she has never accepted me and refuses to give me a chance. She has never been verbally rude to me. She just ignores me.

When Nick brought me to her home and told her we planned to marry, she glared at me, then turned to Nick and said, "I thought you said you'd never get married again!" (No congratulations, best wishes or anything else.)

I may be picky, but one thing upsets me terribly. She used to have pictures of her children and grandchildren displayed on the piano in her living room. Among them was a large wedding picture of Nick and his first wife. Recently she rearranged her living room, and moved all the pictures into her bedroom — leaving the one of Nick and his "ex" on the piano. Now every time I go there I have to sit and look at that picture the entire time, which makes me very uncomfortable.

Please don't suggest that I give her a picture of Nick and me. I did, but she never put it out. What should I do?

NO. 2

DEAR NO. 2: You may be "No. 2" with Nick's mother, but as long as you're No. 1 with Nick, don't let it get you down.

Since Nick's mother ignores you when you visit her, keep your visits to a minimum. And when you go, nothing says you have to look at that picture. Ignore it. Or better yet, take a magazine along and bury your nose (and your hostilities) in it!

NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES PROPOSED PLAN FOR WINTER HOME HEATING ASSISTANCE

The State of North Carolina proposes to implement the Federal Low Income Energy Assistance Program in the following manner:

A. ELIGIBILITY

Eligible households would be those having at least one member receiving or eligible to receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income, or Food Stamp benefits. Other households would also be eligible if income is less than 75% of the Bureau of Labor Statistics Lower Living Standard ($8,385 for 4-person households). All eligible households will have to be vulnerable to rising home heating costs to receive benefits.

B. PAYMENTS AND BENEFIT LEVELS

Payments would be made directly to eligible households with payment amount depending on household income, estimated fuel cost, and estimated fuel need.

C. OTHER PROVISIONS

Other major proposed State Plan provisions pertain to payments to building operators of certain assisted housing, procedures for identifying and certifying eligible households, coordination with weatherization and conservation programs, payments to Indian tribal member households, the procedural rights of households, and measures to be taken to control improper distribution of benefits.

PROPOSED REQUESTS FOR WAIVER of Federal program regulations in order to achieve economy in administration while meeting basic program objectives include:

Waive the 30 day application processing requirement for persons applying for AFDC or SSI benefits to become eligible for energy assistance and substitute time standards used in those programs.

Waive the requirement that at least one-half of total administrative costs be from non-Federal sources.

Waive the requirement that household income be defined as total cash income from all sources (with certain exclusions) and use income as defined in AFDC, SSI, and Food Stamp programs for categorical households.

Waive the income verification requirement for non-categorical households. Waive the requirement that both SMSA and non-SMSA income standards be used and use the non-SMSA standard only.

Waive the requirement that partial vulnerability to increased energy costs be considered in making payments.

Waive the requirement that no duplicate payments be made.

Waive the requirement that building operator information on eligible tenants be verified.

The entire proposed plan may be reviewed and a free plan summary obtained at any county department of social services August 13 through September 2. Written comments will be taken during this same period and should be sent to:

North Carolina Division of Social Services
Raleigh, North Carolina 27611

Comments received may be inspected Monday through Friday at the same location beginning August 13 between 8:30 A.M. and 4:30 P.M.

It Happens Every Spring...

You might say it happens every spring—and fall, winter and summer: A family going through some old papers uncovers a life insurance policy that may be worth a good deal of money.

It happens because for one reason or another people sometimes forget or are unaware that the policies exist.

And though insurance companies will go to great lengths to locate your beneficiaries there are still instances of lost policies.

Here are some reasons that those who are entitled to collect on old life insurance policies often do not:

—They may never have known the deceased had a policy—until it turns up in some out of the way place. (This illustrates the virtue of discussing your life insurance with your beneficiaries.)

—Paid-up annuities, say insurance authorities, have a tendency to be forgotten.

—Beneficiaries, who don't know they are beneficiaries, move to a new community and are difficult for an insurance company to find.

—Policies that families think had lapsed, often have built-in protection against this—so some policies have value even after the premium payments are stopped.

Sums range in size from under $100 to thousands of dollars. So, keep track of the policies your closest relatives hold. Some day this knowledge may be worth money to you.

Secrets You Should Tell Dose Your Spouse Really Know Where It's At?

Both husband and wife should know a lot more about each other's personnel and legal records than most do.

Basic things each of you should know include:

—The whereabouts of all birth certificates, marriage licenses, divorce decrees or records of previous marriages.

—Social Security numbers and income tax returns for the past four years.

—The location of all life insurance policies and the face values (less loans) of the policies.

—What other insurance protection each of you have—medical, accident, disability, auto, fire, etc.

—A list of benefits either of you may be entitled to, based on employment or military service.

—The location of safe deposit boxes, if any.

—The location of bank accounts.

—The location of each other's wills and the names and addresses of the attorneys who drew the wills.

—The names of any professionals, such as accountants, lawyers and insurance agents, with whom either of you deals.

—The location and value of joint or separately-owned assets such as stocks, bonds, real estate, collections, jewelry, and silver.

Call the Extension Office at 758-1196 for a copy of "Record of Important Family Papers."

Unity Is Only Answer

It might not be totally safe to say the controversy is over as far as the Democratic national convention is concerned, but as it pertains to anything that matters, it is.

The issue that was to tear the convention apart was settled in convincing fashion Monday night when the roll call vote was taken on the so-called "open convention" rules change. Oh, there was some booing of speakers against the rule change preceding the vote. That's the way those on the losing side seek to convince themselves that somehow they can win. But when the final vote was tallied the Carter forces had won hands down and the vote convinced everybody that Carter was in control of the convention.

Within a short while Sen. Ted Kennedy went on television to announce that his name would not be placed in nomination for the presidency. It had become clear to him, as it had to most observers sometime before, that the Democratic nomination was not to be his.

There was, and will continue to be, more scrapping during the convention over what the party is to stand for, but there are few who don't expect the nomination of President Carter tonight, followed by the nomination of Vice President Mondale.

It is well that things stayed under control as well as they did during the Democratic convention. Harsh things can be said in an all-out floor fight and it is difficult to resolve differences after such things have been recorded for all the world to see.

The Democrats are going to need all the forces they can muster to meet the campaign of Republican Ronald Reagan. His candidacy looms awesome at this point and only a united Democratic party can hope to compete.

Propaganda Value Exploited

Things continue to swirl insofar as the American hostages are concerned in Iran.

A new prime minister has been chosen, Mohammad Ali Rajai, which could mean Iran's Parliament can begin debating the hostage question. There is small comfort in that, however. The new prime minister is a hard liner which in Iran means complete disdain for individual rights.

In the meantime Secretary of State Edmund Muskie says new initiatives are being tried to free the hostages. Muskie was apparently referring to diplomatic contacts which might be able to reason with whoever is in charge in Iran.

No one can predict what such a country as Iran will do with the hostages at any given time. We can only assume that the hostages will be freed when they no longer have propaganda value to the current powers.

THIS AFTERNOON State Not Ready

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Is North Carolina, that much-heralded "Variety Vacationland," ready for the changes certain to come in the travel and tourism business?

The new director of travel and tourism thinks not. In fact, he finds North Carolina "an underdeveloped state," and is urging quick action to take advantage of changing times.

"Some areas of the state have adequate facilities, but in other areas they are considerably less than adequate. Few new resort hotels are being built or planned, and we're going to need them. We need to see some package tours developed; there are two or three such tours available now, but we'll need many more."

"The private automobile will not be as big a factor in future travel habits, and we're going to need well planned bus tours in our vacation areas," says Daniel T. Roth.

Attractions

The state has the natural attractions, the coast and the mountains and the Piedmont. Not only will vacationers from the United States be coming, but so will Europeans who, after seeing the nation's prime attractions like Washington, New York and California then begin searching out more beautiful and quieter retreats.

"In terms of the natural and man-made attractions that North Carolina offers, we're second to no one," Roth said in a feature interview which leads off the annual Transportation Issue of "North Carolina" magazine published by the Citizens Association.

"But in terms of accommodations, facilities and services...I feel that we're an underdeveloped state."

Roth believes that some interests will move strongly to provide those facilities. The big question is whether growth will be controlled by North Carolinians or outsiders.

"And I for one want to see

our own people develop the resources we will need.

"I think the best insurance that such development is orderly and careful is to have North Carolinians invest in North Carolina travel facilities."

"We surely don't want to see any Coney Islands going up next to Tryon Palace," Roth said.

The years just ahead will be somewhat a stand-still time in the travel business. Then will come adjustments to changed travel patterns; there will be longer trips with people staying longer at a central spot; more sophisticated travelers and more discriminating one in choice of service and facilities; and especially the influx of foreign visitors who will take advantage of the dollar differential to visit this country.

Excellence

"Foreign travelers are going to find North Carolina a state with a vast variety of attractions. But they are going to expect excellent accommodations and

BY ART BUCHWALD Why Billy Didn't Come

NEW YORK CITY — The man whose shadow hangs over the Democratic Convention is not here. Billy Carter decided not to attend, which has made Carter managers ecstatic. How was he persuaded not to come? Here is the inside story.

President Carter was asked by his campaign people to keep Billy from coming to New York. It was the toughest assignment Mr. Carter had been given in his four years of being president. He knew if he asked Billy not to do something Billy would do it just to spite him.

The president prayed and prayed for a solution and then suddenly it came. He called Billy in Plains, Ga., and said, "Billy, I have a favor to ask of you."

Billy said, "Drop dead."

"I mean it, Billy. I've never asked you for anything, but I need you. I would like you to come to Madison Square Garden the week of August 11th and nominate me for president of the United States."

"You have to be kidding. Why would I want to do that?"

"Because," Mr. Carter said "you're my brother."

Billy said, "I ain't nominating you for dogcatcher. Being your brother has got me in all the trouble I'm in right now. Why didn't you stay in submarines where you belong?"

"Billy boy, don't get testy. Didn't I show you the nice cables about you from Libya?"

"Yeh, and you also threw me to the wolves at the Justice Department. Thanks to you I may be pumping gas at Allenwood."

"I didn't tell you to get mixed up with the Libyans. I warned you that you could get in a peck of trouble if you started messing in international affairs. You're a country boy, Billy, and once you start messing with those city slickers in Tripoli, they're going to take you for everything you've got."

"That's easy for you to say.

encouraged you to be president, but she never said I could be president. It was always Jimmy this and Jimmy that. The only thing she said I was any good for was becoming a registered foreign agent."

"Let's not go all over that again. You're going to be in New York. Would it hurt any if you got up on Wednesday night and just said, 'I wish to nominate my brother Jimmy Carter for the highest office in the land'?"

"Is that what you really want, Jimmy?"

"Yes, Billy. I do."

"Then I ain't even coming to New York for the convention. I'll just sit down here in Plains and see you sweat."

"You wouldn't do that."

"Just see if I wouldn't. If you think I'm coming to the convention you can kiss my bottom."

The president hung up the phone and Ham Jordan came into the Oval Office.

Ham said, "Did it work?"

The president smiled. "Like a dream. He won't be within a thousand miles of New York."

"Good work, sir. This will put to rest once and for all the lie that the president can't handle his brother."

Other Editors Say A-Plus For Rather

(By Goldsboro News-Argus)

It is not often that those of us in the "print media" see fit to publicly praise those on the "electronic" side.

Dan Rather of CBS, however, has done journalism in general and TV news in particular proud with his performance on "60 Minutes" Sunday night.

Mr. Rather questioned President Jimmy Carter and Mrs. Carter for the entire program.

It took courage for the President to subject himself and Mrs. Carter to the kind of grueling questioning such a program invites. That's a far cry from a press conference at which 50 to 100 news people are present and one can pick and choose his questioners and cut off pursuit of difficult subjects.

In the 60-Minutes interview Mr. and Mrs. Carter both handled themselves and the tough questions very well.

But one could not help but be impressed with the way Dan Rather was able to pursue the difficult and embarrassing questions with tenacity but with disarming gentleness.

At conclusion of the program, the abiding impression was that we had seen the President and the First Lady and a true "gentleman of the press" performing at their very best.

Dan Rather is a credit to journalism.

Fight Inflation: Don't Retire

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Increasing numbers of Americans around retirement age have hit on a resourceful new inflation-fighting tactic: Not retiring.

Until the past few years, the vision of a long and prosperous retirement was an integral part of the American dream. Every year, greater and greater percentages of older people left the work force to pursue it.

But now, economists at New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust point out, there are signs that that long-established trend is changing.

From 1955 to 1975, for example, the percentage of men 65 and over still in the job market fell from almost 40 to 21.7. But since then it has barely declined at all; in 1979 it stood at 20. And there is a good chance, Morgan Guaranty argues, that it will start rising in the 1980s.

Some of the reasons for this change in attitude are plain. The greater the rate of inflation, the less secure people are likely to feel about the future purchasing power of their retirement incomes.

After all, at a 10 percent inflation rate, it takes only a little more than seven years for the cost of living to double.

Some of the other forces at work are a little more subtle. "Government policy, which formerly encouraged older workers to retire, now is tilting in the other direction," Morgan Guaranty notes. A policy of mandatory retirement at 65 is now prohibited in many types of work, and increases in Social Security benefits have been improved for those who put off their retirements past that age.

Of course this is a very emotional subject. Anyone who has been working for many years toward a specific retirement goal, contributing large amounts to Social Security and saving on his own as well, is likely to become a big agitated if he is told that it now suits the desires of the country for him to change those plans.

But the fact is that it would be convenient in several

Ted Must Preserve '84

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — A sign that political sanity may be creeping into the inner psyche of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy came during a confidential talk with his advisers last week when for the first time he failed to brush off a discussion about 1984 with an imperious wave of his hand.

On innumerable earlier occasions during his quest for the 1980 presidential nomination, 1984 has been ruled out by Teddy Kennedy as a subject not fit for discussion. This time, he listened as a top aide spelled out the possible verdict on Kennedy if he cuts and runs from a victorious Jimmy Carter after the president's expected nomination Wednesday night. The verdict: You're risking a political death sentence from your party.

The value of that small clue must be weighed against other pieces of evidence in seeking to unravel what most politicians feel is the last 1980 mystery of Madison Square Garden: Will Kennedy take a powder when Carter rolls to a first-ballot majority? Or will he sheathe his anti-Carter dagger, throw a perfunctory arm around the man he called a "clone of Ronald Reagan" and support the ticket in the fall campaign?

Kennedy's ambivalence is the only political talk there is here, with time closing in. It is an ambivalence that has marked all the stages of a campaign that began in the stars almost a year ago and sank to the depths after New Hampshire. The senator's play-it-by-ear strategy was exposed once again in Washington last week just after his agents concluded their pact with the White House giving Kennedy's forces — meaning principally Kennedy himself — one hour at the rostrum to argue for major changes in the made-by-Carter platform.

Out of the blue, Kennedy suddenly asked: If I should happen to lose the vote on the rules, should I go ahead and speak to the convention anyway?

The self-revelation in that question is staggering. It implied that the senator has truly believed he would win the rules vote and free Carter's delegates of their primary election loyalty pledges, despite all evidence to the contrary. It also raised doubts about his seriousness in asking for the podium for a policy discussion. The core of the White House pact was the proviso, made especially for Kennedy, to allow him to take his case directly to the delegates.

Throughout the Kennedy campaign, this ambivalence has confounded politicians trying to figure him out. After the disgrace of losing the New Hampshire primary in February, he had a well-advertised huddle with Sen. Henry M. Jackson and other defense-oriented Democrats, inviting speculation that he would transform his campaign. Days later, he made his dramatic George Washington University speech laying the foundation for a totally different campaign: Attack Carter for treason to the Democratic Party and demand the party's return to what he called its roots — New Deal, Fair Deal, New Frontier and Great Society politics in an era that clearly has cast that politics out of favor.

The appearance of stark indecision has infuriated major powers in the Democratic Party who have no love for Jimmy Carter. The leader of one major labor union told us that Kennedy's men have "propositioned" him to do "outrageous things" to hurt Carter. "Some of those guys around him are just crazy," this labor leader said. "The Dixie gang has out-slicked them and they don't even know it."

Led by Robert Strauss, Carter's agents here are icing the cake to tempt Kennedy. Conciliation is the rule, starting with the gift of the podium to Kennedy at prime television time Tuesday evening, 100 floor passes instead of the 38 asked and major compromises in the platform Kennedy wants. The decision to play out all the rope needed to bring Kennedy into the corral was insisted on by Strauss and Hamilton Jordan; Tim Kraft and Jody Powell thirsted for revenge, but they too know that without an appearance of reconciliation and some active support from the senator, Carter's campaign might strangle at birth.

