

Oil Centers Targeted In Iran-Iraq War

By The Associated Press
Iraq claimed ground and air successes in its campaign against Iran's oil province of Khuzestan, as the air war between the two Persian Gulf oil giants flared without letup into the third day today.

Iran's Abadan oil refinery, one of the world's biggest, was reported in flames and Iran admitted it was not operating.

A senior State Department official in Washington predicted that both the warring oil nations would cut off shipments of their chief export through the Persian Gulf today. But presumably Iraqi oil would continue to flow by pipeline to the Mediterranean.

Iraq said its MiGs flew nine bombing and strafing missions into western Iran at daybreak today, causing heavy damage to seven military airfields and setting ablaze four Iranian Phantoms on the ground.

A communique broadcast by Baghdad Radio said Iranian warplanes struck back with bombing raids on the oil refinery and the oil harbor of Iraq's southern city of Basra, not far from a plant where four Americans and 27 other people were killed in an Iranian air raid on Tuesday.

The communique said Iraqi anti-aircraft guns shot down one Iranian jet over Basra today and forced other Iranian warplanes to flee when they attempted to raid Arbil, some 70 miles from the northern Iraqi city of Kirkuk.

Iranian warplanes on Tuesday attacked Kirkuk, Iraq's chief oil center, Basra, Iraq's chief port, and the Um Qasr harbor built by the Soviet Union at the mouth of the Shatt al-Arab estuary between the two nations.

Iraq said its troops and tanks on the first day of their invasion penetrated up to nine miles into Iranian territory Tuesday along a 300-mile front stretching from Qasr-e-Sharin south to the oil refinery city of Abadan and captured all Iranian border posts. It said they killed 21 Iranian soldiers and captured 121.

Iraqi communiques said the invaders captured Qasr-e-Sharin and neighboring Sumar and surrounded the big port city of Khorramshahr on the Iranian side of the disputed Shatt al-Arab estuary. They said Iraqi MiGs destroyed the Abadan refinery and attacked seven military bases in western Iran, presumably the same ones claimed hit again today.

The Iraqis said today their forces tightened the siege on Abadan and Khorramshahr. "The two targets are cut off from the rest of the enemy lines and positions in Ahwaz," the capital of Arabic-speaking Khuzestan 65 miles from the Iraqi border, a communique broadcast by Baghdad Radio said.

The captain of a ship anchored near Abadan told the British Broadcasting Corp. the refinery was "burning over a large area."

Abadan Radio said an ammonia storage tank exploded. But Iranian communiques claimed the invaders were repulsed all along the front and denied the Iraqi claims that Khorramshahr was surrounded, that the highway from the coast to Ahwaz, the provincial capital 75 miles to the north, was cut, and that Qasr-e-Shirin and Sumar were captured.

The British government said four Americans and four Britons were among 29 people killed in the Iranian air attack before dawn Tuesday at a petrochemical plant being built near Basra. The Americans were not identified, but it was believed that they were employees of the Lummus Construction Co. of Bloomfield, N.J., which reported at least 10 of its employees — "some Westerners and some Iraqis" — were killed. The company said 1,000 others were evacuated by bus to Kuwait.

A BBC correspondent said the raid on the plant came "without warning," catching scores of foreign technicians "while they slept." He said the planes made no distinction between the living quarters and the factory.

"It was a terrifying awakening, with men and women screaming in panic," he reported.

Iraq said the Iranian jets also bombed the northern city of Mosul on Tuesday and the central city of Nineveh, struck three times at the Al Rashid military airfield and camp near Baghdad and also bombed the capital's international airport, which has been closed to commercial traffic since Monday.

U.S. officials in Washington said there were no plans to begin evacuating the approximately 700 Americans living in Iraq.

During a third raid on Baghdad Tuesday night, an Iraqi journalist reached by telephone in the city reported the Iranian bombs appeared to be falling mainly in the industrial suburbs. He said the night sky was "lit up by thousands of streaking shells from the anti-aircraft batteries," and that people stood in the streets and on balconies watching the fireworks.

Iraq said the Iranian air raids Tuesday killed 47 civilians and wounded 116 others in Baghdad and Basra. It said four Iraqi pilots and five soldiers also were killed and 11 Iraqi servicemen wounded, that six of its MiGs were shot down over Iran, and that 67 Iranian warplanes were downed over Iraq.

Iran said Iraqi air raids on Tehran airport and 10 other targets killed 140 civilians and wounded 313 Monday and Tuesday, that its planes and anti-aircraft batteries downed 48 Iraqi MiGs and that only nine Iranian fighters were lost.

U.S. oil industry sources said the Iranian and Iraqi oil terminals on the Persian Gulf apparently were shut down because of the fighting, but they pointed out that about two-thirds of Iraq's production is shipped by pipeline to the Mediterranean and is believed unaffected by the war.

The United States imports no Iranian oil and little from Iraq. Western European nations and Japan depend on Iraqi oil to varying degrees, but their current oil stockpiles would enable most of them to withstand a supply cutoff lasting weeks.

Most of Iran's exports, totaling perhaps as little as 500,000 barrels a day, are now believed committed to East European nations.

On the diplomatic front, the U.N. Security Council called Tuesday night for an immediate end to the fighting and urged Iran and Iraq to settle their dispute peacefully.

President Carter said the United States was taking a position of "strict neutrality" toward the war and hoped the Soviet Union, Iraq's chief supplier of arms, and all other nations would do likewise. Iran's ambassador to Moscow met with senior Soviet officials there and said the Kremlin was also adopting a "neutral policy."

Most governments appeared to be depending on U.N. action to check the fighting rather than acting on their own.

Midway

ON THE MIDWAY — Games, rides, food and plenty of walking were among the options Tuesday night for visitors at the Pitt County Fair. This year's event, which continues through Saturday evening, features a fair unit that is appearing for the first time in eastern North Carolina, according to Roland Page, general manager and consultant for Amusements of America. Page said that some 30 rides are included in the 1980 carnival here, as well as a variety of games and other features. (Reflector Photo By Mary Shulken)

Alleged Planning A Coup

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — About a dozen of the late Iranian shah's army officers are allegedly planning a coup and some 45,000 former Iranian soldiers are currently training for the attempt in 20 camps along the Iraqi-Iranian border, a West German magazine said today.

Four-star Gen. Gholam Ali Oveissi, working out of his Paris headquarters, was coordinating preparations for the coup to topple the Iranian government, allegedly with American help, the Hamburg-based magazine Stern reported.

It said the late Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's twin sister Ashraf was to finance the coup with the aid of "some bankers and politicians close to former U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger." Ashraf lives in Paris.

The report said the coup preparations along the Iraqi-Iranian border were known to Western intelligence services and financially supported by the Iraqi government.

Another estimated 25,000 former soldiers loyal to the shah were in Bahrain and Oman and 3,000 in Egypt awaiting attack orders from the Paris-based officers the report said.

The coup attempt was scheduled for Oct. 26, the shah's birthday, the report said.

Reports 'Chaos' In Iranian Raid

LONDON (AP) — A British oilworker who fled Iraq to Kuwait told today of "absolute chaos" as hundreds ran for their lives after an Iranian air attack on a petrochemical plant near Basra.

Eddie Giloney, 40, reached by telephone at his hotel in Kuwait, said of Tuesday's air raid at Zubair in which the victims included four Americans and four Britons killed: "All hell broke loose. People ran for their lives. They jumped in anything they could — buses, trucks and cars, anything that was going — and fled."

"We all thought we were goners."

Giloney, a mechanic, said: "It happened just after 6 a.m. Iranian jets flew over the site and dropped four bombs."

"One was a direct hit on a garage. It killed nine — mostly Iraqis, I think. Another struck the motel area. It devastated the living quarters. A couple of the British lads were caught."

"The whole scene was one of absolute chaos. Anyone was lucky to escape with his life."

Richard Francis, a millwright employed at the Zubair complex said upon arriving today at London's Heathrow Airport: "I was just about to go into the main gate to start work when suddenly there was a massive explosion and everything was flames and black smoke."

"The planes came in really low and then just rocketed the living cabins and garage. The four Britons died in the garage. They were just working normally — it was hell."

After the attack, people grabbed what they could and headed for the border in anything that moved in a 19-hour dash to safety in Kuwait, Francis said.

"It was like a film."

Another evacuee, electronics engineer Alan Billington, accused the Iranian Phantom jets of "aiming for people" in the attack.

Consumers Can Expect New Price Advances This Month

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers, who in August had to swallow the biggest monthly rise in grocery prices in five years, can expect another "significant increase" this month, the government says. But things may ease a bit in the year's last three months.

Grocery prices jumped 2.3 percent in August — the largest jump since July 1975 — and, overall, food prices rose 1.7 percent. Those were the biggest elements of a consumer price rise of 0.7 percent, meaning an annual inflation rate of 8.6 percent, the Labor Department said.

Howard W. Hjort, chief economist for the Agriculture Department, called the August figures "very much in line with our previous expectations."

He said the year's biggest jump in food prices is occurring in the third quarter and the rise may slow in the last three months of the year.

Overall, food prices will jump 9 percent for 1980, Hjort said. That prediction compares with the 1979 increase of 10.9 percent. And for 1981, Hjort is sticking by his earlier predictions of a 10 percent to 15 percent hike, depending partially on the weather.

Hjort said the third-quarter increase was due in part to the fact that farm prices were depressed in the spring and have since risen.

William Cox, deputy chief economist for the Commerce Department, laid part of the blame for the August jump on the midwestern heat and drought, which killed many chickens and ruined much of the soybean crop, a main component of animal feed.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—Robert Russell, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said the current recession has had little, if any, long-term impact on inflation. But he cautioned that the inflation rate could skyrocket if the economy is not carefully handled.

—Manufacturers' orders for durable goods fell 2.3 percent last month, the Labor Department said, further clouding the debate about whether the recession is past. The decline ended a string of favorable government reports which led some analysts to conclude that the recession had ended last month.

The food price increase was led by poultry, which jumped 7.5 percent from July, and eggs, which rose 6.6 percent.

The rise in food prices accounted for about half the 0.7 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index. The index last month stood 12.8 percent above the figure of one year earlier.

The index hadn't increased at all in July, chiefly because of a distortion caused by a decline in home mortgage interest rates. Home financing costs fell again in August, but at only half of July's 5.6 percent drop.

Russell, speaking to the congressional Joint Economic Committee, said he thinks the recession has bottomed out and things are picking up. But, he cautioned, inflation could zoom.

The Carter administration is considering methods to restrain wages and prices, but no mandatory wage-price controls are expected. President Carter has consistently opposed the imposition of such controls.

The decline in durable goods' orders followed an 11.3 percent jump in July, the largest one-month increase in 16 years. The Commerce Department said 75 percent of the August drop came because aircraft industry orders fell 18 percent.

Elvira Allred New President

Pitt County Register of Deeds Mrs. Elvira Allred was installed last night as president of the North Carolina Association of Registers of Deeds at the group's annual meeting here.

The installation of Mrs. Allred and other officers of the association was conducted by North Carolina Secretary of State Thad Eure.

Mrs. Allred, who last year served as first vice president, was elected president at the association's general business session yesterday. She succeeds Travis Uzzell, register of deeds for Halifax County.

Other officers elected and installed, yesterday include: first vice president Conrad Burrell, register of deeds of Jackson County; second vice president R. B. McKenzie Jr., Wake County register of deeds; treasurer Margaret Doughtie, Nash County register of deeds; secretary Ruth Mackie, register of deeds for Catawba County; and historian Ron Callicutt, Davidson County register of deeds. Uzzell, as past president, is scheduled to serve as legislative chairman for the association for the coming year.

Eure, known to members of the Registers of Deeds Association as "Register of Deeds number 101," told those attending the installation banquet last night that, "some of the finest friends I have in this state," were registers of deeds attending the session.

"This organization is one of the best in North Carolina," Eure said, emphasizing that, "our office (the office of Secretary of State) is closer to the register of deeds than any office in local government or state government."

Eure said that last year, the Secretary of State's office, "commissioned more than 18,000 notaries public," and issued papers of incorporation for several thousand corporations. He pointed out that papers of incorporation and notary commissions are sent to the office of registers of deeds for processing.

According to Eure, there are some 75,000 notaries in the state. "We propose to up-grade the office of notary," which he described as, "a public office."

Toastmasters Hold Meeting

The Greenville Toastmasters Club will meet Wednesday at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House. The meeting begins with dinner at 6:15 p.m. Guests are welcome.

At the last meeting, the invocation was given by Billy Tudor. Toastmaster of the evening was Betty Topper; table-topic master was Pat Flanagan; and general evaluator was Paul Topper.

Winner of the Best-Table-Topics-Speaker Award was Billy Tudor. Winner of the Best-Program-Speaker Award was Robert Brumfield. Joe Sherwood was voted Best Evaluator.

The Toastmasters Club meets the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month at 6:15 p.m. at the Western Sizzlin' Steak house. For further information call Pat or Charlotte Flanagan, 752-7192.

He told the gathering, "You are going to help make the office of notary," more important and more responsible, through a cooperative program of training involving the state's community college system and the registers of deeds.

Uzzell, in turning over the presidential gavel to Mrs. Allred said, "This past year has been one of the high points of my life...the peak of my life in public service."

In accepting the office, Mrs. Allred told the group, "I realize I must rely heavily

Volume Heavy At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Volume of sales was heavy Tuesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market. More grades sold for $1.75 and $1.80 per pound than any day this season. Leaf, smoking leaf and non-descript grades accounted for most of the volume. Stabilization accounted for .96 percent of gross sales.

The market sold 400,556 pounds for $647,120 and an average of $161.56 per hundred. To date, the market has sold 19,715,480 pounds for $29,270,692 and a season average of $148.47. The average yesterday was $15 per hundred pound above last year on the same sale date.

Robbery Arrests Made In Farmville

FARMVILLE — An armed robbery was reported at the Direct Service Station here last night at 8:25 p. m. and by 2:30 a. m. two 20-year-olds and a 12-year-old were under arrest, charged with the offense.

Farmville Police Capt. W. G. Barber said the service station at the corner of Main and Pine streets allegedly was held up at the point of a sawed-off shotgun by a man identified as Calvin Williams Maybank, 20, currently residing on Acton Place here. He had been a New York resident until recently and is wanted in New York for a similar offense, Capt. Barber says he understands.

Charged with the same crime was the driver of the getaway car identified as Kenneth Gorham, 20, of 404 S. Fields Street. A juvenile riding in the car and allegedly sharing in the loot, $133 total, also was charged. This same juvenile was arrested last Friday on a number of breaking and enterings in Farmville.

During the same questioning, Gorham was charged with two counts of forgery of Planters Warehouse checks stolen recently.

Equipment Is Damaged

Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that officers are investigating an incident at the city garage on New Street that left 11 vehicles damaged.

Cannon, who said the incident was discovered by a city employee about 9 p.m. Saturday, noted that the incident was not reported to police until 8 a.m. yesterday.

He said windshields in nine trucks and two street sweepers were broken out with rocks apparently thrown over the fence surrounding the Public Works Department's garage area. Repair of the windshields is estimated to cost about $1,233, Cannon noted.

Collection Of Art Bought On Teacher's Pay

By JOHN SIMMONS
Appalachian State University News Bureau

BOONE — Art collectors are usually thought of as wealthy — not just well off, but the diamond-studded, 24-carat, mink-lined kind of wealthy.

Art collector Beulah Campbell, however, doesn't fit the conventional image. Her Campbellville, Ky., hometown doesn't have a jet-set ring to it, and she gathered her art collection on a teacher's salary. She doesn't own a car, lives in an efficiency apartment and has purchased some of her collection through easy-payment plans arranged with the artists featured in her collection.

Campbell, a professor of elementary education at Appalachian State University, has assembled an extensive collection of original art from children's books, a collection that ranks among the three best in the country. Her collection features works by artists who illustrate her books that win the Caldecott, Newbery and Greenway awards each year — the most prestigious awards for children's literature.

The collection includes works by such artists as the late Ernest Shepard, who illustrated Winnie the Pooh. "Shepard illustrated the original version," Campbell says, "not Walt Disney's. I can't stand that one."

Campbell came to possess her Shepard illustrations in a way that has become her trademark. She visited his studio near London and asked if she could buy something. Like other artists she has approached, Shepard couldn't turn her down.

Today, Campbell says, Shepard's works are priceless. "You can't buy one. England considers his works as national treasures. You couldn't get one out of the country."

Campbell is personally acquainted with many children's writers and illustrators. She has visited most of the artists featured in her collection, and many have come to visit her class at ASU, where she teaches a course in children's literature, the dreaded "Kiddie Lit."

Her children's literature course is generally regarded as one of the hardest courses at Appalachian. "It does cover a lot of material, she says. "The ones who don't like to work don't do too well."

A survey of ASU's teacher graduates each year consistently show her course to be rated by the graduate as the most valuable, and she was honored by ASU in 1975 with a $1,000 outstanding teacher award — the highest honor that ASU can give a faculty member.

Her $1,000 went toward the purchase of more art.

An official appraisal has never been made of the value of Campbell's collection, but estimates of the worth have ranged from a quarter million to a half-million dollars.

The real value of her collection, Campbell says, is when she puts it on display each semester for her classes. She also takes a travelling show to area elementary schools.

The most recent display of the collection was in a special exhibit for ASU's board of trustees. She wants the university to provide a permanent place to display the collection after her planned retirement later this year.

Whenever we work out a recipe for a delightful dessert that has few ingredients and is easy to make, we develop as many versions of it as we can. This in response to readers who write or tell us that these are recipes they cherish.

Here then is a summertime fresh peach version of a basic sour cream pie we offered early this spring. Our tasters' reaction: "We love it!"

FRESH PEACH SOUR CREAM PIE

- 1-3rd cup sugar
 - 2 tablespoons cornstarch
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1 cup cultured sour cream
 - 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
 - 1 cup diced (1/4 inch) ripe but firm peeled fresh peaches
- In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan thoroughly stir together the sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. Stirring constantly over medium heat, cook until thickened and boiling; boil 1 minute. Off heat, using a wire whisk, gradually and gently stir in the sour cream and vanilla, until blended. Fold in the diced peaches. Turn into the Graham Nut Crust. Refrigerate to set — several hours or as long as

Dear Abby

Gift Of Sight Can't Be Bought

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter in your column signed, SEEING AGAIN, I cried. They were not tears of sadness, but tears of joy.

SEEING AGAIN wrote in part: "As a teen-ager a few years ago, I underwent two cornea transplants — one in each eye. I want to address my feelings to my unknown donor."

"I never knew you, yet your generosity changed my life. You died, yet a part of you still lives. You gave of yourself. It was the last thing you gave, and you gave it to a stranger. My life is so different because of you. Every day I am reminded of the gift you gave me. I wonder about you often. Who were you? What wonderful things did you see through these eyes? With the help of God, you created a miracle — the miracle of sight!"

Abby, several years ago, my son was struck by a motorcycle and died six days later. So that a part of him would continue to live, we donated his corneas.

A few months later, the eye bank notified us that both corneas had been successfully transplanted. As is their policy, they did not reveal the identity of the recipient. I'm not sure I ever really wanted to know, but I did wonder what kind of person received the precious gift of sight from our son.

Now that I have read the letter in your column, I have some idea of how the recipient must feel, and I am convinced that some good did indeed result from our son's death.

I want to thank SEEING AGAIN for sharing his feelings. His letter really made my day.

MRS. M.M. TALBOTT, SUTHERLAND, VA.

DEAR MRS. TALBOTT: And thank you for writing. Your letter made my day.

Readers, the gift of sight is something we are all able to give, yet it cannot be bought. To obtain a donor's card, call your local Lions Club today. It is listed in your phone book.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this letter is a joke, because it's written in all sincerity.

If by chance my husband and I should die at the same time, is it possible to be buried together? I mean in the same casket, holding hands or touching each other?

Abby, if they can make caskets to accommodate one person who weighs 400 pounds, and our combined weight is less than that, why wouldn't one casket be large enough to accommodate the two of us?

I suppose the chances of dying together are small, but it could happen. Please find out and let me know.

THINKING AHEAD

DEAR THINKING: A spokesperson for the largest cemetery in Los Angeles said he had never heard of such a coffin or burial.

A coffin for two would have to be custom-made and would require two burial plots. It would be very costly and too grave a matter to consider seriously.

DEAR ABBY: Saw the letter in your column from M. IN PASSAIC, N.J., who is seeking a "compassionate cleric" to bless her common-law union in the eyes of God.

Overplayed Debate

When is a non-event elevated to the status of a full-fledged happening?

It must be when presidential candidates debate minus the president who is seeking re-election.

It happened Sunday night. GOP candidate Ronald Reagan debated independent candidate John Anderson. President Carter was not there and his people said frankly they didn't desire to give the maverick candidate that kind of exposure.

So without the president there, who cared? Well the networks did. NBC and CBS carried it live and ABC did an extensive job on it following the live debate. Television analysis and guests newspaper columnists carefully dissected the two-way debate and came to conclusions as to who did the best job, whether President Carter was helped or harmed by his absence.

It was dull. No doubt those citizens who bothered to tune in initially had by then turned to the late movie or some other entertainment.

We don't have to take away anything from John Anderson's debating abilities to say that the odds are overwhelmingly in favor of either Ronald Reagan or Jimmy Carter being the next president of the United States.

Anderson has had his exposure. Now what the voters should have is a face-to-face appearance between Ronald Reagan and President Carter.

IT ALL SOUNDS SO FAMILIAR!

The Invisible Threat

WASHINGTON — I am one of those reporters who will buy any conspiracy theory, providing that it's leaked to me. The latest one was planted by a friend, Art Kranish, concerning the "Stealth" bomber, known as the invisible plane because the Soviets cannot spot it with their radar.

Soviets a 10-year start to come up with a system for making the invisible bomber visible. It has been called by the Republicans, "one of the greatest security blunders in American history."

Maybe. But Kranish has another theory. Here is how he presented it to me. "The only way we can win the arms race with the Soviets is if they go broke first. Since it is too expensive to build everything to fight an all-out war, the Pentagon chiefs have come up with a new plan. They are going to purposely leak stories about weapons they have no intention of building, so that the Soviets will spend billions of rubles, and thousands of man hours devising ways of combating them. The Russians will be so busy trying to come up with an answer to the 'Stealth' bomber that they won't have time to develop one of their own."

"It makes a lot of sense, particularly since it won't cost any money. But won't the Soviets wise up eventually and be suspicious of the Pentagon leaks?" I asked.

"Exactly. At some point, the Russian military intelligence, which was burned by so many U.S. defense leaks, will start to ignore them. That's when our military boys make their move. They will leak that they have decided to build an invisible aircraft carrier. The Soviets will think this is more 'disinformation' being put out by our side, and will do nothing about it. But this time we'll go ahead with the plans, and the commies will wake up one morning and see hundreds of invisible aircraft carriers off their shores."

"If they're invisible how will they see them?" "Because we'll deny they are there. The fact that they can't see them will put the fear of God into the Russkies, and will bring them to their senses."

"Why can't the Soviets do this?" "They can't because they don't have the technology to build an invisible submarine."

Building Up To A Climax

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK SEUL, South Korea — The tight-lipped insistence by the men who run South Korea that a discredited dissident must die, no matter how much revulsion in the West it excites, is building toward a climax with tragic consequences for U.S. interests.

It is by no means assured that the death sentence imposed on Kim Dae Jung will be commuted by President Chun Doo Hwan. To the contrary, presidential advisers say Chun must hold firm or this country will never achieve true stability; dissidents, they say, will perpetuate political turmoil here by using Washington as a court of last appeal.

This advice fails to appreciate the consequence for South Korea of executing a former presidential candidate on sedition charges. While top officials here told us they can weather U.S. economic reprisals, they fail to realize that hysteria spawned by the execution could undercut the U.S. commitment to defend South Korea — upsetting all security considerations in Northeast Asia.

The winner would then be North Korea's Stalinist dictator Kim Il Sung and his campaign to isolate South Korea. After the execution of Kim Dae Jung, the siren song from Pyongyang — that his communist garrison state would not harm its Southern brothers if only those 39,000 American troops get out — might sound sweet in Washington.

It is ironic in the extreme that the 30-year-old U.S.-Korean alliance, forged on bloody battlefields and honed by political stress, could be imperiled by the fate of Kim Dae Jung. He may be viewed as a lion in certain Washington and Tokyo circles. But in Seoul, even opposition figures write off Kim as an opportunist and incorrigible intriguer, whose reprehensible conduct following the assassination of President Park Chung Hee last October helped provoke the army takeover.

The deeper irony is that save for the Kim Dae Jung case, prospects are good for the new regime to achieve a blend of stability and democracy. Western diplomats and opposition figures, while not happy about the regime's more repressive aspects, see Chun Doo Hwan as a therapeutic leader.

The 49-year-old career officer who seized power last December and took over as president this month has the potential to achieve what Park Chung Hee lacked in 16 years of rule: genuinely popular leadership.

