Commissioners OK Old Hospital's Sale

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County commissioners this morning approved the sale of the old hospital building on Johnson Street for $63,500.

The high bid was submitted by Bill Clark of Greenville, last week. Several months ago, the board rejected a bid of $47,000 for the property, used in recent years for Department of Social Services offices.

Commissioners this morning also approved the lease of the Robert Lee Humber house at the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets to the Division of Archives and History for use as an Eastern Area office. The lease will be forwarded to the Greenville City Council for approval.

The board agreed to study bids received for equipment for a print shop before awarding contracts for the purchase of the equipment.

The bids for the equipment needed for the county to set up a shop to handle all the county's general printing needs ranged from a low of $17,189.90 to $18,142.25.

The board concurred in action recommended by County Attorney W. W. Speight to have General Electric remove a radio installed at Pitt Memorial Hospital several months ago and purchase a radio from Motorola to replace it.

The GE radio, according to Speight, does not meet specifications and has failed to operate properly.

Speight noted that the radio has not been paid for because of the problems experienced with the equipment. Repeated efforts to have General Electric make changes in the radio to correct the problems have failed, the attorney said.

Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon appeared before the board to advise commissioners of city plans for an advisory committee of local citizens to look at all services now being provided for Greenville residents.

McGlohon, who termed the project, "an educational type process," said the project will result in a "planning document for subsequent years."

Commissioners agreed with the mayor's request to allow committee members to contact county departments in areas where joint ventures are concerned.

Israel To Insist Talks To Resume

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli press reports said today that Prime Minister Menachem Begin will tell Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that a summit on the stalled Palestinian talks cannot replace the Camp David peace accords, and that Begin will insist Egypt immediately resume the negotiations.

Begin met with Israel's negotiating team today to put finishing touches on a reply to Sadat's letter, the second in which he blamed Israel for the failure of the 15-month-old talks to achieve significant progress toward establishing a self-governing authority in the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Sadat suspended the negotiations earlier this month to protest Israel's adoption of legislation affirming undivided Jerusalem as its eternal capital.

Sadat called for a three-way summit with President Carter on Friday, saying that the meeting should be held after November's presidential election. American officials have not said whether they would welcome such a meeting, but a State Department spokesman said the negotiations should resume as soon as possible.

Begin was expected to include in his letter a point-by-point rebuttal of Sadat's charges that Israel has not abided by the Camp David accords in its settlement activities in the occupied territories and its actions in the eastern sector of Jerusalem.

The Maariv newspaper reported that Begin also would ask for an explanation of Sadat's remark that "the tale of the people of Israel started in Egypt, and it appears that it is God's will that it end there."

American And Saudi Bride 'Safe' In U.S.

By JOE STROOP
Associated Press Writer
GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP)

— After four days of hiding in Spain and 20 hours of international flight, a young Saudi Arabian woman and her husband are safe with his family here.

"Thank God we made it," said Huda Kreiner, 21, when she and husband Tim arrived at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport here late Sunday.

Mrs. Kreiner told reporters she had gone into seclusion Wednesday near Barcelona after Saudi Arabian officials had made her fearful for her life because of her unapproved marriage to a foreigner.

She and Kreiner met in Texas and married June 29 in both a civil and a Moslem religious ceremony. They left soon afterward for Kreiner's job in Spain. Asked if she had tried to seek permission from her father in Saudi Arabia for the marriage, she said, "I tried — no reply."

Last week, Mrs. Kreiner said, she went to the Saudi Arabian embassy in Madrid to have her 90-day visa upgraded to permanent resident status. Embassy officials asked for her passport and marriage certificate, she said.

When she produced the civil marriage certificate, she said, the Saudis rejected it and demanded the Moslem document, asking if it had been stamped by the Saudi Arabian embassy in Washington, D.C.

"When I said no, they told me I had violated the law of the Ministry of Interior (of Saudi Arabia) because I married a foreigner without permission from them," Mrs. Kreiner said.

The Saudi Embassy in Washington could not be reached for comment Sunday night.

Kreiner said friends urged the couple to leave Madrid, telling them that Saudi Arabian law does not permit Saudi women to marry foreigners without government approval and, in the eyes of the Saudi government, Mrs. Kreiner was an adulteress.

The penalty for adultery in Saudi Arabia, they were told, is death.

Kreiner's mother, Bernice, said she contacted officials in Washington and related her story, but she did not know whether the U.S. government intervened in the case. Last week, U.S. officials said they were aware of the story but declined comment.

The U.S. has no extradition treaty with Saudi Arabia.

For four anxious days, the couple's friends and family in Texas waited to hear that Mrs. Kreiner was safe.

Employee Reduction At Du Pont

KINSTON — The Du Pont Company's Kinston plant confirmed today that, effective Sept. 8, a reduction of 83 of the plant's 3,000 employees will begin.

Joe LaMotte, a spokesman for the plant, explained today that the planned "work force reduction results from continuing need to adjust plant production to changing market conditions."

LaMotte pointed out that "earlier adjustments, projected to meet short term requirements, were handled by scheduling employees on alternating workweeks. At one time, more than 650 employees were working alternating schedules."

The spokesman noted that in July, some 170 employees returned to full time work status here and effective today, Aug. 18, 268 employees will be back to full time employment. LaMotte added that "the remaining 227 employees on alternate workweek schedules will return to full time duty on Sept. 8."

The Kinston plant produces "Dacron" polyester fiber in staple and filament form for apparel, carpeting, home furnishings, filled products, and industrial applications. According to LaMotte, reduced demand for these forms of "Dacron" utilized in the automotive and home furnishings markets has been the major reason for continued adjustments of production levels.

"Demand for a number of other products continues to be good, however," he reported.

LaMotte said that the work force reduction planned for September will involve employees with less than five years service.

Ghotbzadeh Demands End To British Arrests

By The Associated Press

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadeq Ghotbzadeh called in the top British diplomat in Tehran today and demanded an immediate solution to the problem of Iranian demonstrators imprisoned in London, saying the issue would affect relations between the two countries, the Iranian Foreign Ministry said.

The ministry disclosed no details of the meeting which came one day after Britain, apparently fearful of a takeover like the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, temporarily closed its embassy in the Iranian capital following demonstrations by thousands protesting the arrest of the Iranians in London.

The British Foreign Office said eight of its diplomats were being recalled, but a senior diplomat, Charge d'Affaires Arthur Wyatt, and three others would remain in Tehran to provide consular protection for the estimated 250 Britons still living in Iran.

A spokesman described the move as a "precautionary measure at a time of tension" and said the closure was temporary. He also said no more visas are being issued for Iranians to visit Britain.

Relations between Britain and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime worsened after British police arrested 68 Iranians at violent anti-American demonstration outside the U.S. Embassy in London on Aug. 4. The Iranians, 40 of whom remain in jail facing trial on weapons and assault charges, were protesting the arrest in Washington of the 191 Iranian demonstrators on July 27. Those arrested in Washington were subsequently released.

The Iranian Foreign Ministry said it had been told a London court would decide early this week whether or not to free to jailed Iranians.

The arrests in London spurred mass demonstrations outside the British Embassy in Tehran and a sit-in inside the building.

"We already have a permanent sit-in in support of the students in detention in London and we thought it more prudent with the combination of disgruntled customers and political demonstrators to keep the doors shut," said David Reddaway, the embassy second secretary, in a telephone interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

In addition, four British citizens are believed under arrest in Iran. Two days after the arrests in London, Anglican missionary Jean Waddell was seized in the city of Esfahan and accused of spying. Two Britons who ran a medical clinic in Yazd, Dr. John Coleman and his wife, are missing and believed held, and Times of London correspondent Tony Allaway was seized Thursday in Tehran for questioning about alleged espionage.

The U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized on Nov. 4 by Moslem militants angered by the U.S. government's decision to admit the deposed shah of Iran into the United States for cancer treatment. The Iranians continue to hold 52 Americans, who began their 289th day in captivity today.

Iran's Parliament, which is empowered to decide the fate of the Americans, met Sunday, but appeared no closer to opening its hostage debate.

The legislators voted to reject the credentials of a Jewish member, Eshaq Farahmandpur, who was accused of having connections with the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, cooperating with an international Jewish organization and opposing the execution earlier this year of Albert Danieli, a prominent Iranian Jew, Tehran Radio said.

Tehran Radio reported the execution today in the city of Khorramabad of three men convicted of robbery and murdering a revolutionary guardman.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Harold Brown denied a report by columnist Jack Anderson that the United States is planning an invasion of Iran.

But Brown, appearing Sunday on the ABC-News program "Issues and Answers," refused to say whether the United States might try another military attempt to rescue the hostages. A previous attempt last April was aborted after problems developed in three of the rescue helicopters. Eight Americans died in the effort when a helicopter collided with one of the transport planes at the landing strip in the Iranian desert.

Supreme Court Won't Expedite Anderson Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court refused today to expedite a case involving independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson's challenge to Ohio's early filing deadline for independent candidates.

That means it could be October before the high court takes up the case.

Anderson won a ruling last month in Columbus, Ohio from U.S. District Judge Robert M. Duncan, who said the state of Ohio could not keep Anderson off the ballot.

Ohio Secretary of State Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr. had sought to bar Anderson from the ballot because he missed the March 20 filing deadline for independents. Anderson, who didn't switch from running as a Republican to being an independent until after the March deadline had passed, challenged the constitutionality of the Ohio law.

Celebrezze appealed, seeking a clarification of Duncan's ruling, which he said left Ohio without a filing deadline for independents.

Celebrezze also asked for an expedited hearing since the Supreme Court is in summer recess and won't be back until October.

The high court denied the motion to expedite without prejudice to later renewal, according to Betsy Faxon, a spokesman for the court. She said that Justice John Paul Stevens and Lewis F. Powell dissented and would have granted the motion.

Anderson has filed petitions to appear on the general election ballot in 34 states and the District of Columbia. He has been certified for the ballot in 16 states of those states. In addition, the independent presidential candidate has won legal battles to overturn early filing deadline dates in five states, including Ohio, although some judicial rulings are being appealed.

Tax Proceeds Are Distributed

Some $784,799 in net distributable tax proceeds were received by Pitt County and ten towns in the quarter ending June 30, according to Mark Lynch, secretary of the N.C. Department of Revenue.

Lynch said that on a per capita distribution basis figured relative to population, Greenville received $202,304 of the total amount. Local population was listed in the report as 34,550.

Farmville, based on a population of 5,510, received $32,263 of the total distribution, Lynch reported, while Ayden, with a population of 4,220, received $24,709.

Other Pitt towns, their populations and receipts, included: Grifton (Pitt's share), 2,250, $13,174; Winterville, 2,410, $14,111; Bethel, 1,950, $11,418; Simpson, 530, $3,103; Fountain, 450, $2,634; Grimesland, 430, $2,517; and Falkland, 130, $761.

Total population for Pitt County was listed as 81,600 with the county itself receiving $477,800 of the total proceeds and the balance allotted to the ten towns in the county.

Greene County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $43,729 in net distributions with $41,051 going to the county itself and the balance allotted to Snow Hill, $2,078; Hookerton, $411; and Walstonburg, $188.

Lenoir County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $531,093 with $419,777 going to the county and the balance distributed to Kinston, $99,820; La Grange, $8,371; Pink Hill, $2,902; and Grifton (Lenoir's share), $219.

Martin County, based on an ad valorem levy, received $184,269 with $151,840 going to the county and the rest allotted to nine towns. Receiving shares were: Williamston, $25,210; Robersonville, $4,540; Jamesville, $976; Oak City, 610; Hamilton, $492; Everetts, $289; Parmele, $169; Bear Grass, $74; and Hassell, $64.

Beaufort County totals, figured on a per capita basis, included $345,683 in total distributions with $255,672 of the total allotted to the county itself. Seven towns shared in the balance, including: Washington, $59,554; Belhaven, $15,288; Aurora, $4,541; Chocowinity, $3,966; Washington Park, $3,582; Bath, $1,471; and Pantego, $1,407.

With more and more hogs being raised on concrete, producers have become increasingly aware of problems relating to soundness of feet and legs. One of the great needs of the swine industry is for more sound, durable breeding animals capable of withstanding the rigors of confinement, rearing and breeding.

Some breeders consider unsoundness as one of the results of confinement, but in truth, confinement only makes this trait more noticeable. A sound pig raised in a pasture or dry lot may be an unsound pig in confinement. The foot and leg problem is one that is bred into the animals. Producers who raise hogs on concrete should buy their breeding stock from breeders who also raise their hogs on concrete.

Many boars and gilts have been bred with legs that are too straight or "postlegged." The legs are straight and there is no "give" or cushioning effects in the joint. This places all the shock on the joints, causing abrasions, inflammation, swelling, and later an arthritic condition. Ideally, there should be some "forward set" or crook in the rear legs at the hock joint and a slight backward bend in the front leg at the knee. Front legs that are too straight at the knee tend to either buckle forward or inward as the animal gets heavier, causing a strain on the joint, eventual lameness, and enlarged joints. Too much crook or set in the rear legs causes a steep rump and puts the legs too far forward under the animal. This tends to cause a "goose-step" or paddling gait. It also creates a problem when a boar attempts to breed. His angle of attack is wrong and he has trouble coupling with the female.

The pastern is a critical portion of the leg in determining if the animal will be able to tolerate concrete. Short, straight pasterns provide no cushion. Experience has taught that a moderately long pastern with some slope or cushion will go a long way toward enabling a hog to walk on concrete.

Size of bone is very important. Large boned animals generally have big feet which are needed if the hog is to be on concrete. The larger the foot, the less weight it has to bear per square inch of pad area. Pads are less likely to become abraded and sore as a result. Both toes should be large and of equal size. Many breeding animals have a large outside toe and a small inside toe on each foot. This makes the outside toe bear all of the animal's weight. This puts a stress on the knee and hock joints causing them to buckle inward and creating a problem in walking and a handicap to the boar in mounting a sow.