That fate for Jimmy Carter may be just what Teddy Kennedy wants, but a disgrace for Carter engineered by Kennedy could disgrace the senator, too, ending all that talk about 1984.

I would like to comment on the ad of Mr. Hudson's. Why is he so concerned with whether the referendum of liquor-by-the-drink be held or not? Is he afraid that the general public of Greenville would possibly vote it in? Obviously, it is not just the restaurant owners seeking profit and businessmen who want it passed, for why would he be so worried? Let the citizens of Greenville vote. It is our right!

Strength For Today

Scars

Even the best efforts of plastic surgeons often fail completely to obliterate scars. Once a scar has been made on the surface of the skin, we have to resign ourselves to the fact that even though the surgeon can diminish it, some of it will remain to annoy and embarrass us.

The same is true of scars on our souls and scars on our reputations. John B. Gough, a great temperance lecturer of several generations ago, once wrote, "What you learn from bad habits and in bad company you will never forget, and it will be a lasting pang to you. I tell you in all sincerity...I would give my right hand tonight if I could forget that which I have learned in bad society."

A scar left on one's reputation is a thing to be avoided at all costs. The ways in which one acquires these scars are myriad. For example, the official who handles money and occasionally "borrows" from his employer or the public is risking a scar which no surgeon can completely remove. All of us know how to get scars — and how to avoid them.

Social Security is a particular sore spot. The payroll tax that supports this program has already been raised substantially, and is due to go up a lot more in the next few years. In 1981 alone, the maximum tax paid by a worker is scheduled to jump about 25 percent, to $1.975.

But that barely begins to answer the question of where the system will get the revenues it will need in the future — especially early in the next century, when the baby-boomers start reaching retirement age.

Already there are calls, as in the current Fortune magazine, for raising the Social Security retirement age from 65 to 68.

Whatever form they take, don't be surprised if you see more "incentives to postpone retirement" in the future. To paraphrase Walt Kelly, as the search begins in earnest for someone to bail the troubled system out, we have seen the most likely candidate, and he is us.

Eagle Award Is Made

Frank Tart, 18, was awarded the Eagle Scout rank Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church here.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse F. Tart of Greenville.

Presenting the honor were Ed Dixon, former scoutmaster of troop 124, and Wayne Dempsey, scoutmaster of troop 750.

Tart, a graduate of Rose High School, has participated in scout activities for seven years. He was a member of troop 124 for six years and served as patrol leader and senior patrol leader. This past year, Tart served as junior assistant scoutmaster of troop 750. He is a Brotherhood Member of the Arrow, which, Tart explained, is a fellowship of honored campers.

A few years ago he attended Brown Sea Double-Two, a leadership training program at Camp Bonner, Blounts Creek.

At Rose, Tart was a member of the National Honor Society and Key Club, and was junior class president and a SGA representative for two years. Tart was named "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

He will be attending the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill this fall.

Three Dead In RSA Riots

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Heavily armed police clamped tight controls over a black squatters' camp today after a series of mob attacks that claimed three lives in two days, including that of a black truck driver who was decapitated by rioters, authorities said.

Police said the unidentified black man was dragged from his truck Tuesday and decapitated by rioters at the Crossroads Camp, home to more than 20,000 blacks. There was no indication of a motive for that attack.

Two white men died of injuries suffered when their cars were firebombed in violence linked to a bus boycott organized to protest increased bus fares.

The violence erupted Monday when police pulled several blacks from an unlicensed taxi, spurring angry mob reprisals against passing vehicles. The so-called "pirate" taxis have been transporting workers taking part in the two-month-old bus boycott.

services wherever they go. And they'll also expect adequate and dependable transportation facilities since few of them will be driving automobiles. "And that's where imaginative package tours by bus will come in," Roth said.

Roth is puzzled that North Carolina has a seacoast more attractive, bigger and more accessible than that of South Carolina but has not come close to the sort of development which has taken place at Myrtle Beach.

Both change and expansion are ahead for the travel industry, Roth believes. "The question is...will we be ready for it? If we are, then we'll be the beneficiary of huge new infusions of tourist dollars."

"If we aren't...well, a lot of those dollars will be going to other states."

Corn Earworms Hit Area Soybeans

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
Area farmers are having troubles with corn earworms on soybeans.

According to Sam Uzzell,

assistant agricultural extension agent, farmers should begin scouting for the worms as soon as possible, and begin treatment when threshold levels indicate application of insecticides.

The corn earworm is normally found early in the season in silks of corn, particularly sweetcorn. When these caterpillars become mature, they fall or crawl down the stalk, where they have a resting stage in the ground. When they are through with this pupation, an adult or moth emerges.

The adults are normally seen at night flying across roads and highways, looking for new places to lay their eggs.

"They are very strongly attracted to flowers of soybeans," Uzzell explained, "and where flowers are visible and have freedom to move (open canopied beans), these are fields with the worst problems." Uzzell added that at this time of year farmers can expect problems with late planted soybeans and those planted behind wheat and grain.

After the adults lay eggs in the beans, it takes 2-4 days for them to hatch. "They first feed on foliage, which results in yield loss," said the farm agent. "If you scout from the first week in August, then you can tell when to treat and to apply insecticides. This will save money and enhance yields." To scout for the worms, use a shake sheet, which can be picked up from most chemical dealers, or take a bedsheet that measures three-by-three feet. This shake sheet should be placed on the ground between two rows. Bend down one row of beans over the sheet and beat it vigorously in a downward motion to knock the worms straight off. After finishing with the other row, identify what is on the shake sheet.

"Only corn earworms should be counted," said Uzzell. "If there are more than 12 on the beat sheet of at least one-half inch in length, then the threshold level has been exceeded

Lugs, Cutters Show Increase

FARMVILLE — An increase in volume of lugs and cutters have accounted for substantial increases in averages for the past two sale days. The average yesterday was approximately $5 above last year for the same sale day.

Stabilization receipts accounted for only 5.55 percent of gross sales. Volume was heavy in all warehouse firms at a full sale. The market sold 776,991 pounds. Money was $1,134,300 for an average of $145.99 per hundred pound, the highest average of the season.

To date, the market has sold 5,735,295 pounds. Money is $7,457,709 for a season average of $130.03 per hundred pounds.

Israeli Diplomat, Others Held By Armed Robber

By SUSAN ROSEGRANT
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.

(AP) — A former Israeli diplomat and 14 others attending a Beverly Hills dinner party were held hostage by an armed robber who later was killed by police, officers said.

Beverly Hills Police Lt. David Griffey said officers surrounded the home of Dr. Benjamin I. Schneiderman late Tuesday and killed the man after an anonymous telephone caller alerted them to the robbery.

Guests at the party included veteran Israeli diplomat Yehuda Gaulan, who once served as ambassador to Finland and foreign ministry chief of protocol, 12 other adults and one infant. They were held hostage along with Schneiderman. None of them was injured.

The identity of the man was not determined immediately.

Officers who surrounded the residence saw the gunman pointing a .38-caliber revolver at the hostages, Griffey said.

"Officers called the residence by phone and actually talked to the suspect," Griffey added. "He obviously wanted the police to leave and wanted to make his escape."

Griffey said the man put down the phone to look around, spotted a policeman at the window, then crouched and pointed his gun at the officer, who fired two rounds from a shotgun.

The man reeled back into the hallway. A second officer outside the residence saw him crouched there and fired one round from his service revolver, Griffey said.

Two people apprehended outside the house were released, Griffey said. "It appears to be one lone suspect who was in the house robbing the dinner party when officers arrived, and he took the people hostage," he said.

Griffey said police were called to the scene at about 10:15 p.m. "We assumed it was an anonymous call, but maybe one of the hostages got to a phone and then hung up," he said.

As a routine matter, the district attorney's office was investigating the shooting, he said.

commended when the number of worms one-half inch or longer in length exceeds 12. Late beans or beans planted behind wheat and grain should be checked first. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken.)

Alcohol And Drug Coordinator Named

Scott Lyman is the new coordinator of Alcohol and Drug Services for the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Lyman, who comes here from Prince Edward Island, Canada, will be directing the alcohol- and drug-related services of the county, including the administration of the Alcohol and Drug Center, located at 2020 Greenville Boulevard.

"Our focus," he said, "will be on prevention and early intervention into the problems of overuse and addiction to alcohol and other drugs. There are some good programs already underway and we hope to make them better. The d. u. i. program here is especially good, he said he believes, because it often brings the alcohol abuser into service before he is an alcoholic and before family, job and other problems have become too severe. "It's one way society says, 'Hey, your problem has become our problem and we want you to do something about it,'" he said.

"The employee assistance program is another good one. It provides help both for the troubled employee and his employer and often prevents job loss and family disruption." While there definitely is abuse of other drugs in Pitt County, alcohol is the most abused drug here among persons of all ages, he said he believes.

Lyman is a graduate of American University in Washington, D. C. and has a Master of Social Work degree from Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Tar Heels Cheer Ted; Angry Over ERA Plank

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy's emotion-filled speech left North Carolina's Democrats misty-eyed Tuesday night but a Kennedy-inspired plank on the Equal Rights Amendment had them steaming today.

Gov. Jim Hunt, a staunch loyalist of President Carter, was on his feet applauding Kennedy three times and had red eyes at the conclusion. And state party chairman Russell Walker, also a Carter supporter but politically in tune with Kennedy on many issues, wiped his eyes for several minutes after it was over.

"I think it was great, just great," said Walker. "I think he's already started campaigning for 1984."

"I thought it was fantastic," enthused Hunt. "One of the best I've ever heard. It sounded like John F. Kennedy ... It was touching."

Many in the state's heavy majority of rank-and-file Carter partisans, still buoyant with Carter's all-but-final renomination, also cheered Kennedy. But state Sen. Jim Garrison of Albemarle, an unabashed defender of oil, banks and other financial interests in the state Legislature, merely grinned and accepted ribbing from other delegates as Kennedy blasted tax shelters and loopholes.

The earlier passage by the Democratic National Convention of a minority platform plank on ERA drew a vastly different reaction. It said the Democratic Party "shall withhold financial support and technical campaign assistance from candidates who do not support the ERA."

The most obviously angered by the voice-vote adoption of that plank was Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who is running for re-election and who has helped defeat ERA ratification bills four times in North Carolina during the past eight years.

"The North Carolina delegation was against it, but they didn't allow a roll call vote. I think it's a mistake and so does the delegation," said Green, who with other

North Carolina delegates wanted a roll call vote, but saw such a motion denied at the podium.

Hunt, an ERA supporter, made it clear he opposed the plank and guaranteed the Democratic Party in North Carolina would ignore it.

"Passage of that minority report will not affect the way we use our resources in North Carolina," he said. "We will not discriminate against Democratic candidates in any way."

Hunt, in an interview, expressed concern that the plank could actually be damaging to ERA in North Carolina, viewed as a crucial state by ERA supporters who need three more states for ratification. ERA has been defeated by Democratic legislators in North Carolina each time.

Sen. Robert Morgan, who says he supports ERA but voted against the time limit extension for the states to ratify the amendment, commented, "I think it's a bad precedent. I hate to see the party divided on a single issue."

Walker and state party executive director David Price both said enforcement of the plank would have little effect in the state, however. Both said they interpreted the plank as applying to money allocated by the Democratic National Committee, not the state party, and little such money is provided.

Hunt said it will not hamper distribution to candidates of North Carolina tax money earmarked under North Carolina's partial public campaign financing program.

Fire Marshal Attends Meet

Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner represented the volunteer firemen of North Carolina last weekend at "Stonebridge II," the second annual meeting of volunteer fire service representatives at the National Fire Academy in Emmitsburg, Md.

In needs assessment workshops, the volunteer firemen revamped and reiterated recommendations from Stonebridge 1979, including showing a continued effort and enthusiasm to design effective federal policy for the volunteer. They prioritized and issued resolutions reflecting volunteers' needs and evaluated the progress of federal volunteer programs and developed new and additional priorities, Joyner said.

Joyner attended the annual North Carolina Firemen's Association Conference in Wilmington last Wednesday and Thursday. He was elected treasurer of the state association.

Panda Cub Is Born In Zoo

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A giant panda in Chapultepec Zoo has given birth to the first panda cub born naturally in captivity, zoo officials announced Wednesday.

Dr. Juan Tellez Giron, a veterinary surgeon, said the mother, Ying Ying, had a normal delivery Monday after a gestation period of between 118 and 168 days. Veterinarians watched the birth of the 3½-ounce cub on closed-circuit television.

Tellez Giron said officials would ask the Chinese Embassy here to suggest a name for the baby panda — but zoo officials were leaning toward the Chinese word for "success."

Zoos in Washington, D.C., Tokyo and London have sought unsuccessfully to mate pairs of giant pandas.

The Mexican vet said Ying Ying and her companion, Pe Pe, probably mated because they live together year-round, unlike some other pandas in captivity, and are fed a special high-protein, vitamin-enriched diet.

"The baby is apparently healthy. I have seen it move, cry when it is hungry," he said. "The mother is taking good care of it. Fortunately, Ying Ying has turned out to be a very good mother." He said she was "very content."

Pandas have difficulty reproducing in captivity because of a highly sensitive nervous system that causes irregularities in the production of hormones, Tellez Giron said.

Tellez Giron said it was the world's first natural birth in captivity. He said a cub was born in China two years ago to a female that was artificially inseminated, but the cub died within 24 hours after birth. There are only 30 pandas in captivity and 250 others in the wild, primarily in the mountains of China's Sichuan province and nearby parts of Tibet.

Ying Ying and Pe Pe, given to the Mexican government by Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung in 1975, share an air-conditioned pen and yard with a built-in humidity system.

They are fed 17 pounds of bamboo daily, along with rice, milk, chicken, beef, apples, carrots, spinach, eggs, sugar, honey, salt, bonemeal and vitamins.

Ying Ying will nurse the cub for six months, until it is able to eat alone, zoo officials said. To avoid disturbing the mother, the public will not be allowed to see the new panda for three months.

Veterinarians in the Washington zoo have been trying without success to mate two pandas, Hsing Hsing and Ling Ling, presented to Richard M. Nixon in 1972 during his presidential visit to China.

Money Is No Answer

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — A proposal to give cash to each Catawba Indian as part of the settlement of a long-disputed land claim "is attempting to solve a problem by throwing money at it," says state Attorney General Daniel R. McLeod.

McLeod has written a letter critical of the cash payments and sent it to a state study commission that is trying to reach an agreement in the Catawbas' claim to 144,000 acres in York, Lancaster and Chester counties.

Giving the 1,400 tribe members individual monetary awards, said McLeod, would hark back to the days when the white man bought Indian lands with beads and blankets.

His recommendation, however, differs sharply with the feelings of tribal members, who have made individual cash payments one of their major demands.

McLeod's letter will be entered as testimony at a public hearing in Rock Hill Wednesday on the proposed settlement that the study group drew up.

During a weekend meeting the tribe decided that three-fourths of a federal cash allocation, about $30 million, should be distributed to individuals.

McLeod called such payments "demeaning to the Indians and would serve no purpose except to benefit some presently living Indians, whereas the Catawba heritage is not served in the slightest by such payments.

"If that heritage is worth recognizing by memorializing, it should be done in a manner that would benefit not only present living members of the tribe, but future members as well and should serve as a testament and memorial to previous Catawbas," McLeod wrote.

He proposed instead that the federal government provide the Catawbas $10 million in cash rather than the $30 million the tribe insists on.

The commission draft would authorize the tribe, using an undetermined amount of federal money, to buy land in a 4,800-acre district for an expanded reservation. The state of South Carolina would contribute $1.35 million for tribal development.

The Indians claim they were cheated out of the land under an 19th century treaty that Congress never approved.

Feels P.O.

Is Improved

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years ago today, with the nation's mail service in a "race with catastrophe," a law was signed creating a sleek new agency that was supposed to be more efficient.

Some people now joke that catastrophe won the race. But most of those close to the Postal Service say the Postal Reorganization Act signed Aug. 12, 1970, has resulted in a more efficient mail system.

The law set goals for the new Postal Service, including eliminating taxpayer-financed postal deficits, modernizing antiquated facilities and old-fashioned delivery methods and ending the heavy influence of politics that made postmasters' jobs the refuge for political hacks.

The results clearly are far short of the high hopes of those who framed the bill. For example, the deficits have continued every year but 1979.

But Postmaster General William F. Bolger says the failures are because the backers of the reorganization were too optimistic.

"Overall it's been a darn good experience," Bolger said in an interview, rattling off statistics to support his position.

"We've gone from 25 percent to 70 percent mechanized handling of letters. Our volume of mail is 15 billion more pieces per year and we deliver to between 14 (million) and 20 million new addresses. We are doing all that with 75,000 fewer employees," Bolger said.

Some of the modernization is not popular with all mail users, such as Bolger's plan to expand Zip codes from five to nine digits next year. This will allow automated mail handling, but some citizens complain about the extra numbers.

