ECU 80-81 Budget $52.80 Million

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University's operating budget for the 1980-1981 fiscal year has been set at $52.80 million, including $44.50 million in general fund appropriations and $8.3 million in estimated receipts from tuition and fees.

The budget for the coming year compares with a $49.91 million budget for the 1979-80, which included $39.8 million in general fund appropriations and $10.11 million from tuition and fees.

The 1980-81 budget includes $16.06 million for regular term instruction, $959,766 for summer term instruction, and $1.06 million for extension instruction.

The list of expenditures also includes $3.32 million for the Division of Health Affairs, $12.97 million for the School of Medicine, $287,279 for organized research, $2.73 million for libraries, $789,173 for general academic support, $1.38 million for student services, $2.38 for institutional support, $4.76 million for physical plant operations, $344,181 for student financial aid, $5.71 million for salary-related reserves, and $15,000 for other reserves.

The budget for the 1980-81 fiscal year is based on an authorized resident and non-resident student enrollment of 11,230, and 726.1 full time equivalent teaching positions.

The School of Medicine, under the budget, is authorized 145 resident students and 108.1 full time equivalent teachers.

The 1980-1981 budget includes a 10 percent across-the-board pay hike for staff and faculty members, as well as a 5 percent in-lieu-of sum for employees exempt from the State Personnel Act.

Of the $49.91 million budget for the past fiscal year, $38.4 million was expended for salaries and fringe benefits for employees, including the more than 800 teachers and 1,947 other full time employees. The 1980-81 budget includes $26.72 million for academic salaries (teachers), some $3.71 million more than for 1979-80.

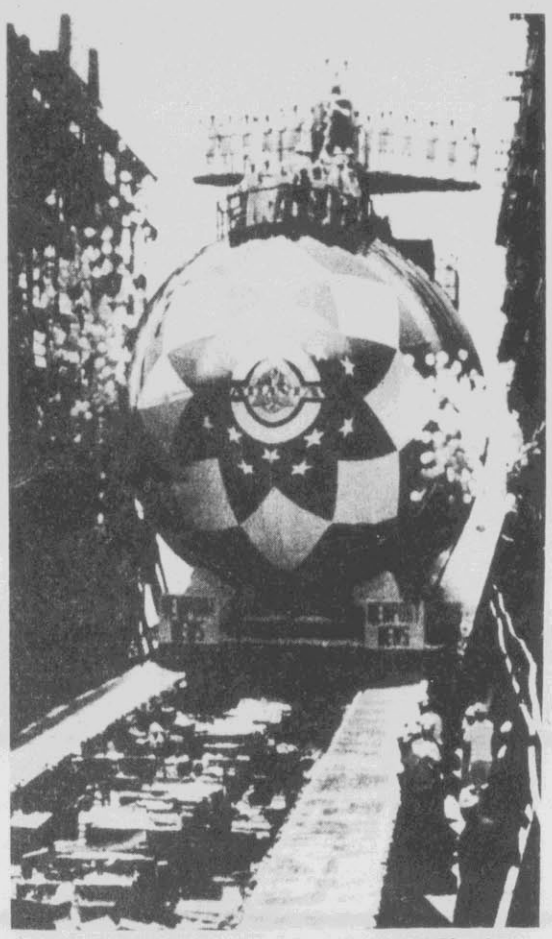
The university has requested some $50.9 million for capital improvement projects for the 1981-83 biennium, including $18.59 million for a new classroom building, $5.36 million for a radiation therapy lab for the School of Medicine, $971,000 for further renovations to Wright Building, $620,600 for roof repairs, and $1.63 million for an energy conservation study and implementation, as well as money for 10 other projects.

ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer indicated last week that he would consider the university lucky to have the first five priority items funded by the 1981 General Assembly.

The proposed operations budget for the university for the 1981-82 biennium is scheduled to be submitted to the University of North Carolina General Administration by September 1.

Brings To Six Number Of Planes Hijacked This Week

3 Hijackings Saturday



LAUNCHING — Ballons are released as the USS Atlanta (SSN 721), the 31st nuclear powered submarine, slides down the ways during public launching ceremonies at Newport News, Va., shipbuilding yards on Saturday. Two years in the building, the Atlanta was contracted for a price of $150 million and is 70 percent complete. The Los Angeles-class attack sub now will undergo outfitting with complex instruments and intricate wiring making late 1981 delivery date. MIAMI (AP) — A dramatic surge in the new wave of airplane hijackings broke out Saturday as three jetliners were ordered to Havana — two of them within half an hour — and four Cuban men were arrested as they tried to board an airplane in Tampa, Fla., carrying gasoline, officials said.

The hijackings brought to six the number of planes commandeered and ordered flown to Cuba during the week, and to 11 the number of planes hijacked since June 12, 1979 — after 87 planes were commandeered from the United States to Cuba from 1961 to 1973. Saturday's takeovers came one day after federal officials announced a step-up in airport security.

Two of the hijackings — of a Delta Air Lines wide-body L-1011 and a Republic Airlines DC-9 — occurred within half an hour Saturday night, according to the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington. An Eastern Airlines Boeing 727 was ordered to Cuba Saturday morning and returned to Miami in the afternoon, a few hours before the Saturday night hijackings were reported.

Roger Myers of the FAA in Atlanta said the Republic plane was commandeered by three persons, and that one to three persons who Myers said "apparently had four containers of gasoline," diverted the Delta jet.

Further details about the methods used were not immediately available.

The Republic plane, carrying 106 passengers and five crew members, arrived in Havana at about 7:30 p.m., EDT. The Delta jet had 157 passengers and a crew of eight aboard when it landed in Havana at 8:01 p.m., government and airline officials said.

Within 90 minutes of landing in Havana, the two planes were being refueled, Myers said. He said the Republic plane left Havana at 10:02 p.m., and landed in Miami at 10:42 p.m. There was no firm word about when the Delta plane was to leave.

Myers said all of the hijackers were left behind in Havana, in the custody of Cuban authorities.

The Delta plane was on a flight from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami when it was diverted, according Delta's Jim Ewing in Atlanta. The Republic flight was en route from Miami to Orlando when it was ordered to Havana, Republic spokesman Walt Hellman said in Minneapolis.

The earlier Eastern flight, bound from Miami to Orlando, was commandeered by six disenchanted Cuban refugees, and was carrying 40 other passengers and a crew of six.

In the Tampa incident, also involving an Eastern plane, police Capt. Robert Percival, head of the airport detail, said four Cuban men were taken into custody without resisting.

"They had ... a plastic overnight bag and inside there was a Turkish towel, a pair of maroon coduroy trousers, two laundry bags and four plastic containers. Each held a quart of gasoline," Percival said. "They had no arms of any kind on them. ...

"It was a good job of screening by the personnel at Eastern," he added.

The crew and passengers on Eastern's hijacked Boeing 727 returned to Miami safely after three hours at Havana's Jose Marti International Airport. The hijackers, all men, were taken into custody by Cuban authorities after shaking hands and kissing women aboard the plane in a farewell gesture, passengers said.

The Spanish-speaking hijackers forced the plane off its route from Miami to Orlando, only two minutes after its 6:23 a.m. takeoff. They told crew members they would detonate a "Doodle Bug" they claimed was a bomb and would ignite a liquid they said was explosive, said FBI agent William Nettles.

Two of the hijackers sat in the cockpit, while the others paced nervously up and down the aisles, passengers said.

Ramon Losada, a Venezuelan passenger, translated for the crew and the hijackers who told him they were homesick.

FAA officials have refused to be specific about new anti-hijacking measures but said airport employees would be given a psychological profile of likely hijackers. Also proposed are body searches of people who meet the profile and placement of

Iranian Official Rejects U.S. Note

By The Associated Press

The speaker of the Iranian Parliament on Saturday thrust aside U.S. hopes that the recent release of 191 Iranian demonstrators in the United States would bring benefits for the 52 American hostages held in Iran.

Hojatoleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani referred to a U.S. State Department request that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime provide lawyers, clergymen and health care for the American hostages, held by Iranian militants since Nov. 4.

Terming the telexed American request "a kind of apology" for the arrests of Iranian protesters in Washington, Rafsanjani was quoted by the official Iranian news agency Pars as saying no comparisons could be drawn betweenthe Iranians and American "spies."

In other developments, Irdanian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr escaped unharmed when his helicopter made a crash landing and the Carter administration vehemently denied a report that President Carter was planning to invade Iran before the November presidential elections.

Bani-Sadr returned to Tehran Saturday night from the helicopter accident near the border with Iraq and Pars said a huge crowd greeted him at the airport and slaughtered sheep to celebrate his safe escape.

In Washington, a White House spokesman said the report by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson that Carter planned to invade Iran by mid-October was "absolutely false ... grotesque and totally irresponsible."

Rafsanjani, speakingof the Iranian demonstrators who were arrested in the U.S. capital July 27, said they were "students who went there to study, while those (hostages) on our side are spies who have interfered in the domestic affairs of our country by creating conspiracies. How can you expect such different cases to be treated equally?"

Rafsanjani said the American hostages were being treated well, but he again raised the threat of their possible trial by saying, "Files showed us your crimes toward our youth."

Rafsanjani previously had said Parliament was calling on judical officials to prepare the ground for a trial of the hostages.

Pars quoted the speaker as claiming that the latest American note also warned of American anger and "threatened that, if the situation continues in Iran...it is possible that the experienced events would be repeated again." He did not elaborate, but it was thought the phrase could have referred to an aborted American commando raid on April 24. Eight Americans died at a desert airstrip in Iran while planning to rescue the hostages.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman confirmed that a note had been sent to the Iranian government last week through the Swiss embassy.

George Havens, a press officer for the U.S. government's Iran task force, said the note suggested Iran treat the American hostages as the United States treated the Iranians by providing lawyers, clergymen and health care.

He declined to release the text of the note, which he said also outlined the facts about the detention of the Iranian demonstrators, who were released by U.S. immigration authorities Aug. 6.

Rafsanjani, according to Pars, also said he had received a letter from two unidentified U.S. Congressmen who thanked him "cunningly for having said in a speech that the letter of the U.S. Congress to the Islamic Consultative Assembly (parliament) would possibly become the starting point for the release of the American hostages. I have said no such thing."

The speaker said he merely had passed on the first letter, signed by some 200 U.S. Congressmen, to the Majlis - parliament -for consideration. He added, "But the wrongful actions of the United States, that is torturing (and) pressuring the Moslem students in such a cruel manner, simultaneously with sending the letter, created an atmosphere in the Majlis such that it essentially declined to reply to the letter and postponed it."

The letter from the American Congressmen was read before the Majlis on July 30.

Khomeini, meanwhile, hailed Bani-Sadr's escape from the helicopter crash as "a sign of the grace of God."

"The great (Iranian) nation, having witnessed this protection should rest assured that, while serving Islam, they cannot be

Suspect Arson In London Fire

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Fire roared through two adjoining social clubs during a farewell party early Saturday, killing at least 37 people, some trapped behind locked doors. Police, suspecting arson, launched a murder inquiry into what was one of the worst fires in London since World War II.

Shopowners said they tried to beat down the locked front door of the three-story building as the late-night revellers screamed for help. Victims were found huddled on the floor or still sitting in chairs.

At least 23 people were injured. Most of the victims were Spaniards or Latin Americans.

Most of the victims were trapped in the inferno or died as they tried to leap from windows of the clubs on the two upper floors of the gutted building in Denmark Street at the edge of Soho in London's West End.

Firemen continued to search for bodies, but a Scotland Yard spokesman said the toll of 37 dead was believed to be final.

Witnesses reported seeing at least one man flee along the sidewalk as the blaze erupted and the building — in the words of one fireman — "went up like a torch."

"It has now become a murder inquiry," a Scotland Yard spokesman told The Associated Press hours after the blaze.

Police said they had made no arrests. There was no immediate indication of a motive for the suspected attack on the clubs, named as "Rodos" and "Victor Gonzalez."

Several of the shaken survivors, some of whom were attending a farewell party for a Colombian woman, told police and reporters through interpreters they heard a loud bang seconds before the fire. They said they were convinced it was started by a homemade gasoline bomb.

Eduard Trujillo, 28, a Colombian waiter attending the farewell party, said: "It was a bomb, everywhere there was the smell of petrol and very black smoke. There was pandemonium — people screaming and plastic dripping from the ceiling of the club."

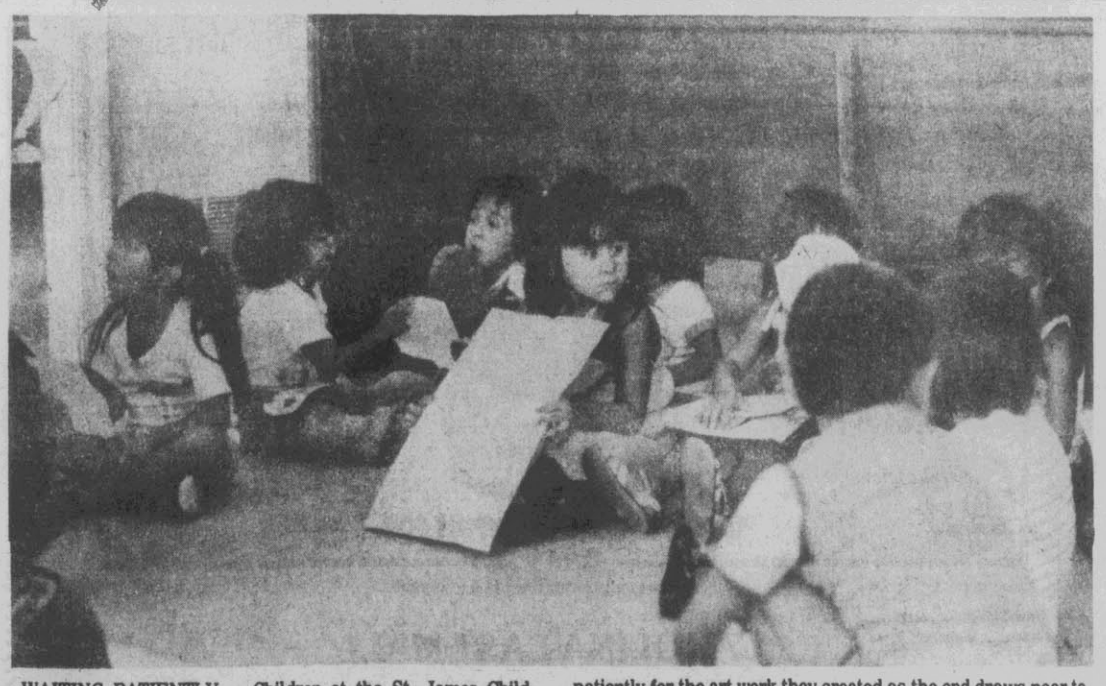
Fountain's Summer School For Children Of Migrant Workers



WAITING PATIENTLY — Children at the St. James Child Care Center for migrant workers' children, Fountain, wait patiently for the art work they created as the end draws near to the nine week summer program.

BY JILL ALLEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Instead of being left unattended and neglected while their parents are working in the fields to earn money for the bare necessities, migrant workers' children now have the chance not only to be accompanied by adults free of charge while their parents are working, but to be taught mentally and physically, allowing them to develop their full potential.

The program concerning migrant workers' children — The Migrant Head Start Program — is strictly a summer project, held June 16-August 15.

Being nation-wide, a center in Pitt County is located at the St. James Christian Church, Fountain. This particular one, only two years old, is the first and only in Pitt County.

The reason for starting it there, according to Yvonne Barnes, director of the Fountain center along with her husband, the Rev. Charles Barnes, is because their church (St. James) believes in serving people. "There are lots of disadvantages a child and the family have, since they're on the move all the time," she said, adding her husband made initial contacts.

The 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. day care center, funded through the East Coast Migrant Head Start Project, provided the children two meals daily in meeting the State Child Service Guidelines, plus medical and dental services, and an educational program.

The Fountain center, serving children ages three to five from Pitt, Wilson, and Nash counties, has a social worker who recruits the families, while a parent coordinator works with the parents with food and other needs.

The educational system — frustrating? — "Not at all," said Mrs. Barnes, stating records on each child are kept at the main center, Orlando, Fla. "When a family comes to us, records are sent along with them, providing us with educational and health services information," Barnes continued.

Most of the activities in which the children participated in are in accordance with what is called the Child Development Assessment, a program which helps develop balance and coordination. Walking on a balance beam, throwing a ball, and holding eating utensils, are some examples. "We have a manuel to go by in working with areas of cognition, social-emotional, motor skills, hygiene and self-help," she said. And for seeking strengths and weaknesses, an IEP (Individualized Educational Plan) is required on each child when he or she arrives.

The children, attending regular schools during the year, eventually move on with their families. But, that's not the last they see or hear from the program

Chun To Be Named Korean President

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean electoral college will convene next week to formally name Gen. Chun Doo-hwan as the nation's new president and this will eventually lead to the election of a new National Assembly, high official sources said Saturday.

They gave this timetable:

After Chun's formal election on Aug. 25 or 26, a national referendum would be held on a new constitution which provides, in its draft form, for a strong president limited to a single seven-year term.

In October or November elections will be held for new electoral college of 5,000 members, who would reconfirm Chun in office.

Shortly after this, the elections would be held for a National Assembly to replace the one that is now suspended.

Chun took a major step toward formalizing his control of the country as caretaker President Choi Kyu-hah resigned earlier in the day to set a "precedent of peaceful transfer of power."

In Washington, the U.S. State Department issued a statement expressing "deep concern" over Choi's resignation.

"We hope that today's step will not disrupt previously announced plans for constitutional revision and election of a broadly based government," the statement said.

It added that the United States many times had made clear that its view that movement toward "a broad-based civilian government" is essential to stability in South Korea.

"It is in this context that we view today's resignation with deep concern."

The statement added: "The selection of Korea's leaders and the nature of the new constitution to be adopted are of course matters to be resolved by the Korean people."

The 61-year-old Choi immediately was succeeded by acting Prime Minister Park Choong-hoon, as the constitution prescribes.

Park held a brief Cabinet session Saturday afternoon during which he reportedly admonished his ministers to be alert against "communist provocations." At the same time, his government reaffirmed South Korea's pro-American foreign policy.

Appealing for the public to remain calm, Park praised Chun for "speedily restoring political and social stability."

Choi wielded little real power during a presidency that lasted less than 10 months. He moved up from prime minister when President Park Chung-hee was assassinated Oct. 26.

Trujillo escaped by jumping 20 feet from a window along with compatriot Elizabeth Mercado, 30.

The fire was the worst in terms of casualties that police could recall in recent years. Some observers considered it the worst in the capital since the German bombings of World War II.

Alp Iskender, 26, on all-night duty at a nearby food takeout store, raced to the building within minutes of the blaze.

"I must have kicked that front door 50 times, but it wouldn't budge," said Iskender, a Turk.

"Flames were coming right out of the windows. I could hear these terrible screams. But that door wouldn't budge."

Other survivors said they made it down an internal fire escape, only to be confronted by two locked doors. They escaped by beating down two doors in a ground-floor music shop.

New Military Force

By DANIEL BEEGAN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A new military force that can send troops to the oil-rich Persian Gulf within hours will help deter Soviet aggression and protect petroleum supplies for the West, its commanding general said Saturday.

Marine Lt. Gen. Paul X. Kelly, who supervises the force of more than 200,000 men, said the combined Marine, Army, Air Force and Navy operation notifies the Soviets that the United States "will not tolerate military adventurism."

"Such threats to our friends and allies may constitute an assault on the vital interests of the United States, and when they do, we have a military capability to respond," he told the American Legion's National Security Commission.

Kelly said the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force, which was put into operation March 1, is made up of existing units within various branches of the military.

He said if an emergency develops that requires a quick U.S. military response, the units come under the command of the task force, adding: "Basically, we are a global force designed to cope with contingencies outside NATO and Korea."

Kelly said the task force would not be used in any attempt to rescue the hostages in Iran.

He said if military force was needed in the Persian Gulf area that includes Saudi Arabia and Iran, the Rapid Deployment Task Force could get the first tactical air forces there within hours.

Nettles said the FBI was concerned that more of the 118,000 Cubans who came to the United States this spring and summer might try skyjacking to return to their island homeland.

Some refugees have been unable to find new homes and jobs, while many left their families behind. Cuban President Fidel Castro has refused to consider taking any of the "anti-socials" back.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the hijackers threatened to blow up planes operated by Air Florida and National Airlines by lighting flammable liquids.

A bar of soap disguised as a bomb was used to divert another Air Florida flight last Sunday. In each case, the planes, passengers and crew returned safely to the United States and the hijackers were taken into custody by Cuban authorities.

harmed," Khomeini was quoted by Tehran Radio Saturday as messaging Bani-Sadr after the helicopter crash-landed near Iran's embattled border with Iraq late Friday. The crash officially was blamed on an engine malfunction.

Bani-Sadr earlier had been quoted by the radio as saying it "was a miracle and a sign of God's utmost mercy" that none of the passengers or crew was seriously injured.

Neither the official Iranian news agency Pars or Tehran Radio suggested the possibility that sabotage or ground fire could have caused the crash near Eslamabad in the border province of Kermanshah.

The border has been the scene of repeated clashes during the last year between Iraqi troops and Iranian revolutionary guardsmen.

A Tehran Radio report monitored in London said the helicopter lost its rotorand was seriously damaged, while three members of the presidential party suffered slight injuries.

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

Due to inflation many of you may have vacationed at home this year. If so, chances are a lot of time was spent in your yard thinking of ways in which you could make future vacations more enjoyable — setting up areas for such games as badminton or croquet. You may have also decided to landscape your yard for a more attractive and interesting look.

Even though it is still hot, now is a good time to begin planning your landscaping project for cool fall days. By waiting till fall to landscape, your plants have a chance to establish their proper root systems before next spring when rains become more plentiful.

You may consider turning your backyard into a private retreat by screening with shade trees and shrubs on the south and west sides. Add some flowering plants along with trees and shrubs for beautiful color and you will have a lovely place in which to spend those hot summer days next year. For extra pleasure and beauty, you could add statues or fountains.

Now is an excellent time to let Belk Tyler Garden Shops assist you with your landscaping needs.

There Was No Place Else To Go

President Carter didn't get everything he wanted out of the Democratic National Convention . . but he got what he wanted and needed most, that is a show of unity.

Even as the convention started last Monday there was still the question of whether it would blow sky high and leave Carter, perhaps with the nomination, but with a badly split and disloyal party. The vote on the "open" convention amendment Monday night quickly settled that. There was no doubt that the Carter forces were in control.

Tuesday night Ted Kennedy made his electrifying speech to the convention which could have further alienated the anti-Carter people, but didn't. Instead it focused strong attention on the man the Democrats consider the real enemy, Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan. Wednesday night Kennedy made it clear that he was supporting the Democratic party's nominee, Jimmy Carter. This was followed by an endorsement of the party's ticket by another former candidate, Edmond Brown, Jr.

Thus, as Carter made his acceptance speech on Thursday night there was enthusiasm from segments of the delegation that hadn't been enthusiastic before. The Kennedy supporters were resigned to waiting for four years, convinced that their man would have a superb chance of obtaining the nomination at that time.

A convention that many though would fall apart, concluded with a degree of oneness that was remarkable considering the diverse nature of the Democratic party. It had finally become clear to the various factions that there was now simply no place else to go . . . Jimmy Carter had to be the man.

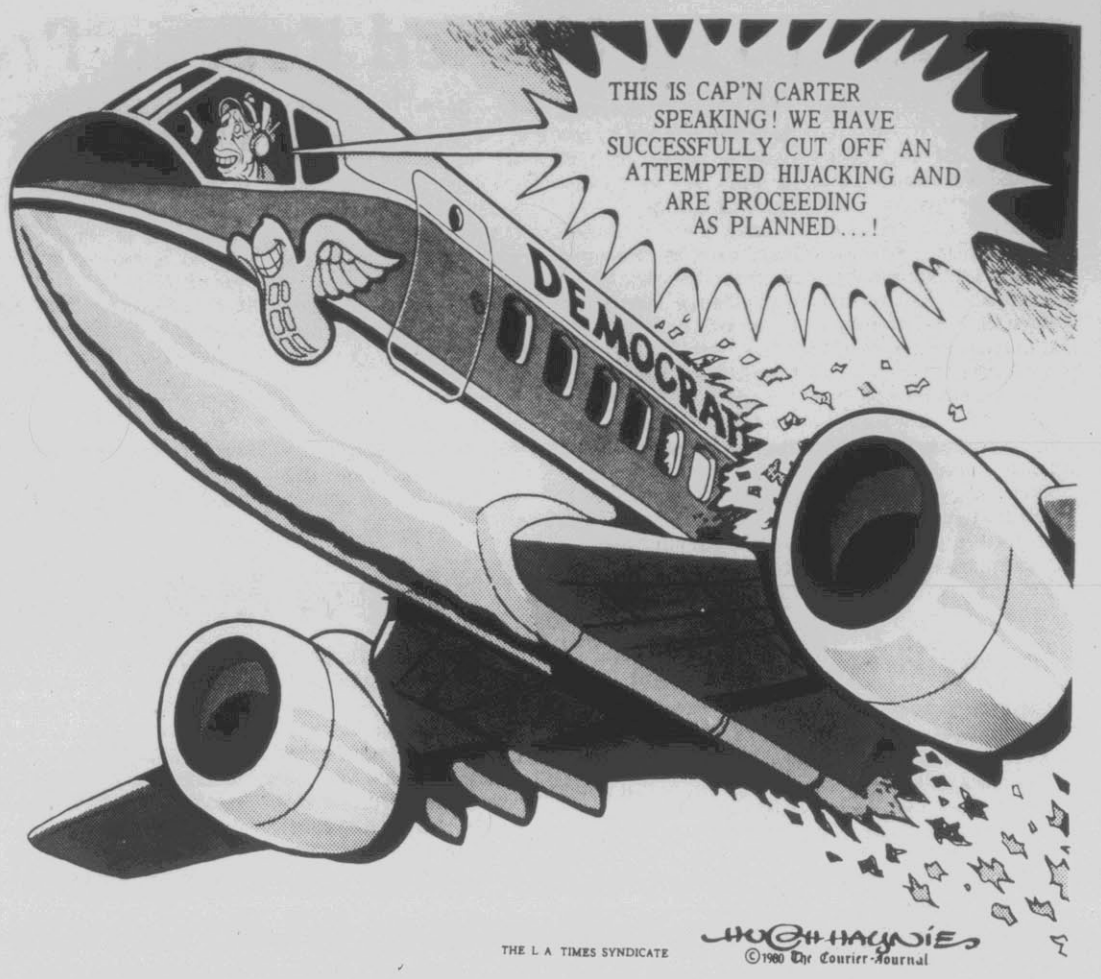
Some Platform Planks Need Forgetting

Party platforms can create convention fights, but they are documents nobody pays much attention to once the elections are over.

Nevertheless, what is put into those platforms should be carefully thought through.

The Democrats, for instance, should never have included in theirs a provision that party assistance should be withheld from candidates opposed to ERA.

Nor should they have included the plank calling for a $12 billion jobs program. Neither of these planks are very practical or very well thought-out. Hopefully, now that the convention is over and delegates have gone home, everyone will just forget them.



SUNDAY MORNING

New Cautions Needed

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Give credit to a tanker truck driver for the disturbing comment of the week. He says he can blow more than 6,000 gallons of hazardous chemicals out of his tank by speeding down the Interstate during a heavy rain.

And you'll never know it unless you happen to be driving behind his rig . . . and your windshield wipers start to melt.

Inventory

North Carolina is trying to take on as a state responsibility the federal requirement that a "cradle-to-grave" tracking system be established for hazardous wastes.

Judging from the reaction at a recent gathering of businessmen who had on their various desks the forms which would begin this inventory, it will take some hardnosed government work to get the imformation. The consensus was to toss the forms in the trash.

Tar Heel Wine

Among the attractions of this slice of land first noted by early settlers from Europe was the potential for growing grapes and making wine at least as good as that back home.

Indeed, some fine wines were made. And little known is the fact that North Carolina was the first in America to produce champagne; using the Scuppernogs of Halifax County back in 1835.

Prohibition and local resistance to making alcoholic drinks scuttled the industry; California and New York became the leaders.

But this fall, Duplin Wine Cellars will have North Carolina champagne back on the market.

And in the high country, vineyards are being groomed and plans made to produce marketable quantities of Chateau Biltmore, from the grounds of Biltmore House at Asheville. Limited bottles are currently avalible but largescale production will be five to 10 years away.

Who Leads

A Wayne county businessman, concerned with the actions of the General Assembly earlier this year, writes wondering at the salary and fringe benefits being "indiscriminately awarded to governmental employees."

BILL NOBLITT

It is not, he says, so much that the government employees received a raise, but that "governmental workers, with the many fringe benefits offered are being compensated to the extent that we, as business people, cannot compete with the government in the hiring process

"To me, it is ironic that the taxpayers in business are forced to pay increasing taxes for these salary supplements and yet find it difficult to pay our own personal competitive wage, including the benefits."

A major concern: "There was a time when citizens looked upon government as serving the people; many now believe the reverse has happened and the people are servient to big government."

Businessmen can look for more of the same in the future as state and federal governments continue to follow the path of leading in benefits for employees. Now being talked are split shifts, flex-time, and share-jobs for mothers so they can tend the children and hold a job; such innovative scheduling arrangements being seen by some as essential both to getting women to work, and to raising kids properly.

Sunday Morning Notes

As the awesome power of Hurricane Allen built in the Carribbean, reference was made in news stories to Hazel.

Hazel was, indeed, a hurricane, one which made believers out of the residents of Eastern North Carolina.

It, too, built up in the Carribbean, but its course was scarcely followed by the people of this area. After all, hurricanes were something that hit Florida and they could never do major damage as far inland as Pitt County.

On Monday, Oct. 11 an article in "The Daily Reflector" placed the giant hurricane as threatening Haiti and moving in a northeasterly direction. By Oct. 14 Hurricane Hazel was moving on the North Carolina capes with winds up to 130 miles per hour. It was expected at that time to pass over the outer banks.

On Oct. 15, however, a headline said that the local Civil Defense had been mobilized to cope with potential storm problems. The hurricane had hit the coast of North Carolina and was moving inland.

Hazel hit the area full force. Damage was estimated in Greenville at half a million dollars with warehouses damaged, hangers wrecked at the Pitt-Greenville airport, and damage the the midway at the fairgrounds where the fair was in progress. Mostly, though it was a big mess, with trees and limbs down everywhere, power lines down in many locations and phone lines hopeless snarled.

The newspaper quoted then City Manager James Hughes, "My guess is that it will take two to three weeks to clean up the mess that has been made."

From Washington and New Bern reports came that water had backed up into business streets, and severe damage was reported from Morehead City.

Later it was reported that 18 deaths were attributed to the hurricane in North Carolina and unlimited federal aid was authorized.

Hazel was the first of several hurricanes which struck the coast and Eastern North Caroilina over the next several years. Why the east

A New Man In Hunt

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a national convention, a defeated candidate told in poetry of the wounds of defeat — and of the promise of another quest for the presidential prize he could not reach that night.

That was Ronald Reagan's role four years ago.

Now it may be Edward M. Kennedy's.

Even allies of President Carter are suggesting that in 1984, the senator from Massachusetts will be the dominant Democrat. It may not be so; political fortunes can rise and fall in a month, and four years is a lifetime for a potential candidate.

Kennedy's supporters are ready to try again although the Massachusetts senator, up for re-election in 1982, hasn't spoken of the next presidential campaign.

He clearly was the emotional favorite of the Madison Square Garden convention that denied his challenge to Carter's renomination.

They never roared louder than for Kennedy. It took prompting from the band and cheerleading on the floor to turn on ovations for winner Carter.

Even when Carter and Vice President Walter F. Mondale stood triumphant in renomination Thursday night, it was Kennedy's appearance at their side that stirred the convention into tumult.

"We want Ted," came the chant from the floor as Carter, Mondale, and a stage full of Democratic officeholders waved to the crowd in a show of unity behind the ticket.

When they got him, Kennedy's fans set off a roaring ovation for the loser, the loudest of the night on which Carter claimed his own triumph.

National Security Fight

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NEW YORK — As Sen. Edward M. Kennedy withdrew from the presidential race and party leaders proclaimed a new "unity," the party was continuing its 12-year-old struggle over national security policy in skirmishes all the way from Madison Square Garden to Kennebunk, Maine.

While trying to ignore the presence of the Russian Bear, the 3,300 delegates in New York were preparing to act as a deliberative body to decide whether the most important new weapons system of President Carter's administration, the MX mobile missile, should be condemned. Meanwhile, two high administration officials were arriving in Maine to soothe Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie's fury, worked up by McGovernites in the State Department, over Carter's new nuclear strategy.

The delegates will leave New York with the post-Vietnam split papered over at best, or possibly ruptured further. That split dwarfs the philosophical division on display last month at the Republican convention over equal rights for women. On the transcendent issues of foreign policy, the Republican Party has united behind Ronald Reagan; on those same issues at Madison Square Garden, the Democrats were no less divided than they have been ever since their tormented 1968 convention in Chicago.

Amidst perfunctory assaults on Reagan and pro-ERA demonstrations, an intimation that the U.S. is in a world struggle with the Soviet Union was delivered to unlistening delegates by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan. He chose an expedient rhetorical device, coined by the late Sen. George Aiken, who said of Vietnam, claim victory and get out. Moynihan's Monday night speech claimed Jimmy Carter has seen the truth of the Soviet threat and is organizing the U.S. to contain it.

It was not merely that the delegates who stuck around after the suspense-ending rules fight Monday night had no interest in Moynihan's warnings about the world struggle. A majority probably did not approve of Carter's new world posture, as described by Moynihan. The substantial opposition to MX reflects that.

But the dispatch of two aircraft from the Defense and State Departments to Muskie's summer home in Maine suggests Moynihan was overoptimistic. With the nuclear-strategy directive signed by the president himself last month, the backfire started at the State Department. Former foreign policy advisers to Sen. George McGovern, hired for top posts in Carter's fledgling administration, fueled it. They never have accepted the reality of Moscow's expansionism and have goaded Muskie into outrage over the new policy.

But even Carter's own

The Top Onion

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

This is the season when citizens feel impelled to check upon the behavior of Mother Nature in dealing with numerous products of the soil.

Ther must be a report on the biggest tomato, the juciest apple, the greatest watermelon, the finest potato and in Vidalia, Ga., the "sweetest onion in the land."

The word from Savannah is that the Vidalia onion this year won by an onion skin over an entry from Walla Walla, Wash., called the Blue Mountain Bruiser in the annual contest to determine the sweetest onion of them all.

The victory was especially sweet for Vidalia because the Walla Walla onion had won by a tiny margin in the previous contest. The test came about after the WALL STREET JOURNAL had proclaimed the Vidalia strain the "caviar of onions."

Folks hereabouts, who are privileged to enjoy the samples of the Vidalia onion brought here by friends visiting the Georgia community, will readily attest to the sweetness of the Vidalia Strain.

And during the onion season it is not uncommon to find all sorts of businesses in Vidalia, from drug stores to service stations, having those delicious onions for sale.

Thus all of us who really know are happy over the Vidalia victory over that upstart from the West Coast.

Meanwhile, the battle rages over other products and we expect momentarily to hear from that Edgecombe County watermelon grower that he has again surpassed his own record by producing a watermelon big as an outhouse.

Giving blood is easy.

Needing it is hard.

We're counting on you.

Strength For Today

CLOUDS OF WITNESSES

According to an old Scottish story, a Highland chief by the name of MacGregor fell wounded in a mighty battle, and his followers began to give way before the enemy. The old chieftain, seeing this, raised himself on his elbow and cried in a strident voice, "I am not dead, my brothers; I am looking to you to see that you do your duty." The conclusion of this story is, of course, that confidence went through the ranks and that his followers won the day.

The Bible speaks of our being surrounded by a great cloud of witnesses. Not a crowd of witnesses, but a cloud, referring to the saints and martyrs, to the good men and women who have passed on before, to loved ones who are eagerly watching the lives of those whom they left only a short time ago. When we are tempted to give up we should remember the host of loved ones, who, even though they are silent, are saying to us, "I am looking at you in the hour of trial, pain, and temptation, to see that you fail not.

Rental Car Costs Are Rising

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone who rents cars knows his expenses have been rising. Daily insurance rates are up. Mileage charges of 35 cents are now common. And gasoline from the renter might cost $1.50 a gallon.

But when you complain to them, the renters can match you woe for woe.

"I've got two cars totaled out back," said one renter when the customer complained about $5-a-day insurance. He added: "And if you don't charge mileage the customer will run the car into the ground."

But apparently there is a way to save, and the Hertz Corporation's annual study of vehicle costs — its stupifying statistical smorgasbord,as it has been called — inadvertently offers one possibility.

"Average passenger-car cost-per-mile jumped 3.8 cents or 16.4 percent from 22.8 cents in 1978 to 26.6 cents in 1979," Hertz said this week. Cost-per-car was up $260 or 12.4 percent from $2,092 to $2,352.

It explained: "Expenses for new vehicles are substantially higher than the averages, but cost of older units is usually somewhat less."

"The explosive rise in gasoline and diesel fuel prices," was cited as an important reason for the higher operating costs. But even though this category amounted to $104 billion, it wasn't the biggest item.

What was? Depreciation. "Depreciation continues to lead in total expenses, and in 1979 was up some $13.4 billion to $129.2 million, an 11.6 percent increase," the Hertz report stated.

If this is so, there is reason to wonder why the big rental companies don't attempt to cut down on depreciation and other expenses.

Why should fleets consist mainly of current-year models when, as the Hertz report says, the operating costs of older units is often less?

And, if depreciation is the costliest operating factor, why offer current-year models on which depreciation is the greatest?

Local rental companies long ago discovered such economies, and some franchisers too. In Tuscon, Ariz., Tom Duck boasts that his Ugly Duckling Rental Co. will cover the country with franchised outlets.

In the New York metropolitan area, a Rent-A-Wreck outlet offers four and five-year-old cars for under $100 a week with 700 "free" miles. Most new-car outlets quoted prices more than at double that rate.

Undertandably, many business customers prefer new vehicles and they are willing to pay for them. But not all customers need new vehicles, especially when it is possible to rent used cars at much lower prices.

Used cars need not be without class and style, and they need not be dirty either. Those who rent them insist they are able to keep them in dependable working order for at least several years.

They are able to charge less because, as Hertz suggests, they don't suffer the tremendous first-year depreciation that is incurred by the big national chains that offer new or slightly used vehicles.

With most businesses and individuals looking for ways to cut expenses, it seems likely they will be taking a closer look at rental costs, in which first-year depreciation plays so large a role.

Many will decide it suits their interests to continue renting current models, but a good many also are likely to ask themselves if a slightly older vehicle at a markedly lower rental cost doesn't make sense.

Backers Want Demo V-P

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — As speculation mounts over John Anderson's selection of a vice presidential running mate, his supporters, by a 3-to-1 ratio, say they would prefer the independent presidential candidate to choose a Democrat rather than a Republican to round out his ticket.

In a nationwide Gallup Poll completed last Sunday, 47 percent of registered voters who choose Anderson in a test election against Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter say they would be more likely to vote for the Illinois congressman if he selects a Democrat for the No. 2 spot on his ticket while 16 percent indicate their preference for a Republican. Of the balance, 29 percent say the political affiliation of Anderson's running mate will not affect their feelings and 8 percent had no opinion.

Anderson is expected to name his vice presidential choice in the very near future. At least 20 names have been advanced as possibilities. Those mentioned prominently include New York Gov. Hugh Carey and Boston Mayor Kevin White, both Democrats.

Anderson Campaign Falters

Anderson's choice of a running mate may be particularly relevant — even crucial — at this time. In the latest test election Anderson receives 14 percent of the vote to 45 percent for Ronald Reagan and 31 percent for Jimmy Carter. This is the first time support for Anderson has fallen much below the 20 percent plateau he has maintained in the course of eight earlier Gallup trial heats.

While the fall-off in the Anderson vote from the previous test election has occurred experienced among all population groups, it is most pronounced among registered voters who identify themselves as political independents, dropping from 33 percent in a mid-July Gallup Poll to 22 percent in the current survey.

Not only has the Anderson vote dropped sharply in the latest test election, but only 14 percent of Anderson backers now say they STRONGLY support him compared to 31 percent who made the same claim in the mid-July survey, a decline of 17 points. The comparable drop in enthusiastic support for Carter is 10, and for Reagan, three percentage points.

Another campaign development that adds urgency to Anderson's need to generate more public support for his candidacy is that in order to qualify for a forthcoming series of televised debates sponsored by the League of Women Voters he must demonstrate substantial public backing at the end of this month.

Some analysts feel that Anderson's sagging political fortunes can be bolstered by the selection of a strong vice presidential running mate. On the strength of the survey evidence at hand, it would appear that a Democrat would best fill that need.

Among the electorate as a whole, by a 3-to-2 ratio, voters say they would be more likely to support Anderson if he chooses a Democrat rather than a Republican to be his vice presidential nominee.

In the current survey, 18 percent of registered voters express a preference for a Democrat for the No. 2 spot on Anderson's ticket compared to 12 percent who would like to see a Republican in that role. However, six voters in 10, 62 percent, say either that they do not plan to back Anderson anyway or that the political affiliation of his running mate is immaterial to them.

Among college-educated and younger voters, both groups in which Anderson's candidacy has enjoyed its greatest support, opinion is more evenly divided but still favors a Democrat as Anderson's choice. However, among independents, who have provided much of the backbone for Anderson's quest for the presidency, the weight of opinion leans toward a Republican vice presidential choice.

Following is the question asked of registered voters to determine their preference for John Anderson's vice presidential candidate:

"Would you be more likely to vote for Anderson if he chooses a Democrat for his vice presidential running mate or more likely to vote for him if he chooses a Republican?"

Here are the national results:

Anderson V.P. Choice
(Views of registered voters)

More likely to vote for Anderson:
If he chooses a Democrat	18%
If he chooses a Republican	12
Makes no difference; not planning to vote for him anyway	62
No opinion	8

coast became hurricane alley, no one was quite certain, although there were theories about shifts of high jet streams drawing the storms this way.