Studies report that soundness has a medium inheritability and can be improved through selection if breeders decide to cull breeding stock with straight legs, uneven toe size, and other unsound traits.

Rural Fires Are Reported

During July the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 46 alarms and fought 41 fires.

The fires were classified as follows: eight houses; three house trailers; five buildings; four motor vehicles; 10 grass and woods; no commercial; four false alarms; seven "others"; and five mutual aids.

There was $229,500 involved in fires; $37,200 exposed; $71,470 lost and $195,230 saved by the rural fire departments, County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said.

The Station-House Fire Department had the most fires—12.

Parade Opens Legion Affair

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — With a parade that attracted 200,000 to the streets of Boston, the American Legion has convened its 62nd annual meeting, nearly as strong as ever thanks to an influx of Vietnam veterans.

About 20,000 Legionnaires and their families are in Boston this week for the convention, where they will hear from independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson on Tuesday, Republican contender Ronald Reagan on Wednesday and President Carter on Thursday.

The Legion, which has grown by 10,000 this year after a decline for the past four years, takes its political role seriously. It has refused to endorse a presidential candidate since its inception in 1919 as an organization for World War I veterans.

Membership reached a high of 3.3 million in 1946, then fell to a low of 2.5 million in 1964. Figures have wavered over the past decade, but 700,000 Vietnam-era veterans have pushed membership back to 2.6 million — the largest veterans' organization in this country.

"We have experienced an increase in members and feel it is because of a new concern about this country and the community," says National Commander Frank I. Hamilton, a 57-year-old Greensburg, Ind., attorney who served in the Army during World War II. "American Legion members are optimistic about the future, but they are upset about the way things have been."

The Legion, headquartered in Indianapolis, is divided into 58 "departments," including the 50 states, and several foreign countries. Membership is heavy in the Midwest and South. Pennsylvania has the most members with 249,054. Hawaii has the fewest with 2,190.

The Legion will consider 800 resolutions this convention, ranging from the protection of the snail darter to the danger of Castro's Cuba. The group is a strong advocate of increased military spending, favoring a new strategic bomber and deployment of the neutron weapon, two weapons systems scrapped by the Carter Administration.

The Legion has also taken up the banner of social issues in recent years, fighting for increased GI benefits and renovations and improvements at Veterans Administration hospitals.

Hamilton says the Legion's recent growth is largely due to social and economic conditions that have brought reluctant Vietnam vets into the fold.

"We've had our ups and downs," he shrugs. "When times are tough, like it was for the boys in the '30s, the American Legion was where people gathered to discuss their concerns."

Meanwhile, an estimated 200,000 people lined downtown sidewalks Sunday to watch the Legion's parade.

"It takes your mind off your problems," said Carolyn Scott, who drove an hour from Warwick, R.I., to join the spectators.

For about four hours, problems were drowned out by the bellowing bugles, pounding drums and flapping flags of 5,000 entrants.

Legionnaires from Panama wore wide-brimmed hats and those from Mexico played guitars. Three smiling girls posed on a red, white and blue float hauling a large, blue American Legion emblem. Actors on another float depicted the raising of the flag at Iwo Jima.

"It makes me feel happy," said Aida Palmieri of Medford, as she bounced from her seat to clap for a passing band. "I think people are encouraged to do more for country when they see all the people who have served in the wars."

Search For Titanic Is To Resume Next Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Rough seas and dwindling supplies have ended the mission of a group searching for the tragic ship Titanic, but the group's backer says he will probably bankroll another hunt next summer.

The 180-foot research ship H.W. Fay, equipped with advanced remote-sensing instruments, abandoned its search Sunday just two days after expedition leader Mike Harris reported finding an underwater object "the right length, right width and right height of the Titanic."

The object was discovered 12,000 feet down on the ocean floor by a sonar sled that had picked up five targets — three of them rocks — in an area 15 miles by 20 miles before picking up the outline the Fay crew sought.

However, winds gusting to more than 50 mph and waves more than 10 feet high prevented scientists from sending down TV and still-photography cameras to take a closer look at the object.

"We were unable to get the cameras down," Harris told The Associated Press by ship-to-shore telephone Sunday.

He said the decision to end the mission came about 2:45 a.m. Sunday, New York time. The boat had reported Saturday that it was running low on food and fuel.

It is expected to return to Boston by Thursday or Friday, 10 days behind schedule.

The area it was exploring, about 380 miles off the coast of Newfoundland, is generally agreed to be the site where the luxury liner went down. Its exact location has never been pinpointed.

The 882½-foot Titanic, billed as "unsinkable" and the largest ship of its day, struck an iceberg on its maiden voyage from England on April 15, 1912. The boat sank in 2½ hours, carrying more than 1,500 of its 2,200 passengers — many of them prominent socialites — to watery graves.

Jack Grimm, the Texas oilman who financed the search, said Sunday he would probably send another mission out next summer with a seven-man Aluminant submarine.

Grimm, who spent more than $1 million on the expedition and has financed past searches for the Loch Ness monster and Noah's ark, said he expects to make a profit from book and movie rights. A writer and several filmmakers were aboard the Fay, he said.

"If we find it, it's the Titanic; if we don't it's the legend of the Titanic," he said.

Aboard the home-bound Fay, which left Fort Everglades, Fla., on July 17,

Harris, a documentary filmmaker, sounded optimistic.

"We hope to try it again next summer. We think it's there and we want to make sure," Harris said.

Expecting More Black Students

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Enrollment of blacks at most of the University of North Carolina's traditionally white campuses is expected to increase this year, administrators said during the weekend.

Exact figures will not be available until after orientation programs are completed in the next couple of weeks, but initial indications point to an increase of 1 percent to nearly 3 percent in black freshmen at UNC-Chapel Hill and North Carolina State.

UNC-Chapel Hill has estimated that 13.3 percent of its 3,200-member freshman class will be black, compared to 11.8 percent last year.

Most other campuses in the UNC system are expected to have about the same number of blacks this year as in 1979. Only UNC-Charlotte projected a decline.

Stolen Money Came In Mail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A San Francisco man has received a mailed package containing $20,000 of the $1.85 million taken from a Brink's armored truck, according to the FBI.

The agency refused Sunday to say who received the money, which came in $50 and $100 bills, but said it had been intended as repayment in a "legitimate business deal."

The agency has charged a Brink's guard, George Bosque, 25, with making off with the money Friday at San Francisco International Airport. Agents combed the city's gay community over the weekend because, they said, Bosque was known to associate with homosexuals.

Dialysis Units Are Approved

The Certificate of Need Section of the Division of Facility Services, N.C. Department of Human Resources has approved six additional dialysis stations for the Greenville Dialysis Center.

In approving the additional dialysis stations, the agency determined that the project is needed, financially feasible, will be adequately staffed, and promotes cost containment.

K and F Leasing Co. will purchase and install the units, while the Greenville Dialysis Center will lease and operate the six new dialysis stations.

Couple Speaks Vows Sunday

ERWIN — The wedding ceremony of Lynn Byrd Fowler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt B. Fowler of Erwin, and Melvin Eugene Hathaway Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Eugene Hathaway Sr. of Greenville, took place Sunday at 3 p.m.

The Rev. Neil Smith performed the double ring ceremony in the Erwin United Methodist Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Alice Beasley of Smithfield was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Miss Kayron Carowan of Pantego, Miss Carla Gunter of Greensboro, Miss Trudi Pegram of Raleigh and Mrs. Ann Stanley of Dunn. Junior bridesmaid was Carol Wade of Erwin, cousin of the bride. Honorary bridesmaid was Mrs. Pam Brown of Bennett.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included James Hathaway of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Chuck Brown of Bennett, cousin of the bride, Ken Brown, cousin of the bride, and Jimmy Tyson, both of Greenville, and Craig McLawhon of Bethel.

Mrs. Elaine Tilghman was organist and Davis Hodges, cousin of the bride, was vocalist. Mrs. Rebecca Wade, aunt of the bride, directed the wedding and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Byrd of Erwin, aunt and uncle of the bride, presided at the registrar. Good-byes were said Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brown of Greenville, aunt and uncle of the bride.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza and re-embroidered alencon lace accented with seed pearls. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline defined with alencon lace, sheer bishop sleeves with pean d'ange ruffles at the wrist. The semifitted skirt had a flounce of peau d'ange lace at the hemline extending into a chapel train. Her re-embroidered alencon lace hat, turned up on one side, was accented with white silk flowers. The illusion flowed chapel length. The bride carried a colonial nosegay of yellow roses, yellow and white pom poms, gypsophilla, daisies and miniature carnations tied with yellow and white streamers.

The honor attendant wore a gown of maize qiana designed with spaghetti straps bodice and matching jacket. An A-line skirt had a tulip overlay. She wore a matching hat with ribbon streamers and carried long-stemmed yellow roses, baby's breath, eucalyptus entwined with yellow and white ribbon. The bridesmaids were dressed like the honor attendant. The honorary bridesmaid wore a sleeveless pale green gown of knit polyester.

The bride's mother wore a gown of pale pink qiana with a crystal pleated crossed bodice. The mother of the bridegroom selected a toast and champagne magic knit gown fashioned with a V-neckline. trip to Virginia and the Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania.

The bridegroom attended ECU and Pitt Community College. He is a computer operator at Burroughs Wellcome. The bride works at Pamlico Animal Hospital, Washington.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. Kathryn Brown of Greenville. Assisting hostesses were aunts of the bride, Mrs. Rebecca Wade and Mrs. Jane Fowler.

Miss Trotter, Mr. Rice Marry

THOMASVILLE — Miss Pamela Joyce Trotter and George Franklin Rice Jr. were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the First Baptist Church here. Mr. and Mrs. J. Beauford Trotter of Thomasville are the bride's parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Rice of Wilson.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. George Williamson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal white gown of chantilly lace. The bodice featured a V-neckline with a scalloped ruffle that fell across the shoulders to form a cape effect. The full bell hoop skirt was fashioned with three tiers of lace extending into a chapel train. Silk roses accented the bustline and train. The bride wore a mantilla of silk illusion edged in chantilly lace and held in place with three silk roses. She carried a lace fan with a spray of daisies, snowdrift and baby's breath.

Mrs. Sherry Litwin of Thomasville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a floor length gown of yellow georgette. The sleeveless bodice featured a jewel neck with a matching capelet. She wore silk daisies and baby's breath in her hair and carried a clutch bouquet of yellow daisies showered with yellow ribbon streamers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Marie Trotter, sister-in-law of the bride, Miss Rita Kindley and Miss Lisa Crews, all of Thomasville, Miss Karen Shealey of Wilson, Miss Marty East of Greenville and Miss Sandy Lewis of Fayetteville. They were dressed like the honor attendant with flowers in their hair and carried clutch bouquets of yellow daisies showered with white streamers.

The flower girl was Dawn Trotter, niece of the bride. She wore a long dress of white lace with a yellow sash and carried a white basket of daisy petals.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included J. B. Trotter Jr., brother of the bride, and Brent Litwin, brother-in-law of the bride, both of Thomasville, James Kimzey Jr. of Raleigh and Greg Stokes, Billy Etheridge and Jimmy Banks of Wilson. Jay Trotter, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and carried a needlepoint ring pillow made by the bride's mother.

Wedding music was provided by organist Robert Porter Jr. and Mrs. Suzanne Davis, vocalist.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Introducing guests to the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Dinkens.

Presiding at the bride's table was Miss Brenda Martin. The bride's aunts, Mrs. Betty Woods, Mrs. Doris Wright, Mrs. Nancy Woods, Mrs. Wanda Evans and Mrs. Judy McDaniel assisted in serving. Assisting were Mrs. Arlene Stokes and Mrs. John C. Shealey. Rice maids were Andrea Tyson and Vonda Wright.

An open house was held after the reception at the home of the bride's parents for relatives and close friends of the families.

The couple will live in Wilson after a wedding trip to San Antonio and Dallas, Tex.

The bride and bridegroom both attended East Carolina University. He is employed by Campbell Electrical Contractors, Wilson.

On Sunday morning, the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rice, entertained the wedding party and guests with a breakfast at the Holiday Inn, Lexington.

MRS. GEORGE FRANKLIN RICE JR.

The bridal couple was honored Saturday night at a rehearsal dinner at the Thomasville Woman's Club given by the bridegroom's parents.

Sherry Litwin, Marie Trotter and Rita Kindley were hostesses for a bridesmaids luncheon held Saturday morning at the Thomasville Woman's Club.

J. B. Trotter Jr. and Brent Litwin entertained the bridegroom at a bachelor party Friday evening.

Dear Abby

Give Freeloaders Shopping List

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Well, it's pain-in-the-neck time for all of us city folks who are lucky enough to have a nice little place at the beach for the summer. We love company — but only those we invite. Here's a never-fail formula for discouraging freeloaders who drop in for the weekend uninvited:

Toward the end of the week, let your groceries run low, and when the freeloaders arrive, greet them warmly but apologetically with, "We're sorry, we weren't prepared for guests, but if you don't mind driving to town to pick up a few things, you're welcome to stay!" Then hand them a shopping list.

Don't stop at groceries. Include beer, liquor, cigarettes and soft drinks, too. If the freeloaders actually get the list filled, when they return with the stuff, don't offer to reimburse them. After all, it's your cottage, fuel, beach, boat, towels, etc., and you didn't invite them.

And don't wait on anybody. If they act like guests, tell them that everyone pitches in with the cooking and cleaning.

When the freeloaders leave, I'll bet they don't come back again — unless they're invited!

SUCKERS NO MORE

DEAR SUCKERS: With that brand of hospitality, I'm betting against a return engagement. In fact, most freeloaders would probably head for the highway out of town as soon as they saw the shopping list.

"Fight chutzpah with chutzpah," I say.