He said the new steps to modernization will help fight the major reason for increases in postal rates: the high cost of the labor that is needed to run the mail system. Almost seven of eight dollars spent by the Postal Service goes for wages and fringe benefits for the 650,000 employees, and collective bargaining with employees has increased the average wage from $7.913 a decade ago to $18,640 today.

One opponent of the 1970 law, former Postmaster General J. Edward Day, said the labor contracts have "given away the store." But one of the postal labor leaders, James LaPenta, said salaries and benefits have gone up "because of very high inflationary pressures in the economy."

Other than Day, who testified against the reorganization five times, few opposed it. Larry O'Brien, postmaster general in the late 1960s, said the Post Office Department was antiquated and ridden with politics. After he said it was in "a race with catastrophe," the reorganization bill won heavy majorities in both houses of Congress.

Under reorganization, postal rates have gone up faster than ever before, with the cost of mailing a letter up from six cents in 1970 to 15 cents today. Bolger said this is because heavy subsidies no longer go to the mail service. "We are less dependent on taxpayers' dollars and the people who are using the mail service are paying the bill, which is how it should be," the postmaster general said.

Service levels, he said are about the same as a decade ago. "Sure, every one of us can point to a horror story about the Postal Service. But we handle about 300 million pieces a day and the vast majority is delivered in time-lay fashion," he said.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Culled from the letters of many readers comes this series of questions about colitis.

Q. — What is colitis?

A. — Colitis is an infection or inflammation of the inner lining of the colon, rectum or other parts of the large intestine. Sometimes the infection also involves the junction of the small and large intestines. The latter condition is called, "ileo-colitis."

Q. — What are the causes of colitis?

A. — Viruses, bacteria, long-standing constipation, severe emotional strain, parasites and amebic dysentery are some of the causes.

Q. — Is "ulcerative colitis" the same as "colitis?"

A. — "Ulcerative colitis" means that, in addition to the inflammation, there are small breaks or ulcers in the delicate lining of the colon. These ulcers are then exposed to invasion by bacteria, with many associated complications. In many instances, ulcerative colitis may become a chronic condition. Sometimes the symptoms completely disappear and then suddenly recur during a period of emotional distress or physical debilitation. It has been noted for a long time that patients with ulcerative colitis are usually highly tense, easily discouraged and apprehensive.

Q. — How is the diagnosis of ulcerative colitis made?

A. — The patient's history often suggests to the doctor the possibility that the illness exists. To verify this, microscopic examination of the stool for blood and mucus is very important. X-ray examination of the lining can reveal evidence to confirm the diagnosis. The lining of the rectum and the lower portion of the colon can be minutely inspected with an instrument called the proctoscope. This procedure can be done in the doctor's office. Although it is mildly unpleasant, it is not painful. Cultures and biopsies can be made through this instrument that can contribute valuable information for the diagnosis and subsequent treatment.

Q. — Is an "irritable colon" the same as colitis?

A. — "Irritable colon" is a vague and incorrect description of a condition. The symptoms are so varied and so similar to many other intestinal conditions that "irritable colon" is no longer thought of as a firm, positive diagnosis.

Q. — What is the treatment for ulcerative colitis?

A. — Sulfa drugs, antibiotics, cortisone and strict diet can control many of the symptoms and complications of this condition. Psychological support can be helpful in the ultimate recovery of these patients.

Meeting Cancelled

The regular monthly meeting of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission for the month of August has been cancelled.

The monthly meetings are normally held the second Wednesday night of each month.

The next meeting will be held the second Wednesday evening in September.

ATTENDS COURSE

WINTERVILLE — Dr. Steven I. Cohen, chiropractic physician, attended an American Medical Association course this past weekend in impairment rating and disability analysis.

The course was an interprofessional post graduate program certifying participants for the purpose of rating physical impairments resulting from personal injuries, auto accidents and on-job injuries.

Course instructors were Dr. Kaplan and Dr. Mazion. Chiropractic Orthopedists. The sessions were held at the Holiday Inn in Atlanta.

Rescue Course Being Taught

A 12-hour basic rescue skills course is underway here through Thursday night at the Fire Department's drill tower, according to training officer Don Mills.

Some 15 local fire-rescue personnel are involved in the course, he said, which is being taught by Wilburn Small, instructor with the Fire and Rescue Services Division of the N.C. Department of Insurance.

Instruction in the basic course includes proper rope handling, tying knots, lowering of patients in Army litters and Stokes stretchers from upper floors of buildings, and the proper blanketing of stretcher patients.

The class covers part of the skills used by Greenville rescue teams in past state and international competition.

Klan Jury Sees Shootout Film

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

The prosecution in the murder trial of six Nazi-Klan members has presented the first of a handful of television films of a Nov. 3 shootout that left five anti-Klan demonstrators dead.

The jury of six men and six women sat quietly but intently through three minutes of television film projected on a courtroom screen Tuesday afternoon.

The film, shot by photographer George Vaughn of WGHP-TV in High Point, depicted a flurry of confusion and shooting as carloads of white hecklers drove through a racially mixed crowd at a "Death to the Klan" rally last Nov. 3.

The jury and the six defendants showed almost no emotion as Vaughn's camera focused tightly on the bodies of two mortally wounded demonstrators.

Superior Court Judge James M. Long instructed the jury before viewing the film that it was to be used to illustrate Vaughn's testimony about what happened that day and it could not be considered as evidence by itself.

The defendants merely stared at the screen as the film showed gunmen at a distance firing and, later, police handcuffing suspects and stretching them out on a street.

Prosecutors have obtained films and tapes from other television stations that had crews at the rally.

Vaughn's film graphically depicted the bloody head wound suffered by Michael Nathan, 33, of Durham, who died two days after the shooting.

The courtroom also saw another victim, William Sampson, 31, of Greensboro, as he gasped his dying breath after suffering a chest wound.

Four of the five victims were white, one was black.

and all were members of the Communist Workers Party which sponsored the rally.

Before presenting the film, prosecutors offered testimony from some people who went to the rally to show their displeasure with the Klan but who said they had no idea communists had organized the demonstration.

The testimony was apparently an attempt by prosecutors to show that not all people at the rally were members of the CWP, which has developed a history of disruptive behavior.

Joe Hairston of Martinsville, Va., said he had no idea the rally was sponsored by the CWP until he got there.

Hairston also testified that the first shot fired at the rally came from the lead car in the caravan of white hecklers.

A man in that car fired a shot into the air before a barrage of gunfire erupted. Hairston said.

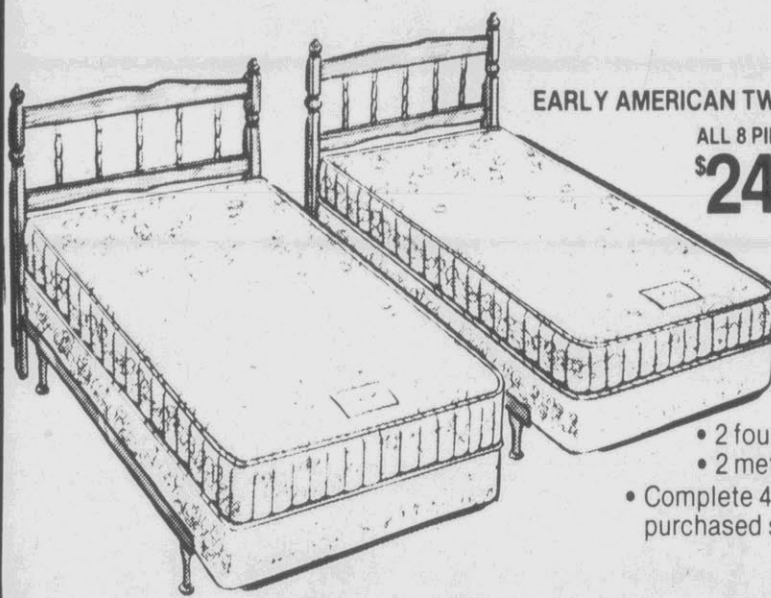

"I looked back and I saw a man getting out of the car. He had a shotgun in his hand. That's when I ran," he said.

Disavows Statement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is disavowing statements made last week by the commander of U.S. forces in South Korea, Gen. John Wickham, on that country's political situation.

Wickham outlined to reporters the circumstances under which the United States would support South Korean strongman Gen. Chun Doo-Hwan.

Wickham asked that his name not be used but Chun subsequently identified Wickham as the source of the statement.

State Department spokesman John Trattner said the administration could not confirm that the statements cited were made by Wickham.

He added, however, that "no senior military officer in Korea should make such statements. Whoever made the statement is not speaking for the U.S. government."

Wickham's comments recalled a 1977 incident in which another senior military officer in South Korea, Gen. John Singlaub, was fired by President Carter for questioning the administration's policy of withdrawing U.S. ground troops from that country.

Senior Defense Department officials said, however, that Wickham's case is not the same as Singlaub's because Wickham did not directly challenge U.S. policy. They pointed out that Wickham heavily qualified the conditions under which the United States would support Chun's emergence as South Korean president.

If Chun eventually becomes president, the United States would support him if "he comes to power legitimately and demonstrates over time a broad base of support from the Korean people," Wickham was quoted as saying.

The State Department disavowal of Wickham's remarks appeared to be directed at press accounts which left the impression that the Carter administration looks with favor on the current political evolution in South Korea.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said that while the United States supports moves toward representative democracy in South Korea, Chun appears to be positioning himself for an extended stay in power through undemocratic means.

VEPCO Sets Mock Problem

LOUISA, Va. (AP) — Virginia & Electric Power Co. and state civil defense officials are preparing for a simulated nuclear accident at Vepco's North Anna nuclear reactor to test Virginia's ability to protect local residents from such accidents.

Early Saturday morning, Vepco officials will "discover" a mock malfunction at the Louisa County plant and sound the alarm for an eight-hour disaster drill, ending in the simulated evacuation of 15,000 people from five counties.

The drill will be monitored and graded by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission two weeks ago voted to hold up the license for Vepco's North Anna 2 reactor until after this weekend's safety drill. Sheldon Schwartz, acting director of the FEMA's Radiological Emergency Division, said that every nuclear plant now will have to pass the test before it can begin operation.

Vepco and state Office of Emergency and Energy Services have scheduled a news conference Friday to alert the news media to their part in the maneuvers. Officials have disclosed few details of the exercise.

The test is slated to begin before 7 a.m. Saturday, with a chain reaction of problems that get worse.

Gov. John Dalton will take charge of the test of the state radiological emergency plan from an underground control center at the State Police Academy in Richmond, then will be flown by a National Guard helicopter to the plant for a news conference.

The emergency office will notify other state agencies and law enforcement officials.

A-G School Schedule Set

Ayden-Grifton High School teachers are scheduled to begin the 1980-81 school year on August 22 at 8:30 a.m.

Guidance personnel will register new students daily from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. beginning August 25 and persons who have not registered are urged to do so before Sept. 2.

Students who have received immunization notices are encouraged to furnish the principal's office the requested information as soon as possible.

Buses will operate on a regular schedule on Sept. 2. Parents and students are urged to look for specific bus routes and numbers to be released later this month.

Student orientation and homeroom assignments for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors will be conducted Sept. 2 at 8:30 a.m. Classes will begin after homeroom sessions and a regular school day will be followed with dismissal at 2 p.m.

Lunches for high school students this year are 60 cents.

Gasohol Refund Checks

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Investors in Gasohol of Greensboro have begun receiving $30,000 in refunds that were mandated by the state attorney general's office last month.

The checks were mailed nearly a week after the office's Aug. 6 deadline. Special Deputy Attorney General H. Al Cole, head of the office's anti-trust division, said he is waiting to determine whether the checks are valid. He said at least six investors received checks Monday.

The $30,000 questioned by the attorney general's office was raised from 40 individuals who were told they had a chance to get in on the ground floor of a $45 million alcohol-making operation, state officials said. Investments ranged from $150 to $1,000.

The office began investigating Gasohol last spring after investors inquired about the company's methods of raising capital. Cole said the company used a brochure to solicit investors.

"We got concerned about the brochure, which lead investors to believe that the company had secured low-interest government loans of $30 to $40 million. It was super misleading, almost to the point of fraud," Cole said.

But the attorney general's office withheld legal action against Gasohol of Greensboro in return for an agreement to stop the questionable investment practices and refund the money raised, Cole said.

The company, founded in February by Greensboro accountant Fred Lewis, announced plans to build a distillery to make alcohol for blending with gasoline to make gasohol.

Claim Chubby Men Not Extra Risk

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Being a bit fat does not make middle-age men more prone to heart disease and Americans are not becoming a nation of snacking junk-food addicts, two nutrition researchers say.

The two spoke Monday at the Western Hemisphere Nutrition Congress in Los Angeles, a conference being attended by about 1,000 nutritionists and physicians from the United States, Canada, Mexico and South America.

Ancel Keys, a retired physiology professor at the University of Minnesota who told the convention he is trying to correct popular misconceptions about fat, said the best way for men to avoid premature death is to be a bit overweight. He said the extra pounds did not increase the risk of heart disease.

Keys did not say how much extra weight a man could carry. However, other nutritionists have suggested that 10 to 20 excess pounds rarely presents a problem.

Keys, who studied information on men aged 40 to 60, said there are health risks for men who are either extremely thin or fat. And, he said, obese men with high blood pressure or diabetes should lose weight.

Keys said he had no data on how weight affects the health of young men or women.

Later in the day, researcher Betty B. Peterkin said the diet of the average American was surprisingly nutritious.

"We hear all the time that the diet of the American people is going to pot," said Mrs. Peterkin, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Food Economics Institute in Hyattsville, Md.

"But in my opinion, we have relatively good diets in our country," she said.

Mrs. Peterkin said a USDA study of the eating habits in some 20,400 U.S. households during 1977-78 says American diets "were as good or better than they were in 1965," when the last such survey was taken.

She said daily consumption of calories and fats was down in the latest survey, while the intake of vitamins and most minerals was up.

The biggest nutritional improvements were among families with incomes in the bottom 20 percent. "I think that's because we have been pumping quite a bit of money and effort into improving the diets of low-income people," she said.

"But," she added, "there are still some things wrong with our diet. Calcium, for instance, is down because people are not drinking the amount of milk they used to.

"Women and teen-age girls have diets that are least likely to meet the recommended requirements, especially for iron," Mrs. Peterkin said. "They eat less to keep their weight under control and they have much higher requirements for iron than men."

Mrs. Peterkin said the study also found that only 39 percent of Americans ate the standard three meals a day. While 8 percent had only one or two meals, 53 percent ate four times a day or more, with the extra meals qualifying as snacks.

But, she said, "The hypothesis that we are fast becoming a population of snackers was not borne out," since the percentage of snackers is down from the 64 percent recorded in 1965.

Claim American Planning New Attack

By The Associated Press
An Iranian religious leader claims the United States has massed 30,000 "guerrillas" in Egypt for a planned new attack on Iran that would lance through the restive Persian Gulf province of Khuzestan in an apparent bid to free the American hostages.

Iran's revolutionaries, meanwhile, stepped up their campaign against Britain, reportedly seizing a British doctor and his wife as alleged spies and expelling three British women teachers of the blind.

The anti-British actions apparently stem from the detention of Iranian demonstrators in Britain.

The new claims about a

U.S. conspiracy against Iran were made by an unnamed local Moslem preacher in Ahwaz, Khuzestan province, and were reported by the local radio.

He was quoted as telling worshippers that "America has attempted a fresh plot" following April's failed hostage rescue by U.S. commandos and last month's abortive military coup against Iran's revolutionary regime, a plot Iran claims was engineered by the United States.

Quoting "revolutionary organs in Tehran," the preacher said 30,000 guerrillas, trained in Egypt, were awaiting "justification to attack" through Khuzestan and could achieve this by "sowing and benefiting from internal discord." The Persian Gulf province has been plagued by a rebellion by autonomy-seeking ethnic Arabs and by border fighting with neighboring Iraq.

"Today we have ample information regarding the plot being planned by the enemy," he was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying in a speech in the city of Kashan, south of the capital.

As long as the Iranian nation is of one heart with its government "no danger or harm could destabilize or dishearten us," he said. "The foreign regimes surrounding Iran which are hatching plots on our soil ought to know that their plots will get them nowhere."

In London, the British Foreign Office said early today it was "urgently" investigating reports that a British doctor and his wife were arrested Sunday at a clinic the doctor ran about 400 miles south of Tehran.

Press reports said Dr. John Coleman and his wife, Audrey, have been charged with spying. Newspapers said the arrests appeared to be in retaliation for the arrest of 68 Iranian demonstrators in London last week.

British missionary Jean Waddell was detained last

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr voiced a similar warning, but did not name an alleged plotter.

