Paraguay Manhunt For Killers Of Exiled Somoza

By NESTOR A. VERDINA
Associated Press Writer
ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Paraguayan authorities pressed a massive manhunt today for the guerrilla squad that assassinated ousted Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza in a hail of machine-gun and bazooka fire so devastating his mistress could identify the body only through his wristwatch.

Somoza's financial adviser and chauffeur also died in the Wednesday morning attack in the Paraguayan capital.

Police closed the Asuncion airport and sealed the country's borders with Argentina and Brazil in an effort to keep the attackers from leaving the country. Paraguayan authorities say they think six people took part in the fusillade that left the 54-year-old Somoza riddled with some two dozen bullets and his limousine demolished.

Authorities say Somoza's bodyguards, who returned the attackers fire from a car trailing the ousted strongman's limousine, wounded one of the assailants. The government has called on citizens to report anyone seeking medical attention for a bullet wound.

The right-wing government of Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner, the friend who granted Somoza asylum after his ouster by Nicaragua's Sandinista guerrillas in 1979, distributed photographs of a man and a woman believed to have taken part in the ambush. The two, identified as Hugo Alfredo Irurzun and Silvia Mercedes Rodgers, were described as members of the Peoples Revolutionary Army, a left-wing Argentine guerrilla group.

Officials offered a reward of $40,000 for information leading to the capture of the two, whose photos were picked out of police files by witnesses to the slaying.

Police said several persons had been arrested for "investigation in connection with the assassination." They gave no details.

Interior Minister Augusto Montanaro described the slaying as "a criminal attack almost certainly perpetrated by a group of foreign terrorists heavily armed with bazookas, automatic rifles and pistols of U.S. fabrication."

In Washington, the Carter administration, accused by Somoza of contributing to his downfall by failing to provide support, reacted with caution. "Naturally we deplore any assassination no matter where it occurs or who is affected," said spokesman John Trattner.

Nicaraguans by the thousands greeted news of Somoza's death by pouring into the streets for celebrations. Violeta Chamorro, the widow of slain journalist Joaquin Chamorro, said: "Sooner or later God had to do justice." Chamorro's death, blamed on Somoza's government, sparked the final, bloody uprising which toppled Somoza in July 1979 and ended 43 years of Somoza family rule in Nicaragua.

Somoza's mangled body was taken from a hospital to the villa where he had lived with his mistress, Dinorah Sampson — a Nicaraguan — and an undetermined number of bodyguards. The woman had been taken to the hospital to identify the body, but was unable to recognize it, police said. She identified on his arm a wristwatch he customarily wore.

Somoza's body was placed in a glass-covered coffin in the chapel of his rented villa.

The Paraguayan government identified the other men killed as driver-bodyguard Cesar Gallardo, a Nicaraguan, and financial adviser Joseph Bailltiner, a Colombian.

Sources said Somoza's son Anastasio, a former colonel in the Nicaraguan National Guard, would arrive in the Paraguayan capital today.

They would not discount the possibility that he would take his father's body to Miami for burial. Somoza first fled Nicaragua for Miami, where he owned considerable real estate, but left the United States to avoid the possibility of extradition.

The attack occurred at 10 a.m. Asuncion time as Somoza, Peittner and Gallardo followed by an escort car with three bodyguards inside, left the walled villa on a trip to downtown Asuncion some 15 to 20 minutes away.

The motive of the trip was not immediately known, but the overweight Somoza suffered from heart trouble and regularly left the residence to jog at an Asuncion park.

Another Decline In Jobless Claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — New claims for unemployment insurance dropped to a five-month low in early September, the government reports, providing yet another indication that the nation's faltering economy may be steadying at last.

"It's premature to say the recession is over, but the economy is proving stronger than anyone anticipated," Labor Department economist Nancy Barrett said Wednesday. "It could be a pause in the recession or something more permanent. We just don't know yet."

Department officials said a seasonally adjusted 493,000 people filed new claims during the week ending Sept. 6, a drop of 20,000 from the week before and the lowest figure since the first week of April.

And there were other developments bolstering the impression of a recuperating economy.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday that U.S. manufacturers operated at 74.5 percent of capacity in August, marking the first rise in that economic barometer in 11 months.

The rate of utilization was only 0.1 percent above the July rate and still far below the August 1979 level of 84.9 percent, however. The rate was 12.7 percent under the last high, in March 1979, and 5.5 percent above the last low, which occurred during the 1975 recession.

That report followed Tuesday's announcement by the Federal Reserve that production from the nation's factories and mines increased by 0.5 percent in August after a six-month decline.

Those two reports indicate increased activity that could mark the turning point in the recession that has bogged down the nation's economy most of the year.

But Ms. Barrett warned that the economy may be adjusting temporarily from the second quarter, "when the bottom just dropped out," rather than staging a lasting recovery.

Courtenay M. Slater, chief economist for the Commerce Department, has said she thinks the recession ended in August. She expects the economy will show modest growth in the third quarter, but warns that unemployment is likely to continue rising for several months.

The new Labor Department report suggests the nation's unemployment rate will be lower this fall than had been expected, however — a boon to President Carter at the height of the election season.

Officially, the administration forecasts an 8.5 percent rate by the end of 1980, but economists doubt unemployment will change much from August's 7.6 percent level — which means about 8 million people are officially listed as unemployed — until after the Nov. 4 election. Only one more jobless report will be released before then, for September. The October figures will not be released until Nov. 7.

In another development, the Commerce Department reported that housing starts rose 12 percent in August — the third consecutive monthly rise. But economists cautioned that the housing recovery may be stopped by rising interest rates.

And the industry is still far from normal. Housing units on which construction began in the first eight months of 1980 totaled 787,000, down from the 1,292,100 in the same period last year.

And the August figures, if continued for 12 months, would result in a seasonally adjusted rate of 1,399,000 units a year — down from the 2 million in both 1977 and 1978 and 1.75 million for all of last year.

Teachers Rally To Air Objections To Evaluation Move

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Over 400 teachers attended a special meeting of the Pitt County Board of Education last night to voice their objections to a proposed teacher evaluation plan.

"My problem with the plan is with self-evaluation," said one teacher. "What you are really saying is in the case of those who are going to be shot down, we are asking you to help supply the bullets."

The plan, which was tabled until the October 7 meeting, calls for a five-point rating system for teachers. They will be asked to rate themselves either outstanding, above average, satisfactory, improvement needed, or unsatisfactory. The principal and assistant principal will be responsible for the evaluation but the supervisor is asked to visit each teacher assigned to them annually and give written suggestions when necessary (with copies of this going to the principal and the supervisor's file as well as the teacher.) Above average or outstanding work is to be written up also and copies sent to teacher, the principal and the teacher's personal file.

According to the tentative plan, non-tenured personnel are to complete the "self-assessment instrument" by December 15 of each year, after using the first months of the school year as a period of self-evaluation. During this period they will be required to initiate conferences with the principal, the supervisor and other resource people to determine techniques and characteristics considered outstanding.

A written explanation of each rating (outstanding to unsatisfactory) must be provided with the evaluation. The principal is required to visit and observe each teacher prior to November 15 of each year. Written comments and suggestions from this visit will be sent to the teacher, the supervisor, and the principal's file.

Between January 1 and April 15 the principal will visit each teacher and complete an evaluation report that supports each rating with an explanation or recommendations for improvement.

IRS PROBLEM RESOLUTION

Helen Dodez of the Problem Resolution Office of the U. S. Internal Revenue Service, Greensboro, N. C. 27401 or call the IRS toll-free service.

"The IRS is a complicated and specialized machine. Getting an answer to a simple yes or no question can sometimes be a trying experience. The creation of this office is an effort to remedy the situation and un-complicate the system. We want to help solve every problem brought us and then take steps to see that one of the same nature doesn't occur again."

Her office tries to complete the solution of any problem that is brought to it within five days, she said, though, of course, complicated ones might take longer.

She said her office handles about 250 claims a month and has 97 percent success.

"The Problem Resolution Office is a consumer-type service which helps the taxpayer who feels he or she is dealing with a faceless bureaucracy," she said. This year the IRS will receive almost 2.3 million returns from North Carolina individuals and we know many people will have problems about a tax bill or a refund. If their first efforts are in vain, I urge them to write to me at Problem Resolution, 320 Federal Place, Greensboro, N. C. 27401 or call the IRS toll-free number — 800-822-8800 — and ask for Problem Resolution.

Speedy Trial Delay Advised N.C. Crime Report Presented

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Another two-year delay in stepping up the state's speedy trials requirements and a new law banning drug paraphernalia are among the recommendations of the Governor's Crime Commission.

In its bulky report of legislation recommended for the 1981 General Assembly and made public today, the commission also backs passage of a state racketeering law and legislation increasing money paid in restitution to the victims of crimes.

The 232-page book was to be presented to Gov. Jim Hunt today as recommendations for the governor's package of proposals to the 1981 legislative session.

Hunt has not yet embraced the report but is expected — if re-elected this November — to include many of the proposals in his legislative program.

"Nothing in this has his endorsement yet," said Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary for Hunt. "I imagine there are some in there he can say right off the bat he'll support, but most of it he'll want to have a look at."

The proposal for the state's speedy trials act would be the second delay in the measure and is likely to be controversial.

The law now requires the state to bring accused persons to trial within 120 days of their indictment, and the act is scheduled to reduce that time to 90 days in October 1981. Originally it was to take effect this year, and the commission would delay it until 1983.

Failure by the state to meet the time limit can cause cases to be dismissed. The commission's report said "many more dismissals would occur" if the state does not add more court personnel before the 90-day rule takes effect.

The racketeering law would be modeled after federal law and is aimed at organized and business-related crimes. It would ban the use of illegally obtained money for some lawful purposes. And it would strike at the pocketbook of organized crime by allowing courts to order the forfeiting of a business or other enterprise used illegally.

The drug paraphernalia law is aimed at banning non-legal items commonly used with drugs, such as marijuana pipes and smoking aids, and is currently being tried by ordinance in several North Carolina cities and counties.

The commission recommends enactment of a federal model law that would prohibit the manufacture, advertisement, delivery, possession or use of drug paraphernalia. But the commission acknowledged in its report that such efforts may run into constitutional questions similar to those that have conflicted with some anti-pornography laws.

Among the other laws recommended by the commission are those that would:

— Limit appeals from district court when guilty pleas are entered.

— Increase restitution payments to victims from fines and court costs and establishment of a restitution fund.

— Make it a felony to inflict serious harm on any person over the age of 60 and urge judges to impose stiffer penalties when the elderly are the victims of a crime.

— Amend the constitution to allow law enforcement agencies to keep money from the sale of seized items in cases where the money now must go to county schools.

— Require that the state provide special education for "socially maladjusted" children who are incapable of functioning in a normal class.

— Spend $20 million for a statewide program for in-school disciplining of students who are now being suspended.

— Require all inmates to work and allow higher wages to be paid them.

N.C. Symphony Strike Poised

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Musicians of the North Carolina Symphony say they will strike at midnight Friday unless some accord is reached on a new three-year contract that has been pending since June.

David Lewis, spokesman for the musicians, said Wednesday that demands included a 13 percent increase in pay, an extension of the symphony season from 40 weeks to a year, and an expansion of the orchestra from 73 to about 100 musicians.

R. Max Abbott, the symphony's first full-time president, said he was optimistic that an agreement would be reached.

The symphony, which opened its 1980-81 season last week, is scheduled to perform concerts on Saturday and Sunday at Memorial Auditorium.

Lewis said the musicians' objectives would provide audiences with a fuller spectrum of the symphonic repertoire.

Last week, Lewis, a tuba player, told the N.C. Symphony Society that the symphony has not kept pace with 10 other orchestras of comparable size.

Erwin Nomination Has Committee's Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved the nomination of North Carolina Appeals Court Judge Richard C. Erwin for a federal judgeship but a vote on S. Gerald Arnold's nomination has been delayed for one week.

Erwin's nomination easily cleared the judiciary committee Wednesday, but could face a floor fight in the Senate if Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., decides to oppose the nomination.

Helms, who had invoked his traditional "senatorial courtesy" privilege to delay the committee vote on Erwin, said Wednesday he still has questions about Erwin.

Helms has said he is concerned with Erwin's support for a pro-labor bill when he was a state legislator from Forsyth County in 1975. Helms also said he has heard reports that the 56-year-old Erwin may be anti-law enforcement.

Helms is not a member of the judiciary committee.

Erwin, who would become the first black federal judge in North Carolina since Reconstruction, has denied any allegations that he is anti-law enforcement and said his support of the pro-labor bill would have no bearing on his performance as a federal judge.

Helms, who had withheld the "blue slip" home-state senators traditionally return to signify their willingness for the committee to proceed with a vote, returned the slip Tuesday when it appeared that the committee would vote anyway.

The judiciary committee postponed the vote on Arnold, also a judge on the state Court of Appeals, and five other nominees at the request of Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the ranking committee Republican.

Senate rules allow any senator to demand at least one postponement of a vote. Wednesday's delay was the first on Arnold's nomination.

Another committee meeting is scheduled for next week, but committee chairman Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said it may be difficult to get enough senators for a quorum. Many senators will be away from Washington, campaigning for re-election. Congress is scheduled to recess Oct. 4.

Both Erwin and Arnold were nominated for federal judgeships by President Carter on the recommendation of Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C.

There have been reports that Republicans want to block the Democratic nominations as long as possible in hopes that Ronald Reagan will be elected president and will be able to make nominations of his own.

"I heard that at one time," Helms said of the Republican delaying effort. "I am mindful of what the Democrats did in 1975." He referred to Democratic efforts to block the judicial nominations of Republican President Gerald Ford.

Projects At Choppers Buzz N.C. Bases Kabul Embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress has approved plans for more than $71 million in new construction at military bases in North Carolina.

The Senate this week passed a House bill authorizing the projects for fiscal 1980-81. Action on a separate appropriations bill is expected in the next few days to fund the projects.

Projects approved included:

- Fort Bragg, a total of $16.4 million including a $2.3 million company administration and supply building, $9 million tactical equipment shop, $1.8 million barracks modernization project, and $1.9 million for a training range for military operations in urbanized areas.
- Sunny Point Army Terminal, near Wilmington, $1.8 million.
- Pope Air Force Base, $9.2 million.
- Camp Lejeune, $24.7 million.
- Cherry Point, $16.7 million.
- Army National Guard Armory, Albemarle, $473,000.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) - Low-flying military helicopters have been buzzing the U.S. Embassy in the Afghan capital of Kabul since a Soviet soldier sought asylum there last Monday, an Asian diplomatic source said here today.

The informant, quoting reports from Kabul, said it was not clear whether the Soviet-built choppers carried Afghan or Soviet markings.

The source, who declined to be identified, said the 14 Americans still stationed in the Afghan capital were being subjected to "general harassment." He quoted reports saying police were searching the diplomats' cars and restricting their access to the embassy grounds.

He also said additional Afghan security police have been stationed at eight non-communist embassies in Kabul, apparently to head off any further defections by Soviet troops.

The State Department says the Soviet Union has demanded the U.S. Embassy in Kabul hand over the Soviet enlisted man who slipped past Afghan security men and entered the compound on Monday. A department spokesman said the man has been given temporary refuge and would not be surrendered.

The presence of the soldier, said to be from a construction brigade, has prompted fears among U.S. officials that the Soviets might use force to try to retrieve him.

The United States has informed Soviet and Afghan authorities it is holding them responsible for the security of the embassy and its staff.

However a former Afghan Foreign Ministry official, who recently defected to Pakistan, said here that he doubted the impact of any protest lodged with the Afghan government.

"Since the Russians control the Afghan regime, including the Foreign Ministry, they are the ones who will decide how American diplomats are treated," said Abdul Wahid Ali, 37, a former protocol officer. He claimed Soviet career diplomat Vasily Safronchuk was the man giving orders to Afghan Foreign Minister Shah Mohammed Dost.

The Soviets have stationed an estimated 80,000 troops in Afghanistan to help that nation's pro-Moscow regime in its so-far unsuccessful effort to crush a rebellion by anti-communist Moslem guerrillas.

Hockey Begins

With the baseball pennant races still undecided and the National Football League season just underway, it might seem a little early to start thinking about winter sports. But it's not too early for hockey fans to start cheering their favorite teams, as the National Hockey League's exhibition season starts today. NHL teams are scheduled to play 99 preseason games this year. The schedule includes games in 44 North American cities, as well as a tournament in Stockholm, Sweden, where the Washington Capitals and Minnesota North Stars will take on two Swedish teams. The Stockholm tournament marks the first time NHL teams have competed in preseason games outside North America.

Blazers, Tartan Plaids Are Fashion Favorites

"A look into the elegant '80s through the classic and preppy look in fashions is in store for you today," said Nancy Middleton, commentator for the fashion show held yesterday at the Greenville Country Club.

Shorter skirt lengths, side slits in skirts, tartan plaids, colored nylons with flowered detail and kilt skirts were among the newer looks viewed at the show.

Blazers in velvet, wool, flannel and chenille in colors of hunter green, black, navy blue and plaids were seen. A navy pin striped two-piece suit, navy velour slack suit, brown tweed slacks, knitted sweaters, another slack suit in taupe were among the show favorites.