Optical Topics opticians association of america

by Beecher Kirkley

Some experts feel that seventy percent of us occasionally have problems which stem directly from some visual difficulty. While caught up with obvious symptoms of fatigue, irritability, tension and tiredness, it is difficult to pinpoint causes. The eye struggles to cope with modern demands and environments for which it is not biologically prepared. Insufficient depth perception, sluggish focusing and erratic eye tracking (tracking) are but a few hidden problems. These may bring on a variety of physical and psychological illnesses. An awareness of these problems may help be part of the solution of how to eradicate them.

If you are experiencing such difficulties, an immediate eye exam is in order. If upon examination corrective lenses are prescribed, the next step is CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 5th, Physicians Quadrangle, Building A. Within the confines of our comfortable facility you will be greeted by professionals experienced in helping you select the stylish frames that will make you look good while at the same time meeting your prescription needs. At CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS you will always look and see better.

OPTICAL TIP: When "something is in your eye", do not rub it. Raise upper eyelid, rotate eyeball and blink.

This Is A Year To Listen

The circus is over now. Both major United States' political parties have had their conventions, chosen their candidates, had their say in hundreds of thousands of words and the delegates are now back home.

The field is left basically to Jimmy Carter, president and Democratic nominee, and Ronald Reagan, Republican challenger, who currently enjoys a comfortable lead in the polls.

Reagan kept a reasonably low profile as the Democrats argued in New York and eventually put on some semblance of unity to get the campaign attack underway, but we can expect both Reagan and Carter to come out swinging in short order.

And this is a year that the voters should listen.

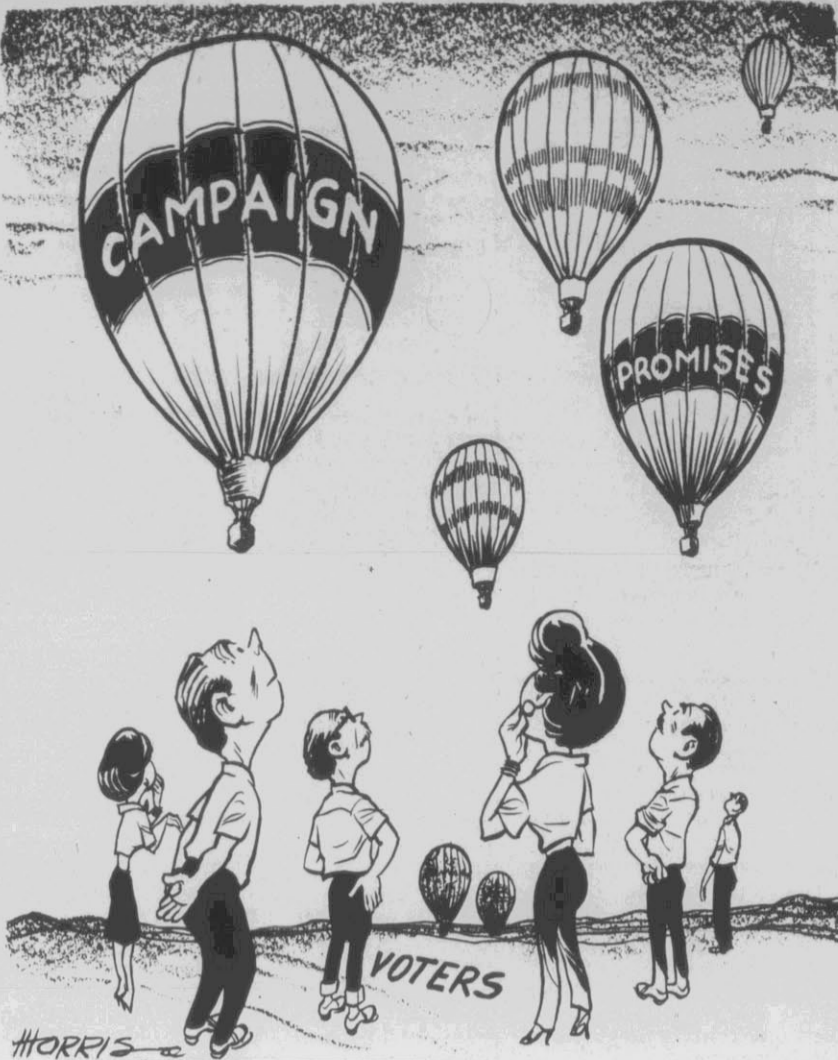

For many years it has been fashionable to decry the contention that there was no philosophical difference between the presidential candidates. George Wallace said it in proclaiming that "there's not a dime's worth of difference between them."

This year there is. There are clear philosophical differences between the candidacies of Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan. Some Republicans complain that Reagan might not be as conservative as he appears, and liberal Democrats say Carter has grown more conservative than is the Kennedy wing of the party. Whether these assumptions are true or not, Reagan is beholden to the conservatives of the GOP and Carter has to answer to the liberal wing of his party. Thus the choice is clear as the November general election approaches.

There is nothing here that should straitjacket the two candidates in the decisions they might be called on to make as president. We can get a better idea of that by listening to what they have to say as they campaign.

This is going to be an important election in determining what course our nation is to take for the rest of this century. We, as voters, owe it to ourselves to be informed and we can best do that by paying attention to what the candidates say.

THE GREAT HOT-AIR BALLOON RACE IS ON!

Morgan Cool On Platform

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan went home from the Democratic National Convention hoping his party's thick new platform hadn't been noticed much while he was gone.

As he said on the floor amid the convention's final night hoopla, the average North Carolina voter probably doesn't know or care what was in the 125-page book written by the party as its statement of principles last week.

"How do you go down to Warsaw or Harnett County and discuss the party platform? You can try, but you can't. It won't work," he said, seeming to grow more certain on the convention's closing that the issues debate that occupied three of the four days here had not been significant.

"The Democratic platform has generally gone one way and the mass of rank and file Democrats another way," he added. "The truth is the mass of rank and file Democrats in this country today pay very little attention to the party platform ... and so do the Republicans."

The fact remains, however, that the 1980 Democratic party platform, with its strong language on the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion rights and massive new federal spending, is far more liberal than North Carolina normally votes.

It is more liberal also than many active in the state party or than the party's candidates for major offices.

North Carolina Democrats have seen their conventions go farther to the left than they cared to many times in recent years, of course.

But the difference this year is that the convention did so in part as an affront to its own president and nominee — a fellow Southerner whose popularity is at an all-time low and to whom many Tar Heel politicians have closely linked their own campaigns over the past four years.

That concern, of being tainted not only by President Carter's low standing with voters but also with a great many potentially unpopular platform statements back home, made Gov. Jim Hunt anxious to keep his visibility limited in New York.

For Morgan, the political danger is obvious. He is a generally low-profile, freshman senator who faces a re-election challenge from a vocal, far-right Republican opponent, John East.

Sensing that, Morgan did his best to allay talk among North Carolina delegates and reporters that the platform will be remembered when voters make up their minds this fall.

"This convention is not a matter of principle and philosophy, but a matter of organization," he said in an interview. "I really don't think party platforms are that meaningful."

Maybe so. But consider elements added to the platform that conservative GOP candidates such as East may be anxious to exploit in North Carolina this fall:

— An abortion plank that opposes restriction of government-funded abortions for poor women, the very policy of banning federally paid abortions Carter had backed.

— Not only supporting ERA, which many North Carolinians do, but opposing the use of any party money for other assistance to back candidates who don't support the amendment. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has helped defeat ERA in every legislative session since 1973, and Morgan opposed the time limit extension on its ratification last year.

— A $12 billion federal program to create new jobs, adopted although the president opposed it as inflationary.

— A plank saying that creating new jobs is more important than controlling inflation, a policy Hunt took the podium to oppose and which many middle-class voters may also question.

Morgan, who appeared on public television's McNeil-Lehrer Report, said he was "astounded at the conservatism" of delegates the Assassination Investigation

An order was issued last week to exhume the body of Lee Harvey Oswald for an autopsy, based on the premise that the body in the grave was that of a Russian agent.

The order was immediately stayed by a judge, acting on a suit filed by Robert Oswald, Lee Harvey's brother. A hearing will be held on the matter.

The assassination of President Kennedy was one of the great tragedies of our time, but from beginning to end the handling of the case has been incredible.

The Warren Commission study was carefully done and should have settled the matter. To this day, however, it still goes on with this latest exhumation order the most current development.

BY ART BUCHWALD Faith Healer In Action

NEW YORK — I was about to enter Madison Square Garden when a policeman held me back and said, "Let the ambulance through — let the ambulance through."

"What happened?" I asked a man in a white coat carrying a black bag.

"We got a call to come over and bind the wounds of the Democratic Party."

"Are they bad?"
"I don't know. We were told to bring all the bandages we had. There's a lot of bleeding of Kennedy delegates, and we have to close up the cuts before any of them catch Anderson fever."

I followed him into the Garden. "Help me with the stretcher," he said. "Ever since the city cut back on its budget I have to do everything myself."

We went into the hall. "What's the first thing you're going to do?" I asked.

"Look for shock. Every time the Democrats have a convention, the delegates whose man has lost go into shock."

We found several Kennedy delegates sitting in their seats staring at the floor, not paying any attention to what was going on at the podium.

"There they are," the man said as he opened up his black bag. "Here, pass these out to get well."

"A lot of Pennsylvania delegates look sick," I said.

"I know, we have to give them anti-Reagan vaccine."

"What's that?"
"It's a new patented Democratic medicine which says on the bottle 'No matter how bad you feel about supporting Carter you'll feel worse if you get Reagan.' Here's a bottle and a tablespoon. Go over and start administering it to the Pennsylvania delegates. If they complain it isn't working, tell them it takes about a month to be effective."

I followed his instructions. Many delegates thinking it was liquor drank straight from the bottle.

I found the man with the black bag on the podium ex-

Offset Inflation

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — While inflation, recession and unemployment work their woe upon most of us, those who have money, and know how to use it wisely, are benefiting substantially from present economic conditions.

Witness a couple of conditions which have just come to light:

North Carolina state banks are thriving, with total resources now well above the $7 billion mark; more than double the $2.8 billion total just 10 years ago.

The North Carolina Department of State Treasurer has put into practice new ideas and innovative efforts to get more return from tax dollars invested which have boosted dividend and interest income for the state by more than $3.5 million.

Indeed, State Treasurer Harlan Boyles reports that the figures prove that "innovative and imaginative thinking can produce dollars and that even with the rising cost of doing business, we can pay our own way and thus relieve taxpayers of a significant burden."

Offset
The operating budget for the entire Department of the Treasury for the past fiscal year was just over $5 million; with about $1.8 million of that coming from funds appropriated by the General Assembly from the state's general fund. The remainder came from various dividend and interest investments of money in hand but not yet needed to pay bills of the various state government activities.

Given the volatile economic situation, the investment experts have been using some highly complicated maneuvers such as lending back to the dealers securities which the state owns for short periods of time, for a fee. Or, selling option for securities currently owned to be actually sold at a later date. Or, making even daily interest-bearing deposits of cash rather than waiting until tomorrow.

In all, the department generated new income of more than $3.5 million during last fiscal year, a condition which Treasurer Boyles attributes to "enthusiasm for aggressive management." That amount is more than enough to allow the department to completely fund itself from investment activities without additional tax dollars.

A clear example of just how much government money means to private enterprise banks in North Carolina is available in the recent report compiled by James S. Currie, commissioner of banks.

Of the total bank holdings of $7.2 billion; nearly $2 billion is local, state, or federal government money. Currie reports that at the end of the last fiscal year, total

To the editor:

Drunk driving is the number one killer of men and women in their teens and twenties. It takes the lives of more young people than war, drugs or disease. Nearly 8,000 die in alcohol-related automobile accidents every year. Another 40,000 are crippled or disfigured for life. And unless you do all you can as a concerned parent, you run the risk of having one of your own children numbered among the casualties.

Before you dismiss the possibility that your son or daughter could be involved in a drunk driving accident, consider the results of a recent survey of 15- to 19-year-old high school students. Fifty percent of them said they had been in one or more situations during the past months where alcohol was present.

Young people are flexing their wings. Many are rebelling against restrictions and authority and flaunting a new found sense of their own power and freedom. It's not what mom and dad say or their rules. In other words, they are growing up. And if you want to help steer them through this often-confusing period of the lives, you must keep the lines of communication open.

Talk with your youngsters about your own personal values and preferences and express your feelings about drinking and driving. We can't make much headway in changing the way people act until we change the way they think and until we help our society develop more responsible social standards governing the use of alcohol, particularly where driving is involved. That's why it's so important to take a stand whenever you come in contact with the issues relating to the abuse of alcohol.

Strength For Today

HUMAN WISDOM
An outstanding student of world affairs said recently that if one-half of the cost of maintaining the American military establishment for one day were spent wisely for non-military purposes, social educational, and health conditions could be distinctly improved throughout the world. And if the military expenditures of all the nations were put to these uses, we could transform human life on this planet in a way that is scarcely imaginable today.

This observation is in effect as damaging a reflection on human intelligence as it is possible to make. When we look back over the effects of war in the past, and count the cost, it is almost impossible to believe that preparation for more war is one of the major objectives of all nations today.

Man is called homosapiens. We may doubt it. We may conquer major diseases and put men on the moon, but we still go on wallowing in our own ignorance.

"Jellybeans."

"You give out jellybeans for shock?" I said.

"Ever since they cut the budget that's all we can afford."

I passed out jellybeans to the Kennedy delegates. They accepted them listlessly.

When I ran out of them I found the hospital man putting a tourniquet on Gov. Hugh Carey of New York.