Eventually, the storms returned to their traditional paths, either heading across Gulf or staying out at sea if they came up the eastern coast.

Anyone who was around when Hazel came is fully aware it can happen, and the power of a hurricane is awesome. Hence the interest in Allen or any other tropical storm which might develop in the Carribean.

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

The item in Tuesday's Hotline column regarding Extended Area Telephone Service is a welcome expression of interest in improving communications countywide.

Approximately six years ago we collected over 1000 signatures in Grifton, some in Ayden and a few in Greenville, requesting this srvice so that Griftonians would have the same access to county services as other taxpayers. We had numerous meetings with community and governmental leaders and telephone company representatives, and it finally boiled down to the statement by the phone representative that we would have to generate enough interest from Greenville telephone subscribers that the phone company would feel a survey mailed out would stand a reasonable chance of succeeding.

The recommendation was that all Greenville citizens who endorse the Extended Area Service should write a letter to the telephone company to put in their files. They said letters carried more weight than petitions, because they showed people were really committed if they took time to write a letter.

A delegation from Grifton met with the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, and we were told that steps would be taken through that group to get area businessmen to support Extended Area Service. Shortly after that, the reorganization of the Chamber took place, and I have often wondered if the telephone project ever was given any further consideration.

The problem facing little Fountain and little Grifton is taht we need and want access to county tax-supported services such as Social Services, Extension Office, hospital, sheriff, school administrative offices, library, Council on Aging, etc. and these agencies spend money contacting Griftonians and Fountainers at long distance rates. Yet the average Greenville area citizen doesn't really care that much about contact with our little towns. Doctors and other professional people, businessmen and others who recognize the advantages of toll-free contact countywide can help make this come about by mailing letters of endorsement to the telephone company and asking others to do the same.

Asheville Crash Killed New Navy Secretary

By NOEL YANCEY

Pinest Howard had stopped his taxi for a red light in Hendersonville around noon on July 19, 1967 when he noticed "this little plane and it appeared to be heading right into the side of a jet" airliner that had just taken off from the Asheville airport.

"The planes smashed together in what looked like a big red ball," Howard told a reporter. "The jet nosed over and started spiraling around as it fell to earth."

". . . A big plume of black smoke shot into the skies" when the Piedmont Airlines Boeing 727 smashed to the ground in the worse air crash in North Carolina history. Eighty-two persons — 79 aboard the airliner and three occupants of the smaller one — were killed.

The dead included John T. McNaughton who had recently been appointed Navy secretary, his wife, Sarah, and their 11-year-old son, Ted. The McNaughtons had boarded the plane at Asheville minutes before the crash. They visited the area to pick up Ted, who had been at summer camp. The death of McNaughton, who had served for three years as assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, brought expressions of sorrow from President Lyndon Johnson and from Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara.

Another witness, Thomas A. Conner, 39, said his 12-year-old son, Alden, had yelled, "Look, daddy, that little plane is going to hit the big one." Conner said that after the impact, the airliner made a sharp turn, as if trying to reach nearby Interstate Highway 26.

But the frantic efforts of the pilot to land the big plane were thwarted by explosions which sent pieces of wreckage and bodies streaming from the stricken craft.

"A thousand pieces fell from the plane," recalled Clarence Huder who lived nearby.

Wreckage from the fiery crash showered down within 50 yards of a summer camp occupied by 145 teenagers and their counselors. One counselor who was with 20 girls at a lake about 400 yards from the crash, ordered her charges to get under canoes to avoid falling debris. Another counselor threw a small boy to the ground and protected him with his body.

Don Bailey of Black Mountain described the scene as "just full of bodies everywhere — along the highway, on the median, inside homes and strewn all around."

Charlotte Crawford, who lived near the crash scene, came home two hours later and found a body which had plummeted through the roof of her house. "Oh my God. Tell me it's not true," she screamed as she ran from the house.

The Federal Aviation Administration immediately pointed the finger of blame on the pilot of the small plane, a twin-engine Cesna 310 which also was carrying

Sallam Center Serves Durham Community

DURHAM — He arrived dramatically in Durham in 1974 — swept away from a Baltimore street corner and a herion habit by an old friend and fellow musician, Imam Kenneth Muhammad, who headed the local Islamic temple, the Masjid Muhammad of Durham.

Yusuf and another addict-musician-friend, Brother Daud, "came down here and kicked cold turkey" in a sudden move which has transformed both the men and the community they adopted.

Today, coffee with honey — not sugar — is the strongest drug Brother Yusuf Salim will touch. He is now one of the three owners of the Sallam cutural Center — a resturant, non-alcoholic nightclub and showcase for local jazz and blues musicians. The Center also serves as headquarters for Brother Yusuf's many civic projects.

He is still a musician, too, appearing with Yusuf and Friends, an often-varied assortment of jazz musicians. Brother Daud is percussionist for the group.

Yusuf's talent on the keyboards has made a favorite in other area nightspots, too — as well as at a variety of festivals and benefits to which he frequently donated his services. He recently hosted the "Yusuf and Friends" television series on jazz, which was filmed at the Sallam Center and aired on the local educational network. And he occasionally conducts workshops with aspiring musicians.

Running the Sallam Center itself keeps Brother Yusuf and his two partners busy. The restuarant/nightclub opened formally in 1978, but much planning and physical labor had already taken place. The three owners scavenged all kinds of items for the kitchen, the stage, and dining area — and have used them impressively. Yusuf descibes how, for example he tacked seemingly miles of looped cord to decorate the buildings high ceilings — only to have to take it all down again (on orders from the local fire inspector), fireproof it, and tack it all back up — a process which would have discouraged a less dedicated or less energetic person.

The Sallam Center is located in a low income neighborhood where recent efforts toward revitalization benefited from Yusuf's presence. Through the Sallam he has brought business and art into the area, as well as bringing many kinds of people together. Yusuf also holds office in such civic organizations as the Carolina Builders Institute (which rehabilitates housing while providing training and jobs), the West End Community Action Group, the Durham Neighborhood Council, a local halfway house, and the Islamic Community. Durham citizens often see Brother Yusuf at City Hall, speaking on behalf of these causes.

All this activity has brought Brother Yusuf a good deal of publicity, but he does not mind tackling the most humble tasks. He is still seen regularly, broom in hand, sweeping up the trash in the streets near his house and business, stopping to greet neighbors along the way. He feels that with his broom, he can set a positive example which will get other people concerned about their community. And, in fact, this philosophy has had results, especially among the neighboor's youth: for the past two summers, the kids in Clean-Up Squad have been actively working to make the area safer and more attractive.

The idea to organize the Clean-Up Squad came to Yusuf when he noted that lots of kids were hanging around the streets outside the Sallam with nothing to do. Few of their parents could send them anywhere for the summer and there's not much of a job market for six-to-13 years olds in Durham. So Brother Yusuf stepped in with brooms, rakes and encouragement. The group even has its own song, "It's the Clean-Up Squad, you'd better watch out . . ."

People from other parts of Durham, and other cities, have come to Yusuf for advice on setting up similar groups. Others have offered to help the Squad on special projects such as painting murals. Oddly, though, efforts to get city funding for the program have not met with success.

Brother Yusuf greets everyone as "Sister" or "Brother," and often includes a friendly hug. On one of his visits to the Durham City Council, requesting funds for the clean-Up Squad, he hugged a liberal-leaning councilman, who turned beet-red. But the councilman recognized Yusuf and praised his work in the community. Yusuf has confidence in his ability to reach anyone: "Give me a little time with a Klansman — I'll make him turn in his card."

BIG JOB FOR A LITTLE FELLA!

By Gail Michaels

Columnist Is Finally Driven To Drink

By GAIL MICHAELS

Having children has driven me to drink. I now require at least a half gallon of coffee to make it through the day.

I'd like to break the habit, but coffee is the only effective substitute I know for sleep. And as a nursing mother who, according to doctor estimates, requires about 10 hours of sleep a day, I've got to have some way to make up for at least five.

I used to do it with a nap. When Meg was smaller, napping took precedence over everything including Phil Donahue. But there came a time when Meg refused to go to bed without a fight. I could make her lie there, but I couldn't make her sleep. And with her long sighs, her methodical kicks on the wall, and her trills on the venetian blinds, I couldn't sleep either.

Since Zachary's arrival, things have been twice as bad. Not only does he keep me awake half the night, but he always seems to target as social hour those rare occasions during the day when his sister does doze off.

Now I'm so used to stumbling through the day without respite that even when I manage to get them both down, I can't fall asleep myself. Naturally, Phillip blames it on the coffee. "If you didn't drink so much, you'd be able to sleep when they do."

"I don't believe that. Besides, what happens during the typical day when there's no opportunity for napping? What kind of effect do you think it will have on the children — seeing their mother degenerate from morning imbecility to afternoon lunacy?"

As usual, he was so positive that he finally swayed me. "I'll help you out. I'll take care of the kids on Saturday, and all you have to do is go without coffee and let your mind dwell on pleasant soporific thoughts."

So on Saturday I martyred myself. As long as no one spoke to me that morning, I remained in complete control, except for a slight foaming at the mouth. At 1 p.m. Phillip recommended that I open my eyes long enough to walk into the bedroom and take a nap.

At his suggestion I tried to lull myself to sleep with the thought of a cool mountain stream rippling between snow-covered banks. That reminded me of the Swiss Alps . . . where my sister is in school . . . who is going to spend Christmas in Georgia with my parents . . . whom I was visiting the next week . . . and I hadn't paid for the airplane tickets yet . . . and the money was due the next day . . . the same day the utility bill was due . . . which I hadn't paid either.

Suddenly I was overwhelmed by the thought that when I got to the airport my seats would be taken by someone else and I'd have to return to a house without power.

I stumbled into the den. "I've got to pay the bills," I explained.

"Good grief!" Phillip snorted, "Can't you ever take my advice? Go back to bed, and I'll pay the bills!"

Obviously the mountain streams were out, so this time I thought of the the ocean . . . and our plans to go to the beach over Labor Day . . .

An hour later I awoke. My smiling husband was standing over me. "It sure looked as if your dreams were sweet."

"They were. I was dreaming about our trip to the beach. I dreamed we were driving down a long monotonous stretch of highway . . ."

"So far so good."

". . . and we stopped at a little stand with a big sign out front." I smacked my lips.

"Well, what did it say?"

"Free coffee."

On Paper, Carter Has The Look Of A Shoo-In

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

NEW YORK — On paper, it should be easier this time for Jimmy Carter. Four years ago he was still Jimmy Who, running against an incumbent president. Today he is himself the incumbent president, running against Ronald Reagan, the onetime actor. On paper, it ought to be a shoo-in.

But paper calculations sometimes will not compute. Mr. Carter is trying to grow corn in hard clay; he has a tough row to hoe. If the campaign of independent John Anderson should catch fire, it is conceivable that Mr. Carter could follow in the ignominious footsteps of William Howard Taft. Back in 1912, in a three-way race, the incumbent President Taft wound up with only the eight electoral votes of Utah and Vermont. It could happen again.

Mr. Carter came to the White House with certain self-evident problems. He still has them. He was the outsider then, the new boy on the block; he still is. When he took office in 1977, he had no constituency on Capitol Hill; he has none to this day. He beat Gerald Ford on his own, and thus he owed nothing to anyone; but as Meg Greenfield has observed, no one owed him anything either. This state of affairs continues.

Four years ago Mr. Carter had roughly the same large black vote that George McGovern had received in 1972, but Mr. Carter had something more: He had a tremendous outpouring of white Southerners who in 1972 had gone for Richard Nixon. Mr. Carter came out of the South with 111 electoral votes. Will the white South stick with him this November? It seems unlikely. Southerners have made the point that "one of our boys" can win the White House. We can expect some reversion in the South to the voting patterns of 1964, 1968 and 1972. Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi appear especially vulnerable to Republican efforts.

The president has other problems as serious as his problem in holding a Southern base. One of the oldest rules of the political game is that gratitude vanishes after the first quarter. The question is not, "What have you done for me?" but, "What have you done for me lately?" Mr. Carter has appointed half of all the black judges ever to serve on the federal bench; he has named 35 of the 39 women judges. But he is in deep political trouble with the blacks, who gave him 82 percent of their vote four years ago, and the women's organizations are forever denouncing the inadequacy of his assistance to them.

The Jewish vote is significant in Florida, New York, Southern California and Illinois. In 1976, Mr. Carter claimed an estimated 64 percent of this vote. Can he hold it in 1980? Most observers, remembering the president's fumbling on a key resolution in the United Nations, expect some disaffection here.

Organized labor offers yet another area of unease. After sitting out the 1972 campaign, labor leaders came back to life for Mr. Carter in 1976. The president dutifully championed their causes on Capitol Hill — labor reform, common site picketing, cargo preference, a new Consumer Protection Agency. One by one the causes collapsed. Mr. Carter lacked the leadership — and the Democratic votes — to push them to enactment.

Opposed to these weaknesses, the president has obvious political strengths. He is a formidable campaigner. He has a kind of almanac mind, packed with facts and statistics; this could serve him well in the upcoming debates against Mr. Reagan. He has learned to use the powers of his incumbency. The liberal Democrats who wept for Senator Kennedy on Tuesday night may go in part to Mr. Anderson, but they are more likely to swallow their resentments and stick with Mr. Carter.

For my own part, I doubt that we will see the pattern of 1912 repeated. John Anderson is no Teddy Roosevelt. My guess is that the Anderson campaign will fade as the weeks go by. Money is the mother's milk of politics, and without federal funds a pernicious anemia can be predicted. By November 4, barring unforeseeable scandals or blunders, it will be Carter and Reagan, head to head. It will be a hard fight, but it won't be a dull one.

two Missouri businessmen. "The smaller plane was off its normal course of flight — about six miles off course," said an FAA spokesman. The FAA later said it was 12 miles off course.

But the National Transportation Safety Board launched an intensive investigation to pinpoint the cause of the crash, worst in the nation that year. A task force of investigators sent to Hendersonville was headed by John Reed, a board member and former governor of Maine.

"A great deal of attention will be directed in the immediate future to air traffic control, particularly around major airports," Reed told reporters as he embarked on the investigation. A little over a year later, the NTSB announced its findings.

It said the probable cause "was the deviation of the Cesna from" its assigned course "resulting in a flight path into air space allocated to the Piedmont Boeing 727. The reason for such deviation cannot be specifically or positively identified." It said that "minimum control procedures utilized by the FAA in the handling of the Cesna were a contributing factor."

Meanwhile, the crash had resulted in the filing of 101 lawsuits in U.S. District Court at Asheville. These suits asked for the award of damages totaling milllions of dollars.

But an effort recently to find out the amounts paid to the heirs of the victims ran into a blank wall.

The 101 lawsuits were settled out of court, mostly in July of 1971 — four years after the crash — and the court records were sealed.

"There is no way you can find out," said an employee in the clerk of court's office. She was right, but I bet some insurance companies paid plenty.

Mears Col...

"Ted," the president had said in his speech accepting renomination, "there is no doubt that even greater service lies ahead of you ..."

That does not foretell the next campaign. The cheers that were Kennedy's in New York may belong to someone else in 1984. Should Carter's ticket reverse the pollsters' odds and win on Nov. 4, Mondale could be a powerful competitor for the next nomination. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. already hints at another campaign, saying there aren't many other routes to advancement in his chosen career.

And there are new names, new voices waiting to be heard — Democratic senators, governors, candidates not yet evident.

Carter has said he will do nothing to stand in Kennedy's way next time. The fact is that he probably will if he can. For all his claims of amity and friendship, Carter doesn't forget a grudge, and he has more than one against the Massachusetts senator who challenged him, denounced him, likened him to Herbert Hoover and called him a Reagan clone.

But presidents seldom have much luck when they try to influence the choice of their successors. And Carter will have to win an uphill re-election campaign, then fashion a successful second term, to have any clout at all.

For the Democrats, win or lose in 1980, the next nomination will be an open contest, and there's no better way to attract a candidate crowd.

Still, the Reagan story could become the Kennedy story. In defeat at the Republicans' Kansas City convention, Reagan, too, was cheered more lustily than Gerald R. Ford, the president he challenged but could not defeat.

"Lay me down and bleed a while," Reagan told his supporters, in the words of a Scottish ballad. "Though I am wounded, I am not slain.

"I shall rise and fight again."

Kennedy exited with poetry, too:

"To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

Then he spoke of the future.

"For me, a few hours ago, this campaign came to an end," he said. "For all those whose cares have been our concern, the work goes on, the cause endures, the hope still lives, and the dream shall never die."

That was on Tuesday night. A night later, Kennedy, the loyal Democrat, endorsed the Carter ticket and promised to campaign for the president. That will stand him well should he indeed run again.

In his own defeat, Reagan endorsed Ford, and in the campaign that followed, he did some work for the ticket. Ford lieutenants said he didn't do much; Reagan always insisted he did all he was asked.

Evans-Novak Col. ...

political advisers are ambivalent about defense and reluctant to accept Moynihan's formulation. Besides seeking to conciliate the Kennedy delegates, they still feel the best way to cut Reagan down to size is to brand him as a warmonger.

The political problem was well put by one of Carter's senior aides here: While a majority of Americans accept the "military superiority" promise of the Republican platform, this aide believes that that ground can be won in the election by accusing Reagan of resuming an arms race.

All this shows the elements of farce behind the claims of "unity" filling Madison Square Garden. What really exists here is a listlessness, pessimism and lack of passion. "We aren't addressing ourselves to what America is really worried about," a Carter administration official confided to us on the Garden floor Monday night.

The most important of these worries, whether rank-and-file Democrats fully realize it, is the nation's deteriorating position in the world. It is on this issue that Democrats cannot come to terms. As compared with this tragic inability of the world's oldest political party to unite on America's place in the world, the withdrawal of Teddy Kennedy was merely a confirmation of Carter's renomination. How to play the Russian threat remains as obscured by the Democrats as it has been since Vietnam.

City School Bd. Acted On Personnel, Food Bids

By JILL ALLEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Board of Education met Friday at a special call meeting to take action on personnel resignations and food service.

Regarding personnel, one resignation, eight elections, and two maternity leaves were approved by board members after Dr. John Tinglestadt moved to accept the recommendations.

On action to approve bids for food service items for the 1980-81 school year, the board accepted lowest bid on several food items. these were:

— Bread Items — Franklin Bakery bread products: loaf bread, 52 cents; hot dog buns (one package), 55 cents; hamburger buns (one package), 54 cents; and hoagie buns (one package) 46 cents.

Other bidders on bread bids were Dainty Maid, Merita and Holsum.

— Milk Items — Carolina Dairy milk products: milk (one-half pint), 12.96 cents; ice cream sandwich (per dozen), $1.88; chocolate ice cream, (small size containers) $1.88; and nutty buddies, $1.88. (per dozen).

Other bidders for milk products were Maola, Sealtest, and Farmville Dairies.

There was little discussion on the food service matter, except the questioning of nutrients present in the bread products. Superintendent Glenn Cox said there were no differences in the quality of the breads.

The next board meeting will be held Aug. 25, 8 p.m., at Elmhurst School.

BUGLE REST — Terri Willet would probably explain that she's just marching to a different drummer. The bugler found a more comfortable position for practice at Furman University' drum and bugle camp. (AP Laserphoto)

Fuller Named Chairman

Dr. Frank G. Fuller was elected chairman of the Public Transportation Commission recently, while Richard Blake was elected vice chairman.

Fuller, a former member of the City Council, has served as a member of the commission since January of 1978. He is counselor of education at East Carolina University.

Blake, who serves as assistant to the chancellor at ECU, has been a member of the commission since February of 1976.

A new appointee to the commission is Mrs. Rhea Markello. A graduate of the Millard Fillmore Hospital School of Nursing, she is presently enrolled at ECU as a political science major. She serves as secretary of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County.

The PTC serves as an advisory body to the council on all matters affecting the city's public transit system and its operation.

Attorney's Statement Clarified

David Leech, an attorney who represented several property owners on Rock Springs Road in opposing the proposed development of townhouses at the end of Edgewood Circle just east of Green Mill Run, said that he was not referring to the Green Mill Run Apartments property when he stated at Wednesday's planning board meeting that during periods of heavy rains, property around Green Mill Run is under water "a good deal of the time."

Leech, who was quoted in Thursday's edition regarding the meeting, said that he was referring in his statement to the area proposed for townhouse development on the east side of the mill run. Green Mill Run Apartments are located on the west side of the mill run.

Flushing To Continue

The continuing flushing program involving the city's water distribution system will focus on the third phase area bordered on the north by the Tar River, on the south by Tenth Street and Highway 33, on the west by Elm Street, and on the east to the system end.

The third phase will begin tonight at 10 p.m. and conclude on or before 6 a.m. on Friday, Aug. 22, according to Wadie Lewis, superintendent of Greenville Utilities' Water and Sewer Department.

Lewis said the flushing is performed between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. on Sunday nights through Friday mornings in an effort to minimize the inconvenience to area citizens and businesses.

Court Upholds Rape Victim Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Supreme Court Friday upheld a 1977 law which protects rape victims from questions dealing with their prior sexual behavior.

In making its first ruling on the constitutionality of the Rape Victim Shield Law, the court turned down the argument of Terry Lee Fortney that the law which "prevents him from automatically questioning a prosecuting witness about her prior sexual experience" violates his constitutional rights because it compromises "his right to confront the witness against him."

Associate Justice J. Phil Carlton said the Fortney was "mistaken on several grounds.

"First, there is no constitutional right to ask a witness questions that are irrelevent," Carlton wrote in his opinion. He also wrote that the shield law "merely codifies" what the court has already ruled was the law. He said "it is constitutional both on its face and in its application" to the Fortney case.

Fortney was convicted of first-degree rape and received a life sentence in connection with the assault of Georgia Guthrie Shepard. The 23-year-old cocktail waitress said Fortney accosted her in the parking lot of her apartment complex when she returned from her job at 2 a.m. She said Fortney was brandishing a gun and forced her to engage in sexual relations.

Fortney, testifying in his own defense, denied using a gun and argued that the woman consented to their having sex.

The 1977 shield law, Carlton added, "preserves an accused defendant's substantive rights when it provides that a victim's sexual history is admissable" if it tends to prove she consented or "gives rise to the strong inference of consent."

Wins $2 Million Suit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Georgia-based health company received more than $2 million in damages Friday following a federal court jury's decision in an anti-trust suit against Rex Hospital of Raleigh.

In making the award, the jury determined that officials and trustees of Rex conspired eight years ago to control the health care market in Wake County.

The award was granted Charter Medical Corp., which sued Rex on grounds that the hospital violated federal antitrust laws in opposing expansion of the old Mary Elizabeth Hospital. Charter Medical owned Mary Elizabeth Hospital at the time.

The jury awarded Charter $1,739,647 for lost profits caused by a delay in opening a new hospital, $601,846 for lost profits due to increases in construction costs during the period of delay and $98,537 for profits lost from equipment-cost increases.

The jury also held that Charter was not liable for a $500,000 countersuit filed by Rex, which claimed the firm liabled its trustees and abused the legal process in bringing the action.

U.S. District Judge Herbert N. Maletz will rule on Nov. 20 whether Rex has to pay the damages. Meanwhile, attorneys for the hospital said they will await a decision before deciding whether to appeal.

During the six-week trial, testimony revealed that Charter Medical filed an application to add 100 beds to the 40-bed hospital but that Rex officials opposed the application and delayed the expansion until the corporation was unable to finance the project.

Old Building Remains Found

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — The remains of a brick structure accidentally uncovered in Edenton recently could actually be the foundation for one of the oldest buildings in the state, according to a state archaeologist.

Thomas C. Funk of the Division of Archives and History said Friday preliminary studies indicated that the structure dates to around 1720. He said he felt it was one of the oldest buildings of the period.

The archaeological site, located at King and Granville streets, was uncovered last week by telephone company workers who were digging ditches for a cable. Funk and his assistants spent several days at the site this week and will return for three days next week.

Funk said all artifacts retrieved at the site dates back to the early 1700s. For example, he said, there are pieces of stoneware that generally were not used after the 1740s. He added that the age of the find was also indicated by records showing that a building was at the site in 1720.

No Gas Price Decrease

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices will not go down this year despite an oversupply, according to a survey of industry leaders.

The survey of readers of the Lundberg Letter, released Saturday, pointed out that many of those participating in the poll will be among those making such price decisions. Slightly more than 30 percent are presidents or chief executive officers of their own companies, and 18.7 percent are in senior management positions.

Of the 306 respondents, 94 percent predicted that gasoline prices at the end of 1980 will be above the July average of $1.24 a gallon. The average estimate by the respondents — about a quarter of the industry newsletter's readership — was $1.43 a gallon for all grades of gasoline in full- and self-service stations.

The lowest price predicted by a significant number of respondents was $1.20 a gallon (3 percent), and the highest was $1.60 (5 percent).

Publisher Dan Lundberg had predicted in last month's letter that "gas wars" might result from an oversupply of the fuel.

The survey showed that the oilmen see government controls as the most serious problem facing the industry.

Special Police Team Assigned

A special four-man police team will be assigned to the downtown area at night, begining August 25, to handle the increase in foot and vehicular traffic brought on by the opening of school, Chief Glenn Cannon said last week.

The purpose in assigning the special team to patrol the area, according to the chief, "is to protect those persons who frequent the downtown clubs and entertainment centers, to protect the rights of property owners and business firms in the immediate area, and to maintain order and general peace."

Cannon said the Police Department, "has placed this special enforcement team in the downtown area for a number of years now, and the success of this program has been most impressive."

The special four-man patrol, the chief noted, is in addition to the normal foot patrol assigned to the downtown business district and the regular motorized patrols.

The department, he continued, "will make every effort to work with merchants, night club owners, and downtown patrons to assure everyone's enjoyment and satisfaction."

As always, Cannon said, "the department welcomes ideas or comments about this or any other special police project."

Women Law Enforcement Grads

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two women took their places in the state's law-enforcement program Friday — one as North Carolina's first female highway patrol trooper and the other as a alcohol-enforcement officer.

Brenda Mae Oxendine, 21, of Laurinburg, a cadet "with a lot of spunk," was sworn in as a patrol officer.

"It was hard, but with determination and motivation you get through it," she said.

Trooper J.D.Ferree, physical training director for the graduating class, said, "You're always doubtful at first of who you got, but she stuck it out the same way as the rest of them. Cadet Oxendine, she's got a lot of spunk."

"She impressed all of us. She carried her own weight," Ferree added.

Miss Oxendine was the fourth woman to attend the 20-week training course but was the first to graduate.

She will report to work Wednesday at the Whiteville station.

Miss Oxendine graduated in a class of 42 highway patrol cadets and eight Alcohol Law Enforcement cadets. Eight of the highway patrol cadets are black.

Roberta Ann Wolfe, 31, of Raleigh graduated as the state's fourth woman alcohol enforcement officer.

"Each one of us had days that we weren't sure we were going to make it. But we just kept going," she said.

Court Rules On Drinking Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Supreme Court held Friday that a Craven County motorist who insisted on waiting until he located an attorney before he agreed to take a breathalyzer test had violated a state law.

The law says that willful refusal to take the test is punishable by a six months revocation of a driving license.

The Supreme Court's ruling affirmed a decision handed down by the state Court of Appeals.

In the case, Gary D. Etheridge was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of liquor. Trooper Johnny Brown, a Breathalyzer operator, advised Etheridge he had 30 minutes in which to call an attorney.

After making several unsuccessful efforts to contact an a lawyer, Etheridge located New Bern attorney Lamar Sledge. Following Sledge's arrival and a conference with Etheridge, he consented to take the test.

But Trooper Brown, who was by then dismantling his breathalyzer, refused to administer the test, contending the 30-minute span had expired. He then recorded Etheridge as refusing to take the test. The state Department of Motor Vehicles notified Etheridge it was revoking his license.

Jack Anderson Defends Invasion Scheme Story

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Columnist Jack Anderson on Saturday rejected a White House denial that plans are under way to invade Iran, and said he would detail the military preparations in a series of articles next week.

Anderson, in a statement released by his office, said he will report that Carter made "primarily a political decision" to prepare for the invasion.

Anderson's comments followed the publication in the Saturday edition of the Modesto (Calif.) Bee of excerpts from his column that was scheduled for release on Monday.

The excerpts said the U.S. planned to invade Iran in mid-October to boost President Carter's re-election chances. The presidential election falls on the anniversary of the seizure of U.S. hostages in Tehran.

After word of the column became public, White House spokeswoman Claudia Townsend said early Saturday: "The suggestion that this or any other administration would start a war for political benefit is grotesque and totally irresponsible. The allegation made by Jack Anderson is absolutely false."

Anderson said he is "not impressed by the White House denial. The White House press office issued similar denials before the April attempt to rescue the hostages."

Anderson said it was "the political nature" of Carter's decision "that caused me to investigate his intentions and publish my findings in advance."

In previewing his upcoming columns, Anderson said, "There are three control points along the road to invasion. President Carter has merely passed the first one. The final order to invade will not come until he has reached the third control point. He will then choose between various options. The military forces will be ready to execute any of them.

"One possible option, of course, would be to abort the operation."

Anderson said Carter's decision to approve the preparations "followed his decline in the polls. There has been no new development in Iran that would justify such a dramatic change in strategy.

"The only new development occurred here in the United States, where Carter's approval rating plunged lower than any president has registered since polling began ever. President Carter's pollster, Pat Caddell, has informed him, first, that most Americans want action in Iran; and second, that the president's rating has always jumped several percentage points during a national emergency."

Offered San Diego's Conductor Post

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Symphony has offered the music director's job to British conductor David Atherton at a salary of $50,000 the first year, $70,000 the next and $90,000 by the fourth.

A successor to conductor Peter Eros has been sought for 18 months.

Atherton, 36, is expected to sign the contract in London in October, but because of previous bookings won't conduct the San Diego Symphony until October 1981, a symphony spokesman said.

UNC Case Witnesses Withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government decided Friday not to let two top witnesses testify against the University of North Carolina in its desegregation dispute with the 16-campus system.

The decision followed a ruling that would have required those witnesses to submit confidential information to UNC lawyers.

The hearing on the Department of Education's attempt to cutoff almost $90 million in federal funds to UNC was recessed for two weeks and will resume on Sept. 3 with approximately 30 government witnesses.

At the request of UNC, Administrative Law Judge John J. Mathias ruled Thursday that government witnesses would have to turn over to UNC lawyers their internal memoranda on the UNC desegregation case. His ruling came over strong objections from government lawyers, who said the internal memos were privileged.

After failing to get Mathias to reconsider his decision on Friday, chief government counsel Richard L. Foster announced the government was withdrawing two former top officials scheduled to testify as government witnesses.

One of the two was Mary Berry, former assistant secretary for education in the then-Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The other was David Tatel, former director of HEW's Office of Civil Rights.

Foster would not comment of why the two witnesses were withdrawn. However, the move will prevent UNC lawyers from examining documents written by Tatel and Berry.

Lawyers for both sides declined comment on the possible content of the memoranda.

UNC lawyers had asked the judge in a July 18 motion to require the government to produce documents showing how HEW officials developed their position on the UNC desegregation issue.

During the past two days of testimony, Donald L. Reisler told the hearing that, according to a 30-volume report not yet accepted as evidence, UNC has had a small number of minority students in the past decade.

Strikes In Poland Spread, No Agreements Reached

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government's Interpress news agency said Saturday that negotiations had failed with 16,000 striking workers at the giant Lenin shipyard in Gdansk and the three-day old strike was continuing.

An Interpress spokesman said "a certain number" of shipyard workers initially agreed to return to their jobs and end the takeover, but then changed their minds and decided to stay on strike. He gave no further details.

The workers are demanding higher wages and free trade unions.

There was mounting confusion over the situation in the Baltic seaports of Gdansk and Gdynia, where telex and telephone links to Warsaw have been cut off since Friday.

But a source familiar with the situation in Gdansk said, "There has not been any rioting, looting or damage to plant and factory installations. There is absolute quiet."

Dissidents said a workers' delegation came to Warsaw from Gdansk to negotiate with senior government officials. Other reports said the executive committee of the Polish Communist Party had met almost continuously with part leader Edward Gierek since his return Friday from a two-week visit to the Soviet Union.

In Warsaw, buses and streetcars were operating again as drivers and conductors returned to work, ending nearly a week of sporadic walkouts.

The official news agency PAP reported "restoration of the normal rhythm of work (at) industrial plants in some places." It did not specify where these plants were. The agency added, however: "On the other hand, in several enterprises of Gdansk and Gdynia, stoppages of work were noted."

Interpress provides information to foreign correspondents and does not send dispatches to Polish newspapers.

Jacek Kuron, spokesman for the dissident Committee for Social Self-Defense, issued a statement saying only one of the two worker committees at the Lenin shipyards had agreed to return to work on Monday. He said the larger committee was still negotiating and that its supporters were still occupying the shipyard.

In addition, he said, bus and streetcar workers in Gdansk and Gdynia were blocking public transport traffic.

The flurry of reports followed a dramatic appeal Friday night by Premier Edward Babiuch for an end to the six weeks of labor unrest that erupted after meat price increases were announced July 1.

Babiuch's appeal, delivered on national television, was published on the front page of major Polish newspapers Saturday.

Knowledgeable sources said the strike in Gdansk, 175 miles north of here, had spread to an additional 70,000 shipyard, factory and transportation workers in the nearby port cities of Gdynia and Sopot. Dissidents reported strikes also in Lodz and Wroclaw.

For the government of Gierek, a former coal miner, it was the most serious outbreak of labor unrest since the 1970 riots that toppled his predecessor, Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Labor unrest has intensified across Poland since July 1 when the government announced the end of meat subsidies, raising prices for most meat and poultry. Some low-grade cuts of meat increased from the equivalent of $1.33 to $2 a kilogram (2.2 pounds). The national average wage is $167 a month.

In addition to higher pay, dissident sources said, many workers are demanding the right to form independent labor unions as an alternative to government-controlled unions. The demand is seen as a direct challenge to the Communist Party, which controls the unions.

The workers in Gdansk were reported demanding, among other things, a monthly wage increase of 2,000 zlotys ($68). Shipyard workers earn about 8,000 zlotys ($267) a month.

Dissident sources in Warsaw said shipyard management had already agreed to worker demands for monuments honoring the dozens of workers killed in December 1970 riots at the shipyard, and reinstate two dismissed workers, one of them a strike leader during the 1970 disturbances.

Strike committees in Gdansk and Gdynia distributed posters urging people to remain quiet to avoid clashes with police, the sources said. According to the report, police were reported scarce in the strikebound cities.

Warsaw's transport workers reportedly received wage hikes of about 10 percent. Bus drivers normally earn up to 8,000 zlotys ($267) per month, while streetcar conductors earn about 5,000 zlotys ($167) per month.

Workers at the Warsaw excavator factory reportedly received a similar settlement.

There was speculation in Washington, meanwhile, that the strikes could prompt Soviet military intervention similar to thrusts used to stifle liberalization in Czechoslovakia in August 1968 and crush a popular uprising in Hungary in 1956.

Defense analysts say the Soviet Union maintains two tank divisions, comprised of 10,000 men each, as well as some air force units in Poland. Most of the Soviet troops are believed stationed in western Poland to support the large garrison in East Germany, said to number some 400,000 troops.

A memorandum prepared by the Polish state bank in 1979 showed the country owed Western creditors about $19.4 billion and annual payments to cover the debt would consume 70 percent of Poland's hard currency earnings this year.

Twelve Dead In Blast

TOKYO (AP) — Two explosions, about 40 minutes apart, ripped through an underground shopping arcade in Shizuoka Saturday, killing 12 persons and injuring about 200 others, police reported.

Police said the toll could go higher.

They said it was almost certain that the explosions were caused by a gas leak in the arcade near the Shizuoka railway station. The underground arcade connects with the center of the Shizuoka, a prosperous city of less than half a million population, 86 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Witnesses said the first blast, which reportedly occurred in a shop serving sushi (raw fish on rice balls) was minor. Some initially thought it was an earthquake.

About 40 minutes later, witnesses said, a tremendous explosion sent up a geiser of flames and shattered windows in the vicinity.

Many of the casualties resulted from the second explosion, police said.

The devastating blast occurred two hours before the start of the noon rush when hundreds of shoppers normally crowd the arcade.

A previous major gas explosion in Japan occurred 10 years ago in the western city of Osaka, when workers on a subway construction project mistakenly tapped a gas main, triggering a series of blasts that killed 79 persons and injured 420 others.

directors and coordinators, according to Barnes. "We relocate families that have moved on to see how they're doing. There are regular clinics they can go to, but we provide them with transportation and help if they need it."

Twenty-eight children, most of whom were Mexican, were enrolled in the 1980 Fountain program. The faculty consisted of a director-teacher, two assistant teachers, both of whom are certified teacher assistants at Wilson County Schools, a social worker, parent coordinator; nurse, cook, and bus driver who transported the children back and forth everyday.

"We hope to expand next year," Barnes said, noting the reason they hope to expand is to be able to keep infants.

Their goal? According to Yvonne Barnes, it is to make sure the children learn the self-help things and when they get older, to be able to move out of the migrant way of life.

Special Arts Festival On Saturday

Saturday, August 23 is the date of a Festival of Visual and Performing Arts to be held on the Downtown Mall in Greenville. The event is one in which handicapped students of Greenville will be showing their creativeness in visual art, with a program of entertainment and arts demonstration to be provided by local performers and craftsmen.

Funds for the festival have been made available by the National Committee on Arts for the Handicapped of the Educational Office of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. These funds were distributed to selected school systems in North Carolina through the State Department of Public Instruction.

Schools statewide were invited last spring to submit applications for these funds for a festival to be held at or near the beginning of the school year. The proposed project for Greenville was written and submitted by Billy Stinson, chairman of the Rose High School Art Department. His proposal was one of 12 in North Carolina chosen by the Dept. of Public Instruction to be granted funds.

The Greenville City Schools, the Downtown Merchants Association, and the Chamber of Commerce are all supporting and sponsoring the festival.

Brenda Lewis, publicity person for the festival, has provided information on activities to be carried out during the festival. These are:

General Activities

From the opening time of the festival at 10 a.m. until the early afternoon ending hour, Doris Paul and Kathy Gesson will hold pottery demonstrations, with students invited to try their hand. Also, at different points up and down the Mall, other arts and crafts demonstrations will be given by volunteer artists, to include mural painting.

At various points art work by the handicapped children of students in the Greenville Schools system will be on display.

Program Schedule

The festival program opens at 10 a.m., with events scheduled through 1 p.m. These are:

— 10 a.m., The festival begins with registration by participating students at a point in front of Blount-Harvey.

—10:30 a.m., a dance demonstration conducted by Dottie Suggs, a Rose High teacher; and a juggling performance by Josh Potter, principal of North Pitt High School.

— 11 a.m., Greenville's Clown Alley will entertain with performances.

— 11:30 a.m., A puppet show will be given by Joe Stines, Children's Librarian at Sheppard Memorial Library; and (inside one of the buildings on the Mall) Rose High faculty member Claude (Kip) West will have a storytelling session.

— 12 to 12:30 p.m., Lunch break.

— 12:30 p.m., A variety magic act will be given by Malcolm and Alise; and a dance demonstration will be presented by Jennifer Mahoney and Martha West.

— 1 p.m., A musical interpretation program by members of ECU's Theater for the Deaf; and presentation of certificates of participation to all students taking part in the festival, to be made by Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon.

The public is invited to attend the festival.

DONNA STEPHENSON - A graduate of the School of Music, East Carolina University, operatic soprano Donna Stephenson will be making a return visit to Greenville as a participant in Albert Long's "Happening," which opens at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church on Sunday, August 24. Miss Stephenson will be here through Tuesday, August 27. She made her operatic debut in 1977 in a New York production of "Iolanthe," and last March was one of five finalists in the Metropolitan Opera Guild competition. She has sung for a Billy Graham crusade and this summer she has been performing in the Blossom Music Festival in Kent, Ohio.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Local history and the fight against alcoholism are the featured topics on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing from noon until 1 p.m. today over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The program opens with two guests, Betsy Overton and Dr. Worth Worthington, discussing plans for the October 8 decorative arts project to be held at Historic Hope House near Windsor. The program gets underway at 9:45 a.m. Ms. Overton is curator and educational coordinator; Worthington is director of non-accreditation programs at the Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University.

On the second part of the program, several guests talk about the problems of alcoholics and progress for recovery afforded those struggling with this form of addiction. Guests are Carl Weatherly, of the Neuse Mental Health Clinic; Margaret Carlson, executive director, Alcoholism Services of greater Springfield, Massachusetts; and Bill H---, a recovering alcoholic of Morehead City. The three tell about the huge national meeting held July 4 in New Orleans, when 25,000 attended and turned the festive city into a "dry" place.

In the kitchen, Pat Reed, of the N. C. Pork Producers Association, prepares the second place winner in the national pork cooking contest, Corriander Pepper Pork prepared with pork loin.

In 1932, Paul von Hindenburg defeated Adolf Hitler in a run-off election for the German presidency.

Strange Seafood Festival To Be Held Thursday

BEAUFORT — For the fourth consecutive year, the annual "Strange Seafood Exhibition" will be held at Hampton Mariners Museum in Beaufort. The time is 3 p.m., and the date is Thursday, August 21. The menu of "strange" — or rather, "unusual" seafoods will be served on the grounds of the Beaufort Historical Restoration adjacent to the museum.

This program, billed as an educational one designed to give the public an opportunity to sample seafoods which are not everyday seafood fare, features edible seafood harvested in North Carolina coastal waters, delicacies such as marinated octopus, coquina clam soup, sting ray casserole, and a land derived product, yaupon tea. The menu will also include better known seafoods served in new and different ways — i.e., fried squid and charcoaled shark.

A donation of $1 for those 12 years old and older will be taken, and children under 12 must be accompanied by an adult.

Museum staff members and community volunteers are preparing the annual feast, which each year feeds a growing number of persons interested in seeing what the unusual (strange) seafoods of North Carolina taste like. Recipe booklets of the items will be available in the musuem bookstore and on the grounds during the exhibition.