Other favorites included afternoon dresses in a spice color, creme blouson dress, black dinner dress and a black knit dress, a jade silk and another in beige. For evening wear were street length dresses in mauve with spaghetti straps, a rose crepe in pleated chiffon and a brown georgette dress.

For ski weekends were a blue and white ski ensemble and for jogging or as a warmup suit were several suits in navy, blue and white and others in velour material.

Stately cattails in a fall arrangement with tangerine colored daisies and greenery in a straw basket decorated the buffet table while golden rod, acuba and brown foliage with bolts of green and navy tartan plaid provided the focal point on the models' runway.

Models were Ann Herrin, Carolyn Powell, Debi Russ, Donna Bradshaw, Sandy Vincent, Linda Young, Gail Williams, Janie Ferguson, Eloise Howard, Mary Hannah Taft, Betty Casey, Katherine Vinson, Sharry Tripp, Janet McGlohon, Lynn Odum, Betty Brewer, Sharon Goodson, Connie Weaver, Laura Seagraves and Carla Edwards.

Stores represented were Golden Gull, Namedropper, Bonds, Brody's, Blount Harvey, Certain Things, Belk Tyler, College Shop, Forbes, Susan's and the Greenville Country Club Pro Shop.

The luncheon-fashion show were sponsored by the ladies of the Greenville Country Club. Serving as co-chairmen were Beth Bright and Anne Brewer. They were assisted by Jane Joyner, Kathryn Blount and Linda Davis, models and stores; Sherri Ficklin and Gloria Tipton, special events; Bonnie Galloway, favors; Enid White, Phyllis Robbins and Jef Glenn, decorations; Faye Keck and Sally Ann Atkinson, staging; Rachel Edwards and Peg Haigwood, publicity; Dee Chaffee, Betty Kittrell and Shirley Holec, tickets.

Background music was presided by Camille Hite.

Proceeds will be used by the women for decorating and beautification of the club house.

Elizabeth Wilson gave the welcome and invocation prior to the luncheon.

Craftsman's Fair To Open Next Thursday

ELIZABETH CITY — The 22nd annual Albemarle Craftsman's Fair will be held here at Knobbs Creek Recreation Center Thursday through Sunday, Sept. 25-28.

The hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 1-6 p.m. This year's theme is "The Year of the Coast." The fair will include individual craft booths, daily heritage and contemporary craft demonstrations, the Albemarle Craftsman's Guild Booth Center and a 4-H youth craft booth.

Basketry, brooms, chair-stool bottoms, Christmas tree trims, counted thread cross stitch, crewel, dolls, egg shell and leather craft, pottery, pyrography, pysanky, shorebird decoys, stuffed toys, weaving, wildfowl reproductions, wood carving and woodwork are among the crafts to be featured.

Marilyn Davenport, a craftsman of Rt. 1, Winterville, will be demonstrating in carved acrylics. She is the only craftsman approved by the Albemarle Crafts Guild in this field.

Mrs. Davenport recently opened a craft shop featuring her specialty.

The craftsman's fair is open to the public.

Couple Has Anniversary

HICKORY — Mr. and Mrs. Billy Sermons were honored on their 25th anniversary Saturday with a reception in the Church of The Master here. Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richie, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford VanDyke, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Gantt, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Langford and Mr. and Mrs. Reggie Sweat.

A silver anniversary theme was carried out with pink and white arrangements used throughout the church parlor. The serving table was centered with a decorated anniversary cake. The gift table was decorated with silver candelabra and silver goblets with mums and baby's breath. Pictures of the couple were displayed.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Gantt and Mr. and Mrs. Langford presided at the register. Mrs. Richie served cake and Mrs. Sweat poured punch. Mrs. VanDyke said good-byes.

Mr. and Mrs. Sermons are former residents of Greenville.

Birthday Party Held

Michael Cates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Cates of Stokes, was honored Sunday at a backyard party celebrating his eighth birthday.

The party area was decorated with streamers and balloons. The guests participated in various games and activities before refreshments were served. Party favors were also given to the nine guests.

Special guests included grandmothers of the honoree, Mrs. Eric Whichard and Mrs. George Cates.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every fall, an army of authors swathed in polyester and hope hits the trail to bring their books to the attention of the public.

They will spend full days being interviewed by the press, answering questions from radio listeners, doing talk shows and signing books in department stores.

At the end of eight or 10 weeks, they will return to civilian life. They will not be the same people they were when they left.

They will not be able to pass a couch without sitting on it and launching into a discourse on how they got their start. They will refuse to use a bathroom that does not have a sanitized strip over the commode. If anyone puts so much as a passbook at the bank in their hands, they'll mechanically write, "Best Wishes," autograph it and give it back.

The Willy Lomans of the literary world are rarely championed. Having survived six book tours, I have found solace in the fact that every author from Bacall to Vidal, from Krantz to Michener has endured the selling of a book. As I sat around greenrooms, I used to fantasize that if Matthew, Mark, Luke and John were coming out this fall with the Four Gospels, they would be going through the same thing I was going through.

MERV GRIFFIN GREENROOM: "Okay, guys, Merv has a doctor theme show for tonight. Got any ideas? Luke is a doctor? Fantastic! You can do eight minutes on diet pills. You'll follow Joyce Brothers."

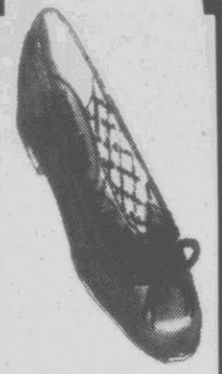

DINAH SHORE GREENROOM: "Hey, fellas, this is going to be fun. You and Dinah are going to put together a zucchini casserole with parmesan and talk about your books. Geez, wish you all hadn't worn white. Have fun!"

MIKE DOUGLAS GREENROOM: "Now, the co-host this week is Shelley Winters. Anything you got that relates to Shelley, throw it in. Read your books last night. Love 'em. Mark, maybe you could expand on the miracle stories. Had Jeanne Dixon a few weeks ago. It's dynamite."

JOHNNY CARSON GREENROOM: "What's your book about again? I know they're gospels... they all say that. What about humorous stories like signing books in a department store and someone wants to buy the desk. Anything upbeat you can think of. You follow Gordon Liddy."

JOHN DAVIDSON GREENROOM: "John will ask you why you wrote the books, how long it took, what they're all about and what impact they will have on civilization. Take your time, you've got 4 1/2 minutes. You don't sing, do you?"

Heard any good books lately?

Dear Abby

Only Little Boys Kiss And Tell

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old, fairly popular male who dates a variety of girlfriends.

Abby, how come every time I date a new girl, the guys ask me if the girl fools around and did I score with her? They don't even ask me if I like her, or how nice she is, etc.

What is a good comeback line to use when I'm asked these questions?

B.K. IN MINN.

DEAR B.K.: Don't dignify juvenile questions with any kind of "comeback." Little boys kiss and tell. Grown men do not report scoring or striking out.

DEAR ABBY: I was dating a guy I really liked for about six months. (I'll call him Marty.) He proposed a couple of times, but I'm 23 and not ready for marriage yet. We had some really good times together.

The problem started when Marty lost his temper and gave me a hard shove. For a minute I was afraid he was going to hit me, but he didn't. (Not then.) When it happened a second time, I decided to stay away from him, but he called and apologized, saying he'd been drinking and was upset about something else, so I saw him again.

One night while Marty and I were out, I ran into an old friend (male) so I stopped to talk to him for a few minutes. Later that evening Marty accused me of coming on to the old boyfriend, and he really lost his temper and started hitting me.

Abby, he beat me so badly I ended up in a hospital! After I was discharged Marty said he didn't mean it, he loved me and swore it would never happen again.

I should have learned my lesson months ago when he first started shoving me around, but no, I had to learn the hard way.

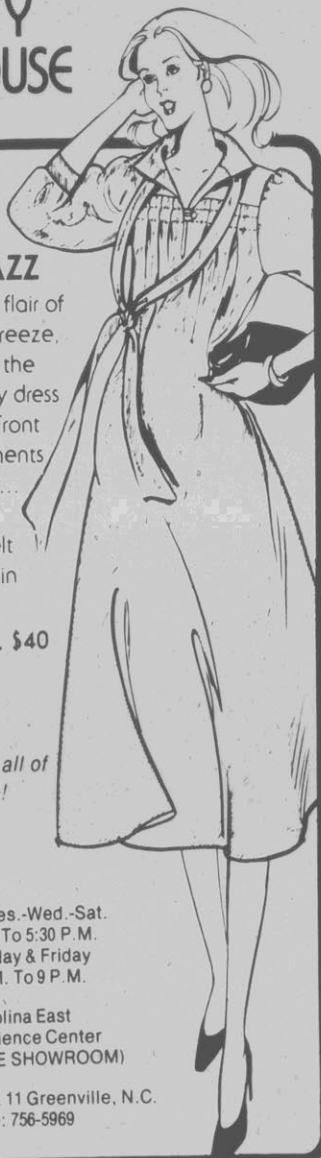

I hope this letter will be a warning to other women not to wait as long as I did to tell these macho jerks to hit the road. J.N.D., PITTSBURGH

DEAR J.N.D.: If only a few women learn that the most violent beatings always begin with a shove, a punch or a twisted arm, it will be well worth a shot in this column.

Principle Is Established

Under federal court order the state has agreed to pay the $450 cost for sending an emotionally disturbed Pitt County youth to a private school in South Carolina.

It is one of a number of such cases which have been in the courts recently, and the court ruling is this particular case has been appealed.

In a Wake county case the county was ordered to pay the cost for a disturbed child to attend a Texas school at a cost of $45,000 per year. That case is also being appealed.

These and other rulings appear harsh to the governmental bodies which are ordered to pay the bills. In Wake County's situation, the government faces a major expense, and if the principle is extended to other young people with special needs the cost could quickly become unmanageable.

Court rulings in such cases often don't appear to be consistent in the final details, but it is clear that the law is on the side of providing adequate training for disturbed or handicapped children.

It is an indication that our society is slowly developing ways to come to grips with a social problem that has been ignored for too many years. In the past such youngsters have gone to institutions where they received no training, or they were kept at home and did without formal education. The cost of training for disturbed young people may be high initially, but over their lifetimes society may come out ahead.

The basic problem now is to determine how the cost of such highly specialized training will be distributed.

Parallel In LaFollette

WASHINGTON—Fifty-six years ago, in the presidential campaign of 1924, Robert M. LaFollette ran as a third-party candidate. In the light of the contemporary candidacy of John Anderson, it may be sobering — it may indeed be sobering — to look back at that campaign. The parallels may raise the hair on Jimmy Carter's head.

The senior Bob LaFollette (his son later succeeded him) was one of the most colorful political figures of this century. Born in Ohio in 1855, he plunged early into Republican politics, served three terms in the House, two terms as governor of Wisconsin, and came to the Senate in 1906. By the time he ran for president in 1924, he had spent 24 years on the Hill. John Anderson of Illinois has now spent 20.

Battling Bob LaFollette was a maverick — a liberal Republican who was far too liberal for his conservative brothers of the GOP. He was a fine orator, with a commanding presence on the stump and a formidable independence of mind. John Anderson is all these things.

Looking ahead to the election of 1924, LaFollette chafed at the Republican prospect. His party was certain to nominate the stolid, conservative Calvin Coolidge. He hungered for an opportunity to put his own more liberal ideas before the country — and liberal ideas they certainly were. LaFollette had some bizarre proposals for amending the Constitution; he had some radical ideas in the field of taxation; he was the darling of the liberals, intellectuals and young activists of that day. John Anderson from time to time has trod similar paths.

Determined to run on his own, LaFollette created the Progressive Party as his political vehicle. John Anderson's party is the Coalition for Unity. LaFollette wrote his own platform. So has Anderson written his. LaFollette named a Democrat, Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, as his running mate. Anderson has named a Democrat, Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin, to run with him.

The national conventions of 1924 merit a word. The Republicans had no more contest in 1924 than the Republicans had in 1980: Calvin Coolidge in the one case, Ronald Reagan in the other. The Democrats, meeting in Madison Square Garden, were bitterly divided. The hero of the Democratic convention would lose his party's nomination but Alfred E. Smith set off a 73-minute demonstration that electrified the hall. In the end, the Democrats named John W. Davis of West Virginia. Now let us recall what happened. In the general election, LaFollette carried Wisconsin only. Davis carried the 12 states of the solid South. Coolidge swept all the rest. In the popular vote, Coolidge led with 15.7 million, followed by Davis with 8.3 million and LaFollette with 4.8 million. In the Electoral College, it was Coolidge 382, Davis 136 and LaFollette 13.

But let us look a little more closely at those returns of 1924. LaFollette pulled almost entirely from the Democrat Davis. His role, as it turned out, was the spoiler's role. The effect of the LaFollette candidacy, perhaps oversimplified, was to deliver 12 states with 86 electoral votes to Calvin Coolidge. The states were Arizona, Idaho, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah and West Virginia.

LaFollette's name appeared on the ballot in all the states save Louisiana, where Davis would have won overwhelmingly anyhow. This time around, Anderson's name probably will be on the ballot everywhere. In most of the states LaFollette ran third, but he finished in second place in 11 states and only in North and South Carolina did he poll less than 2 percent.

Yes, circumstances are different now. Parallels are inexact; analogies break down; Anderson has little of the farm and labor support that LaFollette enjoyed in 1924.

Rot Affects 'Big Apple'

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent NEW YORK, N.Y. (AP) — In the few surviving orchards along the Gov. Dewey Thruway leading toward the Big Apple, fall winds are shaking loose the apples that we as kids called windfalls.

The farmers let us kids come up on weekends and pick them for free, which probably betrays how long ago that was. At 42nd Street, we boarded the last of the Hudson River Dayliners before the big white boats with names like Peter Stuyvesant and Hendrick Hudson shut down and tied up for winter.

Thinking sad, September thoughts as I drive past the arson-plagued Bronx and along the rotting Hudson River docks, with the stench of uncollected garbage rising on the breeze, I reach the sad conclusion that the Big Apple may be the most bruised, decaying, worm-ridden windfall of them all.

Alas, the city where I was born and raised could well be rotten to the core — beyond hope of anyone's harvest, no longer even ripe for picking by the ripoff artists who have sucked her life sap all these years.

Until I spent some time in New York during the Democratic convention, I had not realized how far the city had slipped, and how few noticed or cared.

"Polish the Apple, They're Coming Back," was the convention welcoming slogan on the city buses bouncing over the potholes and on taxicabs where the drivers cautiously took fares through a metal slot and were cordoned off from predatory, even murderous passengers, by steel mesh grating.

But the bureaucrats did try polishing the Apple a bit, even where it was most soft and mushy. One morning outside the Plaza Hotel up on Central Park, we saw a sight few New Yorkers have seen in recent years: two dozen street sweepers with brooms on their shoulders marching determinedly down Fifth Avenue.

We didn't actually see them sweeping, but there was hope — even if still another survey released to the press that very morning showed that the average sanitation worker in New York puts in three hours deterring cans and rattling lids before reporting to his moonlighting job. En route to Breakfast at Bloomingdales, one of those clever-chic, pseudo-cultural events staged for the delegates, we saw two rats having breakfast atop a pile of plastic garbage bags outside a Chinese restaurant on Lexington Avenue. Three days later the rats were gone, but the garbage mountain was higher. Probably too high for them.

Between the park and Madison Square Garden, New Yorkers were treated to another rare sight: 10 uniformed policemen to every block on both sides of the street. Like Moscow during the Olympics, the City Fathers got rid of the grifters, drifters and wallet lifters in the Midtown area. The vice squad leaned heavily on the hookers, too, although Bryant Park, the leafy oasis behind the Public Library named for the bucolic author of "Thanatopsis" (a view of death), remained the exclusive turf of the heroin pushers.

To delegates tempted to pluck the poisonous fruits of the Big Apple, spunky, outspoken mayor Ed Koch, who may be the best thing about this town, gave his quick course in street smarts:

1. Carry your wallet in an

Mull Health Plan

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A public corporation underwritten by a $9.7 million loan fund from North Carolina taxpayers is seen as the best way to get prepaid health systems into operation all across the state.

That is the recommendation from a state commission which will be placed on the agenda for action in the 1981 General Assembly.

Several possible ways to set up and run such health plans, differing depending upon location and population in various regions of the state, would be available to the corporation.

All have this element in common: instead of paying medical expenses out of their own pockets, or paying monthly health insurance premiums, participants would pay a monthly fee to the prepaid health group plan. Physicians, hospitals, laboratories and other health services would be under contract to the group to provide any and all services required by members.

Full Care

For the patient, this would mean an end to uncovered expenses, deductibles, small-type exclusions; and for the uninsured, the constant threat of a major medical expense. It would also provide reasonable protection for those not eligible for group health insurance plans which are much cheaper than individual ones. Projected cost parallels that of a group health insurance plan.

For the medical practitioners, the plan would mean a guaranteed payment, a relatively stable patient load, but most importantly an incentive to hold down costs. The group would pay a bonus if the money were available; if elaborate tests, overuse of hospitals, or other non-essential medical procedures drained the fund, the professionals would be penalized.

Above all, competition between the group plans and existing services is seen as a cost-cutting step.