While Westerners scoff at the military regime's purification program that has cracked down against both corrupt politicians and racy television programs, it is popular with Koreans. They are delighted that public officials no longer spend Sunday at the golf course followed by an orgiastic 19th hole. In place of politicians, the new cabinet is composed largely of well-regarded technocrats.

Oh Se Eung, one of the most outspoken opposition members in the National Assembly during the Park regime, was sickened by Kim Dae Jung's conspiratorial conduct the past year. Oh would have preferred true democracy, but accepts President Chun's promise of order now and democracy ahead.

Similarly, Chun has a higher rating in the U.S. Embassy than he himself might imagine. U.S. Ambassador William Glysten, like Congressman Oh, is a realist — unlike missionaries and intellectuals who would impose American-style democracy on South Korea. But he has tried to impress on the regime that even conservative circles in Congress would be appalled by what they would consider a political execution.

Glysten's advice so far goes unheeded, pointing up how little two very different cultures have learned about each other during 30 years. The Americans cannot understand how much Kim Dae Jung's defiance of Confucian order outrages the regime. The Koreans cannot understand how killing or showponing politicians could endanger this old and mutual vital alliance.

The Washington-Seoul collusion course could be avoided if Kim's life is spared before the death sentence reaches Chun's desk. Kim could save

Dry Weather Hurts Farmers

The report by Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham that North Carolina farm losses may exceed $200 million this year is not a pleasant prospect for our state economy which depends so heavily on farming.

Graham sees losses of $125 million for field crops alone. Soybeans, peanuts and late tobacco have been hard hit by dry weather.

Fortunately tobacco has been selling well in our immediate area, although some of the late tobacco may be affected. Other crops raised by eastern farmers undoubtedly will feel the effects of the poor growing season.

THIS AFTERNOON

Education Shifts

RALEIGH — Two important trends are now evident which promise tremendous change in the educational establishment in North Carolina, both public and private.

Birth records and preliminary census figures confirm that a decline in student enrollment is guaranteed through most of this decade, and a surplus of both elementary and secondary public school teachers exists in North Carolina and the rest of the nation.

While there are those who see within this a variety of problems; many specialists see even more promising opportunity.

The key word is "quality". For students, the decline can mean a better education; and for teachers, it can mean better classroom teaching conditions, higher pay for the outstanding ones, and a more rewarding career. That is, for those who survive the cut.

From the first time that a competency test for high school students was mentioned in North Carolina, the question has followed: What about a competency test for teachers?

A Test And while that almost cynical suggestion is rejected by state leaders, there are a host of things quietly coming together which ultimately will mean that teacher competency will, indeed, be tested.

Declining student population and teacher oversupply set the stage for major change in that direction.

The State Department of Public Instruction reports that not even half the teacher graduates from college in this state last year found teaching jobs in this state. Total demand for new teachers was 4,551; about 2,000 graduates from this state landed jobs. Nearly 6,000 graduated with teaching degrees. Nationally, supply exceeded demand by almost 60,000.

North Carolina employs

some 56,270 teachers, about 16,000 teacher aides, and another 10,355 in various administrative and staff positions.

Meanwhile, enrollment is dropping steadily. The peak, in 1956, was 116,274 births. Last year the total was less than half. Total public school enrollment is now about 1.1 million and dropping between 15,000 and 20,000 annually.

Until now, implementation of public school kindergarten, trimming of class size, and placing classroom aides in lower grades has kept the full impact of the decline from cutting into the teacher ranks. Some more classroom trimming is expected, but the time is close when the full impact will be felt; not only among teachers, but among supervisors and principals who depend upon numbers of teachers for their pay; and among local superintendents and boards who already find increased resistance to budget expansion for more personnel and buildings.

Evaluation But the biggest impact, and the most heated political debate, promises to come from the area of "performance evaluation criteria for

To the editor:

North Carolina has been undergoing an evolutionary change from an agricultural economy to an industrial one for the past 15 years. This transformation has been steady and impactful and our overall economy, though presently sluggish, has improved.

With the demand for highly skilled technicians to work within the industries of North Carolina, the question becomes "Where will these technicians receive their training?" At the outset of our industrial emphasis, industry transferred their skilled labor from other states. Industry, however, prefers that the local community in which they locate supply them with their employees.

Thus, our technical institutes and our four-year colleges have been designing programs to train North Carolinians in order that our citizens can compete for employment in industry. Whereas, the technical institutes focus primary upon the industrial technicians, the four-year colleges focus upon training the highly skilled managers.

Among the four institutions to which our state governmental and industrial leaders most often refer when asked from where the managers will come are Duke, UNC-Chapel Hill, North Carolina State and North Carolina A & T. With its outstanding schools of engineering, business and industrial technology, A & T is in the forefront of supplying industry in North Carolina with highly competent managers and employees.

Because of its impact upon the citizens within close proximity to Greensboro and upon the Black population within our state, A & T has requested of the Board of Governors, Ph. D. programs in electrical and mechanical engineering and master's level programs in industrial administration, business administration, engineering management and architectural engineering. Additionally, UNC and State are enhancing their appropriate science and industrial programs to help our state meet its manpower needs.

This writer is hopeful that the Board of Governors will recognize its role in assisting our state economy and the educational opportunities for our people. The real value shall be the enhancement of the quality of life for the workers we Americans honor each Labor Day.

To the editor:

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women is urging parents to kiss their children with very special attention during "Kiss Your Baby Week" Sept. 21-27.

"One of the most obvious symptoms of cystic fibrosis, an incurable lung and digestive disease, is a strong salty taste of the skin. The program was designed by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation in an effort to help parents recognize CF in their children. Because CF is hard to detect in infants, it is believed that many children may be undiagnosed. Some children with CF may also be misdiagnosed, as the symptoms of other lung-damaging diseases can mimic those of cystic fibrosis.

The possibility of one's child's having CF is slight, but if so, early diagnosis and thorough medical care are essential to the child's well-being. Parents are urged to consult their child's physician if a strong salty taste of the skin is detected.

Other signs of this disease are: recurrent wheezing, persistent coughing with excessive mucus; pneumonia more than once; excessive appetite with poor weight gain; and clubbing (enlargement) of the fingertips. CF signs may also include persistent bulky diarrhea and nasal polyps.

For more information, contact the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation office, P. O. Box 924, 304 W. Broad St., Wilson, N. C. 27893.

Strength For Today

PRAY HOPEFULLY We often hear people speaking about "a little prayer". "Make a little prayer for me," they say.

But why a little prayer? The person who says this usually means that he doesn't have a great deal of faith in prayer but the little prayer won't take long, won't waste much time, and therefore nobody will have lost very much if it produces no results.

But why not a big prayer? This may be a long prayer or it may be a short prayer; but a big prayer is always a significant prayer. Therefore we should always pray for the biggest and most glorious thing we can imagine. In effect we should ask that we have the power to lift up mountains and cast them into the sea.

Physical power is nothing compared to spiritual power. So we should never use the expression "a little prayer." We should pray that God will give us great gifts and will do great and miraculous things to and through us. — Elisha Douglass

Trials Of New Book Publisher

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — World Authors Ltd., a book publishing firm conceived as a counter to establishment publishers, is out with its first volumes this month, and thus its president's vaudeville has begun.

It took faith, time, money, patience and, some in the industry say, colossal nerve and a blissful ignorance of how difficult it is to penetrate markets controlled by giants and their corporate parents.

Its goal sounded too hopeful, naive, or haughty: "WAL is dedicated to the proposition that excellent profits can be made by publishing worthwhile books — books that inform, inspire and give pleasure."

But the first books are published now: "Pampini," an adventure tale by Uri Geller; "Tantra Today," a deluxe art book on Indian yogas by Eleanor Moore Montgomery; and "Nirvana Now," a science-religion tome.

The latter is by Roland Gammon, writer, editor, small-business owner, president of World Authors, and thus the vaudeictorian. His involvement begins at any one of the cocktail parties that authors attend.

Gammon, who has written several books, was accustomed to hearing authors complain they couldn't get published because, they said, some of the biggest houses were looking only for commercial bestsellers.

It was a time, he said, when "corporate carnivores," so-called by Archibald MacLeish, were buying out big-name publishers, "to the unmistakable demeaning of authors and obvious subversion of publishing independence and literary excellence."

To many authors, said Gammon, the acquisitions were a "dangerous threat to the intellectual values, quality literature and professional integrity once characteristic of older publishing houses."

Three years ago Gammon's musings grew serious. "Here I was, sixtyish, head of my own company, comfortably upper class, a world traveler," he thought. An idea possessed him. "What a chance for a great vaudeictorian thrust for about 10 years," he thought. "Why not publish some of the writers I hear complaining about establishment companies that won't print their works?"

Authors would be guaranteed promotion of their book even if it didn't sell immediately. Time between manuscript acceptance and publication would be halved. Authors would be "listened to thoughtfully."

There followed the hard business of raising money. About $100,000 was accumulated, but it went out quickly, as advances for authors, for paper, for printing, for advertising, for travel to conventions.

Almost every cent went out, and none came in. Gammon's business had to subsidize the operation, and he had to forego any advance on his own book. But, he says confidently, the money will flow in October.

Initial press runs were small, between 4,000 and 8,000 copies each, but Gammon hopes to generate profits of $80,000 from just the initial offerings of the three titles before going back to press again.

In addition, he hopes to sell Geller's novel to Hollywood and believes paperback rights will add greatly to the gross return. He feels Geller of extrasensory perception fame, has great popular appeal.

A variety of titles is scheduled to follow, among them "The Great State of Maine Cookbook," compiled by the Ladies Aid of the Caribou Universalist-Unitarian Church, and "The Shakespeare Conspiracy," a whodunit by Jean Joffen, a professor and Shakespearean scholar.

A special thrust of WAL will involve the confluence of spiritual and scientific knowledge, and Gammon already has a work under way by Rabbi Alvin Bobroff tentatively titled, "ESP Phenomena and the Holy Bible."

World Authors, he reminds a listener, "is dedicated to the interrelated propositions of making money and raising the consciousness of mankind."

Bilingual Ed

In a Houston, Texas, classroom, a young student is learning about science. The class is being taught in Spanish. In New York City, another student is learning math. The class is being taught in Chinese. Both students are learning through bilingual education, a system of programs designed to help American schoolchildren whose first language is not English. "Bilingual" comes from a Latin word meaning "two tongues" or "two languages." About 3 1/2 million U.S. schoolchildren know another language better than they know English. For them, English is a second language. Federal, state and local programs now make it possible for many of these students to study in their other language.

public school employees," which is the polite phrase Gov. Jim Hunt used the other day in discussing education priorities for the coming years.

Several groups are looking closely at teacher competency, including one at the University of North Carolina, a committee of the State Board of Education, and the Personnel Administration Commission created by the 1980 General Assembly.

Emerging from this activity will be better screening and counseling of those majoring in education at the colleges, and stronger testing for those students before they graduate and win teaching certificates. Little opposition to that segment is likely.

But steps to strengthen principals in supervising and evaluating current classroom teachers, and especially proposals in the works to reward outstanding teachers with more pay rather than paying all the same, and change in the present three-year tenure law are certain bombshells.

"Do what?"

"Leak a story that they're going to build an invisible bomber, and have us spend billions of dollars to build a system to stop it."

"They have done it. That's where the Pentagon got the idea in the first place."

"One last question," I said.

"How do I know that you're not leaking this story to me because we really intend to go ahead with the 'Stealth' bomber, and we want the Soviets to believe we're not?" He replied, smiling, "That's for me to know, and for you and the Soviets to find out."

Job Service Observes Week

The Greenville office of the Job Service (Employment Security Commission) will be taking an active part in observing National Employ the Handicapped Week, according to Job Service manager James E. Hannan.

The week of October 5 through October 11 has been designated to focus on the handicapped and their problems in securing employment.

David Settle, handicapped specialist in Greenville, says the U. S. Department of Labor sponsors this annual observance "to emphasize a continuing dedication to the employment of the handicapped." The observance is now in its 36th year.

"This week is a special means of bringing employment of the handicapped to the attention of the public," Settle says. "The Job Service Office, however, encourages employers to hire the handicapped every week of the year because they are good, reliable workers."

Ken Taylor, the veterans representative in the Job Service office, adds "We have many disabled veterans in Pitt County. As in all other programs, disabled veterans receive preferential treatment."

Workshop Set At Martin CC

WILLIAMSTON — A workshop — "Women: Stepping In, Stepping Out" will be held at Martin Community College from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, September 27.

Sponsored by the Martin County Council on the Status of Women, the workshop will feature a panel discussion by industry leaders on jobs available for women, the education or training required, and how women can apply for these jobs.

The panel will be composed of employers from Procter & Gamble, Greenville, American Contract Packagers, Inc., Williamston, Weyerhaeuser Company, Plymouth, and a representative of the Employment Security Commission.

The workshop is open without charge to interested persons. For information or to register, call Lou Ann Roberson or Peggy Cherry at the college, 792-1521.

According to statistics from the state's Employment Security Commission, approximately 14 percent, or one of every seven North Carolinians is handicapped to some degree. In the first nine months of fiscal year 1980, which ended June 30, state Job Service offices placed 6,842 handicapped individuals in jobs.

"We believe that no worker is handicapped if he is placed in the proper job," Hannan says. "It is our job to fit the person into a job where, by focusing on abilities rather than disabilities, the handicap does not interfere with job performance."

"In the great majority of cases," Hannan added, "handicapped workers are the most loyal, punctual and conscientious of all employees. Employment of any person should not be based on charity or sympathy, but as the result of good business judgement."

"Handicapped workers are good workers. Personal impairments cannot be equated with job impairments."

Each Job Service office in North Carolina employs at least one individual to provide services such as job search assistance, counseling and training referral to persons who are handicapped.

"The Greenville Job Service office has a total staff committed to assist the handicapped," Hannan said.

Handicapped persons wanting Job Service assistance or employers who are interested in hiring the handicapped should contact the local Job Service Office, 3101 Bismarck Street.

Carter Lobbies Uphold India Nuclear Sale Veto

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, calling from Air Force One, personally lobbied senators in advance of today's vote on blocking the sale of uranium to India, which once used U.S. nuclear material for an atomic bomb.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a leader of the fight to stop the sale, said every senator he talked to Tuesday had received a telephone call from the president aboard Air Force One.

"They're pulling out all the stops on this one," he said. Besides the president's personal push, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie employed some unusual tactics to get across the administration's argument that the sale of 38 tons of reactor-grade uranium won't hurt U.S. non-proliferation goals and is in the national interest.

It was disclosed Tuesday that Muskie, a Democratic senator until joining the Carter Cabinet in May, had made an unprecedented private appearance before the Senate Republican Conference.

Disapproval of both the House and the Senate is necessary to override the president's decision to sell the nuclear fuel. The House voted against it overwhelmingly last week.

As the debate opened Tuesday, Glenn said the administration's decision to resupply the Indian reactor at Tarapur near Bombay was "illogical and inconsistent" in light of the 1977 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act, which the president strongly supported.

That law bans the shipment of U.S. uranium to any nation that refuses to place its nuclear facilities under "full-scope safeguards" aimed at preventing nuclear weapons proliferation. Glenn said the administration is following "a chameleon policy, changing color with every new (circumstance) that comes along."

"It is a policy of appeasement, a caving in to extortion," he said.

Glenn said resupplying the reactor would "make a mockery of our non-proliferation policy."

He said today's final vote, scheduled for an unusually long 75 minutes to attract as many senators as possible, "will set nuclear policy for the next decade and determine whether some smaller countries get the bomb."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate's assistant Democratic leader, said the sale should be blocked because Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi won't rule out further nuclear bomb tests and is "tilting toward the Soviets."

Other senators hotly disagreed with that position. They said refusing to honor a 1963 agreement to sell nuclear fuel for the Tarapur plant would free India of all restraints on its nuclear program and undermine the credibility of the United States as a reliable nuclear supplier in the eyes of small, non-nuclear nations. Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., a former ambassador to India, said the Indian people would view rejection of the sale as a question of their country's sovereignty.

"It will appear to them that the United States is imposing unilaterally a domestic law," he said. "India will never accept it. We will have impaired our capacity to negotiate with them." Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said the Tarapur plant provides a significant portion of electric power for industry and the 91 million people living in or near Bombay. "If we knock out the lights in Bombay (by refusing to resupply the Tarapur plant), if the Congress of the United States overrides its own president, we are going to have some consequences to pay," Percy said. "Think of the impact that would have on Indian public opinion." Percy said such a move would strengthen Soviet ties to India at a time of fighting between Iran and Iraq and the Soviet military occupation of Afghanistan. "Do we want to dim the lights of Bombay and have the Soviets turn them back on?" Percy asked, referring to the possibility that the Soviets would supply the fuel if the United States doesn't.

Young Bison Is Added To Collection

DURHAM — The North Carolina Museum of Life and Science in Durham has added the largest wild animal native to North America to its collection. A two-year old female bison has been received on a long-term breeding loan from the N. C. State Zoological Gardens at Asheboro. The bison (or buffalo, as the animal is commonly called) is yet unnamed.

She is part of the museum's program to display animals indigenous or once native to North Carolina. She is being held in a run that is the first phase of a series of improvements to display elk, black bear, wolves, foxes, cougars, beaver, bobcat, otters, and deer along the route of the Ellerbee Creek Railroad. The compound for the bear, cages for the cougar and bobcats, and the beaver pond are now under construction.

Phase II of the buffalo area will include more fencing and a maternity stable. The museum is also looking for a mate for its female buffalo. The buffalo once ranged into the Piedmont and Indian tribes provided the only real predators the buffalo needed to keep their population stable. With the settlement of North America the buffalo almost disappeared, especially in the areas east of the Mississippi. The last buffalo in North Carolina were reported in 1760. But as late as 1871 there were still 60 million in America's West — then, 20 years later, in 1891, there were only 541 buffalo known left of the original millions.

Persons interested in the program to help pay for the cost of a mate for the female buffalo can send a donation to: North Carolina Museum of Life and Science, P. O. Box 15190, Durham, N. C., 27704.

'Reformulation' Need Suggested

KENOSHA, Wis. (UPI) — A prominent Lutheran theologian has said that even as the conditions of the 16th century led to reformation of the church, so the impact of scientific discoveries in recent decades suggest the need for a "reformulation" of Christian faith for the 20th century.

Dr. Philip Hefner, speaking to a gathering of Lutheran campus ministry staff, said that Christians as "created co-creators" with God the creator, should neither reject contemporary scientific thought nor "baptize" all of it uncritically.

Stranded By Gulf Strife

By The Associated Press
"Scores of vessels" have been stranded in Iraqi and Iranian seaports as fighting between the Mideast neighbors rages, sources say, while prohibitive insurance rates threaten to bring oil tanker traffic through the critical Strait of Hormuz to a standstill.

The strait is a critical 20-mile-wide sea link between Persian Gulf oil exporting nations and the shipping lanes to oil importing nations.

Tuesday's report from State Department spokesman George Haven that the strait was still open was confirmed by U.S. oil company sources and by Lloyds of London, the British insurance exchange.

But an oil industry source in New York said two Iranian warships were patrolling the strait to stop ships bound for Iraq.

In Washington on Tuesday, Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., called on the United Nations to send a task force into the gulf to keep the strait open.

A State Department source, who asked not to be identified, said some shipowners may decide to keep their vessels outside the Persian Gulf, in the Arabian Sea, because insurers have started asking "prohibitive rates" for coverage in the area.

A shipping industry source in Bahrain said an average of 75 tankers and other vessels travel the strait daily.

At the northern end of the gulf, meanwhile, "scores of vessels" reportedly were "stranded in Iraqi and Iranian ports with no pilots willing to take them out and with shippers tending to shun the risk of steaming through menaced waters," another Bahrain shipping official said.

Iraq is determined to reclaim small parcels of border land along with the Shatt al-Arab, the 120-mile-long estuary that divides the two countries at the head of the gulf. About 40 percent of the non-communist world's oil passes through the strait. Western Europe gets 63 percent of its oil from Persian Gulf countries, the United States 20 percent and Japan 73 percent.

Industry sources said all Iraqi and Iranian oil terminals apparently have been closed by the fighting. But they noted that about two-thirds of Iraq's oil is shipped westward out of the country via land pipelines and, therefore, is unaffected.

Tuesday's trading on the spot crude oil market was virtually unaffected by the war news, U.S. sources said.

"There was very little business being concluded — but we would think twice before selling any oil" from Persian Gulf sources on the spot market, one senior trader for a large oil company said. He asked not to be identified. Traders said gasoline and home heating-oil prices jumped sharply in busy trading then retreated in U.S. Gulf Coast dealings.

The price of a cargo of regular gasoline jumped from 77.85 cents a gallon in the morning to 81.6 cents at midday before falling back to 80 cents late in the day, the Oil Buyers' Guide said.

Home heating oil moved up a nickel to 91 cents a gallon, then retreated to 90 cents later, said the publication.

Sources said the movements are not expected to have much of an effect on retail prices because oil inventories are unusually high.

House Urges Toxic Waste Sum

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that "the common enemy now is time," the leading House backer of a $1.2 billion fund to clean up abandoned hazardous waste sites is urging the Senate to bury its own plan in hopes of finishing congressional action yet this year.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., who shepherded the bill to easy passage on the House floor Tuesday, said Senate acceptance of the House version appears the "only feasible course of action" if Congress is to enact a bill this year.

Congress is scheduled to recess late next week until after the November elections and then return to deal with appropriations bills.

The Senate has been considering its own bill to establish a $4 billion fund to deal with toxic wastes.

"We have come too far and fought too hard to have this legislation die," Florio said. "We must commit ourselves to eliminating these health hazards without delay. The common enemy now is time."

The Carter administration

also called for quick Senate action.

"The callous and improper dumping of hazardous wastes has caused needless tragedy to people's lives and, in many cases, caused irreversible economic and environmental effects," said Barbara Blum, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

She said the House bill "will enable us to begin to take remedial action to prevent future dumpsite horrors," and added: "I hope and expect the Senate to complete action now so that government can meet its obligations to the American people."

The Chemical Manufacturers Association opposes the Senate bill, which would require the industry to pay hundreds of millions of dollars more in taxes than under the House version.

The legislation was prompted by environmental disasters such as Love Canal, the New York state neighborhood that discovered it was built atop an abandoned chemical dump site that was slowly poisoning its residents.

Experts say chemicals from the waste sites are slowly seeping through the earth and into groundwater, threatening to contaminate much of the nation's water supply.

The surgeon general, in a report issued earlier this month, warned that toxic chemicals represent a "major public health concern" that is likely to plague the nation for decades.

The House bill would impose new taxes on oil, chemical feedstocks and certain chemicals to raise 75 percent of the $1.2 billion fund, which would be accumulated over the next five years. The rest would come from federal tax revenues.

Two other funds, each for $375 million to deal with chemical and oil spills, would be established under legislation approved by the House last Friday.

The Sierra Club and consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the House action should prod the Senate to adopting its more ambitious version.

which would cover waste sites and chemical spills, but not oil spills.

"The Senate version... is a stronger bill," Nader said in a statement. "It creates a larger pool of money, financed primarily by the chemical industry, and it gives victims of hazardous releases greater legal rights to recover damages from the irresponsible chemical companies."

With the final House version ultimately endorsed by both the chemical industry and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce as well as by environmentalists, the proposal met little opposition and passed 351-23.

The principal objections came from Rep. Dave Stockman, R-Mich., who tried unsuccessfully to rewrite the proposal on the House floor.

Stockman wanted to leave the problem to the states, with the federal government providing $500 million in assistance.

Florio, however, said Stockman's proposal "is really a preservation of the status quo, and the status quo is totally inadequate."

Cat Mascot Rerieved

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — Tripod the tomcat, Natchez City Hall's three-legged mascot, has beaten an eviction threat and won a major concession from Mayor Tony Byrne.

Tripod gets to stay on at his adopted home, with Byrne agreeing to feed the striped feline and tend to its litter box.

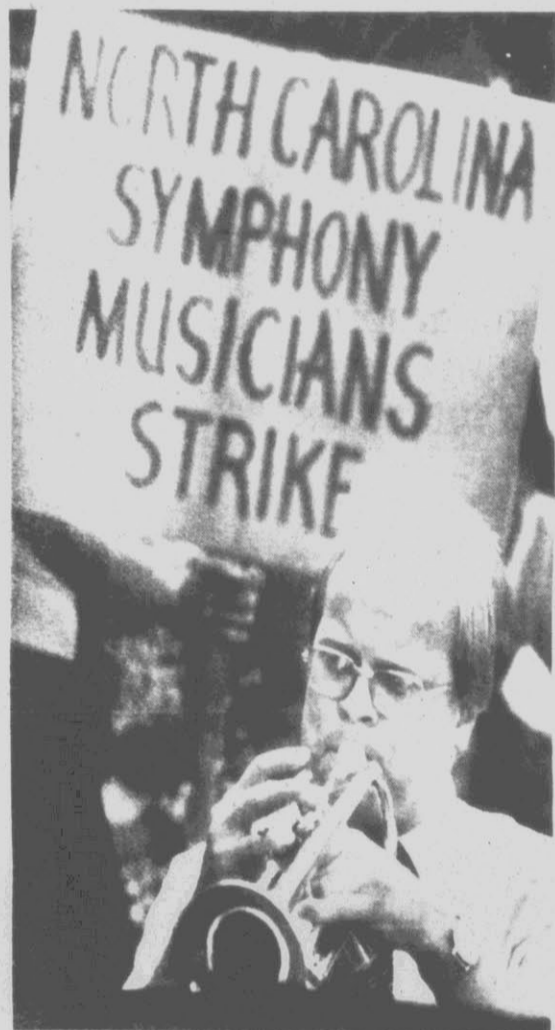

"I firmly believe that it would be a traumatic experience for Tripod, as it would for any politician, to leave City Hall after staying here for a whole year," Byrne said Tuesday after city department chiefs voted to allow the cat to stay.