TO PERFORM AT CAROWINDS — The Dirt Band (pictured above) will perform on Sunday, August 24 at the Carowinds Paladium amphiteather, Charlotte. Other late August attractions coming up are — Franki Valli and the Four Seasons on Saturday, August 23, and Eddie Rabbitt on Sunday, August 31. Show times for the concerts are at 3 p.m. and again at 8 p.m.

Virginia Dare Festival

MANTEO — The Virginia Dare Festival, which opened Saturday with "A Queen's Garden Party," continues today and tomorrow with events marking a three-day observance of the 400th anniversary (in 1587) of the birth of Virginia Dare, the first English child born in the New World.

The celebration is sponsored jointly by the Elizabethan Gardens, the Roanoke Island Historical Association, and the National Park Service.

— Today, the churches of Dare County will observe the birth in their religious services. "The Lost Colony," now in its 40th year, is strongly oriented to religious and moral values in family life.

— On Monday, August 18, from noon until 4 p.m., the National Park Service will say "Happy Birthday" to Virginia Dare in a festive way by recreating an Elizabethan "gossip feast" at the Fort Raleigh Visitors Center. Costumed Elizabetha rangers will share free cider and tea cakes and entertain with authentic games, dancing, and singing typical of the late 16th century.

When English settlers first came to the New World, it was the custom for a child's "gossips" (originally "God sips," meaning godparents) to host the annual birthday party. The public is invited to bring a picnic lunch and to join in the festivities.

— The Virginia Dare Festival will conclude Monday evening at 8:30 p.m. with a special performance of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama. Four babies, chosen earlier this month at auditions, will have cameo roles on stage, alternately portraying the role of Virginia Dare.

All the events are open to the public, and all with the exception of Monday night's performance, are without charge.

Billy Carter To Claim Innocence Under Oath

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billy Carter says he hasn't "done a damn thing wrong" in the Libyan affair and he'll get a chance to explain himself in sworn Senate testimony this week.

A special Senate judiciary subcommittee begins full-scale hearings Tuesday to determine whether either the president's brother or the president's administration did anything wrong.

The subcommittee's special counsel, Philip W. Tone, told reporters that investigators want to know "what he did on behalf of the Libyans and why he did it — and what possible effect that had on U.S. relations."

The investigation also will focus on President Carter's, his advisors' and the Justice Department's handling of the case, Tone said.

In a private eight-hour session with investigators last week, Billy gave a sworn deposition and told reporters afterward he hadn't "done a damn thing wrong."

Tone told reporters at a news conference that he has reached no conclusions whether there was substantial wrongdoing.

Asked whether he agrees with comments that the affair is "much ado about nothing," Tone replied: "I haven't formed an opinion about that."

But the Justice Department concluded the brother violated the Foreign Agents Registration Act by taking a $220,000 fee from Libya and serving as its agent without registering as one.

Though denying that he was an agent for Libya, Billy registered as one anyway to settle a department civil suit against him. He said he did so only because of the department pressure.

He said the $220,000 was an installment on a $500,000 loan he needed to pay off debts. He appeared to confirm a news report that he spent all but $11,000 of the $220,000 to pay off debts.

In the civil complaint filed in U.S. District Court, the Justice Department said the brother "undertook a propaganda campaign" for Libya through actions including two highly-publicized trips to that country.

The complaint said other actions included Billy's establishing a Libyan-Arab-Georgia Friendship Society and acting as an intermediary between businessmen and Libya.

In return, the complaint said, Libya made payments of $20,000 to Carter last March 1 and $200,000 April 1, gave him "certain gifts of personal property" and financed the two trips.

It said one of the trips put Carter in Libya last August while the terrorist-supporting country was celebrating the 10th anniversary of its revolution.

That, the complaint said, created "the appearance of approval by the United States of the Libyan revolution."

The Justice Department says it treated the president's brother as it would anyone else and made him register as a foreign agent rather than prosecute him for failing to do so earlier.

The Senate hearings this week also will focus on Billy's effort to set up a business deal to supply Libyan crude oil to the Charter Oil Co.

And finally, Tone said, the Senate investigation may be expanded to look into an allegation that exiled financier Robert Vesco tried to get Libya to set up a slush fund to pay off U.S. officials and members of Congress to support that country.

Woman Forced To Leave U.S.

LONOKE, Ark. (AP) — A Brazilian woman married to an American oil worker for 18 years — the mother of three U.S. citizens — says she is being forced to leave the country because her husband died without taking care of her immigration papers.

Avani Long thought she and her children would continue to live in Lonoke, her husband's hometown, after he died March 9. But now she plans to leave for England on Sunday, when her temporary visa expires.

"I don't feel like fighting it," she said Saturday. "It would be lots of trouble for everybody."

She married Robert Long in Brazil, and over the years, the family lived in various parts of the world because of Long's job as an oil technician for Arabian American Oil Co. Long was born and reared in Lonoke, and the family had come here often to visit relatives.

They lived in Houston for three years, from 1969 though 1972, and in Saudi Arabia for the last eight years. Long became ill in February and returned with his family to the United States for medical treatment. He died March 9 in a Little Rock hospital.

"Before we thought there was no trouble," Mrs. Long said. "I was married 18 years. He always said, 'It's no problem, I'm an American.' But now he's gone."

Unless she has a petition by an adult American citizen who is a blood relative, or by an American employer who can certify that she has special skills, or unless she marries an American citizen, Mrs. Long cannot stay in the country, said Dave Cole, officer in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. Long's in-laws in Lonoke cannot petition for her citizenship because they are not blood relatives, according to an official for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

And her three children, aged 17, 14 and 10, cannot sponsor her because they are not 21 years old.

"They (immigration officials) told me, 'There's no way you can stay, there is no one to sign for you," Mrs. Long said. "Your husband should have fixed your papers before he died."

"I hate to take my children out of their country," she said. "I'm just glad we have the money to choose another country."

Group Files Suit For Cuban Juveniles

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — The Cuban American Legal Defense and Education fund said Saturday it has asked a federal court to free young Cubans from a Wisconsin resettlement center since they are being physically assaulted and abused by criminals among the refugees at the camp.

"In each barrack, the criminals seems to be in control," CALDEF Board President Graciela Beecher of Fort Wayne said in a telephone interview. "I guess that when they arrived, the pushy ones, the most aggressive ones — the criminals — took over."

Papers asking for a writ of habeas corpus to free the juveniles at Fort McCoy near Sparta, Wis., were filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Madison, Wis., Mrs. Beecher said. The request for the court order says the young Cubans' constitutional rights to due process of law and freedom from cruel and unusual punishment have been violated.

Officials at the camp said Saturday they were unaware of the court action.

They said there are 375 Cubans under 18 years of age with no parents in the United States among the 5,589 refugees at the camp.

The request for the writ alleges that the Cuban juveniles have been subjected to physical assaults, homosexual rapes and physical restraints. Many have attempted suicide, the request adds.

"The children said it is useless to complain when they have been assaulted, wounded or have their possessions stolen. One boy we mention here in the suit, he was sleeping under the barracks because he was afraid of a gang of homosexuals who had raped him before," she said.

The petition asks that the Cubans be released to their American relatives or to responsible parties within the next 15 days and that all the juveniles immediately be transferred to safer quarters while the release process takes place.

Mrs. Beecher said many of the juveniles had been told they were going to be allowed to leave but were forbidden to at the last moment.

"One boy, he wasn't more than 13, he was sitting on the ground, saying, 'I thought I was coming to the land of freedom. What happened? Why am I in prison?'" she said.

Piano Teachers Association Begins Third Year

Mrs. Annemarie Lalik has been named the new president of the Greenville Piano Teachers' Association, (GPTA) as the organization begins its third year of activity on August 20.

A native of Guenzburg, a town in the state of Bavaria, West Germany, Mrs. Lalik came to the U.S. at the age of 19. She began piano studies in Guenzburg, and studied three years at the Brooklyn Conservatory of Music, New York City, where she lived until moving to Greenville in 1970.

Mrs. Lalik received the degree in Piano Pedagogy from East Carolina University and currently teaches privately in Greenville.

Annemarie Lalik

Commenting on the activities of the association, Mrs. Lalik said, "The association was formed in 1978 with the primary goal of helping the private piano teacher." Greg Nagode was one of the founders and the first president.

"The purposes of the organization are to promote music in the community, to study current trends in piano teaching by means of workshops, lecture presentations, holding master classes, student festivals and panel discussions, and to present frequent student recitals to give students the experience of performing."

Mrs. Lalik emphasized that student recitals "are among the most important of our activities because students learn from each other and get inspiration from the performance of new music.

"One of our most successful activities, and a highlight of the year for both students and teachers," she pointed out, "is the annual Spring Festival. This provides an opportunity for teachers and students to be evaluated by knowledgeable judges."

Mrs. Lalik notes that the growth of the association can be seen in the number of students taking part in the annual festival. "Eighty students took part the first year, there were 156 the second year, and about 200 will be performing in the spring 1981 festival," she said.

GPTA Schedule Announced

A couple of events for the first part of the 1980-81 schedule of the Greenville Piano Teachers' Association have been announced. These are:

— August 20, 9-11:30 a.m. — Workshop on new teaching materials to be presented by Mary Jean Eckerele of the Piano Pedagogy Dept., ECU, at the home of Carline Ragan, 1207 East Wright Road. Open to members and all area piano teachers interested in becoming members.

— September 14, 2:30-4 p.m. — "An Afternoon With Lynn Freeman Olson," featuring the well-known teacher and composer. For students, their families, and area teachers. To be held at A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

Piano teachers in the area who are interested in membership information can contact any member of the Executive Committee — Mrs. Lalik, 758-0502; Barbara Caspar, vice-president, 758-3698; Viola Hilton, secretary, 752-5962; Frances Cain, treasurer, 756-2539; or Carline Ragan, representative for the immediate past president, 758-4870.

"Airplane," A Film With Fine Touches Of Comic Imagination

THANKS, I NEEDED THAT — Assistant conservator Jean-Louis Lachevre of Salem, Massachusetts applies a spray coat to Cyrus Dallin's 1908 bronze statue, "Appeal to the Great Spirit" outside Boston's Museum of Fine Arts. Air pollution has accelerated deteriortion and discoloration of the work and an industrial acrylic sealer is being used to protect it. (AP Laserphoto)

Considerable advance publicity has been given to the fact that the movie "Airplane" sets an unprecdented record of having three directors — brothers David and Jerry Zucker and their friend Jim Abrahams.

This is a young trio of talent — they are also the scriptwriters and have performing credits as well.

Their youth undoubtedly accounts for the zany freshness of many of the incidents in this fast paced comedy, which is unofficially subtitled "A Movie." On the other hand, it reveals a lack of experience in sorting the utterly silly from the really good things in this movie.

"Airplane," now playing for a second week at Pitt Plaza Cinema, has enough fine comic situations to make it worthwhile to overlook an occasional dash of crudity.

The best situations are ones that seem to spring out of nowhere, succinct and marveously stringent, i.e., a U.S. Army Hospital name sign carrying indications that VISA and other credit cards are accepted.

One reoccuring comic situation that is truly a touch of genius is the scenes in which two black men carry on conversations in a "jive" language — and for the benefit of understanding, English subtitles provide translations. At one point, a silver haired petite lady whose appearance personifies a proper Episcopalian Bostonian type, volunteers her services to an airline hostess, declaring that she can speak jive. . . and she does, beautifully.

The plot swings wildly back and forth between scenes of bedlam on the "airplane," hand wringing at the control tower, and flashbacks to tender memories of a past romance between the two central characters — Robert Hayes and Jule Hagerty.

At one point in their past, the two were assigned as Peace Corps members to a flashily dressed African tribe. He teaches them the fundamentals of basketball and instantly they acquire the knack of performing the fanciest goal shooting imaginable; she is shown in a scene holding a Tupperware party with the puzzled native ladies while an elephant looks over their shoulders. The native women seem not to be uncertain whether to eat the plastic or to attempt to play music on the pieces.

A seaside love scene — in the mode of "From Here to Eternity" or "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing" ends up with the waves covering them with seaweed and a ring of fish (they look like catfish) gasping all about them on the sand.

At the Chicago control tower, there's a magnificent bit where a plump male clerk types at about 100 words per minute with more flourishes than Liberace could ever summon on piano keys.

Veteran film stars Lloyd Bridges and Robert Stack are in the cast, and Ethel Merman has a fine bit about a patient who imagines he is Miss Merman.

For movie fans seeking entertainment without a burdening message, and who relish ample touches of intelligence and far-out imagination in their movie fare, "Airplane" is a pretty good bet.

Devine Will Leave Irish After Season

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Pressure has never bothered Dan Devine, even though he has been overshadowed much of his career by the accomplishments and memories of some of the greatest coaching legends in football.

As coach at Green Bay, he inherited Vince Lombardi's mantle but was subjected to near constant harassment toward the end of his four-year venture in the National Football League.

Then he moved on to Notre Dame, where Knute Rockne, Frank Leahy and most recently Ara Parseghian had set a similarly unreachable tradition before him.

"I think with no ghosts," Devine said on his arrival at Notre Dame in 1975. "They keep talking to me about pressure. I just don't comprehend it ... If I spent my time worrying about trying to match their records, I wouldn't have time to apply to my own work."

Devine still says the only pressure he feels is that which he puts on himself. Friday's stunning announcement that he is stepping down as coach of the Fighting Irish after the coming season was based on "family considerations and personal reasons."

"If there has been any outside pressure, I sure don't know about it," the 55-year-old coach said, insisting the decision was entirely his own.

Last year's 7-4 record was Notre Dame's worst since 1963, and once again grumbles of discontent were heard under the famed Golden Dome.

"Won-lost records most always are based on the quality of your team and quality of your opposition," Devine said. "When you play tough teams, which we've been doing, your record may not be that good. A 7-4 record doesn't indicate a poor quality of the team."

The announcement of his retirement was made to a national television audience during the Pittsburgh-Atlanta exhibition National Football League game.

Interviewed at the WSBT-TV studio in South Bend, Devine said of his decision, "Naturally you confide in a few people, but usually when you tell somebody a secret, it's no longer a secret. So I didn't want the squad and the staff to hear about it from somebody else."

Devine, whose wife reportedly has been ill, said, "I have family considerations and personal reasons that I'd prefer to keep to myself. I want to spend more time with my family, and I can't do that and coach. If you can't put in the time necessary ... then you're not being fair to the school, the players and yourself. I always felt I would be the first to know when it was time to step down."

Devine brought a national football championship and three post-season bowl victories to Notre Dame, but he never won the affection of the Irish fans.

Even from the beginning, Devine was greeted with dissatisfaction. The Irish lost three games in 1975, a sin that bordered on sacrilege among the fanatically loyal Irish fans who consider even a single loss unforgivable.

Devine, who survived many rumors that he would be fired, guided the Irish to the national championship in 1977, won bowl games in 1976-77-78 and compiled a 44-14 overall record — more than respectable at nearly any other school.

He said he decided to announce his retirement before the coming season "to clear up the air. It's just better for them (the players) to hear it from me than somebody else."

Devine did not announce any future plans, but he left open the possibility he might return to the NFL. He has said that his one so-far unaccomplished goal in football is to win the Super Bowl championship.

On leaving Green Bay in 1974, where the Packers went 6-8 and both he and his family were emotionally and even physically abused, Devine said, "For pride's sake, I would like to go back (to pro ball) and finish the job."

He said Friday night that that is not out of the question.

"Perhaps some day (I will return to football). I don't exactly know. I'm going to give everything I have to this season, and then let the chips fall where they may. I'm sure there will be a lot of speculation, but I don't really have anything planned. I just want to do the best I can this season, and then I'm going to sit back with my wife and see where we want to go.

"There's business, there's public service, there's football. Politics is a possibility. Right now, I can say sincerely I have a gret bunch of kids and I want to devote my time to them."

Devine previously coached at Arizona State and the University of Missouri. His overall college record is 164-54-8, a .743 career percentage that ranks eighth among active coaches.

Devine opens his final season at Notre Dame on Sept. 6, when the Irish take on Purdue.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
Sports
SUNDAY MORNING
AUGUST 17,1980

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Buddy Baker, whose leadfoot tactics are almost legendary, Saturday sped to the pole position for the Michigan 400 Grand National stock car race.

Baker, who has won the prestigious Daytona 500 and Winston 500 races this season, toured the 2½-mile high-banked Michigan International Speedway oval at 162.693 mph. That brought him his fourth pole of 1980 and second in a row.

Neil Bonnett, who has won the last two races and is hoping to become the first three-in-a-row winner since David Pearson did it in 1976, put his Mercury Cougar in the third spot at 162.177.

"I drew 34th (in the qualifying order) and it's hard to wait, wait, wait," said the soft-spoken Baker. "I was getting a little antsy about the fact that it was getting hotter and hotter out there and the cars were slowing down quite a bit.

"Everybody was running slower than in practice, including me."

Baker was referring to the fact that Sunny skies raised the air temperature into the 80s, but also heated up the asphalt track, making it more slippery and slower.

Qualifying for the pole is always hotly contested, but Baker — who always is a threat to win the inside front row spot — tried to put it into prospective.

"It's worth a lot of money ($25,000) to the guy who wins the most poles, and I'd sure like to catch up to Cale.

"We've got some races coming up at places where I've got a very good chance to take the pole. Realistically, Cale's got it locked up with nine of them. But, anything can happen.

"Actually, the pole is really for the pit crews," Baker continued. "It something they can work for and it gets them all heated up for the race.

"To me, it's a place to start the race. That's all. You can go from first to 10th on the first corner. To me, the real advantage of being on the pole is that you can't hit anybody when they drop the flag," he added with a laugh.

Surprisingly, Mercuries and Fords filled the second and third rows of the grid.

Bobby Allison's Ford took the fourth spot, next to Bonnett, at 161.852, while Bill Elliott's Mercury grabbed the fifth position at 161.783 and rookie Jody Ridley placed his Ford sixth at 161.696.

Seven-time NASCAR driving champion Richard Petty, still experiencing soreness from a neck injury suffered in a crash three weeks ago at Pocono, qualified 12th at 159.879. He said he will use a neck brace and will have relief driver Joe Millikan standing by during Sunday's race.

Darrell Waltrip, who also has won four poles and four races this season, failed to make the field.

He blew an engine on the warmup lap for his first qualifying attempt, then, after his crew scrambled for more than two hours to replace it, blew again when he tried to go out late in the final qualifying session.

1. Buddy Baker, Chevrolet, 162.693.

Rose Ahead In Preparations

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School reached the half-way point this week. The Rampants are two weeks into practice and two weeks away from their first game—a home opener against Kinston.

And Coach Dave Bumgarner, who bid farewell to a large number of starters at the close of last season, has found a good deal to be happy about. There is only one phase of the game so far that leaves him less than satisfied—the kicking game.

"We lost an outstanding kicker in Ted King (now at East Carolina)," Bumgarner pointed out. "And so far, we haven't come up with anyone who has been able to consistantly handle the punting. I think Mike Thurber will do okay with the placement kicking, but our punting is behind schedule."

The coach is disappointed that no one has been consistant in his punting in practice so far. "We have three people trying out for it, and right now, I'd have so say that Van Warren will be doing the kicking. He really never started kicking until after the season last year, when he decided that that was what he wanted to do. But we have no one with any experience."

Aside from the kicking game, the coach is enthusiastic about the way things have gone to this point.

"Offensively, I'd say that we're progressing a little ahead of where we normally are at this time. We're doing things right now that we don't usually do until after the first or second games of the season."

The passing game is one reason for the rapid progression. "We have an experienced quarterback in Kenny Barnes, and we have four fine receivers in Chris McLawhorn, Paul MacMillian, Donald Johnson and Van Warren, and that's five reasons we're so far along as we are," Bumgarner said.

At first, Bumgarner was somewhat worried about the running game, where graduation wiped out about everyone. Only Alonzo Taylor, who saw some starting action last year, returned in the wishbone backfield, but he's found some company in the last week. "John Vestal is running the ball real well at fullback," the coach pointed out, "and I guess the biggest surprise has been Roger Williams at the halfback position. This is his first year out, and he's looking quite good.

"Jeff Porter (switched from quarterback to fullback late in the season last year) is also looking good, although I haven't really had a chance to see him in a scrimmage yet."

While the line will be relatively new, there are two veterans to anchor things in center Stuart Ward and lineman Jeff Farrell. "While we don't have many veterans back, we do have a lot of lettermen because we were able to play so many people last year."

Bumgarner pointed out that this year's seniors have been together as a group for a long time. "They've played together a lot, so they know what they can do, and they know how to do what they are supposed to do. So we don't have to do a great deal of teaching. This bunch went 9-1 as junior varsity sophomores, and were 11-3 last year as juniors. That's 20 of 24 games as winners, and that's not bad."

The defense will probably be more junior oriented. "We had a lot of things to do on defense—and a lot of holes to fill. I think we'll be all right with people like Don Johnson, Farrell and Curtis Spell back. Johnny Green, James Brewington and Ben Smith will play a lot, along with Marty Barnes, James Carter and Barry Smith."

During the next two weeks, the Rampant staff will work on continued teaching and on polishing up the game. "We still have some learning to do, and a lot of tuning up. We're still two weeks away from playing a ballgame. We're not running and blocking a crisply as we should be," Bumgarner said.

The Rampants will hold their annual interschool scrimmage on Wednesday night at 7 p.m. at New Bern against the Bears, weather permitting. This event is open to the public at a small admission charge, although no "official" score will be kept.

"We set it up for Wednesday so that if we had rain, we would have quite a bit of time to reset it up, with a real chance to play. We'd still have Thursday, Friday and Saturday left," the coach pointed out.

Two Weeks Left

Rose High School has two weeks left before the start of the 1980 football season, and Coach Dave Bumgarner (center) is looking forward to it, along with two of his veteran players. Kenny Barnes, at left, will be at the quaterback position, while Curtis Spell, right, will serve as an anchor for the defense. Rose opens the season on August 29 hosting Kinston. Nelson Seeks To Fill Big Shoes

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

For the past two seasons the quarterback shoes at East Carolina were filled by Leander Green. As he went so, too, did the Pirates and their wishbone attack. He was the catalyst, combining this past season with Anthony Collins and Theodore Sutton to held the Pirates lead the nation in rushing.

Green, of course, is gone. And there is a new catalyst hoping to ignite the Pirate's wishbone. His name is Carlton Nelson.

A sophomore, Nelson saw only limited action during last season, taking a mere 45 snaps last season. This season, however, with the exodus of Henry Trevathan to law school, Nelson has been proclaimed as the team's number one quarterback by his coach.

For his part, Nelson is anxious for the season — and the challenge of leading the Pirates — to start.

"I'm excited about it. We get to play a pretty tough schedule and I'm looking forward to the season," Nelson said earlier this week. "I know I have a lot to fill in Leander's shoes. He was good and I'm not going to say I'm as good, but I feel I can do the job."

Nelson — and ECU fans — will find out quickly whether he can do the job — against some of the toughest competition the Pirates have faced in years. East Carolina opens with Duke in Durham and two weeks later face powerful Florida State in Tallahasee.

"I'm glad we're playing Florida State. I like playing teams like that early. If I can play with Florida State I can play with anyone," Nelson said. "We've also got N.C. State and Carolina and Southwest Louisiana is suppose to be tough."

How well ECU does may depend on Nelson's play. And he admits to feeling some pressure.

"You've got to feel the pressure," said Nelson, who came into camp weighing 155, down 20 pounds from last season. "But you can't let it miss up your concentration."

Concentration. It's especially important for a quarterback who must run the wishbone.

"It all starts with the quarterback," Nelson said. "He's the one who makes the decisions, especially in this offense. The hardest part of not having played a lot is going to be reading the defense. After you take the snap you don't have much time to make a decision. You've got to make it and then go."

Realizing he would be the one to help make the Pirates go this fall, Nelson spent the summer running, mostly long distances, and throwing the football.

"When I came out of high school they said I was a good passer, but I didn't know. But I've worked on it and now I feel like I can throw the ball when we need to," said Nelson, a product of Woodrow Wilson High School in Portsmouth, Va., where he won all-metro and all-regional honors.

For the next three weeks, leading up to the Pirates' season-opener at Duke, Nelson will get a crash course in directing the wishbone. Along the way he will also begin to try gaining his teammates' confidence.

"The whole thing is you have to gain the other players' confidence in you to really do the job," Nelson said. "I'm confident I can do it. You just have to go out and do the job every day (to gain others' confidence). You can't beg for their confidence. I know Leander was good, but I'm just going to have to go out and prove I can do the job."

Quarterback Carlton Nelson

PIRATE NOTEBOOK

Notes on the Pirates:

Coach Ed Emory appeared to be quite pleased with the conditioning of the Pirates as they return to camp on Friday for the first practice sessions.

He noted that everyone was in fine shape, and that he was "extremely pleased with the total physical conditioning" of the team.

During the Friday workouts, a series of tests were run by the players to show off their conditioning, and an award was made to the player scoring highest on the combined exercises. That award went to Vern Davenport, a split end. The test included a six-mile run, ten 40-yard dashes, the standing long jump, a flexibility drill, and a weight event, among others.

Quarterback Carlton Nelson was timed in the 40 at 4.5 seconds, and seven of eight running backs went through the distance in 4.6 or better.

Emory noted that Jeffrey Warren (linebacker) made the defense "look mighty good" and that Wayne Inman (offensive guard) was "his old self" during the drills in shorts.

The Pirates will continue to work in shorts until Tuesday when they will put on pads for the first time this fall. The team currently is working four times a day in short sessions, this to avoid long practices in the heat.

The Pirates appear to be in excellent spirts and exceptionally well organized for the drills, a spokesman said.

All but two veterans were on hand for the opening practice session, Doug Smith (defensive tackle) and Gary Gambrell (offensive guard). Smith was expected to join the team on Saturday, after helping his family during the illness of his father.

It is believed that Gambrell has decided not to continue with football, although no official word has been received on this. One other Pirate veteran, John Hallow, had decided earlier that he would not be rejoining the team. The two year starter at nose guard has decided to stick with baseball, where he was a starter this past spring on the NCAA regional qualifier.

Perry's Yankee Doodle Dandy

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gaylord Perry, with home run support from Oscar Gamble and Eric Soderholm and two innings of perfect relief from Rich Gossage, made a successful New York debut as the Yankees defeated the Baltimore Orioles 4-1 Saturday night.

By winning their second straight after dropping the opener of a five-game series, the Yankees increased their lead in the American League East to 4½ games over the second-place Orioles.

Perry, 41, acquired in a deal with the Texas Rangers on Wednesday, retired the first 10 Baltimore batters, aided by a spectacular catch by Ruppert Jones, who leaped high above the center field fence to rob Eddie Murray of a second-inning homer.

Perry, 7-9, stranded two runners in the fifth after a two-out homer by Terry Crowley and two more in the seventh on a disputed third strike against pinch hitter Pat Kelly.

The Orioles threw pieces of equipment from their dugout after third base umpire Dale Ford called Kelly out on strikes, ruling that he did not check his swing in time. The dispute continued as New York came to bat in the eighth and Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver was ejected after Soderholm led off with his seventh homer for the final run.

Jones opened the game with a first-pitch single off loser Dennis Martinez, 3-2, stole second and scored on a single by Bobby Murcer. Murcer singled with two out in the fifth and Gamble followed with his eighth homer to make it 3-0.

Gossage, who nailed down New York's 4-3 triumph Friday night, recorded his 18th save after Al Bumbry opened the Baltimore eighth with a single, the fifth hit off Perry, who walked two and struck out six.

Yount's Grand Slam Lifts Brewers Past Indians

American League

CLEVELAND (AP) — Robin Yount slugged a grand-slam home run and two doubles to pace a 18-hit attack, and Jerry Augustine hurled 51-3 innings of scoreless relief as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Cleveland Indians 10-5 Saturday.

Yount's bases-loaded blast in the top of the second inning off Cleveland's Dan Spillner, 10-9, gave Milwaukee a 4-1 lead after the Indians had scored a run in the first on a triple by Miguel Dilone and Joe Charboneau's RBI fielder's choice.

Singles by Dick Davis and Jim Gantner, and a two-out walk to Paul Molitor preceded Yount's shot, his 19th homer of the season.

Gorman Thomas clouted his 25th home run, a 460-foot solo shot in the third, giving Milwaukee a 5-1 lead.

The Brewers added a run in the fourth when Gantner doubled, moved to third on a sacrifice by Buck Martinez and scored on Molitor's single.

Cleveland rallied to close to within 6-4 in the fourth as Toby Harrah and Ron Hassey singled, and Alan Bannister walked to load the bases. Single runs then scored on a Rick Manning single, Jerry Dybzinski's run-scoring fielder's choice and a sacrifice fly by Dilone.

Milwaukee starter Reggie Cleveland was then lifted after walking Jorge Orta, bringing on Augustine, who raised his record to 4-2 by allowing only three hits over the final 51-3 innings.

Milwaukee got a run back in the fifth on consecutive doubles by Davis and Gantner and built a 9-4 margin in the sixth when Thomas walked, Ben Oglivie singled and both scored on Sixto Lezcano's double.

Yount doubled in the eighth, moved to third on Cecil Cooper's groundout and Thomas then delivered the Brewers final run with a sacrifice fly.

The Brewers rapped six doubles, two each by Gantner and Yount.

DETROIT (AP) — Texas designated hitter Rusty Staub had three hits — including a homer and a double — and scored four times himself to lead the Rangers to a 12-5 victory over the slumping Detroit Tigers.

The Rangers jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Bump Wills beat out an infield single, raced to third on Al Oliver's single and scored on Buddy Bell's single. Staub's single loaded the bases before Oliver came home on Pat Putnam's grounder.

Mickey Rivers belted his fifth homer of the season — a one-out solo shot in the Texas second.

Staub worked Detroit starter Jack Morris, 12-11, for a walk leading off the Ranger third, went to third on Putnam's single and Bruce Robbins relieved Morris. Robbins walked Richie Zisk to lead the bases with nobody out and Staub scored on Pepe Frias' sacrifice fly to center.

Bell slashed a two-out single in the Rangers' fourth and came home on Staub's double, then Putnam singled Staub across.

Frias was safe in the Texas fifth when Tom Brookens booted his ground ball at third and scored on successive singles by Rivers and Wills.

Staub opened the Texas sixth with a walk and scored his third run on Zisk's 17th homer of the season. Staub belted his fifth home run leading off the eighth. Bell's two-out double drove in Wills and Jim Norris in the Texas ninth.

The Tigers picked up two runs in the second when Al Cowens doubled home Richie Hebner and then scored on Mark Wagner's single.

Detroit's Steve Kemp belted a pair of homers, a bases-empty blast in the sixth and a two-run shot in the ninth.

Ken Clay, 1-0, making his f rst major league start of the season after joining the Rangers in the trade earlier in the week that sent Gaylord Perry to the New York Yankees, allowed seven hits in the 52-3 innings he worked before giving way to Danny Darwin.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Brett slapped three singles to extend his hitting streak to 28 games and Larry Gura posted his 17th victory as the Kansas City Royals whipped the Toronto Blue Jays 11-5 Saturday night.

Brett, who raised his average to .394, also scored twice and drove in two runs, giving him 83 RBIs in 81 games.

Gura, the second winningest pitcher in the American League at 17-5, allowed three runs 10 hits over seven innings in posting his ninth career triumph against Toronto, which never has beaten him.

Every Kansas City starter had a hit in the Royals' 17-hit attack, including John Wathan's three-run homer off Jack Kucek, 3-5. Clint Hurdle had two singles and a double.

Brett drove in the first Kansas City run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning after Willie Wilson singled, stole second and moved to third on a grounder. Hal McRae singled to lead off the second, went to third on center fielder Dan Ainge's error and scored on Hurdle's single. U.L. Washington singled preceding Wathan's fourth homer of the season.

The Royals, who have won four games in a row and 10 of their last 12, made it 8-0 in the fourth on a double by Wilson, an RBI single by Brett, a walk to Darrell Porter and McRae's two-run double.

Toronto got its first three runs in the sixth on singles by Alfredo Griffin and Bob Bailor, a double by John Mayberry and a single by Roy Howell.

Singles by Brett, Porter and Willie Aikens produced a Kansas City run in the sixth and the Royals added two more in the seventh on doubles by Hurdle and Rance Mulliniks and a grounder by Rusty Torres.

Moccasins Tabbed As Team To Beat In SC

BY BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer

Pressure is nothing new to football coaches. But the pressure on a new coach taking over a team expected to win its conference championship is more extreme — in most cases.

Tennessee-Chattanooga's Bill Oliver may be the exception.

In the three seasons the Moccasins have been in the Southern Conference, they won or shared the league championship under Coach Joe Morrison. Now enters Oliver with his team picked to win a fourth straight title after last year's 5-1, 9-2 finish.

But Oliver comes to Chattanooga after nine years as an assistant coach at Alabama. Living up to high expectations is almost second nature to him, since the Crimson Tide is the perennial favorite for the Southeastern Conference title and usually is among the top teams in the nation.

"I've been associated with this type of challenge for quite a while where I came from," Oliver said. "The big thing is how the players accept it. Me, I'd rather be picked No. 1 than at the bottom. Of course it's always harder to stay there than get there."

Staying there looked as though it might be more difficult than anticipated for awhile.

The two starting running backs, Gwain Durden and Mike Smith, ran into problems. Durden had academic difficulties and Smith decided to quit to pursue a graduate degree. On top of that, top backup Tony Ball had knee surgery and his status is in doubt.

But then fate smiled on Oliver. Smith changed his mind this past week and will play after all. Durden has been going to summer school and all signs are that he will be back.

At quarterback, junior Steve Woods returns after taking over at midseason and leading thte Mocs to victories in four of the five games he started. He passed for 1,203 yards with the help of wide receiver Joe Burke, who is back. Burke pulled in 26 passes for 581 yards.

VIRGINIA MILITARY

VMI's problem last year was that it only had five conference games, so it's 4-1 finish delegated the Keydets to second place even though they had the same number of losses as UTC. The good news this year is that the Keydets have six league games. The bad news is they lost 11 of 12 starters. The preseason coaches' poll indicates that loss — VMI was picked to finish sixth.

But Keydet coach Bob Thalman believes in the impossible.

"The magic thread that holds it all together is we believe we can get the job done," Thalman said. "Going into this season expecting to win, on paper, is next to impossible. But I keep a positive self-expectancy. I don't believe you can be a winner if you don't expect to win. We expect to win."

But Thalman is not overly confident. He has a sophomore quarterback, Frank Brown, who "hasn't played a down."

THE CITADEL

The Citadel finished third in the league last season at 4-2. And although coach Art Baker's team is picked to finish fourth this year he said, "I always feel we have a chance to win the championship."

Baker's optimism comes from the fact that he returns the majority of his 1979 team.

The big difference is on defense. Baker brought in a new defensive coordinator, Bruce Johnson, who instituted the "Multiple 50 Mad Dog Defense." The defense should be at least as good as last year's unit, which finished last in total defense in the conference.

FURMAN

Furman finished fourth in the league last season at 4-3 and Coach Dick Sheridan is entering the 1980 season with mixed feelings.

His entire defense from last year is back — and that includes three all-conference selections — but they had a lot of points scored against them last season and this season are backed up by freshmen.

On offense, the line will be young but the backfield is in fair shape.

APPALACHIAN STATE

Appalachian State has a highly touted passing game and a new coach. The coach is Mike Working, who was an assistant last year at Wake Forest, where passing was the name of the game.

Working has scuttled the wishbone offense and brought in the dropback I, which infers a lot of passing. At quarterback is Steve Brown, who was third nationally last year in total offense with 2,557 yards. At split end is Rick Beasley, the nation's No. 1 pass receiver last season with 1,205 yards on 74 receptions.

EAST TENNESSEE STATE

East Tennessee State had its first winning season in nine years last season, going 7-4 but finishing sixth in the conference with a 2-3 mark. But the Buccaneers are picked to finish second this time, and Coach Jack Carlisle is not so sure about that.

"The way we recruited it may be another nine years before we have another winning season," he said. "I don't know what kind of football team we've got. We had a terrible spring practice. Our offensive line is weaker. We're just not that good a football team."

WESTERN CAROLINA

Western Carolina wound up seventh in the conference last season with a 2-4 mark but had a winning season overall at 6-5. With his Catamounts picked third, Coach Bob Waters is optimistic this year.

"We have athletes at skill positions," Waters said, adding that was something new. "I think we could be highly competitive."

One reason for his optimism is senior wide receiver Gerald Harp, all-conference and honorable mention All-America last year. He needs only 459 receiving yards to become only the fourth player in the nation to reach the 3,000-yard mark and only 1,158 to become the all-time leader.

MARSHALL

"Last year I said we would be next to awful," Marshall coach Sonny Randle said. "We won our first game because they didn't know how bad we were."

Marshall didn't win another last year and finished 0-6 and 1-10. Randle said better attitude and better strength will change that.

"We will be able to play with anyone this year," he said.

Pirates' Blyleven Blanks Expos, 5-0

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bert Blyleven missed getting a cherished personal goal but was willing to settle for a significant team accomplishment.

"I'll take a two-hitter and I'll take a win over the Montreal Expos," Blyleven said Saturday after he retired the first 20 Montreal batters and wound up shutting out the Expos 5-0. Blyleven lost his bid for a perfect game when Rowland Office singled with two out in the seventh as the Pirates opened a two-game lead over the second-place Expos in the National League East.

Blyleven confined his postgame comments to a radio show and Montreal reporters. He has been carrying on a feud with the local media since he jumped the Pirates for a few days earlier in the season claiming that Manager Chuck Tanner was lifting him too and not giving him a chance to pitch complete games.

He achieved one of his goals in 1977 by hurling a no-hitter against the California Angels while with the Texas Rangers.

"I've been in the situation before with no-hitters," said the 29-year-old right-hander. "I felt I was going to get it today. Things were going my way. I didn't have any real great plays behind me, but there were some good plays. Office just hit a bad pitch. I wanted it away and it stayed over the plate."

Office's single went past a diving John Milner, who had entered the game at first base as a defensive replacement.

"It wasn't really that close," said Office. "He dove after the ball had gone through."

Thhat was one of Blyleven's few mistakes Saturday.

"He almost singlehandedly beat them," said Pittsburgh catcher Ed Ott. "That's the best game I've ever caught ... period!"

A single by Rodney Scott and a walk to pinch hitter Tommy Hutton in the ninth were the only other baserunners allowed by Blyleven, 7-8.

Blyleven struck out 10 of the first 19 batters he faced and finished with 12 strikeouts.

Bill Madlock's first-inning single drove in two runs to key a four-run inning for the Pirates. Omar Moreno led off with a triple and scored on Tim Foli's infield grounder.

Dave Parker and Willie Stargell each singled and Parker came home on a double by Mike Easler. Madlock then singled to score both Stargell and Easler to complete the inning against Expos starter Scot Sanderson, 12-7.

Office entered the game in the second inning as a replacement for Andre Dawson, who was forced to leave with a strained groin muscle. After allowing the single by Office, Blyleven got Gary Carter to ground into a force play and retired the Expos in order in the eighth inning.

Pittsburgh has now won nine of 11 games against Montreal this season and has a 16-4 record against the Expos dating back to last year's All-Star break.

Saving The Lead
George Cadle leans backwards and the crowd reacts as he chipped from behind the 18th green to within a short distance of the pin Saturday during the Westchester Classic golf tournament. Cadle took a par-5 on the hole to finish at 10-under par for the first three rounds of the tourney. He is the leader by one stroke over four others tied for second. (AP Laserphoto)

Cadle Can't Help Looking Back

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — George Cadle, with a doggedly-determined, hard-won 70, couldn't resist a glance over his shoulder after taking sole control of the third-round lead Saturday in the $400,000 Westcester Golf Classic.

"Any of the players could come from anywhere," he said of Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize, "but you gotta think Watson."

And Tom Watson, the most consistent winner in the game, was in menacing position a single stroke back of the burly Cadle, who has yet to win in six years of PGA tour activity.

With tongue firmly planted in cheek, Cadle advised a friend of his game plan:

"I'm gonna take Watson drinking here in a minute. Buy him all he can drink. Give him an unlimited drinking account."

On a more serious note, Cadle said his plan was relatively simple.

"I'm just going to try to play each shot as good as I can and when it's over I'll look up and see if it was good enough," he said.

"All of the guys who have won will tell you that you can't force it. You just have to let it come."

But there was the formidable Watson in contention.

"I'd rather be in front," said the man who has won more tournaments this year, and more over the last four, than any other player in the game.

"It's just a matter of producing," he said

Cadle, 32, moved into control with a solid front-nine performance and then, with Watson challenging, had to fight off a potential collapse to get in with a three-round total of 203, 10 shots under par on the hilly, 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course.

Watson, already the winner of the British Open and five American tournaments this year, also had a 70 on the suburban New York layout that played much tougher in a gusty, tricky wind. He was one of three tied at 204.

"It was a very windy day, and I kind of struggled, but I made enough good shots to stay within reach of the leader," he said.

He was tied with Curtis Strange and Bob Murphy, each with a 70. Murphy stayed close with a 12-foot putt for an eagle-3 on the final hole.

"That hole owes me," Murphy said of the relatively easy finishing hole.

"It's cost me three tournaments — when I kept making pars and somebody else was making birdie — and maybe I'll get even this time. So far I've played it birdie-birdie-eagle."

"It's going to be interesting," Strange said in a look ahead to the final round Sunday. "George is playing well and putting well and Watson is always there."

It was two strokes back of the trio tied for second to George Burns and Tommy Valentine at 206. Burns had a 69 and Valentine a 72.

Phil Hancock, Roger Maltbie and George Archer were at 207. Hancock and Maltbie had 70s and the veteran Archer, with his 17-year-old daughter Elizabeth serving as his caddy, matched par 71.

Australian David Graham, the second-round leader who has a history of strong play on this course, blew out of contention with a fat 77 that included a 40 on the back nine. He made triple bogey 6 on the 16th hole, hitting into a hazard and eventually 3-putting.

The 230-pound Cadle, who has yet to gain exempt status in a tour career that started in 1974, started the windy day a single shot back of Graham but quickly took charge. With Graham running into difficulties almost immediately, Cadle holed an eight-foot putt for birdie on the second hole, had a share of the lead and didn't trail again.