"Today we have ample information regarding the plot being planned by the enemy," he was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying in a speech in the city of Kashan, south of the capital.

As long as the Iranian nation is of one heart with its government "no danger or harm could destabilize or dishearten us," he said. "The foreign regimes surrounding Iran which are hatching plots on our soil ought to know that their plots will get them nowhere."

Press reports said Dr. John Coleman and his wife, Audrey, have been charged with spying. Newspapers said the arrests appeared to be in retaliation for the arrest of 68 Iranian demonstrators in London last week.

British missionary Jean Waddell was detained last week in the central Iranian city of Isfahan, reportedly accused of spying.

In a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview, a spokesman for the British Embassy in Tehran said he had heard that Colemans were detained, but could not get official confirmation.

The British Church Mission Society reported, meanwhile, that the three women teacher-missionaries returned home from Iran after being given 72 hours to leave the country.

The three — Margaret Knill, Elizabeth Walker and Anne White — all worked at the Nur Ayin Institute for the Blind in Isfahan.

Miss Knill, principal of the institute, told reporters the three were all sorry to leave. They had quietly continued with their work, she said, after other church-based organizations, including a large Christian hospital, were taken over by Iranian revolutionary groups.

A British magistrate Tuesday freed or granted bail to 28 of the detained Iranian demonstrators, those charged only with obstruction. The others, charged with more serious offenses including assaulting police and carrying weapons, were ordered held without bail for another week.

The 52 American hostages today were in their 284th day of captivity. Moslem hardliners, who make up the majority of Iran's Parliament, the body that will decide the hostages' fate, want to try the Americans as spies, while Bani-Sadr has said he favors a quick end to the crisis.

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Observers in a Forest Service aircraft got a good look at the glowing lava dome in the crater of Mount St. Helens while officials crossed one name off the list of those missing after the volcano's first big blast.

Except for the glowing dome of lava and emissions of steam and gas, Mount St. Helens has been inactive since its last eruption, last Thursday.

"The crater emitted a lot of glow and it was visible for a long way off," said Heather Schoen, spokeswoman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, after the spotter plane flew over the mountain Tuesday.

Thursday's eruption, which shot ash eight miles high, was the fifth major eruption of the mountain in southwestern Washington in three months.

The first eruption, May 18, blew 1,300 feet off the summit of the 9,677-foot mountain. Thirty-one people are known dead from the blast.

The Skamania County sheriff's office removed one name from the list of people missing and presumed dead, cutting the list to 32 names.

Allen Hendricks of the Washington Department of Emergency Services said the name of Mario Alderez, formerly of Tacoma, Wash., was removed after it was confirmed he was living in Homer, Alaska.

$2 Million Overpayment Recovered By NCESC

RALEIGH — By sifting through a variety of cases ranging from simple oversights to complicated fraud schemes, a special unit created in 1978 by the North Carolina Employment Security Commission has recovered more than $2 million in unemployment insurance benefit overpayments.

The 14 fraud investigators who cover the state found overpayments in 2,893 (86 percent) of the 3,377 cases they investigated between January 1, 1979 and July 30, 1980. Of these cases, 774 were classified as fraud.

The anti-fraud unit was created in October 1978 when the commission's Unemployment Insurance Division reorganized its system of claims deputies.

John Mahoney, one of the investigators with the new unit, said that most of the fraud cases have been concentrated in North Carolina's largest cities — the highest numbers being in Greensboro, Raleigh, Fayetteville and Charlotte. He added that the fraud schemes in urban areas usually are more sophisticated and difficult to uncover than those in rural areas.

The typical fraud cases, Mahoney said, usually involves an unemployment insurance claimant who gets a job and does not stop filing claims after he begins work. A social security number computer cross-match of claimants and employers' lists of workers often begins investigations of such cases when a Social Security number is discovered on both lists.

North Carolina judges have begun handing out more severe penalties for unemployment insurance fraud recently. In May 1979, the State General Assembly changed fraud penalties in its new Employment Security Commission law, increasing the maximum prison sentence for fraud to two years. Mahoney said at first investigators had trouble convincing judges that penalties were needed for fraud, instead of simply requiring defendants to refund overpayments.

"Nationally, people are getting more conscious of fraud," Mahoney said. "Everybody is questioning government programs."

The anti-fraud unit also investigates missing and stolen unemployment insurance checks. Those cases sometimes turn out to involve schemes as well, Mahoney stated.

Additionally, overpayments that do not involve fraud usually are recovered through refunds or withholding checks from eligible claimants who previously were overpaid. Between January 1, 1979 and July 30, 1980, $1.5 million was recovered through withholding payments and $482,431 from refunds.

Decision Is Expected In 30 Days

NEW BERN — U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt is expected to render a decision within 30 days on a complaint filed against the State and Pitt County Boards of Education for Lorraine Hines, guardian of 10-year-old James Bradley Hines of 204 Pinewood Dr., Greenville.

The complaint charges that the defendants, "have not provided free and appropriate education," for the, "emotionally handicapped," youth in accordance with the Education for All Handicapped Children Act of 1975.

Testimony began in U.S. Eastern District Court Friday and was concluded yesterday.

Before adjourning court yesterday, Judge Britt said it is obvious that the parents of the child are concerned about his education and want the best for him.

The jurist also said that it appears that the school system has done all it could within the resources available to it to insure that the child receives an appropriate education.

The suit asks that the defendants provide an appropriate education for Britt, and asks for $100,000 in damages.

Detachment Completes Annual Camp

Members of the 213th Military Police Co., Detachment I in Greenville, recently spent their two-week summer camp at Ft. Indiantown Gap, Pa., located in the southern part of the state.

During the summer training period, the 213th members worked 12-hour shifts in providing security for certain areas of the fort. The unit also provided support for the Cuban alien relocation operation while attached to the 519th MP Battalion.

The troops were visited by Maj. Gen. William E. Ingram, commander of the North Carolina National Guard, who observed the unit members as they performed their duties.

Brig. Gen. Grail L. Brookshire presented the local company a certificate of achievement for outstanding meritorious service while attached to the 519th MP Battalion. The commander of the 213th, Capt. David O. Ryon of Washington, received the certificate on behalf of the company members.

WEATHER
Yesterday the temperature high was 94 degrees and temperature low was 72 degrees. The level of the Tar River was 3.3 feet while .82 inches of rainfall were recorded.

CHURCH SERVICE
A church service will be held at Joy Temple Holiness Church, 410 Howell Street on Thursday at 8 p.m. The guest speaker is Pastor Boyd from Burning Bush Holiness Church. Joy Temple invites the public to attend.

Reynolds wrap HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Burt Reynolds, No. 1 at the box office, will star next in "Paternity," a comedy co-starring Lauren Hutton, Elizabeth Ashley and Paul Dooley.

"Paternity" will film for one month in New York before coming to Hollywood for interior photography in August.

Reynolds and Hutton were previously co-starred in "Gator" which Reynolds also directed.

Funny Hats Not Story

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They don't all wear funny hats.

Some of the Democrats in New York this week hope that somehow their presence will make a difference, to themselves and to their country. They're serious people, on serious business.

Their concerns go beyond selection of the party's presidential nominee: They see the Democratic convention as a big town meeting, where the government can be nudged in new directions.

As the delegates settled down to their 38th quadrennial bloodletting, a few of them reflected on what brought them here.

Leslie Rogney, 64, farms 160 acres of North Dakota land — prairie sod his Norwegian immigrant grandfather first broke with a plow in 1871.

But Rogney — the point of his white beard bobbing up and down to punctuate his words — worries that circumstances are conspiring to drive his sons from the farm and the farms into the hands of the corporations.

"We are a typical North Dakota family," says Rogney's wife, Katherine. "One son in California and one in Florida." The West Coast son is a building inspector; the other a bus dispatcher.

The tax laws, the Rogneys say, make it difficult to keep family farms in the family: When parents die, the land is sold to pay inheritance taxes. If land costs weren't ballooned by inflation, sons could buy land, not sell it, and remain farmers.

That's something they hope Carter can change, if he gets a second term.

All in all, the Rogneys feel Carter has managed an almost unmanageable situation. "I think he inherited a morass," Rogney says.

JoAnne Dauphinee, 29, sits on the convention floor, a pair of binoculars around her neck. She is a mental health worker in a state hospital in Bangor, Maine, and a feminist.

At the last Democratic convention, she was an activist with the National Organization for Women, marching for the equal rights amendment to the Constitution.

This time she is working for a minority platform plank on ERA that is startling in its simplicity: "The Democratic Party shall withhold financial support and technical campaign assistance from candidates who do not support the ERA."

She cannot forgive Jimmy Carter for a remark he made while discussing the impact on poor women of a cutoff of federal abortion funding: "Life is unfair," the president said.

"That sticks in my craw," says Miss Dauphinee.

But while she believes Carter "seems to have missed the boat on women's issues," she is not wholly against him.

"Oddly enough, I think he's done a pretty good job on foreign policy," she says. "And to the extent that a politician can be, he seems to be honest with the people."

John Rice, 28, is in the fruit business in Adams County, Pennsylvania, not far from the Gettysburg battlefield. He worries about Staymans, Romes, Red Delicouises — and the MX missile.

When Rice was at Yale studying political science, he marched for peace. Once, he confesses with a sheepish smile, he fasted for two days to protest the war in Vietnam.

He gives Carter high marks on foreign policy, especially in connection with human rights: "Carter would like to establish America not just as a superpower but as a just power, too."

But he thinks the president is wrong in supporting the massive, costly MX system, which would shuttle missiles among numerous underground sites to keep their locations secret.

When Carter invited some of his delegates to the White House on Aug. 1, Rice used the occasion to quiz Zbigniew Brzezinski about the MX.

He didn't budge the president's national security adviser, but he had his say.

That's democracy, and a lot of delegates think their job here is to make it work.

rable speeches in political convention history.

"I am asking you to renew the commitment of the Democratic Party to economic justice," Kennedy told the delegates. "I am asking you to renew our commitment to a fair and lasting prosperity that can put America back to work."

He went on to restate many of the issues that dominated his presidential campaign, yielding on none.

But he saved his harshest words for Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan, saying the former California governor "has no right to quote Franklin Delano Roosevelt" as he did in his acceptance speech at the GOP convention last month.

Kennedy congratulated Carter on his victory and said, "I am confident that the Democratic Party will reunite on the basis of Democratic principles — and that together we will march toward a Democratic victory in November."

Later, Vice President Walter F. Mondale called the Kennedy speech one of the greatest he had ever heard and said, "I'm of the opinion

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average lost more than 10 points in the final two hours of trading to finish with a net loss of 11.69 points at 952.39.

Analysts said they considered the selloff to be a reaction to the markets recent rally which brought the blue chip average to its highest close in three years early this week.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 9-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 52.05 million shares, against 44.69 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.53 to 70.92.

Texas Braces For Flooding

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — Residents along the Rio Grande today braced for flooding as the weakened remains of Hurricane Allen, now a tropical depression, dumped rain on the region and threatened to send the river out of its banks.

The National Weather Service warned that heavy runoff from weekend rains had filled the Rio Concho, which flows into the Rio Grande. They said the Rio Grande, which forms the border between the U.S. and Mexico, could reach flood stage today.

"We haven't evacuated anyone yet," Joe Chavez of the Presidio County sheriff's office said early today. "But we will when we have to."

Meanwhile, in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, unconfirmed reports said the death toll from Allen's rampage through the Caribbean last week could surpass 200 and American officials said the Haitian government had asked for help.

Elias Tamari of the U.S. Agency for International Development said the Haitians asked for food, supplies, building materials and other staples for an estimated 835,000 people who suffered some damage from the killer storm.

But the request contained no estimate of casualties, Tamari said, and did not detail how many of the 835,000 suffered serious loss.

Foreign Minister Georges Salomon said Tuesday that Haitian survey teams had been finding more bodies, including 12 he saw on the Ile a Vache off Haiti's southwest tip.

Tibor Nagy, a U.S. Embassy official coordinating U.S. disaster relief in Haiti, said reports up to now indicate "more than 100 bodies in all." At least 56 people have been confirmed dead in Haiti following the storm, which killed 100 to 200 people throughout the Caribbean.

Allen was called one of the worst hurricanes of the century when it careened through the Caribbean with winds up to 185 miles per hour. But as it idled off the Texas coast Saturday, it lost power and came aground in an unpopulated area, then weakened and turned northward into Mexico.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements declared nine flood-stricken coastal counties disaster areas, making residents of Brooks, Hidalgo, Aransas, Nueces, Jim Wells, Kleberg, San Patricio, Cameron and Willacy counties eligible for low-interest loans.

At the southern tip of Texas, several streets in downtown Edinburg still were flooded today, sheriff's deputies reported.

Willacy County Judge Bill Rapp, who visited the hard-hit fishing resort of Port

Mansfield, called the devastation "horrible."

"It makes you sick. Some people just completely lost their homes," he said, adding that 50 structures, homes and mobile trailers, were washed away and another 214 suffered major damage in the storm surge.

In Brownsville, elderly residents of a public housing project said they were abused by 75 people who claimed to be refugees from Matamoros, Mexico, just across the border.

"They descended upon us, and being younger and stronger, they took over," said Fred Woolsey, a 58-year-old paraplegic. He said residents were moved from their apartments to the ground floor, where no food was available, and were not able to return to their apartments for food after a power blackout shut down elevators.

Irma Solitaire, acting director of the Brownsville Housing Authority, said she began an investigation of the complaints.

Off the coast of Corpus Christi, Coast Guard officials said efforts continued to free two oil-laden Liberian tankers grounded because of Allen.

Owners of the Mary Ellen will begin pumping her 507,000 barrels of oil onto barges to refloat the grounded tanker on Thursday, said Petty Officer 2nd Class Dan Dewell.

Dewell said owners of the Athenian, which ran aground in the silt-filled Port Aransas ship channel Monday, would begin pumping its 350,000 barrels of oil onto barges later in the week.

said he would take "a hard look" at independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson before deciding who to support in the fall.

Charles Deppert, an official of the machinists union and Kennedy whip for the Indiana delegation, said delegates and alternates from the union plan to walk out during Carter's acceptance speech Thursday night to protest his economic policies.

Dick Drayne, Kennedy's spokesman, said he did not know if the senator would stay for the acceptance speech.

Carter will be in New York for 50 hours, attending today's rally and a luncheon Thursday, delivering his speech that night and meeting Friday with the Democratic National Committee.

In between, he will be in his hotel suite, polishing the speech that promises to be one of the most important of the year-long campaign, watching the convention proceedings on television, meeting with aides and keeping in touch with delegates.

Even Carter's route to New York reflected the president's problems uniting his own party.

Carter generally flies to John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York's borough of Queens, when he visits the city. But that would have meant that, by protocol, Gov. Carey would have welcomed him.

Hijack Jet To Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — An Air Florida jet carrying 74 people was hijacked to Cuba today, the second Air Florida plane in four days hijacked while on the short hop between Key West and Miami.

"This isn't our week," said Air Florida spokeswoman Robin Cohn.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta said Flight 707, diverted 10 minutes after its 10:30 a.m. takeoff from Key West, landed safely in Havana at 11:15 a.m. All 68 passengers and six crew members were reported to be safe.

There was no immediate word on when the plane would be returned.

Barker said the hijacker or hijackers apparently threatened to blow up the Boeing 737 jet with a can or bottle of gasoline. There was no immediate word on whether Cuban authorities had taken anyone into custody.

On Sunday, a Spanish-speaking man hijacked a Miami-Key West flight to Havana after threatening to detonate what turned out to be a box containing a bar of soap.

A flight controller at the Key West tower said the plane had taken off on the scheduled 25-minute hop to Miami when the pilot radioed to the U.S. Naval base at nearby Boca Chica to report the plane had been ordered to Cuba.

Air Florida, the only commercial airline currently serving the Key West-Miami route, usually has three or four flights a day between the South Florida cities.

FBI agents and the U.S. State Department say they have not been able to obtain any information out of Cuba on the most recent hijackers, and are unsure whether Cuban authorities still prosecute hijackers.

Improved U.S.-Cuban cooperation and tightened airport security put a stop to a wave of hijackings to Cuba that had totaled 87 during 1961-73. But there have been seven successful hijackings in a new wave that began with the hijacking of a Delta jetliner on June 12, 1979.

The latest hijackers, in most cases, have claimed to have weapons that turned out to be fakes.

THE FIFTIES

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The Fifties: Aspects of Painting in New York" is being exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution's Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden through Sept. 21.

The museum says the 67 works by 33 artists reflect the decade's many currents. It says the exhibit includes "works by Abstract Expressionists as well as by artists who persisted in figurative styles or helped spur the later emergence of Pop Art, hard-edged abstraction and color-field painting. All were involved with, or affected by, what came to be known as the 'New York School.'"