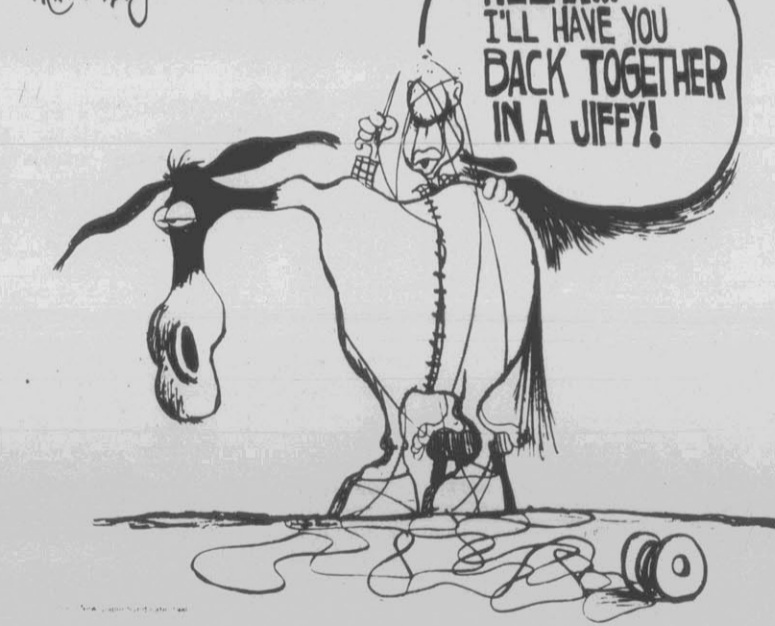

"Is he hurt bad?" I asked.

"He'll live. I have to sew up this open conviction in his head. I think if he can get a money transfusion from Washington he'll be all right."

"Do you think Carter will give him one after he tried to run the President down?"

Nation's Banks Are Changing

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The American bank account is changing fast. It costs more. It can do more. And it is getting more complicated every day.

You can look forward to the spread of interest-bearing checking and of automation. To telephone bill-paying and debit cards.

"Higher prices. It's the only sure thing," said William D. Plechaty, senior vice president for personal banking services at Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. in Chicago, when asked what was ahead for the depositor.

The changes are due partly to legislation passed in March. Restrictions on interest rates and on the kinds of services that can be offered by financial institutions are being phased out.

The changes also are linked to inflation — to rising costs in the banking industry, including the cost of money. "To the extent that the costs of delivering the services...are going up, it's going to be reflected in pricing...Customers will receive credit for what they have on deposit and they will pay for transactions," Plechaty said. "Somebody who wants to write a lot of checks, will have to pay for each one of those checks...There are going to be some winners and there are going to be some losers."

The winners, according to financial experts, are going to be people with hefty bank accounts. "The people that have money can make more money," said Bob Walters of Sheshunoff & Co. Inc., an Austin, Texas, firm that advises banks on pricing and services.

The losers are going to be the people who keep only a small amount in the bank, but who, in the past, have had free checking accounts. "I would say that free checking in the context of how it has been viewed in the past is probably dead," said Plechaty, adding that there is no way a bank can offer even minimal services, without charge, to a customer who keeps a balance of, say, $200. "It just doesn't pay for itself," he said.

Walters estimated that only 5 percent or 10 percent of banks offer free checking today, compared to as many as 50 percent in 1977. He said most banks require a customer to keep a minimum checking balance of several hundred dollars or pay a monthly service fee — usually $3 to $5 — and possibly a per-check charge of 10 to 20 cents as well.

Banks, savings and loan associations and thrift institutions traditionally make money on what is known as "the spread" — the difference between what they have to pay for money deposited in accounts and the interest they can charge on loans.

High interest rates on savings certificates have cut the spread. The removal of ceilings on passbook savings — due in six years under the legislation passed in March — will narrow the margin again.

Checking accounts — and there are more than 275 million of them — have been the banks' last source of "free" money, on which they do not have to pay interest.

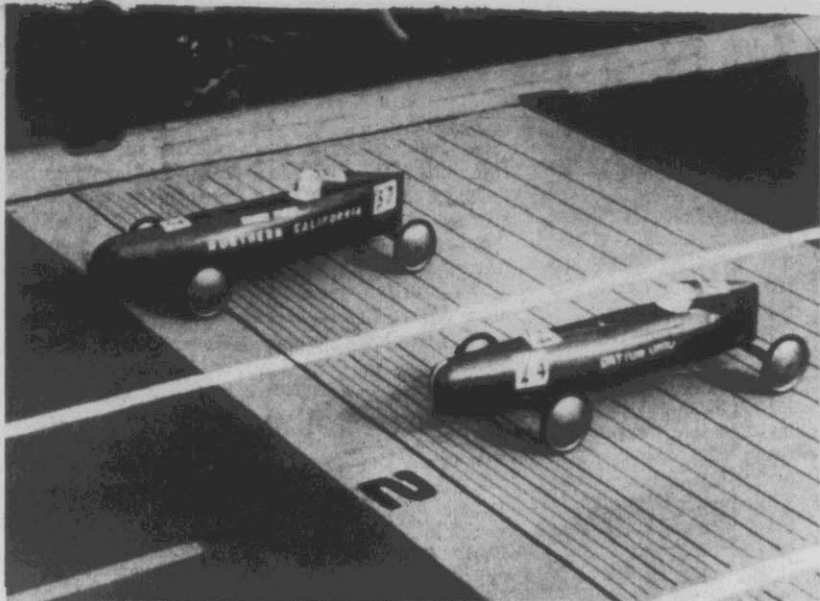

But that too is changing.

NOW (negotiated order of withdrawal) accounts, which are, in effect, interest-bearing checking accounts, were introduced in New England eight years ago and spread to New York and New Jersey. As of May, there were just over 2.5 million NOW accounts in the six New England states. Thanks to the spring legislation, they will be legal on a nationwide basis starting Jan. 2, 1981.

Credit unions started offering share drafts — also interest-bearing checking accounts — in 1974, and Jim Williams, president of the Credit Union National Association, Inc., estimates there will be 2.3 million share-draft accounts by the end of the year. Automatic transfer accounts let customers shift money from interest-bearing savings accounts, automatically, as they write checks.

"Banks can't make money like they used to — taking in low-cost deposits and converting these into long-term, higher-rate yields," said Herb Wegner, head of a resources were up by 5.7 percent from the previous fiscal year's $6.8 billion.

Two revealing situations are seen in the annual report which illustrate the current unrest on the economic scene:

Saving
Demand deposits such as checking accounts were up only slightly over the previous year; but time and savings deposits had soared nearly 10 percent as investors took advantage of high-yield securities and interest rates.

And, loans were in a nosedive as clients resisted borrowing at high rates and the banks themselves felt the impact of extraordinarily high prime interest rates imposed by the federal government in efforts to cool the economy. Net loans were just over $4 billion; down by nearly $10 million from the previous year; and own better than $27 million from last March when the prime started to soar.

Still, the measure of where the money is in North Carolina can be seen in new bank buildings in almost every Tar Heel town, the state's 56 banks and 893 branches own bank premises, furniture, fixtures, and other real estate totalling nearly $200 million.

aming Teddy Kennedy. "Do you believe he'll ever be able to work for Jimmy Carter again?" I asked. "It's hard to say. He keeps claiming he wants to go to work for Carter as soon as possible, but his back hurts." "He looked pretty healthy when he was campaigning for President."

"He said his back went out on him after the rules vote, when he tried to lift his spirits. Well, there's nothing more I can do," the man said as he put everything back in his black bag. "Thanks for helping me."

"One more question," I said. "Since you've bound up all the wounds at the convention, do you think the party will be healthy enough to win the November election?"

"How should I know? I'm not a doctor."

"What are you?" I asked. "A faith healer. Why do you think I was called?"

NOW Sponsors Walk-A-Thon

The Greenville Chapter of the National Organization for Women will sponsor a Walk-A-Thon Saturday.

The walk will begin at Green Springs Park at 8 a. m. and cover nine miles, taking approximately three hours to complete. Men, women and children are invited to participate.

The event is part of a nationwide commemoration of Women's Equality Day Aug. 26, the 60th anniversary of ratification of the 19th Amendment, which granted women the right to vote. This date has been declared Women's Equality Day by every president since 1974. This is the fourth year that Greenville NOW has held a walk-a-thon in conjunction with the commemoration.

For more information, contact Lil Simmons, Greenville NOW president, at 752-4440 after 5:30 p. m.

Diggs Took Unused Sum

DETROIT (AP) — Former Michigan Rep. Charles Diggs Jr. closed out his re-election campaign fund eight days after resigning from Congress and gave the $4,410 to himself and his legal defense fund, according to published reports.

Diggs took the action June 11, according to Federal Election Commission records. About $3,000 of the $4,410 went to the Diggs Legal Defense fund while the remainder went to Diggs himself, the Detroit Free Press reported Sunday.

The former congressman resigned from Congress June 3, and is serving a three-year sentence at a federal prison camp for conviction on a payroll kickback scheme. A federal law making it illegal for a senator or representative to use campaign funds for personal ends took effect Jan. 8. However, the law does not apply to members of Congress in office at the time it was enacted, and Diggs' actions did not violate federal law or House rules, the newspaper reported.

SUNDAY WRECK
A car driven by Dwight Daniel Riggs of Route 2, New Bern, collided with a utility pole and sign on Memorial Drive, near the lone Street intersection about 2:40 a.m. Sunday, according to Greenville Police. Officers estimated damage from the mishap at $1,500 to the Riggs car and $50 damage to the pole and sign.

Washington, D.C., consulting firm. "The banks have to go to a transaction charge."

Wegner and Walters said that some banks are trying to get rid of customers who maintain very small balances, often as low as $10 or $15. "There are a lot of banks that have decided to do that," said Walters, adding that the institutions would rather provide better services to fewer, more profitable customers.

Regulators are still considering what rate of interest to allow on NOW accounts, but most industry spokesmen said they expected it to be in the range of 5 percent. Passbook accounts and time-deposit certificates will continue to carry higher interest rates.

No one is willing to predict exactly what interest-bearing checks will cost. Prices for existing NOW accounts vary. Ken Reich of the U.S. League of Savings Associations said that as of the middle of last year, 56 percent of the savings and loans offering NOW accounts had no service charge or minimum balance requirement. As the accounts spread, he said, "There will be more variations in pricing policy."

Curt Prins, staff director of the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee of the House Banking Committee, said holders of most New York City NOW accounts must keep big minimum balances — over $2,000 in some cases — in order to avoid stiff service fees. "The average person is not going to be able to afford a NOW account," said Prins. The fees that will be imposed on a NOW account with only a few hundred dollars, will more than offset the interest, he said.

Walters said the monthly cost to the bank on the average checking account today is $5.50. Banks will price NOW accounts high enough so they can recover that cost, plus pay interest and make a profit, he said. "Banks are going to say, 'Look. I don't mind paying interest to somebody who's keeping a lot of money in my bank. Why don't we divide our checking accounts into the people who have money and the people who don't?'"

Financial institutions, meanwhile, are trying to cut paperwork costs and attract business with new services.

There already are almost 15,000 automatic teller machines where you can withdraw or deposit money or check your balance. More than 200 financial institutions let customers pay bills by telephone. Some 150 banks, savings and loans, etc., offer debit cards that can be used for retail purchases. Wegner estimates that a direct debit transaction costs the bank a dime; the total costs of processing a paper check are over 50 cents.

Some banks are experimenting with storing cancelled checks electronically instead of returning them to customers. Holders of share draft accounts do not get cancelled drafts back, and some bankers say that the introduction of NOW accounts is the perfect chance to expand so-called "non-return" or "truncation" programs.

"It's a way to contain increasing costs," said Robert V. Sabek, executive vice president of the Valley National Bank of Arizona. Non-return won't mean lower prices, but it will mean "we won't have to increase fees as rapidly," he said. "Further, we view truncation as an excellent way of conditioning the market to the paperless financial transactions of tomorrow."

Cars Collide

Here Saturday

Cars driven by Connie Ellen Greeno of Courtney Square and Hugh Wilbert Walston of Grifton, collided about 6:15 a.m. Saturday on East Wright Road, 30 feet east of the Ragsdale Road intersection, causing $5,000 damage to the Greeno car and $50 damage to the Walston car, police reported.

Investigators, who said Ms. Greeno was backing from a driveway at the time of the collision, charged Ms. Greeno with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety and charged Walston with driving left of center.

Deaf Parents Successfully Raising Five Children

By BETH HUTCHINSON
Goldsboro News-Argus
GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)

Hiram and Billie Grantham have raised what a neighbor calls "five of the most remarkable children I've seen," and they have done it without lecturing — at least in the conventional sense.

Both parents are deaf, the father from birth and the mother from infancy. Grantham can hear to some extent and does speak, but Mrs. Grantham communicates almost entirely in sign language.

In fact, sign language is the primary mode of conversation at the Granthams, who have four daughters and a son ranging in age from 10 to 20.

"I guess I learned to sign about as quickly as I learned to talk," said Julia, who is 20.

Sandra, 18, recalls that when the children were small and wanted something, "We'd just drag mother over and point it out."

A recent graduate of Charles B. Aycock High School, Sandra has been accepted into the East Carolina University nursing program and is the recipient of a Basic Education Opportunity grant and a North Carolina Student Incentive Grant.

Her brother, Ken, 16, is a baseball and football player at Aycock and was named all-conference in football. Brenda, 14, is an "A" student and a member of the Beta Club at Norwayne Junior High. Debbie, 10, who will be a fifth grader at Belfast, is in the gifted and talented class.

Sandra, Ken and Brenda are working in tobacco this summer and Julia and Ken have each bought a car. "I think working for something makes you appreciate it more," Julia said.

Julia, a delicatessen employee at a supermarket, has been encouraged to enter a college nursing program but she says going to school now "would cut someone else out."

Their neighbor, Catherine Hooks, says Julia's attitude and that of her brother and sisters is more mature than that of most young people.

Though the family is very close, Julia credits the children's Christian upbringing for much of their thinking, and said they are not easily influenced by outside pressures.