The rapidly escalating cost of medical care is often attributed to a considerable degree to "over-practicing" within the profession. Additionally, the plan would encourage doctors to begin practicing and preaching preventive health care to try and keep their patients well instead of waiting till expensive treatment is called for.

State and government employees would form the nucleus of membership for the prepaid health groups across the state, and other major employers would be solicited to join. The plan takes great pains to spell out that both health practitioners and employees would be given the option of joining or keeping their present arrangements.

BILL NOBLITT

Members of the Prepaid Health Plans Commission, chaired by Glenn Wilson, a health systems expert at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, moved steadily and smoothly through two years of study and debate in devising the proposal.

Fight Seen

But the prospect of nearly $10 million in state money and a public corporation to run the program proved too much for some, and while the recommendation is being sent forward, it is conceded by both opponents and supporters that a major political fight looms on the horizon.

The North Carolina Medical Society has agreed that flexible and non-coercive group plans would be acceptable, but draws the line when it comes to government money giving an edge to competition. Without the money, however, the commission states in its preliminary report, "the resources necessary to establish prepaid health plans in North Carolina are not available."

Wilson says the approach is unique to the nation in its statewide availability to all who wish to sign up, and by its making available alternate plans to suit local needs. He agrees that the plan contains elements which revolutionize the health care system, but points out that change is demanded and the only question is whether it will be designed by health care professionals and others in North Carolina, or imposed from Washington.

Other Editors Say Frail Guidelines

(The Wilson Times)

Sexual harassment probably has existed ever since men and women were first thrown together in the workplace, but it is more of a problem today because of the increasing number of females holding jobs.

To thwart the unwelcome advances of office romances, the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has published guidelines that attempt to define sexual harassment.

According to the guidelines, harassment consists of "repeated or unwanted sexual advances, including looks, jokes and innuendoes that cause a woman problems on the job, make her uncomfortable or interfere with job performance."

Nancy Kreiter, research director for Women Employed, a Chicago-based women's rights group, says the guidelines are quite clear; but we are not too sure. Unwanted advances, jokes, innuendoes are examples of harassment we can understand and condemn. But looks? Just who will interpret a look and make a judgment of harassment?

But that's not all. Ms. Kreiter explained that harassment does not have to be sexual in nature. "An example is a woman being told she can't do a job because she's a woman," she said, and added, "The guidelines spell out what sexual harassment is, that it is illegal, that company policies must say this and that corrective action by employers is expected."

Commenting on the guidelines, a labor relations attorney said "Employers may well find themselves policing conduct which is not related to employment. Employers could be drawn into and used as a weapon in interpersonal relationships among their employees that have nothing to do with the job."

Nation's Business magazine quoted a spokesman for the EEOC as saying that comment on the guidelines, most of which was received from employees, has been overwhelmingly in favor. The spokesman said business leaders were "very quiet on the subject."

They are probably still too stunned to respond.

Strength For Today

WHAT IS IMPORTANT? At the dedication of a cemetery at Gettysburg during the Civil War, the two speakers were Edward Everett and Abraham Lincoln. Everett was a noted orator and made a speech which made a great impression and was carried verbatim in many newspapers. President Lincoln's short talk, by contrast, was very unpretentious, and aroused little comment at the time.

Since then, of course, Everett's speech has been practically forgotten while Lincoln's Gettysburg Address has become one of the classic speeches of American history.

Many great events of history pass relatively unnoticed. To the Roman rulers, the crucifixion was one more execution of a condemned rebel. One hundred years from now the headlines on today's newspapers will appear to deal with superficialities. But somewhere, maybe on the back pages, will be a message that may foretell the wave of the future. So let us read and think with the future in mind. — Elisha Douglass

Mobile Manager Alive And Well

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — The mobile manager is alive, well and up and about in the corporation, despite rumors to the contrary.

The notion had spread recently that the species, whose traits include exceptional dedication to the company and much geographical movement, was out of synch, made passe by enlightened quality-of-life concepts.

"A cruel hoax," declares Prof. Eugene Jennings, who pioneered in studies of corporate management mobility more than three decades ago. You can't have it your way and get the top job, too, he says.

Jennings, Michigan State University professor, confidential adviser to chairmen of major corporations, and author of many books on corporate life, says the ingredients of top management success remain:

1. Graduate education; 2. Movement around and among organizations; 3. Commitment to long hours, including evenings and weekends; 4. A deferential spouse; 5. A family that can be uprooted and relocated.

"Granted, some realize their high ambitions without adhering to one or several of these values," says Jennings. "But study results fly in the face of those who portray the route as easier than it really is."

The study referred to was by Heidrick & Struggles, an executive search firm for whom Jennings interprets changes and trends. For one thing, it showed that the demands made by corporations have changed little.

Close to 40 percent of corporation presidents come from outside the company, Jennings states, and even those who come up within the company (such as at General Motors) were mobile in the sense they were exposed to various areas of the company, tested in many jobs and moved about.

And they put in the hours, too. "Very few at the top don't work 60 hours a week," he states. Very few, he adds, don't work weekends. And few do not have a deferential spouse whose career comes second.

The fact is that these qualities, long ago attributed to mobile managers, are perhaps in greater demand than five years ago, Jennings concluded after reviewing several hundred responses in the study.

"There are more MBAs (masters of business administration) and greater inter-organizational movement," he says. "Deferential spouses are in the majority and willingness to move geographically hasn't slackened."

One of the clearest indications that mobility is esteemed comes in the paycheck. "Certainly, compensation increases are greater among those who move to other organizations than those who move within," he says.

The professor, who for three decades has been studying, working with and teaching about corporate life, isn't necessarily an advocate of mobility. He says he seeks to describe rather than prescribe.

It disturbs him, he says, to see "wishful thinkers" try to sell the notion that you can establish your own peculiar lifestyle in opposition to the demands of the corporation and still make it to the top.

"In spite of what some people would like to believe," he says, the corporate system and the values it esteems haven't changed much in recent years. "The mobile manager is not a passing fad."

He concludes: "The competency and commitment of those adhering to classic values continues to be highly valued in corporate America. Those who believe otherwise endanger their own success and that of their corporations."

2. Avoid sidewalk games of 3-card Monte.
3. Stay out of Times Square.
I could tell most of the cops on the convention detail were brought in from Brooklyn and Staten Island. Not one of them could direct me to the Electric Circus discotheque at 100 Fifth Avenue. I don't know if the homicide rate dropped during the convention, but a few days after the delegates left, the city was its normal noisome self. A kid was stabbed to death in a playground basketball argument and relieved of his new sneakers, but the game continued. And Baghdad on the Hudson, as O'Henry called the city, rated the title again as the pavements swarmed once more with uncouth, unlicensed hucksters and peddlers. In the Middle East it may be colorful; here it's a public nuisance and a crying shame.

Mother Teresa stopped by to visit one of her missions in the Bronx, but didn't hang around long enough to get the job done. She'd have found as many vagrants, shopping bag ladies and derelicts sleeping in the doorways and on the sidewalks as ever I saw in Calcutta.

New York with its combat zones and no-go areas has become as depressing as Belfast. I was born in Manhattan, raised in lower Long Island City (Queens) and went to High School in Brooklyn and was saddened to learn that not one of the streets of my youth is considered safe for a daytime stroll.

There was a time when the trendy, with-it writers for the flashy new with-it magazines lauded subway graffiti as a form of pop art. Now if you dare ride the noisy, grimy, crime-ridden cars, you see it for what it is: the mindless obscene scrawls of illiterate, lawless vandals. New York is a busted pay phone, a boarded up jewelry shop window, a screaming fire engine, a wailing police car.

The ultra chic modern living sections of the city's daily newspapers have featured articles recently on how families, couples, swinging singles — all complete strangers — live together in careful harmony to beat the high price of Manhattan apartment rentals. After the war, we wrote sad stories about people who had to share flats like this in the ruins of Berlin, Warsaw and Tokyo. But that was another time, in another city, when it was not considered sophisticated to be suffocated among strangers.

Amid the modern ruins, new steel and glass sky scrapers rise every day, as the Middle Class flees in fear to the suburbs and beyond, and the melting pot, boiling down the hopes and dreams of the latest arrivals from Haiti, Cuba and other wretched shores, seethes and gurgles like a fetid sewer.

New York tries to hide its horrors with bicycle lanes, rock concerts in the park, borowide marathons, rollerskate races over the paint-peeling bridges and similar mass freak shows. The poor try to shut reality out with blaring transistor radios. The well-to-do go jogging, ride their 10-speed bikes and rollerskate to Wall Street isolated from the maddening decay by hi-fi earphones.

I don't know why, but I find something selfish and anti-social about bike riders, joggers and roller skaters. What New York needs at this time is the noisy camaraderie of sidewalk punchball, handball against a factory wall and the pastime of my youth: two-sewer stickball on a busy street.

Maybe it's too late. The author of the song "I Love New York" has cheerfully confessed to a past as a purveyor of and actor in porno films.

It figures.

Bike Thefts Investigated

Greenville police are investigating the theft of four bicycles reported to the department yesterday. Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said the first report was received at 12:35 p.m. from Cathrine Rose of 402A Biltmore St. who reported her bicycle, valued at $700, had been stolen from 1809 East Fifth St. where she had been visiting.

The second report, the chief said, was made at 2:20 p.m. by Elizabeth Powell Jones of 1403 Willow St. who said her $150 bicycle had been taken from her home.

A report at 4:30 p.m. by Nancy Ann League of 1608 Sulgrave Rd. said someone had cut a chain to take her $200 bicycle from her residence.

Cannon said the fourth larceny report came from Donna Lynn Gay of 207 Oak St. at 6:40 p.m. saying her bicycle, valued at $80 was taken from her home after a lock was broken open.

But the fiery LaFollette was fueled in large part by antipathy toward the two major party candidates. Today Jabbing John, like Battling Bob, benefits from the same antagonisms. This is no prediction that history will repeat, dumping Carter and giving Reagan an electoral landslide. History is merely gossip, said Oscar Wilde, and perhaps these tales of 1924 are only that.

Zeroing In On FBI Witness

WASHINGTON AP — Defense attorneys looking for a weak link in the government's Abscam bribery case against Rep. John W. Jenrette are zeroing in on the credibility of key FBI informant Melvin Weinberg.

So Weinberg, a convicted swindler, reviewed his shady past Wednesday for U.S. District Court jurors under questioning from attorneys representing Jenrette and his co-defendant, Richmond, Va., businessman John R. Stowe.

As a boy, Weinberg said, he broke windows to help his father's glass business. As an adult he became a confidence man.

He said his most recent swindle involved false connections to the attorney general of Bolivia, gold coins in China and "Lady Evelyn Knight," represented in the coin as one of the world's 10 richest women.

"You were a good con man," suggested Stowe's attorney Murray Janus.

"I don't know how good I was. I was caught," Weinberg replied.

The "Lady Evelyn" investment scheme was discovered by law enforcement authorities. Weinberg said he pleaded guilty to wire fraud and mail fraud but was given three years probation at the request of the FBI, which, having employed him as an informant since 1969, still wanted his services.

Attorneys for Jenrette, a South Carolina Democrat, and Stowe are seeking to convince jurors that Weinberg's credibility leaves something to be desired.

It was Weinberg who asked Stowe to bring Jenrette to a meeting with FBI undercover agent Anthony Amoroso during the Abscam operation.

A federal grand jury indicted Stowe and Jenrette for taking a $50,000 payoff from Amoroso, who posed as a representative of two wealthy Arabs seeking special immigration legislation to gain entry to the United States.

Jenrette is charged with bribery and conspiracy and Stowe with conspiracy and aiding and abetting bribery.

Weinberg also testified Wednesday that he hasn't paid taxes for two years, although he received $3,000 a month plus bonuses for his Abscam work. He said he has informed the Internal Revenue Service he plans to pay.

Weinberg shared the witness stand with Amoroso, who admitted he was wrong last week when he testified the FBI was unable to record crucial telephone calls that led Jenrette into bribery discussions.

Amoroso said under cross-examination Wednesday that there was recording equipment in his Atlantic-

City, N.J., motel room when Weinberg called Stowe last Nov. 15 to arrange a meeting between Jenrette and Amoroso.

Amoroso admitted his error after defense attorney Kenneth M. Robinson showed him copies of other FBI tape recordings made from the motel room. Those taped calls did not involve the Jenrette case.

Amoroso said Wednesday he had believed he was testifying truthfully last week when he said he had been unable to record the Jenrette-related calls.

State Rests In Trial Of Klansmen And 2 Nazis

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The state has rested its case in the murder trial of four Ku Klux Klansmen and two Nazis charged with killing five communists last Nov. 3 when a long-standing feud among the "three hate-oriented groups" burst into violence and ended in gunfire.

District Attorney Michael Schlosser has demanded the death penalty for the six defendants, first of 22 Klansmen, Nazis and followers of the Communist Workers Party indicted as a result of the violence.

North Carolina has a gas chamber, but the state has not conducted an execution since 1961.

With the trial in a recess until Monday, when the defense is expected to make its routine call for dismissal of the charges, the courtroom proceedings are ending their 13th week on a calm note — in sharp contrast to a somewhat circus-like atmosphere that has prevailed at times.

In the early days of the trial, especially during the jury selection phase, CWP members frequently interrupted court sessions or demonstrated outside the Guilford County Courthouse. Klansmen, openly identifying themselves, have been present throughout the trial.

One Klan leader, Joe Grady of nearby Winston-Salem, has been a constant courthouse visitor, bringing lunch to the five defendants allowed out of their cells. At one session, Grady entertained — and frustrated — courthouse observers by playing "Dixie" on his musical watch.

Two prosecution witnesses have testified they underwent hypnosis to refresh their memories and CWP members have refused to testify. And, there is the case of Bernard Butkovich of Cleveland, an agent for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms who infiltrated an area Nazi group and witnessed planning for the motorcade on Nov. 3. Testimony also indicated that a police informant participated in the planning for the motorcade.

Prosecution evidence has been spread before the all-white jury of six men and six women, giving the otherwise drab courtroom the look of a yard sale.

There is a small arsenal of weapons, hundreds of photographs, CWP placards, a Confederate flag wrapped around a metal post with an American flag, clubs, 2-inch thick sticks, bloody clothing, a 5-foot length of chain, brass knuckles, fenceposts, boxes, a lawn chair, trash and a big straw hat with a red feather sticking out of the hatband.

With all that, plus four television newstapes made by reporters at the scene during the violence, the prosecution has offered testimony tending to link only one of the defendants, Klansman Jerry Paul Smith of Maiden, to a specific killing.

Schlosser and his staff have relied heavily on North Carolina's felony murder law, which states that someone acting with others in the commission of a felony resulting in a death can be convicted of first-degree murder even if that person did not do the actual killing.

The prosecution contends that the defendants in the Greensboro case engaged in a felony riot and committed first-degree murder and that some of the defendants killed after premeditation and deliberation.

Although the state rested its case Wednesday, the prosecution has reserved the right to reopen its presentation if the presiding judge, Superior Court Judge James M. Long, allows a motion that would take the jury to the scene of the conflict. Long may rule on that motion Monday.

The length of the trial has not been surprising. Schlosser said recently that "not a stone has been left unturned in the preparation of this trial" as his staff has used all available resources from the local police department, the state and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

But, Schlosser noted, "the omnipresence of three hate-oriented groups at every phase of the prosecution has hindered the orderly progression of the trial."

When court resumes next week, the defense is expected to present its case based on a plea of self-defense.

Each of the defendants is expected to testify. Attorneys have indicated they will contend they joined other Klansmen and Nazis for the trip to Greensboro to demonstrate peacefully. The defendants reportedly will contend they were ambushed by the CWP followers and that they had no choice but to return fire in self-defense.

Smith, 33, works in a family-owned logging business near Charlotte.

The other defendants are: — Coleman Pridmore, 46, the oldest of the Klansmen and a close friend of Smith. He's a millworker in Lincolnton.

— Lawrence Morgan, 27, a Klansman from Lincolnton.

— David Matthews, 24, a Newton Klansman and father of three. His wife is expecting another child. A Guilford County sheriff's deputy who booked Matthews testified the defendant said: "They can't get me for all of them; I only got three."

— Roland Wood, 34, of Winston-Salem, a former Klansman and a Nazi when he was arrested. Wood now says he is a "born-again Christian."

— Jack Fowler Jr., 37, also a former Klansman who now says he has dropped his affiliation with the Nazi party. Fowler, whose mother has died since his confinement, surrendered to the FBI after hitchhiking from Greensboro to Chicago.

Ted Stone To Speak At Memorial

Ted Stone, former drug addict, will speak Sunday at Memorial Baptist Church, 1510 Greenville Blvd. S. E.

TED STONE

He will address the junior-senior high youth and university students at 9:30 a. m. At 11 a. m. he will share his story during morning worship and at 7 p. m. he will hold a rap session with everyone — especially youth and parents of youth — in the sanctuary. He will be available for private counseling from 4 to 6 p. m. Appointments may be made by calling 756-5314 or 752-5778.

Stone was a respected businessman in Durham when he became addicted to amphetamines. He became psychotic and developed a criminal personality, eventually shooting a man during a robbery. He was treated in several hospital psychiatric units and was sentenced to 15-25 years in Central Prison in 1972. He was released from prison in 1976.