He reached the par-5 fifth in two and 2-putted for another birdie and scored from 18 feet on the eighth.

That put him out in 33, but he had to work hard to retain it.

He missed the green and bogeyed the 14th, drove poorly and bogeyed the 15th, had to make a 10-footer to save par on the 17th and failed to birdie the par-5 18th.

Archer's Caddy Is In The Family

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — George Archer turned to his daughter Liz for some familial advice.

"A three or a four iron?" he asked the 17-year-old who serves as his caddy.

Liz Archer is a rarity on the PGA tour: the child of a tour regular serving as that player's caddy. She's done so all summer.

"I was going to be England this summer but Dad asked me to stay with him," she said. "So I said I wanted to caddy to work for a car. He was surprised, but I told him if I was a boy he'd let me do it.

"It's been fun and I've made a good deal more money than I would working in a fast food place."

The Archer family travels the summer circuit with George, who won the Master's in 1969, but hasn't had a victory since the 1976 Sahara Invitational. He doesn't have a regular caddy, hence the opportuntiy for Liz to grab the job.

"I get paid the standard that any caddy gets, but I get a bonds—room and board," she said. "Of course, it can get pretty uncomfortable with four people in a hotel room for 10 weeks."

Actually, the senior at Gilroy (Calif.) High School has had few problems on tour.

"I get some kidding from the other caddies but anbody can take teasing," she said. "Maybe the other players in my dad's grouping might be self conscious because I'm there, but I've gotten along fine and been treated fine."

She has had to learn when not to make her presence too apparent, however.

"One time Dad had a real bad hole on a round when I first started," she recalled. "When he came off the green, I said, 'Dad, I love you,' and I think he didn't know what to do. Sometimes the golfers like to get mad, and he couldn't.

"Now, I don't say too much to him during the round. That's the best way."

Liz does not golf but is a standout in track and field.

"I'd like to get a track scholarship, but there aren't that many available," she said. "The discus has been my strongest event, but I'm thinking about the pentathalon in collee. There's no pentathalon in high school, but that might be my best event in college."

Since Liz began caddying for her father at the Canadian Open in June, several other players have felt pressure from within their families.

"Some kids of players are saying that if I can do it, so can they," she noted. "The sons of Bobby Nichols, Frank Beard and Don January have done it."

After Sunday's final round of the Westchester Classic, Liz will be finished with caddying — for now. But she might be back...She hasn't gotten that car yet.

Rain Stops Daniel's Drive

By SCOTT PAPILLON
AP Sports Writer

MAPLEWOOD, Minn. (AP) — Heavy rain, blustery winds and temperatures in the mid-50s forced postponement of Saturday's second round of the $100,000 LPGA Patty Berg Golf Classic, with defending champion Beth Daniel the leader after 12 holes.

Approximately three-fourths of the golfers had finished their rounds when play was halted on the rain-soaked Keller Golf Course in suburban St. Paul.

Players had teed off in driving rain Saturday morning and were called into the clubhouse in the early afternoon. After an hour's delay, tourney officials decided to resume play. But by late afternoon conditions had deteriorated so badly that play was suspended for the day.

The five groups with incomplete second rounds, including most of the leaders, are scheduled to tee off at 8 a.m. Sunday, although the National Weather Service said rain still was likely.

After the cut is made, the remaining field will tee off on split tees at 11 a.m.

Daniel, who won the event last year as a rookie when rain washed out the final round of play, caught first-round leader Pat Bradley on the first hole of the second round and passed her on the next hole.

Bradley had fired a 6-under-par 67 Friday for a one-shot lead over Daniel, but Daniel carded a birdie on the first hole Saturday while Bradley took a par. Bradley then suffered a bogey on No.2 while Daniel took a par to grab the lead.

Patty Hayes moved up to second place after 12 holes of the second round, two strokes behind Daniel, at 5-under.

Bradley finished the day three strokes back at 4-under, while two-time U.S. Open champion Hollis Stacey moved into fourth place at 2-under.

Daniel was effective despite the nasty weather, making the turn with a 2-under 35. She also added birdies on the seventh and eighth holes while Bradley bogeyed both of the par-3s on the front nine.

Temperence Hill Shows Victory Was No Fluke

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Proving that his upset triumph in the Belmont Stakes was no fluke, Temperence Hill rallied from last place to capture the $168,300 Travers Stakes for 3-year-olds Saturday at Saratoga Race Track.

The son of Stop the Music-Sister Shannon, owned by the Loblolly Stable, had lost three straight races since the June 7 Belmont, so trainer Joe Cantey took the blinkers off the colt for the first time.

"I had to do something to keep him interested," said Cantey, who added that he was pointing Temperence Hill for the Sept.6 Marlboro Cup at Belmont Park.

Jockey Eddie Maple kept Temperence Hill interested by whipping him more than 20 times through the stretch in posting a 1½-length victory over First Albert, a California invader owned by Carmen Barerra.

"Temperence Hill has a habit of running late," said Cantey, "and he usually runs on the outside. But Maple saw the opening and did the right thing going to the inside."

Entremont Stable's Amber Pass finished third, a nose behind First Albert and 6¾ lengths in front of John M.Schiff's Plugged Nickle, the 9-5 favorite in the field of nine.

Temperence Hill was timed in 2:024-5 for the 1¼ miles over a fast track. All entrants in the 111th running of the Travers, America's oldest stakes, carried 126 pounds.

Temperence Hill, who was beaten by 11 lengths in his last start when he finished fourth in the Brooklyn Handicap, was sent off as the second choice of the crowd of 38,117 and paid $9.60, $4.60 and $4.20. First Albert returned $4.20 and $3.80. Amber Pass, a 12-1 outsider, paid $5.20 to show.

Superbity took the early lead, but after a half-mile Amber Pass, ridden by Don MacBeth, went in front and held the lead until the early stretch as both First Albert, ridden by Angel Cordero, and Temperence Hill made their moves.

Temperence Hill then moved along the inside and pulled away with ease as First Albert and Amber Pass battled for second money.

The victory was worth $100,980 to Temperence Hill, who is trained by Joe Cantey, and boosted his lifetime earnings to $501,952. The big bay colt, who failed to win in three starts as a 2-year-old, now has six victories in 13 career starts.

The complete order of finish, following Plugged Nickle, was: Little Lenny, Sportful, Superbity, Dr. Blum and Great Gladiator.

The crowd was the second largest in the history of Saratoga, even though such standouts as Genuine Risk, the Kentucky Derby winner, and Codex, the Preakness winner, passed up the event.

In the previous race on the program, actor Jack Klugman's Jaklin Klugman scored a 7¼-length victory over J.P. Brother in the $32,000 Syran Sea Handicap for 3-year-olds. Jaklin Klugman, the 9-5 favorite over five rivals, was making his first start since a fourth place finish in the Preakness.

Borg Sails To Easy Win Over Mayer

Eyes On The Ball
Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia has his eyes on the ball as it returns to Paul Kronk of Austria during semi-final Player's International Canadian Open tennis championship action Saturday afternoon in Toronto. Lendl won the match and will face Bjorn Borg in the finals. (AP Laserphoto)

TORONTO (AP) — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden easily disposed of Sandy Mayer of the United States 6-0, 6-3, Saturday to advance to the final of the $325,000 Canadian Open Tennis championships.

Borg will meet Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the fourth seed, in Sunday's final. Lendl beat Paul Kronk of Australia 6-2, 6-2 in the other semifinal.

Chris Evert-Lloyd advanced to the women's final with a 6-4, 7-5 victory over Pam Shriver. Lloyd, the second seed and favorite after the withdrawal of Martina Navratilova because of a back ailment, will meet Virginia Ruzici of Romania in the final.

Ruzici downed Kathy Jordan 6-3, 6-3 in their semifinal. Jordan, who upset third-seeded Evonne Goolagong in the quarterfinals, called an injury timeout in the fifth game of the second set because of a pulled muscle, but she was able to continue the match.

Borg's victory at love in the opening set was more difficult than the scoreboard indicated. The second game, with Mayer serving, went to deuce 10 times before Borg broke through.

In the second set, Borg broke Mayer in the fourth game to go ahead 3-1, then the pair held service the rest of the way before Borg won it in the ninth to advance to the final and a shot at the $28,000 first prize.

Borg's passing shots consistently found the mark and his accurate first serve gave Mayer problems from the outset. At one point in the fifth game of the second set, Borg returned a shot from behind the baseline with his back to the net. The hard shot went to the center of the court on the opposite side and Mayer, appearing stunned that the Swede even had managed to return the lob, hit his return into the net.

"After the long second game in the first set, I played perfect," Borg said. "I didn't miss a ball. I was a little surprised to be playing so well. I expected it to be difficult after five weeks off."

Lloyd, who has beaten Shriver on two previous occasions, including the 1978 U.S. Open final, broke the young American in the 11th game of the second set to go ahead 6-5. She then held service in the final game to take the match.

Shriver said windy conditions on the center court affected her game.

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Writer

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Veteran Bob Lutz defeated Shlomo Glickstein of Israel and young Johan Kriek of South Africa upset Vijay Amritraj of India by identical 7-6, 6-4 scores Saturday and advanced to the final of the $75,000 Stowe Grand Prix Tennis Tournament.

The unseeded Lutz and No. 5 seeded Kriek, who never have faced each other before, play Sunday for the $13,100 first prize.

Both won serve and volley matches in the semifinals after rain forced them onto the faster indoor court.

Lutz, 33, seeking his second straight tournament victory after winning at Columbus, Ohio last week, needed a service break in the 12th game of the first set to force the tie-breaker, and then raced through it 7-1 by winningthe last six points.

After each player broke the other in the second set, the Californian scored the last and deciding break of the set with four passing shot winners for a 3-2 lead.

"It was a big advantage for him, breaking in the 12th," said the unseeded Glickstein. "I lost confidence a bit. I missed a lot of volleys in the tiebreaker.

"I would rather have stayed back," said Glickstein, 22, who normally prefers the baseline. "But inside you must serve and volley. I think it would have been better for me outside."

Lutz, who had taken three weeks off before Columbus following a disastrous stretch, said the last two weeks are "the best I've played consistently sincd 1972."

If he can beat Kriek on Sunday for two consecutive titles, "it would be the first time since I don't know when ... well since juniors, maybe."

Kriek, 22, who never has played Lutz before and is looking his first tournament title this year after winning once in 1979, won the first set tie-breaker 7-3 with four straight points for a 4-1 lead and then the last three points.

He scored the only break of the second set in the final game when Amritraj, at No. 3 the highest seed to make the semis, double faulted at 30-40.

"I served pretty well, and that was a tremendous help, especially indoors," said Kriek, who earlier in the week defeated Amritraj's brother, Anand. But the match was so close "I knew if I slipped once he would be in command. I just kept the pressure on him."

Capture Soap Box Derby Title

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Northern California soap box titlist Daniel Purol and Chris Fulton of Indianapolis won national championships in their divisions of the 43rd All-American Soap Box Derby on Saturday.

Purol, 12, recorded the day's fastest time of 28.02 seconds on the 953-foot track to win the senior division, which featured racers from age 12 to 15. He earned a $5,000 college scholarship and a full-size replica of an antique car.

He said he did not pay much attention to his competitors in the final race, instead concentrating on his own performance.

"I looked over a couple of times just to see how they were doing," he said.

Fulton said this will mark the end of his racing career.

"Dad says I didn't help enough with the car and it was hard to build," he said. Fulton said he became interested in soap box racing when his brother won $400 as champion in 1978.

For his victory, Fulton earned an arc-welder and other tools.

Finishing second in the senior division was Beth Frye of Dayton, Ohio. Third place went to Tim Jones, winner of Indiana's Midwest Open race.

Vilas Is Upset In Tournament

CLEVELAND (AP) — Victor Amaya upset top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-4, 7-6 Saturday in the semifinals of the $75,000 Western Open Tennis Championships.

Amaya won the second set tiebreaker 7-4 to advance to Sunday's final.

He will face No.2-seeded Gene Mayer, who breezed past fourth-seeded Buster Mottram 6-4, 6-2 in the semifinals.

After squaring off in the singles final, Mayer and Amaya will team to face Fred McNair and Sashi Mennon for the doubles crown.

Mayer and Amaya knocked off Bruce Foxworth and John Benson 6-2, 6-1 in one doubles semifinal, while McNair and Mennon defeated Matt Mitchell and Nduka Odizor 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Laver Tops Net Event

ROLLING MEADOWS, Ill. (AP) — Rod Laver defeated Roy Emerson 6-1, 6-3, and teamed with Ken Rosewall to score a doubles victory Saturday in a 35-and-over championship tennis event.

Laver's semifinal victory advanced him into the final against the winner of the Saturday night semifinal between Rosewall and Fred Stolle.

Laver and Rosewall teamed in the doubles semifinal to defeat Mark Cox and Cliff Drysdale 6-3, 6-4, and will meet the winners of the other semifinal between the pairs of Owen Davidson-Bob Hewitt and Emerson-Stolle.

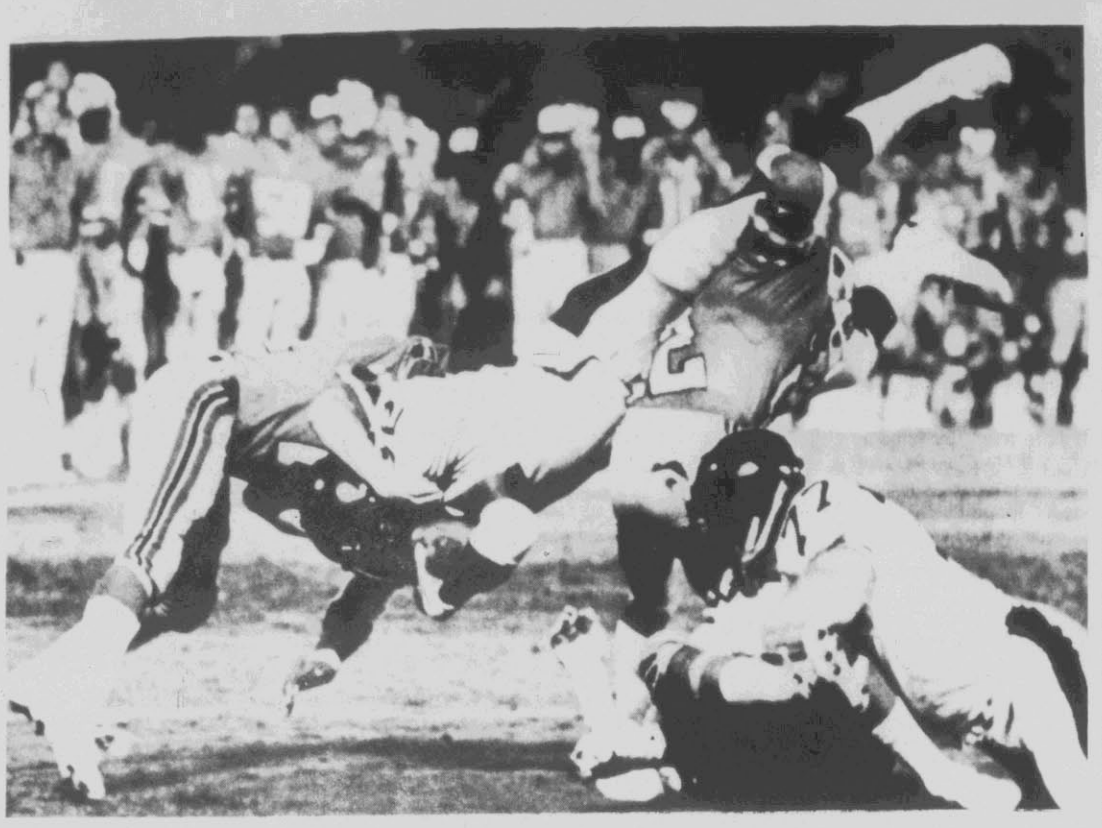
Both Coaches Want Look At Defense



The Birds Team Up

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Coaches for both the Washington Redskins and the Cleveland Browns are looking forward to getting a look at Cleveland's new 3-4 defense when the two National Football League teams square off in a preseason contest Monday night.

The Redskins say they're happy to get a chance to work against the increasingly popular formation, which utilizes three defensive linemen and four linebackers, before the regular season opens.

And the Browns need to find someone to anchor the formation.

"We're kind of glad Cleveland has gone to the 3-4" from the more traditional 4-3, said Joe Walton, defensive coordinator for the Redskins. "That'll give us some work on it in training camp for later on."

The Browns, meanwhile, continue their search for a nose tackle, the middle man on the three-man defensive line, and Monday's game could decide whether they'll stick with their current personnel or seek a trade to fill the post, team officials indicated.

Currently, four candidates are vying for the two nosetackle vacancies on the Browns' roster. Neither fourth-year pro Mickey Sims, second-year men Rich Dimler and Henry Bradley, nor rookie Marcus Jackson has been able to establish himself as a frontrunner for the job.

That Jackson remains in contention is a tribute to the 6-foot-2, 261-pounder from Purdue, a 12th-round choice who was the 321st player selected in the National Football League draft.

"The only thing that's important is being here and getting a chance. It's all I ever wanted," said Jackson, who recognizes the difficulties he faces in making the team.

"I'm an underdog, I know," he said. "But being drafted as low as I was helps in a way. Nobody really expected me to step right in, and everything good that I do is sort of a plus. But I feel I'm as good as anybody else, which is not putting down the other guys."

The Redskins were 13-3 winners over the Baltimore Colts in their first preseason contest. The Browns dropped a 42-0 verdict to the Kansas City Chiefs.

American Beats Coe

VIAREGGIO, Italy (AP) — Don Paige of the United States defeated world record-holder Sebastian Coe of Britain in the men's 800-meter run at an international track meet Thursday evening in this Italian city south of Genoa.

The American's victory came a day after Coe exerted himself in a near-successful assault on the world record in the 1,500-meter run in Zurich.

In the 800, Paige was clocked in 1:45.04, more than a half-second slower than Coe's world mark of 1:44.4.

Coe was second in 1:45.07. Third was James Robinson of the United States in 1:46.13.

On Wednesday, Coe won the 1,500 in 3:32.19, just missing the world record of 3:32.1 which he currently shares with his British rival, Steve Ovett.

Arnoux Dominates Runs For Austrian Qualifying

ZELTWEG, Austria (AP) — Rene Arnoux of France dominated the qualifying for the Austrian Grand Prix Formula One race here Saturday. He posted a blistering 1 minute 30.27 seconds lap on the four-mile Oesterreichring track and took the pole position for Sunday's 11th race for the drivers' world championship.

Jabouille was timed in 1:31.48, which he established during the first qualifying session Friday.

The Williams-Ford team of Australia — Alan Jones, the world championship standings leader, and his Argentinian teammate Carlos Reutemann — occupied the second row with times of 1:32.95 and 1:33.07, respectively.

The final training session was highlighted by a bitter battle for the last qualifying slot betwen British newcomer Nigel Mansell driving a Lotus-Ford and Dutchman Jan Lammers in an Ensign-Ford.

After leading by only 16 hundredths of a second with two minutes to go, Lammers saw himself bumped off the starting grid in the last minute. Mansel, as newcomer to Formula One racing, boarded the car of former world champion Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., and drove a lap of 1:36.20, nearly a second faster than Lammers' previous best.

"The car is just better than anything I've driven before," Mansell beamed after qualifying for his first world championship race.

Qualifying fifth was Jacques Laffite aboard a Ligier-Ford. The Frenchman was the winner of the last championship event at Hockenheim, West Germany.

He posted 1:33.16 on the scenic course nestled betwen pine-covered mountains and led his French teammate Didier Pironi from the third row. Pironi clocked 1:33.22.

West Germany's Jochen Mass, who crashed badly during the first training session Friday and was taken to a nearby hospital with a bruised spine, returned to the track Saturday. But after turning two slow laps in his Arrows-Ford, his team manager dicided to withdraw him from the race.

Memorial Race Is Postponed

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Tony Bettanhausen Memorial 100-mile USAC dirt car race was rained out Saturday and rescheduled for Monday, Illinois State Fair officials said. A chance of more rain also jeopardized Sunday's stock car race.

USAC officials ruled Saturday morning that the one-mile dirt oval at the Illinois State Fairgrounds was too wet to race, and said more rain would wash out Sunday's race.

The weather forecast for the Springfield area Saturday called for more rain Saturday night, and a 40 percent chance of rain on Sunday.

Bill Oldani, coordinator of the two state fair races, said officials would wait until Sunday morning to decide whether to run the 100-mile late model stock car race.

"We need sunshine and some warm breezes," he said Saturday. "If there is no more rain, we can get it in shape. There's a lot of mud and a lot to do but we could get it in shape.

"If there's any possibility at all we will run tomorrow," he said of the stock car races.

If Sunday's race were rained out, it would be postponed until Tuesday afternoon, Oldani said. If rain continues Monday and Tuesday, he said, "it's questionable" whether the race would be held Tuesday.

There is a possibility USAC officials could reschedule the two races here in mid-September.

Cardinals Slip Past Buccaneers

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — St. Louis' Rod Phillips plunged 1 yard to cap a furious second-half rally and lead the mistake-prone Cardinals to a 21-14 preseason National Football League victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers Saturday night.

The Cardinals fumbled on each of their first four possessions of the game, then battled back from a 14-0 halftime deficit, with Phillips' game-winning score coming with just 6:14 left to play.

The Cardinals then had to weather a strong Bucs' comeback bid as the defending National Football Conference Central Division champs drove deep into St. Louis territory in the last two minutes.

Tampa opened the scoring after linebacker Dewey Selmon recovered a fumble by Cardinal running back Wayne Morris on the St. Louis 24 late in the first quarter. Five plays later, running back Jerry Eckwood charged over from the 1 and Tampa had a 7-0 lead.

In the second period, wide receiver Gordon Jones' diving catch of an 11-yard pass from quarterback Doug Williams pushed the score to 14-0.

It wasn't until midway through the third quarter when St. Louis got its first touchdown. Safety Roy Greene intercepted a pass from backup quarterback Mike Rae at the Bucs' 49, but fumbled. Teammate Ken Stone picked up the loose ball and raced 40 yards to the 12.

Six plays later, St. Louis quarterback Steve Pisarkiewiecz passed 2 yards to tight end Bill Murrell for the score.

The victory gave first year Coach Jim Hanifan a 1-1 exhibition record. The Cardinals dropped their opener 17-13 to New Orleans last week.

The loss dropped the Bucs to a 1-1 record after their opening 21-7 victory over Houston.

Tampa moved into position to score before the half, driving to the 1 before running back Ricky Bell fumbled at the goal line. The angle of TV replays indicated Bell had crossed the line before the fumble, but officials gave the ball to St. Louis at the 2.

In the last two minutes, Tampa drove to the Cardinals 19 but Rae missed on four passes into the end zone.

Mark Bell, whose punt return late in the game buoyed the St. Louis rally, was a 1979 draft choice from Colorado State who spent last year on the injured reserve list.

Tampa Bay and St. Louis met only once before, with the Bucs defeating St. Louis 17-7 in a regular-season game in December 1977. It was Tampa's second victory in their young history and its first at home.

Strikers Take Win

CHICAGO (AP) — Striker Mark Peterson scored three times to lead the Seattle Sounders to a 3-1 North American Soccer League win Saturday over the Chicago Sting.

The contest was played at rain-drenched Wrigley Field before a crowd of 16,196, who saw a handful of yellow cards issued by the referee for rough play.

Seattle's first scoring opportunity was blunted by Sting goalkeeper Phil Parkes, who stopped a penalty kick by John Ryan. The kick was awarded because Peterson was fouled in the penalty area just 1:25 into the game.

But Peterson came back just three minutes later for his second tally of the day, again off a feed from Bourne for a 2-1 Seattle lead at intermission.

Tennessee Set To Face Tough Schedule

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Lacking a proven quarterback and its star runner tottering on the edge of academic ineligibility, Tennessee begins practicing for its 1980 football season Monday, three weeks before the opener against Georgia.

Coach Johnny Majors, with three national championship contenders — Southern California, Pittsburgh and defending titleholder Alabama — as opponents, calls Tennessee's 1980 schedule the toughest he has faced as a coach and the most formidable in the school's history.

"Two of our toughest Southeastern Conference games are backed up against two of our toughest non-conference games," he said. Southern Cal immediately follows Georgia and the Vols face Pittsburgh and Alabama back-to-back the last two Saturdays in October.

Because summer school is still in session, the team will practice this week an unprecedented three times a day, begining at 7:30 a.m. EDT and not finishing until 9:15 p.m.

Fifteen to 20 players are in summer school and the thrice daily practices are the only way they can attend their classes until the summer session ends this Friday. Twice-a-day practices will begin next week.

While Majors will be on the field trying to pick a quarterback from four contenders, he also will have an eye on the classroom, where fullback Hubert Simpson still has to pass two classes to stay on the team.

Simpson, a 204-pound senior from Athens, Tenn., and the Vols' most frequent doghouse occupant, cleared one hurdle Friday, getting a C in the course that had his academic advisors worried the most.

Without the option quarterbacking of a Condredge Holloway or Jimmy Streater, Simpson's presence is essential if a more deliberate ground attack is to succeed in replacing the razzle-dazzle offenses of the past decade.

Simpson came off the bench after being demoted to third team last year and tied a school record with four touchdowns against Notre Dame. He netted 792 yards in 27 carries the final four games and needs only another 849 yards to become the school's all-time ground gainer.

"We will prepare for the season with or without Hubert Simpson," Majors said. "I'm not going to say any more, because it's in Hubert's hands."

The other big question is who will quarterback the Vols now that Streater is gone. Majors said he hopes to have an idea in 10 to 14 days but he fears the final choice may not be made until the day before the first game Sept. 6.

Bobby King and Randall Morris, an early arriving freshman signee, also held the No. 1 spot in the spring at various times primarily because of injuries. Seven other new arrivals tried their hands at quarterback during the freshman drills last week.

Olszewski started two games last year after Streater suffered a knee injury against Notre Dame. Majors called his performance "moderate at best."

The rest of the backfield — Terry Daniels, James Berry and Glenn Ford — is established and there's more depth. But Majors said Tennessee still doesn't have any great running backs, and he included Simpson in that list.

The offensive line is larger and tougher than last season but lacks depth. Majors says its anchor, Tim Irwin of Knoxville, "has the potential to be the best tackle-guard I've ever coached."

With punter John Warren and kicker Alan Duncan returning, the foot-against-the-ball portion of the kicking game is intact. But if Tennessee is to get off the win-one-lose-one roller coaster it rode to a 7-4 regular season record last year, the kicking coverage and defense will have to improve, Majors said.

Tennessee has put most of its chips on the defense this year after its spotty performance in 1979. Noseguard Jim Noonan, who wreaked havoc in 1977 and 1978, is back at middle guard after being sidelined all of last season with a foot injury.

"Noonan has a chance to be one of the finest football players in the country," Majors said. "Maybe we could have even been 9-2 last year had he been in there.

Astros Win— In 20th Inning

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It took six hours and 17 minutes — 20 innings — for the San Diego Padres to make an error. Then two miscues led to a 3-1 victory for the Houston Astros Friday night.

With the score tied 1-1 for hours, groundskeepers milled around on the field waiting for the game to end so they could prepare the stadium for Saturday's San Diego Chargers exhibition football game.

Because of the National Football League game, the Astros and the Padres got a rest Saturday before closing out their four-game series in a doubleheader Sunday.

"When you go that far, you want to come out with a win," said Houston Astros' Terry Puhl, whose easy fly to the outfield was missed by two players and drove in the two winning runs. Puhl was disappointed at not being awarded a hit on the play, but said, "We won the ballgame though, and that's the main thing."

The victory was on the third for the Astros in their last nine games and kept them tied with the Los Angeles Dodgers for the National League West lead.

With two outs in the 20th inning and runners on first and third, Puhl's ball could have been easily caught by either Mumphrey or Dave Winfield. But neither one did as Puhl wound up on third.

"We both went for the ball, but at the last minute I heard Winfield say 'Take it,'" said Mumphrey. "It was my ball and I guess it was my fault."

The Padres took the lead on rookie Craig Stimac's run-scoring single in the second inning. Starting in his first major league game, Stimac pounded out four hits in the game.

The Astros tied it in the fourth when Jose Cruz scored from third on Dennis Walling's grounder.

Then it was a grueling battle over 15 scoreless innings before Houston was able to win it for reliever Dave Smith, 3-5.

Each team wasted numerous opportunities as the Astros stranded 13 runners and the Padres 21.

Padres shortstop Ozzie Smith's throwing error allowed Luis Pujols to reach first to open the 20th. Art Howe bunted back to pitcher Eric Rasmussen, 2-9, who throw to second was too late to get Pujols.

Rasmussen, the Padres' sixth pitcher, worked three perfect innings before Smith's error led San Diego to its fifth consecutive loss.

Olympians Give Aid To TV Show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Screen Actors Guild picketed the Sunset-Gower Studios Saturday after charging that Alan Landsburg Productions was taping ABC's "That's Incredible" with non-union hosts, including two U.S. Olympians.

Kim Fellner, a spokeswoman for the striking actors, said about 20 pickets were at the studio from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m.

"They must have gotten them in through another gate," said Fellner, referring to the non-union workers. "But we made our point. We'll be back on Sunday."

Howard Lipstone, president of Landsburg Productions, said he had repeatedly tried to settle with SAG — with the last effort on Friday — but had been turned down. He said, "It's unfair that they should settle with some companies and not with others."

Fellner said Kurt Thomas, a gymnast and 1979 Sullivan Award winner, and Mike Eruzione, a member of the victorious U.S. Olympic hockey team, were acting as hosts. Neither is a union member, she said.

The regular hosts of the popular ABC series — John Davidson, Fran Tarkenton and Cathy Lee Crosby — are on strike.

Lipstone said Thomas and Eruzione were acting as guest hosts to tie together segments from earlier shows that would be used in new episodes for the fall season.

Pittsburgh Whips Expos For 8th Time In 10 Tries

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

With a 64-51 record, the Montreal Expos are having one of their best seasons — it would be better, though, if they could beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Expos have lost 8 of 10 games to Pittsburgh and the most recent defeat — 7-3 Friday night — is the reason that they trail the front-running Pirates today by a game in the National League East.

"We took it right to them...now we have to win the next three games," said Pittsburgh's Mike Easler said after he and Dale Berra hit solo home runs and Jim Bibby earned his 15th victory with late relief help from Kent Tekulve.

With their victory, the Pirates continued a two-year domination of the Canadian team. Going back to the All-Star break of last season, the Pirates have taken 15 of 19 games from the Expos.

"There is no way that sweeping this series would be decisive," said Easler. "But it would be a big psychological edge — subconsciously, it would have to get them down."

When the Expos failed to score after loading the bases in the first inning, Manager Dick Williams knew it would be a long night.

"We had our opportunities, but we didn't capitalize," said Williams. "Tomorrow is another day."

The Los Angeles Dodgers, meanwhile, began their big weekend series with Cincinnati on the right foot with a 3-1 decision over the Reds. The victory moved the Dodgers and Houston Astros into a first-place tie in the NL West, a half-game over the Reds.

Dodgers 3, Reds 1

Dusty Baker slugged two home runs to back the five-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss as Los Angeles defeated Cincinnati.

Baker hit his 22nd homer to lead off the fourth inning and break a 1-1 tie. He hit his 23rd in the sixth, also with no one aboard.

Reuss, 14-4, won his fourth straight decision, beating the Reds for the third time without a loss this season. The Los Angeles left-hander struck out six and walked one.

Astros 3, Padres 1

Jerry Mumphrey committed a three-base error on Terry Puhl's two-out fly ball to center field to allow two runs to score in the top of the 20th inning as Houston outlasted San Diego.

The 6 hour, 17 minute marathon was the longest game timewise in Padres' history. The 20-inning contest equalled the longest in the majors this year. The Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates played 20 innings on July 6.

Phillies 8, Mets 0

Christenson, 4-0, scattered five hits over the first six innings in his return from surgery to remove bone spurs from his right elbow. He issued no walks and struck out five. McGraw earned his 12th save.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 4

Tim Blackwell's leadoff homer sparked a three-run uprising in the third inning as Chicago defeated St. Louis.

Winner Lynn McGlothen, 9-7, struck out four and walked one before needing Bruce Sutter's relief help in the eighth inning. Sutter gained his 25th save.

Braves 8, Giants 2

Bob Horner's 25th home run of the season, a three-run shot, climaxed a six-run, 13th-inning rally which propelled Atlanta over San Francisco.

The Braves had only three hits through 121-3 innings before successive singles by Bruce Benedict, Jeff Burroughs and Jerry Royster accounted for the go-ahead run off reliever Gary Lavelle, 5-6.

NFL's Turk Waiting To Swing Axe

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

There he is, hiding in the high grass, right behind the weekend, waiting to swing his axe.

He's the most feared man in the National Football League even though he's never thrown a pass, recovered a fumble or kicked a field goal.

He is the Turk, collector of playbooks and bearer of bad news for players trying to make NFL teams. He will make his dreaded debut Tuesday, the season's first cutdown day when rosters must be trimmed to 60 players. A week later, the limit goes to 50 with the final cut to 45 scheduled for Monday, Sept. 1.

The weekend began Friday night, the Philadelphia Eagles rode a pass interception and fumble recovery by safety Brenard Wilson to a 28-13 victory over the New York Jets and Pittsburgh edged Atlanta 17-13 as Terry Bradshaw hit on 10 of 16 passes and one TD toss.

There were eight games on tap for Saturday night with Baltimore vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Buffalo at Detroit, Chicago at Cincinnati, Dallas at Los Angeles, Denever at the New York Giants, New England at Oakland, St. Louis at Tampa Bay and San Francisco at San Diego.

Only one game, New Orleans at Houston, is scheduled for today, with three more, Miami at Seattle, Minnesota at Kansas City and Washington at Cleveland set for Monday night.

The LA-Dallas game is a rematch of a frequent playoff pairing. The Rams stunned the Cowboys last season en route to their first-ever Super Bowl appearance.

Los Angeles, knee-deep in capable receivers, passed veteran Ron Jessie off to Buffalo in a trade. That still leaves the Rams with Preston Dennard, last year's club leader with 43 catches for 766 yards; Willie Miller, Billy Waddy, Ron Smith and Drew Hill.

Football's best pass-catching Drew, of course, is Dallas' Drew Pearson, who figures to be an important target for quarterback Danny White. The plays are still sent in from the sidelines with offensive coordinator Dan Reeves handling that job during the preseason while head Coach Tom Landry concentrates on the Dallas defense.

One of Landry's defensive decisions was to trade lineman Dave Stalls to Tampa Bay. With the Bucs, Stalls joins a line that includes 1979 Defensive Player of the Year Lee Roy Selmon, Bill Kollar, Randy Crowder and Wally Chambers.

Bonnett To Seek Third Straight Win

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Neil Bonnett isn't about to look back.

The round-faced and mustachoied driver for the famed Wood Brothers team suffered through a long dry spell that made him more thankful than ever when the good times returned.

Now Bonnett has a chance to become the first NASCAR Grand National driver to win three straight races since David Pearson — the man he replaced in the Wood Brothers' Mercury — did it in 1976.

Bonnett, who went 19 agonizing races without a victory until holding on to win the Pocono 500, has since added a triumph in the Talladega 500.

He will lead a full field of NASCAR stars into Saturday's qualifying trials for Sunday's Michigan 400.

There was not the usual Friday practice session at Michigan International Speedway because the 2½-mile high-banked oval was being used by American Motors for 24-hour certification tests for the Environmental Protection Agency.

But that didn't faze the heady young driver from Hueytown, Ala.

"We've been playing catch-up all season," Bonnett noted. "Now it's time for the other teams to try to catch up to us."

The Wood Brothers, from Stuart, Va., revolutionized the racing pit stop and they've won almost everything there is to win in NASCAR.

"The Wood Brothers had the secrets of Michigan down pat, but I couldn't get it done for them in the race here earlier this year," Bonnett said.

"The problem is that the General Motors cars came up with a ton of power in their Chevrolets and the aerodynamics of their Oldsmobiles to blow us off the track.

"And we kept blowing engines and others things just trying to keep up with them. In fact, that was happening nearly everywhere.

"Bobby Allison and the other Ford (Mercury) drivers were ready to give up on their cars after chasing the GM cars all season. But the Wood Brothers stuck with our Cougar, and I'm glad they did.

"The car has always handled perfectly. Now, we've found the power to stay with, and hopefully even beat, the others," Bonnett added.

Goose Handles Orioles

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

One Goose turned out to be more than a whole flock of Orioles could handle Friday night.

Well-rested relief ace Rich "Goose" Gossage, who hadn't pitched since last Saturday, flapped out of the New York bullpen, put down a seventh-inning, bases-loaded uprising and protected a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles that gave the first-place but faltering Yankees a 3½-game lead over the Birds in the American League East.

"When you've got a guy like Gossage and the game's in the balance, you don't get fancy. You just hand him the ball," said New York Manager Dick Howser, explaining why he brought in Gossage rather than left-hander Rudy May to face lefty-swinging Pat Kelly.

New York's Willie Randolph and Baltimore's Al Bumbry traded first-inning leadoff homers. Reggie Jackson's two-run homer in the fourth off Mike Flanagan gave the Yankees a 3-1 lead and Rick Cerone singled home what turned out to be the decisive run in the fifth.

Bumbry's leadoff double in the seventh chased winner Tommy John. Doug Bird allowed a single to Rick Dempsey and a sacrifice fly to Ken Singleton and then walked two batters with two outs, loading the bases and bringing on Gossage.

Another run scored on an error before the Goose with the golden arm retired Mark Belanger on a grounder to short on a 3-2 pitch. He allowed only one baserunner over the final two innings on a walk while striking out five.

"He threw 97 miles an hour on our radar gun," said Ray Miller, Baltimore's pitching coach. "That's the highest we've ever recorded."

"I asked for a couple of days off last Sunday and it helped me," said Gossage, who gave up key hits in two of the Yankees' three losses to Baltimore in New York last weekend. "My arm was dead."

Brewers 4, Indians 1

Royals 4, Blue Jays 3

Hot-hitting George Brett slapped a three-run inside-the-park home run in the first inning to extend his hitting streak to 27 games. Dennis Leonard worked eight innings, allowing six hits and striking out seven, and Dan Quisenberry pitched the ninth for a club record 24th save although he was tagged for a pair of runs.

A's 11, Mariners 3

Tony Armas drove in four runs with his 25th and 26th homers while Rick Langford scattered six hits for his ninth consecutive victory and 17th consecutive complete game in a row. Joe Simpson and Willie Horton homered for Seattle. Oakland exploded for five runs in the first inning off Glenn Abbott, three on a homer by Armas.

Rangers 6, Tigers 2

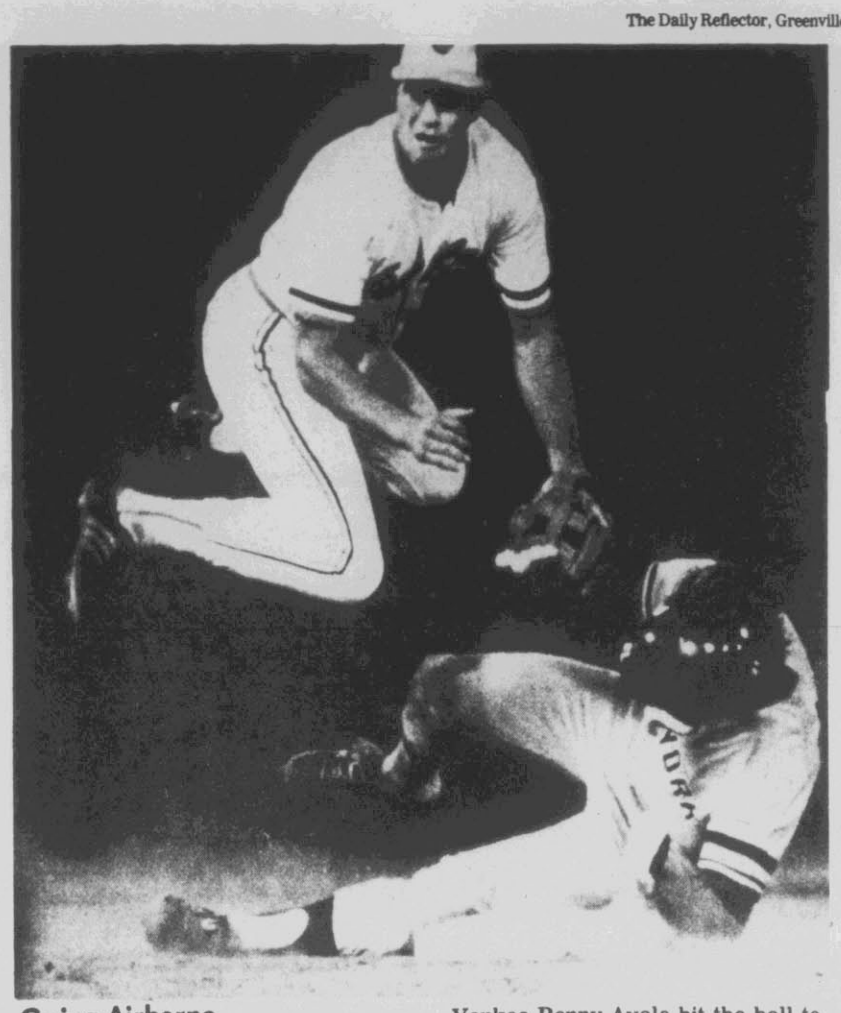
Buddy Bell had a double and two singles and drove in the first of two runs in the opening inning. The Rangers took a 2-0 lead on successive one-out singles by Bump Wills, Al Oliver, Bell and Richie Zisk. Mickey Rivers rapped a two-run double in the sixth while Jon Matlack went the route, scattering 13 hits.

Angels 5, Twins 4

A two-run single by Bobby Grich in the first inning and a two-run homer by Don Baylor in the eighth helped Frank Tanana post his fourth consecutive victory. The triumph also was the fourth in a row and ninth in 10 games for the Angels, who scored the decisive run in the ninth when Bert Campaneris tripled and came home on a single by Jason Thompson.

