Unemployment Rate Declines; Wholesale Prices Also Down

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate declined for the second straight month and wholesale prices fell for the first time in 4½ years, the government said today in two reports that reflected an overall improvement in the nation's economy.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate declined to 7.5 percent in September, down from 7.6 percent in August and the lowest since April, when it was 7 percent.

It reported separately that the wholesale prices were down 0.2 percent in September, a sharp turnaround from a 1.5 percent increase in August and the first decline since wholesale prices fell 0.3 percent in February 1976.

The two reports could help President Carter's reelection hopes as they reflect an improving economy. They also are the last employment and wholesale price statistics before the Nov. 4 election.

However, even as statistics show the economy improving, the president on Thursday criticized the Federal Reserve Board for pushing up interest rates, an action that many economists fear could choke off the recovery from the recession.

The prime lending rate for some banks was increased Thursday to 14 percent, which raises borrowing costs to business and consumers and could discourage business activity.

The Labor Department said an additional 200,000 workers found jobs in September, mostly in the construction industry and on the nation's farms. Total employment was 97.2 million. Unemployment totaled 7.8 million workers.

Deborah Klein, a Labor Department analyst, said the drop in unemployment for the second consecutive month "might be indicating a turn" in the economy. Although unemployment had declined in August from 7.8 percent to 7.6 percent, she said a one-month drop was insufficient to establish a trend in the minds of economists but a two-month decline is more convincing.

The biggest job gains were among women, whose jobless rate dropped to 6.1 percent from 6.5 percent in August, and teen-agers, whose jobless rate dropped from 17.5 percent from 19.1 percent in August.

The unemployment rate for adult men increased slightly to 6.7 percent, up from 6.6 percent in August, while unemployment among blacks and Hispanics also rose, going to 14.2 percent and 11.3 percent, respectively. In August the jobless rate for blacks was 13.6 percent, and for Hispanics it was 10.6 percent.

The Labor Department said a normal decline in agricultural employment did not occur in September, which may have reflected the drought throughout much of the country during the summer, although an analyst said the connection could not be fully explained.

The Labor Department said the nation's industries reported that manufacturing employment rose for the second consecutive month, up 55,000 to a total of 20 million, which was still 1 million below a year earlier. It said there were significant gains in metals manufacturing and transportation industries.

In its wholesale price report, the Labor Department attributed the 0.2 percent decline in overall prices to a decline in food prices and a drop in price tags for new automobiles "as car and truck manufacturers closed out the 1980 model year with across-the-board discounts."

It said new car prices declined 4.2 percent during the month, following increases of about 2 percent in both July and August.

The department said there were also small declines for energy products, but prices for other finished goods rose 0.7 percent, about the same as in August.

A drop in food prices of 0.2 percent in September followed sharp increases of 4.4 percent in August and 3.8 percent in July and points to likely relief for consumers at supermarkets, as changes in wholesale prices usually show up at the retail level.

The wholesale price report was contained in the Labor Department's producer Price Index for finished goods. This index, which measures prices for goods ready for sale to consumers, stood in September at 248.9 of the 1967 average of 100, meaning goods priced at $100 in 1967 had increased in price to $248.90 last month.

Prices of goods at two other levels of the economy increased in September but not as much as in August. The report said prices of intermediate goods, meaning semi-finished products rose 0.6 percent compared to a 1 percent rise in August.

Super Plant

ONE FINE VINE — "I just wanted to see what it would do," Sammy Heller says about the tomato vine he planted behind his Pelzer, S.C. home in July and faithfully watered and fertilized. The plant did a lot. It is now almost 18 feet tall and still growing. Here Sammy's brother, Pete, climbs on the roof for a salad tomato. (AP Laserphoto)

Elusive Sub

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sweden today added more naval units to the hunt for a foreign submarine that was detected in Swedish waters near defense installations two weeks ago and defied 19 warning depth charges.

The submarine, believed to be Russian or Polish, was last monitored Sunday. It was seen and detected electronically several times in Stockholm's southern archipelago, where the navy has its main base.

"The chase will go on until we are certain that the intruder is no longer in our waters," naval staff spokesman Peter Baltzer said.

"We cannot yet exclude that it might be resting on the seabed, engines stopped to avoid detection," Baltzer said, adding that the search will continue several more days.

The naval force chasing the elusive sub includes five helicopters, a destroyer, at least one submarine, three minesweepers and torpedo boats and coast guard vessels.

A defense staff spokesman said he could not confirm newspaper reports that there were now two foreign submarines in Swedish waters: one that had been damaged by depth charges and another that had come to its aid.

The Swedish Foreign Office has asked the naval chiefs for a written confirmation of the identity of the submarine.

Iran Claims Gains Against Iraq Army

By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer
BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq and Iran both claimed their troops were in control of Iran's major port of Khorramshahr today and Iran said it reopened a strategic railroad in the southern war zone that Iraq had reported cutting last week.

Tehran Radio said a train left the Iranian capital headed for Ahwaz as rail service resumed between these cities. The broadcast said the rail line had been closed because of a break in communications at the station at Andimeshk, a town just north of Dezful, which is 70 miles from the Iraq border where the war began 12 days ago. Early in the fighting, Iraq said its forces had penetrated to near Dezful and cut the rail link from Abadan to Tehran.

