Carolina Tel & Tel Asks $25 Million Service Hike

TARBORO — The Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company has today filed a request with the North Carolina Utilities Commission for increases in local service rates and charges for customers amounting to a little over $25 million.

The requested increases would amount to about 13 percent of the company's gross annual intrastate operating revenues.

Commenting on the request, T. P. Williamson, Carolina Telephone's vice president of administration, said

"Carolina Telephone last had its local service rates increased in 1975 following 18 years without any general increase.

"Then," he added, "because long distance rates went up in 1978, the company in 1979 reduced its local service rates. This means that local telephone service in our area costs little more than it did in 1957."

In the request filed today, Carolina Telephone is seeking an increase of $25,523,726 in its annual revenues. Of this amount, $2.3 million would be for a basic local service rate increase affecting all Carolina Telephone customers.

Another $10.2 million of the $25 million would be for an increase in Extended Area Service (EAS) rates but this would apply only to those customers residing in telephone exchanges which have the extended service.

Increases in service connection charges would yield about $4 million. Supplemental services such as directory listings, key and pushbutton telephone service, and auxiliary equipment would increase about $10.8 million, and zone charges of about $1.9 would be eliminated.

Many Variables Williamson said "it would be misleading for me to say how much a typical customer's bill would change as a result of the increase in rates, because there may not be a typical customer."

A customer's monthly bill depends on several factors — such as what exchange they are in, what services or telephone equipment they now have.

North Carolina customers are currently served in 15 separate basic and EAS rate groups, with a wide range in the present monthly rates.

For example, for one party residence monthly rates, customers in Rate Group 1 (Holly Ridge, Ocracoke, Sneads Ferry, Trenton, etc) pay a basic rate of $4.45 per month. At the other end of the scale, customers in Rate Group 15 pay a much higher monthly rate — $13.15 mon- (Please turn to Page 5)

Some Progress In Talks

Gierek's Ouster Possible

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Polish strike leader Lech Walesa called today for a temporary halt to the spread of strikes to give the communist government time to settle the labor crisis. His appeal, made at the government's request, came after progress was reported in talks to end the 2-week-old strikes.

ABC News reported, meanwhile, that Communist Party leader Edward Gierek had agreed to step down in favor of former Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski, currently Poland's ambassador to East Germany. There were strong rumors throughout Poland today that Gierek had already resigned. The ABC report cited unnamed authoritative sources.

Similar labor discontent over rising prices forced Gierek's predecessor, Wladyslaw Gomulka, to resign in 1970.

Walesa, perched atop the gates of the strike-idled Lenin shipyards here, told his fellow workers: "It is not good to have Poland terrorized. The people must have food. If we don't get results in three to four days, then let the strikes spread."

Walesa, chairman of the Gdansk area Joint Strike Committee, said he would go on radio and television to urge workers not to begin new work stoppages. An estimated 300,000 workers are already on strike.

According to the communist regime's top negotiator, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski, the government has agreed to most of the strikers' demands, but progress has yet to be made on the key question of free trade unions. Jagielski announced over Gdansk Radio that the regime had made concessions to the strikers, but he did not elaborate.

The broadcast followed an announcement to reporters by Andrzej Gwiazda, one of the strikers' negotiators, that "there is general agreement between strikers and the government on forming free and independent trade unions."

Gwiazda made the statement Wednesday after he and other strike leaders held their second bargaining session with government negotiators at the Lenin Shipyards, where the mass walkout began Aug. 14.

Jagielski replied on Gdansk radio and television Wednesday night that "these demands have to be discussed within the present trade union" setup, which is controlled by the state. He resumed talks at the shipyard today with Walesa, and striking workers greeted the premier with polite "good mornings" in contrast to their previous stony silences.

Informed sources reported fresh strikes in Poznan, Krakow, Lodz, Torun and Wroclaw. Worker groups in several areas issued statements of solidarity with the Baltic area strikers.

Rezoning Petition Is Given Setback

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission, in a decision that was highly unpopular with a group of Rock Springs Subdivision residents, voted last night not to sponsor a petition to rezone a four-acre tract west of Rock Springs Road.

The board's vote followed another round of discussion regarding the use of the property, owned by Eastern Realty, bounded on the north and west by Green Mill Run, on the east by Norfolk-Southern Railroad Co., and on the south by 14th Street.

While Eastern Realty holds ownership, a group of surrounding property owners in the Rock Springs section requested that the planning board initiate a petition to rezone the tract from Office & Institutional to R-15, a residential usage designation.

Planning board members, meeting in a special call session on Aug. 13, voted following presentations by an attorney for the Rock Springs residents and by spokesmen for Eastern Realty to approve the preliminary plat submitted by Eastern for the property. The developers, despite the fervent objections of the surrounding property owners, propose to build 26 townhouse units at the end of Edgewood Circle east of the mill run.

Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, explained that the zoning statutes stipulate that rezoning petitions may be initiated by the City Council, the Planning & Zoning Commission, or the vested property owner.

The commission's legal advisor, Judy Kornegay, said that while other parties do not have the right to initiate such a petition, others can request that the petition action be taken. She said the matter was placed on the agenda as a request of the property owners for the planning board to take that action.

David Leech, attorney for a group of the Rock Springs property owners, confirmed that the residents were requesting the board to initiate the petition and he asserted that the planning body had the power to do that, regardless of the wishes of the property owner.

Leech contended that development of the property with townhouses would not be compatible with the existing residential nature of the subdivision. He cited a threat to the residential area by the continued development of the O&I zone.

John Savage, an attorney speaking on behalf of Eastern Realty, said that the opposing residents "have absolutely no interest in the property" and therefore can not file the petition. "So they ask the board to do it for them," he added.

Savage said that Eastern Realty's position is that the planning board "is not an advocate for anybody." Noting that the development plat for the townhouses was approved earlier, the attorney said "these landowners do not want it...that's the reason for their request."

Leech contended that the "ordinance clearly permits you to initiate this petition and that is what we are asking you to do." He said the residents are merely pointing out that there is a place on the zoning maps that needs to be changed.

The residents questioned the 1969 rezoning of the property from residential to O&I, saying they knew nothing about the rezoning action at that time. They also pointed out that the railroad spur that existed and served to buffer the area no longer remains.

Roberson said that the Planning Department is satisfied that the 1969 rezoning, which was done by the city and not initiated by the tract owner, was handled properly as stipulated in the applying ordinances for that time. He added that the ordinance has been revised now to call for better notification procedures for surrounding property owners.

It was also pointed out that the board is not empowered to address the matter of restrictive covenants that may exist.

Commissioner Bill Mitchum observed that "there are hazards in property ownership" and he said he did not feel the present situation involved a hazard. Mitchum asserted that it was not the function of the board to judge the hazards of the property.

Commissioners Mitchum, Wes Hankins and Clarence Tugwell voted unanimously not to sponsor the petition action.

Other action taken by the city board last night included:

— Unanimous recommendation that the City Council approve the request of Collice C. Moore and Max Ray Joyner for rezoning four acres, some 200 feet east of Greenville Boulevard be- (Please turn to Page 26)

Somali Claim Invaders From Ethiopia Driven Back Across Border

By RICHARD TOMKINS Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somali forces have driven Ethiopian invaders back across the border after a day of heavy fighting along a 27-mile stretch of Somalia's northwestern frontier, foreign diplomats said today quoting reports on Somali government radio.

The diplomats, contacted by telephone in the Somali capital of Mogadishu, quoted the radio as saying the Wednesday invasion had been thwarted.

There has been no independent confirmation of the Somali invasion claim or of the reported victory.

"The Somali government said that Ethiopian forces had attacked across the border and were driven back," said a Western diplomat, who requested anonymity. "We really don't know anything else and don't have enough information at this point to speculate on what is happening."

Somalia said the Ethiopians suffered heavy casualties in the fighting but it gave no figures, and issued no statements on Somali casualties.

The diplomats quoted the radio as saying fleeing Ethiopian troops abandoned massive quantities of equipment during their retreat.

Ethiopia has not commented on Somalia's claim that an Ethiopian invasion force of infantry and warplanes struck along the frontier, with the planes reportedly bombing at least five Somali frontier towns.

The East African nations are traditional rivals in the strategic Horn of Africa. They fought a bloody war two years ago for control of the Ogaden Desert, with Somalia seeking to annex the semi-arid wilderness from Ethiopia because its population is primarily ethnic Somalis.

Somali rebels, natives of the Ogaden, backed by Somali troops and arms, made impressive gains through two years of fighting. But Ethiopia emerged the victor in 1978 with the aid of Cuban and Soviet military advisers and a massive airlift of sophisticated Soviet weapons to Ethiopia. State Department sources estimated the cost of the airlift at $1 billion.

The desert feud has continued to simmer since the war, with guerrillas of the government-backed Somali Liberation Front staging hit-and-run attacks on Ethiopian positions. Ethiopia has accused Somali of continuing to infiltrate regular army troops into the region.

In a warning earlier this month, Ethiopia said its patience was wearing thin and it threatened possible retaliation.

Western diplomats in Mogadishu said recently there was evidence of an Ethiopian military buildup at Jijiga, a tank base about 60 miles west of the Ethiopia-Somalia border. But the diplomats said they doubted Ethiopia was prepared to cross the border.

State Department officials say about 12,000 to 15,000 Cuban troops remain in Ethiopia. They are believed to be stationed in the Ogaden and in the northern province of Eritrea, where another secessionist army has been fighting a decade-old war against the Ethiopian government.

The United States does not support Somalia's claim to the Ogaden, but has been seriously courting the Mogadishu government. The Carter administration recently agreed to supply U.S. arms to the Somalis in exchange for permission to set up a U.S. military base in Somalia as part of a plan to protect the vital oil-shipping routes through the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean.

Somalia is a former Soviet ally. It expelled its Kremlin advisers in 1977 to protest Moscow's support for Ethiopia in the Ogaden war.

The move left the Somalis without a source of rearmament for its arsenal of aging Soviet weapons. Sources said Somalia had fewer than 13 operational combat aircraft, aging MIG-17s, as opposed to Ethiopia's estimated 100 combat planes.

Ethiopia, once a staunch ally of America, moved into the Soviet camp after Marxist military officers toppled Emperor Haile Selassie in 1974.

Hostage Action By Parliament Asked By Deputy

By The Associated Press

A member of the Iranian Parliament called of his fellow deputies today to make "a speedy investigation and decision" on the 52 American hostages, Tehran Radio said.

The state-run radio quoted Abdohosseyn Jalali, a representative from Neyshabur province in northeastern Iran, as telling the Parliament that continuation of the existing situation regarding the U.S. "spy hostages" was not in Iran's interest.

Further detail on his appeal, such as whether he favors releasing the Americans, was not available.

Parliament has been given responsibility by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to decide what to do with the hostages, in their 299th day of captivity today. Parliament has set no date for beginning consideration of the issue. Its debate has been held up by delays in completing selection of a Cabinet and organizational matters in Parliament.

Many members of the Islamic Republican Party, the clergy-dominated group that controls the Parliament, favor putting the hostages on trial as "spies."

On Wednesday, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt appealed to Mohammad Ali Rajai, Iran's new prime minister, to work for the release of the American hostages.

"I sincerely hope that the detention of American diplomats, condemned by the entire international community, be ended and thus a decisive obstacle be removed for cooperation between Iran and the international community of soates," the West German leader wrote, according to a statement released by the chancellery in Bonn.

Five Iranian army officers and two civilians were executed by firing squad today in a coastal park in Iran's southwest town of Ahwaz after being found guilty of plotting a coup attempt against the revolutionary regime.

Carter Unveils Economic Plan

By GLENN RITT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today proposed $27.5 billion in 1981 tax cuts for individuals and businesses as part of an election-year economic program that also aims to create 1 million new jobs in the next two years.

The president also requested congressional authority to spend an additional $3.6 billion in 1981 to retrain workers, weatherize homes, maintain highways, build ports, boost research and development and help economically distressed counties and cities.

In addition, he urged Congress to rapidly extend unemployment benefits by 13 weeks to help workers laid off by the recession. Benefits currently expire after 39 weeks. This would cost $1.35 billion over two years.

The president officially announced the program in a White House address to an invited audience of representatives of business, labor, consumer and environmental groups and members of Congress.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told a news briefing earlier that all of the tax initiatives and virtually all of the spending proposals would not be proposed as legislation until January. The tax reductions would go into effect Jan. 1, retroactively if necessary.

"All of these things will contribute to reinforcing the recovery, but it's not a stimulus package," Miller said. The wide-ranging package would increase the proposed federal deficit by from $8 billion to $10 billion in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, bringing the projected budget shortage to nearly $40 billion. Only five months ago, Carter was championing a balanced budget as the key to his economic policy.

Despite the enlarged deficit, Miller insisted the package is not inflationary because its initiatives will spur investment, boost productivity and put people back to work over the next five years.

"If the administration had indicated to people that come hell or high water we'll have a balanced budget, then we sent bad signals," Miller said. "Our signal was to fight inflation."

Two Bodies Are Washed Ashore

KITTY HAWK, N.C. (AP) — The bodies of two more people believed to be victims of last week's powerful waves and riptides have been washed ashore, bringing the death toll to six.

On Wednesday, tourists walking along beaches here found the body of Paul Denne Jr., 28, of Longview, Pa., who had been dragged out to sea by strong currents the week before. On Tuesday, vacationers discovered the body of David Meserole, 13, of Alexandria, Va., who had been swept overboard by a wave last Thursday from the tour ship Oregon Queen.

The six deaths were the greatest number of drownings along the Outer Banks since the 1975 Memorial Day weekend when 11 people perished.

 Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

The inexperienced player is always anxious to ruff. This is especially true if he holds a void—the lure is too much to resist.

As the cards lie, four hearts is the optimum contract for North-South. That contract might have been reached had North bid it over four diamonds, recognizing that if South disliked hearts, he could always retreat to five diamonds. But North did not want to risk a disaster, so he made the safe bid of five diamonds. True, this contract might be defeated off the top; however, in that case the opponents might be cold for a game their way!

West led his ace of clubs, and declarer ruffed. He drew trumps in one round, then tried the heart finesse. East won and shifted to the queen of spades, and the defenders reeled in two fast spade tricks for a one-trick set.

It should have been obvious to declarer that East was the danger hand, and that he had to be kept off lead if at all possible. As luck would have it, declarer received the one lead that would permit him to accomplish that!

Take a look at what would happen if, on the ace of clubs, declarer discarded a heart instead of ruffing! West still has the lead, so the king of spades is safe from attack. Now West must cash his ace of spades or declarer will make an overtrick.

Suppose that West simply continues with a club. Declarer ruffs in his hand, draws the trumps, then cashes the ace and king of hearts and ruffs a heart. When the queen of hearts drops, declarer has the rest of the tricks. But even if hearts are 4-1, the contract is safe. Declarer can get back to dummy twice more with trumps to ruff out the heart and then take a spade sluff on the last heart. Thus, declarer can lose no more than one trick in each black suit.

Diamond Flam Charged To Bussiness In Roxboro

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Roxboro firm that dealt "with the upper echelon of society" has been accused of violating state law in operating a diamond-investment program that allegedly bilked its participants of at least $300,000.

R. Darrell Hancock, an associate state attorney general, said Wednesday the Equity International Corp. was accused in a civil suit filed in Wake County Superior Court of selling unregistered securities, guaranteeing "excessive returns" on the purchase of diamonds and operating a pyramid scheme.

Defendants in the suit were listed as Ray Thomas Brown, identified as president and managing stockholder; Coleen Allen, vice president and agent, and Henry Eily, a sales representative and employee. Eily also is a member of the Person County school board.

The suit filed by the attorney general's office seeks an injunction barring the firm from making additional sales. A hearing has been scheduled for next Tuesday in Raleigh.

Hancock said 125 people — many of them lawyers, merchants and other community officials — invested in the program, most of them in Wake, Person and Lenoir counties.

Hancock said potential investors were asked to invest $1,000 for the purchase of a raw diamond, which would be cut, polished and sold. Investors were told they would earn a profit of $500 within 30 days, Hancock said.

At the designated time, Hancock said, investors would receive a phone call or a letter asking them whether they wanted the original investment plus the $500 profit or if they wanted to reinvest the entire $1,500. After people had invested heavily, they would not receive the money they should have earned, Hancock said.

Hancock, who said one investor had $12,000 tied up in the program, estimated the loss to all investors at $300,000. And "that's probably a conservative figure from what I've seen so far," he said.

Hancock said the operation had run smoothly, enlisting community leaders as investors. "That's why it went so well," Hancock said, "it concentrated on the upper echelon of society."

Draft Resisters, Please Read

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a "draft lawyer" from the Vietnam era, revving up for the new Selective Service registration. Based on telephone calls to me and statements I've read, I've become concerned about the young men born in 1960 and 1961 taking rash, ill-advised actions without being apprised of all the facts.