All are members of Stoney Creek Free Will Baptist Church.

Julia adds that the five

"fuss, fight and carry on" like any siblings and "momma can't hear us," but she said they have never taken advantage of their parents' deafness.

"We could sneak out of the house at night, and they would never know the difference," she said.

Her parents' handicap can be a positive factor, such as when they are discussing what to buy for Christmas.

"We know momma can't hear and we can talk just low enough so daddy can't hear either," Julia said.

Using sign language, Mrs. Grantham said she is uncertain why her children have turned out as successfully as they have, but she characterized herself as strict.

"She's a normal mother," said Sandra. "She fusses at us and puts restrictions on us when she needs to."

Mrs. Grantham also babysits for neighbors' children.

Grantham, a civil service employee at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base until recently, is temporarily out of work. He is using the enforced leisure for gardening, painting and carpentry.

Grantham, who interpreted for the deaf that he encountered on the Air Force base, said he has never found his deafness to be a particular handicap in supporting the family.

"I wasn't pampered or raised in a special way," he said. "I always worked, so it just came naturally."

Grantham is from Wayne County and attended the North Carolina School for the Deaf at Morganton as well as public schools. Mrs. Grantham grew up in Marion, S.C., and attended Cedar Springs School for the Deaf in Spartanburg.

They met while she was hospitalized and he visited her room with friends. They will have been married 22 years in October.

Wyatt said the requests were submitted by the Unification Church for permission to conduct a door-to-door and merchant solicitation Aug. 16-30 in order to help support church missionary, and by the Greenville NOW for permission to conduct a walk-a-thon on Aug. 23 in order to raise funds for projects.

More Women Recruits Fail Finish The First Enlistment

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another blow to the all-volunteer military, women recruits are failing to finish their first enlistments at a much higher rate than male volunteers.

An Army study estimates the fallout rate for women will reach 46.7 percent this year — 13.5 percentage points higher than for young men.

"Current forecasts indicate that first-term female attrition rates will increase further," said the study which predicts that the trend for comparable male volunteers "will remain down."

Army officials appear at a loss to explain the high fallout rate among women in the first hitch. The Army

Research Institute is looking for the causes.

But M. Kathleen Carpenter, the Pentagon's equal opportunity chief, said she believes there are at least four main reasons.

"There is a significant lack of acceptance of women in non-traditional roles by their male peers," said Ms. Carpenter in an interview. "Men often find women performing better."

At last report, about 61 percent of the army's 59,000 enlisted women were in "non-traditional" skills, such as maintenance, transportation and engineering. The remaining 39 percent were assigned to "traditional" fields, as clerks, medical orderlies and similar occupations.

Ms. Carpenter said Army women who do manage to get traditionally male-type assignments all too often find themselves shuffled into handling paperwork. This, she said, stunts their career development opportunities.

Furthermore, Ms. Carpenter said, women find themselves under heavy psychological pressures, working in what she called a "fishbowl" environment in which they are very closely scrutinized.

She also said sexual harassment is a factor in souring young women soldiers toward military life and causing them to look for ways to get out. She declined to go into specifics on the extent of sexual harassment, but indicated she regards it as a major problem.

At the same time, Ms. Carpenter acknowledged that some women soldiers "are using pregnancy as a vehicle to get out" when they are unable to gain job satisfaction in uniform.

Whatever the causes, the problem is of deep concern to the Army because planners long have counted on recruiting increasing numbers of women to fill out the ranks in years ahead, when the military age male population declines.

The current goal is to increase the number of enlisted women to 85,000 out of an army of about 765,000 over the next five years.

This problem comes on top of other difficulties with the all-volunteer force, such as retaining seasoned non-commissioned officers and technical specialists, improving overall troop quality and strengthening the undermanned Army National Guard and reserves.

Rural Store Has Break-In

Briley's Store on N.C. 33 was reported broken into Friday night. Entry was gained through a front window which had been broken, according to reports of the Pitt Sheriff's Department.

Taken from the store was an assortment of foods. The freezer box on the outside of the store was broken into, according to sheriff reports, and food items were taken.

Also taken was one used car tape player; 50 cartons of assorted cigarettes; and a portable television. The exit apparently was made through the back door. The value of the stolen items totalled an estimated $620.61.

Prof Studying Tobacco Effect

ROOTSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — J. Mark Braugher, a pharmacology professor at the Northeast Ohio Universities College of Medicine, is investigating the mechanics of an enzyme believed capable of regulating metabolism of living cells.

The thrust of his work is to determine if one element of tobacco smoke makes human organs more susceptible to cancer.

The research is funded by a $22,735 grant from the Council for Tobacco Research and is exploring the reaction caused by nitric oxide on what Braugher says is the guanylate cyclase enzyme system.

A spokesman for the tobacco council said Braugher's work is among 100 currently funded projects investigating the relationship between tobacco and human health.

An independent board of scientists picks the projects for funding, the spokesman said. He said the tobacco industry, which funds the council, takes a calculated risk that independent research it has sponsored could confirm the health-hazard claims against tobacco. "But we operate in the belief that major health problems, like cancer and heart disease, are multifactorial," he said.

Baugher described nitric oxide as a very toxic component of tobacco smoke. Nitric oxide is known to scientists as a free radical chemical. He said most carcinogens, or cancer causing agents, are free radicals.

He said, "We believe the guanylate cyclase system keeps track of the free radicals and slows metabolism down when too many free radicals are present in the cell."

"My theory is that besides attacking the cell, free radicals also attack the guanylate system and eventually reduce its ability to help the cell protect itself. This would predispose smokers to lung disease problems."

Braugher's research involves measuring and analyzing chemical changes on animal lung cells and on the enzymes by addition of varied concentrations of nitric oxide.

Woman On Death Row 'Not The Same Person'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Her years in jail have changed her outlook and life, and Velma Barfield — free of the drugs that she says haunted her and influenced a frustrated life — says she wants the world to know she isn't the same woman who confessed to poisoning four people.

Mrs. Barfield, professing to be a born-again Christian, says she lost her bitterness at the world in the Robeson County jail.

"One Saturday night there I accepted Christ as my Savior and ever since I know that He has forgiven me I know that with being forgiven that I had to learn then to forgive people that I had felt had hurt me," she said in an interview.

One of seven women in the United States facing the death penalty, Mrs. Barfield, 47, of Lumberton, devotes her time now to sleeping, reading, talking with other inmates and writing in her four-bunk, yellow cement block cell at Women's Prison.

She was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her fiancé with arsenic, purchased in ant poisoning, that was administered in his tea and beer.

During her trial she confessed to poisoning two people for whom she had worked and her mother. In some cases, she said she had forged checks on their bank accounts to buy drugs.

Although her cell has four bunks, Mrs. Barfield is alone. She can talk through the bars to other prisoners.

"There's been a lot of girls I have spent a lot of time talking with," she said. "They have had similar problems to what I have. I have tried to take from a real bitter experience of my own,

I have tried to share it with these girls. To let them know what drugs can do to them...."

She said she thinks sometimes about being executed, but she said, "the same peace that I have for the past life that I had, that same peace is with me."

Mrs. Barfield said she can accept death in the gas chamber — if it comes.

She said she turned to drugs during her first marriage after her husband started to drink. "I could not cope without the drugs," she said. "I was able to face anything with the drugs."

Mrs. Barfield said she became heavily dependant on anti-depressants, tranquilizers and painkillers. To get money for the drugs, she said, she forged checks.

In her testimony, Mrs. Barfield said she thought the poison would make the victims sick and give her time to repay the money she'd gotten from the forgeries.

ON DEATH ROW — Velma Barfield is one of seven women across the country in prison facing the death penalty. Mrs. Barfield, of Lumberton, was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her fiancé with arsenic. She also confessed to poisoning three other persons, including her mother. (AP Laserphoto)

Sunday Collision Takes Five Lives On Weekend

CRASH KILLS FIVE — North Carolina State trooper Jeff Winstead walks toward a covered body after five people were killed in a two car accident Sunday on rural paved road 2224 near Zebulon. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

A five-fatality collision near Zebulon Sunday pushed North Carolina's weekend traffic toll to 17 and dramatically narrowed the gap between the number of people killed last year and those who have died on the state's highways this year.

The deaths this weekend raised the 1980 toll to 907, only 13 fewer than had died on the highways at the same time last year.

Three migrant farmworkers were among the victims of the two-car collision near Zebulon. Their identities were withheld pending notification of relatives. Also killed in the collision were Timothy Warren

Whitley, 21, of Middlesex and Evelyn Ann Martin, 17, of Zebulon.

In other accidents, a Lexington man was killed when he lost control of his car and ran off the road during a high-speed chase with law-enforcement officers, the patrol said. William Dwane Booe, 30, lost control of his car on a rural paved road almost nine miles south of Lexington.

Katherine Hollingshead, 18, of Reidsville, a motorcycle passenger, was killed when the vehicle skidded off U.S. 158 near Reidsville.

Calvin Taylor Westmoreland, 19, of Walkertown died when he was struck by a car. The patrol said Westmoreland was lying on the road.

The patrol also reported that 9-year-old Crystal Shaw of Limestone, Tenn., died in Burke County when she fell from the back of a pick-up truck on Interstate 40.

Sharon Smith Pender, 37, of Charlotte was killed in Mecklenburg County in a head-on collision.

Allen Wayne Matthews, 26, of Henderson died in a Warren County accident when the car he was driving overturned several times.

In Durham County, Robert Brown Biggers, 29, of Raleigh was killed when his car struck another car.

Jimmy Lee Wilder of Franklinton was killed by a hit-and-run driver on a Franklin County roadside.

In Duplin County, 12-year-old Sherman Burgess of Warsaw was killed when his bicycle was struck by a car.

Berdine Darryl Blaine, 18, of Fort Bragg was killed in Cumberland County in a head-on collision.

William Harrison Coble, 36, of Pleasant Garden was killed in McDowell County in a head-on collision.

In Sampson County, Charles Lee Jones Jr., 22, of Autryville died when his car ran off the road and overturned.

Afghans Aver 1,200 Killed

By MOHAMMED AFTAB Associated Press Writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan rebels claim Soviet air attacks on 22 villages killed more than 1,200 men, women and children celebrating the end of Moslem holy month of Ramadan. Other sources report a new post-Ramadan rebel offensive, and say a team of Soviet generals is in Kabul planning a counter-strike.

The Afghan rebel group Hizbe Islami, the Islamic Front, said in a statement issued in Islamabad that nearly 30 Soviet bombers and helicopters destroyed 22 villages in Wardak Province, south of the Afghan capital of Kabul.

It said the raids occurred last Tuesday during "the Moslem festival of Eid," a joyous celebration marking the end of the 30-day Ramadan period of dawn-to-dusk fasting.

Like most rebel reports, this one could not be independently confirmed. Such reports often contain exaggerated claims.

Nor was there any confirmation of a report reaching the Indian capital of New Delhi on Sunday that rebel Moslem guerrillas launched a string of post-Ramadan raids against Afghan government troops and their Soviet allies around Kabul.

The report, from a source in Kabul who has proved accurate in the past, said the rebels killed 13 Soviets and captured four others in a raid near the sprawling Bagram military air base north of Kabul.

stepped-up helicopter gunship attacks on rebel strongholds.

The source did not report what became of the hostages.

The Kremlin has maintained 85,000 or more Soviet troops in Afghanistan since last December to bolster the pro-Moscow Kabul government in its war against the anti-communist guerrillas. Diplomats say Soviet troops are in firm control of Afghan cities but face stiff resistance from the guerrillas in the rugged countryside.

Weekend reports from Afghanistan said a team of top Soviet generals was meeting in Kabul to plan a major new offensive against the rebels. The reports from reliable sources gave no details.

The Afghan government radio reported a clash Sunday between government forces and insurgents in Baghlan Province, 93 miles from Kabul. It said the government force killed several guerrillas and seized four U.S.-made machine guns, 6,500 rounds of ammunition and "incriminating documents."

Radio Afghanistan also reported that former Deputy Prime Minister Assadullah Sarwari, a former secret police chief and reputed rival of President Babrak Karmal, has been named ambassador to Mongolia and "has already reached the country of assignment."

Sarwari was nicknamed the "Butcher" and "King Kong" because of executions that took place while he was secret police chief under the late President Mohammed Nur Taraki. Sarwari is a member of the Khalq Party and many of the victims of his police force belonged to the rival Parchemite faction that is led by Karmal.

The broadcast said Justice Minister Abdur Rashid Arian was promoted to deputy prime minister, apparently succeeding Sarwari.

Business At A 'Hot Spot'

GILA BEND, Ariz. (AP) — Television weathermen often give Gila Bend the business about being one of the nation's hottest communities, but some local merchants say that's good for their business.

Temperatures generally range over 90 during every month of the year and in August, the average daily high is 107. There's so little rain that the official town rain gauge is often covered with cobwebs.

"Sure, it gets hot here," said Bill Henry, a resident for 30 years and owner of an automobile radiator shop. "Business has been good."

"Our reputation as the hottest place has been good advertising," he said. "But it hasn't been as hot as it used to be. I remember a lot of consecutive 120-degree days, but not anymore."

Gila Bend, a town of about 1,700 residents located midway between Tucson and Yuma on Interstate 8, has taken more than its share of ridicule over the years.

"I've got calls from people around the country who say, 'My God, how can you people live down there?'" said H.K. Conrad, a police dispatcher who documents the official daily temperature for the National Weather Service.

Each day at 4 p.m., Conrad walks out the back door of the tiny police station to a small, white box and reads the mercury.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices dropped in fairly active trading today as the market reacted to Friday's news of a record jump in the nation's money supply.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 9.72 to 957.00 by midday, after dropping by as much as 13 points in morning trading.

Losing issues outnumbered gainers by 6-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

"The market was stunned," by Friday's Federal Reserve report of an $8.2 billion increase in the nation's basic money supply, said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. But he added that the reaction was "intensified by the fact that the market has risen so steadily in the past weeks."