Iraq said its forces took over the port and were digging in after achieving their main objectives along an invasion front stretching 300 miles to the north. "There is no trace of any Iranian soldier left in Khorramshahr," Baghdad Radio said. "The town is under Iraq's firm control."

It labeled as "hallucination" Iran's claims it was crushing Iraqi troops in Khorramshahr and said: "What few so-called revolutionary guards are left in hiding are being flushed out and mopped up in Khorramshahr. That's all that's happening now."

But Iran's official Pars news agency said the Iraqi troops withdrew from Khorramshahr as late as midnight Thursday after abandoning tanks and other equipment, that water and electricity were cut off and that "the customs building and some other parts of the city set on fire by the Iraqis were burning out of control."

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Iranian paratroopers were dropped into Khorramshahr Thursday, that Iranian warplanes launched attacks to support them and that "enemy-crushing" operations were under way in the port, near the refinery city of Abadan at the head of the Persian Gulf in oil-rich Khuzistan province.

Bani-Sadr said Iranian troops also routed Iraqi forces from Susanger, 100 miles to the north, that the Iraqis were in retreat toward the border and that Iranian forces captured 170 Iraqi tanks and armored personnel carriers and "large numbers of Iraqi soldiers."

The Baghdad command dismissed those claims and said "unless the scale of fighting warranted, there will be only one military communique daily since Iraqi forces have achieved their main objectives and will concentrate on consolidation of their achievements." So far there has been no independent confirmation of any of the claims or any reliable information on the size and disposition of the opposing forces.

The Iraqi command said

Thursday its naval units "inflicted serious damage" on Iranian military positions at Abadan, several miles from Khorramshahr, and that Iraqi MiGs attacked the Dezful area, 150 miles north of Abadan. However, it also said Iranian jets hit five Iraqi provinces, that five Iraqi civilians were wounded in air strikes on the southern Iraqi city of Amara and that two Iranian jets were shot down over Amara and Basra.

The radio station in Ahwaz, capital of Khuzistan province 70 miles north of Abadan, claimed Thursday that "the enemy has been defeated and is making dastardly efforts in only a few places."

Polish Workers' Warning Strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Tens of thousands of workers across communist Poland staged a one-hour "warning strike" today in what union leaders called a test of strength of the fledgling independent labor movement.

Drivers of Warsaw city buses pulled to the curb at noon and let off their passengers. At 1 p.m., the drivers opened their doors and went back to work.

Union spokesmen in several cities said transportation, factories and some small shops also closed for the hour-long action to press demands for higher pay and access to the media for union leaders.

"It all went exactly the way it had been planned," said a spokesman for the Warsaw branch of Solidarity, the national movement of new independent labor unions formed under agreements reached in August ending six weeks of strikes.

He said several plants in Warsaw joined the action and dozens of supporters from non-striking enterprises brought letters of support and bouquets of flowers to the Warsaw headquarters.

At the Ursus tractor factory just outside Warsaw, which has 20,000 workers, the scene was calm and there were no demonstrations. A union official said workers would return promptly at 1 p.m.

In Katowice, in southwestern Poland, a Solidarity branch spokesman said the giant Huta steel mill was virtually shut down.

Boston School Closed

BOSTON (AP) — South Boston High School, site of battles between white and black students since 1974, will need almost a week to return to normal class schedules after the latest outburst of fighting, officials say.

The school was closed today, following a Thursday morning skirmish in which five students were injured and one was arrested.

Headmaster Jerome Winegar said the school would reopen on a staggered basis next week — with freshmen attending classes on Monday, joined by sophomores on Tuesday, juniors on Wednesday and seniors on Thursday.

Winegar said he had no idea what touched off the incident.

"We felt tensions for a couple of weeks, but I probably know less about what happened today than other incidents we've had in the past," he said.

It was the first such racial incident at the Boston school this year.

"The word is that this has been brewing for some time," said School Department spokesman Fred Foye.

Sunbird Offers Atlanta Route

RALEIGH — Ralph Quinlan, president of Sunbird Airlines, announced here last night that the commuter service that serves Greenville and seven other cities in North Carolina, will begin non-stop service from Hickory to Atlanta on October 15.

He also announced that the first of five new 18-passenger planes the airline has ordered will arrive November 30, and will go into service on the Hickory-Atlanta schedule shortly thereafter. The new airplanes, he noted, will cost $1.5 million each.

Quinlan termed the new Embraer "Bandeirante" twin-engine commuter airliners, made in Brazil, "the coming thing for our company in North Carolina."

Sunbird, with home offices in Denver, N.C., 30 miles north of Charlotte, began operations on November 15, 1979, with one airplane serving Hickory, Charlotte, Raleigh-Durham and Rocky Mount-Wilson. The airline now operates 10 eight-passenger turbo-prop Cessna 402's — costing $300,000 to $340,000 each — and serves Fayetteville, Kinston, Greenville, Wilmington, Norfolk, Va., and Tri-Cities Airport, Tenn., in addition to Charlotte, Hickory, Raleigh-Durham, and Rocky Mount-Wilson.

Sunbird began service at the Pitt-Greenville airport on August 4, and has one plane and two flight crews based at Greenville.