First of all, refusing to register is a federal felony, punishable by a maximum of five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. If any of your readers, their sons or friends are planning on refusing to register, I urge you to suggest first obtaining draft advice and counseling from any of the reputable agencies throughout the country, such as CCO, with offices in Philadelphia and San Francisco.

Fleeing to Canada will not work, because Canada has closed its borders to draft resisters. Also, deferments for college students are no longer authorized.

Although a young man who acts from deeply held principles in, let's say, refusing to register or accept induction is entitled to respect for taking a stand which can result in severe penalties, I think you'll agree he should first be fully aware of the ramifications of his actions and the possible alternatives available to him.

RICHARD P. FOX, LOS ANGELES

DEAR MR. FOX: Amen.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who has been with the company for over 40 years announced last May that she was retiring in September. She is well over the age of retirement, but has always been in good health and is sharp as a tack. She once said she'd never retire.

Barlow

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Barlow, a daughter, Jessica Michelle, on Aug. 6, 1980, in Baptist Hospital, Columbia, S. C. Mrs. Barlow is the former Barbara Anita Kearns of Greenville.

Well, all her fellow-employees got together and bought her a beautiful set of matched luggage, which we presented at a farewell dinner.

Now she tells us she's changed her mind and she doesn't want to retire after all. Nobody knows how much longer she intends to continue working. Have you ever heard of anything so nutty? And what should we do about it?

HER FELLOW-WORKERS

DEAR WORKERS: What's so nutty about a woman changing her mind? When she finally retires, just say "Goodbye."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In the wake of the popularity of the TV series "Dallas" comes a new one this fall called "Texas."

I watched the teaser for it the other night as it warned, "There's only one state big enough to hold all this passion! Texas!"

I don't like to make trouble among the states, but how do you think that makes the other 49 feel? Like a bride with a cold sore, that's how.

Frankly, I think it's a big mistake to single out one state as the Passion Capital of the world. Look what's happened to Dallas already... busloads of tourists converging on the city winking and tipping bellhops to send them a Ewing for a little action.

Or, if you're going to regionalize sin, let everyone have a shot at it. I was discussing this recently with a local TV programmer just to get a handle on his reaction.

"Assuming you're right," he said, "what state do you have in mind?"

"Look at history," I said. "Peyton Place already put New England on the map. Knots Landing has done for cul-de-sacs in the California suburbs what Mondays have done for dieters. Dallas bedrooms have made the country forget there's oil in the ground. Now it's the Midwest's turn. How about a sexy series called "CLEVELAND!"

My friend looked stunned for a moment.

"What's the matter with Cleveland?" I asked.

"Nothing, but it's so industrial. Besides, whenever I think of Cleveland, the only thing that comes to mind is William Howard Taft."

"That's because you don't know Cleveland," I said. "It's crawling with lust and passion."

"Do they have anything like the Dallas Cowgirls?"

"No, but the Cuyahoga River catches fire in the summer."

"Does Ohio have a Broadway play about it called, 'The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas?'"

"Maybe not, but Kenley is playing 'Sound of Music' in Warren, Ohio."

"Have there been any sexy novels about Ohio like Edna Ferber did with Texas in 'Giant?'"

"It wasn't exactly a saga, but I wrote, 'The Grass Is Always Greener over the Septic Tank' about an Ohio suburb."

"And where are the sex symbols associated with Ohio — like say, Dan Rather, Texas?"

I played my ace. "Paul Newman is from Cleveland."

Watch for it, folks, soon in your TV listing.

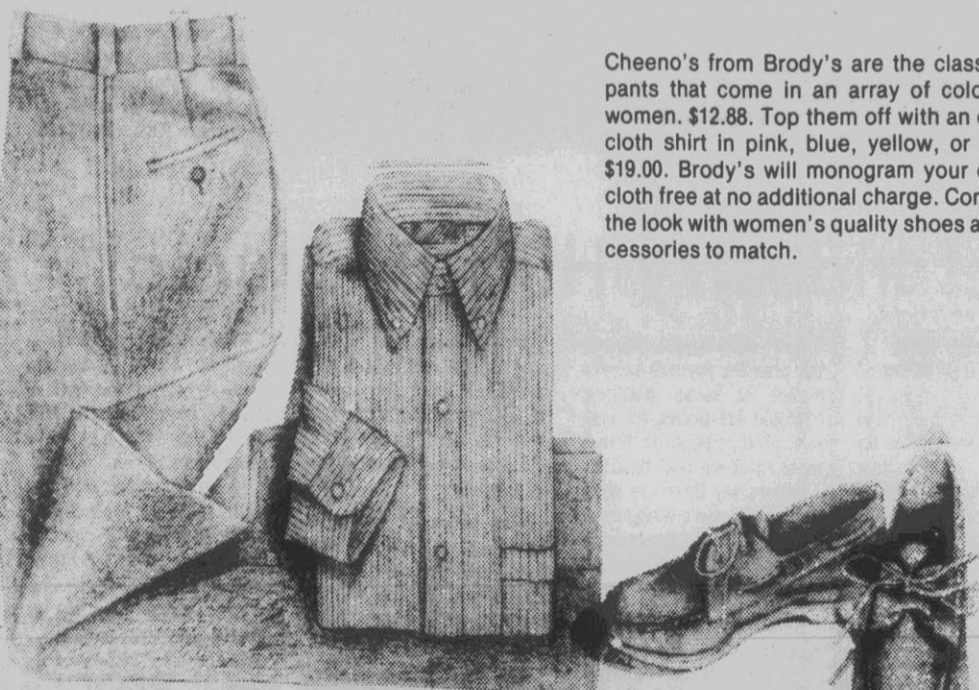

"CLEVELAND! the only city with enough industrial experience to produce enough sex to keep up with the demand."

Send That Money In

First the bad news . . . county tax notices are being mailed out. Now the good news . . . there's no penalty until Dec. 31.

That doesn't mean the county wouldn't like for the 47,500 tax payers to send in their money as soon as possible, however. In fact Tax Collector Bill Smith urged them to do that.

The taxes are due Sept. 1. Whether you pay Sept. 1 or Dec. 31, however, is really up to you and it all depends on how you view money. Many figure if they owe the county say, $500 they can put that money on interest and receive some return on it. That is true. The $500 at six percent would bring in $10, which is money in the pocket. But then you'll owe another tax on that — state and federal income tax. Say that amounts to 30 percent, then $3 is gone from your $10, leaving you $7.

Then there's inflation to consider. Maybe it is running at the rate of one percent per month. So another four percent is gone by Dec. 31. So now you've got $6.60 left. If your money is still lying around in a savings account on Jan. 1 there's an intangibles tax to be paid which will cut further into it, and given the rising cost of eating out, you can't go to a restaurant and have a decent steak for something less than $6.60.

So maybe the thing to do is to go ahead and send the money to the county on Sept. 1. It's just a headache to try to keep up with it anyway.

Ocean Commands Respect

It seems incredible that swimmers at the Outer Banks last weekend would ignore danger warnings, but many of them did.

The riptides were treacherous along the coast continuing on into the week. Despite repeated warnings from authorities some swimmers risked the strong currents and a number had to be rescued.

North Carolina's beaches are a wonderful place to be. The seas are usually inviting and safe. There are times, however, when they are exceedingly dangerous, and then the waves and the tides should be respected.

THIS AFTERNOON

A History Revival

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Just as these modern times seem to compel people to look back more closely and fondly upon the remains of yesterday's buildings and furnishings, to savor them, restore them, and keep them as reminders of what once was, so there is a revival of interest in North Carolina's history.

Not only is there a revival, but a revitalization. History, contrary to the dry recitations of dates and names which so many of us remember from schooldays, is coming to life.

Witness the middle-school textbook now in use in public schools across North Carolina. Not yet two years off the presses and growing in appreciation by students and teachers alike, "Carolina Quest" has been hailed by scholarly reviewers as a "triumph of intellect, style, and design."

Most importantly, this comment from Anne Paul, a teacher and assistant principal for curriculum at Pamlico Junior High School at Bayboro:

tion of the Parramore text promise to make learning about North Carolina exciting and fun, not just a chore, for thousands of youngsters.

Each of the book's 25 chapters centers around a particular tale or episode, with much of the material based upon the author's own research. Branching out from that platform, the story draws in other events and activities, often extending the repercussions right on down through time to the present day so that readers learn not just facts, but why things happened and what the results were and how today's life in North Carolina has been shaped by events.

All of this notwithstanding, the job is done with style, color, and a flair which brings historical characters to life.

Take the chapter on "Rogues Harbor, Partnership in Piracy," for example. Blackbeard with his smoking braids; his partner Stede Bennet who was abandoned by his mentor and hanged; and Governor Eden and Tobias Knight, chief justice at Bath, both of whom supported Blackbeard's forays, take part in a tale which should delight even the most jaded modern-day television watcher.

Consider this description of how a Virginian, Lt. Robert Maynard, finally brought Blackbeard to justice:

The Fight

Each man fired. "Blackbeard missed his mark. But Maynard burned a hole through the pirate's thick body. As if untouched, Blackbeard snapped Maynard's own cutlass like a twig. He was drawing back to deliver the death blow when one of Maynard's men struck Blackbeard a sword blow in the throat. Blackbeard snatched another

To the editor:

Near the beginning of August the American Red Cross Blood Services, Tidewater Region, was in a most difficult situation. As a result of summer vacations and the heat wave, blood collections had been dropping for some time and we were faced with an upcoming week of low collections. We were forced to go on a restricted release schedule with the 60 hospitals in our region and make a major appeal for donors.

Fortunately for the many patients served by our hospitals, the good people of the Tidewater Region withstood the heat and came through with the much-needed blood. From as far north as Westmoreland, to Mecklenburg on the west, and from as far south as Onslow County, North Carolina, over 2000 volunteer donors gave their time to ensure an adequate blood supply. And another large group donated their services to process the donors and make their donation time more comfortable.

On behalf of the Red Cross Board of Directors and the many patients who depend on this gift of life, I extend a sincere and grateful thanks to those who donated blood during our critical period. And I also thank all those who regularly give blood. We must collect, process and distribute 460 pints of blood daily to adequately supply the population of a region this size. We are only able to do so because of the fine sense of community responsibility demonstrated by the residents of the Tidewater Region. The American Red Cross, traditionally known as "the good neighbor," is most thankful to have such good neighbors of its own in Tidewater.

To the editor:

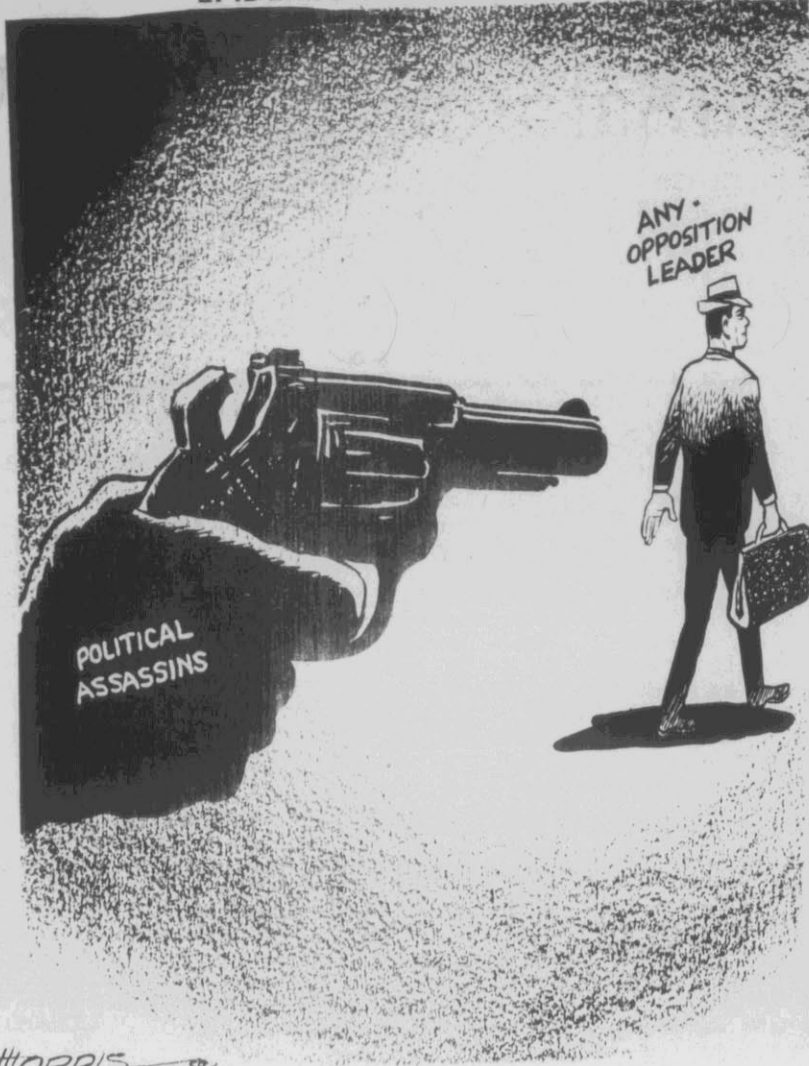

As a concerned taxpayer of our community hospital, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and a grateful nursing instructor from ECU School of Nursing with the senior nursing students in "Ward Management and Nursing Leadership," I would like to express the following personal view: Miss Jean Owens as Director of Nursing Service for PCMH for the past 10 years has provided outstanding nursing leadership to PCMH nursing service while extending open lines of communication to our nursing students from ECU.

Her loss from nursing service at PCMH will be felt community-wide and university-wide, as has been expressed to me by many ECU graduates who are concerned staff nurses at PCMH who read "The Daily Reflector" on Wednesday, Aug. 20.

For the 16 years I have been affiliated with PCMH in the roles of nursing service with PCMH and nursing education with ECU School of Nursing, I cannot comprehend Miss Owens' change in salary from $26,600 to $18,000 in her new title of "Administrative Assistant to Executive Director Rick Gilstrap." I feel that a reduction of $8,000-plus in salary after 30 years of achievements in the professional field of nursing is enough to stimulate consideration of a "Union in Nursing," as they have in South Carolina.

More Of It In 4 Years

WASHINGTON — The next national political conventions are four years in the future, and thank God for that. I have spent the morning filing away the accumulated junk from New York and Detroit, and the post-partum blues have me down. If this were soap opera we could give it a name: As the Stomach Turns.

It is the sham that finally overwhelms — the sham, the braggadocio, the posturing, the half truths and whole lies; it is the boasting, the blame-casting, the credit-taking; it is the noise, the bombast, the hot air, the endless banalities. For the moment I am fed up with the meanness, the pettiness, the empty rituals — with the whole degrading dumbshow.

If I single out the Democrats in these comments, it is mainly because the New York convention is of fresher and more redolent recollection. I mean to include the Republicans also. At the GOP convention in Detroit, we heard nothing good about the Democrats; in New York, we heard nothing good about the Republicans. This is the way the game is played, and it has become a fatuous game.

To listen to the Democrats' oratory, and to read their platform, is to suppose that the Nixon and Ford administrations were responsible for every evil that has afflicted our republic — inflation, unemployment, recurring deficits, crime in the streets and low prices on the farm. To listen to the Republicans, you would suppose Jimmy Carter bears the blame for the same ills precisely. It is marvelous, depending on the point of view, how every good thing began (or ended) on Jan. 20, 1977. The litany at New York was adapted from Orwell's "Animal Farm" — Republicans, ba-a-a-ad; Democrats go-o-od.

Do I fall into the same exaggeration? Listen. The Democrats would have us believe that the Republican Party is the party of — "neglect of the poor and disadvantaged, disdain for working men and women, compassion only for the rich and the privileged, failure to meet the challenges of energy, inflation and unemployment, and a breakdown of the partnership among local, state and federal governments." The Republican legacy left the nation weak, rudderless, unrespected and deeply divided. The Republicans were guilty of waste and inefficiency. They neglected national defense. They left the regulatory agencies desperately in need of overhaul.

What of the Democrats? Heroically they have struggled with this terrible inheritance. They have achieved wonders of reform. Look! Interest rates are falling! Inflation "has begun to recede." Millions of new jobs have been created. These miracles are the work of a "Democratic president working with a Democratic Congress."

One recalls John Randolph's mackerel in the moonlight: it both shines and stinks.

Two specific examples: The Democrats blandly take all the credit for airline deregulation. They commit themselves anew toward creating a Consumer Protection Agency. The key votes on airline deregulation were 83-9 in the Senate (Republicans 34-0 in favor), and 363-8 in the House (Republicans 118-3 in favor). The Carter bill on consumers came to a vote in the House in February 1978. The bill failed by a vote of 227-189; and it failed because 101 Democrats voted over the hill.

