Iran Intending Keep Vital Strait Open

By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iran declared today it intends to keep the Strait of Hormuz open to shipping as its ground forces continued holding out against Iraqi invaders in oil-rich Khuzestan province.

Meanwhile, black smoke kept curling from a burning natural gas line hit by Iranian warplanes that bombed a Baghdad power plant, and three foreign reporters were expelled for their coverage of the attack.

The Strait of Hormuz, the narrow channel forming the entrance to the Persian Gulf, is the bottleneck through which much of the West's oil supply was funneled. Iranian officials have threatened to expand the war if other Arab states aid Iraq, and the Pentagon has sent four special radar-equipped planes to Saudi Arabia to provide an early warning system in case of attack.

Noting this, Iran's official Pars news agency said that "in the past few days, several governments under the pretext of expressing their concern over the possible closure of the Strait of Hormuz, are considering interfering in the region of the Persian Gulf."

The statement added: "The government of the Islamic Republic of Iran, in full cognizance of its international obligations, wishes to assure the international community that Iran shall not hesitate in any effort to keep this waterway in full operation.

"Despite our current relationship with the hostile government or governments of the area, the government of the Islamic Republic of Iran guarantees to do its share to maintain this waterway open."

The Iraqi news agency said today that the smoke funneling over the city was from the Dora Hilla natural gas line juncture that fed the power plant attacked Tuesday by Iranian Phantoms. It also said reporters for Agence France-Presse, Madrid's Diario 16, and Amsterdam's De Telegraaf were expelled for reporting damage to a nuclear research center hit in the attack. It said they hadn't seen the damage themselves, and relied on accounts by others.

Iraqi ground forces were reported still meeting fierce resistance at the four major cities in Iran's Khuzestan Province, and the 10-day-old invasion appeared to have bogged down.

An Iraqi captain escorting reporters on a tour of the central sector of the 300-mile invasion front told them Iraqi troops had pushed into parts of Ahwaz, the provincial capital 50 miles from the border, and would probably gain complete control of the city today or Thursday.

But AP Correspondent Jeffrey Ulbrich said Iraqi officers reported fighting still going on six miles south of the city as well as inside it.

Seventy miles to the north, Iraqi forces were still trying to capture Dezful. And at the southern end of the line on the Shatt al-Arab estuary, Khorramshahr, Iran's major port, and Abadan, the oil refining center 15 miles to the southeast, were under siege and heavy artillery attack but apparently Iran's revolutionary guards were holding on there.

The National Iranian Oil Co. in a broadcast on Radio Abadan called on the people of the city to "prepare trenches in the streets, make Molotov cocktails and any other destructive means, and prepare for a fight against the enemies of God and the masses."

Iraq's strategy apparently was to occupy Dezful, Ahwaz, Khorramshahr and Abadan and set up a buffer zone protecting its control of the Shatt al-Arab, the disputed 70)mile estuary of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers that is Iraq's water route to the Persian Gulf.

Iraq controlled all of the estuary until 1975, when it ceded the eastern half to Iran in exchange for an end to Iranian support of the Kurdish rebellion in northern Iraq.

Anderson Hits Tobacco Price Support Program

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

But Anderson chose to make the controversial statements in a stop at the University of North Carolina, where some of his most avid supporters — college students and faculty — could be found.

Asked how his policy on eliminating price supports would be received among North Carolina tobacco farmers, Anderson said, "I hope with a great deal of understanding."

Anderson, an independent candidate for president, contended that some way would be found to ease the burden and divert North Carolina agriculture to raising different farm products.

But state officials did not take the Anderson comment lightly.

"I think that perhaps he is the recipient of some misinformation on both counts," said Reginald Lester, managing director of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee in Raleigh.

"The federal price support program is one of the most successful agriculture programs in history," he said. "It has cost the American taxpayer virtually nothing since its inception some 40 years ago."

Horace Kornegay of The Tobacco Institute agreed, saying abolition of the price support program "would be devastating to the state of North Carolina ... It is by far the most successful agricultural program the federal government has ever sponsored."

"This move would paralyze our state," Graham said. "To even consider the possibility of putting every North Carolinian out of business who depends on tobacco for a livelihood is beyond comprehension."

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp., a grower-owned co-operative, administers the price support program in North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. Farmers whose tobacco does not bring an auction price higher than the support level turn over the tobacco to the co-op under the loan program. The co-op stores the tobacco for subsequent sale to buying companies. Any profits not needed by the co-op for reserve funds are distributed to the farmers.

Anderson expressed his opposition to smoking at a news conference held before the rally on the UNC campus.

"As a reformed smoker myself, I feel physically much better, and I think most Americans likewise would enjoy the health benefits of not smoking," Anderson said.

"I would certainly try to work ... in a way that we could eventually phase out the price support program and do it with a minimum of

Three Are Scholarship Semifinalists In Pitt

Three Pitt County high school students have been named semifinalists in the 17th annual National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students.

Samuel Tucker from D.H. Conley High School, Mark Anderson from Ayden-Grifton High School, and Melba Corbett from Farmville Central High School met the requirements for participation in the achievement program and qualified for recognition and further consideration on the basis of their 1979 PSAT/NMSQT performance. They represent the highest-scoring black students nationwide.

Tucker has participated in basketball, football, baseball and cross-country track during his high schoool career. He was class president his freshman, sophomore and junior years, belongs to the National Honor Society, the Student Council Association, Literary Club, Social Studies Club, the Math Club for honor students, and French Club. CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood has been ordered to submit to a second military-sponsored psychiatric evaluation next Monday in preparation for his court-martial on charges of desertion and collaboration in Vietnam.

Col. R.E. Switzer, the judge presiding at Garwood's trial, ordered the evaluation at request of the prosecution. He overruled defense contentions that Garwood might be pushed to suicide if he has to submit to the testing.

Switzer ordered the evaluation after defense attorney Vaughan Taylor reiterated his intention of using insanity as a defense for Garwood. Taylor contends psychiatric testing has shown Garwood suffers from an emotional ailment that blocked his ability to distinguish from right and wrong in Vietnam.

Anderson At UNC Had Aura Of Rock Concert

By CYNTHIA BOWERS

CHAPEL HILL — The scene resembled a rock concert more than a political campaign appearance when more than two thousand people — mostly students — jammed the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill Memorial Auditorium Tuesday to hear independant presidential candidate John Anderson speak.

The students, many sporting Anderson t-shirts and buttons crammed two to a seat, perched in window sills and stood in the aisles as they waited for Anderson to appear. Some clapped and sang along with blue grass and country rock music being performed by a local band.

They came for a variety of reasons. Some said they were strong Anderson supporters but many said they were there out of curiosity.

"I really want to know what his stands are on some of the issues," one 21-year-old man said. "I haven't heard him say too much about that so far."

When Anderson finally appeared, 25 minutes late for his scheduled noon speech, it was to the first of several standing ovations he was to receive. Another came when he waved the Tuesday edition of the Daily Tar Heel, UNC student newspaper, pointing to a banner headline which read Anderson edges Carter in mock vote, which was held at the university Monday.

"It is certainly a well-known fact that as Chapel Hill goes, so does the nation," Anderson said, referring to his victory in the mock vote. In the vote, Anderson received 36.1 percent of the vote to 34.6 for President Jimmy Carter and 26.5 percent for Republican Ronald Regan.

Anderson drew laughter at several points in his speech with digs at his fellow candidates. Referring to President Carter's Monday speech in New York City to members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, Anderson said, "Its too bad that he was speaking in a state that has already ratified that amendment."

"Its too bad he was not in one of those states where ratification has not taken place." He said to laughter and claps of approval from the crowd.

The audience burst into applause and laughter once again, when Anderson accused Carter and Reagan of "arguing with each other about who was going to start World War III" instead of concentrating on other issues.

Anderson's mention of a plank in his platform which called for a 10 percent tax credit for research institutions, such as those in the nearby Research Triangle Park, appeared to please the UNC crowd.

"Its the kind of tax credit we have to have to meet the agenda of the future," he said to cheers of approval.

In his speech, Anderson also voiced support for a tax on gas and oil to counteract OPEC tax on gas and oil exports. He also sharply criticized President Carter's support of the proposed MX missle program.

Anderson, who has gathered a strong following on university campuses across the nation, ended his 30-minute speech with an appeal to students to get out and vote.

Since voting privileges were extended to include 18-year-olds, "students haven't demonstrated that they really care that much," Anderson said.

After the candidate was hustled back of stage by the secret service agents, who had flanked him throughout his speech, the crowd slowly filed out into the cold and rainy afternoon. Some students hurried off to classes, but many lingered in front of the auditorium discussing what they had just heard.

"I was impressed," a 21-year-old woman student said enthusiastically. "He's our alternative to Reagan and Carter, and boy, do we need one."

But others appeared to be less sure. "He didn't really say anything," complained

Judge Now City Hall Janitor

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

HOWARD, Kan. (AP) — Judge J.L. Roberts was the law in this tiny Kansas town for seven years.

Then he fined the mayor for letting his dog run loose. And a City Councilman's relative was slapped with a bill for disorderly conduct.

Today, old Jess Roberts is the City Hall janitor. And frankly, the resilient 85-year-old prefers holding a broom to holding a gavel. The hours are better; so is the pay.

"I've got everything paid for, a nice house, two cars and a regular Social Security check," he said recently. "I don't have to do this. But I like it.

"And besides, I'm not going to give them (City Council members) the satisfaction of saying they got rid of ol' Jess."

Roberts has nipped at the heels of the community's leadership for years. Born on a farm nearby, he landed his first job washing dishes at Howard's Metropolitan Hotel. Later, he owned restaurants, dance halls and theaters, worked in carpentry, auto salvage and tire repair.

He eventually settled on the furniture business his father owned. When he retired in 1972, at 77, he was elected justice of the peace.

But two days after he started, the state abolished the position. So Roberts was appointed municipal judge for the town of 900.

Armed only with a voracious appetite for books, Roberts deftly interpreted the city and state codes, dishing out fines for everything from drunkenness to speeding.

At first the city let him pocket the $9 in court costs he assessed violators. But the state stepped in and abolished court costs in the mid-1970s. The city put Roberts on a $50-a-month salary.

The wayward were taken to Roberts' home at all hours. A man picked up for drinking in public appeared before Roberts and was fined before he could drain the evidence.

A tough judge, some said. But a fair one.

That was before city officials and their relatives began making appearances in court. Roberts fined the mayor $20 for violating a leash law the mayor helped enact.

"I didn't make the laws, I just enforced them," Roberts explained. "Those dummies up at City Hall thought I should turn them loose 'cause they were big guys."

Soon the council appointed a new judge. But Roberts wasn't through at City Hall. He took the job as janitor — at $10 a month more.

"The only reason I'm here is because they can't get anyone else to work this cheap," says Roberts, who looks more like judge than janitor with his slicked-back silver hair and proper bow tie.

But from his new position, Roberts again can offer his unsolicited commentary on the affairs of this farming community.

"It's kinda nice to sit back and tell 'em all where to go — and I don't mind doin' it."

JUDGE TO JANITOR — Jess Roberts was the municpal judge in Howard, Kansas, until he fined the mayor and a councilman's relative. Now he's the janitor in the City Hall, and finds the hours and pay both better. (AP Laserphoto)

Couple Weds Saturday In Farmville Ceremony

FARMVILLE — Elizabeth Reide Joyner and Stephen Hugh Simonds were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The double ring ceremony was performed at the home of the bride by the Rev. LaFon C. Vereen.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. R. L. Joyner of Farmville and the late Mr. Joyner. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Simonds of Rockville, Md., are parents of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Miriam Bailey of Farmville, organist, and Faye Tucker of Charlotte, soloist.

MRS. STEPHEN HUGH SIMONDS

The bride's sister, Judy Smith of Snow Hill, was honor attendant and bridesmaids were Deede Mosier and Ginger Joyner of Greenville, Mollie Bales of Durham and Linda Simonds of Rockville, Md., sister of the bridegroom. They wore huckleberry colored gowns with antique lace yokes. They each carried a nosegay of white daisies, yellow mums, pink mums, baby's breath tied with pink, rose and purple streamers.

Jennifer Joyner of Farmville, niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a lavender dress with a tiered skirt and bertha collar. She carried a basket of pink, rose and white mums and baby's breath.

Richard C. Smith, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. The bridegroom's brother, Larry Simonds, of Greenville was best man while ushers included Bob Stratton and Lewis Solem of Rockville, M., Tom Simonds and George McAdams of Greenville.

The bride is a respiratory therapist at Pitt Memorial Hospital. She graduated from ECU and attended Lenoir Community and Charlotte Community Colleges. The bridegroom attended ECU and works at Yahama Pitt County Motorcycles.

The house was decorated with pink, white and yellow snapdragons, carnations and mums and pink and red roses.

Miller-Payton Vows Solemnized

Bernadette Payton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payton of Greenville, became the bride of Curtis A. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Miller of Salisbury, Saturday aftrernoon at three o'clock. The ceremony, performed by the Rev. Clarence Gray, took place at Green Spring Park.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal blue gown with a sheer printed jacket. The gown was styled with spaghetti straps and had an A-line skirt. She wore a matching hat trimmed in lace and a band.

The matron of honor was the bride's sister, Dorothy L. Clay. She wore a light blue gown styled with a V-neckline and an A-line skirt. The dress had a matching jacket. She carried a long-stemmed carnation.

Curly Ray Neely was best man.

A program of wedding music was presented by Charles Dudley.

The bride's table was covered in a white satin cloth and the three tiered wedding cake was served by Annis House.

After a wedding trip to Charlotte, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride graduated from J. H. Rose High School and is employed by the Greenville Housing Authority. The bridegroom graduated from J. C. Price High School and the College of Staten Island. He is employed by the American Management Association.

COMPANY DINNER

Savory Chicken — Noodles
Broccoli — Salad Bowl
Ice Cream — Coffee

SAVORY CHICKEN

- 3½ to 3¾-pound roasting chicken
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ cup butter
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped (½ cup)
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 2 cups degreased, clear, unsalted chicken broth
- 2 tablespoons medium sherry

Cut up chicken so there are 2 wings, 2 breast halves, 2 thighs and 2 drumsticks; freeze bony backs for some other use. Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. In a 12-inch skillet over high heat melt butter and when it sizzles add chicken pieces, skinside down; reduce heat to medium and fry until browned — about 15 minutes. Turn and continue frying over medium heat until undersides are browned and chicken is tender — 15 minutes. Remove chicken and keep hot in a low oven. To drippings in skillet add onion and cook gently, stirring often, until wilted; stir in flour, tomato paste and mustard; stir in broth and sherry. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbling; spoon sauce over chicken or pass separately. There will be 1½ cups sauce — plenty for accompanying noodles. Makes 4 servings.

A lawn reception followed the wedding and was given by the bride's mother and Helen Meeks.

WOMAN'S JOB

There's been a lot of talk about couples sharing household chores on a 50-50 basis but it still isn't so. Housework is still the woman's job. Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist, NCSU, says a study done to find out how much time women and other family members spend on household jobs, shows this:

If there are no children in the family and the wife doesn't work outside the home, she spends almost six hours a day doing housework. Her husband pitches in. He helps out one and a half hours a day. If the wife works outside the home, the time she spends on household chores goes down to about four hours a day. The husband also spends less time helping out. He donates about one hour of his time. If there are children in the family, the number of hours spent on household jobs goes up. It's five hours for working women, two hours for husbands.

Dear Abby

A Rose By Any Other Color...

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A reader wrote in to say that a co-worker had planned to carry a bridal bouquet of black roses. She asked, "Is this proper? And don't black roses symbolize death?"

You replied, "Black roses? You're putting me on!"

Abby, just because you've never seen black roses doesn't mean there aren't any.

The Tidings, a Catholic publication, recently carried an article titled, "A Priest Who Grew Roses." The priest, the Rev. George Schoener, also was a botanist who gained a national reputation for having developed numerous new strains of roses, of which the beautiful coal-black rose was one.

The Salem, Ore., Journal conferred the title of "El Padre de las Rosas" on Father Schoener in 1936.

Thought you should know. Adios.

CARLOS G.

DEAR CARLOS: Gracias. And all along I thought with Gertrude Stein that a rose was a rose was a rose.

Unfortunately I limited my research to California rose-growers, none of whom had ever heard of a black rose. I should have called Gerry Frank, my friend in Salem. He knows all there is to know about Oregon products.

DEAR ABBY: I read your advice urging joggers to carry identification. Why just joggers? Everyone should carry identification.

In spite of repeated warnings from my mother, the most my father ever had in the way of identification was his initials in his hat! Because his work kept him within earshot of our home, he thought he was safe.

But it finally happened. We spent many agonizing hours trying to locate him, during which time he died in a hospital.

Reagan 'Bracing' For Iran's Releasing Hostages

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

Ronald Reagan says Iran's preference for Jimmy Carter and the president's political use of incumbency has him "bracing...for an October surprise" spelling freedom for the American hostages.

The Republican nominee said in an interview with The Associated Press that "there's no way I can tell you" what he would do about the 52 captive Americans if elected. But "I've wondered whether they will be still there in January."

Reagan cited his longtime assertion that the United States "should have stood by the shah's government" as a basis for believing that Iran's revolutionary leaders want to help Carter win re-election. And he seemed to suggest that Carter himself might play a role in a politically timed hostage release.

Q: Do you have any information, other than speculative, that they (the Iranians) might try to influence the American election?

A: Well, I don't know. I can only say that the president has been pretty industrious in using the incumbency in this campaign, more so than any president than I could recall. So, as I say, I'm just bracing myself for an October surprise."

John B. Anderson, meanwhile, is bristling over defections from his own camp and suggestions from Carter's that he fold his independent challenge in light of his failure to move up in the polls.

And Carter, celebrating his 56th birthday, headed for the production lines of Detroit today after asking his political workers in Washington to rediscover the "fervor and spirit" which propelled him to victory four years ago.

"I see no reason why we can't have that crusade," in 1980, Carter said, when "much more is at stake."

Reagan campaigned in Pennsylvania today on the heels of a star-studded fundraiser in New York City which pumped $6 million into GOP coffers. Frank Sinatra crooned "The Best is Yet to Come" and pointed his finger at the Republican nominee.

But the president headlined a $1,000-per-plate function of his own Tuesday night. His serenade was "Happy Birthday," sung by a Washington audience of about 1,000 persons.

Carter cracked that if Reagan is elected, the nation will witness the "Hollywoodizing" of Washington, with bill signings at night beneath searchlights and Pennsylvania Avenue renamed the "Avenue of the Stars." The White House, he went on, could become the Brown Derby of the East, where visiting dignitaries leave their footprints in cement poured upon the South Lawn.

Carter's trip to Detroit today was his first return to the city since his visit there on the eve of the Republican National Convention, when he unveiled an emergency aid program for the auto industry. And it follows by one day his announcement of a similar program to help the equally-sagging steel industry. Michigan is among to top five steel-producing states.

The president later was to head for upstate New York, marking his second campaign appearance in the Empire State in three days. Reagan, meanwhile, stumped Pittsburgh and Wilkes-Barre, Pa., after his chief of staff, Ed Meese, scoffed at Carter's steel package, including liberalized tax provisions and extended environmental deadlines, as "half-loaf solutions."

Anderson was in Miami today to wind up what aides say is his last foray into the South.

On Tuesday, the Illinois congressman declared in Chapel Hill, N.C., that he will fight to the end despite a growing perception that he has no chance to win. Carter's campaign manager, Robert Strauss, said Tuesday that Anderson is sliding toward "single-digit" support in the polls, and Vice President Walter F. Mondale said the congressman should quit to keep Reagan from capturing the White House.

But Anderson, who once vowed he would not campaign as a "spoiler," said that "I don't know what the effect is going to be on Nov. 4. All I know is that we are in the race to stay."

As for the defection to Carter by former Under Secretary of State George Ball and other onetime backers, Anderson snapped: "There are summer soldiers and sunshine patriots."

Reagan, in his inteview with the AP, declared flatly he would withdraw the pending Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty from Senate consideration. Instead, he said, he would set out to build up U.S. military might while seeking new negotiations with the Soviets to strike a more acceptable balance.

The Republican dealt cautiously with other questions over foreign affairs, including the Middle East. On the war between Iran and Iraq, a conflict for which he said a week ago that Carter was "largely to blame," Reagan deferred detailed comment until he's had "access to more facts than I have now."

As for Carter's assertion that he is a warlike candidate, Reagan insisted that "I don't itch to get my thumb on the button."

Asked why Iran would want to help Carter by releasing the hostages, Reagan said "Maybe just on the basis of some of my criticisms of the Carter administration ... and the fact that I have been rather outspoken in my belief that this country should have stood by the shah's government."

Moreover, Reagan declared that "The president has been pretty industrious in using the incumbency in this campaign, more so than any president than I could recall. So, as I say, I'm just bracing myself for an October surprise ..."

But "if that will help bring the hostages home, fine," Reagan said.

Asked to spell out his own approach to the hostage crisis, Reagan said "there's no way that I can tell you what to do. And I think there's been too much of our diplomacy that's been done out in the public."

Reagan seemed to back off a Republican platform provision that only anti-abortion candidates be considered for judicial appointments. "I would be guided by the whole broad philosophy of the individual," and not necessarily rule out someone just on the abortion issue, he said.

Elsewhere Tuesday:

— Pollster Louis Harris said in Omaha, Neb., that the country is so turned off by the choice of candidates that less than half the eligible voters will turn out. And no candidate is likely to get more than 40 per cent of the popular vote, he said. That hasn't happened since Abraham Lincoln was elected 120 years ago.

