Hardliners Hold Majority On Hostage Panel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Iran's parliament today named a seven-member committee to investigate the issue of the 52 American hostages, the official Iranian news agency Pars said.

in their 334th day in captivity. It is scheduled to reopen debate on the hostages Sunday. The committee members were named in a broadcast by Tehran Radio as: -Hojatolislam Seyed Mohammad Moosavi Koeiniha, spokesman for the militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4 and liaison between Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the militants. -Seyed Ali Khamenei, a leading religious figure and hardliner known as the "Friday Imam" because he leads prayers at Tehran University on the Moslem sabbath. -Sayed Mohammad Khamenei, brother of the religious leader and a prominent lawyer. -Ali Akbar Nateq Nuri, a religious figure who headed the courts that tried the suspected members of the underground terrorist group Forghan. -Mohammad Yazdi, an education professor in the holy city of Qom, the religious capital of Iran. -Akbar Parvanesh, an economist from Isfahan in southern Iran. -Mohammad Kazem Moosavi Bojnourdi, the Isfahan governor. Three of the committee members are in the Islamic Republican Party, which is opposed to President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's government. They are Ali Khamenei, Nateq Nuri and Bojnourdi. Parliament, in forming the committee earlier this week, made clear that the full parliament will have the final say in determining the hostages' fate. There was no immediate indication what prompted the announcement about rejecting direct or third-party negotiations. But there was speculation it might be in reprisal for a Carter administration decision to send sophisticated radar picket planes to Saudi Arabia to help protect that nation's oilfields in the face of Iranian threats to attack them because of Saudi Arabia's reported offer of aid to Iraq in its war with Iran.

Pars said Wednesday that Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai received and was studying a letter from U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie on the hostages. But Muskie told reporters at the United Nations, "I don't recognize any letter of mine of that description." Muskie said he wrote to Iran to make clear that the four special radar and command planes the United States send to Saudi Arabia were "purely defensive and have no offensive capability." The Saudis asked for the planes out of concern the Iranians might make good on a threat to bomb Saudi oilfields if the Saudis aided Iraq in the war. Khomeini has empowered the parliament, with its majority of hardline Moslem fundamentalists, to decide the fate of the Americans.

Battle For Oil Port

In Hand-To-Hand Conflict

By STEVEN R. HURST Associated Press Writer BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - Iraqi and Iranian troops were reported locked in savage hand-to-hand combat today for Iran's oil port of Khorramshahr, and an Iraqi air attack was said to have heavily damaged a $3 billion Persian Gulf petrochemical complex under construction to the east. Meanwhile, Iran's Parliament unanimously rejected any direct or indirect negotiations with the United States on the 52 U.S. hostages captured 334 days ago. And in an offshoot of the 11-day-old war, the Iranian and Iraqi embassies in Beirut, Lebanon, were rocketed and seriously damaged. Western diplomats here said they believed Iraq's offer of a four-day cease-fire, which Iran immediately rejected, was a ploy to gain international prestige. The diplomats said they believed the Iraqis also were seeking a period of quiet so their troops could consolidate their gains inside Iran. Iraq's leading daily newspaper, Al-Thawra, charged the United States with war brinkmanship and playing with fire by continuing to interfere in the war. The paper offered no specifics to support the charge. Iraq said its shock troops were battling diehards of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary guards in a fresh assault to capture Khorramshahr. "Savage battles are raging from house to house and street to street to complete the liberation of the city," the government-controlled Baghdad newspaper Al Gomhoria said in a report broadcast by Iraq's state radio. "They're fighting hand to hand." A communique carried today by Baghdad Radio claimed the Iraqis had suffered "a large number of dead and wounded" Wednesday in the central and southern sectors of the warfront. It listed Iraqi losses as 16 dead, 24 wounded and three missing. The Iranian command said the Iraqis were "digging their own graves" in Khorramshahr and nearby Abadan, major cities of Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan province, and told the inhabitants: "You should fight tooth and nail to destroy these blasphemous enemies and teach them such a lesson that they will never be able to get up again." Some 100 miles east of Khorramshahr, facilities of the sprawling Japanese-Iranian petrochemical complex in Bandar Khomeini on the Persian Gulf were heavily damaged by an Iraqi air attack, Mitsui and Co., Iran's major partner in the project, said. Mitsui officials told reporters in Tokyo said the attack by several Iraqi fighter-bombers hit the central part of the 85-percent complete project, heavily damaging three of the 13 plants at the complex Tuesday. They said damage from the attack, the second on the petrochemical complex in a week, could seriously delay the project's completion, scheduled for the spring of 1982. The 745 Japanese workers at the project were evacuated to a camp six miles from the construction site after the first bombing raid, and none was injured in the attack, the officials said. The Iranian Embassy in the Lebanese capital was hit by rocket-propelled grenades about 4 a.m. today and the first four floors were wrecked by the exploding grenades, an embassy spokesman in Beirut said. Both Japan and South (Please turn to Page 10)

Work Ends In Congress By TOM RAUM Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress, after doling out enough money to keep the government going for about 2 1/2 months, is calling it quits until after the November elections, leaving behind a full agenda of unfinished business. The Senate recessed early today and the House was to do the same later in the day, having broken a deadlock Wednesday on a stopgap government-wide financing bill. The controversy, over financing abortions for poor women, had brought the government into the new fiscal year Wednesday without the legal authority to do business, meet payrolls or pay bills. But agreement on the spending bill came in time to avert any noticeable slowdown in government activities. The measure that kept Senators on Capitol Hill until the early morning hours was a proposed 10-week extension of jobless benefits - one of the elements in President Carter's economic revitalization program. The bill was passed, but not until five hours of negotiations between Democratic and Republican leaders had added language tightening eligibility requirements for unemployment compensation. That sent the measure back to the House, which passed the benefits extension alone. When lawmakers come back on Nov. 12, it will be to the first lame-duck session in a presidential election year since 1948. The major chores will be completion of the federal budget for fiscal 1981 and approval of the necessary appropriations bills to allow government agencies to operate beyond the Dec. 15 cutoff in the stopgap bill passed Wednesday. The outgoing 96th Congress seems certain to complete work on these "must" economic items before the 97th Congress convenes Jan. 3, 1981. But many other major bills were left hanging as members closed up shop until after the election - and how many of those bills would be revived in the lame-duck session remained an open question. Among the key pending bills are measures to revive federal revenue-sharing programs that expired Oct. 1, to protect Alaska park and wilderness lands, to revise the federal criminal code and to establish a billion-dollar fund to pay for oil spills and chemical waste site cleanups. And a Republican-backed plan for a big cut in personal income tax rates, which the Senate Finance Committee has approved in modified form, was also on the waiting list. Whether that will be dealt with when Congress returns may depend on who wins the presidential and congressional elections. Republicans have accused the congressional Democratic majority of scheduling the lame-duck session to avoid the political repercussions of having to deal with a budget that is not balanced. In fact, a GOP attempt Wednesday to keep Congress in town until work on the budget wound up was rejected on a 231-161 House vote that split along party lines.

Economic Health Of Community Is Seen As Hopeful

By MARY SCHULKEN Reflector Staff Writer Ten community leaders representing topics such as agriculture, building, industry, education, transportation, utilities and banking met at a Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Coffee Talk this morning to offer comments on the economic health of Greenville and Pitt County. Chairman of the County Commissioners Ed Warren spoke to the group about the condition of agriculture in the county. Calling agribusiness "our largest business," Warren said the county had at present about 1,700 farmers and 2,500 farms. "We expect about $80 million from tobacco alone this year," he commented. "With 22,000 acres of tobacco we can say that it's a large industry in the county. Livestock brings a large revenue, too. Swine and cattle production gross about $16 million and poultry and eggs about $11 million." Warren said that corn acreage, at 80,000 acres, was also a big crop. "Although," he added "this has been a disastrous year for corn." Warren set total income from agribusiness at $130 million. "I still feel land, especially land in Pitt County, is one of the best investments you can make." Speaking on retail sales in the county, Penney's Manager Don Yeager said sales this year had exceeded nearly all cities in the state. "With the exception of the Rocky Mount and Goldsboro areas, we are ahead." Retail sales have jumped seven percent this year, said Yeager. He compared Greenville's gain with the gains of cities such as Kinston and Washington. "Why are sales up here?" said Yeager. "Well, we have eight shopping centers and many other facilities such as 131 restaurants and fast food establishments." Realtor Connally Branch reported that residential building starts were down this year about 20 percent from 1979. "I feel this is due to the high cost of money and high interest rates." he explained. "We have had $15 million in new business starts this year, however." Branch said the number of new business starts only lagged behind the number in Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Durham and Raleigh. "The number of homes on the market is at an all-time high and interest in buying is strong," he added. Reese Hart, reporting on industry in the county, said, "The last six weeks have been phenomenal although the first half of the year was not as good as it could be. We are still aiming at high technology, high wage, low pollution industries, and so far we've been very successful." Dick Flye of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph said growth in telephone service was reflected by the fact that $750,000 in new construction had been spent this year. "We will be offering call forwarding and speed dialing in the 752 areas in November and in the 756

DIAMOND EARRINGS? I ordered some "quarter-carat diamond earrings" from an advertiser in the Family Weekly supplement to your Sunday newspaper. The price was $6. They arrived and I felt sure they are not what they were represented to be, so I took them to a jeweler who assured me I am right. I'd like to bring them to Hotline to see. L. M.

Your earrings were photographed at "The Daily Reflector" office and we advised you to write the company and ask for your money back, sending a copy to Family Weekly and indicating the copy sent on the letter, so the company will know Family Weekly is aware. You also obtained a complaint form for the N. C. Attorney General's office. We then talked to the Mike Robinson, the jeweler you consulted. He said the earrings you received do have diamonds in them, but they are industrial grade ones, not a quarter carat each, but more like one-quarter of one point (A quarter carat would have 25 points). Moreover, he said, the diamonds are what jewelers call rosettes, that is they have no definite shapes. They are set, he said, in an illusion setting, which makes them appear larger than they are. The metal in which they are mounted, he said, is not marked, as the law requires that either gold or silver be, so it can be assumed that the mounting is neither. In his opinion, he said, you got what you paid for. A set of quarter carat diamond earrings would cost from $600 to $1,000, depending on the quality and where they were bought. It's a case of let the buyer beware. The Family Weekly consumer office address is printed in every issue of the supplement and Hotline has found its service to be prompt and helpful.

Eight Traffic Collisions In City Wednesday By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer An estimated $41,850 property damage resulted from a series of eight traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police on city streets yesterday. Heaviest damage reported by investigators resulted from an 8:02 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 500 feet south of the Millbrook Street intersection. Officers reported that a car driven by Irene Harris Shelley of 305 Contentnea St., swerved to avoid colliding with a vehicle which pulled into the roadway from a driveway and collided with a utility pole. The force of the impact broke the utility pole, which was suspended in the roadway by power lines. A tractor-trailer driven by Willis Carl Tolar of Route 2, Vanceboro, then collided with the broken pole, causing additional damage to the power lines and two more of Arlington Boulevard and Commerce Street, causing $1,500 damage to the Masten car and $700 damage to the Moore auto. Investigators said a 5:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets involved cars driven by John Charles Schofield of 1203 East Fifth St. and Dandra Martin Clements of Courtney Square. Undercover Agent Has Less Than A Year Left WASHINGTON (AP) - The 2 1/2 years that California auto dealer Louis E. Peters spent attempting to infiltrate the family of reputed mob boss Joseph Bonnano may prove to be last years of his life. Peters, 48, collapsed earlier this year shortly before Bonnano was convicted in U.S. District Court on charges of obstructing justice - the first felony conviction for the man law enforcement authorities say rose from a gun runner for Al Capone to the head of one of New York's five organized crime families. The conviction was based largely on evidence obtained by Peters. Doctors now say Peters has brain cancer, and they give him less than a year to live. "If I had it to do over again, I would do it again," Peters said Wednesday in an interview at FBI headquarters. "You don't change what's right." The 6-foot-3, 240-pound millionaire Cadillac dealer described how he parlayed a suspicious offer to buy his Lodi, Calif., dealership into an extraordinary personal relationship with Bonnano. The 75-year-old Bonnano allowed Peters to stay at his Tucson home while other friends and lawyers were put up at nearby hotels. Bonnano's driver once said to Peters, "Don't you realize, you're part of the family?" Peters' involvement began in June 1977, when a local contractor offered to buy his auto dealership for $2 million. Peters says it was only worth $1.2 million. The contractor told him the buyer would actually be Bonnano, who wanted to own a business that he could use to launder money from his criminal activities.

Truck and Cars Collide With Utility Wires

TRUCK AND CARS COLLIDE WITH UTILITY WIRES - In an accident last night a car, left, swerved to miss another vehicle, hit a utility pole, which caused wires, top, to drop into the path of a tractor-trailer truck (right) causing heavy damage to the truck and injuries to two persons. Miss Moore, Mr. Smith Marry On Saturday

BEAUFORT — The wedding ceremony of Tammy Rochelle Moore and Dallas Mabrey Smith took place Saturday evening at seven o'clock in the Ann Street United Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Douglas Byrd.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Rachel Willis of Williston, organist, Howard Wilson of Kannapolis and Jimmy Guthrie of Harkers Island, soloists.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Cecil J. Moore of Harkers Island and Dallas G. Smith and Corrine Holloway Smith of Beaufort.

The matron of honor was Linda Rike of Beaufort, sister of the bridegroom. Bridesmaids included Vicki Landingham of Otway, Mia Kapp, Celeste Hancock and Leisa Gaskill, all of Harkers Island. The junior bridesmaids were Gina Cook, Jessica and Lindsey Willis, all of Harkers Island. Ashlyn Willis also of Harkers Island was flower girl.

Jeff Edwards of Beaufort was best man and ushers were Tommy Bullock, Timmy Sadler, Joe Brickhouse, Royce Dudley and Rodney Lewis, all of Beaufort.

The ring bearer was Wyatt Rike of Beaufort, nephew of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal gown of alencon lace styled with a high neckline, empire bodice and full bishop sleeves with pointed cuffs. The skirt extended into a lace chapel length train. Her bridal hat featured a double tier of French lace and she carried a bouquet of yellow and white daisies and miniature yellow roses.

The honor attendant selected a formal gown of light blue with a lace jacket. She wore a hat trimmed with a bow and streamers. She carried a bouquet of daisies and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids wore light yellow dresses and hats like those of the honor attendant. Their flowers were also identical.

The flower girl wore a white formal dress and hat.

The couple will be living at Rt. 1, Beaufort, after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S. C.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of East Carteret High School. She is co-owner of The Calico Kitchen, Morehead City. The bridegroom is general manager of Radio Island Auto Sales, Beaufort.

A reception followed the ceremony was held at the Eure Building, Beaufort.

Dear Abby

Suicide Attempt Likely To Be Repeated

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago our 18-year-old daughter (I'll call her Nancy) tried to commit suicide. She took a handful of sleeping pills, but thank God we found her in time to save her. Now that she is back to normal, she says she realizes how foolish she was, and she has promised that she will never try anything like that again.

Nancy has always been a rather shy and quiet girl who never dated much until she met a young man who gave her a big rush. They were seeing each other every night until he suddenly broke it off, saying he thought they were getting too serious. That's when Nancy took the pills.

Abby, how can we be sure she won't try it again? Is there something we can do to help her? She is putting on a brave show, but we can tell that she is brokenhearted.

LOS ANGELES MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: According to Dr. Katherina Marmor of the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center, one who has attempted suicide is 10 times more likely to try it again.

Nancy should phone the L.A. Suicide Prevention Center (213-473-1217). The center welcomes anyone who has attempted suicide (or even considered it) to come in for individual or group counseling. The caring, competent staff will adjust the fee to one's ability to pay.

Most cities have 24-hour suicide hotlines offering help in a crisis. (Ask your operator for the number.) Counseling for the depressed or suicidal person is available at all mental health centers.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a sophomore at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. My problem is my roommate. She's a swell kid, but she doesn't go out much because she's so quiet. The guys say it's like pulling teeth to get a word out of her. Any suggestions?

LYNDA

DEAR LYNDA: Yes. Fix her up with a dental student.

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to a columnist, but I find myself with a problem I cannot fathom myself.

I am an antique dealer (semi-retired). When I first started my antique business I met a very affable young American couple while traveling in Europe. Since we lived in the same city in the U.S., we became close friends. I taught them as much as I could about antiques and advised them on their purchases, many of which came from my store.

Now, 27 years later, they have met another antique dealer, also in this city, who is duping them constantly. He is selling them brand-new Oriental furniture and objects of art, and passing them off as centuries old.

I am appalled at this situation and don't know how to handle it. They are very happy with their purchases from him.

My question is this: Should I tell them the truth about their new purveyor, or keep my mouth shut and let them go on being cheated by this chicanery? I don't want to lose their friendship.

KNOWS ANTIQUES

DEAR KNOWS: Since your friendship goes back 27 years, you'd be less than a good friend to sit in silence while some crook rips them off. Tell them how to distinguish authentic Oriental antiques from new reproductions, and let them draw their own conclusions.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I saw an ad for a new diet the other day that will never get off the ground. It's called "STARVE."

The woman pictured with the article looked terrible. Her face was drawn, her eyes looked tortured, her bust sagged, and her neck looked like a candidate for chicken stock.

The diet promised you nothing but work, sacrifice, and a 15-pound weight reduction in a YEAR if you changed your eating habits. No pills. No hot-air jumpsuits. No staples in your ear. No hypnosis. Just sensible eating habits.

Who wants to hear that kind of talk?

I want to believe the ads that tell me I can lose 12 pounds as I sleep just by wearing a "strangle suit" and awake to slimmer thighs, smooth hips and a caved-in waistline.

I want to try the "magic formula" that up until now only famous Hollywood and TV stars could afford but is now available to me in a plain wrapper.

I want to believe that I can lose three pounds a week lounging in a chair eating french fries, thanks to a weight reduction light bulb that also makes me tan.

I am hypnotized by the words, "MELT AWAY INCHES," "THE MORE YOU EAT THE MORE YOU LOSE" and "LOSE UP TO SIX POUNDS BEFORE WE CASH YOUR CHECK."

Dieters are like that. They cannot handle the truth. They live on promises and fantasies and actually believe that in days they'll be walking around the house wearing five-inch heels with a bathing suit and have hair halfway down their backs just by putting a checkmark next to a little box that says, "Yes! I want to free myself from fat bondage forever!"

If you've ever wondered who reads those full-page testimonials with the before-and-after pictures and a headline that reads, "I WAS TOO FAT TO LOVE..." I do.

Somehow, no matter how disgusted I am with myself, I am never as bad as Tanya who wore coveralls at her wedding and surprised her husband one weekend by losing 325 pounds.

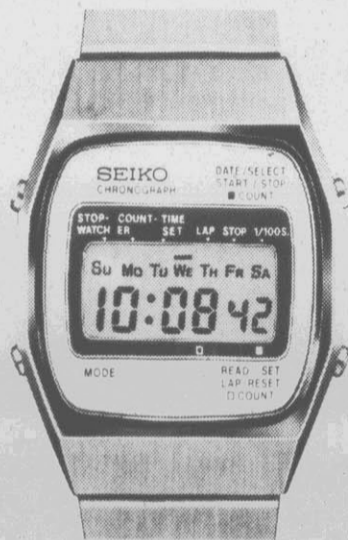

Last week, I saw a provocative ad in which a man built like Arnold Schwarzenegger was crashing through the surf carrying a nymph in a bikini who weighed about 36 pounds. (I've roasted larger chickens than that.) The headline challenged, "When was the last time your husband carried you anywhere?"