With breathtaking chutzpah, the Democrats charge the Republicans with neglecting national defense and boast that they have achieved real increases in defense spending. This astonishing exercise in dissimulation comes from the same party that four years ago pledged that "we can reduce present defense spending by about $5 billion to $7 billion." The Democrats ridicule Republican proposals to cut taxes "by one trillion dollars by 1987," but they fail to mention that in this same period federal revenues are estimated at seven trillion dollars.

Why do we tolerate this tripe? Why do we put up with the phoniness, the fulsome praise, the flatulent and vainglorious oratory, the insults to our eardrums and to our common sense? The answer, I suppose, is that no party has tried to level with the

U.S. Keeps Taiwan Ties

By DONALD ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In criticizing President Carter's handling of United States relations with Taiwan, Ronald Reagan is echoing the views of some unlikely allies, including many Democratic members of Congress and the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

However, few of those congressional critics of the Carter Taiwan policy went as far as to support establishment of an official relationship with Taiwan.

In a Los Angeles news conference on Monday, Reagan said the Taiwan Relations Act passed by Congress in 1979, established "an official and adequate basis" for U.S. ties with Taiwan.

And if elected president, added Reagan "I would not pretend, as Carter does, that the relationship we now have with Taiwan . . . is not official."

In January 1979, a few weeks after establishment of U.S. diplomatic relations with the Chinese government in Peking, President Carter sent Congress the Taiwan Relations Act. The title of the bill described its purpose as "to promote the foreign policy of the United States through the maintenance of commercial, cultural, and other relations with the people on Taiwan on an unofficial basis."

But, by the time the bill passed Congress in April 1979, the word "unofficial" had been dropped and the title referred to "maintenance of commercial, cultural, and other relations with the people on Taiwan."

One year later, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairing a Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing on U.S.-Taiwan relations, noted that he and many other senators "had some doubts originally" whether ties with Taiwan could be maintained and also were critical of the legislation proposed by Carter.

A committee staff study of the relationship cited increasing trade between the two countries in the past year as one indication of the success of the new relationship.

However, the staff also criticized the Carter administration for "defining 'unofficial relations' too narrowly."

The study went on to say it appeared the administration was implementing its original version of the legislation rather than the bill passed by Congress.

The committee staff expressed particular concern about administration reluctance to meet the congressional mandate "to sell Taiwan those arms which it legitimately needed to meet its self-defense requirements."

The staff recommended the committee "place the administration on notice" that it expects the letter and the spirit of the act to be fully implemented.

It added that the administration should notify Congress in the near future of its decision on Taiwan requests for purchase of fighter planes and missiles.

The staff also urged the administration to allow Taiwan military personnel to attend training courses in the United States. Reagan singled out the ban on military training among his criticisms of the Carter policy.

However, the act doesn't fully support Reagan's contention that it is absolutely silent on the question of official relations.

Reagan argued at his news conference that the very fact the act authorizes sale of defensive weapons to Taiwan was recognition of an official relationship.

"You cannot provide weapons to another country without officially going through the United States government to do so," said the GOP presidential candidate.

But the legislation specified that "laws, regulations, and orders which refer or relate to foreign countries . . . shall continue to apply to the people on Taiwan." It went on to state that this language was necessary to continue Taiwan's eligibility to receive financial and military aid despite the end of government-to-government relations.

The act also refers consistently to "people on Taiwan" and defines the term as including "governing authorities on Taiwan and the people governed by those authorities."

Another section inserted in the legislation by Congress expressed U.S. concern

BUILT TO BOUNCE

An ever-popular child's toy is the squat figure, now generally made of rubber or plastic, which is set on a rounded base. Each time it is knocked down, it springs smartly up again, ready for the next blow. Its secret, as everyone knows, is simply a weight in the base which always causes the figure to return to an upright position.

Unfortunately we do not always spring back with the facility of the well-made toy. Yet there are some people who do. We have all met people who have suffered crushing blows but who refuse to admit defeat and fight their way back to successful living.

What is their secret? It is the same as that of the knock-over toy: a solid foundation for living. People whose lives are built on a substantial base of character which combines integrity, love, courage, faith — these are the people who have an almost unlimited capacity for rising out of defeat into victory. — Elisha Douglass

Steel Industry Hurt By Slump

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — The steel industry appears to be pulling out of one of its worst slumps in the last decade, but industry analysts say the recovery is likely to be modest.

"Orders bottomed out about a month ago, but they're still low. I don't think this is the beginning of any march to prosperity," said one steel company executive who asked not to be named.

Peter Anker of the First Boston Corp. compared the current situation to a man taking his hand out of a vice. "The pressure's off, but you're still hurting," he said.

D. Sheldon Arnot, executive vice president of Bethlehem Steel Corp., the nation's second-largest producer, said orders were at their lowest in May and have improved slightly since then.

He blamed the steep drop in demand on cuts in inventory by steel buyers, but said the practice appears to have ended in some quarters. "People are buying for current production, even though those rates are low," he said.

Others say there are hints that the nation's economy is pulling out of the recession, a pattern that has showed in steel bookings.

Retail sales increased 2 percent in July for the second consecutive monthly rise. Sales to the auto industry, steel's biggest customer, were up 8 percent last month after a 5 percent increase in June. The housing market also shows signs of stirring.

Iron Age magazine, an industry trade publication, reports the price of scrap steel, a sensitive indicator, rose $10 a ton at the beginning of August. Suppliers say the higher prices are firm, indicating stronger demand.

The first break since last spring in steel plant closings and layoffs came last week when U.S. Steel Corp. said it would recall about 1,500 workers next month at its Pittsburgh and Birmingham, Ala., plants.

"It's not a wholesale return to work. It's not even that widespread," said a spokesman for the nation's largest steelmaker, which has 24,000 workers on layoff.

The Cleveland-based Steel Service Center Institute surveyed its members and found about 75 percent had expected incoming orders to remain the same or improve over the next three months.

"Last month, only 37 percent were this optimistic," said institute President Robert G. Welch.

Hopeful economic signs among steel producers and sellers must be viewed against the backdrop of the slump they are now in — by far the worst since 1975.

Production crashed to a low of 51.7 percent of capacity during the week of July 4, said American Iron and Steel Institute spokesman Sheldon Wesson. It is generally accepted that mills must be producing at about 80 percent of capacity before they pass the break-even point.

So far this year, the industry has operated at an average of 73 percent of capacity, compared to 91 percent for the same period last year, Wesson said.

Steel employment has plummeted. The number of hourly workers on the payroll dropped to 276,000 in June, the lowest monthly figure since the 1933, Wesson said. At last year's peak, 354,000 workers held jobs in American mills.

July's figures aren't in yet, but Wesson said it appears that employment levels may have dipped as low as 240,000.

thly for customers in Angier; $12.90 per month for those in Fuquay-Varina; and $9.55 for customers in Wake Forest.

Customers in Rate Group 15, however, can reach, without long distance charges, significantly more telephones than a customer in Ocracoke could reach.

Losses Due To EAS

Explaining the EAS arrangement — and the consequent EAS rate increase request — Williamson said "When two or more exchanges choose to enter into an EAS arrangement, it means that customers in those exchanges can place unlimited calls to anyone in any of the exchanges involved without long distance charges for each call.

"The company loses that long distance revenue and also must make large investments to provide the new equipment to make the EAS possible.

"At the present time," Williamson added, "it costs us more to provide EAS than our customers pay for it. Our current EAS revenue shortfall, or deficit, is some $10.2 million annually, and is increasing at an alarming rate. The non-EAS user is forced to pay, through higher basic local rates, for the high cost of the Extended Area Service user's service. This should not be so."

Big Tax Bite

If the N. C. Utilities Commission should approve the $25,523,726 gross annual revenue increase request, Williamson points out that "federal and state taxes will take somewhat more than half of the requested revenues, leaving about $12,210,000 to continue meeting increased operating revenues, interest payments, depreciation, employee wages and fringe benefits, and to provide a fair return to investors.

"We are asking for only a 13 percent increase in our intrastate operating revenues. The Consumer Price Index (CPI) has gone up 17.7 points in the first six months of 1980 alone.

"The last long-term money the company borrowed to raise funds for the company's construction program was obtained in the spring of 1980 at 12.7 percent interest, more than double the interest on our existing debt at that time. It also was more than the 11.9 percent the company earned on its stockholder investment in 1979, and much more than the 9.4 percent we are earning now."

Williamson noted that

"partly because of the high cost of borrowed money, Carolina Telephone reduced its construction budget for 1980. Our early projections for the construction expenditure in 1980 appeared to be around $110 million. It appears now that the 1980 construction expenditures will be about $90 million. We hope that this reduction is a temporary measure because there are many things we need to do today to assure quality service in the future."

Local Increase Proposals

A look at the table of existing and proposed rates published by Carolina Telephone in its requested increase, shows the following rate changes proposed on a monthly basis for Greenville and nearby towns:

— Greenville — Residence, one party line — existing rate, $8.05; proposed rate, $9.95; increase, $1.90 (23.6 percent increase) — Business, one-party line, existing $19.60; proposed rate, $24.95; increase, $5.35 (27 percent increase); two-party line, $17.00; proposed, $21.95; increase, $4.95 (29 percent increase); and four-party line, existing, $15.55; proposed rate, $20.95; increase, $5.40 (34.7 percent increase).

— Farmville — Residence, one party line — existing rate, $8.35; proposed rate, $10.65; increase, $2.30 (27.5 percent increase).

— Ayden — Residence, one party line — existing rate, $8.30; proposed rate, $10.55; increase $2.25 (30.7 percent increase).

— Bethel — Residence, one party line — existing rate, $8.15; proposed rate, $10.90; increase, $2.75 (33.7 percent increase).

— Grifton — Residence, one party line — existing rate, $8.05; proposed rate, $10.40; increase, $2.35 (29 percent).

May Increase Pay Of College Presidents

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's community college presidents may be in line for pay raises that would push their maximum salary level to $42,732 a year.

The Community College Committee of the state Board of Education approved a pay hike Wednesday by a 5-2 vote, overriding legal objections raised by state Treasurer Harlan Boyles.

Boyles called the proposed pay raise "very unorthodox". He said the proposal should have been presented to the General Assembly.

The two negative votes were cast by Boyles and Dr. Ben H. Battle of Cullowhee.

Tom King, community college vice president for financial services, said state law gives the Board of Education authority to set salary schedules. "We did not carry it to the General Assembly because the law does not require it," he said.

King said the proposal would give the college leaders the same average 15 percent pay hike that other state employees received this year. He said the attorney general's office had advised him the raise would be legal.

King said 41 of the 58 community college presidents would be eligible for the increase.

In other matters the committee approved a desegregation report prepared for the Office of Civil Rights of the U.S. Department of Education. Larry J. Blake, president of the community college system, told the committee the desegregation report shows "that movement is being made in a positive direction."

The report pointed out that the number of blacks on governing boards of the 58 institutions has "increased significantly" from 55 to 100.

It said that in "technical, vocational and general education programs black enrollments are on parity or above," but that the institutions "did not reach the goal of enrolling 171 new black students in the college transfer program."

Board member John Tart of Smithfield said he disagreed with the goal of 171 new black students. He said the effort should be made to get more blacks into "the vocational and technical training because that's where the jobs are."

Rough Seas Subsiding

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Beaches along Dare County's coast were filled with tourists Wednesday as rough seas and riptides, blamed for six deaths since Aug. 21, subsided.

Vacationers flocked to the beach areas Wednesday, although authorities said swimmers' safety still was questionable at low tide, when the undertow would be the strongest.

The riptide was blamed Sunday for the deaths of four people, including one man whose body has not been recovered. Another swimmer was caught last Saturday and a 13-year-old boy, David Meserole, was swept overboard on Aug. 21 by a wave that struck a tour boat in Oregon Inlet.

Young Meserole's body was recovered Tuesday night. The body of Paul Denne Jr., 28, of Longview, Pa., who had been missing and presumed dead since Saturday, was found Wednesday about three miles north of the pier at Duck.

Kluxers To Join Carter Audience

TUSCUMBIA, Ala. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan leader says members of his group will be present when President Carter addresses a Labor Day rally here to kick off his re-election campaign.

"We will not disrupt the president's speech in any way," said Grand Wizard Don Black of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan on Wednesday. "The purpose of the gathering is not to antagonize anyone or create any conflict."

Black also said he will challenge as unconstitutional a Tuscumbia ordinance that has blocked a Klan parade through the town just prior to the scheduled start of the president's speech.

about any military or economic threats to Taiwan and pledged to "maintain the capacity of the United States to resist any resort to force or other forms of coercion that would jeopardize the security of the social or economic system of the people on Taiwan."

Carter threatened to veto any bill that went any further in committing the United States to defense of the island.

The Peking government called the legislation "unacceptable" but did nothing to change its relations with the United States.

Clearly, Parramore brings good writing and exciting narrative into the classroom; and that without sacrificing scholarship for when the occasion demands, words are used in the text then defined in margin notes so the reader can learn a larger vocabulary along with history.

Incidentally, Tar Heel fourth graders are also enjoying a history, "The People of North Carolina", written by Parramore's wife.

'Knew' The CWP Parade Route

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A police captain said Wednesday that a man identified as an organizer of a Klan-Nazi motorcade picked up a copy of the Communist Workers Party's parade permit two days before the Klan-Nazi group clashed with communist demonstrators.

Five demonstrators were killed and nine other people were injured during an outburst of violence last Nov. 3 when the Klan-Nazi group drove into a rally point for the CWP event, which had been advertised as a "Death to the Klan" rally.

Police Capt. W. L. Henderson, testifying at the trial of six Klansmen and Nazis charged with murder as a result of the violence, said he issued the parade permit for the CWP rally to one of the group's local leaders, Nelson Johnson, on Nov. 1.

Henderson said that, later on the same day, he was asked for a copy of the permit by a man named Dawson, who subsequently was identified as Eddie Dawson. Witnesses early in the trial identified Dawson as a police informer and a Klansman who led portions of the planning for the Nazi-Klan motorcade.

Under questioning, Henderson said he did not know of Dawson's affiliation with the Klan or that he was an informer for police. He gave the man the permit after city officials told him it was a public document and had to be made available, Henderson said.

The jury hearing the trial also viewed another television videotape that was made during the violence. Reporter David M. Dalton of WXII-TV in nearby Winston-Salem testified that he dived under a car when the shooting began but left his camera running.

Portions of the film showed only legs of people beside the car, blotting out the violence. After the shooting subsided and the crowd had scattered, the film showed at least three of the victims lying on the ground.

Dalton also was hit in the leg by shotgun pellets while he lay under the car.

Meanwhile, separate trials for Johnson and three other CWP members charged with causing public disturbances were postponed Wednesday until Sept. 5.

Johnson and Martha Nathan, whose husband was among the Nov. 3 victims, were charged with disorderly conduct Aug. 1 after a demonstration near the Guilford County Courthouse.

Two other women whose husbands died Nov. 3, Signe Waller and Dale Sampson, are charged in connection with the disruption of a meeting of the Greensboro City Council on July 31.

Judge Pays Debt Of Onslow Sheriff

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has paid Onslow County commissioners $6,700 in fees improperly kept by the county sheriff during his last 10 years in office.

Judge James R. Strickland, a former Onslow County attorney, paid the debt with the stipulation that all other claims against former Sheriff Thomas J. Marshall be dropped.

Figures developed by county officials indicate that Marshall could have kept as much as $45,000 during the last 10 years in office, from 1968-78.

Marshall admitted keeping the fees, but said he acted on the advice of Strickland, who told him in 1964 that it was proper for the sheriff to keep the fees.

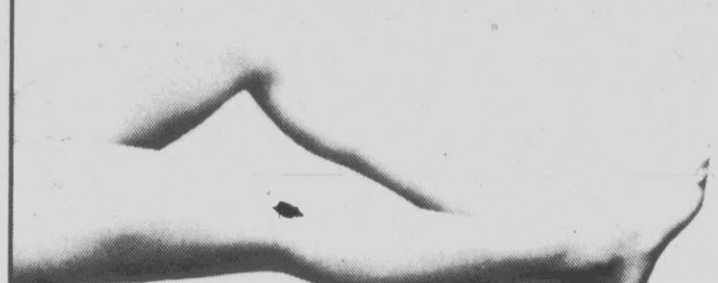

In a 1964 letter, Strickland said he based his opinion on a 1951 state law passed for Onslow County.

Strickland refused to comment when contacted in Morganton Wednesday on why he paid the sheriff's debt. But, an Onslow County board member said Strickland indicated he was paying the debt "to get this thing settled."

Dallas A. Cameron, executive secretary to the chief justice of the state Supreme Court, said he did not know whether Strickland's actions would warrant an investigation by the commission.

Kate Smith In Hospital's Care

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Kate Smith, suffering from severe diabetes and spinal arthritis, has been admitted to a Raleigh hospital while her nieces battle for control of her financial affairs.