Quinlan noted that the new turbo-prop airliners will also be used on the Raleigh-Charlotte route. He added that the new aircraft may be used on flights to and from Greenville.

Quinlan, who is also president of Mountaineer Cargo, an airline operating 20 cargo planes flying the East Coast from Boston to Florida, said that although "we started in a so-called recession, Sunbird is the fastest growing commuter airline in the Southeast."

Bill Maslyk of the North Carolina Department of Transportation's aeronautics division, who appeared with Quinlan, said commuter airlines play a vital role in the state's transportation plan.

He pointed out that 10 commuter airlines now operate in the state, with "Sunbird...one of the most progressive and rising ones."

RALPH QUINLAN, president of Sunbird Airlines describes future planning for the commuter service including new non-stop Atlanta flight and new aircraft for the airline.

OBJECTIONS TO NUDES

I have always enjoyed shopping with my children at Kroger's Sav-On. This past weekend, though, I discovered at the end of an aisle prominently displayed large portraits of naked women. I feel these shouldn't be sold in family stores, but the store personnel I talked to did not assure me that they would be removed from stock or even less openly displayed. P. C.

Hotline called the store manager, Allen Ray, who said he could make a decision about the matter, but could not tell the press what his decision was or would be. He suggested we talk to Advertising Manager Leland Carawan in Charlotte.

Carawan requested the names and phone numbers of three Hotline readers who had voiced objection to the display of the frame painting prints. He said he'd telephone these customers and also Al Ray and would get back to us. This, he did, within two hours.

He said the decision to take the pictures off display has been made "in the best interest of everyone." He said he had talked directly to you, P. C., and you had expressed pleasure that the Charlotte office had acted so responsively and responsibly.

Trudeau Plans New Canadian Constitution

OTTAWA (AP) — Defying Canada's provincial premiers, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau announced plans to bring home Canada's constitution from Britain and amend it with sweeping reforms he says will give Canadians their first written guarantees of human and language rights.

Trudeau unveiled the long-awaited plan Thursday in a nationally televised news conference. It came less than a month after he failed to reach agreement on the specifics and timing of constitutional reform in an often-bitter weeklong conference with the 10 provincial leaders.

"It's a beginning," Trudeau said of his controversial plan to amend the constitution without provincial consent.

Opposition leader Joe Clark called Trudeau's plan "an arbitrary measure" that could lead to a divisive referendum, prolonged court battles and turmoil in federal-provincial relations.

A new constitution "cannot be arbitrarily imposed on this nation by one person or one government with threats, ultimatums and artificial deadlines," he said.

Most provincial premiers had no immediate comment on Trudeau's proposal. But one of them, Newfoundland Premier Brian Peckford, threatened legal action and said he doubted the British Parliament would act on Trudeau's request if the matter was before the Canadian courts.

Trudeau summoned the House of Commons back into session one week early and it scheduled an opening debate Monday on the prime minister's proposals. Trudeau said he would like a vote on the plan by Dec. 9.

As the first stage of the reform plan, Trudeau offered a resolution asking the British Parliament to send home the British North America Act of 1867, the British-drafted legislation that currently serves as Canada's constitution.

Trudeau wants the Act to be "patriated" to Canada, with the British Parliament relinquishing its control over it.

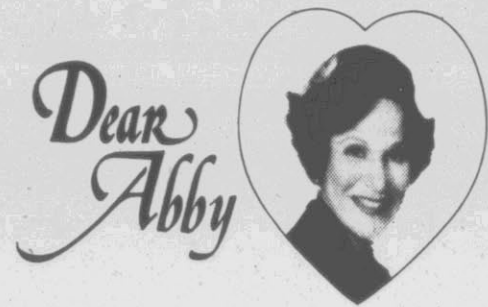

However, before the constitution is moved to Ottawa, Trudeau wants the British Parliament to amend it with a number of clauses guaranteeing rights and freedoms of thought, religion, press, life, liberty, security from arrest without being informed of charges and protection from cruel and unusual punishment.

New Season's Hats Are Brimful Of Fashion

THE NEW "hatlines" are making fashion headlines, with the shapes giving women uncluttered chic through the day and into evening. Vari-size brims and lower crowns lend a flirtatious emphasis to the face-framing designs. Fall hats accentuate the eyes and demand artful makeup to enhance their beauty. Far left, there is eyeliner flattery in the dipped-brim cloche by Fabini; the romance of the Hapsburg era is recalled by Frank Olive, left, in a wide-brim roller with a cascading tassel; ideal for a tailored suit look is the wide-brim padre by Irene of New York, center; for a saucy mood, Fabini's low-crown derby, right, is just the thing; and to end the day in a whirl of glamour, Albrizio offers a forward-thrust satin cap with a bow and feather clutch at the back, far right.

Psoriasis Problem Not Easily Licked

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My mother had a bad rash on her ankle. It itched a lot and was driving her crazy, so she went to a doctor. He said it was psoriasis and he gave her some medicine to put on it.

Well, the medicine didn't help much, but our dog started licking Mom's ankle, and then a funny thing happened. Pretty soon the itching stopped and the psoriasis went away. So I guess the dog did more for Mom than the doctor. Abby, please tell other people with psoriasis about this.