As I wrote out a check my husband said, "Surely you're not going to fall for that picture of the girl in the surf?"

"I can't lose," I said. "If I'm not completely satisfied in 30 days, I can return an unused husband and get a new one."

WHEAT NUT LOAF

This "loved but lost" recipe is repeated on request.

- 1 cup fork-stirred unbleached all-purpose flour
- 1 cup fork-stirred whole-wheat (graham) flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
- 3/4 cup wheatgerm
- 2 large eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1-3rd cup butter, melted
- 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Stir together flours, baking powder, salt and spices; stir in sugar and wheatgerm. Beat together eggs and milk until blended; add flour mixture, butter and nuts; stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into a buttered 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean - 50 to 55 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; turn right side up; cool completely.

Can Ali Do It Again?

Can Muhammad Ali, at 38, win the world heavyweight boxing title for a record fourth time tonight against 31-year-old World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes? Many people don't think so. Ali admits the fight is a risk. He says that because of his age, his speed, reflexes and stamina are not what they once were. He has also said that to end his career with a defeat after all his spectacular triumphs would haunt him for the rest of his life. But Ali, the only fighter to win the heavyweight title three times, does not expect to lose. Of course, neither does Larry Holmes.

DO YOU KNOW — Whom did Ali defeat to win the heavyweight title the first time?

Upward Spiral Seen In Home Mortgage Rates

A renewed upward spiral in interest rates apparently is frightening off prospective home buyers, who had only recently returned to the marketplace as North Carolina lending institutions tried to make the idea of owning a home more attractive.

But now interest rates, down to about 12 percent in mid-summer, have climbed to more than 14 percent in some areas of North Carolina.

The climb in the interest rate has been marked by a steady drop in requests for home mortgages.

"They're seeing declining loan applications daily," said Thad Woodard, president of the 206-member North Carolina Savings and Loan League, in describing current activity by the group's membership.

Rates last spring reached 17 percent. When they dropped during the summer, some economists optimistically predicted that housing might yet recover from one of its worst years in history. State sources said Wednesday, however, that the recovery is not at hand.

Loan applications in September at Cameron-Brown Co., a Charlotte-based mortgage banking firm, fell

Extra Hours

Extended registration hours will be observed by the Pitt Board of Elections today, Friday and Saturday for the convenience of citizens who have not registered for the November general elections.

Margaret Register, supervisor of the elections board, said that her office will remain open until 7 p.m. today and Friday, and operate Saturday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Miss Register reminded area residents that Monday, Oct. 6 at 5 p.m. is the last day in order to register for the November balloting.

49 percent from the levels of June and July, according to Karl J. Mendenhall, a senior vice president for marketing.

F. Guy Walker, president of the Raleigh Federal Savings and Loan Association, said a rate of 13 percent is considered to be a threshold for the housing industry. Rates above that level tend to cause buyers to have more than second thoughts, he said.

"We're going back to where only 5 percent of the people are able to afford a home again," said Mark E. Tipton, president of the North Carolina Homebuilders Association and vice president of a Greenville building company.

Nelson H. Callahan, owner of Creative Homes of Goldsboro Inc., said he had a cushion of new home contracts that was keeping his company busy. But Callahan said he expected rising interest rates to erode that cushion within 30 days to 45 days.

Tipton said the multi-family housing market has been stimulated by the changing trend, as would-be homebuyers have opted instead for apartments.

"The people who have been priced out of the market have to have some where to live," Tipton said.

Defense Rests In Gun Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The defense has rested its case in the trial of a Wilson gun shop owner and two New York men accused of operating an alleged conspiracy to smuggle weapons to the Irish Republican Army.

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree indicated he would consider dismissing the charges against one of the defendants, Robert Ferraro of New York.

Dupree said he would rule on Ferraro's status today.

The government contends that gun shop owner Howard Bruton Jr. directed his employees to sell 80 to 100 guns illegally to Ferraro and George DeMeo. Both DeMeo and Ferraro were accused of smuggling the weapons to London and Dublin for use by the IRA.

Bruton testified Wednesday that he had nothing to do with the alleged conspiracy, contending he knew nothing of the alleged gun sales and would not know how to price the weapons.

The defense has tried to show that former employees Ben Moss and John Bulla and ex-partner Binford Benton, who testified against Bruton last week, were responsible for any illegal sales traced back to Bruton's B and B Gun Shop.

Bruton said his main occupation was supervising the Wilson tobacco market and that he rarely checked the gun shop records. He said he let Benton run the business from 1972 to 1976, part of the time during which the government says the guns were sold.

In 1976, Bruton said, Benton quit the shop when Bruton discovered low inventory and high debts and threatened to charge Benton with embezzlement. Moss, whom Benton had hired, became the new manager, Bruton said.

Bruton said he was interested only in antique guns but that on occasion he had noticed modern weapons in the shop.

October 3 has been declared American Enterprise Day, a day set aside to explore America's free market system and the changes facing business and industry today.

Members of the D.H. Conley Future Business Leaders of America, chapter no. 4520, represent a nationwide organization supporting American Enterprise Day and its theme, "In Touch With The Business of America." Local chapter activities and projects will supplement the classroom support of this day.

Many Pitt County Schools will be emphasizing the free enterprise system throughout the month of October. Michael Broome, speaker on the free enterprise system will speak at the four county high schools October 21-22, sponsored by various high school vocational organizations.

Doing Something Right

We don't want to risk getting into the middle of the current gubernatorial campaign, but we would like to add our congratulations to the governor's to Pitt County students who showed up well on the 1980 testing of basic educational skills.

Gov. Hunt said, "The results show that the students tested above the grade level of the average student in the nation in almost every skill tested."

Hunt commended teachers, parents and students for the achievement.

Pitt and Greenville students were at or above the national average in reading and math. Second graders were several months ahead in reading and math, third grade pupils were almost a year ahead in spelling and several months ahead in language arts and at or above average in reading and math. Sixth graders were highest in spelling and ninth graders had their highest scores in language arts.

There is a lot of concern about quality of education these days, but the dramatic improvement in Pitt County seems to tell us the schools are doing something right. We would expect there would be non-partisan approval of that.

Erwin Should Serve Aply

After being held up for some time by Sen. Jesse Helms, the U. S. Senate has confirmed the nomination of Richard C. Erwin as a U. S. district judge.

Erwin will be the first black to served as a federal judge in North Carolina since reconstruction days. That is an important milestone in the progress of blacks in our state. At the same time it should not be important in consideration of Erwin's ability to serve.

The Erwin appointment has received more than the usual circumspection. We are confident he will serve ably on the bench.

THIS AFTERNOON

Disciplinary Action

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Battle lines are drawn between North Carolina nurses and physicians regarding a proposed change in state law which would likely cause more doctors to face disciplinary action.

The proposal would require that hospitals, nursing homes, and other health care facilities report to the State Board of Medical Examiners all disciplinary actions taken against physicians.

That would include practice limitations, suspensions, or terminations of hospital privileges and employment, along with the circumstances surrounding any voluntary resignation of hospital privileges by physicians.

In addition, the state medical society, and the various branches of that group, individual physicians, and local clerks of court who process medical malpractice suits would all be required to inform the licensing board of any circumstances relating to a physician's competence, professional conduct, or ability to practice medicine safely.

Immunity
Immunity from liability is proposed for those who, in good faith, report to the state board on a physician's competence or fitness.

This proposal is one of several contained in recommendations now under study by the Governmental Evaluation Commission, commonly referred to as the Sunset Commission. The report of the staff suggests little substantive change otherwise in the operation of the North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners, the agency which licenses and regulates physicians, except to add three public members to the examining board and enlarge the staff of investigators.

Physicians are up in arms over the proposals, and turned out some 35 strong at a recent public hearing in Raleigh. Dr. Frank Sohmer of Winston-Salem, president of the N.C. Medical Society, led the attack. He suggested that immunity from civil or criminal liability for persons members to the board of examiners. She also proposed that mandatory continuing education for all health care providers, including physicians, should be established.

After Fact
Mandatory reporting would apply to hospitals only after the local administration or trustees had taken action of their own.

Hospitals, by law, can be held liable for the negligence of non-salaried physicians who treat physicians in the hospital. "Often it is the nurse who recognizes physician negligence and who must bring the problem to the attention of appropriate hospital personnel...the nurse and hospital may be reporting information to the examining board would "probably serve the purpose...without the adverse affects we fear from the present (reporting) recommendation."

Required reporting would "lessen the confidence between physicians. It would have a tendency to run troubled physicians underground, so to speak, and to prevent them from seeking needed assistance from their colleagues within the profession for their personal problems resulting from abuses of alcohol or drug consumption," Sohmers argued.

A dozen or so nurses also were present, and Ernestine Small of Greensboro spoke for the North Carolina Nurses Association endorsing the reporting provision and addition of public

Other Editors Say Crime Is A Crime

(Washington Daily News)

We are distressed by the notion some people hold that white collar crime is somehow less despicable than blue collar crime. This thought is brought to mind in light of the recent flim-flam operation in Washington in which one 79-year-old widow had $3,000 stolen from her by a pair of slick-talking con men.

This was a tragic crime, for the money stolen amounted to a life savings for the victim. Yet some misguided individuals believe that this crime is not as serious as, say, a breaking-and-entering robbery. That's sad. Because in many ways the flim-flam operation is worse.

A crime is a crime, and a robbery is a robbery, whether the weapon used is a handgun, a crowbar or a smooth-talking tongue. And in the recent case in Washington was a serious offense, because the criminals involved exploited the frailties and innocent trust of old age. In the end, a life's work, represented by a few dollars saved here and there, was gone.

The prospects for arresting and convicting the flim-flam operators are slim. And, as the old saying goes, the prospect for recovering the money is none. The money that took a lifetime to save was probably spent in a matter of days.

We just simply cannot afford to have a double standard for the same crime, depending on whether the perpetrator stashes the stolen money in a briefcase or a burlap bag. We must treat con artists as criminals. Citizens must be willing to prosecute and testify in white collar cases, and judges must be willing to hand down severe punishments.

Methods of operation differ, but the crime is the same; a violation of one of our great commandments. No one person is any more above the law than any other person. That is one of the guarantees of the great country in which we live.

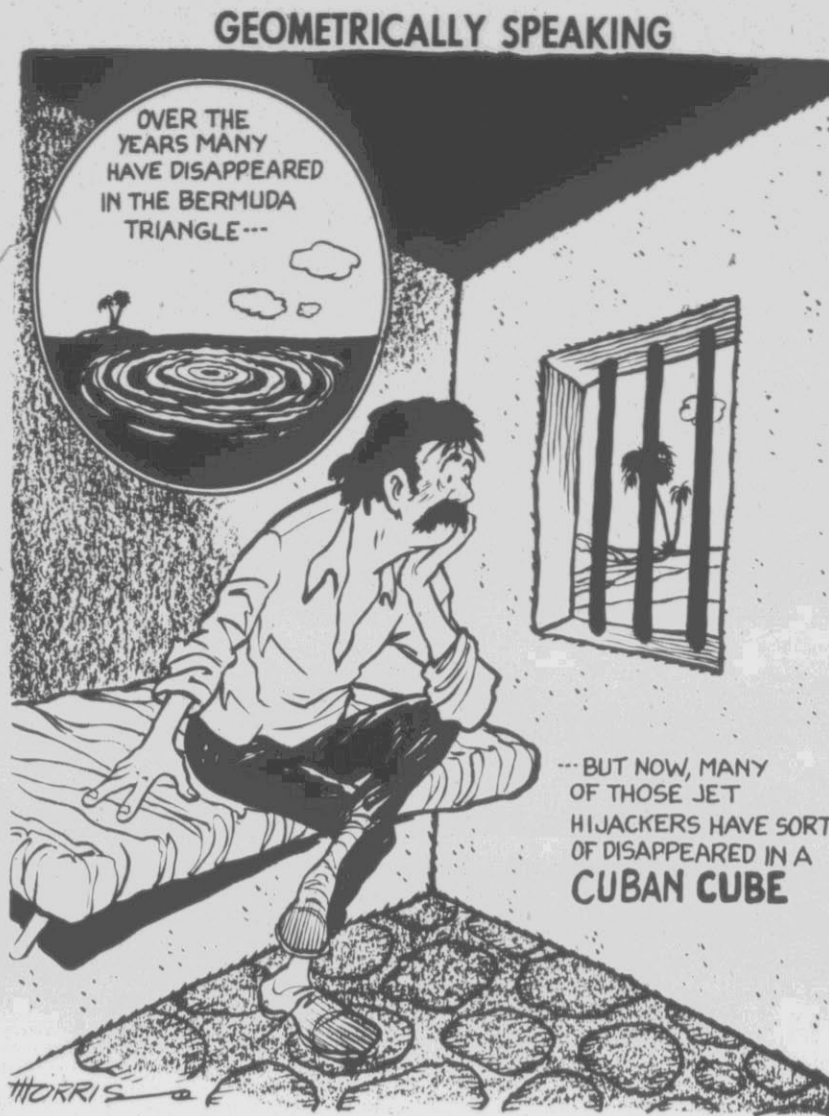

Even here, we have been guilty of promoting euphemisms — using words like "con" and "flim-flam" — that tend to cloud the severity of the act. So let's set the record straight.

What we have been discussing is a very tragic violation of human decency, criminal action in every sense of the word...and the color of the collar has nothing to do with it.

TWO JOBS
The bees on a summer day go from one blossom to another seeking honey. They are unaware that they are performing a great service to the whole growing world, for they are carrying pollen from one blossom to another and making possible cross-pollination, without which fruit would be impossible.

This is a picture and a parable of the importance of unconscious service. Intent on getting honey, the bee also becomes an important factor

By HUGH MULLIGAN

The Lincoln Tradition

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — According to the poet Vachel Lindsay, who was born here, "it is portentous and a thing of state" that Abraham Lincoln walks at midnight in this town.

With his ghost brooding about, the Illinois state capital always has been a tough town for any presidential candidate to play, as Jimmy Carter found out a few days ago. The oratorical tradition in Springfield is just too strong to fight or join.

Abraham Lincoln gave his classic "A House Divided" speech in the old state house, where his body later lay in state. Here he challenged Stephen Douglas to the seven debates that made him a national figure, composed his first inaugural address in his third floor law office and, down at the Great Western depot, bade farewell to friends and neighbors before heading off to Washington.

In Springfield, Douglas — "The Little Giant" — gave his impassioned "Protect the Flag" speech, and here Gov. Adlai Stevenson sharpened his superb rhetorical skills.

As if to nail down the title of Eloquence City, U.S.A., the leonine figure of Everett McKinley Dirksen stands on the lawn of the new state capitol, hand raised dramatically, granite cowslack forever unfurled in the breeze.

Faced with such historic competition, Carter sensibly avoided the hallowed downtown area with all its Lincoln memorabilia and instead directed his campaign energies to Lincoln Land Community College, a tiny five-building campus that has made a name for itself in wind and solar energy.

Jimmy's choice of a podium irked Illinois Gov. Jim Thompson, who lit out for Chicago in a snit, which is an energy-saving huff. Out at the airport, John Anderson supporters did their best to shrink the president in the shadow of Lincoln with placards drawing attention to the debating prowess of "another moderate Republican."

The Springfield Municipal Band, however, attempted to invest the proceedings in a Lincolnian aura by tooting away at "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Onward Christian Soldiers" as the presidential motorcade passed the last stand of cornfields that marked the start of the campus.

To demonstrate his cleavage with Ronald Reagan on basic issues, Carter attempted a sort of house divided speech, too. Unfortunately, his subject was energy and gasohol, not slavery. So passions, even in a Farm Belt audience where bib overalls outnumbered designer jeans, were not easily stirred when he lambasted the Republicans for wanting to "turn loose the oil companies" and "pledging to abolish the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit." Important matters, no doubt, but hardly lines to be chiseled in stone.

Lincoln gave his "House Divided" speech in the second-floor Representatives Hall of the now restored old state capitol, amid the quill pens, oil lamps and ceramic spittoons and with the portrait of George Washington looking down.

Carter spoke in the starkly modern cafeteria of Menard Hall and seemed to face a house divided. Some of the students were miffed because they were only allowed 200 tickets to hear the president, but when only a sparse crowd turned up, Carter backers roamed the campus recruiting an audience.

Others were put out because the cafeteria was closed for the presidential

Bars Missing Spy Inquiry

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Sen. Birch Bayh, chairman of the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, under White House pressure has turned thumbs down on a Republican request for an immediate, all-out probe of the mysterious disappearance of a trusted U.S. agent in Moscow in the late 1970s.

The affair is shrouded in deepest secrecy. But newspaper accounts have mentioned the No. 2 staffer for President Carter's National Security Council, David Aaron. According to the published reports, unnamed Republicans have accused Aaron of inadvertently leaking the existence of the spy, a Soviet citizen, to an Eastern European diplomat.

Aaron and NSC spokesmen flatly deny all such allegations. Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, a Republican member of the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, wants a complete investigation. But Chairman Bayh is trying to stall it at least until after the election. In a private letter to Wallop, he turned down the request, but agreed to a closed-door discussion by the committee.

'Grantsmanship'
An overt example of the administration's mobilization of the bureaucracy behind the president's re-election campaign is an Energy Department memorandum Sept. 11 ordering deputy assistant secretaries for conservation and solar energy to expedite federal grants to the very states that will decide the presidential election.

The memorandum was signed by Frank DeGeorge, principal assistant secretary for conservation and solar energy. He noted that Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and other top officials "are interested in incorporating" news of federal grants "in their travel schedules.... It is expected that these gentlemen may be traveling to California, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas between now and the end of December, 1980."

Those just happen to be the "big nine" states (plus Connecticut) that will determine Carter's fate. DeGeorge made clear there is no time to waste. He asked for a list of grants no later than Sept. 19.

Courting Israel
President Carter is sending a pre-election, high-level military team to Israel to discuss military security in the upheavals now buffeting the Middle East. The visit is timed just before the Nov. 4 election in hopes of softening Prime Minister Menahem Begin's bitterness against Carter for not vetoing anti-Israeli resolutions in the United Nations.

The top-level team includes Under Secretary of Defense Robert Komer and Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. They will talk Mideast military strategy, but under instructions not to make any joint deals with Israel's powerful, U.S.-armed defense forces.

An earlier Israeli hope that the U.S. and Israel could hold regular meetings on joint military planning was scotched by the administration under pressure from other U.S. allies in the Mideast, including Saudi Arabia. The Komer-Jones mission will try to soften Begin's reaction to that administration decision.

Simon At Pentagon
William Simon, the hard-charging treasury secretary under Presidents Nixon and Ford, is boning up on military subjects as part of his undisguised hope to become Ronald Reagan's secretary of defense.

As an early and enthusiastic Reagan booster, Simon can lay claim to a Cabinet post if Reagan wins. But Reagan's national security advisers wince at the thought of Simon taking over the Pentagon. They predict he would quickly fall in love with the military — then later fall out of love in a messy breakup.

A footnote: Democratic Sen. Henry M. Jackson would please Reagan's advisers as defense secretary, and might accept that post though he would much prefer being secretary of state. Another Pentagon possibility well thought of in the Reagan camp is John B. Connally.

Reagan-Koch Talk
Ronald Reagan is arranging a tete-a-tete with New York's feisty Mayor Edward Koch within the next several weeks during one of Reagan's trips to the Big Apple.

More For A Factory Worker

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Back in 1960 the high-ranking, white-collar manager in the executive suite earned about seven times the buying power of the blue collar production worker out in the factory.

Since then the factory worker has improved his relative position. By this year the ratio had fallen to about 5.6, accompanied by concerned discussion among executives of the "compression factor."