The report came out after the close of trading on the NYSE Friday. Although money market analysts cited some technical reasons which may have exaggerated the weekly jump in the money supply figures, it served to raise fears about inflationary trends, Gordon said.

Friday, the stock market largely ignored a government report showing wholesale and producer prices climbed at an annual rate of 22 percent in July, the biggest monthly jump in almost six years.

Big Board volume as of noon today was 19.31 million shares, down from 23.03 million in the previous session.

Among actively traded issues, International Business Machines lost 1 1/2 to 67 1/2; General Motors fell 1 1/2 to 56 1/2; Mobil was off 1/2 to 71 and Texaco declined 3/4 to 37 1/2. Tesoro Petroleum slipped 1/2 to 25 1/2.

The NYSE composite index, which closed at a record high Friday, was down 0.73 at 71.34 at noon. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 3.17 to 321.89.

Helped By A Singing Dog

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bob Ertel, accompanied by his singing dog, won the annual hog-calling contest at the Indiana State Fair. But his wife, Pat, had to settle for second place in the husband-calling competition.

Ertel of Batesville, Ind., was using the standard "Sooooooeeeeee!" call in Sunday's contest when the family dog ran up from the audience and joined in with a chorus of howls.

The louder Ertel yelled, the louder the dog howled. The combination proved unbeatable.

Ertel's wife finished second to Linda Knott of Gosport, Ind., in the husband-calling contest.

Mrs. Knott, who entered the state contest at her husband's urging, hollered out her husband's first and middle names, David Harry, then added a long "Sooooooeeeeee!" and two short "Soooooees" at the end.

"I was embarrassed, and shocked that I won," Mrs. Knott said. "But my husband said if I didn't win I'd just be the second biggest mouth in our county, so I decided I'd better try to win."

North State Holds Annual Meeting

The second annual stockholders meeting of the North State Savings & Loan Corporation was held Thursday at the Willis Building.

Approximately 35 stockholders attended the meeting which was held to elect a board of directors, elect an auditor, hear the Peat, Marwick & Mitchell & Co. report (auditor and accountant of North State), and hear the report of the management.

Agree To End Airport Tie-Up

By BILL DENSMORE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Air traffic controllers say they'll obey a court order not to stage slowdowns at O'Hare International Airport, where federal officials contend $1 million in fuel was wasted due to a union job action.

"We will certainly abide by the order to the extent that we can," said Patrick Doyle, a regional official of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

"We contend we were never in a slowdown to begin with," U.S. District Judge Nicholas J. Buia on Sunday signed a 10-day restraining order forbidding the union from taking part in any work stoppage or slowdown at O'Hare and set a hearing for Aug. 27.

The order was sought by the Federal Aviation Administration, which said 616 aircraft were delayed at O'Hare during a 21-hour period ending at 9 p.m. Friday.

The FAA said the delays cost airlines an estimated $1 million in fuel as jetliners flew in holding patterns or waited in line to take off. The FAA said 11 aircraft had to be diverted to other airports and one flight was delayed for three hours.

The FAA blamed the delays on a "slowdown" by traffic controllers. The union says the delays were prompted by thunderstorms and the fact that one of the

Over 200 Cats Said 'Gassed'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — More than 200 cats have been gassed to death at the city animal shelter as a result of an ordinance that requires vaccinations and licenses for cats.

Under a city ordinance, pet owners who don't go to the expense — about $13 — of obtaining a vaccination and license for their cats can be fined $35. A number of pet owners have brought their cats to the shelter rather than risk the fine and the cats are being gassed.

On Saturday, 20 cats were destroyed, bringing the total that have been killed to 244.

Rural Assault Is Investigated

Pitt County deputies are continuing their investigation today into a Sunday night assault of a 78-year-old resident of the Clay Root community and the theft of an undetermined amount of money from her home.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning that Mrs. Eula Heath of Rt. 1, Box 149, Vanceboro, was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries she suffered in the late night incident.

The sheriff said that Mrs. Heath told deputies that a man entered her home and forced her to get her money from a bedroom. She reported that the man beat her with a lamp after she gave him the money. Entrance to the house was apparently gained through a door of the structure, it was pointed out.

Sheriff Tyson, who said that Mrs. Heath suffered cuts and bruises on her face, noted that she managed to get to a telephone and report the incident. He added that his department was notified at 11:30 p.m. Sunday night.

Mrs. Heath resides near the Pitt-Craven County line south of Greenville.

Prices Falling On Oil Market

NEW YORK (AP) — "Crumbling oil demand" has deflated prices on the world's oil spot market, a trade newsletter says, contributing to a 4 1/2-year low in oil production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said Sunday that output by the 13-nation cartel dropped to 27.3 million barrels a day in June, the lowest since January 1976.

The publication credited a drop in world oil consumption with causing the slide, and has forced reductions of $1 to $4 a barrel in U.S. domestic crude oil prices.

Brett At .401; O's Nip Yanks

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Well, it seems the folks who said baseball would never have another .400 hitter were right.

Would you believe .401? Say it slowly and reverently — four-oh-one — because that's what George Brett of the Kansas City Royals is batting today. The season, though, still has seven weeks to go — the last .400 hitter was Boston's Ted Williams, who hit .406 in 1941 — but the way Brett is sizzling these days he might keep going up instead of dropping.

After all, Rod Carew was hitting .384 on Aug. 17, 1977, and finished at .388.

"I think the longer I'm up there, the longer the pressure is going to mount," said Brett, who is on a 29-game hitting tear that included a 4-for-4 performance — two singles, two doubles and five RBI — in Sunday's 9-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays. "An the longer the hitting streak goes on, the more it's going to mount. I'm sure it's going to be tough."

Brett's heroics overshadowed a slugging display by Al Oliver of Texas, who unloaded a double, triple and home run in the opener and slammed three more homers in the nightcap of a doubleheader, driving in seven runs as the Rangers swept the Detroit Tigers 9-3, 12-6.

For devotees of tight pitching, Baltimore's Scott McGregor and New York's Luis Tiant waged a brilliant duel, with McGregor and the Orioles prevailing 1-0 to slice the Yankees' lead in the American League East back to 3½ games.

Elsewhere, the Milwaukee Brewers took two from the Cleveland Indians 4-0 and 11-1, the Seattle Mariners edged the Oakland A's 4-3 and the Minnesota Twins won a pair from the California Angels 8-1 and 6-5. The Boston-Chicago doubleheader was called off because of wet grounds.

Brett singled in the third and fifth innings and rapped a tie-breaking two-run double — all off Jim Clancy — in the seventh and a three-run double off Mike Barlow in the eighth, giving him 88 RBI in 82 games — and don't forget he missed 35 games with injuries.

"When I got to .399, I said to myself that if I hadn't chased a bad ball last night I'd be at .400 already," Brett said. "The adrenalin was flowing. I knew if I got a hit I'd go over .400 and put the game out of reach."

Rangers 9-12, Tigers 3-6

Oliver drove in three runs as the Rangers drubbed Mark Fidrych behind the six-hit pitching of Fergie Jenkins in the opener. Then he drove in four more runs in the nightcap. The batting display hiked his average from .303 to .310, which pales somewhat when compared to Brett's numbers.

But, Oliver said, "I think we're basically the same type hitters. The only difference is that he seems to get more balls to fall for him — just breaks. Other than that, you can call me Al Brett and him George Oliver."

Orioles 1, Yankees 0

Terry Crowley doubled home the only run in the sixth inning and McGregor pitched a six-hitter as the Orioles evened the five-game series, which ends today, at two games apiece. Crowley's two-out double down the first base line scored Rich Dauer, who opened the sixth with a double.

Brewers 4-11, Indians 0-1

Paul Mitchell hurled a four-hitter while Ben Oglivie and Sixto Lezcano homered in the opener. Lary Sorensen scattered nine hits over eight innings in the nightcap and Charlie Moore drove in three runs with three hits as Milwaukee ran its winning streak to six games and climbed within 7½ games of the Yankees in the AL East.

Mariners 4, A's 3

Home runs by Dan Meyer and Tom Paciorek helped Seattle end a six-game losing streak. Paciorek hit a two-run homer in the second inning. Meyer hit a tie-breaking solo shot in the sixth and consecutive two-out singles by Jerry Narron, Mario Mendoza and Julio Cruz produced what proved to be the winning run in the eighth.

Twins 8-6, Angels 1-5

In the opener, the Twins broke out of a scoring slump with four runs in the first inning and prevailed behind the six-hit pitching of Roger Erickson. It was the first time they had scored as many as four runs in an inning since July 21. Butch Wynegar led a 12-hit attack with three hits while Hosken Powell, John Castino and Glenn Adams each had two.

Minnesota scored three times in the first inning of the nightcap, chasing California's Chris Knapp before he could retire a batter. Mike Cabbage singled home the first two runs and Wynegar delivered a sacrifice fly. Rick Sofield singled a run home in the fifth and scored on Adams' triple while a single by Wynegar and Ron Jackson's triple produced a run in the sixth.

Strange $72,000 Richer With Win

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Curtis Strange had a $72,000 check in his pocket, another PGA Tour title in hand and tongue firmly planted in cheek when he observed: "I think I might be mellowing out at the old age of 25."

Strange, who had displayed a rock-steady run down the stretch to a two-stroke victory in the rich Westchester Classic, wasn't speaking entirely in jest. He was speaking of self-control.

Like so many young players on the tour, Strange at one time had some problems with his temper.

"Show me a person who doesn't have any fight in them and I'll show you a loser," he said after posting his 2-under-par final round of 69 and a 273 total, 11 shots under par on the Westchester Country Club course, a hilly, 6,603-yard layout in suburban New York.

"My temper is no worse than anyone else's," he said. "You just have to learn to control your emotions. You learn by what it costs you. I'm getting better."

His performance shows it. The triumph, nailed down when an expected Tom Watson challenge failed to materialize, was his second of the season and third in less than 12 months. Although the winner's share of $72,000 was at stake, Strange said the pressure was different than his first career victory last fall in Pensacola, Fla.

"After the win in Pensacola, it was a total relief, like the weight of the world was off my shoulders," he said. "This win was different. This was like it was just for the trophy."

It also stamped him as perhaps the brightest prospect on the tour and provided him with the biggest check of his four-year career, boosting his earnings to $263,025 for the year, third behind Watson and Lee Trevino.

It came easier than expected for the former national collegiate champion from Wake Forest.

"All the time I thought Tom was gonna come out, and he never did. I thought he, or somebody, would come after me and they never did. I guess it just proves Tom is human after all," Strange said.

Watson did make a brief challenge. Watson, the winner of the British Open and five American titles this year, moved to within one stroke of Strange with a birdie on the 10th, but then he fell victim to the errant driver that had troubled him all week.

Watson bogeyed the 11th then drove into the trees on the 12th. He was short in three and took a double bogey-6 that dropped him from contention.

Gibby Gilbert took second with a no-bogey 67 and a 275 total. Phil Hancock, with a 69, was third at 276. Watson, with a 73, was tied for fourth at 277 with Mike Reid and third-round leader George Cadle. Reid shot 69 in the sunny weather, and Cadle had 74.

Watson won $16,533 and moved past $400,000 in winnings for the second time. He now has $410,258. Watson also improved his stroke average to 70.07, moving past the absent Trevino in the race for the Vardon Trophy.

The official name of the event is the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic.

Cale Captures 400

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip's fairy tale ended abruptly as he sat behind the wheel of his borrowed race car, impatiently waiting for the crew to finish a tire change.

But, for Cale Yarborough, Waltrip's slow pit stop was just the break he needed to win Sunday's Michigan 400 Grand National stock car race at Michigan International Speedway.

Yarborough, who picked up his third victory of the season and 66th of his NASCAR career, trailed Waltrip by 2.5 seconds with 14 laps left in the 400-mile race.

That's when fate took a hand, with veteran Dave Marcis — running far off the pace — suddenly spinning into the infield in turn four of the two-mile, high-banked oval. That brought out the fourth yellow flag of the day, and the leaders quickly darted for the pits for one last fuel fillup, chassis setting and tire change.

When they came out with 12 laps left to run, Yarborough was on top and Waltrip was running a distant fifth.

"If we had won it would have been a fairy tale," said Waltrip, who stepped into little-known Chuck Bown's Chevrolet after two blown engines during Saturday's qualifying kept his regular No. 88 ride out of the race lineup.

Waltrip, who began the day in fifth in the NASCAR point standings, was offered the ride late Saturday night and wound up finishing fourth in the borrowed car. The best previous finish for that machine in four other races this season was 25th early in the year at Talladega with Donnie Allison at the wheel.

"It was a new car, a new crew and they were just super.

I was just riding high until the caution flag," Waltrip said. "But fourth place is better than sitting home drinking beer and wearing a Richard Petty T-shirt."

Yarborough slipped his metallic blue and white Chevrolet Monte Carlo past Benny Parsons, who was running a lap behind the leaders, and pulled away to win by 2.3 seconds over Neil Bonnett, who had been trying to become the first driver since 1976 to win three straight Grand National races.

Allison, in his best finish of the season, was third, followed by Waltrip and Petty.

The 40-year-old Yarborough averaged 145.352 mph as he won $19,700 from the total purse of $178,830.

"Benny was right in front of me when the green came out (on lap 190)," Yarborough said. "I managed to get by him where I could do it without taking anybody with me. That left those other guys battling for second place."

Yarborough led seven times for 43 laps in the race but said he had chassis problems nearly all day.

"We had been making chassis adjustments every time I pitted. First the car would be loose, then we'd change the settings and it would be pushing."

"We gambled one more time on that last pit stop," the winner said. "We took some weight out of the car and that did the trick. The car ran perfectly the rest of the way."

