Soviet Nuke Submarine Damaged By Fire At Sea

TOKYO (AP) - A Soviet nuclear submarine caught fire in international waters off Okinawa today and at least nine crewmen were killed and three injured, the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency reported.

It warned ships and aircraft to stay clear of the area because of possible radioactive contamination, but first reports, from a patrol plane dispatched to the scene 84 miles east of Okinawa, said no sign of radiation was found.

The fire occurred just before dawn. The submarine had radioed for help but crewmen apparently were unable to get the situation under control fairly quickly.

As the damaged submarine lay virtually dead in the water, in calm seas, a Soviet ship arrived in response to an earlier call for assistance. The vessel, identified as the training ship Meridian, took about 20 crewmen off the sub.

A British ship, the 48,000-ton tanker Gari, was first on the scene in response to distress calls from the sub and stood by throughout the day. A Japanese patrol boat also reached the scene but the submarine's captain refused to allow the Japanese aboard his craft.

One of several Japanese air defense helicopters dispatched to the scene reported about 50 crewmen were on the deck of the sub waving flags.

Photos taken from the aircraft showed some of the crewmen wearing what appeared to be white, ankle-length cloaks and seemingly segregated from the rest.

Japanese and U.S. officials said they could not speculate on the purpose of the clothing or the apparent separation of the crew members. A U.S. Navy source said he knew of no type of similar apparel aboard U.S. nuclear subs.

Officials at the Maritime Safety Agency's headquarters in Okinawa said the submarine was a 1960s-vintage craft of the "Echo I" class.

According to the British publication Jane's Fighting Ships, the sub originally was fitted with missiles but they were removed in recent years. The vessel normally carries a crew of about 100 and is based at the Soviet Siberian port of Vladivostok.

Tripped Up

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon has tripped over its own figures in trying to counter Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan's allegations that the Carter administration has weakened the Navy.

Hours after Reagan spoke to the American Legion convention in Boston Wednesday, the Pentagon issued a statement that obviously replied to Reagan, but did not mention him by name.

"The use of 415 as the number of active ships in the U.S. Navy is... seriously misleading," said the statement issued in Defense Secretary Harold Brown's name. "In fact, today's Navy encompasses over 500 ships. The 415 count deliberately excludes dozens of our most modern vessels: our nuclear-powered surface combatants and submarines," said the statement drafted by Brown's aides.

However, a check of Brown's own annual report to Congress last January shows that he projected an active Navy "general purpose" fleet of 415 ships as of the end of this fiscal year, Sept. 30 - including nuclear-powered attack submarines, atomic carriers and nuclear-propelled cruisers.

Confronted with this, the Pentagon revised its statement to read: "The 415 count deliberately excludes dozens of our most modern vessels, SSBNs (nuclear-powered, missile-firing submarines)."

But even if the 39 Polaris and Poseidon missile submarines are added to the 415 total - and they are always listed separately as part of the nation's strategic striking forces - the number of active fleet Navy ships still reaches only 454. And that is well short of the more than 500 claimed in Brown's statement.

The Pentagon tried to get around this problem by counting in 53 naval reserve ships and 22 civilian-manned support vessels of the Naval Fleet Auxiliary Force. In Brown's January report to Congress, these were listed separately from the active fleet.

When this was pointed out, Pentagon spokesman Thomas Lambert said: "Active ships" is not the same thing as the active fleet.

Lambert then brought into play another term - "our total ship operating force," which he said includes the Naval Reserve and auxiliary vessels.

UN Censures Jerusalem Law

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - With the United States abstaining, the U.N. Security Council censured Israel's new Jerusalem law and called on the 13 nations with embassies in the Holy City to withdraw them.

The council resolution, adopted Wednesday by a 14-0 vote, declared the law was "null and void and must be rescinded."

The council ordered Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to report by Nov. 15 whether Israel obeyed the order, but as expected the Israeli government today rejected the U.N. move. Israel also expressed regret that the United States did not veto the resolution, rather than abstain.

Passage of the resolution "furnished additional proof that the United Nations has been converted into an instrument in the hands of Israel's enemies in their war against her existence and independence," said a statement issued by the Israeli Foreign Ministry today in Jerusalem.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir met with U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis and "expressed Israel's regret" at the American abstention, the Foreign Ministry said.

Referring to Secretary of State Edmund Muskie's statement to the Security Council, Shamir said the speech "contained convincing reasons for the United States to oppose the resolution and not just to abstain."

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum, interviewed on ABC-TV today, said "we were clearly disappointed with the American abstention."

N.C. Board Told Put Anderson On Ballot

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A federal judge today ordered the state Elections Board to place the name of independent candidate John Anderson on the presidential ballot for the November general election.

U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. overturned a ruling by the board that Anderson could not run in North Carolina as an independent candidate. The board had said his participation in the Republican presidential primary disqualified him from running as an independent.

Ordering the state to pay the costs of a suit filed by backers of Anderson to have the name of the Illinois congressman placed on the ballot, Dupree said state law "does not operate to preclude" Anderson from running in the Nov. 4 election.

An appeal is expected in the case, an attorney for the group opposing Anderson said Wednesday before the ruling was handed down.

"We'll be in the 4th Circuit next week, whichever way it goes," said Walter E. Dellinger, a Duke University law professor and one of several lawyers trying to keep Anderson off the ballot.

Dupree heard arguments Wednesday on a motion by Anderson's lawyer asking that he set aside a state Board of Elections ruling and issue an injunction ordering Anderson's name appear on the ballot.

Meanwhile in Fayetteville, another ballot dispute was scheduled to get an airing this afternoon.

U.S. District Court Judge Earl Britt scheduled a hearing on a suit by John P. East, a Republican facing Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan, who is challenging the arrangement of races on the ballot.

Anderson's attorneys turned to federal court this month in a desperate attempt to regain their place on the general election ballot. They went into federal court, rather than state court, by challenging the constitutionality of the state's so-called sore-loser law.

Dupree, interrupting Anderson attorney George T. Frampton repeatedly during arguments Wednesday, noted from the bench that politics and not constitutional issues were at the heart of the dispute.

"This is purely a political matter. They're here because of politics. You're here because of politics," he said to Frampton. "And I'm caught in the middle."

Later, Dupree noted that there was a simpler way to resolve the dispute. He suggested that the Independents for Anderson Party, which the state elections board recognized while barring Anderson himself, find another person named "John A. Anderson" to place on the ballot as their nominee.

"Get the telephone book as quick as you can," he quipped to Frampton.

The state elections board ruled last month that Anderson was ineligible as an independent because he had participated in the May 6 Republican primary - despite having withdrawn two weeks before the voting.

Billy Avers Libya Told He Had No Policy Influence

By JIM ADAMS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Billy Carter testified today that he told Libyans from the start of his dealings with them that he had no influence on U.S. policy and said he never asked his brother, the president, to do anything for Libya.

"Furthermore, the Libyans have not asked me to ask anything of the president or of any representative of the U.S. government," Carter told a special Senate Judiciary investigating subcommittee.

"I never asked my brother to do anything for the benefit of Libya," he said. "I also know that he would not do it even if I had been foolish enough to try, which I wasn't."

Billy Carter also testified that the president never passed any inside information to him, and said he was not tipped off that U.S. intelligence had learned he had received $220,000 from Libya, a radical North African nation.

The president's brother insisted the $220,000 was part of a $500,000 loan from Libya, and not a foreign agents' fee.

The Justice Department concluded it was a fee, not a loan, and required Carter to register as a foreign agent for Libya. And Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate panel, said testimony Wednesday raises "a possibility" that the money indeed was a fee.

Billy Carter said there has been much public attention about what he did with that money. "Quite simply, I used the money to pay my bills and to repay other loans," he said.

In an opening statement, the president's brother appealed to the investigating senators and a national public television audience not to prejudice his character.

"I hope this testimony will show in common-sense fashion that Billy Carter is not a buffoon, a boob or a wacko as some public figures have so described him," he said of himself. "I am a common citizen with uncommon financial and family problems."

Some Dissidents In Poland Seized

By SUSANNE SCHAFER Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland (AP) - The communist government dumped its top labor negotiator today in a new sign that its efforts to contain the widespread worker unrest gripping the Baltic seacoast had stalled.

Informed sources reported, meanwhile, that 16 leading dissidents were rounded up in Warsaw. The sources said the number of workers on strike in the Baltic area had grown despite the government's mediation efforts and that about 130,000 workers were taking part in the mass walkout, now in its eighth day.

State radio announced today that Deputy Premier Tadeusz Pyka had been replaced as chairman of a special commission dispatched here last weekend to negotiate with workers after they began walking off their jobs at the V.I. Lenin Shipyards and other enterprises. No explanation was given for the change.

Despite Pyka's efforts, sources in this Baltic port said more than 300 factories and plants in the area had now been shut down by the strike.

Pyka, a longtime ally of Communist Party leader Edward Gierek, was replaced by senior Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, a longtime Politburo member who is considered the most liberal and influential of Poland's five deputy premiers. Pyka was a relative newcomer to the party's inner circle and a junior man among Poland's deputy premiers.

The commission had been seeking to negotiate with individual strike committees rather than a central organization established by militants at the Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk.

Gdansk radio had reported negotiations were under way with committees that had apparently split with the Lenin Shipyards group. But Pyka's removal appeared to indicate the commission's strategy of undermining worker unity was failing.

Meanwhile, "extremely serious" conditions and widespread disruption were reported in the Polish city of Szczecin today as the communist nation's worst crisis in 10 years went into its second week.

The mayor of Szczecin, a port and industrial city of 400,000 people on the East German border, reported "the life of all families is disorganized; municipal transport is not functioning; normal functioning of hospitals, shops and fundamental services have all been disrupted, and people are still buying food in vast quantities."

With 20,000 workers reported on strike in Szczecin two days ago, the local radio station said Wednesday and again today that workers in the steel and paper mills and other industries were joining the walkout. The broadcast said the strike had spread to a paper mill in Kozno and an auto equipment plant.

Gdansk Radio reported food supplies here were running low.

The strike wave began last Thursday in Gdansk with workers demanding higher pay to offset increased meat prices, free trade unions and other political reforms. The government claimed Wednesday that the movement in Gdansk-Gdynia-Sopot industrial area was beginning to splinter. It said 47 strike committees contacted local officials and reached agreement with them on some of the issues.

No. 63 LID SOURCE?

My mother has a giant supply of old peanut butter and coffee jars that would be perfectly useful for canning - if she had the lids to fit them. She has kept them because she remembers when she could get No. 63 canning lids. I have checked all the supermarkets, hardware stores and kitchen speciality stores in the Greenville area, but they carry only widemouth and regular lids. Is there a retailer or any individual who would like to sell me 10 dozen? F. R.

Hotline checked first with the Laurens Glass Company in Henderson for leads. We were referred then to a toll-free number of the Laurens Company in Laurens, S. C. Don Reavis there gave us the names of two suppliers in Charlotte and from them we got a third. All three companies said they sell screw-top lids for 63-millimeter (No. 63) jars, but not the separate lids and rings that would be suitable for canning. Also each has a minimum order. The smallest minimum, $50, is required by Smith Container, Box 3844, Charlotte, N. C. 28203; phone, 704-523-0203. The company is sending a catalog which Hotline will pass on to you.

A woman we talked to at one of these companies said that she, too, remembers the No. 63 lids, so perhaps some of our readers do, too, and will have leads. If so, we will follow them up and report a source for what would seem to be a very saleable item.

Denies 'Race'

BOSTON (AP) - President Carter, turning aside Republican rival Ronald Reagan's assertion that a nuclear arms race with the Soviet Union is upon the nation, declared today that the United States would "compete successfully" if the race occurred but that would it be "totally irresponsible" to initiate it.

Speaking to the American Legion's national convention a day after an appearance by Reagan, Carter also took issue with the former California governor's accusation that the United States has become No. 2 in military strength under his administration.

"It should be clear that our work to keep America the strongest nation in the world is not finished," the president said in his prepared text. "There are no laurels on which to rest, no victories that are final, no challenges that have disappeared."

But he added that a "firm and steady course of diplomacy and defense preparedness" is his administration's aim.

Making his first post-convention campaign trip, Carter was to receive a brief greeting at Boston's Logan International Airport from his defeated Democratic rival, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Air Piracy Halted By Security Steps

MIAMI (AP) - Increased scrutiny of passengers on the ground and teams of sky marshals in the air seem to have halted the wave of air piracy that diverted six U.S. planes to Cuba last week, federal authorities say.

There have been no successful hijackings since Saturday's one-day record of three unscheduled Cuba trips, and there have been at least three foiled attempts in the past five days, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker said Wednesday.

Deputies reported that a lemon juice bottle full of gasoline was discovered in a Key West International Airport bathroom Sunday, while people carrying gasoline bottles allegedly intended for use as weapons were arrested in airports here and in Tampa over the weekend.

Since last week's hijackings, armed marshals have been put on randomly selected airplanes and airport personnel revived "behavioral profiles," guidelines of how to spot potential hijackers. Both measures were all but discarded in 1973 after improved security and metal detectors seemed to end air piracy.

"With the cooperation of the air carriers, we are having success. The combination of air marshals and increased security on the ground is keeping potential hijackers from getting on the plane," Hector Gonzalez, one of the armed federal sky marshals, told a news conference at Miami International Airport.

Gonzalez, from Washington, was the first air marshal to talk publicly about his role. He said sky marshals work in teams - he wouldn't say how many people per flight.

State Law Brakes A Pyramid Scheme

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Attorney General's office has put a stop to "Challenge to America," a sales scheme involving Glenn W. Turner, saying the scheme violates North Carolina's anti-pyramid laws.
 "We gave them three choices," Alan S. Hirsch, an attorney in the state's consumer protection division, said Wednesday. "We told them they could either change their program to remove any possibility of pyramiding, go out of business or be sued."
 Officials of the scheme agreed late Tuesday to halt all sales of their motivational materials, which are modeled after Turner's "Dare To Be Great" scheme, Hirsch said.

The Challenge program offers motivational materials, including tapes and brochures, to teach participants how to get rich as salesmen.
 Under North Carolina law, it is illegal to establish, promote, operate or participate in a pyramid scheme.
 During the past two weeks, Hirsch said, anti-pyramid suits have been filed in Florida and California seeking to halt the Nevada-based Challenge program.
 Turner built "Dare To Be Great" into a multi-million dollar conglomerate by requiring potential salesmen to pay $300 to $5,000 for course materials the right to sell the merchandising idea to others.

Soviet 'Jamming' VOA Broadcasts

MOSCOW (AP) — Heavy interference, sounding like buzz-saws and garbled voices, drowned out American radio broadcasts to the Soviet Union for a second day today raising speculation the Kremlin was trying to silence Russian-language reports of the widespread strikes in neighboring Poland.
 The Voice of America accused Soviet authorities of jamming its Russian-language short-wave broadcasts for the first time in seven years.
 A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman denied the VOA claim, declaring that "like previous ones, it is an invention." But an official at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow said monitoring by the embassy showed the broadcasts were being "heavily jammed."
 "We do not know why the Soviets have taken this unfortunate step backward or whether this action will be temporary or long-lived," said a State Department spokesman in Washington.
 In London, the British

Broadcasting Corp. said its Russian-language programs to the Soviet Union were also being jammed for the first time since 1973. West German officials said their country's Russian-language broadcasts were being jammed for the first time since 1968.
 Soviet officials said the denial that VOA was being jammed also applied to BBC and West German claims.
 A BBC spokesman said two other times the Soviets jammed its Russian-language broadcasts were in 1968, before the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, and in 1956, before the invasion of Hungary.

