Greenville Fire-Rescue Department Seeks Additional Manpower

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"What we want to do is try to educate the public as far as manpower is concerned...what we have asked from the city," a spokesman for Greenville Fire-Rescue Department employees said last week.

The spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said 66 members of the department — including two of the three assistant chiefs — signed a request to Chief Jenness Allen, to be fowarded to the city manager, asking that additional manpower be provided for the department.

The request, dated July 14 and given to Chief Allen on July 15, asked that, "any personnel that this department is short be replaced as soon as an acceptable applicant can be found," that, "one additional man per shift not previously budgeted," be added, and that, "the city check into obtaining Federal funds for handicapped personnel for dispatching duties after 5 o'clock and on weekends and holidays."

In addition to the request for additional manpower, the spokesman for the firefighters said, a verbal request was made for a meeting between the chief, the city manager, the mayor, and the city personnel manager and a nine-member committee representing department employees to discuss the requests.

"We're getting a lot of run around," the man suggested, explaining that employees were told they would receive an answer to their requests, first on July 23, then on July 30.

"They said we couldn't meet with the mayor because whatever the city manager said was the final word, and we still haven't had a meeting with the committee." However, the spokesman said, the city manager did meet with each of the three Fire-Rescue Department shifts.

At the shift meetings, he said, employees were told, "if you want the men, it will cost you your merit raises and cost of living increases." The shift meetings he suggested, "were just their way of getting around it (meeting with the committee)."

The spokesman for the fire-rescuemen said, "we need to hire more men for the simple reason that we are short of manpower."

The fire-medic explained that the 1980-81 city budget authorized 70 men for the department — the same number as authorized for 1979-80 — not including the chief, an administrative clerk and a dispatcher, and fire prevention officers. However, three positions were frozen by the city council, resulting in a net reduction of manpower to 67 men — one less than was authorized for the 1978-1979 fiscal year.

"The citizens don't know what's going on down there," the spokesman said, "and won't nobody tell them."

Basically, there are 22 men assigned to each shift, the firefigher explained, "less two on vacation each week, and the station duty man after 5 p.m. on weekdays and on weekends and holidays," when the dispatcher and administrative clerk are off. Take away the, "six drivers and six men assigned to rescue (three men per truck at the central and West End stations)...that leaves seven to fight fire at three different stations. That's if nobody is sick or one hasn't quit."

Of the seven men left to fight fire, according to the fire-medic, some are officers, who, "need to be outside checking the exposures and sizing up the situation," rather than inside where they can't get an overall picture of what is going on.

"We've been taught, 'don't go in a burning structure by yourself.' Now you have to go in by yourself.

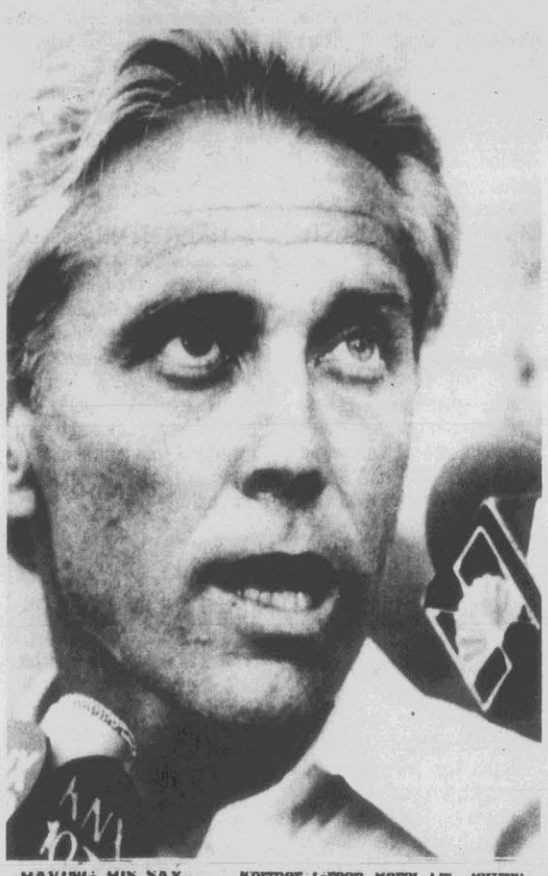

"It seems like now, we're going to have to go back to the old way of fighting fires...stand on the outside and just throw water in," rather than entering a building and putting water on the base of the fire, as modern firefighting techniques dictate.

According to the spokesman, a League of Municipalities study received by the city in 1979, suggested that six new firemen be assigned to the West End substation because of the opening of Carolina East Mall and planned annexation in the Western section of the city. "They got around those six positions by putting the rescue unit at the West End station. That just cut us short of manpower uptown."

The League study, which said the headquarters station, "is presently undermanned," suggested a minimum of three men be assigned to the department's 85-foot snorkel, "we now run one, the driver;" four men on the first run pumper, "we now have three;" and a minimum of three men on the second run pumper, "where we run one or two."

Last Sunday at the West End station, the spokesman explained, the department had four men to staff the two pumpers assigned there and three men assigned to the rescue unit at the station. "It was the same way at the central station," he added, "four men on two trucks and three men on the rescue unit."

Free On Bail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Green Beret physician Jeffrey MacDonald, free on bail after reversal of his conviction in the killings of his wife and daughters, on Saturday planned a reunion with his mother, a roast lamb dinner and the start of a brief vacation.

MacDonald was released Friday from Terminal Island Federal Prison, three weeks after the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned his murder conviction on grounds that he had been denied a speedy trial. The killings of his wife, Colette, 26, and daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, were 10 years ago. He was convicted in 1979.

MacDonald appeared before U.S. Magistrate Ralph J. Geffen to sign documents for his release on $100,000 bail. He had to certify that he was unable to surrender his passport because it could not be found. He also was told he must remain in California and contact a probation officer three times a week.

Report Given On Abortive Attempt To Rescue American Hostages

By E. MICHAEL MYERS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American hostages in Iran may have lost their best chance for freedom because of too few helicopters and too much secrecy in the high-risk U.S. rescue mission launched last April, a special military review panel said Saturday.

Two more helicopters might not have guaranteed success, but would have improved the mission's chances in the daring raid across the hostile desert, the panel said.

But it added that "no one action or lack of action" was responsible for the failure of the raid.

The chairman of the panel set up by the Joint Chiefs of Staff said there was no evidence of "culpable neglect or incompetence" in the planning or execution of the mission that cost the lives of eight servicemen and failed to rescue the 53 American hostages.

"We came to the conclusion that the plan, as executed, was the only reasonable way to do the job," Ret. Adm. J.L. Holloway III told a Pentagon news conference. It was the "best chance for success under the circumstances," he said.

But Holloway declined to say if he would have endorsed such a complex and daring plan today on the basis of the information the panel gathered.

He refused to make a public judgment on the performance of the overall mission commander, Army Maj. Gen. James Vaught. But after a news conference Saturday, the Pentagon issued a statement in Holloway's name saying there was no more experienced and competent candidate to serve as commander.

The review of the April 24-25 mission by active and retired general staff officers assessed no specific blame for the failure. The basic concept of the mission was sound, they judged, but it came to grief through several factors.

Under the plan, eight helicopters based on the carrier Nimitz in the Persian Gulf were to rendezvous with six C-130 transport planes in an Iranian salt desert 200 miles south of Tehran on April 24. There the copters were to be refueled and flown to a mountain hideout near Tehran where the commandos would wait during the day. Details of the actual freeing of the hostages have never been officially disclosed.

Six copters were considered the minimum necessary and eight were assigned for a safety margin.

But one helicopter crew was blinded by a desert sandstorm and returned to the Nimitz during the mission. Another chopper was abandoned en route to the rendezvous because of navigational equipment failure. At the Desert One staging area the vital sixth chopper was knocked out by hydraulic problems.

Planners said if 10 helicopters had been used instead of eight, it would have required another C-130 to ferry fuel and could have imperiled secrecy, but Holloway said the panel disagreed.

"This point incidentally is described as a difference of opinion among professionals," he said.

"It was felt to have the proper margins of fuel, that 10 was too many. We suggest that 10 perhaps could have been accommodated without additional fuel in the desert."

Fear Heavy Toll In Ferry Sinking

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (UPI) — Divers recovered the bodies of 35 people who drowned in the sinking of a ferry and authorities said Saturday the death toll could reach 75 before search operations end.

More than 100 people were aboard the vessel late Friday when it sank in Campeche Sound, 200 yards short of its berth at Puerto Real, 25 miles northeast of Ciudad del Carmen.

The ferry was swamped after a steel plate on its hull fell off, officials said.

A team of 8 to 10 divers from the state oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos were searching the murky water for possible victims trapped in buses, cars and trucks that sank with the ferry, Ruben Selem, municipal council secretary, said.

Among the sunken vehicles was an intercity bus carrying about 40 people, all of who are believed to have drowned, Selem said. He said there were only 25 known survivors, all of them hospitalized for shock.

Khomeni Meets Rajai On Cabinet Formation

By United Press International

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini met Saturday with Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai amid reports that political infighting has erupted between fundamentalist hard-liners over the naming of the new Cabinet.

The official Iranian news agency Pars, in a report monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., said Rajai met with Khomeini to report on the selection of his Cabinet, but added that a date has not been set for presenting the names of the appointees to Iran's parliament.

Parliamentary debate on the fate of the 52 American hostages, now in their 294th day of captivity, also is likely to be postponed until a government is formed.

Pars said Rajai's Cabinet selections must meet the approval of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr before their names can be put before the parliament for approval.

"Under the constitution, the president must approve the chosen Cabinet, but the president is away on a trip at present," Rajai was quoted by Pars as saying.

The prime minister added that "therefore, the Cabinet will not be introduced to the Majlis (parliament) tomorrow."

Reports Friday said infighting had broken out over the key posts of foreign minister and national guidance minister.

Counterfeited Money Reported In Greenville

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer

"Frauds, forgeries, and funny money are becoming a real problem in this area," said Detective P.E. Lavin Saturday. Detective Lavin and A. E. McAbee indicated that these types of crimes have not been extensive and caused little concern until this weekend.

McAbee reported that counterfeiting first became apparent around the first week of August. Since that time, bogus bills have been passed at Famous Pizza and Subs on Memorial Drive, Cox Armature, and three incidents have occurred at Darwin Waters Gas Station and Grill. Two of these took place last night.

The corners of twenty dollar bills are being clipped and pasted to one dollar bills. The detectives said that the same procedure is now being used with tens and will probably show up with five dollar bills. "We need to know how many of these bills are floating around," McAbee said.

Though the job of this counterfeiter is rather unprofessional, McAbee said that businesses dealing with hundreds of dollars on a daily basis often find these bills when it is too late to follow up on who is passing them. The banks are discovering the bills and then notifying the businesses that something is wrong.

"When you see a twenty dollar bill, how often do you actually look to see if Jackson's face is in the center," said Detective McAbee. He said it seems that most businesses are taking the losses and not reporting them — others are notifying the authorities when it is too late.

The only physical description of the counterfeiter was given by a seven-year old boy at Famous Pizza and Subs. He was described as being a black male between the ages of 15 and 25.

Detectives McAbee and Lavin stressed the importance of making businesses aware of this situation and to be on the alert. "If two or more corners are torn off a bill," said Lavin, "don't take it."

AN EXAMPLE . . . of a one-dollar bill with $20 denominations pasted on the corners passed off in Greenville this past week.

Pitt Demos Comment On Carter's Nomination

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

At least three Democrats in Pitt County seem satisfied with Pres. Jimmy Carter's nomination at the National Democratic Party Convention held in New York, 11 days ago, although they don't totally support the party platform adopted by a majority vote of the delegates there.

Betty Spier of Bethel, first vice president of the North Carolina Democratic Party and a delegate at the convention, said she at first thought the convention was, "all confused." However, there was, "an underlying order that was remarkable...the exact totals were known, within four or five votes, before the votes were ever taken."

The North Carolina delegation, she explained, "was privy to right much of what was going on," because the Carter-Mondale trailers and news media facilities were located near the North Carolina delegation's seating area.

"There were two media people for every delegate," she said, adding that attending the convention, "was a tremendous learning experience."

Politically, the convention, Mrs. Spier said, "acted as a unifying force for the party," even though many supporters of Sen. Edward Kennedy were disappointed.

"It took the whole time of the convention for the shock to wear off of the Kennedy people," and it may, "take some time for some of them to come around," although she expects a unified party for the November election.

A Carter line whip and a woman's trouble-shooting whip for Carter, Mrs. Spier said Kennedy, "made a magnificant speech...you have to admire his style."

Of Pres. Carter, she said, "I believe he will carry the state," in November. "They realistically think he's going to win...because of the alternatives."

As for the party platform, she said, "I think there are things in the platform that are not part of the philosophy of North Carolina," although, "on a whole, it is a good platform. We'll try to work around some parts of it," that give us some concern, particularly the abortion plank and the stance on the Equal Rights Amendment. "We will not be wed to all parts of the platform in North Carolina."

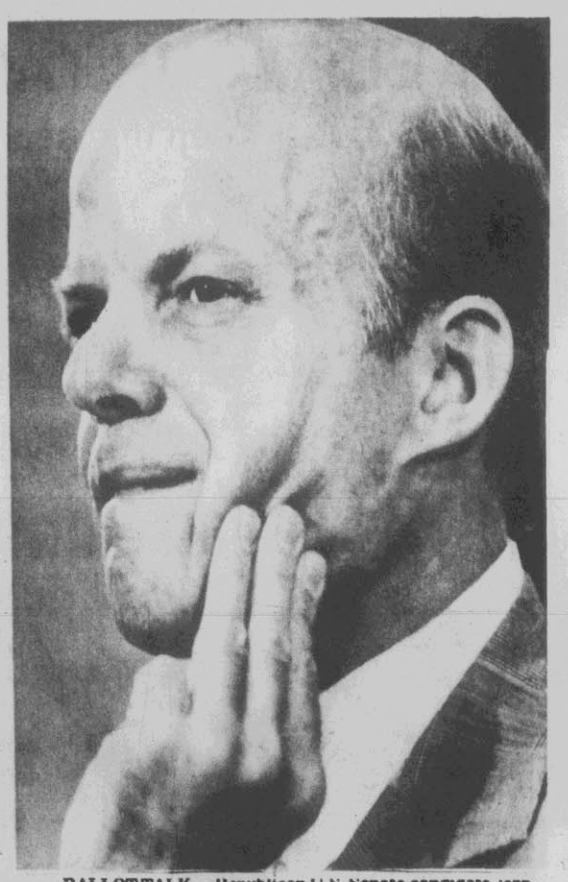

Mrs. Spier noted that there was some concern over the appearance of Communist Workers Party members outside the convention hall and in other areas of the city. There was, "fighting at times," she said, and, "Gov. Hunt did not go on the podium," because of their presence.

Teresa Little, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Little of Greenville, also attended the convention. The 17-year-old Rose High School student was one of two pages from North Carolina.

BALLOT TALK — Republican U.S. Senate candidate John East listens to a question during a news conference in Raleigh Friday. SATURDAY ACCIDENT — Members of the Winterville Rescue Squad give emergency care to one of two victims of a Saturday afternoon accident near Winterville. According to Trooper D. R. Taylor, a truck driven by Arthur Lee McKinney, of Greenville was headed east on rural paved road 1708, when he lost control of the vehicle and ran off the right side of the road and swerved to the left, then overturning. According to Taylor, a passenger, identified as Richard Davenport, of Columbia, was thrown from the truck and seriously injured. Taylor said McKinney was also injured. The officer said McKiney was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after an investigation of the accident. Both men were transpostated to Pitt Memorial Hospital. Husband Jailed, Wife Wants Child Back

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Sally Salim hasn't seen her baby in two years. And her ex-husband Masood, who sparked an international child custody fight by whisking their son off to Pakistan, hasn't seen the outside of a jail in 1½ years.

Until 2-year-old Mohammad is returned to his mother, Salim must stay behind bars, Georgia courts say. But until he gets out, he says he can't get retrieve the child.

Salim will mark his 28th birthday behind bars next week, his second since he was jailed.

"After 500 days in captivity, I was beginning to understand how the American hostages feel. I've seen people serve time for robbery. Now they're going home, and I'm still here," he says.

His American-born ex-wife is bitter, too. Her only comment since the drama began two years ago this month has been, "All I want is my child back."

Despite legal battles that have dragged from DeKalb County court to the state Superior Court to the Georgia Supreme Court, and inquiries by the State Department, Mohammad is still in Pakistan with his father's relatives.

They have no intention of giving him up, and Mrs. Salim can't afford to travel there and engage a Pakistan lawyer to claim the boy.

The drama began in August 1978 when Sally Salim got a court order barring Salim from taking the child during their divorce proceedings. The afternoon the order was signed, Salim took the child to Pakistan.

In January 1979, Salim was shot in the stomach at the suburban Atlanta home of his mother-in-law. Mrs. Salim claims her ex-husband kicked down the door and frightened her family. Salim says he was lured into the house and ambushed. DeKalb police investigated but did not file charges.

When Salim was released from the hospital, he was jailed for violating the restraining order and ordered held until Mohammad was returned to his mother. At the same time, the Salims' divorce became final.

The Georgia Supreme Court later upheld Salim's jailing.

A letter from Salim's father in December 1979 said the child was "hale and hearty ... being brought up in the true Islamic principles and culture."

Since then, the State Department has checked on the child's well-being, but apparently there are no legal channels the U.S. government can use to help Sally Salim get her son back, said her lawyer George Guest.

"The elder Mr. Salim apparently thinks the State Department may try to kidnap the child, so they've been moving him around," Guest said.

Mrs. Salim can't afford to follow the State Department's advice that she go to Pakistan and hire an attorney there to pursue the matter, he added.

Salim, meanwhile, won a second hearing on his jailing in May, and a decision may come this fall, Guest said.

Salim says that if he is released he will try to do what his wife can't — bring their son home.

2-Headed Baby Born In China

PEKING (UPI) — The Xinhua News Agency Saturday reported that a two-headed baby has been born in the seaport town of Tianjin.

The baby has "two respiratory systems and two stomaches," the agency said, "but one heart, one liver and one spleen."

"When one head draws in a breath, the other breathes out. When a nurse gives him an injection in the left hip, the left head cries.

Driving Care Urged

CHARLOTTE — With the opening of school in both Carolinas only a few days off, the Carolina Motor Club (AAA) is requesting motorists within the state to exercise even greater caution than usual when driving their cars.

Last year 44 children in North Carolina, 14 years old or younger, lost their lives in pedestrian traffic accidents. An additional 738 children in North Carolina were seriously injured.

The Charlotte-based motoring organziation said that over 500 children are killed and another 11,000 are injured each year throughout the country while on their way to or from school.

T. Ed Pickard, president of the club, said that 93 percent of all children injured enroute to or from school were struck at locations where there was no type of special school crossing protection such as safety patrols, adult guards or police officers.

He said, "One of the most dangerous things a driver has to watch out for at this time of year is a 'dart out' child — one that suddenly runs in front of a car from behind a parked car of shrubbery."

According to Pickard, the problem of children's pedestrian accidents peaks at age five and six and that it is often a "two-edged sword." He added, "While young people tend to be at a disadvantage in moving traffic situations, accidents are not always their fault. Citations describing the actions of the 1980 AAA School Safety Patrol Lifesaving Medal Award recipients reveal that the careless behavior of motorists can contribute to an accident situation."

Pickard encouraged vehicle operators to slow down in the vicinity of schools, exercise caution where warning signs and flashing signals are in effect, and observe safe procedures in school bus loading areas.

The Carolina Motor Club in conjunction with police departments throughout the state is once again this year conducting their "School's Open — Drive Carefully" program. Posters, bumper strips, television slides and newspaper ads are all furnished free by the club to remind motorists to drive carefully.

Death Toll In Hotel Fire May Reach Six

MEXICO, Mo. (UPI) — As many as six people may have been killed in a raging fire that almost levelled a turn-of-the century hotel cited for numerous safety violations just one day before the blaze.

Three bodies were taken from the ruins of the Hoxsey Hotel Friday and three more people — including two children — were still missing and feared dead.

The fire was under control, but still burning early today. Although the cause was unknown, officials said arson had not been ruled out.

City Manager Gary Eide said building inspectors Wednesday gave the owner, William Stephenson, 10 days to make specific repairs.

"He was put on notice to correct those items, or else the building could have been vacated," Eide said.

Safety problems included a lack of fire extinguishers, improper installation of exit and emergency lighting, improper electrical maintenance and accumulation of waste material, said Eide.

The fire broke out late Thursday in the south wing of the three-story brick building and spread rapidly through much of the 74-year-old structure one block from the center of town. Flames were visible from all parts of Mexico, a north-central Missouri town of 12,000.

Authorities identified the victims as Stella Smith, 29; Homer Earl Willis, 73; and an elderly woman tentatively identified as Opal Portwood. All were residents of the hotel.

Three other people were listed as missing — two fewer than authorities earlier feared.

One of those missing and believed dead was a 6-week-old infant, another a 3-year old. Ms. Smith was the mother of one of the children and aunt of the other. The third was an elderly man.

Nearly 100 firemen from a half-dozen communities fought the fire. Half the building was gutted and it is considered a total loss, officials said.

"The fire apparently started toward the center of the south section and spread very rapidly," said Maj. Ron Face, assistant director of the city's public safety department.

M.L. Stephenson, former owner of the hotel and father of its current owner, said the repairs ordered by the city "had been corrected and were very minor."

The Hoxsey was a Missouri landmark.

"It used to be one of nicest hotels between Kansas City and St. Louis and was on its final legs," said Audrain County Coroner Kevin Farnen.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John B. Anderson on Saturday accused the Carter administration of "playing politics with the defense and security policy of the United States."

The independent presidential candidate said both Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie have injected themselves into President Carter's re-election campaign.

Completing an eight-day coast-to-coast campaign swing, Anderson said Carter sent Muskie to work on his behalf at the Democratic National Convention.

At a news conference, the Illinois Republican congressman also cited a new Carter nuclear policy against military and political targets in the Soviet Union and disclosure last week of a new technology allowing U.S. bombers to evade Soviet radar.

Some national security experts say the new doctrine might permit limited nuclear war, saving widespread destruction of population centers in both the United States and the Soviet Union.

But Anderson said, "I am against the idea that we should be flaunting as an official doctrine that we are ready to fight limited nuclear wars. There is no such thing.

"It would become a general nuclear war which would destroy life on the planet," he said.

"Frankly," Anderson said, "I am getting a little bit tired of people playing politics with the defense and security policy of the United States."

Anderson called for the restoration of a bipartisan foreign policy under which top defense and diplomatic officials would remain aloof from presidential politics.

Anderson has been dogged last week by published reports that he will ask former Wisconsin Gov. Patrick Lucey to become his vice presidential running mate.

The congressman has grown increasingly annoyed at requests that he confirm the decision, and responded angrily on Saturday when it was suggested that he looked foolish by insisting that the selection process is not complete.

"Would you blame me for wanting to make the announcement under conditions of my choosing at an appropriate time?" Anderson said.

Campaign sources say the announcement of Lucey's selection is to be made in Washington on Monday or Tuesday.

In Los Angeles, Anderson is to open two new campaign headquarters and make a number of appearances designed to get him on local television news shows.

Hurricane Headed Seaward

MIAMI (UPI) — Hurricane Charley, which grew quickly out of a "bunch of thunderstorms" off the Virginia coast, took an eastward turn Saturday and meandered away from land.

"It looks like it's going away from the coast," said Gil Clark, a forecaster with the National Hurricane Center. "It's going very slowly, but it's going."

At 6 p.m. EDT, the third hurricane of the 84-day-old season was near latitude 38.0 north, longitude 65.0 west, or about 600 miles east of Norfolk, Va.

Charley, which formed quickly late Friday and early Saturday, packed sustained winds of 80 mph, with gale-force winds extending outward 150 miles to the north and 50 miles to the south, the center said.

No Regrets On VN Statement

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan says he does not regret describing the Vietnam war as a "noble cause" and says he personally wrote that passage in a speech last week.

His comments on Vietnam have been criticized by some columnists and lampooned in several editorial cartoons. In the aftermath of the speech, to the Veterans of Foreign Wars last week, Reagan spokesman Lyn Nofziger said he was surprised by the reaction to the remarks but did not think it would dog Reagan's campaign.

In a brief interview with several reporters on his plane as he flew back late Friday night to California from a campaign appearance in Dallas, Reagan said he was not sorry he brought up the subject of Vietnam. A transcript of his remarks was released Saturday.

Asked whether the reaction to the remarks had overshadowed his call for a military buildup, Reagan said, "Well, that's because you fellas every once in a while are more interested in finding something sensational than in printing the facts."

He said the remark was taken out of context from a paragraph of his speech.

In his speech, Reagan told the VFW:

"For too long, we have lived with the Vietnam syndrome. Much of that syndrome has been created by the North Vietnamese aggressors who now threaten the peaceful people of Thailand. Over and over they told us for nearly 10 years in that war that we were the aggressors bent on imperialistic conquest. They had a plan. It was to win in the field of propaganda here in America what they could not win on the field of battle in Vietnam. As the years dragged on, we were told that peace would come if we would simply stop interfering and go home.

"It is time we recognized that ours was, in truth, a noble cause," Reagan added in his speech.

Reagan, meanwhile, relaxed at home Saturday with no public appearances scheduled until Monday when he holds a news conference with running mate George Bush, who has spent the last week in China.

New National Party

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A new national political party, created at a convention Saturday, hopes to give blacks and other Americans a tool for reforming the way things are, an organizer said.

The party has no name yet, no constitution and may never nominate candidates for presidential elections, said Dr. Manning Marable, a professor of political economy at Cornell University.

Marable, spokesman for the organization, said the party is intended to educate and register voters, rally them around issues and develop their political clout.

He said the organization was needed now because presidential nominees of neither the Republican nor Democratic parties held much hope for the disadvantaged.

The convention originally was intended to determine how an independent party could be formed, but an estimated 750 delegates from about 25 states voted Saturday in favor of organizing now. It is an outgrowth of conventions held previously in 1972 at Gary, Ind., in 1974 at Little Rock, Ark., and in 1976 in Cincinnati.

Wants God Back In Classroom

DALLAS (AP) — The plaintiff in the lawsuit that abolished prayer in public schools said Friday that God should be put back in the classrooms to "defeat anti-God and anti-moral issues."

Bill Murray, son of atheist Madalyn Murrary O'Hair, said removal of prayers from schools was the first stepping stone to the moral crisis now facing the United States.

Murray told a crowd of 10,000 gathered for a 2-day conference urging Christians to mobilize against policies of liberal politicians that one family — his family — had set out 20 years ago to change the face of America.

"She (Mrs. O'Hair) attracted 1,100 followers from that decision. Imagine what 20,000 could do," Murray said, referring to the inherent power of large number of fundamentalist ministers, laymen and political conservatives attending the conference.

To End Flights From Winston-Salem

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C, (AP) — Sunbird Airlines will discontinue its daily commuter flights from Winston-Salem to Charlotte and Raleigh next Friday.

Ralph Quinlan, president of the year-old Denver, N.C.-based company, said the airline is losing money everytime it flies out of Winston-Salem's Smith Reynolds Airport. He added that the airlines' business in that city "hasn't grown one ounce" in the two and a half months Sunbird has operated there.

"We just selected the wrong city," Quinlan said.

Airport records indicate the airline carried 88 passengers in or out of Smith Reynolds in June and 84 passengers in July. Quinlan said most of those passengers were stopping over in a flight between Charlotte and Raleigh.

Corrections Secretary Explains Trip

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Correction Secretary Amos Reed said Friday that if his people can improve their performances within the criminal justice system, he and 25 other correction officials who attended a meeting in California will save the state the $17,000 it cost to take the trip.

"Other than Georgia, Russia and maybe South Africa, this state imprisons more people for a longer time than any other place in the world," Reed said. "I want our people to learn new ways to influence the criminal justice system.

Reed said if his people can do a better job of removing people from prison or keeping them out, it would be worth $17,000.

Gov. Jim Hunt has prohibited all state travel unless department heads determine it essential to the operation of the department. He said this week that he did not know Reed had taken so many employees to San Diego for the conference of the American Correctional Association.

Hunt promised that he would ask Reed to explain his actions.

Reed argued that those who were concerned about the cost of the trip should become more concerned with his departments $120-million budget.

He said the conference may also help raise the image of North Carolina in other states, citing his election as president of the association as a sign of progress in that area.

Public Salaries, Public Business

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees in a meeting with the Pitt County commissioners has been asked to keep its salary increases more in line with what the county government is doing.

It is good advice.

The hospital board also has been told that it would be good business to set salary increases in open meetings.

That is excellent advice.

The county commissioners called a meeting with trustee representatives to discuss administrative salary increases that exceeded those granted by the county.

There was also concern expressed that administrative salary increases were being covered up.

Board chairman Harry Leslie acknowledged that the executive committee and the finance committee usually set salaries of administrators. While it goes before the full board "administrative salaries are not discussed in open session."

Commissioner Bob Martin cautioned that "it would allay some fears" if all business were conducted in open meetings.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital should pay a competitive compensation, but no more, and if it is doing that certainly public knowledge of where the money is going can harm no one.

The salaries should be announced in public meetings. It is, after all, the public's money that is paying the bills and the public has every right to know how its money is being spent.

Let's Provide Legitimate Ways Back

A wave of skyjackings by Cuban refugees bent on returning to their homelands seems to have subsided, thanks to careful scrutiny of passengers and luggage at airports where the skyjackers might try to board.

A lot of travelers have been inconvenienced by the scrutiny, however, justified as it is.

We hope something is being worked out to return disillusioned refuges to Cuba if they want to go. It should be clear to everyone who enters this country that ways are freely available to return if they so desire. If that is known then the dangerous business of skyjacking commercial airliners won't be necessary.

THIS MORNING

Up To Local Govm'ts?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There has been, of late, a rash of activity by local governments across North Carolina seeking to get the upper hand in control of potentially dangerous business dealings.

Several communities have taken firm steps to ban the sale of drug paraphernalia; various devices such as water pipes, sniffers, or tissue papers which, in themselves are not dangerous, but which are commonly used in ingestion of illegal drugs.

Some shops have sprung up in recent years which specialize in such equipment, while elsewhere the items are common the shelves of variety stores and fast-food groceries.

The theory is that display of drug-taking devices both provides the means to use illegal drugs, and encourages more common acceptance of drug use by their casual display.

Court battles are developing between shopowners and local officials in this matter.

Silver and Gold

Meanwhile, scores of precious metal buvers are operating in North Carolina; many in permanent locations, but many using trailers or motel rooms as their offices to do business with individuals seeking cash for silver and gold items they no longer wish to keep.

A couple of local communities in Scotland and Robeson counties are moving to bring this activity under local control; a move which promises to spread.

The local governments want operators to post a sizable bond (as much as $10,000), buy a local privilege license costing $100, and keep careful records of each transaction.

The principal purpose is clear: to discourage the metal-buying operations as a ready resource for disposal of stolen goods.

Poison, Too

Local governments may also be called upon to get into the business of keeping track of hazardous chemical and radioactive wastes unless state or federal governments move quickly to plug what now develops as a major loophole in the law.

Right now, a cradle-to-the-grave inventory is being made to see just how much of what kind of dangerous stuff is where.

But the federal law exempts those producing such dangerous wastes in amountgs smaller than about 275 gallons monthly; maintaining that almost all the hazardous materials is produced by large-scale operations.

Still, it is obvious to the experts that it is not the amount of the waste, but its volatility which is critical. Additionally, it is the small operation which may tend to treat the material with neglect; lacking adequate disposal resources.

A survey in Forsyth County demonstrated that of about 15,000 tons of hazardous waste produced each year, some 3,000 tons came from small companies that are exempt from regulation. That means a lot of potentially deadly waste still being handled without supervision.

Job Fraud

Investigators with the North Carolina Employment Security Commission specializing in keeping individuals from drawing illegal jobless benefits, have recovered more than $2 million in an 18-month period.

The 14 investigators checked 3,377 cases and found overpayments to 2,893 of those. Most were due to error; only 774 cases of outright fraud were pinned down, and most of those were in the state's urban areas.

One scam which the unemployment officials slammed to a halt was the effort by a number of school teachers to draw unemployment pay while on their summer vacations; but under contract to return to work when school reopened.

Sunday Morning Notes

It's presidential election time again. Will a candidate come to Pitt County?

We can be viturally certain North Carolina will be visited by Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter this year. The state's electoral votes are up for grabs and too important to both campaigns. Only time will tell whether either of the candidates will come east of Raleigh, and to our area.

It has happened, however. In 1960 John F. Kennedy made a strong campaign for North Carolina's votes. The state was traditionally Democratic but the Catholic issue — which turned out not to be an issue — concerned the party strategists. So a decision was made for the young and glamorous Kennedy to make a stop at Greenville. The trip was set for a Saturday morning and the Kennedy plane landed at the Pitt-Greenville Airport. Arrangements were made for the candidate to visit a mock tobacco auction in Farmers Warehouse. Them the motorcade whisked him to the old College Stadium (where the Fletcher Music Building now stands. There was a short talk and soon the candidate, who was to meet such a tragic end in only a few years, was taken back to his waiting plane and off to another stop in the never ending campaign

There was another visit by a presidential candidate, although he was not the nominee of the Democratic or Republican party. George Wallace made a stop here in 1972. It was only a brief stop at the airport and then he was off to Laurel, Maryland. That next stop was to end his

Other Editors Say A Sinking Sun?

(Greensboro Daily Newes)

Perhaps you remember all the talk from Raleigh a couple of years ago about a "sunset" law and commission designed to preside over the interment of outmoded state licensing laws and regulatory boards.

Well, a special Government Evaluation Commission is hard at work trying to do just that. There's only one problem: the commission itself is scheduled to sink slowly into the west by legislative decree no later than 1983.

And some lawmakers are grumbling that the board itself is expensive, hasn't lived up to its promise and ought to be abolished anyway.

But this sentiment strikes us as a little premature. After all, the inexorable momentum of government is to divide and multiply. It's much easier to establish a program and keep it going than it is to close one down.

We realize there's a trap here. Could this not also be true of the sunset commission itself? Must it, too, develop a life of its own like those very agencies it is supposed to shut down?

This is certainly a possibility. But as Daily News Raleigh reporter Sharon Bond sees it, the commission has only recently begun to do its job.

If there isn't as much to show for this effort as some had hoped, it's partly because each group examined by the commission has fought reform or extinction every step of the way.

This includes regulatory boards and laws governing everything from watchmakers to dentists and psychologists. Of the 30 licensing boards reviewed so far — there are about 100 in all — only two have been eliminated with the legislature's concurance.

But that isn't all the special commission has accomplished. In many cases it has suggested changes in a board's composition, licensing requirements, anti-competitive provisions and discipline of violators — changes fashioned to make the agency more responsive to its constituency and to the consuming public.

This is dull but important work. The lawmakers who established the commission may not be able to show a high mortality rate for these boards, but that doesn't mean progress hasn't been made.

Perhaps the commission's work should be modified or eventually taken over by the legislature itself; but review of laws in such critical areas as the health professions, the environment and agriculture still lies ahead.

It makes little sense to shut down this commission just as it approaches its own moment in the sun.

Gdansk Dates Back

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The ancient city of Gdansk, flashpoint of this communist nation's latest workers' rebellion, has been fighting for independence for more than 500 years.

Long a political football, Gdansk has known many conquerors since it first appeared in the history books in the year 997 as a Slavic settlement. But despite the parade of rulers, residents of the Baltic seaport have fought repeatedly for home rule.

Gdansk first emerged as an important Baltic trading center in the 13th century, after it was settled by German merchants.

It was conquered by Teutonic Knights in 1308, setting the stage for a tug-of-war between Germany and Poland that was to see the city passed from hand to hand numerous times in its often bloody history.

Gdansk passed to Poland in 1466 and was granted local autonomy under the Polish crown. In the war of Polish succession, King Stanislaus I took refuge in Gdansk until it fell in 1734 after a heroic defense.

It became a free city under the first partition of Poland in 1772; was given to Prussia in the second partition in 1793 and saw its free city status restored by Napoleon I in 1807 during the Napoleonic wars.

Reverting to Prussian rule in 1814, Gdansk was given a new name — Danzig — and a new title — the provincial capital of West Prussia. It remained in German hands throughout World War I, but

Resources Mean Survival

By J. Wm. MINDDENDORF

The world war for survival probably has started and could progress without big power military confrontation either in the United States or in Europe. The Soviets do not want such a confrontation. Rather, they are following a policy of resource diplomacy or resource blackmail, which is aimed at denying the increasingly import-dependent West the resources it needs for survival — starting with oil and proceeding to other strategic raw materials.

For a century, the northern industrial nations of the free world have prospered by being converters of cheap, accessible raw materials and energy from other parts of the world, mostly the southern hemisphere. In the past decade all that has changed. The giant hinge of history has swung.

America depends on foreign sources for 22 of the 74 non-fuel raw materials essential to a modern industrial economy, and nine of the most critical materials are 90 percent more dependent on foreign sources. Among these nine are those crucial to defense production. Cobalt, used for high-temperature applications in advanced jet engines, is almost entirely derived from Zaire and Zambia. Bauxite, used for virtually all modern aircraft, and essential minerals used in steel manufacture (manganese and chromium in particular) are almost completely absent in recoverable quantities in the United States. Our Department of Interior estimates that by the mid-1980s the U.S. will import half of its basic raw materials.

By way of contrast, the Soviet Union normally is self-sufficient in all but six major minerals — bauxite, barites, antimony, flourspar, tin and tungsten. Even for these six Russia is believed to produce at least half its internal requirements.

J. Allen Overton Jr., president of the American Mining Congress, recently reminded that minerals have truly been called the bedrock of civilization and the stepping stones of destiny. "Ultimately", he said, "all jobs and functions of modern society can be traced in some way to a viable minerals base.

Interesting observation, considering that in five major minerals — chrome ore, platinum metals, manganese ore, asbestos and gold — Russia and southern Africa together account for most world production and trade. This helps to explain Russian and Cuban involvement in African affairs.

Furthermore, the Soviet Union makes every effort to attain self-sufficiency in mineral supply. Economic

Strength For Today

THE DOMINANT NOTE

In one of his famous preludes, Chopin employs a device of sounding one note continuously throughout the piece. The prelude is supposed to represent a mother's dream as she falls asleep with her baby in her arms. She dreams that the boy grows up to destroy her hopes and comes at last to a tragic end. The continuing note which one hears through the whole prelude signifies the underlying motive of the boy's life which will eventually carry him to ruin.

There is a continuously sounding note in the hearts of every one of us, a basic tone which underlies all our actions and all our thinking. It may be an evil thing or a good thing, but contrary to the message of Chopin's music, it can be changed. Christianity knows nothing about fate. It teaches that human nature can always be changed, that every person can be saved, that the dominant note which underlies a life can be transformed from tragedy and evil to hope and righteousness.

All Favor Reindustrialization

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Few concepts have won such instant understanding and support as reindustrialization. The word isn't even in the dictionary, but every politician knows what it means. And they support it too.

What it means, simply, is that we've got to start rebuilding the country's production capacity. We've got to make railroads run, steel companies competitive, automotive companies profitable. We've got to stimulate research, promote technology, get people back to work.

That's what political leadership is saying now — now that the economy is on its knees and no more money can be extracted from it to support big spending projects that often lower the nation's competitiveness.

Republicans and Democrats are shouting the word, but none of them seem to be accepting any blame for weakening what used to be the economic wonder of the entire world, the U.S. economy. But they help do it.

They helped with burdensome taxes, economic mismanagement, officious bureaucracies, ridiculous regulations. At times, it seemed, Washington had declared war on production and the people who tried to produce.

It had plenty of help, of course, from mismanagement in the private sector, and from a growing attitude among Americans that consumption was the most important function of any good American. Consumers first.

The consumer movement had sound beginnings, because something had to be done about the dangers from increasingly complex products and, as always, from shoddy products. And those dangers still exist today.

Somewhere back there, however, there developed the idea that the consumer was put on earth to be served, that he had a right to all the materially good things of life, and that he shouldn't be denied them.

Politicians, who spelled consumer v-o-t-e-r, proclaimed it. Companies with products to sell promoted it. Advertising depicted what a consumer couldn't live without. Banks provided the easy credit to buy it.

In the process, the country forgot that it could consume only to the extent that it produced. It often hobbled its production facilities with regulations and taxes and controls of one sort or another. Increasingly, more funds went to nonproductive government activities.

Nobody can correctly distribute all the blame, because a tremendous amount of it is there to be spread around. But the net effect is that productivity in the nation's economy has almost ceased to grow.

And, since growth is needed to raise living standards, the consumer finds his living standards going down. What a shock! How un-American! Weren't American living standards to rise forever? Wasn't is a right?

As we now find out, it isn't a right. It was an expectation, to be sure, and it was portraved in almost every history book and popular magazine. But the only right associated with it was the right to work.

Now, it seems, is the time to get back to work. The money has run out of many industries and they don't have the funds to rebuild themselves.

And, with productivity barely growing, the taxpayer too has run out of funds to support the various consumption schemes, pensions included, that were supposed to assure them of a very high standard of living.

Now everyone wants to rebuild the machinery, because they are finding out that without it they can't continue to consume. They see that in having weakened production they made the consumer dream impossible.

Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter will soon to come out with their reindustrialization programs, and it might be a good time for Americans to ask why it is that their industrial machinery has to be rebuilt.

The first two questions could be "Why was it ruined?" and "Who did it?"

South Still Carter Base

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter, who lagged far behind his GOP rival, Ronald Reagan, in the South in a survey completed prior to the recent Democratic convention, has now moved into a clear lead in this region, as determined by a survey completed last Sunday.

Nationwide, Reagan and Carter are now in a dead even race with 39 percent of registered voters choosing the Republican nominee and 38 percent the Democratic standardbearer. Anderson maintains his support at 14 percent in the latest test.

The pre-convention test election showed Reagan with 44 percent of the vote of Southern registered voters to 36 percent for Carter and 9 percent for Rep. John Anderson. The latest, post-convention, survey shows Carter with 48 percent Reagan with 39 percent and Anderson with 8 percent.

The president has also scored gains outside the South but not enough to overtake Reagan. The pre-convention trial heat results for the non-South had Reagan with 45 percent, Carter with 29 percent and Anderson with 16 percent. The post- convention results show Reagan with 39 percent, Carter with 35 percent (a difference that is not statistically significant with a subsample of this size) and Anderson with 16 percent.

The current national findings represent an impressive gain for Carter from the pre-convention survey when Reagan had 45 percent of the vote, Carter 31 percent and Anderson 14 percent. The president's gain can be attributed to the impact of the Democratic convention, watched, at least in part, by as many as two-thirds of U.S. adults, and to Kennedy Democrats now opting for nominee Carter over Reagan.

Current survey evidence clearly indicates that Anderson's candidacy is more damaging to Carter than to Reagan. Anderson draws eight percent of his vote from Carter (when Anderson's name is included in the trial heat) and only one percent from Reagan.

The pro-Carter leanings of Anderson supporters is further seen in the finding that while 51 percent of Anderson backers strongly oppose Reagan, far fewer (26 percent) strongly oppose Carter.

A comparison of the latest results with those recorded prior to the Democratic convention also reveals the following:

* Democratic voters have shifted back to Carter in large numbers. While only half of Democrats chose Carter in a test against Reagan and Anderson in the pre-convention survey, 62 percent now do so. Reagan, however, can boast of far more solid party support, currently winning the backing of eight Republicans in 10, the same proportion recorded in the earlier survey.

* Gains for Carter have been registered among all age groups and by persons at each level of formal education.

* Anderson's support nationwide has remained at 14 percent between the two surveys, with little change by groups. Any decline he has suffered among Republicans has been offset by a gain among voters who classify themselves as independents.

The following questions were asked to measure the relative strength of the three candidates:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY, which candidate would you vote for — Jimmy Carter, the Democrat, Ronald Reagan, the Republican, or John Anderson, the independent?"

Those who named another person or who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Carter, the Democrat, to Reagan, the Republican, or to Anderson, the independent?"

The following table shows the latest trial heat results by a region compared with the findings recorded in the pre-convention survey:

Reagan vs. Carter vs. Anderson

Responses to another survey question indicate that none of the three candidates can yet boast of very solid or enthusiastic backing, least of all Anderson. Fewer than four in 10 supporters of each man say they "strongly" support their man. About one Anderson supporter in six says he or she strongly supports the Illinois congressman. Little change in strength of support is found between surveys for any of the three men.

was returned to free city status by the victorious Western allies under terms of the Treaty of Versailles that ended the war.

Between the wars, Gdansk served as Polish seaport administered by a high commissioner appointed by the League of Nations.

The international tug-of-war took an ominous turn in 1939 when Adolf Hitler demanded the city be returned to Germany. Most historians agree it was Hitler's demand that was the primary spark for the Nazi invasion of Poland and the start of World War II.

Nazi troops first seized Gdynia, the nearby sister-city of Gdansk, on Sept. 7, 1939. A small force of outgunned and outmanned Polish troops made a heroic defense of Gdansk, holding out for an additional seven days before surrendering to the Germans.

During the war, Germany developed the two cities as a port and industrial complex.

Gdansk was besieged by Soviet troops in 1945, and although Moscow knew it would turn Polish after the Nazi surrender, non-government Polish sources say, the city was ruthlessly destroyed by the Red Army.

Although Gdansk was in ruins, the port facilities emerged relatively unscathed and served as a cornerstone for the post-war economic recovery of communist Poland. The opposite was true in Gdynia, which survived the Soviet siege, but saw its port facilities destroyed by the retreating Nazis.

campaign. He was shot down at a shopping center there.

We would like to see both presidential candidates make a stop in Pitt County.

It would no doubt draw people from a wide area. This year people of this area are more open minded than ever before. We suspect there is a majority that hasn't yet decided how they will vote. Seeing and hearing the candidates could help them decide.

If we don't get a presidential candidate we can be cetain we will get our share of all the others. There will be prominent party leaders campaigning for both Reagan and Carter and without doubt some of them will make stops here.

Then there are statewide races for governor and senator.

We can expect to see a reasonable number of politicians before the November election.

94-Year-Old Confederate Vet Had Last Laugh

By NOEL YANCEY

Some skeptics were inclined to snicker back in 1934 when the news media carried stories about a New Bern man fathering a child at the age of 94. But George Isaac Hughes, then New Bern's last surviving Confederate veteran, had the last laugh.

That came a year later after a team of New York doctors came to New Bern, gave Hughes a thorough examination and published their findings in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Its title: Proven Fertility in a Man Aged 94, and the child, young Franklin Roosevelt Hughes, provided the doubtful with ample proof of the old man's virility.

There were no doubting Thomases a year later when Hughes' young wife, Libby, gave birth to their second child, Mary Gertrude. He exchanged pleasantries and wise cracks with reporters, photographers, friends and tourists who flocked to his modest frame house where Dr. Charles Duffy had delivered the child by the flickering light of an old- fashioned kerosene lamp.