He travels many states warning audiences that "using drugs is not worth the price you have to pay." This year the Ted Stone Enlightenment Crusade has put him before more than 100,000 persons in more than 25 different school systems, 250 different churches and numerous civic clubs.

The public is invited.

School Board.....

ment. Copies of this will go to the teacher, the principal's file and the superintendent's file.

Tenured teachers will be required to submit by October 1 of each year a written plan outlining areas to be improved upon during the year. The principal, after visiting and observing his teachers and holding a conference to discuss the self-evaluation, will file a report with copies going to the teacher, the principal's file and the superintendent's file.

Tenured personnel, after being rated outstanding or above average for three consecutive years, will be evaluated only every three years.

Superintendent Ott Alford, author of the plan, told the board, "We, the professional people, ought to be the ones determining poor teachers, not the parents. What this (parent evaluation) does, other than being an act of irresponsibility on our part, is put parents into an adversary relationship with the school."

"Not in every case, but more frequently than I like to admit some teachers strike back at the parents through their children," he added. "This only has to happen once to warrant the strong action I've recommended to the board, which requires that principals and this board weed out poor teachers, not parents."

The teachers' primary objections to the plan included listing their own weaknesses, the role of the supervisor, and the amount of paperwork the plan would entail.

"Somehow gentlemen, I cannot see that these people who are already overburdened with paperwork have put down this and are here tonight because they feel the plan will do them no harm," said Annette McRae, president of the Pitt County Chapter of NCAE. "We do not feel it helps the children or teacher to have an atmosphere in which fear keeps the teacher from doing his best job."

A spokesman for the teachers expressed confusion about the role of the supervisor, saying "What the role of the principal and the supervisor is needs to be clarified. At one point the plan says the supervisor's involvement will be indirect, but at another point it says copies of reports will be sent to him or her. This is not indirect involvement."

Alford said his plan encourages growth in teaching. "Self-evaluation is the key to growth. This plan gives a teacher insight into her strengths and shows her where her weaknesses are. In addition to that, it helps us get rid of the 'bad apples' that tend to spoil the whole group," he explained.

"With the possibility of RIF (reduction of force) due to the present economics, we need some uniform way of insuring that the good teachers are kept and the bad ones released," he added. Alford said the plan was effective because it makes it more difficult for principals to rate unsatisfactory teachers outstanding.

Several teachers voiced objections to this comment, saying the new plan made it no harder for principals to wrongly evaluate personnel.

The NCAE asked that the board not adopt the new self-evaluation plan and continue with the present plan until the state plan replaces it; or amend the plan by having only two or three ratings (satisfactory, needs improvement, unsatisfactory), keeping the evaluation in the principal's hands, by striking the requirement for self-evaluation in any form, and by publishing the criteria for evaluation to all personnel involved.

"Self-evaluation is a constant process in teaching," said McRae. "Every teacher does what you are asking each day. I would personally feel better if this money spent on evaluation were available to me to buy supplies so I could be a better teacher."

A Task Force composed of teachers made a study on evaluation this summer and sent their recommendations in a letter addressed to the board. Board members reported last night they never saw the letter.

"I disagreed with it," said Superintendent Alford. "I chose not to share it with them because I thought it in the best interest of the people not to share it."

The letter recommended that evaluation be an ongoing process and not limited to a 30-minute observation. The faculty should receive a set of indicators (what is satisfactory and what is unsatisfactory) within the first 30 days of the school year and evaluators should be familiar with the indicators. To achieve any rating, such as "satisfactory," teachers should meet at least 50 percent of the indicators on a particular item. The letter also recommended that the five-level rating system be reduced to above average, satisfactory, needs improvement, and satisfactory.

The board, after discussion, tabled the plan and placed further discussion of it on the agenda for October 7 at 4:30 p.m.

"NCAE is hopeful that on October 7 the board will either deny the proposed evaluation plan or make some substantial changes in the details," said McRae. "The same objections we had last year remain in force."

Soviet Stepping Up Its Production Of Missiles

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union is stepping up the output of a powerful nuclear missile with a range of over 3,000 miles and carrying three warheads, each with a punch of 150,000 tons of TNT, the authoritative International Institute of Strategic Studies said today.

The Institute said Moscow has increased the rate of its deployment of the SS-20 missile from one every seven days to one every five days and now has 160 ready to go into action. The organization called this "disturbing."

The SS-20, which is replacing the aging SS-4 Intermediate Range Ballistic Missile first deployed in 1959, is only one weapon in a buildup that has given the Soviet Union and its satellites a big lead over the United States and the Western allies in both strategic and conventional armaments, the Institute said.

There is little hope of paring the communist advantage until the alliance begins putting into service new long-range missile systems expected in three to four years time, the Institute said in its annual survey of world military might — The Military Balance 1980-1981. The survey covers research by its staff up to July.

The Institute is frequently consulted by leading governmental figures throughout the non-communist world. This year's Balance is the 21st by the organization, which is devoted to the study of the problems of international security, defense and arms control in the nuclear age. It says that "it is international in its council, staff and membership, the latter drawn from over 50 countries. It is independent of governments and is not the advocate of any particular interest."

The Institute said the Soviet program of modernization of intercontinental missiles has reached a point where more than half the ICBM force is now less than 10 years old. The newest American ICBMs, the Minuteman III, were first deployed in 1970.

Minuteman III carries three warheads with the equivalent of 170,000 to 200,000 tons of TNT each. The Soviet SS-18, which is replacing the SS-9, carries one warhead with the equivalent of 18 to 25 million tons of TNT.

A new generation of shorter-range missiles for use on battlefields, the SS-21, 22 and 23, are about to enter service, if some have not already done so, according to the Military Balance.

Cars Damaged In Collision

An estimated $1,500 damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated here yesterday by Greenville police.

Police said cars driven by David Roscoe Smith of Columbia and Christine Wilson Smith of 1406 West Sixth St. collided about 5:25 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street, causing an estimated $900 damage to the David Smith car and $300 damage to the Christine Smith vehicle.

Mrs. Smith was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety in connection with the mishap.

Cars driven by Judy Lynn Parker of Evans Trailer Pk. and Eva Simmons Cox of Route 2, Roper, collided about 12:55 p.m. at the intersection of Elm Street and Greenville Boulevard, resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Parker car and $100 damage to the Cox auto.

Should the board fail to deny or change the plan, NCAE will begin to gain its member in techniques of protecting themselves from capricious evaluation."

"The good teacher has nothing to fear from this plan," said Superintendent Alford, "only the weak or those with room to improve who fail to do so need fear it."

Prices Steady At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Prices were steady on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday, as compared with Tuesday's sale, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Top price paid by a company was $1.80 a pound for quality cutter grades. More nondescript grades were on the floors yesterday than on any day this week. Volume of less mature grades continued to increase. Cutter and leaf grades accounted for most of sales. Stabilization receipts were down to 1.99 percent of gross sales.

The market sold 685,315 pounds for $1,081,711 and an average of $157.84 per hundred pounds, which was $12 per hundred more than on the same sale day last year.

To date, the market has sold 18,200,235 pounds for $26,850,812 and a season's average of $147.53, Williams said.

Reagan, Anderson Map Debate

By The Associated Press
"Be Prepared!" may be the motto of the major presidential candidates as well as the Boy Scouts.

Republican nominee Ronald Reagan and independent candidate John B. Anderson dropped off the campaign trail Wednesday to ready for their nationally televised debate Sunday.

And President Carter, who has refused to take part in that debate, was at the White House and said to be preparing for his news conference late this afternoon — which was also to be before the television cameras.

On Wednesday, Reagan — who has been trying to make the president's refusal to debate a major issue — personally called on Carter to change his mind and take part in the debate in Baltimore sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"If he does not debate he will be telling the American people that he will not — that he cannot — defend his record," Reagan said. "And if he cannot defend his record, I believe that the American people on Nov. 4 will tell him that they cannot defend his record either."

Meanwhile, the League of Women Voters announced Wednesday it had decided not to place an empty chair on the stage during the debate as had been considered to dramatize Carter's absence.

"We do not intend to let the 'empty chair' controversy overshadow the opportunity of the American people to focus on the candidates' discussion of the issues," said Ruth Hinerfeld, the league's national president.

She said league officials "deeply regret" the president's decision not to attend and added that the invitation remains open to him.

As for Anderson, he gained two court victories Wednesday that seem to insure he will be on the general election ballots in Maryland and Maine.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., upheld a U.S. District Court decision invalidating

Maryland's March 3 deadline for filing as a candidate. It concluded the early filing deadline did not further "state interests in any respect."

Maryland's attorney general, Stephen H. Sachs, said he did not intend to appeal but might change his mind depending on the outcome of a case involving Ohio now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

In Boston, the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld a decision by U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux, who ruled that Anderson was entitled to be on Maine's ballot because the state's filing deadline of April 1 discriminated against independent candidates.

A spokesman for Maine's attorney general had no comment on the appellate court ruling.

While President Carter was not campaigning Wednesday, his chief spokesman released what he said was a forged federal memo that seemed designed to hurt the president. The purported National Security Council document recommended the CIA launch "clandestine operations" to create divisiveness between American blacks and African nationalists.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said he had "no basis on which to know who is responsible," but he suggested the forged memo might have been the work of hostile foreign intelligence agency or a domestic political group.

In noting that the document might be related to "the domestic political situation," Powell did not specifically mention any of Carter's political rivals.

The release of the document came the day after Carter suggested in Atlanta that Reagan was stirring racial hatred through his mention of states' rights and the Ku Klux Klan.

Reagan used the phrases in speeches more than two weeks ago, and Republican vice presidential candidate George Bush on Wednesday accused Carter of taking the "low road" in trying to portray Reagan as a racist.

Both the president and Reagan are battling to secure votes in the South, Carter's native region and a major factor in his election victory in 1976, and the black vote could be important in the efforts of the two candidates.

Ending Strikes In Two States

By The Associated Press
Some 1,200 striking teachers in Michigan, Ohio and Washington have agreed to contract settlements that end their walkouts, but about 24,000 of their colleagues remain on strike in nine states.

The strikes were keeping about 550,000 students away from classes in Arizona, California, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Washington.

In Ann Arbor, Mich., about 1,050 teachers returned to their classrooms Wednesday, ending an extended summer vacation for 16,500 students.

The settlement increased the base teachers salary from $10,960 to $13,570. The last obstacle to an agreement was removed when teachers said they would participate in evening parent-teacher conferences if their pay was not docked because of the strike.

A walkout in Hubbard,

Ohio, ended early today when the district's 161 teachers agreed to a contract that would increase base pay from $10,250 to $11,400. The strike affected 3,100 students.

And in the Lower Snoqualmie school district in Washington, a settlement was reached with 62 striking teachers that provided for raises of about 30 percent over three years. The strike had kept 1,200 students from classes.

In other developments: —In Port Huron, Mich., striking teachers said they would appeal a judge's back-to-work order, which they have been defying. The walkout, which began Monday, involves 700 teachers and affects 14,000 students.

—In Sierra Vista, Calif., 200 striking teachers were notified by letter that they would have to return to work by Monday or the school board would consider their contracts abandoned.

"I think few, if any, of our teachers are going to be taken in by this offer, which is not so much an offer as an ultimatum," said Joyce Clark, a spokeswoman for the Sierra Vista Classroom Teachers Association.

—In San Jose, Calif., a strike by 1,600 teachers was in its 11th day Wednesday and strike coordinator John Stephens said the union was not "terribly optimistic" of an early settlement.

Session On TV Presentation

ECU News Bureau
"How to Be Your Best on TV," a one-day workshop on presenting oneself and one's ideas effectively on television, will be offered at ECU Saturday, Oct. 11, from 9:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Since enrollment will be limited, early registration is advised. Further details are available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, Greenville, N.C., telephone 757-6143.

Now Wants To Donate Profits

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Former Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman says he wants to donate most of the money from his forthcoming book to his "Save the River" Committee.

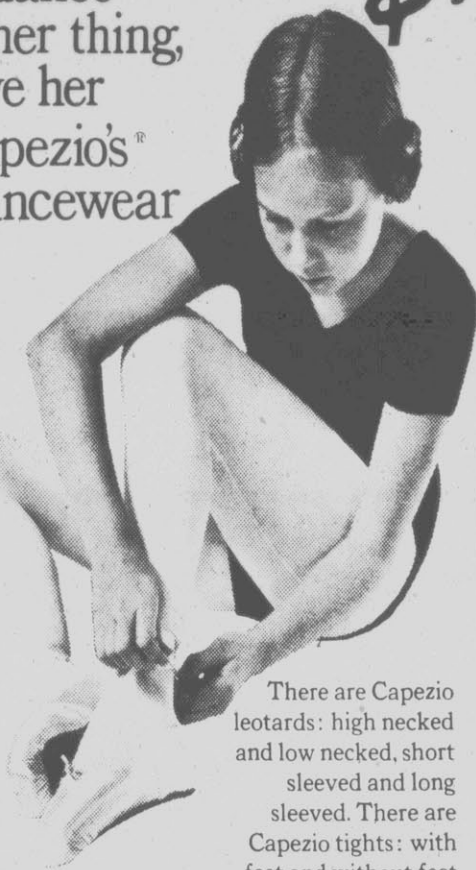

Hoffman was in Portland for a taping of the Phil Donahue talk show for broadcast today.

The Internal Revenue Service has slapped a lien on the earnings Hoffman could make from his book, "Soon To Be A Major Motion Picture." Hoffman said he would like most of the money, if released, to go to his St. Lawrence River environmental group.

"Every single penny is assigned to people," Hoffman said. "I suppose I'll make some money on it."

Hoffman had been a fugitive since 1974 after jumping bail on a charge he sold cocaine to an undercover police officer in 1973.

Morgan, Byrd Say East Charges Are Vicious Lies

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd blasted them this week as vicious lies.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., calls them terrible, scurrilous. And Republican Senate hopeful John East says they are just facts.

All are talking about the heavy-sounding charges East has been making about Morgan as he wages a well-financed, stridently conservative campaign to unseat the state's freshman senator.

East has been unabashedly pointed in his assaults on Morgan's voting record in a massive series of television commercials just completed — charging Morgan with voting to weaken national defense and wasting billions of federal dollars.

He has leveled more of the charges in thousands of letters mailed to potential campaign contributors around the state and around the country.

"The same literature is being used by the far, far right all over this country, hoping to defeat Democratic senators who are up for re-election," said Byrd, the West Virginia Democrat.

while stumping for Morgan in the state this week. "It's a sinister thing...this campaign of falsification, distortion, misrepresentation and lies."

East has been using strong language too, describing Morgan — generally considered among the Senate's most conservative Democrats — as an "ultra-liberal."

Hoping to defuse the volatile charges, Morgan's campaign issued a 35-page "white paper" this week, dismissing them as fabrications and distortions of the truth.

East says the latest flap only points out the need for a debate, which he wants and Morgan does not.

"I think Senator Morgan is just embarrassed about his record, trying to duck from it, trying to evade it, and is suggesting we are misrepresenting his record," East said when questioned this week. "I think we're stating the facts."

Some of the dispute is basically a difference of opinion, such as on the merit of the Panama Canal treaties which Morgan and a Senate majority supported, and on the foreign policy value of federal aid to Nicaragua which Morgan and a majority also approved.

But others may leave the reader with an impression of Morgan that is different from what his political record would indicate. Here is a look at some of those charges and what is behind them:

— The B-1 Bomber. In much of his TV advertising, East says Morgan voted against development of the "vitality needed" military aircraft — a statement Morgan says isn't entirely accurate.

Morgan was actually a supporter of the B-1 bomber, he contends. He voted twice against amendments to cut off development of the B-1 in 1976, and against a successful amendment allowing the new president to cancel the program if he wanted it. The next year President Carter canceled the bomber program in favor of the cruise missile.

It was only then that he voted to delete money for five prototype bombers, which Morgan said would have gone unused. Other conservative senators, such as John Stennis of Mississippi, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and Henry Jackson of Washington, voted the same way.

Responds East: "They just caved in when the Carter administration said it wouldn't support it."

— Military budget cuts. East has charged that Morgan "voted to slash the defense budget by $1 billion," and "voted against increasing the defense budget by $1.6 billion."

Morgan calls that unduly harsh. The first vote cited by East was in 1976, when Morgan voted for an amendment to reduce the military budget by $1 billion to $103 billion. But Morgan said the budget was still the largest defense budget ever, a 15 percent increase over the previous year, and included a $3 billion unallocated "cushion."

The second charge involves a 1978 vote on an amendment to add $1.6 billion to the $130 billion military budget bill. It failed, and Morgan was joined in opposing it by such conservatives as Stennis, Jackson and Barry Goldwater, D-Ariz.

East, calling the money "vitality needed," responded: "Senator Morgan might nuzzle on this detail or that detail. So be it. But the overall pattern, ultimately, I think they have to defend."

— Small business. An East mailing accused Morgan of voting against exempting small businesses with good records from coverage of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, or OSHA. Morgan says that is based on his vote to support a ruling of the Senate parliamentarian that the amendment was out of order.