Miss Smith, 73, was admitted to Raleigh Community Hospital on Sunday. A hospital spokeswoman said today her condition was listed as fair.

In New York, Helena Steene, 75, said her sister's condition had not worsened but it was thought best if she was hospitalized pending the outcome of litigation in Manhattan Supreme Court.

Mrs. Steene later testified at the hearing, which involves a dispute between her daughters. The daughters and an attorney were named conservators of Miss Smith's affairs after the singer suffered insulin shock last year.

One daughter, Suzanne Andron of Raleigh, has asked the court to remove her sister, Kathryn Rodriguez, also of Raleigh, as a conservator.

Mrs. Steene testified Wednesday that Guillermo Rodriguez, her son-in-law, smoked marijuana, became violent at times and once went through a bizarre exorcism rite in front of her because something she said angered him.

Mrs. Andron and the other conservator, New York attorney Richard S. Becker, claim Mrs. Rodriguez and her husband illegally moved into Miss Smith's Raleigh home last January and have become an annoyance to the singer.

Rodriguez often got "violently drunk," Mrs. Steene said. "Mr. Rodriguez acts as though he had lost his mind. He becomes violent."

She said Rodriguez and her daughter Kathryn used marijuana "on several occasions" while they stayed in her house.

Meanwhile, some of Miss Smith's personal effects went on sale at an auction house in Blowing Rock, N.C., Wednesday afternoon.

The items being sold included a solid gold compact given to Miss Smith by songwriter Irving Berlin, a .689-karat diamond ring, a gold and diamond-studded clock given Miss Smith on her 10th anniversary with the CBS radio network, several gold rings and a gold evening bag.

Almost all the items are monogrammed with Miss Smith's name or initials.

Nehru Story Offshore Drilling Will Ridiculed Mean Many Jobs Open

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today described as "ridiculous" allegations in a new biography of Earl Mountbatten that claim her father, the late Jawaharlal Nehru, had a love affair with Lady Mountbatten.

"There was warm friendship between him (Nehru) and both the Mountbattens," a spokesman for Mrs. Gandhi quoted the prime minister as saying.

"It is a ridiculous story," the 62-year-old Mrs. Gandhi was quoted as saying after reading news reports of the book, "Mountbatten: Hero of Our Times," by Richard Hough. The book was published Wednesday in London.

It says Nehru and Mountbatten's wife Edwina had an affair in 1947 and that this was a factor in Moslem leader Mohammed Ali Jinnah's insistence on the partition of India in 1947.

Mrs. Gandhi is the only daughter of Nehru, the man who led India for 17 years as its prime minister until his death in 1964.

On Thursday, India honored Mountbatten with a special stamp issued on the first anniversary of his death. The British leader, who presided at the end of British colonial rule in India and its emergence as a free nation, was assassinated by Irish Republican Army guerrillas to protest British rule in Northern Ireland. He was 79.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The federal government has scheduled a Sept. 5 public hearing here on the leasing of 1.6 million acres for exploratory drilling off the coasts of Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina.

The 286 offshore tracts are to be leased to companies for five years or as long as drilling, active exploration or production continue, said Harold P. Sieverding, assistant manager of the federal Bureau of Land Management.

While Florida and Georgia could gain more than 4,400 local jobs as a result of the exploration, the government also predicts three major oil spills if oil is found and produced, according to a U.S. report. Those spills, more than 1,000 barrels each, would be "likely to take place" over a 30-year period, the bureau reports in a draft environmental impact statement.

The spills most likely would affect the coastal strip from South Georgia's Jekyll Island near Brunswick to Florida's Amelia Island north of Jacksonville. Other areas of the Georgia coast up to North Carolina also could be affected, but to a lesser degree, the report said.

Oil companies are not expected to jump at the land off Brunswick and Jacksonville, however, according to Murice Rinkel of the Florida Institute of Oceanography. The tracts are in the same general area as land offered two years ago, where companies drilled six dry holes.

"I don't anticipate a great deal of activity will occur down in the Florida area," Rinkel said. "Most of the drilling in the last sale was done in our area, so they'll probably start up north."

In March 1978 high bids by 11 oil companies totalled $100 million for 43 tracts off the southeast U.S. shore. Sieverding said he expects higher bids this time.

The land leased in 1978 was the first offered in the Atlantic off the southeast shores, where an estimated 1.4 billion barrels of oil and 2.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas are buried, according to the U.S. Geological Survey. If some of that hidden treasure eventually is found, drilling is expected to begin in 1982 and last seven years, the bureau reports.

Ann-Margret's Plea Over Photo Loses In Court

NEW YORK (AP) — While actress Ann-Margret may blush over a nude photograph of her in High Society Celebrity Skin magazine, she didn't have such qualms when she appeared in the movie from which the picture was taken, a federal judge has said.

In dismissing the star's suit against the publication, U.S. District Judge Gerard L. Goettel said Wednesday the popular entertainer was a public figure, "a woman who has occupied the fantasies of many moviegoers over the years (and) chose to perform unclad in one of her films."

Thus, Goettel said, she could not sue the magazine for printing a picture of her naked from the waist up. The reproduction of the still photograph, taken from the 1978 movie "Magic," did not constitute an invasion of privacy, he said.

The judge called Ann-Margret "a woman of beauty, talent and courage."

"It would appear, from her reaction to her inclusion in the...magazine, that she is also a woman of taste," the judge said, calling the magazine "tacky."

New Allocation For Interstate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Transportation Department said Wednesday it has received an additional $1.6 million allocation for the proposed Benson-to-Wilmington extension of Interstate 40.

Transportation Secretary

Thomas Bradshaw said the new allocation would allow the state to advertise for bids on four initial contracts totaling about $20 million in October.

Completion dates for the projects range from the fall of 1982 to mid-summer 1983.

In Dire Need Of One Big Toe

DAWSON CITY, Yukon (AP) — Wanted: One big toe to keep the Sluice Box Lounge's "Sourtoe" cocktail from going the way of the Klondike gold rush.

Capt. Dick Stevenson, a riverboat tour operator, says he's considering running that advertisement to save the saloon's tradition of offering a glass of champagne with a pickled toe floating in it.

The tradition — which has had 725 takers in eight years — was threatened two months ago when someone swallowed the toe, the relic of a trapper's boot with frostbite. Stevenson says tourists have demanded the drink but undertakers enlisted to help in obtaining the necessary ingredient have been unsuccessful so far.

Car In Bedroom No Nightmare

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — It could have been a nightmare, but James D. Harrell knew he wasn't dreaming when he saw a 1972 Chevrolet — its wheels still spinning — suspended just above his bed.

The car, driven by Stephen Nelson Smith, 28, of Portsmouth, careened out of control Wednesday morning, ripping through Harrell's backyard shed and the wall of his Academy Park bedroom, police said.

"I looked up and saw the wheels turning over my head and had to call my wife to help get me out," said Harrell who emerged uninjured from the incident. Smith, also unhurt, was charged with failure to maintain control of his vehicle, according to authorities.

Reinstating A Low-Cost Call

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The state Public Service Board has bucked inflationary by ordering the phone company to reinstate the 10-cent telephone call in Vermont.

The board ordered New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. on Wednesday to stop charging 20 cents for local pay calls. The order, effective Nov. 1, reversed a 1976 board ruling that made Vermont the only New England state with a 20-cent charge for coin calls.

The regulatory board said rates were increased "based upon the company's idea of what should be appropriate," not on actual cost figures.

Alternative In Desert Shrubs

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — A University of California biologist says desert shrubs and tropical plants may offer an alternative to petroleum-based pesticides.

"Desert plants — as well as those in the tropics — seem to be one of the richest sources of these natural insecticides," said Eloy Rodriguez of UC-Irvine on Wednesday. "A plant can't run away from its enemies, so it makes these chemicals for defense."

Rodriguez said his research, conducted with other scientists in Mexico, may also yield natural products that could be farmed in the future as substitutes for petroleum products used in making rubber and lubricants.

KILLED VIETNAMESE BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Guerrillas opposing the Vietnam-backed Cambodian regime claimed today to have killed three Vietnamese in an attack on the national stadium in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

Found Exact Day Of Ben's Arrival

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Historian Claude-Anne Lopez says she's discovered the exact day young Ben Franklin arrived here from Boston.

Historians have generally accepted the entry in Franklin's autobiography that he came to Philadelphia on a Sunday morning in 1723. The question had always been which Sunday.

Mrs. Lopez told the American Philosophical Society here that in her research on Franklin at Yale University she discovered a letter to him by a Paris bank. At the bottom of the letter was a series of dates tracing Franklin's itinerary from Boston to Philadelphia, showing he reached his destination on Oct. 6, 1723.

Multi-Death Accidents Mount

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A car carrying three migrant farmworkers pulls out to pass a vehicle on a hill on a rural road. As the migrants' car tops the hill, still in the wrong lane, it crashes head-on into a young couple's car. All five people die in the collision.

A few days later, a medical examiner says tests show alcohol in the blood of the driver of the migrants' car.

According to the state Highway Patrol, such multi-fatality accidents are becoming more commonplace on North Carolina's highways.

The accident in which the five people died occurred on a weekend two weeks ago near Zebulon. Twenty people were killed in traffic accidents in the state that weekend.

This past weekend, 21 people lost their lives on the state's roads.

Highway fatalities for this year are running slightly behind last year's figure, with 967 killed so far this year and 977 at the same last year. But the patrol says the large number of weekend fatalities is quickly pushing this year's total up.

Patrol officials blame the soaring number of accidents on an increase of drunk drivers, speed-limit violations and more traffic on the road.

"I'd have to say it's a combination of factors that's causing more accidents, especially fatal accidents," said Lt. Arnold Rector of the Highway Patrol. "But the increase happens every year this time as children go back to the school and people do their last traveling of the season."

"I will say that more people are getting killed in multi-fatality accidents this year," he added. "I believe people are letting their speeds inch up again. They're just not obeying the 55 mph speed limit in a lot of cases."

Rector said one of the patrol's key goals is to keep as many drunk drivers off the road as possible. So far this year, drunk-driving arrests are up 2,132 over last year during the same time.

"Last year was a record year for drunk-driving arrests," Rector said. "We arrested 45,962. And this year is shaping up to be another record year. We can't prevent accidents and fatalities if we don't get the drunk drivers off the road and keep them off."

Meanwhile, the state has launched an all-out effort to convince motorists to keep their speed down. Called the "I Believe in 55" campaign, highway safety officials are using outdoor advertising, television and radio spots, even "55" t-shirt give-aways, to get their message across.

"We've had a 55 project of some type for three years now," said Floyd Bass, head of the Governor's Highway Safety Program. "And surveys we've done on the project to test its effectiveness shows that people think the 55 law, even they aren't following it. They think it's a good law."

Bass said the state has set aside $125,000 for the project for fiscal 1980-81. The money goes mostly for advertising, he said.

The "I Believe in 55" message is plastered on 100 billboards across the state, donated by the Outdoor Advertising Association of North Carolina.

Bass said the Highway Patrol also is working with the governor's program to prevent accidents. He said about $1 million was allocated to the state patrol this year by the U.S. Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

"Most of this money goes for overtime, to keep more men in the field," Bass said. "One of our main concerns is preventing accidents in rural areas, where they seem to be happening most."

With the long Labor Day weekend approaching, the patrol is putting most of its efforts into keeping down fatal accidents.

The N.C. State Motor Club has predicted that 19 people will die on the state's highways over the 78-hour weekend, which begins at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight on Monday. Last year, there were 24 fatalities.

"This has to be one of the worst times of the year, accident-wise," Rector said. "And this coming weekend, it's going to take more than the patrol's efforts to keep the highways safe. It's going to be necessary for motorists not only to accept their civic responsibility and drive sensibly and safely but to drive alertly to prevent accidents."

"We just don't have enough men to arrest all speeders and drunk drivers who will be on the road," he added. "But maybe if we can get past this weekend, the trend of dozens of accidents every weekend will reverse itself. If it doesn't, I don't know what more we can do."

Swim Session Is Planned

The Department of Physical Education and Aquatics at East Carolina University will sponsor a Masters Swimming and Physical Fitness program this year for adult men and women, Ray Scharf, director of aquatics at the university said today.

The "classes" will meet Tuesday and Thursday nights from 8 to 10, Scharf said, with the program designed to aid out-of-school adults to develop stroke techniques, building and maintain good physical fitness, and swim in Master's competition.

"It's not a learn-to-swim class," Scharf emphasized. "You have to be able to swim. But you don't have to be an expert swimmer."

"We encourage anybody out of school to participate in the program."

According to Scharf, "We don't know exactly what the cost will be at this point," although he said the cost would probably be in the neighborhood of $70 to $80 per semester, "maybe lower if you take the program for the whole year."

The aquatic director noted that, "we hope to have 40 or 50 to start out with."

To register for the program, scheduled to be held at Minges Coliseum, or for additional information, interested persons should call Scharf at 757-6490.

Scharf said the program is being started through efforts of Dr. Ray Martinez, chairman of the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety.

Cubans Still Seek Haven

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Two more boatloads of Cuban refugees arrived in Key West while two other boats believed bound for Cuba were escorted back to port, the Coast Guard said.

The two boats to arrive Wednesday carried approximately 290 refugees, a Coast Guard spokeswoman said.

Crewmen from the boats intercepted en route to Cuba were turned over to U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials for possible prosecution for violating a presidential ban on the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift, which has brought nearly 121,000 Cubans to the United States, officials said.

The cruiser Aio Pi, with two men aboard, was stopped about 30 miles north of the Cuban coast by the cutter Courageous, spokesman Mike Ayres said.

The 45-foot pleasure craft Mila Rae, carrying four people, was intercepted by the cutter Alert 15 miles north of Cuba, Ayres said.

Secret-Baring Said Political

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political reasons were behind the "totally irresponsible" leak about the development of the secret "stealth" plane by the U.S. military, a congressional committee has been told by the editor of a military affairs magazine.

Benjamin Schemmer, editor of the Armed Forces Journal, told the House Armed Services subcommittee on investigations Wednesday that the disclosure of the plane was revealed to him by a high defense Department official.

The panel is investigating leaks of classified material. Schemmer, whose magazine published the story last Thursday, testified that he received the story through "a directed leak for political purposes because I can think of no reason why this story should be made known at this time."

Schemmer said he was told about the plane by a "senior defense official" who he declined to identify. He told reporters he was informed at least two days before congressional committees were told about the project and he said he told his source that it was "totally irresponsible" to leak the story.

Last Friday, Defense Secretary Harold Brown announced that the United States has achieved a major technological breakthrough that will neutralize any Soviet air defenses against American bombers, cruise missiles or fighter-bombers.

The new technology, dubbed "Stealth," would prevent Soviet radar or other sensors from spotting American manned and unmanned aircraft until it was too late to knock them down.

Admiral Daniel Murphy, a Pentagon official, told the subcommittee that Pentagon research chief William Perry had given Schemmer the information.

Before Perry met with Schemmer, the decision was made to "declassify" the fact that the project existed, Murphy was quoted as saying.

Late Shah's Son Leaves College

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Reza Pahlavi, son of the late shah of Iran, is leaving up his academic career in Massachusetts to stay in Egypt with relatives, according to officials of Williams College.

Pahlavi, 19, notified the school of his decision Wednesday, said officials at the four-year liberal arts institution.

Pahlavi's father, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, fell from power in Iran in February 1979 and died in exile in Egypt in July.

Pahlavi did not indicate when he might return to the college, officials said. Cris T. Kossarad, acting dean of the college, said beyond loss of time and work toward a degree, Pahlavi's leave of absence would have no effect on his status as a student.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined again today as interest rates continued to rise.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down more than 5 points in early trading, recovered slightly and was off 3.07 to 940.02 after two hours of trading, as declines outnumbered advances by an 8-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange issues.

Citibank became the last of the major banks to raise its prime lending rate to 11.5 percent, and interest rates in the bond market also rose.

President Carter's economic proposals, scheduled to be released later in the day,

Rose High

Despite Heavy Loses, Rampants Return Large Numbers Of Experienced Players, Are Favored

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Five years ago, Rose High

School's Rampants won the State 4-A playoffs, then went 1-9 the following year.

Last year, the Rampants nearly pulled off the same fete, going to the finals before losing to High Point Central, 21-9. And Rose coach Dave Bumgarner admits that he has had thoughts of the same thing happening again this year that happened in 1976.

However, the chances of that appear to be slight. The Rampants are picked to be the team to beat in Division I, and Bumgarner relishes that thought. "I'd like to think that we could be back in the playoffs again this year," he said.

The difference in this year and 1976 is that there is a lot more experience coming back, although there are not that many starters. The offense is experienced at every position. The defense is somewhat younger, but there are enough people with experience around to fill the bill.