Yes, he was "mighty proud" of Mary Gertrude, he said, but, "I don't think I'll ever love her as much as I do Franklin Roosevelt." He proudly told the newsmen that he enjoyed his love life as much as ever, that he hoped to live to 110 as did his grandmother, and he expected to have two more children and "they're going to be Democrats."

He giggled and, slapping his knee, drawled, "If all the Democrats kept at it as long as me, I reckon the Republicans would never get in."

Asked if he worried about the prospect of feeding another mouth on his small pension — his sole monetary income, he said:

"The Lord who sent me Libby, Franklin and Mary Gertrude will provide."

Hughes and Libby had named the little boy after President Franklin D. Roosevelt whom he regarded as "the greatest president of the United States." When the president heard about his tiny namesake, he wrote young Franklin a warm personal letter and enclosed with it an autographed photograph.

One of the host of visitors to the Hughes household after Franklin's birth was Sidney Hughes, 45, of Marlboro, S.C., the child's half brother, and the "baby" of the 16 children Hughes had by his first wife, Sarah, who had died many years before. Forty-four years had elapsed between the births of the two brothers.

Hughes' own birth date in 1840 was attested to by the muster rolls of Company A of the North Carolina Regulars in which he served during the Civil War for nearly four years without a scratch. A native of Lenoir County, he farmed for many years before retiring and moving to New Bern.

There, he gardened, chopped wood for the house and performed other chores until shortly before his death. He attributed his good health and long life to "hard work and no dissipation."

At the time Mary Gertrude was born, Dr. Duffy told reporters that Hughes "is in good health and remarkably well preserved, but he's not the man he was six months ago." He pointed out that the old man had hurt himself while pushing a stalled automobile the previous winter, then suffered a blow on the head from a stick of wood he was chopping and had been seriously ill with influenza six months before.

Hughes told reporters wistfully that he hoped the fame he had received would improve the family fortunes, but it never worked out that way. He and Franklin did go to New York City for an appearance on the Robert L. Ripley Believe It Or Not radio program, and U.S. Sen. Robert R. Reynolds, D-N.C., came calling and posed for pictures a month after the little girl's birth. He returned to his

Texan Jim Nelson Puts Fantasy In Scrimshaw

BASTROP, Tx. — Fantasy/science fiction fans attending conventions from Memphis to Phoenix have noted with awe the miniature creations of Jim Nelson, delicately etched on pieces of ivory and antler measurable in inches — or less.

On an antique piano key the gnarled arms and branches of a Treebeard weave rhythmically together.

A musician wearing a medieval-style hat plays on what appears to be a bassoon. Instead of the traditional bell of the instrument, however, the head of a placid-looking serpent rises above the player.

From the smoothed crown of an elk antler, a nymph-like fairy with transparent wings looks shyly over her shoulder.

In the view of 27-year-old Nelson, fantasy is a basic human need. "Everyone needs a certain amount of escape to take you somewhere else. But not necessarily because you want to be where it takes you," he explains.

Even when the fantasy subject is strange, frightening or bizarre, Nelson adds, "You enjoy the fact that it moves you, not necessarily because it arouses pleasant emotions."

A native of Midland, the West Texas oil center, Nelson underwent formal artistic training at Texas Tech University in Lubbock and at the University of Texas at Austin. Now he lives in a simple cabin in the Sayers community near Bastrop where his studio is one of six houses and a church scattered for a quarter of a mile along Big Sandy Creek.

Nelson explains, "There are not so many distractions in Sayers" — ten miles north of the confluence of Big Sandy and the Colorado River above Bastrop. Besides, living there is cheap so that he can follow a circuit of craft shows and sci-fi conventions and still "keep a place."

The technique of etching on ivory, then staining the designs with ink, is called — no one knows why — scrimshaw. The word and the art developed among American whalers during the 19th century. They used whale ivory and bone on which to display their skills and imaginations during the tedious hours of a long voyage.

Because of the tiny scale of the work and the hardness and "grain" of the ivory, the labor of working it is demanding. "Two or three hours of etching is as tiring as six or eight hours of drawing with pen and ink," according to Nelson.

That is one reason the artist is turning more and more to antler etching and more conventional illustration designed for publication.

Another reason involves the international politics of ivory. Of the five ivory-bearing species — animals with teeth not covered by glass-like enamel — only the boar and the hippopotamus are not already endangered, he points out.

At first, Nelson etched old piano keys, a kind of recycling. Now he has reservations about using antique ivory since it "encourages the market" for the teeth. That could put more pressure on the endangered whales, walruses and elephants, he believes.

One result of this thinking is a series of hinged, box-like containers fashioned from sections of elk antler and polished woods. The deftly detailed and shaded scrimshaw decorations emerge from a complex of curving, dramatic antler shapes.

Still miniature in scale, these luxurious objects with an air of medieval strangenss about them also provide an opportunity for working with a more extensive perspective. Resisting the temptation to be cute or merely charming, Nelson entices viewers to enter terra incognita.

Indeed, seeing a troop of minute but sturdy dwarves marching along the twisted roots of a hardwood forest, who could resist setting aside, for a time, the common struggles of life? Who would not join in setting foot on the shadowy path to imaginative adventure?

Being A Dragon Can Be Real Pain-In-The-Neck

The only thing more damaging to a mother's mental health than an ordinary case of cabin fever is a case that results from moving to a strange town.

Until our circle of friends included more people than our retired neighbors and the realtor, Meg and I were forced after our recent move to rely solely on each other's scintillating company. Meg quickly adapted by making me a participant in a non-stop game of dragons and orphans.

Naturally, Meg was always the orphan. As she explained it, "You can tell just by looking into my eyes that I'm a poor little orphan girl."

That left me as the dragon. The details of the game changed often enough to be confusing. Sometimes I was supposed to capture her for a pet. At other times I was supposed to make her my slave. Occasionally, I tried to eat her. But the basic scenario remained the same: I lived in a smelly cave, and I was so ugly that I struck terror in the heart of all little girls, orphaned or not.

For two weeks I couldn't turn a corner without eliciting a shriek. And if that wasn't unnerving enough, I was expected to remember the story line at all times including coffee breaks. All my efforts to shed my role were futile. When I refused to play, Meg used me as a prop.

I couldn't even eat a meal in peace. "Stop!" Meg screamed one day at lunch as I started to bite into my sandwich.

"Why?"

"Because that's the sheep I brought you after you made me your slave, and it's not skinned yet."

"So?"

"You'll get wool stuck between your teeth!"

"I'll use dental floss."

"Dragons don't have dental floss."

"Meg, this is ridiculous...."

"I'm not Meg, I'm Mary-Orphan."

"Well, I'm sorry, Mary-Orphan, but I'm going to eat my lunch, wool or no wool."

"You can't!"

"I've had enough of this, young lady. Eat your supper and be quiet."

"Okay," she muttered, "but don't blame me if you wake up in the middle of the night with a wooly mouth."

Unfortunately, she was only depressed for several seconds before she resumed the dragon-baiting with renewed vigor. "That's it," she crowed. "Wooly-Mouth!"

"Huh?"

"That's your name from now on, Wooly-Mouth."

"Meg, I don't want to play this any more. Go play with your stuffed animals."

"My name is Mary-Orphan, and I have to play with something alive. But you can be a good dragon."

"I don't want to be any kind of dragon."

"Sure you do. You're my pet, and I love you so much that I keep a dead rat in my pocket to feed you."

I pushed my plate away. "For the last time, I am not a dragon."

She gave me a long, inquiring look. "You get tired of me, sometimes, don't you?"

I shook my head guiltily. "Sometimes."

GOP Threat? Or Prospect Of A Joy Sublime

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Those irresponsible Republicans, says our president, are out to abolish the whole federal government — all except defense and Social Security. Two questions leap to mind: Is this a threat? Or is it rather a prospect of joy sublime?

If Mr. Carter had set out deliberately to sell the Kemp-Roth proposal for reducing our income taxes, he could not have found a more persuasive pitch. Named for Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and Sen. Bill Roth of Delaware, the plan would cut personal income tax rates by 10 percent each year for the next three years.

Mr. Carter thinks the plan is poisonous. In his speech to the Urban League two weeks ago, he painted this awful picture: If Kemp-Roth were adopted, and if Social Security benefits were protected and defense expenditures only moderately increased, and the budget were balanced, "every other agency and department and program in the federal government would have to be eliminated 100 percent.

In his acceptance speech last Thursday, Mr. Carter returned to this theme. "A close analysis shows," he said, "that the entire rest of government would have to be abolished — everything from education to farm programs to the GI Bil to the night watchman at the Lincoln Memorial. And the federal budget would still be in the red."

These dreadful prophecies come from the president who would never lie to us. But with respect, it sounds like a stretcher to me.

Consider. In fiscal '81, total revenues of the federal government are estimated at $604 billion. Kemp-Roth in '81 would cost the Treasury $19.8 billion, leaving $584.2 billion available. In 1982, Kemp-Roth would take away $52.4 billion from anticipated revenues of $711.4 billion, leaving $659 billion for Congress to spend. In 1983, Kemp-Roth would take away $95.4 billion, leaving a mere $723 billion to cover the costs of government.

These estimates come from the Joint Committee on Taxation and are generally confirmed by the Congressional Budget Office. Are we seriously to believe that everything — every other agency and department and program, save only defense and Social Security — would have to be eliminated? Mr. Carter, alas, is feeding us the Phonus Bolonus.

But suppose, to be supposing, that our leader is right. Enchanting vistas suddenly appear. If every other agency and department and program is to be eliminated, where could we best begin? Farewell the Department of Energy! This blundering colossus has accomplished no good whatever since its creation. Farewell the Department of Education! Secretary Hufstedler is a lovely lady, but federal aid to education is basically a bad idea.

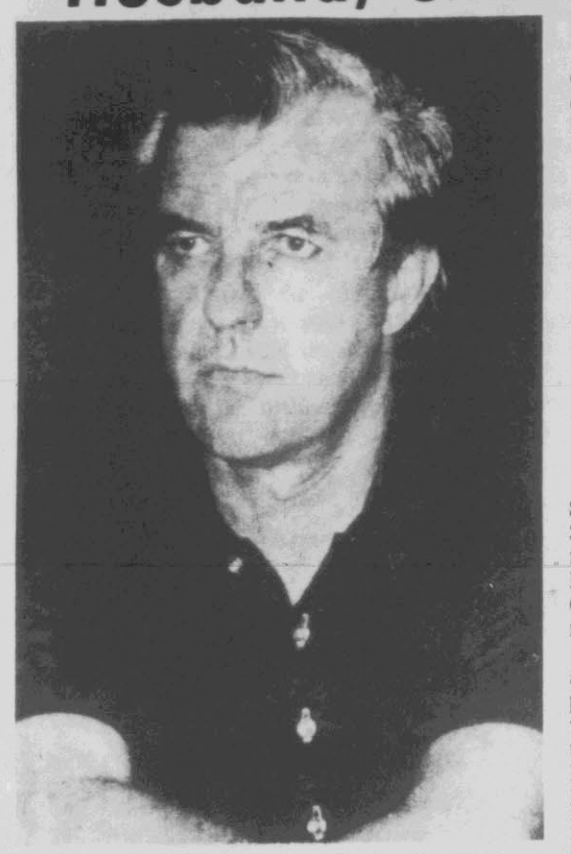

Think of it! Farewell the Consumer Product Safety Commission, farewell the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, farewell the Federal Trade Commission, farewell the Occupational Safety and Health Administration! Goodbye, all! Farewell those nanny-nanny-nannies in Agriculture! Farewell the airbag and bumper boys in Transportation! Farewell the whole shebang!

We are only beginning. If the president is right, we must dispense with the Congress, the courts and the White House itself. All of them, wiped out! Over the whole of this capital city, a deathly silence descends; all the robot typewriters, the copiers, the telephones fall mute; not even the whisper of shuffled forms offends the peace and quiet. Abroad in the land, with food stamps and housing subsidies and welfare checks wiped out, the affected persons return to the old values of independence and self-reliance. Spiritually, we are born anew! With no agency left to decree the shields on our power mowers, the liberties of the people are again secure.

What bliss! What heaven! What nonsense. The tax cuts proposed by Kemp-Roth might temporarily boost the rate of inflation by a point or two, but they also would generate the kind of economic activity that puts people back to work. Over the long haul they would give the people a little more freedom to spend their own earnings, and they might achieve a minor reduction from Big Government to Not-Quite-So-Big Government. That prospect may terrify Jimmy Carter. It moves me to cheers and exultation.

Husband, Children Await Word On America's "53rd Hostage"

JOHN DWYER pauses to reflect on the Iranian hostage situation he faces. His wife, Cynthia, has been held in Iran since early May on charges of spying for the CIA. (UPI Photo)

By THOMAS P. CAMPBELL

AMHERST, N.Y. (UPI) — Cynthia Dwyer's husband doesn't believe his wife is being treated as the "forgotten hostage" in Iran.

John Dwyer, at his home in the Buffalo suburb of Amherst, said officials in Washington regarded his wife, who is imprisoned in Iran, just as important as the other 52 American hostages held in Iran.

"I don't mind the fact that there hasn't been a lot of media coverage on her," said Dwyer, whose wife has been held in Iran since early May, reportedly on charges of being a CIA agent. "In fact I'm glad her situation is low-key. All we want is to get her home safely."

Mrs. Dwyer, a mother of three, left Buffalo for Iran in April as a free-lance journalist. She was photographed by the news media outside the American Embassy just before her May 5 arrest by guards of Iran's Revolutionary Council.

"My wife went to Iran to try to present a different slant on the hostage situation," explained Dwyer, an English professor at Buffalo State College. "There are a number of Iranians in Iran that are unhappy with the hostage situation but are powerless to do anything about it."

Dwyer speculates his wife was arrested due to a "power struggle" within the country.

"There are two sides, one that wants to prosecute her but has no grounds," he said, "while the other side wants to let her go but doesn't have the authority to do so. It's a delicate and fluid situation. She's caught in the middle."

Right now, Dwyer has no plans to go to Iran and is letting the U.S. State Department handle the case. Any other news he receives about his wife comes from newpapers and wire service reports.

After months of hedging on whether Mrs. Dwyer was actually being held, stories appeared in four Iranian newspapers in late July, accusing her of "collaboration with an armed group for the release of the hostages, attempting to lay groundwork for a new American attack (after the ill-fated U.S. helicopter attempt to rescue the hostages), consumption of alcohol, drugs and adultery."

Dwyer, who had said previously that his wife is "no spy," said he believed the stories were published to simple life of chopping wood and tending his garden — as long as he was able.

For the decline in Hughes health accelerated, and he was weakened considerably by a heart ailment. Two weeks before Mary Gertrude's first birthday, he suffered a fatal heart attack on May 20, 1937. He was 97 years old.

The little girl contracted pneumonia a few months later and died. Young Franklin Roosevelt Hughes developed unmistakable mannerisms that reminded relatives of his father. But tragedy struck him, too. At 13, he fell on a scout knife while playing Tarzan. The blade penetrated his intestines, and he died five days later.

Mrs. Hughes, who had married the Civil War veteran when she was 23, married again after his death. At last report she was living in Portsmouth, Va., and is the mother of five children by this last marriage. She is the former Libby Hill Dixon and had been married once before she became Hughes' wife. She had a daughter by her first husband.

In the AMA Journal report by Dr. Frances Seymour and Dr. Alfred Koener, they said Hughes, at 94, was "a man of fine preservation" and they said he was the first man that old they ever heard of "whose fertility has been definitely and affirmatively checked up medically."

He had merely scoffed at suggestions there should be any doubts that he was father of Franklin Roosevelt and Mary Gertrude Hughes.

cost is only a secondary consideration in undertaking or expanding production. No areas within the Soviet Union are off-limits to mineral exploration.

The Soviets have also shown a far greater knowledge of raw material geography than we in the free world. We often prattle on about the evils of not 100 percent "pure democracies" in the undeveloped world, especially among those who wish to be our friends. Sometimes our policy has been that a dictator who is AGAINST us is somehow more moral than a dictator who is FOR us. It seems that the Soviets have no such view of perfection. Instead, they delight in exploiting our differences with our friends, and actively work to subvert any leadership likely to be friendly to us, especially if they are a source of raw materials.

Left-wing governments in South Africa and Zimbabwe with leanings toward the Soviet Union could combine with the Soviet Union to create critical pricing situations in chrome ore, platinum metals and perhaps manganese just as effectively as the OPEC cartel does in oil. Even more important, they could create an embargo.

The lack of sufficient Free World military resources either based in the region or deployable to the area is underscored when one reviews the scope of Soviet activity in the region. The Soviets now have the option to engage in a "Resource war" in the area either through direct military action against shipping, or indirectly through the subversion of independent nations in Africa and the Middle East which would enable the Soviets to deny access to the energy and raw materials of the area.

What can the West do to prevent vital mineral shortages? We drastically need a coordinated defense and preparedness strategy, as well as a natural resources strategy, to assure that the Free World will never be brought to its knees because of the inaccessibility of minerals and metals needed for our economic survival and military preparedness.

First, we must prevent producing countries from becoming fertile ground for subversion, revolution or military takeover.

Second, we must prevent the formation of a minerals cartel similar to OPEC.

Third, we must increase supplies through an array of strategies; such as developing access to sea-bed resources in areas not vulnerable to enemy interdiction.

Finally, to increase available supplies we must redouble our stockpiling efforts while being careful not to disrupt existing markets, thus driving up prices.

Here we address the strategy of the resource war which will determine the whole course of Western civilization from here on out. If successful, the flickering flame of freedom will burn brighter. If unsuccessful, we will with certainty approach the Great Nightfall.

Report On Rescue Attempt. . .

cided Vaught to abort the mission shortly before dawn. In refueling the helicopters for the return to the Nimitz, a rotor blade slashed into one of the C-130s, and eight servicemen died in the fire and explosion.

The panel found an "overriding concern" with secrecy contributed to several defects in the mission:

—Strict radio silence barred the exchange of essential information during the flight of the eight Sea Stallion helicopters. The commander of the helicopter which turned back in the sandstorm indicated later he would have continued if he had known visibility was acceptable further ahead. The report said the use of a C-130 Pathfinder to lead the helicopters through the sandstorm and to Desert One would have decreased chances of failure due to weather.

—The panel said the failure to hold a full-dress rehearsal contributed to the "tenuous" command and control at intermediate levels. The mission was "susceptible to misunderstandings under pressure" because some servicemen were not familiar with the other members of the raiding party.

Surprise was obviously a key factor in staging a rescue of the U.S. hostages in Tehran, it said, but more "selectivity and flexibility" in secrecy and security considerations might have improved the mission's chances "without necessarily sacrificing security."

During the hurried evacuation of Desert One, all the remaining helicopters were abandoned, as well as classified materials they contained.

Holloway said the field commander made a proper decision not to try to retrive the documents because ammunition was exploding and the entire raiding party was endangered. But he said the mission should have placed more emphasis on planning for a proper withdrawal and destruction of classified documents with prepared explosive charges on the craft.

There was no one group in the U.S. military structure to plan and execute such a combined operation and the panel said this contributed to an uncertain command system at the lower levels.

The panel recommended that all counter-terrorist forces in the military services be brought under a single command — a proposal Defense Secretary Harold Brown has adopted. And the panel called for a senior oversight group to review counter-terrorist plans and operations.

Pitt Democrats Comment. . .

The president of North Carolina's Teen Dems since March, she said in her opinion the convention was, "just terrific...so open...it showed what the Democratic Party stands for."

According to Miss Little, "the platform can't satisfy everyone. We in North Carolina are more conservative than the platform. But I guess everyone has to make concessions.

"Kennedy...his speech was just terrific. It got alot of people motivated," Miss Little said. However, she noted that in her opinion the Massachusetts senator would, "not be a good candidate...not at this time...maybe in four or eight years."

Kennedy, she said, "is a little bit too liberal I think. I don't think that he's what the people need now."

As a page, Miss Little carried vote sheets for the delegates to the tally room, and ran other errands.

George Saleeby of Grifton, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic executive committee, said he was, "not satisfied with all of the platform. But it's something we're going to have to live with."

A sign of, "unity throughout the state," according to Saleeby, who watched the convention on television, is the fact that, "out of 13 Kennedy delegates," from North Carolina, "nine voted for Carter on the roll-call vote.

"I think the State ticket is strong," Saleeby said, "which will help Carter in North Carolina and Pitt County," on November 4. And the Democratic Party, he emphasized, "is going to be running as a team...which will benefit the whole ticket."

According to Saleeby, $200,000 or more, "will be spent out of Democratic headquarters in Raleigh, on the campaign, plus what Gov. Hunt and other candidates spend.

In Pitt County, the Democratic headquarters will open after Labor Day, "and we're in the process of organizing, raising funds," planning, "a get-out-the-vote campaign," and making preparations for the First Congressional District rally at the Moose Lodge in Greenville, on October 16.

According to Saleeby, Gov. Hunt, Sen. Morgan, Congressman Walter Jones, as well as members of the Council of State, are scheduled to appear at the rally.

He also said there is a possibility that Pres. Carter, vice-president Walter Mondale, or some other high federal official will be in Eastern North Carolina before the election — possibly at the rally — depending on what the polls are showing at that time.

"I hope Pitt County and the rest of the state will carry the total Democratic ticket on November 4," Saleeby emphasized.

Additional Manpower. . .

The spokesman added that it is not unusual now for officers to, "call one or two men back each week to work 24 hour shifts overtime."

One day two or three weeks ago, the firefighter noted, there were two men on vacation and two out sick. "They called back one that day," to work overtime.

The firemen suggested that if the three positions now frozen are hired, and three additional men are put on, the two additional men per shift would help to solve the manpower problems.

He also said that if a dispatcher were hired to operate the radio and answer the telephones after 5 p.m. on weekdays, and on weekends and holidays, that would free an additional man to fight fires.

"They're not getting the run-around," City Manager Ed Wyatt emphasized when asked about the firefighters' remarks. "They haven't been put off. Nobody is being indifferent to them."

Wyatt said, "The information is under review and we're trying to work with their concerns.

"There are a whole host of concerns...manpower is one of them," Wyatt acknowledged, without identifying any of the other problems. "We've been working on their concerns...a number of them."

According to the official, rather than meet with a committee, "we met with all of them...our meetings were extensive.

"I prefer we work with things as we are now...working through some of their problems...work through it in the manner we're working on it."

As for the manpower question, Wyatt said, "manpower is under review." He explained, "we're working with the county now," to see if Greenville fire units can be dispatched by the county's communications center, just as Greenville rescue units are now.

"If we can get answers on it," according to Wyatt, that would be, "an alternate," to the city hiring dispatchers and would, in effect, free one man to fight fire. "That can very much be explored and I think they (the county) would be glad to help us on it. My impression is that Chief Allen is responsive to it.

"If the opportunity to do it is available, I think it would be to our advantage to do it."

The city manager noted, "The other questions have to be dealt with though."

Pitt County manager Reginald Gray acknowledged that city officials have talked with Pitt fire marshall Bobby Joyner about county dispatching of city fire units, although it has not been discussed with the board of commissioners.

He said, "some details have to be worked out," such as the purchase of some equipment and telephone line arrangements, but indicated in his opinion, "nothing major," would prevent such an operation.

In fact, Gray said, when the county's communications center was opened, an offer to dispatch Greenville fire and rescue vehicles was declined by city officials.

The county communications center now dispatches for all rescue units in Pitt and all fire departments other than Greenville, as well as the Sheriff's Department and police departments in Winterville, Grimesland, Grifton and Fountain.

reveal that she was alive. Regarding the charges, Dwyer added, "She has never used drugs and seldom drinks. And she is not an adulteress."

In the meantime, Dwyer said he and his children — Benjamin, 13, Daniel, 11, and Susie, 8 — were "doing the best we can" since his wife's arrest.

"We've done everything this summer we had planned to. My daughter went to camp, one of the boys spent some time with friends and we went to an Ohio amusement park."

"We haven't given up hope," he said. "We're constantly writing to her."

Although the Dwyers have no family in the Buffalo area, Dwyer said "friends are constantly helping out." He has received many letters from well-wishers, some sending their prayers.

Barbara Timm, who has traveled to Iran to see her hostage son, has also talked to Dwyer. "She met my wife while she was over in Iran," he said. "But I haven't talked to her recently."

Dwyer said all he can do now is wait. He and his family "haven't given up hope," but they realize it could be a long wait.

By BOGDAN TUREK

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Leaders of the strikes that mushroomed from a shipyard walkout to a near-total industrial shutdown along Poland's Baltic Coast won their first and most vital demand Saturday — the right to bargain with the Communist government.

The regime's abrupt switch from tough talk to a position advocating "dialogue" apparently reflected a high-level policy change as a result of the growing cost of the 10-day walkout by an estimated 200,000 workers.

Many Poles expected more than policy to change. The ruling 14-man politburo of the Polish United Workers Party was in session at its headquarters in Warsaw and well-informed sources said the party's Central Committee would go into session Monday or Tuesday.

The sources said government leadership changes were considered a likely result of the party meetings, but experts were divided over how sweeping any internal reforms would be.

Strikes continued to spread Saturday but the focus was on the negotiations in Gdansk, set in motion by a breakthrough meeting the night before between three strike leaders and the chief government negotiator, First Deputy Premier Wieczyslaw Jagielski.

Strike leader Lech Walesa, a 37-year-old electronics technician who was fired four years ago for political activity at the Lenin shipyards in Gdansk, was greeted by cheers and songs when he announced the government's agreement to start talks.

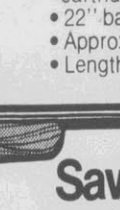

"May you live 100 years," the workers sang, using the tune and message that became familiar worldwide during Pope John Paul II's visit to his native Poland last year.

"We have been winning so far," Walesa told the workers, "but now we have to prepare for a further battle."

Thousands In Chicago Support Polish Workers

By PAM SHERROD

CHICAGO (UPI) — Thousands gathered Saturday in Chicago, home of the world's largest Polish community after Warsaw, to demonstrate solidarity with the Polish workers' strike and hear a message from President Carter.

A presidential assistant told the crowd Carter was "deeply concerned" about the strikes by 150,000 workers in Poland and urged a resolution of the workers' demands without bloodshed or "any outside interference of any power."

A spokesman for Voice of America said coverage of the rally would be broadcast in Poland and throughout Europe. Radio Free Europe also was expected to broadcast the event.

An estimated 7,000 people gathered in the Daley Center Plaza to show support for the workers who went on strike across Poland Aug. 14. Demonstrators carried banners and waved miniature Polish flags as they heard from a series of political and Polish leaders.

Stephen Aiello, Carter's special assistant on ethnic affairs, said in a message from Carter that U.S. concern for human rights demanded that "we are now faced with a situation in which our voice must be heard."

He said U.S. officials were watching the developments in Poland "very closely" and were "disturbed" to hear of the arrests of Polish dissidents.

"We are looking forward to a resolution of this problem based upon the president's firm belief in human rights and the dignity of each individual and without any outside interference of any power," Aiello said. He said bloodshed should be avoided.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., also urged against bloodshed and added, "Here in America, we stand behind human rights and those human rights are being violated (in Poland). We must do something and today we are making the first step."

Percy later said the rally of solidarity represented not only the "voice of Chicago... but the voice of the Polish people" as Chicago boasts the second largest Polish population in the world.

After-Flood Cleanup

By United Press International

Cleanup efforts spurred residents of West Virginia and Kentucky into combat Saturday gainst the mud, muck and debris from torrential rains that left behind more than $9 million in flood damages.

"The clean-up effort is the biggest thing because of the mud, muck, debris, water-soaked furniture and water-soaked rugs," Tom Burns, director of operations for the West Virgina Office of Emergency Services said Saturday.

Thunderstorms loitered in West Virginia from midnight Sunday through Friday, dousing the state intermittently with rain and causing waterways to spill over their banks, mud and rock to slide down the mountains in 17 counties and people to flee their homes.

Preliminary damage estimates in West Virginia were set at $8.5 million, although state officials said that figure could go higher.

At least $800,000 damage caused by a flash flood that ripped thr9ugh Beauty, Ky., earlier in the week, State Disaster Emergency personnel estimated Saturday.

Moroccan Troops Kill Guerrillas

CASABLANCA, Morocco (UPI) — Moroccan troops and planes killed about 200 Polisario guerrillas and destroyed 80 vehicles in a search-and-destroy operation in the Western Sahara, the Moroccan government said today.

The information ministry said the two-day operation followed Tuesday's battle south of Tan Tan, a small Moroccan town, after which the guerrillas were forced to retreat. Six Moroccan troops were wounded, the information ministry said.

The Polisario headquarters in Algiers has so far made no comment on this week's actions.

Morocco and Mauritania annexed the Western Sahara five years ago in defiance of the independence demands of the Polisario movement, ba by Algeria and Liby a. Mauritania concluded a separate peace treaty with the Polisario Guerrillas in 1979 and Morocco then occupied the entire western Sahara.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Michael Ontkean, Margot Kidder, and Ray Sharkey star in "Willie and Phil," a movie about two young men and the woman they both love.

Paul Mazursky wrote and directed the comedy about an unconventional romance.

Policy For Free, Reduced Price Meals Announced

The policy for free and reduced prices for meals served to children under the National School Lunch and School Breakfast program applicable to Greenville City and participating private schools has been announced.

Local school officials have adopted the family size income criteria shown below in determining eligibility for free and reduced price meals. In addition, families not meeting these criteria, but with exceptional expenses due to unusually high medical or other expenses in excess of 30 percent of income, can also apply for the free or reduced meals.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. The information contained on the forms is confidential and will be used only to determine eligibility. A simple statement of income and family size, plus a signed certification by parents or guardians that information is correct, is all that is required.

In certain instances, foster children are also eligible for free or reduced price meal benefits. A family with foster children living with them and who wish to apply should contact the school where the child attends for full information.

Under the provisions of the policy, each individual school principal will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent or guardian is dissatisfied with the ruling of the principal, he may wish to discuss the decision with the principal on an information basis. If the parent or guardian wishes to appeal formally, he may make a request orally or in writing to: Robert Stewart, P. O. Box 109, Greenville, N. C., 27834 (telephone 752-4192).

Each school and the offices of superintendents have a copy of the complete policy which may reviewed by any interested person.

The family size and income scale criteria for the school year 1980-81 in determining free or reduced priced meals is given below. (The annual salary portion of the policy only is given — the complete table also sets forth monthly and weekly salary levels, and these are available to interested persons).

Family size one, $5,230; two, $6,900; three, $8,580; four, $10,250; five, $11,930; six, $13,600; seven, $15,280; and eight, $16,950. For each additional family member above eight, add $1,680.

Reduced-Price Meals

Family size one, $8,150; two, $10,760; three, $13,380; four, $15,990; five, $18,600; six, $21,220; seven, $23,830; and eight, $26,440. For each additional family member above eight, add $2,610.

Small Brawl

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A fistfight between two inmates in the trusty dormitory at the Nebraska Penal Complex led to a "small brawl," said Corrections Director Jerry Bolin.

"Very few inmates" joined in the disturbance Friday, and it was quelled within an hour, he said. The initial fight involved an Indian and a black, said warden Robert Parratt. The brawlers apparently divided along the same lines.

Two inmates were treated at a hospital and returned to jail. A third remained at the hospital for treatment, including stitches.

Nineteen Indian trusties were taken temporarily to the Diagnostic and Evaluation Center west of town for their own protection.

GLASGOW, Mont. (AP) — The Bureau of Land Management has given 55 ranchers until Sept. 10 to remove upwards of 5,000 cows from public lands in Valley County. The agency cited potential damage from over-grazing on the parched range.

The ranchers had expected they could keep their cows on the land into October.

Season Set For Dance Theater

WINSTON-SALEM — At least six new ballets, including world premieres, an expanded hometown performance season, and an extensive national touring schedule which will carry the company across 14 states, are among highlights of North Carolina Dance Theater's 11th season, Director Robert Lindgren announced.

The dancers began rehearsals August 11 and will be under contract with the company through early June. Lindgren said early rehearsals will concentrate on four ballets to premiere this fall. Also, restaging will be done on some of the best works of past seasons.

The first of the new ballets is a commissioned work by Ruthanna Boris, best known for her work "Cakewalk," commissioned in 1951 by the New York City Ballet. Her new work for the N. C. Dance Theater is set to music by William Bergsma. Another new work is one by Marcia Plevin, formerly a dance faculty member of the N. C. School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, choreographed to music by Douglas Bennett. This commissioned work is made possible by a grant from the N. C. Arts Council.

A grant from the Projects Pool of the Winston-Salem Arts Council is helping make possible a third commissioned work, being created by N. C. Dance Theater's associate director, Salvatore Aiello. Aiello is a former principal dancer and associate director of Canada's Royal Winnepeg Ballet.The Aiello ballet is for four dancers set to an original score by a local composer, John Selleck.

The fourth new dance slated to be premiered this fall is "Women," by Argentine choreographer Oscar Araiz. For five women dancers, the 20-minute piece has music by Grace Slick. This dance is being supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Among ballets in this season's repertoire are George Balanchine's "Allegro Brillante" and "Valse Fantasie;" Job Sanders' "Dichterliebe;" Aiello's "Clowns and Others;" Alvin Ailey's "Myth;" and two Charles Czarny dances, "Dreamscapes" and "Sunny Day."

Supported in part by the Dance Touring Progam of the National Endowment for the Arts and the newly-created North Carolina Touring Program, North Carolina Dance Theater will travel more than 15,000 miles in the coming season.

The company's opening appearance will be September 17 in Charleston, S. C., followed by engagements in West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Kentucky. In January and February the company will be appearing in Florida and Georgia, and a spring tour will take them as far west as Texas.

During the upcoming season, the N. C. Dance Theater will be performing in more than 20 engagements in North Carolina — in towns as far east as Greenville and as far west as Cullowhee.

Dancers returning to the company from last season are: Deborah Dawn, Pearl Potts, Richard Prewitt, Rebecca McLain, Terry Lynn Wright, Ralph Hewitt, Steven Pasco, Charles Devlin, Dayna Fox, Edward Campbell, and Gwendolyn Leonard. Four new dancers have joined the company for the 1980-81 season — David Herriott, Richard Michalek, Darleen Callaghan, and Lauri Worrill.

HOUSTON BALLET

HOUSTON, TEXAS — Two contemporary works will be featured in the 1980-81 season of the Houston Ballet. The season opens Sept. 18-21 with a world premiere of a work by Ben Stevenson to a score commissioned by Robert Prince.

The rising young choreographer Choo San Goh will be represented by an encore performance of his "Variaciones Concertantes."

Acheson To Play Tuesday

The music of Bach, Chopin, Liszt, Rachmaninoff and Widor will be performed in a piano-organ concert to be given by Randall (Randy) Atcheson at 12:15 p.m. on Tuesday, August 26 at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The public is invited to attend and there is no admission charged.

In the first part of the concert, Atcheson will play four Bach pieces — "Toccata and Fugue in D-Minor," "Trio Sonata in E-Flat Major," "Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor," and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring;" and Widor's "Foccata in Fa Major."

Following a brief intermission, he will play Rachmaninoff's "Polichinelle, Opus 3, No. 4;" two Chopin works, "Polonaise in A-Flat Major" and "Ballade in G-Minor;" and Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6."

"We are trying several new things this year, challenging our members to take on different roles than they normally would, challenging them. We feel this will help bring out capabilities we might never see otherwise," said Mitchell. "It will also make our season a very interesting one."

The schedule for the coming season is as follows:

Goes To Court Over Kate Smith's Property

RALEIGH (AP) — Singer Kate Smith's nieces have gone to courts in two states in a fight over rights to manage her property.

Kathryn S. Rodriguez and Suzanne L. Andron, both of Raleigh, have filed actions over Miss Smith's property in North Carolina and New York courts.

Miss Smith, 71, is suffering from diabetes and several related medical problems, including failing eyesight. Now confined to a wheelchair, Miss Smith lives with a professional companion in Raleigh.

According to a Raleigh newspaper, the nieces, along with Miss Smith's attorney, Richard S. Becker of New York, were appointed last year as caretakers to manage Miss Smith's personal and real property. Those appointments came after a New York judge concluded Miss Smith was unable to care for the property because of her "deteriorating physical and mental condition," court records said.

The News and Observer said that Mrs. Andron has asked the New York court to remove her sister, Mrs. Rodriguez, as one of Miss Smith's caretakers. Mrs. Rodriguez has asked the court to remove Mrs. Andron and the lawyer as caretakers.

Last February, several pieces of Miss Smith's property, including jewelry and furniture, were sold to an auctioneer. The Blowing Rock Auction Gallery announced Friday it would place some of the items on sale next week.

Among the items listed were a solid gold compact, a 14-karat gold and diamond clock and a watch from composer Irving Berlin.

The auction of Miss Smith's items is the third such event to be held at the Blowing Rock gallery this summer. Earlier, the effects of silent-film star Mary Pickford and actress Merle Oberon were auctioned off. In addition, the gallery has sold the goods of such stars as Judy Garland and Claude Rains.

Mrs. Rodriguez called the dispute "an ugliness," but she declined further comment on the squabble.

She said the caretakers had agreed at one time to liquidate some of Miss Smith's property.

"We wanted to make sure that she will be covered in terms of money for the rest of her life," Mrs. Rodriguez said.

Miss Smith and Mrs. Andron could not be reached for comment. Mrs. Andron lives with Helena Steene, who is her mother and Miss Smith's sister. Becker also declined comment.

N.C. Fellowships To Four Artists

By Michael Matros
N.C. Dept. Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — For the first time in its history, the state of North Carolina has awarded fellowship to individual artists. Announcement of the awards was made by Governor James B. Hunt, Jr. and Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the Dept. of Cultural Resources.

Those receiving N. C. Arts Council Fellowships are — painters Victor Faccinto of Winston-Salem and Maud Gatewood of Yanceyville; glass blower Robert Levin of Burnsville; and Elizabeth Matheson, a Chapel Hill photographer.

Each fellowship artist is awarded $5,000 to develop his or her work.

"We think it is vital to recognize our most accomplished artists and to provide some resources that will help them in their art," Secretary Hodgkins said in announcing the grants.

The fellowships are intended to allow professional artists to purchase supplies, to set aside time to work, and otherwise to devote full attention to their art.

During even-numbered years, including 1980, fellowships are available for visual artists such as painters, sculptors, printmakers, photographers, filmmakers and craftsemen. During odd-numbered years, fellowships are available to poets, writers of fiction, playwrights, composers and choroegraphers.

The primary considerations for awards are artistic excellence, the importance of the fellowship to the artist's career at the time of application and past contributions to the artist's art. An out-of-state panel selected the 1980 recipients. The six-member panel chose the four from a field of 127 applicants.

Following is a brief biographical sketch of the four award winners:

— Maud Gatewood, a lifetime resident of North Carolina, received degrees at Woman's College of UNC (now UNC-Greensboro) and Ohio State University. On a Fulbright Grant she studied in Austria with Oskar Kokoschka. Her work has been shown in 15 one-person shows and dozens of group shows. Landscapes, including recent paintings that involve abstractly composed and brightly colored farm settings are subjects Ms. Gatewood is concerned with in her art. Currently, she is chairman of the Caswell County board of commissioners and is an art professor at Averett College, Danville, Va.

— California native Victor Faccinto received degrees in psychology, painting and filmmaking from California State University. Now a member of the Wake Forest art faculty, he is also director of the Fine Arts Gallery on the Wake Forest campus. Faccinto has had one-man shows in California and New York and his work has appeared in numerous group shows. His films has won numerous awards. Faccinto's paintings involve images of devils, snakes, angels and other symbols of good and evil.

— Since 1975 Rob Levin has been associated with the Penland School of Crafts, first as instruction, then as resident glassblower. Educated at Denison University in Ohio and Southern Illinois University, he held teaching positions in Maine, New Jersey, Ohio and Washington before coming to North Carolina. His work has been exhibited extensively, including a 1980 show at the Corning Museum of Glass in New York. His work is in numerous collections in the U.S., Europe, Canada and Japan.

— Elizabeth Matheson, presently an editorial assistant in the publications office of Duke University, plans to use her award "to take time off to do nothing else but my own work."

A North Carolina native, she graduated from Sweet Briar College in Virginia and worked as a copywriter for several years for Harper & Row Publishers. She began her photographic work in 1972, and has since studied at Penland School and worked as a free-lance photographer. An award winning photographer, her most recent work is a series of urban landscapes.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JOE STINES

The Children's Library of Sheppard Memorial Library has recently added several useful and interesting titles to its professional collection. This collection contains resource material for parents and teachers concerning reading, education and children.

— "A Child Goes To School" (Doubleday, 1978) by Sara Bonnett Stein is a story book of 15 stories which highlight typical events in the life of a kindergarten-age boy or girl. The book mirrors the discoveries, the disappointments, the joys, and the conflicts that are common to nearly all families. Its unique design creates a shared experience for parents and children as they look at the pictures and read together. Accompanying each chapter is a commentary for adults, which explores the themes of each chapter and serves as a resource for talking with children about their changing emotions and responses to a new, grown-up world.

This book gives you and your child an early glimpse of that first year; or if the child has already entered school, this book will help the two of you to gain a new perspective on the experience. Most important, "A Child Goes To School" will establish a pattern of talking, sharing, and growing that will carry you and your children on through the school days to come.

— —"A Sigh of Relief" (Bantam, 1977) is a first handbook for childhood emergencies. Produced by Martin Green, this book gives fast, simple instructions for every childhood injury and illness. It includes hundreds of step-by-step illustrations and even ideas which should help prevent accidents from happening.

Part One of the book discusses safety, immunization, childhood illnesses, drug identification and first-aid supplies. The book suggests that there are few mysteries in accident prevention. The preparations, practices and required actions are usually, if not always, simple, obvious and based upon common sense. Part Two of the book discusses first-aid procedures for a wide variety of emergencies from bites and stings to sunstroke and heat exhaustion.

— C. Emma Linderman's "Teachables From Trashables" (Toys 'n Things, 1979) is designed as a catalyst for new and not-yet-thought-of ways to turn household "junk" objects into inexpensive, safe and educational toys for children. The toys and instructions contained within this book should be regarded as modifiable examples that will hopefully help you generate new ideas. The book is organized by material such as: "Cardboard Box Toys," "Tin Can Toys," "Plastic Container Toys," and etc. Toys are also grouped according to age group guidelines. These homemade toys that teach are illustrated with black line drawigns.

— Other new and interesting titles include: "Kids Action Songs," "Explore and Create," "Finger Frolics" and "Music For Today's Children." All these and many more are available from the Children's Library.

Power And Poetry In Lewis Green's Stories Of Mountaineers

The High-Pitched Laugh Of A Painted Lady (And Other Stories). By Lewis W. Green. Winston-Salem. John F. Blair, Publisher. Hard cover, 163 pages, $10.00.

It is hard to imagine a more exciting collection of short stories than the eight collected in Lewis Green's newest work, "The High-Pitched Laugh Of A Painted Lady." Green, author of a fable, "The Year of the Swan," and of a fine novel of a few years back, "And Scatter the Proud," knows well his North Carolina mountain people — the "originals" (to use that word in its best meaning) Green is a native Tar Heel mountaineer.

Green is a writer who has a multiplicity of talents at his command. He has the rare ability to dig beneath the surface of people to reveal them in their truest dimensions, sometimes comic, often tragic, but they are always depicted with an inbred dignity.

Green is also an exact observer of the seasonal moods of nature. Few writers excel as he does in evoking strong, yet poetic sensations of skyscapes — "The wind took the full, rounded clouds and dragged them across the sky at high altitudes until they were ragged streamers. . ." (from the title story); or "Autumn. Leaves curing, turning, curling, drifting. It was as if he walked in a vast and fragrant tea loft." (from "The Moon Bather). In one story Green writes of the windsong of the stars.

Several themes occur and reoccur in the stories — death and the ever ready possibility of death; wisdom and paritcularly the virtue of patience gained through the passages of time lived; suffering and the stoic acceptance of life's misfortunes; and the primitive qualities of men who live as outcasts — criminals, inhabitants of isolated homesteads, and the doomed of small town skid rows.

Most of the stories focus on white mountaineers. One, "The Moon Bather" is a beautifully told love story of two Indians, a lithe, sturdy wandering man of 50 summers, Slow Tracker, who seeks healing wisdom and magic, and Sore Paws, a woman of 32 summers. Fate, in the form of a mysterious illness that kills many of their people, bring them together. They discover the kinship of their inner being and a love for each other with the naturalness of a stream broadening into a river.

Two of the stories, "Sam Welch Is Not the Name of a White Man," and "Larse's Place," explores the restricted lifestyles of contemporary Indians. The characters in these stories are sensitively portrayed, and bear no resemblance to stereotyped Indian types. Sam Welch is one of the most fascinating of Green's memorable fictional characters, a quiet, outwardly shy man who long endures the bullying of a deputy sheriff, waiting for the moment of truth when time for revenge arrives. Green describes Sam as a man "free of fear and hate because he learned to pray in the old way — that is, with his skin and body instead of his mind and mouth." How Sam eventually gets his revenge is as awesome and as intricately conceived as anything Shakespeare ever penned.

Death takes its stark toll time and again in these stories. It comes violently to the raving, criminal "preacher" and his pathetic, fearful-soul captive Woodrow in "Chaingang Preacher," perhaps the most powerful of the eight stories. It comes more peaceably to the 337 pound alcoholic derelict Nell in "The Blue Glint of a Queen's Last Jewel," and again with bloody abruptness to two youthful jail escapees in "The Breakaways."

Despite the violence of man and nature prominent in these stories, they are not without a generous share of wonderfully wry humor, especially in the superb mental interplay between Lon Clark, his shrewd wife (nameless, as are several women characters in Green's stories) and their moonshine making neighbor above them on the hill. Landon has two gifts — distilling spirits from peaches, muscadines, blackberries and apples, and the ability to manfully consume his own products. The wife (she), while espousing a religious dislike for likker, at the same time is intrigued by its existence — and presence. Lon, watching her watch a bottle of Landon's glistening brew she asked for just for the fine old bat wing bottle it was in, observes "She was doing an open mating-dance around the kitchen, only it was directed toward the bottle."

"The High-Pitched Laugh Of A Painted Lady" is proof that Lewis W. Green is one of the finest writers in North Carolina today. His perceptive characterizations of people as sturdy as the granite mountains where they live are splendid portraits of a breed fast disappearing in today's society.

Best of all, Green is totally entertaining in the telling of these tales.

Trio Tied For Series Lead

Watson, Trevino, Stadler Will Be In Final Threesome Today

AKRON, Ohio (AP) - Tom Watson, Lee Trevino and Craig Stadler, tied for the lead after 54 holes, will be grouped together in the final threesome Sunday in the last round of the $400,000 World Series of Golf.

"I always like to play in the last group," Trevino said. "They ain't gonna put you there if you're 15 over par."