"When the amendment was submitted on its merits, Senator Morgan voted for the amendment," his paper says. "To claim that he voted against the proposal on the basis of a parliamentary vote is a distortion of the record."

— Unions. East has made several charges involving labor in his mailings — including that Morgan voted to "allow union bosses to use $10 million a day in forced dues for political purposes" and to "rig election laws in favor of unions."

The first, Morgan says, involves an amendment pushed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and tabled by the Senate.

"Nowhere in the debates was the figure $10 million a day ever used nor has the law ever allowed union bosses or anyone else to use forced union dues as contributions to political campaigns," says Morgan's paper.

His campaign document said it found no substantiation for the election-rigging charge in the vote cited by East.

East, asked to respond, said the charge on dues "refers to the use of in-kind funds by unions. Those funds are used to support logistically candidates the union leadership wants supported." On rigging elections, East responded, "I just don't know exactly what he's referring to." Acknowledging that much of the work was done on the charges by campaign staff, East said he wanted to look at the charge more carefully before responding.

Sunday Moving Day At Atlanta's New Terminal

By NANCY KENNEY
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Taxicabs will resemble vast anthills Sunday morning as 24 planes and an army of scurrying ground vehicles rush to complete the last-gasp move into a dazzling new airport terminal.

The pre-dawn spectacle may seem dramatic — even eerie — but the transfer from the tired, outmoded building which has served as a hub of air commerce for decades will already be 85 percent complete when the new terminal is christened tonight, Hartsfield International Airport officials say.

Celebrities such as presidential Chief of Staff Jack Watson will salute the opening of the world's largest air terminal in tonight's dedication ceremony. The real event, however, officially takes place Sunday at about 2 a.m.

And if the present schedule holds, the first passenger will alight from an Eastern Airlines flight from Denver, Colo. at 4:20 a.m. But don't count on it.

Preparations for the opening of Atlanta's huge $600 million terminal have been marked by "the requisite folderol about who gets out first, who takes off first. They're all trying to beat each other out," said an airport official who asked not to be identified.

Delta Air Lines spokesman Bob Berry noted that plans for Delta's first arrival are still tentative and admitted, "If there's any way possible that we can schedule one just ahead of Eastern's, you can be darn sure we're going to do it."

Nearly all of the terminal's electronic equipment is already in place, airport officials say.

But aircraft, tugs, baggage carts and minor items such as office furnishings must still be pushed, driven or toted over to the new facility, so airline consultants have developed a strategic plan so the final push goes smoothly.

On Sunday morning, air traffic controllers will greet the last arriving planes and bid farewell to departures in a period from about 11:50 p.m. to 1 a.m. Then, for about three hours, air traffic will come to a virtual standstill.

Gerrie Cook, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said officials will close the runway closest to the old terminal. Then 16 Eastern and eight Delta jets will be driven from one terminal to the other, zig-zagging from time to time across the freed runway until they park at the new facility's gates.

"Some people like to imagine that they will taxi together in a row, but our planes will move one by one, bumper to bumper," Berry said.

The dwarfed tugs and baggage carts will occupy most of the taxiways.

Airlines will then brace for the first scramble of air traffic. Eastern, for one, has scheduled 25 departures between 5:40 and 7:15 a.m. and 26 arrivals between 8:05 a.m. and 8:31 a.m.

The halls of the old terminal will echo on Sunday, but a small network of activities will keep it from becoming a ghost town. Atlanta's aviation department will still stake out the fifth floor of the old building, and some airlines will operate maintenance shops.

Small corporate jet operations such as the Coca-Cola Co.'s will remain in the older terminal, and airport consultant Charlie Templeton said there has been "some talk" of developing a specialty mall to fill the abandoned acreage.

PREPARING FOR ANNIVERSARY — Co-chairmen of the observance of the 50th anniversary of the present St. Paul's Episcopal Church building — Frank M. Wooten and Mrs. Anne Dunn Cowan, confer with the church's pastor, Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston, Jr., on commemoration activities. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zicherman)

St. Paul's Church Preparing To Mark Building's 50th Anniversary

Half a century ago, on Sunday, September 21, 1930, the Rev. William A. Lillycrop conducted the inaugural service at a new church building, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, located at 401 East Fourth Street.

On Saturday and Sunday, September 20 and 21, special homecoming activities will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the first 1930 service of St. Paul's at its present site. Homecoming co-chairmen are Mrs. Anne Dunn Cowan and Frank M. Wooten.

The Saturday event will be a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Greenville Rotary Club for present and past members and friends of St. Paul's.

On Sunday, the 10 a.m. service of the Holy Eucharist and Confirmation will be presided over by the Right Rev. B. Sidney Sanders, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of East Carolina. The service will also include special liturgical music and dance. Following the Sunday morning service, a catered lunch will be held on the church grounds.

The Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston, Jr., St. Paul's present rector, has announced that current active members have planned several projects to commemorate the church building's 50th anniversary. These activities include a compilation of a memory book of documents and photographs, and the preparation of a time capsule to be sealed and stored until the date of St. Paul's 100th anniversary in September, 2030.

St. Paul's history goes back much further in time than the opening of the brick church in 1930.

According to a church history prepared by Lawrence F. Brewster, the people of what eventually became Pitt County received occasional services from the Rev. Alexander Steward, rector of St. Thomas Parish in Bath. During the religious controversy that took place in eastern North Carolina in the late 1700s, church services were administered by Rev. Nathaniel G. Blount. He took part in efforts to form a diocese in North Carolina of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S. — the reorganized successor to the Church of England. When the diocese finally became functional in 1817, it still did not have its own bishop, but received episcopal visitation from the Rt. Rev. Richard Channing Moore, Bishop of Virginia. Bishop Moore preached several times in Greenville in 1819, and during 1825-26, the Rev. Joseph Pierson of St. Peter's Church, Washington, visited Greenville on several occasions and initiated the formation of a congregation here.

The Greenville parish, known at first as St. James, was reorganized as St. Paul's Parish and was formally admitted into the Diocese of North Carolina in May, 1847. The church register shows that by 1857, 15 white and 22 blacks had been baptized.

Brewster's "History of St. Paul's Parish" states that "Greenville's Episcopal congregation had no building of its own until 1848. On March 15 that year, a half acre of land was purchased by the vestry from Joseph John Norcott for fifty dollars. Through the generosity of Nymphus A. Price . . . a wooden church was erected on Pitt Street . . . The Church was consecrated by Bishop Thomas Atkinson on October 31, 1855.

The church's history shows that the Parish "contributed to the war effort during the years 1861-1865" — and "Services were provided in St. Paul's by dedicated rectors of neighboring parishes, missionaries and chaplains, sometimes themselves refugees from their own fields."

The original church building was used until 1885, when a new brick church was built on Second Street and the original church was sold to Roman Catholics. Gradually, improvements were added — three memorial windows were installed, and electric lights put in.

Forty-five years later, after years of planning, the present structure and the first parish house were completed in 1930.

The Diocesan Convention, which had first met in Greenville in 1890, was entertained in the new church in 1931, 1943 and in 1960. As East Carolina Teachers College grew into East Carolina University, the program carried on by the rector and parish workers through the Canterbury Club developed into a campus ministry with a college chaplain, beginning in 1954.

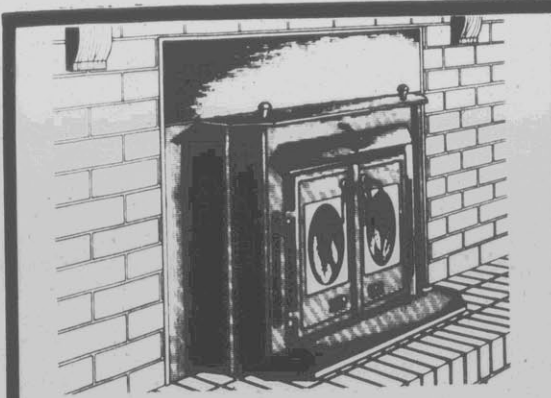

Brewster reveals that "The Parish has had several of its sons enter the ministry and serve in the Diocese. In the late 1860's there was John R. Joyner. Included among those in recent years have been James Dees, Raby Edwards, Ben Wolverton, Craig Worthington, Bill Wade, W. J. Hadden, III, and Dana Pecheles."

Also, two women parishioners have served in missionary work — Miss Venetia Cox was a missionary to China from 1917 to 1949, and Ms. Mildred Huff carried out mission work with Indians in the southwestern U.S.

With the continued growth of the church, a decision was made by the vestry and congregation to form a new mission congregation. This resulted in organizing St. Timothy's in December, 1977 with a first service held in the Adventist Church in January, 1978.

In addition to Rev. Houston, St. Paul's rector, other clergymen currently serving the church are Rev. William J. Hadden, Jr., the Episcopal Chaplain at East Carolina University; Rev. John A. Winslow, Assistant Rector; Rev. Stanleigh Jenkins, Assistant Rector; and Rev. John R. Price, Associate Rector and Vicar of St. Timothy's. Mrs. Sharon Irwin is the organist, Mrs. Doris Meyer, secretary, and Mrs. Bartje Pace is currently the president of ECW (Episcopal Church Women).

Alarmed Over Nurses' Visit

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A neighbor saw nurses going into Marlene Uhlers' home at 7:30 a.m. recently and called to inquire if anything was wrong.

It turned out that the nurses, who had worked the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift at a hospital, were merely holding a baby shower.

Revival Set At Pleasant Hill

Rev. C.F. Bowen

We would like you to join us at our church, Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist (New Bern Hwy.), for a "good old time" revival beginning Sunday night, September 21. Our pastor, Reverend C.F. Bowen, will be conducting the revival which starts at 7:45 p.m. each night, and extends through September 27. So we invite you to come and enjoy some good singing, good preaching, and good fellowship. Our revival will be climaxed with our Homecoming service on Sunday, September 28 and we hope you will come and join us.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose sharply in early trading today but then fell back after reaching a 3 1/2-year high. Volume was heavy in the after-math of the OPEC meeting that failed to take decisive action to reduce the oil glut.
 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 7 points in early trading, was down 85 to 964.76 after two hours. The Dow average, which gained 15.36 points the previous day, was briefly above 967. It has not closed that high since March 16, 1977.
 Advances outnumbered declines by a 4:3 margin among New York Stock Exchange issues.
 The Commerce Department reported personal income of Americans rose 0.8 percent in August, barely half the July rise and providing evidence the recovery from the recession is not a sharp one.
 Evidence of an end to the recession had played a role in the rally, with the government on Wednesday reporting rising housing starts and factory operating rates.
 During the sharp rise Wednesday it was thought there would be no oil price rise as a result of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Vienna. But after the market closed Saudi Arabia agreed to raise its price by $2 a 42-gallon barrel, to $30.
 That brought the Saudi price closer to other OPEC prices and was expected to raise the price of gasoline in the United States by less than one cent a gallon. But the Saudis will not cut production before the end of the year, indicating the current over-supply of oil will continue.
 Oil issues were mixed today. Texaco fell 1/8 to 34 1/2, Atlantic Richfield was unchanged at 47 1/4 and Mobil climbed 1/8 to 69 1/4.
 American Telephone & Telegraph fell 1/8 to 53 1/4. It reported higher earnings on Wednesday.
 Technology issues also turned mixed. Storage Technology added 1/8 to 22 1/4. At the American Stock Exchange, Amdahl fell 1/4 to 30 1/4.
 Big Board volume totaled a heavy 30.91 million shares in the first two hours of trading as the NYSE's composite index was unchanged at 74.57.
 At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .58 at 343.14.

State To Double Port Capacity
PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — State ports director William Greene said Wednesday the state will nearly double the container-handling capacity at Wilmington later this year.
 Greene said an additional 40-acre tract will provide more space for handling cargo, allowing the port to increase its container operation from a projected 34,000 items this year to 65,000 next year.
 He discussed the expansion project in a speech before the state convention of the North Carolina Motor Carriers Association.
 Greene said the Ports Authority also plans to build a cold storage warehouse at Wilmington for turkeys, chickens and pigs. The warehouse will be completed by next summer, he said.

Air Conditioning Request Scheduled
 The subject of a request for consideration of air conditioning at Rose High School will be taken up at the Monday, October 6 information meeting of the Greenville City Board of Education.
 In the article on the September 15 school board meeting which appeared in "The Daily Reflector" on Tuesday, it was noted the subject was not discussed as the spokesperson scheduled to be at the meeting did not appear.
 Interested persons gathering information, and the spokesperson for the group, did not attend the September 15 meeting because they did not at that time have estimates from four contractors they are working with.
 The group and the spokesperson are scheduled to be on the agenda of the October 6 meeting to present a request for installation of air conditioning at Rose.

No Suspects In Four Slayings

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Eleven days after four people were found bludgeoned to death in an Eureka Springs apartment, Cumberland County authorities say they have no suspects in the slayings.
 "There are no new developments in the case," Sheriff Otis Jones said Wednesday night.
 Reports earlier in the day had indicated a major breakthrough in the slayings, but Jones said no leads had been developed.
 The bodies of Army Pvt. William L. Shumway, his wife, Robyn; her sister, Sherri Hill; and Mrs. Hill's nearly 2-year-old son, all of Inverness, Fla., were found nearly two weeks ago in the Shumways' apartment. They apparently had been beaten to death with a blunt instrument.
 Jones said an 18-member task force is continuing the investigation "around the clock," talking to anyone who might have information relating to the murders.
 "A lot of people don't understand that in a case like this there's always a lot of gossip and rumor. Yet we have to look at each item, otherwise we might miss something. That takes time and effort," the sheriff said.
 Jones said a piece of shotgun barrel had been found in the house and that investigators were speculating whether a shotgun might have been the murder weapon. However, he said, there was no way currently of tying the shotgun piece to the murders.
 Shumway, 22, a soldier at Fort Bragg, was found tied to his 19-year-old wife's body on the living room floor of their apartment near Simmons Army Airfield. Bound together on a bed in the same apartment were the bodies of Mrs. Hill and her son.
 Shumway's wife was nude and her sister wore nothing but panties when found Sept. 6, but autopsies indicated neither had been sexually molested. There were no signs of robbery in the apartment, authorities said.
 Investigators say that although the walls in the apartment building are "anything but soundproof," no one in the area heard anything unusual.

Set Church School Goals

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Council of Churches has adopted a 1981 legislative package calling for the state to require teacher and curriculum standards for private and church-operated schools "no less stringent than those required in the public schools."
 The council program labeled as regrettable a 1979 law that released private and church schools from most state regulations. It does not call for a repeal of that law, however, but does urge reforms to it.
 The school proposal was among a legislative package approved by 70 delegates representing 15 denominations who met in Durham Wednesday.
 Collins Kilburn, executive director of the council, said the council's prime targets for the 1981 session include ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, expansion of the public defender system for indigents to all counties in the state, development of alternatives to imprisonment for criminals and establishing state facilities for the treatment of severely disturbed youth.

Folks Art Fair To Be Held Saturday

A "Folks Art Fair" will be held Saturday, September 20th, at the Greenville Community Center, corner of Greene and Fourth Streets, from 10 AM until 5 PM.
 The Fair is sponsored by Pitt Community College, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission and Pitt County Home Extension Office. These groups have combined their resources to bring to the community a special arts festival to include crafts, dance, music, painting and other art forms.
 Inside the Community Building will be exhibits of many facets of crafts education which are offered by the sponsors. The Home Demonstrations Clubs and others will have persons demonstrating the making of crafts, and will share their knowledge with the visitors. These crafts, being shown in the building, will be for exhibit only.
 Exhibits will include: spinning, stitchery, macrame, crochet, knitting, weaving, quilting, oil painting, Christmas crafts, hand-tied fringe, silk flowers, rug hooking, carved tree ornaments, baskets, lamp shade decoration.
 Ms. Louise Downing, of the PCC staff, is chairperson of the Fair. There will be no admission charge. The public is invited to attend.

Okay Aflatoxin Research Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Advisory Budget Commission has authorized $90,000 to help fund a laboratory at North Carolina State University for aflatoxin research.
 Aflatoxin is a poisonous byproduct of a fungus that grows on corn. State officials have estimated more than $100 million worth of North Carolina corn has been blocked from sale this year because of aflatoxin.

Rose Returns To Action, Hosts Enloe

Robert Brown

Rose High School's Rampants, following a week off, return to the gridiron Friday night, hosting Raleigh Enloe. The Rampants, currently ranked third in the state by the Associated Press, will be shooting for their third straight victory of the season against no losses. Kickoff will be at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium. Raleigh Enloe brings in an

Game To Be On TV

The East Carolina-Florida State football game, to be played Saturday night in Tallahassee, Fla., will be telecast live over WITN-TV, Washington, channel 7. The game will begin at 7:02 p.m., with an air time of 7 p.m. Hub Burton of WITN and former Pirate quarterback Mike Weaver will provide commentary on the game. The contest is also carried over the Pirate Sports Network on radio, broadcast locally on WOOW with commentary by Jim Woods and Lee Moore.