 While many observers speculated that the latest jamming was linked to current labor strife in Poland, some analysts said it could be for other reasons, including the general deterioration of East-West relations.
 The broadcasts from America, Britain and West Germany are believed to have a Soviet audience numbering in the millions. Many Soviet citizens openly admit they listen to the foreign broadcasts, which provide a counterpoint to heavily-censored and propagandized Soviet government broadcasts. The foreign transmissions are regularly denounced in the Soviet press.
 For years, the Soviet Union has jammed broadcasts from other Western stations, including the U.S.-funded Radio Liberty and the Israeli state radio, but has never acknowledged the practice.
 Voice of America's worldwide English-language service, which has less emphasis on Soviet and communist affairs, appeared not to be jammed in the Soviet Union. But VOA said its Ukrainian and Armenian-language broadcasts were being blocked along with its Russian service.

Dear Abby

Wedding Feast Explanation

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the reader who was surprised and disgusted to receive an invitation to a "potluck wedding feast."

The bride and groom were no doubt members of the Society of Friends (i.e. Quakers).

Among Quakers, the potluck wedding feast is traditional, and it would be bad form for Quakers to serve a catered wedding dinner such as one finds at a mainline Protestant wedding.

Of course, it's also possible that these folks are just cheapskates — not Quakers.

A QUAKER IN MAINE

DEAR QUAKER: This Quaker tradition is news to me, as I'm sure it will be to my disgusted correspondent — plus a few million other readers.

Quakers who invite a non-Quaker to a "potluck wedding feast" should explain that it's an old Quaker custom, lest the guest thinks this "Friend" is a cheapskate.

DEAR ABBY: Our 20-year-old daughter is living at home again after three unsuccessful attempts at apartment living. She works, but pays us no rent. She's been dating a young man for a short period of time and goes out with him once a week. She stays all night at his apartment, comes home in the morning, changes her clothes and goes to work.

This is upsetting my husband and me. We've told her so, but she says she is doing no wrong because she "loves" him. She also says she has to live her own life, and if we don't get off her back she will move out and we'll never see her again.

We are afraid that this direction she has taken will hurt her. How can he love her if he sees her only once a week, and then just for a sleep-over date? If this relationship doesn't lead to marriage, and she thinks she "loves" another one, and another one, and still another, what kind of person will she become?

Abby, it's so hard for us to accept this and be quiet, yet we don't want to lose our daughter. What should we do?

UPSET PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Tell her that as long as she lives under your roof, she'll have to abide by your rules, which do not include sleeping out. If she wants to move, you can't stop her, but I doubt if she will because she's not financially able to hack it alone.

DEAR ABBY: Recently the director of the ballet company of which presidential candidate Ronald Reagan's son is a member felt compelled to issue a statement to the press that the younger Reagan and all the other male members of the troupe were "straight" and had "nice girlfriends." It is a sad commentary on our society's attitude toward human sexuality that such a statement was made at all.

Implicit in that announcement were the following erroneous assumptions: 1) That male participation in ballet requires lengthy justification lest it threaten our traditional view of masculinity and femininity; 2) that all male ballet dancers are suspect and therefore proof of their masculinity is required — i.e., having girlfriends; 3) that without proof of their manliness, people might think they were gay; and 4) that being gay is bad.

Do you have any additional observations on the above?

Economics Affects Vote

Just as President Carter moves up in the polls, reports of higher interest rates and a sharp drop in the economy for the quarter come out to plague him.

The higher interest rates sent the stock market plunging Monday. The economy dropped at the rate of nine percent for the quarter, April through June.

But in a poll taken by the Associated Press-NBC News President Carter had pulled up to within seven percentage points of Ronald Reagan — Carter 32 percent and Reagan 39 percent. Even more heartening — to the administration — was the showing of independent candidate John Anderson with 13 percent. Anderson is figured to take more votes from the president than from Reagan.

Both the polls and the economic figures will change many times prior to the November election, and the voters may well vote their economic feelings on election day.

Full Information Is Needed

Apparently we can put one more scare behind us as the government decides to end its plans for banning sodium nitrite as a preservative used in cured meats.

It turned out the evidence wasn't there that the substance causes cancer.

It has happened before that government agencies have moved too quickly in banning substances based on incomplete information. If the government is going to be scientific about its bans, it must make accurate determinations before it makes, or threatens to make, such moves.

THIS AFTERNOON Coastline Change

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The abrupt and violent volcanic convulsions of Mt. Saint Helens captured the attention of the world, but North Carolina's skinny barrier island coastline is changing in dynamic ways as well.

The difference: change is slow and hardly noticeable at this time.

That could change abruptly in a major storm if a "blowout" should occur as tons of water piled across the islands into the sounds and then seek a path through which to return to the ocean.

The most logical path for that destructive force would be low-lying Nags Head. That community occupies a narrow and unprotected strip of land with the expanse of Albemarle Sound aimed like an arrow at its backside.

A group of marine scientists who have trekked the sands of the Outer Banks for years have joined battle with the federal government over man-made changes which they fear will serve to intensify, possibly even create, future natural disaster.

a new inlet formed somewhere else to let the water escape.

Pilkey and five other marine experts from various universities have written the Army Corps of Engineers opposing the jetty project. The inlet should be maintained through dredging and channeling instead, they argue.

Few people realize the dynamics of the fragile sand islands which comprise the North Carolina coastline.

BILL NOBLITT

Moving
Oregon Inlet is shifting about and filling with sand. That is a natural condition. Since the mid-1800s, the inlet has moved two miles southward.

Now the federal government proposes to move ahead with a $75 million jetty construction project in which ramparts would extend into the ocean on both ends of the inlet to keep it from moving and open for shipping.

Orrin Pilkey, marine geologist at Duke University (one of several scientists opposing the project) says this action would restrict the natural flow of storm waters, in effect, plugging the hole through which millions of tons of water would normally return to the sea.

Probable results, says Pilkey: destruction of the endangered Bonner Bridge connecting Pamlico Sound and the ocean, as the weakened structure could not withstand the pounding; and Early settlers realized that the ocean would from time to time wash across the islands in a storm, nibbling away at the beach and dunes, while depositing sand in the sounds. Early homes were built facing the sounds and not the ocean.

The Dunes
Another federal project changed that. During the Depression of the 1930s the Civilian Conservation Corps used sand fences and beach grasses to stabilize and enlarge the dunes in a continuous mound from Currituck to Ocracoke, says Stan Riggs of East Carolina University.

The ocean could not wash across and people began building along the beach. But dunes are dynamic — moving and shifting and vulnerable to high waves.

The ocean front continues to erode. Meanwhile, without sand deposits on the backside to build up the sound shoreline, that section is badly eroding, as well. "The barrier islands are becoming very skinny in places," says Riggs.

And so the stage is set as viewers fully expect the collapse of the Bonner Bridge: the destruction of Cape Lookout lighthouse; the moving and closing of inlets; and possibly, during a storm not even rated as a hurricane, an explosion of seawater through a settled community, pitting destructive forces of tremendous power against that which man has put in its path.

Other Editors Say Helping Gifted

(Laurinburg Exchange)
The pendulum in public education, and private, too, for that matter, seems to be swinging back toward helping the gifted child.

For years school systems have seen it as their sacred duty to raise the eyes of the illiterate to the light of the written word — an honorable mission, to say the least.

Unfortunately it is a goal that has never been fully accomplished, and because of complex social and economic factors never will be. Most North Carolina school systems have shown a willingness to accommodate themselves to all students, regardless of their disabilities, and in some cases, conflicting work schedules.

But this policy of providing can only go so far. Like the horse owner who can only lead his animal to water, school officials cannot force students to learn if they do not want to. The assumption that formal education can be made palatable to every student if just the right inducement is found, is at the worst, nonsense; and at the best, a waste of time and money.

It's good to see efforts now being turned in the opposite direction — of providing special programs for the gifted and those eager to take advantage of their educational opportunities.

A good example is the Governor's School program. The eastern half of that program, located at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, didn't make the headlines this third year like it did when it was established in 1978. But the fact that it has been continued, and the news that a third governor's school is being considered, are signs that money is also being spent to promote our most promising students.

State school officials should be careful that the pendulum does not carry too far in the direction of the gifted and talented. Losing sight of the ideal of providing a free and equal education to all would be an even worse transgression.

Balancing the two sides, as it seems to be being done now, is the best way.

Strength For Today

A TIGHT REIN
In the old days when the West was young and wild, there was an old stage driver who was reputed never to have hurt a passenger or a horse even though he drove over some of the most dangerous roads in the Rocky Mountain area. He always claimed that the reason he never had an accident was that he had a firm hold on the reins. He insisted that trouble started when drivers allowed their teams to get the least bit out of hand.

All of us hold in our hands certain reins which control tendencies, capacities, impulses appetites and passions in our natures. Under certain conditions these passions can become as fierce as wild horses. The secret for us is simply never to let these emotional forces get a start. Horseback riders know that both they and the horses are liable to land in trouble when the reins are slack.

Sound religion and psychology counsel us to keep our emotional and spiritual lives in balance and health by keeping a firm hold on our impulses. — Elisha Douglass

A VERY IMPORTANT SECOND OPINION!

Solar Plans In Shadow

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter climbed on the White House roof one day last summer and became the first president to dedicate a water heater.

He also announced a new government program to promote solar power.

A year later, the solar water heater is working fine, but supporters of solar power are wondering what happened to much of the new program.

On the roof that day, Carter set a national goal: By the year 2000, he said, the sun and other renewable energy sources should provide a fifth of the nation's energy needs.

"We are making a commitment to as important a goal as we can set for our nation," Carter said.

But two recent reports from Congress' General Accounting Office and the Office of Technology Assessment label Energy Department solar efforts confused and mismanaged and say the administration still hasn't come up with a plan for reaching the 20 percent target.

The administration also scaled back its budget commitment as solar power took a back seat to demands from the oil and coal industries for a gigantic synthetic fuels program.

Supporters still insist the future for sun power is bright. Yet heat from the sun doesn't contribute even 1 percent of America's energy. The government estimates only 60,000 homes have solar water heaters or solar space heaters.

But when energy people talk of solar power they include an array of renewable resources with ties to the sun — wind power, water power, ocean currents, firewood and other vegetable matter — termed "biomass."

Of those, only wood burning and power from hydroelectric dams account for any significant part of U.S. energy — about 6 percent last year.

To meet the 20 percent goal, here is what the Energy Department believes will happen in the next 20 years:

SOLAR — Compared to today's 60,000 sun-using homes, 47 million homes will have solar collectors to heat water and rooms.

Two million homes will have photovoltaic cells — silicon disks developed for the space program that convert sunlight into electricity.

About 50 utilities will be using devices similar to a $123 million "power tower" being constructed in Barstow, Calif. The tower, composed of 1,400 mirrors, will channel sunlight to boil water and run generators.

These will produce 5 percent of the nation's energy demand.

BIOMASS — This covers everything from producing gasohol from corn crops to turning garbage into fuel. Many experts believe this will be the area of most growth.

Use of woodburning stoves is expected to grow from 3 million homes to 11 million in 10 years.

Gasohol — 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol produced from grain — would supply 13 percent of the country's gasoline in 2000, replacing 1.5 million barrels of oil daily. The country currently imports 6 million barrels daily.

Plants would turn a portion of the 50 million tons of manure from farms into synthetic gas.

All biomass fuels would grow from the 2 percent of energy they supply now to 8 percent in 10 years.

WIND — The handful of giant wind propellers in pilot

Old Quotes Don't Apply

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — Amidst cheers of delegates, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's masterful political address to the Democratic National Convention reached back more than 14 years to an obscure one-liner in a speech by Ronald Reagan in California's Central Valley to pursue a strategy that generates maximum optimism now but threatens maximum peril later for President Carter's re-election.

Kennedy aroused his first great cheer in the convention's emotional peak by quoting the Republican presidential nominee as saying: "Unemployment insurance is a prepaid vacation for freeloaders." The delegates roared when Kennedy added: "And that nominee is no friend of labor."

Students of Reagan could not remember that as one of his stock one-liners. In fact, Kennedy's researchers found it in a speech to a Fresno, Calif., Republican dinner on April 13, 1966, nearly two months before his nomination for governor of California. There is no record the statement was repeated, and it does not represent Reagan's policy.

The Fresno discovery by Kennedy's researchers began a list of Reagan quotations read by the senator, not so hoary as the unemployment insurance statement but almost equally obscure and startling. Although Kennedy's speech read Carter's economic policy out of the party platform, its most pleasurable parts for the delegates were six paragraphs of assault on Reagan. That delighted the Carter camp; it fit their own tactics perfectly.

Roughing up Reagan is the beginning, middle and end of Carter's strategy — a situation perilous for the president if Reagan proves as imperious this time as he has to attacks in past campaigns. Since Carter has no economic plan with mass appeal, the only alternative to help from some unpredictable foreign crisis is remorseless attack on Reagan. Thus, Carter's acceptance speech hammered away at his opponent in an unprecedented fashion for an incumbent president.

Buttressing this strategy are Carter polster Pat Caddell's latest surveys, which lifted the hearts of the president's team this week. While indicating no significant gain in Reagan-Carter trial heats, Caddell's polls show "surprising" public perception of Reagan as a right-wing extremist and rate him significantly lower than Carter when voters are asked of both: "Does he care about me?"

This led to near-euphoria in the Carter command trailer among presidential operatives who view Reagan as a helpless target burdened by a lifetime of incessant talking. But less than 100 feet away on the floor of Madison Square Garden, delegates were not so optimistic.

"I'm afraid these fellows think of Reagan as another Goldwater," one important Midwestern Carter supporter told us. "I think they're badly mistaken." The pessimism over November pervading the delegates stems from doubts about the assault on Reagan as a viable substitute for a driving new idea.

The pitfalls became evident Thursday night when Carter flamed his own acceptance speech by obsessive returns to attacks on Reagan. He did not approach the stridency of Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who called the Republican nominee simply "Reagan" — no Ronald, no mister, no governor — in the convention speech. "Reagan has a tendency to believe he can shoot his way to peace," Mondale told a news conference. Addressing the Democratic National Committee Friday, Carter asked rhetorically: "Will my son die in war?"

The basic theme of assaulting Reagan as a warmonger runs the constant risk of alienating the voter with language such as Mondale's. But in addition to stridency lies the danger of irrelevancy.

The Fresno quote found by Kennedy's diligent researchers were overlooked even by Gerald Ford's tough anti-Reagan campaign in 1976. Reagan's stance against unemployment insurance, plus the quote associating the New Deal with fascism (cited by Mondale as well as Kennedy) and the call for voluntary Social Security, share a common defect: They are not Reagan's established policy, now or previously. He can be accused of silly exaggeration and occasional fatuousness. But this is not the stuff of a broad-based campaign.

Herein lies the inherent danger of a treasure hunt into musty clippings and tape recordings to find skeletons in Reagan's rhetorical closet: the prizes seldom have much to do with current issues.