That suffocating feeling is also being felt among factory foremen. Twenty years ago they earned 2.03 times the buying power of those who worked under them in the factory. This year the ratio is down to 1.61.

The figures, based on a survey by Hay Associates, a consulting firm, and published by the Wharton Magazine, are used by many companies to establish their own pay practices. For the foremen, the erosion has been steady, falling to 1.89 in 1965, to 1.82 in 1970, to 1.75 in 1975, and finally to 1.61 in this year.

While the ratio decline for top executives comes to about the same percentage over the 20-year span, they seem to have made some effort to decompress, to fight the erosion of their relative buying power.

From the 7.21 of 1960, the ratio fell to 6.48 in 1965, rose to 6.56 in 1970, fell steeply to 5.34 in 1975, the final year of an unexpectedly severe recession, and then rose again this year to 5.61.

The changes in the buying power figures aren't necessarily the result of different attitudes toward compensation, but reflect also the attrition in buying power resulting from inflation and taxation.

Nevertheless, the study shows that over the past two decades blue collar workers have obtained base salary increases about 10 percent higher than those won by members of major management.

That wasn't the factor that eroded the relative value of management buying power, however. In fact, management made it up in bonuses during good years. The damage was done by inflation and taxes, with the latter theoretically eroding a greater percentage of the largest paychecks.

In projecting the figures, C. Ian Sym-Smith and J. Alan Riordan, the authors, feel that if inflation isn't kept to 7.5 percent or less there could be a further loss of buying power for jobs at all levels by 1985.

Overall, they offer little hope that top executives as a group can substantially raise their earning power. Speaking of top executives, they say:

"Given inflation and taxation, nobody has achieved a significantly better standard of living from his or her job in the 1970s.

"Because they earned good bonuses as a result of good profit increases in the last two years, senior executives have done better than others..."

Why? "Largely because they are already at the maximum tax rate, and cash increases do not push them into a higher tax bracket."

What seems to have been outside the scope of the study, but which could have a significant affect on buying power, is a device favorable to those with large discretionary funds. Tax shelters, that is.

But even that appears not to offset the evidence of the numbers — that compensation differences (based on buying power) have narrowed between executives and factory workers, and foremen and factory workers.

implicated in physician malpractice when the nurse carries out erroneous physician orders," Ms. Small pointed out.

The staff report noted that 25 states now have mandatory reporting laws, and examining board action in those states is considerably higher than in North Carolina. Virginia, for example, had 300 complaints and took 42 disciplinary actions in one year. North Carolina, in the last five years, had 51 complaints, held 23 disciplinary hearings and took 31 disciplinary steps — including voluntary surrender of licenses which are not identified as such and may occur in cases where discipline is not at issue.

Law enforcement agencies reported 20 percent of the cases to the board, those having to do with drug law violations.

toward President Carter publicly surfaced before the Madison Square Garden Democratic National Convention last month, is described by intimates as receptive to Reagan's overtures. That doesn't mean, however, that Koch is considering backing Reagan over Carter on Nov. 4.

Reagan's hope is to impress Koch with his programs to help New York and other major cities solve their mounting problems. He is due in Manhattan next week, and again on Oct. 16-17 to attend the Al Smith Dinner and confer with Cardinal Terrence Cooke.

A footnote: Carter's uphill fight for New York's Jewish voters will be masterminded by a harsh critic — liberal operative Ethan Geto, State Attorney General Robert Abrams' political aide who helped launch the successful Draft Kennedy Movement. the college because not enough farmers turned out.

Still and all, the campus crowds gave the President an enthusiastic reception — perhaps not to extent of chartering 11-car trains as when Lincoln debated Douglas — but surging forward amiably to shake his hand.

"I pressed the presidential flesh — gave him the full finger five," exulted one satisfied citizen in a straw harvest hat before climbing into his pickup truck with the Reagan bumper sticker and disappearing across the prairie at better than 55 miles per.

And media greats from all the major networks were on hand to film if not actually televise all 25 minutes of the presidential address. This might not have been the case had John Deere perfected the cathode ray tube instead of the steel plow in his factory at Moline when Lincoln tangled with Douglas. No TV producer would have touched the Rail Splitter Vs. Little Giant series with a 10-foot pole.

Rhetoric was the national pastime then. The format for the Lincoln-Douglas debates called for an hour and a half speech by each debater. In prime time too, although there was no competition from "Shogun" or the Miss America contest a century and a half ago.

Carter, if he read the historical markers hereabouts, at least left Springfield with the consolation of knowing that Abe Lincoln, for all his courage in throwing out the debate challenge, lost the U.S. Senate election to Douglas.

But next time around, he won the presidency, even if he did rack up only 40 percent of the popular vote.

Honest Abe was never one to walk away from an oratorical tussle. In fact, he once jumped out of the State House window (second floor) to keep one going and avoid a vote on adjournment. A tough act to follow in this town.

Uncovered Spies Among Refugees

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — FBI director William Webster says his agency has uncovered intelligence agents among Cubans who came here as part of the "Freedom Flotilla," but there is no evidence of a conspiracy in the recent rash of sky-jackings by some refugees.

Declining to be specific, Webster said Tuesday "we have identified a small but significant number of those who had clearly been given intelligence assignments in this country."

GORIZIA, Italy (AP) — A 26-year-old Czechoslovakian engineer climbed over a fence Tuesday on the lightly guarded Italian-Yugoslavian border and asked for political asylum in Italy, local authorities report.

Jenrette's Co-Defendant To Take Stand In Bribe Defense

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Rep. John W. Jenrette's co-defendant has decided not to take the stand in their Abscam bribery trial, even though John R. Stowe's lawyer says the businessman was ready to testify he took a bribe for Jenrette.

Stowe would have told the jury that he picked up a $50,000 bribe from an FBI undercover agent and gave $40,000 to Jenrette, Stowe's lawyer told reporters Wednesday. Jenrette, D-S.C., has denied taking any bribe money.

The trial resumes today in U.S. District Court with government rebuttal witnesses on the stand.

Jenrette is charged with bribery and conspiracy while Stowe is accused of conspiracy and of aiding and abetting the bribery. Each man could face a maximum 35 years in prison and thousands of dollars in fines.

Stowe's attorney, Murray Janus, indicated to reporters Wednesday morning that Stowe would take the stand. But as the afternoon session of the trial began, Janus rested his case. He did not tell reporters why he changed his mind.

Janus has told the jury that the FBI induced Stowe to pick up the $50,000 in bribe money for Jenrette, a transaction captured last Dec. 6 on FBI videotape. Janus is trying to use the defense of entrapment, which occurs when the government persuades someone to commit an offense he never intended to commit.

Because of the conflict in the defense of the two defendants, Janus has been trying to have U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn separate Stowe's case from Jenrette's. Penn has consistently denied the request.

Wednesday, Jenrette's attorney, Kenneth M. Robinson, himself moved for a severance of the two cases, but Penn denied that motion, too.

A federal grand jury has charged that Stowe picked up the bribe money for Jenrette from an FBI undercover agent. The agent offered the cash in return for Jenrette's promise to introduce special immigration legislation for two wealthy Arabs the FBI man said he represented. The legislation never was introduced for the Arabs, who were really creations of the FBI.

Janus said Stowe would have admitted what he already had said on an FBI tape played for the jury earlier in the trial. Stowe told FBI informant Melvin Weinberg that he had received $10,000 of the bribe money and gave Jenrette the rest.

Jenrette has testified that he got only $10,000 of the money, which he says he received as a loan from Stowe.

Anti-Semitism Stirring France

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Splashed across Paris newspapers these days are headlines that carry a painful reminder to many Frenchmen of growing anti-Semitism accompanying a revival of fascism.

"Anti-Jewish Attacks" proclaims one in the mass circulation France-Soir. "Neo-Nazis Rounded Up" says the Socialist newspaper Le Matin. "Massive Demonstration Against Fascism" banners the Communist daily L'Humanite.

Anti-Semitism became a topic for headlines before dawn last Friday when unidentified gunmen sped around Paris, firing automatic weapon fire at Jewish targets, including a day care center, a school for older children, a synagogue and a memorial to the 125,000 Jews deported from France to the Nazi death camps. A second synagogue was hit by gunfire Sunday.

No one was hurt, and there have been no arrests. The police said Wednesday night they have questioned dozens of right-wing extremists and believe the attacks may be the work of isolated extremists attached to no group.

In a recent rash of other anti-Semitic incidents, Jewish graves have been defaced, and swastikas and fires have been set at kosher restaurants, Jewish-owned stores and the homes of prominent Jews. In several cases, Nazi armbands were left at the scene.

Alarmed by the incidents, Jewish organizations in Paris sponsored a rally Tuesday night around the memorial that was strafed with gunfire. An estimated 8,000 persons showed up to protest the attacks and demand a government crackdown on fascist groups. Some of the demonstrators carried signs reading "End the Nostalgia for Nazi Terror."

"It was with such attacks against the Jewish community that the Nazis started in Germany," the chief rabbi of France, Jacob Kaplan, said.

Politicians from President Valery Giscard d'Estaing down denounced the attacks. On Wednesday night the Parliamentary Assembly of the 21-nation Council of Europe in Strasbourg adopted a resolution urging its member governments to take measures to fight neo-Nazi propaganda.

The French police banned an auction of Nazi paraphernalia that had been scheduled for today. Last month, the government ordered the disbanding of a six-year-old paramilitary neo-Nazi group that had an estimated 260 members in France. Organizations representing the 600,000 French Jews are quick to point out they believe the attacks come from a tiny minority of France's 53 million people.

"But we don't want these groups to develop," said Sabina Roltman of the Representative Council of Jewish Institutions in France. "We don't want indifference to the problem. We are sensitive to the past."

During World War II, France's pro-Nazi Vichy government passed racial laws as stringent as Hitler's. Most of the 125,000 Jewish men, women and children deported to concentration camps by the war-time French regime never returned.

French police surprised even the Gestapo with their gusto for arresting Jews. As Marcel Ophuls pointed out in his epic documentary "The Sorrow and the Pity," French police in July 1942 rounded up 4,051 Parisian Jewish children the Germans had not asked for.

Ophuls' film was commissioned for the French state television in the late 1960s but was never broadcast because of its harsh view of French collaboration with the Nazis.

The issue of French cooperation with the Nazis surfaced again two years ago when an unrepentant French collaborator claimed in an interview that "only lice were gassed at Auschwitz," the Nazi concentration camp.

The speaker was Louis Darquier de Pellepoix, the Vichy government's commissioner for Jewish affairs, who was interviewed by the magazine L'Express.

Darquier, an exile in Spain, denied the Nazis exterminated 6 million Jews.

"This figure is an invention of the Jews," he said. "The Jews are like that. They're ready to do anything for publicity."

The most notorious single case of French anti-Semitism came at the turn of the century when an obscure Jewish army captain named Alfred Dreyfus was falsely accused of passing military secrets to the Germans and

Councilmen Eye New Ordinance

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — City councilmen in Vero Beach plan to rewrite a sign ordinance that forced a church to take down a cross. Meanwhile, officials have ordered that the law not be enforced.

The city ordered last year that a cross be removed from the First Christian Church. The ordinance put crosses in the same class with the golden arches of McDonald's restaurants because they "advertise what is going on inside."

HUMAN RIGHTS

HONG KONG (AP) — Prosecutors in China handled more than 10,000 human rights cases during the 18 months ending in June, Peking's official Xinhua news agency said today.

Dragon Begins Political Bid

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP)

— The grand dragon of the North Carolina Ku Klux Klan celebrated his release from jail by marching with supporters in a one-block parade to kick off his 1984 gubernatorial campaign.

Virgil Griffin was released from the Lincoln County Jail on Wednesday after serving six months on a conviction for aiding a cross burning near Lincolnton in February.

Griffin, 36 was joined by 15 supporters in the march, which was peaceful. He said he was launching his campaign four years early to get a good head start was condemned to solitary confinement at Devil's Island.

Dreyfus spent 13 years in prison before he was vindicated after a bitter national debate that sparked a wave of anti-Semitism. Appalled by the wave of French anti-Semitism, a Hungarian-born Jewish journalist, Theodor Herzl, drafted the doctrine of Zionism, the return of Jews to their homeland, and launched the movement that resulted in the creation of the Jewish state of Israel.

Borrowing Money In Japan Sometimes A Disaster

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — One thing stood between Yasuaki Tanoue and his dreams of a better life — $13,000 — so he borrowed the money. He didn't know what he was getting into.

Unable to get a bank loan because of a poor credit rating, Tanoue approached a neighborhood loan company that was only too willing to provide funds for him to put his children through school and buy a few luxuries.

By year's end, Tanoue's dreams had turned to nightmares: interest payments had soared to several hundred percent annually and his earnings from his construction job, equivalent to $200 a week, left him far behind in payments.

Then, in what is known in Japan's loan sharking business as "giving the run around," the company forced Tanoue to take out four more loans to cover his original debt. Finally, after months of being hounded for payment, the family disappeared without a trace — owing $27,000, more than twice the original amount borrowed.

Two months later, police found the remains of Tanoue, 35, and his wife Haruko, 29, hanging from a tree in a remote forest. The couple's son, Yoshiyuki, 6, and daughter, Miho, 5, were found nearby, dead from an overdose of sleeping pills.

The only money found with the family was a one yen coin — less than half a cent.

Last year, police say, 180 people killed themselves in Japan because they owed money to a "sarakin," a breed of money lenders who are legal but who can be as intimidating in retrieving money as they are gracious in handing it out.

An additional 2,203 persons disappeared, police say, all apparent victims of a tight credit squeeze by Japan's loan sharks who operate without fear of the law.

"That's because there are few restrictions on setting up a money lending business," explained a finance ministry official. "All one has to do to set up shop is to first notify the prefectural (state) governor. That's all there is to do."

The loan business in Japan didn't really get going until the early 1960s, when the country was experiencing an economic boom and people's expectations rose with new-found affluence, officials say.

Since then, the sarakin — short for "salaryman loan" because they generally lend money to salaried workers — have continued to prey on low-income people with poor credit ratings who are pinched for money.

There are now 184,202 money lenders registered in Japan, up from just 89,742 just 10 years ago. But their true numbers are impossible to verify because of almost non-existent government licensing regulations.

Sarakin offices abound in the neon-lit streets and byways of Japanese cities. Garishly-painted signs offer "cheap, convenient, safe loans — quickly!" But there's always the catch — cash for a price.

The lending agencies often ask few or no questions, and demand exorbitant interest rates that have been known to rise as much as 520 percent a year.

Japan's money lenders can legally charge a dizzying 109.5 percent interest. Most small neighborhood loan companies keep within the legal ceiling, but even larger, more reputable companies charge rates of around 72 percent, enough to put an indiscreet borrower on the road to ruin.

In November 1978, the last year for which figures are available, police arrested 814 loan sharks for usury, extortion and violence, 688 of whom were charged with demanding illegal rates on loans.

There have also been well-publicized cases of loan companies forcing housewives into prostitution to pay back debts.

"They will literally force some women to work for a toruko (Turkish bath) until they have sufficient funds to cancel out their debts — and that can take years," says Shunsuke Funase, of the Consumers Union of Japan.

"We've had a lot of complaints, but there's not much we can do about it," Funase said, explaining that many have links with the Yakuza, Japan's gangster underworld.

Methods used by some less reputable loan companies make headlines almost daily. "It usually starts with a midnight call at home," Funase said. "Then, over the next few weeks they will harass the person at work until he is thoroughly humiliated. Literally they devour their debtors."

Loan companies have also found a bonanza in student loans. A student's identification card usually is all that is required to borrow thousands of dollars to pay off gambling debts, and the loan companies know most fathers will bail their children out if they get into trouble. In one case, officials say, a parent paid $460,000 to square a son's debts.

The situation has become so intolerable that the finance ministry is actively encouraging American and European finance companies to set up credit businesses here in hopes of discrediting the sharks.

Lawrence Roessel, president of Citicorp Credit, a major U.S. investment house, claims his company is stripping interest rates to the bone by charging 18 percent interest on loans below $4,500 and 15 percent on sums

"We're interested in developing a long-term relationship with our customers," Roessel said in an interview. "We're looking at the guy who is contemplating buying his first car."

"If we treat him right, he'll come back to us when he wants to get married and again when he starts thinking about his children's education."

Still, the conditions for obtaining credit at Citicorp's Tokyo branch — an employed person, over 26 and earning at least $14,000 — means many people less well off still are forced to turn to the ubiquitous sarakin for money.

2 Ostriches For Gifting

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Any shopper who'd rather keep his head in the sand than think about what to get a favorite couple this Christmas season might thumb through the famed Neiman-Marcus gift catalog.

It features matched pairs of ostriches from the Oklahoma City Zoo as its "his and hers" gift this year, officials said.

Officials from the Dallas-based department store picked up two ostriches in Oklahoma City on Monday.

The ostriches — priced at $1,500 each — have been raised through a cooperative program between the Oklahoma City Zoo and monks from the Monastery for the Protection of the Blessed Virgin Mary in suburban Forest Park.

"They're not really good as pets," said Oklahoma City Zoo Director Lawrence Curtis. "But they're suitable for ranches. A person with proper facilities could raise one for a couple of months, then donate it to a zoo or a safari park."

Any ostriches ordered from the catalog will be delivered sometime in the spring, Curtis said. "They'll be at least three months old," he said.

"Over the last 10 years, we've perfected our ostrich-rearing program to a very high point where we can raise 50 to 70 a year. If we can sell 50, that would be a nice hunk of money for the Oklahoma City Zoo."

The zoo gets $1,000 per pair.

Says Shots Due Demonstrators

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The first shots fired during a bloody confrontation last fall between a Nazi-Klan entourage and participants in a communist-sponsored rally in Greensboro came from the demonstrators, defendant Jack Wilson Fowler testified Wednesday.

Fowler, completing two days of testimony, said he armed himself after seeing a Communist Workers Party member point a gun at him.

Fowler, 27, one of two Nazis and four Ku Klux Klansmen on trial for murder, denied under examination Wednesday that he had ever said he had gotten his share of the communists at the Nov. 3 demonstration.

Another defendant, Nazi Roland Wayne Wood, testified Tuesday he heard Fowler say, "I got my share" or something like that after the shootout between the two groups.

Five demonstrators were killed in the brief outbreak of gunfire. The Nazis and Klansmen on trial are charged with five counts each of murder and one count of felonious rioting.

Testimony was to continue today, but the court has scheduled a recess for Friday.

Fowler repeated testimony Wednesday that, after the confrontation, he first went to Winston-Salem and then hitchhiked to Elkin, where he spent the night, before proceeding the next day to the Chicago area. Fowler eventually surrendered in Chicago.

Fowler said he left Elkin because a friend told him the FBI and police were hunting him and "they weren't going to take any chances with me. They were going to shoot and ask questions later."

"Isn't it a fact that you left the area because you wanted help from the National Socialist Party?" prosecutor Jim Coman asked.

"No sir," Fowler responded.

"Isn't it a fact the only reason you turned yourself in was because you could get no help there?" Coman said.

"I turned myself in because I had calmed down and thought it was the right thing to do," said Fowler.

Farmville Mart Prices Off

FARMVILLE — Prices on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday were off sharply, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Sun-baked tobacco now being marketed in large volume has had an adverse effect on daily averages, he said. Good clean quality tobacco continues in strong demand, selling for $1.75 to $1.80 a pound. However, volume of this type was off yesterday. Stabilization receipts accounted for 4.23 percent of gross sales. The market sold 361,387 pounds for $551,079.99 for an average of $152.49. To date the market has sold 22,774,883 pounds for an average of $150.13 per hundred pounds.

areas in April," he added. "We are installing an average of about 150 new services each month," said Charles Horne of Greenville Utilities. "The expansion we saw last year has not let up a bit. I feel the transfer to CP&L in May will increase this even more," he commented. "Yesterday we finalized the plans on a new 12 million gallon per day water treatment plant to be completed in 1982. This, I feel will carry us into the 21st century, meeting our current, immediate and long-range needs."