"Besides," Byrne said, "out of all the employees at City Hall, Tripod is the only one who doesn't talk back to me."

The cat, adopted by employees when it wandered up to City Hall last year, was put up for adoption two weeks ago when some workers decided he was not getting enough love and attention.

City officials were besieged with phone calls and letters from people around the nation offering to adopt Tripod. Byrne said the cat even received a plastic bag full of catnip in the mail.

"At least I think it was catnip," Byrne said. "Our police are analyzing it now."

Hard, Cold Fact: New England Has Power Squeeze

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Maine's vote to retain nuclear power points to one of life's cold facts in winter-hardened New England: People here depend on nuclear plants far more than most Americans to light their houses and stave off the weather.

"It's the lack of...oil and coal that makes nuclear an important source of power in New England right now," says Ben Kincannon, energy director of the New England Regional Commission. "There's some wood that we can increasingly rely on, some hydropower we can turn to...But in the short run they will not be major factors."

The Maine Yankee nuclear plant in Wiscasset, kept open by voters who on Tuesday turned down an unprecedented anti-nuclear referendum, supplies one-third of the state's electricity. Such plants generate 34.2 percent of all New England's electric power — nearly triple the national average of 12.5 percent.

"We depend on our nuclear plants more than almost any other state in the country," said Tom Fitzpatrick, Connecticut's undersecretary for energy, "and with the high cost of oil I don't see any change for the next couple of decades."

The region currently has seven plants in operation: Maine Yankee, Vermont Yankee, Millstone 1 and 2 and Connecticut Yankee in Connecticut, and Pilgrim 1 and Yankee Rowe in Massachusetts.

The continuing battle over the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear plant, now expected to open in 1985, and the Three Mile Island accident have raised doubts whether other nuclear plants planned for Seabrook, Pilgrim and Millstone ever will be finished.

Despite the importance of nuclear-generated energy, oil remains the major source of power in New England, supplying 56 percent of the region's electrical needs.

The soaring cost of home heating oil — which is expected to reach $1.15 a gallon by mid-winter — results mainly from New England's dependence on foreign sources for 80 percent of its supply.

While New Englanders will turn to wood-burning stoves and snuggle in "sleep sack" comforters to conserve fuel this winter, oil prices will continue to go up, experts say. The growing population of northern New England will demand more electricity; the search for cheaper power will intensify.

Some power plants are switching from oil to coal or to an oil-coal mixture in hopes of saving on costly foreign oil. Many homeowners are switching from oil heat to natural gas, which is expected to remain comparatively cheaper for the next several years.

"We're still heating the homes and buildings of 74 percent of the population of New England, and we don't see that dropping much," says Charles Burkhardt, executive vice president of the New England Fuel Institute, which represents the region's independent home heating oil dealers.

"Gas conversions in the next three years are expected to total 158,000 accounts, but from our 2.4 million accounts that's not much of a dent," he says.

The greatest potential source of additional energy for the Northeast lies 100 miles off Cape Cod. It's the Georges Bank, a fishing ground which government geologists estimate could contain up to 2.5 billion barrels of oil and 13.2 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

Drilling is expected to begin in the spring, but it would probably take at least five years before any oil and gas could begin flowing.

New England also is blessed with surging rivers, and hydroelectric plants supplied 5.8 percent of the region's electricity in 1979. Now factories and power companies are taking a second look at abandoned plants and studying new sites for possible hydroelectric projects.

Energy officials also are looking northward to Canada in hopes they can benefit from new hydroelectric and natural gas projects there.

Colin J. High, a Dartmouth professor and co-author of the recently published New England Energy Atlas, studied various alternative energy sources, such as solar, wind and geothermal. He feels the one with the most immediate potential for New England is wood.

"At $70 to $80 a cord...it's very economical to use," said High, adding more than half the residents of Maine now have wood-burning stoves.

He said that without harming forest growth or hurting the construction industry, wood could have supplied 28 percent of the total energy demand of New England in 1975.

"On solar energy, so much depends on government attitudes and the vagaries of oil price," said High, whose work was funded in part by the Solar Energy Research Institute. "If oil prices double again in the next 10 to 20 years or if government subsidies for solar increase, you'll be seeing a lot more solar panels in New England."

"You're also going to see more and more rivalry within the country for energy and all kinds of resources," he predicted. "When President Carter said energy was the moral equivalent of war, I wondered if he was talking about another Civil War." The best example is the Texas bumper sticker that reads, "Let The Damn Yankees Freeze." But an example closer to home is the New Hampshire Public Utilities Commission, which last week ordered local utilities to halt the sale of hydroelectric power to other states.

The commissioners said state residents were subsidizing residents of other states and that the energy will be needed locally to cope with population increases.

Claim Jenrette Feared A 'Mob'

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John W. Jenrette was so afraid that FBI undercover Abscam agents were mobsters out to kill him that he took steps last December to make sure his wife would be financially secure if he died, the congressman's attorneys say.

Lawyer Kenneth M. Robinson told reporters Tuesday that Jenrette made a large premium payment on his life insurance shortly after he met the agents. Jenrette mistakenly believed that his two policies were about to expire, Robinson said.

Jenrette's insurance agent, Robert M. Floyd Jr., testifying at the congressman's bribery trial, confirmed that the lawmaker made a $4,449 payment into his life insurance escrow account last December, even though his normal monthly payment was $222.

Robinson has told the jury that Jenrette, a three-term South Carolina Democrat, kept in contact with the Abscam agents because he thought they were mobsters.

The lawyer said in his opening statement that after Jenrette discussed bribery with the FBI men Dec. 4, the lawmaker began to get his affairs in order. Floyd said the life insurance payment was made 10 days after the Dec. 4 meeting.

A federal grand jury charged that on Dec. 6 Jenrette's co-defendant, Richmond, Va., businessman John Stowe, picked up a $50,000 payoff that he split with the congressman. The government says the money was a payment for Jenrette's promise to introduce special immigration legislation for two wealthy Arabs who actually were creations of the Abscam agents.

Jenrette is charged with bribery and conspiracy and aiding and abetting bribery.

Floyd said Jenrette had two life insurance policies, including one for $100,000 that named his wife, Rita, as a beneficiary. The beneficiary of the second policy, worth $200,000, was a condominium development corporation in which Jenrette was a partner and would have paid off the business debt rather than transferring the liability of Mrs. Jenrette.

The insurance agent said Jenrette's policies would not have expired for a year, even if he had missed his premium payments.

Robinson told reporters the congressman's decision to make the large insurance payment was not rational and reflected his deteriorating mental state due to severe alcoholism.

Identity Papers Really Essential

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service questioned him about non-payment of taxes; the state revoked his driver's license for violations he hadn't committed; and a finance company dunned him for payments on a car he hadn't bought.

Israel Navarro Gonzalez has had one hassle like that after another since someone stole his wallet and identification papers eight years ago.

Income from a 1974 foundry job in Los Angeles showed up on his Social Security number, making the IRS wonder why Gonzalez hadn't included that income on his tax return. His employer, Producers Cotton Oil Co., had to send the IRS a letter saying he had worked here throughout that year.

Someone using Gonzalez' old driver's license was involved in several hit-and-run and drunken-driving cases in Southern California, resulting in revocation of the license in 1976. He's still driving without a valid license.

And Gonzalez homesteaded his house at nearby Eaton after a finance company claimed he was in arrears in paying for a car purchased in the Los Angeles area 200 miles south of here.

Investigators believe Gonzalez' Social Security card, driver's license and baptismal certificate proving he is a United States citizen may have been sold on the black market to illegal aliens from Mexico.

It's been only recently that anyone in authority paid much attention to his complaint that at least one person and probably more have used his identification papers, Gonzalez contends.

"They all (told) me they can't do anything," Gonzalez said. "They said, 'Why do you care? The man is putting more money into your Social Security and disability.'"

But Social Security and state Employment Development Department officials are now trying to clear the real Gonzalez' records.

"I feel three people are using the Social Security number of Mr. Gonzalez," said Ted W. Jones of the state employment office in Los Angeles. "This case is a can of worms."

Officials have found that income-tax returns bearing Gonzalez' name and seeking refunds have been filed the past two years, and someone in Los Angeles drew $2,704.

in unemployment insurance on Gonzalez' account.

Efforts to find the person or persons who made those filings have failed so far.

The Social Security Administration plans to issue Gonzalez a new number which will require re-feeding information on his background into computers, said Pat L. Petley, assistant district manager.

Public Hearings Will Be Held

Public hearings on 11 items are scheduled to be held Thursday night by the Greenville Board of Adjustments, meeting at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The hearings will be held on requests by: a group of citizens for an administrative review in order to appeal the building inspector's decision to allow a transitional home as a boarding house at 106 Woodlawn Avenue; Dick Evans for a special use permit in order to construct a storage building at 1105 Myrtle Avenue;

Naegele Outdoor Advertising Co. of Kinston for a variance in order to erect an outdoor advertising sign on the southwest corner of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue; Naegele in order to erect a sign on the northeast corner of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street; Naegele for a special use permit in order to erect a sign on the east side of Highway 11 south of and adjacent to the Hoke Contracting Co. property;

Naegele for a special use permit in order to erect a sign on the east side of N. Greene Street some 200 feet north of the Veeco transmission line; Naegele for a variance in order to erect a sign at 2713 E. Tenth Street; Naegele for a variance in order to erect a sign on W. Greenville Boulevard between Wickes and the GUCO substation;

Congregation Boy Shalom for a variance in order to allow a church at 1420 E. 14th Street; Mrs. Mary B. Wayne for a special use permit in order to operate a home occupation at 101 Fairlane Road; and by Alpha Sigma Phi for a special use permit in order to allow a fraternity at 422 W. Fifth Street.

Contraband To Be Kilowatts

MIAMI (AP) — A Florida utility and the U.S. Customs Service have come up with a plan to convert contraband into kilowatts.

The Florida Power and Light Co. power plant at Port Everglades will soon be stoked with marijuana and hashish seized by customs agents in South Florida, company officials said Monday.

"We plan to run some tests before we go into a full blown burn," said utility spokeswoman Mary Ann Linden. "Nobody has ever done this before, but we don't expect any unusual emissions. If there are, I guess we will know it."

Security Council Urges Iran, Iraq Halt Fighting

By OTTO C. DOELLING
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council sent an appeal to warring Iran and Iraq today to stop fighting immediately and settle their differences peacefully.

The governments of the United States and most other countries were fearful of what the war at the head of the Persian Gulf would do to the world's oil supplies. But most of them were depending on U.N. action rather than their own independent action to halt the conflict.

One exception was Cuba's

President Fidel Castro, the current president of the Non-Aligned Movement, which includes both the warring nations. Havana Radio announced that Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca left Cuba Tuesday night for Tehran and Baghdad on a mission "aimed at putting an end to the military conflict."

Yasser Arafat, the chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, also is planning to fly to Iran and Iraq to try to mediate a cease-fire, a PLO spokesman in Beirut said.

President Carter said the U.S. position was one of "strict neutrality, and we're doing all we can through the United Nations and through other means to bring a peaceful conclusion to this combat." And Iran's ambassador to Moscow, after meeting with two senior Kremlin officials, said the Soviet government was also adopting a "neutral policy" despite the fact that it is Iraq's chief supplier of arms.

The 15-nation Security Council made its appeal for peace in a statement agreed to Tuesday night by consensus after two hours of consultations among the members. There was no formal council meeting and no vote.

"We hope that this will be a sufficient first step," Ambassador Donald McHenry, the chief U.S. delegate, told ABC News, "but ... the council made it clear that it was a first step and that other steps are possible and contemplated."

Secretary of State Edmund Muskie acknowledged earlier Tuesday that Iran and Iraq might ignore a council call for a cease-fire.

The council statement said the members were "deeply concerned that this conflict can prove increasingly serious, and could pose a grave threat to international peace and security." It asked Iran and Iraq "to desist from all armed activity, and all acts that may worsen the present dangerous situation and to settle their dispute by peaceful means."

The council also expressed its support for an offer by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to use his "good offices to resolve the present conflict." But there was no indication yet what action he might take.

The council's action was delayed for more than an hour when the Soviet Union and East Germany challenged the propriety of issuing a statement without a formal meeting. McHenry said they also raised "substantive problems." But after consulting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who is attending the U.N. General Assembly, they agreed to go along with the other members.

President Carter, in a statement issued while campaigning in California, called on "all other countries, including the Soviet Union, not to interfere with this conflict" and said, "The United States is itself following such a policy."

"We hope the current conflict will be solved peacefully and promptly with the aid of international institutions," said Carter.

U.S. officials said they did not consider Soviet intervention likely. "They have enough on their hands," one said.

Muskie interrupted his stay at the General Assembly and returned to Washington for a White House meeting today on the crisis. A reporter asked him whether his government would consider unilateral action if the war interrupted the flow of oil through the Persian Gulf, but he said it was a hypothetical question that could not be answered usefully.

Japan Fearful Of Oil Losses

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Japan, which depends on the Persian Gulf area for more than 70 percent of its crude oil, expressed "deep concern" today over the fighting between Iran and Iraq.

The government of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki made clear its "strong desire" that the warring oil producers settle their dispute peacefully.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry said the nation had reserves for 110 days and could ride out any short-term losses of oil from Iraq. Iraq provides 8.5 percent of Japan's daily imports, but Tokyo has received virtually no oil from Iran for months, since it balked at an Iranian price hike.

Of paramount concern in Tokyo were the fates of nearly 800 Japanese citizens working in Iran, and that of a $3.2 billion Japanese-Iranian petrochemical project in Bandar Khomeini on the Persian Gulf about 60 miles from the Iraq border.

A spokesman for Mitsui, a partner in the plant, said the firm had not been able to establish contact with the 780

Japanese engineers at Bandar Khomeini since Monday. The Japanese engineers are thought to be the largest single contingent of foreigners in Iran.

Mitsubishi Corp., one of Japan's largest companies, said all loading of tankers at Iraq's Khor-al-Amaya port had stopped.

A Mitsubishi spokesman said it was unclear whether the loading halt had been ordered by the Iraqi National Oil Company or whether the fighting was preventing foreign ships from taking on crude. He said there was at least one Mitsubishi-chartered tanker waiting in the gulf for the situation to settle down.

The spokesman also said 75 of the 240 Japanese engineers working in the Iraqi port city of Basra had left Iraq for Kuwait. Basra was the target of an Iranian air attack Tuesday.

Iraq exports about 3 million barrels of oil a day, while Iran's exports have dwindled to about 500,000 barrels a day. Japan, which imports almost all of its oil, previously obtained about 13 percent of its supplies from Iran.

Secretary of State Edmund Muskie acknowledged earlier Tuesday that Iran and Iraq might ignore a council call for a cease-fire.

The council statement said the members were "deeply concerned that this conflict can prove increasingly serious, and could pose a grave threat to international peace and security." It asked Iran and Iraq "to desist from all armed activity, and all acts that may worsen the present dangerous situation and to settle their dispute by

Many Visit Ike's Home

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer
GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)
— Drawn partly by nostalgia for a more tranquil era and the family that presided over it, nearly 100,000 visitors have flooded the Eisenhower House since it opened June 15.

Nestled in lush, rolling farmland next to the site of the Civil War's bloody Battle of Gettysburg, the house was the first and only home owned by the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower and his wife, Mamie.

Its homey memorabilia has proven so popular that during the summer, officials ran 31 tours a day and still had to turn away up to 300 sightseers daily.

Interest was so great that local residents were encouraged to postpone their visits until after Labor Day, said John Earnst, superintendent of the Gettysburg National Military Park.

He said most visitors are from the Northeast, and only a small portion of them are young.

"It's principally people who remember the Eisenhower years. Most of the people who go there for the tour are middle-aged or older. Many who go lived in the era when Eisenhower was president," he said.

After seeing the house, Earnst said visitors are pleased that it reveals the common touch of Ike and Mamie.

"Many people can identify with the way that the Eisenhowers lived. They had a very comfortable house. It was not ostentatious, not really a castle," he said. "It is the kind of house that middle-class people can identify with."

Tourists interviewed here said their good memories of the Eisenhower presidency in the peaceful, prosperous 1950s added to their interest in the late president's house.

"Everybody has so much respect for Eisenhower because he represents an era no longer here. I think that's what brings so many people," said Mrs. Charles Ray of Frederick, Md. "He and my father were spitting images of each other," she added.

"He put it all together. He had the father image," said Bob Gale of Superior, Wis., a World War II GI who was visiting relatives in nearby Lancaster, Pa. "We came especially to see this," he said.

Eisenhower bought the house in 1950, and he often came here during his presidency. The farm also served as a mini-White House for 37 days while he was recuperating from his 1955 heart attack.

The Eisenhowers took up full-time residence at the farm in 1960, after they vacated the White House.

In retirement, Eisenhower raised prize-winning Black Angus cattle, painted on the sun porch, put on a putting green in his backyard or practiced shooting on his private skeet range.

Mrs. Eisenhower furnished and cared for the house.

Eisenhower died in 1969, and Mrs. Eisenhower lived alone in the house for a decade, until her death last year.

Among the precious memorabilia exhibited at the house are Ike's worn, blue felt rocking chair and Mamie's card table, where she would sit playing solitaire while watching afternoon soap operas on TV. Their fine furniture and works of art also are on display.

Walls and furniture are covered with dozens of family snapshots which Mrs. Eisenhower adored. Some of the late president's oil paintings hang on the walls.

There are tentative plans to open some of the farm's outbuildings to visitors, including the skeet range and the show barn, Earnst said.

Because of the layout of the property and the desire that it not be overrun, only about 1,100 sightseers are admitted each day. Tickets to the farm are obtained at the park's Visitor's Center.

Since Labor Day, the number of visitors has fallen to about 700-900 people during the week, although the number of visitors on weekends again reaches capacity, tour guides said.

Local Club To Host Ball

The Tar River Twirlers, a local square dance club, will host the second annual President's Charity Ball in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus on September 27 from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m.

The ball is one of a series of dances to be held on that date across the state — the main feature of Square Dance Week in North Carolina, which begins on September 21 as proclaimed by Gov. Jim Hunt.

All square and round dancers, along with the general public, are invited to participate in the event.

Proceeds from the ball will go to the North Carolina Burn Center in Chapel Hill.

Twins Find Out They're Part Of Family Triplets

NEW YORK (AP) — Adoptee Robert Shafran went to college and learned he had an identical twin.

ROBERT SHAFRAN

Eddy Gelland. That was a surprise. The shocker came when they learned a third man was using their face.

David Kellman walked into the lives of his long-lost brothers last week after he looked in a mirror and saw a face identical to those in a newspaper photograph of the two just-united 19-year-olds.

The triplets, adopted at birth by three different families, have spent the days since the discovery getting to know each other and getting used to the idea that they have mirror images.

"It is a new beginning for us," they said in a statement. "We love each other and are very happy."

"They talk the same, they laugh the same, they hold their cigarettes the same — it's uncanny," said Claire Kellman, David's mother. "I couldn't put up with one of them and now I've got three."

Actually, the three should have been four, but another brother died in childbirth at Long Island Jewish Hospital. The boys grew up aware they were adopted but unaware of surviving siblings.

Then Gelland's best friend, a student at Sullivan County Community College, noticed a startling resemblance between a new student, Robert Shafran of Scarsdale, and Gelland, who had returned to his home in New Hyde Park.

A telephone conversation prompted a much-publicized reunion that caught Kellman's eye Thursday. He called Gelland's mother.

"You're not going to believe this," he told her, "but my name is David Kellman and I'm looking in the mirror. I believe I'm the third."

When Gelland heard the news, "I couldn't believe it. I could not comprehend it. I sat there with my jaw hanging down for about 10 minutes. I was in total awe."

A check with the adoption agency confirmed that David was the third survivor, and Kellman, a Queens College student, went to Long Island to meet Gelland, a Nassau Community College student, on Friday.

"I opened the door and looked at him and then I closed the door," Gelland said in describing the comic first meeting. "And then I opened it again and looked, and then did it again."

"I think the whole thing is beautiful," he said. "But it's also a little bit spooky to know there is somebody exactly like you."

"All my life I felt special and individual and now I meet someone just like me — my own flesh and blood," marveled Shafran, who is spending weekends helping crippled children under a probation order.

Last January, Shafran pleaded guilty to manslaughter in a robbery incident in which an elderly woman was beaten to death. A judge said Shafran did not play a major role in the incident.

Gelland's sister, Barbara, 21, who is also adopted, said the discovery of two look-alikes "was a real head trip" but manageable for the families.

"We just were in shock for a couple of days. And then when the third one came along, oh boy!" she said. "Now I have three brothers — three Eddies."

But she isn't fooled by their identical appearance — all 5-foot-9, dark complexioned, with curly brown hair. "I can tell my brother Eddy. After all, I've lived with him for 19 years."

Ransom Paid For Couple

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation and local law enforcement agencies are looking for clues in the kidnap-ransom of a Spartanburg bank manager and his wife, who were held captive for 12 hours in their home Monday night, authorities said.

Sidney H. Walker, 33, assistant vice president and manager of South Carolina National Bank's Westgate branch, and his wife, Ann, 26, were seized by four men at their home about 6 p.m. Monday and held until Tuesday morning, according to Ray Barry of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Walker was released at 9 a.m. and his wife was released an hour later when he returned with the ransom money, Barry said.

When Walker was released to obtain the ransom, according to the FBI, the kidnapers moved Mrs. Walker to a wooded area a few miles west of Spartanburg until the payoff was made.

Sources told the Spartanburg Herald that between $200,000 and $250,000 reportedly was given to the captors. Authorities would not confirm the amount.

Mrs. Walker, contacted at home Tuesday evening, said she could not release any information without clearance from investigators. She did say that she and her husband were unharmed.

The South Carolina Banker's Association has offered a $5,000 reward for information about the abductors.

Two Collisions Are Reported

An estimated $2,300 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 1 p.m. collision at the intersection of Chestnut Street and Columbia Avenue involving cars driven by Laura Elizabeth Walsh of 212A Stancill Dr. and Donald Frederick Robinson of Sumpter, S.C.

Damage from the mishap was set by investigators at $1,000 to the Walsh car and $300 to the Robinson vehicle.

A truck operated by Charles Guy McLellan of 1209 Ragsdale Rd., and a car driven by Charles Washington of Greenville, collided about 10:40 a.m. on Pitt Street, 100 feet south of the First Street intersection, resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the truck and $300 damage to the car, police reported.

Sales Goal Set For The K-Car

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca sat on the hood of one of his company's 1981 "K-cars" and predicted the new high-mileage model will help "restore Chrysler to profitability."

Iacocca spoke with newsmen in a huge hotel ballroom where the automaker displayed its 1981 line of cars and trucks Tuesday in its annual press preview. The models go on sale next week.

"Chrysler Corp., which one year ago was on the leading edge of everything that was going wrong in America, is now on the leading edge of a dramatic recovery that will put the American automobile industry back in a strong competitive position," he said.

The chairman said the nation's No. 1 automaker, propped up by $1.5 billion in government guaranteed loans, expects to capture 12 percent of the American auto market next year, up from about 10 percent in 1986. He said an estimated 13 million cars and trucks will be sold in the United States in 1987 and that Chrysler hopes to claim about 1.5 million of those sales.

The goal for the "K-cars" — Dodge Aries and Plymouth Reliant — is sales of 600,000 next year as Chrysler seeks to counter a rising tide of Japanese imports.

Iacocca, who says he will draw a salary of $1 a year and Chrysler shows a profit, dismissed the Aries and Reliant as the "bread and butter" family car for the next decade.

They have four-cylinder engines and front-wheel drive, carry six passengers, are about half a ton lighter than the Dodge Aspen and Plymouth Volare, which they will replace, and get as much as 25 miles per gallon in the city and 41 on the highway. The base price is $6,100.

But Iacocca said the "K-cars" alone will not rescue Chrysler from its financial problems. And he waved his arm at the other 1981 models in the room — the subcompact Omni-Horizon line, including a new "Miser" version that will get 30 mpg, the Dodge Diplomat-Chrysler LeBaron family, the Chrysler Cordoba-Dodge Mirada line, and the revived Imperial name in the company's return to the luxury market with a $20,000 car.