— The League of Women Voters formally abandoned plans for a one-on-one debate between Carter and Reagan in Portland, Ore., Oct. 13. Reagan had refused the league's invitation last Thursday. League officials criticized both Reagan and the president, who accepted the Portland invitation but sat out a Sept. 21 debate in Baltimore. They also attacked as "unethical" a Reagan commercial which shows an empty podium to symbolize Carter's absence at last week's debate. In light of Reagan's own no-show, the ad should be withdrawn, the league said.

Torture Study Reports The Effect Lingers On

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Physical torture leaves its mark on the mind and body of the victim long after the torture ends, according to the results of an Amnesty International study released today.

Danish physicians who conducted the study said their findings could lead to a system of treatment for torture victims.

The study was done on 14 former political prisoners from Argentina, aged 22-54, living in exile in Italy. Most had spent many months in Argentine prisons but had been released months before the doctors gave them complete physical examinations in May 1979.

The doctors said the results of the examinations confirmed the exiles' stories of severe torture and for the first time documented torture's residual effects.

"Many people believe torture is a brutal attack of shorter duration on the prisoner. But the atrocity has a permanent effect. The long-lasting psychological effect on these victims can be compared with those found in former concentration camp inmates," Dr. Ole Vedel Rasmussen said in a statement released with the study.

Rasmussen is a medical adviser to Amnesty, which has its headquarters in London and works for the release of prisoners of conscience around the world.

The report said that both physical and mental problems remained in most of the victims, and "the psychiatric symptoms are the most important but the most difficult to treat."

Nevertheless, it said, "We feel we now have a clear picture of the sequelae (after-effects) to torture and can begin to organize treatment of them."

The doctors said they found the Argentines bore symptoms similar to those of victims from other countries. "There is consistency between the victims' allegations, the symptoms described and the signs found," the study said.

The study compared the victims' pre-prison medical histories, their symptoms immediately after the alleged mistreatment and their symptoms at the time of the examination.

"It is obvious that the frequency of complaints regarding different organ systems rose significantly after torture, as compared with before torture," the report said.

"Even at the time of examination, months after release, there was a much higher incidence of complaints from different organ systems than had been the case before torture."

The most common new complaints involved such psychiatric problems as nightmares and introversion, the study said. It said three of the Argentines suffered similar problems before the alleged torture, 12 immediately afterward and all 14 at the time of examination.

Could Get Complicated

More than ever figures eminating for the U. S. Census are questioned by counties and city.

There was a time when the population figures were merely a source of pride.

Partisans relished their community growing to be larger than some other rival.

That has all changed now. The census figures mean money to cities, states and counties. Many formulas for funds from state and federal governments are based on population. Thus when the figures announced by the Census Bureau are lower than anticipated there are bound to be protests.

This year there are more than protests. Some governmental units are taking to the courts — and winning.

Detroit got a decision from a federal court ordering the Census Bureau to change its figures.

Such rulings could have far reaching effects. If the Detroit decision holds up, other municipalities will seek court relief, possibly even if they are reasonably satisfied with the count. Every municipality will want to hold its position in relation with others. It could get complicated.

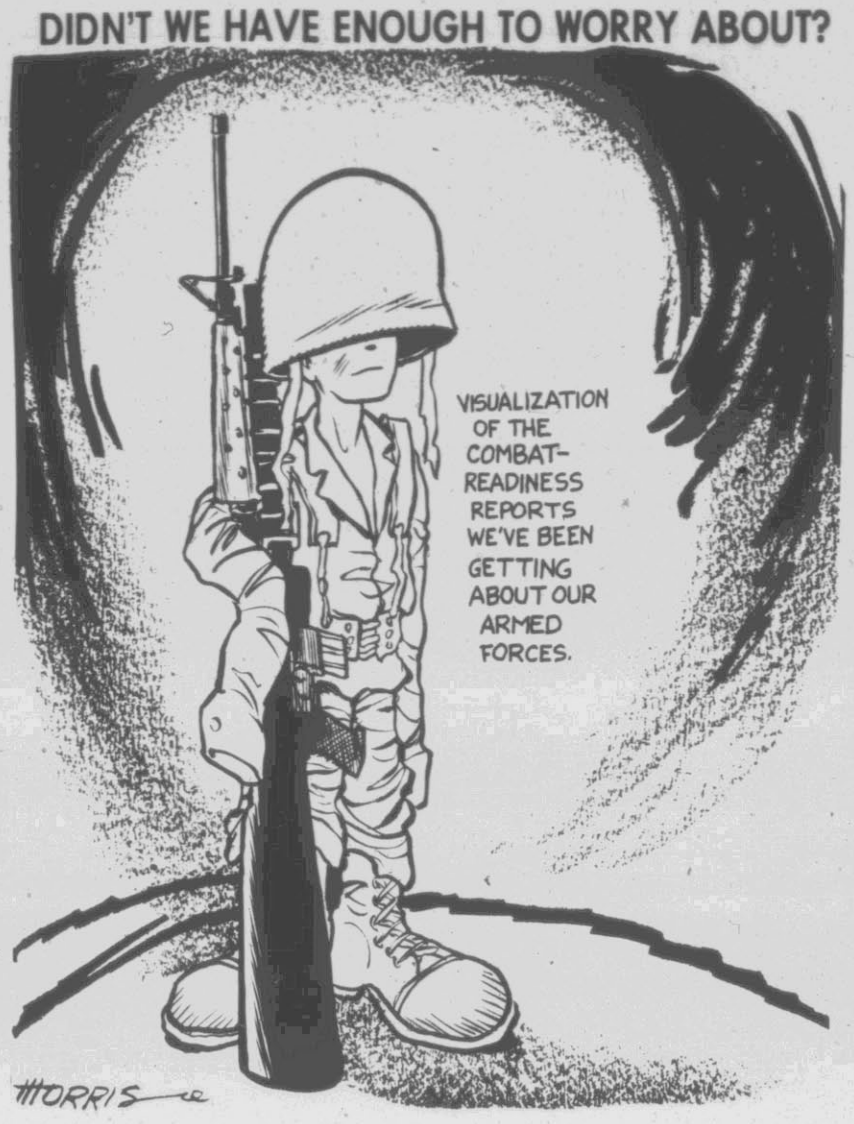
Nuclear War Is Unthinkable

Secretary of State Edmund Muskie sees risk of nuclear war in the Iraq-Iran fighting in the Middle East.

The risk is not imminent and, in fact, Muskie doesn't think it will happen based on his understanding of U. S. and Soviet attitudes.

Nuclear warfare would be the ultimate terror to come from the Middle East. It is universally accepted that nuclear war is unthinkable for mankind. It is not likely to occur — unless there is a miscalcuation, or some madman comes into control of the bomb.

DIDN'T WE HAVE ENOUGH TO WORRY ABOUT?



THIS AFTERNOON

Knowledge Is Vital

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Knowledge is obviously the most important weapon in combatting teenage pregnancies in North Carolina, and the element in shortest supply.

That is the message repeatedly hammered home in a study completed recently by the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth.

The study spotlights the unsettling record in this state:

North Carolina ranked fifth nationally in teen births with 17,335 babies born to women under age 20, including 374 to women under age 15. For almost 5,000 teens, the baby was the second or third. About a third of some 26,000 teen pregnancies were terminated by abortion, including 422 to females under age 15.

Perhaps most disconcerting is that the study concluded that sexual activity among the very young is increasing dramatically, so much so that the very term "teenager" has been redefined to include youngsters 10, 11, and 12 years old.

Survey

The survey looked closely at conditions statewide, and focused narrowly on conditions in nine particular countries widely representative of the state at large.

The one conclusion which stands out above all others in the report of the advocacy council entitled "Better Choices for a Better Future" is the belief that sex education holds the most hope for the future, but is sorely lacking in North Carolina.

Leading to this conclusion are findings which show today's youth are sexually active younger, are generally more active sexually, and are therefore more likely to become pregnant. And while society wishes that sex education was adequately provided at home, this is not generally the case.

The study found consistent problems in the public school approach to sex education, and sums up this way: no ongoing sex-education nor family life curricula; courses largely available only at the senior high level; usually available as electives so all students do not enroll; and all topics not covered for both young men and women.

BILL NOBLITT

What are the barriers to sex education? Surveyors asked school people that question, and found that parent opposition, pressure group opposition, teacher opposition, shortage of funds, and inadequately trained personnel combine to work against successful sex education.

At one point the report bluntly summarizes present conditions: "There is no state policy on sex education in the North Carolina public schools, other than a warning in a State Department of Public Instruction policy statement that it should not be introduced to the entire school curriculum without community support.

No Sex

"State law mandates alcohol and drug education — even driver education — in the public schools, but not sex education. State Department of Public Instruction officials say that they do not know how many school systems in the state offer sex education courses."

Included in the report are findings by Dr. James E. Allen of two communities in the state. Allen's work was done under a Ford Foundation grant to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He found that in a community with some sex education in the schools, although severely limited, teens were three times more successful in preventing pregnancies than were those in a rural community with no sex education resources. It is, Allen concluded, policy makers and service providers who determine whether teenagers will have

What Running Mates?

WASHINGTON — You don't hear much lately from the vice presidential candidates, George What's-his-name, and Fritz You-know-who-I-mean. The problem is that all the media are zeroing in on Carter and Reagan, and not paying attention to the men who could be only a heart-beat away from the presidency.

I was starting to worry about this so I decided to find out where they were.

My first call was to Reagan Headquarters.

"Is George there?" I asked.

"George Bush."

The voice came back on the phone a few minutes later.

"Is he a volunteer or a paid employee?"

"He's Reagan's running-mate. He was selected after

ART BUCHWALD

Gerry Ford turned Reagan down."

"The name does ring a bell. Let me transfer you to somebody who might know where he is."

Another voice came on the phone. "Reagan Headquarters, personnel department."

"Yes, I'm trying to locate a George Bush, who is Ronald Reagan's running-mate."

"You'll have to be more specific than that. Do you have a description or a Social Security number, or anything?"

"He's rather tall and thin and looks very much like an Ivy Leaguer. I don't have his Social Security number and the last time anyone saw him was on the platform with Ronald Reagan at the Republican National Convention in Detroit. He was holding up Ronald's hand."

"We've had dozens of politicians holding up Ronald's hand, and we have a lot of people working for Reagan who look like they're Ivy Leaguers. Does he have any scars?"

"Well, he ran against Reagan in the primaries so I imagine he does. But he's covered them up since Reagan chose him as his running-mate."

"He doesn't show up in the computer. Have you called the Red Cross?"

"No, I thought I'd check with you people first on the off-chance you might know."

New Tactic For Reagan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Reagan campaign strategy will follow its prearranged pattern Oct. 1 when the soggy television spots celebrating Ronald Reagan's golden days in California are replaced by attacks on Jimmy Carter's gloomy years in Washington — a shift that retains the anemic, safety-first nature of his campaign.

The soft-sell commercials were based on the theory that voter skepticism about Reagan as president could be dispelled by dwelling on his long-ago record as governor. With a month to go, there would still be ample time to rip into Carter's record as president.

This has meant a wasted month for Reagan in which the initiative was handed to President Carter's bloodthirsty offensive. Reagan supporters in Congress and the business community have been distressed by the campaign's passivity and eagerly await the attack phase.

But even after Oct. 1, caution will prevail. The theme will be not what Reagan can do for the country but what Carter has done to it. Reagan's bold program of economic growth through tax reduction is covered up. The dodging of a head-on debate with the president reflects the mood.

The Reagan campaign, thus, represents the triumph of the polltakers, advertising men and political technicians over the creative theorists. His campaign is geared to hope that Reagan, if he avoids risks, can ride Carter's unpopularity into the White House. But Reagan's avoidance of issues as well as risks gives the Carter team a free run with its patented non-issues strategy of personal attack.

All this was predicted seven months ago when, in the wake of the purge of John Sears as campaign manager, Reagan's chief pollster became his chief strategist. The elevation of Dr. Richard Wirthlin, one of the nation's most respected pollsters, stirred fear within the Reagan camp that the campaign would follow Carter's in linking policy to mass opinion.

Sure enough, the Reagan strategy derived from Wirthlin's computer printouts showing (as did Carter pollster Pat Caddell's surveys) substantial voter doubt whether a superannuated Hollywood actor could handle the presidency. Wirthlin and his fellow triumvirs in the Reagan campaign, William Casey and Edwin Meese, decided on using the month of September to show Ronald Reagan without horns — particularly in his role as governor.

The job was entrusted to Los Angeles advertising executive Peter Dailey, who produced Richard Nixon's 1972 commercials and, like most in his trade, is allergic to serious discussion of issues. Dailey's nostalgic snapshots of how Reagan handled California's issues of nearly 15 years ago were universally greeted with barnyard adjectives by critical congressmen given a preview.

Nevertheless, the soft-sell Reagan spots of 30 seconds, one minute and five minutes have been shown repeatedly on national television. Nobody could possibly guess from watching them that any issues of substance were involved in this election. This unwittingly complements the Carter strategy of keeping Reagan on the defensive by dodging the president's vulnerable record and stressing personal invective.

Congressmen and Reagan staffers were no happier after previewing Dailey's attack-phase commercials. Heavy-handed attacks on Democratic-induced inflation and demands for less government spending recall a half-century of Republican futility.

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

As one can see from the Presidential debate of Sunday, Sept. 21, Mr. Carter chose not to attend. Why? He feels there is only a choice between only two candidates this year, not three. The truth is that he thinks he possibly can take some pressure or criticism from one candidate, Mr. Reagan, but to have two candidates confronting him, he couldn't bear the thought. Mr. Carter simply cannot honestly face the public in a debate and honestly expect the people of America to believe his defense of his four years of office of President of the U. S. A. Do we have low unemployment, low taxes, inflation under control, number one superiority in military defense, balanced budget, respect in the world, the right of the unborn to live, cheap energy prices? No! Why? Because this Democratic President and our Democratic Congress have brought these horrors on us.

Let's don't forget Gov. Hunt and his Democrat-controlled legislature. Don't overlook Sen. Robert Morgan and his Carter-influenced doctrines. Gov. Hunt debates Mr. Lake once, melts under pressure and can't stand to face up to faces and now refuses to debate Mr. Lake any more. Sen. Morgan refuses to defend his voting record by refusing to debate Dr. East.

Does not this tell you something? The Democratic candidates this year are ashamed of their records and policies and are hiding behind their party's prestige.

Mr. Anderson is blowing his horn to the tune of a liberal Democrat. In the debates Sunday night and in response to Gov. Reagan's stand on abortion, Mr. Anderson stated that it's not a question of if it's an unborn child's right to live, but rather if that unborn child is wanted. If a mother is to an unborn baby as the government is to us, its citizens, then I ask you, does the government have the right to abort our lives simply because there may be some of us who are not wanted? Think about it.

COLOR OF THE CRUCIFIXION

A firm which specializes in religious motion pictures advertises a film under this caption, "The Crucifixion, in Color".

The crucifixion is always in color, and the color is red. There was no make-believe about this event. A man was nailed to a cross and died amid excruciating agonies.

If you or I had died on the cross, it would not have produced these results. At best we would have been martyrs. But He who died upon the cross was a divine being, incarnate in human flesh for a season. The shedding of His blood broke the power of sin over the human heart and made salvation for all men possible.

It was through the death of Jesus Christ that life — spiritual and eternal — came to the earth. The establishing of this life among men is known as the kingdom of heaven. Its continuation bears the designation, eternal life. The crucifixion was in color, and the color was red. — Elisha Douglass

Blithely Ignore The Real Cost

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — On page 80 of an official price guide for determining the cost of operating rent stabilized buildings is this entry:

"Push broom and handle. Heavy duty floor sweeping brush with hardwood block, 2½-3 inch trim and screw type wooden handle, ¾-inch diameter threaded end. Material: (primary fiber of bristles) A. Rattan..."

The description goes on to include tampico, horsehair, polypropylene and unspecified other bristles involved in pricing a push broom. Scores of other items are described, including buckets, wringers, washers, floor waxes, fuel, accounting and management and legal fees.

Nowhere, however, can you find a listing for mortgage interest costs, which these days are one of the biggest costs of all. They aren't included. The official index of building operating costs here simply omits it.

Landlords claim that is but one frustration they must try to live with in this city, which has had "temporary" rent control or stabilization since emergency wartime measures were imposed in 1943.

If you listen to representatives of CHIP, made up of 2,500 owners of 400,000 controlled or stabilized apartments, they will seek to convince you that THE major financial problem of New York stems from controls.

Since 1969, says William Moses, chairman, 325,000 apartments have been abandoned in New York City because their owners couldn't continue to support them at low rents, some of which were set many years ago.

Already, he claims, the cost to replace that lost housing will exceed $20 billion and probably will exceed $30 billon because of inflation and another 200,000 abandonments in "the pipeline."

"New York City is being crushed by its own decline," he continues, explaining that when a building is abandoned it means lost taxes, jobs and homes, followed soon after by closings of stores and institutions.

If a landlord seeks to stick it out, Moses claims, he must do so by reducing or abandoning important services, which speeds the process of deterioration and reduces the value to both tenant and landlord.

Gradually, he suggests, those people with the ability to do so move out of the city, leaving the eroded facilities to poorer tenants who themselves have been forced to leave landlord-abandoned structures.

This, he suggests, provides politicians a chance to exploit the mess. Since controls have led to a bona fide housing shortage, the rents in newer, control-free buildings are forced higher. Seeking votes, elected officials proclaim the need for rent controls to remedy the situation.

Finally, he says, builders avoid the city or, before they will invest their money, demand tax credits. Permits for new units, which exceeded 70,000 in 1962, were below 20,000 in 1979. And some of the best housing stock is now being converted to cooperative or condominium ownership.

"Now you have to buy your way into a New York City apartment," said Moses, "and that's not what made this city great."

CHIP's president, Seymour Zuckerman, claim it is "the white middle class and upper class who are fighting for controls." It isn't the minorities, he says. "Most of them are people who have been in their apartments for years; they have the better apartments."

In a comfortable midtown building the rental list showed many units inhabited by tenants of many years; they were still rent-controlled. Some had newer tenants; decontrolled, their rents were raised yearly.

Almost identical 7-room, 3-bath units in the building ranged from $470 a month to nearly $900, depending on whether they were controlled or decontrolled. Tenants in two of the lowest priced units were a lawyer and a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist conducted his practice there.

In 1977, the Temporary Commission on City Finances reported to the mayor that "The effect, if not the purpose, of rent control and rent stabilization is the subsidization of renters by owners. Cumulatively, this subsidy has exceeded $20 billion."

Moses said the spread of rent control to other parts of the country emanates from New York City. "It is the poison well," he says.

Zuckerman advises cities now considering it to "Nip it in the bud. Destroy the seed."

The Builder Proposes A Dulcimer For Everyone

By JOHN BRANSTON

CLINTON, Miss. (UPI) — A dulcimer for everyone is the motto of J.B. Keith, who will make you one from a cardboard box for $15 or from handcut walnut for about $250.

Keith's "no frills" dulcimer consists of a narrow black cardboard box, four strings, and bent nails for frets. He makes them for children and says only half-jokingly they are his answer to Nashville musician Tut Taylor's $17 plastic dulcimers.

The wooden dulcimer is another matter. By his own estimate, Keith is one of only 12 dulcimer makers in the United States. Each of the hourglass or tear-shaped instruments takes him about 35 hours to make, from cutting the thin strips of walnut, mahogany, cherry or maple to rubbing on the low-sheen finish.

Keith numbers every dulcimer and keeps a register of their owners. Making his instruments even more distinctive are their elaborately carved scroll heads made by fellow craftsman Joe Henry Williams, a retired Jackson policeman.

The husky, bearded Keith spends roughly half his work time making dulcimers in his backyard shop and the other half trying to sell them at music and crafts fairs and in shopping malls around the Southeast.

Usually identified with the southern Appalachian states, the dulcimer was the first truly American instrument, excluding the tom-tom and other Indian instruments. Keith first heard one when he lived in East Tennessee as a child. His new career began eight years ago when he decided to make one for himself.

A lifelong crafts hobbyist, Keith was soon asked to make dulcimers for friends, and within a year he quit his job with the state Tax Commission to become a full-time dulcimer maker. With his beard, pipe, cap and suspenders, Keith seems an unlikely bureaucrat. He says his new job is "a blending of my two loves, crafts and music."

"Doing crafts is a viable way to make a living now," says Keith. "We're trying to get out of this light as hobbyists. We think of ourselves as craftsmen. I manage to make a living at it."

APPEALS IGNORED

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials have ignored repeated pleas from the Bahamas to help in battling drug smugglers, and as a result the island nation has been "invaded" by American criminals, Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling says.

dynamic Republican commercials, spelling out a venturesome policy of economic growth through tax reduction, that brought him back from the brink of defeat in New Hampshire last winter? The commercials themselves are in mothballs; the ideas they contained are banished from future advertising. Dr. Wirthlin has made clear in secret briefings that his surveys show tax reduction to be a losing issue and lower government spending a winning issue.

Since Reagan received the same briefings from Wirthlin, it is remarkable that in the debate against Rep. John Anderson he stoutly defended incentives of lowered taxation to reactivate the American economic system. On this as on other issues, Reagan's political instincts have surpassed the wisdom of non-ideological advisers and their computer printouts.