As Carter declared in his acceptance speech, there are fundamental differences between him and Reagan on foreign policy, defense, taxation, government regulation and the environment. But because they think it will work and because their record proves they like to campaign that way, Jimmy Carter and his men — perhaps to their own peril — will concentrate on painting Ronald Reagan as a missile-brandishing ignoramus.

Look For Reasons Not To Lend

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Executives of small companies, family concerns and other closely-held business operations know that when times get tough and money gets tight, bankers look for reasons not to lend them money.

That list can be long, inclusive and even inventive, because if a bank doesn't want to lend it simply doesn't. It is hard to turn down General Motors; it is quite easy to deny funds to Smith's Machine Shop.

Still, says Sy Jones, it pays for a smaller company to know and avoid the red flags. And so he compiled a list for clients of his company, Coopers & Lybrand, the big accounting firm.

—1. Large growth in sales volume with little, if any, bottomline growth.

"The typical entrepreneur is market oriented," says Jones, who heads the firm's Emerging Business Services Group. "Only infrequently is he a financial person."

Because of the entrepreneur's peculiar mental set, said Jones, "he tends to seek bigger and bigger sales, hoping that the bottom line also will rise. He often gets caught in a liquidity squeeze."

—2. Inventory expanding at a faster pace than sales.

Sir 11 businesses often are run by venturers who accept risk, that larger companies would avoid, says Jones. Some think the worst thing possible is to lose a sale because an item wasn't in stock.

The result: As business declines, inventories swell. Says Jones: "Inventory is the most difficult asset to manage, and among the most difficult to audit." Needless big inventories are flapping flags.

—3. Accounting controls not considered very important by management; control that are in place appear to have a high potential for management override.

Too often, says Jones, smaller businesses are run by people who rely on gut feelings. It's dangerous, he says. They should have automatic, built-in warning systems. Lenders feel more confident with them.

—4. Hanging on to an outdated inventory with the forlorn hope of selling it some day.

—5. Lack of inventory records. "Without these records or a physical inventory, the owner, at best, can only estimate what is on hand and its value," says Jones. "Some don't know how they're doing until the end of the year."

—6. Poor inventory turnover.

"In addition to items going stale, the carrying charges can be staggering at today's interest costs," says Jones. More companies are using computers, he concedes, but for billing rather than inventory.

—7. Company is highly leveraged, thinly capitalized. Unfortunately, this is sometimes a necessary condition when a venture is starting up. However, to the lender it is a hurricane flag if the leveraging isn't accompanied by a healthy stream of profits.

—8. Viability of company rests on one person or a small group.

The situation is common, says Jones, in companies that have grown very fast in a short time, without a chance for developing and training middle managers.

—9. Lack of management tools needed to analyze sales by customer, product, product line and plant profitability. Management style apt to be informal.

"When a company has reached a certain size the owner is surprised that systems and procedures that have been serving him adequately have lost their effectiveness," says Jones. It makes lenders wary.

—10. Management not always open in discussing matters with its bank or in making the most effective use of its auditors or other advisers.

A very bad sign, says Jones, who believes that a sound company "goes with its professionals," meaning that it discusses and listens to accountants, bankers and others who possess special knowledge.

"If you come to a bank in advance of problems you often can work them out," he says. But if you wait until a crisis has developed you can hurt yourself and the banker too. It puts him on the spot, says Jones.

—11. No monthly or quarterly financial statements; annual reports not available until several months after year-end.

"Timely financials of one kind or another are among the first things lenders look for, initially and on a continuing basis," he says. "Without statements, it is very hard to get money."

To which you might add another observation, one that can be verified by small-business people: Statements or not, in times like these it is often hard to get money — unless your company doesn't need it

Testifies Against Her Father In Moonie Suit

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer
CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — For five years, Don Kieffer has been fighting to see his daughter. His wish came true in U.S. District Court here — but she was testifying against him in a $1 million suit he filed against the Unification Church.

Kieffer's civil suit contends the church recruited his adopted daughter, now 21, when she was a minor, exercised "mind control methods" over her and "wrongfully deprived him of his natural parental right."

Jana Kieffer's court appearance Tuesday and Wednesday satisfied one of his goals: "to bring her into court and see if she's all right."

But she disputed his claims. "I don't think brainwashing goes on... You can't control somebody's mind. That's ridiculous," she told Judge Shane Devine.

She said she still is a member of the church founded by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, a Korean industrialist and evangelist, and its affiliate, Collegiate Association for the Research of Principals.

Miss Kieffer left her New Hampshire home in June 1975, joining her divorced mother at the Unification Church seminary in Barrytown, N.Y.

Gloria Kieffer had joined the church after she was divorced in 1973 from Kieffer, who won custody of their four children, including Jana and another child from her previous marriage whom he had adopted in 1962.

Miss Kieffer said her mother introduced her to the church and she joined because "I just felt very insecure living where I was. I just didn't see anything happening to my life that I could look forward to."

Kieffer refused his daughter permission to join the church, but he was "totally unaware of how to retrieve her. I tried to keep it as a family matter, tried to resolve it by writing to her and phoning her. But she seemed to be quite hostile to me."

When he tried to visit her in August 1975, he was told she wasn't there.

"In early 1977, I met my first ex-Moonie and she just stood my hair on end with the story of what had happened to her," Kieffer said. Legal action began that year after his ex-wife, then remarried, moved to Manchester and tried to contact his two younger children, Kieffer said.

Fearing she would try to bring the other children into the church, Kieffer sought to cancel his ex-wife's visitation rights and have his daughter produced in court.

The visitation rights were canceled in late 1977, but the Hillsboro County Superior Court said it could not compel the church to produce Miss Kieffer.

After amending his suit to seek damages against the church, the trial opened here this summer.

So far, ex-members of the church, a psychiatrist, and Kieffer's ex-wife have testified, and the trial is expected to last through the week.

Asked about seeing her relatives for the first time in five years, Miss Kieffer said, "The whole thing is just very upsetting."

projects would increase to as many as 25,000, producing electricity to meet 4 percent of demand.

WATER POWER — Many of the 50,000 small dams now idle will be fitted with generators to boost hydroelectric output 20 percent. A few small plants will generate electricity from ocean currents.

While the Energy Department doesn't expect its predictions to be exact, officials believe overall goals will be met, citing an Office of Technology Assessment report that puts the potential for biomass fuels at 20 percent in 2000 instead of the 8 percent DOE predicts.

"We didn't get the 20 percent figure by pushing every solar option to the limit. Some of our projections are relatively conservative," says Dr. Thomas Stelson, assistant secretary of energy for the solar program. "With the rising oil prices, we are much more optimistic about the future than a year ago."

Energy officials measure whether innovations pay off by comparing the cost of the energy they produce with the cost of an equivalent amount produced by a barrel of oil.

With foreign oil at $32 a barrel, solar looks good. Oil would have to sell for $12 to $25 per barrel to be as good a buy as many solar technologies.

That compares with an estimate of between $32 and $40 a barrel for synthetic fuels from coal and shale.

Those figures did little to slow the synthetic fuels bandwagon, pushed by the administration. Congress agreed to spend $20 billion over the next five years and up to $88 billion by 1992 on "synfuels" — making the program the country's most expensive energy effort.

The program irked solar advocates, who say Carter's budget does not match his solar rhetoric. Carter cut his proposed solar research budget 3 percent.

Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., a solar proponent, called Carter's 20 percent solar goal "a sham and illusion."

In a memo establishing priorities for the next five years, Energy Secretary Charles Duncan indicated various renewable resource programs would receive 8 percent of the budget, compared to 19 percent for fossil fuels and 24 percent for nuclear research.

One Energy Department source said those figures reflect the clout of oil, coal and nuclear groups. "If you are at the top of a mound of activity you tend to focus your attention on the things that can cause you the most trouble," he said, asking anonymity. "The oil, coal and nuclear industries can cause trouble. The solar industry couldn't cause Secretary Duncan to blow his nose."

Superman Idle As Spidey Taken

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Spiderman's been kidnapped, and Superman just stood idly by and watched without lifting a finger.

The bizarre episode happened when an 8-foot-tall wood cutout of Spiderman, the comic book hero, was stolen from Collector's Corner, a store in downtown Birmingham that sells rare comic books.

While Spiderman was abducted, a similar cutout of Superman was left untouched, store owner Steve Pennington told police.

Pennington has posted a $50 reward for Spiderman's safe return, "no questions asked."

Pennington and co-owner Monte Brakefield said they spent several hundred dollars on their Spiderman and are downcast over his disappearance.

"He and Superman are absolutely the mascots of our store," said Pennington. "We won't prosecute. Spiderman may not forget it, but we're willing to."

Raleigh Fined In Big Fish Kill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The city of Raleigh has been fined $35,607 by the state for a fish kill in early July that destroyed more than 35,000 small fish and about 3.5 tons of larger fish.

Most of the fine will be used to cover the cost of replacing the fish and for cleaning operations along the river.

Competition For Your Money Is Growing Fiercer

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The competition for your money is getting fiercer.

The lines that separate different types of financial institutions are blurring. Banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions are offering new services to try to attract billions of dollars from American consumers.

Deregulation is coming to the banking industry, just as it has come to the airline business. The result — just as in the airline business — will be bargains for some, higher prices for others and confusion for many.

"What the consumer has to do is shop around," said Curt Prins, staff director of the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee of the House Banking Committee. Prins said "lazy consumers" are part of the reason some bank fees are rising. "There are 14,000 or so banks. If enough people would switch (from high-priced banks), the fees would go down or disappear."

A deregulation bill passed by Congress in March will spur the spread of interest-bearing checking accounts. It will end ceilings on passbook savings accounts and will allow savings and loan associations to offer things like credit cards and consumer loans.

There are three major types of financial institutions in the battle for your money: commercial banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions.

Commercial banks handle financial transactions for both businesses and individuals. There are nearly 14,500 commercial banks, about two-thirds of which are chartered by individual states and one-third of which are chartered by the federal government. They have assets of over $1 trillion. As of June 1975, commercial banks chartered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Co. had 276.5 million accounts of all kinds. (The 1975 figures are the latest available; the FDIC is in the process of updating its statistics.) Until recently, if you wanted a checking account, you had to go to a commercial bank.

Savings and loan associations are known for home mortgage loans. They traditionally have been allowed to pay slightly higher interest rates than commercial banks, but have been limited in the types of services they could offer. As of the end of 1979, there were 4,709 savings and loan associations with assets of about $579 billion and just over 90 million accounts. Savings and loan associations in New England started offering interest-bearing checking accounts known as NOW accounts on an experimental basis eight years ago and the accounts spread to New York and New Jersey. Beginning next January, all savings and loan associations — as well as commercial banks — will be able to offer NOW accounts.

Credit unions are non-profit membership organizations. The members must have a common bond, such as employment. In the past, credit unions dealt mainly with savings accounts and small loans, but they have expanded in recent years and some now grant mortgage loans, handle financial planning, etc. There are over 20,000 credit unions with 43 million members and assets of over $60 billion. In 1974, credit unions started offering share drafts — also a kind of interest-bearing checking. Legal challenges delayed the expansion of the share drafts, but the spring deregulation bill insured their continuation.

There are several factors to consider when deciding where to put your money.

How much interest can you get on your deposits? How much will you be charged for each transaction? The figures may seem complicated, but it is often worth while to wade through them. Here are some of the details:

Existing NOW accounts pay 5 percent interest. Regulators are still considering what interest rate to allow on the NOW accounts that will come into being in January, but it is expected to be in the range of 5 percent. Credit union share drafts pay an interest rate of about 6 percent, depending on the individual organization.

Before you put your money in an interest-bearing checking account, however, check the cost. Most commercial banks and some savings and loans are expected to set substantial fees for small accounts. If you do not maintain a minimum balance of, say, $1,500 or more, you may be required to pay a monthly service charge, plus a fee for each check. You might be better off with a combination of a lower-priced checking account that does not pay interest and a passbook savings or time-deposit account.

Passbook savings and time deposits are two of the major ways to save. Passbook accounts pay a relatively low rate of interest, but generally allow you to take your money out whenever you want. Time deposits pay more interests, but you must leave your money in the account for a fixed period.

Passbook savings accounts currently earn a maximum of 5.5 percent in savings and loan associations and a maximum of 5.25 percent in commercial banks. Those ceilings will be eliminated in 1986 under the deregulation bill. In the interim, the legislation encourages — but does not require — a special board of federal regulators to increase maximum interest rates on passbook accounts by 2.25 percentage points. Federally chartered credit unions pay a maximum of 7 percent interest on passbook-type savings; most state-chartered credit unions also are allowed to offer up to 7 percent.

Rates on time-deposits — including the popular $10,000, six-month certificate and the 2½-year certificate — are linked to rates the U.S. Treasury Department pays on the certificates it issues.

The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee, set up by Congress to oversee the deregulation process, ruled in May that thrift associations like savings and loans can pay the same rate as the Treasury Department does for 2½-year certificates, up to a maximum of 12 percent. Banks can pay one-quarter of a percentage point less than the Treasury rate, up to a maximum of 11.75 percent. The thrifts are allowed to pay 9.5 percent interest on the certificates and banks are allowed to pay 9.25 percent, even if the rates for Treasury securities go below that level.

Rates for six-month certificates are set just below rates on six-month Treasury bills. Thrift institutions can pay one-quarter of a percentage point more than commercial banks as long as the rate on six-month Treasury bills is between 7.5 percent and 8.5 percent. Above and below those limits, the differential disappears.

No matter where you put your money, you will have to pay for what you get. William B. O'Connell, executive vice president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, warned: "Our institutions and the commercial banks are very, very cost-conscious — much more than they've been in the past. There are fewer financial institutions that provide free services..."

Prins tells the story of a man who has been writing to the House Banking Committee, once a month, complaining about his bank. Finally, said Prins, he was asked why, if he was so dissatisfied, he didn't change banks. The man said he had had his account in the same place for 25 years. He was too lazy to change. Too lazy to save money.

Record Farm Exports Are Seen By U.S.

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm exports, led by massive shipments of grain and soybeans, are expected to be worth a record of $40 billion this fiscal year, a 25 percent jump from $32 billion in 1978-79.

Further, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday, exports in the new year that will begin on Oct. 1 "may reach $40 billion to $45 billion."

For 11 consecutive years, farm exports have set annual records and have provided ample margins between those and imports of agricultural products.

This year's imports, as an example, are expected to be valued at about $17.5 billion, meaning an agricultural trade balance of around $22.5 billion. That would be a 42 percent increase from $15.8 billion in 1978-79.

In its previous forecast issued in May, the agency said 1979-80 exports were expected to be worth about $38 billion. Higher prices for some commodities and an increase in tonnage accounted for the $2 billion boost.

Also, three months ago imports were projected at $18.7 billion, pointing to a trade balance of $19.3 billion.

Dewain Rahe of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said the downward revision in import values was due mainly to "less sugar being imported than we were anticipating" last May.

Looking at export possibilities in 1980-81, analysts said a number of factors will bear on the situation in the coming year:

—Weather developments that will heavily influence not only the northern hemisphere crops that are now maturing but also the yet-unplanted crops in the southern hemisphere.

—Reduced supplies of grain available for export in some other major exporting countries, including Canada, Argentina and Australia.