Iacocca noted the Environmental Protection Agency recently projected the 1981 Chrysler cars would have a fleet average of 25.5 miles per gallon — which he said would answer the growing public demand for fuel-efficient transportation.

"That is almost 2 1/2 miles per gallon better than General Motors and almost three miles per gallon better than Ford," the chairman said. "We also have more models over 25 mpg than any import."

Iacocca also projected a profit for Chrysler in the fourth quarter of 1980 and said the company may not have to draw any more money from the $1.5 billion government-guaranteed loan. It so far has drawn $800 million.

But he said a return of interest rates to the 15 to 20 percent range could destroy Chrysler's recovery plan.

Says Tour Was Speed-Up Move

WINGATE, N.C. — A senior federal official who has publicly criticized the state's North Carolina state health care system last year says the state's move to speed up the federal government's efforts to prevent and control drug abuse this year and to determine problems to be faced in the 20's. She said that she had been a "dabbler" in drugs and that celebrities can help to steer youngsters away from drugs. (AP photo) dent William C. Friday told a federal official that he had urged the UNC Board of Governors to keep the negotiations alive in the spring of 1979 but was overruled by the board, which then filed suit against the federal government.

William A. Johnson, then chairman of the board of governors, said Tuesday he did not recall the board overriding Friday's recommendation.

Johnson, contacted at his home in Lillington, said that Tatel's testimony regarding efforts by Friday to continue negotiations was "hearsay piled on hearsay."

Full Enrollment At Wingate College

WINGATE — The fall 1980 enrollment at Wingate College total 1,548, an increase of 29 students over last fall's enrollment — and up 129 from the 1978 enrollment figure.

Wingate's president, Thomas E. Cortis, states the college is operating at capacity with all dorms full. Wingate has 1,244 resident students currently enrolled.

Wingate is a four-year liberal arts college offering 14 majors.

Maine Votes, 3-2, To Keep Nuke Power Station

Associated Press Writer
AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Maine residents voted by a 3-2 margin to keep the state's only nuclear generating plant in operation, but industry officials are not taking the result of the unprecedented referendum as a ringing endorsement of nuclear power.

Tuesday's referendum, which would have shut the Maine Yankee plant in Wiscasset and banned all future nuclear development here, was a defeat for anti-nuclear activists who contended that alternative energy sources such as hydroelectric power would be a cheap, safe replacement for Central Maine Power Co.'s nuclear plant.

With 660 of 665 precincts reporting, there were 230,780 votes, or 59 percent, for keeping the plant open and 159,761 votes, or 41 percent, for closing it.

Maine Yankee supporters chalked up their biggest margins in the two counties farthest from the plant, while backers of the shutdown prevailed only in Lincoln, Sagadahoc and Waldo counties, located on the coast and among the closest to the plant.

The statewide voter turnout hovered around 56 percent, unprecedented for a single-issue referendum. The total vote exceeded that of Maine's 1978 general election and was higher than that of all but three of the presidential races in the state.

CMP President E.W. Thurlow said the result was worth the almost $1 million — much of it from out-of-state corporations and utilities — spent on advertising and other efforts to keep the plant running.

"We look upon this as a vote of confidence in the Maine Yankee plant but we do not look at it in any way as a mandate to build future plants," said Thurlow. CMP owns 38 percent of the 8-year-old plant.

Raymond Shadis, leader of the anti-nuclear forces, who pushed for the referendum, refused to concede defeat. "We've got a lot of vim and vigor," he said. "We'll wait a while."

The referendum drive began 14 months ago with an anti-nuclear march from Augusta to Wiscasset that sparked the collection of more than 55,000 signatures on petitions for a referendum, many more than needed.

Nuclear opponents contended the plant posed the risk of a major disaster and endangered the health of area residents. They were also concerned about disposal of wastes from the plant.

The proposition would have banned construction of any other nuclear plants in the state, although CMP, Maine's largest power company, decided two years ago it would not build any more nuclear plants because of the expense.

The battle over the 840-megawatt Maine Yankee, which provides about one-third of the state's electricity, centered on the cost of power generation. The Save Maine Yankee Committee argued that closing the plant would cost customers an additional $140 million in the first year of shutdown. The referendum committee said it would cost far less.

Referendums in other states have dealt with nuclear-plant construction, but never with shutting an existing plant. If the proposition had passed, a court test of the state's right to ban nuclear power was almost certain.

Carl Walske, president of the Washington-based Atomic Industrial Forum, an international trade group, said that while his side was victorious, he was concerned that such a large proportion of residents opposed nuclear energy.

"Clearly we have not dispelled the notion that nuclear power presents an unusual risk for the public," he said. "We intend to analyze what this minority vote is trying to tell us and will redouble our efforts to get the facts out to the public."

Gov. Joseph E. Brennan, who argued that closing the plant would imperil Maine's economy, said he was pleased with the referendum outcome. But he said he would continue to work for alternative energy development.

"I'm not the head cheerleader for the power companies," he said.

Bush Quick To Defend Reagan

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — By noon on Tuesday, the inner circle of the George Bush campaign was humming with the word that President Carter had portrayed the voters' choice on Nov. 4 as one of war or peace.

By about 2 p.m., the Republican vice presidential nominee, speaking off-the-cuff in Joliet, Ill., was warming up to the task of responding to the president. But he kept those jabs brief.

By 4 p.m., his staff was applying the finishing touches to a speech which laid out in tough language the claim that Carter had chosen "a low road, a low road of misrepresentation and sly innuendo concerning Ronald Reagan's position on the major issues facing our country."

come to learn, isn't Mr. Carter's campaign style," Bush said. "He prefers this kind of hit-and-run, guerrilla style of political assault — first make this broad-gauged charge; then, if challenged, kind of slip away into the night and deny that you meant what you said."

"Let's call this style what it is: Carterism," Bush said. "There is nothing to suggest in Gov. Reagan's record that war would be forthcoming if he becomes president," he said.

Bush headed for Philadelphia today, the midpoint of a six-day tour through the industrial Midwest and Northeast.

Life Terms On Pleading Guilty

NASHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Frederick D. Stokes Jr. pleaded guilty to armed robbery and second-degree murder Tuesday as his trial began on charges growing out of a Spring Hope bank robbery in which a teller was killed last March.

Stokes, who had been charged with first-degree murder, was sentenced to two life terms in prison. The terms are to run consecutively.

Stokes, 31, was accused in the shooting death of teller Phyllis Smith Dunn on March 13 during a robbery at the Peoples Bank and Trust Co. in Spring Hope.

Annexation Is Delayed

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Faced with the threatened pullout of Long Manufacturing Co., Tarboro's Town Council agreed Tuesday night to delay plans for an annexation program until a special task force can study the town's growth needs.

W.R. Long, president of the multi-million dollar manufacturing company, had warned the Council last month he would move his company if the town carried out its plans to annex part of its property.

Long has a sprawling manufacturing and storage complex that is partially in the town. The annexation program would have brought two more tracts of Long property into the town, adding an estimated net tax of $40,000 to the company.

The delay came when the Council approved a proposal by D. Wayne Peterson, president of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Peterson, whose company also is based in Tarboro, urged the Council to drop the annexation program in favor of a long-range study. The Council named Peterson to head the study group.

Long Manufacturing, with sales outlets throughout the South and some sections of the Midwest, produces agricultural equipment.

Mrs. Jenkins' Services Set For Thursday

Mrs. Lillian Olga Jacobsen Jenkins, 64, died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Memorial services will be conducted Thursday at 11 a.m. in St. James United Methodist Church. She had donated her body to the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

MRS. LILLIAN J. JENKINS

Mrs. Jenkins, wife of ECU Chancellor Emeritus Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, was born in Lavalette, N. J. to a Norwegian immigrant family. She received a B. S. degree in elementary education from Trenton State Teachers College and taught in the New Jersey schools for nine years. She married Leo Jenkins in 1942, while he was teaching in Somerville, N. J. The couple resided in California where Jenkins was stationed as a Marine during World War II and afterward lived in Montclair, N. J. until they moved to Greenville in 1947, when Dr. Jenkins became dean of East Carolina University. Thirty-one of her married years were spent in Greenville. Since 1978, when Dr. Jenkins retired, they had lived at Pine Knoll Shores near Atlantic Beach.

Mrs. Jenkins was a member of St. James United Methodist Church and was a founder of the Aries and Seira book clubs here, a founder of the Brookgreen Garden Club, a Cub and Brownie Scout leader, a member of Chi Omega sorority and a volunteer helper at a Greenville nursing home. During her husband's tenure as president and chancellor of East Carolina University, she acted as hostess for dinners and receptions attended by 5,000 guests annually at the chancellor's home.

Surviving her, besides her husband, are her children, Mrs. Marcus Lodge of Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Mike Hogan of Greenville, Mrs. Sallie Person of Greensboro, Dr. James J. Jenkins of St. Louis, Mo., Jeffrey D. Jenkins of Washington, N.C. and Jack Warren Jenkins of Raleigh, and four grandchildren.

A Lillian J. Jenkins Scholarship Fund was established by the East Carolina University Foundation in 1975. Those desiring to make memorial contributions may consider this fund.

Pitt NCAE Has Brochure Available

Concrete specific ideas for helping children do well in school are available in a new brochure for parents from the North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE), according to Annette MacRae, president of the Pitt County local unit of NCAE.

"We want every child to grow, to learn, to do the very best that he or she can possibly do," said MacRae. "But educators realize we can't do the job alone. It takes a partnership between parents and teachers."

The brochure for parents contains sections on cooperation between parents and teachers, drugs and alcohol, a child's self-esteem, health and safety, science, the arts, reading and writing, study skills, and learning from the mass media.

Copies are available free of charge from NCAE members in public schools. Any parent who wants one only needs to ask his or her child's teacher.

"A child spends about six hours a day in classes," continued MacRae. "That child spends the other two-thirds of the day in the home and community. The child comes to school less than half of the days in a year, even if the child has perfect attendance."

"So it's obvious that the school cannot do the whole job of educating a child alone when the school only has the child for one-sixth of the time each year. The home and community must help if we are to do a total job."

"Our brochure tells parents how to help their children and that will help educators as well," MacRae added.

The goals of NCAE are: the professional improvement of its members, the promotion and the protection of the welfare of its members, and the advancement of the cause of education in North Carolina.

Flood Insurance Now Available

Pitt County Planner Craig R. Smith said today notification has been received from the Federal Emergency Management Agency that the county has been accepted into the National Flood Insurance Program, effective today.

According to Smith, property owners in unincorporated areas of the county are now eligible to buy flood insurance protection at affordable rates subsidized by the federal government.

Smith explained that policies are effective at 12:01 a.m. of the day following the application date if purchased during the first 30 days of the county's eligibility. There may be a five-day waiting period in some cases after the first 30 days.

The flood insurance policies can be purchased from any property insurance agent or broker licensed to do business in Pitt County.

Smith said that since flood insurance is now available, property owners in flood-prone areas as shown on maps prepared by the FEMA must, according to law, buy flood insurance when seeking any form of federal or federally-related financial assistance for the acquisition or construction of buildings in those areas.

Smith explained that flood hazard boundary maps are available at the county planning department, Room C-113, Pitt County Office Building, 1717 West Fifth St., and added that planning department personnel will assist property owners in determining whether they live in flood-prone areas.

Smith emphasized that while flood insurance is available to all residents of the county, the purchase of flood insurance as a condition for receipt of federally-related financial assistance does not apply to property outside the danger zones.

Flood insurance coverage can be obtained for all buildings and their contents, with the available limits of insurance set at $35,000 for single family homes, and $100,000 for other residential and nonresidential buildings. Residential rates are 25 cents per $100 coverage, while nonresidential rates are 40 cents per $100 coverage.

The contents of residential buildings can be insured up to $10,000 at 35 cents per $100, while the rate for contents of nonresidential structures is 75 cents per $100, up to a maximum of $100,000.

The flood insurance program is designed to stimulate individual participation in it as protection against flood disasters and to help promote sound floodplain management on the part of local governing authorities, according to Smith.

Additional information on the flood insurance program may be obtained by contacting the Pitt County Planning Department.

Warning Fails Deter Workers

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. (AP)
 — The San Onofre power plant has hired 400 people despite warnings by the company that work inside the plant's steam generators could expose them to radiation.

The work entails three days of training and two days of installing metal sleeves inside heat-exchange tubes, the company said. The pay is $500. Radioactivity will be strong because the three steam generators pass radioactive water while in operation.

Atlantic Nuclear Services Co. will train the workers as part of a $15 million generator improvement project at San Onofre, operated by Southern California Edison Co. and San Diego Gas & Electric Co.

Jaguars Face Panthers; Conley Hosts Firebirds

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer For the first time in four years a team other than Farmville Central is atop the Eastern Carolina Conference — actually, three teams are tied for the lead, and none are from the area.

Tied for the league lead at 2-0 are Southern Nash, which defeated North Pitt, 42-14, last week, Charles B. Aycock, which had Ayden-Grifton its fourth straight loss, 54-6, and North Lenoir, which managed to edge winless D.H. Conley, 21-18, in the Vikings' conference opener.

Farmville Central, 1-2 overall and 1-1 in the league, again owns the best record in the area, but the Jaguars are in the middle of the pack — not above it — following a 20-15 come-from-behind win over arch-rival Greene Central (1-3, 0-2).

In another area games last week, Jamesville lost to Belhaven, 28-12. Roanoke and Williamston, both 3-0, had open dates last week.

This week's schedule has Farmville at North Pitt (1-3, 0-2), Ayden-Grifton (0-4, 0-2) at Greene Central and D.H. Conley plays host to Southern Nash.

In a key Northeastern Conference battle, Roanoke travels to Ahoskie (3-0), the opening league game for both schools. Meanwhile, Williamston opens its 1980 conference schedule when it travels to Roanoke Rapids (2-0-1). Jamesville, 1-3 overall and 0-2 in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference, goes to Bath.

Ayden-Grifton The Chargers went from one extreme to another against ECC co-leader Charles B. Aycock this past week.

In its first three games, Ayden-Grifton rushed for 128 yards and passed for 256 yards. Against the Falcons, the Chargers rushed for 164 yards and passed for but 15 yards, due in part to quarterback Bernard Riccarelli being out sick most of last week and then bruising his right hand during the game.

The results, however, were the same, as Aycock handed the Chargers their fourth straight loss, 54-6. The Chargers are 0-2 in the ECC.

"We emphasized the run more," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said. "We went from one extreme to another. We showed some improvement in our running game. Now we must reach a balance."

The Chargers also must become a more mature team.

"We played with a lack of discipline Friday and we exhibited a lack of leadership on the field," Sauls said. "We had a lack of concentration and that attributed to our 160 yards in penalties. We had entirely too many unsportsmanlike penalties and we must improve on that if we are to win."

Especially if the Chargers hope to have any chance of beating Greene Central Friday night in Snow Hill. The Rams, a disappointing 1-2 and 0-2, always have one of the biggest teams in the conference. This year is no exception.

"I'd have to say they're one of the strongest teams physically we'll face," Sauls said. "They're off to somewhat of a disappointing start but I'd say that before the season is over they're going to be a good football team."

Sauls realizes the Chargers, who have scored but 14 points in their first four games, must get their offense operating better than it has.

"For us to have a chance to win, we're going to have to play more aggressively, and we're going to have to try to develop further both our running and passing attacks."

D.H. Conley Viking coach Jimbo Walker knew his club should have beaten North Lenoir. The Vikings moved the ball well, rolling up 308 yards total offense to the Hawks' 184. But Conley also led North Lenoir in another statistic: turnovers.

The Vikings, 0-3 overall and 0-1 in the league, lost four fumbles, one on their five and another which was returned 51 yards for a touchdown. The result was a 21-18 loss.

"We killed 'em," Walker said. "We played good on defense. We only gave up one score (a 56-yard TD pass with 13 seconds left in the first half). We should have scored four more times, but fumbles and penalties hurt us."

"We came back in the fourth quarter and had a chance to win it, but didn't. We played good Friday night, but I'm not sure whether we're that good or if North Lenoir's not very good."

Walker won't have long to wait for an answer. Friday, the Vikings face Southern Nash, one of three teams tied for the early ECC lead. The Firebirds, winners of their first three games, are led by the league's leading rusher, Anthony Crumel. The Southern Nash senior has run for 246 yards in 38 carries, a 6.5 average per rush.

"They do a lot of things well," Walker said. "They run well, they pass well. They're a good ballclub."

"We've got to slow them down and keep them from scoring a lot and hopefully we'll be able to get on the board. I think we'll be able to move the ball and our defense is just going to have to have

Former Packer Great To Be Fired? Starr's Support Eroding

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A glaring crack is evident in the rock that has been the Green Bay Packers' executive committee, long a bastion of solidarity in support of Bart Starr.

None of the committee's seven members would admit to having said that Starr should be fired as the National Football League team's head coach and general manager.

But the identity of the source wasn't as important amid the furor generated by the report by Dave Begel in Tuesday's Milwaukee Journal.

Rather, the significance was seen in the departure of at least one committee member from the panel's traditionally unbending stance in support of Starr, a hero in Green Bay almost since the day he became the team's first string quarterback eight games into the 1959 season.

Starr, whose exploits as a quarterback earned him a spot in pro football's Hall of Fame, was named coach and general manager Dec. 24, 1974, a nearly acclamation choice among fans for the job.

His record as coach is 27-49-1. Rumors that his job was in jeopardy were rampant as the Packers compiled a 0-4-1 preseason record this summer. The rumors subsided when the team upset the Chicago Bears 12-6 to open the regular season, but have swirled again after defeats of 29-7 by Detroit and 51-21 by Los Angeles the last two weekends.

"If he (Starr) had anything on the ball, any class, he'd resign right now," the committee member, who asked not to be identified, was quoted as saying. "We want to get rid of him with class and without hurting the franchise. The best way to do it would be for him to resign. Right now."

"What I'm thinking now is that he should be fired right now," he said. Dominic Olejniczak, committee president, said The Journal story has "no foundation."

Tony Canadeo, a committee member and widely rumored to have been the source of the leak, denied it. Jerry Atkinson, another committee member, said he never has met or spoken with Begel, and said the story was "just a shame."

The four other committee members — John Torinus, Fred Trowbridge, John B. Stiles and Judge Robert Parins — all indicated nothing is in the works to dump Starr.

But that doesn't mean they're content. "I'm not happy. You'd have to be sick to be happy the way things are going up here," a committee member who requested anonymity told The Associated Press.

"I couldn't be a true Packer backer if I was happy, and I'm on the executive committee," he said. "Maybe things will straighten out. Maybe this team has something hidden. But I haven't seen it."

"I think Bart has been patient with (quarterback) Lynn Dickey to the point where it's hurt Bart's career," he said. "A quarterback is the most important cog in the operation. We haven't got one."

Olejniczak, interviewed by telephone from Green Bay, was asked by The AP if he thinks a majority of the committee wants Starr to be dismissed.

"Positively not," Olejniczak said. "There is no foundation to that story at all."

"I'm not even sure if it's reflective of how even one member feels, when it's anonymous," he said. "Knowing my board the way I do, I think they would have expressed their feelings to me."

He said a discussion of whether or not Starr should be retained is not on the agenda of the executive committee's next scheduled meeting Oct. 2.

"No one has talked to me about wanting it on the agenda," he said. "No one has indicated to me they want it on the agenda. We're not so tight that it couldn't be brought up at that time. But I'm not going to bring it up."

Olejniczak, always a staunch Starr supporter, was asked if he has changed his opinion.

"Thousands and thousands of Packer fans would like the team to win," he said. "I'd like to win. But if I make any statement, I'll make it for the entire board, and that would have to be after some meeting. Canadeo said, 'The last time the committee even discussed Bart's position was the last time we extended his contract, which was a couple of years ago."

Starr's contract extends through 1981.

Torinus, asked about Begel's story, said, "It is inconceivable to me that any member of the committee would make that statement, and even more inconceivable that the executive committee would act in such a manner."

A committee member told The Green Bay Press Gazette he was virtually certain the committee will take no action on Starr until after the season, if then.

Karr: Many Priorities

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor

Conference alignment, improved facilities and upgraded scheduling are the number one priorities for new East Carolina Athletic Director Dr. Ken Karr, the Greenville Sports Club was told yesterday.

Karr, speaking at the second meeting of the club for this season, said that it was imperative that East Carolina find a conference home for basketball and basketball and possibly some other sports, with football as a possibility also.

He listed the number one facility need as a multi-story, multi-purpose building that would hold athletic offices, lockers, meeting rooms, and other facilities.

Karr also noted that there was a possibility that East Carolina would have to reduce its 17 sport program if finances got too tight. "It's a tragedy to have to do it, but this is not just East Carolina's problem. It's happening all over."

Karr said that the need for a conference would help in scheduling, but more important, it would give the school the "opportunity to get an automatic berth into the NCAA playoffs" in such sports as basketball and baseball. Some sports, he pointed out, like swimming and track, depend on individual performances for NCAA bids, and these can survive without a conference affiliation.

"We also need to join the Collegiate Football Association (CFA)," he said, referring to the so-called super group of schools which includes the seven major conferences and some 12 to 14 independents. "We are not that far from them now. We need to schedule at least six of them a year on a continuing basis, and right now we're in the four to five area."

Karr also said that East Carolina must find a way to bring more season ticket holders into Ficklen Stadium and Minges Coliseum. "We hope to have a new marketing plan ready for next season. We haven't done a very good job of this in the past. We've been too dependent on the Pirate Club. Of course, we must continue to get help from them, but we also must find a way to fill our seats with screaming fans."

Scheduling, especially in football, is not going to be automatic overnight. "It took ten years at San Diego State, and even now, people are telling us they are scheduled into the 1990's. We are hopeful of grabbing a date here and there with people who for some reason cancel out with another team."

"One thing we won't do. We're not going to announce anyone on our schedule until we have a signed contract in hand," Karr said when asked of possible future foes.

As to whom the Pirates might be looking at in general, Karr said that the ideal schedule was one in which you have about a third that year-in and year-out, you generally win against those teams. "Another third is against teams where it is a real game. The outcome is generally in doubt. The other third is against teams that you are striving to beat."

"But the whole bottom line is winning," he added. "Why play all teams like Notre Dame and Ohio State, when you know more than likely, you're going to end up 0-11. Nobody wants that. You want a chance to be 8-3, 7-4 or 6-5 at least."

As to the facility needs, Karr said that his first priority is the athletic complex building. "It may have to be a two or three story building. But we want in it offices for all of the athletic people, lockers for both men and women, sports medicine training facilities, weight training facilities, at least three large classrooms, which can be sectioned off into smaller rooms for meetings, a large lecture room, and the like. This is our most pressing need right now."

He said that while work is underway to improve the seating in Minges Coliseum, he could foresee the need for a larger basketball arena in the future. "We need some sort of regional center that would seat at least 12,000 for basketball. This may well be funded by state, county, city and even possibly some East Carolina funds. But it should not be on campus, but only close enough to be reached fairly easily. This would help us in many ways, including conference alignment."

As to Ficklen Stadium, Karr said he would foresee that additional seats, to 50,000, could be needed as early as six to eight years down the road.

The speaker for the next meeting, on October 14, will be the new basketball coach at Duke University, Mike Krzyzewski.

Rose Remains 3rd In High School Poll

By The Associated Press

Kannapolis A.L. Brown defeated the defending 4A state playoff champion and Southwest Guilford romped past a 2A opponent.

But both teams lost their No. 1 rankings this week in the Associated Press poll of North Carolina high school football teams.

Kannapolis was replaced by Northern Durham, and Robbinville moved past Southwest Guilford. Each school was second last week.

Lexington remained the top team in the 3A class in voting by a statewide panel of sportswriters. Northern Durham advanced with a 28-0 victory of Lee County, ranked fourth a week ago and 13th this week. Kannapolis defeated High Point Central 24-7. High Point was eighth last week and is unranked this week.

Northern Durham, 4-0 and unscored-upon this season, got six first-place votes — half the total of Kannapolis. But it fared better in the overall voting.

Third again among the 4A schools was Greenville Rose, with Fayetteville Terry San-

ECU JV's Play Host To Chowan

East Carolina University's junior varsity football team will play its second game of the year Thursday at 7:30 in Ficklen Stadium when the Pirates play host to Chowan College.

ECU lost an earlier meeting between the two schools, 16-0. Since then, Chowan has also defeated Newport News Apprentice, 7-0, and Potomac State, 21-13.

"We use these JV games as an opportunity to evaluate a lot of people," coach Garry Fast said. "Also, it gives these kids that get their brains beat out every week on the practice field an opportunity to get in game situations and get some playing time."

Two more home games are scheduled for Ficklen in November.

Jaguars Face Panthers...

North Pitt had little depth before the season started and following this past week, which included a 42-14 loss to Southern Nash, the Panthers' lineup reads more like a hospital chart.

"We've got two guys with six stitches and another with six above the eye. We had no depth whatsoever and this is hampering us a lot," North Pitt coach Pat Smith said.