DEBBY

DEAR DEBBY: I checked your dog-licking theory with Dr. Eugene Farber, president of the International Psoriasis Research Foundation and head of dermatology at Stanford Medical School.

He said, "Moisturizing and gently removing the scales from a patch of psoriasis often brings relief, but I wouldn't recommend dog-licking because a dog's saliva contains chemicals that could do more harm than good."

So, Debby, although man's best friend is his dog, and all dogs are licensed, they aren't licensed to practice medicine.

DEAR ABBY: I am happily married and the proud mother of two beautiful daughters, ages 4 and 1. My problem is that I am again pregnant, and my husband positively refuses to accept another child into our home. He wants me to have an abortion immediately, which is against my principles. (I am not Catholic.)

After our second baby, I persuaded my husband to have a vasectomy, but he cancelled the appointment the day before he was to have it. I reminded him that if I should get pregnant accidentally, we would have to have a third child because I do not believe in abortion. He said, "We'll cross that bridge when we get to it," and the subject was dropped.

Meanwhile he says if I don't abort the baby, he'll leave me. He means it, too. I had to beg him to let me have the second child. One would have been enough for him.

Should we discuss this with other family members and get a majority ruling? Please answer soon. Time is running out.

MOTHER-TO-BE-OR-NOT-TO-BE

DEAR MOTHER-TO-BE: A family discussion is totally inappropriate since this concerns only you and your husband.

Since you both agreed that there should not be a third child, you and your husband are equally responsible for the accidental pregnancy.

Feeling as you do about abortion, however, do not submit to one to please your husband; it's your body. And if he leaves you (which I doubt), you may be better off without him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO R. IN SAN DIEGO. Your mother was right. No matter how much a man likes roast beef, occasionally he wants chicken.

Hand-me-down are one way to stretch the family clothing dollar. However, children are different in the ways they'll accept this type of clothing. In general if the child respects and admires the person who first wore the handed-down clothes, he will accept them and wear them proudly. But if he feels he is only getting leftovers he may refuse them.

Cooking Is Fun

TEATIME FARE
Molasses Wafers Tea
MOLASSES WAFERS
From the 1930s and still delicious.

½ cup fork-stirred medium
rye flour
¼ cup firmly packed light
brown sugar
¼ cup molasses
¼ cup butter
½ cup chopped (the size of small peas) walnuts

On wax paper or in a small bowl stir together the flour and sugar. In a 1-quart saucepan over medium heat, stirring, bring molasses to a boil; add butter and stir until melted. At once remove from heat and add the flour mixture; stir until blended; stir in the nuts. Onto a large cookie sheet (well-greased with solid white shortening) drop mixture by level teaspoonfuls, several inches apart — no more than 6 to a sheet. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until lacy looking and golden brown — 8 to 10 minutes. Let stand until edges are firm enough — a matter of seconds — to scrape cookies loose with a thin wide metal spatula. Remove to a wire rack to cool completely. Work fast or cookies will harden too much to remove; in this case put the cookie sheet back into the oven for a few seconds to warm cookies and try again. Makes about 3½ dozen.

Note: The last batch of this batter will be much stickier and thicker than the first because the molasses will cool before all the batter is spooned onto the cookie sheets.

We Can Fight Back

People have moved from cities to suburbs and from suburbs to rural areas at least partially to escape the crime of high density population areas.

Regrettably the criminals follow them. That's what state statistics show. Various crimes have risen by 35 percent, statewide but only 13 percent in urban areas. Rural officers say they are facing the crimes that used to afflict the urban areas more frequently.

One state official said, "The property is there, and it's easier for people to rip off. North Carolina is just suffering the pains of economic

there are ways to cope with rural crime. The Community Watch program can be instituted in rural areas. Residents will protect themselves from criminals just as they now organize to provide fire protection. There is also the program to mark personal belongings with proper identification so that recovery is made easy.

Because of distances involved rural citizens have to be more careful about break-ins and such. With proper organization, however, a community can fight back at the criminal.

Schools Response Good

The bloodmobile collected 194 pints on a recent Rose High visit, one which featured City Supt. Glenn Cox and County Supt. Ott Alford both donating.

The visit is a good time to note the enthusiasm with which students at all our high schools greet the

The next school visit is Oct. 15 at Ayden-Grifton and we are sure there will be an enthusiastic response there also.

THIS AFTERNOON Quality In Faculty

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Quality of the faculty at the various campuses of the University of North Carolina system is considered the single most important factor in why student performance varies so sharply.

Educational background of the student body is another significant consideration.

These are findings of a complicated, detailed research project conducted by Q. Whitfield Ayres, a faculty member of the Department of Government and International Studies at the University of South Carolina.

Ayres dismisses race, socio-economic status, personal motivation, and personality differences as major determinants in academic achievement, concluding instead that, "It is far more plausible to conclude that institutions 'do something' (or do not do something) for their students to cause them to score higher or lower..."

blacks at several predominantly white campuses, and better than blacks at the other predominantly black schools.

Also significant is the termination that blacks enrolled at largely white colleges averaged 25 points higher on the NTE than did blacks with comparable base scores in the black colleges.

And, white graduates of attitudinal factors as significant.