—A 1 to 2 percent increase in livestock production among countries that buy U.S. feed grains, requiring them to import larger quantities.

—Slow economic growth in most major foreign markets that may limit their growth in demand for U.S. commodities for most of 1980-81.

—Relatively little growth in agricultural production in the lower-income developing countries.

Also, the report noted, prospects for U.S. harvests this year of cotton, corn and other feed grains have declined sharply because of drought from 1979 levels, pointing to "relatively tight" supplies in the coming year.

The actual volume of U.S. farm exports this year was estimated at 162.1 million metric tons, up 18 percent from 137.5 million shipped to foreign buyers in 1978-79. In May, the forecast was 158.4 million metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and, as an example, is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

Officials noted a "continued record pace of grain, soybean and cotton shipments" this summer and prospects of those continuing for the balance of the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Grain and feed exports were estimated at a value of $18.3 billion this year, making up about 46 percent of the $40 billion total. Oilseeds and oilseed products were listed at $9.9 billion.

On a volume basis, wheat exports were shown at 36.7 million metric tons; feed grains, 71 million; and soybeans, 23.1 million. Collectively, those accounted for 80 percent of the total export tonnage.

The report was a brief summary of a larger one scheduled to be released later this month. It did not include a breakdown of exports by countries of destination.

HOPEFUL SIGN
WASHINGTON (AP) — The total of jobless Americans receiving regular unemployment insurance has dropped for a sixth consecutive week, another sign that the economy may be on the way back from recession.

Whichard Speaker To Grads

Summer graduation exercises for Pitt Community College will be held at the Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus August 28 at 8 p.m. The commencement speaker will be David J. Whichard II, president and editor of The Daily Reflector.

The speaker is a member of the board of directors of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, chairman of the Eastern Regional Board of Wachovia Bank & Trust Company, and member of the board of directors of Home Savings and Loan Association, Greenville.

NINE NEW TROOPERS . . . Highway Patrol Troop A Commander, Capt. Carl Gilchrist, with two of the nine new patrolmen who reported for duty yesterday, Walter Warren Jr., of Micro, assigned to Williamston, and David Charles Broome of Greenville, assigned to Bayboro.

Nine Troopers Are Assigned

Nine new troopers - graduates from the North Carolina Highway Patrol's 20-week basic school August 15 - joined Troop A yesterday. The new patrolmen met at the troop headquarters here before reporting to their duty stations.

Troop A commander Capt. Carl Gilchrist told the new officers, "I am proud to welcome each of you to Troop A. We are proud of our troop and work hard toward professionalism."

"I want to emphasize to each of you that the manner in which you exercise your authority, the attitude you display toward the patrol and your fellow man, your involvement in community and civic affairs, and your support and loyalty to the highway patrol will ultimately determine your success or failure. It is imperative that you represent the State of North Carolina and the highway patrol as a professional."

Capt. Gilchrist stressed the importance of public support and cooperation, saying, "No organization such as ours is stronger than its public support," adding that enforcement action should be based on "clear-cut and substantial violations," with a good, broad-based enforcement program.

One of the nine new troopers is David Charles Broome of Greenville, who has been assigned to Bayboro in Pamlico County.

Broome, a native of Aurora, has lived in Greenville for the past two years. He is the son of Mrs. Jewel F. Broome of 108 Woodstock Dr.

Another of the new highway patrolmen is Walter J. Warren Jr. of Micro, who has been assigned to Williamston.

Other troopers, their home towns and assignments include: Stephen Andrew Mize, Wendell, assigned to Jackson; Thomas Lee Hollowell, Kinston, assigned to Windsor; Jesse Melvin LaSmith, Hurdle Mills, assigned to Aulander; Robert Earl Backus, Edenton, assigned to Elizabeth City; Joel Anthony Siles, Elizabethtown, assigned to Edenton; William Ely Harrell, Windsor, assigned to Belhaven; and Anthony Paul Adams, Raleigh, assigned to Morehead City.

Including the nine new officers, 115 troopers are assigned to Troop A, which includes 22 Eastern counties. Also included in the Troop are 21 field sergeants and the Greenville headquarters staff.

Rader Named To GOP Post

WASHINGTON - Steven P. Rader of Washington, has been elected as Young Republican national committeeman from North Carolina.

The Beaufort County resident was elected by the state executive board of the N.C. Federation of Young Republicans.

Important issues affecting agriculture, and in which the Farm Bureau has been involved, Wooten said, include meaningful truck regulatory reform legislation which is beneficial to agriculture; legislation to amend the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act exempting farmers and their employees from registering as labor contractors; and a number of bills repealing or limiting the authority of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Wooten claims that membership in Farm Bureau is the best way for a farmer to protect his interests in state and national legislation. He said that a membership of 4,000 farm families in Pitt County is the goal of the Farm Bureau this year.

Wooten is urging all Pitt County farmers to join the organization during the current membership drive.

FARMVILLE - Grade for grade prices were steady Wednesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market. More low grade primings and non-descript grades were sold. Several sheets of cutter grades sold for as high as $169 per pound. Demand was strong for quality grades. Only a few companies are buying less desirable grades.

The market sold 420,000 pounds for $621,978 for an average of $147.98 per hundred. Last year's average on the same sale date was $142.70. To date the market sold 8,564,303 for $11,765,969 for a season average of $137.38.

An attorney with the Washington law firm of Wilkinson and Vosburgh, Rader, will represent the state on the Young Republican national committee, along with national committeewoman Cindy Stinson of Raleigh, and Harry Carpenter III of Hickory.

The Young Republican National Committee is the governing body of the Young Republican National Federation, the largest political youth group in the free world.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's hired farm labor force in July was an estimated 1.79 million workers, a decline of 1 percent from a year earlier, reports the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Wednesday the quarterly survey, made during the week of July 6-12, also showed wage rates for hired farm workers averaged $3.52 an hour, an increase of 29 cents an hour from year-earlier levels.

The wage rate is derived by converting different methods of pay such as daily, weekly and monthly wages into an equivalent hourly rate.

Local Recruiter Earns Award

S.Sgt. Nathaniel T. Tate, army recruiter in Greenville, received a second sapphire star for his recruiting badge during recent ceremonies.

The army said that the star is one of the highest recruiting awards earned and is based upon the education level of a recruiter's enlistees.

A Marion native, Tate served as a recruiter in Cedar Rapids, Iowa prior to transferring to the Greenville area. A ten-year veteran, he has also served in Vietnam and at Ft. Eustis, Va.

Farm Bureau Sign-Up Urged

"Although Washington may seem like a long way from Pitt County, local farmers have much at stake in legislation now being debated in Congress," according to Atlas Wooten, president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

Important issues affecting agriculture, and in which the Farm Bureau has been involved, Wooten said, include meaningful truck regulatory reform legislation which is beneficial to agriculture; legislation to amend the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act exempting farmers and their employees from registering as labor contractors; and a number of bills repealing or limiting the authority of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Wooten claims that membership in Farm Bureau is the best way for a farmer to protect his interests in state and national legislation. He said that a membership of 4,000 farm families in Pitt County is the goal of the Farm Bureau this year.

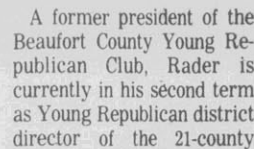

Wooten is urging all Pitt County farmers to join the organization during the current membership drive.

FARMVILLE - Grade for grade prices were steady Wednesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market. More low grade primings and non-descript grades were sold. Several sheets of cutter grades sold for as high as $169 per pound. Demand was strong for quality grades. Only a few companies are buying less desirable grades.

The market sold 420,000 pounds for $621,978 for an average of $147.98 per hundred. Last year's average on the same sale date was $142.70. To date the market sold 8,564,303 for $11,765,969 for a season average of $137.38.

Hearing Explores Possible Transmission Defects

Administrator To Leave ECU

ECU News Bureau
Robert K. Adams II, director of resource development at East Carolina University, has accepted a position as executive vice president of American National Insurance Company, Las Vegas, Nevada, effective Oct. 1. It was announced by Donald L. Lemish, ECU vice chancellor for institutional advancement and planning.

Adams, an alumnus of ECU, joined the staff in 1977 as assistant to the vice chancellor for health affairs and as director of the ECU Medical Foundation, Inc. He became corporate and foundations relations director in 1979 and was promoted to resource development director during the same year. He is 35.

Referring to Adams' appointment as "a once in a lifetime opportunity," Lemish said he was personally sorry to see him leave.

"Bob was my first appointment when I arrived at ECU and he has provided us with excellent leadership," he said.

ROBT. K. ADAMS II

"Under his direction, we have built our staff and instituted major donor clubs, organized the Annual Fund, and started a deferred gifts program. In the past year total private support to ECU has increased dramatically and this is partially a result of his leadership and personal efforts," Lemish said.

In seeking a replacement, the Vice Chancellor said the university "will first consider some internal applicants while seeking recommendations and nominations nationally."

CropDuster Not Injured In Crash

KENLY, N.C. (AP) — A crop-dusting plane crashed into a field near Kenly Wednesday, spilling its load of lanate — a toxic chemical — into a soybean field.

The pilot, Larry Miles, was not injured in the crash but required medical attention when some of the chemical got into his eyes. Miles was employed by Eureka Fertilizer Co. of Wayne County.

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "Michael Cannon died at the hands of the Ford Motor Co. There's no alternative to that conclusion."

Fighting back tears, Edward Cannon spoke emotionally of the death of his infant son as he addressed a government hearing Wednesday. The hearing will determine if Ford must recall 16 million cars and trucks because of an alleged safety defect in automatic transmissions. Ford denies any defect exists.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration made an initial finding in June that there is a defect that permits the transmissions to slip accidentally from park into reverse.

NHTSA Administrator Joan Claybrook said this has resulted in runaway vehicles and that her agency has received more than 23,000 complaints, including reports of 6,000 accidents, 100 deaths and 1,710 injuries allegedly attributable to transmission slippage.

The company labeled as "sheer fantasy" the government contention that the transmissions have a defect. It said the accidents were caused by the failure of motorists to put gear shift levers in the park position, and that most of the incidents occurred after drivers left their cars unattended with the engine running.

Cannon, of Nashota, Wis., was among several witnesses who claimed problems with their Ford transmissions led to deaths or injuries. He told how his 15-month-old son Michael drowned last April 15 when his 1977 Thunderbird bolted backward out of a driveway, across a grassy area and into a pond.

He said his wife had backed the car out of the garage and left the engine running as she left it to close the garage door. Before she could get back, he said, the vehicle, with Michael in a child's seat, slipped into reverse and backed away.

He said a coroner's jury disagreed with a Ford suggestion that the young boy might have moved the transmission lever. He said the jury found a major perpetrating cause of the accident was a faulty transmission design and Ford's failure to correct it.

"I implore this agency to render a judgment in his case that will prevent the deaths of future Michael Cannons," he concluded, looking directly at Ms. Claybrook. The agency expects to make a decision in about three months.

The NHTSA finding covers Ford cars and light trucks sold after August 1972 and manufactured before October 1979 with five types of automatic transmissions, designated C-3, C-4, C-6, FMX and JATCO.

Former Transportation Secretary William Coleman, now a Washington attorney, represented Ford at the hearing and said the company welcomed the opportunity "to answer publicly the erroneous charges made against its transmissions."

"Ford's transmissions do not accidentally jump out of or slip out of park into reverse, and there is no evidence that they do," he said. He added that Ford's transmissions are basically the same as those installed in millions of other U.S. and foreign-made cars.

To demonstrate that contention, Ford engineer Lee Carr repeatedly slammed his hand into an unmoving transmission lever and declared: "I submit to you that when the lever is latched it cannot shift out of park on its own."

The auto company also announced Wednesday it had filed an action in U.S. District Court in Delaware against NHTSA and the Transportation Department.

The suit seeks to secure the right to take testimony of persons who participated in the agency's investigation on behalf of the government.

Ford said it might need this information if the transmission case goes to court, indicating it might fight an attempt by NHTSA to institute a recall.

Ask Aid Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel has officially asked the United States for a 50 percent increase in current levels of U.S. aid to the Mideast nation by 1982.

The request for $2.9 billion was made Wednesday by Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron in a half-hour meeting with Warren Christopher, deputy secretary of state.

Christopher promised to study the request, but made no commitment of support, Evron said.

Last year, Evron requested $3.4 billion for fiscal 1981, starting Oct. 1. The administration recommended $1.985 billion and Congress has tentatively added $200 million in military credits.

But Congress hasn't passed a foreign aid bill for either the 1980 or 1981 fiscal years, so Israel and other foreign aid recipients are continuing to receive their 1979 assistance totals.

For Israel, that comes to $1 billion in military credits and $785 million in economic grants. The United States generally waives repayment of $500 million of the military credits.

Evron said he did not think that Israel's differences with the Carter administration over Jerusalem, West Bank settlements and other issues would affect the handling of the aid request.

Attempting Soak Up An Oil Spill

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard began work Wednesday attempting to soak up an oil spill extending from the Cape Fear River to an Exxon terminal on Bernard's Creek.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the spill involved about 5,000 gallons of oil and stretched for more than two miles. Coast Guard Lt. Tom Dickey described the spill as "minor" and said it was moving toward the sea.

The Real Christopher Robin Is 60 Years Old Today

BY GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
DARTMOUTH, England (AP)—The real Christopher Robin says he was "embarrassed all my life" about being the boy in the poems and Winnie-the-Pooh stories of his father, A.A. Milne.

"But that's all finished now," he says. "I had to get into the second half of the 20th century."

Christopher Robin Milne will be 60 on Thursday. Stick-thin, gray-haired, bespectacled, still showing a trace of his childhood stammer, he is a bookseller turned writer, whose innate shyness doesn't start to fade until he has chatted for at least an hour.

The little boy pictured by his father kneeling at the foot of the bed to say his prayers in real life spent five years in the British army in World War II, saw half a dozen deserts, built bridges, defused bombs, survived shellfire that killed and mutilated men all around him and took a head-wound from shrapnel in Italy.

The battered teddy bear called Winnie-the-Pooh has survived too, but that bear of very little brain, as his creator said of him, now lives across the Atlantic. Pooh, Eeyore, Piglet and other members of the family are in a showcase at Dutton's, the New York publishers of the Pooh books.

Milne has been invited to visit the United States but has never gone. Would he go to see Pooh if he did?

"No, I wouldn't," he said firmly. "What would I expect to find that I don't already know?"

"I grew away from Christopher Robin when I was 8 or 9 years old. That was 50 years ago. But the tourists who come to the bookshop don't want to think of me as anyone else," he said ruefully.

Just then, a voice winged between the shelves, bringing temporary halt to the interview. "There he is. Go and shake hands and you can say you've shaken hands with Christopher Robin."

"Let's go upstairs," said Milne, leading the way to the top of his Harbor Bookshop in Dartmouth, a plot of picture-book Devon on the River Dart estuary. The harbor wall is lined with contemporary Christopher Robins dangling fishing lines for crabs.

Milne and his wife, Lesley, came to Dartmouth in 1951 after an unhappy period in which he couldn't find a job to suit him. For a time, he'd sold lampshades in a London store.

"I hadn't been trained for anything," he said. "My name was famous all over the world but it made me miserable to be pointed out as the son of my father."