The medical situation in the county, according to Jack Richardson, director of Pitt Memorial Hospital, is one of growth and development. "The hospital is operating at over 90 percent capacity. Our admission and emergency room use has increased dramatically this year," explained the director. Richardson reported there were now 310 practicing physicians in the county now, as compared to 260 last year.

ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer reported the university's enrollment is currently 13,200, up 500 from last year. "We now employ 2,000 persons, and since most of our money goes into salaries, this rests and resides in Pitt County," Brewer said. He added that the amount spent by ECU students in the community is put at $30 million.

Former Greenville mayor Percy Cox discussed the transportation situation in the county, calling for the four-laning of U.S. 264, the four-laning of Evans Street, and the development of a western by-pass. "Good, safe transportation facilities are essential for growth," said Cox. He expressed his hope for a terminal building to be built at the Pitt-Greenville Airport in the near future.

Gene Taylor concluded the discussion on the economic health of the area by stating that in banking, a high increase in time deposits have been noted this year. "These are deposits that interest is earned on," explained Taylor. "Personal loans are down, but business loans are up 8.2 percent in contrast to the national figure of three percent and the state figure of five percent." Taylor said he felt personal loans were down due to more careful spending by consumers.

Shoots Two In A Debate

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Congressman Otto Arosemena Gomez, a former president of Ecuador, shot and wounded two other congressmen during a heated legislative debate, Quito newspapers reported.

The reports said Arosemena Gomez shot conservative legislator Pablo Davalos in the left thigh, and that the bullet passed through the thigh and then hit the knee of another congressman, Pio Oswaldo Cueva.

Both the injured were treated at a municipal hospital and were reported in good condition, the newspapers said.

They said the incident took place Tuesday night following 2½ hours of angry debate on a bill introduced by Arosemena Gomez proposing retirement benefits for women who have worked for 25 years, regardless of age.

Davalos opposed the bill, claiming Arosemena Gomez' stance had "little ethical or moral substance."

"Nobody gives me lessons, and even worse, you, Dr. Davalos," the newspapers said Arosemena Gomez replied.

The two men screamed insults at each other until Arosemena Gomez snatched a pistol from his briefcase and shot Davalos in the thigh, the reports said. When Davalos screamed he was unarmed, the former president threw the weapon on a desk and invited Davalos to take a shot at him, they said.

and that a peaceful solution will be found to their differences on the basis of justice, respect for each other's rights and in the spirit of Islamic solidarity and brotherhood."

There has been no reliable information on the size and disposition of the opposing forces along the battlefronts. Both Iran and Iraq are Moslem nations, but the non-Arab Persians are the dominant ethnic community in Iran while the Iraqis are Arabs. The Arabs also are in the majority in Khuzestan.

Lingering Questions In Billy Carter's Inquiry

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators, in an interim report on Billy Carter's Libyan ties, concluded today amid lingering questions about White House involvement that the president's brother "merits severe criticism" for his actions.

The special Senate subcommittee, which began its probe of the Billy Carter-Libyan affair two months ago, was debating the report's conclusions today. It is under Senate mandate to release at least a tentative report by Oct. 4, a month to the day before the November election.

At least six of the nine senators on the panel have written separate views to add to the report, and one of them, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "I still have grave reservations and doubts about President Carter's role in this matter."

Several senators tried to restore language deleted from a draft report saying Billy Carter's conduct "merits condemnation" because it "was contrary to the interests of the president and the United States."

In the final version of the interim report, the phrase "merits condemnation" was softened to say "merits severe criticism."

The draft also criticized the president and several top aides for poor judgment and mishandling of the affair but said Billy Carter received no special treatment as the president's brother.

Dole concluded in his separate views that "there is no way of knowing at this point the extent of the president's involvement."

"It strains credibility beyond the breaking point to accept the statements that the president and his brother only discussed the Libyan situation three times from April of 1979 through June of 1980," Dole said.

Dole, one of the president's sharpest critics on the panel, said the subcommittee has evidence of more meetings and discussions, and that the investigation should be continued in several areas he contends have been largely ignored.

Today's report was not being labeled as final. That would permit a full report later, if warranted.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., in his separate views, criticized the Senate panel for not pursuing charges that fugitive financier Robert Vesco was involved in Billy Carter's dealings with Libya.

DeConcini also said the evidence strongly suggests that the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, "was serving the political needs of the president" by urging Billy Carter to stop trying to arrange an oil deal with Libya.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., disagreed, saying Brzezinski "should not be admonished for trying to discourage Billy Carter from engaging" in the deal.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said he agrees with the report but believes some of the language criticizing the president and his aides is too strong.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said he believes the president purposely let Billy set up a White House meeting with a Libyan official to help his brother establish some sort of business deal with Libya. Libya was asked at the meeting to support U.S. efforts to free American hostages in Iran.

Lugar said he believes the president considered his action "a relatively harmless brotherly gesture," but "the president's action amounted to a green light to proceed. Billy Carter lost no time in literally cashing in on his good fortune."

The draft of the report obtained earlier this week concluded that Libya's payment of $20,000 to Billy Carter, which the president's brother maintains was an unconditional loan, indicates "the control by Libya over him."

It criticized the president for not trying harder to stop his brother's second trip to Libya and for using Billy Carter as a middleman to set up a White House meeting to seek Libyan support in the effort to free the American Damage from the mishap was estimated at $500 to the Schofield car and $1,500 to the Clements auto.

An estimated $800 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 10:26 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard, according to officers, who identified the drivers involved as Harold Woodrow Deiteh of Route 8, Greenville, and Larry Thomas Heath of Route 1, Dover.

Samuel Gatlin Jenkins III of 127 Avery St., was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 12:08 p.m. incident on Evans Street, just south of the Ninth Street intersection.

Police reported the Jenkins truck collided with a car driven by Clara Langley Balafas of Route 4, Greenville, causing $100 damage to the car and $1,000 damage to the truck.

A truck driven by James Madison Hardee of Route 2,

Ayden, and a car operated by Thomas Donald Taylor of 3105 South Briarcliff Dr., collided about 4:50 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 213 feet north of the Chestnut Street intersection, resulting in an estimated $350 damage to the truck and $300 damage to the car.

An 8:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets involved cars driven by Scott Evans Southerland of Route 2, Greenville, and Doris Bat-chelder Hunt of 101 Osceola Dr.

Police set damage from the mishap at $300 to the Southerland car and $100 to the Hunt auto.

SINKING SHIP
KIRKWALL, Scotland (AP) — A Swedish cargo ship carrying 12 tons of inflammable chemicals burst into flames today and was reported sinking in 30-foot seas of the northeast coast of Scotland. All 22 persons aboard were rescued by helicopter.

Iraq-Iran Combat...

Korea denied that they had been supplying Iran with spare airplane parts. A published report in Kuwait quoted the speaker of Iraq's parliament, Naem Haddad, as making that claim.

Iraq's embassy was hit by four rockets about 11:45 p.m. Wednesday, causing damage to several offices. No injuries were reported in either attack.

In Iran, the government's first significant ground gain was announced by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who said Iranian forces recaptured the border town of Mehran, 100 miles east of Baghdad, the Iraqi capital. An Iraqi communique denied the claim that the Iraqis had retaken Mehran.

The governor's office in Khorramshahr, Iran's chief port at the southern end of the front, said in a broadcast from neighboring Abadan on Wednesday that Iraqi forces had been driven three miles back from the city after heavy fighting around the port and the railway station. The announcement said six Iraqi tanks and 39 soldiers were captured and 15 Iraqis were killed.

It was the first Iranian admission that the invaders had penetrated into the key city on the Shatt al-Arab estuary, Iraq's waterway to the Persian Gulf and the southern end of the disputed border between the two countries. Full control of the estuary is one of Iraq's chief war aims.

Iraq, meanwhile, claimed that its tanks and troops captured all approaches to Dezful, along with the big air base and several army camps there, and said the communications and military center 175 miles north of Khorramshahr and Abadan was "as good as fallen." An Iraqi communique said 10 Iranian and seven Iraqi tanks were destroyed in the fighting.

Iraq reported "savage" Iranian air raids on five provinces with the targets including oil installations at Basra and Um Qasr in the south and Kirkuk in the north. It said its planes attacked armor and military trucks near the besieged Iranian refinery city of Abadan, an ammunition dump and bridge at Dezful and oil depots in Ahwaz, the capital of Khuzestan which the Iraqis claimed two days ago was about to be captured.

Iraq claimed two Iranian Phantom jets were shot down and said all of its planes returned safely. An Iranian communique claimed two Iraqi MiGs were shot down and a total of 21 Iraqi tanks were destroyed.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim received a letter from Bani-Sadr rejecting the Security Council's call for a cease-fire "so long as Iraq is in violation of our territorial sovereignty."

Bani-Sadr told Waldheim said such appeals "cannot be considered by our government" and there is "no use in any discussion, directly or indirectly."

Iraq said it would cease fire for four days starting Sunday if Iran also agreed to cease fire, halt its propaganda campaign against Iran and negotiate peace before the truce expired.

Iran's top diplomat at the United Nations, Jamal Shemirani, rejected the offer, saying Iraq must first "put an end to aggression against Iran and it must go back to original positions before the start of hostilities."

Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq told the General Assembly that on his goodwill mission to Tehran and Baghdad on behalf of the 40-nation Islamic Conference he "faithfully conveyed to each brother the views and position of the other in regard to a cessation of hostilities."

He gave no indication of their response, saying only he hoped "efforts will continue to end the tragic conflict between Iran and Iraq

Technologists Attend Seminar

Several hundred registered radiologic technologists and various student groups from throughout the state of North Carolina are attending the annual fall seminar of the North Carolina Society of Radiologic Technologists, being held this week at the Ramada Inn.

"The 1980 fall seminar is an educational program designed to provide continuing education for all technologists dealing with ionizing radiation to further their knowledge and thus benefit the impact on the quality of health care for the consumers of the state," said Elaine Alexander, president of the North Carolina Society of Radiologic Technologists.

The seminar, co-hosted by Pitt Community College and Pitt County Memorial Hospital, includes discussions on automatic exposure controls, contrast media indications and reactions, and angiography of cerebrovascular insufficiency.

Discussion at Tuesday's session centered around the legislation the NCSRT is presenting that would require all radiologic technicians to be licensed. "Our current model draft that we hope to present into legislation in January of 1981 is a culmination of all input from technologists across the state who are concerned with our current voluntary credentialing procedure," explained Alexander.

"We would hope that the public is aware that 95 percent of all radiation is coming from medical and dental x-rays, therefore we, the NCSRT, are seeking to obtain legislation requiring minimum qualifications for all personnel operating x-ray equipment," continued Alexander. The proposed regulation would be similar to current legislation that sets standards for physicians, nurses and other health professions.

"Unknown to the consumer, there are numerous uneducated operators for x-ray equipment across the state," said Alexander. "At present, on the national level, legislation is being sought to establish minimum standards. At least 12 states have adopted minimum standards at this time and numerous others are in the process, as North Carolina, to pursue licensure."

A board of directors meeting was held Wednesday morning with state officers Elaine Alexander, Presbyterian Hospital, current president; Gloria Hall, Moses Cone Hospital, president-elect; Martha Jo Copeland, N.C. Baptist Hospital, first vice-president; Cindi Barnes, Baptist Hospital, second vice-president; Judy Edmiston of Valdease General Hospital, secretary; Elaine Boles, Baptist Hospital, treasurer.

A legislative forum will conclude the three-day meeting on Friday afternoon.

Indian Heritage Week Noted

GRIMESLAND — During the week of September 22-28 students at G.R. Whitfield School celebrated N.C. Indian Heritage week. Special events included constructing teepees in the lobby and the media center and a display of Indian artifacts in the media center. The media specialist dressed as an Indian and read stories to the various groups about Indians.

In the classroom there were varied activities in progress such as a display of an Indian reservation, dioramas depicting the life styles of Indians, reports and booklets made on various tribes and displays of Indian foods, baskets, animals, pottery and jewelry. Listening to Indian songs, making Indian costumes, making maps showing states where Indians live today, the drawing of pictures related to Indian life, and hearing a taped interview with a nurse who lived on a Navajo Indian Reservation were additional learning activities enjoyed by various classes.

FOOD FAIR

KINSTON — The city schools will sponsor a Food Fair October 16 from 7-9 p.m. in the Kinston Junior High School Cafeteria. Each of the schools will have an exhibit as well as the Nutrition Education Training Programs and the Youth Advisory Councils.

The Food Fair will attempt to show the reasons for and workings of the Child Nutrition Program. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

GOSPEL RALLY

A Seven Seal Gospel Rally will be held Sunday, Oct. 5 at 6 p.m. at Mayo Chapel Baptist Church. Seven guest ministers from area churches will take part in the rally.

The pastor, the Rev. Walter Cherry Jr., invited the public to attend.

Pollutants Discovered

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Excessive concentrations of mercury and copper have been found in the Niagara River and part of Lake Ontario, the Great Lakes Laboratory reports.

The level of pollution doesn't pose a direct threat to people, but the contaminants could build up in fish and enter the food chain, said lab director Robert A. Sweeney.

The concentrations exceed the limits of the International Joint Commission and suggest industrial discharge violations in both the United States and Canada, Sweeney said on Wednesday.

Contaminants were found in the river and along the southern shore of Lake Ontario about 10 to 15 miles on either side of the mouth of the Niagara River.

"Our findings indicate the need for a major surveillance effort," he said.

The discovery "also suggests that while our Canadian brethren have been pointing the finger at us, they need to do some cleaning up on their side of the river," Sweeney said.

The sampling, done this summer, also found high concentrations of phenols and ammonia, he said.

Thanksgiving Day was first officially celebrated in the United States in 1789.

N.C. Lawmen Facing Cutoff LEAA Money

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Law enforcement officials in North Carolina face a sharp loss of funding in the coming months as the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is phased out.

LEAA funneled about $6 million into North Carolina this year, but federal budget-cutting wrote a practical ending to the agency as of this week. The administration is expected to be funded for fiscal 1981 only to complete projects already begun.

Its demise has left state and local law enforcement officials wondering how the LEAA money will be replaced. Congress accepted arguments that most of the money could be provided at the local level, but North Carolina officials have expressed doubt that the money is available.

John Elmore of the state attorney general's office and Gordon Smith III, executive director of the Governor's Crime Commission, are among those who say the loss of LEAA funds could hurt the state's crime-fighting efforts — especially through the loss of new programs.

Elmore said LEAA "has been particularly valuable ... (in) starting new programs. LEAA has provided a lot of seed money to begin programs to see how they would operate."

"It's had a very significant impact on our department," Elmore said.

Some local officers, such as Wilmington Police Chief Darryl L. Bruestle, are concerned about the loss of funding at a time when statistics indicate an increase in crime.

"We're seeing a de-emphasis on crime at the federal level, which is unfortunate," Bruestle said.

Major projects started with LEAA funds in North Carolina include training programs and increases in the minimum standards for law enforcement officers, development of the North Carolina Justice Academy and its training classes for officers, the computerized Police Information Network linking local and state police agencies, and expansion of the crime detection laboratory and enforcement programs operated by the State Bureau of Investigation.

The Governor's Crime Commission has recommended a $2.5 million state-supported program to offset the loss of LEAA funds, but the proposal still must face the 1981 General Assembly.

LEAA was created by Congress in 1970 following a decade of civil unrest in which many police departments found themselves unable to cope with street rioting and unrest on college campuses.

Critics of the program contended too much money was spent on riot gear and other equipment that may not have been needed. In recent years, emphasis has shifted to training programs rather than the purchase of equipment.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market turned in a mixed showing today as the prime lending rate continued to climb.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 17.49 points in the past two sessions, slipped back .68 to 938.74 by noontime today.

Gainers held a 65 edge on losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

As the market opened, Citibank of New York raised its prime rate from 13 to 14 percent.

That increase eclipsed a half-point jump to 13 1/2 percent posted by many of the nation's other large banks on Wednesday.

The market has also had to contend in recent days with speculation that the war between Iran and Iraq might last for some time. Oil issues with reserves in areas other than the Middle East led the market higher Wednesday, and remained active today.

Atlantic Richfield, the volume leader among NYSE issues, rose 3/4 to 57 1/2. Phillips Petroleum picked up 1 to 48 1/2; Union Oil of California 2 to 41 1/2, and Standard Oil of Ohio 3/4 to 62 1/2.

Losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down 3/4 at 64 1/2; General Motors, off 1/4 at 51 1/2, and DuPont, down 3/4 at 44 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index managed a .12 gain to 73.49. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .60 at 338.80.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.46 million shares at noontime, up from 19.88 million at the same point Wednesday.

East Group Asks LWV Host Debate

The East for Senate Committee has requested the League of Women Voters to issue a request for Dr. John East and incumbent Sen. Robert Morgan to debate the issue before the November 4 election.

East, a Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, faces Morgan, a Democrat, in the November balloting.

In a letter to Mrs. Marion A. Nichol, president of the League of Women Voters, Mrs. Mary Jane Hollyday, chairman of the East for Senate Committee said, "several weeks ago, Dr. John East issued an invitation to Sen. Robert Morgan to debate the crucial issue before North Carolinians in this year's campaign..."

Mrs. Hollyday continued, "for various reasons Sen. Morgan has declined to accept Dr. East's invitation. We believe the people deserve an opportunity to hear the candidates set forth their positions on the issues and their solutions for the problems confronting our country."

According to the letter, "It is our hope that should a third party, such as the League of Women Voters, extend an invitation to debate that Mr. Morgan might reconsider his position. Certainly, the participation and sponsorship of the debate by a third party would insure fairness and objective treatment of both parties involved in the debate."

The letter commended the League for its tradition of hosting, "this type of forum," and concluded, "should the League be willing to extend an invitation to Sen. Morgan and Dr. East to sponsor a debate, then we will be glad to attend at any time which the League might choose"

Inching Back In Political Life

CLEVELAND (AP) - Former Mayor Carl B. Stokes, in his first week back in Cleveland after an eight-year stint as a New York newspaperman, is easing his way back into political life.

Stokes, 53, who in 1967 became one of America's first black urban mayors, moved into an East Side apartment last Sunday. Since then, he has been setting up a law practice and helping run a voter registration drive in black neighborhoods for the Democratic National Committee.

Stokes announced in August that he would not stay with WNBC-TV in New York, where he has been an anchorman, reporter and commentator since 1972. His contract expires on Oct. 28, and until then, Stokes says he won't endorse any candidates or indicate his political leanings.

Stokes said he would act as a political adviser to his brother, U.S. Rep. Louis Stokes, a Cleveland Democrat.

Bars Communists In Italy's Govm't

ROME (AP) - Arnaldo Forlani, president of the dominant Christian Democratic Party, today was named to try to form Italy's 40th postwar government. He reiterated the party's position that the Communists would be excluded from the Cabinet of this NATO nation.

Forlani was named by President Sandro Pertini to form a new government to succeed fellow party member Francesco Cossiga's coalition, which fell Saturday when its economic package was defeated in Parliament by a single vote.

Forlani, 54, has served as foreign minister in three governments. A native of Pesaro on the Adriatic coast, Forlani has been secretary of the Christian Democratic Party and was first elected to Parliament in 1958.

Emerging from Pertini's office, Forlani admitted in a written statement it will not be an easy task governing. "But I hope that my good will be reciprocated by that of the political forces in view of the gravity of the problems Italy is facing," he said.