Comparing the institutions themselves, Ayres found that age of the school, state per-capita appropriations, student-faculty ratios, numbers of library books, or predominant race of the student body did not apparently affect the outcome appreciably.

He did find that at white colleges, faculty with the Ph.D. ranged from 46 to 72 percent; while at predominantly black schools it runs from 30 to 38 percent.

It is then, the institutions themselves, and more especially the faculty, which must be upgraded to produce better learning, Ayres believes. Trying to alter the

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Much attention and controversy has been focused in recent months on Soviet military superiority over the United States in both conventional and nuclear capability.

But escaping public consciousness is an equally significant development of both non-military and military importance. That is the spectacular growth of the Soviet merchant fleet.

Just as Soviet military strength has surged at a time when our own has been sliding, the Russian maritime fleet has increased over 400 percent during a period in which our own has dropped 66 percent.

The disastrous effects of this was demonstrated earlier this year when U.S. dock workers refused to load and unload Russian ships in protest over the invasion of Afghanistan.

President Carter had to appeal to the longshoremen to work the ships to avoid massive interruption of this country's own flow of commerce.

What the president could have pointed out to the dock workers is that today only five percent of U.S. foreign commerce moves in ships flying the American flag.

During this decade, Russia intends to have a merchant fleet capable of handling 80 percent of its ocean-born commerce.

The average American merchant ship in service today is 20 years old. Russia's fleet averages 10 years of age. Not only that, her vessels are designed for both peacetime commerce and wartime military roles.

According to a recent article by John Broadwin in the American Security Council's "Washington Report" the Russian fleet also is manned largely by naval reservists who complete extensive intelligence data while traversing the oceans and visiting the ports of the world.

In addition, Soviet seamen are well disciplined and part of their responsibility is to cultivate friendships and respect among the inhabitants of the foreign ports they visit.

Mr. Broadwin, who is with the Letterman Army Institute of Research in San Francisco, observes in his article that the Soviet merchant fleet could be more important to the communist goal of world domination than will be the Russian navy.

BY ART BUCHWALD Arrivederci Arkansas

WASHINGTON — We almost lost Arkansas a few weeks ago. Some smart aleck threw a wrench into a Titan missile silo. It hit the fuel tank and set it off.

The only thing that saved the state was that the nuclear warhead, which was sitting on the top of it, didn't blow up.

The incident raised a lot of questions in the minds of the American people.

Q — Why Arkansas?

A — When the first Titan missiles were built, the experts in charge of selecting sites for them chose Arkansas because they were quite sure the Soviets didn't know where it was.

Many people in the Pentagon didn't know where it was either, and that was the reason for the delay by the Air Force in doing anything about it when the accident occurred.

Q — Now that the Soviets know where Arkansas is, will we have to move the Titan silos to another state?

A — No. They are too fragile to move, and because of the adverse publicity it's doubtful that any other state would take them.

Q — What effect will this have on the University of Arkansas football team, which is usually in the top 10 at the end of each season?

ART BUCHWALD

up its entire athletic program.

Q — What are we to make of the accident in terms of all the fail-safe systems that were built into the Titan?

A — It depends on which side you're on. If you're on the military's side, you can claim that the system worked because the nuclear warhead didn't go off. If you live in the area, you may find it hard to sell your house.

Q — What is the Soviet reaction to seeing one of our Titans come flying out of the ground without prior warning?

A — They are probably frightened silly. They always thought that we needed tremendous amounts of sophisticated electronic gear and computers to launch a Titan. But now they know we can set one off by just throwing a monkey wrench down into the hole, and they have no answer for this. If the SALT II talks ever start up again, the first order of business may be the banning of wrenches anywhere near a missile silo.

Q — Do the Soviets have anything comparable to the Titan II?

A — As far as we know they don't. We do know they've been dropping wrenches on their MIRV missiles for 20 years, but they've never been able to breach their fuel tanks with them. When it comes to wrench penetration capability, we're at least 10 years ahead of them.

Q — Then most American people can take pride in the fact that the Titan II missile is our greatest deterrent against the Soviets?

A — You could say that. But don't, if you live in Arkansas.

Q — Did the accident breach any security secrets that might impair our defense posture?

A — Only one. As many people know, there is a man with a black box who follows the president everywhere he goes. The black box is at the president's disposal in case of a nuclear attack. Up until now no one but the president and his national security adviser knew what was in the box. Now the secret is out of the bag.

Q — What is in the black box?

A — A three-pound monkey wrench.

Near 'Even' Over Issues

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — One of the best barometers of political strength over the last 35 years has been the Gallup Poll issue barometer, with the results of this measurement closely reflecting the actual results in both presidential and congressional elections.

In this measurement each person is asked what he or she believes to be the most important problem facing the nation and which party he or she thinks is better able to deal with this problem.

Domestic issues — particularly those relating to the economy — far overshadow international issues in the minds of voters. In the latest survey 60 percent of the public views the high cost of living as the most important problem facing the nation. Cited next most often are unemployment, named by 16 percent and international problems, by 15 percent.

Little change has been noted recently in the public's priorities. A survey in July showed 56 percent naming the high cost of living, 15 percent unemployment and 12 percent international problems.