The only spot in the entire game plan that worries the coach is the kicking. With the loss of Ted King from last year's team, the Rampants are without a true specialist. "Kicking is a sideline for our kickers this year, and not a speciality like in the past," Bumgarner said. "Our kicking game worries me because it is so erratic. We get one good kick and one bad one—in all phases of the game."

Van Warren appears likely to hold down the punting job, while Mike Thurber will handle field goals and extra points. Curtis Spell will do the kickoffs. "I'm hoping that things will improve as we go along, but our kicking game could really make the difference in a close game."

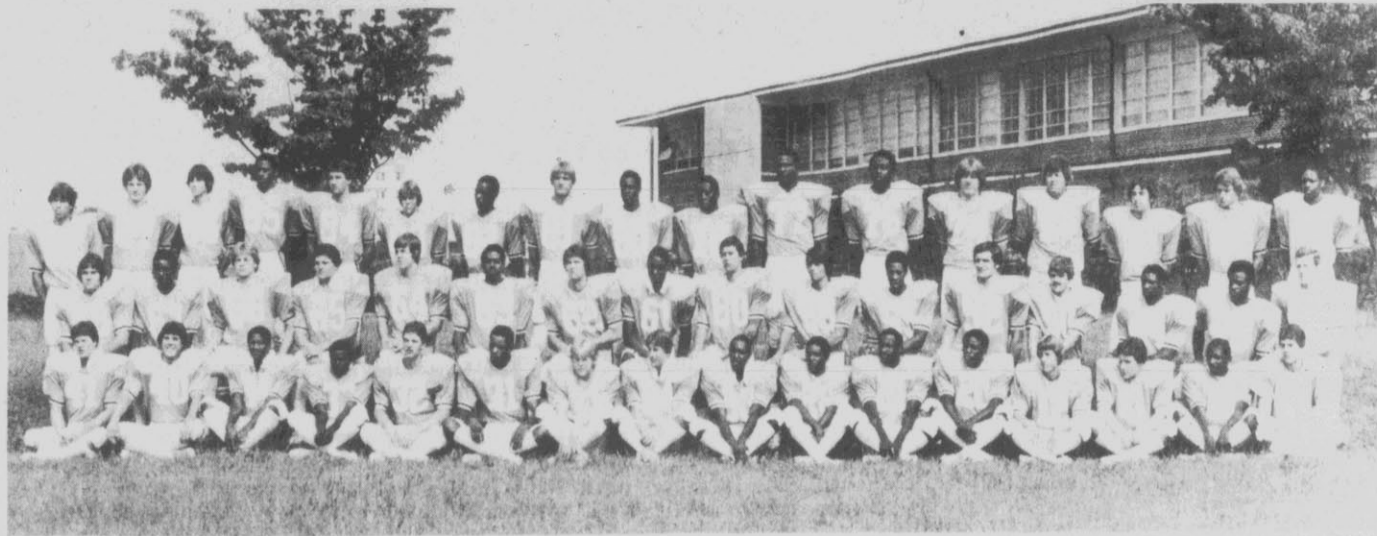

Otherwise, the veteran coach feels very well about the coming season. "I was a little disturbed with the attitude last weekend, but it picked up the start of this week. I think the fellows are getting in the right frame of mind for the opener."

That comes Friday night in Ficklen Stadium, when the Rampants entertain Kinston High School in a 7:30 p.m. game.

"Except for the kicking game, we are either on or ahead of schedule."

Connors Says Ready For Open

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors is one of the few favored players in the U.S. Open who came to the tournament completely healthy. Best of all, he says, is the shape of his game.

"I really moved well out there and I hit the ball well," said the third-seeded Connors after his 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 triumph Wednesday night over Marcel Freeman, a junior at UCLA who is ranked No.203 in the world and was in way over his head against the three-time Open titlist. "Everybody supposedly had bad ankles (John McEnroe) and knees (Bjorn Borg). I'm fine, except for a skin infection."

Connors recalled that Freeman "was a ballboy for the final in '76," in which the left-hander beat Borg. Asked if that made him feel old, Connors snapped:

"I never feel old." Most of the top seeds who were idle Wednesday returned to the courts today, hopeful the 97-degree heat wouldn't return with them. Among the men, No.1 Borg took on hard-serving John Sadri; No.4 Guillermo Vilas played John Hayes; No.5 Vitas Gerulaitis was to oppose Hank Pfister at night; No.8 Eddie Dibbs had a tough match-up with Vijay Amritraj of India; No.9 Peter Fleming played Johan Kriek of South Africa; No.11 Roscoe Tanner pitted his blazing serves against Jimmy Arias; 14th-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland battled Austrian Peter Feigl; and No.15 Yannick Noah of France played Bruce Manson.

The women's schedule had No.1 Tracy Austin against Rosie Casals; No.3 Chris Evert Lloyd against Peanut Louie in a night match; No.11 Kathy Jordan against Sharon Walsh; No.12 Virginia Wade of Britain against Claudia Casabianca of Argentina; No.13 Pam Shriver against Renee Blount; No.14 Ivanna Madruga of Argentina against Kim Jones, and No.16 Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia against JoAnne Russell.

Connors was satisfied with his performance against Freeman but said it was not vintage Connors...not yet.

"You don't want to start off with your best now, you want to get better and better," he admitted. "You make it through a few rounds, improving each time and getting used to the weather and the conditions."

"I'm confident I can win. If I didn't think I would win, I would stay home."

No.6 seed Gene Mayer and No.12 Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina were headed home after taking divergent routes to defeat. Mayer was leading Gianni Ocleppo of Italy 6-2, 6-1, 6-7, 2-4 when he reinjured a hamstring and was forced to withdraw.

Clerc managed to stay on court throughout his 3-hour, 23-minute encounter with Bernie Mitton of South Africa before falling 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 2-6, 7-5.

Other men's seeds to advance were No.7 Harold Solomon, a 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 winner over Jan Norback of Sweden; No.10 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 over Tim Mayotte; No.13 Brian Gottfried, 6-7, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 over David Carter of Australia, and No.16 Vic Amaya, 6-4, 6-2, 7-6 over Larry Davidson.

Ilie Nastase clowned his way past Patrice Dominguez of France 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2 on an outer court, then was fined $750 by the Grand Prix tournament supervisor for his actions — $250 for an obscene gesture directed at a linesman and $500 for batting a ball at another linesman.

"I think they made a couple of bad calls but I didn't complain so much," said the controversial Romanian. "I don't get as upset as I used to anymore."

Aside from those outbursts, Nastase was mostly playful, jibing with the crowd and twice dunking his head in a cooler filled with ice.

Second-seeded Martina Navratilova easily could have been upset in her opening match Wednesday night by unheralded Lena Sandin of Sweden. Navratilova, who has never won here, survived 6-4, 4-6, 6-2 despite several lapses.

"I had never seen her play before," said Navratilova. "Before last week, I'd never heard of her. Everybody said, 'No problem.' Ha!"

"She didn't give me anything. She hit so deep it was impossible for me to come in. I'll have to play a lot better against the top baseliners."

"I'm in great shape but I feel a little slow," noted Navratilova, who has been plagued with a bad back in recent weeks. "It was really hard to see the ball. I don't know if it was the lights but I would see the ball a split-second late or sometimes when it was passed me."

Bumgarner said.
Only five starters return to the offensive unit, but the rest of the projected starters saw enough action last year to make them experienced. Also one of the starters back is quarterback Kenny Barnes, who runs the wishbone offense with skill. While not blessed with amazing speed, Barnes seems to be able to make the pitch at the right time, and he has also brought an improved passing game to the Rampant offense.

"Until last year, I didn't really have confidence in our passing game," Bumgarner said. "But with Kenny throwing and a good group of receivers, I don't think the pass is a wasted play. We can hit, both on the long and short patterns. We were just a step away from completing several long passes against New Bern in our scrimmage, and we made good on several short passes. Our receivers are well-coached, run good patterns and our line is giving Kenny good protection."

Behind Barnes (6-0, 170), the Rampants have two untried players, but Bumgarner feels confident in their ability to do the job. They are juniors Barry Smith (5-10, 140) and Tom Buie (5-9, 148).

Bumgarner is blessed with a stable full of running backs. "I think we have seven backs who can do the job for us. While none of them are starters back from last year, we do have a good amount of experience and that will pay off for us."

The backfield aces include Jeff Porter (5-11, 185), Robert Brown (5-11, 180), Roger Williams (5-11, 167), and Alonza Taylor (5-7, 155), in the first line, with Mike Spell (5-10, 185), Woody Whichard (5-8, 160) and Ashley Ferrell (5-9, 145) providing backup to them.

The split end position finds Chris McLawhorn returning to offer a stiff challenge to opposing defenses. The 6-0, 162-pound junior was the leading receiver on last year's team. He finds backup help from Warren (6-1, 165) and Paul MacMillan (6-1, 168). At the tight end spot, Donald Johnson (6-2, 175) returns, with Marty Barnes (5-11, 150) adding depth.

The offensive line features six lettermen, but only two starters back. Stuart Ward (6-3, 210) returns to his center position, while Jeff Ferrell (6-0, 190) is back at one of the guard spots. They will be joined by Johnny Jackson (5-11, 185) at one guard slot, with Bobby McRoy (6-1, 250) and Jerry Cullipher (6-0, 170) at the tackles. Greg Powell (6-2, 190) will add depth, with the ability to play any one of the three spots.

The starting unit is virtually all senior. There are only four juniors: Williams, Porter, McLawhorn and Brown. The second unit, however, is largely inexperienced, except for the backfield. "Our line is almost entirely made up of people up from the junior varsity, and we want to get them as much playing time as we can to get them ready for next year's starting assignments," Bumgarner said.

The Rampant defense finds only three returning starters back. They are tackle Curtis Spell (6-5, 220), who may also play some defensive end, and interior linebackers Ferrell and Johnson, who will probably be the only ones scheduled for much two-way duty.

James Brewington (6-4, 180) and Thurber (6-1, 180) are expected to handle the ends, with Larry Batts (6-2, 170) joining Spell at the other tackle slot. The outside linebackers will be John Vestal (5-10, 170) and Jamie Byrd (5-11, 165). The secondary has Marty Barnes and James Carter (6-4, 180) at the corners, and Barry Smith at safety.

"I'm pleased with the defensive play so far," Bumgarner said. "We're not as big as we were last year, but I think we should be all right. Except for the three returning players, the majority of the starters are up from the junior varsity."

That doesn't trouble the coach either. "All of them have played a lot in their own element. On defense, if a youngster wants to make a tackle, he just has to go to the ball. It takes hustle, and mostly you have to react to the ball, not make decisions. It's a little more difficult in the secondary, but youngsters can still do the job if they are determined."

Defensively, Bumgarner feels that there are a lot of people who can be called on for backup roles. They include John Sheppard (6-4, 205), Freddie Cherry (5-11, 165), Ben Smith (6-0, 206), Johnny Green (6-2, 170), Ward, Williams, and David Sherrod (5-11, 153).

Bumgarner feels that his closest competition for the title in Division I will come from Rocky Mount and Northeastern, with Fike as a dark horse. "I think the non-conference games are going to play a big role. A team that can come through those three games unbeaten is going to be hard to stop. And a team that doesn't win any of them is going to be hard-pressed to be in the conference race. I really don't see any in-between teams in the conference this year. They'll be either up or down."

Bumgarner is hoping that a coaching decision he made three years ago will begin to really pay off this year. "Three years ago, we took over the junior varsity program. The same coaches who coach the varsity also coach the junior varsity. This bunch of seniors were 9-1 as sophomores, and were 11-3 last year as juniors. The juniors now were 9-1 last year as junior varsity players. So we have a winning tradition for all of the players."

Bumgarner feels that Friday night's opener is a "big" game. "All opening games are important. You set the stage for the rest of the season with that opening game. If you lose and don't get back up for the second game, you are in trouble. If you win, you still have to correct the mistakes you make. If you do this, or if you lose and do this, you can still make a good year of it. That's what we did last year—lost and went on from there."

"But this year, I'd like to win, and have a good game, let everyone play and get a lot of experience for our young kids."

The coach also pointed out that having all three of the expected challengers for the league title playing here could be a big factor for Rose. "I think we have a fine home schedule, with Fike, Rocky Mount and Northeastern all playing here, along with Enloe and Kinston as non-conference games. It's a good slate for the fans."

But success won't be all that easy. "We're going to have to do our thing. We're going to have to dominate the defense, and not put the ball on the ground. We can't mess around."

High School Football Schedule Gets Underway Friday Night

It's here! It's hard to believe, but the 1980 high school football season begins tomorrow night. Seven area schools open their seasons, all but two schools on the road.

Greenville Rose, 4-A runner-up a year ago, plays host to Kinston at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium. Rose lost to the Vikings a year ago in season-opener, 14-8.

Meanwhile, Ayden-Grifton travels to Williamston, D.H.

Conley goes to West Craven, Greene Central travels to South Lenoir, Roanoke plays host to Belhaven and Jamesville travels to Princeton.

Farmville Central and North Pitt do not open the season until next week.

Ayden-Grifton, 5-5 a year ago, lost to Williamston, 20-0, in last season's opener. Williamston was 8-2 last season.

D.H. Conley, beginning his final season in the Eastern Carolina Conference before moving to the Coastal Conference, looks for its first winning season ever. The Vikings, 4-5-1 last year under first-year coach Jimbo Walker, beat West Craven, 19-12, in last year's opener.

Greene Central, picked to be among the leaders in the ECC in 1980, faces a South Lenoir team it beat, 20-7, to open the season. The Rams were 7-3 in 1979.

Jamesville, winners of the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference crown with an 8-2 record, faces a Princeton team that walloped the Bullets, 28-6, in the first round of the state 1-A playoffs last year.

Roanoke hopes to duplicate its 34-8 opening-season win over Belhaven this season. The Redskins were 3-7 last season.

Steve Ovett In Record Run

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Steve Ovett, who already holds the world record for the mile, has broken the metric mile record he shared previously with fellow Briton Sebastian Coe.

Ovett led a successful three-man assault here Wednesday on the 1,500-meter mark of 3 minutes, 32.1 seconds that he and Coe held jointly.

Ovett, aided by a blistering early pace, was clocked in 3:31.4. West Germans Thomas Wessinghage and Harald Hudak also were under the previous mark in 3:31.6 and 3:32.0, respectively.

The 24-year-old Ovett let Wessinghage set the fast pace, went ahead with about 500 meters to go and held off the West Germans in the race to the tape.

Afterwards, Ovett credited Wessinghage for the record, saying he "is the best pacesetter for me."
Ovett, who rarely speaks to reporters, had said in advance that he intended to go for a record, and the absence of Coe apparently helped his effort.

"I could start here without any stress," he said.
Wessinghage and Hudak both missed the 1980 Olympics

Brett Gets 1 Hit; Royals Unstoppable

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fred Holdsworth, 10th man on the Milwaukee Brewers' 10-man pitching staff, did what his colleagues generally had failed to do.

Holdsworth stopped George Brett.

Well, sort of.

Holdsworth snapped Brett's streak of eight hits in as many official times at bat Wednesday night, but that mattered little to Brett or to the rest of the Kansas City Royals.

Brett's batting average dropped only a point to .406 with his 1-for-3 night, and the Royals as a team remain almost as untouchable. Willie Aikens knocked in two runs with a double and a sacrifice fly as the Royals defeated the Brewers 5-4 to open an 18-game lead over second place Oakland in the American League West.

The Royals have won their last five games and 13 of their last 15. The Brewers plunged to sixth place in the AL East with their fifth defeat in a row and eighth in their last nine games.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday, Cleveland beat Minnesota 4-1, Toronto defeated Texas 6-4 and Chicago beat Detroit 3-2 in 14 innings.

Brett singled off loser Paul Mitchell, 4-3 in the third inning as his 8-for-8 streak tied a Royals' record set by Amos Otis in 1970.

In the fifth, Brett slapped a Holdsworth pitch on the ground toward Brewers second baseman Paul Molitor, who threw the ball away for a two-base error. But the streak was over, and Brett fled out to deep left center in the seventh.

"When Brett went 5-for-5 last night, it put me in awe," Holdsworth said. "I figured if I got behind on him it makes him a .600 or .700 hitter, but I changed speeds well and got ahead of him. Heck, I'm just happy to get anybody out."

Brett was plunked in the knee by a soft curve by Mitchell in the first inning. However, Brett said he wasn't upset that it cost him a time at bat and possibly another hit.

"If it was a fast ball at my head I probably would have been a little upset, but not at that," he said. "It was the first pitch I saw, and I had no idea what it was when it was coming. It was a big breaking pitch. I thought it was going to hit me in the head, and then it hit me in the knee."

"I was 3-for-15 coming in here, and I went 2-for-4, 5-for-5 and 1-for-3. I guess I'll take that," Brett said. "If I don't let the pressure and the media affect me, and if I stay out of a prolonged slump, I've got a chance to hit .400."