And they aren't. They're five under the difficult par on the Firestone Country Club course with three-round totals of 205.

Trevino, with a 67, and Watson, with a 65 that included 10 one-putt greens, came from well off the pace to tie the front-running Stadler, who matched par 70. The last man on the course, Stadler bogeyed the last hole, missing a 6-footer, that lifted Trevino and Watson into a share of the lead.

"I'll have to play better than that tomorrow to have any chance of winning," Stadler said.

"Well," Watson grinned in response to a question, "I'm in good position — at least a lot better than I was yesterday (when he shot a 75)."

"I think one of us (in the last threesome) will have to shoot a 67," Trevino said. "And I think I've got another 67 in me."

He paused a moment, studied the big leader board that showed the relative position of the leaders, with nine men locked within two strokes of each other going into Sunday's final 18-hole chase for a $100,000 first prize.

"That's a lot of money," Trevino said. "When you're playing for that kind of money, anybody on the board can win it."

But the focus will be on the final threesome, the chunky Stadler with two of the most accomplished performers in the world, Trevino and Watson, who is seeking a fourth consecutive Player of the Year title.

Defending champion Lon Hinkle, Ben Crenshaw and Jerry Pate were a single shot back at 206. Pate had a 70, Hinkle 69 and Crenshaw a 70 despite a double bogey-6 on the ninth hole.

At 207, only two back and very much in the hunt, were Mike Reid, Bob Gilder and Ray Floyd. Gilder had a 68, Reid 69 and Floyd 70.

South African Gary Player was in the chase until he made double bogey on the final hole, missing a 2-foot putt. He finished with a 69 and was at 208.

Jack Nicklaus, the U.S. Open and PGA champion, failed to make a move and all but eliminated himself from any possibility of overtaking Watson for Player of the Year. Nicklaus must win this title to have any chance. After his 71 he was six shots back at 211.

All three leaders — Watson, Trevino and Stadler — went to the 18th tee and six under par. All three bogeyed the final hole.

For Watson, winner of the British Open and five American titles this year, it was the only time his putter failed him all day.

"The putter really was the shining light for me," he said. "I didn't play particularly well, didn't drive well, but I made everything I looked at.

"It was one of those days when I got everything in the hole. And thank God it came in the third round and got me back in the golf tournament."

He started the day five shots back, but the fantastic putting performance got him back into a tie for the top.

He one-putted seven of the first nine holes, included par-saving putts of 8, 10 and 15 feet. He also holed a couple of 12-footers for birdies, got a short iron within tap-in distance of the cup and made another from 25 feet.

That put him out in 31.

He holed two more long birdie putts, 30 and 20 feet, on the back nine, then failed to save par after driving into a fairway bunker on the 18th.

Trevino made his round with a a burst of six birdies in seven holes, starting on the sixth.

"Golf's a funny game," Trevino said.

"Standing on the sixth tee I was five shots back. Walking off the 12th green I was tied for the lead.

"The only thing that scared me was that I was tied with Watson."

Trevino, who is challenging Watson for the Vardon Trophy that goes to the man with the low stroke average on the tour, made two long putts in his decisive burst, from about 25 and 35 feet, and got the others from about 10-15 feet.

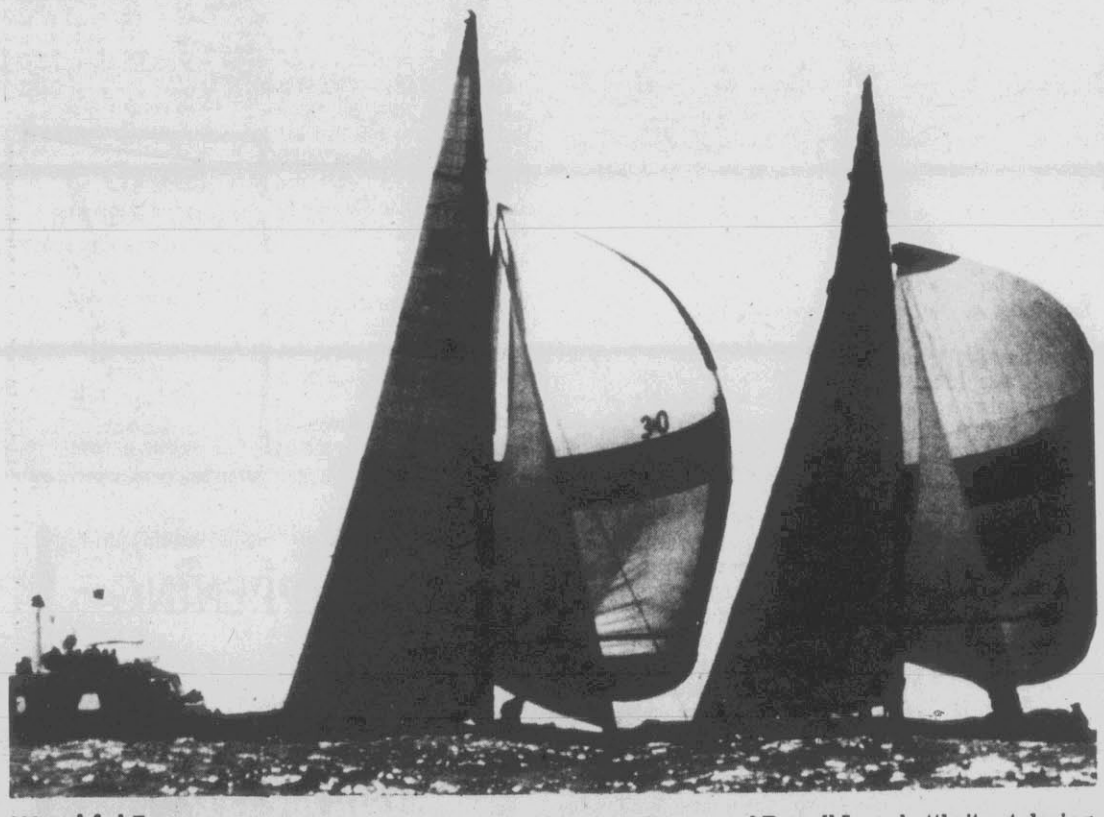

He bogeyed the last hole after his second shot caught a greenside bunker.

"I out-guessed myself," he said. "I ballooned a one-iron shot and I should have busted it. I couldn't feel the wind."

Stadler, around the lead all day, got back in front with a wedge to five feet for a birdie on the 16th.

A's Go For $12.7 Million

OAKLAND (AP) — After 20 years in baseball and numerous attempts to get out, Charles O. Finley finally sold the Oakland A's Saturday to a group headed by the chairman of the board of Levi Strauss & Co. for $12.7 million.

Finley announced the sale to Walter A. Haas Jr., Levi chairman and a trustee of the Ford Foundation, Haas's son Walter J. and his son-in-law Roy Eisenhardt at a crowded news conference at the Kaiser Aluminum's corporate headquarters. Both Finley and the new owners credited Cornell Maier, chairman of Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp., for making the sale possible.

Although the 62-year-old Finley has tried several times to sell the team to out-of-town owners — most recently oilman Marvin Davis of Denver last year — the new owners pledged to keep the team in Oakland for at least the seven remaining years on the lease at the Oakland Coliseum and the 20 more years on the lease option.

"I'm leaving the game because I can no longer compete financially," said Finley, who bought the team in 1960 in Kansas City and moved it to Oakland in 1967. "I'm having to leave because of the idiotic, astronomical, unjustified salaries today. But I don't think I could be leaving the team in better hands."

The elder Haas, 64, who heads the huge Levi corporation of San Francisco, will be team chairman, but day-to-day operations will be run by his son who will carry the title of president and by Eisenhardt who will be executive vice president.

The sale is to become effective on Nov. 6, but needs the approval of American League owners. Several previous attempts to sell the team to Davis ran into both legal and American League opposition.

Eisenhardt said Maier told him in July that the team was for sale and after undertaking a demographic study of the east Bay and a financial analysis of the team the Haas group decided to go after the club.

Haas, 30, had been an official with Levi Strauss but resigned to take over the A's while Eisenhardt, a 41-year-old attorney, will continue to teach at the University of California law school at Berkeley.

"We left our hats at home and brought all the cattle," Eisenhardt said in describing the purchase negotiations and paraphrasing one of Finley's favortite phrases about potential buyers.

Finley talked of selling the A's in 193, after having a heart attack, but he explained his rebuff of all offers by often saying prospective owners "had big hats and no cattle," meaning not enough money.

"The entire transaction took 30 days. The big question of course is can the Bay area support two teams. We intend to be successful. We want everyone to catch baseball fever," Eisenhardt said.

"When I was young I used to think about how I could get to the ballpark everyday and not be called a bum," the younger Haas said. "I have always been a sports fan."

The sale had been rumored for several days but the actual buyers came as a surprise to most people — including manager Billy Martin.

"I just walked in cold," Martin said of his first meeting with the new owners before the news conference. "I'd never met them but they seem excited about it and they love the game of baseball.

"It's kind of sad in a way that Charlie's leaving. Everyone said we wouldn't get along but he's been just tremendous with me."

Finley echoed Martin's sadness about his departure. "I've probably smelled more roses than I had a right to," Finley said of his five division titles and three world championships. "I'm sorry to leave the game I enjoyed so much. I've always preferred to sell the club to someone who would keep it in Oakland. I have nothing against Oakland — I've enjoyed my stay.

Collins Suffers Bruised Ribs

PIRATE NOTEBOOK

Injuries have been a problem for East Carolina University's football Pirates, as they prepare for the season opener with Duke University, just two weeks away.

But Saturday afternoon during the first real full-scale scrimmage, there was a collective gasp as star running back Anthony Collins took a hit on a tackle and didn't get up.

That turned to even more apprehension when Collins was driven off to Pitt Memorial. But it turned out to be just a precautionary measure. The diagnosis was bruised ribs, and the speedburner is expected to be back at full strength by early this week.

"Injuries are definitely a problem for us," Coach Ed Emory said afterwards. "We have 31 in sick bay right now. But we've had to have more hitting than usual because we are so young. We just have to keep doing it to get it right."

During the practice, the Pirates had some good and some bad moments. Offensive coordinator Wright Anderson and defensive coordinator Norm Parker both found some good things, but were far from being satisfied.

"I thought Carlton Nelson did a good job running the ball at quarterback," Anderson said. "But he's got a sore arm and didn't throw at all."

Bob Miller, vieing with Larry Brobst for the number two quarterback slot, did throw, and usually was on target with some pinpoint throws. That was one of the things that Anderson liked.

"The best thing is that the offensive line was good in its pass protection," he noted. "Our backs ran hard, but they didn't block very well. I thought Wayne Inman (right guard) had his best day up front. Theodore Sutton had a couple of real good runs, and he blocked well on pass protection."

One highlight was the running of freshman halfback Ernest Byner, but Anderson was withholding praise. "He has potential, but he hasn't run a play against anyone yet except his own people. We'll have to wait and see."

Parker echoed Anderson when he was asked for comments on several freshmen, including nose guard Terry Long, who has been getting a lot of attention just from his statistics, and the duo of Ronald and Donald Reid, a pair of Farmville Central linebacker products. "We can't judge them until we see them in a game. Right now, we haven't seen them at all, and we won't until we go on the field against someone else."

Parker was not very pleased with the defensive play. "I would have liked for us to have looked better. I would like to have seen more big hits than I did. It doesn't look like we're in real good shape right now," he said.

"It's hard to judge individuals, but I'd have to say that Mike Davis looked good at defensive end and Nate Wigfall showed up better than before in the line. Doug Smith probably had one of his better days. And Rocky Butler had some good licks."

Emory added that he felt that he was disappointed in the way the second offensive unit was able to move the ball against the number one de-

Rose Team To Beat, Say Div. I Coaches

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School, which wound up as the runner-up in the State 4-A Playoffs last December, was selected as the team to beat in the Division I race this year by the coaches, despite heavy losses.

Rocky Mount, the pre-season favorite last year, wound up finishing second in the ballot, conducted by The Daily Reflector.

Each coach was asked to vote his order of predicted finish, omitting his own team. The coaches then gave Rose six first place finishes and one second place finish. Rocky Mount got one first and six seconds, while Northeastern got the remaining first place vote.

Based on a 7-6-5-4-3-2-1 point award for placing, Rose finished with 48 points, while Rocky Mount was a solid second with 43.

Northeastern finished third with 35, while Wilson Fike was fourth with 30.

The second four were less distinct. Wilson Beddingfield was the choice for fifth, with 20 points, followed closely by Bertie with 19, Northern Nash with 18, while Wilson Hunt brought up the rear with 11.

A team-by-team roundup of the conference, with the exception of Rose. A full report on Rose will be carried in Thursday's edition.

Northern Nash

One of two schools in the conference with a new coach, Northern Nash will seek to improve on its record of last year which saw it lose five close games new coach Robert Barrow says it could have won.

The Knights have a number of good athletes, but Barrow feels that they are not as sound as they need to be fundamentally, especially in the line. "We're not very aggressive either," he added. "Their attitude about themselves is at a low point. If we can get aggressive and improve on our blocking and tackling, then we can be a good team." Actually, most of the players from last year return, giving Northern a good experience base.

The Knights will operate their offense from the veer, and utilize the drop-back pass. "I think we'll have a lot more versatility," Barrow said.

Top offensive players include running backs George Battle and Johnny Richardson, both of whom return, and quarterback Steve Smith, a transfer from NEW Academy. "He's smart and reads well. He's quick, too." The top lineman appears to be 6-3, 230-pound center Marty Feltz.

On defense, the Knights will use a 4-4 stack. Top personnel include William Battle at inside linebacker, Scott Joyner, a 6-3, 240-pound tackle, and Eric Carter, 6-2, 210, at end.

"To be good, we have to work hard on our blocking and tackling. Our ball handling also needs work. If we have good concentration and some good games early in the season, it will really help us," Barrow said.

Bertie

The other school with a new coach is Bertie, where Chip Williams takes over. The Falcons will be using a new offense, the I, but they won't be running as much option as normally.

"We do hope to throw more," Williams said. The key to that will be quarterback Carl Spruill, who played in only two games last season. "We really don't have too many people back on the

Midget Team Dedicates Season To Teammate

BALTIMORE (AP) — The members of a midget football team in Nashville, Tenn., will likely never forget the tragic story of teammate Kwame Kyler.

The Camp Springs, Md., 8-year-old, died Monday at his second practice at pee-wee football. Since birth he had fought a serious heart ailment, but he lost that battle playing the sport he loved.

His parents, who attended the boy's funeral Friday, had let him play football after doctors told them there would be no additional danger by participating. But they are not bitter, saying that at least the boy died happy.

"I came home and read that story late at night," said Rick Willis, coach of the Flatrock Vols in Nashville. "It really moved me.

"And for a few moments I put myself in the place of his parents, and I could see my own son playing out there.

Kwame Kyler

"I could feel a little of the grief and sorrow they must be going through."

So the team of 7 and 8-year-olds will dedicate their season to Kwame's spirit, wearing black armbands in his memory.

A Kyler family spokeswoman said they were heartened by the team's action.

At Friday night's practice Willis read his players the story of Kyler's death.

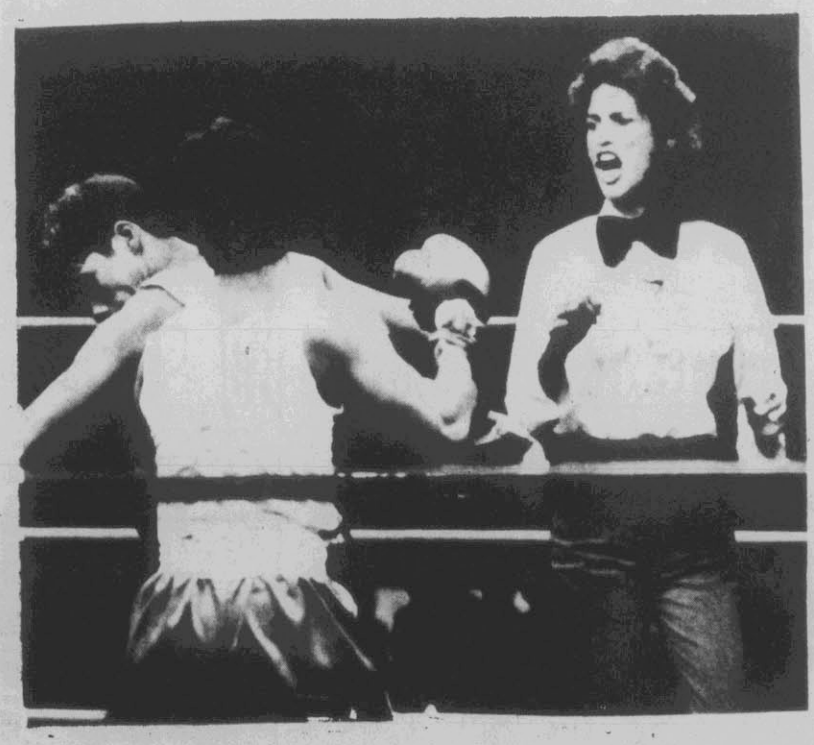

"There was a stillness, quietness that went over the team," he said. "It was the most attention I've ever had with them."

Willis, a Nashville policeman, said the kids quickly agreed to send the parents a postcard. They also decided to dedicate each football game to Kyler's memory.

"Before each game we are going to think of Kwame Kyler," he said. "And at the end of the season, we're going to have a trophy in his name for the boy who shows the most desire, the most courage.

"They're ready to play for

UNC's Sharpe Out For Season

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's starting quarterback, junior Chuck Sharpe, injured his knee in practice Saturday and will be out for the entire 1980 season.

Sharpe, of Burlington, tore a ligament in his left knee during the Tar Heels' first full-scale scrimmage of the fall and was scheduled for surgery Sunday.

Coach Dick Crum said Rod Elkins, a sophomore from Greensboro, would replace Sharpe as the starting quarterback. He said freshman Scott Stankavage of Furlong, Pa., would be listed as the backup.

"I'm especially sorry for Chuck because he's worked so hard to get ready for this season," he said. "Rod doesn't have much experience, but we have great confidence in him. He's done a very good job this fall."

Elkins was the junior varsity quarterback last season and played in only one varsity game, the 41-3 victory at Army. He quarterbacked three plays that day.

North Carolina opens its season at home Sept. 6 against Furman.

McAdoo On Trading Block

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Former National Basketball Association scoring champion Bob McAdoo and two other Detroit Pistons players have been put on the trading block.

Jack McCloskey, Detroit's general manager, said he has sent a teletype message to the 22 other NBA teams informing them that McAdoo, a forward, and guards Roy Hamilton and Earl Evans are available.

"I just want to see if anybody has any interest in them," McCloskey said Friday. "It doesn't mean we're going to give them away. If anybody has any interest he had better he prepared with a super deal."

McAdoo came to the Pistons at the beginning of the 1979-80 season after playing half a season with Boston, two years with the New York Knicks and 4½ years with Buffalo. He was the NBA's leading scorer for three straight seasons from 1973-74 through 1975-76 while with Buffalo.

McAdoo averaged 21.1 points a game for the Pistons, but the 6-foot-9 veteran also missed 24 games as Detroit struggled to the NBA's worst record, winning only 16 games.

McAdoo has expressed disenchantment with playing in Detroit.

Hamilton, from UCLA, averaged 4.6 points and less than three assists a game in 72 contests during his rookie year with the Pistons. Evans, of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas, had 4.4 points and one assist a game in 36 games.

McCloskey declined to say whether he had received any offers.

Former Patriot Coach Is Dead

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — Clive Rush, head coach of the former Boston Patriots of the old American Football League for 1½ seasons, is dead, apparently of a heart attack. He was 49.

The stormy and controversial Rush coached the Patriots, now the New England Patriots of the National Football League, from Jan. 30, 1969, through Nov. 3, 1970.

He died Friday at Madison County Hospital.

Before joining the Patriots, Rush was offensive coordinator for the New York Jets. In recent years, he was an automobile salesman, and for the last year, central Ohio director of the Grolier Education Corp., which sells the Encyclopedia Americana.

Rush replaced Coach and General Manager Mike Holovak with the Patriots. He was succeeded by John Mazur, his defensive coordinator.

In 1971, Rush served for a while as offensive coordinator under George Allen with the Washington Redskins. He resigned, and his last coaching job was in 1976 with the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y.

Ballesteros Leads Open

BERLIN (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros, the ruling U.S. Masters champion, fired a 2-under-par 70 in strong winds Saturday to take the third-round lead in the German Open Championships.

The 23-year-old Spaniard, who had previous rounds of 72 and 69 for a 5-under-par total of 211 strokes, shared first place with South African Mark McNulty, 26, who shot consistent rounds of 71-70-70.

Both were set to tackle the final round on the par-72 Wannsee course Sunday for the first prize of $17,500 in the $106,000 tournament.

Briton Tony Charnley had a 212, one behind the leader, after rounds of 71-69-72.

At 213 are Neil Coles of Britain, 70-70-73, and Vicente Fernandez of Argentina, who set a course record Friday for an aggregate, 76-65-72.

Howard Clark of Britain, 74-72-68; Bernard Gallagher of Scotland, 71-71-72, and Nick Price of Zimbabwe, 74-71-69, shared the fourth slot with 214s.

Stone Wins 21st; Yanks Beat Angels

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Steve Stone won his 21st game Saturday, with a little help from his friends in the bullpen.

"I need the bullpen to do the job and that's what happened today," the winningest pitcher in the major leagues said after his Baltimore Orioles beat the Oakland A's 4-2.

Stone had a three-run lead after six innings, before leaving in the midst of an A's rally. In came Tippy Martinez to provide the needed relief. The Orioles left-hander put down the A's with the help of a pickoff play that caught Rickey Henderson flat-footed at first base.

"The play was one of the great plays I've seen this year," said Stone.

Martinez said they "worked on it in spring training. (First baseman) Eddie Murray put it on a couple of pitches before and I shook him off. And then he called it again and it couldn't have come at a better time. I'm glad I didn't have to make that 3-2 pitch to Murphy."

Later, Tim Stoddard came in to help out in a crucial eighth-inning situation.

"I think it takes time to adjust from Steve's breaking pitches to my fastball," said Stoddard. "They know what I'm going to throw but I'm making a living on throwing hard. I don't know what will happen in a couple of years if I can't do it any more."

Dan Graham knocked in all of Baltimore's runs with two homers off Brian Kingman.

"The first homer he had to challenge me," said Graham. "There were runners at first and second and he didn't want to put me on. The second was not the best pitch. It was a curve ball up. I wasn't thinking home run the second time. I screw myself into the ground when I start thinking home run."

The Orioles were leading 3-2 when Stoddard was brought into the game after Dave Revering reached second on center fielder Al Bumbry's one-out error.

Stoddard then proceeded to strike out the A's No.4-5 hitters in the lineup, Tony Armas and Mitchell Page, and went on to his 19th save of the season. Stoddard faced six batters overall, striking out five and allowing one single.

Stone, 21-4, was cruising along with a one-hitter and a 3-0 lead in the seventh inning when Page, who had the A's first hit in the second, lined a one-out homer over the left field wall. Jim Essian followed with an infield single, and when Stone hit Dave McKay with a pitch, Manager Earl Weaver brought in Tippy Martinez.

Martinez struck out pinch-hitter Jeff Newman, but walked pinch-hitter Mike Heath and threw a wild pitch to make the score 3-2. Rickey Henderson was then intentionally walked, and with a 3-2 count on Dwayne Murphy, was picked off first base by Martinez throwing to Eddie Murray.

The Orioles got three of their runs in the second on a walk to Murray, a single by Terry Crowley and Graham's three-run homer, his eighth of the year, to right-center off loser Brian Kingman, 7-14.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bob Watson was holding his inflamed, right index finger in a cup of ice in the locker room after the game, but the pain didn't show on his face.

The New York Yankees had just battled their way out of a prolonged offensive slump to defeat the California Angels 5-2 behind Rudy May, 11-5, who struck out a season-high nine batters.

Watson, Rick Cerone and Lou Piniella sparked a 13-hit attack that enabled the Yankees to maintain their one-half game lead over Baltimore in the American League East.

Cerone had three singles and drove in three runs while Piniella also had three hits. Watson homered and doubled to drive in two runs.

"This is what it's all about," Watson said. "This is my 16th year and this is only the second time I've been in a pennant race. I'm not going to let a little hurt keep me from playing. It would mean a whole lot to get into the playoffs and the World Series and win the whole thing.

"Everyone talks about the money, but it's the prestige. You can spend the money but you'll always have the ring," Watson said.

It was Watson's 10th home run, a first-inning shot, that got the Yankees started. The big first baseman was as happy about that as he was about the bats his teammates were swinging.

"I was happy today. I think the offense is going to come around. This is the first time we've been getting runners to second base where we can drive them in," Watson said.

Piniella got to second base in the second inning on an infield single and a throwing error by Bobby Grich, and Cerone promptly singled him home to give New York a 2-0 lead.

Bob Baylor's single, a wild pitch and a two-out error by Watson at first enabled the Angels to cut the New York lead to 2-1 in the second. But Cerone's two-out single against California starter Dave LaRoche, 2-4, increased the New York lead to 3-1 in the fifth inning.

California scored its second run in the sixth when Dan Ford doubled with two out and was singled home by Baylor.

New York chased LaRoche during a two-run seventh. After Ruppert Jones led off with a walk and stole second, Watson followed with a one out RBI double and eventually scored on Cerone's third single.

Rich Gossage relieved May after pinch hitter Rod Carew led off the eighth with a double and Rick Miller struck out. He retired the Angels without incidence to record his 21st save.

May struck out nine in 71-3 innings.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Clint Hurdle slugged a two-out, run-scoring double in the seventh inning and rode home on Frank White's single to lift the Kansas City Royals past Cleveland 3-2 Saturday night and help starter Rich Gale set a club record for consecutive victories.

Gale, 13-7, needed two-inning relief help from Dan Quisenberry to set a club record with his 12th consecutive winning start.

Wayne Garland, 6-6, walked Amos Otis with two out in the seventh, then Hurdle lashed a 2-2 pitch into left field to score Otis with the tying run.

George Brett was hitless in three at bats, and his average dropped to .399 after being above .400 for a week.

Miguel Dilone, who stole two bases and raised his season total to 47, singled leading off the game, stole second and gave the Indians a 1-0 lead on Mike Hargrove's single.

The Royals tied it in the second when Darrell Porter reached on a fielder's choice and came around on a single by Otis and Hurdle's sacrifice fly.

The Indians went ahead 2-1 in the fourth on Joe Charboneau's triple and Rick Manning's single.

Quisenberry, who already holds the team record for saves, notched his 28th.

CHICAGO (AP) — Todd Cruz drove in two runs, and Kevin Bell contributed two key hits Saturday night to pace rookie right-hander Rich Dotson and the Chicago White Sox to a 5-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Dotson, 10-8, tossed a four-hitter while walking three and striking out eight as the White Sox won their third game in a row while Toronto was dropping its third straight.

The Sox scored two runs off Jack Kucek, 3-6, in the second after loading the bases with none out. Harold Baines doubled to left-center and remained at second while Glenn Borgmann's pop fly fell in front of left fielder Lloyd Moseby. Bell then placed a perfect bunt between the pitcher and the third base line to load the bases. Cruz grounded sharply to shortstop Alfredo Griffin, but the ball went between his legs for an error and both Baines and Borgmann scored.

The Sox added three more runs in the third after Kucek walked leadoff batter Lamar Johnson. Jim Morrison sacificed Johnson to second, and Toronto second baseman Garth Iorg dropped Baines' pop fly for an error to put runners on first and second. Bell singled to score Johnson, and Cruz followed with a single that scored Baines.

Leo Sutherland doubled home Bell, chasing Kucek.

Cale Holds Off Waltrip, Earnhardt To Win Vol 500

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Pole-winner Cale Yarborough held off Dale Earnhardt and Darrell Waltrip in a driving finish Saturday night and won the Volunteer 500 Grand National stock car race.

It was the second straight victory for Yarborough, who won the Michigan 400 last Sunday and who has started on the pole in 10 races this season, just two short of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing record for one year.

Yarborough, NASCAR point leader Earnhardt and Waltrip had battled it out over the last 200 laps on the high-banked .533-mile Bristol International Raceway track.

Joe Millikan, driving in relief for Richard Petty, also was involved in the battle until late in the race.

Yarborough, winning for the third time this season on the Grand National circuit, took the lead for good on the 478th lap and held on against the charges of Earnhardt and Waltrip.

Earnhardt was second and Waltrip third.

Petty, with Millikan driving his car, was fourth and Benny Parsons was fifth. Parsons, driving a Ford, was the only non-Chevrolet driver in the top five. Both Petty and Parsons were one lap down at the finish.

With the caution flag out 10 times for 57 laps, Earnhardt's speed was a non-record 86.973 mph.

It was the ninth Bristol International Raceway victory for Yarborough and the first defeat here in three starts for Earnhardt, who won the Southeastern 500 in 1979 and 1980. Watrip was the winner of last year's Volunteer 500.

Pittsburgh Shades Cincinnati, 2-1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Rick Rhoden and two relief pitchers combined on a five-hitter and Dave Parker collected three hits, including an RBI single, as the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Cincinnati Reds 2-1 Saturday night.

Rhoden, 4-3, gave up four hits and pitched shutout ball until the ninth, when the Reds scored on a one-out double by Doug Collins and single by Ken Griffey. Kent Tekluve got one out, but gave up a single to George Foster, and himself needed last-out relief help from Grant Jackson, who recorded his seventh save of the season.

The Pirates got a run in the first off Frank Pastore, 10-6, making his first start since July 18. Omar Moreno slapped a leadoff single, stole second and scored one out later when Parker singled through the right side of the infield.

Moreno walked with two out in the fifth and stole his 72nd base of the season, second highest in the National League. He scored on Tim Foli's single to right.

Pastore, on the disabled list since July 2 with a sore finger on his pitching hand, gave up at least one hit in each of the 51-3 innings he pitched.

Philadelphia 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Allen Ripley knocked in his first major league runs and pitched the San Francisco Giants to a 6-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday night, moving the Giants over the .500 mark for the first time in more than a year.

It was the fourth victory in five games on the present road trip for the Giants, who are 12-10 this month and 25-18 since the All-Star break. San Francisco has won 10 of 14 games in a late bid to get into the National League West Division race.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the second when, with two outs, Mike Ivie doubled and eventually scored on an error by second baseman Manny Trillo. They boosted it to 2-0 in the third on a two-out double by Larry Herndon and a single by Milt May.

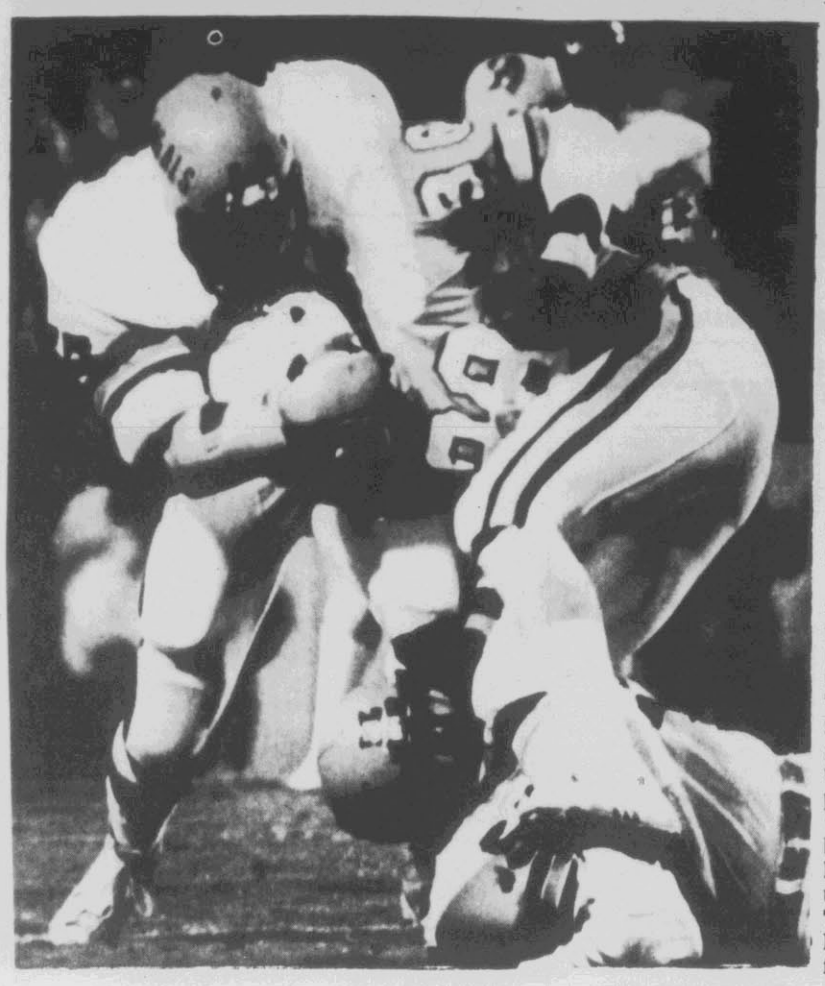

The Phillies tied it in the fourth. Bake McBride was safe on an error, took second on a groundout, third on an infield single and scored on Larry Bowa's double. After Bob Boone was intentionally walked, Phillies starter Larry Christenson singled home the tying run.

The Giants kayoed Christenson with a four-run sixth that wrapped up the game.

Darrell Evans opened with a double and scored on May's double. Rennie Stennett was walked intentionally, and Ripley slammed a triple past a tumbling Lonnie Smith in left field for two more runs. The pitcher scored on Bill North's single to make it 6-2.

Ripley, 7-6, scattered seven hits, striking out two and walking two. Christenson, making his second start since

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Scott Dierking's touchdown plunge, set up by three key penalties, snapped a third-quarter tie and Pat Leahy added two field goals to spark the New York Jets to a 20-13 preseason football victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night.

It was the first victory of the preseason for the Jets, 1-2, and it was their first ever over Pittsburgh, 2-1.

With the score 7-7 in the third period, L.C. Greenwood sacked New York quarterback Richard Todd on a third-down play from the Pittsburgh 37. But a 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness against defensive tackle Steve Furness kept the drive alive.

Two plays later, a roughing-the-passer call against John Banaszak gave the Jets 15 more yards and a first down at the Pittsburgh 15. Then pass interference against rookie cornerback Ted Walton gave New York a first down at the one, from where Dierking plunged for the go-ahead score.

One series later, Leahy booted a 49-yard field goal, the longest of his career. It was set up by a 15-yard scramble by Todd, who ran five yards for a New York touchdown in the first quarter.

Theo Bell returned a punt 69 yards for a Steeler touchdown early in the final quarter. But Leahy got New York's final score with a 23-yard field goal.

The Steelers scored their initial touchdown on Sidney Thorton's two-yard run in the second quarter, capping a 97-yard, 10-play drive highlighted by a 41-yard pass from Terry Bradshaw to Lynn Swann.

Chicago 31

CHICAGO (AP) — Brian Sipe's fifth touchdown pass, a 10-yard strike to Dave Logan with 1:28 remaining in the game, lifted the Cleveland Browns to a 33-31 victory over the Chicago Bears in a National Football League exhibition game.

Sipe completed 21 of 36 passes for 313 yards in a game in which the Browns trailed 29-6 at the half.

Sipe threw touchdown passes of 17 yards to Ozzie Newsome, 16 and 31 yards to Reggie Rucker and also a 10-yard touchwdown pass to Ricky Feacher.

Walter Payton, who gained 85 yards and played only in the first half set up the second touchdown with a 67-yard run and capped it with a by going the final yard to give the Bears a 14-0 lead.

Kansas City.....20
St. Louis.....10

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Nick Lowery booted a 20-yard field goal and Horace Belton slashed 4 yards for a touchdown, both in the final quarter, giving the Kansas City Chiefs a 20-10 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night in a National Football League preseason game.

Kansas City, unbeaten in three contests, capitalized on an interception of a Jim Hart pass which was tipped high into the air at the line of scrimmage to unlock a 10-10 tie.

Lowery kicked his field goal five plays later. In the game's final two minutes, Belton crashed to the clinching points after J.T. Smith returned a St. Louis punt 35 yards to the Cards' 12.

Oakland 17

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Theismann threw for two touchdowns and Clarence Harmon and rookie free agent Ricky Claitt ran over for two more Saturday night as the Washington Redskins broke out of their touchdown drought to defeat the Oakland Raiders 34-17 in a National Football League exhibition game.

Theismann, who completed 12 of 20 passes for 167 yards during the three quarters he played, threw a 30-yard touchdown to wide receiver Ricky Thompson, who dove to catch the ball but managed to keep his feet in the end zone.

The TD, coming with 19:16 remaining in the second quarter, put Washington into a 14-10 lead.

With 4:05 remaining in the half, the Redskins played ball control and moved from their own 29 to the Oakland 4. Theismann then threw a touchdown strike to rookie Zion McKinney of South Carolina on the last play of the first half to give Washington a 21-10 midway edge.

The victory was the third consecutive of the exhibition season for the Redskins, who had scored only one touchdown in the first two games while relying on the foot of Mark Moseley for five field goals. Oakland now has lost two of three games.

Tampa Bay 20
Cincinnati 14

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Second-year running back Rick Berns, fighting to make the team, scored on an 11-yard touchdown run in overtime Saturday night to give the Tampa Bay Buccaneers a water-logged 20-14 exhibition victory over Cincinnati.

Berns' touchdown run at 6:21 into the extra period gave him 99 yards in 14 carries for the game.

The victory boosted Tampa to a 2-1 record in preseason National Football League play while the Bengals fell to 1-2.

Cincinnati received the kickoff in overtime and moved to the Tampa 41-yard line. But the Bengals gave up the ball when running back Nathan Poole was stopped on a fourth-and-one attempt.

The Bucs took over and drove 59 yards in 11 plays with Berns picking up 32 yards in the drive.

The Bucs nearly won the game in regulation play when Neil O'Donoghue kicked a 28-yard field goal through the uprights with 58 seconds left. But the kick was nullified because Cincinnati called time out just before the snap.

O'Donoghue tried again four seconds later, but was wide to the left.

Buffalo.....14
Green Bay.....0

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Veteran quarterback Joe Ferguson passed for two first-half touchdowns Saturday and rookie Joe Cribbs rushed for 79 yards in 15 carries as the Buffalo Bills defeated the Green Bay Packers 14-0 in a National Football League preseason game.

The exhibition victory was the first in Coach Chuck Knox's three years at Buffalo, ending a string of 10 straight losses.

Ferguson hit wide receiver Duke Fergerson for 12 yards and a score late in the first quarter, capping a 69-yard drive, and then put together a methodical, 77-yard march in 19 plays to salt away the game. His 2-yard scoring pass to fullback Roosevelt Leaks and Nick Mike-Mayer's second placement ended scoring, although the Bills let time run out with the ball on the Packers' 2-yard line.

Rampants Picked To Win Title...

team. There are just four on offense and four on defense who were starters. And on top of this, we are thin in depth."

Top offensive people on the junior-dominated team will be Jeff Cherry, a tailback; Spruill; receivers Al Riddick and Dwayne Gilliam; guard Raymond Williams, and tackle Richard Vaughn.

Defensively, Williams is installing a 60-system. His top people on that side of the line include tackles Tony Lee and Otis McClemy, linebacker Wayne Speller and back James Walton.

"We are going to have to stay healthy to be successful," Williams said. "We have to apply technique and get some breaks."

Fike

Wilson Fike coach Maxie Williams feels that his Golden Demons will be improved over last year, despite the fact that nine offensive starters and five defensive starters were lost to graduation.

"We have some people up from the junior varisty and a couple of sophomores who are going to have to come through for us this year," Williams said. "We've got only one lineman back on offense, so they are going to have to come around quickly."

Williams feels he has two good running backs in his I-formation backfield, mo Ruffin (6-2, 195), who also is a defensive back, and Wade Williams (6-1, 205). Both of them will operate from the fullback slot, while Anthony Moore, who played about half the time last year, will be at the tailback position. The only returning lineman is Len Barnes. Quarterback Tom Benson is back, along with split end Dennis Dew.

The defensive side, which will put up a five-man front, is led by Greg Edwards at safety, Calvin Barnes and Moore at the corners, Jerry Ruffin at linebacker, Tank Walker at tackle, Ernie Smith at tackle, and Larry Norman, a nose guard. "We look for a lot of Walker this year, but Smith is going to have to get into shape," Williams said.

For the Titans to be winners, Williams feels that the breaks must go their way. "The biggest thing is our young, inexperienced linemen to grow up quickly. We have the backs who can do the job if they get the blocking."

Rocky Mount

After three straight conference championship, Rocky Mount Gryphon coach Walt Wiggins will be just as happy to win another. Some feel he can do it, despite the fact that Rose got the pre-season nod.

"We'll be decent," Wiggins admitted. "I don't know if we're as strong as we were last year, but we certainly better than average."

Wiggins expects no changes on the offensive side of the ball, where the pro-set will continue to be used. The receiver crew returns, featuring Ken Weaver and Denry Lawrence, but the whole starting backfield will be new. "So far they've looked good. We'll have to pass, but we'll use about the same basic game plan as in the past."

Scott Cooper, who was the backup quarterback last year, moves up to the staring spot this time around.

The defense has seen a lot of changes. A 5-2 system will be used. "If we have a weak point, it would have to be our defense," Wiggins said. "We only have two people in the same position they were in last year."

Top personnel include Jeff Swaim, who returns at linebacker; Melvin Williams, moved from nose guard to tackle, returning monster back John Thayer, and Steve Barnes, moved from end to free safety.

"Like any high school, the injury situation will be important to us. If we stay healthy we will be okay.

"We've won three in a row now and I'm certainly not counting us out this year. If we get the right breaks, we certainly have the potential to win."

Northeastern

Jerry McGee's Northeastern Eagles could end up being the surprise team of the year. They were a solid choice of the coaches for third, and that sort of makes them the dark-horse candidate for the title.

"We have an outstanding senior class," McGee said. "But we have no real size. I still think we'll be competitive."

The defense for Northeastern will be changed. "We'll run a 6-2. We have good, big people on the outside, at linebacker, ends and in the secondary, but our inside people will be young and small." Top defenders include Robert Williams, linebacker; Victor Spellman, end; and Walter Harris, safety. "We're going to have to use a lot of movement to help us on defense," the coach said.

On offense, McGee finds a familiar face—a very familiar one. Back at quarterback is Jerry McGee Jr., who was the whole spirit of the team last year. The coach is hopeful that his son won't have to carry as big a load this year. "We have an outstanding runner in Bobby McCullen, who moved from fullback to tailback, and we think he can be a big help to us." Also in the pro-I backfield will be William Morris, a 218-pound fullback. The top linemen are Hunter Williams (6-1, 210) who was all-conference at center last year; and returning guards Stacey Foster (5-10, 220) and Anthony Johnson (5-11, 185).

"This is the smallest squad we've had in numbers," McGee said. "That will make injuries very key for us. I do feel that we definitely can contend for the championship. These seniors won the junior varsity championship at sophomores, so I know that they are capable."

Hunt

Bill Williamson's Hunt team expects to field a strong defense again this year. It was their offense that was suspect last year.

"Our best athletes are on the defensive unit," the coach said. "Our experience is on the defense too. Williamson will be using a 5-2 defensive system, and he lists his top personnel on that side of the line as linebacker Paul Ivey, linebacker Brent Reason, end Jerome Braswell, and safety Scott Barnes.

"I really also have to mention our nose guard Johnny Coleman. He's not but 165 pounds but he loves to play and plays like a wildman," Williamson said.

Offensively, the Warriors will use the wishbone formation, with some I thrown in. "We hope to have a good option offense. We have a sophomore quarterback who is more adapted to the offense than our quarterback last year. He has a lot of ability and good speed and he reads well." The player in question is Christy Rodri. "We may try to throw more since we have some people with good hands out for the first time. The biggest problem Rodri has is height. He has trouble seeing over the line." Percy Finch returns at fullback, and is another top player.

"Our line is all new, however, and so far no one has stood out above the rest," Williamson said.

"We are going to have to be able to move the football to be a good team. The offense has to do its job. Our defense will be good, but we can't expect them to stay out there all night long."

Beddingfield

Ray Barger's Beddingfield eleven will be young in the secondary and offensive line. "We lost all four of our defensive backs, and we have only one veteran returning in the offensive line," Barger said. "Our strong points will be the defensive line and linebackers. We have three back in the line and our linebackers are looking good."

On offense, the Bruins will operate from the I-formation. The quarterback will be Al Hardison, moved from the defensive secondary. "He won't be playing defense this year. He was our backup for two years, and is an intelligent kid." At fullback will be Richard Quintavalle, who was moved from guard to the backfield.

Three inside linemen anchor the defense. They include tackles Will Whitley and Dennis Barron, and nose guard Andre Guion.

"We've put a lot of emphasis on defense in practice, and we're still trying to bring our young people along. We need confidence, so I guess our biggest question mark is maturity. As we go along, I think we will get more confident."

Caldwell Still Buick Leader

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Rex Caldwell figures he has to hit at least 10 fairways Sunday in order to win his first PGA title and pocket the $40,000 first prize in the Buick Open golf championship.

Caldwell, 30, fired a 1-under-par 71 Saturday and took a 4-stroke lead into the final round with a 13-under 203 in the $250,000 tournament.

Caldwell, a native of Everett, Wash., who now plays out of Tallahassee, Fla., was erratic off the tee Saturday, driving into the rough on seven of the last nine holes.

"I think I can win if I just drive in the fairway," Caldwell said. "I feel like I'm putting a good swing on the ball, but I'm just out of the fairway."

The brash, talkative golfer began Saturday's play at 12-under, five strokes better than Tom Weiskopf and Tom Kite.

However, it was first-round coleader Barney Thompson who made the strongest run at Caldwell under bright sunny skies over the 7,001-yard Warwick Hills course.

"I could have buried everybody, but I just didn't drive well enough to take advantage of how well I was playing my irons," Caldwell said.

Thompson, of Barboursville, W.Va., holed a 20-foot sand wedge at the 598-yard, par-5 16th hole for an eagle and finished the round at 3-under 69 to move into sole possession of second place at 9-under 20.

"Four shots isn't a big lead at all on a tough course like this," Caldwell cautioned. "If somebody's got their roller (putter) working, who knows.

"Look how Barney picked up two strokes with an eagle."

The course, normally a tough test for PGA regulars, has yielded 126 subpar rounds through 54 holes, in part because a cloudburst during the first round Thursday dumped 2.21 inches of rain on the grounds and the greens still were soft and holding well on Saturday.

Kermit Zarley, the 39-year-old veteran of 17 seasons on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, turned in a 67 Saturday to move into a three-way tie at 8-under 208 with Lance Ten Broeck and Tom Purtzer.

Weiskopf shot an even-par 72 and dropped into a six-way tie at 209 with Bill Britton, Jaime Gonzalez, Peter Jacobsen, Victor Regalado and Mark Pfeil.