"I wanted to escape from his fame and from 'Christopher Robin.' We ran away from London and the bookshop we opened was a success. We have been happy here, even if it did mean wrapping up those four books for customers."

Those four books — books which made Alan Alexander Milne and his only child famous — sold and are still selling in millions, translated into more than 20 languages.

The first came out in 1924 — "When we were very young" — a collection of 44 verses in which the boy and his nanny go to Buckingham Palace and the famous bear — bought at Harrods when Christopher Robin was a year old — makes his bow.

In 1925, the Milnes moved from London to the Sussex woodlands around Cotchford Farm, and there A.A. Milne set his next book — "Winnie-the-Pooh" — in what the younger Milne still fondly recalls as "my idyllic childhood."

More poems followed in 1927 with "Now we are six," and more stories in 1928 in "The House at Pooh Corner."

"Right from the start, journalists visited us to interview my father and to see me," Milne recalled. "There were a lot of silly stories. I was teased and boys did call out, 'Where's your teddy bear?'"

His father died in 1956, his mother, Dorothy, in 1971. In 1974, when he was 54, the son finally exorcised Christopher Robin.

"I did it by writing a book, 'The Enchanted Places,' which was the story of my childhood. I didn't know what I really thought until I stopped being him. Every child wants to grow up."

He said part of the reason for writing the book was a feeling he "had to provide something" after the shock of finding that his mother destroyed all his father's papers and personal possessions to keep people from prying into his private affairs.

He now thinks his mother may have been right, "after what academics are doing with the lives of people like J.M. Barrie, Lewis Carroll and Thomas Hardy."

"When I see them psychoanalyzing Winnie-the-Pooh and my father, as if it was Shakespeare, I think it is all rather foolish," he said.

Milne dislikes the commercializing of Pooh and said he gets nothing from it. He has just sold part of his share of the Pooh Trust, which receives the royalties from his father's writings, to the Royal Literary Fund, founded in 1790 to help writers fallen on hard times.

He is giving up bookselling to write more and to help care for his 24-year-old spastic daughter, Clare.

The Ernest Shepard story-book drawings of Christopher Robin as a long-haired boy in a cotton smock and short pants distorted Milne's life for a long time. But Milne is philosophical:

"Yes, you could say it was a sacrifice — for all the pleasure the stories gave to millions of people I shall never know."

Hypnotist Helps Stir Memory Of Witnesses

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Joe Raynor of Fayetteville is a wholesale car dealer, a Democratic state senator, a hypnotist and, suddenly, the focus of attention at the Ku Klux Klan-Nazi murder trial.

Raynor hypnotized two prosecution witnesses to refresh their memories about what they saw the morning of Nov. 3, when shooting erupted at a Communist Workers Party-sponsored anti-Klan rally.

On trial are six Klansmen and Nazis charged with felonious rioting and first-degree murder in the deaths of five communist sympathizers at the rally.

But the Klan-Nazi trial is not the first murder trial Raynor has helped with. He said he has made hypnosis a second career.

In an interview Tuesday, Raynor explained that he began experimenting with hypnosis 27 years ago after an automobile accident left him in a cast for nine months. Searching for a way to relieve the pain, Raynor ordered a book on hypnosis from a magic company.

After two attempts he hypnotized himself and eased the pain.

"I started hypnotizing orderlies, nurses and friends," the 57-year-old Raynor said. "I found it was a good way to entertain people and I got a lot of invitations to parties. I enjoyed it and, being in politics, it was a good thing to talk about."

About three years ago, the Cumberland County district attorney asked Raynor to help solve a murder case. Since then, Raynor's wholesale auto business has taken a back seat.

In the Cumberland County case, a woman who thought she saw a man kill two people was hypnotized. She recalled minute facts about the incident which occurred five years earlier and the information resulted in a life sentence for the murderer.

Later, the district attorney's office sent him to a seminar in Los Angeles, where he became a certified hypno-investigator.

Defense attorneys in the Klan-Nazi trial have questioned Raynor's qualifications to be an expert witness.

MAYOR APPOINTED

Robert A. Gibbons, president of the N.C. League of Municipalities, announced the appointment of Mayor Don McGlohon to the League's Resolutions Committee.

Gibbons said that as a member of the committee, McGlohon will review and make recommendations on proposed resolutions to be submitted to the full membership of the League at its annual convention on Oct. 19, 20, and 21 in Raleigh.

McGlohon also serves as a member of the Governor's Ridesharing Committee, the Mid-East Board, and the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority.

Raynor took the stand Monday and acknowledged that he has had no formal undergraduate education.

"I've had 30 years experience and that's worth more than every school you could go to," Raynor said.

"I've had as many as seven subjects a day under hypnosis," Raynor said. "I get a lot of calls from police and attorneys around the state for help. Some of the cases never get to court."

Raynor charges a minimum fee of $150 to hypnotize and question a person for law-enforcement officials.

"There's not a day someone doesn't call me about helping them to stop smoking or eating too much," Raynor explained. "But those are things I don't get into. That's hypnotherapy."

Raynor said he uses a method known as rapid induction hypnosis, which puts a person under within three to five minutes. He said he usually talks a person into hypnosis.

Raynor said he hypnotizes himself almost everyday. "It's a nice way to get away from things," he explained. "It's your own private place for that 30 minutes."

Church Of Rome Opens Doors To Married Anglican Priests

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Within about a year, married Anglican priests in the United States will be able to remain married, remain priests, and become Roman Catholics.

The U.S. Catholic Conference announced a Vatican-approved plan Wednesday under which Anglicans would be allowed to become Roman Catholics while maintaining some of their own liturgical traditions. The plan would allow married Anglican priests to become Roman Catholic priests while remaining married.

Catholic priests still could not marry, and the former Anglican priests would not be allowed to remarry if widowed and could not become bishops.

There are only a few married Roman Catholic priests in this country now, mostly members of Eastern Rite churches. Wednesday's announcement was unusual because it made "such a large group" eligible for the married priesthood, said Robert Wonderly, a conference spokesman.

The Rev. John D. Barker of Los Angeles, the leader of a small Anglican group that has sought union with the Catholic church, said Wednesday he hopes the first members of his group could become Catholic priests in not much more than a year.

Russell Shaw, a spokesman for the Catholic Conference, responded that that seems "a reasonable amount of time."

"It's a hope that we would share, that this is not going to be delayed unnecessarily," Shaw added.

Wednesday's announcement affects only the United States. The Rev. Lawrence Purcell of the Office of the Apostolic Delegate in Washington, the emissary of Pope John Paul II, said the pope's approval came in response to a specific request from the U.S. bishops. He said he was unaware of any similar actions in other countries.

Barker said his Pro-Diocese of St. Augustin of Canterbury is no longer within the Episcopal Church, although some of its 63 clergy are. Barker said the group recognizes the teachings of the Catholic Church and the primacy of the pope.

Shaw said the new plan is "very unusual, and yet there are some precedents, although not absolute parallels." He said some Eastern Rite branches of the Roman Catholic Church currently have married priests.

The formal announcement came from Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. He said Anglicans in the United States will be able to seek a "common identity" in the Roman Catholic Church. "Common identity," Shaw explained, means the Anglicans could become Roman Catholics while retaining some of the traditions of their former church, particularly in the liturgy.

He said that "common identity" also includes possible Roman Catholic acceptance of married Anglican priests as Roman Catholic priests.

Anglican priests who wished to join the Catholic Church would be reviewed on a case-by-case basis by the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

The ban on marriage by Catholic priests has sparked considerable controversy in recent years. The archbishop's announcement added that this tradition would not change and that future candidates for priesthood would not be allowed to marry.

However, Shaw said the rule would not preclude a person who married and became an Anglican priest in the future from later seeking to become a Roman Catholic priest and remaining married, depending on the individual case.

While the Anglican Church has some female priests, a Catholic Conference spokesman said the Roman Catholic Church's ban on women priests is not affected by the new plan.

The plan was prepared in response to requests from both individuals and groups of Anglican background who expressed a desire to become members of the Roman Catholic Church while retaining some of their own liturgy and tradition. They must fully accept Roman Catholic doctrine and the authority of the pope and bishops.

Some Episcopal priests have been seeking admission into the Roman Catholic priesthood for several years, according to church spokesman Walter Boyd. He said they were among those dissatisfied with some decisions made by the Episcopal in 1976, including the ordination of women as priests and changes in the Book of Common Prayer.

The Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, has been informed of the action, Quinn

Defend 9-Year Delay Of Trial

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Federal attorneys said Wednesday a nine-year delay in bringing former Green Beret physician Jeffrey MacDonald to trial for the triple murder of his family was due to a "diligent effort to solve a complex and bizarre crime."

The Justice Department denied that "bureaucratic indifference," as cited by a three-judge panel, had prompted the delay between the killing of MacDonald's wife and their two daughters at Fort Bragg in 1970 and his conviction in Raleigh, N.C., last year.

The panel ruled last month that MacDonald's right to a speedy trial had been violated and ordered his conviction reversed. The panel also ordered MacDonald released.

MacDonald, who was sentenced to three consecutive life terms, has been confined at a federal prison in California. His release has been held up pending completion of the appeal process by the Justice Department.

The government on Tuesday requested a review of the panel's reversal by the full U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

In documents filed Wednesday supporting that request, federal attorneys conceded there was a delay in the decision to prosecute but denied that it resulted from improper conduct.

After the investigative report in the case was received, the Justice Department contended, "several ... months were required to digest the contents of the report and suggest other fruitful lines of inquiry."

The Army accused MacDonald of the slayings in 1970, but the charges were dropped after a pretrial hearing. MacDonald was indicted by a federal grand jury in Raleigh in 1975, but his trial did not begin until 1975, partially because of appeals initiated by his own attorneys.

MacDonald's wife, Colette, and daughters Kimberly and Kristen Jean were found bludgeoned and stabbed Feb. 17, 1970, at their duplex at Fort Bragg.

NEW YORK (AP) — Investor enthusiasm for oil issues over-shadowed concerns over rising interest rates and pushed the stock market higher for the second straight day today.

At noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 5.29 at 950.60 as advances led declines 3-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Today's gains followed Wednesday's 5.46-point recovery from a near-27-point loss earlier in the week amid interest-rate worries sparked by a record weekly money supply gain. Dealers said short-term money-market rates fell slightly for the second straight day today.

NYSE volume jumped to 22.1 million shares after two hours of trading from 16.7 million at noon Wednesday.

Phillips Petroleum led the NYSE most-active, up 1/4 at 40 3/4, while Mobil was ahead 5/8 at 72 1/2 and Kerr McGee up 2 1/2 at 78. Texaco, which announced an oil find in the German North Sea, was off 1/4 at 37 1/4.

Domestic oil producers have gained ground following a report from the Venezuelan government news agency that Saudi Arabia is considering an oil production cutback.

Computer issues were higher, continuing Wednesday's strong gains. International Business Machines rose 1/4 to 67 and Texas Instruments climbed 1/2 to 120 1/2. Sperry jumped 1 to 54 1/2.

Precious metals issues turned mixed after recording sharp advances a session before. Dome Mines rose 1 1/2 to 10 1/2 but Homestake fell 1 1/2 to 67 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.54 to 71.55. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.37 at 328.03.

Tar Heels Amid CWP Advisers

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A New York-based organization attempting to raise money to defend six Communist Workers Party members on charges growing out of the Nov. 3 confrontation with Klansmen and Nazis has listed an advisory board dominated by North Carolinians.

Seven of the advisers listed by the Greensboro Justice Fund are either physicians or doctors in public health fields at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and at Duke University. Wilmington 10 leader Ben Chavis also is identified as an adviser on a brochure published by the fund.

The director of the fund, Dr. Neil Prose of New York City, is a former Durham physician.

North Carolinians who could be contacted Wednesday denied any affiliation with the CWP. Most said they allowed their names to be used by the fund-raising agency because they knew one or more of the five CWP sympathizers killed during the Nov. 3 confrontation.

Three of the five victims — William Sampson, James Waller and Michael Nathan — held medical degrees. A sixth CWP member who was wounded in the shooting, Paul Bermanzohn, also is a doctor. And Nathan's widow, Marty Nathan, is a physician.

Although disavowing ties with the CWP, some of the doctors did protest the handling of the case. Dr. Michael Freemark, a pediatrician at Duke's medical school, called the situation in Greensboro "a horrendous violation of justice."

Another Duke doctor, Dr. Salvatore Pizzo, said he was satisfied with the prosecution's handling of the Greensboro disturbance. "My sympathy for the CWP is, at best, minimal. Heaven forbid, I am a registered Republican," Pizzo said.

Rose Scrimmage Is Pleasing To Coach Despite Problems

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

NEW BERN — For the most part, Rose High School football coach Dave Bumgarner liked what he saw last night.

Fortunately, however, it wasn't a real game, or the pleasure might have been tempered a little.

For the Rampants, it was their official scrimmage—against the New Bern Bears. During the official half of "real" football, New Bern came away with the only score of the evening, thanks to an offensive mistake of the Rose team.

Earlier, in a control ten-straight-play type scrimmage, New Bern also scored twice more, again both on big plays.

Rose failed to cross the goal line at any time during the evening, despite moving the ball well most of the time.

During the opening hour of the scrimmage, each team ran off several series of ten plays, regardless of the outcome, then switched over and the other team went on offense.

During that period, New Bern scored when it picked up a fumbled pitch-out and returned it for a touchdown some 60 yards.

Then, a few series later, the Bears scored again on a long pass of about the same distance.

In the full scrimmage, where each team kept the ball as long as it would have in a regular game, Rose moved the ball well nearly every time, but again gave up a score on a fumbled pitch-out, picked up by a New Bern defender and returned for a score.

"I saw a lot of good things out there," Bumgarner said afterwards. "We moved the ball well, and essentially did what we wanted to do. We didn't let them score on defense (the lone score in the early session came against the reserve unit)."

"I was pleased with our passing," the coach continued. "We didn't complete that many passes tonight, but we had people open that we didn't hit, and I think that will come.

Kenny (Barnes, the quarterback) got outstanding protection tonight. Earlier, in a scrimmage with our team, he didn't get it, and he really hasn't got his timing down yet because of it. But if he continues to get the protection he got tonight, we'll be in great shape."

Bumgarner added that he was also very pleased with the blocking by the offensive unit.

In the passing game, the Rampants had trouble in hitting their long passes, making good on several short attempts.

Bumgarner was asked if he expected to go long most of the time with the passing game, and answered that he anticipates Rose going both long and short with the air game.

"We didn't get anyone hurt tonight, and that's good. I think our running game went very well except for a few plays. We missed a couple of pitches that they turned into scores, but they were mistakes that shouldn't have been made. Kenny made a perfect pitch on one of them, and the other was catchable too. But we had a sophomore back in there (the second time), and instead of falling on the ball when he dropped it, he tried to pick it up and got knocked away from it, making it easy for a New Bern man to pick it up and take it in. That's not the kind of mistakes we'll be making as the season goes along."

While admitting that the Rampants did give up the big plays in the game, Bumgarner felt that that was mostly "first-game jitters."

"There were some times that we didn't have our full mental concentration on what was going on. Like when we had them deep in a hole (on the four-yard line) one time and let them get away for a 24-yard gain. That's what I mean," Bumgarner said. "But we'll sharpen those things up in the next week or so."