"A government must have a large base of consensus in Parliament to face the serious domestic and international situation."

Forlani said he would seek to enlarge the former coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists and Republicans but exclude the Communists.

"Evidently, I refer to the parties which can collaborate in a common programmatic task in the government," Forlani said.

Political observers said Forlani's goal was to enlarge the previous coalition with the small Democratic Socialist and Liberal parties.

Forlani said he planned to consult leaders of the parties, including his own, after a "short period of reflection."

State Budget Commission Here Today

Members of the Advisory Budget Commission - charged with preparing the State's budget for the coming biennium and recommending it to the General Assembly - were in Greenville today on their biennial tour of state facilities.

Commission members met at the Family Practice Center at Pitt Memorial Hospital at 11 a.m. for a tour of the East Carolina University medical school facilities.

They were guests of ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer, at the chancellor's home, for lunch.

Although the Advisory Budget Commission prepares and recommends to the General Assembly, a budget, the lawmakers ultimately have the power to add to or subtract from the commission's recommendations.

Terrorized By Loose Pet Ape

NEWTOWN, Pa. (AP) - An escaped pet ape terrorized a Bucks County teenager by jumping inside her car and biting her after she pulled to a stop, authorities said.

Sophia Hadgimallis, 19, of Richboro told police she was bitten again when she ran from the car to a truck that had stopped nearby. Miss Hadgimallis had her wounds cleaned at a Langhorne hospital after Tuesday's attack and was released.

Mamu, a pet for 14 years, escaped from the yard of its owner, Saul Lefkowitz, police said. Police said they were uncertain whether charges would be filed.

Kept His Cool In IRA Protest

NEW YORK (AP) - Prince Philip of England kept his cool as 200 supporters of the Irish Republican Army demonstrated outside during his speech to environmentalists.

Security was extremely tight for the prince's appearance.

The invitation-only lecture was sponsored by the Animal Research and Conservation Center of the New York Zoological Society, Rockefeller University and the Conservation Foundation of Washington, D.C.

Asked about the IRA demonstrators, protesting the jailing of political prisoners in Ireland, the prince said: "I haven't seen them, but I think this is still a free country. I'm thinking of starting a protest movement myself one of these days."

Challenging A Settlement

CHICAGO (AP) - A desegregation plan for Chicago schools is too vague to be effective and should be overturned, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The U.S. Justice Department filed suit against the city last week, alleging that its schools were segregated. The suit was immediately settled under an agreement between the department and school officials.

Rose, Gryphons Collide In Key Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Over the past few years, the biggest obstacle to the Rose

High School football team has been that of the Rocky Mount Gryphons.
Friday night in Ficklen

Stadium, the two collide again, and the Rampants, with a victory, could take a giant step toward the Division I championship. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m.

Rose, ranked second in the state by the Associated Press, rallied from a 21-6 deficit at the end of the first period to take a 42-21 win over Northern Nash last Friday night in the conference opener of the season.

Elsewhere in the league, the only other unbeaten in the league were being handed their first losses. Rocky Mount rallied from a 9-0 halftime deficit to take Beddingfield, 13-9, giving the Bruins their first defeat, while Bertie was stunning previously untarnished Hunt, 8-7. Fike surprised Northeastern, 33-7, in the other league game.

In addition to the Rose-Rocky Mount matchup, the league also has Northern Nash entertaining Beddingfield, Bertie hosting Fike, and Hunt traveling to Northeastern in Friday games.

The Rampants, bothered by fumbles for the second straight game, saw their opponent of last Friday take advantage of those mistakes, turning two of the five lost balls into touchdowns, and scoring the third after a penalty negated a Knight punt.

However, with their backs to the wall, the Rampants responded and thoroughly dominated the Knights the rest of the way, holding them to minus yardage in the second half, without a first down.

"Basically, we did two things in that game," Coach Dave Bumgarner said. "One of them was good and the other was bad."

The bad, he related, was that the Rampants didn't take the Knights seriously enough. "We found out that if you don't play like you are capable of, you don't do the mechanical things that you should."

He cited pass coverage as an example. In the first quarter, Northern completed two long passes, one for a touchdown, and the other setting up a score. "We just didn't want to get to them hard enough. It was like our feet were nailed to the ground," Bumgarner said.

"We weren't mentally ready, but once we had the daylight scared out of us, we picked up and did the right things. We started attacking them on both offense and defense, and we got the job done."

One key play was a final-play touchdown in the first half. On that, a Rose pass was thrice batted by Northern defenders before falling into the hands of Don Johnson in the end zone. That narrowed the lead to 21-19. "It was a fluke, sure," the coach admitted. "But that's the way the ball bounces."

Bumgarner said that there were a number of things Rose did well throughout. "We only had to punt once. We've just punted seven times in four games, and that's a pretty good sign of the way we've been able to control it most of the time. And even the punt against Northern was a key factor, since we were able to cover it well (minus two yard return) and back them up there."

He praised the entire defensive unit for its play. "They were very aggressive. While I was disappointed in our pass coverage, it did the job when it had to. We probably should have intercepted those two long ones, and several others too."

Offensively, he noted that once the team got on track, the line blocked extremely well. "One time, in the film, I noticed that after the snap, the entire line moved their men back five full yards. That's blocking," he said.

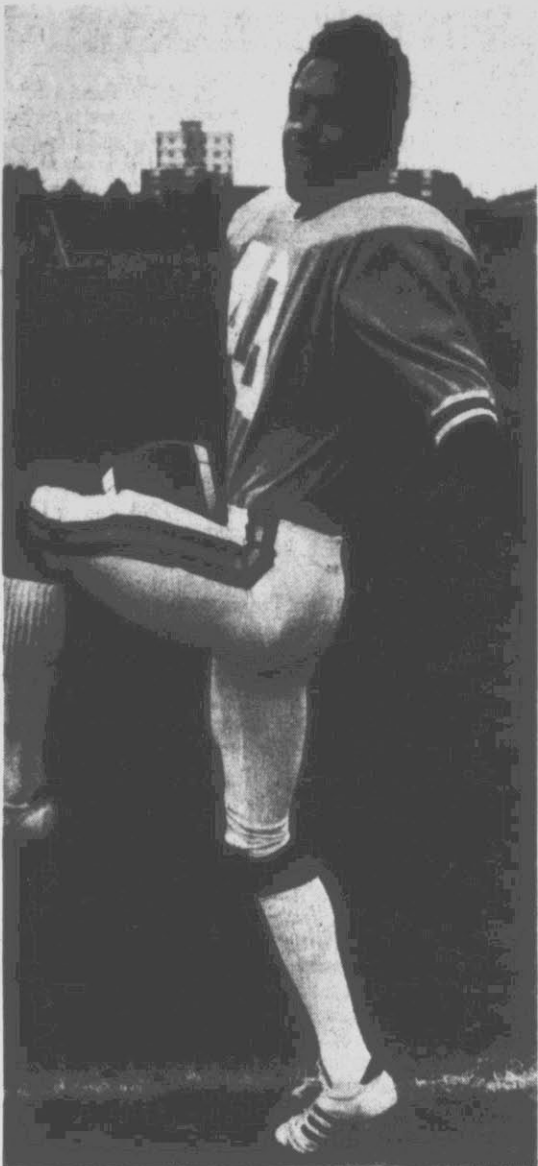

Rocky Mount, however, will be the first team with a winning record that the Ram-pants have faced this year, bringing in 3-1 mark. The lone Gryphon loss was to Goldsboro, 27-20. They have beaten Eastern Wayne, 21-6; Tarboro, 20-19, and Beddingfield.

"They know that people have been able to throw on us," Bumgarner said. "And they've got an outstanding passing game. So we expect them to throw on us quite a bit. I wouldn't be surprised to see them throw 75 per cent of the time, 25 or 30 or more times in the game."

"They also have good run-

Ali, Holmes Square Off Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali, a boxing immortal in the autumn of his career, reaches back for one more springtime tonight when he attempts to win the heavyweight championship for a record fourth time.

The man standing between Ali and this latest piece of boxing history is Larry Holmes, a former sparring partner and now the undefeated World Boxing Council champion. And Holmes promises that he will write the last chapter to Ali's remarkable story.

"He's an old man and I will beat him," the champion said of Ali, who is 38 and has not fought in two years.

Ali ballooned to 254 pounds during his retirement but trained for six months and came in at a trim 217½ for tonight's bout, the lightest he's been since beating George Foreman for the crown in 1974.

"You will see a miracle, a real miracle," he said at the weigh-in Wednesday. "I'm turning the clock back 15 years. My timing and my speed are back. Don't be late. I might do this in one round. Don't be out buying popcorn and hot dogs."

Ali will carry a six-pound advantage over Holmes, who weighed in at 211½. Traditionally, champion and challenger weigh in together but Holmes' camp, wary of exposing the champion to any of Ali's preflight antics, insisted on separate weigh-ins.

But Ali's entourage was on hand for Holmes' appearance and when the champion held his belt high over his head, Lloyd Wells, who counted situps for the ex-champ, shouted at him.

"Does the winner get that belt?"

"The winner gets this belt," Holmes said of the broad red band with a bejeweled gold insignia that he said was worth $38,000, "and it's gonna stay with the one who's got it now."

Holmes earned the belt June 9, 1978 when he outpointed Ken Norton for the crown. That was three months before Ali beat Leon Spinks to regain the World Boxing Association version of the crown — making him the first to hold the most glamorous title in boxing three times.

Ali then retired, apparently ending a remarkable career which had begun in the 1960 Olympic Games at Rome where he won a gold medal as light-heavyweight champion. Holmes, meanwhile, defended the WBC crown seven times, winning each fight by a knockout and extending his career record to 35-0. Winning seven title defenses by knockout tied the number of consecutive KO victories of Joe Louis and a knockout victory over Ali would tie Holmes with Tommy Burns for the record.

For two years, Ali stayed away from the ring, touring the world as a presidential envoy, making movies and speaking appearances, and eating exceedingly well. "Pancakes and gallons of milk," he said.

Then came the decision to go for the championship again. Many of Ali's closest advisors tried to talk him out of it but he was determined. Angelo Dundee, Ali's longtime trainer, said "A gremlin climbed on his shoulder and whispered in his ear, 'four times, world champion.' That's all it took."

That and a record purse of $8 million in this Don King-Caesars Palace promotion. Holmes, even though he is champion, will get about half what Ali is getting — about $4 million.

The soldout fight will be staged in a temporary 25,000-seat stadium which has been erected in the hotel parking lot. The gate will be a record $6 million with closed circuit television and ancillary rights adding handsomely to the overall pot. ABC-TV reportedly has paid better than $2 million for delayed telecasting rights.

Also on the card tonight will be a 12-round heavyweight elimination bout between ex-champ Leon Spinks, ranked No.4 by the WBC, and Bernardo Mercado, ranked No.1. King has promised the winner of that bout a shot at the crown against the winner of the Holmes-Ali fight.

In another fight, Saoul Mamba defends his super-lightweight crown against Maurice "Termite" Watkins.

But Holmes and Ali own the spotlight, primarily because of the almost mystical hold the former champion exerts on the public.

Ali has been in the eye of the boxing hurricane since knocking out Sonny Liston for the championship in 1964 in a stunning upset. The day after that fight, the new champ announced that he was adopting the Black Muslim faith and changing his name from Cassius Clay.

Then came his battle with the government over the military draft and his decision to refuse to serve during the Vietnam war. He was stripped of the title and did not fight for 3½ years until the Supreme Court upheld his appeal and dismissed his draft dodging conviction.

He then returned to the ring, and regained his crown, knocking out Foreman in Zaire in 1974. Then he lost the crown to Spinks before regaining it for an unprecedented third time in 1978.

Along the way there were three memorable wars with Joe Frazier — Ali won two of them — three others with Ken Norton — again, Ali won two of them — and countless other battles which have constructed the legend.

Now the road takes one more turn tonight. Ali is back, reaching for boxing's brass ring one more time.

"Four times, world champion." He kept repeating the phrase in the weeks and days leading up to this fight, using it to drive himself harder and harder. "The first miracle is complete," he said, patting his flat stomach. "Now you will see the second miracle."

Duke Rally Nips Lady Pirates

Duke University spoiled the home volleyball opener for the Lady Pirates in Minges Coliseum last night, gaining a 3-2 victory.

East Carolina opened up with a 15-5 victory in the first game, but Duke came back for a 15-11 victory in the second to even it up. The Pirates won the third, 15-8, to be one win away from taking the match, but Duke came back with a 15-8 win in the fourth, and a 15-6 win in the fateful fifth game.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 2-6, while Duke climbed to 4-2.

"We're pretty disappointed in losing," Coach Alita Dillon said. "I think we have the potential to beat Duke. The reason for the ups and downs during the match is that we kept losing momentum on offense. We had problems adjusting to Duke's offensive pattern changes. There weren't enough conversions of free ball play and the setting was a little inconsistent. When the going gets tough, you've got to get tougher."

Dillon said that Sharon Perry, while off on her blocks, had some good net play, and that Stacey Weitzel set well. Most of the others had spurts of good play, but had their ups and downs according to Dillon.

"We have a tough weekend ahead of us," Dillon noted. The Lady Pirates will be playing in the South Carolina Invitational, which starts Friday morning. "We're going to have to play our best for a longer time than we did tonight to hang with the teams we'll see this weekend."

East Carolina's first opponent in the tournament will be North Carolina at 9 a.m. Friday.

Jackson Says 'That's Enough,' Sparks Yankees To 18-7 Victory

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
New York had lost three in a row, tying its longest losing streak of the season. Since

Retiring
Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics announced his retirement from the professional basketball team yesterday, calling the management to inform it of his decision. Cowens' move is the second in less than two weeks. Pete Maravich retired from the club on September 20. (AP Laserphoto)

Saturday, Baltimore had wiped out more than half of the Yankees' lead in the American League East, cutting it from 5½-to-2½-games.

Reggie Jackson had had enough. "When you're a Yankee and you're Reggie, you're an overdog," he said. "You're supposed to win, and you're damned if you lose."

So Jackson took matters into his own hands. He belted a home run and drove in four runs as the Yankees broke their three-game losing streak with a vengeance, hitting five home runs and beating the Cleveland Indians 18-7 Wednesday night. New York piled up 37 total bases in its highest scoring game of the season.

"I'm tired of hearing about (Baltimore Manager) Earl Weaver and blowing it and the Orioles and all that," said Jackson. "I don't want to hear it. I just want to keep the hammer down, win it and go home."

The Yankees' lead over Baltimore remained 2½-games, since the Orioles outscored the Boston Red Sox 12-8, but New York's magic number for clinching the division title was reduced to two. The Yankees can clinch a tie by beating Detroit at home tonight, but Baltimore has the night off so the race will last until at least Friday.

Both clubs wind up the season at home — New York with four games against Detroit, Baltimore with three games against Cleveland.

Orioles 12, Red Sox 8
Baltimore won its fifth in a row to stay on the Yankees' heels. Dennis Martinez, who pitched a five-hitter on Monday, worked 31-3 innings of two-hit relief to nail down the victory.

The game was Boston's first under interim Manager Johnny Pesky, who took over after Don Zimmer was fired earlier Wednesday.

Ken Singleton belted two doubles and a pair of singles, driving in four runs, and Eddie Murray, Terry Crowley and Rich Dauer drilled homers to lead Baltimore's attack. The Orioles pounded Boston starter Dennis Eckersley for eight hits and seven runs in less than four innings, then put away the game with a five-run fifth against relievers Bill Campbell and Luis Aponte.

Weaver then tried to apply a little psyche job.

"They still gotta win two," he said of the Yankees. "And when you've got to win two, you can't afford to make any mistakes. And, I'll tell you, the Tigers look like their hot."

"One thing's for sure — the Yankees are going to know they were in a race," added Singleton. "It's still on, and we're still in it."

Royals 4, Mariners 1
George Brett climbed back into the race for .400, going 3-for-3 and raising his average to .391 with a home run and two doubles for Kansas City.

"It's possible," Brett said after adding four points onto his season average and also collecting his 502nd plate appearance, which officially qualifies him for the batting title. "I didn't think I'd be back into the .390s again, but I'm seeing the pitches very well again and I'm more relaxed."

Tigers 11, Blue Jays 7
Steve Kemp drove in two runs to raise his season total to 101 as the Tigers beat Toronto. Detroit broke the game open with a six-run third inning that included a run-scoring single by Kemp. Mark Fidrych got the victory even though he allowed five runs in five innings.

A's 11, White Sox 3
Mike Norris scattered nine hits in his 2nd complete game of the season, raising his record to 22-9 as the A's coasted past Chicago.

Brewers 10, Angels 7
Ben Oglivie, Paul Molitor and Charlie Moore had four hits apiece as Milwaukee pounded out 19 hits in beating California. Oglivie slugged his 40th homer, tops in the American League, while Moore hit for the cycle.

Zimmer Fired As Bosox Chief

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — For the sixth time in 15 years, the Boston Red Sox are in the market for a new manager after making Don Zimmer the latest victim in a game of musical chairs.

Alarmed by the club's failure on the field and a drop of more than 300,000 in home attendance this year, the Red Sox bowed to fan pressure Wednesday, firing Zimmer after 4½ years as manager.

"I don't think we're going to find a better baseball man than Don Zimmer," General Manager Haywood Sullivan admitted in announcing the move with the ousted manager at his side.

Sullivan said he hoped to name the new manager "by World Series time," but he firmly refused comment when asked about possible candidates.

Many names were banded about, but a few close observers agreed that two were top possibilities, big Frank Howard, one-time home run slugger now a coach with the Milwaukee Brewers, and Gene Mauch, who resigned this season as manager of the Minnesota Twins.

There was also speculation that the Red Sox might turn to a darkhorse, such as Hall of Famer Ted Williams. Joe Morgan, developer of many Boston players as manager of the Pawtucket Red Sox, and 41-year-old Carl Yastrzemski

Williams, who slugged his way to baseball immortality in 21 years with the Red Sox, is a former manager with the old Washington Senators and Texas Rangers. Still listed by the Red Sox as "consultant, Organization Hitting Instructor," Williams would be an attraction to lure back lost fans.

Zimmer was the target of critical fans almost from the time he replaced Darrell Johnson as manager in July, 1978. His teams averaged 96 victories a year in his first three full seasons.

After winning 99 games only to lose the American League East title in a playoff with the New York Yankees in 1978, the Red Sox set a club record by drawing 2.35 million fans to little Fenway Park last year.

With their first losing record at home since 1966, woeful pitching and injuries to such sluggers as Yastrzemski, Jim Rice and Fred Lynn, the Red Sox will fall short of 2 million this year.

"Economics, fan reaction, public relations, on the field thinking," Sullivan said when asked the reasons for firing Zimmer. "This is not to embarrass anyone, but the fact is sometimes, change creates a little bit more of a winning attitude."

Fired for the first time in 32 years as a player, coach and manager, Zimmer was confident of finding another job and rejects an offer to remain in the Boston organization in a non-uniform position.

Ruhle's 12th Victory Keeps Astros Two Games In The Lead

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Back in August, it seemed the cards were stacked against Bill Virdon.

He had lost J.R. Richard to a stroke and Nolan Ryan, another of baseball's top pitchers, was not up to par.

What the Houston Astros' manager needed was an ace in hole — and that's what he got in Vern Ruhle.

The most pleasant surprise of the Astros' staff stayed in there pitching Wednesday night, hurling a six-hitter to lead the National League West leaders to a 5-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"I'm not worried about what I've done already," said Ruhle after improving his record to a sparkling 12-4. "I'm just looking down the road. We've got to look at what's ahead and take this thing one game at a time."