Kite bogeyed the 461-yard, par-4 18th when he pitched from one bunker into another and finished the third round at one-over 73 to go into a five-way tie at 210 with Phil Hancock, Mark Lye, Dave Hill and Skeeter Heath.

After a birdie on the short 321-yard, par-4 14th, Caldwell dropped to 14 under, which would have tied the tournament record set in 1963 by Julius Boros. However, Caldwell drove into the rough on 18 and bogeyed the hole when his 6-foot putt ran across the edge of the hole.

Pfeil and Regalado each carded 6-under-par 66, the best score in the third round of the 72-hole championship which is scheduled to conclude Sunday.

The official name of the tournament is the Buick-Goodwrench Open and is sponsored by the Buick Division and the GM Parts Division of General Motors Corp.

Birdies Give Daniel Lead

DENVER (AP) — Long-hitting Beth Daniel, overcoming a momentary display of temper, reeled off three straight birdies on the back nine and moved to a 3-stroke lead Saturday after the third round of the $150,000 Denver Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Daniel, who started the day in a tie with Sandra Post at 7-under-par for the tournament, turned in a 5-under-par 67 Saturday for a three-round total of 204.

Post, meanwhile, carded a 70 for a 207 total.

Jane Blalock, playing in the same threesome as Daniel and Post, shot 71 and was tied with Pat Bradley at 210. Bradley, who had an eagle and four birdies on her round, registered a 69.

A pair of 23-year-olds, Julie Stanger and Patty Sheehan, were another shot back at 211. Stanger fired a 69 and Sheehan, playing in only her third tournament as a professional, had 71.

Daniel, the 1979 LPGA Rookie of the Year who won last week's tournament at St. Paul, Minn., eagled the par-5 second hole and birdied the par-5 eighth to take sole possession of the lead.

Conners Falls In ATP Tourney

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Harold Solomon defeated Pascal Portes of France 6-2, 6-4 in their Saturday evening semifinal match and will meet Francisco Gonzales in Sunday's finals of the $200,000 Association of Tennis Professionals championship.

Gonzales reached the finals by upsetting top-seeded Jimmy Connors 6-2, 7-6 in an afternoon match.

Solomon, seeded third, had to rally from a 4-1 deficit in the second set, but broke Portes' service twice, in the seventh and ninth games, to win the match.

Solomon said he had trouble adjusting to the transition from sunlight to artificial light during the early games of the second set.

"I was having trouble seeing the ball," Solomon said. "I hadn't missed hit balls like that all week and then I missed about eight of them."

Solomon and Gonzales have met twice before, both times on clay courts rather than the hard surface used in the ATP championships. Solomon said he won both matches.

"He's going to serve and come in and I'm going to stay back and try to pass," Solomon said about Sunday's title match, which will be televised live by CBS. "If he serves better than I pass, he'll win. If I pass better than he serves, I'll win."

Gonzalez, 24, was a Big Ten conference champion twice while at Ohio State but had never played any of the top three professionals on the ATP tour. Connors currently is ranked third in the ATP computer ratings, while Gonzalez is 119th.

"Somdays you're just one step slow," said Connors, who couldn't cope with Gonzalez's overpowering serve and volley. "I was never on the offense. I never gave myself a chance — never."

Gonzalez said a first-round victory over Stan Smith helped get him up for the week.

"I've served well and I've played well all week," Gonzalez said. "Today I didn't think I was going to lose like I did when I played Smith."

Gonzalez, who said he had lost in the first round of nine or 10 tournaments this year, jumped to a 4-1 lead over Connors in the first set and won it in the eighth game when he broke Connors serve by rushing the net.

"I wasn't getting a lot of my first serves in," Connors said. "I don't overpower anybody with my first serve anyway. I just try to put the ball in play and hit around the court from there."

Connors seemed to find himself in the second game of the second set and began to dominate the set when he ran his lead to 4-2 with the help of a disputed line call that infuriated Gonzalez.

Umpire Jim Meakin overruled a linesman on a call that would have evened the games at 3-3.

Jaeger Wins, Gains Tournment Finals

MAHWAH, N.J. (AP) — Andrea Jaeger showed tremendous confidence in her game Saturday by completely outplaying Sylvia Hanika to gain the final of the $100,000 Women's Cup tennis tournament.

Jaeger, refusing to let down after a tremendous victory Friday night in the quarter-finals against top-ranked Tracy Austin, outplayed Hanika all the way in a 66-minute, 6-2, 6-3 decision.

"I felt fine and wasn't tired at all," said the 15-year-old Lincolnshire, Ill. high school sophomore, who didn't finish her losing Friday night doubles match until past midnight.

Hanika, a strong West German competitor, held serve in the first game before Jaeger's pinpoint lobs and steady retrieving game brought forth a steady stream of errors from her opponent. She double-faulted for game point in the third game and double-faulted away the fifth game.

"I wanted to get ahead in the beginning and thought that she would get discouraged after that," said Jaeger. Hanika's game did collapse in the first set although she fought back to 2-2 in the second set before falling to her young rival.

Jaeger, who will be seeking her largest prize purse Sunday, drew her final-round opponent from the Saturday night winner of the semifinal between Martina Navratilova and Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

Hanika said she could not adjust to Saturday's windy conditions.

"I was worse for me because I play an aggressive game, and my approach shots fell short or long depending on which side I was hitting into the wind," said the 20-year-old Munich native, who left the tour for two months earlier this year because of foot surgery.

After Hanika broke back for a 2-2 tie in the second set, Jaeger regained the lead with a backhand cross-court passing shot in the fifth game. She easily held at 15 in the sixth game and at love in the eighth before wrapping it up in the ninth with two winners plus a pair of unforced errors by Hanika.

'Weighty' 'Skins Hope To Improve

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROBERSONVILLE — For years Nolan Respess disdained weight training for his Roanoke football team. But after suffering his first losing season at Roanoke, Respess' scorn for the weights mellowed, enough to allow assistant coach Doc Ayers to start the Redskins on the road to recovery.

"I was hard-headed about weights for years, but Doc Ayers has really got the program going. It's helped mentally, physically, morally, in every way possible, I guess," an obviously enthusiastic Respess said.

"We've got better people this year. We've got more physical strength. Our primary goal was to strenghten ourselves defensively and I think we've done that. Last year people ran over us like we weren't even on the field."

It didn't help matters that the Redskins moved from the 2-A Eastern Plains Conference, now disbanded, to the 3-A Northeastern Conference.

"We feel like we were a better football team than our record showed," Respess said. "But we were in a new conference for the first time and I think some of the players were a little scared."

With their initial season under their belts — and added heft above their belts — Respess feels the Redskins are ready to make their fans forget last season's 3-7 record. To do this the Redskins must replace two All—East players: quarterback Glenn Cargile and wide receiver Anthony Latham.

"We lost some good ones, that's for sure," Respess said. "But things are looking pretty good right now."

Among those helping to make things look "pretty good" are four returning starters from last year' team: senior linebacker/tight end Maurice Chance (6-0, 170 pounds), sophomore offensive guard/defensive tackle Donnie Wallace (6-2, 230), junior offensive guard Calvin Howell (5-10, 180) and sophomore fullback Calvin Andrews (6-0, 205).

"Maurice is just a tremendous receiver and Calvin was our second leading ground gainer with close to 500 yards as a freshman," Respess said. "Donnie is going to be a superstar. He's a college prospect right now."

Unlike most teams, the Redskins put their big lineman at guard, not center. "Our guards have got to be our horses. We like having our big guys at guard to protect our center and with Calvin and Donnie there we've got that," Respess said. "We run a lot in that area and they can do the job for us."

Other expected starters include: junior offensive/defensive tackle J.D. Whitley (6-0, 190) and senior offensive tackle/nose guard Larry Griffin (5-11, 175); senior split end/free safety Neal Cargile (6-0, 160) and senior tight end/defensive end Mutt Smith.

Four players are battling for the center position: senior Warren Matthews (5-8, 210), juniors Lee Briley (5-8, 155) and Keith Matthewson (5-4, 150) and sophomore Wyatt Whitfield (5-8, 165). Respess has yet to name the starter.

Others expected to see line duty on both offense and defense include : Gable Griffin (5-8, 150), Dalton Everett (5-11, 175), Darryl Land (6-0, 200), Bernie Williford (6-2, 185), Linwood Williams (5-8, 155) and Houston Randolph (6-2, 200).

Leading the Redskin offense will be junior quarterback Angelo Spruill, a halfback a year ago. "I feel like he'll be a good quarterback, he just needs more experience," Respess said. "He gives us more speed than we've had at the position in awhile." Robert Smith may also see action at quarterback. Smith and Dwayne Crandell will man the defensive corners for Roanoke.

On either side of Andrews at the halfbacks in the Redskin wishbone will be junior Donell Sheppard (5-8, 165), who will also play monster back on defense, and senior Dwayne Lanier (5-8, 140). Top reserves include Donnie Spruill (5-6, 150), John Jackson (5-5, 145), Lonnie Ore (5-7, 130), Dwight McNeil (5-9, 130) and Ricky Simpson (5-6, 150).

The Redskins open the season at home against Belhaven and face two more nonconference foes — Ayden-Grifton and Gaston — and an open date before meeting their first league opponent, Ahoskie, the team Respess picked to win the conference crown.

"We think the key to our season is how we play Belhaven, Ayden-Grifton and Gaston," Respess said. "We've got to play good football and we need to win those games. Last year Ayden-Grifton beat us (21-20) after we had the lead at halftime and Gaston beat us (26-20) — and they've got everybody but one player back this year.

"We need to win those games so we can get off to a good start. We want them to play hard and I know they will. If we lose those games we could get down on ourselves. We know we're better than we were last year and I know we'll do better this season."

Freedom Drives To Win In Cup Finals

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) - Dennis Conner steered Freedom to a 25-second victory over Russell Long's Clipper in Saturday's only match of the America's Cup defender finals.

The win was the fifth straight of the trials for the San Diego, Calif., skipper, who has been the frontrunner all summer for the honor of defending the New York Yacht Club's lease on sailing's top prize.

None of the four foreign yachts vying for the challenger's spot was racing Saturday. Their semifinal best-of-seven series resumes Sunday.

Clipper took a 21-second advantage over Freedom across the starting line, but saw the margin whittled to nine seconds during a tacking duel on the first leg of the race.

Freedom overtook Clipper on the second leg, rounding the jibe mark four seconds ahead of Long's boat as the 10-knot northeasterly wind faded off the scale.

Conner had Freedom in a good position to catch the breeze when it filled in and pulled ahead to a 25-second lead at the third mark when the yacht club's selection committee halted the race.

Long continued alternating at the helm with tactician Tom Vlackaller. The more experienced Vlackaller has been steering during the starts and on the windward legs.

The loss dropped Clipper's record for the final trials to 1-4.

Courageous, the cup defender in 19 with Ted Turner at the helm, had Saturday off after being defeated in three races by Conner on Friday. Turner is 1-3 for the series.

Meanwhile, a foreign protest committee issued a decision Saturday upholding the English yacht Lionheart's come-from-behind win over France III Friday. The French filed two protests over the race, including a charge that Lionheart was to blame for a collision on the final leg of the 24.3-mile course.

But the committee disqualified France III, allowing the British to keep their campaign alive with a 3-1 record. France III is 3-2.

Sweden's Sverige and Australia are tied at 2-2.

The two foreign boats that survive the semifinals will meet in a best-of-seven series beginning Aug. 29 to decide which will challenge the U.S. defender in the finals that start Sept. 16.

Insolo Leads Qualifying

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Jimmy Insolo of Mission Hills, Calif. had the fastest lap, 1 minute and 4.05 seconds, in Saturday's practice driving for the 100-mile NASCAR West race scheduled Sunday on the Golden State Raceway track.

Insolo, who has won the event twice previously here, averaged 95.55 miles per hour in his Oldsmobile.

Bob Bondurant, president of the Golden State track, drove a Buick to the second best practice time, 1:04.5, and Buddy Baker was close to that time.

Burruss, Terps, Smiling

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Last year at this time Lloyd Burruss was in a hospital wondering if he had a future in college football.

The Maryland defensive back was All-Atlantic Coast Conference in 1978. But on the first play of the first scrimmage in fall practice, Burruss was involved in a freak accident that tore a ligament in his ankle. He was out for the season.

Tight end Eric Sievers was in a similar situation last year. All the preseason accolades were his, but in the second game of the season an injury knocked him out for the rest of the season.

Instead of looking forward to professional careers in 1980, both were red-shirted and left wondering if they could even come back and make the Maryland team.

The ACC's Operation Football, a writer's tour of the conference schools, stopped at Maryland on Friday and both Burruss and Sievers were all smiles, as was their coach Jerry Claiborne.

Burruss won his starting spot back and will bolster a defensive secondary considered by many the best in the ACC and one of the best in the nation.

Sievers is again starting at tight end and adds much needed experience and leadership to a young and inexperienced offensive line.

For Maryland, 1979 was the year of the injury. Key losses hurt the Terrapins. They still finished at 7-4 but did not go to a bowl game, the first time in seven years.

But the return of Burruss and Seivers, plus defensive guard Marlin Van Horn puts the Terps in the position of one of the top challengers for the ACC title.

"It wasn't easy," Burruss said of last season. "I stayed around the radio during games. It kept me in suspense and frustrated.

"I really felt like I had to perform to get my position back, but I was lucky. Sammy Johnson was hurt and I just moved right back in," he said.

The 6-foot, 200-pound Burruss was determined to come back stronger too. He now bench presses 365 pounds which should give opposing receivers something to think about.

The 6-foot-4, 234-pound Sievers also had his moment of doubt.

"During last season, I worried," he said. "I kept wondering will I be able to come back and do it again. Being red-shirted I was totally displaced from the team. It was tough. But after a while it makes you want to work harder and harder to make sure it doesn't happen again."

"But now I feel stronger and better than last year."

Sievers is bench pressing 425 pounds now. Every member of the team seemed to emphasize their increased weight-lifting ability. They know the other ACC teams are in organized lifting programs now, and catching up to the Terps, who initiated the program in the ACC.

"Everybody has started to lift now," Burruss said. "But that just makes us lift that much harder."

That lifting has already caused one casualty this season. Starting linebacker Darnell Dailey tore some chest muscles and is probably out for the season.

That position and the offensive line are Claiborne's two big concerns. Sievers put the offense in perspective, though.

"Having my experience on the offensive line helps because they are young," he said. "They have been around a couple of years but they don't have the game experience. But they'll come along once they get a couple of games under their belts."

The man most concerned with the offensive line is tail back Charlie Wysocki, the ACC's leading rusher last year with 1,140 yards. Also in the backfield is fullback Rick Pasano and quarterback Mike Tice.

Also returning is one of the top kickers in the country, Dale Castro. He hit 16 straight field goals last year for an NCAA single-season record. He also handles the punting chores admirably.

"Defense is definitely our strong point," Claiborne said. "We need some consistency on offense." As for the conference race, "I expect it to go down to the wire."

Two Teams Meet Today

Blunders, Big & Small, Plague Patriots, Eagles

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — While big blunders have angered New England Patriots' Coach Ron Erhardt, it's the small slipups that have gotten Philadelphia Eagles' Coach Dick Vermeil hot under the collar.

With just two weeks left before the National Football League's regular season begins, the coaches will try to smooth out the rough spots against each other Sunday in the Patriots' only home preseason game.

After winning their opener, 35-31 over Los Angeles, the Patriots fell to Oakland 31-29 on a touchdown pass with nine seconds to play as rookie Marc Wilson marched the Raiders 71 yards.

"The thing that was so upsetting was that a rookie quarterback with backup players moves the team 71 yards for a touchdown," Erhardt said.

Pass defense has been a big problem for New England, which has given up 638 yards through the air in its two games. Hoping to tighten up the defense, Erhardt plans to take a long look Sunday at top draft choice Roland James at safety. He has played cornerback until now.

The Eagles have won their first two preseason games, but Vermeil was irked by "little mistakes" — holding penalties, fumbles and receivers lining up wrong — in a 28-13 win over the New York Jets Aug. 15.

"We're not picked to finish last in the division any more. My level of expectation is a lot greater than it used to be," Vermeil said.

Quarterback Ron Jaworski has lived up to expectations, throwing two touchdown passes and completing 63.2 per cent of his aerials. He figures to get his third straight start, with Joe Pisarcik taking over in the second half.

Patriots starting quarterback Steve Grogan, who has played only one half in the first two games, will start for the second week in a row and play "as long as I think is necessary," Erhardt said.

Jaworski has led the Eagles to early leads in both games, while third-year man Matt Cavanaugh has rallied the Patriots back from deficits twice. But Cavanaugh is unlikely to supplant Grogan as the starter despite having thrown six touchdown passes in two games.

The Patriots have gained 59 yards through the air and 21 on the ground, while Philadelphia has passed for 320 and run for 295.

"I look for them to be pretty balanced (offensively). They have similar tools to what we have," Erhardt said.

Don Calhoun and Andy Johnson, replacing the injured Horace Ivory, will start at running back for the Patriots. "We have to run better on first down," Erhardt said.

The Eagles will start Wilbert Montgomery and Jim Culbreath, who have run 20 times for 132 yards.

him. And before each game we're going to remember him, and we're going to remember how hard he tried."

Kyler was born in 1972 with a heart condition that usually kills its victims before they reach their teens. Following heart surgery when he was a year old, he had lived an almost normal life.

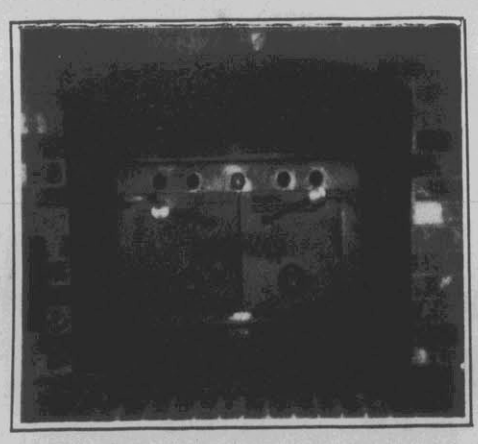

When a doctor said football would not mean any additional risk, the family let him play.

"He just wanted to be the best at everything," said his mother, Geraldine Kyler. "All his life it seemed he was trying to make up for how much his heart problem held him back."

"We're not blaming anyone, we're not angry about anything," said Kwame's father, Phillip, a subway operator. "Kwame lived a happy life and if he had to die anyway, we're glad it could be this way, where he was happy."

Roenicke's Last-Gasp HR Gives Birds Win; Yanks Half-Game Up

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

All may be quiet on the Western front of the American League but the birds of Baltimore are making a lot of noise in the East.

And they're doing it out West.

The surging Orioles moved within a half-game of the first-place Yankees in the AL East Friday night thanks to Gary Roenicke's ninth-inning home run and some solid relief by Sammy Stewart. Baltimore's 3-2 victory at Oakland, the Orioles' sixth consecutive victory and 17th this month against just four losses, tied them in the loss column with the Yankees, who dropped an 8-4 decision to the Angels at Anaheim.

Angels 8, Yankees 4

Not only are the Yankees looking over their shoulders, they're playing scoreboard already.

A seven-run California fifth did in the Yankees. Bobby Grich had a two-run triple to key the inning. Andy Hassler hurled three hitless innings of relief for the Angels.

Twins 6, Tigers 5

Mark Fidrych hasn't won a major league game since April 12, 1978. He came close Friday.

"The Bird" went 72-3 innings and left with his Tigers ahead of Minnesota 5-3. He departed with runners on second and third due to an error by shortstop Alan Trammell.

Minnesota won in the 13th when Detroit substitute third baseman Mark Wagner failed to throw home on a Ron Jackson ground ball with the bases loaded and one out. Wagner inexplicably threw to first as the winning run scored.

Red Sox 1, Mariners 0

Boston scored in the ninth on a throwing error by Seattle center fielder Juan Beniquez. With two out in the inning, Glenn Hoffman and Rick Burleson singled. When Hoffman headed for third on Burleson's hit, Beniquez threw wildly, enabling Hoffman to score.

Indians 4, Royals 1

Kansas City lost its second straight game for the first time since June 30-July 1 as Alan Bannister had three hits and two RBI and Len Barker won his 15th game.

Amos Otis had his ninth homer of the season for the Royals' run and George Brett went 1-for-4 to drop to a .402 batting average.

White Sox 2, Blue Jays 0

Britt Burns and Jim Clancy each hurled four-hitters but it was the White Sox rookie, with last-out relief from Ed Farmer, who got the victory. Farmer picked up his 22nd save.

Lamar Johnson tripled across a run.

Rangers 12-3, Brewers 6-8

Texas took the first game as Al Oliver went 4-for-5 and drove in four runs. Oliver and Jim Sundberg had two-run homers in the opener.

Milwaukee grabbed the nightcap as Vic Harris and Cecil Cooper homered.

IT WAS EASY

NEW YORK (AP) — It was one of the most disastrous holes in the history of pro golf, the 12 that Arnold Palmer took on a par-five hole in the 1961 Los Angeles Open.

Almost 20 years later, he was asked for the umpteenth time how it happened. "It was very easy," Palmer replied. "I missed a 20-foot putt that would have given me an 11."

Veeck Says Sox Sale Will Benefit The Club

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Veeck says the new owners of the Chicago White Sox will be able to "produce a better brand of baseball" than he and his partners could because they will be able to buy players instead of having to sell them.

The White Sox board of directors Friday approved the sale of the American League franchise for $20 million to Youngstown, Ohio, shopping mall magnate Edward J. DeBartolo Sr. and his daughter, Rose Denise DeBartolo York.

The sale is subject to approval by Sox stockholders and the other American League owners, but Veeck, president of the team, said that was a "mere formality."

Veeck, who put together a group which purchased the club five years ago for about $11 million and prevented a move to Seattle, said the new owners would be able to "stabilize" the franchise and make it more "competitive."

The White Sox are 51-68 and in fifth place in the AL West Division.

In a statement issued through Louisiana Downs race track in Shreveport, La. — one of his other holdings — DeBartolo also sounded an optimistic note about the future of the franchise.

"We will expend every effort to revive the hopes of Chicagoans in redeveloping a vital, pennant-seeking baseball team," he said.

Vince Bartimo, president and general manager of Louisiana Downs, said he expected approval of the stockholders and the league to be all but automatic.

"The DeBartolo family has received a clean bill of health from the National Football League, the National Hockey League, and its reputation is impeccable," he said.

DeBartolo's son owns the San Francisco 49ers of the NFL and the family owns the Pittsburgh Penguins of the NHL and three thoroughbred horse tracks.

Although DeBartolo was quoted recently as saying he would keep the team in Chicago if his bid to buy the Sox was successful, Bartimo said DeBartolo was not compelled to keep the team in Chicago as a condition of purchase.

"There are no restrictions on the flexibility of the corporation regarding the franchise," Bartimo said in a telephone interview. "Mr. DeBartolo does not make purchases with strings attached."

However, Veeck said the deal included a written assurance that the franchise would remain in Chicago.

"This affords the club greater stability," said Veeck, "instead of having to sell players they can now buy them."

"Once it happens, I'll be unemployed," said Veeck, "I'll be surprised if the matter is not consummated soon. I have not given one moment's thought as to what I'm going to do. Once the deal is approved by the stockholders and the league, the DeBartolos will take over immediately. Of course, it will take time for attorneys from both sides to put things together."

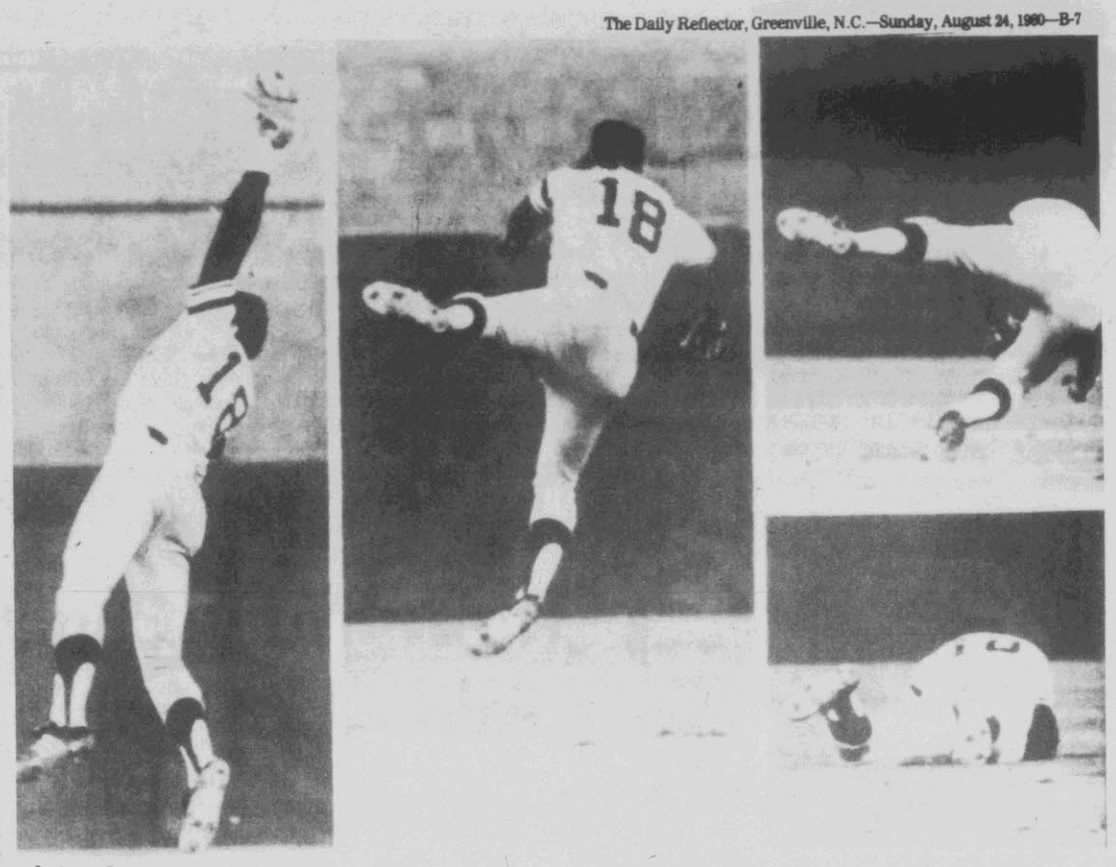

"They will be able to produce a better brand of baseball than I was because they can buy where I was selling.

"If we could have held the athletes that went through our hands, we would have been better off," said Veeck. "Now they can hold onto the good, young players we have and the good, young players that are coming up."

Veeck said he would not make any major moves without the approval of the new owners-to-be, nor would he make any major deals without consulting them.

He added, "I have enjoyed every minute of owning the club a second time, but maybe I'm a masochist. There's been no strain and I'm not relieved greatly. The weather has been upsetting, the umpires terribly upsetting and our play has been even more upsetting."

The announcement of the sale ended months of speculation and rumors about the expected sale of the team. The DeBartolos outbid several other groups interested in buying the team.

Jones Guides Colts Past The Giants

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Forgive Oakland Raiders fans if last week's 31-29 victory over New England seemed like a slice of deja vu.

The winning touchdown came with nine seconds to play when rookie quarterback Marc Wilson connected with running back Terry Robiskie on a 17-yard pass.

Ah, shades of Kenny Stabler.

Stabler, you will recall, specialized in those clock-stopping Cinderella finishes for Oakland. Now the Snake has taken his act to Houston but it doesn't mean the Raiders have stopped racing the clock or passing the football.

Wilson, Dan Pastorini, who came over in the Stabler trade, and Jim Plunkett have thrown 72 times in Oakland's first two National Football League preseason games, completing 42 of those attempts. Seventeen different players have caught passes so far.

Saturday night, the Raiders aerial circus moved to Washington where Oakland faced the Redskins. In other exhibition games Saturday night, Atlanta played at San Diego, Cincinnati visited Tampa Bay, Cleveland played at Chicago, Green Bay went to Buffalo, Houston met Dallas, Kansas City was at St. Louis, Los Angeles took on Denver, Miami hosted Minnesota, New Orleans was at Detroit, Pittsburgh was at home against the New York Jets, and Seattle played at San Francisco.

Philadelphia plays at New England today.

Friday night, Bert Jones, healthy again after playing only seven games the past two seasons with shoulder problems, tossed four touchdown passes to guide the Baltimore Colts to a 37-20 victory over the New York Giants.

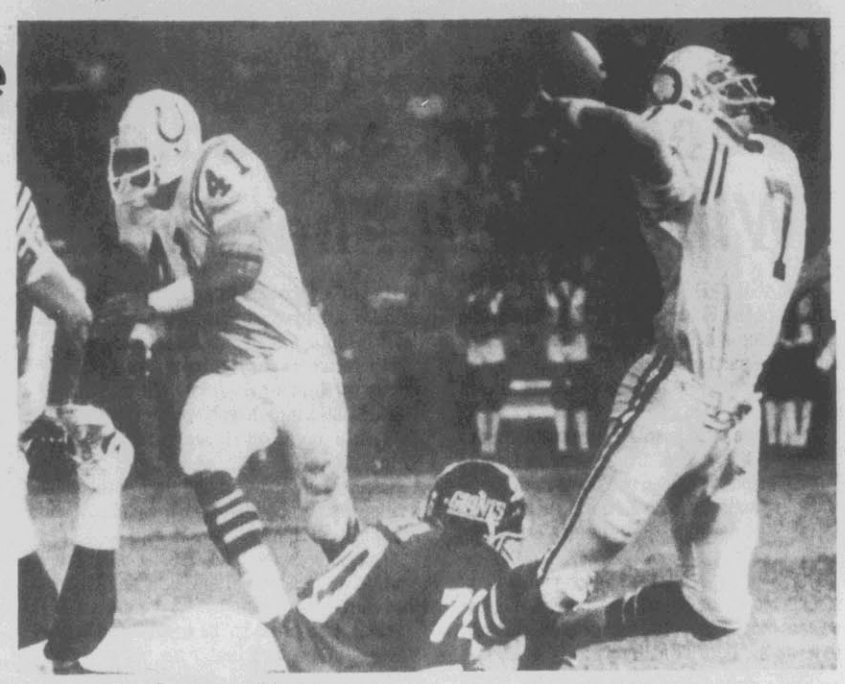

Plunkett has been the busiest of the three Raiders quarterbacks so far with 24 completions in 40 attempts. The passing game has accounted for 559 yards in two games as opposed to 187 yards on the ground with 53 rushing plays.

Those numbers would indicate that when the ball has to be moved, Oakland is likely to throw it.

The Raiders' Bay Area neighbors, the San Francisco 49ers, aren't shy about throwing the ball, either. The 49ers are 2-0, and quarterbacks Steve DeBerg and Joe Montana have been on target for almost 80 percent of their passes, completing 43 of 54 attempts so far. DeBerg practically is perfect on 14 of 16 for 149 yards while Montana is 29 for 37 and 254 yards.

The 49ers are one of seven NFL teams who took perfect 2-0 records into the weekend. Also unbeaten after two weeks were Washington, Philadelphia and Dallas in the National Conference and Pittsburgh, Miami and Kansas City in the AFC.

At the other end of the spectrum were seven clubs still looking for their first victories.

Come Back Here, Bert!

Bird hunters can start oiling their shotguns and patching their waders — the seasons on mourning doves and several shore birds open shortly.

Mourning dove season opens Sept. 1 and runs through Oct. 11. The second half of the season runs from Dec. 15 to Jan. 12. Shooting hours during the first half of the season are from noon to sunset. Second-half shooting hours will start one-half hour before sunrise and run until sunset. The bag limit on doves is 12 daily with 24 in possession.

Full-day dove hunting in the second half of the season is a new option offered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The eastern management unit, which includes the Southeast, has been closed to full-day dove hunting since 1948. (The full-day option has been offered in central and western regions all along.)

If you enjoy kicking around in salt marshes, you might want to try hunting rails and gallinules. The seasons on these birds open Sept. 1 and run through Nov. 8. The bag limits for clapper and king rails is 15 birds daily and 30 in possession. The bag limits for sora and Virginia rails is 25 daily with 25 in possession.

North Carolina's dove population appears stable, according to a dove census just completed by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

The census procedure, known as a call-count census, involves checking 21 transects through the state and recording the number of doves heard calling within a specific time, according to the NCWRC's latest newsletter.

"The eastern management unit, which is roughly the eastern third of the United States, has not shown any significant change in dove populations over the past 10 years," said Carl Betstill, the Commission biologist in charge of the dove count for North Carolina.

Betstill, however, added that the call-count measures the breeding population of doves in North Carolina in the spring and may not be a reliable indicator of how many doves there will be in the fall when hunting season opens.

Dove numbers are highest in North Carolina around the first of September and hit a low point toward the end of October. By mid-November, the number of birds begins to increase as doves migrate into the state.

Three New Coaches Are Added To Conley Staff

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley High School has announced the appointment of three new coaches to its athletic staff. They include Joy James, Martha McCaskill and Ritchie S. Wynns.

James, a native of Bethel, is a graduate of North Pitt High School. While in high school, she was a member of the North Pitt girls' basketball team, earning all-conference and all-tournament honors. She attended Duke University her freshman and sophomore years, playing basketball, and serving as team captain her second year. She completed her education at N.C. State University, earning a B.S. in math education.

For the past two years, she has taught at Dunn High School, serving as head volleyball and boys' tennis coach, and assisting in basketball.

At Conley, she will serve as head girls' basketball coach and assistant in volleyball.

McCaskill is a native of Erwin, graduating from Erwin High School, where she played both basketball and softball. She was twice named all-conference in basketball, and was the most valuable player her senior year. In softball, she was all-conference and mvp as a senior. As a senior, she also received the school's All-Sports Scholastic Athlete of the Year award.

She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, hold ng a bachelor's degree in education, with a major in physical education. She earned her master's in 1980. While at UNC, she was a member of the softball team.

While a graduate student, she taught physical education at UNC, and she also has served as a coach in recreational softball, and an instructor in the Campbell University Basketball School.

Her duties with Conley will be to serve as head coach in volleyball and softball, and to assist with girls' basketball.

Wynns, a Powellsville native, graduated from Ahoskie High school, where he lettered in baseball four years, twice being elected to all-conference honors. He also lettered two years each in football and basketball, and played two years with the Ahoskie American Legion baseball team.

A graduate of East Carolina, he was a pitcher on the baseball team, and had a short association with the Pittsburgh Pirate organization.

Following service in the Coast Guard, he completed his education and has taught at Rock Ridge and Lucama High school, moving on to James B. Hunt High School when the Wilson County schools merged.

During his career as baseball coach, he has had two conference champions, one conference tournament champ, and in 1977, won the state 1-A championship. He had a 58-15 record at Rock Ridge, and a 24-22 mark at Hunt, where his 1979 team played in the 4-A state tournament. He has also assisted in football at the schools.

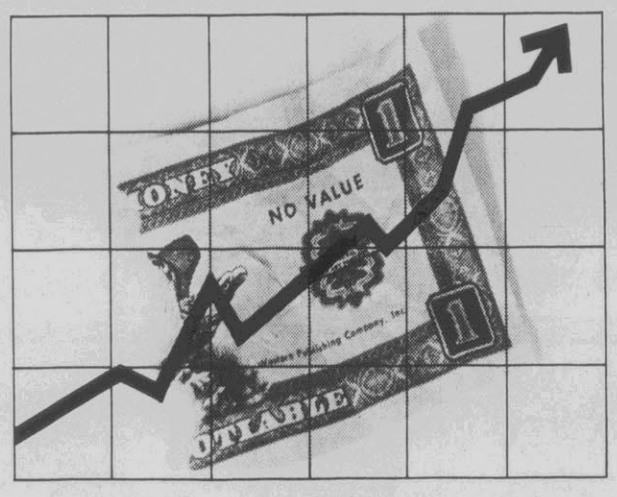

At Conley, he will serve as head baseball coach, and assist in football.

Wynns is married to the former Rita White of Colerain, and they have one daughter, Casee Ariel, 16 months.

Defense Is Successful

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — With a record 12 consecutive title knockout defenses under his belt, World Boxing Council super bantamweight champion Wilfredo Gomez says he has accomplished just about all he can in that division.

Gomez ran his record to 30-0-1 when he stopped previously unbeaten Derrik Holmes in the fifth round Friday night at Caesars Palace, and now he has his sights set on Salvador Sanchez's featherweight title.

Gomez says he will not vacate his super bantamweight crown until a bout with Sanchez is finalized — a fight that must wait until after Sanchez defends his title next month against Guyana's Patrick Ford in San Antonio, Texas.

"Until I be sure I'm fighting for the featherweight crown, I won't vacate the title," Gomez said.

Gomez is scheduled to meet Sanchez if the featherweight champion successfully defends the crown, although no contract has been signed for the fight.

In demolishing Holmes, Gomez set a new record for title defense knockouts and knocked out an opponent for the 30th time in 31 professional bouts.

The only blemish on his professional record was a six-round draw with Jacinto Fuentes of Panana City in Gomez's first professional outing in November 1974.

Holmes gave a credible performance in the first two rounds of Friday night's fight, at one point staggering the champion with two solid right-hand shots.

"He really hurt me with the right hand," Gomez admitted, "but I was in very good shape and can take a punch."

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Don Robinson and Kent Tekulve grew up in the Cincinnati area, but did everything to tear down the Reds Friday night.

Robinson, from Ashland, Ky., and Tekluve, of Cincinnati, combined to pitch Pittsburgh to a 4-2 victory over the Reds in a big game for the Pirates.

The triumph not only snapped a four-game losing streak for the National League East leaders, but dropped the Reds 2½ games behind the front-running Houston Astros in the West.

John Milner drove in three runs with a homer and double in support of Robinson and Tekulve's pitching. The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the second on Milner's RBI double off Paul Moskau, 8-5. Milner's homer, his sixth of the season, followed Bill Madlock's leadoff single in the fourth, making the score 3-0.

Astros 3, Cubs 2

Enos Cabell singled home Dave Bergman from third base in the 12th inning to lead Houston over Chicago.

Bergman walked with one out and moved to second on a single by Rafael Landestoy. Both runners advanced when Cub pitcher Bill Caudill committed his second balk of the night. Cabell then lined a single past the outstretched glove of shortstop Ivan DeJesus to give the Astros their eighth straight victory.

Cardinals 7, Braves 4

Keith Hernandez, Ted Simmons and Ken Reitz hit home runs in a six-run fourth inning as St. Louis beat Atlanta behind right-hander John Fulgham's five-hitter.

Expos 6, Padres 2

Larry Parrish doubled home a pair of runs and Ron LeFlore, Andre Dawson and Warren Cromartie had other run-scoring hits in a five-run fourth inning as Montreal snapped a three-game losing streak by beating San Diego.

Mets 4, Dodgers 2

Ray Burris and Neil Allen combined on a nine-hitter and Claudell Washington keyed a two-run sixth inning to help New York beat Los Angeles.

Burris, 7-7, scattered four hits over the first six innings before allowing both Dodger runs in the seventh.

Giants 4, Phillies 3

Mike Ivie's RBI single in the 10th led San Francisco over Philadelphia as the Giants prevented Steve Carlton from becoming the first NL pitcher to win 20 games this season.

Bill North opened the rally with a walk and took second on a sacrifice by Joe Pettini. One out later, Jim Wohlford beat out an infield single to shortstop with North stopping at third. Ivie then grounded a single on which North scored the winning run.

Softball Event Set In Wilson

WILSON — The men's USSSA Southern Division Class C Softball Championship will be held in Wilson Aug. 29 through Sept. 1. Upwards of 80 teams from throughout the South are expected to compete in the "Slo-Pitch" double-elimination tournament.

The championship, set to begin Friday, Aug. 29, at 6 p.m. will conclude Monday, Sept. 1, at 3 p.m. The final games of the tourney, sponsored by the Miller High Life Beer Company, will be played at Fleming Stadium.

According to a press release, baseball great Hank Aaron and Marv Throneberry will appear at the championship game. Aaron is baseball's all-time leading home run hitter with 755 four-baggers. The former Atlanta Braves' star surpassed Ruth's mark of 714 home runs on April 8, 1974. He retired after the 1976 season.

Thorneberry, one of the original New York Mets, is remembered for drawing large and enthusiastic crowds because of his charisma and on-the-field antics. Nicknamed "Marvelous Marv," Thorneberry began his baseball career in 1952 with, ironically, the Yankees. In 1959 he was traded to Kansas City for Roger Maris, who later eclipsed Ruth's record of 60 home runs in one season.

CASTING MUSKET BALLS — from molten lead, two colonial soldiers peform one of many camp duties that will occur during a "Mustering of the Virginia Troops," August 30-September 1 in Colonial Williamsburg. Members of the First Virginia Regiment, Virginia State Garrison Regiment and its Field Musick, and the Colonial Williamsburg Militia Company will take part in the three-day encampment. The military duties of the day will include drills, ceremonies for reveille, assembly and tattoo, musket and cannon firing, and a Sunday morning "drum head" worship service, all open to the public.

Train Excursion On August 31

FARMVILLE — The East Carolina Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society and the Southern Railway announce a second steam powered railroad excursion trip for August. (The New Bern trip scheduled for today has been sold out).

The second trip, to take place Sunday, August 31, will be a round trip from Raleigh to Chocowinity over the Norfolk Southern Railway. The locomotive on the "East Carolina Limited" is Southern Railway 2-8-0 class KS-1 No. 722, a Baldwin Locomotive Works built in 1904. No 722 will provide typical clouds of smoke and steam of past railroad days, and will also offer the mournful sounds of bygone types of train whistles.

The train will be made up of ten passenger cars, including a head-end tape recorder car, a refreshment car, open window coaches and Southern's three famous open air excursion coaches.

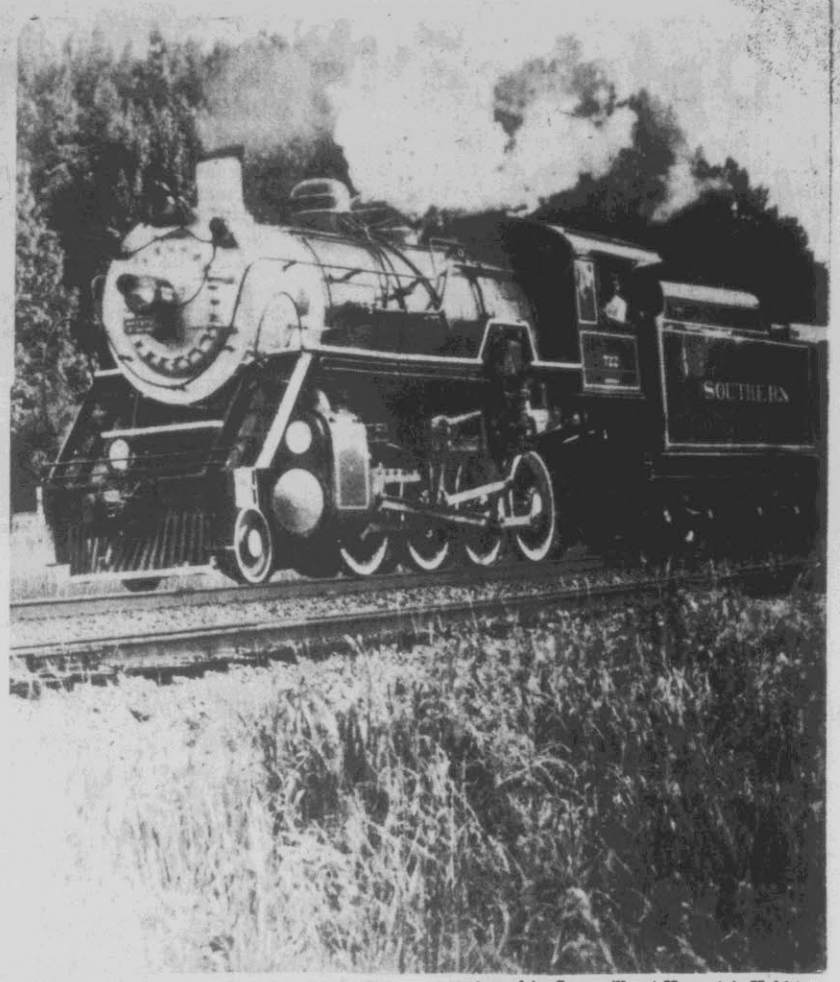

Seating capacity is limited to 525 persons. The train will leave Raleigh at 8 a.m. August 31, with stops in Zebulon, Wilson, Farmville, and Greenville. Departure from Chocowinity for the return trip will be at 1:20 p.m., with arrival in Raleigh at 6:15 p.m.

Tickets are priced at: For the full round trip, Raleigh-Chocowinity, $25 for adults, $20 for children; round trip Farmville-Chocowinity, $13 for adults, $9 for children; and round trip fare Greenville-Chocowinity, $8 for adults and $6 for children.

One way tickets, subject to availability of space, will also be sold — but round trip patrons take precedence over one-way short trips. Passengers are to bring lunches as the round trip time covers two meal times.

In Greenville, tickets are available from Hungate's Hobbies and Crafts; and in Farmville, from Newton's Red and White Store.

In 1870, German archeologist Heinrich Schliemann began the excavations in Turkey where he found the ruins of Troy.

ENGINE NR. 722 . . . a steam engine built in 1904, will pull the cars on the Raleigh-Chocowinity and return excursion to take place on Sunday, August 31. Tickets can be purchased in Greenville at Hungate's Hobbies and Crafts. One-way tickets will also be sold based on space available. The seating capacity for the trip is 525 passengers.

Voter Registration

Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections, reminded area citizens that the registration deadline for the Nov. 4 general election is Monday, Oct. 6 at 5 p.m.

Miss Register pointed out that absentee voting may be accomplished by voters who will be out of the county on election day or who will not be able to attend the polling places due to illness or disability. Requests may be made by the voter or by a near relative from Sept. 5 through Oct. 29 at 5 p.m.

She noted that absentee applications are made directly with the elections office and ballots must be received no later than Nov. 3 at 5 p.m. Miss Register mentioned that, beginning Oct. 6, applicants may come by the elections office, fill out the necessary absentee forms, and cast their ballot choices at the office in a "one-stop" voting procedure.

According to the elections supervisor, citizens may also register to vote or make needed changes in voting status throughout the county at: town halls during office hours in Ayden, Falkland, Fountain, Grifton, Grimesland and Winterville; police station in Bethel; fire inspector's office at 121 N. Main Street in Farmville; Sheppard Memorial, Carver, East Branch and mobile unit libraries when the registrar is on duty;

Rose, North Pitt, Farmville Central, D. H. Conley and Ayden-Grifton High Schools; the home of Steve Little in Belvoir, by appointment; and with Mrs. Sallie Glisson in the Carolina Township, by appointment. Special registration commissioners have also been appointed to register voters.

Miss Register explained that under the present elections law a voter is only registered once and if a person is on the county registration books, he or she is eligible to vote in all elections, from local to national.