Those printouts led Reagan's advisers to their passivity and fear of creative ideas. Now the same advisers have handed the advantage in the debate issue back to the White House rather than run the risk that Ronald Reagan, who never has performed badly in a debate, might commit the sin of taking hard positions. If Reagan is elected president, it will be because of irrevocable public displeasure with the incumbent rather than a convincing case made by the challenger.

high or low rates of pregnancies, abortions, and births.

"We are still at the stage in which a relatively small number of individuals publicly oppose sex education in the schools and can bring sex education programs to a halt because the school administrators and school board members have so little confidence in the level of support for sex education in the schools."

The support is out there, the advocacy council feels, and the solution to teen pregnancies rests more in public awareness and education campaigns than in clinics and laws.

"You have to be kidding. we're running an election campaign, not a missing persons bureau."

I decided to see if I'd have any more luck with Fritz Mondale. I called the Carter Headquarters.

"Any news on Vice President Mondale?" I asked.

"No, should there be?" the voice said.

"You don't happen to know where he is right now?"

"If he isn't at a state funeral for some foreign leader, he's probably opening a post office somewhere. He only comes around the office to pick up his mail."

"But is he still Carter's running-mate..." I asked.

"As far as I know. But you had better check that one out with the White House. They never clue us in on what they're doing from one day to the next."

"I'd like to get in touch with him if I possibly can."

"Have you looked in the Yellow Pages under Vice Presidents.. He might be listed there."

"I hadn't thought of that. You've been a big help."

"Don't mention it, and if you find him, would you tell him to call his wife. She said he forgot to pay the electric bill this month."

Parker New Chairman 'Overcharge'

Joseph M. Parker of Ahoskie was elected chairman of Operation Overcharge here Tuesday in a meeting of the executive committee, succeeding J. Larkin Little of Greenville.

Parker is editor of the "Ahoskie Herald" and publisher of several newspapers in northeastern North Carolina and southern Virginia.

The new chairman has been a member of the executive committee of Operation Overcharge since it was established two years by the region's local Chambers of Commerce to fight what they termed exorbitant electric rates being charged by Virginia Electric and Power Co. Parker served the first year as secretary and during the past year was vice chairman.

Other officers named Tuesday were David M. Pittman of Tarboro, vice chairman; Mayor William D. Cox of Hertford, secretary; and William R. Abeyounis of Washington, treasurer.

Anderson's trip to Chapel Hill was the start of a two-day swing through the South, a region considered to be divided evenly between Reagan and Carter with Anderson a distant outsider.

Anderson said he was in the South to let "the country know this is a national campaign ... We are not simply writing off any section of the country."

As for this state, Anderson said, "I choose to believe we have a chance to win here in North Carolina."

participated in Junior Achievement last year and was nominated for a Morehead Scholarship. He belongs to the Pitt County Task Force and participated in the Burroughs Wellcome RECAST project. Tucker attended Governor's School in 1979. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Tucker of Winterville.

Corbett is captain of the varsity cheerleaders at Farmville Central, president of the Keywanettes, and is a member of the National Honor Society, the Foreign Language Club, the Library Club and the Math Club. She participates in Student Council and last year was a major in JROTC. She received medals from the Daughters of the American Revolution for military excellence and the Department of Army recognizing her as a superior cadet. She is the daughter of Mrs. Geraldine Baker of Farmville.

Anderson participates in football and track and is athletic statisician. He is a member of the Key Club, of which he is president this year, VICA, and is a homeroom representative for the Student Government Association. He has served as class president several years, including this year. He received the Women of the World Award for Outstanding Proficiency in Social Studies.

To continue in the 1981 competition, semifinalists must advance to the finalist standing by meeting further requirements. These include filing scholarship applications that provide biographical and academic information, being endorsed and recommended by their secondary school principals, and submitting Scholastic Aptitude Test scores that substantiate their earlier performance on the PSAT/NMSQT.

Over 600 Achievement Scholarships worth more than $2 million will be offered in 1981. The 1,200 semifinalists expected to become finalists will be notified through their high schools in mid-February. Around 70,000 Negro students enter each year.

another female student. "Its the same old political rhetoric."

And one young man seemed to sum up the feelings of many who had attended the speech. "He sounded pretty good, but I just don't know if he has a chance against the competition," he said.

Annual Patient Picnic Is Held

The Mental Health Association's annual picnic for Pitt County patients at Cherry Hospital was enjoyed by about 150 persons Tuesday at the Greenville Moose Lodge. The partial hospitalization clients from the Mental Health Center were also guests.

Volunteers who assisted were Alton Warren, who catered the barbecue lunch; the Lester and Pauline Brown family and music therapy students from ECU, Mental Health Association Director Brenda Gray said. Students from Pitt Community College and ECU served as hosts and hostesses.

"Delicious food, great entertainment and good fellowship were all part of this special gathering," Mrs. Gray said.

Announce Plans

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Plans were announced Tuesday for construction of a $3.6 million electronics manufacturing plant in Cary by a division of Borg-Warner.

The plant, which will make a new line of sensors for the transportation industry, is scheduled to be completed in 1981. Construction is to begin this fall.

Dr. Laupus Is Honored By Agency

East Carolina University medical school dean Dr. William E. Laupus has been honored by the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency for his contributions to the program of health planning in Eastern North Carolina.

Laupus received a plaque from the health systems agency in recognition of his service as a charter member of the governing body of the HSA. His four-year term on the governing body ended recently.

The ECHSA is a private, non-profit corporation funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) working in 29 Eastern North Carolina counties as a health care planning and developing agency and as a review agency for the DHHS on proposed changes in the health care system.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state raised the interest charged banks and savings and loan associations for state deposits and savings certificates to 12½ percent Tuesday.

Court Blow To Abortion Act

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Three sections of North Dakota's Abortion Control Act have been declared unconstitutional by a federal judge who ruled they placed an undue burden on a woman making an abortion decision during her first three months of pregnancy.

U.S. District Judge Paul Benson also ruled unconstitutional part of a fourth section of the law, enacted in 1975 and amended in 1979.

He threw out those sections relating to informed consent and requiring a 48-hour waiting period before an abortion can be performed.

He also ruled unconstitutional provisions requiring parental notification in cases involving minors, banning the advertising of abortion services and requiring the woman to determine how to dispose of the fetus.

"The decision to obtain an abortion free from governmental interference is a fundamental right founded in the right of privacy implicitly in the constitution," Benson said in his ruling Monday.

The suit challenging the law was filed by the Red River Valley chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of Dr. Richard Leigh, Grand Forks, and Jane Bovard, Fargo.

The suit attacked sections of the law governing informed consent. The sections required physicians to describe the physical characteristics of the fetus at the time the abortion was to be performed, and to disclose the physical dangers of abotion and alternatives such as childbirth and adoption.

Benson ruled the first two aspects "are unconstitional because through them the state has impermissably injected itself into the private physician-patient relationship and thus into the abortion decision process."

Flooded By Phone Calls

By C.W. MIRANKER

CBS affiliates across the nation were besieged overnight with telephone calls about the telecast of "Playing For Time" with many callers angry that pro-Palestinian actress Vanessa Redgrave was chosen to play a survivor of a Nazi death camp.

Demonstrators picketed stations in Philadelphia, Denver and Detroit.

But other viewers praised the made-for-TV movie based on the life of Fania Fenelon, a survivor of Auschwitz prison camp. Fenelon, as [illegible] things on television.

Some 200 people demonstrated in Philadelphia outside CBS-owned WCAU, which received about 400 calls of protest.

Five protesters picketed KMGH-TV in Denver and signs that said "Vanessa Redgrave she acting when she the Palestinians." Denver affiliate [illegible] 68 calls in favor of the broadcast Tuesday night, 56 against it.

Meanwhile, [illegible] gathered for an "Anti-Cabaret" at the Stephen Wise Temple in Los Angeles. "This is our attempt to get people away from their sets tonight," said spokesman Robert Lifton.

CBS disregarded Miss Fenelon's feelings in broadcasting the film, Feldman charged. But the network, the Columbia Broadcasting System, said Miss Fenelon, a Parisian cabaret singer who played in the death camp orchestra, felt that Miss Redgrave should not have played her.

But another Auschwitz survivor, Edith Hoffe of Lehigh Acres, Fla., said she was not offended that Miss Redgrave won the part.

"People should forget," said the 57-year-old Berlin native.

"I went into a store one time and the children saw my number. 'What's this?' they asked, pointing to the number tatooed on her left arm. "This is Auschwitz. I will [illegible]

The Supreme Court scheduled arguments on the case for December.

Bason, a District Court judge, ordered the 16-year-old boy enrolled at the school after ruling that North Carolina did not have adequate facilities to educate him. The boy has a high IQ but has had disciplinary problems stemming from the emotional disturbance.

The state Department of Human Resources announced Tuesday that a center to treat emotionally disturbed, agressive teenagers would open today in the John B. Umstead Hospital at Butner. There was no immediate indication as to whether the courts would consider the center adequate to treat the Wake County youth.

Peace Imposed In Turkish Coup

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

GULTEPE, Turkey (AP) — The army has "re-taken" this suburb of slums in the hills outside Istanbul, whitewashing political slogans from the walls and establishing the state's presence after months of effective control by leftist extremists.

One of half a dozen towns in a belt around Turkey's biggest city that the far-left called "liberated zones," Gultepe will provide a test of the junta's ability to deal with political terrorism in the long term.

By day, the soldiers who moved in here after the Sept. 12 coup patrol the pot-holed main street in pairs carrying NATO-issue M-14 rifles. At midnight, when the nationwide curfew takes effect, Gultepe is sealed off by tanks.

But stamping out the violence in a town that has seen 50 deaths in the past two years may take some time. Despite the heavy military presence, residents say they have heard the crack of rifle fire at night, presumably by snipers.

"In guerrilla warfare, guerrillas retreat into the mountains. Here it's the side-streets," said a 21-year-old medical student pointing to the maze of narrow, dirt roads between the grimy, concrete, two-story buildings. He asked that his name not be used.

Gultepe, which means Rose Hill in Turkish, is only a half-hour's drive from downtown Istanbul but provides a stunning contrast to the stately mosques, museums and mansions in the former capital of the Ottoman Empire.

In the past 10 years Gultepe's population has swelled to 150,000 with the migration of rural Turks seeking jobs in the nearby light-bulb, textile and cable factories.

About two years ago, according to residents, right-wing and left-wing terrorist groups moved in to try to politicize the workers. They battled openly in a series of hit-and-run shootups in coffee-houses, bombings and sniper attacks on homes.

Most residents, without any political leanings, stood by helplessly. The terrorists were often better armed than the police.

The left, led by the Dev-Sol, Turkey's most feared leftist terrorist gang, prevailed. Municipal authority broke down.

"I used to see the Dev-Sol sitting in front of a coffeehouse. Nobody challenged them," said Kazim Mutlu, 46, who moved here with his three children from Sinop on the Black Sea and opened a tiny grocery shop.

"They came to me twice a month and demanded protection money. I paid."

The mayor was a member of former Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit's left-of-center Republican Peoples Party, but residents alleged the mayor tolerated the extremists.

The Dev-Sol set up neighborhood committees to satisfy demands for basic services such as water, electricity and transport and promised protection against any right-wing terrorist attacks. They also provided legal advisers to intervene on behalf of residents in cases against the state, and tried to block the appointment of non-leftist school teachers.

Since the coup, there have been scores of arrests here, reportedly including the local Dev-Sol leaders. Mayor Celal Altinay was ousted.

As elsewhere in Turkey, the calm has brought people back on the streets again in the evening. Stores which used to close at dusk are now staying open until 10 p.m. in some cases.

The army sent squads of youths into the streets to whitewash over the political graffiti, although one can still see posters put up on a telephone booth declaring political martyrdom for three leftists who were hanged in 1972 after the previous military intervention, the last executions in Turkey.

Where Are WAVES Of World War 11 Duty ?

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — In the dark days of World War II, more than 700 Navy officers safe on the beaches suddenly found themselves sent to the cruel sea — displaced by officers in skirts.

The women were called WAVES, short for Women Accepted for Voluntary Emergency Service. It was 1943. They wore snappy blue uniforms with perky little hats, and they were as bright as new pennies.

At that time, war and the Navy made for a dramatic change in a young woman's lifestyle.

Now, a couple of one-time lieutenants junior grade who were in that first WAVES class, Carol Wells and Deanie Johnson, want to locate the other 774 for a study.

"We want to assess the impact of naval training, the war, and trace the different course our lives took because of that strange thing," Mrs. Wells says.

"We think we are healthier and smarter and what not. We think we benefited. But there is no telling," she says.

The Navy was no help to the two women. It said it had no idea where all those WAVES went after the war.

"Furthermore, the Navy is not a bit interested. The women came when they were needed, then they went out, and that ended that," says Mrs. Wells, now an assistant archivist at the Northeast Louisiana University library.

So, like mice nibbling into a big cheese, they started with 12 of the 776 names and thus far have located 170.

"We wrote to the 12 and asked them who they know from the class, then we wrote to the new names and asked them who they know," Mrs. Wells says. "It keeps expanding.

"The problem is," she says, "there will be little pockets of friendship around that we won't get a handle on and that we may never find unless they contact us."

She and Deanie Johnson, now a member of the NLU sociology department, have a social survey in mind — but it depends on whether they can find most of the 776 women still living, and also whether they locate a foundation willing to finance the research.

So far, the Pericles Foundation Award Committee for the Society for the Study of Social Problems, in Buffalo, N.Y., has chipped in with $500. NLU has put in another $500.

The first WAVES trained at Smith College in Northhampton, Mass. They were commissioned in early January 1943. German submarines were running wild in the Atlantic, the Japanese dominated the Pacific.

"We spent the first month as apprentice seamen, the next two as midshipmen. After we were commissioned, we were assigned to Navy bases all over the country. Within a week, the men we replaced had all gone off to sea," Mrs. Wells recalls.

It also would be interesting to trace the fate of those displaced men — whether any became heroes, how many were killed in action. But, says Mrs. Wells, "We have to have a cutoff point."

Free Will Baptists Plan Dinner

Representatives from the Free Will Baptist Churches in Pitt County recently gathered to plan their annual dinner in support of Mount Olive College.

Meeting at Reedy Branch Church near Winterville, the group selected the Rev. Bobby Taylor of Greenville as chairman of the 1980 Pitt County Dinner.

Other church members serving on the steering commmittee include Gerald Whitehurst of Robersonville; Randolph Harris of Winterville; Walter Beddard and Marvin Hardy, both of Ayden; and Floyd Harris and J.C. Boyd, both from Greenville.

The event is scheduled for November 11 at 7 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School. Churches represented at the meeting were Bethany, Elm Grove, Black Jack, Piney Grove, Hickory Grove, Sweet Gum Grove, Rose Hill and Reedy Branch.

Scoundrel by Revlon
A Major New Disturbance
. . . She takes fair advantage
. . . You can too!

Experience the style, the power, the pulse of . . . Scoundrel

Scoundrel is unique. She's strong-minded, but never tough. She's a believer in letting the chips fall where they may and has yet to be wounded by a chip. Scoundrel didn't need Women's Lib to be free. She was born liberated. She is and does and says what she wants but always in a civil and civilized way. It is with a sense of affection and understanding if we call her Scoundrel. For she happens all too rarely . . . but when she has occured, she's been Queen Elizabeth I. And Sarah Bernhardt. And Josephine Baker. And yes, Auntie Mame. She is her own private property. No one owns her. But she relates well to others. She loves the country living way of life but still needs the challenges of big cities to nourish all her senses. She has a sense of style, a certain dazzle about her. Scoundrel is eclectic. Married or un, mother or childless, career woman or not — her presence prevails. When you have a woman like this only a remarkable fragrance can match her and define her. Now there is such a fragrance. We call it Scoundrel . . . sophisticated, delicious . . . fascinating. It's a composition that interprets all her diverse elements — hints of sensuous fruity notes combined with soft green florals to provide the alluring dimensions of this exotic fragrance. It takes a remarkable fragrance to live up to her. Try it today!

PCA Plans Annual Meet At Minges

The annual meeting of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association will be held Saturday, Oct. 11 at Minges Coliseum here, according to Arnold B. Parris, president.

Parris said that a highlight of the meeting will be a report on progress made by the association during the year. He added that the election of two directors and a nominating committee is also on the agenda, as well as a report from the board of directors on important actions taken during the year.

The evening will begin with a barbeque and chicken dinner and then the annual meeting at 6 p.m.

The association, with main offices in Greenville and a branch office in Snow Hill, makes short and intermediate-term loans to farmers, ranchers, and growers in Pitt and Greene Counties. It is owned entirely by its member-borrowers.

Shoe Center Sets Opening

A 10 a.m. ribbon cutting will get the opening activities underway at the new facility.

The 3,000 square foot store will carry sport, casual and high fashion footwear for the family, including handbags, hosiery and accessory items.

The store's decor will feature orange carpeting and earth-tone colors, it was pointed out.

Campaign Staff Job Is Filled

Barbara Carney of Bethel has been appointed by the national Carter-Mondale Campaign staff to work in El Paso, Tex., as telephone bank supervisor for the state of Texas.

She was a special place supervisor in charge of 24 counties in North Carolina for the U. S. Census Bureau. Miss Carney also worked for the Cater-Mondale campaign at the Democratic National Convention from North Carolina.

A graduate of Elizabeth City State University, she is the daughter of Mrs. Willie Mae Carney.

FOCUS

Sponsoring the Debate

The major vice-presidential candidates are scheduled to face off tomorrow night in a debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters. The League of Women Voters does not endorse candidates or political parties. It encourages all eligible Americans to register and vote, and provides factual information about the candidates and their ideas. The league was founded in 1920, the year American women gained the right to vote. Its first goal was to help women understand public affairs so they could vote intelligently. Tomorrow night's debate is part of the league's campaign to educate voters about the candidates and issues. League President Ruth Hinerfeld is shown here.

DO YOU KNOW — Which amendment to the Constitution gave women the right to vote?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Ford, Chrysler and General Motors are called the Big Three.

Bilingual School Debate Is Heating Up

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer

CUMBERLAND, R.I. (AP) — Rosa Fino's dark eyes flashed as she scooted forward in her chair, then spoke fervently in defense of bilingual education in public schools.

"Without it, I would have quit school right away," said the 17-year-old immigrant from Mangualde, Portugal. "I came here to school when I was 14. They put me in all-English classes. I didn't know what I was doing."

Miss Fino, now a junior at Cumberland High School, said she learned nothing until she entered Cumberland's new bilingual program. There she took the usual high school courses from a teacher who taught in Portuguese, giving Rosa time to master English.

But Rhode Island state Rep. John Assalone, whose father came from Italy as a boy, contends bilingual education programs are a waste of taxpayers' money:

"It's been shown that when you hand people something, even language, on a silver platter, it doesn't work. Immigrants should learn English like my father did, without burdening the American taxpayer to support expensive and failing programs."

Assalone and Miss Fino reflect two sides of a debate taking place in many states. This month, the U.S. Department of Education concludes hearings on a plan to broaden bilingual education in public schools for an estimated 3.5 million pupils whose primary language is not English.

Bilingual programs, which have sprouted in schools across the nation since 1968, are under attack from opponents who, like Assalone, campaign under the banners of tax relief and local government control.

Proponents are having to fight for programs once considered secure.

"One of our biggest problems is the lack of hard data on either side to prove whether bilingual programs work. We can see they work, but we have no real studies to confirm that," said Virginia da Mota, a consultant for the Rhode Island Department of Education.

The controversy flared in Rhode Island last winter, when backers failed to win passage of a bill to expand bilingual education at a cost to the state of $2.6 million. Assalone led opponents.

The eight programs in Rhode Island are supported by a combination of federal and state funds. Similar programs can be found from Alaska to Maine and Minnesota to Texas, where immigrant children are taught in languages ranging from Japanese and Spanish to French and Navajo.

Many of the programs have been around since 1968, when Congress enacted the Bilingual Education Act.

The new Department of Education proposal, which aims to address "one of the most serious barriers to equal opportunity education," contemplates spending up to $592 million on bilingual instruction for children who score below the 40th percentile in standardized tests.

The Department of Education currently spends about $169 million to $325 million for 831,000 students in bilingual programs. The proposal to boost that figure has aggravated an already sore subject in many states.

In California, for example, bilingual proponents recently fought off an effort to revise the state's program and are girding for a fresh attack next year.

Opinion is also divided in Rhode Island, which draws large numbers of Portuguese, Colombians and other Hispanics to work in its textile and jewelry industries.

"I see the new swing away from bilingual instruction as another sign that the New Right is gaining a foothold in this country," said Charles Santos, director of Cumberland's bilingual education program, which offers 215 Portuguese students classes in their native tongue.

"Statements like that do not address the issue," said Assalone. "The fact is that studies show these programs do not work. Taxpayers are wasting millions of dollars to fund a Job Corps for bilingual teachers."

"We can show results here in Cumberland," countered Santos, who said about 50 Portuguese students have been "main-streamed" into all-English classes since his program began two years ago.

Assalone said he favored some kind of language instruction for immigrant students — but nothing as expensive as the current method.

"My father was thrown down the stairs of a New York City school for not speaking English. I'm not for that. But I am for a little bit of self-reliance, a little bit of self-help among these immigrant groups," he said.

Dora Gomes, 17, another bilingual student at Cumberland, said, "I don't understand what he (Assalone) has against programs like the one at this school."

Said Miss Gomes, whose Portuguese family came to the United States from Argentina five years ago: "You can't learn math or history in a language you don't understand. You've got to learn the language first. I don't see why people can't understand that."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up .86 to 933.28 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 5-3 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market turned upward Tuesday after a three-day sell-off when the government reported a smaller-than-expected 1.9 percent rise in the index of leading economic indicators for August.