Events in the final weeks of this year's campaign can, of course, change the picture, but at present, 51 percent of those who choose between the parties think the Republicans are better able to deal with the problems they consider to be most important while 49 percent name the Democratic Party.

These findings closely parallel those recorded in the July survey when the GOP had a 52-48 percent advantage. These survey results represent the best showing for the Republican Party on this barometer since the 1972 presidential campaign.

The current results on the issue barometer are reflective of the status of the presidential contest at this time. The latest Newsweek test election measurement, based on telephone interviews with 1,045 registered voters, conducted Sept. 24-25, shows Ronald Reagan with a slight lead over President Jimmy Carter, 39 to 35 percent, with 14 percent for John Anderson.

Following is the question asked to identify the key concerns of the American people:

"What do you think is the most important problem facing this country today?"

Here are the latest results and a comparison with the July survey findings, showing little change in the two-month interim between the surveys:

Most Important Problem Facing Nation
	July	Latest
High cost of living/inflation	56%	60%
Unemployment	15	16
International problems	12	15
Dissatisfaction with government	8	6
Energy problems	6	4
Moral decline	5	3
All others	14	14
No opinion	3	2
	119%*	120%*

*Total add to more than 100 percent because of multiple responses.

All persons who named a problem were then asked this question:

"Which political party do you think can do a better job of handling the problem you have just mentioned — the Republican Party or the Democratic Party?"

Here are the national results and those from the previous survey:

Party Better Able To Handle Most Important Problem
	July	Latest
Republican	30%	36%
Democratic	27	34
No difference	30	21
No opinion	13	9

Eliminating those who say there is no difference between the parties or who do not express an opinion, this division between the parties is obtained:

	July	Latest
Republican	52%	51%
Democratic	48	49

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,007 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Sept. 12-15.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Curbing Inflation Seen More Important Than Reducing Unemployment

PRINCETON, N.J. — Should inflation or unemployment receive greater attention from the federal government?

By a 2-to-1 ratio, the public thinks inflation should be given priority. This is in line with what Americans regard as the most important problem facing the nation today. Six in 10 (60 percent) name inflation while 16 percent cite unemployment.

The question and national results:

"Which do you think the federal government should give greater attention to — trying to curb inflation or trying to reduce unemployment?"

	Curb inflation	Reduce unemployment	No opinion
	61%	33	6

The Superstar Is Vulnerable

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The shooting star of industry, the person who rises early and swiftly to a position of high responsibility, often flames out or is shot down by the flak of events, enemies and competitors.

"There is no problem trickier and filled with perversity than that of the supermobile man or woman," said Professor Eugene Jennings, an adviser to top executives on personal, corporate and personnel matters.

"It is amazing to me how many corporate officials sponsor a very rapid rising man or woman and don't fully realize the safeguards that must be taken to protect that person," said the professor.

Jennings's comments followed news reports of the predicament faced by Mary Cunningham, 29, vice president of strategic planning for the Bendix Corp., a Southfield, Mich. manufacturer of industrial equipment.

Amid controversy about her rapid promotions and association with William M. Agee, chairman and president, Miss Cunningham had sought a leave of absence but was convinced to remain by the Bendix board.

"The best way to burn out a talented individual is to let him or her go as high as possible as fast as possible," Jennings commented, adding that bosses who allow it to happen share much of the blame.

Shooting stars, or young, upwardly mobile executives, were common in the economic expansion of the 1960s, he said. Rarer now, and more often women, Jennings feels they are less tolerated and more criticized.

Most often, he said, they are found in planning, public relations, consumer and government relations, and sometimes in personnel, all areas in which it is difficult to apply tangible performance criteria.

The same lack of success measures, however, make it equally difficult for the individual, no matter how talented, to prove he or she belongs in the position. "The record is not demonstrable," he said.

If criticized, Jennings suggested, neither the sponsor (the person mainly responsible for the promotions) or the star can offer a strong defense. And if they do, he said, they only make matters worse.

"In most cases the sponsor and star should remain quiet and let the controversy die down," he said. If the star has the competency, he suggested, it will in time begin to manifest itself.

How, he was asked, can a sponsor protect a young but highly competent person who, because of youth, cannot prove his or her right to a job in the conventional manner, i.e., by demonstrating a string of successes?

"When you see an exceptional talent you must view it as a perishable asset," said Jennings, graduate professor of management at Michigan State University, who has helped executives handle many shooting stars.

Typically, he said, you patiently expose the star to a broad base of people who will gradually begin to acknowledge the star's competency and finally support him or her. "You build a constituency," he said.

The star must be afforded the chance to build a foundation. "There is no substitute for experience, and the judgment and maturity that comes with experience. You season the person," he said.

Finally, he said, "when the person does move to the top he or she has had the last weakness removed that typifies most shooting stars, the lack of judgment with regard to people problems."

Criticism of the star has to be expected, and sponsors should be aware of it when they put the star into an exposed situation, Jennings said. The fall to earth is too easy, he said.

To slow a star doesn't mean to diminish it. In fact, said Jennings, it might polish it up. Most people who reach the very top begin slowly, seldom moving fast until they are well into their 30s, he said.

"Most of the great movers and shakers of the world never went up fast," he said. "Late bloomers are much more common than early arrivals, and they are much better accepted at the top."