NASCAR point leader Dale Earnhardt had his most disappointing day of the season, blowing his engine on the 80th lap and finishing 35th in the 37-car field.

Earnhardt still leads the overall 1980 point standings, but the broken engine cost him his narrow lead in the second leg of the point race — which ended Sunday — as well as the $10,000 that goes to the leader of that portion of the schedule. Yarborough's victory gave him that pot.

There were no serious accidents and no injuries reported in the race viewed by more than 50,000 spectators.

The event started 11 minutes late after a morning-long rain. Despite threatening skies and occasional sprinkles during the race, there were no further delays due to the weather.

Oiler Fans Love 'The Snake'

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The signs said "Luv Ya, Blue!" They could just as well have said "Luv Ya, Snake!"

Ken Stabler, the silver-and-black-clad villain of so many years when he and the rest of the Oakland Raiders invaded the Astrodome, wore Houston's pastel blue on Sunday.

He gave the Oilers' placard-carrying fans a thrill by throwing three touchdown passes, two to tight end Rich Caster, as Houston beat New Orleans 20-17 in the day's only National Football League exhibition game.

On Saturday it was Oakland 31, New England 29; Dallas 19, Los Angeles 16; Cincinnati 21, Chicago 3; San Francisco 17, San Diego 14; St. Louis 21, Tampa Bay 14; Baltimore 17, Green Bay 3; Detroit 24, Buffalo 17, and the New York Giants 9, Denver 6.

Tonight, it's Washington at Cleveland, Minnesota at Kansas City and Miami at Seattle.

Stabler was cast away by Raiders owner Al Davis, who engineered a quarterback swap that brought him Dan Pastorini. This weekend, at least, Houston seemed to wind up the winner in the deal. Stabler hit 18 of 28 passes for 217 yards in three periods, completing scoring strikes covering 15 yards to Billy Johnson for a 6-0 halftime lead and 10 and 45 yards to Caster in the third quarter.

Stabler clearly hoped it was a preview of the regular season. "Hopefully we will save some more good games for the regular season," he said. "I really feel confident with the offense, even though it was the second preseason game."

Pastorini, playing a more conservative game in Oakland, completed five of eight passes for 109 yards — but 65 of those yards came on one play, a touchdown pass to Cliff Branch. Jim Plunkett also teamed with Branch on a TD pass, this one covering 21 yards, but it was rookie Marc Wilson, making his debut with the Raiders, who hit Terry Robiske on a 17-yarder with fourth down and nine seconds left that turned back the Patriots.

"We wanted to see him under pressure, and he performed very well under pressure," said Oakland Coach Tom Flores, clearly less thrilled than his rookie passer. "I never was in a game in high school or college with an ending as exciting as that!"

Danny White, who no doubt will be performing under pressure — and under Roger Staubach's shadow — all year, began filling his predecessor's shoes by tossing touchdown passes of 18 and 27 yards to Butch Johnson as Dallas defeated Los Angeles.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Oklahoma, one of only two schools to notch 100 victories in the 1970s, is strapped with what seems, for the Sooners, a glaring weakness entering the 1980s.

For the first time since Greg Pruitt's junior year in 1971, Oklahoma has no all-America type running back to spark its wishbone. But despite the graduation loss of 1978 Heisman winner Billy Sims and All-America linebacker George Cumby, nobody in the midlands is feeling sorry for Barry Switzer's boys.

"Nothing's changed in the last 35 years," Kansas Coach Don Fambrough says. "It's still Oklahoma and Nebraska."

Oklahoma, with 14 starters back from last year's 11-1 campaign, was a solid choice of writers in a preseason poll to retain its Big Eight title. Nebraska returning 10 starters from a 10-2 season, finished a close second in the poll. Missouri, 1979's biggest disappointment, was rated a solid third, followed in order by Oklahoma State, Iowa State, Kansas State, Kansas and Colorado.

"I think every coach uses them as the standard," Fambrough said. "Nothing's changed."

"I can't speak for Nebraska, but Oklahoma isn't as good as it's been in the past," Switzer said. "I don't think we'll be as powerful a football team. The defensive strength of our team won't allow it."

"I've had more talented teams, but it's relative to who you play," added Switzer, whose seven-year record at Oklahoma is 73-7-2. "I said the '79 team wasn't as good as '78 and it wasn't. But the '79 team was 11-1 and won the Orange Bowl and won the Big Eight title."

Although they've lost Sims, perhaps the greatest runner in Oklahoma's illustrious gridiron history, the Sooners return an experienced, proven quarterback in senior J.C. Watts along with running backs David Overstreet and Stanley Wilson.

Jarvis Redwine tops a swarm of talented Nebraska running backs.

"Our running back situation is probably as good as any year I can remember, and that goes back 18 years," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said.

Missouri finished 7-5 last year, including a 24-14 triumph over South Carolina in the Hall of Fame Bowl, and welcomes back 15 starters. The Tigers' hopes are bolstered this year by the presence of senior quarterback Phil Bradley, who will likely become the Big Eight's all-time offensive leader this season.

Bradley also could become the first player in history to lead the league in total offense three years in a row.

"When he's on," Switzer said of Bradley, "they can beat anybody."

The return to his sophomore form of running back James Wilder could be critical to Missouri's success. Wilder gained 645 yards last year in nine games and Tiger Coach Warren Powers noted, "You don't realize how much you miss him until he's out for a while."

A big surprise — for the second year in a row — could be Oklahoma State. The Cowboys launched Jimmy Johnson's head coaching career with a 7-4 record, and now that they're off probation and returning 16 starters the Pokes might be ready to challenge for the top spot.

If they stay healthy, the Cowboys might have the toughest defense in the Big Eight. Nine starters are back on defense, including all-star types in tackle Curtis Boone, linebacker Ricky Young, and safety Gregory Johnson.

"If we can keep our top players on the field, we'll be a factor in the Big Eight," predicts Johnson, who won Big Eight Coach of the Year laurels in '79. However, the Pokes will be tested early with a non-conference schedule that includes Washington, Arkansas and San Diego State.

Fambrough's Jayhawks are coming off what might be one of the finest recruiting years in Kansas history. But the folksy, philosophical head coach is badly in need of a quarterback since last year's starter, Kevin Clinton, has decided to forego football and concentrate on a baseball career.

"Last year I kept bragging about his strong arm, so he decides to become a pitcher," said Fambrough with a wry smile. The top candidates are junior Steve Smith, senior Bill Lillis and freshman Frank Seurer, a prep star from southern California.

Befitting Colorado's lowly position in the preseason poll was this comment from head Coach Chuck Fairbanks: "We'll be more dependent on young players than a good major college football team should be. It will probably be a very difficult year for us."

Lack of experience also is a thorn in the side of Donnie Duncan, in charge of the Iowa State program for the second year.

"We're young, but we're not green," said Duncan. Injuries last year wiped out any hope of the Cyclones had of continuing the momentum built up by the now-departed Earle Bruce. But Duncan has ample talent in quarterback John Quinn, tailback Rocky Gillis and defensive tackle Shamus McDonough, who were all injured last year.

"The difference between us and teams like Nebraska and Oklahoma," said Kansas State Coach Jim Dickey, "is that we have to put some players on the field before they are ready."

The Wildcat success could depend on large measure by the performance of another Dickey — quarterback Darrell, Jim's son. A third-year sophomore, young Dickey threw for 895 yards last year, including a 315-yard effort against Kansas.

Tulsa ranked 41 letterman and was ranked a solid favorite in the Missouri Valley in a summer poll of both writers and league coaches.

The Golden Hurricane is counting heavily on the return of running back Sherman Johnson, who rushed for 826 yards in 1978 but was injured last season. Tulsa also has an ace in placekicker Stu Crum, who scored 53 points last year and hit 11 of 15 field goal attempts.

The writer's poll predicted Indiana State would finish second, followed by defending champion West Texas State, Southern Illinois, Wichita State, Drake and New Mexico State.

Redskins Face Browns

CLEVELAND (AP) — For one half tonight, the Washington Redskins are to get a first-hand peak at what will largely be the Cleveland Browns' first-string lineup this season.

The two National Football League teams square off at 8 p.m. EDT in the second pre-season game for each.

The Redskins were impressive 13-3 winners over Baltimore in their exhibition opener last week, while the Browns stumbled 42-0 at Kansas City.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano said his first team will play most or all of the first half, but not to prevent another fiasco like last week's.

"Even if we had won by 42-0, I'd plan things the same way," he said. "Sure I was disappointed the way we played in Kansas City, and it was unfortunate that we didn't do better.

but the most important thing in these games is the evaluating of players."

It's also important to get the regulars ready, the coach said. So Brian Sipe will be at quarterback for much of the first half, with rookie Charles White and veteran Mike Pruitt in the backfield, Reggie Rucker and Dave Logan at wide receiver and Ozzie Newsome at tight end.

Calvin Hill, Cleo Miller and possibly Dino Hall will also see some action at running back behind Sipe.

The defense will feature such regulars as Lyle Alzado on the line, Dick Ambrose at linebacker and Thom Darden in the defensive backfield.

Injuries are preventing participation by running back Greg Pruitt and lineman Jerry Sherk.

The Redskins' offense is likely to provide a good test for the Browns' defense. Washington amassed 204 yards on the ground in its victory over Baltimore, while quarterbacks, Joe Theismann, Kim McQuilken and Mike Kruzcek, completed 12-of-19 passes for 65 yards, with one interception.

Local Netter Wins

Al King defeated Dennis Warren for the over 50 singles title while Tom Sayetta wound up second in the over 35 singles in the finals of the Roanoke League Tennis Tournament Sunday held at the River Birch Tennis Center.

King, a Greenville resident, defeated Warren, also of Greenville, 6-0, 6-0 to win the over 50 title.

Sayetta, meanwhile, dropped a 6-2, 6-0 match to Jim Rogers of Tarboro in the over 35 singles final. Sayetta and Wes Hankins also lost to Norman Bryant and Eddie Hurst of Tarboro in the open doubles, 6-3, 7-5.

Bryant defeated Hurst, 7-5, 6-3, to win the open singles title.

In other matches: Rogers and Walt Conner of Rocky Mount defeated Walter Jones of Farmville and Tom Richter of Washington 6-2, 6-2 to win the over 35 doubles crown.

In other tennis news, Sayetta was re-elected president of the Roanoke League for the 1981 season.

Astros 'Knock' Padres

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

While the Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds were fighting it out for first place in the National League West this past weekend, the Houston Astros heard opportunity knocking. And they knocked back — hammering out four straight victories over the San Diego Padres, including a 5-0, 9-2 doubleheader sweep Sunday.

The result of all that offensive noise by the opportunistic Astros was a first-place foothold today in the wild, wild West race.

"We had to win four ballgames," said Houston's Ken Forsch, who hurled a four-hitter in the opener. "We're not a good road club and we had just lost three straight coming into San Diego."

"Our pitching has been tough. The loss of J.R. Richard was a shocker. There is no way to replace a J.R., but the starters are going to have to pitch a good seven innings each game and try to keep the score down."

The Reds, meanwhile, knocked off the Dodgers 6-2 to take two out of three games in their big series in Los Angeles and held second place, a half-game behind the Astros. The Dodgers dropped two games off the pace, in third.

Elsewhere in the NL Sunday, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat Montreal 5-1 in the opener of a doubleheader before the Expos came back to take the nightcap 4-2; the Philadelphia Phillies stopped the New York Mets twice, 9-4 and 4-1; the Chicago Cubs whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2, and the Atlanta Braves beat the San Francisco Giants 8-2.

Reds 6, Dodgers 2

George Foster's walk with the bases loaded brought home the tie-breaking run in a three-run rally in the seventh inning that sent Cincinnati past Los Angeles. Dan Driessen knocked home the second run of the frame with a sacrifice fly and Joe Nolan singled home another to give the Reds a 5-2 cushion.

"I think my bat's the key in our lineup," said Foster, who also hit a solo home run and a double in the contest. "I have to be able to produce."

Pirates 5-2, Expos 1-4

Rick Rhoden scattered seven hits and Lee Lacy hit a two-run homer as Pittsburgh beat Montreal in the first game of their doubleheader.

Rhoden had a shutout until the ninth when the Expos scored on an RBI grounder by Ellis Valentine. The right-hander struck out five and walked none, getting all the support he

Daniel's Lightning Hits Stacy — Again

MAPLEWOOD, Minn. (AP) — Beth Daniel proved that lightning can, indeed, strike twice, winning her second straight Patty Berg Golf Classic Sunday with Hollis Stacy the victim again.

Daniel, a steady player in just her second year on the LPGA tour, turned in a 1-under par 72 at Keller Golf Course for a 9-under, 54-hole total of 210 and a two-stroke victory over Stacy.

"A lot of times you know when it's your golf tournament," said Daniel, who last year defeated Stacy by four shots to win her first pro tournament.

"You can stand over putts, and know that you'll make them. That's how I felt today and most of yesterday. All I had to do was hit the shot and know that I'd come through."

Daniel, the LPGA's rookie of the year in 1979, has finished in the top 10 in each of her last 10 events. Sunday she picked up a winner's check of $15,000, moving her past Nancy Lopez-Melton into fifth place on the current money list with nearly $130,000 in earnings.

In 1979, Daniels won $97,000,

10th on the money list. "She never was a rookie coming to the tour," said Stacy, who carded a 2-under 71 to finish at 212 for the tournament. "She was the U.S. Amateur Champion (1975 and 1977) and all that. She was about as much a rookie as Lopez was."

Daniel, a long-hitting native of South Carolina, found the short Kellerman terrain much to her liking for the second year in a row.

After finishing up Saturday's rain-delayed second round early Sunday morning, Daniel birdied two par-5s on the front nine of her final round to make the turn at 1-under 36.

But then, by her own admission, she started getting sloppy on the second nine.

"I was playing good golf, but just playing for par," she said. "No one was really charging at me and I got bored. At 14, I decided I'd better start playing for some birdies."