Red Sox 8, White Sox 5

Carl Yastrzemski drilled a pair of doubles and a single and Rick Burleson banged three singles to back the strong pitching of Dennis Eckersley, who blanked Chicago until the eighth. Eckersley surrendered three runs and six hits in eight innings, struck out eight and retired 16 batters in a row over one stretch.



Going Airborne
Baltimore Orioles' Rich Dauer leaps over the sliding New York Yankee's Eric Soderholm in the top of the second inning last night. Yankee Benny Ayala hit the ball to shortstop Mark Belanger who threw to Dauer. Dauer relayed it to first baseman Eddie Murray to complete a doubleplay. (AP Laserphoto)

Cup Races Blown Out

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — High winds ruffling Rhode Island Sound forced the cancellation of an America's Cup challenger bout Saturday between Lionheart of England and France 3.

Australia and Sverige of Sweden, the other foreign boats competing for the right to challenge the New York Yacht Club's hold on yachting's top prize, were not slated to race.

Australia, the boat favored to win the challenger's role, was having a new mast stepped to replace the rig that snapped Friday in its match with Sverige.

The fast but fragile 12-meter yachts do not race when sustained winds top 22 knots.

The semifinal foreign trials were to resume Sunday with the same pairings.

An international panel of judges issued decisions Saturday on the protests filed by all four yachts over Friday's matches.

Sverige, which went on to a leisurely finish over the disabled Australia, was disqualified from the race because of a right-of-way violation at the start, so the match does not count.

The jury also reversed the results of Friday's other match, awarding the victory to France 3, which had finished behind Lionheart.

Team MVPs
Team most valuable player awards in the Junior Novice Tennis League went to (l to r) Mike Shock (Slams), Brian Wille (Stings), Duncan Parks (Aces) and Bill Zadeits (Nets).

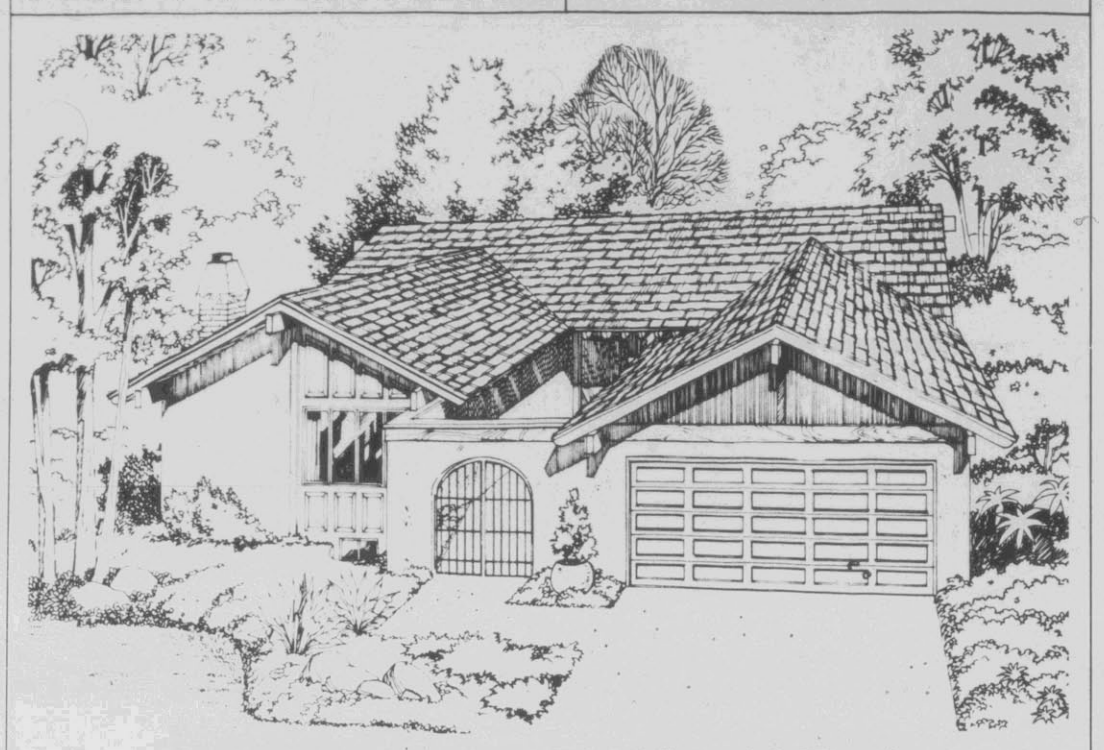
PLAN YOUR HOME

The Veracruz



Grillwork, Courtyard Add Spanish Touch

By Jerry Bishop

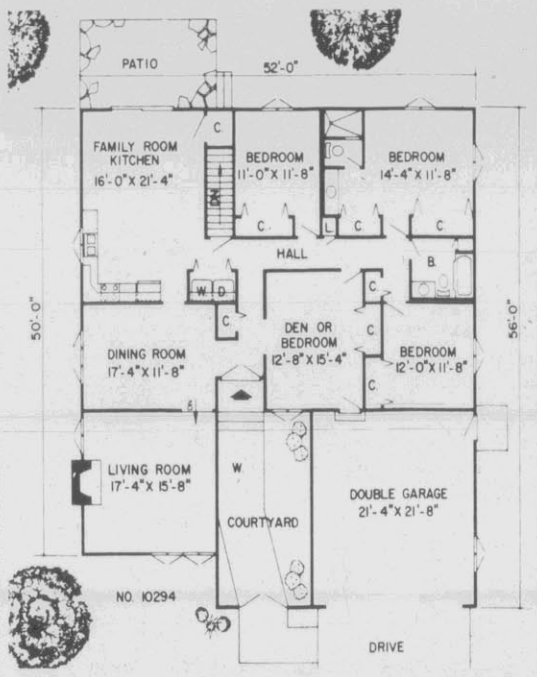
Introduced by an elegant Spanish-styled courtyard with arched grillwork entry, the Veracruz, a four bedroom plan, fuses a charming combination of traditional and contemporary.

Its family-oriented floor plan is up to the minute in concept, and even the exterior shows a contemporary bent. But the Old World atmosphere of grillwork and paneled doors gives the plan a personality of its own.

Double doors invite guests into the closeted entry, with a formal dining room and adjoining living room at left. . . The arrangement of these two rooms makes possible their use as a party complex, with the 17-ft. dining room only slightly smaller than the living room.

The living room, set off by itself to eliminate cross-traffic, is a sunken area with abundant windows and cathedral ceilings for a sense of openness and a wood-burning fireplace for warmth.

For more casual occasions, the expansive family kitchen involves work or play activity with equal ease. Food preparation is slated for one end, dining is a possibility in the other, and a washer-dryer niche is nearby. Sliding glass doors connect the area to the patio at rear.



Bedrooms in this plan are large. Even the den measures more than 12 x 15 and includes a closet. With its convenient entry to garage, foyer, or hallway, the area is suitable for a fourth bedroom, guest room, or home office. The master bedroom boasts double closets and private bath.

For additional storage, a basement is provided.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

One of the first things you should do when you purchase a house is to have someone show you the fuse box or circuit breaker panel.

If the builder's electrician or previous owner has done the proper thing, t here will be some kind of diagram or chart showing which fuse or circuit breaker takes care of which area of the house. If no such diagram or chart exists and no one can assist you in making one, which is more often the case than not, you s hould make one of your own.

This may not seem so important at the time, but you'll find out what a nuisance it can be when a fuse blows or a circuit breaker trips and you don't know which branch circuit it controls.

In preparing a diagram to give you this knowledge, first draw a rough sketch of the inside of the fuse box or the circuit breaker panel. Mark each fuse or breaker by number. To open the fuse box or breaker container, you usually have to turn off the main switch. But if, for some reason, you don't have to do this, be certain that the main switch is off. Now carefully remove one of the fuses or turn one of the circuit breakers to the off position. Put back the main switch. This means electricity is coming into the house, but one of the circuits is not operating.

Next, test each fixture and outlet. When a fixture or outlet does not work, write that down. You then will have a list of all the non-working fixtures and o utlets. Next to each item, put the number of the fuse or breaker that had been r emoved or turned off. This list establishes which fixtures and outlets are contr olled by the single t rned-off branch circuit.

From there on, it is simply a matter of repeating the testing with each fuse and breaker. The diagram and other information can be taped near the fuse box o r breaker panel. You'll be glad you went through this routine when you discover how much time and aggravation it saves you when a branch circuit goes off.

There are variations of electrical connections, but the large majority of ho uses are protected by the round screw-in fuses or circuit breakers. Should you h ave some other arrangement, such as cartridge fuses, you should have an electric ian explain to you how things should be handled in case of an electrical malfunc tion.

A tripped breaker or blown fuse generally is caused by an overloaded circuit or a short. Try to find the trouble before you restore the electricity to the circuit. If a fuse or breaker continues to blow or trip and you can't find the tr ouble, call an electrician.

(If you are a home handyman, you will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $ 1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. How can I prevent Irish potatoes from sprouting when I store them for the winter? (C.W., Creedmoor)

A. Put your potatoes in a dark place. Try to keep the humidity at 90 to 95 percent and the temperature between 45 and 48 degrees. Potatoes stored at a temperature of 38 to 40 degrees will last even longer without sprouting. (Larry Bass, extension horticulturist)

Q. I have heard thay cygon should be painted on the trunks of Sasanqua camellias. What purpose does this serve and do you apply it full strength? (J.S., Raleigh)

A. Cygon is not registered for use as a "paint-on". It is registered as a foliar spray and as a drench for the control of tea scale and camellia scale. Follow label directions. (R.L. Robertson, extension entomologist)

Q. My photinia has black spots on the foliage. What can I do? (M.S., Lexington)

A. Your photinia has a common fungus disease, but generally it causes little real damage. If the disease is severe, spray with benomyl every 14 days during spring and fall. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — About five years ago, we put in a swimming pool at the back of our house. We decided to sell the house recently, but we found to our dismay that the pool was actually a handicap to the sale rather than an advantage as we had though t it would be. We had a couple look at the house a few weeks ago and they appear ed to love it until they got to the rear and saw the pool. They changed their mi nds about the house and when we asked why, the husband said he didn't want to bo ther with a pool, but the wife admitted they would rather swim at a local organi zational pool. This has happened a couple of times since then. What is your advi ce?

A. — You will have to be patient until you find a family that will consider the pool an asset. There are plenty of such families, but you'll have to wait un til one looks at your house. Of course, you could fill in the pool, but perhaps you should try a strategy often used by good salesmen. Instead of waiting until a potential buyer sees the pool and decides against it, advertise the pool as a feature of your property. You then may locate the right party. The other big adv antage of doing this is that you won't waste your time with people who don't wan t a pool. This method applies whether you are trying to sell the house yourself or using a broker.

Q — You recently answered someone who wanted to know how to repair a sheet vinyl floor. The information you gave was correct, but a friend who sells floor coverings wanted to add something to it. He said the seams should be fused with a seam sealer, which will protect the seams from collecting dirt and water and causing a moisture problem.

A. — Thanks.

Q. — I put a shellac finish on a piece of furniture as an undercoat. When I went to the hardware store, the clerk said the varnish he sold should not be use d over shellac. I thought shellac often was used under varnish. What's the story?

A. — Shellac has been used for hundreds of years under varnish. Your dealer undoubtedly was selling one of the synthetics, which often should not be used ov er shellac. Also, always buy any final finishing material from reliable firms and read the label to determine whether a special undercoat is recommended.

Q. — We had trouble last heating season with dust bloqing out of the room re gisters. What causes this?

A. — It usually is due to a dirty filter or dirty ducts. Either change the f ilter or vacuum the insides of the ducts or both.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," avail able by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-H ow, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

A PREPARED MIND

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Scientist Henry Hsieh, holder of 86 patents over the past 23 years, says a discovery is "really a series of accidents," and that "it just takes someone with a prepared mind to accept and catch that accident."

Hsieh, a senior research associate, has worked in polyolefins and plastics for Phillips Petroleum. He recently received a cash award of $12,500 from his employer under a new patent payment plan.

Selling a house can often be a difficult undertaking. It involves advertising, showing the home and legal transactions. A professional can make the house selling process easier on all levels for all concerned. Advertising in the media that will most likely be read by qualified buyers requires skill and experience. Prospective buyers are screened to prevent being plagued by people who are not really interested or qualified. However, those buyers that are qualified are encouraged and tours of the house are arranged at convenient times. Finally assistance and guidance are given to insure that the legal process goes smoothly.

Our staff at REALTY WORLD-Clark-Branch Realtors, Inc., 1902 S. Charles, 756-6336 also has the experience and knowledge of real estate to assure you of top market value when selling property. Older Citizens Hit The Open Road On Big Bikes

RETREADS . . . Bob and Ona House of Topeka, Kansas, show off some of the hardware they and other members of Retreads International own. The motorcycle club — exclusively for persons 40 and older — is holding its annual convention this week in Salt Lake City, Utah. (AP Laserphoto)

By GEORGE TIBBITS
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Something about white-haired, 61-year-old Ona House makes you think twice about classifying her as a little old lady.

Maybe it's the "Broken Bones Club" patch on her jeans. Or her biker boots. Or her 850-cc black Moto Guzzi motorcycle.

Though the accident that earned her the patch means she has to get around with a cane, Ona can't wait until her husband, Bob, 55, retires in seven years so they can devote more time to their passion — big bikes and the open road.

The Houses are leaders of Retreads International, a motorcycle club exclusively for people over 40. This week, 400 club members are in Salt Lake City for their annual convention — a week of parties, road rallies, tours and jawing about bikes.

In the hotel parking lot are thousands of dollars worth of "full dress" Harley-Davidsons, Guzzis, Yamahas, Hondas and Suzukis. Most are huge — 800-cc to 1,100-cc engines — and sport custom paint jobs, windscreens, saddlebags, CB radios, tape decks, and even television.

Members swap yarns about roads and campgrounds and joke about how much their children worry about them. And they indulge in a Retread tradition — telling other members what lousy bikes they bought. "That's a part of it," said Kathy Davis, Retreads' Utah state director. "You have to run down the other guy's bike."

Club rules are simple. There are no clubhouses, no uniforms, no dues. Members don't even have to own a bike — all they need is to like them and be over 40.

It also helps to like a party. Mrs. House said there's usually a Retread rally or tour every weekend. Scheduled for the convention are five rides, dinners, dances and a parade.

Kathy's husband, Sperry Davis, said most Retreads are in their mid-50s, but some are in their early 80s. A club legend, Julius Kagel, rode until he was killed in a cycle accident at age 87.

"He went the way he wanted to go," said Mrs. House, who broke her leg in an accident last year.

The Houses never owned a bike before they reached middle age.

"I always wanted a motorcycle, but when I was raising kids I couldn't afford one," he said.

Davis, 52, began riding seven years ago because "my future wife rode a motorcycle and if I wanted to be a future husband, I had better, too."

Although a motorcycle and accessories can run $10,000, Davis said high gas prices have more people considering them as recreation vehicles as they approach retirement. In the club's 10-year history, it's worldwide membership has grown to about 15,000.

Members say older people on cycles are common at rallies and camps around the country and their numbers have helped dispel some of the taint given the sport by "outlaw" motorcycle gangs.

Although onlookers are naturally curious, Mrs. House said, "You no longer get their mouths flying open when you take off your helmet and they see your grey hair."

House said their three grown children aren't cyclists — yet — and often fret when their parents roar off from their Topeka, Kan., home.

"When I talked to the kids after the accident, my daughter said, 'You worry me.'

"I told her, 'Now you know how I felt.'"

(ECU News Bureau)

The East Carolina University Foundation has received a gift of a 1,500-foot steel television tower.

North Carolina Television Inc., operators of WITN-TV, Washington, Greenville and New Bern, presented the gift of the 19-year-old tower near Grifton, and deeds were signed by company and university officials in the offices of ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer Friday.

Dick Paul, president of North Carolina Television Inc., John F. Minges of Greenville, president of the ECU Foundation Inc., and Donald L. Lemish, ECU Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning, signed the legal documents. Lemish is secretary of the ECU Foundation and liasion to the committee which recommended acceptance of the tower as a gift.

Minges said the tower is "a magnificent gift" which is "tangible evidence" of growing support of the university's educational and service goals. He said it would be used to enhance and enrich ECU's development.

"You are a maximum citizen in every sense of the word," Minges told William R. Roberson, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of N.C. Television.

Roberson said WITN-TV recognizes the positive and creative role ECU holds in the eastern North Carolina region and that he hoped the gift would be used "to futher educational purposes."

"Use it in any way to further your development and help attain your purposes," Roberson said.

Chancellor Brewer said he echoed Minges' expression of appreciation on behalf of the university and promised that the gift would be put to "best use." He said a study would be made to determine how to use the facility.

The television station put a new, taller transmitting tower into operation earlier this year and Roberson said the board of directors had voted to offer the tower as "an outright gift" to ECU.

"It is our hope and desire that this gift would be used for educational purposes at ECU," Roberson said.

lemish said the Foundation board will be studying what use can be made of the tower. When constructed in 1961, the 1,500-foot tower was promoted as the tallest manmade structure on the east coast and was higher than the Empire State Building, the Washington Monument and the Eiffel Tower. It acquired the name "The High and the Mighty."

"In exploring the potential of this gift, we found that a brand new similar structure would cost approximately $1 million," Lemish said.

During the past two years, the ECU Foundation has received gifts in kind which included a boat, a collection of gems and precious stones and some real estate.

"A television tower is somewhat unusual," Lemish added.

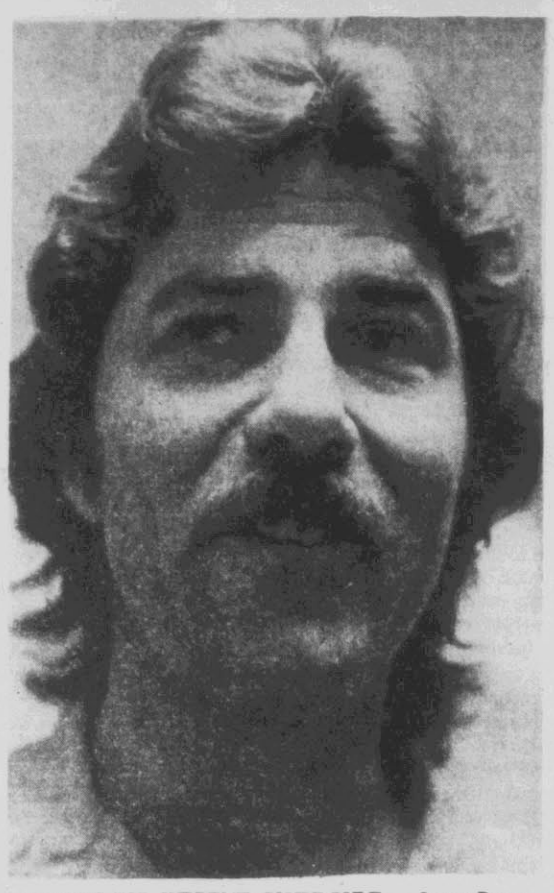
Extradition Case Raises Major Legal Questions



WAITING FOR SUPREME COURT RULE — James Dean Walker, 39, pictured in South Lake Tahoe, California, says: "They want to throw me back in a brutal, cold, totally male, homosexual system so they can make me normal." Walker, convicted cop killer and now a capture fugitive, has contended for 17 years that he did not kill a North Little Rock, Arkansas policeman on the night of April 16, 1963. (AP Laserphoto)

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — "They want to throw me back in a brutal, cold, totally male, homosexual system so they can make me normal."

So says James Dean Walker, recaptured five years after walking away from an Arkansas prison where he had served 12 years of a life sentence for killing a policeman, a crime he says he didn't commit.

Walker, 39, is in the El Dorado County Jail here, awaiting a U.S. Supreme Court decision on whether to consider his case. Some lawyers say the decision could affect extradition laws nationwide.

At issue is whether Walker must be returned to Arkansas despite a federal judge's 1970 ruling that the state's prison system was a "dark and evil world" that violated an inmate's constitutional protection against cruel and unusual punishment. There have been allegations of homosexual abuses in the prisons, and the judge said there was no way to guarantee against such abuse.

Walker was arrested in California last November on a charge of selling cocaine — a charge since dropped — and officials learned he was a wanted man.

Walker said he fled Cummins Prison Farm, disappearing while on a religious furlough in 1975, because a prison farm official threatened his life. State officials deny the charge.

"As bad as things were in the Arkansas prison, I had never been directly threatened by an official," said Walker. "And I saw people shot in the barracks and shot in the fields. I saw the beatings and the torture."

A born-again Christian and an activist inmate who raised money for a prison chapel, Walker served time in Arkansas' two prisons while Thomas Murton was head of the institutions — a time of attempted penal reform when three bodies were found in an unmarked prison grave. Murton's story was the basis for the movie "Brubaker."

Now, Walker says of his possible return to Arkansas: "If I go back there this time, I will open up the floodgates. I will make them open every corpse buried out there."

Walker lived quietly in California. As James Simpson, he worked as a cobbler's apprentice and later as a leather goods salesman.

When he was identified, routine extradition proceedings began. California's governor signed the papers, courts upheld the order and Walker was about to leave when the state Supreme Court intervened — ordering lower court hearings on whether Walker's rights would be denied if he were sent to Arkansas.

The order, in effect, put Arkansas prisons — technically unconstitutional although a consent agreement has been signed to bring them up to standard in 1981 — on trial. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, who says Walker would be in no danger there, has vowed to fight "until the last dog dies."

California's attorney general appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, and Justice William Rehnquist stayed the California order until the nation's highest court can decide this fall whether to hear the case.

"For 28 years, the Supreme Court has held that the states' rights were paramount in extradition law," says Robert Geandrot, Walker's lawyer. "Now, they must decide whether the defendant's rights are paramount."

"There are some very major legal issues here," says Clinton. "If his request is granted, it will be a very dangerous precedent."

Walker and Geandrot say Clinton cannot guarantee an inmate's safety.

"The man will be in a cage," said Geandrot. "Anybody who thinks the administration runs a prison is crazy ... If someone wants him killed or maimed, they will see that it is done."

Walker said Al Lockhart, superintendent of the Cummins Prison Farm, threatened his life in a misunderstanding over two pounds of ground meat.

"He told me that all the politicians and all the Christians back in Little Rock could do nothing for me under him," said Walker. "He said, 'I'll bury you out there in that damned field,' He finally ran his course and told the guard, 'Take him back to work and if he screws up again, you bring that SOB back in a sack.'"

Despite repeated attempts, Lockhart — now No. 2 in the Arkansas Department of Correction — could not be reached for comment. He has denied threatening Walker and has said Walker would not be in danger in Arkansas.

Walker was sentenced in connection with the 1963 death of Patrolman Jerrell P. Vaughn of North Little Rock, Ark. He was tried twice, but the first conviction was overturned.

Vaughn was shot after police stopped Walker's car following a bar fight. Two officers were at the scene, and Vaughn died in gunfire Walker claims began when he tried to show his gun to police. The defense and prosecution later agreed Walker's gun was fully loaded after the exchange.

Walker was wounded five times, and claims the other officer accidentally killed Vaughn. No ballistics tests were done.

Says Haitians Need Voodoo Treatment

MIAMI (AP) — For some of the 25,000 Haitians and tens of thousands of Cuban refugees in South Florida, voodoo sometimes works when conventional medicine fails, a University of Miami anthropology professor says.

Claude Charles, who came to the United States from Haiti 13 years ago, says public medical officials must become more sensitive to the Caribbean culture as a growing number of refugees settle in Miami. Haitians routinely reject some treatment, such as surgery, and view illness as something caused by other people who wish them evil, he said.

Charles cited the case of a 21-year-old Haitian refugee named Ernst who was given to violent psychoses until he was taken to see a voodoo priest. Psychiatrists and tranquilizers had failed.

"We invited several psychiatrists to observe," said Charles, also director of the Haitian unit of the Community Mental Health Center here. "Believe it or not, the guy was very violent before the ceremony and very quiet afterward."

Ernst improved rapidly after the ceremony, which his parents requested because they thought he was possessed by an evil spirit.

He had been unemployed, fearful of being deported and able to speak only halting English. He shattered glasses and a lamp on the floor of their cramped home and slugged his brother, shouting oaths in Creole.

Modern treatment didn't work. Hospitalized at Jackson Memorial Hospital, Ernst was just as violent.

Finally, Charles said, he contacted a voodoo priest. Ernst's psychiatrist, a young Cuban, was familiar with the Cuban rite of santeria — a mixture of voodoo and Catholicism — and went along with the idea.

After the voodoo treatment, Ernst was returned to the hospital for more conventional treatment, and improved rapidly, Charles said.

"When he got out, he got a job as a census-taker in this area. His condition was obviously very much improved," he said.

A Cuban refugee woman also improved after switching from Santeria to voodoo, Charles said.

"That is not to say that voodoo is more powerful, but that she was suffering from a mental illness and believed that voodoo would work," he said. "Under those circumstances, it often does or at least allows our more conventional treatment to help."

Refugees are more susceptible to emotional and mental problems because most are poor, illiterate and suspicious of public services, said Dr. Evalina Bestman, Jackson's mental health director.

They become depressed after trying to deal with American urban life, the non-welcome attitude of Americans, immigration problems, unemployment, isolation and separation from family, she said.

Japanese Mark End Of WW II

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito, the 79-year-old sole survivor of Japan's World War II leadership, marked with "profound emotion" today the 35th anniversary of the end of the war.

"Even today I feel a sense of anguish when I think of all those lost on the battlefields or felled by the ravages of the last great war, and of their families that survived," Hirohito told a gathering of 6,390 relatives of Japanese war dead in a ceremony at Tokyo's Budokan martial arts hall.

It was at the stroke of noon on Aug. 15, 1945 that Hirohito ended almost four years of war with the United States and its allies when he announced in a radio broadcast, "the war situation has developed not necessarily to Japan's advantage."ice of their "living God."apanese people had heard the voice of their "living God."

Two weeks later, on Sept. 2, the documents of surrender were signed on the deck of the U.S. battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

As clocks struck noon in Tokyo today, the now-powerless emperor, a stoop-shouldered figurehead symbol of state, led the nation in a minute of silent prayer for the 2.5 to 3 million Japanese who died in the war.

Hirohito, who renounced his divine status on New Year's Day, 1946, now lives a reclusive life in the Imperial Palace, a tranquil, green oasis in the bustling streets of the thriving Japanese capital.

Throughout the country, sirens wailed and bells tolled to mark the moment of remembrance. Flags were flown at half staff in memorial.

In Osaka, play was halted for one minute at the national high school baseball championships, the most popular sports event of the year in Japan, to observe the anniversary.

Also attending the annual memorial services at the massive martial arts hall were Empress Nagako, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and about 1,000 government officials.

Suzuki urged that the nation "grasp deeply the lessons we have learned from the war, so that the sacrifices of our comrades who never returned will not be in vain."

The now elderly spouses, brothers and sisters of the war dead dominated the audience. Most were dressed in mourning black or conservative gray. Many waved paper fans against the heat.

Representing the survivors was Kimiko Yumoto, 46, who lost her father in fighting at Luzon, in the Philippines, in June 1945. Standing before an altar draped with the rising sun flag and 25,000 white and yellow chrysanthemums, she said, "We have lived to this day bearing the sadness of having lost our irreplaceable relatives.

"We must all individually do what we can to protect peace and freedom in Japan, Asia and the world. Please, those who perished in the war, try to rest in peace."

Wreaths were placed on the altar by surviving relatives while the Tokyo University Orchestra played Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony.

Following the ceremony, the prime minister and other Cabinet members paid a controversial visit to the nearby Yasukuni Shinto Shrine, a memorial to the Japanese war dead.

The visit had drawn criticism from religious and pacifist groups who claim government plans to provide public funds for the shrine violate the constitutional separation of church and state. They fear visits by government leaders will encourage restoration of the state religion and emperor worship by which the former militarist regime justified its actions in World War II.

Suzuki said his visit to Yasukuni, an annual practice Japanese prime ministers, was made "in a private capacity."

Riots Rage In India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Moslem rioting flared in Old Delhi and several other northern Indian cities Friday and at least 115 deaths were reported in three days of mob violence at Moradabad that was blamed on the appearance of stray pigs at Moslem prayers.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi promised "deterrent punishment" for the guilty in Moradabad, 100 miles east of New Delhi, and said "my heart is full of sorrow." She addressed the nation from the ramparts of a historic fort outside old Delhi.

Authorities said at least 10 people, including four policemen, were killed in day-long fighting Friday at Moradabad. A police official said in Lucknow that more than 108 bodies have been recovered in Moradabad, and many more were being found. United Press of India said the Moradabad fatality toll was 115.

The rioting there was triggered by Moslem claims that stray pigs appeared at a prayer meeting. Pork is taboo for Moslems and the appearance of the pigs amounted to desecration..

Angered by the news of Moslem bloodshed at Moradabad, several Moslem communities raised black flags and observed India's 33rd Independence Day as "black Day."

New Ships For Navy

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown is adding two ships to an austere budget proposed by the Navy, according to Pentagon sources.

But the tentative shipbuilding program taking shape for fiscal 1982 still would be smaller than the Carter administration projected to Congress early this year.

The administration's record on building the Navy has been targeted by the Republicans, whose 1980 party platform accuses President Carter of "dismantling" the fleet.

Like the other armed services, the Navy offered its budget proposals several months ago in acccordance with top-level guidance ordering greater stress on improving the readiness of present forces rather than devoting so much of service funds to buying new military hardware.

The Pentagon sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said the Navy recommended a "basic level" of 14 ships for the coming budget to be sent to Capitol Hill in January.

When Brown reviewed the Navy's budget proposals, sources said, he increased the number of proposed new ships to 16.

This year, some 250 young ladies from across the state have been chosen by Terpsichorean Club members to make their debut.

After celebrating with parties all over the state this summer, the climax will take place Friday night, Sept. 5, at the annual Debutante Ball. The girls will be presented at the Civic Center, Raleigh. Various activities including several dances and cocktail parties are included in the weekend festivities.

Each girl has chosen a chief and assistant marshal. Her chief, usually her father, will escort her during her presentation at the ball, while her assistant marshal will be her escort at several dances that weekend.

There are 14 debutantes from Greene, Martin and Pitt Counties.

At Meredith College, Raleigh, Julia Claire Allen is active on the newspaper staff as a reporter writing mostly feature articles, covering campus happenings such as concerts and play reviews and doing write-ups on distinguished lecturers.

"I've learned a lot through my experiences with the newspaper there," she said, adding she probably wouldn't have attended so many educational events if not active on the staff.

Miss Allen has not declared a major yet but shows definite interest in the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with other possible majors in either business or math.

This summer, she took a biology course during the first session of summer school at ECU. She is now working at "The Daily Reflector" until school starts. "This is the second consecutive summer I've worked there," the Greenville native said, mentioning she started working during her senior year in high school through executive internship.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Allen Jr.

Her father will be her chief marshal while her brother, Alec, a resident in radiology at the University of Maryland Hospital, Baltimore, Md., will serve as her assistant marshal.

Davis

Pondering a paralegal career, Susan Peel Davis attends Meredith College, Raleigh. Since Meredith does not have a paralegal major, Miss Peel is considering history or business majors there.

At Meredith, she is active in the Astro Service Club and will be a student advisor for in-coming freshmen.

Currently, she is living at Nags Head where she has been all summer working at the Seafood Steak House. Other summer activities have included playing tennis and swimming. She also enjoys reading.

Miss Peel is a graduate of Williamston High School, where she was a member of the National Honor Society, student council, band, and various clubs.

Garrett

At Lees McRae Junior College, Nancy Hardy Garrett was selected a member of the 1980 Spring Court. She explained that from the girls on the court, one is elected queen and another maid of honor. At this time, Miss Garrett was voted maid of honor.

During ski season at Banner Elk last year, she spent her afternoons and weekends employed at a ski resort on Beach Mountain. Working with ski rentals, Miss Garrett said it gave her the chance to improve her skiing ability, which, she added, she didn't mind.

"I love the mountains," she said, noting that fall was the prettiest season there with the leaves changing colors.

She says she has been taking it easy this summer, lounging at Brook Valley Pool and going on beach trips. She also has been working some for her father at the Bistro Restaurant.

Her father will be her chief marshal while her assistant marshal will be Tommy Stoughton of Greenville, a rising junior at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Johnson

Being a family girl, Jamie (Ann James) Johnson says she enjoys fishing with one grandfather and gardening with another. Other pastimes include babysitting and bicycling.

This summer, Miss Johnson has been working full-time at Greenville Pediatric Services as a secretary's assistant. "I worked there last summer too," she said, mentioning her growing admiration for doctors and secretaries.

A recently acquired interest is cooking. " guess it's because I never get to be around a kitchen at school," the prospective sociology major said.

A graduate of Rose High School, she was co-editor of the literary magazine there also.

The Greenville deb's other interests include city development, archeology and children.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lester Johnson, her mother and grandmother were debutantes also.

Lee

A rising sophomore at ECU, Cora Pauline Lee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webster Lee of Greenville.

The Peace College transfer is not sure of her major at ECU yet, but plans to concentrate on something related to child development. "I like working with small children," she said, mentioning teaching as a possibility.

To get some experience, she has been taking care of the nursery at the Memorial Baptist Church this summer. Other summer activities have included a week spent at Atlantic Beach with her family and frequent visits to the Greenville Country Club pool, where she is a member.

Miss Lee's sister, Bonnie Lynn, made her debut three years ago. She plans to wear her sister's ballgown when being presented to N.C. society.

The Rose High graduate has chosen her father to be her chief marshal.

Lilley

Being active in all sports, Jo Anna Lilley played on the junior varsity basketball team at Carolina last year.

"In high school, I played basketball, softball and tennis," the 19-year-old said.

She was also drum major, president of the monogram club and a member of the National Honor Society at Williamston High.

She is currently attending UNC on NHS and tuition scholarships.

Not having declared her major yet, Miss Lilley is thinking of a business degree.

This summer she has been working for her father, an International Harvester dealer, as an office assistant. Other activities have included going on beach trips, water skiing and playing all sports.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Eason Lilley of Williamston.

Mann

Considering a major in anthropology at St. Mary's College, Raleigh, Elizabeth Collier Mann's major interests focus on archeology and primitive culture — civilization and linguistics.

"Some day I'd like to go out of country for a field excavation," the Rose High graduate said. "First, though, I'll concentrate on finishing school."

A rising senior, she is undecided as to where she'll transfer after graduation next spring, but has NCSU or UNC in mind.

She is currently employed as a waitress for Darryl's Restaurant, Raleigh. Other summer activities have consisted of camping, canoeing, and beaching at Hatteras, the mountains and Atlantic Beach.

In the past, Miss Mann has spent many summers living at Atlantic Beach, where her family has a cottage.

Dear Abby

'Budget Bobbi' Needs Advice

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a working woman, divorced, and the mother of a 4-year-old child. I'm self-supporting and barely make ends meet. I'm dating a little, but no one steady. One man I date is especially nice. When he brings me home he always insists on paying my sitter. I'd be lying if I said I didn't appreciate it a whole lot.

My best friend (we work together) reacted strangely when I told her that this gentleman insisted on paying my sitter, and I let him. She said, "All men are alike. They want to obligate you. Sooner or later he'll get his money's worth."

Abby, our relationship has been very proper. He's never tried to push himself on me or do anything I felt was out of line.

What do you think? Does a woman obligate herself by letting a man pay for her sitter?

BOBBI ON A BUDGET

DEAR BOBBI: Some do and some don't. It depends on the man. You can't put them all in one bag. As long as you don't feel obligated to him, you're not.

DEAR ABBY: First off, I am no ordinary girl. I have always been very mature for my age.

When I was 13, I fell in love with a man much older than myself. I am now 16 and still feel the same about him. If possible, I am more in love with him than ever.

Well, he's married and has four kids. He lives in South America, but comes here about every three months on business. I never know exactly when he will be in town, but as soon as he gets here he calls me, and I skip school and go to his hotel to be with him. Every time we're together we grow closer.

The last time he was here I saw him two days in a row. Then I called his hotel and found out he was with another woman, so I told him it was all over between us. He pleaded with me not to make any decisions until he could explain. I am so in love with him I agreed to let him explain, but he left town without seeing me, and now I don't know what to think.

I know he loves me, Abby, but I don't know how to handle things from now on. Please help me. My mother would never understand.

CRYING IN MY PILLOW

DEAR CRYING: If that man calls you again, gather every bit of strength your heart and soul can muster and tell him you never want to see him again. Then hang up. Don't wait for any explanations. He is a master salesman. You have been used. I beg you not to let yourself be used again.

Fluorescent lights are three to five times more efficient than light bulbs. They also last seven to ten times longer and generate less heat. Some good places to use them include the kitchen, bathroom, workshop and recreation room.

Getting that first credit card can be hard. To get credit, you almost always have to have some history of managing credit successfully. But until you've had some credit to manage, that's impossible. According to federal law, creditors cannot discriminate because of sex, age or race, but lack of a credit history is still a legitimate reason to turn you down. If you want to establish credit, you may do well to try local creditors first. You'll probably have a better chance of approval at a local bank or department store than with national creditors.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Somewhere today, traveling along the open roads of this country, is a family headed for a vacation that is cursed with a child bearing the code name, "The Hysteria Connection." (H.C.)

This child has courted depression, wallowed in pessimism and despair and is intent on pointing out to everyone the pitfalls that are sure to await them.

There was something unusual about H.C. from the moment she was born. From the way she preferred sackcloth diapers to her first words: "It says unbreakable . . . but it just did."

You are only five minutes into the trip when H.C. asks, "Mom, did you turn the iron off? I distinctly remember it being plugged in, just before you walked out the door." Mom is to spend the entire two weeks' vacation listening for sirens and trying to remember where she put the insurance policies.

Minutes later, H.C. will lean over the seat where Daddy is humming and tapping on the steering wheel in a rare moment of relaxation and inquire, "Did you mean to leave the hose running, Daddy?" Daddy will not hum again on this trip.

H.C. never plays "Count the Cows" like the other children. She hears a strange knock in the engine that was the same knock her friend, Robin, heard just before the transmission went out in their car. She hears on a newscast that where they are headed is where there are tornado warnings issued for the next 36 hours. She notes that the farther they go, the higher the price of gasoline gets and her asthma seems to be getting worse and she probably will not be able to breathe in the cabin you have rented.

She turns to her brother and asks, "Did you tell Mom about the cat you've been hiding under your bed?" and to her sister, "Everyone who's been accepted to State next fall has been notified by now."

She hears sirens before anyone else in the car and smells rubber burning. She reassures her mother that the Ryans' dog had a hysterectomy and he got fat too!

Just when you think the Hysteria Connection has dispensed all the anxiety the family can stand, she says, "I didn't want to mention it, but when Daddy was hiding the key under the flower pot by the door, I saw a man watching him from a parked car across the street." Then adds cheerfully, "I wouldn't worry. I've been exposed to measles and if I'm on schedule, the rash should appear tonight and we should all be coming home tomorrow."

The attendants wore formal gowns of mauvette pointelle with a scoop neckline eged in piping which formed miniature should straps. A self-fabric tie sash encircled the elasticized waistline. The gown had a blouson bodice and gathered skirt and was complemented by a short bolero jacket edged in ruffled pointelle. The honor attendants each carried a bouquet of lavender daisies, white miniature mums and baby's breath. Bridesmaids carried bouquets of white daisies and baby's breath. The junior bridesmaids wore floor length gowns of flowered print and carried a long-stemmed rose.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of pleated matte knit in tea pink designed in a modified wrap effect. The mother of the bridegroom selected a powdered blue floor length gown with a V-neckline. Each wore a white rose corsage with sprays of baby's breath.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Pace at the Baron and Beef Restaurant for friends and relatives of the bridal couple.

The couple will be living in Albany, Ga., after a wedding trip to Hilton Head, S. C.

The bride graduated from the ECU School of Nursing with a B.S. degree. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and is a civil engineer with Daniel Construction Co., Albany, Ga.

MRS. JESSE PHILLIP GRAY

Evening Wedding Held

ESTILL, S. C. — The Lawtonville Baptist Church here was the scene of the Saturday evening wedding ceremony of Alice Rosa Lee Denman and John Riley Grier. The Rev. William Rutledge Childs and the Rev. Milton Thomas Gunter performed the double ring ceremony at six o'clock.

The parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ashford Denman of Estill, S. C., and Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas Grier of Spartanburg, S. C.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Geneal Bates, organist, and Mrs. Dottie Moore, soloist, both of Hampton, S. C.

MRS. JOHN RILEY GRIER

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of overall Victorian design made of ivory chiffon and alencon lace. The modified bodice of lace fastened down the back with self-covered buttons and was fashioned with a round, sheer yoke of English net ending in an Edwardian neckline of cut out lace. The long leg-o-mutton sleeves were of English net appliqued with floral motifs of lace and ended in lace scallops over the hands. The doubled bouffant skirt was of chiffon and the back graduated into a cathedral train. The cathedral length original design veil of ivory bridal illusion was attached to three matching satin roses. The veil was appliqued with medallions of matching alencon lace. The bride carried a cascading arrangement of ivory flowers interspersed with needlepoint ivy.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length jade green chiffon gown with a dark blue overlayer with an attached waist length cape. The mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown of lilac crepe featuring a draped bodice with a long sleeved jacket.

The maid of honor was Patricia Rhodes of McCormick, S. C., and bridesmaids were Kandis Allbritton of Euless, Tex., Janice Grier of Durham, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Paul Knapp Simons of Aiken, S. C.

They were dressed in full length gowns of brick chiffon featuring a diagonal neckline on a fitted bodice with a rolled belt tied at the waist. The slim skirt had an overlayer of diagonally cut matching the neckline . A sheer cape of matching color extended to the waistline and was worn over the gown. They each carried green cymbidium orchids interspersed with needlepoint ivy.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Richard Ashford Denman Jr., brother of the bride of Atlanta, Ga., James Harper Grier, cousin of the bridegroom, and Robert Battle Grier, brother of the bridegroom both of Spartanburg, S. C., William

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Roger LaFayette Mann of Greenville. Her father will be her chief marshal.