0-2 record, having lost to Northern Durham, 36-0, and to Durham Senior, 37-18. "Enloe scares me," Rose coach Dave Bumgarner declared. "They haven't won, and they didn't look good in the game that I saw them play." "But they did come up with some big plays. They looked little confused much of the time, but if they get it all together, they can be tough." Bumgarner said that the Eagle foe in the game, Durham, didn't look all that good either, but was able to take advantage of several mistakes Enloe made early in the game to take a big lead. "But Enloe came back on them and made a game out of it before it was over. They can score, and that's what scares me. If they ever put it together, they can beat some people." The coach pointed out that the Eagles have good people in the skill positions. "Their quarterback, Marshall Chavis, is a good athlete, and so is his backup, Mike Anthony. Anthony goes both ways, along with a number of their good people. They have a linebacker who looks a lot like (Ron) Butler (former Rose star). He's around the ball a lot and he's just a junior." The coach isn't too worried about his charges looking past Enloe to the opening Division I Conference game, against Northern Nash, another week away. "But I am worried about the fact that we might not play as well as we are capable of. We can't just walk out there and throw our helmets on the field and think that we've won. We have to play and we have to play well." Bumgarner is hopeful that the Rampants will return to the level of play they had in their opener against Kinston, when Rose had a 33-9 victory. "I'd like to see us execute and play like we did in that game," the coach said. During the off-time, the Rampants have put more work on their passing game and given an extra amount of time to the kicking game, especially the placement part of it. "I think we've improved in all levels of those games," Bumgarner said. "We've shown a great deal of improvement in the kicking game, and in practice the other day, we were consistently kicking field goals from 30 yards out." Bumgarner has shifted the placement duties to Scott Taylor, who kicked once in the Washington game, but missed. He is slated to get the nod for the duties against Enloe. "We've also worked on a lot of other things that we hope will make people think about what we're liable to do," the coach added. He did not elaborate. The coach said that the morale of the team is high, although there was a drop of spirits at the start of the week. Asked about the high ranking, Bumgarner said that he

Seminoles Concerned

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Coach Bobby Bowden says his 10th-ranked Florida State team is ready for their contest with East Carolina in college football action here Saturday, but the coach says he's concerned about East Carolina's explosive wishbone offense. "It causes all sort of problems," Bowden said after a team practice Wednesday. "You just have to make so many adjustments."

"We're adjusting pretty well as a team, but it's easier to work on it when you don't have a Billy Sims back there to worry about," Bowden said, referring to the FSU's 1980 Orange Bowl loss to Oklahoma, which featured the rushing of Sims. The Seminoles' defense will be without the services of All-American nose guard Ron Simmons, who sprained an ankle in the season opener against Louisiana State. "East Carolina should be 2-0 at this point and they can spoil you," Bowden said. "Every year, they record one major upset. They're very aggressive."

The Seminoles have one of the best defensive records in the nation so far this season, beating LSU 16-0 and Louisville 52-0. This week's schedule: West Carteret at Beddingfield; Edenton at Bertie; Fike, open; Enloe at Rose; Hunt at Southwest Edgecombe; Northeastern at Ahsokie; Northern Nash at Tarboro; Rocky Mount at Goldsboro.

Penalties, Fumbles Key To Loss, Emory Feels

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
"I'm not as happy as I was last week at this time," East Carolina Coach Ed Emory said at his weekly press conference Wednesday. "But I do feel that some positive things came out of the game."

Emory's Pirates held their home opener Saturday against Southwestern Louisiana, coming out on the short end of a 27-21 score after coughing the ball up five times on fumbles during the third period. Southwestern took advantage of four of those fumbles to score three touchdowns and a field goal. The loss also snapped a ten game winning streak in Ficklen Stadium.

Ironically, the last team to beat the Pirates in Ficklen was the same Ragin' Cajuns back in 1978. "We knew that Southwestern was better than Duke," Emory said. "But we still feel that we're a better team than they are. We didn't get beat, time just ran out." After falling behind, 27-7, the Pirates fought back to within striking distance before time ran out on them.

Emory said that after reviewing the films of the game, he felt that the Pirates stopped themselves in the first half with penalties. "They hurt us a lot in the first half. I think we had a good crew of officials, but I don't agree with all of their calls. They were in their first game of the season, and I'm sure that they were a little rusty. Still, their calls were not what beat us."

"In the second half, it was the fumbles. We fumbled the first three times we had the ball in the half, and they took advantage of it every time," Emory added.

"Now when you figure that we gained over 300 yards in offense and averaged five yards a play, then you can see that we'd have probably run 25 more plays and picked up close to 500 yards if we hadn't had all those fumbles."

Two of the fumbles came on center-quarterback exchanges, two on quarterback-fullback exchanges, one on a punt return, and the other at the end of a run. "Really, there was only one contact hit, and that was in the open field after a good gain," Emory added. "The rest shouldn't have happened."

He noted that he was asked why he didn't switch to second unit caller Greg Stewart to try and break things up in the period. "We really didn't think it was needed. Carlton (Nelson) was productive out there. And it wasn't a case of the same thing happening every time. It was different kinds of fumbles, things you can't get over on the sidelines for a quick correction. We just felt that Carlton was being productive, and that the last one would be the last one. We didn't think that it would keep on happening."

The coach added that when you lose to a team that you really felt beat you, you don't feel nearly as bad as when you lose to someone you are supposed to beat.

"The best thing is, that it's behind us," he added.

Ahead, however, looms what Emory calls the greatest challenge ever faced by an East Carolina football team, number nine nationally ranked Florida State, this Saturday's foe in a 7 p.m. game in Tallahassee, Fla.

State Tops EC Spikers

RALEIGH — N.C. State gained a 3-0 volleyball victory over East Carolina University yesterday in the opening match of the season for the Lady Pirates.

State won the first game, 15-11, added a 16-14 win in the second, and finished up with a 15-13 win.

In the second game, the Lady Pirates held an 11-6 lead only to see State cut it to 14-10, then score six straight points to take the win.

Assistant coach Lynn Davidson said that the Lady Pirates played "pretty consistently," but that the relative inexperience hurt. "Our free ball plays went pretty well," Davidson continued.

She singled out Sharon Perry for her play in the match. Perry is one of the top all-state candidates for the Pirates. "She played a good game. She had good net play, blocked well and had some nice hits."

The Lady Pirates travel to Boone for a match with Appalachian State on Saturday. East Carolina does not open its home schedule until October 1, when it hosts Duke University.

Freedom Goes For Second Cup Victory

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The U.S. 12-meter yacht Freedom and challenger Australia resumed competition for the America's Cup today with Freedom leading the best-of-seven series 1-0 and holding, if nothing else, a psychological advantage over her rival.

"We know now that the Australians have a good boat," said Freedom's navigator, Halsey Herreshoff. "They have a fast boat, so we know we have to do everything right to beat them. We are not overconfident."

Freedom overcame some mechanical problems with her rudder over the final two legs of the six-leg course on Tuesday to win by 1 minute and 52 seconds.

"The race was a little more than three hours, so what's that, 200 minutes? And we beat Australia by less than two minutes. That's less than one percent," Herreshoff said.

Freedom actually led Australia by as much as 2:17 at the fifth mark after a run with the wind at her stern. That run was the beginning of Freedom's rudder troubles.

"The rudder cable broke just before the second weather mark, so we sailed the fifth leg almost entirely without the rudder," Herreshoff said. He said skipper Dennis Conner used the spinnaker sail and trim tab, a rudder-like flap attached to the keel, to round the fifth mark.

"If you remember, we started the final leg on a long port tack," Herreshoff said Wednesday morning. "It was lucky we were able to do that because we got a jury rig working during that tack. The rest of the way, Dennis steered with the trim tab, and Tom Whidden worked the rudder."

Whidden, the port tender, became the helmsman on the final leg after a crewman attached a line to the rudder assembly below decks, ran it through a pulley block and wound it around the winch Whidden was working, Herreshoff said.

"It made the race kind of exciting, and a little risky," Herreshoff said.

The story of Freedom's rudderless victory did not come out until the morning following the race. When asked at the post-race news conference why he chose not to cover Australia on the final leg of the race, Conner made no allusion to Freedom's mechanical problems.

"It didn't come out at the news conference," Herreshoff said, "and I really don't know why. There was no reason for it not to."

The Australians also were working to correct mechanical troubles on Wednesday. Immediately after Tuesday's race, her crew removed Australia's revolutionary "bendy" mast to adjust some fittings.

The mast has a flexible fiberglass tip to allow the spar to bend and give the mainsail more surface area. The curvature of the mast is controlled by a complex system of hydraulics.

"It's really not all that complex," Australia's tactician, Ben Lexcen, said, "once you get the hang of it. We were doing a lot of things with it yesterday we didn't have to do. We haven't used it before. Yesterday was the first time we've raced with it, and we got six months' worth of experience just from that."

Lexcen also hinted that he did not expect to be using Australia's new Kevlar-Mylar mainsail during the Cup races. The sail is not yet cut for Australia's bendy mainsail and was not expected to be used for at least two more days.

"That sail's not worth a damn," Lexcen said. "I don't think it's any good at all."

Phillies Nip Pittsburgh, Cut Montreal's Lead To 1 1/2 Games

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Tug McGraw was cuffed around so badly by the Pittsburgh Pirates last year that he was listed as their batting practice pitcher in the program at an off-season banquet.

But the flaky Philadelphia left-hander's two victories this season (he has 17 saves), have both come against the defending champion Pirates, including a 5-4 decision in 11 innings Wednesday night.

With the triumph, the Phillies cut Montreal's lead in the National League East to 1 1/2-games when the Expos lost 5-2 to the New York Mets, while the Pirates stayed five games back.

McGraw, who was the self-proclaimed Pittsburgh Most Valuable Player in 1979, won't get any awards from the Pirates this season.

"I wouldn't have accepted the invitation to the banquet except I knew the Pirates would have been disappointed not to have their MVP there," McGraw said. "Maybe now the plane won't shake every time I fly over Pittsburgh."

The Pirates battled back from a 4-1 deficit against 22-game winner Steve Carlton to tie the game. But McGraw pitched two shutout innings and Sparky Lyle registered his first National League save after Garry Maddox led off the 11th for the Phillies with a single, stole second and third and scored on Del Unser's pinch-single.

"After we tied it up we felt the way we did last year," said Pirates catcher Steve Nicosia. "We hadn't come back in a long time. We really felt like momentum had switched to our side. But we just didn't do anything more after that."

"With these two clubs, you expect the unexpected," said McGraw. "You grind it out. Last time we were here they wiped us out, but these two games (Pittsburgh won Tuesday night) it was nose-to-nose."

"You can't sell Pittsburgh short," said Phillies Manager Dallas Green of the Pirates' five-game deficit. "They have the capability of coming back. But it's tough when you're chasing two teams."

"We'll be rooting for whoever is playing Montreal," said McGraw. "But we have six games with the Expos and that's going to do a lot of deciding who wins."

Mets 5, Expos 2
Montreal had its East Division lead sliced as Lee Mazzilli drove in four runs for New York with a homer and a sacrifice fly.

The Expos led 2-0 until the fifth inning, when Jose Moreno, batting for winning pitcher Dyer Miller, 1-1, opened with a single, went to third on a double by Mookie Wilson and scored on Wally Backman's single. Then Mazzilli walloped his 16th home run of the season to give New York a 4-2 lead.

Dodgers 2, Padres 1
Rookie Jack Perconte scored one run and his bunt single brought home the decisive tally in the sixth inning as Los Angeles broke its first-place tie with Houston.

Don Sutton won his fourth straight game and 12th in 16 decisions this season by scattering seven hits in seven innings. Steve Howe allowed only one hit the final two innings to earn his 17th save.

was pleased, but that it meant little now. "I don't know how the players will take it. But it really is no big factor, except to our opponents, giving them something added to shoot for."

"It's a dubious honor now, since you can go up or down very easily. The thing you can do is let it help tear you down, or you can use it to build on," Bumgarner said.

grand slam homer of the season and singled in another run as Cincinnati remained 4 1/2-games behind Los Angeles in the West.

"I like being in the situation where you are either a hero or a goat," the Reds third baseman said. "It's better than never getting the chance to be a hero."

Cards 8, Cubs 5
Leon Durham and Tito Landrum knocked in two runs apiece and St. Louis took advantage of two Chicago errors in the first inning to score three runs. John Vuckovich worked 72-3 innings to gain his 12th victory in 21 decisions.

Giants 2, Braves 0
Vida Blue pitched his third shutout of the season to break Atlanta's five-game winning streak. Jim Wohlford tripled in San Francisco's first run in the sixth inning and came home on Rennie Stennett's single.

Royals Ice West; Pulling For Yankees

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees have picked up some supporters in their bid to win the American League East title — the Kansas City Royals.

That was the general feeling expressed by the Royals Wednesday night after they clinched the AL West championship with a 5-0 victory over California in the first game of a doubleheader — they'd like to settle an old score with the Yankees in the AL pennant playoffs.

"It's not vengeance," pointed out Kansas City third baseman George Brett. "It's just wanting to regroup and regain your pride and self-respect. We were in Chicago one day and I saw a sign that said, 'Welcome Pennant Chokers.'"

That referred, of course, to the Royals' lack of success against the Yankees in three previous playoff meetings, in 1976, 1977 and 1978.

The clinching of their fourth West title in five years was the earliest in Royals' history. And the crowd of 25,908 at Royals Stadium was on its collective feet cheering when Dennis Leonard struck out Jason Thompson to end the game.

"I really didn't feel that much pressure," said Leonard. "We had a 17-game lead. It was more exciting in 1977 when I pitched the clincher."

The Angels went on to win the inconsequential second game, 7-4.

In other AL action, Baltimore defeated Detroit 9-3; Cleveland edged Boston 6-5 in 11 innings; Oakland trimmed Texas 6-4; Milwaukee swept a doubleheader from Minnesota 3-2 and 6-1 and Seattle blanked Chicago 4-0. The game between Toronto and New York was suspended by rain in the top of the 10th inning with the Blue Jays leading 5-3.

Leonard, 19-9, struck out nine and walked two in winning his ninth game in his last 10 decisions.

Willie Wilson singled and scored in the first inning when Kansas City took a 1-0 lead against Ralph Botting. Then Wilson drove in two runs with a second-inning single for all the runs that Leonard needed.

The Angels, last year's West champions, won the second game behind a five-RBI performance by Brian Downing. Brett, the major league's leading hitter, returned to the Kansas City lineup for the first time since injuring his hand on Sept. 6 and collected two singles in five at-bats to keep his average at .396.

Orioles 9, Tigers 3

Dan Graham, Terry Crowley and Rich Dauer combined to drive in seven runs as Baltimore defeated Detroit.

Graham clouted a two-run homer, his 11th in the second inning, and his RBI-single capped a three-run rally in the fifth. Crowley rapped a two-run single in the fifth and Dauer's third hit, a bases-loaded single in the seventh, drove in Baltimore's final two runs.

Reliever Sammy Stewart, 5-7, who allowed three hits over 51-3 innings, was the winner as the second-place Orioles trimmed the Yankees' lead in the East to 5½ games.

Indians 6, Red Sox 5

Gary Alexander drove in pinch-runner Jerry Dybzinski with a two-out pinch-single in the 11th inning to lead Cleveland over Boston.

Jack Brohamer started the rally with a one-out single and gave way to Dybzinski. Tom Verryzer followed with a single off reliever Mike Torrez' leg, sending Dybzinski to second. Miguel Dilone forced Verryzer at second, but Alexander followed with a single off reliever Tom Burgmeier, scoring Dybzinski and handing the victory to Dan Spillner, 15-10.

Dwight Evans sent the game into extra innings tied at 5-5 with a two-run homer in the Boston ninth.

A's 6, Rangers 4

Rickey Henderson set a club record with his 82nd stolen base as Oakland defeated Texas in a game that saw Rick Langford's complete-game streak come to an end at 22.

Langford, 17-11, failed to finish a game for Oakland for the first time since May 18, when he was pulled with one out to go in the ninth after giving up a two-run homer to Rusty Staub.

Twins 3-6, Brewers 2-1

Jerry Kosman scattered eight hits and Roy Smalley contributed a game-winning sacrifice fly in a three-run fifth inning, leading Minnesota over Milwaukee in the first game of their doubleheader.

Koosman, 13-13, struck out eight and walked two.

Rob Wilfong hit his first career grand slam and Glenn Adams and Ron Jackson hit solo shots as the Twins scored six runs in the seventh inning to earn their second-game victory.

Mariners 4, White Sox 0

Floyd Bannister and Mike Parrott combined on a six-hitter and Reggie Walton knocked in two runs to lead Seattle over Chicago.

Bannister, 9-11, struck out five and walked two before needing Parrott's last-out relief help. Britt Burns, 13-13, was the loser.

Walton's RBI-groundout gave the Mariners a 1-0 lead in the fourth, the second scored on Larry Cox's double-play grounder in the fifth. Dave Edler hit his second homer of the year in the seventh and Walton doubled home another run in the eighth.

Blue Jays 5, Yankees 3

Right fielder Reggie

Jackson's three-base error on Ernie Whitt's single allowed two runs to score in the 10th inning and gave Toronto a 5-3 lead over New York before rain suspended the game one out later.

Under a new rule that took effect this season, the contest became a suspended game and will be resumed at the point of interruption — with two out in the top of the 10th — prior to tonight's regularly-scheduled game.