Bird's The Word In AL

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Some were winners and some were losers, but everything came up Birds in the American League Tuesday night.

Mark "The Bird" Fidrych made his first flight on a major league mound in 1980 Tuesday night, trying to come back for the fourth time since he captured the hearts of baseball in 1976 with his zany antics and pinpoint control that helped him to a 19-9 record.

Fidrych pleased Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson by displaying a lively fast ball that has been missing since arm miseries began to threaten his career four years ago. And his control was classic Bird — 120 pitches, 80 strikes.

In fact the only thing that spoiled the evening for the roaring crowd of 48,361 Bird-watchers at Tiger Stadium was that Fidrych lost the game, 5-4 to the Boston Red Sox.

Meanwhile, Doug Bird was a winning bird with five innings of scoreless relief that carried the New York Yankees into the bottom of the 10th, when Ruppert Jones followed an intentional walk to Willie Randolph with a grand slam homer for an 8-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

That gave the Yankees a 3½-game lead in the American League East over a whole team of birds, the Baltimore Orioles, who also had an intentional walk strategem fail in a 4-3 loss to the Kansas City Royals.

"First of all, he's as good a competitor as I've ever sat on the bench with," said Anderson. "A lot of guys have the talent to pitch in the major leagues but they turn into babies when things get tough."

Anderson raised some eyebrows last spring when he made it clear that Fidrych could never make the Tigers on the basis of his popularity and fan appeal. The Bird himself said it was "a shock" that he was recalled from Evansville because he was told he would spend all of 1980 in the minors.

"I'll be honest, I never believed he could throw like that," said Anderson of Fidrych's performance. "He had a good fastball and a much better breaking ball than I was led to believe."

"I wasn't that jittery," said Fidrych of his shaky start that saw him give up four runs in the first two innings before he settled down to blank the Red Sox for the next five. "I took some time to get in the groove."

After the Tigers scratched back to tie the game 4-4, Fidrych gave up a solo homer to Jim Dwyer that won the game for Boston.

The cheering crowds couldn't have been too disappointed in their hero, however.

"The fans around Detroit are why I'm here in 1980," Fidrych said. "I've been in pain for a long time, but I'm not in pain anymore."

Royals 4, Orioles 3

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver had reliever Tim Stoddard walk .390 hitter George Brett intentionally with third base open in the ninth inning, setting up a bases-loaded walk to Amos Otis that gave Kansas City its victory in the bottom of the ninth inning.

"I didn't want him to beat us with a base hit," said Weaver of Brett, who singled, tripled and drove in a run earlier to run his consecutive game hitting streak to 25. "You can only get beat by one run, so why let George swing the bat?"

Yankees 8, White Sox 4

Randolph was walked with one out and runners at first and third before reliever Ed Farmer grooved a do-or-die 3-2 pi for at Jones bombed into the right field seats for a grand slam.

The White Sox trailed 3-1 after four innings but came back against starter Luis Tiant before Bird relieved to blank them the last five innings.

Blue Jays 3-5, Brewers 1-4

A two-run single in the eighth inning by Lloyd Moseby won the first game and a two-run triple by Ernie Whitt in the ninth won the second for Toronto over Milwaukee.

Despite the sweep by the Blue Jays, who had lost seven of their previous eight starts, they still suffered a setback as outfielder Barry Bonnell sustained a broken cheekbone when he was hit by a pitch from Larry Sorensen. The errant pitch loaded the bases for Moseby, who delivered the tie-breaking single and made a winner of Jim Clancy, 11-8, who pitched a six-hitter.

Homers by Robin Yount and Mark Brouhard helped the Brewers take a 4-3 lead into the ninth of the second game. But Bill Castro, 0-4, allowed singles to Roy Howell and Doug Ault before Whitt lined a shot to the right field corner to score the tying and winning runs.

Indians 2, Rangers 1

Rick Waits pitched a six-hitter for 82-3 innings and got last-out relief help from Victor Cruz, who saved Cleveland's victory over Texas by getting Richie Zisk to pop up for the final out with the tying run on second.

Toby Harrah knocked in the only Cleveland runs off Ferguson Jenkins, 10-10, with a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

Twins 3, A's 2

Glenn Adams hit a solo homer in the bottom of the ninth that was just fair and barely over the fence but it was enough to give Minnesota a victory over Oakland. His third homer of the year made a winner of reliever Doug Corbett, 8-3, who got the last two outs in the last of the ninth.

Greg Gross homered for Oakland in the eighth to tie the score 2-2 and John Castino also homered for the Twins.

Angels 9, Mariners 6

Rod Carew sparked a three-run seventh-inning with a run-scoring double and California went on to beat Seattle.

Bert Campaneris had a three-run homer for the Angels and Tom Paciorek and Jim Anderson homered for Seattle.

Bird's-eye Aim

The Bird
Angels Uncooperative,
But Faithful In 'Heaven'

DETROIT (AP) — The angels refused for the fourth time to smile on a Mark "The Bird" Fidrych comeback effort, but the results were close enough to make the 50,749 fans who jammed Tiger Stadium think they'd died and gone to baseball heaven.

Boston outfielder Jim Dwyer belted a solo homer in the eighth inning off the popular Detroit pitcher to snap a 4-4 tie and the Red Sox won 5-4. But Fidrych looked good, and that's all that mattered to the faithful.

Comeback IV began officially at 7:49 p.m. Tuesday when the 6-foot-3, curly-haired right-hander climbed the dugout steps and headed to the bullpen for his warmup tosses with Detroit pitching Coach Roger Craig and bullpen catcher Joe Hastings.

Bird whistles, which a guy was hawking on a corner outside, could be heard all over the ballpark.

Fourteen minutes later Fidrych delivered his first big league pitch — a ball, down and in on Boston's Rick Burleson — in more than a year and instantly the crowd was swept up again in Birdmania.

Fidrych, who captured the imagination of baseball fans all across America in 1976 when he was 19-9 and won American League Rookie of the Year honors, went through most of his familiar antics on the mound; but it seemed he did it more as a gesture — because it was expected — in the early innings.

After falling behind 4-0 in the first two innings, he stopped talking to the ball and never did get down on his knees to pat the mound between innings.

It mattered not to the parishioners that their shepherd had changed the service. It was close enough. They wanted to believe. They had kept the faith.

"The fans around Detroit are why I'm here in 1980," Fidrych said. "They never booed me. They wrote letters. They cheered me up."

"I've been in pain a long time, but I'm not in pain any more."

Fidrych, who has been hampered with a variety of arm ailments since 1976, was recalled from the Tigers' farm club at Evansville, Ind. of the Triple-A American Association five days ago.

Even Manager Sparky Anderson was impressed after watching Fidrych throw 120 pitches — 40 balls and 80 strikes — over eight full innings during which The Bird gave up 11 hits. There was a costly error by shortstop Mark Wagner in the second; only three of the five Boston runs were earned.

"If he pitches like that, he'll pitch every fifth day," said Anderson, admitting that he, too, had become a believer. "He's as good a competitor as I ever sat on the bench with. He has the courage."

"I see now why he throws off that electricity. He means it. He's no phoney."

Anderson said The Bird would pitch next on Sunday when the Tigers have a scheduled doubleheader with the Texas Rangers.

NL Set To Decide On DH

DETROIT (AP) — The National League decides today at baseball's summer meetings whether to break with tradition and adopt the designated hitter rule after seven years of rejection.

National League clubs voted 9-3 against the controversial DH rule in 1973, the same year the American League began allowing a designated hitter to bat for the pitcher.

The DH was considered again by NL clubs two years ago, failing 8-4, and indications are that it will fail again this time around, although a survey conducted last week by the Atlanta Journal showed the margin was closing.

Five clubs — St. Louis, Atlanta, New York, San Diego and Houston — favor the DH rule while Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Chicago are opposed. Three clubs are undecided — Los Angeles, San Francisco and Montreal. The rule would need a simple majority of seven clubs to pass.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn doesn't particularly care if the DH is adopted by the senior circuit, but the commissioner said he does want the two leagues to observe all the same rules of play.

The main thrust of the summer meetings, however, is money.

Baseball generally conducts its serious business during week-long winter meetings and kisses off the summer meetings in less than a day.

This year, however, top executives from all 26 clubs have booked themselves into a suburban hotel for two days of seminars and workshops focusing on the many financial aspects of the game.

At Tuesday's most important seminar, Tom Villante, executive director for marketing and broadcast for major league baseball, served warning to the three major television networks by outlining to the owners how they could crank up their own network if they so desire.

"For the first time, the networks now realize they have got to protect their flanks," Villante said. "You have a lot of new suitors."

The days of their (the network's) cavalier attitude is over."

The three networks basically told baseball to take it or leave it, Villante said.

"Now, there is cable, pay cable, Home Box Office, you name it," he said. "We could put together our own network. There's a whole conglomerate of stations out there who definitely are eager for more live sports programming."

"We very well might do this. Who needs the networks?"

"The technology is there. It's a very easy thing to put together a network these days. You don't need AT&T lines anymore. Now, you satellite these things together. There is no need for a middle man."

Villante said baseball owners, like other program suppliers, have felt frustrated the past few years.

"They're bullish now," he said. "They realize it's a seller's market. They realize there are some other options available. That's the whole thrust of

Tulsa Senior Leads U.S. Women's Amateur

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Tulsa University senior Dorothy Lasker just wanted to make the 64-player cut in the U.S. Women's Amateur Golf Championship this week.

But the shy, 21-year-old from Hinsdale, Ill., did much better.

Facing 153 of the nation's top women amateurs, Lasker fashioned rounds of 74-73, posting a 3-over-par 147 to take medalist honors in the two-day qualifying.

"I didn't think about being medalist," said Lasker, who teed off on the par-72, 6,026-yard Prairie Dunes Country Club course shortly after dawn Tuesday.

"I just went out to play. I wanted to make the cut and make sure I played well enough to still be in the tournament on Wednesday."

Match play began today in the 80th national championship.

"It's a whole new tournament now," said Lasker, whose first match today was against Lynn Thompson, of Loveland, Ohio. Thompson had a 157 for the two days of qualifying.

Lasker shrugged off those who pick her as the early favorite in this championship, which

Kuechenberg Returns

By The Associated Press

It isn't often that an All-Pro lineman walks into your training camp and says he wants to play football again.

The Miami Dolphins received good news like that Tuesday when star offensive lineman Bob Kuechenberg ended his three-week retirement and returned to camp. The 32-year-old Kuechenberg, an all-star at both guard and tackle, is slated to be Miami's starting left tackle, replacing injured Jon Geisler.

"I was having second thoughts about retirement," Kuechenberg said. "I think I've still got some football left in me."

"When Geisler got hurt, Coach (Don) Shula called me out in Los Angeles, and I'm glad we were able to get something worked out."

Kuechenberg and the team agreed to what he termed an "extension for a couple of years" of his present contract, which runs through 1981.

"You hate to lose a guy who you feel has good football left," said Shula. "He's so versatile. He made All-Pro at guard and tackle and he's our best snapper."

In other moves, the Dolphins signed running back Bennie Leverette, a rookie from Bethune-Cookman who was recently cut by the Jets, and released free agents safety Jay Bagner, guard Mike Good and defensive tackle Dennis McCollins.

The world champion Pittsburgh Steelers cut their roster to 70

by waiving rookie wide receiver Tracy King and free agent DT Keenan Grimmett.

Green Bay let go of veterans Sammy Johnson, a running back, Steve Young, a tackle, and safety Ralph McGill. The Packers also sent linebacker Jack Williams, defensive back Mark Thorson and offensive lineman Joe Odom packing.

Johnson played seven seasons in the National Football League, Young was a four-year veteran and McGill had nine years of pro service.

The Philadelphia Eagles claimed tight end Cleveland Jackson one day after he was waived by the New York Giants. The Eagles have been hit with severe injury problems at the position. Starter Keith Kreple separated a shoulder Saturday against Buffalo, and backup John Spagnola had been hospitalized with a digestive disorder. He was released from the hospital Tuesday.

The Oakland Raiders, who tried for months to get released from their lease with the Oakland Coliseum, settled on terms with the stadium for this season, which the Raiders hope is their last in Oakland.

"The lease is in the process of being signed," Al LoCossale, Raiders executive assistant, said. The club had attempted to move to the Los Angeles Coliseum, which the Rams vacated for Anaheim this season.

"This isn't an agreement," LoCossale said. "There are no negotiations. We're taking what one side has dictated to us."

Marshall Listed In Fair Condition

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Former Minnesota Vikings' captain Jim Marshall was in fair condition Tuesday evening after three and one-half hours of surgery following a hang-glider accident earlier in the day.

Marshall, a defensive end for the Vikings for 19 years, had attempted a take-off in the gas-powered glider and hit a light pole about 15 feet above the ground at Bloomington Jefferson Senior High School in suburban Minneapolis.

Marshall, 42, who retired after last season, sustained multiple injuries, including a broken leg, broken arm, severe lacerations and possible back injuries.

Officials initially reported his condition as serious, but not life-threatening. He was pulled from the wreckage by two youngsters and a school custodian and taken to nearby Fairview Southdale Hospital.

"Any other man, it would have killed him," said Minnesota Head Coach Bud Grant from the Vikings' training

Duran-Sugar Ray Losses At $900,000 For Board

MONTREAL (AP) — Robert Nelson, president of the Olympics Installation Board which organized the Roberto Duran-Sugar Ray Leonard World Boxing Council welterweight championship boxing match June 20, says preliminary figures show the fight left the board with a $900,000 deficit.

Other money losers were the insurance companies who were paid a $700,000 premium to ensure the board would cover its $5.1 million in expenses and had to pay $1.7 million.

Total board income for the fight was $3.4 million, with $3.2 million coming from ticket sales and $200,000 from advertising sales.

Besides Duran, the big winner was the city of Montreal which received nearly $400,000 in amusement taxes. The board also estimates that the fight brought nearly $15 million in tourist dollars to the region.

The fight filled hotels and restaurants here for several days.

But the board has not yet made a full budget report.

One problem still outstanding is the seizure of Leonard's $2 million by federal income tax authorities.

Says Chicago Newspaper

Athletic Scandal Pervasive

CHICAGO (AP) — Credits that aren't earned, classes that aren't attended and secret deals that let athletes breeze through college with only the barest semblance of an education are a way of life at many colleges, according to published reports.

The Chicago Tribune said in today's editions reports that a decision this week which left five Pacific-10 conference schools ineligible for post-season competition next year are only a part of a pervasive scandal in college athletics.

Coaches and athletes across the country are admitting that many schools bend or break academic rules to accommodate athletes who are more interested in pigskins than in sheepskins, according to the Tribune.

"Blame the NCAA and the college administrators," the Tribune quoted John Becker, a former assistant football coach at the University of Oregon, as saying. "I was a victim ... so many coaches are. The college administrators and the NCAA preach academic integrity in athletics but don't practice it."

The Tribune gave this account:

Becker resigned under fire in December from Oregon, one of the Pac-10 schools declared ineligible. He said that when he came to Oregon, a friend in the school's administration would hand him piles of blank transcripts, which could be filled out to indicate falsely that athletes had taken certain courses.

When the administrator moved to another job, Becker said he learned of extension courses operated in California for a small Kansas college. Becker said he enrolled several Oregon athletes in courses there which they never attended but for which they received credit.

Becker's dealings were uncovered in an FBI probe of alleged sports gambling. Asked to provide a full explanation, he resigned instead.

Academic cheating also has been a part of the college careers of some prominent athletes, the Tribune reported.

Chuck Muncie, a running back for the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League and once a contender for the Heisman Trophy, attended the University of California at Berkeley. Howard Strickland, Muncie's college roommate and also a football star at Berkeley, said Muncie "never went to class at all, on campus or off."

"He had a pact with the Cal coaches," Strickland said. "He'd come to Berkeley only if he didn't have to come to class. he was supposed to be my roommate, but I never saw him all week except when we got taped up for practice."

Strickland said he and Muncie were enrolled in education courses at nearby Santa Clara University, but that neither attended classes.

Muncie said he graduated from Berkeley, but university officials say they have no record that he was ever granted a degree. Muncie said he doesn't remember being enrolled in courses at Santa Clara. Asked why his name appears on the school's course rosters, he said "Your guess is as good as mine."

Romania Makes Mideast Peace Effort

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Romania's foreign minister met behind closed doors in a Bucharest hotel today with a personal envoy of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat as this communist nation apparently sought to open a new Mideast peace initiative.

Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu has acted as an intermediary before in the long Arab-Israeli conflict. Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin credit the Romanian with

Butros Ghali, Egyptian minister of state for foreign affairs, flew in from Cairo Tuesday night, carrying a verbal message to Ceausescu from Sadat.