Moye

With Karen Larue Moye spending most of her summer working for Owens and Rouse Law Firm, she hopes to pursue a career in criminal law.

With offices located in Farmville and Greenville, she alternates her time at the two locations. "It's more interesting by moving around. You don't get tired of the same place," she said.

Miss Moye attends Salem College, Winston-Salem, where she plans to double major in English and history, mainly a pre-law schedule. There, she is a member of the newspaper staff and the Student-Faculty Library Committee. She will participate in the Student-Faculty Lecture Assembly this coming year.

Her interests vary from sailing to reading. "I'll try anything once," the 19-year-old said.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Caswell Moye of Farmville.

Her father will be her chief marshal while Ernest Carraway Jr. of Greenville will be her assistant marshal. A graduate of UNC undergraduate and law schools, Carraway is associated with Mark Owens as a lawyer.

Smith

A rising sophomore at Randolph Macon, Lynchburg, Va., Jane Pennebaker Smith or "Penne" is the daughter of Mrs. John LeRoy Howard of Greenville.

Miss Smith is studying studio art and English at Randolph Macon and is contemplating a teaching career or an occupation in commercial art. "My ambitions are really scattered," she said, mentioning interests in writing, painting and music

In her spare time, she enjoys reading, painting, botique, playing the guitar and swimming. This summer she has stayed busy by taking a cooking class along with other courses at ECU. The reason, she says, is to be able to graduate early and to go ahead in to art school.

At Randolph Macon, Miss Smith is a member of the Literary Club and the Foreign Student Union Club. She is also an artist for the school newspaper.

She attended high school at Salem Academy, Winston-Salem, where she was art editor of the school annual.

Keeping it in the family, her mother made her debut also.

Her step-father, John Howard, will be her chief marshal and Mark Kanavos of Wareham, Mass., a rising senior at the University of Virginia, will be her assistant.

Stokes

Sandra Jeanne Stokes or "Sandy" is an accounting major at NCSU, Raleigh. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Laughinghouse Stokes of Maury.

She attended Salem Academy, Winston-Salem, her junior and senior years in high school. "I thought it would be a good idea to go off first, then go to a big place like State," she explained.

At Salem, she was active on an intramural program where she played basketball, softball and tennis. "And that was enough," she said.

With clothes being another interest of Miss Stokes, she worked this summer at the Tyler House, Raleigh, and according to her, that's exactly where her paycheck went. She also attended summer school at State.

Stout

This summer, Sherrilyn Dawn Stout has been filling her time with various activities.

As she enjoys skiing, Miss Stout recently spent a week at Water Ski School, Davidson. Also, for the third consecutive summer, she has been working for her father, the manager of Robersonville Products. The company makes display fixtures for Hallmark Greeting Cards. Her position there, she explained, is helping in the office filling in for vacationers.

In addition to tennis lessons, Miss Stout says she spends every weekend at Gaston Lake where she enjoys water skiing.

Presently attending Meredith College, Raleigh, she graduated from Roanoke High School where she was on the tennis team, varsity cheerleading squad and was secretary of her senior class.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Stout of Robersonville.

Her father will be her chief marshal and Street Lee of Robersonville will be her assistant. Lee, a rising sophomore at NCSU, is a civil engineer major.

Taft

Being a debutante is a tradition in Hannah Finch Taft's family. "I wanted to carry on that tradition," she said, including her mother and her grandmothers were presented to North Carolina society.

Miss Taft is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Holston Taft Jr. of Greenville.

A rising sophomore at UNC, she is currently majoring in business, but is thinking about changing to accounting. There, she is in the Pi Beta Phi sorority where she has been elected Panhelenic delegate.

"Panhel is the governing body of the sororities," she explained. Each sorority has a representative who goes to the meetings and is involved with rush.

This past year, Miss Taft was appointed by Governor James B. Hunt Jr. to serve on the N.C. Juvenile Justice Planning Committee. Meetings were held monthly in Raleigh. "Our duty was mainly to decide if a particular area needed a center for juveniles and if money should be spent on it," she stated.

This summer she worked at C. Heber Forbes here. Now, free until the fall, she and her family will spend two weeks at Atlantic Beach.

She enjoys water and snow skiing and boating.

Her father will serve as her chief marshal while Garret Young of Greenville, a rising freshman at Carolina, will be her assistant.

Taylor

Lauren Caroline Taylor plans to attend St. Andrews College, Laurinburg, a four-year Presbyterian school, this fall. Her parents are Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor of Greenville.

Miss Taylor attended NCSU in the School of Eniineering last year. Noting the contrast in size between the two schools, she mentioned that about 650 students attended St. Andrews while there were 500 people in some of her classes at State last year.

"There will be smaller classes at St. Andrews and, therefore, more individual attention," the 19-year-old said. "That's what I like about it." She has accounting in mind as a major.

At the beginning of the summer, Miss Taylor lived in Raleigh where she worked as a waitress. Now, at home until the fall, she has been spending time at the beach and Lake Gaston, Va., where a friend has a cottage.

She also plays tennis, swims and water skiis.

For the past three summers, she has worked for her father at Eastern Radiologist Inc. Among other things, Miss Taylor says she learned how to work the computer.

As for future plans, she is considering obtaining a MBA degree.

Whitehurst

Debutante Mary Helen Whitehurst is a rising sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where she is considering a math major.

This summer she attended the first session of summer school at ECU to get credits for general college requirements. Currently, she is working full-time for her father at Coastal Chemical Corp., Greenville.

With the weekends free, Miss Whitehurst finds time to spend at her family's cottage, Atlantic Beach. Also, she enjoys playing tennis and jogging and practices "watching weight."

She attended Rose High School, where she was a member of the tennis team, National Honor Society, and Keywanette's Club, to name a few.

Next summer she is thinking about either working in Washington, D.C. with a job concerning the government or getting a job at the beach, a popular thought among college students.

Midwest Girl Gone Long Way

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

APUTO, Mozambique (AP) — At 17, Janet Rae Johnson was a quiet schoolgirl from Indianapolis who played piano and violin and got good grades.

Today, she's a 46-year-old citizen of Mozambique, an official in the government of this Marxist African state and the widow of one of the nation's black nationalist heroes.

"I can say that I'm proud — I'm not unproud — of my American background," said Janet Rae Mondlane in an interview. "I don't think anyone can reject what they were.

"I think I've made use of the education I was given. Sometimes I think in a way I made better use than many Americans who stayed at home, who just go on with their lives and can't see the world as a whole."

The transformation of Janet Rae from schoolgirl to political activist began at a church-sponsored summer camp in Lake Geneva, Wis., in the early 1950s.

There 17-year-old Jane met Eduardo Mondlane, a 31-year-old black from Mozambique and, as she describes him, "this extraordinary, interesting man."

They met because she dreamed of becoming a missionary doctor in Africa and "naturally gravitated" to a camp lecture on Africa.

"Once I saw who the leader of the study group was, I just stayed," she recalled with a laugh. "He was full of smiles, obviously very intelligent and always knew what he was talking about."

She said she pursued him for five years until their marriage.

Mrs. Mondlane, who drew up in Downers Grove, Ill., and moved to Indianapolis with her family at 16, began studying medicine at Miami University of Ohio while Mondlane was at Oberlin College. She switched to social sciences at Northwestern University when he did.

They married when she was 22. Mondlane was doing research at Harvard and she began a master's degree in African studies at Boston University.

Her parents, conservative Republicans, "didn't like it at first," Mrs. Mondlane said, but their attitude changed after the Mondlanes' first child was born.

Apolitical before marriage, Mrs. Mondlane said she was "fully politicized" by 1961, when her husband quit his job as a sociology professor at Syracuse University and returned to Mozambique to organize guerrilla groups against Portuguese colonial rule.

Mondlane's "frelimo" — front for the liberation of Mozambique — began its war against the Portuguese when he led a band of 250 guerrillas from Tanzania to Mozambique on Sept. 25, 1964.

Throughout the war, Mrs. Mondlane helped provide health care and schooling in guerrilla-controlled areas of Mozambique.

Mondlane was killed in 1969 — six years before his country gained independence — by a bomb planted in a book and mailed to him. Guerrilla leaders blamed the bombing on Portuguese agents, but the identities of the killers were never determined.

Mondlane is a national hero. His official photograph is displayed in many stores, tea shops and offices around the country, and his portrait appears on Mozambique bank notes.

Mrs. Mondlane is the nation's director of international cooperation, charged with getting financial aid for the poor, agrarian country.

She still goes back to the United States occasionally — "when I can afford it."

One of the couple's three children, 23-year-old Juan, studies in New York City and works for the Mozambican mission to the United Nations. One daughter is a pop singer in Stockholm, and the other is a Maputo high school student who hopes to become a child psychologist.

Mrs. Mondlane said her shift to socialism came with an understanding of "what it meant to be a colony, what it meant to have centuries of stagnation in a whole country like this, where the people have never had an opportunity to read or write or have any political formation whatsoever."

The country of Iraq was known historically as Mesopotomia.

Trade Dying Out For Swiss Fisherman

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Andre Gay, 35, makes his living fishing in Lake Geneva, Western Europe's largest body of fresh water. His father was a fisherman, and so was his grandfather.

But Gay's offspring may not be able to follow the legacy.

"Our trade is dying out," Gay said recently. There isn't much hope that pollution will be controlled."

The agony has deepened in the past few years as hauls of the lake's most popular fish dwindled.

"Five years ago, the total catch of lake perch was 1,500 tons," Gay says. "Last year, it was 25 tons, again for the whole lake. In the first four months of 1980, the haul was just 15 kilograms (33 pounds). The catch has picked up a bit since, but not much."

Lake Geneva, known here as Lac Leman, takes up an area of 225-square-miles, about the size of the city of Chicago. It it shared by both Switzerland and France.

As president of the Professional Fishermen's Syndicate, the organization on the Swiss side of the lake, Gay has seen membership tumble. In less than a decade, it has shrunk from about 100 to fewer than 20 who must struggle to make a living in this wealthy country.

Perch have traditionally accounted for 95 percent of their revenues. But overfeeding threatens the fish with extinction: phosphate, from household detergents and fertilizers, has caused a proliferation of lake plankton, the perch's principal food. As a result, perch grow faster, reaching adult size and being caught in the nets before they are mature enough to reproduce. In other words, the children are caught before they can become parents.

The Swiss have proposed using wide-mesh nets, but the idea has run into opposition on the French side, and the Swiss are reluctant to go it alone.

Fried baby perch has been a staple in French tourist centers on the lake, while the Swiss have been specializing on "filet de perche" filets of full-grown perch.

Nowadays, virtually all perch served in Swiss lakeside restaurants are imports from places as far away as Canada, Finland, Denmark, and even from the Soviet Union, says Gay. He expresses the belief that if there was an international agreement on wide-mesh nets, the perch population would start maturing and increasing in numbers again within one or two years.

Another problem, also due to what experts refer to as the "eutrophication" (excessive nourishment) of the lake due to phosphates, is the fast growth of algae.

"Within 10 minutes, a net that weighs three kilograms (6.6 pounds) is towing 30 kilograms (66 pounds) of algae," says Gay. "The most important job is to control pollution."

He said he has endorsed a petition prepared by Aqua Viva, a nationally organized ecological group pledged to preserve Swiss lakes and rivers, and by a Swiss-French association for the rescue of Lake Geneva.

Aqua Viva President Ernst Hirt, a reserve colonel in the Swiss army and former director of the Federal Sports School, told The Associated Press the petition, to be submitted shortly to the Swiss government, will point out that "it is five minutes to twelve."

"During the past two decades, the lake has deteriorated every year," Hirt said. "Every year, some 1,500 tons of phosphate are poured into the lake which has a self-cleansing capacity for only 350 tons. The remaining annual 1,150 tons accumulate."

Germany Military Takes Larger Role

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Little by little since the end of World War II, restrictions on West Germany's military growth have been lifted and today its armed forces are the most powerful West European force in the NATO alliance. Here is a report on how it came to be.)

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — For the first time since Nazi U-boats prowled the Atlantic shipping lanes in World War II, the West German navy no longer is bound by a restriction that kept its vessels from operating more than 24 hours away from home waters or NATO duty areas.

This decision, taken by the Federal Security Council last month, is one of several moves reflecting the West German government's acceptance of a military role more in keeping with its growing influence on an international level.

Western diplomats and North Atlantic Treaty Organization officials agree that the shift is partly due to pressure from the United States to make Western European nations take more responsibility for their own defense. West Germany is is the richest nation in Europe, and other nations are looking to it to assume more of the burden.

"At present the West Germans play an absolutely critical military role in the (NATO) alliance," said one Western defense expert, who asked not to be identified. "They have the largest land army in Europe, they are well-equipped and excellently trained. In a few words: they are absolutely essential."

Yet most political and military experts also agree that often-expressed West European misgivings about the strength of the U.S. leadership also have prompted them to take a more assertive stance, both in independent political action as well as within NATO.

In West Germany's case, this was reflected in the decision to drop the self-imposed restriction on its warships. Traditionally, the West German area of naval operations included the North and Baltic Seas and their access routes.

But after the U.S.-Iran crisis began last November and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan in December, the United States shifted some ships to the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean areas, moves that required other NATO nations to increase their role within the NATO boundaries of the Mediterranean and North Atlantic.

The West Germans have offered to widen their area of responsibility and send their ships farther afield, closing the gap in the strategic area between Iceland, the Arctic Circle and the north cape of Norway. This involves patrolling routes used by the Soviets to get their fleet into the Atlantic as well as defending U.S. supply routes to Europe in the event of war.

Under the chairmanship of West Germany's Hans Apel, NATO defense ministers in May said they would take more responsibility for increasing Europe's contributions toward its own defense.

Last year, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt initiated the NATO move to install a new generation of 572 medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe as a counter to the Soviets' installation of mobile SS-20 missiles.

West German officials say they have met the three percent increase in real defense expenditures requested from NATO members by the United States. Although there has been some disagreement as to what type of expenses may compose the increase, the West Germans view their millions of dollars in aid to Turkey for arms purchases as a vital contribution to supporting a weaker member of the alliance.

In London recently, the seven-nation Western European Union voted to drop a post World War II restriction preventing West Germany from building large warships, including nuclear-powered vessels.

"This was a symbolic gesture to remove descrimination against one member of the alliance," said one Western defense expert.

The West Germans also have moved in the political arena, marked by their participation in the European Common Market's peace initiative in the Middle East and Schmidt's visit to Moscow for talks with President Leonid I. Brezhnev, despite the chill over Afghanistan.

After the capitulation of the Nazi Reich in 1945, nine years passed before West Germany was allowed to rearm. Constraints still in force require that the armed forces remain under 500,000 men, be integrated under the command of NATO staffs and renounce the manufacture of nuclear, biological and chemical weapons.

West German defense officials often point out the restricted nature of their naval power by commenting that it would take half their 11,000 men assigned to warships at sea to man the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz.

About the size of Oregon, West Germany is a tantalizing fruit of industrial power, highly vulnerable to the overwhelming superiority of the Soviet bloc's tanks and troops linked together in the Warsaw Pact.

Given the country's strategic position in Europe nations and the limitations of its own forces, West Germans defense experts know it is impossible to defend their country on their own.

Therefore, the best defense requires having other troops on their soil: some 200,000 U.S. soldiers, four British, two French and two Belgian divisions, one Canadian and a Dutch brigade.

"This is our policy", said a Defense Ministry spokesman, Col. Peter Kommer. "An attack on U.S. soldiers, the French, the British, is an attack on the entire alliance. It is impossible to defend ourselves alone."

This policy also calms the fears of Germany's neighbors, both East and West, who do not wish to see an independent German military force.

Despite the limits, the West Germans remain the largest contingent of NATO conventional forces in Europe. International defense specialists have come to regard them as the most modern and powerful in the alliance.

All nuclear weapons in West Germany are under the control of the United States. Schmidt uses every opportunity to say his country is not a nuclear power and has no aspirations to become one.

Gen. Franz Uhle-Wettler of the West German army claims the forces depend too much on high-technology weapons and ignore the importance of infantry. Faced, however, with the Warsaw Pact's 3-1 tank superiority in Central Europe, the West Germans are adding 1,800 new Leopard II tanks.

Since the army is based on the draft, the West Germans can count on a consistent pool of soldiers, prepared academically to run their high-technology weapons. Officers are offered a university education, and their pay is based on levels comparable to civil servants to keep talented officers in service.

West German defense officials say, however, they worry about the skyrocketing costs of supporting their forces as well as the dip in the birth rate that will cut into the numbers eligible for the military by the 1990s.

On a per-person basis, West Germans contribute more to defense than any other European nation. According to figures supplied by the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, U.S. citizens in 1979 contributed $520 each for defense, West Germans $395 and the French $349.

In 1979, the Germans budgeted $19 billion for the armed forces — one fifth of the total national budget.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1980 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—From time to time something is mentioned in your column which is foreign to me. You call them "balancing" or "reopening" bids. Can you explain what they are and how they differ from other actions?—L. Gentry, Oklahoma City, Okla.

(This question has won the weekly prize.)

A.—Balancing action is the name given to any bid where, if you passed instead, the auction would die. Consider the sequences below:

1)

South	West	North	East
1 ♢	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
1 NT

2)

South	West	North	East
1 ♢	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠

3)

West	North	East	South

4)

West	North	East	South
1 ♢	Pass	Pass	Dble.

5)

East	South	West	North
1 ♢	Dble.	Pass	Pass

South's bids on auctions 1, 3 and 4 are balancing, since if he did not do something, the auction would be over. On 2 and 5, however, South was acting in the "immediate" seat—if he did not bid, his partner would still have a chance.

What is the difference between the two? It depends on whether the player who balances has acted previously in the auction or not. Consider auction 3. Here, South can be quite weak to reopen, especially if he is short in the opener's suit. The shorter he is in opener's suit, the more likely it is that partner has a good hand but could not act because of his holding in the opponent's suit.

As a general rule, balancing bids by a hand that has not bid previously show hands of less than opening bid strength. With a full opener or better, the balancer should start off by making a takeout double, or, with stoppers in the opponents' suit, by bidding 1 NT on 12-15 points.

In auction 1, South must have a reasonably good hand. Since his partner was unable to act initially, South would pass with a minimum opening and some spade stopper.

Let us suppose that the auction has gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ♢	Pass	Pass	?

1) ♠KJ9xx ♡Axx ♢x ♣QJxx
2) ♠J9xxx ♡Axxx ♢x ♣Qxx
3) ♠AKQxxx ♡Ax ♢xx ♣Kxx
4) ♠KJx ♡AQx ♢K10xx ♣Axx
5) ♠J9xxx ♡x ♢K10xxx ♣Kx

With hand 1, you double—that's the way to tell partner that you have at least the strength for an opening bid. Hand 2 is worth a balancing bid of one spade—it looks as if partner could not act because of length or strength in diamonds. Hand 3 is a double—for the same reason as stated in 1. So is hand 4—a balancing bid of 1 NT shows a maximum of 15 points. With hand 5, you must pass—partner must be short in diamonds yet he could not act over one diamond. It looks as though West has a very strong hand.

The purpose of reopening the bidding is to keep the auction alive. Never let the opponents buy the hand too cheaply! But a word of caution: With length or strength in the opponents' suit, retire from the arena gracefully—your best prospects are on defense.

Selecting a Nursing Home

Since my mother died, my father, who is 81 years old, lives by himself. My brother and sister and I have decided to find a nursing home for him. He is reconciled to going to one. We would like to find a nursing home that will give him some feeling of a home environment. How do we go about it? — Mrs. B.J., Ohio.

Dear Mrs. J.:

The decision to place a parent, a relative or a friend in a nursing home is always filled with emotion and trepidation. Unfortunately, it is almost impossible to find a nursing home that will provide the quality of "home environment." Yet, many of the modern nursing homes are making elaborate efforts to incorporate in their organizations attitudes of kindness, caring and warmth.

Some nursing homes are purely custodial and are designed to accommodate guests who have no serious medical problems or handicaps. These residential homes provide room and board, with supervision for the safety, comfort and entertainment of their guests.

Other nursing homes offer moderate nursing care and are equipped to provide assistance for guests who may need help in getting in and out of bed, in dressing, in bathing and in walking.

In homes of this type, the clients can call their private physician whenever there is a need for medical attention.

A far more complicated arrangement is the nursing home for patients who are chronically ill or convalescing from a serious illness. This type of home provides highly skilled nursing care, reliably supervised by a staff of physicians and paramedical assistants.

Undoubtedly, your father's doctor knows many of the nursing homes in your immediate vicinity. He knows, too, the services that they can provide for his patient.

You can gather a great deal of information from local and national health and welfare agencies. The American Nursing Home Association and the National Council for the Accreditation of Nursing Homes can offer you guidance in making such an important selection.

It is virtually impossible for any one nursing home to supply for your father the family atmosphere he has enjoyed in his own home. But a well-run nursing home can offer him advantages that he might never have in his own home. Planned daily programs, recreational facilities, group participation, concerts, lectures, movies and creative endeavors fill each person's day with stimulating activity and companionship.

When you consider that all this is offered in addition to the assurance of safety, health care and psychological support, then the transition should not be difficult for you or your father to contemplate.

It must be remembered that a nursing home is not a substitute for the love and support of the family. His children's visits and their constant interest will be vital to your father's happiness and will compensate for those elements that are lacking in his new enviornment.

Amerasians Find Life Difficult; Both Backgrounds Refute Them

AP Special Correspondent

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Her name isn't important.

What she says or does is ignored.

She's not American, she's not Korean. According to the United States and Korean governments, she doesn't exist.

"Sure," says the pretty, blonde teen-ager, "everybody loves the American G.I. He has money to spend. But the only thing he has given me is a face that everyone can laugh at. I often wonder if dying wouldn't be better."

Mixed blood children appeared in Korea in the early 1950s, with the massive influx of American servicemen into a country which had lost two million of its own men to war. Thousands of births resulted.

"I would estimate that 200,000 would be a small number," says Stan Millard, chaplain of the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division. "Many of the children were annihilated, put out of existence because they were considered something of a monster, a cross between human and animal."

About 100 Amerasian children are born each year. The number of mixed blood children in Korea is variously estimated between 3,000 and 8,000. Another 50,000 are said to be scattered around Asia.

Their families sometimes refuse to recognize them. They're denied the rights of Korean citizens and the American government has declined responsibility, though most could claim U.S. citizenship because their fathers are Americans.

Their route to the United States is often blocked by a miasma of Catch-22 regulations. Children over 14 can't be adopted, so they must go through normal immigration channels, or, occasionally, with temporary student visas.

They're not Americans unless they can find their fathers to prove it. Even if they have a name, the American government won't help find him. Nor are they Koreans because the Korean government bases citizenship on fathers, not mothers, and maintains that since the fathers are American, so are the children.

And even if they have Korean citizenship, the quota into the United States for Koreans is low and there's a long waiting list.

"The story is the same as in the Bible," says Rev. Vincent Keane, of St. Vincent's home in Inchon. "God told Moses that the children of God would come from the fleshpots of Egypt to the Promised Land and that they would be 40 years in the desert before they got there.

"Well, it's 36 years since the first generation appeared on the scene. We have four more years to ford the walls of Jericho, which are the U.S. immigration laws."

If Korea and the United States squabble over who's responsible, there's no dispute over the identities of the victims.

Gary Kim was born March 14, 1951, nine months after the start of the Korean War, in a U.S. military field hospital in Paju, near the present demilitarized zone. He is officially an orphan — it's preferable to being fatherless in the patriarchal Korean society.

"When I was 13 years old," he says, "I had family register papers with the Korean government listing me as an orphan. If I had my mother make the papers and I don't have a father, I could not be a citizen."

He says his father was named Paul and was a cook, perhaps with the U.S. First Marine Division, where his mother worked in the kitchen.

"My little sister had all yellow hair and blue eyes so my mother gave her to a fat U.S. Air Force surgeon in 1956 or 1957 to take to America. She looked just like an all-American girl. I saw the Air Force man get on the plane with her for America. I think about her often.

"Our fathers fought here. Many died here. All we want is to live like normal people. Didn't God give all people a right to live like human beings?"

"Trigge," meaning polluted; "Yank," or "Eyenokko," meaning round eyes, are some of the names pretty 12-year-old Terri Lynn hears. The daughter of a career Army sergeant, she won the "Miss Smile" contest in her Seoul school, where she is the only white among 5,000 students. Her teachers say she was one of the school's most popular students and has consistently been in the top 10 of her class.

Terri lives with her mother, former school teacher Kim Chong Son, in a barren eight-room shack with no toilet facilities, furniture or water. She last saw her father when she was 6. "Terri's father promised to marry me, went to the States, wrote letters in the beginning, then we never heard from him again," says Mrs. Son.

'Monster Man's' Life Lonely, Painful

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

POCOPSON, Pa. (AP) — P. Gary Hastings killed his wife, then nuzzled the shotgun barrel under his chin and pulled the trigger.

The .20-gauge shell exploded, the pellets ripping apart the young banking executive's handsome face.

Incredibly, death did not come. Hastings survived, badly disfigured, sentenced to life — to be lived in a strange new world filled with pain and clanging jail gates and a million stares.

There are days, he says, he'd like to have that gun back.

Today, Hastings lives with his parents on the family farm outside Seaford, Del., awaiting the outcome of a legal fight over a new trial.

What's left of his face is pale. His mouth is gone. His eyes look like he's lost. He is fed a liquid diet and medication — including crushed pain pills and pills to control drooling — through a nasogastric tube that enters his lone nostril. Another tube for breathing enters his neck.

"The Monster Man" was his nickname at Chester County Farms here where he was a prisoner until July 21, when he was released on $5,000 bail.

Hastings said he knew his wife was dead by the way she collapsed to the floor of their home in the nearby, fashionable village of Chadds Ford, near the Delaware state line.

"I calmly stepped over her and saw some blood on the rug," he recalled during a prison interview, writing his answers down in a notebook because the muscles at the base of his tongue are gone, too.

"At that moment I no longer wanted to live either. So I reloaded the gun and put it to my throat and pulled the trigger. I had no second thoughts or hesitation."

Police found him walking around the yard in a daze. He spent months in hospitals. Then a jury found him guilty of third degree murder, refusing to believe he was insane — as his lawyer claimed — that April night in 1977.

Now Hastings waits, and wonders about his future, and his three children.

They were with him the night he killed their mother.

"They were terrified when they saw me get the gun from the (car) trunk," he wrote. "They were screaming and tugging at me to keep me out of the house. When I broke a picture window to get in they went to a neighbor."

The children now live with their maternal grandmother in Seaford, not far from the Hastings' farm. On Sunday evenings, when their father was still in prison, they would visit his parents and place a phone call to the jail.

Then the youngsters — Amy's now 14, and twin sons, Christopher and Timothy, are 12 — would talk to their father, silent at the other end. They also wrote.

Hastings did not see his children for two years after the killing. Then on the first visit his face was bandaged.

"The second visit I did not wear bandages because I wanted them to deal with reality," he wrote. "My folks tell me it was upsetting to them but they did not show it. Amy and Chris would not look me straight in the face. Tim did and smiled with no hesitation."

Hastings has not discussed his wife's death with the children. "No, they have not mentioned mommy at all," he wrote.

What ended in death and pain, began in puppy love.

Hastings, now 34, was president of his senior high school class in Seaford, vice president of the honor society and student council. He was center on the football team for four years, and a track star.

His bride-to-be, Margaret Hastings (no relation) was homecoming queen, voted "Best Looking" in the senior class.

"We began dating in fifth grade," Hastings recalled. "She invited me to a country club dance."

The wedding took place on March 25, 1965, and was the big social event in Seaford that year. The three children were born while their parents were still in college.

After graduating from William & Mary in 1969, Hastings entered banking, quickly rising to the post of vice president of Farmers Bank of Delaware, a $30,000-a-year job. He was only 28, the youngest bank vice president in the state's history. He later joined Mercantile Safe Deposit & Trust Co. in Baltimore.

But even before the marriage, there were problems.

"I began seeing a psychiatrist during the fall of my freshman year (in college)," Hastings wrote. "It was related to the assassination of Jack Kennedy.

"I saw him for about nine months and he helped me a lot. I got over my sense of loss ... and returned to William & Mary to make the dean's list. I did not see a psychiatrist again until my wife told me of her lover in late 1976."

In the next several months Hastings was committed three times to mental hospitals, and also was a patient at a private psychiatric facility in Wilmington. Because of his mental problems, his wife won custody of the children.

Then one day Hastings ran off with them.

"I guess all told, my kids and I lived in motels moving around (the East Coast) for about a month-and-a-half," he wrote. "We stayed in the cheapest motels I could find because we were running out of money."

On the night of April 26, 1977, they went home for the last time.

"I was sure a loaded shotgun would bring Margaret to her senses," he testified at the trial.

If convicted again of third degree murder, Hastings could receive a maximum of 20 years in prison.

Two weeks after his first conviction, the state Supreme Court ruled that a trial judge, if requested, must point out to a jury that a defendant found innocent by reason of insanity could still be removed from society by being committed to a mental institution.

As a result, Chester County Judge John Wajert granted a new trial, but the prosecutor objected. So the court, while putting off sentencing, agreed to review its decision.

The premiere event in the world of photography is Photokina, held every other year at Cologne in West Germany.

It is here that manufacturers introduce their latest products, and sometimes give insiders a peek at prototypes a year or more in advance of production.

I've never been able to attend this world's fair of photography and it's doubtful that I will be able to attend the one scheduled for this year.

However, I've found an excellent representative. Norman Lipton has been associated with Photokina in various capacities since its inception and has attended every one. He will attend again this year and, hopefully, bring back to us the latest intelligence on what's new and what's coming.

In view of the importance of the event to photography, I've asked Norm to tell us just what Photokina is all about. His report, in two parts, follows:

From Sept. 12-18, more than 100,000 representatives of the worldwide photographic industry will journey to Cologne to attend the 16th biannual Photokina world's fair of photography.

They will be there to examine and evaluate the sales appeal of tens of thousands of photographic, audio-visual and photofinishing products exhibited by more than 1,000 manufacturers or their sales agencies, more than half of them from outside West Germany.

The exhibits will occupy 12.92 million square feet of space distributed among 12 interconnected halls in the Cologne Fair Grounds building complex.

Many of the products displayed at Photokina will be new and newsworthy to the 2,000 press and broadcast media representatives expected to cover the trade show. Some of these new products may be revolutionary in design or fundamental principle, if previous Photokina fairs are any indication of what's ahead.

Since the first Photokina in 1950, one of the attractive sidelights of the fair has been the cultural exhibition produced by Prof. L. Fritz Gruber.

This is a series of timely large-scale still photography exhibits and a series of mini film festivals, which since 1974 have been housed in the city of Cologne's "Kunsthalle" (or art display center), 15 minutes from the fairgrounds by shuttle bus or tram car.

This year, the Photokina trade fair and cultural exhibition will be supplemented by a number of photography-related conventions and seminars on the fair grounds. These will deal with audio-visual practice and techniques, scientific filming, photographic education, diagnostic medical photography, motion pictures and television, and European professional photography.

Why is Photokina so large? So important? Why is it still in Germany? Why Cologne and not Frankfurt, Munich, Tokyo or Las Vegas?

Aid Can Help Keep College Cost Down

NEW YORK (AP) — While college costs, like everything else, keep going up annually, the amount of financial aid available to foot the bills has also increased dramatically in the past few years. Today there is more than $14 billion in financial aid available from federal, state, institutional and private sources.

Financial aid comes in different forms: grants and scholarships, which don't have to be repaid; loans, which generally carry a low interest rate and are repaid after students graduate or leave school; and employment, usually 10 to 15 hours per week, through which students can earn money to help pay their way.

Most students receive a combination or "package" made up of all three types of aid put together by the college financial aid office. In most cases, colleges, federal and state programs, and private agencies ask families to fill out a financial need analysis form, such as the Financial Aid Form, to determine a student's eligibility for financial aid.

By analyzing the FAF, national services such as the College Scholarship Service of the College Board give colleges an estimate of how much a student and his family can afford to pay based on the family's financial situation. Forms are available in school guidance offices, college aid offices, and public libraries.

The federal government is the largest single source of financial aid. The Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program gives grants directly to students to use at the college of their choice. In 1979-80 full-time students could have received as much as $1,800; an average grant was about $1,050.

To apply for a basic grant, students should file the appropriate financial aid form available from high school guidance offices, college aid offices and public libraries, or from Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program, P.O. Box 84, Washington, D.C. 20044.

Guaranteed Student Loans may be obtained from banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions and, in some cases, colleges. The federal government will pay the interest on such loans until nine months after students leave school.

Most colleges administer several federally funded programs, including:

— The Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant Program, which provides grants of up to $1,500 per year for students who can prove need.

— The College Work-Study Program, which provides jobs for students with need, usually about 10 to 15 hours per week. Employment is usually on campus.

— The National Direct Student Loan Program, which makes loans to students with demonstrated need. Students make no repayments while enrolled. Repayment at 3 percent interest begins nine months after a student graduates or leaves school.

Other federal aid programs are designed to assist students entering certain occupational fields, such as engineering or public service.

Most colleges also administer their own scholarships, grants, loan and work programs. Students really don't have to know all the sources at a college — the financial aid administrator will put the package together.

Almost all of the 50 states sponsor some financial aid programs, and most award aid on the basis of need. Eligibility requirements and procedures vary considerably so students should ask their guidance counselors or college aid officer about state programs or write directly to the state student aid agency.

Some states, like New Jersey which operates the fourth largest aid program in the country and awarded $33 million in grants last year, even provide toll-free financial aid information hot lines.

There are also thousands of special student assistance programs — public and private, local and national, large and small — that offer scholarships, grants and loans to students.

In addition, students can save money through indirect sources of aid like the College Board's Advanced Placement Program and College-Level Examination Program which enable students to earn college credit and either save money by shortening the time it takes to get a degree or enrich their college program. To find out about such programs, families should check books and pamphlets in school or local libraries, ask guidance counselors for suggestions, and check high school bulletin boards regularly for notices.

Two useful sources of information about financial aid programs are:

"Meeting College Costs," a free booklet available from high school guidance counselors which outlines the financial aid process, funds available from various sources.

Peasant Life In China Hard

By ALINE MOSBY

XIN CUN, China (UPI) — "Do you think our life is hard?" asked farmer Lu Yiming, 26.

Yes, it is, a correspondent concluded after living for three days in Lu's house in his village of 650 inhabitants, 35 miles north of Shanghai.

Life in Xin Cun is how 85 percent of the Chinese people live.

Foreigners usually see only the life in the cities — the big hotels, government offices, expensive restaurants, imperial palaces and high rise buildings for high officials.

Xin Cun village is what China is really all about.

The farmers' life is improving under China's post-Mao leadership, which is conscious of discontent among country people who still lag behind city dwellers in living standards after 30 years of communist rule.

In 1979 the party boosted rural "wages" — the price the state pays farmers for the food they grow. The 5 percent increase and the new un-Maoist policy of paying more money for more work has upped the average annual wage in this farm region from $285 in 1976, the year Mao Tse-tung died, to $415 in 1979.

The extra money helped Lu and his bride, Yang Hondee, pay for their new $2,650 house. The two-story, four-room concrete house stands in a row of six, each with a tiny plot of ground in front and back for a tree, ducks in pens and a place to sit on hot summer evenings.

"We moved in Nov. 1 when we were married on Lu's 26th birthday," the legal age for rural men to marry, said Yang, also 26, a small quiet woman with short hair.

The couple were expecting their first child (and despite stiff new birth control regulations she says, "We might have two"), so they could house a foreign guest in their empty second bedroom. Other villagers are more crowded with as many as 10 in three sleeping rooms.

Yang showed off her first room with a naked lightbulb hanging over a rustic table and four benches built by the village carpenter. The concrete floor is the usual floor in "New China." Old farmhouses have wooden or mud floors.

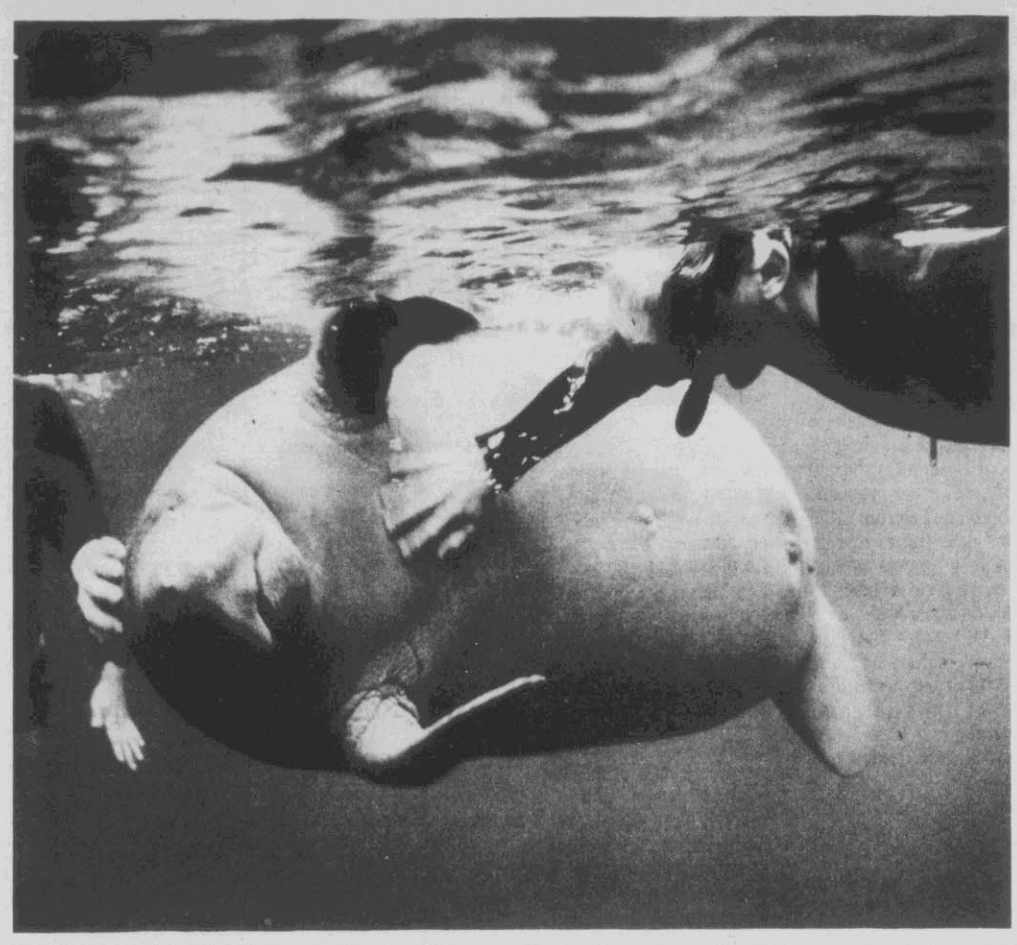
Manatees Face Many Dangers In Florida's Waters



TICKLING A TEN-FOOT MANATEE . . . is not so difficult, because some of these docile animals enjoy human companionship. Others, however, fear divers and will flee warm-water refuges to escape them. Florida, the manatee's home, is barring divers from a few wintering spots and also is setting rules for the animal's biggest enemies — boats. (Photo by James A. Sugar, National Geographic Society)

Text By Barbara S. Moffett, National Geographic Service

WASHINGTON — They aren't very pretty — sunken eyes, blubbery lips, a bristly mustache, and a bulbous body that tapers into a paddlelike tail. But the man who discovered America thought they were mermaids.

They spend most of their time browsing and drowsing in the sea, yet their closest relative is decidedly a land creature — the elephant.

Known as manatees, these animals are among the gentlest on earth. They weigh more than 2,000 pounds, yet they refuse to fight, even to defend their young.

Motorized Foe

If the now-endangered manatee had not taken to the sea so many millions of years ago it would never have met what has become its archenemy: the speedboat.

The estimated 1,000 manatees living in the waterways and coastal areas of Florida use up much of their energy dodging the states 500,000 boats. Almost every manatee studied by scientists there bears on its rubbery back the scars of an encounter with a boat propeller. Many others have not survived the collisions.

Most manatees are hit after they drift to the water surface to poke their nostrils out for a breath (which, as sea mammmals, they must do about every five minutes). In winter, when manatees move from the chilly coastal areas to the warmer natural springs and effluent areas of power plants, they are especially vulnerable.

Scientists once counted 271 manatees clustered in a mile-long area where a power plant discharges warm water.

"If a boat ripped through an area like that, it could injure or kill several at once," said Patrick M. Rose, manatee recovery activities coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Part of his research on manatee deaths was funded by the Florida Power and Light Company.

Killing a manatee has been illegal in Florida since 1893. The animal received more help from the U.S. Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972 and the U.S. Endangered Species Act of 1973. But manatees continued to die faster than they reproduced.

Two years ago the entire state of Florida was made a manatee sanctuary after research proved that people, especially their high-speed boats, were the main cause of animal's troubles. The act gives the Florida Marine Patrol authority to hold down boat speeds in 13 manatee winter refuges. Manatees can avoid boats if they have time, Rose explained.

No Boating

Winter boating now has been outlawed in a few manatee haunts, such as Blue Spring State Park near Orlando. Officials hope to prohibit boating in other key refuges and even to restrict diving in a few small areas, such as part of the Crystal River, whose clear warm water lures hundreds of divers as well as many manatees from the Gulf.

"Very few people intentionally hurt manatess," Rose said, "But many just want to get near them to look at them or pet them, and that frightens them." Although some relish human companionship, many flee, moving on to colder and colder waters.

So far no solution has been found for problems with large boats, espcially commercial tugs and barges, which can trap and crush manatees in shallow, narrow waterways. But tugboat captains heading through the Merritt Island National Wildlife Refuge waters to deliver cargo to the Kennedy Space Center are learning to recognize a manatee and how to avoid a collision with one.

Captains go to the classroom for a Fish and Wildlife Service course on the animal or are instructed by personnel who board tugs before they reach manatee areas, where at peak seasons as many as 225 congregate.