Loose Ball

Rudy White Looking For Playing Time

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — After four bench-warming, injury-plagued years with Houston, Rudy White says he has earned enough money and what he really needs now is playing time.

White, described in 1975 as Arizona State's most popular basketball player of all time, has signed a one-year contract with the National Basketball Association's Golden State Warriors.

Golden State gave him a tryout last August and said he would be the third guard behind recently acquired Lloyd Free and veteran John Lucas.

"Rudy's been around the league and knows how to play," said Warrior coach and general manager Al Attles. "We look at him as a leader-type. He's very good with attitude."

"If he does what he did in rookie camp and continues to do that, he'll have a good chance," Attles added. "He was injured and that was his biggest drawback. If he's healthy, he'll go a long way in this league."

White signed with Houston after completing his junior year of eligibility at Arizona State for a salary estimated between $750,000 and $850,000 a year.

His Rocket contract is guaranteed until 1981. White said he invested his money well.

After being waived by Houston last year, White had turned to a Phoenix commercial basketball league. He said he's glad to be back in the play-for-pay circuit.

"If I have a good year, I know Golden State will have a good year," he said. "It's a rebuilding team and I'm a rebuilding player."

"Getting to play at Golden State will be very valuable," he added. "I'll get to prove to myself and to others that I deserve to play and can play like I used to, and build up confidence."

"That will be more valuable than a contract," added White. "I've got a lot of money. Now, I'm going to get some time — and that's better."

Seeking To Set Record

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young, fresh from a victory last weekend in Portsmouth, Va., has her sights set on becoming the second woman golfer ever to top the $200,000 season winnings mark.

Young had hoped to be the first to reach the plateau in Virginia, but Beth Daniel beat her to it with a fifth-place finish that boosted her 1980 LPGA tour total to $202,108.

"I don't think it was a matter of who went over it first but that somebody went over it," said Young, No. 2 on the money list. "I just wanted to be one of the first to do it."

Young, whose winnings total $192,766 after her $15,000 purse last weekend, was among 89 golfers scheduled to tee off today in a $100,000 LPGA tournament at the Brookridge Golf and Country Club.

"I think we are going to have three of four go over the $200,000 mark," said Young. "I could have become the first but I had a bad final round in the World Series of Golf (a $46,500 first prize)."

Young is one of just three of the LPGA's top 10 money winners in the Overland Park tournament. The others are No. 6 Pat Bradley and No. 10 Sandra Post, who is the defending champion.

Among the top winners sitting out tournament are Daniel, Amy Alcott and Nancy Lopez-Melton.

The par 73 Brookridge course is 6,273 yards long and is dominated by tight fairways.

The tournament, sponsored by ERA Real Estate, has a $15,000 first prize.

Women In 5-4 Win

JACKSONVILLE — Greenville's ECTA Women's Tennis team gained a 5-4 victory over Camp Lejeune yesterday.

Greenville and Camp Lejeune split the singles, each winning three matches, while Greenville came back to win two of the three doubles to gain the victory.

Summary:
Frances Cain (G) defeated Donna Cayton, 6-1, 6-4.
Carlie Wille (G) defeated Nancy Rilling, 6-1, 6-1.

Nancy Powell (G) defeated Jan Busey, 6-2, 6-0.

Teri Frerker (CL) defeated Mary Angela Lee, 6-1, 6-2.

Jackie Rogish (CL) defeated Marion Uly, 6-4, 6-2.

Shirley Goodwin (CL) defeated Mozelle Exum, 6-1, 7-6.

Wille-Powell (G) defeated Goodwin-Linda McNeil, 6-2, 6-1.

Cain-Lee (G) defeated Busey-Rogish, 6-2, 6-3.

Frerker-Cris Frazier (CL) defeated Exum-Uly, 6-2, 6-1.

Yaz Will Sit It Out

BOSTON (AP) — Slugger Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox is calling it quits for the remainder of the 1980 baseball season rather than risk further injury.

"If we were a few games out, I'd take the chance, but when you're far out like we are what's the sense?" Yastrzemski said Wednesday night after sitting out Boston's 6-5 loss in 11 innings to Cleveland.

Yastrzemski, the only American League hitter ever to achieve 3,000 hits and 400 homers in his career, turned 41 on Aug. 22. Eight days later he suffered a cracked rib when he crashed into the left field wall making a spectacular catch.

Oakland Sale Given American League Okay

CHICAGO AP — American League owners have unanimously approved the sale for $127 million of the Oakland A's by Charles O. Finley.

League President Lee MacPhail said after the vote Wednesday the transfer of the baseball team to two executives of Levi Strauss & Co. and a former executive of the firm will be formalized on Nov. 6.

The new owners are Walter A. Haas Jr., chairman of Levi Strauss, Walter J. Haas, grants manager for the firm's community affairs department, and Roy Eisenhardt, a San Francisco attorney. Eisenhardt will be president of the club and Walter A. Haas Jr. the vice president.

Edward J. DeBartolo Sr., 71, a multimillionaire from Youngstown, Ohio, made an informal presentation in his continued bid to buy the Chicago White Sox.

The Sox board of directors has accepted the $20 million offer of DeBartolo, who owns several horse racetracks and other sports enterprises, to buy the club and all facilities with the understanding the franchise will remain in Chicago.

MacPhail, who reportedly had been opposed to the sale to DeBartolo, said he has changed his mind and that a formal vote on whether DeBartolo will be accepted will be taken in October, probably during the time of World Series.

He needs 10 of the league's 14 votes.

"I now think that he is sincere and would keep the club in Chicago. I believe he has no intention of moving it at this time — we must keep an American League team in Chicago," MacPhail said.

White Sox stockholders must now vote on the recommendation of the board to sell to DeBartolo and no hitch is expected, officials said.

MacPhail said that "more information from the White Sox is needed by the league, such as financial positions and transfer of ownership papers."

"I've asked all owners in the league to keep an open mind" in regard to DeBartolo, MacPhail said.

In the past, MacPhail had opposed DeBartolo on the basis that absentee ownership is unacceptable.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn also has been opposed for the same reason.

Kuhn conducted a routine, no action, meeting of both leagues earlier Wednesday. It was a routine discussion on inflationary costs and how baseball could meet them.

Kuhn made no comment regarding the White Sox and did not meet with DeBartolo, the Cleveland millionaire said.

DeBartolo, a builder of shopping malls, said after the meeting that "I made a presentation and feel a little more confident."

"We will give the league a complete background of our organization and the running of the ball club will be locally,"

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER Associated Press Writer URBANA, Ill. AP — Dave Wilson, who came from California to quarterback the University of Illinois to victories in its first two games this season, has been sacked by a judge.

Judge Harry Clem of Circuit Court ruled Wednesday that the Big Ten Conference eligibility committee had the right to declare him academically ineligible Sept. 11, reversing its May 4 ruling because it was based on bad information.

"I don't think it's fair or just," said Wilson's attorney, Robert Auler. "Every piece of reasoning for the Sept. 11 decision was wrong."

Judge Clem, too, questioned the committee's reasoning, but said the decision belonged to it.

Illinois Coach Mike White, who recruited Wilson, did not comment on the decision, and said he did not know who would information. He said the group looked at the facts and ruled Sept. 11 that Wilson was ineligible.

The Wilson case centers on whether the quarterback had taken enough classes each year to make regular progress toward graduation. The Big Ten, which considers him a senior, says no. Wilson, who regards himself a junior, says yes.

The eligibility committee agreed May 4 to waive its 78-hour rule and allow Wilson to play football if he completed 51 hours by September. The more powerful Big Ten faculty representatives group overruled that decision, and Wilson filed suit.

Clem said the decision of the eligibility committee should have been final, and issued an injunction Sept. 2 allowing Wilson to play this year, instead of waiting until 1981.

However, conference attorney Byron Gregory said the original eligibility committee decision was based on false information. He said the group looked at the facts and ruled Sept. 11 that Wilson was ineligible.

The Wilson case centers on whether the quarterback had taken enough classes each year to make regular progress toward graduation. The Big Ten, which considers him a senior, says no. Wilson, who regards himself a junior, says yes.

The eligibility committee agreed May 4 to waive its 78-hour rule and allow Wilson to play football if he completed 51 hours by September. The more powerful Big Ten faculty representatives group overruled that decision, and Wilson filed suit.

Clem said the decision of the eligibility committee should have been final, and issued an injunction Sept. 2 allowing Wilson to play this year, instead of waiting until 1981.

However, conference attorney Byron Gregory said the original eligibility committee decision was based on false information. He said the group looked at the facts and ruled Sept. 11 that Wilson was ineligible.

The Greenville Swim Club recently held its awards banquet. Among age group winners for the season were, left to right: Delores Williams, Robert Williams, Katherine Barnhill and Kevin Richards.

Trevino After Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lee Trevino, who trails only Tom Watson in earnings, figures he can edge Watson for the PGA low stroke championship with a decent finish in the $250,000 Texas Open golf tournament which began today at Oak Hills Country Club.

That gave Trevino a double incentive to win the title, one of the few tournament championships that has eluded him during his $2 million career.

Trevino, playing his last U.S. tournament of the year in this city where he always draws the biggest gallery, and fellow Texan Ben Crenshaw were considered favorites in a field of 156.

Trevino, second only to Watson in 1980 earnings with $430,815, said he could clinch the low-stroke championship in this late tour event, which Watson has bypassed.

Trevino, who went into this tournament 200th of a stroke behind Watson, said: "I figure if I shoot at least even par here, Watson will have to shoot at least 28-under par in the next two tournaments."

The tour's "Merry Mex" always is a crowd pleaser here, along with Crenshaw, who made his pro debut by capturing the Texas Open title in 1973.

"I've been an underdog all my life," Trevino said. "But I also like to be a favorite, especially this late in the year."

"I've just started to peak again. This is my best year ever," said the 40-year-old Trevino, who won the Memphis Classic and Tournament Player's Championship, and finished second in the British, Houston, New Orleans and Hawaiian Opens.

"I'd love to win here because this tournament is special to me," said Crenshaw.

"My victory here in 1973 was something I will never forget. It got the piano off my back...and it meant I didn't have to qualify. No way do I want anything to do with that Monday qualifying," the former University of Texas star said.

Sees Japan Nuke Power Danger

By MINORU INABA
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Japan's nuclear power plants are mostly maintained by ill-trained day laborers who violate safety rules and under-report their exposure to radiation, says a Japanese journalist who worked at the plants.

Freelance journalist Kyoji Horie says that the plants' companies that own the plants ignore or tolerate safety violations and use day laborers to avoid paying benefits or higher wages.

Horie worked for seven months in three different plants as a manual laborer, one of thousands who drift from plant to plant under sub-contracts. He has written a book about his experiences, "Nuclear Gypsies."

The title comes from the name given to job-hungry day laborers who work at a plant one day and another the next. Horie said he and his colleagues at one nuclear power plant in the state of Fukui were ordered to use a towel to wipe radioactive water off reactor parts.

It is an anachronism for supposedly ultra-modern nuclear facilities, said Horie, who worked at the plant in an Associated Press interview.

In a plant in Fukui state, Horie wrote, he and one of his colleagues that became sick because of working at a nuclear power plant.

They said nuclear plant workers absorbed on the average only 0.29 rems of radiation in 1976, far lower than the officially set limits of 5 rems for a year.

A rem is the unit of measure for absorbed radiation in living tissue. A normal chest X-ray produces between 0.02 and 0.03 rems. Scientists say the average American absorbs approximately 0.15 rems a year from natural and man-made sources.

Toyozo Terashima, chief researcher and vice director of the National Institute of Radiological Sciences, said:

"Practically nothing is known about the effect of low-level radiation in humans, but we have enough theoretical studies and animal tests to say that it's negligible."

Terashima conceded there were no worthwhile medical studies of Japan's nuclear plant workers, but said:

"There are no radiation victims among them."

The Labor Ministry has a compensation fund for the victims of nuclear radiation. No money has ever gone to nuclear plant workers.

Kazuyuki Iwasa, 37, a former Osaka City plumber, is the only citizen to have complained officially that he radiation-free.

He said his present ailments include leukemia, high blood pressure and hearing and speaking difficulties, but that no doctors except for a dermatologist agree they were radiation-caused. The power company argues that Iwasa was exposed to only 0.001 rems of radiation.

The dermatologist, Dr. Minoru Tashiro of Osaka University, said there was no doubt that Iwasa's skin burns were caused by nuclear radiation.

"I've seen many skin burn patients who were exposed to excessive X-rays," he said. The doctor said Iwasa wore a pocket monitoring device able to pick up gamma radiation. Skin burns are caused by beta rays, Tashiro said, adding that later tests showed there were strong beta rays where the man worked.

Iwasa sued for damages in 1974, but his suit is still pending.

Suggestions On Corn Aflatoxin

The N.C. Agricultural Extension Service has released several suggestions for farmers who are concerned with aflatoxins on corn.

Aflatoxins are poisonous by-products of fungi, which sometime appear on grain and peanuts. They have hit portions of North Carolina's drought-stricken corn crop.

Extension specialists at N.C. State University say aflatoxin levels can be reduced by the way in which corn is harvested and stored. They also point to an ammonia treatment process, which may help some farmers salvage their contaminated corn after harvest.

Farmers who have on-farm storage and drying facilities should harvest their corn immediately, say specialists. The corn should be dried to 13 percent moisture as quickly as possible to prevent further aflatoxin development. The corn can be tested and treated (with ammonia) if necessary before feeding. Regulatory officials have not made a decision on whether treated corn can be sold off the farm.

Farmers who grow corn for cash market and do not have storage or drying facilities are advised not to harvest corn unless they have a confirmed buyer. They should let it continue drying in the field. Hauling the corn around in a truck while looking for a buyer often creates ideal conditions for aflatoxins to develop.

Poultry and livestock can tolerate limited amounts of aflatoxin in their feed unless they are under stress or in poor health.

The following animals can tolerate up to 20 parts aflatoxin per billion if they are healthy: pigs under 50 pounds; lactating sows and cows; calves; horses; and all classes of poultry except commercial layers.

The following animals can tolerate up to 100 parts per billion aflatoxin if they are healthy: commercial layers, finishing cattle, boars, gestating sows, market hogs over 50 pounds, and pregnant cows that are not milking.

The following animals can tolerate up to 200 parts aflatoxin if they are healthy: bulls, feeder calves, and open heifers at least six months of age.

The extension service said it is preparing information to help farmers treat contaminated corn with ammonia.

In the meantime, the specialists had this to say about the process:

Farmers should consider treating with ammonia just before they get ready to feed their corn, not at harvest time. The process is likely to cost about 25 cents per bushel.

Properly done, ammonia will detoxify or get rid of the poison. It does not lower the feeding value of the corn.

The material used, anhydrous ammonia, is corrosive, like salt. Metal storage bins cannot be used for the treatment process or for storing the treated corn unless they are protected with plastic or an epoxy-type paint.

The treatment process takes about 14 days and must be done in an airtight structure.

Finally, the extension service said it has free publications available through its county offices dealing with various aspects of the aflatoxin problem. Farmers who have questions or problems are encouraged to call their county extension agent for help.

Illiteracy Said To Be Growing

PARIS (AP) — According to experts at the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the number of adult illiterates is currently estimated at 814 million — or three adults in 10 — and the problem is increasing because of soaring population growth.

Nearly three-quarters of the world's illiterates live in Asia, approximately 20 percent in Africa and 5 percent in Latin America. Twenty-three countries have an illiteracy rate higher than 20 percent, UNESCO reports.

First Female Postmaster In Hertford

By DR. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) - This tendency for claiming "firsts" gets sticky sometimes.

Take, for instance, the claim that Elizabeth Dayton Balfour, who was appointed to keep the Salisbury post office in 1796, was the first female postmaster in the United States.

That just isn't so.

But, fortunately, North Carolina does possess the distinction of producing the first postmistress. It was not Elizabeth Balfour; it was Sarah Moore Delano Decrow, the postmistress of Hertford in Perquimans County from 1792 to 1794.

This column has already told the story of Sarah Decrow - a pretty raunchy story, too.

Now, Elizabeth, even if she has to play second fiddle, deserves her recognition.

Elizabeth's story begins with that of her husband, whose murder led her to North Carolina at the end of the Revolution.

Andrew Balfour was a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, who decided in 1772 to seek his fortune in America. He left his wife - the former Janet Mackormick - and infant daughter Tibby in Scotland.

Within a year or so, Janet died before Andrew could make arrangements for her to bring the child to New England where he had settled. In 1784, he married Elizabeth Todd Dayton in Newport, R.I.

Unsuccessful as a businessman in Enfield, Conn., Andrew went to Charleston, S.C., and engaged in salt manufacturing. He saved enough to buy a farm in Rowan County (now Randolph) in North Carolina, and about 1778 he built a house on Betty McGhee Creek.

Elizabeth apparently was unwilling to bring her two infants to the back country, so Andrew sent to Scotland for his sister, Margaret, and daughter, Tibby. The trio set up housekeeping.

Balfour was influential in the newly formed Randolph County, serving as justice of the peace and as member of the House of Commons in 1780.

His future might have been bright, had it not been for the virtual civil war raging in the Chatham-Randolph area. He was a strong Whig, hated by the local British sympathizers. In 1780, Andrew was captured by the Tories, but he escaped and returned home.