The news was taken as a sign that the economy might not be gathering inflationary momentum as fast as had been previously believed.

That, in turn, raised some hopes for a letup in the pressures that have driven interest rates sharply higher lately.

Actively traded NYSE issues included Chrysler, up ¼ at 9⅜; Sears Roebuck, unchanged at 16¾, and International Business Machines, off ⅛ at 64.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 10.49 to 932.42.

Cogent Reasons

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — National Spinning Co. of Washington has won the right to buy electricity for its Beaufort County plant from Carolina Power & Light Co.

The company, which now buys its electricity from the town of Washington,had sought to use CP&L as its supplier in an effort to avoid higher rates charged by Virginia Electric and Power Co.

Vepco supplies electricity to the town of Washington, which in turn has been supplying National Spinning.

In its order, the commission said "the record in this case is replete with allegations as well as proof of cogent reasons why National should be permitted to choose and be served by CP&L."

National Spinning has said the change would cut its annual electric bill by $400,000.

Chapter Is Dedicated

ECU News Bureau

Forty-seven students in the East Carolina University School of Business have been initiated as charter members into ECU's new collegiate chapter of the American Marketing Association.

All are pursuing majors in marketing or related fields — business administration, management or economics.

In a rcent campus ceremony, the new chapter was formally dedicated to Dr. Albert R. Conley, retired member of the ECU marketing faculty, and will be known as "The Albert R. Conley Collegiate Chapter."

Since his retirement last May, Dr. Conley has continued to teach part-time at ECU. Before joining the East Carolina faculty in 1963, Conley taught at the University of Missouri and maintained an active career as a private marketing consultant to various businesses throughout the U.S., primarily dairy companies and milk producers' cooperatives.

A native of Tulsa, Okla., Conley holds degrees from Oklahoma State and Ohio State Universities.

Newly-elected president of the Conley AMA Chapter is Mike McMahan of High Point. Vice president is Elton Boney of Fayetteville. Dr. John Keyt, an assistant professor in the School of Business, is serving as the chapter's faculty advisor.

Area new chapter members include:

Richard Noble, business administration and marketing, of Ayden; Mary Rollins, business administration and marketing, of Bethel; Clay Markin, business administration and marketing, of Greenville; Susan Shelbourn, marketing and economics, of Greenville; Bert Whitehurst, business administration and marketing, of Greenville; Terry Anderson, business administration and marketing, of Winterville.

Uncle Sam To Pay Back Claims Cost

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The federal government has agreed to cover the cost of any back claims for food stamps by military families who were denied the benefits because of administrative errors in computing eligibility, a state official says.

John Kerr, chief of the North Carolina food-assistance branch, said the state — under terms of a compromise with federal officials — will amend its regulations controlling applications.

Contrary to federal regulations, North Carolina has included housing allowances paid to families living on military bases as part of their income, even though such allowances are never actually paid to the families. The allowances are deducted from military paychecks.

That error meant that hundreds of military families in the state who applied for food stamps have been denied benefits they should have received. In addition, some families living on military bases may have received fewer food stamps than they should have.

The USDA Food and Nutrition Service Regional Office in Atlanta is responsible for interpreting regulations for eight southeastern states, including North Carolina, for the federally funded food stamp program.

Hearing Tests To Be Done

Pitt County Schools will be conducting hearing screening in grades K,1,3,5,7, and 9 during the 1980-81 school year. The screening will be staggered during the year in five blocks of schools. This will enable the screening staff to return to individual schools to complete retests and to make appropriate referrals in shorter time.

In October hearing screening will be held at Bethel, Whitfield, Belvoir, Chicod, and Falkland; in December at Stokes, Pactolus, Bundy and Sugg; in January Ayden Grammar School, A.G. Cox, Farmville Middle and Wellcome; in March Conley, Ayden-Grifton, Farmville Central and North Pitt.

For specific dates or questions about the hearing screening contact Kay Fagundus at 752-6106.

DINNER PLANNED

The Pactolus Rural Fire Department will sponsor its annual barbecue pork or chicken dinner Friday, Oct. 3 from 11:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Price per plate will be $2.50, eat-in or take out. It will be held at the firehouse in Pactolus. Tickets are available from the members and at Stop-Eze Foodland.

Three Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $3,850 property damage resulted from three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted when a car driven by Marianne Williams of 2501 Madison Cir. collided with a parked car owned by Elwood Cox Peele Jr. of 2403 Jefferson Dr., about 7:55 a.m. on Jefferson Drive, 245 feet west of the Crockett Drive intersection.

Police, who charged Ms. Williams with exceeding a safe speed and improper equipment (tires), estimated damage from the collision at $700 to the Williams car and $1,500 to the Peele vehicle.

Cars driven by Jeffrey Dale Shatterly of Route 1, Autryville and Hugh Milton James Sr. of Route 1, Bethel, collided about 6:45 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet east of the Charles Street intersection, causing $800 damage to the Shatterly car and $250 damage to the James auto.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 11:45 a.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 250 feet north of the Chestnut Street intersection.

Drivers of the vehicles were listed as Tammy Renee Mills of Route 1, Greenville, and Theodore Roosevelt Hardy of Route 3, Grifton.

Arrest Made By Deputies

A 20-year-old Rt. 2, Farmville man was arrested Tuesday by Pitt County deputies and charged in connection with the recent larceny of some $2,500 in cash and checks from a rural store.

Deputies arrested Donald Glenn Holloman on the larceny count following investigation of a Sept. 27 incident at Holloman's Store located at Horton's Corner north of Farmville, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

The sheriff said that the operator of Holloman's Store, Larry Coggins, reported that he was outside pumping gas around 9:05 p.m. and when he went back inside he discovered that a bank bag containing the cash and checks was missing.

Sheriff Tyson said that bond for Holloman, who was arrested at 4:30 p.m., was set at $500.

He added that $726 in cash was recovered.

Prices Steady At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Prices have remained comparatively steady for the last several days on the Farmville Tobacco Market. Top grades of cutters and leaf continue to sell as high as $1.80 per pound.

An increase in volume of quality tobacco is responsible for increases in prices during the last two weeks. Leaf and nondescript grades accounted for most of the volume on Tuesday's sale. Stabilization receipts accounted for 3.42 percent of gross sales. The market sold 754,472 pounds for $1,212,922 and an average of $160.76 per hundred pound, $16 dollars more than last year on the same sale day.

For the season, the market has sold 22,413,496 pounds for $33,640,194 and a season average of $150.09 per hundred pounds.

Sets AL Record

Rickey Henderson of Oakland successfully steals second as Chicago White Sox second baseman Jim Morrison awaits throw in sixth inning Tuesday. It was Henderson's 97th steal of the season, setting an American League record for stolen bases in a season. The old record, set in 1915, was held by Ty Cobb. (AP Laserphoto)

Holmes: Got To KO Ali

Related Stories, Page 16

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes looked around his hotel suite which was spilling over with reporters.

"Only Ali brings you out," the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion said. "He makes you know me. I never dreamed of this. Until this fight, nobody came around. That's why I've got to knock Ali out. Because I like having you all around."

It is true that Holmes is something of an anonymous champion, going into Thursday night's fight unbeaten in 35 bouts with 26 knockouts, yet hardly a household name. But Muhammad Ali brings built-in identification, wherever he goes, even after two years away from the ring. He is a citizen of the world, perhaps the most recognized figure in the history of sports. And he plays that role to the hilt.

"Holmes fights for his family," sneered Ali. "I fight for the oppressed people of the world. I am a world power for good, not bad. I am the leader of the world's oppressed people. This will be a holy war. The whole world is in my corner."

Sounds convincing, doesn't he? Not to Holmes he doesn't.

"He's an old man and when I whip Ali, they'll say I whipped an old man," the champion said. "By the third round, I'll be digging Ali to the body."

This Don King-Caesars Palace promotion has generated a live gate of about 25,000 fans paying a record $6 million. Closed circuit television and ancilliary rights will make it a record revenue-producer.

The previous record gate was the $4.5 million reported in New Orleans when Leon Spinks lost the World Boxing Association title Sept. 15, 1978. Interestingly, the fighter opposing Spinks that night was Muhammad Ali. Are you beginning to get the picture?

"I am one of a kind," says Ali. "There's never been one like me before and you won't see anything like me after me."

Holmes will collect $4 million for this fight. Still, that is only half what Ali is getting. His name is still magic, no matter how old he is.

And after he finishes talking about holy wars and fighting for oppressed peoples, and about rewriting boxing history by becoming a four-time champion, Ali gets around to the bottom line.

"Eight million cash dollars ain't too bad," he said.

Without him, the price for this fight would tumble. Holmes is not a charismatic champion and he knows that having Ali in the other corner means instant benefits, mostly monetary, for him.

"I was ready to retire after beating Spinks," said Ali. "Then I saw Holmes and (WBA champion Mike) Weaver and a chance to be four-time champion. As God is my witness, I wanted this to be it."

Then he pauses and adds the punchline. "Then Weaver for $10 million," he said.

The lure of Ali has the high rollers here excited. When he works out, they flock to watch — at $3 a head — and hang on his every move. When he takes a day off, as both fighters did Tuesday, the gamblers concentrate on the gaming tables and wait for his next appearance.

They chant "Ali, Ali, Ali," at him and he soaks up the adulation.

"The people are for me," he said. "And they are right to be. They don't like Holmes. They want to see the miracle."

For Ali, the first miracle was performed on his body. He has trained hard for six months, trimming down from a flabby 254 to a svelte 220.

"You remember those pictures you saw from England with his belly hanging out?" asked his trainer, Angelo Dundee. "He did that on purpose, sticking his belly out that way. That was part of the challenge."

Backyard Brawls Set In ECC

DHC's Robert Sutton

A-G's Chris Strickland

FC's Chris Sutton

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The second half of the 1980 high school football season begins Friday evening with two backyard brawls highlighting the area schedule.

Ayden-Grifton, coming off its first win of the season, a 22-14 victory over Greene Central, plays host to North Pitt, a 7-0 loser to Farmville Central this past Friday.

Meanwhile, the Jaguars play host to D.H. Conley, which lost to Southern Nash, 28-13, after leading at the half, 13-0.

In other games last week, Williamston extended its unbeaten record to 4-0 with a 10-7 win over Roanoke Rapids while Roanoke suffered its first loss in four starts, dropping a 27-0 decision to Ahoskie, ranked third in the state by AP. Jamesville, 1-4 overall and 1-3 in the Beauort-Hyde-Martin Conference, lost to Bath, 26-0, its third straight loss.

This week's schedule includes Greene Central, 1-4 overall and 0-3 in the ECC, traveling to Southwest Edgecombe, Roanoke playing host to Plymouth, Williamston entertaining Washington and Jamesville returning home to face Aurora.

D.H. Conley

The last two Friday nights the Vikings have had a look at two of three team yet to lose an ECC game. Two weeks ago Conley lost four fumbles which helped explain its 21-18 loss to North Lenoir, now 4-0 overall and 2-0 in the ECC.

This past week the Vikings, 0-4 and 0-2, led Southern Nash (3-1-1, 3-0), 13-0, at the half only to see the Firebirds rally for a 28-13 victory.

"It was a hard loss," said second-year Conley coach Jimbo Walker. "But, no, not the hardest I've had here. We've had a number of those."

Trailing 13-0, the Firebirds, tied for first in the conference with Charles B. Aycock, scored on their initial drive of the second half and it was downhill from there for the Vikes.

"We didn't have the ball but for three plays in the third quarter," Walker said. "They scored. We got the ball back, ran three plays and punted and didn't see the ball again (until the fourth period). They came out and were able to set the tempo and we couldn't get it back."

Walker has no wish to see a repeat of last week's second half this week against Farmville Central. He would, however, be content to again see a performance like the Vikings put on in the first half against Southern Nash.

"We just lined up and ran straight at them," Walker said. "Our offensive line was moving out and our running backs were running real hard. We didn't do anything fancy."

As for this week, Walker says: "Farmville's getting better and better every week. They're awfully young, but he (Coach Gene Brewer) will have his team right before long.

"The thing they do best is execute. They execute everything well — offense, defense and the kicking game. Our defense is going to have to be more consistent if we hope to stop them. But if you beat a team like Farmville you know you've beaten a good team."

Ayden-Grifton

Until last week, Ayden-Grifton had not won a game, thanks mainly to an offense that had scored just 14 points in its first four games.

Friday night the Charger offense got offensive, scoring on two plus 70-yard plays by split end Timmy Edwards en route to a 22-14 victory over Greene Central.

"We got ahead early in the ballgame and that seemed to give us a big pyschological lift," said Charger coach Dixon Sauls, whose team is now 1-4 overall and 1-2 in the ECC.

Rampants Ranked Second In State Poll

NP's Dennis Bradley

By The Associated Press

The sportswriters who vote weekly in The Associated Press poll of North Carolina high school football teams have decided they were right the first time.

Kannapolis and Southwest Guilford, leaders two weeks ago in the first poll of the 1980 season but second a week ago, have been returned to the top this week — Kannapolis in 4A, Southwest Guilford in 2A-1A. Lexington remained the top team in 3A.

Kannapolis was ranked second in the statewide poll behind Northern Durham last week, but the Little Wonders regained the top spot after a 28-0 conquest of High Point Andrews and Northern Durham's 12-8 loss to Chapel Hill.

Southwest Guilford fell behind Robbinsville last week, but the two switched places this week.

In the 4A poll, Kannapolis got 17 of the 20 first-place votes and had 188 points overall in voting. Greenville Rose, with 157 points, was second. Fayetteville Terry Sanford, Chapel Hill, Greensboro Page, Hickory, Jacksonville, Northern Durham, Goldsboro and newcomer Henderson Vance followed. Vance replaced Charlotte Harding, which fell to 11th.

The 3A ratings remained virtually the same as last week, with the top nine teams retaining their spots. Lexington had 14 first-place votes and 176 points, followed by Burlington Williams with 161. Others were Ahoskie, Lincolnton, Clinton, East Wake, Forest Hills, Eastern Alamance, Pikeville Aycock and newcomers Fairmont and West Caldwell tied for 10th. Third place Boone Watauga, which [illegible] straight week. First-place votes are in parentheses. Points are assigned on basis of 10 for a first-place vote, then 9, 8, 7, etc.:

Ali: Looking For A Miracle

Closed Circuit Sales Rallying For Ali-Holmes

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Ticket sales for the closed circuit telecast of the Muhammad Ali-Larry Holmes heavyweight title fight have begun to rally after a slow start, promoters say.

"It's typical of past Ali fights, where sales grow in the last week," says Jack Trevitt, head of closed circuit television for Don King Productions, Inc., which is promoting the fight.

"People begin to realize Ali's in shape and that there will be a real fight, not just a rope-a-dope special," Trevitt said Tuesday.

Trevitt said ticket sales in most of the major metropolitan areas were doing well. It appeared that auditoriums and theatres in suburban and rural areas were the ones lagging behind expectations.

"Up until last week; it was slow," Trevitt said. "There's been a gradual buildup, and now we've got some real acceleration. We're looking at selling every bit of 1.2 million seats, or about 75 percent of what's available (in the United States and Canada)."

Murray Goodman, who's publicizing the fight for Don King Productions, said there were between 300 and 325 closed circuit outlets in the United States. In addition, parts of Los Angeles, Milwaukee and Cincinnati will be able to view the fight Thursday from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas via home pay television at $10 a pop.

Goodman said the fight also would be beamed for television viewing to China and Israel for the first time, and the Soviet Union also would take the telecast for use on its state-run television station.

Holmes - A Can't Win Situation?

LAS VEGAS, Nevada (AP) — Larry Holmes approaches the defense of his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Thursday night in something of a can't win situation.

If he defeats Muhammad Ali, he knows critics will say Ali, at age 38, is over the hill making the victory a hollow one.

If he loses to Ali, he knows critics will say Holmes never was much of a champion anyway, beating inferior opponents on the road to the throne.

Holmes is fully aware of the Catch-22 situation. "I will win," he says rather matter-of-factly, "because I'd rather have them say I beat an old Ali than to have them say an old Ali beat a young Larry Holmes."

Holmes is one month short of his 31st birthday, not exactly young by sports standards. But he is eight years younger than Ali and those years could make a difference over the course of 15 rounds.

"I'm young and strong and full of endurance," said Holmes, dipping into a little Ali-type poetry. "He needs insurance."

Well, maybe not insurance, but certainly Ali will need all his tools Thursday night. And the suspicion in Holmes' camp is that two years away from the ring will have rusted those tools for Ali.

Since Ali won back the WBA version of the title in September, 1978, he has been idle. Over that same period, Holmes has won seven fights and none of those bouts have gone the distance.

"This is the fourth fight this year," Holmes said. "I've been very active and I'm good."

And yet, there are those people around the fight game who wonder just how good Holmes really is. Critics point to his flatfooted, straight-up style. He is not what you would call fast, certainly not as fast as Ali was in his prime.

The list of people he has beaten is hardly awe-inspiring. His last two defenses have been against Leroy Jones and Scott Ledoux, a pair of journeyman heavyweights. Ali laughs at the names and rattles off his own list of opponents — a heavyweight who's who that starts with Sonny Liston, includes Joe Frazier and Ken Norton three times each, George Foreman, and a host of others. "I've been in so many wars," Ali sighed. "This is his first pressure fight."

Perhaps with that in mind, Ali has been hard at work weaving a web of psychological warfare, saying he will keep right on talking in the ring. Holmes laughs it off, saying it won't work on him.

"I'm not into clowning," the champion said. "If he talks to me, he's gonna get his jaw broken like he did by Norton."

Technically, Holmes has plenty going for him. He owns an excellent left jab and puts combination punches together very well. There is thunder in his right uppercut, the punch he used to beat Mike Weaver in a fight in which he was in trouble.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali held a news conference during the Roberto Duran-Sugar Ray Leonard fight last June in Montreal. He appeared bulky and tired. His face was puffy. There were gray specks in his air.

Now, the day before his bid to become heavyweight champion for the fourth time in a fight against Larry Holmes, Thursday night, Ali is a "new-looking" man.

"This is my first miracle," said Ali, whose weight soared into the 250s during retirement but is now down to about 220. He also looks younger than he did in Montreal. But he is 38.

His "miracle" was achieved through thousands of calisthetics, road work, sparring, hair dye and the shaving of his mustache.

But while Ali claims to have worked a miracle, he also says, "I'm the master of illusion."

Ali sees himself as "not human."

Dr. Donald Romeo of the Nevada State Athletic Commission sees a man "who is in such better shape than the average person of 38 that there is no comparison."

Ken Norton, who fought Ali three times and beat him once, sees a man who "has lost weight but he's still soft. He's not had time to harden himself."

So what will the real Muhammad Ali look like when he stands up in the Nevada heat to fight a man, who is eight years younger, who has never been beaten and who has fought seven times in the last two years while Ali was inactive.

Norton thinks we're going to see an Ali will will try to fight Holmes like he did George Foreman in Africa in 1974. He forced Foreman to follow him to the ropes where he made Foreman punch himself into exhaustion with ill-conceived punches against Ali's arms. Ali won on an eight-round knockout. But some fight observers think Ali will force the action in the first couple of rounds, trying land a telling punch while he is fresh, mindful that his ring rustiness might affect his legs in the later rounds.

It seems here that Ali's best chance is to make it a sloppy fight through the middle rounds by grabbing and holding, trying to make Holmes maul him and expend his strength. This would enable Ali to use his excellent left jab and his good right counter over a tired Holmes' left in the late rounds.

Ali won't dance much against Holmes. He can't. But he shouldn't have to because Holmes fights mostly flat-footed. This will enable Ali to set himself to get power into the right.

Ali, who last fought Sept. 15, 1978, when he beat Leon Spinks, takes a tremendous punch but he is not the defensive fighter he once was. Because he once relied on his brilliant speed to keep him out of harms way, he is not adept at blocking and slipping punches, as he showed in several fights before his retirement.

Holmes: No Mercy For Ali

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ali calls him "Peanut Head."

He can walk down the famous Las Vegas strip with his name emblazoned on his sweat shirt and not a soul will stop and stare. He drives up to Caesar's Palace, the valet opens the door and nobody gets out.

Such is the gnawing fate of Larry Holmes, the WBC heavyweight boxing champion who for years has lived in the dark shadows of obscurity but who hopes to shatter that invisible curtain with his flailing fists here Thursday night.

"People will know me on Friday morning," vows the hulking undefeated titleholder, speaking of his 15-round defense against the aging Muhammad Ali.

"I thought I would never say this. I'm going to show the man no mercy. He'll have to be on his knees before I even look at the referee."

Onetime reverence for his old boss has developed into revulsion in the case of the embittered Holmes as he prepares to destroy the shadow that has dogged him throughout his successful but personally unsatisfactory professional career.

In the formal interviews, Holmes speaks guardedly of the legendary three-time champion for whom he once worked as a sparring partner for $125 a week. "I've always said Ali was a great fighter. But he's old now. And he's got something I want."

That something is public acclaim — an intangible quality that can't be bought by victories and million-dollar purses.

So Holmes is preparing for this fight with a vengeance that seethes and churns inside of him and turns what once was a pleasant, outgoing young man into a vicious killer.

"I will knock him out," Holmes boasts in a low, measured voice. "Sometimes between the first round and the ninth."

In intimate talks with a handful of friends in his luxurious suite in Caesar's Palace, Holmes presents a different picture of the man the world has come to adore.