Florida's manatee, or sea cow, is one of four species of the order Sirenia that survive in small numbers in the shallow marine waters and rivers of the tropics. A fifth species, Steller's sea cow, roamed the frigid Bering Sea until hunters exterminated it around 1769, less than 30 years after it first was reported.

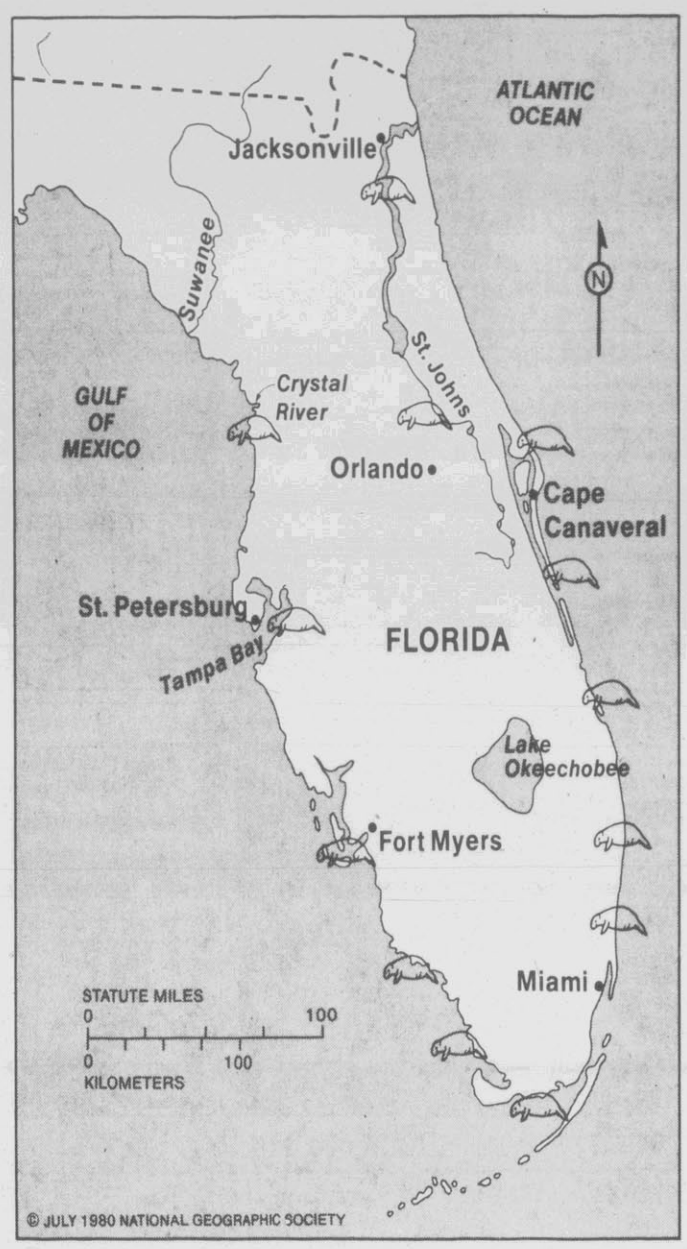
The Florida animal, properly called the West Indian manatee, ranges along both of Florida's coast and occasionally as far north as the Carolinas, and south to below the Amazon River. Once ranging by the thousands from North Carolina to the Texas Gulf Coast, manatees for many years were heavily hunted for their hide, oil, bone and tasty meat.

On The Homely Side

It must have been a very dark night when Christopher Columbus spotted that "mermaid." Had he looked closely, he would have gazed into a face like a tuskless walrus. ANd he would have seen a body like a bloated seal, with two flippers tipped with three nails each.

Voracious vegetarians, manatees consume vast amounts of aquatic plants and have even been used as underwater vacuum cleaners to weed canals. They usually drift along waterways alone, but also enjoy each other's company, communicating with a repertoire of squeaks, squeals, chirps, and screams.

At play, manatees often embrace and even nuzzle — muzzle to múzzle. Human divers have reported receiving such a manatee kiss.



WINTER HAUNTS . . . of the manatee (indicated by symbols) include most of Florida's southern coast as well as some inland warm-water refuges connected to the sea. In summer manatees spread out in the state's creeks, bayous, and canals and can be found in the sea from Jacksonville all the way around the tip of the state and up to the Suwanee River. Current Heat Wave May Lead To Significant Fish Kills

RALEIGH — The Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has reported that unseasonably high temperatures are promoting extensive algae blooms and could cause significant fish kills in eastern North Carolina.

Natural conditions are so severe that massive fish kills could occur along coastal rivers and sounds at any time, according to Jim Mulligan, regional supervisor for the Division of Environmental Management.

Elevated water temperatures and widespread algae blooms are drastically reducing oxygen levels and chemical balances in streams which feed the Albemarle and Pamlico Sounds and the Neuse River.

Algae add oxygen to the stream during the day, but take back their contribution and more at night so that fish in the area may suffocate, Mulligan noted.

Most Severe Kill

The most severe fish kill during the current heat wave was reported August 2nd on Far Creek near Englehard on the Pamlico Sound. Hundreds of thousands of juvenile menhadden died at that time.

"These adverse weather conditions are pointing up the extent of the nutrient problem in our coastal waters," said Dr. Neil Grigg, assistant secretary for natural resources. "The Chowan River has a history of algae blooms, but in recent years these blooms have been longer and more widespread. While the algae problems in the Chowan are advanced, the Neuse and Pamlico systems are having trouble also. We will be lucky to avoid more massive fish kills."

Excessive Nutrients

Excessive nutrient levels are one of the major coastal water quality problems. The nutrients promote algae growth, which reduces commercial and sport fishing, aquatic recreation and water-side property values.

Although specific sources vary from site to site, nutrients may reach the water through municipal and industrial waste discharges, agricultural fertilizer and feed lot runoff, and forest and swamp drainage.

Nutrient levels are not the only quality problem contributed by accelerate runoff from agricultural and forest lands, according to Connell Purvis, director of the Division of Marine Fisheries.

Freshwater Inflow

Excessive freshwater inflow poses serious problems in estuaries where rapid changes in salinity can drive out or kill the inhabitants of nursery areas.

"Freshwater intrusion is the biggest threat to coastal fisheries," said Purvis. "If we do not apply technology to at least keep drainage effects limited to the present level, the number and extent of fish kills will surely increase."

Response Team

The divisions of Marine Fisheries and Environmental Management have established a Fish Kill Response Team to investigate fish kills and clean up and minimize the environmental effects of fish kills. Anyone desiring more information can contact:

— Jim Mulligan, Washington, (N.C.), phone 946-6481; Cornell Purvis, Morehead City, phone 726-7021; or Neil S. Grigg, Raleigh, phone 733-4006.

Icebergs Menace Mariners

Text By Donald F. Frederick, National Geographic Service

WASHINGTON — Calving season may be a joy to farmers, but it's a menace to mariners.

Massive icebergs sometimes calve, or break away, from sprawling glaciers to threaten shipping in August and September, when the waters warm. Alaska's Columbia Glacier is particularly ominous because it packs enough potential clout to disrupt the flow of oil from the trans-Atlantic pipeline.

Last year tankers hauled more than one million barrels of oil a day from Valdez, the pipeline's terminal and storage point.

City Size Glacier

Looming near shipping lanes leading from Prince William Sound to Valdez, the glacier is an awesome mass of ice that extends 42 miles and is 3,800 feet thick in some places. Washington, D. C. would fit on its surface.

Scientists think the glacier verges on a retreat that could dump 20 to 27 million tons of ice per day into the waters and spawn 10,000 ton icebergs. Peak of this activity is expected from 1982 to 1985, but it could begin earlier.

Columbia Glacier is especially menacing because it has not staged a major retreat in hundreds of years and it is the last one in North America extending over a deep fiord. The front tip of the glacier rises from shallow water, but the bulk of it rests in a deep channel of the fiord 2,000 feet below sea level.

"The immediate danger is that once the front of the glacier retreats from the shoals into the deeper water of the fiord, the rate of breakup and retreat will be increased dramatically," said Mark F. Meier, who heads the U.S. Geological Survey's glaciology program.

"Give or take a year, we expect Columbia Glacier to have retreated about five miles by 1986. This will release about ten cubic miles of ice, some of which will be discharged in sufficient size to be of concern to shipping."

Aware of this chilling prospect, the U.S. Coast Guard has been considering measures to counter the threat.

Winds Steer Bergs

"But before we do anything drastic, we have to be convinced that shipping really is in peril," said Commander Ian Cruickshank, a Coast Guard traffic specialist. "Southeasterly winds usually keep most icebergs from shipping lanes, although nighttime traffic in and out of Valdez has been shut down on a few occasions."

A massive iceberg calving would force more drastic measures. The Coast Guard is considering a patrol aircraft that would inform tanker captains of berg patterns, tugs that would guide vessels through the most treacherous buildup, or icebreakers that would convoy the ships through the ice.

If those measures failed, the Coast Guard might place a nylon net across a 3.1 mile-wide passage just west of Valdez to trap the icebergs before they can drift into shipping lanes. The net, strung from one side of the passage to the other, would extend underwater much like the anti-submarine devices used in World War II.

Trapped by the barrier, the icebergs would either melt and break up in the warm water, or be pushed harmlessy away by the benevolent southeasterlies.

Administration Plans Bomber

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, which cancelled production of the B-1 bomber three years ago, is moving toward developing an advanced bomber that could better penetrate increasingly tough Soviet air defenses in the 1990s.

Congress is virtually certain to hand the administration a mandate to move in this direction. A compromise weapons bill awaiting Senate and House action contains language authorizing $375 million next fiscal year to "vigorously" pursue work on a new strategic bomber to replace the aging B-52.

The bill orders the Pentagon to decide by next March 15 on the technological approach and characteristics it believes are best to incorporate into a new bomber.

But senior defense officials already have indicated that they are inclined to start developing a follow-on strategic bomber, using technology which they believe would enable the new bomber to survive ever more sophisticated Soviet air defenses. These defenses include a new SAX-10 antiaircraft missile system and airborne radar that could "look down" and prevent bombers from sneaking over Soviet territory below the level of conventional ground-based radar.

The Republican 1980 platform promises "accelerated development and deployment of a new manned strategic penetrating bomber that will exploit the $5.5 billion already invested in the B-1, while employing the most advanced technology available."

One of a number of advanced concepts being pushed by some Air Force officials and aerospace industry scientists is called "stealth."

Details are secret, but "stealth" involves technological means that would make it almost impossible for an enemy radar to spot the penetrating bombers and point antiaircraft weapons at them.

There have been some indications that this technology includes exotic materials which absorb radar beams and make the plane's "cross-section" image so small that it would be practically invisible to searching radar.

Dr. William J. Perry, the Pentagon's research chief, has said that he planned to propose moving into research and development of an advanced bomber in the fiscal 1982 budget which goes to Congress in January. The congressional action on the fiscal 1980 weapons bill, which the administration did not seek, would move up the schedule one year.

Perry, Gen. Lew Allen, the Air Force chief of staff, and other senior officials have made it clear that they have not yet come to grips with a specific design concept and that a range of possibilities is under consideration.

Allen has said that such a plane should have a significant conventional bombing capability as well as nuclear weaponry, including "standoff" missiles. The Air Force chief also envisions a plane that can operate into such remote areas as Iran and the Persian Gulf in non-nuclear wars outside the Soviet Union.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said in a recent speech that "we have the exploratory programs necessary to develp a new bomber to meet any requirements for the 1990s."

He defended cancellation of the B-1 in mid-1977 on grounds that "it was clear...that by the time the B-1 could have been off the assembly lines and deployed ..., improved Soviet air defenses would have (made) this aircraft dangerously vulnerable."

Instead, at the time, the Carter administration chose to emphasize developing small, accurate cruise missiles which could be fired from B-52s outside the reach of Soviet air defenses and aimed at targets deep inside the Soviet Union.

Stamp News

For more than 150 years, the Isle of Man Steam Packet Co. has provided service to the island carrying cargo and passengers through fair or foul weather. To honor this excellent service and the proud tradition since 1830, the Isle of Man has issued a new set of six stamps depicting various ships used by the company during the past century and a half.

The 7 pence shows "Mona's Isle I," the first ship of the company which remained in service until 1851. The 8 pence illustrates the "Douglas I", built in 1858 and considered the fastest then afloat. It had the distinction of serving on both sides of the American Civil War, and once was commissioned as the U.S.S. Gettysburg. The 11½ p features the "Mona's Queen II," and was involved in World War I, achieving fame when it rammed and sank a German U-Boat. The 12 pictures the "King Orry III," built in 1913. It also served during World War I. This ship resumed war duty in 1939 and was sunk at the evacuation from Dunkirk in 1940. The 13 p depicts the "Ben-my-Chree IV," launched in 1927. She served as a troop transport in World War II and was part of the D-Day invasion fleet to Normandy. After the war she returned to the company and remained in use until 1965. The 15 p shows the "Lady of Man II," the newest ship of the line, which has been in use since 1975.

Also issued by the Isle of Man in June was a commemorative stamp in tribute to the visit of King Olav V of Norway. In the background is the replica of a Viking long ship.

While the King of Norway is honored by another postal administration, Norway has issued a new souvenir sheet consisting of four stamps dedicated to "Norwex 80," its international stamp exhibition. The designs show four different methods of transporting mail plus miniature reproductions of four definitive Norwegian stamps which have been in use since 1855.

The 125 ore depicts the paddle steamer "Bergen." The 200 ore features a locomotive from the year 1900. The 280 ore illustrates a motor coach of 1940 and the 400 ore shows a Boeing 737 with a DC-9.

The U.S. is not the only country involved in anti-smoking campaigns. Ethiopia, participating in the World Health Organization's program to encourage nations to reduce this health hazard, has issued three new stamps. The WHO's theme for World Health Day 1980 is "Smoking or Health — the Choice is Yours." One Ethiopian stamp depicts a skull stuffed with cigarettes. A second stamp illustrates the World Health Organization symbol. The third stamp shows the effects of smoking on a human lung.

The eyes of the stamp world are focused on the eyes of the common potato. And it all goes back to Sir Walter Raleigh.

Sir Walter not only discovered tobacco when he came to America some 400 years ago, but he is also credited with finding the potato and bringing it to Europe as an important food product. Nevertheless, it was not until the 18th century that potatoes were cultivated to a great extent on the Island of Jersey and 100 years ago when the famed "Jersey Royal Potato" received acclaim.

To hail the Centenary of the "Jersey Royal Potato," the Island of Jersey has issued three new stamps. The designs feature a late 19th century potato planting scene, digging and culling the potato crop, and transporting potatoes to St. Helier.

NBC-TV's 'Games' Has New Concept

"Games People Play," premiering Thursday, Aug. 21 (8 to 9:30 p.m. on NBC), isn't just another entry into the world of episodic television. There's a definite reason behind the premise of the show, and it's a solid one.

"It's time to acknowledge the everyday men, women and kids who compete just for the fun of it, for the simple rewards of participation," says Don Ohlmeyer, the show's producer.

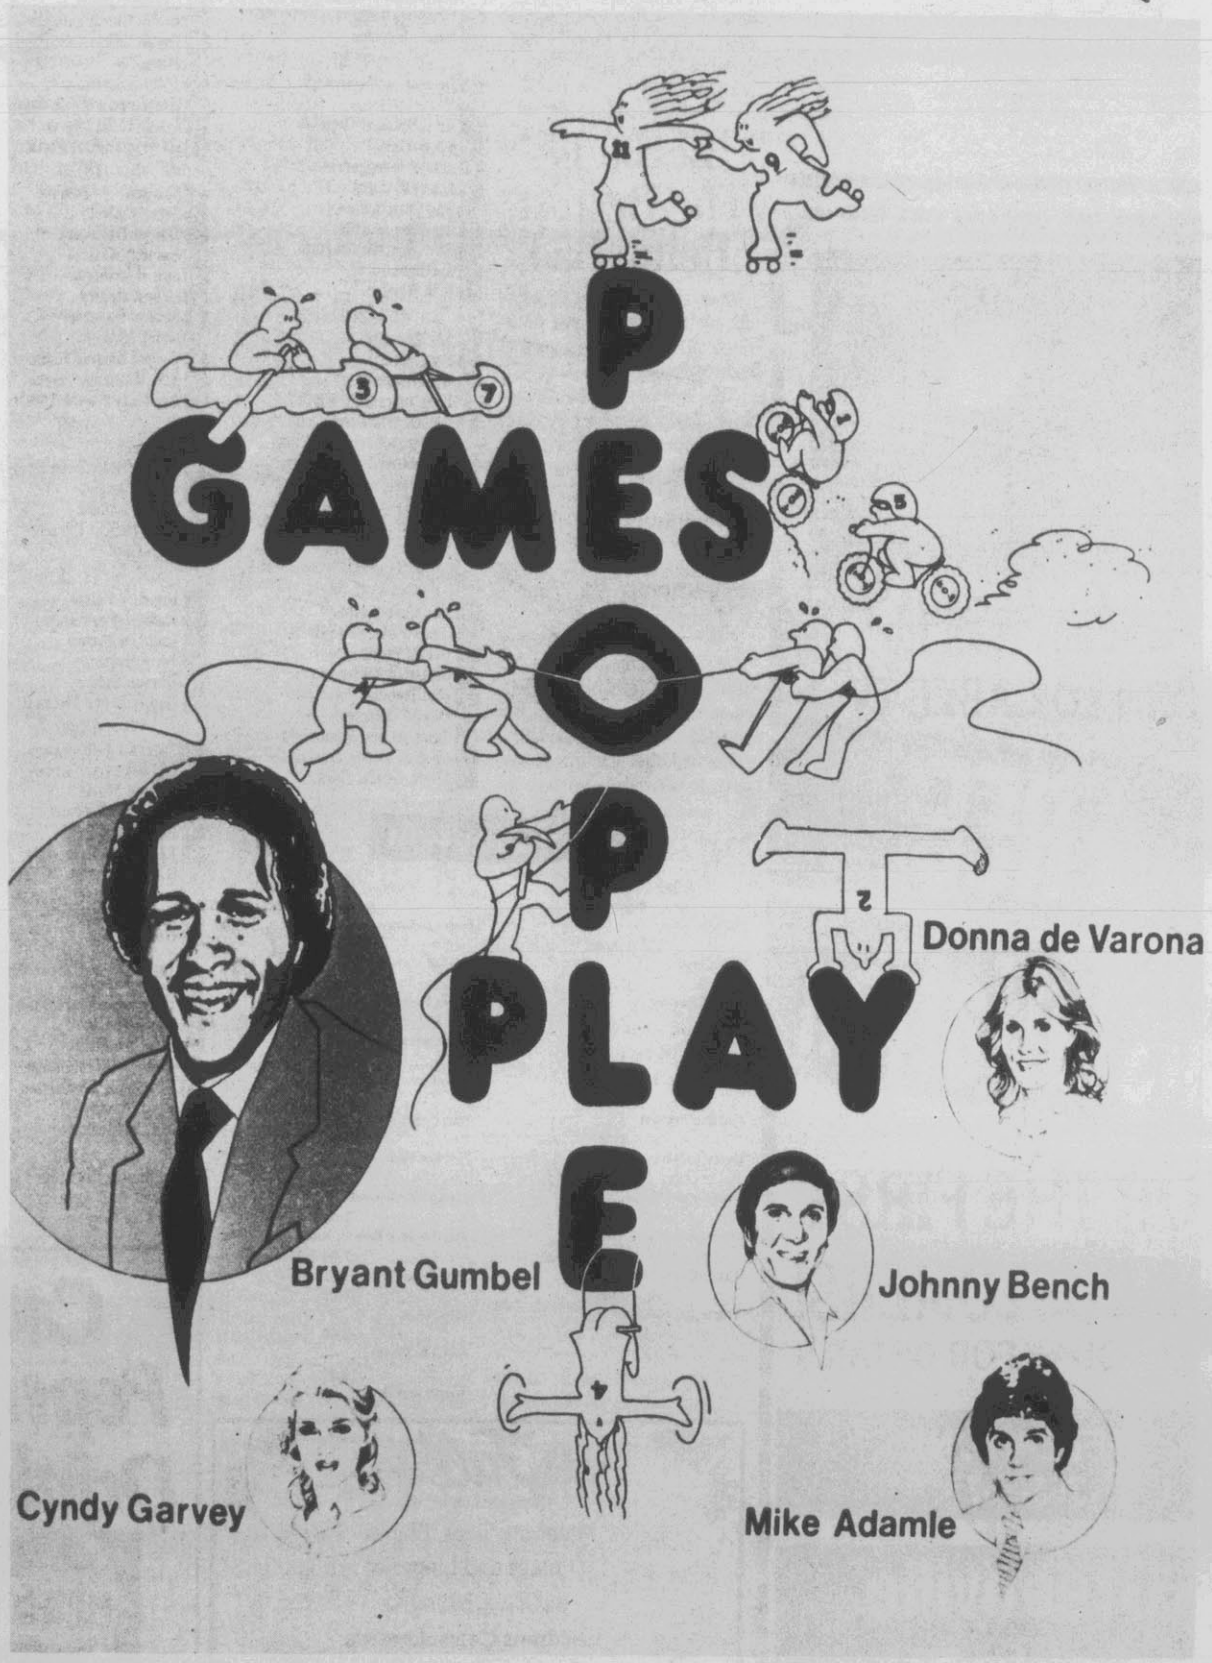
"I think it's tough for a lot us to appreciate professional sports as much as we'd like to when all we seem to hear and read these days is news of an athlete earning more than $800,000 a year grumbling about being a slave," he continued. "Whether he is a pauper or not, the hassling interferes with our enjoyment of sports.

"We did a feature on a belly-flop contest that's been going on for 15 years in Canada," Ohlmeyer says. "You know what the winner received? A green bathrobe. Now, you know," he laughs, "these people HAD to be in it for the fun of it all. That's the kind of spirit and thought we want to capture and convey on 'Games People Play.'"

The show, produced entirely on location here and abroad, will feature a variety of popular competitive events. Some of these, such as the "World's Toughest Bouncer" and the tug-of-war contest, were introduced in the two-hour prototype. There will also be events spotlighting regional and job-oriented rivalries such as Pittsburgh's steelworkers against that city's coal miners and inmates vs. their prison guards.

Each week's segment will have a multi-lineup of competition. You'll see youth-oriented contest among sub-teen-agers as well as an uplifting, inspirational weekly feature on special athletic accomplishments among all ages. Other weekly highlights will be a never-before attempted feat of daring along with international coverage of average-man competition in foreign lands.

Bryant Gumbel will host "Games People Play," and joining him as co-hosts are four well-known sports personalities — Johnny Bench, Donna de Varona, Mike Adamle and Cyndy Garvey, wife of Los Angeles Dodger All-Star Steve Garvey.



FUN AND GAMES — NBC Sportscaster Bryant Gumbel will host NBC-TV's new sports-variety series, "Games People Play." Joining Gumbel will be co-hosts Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench, Donna de Varona, Cyndy Garvey and Mike Adame. The lighthearted series premieres Thursday, Aug. 21 (8-9:30 p.m.) and will be regularly telecast Thursdays (8-9 p.m.).

"IT'S ALL IN THE EYEBROWS," says Anthony Zerbe about his colorful career of criminal characters. Zerbe's latest heavy is Amory Timmons (above), a drunken caretaker bent on revenge in "Child of Glass," airing on Disney's Wonderful World, Sunday, Aug. 17 (7-8 p.m.).

Zerbe Is The Best At Being Bad

Once again, Anthony Zerbe — one of the screen's most diversified villains — is very good at being very bad.

This time around, the talented actor, who's perceived by many as a model 'heavy,' portrays a discharged drunken caretaker bent on revenge, in "Child of Glass." The chilling two-part tale will be telecast on NBC's Disney's Wonderful World on consecutive Sundays, Aug. 17 and 24 (7 to 8 p.m.).

"One season my character died — or was responsible for — 119 deaths," said Zerbe, as he reflected on his villainous roles. "I was bumped off so many times, I celebrated the first time I survived to the end."

Michele Will Tell

Q: What's happened to Forrest Tucker, who was a 'regular' on "F Troop"? How do I write to him? W. PROPST, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Tucker, who's been in over 90 motion pictures, had key roles in two other series — "Crunch and Des" and "Ghost Busters." His latest outing on the small tube in "Pottsville," a rousing comedy that was rebroadcast by CBS a few weeks ago. Send that letter c/o Lew Sherrell Agency, Ltd., 7060 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90028.

Q: Is it true that Boss Hogg of "Dukes of Hazzard" is running for President of the United States? M. BRYANT, WOODLAND, N.C.

A: Unfortuantely, ole' Boss just didn't generate enough interest, in spite of his slogan — "I'll give you what you deserve." But — he says he'll "be back" in four years!

Q: What can you tell me about Tim Rossovich, who played 'Hunk' on "When the Whistle Blows"? Is there any chance of the show coming back? D. HARMON, WAGRAM, N.C.

A: "Acting came up during the course of playing football, and that's show business now, too," says Tim. And he should know. He's a two-time All American who played for USC, then had a long pro career with the Philadelphia Eagles, San Diego Chargers and Houston Oilers. After hanging up his helmet three years ago, he began doing stunt work in Hollywood, which led to parts in various shows. Now he's considered to be a real 'hot talent' 'round Tinseltown. As for the demise of the show — if enough people continue to talk about 'Whistle,' maybe ABC will bring it back!

Q: What was the name of the song played at the end of each segment of "The Awakening Land"? Also, who sang it? S.C., SUPPLY, N.C.

Q: Has "Operation Petticoat" been cancelled? K. HOWARD, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: 'Petticoat' was cancelled 'way back in 1978.

"We are really pleased with our J-Wood Kitchen! Because of the three windows and nine foot ceilings, the kitchen was hard for us to plan by ourselves. We feel Ariane Clark Custom Kitchens did an excellent job in planning our kitchen. I enjoy the large storage area in the pantry and the fact that all corners in the kitchen are utilzed. Being able to cook a meal and look out the windows at the same time is very pleasing".

Foxx's Material

Asked where he gets his comedy material for his nightclub act, Redd Foxx, star of "Sanford," replied "Anywhere. Like Reader's Digest. I take it and dirty it up."

Finally Chosen!

Richard Chamberlain spent six months in Japan filming "Shogun" and says he enjoyed every minute of it.

"I was after this role for two long years and was extremely happy when I was finally chosen for it," the rugged actor says.

"When I first read 'Shogun,' I knew it would make a wonderful television series. In fact, it's much better for TV than the motion picture screen because of the length."

Chamberlain, who's been commuting between London and Hollywood for the past six years, was so impressed with Japan that he admits he'd return in a minute.

"I was so thrilled over filming there," he continued. "And it was a learning experience I shall never forget."

All-Kid Cast Is Featured

Jodie Foster and Scott Baio head the all-kid cast featured in "Bugsy Malone," to be broadcast for the first time on television Wednesday, Aug. 20 (8 to 10 p.m.), on CBS. The film is a rollicking spoof of the Roaring Twenties, movie musicals and gangster pictures.

Gangleader Fat Sam (John Cassisi) is really in an uproar! His dreaded rival, Dandy Dan (Martin Lev), and his gang are in possession of a new weapon — the splurge gun that shoots marshmallow goo. And Sam's men are being splurged all over the streets of New York!

Thrown into the middle of this is a sweet young thing named Blousey Brown (Florrie Dugger). She's just arrived in the city, filled with dreams of making it in show business. And the gal's hoping to get a job in the chorus at Fat Sam's speakeasy.

Blousey encounters tough guy Bugsy Malone (Baio), who offers to help her achieve her dream. But, while trying to help, he runs across Talluiah (Foster). She is Fat Sam's sharp-tongued girlfriend and jealousy rears its ugly head.

JANE SEYMOUR is one of the most talented magazine writers in the business, but it's her beauty that inspires editor Burt Convy to plant her as an applicant for a cheerleader's job in order to write an expose of "The Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders" in one of television's most popular movies. "The Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders" airs as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" Friday, August 22 (9-11 p.m.).

A Film About Cheerleaders

The 36 dazzling Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders are featured in a hard-hitting movie about an attempted expose of the shapely All-American girls in "The Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders," airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Aug. 22 (9 to 11 p.m.).

With his job hanging by a thread, magazine editor Lyman Mitchell concocts the "perfect" story to make front-page news and reestablish his stature within the industry. Because articles and publicity surrounding the cheerleaders focus on the young athletic girls, never mentioning behind-the-scenes operations, Mitchell 'plants' a reporter named Laura on the squad. Her assignment is to uncover the truth about the group's auditioning process.

Jane Seymour stars as Laura, Laraine Stephens stars as Suzanne, and special guest star Bert Convy portrays Lyman Mitchell. Also starring are the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders.

Five In 'Divorce'

Billy Dee Williams, Olivia Cole, Barbara Feldon, Stella Stevens and Lance Kerwin have been cast in "Children of Divorce," a two-hour film for NBC-TV.

The drama, about divorce from a kid's point of view, focuses on three families from different backgrounds.

Has Been Named

Mary McDonough, one of the 'regulars' on "The Waltons," has been named National Youth Ambassador for the American Heart Association for 1980.

Oilers To Host Saints

The powerhouse Houston Oilers, after falling just one game short of representing the American Football Conference in the last two Super Bowls, opens CBS Sports' 1980 National Football League broadcast schedule in a pre-season game against the New Orleans Saints of the National Football Conference, Sunday, Aug. 17 (1-4 p.m.).

The Oilers duplicated their 1978 wild-card berth last year and advanced into the AFC championship game before they were eliminated for the second consecutive season by the repeat NFL champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

Since Bum Phillips took over the club in 1975 (after one season as defensive coordinator), the Oilers have captured 60 percent of their games for an overall 48-32 mark. During this past off-season, Phillips made the most talked-about trade in the league, swapping quarterback Dan Pastorini to the Oakland Raiders for signal caller Ken Stabler. He also boosted the defensive unit's depth by acquiring safety Jack Tatum from Oakland and linebacker Sammy Green from the Seattle Seahawks in trades.

Houston scored 362 points last year (the most since the 1962 club had 387), and rolled up a club-record 2,572 yards rushing for a game average of 160.7. The Oilers defense picked off a league-high 34 interceptions and was the AFC runner-up with 51 quarterback sacks (behind New England's 57).

The 34-year-old Stabler, the NFL's all-time most accurate passer (59.9 percent completion average), comes off one of his best seasons, finishing with 307 completed passes in 498 attempts for 3,615 yards, 26 touchdowns, with 22 interceptions.

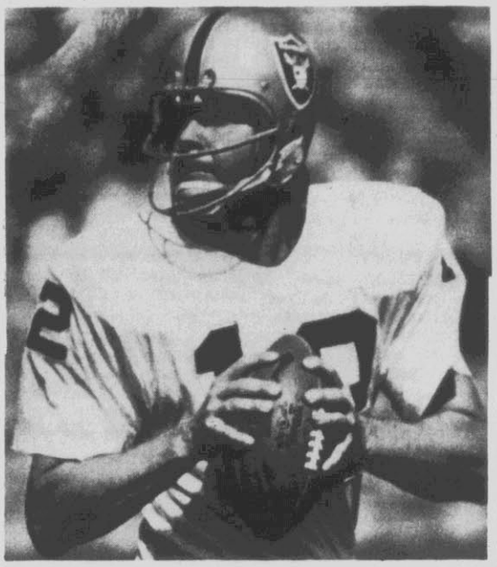
Houston's running attack is built around third-year backfield artist Earl Campbell, who tries this year to become the first ever to capture the NFL rushing title in his first three seasons.

For the New Orleans Saints, the prospects for a playoff spot in 1980 may depend on how they are able to handle their Western Division foes, especially the defending NFC champion Los Angeles Rams. Last year, New Orleans split with the Rams and the Atlanta Falcons, while sweeping both San francisco games.

The players, particularly on offense, seem assembled to start the playoff march. Notably, four of their five Pro Bowlers are offensive starters.

Running back Chuck Muncie set team records for yardage during a season last year (1,198), and a game (161 yards against Atlanta). His backfield running mate has been fifth-year pro Tony Galbreath, who rushed for 708 yards and 10 touchdowns, while maintaining a fine target (58 receptions for 484 yards) for veteran quarterback Archie Manning.

Last year, Mannng passed for 3,169 yards, with a 60-percent completion ratio, while adding 186 yards (5.3 yard average) on the ground.



QUARTERBACK KEN STABLER will be calling the signals when the Oilers meet the New Orleans Saints in a pre-season matchup on Sunday, Aug. 17 (1-4 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Successful City

According to a survey by Inside Sports magazine, Pittsburgh, with six world titles in different sports, is the most successful sports town of the 1970's. Boston is the second most successful city, and San Diego ended up on the bottom of the heap.

The Only Team

The Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association will be the only team to play "home" games away from their regular arena in 1980-81.

Top Names Visit

The top names on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit will pay their second visit of the 1980 season to the high banks of Bristol International Rceway for the Aug. 23rd running of the Busch Volunteer "500."

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — MICHAEL WAYNE's tedious search for an actor to portray his late father in the three-hour "JOHN WAYNE" telefilm for ABC has finally been narrowed down to six. Two of the hottest contenders are SAM ELLIOTT and BRUCE BOXLEITNER.

"RYAN'S WIFE AND TATUM'S MOTHER," a sizzler JOANNA MOORE's writing, could blow the lid off Hollywood. Joanna says she's "spilling the beans" about her torrid love affairs with several film heroes. A few of these are TONY QUINN, MAXMILLIAN SCHELL and (would you believe?) — CHARLTON HESTON!

Another book that should be hitting the stalls soon is "CONFESSIONS OF PHOEBE TYLER," by Ruth Warrick, who's pulling from her 10 years of playing the nasty gal on "ALL MY CHILDREN."

No More Killing

Fans of Clint Eastwood are surprised over his last two films, "Bronco Billy" and "Every Which Way But Loose." Both are comedies and different from the violent "Dirty Harry" movies.

"I just don't like killing anything," says Clint. "'Dirty Harry' wasn't a violent man. He was a rugged individualist who fought the wrongs of the system."

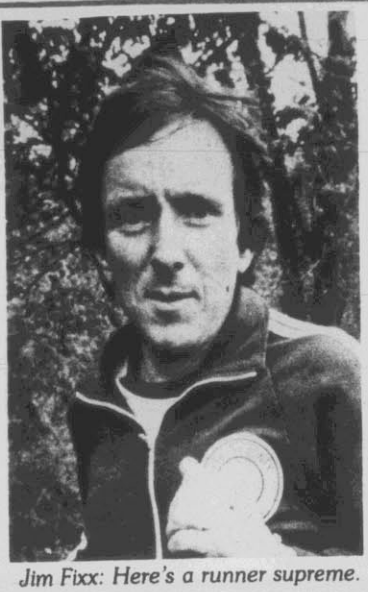
ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.



Jim Fixx: Here's a runner supreme.

FOR JAMES F. FIXX, author of The Complete Book of Running

Which country has the finest runners? How do we rate on the accomplishment scale? — S.G., Jackson, Tenn.

● If we confine ourselves to long-distance running, the answer is easy — the U.S. and, improbably enough, tiny Norway. Our own Bill Rodgers has been winning just about everything in sight for the past five years and is the holder of the Boston Marathon record — 2 hours 9 minutes 27 seconds. A fast woman marathoner is Grete Waitz, 25, who recently set an unbelievably fast new women's record. She achieved a 2.27:30, faster than most men, myself very much included. By her accomplishment, the fleet-footed Ms. Waitz set male-chauvinist-piggism back a whole generation or so.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Why is Shelley Winters disappointed about the way her autobiography came out? — H.C., Pine Bluff, Ark.

● She's not disappointed. All we could dig up was that, at first, she wasn't overjoyed with the title of her life story. She gave careful thought to a long list of ideas, all of which the publishers rejected. Feeling is that book buyers rarely refer to a book by its title. Most say, "Do you have Sophia Loren's book?" or else they try to locate, for instance, copies of Judith Krantz' first novel. So, when customers request the "Shelley Winters" book, they'll be right on target. Shelley's story is called Shelley. Incidentally, when she handed over the manuscript to William Morrow & Co., she directed, with a straight face: "Better print this in a large type. Men and women of my age don't see that well anymore."

Shelley: The Winters of discontent.

FOR JAMES COCO, co-star of the movie Wholly Moses

Did you say that this film taught you things you never learned in school? — N.J., Wenatchee, Wash.

● Yes. I was referring to things that I, a Bronx baby, youth and middle-aged man, never knew about because I was city-reared. Half of the film was shot in a desert. This was my first (and I hope my last) trip to a desert. I was astonished to find that there really are such things as tarantulas and rattlesnakes. I thought they were science fiction.

FOR CHERYL TIEGS, model

Whom do you, a beautiful woman yourself, consider to be the most beautiful woman around today? — D.R., Decatur, Ill.

● Without any thought or question it's Diana Ross. She always has been ahead of her time, and always will be. She is a great pacesetter but manages to stop short of that dangerous, trendy mark. Every part of her is beautiful; her personality and nature, as well as her face and figure. And she has a beautiful voice.

FOR BARBARA BARRIE, star of the movie and the ABC-TV series, Breaking Away

Will the TV show be any different from the movie? — J.M., Las Vegas, Nev.

● I will have a different husband and son (Vincent Gardenia and Shaun Cassidy respectively). The TV series will go beyond winning the bicycle race. The characters will be the same. The father will still be hot-tempered, not understanding his son. I will try to keep the peace. The theme will be family-oriented.

FOR WALTER LANTZ, creator of Woody Woodpecker cartoons

What about the conflicting reports that Mel Blanc and also your wife, Gracie, are the voice of Woody Woodpecker? — M.C.F., Salem, Ore.

● Mel was Woody's voice the first year, but then he signed an exclusive contract to become the voice of Bugs Bunny. Gracie tricked me by slipping in her record with others who had auditioned for Woody. I made my final selection without knowing I picked Gracie.

FOR ELMER B. STAATS, Comptroller General of the United States

How many Presidential libraries are there; where are they? — B.R.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● The first was built for Franklin Roosevelt, in Hyde Park, N.Y. Libraries have been established for Presidents Truman, in Independence, Mo.; Eisenhower in Abilene, Kan.; Hoover in West Branch, Iowa; Johnson, in Austin, Texas; Kennedy, in Boston. Ford's is being built in Ann Arbor, Mich.

FOR BETTE B. ANDERSON, Under Secretary of the Treasury

Is there really gold buried under Fort Knox? If so, how much? — H.L., Bangor, Maine

● More than half (147.3 million of 264.6 million ounces) of the U.S. gold stock is stored in Fort Knox. Bars of about 400 ounces each are stacked in sealed compartments. Nearly all of the rest of the country's gold is held at four locations, with most of it at the New York Assay Office and the Denver Mint.

PRO AND CON

Should the Food and Drug Administration (F.D.A.) Act More Quickly in Approving Drugs?

PRO Representative George E. Brown Jr. (D.-Calif.), chairman, House sub-committee on Science, Research and Technology

Yes. There is no reason why the F.D.A. bureaucracy can't speed up major drug approvals by 25 percent or more, while continuing to emphasize drug safety and efficacy. This can be done, for example, by more rapid F.D.A. review and feedback to industry on problems. This finding is the conclusion of Congressional hearings, which I chaired, and a major General Accounting Office report. Congress is already moving to streamline the F.D.A. charter. With good-faith industry cooperation, the consumer should be the beneficiary of F.D.A. improvements.

CON Sidney Wolfe, M.D., Director, Public Citizen. Health Research Group

No. Thousands of prescription-drug deaths and injuries suffered abroad have been prevented here because of higher drug-approval standards. Strengthening of present standards is required to protect the public from the hazards of duplicative and inferior drugs. Most marketed drugs don't contribute to improving medical practice or the public's health. Potentially important drugs, not fully tested, are available with special precautions to those who need them. Other countries — emulating the U.S. — are tightening their drug-approval processes.

Wide World

Paul McCartney at 38

The Ex-Beatle Goes On and On and On

It's been 10 years since the four Beatles decided to go their own ways. So for Paul McCartney, there will be no more Yesterdays—but tomorrow beckons brightly.

By Bruce Pollock

John Lennon was the intellectual one, the cynic. George Harrison was the deep one. Ringo Starr was the lovable goof. And Paul McCartney was the cute, kind of sexy one whom half the young girls in the world wanted to marry. Rarely in the history of foursomes has there been a group of individuals whose images so meshed and complemented each other as the Beatles, 1963-1970.

Since their famous split, the lives of these four fractions of the whole have been somewhat less productive and exciting. John has gone into hiding with wife Yoko Ono, remaining artistically silent but periodically issuing cryptic manifestos. After dabbling in the rock celebrity circuit, George retreated into increasing spirituality, occasionally putting out a pontifical album but more comfortable just tending his garden. Happy-go-lucky Ringo has suffered from poor health and other misfortunes, the latest being the destruction by fire of his rented home in California, taking with it assorted priceless mementos. He has had a casual succession of mediocre TV shows, films and solo albums. (He's found love, at least, and will soon wed actress Barbara Bach.)

UPI

Beatles John Lennon, Ringo Starr and McCartney with Ed Sullivan in 1964: Talk of a reunion is going nowhere, man.

When the Lads from Liverpool went their separate ways, the only one to really dust himself off and return for, as he puts it, "a second bite of the cake," was Paul McCartney. Since the split, he has continued to be what he was — wholesome, yes, perhaps the most well-adjusted rock star extant (his 10-day jailing this January in Tokyo for possession of marijuana notwithstanding), but beyond that, a working musician first and foremost.

And though his band, Wings, featuring Linda, his wife of 11 years, has drawn more than its share of unfavorable comparisons to the legendary Beatles, it has at least put Paul back on the road, in front of the people again. "That was the whole point of it," he exclaims, as he lounges in his London office.

And there's an extra bonus this time around. The latter days of the Beatles, McCartney notes, were comprised of notoriously short sets, almost completely drowned out by screams from the audiences. "That was one of the reasons we kind of gave up touring for a while," he notes. "In fact, we gave up touring forever." Fans of his new group at least wait for a song's conclusion before cheering. "I like singing to an audience every so often. With the Beatles, we always felt the performance was the record."