On the other hand, "those who moved up fast before their 30s to a reporting relationship with the chief executive often fail to sustain the pace," he said. "They will tell you, 'I wasn't ready for it.'"

Strength For Today

TO HAVE PROBLEMS, OR BE PROBLEMS?

Many people insist that their lives are frustrated and progress impeded, their health damaged, their happiness shattered, because of overwhelming problems they must confront. Yet all the time the greatest problem is themselves. They may also be a problem to the members of their families, to the people with whom they work, and to the God who made them.

Everyone should ask himself the question, "Am I a problem or a solution? Am I creating my problems or am I honestly making an attempt to solve them?"

Every doctor knows that he has patients whose only trouble is that they become such a burden to themselves that something physical has snapped and has landed them in a hospital bed. A large percentage of illness has a spiritual or mental cause.

Disease and suffering exist in spite of faith. But this does not alter the fact that if we had more and better religion, we would undoubtedly have less illness. — Elisha Douglass

Brannon Talks To Pitt County Safety Club

Assistant Chief George Brannon with Greenville Fire and Rescue Squad addressed the Pitt County Safety Council at a luncheon meeting Thursday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Brannon spoke on general directions for giving first aid. He noted that injured persons should be kept lying down, avoiding excessive body movements which could cause additional injuries to the victim. Bleeding should be controlled by pressing the wound, he noted. "Always start mouth-to-mouth artificial respiration and when a victim faints keep the head lower than his heart," stated Brannon.

Because of the increasing number of choking victims reported, Brannon discussed the Heimlich Maneuver, noting that choking victims can neither speak nor breathe. "He turns blue because oxygen is not circulating and collapses because the brain lacks oxygen," explained the assistant chief. "The Heimlich sign is putting the thumb and forefinger to the throat to alert others he is choking."

Assistant Chief Brannon concluded by explaining and demonstrating the Heimlich Maneuver. He also showed a short film explaining the steps followed for choking victims.

The Pitt County Safety Council will meet again Nov. 6 at the Country Club. Visitors are welcome.

A Review

Ayden Theatre Season Opened

Mary Schalken

AYDEN — A tragic-comic story of a family torn apart by a struggle for power, "The Lion In Winter" opened at the Ayden-Gritton High School Auditorium last night, marking the successful opening of the Ayden Theatre Workshop's new season.

The play, featuring a seasoned cast, stars Joey Pollock as Henry II, Elizabeth Phillips as Eleanor, Chris Phillips as Richard, Al Boswell as Geoffrey, Mitchell Riggs as John, Stacey House as Phillip, and Ralph Dixon, Randy Fussell, Alan Sumrell, David Webb, Mary Dixon and Pat McDermott as pages and ladies in waiting. In last night's performance, the strongest characters appeared as Richard, Henry and Eleanor.

Chris Phillips, in his portrayal of Richard, the oldest son, completely captured the sullen, distrustful, hungry-for-power characteristics the part demands. Phillips possessed the constant scowl of a young man full of rage — rage toward his brothers, his father, Phillip, Alais and his mother. He appears as a man easily led by emotion, however, as Eleanor recaptures his affection at one point and then betrays him by making a deal to give away the territory of the Aquitaine.

The scenes of anger and hate between Richard and his brothers are very effective. Phillips, as well as Riggs and Boswell, do an excellent job of conveying the psychological intricacies of sibling rivalry carried to its most deadly extremes. The scenes of anger between Richard and Eleanor are convincing, also. The audience comes away convinced that Richard would indeed wish his mother to "rot," as he directs her to, and that it would take very little motivation for him to place a dagger in her heart.

The scenes of tenderness come off equally as well, however. For example, the scene where when Eleanor convinces Richard she will give him the Aquitaine, and takes his head in her lap, talking of how she taught him to laugh, love, and sing, is a very inspiring one. These scenes of tenderness, few and far between, are very effective perhaps because of their scarcity. The insults and the fighting emphasize the intimacy.

Pollack's performance as Henry is convincing also. He mutters, he roars, and he bellows, leaving the audience wondering if many of their next door neighbors weren't Henrys. Elizabeth Phillips provides a strong Eleanor, capable of nearly anything to keep her Henry, but not incapable of feeling deeply. She is entirely realistic, however, about the possibilities, and connives in every way to circumvent what Henry has schemed so carefully to build.

"The Lion In Winter," written by James Goldman, deals basically with the power struggle between King Henry of England's three sons. Henry wants to keep the kingdom together after his death but since all three sons want to rule, it is likely to be torn apart by revolution. Henry favors the youngest son, while Eleanor favors the oldest. The middle son hopes to play both ends against the other and come out on top. Henry would like to have another heir by his mistress, but that would add to the contenders.

The Ayden Theatre Workshop's performance of the play sparkles with comedy that a heavier interpretation of the text would dampen. After laughing with the family, the audience is more likely to cry with them. The comedy and the psychological innuendos of the play, along with the excellent acting by Chris Phillips, Elizabeth Phillips and Joey Pollack, are the strong points of the ATW performance. The family on the stage becomes not just a royal family of the 12th century with problems, but a family similar to many contemporary strife-torn families.