Before leaving Cairo, Ghali told reporters that on his five-day official visit he would brief Ceausescu on the Palestinian autonomy talks, suspended by Sadat following the Israeli Knesset's approval of a law making Jerusalem the eternal capital of the Jewish state.

Neither Romanian officials nor Egyptian diplomats had any immediate public comment on the Ghali-Andrei meeting.

In Washington on Tuesday, the State Department urged Egypt and Israel to resume the autonomy talks despite the Jerusalem impasse, calling it "an obstacle, but not one that is insurmountable."

Sadat and Begin have had an exchange of letters on the Jerusalem issue, and Cairo reports today said the Egyptian leader was preparing to send another message to Begin reaffirming his position.

Sadat first wrote Begin complaining that the Jerusalem law made it "virtually impossible" to continue the negotiations. Begin's response, according to Egyptian officials, contained "no positive element."

Sadat's response to that will be sent as early as Thursday, Egyptian newspapers said.

Western diplomats here say Ceausescu often provides a valuable channel for a discreet exchange of sensitive messages between Mideast leaders.

Ghali said he was invited to Bucharest by Andrei, lending support to reports that Ceausescu was pushing a "new initiative" for Mideast peace.

An Israeli newspaper reported that the 62-year-old Romanian leader, who has withdrawn support for the U.S.-sponsored Camp David accords, might be seeking to arrange a summit meeting in Bucharest between Sadat and Begin as a means of overcoming difficulties in ongoing negotiations.

But reports circulated here that Ceausescu was planning a conference that would include representatives of Jordan, Syria, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Soviet Union as well as the United States. The two superpowers were cosponsors of the now-defunct Geneva Conference on the Middle East.

Ghali's visit to Romania ends Sunday — the day that Ceausescu begins a three-day visit to Amman for talks with Jordan's King Hussein. The Romanians recently hosted PLO leader Yasser Arafat and last weekend Ceausescu met with a visiting delegation of PLO officials.

Hussein, along with the PLO and Syria, favors a

U.S.-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli peace process on grounds it would not lead to an independent state for the 1.2 million Palestinians living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. The lands were seized by Israel in the 1967 Mideast war.

Romania is the only Soviet bloc country which did not break diplomatic relations with Israel after the war and it has maintained close ties with the Jewish state while continuing to support the PLO.

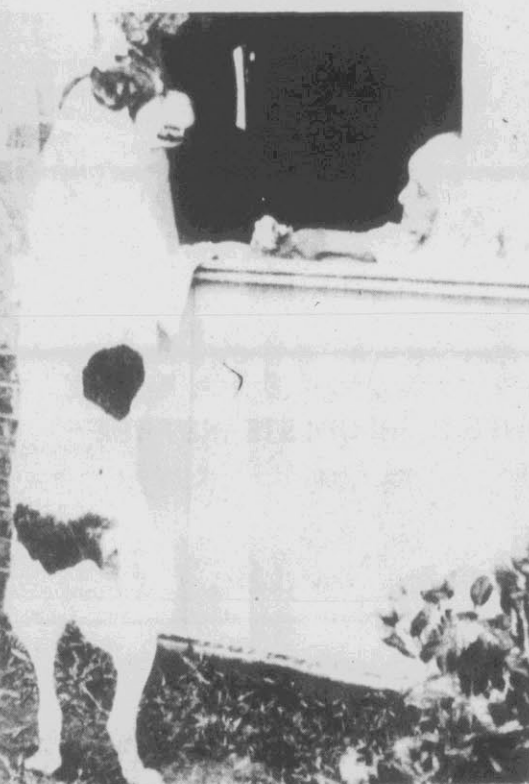

School Plans

An Open House

Open House will be held tomorrow from 4 to 8 p. m. at Carolina Country Day School.

Teachers will greet visitors in their respective classrooms. Parents will assist in guiding visitors. Refreshments will be served in the gymnasium.

Prospective students and their parents and any other interested persons are invited to attend. Registration will be held in the office during open house and also on Friday and Monday. Headmistress Bettie Forrest said.

Sunset Murders Arrest Is Made

By PAUL SIMON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police have arrested a man in connection with the so-called Sunset Murders of five young women and are holding a female acquaintance of his for what they say appears to be a related slaying of a man.

The man and woman were arrested Monday, said Cmdr. William Booth at a new conference at police headquarters.

"We do believe the crimes are connected," Booth said.

The Sunset Murders case is so named because the victims whose bodies were found in separate areas in June were known to have frequented the Sunset Strip in Hollywood.

Booth said Douglas Daniel Clark, 32, was arrested at a Burbank company where he is employed as a boiler engineer and was booked for investigation of murder. Police also arrested Carol Bundy, 37, a vocational nurse, at her Burbank home.

Ms. Bundy is under investigation in the killing of John Robert Murray, 45, of Van Nuys, whose headless body was found in a van parked on a street Aug. 9, police said.

"Bundy and Clark are acquainted," Booth said. "The extent of this relationship is not clear to us."

Booth said each killing was committed with a small-caliber handgun. He refused to reveal what further evidence linked the cases, saying only that the Murray investigation "was very relevant" to the arrest of Clark.

The investigation began when the partially clad bodies of half-sisters Gina Morano, 15, and Cindy Chandler, 16, both of Huntington Beach, were found dumped next to the Ventura Freeway near Griffith Park June 12.

The headless body of Exxie Wilson, 20, of Little Rock, Ark., was found June 23 in Studio City and her head was discovered in a small wooden box in a Hollywood alley June 27.

The body of Karen Jones, 24, also of Little Rock, was found June 23 on a Burbank street.

The last to be found was Marnette Comer, a 17-year-old runaway from Sacramento. Her nude, mummified body was discovered by snake hunters near the Foothill Freeway in Sylmar June 30.

Writers Attend Roundtable

Several writers from Greenville and Pitt County will be attending the 16th Annual Tar Heel Writers Roundtable at the Sheraton-Crabtree in Raleigh on August 15 and 16.

The two-day conference features 11 well-known writers as speakers, a Poet's Breakfast, and an awards luncheon.

Writers from Greenville planning to attend are Honey Ball, Jane Frisell, Patsy O'Leary, and Nancy Smith. Those from Pitt County include Pauline Ange, Jane Lambert and Diane Thomas, all of Grifton, and Mary Lou Hooks of Winterville.

All are members of the creative writing class at Pitt Community College and/or the Greenville Writers Club.

Charges Are Made In June 8 Case

Greenville police yesterday arrested Lee Martel Brown, 30 of 907 East Fourth St. on rape and burglary charges in connection with a June 8, incident south of Tenth Street.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Brown, who had allegedly been to a party at the house of the victim, allegedly returned after leaving, entered through a window, and assaulted the 20-year-old victim as she slept. Brown fled the scene through the front door when the woman awoke, the chief noted.

Cannon said that Susan Brown, 26, Brown's sister, and Kim Read, 24, both of 907 East Fourth St., were charged by investigators on July 31, with delaying and obstructing officers, in connection with the investigation of the case.

The chief said the two women told officers that Brown was not at the home. Shortly after, Brown eluded police by jumping from a second floor window.

Cannon said Brown turned himself in to officers yesterday.

Three Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $2,530 property damage resulted from three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to investigators, resulted from a 4:17 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets, involving cars driven by Mark Alan Jefferies of Elizabeth City, and William Hulme Fleming of 216 Woodstock Dr.

Damage from the collision was set at $1,000 to the Jefferies car and $300 to the Fleming vehicle.

A 6:21 p.m. collision on Fifth Street, 25 feet east of the Tyson Street intersection, involved cars driven by Jackie Rufus Earl Williams of 704 West Fifth St., and Elijah Ebron Jr. of 907 West Fourth St.

Damage was estimated at $300 to the Williams car and $500 to the Ebron auto.

Cars driven by Mary Edward Langley of 210 Allendale Dr. and Angella Dee Moon of 3011 Phillips Dr. collided about 5:40 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 375 feet west of the Red Banks Road intersection, causing $175 damage to the Langley car and $235 damage to the Moon auto, police reported.

SALE APPROVED
City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of a request by the Pitt County American Association of Medical Assistants for permission to sell tickets door-to-door through the first of September in order to raise funds for a gift certificate and a scholarship fund.

Wyatt said the request was submitted by Ms. Debbie Mills of Greenville.

Home Of Champions

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
NAOMA, W.Va. (AP) — To a passing motorist, Naoma probably doesn't look like much: A row of houses with a nondescript tavern, a small grocery, an old general store and a tiny post office.

But if you should drive through this part of southern West Virginia, don't be deceived. Naoma is the home of champions.

Marble champions, that is, and a champion marble.

Astronauts viewing Earth from space have described it as looking like a big, blue marble. On terra firma, marbles come in a variety of colors and sizes, and there are undoubtedly millions on the planet.

None, however, can boast the credentials of the marble owned by 22-year-old Raymond Jarrell, who has lived his entire life in this Raleigh County community of 500 people.

"I bought it from a boy a long time ago, for $3.25," Jarrell said, leaning against a counter in the gasoline station he runs. "This marble has won three nationals and three world titles."

During their 5,000-year history, marbles have been made of clay, bone, lead, steel and even marble. Today, most are glass, but the most special marbles are those made of hard, semi-precious stones called agates.

Jarrell's prize possession is such a marble. With it, he, and others, have worked wonders.

He stores it in a lump of lard. "It's a moonstone," he said. "The lard removes the moons, or the cracks."

The current national marbles champion, who won his title last month at Wildwood, N.J., is Sandy Nesmith, a lanky 14-year-old who lives on Horse Creek about a mile from Jarrell's service station. He won with Jarrell's magic marble.

So did Doug Hager, from nearby Sandlick, who finished first in 1973.

The glory began a year before, when Jarrell returned home from Wildwood lugging a knee-high trophy proclaiming him the country's best marbles player.

"I've been playing marbles for keeps since I was about six," he said. "We played at Mountain View grade school during recess and at lunch and then we'd play when we got back home after school. Heck, I've got a 20-gallon trash can full of marbles down in my basement."

He leads the way to the basement and there, sure enough, is a trash can about four-fifths full of marbles.

"I figure there's ten or fifteen thousand," said Jarrell, inspecting his gleaming, glittering horde. "I've won all these marbles since I started playing in grade school."

Carl Jarrell watches as his grandson dips into the trash can. "Shoot, that's nothing," says the elder Jarrell. "That there can be used to be full but he's given a lot of them away."

The old man beamed proudly as he talked of his grandson.

"I remember once, when he was about six," he said. "Some boys came down from Beckley and they brought all the marbles they could carry. I thought to myself that he'd get cleaned out by those city slickers but it wasn't an hour before he came into the house and said, 'Pa, Pa, I won them all.'"

Raymond Jarrell went on to capture the national championship when he was 13. He also received a $500 scholarship that helped pay for a year of college.

Before college, Jarrell went to Sussex, England, to play in the world championships.

"In all, I went to England three times to play for a U.S. team," he said, letting the marbles in the trash can trickle through his fingers. "Gulf Oil sponsored us and we won the world title all three years. We went over in 1975, '76 and '77."

"I built him a practice ring in the station, over the grease rack," said Carl Jarrell. "Made it of plywood and covered it with chip board."

His grandson, who laments that interest in marbles is waning these days, recalled playing on concrete in the world championships at England.

"The British had some middle-aged men on their team, and they got a big laugh when they saw us, a bunch of young boys."

Support Is Welcomed

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A presidential order calling for increased federal support to historically black colleges will assure the schools a fair share of money in developing human talent, Fayetteville State University's chancellor said earlier this week.

Dr. Charles Lyons Jr., as head of the National Association Equal Opportunity in Higher Education, led the campaign that prompted President Carter to sign the order during the weekend. The drive also was sponsored by the United Negro College Fund and Operation PUSH, headed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

The president issued a memorandum to all federal departments and agencies on Jan. 17, 1979, requesting contracts and programs be reviewed to assure that the historically black institutions were not excluded intentionally. He also asked that agencies and departments increase funding levels to these institutions beyond the 1978 levels.

Some of the agencies complied and others did not, Lyons said.

No college or university gets adequate state funding and it's the federal dollars that make the difference between an outstanding institution and an ordinary one, he said. Lyons said Carter's order would open up financial sources in most federal departments.

Lyons said a report on federal funding of black institutions for 1979 was presented to Carter before the order was signed. He said the report found "that historically black institutions rely on an extremely narrow base of federal support."

The overall funding to these schools increased in 1979, but the overall percentage of funding declined, according to the report. Of the 23 federal agencies surveyed, 11 had increased funding but nine departments and agencies had decreased funding.

The area of research and development fared the worst as far funding was concerned. The black institutions only received 1.3 percent, or $53 million, of the $4 billion spent on all institutions for that purpose.

"Historically black institutions are virtually excluded from the research and development support" even though this area is the largest category of federal support available, the report states.

Funding for facilities and equipment was also low. Of the $134.7 million given in 1979 to all schools, black universities and colleges only received 7.9 percent, or $9.6 million.

"Most of the historically black institutions are over 100 years old and face increasing pressures for renovation, modification and maintenance of old buildings," the report stated.

"These institutions continue to make disproportionate contributions to America's dream of educational opportunities for citizens of all races and incomes levels."

"What is less known is that about 90 small black institutions continue to produce nearly the same number of black citizens with baccalaureate degrees as nearly 1,500 predominately white institutions," the report stated.

Camelot Makes A Good TV Show

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Camelot opened on prime time Tuesday night, a day too late to save Ted Kennedy's campaign for the Democratic nomination. But oh, what a TV show it was.

The Democratic National Convention's second episode, billed as a dull epilogue to Monday's nominee-deciding meeting, proved a fascinating, revealing event that featured:

- An electrifying, riveting speech by Sen. Kennedy that seized Madison Square Garden and had commentators speculating that Kennedy, not Carter, might have been the party's nominee had the speech preceded Monday's crucial rules vote that bound a majority of the delegates to Carter.

- A genuine, old-fashioned political deal cut by party bosses right there on national television.
- An implicit concession by the president of the United States to the powerful dynamics of television politics, which resulted in the abrupt cancellation of a nationally televised roll call vote that would have embarrassed Carter.

Setting the stage for what they believed would be a dull session, network correspondents had touted the aborted roll call vote and debate over Kennedy's economic platform planks as the high point of the evening. It wasn't even missed.

Kennedy's speech was generally conceded to be one of the most stirring in memory. So stirring that Miss Lillian, the president's mother, told Walter Cronkite afterward:

"You want me to speak honestly, Walter? I don't see how he (Kennedy) could have lost, he's such an excellent speaker."

Old political hands David Brinkley and John Chancellor of NBC were no less moved. Brinkley repeatedly wondered aloud what might have happened had Monday's rule vote been taken after the convention had been bathed in Kennedy charisma.

Chancellor finally supposed, "I think Kennedy would have been the nominee of the party."

The mood did not escape the notice of Carter's forces. All day they had been working feverishly to defeat the Kennedy planks, but realized after the speech that Carter's side would be walloped in a roll call vote.

A Pennsylvania delegate told NBC's Tom Pettit that all of that state's delegates would vote Kennedy's way.

"If you're going to take a humiliating defeat," Brinkley observed later, "it's better to take it in about a minute than in an hour and a half on prime time."

So, Carter's people and Kennedy's people made a deal. There would be no embarrassing prime time roll call vote, Carter's people giving in on three of four Kennedy planks.

The deal was apparently cut right there on the podium as the Kennedy demonstration grew. Chancellor and Brinkley noticed that something was going on. "There is a rumor that they're negotiating to do away with the roll call," Brinkley reported.

He was right. Carter's side was giving up on the three planks on a voice vote. No roll call. Over at CBS, resident convention pundits Jeff Greenfield and James Kilpatrick were going on about the Kennedy speech and that network, quite simply, missed the story until it was old news (by electronic standards, anyway).

Old pol Tip O'Neill ramrodded the voice vote through and it was over. ABC's Frank Reynolds observed the parliamentary sleight-of-hand and was fast to note:

"I think they cut a deal back there and foisted it on this convention ... so much for the will of the delegates."

It was a session thick with political navigations and featuring a speech that made you want to go out and shoot an elephant. And it was some fine TV.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Defense is by far the most difficult facet of bridge. If you can reason clearly, however, logic will often lead to the winning solution.

North-South reached four hearts after a competitive auction. In their system, South's bid of three hearts was invitational, not forcing. North correctly decided to push on to game, for virtually all of his high cards were "working."

West led the king of diamonds, then paused to take stock. He could see two tricks for the defense in diamonds, and at first glance it might seem that, to defeat the contract, East-West would have to collect two spade tricks. Thus, a spade shift seemed indicated. Alternatively, West could kill one of dummy's high diamonds by continuing with the ace and another, giving his partner a ruff.