The Royals took the lead to stay with a first inning run as Willie Wilson hit a bloop double, took third on a fly ball and scored on Aikens' sacrifice fly.

They made it 4-0 with three runs in the third. Brett singled with two out and stole second. Aikens and Darrell Porter hit RBI-doubles and Otis singled in Porter.

Gorman Thomas hit a two-run homer, his 31st, off winner Paul Splittorff, 10-9, in the fourth, and the Brewers pulled to within 4-3 in the fifth as Dick Davis singled and raced home when Molitor doubled and Clint Hurdle kicked the ball in right field for an error.

Hurdle hit his 10th homer in the sixth, and Robin Yount closed the Brewers' scoring with his 20th homer in the eighth.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 4

Alfredo Griffin tripled home two runs to highlight a three-run fourth inning that carried Toronto over Texas.

John Mayberry doubled in a run to give the Blue Jays a 3-2 lead in the third and upped it to 6-2 the following inning when Griffin knocked in two runs with his triple and scored on Roy Howell's double.

Bump Wills had a two-run homer for the Rangers.

Indians 4, Twins 1

Alan Bannister knocked in two runs and Len Barker won his 16th game of the season to lead Cleveland over Minnesota.

Barker, 16-8, struck out eight to give him 139 for the year, tops in the American League, in winning his ninth game in 10 decisions since the All-Star game.

Bannister singled in a run in the first inning and added an RBI-double in the seventh.

White Sox 3, Tigers 2

Lamar Johnson drove in three runs with two singles, including the game-winner in the 14th inning, to pace Chicago over Detroit.

It was Chicago's first victory in eight meetings with the Tigers this season and snapped a three-game Detroit winning streak.

Johnson's second hit followed singles by Leo Sutherland and Mike Squires. In the third inning, the White Sox took a 2-0 lead on singles by Greg Pryor and Sutherland, a sacrifice by Squires and a two-run single by Johnson.

Braves Top Bucs For 8th Time

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
You've got to hand it to the Atlanta Braves this season — the Pittsburgh Pirates have.

The defending World Champions have played tough against the rest of the National League, but simply roll over whenever they see Atlanta Blue.

The Braves continued their uncanny domination of the Pirates with a 7-4 decision Wednesday night, beating them for the eighth time in nine starts this year. And Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner is frankly puzzled.

"I don't know why they've done so well, so consistently against us," said Tanner. "They have a team that scores a lot of runs and they have had great pitching in these games."

"We just have to pick ourselves up."

The victory was the Braves' ninth in their last 10 games and put them at .500 for the first time this year with a 63-63 record. They've been trying to get straightened out ever since a 1-9 start this season.

Despite the loss, the Pirates maintained a ½-game lead in the NL East over the Montreal Expos, who lost a 1-0 decision to the San Francisco Giants.

In other NL action, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 4-3; St. Louis walloped Houston 10-2 and San Diego turned back New York 4-1.

Bob Horner drove in five runs with a homer and a double to lead the Atlanta offense. Horner slammed a three-run shot in the fourth off loser Don Robinson, 5-7. He drove in two more runs in the seventh inning with a double.

Rick Matula, 8-12, walked two and struck out four in 71-3 innings before needing relief help in the eighth from Larry Bradford and Rick Camp. Al Hrabosky pitched out of a two-out, two-on situation in the ninth to gain his third save.

Giants 1, Expos 0

Darrell Evans singled home a fourth-inning run and Ed Whitson combined with reliever Greg Minton on a two-hitter as San Francisco stopped Montreal in a game delayed almost two hours by rain.

Whitson, 9-9, allowed his only hit when Larry Parrish singled with two out in the fifth. Whitson walked two and struck out two before being lifted after the second rain delay for Minton, who recorded his 16th save.

The Giants kept alive their outside chances of overtaking the leaders in the West.

"The players don't think they're out of it and that's what counts," said Manager Dave Bristol, whose Giants are eight games behind front-running Houston.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 3

Steve Carlton became the first NL pitcher to win 20 games this season as he beat Los Angeles with Pete Rose driving in the winning run on a groundout in the eighth inning.

Carlton, 20-7, allowed eight hits and struck out eight in eight innings before being lifted for a pinch-hitter in the game-winning rally. Tug McGraw pitched the ninth, gaining his 14th save. Steve Howe, 6-6, was the loser.

A home run by Ron Cey, his 20th, had provided the Dodgers with a 3-3 tie in the sixth.

"I've lost something on my fastball, but my slider and curve are right there," Carlton said.

Talking about his season, the left-hander noted: "It's right there with '72." Carlton won the Cy Young Award in 1972 as the NL's best pitcher with a 27-10 record.

Carlton, who refuses to talk to reporters, made his remarks in a radio interview.

Cardinals 10, Astros 2

John Martin pitched seven strong innings in relief during his major league debut and Ken Reitz slammed a three-run double to cap a five-run rally in the third inning, pacing St. Louis over Houston.

Martin, a left-hander called up by St. Louis on Tuesday, took over for right-hander John Fulgham after the Cardinal starter's shoulder stiffened. He restricted Houston to five of his seven hits, setting down 13 Astros in a row starting in the third inning, before getting relief help himself from John Littlefield in the ninth.

Reitz, meanwhile, picked on a delivery by Ken Forsch, 10-11, to cap the Cardinals' five-run, third-inning rally.

Padres 4, Mets 1

Jerry Mumphrey had three hits and scored the go-ahead run and Dave Winfield contributed a home run to help San Diego beat New York.

San Diego starter Rick Wise, 5-5, gave way to Rollie Fingers in the seventh after allowing eight hits and New York's only run. Fingers recorded his 17th save with one-hit relief.

In the seventh inning, the Padres scored three times to wipe out a 1-0 Mets lead built on a bases-loaded balk by Wise in the sixth. Mumphrey doubled home one run in the seventh before scoring the go-ahead run on Gene Tenace's sacrifice fly.

Rough Edges For Pirates

East Carolina's Pirates went through a three-hour workout last night, and Coach Ed Emory noted that it was "a little rough around the edges."

Emory, whose team will be going only once a day from here on in, said that the players having to go through all of the processes of getting registered for their classes, and the like, had served as somewhat of a disruptive influence on the team, but one that was to be expected.

The coach also worried more about his young offensive line, as three members of the group did not go through the practice session. All-America guard Wayne Inman missed the drill with an infected knee, while Tootie Robbins was out with a sore leg. Center Tony Hensley has not yet returned from a back injury.

An injury to freshman running back Ernest Byner has proved not to be as serious as first thought, and he is expected back shortly. Running back Anthony Collins and quarterback Greg Stewart are both back running, but have not yet returned to contact work.

Asked if he had put in all of the offense and defense he expected to put in, Emory replied that he had all he wanted, "except for a few studs up front."

Drills will continue today, with the Pirates being at Carolina East Mall for autographs and pictures on Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. In addition, season tickets for the ECU games will be on sale at the mall Friday night and all day Saturday.

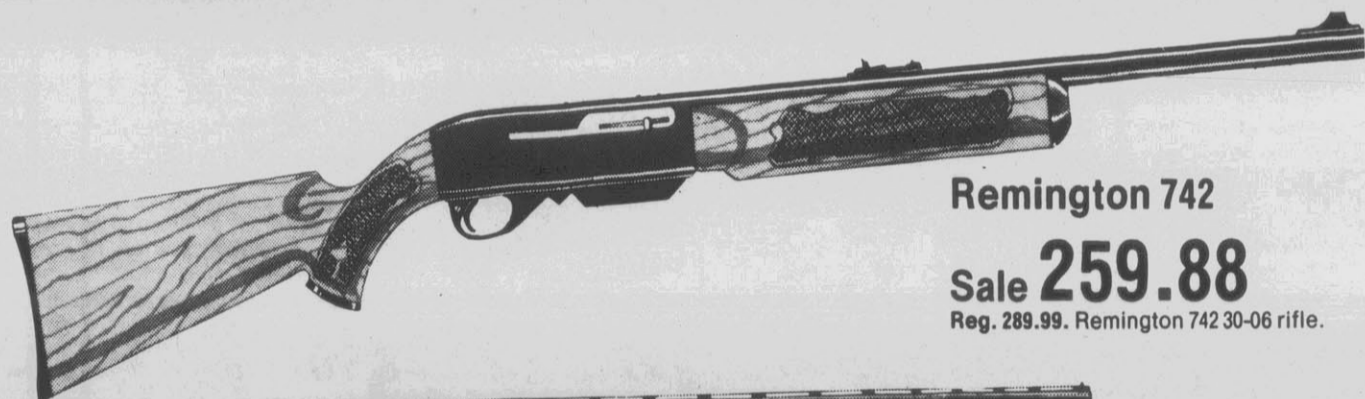

Parks Wins Putt Title

Alan Parks shot a 21-under-par 123 for four rounds to win the Course #2 Marathon Championship at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

David Manning was one stroke back for second while Tim Brock with a 127 was third and Junior Knox with a 129 was fourth.

Robert Beacham, who finished seventh last night, became the overall marathon champ because of his fine play (19 under par) on course #1 last week.

Cowboys, Rams, Lions Top NFC Picks

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — You're expecting the Dallas Cowboys to cave in, aren't you?
Forget it. They may not be quite the same without Roger Staubach, but they'll be good enough to ride herd on the rest of the East Division in the National Conference this season, squeezing past Philadelphia for the crown.
Over in the West, the Los Angeles Rams, a few miles further south in Anaheim this year, will give their new hometown fans plenty to cheer about as they roll to another division title while New Orleans and San Francisco battle it out for second place.

The big turnaround — two of them, as a matter of fact — will take place in the Central Division. There, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers will stagger to mediocrity or worse while the Detroit Lions roar from the bottom of the division to the top.
Here, then, is how the NFC standings will probably look just before the start of the playoffs:

EAST DIVISION
Dallas Cowboys
Philadelphia Eagles
St. Louis Cardinals
Washington Redskins
New York Giants
WEST DIVISION
Los Angeles Rams
New Orleans Saints
San Francisco 49ers
Atlanta Falcons

CENTRAL DIVISION
Detroit Lions
Chicago Bears
Tampa Bay Buccaneers
Minnesota Vikings
Green Bay Packers

Granted, Staubach was in many ways the soul of the Cowboys (everybody knows they don't have a heart; just a computer). But Danny White is no fuzzy-faced kid. And with Ron Springs probably teaming with Tony Dorsett, he's got two very potent runners when he's not passing to Tony Hill and Drew Pearson.

The decimated defense of a year ago will become the Dooomsday Defense once more as the John Dutton signing begins to pay off and Charlie Waters returns.
Philadelphia's Ron Jaworski relies a bit too heavily on just two offensive stars — running back Wilbert Montgomery and wide (and tall) receiver Harold Carmichael. Without a bit more balance, the Eagles will likely lose a game or two that they could have won.
The only new NFC head coach is Jim Hanifan, returning to St. Louis where he was an assistant. He's got the players all revved up. Now if he can keep owner Billy Bidwill from tinkering in things about which he knows nothing, Hanifan will motivate the Cardinals back to respectability.
The only new AFC head coach is Tom Donahoe, returning to Cleveland where he was an assistant. He's got the players all revved up. Now if he can keep owner Art Modell from tinkering in things about which he knows nothing, Donahoe will motivate the Browns back to respectability.
The Lions of a year ago lacked two major ingredients:

a good quarterback and a good runner. Now they've got 'em both. Quarterback Gary Danielson is back after missing the entire 1979 season with an injury, and rookie Billy Sims.

Assassins Missed Ambassador

By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean escaped unharmed from an assassination attempt by unidentified gunmen who fired machine guns and a rocket-propelled grenade at his armored limousine.

The attack came Wednesday evening, only hours after Dean disclosed that the United States was working with Israel and the United Nations to halt the spiral of violence in southern Lebanon.

Bracketed by two car loads of bodyguards, Dean, his French-born wife Martine, and their adult daughter Catherine, had just left the ambassador's residence in predominantly Christian East Beirut when gunmen opened fire from a Mercedes.

Security sources said Dean ducked down on the back seat when the shooting started and his limousine sped off. Bodyguards in the escort cars peppered the attackers with a hail of automatic weapons fire.

"We fired back at them," one security man said. "I'm not sure if we hit anyone because we left pretty quickly."

Security sources said three suspects were arrested at the scene after Dean's bodyguards shot out the tires of the Mercedes, forcing the gunmen to abandon it. The suspects were not identified.

In an unconfirmed report, Lebanese Radio said a rocket-propelled grenade was fired from a second car.

At total of 20 bullets ripped the ambassador's limousine and the other two cars in the convoy, but security sources said the bullets failed to penetrate the vehicles' armored plating.

Two hours after the attack, Dean appeared outside the American Embassy. He declined to answer questions, but smiled for reporters and held his hands in the air.

It was the first attempted assassination of a U.S. ambassador in Lebanon since 1976 when Ambassador Francis E. Meloy, economic counselor Robert O. Waring and their chauffeur were kidnapped and killed in Beirut during the Lebanese civil war. None of the numerous warring factions in Lebanon claimed responsibility for the envoy's death.

Prime Minister Salim el Hoss said his nation "strongly deplures" the attack on Dean. "Needless to say, it serves only those who are out to sabotage Lebanon's existence," the prime minister said.

Dean spurred a controversy last week when he condemned Israel's massive Aug. 18 attack on Palestinian guerrilla positions in southern Lebanon. State Department officials said at the time that Dean had erred by issuing the condemnation without first consulting with Washington. Lebanese authorities were angered by the State Department's failure to endorse Dean's condemnation.

In his latest statement, broadcast Wednesday over Lebanese Television, Dean avoided pointing a finger of blame at any of the parties involved in the violence in southern Lebanon, where Israel and its Christian allies have been fighting Palestinian guerrillas.

Several hours after Dean was ambushed, unidentified gunmen stopped the Spanish ambassador in Beirut and stole his car. Ambassador Luis Jordana de Pozas told The Associated Press that he and his wife were dragged from their car despite his protestations of diplomatic immunity.

"I told them I was the Spanish ambassador, but they didn't seem to care," he said.

There was no indication whether the two attacks were related.

Woman Excused As A Juror In Garwood Case

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The only woman among 10 prospective jurors was excused Wednesday as attorneys neared their final selection of a jury to decide the fate of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, the only American POW to face court-martial for his actions in Vietnam.

A jury of at least five officers is expected to be chosen when the trial resumes next Tuesday.

Defense attorneys successfully challenged 1st Lt. D.A. Woods Wednesday, eliminating her from the panel. Prosecutors agreed that Ms. Woods should not serve, as she knew one of the participating attorneys personally and had told the court she thought Garwood's trial would affect the image of the Marine Corps.

Garwood, who spent nearly 14 years in Vietnam before returning to the United States last year, is charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy. He has pleaded innocent to the charges.

Under rules of the court, each side has an unlimited number of juror challenges, but each must be argued successfully to the presiding judge. Each side also may exclude one potential juror without explanation.

Under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, the jury which hears Garwood's case can sit with as few as five members or may be composed of many more members with no maximum number.

Preliminary questioning of the 10 prospective jurors ended Wednesday with defense interviews of 1st Lt. E.T. Gonzales, a Vietnam veteran who insisted that he could presume Garwood innocent unless the prosecution proved otherwise.

As with other prospective jurors, Garwood's attorneys repeatedly questioned Gonzales about whether a person should be held responsible for his actions if he is suffering from a mental illness.

Gonzales said he thought there should be an explanation for every action but said he realized the difference between the actions of a mentally ill person and a person operating under his own will.

Gonzales said he did not see the trial as a case of the Marine Corps image versus Robert Garwood. But Gonzales said he did not believe a person convicted of the charges facing Garwood should remain in the Corps.

"We're all proud Marines. It's hard to be humble when you're the best," he said.

Asked what he thought of Garwood sitting in the courtroom, Gonzales replied that he saw Garwood as merely another Marine but added, "If I saw that man in formation, I'd say he needs a haircut."

'Brutally' Cut Mother, Child

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Authorities said Wednesday a woman and her young daughter who were found dead in a Pinehurst apartment had been stabbed repeatedly.

Shelly Diane Chalfinch, 26, and her daughter, Christina, 7, were found in their apartment Tuesday after Ms. Chalfinch failed to report to work.

Medical examiner Jerry Tift said both were "brutally cut and stabbed several times."

Firm Planning Plant At Elon

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The RegO Corp. of Chicago announced plans Wednesday to locate a $5 million manufacturing plant in Elon College.

The plant will produce industrial gas valves and regulators and will have about 300 employees. It is expected to go into operation by 1983.

Revenue-Sharing By State Goal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A League of Municipalities committee agreed Wednesday to ask the 1981 Legislature to create a state-funded revenue sharing program for municipalities.

The recommendation is subject to approval of the league's directors, who meet in Raleigh Oct. 19-21.