"He intimidates people," insists the champion, referring to Ali. "He psyches them out — his opponents, the press and the public.

"But he can't intimidate me. I worked too long with the man. I know him better than anybody else."

Without saying so outright, Holmes hints of a hidden Ali mean streak.

"He used to try to kill us sparring partners," he said. "Once he beat up J. Bar Brown in front of his mamma and papa.

"He pays 40 or 50 people to come to my workouts and yell 'Ali! Ali! Ali!' Then he'll come in, hold up his hand to the spectators and plead, 'Give this man respect,' meaning me.

"It's all a fake."

"Ali treated Holmes very well, he treats everybody well," says Angelo Dundee, who has trained boxing's premier personality from the moment he pulled on gloves as a pro. "Larry is trying to psyche himself up, build up a 'hate' factor. It's common in this game."

Holmes' disenchantment is understandable.

He was the product of the kind of hopelessness and despair that can befall an underprivileged kid, one of 12, born in Cuthbert, Ga., near the Alabama line, of struggling parents.

His mother and father were divorced when he was in the seventh grade after moving to Easton, Pa., and he became a dropout and tried to keep the family in food by working in a carwash. He became a juvenile delinquent who stayed just a few steps ahead of the law.

A fine athlete, he fought as an amateur and then turned pro in 1973, winning 27 fights without a defeat before he beat Ken Norton for the WBC crown in 1978. Ali was in limbo at the time and nobody recognized Holmes as a true champion.

His personality changed. He became a loner and a brooder. Now is the chance he has longed for all his life. Incentive and desire should drown Ali's magic. We take Holmes in nine.

Walcott, Patterson Pick Ali To Win

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Two former heavyweight champions will not be surprised if Muhammad Ali regains his title Thursday night when he fights WBC titleholder Larry Holmes in Las Vegas, Nev.

Jersey Joe Wolcott, who took the title from Ezzard Charles in 1951 at age 37½, said Tuesday that no one — particularly Holmes — should underestimate Ali, even at 38 years of age.

"Ali is in my opinion the greatest champion of all time," Wolcott said in New York. "He may surprise the world."

Floyd Patterson said he would "go out on a limb" and pick Ali to win the title for an unprecedented fourth time.

Patterson said he was picking Ali (or as he still calls him — Cassius Clay) to win because of a psychological advantage he believes Ali has over Holmes.

"I don't think Holmes has that big a heart," said Patterson, twice a loser to Ali during his career, and the only man other than Ali ever to hold the crown more than once.

"I think Clay will be talking to him the day of the fight, in between rounds letting him know he is only a sparring partner."

"I think this will deflate him (Holmes) somewhat," said Patterson. "I think Clay is going to do some talking in this one. He is going to talk himself into winning the championship for the fourth time."

Earnie Shavers, who has fought and lost to both Ali and Holmes, predicted Holmes will successfully defend his crown in a 15-round decision. Shavers believes Ali's long layoff will be costly to the former champ.

'Spoilers' Expos, Astros Enjoying Pennant Race

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

For more seasons than they can remember, the Montreal Expos and Houston Astros have been playing the roles of spoilers.

This season, though, they're learning how the other half lives — and loving every minute of it, despite the mounting pressure of a pennant race.

"We're loose and we know the championship is within our grasp," Andre Dawson said after the front-running Expos defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 Tuesday night and hung tough in the National League East.

"We have to go out and apply ourself and use the talent we have," added Dawson, who had two of three Montreal triples against the Cardinals. "It's fun but it's also hard work. And we can't afford to make mistakes."

The Expos thus maintained their half-game advantage over the Philadelphia Phillies, 14-2 winners over the Chicago Cubs.

The Astros, meanwhile, beat the Atlanta Braves 7-3 and maintained a two-game advantage in the West over the Los Angeles Dodgers, who beat the San Francisco Giants 6-3 in 10 innings.

"If we keep knocking them off one at a time like this, we'll be OK," said Houston's Terry Puhl. "Atlanta can hit the ball, and once they start hitting, they can be awesome. But we came through when we had to."

Elsewhere in the NL, San Diego edged Cincinnati 3-2 and New York beat Pittsburgh 3-2.

Triples by Rodney Scott and Dawson ignited a five-run, sixth-inning rally for the Expos.

With the Expos trailing 2-1 and Cardinal starter Bob Forsch, 11-10, rolling along with a four-hitter, Scott blooped a hit into left field with one out in the sixth and wound up on third when the ball caromed from charging Leon Durham. Rowland Office brought Scott home with the tying run on an infield out.

Dawson then stroked his second triple of the game and Gary Carter followed with a run-scoring double, putting the Expos ahead 3-2. Warren Cromartie was intentionally walked and Larry Parrish followed with a three-run homer, his 15th of the year.

Both Cardinal runs were unearned off Montreal starter Bill Gullickson, 10-5.

Astros 7, Braves 3

Jose Cruz hit a three-run double and Nolan Ryan shut out Atlanta for 51-3 innings before needing relief help as the Astros defeated the Braves.

Ryan, 11-9, scattered eight hits and struck out eight to give him a career total of 3,100 strikeouts, fourth best in the major leagues. Ryan left in the sixth after yielding four hits and three runs.

Cruz's blow came in the fifth after Doyle Alexander, 14-10, had loaded the bases on walks to Joe Morgan and Puhl and a single by Enos Cabell.

Phillies 14, Cubs 2

Unbeaten rookie Marty Bystrom won his fifth game since coming to the NL on Sept. 1 as Philadelphia walloped Chicago.

Bystrom, 22, worked seven innings and gave up just four hits while striking out six and walking four. He was relieved by Dickie Noles, who pitched the final two innings.

The Phillies started their 15-hit attack on four Chicago pitchers, including starter Lynn McGlothen, 11-14, with a four-run first inning that featured Mike Schmidt's 115th RBI of the season on a sacrifice fly.

Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green described his team's second-highest scoring output of the season as a "no-brainer. It felt good. I was glad to get some of the kids in so we could have some fun."

Dodgers 6, Giants 3

Pedro Guerrero belted a three-run homer in the top of the 10th to lead Los Angeles over San Francisco. It was the Dodgers' 35th come-from-behind victory of the year, and the 22nd game they have won in their final at bat.

The Dodger comeback began in the ninth, when they scored twice on RBI singles by Guerrero and Steve Garvey to tie the game at 3-3.

"People have to give us credit tonight," said Garvey. "Knowing that Houston had won, we could easily have given up. This was one game that showed a lot of heart."

Padres 3, Reds 2

Gene Tenace drilled a tie-breaking solo homer in the sixth inning as San Diego edged Cincinnati behind John Curtis's eight-hitter.

Curtis, 10-8, recorded his sixth straight victory and seventh in his last eight games. Charlie Leibrandt, 10-9, victim of Tenace's homer, was the loser.

Mets 3, Pirates 2

Pete Falcone scattered seven hits and Alex Trevino drove in two runs, including the tie-breaking run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning, to lead New York over Pittsburgh.

Falcone, 7-9, struck out three and walked two. Trevino doubled home a run in the fifth off Don Robinson, 6-10, before hitting his game-winning fly ball in the seventh.

'Heels Trying To Avoid Letdown

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Georgia Tech visits Chapel Hill this Saturday and 10th-ranked North Carolina will be trying to avoid a letdown.

The Tar Heels whipped Maryland 17-3 Saturday. The Terrapins were nationally ranked at the time and it was the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams. Georgia Tech is 1-2, inexperienced, unranked and a non-conference game.

Tar Heel coach Dick Crum has been trying to shape his team's mental attitude all season. He wants them to go into every game with a low-key approach and to avoid the emotional peaks and valleys that can cause a letdown.

"Last week's game drew a lot of attention," Crum said at his Tuesday press conference. "But going in I didn't want to get the players over prepared. During the game, I think the players were fairly low-key, to say the least. Emotionally, the players were on an even keel. I like to think they are capable of playing that way every game."

Aside from the mental aspects of the game, Crum said his offense is designed to "take what the defense will give you." Against Maryland that meant playing it conservative which, Crum said, is one of the reason the Tar Heels did not score more.

"Maryland is a very good defensive team," he said. "But we were trying to control the ball and be patient. We were not trying to press for a score."

And Crum said there was "nothing magical" about UNC's defensive performance that limited Maryland to 32 yards rushing.

"We just played a basic defense," he said. "Plus the defense only had to play about 55 plays. That's a tremendous help to any defense, not to be on the field that much. I hope we can hang on to the ball so the defense can be on the field 60 plays or less every game."

Crum also praised the offensive performance of tailback Amos Lawrence and quarterback Rod Elkins.

"Since I've been at Carolina, that's the best all-around football game Amos has played," Crum said. "To get 103 yards against a team like Maryland, is saying quite a bit about his ability."

Lawrence picked up 57 of those yards after being slowed by the Terp defense.

Zimmer's Future On Line In Boston?

BOSTON (AP) — Manager Don Zimmer of the Boston Red Sox expected to learn his future with the club today, perhaps after tonight's game with the Baltimore Orioles.

"I don't know what is going to happen," Zimmer said following Tuesday night's 11-6 loss to the Orioles at Fenway Park. "I wouldn't want to say I'm being fired and then find myself rehired. I just don't know. However, they had an organizational meeting today (Tuesday) and the manager usually attends it. I wasn't invited."

Although most observers figure Zimmer will get the ax, neither Zimmer nor club officials would speculate Tuesday night whether he would be back in 1981.

"I expect to be told some time Wednesday," Zimmer said during Tuesday night's game with the Orioles.

"If Zimmer said that, I can't deny it," Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan said.

Sullivan said that at Tuesday's meeting, the National League was evaluated, and the club officials invited were only those who had seen NL players play this season.

After Tuesday night's game, Zimmer said, "I talked with Haywood Sullivan Monday about many of our players and we finally got around to my situation. He told me he wanted a couple more days to think about it and would get back to me sometime Wednesday."

Under terms of his contract, Zimmer is guaranteed a reported $100,000 for 1981 even if he is fired.

"I'll tell you one thing," Zimmer said. "After 30 years in the game, if I'm not a manager next year, I'll be a third base coach for somebody next year."

Race Heats Up As Orioles Surge, Yanks Slip

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees are slipping, the Baltimore Orioles are surging. The American League East has a pennant race once again, and Orioles Manager Earl Weaver is having trouble concentrating.

"What was the score of our game?" Weaver asked after the Orioles' whipped the Boston Red Sox 11-6 Tuesday night while the first-place Yankees were dropping a seesaw 12-9 decision to Cleveland.

Those results cut the Yankees' lead in the AL East to 2½ games. It's still a sizeable margin, since New York has only five games to play and Baltimore four. But for the Orioles the outlook is much brighter than it was as recently as Saturday, when they trailed by 5½ games.

"We were listening to it in the dugout," Weaver said of the Yankee game. "Rick Dempsey had the radio on so loud I couldn't think. I'd hear a cheer at the end of the dugout, then I'd hear moans — the guys wouldn't let me concentrate.

"But that's half the fun of a pennant race. The other half is winning."

Baltimore staked Mike Flanagan to 10 runs in the first five innings, breezed by Boston and turned its attention to the radio for reports on the Yankee game.

"We tuned in for the three-run homer that made it 9-8," said Orioles shortstop Mark Belanger, referring to Dennis Werth's seventh-inning homer that gave the Yankees a brief lead. "Then Super Joe came through."

Rookie Joe Charboneau's RBI single tied the score and started a four-run eighth-inning rally that gave the Indians the victory.

Baltimore got 15 hits in beating Boston, including home runs by Ken Singleton, Eddie Murray and Dan Graham. But Belanger was looking ahead.

"There's nothing much we can do," he conceded. "We just have to try to win our last four in a row."

Indians 12, Yankees 9

Even though the Yankees have lost more than half their lead in just four days, Manager Dick Howser is staying away from the panic button.

"We're still three up in the loss column," Howser observed. "They still have to come get us."

Tuesday's loss, however, was a bitter one.

"They can't come much tougher than that. We're not used to losing these kind of games," said Howser, whose club allowed eight runs in the second inning, fought back to lead 9-8 only to lose as ace reliever Rich Gossage surrendered four runs in the eighth.

A's 5, White Sox 1

Rickey Henderson broke Ty Cobb's 65-year-old AL record by stealing his 97th base for the A's. Only two players have stolen more bases in one season — Lou Brock of St. Louis stole 118 in 1974 and Maury Wills stole 104 in 1962.

Henderson is well aware of those numbers.

"I'm looking at 104," he said. "Only two men have stolen 100 and I'd like to be up there. I heard about Ty Cobb when I was in the minors. I used to read about all of the great base stealers, like Wills and Brock, and I'd want to be with those guys."

And now he is.

Royals 7, Mariners 5

George Brett slammed a three-run home run off Mike Parrott in the 14th inning to snap Kansas City's eight-game losing streak. He went 3-for-6 to raise his batting average to .387 and he also boosted his RBI total to 115, a club record.

Tigers 5, Blue Jays 3

Alan Trammell, who had five hits on Monday, continued to feast on Toronto pitching with a pair of home runs Tuesday night. "I've never hit two home runs in a game before, not even Little League," said the 22-year-old shortstop.

Brewers 4, Angels 2

Ben Oglivie took over the AL home run lead with his 39th of the season for Milwaukee, a two-run shot in the first inning.

Bob McClure didn't allow a hit for 52-3 innings and posted his fourth victory in five decisions as a starter, with a save from Mike Caldwell.

Backyard Brawls Set...

"We played with more enthusiasm and we did not have a turnover and we had only one penalty for five yards.

"Those factors, I feel, were the key to the win. We also made the big plays, which we hadn't done up to then. We hope now that this victory will give us a boost and a fresher approach to football for the rest of the season."

Sauls will find out how big a boost the victory gave his club two nights hence when the Chargers play host to North Pitt.

"We're looking forward to playing North Pitt. It is the most aggressive, the best North Pitt team I've seen," Sauls said. "They had outstanding quickness in the backfield and their defense is quite active.

"For us to win the game we'll have to play with self-discipline and eliminate any major mistakes."

The Chargers did just that against the Rams. What they didn't do, and what Sauls is hopeful they can do, is achieve a better balance between running and passing the ball.

"We're still not there," Sauls said. "We haven't reached our goal of having a balance between throwing and running the ball."

Whether the Chargers approach that balance this week may depend on whether quarterback Bernard Riccarelli plays. Riccarelli suffered "a blow to the head," according to Sauls, "but we're hopeful he'll be able to play Friday."

North Pitt

It was not a case of North Pitt's missing blocks but not blocking the right person. That, along with one lapse in the defensive secondary, contributed enormously to the Panthers' 7-0 loss to Farmville Central last Friday evening.

"Most of our problems, after watching seeing the films, came from missed blocking assignments, not missed blocks," North Pitt coach Pat Smith said. "That led to our not gaining as much yardage as we might have."

The blocking may have been off but the tackling was anything but off.

"Defensively, we played well, even though we gave up 170 yards rushing," Smith said. "Most of that came in the middle of the field and didn't hurt us that much.

"They had only one pass completion, but that was the big one that led to the score. Other than that, our defensive backs played well," said Smith, referring to a 46-yard pass from Farmville quarterback Jeff Cutler to wide receiver Andrew Edwards which subsequently led to the only score of the game.

"Offensively, we had our chances. We just couldn't get them in."

Smith hopes a similar performance is not the Panthers' fate this week, when North Pitt travels to Ayden-Grifton.

"I just hope we can move the ball better offensively. I'm anticipating a good game," Smith said. "They're obviously started playing better when they quit trying to throw the ball so much and began to run more."

A year ago going into the Ayden-Grifton game, the Panthers were 1-3 and coming off a 61-6 defeat to Farmville. This year, North Pitt is again 1-3 (0-3 in the ECC) but other than their record the Panthers are a changed team.

"I'm impressed with our enthusiasm this year," Smith said. "But I'm disappointed with our record. This is a tough situation. We actually could be 3-1, with a break or two, where we're 1-3. But we haven't had the grumbling and griping we had last year. We've got a different type of kid this year. They're pretty close."

Farmville Central

D.H. Conley may be one of the best teams around that has yet to win a game. And that worries Farmville coach Gene Brewer.

"From what we've seen of them for a team that hasn't won a game they're pretty good," Brewer said. "They've had some of the same problems we've had: breakdowns on offense. But they've moved the ball well and they've got a good defense. It's going to be tough."

That's nothing new for this year's Jaguar squad. Up to now, the season has been as tough as preseason expectations foretold.

Plagued by mistakes early on, the Jaguars lost their first two games of the season, to 3-A powers Clinton and ECC foe Charles B. Aycock. Since then the Jaguars have drastically reduced their mistakes and have put together a modest two-game winning, which includes a 7-0 victory over North Pitt, a win that left Farmville at 2-1 in the ECC.

"Overall, we didn't play that bad," Brewer said. "We made some mental mistakes but not as many as we have made in the past.

"We didn't take advantage of what they were giving us, though, and two or three times we had a chance to turn the ballgame around for us," he added. "We ran the ball fairly well, but I was not happy at all with out passing game. We should have been able to do a little more with our passing."

The defense, meanwhile, record its first shutout of the seasons, helped by a second-half goalline stand.

"I felt they did a pretty good job on that," Brewer said. "That should help their confidence."

The Jaguars may need all the confidence they can get over the next four weeks. Following D.H. Conley, Farmville travels to North Lenoir (4-0, 2-0) before playing host to Havelock and Southern Nash the next two Friday evenings.

Fiori Set To Defend Open Title

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Little-known Ed Fiori defends the title he won in a playoff a year ago but Jerry Pate, who always plays well here and won twice, will be the favorite for the $200,000 Southern Open golf tournament which begins Thursday.

The gallery, however, will be rooting for crowd-favorite Arnold Palmer, the 51-year-old veteran who last won a tour event in 1973 when he captured the Bob Hope event.

Palmer in his Southern debut a year ago made the 36-hole cut by dropping in a 20-foot birdie putt and went on to finish in a 26th place tie at 282 and earn $1,633, his largest purse of the year.

Palmer drew the crowds here last year, and after a runner-up finish in the World Seniors Invitational Sunday to Gene Littler at Charlotte, N.C., should do so once again.

The field of 156 players for the $36,000 first prize over the 6,791-yard, par-72 Green Island Country Club course also includes Hale Irwin, winner of 11 tour events but a non-winner since the 1979 U.S. Open, and four of the top 10 money winners this year.

They include No.3 Andy Bean, $269,000; No.6 Pate, $218,000; No.7 George Burns, $211,000; and No.9 Mike Reid, $202,000.

Others in the field include Larry Nelson, who has banked $179,000 this year; Johnny Miller, Bill Kratzert and Lynn Lott.

Volleyball Roundup

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School's first year volleyball team split a pair of match held yesterday at Rocky Mount Wesleyan College.

Rose fell to Rocky Mount in two straight games in the first match, then came back to top Weldon in the second match, claiming its first win of the season.

In the Rocky Mount match, the Lady Gryphons took close wins, 15-13, and 16-14, to edge past Rose. Linda Winstead led Rose with seven straight serves for points in the match.

The Rampettes then came back to claim a 2-0 win over Weldon in the second match by the identical scores of the first, 15-13, 16-14. Frances Barnhill had five straight serves and Arlene Valentine had six in the first game, while Val White had six in the second.

"White and Toni Streeter both had excellent net play throughout the day," Coach Delores Bunting said.

Rose, now 1-5, plays host to Rocky Mount on Thursday in its first home-court match.

SW Edgecombe 2, Ayden-Grifton 0

Southwest Edgecombe extended its Eastern Carolina Conference unbeaten streak to six by defeating Ayden-Grifton, 2-0, Tuesday in a volleyball match.

The Cougars won the first set, 15-8, 15-2, and then took the second, 15-7, 15-6.

Ayden-Grifton, now 3-3, travels to Southern Nash Thursday.

North Pitt 1, Farmville C. 1

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central and North Pitt split a pair of volleyball matches yesterday.

In the first match, Farmville Central took the victory, winning in two straight games, 15-13, 15-8. Angela White led Farmville with nine straight points in the first game. Sherry Bradley had seven for North Pitt. Charlene Lane had seven for Farmville in the second game.

North Pitt came back to win the second match, 15-7, 15-10. In the opening game, Olivia Whitfield led the Pant-HERS with six straight, while Bradley had eight in the second game.

Farmville Central is now 2-4 in Eastern Carolina play and travels to Southwest Edgecombe on Thursday. North Pitt is also 2-4, and plays host to D.H. Conley on Thursday.

Conley 2, Greene C. 0

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley whipped Greene Central, 2-0, Tuesday in an Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball match.

The win left the Valkyries at 7-0 on the season. Conley, led by Vivian Barrett's nine straight points and Jackie Daniels six straight, won the first set, 15-3, 15-1. In the second set, the Valkyries won behind Lori Kandrotas' six straight points, 15-7, 15-7.

Conley travels to North Pitt Thursday while Greene Central, 1-5, plays host to North Lenoir.

Rose Runners Win 8th Race

Despite the absence of four of its top runners, Greenville Rose raced past Northeastern, 22-37, Tuesday in a Division I cross country meet.

The Rampants, now 8-0, were led by sophomores John Ormond and John Byrd. Ormond was the meet's medalist with a time of 16:16. Close behind was Byrd, who finished second at 16:17, a minute better than his previous best time this year.

"We were without a top four runners due to sickness and other reasons but the sophomores and other runners were able to take up the slack," Rose coach Ron Hockmuth said. "I don't know how to explain this, either, but every runner improved his time on the course despite the rain."