The victory kept the Astros two games in front of the Los Angeles Dodgers, 8-4 winners over the San Francisco Giants.

"(Cesar) Cedeno was chasing everything down in the outfield," said Ruhle. "(Enos) Cabell was picking them off in the infield. They were just fantastic."

Terry Puhl hit a three-run double to key a four-run second inning for Houston. Alan Ashby led off the frame with a double off Phil Niekro, 15-17. Niekro retired the next two batters before walking Joe Morgan and Cabell to load the bases.

Puhl then clubbed his 21st double of the season and Jose Cruz singled Puhl home with the fourth run of the inning.

Atlanta had taken a 2-0 lead off Ruhle, 12-4, in the second inning on an RBI-single by Glenn Hubbard and a run-scoring double by Bruce Benedict.

Dodgers 8, Giants 4
Joe Ferguson belted a home run and a triple and drove in six runs to lead Los Angeles over San Francisco.

The Dodgers scored their first four runs in the second inning with four straight hits off loser Ed Whitson, 11-12, including Ferguson's two-run triple. Ferguson got another RBI in the third on a fielder's choice, and three more in the fifth when he belted his eighth home run of the year. The six RBI were a career high for the Dodger catcher, who has driven in five runs on three other occasions.

Expos 8, Cardinals 0
Andre Dawson stroked three hits, drove in two runs and scored a pair to spark Montreal over St. Louis. David Palmer, 8-6, scattered six hits and struck out 10 to gain the key victory.

The Expos' victory kept their one-half-game lead over Philadelphia in the NL East.

The Expos broke the game open with five runs in the seventh. Dawson had a run-scoring single in the inning.

"We're playing as good as we've played in the last two years," said Montreal catcher Gary Carter.

The NL East race will be decided this weekend, when the Expos and Phillies play a make-or-break, three-game series. The Expos are idle today, while the Phillies finish up their series with the Cubs.

"We played 159 games and it all boils down to three. Unbelievable," Carter said. "I guess it's good for the fans, though. We just want to provide the thrills for them this weekend."

Phillies 5, Cubs 0
Steve Carlton hurled a brilliant two-hitter, throwing no-hit ball until the eighth inning, as he pitched and batted Philadelphia past Chicago.

The two-time Cy Young Award winner gave up only a leadoff single to Mike Vail in the eighth and a base hit by Bill Buckner in the ninth. Carlton, 24-9, struck out 10 overall to raise his National League-leading total to 286.

Carlton's sacrifice fly capped a four-run seventh inning against Dennis Lamp, 10-13. Mike Schmidt hit his 45th

Reds 2, Padres 1
George Foster's two-run homer in the ninth inning led Cincinnati over San Diego. Foster's homer, his 24th, followed Junior Kennedy's infield hit and tagged Bob Shirley, 11-12, with the loss.

Tom Hume, 9-10, pitched one inning in relief of Tom Seaver for the victory. Earlier, the Padres had taken a 1-0 lead on Dave Winfield's eighth-inning RBI-groundout.

Pirates 10, Mets 5
Dave Parker drove in three runs and relief pitcher Enrique Romo blasted a grand slam homer, helping Jim Bibby win his 19th game, as Pittsburgh defeated New York.

Parker hit a two-run homer in the first inning off Ray Burris, 7-13, and drove in another run with an infield out in the fifth.

Bibby, 19-6, allowed eight hits and three runs before giving way to Romo, who earned his 11th save.

Rose, Gryphons...

ing backs," he added. However, the leading rusher, Kelvin Farmer, who had 352 yards on 51 lugs, will be out of action on Friday, recovering from a pulmonary contusion.

How that will affect the Gryphon running game is yet to be seen.

"Just putting Greenville in front of them is a factor," Bumgarner said. "They like to beat us, and they may be using last year's playoff game as added incentive. I suspect that they've talked about that a great deal."

In that game, the Eastern finals, Rose romped to a 36-6 victory over the Gryphons, after losing 21-14 during the regular season.

"I think that they are the team to beat," Bumgarner said. "That doesn't mean that if we win, we're in. A lot of teams still have a chance to be a spoiler. But I'm almost certain that the winner of this conference is going to have to go 7-0 or 6-1. The possibility of a tie is there this year, and we'd like to avoid being caught in that situation."

Rocky Mount's offense is led by its quarterback, Scott Cooper. So far this year, he's hit on 18 passes for 348 yards. However, he's had eight picked off. Three of his completions were for touchdowns.

The top receiver is Denry Lawrence, with 16 catches for 287 yards. He also threw a touchdown pass off a flanker reverse last week against Beddingfield. The next top receiver is Ken Weaver, with eight receptions for 235 yards and three touchdowns.

Rose's rushing continues to be led by Alonza Taylor, with 246 yards on 45 carries and six touchdowns. Roger Williams is next with 197 yards on 30 carries, and he's scored four times. Quarterback Kenny Barnes has picked up 184 yards on 56 carries, and also has four touchdowns. Rounding out the backfield is fullback Jeff Porter with 27 carries for 148 yards.

Barnes, through the air, has completed 11 of 28 for 254 yards and two touchdowns. He has not had a pass intercepted as yet. The chief receiver has been Chris McLawhorn with seven grabs for 196 yards, while Johnson had three catches for 53 yards and two scores.

Offensively, Rose has rushed for 1,036 yards, passed for 285 and has a total of 1,331. The Rampant defense has allowed only 199 yards on the ground and 239 through the air for a 438 yard total.

Following Friday night's home game, the Rampants take the road for the next two weeks, traveling to Beddingfield and Bertie.

Warning Given On Promotions

With World Series baseball near and the professional football season just under way, Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills today issued a warning about mailorder promotions for major sporting events.

"Anyone responding to a promotion for a ticket-package or travel accommodations," Postmaster Mills said, "should make sure the promoter has an agent in the Greenville area."

"Otherwise," Mills added, "those responding may find their hard-earned dollars are going to fly-by-night operators who will take the money and run."

Mills issued the warning as a result of two swindles uncovered by postal inspectors earlier this year.

In January, the Mid-State Travel Club of Williamsport, Pa., placed advertisements in the Wall Street Journal and newspapers in the Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg and Baltimore area, offering a Super Bowl vacation package that included air fare, hotel accommodations and tickets for $279. It required those responding to mail a $50 deposit to a post office box in Williamsport.

This summer Bruce A. Ronning of Williamsport was sentenced to a seven-year prison term for mail fraud. An investigation by the Postal Inspection Service revealed he had no intention of providing anything he offered in his so-called Super Bowl vacation package.

Ronald A. Ritacca of Tucson, Arizona, was given a five-year sentence this year after he was found guilty of mail fraud in a scheme involving the Winter Olympics. Inspectors found Ritacca was taking money for rental of non-existent property in Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the Winter Olympics. Ritacca advertised in Pittsburgh, Buffalo, New York, and Michigan and Ohio newspapers that he had "newly completed apartments" for rent for $400 a week.

Mills said the Postal Inspection Service investigation disclosed that Ritacca claimed he had apartments for rent at 408 Allen St., Lake Placid, "when in fact there was no such address, or such property in Lake Placid."

Because of quick action by postal inspectors and Postal Service lawyers in getting the cases before a judge, mail containing responses to the promotions was returned to senders and there was no public loss.

Baker Drives Car To National 500 Pole

By BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP)—Harry Ranier will have a new driver for his Buick next year, but right now he's tickled to death with the one he has.

Buddy Baker drove Ranier's car around the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway Wednesday in a record-setting speed of 165.635 mph to capture the pole for Sunday's $320,000 National 500 stock car race.

Baker, who will be replaced by Bobby Allison next year, fought a wet track and a case of nerves to break the one-lap track record of 164.304 mph set by Neil Bonnett when he won the pole last year. It also bettered the fastest lap clocked at the speedway.

David Pearson turned a lap of 165.477 mph during qualifying for last May's World 600 at the speedway.

"How's that for sport?" Baker said after edging out Ricky Rudd for the pole position. "For a while I thought I was going to be so nervous I couldn't drive the car. When David (Pearson) spun out, I said, 'Oh, no, the track must be bad.'"

"But the time really surprised me. It is special. I wanted to look good in front of the hometown crowd," the Charlotte native said.

Baker's time came as a surprise to that hometown crowd, however. He was one of the last to qualify. Rudd, one of the early qualifiers, had already broken the track record with a clocking of 164.856 mph in his Chevrolet. Even defending National 500 champion Cale Yarborough, who qualified third, couldn't catch Rudd.

Yarborough also broke the previous record with a speed of 164.309 mph.

Even Baker though Rudd had the pole won.

"I guess there's two Cinderellas in this story," Baker said. "I really didn't think anyone could beat Ricky's run. It was a super run. When I saw the water coming out of the grandstands on the track, his chances got better."

The wet track did both Baker.

"I may have looked cool but I wasn't," he said. "I got a little sideways on the first lap (the winning one), but not enough to hurt anything. The crew had the car set up super. It was really handling."

It marked the first National 500 pole for Baker, who has started second in the event four times. It also places him in front of the race that marked the beginning of his career. He won the 1967 National 500 and has won 17 races since then, including three World 600s, at the speedway.

The $10,000 purse for the pole position boosted his season's earnings to $229,125 and brings his career earnings to within $70,000 of the $2 million mark.

Pearson, who has won more poles at the speedway than any other driver, wasn't sure what happened during his run when he spun out in the second turn of his first lap.

"It broke loose in the second turn, but not anything to worry about," said Pearson, who was trying again today to qualify. "When it reached the point where it should start turning back, it kept going on. Then it was something to worry about. It just wouldn't turn. I kept turning left but the car kept turning right."

Yarborough, whose 13 pole victories this season is more than anyone in a single season, proved something to himself Wednesday.

"The track was a little warmer when I ran, but I can't use that for an excuse," he said. "I got beat pure and simple. I heard you couldn't win the pole in all the races but it took today to prove it to me."

NASCAR point and money leader Dale Earnhardt was fourth at 164.134 mph in a Chevrolet. Darrell Waltrip was fifth, also in a Chevrolet. Bonnett, last year's pole winner, was eighth with a speed of 163.756 mph.

"I knew the lap Rudd got in was a good one and it was going to take a super lap to beat him," Bonnett said. "That's what Baker ran, a super lap."

Fifteen drivers qualified during Wednesday's time trials. The 14 behind Baker earned $500 each. Qualifying for the remaining 25 spots continues today and Friday.

The winner of Sunday's 21st running of the National 500 collects $30,000. The race begins at 12:30 p.m.

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP)—Here are the top 15 qualifiers with their times, for Sunday's National 500 stock car race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

1. Buddy Baker, Charlotte, N.C., Buick, 165.635 mph
2. Ricky Rudd, Chesapeake, Va., Chevrolet, 164.856 mph
3. Cale Yarborough, Timmonsville, S.C., Chevrolet, 164.309 mph

'Bama Favored To Give Bryant His 300th Win

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) —

All the secret operatives from X9 to X23 were in Las Vegas this weekend for the big heavyweight title fight, but they rushed over to the Churchill Downs Race Book to plot the college football games.

"Some real beauties this week," said operative XII, pouring over the form sheets. "Notre Dame and Michigan State, for instance — the Spartans always play the Irish tough; Florida State and Nebraska — was Bobby Bowden looking over Miami's head last week, and what happened to Oklahoma?"

So it's with a feeling of indecision and trepidation that we plunge into the first Saturday in October, looking over the shoulder to see if Muhammad Ali can pull another rabbit out of the hat against Larry Holmes.

Last week: 39-15, .723. Season: 143-48, .754.

Alabama 42, Kentucky 20: The blue grassers always play Alabama tough but can't deny Bear Bryant victory No. 300.

Nebraska 35, Florida St. 26: The Seminoles are smarting from last week's upset; the Huskers shine at home.

Ohio St. 42, UCLA 21: They can just pretend they are playing in the Rose Bowl.

Southern California 36, Arizona St. 17: Trojans make sure that the frisky but troubled Sun Devils aren't spoilers.

South Carolina 33, North Carolina St. 17: After Southern Cal and Michigan, the Wolfpack will look like home cooking.

Pittsburgh 30, Maryland 22: Formidable Pitt finally got over the magazine cover jitters against Temple.

Notre Dame 25, Michigan St. 23: The Fighting Irish are coming off a week's rest.

Texas 38, Rice 6: In the Southwest, nobody closes the gates of mercy.

Washington 30, Oklahoma St. 18: The Huskies may have trouble snapping back from surprise loss to Oregon.

North Carolina 27, Georgia Tech 15: The Tar Heels tighten up their pass defense to escape this one.

Syracuse 28, Kansas 14: The Orangemen's Joe Morris carries the ball in the tradition of Jim Brown, Ernie Davis and Larry Conka.

Army 17, Harvard 10: The leaves on the Plains never looked so golden.

Stanford 37, San Jose St. 14: "Upon what meat doth the Stanfords feed that they hath grown so great?"

Michigan 20, California 17: Bo Schembechler applies quick breaks to the Wolverines' surprising slide.

Texas A&M 20, Texas Tech 15: In close matchups, you always take the home team in the Southwest.

Young Scholars Cope With Remodeling Progress

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Buried in the 27-acre Watts Hospital complex is the home of 150 of the state's most gifted and talented students — the first class of the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics.

Although they've been on the campus for nearly a month, the students still must dodge construction work and walk through ghostly, vacant halls to reach several refurbished classrooms.

The physical construction reflects the work that already is being done on the school's curriculum. Biology and physics laboratories are being revamped to provide facilities for new courses. The hospital's old surgery room is being transformed into an art studio.

Soon more hospital rooms will be updated for the 150 additional students who will be accepted at the school next year.

But the students seem oblivious to the construction work and eager for the expansion of the courses.

"We knew there would be some rough edges in construction and those sure have surfaced," said Charles Eilber, school director. "But the big thing is the human element. They are coping very well with leaky plumbing and jumping from one classroom to another, one step ahead of the painters."

"The students seem to realize that all you need is a teacher and a class to learn," said Braughn Taylor, school development officer.

And in the case of this residential high school, both teachers and students are the cream of the crop.

More than 900 11th-graders were nominated by themselves, their teachers, parents or school officials to attend the school. A selection committee narrowed the field to 73 boys and 77 girls on the basis of interviews, high school performance, standardized test scores and written evaluations.

Of the students, 24 percent belong to a minority. They represent 63 of the state's 100 counties.

Eilber and Taylor agreed the selection criteria have worked well. They said not one student has left the school.

"We expected a little difficulty, but we haven't lost any student," Taylor said. "They have found they have so much in common with the other students here."

Eilber agreed. "The students have found each other in the best sense of the word," he said. "They are beginning to form a community."

Next year, the school will add 150 11th-graders as the present class becomes the school's first 12th-graders. Plans provide for the school to grow to include 900 11th- and 12th-graders in six years.

Currently all the students are from North Carolina but eventually, up to 15 percent of a class may come from out of state. Unlike state students, they will be required to pay tuition.

Taylor said school administrators believe the cost per child to attend the school is about $5,000. Much of that money comes from the state, but the school also depends on private contributions to meet expenses.

The selection of teachers was equally competitive. Approximately 500 teachers applied for the 15 available positions. More than half of those selected have Ph.D. degrees. The teachers are paid a supplement to raise their salary above that of other public school teachers.

"We wanted someone who had a Ph.D.-level education, which is basically a research degree, but we didn't want someone research oriented," Taylor said. "We wanted someone teacher oriented, someone who was compassionate about teenagers' problems."

Seven resident advisers also were selected to live in the dormitories with the students.

Most of the students seem to be responding to the hard work and discipline with enthusiasm.

"This has really opened a lot of doors for me," said Ellis Smith of Elizabeth City. "The courses are a lot more difficult but this way I'll get a lot more credit in college."

Smith referred to the fact that most of the classes are for advanced-placement students. Such courses are considered in college placement.

But advanced courses mean more studying. "You really have to plan your time," said Janeen Vanhook of Hillsborough.

"You have to know what you want out of life and be ready to work for it," agreed Ruchadina Waddell of Wilmington.

But Lisa Sykes, 16, of Nashville said it's easier to study when living in a dormitory where everyone else has to study. "I wouldn't study for three hours at home," she said.

The students are not allowed to have cars on campus and curfews are set. They're allowed to go home every other weekend if they want. And most said they have not wanted to go home more often.

"It's really great getting the chance of being off on your own," said Eric Roush of Manteo.

The residential aspect of the high school is necessary to insure a complete learning experience, Taylor said. "It could be very frustrating to go back home to a high school (after taking advanced courses) with nothing to follow up," he said.

While at the school, the students' time is firmly structured. They have classes — which include Latin, computer problems, pre-calculus and American studies — from 7:45 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Each student has some free time between classes for lunch and study breaks.

Every Wednesday classes are suspended while students do chores around the school, like mopping and office typing. The students also do community work like tutoring on Wednesdays.

So far, Taylor said, there have been no discipline problems and no student has refused to help out with chores.

There are two classes on Wednesday night, and throughout the week, the computer center and library are open at night and teachers are available for tutoring.

Some of the students will be interns at the Duke Medical Center. Eilber said the internship will expose students to medical research.

At the end of the school year, the students will be required to demonstrate proficiency in computer language and foreign language. The computer is used to do homework in both math and science courses.

There is no gymnasium at the school for recreation but there are plans for one in the future. In the meantime, students walk to nearby parks or are bused to a local facility.

Taylor said most of the students have welcomed the heavy workload. "But you hear some complaining," he said. "Some have never studied before because they didn't have to. They don't know how to pace themselves."

But he says the early discipline in science and math is needed, "because if they're going to make a major breakthrough in this field, they're going to do it before they're 30."

"In the humanities it doesn't quite work that way. You need to read so many books and that takes time, years," he said. The idea for the school was formed 15 years ago, when Gov. Terry Sanford established the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem. The governor envisioned three schools to specialize in the arts, math and science and the humanities.

The General Assembly appropriated funds for planning the math and science school in 1977 and the 1979 Legislature appropriated enough money to begin operation.

Eilber said the school will serve as a model and teachers from across the state will visit for observing classes and for attending seminars. The school also may open during the summer to offer courses for other students in the state.

The Durham location was selected because of the nearby colleges — the University of North Carolina, Duke University and North Carolina State University — and the Research Triangle Institute, which has provided both development funds and guidance.

Durham County donated the $8 million Watts Hospital facility, which was emptied three years before. The state determined it would be cheaper to renovate the historic landmark rather than to build a new facility.

The school will be dedicated in ceremonies Oct. 9-11.

"We have accomplished an awful lot in a relatively short time," Eilber said. "But it's just a beginning and we have many continuing needs. We do have a commitment to take what we learn here and share it in a variety of ways with other teachers throughout the state. We want to make sure this school is a model."

Hunt Opens $300,000 Broadcast Campaign

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has launched a $300,000 broadcast advertising campaign leading to the Nov. 4 general election that touts his record on education, energy and jobs but virtually ignores Republican opponent I. Beverly Lake Jr.

"It's a simple, straightforward message that Jim Hunt is a leader and he wants us to move toward high-technology industry," said Hunt campaign manager Joseph Grimsley. "There's no subtle message there."

The Hunt commercials began this week and will be aired over all commercial television stations in North Carolina and two in South Carolina with a coverage area in this state.

Seven new commercials were made for the fall campaign. They and others shown prior to the spring primary will be used during the coming weeks.

Hunt's commercials were shown to reporters at a news conference Wednesday.

The governor, announcing plans for an industry-hunting trip to California's "Silicon Valley" computer-technology center in November, took issue Wednesday with Lake's call for new legislation to control school busing.

"I am satisfied every local school board is doing everything it can to minimize the amount of time children are spending on school buses, consistent with what the law requires and with fairness," Hunt said.