Asked to grade the scrimmage on a one-to-ten scale, Bumgarner said that, taking away the fumbles, he would rate the offense in the sevens or eights. "As I said, the mistakes were more mental than physical." Defensively, he felt that the team was close to where he wanted it to be for the season.

"Once we get over these first-game jitters, I think we'll be all right," Bumgarner said.

The Rampants open the season on Friday, August 29, in a Ficklen Stadium contest against Kinston in a non-conference encounter.

Williamston Tiger Appetite Whetted By Good Year In 1979

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILLIAMSTON — An 8-2 campaign last year only whetted the appetite of Williamston's football team.

This season the Tigers want to improve on last year's performance — and, if they stay free of injuries, they could do just that.

"I can honestly say the 34 kids we have out this year have worked harder than the 43 we had last season," Williamston head coach Harold Robinson said. "They've worked harder and the coaching staff has worked harder."

The reason? "It's a matter of coming back off an 8-2 team with the kids thinking they should have been better," Robinson said. "They felt we should have done better. So did I."

If the Tigers are to improve on their third place finish in the Northeastern Conference they must replace 16 seniors lost to graduation last year. Heading the list of the missing is high school All-American Butch Griffin. Griffin, who will play linebacker for the University of North Carolina this season, was the Tigers' leading tackler and leading ground gainer (960 yards) last season.

Gone also from last season's club are all-conference lineman Carl Deans and David Cullipher and quarterback Keith Clark, who died in a drowning accident this summer. The Tigers also lost outside linebacker Chris Peele and split end Randy Ellis.

"Depth is going to be a problem for us this year," Robinson said. "The majority of our players are going to be playing both ways and if someone gets injured we'll really be losing two players."

"Depth is definitely going to be the key to our season. We've got 23 seniors (16 returnees) and most of them have some game-type experience. The key to our season will be our depth. If we can stay healthy we'll be all right."

The Tigers return seven starters. Leading the way is senior running back Harry Beach (5-9, 160), who gained nearly 600 yards in the Tigers' wishbone attack en route to being named honorable mention all-conference in 1979.

Back to spearhead the Tigers' 4-4 defense are linebacker Tony Rogers (5-10, 160), defensive tackles Tim Hines (6-2, 260) and Vance Allen (5-11, 170) and defensive end Mike Peele (6-1, 180).

Among those returning on offense are guard Calvin Mobley (5-11, 185) and senior quarterback Jim Lilley (6-2, 175), who played late last season after an injury to Clark.

Among the newcomers Robinson is counting are Richard Rogers and Vince Washington. A senior, Rogers (5-10, 160) will play outside linebacker while Washington (6-1, 165), a junior, will play split end and defensive back.

"At this point this team is looking as good as last year's team," Robinson said. "We've been working on the fundamentals a lot and will continue to do so. We've got to work on every aspect of the game but we'll always continue to work on the fundamentals. That's where it all starts."

The Tigers open the 1980 campaign at home with Ayden-Grifton. Following that, Williamston faces two more nonconference games and an open date before starting its league slate, a schedule that pleases Robinson.

"I'd rather open with a nonconference team," said Robinson, whose Tigers blanked the Chargers, 20-0, in last season's opener. "You get a chance to look at your players and get a chance to get things down before the conference season opens."

"That's not to say we aren't going to try to win the game. Of course we are; but we also know we're going to make mistakes. But we haven't been out here five weeks to lose."

The Tigers' open their conference schedule at home on Sept. 26 against Roanoke Rapids, a team Williamston beat 42-8 last year. Again this season, however, Robinson is looking for Ahoskie and Edenton to be among the league leaders.

"You've got to beat Ahoskie to win the conference. Year-in and year-out they seem to always be the team to beat," said Robinson, whose team took a 34-0 beating last year at the hands of Ahoskie.

"I don't know where we'll end up (in the conference)," he added. "I'm not going to predict. We'll take it game-by-game and see what happens."

OFFENSIVE MVP'S

NEW YORK (AP) — No defensive player has ever won the Schick Trophy, the award that goes to the Most Valuable Player in the National Football League each year, as selected by the Professional Football Writers Association.

The stomping fullback of the Houston Oilers, Earl Campbell, has won it the past two years, while also capturing the rushing championship.

Houston Again Seeking To Block Pittsburgh's Championship Drive

By GARY MIHOCS
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For two years running, the Houston Oilers have made it to the threshold of the Super Bowl and run smack into the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We knocked on the door two years ago. We pounded on the door this year. Next year, we'll kick the door down," Oilers Coach Bum Phillips pledged after last January's loss here in the American Football Conference championship.

Phillips returned to Pittsburgh this spring to speak before Steeler fans at a local country club, and he told a story—a tall story.

It was about the day a huge cardboard box with a Pittsburgh postmark was delivered to his ranch outside Houston. Phillips said he put his ear to the box to make sure it wasn't ticking, then he opened it.

"There was a door inside the box!" Phillips said.

"There was a note on top. It said, 'Ya' didn't kick the door in last year, and ya'all ain't gonna kick the thing in next year either!'"

Phillips wouldn't admit the tale was a figment. But the fact is the Steelers and Oilers, both in the AFC Central Division, have met the last two years for the AFC title.

Each year, the Steelers have won the division and the Oilers have been a wild-card, and last January's 27-13 Steeler playoff win belied the closeness of a game in which a controversial call cost Houston a touchdown. Houston and Pittsburgh may meet in the playoffs again this year. For sure, they'll meet Sept. 7 in Pittsburgh to open the season.

Every Oilers-Steelers game is something special, but the opener will mark the regular season debut of quarterback Ken Stabler and safety Jack Tatum in Houston uniforms.

They were Oakland Raiders in 1972 when Stabler scrambled for a late touchdown and Tatum knocked away a pass—only to have Franco Harris make the "Immaculate Reception."

Now, Stabler and Tatum aim to block Pittsburgh's bid for a fifth Super Bowl title and third in a row.

Dan Pastorini, traded for Stabler, knocked on the door. The Oilers hope Stabler can kick it down. He's beaten Pittsburgh twice in five playoffs.

"Everybody is fired up about Stabler," said Oilers tight end Bob Barber. "Playing with him is going to give me added incentive."

It also gives added incentive to somebody else — the Steelers.

"Some people still don't consider us the best team," says Steeler cornerback Mel Blount.

"Instead of 'Who's going to beat the Steelers,' all I've been hearing is that this is Houston's year or San Diego's year. I think we'd all like to silence the critics once and for all."

Steelers fans are wearing T-shirts showing Joe Greene with four Super Bowls rings and a bare thumb. "One for the Thumb in '81," says the slogan.

Emory Finds Bright Practice Moments

East Carolina University's football team, in its second day of heavy gear, continued to have some injury problems, but none of them appeared to be serious. And Coach Ed Emory found some things to be happy about, too.

On the offensive side of the scale, Emory enjoyed seeing the running of Roy Wiley at fullback, and the operation of the team by quarterback Carlton Nelson, whose passing was in high gear. Norwood Vann was also singled out for praise for his blocking at the tight end position.

In a personnel switch, John Roberson was moved from the number two defensive tackle slot to offensive tackle to try and solve some of the problems Emory is finding there.

Emory also noted that the running of fullback Theodore Sutton and halfback Anthony Collins also is improving daily, and that Harold Blue and Mike Hawkins, two other halfbacks, had fine days running the ball.

"Reggie Harden is doing a fine job at split end, despite having a cast on his hand from an old injury," Emory said. He also said that starter Vern Davenport is looking good.

Defensively, George Crump (tackle) and Terry Long (nose guard) had fine days, while Mike Davis, a defensive end, continues to shine. "Mike is very, very good, and gets better with every snap," defensive end coach Jim Holland said. "He hasn't had a bad day yet, and we can adjust our defense much better because of his intelligence and ability to pick up the play."

Emory also noted that the Pirates are now spending one practice session a day working on pass defense, since Duke, their opening foe, is expected to be a passing team and has outstanding receivers.

On the injury list, Tootie Robbins is suffering from the heat, Hal Stephens suffered an elbow extension, Maurey Banks has a hip pointer, and Tony Hensley, a sprained back. None are expected to be sidelined for an extended period.

Marvin Cobb, who injured a knee on Tuesday, will not need surgery, but will be in a cast for six weeks.

People wishing to hear Emory's daily comments may call Dial-A-Pirates at 757-6900.

Wooten Likes 'Guardian Angel' Role

By BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Ron Wooten, guardian angel. It does not have the ring of Gabriel, but to Wooten, an offensive guard at the University of North Carolina, it does have it appeal. He likes to think of himself as the guardian angel for Amos Lawrence and Kelvin Bryant, two of the Tar Heels' highly touted running backs.

"It's my job to protect them (the backs)," the 6-foot-4, 260-pounder senior said. "I don't want to see them get banged up."

Wooten has done his job well enough in the past few years to be on the verge of sainthood in the collegiate ranks. He even managed as trip to the Playboy Club in Lake Geneva, Wis., after being chosen by the magazine for its preseason honors all-star team.

"As you mature, you must look for different rewards other than publicity," Wooten said. "Being a senior you want to perform better every year. The publicity is just a little reward for playing well."

Wooten made his remarks Wednesday as the Atlantic Coast Conference's Operation Football, a writers' tour of the eight ACC schools, made a stop on the Chapel Hill campus.

North Carolina is the preseason favorite to win the conference title and a favorite to wind up among the nation's top 20 teams.

Guardian angel Wooten is not the only reason for that. There are also 15 returning starters and 45 returning lettermen who play a part. And the Tar Heels' 17-15 win over Michigan in the Gator Bowl last season didn't hurt.

With seven returning starters on offense, there is only one weak spot, according to coach Dick Crum. That is quarterback. Junior Chuck Sharpe is the probable starter, but Crum hinted that he may end up platooning Sharpe with sophomore Rod Elkins.

"The offense feels comfortable with both of them," Crum said.

Then there is Lawrence at tailback backed up by Bryant. "Amos is a dancer and Kelvin is a slasher," Crum said in characterizing his backs. "Kelvin can break tackles Amos can't, but Amos is more elusive."

Lawrence will start, Crum said, and when he says he's tired, Bryant will replace him. That is how Crum plans to keep Lawrence, who has been plagued by minor injuries, healthy. He has also put Lawrence on an extensive stretching program that "seems to have helped."

Lawrence came into the season having gained more than 1,000 yards for the past three seasons. He was really only healthy for five games last season and managed it, to which Crum said whimsically, "If he plays five games, he'll get his 1,000 yards."

Crum noted that Lawrence has been healthy only 11 games in the past two years and has gained more than 2,000 yards.

At fullback is Billy Johnson, who at 6-foot-1, 250 pounds is intimidating.

On defense, eight starters return and it is that unit Crum believes is the key for the team's season.

"Anytime I've been around a good team, it's had a good defense," he said.

The biggest hole is the one left by linebacker Buddy Curry, but Crum feels junior Lee Shaffer is going to fill that hole well.

At the other linebacker spot is senior Lawrence Taylor, another preseason All-America candidate. Taylor likes the looks of the defense.

"We're very powerful," Taylor said. "We're quicker and stronger than last year. Plus we have a lot of seniors and we know what we want."

Senior tackle Donnell Thompson anchors the line and is also positive about the defense.

"We got players that have been to war 20 times," the 6-foot-5, 260-pound Thompson said. "A coach can only coach you so much. Then experience comes in, and we got it."

Salazar, Royster Cap Winning Rallies

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Luis Salazar and Jerry Royster are learning to finish what they start.

Salazar, of San Diego, and Royster, of Atlanta, both came up with two hits in one inning Wednesday night, starting and finishing winning rallies for their clubs.

Salazar singled to open the fifth inning and then capped the six-run burst with an RBI-single as the Padres snapped an eight-game losing streak by beating the Philadelphia Phillies 7-5.

Royster led off the Braves' game with a single and then climaxed the seven-run first-inning explosion with a two-run single and Atlanta went on to defeat the Chicago Cubs 9-5.

"That's a first for me," said Royster. "I can't recall ever coming to bat twice in an inning before."

All six National League games were interdivisional matchups and all six were won by West teams. So Houston retained a one-game lead over Cincinnati and a two-game bulge over Los Angeles in the West, while Pittsburgh stayed two games ahead of Montreal and 2½ in front of Philadelphia.

The Houston Astros beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Montreal Expos 5-1, the Cincinnati Reds edged the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 in 12 innings and the San Francisco Giants trimmed the New York Mets 2-1.

Padres 7, Phillies 5

The Padres trailed 5-1 before sending 11 men to the plate in the fifth.

Salazar singled and scored on Dave Winfield's 14th home run of the season. Willie Montanez singled, Craig Stimac was safe on an error by Nino Espinosa, both runners advanced on an infield out and Tim Flannery was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Pinch hitter Broderick Perkins reached first on an error by shortstop Larry Bowa, Montanez scoring. Richards then singled in two runs and Salazar completed the six-run rally with his RBI-single.

Despite ending the losing streak, San Diego Manager Jerry Coleman was less than overjoyed. "It's like playing tennis," he said. "If you keep the ball in play long enough he'll (the opponent) beat himself sooner or later."

Braves 9, Cubs 5

After Royster's leadoff single, Rafael Ramirez tripled and Bob Horner hit his 27th home run of the season. Chris Chambliss followed with a single, Dale Murphy doubled and both scored on a double by Glenn Hubbard. Then, after a walk to Bill Nahorodny and a sacrifice by pitcher Larry McWilliams, Royster drove in Hubbard and Nahorodny with his second single of the inning to make it 7-0.

Royster says he likes the feeling in the Atlanta lockerroom.

"In the past we didn't know or care what the other teams were doing," he said. "This year we're watching all the other teams and trying to get in contention ourselves. We're relaxed now and I'm enjoying it."

Astros 5, Pirates 1

Houston got a two-run single by Enos Cabell and three bases-loaded walks to hand Pittsburgh's Jim Bibby only his third loss against 15 wins.

"It's always a morale lifter to beat somebody like Bibby, but I like being in the win column better," said Houston's Joe Morgan. "You can't get caught up in something like that. We've got to win games no matter who's pitching."

Dodgers 5, Expos 1

Los Angeles' Jerry Reuss hurled a six-hitter, struck out five and did not walk a batter in raising his record to 15-4, but afterward he said he didn't feel well.

"To be honest with you, I really felt sick out there," said Reuss. "I didn't feel well at all and I just tried to go one inning at a time. I don't know if it was the 24-hour flu or food poisoning. I got dizzy a few times, but that was about all."

Giants 2, Mets 1

The San Francisco Giants climbed to the .500 mark by handing the Mets their seventh straight loss behind the combined eight-hit pitching of Al Hargreaves and Greg Minton.

"Getting to .500 is quite a feat," said San Francisco infielder Darrell Evans, "considering we were 10 games under .500 in April. Normally it would be a salary drive for us at this time of year, but we have the pitching and the bullpen to win the West."

But one bad note for the Giants came in the sixth inning, when slugger Jack Clark was hit by pitch from Mark Bombardieri, suffering a bruise on his left hand and being forced to leave the game. Clark was scheduled for X-rays today.

Reds 4, Cardinals 3

George Foster hit a two-run homer and Dan Driessen a solo shot, but it was Driessen's sacrifice fly in the 12th that produced the winning run for Cincinnati.