Among the stitched up are running back Tony Pittman, defensive end Paul Tucker and split end Barry Warren. The injured include tight end Gordon Dunn and quarterback Bob Hemingway (bruised hand).

"I'm not worried so much about the other team as I am with ourselves," Smith said. That's not to say Smith doesn't know the Panthers' opponent this week. It's a familiar foe: Farmville Central.

"It might be a rivalry, but it hasn't been much of a hard fought rivalry," Smith said. "I don't think North Pitt has every beaten Farmville. They've pushed us around like they've wanted to the past few years and I'd don't think they're worried about North Pitt this year."

Early in the season the Jaguars were having their problems, but Smith believes Friday's win over Greene Central may be a foreshadowing of things to come.

"I think a lot of people are going to be surprised at Farmville. I saw the films of the Clinton and C.B. Aycock games and they were extremely close until they made mistakes," Smith said. "And they've been getting better every game."

"It's going to be awful tough for us to stop them," said Smith, whose Panthers gave up 481 yards in their loss to the Firebirds. "We don't usually stop them so it may depend on whether we can control the ball on offense."

more aggressive — that was probably the key. That, and not making the mental mistakes we had made in the past."

Brewer hopes the Jaguars improvement will continue this week when they travel to Bethel to face North Pitt, a 42-14 loser to Southern Nash last week. "They're one of the teams that I'd have to rate as a darkhorse in the conference," Brewer said. "They've got a pretty good nucleus coming back on both offense and defense. I'm impressed with them."

"The Southern Nash game was no indication of the team they have," he added. "Just about every time they had the ball in position to score they made a mistake, which hurt them. They've got a good backfield. Their backs run hard and have good speed."

Rose Remains 3rd...

Farmville Central

Few drives could have been longer. Or more important. Trailing 15-14 with the ball on their two, the Jaguars put together a drive that took nearly six minutes and ended with Roger Joyner running it in from the one to give Farmville its first win of the season.

"They punted the ball and it rolled dead on the two," Jaguar coach Gene Brewer said. "It was not one of the best positions to have the ball in."

But the Jaguars fought back, and were able to avoid mistakes, something that helped lead to Farmville's two defeats to Clinton and Charles B. Aycock.

"We didn't make as many mistakes and the few we made we were able to overcome," Brewer said. "We got a real good effort from all our people, especially defensively."

"Our offense moved the ball better and our backs ran harder," he added. "We played Southwest Guilford whipped Southwest Randolph 38-0 and earned 10 first-place votes. Third, advancing four places from last week, was Randleman — a Central Carolina 2A foe of Southwest Guilford. Another team from that conference, Central Davidson is ranked ninth this week.

Here is how a statewide panel of Associated Press sportswriters rate North Carolina high school football teams this week. First-place votes are in parentheses. Points are assigned on basis of 10 for a first-place vote, then 9, 8, 7, etc.:

Volleyball Roundup

Southern Nash 2, Farmville C. 0

FARMVILLE — Southern Nash downed Farmville Central in two straight matches yesterday as the two schools opened the 1980 volleyball season.

In the first match, Southern took a 15-6 victory, then came back with a 15-5 win in the second game.

In the second match of the day, Southern took a 15-12 victory, and followed that up with a 15-10 victory, sweeping the day.

Leading Southern Nash was Linda Roberson, serving up the most successful points, while Farmville Central was led by Hattie Mae Joyner.

SW Edgecombe 2, Greene C. 0

PINETOPS — Southwest Edgecombe extended its unbeaten string to six Tuesday afternoon with a 2-0 victory over Greene Central in an Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball match.

The Cougars, now 2-0 in the league, won the first set, 15-6, 15-0, and took the second, 15-4, 15-6 to drop the Rams' record to 0-2 overall and in the conference.

Greene Central coach Seth Jones praised Pam Shackleford for her play, especially her serving.

The Rams play host to Farmville Central Thursday.

North Pitt 1, Ayden-Grifton 1

BETHEL — North Pitt won the first match but Ayden-

Grifton came back to take the second to split an Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball match Tuesday afternoon.

Sparked by five straight service points in the first and third games by Fran Lunsford and Sherry Bradley, the Pant-HERS won the first match, 15-2, 11-15, 15-0. For the Chargers, Sarah Cannon served for 10 straight points in the second game.

Ayden-Grifton came back to sweep the second match, 15-5, 15-8, behind the serving of Francis Strong (eight straight points) and Cannon (six straight).

The Pant-HERS are now 2-1 overall and 1-1 in the league. Ayden-Grifton is 1-1 overall and 1-1 in the ECC.

North Pitt travels to Southwest Edgecombe Thursday while Ayden-Grifton plays host to North Lenoir.

Okay, George, Let's Hear You Crow

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Okay, George, let's hear you crow.
The one disarming facet of the New York Yankees' mad September dash toward possibly another American League pennant and World Series title is that it gives George Steinbrenner, the dotting owner, a chance to gloat.
"See, I told you so," George can say, leaning back in the swivel chair in his ship-building headquarters in Tampa, Fla., and proudly surveying what another of his highly controversial little stratagems hath wrought.
The Yankees' autumn surge, eighteen victories in 21 games this month to cool the pressure of the Baltimore Orioles, has muted critics and confounded psychologists.
Has the Yankees' sudden spurt been the result of the boss' public spanking a month ago? Or is it just a coincidence, a part of the natural ebb and flow of a long, arduous campaign? Most observers will subscribe to the latter view. It's the natural character of sport — win some, lose some, slump and spurt, have patience and everything ultimately will fall into proper place.

That certainly is the view shared by most of the players — those chastised in newspaper headlines and over the air waves as well as those who never felt the lash of the owner's whip.
"Let the man have his fun," they say. "It doesn't affect us. We are pros. We have bad days, we have good days but we always give an honest day's work for an honest dollar."
But who's going to tell that to George?

He is a campus hip, hip and holler guy — stemming from his assistant athletic director days at Purdue — in a calloused professional world. He believes in the old lockerroom hype that largely went out of style with Stag and Rockne. Moreover, Steinbrenner regards the Yankees as his personal toy. He provides the mechanism. He winds it up and makes it dance to his own tune.
Even his most vocal detractors — the Billy Martins, Sparky

Lyles and others whose sensibilities he has offended — concede he is a man of rare instincts. The Yankees' comeback to their old peak of baseball eminence is evidence of that.

Yet few find justification for his periodic lockerroom intrusions — although basically it's his lockerroom. Press criticism pours over his head like falling rain. A New York sports cartoonist chides the Yankee owner by putting a steel German helmet on his head and referring to him as "Herr Steinbrenner."
It was just a month ago that Boss George stuck his thumb into a dripping Yankee pie and pulled out a plum of a controversy.

The Yankees, who had a 9½ game lead in mid-July, suddenly went into a tailspin, losing six out of eight games to arch rival Baltimore and continuing to lose ground on a trip to the West Coast. The once-fat cushion melted to half a game.
That's when Steinbrenner, sitting in his Tampa office with the team 3,000 miles away, erupted like Mt. St. Helen's. The team wasn't producing, he charged. He singled out Rick Cerone, Eric Soderholm and Bob Watson for criticism. He said pitchers Ron Guidry and Tom Underwood weren't carrying their load.

He even took a stab at Reggie Jackson, whose productive bat had carried the club through the hot summer months, and dropped a veiled threat to his rookie manager, Dick Howser. Win or lose, he inferred.

The whole clubhouse seethed. The press had a field day at the expense of one of its favorite targets. Steinbrenner was royally roasted — deservedly so, many felt.

The rest is history. In the ensuing weeks the Yankees played phenomenal baseball to pull away from the red-hot, mound-rich Orioles.

Quick now, Did George do it? Did his blast arouse tired blood? If so, it defies all psychological logic. Everybody knows modern ball players are hardened sophisticates, immune to that "Win for the Gipper" mush. It was all just an accident.

O'K Sued For Divorce

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina basketball star Michael O'Koren has been sued for divorce by a former UNC cheerleader who said O'Koren refused to announce their marriage and called it "a joke."
In a suit for divorce filed in Burke County Superior Court, Kimberly Renee Cline O'Koren — a native of nearby Drexel who now lives in New York — accused the 6-foot-7 O'Koren of "beating her with the fist and hands, pulling her hair and choking her" during the marriage.

O'Koren, who signed a contract last week with the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association, confirmed the marriage when he was contacted at the Nets training camp but he said they had never lived together.
The couple was married in Gaffney, S.C., by a probate judge on March 19, 1978, one week after North Carolina's basketball team had been eliminated — with O'Koren playing on an injured ankle — from the NCAA national playoffs.

Mrs. O'Koren, known on the UNC campus as O'Koren's girlfriend, was a cheerleader at the school.
O'Koren said Tuesday the whole situation was "pretty messed up."
"I'm sorry things like this have to happen. My lawyer is handling it, and I'm sure everything will be OK," he said.

In her suit, Mrs. O'Koren asked for alimony and a legal separation pending a divorce hearing. The exact amount of alimony sought was not disclosed, but the suit said O'Koren's contract with the Nets calls for payment of $250,000 a year and that he will pay $80,000 over the next three years for sponsoring sports equipment.

O'Koren, an all-Atlantic Coast Conference team member last year, was a first-round draft choice by the Nets. After several months of discussions between the team and his manager, O'Koren agreed to a contract and reported to the training camp last week.

Mike O'Koren

UNC-Terps: Close Call

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — On paper 14th-ranked North Carolina and 19th-ranked Maryland are close — real close.
In the preseason polls, the Tar Heels were picked to win the Atlantic Coast Conference championship. But Maryland was close behind.

And when the two teams meet in UNC's Kenan Stadium Saturday, Tar Heel football coach Dick Crum says the two teams will be real close.

But at his Tuesday press conference, he disagreed with the talk about town that says this game will decide the ACC title.

Crum said the game was important, but, "We can't go out of our minds out there. We have to play controlled or we won't have anything left for the rest of the games."

Aside from the rest of the conference schedule, both teams have a couple of tough games coming up. After Maryland, UNC takes on Georgia Tech and Oklahoma. Maryland has the prospect of facing Pitt and Penn State.

The game, though, is interesting from a number of angles. Both teams are unbeaten this season. North Carolina is 2-0 and Maryland 3-0. But going back to last year, Maryland has won seven straight and UNC five straight.

The Terps have been known for their defense for quite a while. This year is no exception. But Crum thinks his team matches up physically and defensively with Maryland.

"It will be a real intense football game," he said. "Both teams are evenly matched. Defense is obviously their long suit and it is ours also."

On paper the defenses could be twins. The Terp defense is giving up only 131 yards rushing and 121 passing. The Tar Heel defense is giving up 119 yards rushing and 129 passing.

Offensively the paperwork is similar too. Maryland is picking up 232 yards on the ground each game and 90 yards passing. North Carolina is running for 266 yards a game and getting 88 passing.

The Tar Heels would seem to have more offensive strength than Maryland with tailbacks Amos Lawrence and Kelvin Bryant, plus fullback Billy Johnson. But Maryland has tailback Charlie Wysocki who has run for more yards (470) than anyone in the nation this year so far. He has gained more than 100 yards in each of the Terps three games. And he is No. 4 in the nation in average yards per game with 156.7.

But Crum is not overlooking the Terps 6-foot-7 quarterback Mike Tice.
"He is their most underrated player," Crum said. "So many of their drives he has kept alive. Plus he's the only quarterback I know that can block on the sweep."

North Carolina has had the week off since its 9-3 win over Texas Tech. Crum said that time helped heal some bumps and bruises suffered in the game. Offensive guard Ron Wooten is the only question mark, but he is recovering quickly from a pulled muscle and could play.

But even with the bumps and bruises, Crum said the game against the Red Raiders was good preparation for Maryland.

"They are both very physical teams," he said. "We needed that type of game to get ready for Maryland. We caught their (Texas Tech) best effort of the season. Going in there and surviving, that means a lot for us."

Girls' Tennis Roundup

Williamston 7, Ahoskie 2

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School rolled up a 7-2 tennis victory over Northeastern Conference foe Ahoskie yesterday.

Williamston swept through the singles without losing a set as it insured the victory with a 6-0 lead before the doubles got underway. Ahoskie managed to win the number two and three doubles, but to no avail.

Williamston is now 3-3 overall, and plays host to Washington on Thursday.

Summary:
Mary Grace Baker (W) defeated Theresa Soomsawadi, 7-5, 6-3.
Amy Griffin (W) defeated Andrea Cook, 6-1, 6-0.
Regina Rodgers (W) defeated Betty Davis, 6-0, 6-1.

Rose 4

Wilson Fike High School won two of the three doubles matches and gained a 5-4 tennis victory over Rose High School yesterday.

The two teams split the singles, each winning three. Wilson came back to win the number one and number three doubles, however, to gain the overall victory.

The loss was the first in Division I play for the Ramettes, who are now 3-1 in league play. They are 3-2 overall.

Pirates 4 Back

Family About To Bite The Dust?

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Is the family about to bite the dust?
The Pittsburgh Pirates won the National League and World Series championships last year with the theme song "We Are Fam-A-Lee" illustrating their team unity and spirit.

But with only two weeks left in the 1980 season, the Pirates are 3½ games behind Philadelphia and four behind the NL East-leading Montreal Expos, who celebrate each victory with taped renditions of "Another One Bites the Dust" by the English rock group Queen.

The Pirates' family bit the dust Tuesday night as Steve Rogers pitched a three-hitter and the Expos scored six runs in the sixth inning on the way to a 7-1 victory.

"It's nice to hear that music again," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams.

The Expos theme song was selected by outfielder Ellis Valentine, who currently is back in Montreal with an ailing wrist.

"Ellis started playing it. He's not here, so I play it every time we win — and somebody bites the dust," said Rowland Office.

Pittsburgh tasted defeat on Tuesday, but can they come back in the last 11 games?

"It's not going to be easy, but we've been in tougher spots this and come back," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

"We've got to keep winning and hope we get some help," said Pittsburgh infielder Phil Garner. "We're not out of it by any means, but we've got our backs to the wall."

The Pirates, who despite the loss won 12 of 18 games against Montreal this season, have no games left with the Expos or Philadelphia, which fell out of first place with a 6-3 loss to St. Louis and one-half game behind.

Rogers had a no-hitter until there were two outs in the fifth and lost his shutout in the sixth inning on Omar Moreno's walk, a stolen base, a fly ball and Mike Easler's infield hit. Moreno also singled in the eighth and stole his 91st base.

Cards 6, Phillies 3
Al Olmsted won his first major league decision and knocked Philadelphia out of first place by holding the Phillies to three hits through eight innings.

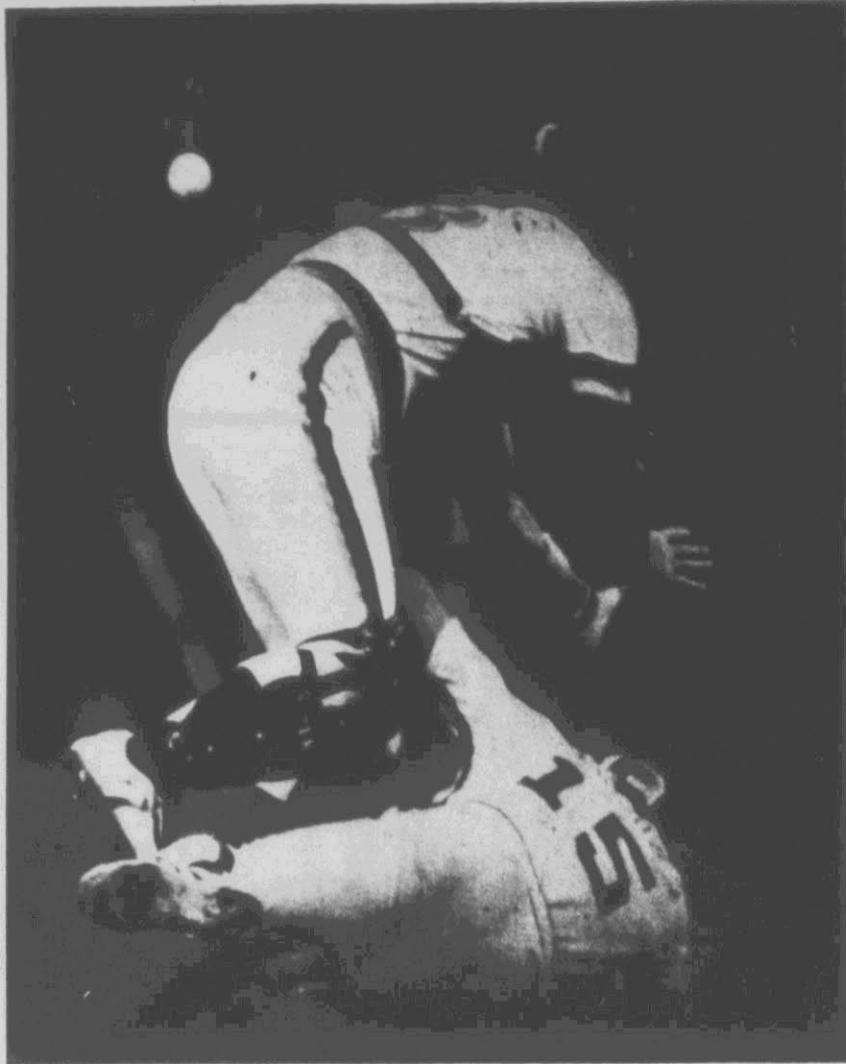

"I said all along it's going to be a dogfight until the very end," said Phillies Manager Dallas Green. "The race will probably go down to the last three-game series in Montreal."

Padres 9, Astros 4
San Diego batted around in both the fourth and fifth innings, when it scored all its runs, as Houston saw its lead sliced to one game.

Broderick Perkins drove in three runs singles in both innings, Luis Salazar had a two-run single in the fifth and Tim Flannery drove in two with a sacrifice fly and a groundout. Starter John Curtis, 9-8, scattered 11 Houston hits for a complete-game victory.

Dodgers 4, Braves 2
Los Angeles broke a seven-game losing streak against Atlanta as Derrel Thomas had three hits, knocked in a run and scored two.

Bob Welch, Bobby Castillo and Don Stanhouse combined to scatter nine hits as Los Angeles defeated Atlanta 4-2

Tuesday night to snap a four-game losing streak and move to within one game of Houston in the National League West.

Bob Welch, 14-9, shut out the Braves on five hits before leaving in the seventh because of a pulled groin muscle. Bob Castillo, who gave up Dale Murphy's 30th homer of the season for Atlanta's runs, and Don Stanhouse finished for the Dodgers.

Reds 2, Giants 1
Frank Pastore retired the last 19 San Francisco batters and Dan Driessen knocked in the winning run with an eighth-inning single as Cincinnati stayed in the West race.

Pastore, 12-7, struck out six and walked three while allowing no hits after the third inning.

Cubs 6, Mets 5
New York scored five runs in the ninth inning, but Bruce Sutter came in to get the final out for his 28th save.

Mike Krukow, 9-15, had a three-hit shutout going into the ninth, but the Mets broke loose with RBI-singles by Lee Mazzilli and Elliott Maddox, a run-scoring double by Steve Henderson and Joel Youngblood's two-run double.

Ivan DeJesus drove in two runs for Chicago and three of the Cubs' runs resulted from two errors by New York pitchers.

O's Playing 'Scoreboard'

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Baltimore Orioles are playing "scoreboard" these days, a game familiar to contenders in a pennant race.

And they didn't like what they saw Tuesday night — the New York Yankees rallying in the ninth inning to beat the Cleveland Indians 5-4.

"The Yankees have done it all this year," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, whose own team had just beaten the Boston Red Sox 8-6. "I wonder how they got their runs this time. It's always interesting reading the next day how they did it."

It was only a couple of minutes after trooping into their Memorial Stadium clubhouse that the Orioles learned of the Yankee comeback, the 20th time they had won this year in their last turn at bat.

"It can't be any more disappointing with a win," said Weaver. "It's very disheartening, but we'll just have to keep pushing."

The night's results left the Yankees five games in front of the Orioles with 11 games remaining.

Elsewhere in the AL, Oakland defeated Chicago 6-4; Seattle beat Kansas City 7-3; Toronto outscored Detroit 9-7; California edged Milwaukee 2-1 and Minnesota turned back Texas 8-2.

Al Bumbry's two-run single with one out in the eighth inning, following two Boston errors, capped a three-run rally that helped Baltimore beat the Red Sox.

The Red Sox had taken a 6-5 lead in the top of the inning, scoring on an RBI-single by Garry Hancock and a sacrifice fly by Dwight Evans.

Reliever Tim Stoddard, 5-3, gained the victory.

Yankees 5, Indians 4
Eric Soderholm's two-run pinch-single with two out capped a four-run rally in the ninth for the Yankees.

After being frustrated for eight innings by Wayne Garland and trailing 4-1, the Yankees began their comeback when Garland walked Bucky Dent and pinch hitter Bobby Murcer to start the ninth. Reliever Mike Stanton later gave up RBI-singles to Bobby Brown and Bob Watson.

Sid Monge, Cleveland's bullpen ace, replaced Stanton, 1-3, and was tagged by Soderholm's game-winning hit.

"That is the second best hit I've ever had in the big leagues," said Soderholm. "In 1977, when I was with the Chicago White Sox, I hit a three-run homer off Doug Bird in the ninth inning to beat Kansas City and put us five games up in late August. This ranks real close."

A's 6, White Sox 4
Tony Armas hit his 34th home run of the season, a three-run blast in the seventh inning to lead Oakland over Chicago.

Armas, who increased his RBI total to 100 with the homer, helped A's pitcher Rick Langford stay on target for a 20-victory season. Langford, 18-11, is scheduled for two more starts this season.

Mariners 7, Royals 3
Jerry Narron hit a three-run homer and Dave Edler and Willie Horton added solo shots as Seattle beat Kansas City.

Seattle right-hander Jim Beattie, 5-13, scattered six hits and snapped a six-game losing streak with his first victory since July 3.

Kansas City's George Brett had one single in four at-bats, dropping his major league-leading average to .391.

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 7
Roy Howell knocked in three runs with a pair of homers and a bases-loaded walk and Ernie Whitt singled home the tie-breaking runs in the ninth inning as Toronto defeated Detroit.

With the score tied 7-7 in the ninth, John Mayberry drew a walk off Detroit reliever Dave Rozema, 6-9, and Al Woods singled pinch-runner Willie Upshaw to third. Whitt then delivered his two-run single.

Angels 2, Brewers 1
Rookie Freddy Martinez and two relievers combined on a four-hitter and Dickie Thorn stroked a two-run single to lead California over Milwaukee.

Martinez, 7-7, needed relief help in the ninth from Don Aase and Andy Hassler after giving up a home run to Cecil Cooper, his 23rd. Loser Mike Caldwell, 13-11, shut out the Angels through the first six innings, but a bases-loaded single by Thon in the seventh brought home California's winning runs.

Twins 8, Rangers 2
Butch Wynegar knocked in three runs with a pair of singles, leading Minnesota over Texas. Loser Ken Clay, 2-3, allowed only five hits in 61-3 innings but walked three batters in the Twins' four-run first. Clay was the victim of a throwing error by second baseman Bump Wills, which allowed two runs to score, and Wynegar's two-run single in the first.

Wynegar's fourth-inning single scored Glenn Adams, who had tripled, to give the Twins a 5-0 lead.

Freedom 1 Win Away

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Even the weather smiles on Freedom skipper Dennis Connor, who is now only one victory away from wrapping up the 24th successful defense of the America's Cup.

The challenging Australians, down 3-1 in the best-of-seven final, have been reduced to the unenviable position of second-guessing the weather.

They gambled Tuesday and lost the 24.3-mile match by three minutes, 48 seconds, the largest margin enjoyed by the American boat during the series.

Freedom took today off, leaving the fifth, and probably final, race of the series for Thursday.

Australia went to the Rhode Island Sound course with a mainsail tailored for the stiff 30-knot winds called for in the weather forecast. It wasn't the proper attire.

"We were ready for heavy weather...It turned out to be the wrong choice, because the wind didn't come in," lamented Australian challenge head Alan Bond.

"Unfortunately, we just didn't have enough speed with that mainsail," he said at a post-race news conference. The racing rules prohibit yachts from changing their mainsails during the race.

Connor, who has made few mistakes during his relentless campaign to protect the New York Yacht Club's grip on the Cup, had a larger mainsail on Freedom which was ideally suited for the winds that ranged up to 15 knots.

"For us it was just a case of trying to sail conservatively and not making any mistakes — pretty uneventful," he said.

Even with the proper sail, the Australians were a long shot to win in the moderate breezes. Freedom has repeatedly proven itself the faster yacht in anything over 10 knots.