However, declarer couldn't have more than two spades. If East held the ace of spades, there was no hurry to shift to that suit, for West still controlled the diamonds. What if declarer, not East, held the ace of spades? In that event, the defenders couldn't maneuver to kill both of dummy's diamond honors, so declarer would eventually discard his spade loser on a high diamond.

Another possibility was that East held the king of clubs. A club shift wouldn't help, for if East held the king of clubs, declarer surely had the ace of trumps and ace of spades. He would make the contract by flying up with the ace of clubs, drawing trumps and leading a diamond. He would get back to dummy with a club to take a spade discard on the diamonds.

There was one more possibility—that declarer held the ace of spades and king of clubs, and East the ace of trumps. In that case, the winning defense was to shift to a trump!

After giving the matter some thought, West did, indeed, lead a heart at trick two. East won the ace of hearts and shifted to a spade. No matter what declarer did, he had to surrender a spade and a diamond for down one. Careful defense had earned a well deserved reward.

ABC Victory Dulls CBS Drive

NEW YORK (AP) — With the 1980-81 prime-time season now just over a month away — assuming the current actors' strike ends soon — ABC seems to be taking away some of the momentum that CBS built in the early part of the summer.

With "Barbara Walters' Summer Special" in first place and an original edition of the "20-20" newsmagazine tied for third, ABC won its second straight ratings race in the week ending Aug. 10, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

CBS dominated the first two months of the summer television season after taking the prime-time championship away from four-time winner ABC by a tenth of a point.

Momentum, at this stage, is an important consideration. The Walters special, featuring an interview with comedian Richard Pryor, who was seriously burned in an accident in June, was one of a handful of original programs in the week's Top 20.

Of the repeats, ABC's "Three's Company" was No. 2 for the week, followed by a rerun of "Dallas" on CBS, tied for third with "20-20."

The rating for "Barbara Walters' Summer Special" was 21.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 21.6 percent saw at least part of the program.

The top-rated special contributed to a rating for ABC of 14.8. CBS was second at 13.1 and NBC third at 12.4.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 14.8 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were tuned to ABC.

The week's five lowest-rated shows included "Friday Night Fights" on NBC, No. 64, followed by an NBC News special on the Democratic National Convention, "Pottsville" on CBS, an "Ed Clark for President" political announcement on NBC, and "Here's Boomer" on NBC.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Barbara Walters' Summer Special," with a rating of 21.6 representing 16.5 million homes, and "Three's Company," 20.5 or 15.6 million, both ABC; "Dallas," CBS, and "20-20," ABC, both 20.3 or 15.5 million; "Taxi," 19.7 or 15.3 million, ABC; "60 Minutes," 19.1 or 14.6 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 19 or 14.5 million, both CBS; "Vegas," 17.8 or 13.6 million, ABC; "The Jeffersons," 17.7 or 13.5 million, CBS, and Movie: "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox," 17.4 or 13.3 million, NBC.

The next 10 shows:

"Charlie's Angels" and "Fantasy Island," both ABC; "Alice," CBS; Movie: "Intimate Strangers," ABC; "CHiPs" and "Quincy, M.E.," both NBC; "Love Boat," ABC; "WKRP in Cincinnati" and Carter address analysis, both CBS, tie, and "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC.

Confirm Bite Was By Shark

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A UNC-Wilmington marine sciences expert confirmed Tuesday a shark attacked a 10-year-old Greensboro girl last Sunday while she was playing in shallow water at Ocean Isle Beach.

Dr. Gilbert Bane, director of the marine sciences department at the university, examined the wounds of Susan Waters Tuesday at a Wilmington hospital.

"I'm sure now, there's no question about it. It was definitely a shark," Bane said. "She was hit pretty badly in four places on her leg."

The shark bit the child behind the knee and on the calf of one leg. Doctors said Tuesday she would make a complete recovery but would need skin grafts.

A shark alert was posted for some of North Carolina's southeast shoreline Saturday and Sunday after schools of sharks were found just off the coast.

Ralph Nader Tries TV Show

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's doesn't begin with someone announcing, "Heere's Ralph!" There are only a few light moments. And it's unlikely to attract a mass audience.

But consumer activist Ralph Nader, who vaulted to prominence by writing a book entitled "Unsafe at Any Speed," now has his own television show.

Nader taped the first pilot for his new consumer TV program at Georgetown University Tuesday, explaining to his audience he thinks television can help "provide information to help mobilize people."

Nader's new program was made possible by Showtime, a pay movie network that wants to offer a "public affairs forum" to its roughly 1 million cable TV subscribers across the country.

Entitled "Ralph Nader: For the People," the program will make its debut on Aug. 17.

Nader's show began with a series of so-called Public Alerts, including a suggestion that viewers might want to write their congressmen about a pending bill to limit the campaign contributions of political action committees.

Rich Find Of Early Life Forms

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An international search into the distant past has ended this week after uncovering a surprisingly rich and complex world of microscopic life that lived on Earth billions of years ago.

The project has proven the existence of fossilized microbes that lived 3.5 billion years ago — scarcely a billion years after the Earth was formed from a swirling cloud of dust and gas in space.

And scientists said those oldest known fossils — chains of cells that look like tiny strings of beads — were so unexpectedly complex that the first, far-simpler living thing must have appeared many millions of years earlier.

"I think (the project) resulted in a good deal more than we had expected," said UCLA paleobiologist J. William Schopf, who conceived the 15-month program based at UCLA.

"There have been some major discoveries that made a tremendous impact in the field. We found that things were a lot more complex a lot earlier than any of us had suspected," he said Monday as the program wound up with a two-day symposium. The $300,000 project was funded by the National Science Foundation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Besides expanding on the previously reported fossils, the team revealed evidence that photosynthesis — the energy source of modern plants — may have begun 2.8 billion years ago. That's an especially crucial point in the history of life, since photosynthesis changed Earth's poisonous primordial atmosphere by releasing the oxygen that lets animals and humans exist.

The 15 top researchers, gathered from the United States, Australia, Canada, Germany and Puerto Rico to represent a variety of scientific disciplines, added at least 400 million years to the confirmed history of life.

The microfossils, from a rugged and remote region of western Australia, were collected by team members led by Malcolm Walter of the Australian Bureau of Mineral Resources, as well as Stanley Awramik of the University of California-Santa Barbara and Roger Buick and John Dunlop of the University of Western Australia.

Schopf cited suggestive evidence that some of the five types of bacteria that left fossil remains in the 3.5 billion-year-old rocks may have developed a primitive metabolism that, like photosynthesis, uses energy from sunlight to process carbon from the environment, but without releasing oxygen.

By the time another half-billion years had passed, that process may have evolved into true, oxygen-producing photosynthesis and the beginnings of a complex, almost-modern ecosystem.

"It's not proven, but it seems reasonable that the process that produces oxygen may have originated 2.8 billion or even 3 billion years ago," Schopf said.

Mystery Plane Lands Again

FAIR BLUFF, N.C. (AP)

— A World War II B-25 bomber that has been hopping about from pasture to air strips for more than a year has shown up on a Columbus County farm.

Authorities examined the airplane, but — despite the mystery surrounding it — say they can't hold it. The owner, or the pilot, has not been found.

"You can't impound the thing just to keep it from disappearing," said U.S. Customs Agent Mike Roder, who examined the plane after it touched ground Sunday. He said he suspected the plane may be involved in criminal activity, possibly drug trafficking, but has no hard evidence to go on.

"We're interested because it's an unusual aircraft and you don't see many of them around. The people involved have gone to particular lengths to conceal where it is."

The plane last was seen in Burlington, where it remained on the ground for 15 months before disappearing one night in July. It had appeared just as mysteriously in 1979, when it landed in the middle of the night.

The plane's saga started in April 1979 when it landed in a pasture at Ridge View Farm near McBee, S.C. The same night, someone climbed into the plane and it flew off, later landing in Burlington.

Repairs were made to the plane, according to the H and H Propeller Service of Burlington, at the request of Greensboro pilot James Collier.

The Federal Aviation Administration says it does not know who owns the plane. Its previous owner reported selling the aircraft two years ago and no one has registered it since, the FAA said.

NOTICE OF SERVICE OF PROCESS BY PUBLICATION
FILE NO. —
IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE
BEFORE THE CLERK
NORTH CAROLINA
PITTS COUNTY
IN THE MATTER OF THE FORECLOSURE OF A DEED OF TRUST EXECUTED BY SARAH HILLIARD (WIDOW), DATED JANUARY 2, 1975, RECORDED AT BOOK 42, PAGE 355, OF THE PITT COUNTY REGISTRY BY IRMA FLEMING, TRUSTEE
To Sarah Hilliard
Route 1, Box 45
Winterville, North Carolina 28590.
The Above Named Respondent TAKE NOTICE that she is seeking relief against you who has been filed with the Clerk of Superior Court, Pitt County on July 21, 1980 in the above entitled Special Proceeding. The nature of the relief sought is as set forth in the following Notice of Hearing filed herewith.

You are hereby notified that S.O. Worthington of Pitt County is seeking to commence foreclosure on the note and deed of trust which was executed by SARAH HILLIARD under date of January 2, 1975 in the principal amount of THIRTY EIGHT HUNDRED TWENTY FIVE DOLLARS ($3,825.00) and covering property described as follows:
That certain tract or parcel of land situate and being in Swift Creek Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, and BEGINNING in the center of the dirt road leading to Haddock's Crossroads, a corner of the lands of James V. Smith, and runs North 26 East 1.38 feet, thence South 84.30 East 330 feet, thence South 46 East 501.6 feet, thence South 3.30 West 990 feet to the center of the aforesaid road, thence along the center of said road North 84 West 1,229.2 feet to the BEGINNING containing 27.37 acres, more or less, according to map made February, 1960 by Joe A. Griesbach, R.S. Further being the same tract or parcel of land conveyed in Book X 15, Page 123 of the Pitt County Registry, and being one of the parcels of land described in deed from Sam O. Worthington, Jr. to Substitute Trustee, to S.O. Worthington, dated 23rd November, 1973 and recorded in the Public Registry of Pitt County in Book D-42, Page 335, and the same conveyed by S.O. Worthington and wife Bessie H. Worthington, to Sarah Hilliard under deed dated January 2, 1975.

This note and deed of trust is held by S.O. Worthington who may be addressed at P.O. Box 691, 114 East Third Street, Greenville, North Carolina, 27834. The default is the failure to pay said note when due, demands of which have been made, and which is hereby made again. The indebtedness secured by the aforesaid deed of trust may be paid in full at any time prior to confirmation of the sale to be held by the undersigned Trustee plus foreclosure costs, and if paid by September 26, 1980, the following amount would be accepted in satisfaction: THREE THOUSAND SEVEN HUNDRED SIX AND 67/100 ($3,706.67) plus foreclosure costs of SEVEN HUNDRED FIFTY DOLLARS ($750.00) and any additional accrued interest and expenses to the date of redemption. Anything less than said amount will not be accepted and funds must be either cash or certified, payable to and sent to IRMA FLEMING, Trustee, P.O. Box 691, 114 East Third Street, Greenville, North Carolina, 27834, or delivered to her office at 114 East Third Street, Greenville, North Carolina. The amount necessary to redeem this property at any time may be obtained from the undersigned upon request.

The sale is scheduled to be held at the courthouse door in Greenville, North Carolina, on September 16, 1980, at twelve o'clock noon unless the loan is paid in full prior to that date. If a postponement of the sale becomes necessary, it will be held as soon as possible after September 16, 1980, and you will be mailed notice of such later date, providing you keep the undersigned notified in writing of your mailing address.

You are further notified that if this notice is served on or before August 1, 1980, you may appear before the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County at 10:00 a.m. or as soon thereafter as the matter can be reached. On August 15, 1980, to show cause, if any you have, as to why this foreclosure should not be allowed to be held. If this notice is not served on you until after August 1, 1980, then the hearing before the Clerk will be held on the first day not a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday that is at least eleven (11) days after the date of service on you, at 10:00 a.m. or as soon thereafter as the matter can be reached. If you do not intend to contest S.O. WORTHINGTON'S allegation of default and his right to foreclosure, you do not have to attend this hearing before the Clerk, and your failure to do so will not affect your right to pay the indebtedness in full at any time before the sale, or to attend and bid at the sale itself.

If the foreclosure is held, the purchaser at the sale will be entitled to possession of the property described in the deed of trust at time of delivery of his deed by the Trustee, and should you remain in possession at that time you can be evicted from such possession.

If you will keep the undersigned Trustee notified in writing your address, copies of any postponements of sale or resale will be mailed to you.
This the 21st day of July, 1980.

Soviet Camps Stress Civil Defense

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Gas masks, respirators, chemical warfare decontaminating kits, nerve gas antidotes, nuclear fallout shelters: all these things at a Soviet summer camp for youths are not mock-ups or toys, but the real thing.

The gear is authentic because for thousands of youngsters at state-run "Young Pioneer" camps, summer vacation doesn't just mean sports, hiking and campfires — but also learning the realities of civil defense.

A just-published handbook presents a detailed picture of the Soviet civil defense program, designed for children of ages 7 to 15 attending the country's 53,000 Pioneer camps.

It aims to supplement classroom instruction at school with practical training in civil defense skills such as proper use of gas masks, laying out trench-type shelters, quick response to attack warnings and removing chemical or radioactive contamination.

A spokeswoman for the central Pioneer organization, Valentina I. Yermilova, said that 13 million Soviet youngsters attend Pioneer camps each summer.

However, no specific information is available on the number of Pioneers who take part in the civil defense program.

The Pioneer training is part of the Soviet Union's overall civil defense effort, which according to Western estimates now involves more than 100,000 full-time personnel at all levels of the Soviet government and economic structure.

A report issued by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency in mid-1978 said the Soviets have built more than 15,000 blast-resistant shelters and by 1985 should be able to shield 15 percent to 30 percent of the nation's urban population — with the rest to be evacuated to rural areas in case of war.

The Soviet program has been costing the equivalent of roughly $2 billion a year, the CIA claimed.

By contrast, U.S. civil defense currently involves an annual budget of about $100 million and no construction of shelters for the general population.

According to officials in Washington, the U.S. program has 550 full-time personnel at the federal level and 3,600 at the state and local levels, plus 2,200 part-time or volunteer workers.

There are currently no civil defense instructional programs for American youngsters 16 or under, the U.S. officials said.

The 78-page "Soviet handbook, entitled "Measures for Civil Defense in Pioneer Camps," was published by the All-Union Voluntary Organization for Assistance to the Army, Air Force and Navy.

The organization supervises a broad program of paramilitary training for millions of school pupils across the Soviet Union and assists in the operation of the universal male draft.

"Strengthening knowledge about civil defense which Pioneers receive in school, and grafting onto it practical skills in defense from weapons of mass destruction, is one of the most important tasks of Pioneer camps," the handbook states.

It notes that "in each Pioneer camp there should be a room or corner for civil defense. It is also recommended to have a defense structure (shelter against radioactivity)..."

"In larger Pioneer camps, special instruction areas for civil defense and obstacle courses can be built," says the booklet, published in a printing of 75,000 copies.

The heavily illustrated handbook stipulates time and skill norms for various civil defense tasks which Pioneers should learn to perform quickly, including:

—Making and putting on a rudimentary cotton-and-gauze face mask: 2½ minutes.

—Properly taking out of its carrying case and donning a gas mask: 11 seconds.

—Orderly heading to a shelter and filing inside by a group of 25 to 30 Pioneers carrying gas masks and other gear: 1 minute.

—Partial decontamination of clothing after exposure to radioactive material: 7 minutes.

—With use of an "Individual Antichemical Packet," decontaminating clothing and skin areas exposed to chemical warfare agents: 6 minutes.

The handbook includes a section with model questions and answers for quizzes to test Pioneers on their civil defense knowledge. Here is a brief sampling:

Q. What kinds of destructive factors of a nuclear explosion do you know?

A. The shock wave, visible radiation, penetrating radiation and radioactive contamination of the surrounding area.

Q. Is it possible to protect yourself from the shock wave if you have seen the flash at a significant distance?

A. Yes. The bright flash is visible over a considerable distance, and the light spreads instantly. The shock wave travels the first kilometer (0.6 mile) in two seconds, but after that its speed decreases. This means that for several seconds after the flash it is possible to take shelter.

The handbook suggests that the Pioneer team finishing first in such a contest be rewarded with "cake, pie or an excursion."

English is the main language of Scotland, but traditional Gaelic is still understood by about 200,000 of its 5 million people.

Protection For Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of a study of U.S. nuclear capabilities, President Carter has ordered new methods of protecting top government and military officials should a nuclear war begin.