Cesar Geronimo led off the 12th with an infield single off the leg of Don Hood, 2-5, and took second on Ken Griffey's sacrifice. Reliever Jim Otten hit Knight with a pitch and walked Foster, loading the bases, before Driessen hit his sacrifice fly.

Orioles May Be Forced To Play Without Earl

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The surging Baltimore Orioles, attempting to overtake the first-place New York Yankees in the American League East, might have to play three games in the near future without Manager Earl Weaver. But according to the fiery Weaver, he's not going anywhere.

Weaver was suspended for three days and fined an unspecified amount by AL President Lee MacPhail Wednesday as the result of a run-in with the umpires during a game against the Yankees last Saturday. The suspension was to begin this Friday, but has been stayed pending an appeal of the ruling.

Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters announced the ruling would be appealed, but at Anaheim Stadium shortly before the Orioles' game against the California Angels Wednesday night, Weaver was all smiles and said he "didn't know what I'd be appealing."

While fines and suspensions are considered serious business by most, Weaver was anything but serious while making out a lineup card in his office.

"I'm going to manage the team all year," said Weaver, who only Tuesday signed a contract to manage the Orioles through the 1982 season. "I don't believe in fines or suspensions. My plans are to manage, why not?"

"I don't pay any attention to this stuff. This is juvenile. As far as I'm concerned, I laugh at it."

The 50-year-old veteran skipper whose teams have won four AL pennants, six Eastern Division titles and one World Series crown since he took over as manager on July 11, 1968, allegedly hit umpire Rich Garcia in the eye with his cap during an argument in the Yankees-Orioles game last Saturday night in Baltimore.

"I couldn't get to my car after the game, there were a thousand people waiting there," said a grinning Weaver. "I'll get those 50,000 people at Baltimore to go (to a hearing). They witnessed what happened."

"I don't have a reaction (to MacPhail's ruling) because there is nothing to react to. I don't pay any attention to it. A lot of people have been asking me silly questions. I'm afraid the media is overreacting to this, it doesn't mean much."

The Orioles, shooting for their second straight championship in the tough AL East, have been red-hot since June 15, compiling a 42-18 record. Their latest victory was a 6-5, 10-inning triumph over the Angels Wednesday night.

"We'll just have to do our best if he goes out," said slugging Baltimore outfielder Ken Singleton. "It'll be like a player is hurt for a couple of days."

MacPhail made the decision to take action against the Orioles manager after reviewing written reports from the umpires, talking with Weaver, and watching stop-action television tape of the incident.

Weaver was ejected from the game for throwing equipment on the field in protest of a called strike, but remained in the dugout, and the confrontation with Garcia occurred later in the game.

Brett Resumes Batting Attack; Yanks, Birds Both Get Victories

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

George Brett resumed hitting after a one-game "slump" and the New York Yankees remained 2½-games ahead of the Baltimore Orioles in the American League East but both events were overshadowed by Dan Spillner's near no-hitter Wednesday night.

Spillner, a Cleveland right-hander with a 5.45 earned run average, came within two outs of a no-hitter before rookie Leo Sutherland singled for Chicago's only hit — an opposite-field grounder between third and short — as the Indians downed the White Sox 3-0.

George Brett of the Kansas City Royals went 3-for-3 Wednesday night against the Texas Rangers with two singles and a home run. Brett now is hitting .406 in his quest to become the first 400 hitter since Ted Williams in 1941.

"I had fun; I enjoyed it," said Spillner. "After he got the hit I said to myself, 'Two outs to go and then we go home.'"

Spillner quickly got those outs to preserve his first AL shutout. He had two with San Diego in the National League, including a one-hitter against — who else? — the Chicago Cubs.

"In that game, Rick Monday got the hit off my thigh in the fourth or fifth inning," Spillner recalled. "But I walked five or six in that game. Tonight I was in command. This was more rewarding. Without a doubt it's the best game I've ever thrown."

Elsewhere, the Kansas City Royals turned back the Texas Rangers 5-3 in 12 innings, the Yankees downed the Seattle Mariners 6-4, the Orioles held off the California Angels 6-5 in 10 innings, the Oakland A's edged the Boston Red Sox 2-1, the Detroit Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-6 and the Toronto Blue Jays trounced the Minnesota Twins 10-4.

Spillner walked Lamar Johnson after retiring the first 11 batters and then retired 11 more before issuing another walk to Chet Lemon. He had a 1-0 count on Sutherland when the rookie outfielder broke up the no-hit bid.

Royals 5, Rangers 3

One night after his 30-game hitting streak was snapped, Brett rapped his 15th homer and two singles in three at-bats, boosting his average to .406, but Willie Aikens' sacrifice fly in the 12th inning drove in the winning run as the Royals stretched their winning streak to eight games.

Hal McRae opened the 12th with a double and Brett was intentionally walked for the second time. Darrell Porter also walked, loading the bases, and Aikens followed with his sacrifice fly. Brett later scored on a wild pitch.

Yankees 6, Mariners 4

Bobby Murcer drove in three runs with a single and double and Tommy John picked up his 17th victory. The Yankees took a 3-2 lead with two runs in the third inning on RBI-singles by Murcer and Reggie Jackson.

New York's Bob Watson

homered in the second inning and Murcer added a two-run double in the seventh. Tom Paciorek and Juan Beniquez homered for Seattle.

Orioles 6, Angels 5

Doug DeCinces' two-out single in the top of the 10th scored John Lowenstein with the winning run after the Orioles blew a three-run lead in the ninth. Lowenstein started the 10th with a walk and stole second. Lowenstein went to third on Dan Graham's long fly and DeCinces followed with his game-winning hit.

Home runs by Ken Singleton and Benny Ayala in the sixth inning helped Baltimore take a 5-2 lead but the Angels tied it with three runs in the ninth on Rick Miller's RBI-double and a two-run single by Bert Campaneris.

A's 2, Red Sox 1

Mario Guerrero's eighth-inning home run, the second and last hit off Dennis Eckersley, gave Mike Norris his 17th victory. Eckersley didn't allow a hit until Mitchell Page opened the Oakland seventh with a single. He stole second as Dave Revering struck out and continued to third base when catcher

Carlton Fisk's throw went into center field.

Tigers 8, Brewers 6

John Wockenfuss slammed a three-run homer, Tom Brookens added a two-run shot and Lance Parrish homered with the bases empty to help Gerry Ujdur pick up his first major league victory. Sixto Lezcano, Sal Bando and Ben Oglivie homered for Milwaukee.

However, Bando grounded into a triple play after the Brewers cut an 8-2 lead to 8-5 in the eighth. Third baseman Brookens, who had a perfect 5-for-5 night at bat, also started Detroit's first triple play in 11 years.

Blue Jays 10, Twins 4

Ernie Whitt drove in three runs with a double and triple and Jackson Todd posted his first major league victory in almost three years. Whitt tripled a run across in the fifth inning as the Blue Jays took a 3-1 lead and then capped a four-run eighth with his two-run double to back Todd, who scattered 10 hits, including home runs by Ron Jackson and Mike Cabbage. Todd's last triumph came for the New York Mets against Montreal on Sept. 6, 1977.

Allen Elder beat Mike Brown on the third hole of sudden death to win the Wednesday Nite Tourney at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

Both players were 21 under par at the end of the 72 hole tournament. Robert Beacham was only two strokes back and Junior Knox finished six strokes off the pace.

David Manning had the best round of the evening, shooting a nine under par 27.

Drug Use Worries Council

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The use of drugs among professional athletes is in the opinion of many no more or less prevalent than the frequency with which the remainder of society seeks mind-altering escapes. One official representing professional basketball players when asked about marijuana use said he's "not very concerned about that." But Larry Fleisher, legal counsel to the NBA Players Association, joins league officials in being concerned about the use of cocaine among players. While he is unwilling to accept at face value a story by The Los Angeles Times that 40 to 75 percent of the league's players have tried cocaine, he is disturbed by the report.

"I think most of them recognize the danger of it (cocaine), but some apparently do not," said Fleisher in discussing what some have said is the widespread use of cocaine by NBA players. "The description of the term 'widespread' varies. But it is being used. I'm sure it is."

No one, including NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, has denied that players use drugs. That, both in the words of O'Brien and Fleisher, is a commentary of sports on society, circa 1980.

"It's really scary," said one player who pointed out that drugs are becoming commonplace among some of "the best players in the league, players who don't even drink." And some club owners make no attempt to deny the existence of a problem that for years has been hushed up by a sports establishment that prohibits its players from endorsing items such as cigarettes and alcoholic beverages. "There is not a team in the league you can confidently say does not have a drug problem," said Frank Layden, general manager of the Utah Jazz.

Bernard King of the Jazz has been charged with possession of cocaine in addition to the well-documented problems he has had with alcohol. Another Jazz player, Terry Furlow, died in auto accident last May. An autopsy revealed traces of cocaine in his body.

The NBA is planning an expanded drug education program, but at least one of its teams — the Golden State Warriors — has already gone beyond that. Owner Franklin Mieuli said the Warriors have a drug surveillance program because Coach Al Attles is so antidrug that "if our stickout player was found to be into drugs he'd throw him off the team."

Mieuli, in what was perhaps his own brand of modern commentary on the social habits of athletes who for decades were pictured in many reserve list. Cut Glenn Robinson, defensive end; Joe Henry, Eric Rouse and Andre Grier, wide receivers; Paul Campbell, running back; Alvin Hall and Vince Hyland, defensive backs; Jim Howard, linebacker; and Dan Jakovich, offensive tackle.

MIAMI DOLPHINS—Placed Don Sewell, lineman, on the injured reserve list. Cut Mark Clifford, tight end; Benny Leverette, running back; Ben Long, linebacker; Doug Lantz, center-guard; James Jackson, defensive end; and Alfred Wring, defensive tackle.

MINNESOTA VIKINGS—Cut Steve Niehaus, defensive tackle; Dennis Moseley, running back; Fred Bock and Tom Jurich, kickers; Mark Trestman, safety; Eric Hergens, tight end; Mike Forrest, running back; Thomas Lane, defensive back; Anthony Norman and Nick Bouammiel, defensive linemen; Anthony Phillips, and Ken Brown, receivers; and Grayland Jackson, Robert Meyer and Clark Coy, defensive backs. Acquired Skip Johnson, punter, on waivers from the Seattle Seahawks.

DES Ban May Provoke An Extended Court Fight

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — American cattlemen, once operators of an unfettered industry on the Great Plains, are now shadowed by probable federal prosecution of DES violators and the possibility of closer regulatory scrutiny.

But the cowboys won't go down without a fight, and an extended court battle could be in the offing. Three months have passed since the U.S. Food and Drug Administration revealed that more than 300 feedlots in 23 states used the synthetic hormone DES — diethylstilbestrol — to stimulate livestock growth after a ban took effect last Nov. 1.

Another 50 companies distributed DES, which has been linked to increased cancer risk in humans, after sales were outlawed July 13, 1979, the FDA said.

Although violators made up less than 10 percent of the nation's feedlots, the inquiry's effects rippled through the cattle industry. Cattlemen wonder if they will be prosecuted for ignoring a ban many say they didn't understand. And they worry the government may get deeper involved in cattle operations.

Letters are being sent this month to some of the 475 companies the FDA said distributed or used DES after the ban. After hearings at district offices, recommendations will go to the FDA in Washington, and some will be sent to the Justice Department for prosecution.

Federal officials have vowed to seek stiff penalties for violations, and the maximum would be three years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Cattlemen say jail terms and fines are just too much.

"Up to now, everybody's been pretty passive," said Kenneth Knight, a Lyons, Kan., rancher and president of the state's livestock association. "But I don't think any of the cowboys are going to take a long jail sentence or a big, heavy fine without a fight. It could be a long, drawn-out legal battle."

FDA learned the DES ban was being ignored in March when a cattle feeding company confessed it was using DES implants, triggering one of the biggest FDA inquiries in history. It cost more than $750,000 and uncovered widespread violations.

FDA spokesman Bill Rados said the inquiry is virtually complete, and although a few feedlots could still be using DES, "we hope the actions we've taken have put the fear of the Lord into people."

The cattle industry, meanwhile, is getting rid of DES. A program allowing cattlemen to surrender DES to county agents — no questions asked and no records kept — began last summer in Kansas, where the FDA found more violators, 91, than in any other state.

Dr. Homer Caley, extension veterinarian at Kansas State University and program director, called the effort "extremely successful."

He declined to say how much DES was collected, disclosing only that it was enough to implant "several hundred thousand head of cattle." The DES was turned over to the FDA for disposal.

DES, which had been given to livestock since 1954 to speed growth, first was linked to cancer when daughters of women who took the drug in hopes of preventing miscarriages — it was later found to be ineffective — showed a higher-than-normal cancer incidence. Recent studies have found the cancer risk is extremely rare, with only 450 cases found to date.

DES was popular for livestock because it speeded growth by 10 percent to 15 percent and was cheaper than less effective growth stimulants.

Seven years ago, the FDA told farmers they could no longer implant DES, but a court battle reversed the ban. In 1976 a new ban was imposed. It was upheld last summer.

The FDA has said there is "no appreciable health risk" from eating DES-treated beef, and the "hazard is not from a few exposures, but from continuing exposures over a number of years."

The impact of the DES inquiry on beef consumption and prices is difficult to determine, authorities say. "I'm not convinced there will be much impact at all on prices or cattlemen's income," said Michael Sands, agricultural economist at Kansas State.

Cattle treated with DES since the ban, about 435,000 head by the FDA's latest count, have been held off the market until the drug can be excreted from their bodies.

But cattle prices have risen recently, offsetting much of the cost of keeping the animals alive. "The drought and tight supply of beef will have more effect on beef prices than the DES," Sands said.

Cattlemen now worry that the FDA will step up regulation. "They'll use DES as an excuse to bring a lot of regulations up for enactment," said Burton Eller, lobbyist for the National Cattlemen's Association. "We haven't been scrutinized very closely in some areas. But we might be in the future."

Although FDA officials deny there has been any change in the official position toward the industry, they acknowledge there may be a different attitude.

"It's something that's on the mind of regulators here at FDA and perhaps other agencies as well," said Rados.

"There's been a trend to rely on voluntary compliance," he said. "But when a voluntary program, such as DES, fails as significantly as this one has, it's always going to put a bitter taste in the mouths of the people who trusted the industry."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy and gain your most cherished aims. An intuitive prompting could be erroneous now, so don't follow it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle those practical affairs with skill and accomplish a great deal today. Take no risks in money matters.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Joining with friends and discussing mutual problems can be helpful in solving them. Handle communications wisely.

Pat O'Brien And Wife Are Signed

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Pat O'Brien and his wife, Eloise, have been signed for "Ragtime," which will film in England.

Director Milos Forman hired them to join James Cagney, who is returning to the screen after a 20-year absence. O'Brien will play Harry K. Thaw's attorney, and Mrs. O'Brien will play Thaw's mother.

The O'Briens closed their 1980 theater tour in "The Second Time Around" at Denver's Edlitch Gardens. They will sail with the Cagneys for London on Sept. 28 to begin work on the movie.