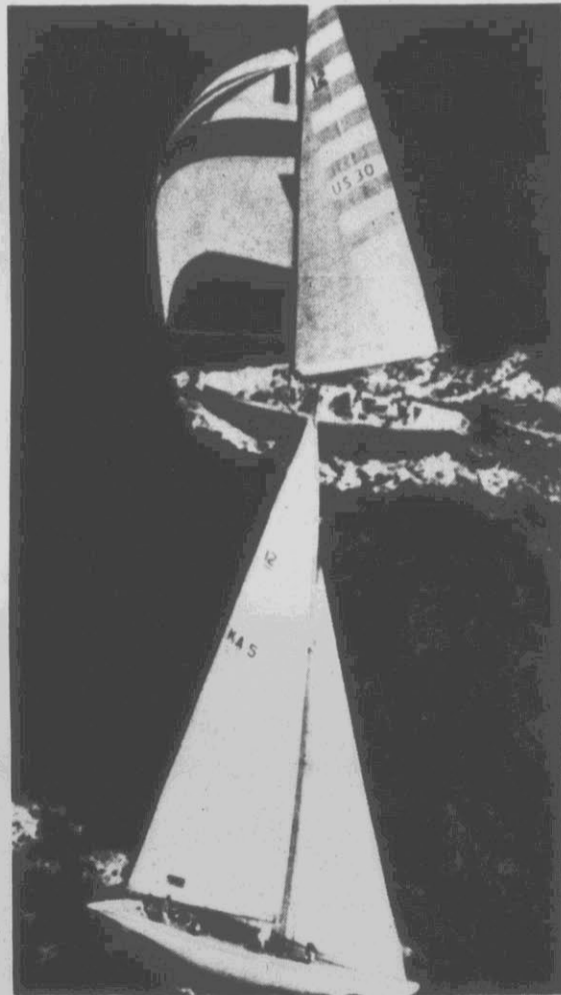

However, Bond said Australia's regular mainsail — a composite of lightweight synthetic fibers — would have given them a fighting chance.

"Every day we've used that sail we've been competitive with Freedom. Today we weren't competitive," he said.

It was no contest Tuesday. Australia trailed Freedom by ever widening margins on all but two of the six legs of the course.

After the race, radio traffic between Bond, on Australia's motor tender, and his shore base indicated the Australians were still hoping to outfox the fickle weather.

Bond, leary of the 20-knot winds predicted for today, wanted to use another lay day.

Ships That Pass

Freedom, top, heads downwind with her spinnaker set while Australia steers for the windward mark that Freedom has rounded with a two-minute lead. Freedom won handsomely Tuesday and now needs on more win to capture the America's Cup. (AP Laserphoto)

His staff said the forecast called for even stronger breezes on Thursday and argued for a showdown on Wednesday.

"You haven't been right yet," said Bond before yielding reluctantly.

But the Freedom group made it a moot point by asking for the day off.

"It's a question of guessing the weather," said Edward duMoulin, manager of the Freedom campaign. "We'd prefer to have the lay day when the wind is light, so we're going to gamble that it will blow up good Thursday."

Hawks Sign Top Choice

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks signed Don Collins, their No. 1 draft choice, to a National Basketball Association contract late Tuesday, ending an 11-day holdout.

"We have a final agreement that is consistent with our last position," said Hawks General Manager Stan Kasten. He declined to discuss details.

"My first Atlanta Hawk uniform tomorrow. Man, that's going to trip me out," said the 6-foot-6 forward-guard from Washington State. "The Hawks came to a figure I liked and now I am real excited, real excited. In four years I hope to become a superstar and put Atlanta on the map...not that they are not already."

"I'm happy it is resolved," said Hawk President Mike Gearon. "It represented a compromise. I'm confident Don will work hard, but it will be necessary for him to do so."

On Monday, the Hawks said Collins was either to report to the team by midnight Tuesday or they would withdraw their contract offer and any new offer would be smaller.

Princeton-Rutgers

71 Games Later, Pair To Meet For Final Time This Year

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

They are only 17 miles apart in Central New Jersey, Princeton and Rutgers, but they are getting farther apart all the time in their football philosophies.

And so it is that come Saturday, 111 years after they played what is generally considered to be the first intercollegiate football game, Princeton and Rutgers will call it quits after their 71st confrontation.

Forever? There are no plans to resume the rivalry.

Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, is upgrading its football program, scheduling teams like Penn State, Tennessee, Alabama, Auburn and Pittsburgh, some of them in 76,000-seat Giants Stadium in the New Jersey Meadowlands.

Rutgers defeated Tennessee a year ago; Ivy League Princeton lost to Brown, Colgate and Yale and is adding new opponents like Army, Navy, Delaware and Maine.

"I'm sorry to see it end," says Rutgers Coach Frank Burns, who has beaten Princeton four years in a row. "There are a lot of reasons why the rivalry should continue. The two schools are only 17 miles apart. We could hitchhike down there. It doesn't cost very much."

"We're not totally out of their class. The Ivy League may not have athletic scholarships but they sure spend a lot of money recruiting throughout the country and they get good athletes."

According to Princeton Coach Frank Navarro:

"We feel this way about this game — our program is one that we have to deal with in our own way. We have to play teams that will help our recruiting and help our alumni see our team. We feel it's in our best interests to play some other people."

"Everybody is billing this as the last game, but I won't do that. Colgate is going off our schedule, too, you know. And there have been some breakoffs before."

True, Princeton and Rutgers didn't meet from 1897-1911 and again from 1915-1933. But except for 1951, they have played every year since 1945. And it is Princeton which owns a 53-16-1 advantage.

Saturday's game will be played in Rutgers Stadium, just across the Raritan River from New Brunswick, where the two institutions first banged heads with 25 men a side on a patch of ground where the Rutgers gym now stands.

Although Rutgers won that first meeting 6 goals to 4, the school newspaper reported that "the appearance of the Princeton men was very different from that of our own players. They were almost without exception tall and muscular, while the majority of our twenty-five are small and light."

Nowadays, it is Rutgers which has more and better athletes, although Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, an alumnus of Ivy League Brown, says that "all it would take is 10 or 12 days of spring practice for the Ivy League to be competitive."

But, according to one Princeton official: "Obviously, they (Rutgers) were going their own way. We weren't going to change."

And, says Royce Flippin, former Princeton football star and athletic director, "Football is one of the most difficult sports to play a clearly superior team."

Larry Csonka, Floyd Little, Jim Brown, Ernie Davis, Joe Morris. Who?

Morris, only a junior, needs only 13 yards to pass Little and become the second leading rusher in Syracuse University's history. Before the season is over, the 5-foot-7 speedster should pass Csonka and become No. 1. That's who.

Morris helped Syracuse inaugurate its new $27 million Carrier Dome Saturday night by carrying 32 times for 170 yards and returning three kickoffs for 130 in a 36-24 victory over Miami of Ohio. He scored four touchdowns.

"It was another routine game for Joe Morris — a great one," said Coach Frank Maloney. "He's had so many of them for us."

Field Hockey Team Blanks Deacons, 2-0

WINSTON-SALEM — The East Carolina field hockey team made a successful debut against Wake Forest Tuesday with a 2-0 shutout.

The Lady Pirates struck swiftly, scoring only 15 seconds into the game. Co-captain Donna Nicholson got the score with an assist from Carol Belcher.

Wake Forest, meanwhile, did not get a shot off in the first half as the ECU defense held the Lady Deacs at midfield.

Wake Forest, now 1-2, fired only four shots in the second half, all of which were stopped by veteran goalie Jane Radford. On the other side, ECU had all six of its second-half shots turned aside.

"We had a 50-50 shot of winning," coach Laurie Arrants said. "But we played a good midfield game and that made the difference."

The Lady Pirates face High Point College Oct. 2 with a doubleheader at home Oct. 11 against Catawba and Davidson.

Rose High School's girls' cross-country team held its first meet ever yesterday and came away with a victory.

The Ramettes finished with 30 points, while Northern Nash had 31 and Wilson Fike had 70.

First across the line was Carol Edwards of Northern in 23:38, followed by teammate Sonya Dunn in 23:43. Rose placed Heather O'Neal third in 24:13, with Linda Winstead of Rose fourth at 24:30. Donna Spoles of Fike was fifth in 24:51.

Rounding out the top ten were Kathy Queen of Rose, 25:21; Paula Evans of Northern, 25:39; Bobbie Holloway of Rose, 26:07; Tammy Mayo of Rose, 26:19; and Ernestine Perry of Northern, 26:47.

Other Rose finishers were Maria Howard, 12th in 28:32; Faith Lee, 18th in 30:58; and Lisa Koonz, 20th in 32:04.

The Ramettes play host to Northeastern on Tuesday.

The Ramants travel to Charlotte for the Charlotte Invitational on Saturday.

EC Golfers Sixth In Invitational

FAYETTEVILLE — East Carolina University's golf team finished sixth in the Methodist College Invitational Golf Tournament, which wound up yesterday at Cyprus Lakes Golf Course. The Pirates finished the event with a 618 team total.

First place went to North Carolina, which had a team total of 588. Second was Campbell with 604, while Guilford and Greensboro tied for third with 610. N.C. State was fifth with 614.

John Inman of Carolina was the individual winner with a 72-75-147 total.

Steve Jones led the Pirate scoring, making the top ten with a 74-77-151 total. Don Sweeting came in at 76-79-155, while Mike Moye had 76-80-156 and Mike Helms had a 79-77-156.

"We played three golfers here who had never played in a tournament before. We were experimenting; that's what the fall is for," Coach Bob Helmick said. —The score were high all around due to the extreme heat."

East Carolina's next action will be Oct. 3, 4, 5 at the James Madison University Invitational at Groundhog Mountain Old Mill Golf Course in Laurel Fork, Va.

'Dull Men' Unite, Form A Club

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Troise is a dull guy. And proud of it.

"The country is really run by a lot of supposedly dull people who never get credit for anything," Troise contends. "Like the guy who turns on the lights at the Super Bowl."

Troise has issued a call: Dull men of the world, unite! He has started the Dull Men's Club and claims a membership of about 350 nationwide. Early publicity "apparently struck a nerve with dull men everywhere," he says.

It's a club for people who don't know Perrier from tap water, Guccis from Hush Puppies, for people who drive Chevy Novas instead of Porsches, who go bowling instead of disco dancing, who eat hamburgers instead of sprouts.

"We're out of it and proud of it," is the club's motto. "It's sort of a response to trendiness," Troise says. "Packaging has become so important ... that it's filtering down from products to people and people are beginning to package themselves ... Picturing yourself as dull is really a good way to relax."

In a letter to prospective members, Troise bemoans "the tragedy of overawareness." He complains that "experience-starved overachievers ... seem totally bent on turning America into one, giant Montessori School for Adults."

"Don't waste another minute of your precious time, another penny of your precious paycheck, another finger of your precious energy, trying to be interesting," says Troise's letter. "BE DULL!"

"You know what a good time is," Troise assures his readers. "Reading a book, eating an apple, sipping a cold beer in the shade, playing with your kid, petting the dog."

A former teacher and businessman, Troise now does "not much" — writing automotive books and working on cars.

He says too many people push too hard for success. "Look at the lilies of the field ... you don't see them trying to horn their way into fern bars ... The troublemakers, by and large, are the overachievers."

"The Dull Men's Club is for people who are too modest to grab the prize; too nice to trample all over people," Troise says.

News of the club has brought in hundreds of letters, Troise says. One theme continually recurs: A stable marriage, a nice, dull job. "They're sort of telling you this is their lot in life and it's not so bad. They're glad they don't have Gucci loafers and $300 jogging suits."

Dull Club members come in all ages, from all parts of the country, although there seem to be concentrations in Texas, Michigan, Florida and California, Troise says.

"I got one letter from a 10-year-old kid who said he was a little dull now but figured he'd get duller as he gets older."

No women are allowed, however. "This is a gentleman's club. And what could be duller than that?"

Troise says he's not worried that dullness itself will become chic. "It's not really possible. I suppose it could have some imposters. But they'd give their hand away at the first instance that being dull would cut them out of something."

So far, the club's activity list has been, in a word, dull.

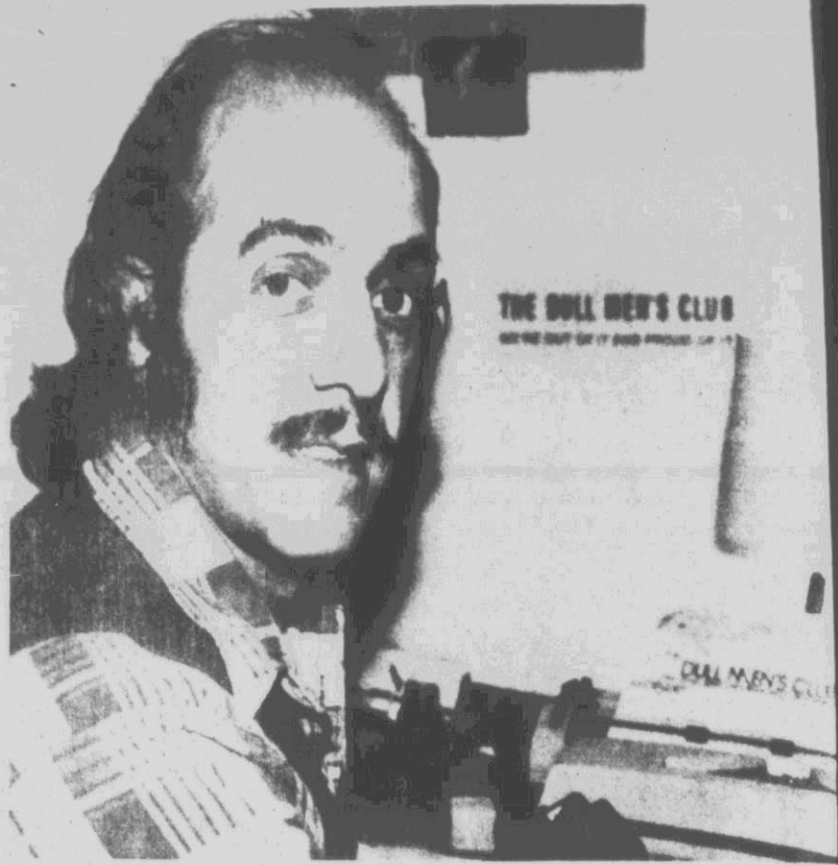

But Troise says he plans to liven things up a bit. "Something like a big beans and franks dinner in San Francisco," he suggests. Or "computer dating for dull people ... You know it's going to be a dull time. You don't even have to try to be impressive."

He plans to launch a Dull Hall of Fame. "Robert Young is one of our heroes. He was the typical, nice-guy father." Other all-star dull figures include Vice President Walter Mondale and actor Nigel Bruce, who played Dr. Watson in Sherlock Holmes films, Troise says.

The museum would be housed, together with a museum of the ordinary, "in a one-story cinderblock building" in Carroll, Iowa, Troise says.

Why Carroll? It's a town with an unusual number of flying saucer sightings, and Troise says he's intrigued that "an intelligent race would come millions of light years and they wouldn't go to Los Angeles or New York. They're perfectly happy to be in this little cow town. Maybe they're dull too. I think there's a great message there."

Exiles Build A Thriving Village In Forestlands

By MARTHA HONEY
Associated Press Writer
ULYANKULU, Tanzania (AP) — Eight years ago Ulyankulu was an uninhabited forest, but today it is a thriving village with schools, medical facilities, a sports center, a hotel and even a disco.

Refugees fleeing tribal massacres in neighboring Burundi have made it so.

Ulyankulu and similar settlements in Tanzania provide a home for a total of 200,000 refugees in what Tanzanian officials call "refugee settlements," rather than "refugee camps."

"We want refugees to become productive and, in the process, to regain their self-respect," explained an official of the Tanzanian Ministry of Home Affairs.

In the early 1970s Tanzania received 100,000 refugees from Burundi, members of the majority Wahutu tribe who fled attacks by the minority Watutsi who are alleged to have slaughtered an estimated 100,000 to 200,000 Wahutu.

The refugees arrived frightened, ill, hungry and often wounded. After receiving food and medical attention from missionary organizations, they were taken to Ulyankulu and similarly uninhabited locations chosen because they were potentially fertile.

The Tanzanian government, with help from the United Nations High Commission for Refugees and the Lutheran World Federation, gave each family used clothing, blankets, pots and pans, farming implements, seeds and enough food for a year.

Today Ulyankulu is thriving, producing a bountiful surplus of food and boasting 10 primary schools, 63 adult education centers, 32 day-care centers, a hospital and five satellite dispensaries. A refugee-run cooperative society has built a hotel, a disco center, a sports stadium, a post office, cooperative shops and established a herd of dairy cattle.

Merikani Mandanazi, 49, a refugee with three wives and 16 children, came here seven years ago. Sitting outside his neat, mud-walled, thatched roof house with a newly purchased radio blaring in the background, he recalled:

"It was when we thought the whole (Wahutu) tribe would be eliminated that we decided to flee our country. Six of my brothers were butchered by the Watutsi. But a Wahutu couldn't complain to a government official about such things. The only answer he would get would be that he would be killed. The Watutsi were killing even pregnant women."

"We are grateful to this country's President (Julius Nyerere) that we were received warmly. When we arrived we were given enough food and we began clearing the land. We are now safe. We are now self-reliant in food."

The refugees have been told they can stay as long as they like and to take their time deciding whether eventually to return to Burundi. If they stay they are welcome to become Tanzanian citizens.

About 38,000 refugees from Rwanda, Watutsi who fled massacres by the Wahutu in the early 1960's, are expected to become Tanzanian citizens this month.

Tanzania has room for the refugees because it is underpopulated with large tracts of fertile, uninhabited land. It has an average of about 60 people per square mile. Burundi has more than 500 per square mile and no available arable land.

Tanzania has even considered a proposal by Burundi to absorb one million Burundi citizens, nearly a quarter of its population, to relieve overcrowding and settle unpopulated areas of Tanzania. The scheme fell through early this year because Burundi insisted Tanzania should pledge never to allow the resettled people to become Tanzanian citizens.

A similar proposal by Rwanda, with nearly 600 people per square mile, is currently under consideration.

In all, about $10 million has been put into Ulyankulu by the Tanzanian government and international agencies.

The last of the international agencies left last June and the settlement now pays its own way.

The Tanzanian government still has 200 people working in the settlement as administrators, teachers, medical assistants and agricultural advisers. But all facilities here are now open to Tanzanians from the surrounding countryside.

'Egg Basket' Is Answer-Source

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Do birds aim?"

That's one of the questions posed by the Egg Basket. And there are at least 2,000 more:

"Can a duck drown?"

"How deep does a worm dig?"

"What do you believe in without a doubt?"

"If people are good, why does the bad rule the world?"

The Egg Basket is a dictaphone hooked up to a private telephone line. It's the creation and current obsession of Debbie, who asks the questions and hoards the responses.

So far, there have been about 40,000 callers.

"The machine only holds a one-hour cassette," says Debbie. "So I have to go home every hour during the day and get up each hour at night to change the tape."

Debbie started Egg Basket 35 weeks ago, when she realized she had more questions than answers. So she filled a cassette with questions and invited responses with a two-line newspaper advertisement.

"I never dreamed the line would grow to the proportions it has," she says. "Now I'm quitting my job to stay home and tend the Egg Basket."

And she's trying to find radio stations to play some of the responses, so everyone will know how others feel about such subjects.

"I'm just trying to find out who ordinary people are, what we talk about and care about," she says. "We spend so much of our time trying to act normal that we never talk about what is important to us."

One of Debbie's favorite questions probed the social differences between the sexes: "Is 'tomboy' a nicer word than 'sissy'?"

"I also liked, 'How does a fool feel?' because so many people were afraid to answer that," she says. "It was like admitting they'd felt foolish, but I think many of us have at one time or another."

Callers didn't like what Debbie calls her "bathroom questions," nor did they like a question on homosexuality. She has avoided asking how people define "macho" "because I'm afraid of the response."

Those questions will be saved for a book, says Debbie — who asks that her last name not be used because she feels it might detract from her goal of impersonal communication.

The book, which still lacks a publisher, would be in two volumes: one asking questions ranging from the light-hearted to the intensely personal; the second a compilation of the responses.

"I've always wanted to take a mass survey and ask thousands of thousands of people what caused violence, or how they felt when they found out there was no tooth fairy," says Debbie, who estimates she has spent $6,000 of her own money so far on Egg Basket.

"Maybe one day it will be self-supporting," she says, "so I can continue with it."

'No Sweeter Music' Than Steam Engine On Tracks

By RHONDA COOK

ATLANTA (UPI) — "Hear that," Prichard Hobson shouted above the thundering, rhythmic clacking of the steam engine on the tracks. "That's music to your ears." Hobson and four other old-time railroad men are examples of how even the near-extinction of the steam engine can't stop them. They simply found an alternative — keeping a 1919 steam engine running at Stone Mountain, a park east of Atlanta.

The 62-year-old Hobson along with Brunell Barker, T.H. Buddy Lewis, Charles Meinsen and Robert Wingard have about 2½ centuries of railroading experience behind them, most on steam engines.

"There's nothing like sitting and listening to a steam engine talk to you," said Hobson, sticking his head out the window of the engine for a better look. "You can make a trip of hundreds of miles and it'll never talk to you the same way."

"This is love and romance — the steam engine," Hobson, who was wearing blue striped overalls and a cap and a red kerchief tied around his neck, said as he ran the chugging engine around the base of the granite mountain. "When they did away with the steam engine, they did away with love and romance."

Hobson, unlike the other four men, has not passed his retirement age yet. However, he was forced to retire to the dispatch office for Southern Railway after an on-the-job accident cost him his left leg. He had been responsible for fueling the huge boilers on the engines before the accident.

Brunell Barker, the feisty 72-year-old railroad veteran who almost single-handedly maintains the engines, has worked on steam engines for 47 years.

Barker, whose white sideburns and white pencil-thin mustache are the only hints of his age, said when "they got rid of those old steam engines, they like to took the spirit out of the railroad."

"I don't even pay attention to the freight trains now, though I live right near the tracks," he said. "What they got today ain't nothing like steam. I'd rather have steam 2-to-1 than diesel."

Barker, who says he knows every detail of the imposing black engines, had been a boilermaker with the Georgia West Point line 28 years when he was laid off in 1958.

Boilermakers were the hardest hit when the diesel engine came on the scene. Diesel locomotives were first used for passenger service in 1934 and for freight service in 1941. By 1955, more than 50 major railroads had done away with all their steam engines and no new steam engines were being bought.

"I can take them apart and put them back together again," he said, sitting in the depot at the park. "Being around these steam engines is the best thing I've ever done. I don't really like any job but working on the railroad."

Just outside Barker's shop, which was converted from a cell block of the defunct Stone Mountain prison, sat two steam engines.

Bob Wingard, who is nearing his 80th birthday, is a frail man. He seems even smaller as the locomotive thundered past him and he waved it to a stop. He began helping passengers off the train with the old-fashioned gallantry he has polished in his 65 years of railroading.

Buddy Lewis and Charles

"Amtrak" Meinsen said they weren't ready to quit when they were forced to retire.

"I always wanted to be a railroad man," said 76-year-old Meinsen. "If I had just sat down in the living room and not turned my hand for nothing, I'd have been gone long ago."

"I work because I like to," he said as he turned his black conductor's hat in his hand. "Ever since I was 12 years old, I've worked and I'm not going to quit until I have to."

Meinsen said he spent 47 years with the Chicago-Burlington-Quincy Railroad and couldn't face retirement.

The face of 78-year-old Lewis, leaning back in a chair inside a former railroad car, brightened as he recalled his early days on the rails.

When asked did he want to retire after 47 years with the railroads, Lewis said "never — I don't want to go home and do nothing."

Hobson pulls smoothly into the depot, looking at the controls in the sizzling engine with respect. Hobson smiles and says, "I love working on this railroad."

CRYPTOQUIP 9-24

CUTSIN KIDPANIK CATDPIC C

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — MORNING FINDS MOURNING MOUNTAIN LION CALLING FOR DECEASED MATE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

There are players who have a fetish about falsecarding—it seems beneath them to play the natural card to any trick. While at times they will succeed in fooling declarer, more often than not they only manage to bamboozle partner.

The ideal time to falsecard is when, even if partner is misled, it is unlikely to cost a trick. Here's a classic case.

North-South bid easily to their slam in spades. North's hand was worth 14 points in support of spades. When he offered a jump raise, South's hand revalued to 20 points (1 point for the fifth trump). With first- or second-round control in every suit, South paid homage to Easley Blackwood and settled in the small slam when he discovered that his side was missing two kings.

Had West made a passive lead, declarer would have chalked up his vulnerable slam in quick time. He would win any plain-suit opening lead and lay down a trump honor, felling the queen. It would be a simple matter to draw trumps and then take the heart finesse to see if he could make an overtrick.

Unfortunately for declarer, West chose this moment to make the diabolical lead of the nine of trumps. In light of the bidding, West thought it unlikely that his partner would be tempted into making some fatal play because he misread the trump situation. But see what effect his lead had on declarer.

South was sure that West would not be leading from the queen of trumps against a slam. Therefore, East had to have that card. The lead also suggested that East had the ten of trumps. If East started with three trumps, declarer could now pick up the suit without loss. So he played the jack of spades from dummy. Suddenly, West had a trump trick as well as the king of hearts, and declarer ended up down one.