Northeastern's David Fallows finished third (16:51) while Rose's Robert Stancill was fourth (17:33).

Other Rose finishers were (7) Larry Talbert, 17:56; (8) Max Parker, 18:00, (9) Tim Harris, 18:14; (11) Bobby Nichols, 18:36; (12) Joel Mauger, 18:52; (15) Will Hester, 19:13; (16) Erving Bennett, 20:16; (19) Steve Bynum, 21:11; (20) James Midgett, 23:25.

Rose travels to Rocky Mount Thursday to face the Gryphons and Beddingfield.

Looking Ahead? Not This Coach

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The topic was looking ahead to future opponents. The question was put to Rutgers Coach Frank Burns, who plays Ivy League Cornell this week. Next week — defending national champion Alabama. It was not the first time Burns has heard the question.

"You guys are more concerned about that than I am," Burns told the Football Writers Association of New York. "Every week you want to talk about Alabama, but we've got a lot of teams before Alabama.

"We talked to the kids before the season and made them aware that every game is an important game and if they look ahead they're gonna get knocked off.

"We're looking forward to the Alabama game, no doubt about it. But I think we've got to be looking toward the forthcoming opponent a lot more. We point out the upsets around the country every week."

Like Boston College beating Stanford one week before Stanford beat Oklahoma. And Boston College then losing to Villanova, which lost to Richmond, etc. etc.

Johnny Majors of Tennessee was on hand and since Rutgers upset Tennessee in Knoxville last year — one week before Tennessee crushed Notre Dame — Majors was asked whether Rutgers had a chance against Alabama.

"I haven't seen Rutgers this year," he replied diplomatically. But it should be noted that Majors once referred to Bear Bryant as the "owner" of the Southeastern Conference.

Does Majors ever remind his team of the loss to Rutgers?

"It's already been brought up," he said. "We may get beat by future opponents, but not because we're uneducated and take them lightly. We've made sure this year to look at one game at a time."

Tennessee's 42-0 rout of Auburn last weekend was the Vols' first victory in the State of Alabama since 1968. They visit either Bama or Auburn each year.

"We're getting better," Majors said. "We've made progress and we intend to stay on the right track."

You say Louisiana State wasn't looking ahead to Florida when the Tigers lost to Rice last weekend? So how come an LSU equipment man phoned his counterpart at Florida to remind him that "we need 2,000 pounds of ice for Saturday."

The phone call, of course, came a week too early.

Didn't South Carolina try to beg out of last Saturday's game against Michigan last spring? The Gamecocks weren't crazy about their guarantee and also didn't want to play Southern Cal and Michigan in consecutive weeks.

So all they did, of course, was upset Michigan in Ann Arbor 17-14.

Syracuse Coach Frank Maloney celebrated his 40th birthday last Friday. At Monday's weekly news luncheon, publicist Larry Kimball asked Maloney how it felt to be 40.

By that time, though, Maloney was pushing 60, having just learned that star running back Joe Morris will miss this week's game with Kansas because of a bruised shoulder.

Brooklyn College's home opener against Newark-Rutgers, originally scheduled Friday night, has been moved to Sunday afternoon at nearby South Shore High School. A water main burst beneath one end zone of the Kingsmen's gridiron, causing the AstroTurf field to collapse and form a large crater.

So what, said one wag, the end zone's never been used anyway.

The same wit is credited with the pun of the week. Noting that Nebraska's Jarvis Redwine ran wild against Penn State, he said it would have helped if the losers had a defensive back named Fish, "because everyone knows Redwine doesn't go with fish."

Florida State was champing at the bit to be invited to the Orange Bowl last season, but the Seminoles don't care if they never see that stadium again. Not only did they lose to Oklahoma, spoiling an otherwise perfect 1979 campaign, but last weekend they were upset by the University of Miami, which calls the Orange Bowl home.

Saturday's output of 25 rushing yards was the lowest since Bobby Bowden has been Florida State's head coach. Next was 26 yards in a 47-0 loss to Miami in 1976 played in — you got it — the Orange Bowl. The three lowest total yardage games under Bowden all have come in the Orange Bowl, two against Miami and against Oklahoma last Jan. 1.

You've got to feel sorry for Bowling Green. The Falcons are 0-4 but only 8 points separate them from being unbeaten. They lost to Richmond 20-17, Eastern Michigan 18-16, Long Beach State 23-21 and Kentucky 21-20.

The Indiana-Kentucky game on Sept. 20 became known as the Spaghetti Bowl when the rival coaches, Lee Corso and Fran Curci, wagered a speghetti dinner on the outcome. Indiana won 36-30 and Corso intends to collect during next January's American Football Coaches Association convention.

There are 486 NCAA varsity football teams, divided into four categories — 1A, 1-AA, Division 11 and Division 111.

ECU V'ball Team Hosts Blue Devils

Fresh from a strong showing at the N.C. State Invitational, East Carolina's volleyball team will host NCAIAW Division I rival Duke Wednesday before going to the rugged University of South Carolina Invitational this weekend.

The Lady Pirates square off against Duke at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. They are bracketed with North Carolina, host South Carolina and the College of Charleston in the South Carolina tournament which begins Friday.

The Lady Pirates followed back-to-back opening losses to the College of Charleston and George Washington with wins over Virginia Commonwealth and highly-touted Miami-Dade South in the N.C. State tourney. East Carolina extended Clemson to three sets (10-15, 15-7, 15-12) before being bumped out of the championship round of play.

The wins upped the Lady Pirate record to 2-5.

"I was really pleased with the effort," said assistant coach Lynn Davidson. "We beat some really fine volleyball teams and we almost beat Clemson.

"We were running a new offense that we put in last Wednesday and Thursday and it worked very well."

Booters Win, 3-0

East Carolina's soccer team registered its third shutout on the season Tuesday in beating Pembroke State, 3-0, in a pouring rain.

It was goalie Steve Brown's third shutout of the season and tied a record set in 1975. Since Brown's insertion as goalie, the Pirates have gone 3-1-1.

"I thought we dominated the game offensively. We took good shots," said Pirate coach Brad Smith.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 3-7-1. They travel to UNC-Greensboro on Monday for their next outing.

Big Changes For Canada

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

The Canadian Parliament is expected to be called into session late this week or early next week to begin the historic process of giving Canada a new kind of constitution. Here, in question-and-answer form, is an examination of the changes ahead for America's closest neighbor.

Q. What is Canada's constitution now?

A. The British North America Act of 1867. It joined four British colonial provinces — Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick — in a confederation, and gave the new nation a British-style parliamentary government, with a House of Commons and a weak upper house, the Senate. It gave the provinces jurisdiction over education, roads and some other matters, but unnamed "residual" powers were left with the federal government. The confederation was later joined by six other provinces.

Q. Why are changes needed?

A. Because the times have left the BNAA behind. Canada's basic charter remains technically under the control of the British Parliament, in what Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau calls a "colonial" situation. The Canadian Parliament has customarily sought the agreement of all provincial governments before asking Britain to amend the act — hence, few changes have been made. For 50 years, federal and provincial leaders have tried to transform the BNAA into a Canada-based constitution, but they have never agreed on how to do it, and consequently it has been left in "neutral" hands in Britain.

Q. Why is there a big push now for constitutional reform?

A. In a referendum last May, the voters of largely French-speaking Quebec decided against taking steps toward secession from the rest of English-speaking Canada. In winning that plebiscite, the "federalist" side promised major constitutional changes to give Quebec and the other provinces greater autonomy. Trudeau, in his fourth term as prime minister, also appears to have decided to cap his career with a landmark overhaul of the constitution.

Q. Will the fundamental form of government change?

A. No. The structural changes will be relatively slight, probably limited to reshaping the Senate and the Supreme Court to give the provincial governments greater say in the appointment of their members. Senators and justices are now appointed by national leaders.

Q. Then, what major changes are in store?

A. First of all, the Canadian Parliament will ask London to relinquish control of the constitution. In "bringing home" the document, the Parliament is expected to put into it two other items — a flexible formula for making future amendments and a charter of human and language rights for bilingual Canada. One possible amending formula would require the approval of both houses of the Canadian Parliament and seven of the 10 provincial legislatures provided those seven provinces have at least half the national population.

Q. What then?

A. Once the constitution is "patriated," the national and provincial governments can get down to the issues of power-sharing, deciding whether the national or provincial interest is supreme in such areas as offshore oil and gas, fisheries, resource taxation and communications, and then amending the constitution to reflect the decisions. These money matters — and in the case of Quebec the jurisdictional disputes also involve the status of the French language — have proven the most difficult to settle.

Q. Will Trudeau have problems beginning the process?

A. Negotiations between Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers on all these issues ended in failure earlier this month. The prime minister decided to act unilaterally. But he could have problems. Although his Liberal Party majority is able to dictate Parliament's actions, provincial governments are threatening to go to court to block any basic constitutional changes, such as the amending formula, that are made without their agreement. Canadian constitutional law is sufficiently murky to make the outcome of the suits uncertain.

Q. What does it all mean for the United States?

A. A smooth transition to a new constitution with well-defined federal and provincial powers could mean a more stable and self-assured neighbor and ally for the United States. But if the reform effort disintegrates in federal-provincial wrangling, it could strengthen the hand of the separatists in Quebec and encourage separatist feelings in the Canadian West and Newfoundland.

Q. How much time does Canada have?

A. Trudeau says he wants the constitution in Canada by Christmas. Canadian history is full of broken constitutional deadlines, but Trudeau sounds determined.

Horse Show Is Planned For Saturday

The Greenville Saddle Club and Humane Society are sponsoring a Coastal Plains Horse and Pony Show this Saturday, Oct. 4, at the new Pitt County Fair Ground beginning at 10 a.m.

Divisions will include Huntseat, Western and English-Saddleseat. Classes are being offered for hunters, morgans, arabians, saddlebreds and pleasure horses. The western and hunter division will begin at 10 p.m. and the majority of English classes will begin at 2 p.m. The judge is the honorable Gary Shipman of Chatam, Va.

The show is sanctioned by the American Saddlebred Association of the Carolinas. There will be a special presentation of the Paso Fino horse at the show as well as pony rides sponsored by the saddle club and the humane society available for a $1 donation.

Points earned at this show are applicable to the end-of-the-year Coastal Plains awards. Rain date for the show is Sunday, Oct. 5. For more information contact Donna Weir at 756-9883 or 756-9709.

PBS Begins 'Full Days' On Saturday

CHAPEL HILL — For the first time, the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television will broadcast all day Saturday.

From sign-on time, 10 a.m., to noon, adult education courses will be on the air, including an introduction to computers and their uses and the business of writing.

At 11:30 a.m. answers will be given on workable energy alternatives. At noon each week, "Woods and Waters" will feature visits to locations in Maine, surrounding states and Canadian provinces that are noted for natural beauty and the bounty of forests, with a look also at wilderness lore and crafts.

Early afternoon programs offer a variety of programs for teenagers, and at 3 p.m., Stevie Wonder, Al Jarreau, and Dizzy Gillespi along with other musicians will be performing in a program slot that will feature jazz, gospel, blues and soul music.

"Soccer Made in Germany" is the program to be shown weekly at 5:30 p.m., with taped highlights of the top game of the week played by the West German First Division, commonly regarded as the best soccer league in the world.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning brings a new stance on a project you have in mind and you can easily express your views and gain the support you need. Be sure to plan the future wisely.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) New opportunities come your way early in the day. Showing more thought for the one you love pays off in big dividends now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can communicate well with others in the morning. Later study new ventures that could be profitable in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to study group affairs and improve your status in life. Come to better understanding with associates.

CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can reach your personal aim in the morning that means much to you where finances are concerned.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make personal plans and then confer with persons who can be helpful to you. Improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Avoid criticizing others if you want to make greater progress in the future. Be more understanding of your work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what is expected of you and you get ahead faster. Sidestep one of your assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Engage in a new enterprising that will have much success concerning happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to keep your word. Carry through with civic duties with prestige.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are able to come to grips with associates in the morning, when you have wisdom.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Commence the day devoting to important work without delay. Your most cherished aims.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use modern methods that will be easier and become more efficient. Pressures on you.

ONE BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be stimulating young persons who can easily influence the public in general and should get as much education as you can afford. Upon this much success is possible. Laws they do not compel." What you make up to you!

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
Chicago Tribune

North proper play would have assured the game.

South should realize that the only thing that could endanger his contract was a 4-0 trump division. He could counter that with a loser-on-loser play. Instead of ruffing the third diamond, declarer should have simply sluffed a club from his hand—a trick that he would have to concede anyway.

Now the hand would have been secure against almost any distribution. Even if the defenders continue with a fourth diamond, the contract cannot be touched. Dummy is also out of diamonds, so declarer can ruff this trick in dummy; and dummy can overruff West no matter what card West elects to trump with. Declarer will lose only three diamond tricks.

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I realize, and have realized ever since I noticed commercials on "The Mickey Mouse Club," that the words "new and improved" are not to be taken seriously on television.

As used in TV ads, anyway, "new and improved" is a tactic meant to exploit the consumer's conflicting urges for new experience and familiar routine at the same time. An old product is put in a shiny new package and given the added ingredient "benzogradinosulph," and the trick is turned.

For some reason, though, I was taken in when NBC promised a new and improved "Tomorrow" show this season (it was an overwhelming urge for new experience, I think, that allowed this lapse of disbelief).

The promise was first made last spring, right after NBC gave Johnny Carson his zillion-dollar contract and shortened his "Tonight Show." After rejecting Carson's apparent suggestion, a new post-"Tonight" variety show starring Steve Allen, NBC decided to keep Tom Snyder (although somewhat disaffected with him) and expand "Tomorrow" in time and budget.

I know that program announcements made in spring are no more to be taken as ironclad truth than commercials that tout "new and improved" products. But just two weeks ago, when the shortened "Tonight" and lengthened "Tomorrow" shows made their debuts, NBC placed advertisements in TV listings hailing the new and improved "Tomorrow" show.

What the network delivered, though, was old and, as far as I could see, distinctly unimproved. Same old Tom, working his brows mightily, roaring at guests' little jokes and getting to the heart of giant matters (Elton John's hairpiece, Tanya Tucker and Glen Campbell's romance), as only Tom Snyder can do.

So where's the "brand-new Tomorrow show promised by Barbara Gallagher, NBC vice president of Specials and Late Night Programs? The "news bursts and several entertainment and information features" that would comprise, "for the first time . . . an entertainment-information magazine"?

And the pebbled budget, which will enable us to do everything we can to retain the Carson audience and maybe attract a new audience to this important time period?"

It is easy enough to surmise what happened to the news bursts — little news periods that were planned for the beginning of the show, and were already sponsored — and that is, the falling out between Snyder and NBC's News Division.

News President Bill Small was not enthused over Snyder's performance on the newsmagazine "Prime Time," and Snyder was replaced by David Brinkley for this season. Snyder's "Tomorrow" show was taken out of the news division and given to entertainment.

Snyder, presumably, wanted little more to do with NBC News than NBC News wanted with him. News bursts bit the dust.

Oh.

I guess the "improved" part comes next month, when Rona Barrett joins the show.

Norman Mailer Has Film Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Norman Mailer, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "The Armies of the Night," "The Naked and the Dead" and "The Executioners Song," will play a role in the movie "Ragtime."

Mailer will play Stanford White, the socialite architect who designed Madison Square Garden and was a key figure in a scandal that rocked the nation in 1906.

Warwick Headlines

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dionne Warwick will headline "The Monte Carlo Show" when it begins its syndicated run on television the week of Oct. 11.

Film Will Star Oates, Dewhurst

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Warren Oates and Colleen Dewhurst star as a middle-aged couple with grown children who suddenly find themselves with a new family in "Baby Comes Home."

The movie, a sequel to "And Baby Makes Three," was written by Shelly List and directed by Waris Hussien.

Didn't Know The Money Was Bribe

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John W. Jenrette says he was referring to information about a munitions plant in his district when he told an Abscam undercover agent he had received a package that the prosecution contends contained bribe money.

Jenrette and FBI agent Anthony Amoroso discussed the package in a Dec. 6 telephone conversation shortly after Jenrette's co-defendant, Richmond, Va., businessman John Stowe, picked up $50,000 from the Abscam investigator.

The money transfer was captured on FBI videotape, and the government contends Jenrette knew the package contained money.

Jenrette, a three-term South Carolina Democrat, finished three days on the witness stand in U.S. District Court on Tuesday. Stowe's attorneys were scheduled to begin their defense today.

Amoroso has testified that he offered the payoff in return for Jenrette's promise to introduce special immigration legislation for two phony Arab sheiks for which the agent posed as a representative.

In the Dec. 6 conversation, re-played for jurors by Prosecutor John Kotelly, Amoroso — using the name Tony DeVito — said to Jenrette: "You got the package ..."

"Everything," Jenrette replied. "Everything's fine. I'll do my share of the work and all I'll need to do is the names ... so I can start making some background preparations."

"Wasn't the purpose to tell Tony DeVito that you received the package — the money — and were going to introduce the legislation?" Kotelly asked Jenrette on cross-examination.

"That's not the way I took it at the time," Jenrette said. "I was talking about the package for the American Gear and Pinion plant," the now-bankrupt munitions facility near Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Stowe, in conversations recorded by the FBI, asked Amoroso if his Arab clients could lend him money to purchase the failing facility. Jenrette said he met with Amoroso on Dec. 4 solely to help Stowe buy the plant and save 500 jobs in his district.

Jenrette testified that Stowe came to his congressional office two days later, "pulled out a stack of bills from a briefcase and put it on my desk."

The congressman said he did not count the cash, but testified that Stowe said it was $10,000.

"He wanted me to take the money and hold the money for him," Jenrette said. The lawmaker testified he insisted that the $10,000 be considered a loan and asked his office manager to find a loan document in his files.

The office manager, Diane Robinson, followed Jenrette to the witness stand and confirmed that such a document was prepared by "whiting out" an old bank loan form and substituting the new terms.

"Isn't it true this document was prepared in order to give you a cover story as to why you had $10,000 in cash?" Kotelly asked.

"That's absolutely untrue," Jenrette responded.

A federal grand jury has charged Jenrette with conspiracy and bribery and accused Stowe of conspiracy and aiding and abetting bribery. If convicted, each man could received a maximum 35 years in prison and thousands of dollars in fines.

Selling The Public On His Frozen Fried Yam

By STEVEN M. EAMES
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sweet potatoes — traditionally unaccepted, undeveloped and unappreciated in the United States — may yet rise to sweet prominence if Jack Jenkins can convince enough people on the future of french fried frozen yams.

Americans ate four billion pounds of white-potato french fries last year, says Jenkins of the North Carolina Yam Commission, while only 100,000 pounds of frozen french fried yams reached consumers.

"Look at my market. The world is my oyster," said Jenkins, who is searching for the money to properly test-market the fried yams.

There are some problems.

First, the only processor of fried yams in the nation, a Maryland firm, quit Tuesday, saying they would cut up no more yams for the freezer because of lack of marketing.

An unruffled Jenkins, whose livlihood for the past 14 years has come from promoting yams, says there's bound to be another processor out there.

Second, at an assessment of 2 cents per bushel collected from North Carolina yam growers, Jenkins has a badly lacking budget.

For example, most major food companies spend between $25 million and $50 million per year on research and development of new products, Jenkins says. Iceberg lettuce growers this year are spending $3 million promoting their products.

Jenkins' budget runs less than $100,000 each year.

And, if one wants to get technical, there is a third problem. Yams are not grown in the United States ... only sweet potatoes. The name yams came from vegetables imported to this country from Africa, but the name stuck to the similar sweet potatoes.

Regardless, Jenkins says frozen french fried yams will make the lowly sweet potato a household foodstuff. "It will, by God. It's just a matter of time."

It could happen.

Yams are one of the world's 12 major foods according to the National Geographic Society, Jenkins said, and they rank nutritionally just behind leafy vegetables.

China grew 24 million acres of sweet potatoes last year, compared with 24,000 acres grown in the United States.

North Carolina is the country's leading producer of sweet potatoes, supplying 34 percent of the total crop and more than 50 percent of the fresh product sold nationally this year.

For five years Jenkins has been offering his frozen french fried sweet potatoes at trade shows and for the past two years has exhibited at the National Restaurant Association convention.

So why hasn't it taken off? Jenkins explained it this way to yam farmers in his publication, "Tarheel Yambassador:"

"Why? Because we have had no advertising and promotion of the frozen french fried yams to the consumer.

"With hundreds of new consumer products arriving annually in the grocery marketplace, it is no wonder that (store) buyers are reluctant to offer shelf space to new hopefuls," he said.

Stores want a 99 percent certainty the product will move fast, return a high profit per space occupied and a strong advertising program backing the product. So far, that hasn't described yams.

But, Jenkins is asking his affiliated yam farmers for funds for a test market in the area dominated by Raleigh and Durham. He's looking for $30,000 for the initial test market and so far has $10,000 promised.

"This new use could actually market more sweet potatoes than North Carolina growers are presently growing," Jenkins said in his appeal for funds.

"Everybody wants a ready-made product," said Jenkins, explaining why french fried frozen yams might do what fresh yams haven't done — catch the national fancy.

But, if the frozen french fried yam does fail, which Jenkins vehemently denies could happen, yam growers could fall back on using yams as a fuel source by making alcohol.

Sweet potatoes will make twice as much alcohol per acre as corn, Jenkins said. It's a question of biomass, he explained.

If both frozen french fried yams and yam alcohol catch on at the same time, that's OK by Jenkins, too. Good looking, good tasting yams are needed for food.