The elections office is located at 201 E. Second Street at the corner of Second and Cotanche Streets. The office is open Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m., for full time registration.

Flushing Continues

The phased flushing of the city's water distribution system continues tonight in the area bordered on the north by Highway 43 and Fifth Street, on the south and east by Dickinson Avenue and US 264, and on the west to the system end.

Wadie Lewis, superintendent of Greenville Utilities' Water and Sewer Department, said the flushing will be performed between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. on Sunday nights through Friday mornings.

The flushing will be done in sections and continue for another eight weeks as the program covers the 215 miles of water mains in the city.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Irvin Kershner, who directed "The Empire Strikes Back," has been signed to direct "The Ninja."

Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown will produce the screen adaptation of Eric Van Lustbader's novel of passion and revenge set in Japan and New York.

GARWOOD DEFENSE TEAM . . . Marine PFC Robert Garwood, who is charged with desertion and collaborating with the enemy during nearly 14 years he spent in Viet Nam, is shown with his defense team at Camp Lejeune. PFC Garwood To Argue Survival Was At Stake

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Outside the tiny courtroom where Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood will be court-martialed is a bright red wall poster urging leathernecks to "Stay Proud, Stay Marine."

Garwood's defense is succinct like that poster, but with a very different and quite unmilitary message — stay alive.

Garwood, 34, is charged with desertion and collaborating with the enemy during nearly 14 years that he spent in Vietnam. He could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted.

But the balding Indiana native plans to take the stand during what has already shaped up as a marathon trial and declare that he was a prisoner all those years. He will say his actions in some of the most brutal jungle prison camps in Vietnam were triggered by the desperate motive of survival.

On the other side, a parade of former prisoners of war — one of whom calls Garwood a "white Vietnamese" — stands ready to testify that Bobby Garwood carried guns, helped guard other Americans and boasted that he was a lieutenant in the North Vietnamese army.

After nearly nine months of intermittent pretrial proceedings, jury selection will begin Monday, to be followed by a trial that may stretch over two months.

The case is more than a question of guilt or innocence of the high-school dropout who joined the Marines at 17 to prove his manhood.

There have been few denials from the defense that Garwood, one of the first Americans taken prisoner in Vietnam, did the things attributed to him.

The question is why.

"There's the element of why in every case but the question is whether 'why' can be a defense. In this case, I'd expect the 'why' to be a big part of the defense," says Col. R.E. Switzer, the Marine judge handling the case.

"He was over there for three yers before another American saw him. What did they (communists) do to him during that time?" says Dermot Foley, Garwood's former civilian lawyer who left the case in June.

Garwood came home in March 1979, nearly 14 years after he disappeared while serving as a jeep driver near Da Nang. The enigmatic Garwood, speaking fluent Vietnamese but struggling in his native tongue when he returned, provoked more questions than answers.

Where was he during the 10 years after he was last seen by other Americans in 1969?

What does he know, if anything, about other Americans who might have been held back by the communists after the mass release of POWs in 1973?

If he stayed in Vietnam on his own, as the government claims, why did he return?

There is no guarantee that the court-martial will provide the answers.

And on a broader scope, the Garwood case may set a precedent for the actions of American prisoners in future wars.

The trial raises the question of whether the military can expect a 19-year-old private, untrained in jungle survival or in surviving captivity, to face torture and possibly death rather than "cross over."

And the jury — officers in America's spit-and-polish "first in, last out" service — must decide which is more important, the severity of the offense or the degree of coercion used by captors.

"If he carried a gun, what if it were unloaded and what if he carried it because they threatened him?" says Foley.

Already, the case has set one precedent. Garwood is the only former POW in Vietnam to stand trial, although several others admitted they cooperated with the enemy.

Nearly 550 Americans survived the horrors of prison camps hidden deep in the jungles and stark cells in prisons with names such as the Hanoi Hilton.

Some POWs said they cooperated with the communist Vietnamese by making propaganda statments. Some said they were forced to make the statements, but a handful of POWs known as the Peace Committee declared after their release that their anti-American diatribes from Hanoi mirrored their true feelings.

None of those men was prosecuted. And Garwood's lawyers argued druing the pretrial hearings that the Nixon Adminisration set a policy of letting the nation's wounds heal by not prosecuting POWs.

But last Thursday Switzer overruled a motion that the charges against Garwood be dismissed a defense motion for dismissal because other POWs faced no charges.

The judge found that there was no formal policy of amnesty for returning POWs and noted besides that such a policy would not have applied to Garwood anyway.

Garwood was different from other POWs who came home during the mass release in 1973. He was in Vietnam for another six years, until he passed a note identifying himself to a Finnish businessman visiting Hanoi.

Government prosecutors contend Garwood stayed in Vietnam after 1973 because he wanted to and, in a strange twist of diplomatic fate, the current government of Vietnam agrees.

In a paper on missing Americans released earlier this year by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, officials declared that Garwood "voluntarily" came over to the Liberation Armed

Controversy At The Citadel

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Times used to be that freshmen at South Carolina's military college, The Citadel, faced 15 minutes of "racking" or strenuous exercise for breaking regulations.

Freshmen, called knobs because of their closely cropped haircuts, were at the mercy of upper classmen, who could order pushups or running exercises almost on a whim.

Mealtime for knobs also were regimented. They had to sit at attention and ask upper classmen for each serving of food.

But times have changed and so has The Citadel. This year, the 690 plebes who enrolled at the military school comprise the first freshman class under a revised Fourth Class System.

The new system, adopted last year at the insistence of the school's former president, Vice Admiral James Stockdale, abolishes racking and relaxes the meal regimen.

Stockdale, the Navy's most decorated officer and a one-time Vietnam prisoner of war, had pressed for an end to the knob haircuts and a shortened plebe year. But The Citadel's governing Board of Visitors refused to approve those changes, which are steeped in Citadel tradition.

The Citadel is one of the last all-male, state-supported military colleges in the nation. At other similar schools, the plebe system has not been relaxed.

Stockdale, who resigned last week after a disagreement with the Citadel Board of Visitors, was adamant about the changes.

At one point he said, "I grew up in a system where you got your ass beat. I got mine beat many a time. But that's no longer acceptable in modern society."

Citadel spokesman Lt. Col. Dick Clarke said Stockdale and other administrators began questioning the plebe system after about 50 freshmen dropped out in the first month of classes last fall. Usually 10 to 15 knobs quit school in the first month, he said.

Clarke said, "We were doing something wrong to have that many leave."

Under the revamped system, knobs are punished by pulling cleanup duty or by being restricted to campus on weekends. In many instances, they are counseled instead of punished.

Despite the sweeping changes, freshmen who enrolled at The Citadel last week seemed oblivious to the new system.

Michael Lachnicht of Cherry Hill, N.J., said he had heard about the plebe system changes but they were not a factor in his decision to attend The Citadel.

"We deserve to be put through a lot," Lachnicht said. "I'm glad they toned it down some but didn't totally get rid of it."

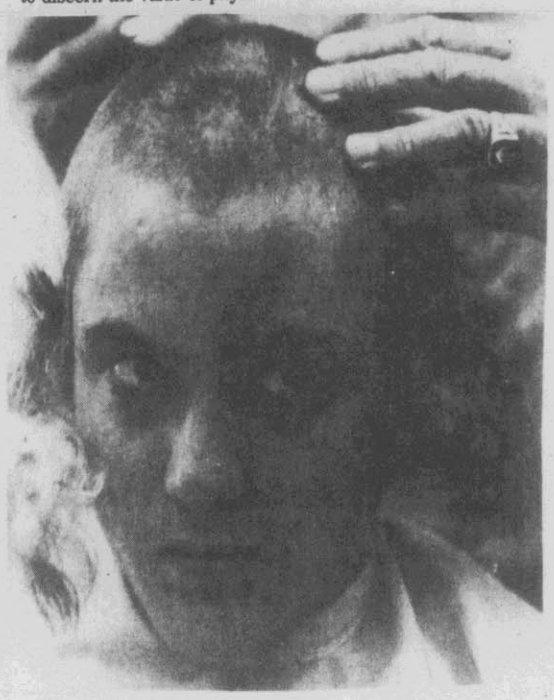

Alice Ranck of Richmond, Va., whose son is a freshman, said she and her husband "are glad that they (administration) have the viewpoint that hazing is not necessary — that they're individuals and can be recognized as individuals."

The reforms were welcomed by seniors, many of whom survived hazing. None said they were physically abused, but they failed to discern the value of physical workouts for misdeeds.

Cadet Capt. David Summer, a senior and editor of the college newspaper, said at first he opposed the changes and said so in editorials.

"I thought we were trying to entice students," Summer said. "But actually we've just gotten rid of the Mickey Mouse aspect of school. It is

Business Notes

PMA SECRETARY

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association (PMA) has installed James L. Goes, pharmaceutical production director for Burroughs Wellcome Co. here, as secretary of its Production & Engineering Section. Goes also serves as chairman of the association's Good Manufacturing Practices Committee.

PMA is a Washington, D.C. based trade organization representing 144 pharmaceutical companies. PMA member firms market approximately 95 percent of all prescription drugs sold in the United States and 50 percent of prescription drugs sold world-wide.

Goes, who graduated from Temple University with a bachelor of pharmacy degree, also completed the advanced management program of the Harvard Graduate School of business administration. He joined Burroughs Wellcome in 1959.

FINISHED COURSE

Darlene Williams, a service representative for Carolina Telephone here, recently completed a three-week course for business-service personnel at the company's training center in New Bern.

Mrs. Williams, who has been employed by Carolina Telephone for 13 years, has served in the traffic and plant departments. She and her husband, Eddie, reside with their son in the McGowans Crossroads section of Pitt County.

ASSISTANT NAMED

Mimi Ward Miller has been named administrative assistant of the Greenville office of Branch Banking & Trust Co., according to Tim Dale, assistant vice president and office manager here.

Ms. Miller, a Westfield, N.J. native, joined BB&T in 1976 as a teller. She has received training in several areas of banking, including business loans, Dale reported.

The new assistant teaches courses for the American Institute of Banking at Pitt Community College and is vice president and former president of the Greenville chapter of AIB.

INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

Eight pharmacy students completed a summer internship program at Burroughs Wellcome Company's manufacturing facilities in Greenville.

The 13-week program, it was pointed out, is sponsored annually by the National Pharmaceutical Council Inc. to increase fourth and fifth year students' overall knowledge of pharamacy, especially the role of industry.

The 1980 summer interns here were: Linda Hollowell, Randy Hibbard, and Susan Meier, University of North Carolina; Kristine Kleman and Norman See, University of Wisconsin; Sandra Holt, Butler University; Kim Mays, University of South Carolina; and Mark Kush, Ferris State University.

LOAN REQUESTS UP

The number of requests for student loans has increased because of higher tuition rates at the nation's colleges and universities, according to Gary Hauser, vice president of marketing for Wachovia Services.

Hauser said that more people can now qualify for government subsidized student loans. He added that prior to 1978, only students whose family incomes were less than $25,000 were eligible for the subsidized rate. Now, all students are eligible, Hauser said, regardless of family income.

The spokesman said that Wachovia Services does not make the loans but services student loans issued by other institutions and the government.

Hauser mentioned that there are basically four different forms of aid available to students: grants and scholarships, work-study programs, direct student loans, and guaranteed student loans.

HOME ECONOMICS

WINFIELD, Kan. (AP) — James Hunter, 20, is the first male college student in Kansas to major in home economics, according to his instructor at Southwestern College.

Hunter chose the major because of his interest in making clothes.

The State Board of Examiners of Plumbing and Heating Contractors reported that it will convene for the purpose of examining applicants on Sept. 29 to Oct. 2. A full series of examinations will be given in plumbing, heating and air conditioning, according to F. O. Bates, executive secretary.

Bates said the examinations will be held in Raleigh and requests for applications should be directed to him at P.O. Box 110, Raleigh, 27602. Applications should be filed on or before Aug. 29, he added.

Interest Rate Futures Higher

By KATHY OSOBA
AP Business Writer

Interest rate futures moved higher Friday based on expectations that the nation's money supply would show a sharp decline from the previous week, but cash market prices fell after futures closed.

The cash weakness came as a result of a revised money supply figure for the week ended Aug. 6 that increased M1A from $8.2 billion to $9.6 billion.

"That revised figure overshadowed the current money supply figure, which fell into line with expectations," said a futures analyst in New York. The M1A money supply for the latest period, announced Friday, fell $3.6 billion.

Market prices plunged throughout the week because the previous week's money supply was a staggering figure and a record increase that was not expected by market analysts. The figure caused worry that the Federal Reserve Board might move to hike interest rates to hold down inflation.

Professional traders and dealers on Chicago exchanges covered their market positions and pushed prices higher based on estimates that the money supply would show a $3 billion to $4 billion decline for the lat-est reporting period.

Garwood's Defense Arguement To Center On Survival As A POW . . .

Forces in 1965.

Garwood stayed, the paper said, "at his own will after the war to live a normal life."

But in what will undoubtedly be an emotion-charged session, Garwood will take the stand to say he was an unwilling captive in a strange land.

The central figure in all this is as complex an individual as his case is complex legally.

The product of a broken home in Greensburg, Ind., Garwood was in a home for wayward boys when a Marine recuriter came calling in 1963.

"I was ready to prove to my old man that I was ready to step out into the world," Garwood said last year.

Two years later, while Americans back home watched "Dr. Kildare" and "My Mother the Car" on television, Garwood checked out a "Mighty Mite" jeep for a run and never came back.

At 19, when most men find themselves in their first job or college, Garwood found himself in the hands of a foreign enemy.

Although the military never listed him as anything other than a prisoner of war, suspicious reports began filtering out. In 1967, the Marine Corps froze Garwood's rank and pay because of allegations of misconduct.

While other POWs advanced in rank and pay, Garwood remained a private. But he accumulated nearly $150,000 in back pay, which is being withheld by the military pending the outcome of his case.

After he passed the note to the man in Hanoi, Garwood waited while negotiators talked over his future. After a few weeks, he landed in Bangkok, Thailand, on a French airliner.

According to Garwood, the first thing he said to the Americans who met him at the plane was, "What happended to my jeep?" It had been found, burned south of Da Nang several weeks after he disappeared.

Charges had already been brought against him by former POWs, so Garwood was immediately read his rights.

"I thought I had won, that I had beaten the communists and survived," Garwood said in an interview with The Associated Press last summer. "But I came home and I was still a prisoner. After all this, I think if someone put a gun to my head, I'd just laugh."

Garwood's native land had changed drastically since 1965 and he, too, had changed. He had forgotten how to tie shoelaces or shake hands. His English, when he struggled to speak it, was broken and carried a thick accent.

"His actions were Vietnanmese — the way he spoke, when he was overjoyed the way he laughed and hummed the way they do, the way he squatted and walked," says Gustav Mehrer, a former POW who knew Garwood in the jungle camps.

Garwood was flown to the naval base at Great Lakes, Ill., and Foley says an incident on the flight showed Garwood's mental condition at the time.

"He lost control of himself. Marines on that plane surrounded him and spent a considerable amount of time reading the Bible to him to calm him down," Foley says.

During the past year, Garwood has worked as a mail clerk at Camp Lejeune and he has become more relaxed. He tools around the nearby coastal town of Jacksonville in a red 1957 Chevrolet with a souped-up engine, and he has lost his accent.

He also has sat through countless days of pretrial proceedings — sessions that have filled more than 1,500 pages of transcript and covered nearly nine months. Part of that time has been taken by nearly 70 defense motions ranging from arguments for dismissal of the charges to requests for a larger courtroom.

Another aspect that has delayed the case considerably has been the shift in the defense team. Two Marine lawyers who had been on the case almost a year left in April, just as the trial appeared to be nearing a start.

Then in June, Garwood fired Foley, who had been Garwood's lawyer for more than a year.

When the dust settled, Garwood was in the company of his current lawyers — civilians John Lowe and Vaughan Taylor of Charlottesville, Va., and Marine Capt. Lewis Olshin.

Lowe and Taylor carry sizeable reputations into the court — Lowe for successfully defending an American Indian charged in 1975 with killing two FBI agents in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Taylor for his strong background in the effects of duress and coercion on captives.

While Garwood has settled down during the last year, filling out his regulation Marine uniform with about 50 pounds of new weight, military investigators have built a 2,700-page file on him, based mostly on interviews with former POWs. Most of the remembrances go back 10 years or more, but the trial is still expected to be emotional for Garwood and the men who must dredge up nightmarish memories.

Some will admit they made propaganda statements for the communists because they were threatened. They will also talk of the men who refused to break, and of the men who died.

Some of the former POWs say they want to testify as prosecution witneses for the men who didn't come back.

Former POW Frances Anton, who wrote anti-war letters "with a .45 (caliber pistol) at my head," said at a pretrial hearing that he wants to testify against Garwood.

"Bob lived with the guards. He was not, at the time I knew him, a prisoner of war," Anton said.

"I don't think we were afraid of him but we thought if he wanted to, he could bring a lot of trouble on for us."

"This needs to be done," Anton said of the trial. "The people that died over there — I owe it to them."

Citadel. . .

now a more professional place."

Summer said the emphasis at The Citadel has changed from regimentation to academics. "The emphasis used to be having the highest score in drill competition. Now it's having the highest academic averages."

Belton, S.C., senior Bruce Jones, who described the Fourth Class System of the early 70s as "a dark age," said he never used hazing on freshmen.

"It is not a practical solution to any of the problems you'll face once you're graduated," Jones said. "I didn't learn anything from it. I learned how I wasn't going to do things in the future."

J.B. Alexander, a 1958 Citadel graduate, said he wholeheartedly favored the new plebe system.

"What they are doing is changing the system back to what it was when I was here," Alexander said. "These changes restore the balance and tradition of the Fourth Class System."

To View Navy Film

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Experts at the Concord Naval Ammunitions Depot today were planning to check for breaches of national security in a film seized from a KQED-TV crew doing a story about the possibility of nuclear weapons being kept at the base.

The educational television station asked U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson to order the film returned so it can be shown next week. But he delayed a ruling on the request on Friday until experts see the film to determine whether national security was breached.

The film crew was detained Thursday at the base, and the film was confiscated. It was turned over to the FBI and developed Friday.

If the experts decide no national security breaches are involved, the film will be returned to the station, said U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter.

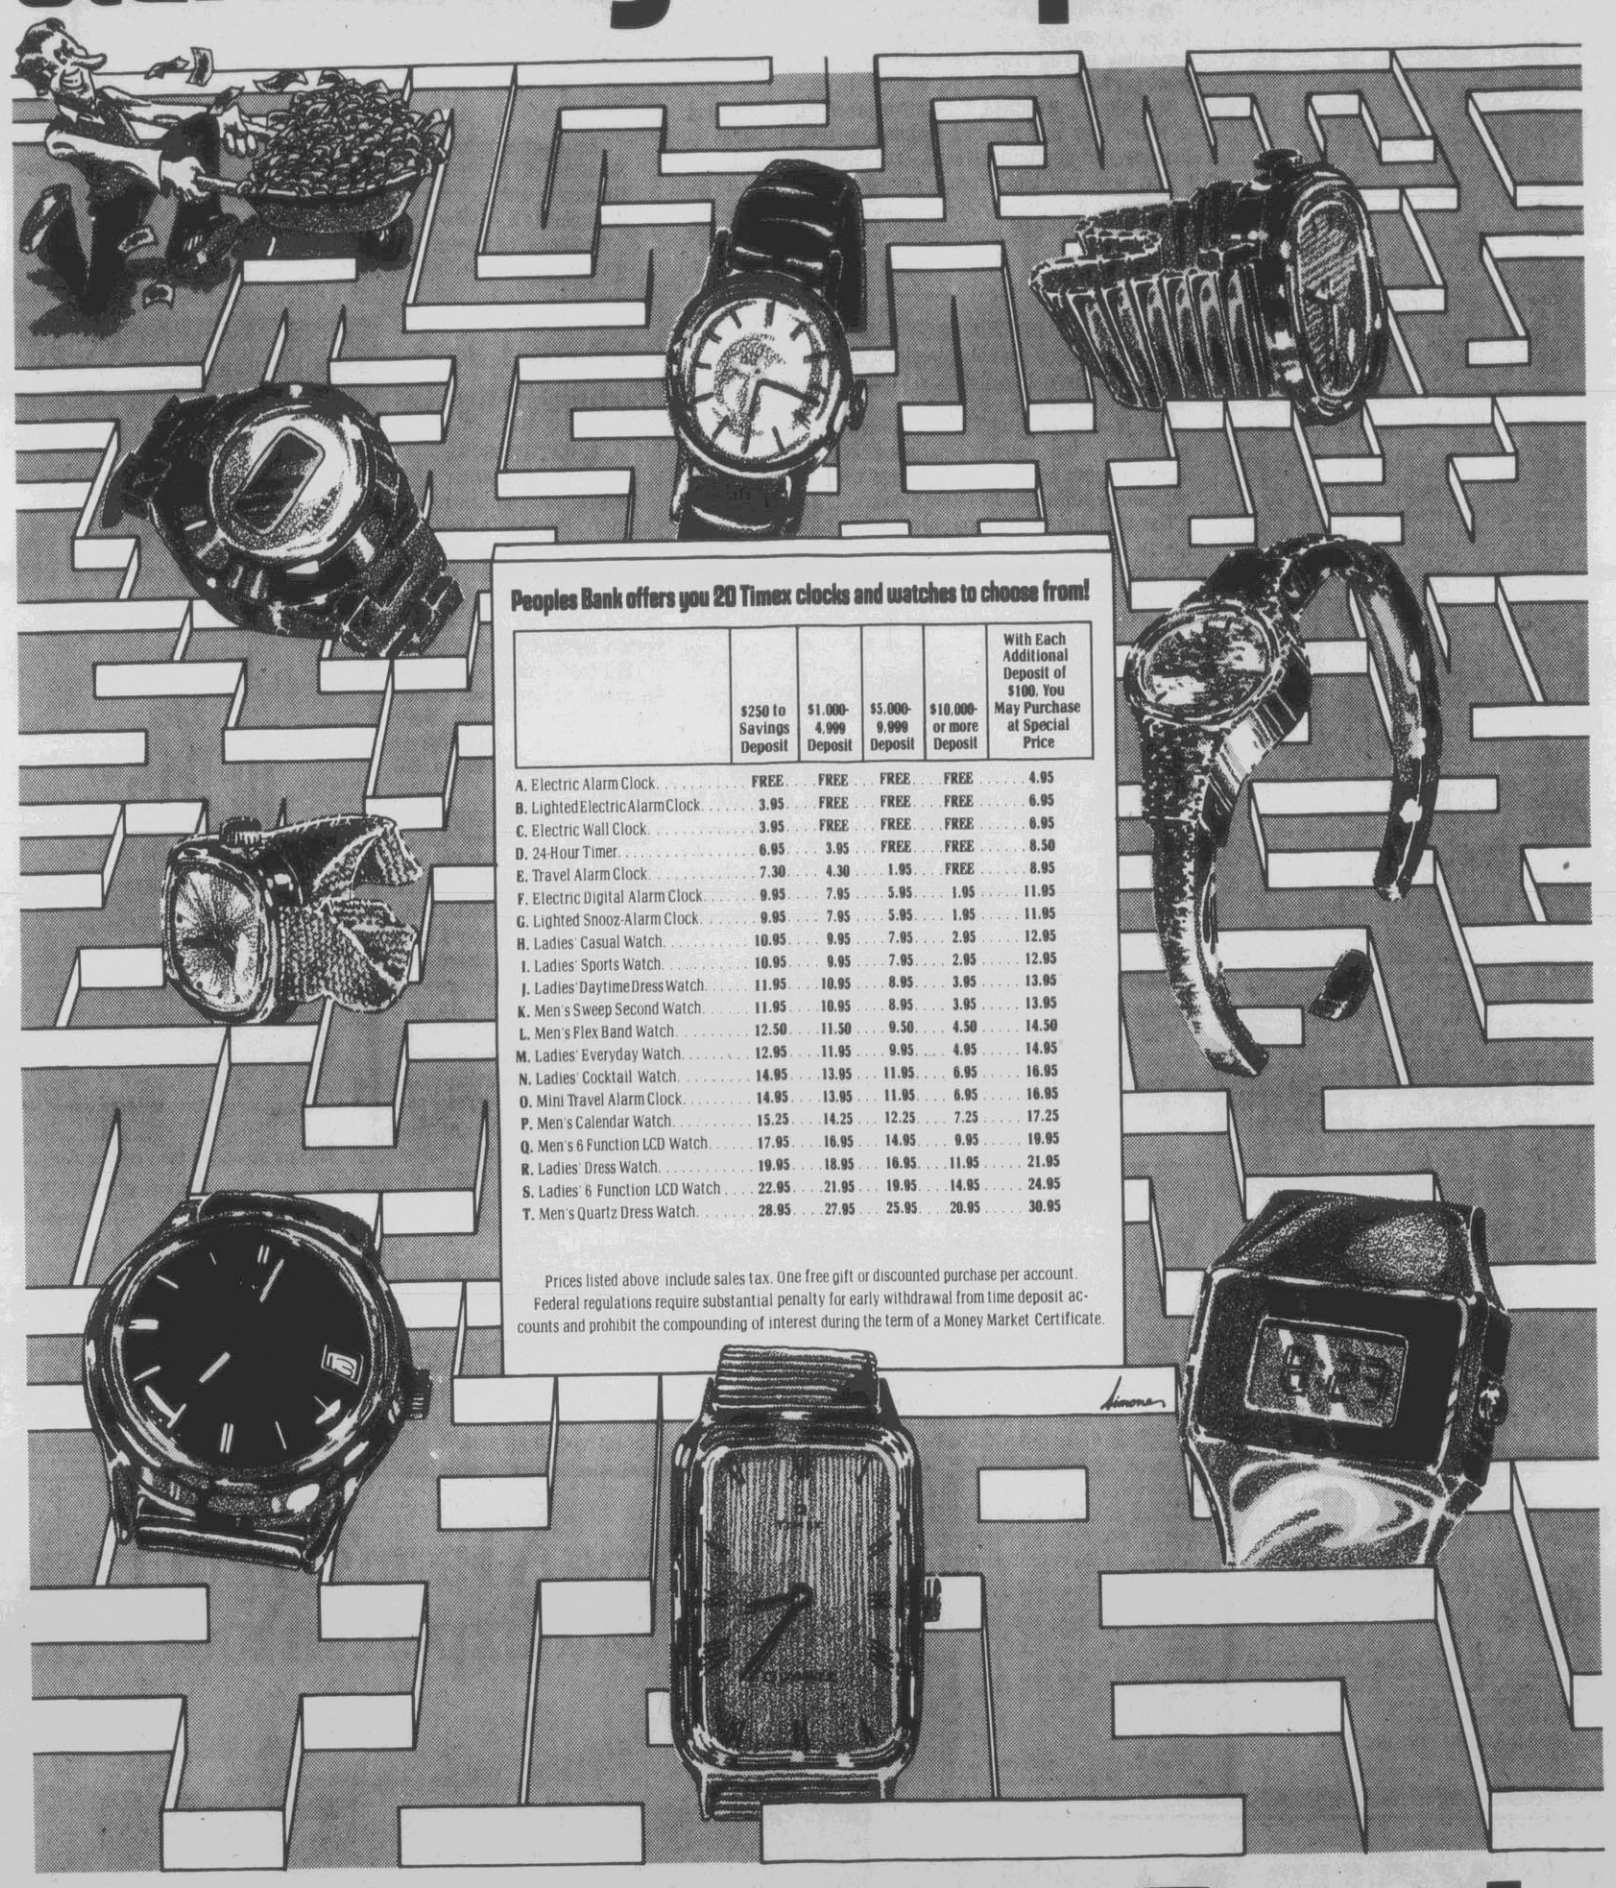

But if they believe there are problems with the film, the judge will view it and make a decision on the station's request.

Stephen Bosme, a lawyer for the station, told the judge the seizure amounted to prior restraint and abridged the station's First Amendment rights.

Station manager Tony Tiano objected to the viewing and said station representatives should be present.

"If the experts are one of the parties involved in the litigation, one can hardly assume they're going to be impartial," he said.

Ma Betty's Memories Are Vivid, Her Opinions Vocal

VIVID MEMORIES AT AGE 97...Elizabeth Munden has clear recollections of life as she knew it nearly a century ago. Ma Betty, as she is known to most, celebrated her ninety-seventh birthday last week with her granddaughter, Mimi Quick, in Ayden. Ma Betty, originally from Elizabeth City, visits the Quicks each year.

By Mary Schulken

AYDEN — Elizabeth Munden is the kind of visitor Mimi Quick loves to have. She's bright, aware, interested in politics and pleasant to be around.

Known to most as "Ma Betty," Mrs. Munden spends time with Mrs. Quick, her granddaughter, each year. This year she celebrated her 97th birthday, August 13, with the Quicks.

"Mimi prepared a beautiful luncheon for me," said Ma Betty, "and Craig (Mimi's husband) came home for lunch. See those flowers there? Just as we were starting to eat, the doorbell rang and these arrived from Mimi's sister who's on vacation."

Ma Betty also pointed out cards stacked on the fireplace and mantle. "These are from close friends I had in Elizabeth City. They all remembered me on my birthday."

The ninety-seven year-old was born in Perquimans County and spent most of her life in Elizabeth City. She is now living with her son, Mimi's father, in Rocky Mount. Ma Betty has vivid memories of her young days and of the 45 years she worked for First National Bank. She remembers the Spanish-American War and the two World Wars, and can recall who's been in the White House since the turn of the century. The Wright Brothers Flight took place in 1903, just one year before she was married.

Ma Betty met her husband at a party in Portsmouth, Va., where she was in school, and married him there. She describes turn-of-the-century romance as very different from today's courtship. Instead of movies, couples went out to the theatre to see professional acting troups perform popular plays.

"When we courted, my beaus picked me up in a surry. We would go to parties or to the theatre," said Ma Betty. "I had lots and lots of beaus," she added. "That is, until I met my husband. I met him when I was 17, but I told him I wouldn't marry him until I was 21, and I didn't."

At parties, the couples played games and listened to the victrola. "There wasn't any drinking at all," said Ma Betty. "None of the men that sparked me ever drank." Usually, boys and girls left with the same date they came with, even though they sometimes met and came to like others.

"When I met my husband I was with another beau but I told him he could walk me home another time," Ma Betty explained with a smile. "He did, then asked me to marry him.'

According to the 97-year-old, the first automobile she ever saw was quite a contraption. "It was coming down the street making a dreadful noise," said Ma Betty. "I was very young then, so I stood on my tiptoes and looked out the window to see what it was, and it was a car. Cars then weren't nice like they are today," she continued. "They didn't have heaters or headlights and you had to turn the front to crank them."

But Ma Betty feels the event with the biggest impact on today's world was the Wright Brothers' flight. "That changed things more than anything else," she said. "You just think of it. All the things that are connected to airplanes and flying, all the crashes and deaths and the fact that we can travel over the Atlantic Ocean in the time it takes to drive across the state. Most of the change in this century has come from the airplane."

The biggest change in people Ma Betty has seen is the fact they've become what she calls "so fast" in the last decade or so. "So much is said about sex and people are living together more and more without getting married," explained Ma Betty. "When I was growing up most people didn't do that and if they did, they didn't talk about it."

She feels people have not basically changed, though. "They're not any meaner now than they were, there's just a lot more of them."

Of all the presidents she can recall, Ma Betty remembers Franklin Roosevelt with the most fondness. "He was a great man, he did great things for this country. I've visited his home and his grave."

Ma Betty watched both the Democratic and Republican conventions on television this year, and enjoyed them both. "Kennedy made a good speech and I think he will support the party. You know it took a great deal of courage for him to run after having two brothers shot," she commented. She said that she intends to vote this year unless she isn't able.

Ma Betty's mother lived to be 100, and there's no reason to think that Ma Betty won't outlive her. At age 97 and still going strong, her memories are still vivid and her opinions vocal. "I've had a lot of close friends in my life, "she said, "and a great many good times."

Jeremy's Learned To Swim

Seven-year-old Jeremy Stokes can swim. Without arms, he can swim.

And swimming is a pleasure, a thrill for him.

He learned early during a two-week course this summer and perfected his skill so that now he can swim all over the pool, be at ease in deep water and assure his parents that he's thoroughly drownproofed, his teacher says.

"We looked a long time to find someone who felt able to teach Jeremy," his mother, Mrs. Bettye Stokes of Washington, N. C., said. "Many told us they just wouldn't know how to begin."

"I didn't know how, either," Betty Rodabaugh, an instructor at Countryside Aquatic School near Pactolus, said, "but I knew there had to be a way and I knew how marvelous I'd feel if we could succeed. Basically, all I did was hold my own arms to my side and figure out how I'd maneuver if I had no arms."

Mrs. Rodabaugh later consulted with Otis Arp, a Red Cross certified handicapped swimming instructor, who told her she'd been doing all the right things. He gave her one or two additional suggestions, which she said worked beautifully.

From early on, Jeremy, a rising second grader at Eastern Elementary School in Washington, wanted to go off the diving board. "Fulfilling this desire became a goal for Jeremy," his mother, who observed all his lessons, said. "And the next to the last day, he did it. He went off the board just like he knew he could and paddled over to the ladder."

Negotiating the ladder is perhaps Jeremy's most difficult feat. He must angle into it with his head — most of his swimming is done on his back — tuck his chin to his chest and turn himself over, then grasp the rails with his hands, push himself upward with his legs and thrust himself chest first onto the poolside. Then he rolls over, rocks to a sitting position and catapults himself to his feet.

Jeremy is the son of Bryce Stokes, a Weyerhaeuser employee, and his wife, Bettye, both of whom are Mississippi natives. His doctors say that the malformations of his limbs were a genetic accident. He has good use of his hands, but does not have the extending power of arms.

"Obviously Jeremy is a very fortunate little boy," Mrs. Rodabaugh said. "He has a brilliant intellect, a loving and open personality and wonderful parents who do all they can to help him develop to his very high potential. He's a fine swimmer and he's going to get better and better."

BALANCING HIMSELF. . .on the diving board isn't easy for Jeremy, but it's possible because of his determination. He's proud and so is his mother, Bettye Stokes (right).

WITH GOOD STRONG KICKS. . .and a fluttering motion of his hands, Jeremy does most of his swimming on his back, but can swim face-down without fear.

GOING OFF THE BOARD. . .was an ambition Jeremy fulfilled with delight toward the end of his swimming course this summer.

Mitchell-Crew Vows Exchanged Saturday

MRS. DAVID NEAL MITCHELL

ROANOKE RAPIDS — The wedding vows of Kathryn Crew and David Neal Mitchell, both of Greenville, were solemnized Saturday at 3 p.m. at Rosemary Methodist Church here. The Rev. Don Lee Harris officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was performed by Dwight P. Berry, organist, and Debbie Holloway, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Crew of Roanoke Rapids. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Mitchell of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of ivory chiffon crepe over ivory peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with ruffled crystal pleating. The empire bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke of schiffli embroidered lace bordered in a deep ruffled collar of the schiffli edged lace. Self-covered buttons were featured at the closure at center back. The long fitted sleeves repeated the ruffled lace at the cuffs. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated at the hemline by a deep ruffled flounce of crystal pleating topped by a scalloped design of the schiffli embroidered lace. She wore a three-tiered veil of ivory illusion and carried a bouquet of silk flowers, sweetpeas, line flowers, fruit blossoms, gypsophelia, ivy and forget-me-nots, accented by satin streamers.

Sister of the bride, Mrs. D. B. Camp Jr. of Roanoke Rapids, was matron of honor and bridesmaids included Anne M. Kracala of Charlotte, Andrea Mizelle of Greenville, Mrs. Lelia Vaughan Rose of Roanoke Rapids and Katherine Mitchell of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom. They wore formal length gowns of sky blue polyester with a crocheted bodice and V-neckline. Their silk flowers consisted of forget-me-nots and sweet peas with satin streamers.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Geoffrey and Steven Mitchell, brothers of the bridegroom, William Ray Crew, brother of the bride, and William Phillip Hodges, all of Greenville.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride.

The bridegroom, a psychology major of ECU, is manager of Stuffy's here. The bride is a student at ECU and is employed at Silkscreens Unlimited here.

The couple's wedding trip was to Paradise Island, Bahamas.

Couple Marries In Afternoon Ceremony

CHARLOTTE — The marriage of Melanie Joye Foushee of Charlotte and James Mitchell Poteat of Glen Alpine took place Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in the Mulberry Baptist Church here. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Cecil Seagle.

Miss Robin Elmore, organist, and Miss Beth Carter, vocalist, presented a program of wedding music. Her selections included "Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer." She was accompanied by Mrs. Pam Greene, pianist. Mrs. Elizabeth Roth was harpist while the trumpeter was Richard Duncan.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur T. Foushee of Charlotte and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny J. Poteat of Glen Alpine are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long white gown of georgette chiffon over taffeta. The gown was designed with a modified empire bodice and long puffed and cuffed sleeves. The Queen Anne neckline was outlined in hand clipped imported French re-embroidered alencon lace. A sheer back yoke inset was closed with bridal buttons. Lace appliques trimmed the bodice and sleeves. The full bias cut skirt was hand pleated and had an attached chapel length train. Two rows of lace banding outlined the hemline ruffle. Seed pearls accented the lace motifs on the bodice. She wore a lace appliqued Juliet cap with an attached chapel length veil, bordered in scalloped alencon lace. Appliques of lace trimmed the illusion. She carried an antique lace fan accented with pink silk roses with white satin ribbon with love knots and stephanotis.

Mrs. Treva Fidler of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a floor length gown of blush pink qiana designed with a Grecian crossed bodice and tiny shoulder straps. The skirt was a bias cut flare with hand pressed pleates. A sheer cover cape was waist length in front and extended to fingertip in back. The scooped neckline had self-fabric bows at the shoulders. She carried an arm bouquet of pink silk roses.

Bridesmaids were Lisa Kretschmer, Mrs. Sandy Broome and Mrs. Debra Fann, all of Charlotte, Lisa and Teresa Mangieri of Greenville. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

The flower girl, Shaye Fidler of Greenville, niece of the bride, wore a floor length pink sheer cotton dress with pink roses and carried a white wicker basket of pink roses.

Rudi Fann of Charlotte, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Victor Poteat of Tallahassee, Fla., Scott Carter of Rocky Mount, J. B. Bailey and Brian Keller of Glen Alpine and Sid Foushee of Charlotte.

AERATORS

The average North Carolinian uses 10-12 gallons of water per day in the sink. Half this water can easily be saved through the use of an inexpensive water saving aerator, Dr. Glenda Herman, extension housing specialist, NCSU, points out.

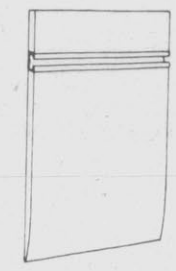

A standard faucet will deliver about six gallons of water a minute. This flow can be cut to four gallons a minute with a plain faucet aerator. Or it can be cut to two gallons a minute with a water-saving aerator. Water-saving aerators cost about two dollars each and are available through mail-houses and other places.

Dear Abby

Refreshing Breeze From Youth Front

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We constantly hear about how rotten the youth of today are, so I'm writing to tell you of a recent experience with the young.

I have a lovely seashore home, which I permitted my grandson and five of his boyfriends to use for a week in celebration of their high school graduation.

When I walked into the house after their departure, this is what I found: The rugs had been vacuumed, the furniture dusted, the cushions of two new armchairs were covered with bath towels to avoid soiling, the kitchen and bathrooms were scrubbed and spotless, all the beds were made with fresh linens, and they had laundered and put away all the sheets and towels they had used!

Even my plants were watered! The refrigerator was emptied and clean, and in it was a box of candy for me! On the coffee table was a note of thanks, signed by each one, plus a $10 bill to cover the phone calls they had made.

Forgive my bragging, but I just had to share this with somebody.

PROUD GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: Don't apologize. You have plenty to crow about. (P.S. Sounds like the boys may have had a little help from some chicks.)

DEAR ABBY: Here's the deal. Both my boyfriend and I are legal age. Last February we took out a marriage license, but we never did get married because there were a lot of things we wanted to straighten out first. He had debts. I had debts. He wasn't ready to tell his parents yet, and stuff like that. Anyway, to save expenses we are now living together.

I heard that if you live with a guy long enough, you don't have to get married. Just living together will give you a common-law status. Is this true? How long do you have to live together before it's common-law? I want things nice and legal.

Doesn't a marriage license prove that we are serious about getting married and not just fooling around? I mean, isn't this setup just as good as being married?

ME AND HIM

DEAR ME: A "license" to marry is just that and nothing more. Common-law marriages are recognized in some states, but not in others. If you want things "nice and legal," ask a lawyer and quit guessing.

DEAR ABBY: I frequently have lunch with a good friend who introduced me to the man who later became my husband. She had dated him before I came into the picture. While they were going together, he gave her some jewelry.

She still wears a necklace he gave her. Although I enjoy this friend's company, that piece of jewelry hitting me in the eye gives me an uncomfortable feeling.

Am I oversensitive? Or does she have extremely poor taste?

JUST CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: If she's a good friend and you enjoy her company, give her the benefit of the doubt and assume that she regards the necklace as a becoming piece of jewelry, has no sentimental attachment to it and is totally unaware that it makes you uncomfortable.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell PITTSBURGH, who has been married for 50 years, not to be upset when her husband says "Thank you" after a love session. After 50 years, he may be addressing his thanks to the good Lord — not to her!

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

FREEZING TOMATOES

Tomato juice and stewed tomatoes can be frozen. Dr. Nadine Tope, extension food conservation specialist, NCSU, offers these suggestions: For tomato juice, wash, sort and trim firm, vine-ripened tomatoes, cut in quarters or eighths and simmer five to 10 minutes then press through a sieve and season to taste. Pour juice into freezer containers leaving headspace. Seal cartons and freeze.

For stewed tomatoes, wash, remove stem ends, peel and quarter ripe tomatoes. Cover tomatoes and cook until tender—from 10-20 minutes. Place pan containing tomatoes in cold water to cool. Pack stewed tomatoes into freezer containers leaving headspace. Seal cartons and freeze.

MRS. ROBIN SHANE OWENS

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

MOREHEAD CITY — Susan Ann Modlin of Lewiston and Robin Shane Owens of Morehead City exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Wildwood Presbyterian Church here.

The Rev. J. M. Bragg performed the double ring ceremony. Wedding music was provided by Edward Dunn, organist, Elizabeth Smith, pianist, and Chuck McKay, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Modlin of Lewiston. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Owens Sr. of Clinton, S. C.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Temperance Neil of Novato, Ca., was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Sylvia Lasley and Joyce Hollowell, both of Chapel Hill, Jennie Vanhoy of Boonville, and Tami and Robin Owens, both sisters of the bridegroom of Clinton, S. C. Stacey Owens of Ninety Six, S. C., niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Stanley Owens of Ninety Six, S. C., David Owens of Laurens, S. C., and Tony Owens of Clinton, S. C., all brothers of the bridegroom, Gordon Williams of Havelock and Rick Maeser of Forest Park, Ga.

A reception was held at the church following the ceremony. Ada Russell, Jessie Mae Dunn and Josie Bell were hostesses and Gaye Laton and Stephanie Modlin, nieces of the bride, registered the guests.

Following a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the couple will live at Rt. 2, Morehead City. The bride graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a degree in early childhood education. She is a former employee of Greenville Christian Academy. The bridegroom is a graduate of Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C. and Columbia Theological Seminary, Decatur, Ga., where he received a degree in religion and Master of Divinity. He is the pastor of Wildwood Presbyterian Church, Morehead City.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Believe it or not, inflation may be bringing a culinary benefit: a blossoming of respect for simple American fare.

Perhaps because cooking schools have proliferated and publications have delved into the cuisines of other countries, American cooks in recent years have become more interested than ever before in turning out complicated foreign dishes. For example, some cooks have learned to make such elaborate desserts as Saint-Honore — a gateau calling for two kinds of pastry, a cooked sugar icing and a cream filling — to serve at dinner parties. Other cooks got the idea that they, too, had better shape up and master specialties of professional French chefs.

Now that inflation is forcing us to re-examine our values and lifestyles, we may begin to esteem such homey American desserts as cottage pudding. It was a standby our grandmothers often relied on to "fill up" large families plus guests at Sunday dinners.

This summer we tried a blueberry almond version of this pudding. It is easy to make, moderate in cost (considering the number of slices it yields), and delighted our tasters.

BLUEBERRY ALMOND COTTAGE PUDDING

2 cups all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
2 medium or large eggs
1 cup milk
¼ cup butter, melted and cooled
1 teaspoon almond extract
½ cup slivered blanched almonds
1½ cups fresh blueberries, rinsed and well-drained

In a large bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. In a small bowl beat together the eggs, milk, butter and almond extract until blended. Make a well in the center of the flour mixture; add the egg mixture and the almonds; stir only until dry ingredients are moistened; fold in the blueberries. Turn into a well-greased and floured 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden brown and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 55 minutes. Top will have a crack. Place pan on a wire rack and cool for 10 minutes. Loosen edges. Turn out on the rack; turn right-side up. Delicious served warm.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There's one thing about inflation that should be of some comfort. The game shows have really kept pace.

Back in the '50s a contestant, half-crazed with excitement, would jump higher than Monty Hall's head if he won a salami behind door No. 2.

The other night I saw a guy who had just won four cars, three trips abroad, a boat, a recreational van, a matched set of luggage, a Gucci summer home, a personal valet and $290,000. When asked what he thought of his instant empire, he smiled slightly and said, "It'll come in handy."

Game show contestants have changed. Even with the "Cost of Greed" increases, it has become tougher and tougher to work them up to a state of hysteria. It's no longer a game. It's a business where the contestant is in control.

I first noticed the "aggressive" contestant emerging when Johnny Carson would go into the audience to play "Stump the Band." After they had defeated the band with an old college song with "bleeps" for lyrics, Johnny would offer them a dinner for two at a leading LA restaurant. The depressed contender would say, "Don't you have any freebies at a Mexican restaurant?" When he was accommodated, he'd then inquire, "Could you fix it so I could take my 30 fraternity brothers?"

For years, I watched a show called "Coronary" where your everyday, average housewife would name George Washington's dentist for a vegetable slicer with 87 attachments . . . or hum the first eight bars of the Fiji High School fight song for an all-expense trip to Tyler, Texas for a cow-chip-throwing weekend.

A pattern of joy developed. First, they would wander around the stage confused, unable to comprehend their good fortune. Then they would grab the game show host around the throat, turning his face into a smiling death mask. Next came hopping, jumping, sobbing and general fainting. Finally, the family was summoned to the stage where they formed a circle, clung to one another and gasped for air.

As the credits rolled, the contestant was in the final stages of cardiac arrest as a model in a bathing suit put the box containing the vegetable slicer in her hands.

It was a far cry from the woman who was recently awarded a balloon trip through southern France and announced to the host, "I throw up in the air. Can't I have the dune buggy instead?"