The proposed program would be funded from fixed percentages of the state's income or sales tax revenues. No amounts were specified.

Dutch Learning They Too Have Their 'Love Canals'

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
LEKKERKERK, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch are discovering that their nation, carved out of the sea and famous for its canals, may now be laced with poisoned landfills, in situations similar to Love Canal in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

The nation woke up to the dangers of chemical dumping in April when the government ordered the evacuation of all 871 residents from the six-year-old Lekkerkerk West housing development here.

Drums of toxic chemicals, buried in rubble used to fill in four canals under the site, had leaked and contaminated the drinking water.

Since then, towns across the Netherlands have reported their own suspect dumping sites almost daily — a problem aggravated by crash development that devours any sort of landfill to make use of below-sea-level terrain.

On Aug. 20, authorities in Utrecht in the nation's center closed a 29-acre city park after discovering toxic chemicals in landfill used to build the park. City officials are trying to decide whether the fouled ground should be hailed away. The central government in The Hague has responded to the discoveries by launching a nationwide search for hazardous dumping sites and is working to tighten controls on waste disposal and soil protection.

Lekkerkerk West, on the outskirts of a 700-year-old farming village 10 miles east of Rotterdam, has become a ghost town behind a chainlink fence.

Workers in white suits, some wearing gas masks, are dragging 100,000 tons of dirt and muck from under the foundations of the 268 row houses. Some homes may have to be demolished to rid the place of toluene and xylene, toxic byproducts of paint. The same two chemicals were found in the Utrecht park.

After the evacuation at Lekkerkerk, the government promptly bought the homes from those who owned them for the equivalent in Dutch guilders of $82,500 to $108,500 and gave tenants the equivalent of two years' rent.

Many of the displaced families live in a nearby trailer park set up by the government. Some have bought new homes. Few want to return.

"I don't know yet whether people will have faith in these houses when this is cleaned up," says Mayor Hans Ouwerkerk. "Mostly it's an emotional problem."

He stresses that the health danger is far less serious than that suspected at Love Canal in upstate New York.

Just a couple of dozen casks were buried here under the foundations, and no sickness has been linked directly to the leaking wastes. At Love Canal, a company acknowledged dumping 21,000 tons of chemicals, mostly chlorides, into a canal for 10 years, and residents have complained of headaches, miscarriages and other ailments.

Researchers say the chemicals found in Lekkerkerk West can cause headaches, coughing, nausea and dizziness when inhaled or swallowed. The wastes at Love Canal could cause birth defects and other serious genetic problems, U.S. studies found.

But the waste problem still alarms the Dutch. Their nation was built by pushing back the sea and is famous for its dikes, lowland canals and windmills that once drained them. About 60 percent of the 14 million residents live below sea level. Land reclamation is a way of life and landfill is precious.

Lekkerkerk is typical, a town nesting below a dike that holds back the River Lek and now a bedroom suburb for the industrial Rotterdam metropolis.

"The farmers had open ditches, and the industries had a lot of waste, so what was easier than filling in the canals with the waste?" said Jan de Koning of the Heidemij engineering firm, a consultant in the Lekkerkerk excavation.

"From the late 1950s to the early '70s, there was a boom in Holland. But there wasn't enough knowledge of the hazards of waste disposal."

Wietse de Back, spokesman for the Ministry of Health and Environment, says the Lekkerkerk West project saved $100,000 by using rubble instead of clean soil to fill the canals and prepare the site for development.

Now, says de Back, the restoration and rehousing will cost $75 million to $150 million before it is finished next spring.

"At the time it was dumped, it wasn't a crime," de Back says. "We had hardly any environmental legislation at all, except for an 1875 law."

A year ago, Holland implemented a tough chemical waste law, specifying permissible disposal methods for various products. Lekkerkerk has sparked progress on a separate soil protection bill, which would regulate where and how landfill and its contents could be used. That measure is to go to Parliament soon.

While some critics of stiffer environmental rules say the reaction to Lekkerkerk has been excessive, provinces already have gathered partial lists of dubious dumping sites. South Holland Province has catalogued 464 sites, some of them containing chemicals. North Brabant has found 50 sites and Overijssel 14. One newspaper reported that 39 potentially dangerous dumps had been found.

At Lekkerkerk, crews are cataloguing each truckload of soil, noting its original location before it is hauled off to be burned.

Production Of Autos Rising

DETROIT (AP) — Car production in the U.S. this week is expected to be 37.9 percent higher than last week but still will lag far behind last year's pace, an automotive trade publication says.

The five major U.S. carmakers have scheduled 102,963 auto assemblies this week, up from last week's 74,674, Automotive News said Wednesday. However, the figure is 23.7 percent below the 134,982 built in the last week of August 1979.

For the year to date, U.S. auto production is pegged at 4,181,579, a decrease of 29.5 percent from the 5,928,199 cars built in the comparable period a year ago.

Truck production in the U.S. again plummeted, falling to 12,464 this week. The figure is a decrease of 41.7 percent from the 21,378 of last year and 69.6 percent lower than the 40,986 of the final week of August 1979. The publication said U.S. truck production is 1,008,137 so far this year, 56.3 percent below the 2,309,206 built through the period last year.

The 13,547 cars planned for assembly in Canada represent a 34.4 percent drop from the 10,081 of the week before, but a 7 percent drop from the 14,574 built in the final week of August last year. Canadian car production of 546,361 for the year trails the 1979 total of 674,224 by 19 percent.

Canada this week is pegged at 11,091, up 70.4 percent from the 6,508 built last week and 3.8 percent more than the 10,688 assembled in the comparable week last year. The 335,994 truck assemblies for the year are 26 percent fewer than the 454,042 built through the end of August last year.

Cattle Domestication Date Raises New Questions

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The domestication of cattle in East Africa 15,000 years ago has raised doubts about the traditional view of the Tigris and Euphrates river valley as the "cradle of civilization," a University of Massachusetts anthropologist says.

Dr. Charles M. Nelson, associate professor of anthropology at the UMass campus here, said his five-year study found traces of domesticated cattle in East Africa dating back 150 centuries. That is about 8,000 years earlier than scholars had projected their use in the "fertile crescent" between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in the Middle East.

"The traditional view outlined in textbooks is that we trace back our own culture and civilization to a single area of the world — the Middle East," Nelson said Wednesday.

"The assumption has been that it's the cradle of civilization because it had all of the important ingredients — plant and animal domestication, early use of tools — which then spread to India, North Africa, and elsewhere.

"New information, however, suggests that many of these important elements did not originate in the Middle East, but in other areas and may have been transmitted there through trade, immigration and cultural diffusion."

The Middle East can still be considered a "hub" of civilization because several of the innovations "may have come together first there, but the process in the Middle East did not spark the creation of civilization elsewhere," Nelson said.

His findings are among several recent archeological discoveries that cast doubt on the theory that many societal breakthroughs originated in the Tigris and Euphrates valley 7,000 years ago.

Nelson, a specialist in pastoral nomadic societies, worked with National Museum of Kenya officials in uncovering cattle's teeth and bones at three sites in the Lukenya Hill District. Using radiocarbon dating techniques and other methods, he determined the animals lived about 15,000 years ago.

The Kenya site, about 25 miles from Nairobi, is infested by tsetse flies, which would have killed wild cattle, he said.

The fly is less common in settled villages, and Nelson said his evidence indicates tribesmen brought in cattle during the pre-Iron Age era as a beast of burden and as a food source.

A Large Profit In 14-Cent Art

"Just Part Of The Game" LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A painting recently sold for 14 cents has turned a big profit for a Lansing carpet layer.

Clyde Baldwin bought the oil painting — a World War II scene called "Strato-flak by Fisher" — for $25 from his father-in-law, who picked it up at the garage sale for 14 cents.

The large painting by Dean Cornwell, a little-known book illustrator, depicts a battle scene, centering around anti-aircraft guns manufactured by General Motors Corp.'s Fisher Body Division.

"When I first saw it, I knew it was a good, decent work," said Baldwin. He spotted it among other dust-covered second-hand merchandise for sale in his father-in-law's shop.

Although he intended to keep it, he said his wife didn't like spending hard-earned cash on paintings, so he looked around for a dealer.

A Lansing dealer eventually led to correspondence with a Connecticut buyer and a $1,500 sale. The painting will be mailed this week.

Three Extortionists Hunted In Bombing Of Casino

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — The bomb that blew out the side of a Lake Tahoe hotel-casino, sending plumes of smoke skyward and showering debris over several blocks, was a sophisticated device, the FBI says. Agents are hoping its design will trip up whoever planted it and demanded $3 million in $100 bills.

Agents tried to meet the ransom demand to save the posh resort, but the bomb exploded Wednesday during attempts to dismantle it. The blast made rubble of the $20 million casino's bottom floors and blew out most of the windows in the 12-story building.

No one was injured. Thousands of people had been evacuated earlier from a four-block area around the casino.

There was no immediate estimate of damage.

The blast came more than 30 hours after the bomb, encased in a blue steel box inside an IBM computer carton, was first discovered at Harvey's Resort Hotel-Casino.

State and federal officials, some of them experts from nuclear laboratories, had rushed to the scene as gamblers in this resort city tried to make bets on whether the device was a phony.

Today, after the blast and a fire that briefly raged in the casino five hours later, agents were searching for three extortionists.

Jerry Yablonsky, FBI special agent, said the sophisticated design of the bomb might provide clues on who made it.

"I don't know of another similar device being used," Yablonsky said. "I have not seen anything like it in my 28 years of service."

"As far as the FBI is concerned, all the stops are out to bring the perpetrators to justice."

Some of the nation's most highly trained electronics and explosives experts failed in efforts to crack the design.

Scientists and bomb experts from the Lawrence Livermore nuclear weapons laboratory, the Army, the Department of Energy and the FBI worked with the device for more than 24 hours before the ill-fated attempt to disarm the mechanism. The attempt was approved by casino-owner Harvey Gross, 75.

The bomb, which measured 2-by-2-by-4-feet, had another small device on top where 28 mechanical switches were located. Two of the switches were designed to monitor tilt and motion, authorities said.

The bomb reportedly contained 1,000 sticks of dynamite. There was no word on how the device might have been set off, but officials speculated it might have been disarmed by flipping the switches in a specific sequence.

After the blast, the FBI revealed that agents tried to meet a $3 million ransom demand, but the extortionists failed to show at a prearranged helicopter rendezvous point.

"The requests of the extortionists were met," Yablonsky said. "However, they did not show up at a second location after a phone contact had been made to set up the payoff."

He said a helicopter pilot with $3 million put up by Gross was supposed to meet the extortionists "within a 15-mile radius of the club, but (they) never showed." The money was returned to Gross, a rancher and early settler to the Tahoe region.

The pilot had been contacted by the extortionists at a specified location about 12:10 a.m. Wednesday and told to fly to a second site, where he was to "receive a signal from the ground" that never came.

The purpose of the extortion attempt was "solely for profit," Yablonsky said, as the ransom was to be paid in $100 bills.

The bomb was wheeled into the casino at about 5:30 a.m. Tuesday by two men posing as computer technicians, said FBI agent Bill Jansen. While the two men "delivered" the bomb to the casino's second floor offices, a woman driving a white van waited outside, Jansen said.

Minutes later, the bomb was found with a three-page typewritten letter attached explaining the extortion demands.

Experts studied the bomb, after it was packed in 260,000 sandbags, for hours before deciding to use a sensitive mechanical robot to disarm it.

The 3:45 p.m. explosion in the 25-room facility shook nearby casinos "like a sonic boom," said one bystander, rattling glass and drawing cheers from people crowded into nearby casinos. As the bomb exploded, the second and third floors on the building's south side bulged.

Police said the blast vicinity was expected to be closed to traffic for two days.

Cites The Quality Of Law Students

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Central University's law school graduates made the poorest showing on the state bar exam this year, and Dean Harry E. Groves says the result shouldn't be surprising.

Groves said he was disappointed that only 18 of the 76 NCCU graduates — 23.6 percent — taking the test passed, but blamed the low rate on the university's policy of accepting many students that would not meet admission standards at other state law schools.

"Our students, many of them, are what might be called affirmative action students," Groves said Wednesday after announcing the results of the bar exams.

"On any comparison scale of admissions criteria, our students would fall at the bottom. It shouldn't be stunning to anybody that that carries through (to the bar exam)."

Of the 31 NCCU graduates taking the exam for the first time, 12 — 38.7 percent — passed. Of the 45 NCCU graduates taking the exam for at least the second time, six passed.

Last year 45.4 percent of NCCU's first-time candidates passed the test.

The Board of Law Examiners reported earlier this week that about one-third of the more than 600 candidates who took the three-day examination this year flunked. More than 200 of the applicants were from out-of-state or were taking the test as repeat candidates.

In figures released by the schools Wednesday, graduates of Wake Forest University showed the best passing percentage among first-time candidates — 86.1.

UNC-Chapel Hill graduates passed at the rate of 85.9 percent, followed by Duke University graduates, 83.3 percent, and those from Campbell University, 80 percent.

The exam consists of 640 essay and multiple choice questions. To pass, a candidate must answer 430 questions correctly.

Returned As 'Ex-Mayor'

WOODBINE, N.J. (AP) — When Thomas Levin left town on vacation in June, he was mayor of this Cape May County hamlet. But last weekend he returned, — "like MacArthur" — and found the Republican-dominated town council voted him former-mayor.

"When the cat's away, the rats will play," Levin, a Democrat, said.

The council voted Levin out of office Aug. 5 under a state law that allows a vacancy to be declared when a public official has failed to attend meetings for eight consecutive weeks.

The elementary school teacher left town with his family in early June to visit Hawaii and tour the continental United States by car. He said he notified Republican Council President Ernest Materio that he intended to leave for the summer. Now, Materio is acting mayor.

It was not the Republicans' first attempt to oust Levin since he was elected in 1978. Last year, they tried to recall him and had gathered 375 signatures on a petition, but a judge threw out the document.

Levin says he will consult an attorney in an effort to determine a course of action. If the council acted improperly, Levin says he will resume his duties as mayor.

"They never were able to accept the fact that I was elected," Levin says.

Nursing Pins Are Given To Seventy-Five Students

Seventy-five nursing students from Pitt Community College received their nursing pins last night during the college's Department of Nursing Pinning Ceremony. The pins, designed especially for PCC graduates, are worn on the nurses' uniforms.

The guest speaker for the ceremony, Dr. John C. Hale, a Greenville surgeon, told the graduates, "In order to look into your future in nursing we must examine the current situation. Across the country 88 percent of our hospitals cannot fill nursing positions. Forty percent of the licensed nurses drop out of nursing while another forty percent are becoming frustrated by less patient contact, lack of leadership and decreased monetary incentive."

Dr. Hale added, "This severe shortage has led to a wide range of job opportunities and advancement in benefits. To make progress in nursing, there is only one person to convince — yourself."

The presentation of students for pinning was made by Judith Kuykendall, chairman of the department of nursing at PCC. The presentation of pins to the practical nurse graduates was made by instructors Sally Barnaby and Patricia Earnhardt; the associate degree graduates were presented pins by instructors Frances Bennett and Sylvia Smith; "The Lighting of the Lamps" ceremony was conducted by instructors Carol Stevens and Arlene Collins.

The invocation was pronounced by student Joseph Totento; the welcome was given by student Louise Boseman; "The Florence Nightingale Pledge" was led by student W. Ashley Dail, Jr. Student Carol Hayes introduced the speaker and E. Robert Irwin was organist.

The ceremony was held at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The associate degree graduates receiving pins were, GREENVILLE: Janise Brewington, Lynn D. Cox, Mary M. Krugar, Carol Lappin, Tammy Lockhart, Pamela H. Messner, Vickie L. Sauter, C. Casinos Often Are Threatened

By The Associated Press
Nevada casinos have been occasional targets of bomb threats over the years, some in attempts to extort money, others by disgruntled losers.

In the last 15 years, more than 40 bomb threats have resulted in the discovery of one dozen bombs in casinos.

Until Wednesday, no Nevada casino in recent history had been the victim of an actual explosion.

On Wednesday, a bomb planted in Harvey's Resort Hotel-Casino at Stateline, Nev., exploded, ripping a huge hole in the side of the hotel. There were no injuries.

The only other incident in which a device actually went off was in June 1978, when a casino loser tossed a small smoke bomb into the El Cortez Hotel in downtown Las Vegas, causing a small fire.

One of the more elaborate extortion attempts occurred in Las Vegas earlier that year, when smoke bombs with notes demanding payment of $500,000 were found in five Strip casinos — Caesars Palace, the Flamingo, the Aladdin, the Dunes and the MGM Grand. None of the devices, described as virtually harmless by fire department bomb squads, ever went off.

Harrah's casinos in Reno and Stateline have been the target of two threats in which devices were found.