She got it at the par-4 No. 16 hole for a four-stroke lead, but the $100,000 event wasn't over yet.

Stacy birdied No. 17, while Daniel took a bogey, and suddenly only two strokes separated the two. Daniel calmly shot an easy par on the 460-yard, par-5 18th hole to win her second tournament of the season.

"This course has a special meaning for me because I won my first LPGA tournament here," said Daniel, who has one other victory this season. "It's more or less set up for my type of game. There's no holes that give me any trouble."

First-round leader Pat Bradley finished third with a 54-hole total of 215, 4-under-par and five strokes behind Daniel. Patty Hayes was fourth, the only other golfer to break par for the tournament at 2-under 217.

Seattle Battles Miami

added Jerry Rhome, the Seahawks' offensive coach.

Zorn was injured in Seattle's exhibition opener, a 14-10 victory over Atlanta. He suffered a chipped knee when he was struck by running back Sherman Smith on a handoff.

Myer previously suffered a severe back bruise in a scrimmage at Cheney, Wash., the Seahawks' training camp.

Zorn is expected to be available for Seattle's third exhibition game in San Francisco next Saturday night.

On defense, Robert Hardy, out last week with a knee injury, will start in the defensive line.

It will be Seattle's first exhibition game against the Dolphins but Miami is 2-0 in regular season meetings with the Seahawks. Miami won 19-10 over Seattle last year and 31-13 in 1977. Both games were in Miami's Orange Bowl.

Patera said this week the Seahawks were in the market for another quality running back.

needed from Lacy's two-run blast in the first inning off Fred Norman, 3-3.

The Expos came back to win the second game as Rodney Scott delivered a two-run single to snap a 2-2 tie in the ninth. The blow made a winner of Bill Gullickson, 5-3, who needed ninth-inning relief help from Woodie Fryman.

Montreal's victory salvaged the finale of a big four-game series with the Pirates, who had beaten the Expos in 10 of 12 previous contests.

Phillies 9-4, Mets 4-1

Steve Carlton gained his 19th victory with home run support from Bake McBride, Garry Maddox and Lonnie Smith as Philadelphia defeated New York in the first game of their twinbill.

Carlton, 19-6, became the first 19-game winner in the NL and joined Baltimore's Steve Stone in the majors with that total. Carlton scattered 10 hits in his route-going performance.

Maddox hit a two-run homer in the second game, giving him five RBI for the day, as the Phillies won the nightcap. Randy Lerch, 4-13, and reliever Ron Reed combined to hold New York to six hits.

The Phillies completed the first five-game sweep over New York at home since 1964 when the Mets were swept by the Cincinnati Reds. The Phillies had 22 hits in the twinbill and a total of 71 in the series.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 2

Rick Reuschel halted St. Louis on eight hits and drove in two runs with a single, leading Chicago over the Cardinals. Lenny Randle chipped in a two-run homer to a 14-hit Chicago attack off John Fulgham, 3-6, and three relievers.

Reuschel, 10-9, had a scoreless-inning streak halted at 20:23 when the Cardinals scored twice in the ninth.

"I was trying to make the good pitches, where they have to hit the ball," said Reuschel. "I didn't want to strike anybody out and get behind 2-1 or 3-1. I was getting the ball pretty much where I wanted it."

Braves 8, Giants 2

Doyle Alexander pitched a five-hitter after hurling no-hit ball for six innings, and Dale Murphy blasted a grand slam homer and run-scoring double to lead Atlanta over San Francisco.

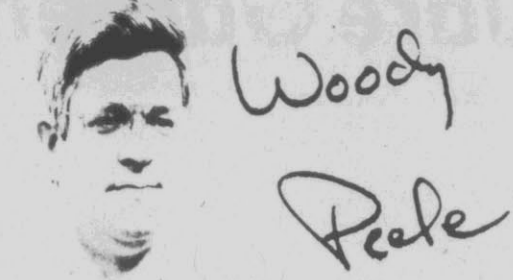

Alexander, 11-6, didn't allow a hit until Jack Clark led off the seventh with a triple to right, a drive which barely eluded diving rightfielder Gary Matthews.

Murphy's first-inning homer off Allen Ripley, 6-6, gave Alexander all the offensive support he needed.

Golf's A Fantastic Game

Golf legend Arnold Palmer, shows his determination during Sunday's final round of the $100,000 International Golf Classic in Edmonton. Palmer, who will be 51 this month, captured his first victory in five years with a 271, nine strokes under par, winning the $20,000 first-prize money. (AP Laserphoto)

East Carolina University's baseball team graduated four seniors this year into the professional ranks and all four made their mark on the rookie leagues this season.

Oddly enough, the four split up two-on-two, a pair going with the Kansas City organization and another duo with San Diego.

Billy Best and Butch Davis both ended up with the Royals' Blue team in the Gulf Coast League. Both of them highlighted the season by being named to the All-Star team for the league. Best, as of August 11, was hitting .325, seventh in the league, while Davis, who has stolen over 20 bases, was sixth with a .326 average.

Mickey Britt and Raymie Styons were both assigned by San Diego to their farm team in the Northwest League in Oregon. Late in the season, Styons was leading the league in homers with seven, while Britt had hurled a 4-1 record on the mound.

Their progress will be watched in the coming years with interest.

A little while back, in a game that some folks saw locally over the Atlanta television station, an unusual baseball play occurred.

With none out, and runners on first and second, a ground ball was hit to the infield. On the resulting double play, the runner going to second was charged by the umpire with interference, running far wide of the baseline to take the fielder covering the bag. The umpire then signaled the runner who had gone to third to return to second.

In this week's "Sporting News," that play is questioned in the "Ask Hal, the Referee" column. His answer is that the call was correct. "Absolutely," he answered. "When a runner intentionally interferes with a play, as (he) did, the ball is dead and no runners can advance. Sharp umpiring. In fact, he could have runed a double play even if it hadn't been made."

The umpire in question was none other than Greenville native Joe West.

If you have driven past the E.B. Aycocock Junior High School athletic field recently, you may have observed some activity going on at the track—used both by the junior high and high school teams.

A $10,000 project is currently underway, adding curbing to the track, and leveling out some areas where the pavement has sagged.

In addition, the track is being slightly trimmed at one end and repainted for metered events instead of the former style of yards. That involves about 91 inches of change. The track now, instead of being 440-yards will be 400 meters around.

The state switched to the metric system for track last year, and has encouraged high schools to have their tracks redone, whenever possible, to conform to this standard. All new tracks being built are metered.

Putt Putt Roundup

LaVern Mayo shot a 23-under-par 85 to win the Sunday Medal Play tournament by eight strokes last night at the Greenville Putt Golf Course.

After rounds of 31 and 29 Mayo had a one-stroke lead over Johnny Carrow and a three-stroke lead over Mike Brown. The third round proved decisive, however, as Mayo came in with an 11-under-par 25 to win. Both Carrow and Brown faltered to finish with 96s.

Allen Elder and Junior Knox finished with a 29 and 28 respectively to tie for second at 93. Elder then edged Knox on the ninth hole of a sudden death playoff to grab second.

Brown and Carrow also went into a playoff with Brown winning fourth place on the first hole.

Elder now has 42 points for first place in the Player-of-the-Year race. Carl White is a close second with 39 points with only six tournaments remaining to catch Elder.

Bullard and Bob Newton will start at guard for Tom Lynch and Ron Coder.

Veteran Bob Griese has been named as the probable starter by Miami Coach Don Shula. Griese, a 14-year NFL veteran, didn't play in the Dolphins' 17-7 opening preseason victory over Detroit but Shula has announced he will use Griese instead of Don Strock this week.

Strock, a seven-year professional, is bidding to take Griese's starting job and played against Detroit.

"The quarterback job is open for the first time since I've been here," said Shula.

Shula also said he will use Guy Benjamin and rookie David Woodley, from Louisiana State, at quarterback against the Seahawks.

Woodley, an eighth-round draft choice, directed the Dolphins to two touchdown drives against Detroit. He scrambled 6 yards for the clinching TD with 3:46 to play. He completed 8-of-10 passes for 108 yards.

"Even though it compounds our problems," Shula said when asked about his quarterbacking situation, "we're happy to have that kind of a problem."

With No.1 Seahawk quarterback Zorn and No.2 Steve Myer sidelined, Adkins will get the quarterbacking call. Patera also will use rookie Dave Krieg, from Milton (Wis.) College.

Adkins will be making his first start since his final collegiate game at Wichita State in 1976 when he led the Shockers to a 30-13 triumph over Tulsa.

"It should be exciting," Adkins said. "We will play it very basic."

Klan Trial In Its 10th Week

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The murder trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis entered its 10th week today with defense attorneys indicating they planned heavy emphasis in coming weeks of the roles played by infiltrators of the two extremist groups.

As court recessed last week, defense attorneys said they planned to call as a witness a police informant who was present during the planning stages and, according to one witness, organized a motorcade that ended with the arrest of the Klansmen and Nazis.

They earlier had learned that an agent for the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms had infiltrated a Nazi chapter at nearby Winston-Salem and was present during some of the pre-motorcade planning.

The Klansmen and Nazis are charged with murder in the deaths of five Communist Workers Party members and sympathizers in shooting that broke out after the motorcade drove into an assembly point for a CWP "Death to the Klan" rally.

Searching for informants and infiltrators has become standard procedure with the Klan and the CWP, according to some of their spokesmen.

Klan leader Joe Grady of Winston-Salem says he tries to detect police informants in his organization by running tape-recorded conversations through what he terms a "stress machine." A CWP spokesperson says that organization says its checks the background of anyone seeking membership.

The same holds true for Gaston County Klan leader Virgil Griffin. "And I tell my people if we find any (informers) we should take them out and hang them," he said.

"We haven't been careful in the past. We are now," Griffin said.

The groups claim that last November's shootout was a trap set by undercover agents of the government and police.

"The federal government had an agent down there," said the 36-year-old Griffin. "Maybe he set the whole thing up."

The CWP has a similar conspiracy theory.

"We say to the scum (the government)," states a challenge in one of the CWP leaflets, "tell more.

Alumni Join Vet School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The dean of the state's new School of Veterinary Medicine says the decision to locate the school at North Carolina State University was not supposed to mean that veterinary students would have to be N.C. State alumni.

But that's the way it's working out, since N.C. State is one of only two public schools that offers two of the animal science courses required for admission to the vet school. N.C. A&T is the other.

Don Howard, associate dean and director of academic affairs for the vet school, said no specific degree program or college major is required for admission to the school, although he said it is preferable that the degree program be in a science or animal-related field.

He admitted that courses such as animal or poultry science and animal nutrition, requirements for admission to the school, are most likely to be offered only at schools with strong agriculture programs.

"Right now, all institutions have been invited to send in to us courses they think are equivalent," Howard said. "There may be one or two out there I don't know about, but right now it appears only two state universities are offering courses that meet admissions requirements."

In October, vet school faculty members will meet with counselors from 15 other North Carolina schools to discuss admission requirements, including the courses thought to be offered only at N.C. State and A&T.

The situation is ironic since supporters of the vet school argued that the school was needed so North Carolina veterinary students wouldn't have to go out of the state to get their training.

"We have worked to maintain access to our program from all system schools," Howard said. "Most of the course credits gained at the institutions do transfer nicely."

"It is unfortunate that these requirements do cause some difficulty for students who don't have them available locally," he added.

He said students attending undergraduate school in western North Carolina might find it easier to get the courses from the University of Tennessee.

"This isn't a brand new requirement that we've pulled out of a hat," Howard said, noting other schools have specialized admissions requirements, too.

Howard said he has no idea right now whether other schools in the state will be able to come up with equivalents to the required animal science course.

If not, the courses might be offered by N.C. State and A&T during summer sessions, he said.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Use Your Head and Save Your Back

Low back pain seems to be a universal symptom of this modern civilization. It is said that four out of every five Americans will, at some time in their adult life, complain of low back pain.

The variety of causes are many. Arthritis of the spine, sciatica, slipped disk, to name a few, all demand the most intensive study before the exact diagnosis is made.

There is one type of backache that is preventable. Departments of industrial safety in many states issue bulletins listing sensible rules for lifting weight, for, done incorrectly, this is often responsible for injuries to the back muscles and the spine. Here are some important pointers for factory workers and other people whose work involves lifting. It may help prevent this type of back pain.

1. Size up the load. If it seems more than you can easily handle by yourself, get help.
2. If you feel that you can handle the weight alone, face the load, secure a firm footing, with feet properly spread.
3. Bend your knees and get a good grip on the load.
4. Keep a straight back and lift by straightening your legs.
5. Keep the load close to your body, and lift gradually, not suddenly.
6. Don't twist your body.

Superhuman efforts taxed the strength of even the mythological Hercules. The person who seeks to display his prowess by undertaking to lift unreasonable or excessive loads may find himself on his aching back for many days.

Use mechanical devices for very heavy loads, whenever possible. Factories usually supply them. Those that do not, should.

Back injuries can not only be painful, but also can result in weeks, months, sometimes years, of incapacitation.

Use your head and save your back.

I have dry, itchy skin. I remember years ago an oatmeal bath was said to be good for this. I would like to know how one takes this kind of bath. — Mrs. B.R., Ky.

Dear Mrs. R.: The oatmeal bath was once known as the "colloid" bath. It was sometimes suggested to relieve the itching of some skin disorders.

Two cups of oatmeal are placed in a gauze bag that is loosely tied. This is put in boiling water until it thickens. Then, a cup of ordinary baking soda is dissolved in a tub of tepid water.

The oatmeal bag is then swished around in the bath until the water becomes murky. The bag itself can be used as a washcloth to go over the irritated surface of the skin.

I don't know what the scientific explanation is, but there are those who take the oatmeal bath regularly and are sure that this affords them some relief from dryness and itching of the skin.