Lake said Monday he would do everything possible to eliminate busing to achieve racial balances in public schools.

Asked to comment on Lake's statement, Hunt said, "I think most people would like to see it minimized. I don't think people want to go back to the old segregated school days. They know that that's not right."

Asked if he supported legislation as a tool for integrating schools, Hunt said, "That's not a matter we have a choice in. The courts have spoken, and it's a matter of whether or not the law is going to be followed."

The governor said he and other state industry-hunters would make the trip to California Nov. 17 regardless of the outcome of the Nov. 4 general election.

Hunt has committed himself to attracting microelectronics and other computer industries to North Carolina, and the trip to California is part of that campaign.

"This may well be the most important industrial-development trip ever taken by officials in North Carolina," he said Wednesday.

School Media Meet Held

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — "Eighty and Beyond" was the topic of the first annual Conference for school media specialists held this weekend in Louisville, Ky. The conference's main concern was to look at relevant issues of the eighties and how they affect the school media programs across the country.

Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford, who won the Distinguished Service Award for School Administrators, was involved in several forums in the conference dealing with administrators and school media programs and how they can become a winning combination. Alford also addressed the groups on techniques for obtaining administrative support for media programs.

Edwin Newman, NBC correspondent, was keynote speaker for the opening sessions. Also included were presenters from across the country who had gathered to discuss the future in the area of school libraries in America.

Seek Minorities

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Board of Education has been urged to step up its encouragement of minority hiring by the community college system.

Prezell R. Robinson, president of St. Augustine's College, told the board "no stone should be unturned to uncover some qualified minorities" for the college system.

According to the college system, there are five blacks and 183 whites in administrative and professional positions in the system.

"That's a very small percentage," said Robinson, a member of the Board of Education. "It's so small it's embarrassing."

Robinson's comments came during a board meeting where it was announced two administrative positions had been filled by white candidates.

Seeks Bend S.C. Laws For Adoption Action

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — A 70-year-old state law bars blacks from adopting white children in South Carolina.

But Clarence Evans and his wife, Mary, want him to adopt her children from an earlier marriage despite the law and opposition from the children's natural father.

Evans, 38, and his 31-year-old wife married two years ago after their first marriage broke up. He brought a son, Daryl, to the marriage and she brought two sons and three daughters.

"This is not a spur of the moment thing," Mrs. Evans said. "It's something the children have wanted. He's been their father. Why shouldn't it be legal?"

Evans has filed suit to win permanent custody of the children from their natural father, Donald Gingrich, of Harrisburg, Pa.

Gingrich said, "The kids belong to me, and if they want children of their own, why don't they have their own kids?"

"Since the kids been with her, they got them all brainwashed and everything else," the 38-year-old cab driver said in a telephone interview from his home in Pennsylvania Wednesday.

His mother, Mary Ellen Gingrich, said that her son will not agree to the adoption.

"He doesn't approve of them being brought up" by Evans, she said. Mrs. Gingrich added that Gingrich's objections to the adoption have nothing to do with race. "They're his children," she said.

A 70-year-old state law makes it illegal for a black to be given permanent custody of a white child.

"It's clear that the statute is unconstitutional," says Roberta Wright, an attorney with Piedmont Legal Services who is representing the couple. "The statute doesn't say a white can't adopt a black. The United States Supreme Court says you cannot discriminate against people like that."

Ms. Wright hopes a family court judge will agree when the case comes up, perhaps as soon as next month. Though her main objective is to win the adoption, Ms. Wright says, she would also like to see the law declared unconstitutional.

Mark Dillard, spokesman for the state attorney general's office, says while he is aware of no similar cases in South Carolina, current legal opinion on the law favors Evans.

Evans moved to Rock Hill and left no word of their whereabouts. The family now lives in a modest brick home in the predominantly black neighborhood College Downs.

The children say they have been ostracized and taunted by some classmates, but Mrs. Evans said the family has grown immune to what others think of their situation.

"They can't live our lives for us," she said. "We know what we want and I'm not going to let anybody interfere with it."

Okays Hearing On 'Wilmington 10'

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court in Richmond has agreed to hear arguments next week on a petition claiming North Carolina unjustly convicted and denied constitutional rights to members of the Wilmington 10, the United Church of Christ said Wednesday.

The group. Their conviction was upheld by state and federal appellate courts and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the case. U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree refused in Raleigh last June to reopen the case.

Now the case is going to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond.

"We are pressing for an unequivocal declaration of the innocence of the Wilmington 10, restoration of their citizenship rights and the lifting of the burden of criminal stigma from them," said the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Cobb, national director of the Commission for Racial Justice.

This past March, 55 members of the U.S. House of Representatives filed a friend-of-the-court brief on behalf of the defendants. They contend the trial was conducted in a "racially charged atmosphere ... and was so replete with prejudice and error that it is literally not possible to discuss them all."

According to a 1972 attorney general's staff memorandum, the statute "would undoubtedly be held to be unconstitutional." The memo cites a similar Texas statute overturned by civil court.

Also, they have filed complaints against Gingrich for nonsupport of the children, according to Gingrich's mother. She said the support payments stopped after the

NEWSPAPER MERGER
LONDON (AP) — The Evening Standard is taking over the failing Evening News soon in a merger that will leave London with only one afternoon newspaper. An estimated 1,700 employees are expected to lose their jobs on the News, which has been losing up to $19.2 million a year.

The Wilmington 10 — nine black men and a white woman — gained international attention during their prosecution on charges stemming from the firebombing of a grocery store during racial unrest in Wilmington, N.C., in 1971.

The Rev. Ben Chavis, a member of the 10, is an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ. At the time of the firebombing he was representing the church's Virginia-Carolina Commission on Racial Justice.

Each of the 10 has been paroled from prison, but a church spokesman said it was seeking exoneration of

Schmidt Appears Assured Of Re-Election Sunday

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt appears sure of victory in Sunday's national election after a campaign marked by tit-for-tat insults and an unsuccessful last-minute attempt by opponent Franz Josef Strauss to make the Oktoberfest bombing a campaign issue.

As the race to control Parliament entered its final week, the news magazine Der Spiegel summed up the campaign: "Instead of solid argument, they have offered the voter a rough and shabby mud-slinging match. The voter has turned away in disgust."

Despite Der Spiegel's view, most of West Germany's polling institutes project the Social Democrats and their liberal partners, the Free Democrats, will hold a commanding lead over the Christian Democrats and their Bavarian affiliate, Strauss' Christian Social Union, when the votes are tallied Oct. 5.

A final poll published in last Thursday's edition of Stern magazine showed that Strauss' conservative group remained the single largest party with 44.5 percent but had dropped half a percentage point since mid-September. The Free Democrats gained two points to rise to 9.2, leaving their Socialist coalition partners with 43.5 for a combined 52.7 percent.

In the last Bundestag, the lower house of Parliament, there were 214 Social Democrats, 39 Free Democrats, 189 Christian Democrats, 53 Christian Socials and one independent, plus 22 deputies from West Berlin with limited voting rights. This gave Schmidt a majority of at least 10.

In its final weeks, the campaign has seen two of West Germany's most experienced, respected and intelligent politicians become embroiled in a name-calling contest that has overshadowed the issues.

Their differences over foreign policy and detente, internal security, the economy and the national debt have been submerged in the personality duel between the 65-year-old minister-president of Bavaria and the 61-year-old chancellor.

Strauss accused Schmidt of "intellectual neutralism" and charged that he was both a "peacenik" and "war chanceller," a "counterfeiter," "pension swindler" and "the chief executive of a Marxist leadership."

Schmidt labeled Strauss "a power plant without a fuse" who makes wavering statements and "a man of affairs and scandal."

Despite his many years at various ministerial posts with responsibilities for atomic energy, finance and defense, Strauss has not been able to shake his image as a hustler, tainted by scandals. He was forced to resign as defense minister in 1962 when it was shown that he lied to Parliament about the arrest of four journalists.

Since he was chosen to lead the conservative forces in the election, he has become the target of a vociferous "Stop Strauss" attack from the radical left, which published pamphlets portraying him as a purveyor of "reaction, fascism and war."

He has been caricatured as a vampire, a bloody butcher, a hatchet-carrying Nazi storm trooper, King Kong, and Adolf Hitler.

Riots have broken out during some of his campaign stops. At others he handles hecklers with flippant, good-humored retorts.

Whether he is drinking beer among his beloved Bavarians or addressing a well-dressed gathering of Christian Democrats in Cologne, Strauss pounds out his message: Schmidt flirts with the Communists in the Soviet bloc, steering West

Germany on a neutralist course that strains ties with its most important ally, the United States; the strength of the West German mark is threatened by the nation's $250 billion debt; West Germany must use nuclear power to survive; it must support a powerful military force.

Schmidt appears in television commercials seated behind an executive desk to emphasize his authority and experience as a former minister of the economy, finance and defense. He warns against "impetuous decisions," hinting that Strauss lacks self restraint and is too impulsive to guide West Germany in international affairs.

He emphasizes his "stable, firm and steady" six years of leadership that he says has resulted in an inflation rate of only 5 percent, a projected growth rate of 2.5 percent and unemployment held under 4 percent.

"Better a thousand times to talk with our neighbors than once to shoot," he repeats over and over in his defense of detente. "The man who wants to take us back to the Cold War is endangering your lives."

S. Africa White Enclave Inside Black Homeland

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer
MAFEKING, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Gladys Crewe, who lived through the siege of this town during the Boer War at the turn of the century, says she doesn't expect life to change much now that the all-whites community is part of the black homeland of Bophuthatswana.

"We've never had any trouble," said 89-year-old "Granny" Crewe, as the spry, white-haired lady is known to blacks and whites alike. "We've always been friends (with the Tswanas)."

With Prime Minister P.W. Botha of South Africa and President Lucas Mangope of Bophuthatswana wearing morning coats and homburgs, Mafeking was transferred amid pomp and ceremony on Sept. 19 to the sovereignty of the black homeland.

With the transfer, the English rendering of the town's name — Mafeking — was changed locally to Mafikeng to conform with the Tswana word for "place of stones." The dusty town got its name in the 1850s from the great rock outcrops on the banks of the Molopo River near South Africa's border with Botswana.

The establishment of black homelands such as Bophuthatswana is part of the South African government's so-called "grand apartheid" scheme, designed in 1959 by Dr. Hendrik F. Verwoerd, then prime minister. It envisages 10 economically viable black states independent from "white" South Africa.

Since 1976 three homelands — Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda — have become "independent," but all remain economically dependent on South Africa and are recognized by no other government.

Under grand apartheid, South Africa's 19-million black majority would eventually be sent to "independent" homelands according to tribe and language.

There would then be no reason, argue advocates of the scheme, to give them the right to vote or citizenship in South Africa as a whole. The political supremacy of the 4.4-million white minority would thus be preserved.

Mafeking, a prosperous rail center with a white population of about 6,000, was not included in Bophuthatswana when the patchwork-quilt homeland — consisting of six separate enclaves — was given independence Dec. 6, 1977.

But there was, pressure from the town's white businessmen to incorporate. They were worried they would lose all their black clientele to nearby Mmabatho, the Bophuthatswana capital where South Africa's four-percent sales tax does not apply.

Mafeking's whites retain their South African citizenship. But the town's new status automatically scraps apartheid, an Afrikaans-language word literally meaning apartness, or racial separation. Before the multiracial transfer ceremony, all the "whites only" signs were taken down and bars, restaurants and hotels for the first time were open to everybody.

The only blacks in town now are those who come here to work from outlying black areas or are employed as live-in servants in white homes.

"We'll just have to adjust," commented Freddie Olivier, 62, a hotel owner who also tends the bar.

Otherwise, life will go on much as before for the town's whites, thanks to an agreement allowing white schools to remain so indefinitely and the South African police and staff of the Magistrates Court to keep their jobs.

White civil servants and teachers were at least partly influenced in their decision to stay by the promise of free housing, water and light.

Joe Podbrey, editor of the Mafeking Mail, said only about 100 white families left the town over the past couple of years because of its uncertain future.

The experience of Mafeking, by far the most thriving town in Bophuthatswana, may prove a powerful propaganda tool for the South African government to convince "white" towns that being excised from South Africa need not be painful.

Current government thinking is that the impoverished homelands would get an economic stimulus and more credibility abroad through the incorporation of selected "white" towns near their borders.

About 5,000 residents watched "with a bewildered sort of excitement" — as one South African reporter put it — as Mafeking was formally transferred from one government to another.

The ceremony — which included a flyover by South African air force jets — took place in front of the freshly painted Victorian-style museum that glorifies the 217-day defense of the town by British Col. Robert Baden-Powell against the Dutch-descended Boers at the turn of the century.

Granny Crewe, then 8 years old, says she doesn't remember much of the siege, except that she played quite happily in the "women's laager," an encircled camp where some 630 of Mafeking's women and children lived.

But young boys were formed into a cadet corps used by the military to run messages. The enterprise was so successful that it inspired Baden-Powell to form the Boy Scouts years later in Britain.

The siege of Mafeking so captured the attention of Britons during the Boer War that its relief on May 17, 1900, triggered joyous demonstrations in London's Piccadilly and other city centers.

Baden-Powell became a national hero and later a lord, and a new word — "mafficking" — was added to the English language to mean unrestrained celebrating.

The celebrating marking of the transfer of the historic town to black rule was more subdued. Apprehensive whites said they expect "things to go well at first," but some suggested they might leave "after a few years."

GMC Announces Price Increases

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has announced a price increase averaging 2.5 percent or $238 more for its 1981-model passenger cars, effective today.

The increase in the suggested retail prices of 1981 models was the second in six weeks for the No. 1 automaker. On Aug. 15, GM posted list prices on its new models that averaged 1.7 percent more than final prices on this year's models.

"We took our allowable (price) increases," said Cliff Merriott, a GM spokesman. The increases, within federal price guidelines, total about a 7 percent average for the fiscal year that ended Tuesday.

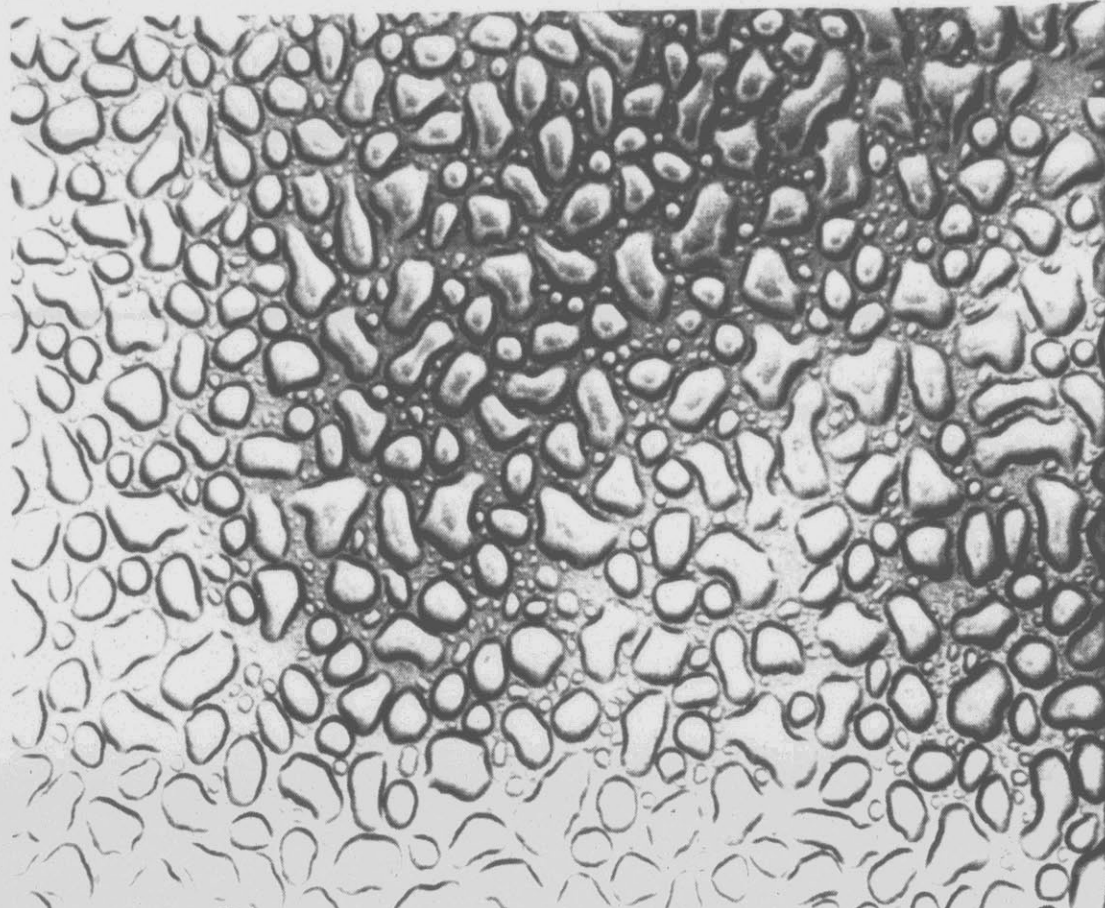

"I have tried many diets and many ways of losing weight. When Professional Diet Control came to Hickory and moved across the street from Phil's Pharmacy, I decided to try their diet program. When I started I weighed 220 pounds and was 41 inches in the waist. After six weeks, only 42 days, my weight was 179 pounds and I was 35 inches in the waist. Professional Diet Control program was the easiest diet to follow and one that did not affect my energy nor did I feel hungry. I highly recommend this program to anyone who is over-weight."
PHIL SWANN

This is just one more testimonial from one of our satisfied customers. Professional Diet Control has been in North Carolina two years and we are seeing approximately 1,000 people a day. If you're serious about losing weight, this is a safe, fast and effective way to do it. Come in to Professional Diet Control today. Help us celebrate our 2nd Anniversary with a special savings. You can reach your weight goal quickly, safely, and at a price you can afford.

AMOEBA CONVENTION? — It looks like a gathering of amoebae for an annual convention, but in reality the water drops formed on the roof of a car from the misty, drizzling rain form a bizarre pattern that photographs well. The mist and drizzle were a part of the weather picture throughout most of North Carolina for the past three days. (AP Laserphoto)

7 REASONS TO SELL TO COIN & RING MAN.

In the past few months Greenville has seen several new gold & silver dealers come & go. But Coin & Ring Man is still here because we stand apart from some of those other dealers. Why?

1. Because we're a permanent part of your community.
2. Because we do not sell anything, we only buy, and our business puts money into the local economy.
3. Because WE ARE INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF THE CONSUMER, and we encourage regulations & business practices that will protect & aid the seller as well as the buyer.
4. Because our buyers are courteous professionals who must pass a rigid training program before they are prepared to serve you.
5. Because we are not interested in buying stolen goods & we cooperate fully with all law enforcement agencies in catching thieves & recovering stolen merchandise.
6. Because we weigh your merchandise on official scales & quote you a price based on:
 - weight
 - daily market price (according to quotations received direct from N.Y. & Chicago at least 3-4 times daily)
 - degree of purity
 - condition and type of item
7. Because our REPUTATION FOR HONESTY, SERVICE, INTEGRITY, and fair prices has made us one of the largest gold & silver dealers in N.C.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A generous and spirited person is willing to go along with your ideas and give you the support you need. Your vitality and health can be increased with more exercise now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to go along with ideas of an associate for mutual benefit. Find the right way to have more happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be more precise with the work you have at hand and you can get much accomplished. Be wise in dealing with others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Analyze your aims and gain the support you need from others. Plan how to have greater income in the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good day to engage in activities that appeal to you. Make practical plans for the days ahead.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) State your ideas to associates and there could be more profit and efficiency in the future. Avoid a troublemaker.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Confer with business experts and make sure monetary affairs are well handled. Don't waste time on unimportant matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen to the suggestions of a trusted adviser and follow through on them. Adopt a philosophy that could be good for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Attend to important duties ahead of you and get rid of possible frustration. Allow time for recreational activities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you adopt a different attitude, you can make much progress now. A group affair can be helpful to you now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can be more efficient at regular routines if you get the backing of higher-ups. Strive for increased happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate on how you can be more productive in the future. Use good sense in handling important business matters.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put that precision and artistry you possess to work and improve conditions around you. Be more cooperative with others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can make a big success of life because of the ability to concentrate on big issues. Be sure to encourage when doing a good job, and thereby raise the incentive. Religious training is important.