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1980 by Chicago Tribune

ASK OMAR

Q.—I have been taking bridge lessons and playing for years, but I'm honest enough to admit that I'm strictly a run-of-the-mill player—a Sunday duffer. My failure to master this game is beginning to create doubts about my intelligence, which I've always thought to be above average. Do you have any idea why I am not progressing as rapidly as I feel I should? —L.G.R., Boca Raton, Fla.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.-The main reason could be because you are equating skill at playing bridge with intelligence, and that is not necessarily the case. If you want to become a bridge expert, you have to start with card sense.

What is card sense and how do you acquire it? I am afraid that I can't answer either question. Card sense is a mysterious quality and there is no way to acquire it—either you have it or you don't; it has nothing to do with intelligence.

To be a star in any field, you need a particular flair for that activity, For instance, consider football. You can take a lad and teach him how to throw a ball. You can make him practice for hours, and I am sure that he will become quite competent. But he will never become a Roger Staubach or a Joe Namath unless he has a special something that sets him apart. That championship ingredient is something that cannot be taught.

You can learn enough about the technique of the game to become a very competent player. The thing is to recognize your limits and live within them. But don't let it get you down—you can enjoy many hours across the green baize even though you don't play at expert level, and no one will think you are stupid because, on occasion, you make an error. (This last statement, however, does not apply to my partners!)

Q.—My partner and I play the Precision System. I held the following:

♡ AK96
◇ J
♣ 109

My partner opened the bidding with one diamond. What is the correct Precision response? —C.W.R. Tucson, Ariz.

A.—System has nothing to do with it. Unless you are playing a canape system, where, by agreement, you bid shorter suits first, there is only one response on this hand, whether you are playing Standard American, Precision or catch-as-catch-can. That is: One spade.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, c/o this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Moving, An Inch At A Time, To Cashless Society

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Push buttons and plastic are taking over for people and paper at your neighborhood bank.

The cashless society isn't here yet. And financial experts say paper money — and checks — will be around for a long time to come.

But computers are gaining a firmer and firmer foothold. Electronic transactions are cheaper than paper ones. They often are more convenient for customers. And bankers say there are fewer errors and threats to privacy with machines than with humans.

"No question about it," said Henry Vasquez of Hollywood Federal Savings & Loan in Hollywood, Fla., when asked if electronic banking was the wave of the future. "It's only a matter of time ... We benefit because it makes our banking more efficient and more economical. You benefit because it makes managing your finances more convenient and in today's world, that means a lot more inexpensive."

At Hollywood Federal, you can have your paycheck deposited in your savings account — automatically. You can telephone the bank or its computer to pay your bills. You can take money out of or put it into your account at terminals in supermarkets and drug stores. You can shop with a debit card. "The customer does not need a checking account and never needs to come into our lobbies," said Vasquez.

State laws on electronic banking — commonly called electronic funds transfer or EFT — vary. Some ban automated teller machines. Others limit the kinds of services that different types of financial institutions can offer. On a nationwide level, federal legislation passed in 1978 gives users of debit cards the same kind of protection provided for credit card holders. There is a ceiling on the amount you can lose if someone steals your card and there are controls over the issuance of cards.

For many people, EFT means automated teller machines (ATMs). The money machines were introduced in the mid 1970s, and Linda Fenner Zimmer, a researcher in the field of bank automation, estimated there are about 14,000 today. "At long last, it can be stated that the ever-elusive ATM boom is finally under way in the United States," she said.

Machine services vary. In general, you can, at a minimum, withdraw money from your account, make a deposit and check your balance.

Bill paying by telephone is another step in the march to electronic banking. The customer calls a number provided by the bank, gives his or her identification number and lists the bills to be paid and the amounts. The bank or savings institution withdraws funds from the customer's account, writes checks and pays the bills. In some cases, customers dial directly into a computer; in others, they speak to an operator at the bank.

Herb Wegner, a banking consultant and vice chairman of a federal commission that investigated electronic banking, said 235 financial institutions offer telephone bill paying and the number is growing. "Once the customer tries it, he seems to like it," Wegner said.

Prices for telephone bill-paying vary. Hollywood Federal charges 15 cents per bill if the customer talks to an operator; 10 cents if he or she deals with the computer. Hollywood Federal introduced the system in May 1975. At the end of the first year, the savings and loan association was paying 28,000 bills a month for its customers. Today, it pays over 150,000 bills for holders of 25,000 accounts.

Debit cards that can be used instead of checks also are gaining popularity. They are not credit cards, although many of them are associated with the Visa credit-card system.

A customer presents a debit card for payment to a merchant who inserts the card in a validation machine and writes up the purchase. When the charge clears the cardholder's bank — usually within a few days — the money is deducted from his or her account.

Cynthia Chaddick of Visa said there are one million holders of Visa debit cards issued by about 140 banks. The cards have names like "Quick Cash" and "Money Card" and can be used at any of the three million outlets that accept Visa credit cards.

Debit cards have been viewed with some suspicion by consumers who feared instantaneous deductions would do away with what is known as the "float." No longer could you give someone a check, then go to the bank the next day to deposit money to cover the payment.

Tom Honey, Visa's senior vice president for membership development, said the Visa debit card does not eliminate the float. "In no case are transactions automatically deducted from one's account immediately," he said. "It's too expensive to do that."

Some local debit cards, including the one issued by Hollywood Federal, do provide instantaneous deductions. Vasquez said that in exchange for giving up the float, customers get a bonus of 2 percent of all debit card transactions added to their savings accounts.

Wegner said debit cards will become more attractive as banks increase checking fees. "When they begin to charge what it actually costs for checking, then the debit card is going to look a little better," Wegner said.

One way to keep checks and still cut costs is with a system known as truncation. Instead of returning cancelled checks, banks store them electronically. A customer who needs a payment record can get a photocopy.

Robert V. Saybeck, executive vice president of the Valley National Bank of Arizona, which is testing a non-return system, said savings to the bank average $1.75 to $2 per account per year. In the first year, Valley National stored 1½ million checks. It got requests for copies of only 847. "Customers have developed such a love affair with checks that they could be considered a paper security blanket," Saybeck said. It is up to bankers, "to help them relax that grip."

Wegner said there is still some suspicion. "I think there's an age level that will always have some difficulty dealing with the machine." Young people, however, "have grown up on learning machines in school" and are comfortable with them.

He said horror stories of massive computer errors reflect "isolated examples ... blown out of proportion. "You've got a paper trail created at every step which backs up an electronic system," Wegner said. Fewer people have access to private files; fewer people have the sophisticated knowledge to tamper with accounts. "The reliability has gone up in direct proportion to the time we've had to perfect the machinery that's involved..."

William D. Plechaty, senior vice president for personal banking services at Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. in Chicago, said: "If you read a history of money, it would start with barter and then it would follow through with the development of trinkets that had some value, and that led to currency and then to a check and then to a credit card... "Today, we still have barter. We still have currency. We still have checks and we still have credit cards. Now we're going to have debit cards. We're probably continue to have all of them for a long time in the future..."

Cashless? No, said, Plechaty. "But I think we're headed for a less and less cash society."

Lowest Trading Day Is Recalled

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange routinely trades from 30 million to 50 million shares of securities every day.

Compare that with the lowest trading day in Big Board history, as noted in the book about the N.Y. Stock Exchange, "The Anatomy of the Floor," by Leonard Sloane. That came 150 years ago — March 16, 1830 — when only 31 shares, worth less than $3,500, changed hands.

Law Enforcers See Terrorism As Not Yet Peaked

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If the world is becoming jaded by terrorism, it may be paying the price of its boredom in blood.

After more than a decade of skyjackings, kidnappings, hostage seizures, shootouts, and bombings aimed at advancing often obscure political causes, law enforcement officials and other experts on terrorism fear that the worst bloodshed may be yet to come.

For the past five years there has been an average of more than one incident of international terrorism each day, making it so routine as to bump all but the most spectacular incidents from the front pages and the evening newscasts.

To make up for that diminishing attention, authorities fear, terrorists will devise bloodier ways to gain attention; upping the ante by more casually assassinating hostages; by eschewing phone warnings before detonating bombs; perhaps, in the most frightening scenario, using stolen nuclear materials to terrorize cities or countries.

According to the Central Intelligence Agency, 579 people were killed by terrorists in 1979, the most for any year of the 12 the agency has been keeping such figures and nearly 22 percent of the 2,689 deaths from terrorism since 1968.

"Terrorists are at a critical juncture," says Brian M. Jenkins of the Rand Corp., one of the world's foremost authorities on the subject. "The things that they have done, the repertoire of the '70s, will not suffice or gain them what it did in the '80s."

The CIA's National Foreign Assessment Center warns: "Terrorists may believe that a larger number of casualties are now necessary to generate the amount of publicity formerly evoked by less bloody operations."

Ominous support for such theories came Aug. 2 when a bomb went off at the Bologna, Italy, railroad station packed with vacation travelers, killing more than 70, the second highest toll ever from terrorism. Authorities attributed the blast to right-wing terrorists.

For the past 15 years, terrorism has been epidemic. That's due in large measure to modern technology, which makes society more vulnerable (providing airplanes to hijack, for one thing) and to modern media and communications, which instantly inform the world of the actions and demands of the terrorists.

"Terrorists thrive on publicity," says Oliver "Buck" Revell, who heads the FBI's criminal investigation division. "Everything they do is calculated to bring them maximum publicity."

Look at the attention generated by such benchmarks of international terrorism as:

— The 1972 seizure of the Israeli quarters in the Olympic Village in Munich and subsequent shootout in which all nine hostages died;

— The machine gun attack on behalf of the Palestinians by three Japanese at Lod Airport in Tel Aviv in which 26 people died;

— The kidnapping of Patricia Hearst by the Symbionese Liberation Army;

— A raid led by international terrorist "Carlos" at OPEC headquarters in Vienna;

— The hijacking of an Air France jet that ended with a successful Israeli raid to free the hostages at Entebbe Airport in Uganda;

— The kidnapping and subsequent assassination of former Italian premier Aldo Moro by Italy's Red Brigades;

— The seizure last November of the American embassy in Tehran.

Add to those episodes thousands of other incidents — 3,336 in 12 years were classified as "international terrorism" by the CIA — that sometimes have held the world stage for days at a time. Many have changed the course of world events — Palestinians often argue that terrorism made the world aware of their cause; certainly an issue like South Molluccan independence would have been unknown in the West had not a group of South Molluccans hijacked a train in the Netherlands.

One area where terrorism is low is the Soviet Union, where the CIA lists only one terrorist group, a group of Ukranian nationalists called the October 15 Commando. Experts say it's largely a matter of a repressive government cracking down at the first sign of dissidence.

The United States has also been relatively untouched. Though it ranks high in actual incidents, spectacular terrorism is rare — the Hearst kidnapping; the 1977 capture by Hanafi Muslims of three buildings in Washington; a 1976 skyjacking by Croatian nationalists; a 1975 blast that killed four at Fraunces Tavern in New York, an unsolved explosion that killed 11 people at New York's LaGuardia Airport.

Authorities attribute the relative good fortune to a democratic system that permits the airing of grievances openly; to effective security, particularly at airports, and the unwillingness of Palestinian and other organizations, which most often operate across international boundaries, to antagonize American public opinion.

Some law enforcement officers theorize that virtually all terrorism is directed from Moscow, Beirut or Libya. The Japanese Red Army and the now-depleted Baader-Meinhof gang, based in West Germany, both have trained and operated with Palestinian terrorists. Some Arab states have helped finance the Palestinians, whom they regard as legitimate freedom fighters, and a handful of governments, Libya foremost among them, have more indiscriminately aided terrorist causes.

But while experts are aware of ties among terrorist groups, they generally discount a conspiracy theory. "I don't know of any general headquarters of terrorism," says Jenkins, whose reports are the basis for State Department and FBI anti-terrorism operations.

The popular picture of a terrorist is of an ultra-fanatic willing to kill and be killed for a vague cause. A few are clearly unbalanced.

But most terrorists are calculating, attuned to public opinion and often have specific practical ends — publicity foremost, the freeing of political prisoners, the raising of money by ransom. They are rarely suicidal.

Yasir Arafat, head of the PLO, is fond of saying: "One man's terrorist is another man's freedom fighter." Among those he has in mind is his principal political antagonist, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who came to public attention as leader of the Irgun. Among its many terrorist acts was the deadliest terrorist act ever, the bombing of Jerusalem's King David Hotel in 1947, which killed 91.

Beyond the rare public figure like Arafat, information on individual terrorists is sketchy — those who are captured rarely talk about themselves. But some characteristics seem predominant.

A majority come from the middle or upper-middle classes, often because in underdeveloped societies the rich are the best educated and the most politically conscious.

Governments try to deal with terrorism in various ways. Some, like Israel and the United States, have firm policies of refusing to give in to terrorist demands as a way to discourage future terrorism. Others, notably in Western Europe, have often given in. The only academic study in this area, conducted by Rand in 1977, concluded that government policies are largely irrelevant.

Officials concede that no approach is foolproof. The most nagging worry for the future is nuclear. Terrorists might construct a primitive but workable bomb. Authorities acknowledge that fissionable material in some quantity has disappeared from shipments or plants in the past.

"Selection and training of security personnel at nuclear plants wasn't what it should have been in the past," says Sebastian Mignosa, who heads the FBI's anti-terrorist operations.

Authorities claim security has improved considerably in the past two years. But as Jenkins puts it: "There is no such thing as absolute security against a determined and ingenious adversary."

What experts hope is that the practical goals of terrorists would dissuade them from mass murder on a truly colossal scale. "You don't poison a city's water supply in the name of the popular front and remain the popular front," says Jenkins.

Jenkins sees an increase in violence as the logical next step, more likely a gradual stepup rather than the cataclysm inherent in nuclear terrorism.

"I think it's safe to say that terrorists will remain mobile, able to strike targets anywhere in the world. I think there's evidence of increasing sophistication in weapons and tactics.

"I don't see any end to it in five or 10 or 15 years."

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

SHANGHAI (UPI) — Romance and sex in China are difficult and sometimes dangerous pastimes.

A young female factory worker, described by friends as pretty, bright and intelligent, recently was hauled off to detention after a none-too-discreet affair with a foreign teacher in the bustling seaport of Shanghai.

Embassy officials were met with official silence when they intervened. A teaching colleague shrugged, "Their crime was they did not conceal anything. The only surprise is that the authorities haven't yet deported the teacher."

In Peking a Sierra Leone student reportedly was beaten by police after having sexual relations with a local girl who subsequently disappeared.

He was relatively fortunate. He was released from police custody following the intervention of the wife of the president of Sierra Leone, then visiting China.

Clashes last year in Shanghai between African and Chinese students were sparked in part because the Africans were dating Chinese girls. About 50 persons were injured.

Africans suffer the most among foreigners living in China, partly because of the difficulty in finding girlfriends. Many congregate disconsolately each evening at the Bamboo Bar in the Jing Jiang Hotel, limited to foreigners. It's a depressing hangout with twinkling Christmas tree lights all year round but where at least rock music is played freely.

"I didn't want to come to China. I was sent," a student from Zaire said. "And all I want to do now is leave this place."

Given enough advance notice of a budding relationship between a foreigner and a local, Chinese authorities actively try to quash it.

Successfully concluded marriages have been rare.

Shanghai is widely regarded as China's trend-setting city in everything from ideology to sexual habits. What develops here often is exported to the capital of Peking and eventually even the countryside, wher the bulk of China's nearly 1 billion people live.

Relations between young people are tame by Western standards — although not to local party officials charged with bringing youth into line with tough newspaper editorials and crackdowns against foreign influences.

Despite such pressures, love flourishes along the tree-lined boulevards in the old French concession area and along the waterfront of the world's largest city.

Each evening as the sun drops low over the river, courting couples throng Shanghai's famed "bund" waterfront. They clog the river embankment and stare at passing junks.

In tree-lined Huang P'u Park, reserved in pre-war days exclusively for the city's British, French and American residents, couples snuggle on stone benches. They face inwards toward the trees, their backs turned on passers-by.

Framingham Doctors Listen To Heart Of America

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — For 30 years, doctors have put their stethoscopes to the chests of the people of Framingham. What they've heard is the heart of America.

Every couple of years, 11,200 men and women have loyally appeared at a white clapboard house with a sign out front that says Framingham Heart Study. They are subjects in the longest-running medical investigation in the history of man's search for what's killing him.

Since 1950, this study has looked for reasons why some people stay healthy and some get heart disease, the most common cause of death in America. Over that time, it has compiled an indictment of the country's favorite vices.

Through thousands of checkups and interviews, doctors spotted the coronary risks in the rich diets, the sedentary ways, the paunchy bellies and the smoking habits of the American people.

When these researchers began to identify these dangers in articles in medical journals, the word spread and became the gospel of good health. Now Americans jog, watch their weight and eat more wisely. And the health of their hearts has improved.

Although they freely share credit with later studies conducted elsewhere, the doctors in Framingham think they deserve much of the credits for Americans' preoccupation with their hearts.

"We have persuaded many people that this is very likely a disease of lifestyle and that the fate of the potential heart attack victim really lies in his own hands," said Dr. William Kannel, 56, a professor at Boston University Medical School, which runs the program with the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

When Kannel joined the study a year after it began, Framingham was a town of 28,000. The medical investigators enrolled 5,200 of them, half of the men and women in town between the ages of 30 and 62.

Every two years since then, these people have gone in for hour-long sessions of prodding and questioning and measuring. Those who moved away stop in for checkups when they return for a visit to this town — whose population is now 75,000 — 20 miles west of Boston. The study has lost track of only 2 percent of them.

Over the years, 2,000 of the subjects have died. Like Americans everywhere, half of them succumbed to heart disease.

Eight years ago, the Framingham Heart Study enrolled a second generation, about 6,000 sons and daughters of the original group.

After the checkup — consisting of an interview, treadmill and resting electrocardiograms, a sonar examination of the heart, blood tests and measurements of height, weight and lung capacity — the researchers share the results with the patients' personal physicians.

Kannel says people keep coming back out of a sense of pride and responsibility. "But also New Englanders are quite frugal," he added. "They know when they're getting something pretty good for free."

When the study began, little was known about why some people die of heart attacks and others stay healthy. So doctors tested theories.

Eventually, they sketched a profile of the likely heart attack victim — the fat, hard-driven man who eats lots of salt, loves fatty food, smokes cigarettes and never exercises, yet feels well and has no inkling of impending disaster.

Then they developed a mathematical formula that allows doctors to use checkup results to calculate the risk of heart trouble for patients.

Among the Framingham findings:

—Even a little high blood pressure is dangerous, and it is not a natural consequence of growing old.

—The risk of heart disease increases with the number of cigarettes smoked daily and with high levels of cholesterol in the blood.

—The chance of sudden death from heart disease triples among people who are 20 percent overweight.

—Very sedentary men are three times more likely to suffer heart attacks than are those who stay active.

Women are not immune, Kannel stressed. Heart disease is also the leading cause of death among women, but in general, the incidence is half that for men. It strikes women with increasing force with advancing age but reaches significant proportions only beyond age 50, he said.

The doctors in Framingham shoot down theories, too. For instance, they have found no link between heart disease and family size, coffee drinking, sleeping habits or marital status.

Yet these doctors believe there's plenty more to be learned from 30 years of probing into the health of one town.

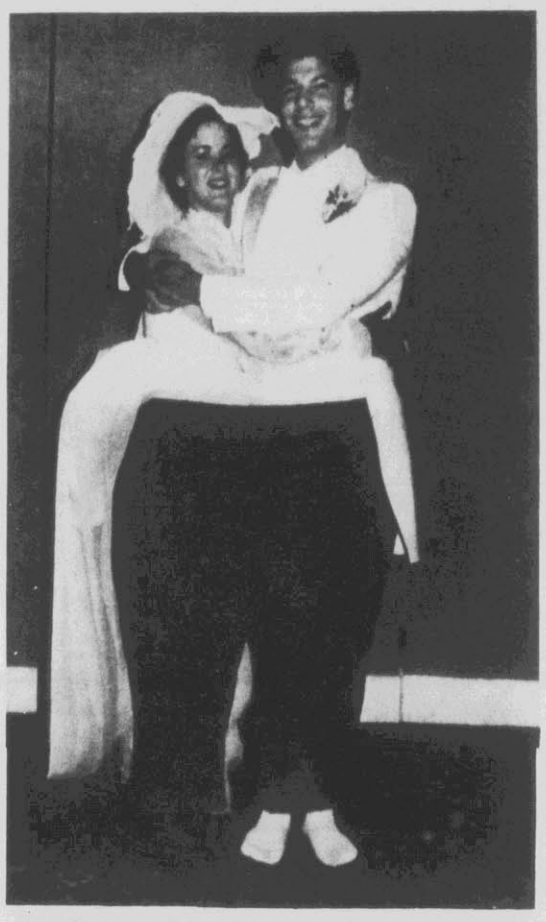

"We probably know more than anyone else in the world about why people get heart attacks," said Dr. William Castelli, the study's director. "And yet we only know about half the causes. The other half are yet to be discovered."

Castelli hopes to compile the ideal lifestyle for good health and longevity.

"We can delay the onset of a heart attack in everyone until after the age of 60," Castelli said. "It's a modest goal. Eat less, cut down on high-fat foods, get more exercise, relax, quit smoking. It's as simple as that."

Solitude Is OK When Fire-Watch Involved

By VERN ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SHOSHONE, Idaho (AP) — Sandra Beer wanted to work on a forest fire crew this summer, but the job went to someone else. Instead, she watches fires from afar and reads ... and ... yawn ... reads.

Exciting? No. Except when there's a wisp of smoke on the horizon. That's when Cervantes and Dostoyevsky are chucked onto the desk in exchange for binoculars and maps.

Miss Beer occupies the Bureau of Land Management's Notch Butte Lookout 750 feet above U.S. 93 and four miles south of Shoshone, where she lives with her parents.

Others might be bored, but the 20-year-old University of Idaho junior relishes the solitude of the one-room lookout.

Built in the 1950s, the lookout is about 15 feet square with windows all round. It contains an old olive-drab desk, a cot, a hotplate, a rumbling air conditioner, a two-way radio, a small refrigerator and an alidade to help locate fires on a map.

"I like being up here alone. It gives me plenty of time to read. It's pretty quiet up here and I like that," Miss Beer says. "I always keep about three books and five projects going so I don't get bored."

She also makes Christmas presents and does needlepoint and embroidery.

When Miss Beer goes home after a seven-hour shift, Karen Jones takes over as the sole lookout.

"I'd only read two books in my life before I came up here and I've already read six," says the 18-year-old Miss Jones, who plans to attend Boise State University in the fall.

But the reading, macrame, needlework and suntanning Miss Jones does at the lookout all wear thin after a while. "It's getting kind of boring. You run out of things to do — things to excite yourself with," she says.

She keeps company with her kitten, Thomasina.

The boredom always ends when there's a fire, which must be called in to the BLM office in Shoshone, where six 5-man pumper crews and an airplane stand by. The radio crackles away as other BLM lookouts to the northwest, the east and southeast are alerted so they can help pinpoint the blaze.

On a clear day they can spot a fire 30 miles away.

"We've had a lot of fires the last few weeks," Miss Jones says, including seven on one memorable July day. "It was very hectic."

Accommodations at the lookout aren't exactly deluxe. The only toilet is a small white outhouse nearby. "There were a bunch of bull snakes under the (outhouse) steps when we first got here, but I think we scared them off," says Miss Beer.

Nor is there running water. "They give you a canteen for water," says Miss Jones. "Nice, huh?"

The two women are not allowed a television and sleeping is forbidden. "I walk around a lot and drink coffee," says Miss Beer. They are, however, permitted visitors.

Besides scanning the arid countryside with the naked eye every 15 minutes or so, the women use binoculars at regular intervals and call in air temperature, wind and humidity figures three times daily. The lookout is vacant soon after dark because it's impossible to detect smoke at night.

They see other things. Like lightning hitting the ground. And wildlife abounds.

"The jackrabbits are really thick this year," says Miss Beer. There are antelope, deer and rock chucks "that come by the building and look at us. And there's an owl that just sits there on these rocks and watches the cars go by."

Miss Jones may be bored at times, but still finds the $3.91-per-hour job meaningful. "It's interesting because it's different. It's a different job. It's not everyone that gets to watch for fires." Indeed, she says she'll probably do it again next summer.

As for Sandra Beer, she still wants to get on a fire crew. But if she doesn't make it, well, she'll ... yawn ... do some more reading at the lookout.

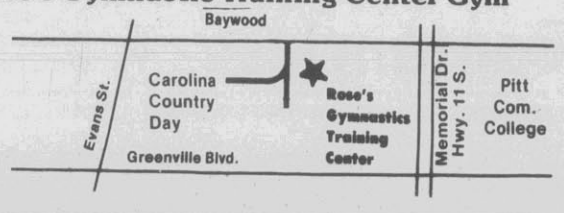

Tanzania Plans A New Capital

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — The East African nation of Tanzania is having a new capital built on the country's arid and under-developed central plateau.

Dodoma, as the new capital will be called, will be energy conserving. No air conditioning will be provided; rather, overhangs, recessed windows and tinted glass will be used to keep out the sun.

In addition, the builders will experiment with solar collectors and windmills as non-polluting power sources.

When completed, Dodoma will house over 400,000 people and the capital district will cover an area of nearly 2,600 square acres.

Tropical Fruit Forests May Be A Boon To World's Poor

MANAUS, Brazil (AP) — Tropical scientists in this Amazon River port are trying to create self-sustaining fruit forests in the jungle as one means of feeding the world's poor.

Researchers at the Brazilian National Institute of Amazon Research say the idea could create a limitless source of food for undernourished people as well as develop taste-tempting exotic fruits for world markets.

The idea is to cultivate some of the thousands of varieties of fruit that grow in the jungle — some of which are known only to small groups of Indians or subsistence dwellers along the the thousands of rivers in the Amazon Basin. Researchers say the idea would be a natural way to use the jungle as a food source, without importing wheat and grains that are almost impossible to grow in the region.

Many of the fruits, such as genipap — a brown, orange-size fruit — and breadfruit are popular now throughout Brazil.

Others are common only to isolated tropical regions like this one-time rubber boom city. At breakfast here, it is not unusual to be served graviola juice — a thirst-quenching sweet juice made from a green, spine-covered fruit of the same name. In downtown Manaus, ice cream is made from a flavorful fruit called cupuacu.

"Both of these fruits have instant taste appeal," said Dr. David Arckoll, a British agronomy researcher here. "With some fruits, it's more of an acquired taste. But we never know when we'll find an appealing variety."

One fruit already growing in popularity outside Brazil is the guarana berry, whose flavor is used in one of this country's most popular soft drinks.

But the major direction of the Amazon research is toward finding nutritious Amazon fruits that can supplement the diets of the poor. After finding them, researchers say the fruits must be cultivated and people must be taught to use them.

Arckoll and other researchers here have established a pilot fruit forest near Manaus where they are experimenting with different types and strains of fruits.

"What we're dealing with is farming for poor people," Arckoll said. "One breadfruit tree can sustain the food needs of one man for his lifetime — and the tree will still be there after he's gone.

"If a man, his wife and two children planted four of these trees at each corner of their house, they would have an endless source of nutrition."

The fruit forest plan also calls for planting supplementary field crops in between the rows of fruit trees, both for dietary variety and for nutrition supplements. That also could solve the problem of waiting several years for a cultivated forest to bear its fruit. One important crop being tested for this purpose is cassava, whose edible roots already are a staple among Brazil's poor — and an important source of zinc, which some nutritionists call a key ingredient in human growth.

Arckoll is focusing on a fruit called papunha, or peach palm, which he says has been a basic dietary item for generations among some Brazilian Indian tribes. He says the fruit may have limited commercial value because of its pungent taste, but has a good potential as a cooking oil. Other Amazon fruits are being tested for their potential as sources of alternative fuel.

Since developing new types of fruits is partly a matter of eating habits, Arckoll and other scientists are cooperating in a program to find out whether local people are willing to change their diets and accept new foods.

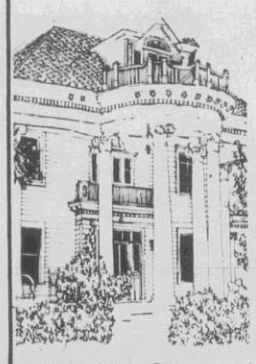

Some of the experimental fruit strains are being introduced at a primary school established in a Manaus slum area to see if local people could alter their acquired tastes.

"Schoolchildren in northern Brazil are receiving crystallized and preserved fruit from the United states, fish from Norway and milk powder from Europe," said Dr. Roger Shrimpton, a British nutritionist. "If they start to like these things, they are creating markets for developed exporting countries, while de-stimulating local industry."

The scientists say the food plan is a possible solution to the unusual fact that most food in the Amazon region is brought in from other parts of Brazil or overseas.

"We're introducing local foods, and basic concepts of hygiene and nutrition at the school and we think we're showing it can be successful," Shrimpton said.

Podunk A Town On Map

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press writer

PODUNK, Mass. (AP) — A refreshing name for a town, Podunk, especially in a region of so many fields — Springfield, Greenfield, Pittsfield — numerous boroughs and North-this, South-that.

Podunk is but a sparsely-populated (100 people) rural section of East Brookfield, but at least its name adds color to a map dominated by communities that sound as if they had been named by a shopping-mall developer.

This paucity of beguiling place names becomes apparent when Massachusetts is compared with another old state, Virginia, where road signs make interesting reading.

You can drive to Jennings Ordinance, Short Pump or Cuckoo. There is Forks of Buffalo, a town with a name which "folks who live there probably don't consider unusual," says Steve Clark.

Clark, a columnist for the Richmond News Leader who has compiled a list of such names, has his own favorite: Bumpass, pronounced "bumpus," as locals are quick to point out.

One reason for the Old Dominion's odd monickers may be that it has only two basic political units: cities, such as Richmond, and counties, like Chesterfield.

The latter have jurisdiction over every hamlet, village, post office site, four-corners and old stagecoach depot within their boundaries.

Places with town halls, selectmen or other trappings of local sovereignty tend to have more boring names — such as Richmond and Chesterfield in Virginia and Springfield and Greenfield here.

Or, it could be that they are simply better known, and their names more familiar.

In Massachusetts, most of the smallest clusters of people are self-governing; but most also have ordinary names, like Millville, Washington and Buckland. Notable exceptions include Peru, Wellfleet and Gay Head, which are incorporated towns.

But the best names are found in towns with no legal status in the commonwealth's eyes, and no political bodies to generate news.

Zoar, population 25, is not in Africa, but in Charlemont, and Madagascar is both an island off the coast of the Dark Continent and a section of Westfield, as is Brick Yard.

Other favorites include Old Furnace (in Hardwick), exodic Interlaken (Stockbridge) and Feeding Hills (Agawam).

Even the smallest of incorporated towns can have its own subdivisions, witness Middlefield's (pop. 100) Blush Hollow. Konkapot is in Mill River which is a section of New Marlborough, a town of about 1,000 residents.

Cheapside is part of Greenfield: which name is more compelling?

Bangkok Today 'Paradise Lost'

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (ap) — Once a paradise of easy, palm-shaded living, Bangkok today is a bustling and noisy city with one of the fastest-rising living costs in the world. This month it became more expensive to live here than in Washington, D.C.

Over the past few years Bangkok has been moving up on the U.S. State Department's cost of living index, which uses Washington as its base.

This is no surprise to residents who find modern ways and modern costs pushing the gracious, languid Thai ways into the background.

As Bangkok has switched from the easygoing, waterborne life of small sampans and quiet canals to a busy high-rise city with a perpetual rush hour, it has been racing to catch up with other expensive Asian cities, such as Tokyo and Hong Kong.

The Central Bank reported earlier this year that a 70 percent increase in oil prices in 1979 caused the consumer price index for Bangkok to rise to 140, an increase of 14.9 points in one year.

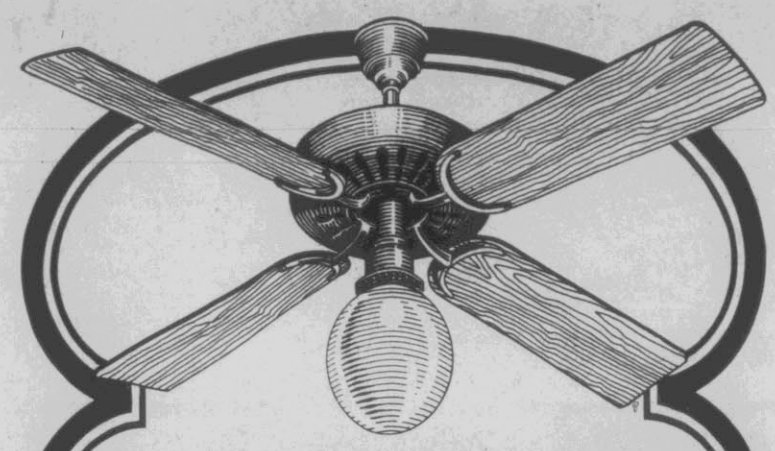

The wholesale price index went up 20.2 percent. The transportation index went up 18.6 percent. The food and drink index rose 15.8 percent in a city that has always been famous for its cheap food.

In one year, for example, the slice of grilled pork sold by street vendors with a spicy sauce has increased from the equivalent of 5 cents to 15 cents. The dish of pork with sweet red sauce that cost a dollar in a restaurant a year ago now costs $3.

The English-language Bangkok Post reported that house and apartment rentals for foreigners are rising by 30 to 60 percent, and sometimes by even more.

"What used to be a monthly rental of 6,000 to 8,000 baht ($300 to $400) has shot up to 15,000 baht ($750) in some main residential areas in the heart of Bangkok," the newspaper said.

The Thai-style wooden houses that used to offer foreign residents low-priced comfort in an exotic setting now go for the equivalent of $1,000 to $2,000 a month, it said.

Suspicious Of Expo '82 Plans

By TOM MADDEN

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The telescope in the posh 26th floor office of S.H. "Bo" Roberts Jr. is zeroed in on a strip of land where he has invited the world to gather in 1982.

The telescope is aimed at a 70-acre section of undeveloped red clay property that is the site for Expo '82, an international exposition centered around energy.

Promoters are billing the exposition as the World's Fair of the 1980s and a grand way for Knoxville to assert itself as an energy center. Opponents are calling it a boondoggle and a tribute to pork barrel politics.

With some nifty financing, a heavy influx of federal dollars, the hearty backing of the Knoxville establishment and the clout of the Tennessee Congressional delegation, the fair has cleared most of its major hurdles and the race is on to have it ready for opening day.

A former newspaper editor, the 43-year-old Roberts

has been in the vanguard of the effort to make the fair a reality since 1976. He said he entered the struggle to bring the fair to Knoxville knowing the road would be bumpy.

"There has to be an investment in faith — among people involved in the idea. There has been, as has traditionally been true in just about every world's fair, a great amount of disbelief and opposition from folks who can't believe a community can pull something like this off," said Roberts, a former University of Tennessee vice president for urban and public affairs.

"It takes a lot of just hard-gut leadership and persistence to work between the horrendous amount of problems that are going to come up in a project such as this," said Roberts.

The fair will be staged on a site within easy walking distance from the center of Knoxville, a bustling city of 170,000 population sprawled along the banks of the Tennessee River. The six-month fair is scheduled to open May 1, 1982 and run through Oct. 31 and is listed as a special international exposition designed "to bring together the people of the United States and other countries to study the many facets of energy."

Site clearance is about 90 percent complete for the fairgrounds, which will contain an amusement park, restaurants and entertainment areas, as well as a federal pavilion. Officials hope to convert the federal pavilion to a permanent energy research center when the fair is over.

Officials hope to have at least 20 nations represented at the fair.

Expo backers say the energy theme will distinguish the fair from other similar events. Promoters selected the energy theme because of Knoxville's growing role in the field.

The Tennessee Valley state and federal officials are committing about $228 million to improve the area's interstate highway system.

"You have got to have a worthwhile purpose — or there would be no reason in having the fair. You have got to look at what happens after the party is over," Roberts said. "Our primary focus at this time is having a successful world's fair. The accomplishment of that for this region and for this country will have untold residual benefits in and of itself.

"So, it is not contradictory to have our primary efforts directed at having a successful world's fair — which will provide the opportunity to accomplish these other long-term goals."

Funding for Expo is coming from a variety of sources.

In 1977, the Knoxville City Council chipped in $11.6 million in bonds for Expo land acquisition. Under the bonding plan, the city will own the land after the fair and will pay off the bonds from the sale of property. The city also may convert part of the fair site into a public park.

Sandy Quinn, vice president for marketing, said the fair will be a suitable forum for nations to show off their energy technology. He said the fair has 200,000 square feet set aside for international participants and 200,000 square feet for industrial exhibits.

"We are telling people that our event is the next world's fair, is the first of its kind in the southeast, is a one of a kind fair, and a major event of the 1980s," said Quinn, former marketing director for Walt Disney World in Florida.

"We're saying to everyone — look at the fair in its broadest context. The exhibit doesn't just have to be on energy technology, but it can focus on creative energy and human energy."

Four nations, Italy, France, Great Britain and West Germany, along with the European Common Market, have said they will participate. Expo officials plan a fall recruiting trip in hopes of luring China.

A big question is whether the Soviet Union will take part. The Soviets earlier indicated they would be at the fair in force and planned a 45,000 square feet exhibit, the largest of any foreign nation. But, that was before the invasion of Afghanistan and the U.S. boycott of the Olympics.

The Russians have given hints they would still like to be at the fair, but Expo officials said the U.S. State Department has given a "cold shoulder" to the idea.

Roberts said the fair will be a success "with or without the Russians."

The Senate recently approved funding for the U.S. pavilion and President Carter appointed real estate developer Charles Fraser as the commissioner general at the exposition.

Quinn said projections show the fair will attract about 11 million visitors. Expo officials indicate they expect about 50 percent of the fair visitors to come from the Southeast, but plan to attract fairgoers from throughout the U.S. and foreign countries.

Roberts said the 1974 Spokane, Wash., World's Fair drew more than 5 million in visitors and helped pave the way for a city the size of Knoxville to host such an event.

"Spokane was the smallest city ever to host a world's fair and was successful. No question it did an awful lot in establishing the credibility for a city the size of Knoxville to pull something like this off," Roberts said. "If Spokane had been a dismal failure it would have been a much harder job."

King Cole was president of the 1974 Spokane Fair and now acts as a consultant to Expo. He said Spokane citizens feel a sense of pride over what was accomplished at their fair.

But all Knoxville citizens don't favor the fair.

Art Thieves A Special Problem For Paris Police

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is a police story — with a difference. The criminals know a Picasso from a Pissaro and what they steal is not gold, but oils on canvas. Art thefts, especially in France, are a special problem for Paris police — and they have a special art squad to handle the "artnapping."

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The growing trend toward investment in art, one of the best hedges against inflation, has not escaped the attention of the French criminal underworld. The crooks are filching works of art at a rate of about one an hour.

"That Modigliani was bought for 200 francs in 1919," says Commissaire Gilbert Raguideau, waving his cigar at the Italian artist's recently recovered "Portrait of Madame Osterland" propped haphazardly on a bookshelf.

"Today, it's worth 800,000 francs (about $200,000), adds the commissaire, who heads the Interior Ministry's 45-man art theft squad. "And next year it will be worth 800,000 francs plus 15 percent. That's it. The motive is money."

More than 8,000 works of art were stolen in France last year from private collectors, churches, chateaux, museums, galleries and antique shops.

An art theft specialist at Interpol, the Paris-based international police organization, says worldwide figures are impossible to obtain. But Raguideau does not dispute published reports that about 42,000 works of art change hands illegally each year.

"And I agree when they say that in terms of money, art theft comes second after the drug traffic."

Raguideau says he is not an art expert, nor are his men specialists in art. "No, they are specialists in being police," he says, adding, "If I want an expert in the origin of a painting or a tapestry, for example, I ask. I'll ask at the Louvre or somebody else competent."

Apart from about 10 percent of the world's art works which are well catalogued and readily identifiable, most of the stolen goods are relatively easy to dispose of.

According to Raguideau, there are a lot of fences who frequent art sales and galleries, looking for people who bid on something and lose out, or who are disappointed because something is too expensive.

"Then somebody, perhaps somebody you have seen very often, comes up to you and says he knows of something similar somewhere, or somebody that wants to get rid of a piece of art similar to what you are looking for," says Raguideau. "You could buy it unwittingly, in good faith."

Though the buyer of a stolen art work will lose it if it is discovered, he cannot be prosecuted under French law if he can prove he purchased it in good faith.

But what about major pieces?

"Artnapping," replies Raguideau, a former narcotics specialist. "They take a work of art hostage and say: 'I'll give it back for money.'

"For example, the Hieronymus Bosch that we recovered last year, 'The Conjurer,' there are only 70 Bosch paintings in the world and everyone knows them. But this one, valued at about $1.75 million, was insured for $750,000. The thieves offered it for $250,000. It's a big sum.

"The advantage of artnapping over kidnapping is that an art work doesn't eat, it doesn't drink, it doesn't resist and it doesn't die.

"By the same token, despite the threat, the thieves will never destroy a work of art. Why? Because you don't easily destroy capital you have in hand."

Insurance companies often pay up when they represent private individuals, but in the case of museums, there is more of a moral and legal question, Raguideau says. Now, however, the insurance companies are becoming more reluctant to pay off for fear of encouraging even more artnapping.

In spite of the popular conception, Raguideau says there is no evidence of an international art theft organization.

"There are no specialists in the theft of art works. There are specialists in burglary. Thieves are well up to date on what's valuable and what's in fashion."

There is organization, he says, in the sense that the people who steal, traffic and fence art works have contacts with each other from one country to another and within their own countries. But this organization is very supple and not nearly as highly structured as the drug traffic.

Raguideau eschews the idea of "theft to order," which he calls a legend, but he does acknowledge the existence specifically art-oriented burglaries.

Fashion Shows Feature Past

THE OLDER, THE BETTER — Mrs. Carol Lawrentz, 72, inspects one of 300 antique gowns that she has in her wardrobe along with assorted fashion accessories. (AP Laserphoto)

By CHARLES CHAM BERLAIN
Associated Press Writer

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill. (AP) — Dresses never go out of style for Carol Lawrentz. The older they are the better.

Mrs. Lawrentz, a 72-year-old widow, has 300 period gowns in her wardrobe, as well as scores of old shoes, hats, lacy parasols, beaded purses, hatpins, kid curlers, gaiters, all types of jewelry, petticoats, wraps, shawls and other antique fashion accessories.

For 45 years, she's been staging Fashions of Yesteryear shows for clubs and other groups. "I outfit my models from head to toe," she said.

The vivacious, petite Mrs. Lawrentz coordinates and comments as her characters parade by in style shows that are fascinating peeks into the past.

There's the governor's wife on her way to Theodore Roosevelt's inaugural ball; an 1890 beauty primly wearing a calico bathing dress and matching bloomers; grandpa in his white cotton nighgshirt and cap, clutching his thunder mug, and an 1880 bride, elegant in an ivory satin gown.

"I love all these beautiful old clothes, and people seem to enjoy seeing them as much as I do showing them," said Mrs. Lawrentz, who puts on about 50 shows a year. She said she has no set price, but the usual charge for a style show is $100.

She uses most of her proceeds for philanthropic purposes, contributing to at least 18 projects. Among her favorites are a missionary in Brazil, a scholarship fund at a Lutheran school in New Guinea and a hostel for orphans in India.

"As a child I liked to dress my dolls in different clothes and I always liked to pretend," she said. "In high school I had parts in costume plays. I guess all this led me to start my collection 50 years ago.

"At one time I had more than 500 period gowns or dresses. I've sold many of them to friends who want to wear them."

Mrs. Lawrentz said she buys directly from family members, and doing so, learns much of the history of the grand old styles and their owners.

"People know I am a collector," she said. "When young people inherit the old homestead with an attic full of gradma's and grandpa's treasures, they often call me. I go over and buy what I like. One of my sources is a friend who conducts house sales, and she tells me if she sees something interesting.

"The inaugural ball gown came from a Highland Park woman who was the grandniece of the governor of Pennsylvania's wife," she said. "The governor's wife wore it to the 1905 inaugural ball.

"Over it she wore a royal-blue chiffon cut-velvet opera cloak with Russian fitch collar and cuffs. The gown itself is black silk canton crepe, trimmed with cut-steel sequins, jet beads and rosepoint lace. For accessories, the lady may have carried a lacy fan and worn an egret feather headdress and a diamond choker."

One of her oldest gowns is a young girl's tan linen dress from 1870. A newer one is a full-skirted net prom dress from the 1950's.

"One of my favorites is a brown taffeta, trimmed in black braid with little, black taffeta buttons," Mrs. Lawrentz said. "It has a bustle and is a two-piece outfit with a choker type collar. It dates back to the turn of the century."

Challenging The French Broad By Raft

Huckleberry Finn, in his wildest dreams, never thought going down the river on a raft could be like this. From quiet, slow-moving water to rushing rapids, a trip down the French Broad River in western North Carolina would put Finn into a frenzy.

Whitewater, simply defined as rapidly moving water on a river, is a state of mind as well as a water condition. Whitewater means challenge, adventure, and for the inexperienced, danger. For North American Rivers, there are six classifications of rapids, or whitewater. Class I rapids refers to smooth, rippling water; class VI means difficult-to-navigate falls, with the possibility of loss of limb and life.

The 11-mile segment of the French Broad between Barnard and Hot Springs, N.C. that is most suitable for rafting contains class I through class IV rapids. The water traveler will go over two falls, a six-foot fall and a nine-foot fall.

Three commands are essential to rafting: forward, back and relax. Forward requires a broad stroke, with the weight of the paddler firmly behind it. Back means the weight of the paddler goes into reversing the action of the craft. Relax means just that — go with the current.

Professional guide Tony Luther explained the proper way to use a paddle, and the easiest way to stay in the raft. "You grip the handle on the top flat and firmly with one hand, then put the other far enough down on the paddle to give you both leverage and comfort," he said. "When you take a stroke, the weight of your entire body should be behind it, yet your center of gravity should be towards the interior of the raft."

As for staying put in turbulent water, Luther suggested sitting on the outside doughnut of the craft (one cross-section inside is inflated; the rubberized canvas bottom is not) and bracing the body in with the feet firmly wedged underneath the outside doughnut and the inside cross-section. "Your weight should be towards the center of the raft so that if you do spill, you'll go inside the raft rather than outside it," he explained. "Your feet should be firmly holding you to the raft at all times, though. They will stay put when you lurch."

The two biggest problems, says Luther, with whitewater travel on this particular stretch of river, are getting stuck on a rock and getting pinned between rocks. "To get off a rock, everyone in the raft should move away from the edge that's stuck," he explained. "Once the weight is shifted, the raft should free itself. If it doesn't, try a little push and pull. If all else fails, step out of the raft and push it off the rock."