While not averse to reminiscing, McCartney offers no great revelations on the secret inner workings of the Beatles. "A couple of people have done books. The one by Hunter Davies [The Beatles] was pretty accurate. But I suppose the inside story won't really ever be told unless one of the four of us writes it." That one won't be Paul, however. "My trouble is I can't remember half of it," he jokingly explains. "The 60's went by in a bit of a blur for me, you know?"

Like his cohorts, McCartney was fortunately able to step back from all the Beatlemania hoopla in those days and smile at it as it grew and grew and grew: "We could just sit and laugh at it. What other reaction can you have when someone rings you up and says, 'Paul, what is your comment, you're supposed to be dead.' I mean, you've got to laugh, you know. If I took that sort of thing seriously, I'd have been dead a long time ago."

The ability not to be too serious, while good for coping with hysterical fans and a frenzied press, has earned McCartney the scorn of many modern critics, who see his recent output as nothing more than "silly love songs." To which McCartney retorts: "What's wrong with that!" Behind the jovial facade, though, this criticism grates on him. "If you look at all the songs I've written, you find quite a few aren't love songs. Probably the ones that get most noted are the love songs because, if you can write a good one, it does attract attention. I've got nothing against it anyway; I really like writing love songs." That's as riled as he gets. Life, otherwise, is pleasant and homey.

His latest album, McCartney II (his second solo album), with the single, "Coming Up," currently high on the American charts, was, in fact, recorded at his home in the country, two hours outside of London town. "It was mainly done in a back room with a recording machine and two microphones. I would just go off after breakfast and play around for a few hours until I got bored. It was a nice way to work, very free and loose. I'd just plug the mikes into the back of the machine and go, just make it all up."

Working at home did offer a few interruptions — such as the "the occasional barking dog," or one of his four kids (three girls and a boy). "Four too many," he laughs. "No, I'm only kidding. They're really great, and I'm able to be with them a lot. We have a pretty normal relationship."

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best tasting low tar they've ever tried!

Smoker Tests Offer More Proof

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.

Paul McCartney

Such normalcy sets McCartney apart from the majority of his rock 'n' roll peers. "I went on millions of tours with the Beatles, and we were kind of swinging bachelors. By the time I got married I was just sort of ready to settle down and have kids and not really look for all that other stuff."

Now when he tours, his wife is in the band, and the kids come along. "I mainly do that because I'd dread getting a phone call and having somebody say one of your kids is ill or something. Rather than have that happen, we just bring them with us. People say it must be terrible for them to be dragged around the world, but we try to arrange it so that it's more like a holiday for them. They just come to one or two of the gigs. If they came to the show every night, it would probably freak them out. So we keep it quite normal, almost normal."

McCartney's quest for normalcy also precludes settling in his wife's homeland, America. "I have nothing against the States, and I love to visit," Paul diplomatically allows. "I'm just English, you know? I've been brought up here and I like a lot of English things, like the football [soccer] finals and stuff. I just hate to miss all that. And the English people, when you get used to them, are a breed apart. And if you live sort of out of the town, people don't make a fuss. I think everybody knows if you're just an ordinary guy, you don't like people dancing around on your lawn. They understand that we like privacy, and they see to it that we get it."

Though neither of Paul's parents is alive — only his father saw the unfolding of the Beatles — he is very close to his younger brother, Mike McGear, a singer and musician who has a new album coming out about whales.

While it's certainly an impossibility to duplicate the monumental highs of Beatle glory, Paul McCartney hasn't appeared to have too many problems whistling through his 30's. Whether guided by whim, cunning, chance or some unconscious grand design, he's managed quite effectively to keep his creative options open. In regard to his latest album, he remarks, "People were thinking that by putting a solo album out, after that thing in Japan, I was sort of taking a new direction. But the album was made before that happened, in the summer of '79. It's not really a change of direction. It's just that I fancied getting in and kind of working on my own for a while."

He also enjoys fooling around with videotapes and expects to be in the vanguard of those artists making the transition onto video-discs. "When they're ready for me, I'll be ready for them." In the meanwhile, several Wings tours have been filmed, as has McCartney's pet project, Rockestra, involving a rock orchestra comprised of all-star players from other bands.

On the business front, there's his music publishing company, headed by Linda's father and brother. "I'm not the greatest businessman," Paul admits. "I really don't get actively involved in any of the deals; they'd be bad deals if I did." He prefers to while away his leisure time swimming, "knocking around with bits of old wood and stuff" and horseback riding. Linda kind of taught me, so I really like it nowadays." As much of a soccer fan as he is, McCartney isn't an athlete himself. "I was never that good at sports. I'm left-footed, you know."

So it's easy to see why the current Guinness Book record holder as the world's most successful songwriter might not necessarily crave, as many of his oldest fans do, a reunion of the "fab four." "Obviously there are people who would like to see the Beatles back together again," he remarks, "but it's virtually a physical impossibility now."

And then there are those who would prefer to experience them only in the affectionate perfection of memory. "Yeah," says McCartney, "well, I'm with that lot." FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most people enjoy gambling — once in a while or frequently — in forms ranging from bingo and the slot machines to poker, blackjack and the crap table. And most figure they're due for a break and Lady Luck is going to help them beat the odds.

2. The ways and means that people employ to shift the odds in their favor run a wide and fantastic gamut.

3. When exposed to the temptations of the gambling tables, the introvert compensates for the fact that he leads a more conservative life than his more outgoing extravert brother. The introvert is more likely to go for broke when he gets started, as the suppressed high roller inside him comes out.

4. There is a reason why compulsive gamblers bet over their heads.

5. Most people would be more sympathetic to the plight of the high roller if they knew how he feels and what he goes through.

ANSWERS

1. True. A Harvard University study of the psychology of chance reports the findings of a survey of more than 61,000 people, 71 percent of whom said they gambled — either occasionally, fairly often or frequently. It is observed: The fact that such an astonishing number gamble suggests a pervasive optimism about the likelihood of success. And from other research evaluated in the study, it is concluded that the gambler's most important conviction is that he is able to beat the laws of chance. "Dice players behave as though they are controlling the outcome of the toss. One of the ways they exert this control is to toss the dice softly if they want a low number or hard for a high number."

2. True. As the same study points out: Almost anyone who has ever walked through a gambling casino has witnessed people behaving as if they can control chance by talking to dice, taking notes on past outcomes before betting at roulette tables, systematically manipulating the manner of pulling levers of slot.machines and so on. An observation cited from another investigation exemplifies the extent of this illusory control behavior: "One gambler in Las Vegas blew a deep breath against the dice before every roll. 'Do you think that brings you luck?' the man standing next to him at the crap table asked. 'I know it does,' the shooter replied with conviction. 'Las Vegas has a very dry climate. So the dice are usually very dry. I have very damp breath, and I always exhale against a six and and ace. That not only gives the six and ace a little extra weight but makes them adhere to the table when they roll across it. The opposite sides come up — and the opposite sides of a six and ace are an ace and six.' 'Does it really work?' his neighboring player asked. 'Well, not all the time,' the shooter admitted. 'The load of condensation isn't quite heavy enough. But I've been on a hot liquid diet all day, and tonight ought to be the time I break the bank.'"

3. False. In studies conducted by a team of psychologists at Japan's Dokkyo University on behavioral differences between extraverts and introverts in betting situations, extraverts were found to make larger bets, regardless of the odds, and to make riskier gambles than introverts — particularly when chance appeared to favor them to any extent.

4. True. A Montclair State College study profiles the "mental set" of the man who gambles despite the fact that his addiction to wagering on horses, cards, sporting events, whatever, threatens to ruin his life. "The compulsive gambler continues to bet because the action has come to be a refuge from thoughts of the outside world. His anxieties associated with his wife, family, debts or job disappear when he concentrates on money and action." University of Michigan studies likewise show that compulsive gambling is related to marital problems, job dissatisfaction and alcohol consumption. But the researchers are careful to note that gambling may be the effect of these problems and not the cause.

5. True. Herb Goldberg and Robert T. Lewis, a team of California State University psychologists, have made a special study of the matter. They point out in their definitive monograph, Money Madness, that "while the dynamics vary, many compulsive gamblers report that they feel 'dead' inside most of the time and only 'come alive' from the time they put the bet down until they find out whether they have won or lost. Some admit that winning or losing is the symbolic equivalent of being told one is loved or rejected by Dame Fortune, who is really a substitute for mother. As one compulsive gambler described it, 'When I win, I feel a warm glow all over, like a baby at its mother's breast. But when I lose, I get a cold, clammy feeling that grabs me by the throat, and I feel depressed and empty.'" FW

By David Grunwald

These days the Oakland A's reflect their new manager: scrappy, volatile, combative, exciting. No, they're not really contenders yet, but they're throwing a scare into the entire American League by playing a brand of no-holds-barred baseball not seen since the Gas House Gang went fuelish in St. Louis. They've already surpassed last year's total home attendance by more than 150,000 at the All-Star break.

What a difference a manager can make. Especially if his name is Billy Martin. Battlin' Billy, the Berkeley Kid, has returned home to turn the tide with yet another team.

"Basically, managing comes down to common sense," Martin says, "to being able to know your players. I don't think there's less pressure in Oakland. Wherever a manager goes there's always the same amount of pressure. There's always going to be pressure on the manager because he wants to succeed."

No one has ever questioned Martin's ability to succeed as a manager. He's transformed losing teams in Minnesota, Detroit, Texas and New York into winners overnight. But self-imposed pressure has created in Martin a sort of tendency to self-destruct, undoing all the good he's done by offending the men who employ him. Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, for example, hired and fired Billy twice, the final time in late 1979 after Martin slugged a marshmallow salesman outside a hotel bar in Bloomington, Minn.

Martin developed this hair-trigger temper in the tough West Berkeley area where he was born Alfredo Manuel Pesano 52 years ago. His mother, Joan Downey, still lives in the same green, two-story wooden home she did when Martin was born and is every bit as feisty as her son. "She's older than she weighs," Martin has said, "78 years to 75 pounds. From her I get all my meanness and all my heart."

And, lifting a line from the musical Damn Yankees, Martin has impressed upon his A's that they gotta have heart. "These guys felt like they had been put down and pushed around," Martin says. "But now they have their pride. That's the important thing."

"Billy's coming has changed everything," A's third baseman Wayne Gross has said. "He's so intense. The first day he told us, 'If you don't want to win, get your stuff and get out. If you don't give your best effort, you're gone. But if you bust your hump for me, I'll bust mine for you.'"

Martin's A's pull all the tricks: hit and run, suicide squeeze, stealing home. Double steals are common with this team; the A's have even pulled off a triple steal, while swiping home well over a half-dozen times already. Swift A's outfielder Ricky Henderson even got a bunt double, the first one seen in many a year.

"They never give up," Martin says of his players. "They'll go out the next day and just give their best all the time. Even though they make mistakes on the field, they keep trying and trying and they don't give in."

How long Martin and irrepressible A's owner, Charlie Finley, will continue to get along is anybody's guess. In going to work for Finley, Martin (fired by four managers) is teamed with the owner who has fired 16 managers in 19 years. It's almost like asking how long can you hold a match to a can of gasoline before the inevitable occurs.

"Charlie's been great," says Martin. "He's left me alone." FW

Back-to-School Clothes Primer

Photographs by Normand Menard

Crisp classics will make A's this fall: (from left) a fleece pullover, collared and cuffed, tops a pleated plaid skirt. An easy corduroy skirt, with inverted pleats and D-ring tabs, matches up with a smart plaid blouse.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

"We'll see a return to the classics, more pleats and plaids in school clothes this fall," predicts designer Florence Eiseman, who has earned the title First Lady of Children's Fashion.

Eiseman, credited with taking the "fuss" out of children's clothes — with a typical design that is essentially a simple line hanging straight down from the shoulder or from a yoke — no longer works exclusively with natural fabrics but uses easy-care blends. "There are better ways for families to spend their time than with the laundry and ironing," she says.

For those on a tight budget, Eiseman recommends buying separates — jumpers, skirts, blouses and sweaters that can be dressed up or down. This season, she'll show more sweater sets, such as a solid shetland sweater, plaid-trimmed, to match a plaid skirt. Eiseman's clothes still feature generous hems and seams, finished trim and fine fabrics. The highest accolade paid her? Several parents came up to her at a fashion show recently and revealed that their children were wearing clothes designed by her that they had worn as youngsters.

Children's clothes this season are also whimsical and versatile. A little girl can don a sweatshirt, dotted with colorful pompons, or, in a different mood, choose a smart, no-nonsense lace-collared dress. Boys can romp in their favorite activewear or switch into overalls or a sweater-shirt-pants combination or dress up in a suit.

Whatever they wear, kids today have minds of their own. Dr. Lee Salk, professor in psychiatry and pediatrics at Cornell Medical College and author of Dear Dr. Salk, tells us, "Children should start sharing in the selection of their own clothes at the earliest possible age. They should

Wash that gray

Gray hair can make you feel so old.

Okay. So you've got some gray. You notice it every time you look in a mirror.

Well, that's why we make Loving Care Color-Lotion.

Loving Care is different.

Loving Care is easy.

Even for beginners. Pick the shade that's closest to your own natural color. Then just put it on, leave it on, and wash it off.

Loving Care has no peroxide or ammonia.

Unlike other haircolorings, Loving Care contains absolutely no peroxide. So there's no permanent color change. In fact, if you change your mind, it wears out gradually (about six shampoos).

not be turned loose in a store, but, with parents, choose several items and then be allowed to make the final selection.

"Along with expressing their own individuality, shopping helps teach children the value of money and quality." It's also a good idea, he suggests, not to buy everything before school starts but wait until a few days after to see what the other children are wearing. "Peer pressure is something parents have to accept," Salk emphasizes. For instance, if all the children are wearing a certain blue and yellow sneaker, parents should make an effort to get them, too. "It's important that children have a feeling of belonging and being a part of the crowd," states Salk.

For boys, it could include:

- Six pairs of slacks: two jeans, two in twill or polyester and two in blends with a flannel look.
- Eight to 12 shirts — color-coordinated with slacks.
- Two sweaters: one crew neck, one cardigan.

Quilted looks are leading in outerwear. She's wearing a hooded, vertically quilted coat with knit trim. He's in a box-quilted zip-front jacket with big patch pockets. All the clothes shown are by Casual Time.

- One blazer jacket with two dress slacks, such as a navy blazer with gray flannel pants and a tartan plaid in flannel.
- One "bomber" jacket with a pile lining and hood.
- One trench coat with a zip-out lining that also can be worn for dress occasions.

For girls, a wardrobe might include:

- Four pairs of slacks: two denim jeans, two corduroy.
- Two skirts: one corduroy, one acrylic plaid.
- Four tops to coordinate with skirts.
- One corduroy jumper.
- Three dresses: two cotton-polyester plaids and one knit, perhaps a velour that can be dressed up with accessories.
- One winter jacket — perhaps quilted nylon with pile lining and hood.
- One fake-fur coat which can be worn for casual or dress occasions.

To make sure your shopping trip is a success, keep these tips in mind:

1. If you take your child with you, it will eliminate a frantic return to the store if the clothes don't fit or if your child simply won't wear them.

2. Since the most certain thing children do is grow, look for full-cut designs for ease of movement in the seat, armholes, crotch and pants legs; adjustable or stretchable straps and waistbands; easy-to-work fastenings.

3. Avoid so-called "bargains" in clothes, which might not last the season, unless you've checked the item carefully or you know a fine garment is genuinely on sale. FW

And Loving Care has no ammonia either. So it even smells gentle.

So if you want to look younger, even feel younger, wash that gray right outta your hair. With Loving Care.

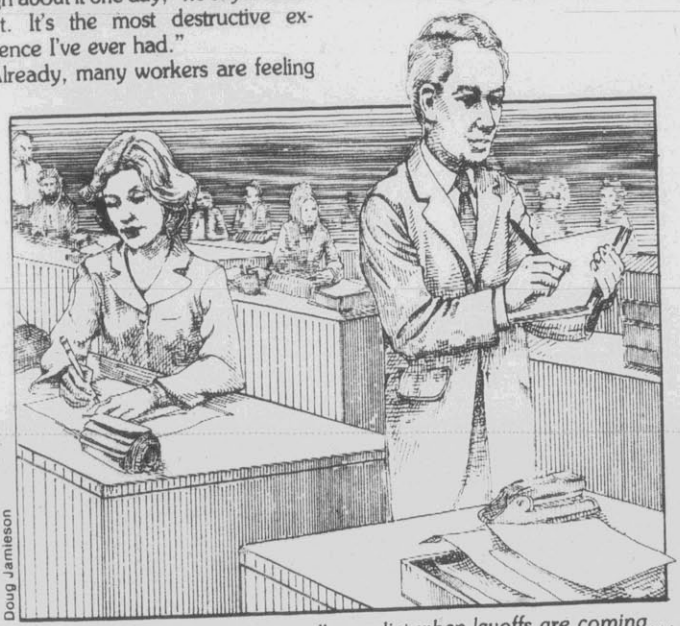
Keeping Your Job When Times Get Tough

By Mary Long

The last thing Tom Meredith expected when he arrived for work one sunny Friday morning was a pink slip in his weekly pay envelope. "I'd like to tell you that being laid off is a learning experience and that I expect I'll be able to laugh about it one day," he says. "But I can't. It's the most destructive experience I've ever had."

Already, many workers are feeling the effects of an economic slowdown. Massive layoffs by such companies as U.S. Steel (approximately 25,000 as of mid-July) and General Motors (138,000 as of mid-July) are only the beginning, economists warn, pointing out that the steel and auto industries are always the first to suffer a recession's impact.



Doug Jamieson

Obviously, some people are more vulnerable to layoffs than others. Whether you'll be a victim depends on who you are, what you do and how well you do it.

In many cases, you can actually predict when layoffs are coming and do something to avoid one for yourself. "In 90 percent of these layoffs, you can sense if there's some impending job doom, but you must have your personal antennae up," says John R. Sibbald of John Sibbald Associates, a Chicago-based executive search firm.

There are definite symptoms. "Watch inventories if you work for a manufacturing firm," suggests Stephen R. Smith, president of another executive search firm. "If inventory has begun piling up and a company is producing a lot more than it's selling, that's a danger signal."

You should also pay attention to overtime. A company in a financial crunch will typically cut output, cut overtime, then lay off people.

And it's essential to be aware of your own performance. "Ask yourself if things have changed between you and your immediate superior," says Sibbald. "Have you been pushed to the periphery of things lately — perhaps you're not sitting in on meetings anymore, or your boss has taken over some of your responsibility."

All of these things — combined with a keen attention to rumor, industry gossip and the newspapers — may alert you to the possibility that your job might be in danger. What do you do then? Get feedback, the experts insist. That means a talk with the boss.

"A company making layoffs and cutting back is like a war machine that's in motion," says Lawrence D. Schwimmer, author of the recently published How to Ask for a Raise Without Getting Fired (Harper & Row). "This is really one of those situations where an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

What that adage means when applied here is: The better you do your job, the less likely you are to lose it. If you weren't doing your job well in good times but managed to keep it, only dumb luck is going to save it for you now. And if you haven't been a good worker up until now, suddenly appearing before the boss and offering to lighten his load just isn't going to work. Your boss's response will be, "Where were you before?"

If you know you're a worker worth keeping, Schwimmer suggests that you make an appointment to talk with the person in charge of your future at the company. When you have your discussion, you should do two things:

1) Find out where you stand. If workers are already being laid off, what is the likelihood of your being laid off? What kind of notice would be you given?

2) Make clear that you are sensitive to the economic pressure currently burdening the company. Find out whether the boss is dissatisfied in any way with the job you are currently doing, and, if so, ask him or her to pinpoint areas where you need to improve.

> "The question top management asks when trimming the payroll is: 'Does this person make us money or cost us money?'"

All the experts agree that feedback is crucial. "You must know where you are," says Don Whyte, senior vice president at Thinc Career Planning Corporation in Illinois. "In an economy-strained period, an employee must find out how his performance stacks up against the boss's expectations, rather than thrashing around in the dark."

It's important to be aware of the fact that some businesses are more sensitive to an economic slowdown than others. The manufacturing, construction and transportation industries, for example, tend to lay off more employees initially than the service industries — medicine, mechanics, insurance and Federal, state and local governments. Generally, blue-collar jobs are more susceptible to layoffs than white-collar jobs.

That doesn't mean the service industries can't be hit. They just generally lag six to nine months behind the capital goods sectors in making layoffs, and they draw less attention from the newspapers because their cuts are smaller and made department by department. "In prosperous times, service firms get fat," says management consultant James Buttimer, vice president and director of Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc. "Staff jobs proliferate; the organizational structure mushrooms; tolerance of mediocrity abounds. They are very ripe for layoffs."

"The question top management asks when trimming the payroll during rough financial times is: 'Does this person make us money or cost us money?'" says Curt Kampmeier, an independent management consultant. Usually, the financial department will undergo the initial bloodletting. The reason: "When the company has problems, the president's first inclination is to blame it on the vice president of finance," says Sibbald. "Public relations, personnel, manufacturing and sales are next in line."

What determines who stays and who goes? "The company brass may turn to the department heads and tell them they've got to choose," says Smith. "They will ask for the names of the people they can get along without. The least effective people are the ones who will be let go. The criterion is: 'Who contributes the least in terms of the ongoing operation of your department?'"

Jack Kennedy, president of the executive search firm Jack Kennedy Inc., emphasizes that this selection process does not necessarily mean the least skilled are always the first laid off. "The do-nothing guys with the big offices and big titles — the real deadweight — are often the first to go."

A recent Brookings Institution study indicates, however, that chances of becoming jobless generally decline as salary rises. The relative safety of the executive suite was well documented in the last (1974-75) recession. The jobless rate for clerical workers reached 7.7 percent and that of sales personnel hit 6.1 percent, while professional, technical and administrative unemployment was only about 3 percent. Recent data for 1979-80 break down the same way.

Who else is particularly vulnerable to layoffs? Studies show that age is another consideration. During the 1975 recession, unemployment for 16- to 19-year olds hit 20 percent, while the overall rate was 8.5 percent. Recent national figures show the same pattern. As of June 1980, national unemployment for 16- to 19-year olds was 18.5 percent, while the general rate was 7.7 percent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Sex also enters the picture. "There's a tendency for women to be more subject to unemployment than men of the same age," says Smith. "There's more turnover because of family obligations." Also, statistics show that women were the last to enter the work force. They don't have seniority, are generally paid less and, like younger workers, may not have had a chance to build up credibility or indispensability.

Doug Jamieson

Both women and minorities should fare better in this recession than in the last, according to a recent survey by the New York recruiting firm of Deutsch, Shea & Evans. This time, widespread affirmative action programs will make it harder to lay off women and minority employees.

One thing is certain: Poor performers will be weeded out. "We've found that in a recession, companies are looking for someone who can do the job of two," says Sibbald.

That's why it's important to maintain and develop your job skills. "Obviously, the more skills you have, the more secure your job," says Richard Bolles, author of the best seller What Color Is Your Parachute?

"If you can see any concrete ways in which you can help management cut costs, go for them," says Smith. "Try to identify ways to be more productive and efficient. Look around for more responsibility. And be flexible. Be willing to take on work that may not be 'your job.'"

This does not mean, the experts emphasize, coming in to the office at six in the morning or hanging around until seven every evening, when you're not needed, in order to "impress" the boss. It may mean, for instance, volunteering for a company or college-sponsored training program that would increase your value to the company.

If you feel you have been unfairly underrated or overlooked or are being blamed for a mistake you didn't make, now is the time to speak up. Tout your work — within reasonable limits. At least make sure those who are making decisions about layoffs have some idea of what you are contributing. And maintain your contacts within the firm as well as outside it, encourages Schwimmer. "It may be possible to arrange for a transfer with another manager or department head," he points out.

"The challenge of the 1980's," says James P. Smith, director of Temple University's community vocational counseling clinic, "is for people to assume more responsibility for taking care of themselves as a hedge against hard times." If you take note of the precautions suggested above and keep your options and your eyes open as never before, the odds are good that you will survive — and perhaps even prosper. FW

Nathan Pritikin Wants To Save Your Life

Medical messiah or merely mercenary? Either way, Nathan Pritikin has people talking. And some are saying that his diet and exercise program can, indeed, save your life.

By Gloria Hochman

Illustration by Trudi Smith

Pritikin runs through his do's and don'ts: Fresh fruits and vegetables are in; fish and poultry out until cholesterol drops.

Every morning for breakfast, Gerald Lemole eats a bowl of oatmeal with four teaspoons of bran and one-half teaspoon of fructose, a natural sweetener. His lunch consists of a glass of vegetable juice, celery and carrot sticks and a salad. Dinner always includes soup, salad, perhaps a vegetable platter or a bowl of brown rice with chicken or a plate of whole wheat spaghetti with an oil-free tomato sauce.

Gerald Lemole is a cardiac surgeon and chairman of the department of surgery at Deborah Heart and Lung Center in Brownsville, N.J. The diet he is following is a modified version of the Pritikin Program, a regimen developed by Nathan Pritikin, a 64-year-old California inventor and nutritionist, not a doctor, who insists that his nutritional plan can combat heart disease.

Whether or not it can is still highly controversial, but increasing numbers of heart patients are willing to give it a try. They are buying Pritikin's book The Pritikin Program for Diet and Exercise, written with Patrick M. McGrady Jr., and which has sold roughly half a million hardcover copies since being published in 1979. (It's now in paperback.) And they are flocking to his Longevity Center in Santa Monica, Calif., for a course in Pritikin's methods. (Average cost: $3,300 per patient plus up to $1,300 in medical expenses for 26 days.)

What is the Pritikin Program? It is a combination of exercise and diet that is significantly different from that which most Americans follow. It is low in cholesterol ("which blocks arteries"), fats ("they raise cholesterol levels") and protein ("creates a negative mineral balance"), and high in complex carbohydrates ("maintains proper blood-sugar balance") and fiber ("has a laxative effect").

Forbidden foods usually include oils, sugars, fatty meats, poultry and fish (until cholesterol levels are substantially cut), organ meats, shrimp, egg yolks, dairy products, nuts (except chestnuts), jams and jellies, fruits or fruit juices with added sugar, commercial breads and cereals, alcohol, coffee, tea, cola, salt and white rice.

If that sounds as though there is nothing left to eat, Pritikin assures that there are still plenty of "goodies" to choose from and insists that once a person has tried his diet, chances are that he or she will stick with it. The rewards, according to Pritikin, are freedom from the ravages of debilitating degenerative diseases and a longer, healthier life during which people feel younger, look better and are more energetic. The promise of relative immunity from heart disease may be the diet's greatest attraction.

The key, Pritikin claims, is the level of cholesterol in the body. He says that this level closely correlates with the incidence of heart disease. In this country, a cholesterol level of 160 to 330 is considered normal. But, Pritikin insists, deaths from heart disease come to people with "normal" cholesterol levels. "Persons with cholesterol levels of 260 or more have a 500-percent greater chance of succumbing to heart disease," he says. Pritikin urges Americans to find out what their cholesterol levels are ("it's more important than knowing how many dollars are in your bank account") and encourages reducing cholesterol levels to no more than 160.

Eliminating fats is crucial. The average American diet has a 40-percent fat content and, each year, most people consume approximately 150 pounds of fat, all of which escalates cholesterol counts, which contributes to coronary artery disease. Pritikin says that his diet reduces cholesterol by 10 percent in six days and by 25 percent in four weeks.

Jean, a 60-year-old office manager, spent a month at the Longevity Center last year. Jean did not have a history of heart problems, but her cholesterol level was dangerously high — 440. Her physician suggested the Pritikin Program. While Jean was at the Center, she was under meticulous medical supervision. She was examined by doctors every day, given stress tests (electrocardiographs taken while exercising) to determine how "clean" (free of plaque that causes coronary artery disease) her arteries were. Then an exercise program was prescribed. Hers included walking for an hour a day, which Pritikin feels is crucial to efficient circulation.

Jean was put on a rigid diet, which she admits was difficult at first. It has been nine months since Jean returned from the Longevity Center and she continues to follow the diet rigidly and exercises nightly on her stationary bicycle. She has lost 31 pounds and reduced her cholesterol level to 210.

Despite the limited food choices, Pritikin insists that his diet has been analyzed by three laboratories and found to be perfectly balanced.

Dr. Lemole admits that many (not all) of Pritikin's theories are sound but objects to the rigidity of his program. "Compliance with a diet this rigid is not realistic for many people," he protests, "and I think a few additional foods, such as, perhaps, a tablespoon of oil in salad dressing, could make it more palatable and still effective."

Other physicians interviewed also agree that the basic concept of the Pritikin Program is sound. No one can argue with a plan that helps a person shed extra pounds, encourages exercise and lowers cholesterol. But there is considerable dispute about whether blocked arteries will become unblocked, and some doctors, especially those who practice nutritional medicine, are concerned that the diet is not a healthy one. Dr. H.L. Newbold of New York City, for example, says that "It is a disaster to eliminate meat from the diet." Dr. William Fraimow, associate professor of medicine at Philadelphia's Thomas Jefferson University's School of Medicine, adds, "The Pritikin diet could be effective if it's done in moderation."

And asserts Pritikin's arch rival, Dr. Robert Atkins, whose high-protein high-fat, low-carbohydrate diet is in sharp contrast to Pritikin's and whose own diet books have sold more than 10 million copies, "Pritikin's primary interest in longevity is in the longevity of the Longevity Center."

Pritikin's program has not been endorsed by the American Medical Association or the American Heart Association, but Pritikin, nonetheless, is considered by many to be a "medical messiah." "It is too late to discredit me," Pritikin says. "There are too many practical cases to demonstrate...Only a foolish or unmotivated person would voluntarily abandon the program's enormous rewards."

Pritikin is not disturbed by those who pooh-pooh his program. He points out that much of the criticism focuses on the diet's stringency rather than its ability to ward off disease. While there has not yet been definitive evidence that adherence to his diet will reverse coronary artery disease, it does seem to have halted progress of the disease in numerous cases.

"Current medicine is a failure," Pritikin says boldly, admitting that he has little respect for the medical establishment. "The American Medical Association has nothing for the public," he says. "All they have to offer people is to relieve pain while they're dying. I'm trying to prevent people from dying." FW

Based on amazing average weekly and yearly growth rates reported by plant scientists—it grows SO FAST . . . arches out SO WIDE . . . you can actually take a ruler and measure the incredible difference in height every 2 to 3 days! OR, to really leave your neighbors gasping in awe and wonder, give them a yardstick and let them measure the difference IN FEET, every 2 to 3 weeks!

GROWS MORE IN JUST ONE MONTH THAN MOST TREES GROW IN AN ENTIRE YEAR!

Because according to plant experts, Gov't. scientists and Botanical Gardens who researched this wonder-hybrid . . . once established, you merely water it once-a-week, and be absolutely floored as it GROWS up to A FULL ½ FOOT WEEKLY—AFTER EVERY TIME YOU WATER IT!

That's right! PLANT NOW—REACH OUT AND TOUCH ITS LUSH, THICK BRANCHES FROM YOUR SECOND STORY BEDROOM WINDOW BY NEXT SUMMER!

No doubt about it. There's just not another "instant" Shade Tree like it on this planet! Because—NOW, thanks to this miracle of plant science, instead of spending a small fortune on a tree and then waiting half a lifetime for it to grow . . . this season get set for the garden-wonder of your life as this super-soaring hybrid rockets forth from a sapling to a tower of roof-high beauty IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

GROWS IN VIRTUALLY ANY SOIL —REQUIRES NO SPECIAL CARE— SOARS INTO A MASTERPIECE OF BEAUTY IN JUST A MATTER OF MONTHS!

Best of all, unlike most trees that demand constant care, constant pampering . . . the only thing you do when you plant this super-growing wonder-hybrid is water it and enjoy it! That's why leading botanical gardens . . . landscape artists . . . gardens editors . . . can't stop raving about its indescribable beauty . . . it's trouble-free care . . . it's surging towering growth.

Small wonder that leading experts and the U.S. Dept. of Agric. hail it in the most glowing terms . . . recommend it again and again for homeowners who want a stunning display of both beauty and shade . . . and with practically no more work than a thorough watering each week!

Picking the Right Dog Doesn't Have to Be Ruff

By Melanie C. Stevens

Often we pick a dog on impulse, for instance, because it's cute. But much more thought than that should go into it. After all, with good care a dog lives 10 to 12 years and needs attention every day of its life.

If you're thinking about getting a dog, the first step is research, according to Shirley Goldman, adoption coordinator for the ASPCA in New York City. "Contact the experts before you even start looking at dogs." Your public library is an excellent source of information about various breeds. Ask workers at animal shelters, local breeders and dog-owner friends to share their experience. Here are some points to keep in mind:

Temperament. Different breeds of dogs have different personalities. So in selecting a dog, you should consider your family's needs.

In the very helpful new book The Right Dog for You (Simon and Schuster), author Daniel F. Tortora points out that boxers, collies, Irish setters and golden retrievers, for example, are very sociable and thus are a good bet for families with children. On the other hand, Doberman pinschers and toy poodles are very solitary and therefore might be good for a couple whose kids no longer live at home. And whereas English bulldogs and Irish wolfhounds are sluggish and not likely to be good watchdogs, most terriers, Great Danes and dachshunds are very alert.

Exercise. How much time will you spend walking and exercising your dog? The size of a dog may not reflect how much outdoor activity it enjoys. Many big dogs like lots of outdoor activity, but so, for instance, do Yorkshire terriers and Chihuahuas.

Size. Be realistic about what you have room for. It's unfair to keep a large dog cooped up in an apartment or a house without a good-sized backyard. Also be aware that some big dogs are clumsy and aren't good to have around young children or a house with lots of breakables.

Puppy or Adult. A puppy requires several weeks of training when you first bring it home. A grown dog, on the other hand (2 or 3 years old), is usually quiet and settled.

Once you know what you want, where do you find it? Some experts caution against buying from a pet shop: The animals there are often badly housed, of poor quality and overpriced. Buy from a shelter, another owner or a reputable breeder.

When buying, make sure that the conditions the dog has been kept in are clean. Pick a dog that is neither too shy nor too aggressive. It should have clear eyes and a shiny, healthy coat. If you're buying from a breeder, look at the whole litter and ask to see the parents — especially the mother. Ask when the dog was wormed and whether it's had its shots. And once you've bought your dog, have it checked by a vet right away.

Fall In Virginia. It's Always Warm Enough For Oceans Of Fun.

Up and down the golden coast of Virginia, the ocean beaches are now warming up for your fall vacation. The sun is shining, the seafood is scrumptious, and the water is great for swimming till well into October. In the majestic southwest mountains, Jefferson National Forest has never been lovelier. Sometimes it seems that half the world is crimson and gold.

Monticello

In Colonial Williamsburg, visitors stroll in the autumn of the eighteenth century, to craft shops, to Market Square and to graceful old mansions. Just a few miles away, the children cap off their summer excitement with a visit to Jamestown, the first permanent English settlement in the New World.

On the beautiful islands off the Eastern Shore, migrating waterfowl pause before moving south, and the wild ponies of Assateague kick up their heels in the fresh autumn air.

Virginia Beach to Jamestown	38 miles
Colonial Williamsburg to Richmond	51 miles
Skyline Drive to Mount Vernon	72 miles
Eastern Shore to Virginia Beach	20 miles

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Skating To Health

There's more to roller skating than just disco; the latest fad in exercise is also a terrific muscle toner that burns 660 calories an hour when you roll along at only moderate speeds. "Skating 10 miles per hour, which is not an inordinate amount, is equal to jogging 9½-minute miles," says Dr. Allen Selner, who recently completed a 10-week study of 25 novice skaters for the U.S. Amateur Confederation of Roller Skating.

"This study showed that skating is a perfectly legitimate form of aerobic exercise," Selner continues. "And along with the physical-health benefits come some psychological ones as well. Ninety-two percent of our group recorded lower anxiety levels once they were into a regular skating program. And because you can skate with other people, the social aspects of the sport are every bit as beneficial as the physical ones."

Honesty Wins Out

Travelers and tourists often filch hotel ashtrays and towels as "souvenirs" without really considering themselves dishonest. But former patrons of New York City's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel are obviously feeling guilty about the pieces of silver they or their relatives have made off with: The management reports that everything from spoons to candlesticks are being mailed back.

"We started receiving pieces last January, when the price of silver was so high, and they've been coming in ever since," reports the hotel's manager, Eugene Scanlan. "I think the high price of silver has made people realize the value of these items, and with that increased value comes the realization that 'borrowing' or taking a souvenir is actually theft. Our former patrons are obviously suffering serious pangs of conscience. They're basically honest people who didn't mean to steal, and returning the silver helps lift the guilt."

What is being done with the returned silver? "We're putting it back into service," exclaims Scanlan. "It's still perfectly good, although some of it is close to 65 years old."

Flying High

The Wright brothers did a great deal to get us off the ground, but the urge to fly without machinery has prompted many people to take up hang-gliding. However, for those flight fanciers who want to be able to enjoy a certain amount of control in the air, Brian Shoonmaker has come up with a novel construction. By combining a hang glider with a small engine, Shoonmaker says he's "reinvented the airplane, except that to pilot one of these microlight aircraft you don't need a license because the Federal Aviation Agency classifies them as hang-gliders."

Shoonmaker's aircraft can soar the way a hang glider does but can take off or land in a flat place and can even cruise along at about 30 miles per hour. Shoonmaker, a 33-year-old Floridian who's been an airplane buff all his life, says he became interested in microlight aircraft because "they're so mobile. You don't have to climb a hill to take off the way you do with a hang glider, and you can go for about 100 miles on a gallon and a half of gas." And these days, that's a bargain.

Sneezes And Sniffles

Hay fever victims look forward to the ragweed season with dread. "Mid-August to the first frost is the time when hay fever sufferers are the most miserable," says Dr. Robert Reisman, president of the American Academy of Allergy.

Hay fever is caused by a substance in the body called the IgE antibody, which fixes to the lining of cells in the eyes, nose and throat. These cells contain histamine, a chemical that causes blood vessels to dilate and the surrounding tissue to become inflamed and irritated. When the IgE antibody comes in contact with the offending pollen, the histamine is released, causing the itchy eyes and runny nose associated with hay fever.

To minimize the misery, stay indoors with the windows closed as much as possible, suggests Reisman. "Certain mild, over-the-counter medications can help," adds the doctor, "and if the attacks are really bad, a doctor may prescribe allergy injections."

Dorsey Laboratories

Lifestyles

Medicine. A London department store is encouraging doctors to move in and set up shop, notes Medical World News. The company envisions professional "islands," where not only physicians but also lawyers, dentists, pharmacists and opticians could practice. So far, the idea hasn't caught on, but perhaps someday patients will be able to shop for their health-care needs.

Cars. Despite inflation and the gas shortage, America's love affair with the automobile is not quite over. According to a survey of the nation's car dealers conducted by McBain Research, Inc., the majority of Americans still personalize their cars with options. The most popular addition is air-conditioning, followed by automatic transmission, power steering, cruise control and stereo systems.

Budget. The nation's economy is making household budgets fashionable again. A recent nationwide bank survey stated that budget-keeping has become a way of life for 60 percent of Americans, reports Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Service.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

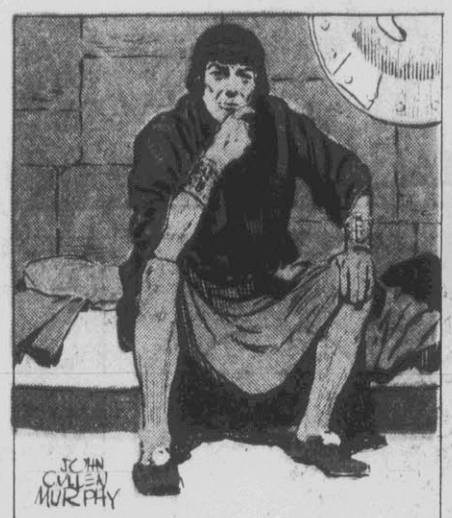
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: KING ARTHUR HAS BANISHED HIS HALF BROTHER, MORDRED, AND CAMELOT REJOICES. GALAN, THE YOUNG HERO, FINDS THE LIMELIGHT UNCOMFORTABLE.

WITH MORDRED'S CONFEDERATES, ARTHUR IS STERN. "LIKE MY BROTHER, YOU BETRAYED ME. UNLIKE HIM, YOU ONCE WERE LOYAL. I CAN FORGET NEITHER FACT. FOR A YEAR YOU WILL SAIL WITH OUR FISHING FLEETS TO PROTECT THEM FROM BRIGANDS. TO THOSE OF YOU WHO SURVIVE, I WILL THEN GIVE A QUEST. YOU MAY SUCCEED OR YOU MAY DIE, BUT I WILL CONSIDER YOUR HONOR REDEEMED."

PRINCE VALIANT AND ARN ARRIVE HOME SOME DAYS LATER, TANNED AND THINNER FROM THEIR ADVENTURES IN NORTH AFRICA. VAL HAS A LOVING WORD FOR EVERYONE, AND FOR ALETA SOMETHING MORE.

WHAT A RIDDLE IS MY HUSBAND, ALETA THINKS. AT TIMES HE IS STILL A BOY, A PUPPY ALWAYS STICKING HIS NOSE INTO BEEHIVES. AND AT TIMES HE IS... A MAN. ALETA SHIVERS WITH CONTENTMENT.



YET VALIANT IS STRANGELY DESPONDENT, FOR THE MEN WHO TOOK HIM CAPTIVE LONG MONTHS AGO ALSO TOOK A SACRED POSSESSION DEARER TO HIM THAN LIFE ITSELF.

KING ARTHUR SENDS FOR HIM ONE DAY. "WHEN THAT CUNNING HALF-BREED SALAM FULDA OVERRAN THE PIRATES WHO SOLD YOU INTO SLAVERY, HE FOUND A CERTAIN OBJECT WHICH HE OFFERED UP FOR RANSOM. I PAID IT. HERE, FRIEND, YOU HAVE SERVED ME WELL. AND SO HAS THE 'SINGING SWORD.'"