'Johnny Carson' Of Hispanic Viewers

By BETSY BROWN
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A fourth-generation American named Val De La O is building a reputation as the "Spanish Johnny Carson," each week putting together an hour of music, comedy and talk show chit-chat, all in Spanish. The "Val De La O Show" is the only syndicated television variety show produced in Spanish in the United States. De La-O is a very big fish in a very small pond, but he says he would welcome competition. "I'm opening the door," he said the day after his show went on the air in Miami, a city with a 52 percent Hispanic population. "It's important to Spanish people to have role models. I want younger guys to start their own shows."

People who count people, such as the Census Bureau and Immigration and Naturalization Service, estimate the nation's Spanish-speaking population at between 17 million and 24 million people, or roughly 10 percent of all Americans. Hispanics are expected soon to become the country's largest minority.

De La O's show is syndicated to 32 markets, including New York, Miami, Chicago, Milwaukee, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Although on most shows everything is in Spanish, English is occasionally spoken, as when Kirk Douglas, Muhammad Ali and Don Knotts were guests. And when it is, "We don't apologize," De La O said. "After all, we are in America."

That's the point of his show: It's made in the United States.

Most Spanish programming seen here is part of the Spanish International Network, and made in Mexico. But De La O contends that Mexican shows do not relate to the American Hispanic. For example, programs originating in Mexico City often mention cities in Mexico.

"But I can't relate to that. Now, if they're talking about Kansas City, Chicago, Wichita Falls, that I can relate to," De La O said.

He also feels Mexican programming is too formal for American tastes, but conversely, his "casual levity" has made his show popular even in Ecuador.

In the United States, his audience of Spanish-speaking adults includes Cubans in Miami, Puerto Ricans in New York and Mexicans in Texas.

He acknowledged his fans' diversity, "but music tends to rise above differences," he explained. "Jose Feliciano is a Cuban, but Puerto Ricans like him also; Colombians like him also."

"If we were getting into issues, we'd have to consider the differences. But when you use stars, it doesn't matter if they're Cuban or Puerto Rican. (Mexican entertainer) Tony Aguilar, for example, fills coliseums in Miami, New York, L.A., Albuquerque."

De La O, 44, is energetic and aggressive. On camera, he is charming, cordial and flashily dressed. He obviously enjoys what he does.

As a student at the University of New Mexico, he worked at a local Spanish-language radio station translating the news into Spanish, then announcing, singing and performing.

"I got the bug," he said. De La O noticed the lack of Spanish-language TV programming and decided he had what it took to fill the void. He approached station after station, trying to sell his concept and himself, but "they wouldn't have me," he said, admitting that a 22-year-old with no television experience was asking a lot.

In 1969, an Albuquerque station took a chance on him, and he began producing the "Val De La O Show." It was locally popular, and De La O began thinking about expansion.

In 1976, his efforts paid off. That year, the show branched from its flagship station in Albuquerque to three stations, to seven by 1978, to 20 in 1979 and now 32.

"It was an untapped market," he said. "The Spanish population is like a sleeping giant. Advertisers are finally realizing this."

De La O's headquarters in Albuquerque, where he also used to sell insurance, are small but he says his studio facilities are "just as good as some in New York and Los Angeles." He remains "in Albuquerque because it's cheaper to produce the show here — and "this is where I live."

De La O says he has no plans to seek a spot on a major network's roster. He says he's also content "to avoid prime time slots: 'I'd rather be on the fringe.'"

SPANISH JOHNNY CARSON — Val De La O of Albuquerque is a pioneer. His is the only syndicated television variety show to be produced in the United States. He says it is important to Spanish people to "have role models. I want younger guys to start their own shows." (AP Laserphoto)

New Ionesco Play Has Opening Amid Storm

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A new Eugene Ionesco play, "Variations on the Same Theme: Journeys Among the Dead," opened Wednesday night in the Guggenheim Museum despite both Ionesco and the stage designer threatening to cancel the whole thing.

The museum is host to the play through Nov. 2 as part of its show of Israeli artist Yaakov Agam's paintings and sculptures which look different depending upon where the viewer is in relation to them.

In the round basement theater, a viewer sits in a nest of straight chairs with ballbearing rollers for silent movement. Narrow stages are joined, side by side, around the walls.

This viewer liked both the play, which was easy to follow though it might sound complex, and liked the added interest of scooting around and looking at different stages.

Reports came from Paris that Ionesco was upset because Agam was interfering with his director, Paul Berman. Ionesco also said that his play was written before Agam came on the scene and it was not written for this particular way of staging.

Congratulations if you made your contract, but a special salute to you if you spotted our little trap.

Dwight Schultz was excellent in the difficult role of the distraught main character, Jean. Jean is wandering in Purgatory, looking for his mother, finding first various other relatives and friends. He does it in the fashion of a dream, where he may relive a memory, where his age may change or a person may shift from mother to grandmother or wife to sister as the dream moves along.

Jean rails at his father for deserting his mother and marrying again. But he feels guilty — and denies it, spouting different excuses — because he took money from his father and didn't write to his mother. He also had won literary prizes but now doubts the worth of his writing. He apparently committed suicide and now wishes he hadn't; he'd like to try a comeback as a writer.

Jean Dalrymple, Sidney Frank and Berman produced.

Ionesco is a playwright in the "theater of the absurd" school, in which life is absurd. Vulnerable man is looking for his place in the universe and the universe is senseless, without a plan to fit into.

When theatergoers first saw those plays, the theme seemed hard to figure out. Now, one's approach is to look for a "new" layer under the meaning that now reveals itself easily and to be disappointed when one isn't found. That would be easy to do with this play.

However, on reflection, it is interesting enough to follow — and sometimes identify with — Jean and his "Variations on the Same Theme."

Unusual Auction From Royal Box

LONDON (AP) — From the royal box and the balcony, the bids rained down. And on the stage of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, the items came and went — including a rhinestone-studded bicycle that belonged to singer Elton John and wine sent by the royal family.

It was London's most unusual auction of the year, a gala evening Wednesday to raise money for new backstage facilities at the 122-year-old opera house.

When it was all over, the auction had fetched $191,256. Backers of the project hope to raise $21.6 million.

In the royal box, Princess Margaret and her nephew, Prince Charles, took a lively interest in the bidding, particularly when two cases of wine made from grapes grown in her Kensington Palace garden came up for bid. A dozen bottles of the 1976 vintage went for $840 and a second lot sold for $792.

This is another test of your skill at handling the dummy. But let's warn you, things might not be what they seem.

The auction is quite straightforward. South's decision to continue on to game is a little aggressive, but his cards rate to work well because they are behind the overcaller. West leads a low club to his partner's ace. How would you plan the play?

Don't say we didn't warn you. We've slipped in a sneaky question. You cannot decide how you intend to play the hand until you know what East leads to the second trick. If he's a cooperative fellow, he will return a club and force out the ace of trumps. Draw the last trumps and take a losing spade finesse. A diamond will go away on the high spade and

But what if East is unsporing enough to return a diamond at trick two? Now you cannot afford to ruff a club and start on trumps. East will win and play another diamond, forcing out your last stopper. When you finish drawing trumps and lose the spade finesse, the defenders will cash a diamond to defeat you one trick.

The winning solution is to take the spade finesse before you touch trumps. When East wins and returns another diamond, you must hope for a 3-3 spade division. Take two high spades, sluffing your diamond loser. Now ruff a club and begin your attack on trumps, and the contract rolls home.

Congratulations if you made your contract, but a special salute to you if you spotted our little trap.

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Visigoths have overrun that tiny outpost of wit and original thought on morning television, "The David Letterman Show." At the end of this month, NBC will replace Letterman with two game shows.

Canned avarice prevails. In announcing the "Letterman Show" demise, NBC programming chief Branson Tartikoff blithely reckoned that Letterman was in the wrong time period. The young star may return sometime, perhaps in "Saturday Night Live's" once-a-month vacancy.

But on the important stuff. Starting Oct. 27, NBC will offer in Letterman's stead two new game shows, Tartikoff said, "offering money and fabulous prizes." Of course.

"Las Vegas Gambit" and "Blockbusters" are the new NBC entries in television's onward march.

In its current issue, Panorama, the television magazine, features a story on the ABC-Charlie's Angels' "Spelling-Goldberg scandal," "Angegate," as it is sometimes called.

The scandal involves alleged under-the-table kickbacks from ABC to Spelling-Goldberg for "Charlie's Angels," enabling the producers to make money on the show without sharing their profits with their partners, including Robert Wagner and Natalie Wood.

There are no revelations in the story, written under a pseudonym by a screenwriter. But there is an interesting suggestion that, since under-the-table payments to producers and the cheating of profit participants are considered part of the Hollywood game, someone must be out to get ABC.

"The real question," Panorama quotes a producer as saying, "is why everybody is yelling and screaming about something that was a fact of life for 15 years, maybe more."

"Could it possibly be ... that there are persons unknown who want to make it easy for the FCC to lift a few of ABC's station licenses? Could it be that someone is trying to hurt ABC?"

The story doesn't say who that someone might be, or why someone in the industry, but people are guessing. Copies of the magazine were on the desks of more than a few ABC executives on Monday morning.

Paranoia, anyone? Two independent stations, WOR in New York and KCOP in Los Angeles, have purchased broadcast rights to the Oscar-winning Vietnam film "The Deerhunter" after the networks turned it down, deeming it too violent.

Part of the networks' thinking, no doubt, was the centrality of a bloody gambling game involving Russian roulette. The game is completely bound up with the storyline — occurring four times — and wouldn't easily yield to judicious editing.

WOR's general manager, Robert Fennimore, feels otherwise.

"I reviewed the film this weekend, to refresh my memory," he says, "and I'll tell you — it's done so well, the violence is really no different than what we see now. Look at 'Shogun,' they chopped off a guy's head in that..."

Several, actually. But it's arguable whether a costume fiction about feudal Japan would have the same effect on impressionable minds as the riveting violence, physical and psychological, of "The Deerhunter."

Anyway, the question begs the real point, which is: Both WOR and KCOP intend to broadcast "The Deerhunter" on election night, when the networks are tied up with vote returns.

It is a traditionally big ratings evening for independent stations. The violence WOR and KCOP are principally interested in is the bloodying of their network rivals.

Wayne Newton; Casino-Owner

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Wayne Newton, who spent more than 20 years as a regular entertainer at Las Vegas nightclubs, has officially taken on a new role as casino owner.

Newton welcomed dozens of well-wishers Wednesday at the official opening of the casino at the Aladdin Hotel, which he has purchased for $85 million.

The event ended an 83-day shutdown for the casino. The Nevada Gaming Commission ordered the casino closed after the hotel corporation and several of its officers were convicted of hiding the identities of its owners.

Some of the 1,500 people laid off by the July 10 closing cheered as Newton announced "the casino is officially open" and ceremonially spun a roulette wheel.

"It's a wonderful feeling," Newton said. Numerous attempts by Newton to purchase the Aladdin fell through before final approval for the entertainer and his partner, Las Vegas gaming executive Ed Torres, came through five days ago.

A solar physics expert, Gibson became a scientist astronaut in 1965 but left the space agency between 1974 and early 1977 to serve as a staff scientist and consultant in private industry.

Again Leaving Space Corps

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Dr. Edward G. Gibson, a scientist-astronaut on the 84-day Skylab 4 mission in 1973-74, is leaving the astronaut corps for a second time.

The Johnson Space Center announced Wednesday that Gibson will leave Oct. 31 to become advanced systems manager for the TRW Defense and Space Systems Group in Redondo Beach, Calif.

Probe Crime Role In Show Business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The FBI is investigating possible criminal involvement in the entertainment industry, including allegations of fraud concerning the "Charlie's Angels" television series, the Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions.

"Allegations have been made regarding possible criminal influence, or racketeering in the entertainment industry," FBI spokesman John Hoos said. "Our initial step is to conduct a preliminary inquiry into whether these allegations are true."

If the allegations prove true, the FBI will launch a formal investigation that could lead to federal prosecution by the U.S. attorney in Los Angeles, Hoos said.

He would not say whether the allegations were linked to the "Charlie's Angels" case in which investors Robert Wagner and Natalie Wood and two writers allegedly were defrauded of $1.5 million in profits.

The newspaper, however, reported that the FBI held a lengthy interview with former ABC-TV lawyer Jennifer Martin, who first alleged that Spelling-Goldberg Productions and ABC-TV defrauded the actor and actress, who are mar-

NEW YORK (AP) — Trailways bus passengers who spend the regular $97.15 for cross-country fare soon may be able to buy a return ticket for only $1, the bus line says.

The fare would be valid through Jan. 30, James Kerrigan, chief executive officer of Trailways Inc., said Tuesday. Tickets will be sold as soon as the Interstate Commerce Commission grants approval, he said.

Life seems to be turning into a giant warning label.

There's a danger sign at every corner these days. In the air we breathe, the food we eat, the drugs we take. Consider this label:

"Caution: Not meant for puncture wounds, serious burns or cuts. If redness or swelling develops, consult physician promptly. Protect from light."

The product: petroleum jelly.

The label on a spray can of furniture polish has a dual purpose. First, reassurance: "Use with confidence. Contains no fluorocarbons claimed to harm the ozone layer."

Then, warning: "Caution: Do not use near fire or flame. Do not set or store container where temperature exceeds 120 degrees Fahrenheit as container may burst. Do not puncture or incinerate. Do not spray or use on floors. Keep out of reach of children."

The latest alert involves toxic shock syndrome, a rare, but sometimes fatal disease associated with the use of tampons. The Food and Drug Administration has asked manufacturers to label tampons with a warning of possible dangers.

A more familiar label is the sign on cigarette packages, prompted by a 1964 report: "Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health."

A call to the FDA on Tuesday to ask just how many products are required to carry warning labels was answered with confusion. "Literally hundreds." The agency regulates six separate areas. "You'll have to be more specific."

How about drugs? The FDA's Ed Nida said "almost all over-the-counter drugs" carry warning labels. Most prescription drugs do not, the warnings go to the physicians rather than to the patients.

"Our biggest problem is getting people to read the label," Nida said. "If we could get one thing across to consumers — read the label — we'd figure our work was done. All we'd have to do is watch the manufacturers."

Nida is optimistic, however. "Consumers are picking up on the language of the medical field," he said. "Side effects' is not a term that's an exclusive property of doctors any more."

In recent months, the FDA has announced that warning labels will be required on bubble bath. "Excessive use or prolonged exposure may cause irritation to skin and urinary tract."

It has ordered warnings on products ranging from sun-lamps to hair dyes. It warned pregnant women to curtail or stop drinking coffee, tea and colas because of a possible link between caffeine and birth defects. The agency found no scientific evidence to back up claims that Bendectin, a drug used to treat morning sickness, causes birth defects. But it recommended, nonetheless, that manufacturers include "patient package inserts" to give customers more information.

Look around the house. The skull and crossbones that used to be confined to containers of rat poison and weed killer has been replaced by fine print and has spread through the rooms. The print seems to get smaller as the warnings get

Wife's Terrified of Biopsy

My wife has been in a state of terror from the time she was told that she had to have a biopsy of her cervix. She is so positive that it's going to be cancer that she won't do anything about it. Her doctor, our daughter, and I can't do anything with her. I know that she reads your columns and I hope you can write something that will persuade her to go ahead with it. — Mr. K.T.R., Mo.

Dear Mr. R.:
The urgency of your letter prompted my immediate and direct reply to you the day I received it. I hope that, by now, your wife has been more reasonable and has followed her doctor's instructions.

I know that other readers will benefit from a liberation from irrational fears so I am repeating your letter and my answer in the hope that it will alleviate similar feelings of anxiety.

Fear is a disease, an irrational disease. Many people do a great injustice to themselves by living in a constant state of fear about illness. So sure are they that they have an incurable disease that they give up all the joys of living. It is pathetic to witness the waste of productive lives when people are consumed with uncontrollable fears.

It is not unusual for patients to react with tremendous anxiety when the word "biopsy" is mentioned. Patients are sensitive to this word which they associate with cancer. This assumption is unjustified and misleading.

Readers should know that every piece of tissue that is taken off the skin or from any organ of the body must routinely be sent to the laboratory. This is done even though the doctor, by his experience and medical judgment, may be almost certain that the biopsy report will show no cancer.

"Biopsy" simply means the removal of a small piece of tissue for meticulous study under the microscope. Only in this way can a positive identification be made of the tissue cells.

When the small portion of tissue is removed it is sent to the laboratory where it is embedded into a paraffin block. It is then cut into sections so fine that they are barely visible. A pathologist, a specialist in tissue studies, determines the exact cellular nature of the tissue.

Once the diagnosis has been made as to whether or not the specimen is benign (non-cancerous) or malignant (cancerous), treatment can begin. There are many subdivisions of tumors. Some can be removed entirely by surgery. Others may need radiotherapy and chemotherapy. The nature of the cells studied under the microscope determines the choice of treatment.

When unrealistic fears delay any procedure, there is always the possibility of inviting unnecessary complications.

Fun, Health Run Planned For Tuesday

One of six of the third annual runs for fun and health of the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Health will be held in Greenville Tuesday, Oct. 7, beginning at 5 p.m.

The run will start at the Jaycee Park, located off 264 Bypass near Eastern Elementary School, and cover 1.25 miles out Tenth Street and back. There is no entry fee and every participant will be given a certificate. The first 300 to pre-register at the Blue Cross and Blue Shield office at Pitt Plaza by tomorrow will be given t-shirts. Late registration will be open until 4:30 p.m. on race day. T-shirts must be picked up adjacent to the starting point between 4 and 5 p.m. on race day.

Co-sponsoring the race, along with the Governor's Council, is Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, assisted by the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department. Races are also being held in Raleigh, Wilmington, Greensboro, Charlotte and Asheville. The race is sanctioned by the N.C. Board of Athletics of the Athletics Congress of the U.S.A.

Bob Boal of Raleigh, 68-year-old chairman of the Governor's Council, will run in this race and greet the participants. He holds the world record for the 3,000 meter steeplechase for his age group.

The good thing about BB&T's investment certificate is the rate you can get right now. The great thing is that you can keep that rate for the next 2½ years.

That's right. If you act now, you can lock in that rate on our new 2½-year investment certificate. The available rate changes every two weeks, so hurry. Once you've bought your certificate, your rate is fixed for the full term.

The minimum deposit is just $500. Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

Is America being overwarned? "I don't think so," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group, an arm of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen Inc. Previously, said Wolfe, "the pendulum ... was stuck at the extreme of advertising only benefits ... We're now beginning to see some of the other side of the coin."

Wolfe described warning labels as "forced risk advertising." He also conceded that there is a problem in distinguishing the severity of risks. "That will get better," he said. "The whole area of labeling for consumers on risks is a new kind of thing." Advertisers of benefits have more experience and more money, he said.

Wolfe said warning labels are important to make sure consumers know how to use