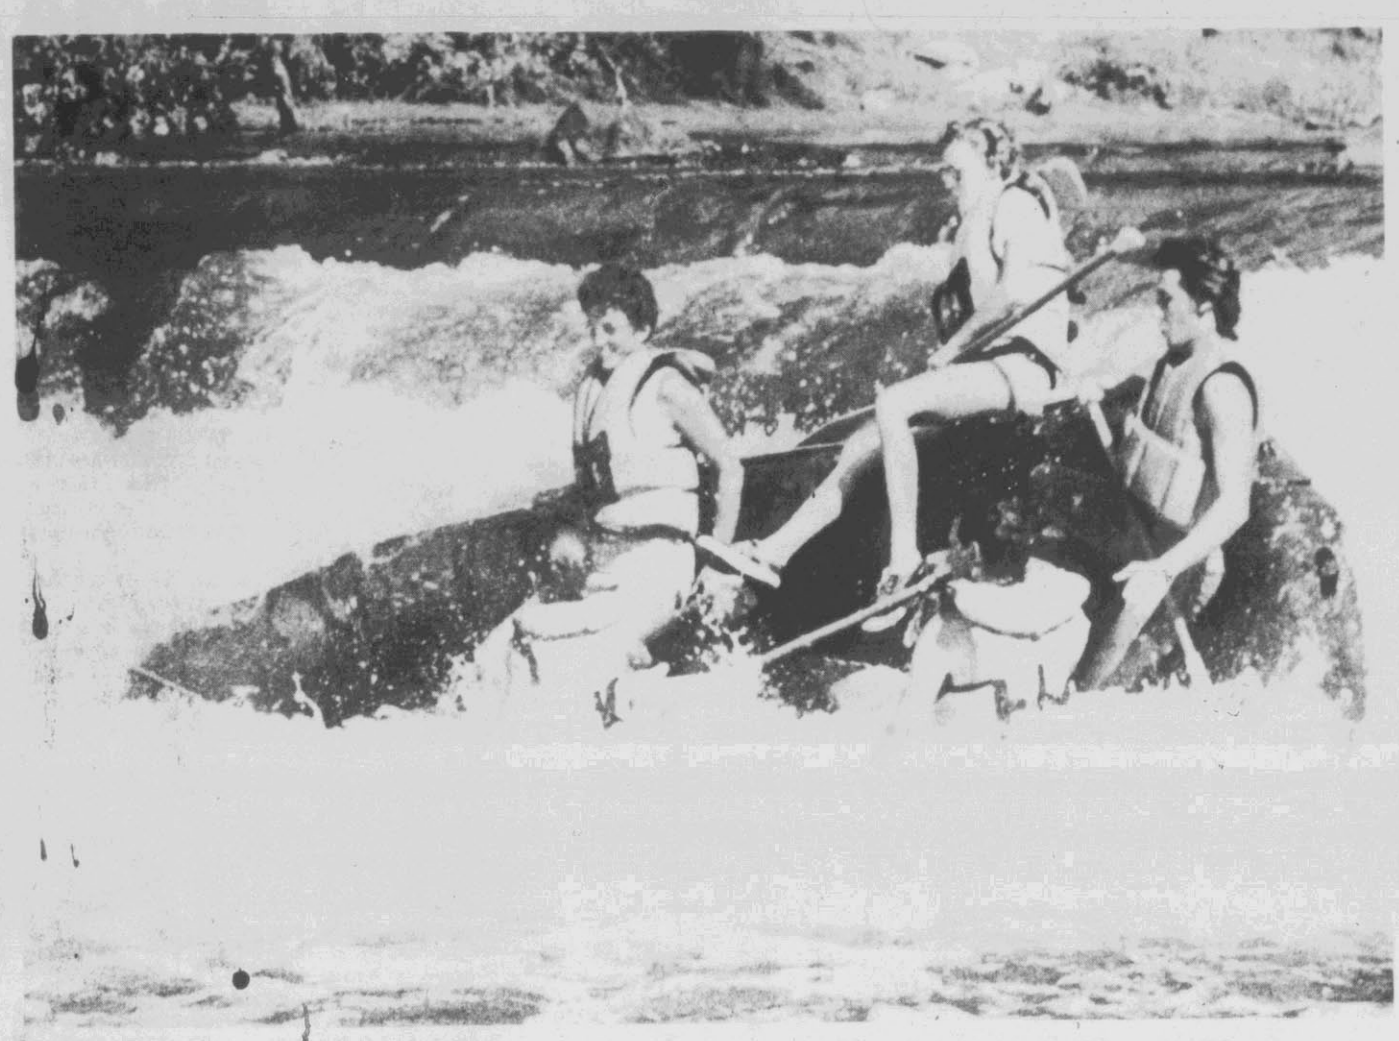

Luther cautioned that stepping off into the river could mean stepping into as little as nine inches of water or as much as 90 feet of water.

Rafting a river requires teamwork above all else. "Back on the left does very little good if those on the right don't keep their pace forward," Luther commented. "One side can't paddle and the other sightsee. You all have to get sore and tired together, or else swim the entire eleven miles together."

A typical raft designed for whitewater travel hold four passengers, five at the maximum. The two crew members in the front do the most manuvering, but the two in the rear get the most turbulent ride. "Most of the spills we have are people in the rear because they get thrown around a lot," said the guide. "The folks in the front have a good ride, but do a lot of hard paddling."

Although there is an element of danger in shooting rapids, Luther said he has seen no serious injuries on his trips from the river itself. "A couple of people have been hit by equipment flying around, like paddles or water-tight boxes, but no one has been hurt otherwise," he reports. "A youngster dived from the raft once into very shallow water and cut himself pretty badly. It was a very unwise thing to do," he added. Luther cautioned the group in the beginning not to dive in the river.

"All in all, it's pretty safe. I take kids 14 and over when the water's high in the spring, but during the dry season, July and August, I take ones as young as 8 years old," Luther explained. "I feel that's good, because it affords families something to do together."

WHOOPS! Whitewater travelers navigate Needle Falls on the French Broad River. Two crew members spilled.

Text and Photos By Mary Schulken

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS...Professional guide Tony Luther takes a breather and gives final instructions to the group before they attempt the worst rapids of the day, Frank Bell. Frank Bell is a nine-foot fall.

HOW DO WE GET OUT OF HERE?...Instructions were given for how to get off rocks and how to get from between rocks, but nothing helped this group that found themselves completely beached between two big boulders. It took about 45 minutes to free the raft, which just happened to be the one carrying lunch.

A SENSE OF DISCOVERY...The river beckons to river travelers, giving them the same feelings Lewis and Clark and John Wesley Powell had. Around each bend, there is the possibility of glimpsing trees, rocks and mountains no other man has seen.

Forward... Back On the Lett... Now, Relax!

Swamp Rats Are Good River Rats

The trip started slowly and carefully. The rafts, pushed in the barely ankle-deep water, caught on rocks and seemed reluctant to begin the 11-mile journey. The travelers struggled with their paddles and made blisters that by the end of the day became callouses.

With each bend in the river, the people felt more and more like Lewis and Clark or John Wesley Powell, glimpsing trees, rocks and mountains no other man has seen.

The river grew less tame, and the rafters began to struggle with constant back on the left and steady forward commands, forgetting the relax command. The first rapids came and went quickly, and the travelers got the feel of fast-moving water underneath. By the second rapids, the first spill came. A man went overboard, riding 50 feet in the swirling water before his crew hauled him back aboard. The strength of the river was acknowledged.

After lunch, the four rafts tackled the section known as The Flats, named for the shallow, rocky bed of the river at this point. Paddling stopped and pushing and pulling took its place. After conquering this less-than-joyful section, the by-then-dubious group approached the first Class IV rapid, six-foot Needle Falls. The lead raft plunged through successfully, along with numbers three and four, but two passengers of the second raft rode the falls manually, hanging on the side.

The second falls, known as Frank Bell rapids, was actually two shelves, one a four-foot drop and one a five-foot drop. Frank Bell required manuvering since the first shelf had to be run in the center and the second to the far right.

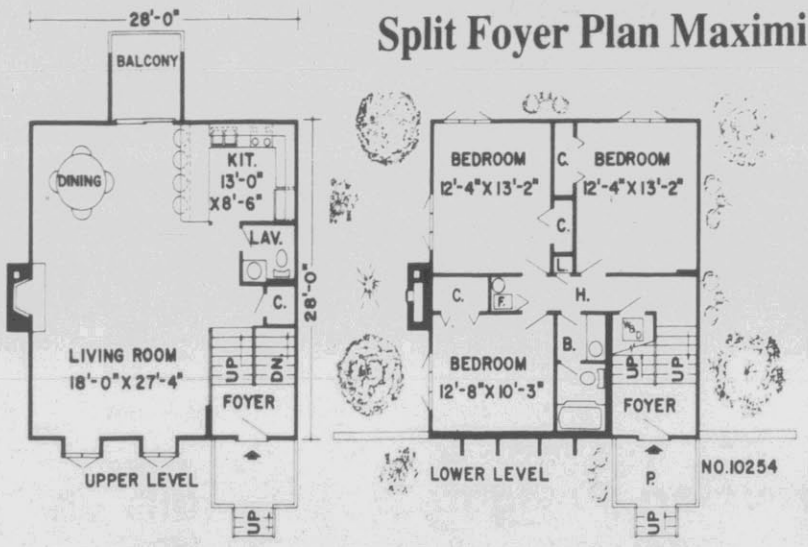

After Frank Bell, the river's surface changed

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Ridgeglen

Split Foyer Plan Maximizes Space

By Jerry Bishop

With bedrooms nestled on the lower level and living areas set above, the Ridgeglen reverses the usual split foyer arrangement with good results.

Total square footage for the home is just over 1500, yet the design manages to include large bedrooms, a bath and a half, and a living-dining area with a sense of expansiveness.

As for the exterior, the effect is totally contemporary. High windows pour light into the living room without sacrificing privacy, and just a touch of cedar and stone add a rustic effect. Inside, the plan is unique and workable.

Entry is into the split foyer, and up to the living areas. The closet at right is conveniently placed to store coats. Living areas occupy the upper level almost totally unrestricted, with only a breakfast bar defining and dividing kitchen from dining area. As a result, the wood-burning fireplace can even be enjoyed from the kitchen as well as from every inch of the living-dining area. A small balcony is featured at rear and reached through sliding glass doors, and a half bath is well-situated between kitchen and coat closet.

The lower level of the Ridgeglen is given entirely to sleeping quarters. Especially notable in this design is the size of the bedrooms. Even though the total square footage indicates a modest-sized design, the bedrooms are large and well supplied with closets. In addition, the full bath on this level is compartmented for efficiency, and the lower rooms are designed to admit plenty of natural light. A linen closet is included.

Special Furniture Makes Home Entertaining Easier

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

An outgrowth of the popularity of casual entertaining at home has been the development of special pieces of furniture geared toward making entertaining easier.

New examples of stationary and roll-about bars and servers are appearing on the market at an accelerated rate. And, according to retailers and interior designers, such furniture in a wide range of price ranges is finding great acceptance with families who entertain a lot.

In fact, bars which were once considered entirely inappropriate in a living room have come to the living room to stay. For example, Gail Lewis, an interior designer in New York, commented that "all my clients absolutely demand bars for their living room. I have lectured them and even insulted some by telling them that nobody puts bars that look like bars in the living room. But when they are unobtrusive — concealed in armoires or part of a wall system — bars are a great help.

"Today," she continued, "there are so many cabinets and bar units available that it's easy to find something suitable that is still in good taste."

Others in the home-furnishings industry agree. Bars are now a wanted feature in a wall system, said a furniture retailer with several stores in the New York area. The efficiency and convenience of having a bar in a wall system has helped to create demand for other types of bars and serving units, added the retailer.

Bars are now available concealed in armoires, in console tables and as etageres. In addition, despite Ms. Lewis' feeling that bars that look like bars "are tacky," a large number of them do end up in American living rooms. And, perhaps, even more are set up in dens and basement family rooms.

A popular form of informal entertaining nowadays relies on a combination of a bar-server and a large cocktail table. Food is put out on the cocktail table or a separate server; drinks are at the bar; guests help themselves, and dine at small bunching tables, on lap trays, or off the cocktail table. Such a dinner or supper party would not have passed muster once, but a more casual attitude toward entertaining now makes it acceptable.

Also coming in for increased sales and popularity are roll-about servers. Many are finished on both sides and have a concealed surface that is impervious to spills.

Since they are on wheels, the servers can go into the living room, or out to the porch, or to the dining room — wherever they are needed for a party. With enclosed storage below the plastic laminate surface most possess, servers also provide convenient storage space for a variety of china and serving pieces.

With dining rooms disappearing, or becoming mere shadows of their former selves, servers have begun appearing in living rooms and foyers where they work well as a console table, too.

Other ideas of useful party furniture were enumerated by Ms. Lewis.

"I like to suggest the use of bunching tables instead of a large cocktail table in front of a sofa in a small living room," she said. "In small homes, clients often want to have a convertible sofa for guests and a large cocktail table is difficult to move out of the way."

Stacking tables used as side tables next to lounge chairs or sofas are also a good idea, she said. When not needed, they nest and take up little room. Then, when guests come, they do triple duty as small cigarette tables.

The best solution to the problem of fitting a room out for a variety of activities is a wall system, said Ms. Lewis. They come in a wide variety of styles and sizes and can accommodate many storage and serving functions. In a small room, especially, wall systems are a lifesaver, she said.

In some areas of the world, building houses on poles or stilts has been going on ever since man moved out of caves.

In the United States, the practice has been confined mostly to commercial buildings, vacation cottages, farm structures, and dwellings which have needed special construction techniques as protection against the unpredictability of nature or as a solution to the problem of difficult terrain.

Now, there are increasing signs that pole building may be coming into its own solely because of its inherent advantages. Pole building is a system of construction which employs widely spaced poles embedded in the ground to support both roof and floor. These pressure-treated supports are linked at floor and roof levels with horizontal wood girders. The floor and roof are laid across these girders. The walls, windows, doors and fixtures are then attached. There is no foundation as such, although the poles serve in that capacity, just as they serve as the structural frame.

The designation "poles" is used rather loosely, since we are inclined to think of poles as round. Actually, while most poles used for this purpose are round, some are squarish, which makes for easier construction but are said not to be as strong as the round.

Building a house or even a small barn or storage shed is not one of those weekend projects you can knock off in a hurry. But Ralph Wolfe, an architect in Cambridge, Mass., says the system of pole building "is nonetheless easier and cheaper than building with conventional stud framing, and its conceptual simplicity is less intimidating to the novice."

In his book, "Pole Building Construction," he takes you on a photo tour of 18 pole structures around the country. The construction process as well as the finished dwellings are shown.

Among the plans included in Wolfe's book is one for a solar cottage with two bedrooms. Depending on the local climate, the sun will provide 50 to 75 percent of the heat for the house. The key element of the design is a waterwell — a row of translucent, water-filled tubes just inside the sliding glass doors which line the south face of the house.

These tubes collect and hold the sun's heat in winter, retaining their warmth through the night and greatly reducing the need for supplementary heat. At night, insulating drapes are pulled across the windows to reduce heat loss. The north side has only a few small windows, while the roofline drops down to deflect north winds up and over. In addition, the entire northeast and northwest walls are lined with closets to buffer the cold, as well as to provide ample storage in lieu of a basement.

The plan for the solar cottage provides for a utility room for a water heater and the boiler, if oil or gas is used as the backup fuel source. In that case, a forced hot-water heating system is recommended. If wood-burning stoves are to be used for backup heat, the utility room may be eliminated or used for some other purpose.

("Pole Building Construction" is published by Garden Way, Charlotte, Vt. 05445.)

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. What is the best time of year to reseed a thin fescue lawn? (D.S., Charlotte)

A. Mid-September to mid-October. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. Green June beetles wrap up my figs as soon as they ripen. How can I poison the beetles without poisoning myself? (W.H., Mount Olive)

A. You can't. No insecticides are registered by the Environmental Protection Agency for control of green June beetles on ripe figs. You might try covering the figs with cheese cloth or tobacco cloth. (R.L. Robertson, extension entomologist)

Q. What can I do about a flowering peach that has a lot of sap oozing from the trunk? (D.B., Fayetteville)

A. Spray around the base of the tree about Sept. 1 with endosulfan (Thiodan). Usually just a single drenching of the trunk is needed each year. Your problem is the peachtree borer. Borers feed at the base of peach trees, causing the sap to ooze in the spring. Probing the holes with a wire or knife will usually kill them. (K.A. Sorensen, extension entomologist)

Q. Some type of worm gets in the stem of my chrysanthemums and dahlias every year. The plants die each September and come back in the spring. Spraying with Spectracide doesn't help. What can I do? (N.L., Williamston)

A. Spray or dust with Sevin at ten day intervals, beginning in mid-August and continuing until late September. Your flowers are infested with European corn borers. As crops and weeds which these worms normally infest, get less attractive in late summer, they tend to look for ornamental plants. Also, the population of all insects tends to be much higher at the end of the summer than earlier in the growing season. (James R. Baker, extension entomologist)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We bought a house that has prefinished siding. The builder said it has a paint finish that is guaranteed against blistering, peeling, checking or flaking for 30 years. Even if that is true, it is going to get dirty. Is there any special way to keep this kind of siding in reasonably clean condition?

A. — The best way to keep prefinished siding in good shape is to hose it down twice a year, preferably in the spring and fall. Should it get some kind of dirt on it that doesn't come off with water, use a mild detergent. Don't use an abrasive cleaner.

Q. — We have a large metal mailbox that is getting kind of seedy in appearance. Can I use one of those rust preventive coatings that come in a small spray can? Do I need a primer?

A. — Yes, you can use the spray-type coating. A primer sometimes is needed, especially if the mailbox requires touching up. There is a primer for aluminum, another for other metals. There is also a special primer for heavily rusted metal surfaces. Ask your dealer for help in making a choice.

Q. — We have siding on our house that is either cedar or cypress, I'm not sure which. A few years ago, I finished it with varnish. It is now peeling all over and this time I would like to finish it with something that does not have a shine to it. What do you suggest?

A. — I don't know who recommended that you use varnish on siding, but it was not a good idea, especially when you apparently used interior varnish. Exterior varnish does not have a shine on it. You will have to remove the old varnish, at which point you have a choice of several finishes. Among these are paints, stains and one of the varieties of penetrating wood sealers. If you decide on paint, it technically can be applied over varnish, but not varnish that is peeling or has a shine. Stain or penetrating wood sealer must be applied to raw wood or to wood from which the previous finish has been thoroughly removed. Whichever finish you select, read the directions on the container to determine whether an under coat is necessary and, if so, which type.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Offers Tips For Home Decorator

NEW YORK (UPI) — Award-winning interior designer Everett Brown offers these tips on home-decorating:

— To give tall bookcases a finished look if they don't quite reach the ceiling, line up paperback books across the top.

— Small chairs are preferable to large ones. "I feel tall people can sit in a little chair and be comfortable, but small people can't sit in a large chair and be comfortable."

— Don't buy any furniture until you find what you like. Don't settle for something just to fill a room.

— Two small tables in front of a sofa are better than one large table, because people can either move the tables or move around them easily.

— To give a room intimacy and soften a doorway, hang portieres from a rod at the top.

First Quality From Seconds

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Carpeting seconds often provide first-quality value at less than first-quality prices, says a Purdue University professor and housing specialist.

Michael Lee, an assistant professor of environmental design, says seconds may cost one-third to one-half less than first-quality carpeting but have flaws so slight they are almost invisible. There may be a slip in the yarn or a patched or slightly miscolored area. None of these impairs the quality or durability of the product, Lee says, and the flaws can often be hidden at home by placing a piece of furniture on the spots.

Lee says manufacturers often sell seconds in job lots to wholesalers who pass them on to retailers at lower prices than the branded, first-quality products.

Come Up With Product Ideas

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Panel members of National Family Opinion, Inc., a market research firm, regularly come up with ideas for improving products. Here are some of their latest:

— Put an identifying mark such as a dot on sewing thread spools to show where the thread begins.

— Include the yardage on skeins of yarn and in knitting and crochet directions.

— Make the lids on flavoring extract jars a measuring size, such as ¼, ½ or 1 teaspoon.

Best Storage For Policies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Home is the best storage spot for life insurance policies, says the American Council of Life Insurance. Both the insured and beneficiaries should have access to them, according to the trade association. But a list of insurance policies, by company name and policy number, should be stored in the safe deposit box.

Unkempt, poorly maintained, brown lawns and untrimmed shrubbery do not present a positive portrait of a house. Trying to sell your house? Another Disney Dream Is Being Readied For 1982

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The words alone conjure up fantasies for the future: Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow.

EPCOT, the late Walt Disney's dream, is in the making amid the sun-baked orange groves of central Florida.

The concept from the master showman's fertile imagination is evolving into an $800 million showplace for the technologies of tomorrow and the nations of today.

It is Walt Disney Productions' most ambitious, costliest project and as different from Mickey Mouse's Magic Kingdom as Disneyland is from a carnival.

"Basically, we apply our techniques, technology and entertainment expertise to some hard subjects — history, the land, the sea, transportation, foreign culture," says company vice president Jack Lindquist.

"Throughout the evolvement of this project, we had to keep reminding ourselves that we are just show business folks, communicators and storytellers," adds Lindquist, one of the original creative and marketing whiz kids with Disney.

"We have to entertain first ... but we hope and believe that from EPCOT Center, people are going to come away with a better understanding of the problems of mankind and some idea of the alternatives that exist to solve these problems."

Under construction alongside the Magic Kingdom on the 43-square-mile Disney complex near Orlando, EPCOT Center will have two major areas — Future World, featuring the creative efforts of American corporations, and World Showcase, focusing on the culture, traditions and accomplishments of a number of foreign nations.

It is expected to attract eight million to 10 million people in its first year and have 4,000 to 6,000 employees, a number of them from the various countries participating.

Disney officials give glowing descriptions of:

— Spaceship Earth, which immerses the visitor in the first recorded primitive experiences and on through the centuries to the Space Age.

— The Land Pavilion, which covers five acres and is as big as Fantasyland in the Magic Kingdom. Guests will see 18-inch cucumbers growing in outer space and what future man can do about growing food in water.

— The Energy Exhibit, with energy storms bursting out around the guests riding through it. Thrashing, snorting dinosaurs will inhabit the huge, misty swamp. Visitors will become participants in a "geological enfoldment" in which the earth trembles with volcanic eruptions and flaming lava flows toward the spectators.

— Century 3, featuring a curving screen eight stories high giving the audience views of outer space and inside a molecule. Guests will see robot mining, an undersea habitat, underground homes, desert farming.

World Showcase provides boat trips down the rivers of Germany or Mexico's Xochomilco Gardens. Tourists can wander through the Eiffel Tower, a Moroccan walled city and a Costa Rican fishing village.

Japan's architectural attraction will be a feudal fortress, and beckoning guests into the Italian pavilion will be a Venetian piazza.

Disney World Publicity Director Charles Ridgway says the techniques used to present the concepts in EPCOT "are greater in scope and sophistication than any yet developed by the Disney imagineers." That's the corps of California-based creators responsible for the company's supply of spectacular fantasy.

Disney has formed advisory boards of consultants and specialists to guide the development and operation of the different technological innovations that will go into the World Showcase pavilions sponsored by American corporations.

Some of these creations will have spinoffs into broader commercial applications, these experts say.

For instance, the Land Pavilion will demonstrate the latest technology in growing crops in inhospitable areas of the world and in controlling pests, says Dr. Merle H. Jensen, a horticultural futurist at the University of Arizona's environmental research laboratory in Tucson.

"We want to show the people that agriculture can be exciting," Jensen says.

The pavilion, sponsored by Kraft Foods Inc. and costing about $35 million, "will demonstrate that we can feed the masses of the world in the future even though much of our present farm land is disappearing," he says.

Disney officials say the new EPCOT Center will be the focal point which will be constantly coming up with new ideas which can be applied to daily life.

They point to a number of innovations in other parts of its vast complex in waste water treatment, solid waste disposal, its central energy plant, land development, conservation and other fields.

EPCOT comes on the heels of Disney's success with Disney World.

Its Magic Kingdom theme park chalked up its 100 millionth visitor last year and is already making big plans to celebrate its "Ten-Cennial" next year.

By the Oct. 1, 1982 opening date of the new attraction, the entertainment giant will have a total investment in Florida of $1.3 billion — $500 million in Disney World and the estimated $800 million cost of EPCOT.

In these hard economic times, a persistent question dogs Disney officials.

Are you really going to go through with the grandiose plans in the middle of a recession and the uncertain gas supply-and-price situation which may curtail vacation travel?

The unqualified answer is yes.

"We have faith in our ability to create the type of entertainment attraction that will draw people regardless of what happens to the economy," says Lindquist, who with Walt Disney launched California's Disneyland in 1955.

One reason for confidence is the project's financing. Disney doesn't have to use someone else's money, at high interest rates; it is using large cash reserves of its own for construction.

"We don't expect to borrow any money," says Disney's board chairman, Card Walker.

Another reason for confidence is that the foreign and corporate participants are footing $300 million of the $800 million cost, Lindquist says. They sign 10-year contracts providing for annual payments beginning with construction.

As to the uncertainties of the economy, fuel and the vacation traveler, Disney feels that the vacation habits of the American family are undergoing a change to overcome the high costs of travel.

"It's more of a one-destination concept now," Lindquist says. "It's no more packing the kids in the car and taking off for two or three weeks with stops along the way. We feel confident that we are very often that destination."

Ridgway also points to the recent growth in the number of international tourists to Disney attractions. Because of favorable currency exchange rates, more foreigners are visiting this country than ever before.

"Recreation also becomes more important in bad (economic) periods," Ridgway says.

Lindquist's confidence is based on years of selling the concept to foreign governments and hammering out agreements with such corporate giants as General Motors, Exxon, General Electric, American TeT Center.

The nations are Canada, the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Morocco, Costa Rica and Mexico.

In Future World, the American corporations will sponsor and operate pavilions focusing on energy, transportation, art, science, the land, seas and others.

The attractions built on a 600-acre site will be linked to each other and the rest of the widespread Disney complex by various transportation systems and walkways.

Each pavilion will make full use of the company's audio-animatronics system for animating figures of people, animals and objects. Various new technologies such as laser beams, movable theaters, visual screen techniques and projection will be used.

Says John Hench, senior vice president and the top man of the creative division, about the company founder's dream for EPCOT:

"Walt believed if people got the right information, they would take the right action. He envisioned a place where people could come and get the best information so they would have no trouble deciding on the best course of action.

"That was Walt's special ability. He could reach people. He had a deep understanding of people."

Old Photos Need Care

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Photo albums with coated, chemical adhesive pages and clear plastic sleeves may be hazardous to old negatives and prints, says Prof. Donald Anderson.

The glue eats fiber in fiber-based photographic papers the way a moth eats wool, says the chairman of the University of Louisville's fine arts department.

"Rubber cement is worse," Anderson says, because it will eventually discolor or streak the prints and make them disintegrate.

Anderson suggests collectors of old negatives and photos make their own albums, using acid-free, rag paper from commercial supply stores and library paste or flour and water.

If photos cannot be removed from the old albums without damage, Anderson suggests placing acid-free paper on top of them between the pages.

All photos, slides and film should be kept cool and dry. Those from the 1920s and 1930s particularly need proper storage, he says, because they are on nitrate-based film that can catch fire spontaneously and explode.

The professor syas many early movies have been lost to spontaneous combustion because they were shot on nitrate-based film.

Reading Habit Is Scrutinized

NEW YORK (UPI) — Newspaper readers' personal interests and reading habits tend to be similar whether they read a small paper or large, even though smaller papers most often circulate in smaller communities.

This finding was reported by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc., based on an analysis of 3,000 interviews done for a study to determine how the public gets its news.

Readers of both size papers gave the top eight positions to eight identical subjects, but not all in the same order. The only subjects that both groups ranked identically were best food buys in first place, and sports, in eighth.

BUILDING A BETTER WAY OF LIFE MEANS MORE THAN JUST BUILDING HOMES.

It means caring about the people you build for. It means actively working for a healthier environment, better communities, and a brighter future. And that's what Tipton Builders, Inc. is here for.

The building techniques we perfected have allowed us to give people good quality, affordable housing. Tipton Builders, Inc. homes are historically high in resale value, because we believe in giving people the most home for the money. Our neighborhoods are safe, attractive assets to the community, because we work hard to make them that way.

Wherever we build, Tipton Builders, Inc. provides good-paying, full-time jobs for competent men and women. And we don't just build and leave. We participate. In civic, charity, school and environmental activities within the community.

Where there are no trees, we plant them. Where there are trees and streams, we go to extremes to preserve them.

At Tipton Builders, Inc., we do, indeed, belief that building a better way of life means more than just building homes. Look around you. We're building it.

'Down East' Americans Enjoy A Quiet Excitement

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

DRY MILLS, Maine (UPI) — Mrs. Berenice Prince is 86 and she does not want your help walking up and down stairs, like when she goes to the breadbox mailbox across the road and surveys what excitement abounds in Dry Mills.

"Lots of excitement here. Enough. Yep," she said.

("Yep" for yes blooms as thick in rural Maine as pine trees and is delivered crisply, like a good potato chip).

Mrs. Prince looks south on Raymond Road, down to the intersection with state highway 26. "There was excitement down there when the Verrill place burned down. Yep.

"The flames took that big fine three-story mansion. Got the barn, too, and all the cattle," she said.

When was all the excitement?

"Oh, 1914," Mrs. Prince said.

Dry Mills was first a pre-colonial Indian settlement, then a center for farming and logging, later a mill center and now is a place of white frame cottages, American flags on poles, a lake and a summer refuge from traffic, noise, parking meters and mass anything.

It is the kind of place where the yellow "Deer Crossing" roadside sign is in the middle of town. Not unnaturally, Dry Mills lies near Pleasant River.

Mark and Scott Richardson, the brothers who retreated from Portland to take over the 80-year-old town general store, have put out signs. The "Pizza And Italian Sandwiches" sign serves locals in a state which perhaps has more pizza parlors than lobster dens.

For the tourists is the storefront sign "Worms and Crawlers." Dry Mills may not be Madison Avenue but it has its smarts. Tourists bring income and are served.

Dry Mills is no trap. The Richardson brothers cite the recent day when a German-made auto came with burping engine into Woody Wood's garage across the road. "The driver introduced himself as President Carter's minister in Washington and said his church was five blocks from the White House and what, please, was wrong with his engine.

"Well, Woody fixed it in a few minutes and the President Carter's minister asked how much and Woody said nothing because it wasn't much and the minister insisted on paying $10. And Woody said well, if it pleased a tourist to pay $10..." Scott Richardson said.

Before tourists were recognized as a resource, Mrs. Prince, her mother, her grandmother and the Indians called the local body of water Dry Pond. Now, stocked with trout and other tourist ticklers, Dry Pond is called Crystal Lake. In the time of Dry Pond there were two cottages at water's edge. Now, in the era of Crystal Lake, Michael Davis, 57, goes into his garage, opens the freezer and pulls out a deer skin. "I buy and sell 'em. Yep," he said.

Davis spent most of 30 years as a truck driver. Then he "lost patience" with the road life. He came back to his roots. And the outdoors life of Dry Mills.

Beside the garage sit two outhouse-sized cabins on sled runners. In winter he drags them out onto the ice of Dry Pond (locals have some trouble remembering to call it Crystal Lake).

Through a hole in the bottom he cuts through the ice and lowers the fishing line from a jig stick. A jig stick is not longer than your forearm and has cross sticks and is laid at the side of the hole, the baited and hooked line down in the water. When a fish bites, the stick jiggles.

That's fun for Davis. Work and also pleasure is the trapping and the dealing in skins. Hunters brought in 59 deer skins last season, getting paid $4 to $7 for the hides Davis sells to tanners.

A muskrat skin brings about the same. A fox skin will fetch $12 to $85, an otter skin $40 to $90. A 'coon may fetch from $2.50 to $50. The big deal is the fisher.

"A fisher is a big vicious animal in the cat family," Davis said. "It is brownish black." With an outdoorsman's respect, he said, "The fisher is the only animal that can and will eat a porcupine. Yep."

Back beside the two three-story Christmas trees in front of her home, Mrs. Prince smiled. Yep, indeed, Dry Mills has been on the map.

She spent 30 years as town postmistress and remembers the day more than 40 years ago when she was informed that the late James Farley, President Franklin Roosevelt's postmaster general, was coming to call.

"I reckoned that Dry Mills should do it right," she said. "So when Mr. Farley drove up, we had a reception committee — myself and George Quinn, the mail carrier. Mr. Farley was very polite."

"Yep."

Cancel Hunt For Barber

SAMBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Up to their napes in inquiries, city fathers have called off a search for a barber. After combing the hills for 18 months searching for a barber, they say they are a hair away from luring their former barber back.

"I don't want any more barbers calling me," Mayor John Vancleave said Tuesday. "I have heard from a bunch — probably 40 or 50."

Samburg, a community of 550 on the south shore of Reelfoot Lake in northwestern Tennessee, began its barber search last year after the old barber — whom Vancleave never could recall by name — moved to Kentucky. For the past year and a half, the town's menfolk were forced to drive 20 miles round trip for haircuts.

Vancleave and the city commissioners decided to renovate the old city hall for a barber shop to entice a barber to locate there. That was when Samburg's barber search became national news.

Vancleave said the town's former barber is deaf and cannot speak, so city officials have been talking to the barber's children.

"I hope things will be worked out soon," the mayor said.

Climax To Ocean Voyage

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — When record-smashing solo sailor Philip Weld docked here after 17 days, 23 hours and 12 minutes at sea, he was greeted with a silver trophy that had made the same journey in less than 12 hours.

Officials of the singlehanded transatlantic race used Emery Air Freight to fly the silver prize from England just before Weld completed his wind-powered trip, days earlier than expected.

It marked the first time in the 20-year history of the race that the winner's trophy was brought to the United States. Weld, a 65-year-old Gloucester, Mass., resident, will accept the prize formally at a London ceremony in November.

Swamp Rats...

into a quiet slow-moving body of water. Underneath, the travelers were told, currents pushed in opposite directions as deep as 90 feet, proving that many years before, Frank Bell had been a much larger fall and the French Broad a much mightier river.

Here, the test of the travelers' arms was supreme. Slow steady forward strokes, plenty of them, were needed to gain the last three miles of water that lay between them and the end. The scenery changed, too. Signs of civilization appeared; trash in the river, a train trestle and five or six fishermen having no luck. The sense of isolation from the world slipped away.

Bone-tired, chilly and sunburned, the group pulled the rafts out of the water they had ridden for nine hours. Numbed emotionally and physically, they exchanged handshakes and headed for a hot meal and a good night's sleep. It doesn't take long to turn swamp rats into river rats....

The White House Years Recalled

A diminutive 82-year-old lady on one crutch is the unseen star among the cast of superstars in "Backstairs at the White House," returning to NBC-TV Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday (Aug. 24, 25, 26 and 28).

She is Lillian Rogers Parks, who recounted the half-century she and her mother, Maggie Rogers, spent as maids in the White House in her 1961 best-seller on which the drama is based.

Mrs. Parks, a key figure in the promotion of the film, inevitably is asked who her favorite President was. She won't say, but interviewers get the impression it was Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"President and Mrs. Roosevelt were wonderful and easy to work with," she says. "They loved each other dearly. But there was a little ice there, always.

"Once, during World War II, I overheard him say to her, 'I wish you'd go see the boys for me.' I thought they were talking about their sons at first. But they were talking about boys in the service."

Lillian is fair-skinned, like her mother. Their racial heritage is Black, Caucasian and Roanoke Indian. They could have "passed for white," says Lillian. "But that would have meant moving away from home." 'Home' was the old Foggy Bottom ghetto of Washington.

Maggie was employed in 1909. Lillian, an expert seamstress, came on in 1930, when she was desperate for work. But she had been in and out of the White House since she was 12, when President William Howard Taft surprised her sampling his outsized tub.

But in her own tenure of 31 years, Lillian saw countless world leaders and visiting royalty. "Nikita Khrushchev reminded me of a small boy," she recalls, "and Winston Churchill was a jolly old soul. He came to the White House for a secret meeting during the year and he'd be wheelin' President Roosevelt all around and they'd be arguin' and arguin'."

Administrations changed like seasons, she remembers, "and you had to make the change in an hour. You should have seen the staff work! I'd been packing Mrs. Hoover's clothes for a week. She didn't want to go. She was very hurt because her husband didn't win re-election."

Maggie died in 1953 at 79 and Lillian left the White House seven years later as the Kennedys were moving in.

Mystery Concludes

Steve Shaw and Katy Kurtzman, two of Hollywood's most talented young performers, have key roles in "Child of Glass," concluding Sunday, Aug. 24, on Disney's Wonderful World (7 p.m. on NBC-TV). Others in the cast are Anthony Zerbe, Nina Foch and Barbara Barrie.

Murder and mystery continue to stalk Dumaine Mansion as Alexander Armsworth (Shaw) tries to unravel the 100-year-old riddle that would free the ghost of Inez Dumaine.

The Armsworths (Barrie and McGuire) arrange a magnificant Halloween gala and the town's finest citizens attend. With time running out, Alexander tries to break away from the festivities and solve the mystery. But Inez appears and is captivated by the celebration.

The ghost's dog also takes on earthly form and chases the Armsworth's cat, wreaking havoc and turning the party into shambles. Alexander takes out his anger on Inez, who disappears with tears in her eyes.

Instantly regretting his behavior, the boy searches everywhere for the ghost and eventually ends up in the hayloft. Unbeknown to him, Timmons (Zerbe), the Dumaine caretaker who was fired by Mr. Armsworth, is waiting to set the barn afire.

Alexander manages to escape the flames, but Timmons catches sight of him and chases after the boy. Alexander hides in a nearby spring house and, in his fright, loses his footing and plummets down the same well where Inez was murdered 100 years before.

Seeing the fire from the house, Mr. and Mrs. Armsworth quickly rush to the scene, believing Alexander is trapped inside.

Stands Alone

"Final Chapter — Walking Tall," the true story of a modern day hero, is ABC's Sunday Night Movie, Aug. 24 (9 to 11:15 p.m.). Bo Svenson, who also starred in "Part Two, Walking Tall," again stars as Tennessee sheriff Buford Pusser who died in a mysterious car crash in 1974.

In 'Final Chapter,' the incorruptible lawman painfully relives (in flashbacks) the murder of his wife in an ambush set for him. The men who killed her — and who are not likely to rest easy until they have also killed him — are still at large.

In the community where Pusser has stood firmly as sheriff, sometime stretching the law in favor of order, a movement against him has begun. He's extremely concerned, because it's an election year and many people are grumbling that his rough and unorthodox methods are no longer acceptable.

He knows that overstepping his bounds could cost him the election. Even so, the stubborn, unintimidated lawman goes outside his jurisdiction to smash up a gambling and prostitution operation that has been functioning by staying beyond his reach.

As the 'pleasure palace' burns, so do Pusser's chances for reelection. Then, ironicly, just as he is rejected by his own people he is adopted as a hero by the nation when his movie biography, "Walking Tall," is released.

Although he is now a national figure — about to play himself in the film's sequel — Pusser is still determined to serve as sheriff again. This decision is motivated by the fact that he wants to finish the cleanup job he began with his already famous exploits.

It is then, with his return to office an immediate threat to the lawless forces that have tried in every way to destroy him, that Pusser — an excellent driver in a new car — is killed in a highway accident.

The Right Place

Cincinnati Reds' outfielder Cesar Geronimo said he just happened to be in the right place at the right time when he became Nolan Ryan's 3,000th strikeout victim recently. He said the same thing when pitcher Bob Gibson accomplished the same feat in 1974.

TENNESSEE LAWMAN BUFORD PUSSER (Bo Svenson) stands alone against the hoodlums who murdered his wife in The ABC Sunday Night Movie "Final Chapter — Walking Tall," August 24, 9 to 11:15 p.m.

In 10th Season

"Masterpiece Theater," a PBS series going into its 10th season, will air six miniseries during 1980-81, beginning with "Crime and Punishment." The adaptation of Dostoevsky's novel, starring John Hurt and Sian Phillips, will air Sept. 28 through Oct. 19.

This will be followed by "Pride and Prejudice."

The two latest dramas to be added to the schedule are "Testament of Youth," based on Vera Brittain's autobiographical indictment of war, and "Therese Raquin."

Two other miniseries are to be announced.

This season will bring to 58 the number of productions presented on "Masterpiece Theater" since it debuted a decade ago with "The First Churchills."

'Stepford' Stars

Audra Lindley and Mason Adams will be toplining the cast of "The Revenge of the Stepford Wives," slated to air on NBC-TV during the 1980-81 season.

Happy Grandma

Lena Horne says she's one of the happiest grandmothers in the world. That's because granddaughter Amy Lumet, who recently signed with the Ford Modeling Agency, is now considered to be the firm's prime teen-age model. Amy's mom and dad are Gail (Lena's daughter) and Sidney Lumet.

Michele Will Tell

Q: I served in the Air Force during World War II with Al Freeman, Sr. and I wonder if the actor, Al Freeman, Jr., is his son. Please check on this and let me know what his address is. L. LUCAS, SPRING LAKE, N.C.

A: Here's what I've uncovered: The younger Freeman was born in San Antonio, Texas. His father is the late Al Freeman, Sr., who was a well-known pianist, and his parents were divorced when he was nine years old. Al, incidentally, gave a stunning performance as Malcolm X on "Roots: The Next Generations," and is a regular on "One Life to Live." Write to him c/o the show, ABC-TV, 1330 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q: My mother-in-law, who is 75 years old and recently had a stroke, is a great fan of 'Tattoo' on "Fantasy Island." How can I get an autographed picture of him? J. PHIPPS, CASTLE HAYNE, N.C.

A: Send your request to Herve Villechaize, c/o "Fantasy Island," Columbia Pictures TV, 300 Colgems Square, Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Q: Is Dana Plato going to continue on "Diff'rent Strokes"? How old is she and when is her birthday? J. MAY, SARATOGA, N.C.

A: In spite of Dana's gripes about playing 'second banana' to Gary Coleman, she will definitely be back on 'Strokes' this fall. The cute gal was born Nov. 7, 1964, in Maywood, Calif. — and she was adopted three days later.

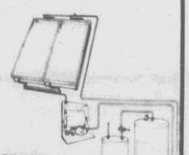

Q: Please tell me something about Anthony Geary, who plays Luke Spencer on "General Hospital." S. BELL, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: I answered this question a couple of months ago, but I've since been besieged with tons of inquiries about him. He must be a real 'fox'! Anyway, here goes: Tony grew up in Coalville, Utah, where he was writing and directing plays while still in high school. During his second year at the University of Utah, Jack Albertson whisked him away to New York and a key role in "The Subject Was Roses" on Broadway. He's guested on several nighttime shows and was a 'regular' on daytime's "Bright Promise" (he played David Lockhart). Tony's single and lives in Los Angeles.

Problem Is Depth

The successful reign of Pat Dye has come to an end at East Carolina University, with the former coach now calling the shots at Wyoming. It appears to be an uphill battle for the Pirates this year, since the team has lost 14 starters, including some key positions on the line as well as quarterback. "Depth will be a serious problem for us," remarked Ed Emory, the new helmsman.

Roles Were Interesting

. The crew referred to the eight actors who played Chief Executives as 'Mr. President-of-the-Week' during filming of "Backstairs at the White House," currently being telecast on NBC.

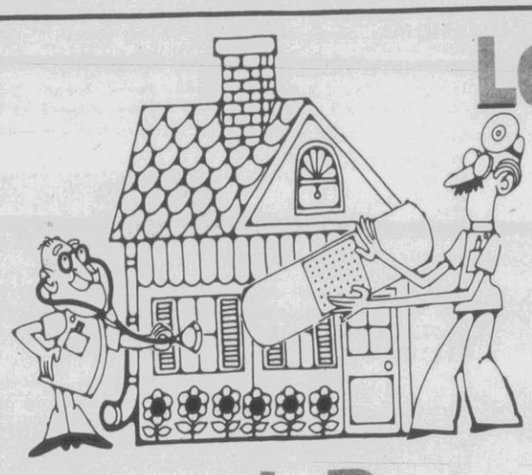

In the drama the Presidents are portrayed by Victor Buono (Taft), Robert Vaughn (Wilson), George Kennedy (Harding), Ed Flanders (Coolidge), Larry Gates (Hoover), John Anderson (Roosevelt), Harry Morgan (Truman) and Andrew Duggan (Eisenhower). One by one, each spent about a week on the sets.

"Playing a President imposes an obligation on an actor to prepare himself through research to picture the man as a human being rather than some noble symbol," says Vaughn. "In this case, the research was all in the remarkable script."

Duggan agrees and points out that Producer Ed Friendly and Director Michael O'Herlihy to attempt intricate facial makeup to make the actors resemble the Presidents. "They relied, after hair style, certain props, and wardrobe, on the actors' interpretations," says Duggan.

"Their respect for us as performers made this a pleasant and rewarding job."

Anderson admits he was tempted to do an impression of F.D.R. "But that could have turned into a disastrous caricature," he declares.

They Will Never Be Forgotten

The famed team of Abbott and Costello did not make their film debut, as is commonly believed, in the 1941 comedy "Buck Privates." Bud Abbott and Lou Costello were first seen on the screen the year before, in "One Night in the Tropics."

Whether or not their origins on the silver screen are obscured in memory, their contribution to screen comedy is certainly not overlooked in "Funny Business," to be broadcast Wednesday, Aug. 27, on CBS-TV (8 to 10 p.m.). The special is devoted to the great comedians who made the 30's and 40's rich with laughter, at a time it was greatly needed. First, there was a depression and then a war.

The movies were young and the great art of silent comedy had been abandoned when the screen began to talk. Broadway, vaudeville and burlesque were emptied of their clowns, who went to Hollywood to work in what was a new medium. There were no rules or traditions to hamper them, and the first two decades of talkies formed, perhaps, the richest comic era of the movies.

Have Been Added

Peter Cushing, Alice Krige, Kenneth More and Flora Robson have been added to the cast of "A Tale of Two Cities," now lensing in England and France.

Chris Sarandon stars in the dual role of Charles Darnay and Sidney Carton in the drama that will be presented on CBS-TV.

Raitt's numbers are "Runaway," "Home" and "Sugar Mama," and Weather Report comes up with "Birdland" and "Teen Town."

Winchester and Harris wind the program up with "Nothing But a Breeze."

Clubs Important

With cutbacks effective in high school sports starting this fall, booster clubs have taken on a new importance, since school boards are faced with increasingly stingy budgets, failed bond issues and the added burdens of equal opportunity.

KEN KERCHEVAL stars as Cliff Barnes, the arch enemy of the Ewing family, on "Dallas," airing Fridays (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

'Dallas' Season

"Dallas" enters the 1980-81 season with millions of viewers anxiously awaiting the answer to the television question of the year . . . "Who shot J.R.?"