"For alcohol you don't care if it's the ugliest, worst-tasting thing in the world," he said, explaining non-food grades of yams could be turned to the nation's energy woes.

School Boards Join Bond Suit

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — School boards in Fairmont and St. Pauls have joined the Red Springs board in a countersuit against a group of parents who blocked an $8 million school improvements bond issue.

Red Springs filed its suit last week. Fairmont and St. Pauls filed legal documents this week in U.S. District Court.

The schools boards are seeking actual and punitive damages from the parents, contending the "deliberate interference" by the parents blocked construction projects already under way.

In their suit, the parents contended that school boundary lines in Robeson County were drawn to perpetuate racial segregation.

No Signs Of Toxic Leak

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the Du Pont company said Tuesday that tests have turned up no indication of toxic chemical leakage into groundwater at its Brunswick County plant.

Du Pont and Chemical Leman Tank Lines Inc. of Wilmington were included on a list released Monday by a congressional subcommittee as having operations where hazardous chemicals could be seeking into groundwater.

"We put no hazardous materials into our retention lagoons," said John Mears of Du Pont. "There are no situations that are contaminating ground wells."

Three test wells checked by independent consultants have turned up no incidence of toxic chemicals, he said.

Du Pont's facility has never been cited for violations of its water-quality discharge permit, according to Dr. Bill Spengler, environmental control supervisor at the plant.

The permit allows the company to discharge 750 pounds of treated waste daily, Spengler said. He said the plant discharges only about 100 pounds of waste a day.

Spengler said only biodegradable materials are allowed in the waste-treatment system.

Chemical Leman could not be reached for comment

Votes Cast By N.C. Represenatives, Senators

Roll Call Report Service

HOUSE

MEDIA CONCENTRATION — The House failed, 215 for and 176 against, to get the two-thirds majority needed to pass a bill dealing with cross-ownerships of media. The bill (HR 6228) would put into the U.S. Code the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) regulations prohibiting one company from owning in the future both a newspaper and broadcasting station in the same community; under the FCC policy, existing cross-ownerships are permitted.

What drew most opposition was a separate provision requiring the FCC to locate a commercial television station in either New Jersey or Delaware, the only states without commercial TV. The two-thirds majority was required by the short-cut parliamentary procedure under which the bill was considered; the bill might be returned to the floor under procedures requiring a simple majority for passage.

Supporter Al Swift, D-Wash., said the bill is "a very modest step toward establishing congressional policy in the broad and complex field of media concentration."

Opponent Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., said the bill would "force the transfer" of New York City's WOR-TV to New Jersey — "a bad if not dangerous precedent of having the Congress for the very first time involving itself directly in the area of assigning or reassigning VHF television outlets."

Rep. Walter Jones, D-1, and Charles Rose, D-7, voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Rep. W.C. Hefner, D-8, did not vote.

GONE FISHIN' — The House passed, 300 for and 97 against, a bill to gradually phase foreign fishermen out of U.S. waters, in hopes of revitalizing the American fishing industry. Among its provisions, the bill provides that within 200 miles of U.S. shores foreign catches would be gradually reduced in rough proportion to the expansion of U.S. catches. The bill (HR 7039) was sent to the Senate.

Supporter John Breaux, D-La., pointed to the "grim fact" that the domestic fishing industry is suffering from foreign competition, and said the bill "will at last set fisheries development in the U.S. on the right course."

Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said the U.S. "cannot have it both ways — we cannot be highly protectionist of our own industries and at the same time expect other nations to open their doors freely to our exports."

NUCLEAR FUEL — The House voted, 298 for and 98 against, to block the Carter Administration's plan to sell U.S. nuclear fuel — 38 tons of enriched uranium — to India. Despite this vote, the sale was okayed when the Senate refused to join the House in thwarting it (see vote below). The vote was on a resolution of disapproval (H Con Res 432) supported by members unhappy that India has not obeyed international controls aimed at slowing the development of nuclear weapons.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., a supporter of blocking the sale, said that if the transaction goes through "we will in a very real way be encouraging ... the prospects of nuclear war."

Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., an opponent, said "the bottom line of this issue today has nothing whatsoever to do with nuclear energy, nuclear weapons, or nuclear proliferation. We are not going to deter India in any way from doing what it is doing if we do not ship this fuel to them."

Jones, Andrews and Preyer voted "nay."

SENATE

NUCLEAR FUEL — By a vote of 46 for and 48 against, the Senate refused to block the Carter Administration's planned sale of enriched uranium to India, thus removing any congressional obstacle to the transaction. The vote killed a resolution (H Con Res 432; see preceding House vote) disapproving of the sale.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, sponsor of the resolution, said "a U.S. capitulation to India could eviscerate our non-proliferation efforts around the world."

Sen. Charles Percey, R-Ill., an opponent, said the Soviet Union would replace the U.S. as India's nuclear supplier. He asked: "Do we want to dim the lights of Bombay and let the Soviets turn them back on?"

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, did not vote.

CONSULTANTS — The Senate rejected, 25 for and 67 against, an amendment giving consultants better treatment in a fiscal 1981 appropriations bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), and other agencies. The bill cuts HUD outlays for consultants by $2.4 million, EPA outlays by $11.7 million, and NASA outlays by $14 million; the purpose of the amendment was to lessen those cuts by unspecified amounts. The bill (HR 7631) was passed to conference with the House.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., sponsor of the amendment, said it was wrong for the Senate to "meat-ax" outlays for consultants "in the absence of any understanding of whether, one, there is any abuse in these three agencies in this area or, two, just what we are talking about...."

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., an opponent, spoke of the "abuse that consultants are visiting upon the federal government (and) the lackadaisical attitude that the federal agencies have about farming out major policy decisions ... to what I call the shadow government."

Morgan did not vote.

AIRBAGS — The Senate voted 48 for and 38 against to move ahead with the requirement that some U.S. cars in upcoming model years be equipped with airbags or some other type of passive-restraint device. The vote removed language in a Department of Transportation (DOT) appropriations bill that would have prohibited spending money to administer the program. DOT regulations now call for limited introduction of passive restraints in standard-size 1982 models; however, Congress may change the rule so that it affects only some models of small cars and begins in 1983. The bill (HR 7831) was passed and sent to conference with the House.

Senators voting "nay" wanted to thwart the passive-restraint program by denying the money needed to administer it.

Helms voted "nay."

New Vaccine Effective In Hepatitis

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An experimental vaccine derived from the blood of hepatitis B carriers has proven almost completely effective against the viral liver infection, which may afflict hundreds of thousands of Americans and hits some developing nations in near-epidemic proportions, doctors say.

Results of the first large-scale trial of the vaccine show it virtually eliminates the risk of hepatitis B among those who receive it and has few side effects, said Dr. Wolf Szmuness of New York Blood Center, who coordinated the trial.

Szmuness said the vaccine may be approved for marketing within a year.

About 15,000 cases of the virus are reported annually in the United States, but doctors suspect the real number of cases may be in the hundreds of thousands. Hepatitis B, which in severe cases can cause jaundice and liver damage, afflicts certain social groups in developed countries and is a major health problem in parts of Africa and Asia.

Bouts of chronic hepatitis often require hospitalization and can cause death. Other victims can become "carriers," showing no symptoms but passing the disease on.

Szmuness said the vaccine would be "very desirable" in many parts of the world and could have a major public health impact if developing countries can afford to mount mass immunizations like those that eradicated smallpox.

"In this country, probably the vaccine will be given only to high-risk people," Szmuness said. He said it probably would not be given routinely to children, but might be given to children of carriers.

Results of the study were not due to be released until a news conference Oct. 8, one day before they were to appear in the New England Journal of Medicine. Szmuness, reached by telephone Sunday night, said he could not discuss the study in detail pending publication but agreed to discuss aspects of it to counter what he described as distorted reports that had appeared in some news media.

In the United States, hepatitis B is common among health workers and kidney dialysis patients and is considered near epidemic among homosexuals. It is most often spread by intimate personal contact. The virus is found in the blood, breast milk, saliva and semen.

In the study, Szmuness and co-workers enlisted 1,083 homosexual volunteers and divided them into two equal groups, one receiving vaccine and the other a placebo vaccine which lacked the hepatitis antigen.

After nearly two years, Szmuness said, 25 percent of those in the placebo group had come down with hepatitis B, compared to 3.6 percent in the vaccine group. There were no cases at all among those in the vaccine group who completed the three-shot series of immunizations and whose blood showed the presence of protective antibodies.

The only side effect was occasional soreness from the shot. A possible bonus is that the vaccine may help reduce the incidence of one kind of liver cancer, hepatoma, which statistical studies have shown to be slightly more common among people who have had hepatitis B.

Szmuness said it will take years of further study to tell whether the vaccine helps reduce hepatoma.

The vaccine is refined from the blood of carriers and is administered in three shots over six months. It is produced by Merck, Sharpe & Dohme of West Point, Pa.

The new vaccine is still relatively expensive, Szmuness said, since it must be obtained from human donors and refined by a complicated process. One hope for reducing this cost is to produce hepatitis antigen by the gene-splicing techniques of recombinant DNA.

A companion study is being conducted by the federal center for Disease Control and should be complete in five to six months, Szmuness said.

A Monument To Glories Of Checkers

By JOHN BRANSTON

PETAL, Miss. (UPI) — Some men spend their fortunes on wine and women. Some squirrel their money away. Charles Walker has spent a good deal of his for the greater glory of checkers, erecting a regal monument to that humble game in Petal, Miss.

The Checkers Museum and Hall of Fame is housed in a spacious hall connected to Walker's elegant home in the southern Mississippi woods. While most people may consider checkers a sort of poor cousin to chess, rating it a simple game played by children and old men, Walker has built a monument to it that is strictly first class.

His luxurious checkers room is decorated with 300-pound Oriental wood carvings, antiques and medieval replicas including a full-scale knight and charger, art prints by Salvador Dali and photographs of championship checker games.

The museum also houses the trophy for the United States-Great Britain World Championship match which was last won in 1973 by the United States. The next match will be in Petal in 1983, by which time Walker plans to have doubled the size of the museum.

The 24-foot-square green and white checked floor doubles as a giant checkerboard during championship matches. While competitors play on a hardwood table, spotters slide red and white cushions around the floor so the spectators in the walk-around second-floor gallery can clearly see the action.

The amiable insurance executive talks about the reigning checkers champ, Florida mathematician Marion Tinsley, the way a tennis fan talks about Bjorn Borg. Tinsley trounced the competition in the world championship last year with "shots no one had ever seen." He is "in a league of his own." Tinsley, says Walker with wide-eyed admiration, "can see 30 moves ahead."

Like chess, big-time checkers can be agonizingly slow. A 40-game tournament championship match can take as long as 10 days. The best players are so good that the first three moves in a match are sometimes predetermined to alter their strategy. But there are gimmicks, too. Checkers masters like Tinsley will take on all comers with only five checkers.

Walker is no mean competitor himself. Introduced to the game by his father-in-law several years ago, he began competing against better and better players, gradually establishing a reputation like a playground athlete. Now he is the Mississippi state champion, much better than his old competition yet far below the incomparable Tinsley. This lack of competition presents a problem.

"As in any sport, if you don't play often enough then you aren't sharp," explains Walker. "When I was playing my best, I could see 15 moves ahead."

But a visitor — the Hall of Fame is open to the public during tournaments and by appointment — gets the impression that Walker gets as much fun out of promoting checkers as he does playing it.

"Checkers is really The American Game," he enthuses. "Did you know that more checker boards are sold than anything else at Christmas? It's so simple anyone can play it, but so complicated nobody can master it."

Walker's fascination with checkers is apparent throughout his house and office, where checkerboard tables, walls and floors are the main design theme. There is a bed canopy in the shape of a crown, and a dog that is, naturally, named Checkers.

A millionaire who made his first dollar selling newspapers when he was seven, Walker even claims to have gleaned a philosophical lesson from his favorite game: "It's good for your mind. It teaches you discipline, to stop and think before making a hasty move. I use the same principle in business."

South African Synthetic Fuel Know-How For U.S.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A vast jungle of pipes, storage tanks and giant towers emerging from arid bush country means energy survival for South Africa — and a sample of things to come in the United States.

Indeed, in Washington on Monday, the U.S. House Government Operations subcommittee warned in a report that the United States "faces the constant threat of a major supply disruption," because of its high dependence on imported oil and a lack of energy emergency planning.

But this is old news to South Africa, which now has probably the most advanced synthetic fuel operation in the world. It's been producing "synfuels" for the last 25 years.

Just this week, the state-controlled South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp. — better known as SASOL — announced that a synthetic fuel plant using its technology will be built in North Dakota. A consortium of American companies is to build the coal-to-oil facility near low-sulphur coal fields in that state.

The U.S. Congress passed legislation in June for a $20 billion program to launch a synthetic fuels industry. The program's goal is to produce the equivalent of 500,000 barrels of imported oil a day by 1987, or about 4 percent of today's daily U.S. oil consumption.

SASOL officials expect their technology to be deeply involved in the American program. The Los Angeles-based Fluor Corp. has an agreement to market SASOL know-how in America.

Long before the rest of the world discovered that cheap oil wasn't cheap anymore, South Africa had a problem.

The most industrialized country in Africa, it had no oil deposits of its own. It has lots of coal — an estimated 61 billion tons — and thus needs imported oil for only a fourth of its energy needs. But this oil goes for public and private transport and the economy would collapse without it.

The white minority government committed itself to a synthetic fuel industry just after World War II and used some Nazi technology to start its first oil-from-coal plant, SASOL 1. By 1955, the plant, located 40 miles south of here, was producing gasoline and 20 other petroleum products.

The technique, developed in Germany during the war, uses steam and oxygen under intense pressure to convert coal to carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, hydrogen and methane. The gas is liquified to produce a synthetic oil almost indistinguishable from natural crude.

The South African government keeps a tight security wrap around details of the process and how much it costs. It is assumed that production of SASOL fuel costs far more than natural oil. But South Africa is less concerned about cost than it is about getting fuel.

Iran was South Africa's traditional petroleum supplier until the fall of the shah. The shah's father, when he was in exile during World War II, was given refuge in South Africa and close ties were formed between the two countries.

The revolutionary Iranian government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini cut off oil sales to South Africa last year, joining other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries which refuse to sell oil to the white minority government because of its apartheid race segregation policies.

South Africa now buys oil on the spot market, where the cost can be twice as high as current OPEC prices. But South Africa, as the world's largest gold producer, has plenty of money to spend. In fact, it is understood that the government already has 18 months of oil supplies stored in secret tank farms and unused underground mines.

When OPEC sharply escalated oil prices in 1973, South Africa began constructing SASOL 2, a synthetic fuel plant occupying 1,850 acres that has 10 times the capacity of SASOL 1. It has already begun production and will be operating at full capacity within two or three years.

Last year, in light of the Iranian revolution, the launching of SASOL 3 — a carbon copy of SASOL 2 — was announced. It is being built alongside SASOL 2 and a workforce of 22,000 is on site. SASOL 3 should be operating by 1984. SASOL 2 and 3 are located near rich coal deposits 120 miles southeast of Johannesburg.

With all three synfuel plants in full production, SASOL is expected to provide between one-third and half of South Africa's daily consumption of imported oil, estimated at 270,000 barrels.

At every gas station in South Africa, customers can fill up at the blue and white SASOL pumps alongside pumps offering regular fuel from imported oil. The price is the same — the equivalent of $2.77 a gallon. The government subsidizes the SASOL product.

SASOL is now so much a part of the motoring scene in South Africa that customers usually just fill up at whatever pump happens to be available. Vehicle performance is the same.

While authorities jealously guard exact figures, it is known that SASOL plants are also providing jet fuel, diesel oil and a wide range of what is known as "stockfeed" — raw materials for the plastics and fertilizer industries here.

SASOL is considered to be a decade ahead of anybody else in the sythetic fuel field.

"Of the first $100 million allocated by the U.S. Department of Energy for design work on synfuel projects," said SASOL chairman David de Villiers last week, "$60 million will go to projects with which SASOL is involved, either as consultant or potential licensor."

'Surrogate Parenting' Expects First Production In November

By CHERYL TRUMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Surrogate Parenting Associates Inc. is expecting its first finished product this fall.

It will be a baby boy, due sometime around the week of November 15.

Surrogate Parenting is a baby-making business, signing up women willing to bear children for couples who themselves cannot produce offspring.

Katie Brophy, the organization's attorney, said this first surrogate mother — who does not give her real name but goes by Elizabeth Kane in connection with her surrogate mother activities — is a 37-year-old Illinois woman with three children of her own.

She was impregnated with sperm from the male partner of a couple who cannot bear children.

That the baby is a boy — and that he is healthy — is already known because of tests necessary due to the mother's age, said Ms. Brophy.

Surrogate Parenting was established in February by Dr. Richard Levin, a Louisville infertility specialist, and Karen Zena, a former paralegal worker. Ms. Zena said the driving force behind the organization was Levin, who "has a real feeling for those couples who come here unable to have children."

"It is a service that people need to know about," she added.

Ms. Brophy said the parents in this first case have not met the surrogate mother, but have spoken to her by telephone.

When asked about how much contact the surrogate wanted to have with the child while he or she grows up, she replied, "I don't really think she (the surrogate) wants any further contact with the child, other than knowing it's healthy and happy."

The lawyer said Surrogate Parenting had to devise its own contract between the biological mother and the prospective parents. There was no model to go by.

The birth certificate will bear the names of the father and the surrogate mother. According to Ms. Brophy, the child must be legally adopted by the wife of the father.

Ms. Brophy would not divulge how much the surrogate mothers are being paid. "We ask the women to just tell us what they're interested in," she said, adding that most of the surrogate fees range from $5,000 to $10,000.

FINAL COMPREHENSIVE ANNUAL SERVICES PLAN UNDER TITLE XX STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA

Notice is hereby given of publication of the Final Comprehensive Annual Services Plan for the program year beginning October 1, 1980, and ending September 30, 1981.

As a result of public comment, the following changes have been incorporated in the final plan:

- The section describing mandated services was rewritten for clarification.
- The footnote to Family Planning Services was revised due to restrictions placed on the use of federal funds.
- The definition of Housing and Home Improvement Services was amended to include fans and air conditioners when needed to protect the health of an individual.
- Service plans of agencies utilizing Title XX funds were updated to reflect the most recent data available.
- Client and expenditure projections are arrayed by county rather than by service.

Information on the plan and where to apply for services is available by calling 1-800-662-7030 (TOLL FREE).

Application for social services will be accepted and the final plan may be reviewed at all county departments of social services.

Public comments received on the proposed plan may be reviewed at, and copies of the final plan may be obtained from:

Afghan Political Exile Groups In Great Disarray

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Exile political groups claiming to run the Afghan resistance from sanctuaries in northwest Pakistan remain no closer to unity than they were 10 months ago when the Soviet Union sent troops into their homeland.

While most observers here express agreement that the uprising inside Afghanistan against the Soviet-back Marxist government continues to grow, they maintain that if anything the rivalries among the exiles is deeper than before the intervention last Dec. 27. For one thing, Afghan sources say, the five parties forming the Islamic Alliance for the Liberation of Afghanistan are ignoring the coalition president's order to close their own individual headquarters in Pakistan in a move toward unity.

The largest exile group, the rightwing Hezb-I-Islami, has been accused by others of using strong-arm tactics to force newly arrived refugees to join and make monthly "contributions" from the international aid they receive.

But more damaging have been charges — denied by Hezbi officials — that it has betrayed insurgents aligned with rival parties to pro-Soviet authorities in Afghanistan. One group claimed it lost 13 members in a bloody clash with supporters of Hezbi itself last month.

Personal ambitions and conflicting ideologies are said by the sources to have prevented a joint struggle against the modern Soviet military force.

But the disenchantment with the more than 20 feuding parties has led to two significant developments:

—Grass-roots efforts have been launched in recent weeks to reorganize the resistance movement along traditional tribal lines, which would delegate the parties to a minor role or leave them out completely.

—A wave of nostalgia for ex-King Mohammed Zahir Shah has swept the tents and tea stalls where many of the one million Afghan refugees talk politics. The frequently expressed hope of some of them is that the deposed monarch, now living in Italy, will somehow forge unity.

"I was imprisoned 13 years under the king for political activities and then spent another eight in internal exile," said Mohammed Hashim Zamani, an influential resistance figure. "But I would support his return because I believe he is the only one who can gather the nation together."

Afghans, after enduring years of instability, now remember Zahir Shah's 1933-1973 reign as a period of peace and national cohesion, Zamani said.

Forgotten is the view, held popularly on his overthrow, that the monarch stood in the way of democratic reforms, he added.

A former Parliament member, Mohammed Kabir Amin, claimed that the king — unlike exile leaders here — has had first-hand experience governing the rugged central Asian country.

"What I can say is that the only person who has ridden a wild horse can control one," he added.

Afghanistan's present Marxist government's concern over the king's new support was reflected recently by a stinging attack by President Babrak Karmal on what he described as the ex-monarch's "feudalistic" followers. Karmal's remarks were broadcast by the state-run Radio of Afghanistan.

Another trend in reaction to the exile unity problem was the formation of nonpartisan, anti-Soviet alliances through tribal councils in two of the country's 28 provinces.

Reliable Afghan sources said the new groupings in Kandahar and Kunar are important because the two provinces have been key centers of the anti-Marxist revolt in Afghanistan.

"I have told my friends that, yes, a modern state needs political parties and returning to tribal councils seems to be a step backward," said Sayed Shamsuddin Majrooh, 71, who was elected president of the Kunar organization.