A firebomb was found in Harrah's in Reno in October 1974 along with a note threatening explosions "throughout all your business establishments" unless the casino paid $300,000. A bomb found at Harrah's club at the lake in August 1977 demanded $250,000.

A time bomb found in front of the Nevada Lodge at Lake Tahoe in December 1972 was dismantled 10 minutes before it was set to go off in a $60,000 extortion attempt.

Thirteen years ago, three Strip hotels and two outside the state were the victims of two extortion attempts within a month.

In May 1967, a small homemade bomb was found with a demand for $75,000. The note threatened to blow up Del Webb hotels in Nevada, California and Arizona, forcing the evacuation of some 2,500 guests in the three states.

The following month, a man who threatened to blow up two Strip hotels was arrested and a quantity of explosive material in his possession was confiscated. He had sought $15,000 in cash and $900 a month for five years from the Flamingo and Stardust hotels.

Alask's Senator Gravel Concedes Primary Loss

By JEAN KIZER
Associated Press Writer
JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — While Sen. Mike Gravel conceded defeat in his bid for a third term, elections officials across this giant state counted up the ballots that will determine whether Alaska will review its association with the other 49 states.

Democratic primary voters Tuesday rejected Gravel's candidacy after his 12 years in the Senate, choosing instead Anchorage lawyer Clark Gruening.

The 50-year-old senator, who stopped short of endorsing his opponent Wednesday, said he had "no deep sense of anger, loss or what have you" over the results of Tuesday's primary.

While pledging to continue his fight against the Alaska lands legislation now before Congress, Gravel said: "When you become a lame duck, it affects the clout you may have."

The senator staged a filibuster earlier this month against the bill before the Senate shut off debate by invoking cloture. The measure, approved by the Senate, would greatly restrict the private development of Alaskan land.

In the primary race, with 407 of 421 precincts reporting, Gravel had 27,172 votes to Gruening's 33,925. A third candidate, Michael Beasley, had 998 votes.

On the Republican side, Frank Murkowski, a banker from Fairbanks, had 14,408 votes to 4,886, for Art Kenedy, an Anchorage businessman. Another 5,500 were divided among four other Republican contenders.

Still too close to call on Wednesday was the final tally on a referendum to establish an Alaska Statehood Commission, which would study if the state's 21-year association with the federal union had been a success.

If approved by voters, the 11-member commission would have until early 1983 to study "alternative forms of association between the United States and the people of Alaska" and the legal basis for new associations.

On Wednesday, 39,844 voters said they opposed a statehood commission, while 39,560 favored the idea. Still to be counted are 6,000 absentee ballots. The deadline for the final count is Sept. 3.

"It looks as if a lot of people probably did not understand that the commission was not a communist plot to secede from the nation," said a disappointed Gregg Erickson, consultant to the state legislature and a prime force behind the commission.

But state Rep. Brian Rogers, a Fairbanks Democrat responsible for getting the proposal on the ballot, said: "The notion that Alaskans are upset has broken its way into the national — even international — consciousness." In the Democratic primary for Alaska's lone U.S. House seat, Kevin Pat Parnell of Anchorage claimed victory. He will face incumbent Republican Rep. Don Young, who was unopposed in the GOP primary.

Edmisten Is On A Record

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Jaycees have announced the release of a 45-rpm record featuring N. C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Sarah Knox, a multi-handicapped resident of the Murdoch Center.

The recording project is an effort by the Jaycees and other civic and religious organizations to raise funds to build chapels at North Carolina's four mental retardation centers.

Edmisten sings "The Wild Side of Life." Ms. Knox sings "You Light Up My Life." Back up music is provided by the Charlie Albertson Band.

Copies of the record, which sells for $2, will be available from Jaycee chapters and from volunteers at the retardation centers.

John Lowery, president of the North Carolina Jaycees, has presented Charles Dunn, president of the Chapels for the Mentally Retarded Project, a check for $12,000. The North Carolina Jaycees have committed themselves to raise $100,000 toward the chapel project.

MEETING TUESDAY

The county commissioner's meeting, normally scheduled for Monday, has been scheduled for Tuesday at 10 a.m. The county manager's office will be closed on Monday for the Labor Day holiday.

Two Wrecks Are Reported

A collision at the intersection of East Fourth and Hickory streets here yesterday did $1,900 damage to two cars.

Gerri G. Saiz, 22, of 2503 East Third Street was cited for failure to yield right of way following a collision with a car driven by Elwood C. Peele Jr. of 2403 Jefferson Drive. Both cars were towed from the scene. Ms. Saiz told police that weeds blocked her view of the oncoming car. Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Saiz car and $900 to Peele's.

A rear-end collision on Greenville Boulevard near its intersection with Hooker Road Wednesday at 11:45 a.m. involved vehicles driven by Kathleen E. Drabicki of 408 Lancelot Drive and Susan Gail Lawrence of 321 Tyler Dorm. No charges were made, police said.

Donald Rudolph Honeycutt Jr. of 5735 Woodcrest Drive, Raleigh was identified by police as the driver of a car which struck a parked car owned by Herbert Stanley Bumburg of Herndon, Va. in the parking lot of Village Green Apartments on E. Tenth Street Thursday at 1 a.m. Damages were estimated at $50 to Honeycutt's car and $250 to Bumburg's.

Post Office Closed Monday

The Greenville Post Office and ECU Station will close Monday, September 1 to observe Labor Day. The following services will be provided:

A special 3 p.m. holiday collection will be made from all collection boxes with specified times on the side of the box. Zoning Petition ...

— Approval of the preliminary plat of Section II of Orchard Hill, located west of Hooker Road;

— Approval of the preliminary plat of Lexington Square Condominiums, located on Oakmont Drive, Oakmont Professional Plaza;

— Recommendation that the council approve a petition to close a portion of the cul-de-sac of Sara Lane, located in Elizabeth Heights Subdivision;

— Approval of the Sedimentation and Erosion Control Plan (SECP) for Village East Subdivision, located on Cedar Lane, south of University Condominiums, with the stipulation that the plan be approved by the county;

— Approval of the SECP for Arlington Boulevard Self-Storage, located on Arlington Boulevard east of Greenville Middle School, with the same county approval stipulation; and — Continuance of final plat consideration for Section IV and V of Patrick's Plaza, located at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and the proposed Red Banks Road, while the developers work on arrangements with the city for the construction of Red Banks Road.

The Joint City-County Planning & Zoning Commission, in a brief session, voted to recommend two rezoning matters to the council for approval.

The requests were submitted by: Waddell A. Manning for rezoning 1.67 acres adjacent to Red Oak Plaza, west of State Road 1135, from R A - 20 (residential/agricultural) to R-6 (high density residential); and by Industrial Transmissions Inc. for rezoning seven tenths of an acre on N. Greene Street at the Industrial Boulevard intersection from Highway Commercial to Unoffensive Industry.

Commissioners, with Hankins opposing, voted to delay action on a recommendation to the council regarding an amendment to Article VII of the City Code, entitled "Off Street Parking and Service Requirement."

Approval was given to a recommendation that the Council amend Article I of the code, entitled "Street Access." It was pointed out that the amendment makes the wording in the article conform to the existing language in the present subdivision ordinance.

Grant Goes To Sheppard Library

Sheppard Memorial Library has received a $38,000 LSCA grant from the N. C. State Library for the purpose of outreach service to pre-school children. The project is designed to reach children who attend day care and nursery school programs in Pitt County.

Project CHEER (Children Having Enjoyment and Enthusiasm for Reading) has been funded by the grant for a three-year period.

Ms. Dorsey Sanderson, a graduate of East Carolina University, and daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Sanderson of Greenville, has been named director of the project. She will be assisted by Ms. Sheila Mendoza, also a graduate of East Carolina University. She is the daughter of Mrs. Geneva Mendoza of Elizabeth City. The two have experience with storytelling, puppetry and working with children. Their programs will include a variety of techniques using flannel boards, music, drama, media, arts and crafts.

The major objectives of Project CHEER include providing professionally planned and implemented storytimes within each of Pitt County's child care centers, the selection and loan of quality picture books to each center, and providing parents and teachers with current information through the use of bibliographies and workshops.

Currently, 30 pre-school child care centers have responded to our program. If there are others within Pitt County who have not been contacted and who desire more information, write to: Project CHEER, Sheppard Memorial Library, P. O. Drawer 7207, Greenville, N. C., 27834.

Urges Vets Back East

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A supporter of Republican senatorial candidate John East, who is confined to a wheelchair, has made an appeal to veterans for support — at the polls and financially — of East as a man who understands the problems of veterans.

Retired Adm. James W. "Bud" Nance, in a letter mailed this month to about 2,000 veterans, described East as a disabled veteran who "wants to go to Washington to fight for the rights of all veterans who served their country."

"The sacrifice I'm asking you to make is nothing at all like the sacrifices John East made for America," Nance said.

East was struck by polio shortly after he was discharged from the Marine Corps in 1955. His campaign officials said the polio was contracted while East was stationed at Camp Lejeune.

A spokesman for the U.S. Veterans Administration said East was classified as a disabled veteran and receives $1,271 a month in disability payments. East is a political science professor at East Carolina University.

Nance, who lives in McLean, Va., is an associate of U.S. Senate Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who has given his backing to East.

NEW YORK (AP) — Writer Sam Levenson, who said his humor came from VUPs — Very Unimportant People — has died at the age of 68 after a career that made his portly, bow-tied figure familiar to millions of television viewers.

Levenson, a lifelong resident of Brooklyn, died of cardiac arrest Wednesday at Long Island College Hospital just hours after he was admitted, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Born the youngest of eight children on Dec. 11, 1911, in New York City to Rebecca and Hyman Levenson, Levenson delighted early audiences with memories of his poor but happy Jewish home.

But before entering show businesses, Levenson was a teacher at Brooklyn's Samuel J. Tilden High School. He once conceded he had trouble keeping his humor out of the classroom.

teaching the kids how to ask for a date in Spanish or how to say 'I love you.' It was the same grammar, but alive and meaningful.

Levenson broke into show business in 1940 when a group of teachers formed an orchestra to perform at a Catskill Mountains hotel and took him along as master of ceremonies.

Twelve years later, he gave up teaching to become what he called a full-time "folk humorist" and moved on to the television and night club circuit.

Levenson, whose trademarks were a trim crew-cut and an ever-present grin, was known to television viewers throughout the 1950s and early 1960s for his appearances on such shows as "This Is Show Business," "The Ed Sullivan Show" and game shows "To Tell the Truth" and "Match Game." He also moderated the popular show, "Two for the Money."

He was catapulted into the limelight when he was hired to fill in 15 minutes of Jack Benny's program in 1950.

He proved to be an instant hit with TV critics and moved on to "The Sam Levenson Show," for two years on CBS. The program introduced a new kind of humor to television, one directed toward children.

It was then he established his reputation as a shrewd observer of the American domestic scene.

He began writing books because he said he was "tired of running all over the United States" and missed the family he talked so much about.

Levenson's writings included, "Everything but Money," "Sex and the Single

Mayors To Be On TV Show

A public service program will again be featured over WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Greenville, when two more mayors from Eastern North Carolina towns appear on the "Carolina Today" show. The two are Mayor Grace Bonner of Aurora and Mayor Donald Bryan of Nags Head, who will be guests on the early morning show on Friday, August 29.

The two follow ten other eastern N. C. mayors who have appeared on "Carolina Today" since the station began the program involving municipal officials on March 28. Channel 9 was one of the first television stations in North Carolina to show the N. C. League of Municipalities' 26-minute documentary on municipal government, when it aired the special in conjunction with a roundtable discussion with mayors on February 17.

The documentary, produced by the League under contract with DeVries and Associates, Inc. of Wrightsville Beach, shows the role of municipal governments in North Carolina and the services provided to citizens.

Copies of the documentary have been placed with all N. C. television stations and the UNC television network. It has received 14 hours of free public service viewing in the past six months. Viewer comments to the League of Municipalities on the documentary and on interviews of area mayors are encouraged. These are to be sent to: North Carolina League of Municipalities, P. O. Box 3069, Raleigh, N. C., 27601.

Actors Picket In Negotiations

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — While negotiators in Hollywood hashed over the issue of residual payments in an effort to end a five-week actors strike, performers in New York picketed on Broadway as a band played "There's No Business Like Show Business."

About 1,000 actors, including Mickey Rooney, Jason Robards and Sandy Duncan, picketed outside the Gulf and Western Building, which houses offices of Paramount pictures, then marched down Broadway into New York City's theater district.

"Not all actors reach stardom, but we are human beings," said Rooney, who is the offices of the Association of Motion Picture and Television Producers, where bargaining was taking place.

Talks were resuming today as negotiators tried to untangle a dispute over residual payments. The unions want a greater share in the revenues producers receive when shows are used on pay TV or on video cassettes.

The walkout by about 60,000 members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists began July 21.

The strike has blocked production of movies and some television shows and has forced television networks to reshuffle their fall schedules.

The strike has also resulted in unemployment for about 20,000 members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Representatives of the union attended Wednesday's bargaining and urged an end to the walkout.

A representative of producers said industry managers were aware of the hardships brought on by the strike and were attempting to bargain in good faith to end the strike.

Space Help By Martians

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — The Martians are coming to the aid of the U.S. space program. More precisely, Martian Metals here is donating money to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to help save the Mars Viking project. The Viking project receives readings of Mars' weather patterns from instrument packages that landed on the planet. The program is in financial straits because NASA is about out of money to pay for processing the data received. Martian Metals, which manufactures lead figures used in war-gaming and fantasy games, has promised to donate 10 percent of its gross sales for July and August to the project. A company spokesman said he couldn't give a dollar estimate of the contribution. But an advertisement placed by the company says there's another reason to give money: To stave off interplanetary conflict. "Your Viking landers are the funniest things we've ever seen," the ad says. "Tourists come from halfway around Mars to look at the little blinking lights and hear the funny noises they make. If you turn off your landers, it'll mess up the tourist trade, and strain the company, and the Venusians will get uppity, and the Martian government will probably declare war on SOMEBODY. Don't say you weren't warned."

Complaint Earns Probe

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The Army ordered an investigation Wednesday to determine if the first woman to complete Special Forces training was denied a Green Beret because of sexual discrimination. Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Lutz, commander of the John F. Kennedy Center for Military Assistance and the U.S. Army Institute for Military Assistance, ordered the investigation after public complaints by Capt. Kathleen Wilder. Ms. Wilder, who won admission to the school by applying directly to the Pentagon, charged last week that sexual discrimination was the reason she received a failing grade on the field training phase of the elite Special Forces School. Col. Ola Mize, director of the school, also has recommended in a letter to Lutz that Ms. Wilder, 29, be allowed to attend the field exercise of the next class in November in an attempt to improve her overall grade. Lutz has not yet acted on the recommendation. A report on the investigation is expected to be submitted to Lutz next week.

Unemployment Was Up in July

RALEIGH — The influx of students in the job market and seasonal layoffs in the furniture, textile and apparel industries pushed North Carolina's July unemployment rate to 8.1 percent, according to a report by the N. C. Employment Security Commission (ESC). State ESC chairman, J. B. Archer, however, notes that preliminary unemployment figures for August indicate the state rate will drop and stabilize. The June rate of unemployment in North Carolina was 7.4 percent. (The unemployment rate in July, 1979, was 5.4 percent.) "We expected the July rate to be higher than June because of seasonal factors," Archer said. "And, as we have predicted, the early August figures indicate that unemployment during the current recessionary period has peaked in North Carolina." While the July rate of 8.1 percent is the highest July point since July 1975's 8.6 percent, it did not come close to the March, 1975 rate of 11.9 percent unemployed. Traditionally, during July, high school and college students compose more than a third of the total number of unemployed in the state, Archer said. While employment in many fields showed a decrease in July, the picture was far different in agriculture. This sector of the economy showed the largest single increase, up 42.1 percent, or 44,500 jobs. Local Picture In the local area, the picture is brightening some, according to Jim Hannan, manager of the local ESC office. Hannan reports that Pitt County's employment rate for July was 92.3 percent, three-tenths of a percentage point above the June employment rate of 92 percent. "The number of employed in Pitt County rose from 42,040 in June to 43,970 in July," Hannan reports, "an increase of about 4.6 percent. Unemployment rose slightly, from 3,650 to 3,660." Hannan notes that "while manufacturing remained fairly stable in Pitt County in July, non-manufacturing declined by 500, primarily because of losses due to school closings." The counteracting part of the employment picture was in agriculture, with an increase of 1,821 employed in July over the June figure (6,157 in July compared to 4,336 in June). Hannan said that "agriculture employment traditionally reaches its peak in Pitt County during the month of July and begins to decline in August, with a tapering effect until later in September and early October."

LEAVING MALAYSIA KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — About 4,000 Vietnamese refugees in Malaysian camps will leave for resettlement in third countries in September, the U.N. High Commission for Refugees says.