Tootsie's Orchid Lounge Raises Hopes

By JOE EDWARDS
 Associated Press Writer
 NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When urban cowboys get Saturday night fever in Music City U.S.A., they strut to Tootsie's Orchid Lounge where aspiring country music singers hype the hope that a dazzling career is only a step away.

Tootsie's is Nashville's most famous beer joint, just a Texas two-step from the former home of the Grand Ole Opry. It's where the starry-eyed singers and pickers get up and sing for tips, or for nothing, with the hope that a record executive or someone famous will bound out of the crowd, offer a contract and put them on the road to fame and fortune.

There's no mechanical bull, as in the John Travolta movie "Urban Cowboy," and no flashing lights as in his "Saturday Night Fever."

But occasionally a celebrity like Johnny Rodriguez will show up to drink a beer (or two or three or, well, you get the idea) and mix with the friendly regulars and tourists.

One recent Saturday night, the featured entertainer was Mark Brine. But when Brine took a break, Jack the Drifter and Jessie Fletcher took turns getting up and showing the folks what they can do.

Jack, a 60ish, slender fellow wearing a string tie, didn't say where he was from, but told the 25 or so patrons he has known country music singer Webb Pierce for 30 years.

Fletcher, who appeared to be about 35, said he is from Ft. Wayne, Ind., and has "had a record out."

There's polite applause after each number, and some foot-stomping and whistling from those who've become well acquainted with the beer. But there are some who chatter constantly — even during the singing.

A couple of people wander in for directions to the bathroom. It's to the right in the back.

A young couple standing in front of a pinball machine in the rear ask Brine to play "Faded Love." Brine complies with an instrumental version, but the couple wasn't disappointed by the lack of vocals.

"Wasn't it beautiful?" the man says.

About the same time, a casually but neatly dressed antique dealer from Murfreesboro, Tenn., comes in and is impressed by a young woman named Linda who is accompanying Brine on the fiddle.

"That girl on the fiddle is good," he says to a patron.

When there's a momentary lull in the music, a young man taps a cowboy hat-adorned patron on the shoulder and says: "Hey, cowboy. I'm a caricaturist and I'd like to draw your picture. I'm good, and all you have to do is stand there. It's just $2 and it won't take long."

Rebuffed, the man with pad in hand shuffles over to the bar where an attractive young woman says yes.

playing songs like "Orange Blossom Special" and "Rocky Top," a couple from Louisiana begins dancing in a narrow aisle.

Bobbie Beasley, who runs the place, asks them to quit because it's against the law. They comply meekly.

Amid all the music are appeals for tips.

"Remember we're playing for patrons every hour or so. "Would someone volunteer to pass the hat?" he asks. A young woman standing in the

The Would-Be Assassin Is Unrepentant

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Imprisonment has done nothing to shake Sara Jane Moore's belief that her attempt to assassinate Gerald Ford five years ago was the right thing to do. But now, 50 years old and serving a life term, Ms. Moore says her days as a would-be presidential assassin are over.

"I'm not at this time a potential assassin of anyone," she said in a telephone interview from the Federal Correctional Institution at Alderson. "The fact that I'm well-known, I've been in prison and my age, well it's not a role for me. I can be more effective in other ways, like writing or speaking, rather than as an assassin."

It was Sept. 22, 1975, outside a San Francisco hotel, when she pulled a .38-caliber revolver from her purse and fired a single shot at the president. Her aim was deflected by an alert former Marine in a crowd of onlookers and Ford was whisked away unhurt.

It was the second attempt that month on Ford's life. Seventeen days earlier, Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, a member of the Charles Manson family, aimed a .45-caliber pistol at him in Sacramento. The gun failed to go off, and Miss Fromme is serving her sentence in a California prison.

"Given the politics of this country and my own situation, I have no problem with what I did," Ms. Moore said, calling assassination a "valid political tool."

The United States has encouraged the assassination of foreign leaders, such as Chilean President Salvador Allende, so it should expect the same in return, she added.

She talks about politics, but says little of her personal background.

"Frankly, I found out the government does not know that much about me. And I'm not going to help them," she said.

Divorced, Ms. Moore said that "as far as I know I have no relative left except for a son in California."

According to police reports and news accounts, she was born Sara Jane Kahn in a log cabin in Charleston, W. Va., married twice and had four children. She worked as a bookkeeper, was a member of San Francisco's underground and acted as an informant for the FBI.

Now, she spends her days doing needlepoint, reading and writing. "Unfortunately I've spent a good portion of my time watching TV because I've been sick," she said.

She will be eligible for parole in 1985, but Ms. Moore said she thinks "the first chance I would have would be the 30-year mark, which is 2005 for me."

But "I don't plan to die in prison," she added.

She and another woman scaled the prison's 12-foot fence in February 1979 and got 30 miles from the minimum-security facility before being captured. She said she'd jump at another chance to escape.

"I'm a prisoner and I want to be free. Given half a chance, would I? You'd better believe it."

The escape landed her in the "control unit for solitary confinement" and she staged a 79-day hunger strike to protest her detention.

200,000 Miles Of Pipe Risky

EMMAUS, Pa. (UPI) — Some 200,000 miles of asbestos cement pipe, in use throughout the country for supplying drinking water, poses a potential health threat to untold numbers of Americans, according to one environmental expert.

These pipes, which came into common use after World War II because they were cheaper and lighter than the traditional cast-iron pipes, are beginning to disintegrate, according to Carol Keough in a new book "Water Fit to Drink."

She writes that as the pipes deteriorate asbestos fibers are released into drinking water supplies. She says the Environmental Protection Agency is hesitant to order these pipes torn up.

Wood Tick Said Very Patient

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (UPI) — The common wood tick may be the most patient creature in the world, according to an article in the September issue of Country Journal magazine.

After mating, the female tick sits on the tip of a branch and waits for a warm-blooded animal to pass underneath, the article reports. She cannot see or hear and can only smell the animal, and she does not eat while waiting. When an animal comes along, she drops onto it and burrows into its skin, filling up with the blood she needs to nourish her young. Researchers say she can wait as long as 18 years for an animal to show up.

WHY YOU GET A MORE UP-TO-DATE NEWSPAPER WITH THE MACHINE ON THE RIGHT THAN WITH THE MACHINE ON THE LEFT.

As a reporter types a story on the keyboard, the words appear on the video screen. An editor can then call the story onto his own VDT to make any needed corrections and give the story a headline. The edited story is then transmitted to a storage unit that can hold 48 million characters at one time. This storage capacity allows a reporter or editor to call back a story within seconds to add last minute updates. This insures that you are reading the most recent news report available to you.

Some of the things the terminals can't replace are the news judgement, common sense, integrity and intelligence of the reporters at THE DAILY REFLECTOR. Experienced people plus new technology working together to make your newspaper the best it can be—so you can be the most informed citizen, the most value-conscious consumer and the most secure individual possible.

That's why THE DAILY REFLECTOR puts advanced news reporting first.

'The Ayatollah Of Guayaquil' Wants A Moral City

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer
GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador
(AP) — You can't buy a beer on Sunday in this sweltering equatorial seaport. The sheriff won't allow it.

Guayaquil, with a population of more than 1 million, is Ecuador's largest city, located two degrees south of the equator on the wide and muddy Guayas River.

And until Sheriff Abdallah Bucaram was appointed by the Ministry of Government last year, it was a typical tropical port with all-night dance halls, exotic women and a sensuous climate reputed to induce a measure of laxity in public morals and attitudes.

But when Bucaram instituted strict adherence to a set of 16 rules he himself calls "Abdallah's Commandments," disgruntled citizens quickly nicknamed him the "Ayatollah of Guayaquil."

Bucaram, whose grandparents were Lebanese immigrants, is a Roman Catholic, as are most of the thousands of people with Lebanese backgrounds in Guayaquil.

His 16 commandments, tacked to the wall behind his desk, implore the citizenry to love their country and to respect motherhood.

They tell those with modern plumbing in their homes to share the facilities with less fortunate citizens. Merchants are ordered to stick to official food prices and doctors are warned to maintain reasonable fees.

The commandments prohibit the sale of fireworks, playing soccer in the streets, selling alcoholic beverages all day Sunday and after midnight other days, throwing water-filled balloons during carnival, bribery, extortion and all other crimes.

"You will take your paycheck home. Don't leave it in the canteen," says the 16th commandment.

Bucaram strictly enforces his personal interpretation of the law.

He has sent 3,000 men to jail for urinating in the streets. He routinely closes bars which serve drinks after hours and confiscates overpriced groceries, distributing them free to shantytowns.

He once shut down the city's top three hotels, ordering their guests out of their rooms in the middle of the night, because the owners allegedly treated his inspectors rudely.

He has collected the equivalent of $1.3 million in fines in one year, more than previous sheriffs accomplished in 50 years.

Dressed in an open-necked, tropical shirt, a cross dangling on a chain around his neck, Bucaram claimed in an interview that he was the first honest sheriff in Guayaquil's history.

He is at least well-connected politically. President Jaime Roldos is his brother-in-law. His uncle is Asaad Bucaram, a powerful member of Congress who is locked in a perpetual power struggle with Roldos.

The sheriff sides with Roldos, calling him "the greatest man of all Latin America for being the youngest president of all time." Roldos is 39. Bucaram is 28.

Bucaram denied his attitude toward law and order and public morals was the "act of an intransigent ayatollah." He said the dry laws had reduced traffic accidents and crimes on Sunday and saved some wages for wives and children.

Still, the sheriff's style draws mixed reactions.

Guayaquil theater owners went on strike after he closed a theater for showing "Luna," a film by Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci which deals with incest between a mother and son.

The Association of Bars, Restaurants and Taverns protested his dry laws by filing a complaint with the national Tribunal of Constitutional Guarantees, demanding Bucaram's political rights be suspended.

The Tribunal agreed the dry laws had no legal basis and recommended the Ministry of Government apply administrative sanctions against him. The case is pending.

In the meantime, Bucaram — who says the Tribunal's ruling would only guarantee "the right of the Ecuadorean people to make brutes of themselves with alcohol" — continues to enforce his commandment against late-hour and Sunday liquor sales.

And in the capital of Quito, the newspaper "El Tiempo" editorialized about "our home-grown Khomeini" and reported how he reacted to a woman who entered his office wearing a dress with side slits.

The newspaper said Bucaram turned his back on his visitor, told his secretary to lend her needle and thread and ordered her to sew up the slits in her dress.

When the woman had finished, the newspaper said, Bucaram explained that he was protecting her from men less saintly than he.

Soldiers Take POW Lessons

FORT GORDON, Ga. (AP) — Soldiers at Fort Gordon are doused with water, tied to trees, forced to stand in barrels of water and insulted in grueling interrogations by their comrades — just to show them what it's like, officials say.

The 7th Battalion conducts such weekend sessions to train its soldiers in case they are captured in wartime, Master Sgt. William Engquist said in a telephone interview.

The unit recently began the program because yearly classes and films on prisoner of war conduct "don't stick with you that much," Engquist explained.

Judging from the reactions of those who went through the weekend training stints in the deep woods locale, the experience will probably stick with them for the rest of their lives, he added.

In an attempt to simulate conditions during the first 72 hours of imprisonment, the unit built a crude stockade and an interrogation unit. The structures are intended to resemble a POW assembly unit behind the front line.

The cardinal lesson for would-be POWs is to keep their eyes peeled for escape possibilities.

"The holding area where we imprison the students is not escape-proof. It is Army doctrine that the best time to escape is as soon as possible after capture. We try to instill this," Engquist said. "You don't have the prison experts there, and you are closer to your own lines."

Before the lesson begins, the platoon is briefed on a scenario leading to its capture — information to be extracted by the enemy.

According to the Geneva Conventions, a POW is required to give only his name, rank, serial number and age to the enemy. The U.S. Armed Forces forbid a prisoner from giving further information.

But as soon as they enter the compound, Engquist said, the POWs are handed "Red Cross" forms asking for personal information, job skills, next-of-kin, their signatures and other information the enemy may find useful. Engquist said it is the first test for the prisoners, who are not supposed to sign the forms.

The captives are then stripped, supplied with POW uniforms and forced to walk into the holding pen on their hands and knees. Next the interrogation begins.

Engquist said the mock POWs are not abused because the Geneva accords prohibit torturing prisoners — but neither are they pampered.

A frame built between two trees forces a prisoner's legs apart and his arms into the air. Another technique is to make a soldier stand in a barrel of water up to his chest for about an hour in what the sergeant called "just a plan to make you feel uncomfortable and disoriented. When you're disoriented, you say things you shouldn't say."

A "sweat box" is maintained for stubborn prisoners, and sleeping is out.

Carbon Black A Thai Product

ANG THONG, Thailand (AP) — A new 16,000-ton capacity carbon black plant here, owned by Thai Carbon Black Co., supplies the principal building material for Southeast Asian manufacturers of automobile tires and other rubber products. Carbon black is a major ingredient in tires to increase tread wear. More than 90 percent of all carbon black is used in the rubber industry.

The facility uses technology licensed from Phillips Petroleum.

Anger In India Over Crimes Against Women

By SANJOY HAZARIKA
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The crimes of rape, bride burning and dowry demand, reportedly on the rise in India, are causing a nationwide furor, reflected in street protests, heated editorials and irate speeches by politicians.

Indian newspapers carry daily reports of rape and sexual assault on women, some allegedly by policemen.

In June, several police officers were accused of stripping and raping a housewife in the dusty northern Indian town of Bahgat. One of the accused was shot and killed on the street by the rape victim's brother-in-law. An investigation is continuing; none of the men has been tried.

Protests by women's organizations have increased since that incident, and the news media have been giving increasing attention to the problems of women in this tradition-bound, predominantly Hindu nation of 660 million.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government has presented legislation to Parliament which would establish sentences of two years' hard labor for people who demand gifts and cash from a bride's family.

The legislation also seeks to toughen rape laws by specifically providing jail terms for police officers convicted of the offense. Current laws do not differentiate between policemen and other offenders.

An official Indian commission has joined the fray with a report backing the proposed two-year prison term for dowry offenders and also recommending a fine of 10,000 rupees, about $1,250.

The current maximum penalty for demanding dowry is six months in jail and a 5,000-rupee fine, but convictions are few.

A woman sometimes "is tortured in every possible way and even deprived of marital rights" if she does not bring sufficient dowry to her in-laws, said the government report.

The report cited numerous cases of harassment and, in some cases, even murder by husbands or in-laws if women fail to provide sufficient dowries at the time of their weddings.

Dowry takes several forms, ranging from cash payments to household goods such as furniture, refrigerators, air conditioners and sometimes even motorcycles and cars.

Police statistics show 69 women were burned to death in New Delhi last year because of low dowries. Few of the cases have been successfully prosecuted.

Already this year, between January and July, 67 dowry deaths have been reported. Social workers and women's leaders say the real figure is far higher because many cases go unreported.

Rape is also on the rise. According to Home Affairs Minister Zail Singh, 3,281 rapes were reported to police throughout India in 1977, and 3,781 the following year. More than 4,000 rapes were reported in 1979. Again, women's leaders say the actual figures are much higher — that many rapes go unreported because of the stigma attached to them.

Women in India face discrimination from birth. For centuries, the birth of a son has been deemed a gift of god; a daughter is regarded, at best, as a disappointment.

"Even in educated homes, the female infant gets less nourishing food," says sociologist Promilla Kapur. Others agree that the attitude of neglect follows women through life.

Tara Ali Bail, president of the international Union of Child Welfare, says many Indian men believe sons are better because "you must have sons to look after you in your old age."

The majority of Indian women live in villages under conditions of grinding poverty where the struggle for survival takes precedence over everything else. Often married off as teen-agers to strangers of the same caste or community, rural women have little say in how their lives are molded.

A majority are illiterate, their lives centering around producing children, toiling in fields foraging for and preparing food and, according to the tradition of the extended family, remaining at all times subservient to husbands and in-laws.

"They are unsafe on the streets and discriminated against at work. At home they are often worse off: reduced to slavish drudges, they are maltreated in a hundred different ways," reported the news magazine, "India Today."

Few women have forged independent careers for themselves. Most of those who have, like Mrs. Gandhi, come from educated, privileged or rich families. Official figures show that only 2.5 percent of Indian government workers are women.

The attitude of some top officials has also been blamed for slowness in tackling the problems.

"There are much more serious things happening in

Subhadra Butalia, a lawyer and anti-dowry crusader, disagreed.

"India has a woman prime minister who is aware of the problems of her sex," Mrs. Butalia told a reporter. "Women seek no charity. Dignity and equality are their birthrights. If they are denied them, they will fight."

Future Answers 'Just Emerging'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twenty percent of the nation's industrial energy needs in the year 2000 will be met by technologies that are only just emerging now, an energy-oriented publication forecasts.

The publication, Energy User News, estimates the industrial demand for energy that year will approximate 35.9 quadrillion BTU's. Of the 20 percent from new sources, the journal predicts 11 percent will come from biomass, consisting mostly of wood and agricultural waste; the remainder from co-generation (the production of two forms of energy such as electricity and power steam from a single source), geothermal energy including solar; and other sources such as industrial heat pumps.

Two pessimistic forecasts from the journal: the contribution of solar energy by the year 2000 will be "negligible" and the United States will not be energy self-sufficient even by 2020.

PROTEST LENCE — Indian women in New Delhi carry signs as they protest reported lenient treatment of rapists at a rally near the Parliament House in June of this year. Rape, bride-burning and dowry demands are reportedly rising in India. (AP Laserphoto)

Artists Go 'Back Home' To Lebanon

By KATE DORIAN
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — "My roots are here and this is where I find my inspiration," says Hrair Diar Bekirian, one of Lebanon's most prominent painters and the latest artist to return from self-imposed exile in Europe.

Hrair, known only by his first name, joined a mass exodus of artists and intellectuals at the start of the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war after his downtown Beirut studio was destroyed in the fighting.

The 32-year-old Armenian Christian returned in July from Paris and set up shop in mostly Moslem West Beirut.

"Being in Paris only increased my feeling of patriotism and I began to revert to Orientalism in my paintings which is something I haven't done in a long time," said Hrair in an interview in his seventh-floor, rooftop apartment overlooking the Mediterranean Sea.

Prior to the war, Lebanon was considered the cultural capital of the Mideast with some 30 prominent artists, five theater troupes and dozens of well-known writers.

Gradually, the artists have been returning to Lebanon even though sectarian strife continues. Experts say about 10 of the most prominent painters have returned recently and a slow-paced revival is under way.

Hrair, a surrealist whose paintings fetch up to $40,000 each, says he has resisted any temptation to portray the sufferings of war.

"I refuse to let violence and pessimism appear in my work and I refuse to commercialize on violence," said the raven-haired artist, dressed in a dark silk shirt open to the waist and wearing a diamond-encrusted pendant in the form of the letter "H."

"My paintings portray beauty, peace and hope, which is what the Lebanese need most of all. They have had enough of violence," added Hrair in his characteristically low-pitched voice.

Hrair's apartment is relatively unpretentious with few of his paintings on display, apparently to discourage theft. But what he describes as his "favorite" work dominates the living room.

Covering most of one wall, the painting is the melancholic depiction of a ghost-like city at sunrise with gray the predominant color. The effect of the vertical streaks is of a city weeping.

"It is natural to feel anguish for my country and maybe this is evident in my choice of colors," explained Hrair, who says he paints in more somber tones than before the war.

Hrair has participated in over 40 Lebanese and international exhibitions and plans two showings in the near future, one in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, in the fall and one in either Beirut or New York next spring.

Turning To Bottled Gas

NEW YORK (AP) — Rising gasoline prices may force American motorists to emulate many European drivers — using bottled gas as a cheap means of locomotion for the family car.

Bottled gas or propane or liquified petroleum gas (LPG) was once considered a useless by-product of oil production and is in plentiful supply.

As a result some motorists are converting their cars to a dual gasoline-LPG carburetor so that either fuel may be used, according to James C. Hollingsworth, LPG sales manager for Borg-Warner, a division of which has been making the dual carburetors for more than 40 years.

"While Americans may be a step or two from widespread conversion of the family car to a dual carburetor," says Hollingsworth, "LPG use in Europe is not unusual. In parts of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg you can fill up with LPG at the corner gas station."

Lead Poisoning Risks Claimed

NEW YORK (UPI) — People renovating old houses themselves are potential victims of lead poisoning, says Dr. Alf Fischbein, of the Environmental Sciences Laboratory at New York City's Mt. Sinai Medical Center.

Fischbein says stripping old buildings of their lead-based paint can release dangerous amounts of lead into the air.

To protect yourself, he recommends wearing a proper respirator while stripping the paint and cleaning up afterward.

Work in only one room at a time and keep the windows open for good ventilation. Seal that room off from the rest of the house while you work and avoid eating or smoking while you work.

When you've finished for the day, shower and wash your hair.

Fischbein's warning and advice appears in the medical column in the Sept. 23 issue of Woman's Day magazine.

Old Hotel For Ladies May Soon Face Extinction

Annual Floods Take Toll Of Indian Lives

By SANJOY HAZARIKA
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Every year, hundreds of Indians are swept to their deaths by swollen rivers or die in mudslides and house collapses caused by heavy monsoon rains that inundate nearly one-eighth of the country.

News reports say this year's death toll is nearing 1,500. Most of the casualties have been reported in Uttar Pradesh state in northern India, where more than 1,200 people have died and hundreds of thousands have been made homeless.

An official estimate says that rivers, swollen by melting snows from the Himalaya mountain range and heavy rains, also destroy crops and property each year worth the Indian rupee equivalent of about $375 million. Most of the devastation is reported from the valleys of the Ganges and Brahmaputra Rivers.

The rainfall is seasonal and usually heaviest between June and September, but uneven in timing and geographical distribution, meaning massive floods followed by drought.

Army troops and district officials often send boats to rescue thousands of marooned people. Many are placed in relief camps. Sometimes, cholera epidemics are reported after the floods recede.

Road traffic is disrupted, trains halted and long-distance communications interrupted.

Flood control is one of India's biggest problems and an expert says the destruction will continue for some time because of inadequate funds to tackle the problem.

"Our problem is poverty," said Pritam Singh, a flood-control expert on India's Central Water Commission.

In the last 25 years, India has spent about $1.25 billion on flood-control measures. These include the strengthening of river banks, construction of dams and a few reservoirs to hold the flood waters plus flood forecasting measures, soil conservation and the planting of forests.

India proposes to spend the same amount on flood control in the next five years but Singh said five times as much is needed to have any effect.

An estimated 99 million acres of land are prone to flooding every year. Until now, the government has arranged for "reasonable protection" to about one-fourth of this area through various measures.

"But in extreme cases, such as periods of very heavy rain, even this protection may not be sufficient," Singh told a reporter.

Authorities say little has been done with regard to soil conservation and the planting of forests as a means of preventing land erosion.

Large parts of the Himalaya foothills have been stripped of forests by contractors who sell the timber for firewood and construction purposes.

A report by the Uttar Pradesh government claims that forest officials accept bribes from contractors and, in return, permit them to fell trees even in woods which are officially off limits.

A tree conservation movement has been launched in the area by social workers and members of local tribes, who in some cases, defy logging operations by squatting against the trees.

Heavy rains in the wake of indiscriminate tree felling have caused severe erosion in northern India, making flood control even more difficult.

In the plains areas, however, much of the destruction is caused by the population squeeze on space and the swiftness of urban settlements near rivers, Singh said.

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Barbizon Hotel for Women, dowager of New York's inns and home-away-from-home for generations of cultured young ladies, may soon follow elbow-length gloves and high tea into high-toned extinction.

The consortium of Arab and Indian businessmen who own the 53-year-old hostelry at 63rd Street and Lexington Avenue will close the hotel at year's end, converting it into offices or apartments.

Barbizon guests, many of them now elderly, are balking, quietly campaigning to keep the hotel open. But Barbizon officials say they work in vain.

"We tried to find out whether a women's hotel would work in 1980. Having been associated with the hotel for almost six years, I tell you, 'No,'" said manager David Teitelbaum.

The hotel did work in 1927, when it opened. For most of the half-century that followed, its 686 rooms were occupied by such women as Grace Kelly, Cloris Leachman and poet Sylvia Plath, who referred to it as "The Amazon" in her novel "The Bell Jar."

To live at the Barbizon, a woman needed three references. Looks, bearing and dress were all among the criteria for admission.

"There were some difficult times, but essentially the hotel was very successful, snobbish," said Teitelbaum. "It was available for the socially prominent, successful families to send their daughters."

Hugh Connor was there in the old days. Now 80, Connor managed the hotel from 1944 to 1972, and he remembers those days well. His time there, he says, was "the highlight of my life."

"The social director would have afternoon tea, to help the girls get better acquainted," he said. "We had programs at night: Tuesday night was usually a dramatic night or for the debut of young pianists and singers; Wednesday night was the card games or similar games with prizes; and then Thursday night was usually a discussion night."

Male visitors were never allowed upstairs to the 8-foot-by-12-foot rooms; they said good night to their dates in nooks off the lobby.