Public TV Returns To 'The Golden Age'

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP)—Public television puts on the rose-hued glasses this evening, and takes a glance backward at TV's "Golden Age" with a kinescope presentation of Rod Serling's 1956 masterpiece, "Requiem for a Heavyweight."

It's the right moment for such an endeavor, when today's television industry is struck dead and the postponement of its fall season fare is not universally lamented. Now NBC announces it plans to bring "The Flintstones" back — on prime time. Yes, a perfect time to bathe in the bright memory of a Golden Age.

"Requiem" has come to be a symbol of what was right with television in its beginnings, a standard against which to measure the medium's progress.

Some of the principals from that "Playhouse 90" offer their views in a prologue to tonight's presentation of "Requiem," part of a series called "The Golden Age of Television."

"I think it was just a marvelous time," says Jack Palance, acclaimed for his portrayal of the vanquished pug, Mountain McClintock. "I wish there was something like it again... there's always a yearning and hankering for something that's past. But it was a lovely period."

Jack Klugman, host for the series:

"You know, live television drama is a rarity these days. But there was a time back in the '50s when you could find at least one live drama on TV every single night... Oh, they were exciting, and they were classic and they were modern and intriguing — wonderful...

 "We had incredible writers. We had Paddy Chayefsky and Gore Vidal and Reginald Rose and Rod Serling. We had brilliant young directors. We had Johnny Frankheimer and Sidney Lumet and Arthur Penn and Ralph Nelson..."
 Television back then was "not like today," Klugman tells us. "It was really exciting."

Subscription TV Fights 'Black Box'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Cable television customers who use "black box" decoders to get pay-TV signals they are not entitled to could be prosecuted, an industry spokesman says.

Rinaldo S. Brutoco, chairman of the Subscription Television Association, said Wednesday at a news conference that his group was campaigning against the bootleg decoders.

"We will annihilate the pirates," Brutoco said.

The news conference followed a ruling by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati banning the sale of decoders while litigation against three manufacturers of the devices continued.

Chartwell Communications Group and National Subscription Television-Detroit, two pay-TV concerns, have sued the manufacturers, Pony Electronics, Video Vend and Signals and Systems Inc.

The appeals court action overturned a ruling in Detroit by U.S. District Judge Robert DeMascio, who refused on Aug. 14 to issue an injunction against the manufacturers.

The black boxes unscramble a coded signal that the pay-TV concerns send over cable systems. Legitimate customers have decoders provided by the companies.

Also Wednesday, two suburban Detroit men were charged with violating the Federal Communications Act by allegedly planning to manufacture black boxes.

 Opening lead: Six of ♣.

It was only yesterday we issued a warning against senseless falsecards, but that does not mean that, in many cases, a falsecard is not mandatory! Consider this hand.

The only point of interest in the auction is North's decision to jump to three no trump with only 8 HCP—surely warranted, for his good five-card suit rated to produce five tricks for partner. That has to be better than many 9 or 10 HCP balanced hands that may, at best, yield two or three tricks.

West led his fourth-best spade, and before playing from dummy to the first trick, declarer paused to survey his prospects. If the club finesse succeeded, declarer had plenty of tricks—11 to be precise. But what if the king of clubs was in the West hand?

Obviously, if the defense was alive to the situation, they would then be able to cash at least four heart tricks, perhaps five, to defeat the contract. Could anything be done to deflect them from finding the winning defense?

Since declarer needed only four tricks outside of the diamond suit, he found an elegant way to convince West that he struck gold with the opening lead. Declarer played low from dummy and captured East's jack of spades with the ace!

Declarer crossed to dummy with a high diamond and led a club to the queen. West won the king and, completely certain from declarer's play to the first trick that East held the queen of spades, gleefully continued with a low spade, expecting to take four tricks in the suit. He was more than a little taken aback when declarer won the queen of spades and cashed out his minor-suit winners to make his contract with an overtrick.

after hearing that NBC is going to bring "The Flintstones" to prime time, to swallow that line and its implication:

That is, that television was once an inspired and glorious art form with grand promise for the future before the low-browed public and the industry's moneygrubbers and salesmen conspired to subvert this great national treasure, television.

Oh yeah? The 1956 season, in which "Playhouse 90" brought "Requiem" and other dramas to CBS, was also the season of "What's My Line?" "The $64,000 Question," "The $64,000 Challenge," "National Bowling Champions," "It's Polka Time," "Name That Tune," "Circus Time," "Ozark Jubilee" and that standard of high thought, "Do You Trust Your Wife?" Network shows, all.

Of that season's top 10 shows, three were comedy-variety shows, two were sitcoms, two were game shows, one was a western, one was suspense. There was but one live drama show in the lot, CBS' "General Electric Theater."

So, watch "Requiem for a Heavyweight" tonight, if your PBS station is carrying it, but consider that in its lofty Golden Age, television was precisely what it is today — a business that sells viewers to advertisers. Occasionally, then as now, a gem slipped through.

"Requiem" was certainly one.

Anniversary Of Virginia Dare

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — This week marks the 393rd anniversary of the birth and christening of the first child born of English parents in America.

The story of her birth may have been read by more people of the world than that of any other American. Here it is as told in John White's journal which was published by Richard Hakluyt in 1589: "The 18 (of August, 1587). Elenora, daughter of the Governour, and wife to Ananias Dare, one of the Assistants, was delivered of a daughter in Roanoke, and the same was christened there the Sunday following, and because this childe was the first Christian borne in Virginia, she was named Virginia."

The "Governour," of course, was John White himself. An artist and cartographer, he had been in the Ralph Lane colony which spent nearly a year on Roanoke Island before returning to England in 1586, and he had come back the following year as governor of a new colony of more than 100 men, women and children.

Among them were his daughter, whose name he spelled "Elenora," and her husband, Ananias Dare. Their hazardous journey during Elenora's late pregnancy indicates the optimism of the colonists. They had come to stay and to propagate the New World.

We know nothing of Virginia Dare except what her grandfather wrote: She was born on Monday and was christened the following Sunday, Aug. 24. She disappeared along with the colonists after White sailed for England for additional supplies. In history, she remains but a name.

But few names have become more famous in America. Fiction picked up where history left off. Dozens of books and articles have been written about her, all of them from the fertile imaginations of their authors.

In 1978, Robert D. Arner, in the "Southern Literary Review," traced the emergency of an entire mythology surrounding Virginia Dare.

Sallie Southall Cotten, for instance, wrote a book attributing to the Indians the legend that Virginia was transformed into a white doe and still lives in the woods near Fort Raleigh.

The county in which she was born is named Dare, and the United States issued in 1937 a silver half-dollar and a postage stamp in her honor. Virginia Dare is the name of a wine and a variety of commercial establishments.

Virginia Dare has another distinction: Her birth certificate was signed by the president of the United States.

The document, of course, was signed 350 years later when President Franklin D. Roosevelt visited Fort Raleigh and signed the delayed certificate. It is now in the State Archives.

Although there is no authentic likeness of Virginia Dare, there is an imaginary one — one that surprises unsuspecting strollers in the Elizabethan Gardens at Fort Raleigh.

It is a large marble statue that has an intriguing history of its own.

Louise Lander, a native of Massachusetts, became interested in the story of the Roanoke colonies, and in 1859 in Italy she carved a mythical Virginia Dare dressed in a fishnet.

On its way to America, the ship carrying the statue sank off Spain, but two years later the statue was raised.

In Boston it survived a fire in the home of a man who died before he paid for it.

Miss Lander retrieved the marble Virginia Dare and left it to the state of North Carolina in her will.

For a while it was displayed in the Supreme Court building, but the scanty dress led to some embarrassment to the dignity of the court, so it was placed in storage.

Next it was sent to Roanoke Island, but the building in which it was stored was washed into the sound, carrying the statue into the salt water again.

After its second recovery, Paul Green set the marble Virginia up in his garden in creatures in full size are among the best in the world. The distortion of walls is due to wide-angle camera lens. (AP Laserphoto)

Chapel Hill later had it placed in the Elizabethan Gardens near the site of her birth. At last Virginia Dare is back home — in marble if not in the skin of a doe.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I am a teacher in a high school. One of my incidental assignments is sex education. The program is very specifically planned and I am allowed little or no leeway. I have two children of my own, 15 and 13. They are slightly older than my students. The problem of sex education in our home is almost as confusing as it is in the classroom. The same barriers exist. It is almost impossible to communicate with my own children and with my students as I would like to.

I know that my sex education teaching is inadequate and outdated. Can I enlist your help in breaking through those barriers that seem to be limiting me so much? — Mrs. S.C., N.J.
Dear Mrs. C.:

Sex education is far too important to be just an additional or incidental assignment to a teacher whose main interest is history, geography or literature. Your sincere frankness and concern may open avenues to a more enlightened approach to sex education. Not too many educators — or, I might add, physicians either — allow themselves the luxury of such self-appraisal as you express. The result is that we tend to perpetuate many of the errors that were made by those who inadequately taught us.

"What comes naturally" was once considered a substitute for good, mature sex education. Today, we recognize that the emotional and physical destiny of our children is at stake. Consequently, sex education given by untrained people is one of the real threats to modern society.

We are in the midst of a great sex revolution. There no longer is room for mid-Victorian concepts of sex. As adults we must be liberated from the shackles of our own sex attitudes if we are to help emancipate our children. We must help them to cherish this emancipation by appreciating the rewards that come from discipline, morality and self-respect. This is a joint venture by educators and parents. And parents must recognize when they, too, need direction.

Those who teach sex education in the schools should have exquisite training, coupled with psychological insight, if our ultimate goals are to be attained. To assign sex education to a teacher simply because she is a teacher can be a threat rather than a gift to the students.

I have just finished reading a remarkable book, "Sex Without Shame." The author, a physician, Dr. Alayne Yates, is professor of child psychiatry at the University of Arizona. She is a distinguished pediatrician and psychiatrist. She is also a mother.

In the book, published by William Morrow & Company, Dr. Yates displays enormous wisdom and understanding. The book stresses the pitfalls that must be avoided and breaks down many of the barriers that have interfered with proper communication in sex education. Dr. Yates opens avenues that will pave the way for the ultimate happiness of children, adolescents and adults.

Just As In U.S., European Car Makers See A Recession

By ROBERT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — The giant Mirafiori car production plant in Turin has closed this August vacation season for five weeks instead of the usual four. Many of its workers now fear that they may lose their jobs when they return.

The extended shutdown at the 38,500-worker plant reflects the growing troubles of its owner, Fiat, as well as of the entire West European auto industry.

"Certainly I'm worried by the rumors that we could be fired," said a 40-year-old Sicilian father of two children who operates one of Fiat's metal-stamping machines. Another employee who makes chassis said he was putting aside money "for the hard times ahead."

Company managers throughout Western Europe fear that a sales slump in most major markets in the first half of this year could deepen into an industry-wide recession similar to the one that hit Detroit in the spring.

"The market is very weak and we cannot keep up the high level of production that we planned for 1980," Hans Thorenqvist, an executive at Swedish manufacturer Saab-Scania, said in an interview.

Top auto firms in Britain, France and West Germany have laid off employees or trimmed working hours.

Fiat hasn't yet reached the plight of Chrysler, which needed a loan from the U.S. government to survive, but it is the largest private auto company in Europe facing major financial difficulties. It lost money on its car and truck operations last year and laid off two-thirds of its blue-collar workers for up to seven days in June and July. Vice Chairman Umberto Agnelli, whose family controls Fiat, says "massive" firings — the first in the company's history — will be necessary in the autumn.

The problems in Europe are almost exactly the same as the ones plaguing U.S. auto companies.

Consumers are shunning showrooms because of sharply higher gasoline prices and the eroding effect of inflation on the purchasing power of their wages and salaries, according to industry economists. Many potential buyers are waiting for new scaled-down models, which save on fuel.

In addition, an onslaught of Japanese imports has taken 10 percent of the West German market and a record 18 percent, despite quotas, in Britain. Italy and France also restrict purchases of Japanese cars.

Even without these factors, auto executives admit that it would have been hard to match last year's 10 percent gain in sales volume in Europe. But sales in the first six months of 1980 plummeted in Britain by 16 percent and in West Germany by 12 percent. Sales of new cars dropped 6.1 percent in France.

Inventories of unsold cars have soared. Fiat, which exports half its cars to other European countries, has more than 70,000 in parking lots. Peugeot of France announced layoffs and offered a 250-franc ($65) bonus to any worker bringing in a customer. Adam Opel, the West German subsidiary of General Motors, introduced financial incentives leading 9,000 workers to retire early. BL of Britain, the former British Leyland, laid off 5,000 personnel.

The industry has placed much of the blame on Japan. The Japanese sold 600,000 cars in the European Common Market in 1979 and bought slightly under 40,000 from the nine member nations. They are anxious to penetrate Europe further and Nissan and Toyota are seeking permission to build plants in Italy and Spain.

The Japanese have benefited from improvements in their technology and productivity and what is generally admitted to be brilliant marketing. They design their models to suit European tastes and include elaborate accessories.

Economists note that Japan also has enjoyed a great advantage from the steady slide of the yen on foreign exchange markets, which reduces the cost of Japanese products for foreign consumers.

British union leaders have called for curbs on Japanese imports and several companies asked the Common Market to investigate. But some executives want to preserve an open market.

"We meet the stronger competition with innovations and investments," Opel General Manager James F. Waters says.

Many Europeans are also concerned about the threat of tough competition from U.S. companies.

General Motors is building plants in Austria and Spain and Ford is already well-entrenched in Europe. Both companies are designing "world cars," or single models using standardized parts produced all over the globe. That efficiency will be hard to match and could force a shakeout in Europe.

"The United States has only 2½ major car companies," says Fiat Chairman Giovanni Agnelli, Umberto's older brother, pointing to the troubled Chrysler as the half company. "In Europe we have six or seven, and it could be hard to keep them all alive."

Agnelli's answer to what he calls the "challenge from abroad" is increased cooperation among European automakers. Several are already sharing research and development data and Fiat and Peugeot are jointly building a plant in southern Italy to make small vans.

Through joint ventures the European firms can pool their resources and achieve large-scale efficiency, Agnelli says.

Fiat may be one of the top candidates in need of foreign assistance, industry analysts say. The company would have plunged deeply into the red last year except for its earnings from financial operations and some of its smaller industrial sectors.

The company is plagued by labor disputes, and strikes during labor negotiations last year cost 200,000 cars in lost production, particularly in its most popular smaller models. It plans to reduce output in the second half of this year by 30 percent, which translates into dismissals of 10,000 to 15,000 of its Italian workforce of 141,000.

Fiat is the largest private company in Italy where 40 percent of major industry is government-owned. Its operations are a matter of public debate. Unions and leftist political parties claimed a major victory at the end of July when Umberto Agnelli was forced to give up his post as managing director after drawing fire for his proposals to dismiss workers.

The only major auto companies in Europe in worse condition than Fiat are BL in Britain, which is state-owned, and Spain's SEAT, in which the Spanish government owns the majority and Fiat owns a third. Last year, BL lost $292.8 million, which its chairman, Sir Michael Edwardes, blamed largely on strikes.

COOKING OUT IS EVERYDAY CUSTOM — Children from a small village in Haiti cook on an open fire along the roadside from Port au Prince to Jacmel. The terrain in the background is rocky and steep, which makes terraced farming a necessity. (AP Laserphoto)