On March 10, 1782, the dashing and feared David Fanning and his Tory band burst into Balfour's home and shot him dead. The scene was described by Andrew's sister.

"Tibby and I endeavored to prevent them (from killing Andrew), but it was all in vain. The wretches cut and bruised us both a great deal, and dragged us from the dear man. Then before our eyes, the worthless, base, horrible Fanning shot a bullet into his head ..."

Flood Of Asians Seek A New Life In America

The crime so outraged the community that an accomplice, Frederick Smith, was hanged. Fanning escaped. Balfour's body was buried on the plantation.

CHAPEL HILL: the plantation.

It was only after hearing of the murder of her husband that Elizabeth Dayton Balfour left for North Carolina. With her two children, she came by water to Wilmington, thence overland to the grave of her husband, and then, on Christmas Day, 1784, she arrived in Salisbury.

Presumably, the rents from the Randolph farm and slaves provided a meager subsistence for the family in Salisbury until 1796 when the Post Office Department appointed Elizabeth postmaster of the town.

She held the position for many years, and was succeeded by her son. Tradition has it that the Washington auditors once caught her in a mathematical error of a half cent for an entire year.

Elizabeth Balfour died about 1818 and was buried beside her husband in Randolph County. She left two children: Andrew Jr., who married Mary Henly; and Margaret, who married Hudson Hughes. Tibby, the daughter of Andrew's first wife, married John Troy.

The Balfour name is commemorated by a community just north of Asheboro.

heads sag and children sleep. More than 460,000 refugees have been processed through refugee camps since Communist forces took control of South Vietnam in April 1975 after the fall of Saigon, according to Jim Meyer, California coordinator for the Intergovernmental Committee on European Migration, which directs the refugee flights.

As a result, 389,000 Laotians, Vietnamese and Cambodians now live in the United States, according to the Department of Health and Human Services.

Nearly one-third, 123,000, are in California. The next largest concentration, 35,000, is in Texas.

Until 1979, 7,000 Indochinese each month were allowed into the United States. President Carter increased that number to 14,000 per month in October 1979 because refugee camps were brimming with the homeless.

How many people have left Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos is not known and no one associated with their relocation would even hazard a guess.

Most of those coming from Vietnam now are of Chinese origin or were in the Army of South Vietnam. They would not identify themselves for fear of retribution to their families.

The Hmong mountain people of Laos, with their beaded and colorful dress and traditional red-bobbed hats, were not so reticent. But they were also not so painted. More Hmong families came to the United States together. Their journey was made necessary because they helped Americans fight Communists in the war years.

Bob Carroll, a coordinator for ICEM at the airport, said for most of the refugees arriving now the adjustment will be more difficult than for those who left soon after the fall of Saigon in April 1975.

Betty Hutton Back In Broadway Show

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Hutton, the one-time "Blonde Blitz" of Hollywood, is a born-again performer now, praising God for what she calls "a miracle" — a new life on Broadway and off. With tears of joy streaming down her cheeks Wednesday, the 59-year-old actress took her first show-biz bows in eight years at the end of the hit musical, "Annie," in which she co-stars for a three-week stint as Miss Hannigan, the mean, whiskey-swilling, larcenous orphanage-keeper. She got a long, noisy, standing ovation at the matinee that marked her return to performing after her recovery from a 20-year battle with drugs and despair so deep she wanted to kill herself.

Her Broadway debut was in 1940, in "Two for the Show," at the same 1,300-seat Alvin Theater where she's now playing in "Annie." Her return might have initially startled her older film fans. She was anything but the glamor gal of "The Fleet's In," the 1942 movie musical that launched her as a star.

Her tanned face was lined, slightly fuller, and the hair was gray. Her clothes, as Miss Hannigan, were frowsy and rumpled. And the breezy confidence of yesteryear wasn't there, at least initially. But her bouncy, wide-eyed, exuberant spirit quickly surfaced. She snarled, growled and knocked orphans about with gusto, and broadly mugged and danced as if 40 years hadn't passed.

Miss Hutton, who last appeared on Broadway for a week in the 1960s, still could belt a song, slightly missing a note only now and then. She clearly had a ball once the initial anxiety passed. At the curtain call, the cheers ringing in her ears, she bit her lip, fighting tears of joy. Then she gave up, wept unashamedly and hugged tiny Allison Smith, the show's red-haired Annie.

After the evening's performance, she, her daughters, Maguire and a small army of well-wishers repaired to the famed night club, the Copacabana, to celebrate her return to show business. "This is what it's all about," an exuberant Miss Hutton said, hugging her daughter. Once again she introduced Maguire as the man who saved her life "when nobody wanted to spit on me and rightfully so. It's a night that is unbelievable." The priest, a short, gray-haired man, said, "Well, we had a throughbred entry and she did well...we dreamed about this but thought it'd never happen." Bearded Martin Charnin, the show's director and lyricist, told well-wishers the party was thrown "simply to welcome back someone who walked on the stage this afternoon as though she had never left."

HUTTON ON BROADWAY — Actress Betty Hutton receives applause from the audience and cast of "Annie" at Wednesday matinee after opening in the role of orphanage supervisor Miss Hannigan at the Alvin Theater in New York. Hutton is replacing the vacationing Alice Ghostley in the role for a three-week engagement. (AP Laserphoto)

Mail Protesting A Nonexistent Show

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has solved the mystery of who is behind a mail campaign protesting a network television show that doesn't exist. The answer, an FCC official said Wednesday, is the Rev. Robert G. Grant, who heads a California-based organization known as the American Christian Cause. Now the agency wants to limit its response to the protest to Grant. It doesn't have the resources to answer the more than 14,000 people who filled out pre-printed postcards condemning supposed plans by ABC to air "Adam & Yves," a comedy whose leading characters would include homosexuals. Charles L. Gray of the FCC's broadcast bureau said the commission would like to point out to Grant that it is prohibited by law from "censoring broadcast material and from interfering with freedom of expression by broadcasting." When the postcards began arriving in early August, FCC officials said they were at a loss to explain what prompted the deluge of mail or to identify the group mounting the campaign. Each card had a picture on one side of two children in front of a TV set under the headline: "ABC Presents: Perverted Filth. Don't Let This Happen." ABC officials also said they were mystified. Although the network considered an "Adam & Yves" program two years ago, it has been dropped from active development and there are no plans for production, ABC officials said. Efforts to contact Grant by telephone Wednesday were unsuccessful. A caller was referred to the Christian Voice and Christian Tours International in the Los Angeles area, where receptionists reported Grant was not in the office. Thanks to a West Palm Beach, Fla., woman who spotted a story about the mail campaign, FCC officials now have a copy of the letter being distributed by the American Christian Cause.

For Miss Hutton, who's filling in for vacationing Alice Ghostley, the Wednesday night performance was particularly meaningful. In the audience were two of her three grown daughters — Lindsay, 33, and Candice, 32 — two grandchildren and the Catholic priest she credits with saving her life, the Rev. Peter Maguire. Her third daughter, Carrie, 18, is due in from California on Saturday.

The actress, married four times and survivor of a turbulent personal and professional life, says she first met the priest eight years ago when she had to leave a summer show and be hospitalized, a victim of drug abuse.

Miss Hutton, a Catholic convert, worked anonymously for a year as housekeeper at the priest's church in Portsmouth, R.I. She says he gave her the will to live that now has led her to Broadway. "He didn't even know who I was, had never been to a movie. When he learned I'm Betty Hutton, he said, 'Who's Opening lead: King of ♣.

Here's another chance to see how accurately you can analyze a hand. After the king of clubs opening lead against five diamonds, how many tricks, and which, should declarer lose?

Note the bidding. North correctly rebid his six-card major, rather than support diamonds, and South's three-diamond rebid showed a good, long diamond suit and nothing much outside. However, when North could raise diamonds, South felt justified in going on to game because of his distributional features.

If declarer proceeds automatically, he will be defeated. Assume he wins the ace of clubs and leads to the king of spades. The defenders will take two spade tricks, and a heart—down one.

A better play is to try to set up the heart suit. So after winning the ace of clubs, declarer cashes the ace of hearts. But an alert West can unblock the king of hearts under the ace, and declarer will again have to lose two spades and a heart.

As the cards lie, declarer can make his contract if he comes to his hand with a club ruff and leads a heart. If West puts up the king, declarer ducks, while if West follows low, declarer wins the ace and returns a heart. Since this plan prevails only with this specific distribution, it cannot be recommended.

The line that succeeds against any 3-2 heart division, which is roughly a 17 percent better proposition than finding East with the ace of spades, is to allow the king of clubs to hold the first trick! Assume that West shifts to a trump. Declarer wins in hand, leads a heart to the ace, discards a heart on the ace of clubs and ruffs a heart. He gets back to dummy with the ten of diamonds and ruffs another heart. Dummy is re-entered with the ace of diamonds, and on the three long hearts, declarer sluffs three spades from his hand. So declarer loses only two tricks—the king of clubs and the ace of spades.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, SEPT. 19, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A new attitude adopted in business matters and being able to add modern methods to your activities brings desirable advancement, which is important to you at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Analyze your financial situation and make plans to have greater security in the future. Be more encouraging to others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure your activities are well organized before you get started on them. Make plans to have greater abundance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use reason in dealing with both debtors and creditors and you get better results. Express happiness with loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you listen more carefully to what others have to say, you can combine efforts and get fine results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You may have a slow start at your work early, but stick to it and then all moves to your advantage. Avoid a troublemaker.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate on how to improve your creative skills. Wait until the afternoon before delving into amusements that appeal to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You know how to go ahead with a new venture, so stop wasting time. Think along optimistic lines and get ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy and improve a routine that could give you increased income in the days ahead. Improve your appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Even though you have other work to do, take time to analyze your monetary status and know where you stand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your intuition is working fine in the morning, but don't rely on it later. Make long-range plans for the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan a campaign for advancement in your line of endeavor and look for excellent results. Show that you have spunk.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If sociability is on your mind, make sure it won't interfere with business matters. Make this a worthwhile day.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those capable persons who can formulate a good, practical plan and then carry it through to successful completion. Much success is possible here during lifetime. Don't neglect ethical training.

Investigate Cause of Stomach Cramps

Every once in a while I have an attack of abdominal cramps. This lasts for a few days, then goes away. How would one go about getting to the bottom of this? — Mr. T.H., Ill.

Dear Mr. H.:

This is not an easy problem to solve. I would do you an injustice if I even vaguely attempted to suggest a diagnosis. Yet I can speculate about the possibilities and, perhaps, direct you to ways of tracking down the cause.

To illustrate how difficult it is to find the cause of abdominal cramps and diarrhea, I will tell you about a case that was reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A doctor who was attending a medical meeting had consumed 12 diet mints in a two hour period. About 30 minutes after he ate the last mint he developed severe abdominal distress, with cramps, gas and diarrhea. By some fortuitous circumstance, it occurred to him to check on the ingredients in the mint. He found that sorbitol was used as the sweetener.

The Journal said, "Unlike the more potent artificial sweetener, saccharin, sorbitol must be taken in large amounts to achieve a desired taste effect. And, if sorbitol-sweetened foods are consumed in quantities (like 12 mints in two hours) they can cause considerable abdominal distress.

"Even in smaller amounts, lesser degrees of upset can occur, particularly in children. So, if abdominal symptoms occur in conjunction with eating diet foods or candy, check for sorbitol as the possible culprit."

As you can see, that is one possibility of recurring cramps. But there are many other possibilities. It takes real detective work and cooperation between you and your doctor to find the cause of your problem.

A careful survey of all the foods that you eat prior to an attack may furnish an important lead. Allergies to food, soft drinks and alcohol must be considered. X-rays, stool examination and cultures may reveal the evidence you seek.

Two years ago my son was hit in the face while playing basketball. He said he bled a lot, but no X-rays were taken. Now he has a crooked nose and I'm heartsick about it. Is it too late to have it repaired? — Mrs. A.L., Vt.

Dear Mrs. L.:

Your letter highlights my special feeling that any injury to the nose, with or without profuse bleeding, deserves an X-ray picture. For, if there is a slight chip fracture or even a major fracture, repositioning of the bone is a relatively simple procedure.

Even today, at this late date, it is possible to refracture the knitted bones and restore the nose to its former cosmetic condition.

Mini-Bottles Finally Pay Off

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA (AP) — Those cute little bottles lined in neat ranks behind your favorite bar still won't fill a healthy-sized cordial glass, but they're finally pouring money into state coffers the way they were supposed to.

South Carolina barkeeps snapped the seals on their first mini-bottles in March 1973, after backers of the state's liquor-by-the-drink law predicted annual tax revenues of $12 million.

Jack Lawson of the state Tax Commission says the first year was a disappointment. Tavern keepers served up 17.6 million drinks which yielded a mere $4.7 million, less than 18 percent of total liquor tax revenues. "I think they were comparing South Carolina with Utah, where people are more affluent than here," Lawson says.

But inflation and expansion of the tourist and convention trade have swelled those figures over the past six years.

In the fiscal year that ended June 30, South Carolinians and their out-of-state drinking buddies put away 34.2 million little bottles and contributed $9.2 million to the state treasury. That was nearly 25 percent of total tax revenue from liquor sales.

"By the time you add license taxes and other items, I'd assume you'd be about up to the $12 million," Lawson says.

Despite the slow start in tax receipts, Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission Chairman Miller S. Ingram is delighted with the mini-bottle law, which took effect about the time he got the job.

"I'm convinced that we have better control over liquor than any other state in the union," he says.

Ingram, who is active in regional and national associations of liquor regulators, says many of his counterparts in other states are envious of the South Carolina law.

"Many of them would like to have it, but it's hard to get if you don't start that way," he says.

Small wonder the idea is appealing to the regulators. South Carolina levies a quarter tax on each wee container and about two cents per bottle more in a per-case tax.

Overall, South Carolina charges $2.72 per gallon of liquor in taxes, 11th highest among the 32 states which license liquor sales.

"Our tax is high. I guess it goes way, way back to the Bible-belt characteristics of our people," Lawson says.

On mini-bottles, the money is collected at the wholesale level, which Ingram says is easy, since there are only four wholesale distributors in the state.

Beyond that, Ingram says the law is easier to enforce with mini-bottles because customers can see what they're getting and agents have less trouble seeing whether small bottles have been refilled than they would with large ones.

Long ZIP Codes Due Next Year

By JANET STAIHR Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite complaints Americans will be driven "digit dizzy," a U.S. Postal Service official says ZIP codes will be expanded to nine numbers for all the nation's 79 million addresses by the end of next year.

Michael S. Coughlin, assistant postmaster general, told a House Government Operations subcommittee that a major benefit of the longer code will be increased efficiency and "longer periods of time between rate increases."

"We hope" was the skeptical reply of Rep. David Evans, D-Ind., who chaired the hearing into the ZIP code change.

The Postal Service plans to begin distributing new code assignments — adding four new digits to the present code — next February.

Large-volume mailers are first on the list, with home addresses to be included by the end of the year.

"Z stands for Zip-posterous," declared Ray Geiger, editor of the Farmers' Almanac, who has spearheaded a nationwide campaign to zap the new ZIP. Z stands for Zone Improvement Program.

"What you're telling us is to zap the nine-digit code to keep us from getting digit dizzy," said Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C.

Geiger, in his blast against the expanded ZIP codes, also said that if any of the complicated computers needed to read the longer code ever broke down, mail would be sent flying pell-mell across the country.

Geiger said the firm that publishes the Farmers' Almanac, which has a circulation of 6 million copies in the United States and Canada, also has mailing lists for other products. He estimated it would cost Geiger Bros. up to $30,000 to change the ZIP codes.

Coughlin said the new code will enable post offices to process the mail more easily, more quickly and more accurately.

The four new numbers are intended to direct each piece of mail to the appropriate letter carrier by pinpointing the destination right down to the street location. Coughlin said that might reduce sorting costs by about $500 million a year beginning in 1986.

But Lewis H. Goldfarb, assistant director of the Federal Trade Commission's division of credit practices, said that could lead to discrimination problems.

He noted banks and credit firms use the five-digit ZIP codes to determine the geographical area where applicants live.

If people could be identified as residents of a single block or apartment house, Goldfarb said, then ZIP codes also might be used "as a proxy for the race of applicants." That could be violation of the Equal Opportunity Act, he said.

Coughlin said users will not have to use the nine-digit ZIP to be assured of mail delivery.

"Our priority is to reach the larger-volume mailers so they will use the new ZIP code, and we hope to encourage citizens ... to use them of their own volition," he said. "But if they don't, they won't suffer from it."

Joyce Greenberg, owner of Greenberg Smoked Turkey Co. in Tyler, Texas, countered that isn't necessarily true.

"It's voluntary if you don't care when you get that piece of mail," she said.

Hurricane Still Is Far At Sea

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Frances weakened somewhat today as it headed far out in the Atlantic Ocean, according to the National Hurricane Center.

Center officials in Miami said the storm's top winds slowed from 100 mph to 90 mph today. Little change in the hurricane's intensity was expected today, and forecasters said Frances was drifting north at less than 10 mph.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the hurricane was about 775 miles southwest of the western Azores, near latitude 38.0 north, longitude 45.5 west.