"But the tribal councils are essential in a country like ours because we can unify our people only along traditional lines which is their tribal loyalty."

Some, if not all, exile parties are expected to oppose the new tribal alliances. But Majrooh, a former Afghan minister of justice, maintained they would be welcomed by those actually fighting Soviet forces inside Afghanistan.

"We have two aims — the protection of Islamic values and the liberation of Afghanistan," he said in an interview with The Associated Press. "First we must free our country and only then can political parties evolve."

As a first step, Majrooh's Kunar Tribal Alliance for Islamic Holy War has appointed a resistance leader with a well known combat record as its general commander, former police official Mohammad Anwar, a member of the Nuristani Tribe which was the first to revolt after the Marxist coup of April 1978.

The Nuristan region of Kunar Province in eastern Afghanistan has been under insurgent control ever since, although villages have been badly damaged in air strikes.

The tribal organization in Kandahar, known as the Western Regional Alliance, and the one in Kunar eventually hope to build a nationwide federation to give the resistance a unified structure throughout Afghanistan, said Majrooh.

Already attempts were being made to create such tribal groupings in Laghman, Nanagahar, Uruzgan and Takhar provinces, he said. Meanwhile, other Afghan sources claim that insurgent leaders from Wardak Province, just east of Kabul, have given an ultimatum to the exile parties here to bury their differences and have threatened to form an independent organization if they don't.

Two Hundred Years Ago Revolution 'Came Alive'

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For the Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two hundred years ago this week, the War for Independence was going badly for the Americans.

In May 1780, Charleston had fallen to the British and in August the American Patriots had been routed at Camden, S.C.

British Gen. Cornwallis was poised at Charlotte for his drive through the Piedmont to Hillsborough, his next objective.

With him was the last royal governor, Josiah Martin, who was anxious to resume the office that he had been forced to give up four years before.

Neither Cornwallis nor Martin anticipated the rude diversion thaat occurred the following week about 30 miles west of Charlotte on a hill called Kings Mountain.

Confident of the loyalty of the mountaineers further west, the general assigned dashing young Patrick Ferguson to enlist them as Tories to help put down the pesky Patriots scattered through the area.

Maj. Ferguson marched his forces to Gilbert Town (near president-day Rutherfordton) and boastfully announced that if the westerners did not rally to the British cause, he would march his army upon them, "hang their leaders and lay their country waste with fire and sword."

The major should have known more about the proudly indnependent mountaineers. They did not take such a threat lightly; no upstart redocast was going to talk to them like that.

So, late in September the angry mountain men gathered at Sycamore Flats in the present state of Tennessee. There were perhaps a thousand men, many of them from Burke and Rutherford counties under Col. Charles McDowell, others from Sullivan County under Col. Isaach Shelby, and about 400 men from Washington County, Va., under command of Col. William Campbell.

This huge army of mountaineers, in their homemade clothing and with hunting guns, marched across the Blue Ridge, and at Quaker Meadows near Morganton they were joined by about 350 citizen-soldiers from Surry and Wilkes counties under command of Benjamin Cleveland.

Their movement eastward did not escape notice of Maj. Ferguson, who retreated to a rocky ridge on the line between the two Carolinas.

There the British-led Tory forces of about 1,100 men took position on a high ridge on the South Carolina side. So confident was Ferguson of the impregnability of his position that he sent out the message that he was king of Kings Mountain.

By the time the Patriots reached the foot of the ridge, they numbered more than 1,500. The task confronting them that morning of Oct. 7, 1780, was formidable: they intended to remove the "king" from the top of the mountain.

They scattered around the base of the ridge and began scrambling up the steep slopes from all sides. The bushes and trees prevented the Tories from anticipating the size of the attack until the hoard of Patriots sprang among them at tthe top of the ridge.

Maj. Ferguson lived up to his nickname of "Bull Dog." His plaid hunting shirt and shrill silver whistle made him a clear target, but he nevertheless raced up and down the lines rallying his men.

The Patriots decisively won the battle and left 157 enemy dead and 163 more wounded. Among the dead was the brave young Maj. Ferguson, who was buried on the mountain.

The Patriot rout at Kings Mountain was a rude shock to Gen. Cornwallis. Now fully aware of the anti-British sentiment in the back country, he marched his army back into South Carolina for safety.

His first invasion of North Carolina had been a failure.

Sentence Girl In Kidnapping

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A 16-year-old Wyoming girl has been ordered by a juvenile court judge to spend two years in the State Hospital in Pueblo for kidnapping a Colorado Springs boy.

Judge Donald Campbell imposed the sentence on Letha Rose Kingsbury of Cheyenne, Wyo., in connection with last September's abduction of Jamie Mokshefski, then 2 years old.

The boy was found in Texas 17 days after his disappearance. Miss Kingsbury was arrested in July while hitchhiking near Cheyenne and was charged with second-degree kidnapping.

Dread Hurricane Works Like A Giant Heat Engine

By JOY ASCHENBACH
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Wet, windy, and unpredictable, hurricanes run by themselves, like huge self-sustaining heat engines spinning across the sea.

Extracting heat energy from the warm ocean, hurricanes release it into the atmosphere. If converted to electrical energy, the energy released by a single hurricne in one day would keep the United States supplied with power for three years.

As big as 500 miles or more in diameter and reaching almost 8 miles high, hurricanes are the greatest storms on earth. Their name comes from the Spanish and Caribbean Indian words for "big wind" and "evil spirit".

Hurricanes can produce cyclonic winds of 200 mph or more — the most violent surround the relatively calm "eye" of the storm. They can cause coastal waters to swell as high as 25 feet above normal tide. They can travel long distances — several thousand miles across water at speeds of up to 50 mph. And they have a long life expectancy by atmospheric standards: one to two weeks.

In the Atlantic, Caribbean, and Gulf of Mexico, hurricanes in this century have killed an estimated 45,000 people, including more than 13,000 in the United States. Nine out of ten hurricane victims drown in water that is swept ashore with the high winds. Six thousand people died in Galveston, Texas, in a storm in September 1900, the worst U.S. hurricane disaster.

Rivaled in size only by their western Pacific and Indian Ocean counterparts — typhoons and cyclones — hurricanes have caused more than $12 billion damage in the United States alone since 1900. The costliest was last season's $2.3 billion Hurricane Frederic.

All of this destructive force is concentrated in an average of six hurricanes in a six-month season, June through November. Less than one-tenth of the some 100 tropical disturbances that could become hurricanes actually do, the worst usually occurring in August and September. On the average, two or three hurricanes strike the North American mainland each season.

At Their Worst

At their fiercest — a "catastrophic" number 5 on the Saffir-Simpson classification scale — their wind speed exceeds 155 mph and the atmospheric pressure in the eye drops drastically. A half-dozen hurricanes in this century have rated a 5, among them: the 1935 Labor Day storm that ripped through the Florida Keys, the strongest on record; this season's Allen, which swept across the Caribbean into Texas, the second strongest; and 1969's Camille, which devastated the Mississippi and Lousiana coasts.

Although they have stalked the Atlantic region almost every year since at least Columbus' time, hurricanes still baffle scientists. They create their own complicated environment that depends on the right blend of several key ingredients: proper water temperature, warm moist air, and a good circulation system that lets air flow in at the bottom, andup and out at the top — like smoke up a chimney.

Hurricanes begin calmly enough. Most start as the summer sun warms the tropical waters around the Cape Verde Islands west of Africa to at least 80 F. Waves of most air drift off the African coast. Trade winds blowing west are sustained by the stable Bermuda high, a mass of warm humid air that straddles the North Atlantic and controls its weather in summer and fall. Patches of concentrated showers ride the trades.

Moving across the warm ocean, these diverse forces mysteriously begin to organize themselves and steadily intensify. Showers mature into thunderstorms. Air whirls around low-pressure troughs.

When sustained winds reach 39 mph, the disturbance is upgraded to a tropical storm and given a name — as of last year either male or female. When velocity accelerates to at least 74 mph, the tropical storm officially becomes a hurricane.

Cause Unknown

"We still don't know exactly what triggers a hurricane — why, apparently given favorable conditions, one storm develops and another doesn't" says meteorologist Mark Zimmer of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, which must monitor all of the 100 disturbances that form each season.

"Our weakest point — and the reason that hurricanes are almost impossible to predict — is our inability to tell whether or not a storm will intensify — and when. Once it does, we have a reasonably good grip on tracking direction and speed."

What scientists know about what goes on inside a hurricane most closely resembles the operation of a heat engine or a fire in a fireplace. At the sea surface, air heated by the warm ocean rises, cools, condenses, and forms bands of thick clouds that release torrential rains.

As the air rises and cools, it gives off heat, greatly reducing the atmospheric pressure at the center. At lower altitudes, when the pressure drops, the trade winds are propelled in a spiral pattern by the spin of the Earth. In the Northern Hemisphere they swirl in a counterclockwise or cyclonic direction.

Air whips inward around the calm eye and is whirled upward. When it rises to about 40,000 feet it vents the system, merging with high altitude winds. Now dry, some air is forced back down the center, creating the virtually cloud-free eye, usually about 25 miles across.

Wind speed picks up near the eye and is strongest in the "eyewall", the innermost band of clouds that is usually about 15 miles thick. It is here — across this central 50 to 75 miles — that the storm does its greatest damage.

Order Amid Chaos

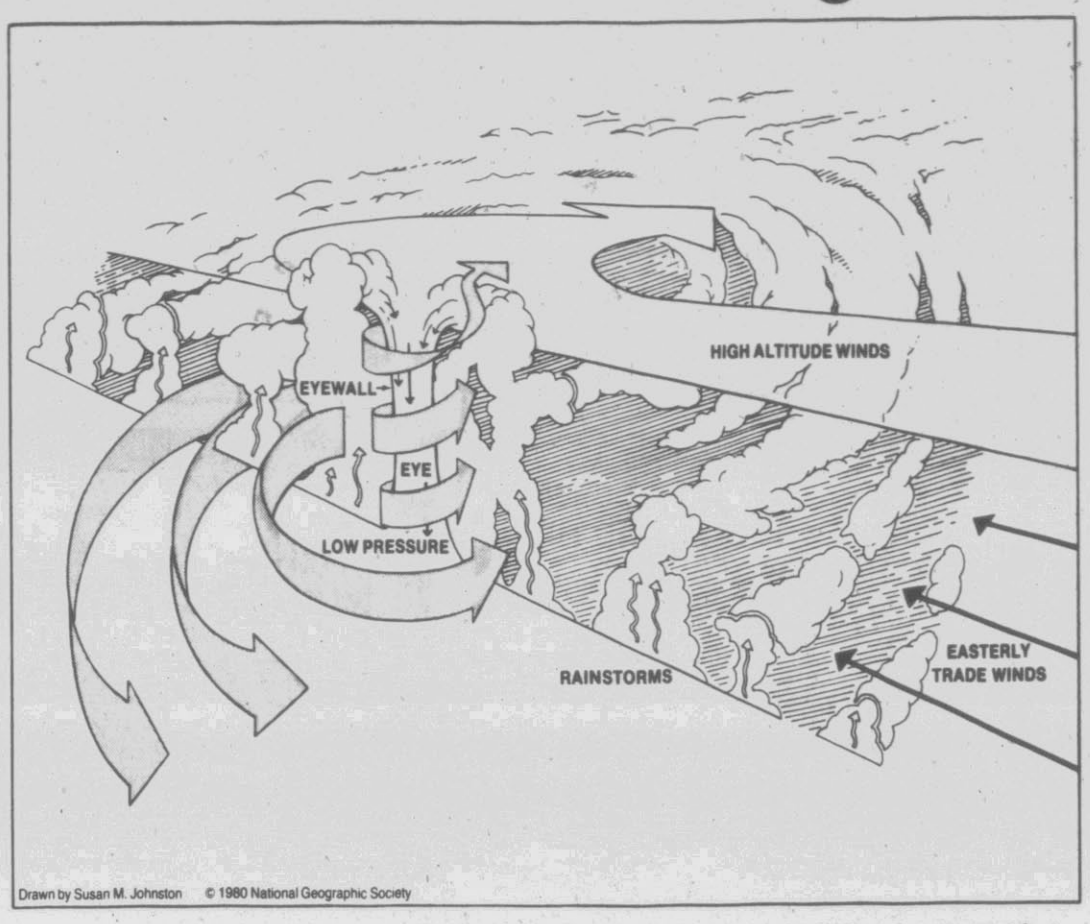
The hurricane eye — a frequent metaphor for order in the midst of chaos — apparently controls a storm's wind velocity. The smaller in diameter and the lower its pressure, the stronger the winds. Atmospheric pressure in Allen's center plunged to the second lowest level on record, 10 percent below normal atmospheric pressure and double the drop in the average hurricane.

Low pressure in the eye is also the dominant force behind the storm surge that kills most hurricane victims. Beneath it the ocean surface rises, forming a dome of water one or 2 feet high.

As the hurricane heads for land, wind drives more water onto the dome. This combination can produce waves 25 feet above normal tide if it hits a sloping shoreline.

As it strikes land, a hurricane does its worst damage. Once over land — cut off from its ocean power source — it quickly runs out of steam. Fueled by the ocean's warmth, it is also doomed if it travels over cooler northern waters.

For all their destructive elements, hurricanes do have their good points. They bring much-needed rain to tropical islands, and take away some of the tremendous heat that builds up near the equator.



Drawn by Susan M. Johnston © 1980 National Geographic Society

LIKE A GIANT HEAT ENGINE, a hurricane is fueled by warm water, moist air, and a good ventilating system. In this cutaway view, trade winds guide the hurricane's path from east to west. In lower altitudes, air whips inward in a counterclockwise spiral outside the relatively calm eye, and is whirled upward. Warm moist air rises, cools, and condenses, forming bands of dense clouds that release torrential rains. As the air rises, ultimately merging with high-altitude winds, it releases heat and greatly reduces the atmospheric pressure at the center. Some air, now dry, is forced back down the center, creating the nearly cloud-free eye. Wind velocity is strongest nearest the eye – in the eyewall.

Tax Writer Al Ullman In Big Survival Fight

By STEVE GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Rep. Al Ullman, the nation's chief tax writer, is in the fight of his political life against a conservative Republican who says the Democrat's congressional leadership role has caused him to lose touch with his Oregon constituents.

The campaign against Ullman — chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee — is part of a nationwide effort by Republicans to defeat several of the most influential Democratic legislators in Congress.

Ullman's re-election bid comes at a time in which Republicans seem fairly strong in Oregon. Sen. Bob Packwood, a moderate Republican, is a solid favorite for re-election, and recent polls show Ronald Reagan leading for the state's six presidential electoral votes.

Reagan led President Carter 34 percent to 28 percent in a poll taken in late August for the Portland Oregonian. But Reagan's margin had dropped slightly from a 35 percent to 25 percent margin in early August, and Carter recently visited the state in an effort to speed that trend.

High unemployment in the all-important timber industry has sparked criticism of Carter's economic record, and Ullman hopes voters in his district won't put some of the blame in his lap.

The Republican Congressional Campaign Caucus, which heads the GOP effort to knock off prominent Democratic congressmen, put its money behind Denny Smith, a former airline pilot and son of a former governor who heads a chain of 17 weekly newspapers.

Smith is giving Ullman all he can handle in Oregon's 2nd District, which encompasses about three-quarters of the state.

Ullman squeaked through his primary battle and found himself regarded as anything but a shoo-in for a 13th term, despite his national standing and influence as Congress' top tax legislator.

In fact, Smith suggests that Ullman's tax duties have caused him to lose touch with Oregon taxpayers, indirectly blaming Ullman for ever-higher income tax payments imposed on Americans.

"When you look at the hardship caused by Ullman's taxing policies, how could any voter ask for two more years of the same?," Smith said in one campaign statement.

"When you only return to the district 14 times in two years (1978 and 1979), you lose touch with what it takes to pay the bills here," says another Smith broadside.

Ullman has been trying to convince voters that a Smith victory would endanger the Social Security system, because Smith has urged that Social Security be converted to a vested retirement system, "where the money you and I put in is guaranteed to be there for us when we retire." Smith says all he wants to do is make sure the system is properly funded.

Packwood, a moderate Republican, appears unenthusiastic about Smith, but says he supports the ticket. When re-forestation legislation drafted by Packwood cleared Congress, he went out of his way to praise Ullman for helping get the measure through the House.

Packwood, with more than $1 million, has plenty of money for his campaign against state Sen. Ted Kulongoski. The liberal Democrat is not well-known outside his Eugene district and has had trouble raising funds.

Packwood's pro-abortion stance gained the support of feminist Gloria Steinam who lent her name to a direct-mail appeal. Packwood says the letter raised $650,000 — but cost $425,000 to put out.

Packwood got a boost this month when Congress approved his bill to establish a trust fund for replacing trees cut from federal land. Meanwhile, being a Republican has saved Packwood from being identified with the economic ills that have caused heavy layoffs in the industry.

Packwood also was the lone Senate Republican to vote against a tax cut. He said it would do nothing but make inflation worse. He says he doesn't know if that hurt him, but he worries about it.

The same people who introduced the first banking machines in North Carolina now introduce the most advanced banking machines in America.

And right now, we're celebrating by inviting you to enter the New NCNB 24 Silver Dollar Sweepstakes.

All you have to do is go through a demonstration, and you get a chance at a Silver-Dollar-On-The-Spot.

Plus a chance at the Grand Prize of 100 Silver Dollars.

But we think that, once you meet the machine that treats you like a human being, you'll want it to handle all your banking.

So, if you're already banking with NCNB 24, you can use the card and code you're using now.

If you're not, this is a good time to start. So come by, open an account, tell us the code number you want, and we'll get a card to you right away.

After all, we want everyone to get a chance to win. But, even without the Sweepstakes, you'll like dealing with the new NCNB 24.

It doesn't waste time; it handles your banking in as little as 30 seconds.

Instead of just $25 or $50, it gives you cash in $5 amounts up to $100.

It talks "people talk," not "machine talk," so it's easy to understand.

The new NCNB 24. Now at the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

NCNB 24

The machine that treats you like a human being.

Compare Our Prices!

A FEW WORDS ABOUT FOOD SHOPPING. It's The "Total" cost of your food bill that really counts. Some stores claim to be the cheapest on this or that; that is they have super low prices on just enough grocery items to confuse the issue...then they sock it to you on the meat prices and other grocery items. We don't claim to have the lowest prices on every item in our store, no one can truly make that claim but we do claim to be competitive on the total cost of your food bill,we will save you money, day in and day out. Our prices are right and our services are Greenville's best. Nobody can put it all together like Overton's can!

Kroger Sav-on

We Will Not Be Undersold in Greenville

and to back up our promise to you we Guarantee our low prices with this:

Triple the Difference!

GUARANTEE

If you can do better . . . We'll Triple the Difference!

Kroger Sav-on promises to pay you triple the difference in cash if you can do your normal weekly shopping for less at any other supermarket in Greenville. Kroger Sav-on can make this commitment because we have low Cost Cutter grocery prices . . . plus thousands of discounts on non-food items in department after department. See for yourself: after you've shopped Kroger Sav-on, compare the same items with any other Greenville store. If the total amount for the same items is less at the other store, we'll refund triple the difference in cash. Just purchase at least 25 different items totalling $20 or more (excluding meat products). Only one of each item purchased may be included in the comparison. If you can find any other store in town with the same items for less, bring your Kroger Sav-on register tape . . . plus the other store's prices . . . to your one-stop food and drug store. We'll pay you triple the difference in cash! Kroger Sav-on knows what's important to you . . . that's why we're making this exciting triple the difference promise. In one easy stop, cut your costs at Kroger Sav-on!

GUARANTEE

If you can do better . . . We'll Triple the Difference!

Kroger Sav-on promises to pay you triple the difference in cash if you can do your normal weekly shopping for less at any other supermarket in Greenville. Kroger Sav-on can make this commitment because we have low Cost Cutter grocery prices . . . plus thousands of discounts on non-food items in department after department. See for yourself: after you've shopped Kroger Sav-on, compare the same items with any other Greenville store. If the total amount for the same items is less at the other store, we'll refund triple the difference in cash. Just purchase at least 25 different items totalling $20 or more (excluding meat products). Only one of each item purchased may be included in the comparison. If you can find any other store in town with the same items for less, bring your Kroger Sav-on register tape . . . plus the other store's prices . . . to your one-stop food and drug store. We'll pay you triple the difference in cash! Kroger Sav-on knows what's important to you . . . that's why we're making this exciting triple the difference promise. In one easy stop, cut your costs at Kroger Sav-on!

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Have You Applied For A New Lowe's Credit Card? It's The Handy Card For Handy People, Like You.

We Also Honor Visa And MasterCharge Cards

THE FARM AT A&P

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY — Each of these advertised items is required to be readily available for sale at or below the advertised price in each A&P Store, except as specifically noted in this ad.

Where do you go for the freshest fruits and vegetables? To the farm, of course. So A&P brings The Farm to you.

Somewhere in the world, it's harvest time. And that's exactly where A&P's eagle-eyed produce buyers are right now—gathering the pick of the crop, and getting it rushed to The Farm in your nearby A&P store.

Their demanding standards and their ability to buy in large quantities means you get exceptional value whenever you buy produce at A&P.

So come take a fresh look at The Farm at A&P and get to know the Farm Manager. He's so proud of his fine fruits and vegetables, you'd think he grew them all himself! And he'll help you find exactly what you need to be equally proud when you serve it to your family!