The opening episodes will focus on the six known suspects and their motives as J.R. faces an unknown fate on the operating table. The suspects are his wife, Sue Ellen; her sister Kristin; Cliff Barnes; lawyer Alan Beam; banker Vaughan Leland; and widow Marilee Stone.

As the season progresses, Bobby is forced to take over Ewing Oil and discovers how corrupting power can be. Pam will find out the truth about her mother, long assumed dead, and Ray Krebbs will learn about his past. This knowledge will shake the very foundation of the Ewing family.

Love will also bloom at Southfork as Lucy meets and marries Mitch Cooper in a wedding befitting a Ewing. Donna Culver will reenter Ray's life, but he must also deal with Cliff Barnes as his competition.

Patriots Meet Eagles

The New England Patriots and the Philadelphia Eagles, two teams with high hopes of reaching the National Football League playoffs, will meet in a pre-season contest to be seen on the ABC television network, Sunday, Aug. 24 (12:30-3:30 p.m.). Network sportscasters Frank Gifford, Howard Cosell and Fran Tarkenton will report the action from the Patriots' Shaefer Stadium in Foxboro, Mass.

The Patriots failed to make the playoffs in 1979, coach Ron Erhardt's first year at the helm, but there is enough talent in the 1980 squad to instill a good deal of optimism.

Steve Grogan leads the New England offense, which topped the NFL in several categories last season. Grogan posted career highs in pass completions (206), pass attempts (423), passing yardage (3,280) and touchdown passes (28).

Grogan's targets are exceptional. Wide receivers Stanley Morgan, with 44 catches for 1,002 yards and seven touchdowns, and Harold Jackson, with 45 catches for 1,013 yards and seven touchdowns, became the first Patriots ever to gain 1,000 or more yards receiving in a single season. Tight end Russ Francis caught 39 passes for 557 yards and five TD's.

Ex-Vikings standout Chuck Foreman and top-rated rookie Vegas Ferguson join Andy Johnson and Sam Cunningham — the club's top rusher for the past five years — as the main cogs in the running game. As of this writing, Cunningham was one of a group of Pats missing from training camp, due to contract problems. The others included defensive end Richard Bishop and cornerback Mike Haynes.

New England is basically a 3-4 defensive team. Up front, ends Bishop, Mel Lunsford and Tony McGee will share the duties alongside tackle Ray Hamilton. Inside man Steve Nelson and outside linebacker Rod Shoate head the linebacking corps.

Cornerbacks Haynes and Raymond Clayborn, and safety Tim Fox highlight a fine secondary unit, and Englishman John Smith, the 1979 NFL scoring leader in his department, will handle the placekicking chores.

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS quarterback Steve Grogan will be back leading the team's offense when the Pats meet the Philadelphia Eagles in a pre-season NFL game to be telecast by ABC Sports on Sunday, Aug. 24 (12:30-3:30 p.m.).

Dick Vermeil's Eagles are one of the NFC's power teams. From a 4-10 mark in Vermeil's first season in 1976, Philly has put together records of 9-7 and 11-5 the past two seasons, both good enough for wild-card playoff berths.

Quarterback Ron Jaworski is at the controls of the Eagles' offense and is making great strides. Leading the receiving brigade is Harold Carmichael, who is beginning his 10th year in the league, and has set an NFL record for having caught at least one pass in 112 consecutive games.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — The intense heat of the summer months, coupled with the pressures caused by the AFTRA strike, seems to be taking its toll on casts of several of TV's top series.

The feud between BONNIE FRANKLIN and VALERIE BERTINELLI, the mother-daughter duo on "ONE DAY AT A TIME," has reached the point that neither speaks to the other — in private OR in public! The fracas, apparently stemmed from a discussion about who gets the most air time.

There's double trouble on the "EIGHT IS ENOUGH" set. LANI O'GRADY's developed a rather bad habit of reporting to work each day not knowing her lines. It's caused so much confusion for the rest of the cast that her character (Mary) is being written out of several scenes. To make matters worse, DIANNE KAY has been suspended without pay for refusing to do a scene implying that she's posing in the nude.

Then there's poor TANYA ROBERTS. Should the newest 'ANGEL' be a brunette? Or maybe a red-head? What about ash blonde? The gal tried all those colors, and now her hair's been dyed so much that it's falling out by the handful!

Although all the "DALLAS" cast has suffered from the heat in that city, CHARLENE TILTON and VICTORIA PRINCIPAL are hotter than anybody else. In fact, they're livid over a producer's whim that the two comely actresses should wear very, very brief bikinis in several of the upcoming episodes. Both have refused to do so — they want to be recognized as 'serious performers,' not 'jigglers.'

New On Daytime

Michael Baselton has been cast in the continuing role of psychologist Tony Perelli in "General Hospital."

Baselton's TV credits include guest appearances on several series. Among them are "Charlie's Angels," "The Incredible Hulk," "Starsky & Hutch," "Police Woman," "Barnaby Jones" and "B.J. and the Bear."

Energy saver: Stay out of hot water.

FOR CHARLES F. LUCE, Chairman of the Board, Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Inc.

Of all the appliances in the average American home, which uses the most energy and which the least? — L.K., Bangor, Maine

● Depending upon the climate, heating and air-conditioning are the main users of energy, at least on a seasonal basis. But right behind them on a daily basis comes the hot-water heater. The least amount of energy is used by items such as the electric can opener. Anyone looking to save energy, and money, can do so most meaningfully on a year-round basis by practicing conservation measures directed at the hot-water heater. A few tips: Use a lower temperature setting on the heater itself; make sure the dishwasher and washing machine are used only with full loads.

The dad who married dear old mom.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is it true that Richard Burton is a very lenient parent? — S.K., York, Pa.

● According to Maria, 19 (whom Burton and Liz Taylor adopted as a baby), home life was not an ongoing state of discipline but a place to learn the right and wrong ways to behave. "Wrong" was poking her tongue out at the maid (that earned Maria her first, and last, spanking from Richard); "right" was being truthful, considerate and never taking advantage of others. The Burtons tried to show their children the value of money and how not to waste it. Maria said her father was the "boss" of the family, one who long ago prepared, via trust funds, for the future of his brood. As to what it's like being the daughter of Liz and Dick, Maria reports: "I think twice before making friends because people think I'm oozing with money."

FOR CATHERINE BACH, star of The Dukes of Hazzard

You say you never think "let's be careful." Is there any exception to this rule? — J.S. Casper, Wyo.

● There are two. In my private life, the only challenge I won't rise to is when it comes to marriage. I was married once before, so I want to be careful when I think of taking another shot at matrimony. In my career, I won't take chances with scripts because I know from experience how even superstars can get ruined with a bad part. And I'm not that big to take risks.

FOR CURT GOWDY, host of American Sportsman

In what way did you help to change Jack Nicklaus's life? — H.C., Joplin, Mo.

● I don't know that it was dramatic as all that. But I was with him at the end of his "Fat Jack" period. The time was the late 60's. Jack, Roone Arledge and I went fishing on the San Juan River in Nicaragua. At the end of the trip, the three of us had lost a total of 42 pounds due to inedible food. That was the beginning of Jack's "new" look. He had lost 16 pounds.

FOR JEFF CONAWAY, co-star of Taxi

Why do you keep rubbing your forehead? Is it a nervous habit? — G.V., Elkhart, Ind.

● Yes. I do it to stop myself from squinting, which is another bad habit — one that I picked up from my older sister, Carla. She got into the habit because she would not wear glasses as a kid. My squinting turns to frowning, which could turn into ugly wrinkles between my eyes. So when I rub my head, I'm trying to rub away those frown lines.

FOR GLORIA SWANSON, actress

Do you see many movies? — J.P., Evansdale, Iowa

● Very, very few — for two reasons. I have been pouring whatever spare time I have into writing my autobiography and, which is more to the point, I am not interested in what is around these days. I am not interested in spending good money and valuable time on porn, destructive stories, cruelty, four-letter words. If I want to be entertained I go to the theater, which isn't as guilty of all those "crimes" as the movies.

FOR BARBARA M. WATSON, Assistant Secretary of State for Consular Affairs

Is there a lighter side to your job? — S.S., Gary, Ind.

● I am in charge of all consular operations worldwide, as well as the second-largest bureau within the Department of State. The responsibilities are enormous and demanding but, like most jobs, there is a lighter side. Usually around 7 or 8 o'clock in the evening after a long and busy day I sit back and relax with members of my staff.

FOR BOB GIRALDI, director of TV commercials

Is the public impressed when a celebrity sells a product? — B.B., Flint, Mich.

● The public is not really concerned with who the "seller" is in the commercial. They don't really care if the star of the commercial is a "superstar" or the guy next door. The public will only buy the message being communicated if it appears to be an honest one. The integrity of the message, not who presents it, is the most important factor.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be a Limit To the Length of Time For Presidential Campaigning?

PRO Senator Howard H. Baker (R.-Tenn.), Senate Minority Leader

I'd like to see a system of four primaries. I would not like to see regional primaries but a system that divides the country north and south along time-zone boundaries. I think you ought to shorten the time that is available for campaigning. You could start the primaries in March and end them in May. One way or another, we have to get away from this business of having an election every Tuesday and every Saturday all the way from January until June.

CON Richard M. Scammon, director, Elections Research Center

I like our present system with primary voting going on steadily from January to June. The voter can see candidates over time, under different conditions in different states, week in and week out. A candidate may weaken on this tough obstacle course; let him poop out in Wisconsin in April, not in the White House after he's elected. And a candidate with limited money can go to the states one at a time and not have to campaign in a dozen all at once.

Bringing Up Baby

How Your Child Grows from Birth to Age 5

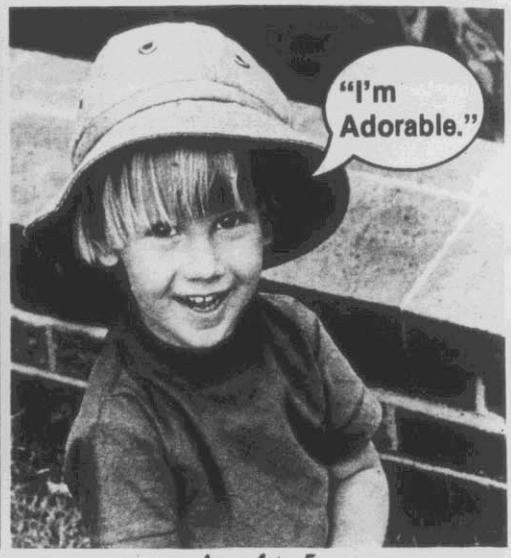

Every child is so unique that pediatricians constantly advise young parents not to pay attention to charts. "When a child is 'ready' to learn a new step, he needs little help to achieve it."

The First Year

Ages 2 to 3

By Dalma Heyn

From the moment of birth, an infant's senses are at the ready: He hears, responds to light and to touch. He wants to grow. And each step in his growth is made possible only by the previous step, which lays out a precise path in a constant, patterned development of his senses.

How long an infant takes to go through each stage is so individual a matter that pediatricians are constantly advising young parents not to pay attention to charts. "When a child is 'ready' to learn a new step, he needs little help to achieve it," writes Dr. Berry Brazelton, the noted Boston pediatrician, in his book, Infants and Mothers. "When he must learn it via mechanisms that are not yet ready, he will spend energies which may be extensively drained from more important areas of his total development."

From birth through the preschool years, your child is literally learning how to learn. It looks easy, but if we interviewed a child learning to build a tower out of three blocks, it's doubtful he'd say it was. It is mainly through playing that he'll develop his fundamental skills. In the years from birth to 5, these are grouped into four interrelated areas: motor, language, cognitive and socioemotional development, which is the process of relating to others while gaining understanding of oneself.

The first year: "I'm so alert!"

The first year is filled with amazing amounts of growth. Between birth and one year, your child is learning about the connections between what he does and how things and people react. He can recognize familiar things and people and respond to them. He begins to smile, make sounds, reach, grasp, hold on to things, sit up, move around, pull up on things, crawl, creep, stand. "It constantly surprises me," says Dr. Brazelton, "how early an infant picks up cues from his environment that lead him to want to become a part of it. That he can sense the climate around him is now well known. But the fact that he is able to tune in and out when stimulation is appropriate or inappropriate to his particular state of the moment can be a reassuring, exciting discovery for his parents...."

Ages 1 to 2: "I'm unique!"

Between 1 and 2 your child is becoming a person: a no-nonsense, independent little person. And while he's becoming a person, your house is becoming a mess: He can now climb, jump, sit, stand, walk, hold a crayon and scribble (after seeing someone else do it first). He can also hold a cup (but not yet drink from it); feed himself (you'll wish he wouldn't); fold paper (after watching someone else do it); pick up and release things (he'll love to play "Dump the Wastebasket"). He is most likely using up to 250 words, in very short sentences, and by the age of 2, he can think about things that are not in sight, can remember where things are kept, which things are to eat and which to wear.

Speaking of things to wear, it is at this age that a baby begins the exciting process of making some choices. "He cannot make large decisions for himself, of course," says Dr. Virginia Pomerantz, a pediatrician at New York Hospital and associate clinical professor at Cornell University Medical College in New York. "You wouldn't ask a preschooler, 'What do you want for dinner?' But you can say to a 2-year-old, 'Would you prefer meat loaf or tuna for dinner? Do you want to wear your red overalls or your blue?' It's only the beginning of the process which will soon have him choosing among more than two things."

Ages 2 to 3: "Me, me, me." And, "No!"

By the age of 2 your child is becoming aware of himself as a person with a separate identity, and he begins to assert his will upon the world — often defiantly. This emerging sense of self creates a pulling away that is often hard for parents who have become used to the dependence exhibited in the first two years. "The 'terrible two's' is really largely in the eye of the beholder," says Dr. Pomerantz. "That 'no!' on the child's part is normal and healthy: If he were as tractable as he was earlier, then it would mean he hasn't grown up — he hasn't been allowed to....There's no advantage whatsoever to having a child remain dependent."

The most dramatic aspect of growth during the months from 2 to 3 is the increased ability to communicate through language. Vocabulary increases to about 900 words, and your little one uses them not only for pointing to specific objects but also to tell you what he's doing. Moreover, he's intent on doing things his way, and temper tantrums abound.

His imagination has grown, too, and he loves make-believe games. He's now fast on his feet — can march to music and walk on tiptoe and jump off a chair and stand on one foot and walk a straight line — and he may try to do all at once. His motor ability has improved: He can make a fist, dress himself (he'll love buttons and snaps) and can put on his own shoes — although not necessarily on the correct feet. He likes to feed himself. He's enmeshed in self-help skills now and on the way to becoming a more competent, self-reliant child.

One more word about typical "terrible two's" behavior: The sudden inflexibility he's developed, the rigid insistence on having everything just so, on time, right now, is part of the

My Feet Were Killing Me ...Until I Discovered the Miracle in Germany!

I was retired from business and traveling in Europe, but not enjoying it at all because my feet were killing me. I hurt all over. I guess God must have had his arms around me because almost by accident I found a device in Germany that gave me instant relief when I put them in my shoes. They were called Flexible Featherspring Foot Supports, and the flexible shock-absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle. And just one pair was all I needed.

I was flabbergasted to find that they were only sold in Europe, so almost right then and there made arrangements to bring them to America.

Over a quarter million Americans have found this blessed relief from foot problems just like V.W., of Cambridge, Maryland, who says: "I am delighted with the supports. The second day I had them I wore them in three different pairs of shoes, from 7 A.M. to 10 P.M., which included two hours at a cocktail party. It's the first cocktail party I have left in years without wishing I could crawl out on my knees."

Here's why Feathersprings work for all of us and why they can work for you. These supports are different from any you may have seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your own feet. They actually imitate the youthful elastic support that nature originally intended your feet to have.

DOCTOR RECOMMENDED

Even doctors are amazed. As Dr. C.O.C., of Tucson, Arizona, wrote us: "Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super–neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is better . . . as a retired physician, this result is amazing."

Maybe all this sounds too good to be true, but H.S.H., of Louisville, Kentucky writes: "I have checked your corporation with (A Consumer Protection Agency) and received an excellent report." And Mrs. E.G.C. wrote us and said: "I didn't know such immediate relief could be obtained for the painful calluses on my foot. I've lived with that pain for years and was told by a podiatrist that foot surgery was the only proper course of treatment. I've been wearing your supports for about two months, and I've not had even a twinge of pain from those calluses. Furthermore, they are shrinking in size and feel softer. I find I am able to stay on my feet for considerably longer periods of time, and I no longer have that 'tired' backache every evening. Thank you again for the vast improvement your product has made in my life."

NO RISK OFFER

If you're suffering pain with corns, calluses, old injuries, painful ankles, burning nerve ends, pain in the balls of your feet, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet, Flexible Feathersprings will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back without question if you are not completely satisfied.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, we can help you. Write for more detailed information; there is no obligation whatsoever. No salesman will call. A Canadian, Mr. J.K., of Ontario, said: "I'm glad I did try them for they proved to be everything you claimed them to be."

Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today—like Mr. J.K., you'll be glad you did!

movement toward separateness. He doesn't want any plans changed or things in his room moved around: It's as if to change anything would be to invalidate a reality that he's just getting a grip on. He's beginning to grasp a few abstract ideas, but tentatively, and he'll cling to them tenaciously so they're not taken away from him. Even the fact that he does just the opposite of what you tell him is heartening when you realize he understands you well enough to do the opposite. He's able to communicate.

Ages 3 to 4: "I have so many questions" (or "why, why, why?").

Whereas the two's were marked by increased language development, the period from 3 to 4 is marked by great cognitive growth. Your child is beginning to reason, and you're answering more questions than you ever dreamed there were to ask. He's learning how things are related to each other and beginning to take control of the world around him by ordering his own universe. He can build with blocks, model with clay, create wholes out of parts, group things together. His thinking process is becoming more sophisticated, and he starts exaggerating and fantasizing and telling lots of made-up stories.

> "The one component that really determines the emotional growth of a child is...love."

His grasp of his own separateness is stronger now, and he is beginning to understand that other people exist, have feelings, are, in fact, just like him. He is forming attachments to other children and beginning to share and take turns and compromise — in short, to relate to others. He's a bit of a show-off now and loves to make others laugh and love him. He's expressing himself verbally, handling his emotions in ways other than kicking and screaming. He's testing the perimeters of his personality, and it's essential for you to let him do so. Says Atlanta pediatrician Sanford Matthews, "In almost all childhood disturbances, the major problem is the mother's inability to let the child separate."

Ages 4 to 5: "I'm so sociable."

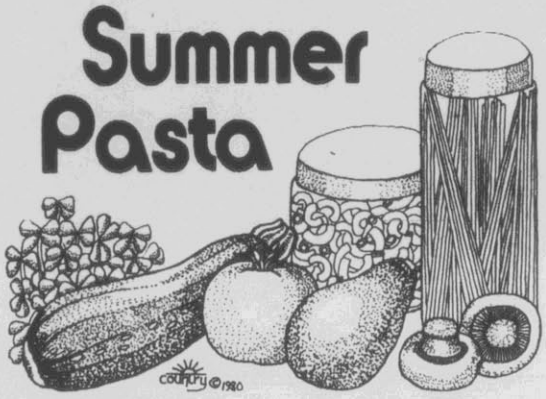

The culmination of a child's early development seems to take place in the period between 4 and 5: During this one year he is becoming more organized in his thinking and able to relate to the world in acceptable ways. He's likable, sociable, adorable. Enjoy this period of talking and listening and communicating — he's now able to discuss his feelings, and he's loving language, making up words, using slang, swearing (not only for the sound, but for the response as well).

From 4 to 5 he's seeking less approval from adults, more from himself and other children. He's beginning to develop a conscience and learning the laws of "intrinsic motivation" — seeking to increase his own feelings of competence. He's becoming a social being. "Self-approval becomes a critical matter when you're loved properly," says Dr. Matthews, "because a person given enough love to become independent can then grow up and really love on his own with passion and excitement. So the process is continued...."

It is impossible to explore in a limited space the myriad developmental changes of the growing child. But if you keep in mind a few principles of growth, you'll be able to relax a lot more and celebrate the process with your child rather than worrying too much about your role in it. Here are a few additional thoughts to keep in mind.

- Every child wants to grow. "The one component that really determines the emotional growth of a child is the kind of love that nurtures an individualistic spirit," says Matthews. "We have plenty of scientific evidence that shows that the child who is not loved — even with everything on his part on go — will not grow. It's not vitamins, hormones, protein or carbohydrates that help him — the stuff of growth is love."
- While the growth rate for each child is different, every child's growth has definite direction. As long as you do not interrupt the process, he will very naturally move out of himself and toward wider social relationships. He'll think more, become more expressive, generous, "human." Trust the process and you'll trust your child more. Inherently, he wants just what you want for him.
- Every child's growth has definite order. Certain events take place at each stage that are essential before he can move on. The child who is rushed through any stage is robbed of a crucial step in a carefully planned process — and he'll always return to the step he missed till he's fulfilled at that level.
- Every child is special. You can see it on the surface — your child has different eyes, skin, hair than other children. He also perceives his life differently from other children. He feels differently about things; he interprets events differently; he has different tendencies, talents, circumstances. We must nurse each child separately, enjoying his uniqueness so that he learns to enjoy it. Only then can he continue his awesome growth process full-steam ahead. FW

Summer Pasta

By Marilyn Hansen

There's a cool way to serve hot cooked pasta. Combine it with a crisp, uncooked, seasoned-vegetable combination that becomes the sauce in the bowl. It's easy, it's fun and it's for now!

MACARONI WITH MUSHROOM-AVOCADO SAUCE

3 cups elbow macaroni (12 ozs.)
1 tablespoon salt
3 or 4 quarts boiling water
½ lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 avocado, peeled and cubed
½ cup chopped watercress
¼ cup chopped scallions
½ cup vegetable oil
3 tablespoons lime juice
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Few twists freshly ground black pepper

For Women, Crime Is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Bettmann Archive

By Nancy Josephson

In 1977 Sandra Brown, a successful New York City businesswoman, formed a company to help other women obtain Federal funds to start their own businesses.

Within three years, prosecutors say, Brown, using dummy corporations, stole more than $10 million from the Small Business Administration and banks in Colorado and New York. Brown, along with her accountant and her attorney, now faces 437 counts of forgery, grand larceny and fraud in one of the longest and most complicated indictments in New York City history.

Brown's arrest is just one of an ever-increasing number involving women. And though this includes an increasing number of arrests for violent crimes, the real growth has been in white-collar crime — embezzlement, forgery, fraud, kickbacks, price-fixing schemes. There were roughly 60,000 women arrested on such charges in 1978, according to Government reports.

In fact, the number of women arrested for fraud in the five-year period, 1973 to 1978 soared 49.2 percent, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's latest Uniform Crime Reports, while the number of men arrested for similar offenses during that period rose only 13.2 percent. Similarly, the number of women arrested for embezzlement jumped 47.9 percent in that five-year period, compared with an increase of only 1.5 percent for men during that time.

"Yes, we are hearing more about women embezzlers these days," says Leonard F. Smith, technical director for American Management Associations, a group studying the trends in crimes against business. "In an environment that encourages women to do more than they have been doing, it is plausible that some women will turn their abilities to undesirable ends."

There have been other stories of women dabbling in financial shenanigans.

• Margaret Veca quietly drained $95,614 out of the bank where she worked as a teller and went into hiding for four years before turning herself in and pleading guilty to embezzlement.

• School board secretary Jane Woodruff spent 14 months in prison for embezzling $9,233 worth of the board's money, which she obtained by writing checks to substitute teachers and cashing them herself.

• Ruth Handler, founder and former president of Mattel, Inc., was indicted along with four former colleagues for conspiracy, mail fraud and making false financial statements to the Securities and Exchange Commission. She was ordered by a Federal judge to do 2,500 hours of community service and pay a $57,000 fine.

What startles so many is that these women are bright and capable, often well educated and employed in responsible jobs.

"I don't see why we should be surprised that women are coming into their own as burglars, auto thieves and embezzlers," says Dr. Freda Adler, a criminologist and Rutgers University professor who believes that as women grow more assertive, their involvement in crime will increase. In 1978, Adler says, women accounted for roughly 16 percent of all arrests nationwide, up from only 5 percent five years before.

Adler stops short of linking the rise in crime to women's liberation. But she claims that women in prison today "are different from the more docile prisoner of 15 or 20 years ago." They definitely are more assertive.

Dr. Rita Simon, a University of Illinois sociology professor, maintains that as more women enter the work force, more are in a position to embezzle and steal. "It's a matter of training and opportunity," says Simon. "It takes some skill to skim money from a bank. But if you work in a bank, you can learn how to take a little off the top."

Bettmann Archive

Women criminals today are far more subtle than the infamous Bonnie Parker, partner of Clyde.

The most surprising fact for many people is that women, even with increased opportunity, would commit these crimes at all. "Both men and women want to perceive women as the soft, gentle sex, incapable of committing crime," notes Adler.

What is the prime motivator in white-collar crimes? Typically, white-collar criminals steal because of greed, not need. (In some cases, though, economic need is a definite factor.) A recent University of Minnesota study on employee theft found that higher pay didn't discourage people from stealing. People in higher-paying jobs often have greater access to merchandise and money — and access counts.

Recent law-enforcement efforts to curb white-collar crime have focused primarily on fraud — particularly minor schemes by small-time offenders. The drive has paid off. The number of jail days sentenced and served for white-collar crimes soared to 2,921 days in 1978, up from 1,561 days the year before.

There has been some criticism of law-enforcement officials and judges for not cracking down hard on female white-collar criminals. In one recent experiment Dr. Adler provided a group of judges with a hypothetical case of a white-collar offender convicted of two counts of forgery with checks totaling $355. As part of the experiment Adler told some of the judges the offender was female and told others the offender was male. The judges were then asked to provide a sentence for the crime. The result: Judges were more lenient with a female offender than with a male, Adler says.

This, of course, could change. Sister Esther Heffernan, a sociologist with Boys Town Center in Washington, D.C., notes that, until recently, courts assumed that men play the dominant role in crimes. "But there's a whole area of crime in which women are acting independently," she says. "When you look at the gross number of arrests, there is a proportionally larger number of arrests for women in such areas as fraud, embezzlement and theft. To some extent the public image of women being forced into this has covered up some fairly independent activity."

The 12 Zodiac Sun Signs crafted in handcast Pewter bells by Crown & Rose of London.

For centuries, the signs of the Zodiac have been a source of inspiration to artists. Now sculptor and craftsman have combined in a truly remarkable achievement. Together, they have created elegantly proportioned bells of solid hand cast pewter surmounted by original sculpted figures representing the individual sun signs. It is a collection certain to delight anyone who appreciates fine works of art.

Created by Englefield's of London, world's oldest pewterers.
Founded in 1700, Englefields is the only pewterer permitted to use the historic Crown & Rose "touchmark," insignia of the finest pewter in the world. Crown & Rose pewter is still made by the original methods of handcasting, hand turning, and smithing which produce a quality and detail unequaled anywhere.

We wish it were possible for this advertisement to let you cradle a bell in your hand, to appreciate its solid, weighty feel; turn it, to examine how the richly worked detailing of the figures contrasts with the soft contours of the bell base; or ring it, and enjoy its pure, warm tone.

An original interpretation by a renowned sculptor.
Jean Spouse, an English sculptress renowned for her miniatures, was specially commissioned to create the figures for this collection. For months before beginning, Ms. Spouse immersed herself in the study of Zodiac-inspired art and consulted scores of astrological texts to determine the true character of the signs themselves. The resulting figures are eloquent testimony to her deep understanding of the subject.

The famous Crown & Rose touchmark appears on each bell's clapper, and next to it is the personal stamp of the craftsman responsible for the bell. This is your assurance of the finest pewter in the world.

The "Undiscovered" Precious Metal.
Crown & Rose cast pewter is, after platinum, gold, and silver, the 4th most valuable metal available to the artist craftsman today. It is totally resistant to corrosion. Prized since Roman times, it has graced the tables of nobility for centuries and can justly be described as the metal of kings. Unlike silver, it does not tarnish, retaining its glowing patina indefinitely. No polishing is necessary; just wash occasionally in mild detergent and gently dry with a soft cloth.

An American Heritage...Tomorrow's Treasured Heirloom.
Crown & Rose pewter was first brought to America by John Townsend of London, the lineal predecessor of Englefields, Ltd., in 1748. Over 50% of the marked heirloom pewter in this country's museums bears a touchmark of this establishment.

London pewter in the 18th Century was the standard of quality for the western world, prized both for its beauty and practicality. In his authoritative work, "A History of American Pewter," C. F. Montgomery records this description of an American frontiersman's log cabin in the early 1800's.

"...in the interior supported on pins and driven into logs were our shelves. Upon these shelves my sister displayed a host of pewter plates, basins, dishes and spoons all scoured and bright: It was none of your new-fangled pewter made of lead, but the best London pewter which our father himself bought off John Townsend, the manufacturer."

Englefields are the direct successors of John Townsend and his master pewterers, and the only firm authorized to use the historic Crown & Rose touchmark. Standards and methods have changed very little over the centuries. Several of the molds still used in the crucial casting process were actually made by John Townsend himself!

Great craftsmanship is never cheap. But it is interesting to note that while the cost of Crown & Rose pewter has risen steadily over the years, the value of Townsend pieces in antique sales has risen even higher. The beautiful Crown & Rose pewter you buy today will undoubtedly become your treasured heirloom of tomorrow.

An Elegant Gift.
No christening, birthday or anniversary gift will be more appreciated than these individual and beautiful reminders of one's birth sign. Even if the occasion is several weeks off, we suggest you order your gift bells now to avoid finding one or more sold out.

A Genuine Limited Edition.
While you can appreciate your Zodiac bells for their beauty alone, be assured they are genuine collector's pieces. Only 3,250 of each bell will be issued worldwide, and then the molds will be rendered inoperable and presented to a major London museum.

The authenticity of each bell is guaranteed by the individual number engraved inside the bell body. Crown & Rose Zodiac bells are obtainable only through our offerings and not in any store. Individual bells cost $52.50, the entire set of 12 $595.00.

Crown & Rose Unconditional Guarantee.
Every bell is unconditionally guaranteed. If you are not completely satisfied, return them within 30 days after receipt for a full refund. (We'll reimburse you for postage as well.) Knuckling Down with the Brothers Niekro

Bet you can't name the only two brother acts who have won more games than Phil and baby brother Joe. O.K., one is the Perrys.

By Mark Goodman

When the knuckleballing Niekro brothers, Phil (Atlanta Braves) and Joe (Houston Astros) pitch against one another, it seems most anything can happen. Like the time a few years back, when kid brother Joe whacked Phil for a game-winning home run. Moaned Phil: "I'll never hear the end of it. Oh, he won't bring it up all the time, but he'll zing me whenever he can, like on Christmas cards."

The close sibling rivals, now 41 and 35, have faced each other eight times in their careers, with each winning half the games. In truth, the matchups are marked by an absence of Christmas-card spirit. Not because the fellows dislike each other. Quite the opposite: They are genuinely fond of one another and are just as genuinely torn in these clashes, particularly when the outcome is vitally important. "We don't really like it," says Joe. "It's tough on the family, tough on Mom and Dad. And the last couple years have been the toughest. We're not the types to back away from it; after all, our jobs are to pitch. But we'd rather not have to do it."

UPI

Pitchers Joe (left) and Phil Niekro ponder how long it will take them to win as many games as Gaylord and Jim Perry. Their conclusion: 5 or 6 years.

Brother Phil echoes the sentiment. He is particularly galled by rigged matchups to bring the crowds in, which have happened more than once. Still, the unkindest contest of all occurred last season by the dumb luck of the draw. It was in September, with the Braves well out of it this time and the Astros hot on the spikes of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League's Western Division race. To make matters more dramatic, a victory for Phil meant the Niekros would become the first brothers in baseball history to win 20 games apiece in the same season in the same league. (The Perrys — Jim, who is now retired, and Gaylord — turned the trick a few years back in rival leagues.)

At any rate, that is precisely what happened. Not only did Phil outpitch his brother, he also tagged Joe for a two-run double to knock him out of the box. The Niekros had their record, but Joe, of course, never got to pitch in postseason play. (Houston lost to the Reds by 1½ games, the exact margin they were behind when the brothers locked arms.)

"I wanted to see him win 20 games," says Joe, "but not at our expense." Phil plainly felt miserable about it. After the game, one sportswriter described him as "sipping champagne from a cup as if it were vinegar." As Phil glumly put it: "Years from now I guess I'll be thinking how much I cost my brother. But tonight was no time to be thinking such things."

But the off-season, when the boys go home for the holidays to Lansing, Ohio (where they grew up down the street from Phil's old high-school teammate, John Havlicek), is the time to put such unpleasantness aside. "We almost always get together with the family Thanksgiving or Christmas," says Joe. "And last year we saw a lot of each other on the banquet circuit."

Indeed they did, now that they are a brother team to rival, in baseball folklore, the Deans (Dizzy and Daffy) and the Perrys. The Niekros started the 1980 season with a combined total of 334 victories (Phil, 218; Joe, 116) to rank them in third place in the all-time fraternal standing behind the Perrys (494) and that fabled trivia team, the Mathewsons (373; that is, Christy, the Hall of Fame legend, won 373, and brother Henry won zero).

That means that Phil and Joe will eventually have to win more than 500 lifetime games between them to take first place, since Gaylord Perry keeps going on and on. Another 170 wins at their respective ages would be unlikely were it not for the curiosity that both are now knuckleball pitchers.

The knuckleball is baseball's most peculiar and difficult pitch (it is actually thrown not with the knuckles but with the fingertips, and dances to the plate like a volleyball in a wind tunnel), and only a handful of hurlers have ever mastererd it. But the lack of strain used in throwing the knuckler has the saving grace of saving arms: Witness Hoyt Wilhelm, who pitched to the unheard-of age of 49.

"My arm feels stronger every year," says Phil, who usually ranks around the top of the league in innings pitched. "A good five or six more years for us and we can pass those Perrys."

That's the nearest thing to a boast you'll ever hear from Phil Niekro, one of the most popular and unassuming players in the game. Phil has played with the Braves' organization all of his 21 years in professional baseball, is the team's player representative and has won numerous awards for humanitarian service. Joe is also a good-natured fellow, but his career has been spottier. He has really only come into his own in the last few seasons, when he, too, developed a knuckleball.

Where did Phil learn the knuckler? From his father, Phil Sr., a local celebrity around the coal mining towns of Ohio and West Virginia for his pitching prowess with a Polish sandlot team. And why didn't Joe learn it, too? Well, when young Phil was taught the pitch at age 11, Joe was only 5. As he bluntly remembers, "My fingers were too short."

It took Phil eight years to get to the majors. First he had to learn to control the knuckler; then the team had to find somebody who could catch it. Ex-Braves catcher Bob Uecker, once said, "The best way to catch Niekro's knuckler is to follow it until it stops rolling and then pick it up.

Phil persevered, however, and in the 70's became one of the game's most durable performers. Joe, though, started out as a fastball pitcher and began to make a name for himself, winning 14 games in 1968.

But his fastball faded quickly. He bounced around from team to team, with side trips to the minors. In Toledo it was suggested that he seriously try the knuckler — and it worked.

Now he is sitting pretty with a serious contender on the finest mound staff in baseball, with his floating tosses sandwiched in the pitching rotation between the blistering services of Nolan Ryan and J.R. Richard.

Joe came close to winning the Cy Young Award last year and has talked of trying to renogotiate his contract. Surely he does so with an eye to his brother's enviable deal with Atlanta owner Ted Turner — more than $3 million over the next 30 years. So there's plenty of security to go around for the next generation of Niekros. Joe and his wife, Nancy, have two children, while Phil and his wife, Nancy, have three kids.

All of which makes Phil the Elder, renowned Polish knuckleballer and lifetime coal miner, mighty pleased. Says he: "I'm proud of them and happy they don't have to work for a living." FW

Rodney Dangerfield Finally Gets Respect

By Bruce Pollock

"Every time I get in an elevator, the operator says the same thing to me... 'Basement?'"

Is it possible that at the age of 58, after 43 years in-and-out-and-back-in the business, Rodney Dangerfield is finally getting some respect? Downright adoration is more like it. Indeed, the comic, who looks like an aging Pillsbury Doughboy and whose routines are a litany of workingman's woes, has never been hotter.

There's his live album, No Respect, and his new movie, Caddyshack. Combine all this with his very lucrative deal to tote a brand of beer and Rodney Dangerfield is threatening to become a household word.

"When I was in show business years ago, I quit. To show you how well I was doing at the time, I was the only one who knew I quit."

The doorbell of the apartment on Manhattan's fashionable East Side reads "J. Roy," but the man who answers the door, in a shortie bathrobe, is Rodney Dangerfield. Jack Roy has been Dangerfield's legal name since he was 19, when he changed it from Jacob Cohen, to go into show business.

"Most people go into show business because they need love," says Rodney. "I never really wanted show business. I wanted it, but what was more important to me was to find love in life. So, when I met the girl I married, the relationship was more important. My wife was a singer; we both quit the business to get married."

Rodney was 28 at the time, and he got a job selling paint. But when his marriage broke up some 15 years later, Jack Roy went back into comedy, becoming Rodney Dangerfield. Life really began at 40. Well, sort of.

"There was one point," he recalls. "I was 43; I was living in a bust-out hotel, and I owed $20,000.... It was a very depressing period."

Once past that initial period of traumatic struggling, one of the first things he did was to become the headline act at his own club, Dangerfield's. (To buy the club, Dangerfield borrowed money from everyone he knew, including $5,000 from his friend, comic Robert Klein.)

Established in 1970, the club gave him a base of operations. More importantly, it enabled him to spend time with his two kids, Brian and Melanie, then ages 9 and 6 respectively. "For eight years I didn't go anywhere," he notes. "I just worked the club, did the Johnny Carson Show. I made a living, brought up my kids."

"I used to play hide-and-seek... They wouldn't even look for me."

Dangerfield's own perceptions of his talent are relentlessly low-key. "I started writing jokes at 15, and I'm 58, so if I don't know how to do it now, I'll never know." At best, though, his is still a love-hate relationship with the comedian's life.

"Dustin Hoffman hung out with me when he was doing Lenny [the film about comic Lenny Bruce]," says Rodney. "He asked me how to do stand-up. So I said, 'I can't explain that. You have to walk the boards for 20 years. You start out as a kid; you're going to be awful your first jobs. And if you do bad, you're humiliated; people aren't so nice.' So Dustin said, 'What kind of a person would be completely humiliated, then immediately go back to try and get humiliated again?' It's a strange need you have to do this."

Rodney's early humiliations took place at clubs around New York City. When he returned to the business, at age 40, after writing jokes for Joan Rivers and Jackie Mason, he commuted between the Catskills and Greenwich Village, where he made the rounds with such as Dick Cavett, Jo Anne Worley and Klein.

Obviously, Dangerfield is no longer hurting. "I'm O.K. now," he admits. "I do one show a night at the club, maybe two on Saturday. I could work more on the road, but the idea in life is not to see how much money you can die with, you know."

"I'll always remember one date I had. We ran into some guy she knew and she introduced us. She said, 'Steve, this is Rodney. Rodney, this is goodbye.'" FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

A Dog's Life

As people age, they're susceptible to all kinds of health problems, and, alleges a New York veterinarian, dogs are, too. "Middle-aged dogs have all the same medical problems that middle-aged humans do," says Dr. Howard Kessler, the director of the New York Veterinary Hospital. "Once a dog reaches the age of 7, which is about 44 years old in human terms, I recommend an annual geriatric workup."

What does a dog checkup consist of? "All the same things that you'd find in a human's physical exam," explains Kessler. "All their systems are checked. We look at the eyes, skin, ears, and the digestive and circulatory systems; older dogs even get electrocardiograms." Whoever said a dog's life was so bad?

Coin Collecting

Inflation has prompted many people to invest in tangible items, and furniture, art, stamps and coins are making their way into the market to meet the soaring demand. Consequently, prices have soared. "People are particularly interested in coins because they're not perishable," says Arthur Weiner, a Chicago insurance executive who invests in coins.

Of course, some coins are more valuable than others; Weiner is especially intrigued by the Panama-Pacific $50 gold piece. "This is the only $50 gold coin ever minted by the U.S. Government as legal tender, and because it was struck only once, in 1915, to commemorate the opening of the Panama Canal, it has historical importance as well," explains Weiner. The coin was minted in both a round- and octagonal-shaped version, but only about 400 remain in existence. "It's worth checking around in the attic for," says Weiner. "Depending on the coin's condition, its value could be anywhere from $60,000 to $90,000."

Is there one in your piggy bank?

Why You Are Who You Are

People's personalities are molded by a variety of influences, but two Brigham Young University professors say evidence indicates that the order in which children are born into a family also affects their behavior and perception patterns.

Doctors James Harper and Margaret Hoopes have found that, in 85 percent of the cases tested, the first-born usually reflects the father's role of the responsible or achievement-oriented individual or attempts to become a model of the outward values of the family. The second child builds an emotional fusion with the mother and has a need for stability. The third child is the balancing act between the two, and "more than any other child has the greatest power to disrupt relationships," says Harper. Fourth children pay attention to the family as a unit and are the ones who most often try to "make things all right" when an argument takes place.

"Of course, the number of years between each child and their ages can make a difference," says Hoopes. "But birth order often gives therapists a real clue to someone's personality."

Sweet Dreams

In days of old, dreams were thought to be the work of gods or demons; now, psychiatrists recognize them as the time when we work out impulses that we can't accept or are confused by during our waking hours. "We spend approximately one month out of every year dreaming, and we need our dreams as much as our sleep," notes Dr. Leo Madow, chairman of the psychiatry department at the Medical College of Pennsylvania. "A dream-starved person becomes irritable and anxious because the problem or wishes that dreams deal with aren't being confronted."

Dream researchers divide sleep into two states: REM and non-REM. REM sleep is characterized by a series of rapid eye movements which can be seen beneath the sleeper's closed lids. If a person is awakened during or shortly after REM sleep, he can usually remember his dream. "All in all, you probably dream for about 20 minutes for every 90 minutes you're asleep," says Madow. "Most dreams last about 10 to 20 minutes; no one dreams all night, although, after a particularly involved dream, you may feel as though you have."

Lifestyles

Aging. Health is the strongest influence on a senior citizen's feelings of optimism, reports a study by the American Healthcare Corporation. Economic security is another factor involved, as is marital companionship with a spouse of equal physical capabilities. Those who have such companionship — 29 percent — tend to be more optimistic than those who don't.

Risk. A survey of Congressional members, business people, Federal regulators and the public by Marsh and McLennan, an insurance brokerage firm, has found that majorities in all groups believe that fundamental regulatory changes must be made if the risks associated with nuclear energy are to be kept within limits. Congress and the public feel that there should be a temporary ban on licensing new nuclear plants, but a majority in all groups surveyed believes that nuclear energy is too important to abandon right now.

Population. The present world population is about 4.4 billion and is increasing at a rate of 1.7 percent annually, with 28 births and 11 deaths for every 1,000 persons in the world, reports The Nation's Health, the American Public Health Association's newsletter.

UP TO 40%-75% OFF SUGGESTED RETAIL PRICES

We have hundreds of sterling and silverplate flatware patterns in our vaults (1,192 patterns, 137,256 pieces the day this ad was prepared)—active, inactive, and obsolete. Many cannot be bought in retail stores at any price. Get a single piece, a place setting, extra spoons—whatever you need. Save up to 40%-75% on every piece.

EASY TO ORDER—DO IT NOW

Just tell us the pattern name and manufacturer. If you are not sure of your pattern name, ask for one of our free pattern identification booklets. We have one for sterling, one for silverplate. We will send you a list of the pieces in stock in your pattern and the price for each. Then you order just what you want. It's fast and easy. We will put your name in our Silver Register and notify you when we have additional pieces you might want. 30-day return privilege on all silver you buy from Walter Drake.

SEND THE COUPON TODAY →

We buy and sell silver every day, so our stock changes every day. The sooner you send the coupon, the sooner you will get the pieces you want. First come, first served. We keep our prices as low as we can, but inflation affects the price of silver, too. It probably costs less to get the silver you want now than it ever will again, so don't delay. This advertisement will not be repeated for at least several months; send your coupon now.

DO YOU WANT TO SELL STERLING AND SILVERPLATE? TWO WAYS TO SELL FOR QUICK, EASY CASH!

1. If you have silver to sell, send pattern name and manufacturer if known. No need to list individual pieces. We will send you an immediate cash offer. We buy from individuals and estates, as well as retailer's trade-ins and over stock. We are also qualified buyers of gold, diamonds, platinum and sterling and silverplate holloware. Write for details.

2. For even faster service, just package up the items you want to sell us—sterling and silverplate flat- and holloware, gold, diamonds, platinum. Enclose a list of the items you send us (and keep a copy for yourself). Include the flatware pattern and manufacturer names if known. Send the package Return Receipt Requested. When it arrives, we will appraise your shipment and send you a check. If you like it, cash the check. If not, return the check to us within 30 days and we will send your shipment back postpaid.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: REUNITED WITH HIS FAMILY -- AND WITH THE 'SINGING SWORD' -- VAL SAVORS A FRAGILE MOMENT OF PEACE. THE CLOUDS DRIFT LAZILY, LIKE HIS THOUGHTS.

THE LATE SUMMER SUN IS STRONG AND RADIANT, LIKE ALETA. THE BOLD WARRIOR FINDS "LOVING HUSBAND" TO BE A ROLE HE RELISHES.

BUT WITH TWIN DAUGHTERS, HE IS MORE OFTEN CAST AS "STERN FATHER." AMONG THE FABLED DIVERSIONS OF CAMELOT, HE WONDERS, WILL HISTORIANS LIST KAREN AND VALETA?

ONE DAY, KING ARTHUR INVITES VAL AND ALETA TO JOIN HIS FALCONING PARTY. THE CROWN PRINCE OF THULE AND THE QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES READILY ACCEPT. GOLDEN MEADOWS GLISTEN UNDER A BLANKET OF FRESH DEW.

ALETA IS A NATURAL SPORTSWOMAN. LIKE THE UNTETHERED FALCON, HER SPIRITS SOAR. IT IS A GAY PARTY, AND AN EXCLUSIVE ONE. VAL'S CURIOSITY IS PIQUED BY KING ARTHUR'S YOUNG GUEST.

SHE HAD BEEN INTRODUCED AS LADY GWYNN OF CORNWALL. HER FACE WOULD BE CONSIDERED PLAIN BUT FOR THE SPARKLING INTELLIGENCE OF HER EYES.

"THIS IS THE ONLY PLACE I KNOW WHERE WE CAN SPEAK PRIVATELY," KING ARTHUR EXPLAINS. "MORDRED MAY BE BANISHED, BUT HIS SPIES ARE EVERYWHERE."

"THERE IS SOMETHING AMISS IN THE PROVINCE OF CORNWALL. FOR YEARS GWYNN'S FAMILY HAS BEEN MY EYES AND EARS THERE. THE SITUATION IS GRAVE."