The nooks remain, along with a tiled pool, a sun roof and an oak-paneled recital room, where guests once played a pipe organ.

Connor recalls receiving calls from Judy Garland — she could not reach her daughter, Liza Minnelli, in her room, and wanted to know where she'd gone.

He remembers Grace Kelly as "a very nice girl." "Use all the adjectives or superlatives you want," he told a reporter. "She was my favorite."

The warm atmosphere and security that Connor remembers, along with the Barbizon's convenient location on Manhattan's East Side, kept the hotel busy until the late 1960s, Teitelbaum said.

"The movement was at that point for women to integrate," said Teitelbaum. "All of the colleges integrated at that time — Vassar, Radcliffe, all of them used to support this hotel. ... All of the socialites, all of the people who had previously come here, would go to a regular hotel. The hotel just lost its appeal."

Faced with declining patronage, the hotel panicked. Rents were cut, and now are $19 and $26 a day. It didn't work.

Extensive renovations were made. The old green-and-yellow decor was changed to chocolate browns and earth tones. The chandeliers were polished, new carpeting bought. The owners promoted heavily, stopped taking tenants at unprofitable monthly rates and no longer demanded references.

The hotel now makes a small profit, Teitelbaum said, but on a recent day — when most hotels in town were fully booked — Barbizon occupancy was 64 percent.

The hotel was bought earlier this year for $10 million by Barbilex Inc., whose investors include Oberoi Hotel Management Co. of India and Fuad Abdulla, a Saudi Arabian merchant. Teitelbaum said the owners want to make the Barbizon an apartment or office building or a hotel for both sexes.

Teitelbaum now is trying to relocate the hotel's permanent residents, seeking rooms and apartments throughout Manhattan. "We prefer them to be relocated before construction," Teitelbaum said. "But if by January, we don't have them relocated — and I hope that's not the case — we will start construction around them."

In response, hotel residents formed the Barbizon Tenants Association, and hired an attorney, Leonard Lerner, who has told them they "have a right to stay under the law."

Guests of all ages have joined the association. They range from Christine Lusk, a 31-year-old lawyer who has lived there for four years, to Alice Sachs, a Democratic Party activist who has lived in the same room of the hotel since 1935. Her mother, now dead, moved into the Barbizon when it opened in 1927.

They have an ally in Connor, the former manager, who hopes the Barbizon will survive to serve yet another generation of young women: "It was an institution in New York and in the country. It will never be replaced."

HOTEL IN ITS WANING DAYS — The entrance to New York's Barbizon Hotel for Women has admitted generations of cultured women since its opening in 1927. Now the 686-room hotel will close at year's end. (AP Laserphoto)

Mother Deters A Name-Change

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y. (AP) — If his mother agreed, former 1960s activist Abbie Hoffman says he would legally change his name to Barry Freed, the name by which he was known during most of his years as a fugitive.

"My home is here in the islands, my friends are here, the river I love is here and besides, the only ID I have is my fishing license, and that says Barry Freed," Hoffman told the Thousand Islands Sun.

Changes In Bar Over 60 Years Come Down To One

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — After 60 years as a white bar owner in Harlem, the changes come down to one thing for Fritz Owchuito: There's now a buzzer lock on the restroom door.

"Whattaya, crazy?" he bellowed. "The bums, they come in here, use the bathroom, no buy anything." Stopped and bald, the 83-year-old Fritz — no one uses his last name — patrols his 36-foot bar at Lenox Avenue and 125th Street much as he has since taking over the place in 1920.

"It was a sportin' joint in those days," he said with a wink and a quick glance around his Three Pheasants Bar and Grill. It appears to have changed little since those Prohibition days when the booze was poured under the table.

The mahogany walls bear dozens of photos of boxers like Joe Louis, Jack Sharkey, Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey, and baseball players like Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig.

"Sure, they all came in here," Fritz hollered. "This was their hangout, their neighborhood joint. Sure, they lived around here then. Whatayya, crazy? Harlem had the best apartments in New York."

Fritz, whose given name of Gaspar was quickly forgotten when he immigrated from Italy at age 15 and went to work for a Dutchman, also had an Italian menu that attracted many 1920s mobsters.

"Frank Costello, Lucky Luciano, Dutch Schultz, all them," Fritz said through one of his 10 daily stogies. "Capone? Sure, he was in here once in 1926."

Fritz said he always seated the gangsters at a quiet rear table and then left them alone to talk.

"Whattaya, crazy?" he demanded. "If I had heard their business, they would have offered me a free ride and I wouldn't be here today."

His only other secret of longevity in the bar business was to avoid drinking himself.

"I never did," he shouted. "If you drink it, you can't sell it."

In the Roaring '20s, he allowed bookmakers to operate rent-free out of his upstairs.

"Rent? Whattaya, crazy? They brought in a lot of business."

Fritz, a widower, has given his grandchildren the baseballs Babe Ruth gave him, but trophy heads of 14 deer Fritz shot are still mounted on the walls.

His patrons nowadays are almost all "colored people" from the neighborhood who don't give him any more trouble than the 1920s celebrities who may have thrown out any black man who tried to order a beer in the place.

with the money," he shrugged. "Colored people are all right."

"He's all right with me, too," said Kenneth Phipps, 66, who has been a regular since he was one of Fritz' first black customers in the early 1930s. "He's my friend."

But Fritz often wishes — loudly — that he had sold out before he became the only white businessman on his block 20 years ago.

"I was too busy then," he said. "I wasn't so old. I was doing all right. Please, no talk about business now."

However, he has no plans for his retirement even if he does find a buyer.

"I'm 83 years old," he fairly screamed. "How long do I have to go? I'm going to go home and take a rest. I'm tired. Plans? Whatayya, crazy?"

Bus Drivers To Wed On A Bus

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — They are Phoenix Transit bus drivers. They met on a bus. So they are going to get married on a bus.

Amelia Hart and Dave Kirkpatrick met a few months ago when Miss Hart was modeling the female driver's uniform in a training class for other drivers, including Kirkpatrick.

"I walked into the class of 30 and that's where the romance began," she said. "There was just something about the look he gave me."

A few days later, they struck up a conversation when Miss Hart gave Kirkpatrick and another driver a lift to the terminal in her bus.

"He found out I was available and I found out he was available," Miss Hart recalled. "He is the man of my dreams."

Feature Film Production Up

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Feature film production was up 35 per cent in Los Angeles over last year before the actors' strike, according to the city's Film Development Committee.

Television series production had increased six per cent during the same six-month period.

Antibiotics Likely Played Role In Past

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press Writer
AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Large doses of a naturally occurring antibiotic in their grain may have given an ancient Sudanese people protection against infectious disease, a University of Massachusetts research team has found.

The drug was a form of tetracycline, a broad spectrum antibiotic, now produced synthetically, that came into popular use after World War II, the researchers said.

Scientists have long been puzzled by the seeming immunity to some diseases of isolated groups who lacked access to modern antibiotics. And the finding offers evidence some antibiotics occur naturally.

The discovery by the anthropology team, headed by George Armelagos, were announced today by the university and the National Science Foundation, which sponsored the research.

"From this we may be able to determine how the presence of antibiotics may have affected the health of ancient people and learn something of how resistance to antibiotics developed," Armelagos said.

The initial discovery was made "accidentally" two years ago by Margaret Keith, a graduate student, who was studying slivers of bone taken from an ancient Sudanese Nubian cemetery, Armelagos said.

The research group had been studying the bones of the remarkably healthy ancient villagers as part of its research into osteoporosis, a disease that causes thinning of the bones, he said.

When the microscope Ms. Keith had been using became unavailable, she examined the bone slivers with an ultra-violet fluorescence microscope and detected the characteristic pattern of tetracycline, he said.

The bones, dating from 350 A.D. to 550 A.D., had been excavated 13 years earlier by a UMass team near the village of Wadi Halfa, about 600 miles south of Cairo, as part of the "Save the Monuments" program sponsored by the United Nations. The area is now flooded by the Aswan Dam.

"We could have made the discovery 13 years ago... but I assumed at the time that tetracycline was a synthetic antibiotic and disregarded it. I always say my graduate students are more astute," he said.

The researchers determined that the most probable source of the tetracycline found in the bones of a large segment of the village population was a mold-like bacteria, called streptomycetes, common in the desert soil of the Sudan.

"It most probably came from the wheat, barley and millet they stored in mud bins," Armelagos said. "We don't think they realized they were taking antibiotics or that they were taking them constantly. It causes a very bitter taste in the grain, and it was most probably used only seasonally or in times of famine."

"If they were taking it regularly, they should have built up some resistance and we are working on that angle now," he said. "One of the questions that has been puzzling researchers is how population groups, such as isolated tribes in northern Borneo, who had no known contact with modern antibiotics have developed resistance factors to them. Until now the conventional thinking has been that there was some contact we didn't know about."

Working with Armelagos and Ms. Keith on the bone study project were Everett Bassett of UMass and Antonio Villanueva of Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit.

Refugee Has Put Sums In Wasteland

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
KFAR BEIT, Lebanon (AP) — Faisal Abu Khadra is one of the few Palestinians in troubled South Lebanon who never carries a gun. Instead, the 44-year-old refugee has poured the equivalent of $8 million into his private battle with the rocky, waterless, hilly terrain.

His goal is to prove Arabs, like Israelis, can make a wasteland bloom.

"It is always said the Israelis developed land that would have remained idle and desolate in the hands of the Palestinians. This proves it isn't so," Abu Khadra told a reporter as he drove along a bumpy dirt road leading to a newly planted citrus grove.

The farm, which he said is turning a profit for the first time since he bought 500 acres surrounding this village in 1975, is 10 miles southeast of the seaport city of Sidon and less than 20 miles from the nearest point on the Israeli border.

Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese allies control much of South Lebanon, clashing almost daily with the Israeli-backed Christian militia of Saad Haddad, a former Lebanese army officer.

The thud of artillery is frequently heard on his farm and a Syrian MiG jet was shot down in his olive grove last summer during a dogfight with Israeli warplanes.

Abu Khadra, who has built a palatial villa on a hilltop overlooking his farm, does not have to live here. He has three Arab passports and is estimated by business associates to be worth at least $60 million.

"I live here so that when I get up in the morning I can smell the breezes coming from my land, Palestine," he said. "This is as close as I can get."

Abu Khadra said he comes from a farming family that lived in Jaffa, now part of Israel, until they fled when he was 12 in 1948 following the creation of Israel as a nation.

Starting as a delivery boy in Damascus, Syria, Abu Khadra piled up his fortune in the oil-rich Arab states on the Persian Gulf where he still works as a contractor, building ports and other projects.

But he said his first love remains with the farm where he raises olives, oranges, mandarines, honey bees, and enough dairy cattle and vegetables to feed the 100 or so employees.

There is also an egg factory with 20,000 laying hens run by two Britons and a stable of 120 Arabian racing horses, described by Abu Khadra as the largest racing stable in the Middle East.

On a 2,600-foot high hilltop, Abu Khadra has built a castle-like villa with an Olympic-style swimming pool, fountains with colored lights, canvas-shaded terraces, a sauna, gymnasium and automated barbecue for roasting lamb.

In the Shiite Moslem village down below, pictures of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran are plastered on the walls while the cross of a Maronite Christian Church commands a hilltop nearby. Abu Khadra has donated a new secondary school to the village.

Despite the conflict between Moslems and Christians in Lebanon and the artillery duels in South Lebanon, Abu Khadra is proud that his enclave has remained peaceful.

Annual Report Via Television

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Nobody ever sold free enterprise with charts and financial tables, so Emhart Corp. went where the action is — television.

The multi-national manufacturer recently beamed its annual report into shareholder homes in eight states. The 22-minute videotape digest of the 44-page report was transmitted via Satcom 1 to 22 cable television stations serving 100 communities where the company estimates it has the highest shareholder density. The total audience was pegged at one million.

Psychic Has Glimpse Of The Future

By MARK CRANE
Associated Press Writer

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — Dorothy Allison never wanted to be a psychic, but she just couldn't turn off the horrifying pictures that kept popping into her head.

"When I was 14, I had a vision of my father's death. I hated my power then and tried to disregard what I knew," says the 53-year-old, who is credited with helping police solve 13 murder cases and locate more than 50 missing children.

The Jersey City-born woman just shrugs her shoulders at skeptics and points to the awards and citations she's received from dozens of police departments around the nation.

"I can understand why people doubt psychics. There are a lot of frauds around," she says. "But no one can call me a fraud when I've been working 18 hours a day for the past 12 years for the police. I don't go to them. They come to me."

She works free of charge out of a love for children and an almost frightening hatred for murderers and child molesters.

On a recent case, police officers had to forcibly restrain her from attacking a man wanted on murder charges.

The "power" — a combination of a vision and interpretation — is something she can't explain and has little interest in defending.

Mrs. Allison, an almost nonstop talker, might become a millionaire just by going to a gambling casino or racetrack. But that would bore her, she says.

"My mother was a religious psychic and she told me about my power before she died. She told me there should never be any monetary reward for it."

Many people, including gamblers and entrepreneurs, have tried to use her for their own ends.

"There's no price for a child. It would be sacrilegious to take money on the hardships and heartaches of others. What kind of beast would I be to take money? I feel too sorry for these people" who have lost their children, she says.

The moment police call her for assistance, she says, "I start writing things down and get pictures in my mind. I don't go into a trance or any nonsense like that. It's like turning on a television set in my mind. Some say that I use a part of my brain that others don't, but I don't know."

Mrs. Allison often has had visions of events before they happened. But she slowly learned to live with the frustration that comes with knowing she may be unable to prevent them.

She says some police officials resent her and the publicity she brings, while others simply say her powers can't take the place of solid investigative work.

Mrs. Allison says the main regret about her work is the time she must spend away from her family. But her husband is understanding.

"My husband has a good job and supports me. And if he ever tried to do something wrong, I'd know about it," she says. "Not that he'd want to. He's much too fascinated with what I do."

REJECT PROPOSAL PEKING (AP) — The Chinese Foreign Ministry today rejected a Vietnamese proposal to reopen their deadlocked normalization talks, calling Hanoi's offer "nothing but a trick".

'Never Put A Finger In The Socket'

By NEAL ROBBINS
HONG KONG (UPI) — When you've never used a knife and fork, enjoyed indoor plumbing, flown in an airplane or looked for a job, adjustment to life in the West can be difficult.

It is for many of the boat people who have fled Vietnam in the last two years and suddenly found themselves in the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Australia and other countries.

At best, the unfamiliarity hampers the refugees in re-establishing normal lives. At worst, the collision of cultures means friction with the host countries.

In an extreme case, resettled refugees' failure to comprehend local customs in a Texas fishing town led to an outbreak of racial violence and a murder.

The refugees are still leaving Vietnam — in smaller numbers than last year — but now efforts to make their transition to new lives a smooth one begins right in the Asian refugee holding camps.

"Last year during the rush, there was no time for orientation," says Ulrich G. Freyschmidt, a United Nations resettlement officer. "Since the situation has eased, we're trying to provide these essential services."

Of the more than 30,000 refugees who have landed in Hong Kong, the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand and Singapore since the beginning of the year, many have been skilled and professional workers — pharmacists, silversmiths, lawyers.

They are likely to have a reasonable understanding of what to expect in a Western country, or at least grasp the dimensions of the differences.

The fishermen, noodle makers, soldiers — people from less sophisticated backgrounds — often "have a completely wrong concept about living conditions and the way of life in the West," says Freyschmidt, who oversees resettlement out of Hong Kong.

What the refugees get wrong varies from the simply inconvenient to the outright basic.

An American orientation pamphlet for Vietnamese refugees begins with a chapter describing a flight across the ocean — complete with descriptions of the take-off, landing, use of the toilet and assurance that "food on the plane is free."

Many rural Vietnamese have never lived in electrified homes so the pamphlet describes how to use an electric plug, a wall switch, and warns, "Never put your fingers in the socket that holds the light bulb."

It advises refugees that they "will not offend Westerners by saying 'I do not understand,'" and lists hugging and pats on the back under "strange customs," while "a small bow" comes under "familiar customs."

The pamphlet also explains taxation, cars, travel, employment and education.

But problems like learning to use Western utensils rather than chopsticks seem minor compared to the barriers of language and culture that lie ahead.

A U.S. placement officer said some refugees, when asked what kind of work they hope to do in the West, answer, "Whatever the government tells me to do."

At that point he tells them about want ads, which are unknown to many who have lived under the present authoritarian government of Vietnam.

Misunderstanding compounded a dispute in August 1979 between resettled Vietnamese and local fishermen in the coastal town of Seadrift, Texas, resulting in a local white being murdered and refugee boats and a home being set afire.

The townspeople claimed Vietnamese lack of respect for local traditions caused the flareup, while the refugees said they had been abused and harassed.

The anger apparently centered on economic issues, but also was attributed to the Vietnamese failure to understand local fishing laws because of poor English and different work habits.

Iran-Iraq War Causes In Questions And Answers

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Here, in question and answer format, is an analysis of the causes of the war between Iraq and Iran and other aspects of the conflict.

Q. What are the roots of the war?

A. The withdrawal of British forces from the Persian Gulf area between 1968 and 1971 gave Iran's monarch, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the opportunity to try to dominate the Persian Gulf with the backing of the United States, renewing the ancient rivalry between the Persians of Iran and the Arabs of Iraq, now an ally of the Soviet Union.

The shah seized three Arab islands near the mouth of the gulf and abrogated a 1937 treaty that gave Iraq sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab, the 120-mile estuary of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers at the head of the gulf. It forms part of the border between the two countries, is Iraq's waterway to the sea and is also the water route from Iran's largest oil refinery at Abadan to the gulf.

Border clashes followed until Iran and Iraq agreed on a new treaty in 1975 dividing sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab and putting the boundary between the two countries down the middle of the estuary. This made peace between the shah and the Iraqi government. But after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces deposed the monarch in February 1979, the Shiite Moslem patriarch launched a propaganda campaign to expand his Islamic revolution and called on the Shiite majority in Iraq to overthrow the Baghdad government, which is dominated by Sunni Moslems.

Meanwhile, Iran's armed forces were badly crippled by desertions and purges during and after the revolution, leaving Iraq's army and air force the strongest military presence in the gulf area. Since November 1979, the Iraqi government has been demanding renegotiation of the 1975 treaty.

Q. What triggered the current fighting?

A. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein last Wednesday cancelled the treaty. He said his government was resuming control of the eastern half of the Shatt al-Arab and occupying some 90 square miles of disputed border territory. The Iraqis also demand the return to the Arabs of the islands of Abu Musa and Greater and Lesser Tunbs, which the shah seized from the Arabian sheikdom of Sharja as part of his attempt to control the Hormuz Strait between the gulf and the Arabian Sea.

Q. What is Iran's position?

A. Iran's revolutionary leaders ignored Iraq's calls for a renegotiation of the 1975 pact. They accused Iraq of giving arms and money to Arab separatists in Khuzestan, Iran's oil province at the southern end of the Iraqi-Iranian border, and of backing Kurdish rebels in northwest Iran.

Q. What is the relative military strength of Iraq and Iran?

A. Before the Iranian revolution, they were nearly equal on paper, with 240,000 men in Iran's armed forces, 242,000 in Iraq's, a paramilitary force of 75,000 in Iran and 80,000 in Iraq. The Iranian army and air force were demoralized by the revolution and decimated by the desertions and purges that followed. Western experts have no reliable information on their present state but assume it is poor and inferior to Iraq's. But the authoritative International Institute of Strategic Studies in London says the Iranian navy is probably still superior to Iraq's.

Most of Iran's military equipment was bought from the United States. Like the men who use it, it has probably been greatly affected by the revolution, and there will be no replacements as long as the Khomeini regime continues to hold the 52 American hostages. Iraq is supplied by the Soviet Union and presumably can count on all it needs.

Q. What effect is the fighting likely to have on the world's oil supplies?

A. The Persian Gulf supplies 40 percent of the non-communist world's oil, and Iranian talk about control of the Hormuz Strait raises the possibility that the Iranian navy might try to close the strait to cripple the Arab nations' oil exports. If that happened, the big U.S. naval force in the Arabian Sea and Indian Ocean would probably reopen the gulf and keep it open. But with the world oil market glutted and both Iran and Iraq needing all the oil revenue they can get, each nation has done nothing to interfere with the other's oil production or exports.

Q. What impact is the fighting likely to have on the 52 U.S. hostages held in Iran?

A. The Iranian Parliament probably won't give much consideration to the fate of the Americans while it is worrying about war with Iraq, particularly since Khomeini and his associates charge that the Iraqis are acting on behalf of the United States. But the Majlis, or Parliament, had already demonstrated that it was not going to decide the fate of the captive Americans any time soon, and its leaders continue to make demands which the United States has said repeatedly it would not meet.

President Carter said Monday that the fighting could convince the Iranians they need friends "and therefore induce them to release the hostages." But he said he couldn't predict "a rapid movement toward release." Secretary of State Edmund Muskie said expansion of the war could create new perils for the hostages.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, SEPT. 25, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to make some changes and new arrangements that could improve your surroundings. Make plans to put your personal affairs on a more solid foundation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take advantage of an opportunity to advance in your line of endeavor and gain more benefits. Be active and cheerful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to change your surroundings and gain more comfort. Come to a better understanding with a co-worker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take time for recreation that will relieve tensions you are under. Avoid group meetings today. Use care in motion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of routine chores before thinking about recreation. Establish more order around you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ideal day to gain the cooperation of allies for any new and practical ideas you may have. Avoid investing too heavily.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You find it much easier now to handle monetary matters intelligently and get good results. Relax tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can pursue personal aims in a positive way and get good results now. Think more and you need not work so hard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are able to garner that information that has been elusive in the past. Take steps to improve health and appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to visit friends you truly like, so plan time for this. Adopt a more logical outlook on life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do something that will improve your position in the community. An uplift in career affairs is possible at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Let your influence be felt far and wide and gain added prestige. Do nothing that could harm your reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your contracts and agreements and know the best way of handling them in the future. Show that you have poise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can understand the practical phases of any situation, so be sure to give a good religious and ethical foundation early in life for best results. An outstanding sports leader in this chart.

Woodcutting Is A One-Man Business

WASHINGTON, Maine (AP) — From dawn to dusk, summer and winter, Bobby Lee and his team of draft horses are at work in the Maine woods.

Lee, 29, a slightly built man, cuts the wood, hauls it to the nearest roadside, then sells the 4,000-pound cords to local mills.

Lee tried a number of jobs before turning to the woods. He was a butcher, laid asphalt on Maine roads, sold hot dogs at county fairs and clerked in a local grocery store. But he is happiest in his present job.

"I like working in the woods with the horses," he says. "There's no great thrashing about . . . It's quiet and peaceful."

"I've cut wood ever since I was a kid. My father's got some land and I've always had to clean the brush out and chop wood. If we needed money, we'd cut wood on our vacations . . ."

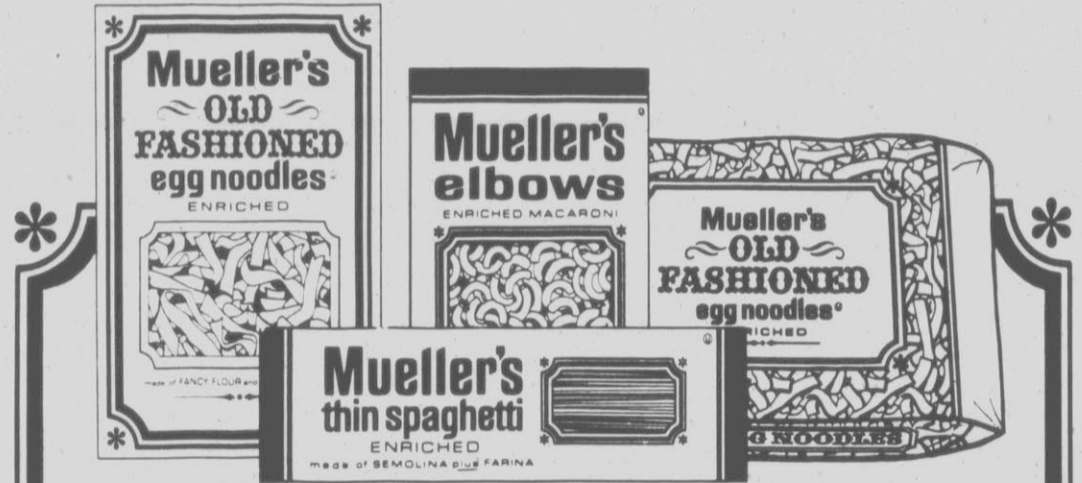

Lee started his one-man business with an initial investment of $20 for a cart and some harnesses. Then came the horses — Butch and Barney.

"A 1950 Ford tractor would've cost me $2,000. So I figured for the same money I'd buy me a couple of new horses. I paid $1,000 apiece for the horses. They come from the Amish country in Pennsylvania.

"The horses can do everything I want them to do . . . And they don't tear up the woods any . . ."

"The horses are pretty good to talk to . . . Once in a while they get pretty nasty. They have disagreements, you know, and bite each other."