Defense Department sources said Monday that the goal of the changes are to ensure that top leaders are protected as much as possible from a Soviet attack.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said the new procedures include another look at plans to move top leaders out of Washington in case of attack and more secure communications facilities.

Base Will Train Saudis

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base is gearing up for its largest influx ever of servicemen from oil-rich Saudi Arabia, officials say.

Navy spokesmen confirmed Monday that 13 new missile chase boats and missile-equipped gunboats are being built for the Saudi navy, and that as many as 500 Saudis will be trained here to operate the craft.

Saudis have been trained at Little Creek since 1975, but in smaller numbers. Most of the training so far has consisted of small-boat tactics and minesweeper operation.

Spokesmen said the 13 new Saudi ships are expected to begin arriving at Little Creek in December, and that training with the vessels probably will continue through 1984.

The Saudi ships will include four patrol missile

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To Roma Gans, it's not her fault she's still single at age 37.

"It's difficult to meet men," she said. "And it's really difficult to meet the type of man I would like to establish a relationship with.

chasers, being constructed at $83 million each, and nine patrol gunboats with missiles, being built at a cost of $57 million each. The total cost of the construction program will be about $844 million.

A U.S. Navy spokesman said Saudi Arabia will pay for building the ships, and of operating and maintaining them while at Little Creek. The Saudis also will pay a fee for their training, officials said.

As you grow older, there are fewer and fewer men."

Her complaint is echoed throughout an evolving class in American society: Upwardly mobile single women.

Ms. Gans, a placement counselor at Columbia University, is in many ways typical of this new class. She earns a good living, pays her own bills and lives alone.

And her complaint has merit.

The U.S. Census Bureau reports that between the ages of 25 and 49, American women outnumber men by nearly 1.2 million. Among single, widowed, divorced or separated people, Ms. Gans is one of 13 women for every 10 men in her 35-to-39 age bracket. That imbalance is further weighted because more men than women are homosexuals or in prison.

Under age 45, there are three divorced women for every two divorced men. Two-thirds of the people who live alone in this country are women.

But because of population trends and cultural traditions, the shortage of men is most serious for this class of professional women which the Labor Department says grew by 50 percent — to 8.4 million — between 1970 and 1978.

Paul Secord, a University of Houston psychologist, said the problem is that today's career woman, like her pre-liberated sister devoted to home and family, still prefers a man with at least as good a job and education as she has.

And because women traditionally marry older men, the 25- to 35-year-olds born during the post-World War II baby boom are competing for the far fewer men born earlier when the birth rate was lower.

"It's called the marriage squeeze," Secord said. "For women who want to marry across or up, there typically aren't enough men to go around. The trend will continue as women's earnings rise."

"It's kind of like a kingdom with a lot of princesses," Manhattan women's counselor Sharon Bermon said. "Who can they marry? They can't all marry frogs."

Secord said that 95 percent of the professional and executive men the new American princesses would be interested in are already married, compared with only 80 percent of the semi-skilled male workers.

"Meanwhile, the women who are well educated are the least married," he said.

"Who's left over in the marriage market are the real sharp women and the real dull men," Ms. Bermon said.

While reaping the economic advantages of 15 years of women's rights, some women see the marriage squeeze as an unexpected and unwelcome side effect.

"It's very definitely created a backlash," Ms. Gans said.

But even if feminism has unfairly raised their expectations of combining career and marriage, Ms. Gans and most other single professional women would not go back to the traditional wifely role.

"Twenty years ago, a woman would have gone to bed with one person and then married him," said Karen Wagner, 27, a banker. "Then she would wake up at age 40 and, oh my God, this wasn't the person she wanted to be married to."

"I don't think women want a man so badly as to go back to the old ways," Amy Pearlmuter, 26, a New Jersey school teacher, said. "Being submissive doesn't get you anywhere."

Besides, she said, marriage and family nowadays are a supplement rather than a substitute for working.

"When your career is moving, going somewhere, there's no way you're going to let a man step in and mess things up," Ms. Pearlmuter said. "I'm not going to sit around waiting to live my life until I'm married."

"Maybe our standards are getting higher," said Cindy Squire, 27, the administrator of a Chicago environmental center.

"It's the expectations of women versus the dating problems of men," Ms. Bermon said. "Some men are threatened by bright women."

With the nation's median age for women now 31.5 compared with 29 for men, many women are looking to younger men.

"A lot of women are becoming more flexible because they have to," said Susan Cohen, head of a sports-oriented singles club here. "And younger men are better able to relate to older women. They're more sensitive."

Sharon Hall, 36, a Park Forest, Ill., bookkeeper and mother of three who was divorced two years ago, said she mostly dates men between 26 and 32 because older men tend to view women more traditionally.

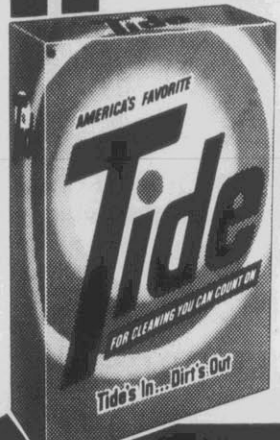

She said the squeeze may be tightest for single mothers: "Many men become inhibited when they start thinking about three kids."

Saving Souls: Religion In The Suburbs

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Brakes screech and horns honk as cars and trucks rumble past. Boys in a nearby parking lot play demolition derby with a rusty shopping cart, and a teen-ager at a bus stop turns up an already blaring radio.

A mighty man's voice cuts through the Saturday night din with a single word: "Hallelujah!"

It is an unlikely word coming from an unlikely source — a huge tent pitched on a corner in the heart of Pasadena, a suburb known for its Rose Bowl, smog and "old money."

And, this summer, for its traveling salvation show. The brown tent with its portable pulpit is straight from the Bible Belt. Out of place, skeptics scoff, out of time. But faith erected it and faith will keep it up, say three lay evangelists who draw crowds of up to 300 for services five nights a week.

"As long as there are common folk, we'll have the big tent," promises Leonard Mullins, one of the preachers.

Mullins and brothers Spaulding and Smith Mills preached in rented Masonic halls and auditoriums across Southern California before buying the 30-by-80-foot tent this year.

"We have better access to people," Mullins said. "If they peep in and hear one word, even if all they hear is 'God loves you,' then the seed has been planted."

Their eight-week debut — amid gas stations, supermarkets and more typical tenants of the busy boulevard — has been so successful that their church, the Seventh-day Adventist Conference, wants them to train young ministers next year.

The three say the tent will be a summer fixture from now on. While traditionally such tents "will often go up in June and not come down till Thanksgiving," a summer-only run is best to keep Californians interested, Spaulding Mills said.

"There's so much to do out here," he said. "If it wasn't a novelty, if people saw the tent here all the time, they'd just say 'So what?'"

"This is marvelous," said a white-haired grandmother after her first revival meeting in the tent. "I haven't been to one in 25 years. Not since Des Moines. All the pomp and ceremony is missing and people are just themselves. Always did love them."

A native of Indianapolis, Spaulding Mills fell in love with traveling salvation shows as a young man. Then, he slept on a cot in the tent to guard against vandals.

"We've done away with the fire and brimstone and everyone-be-damned act" he said. "We have to modernize, be unusual and vary the style."

Where boredom was often the motivation in the Midwest, curiosity is what brings in Californians, Mills said. The sight of the tent with its colorful placards out front and the sound of booming organ music has wooed more than one passer-by, he said.

Barrels of food are given away after each service, with clothes offered to the needy on Wednesdays and free Bibles to anyone attending 12 meetings, Mills said.

"People of all faiths, of all types, come in," he said. "There's a breeze blowing about the tent and they enjoy just sitting here, instead of with all those stuffed shirts in a church."

All types, brothers and sisters, all types. From the hat-and-gloves old women muttering soft "Amen's" to squirming children given to giggling. Up front, a scraggly-bearded eccentric in white robes and purple headband nods sagely during the sermon.

The billowing canvas chapel is not revered by all.

"You don't have salvation on a street corner without hostility," Mullins concedes, "but we've had no confrontations."

Healings are held in the tent, Mills said, "but not the spectacular kind you see on TV. We use prayer." No sobbing sinners repenting on their knees, no crutches in the aisle.

Instead, people add their names to a scroll, and when Mills asks how many on the scroll have been helped with their troubles, "without fail, at least two or three raise their hands."

From inside the tent, the voice thunders on.

"Lift up your hands, lift up your hearts, hallelujah," Mullins cries. "Everyone come on down here, come on down if deep in your gut, down in your belly, you say Jesus I love you."

Cardboard fans on Popsicle sticks stir the air, a mortuary advertisement on the back of each one.

"This is not a talent show," Mullins bellows as people slip out after pre-sermon gospel performances.

Many remain. Mullins' rich voice is a symphony, a full crescendo dropping into a lilting refrain. Condemning the ear one minute, caressing it the next.

Mullins paces, his voice building as he tells of a man torn between preventing a train crash and saving his only son.

"And he's holding up that loose trestle," Mullins roars, "and the train is coming, a hundred people on board, oh no, oh no, they're all gonna die."

He shuffles along the gravel floor, "Ch-ch-chug-chug, ch-ch-chug-chug." The children giggle.

"Suddenly the man hears a voice, 'Daddy, Daddy!' It's his son, running on the track and the train is coming."

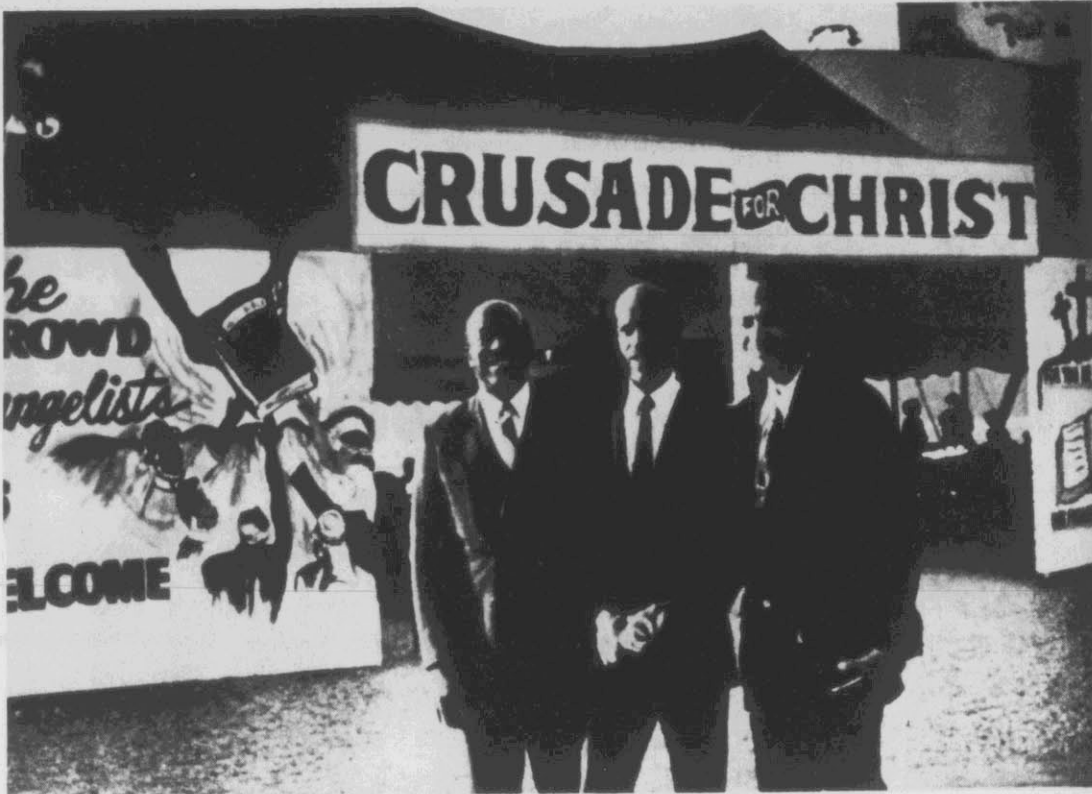

Mullins tugs an imaginary whistle, "Wooooo, wooooooooo."

Six minutes later, the father saves the train, and Mullins describes how the train smashes into the boy, moaning painfully of "blood splattering all over the place."

A hush falls over the gigglers, but a low "Eeeeeew" escapes one boy and his mother smacks him.

Mullins is silent. He mops perspiration from his face with a sodden white handkerchief and whispers hoarsely into the microphone:

"Hallelujah," he says softly. "Just let it sink in, brothers and sisters, just let it sink in."

HOUSE
HELPING THE HANDICAPPED — By a vote of 190 for and 217 against, the House refused to water-down a Department of Transportation regulation requiring that municipal buses bought with federal grants be equipped with wheelchair lifts. The amendment sought to give cities the "local option" to choose means other than lifts to satisfy the federal law, insuring the handicapped access to mass transportation. It was offered to an appropriations bill (HR 7831) later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Tex., the sponsor, said that Abletine in his district feels that special vans would serve the handicapped better than lift-equipped buses. He said "local communities (need) to determine how best to meet the needs of the handicapped."

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., an opponent, said that "as a result of this (law) we have tens of thousands of handicapped people who are employed and able to get jobs ... and pay taxes who before did not have that opportunity."

Members voting "yea" favored the local-option approach in providing mass transportation for the handicapped.

Reps. Walter Joens, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudgeon, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, W.C. Hefner, D-8, and James Martin, R-9, voted "nay."

TWO PERCENT CUT — The House rejected, 191 for and 206 against, an amendment to inflict a two-percent across-the-board cut in the $12 billion Department of Transportation (HR 7831; see preceding vote) appropriations bill for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Rep. Clarence Miller, R-Ohio, the sponsor, said: "The two percent reduction will take only $230 million. There are many areas in the bill where that two percent can be reduced."

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., an opponent, said the proposed cut means "we are either going to take the money from the Coast Guard (or) from air safety, from the Federal Aviation Administration, or you are going to take it from mass transit or Amtrak. Those are the areas where you are going to take it and there is no room in this budget."

Members voting "yea" favored the two percent reduction but did not specify which programs they would cut.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudgeon voted "yea."

SENATE
THE ZIMMERMAN NOMINATION — The Senate confirmed, 68 for and 27 against, the nomination of Republican Don A. Zimmerman to be a member of the five-person National Labor Relations Board, which adjudicates disputes between labor and management in accordance with laws such as the Taft-Hartley Act. Counting Zimmerman, the board has three Democrats and two Republicans. Conservative Republicans felt Zimmerman would be anti-business.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., a supporter, said "the campaign against Mr. Zimmerman ... springs from a misguided partisanship that is unfortunate..."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said that with Zimmerman as a member the NLRB would be tilted 4-1 against business, and that consequently "we are in danger of having labor-management chaos in this country because of the stacking of the National Labor Relations Board."

Senators voting "yea" wanted Zimmerman to sit on the NLRB.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

ABSENTEEISM — The Senate voted 74 for and one against to instruct the Sergeant at Arms to call absent senators to the floor. This was necessary to achieve a quorum so that the Senate could vote on a cloture motion to end the filibuster against Don A. Zimmerman's nomination to sit on the National Labor Relations Board. The cloture attempt failed, but the next day the Senate ended the filibuster and confirmed the nomination (see preceding vote).

Senators voting "yea" wanted to improve attendance on the Senate floor so business could be conducted. Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

Zoo Gives Up On Stamp Drive To Buy Gorillas

MIAMI (AP) — The Zoological Society of Florida has given up on collecting Green Stamps to buy gorillas. Their two-year campaign yielded only enough stamps for about half an ape.

The private society says it has collected 10 million S&H Green Stamps since kicking off the campaign in October 1978, when it decided to try for three lowland gorillas for the new Dade County zoo. At the time, the society said it would need 45 million stamps.

Converted to cash, the collected stamps are worth $20,990.45, enough to buy little more than half a gorilla at today's market price of three for $110,000, said society president Richard Mahmorian. That's $30,000 more than the price quoted two years ago.

Mahmorian said most of the stamps were collected during the early days of the campaign when enthusiasm for gorillas ran high. Hundreds of thousands of Green Stamps flowed in from all over the country.

Locally, stamps were collected in wishing wells set up in supermarkets. The zoological society enlisted hundreds of Girl Scouts to count and paste the donated stamps into books.

But the gorilla gimmick wore out fast, Mahmorian said.

"Once the initial enthusiasm was over, the stamps came in in gradually diminishing amounts," he said. "We feel the campaign has run its gamut and it's time to try something else."

The stamp collection will end Friday, he said.

The society is sticking with its dream of gorillas, however. But now it hopes to raise the balance of the money through a joint promotion with one of Dade County's private corporations.

Mahmorian said the society is talking with two companies about sponsoring the idea.

"I'm not at liberty to say who we're talking with," he said. "But I'm confident we'll have an announcement within the next few weeks."