New Law Puts Fault On Owner

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A new state law that became effective this week makes vehicle owners responsible if the car or truck passes a stopped school bus.

Under the law the bus driver needs only to get the license number of the passing vehicle. It will be up to the owner to prove his innocence.

The law replaces one that required bus drivers to identify the driver of a passing car in court.

Violation of the new law will result in five points against the owner's driver's license, as well as court fines.

Actor's Cancer Said 'In Remission'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Steve McQueen, who waged a secret six-month battle against a rare and generally incurable form of cancer, is gradually improving under a nutrition-based treatment developed by a one-time dentist, doctors and spokesmen say.

McQueen, 50, who was not revealing his whereabouts, asked his fans and friends Thursday to "keep your fingers crossed" for a full recovery.

The screen star was told six months ago that he had terminal mesothelioma, a cancer of the lining of the lungs and other organs, according to a statement issued by his publicist, Warren Cowan.

McQueen, who appeared in such films as "The Great Escape" and "Bullitt," had been keeping the illness a secret so that he could keep his "sense of dignity" as he died, the statement said.

But six weeks ago, after a month of the nutrition-based treatment, he began to show improvement and has been gaining weight while the cancer, which had spread to his neck, chest and abdomen, has gone into remission, doctors said.

Dr. William Kelley of the International Health Institute in Dallas, who is helping guide McQueen's treatment, said, "We have been able to prolong the patient's life beyond earlier expectations."

"I believe that Mr. McQueen can fully recover and return to a normal lifestyle," said Kelley.

A colleague at the center, Paul Whetstone, said Kelley developed his treatment after recovering himself from what had been diagnosed 10 years ago as a terminal case of cancer. He was a dentist at the time, but has since given up practice, Whetstone said.

Kelley's treatment, which supplements traditional medical care, tries to build up the body's immunity system so it can resist cancer. The method regulates diet and employs mental exercises to encourage "positive thinking," Cowan said.

"Our whole concept is not to treat the disease but to build health to the extent that disease cannot exist in the body," said Dr. Philip Johnston of the institute.

The treatment does not include use of Laetrile, the controversial drug made from apricot pits, he said.

In the statement, McQueen expressed "a sincere belief in my own recovery."

"I say to all my fans and all my friends, keep your fingers crossed and keep the good thoughts coming," McQueen said.

McQueen would not say where he was undergoing treatment.

"Hopefully, the cheap scandal sheets and curiosity seekers will not try to seek me out so I can continue my treatment," McQueen said.

Dr. John Costanzi, director of the cancer center at the University of Texas Medical School in Galveston, said that an important part of cancer therapy was keeping the immune system intact.

"Vitamin therapy and new forms of immunotherapy are excellent when they are used in conjunction with more specific types of treatment," he said. "But I think the majority of us feel they should not be used in place of routine treatments."

Cowan said doctors agreed that surgery, chemotherapy and radiation therapy would not be able to reverse the actor's condition.

McQueen, who was nominated in 1966 for an Oscar as best actor in "The Sand Pebbles," was absent from the screen for about six years before returning to make "Tom Horn" and "The Hunter," his latest picture made about a year ago.

His career first took flight in the 1950s TV series "Wanted Dead or Alive." The ruggedly good-looking, blue-eyed McQueen became one of Hollywood's sex symbols in such movies as

N.C. Hosts Japan Trade Talks

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Japanese and American business leaders called Thursday for a revitalization program to expand U.S. exports to Japan in an effort to offset America's projected $10 billion trade deficit this year.

Luther Hodges Jr., U.S. undersecretary of commerce, said the deficit "threatens to become a major irritant between our two countries."

Hodges was among several officials and 350 Japanese and American businessmen attending a Southeastern United States-Japan Association meeting.

The meeting, which began Thursday, was to conclude this afternoon with a speech by the U.S. ambassador to Japan, Mike Mansfield.

Governors of seven Southeastern states attended the meeting, which is held annually to promote business relations between the two nations.

Hodges told the businessmen that a revitalization program must be initiated to create greater cooperation among American businessmen, government officials and labor leaders and greater American efforts to develop Japanese markets.

He also called on the Japanese to remove formal and informal trade barriers such as tariffs, quotas and marketing practices.

"Japan must ... demonstrate a greater will to buy American products," he said. "It must do so visibly and it must do so now."

The alternative to a revitalization program, said businessman Norishige Hasegawa, is protectionism, or withdrawal from the international market by both nations.

"The only way to achieve this objective is for the individual organizations of each nation to keep in mind the need to promote trade in a freer and orderly manner," said Hasegawa, chairman of Sumitomo Chemical Co. Ltd.

A major Southeastern crop — tobacco — could play an important role in easing the trade deficit, the officials said.

Mansfield called agriculture "the bright light" in the current import-export situation and he said negotiations on lowering tobacco tariffs are going on in Japan.

But Ambassador Reubin Askew, U.S. trade representative, warned the import of a crop is a politically sensitive issue in Japan. He said the Japanese government has maintained a monopoly on tobacco and cigarette production and freer leaf trade will not come quickly.

"Some areas we're not competitive but, in tobacco, we're competitive right now," Askew said, adding that R.J. Reynolds officials estimate they could increase exports to Japan 10-fold in the next five years if tariffs are lowered.

The state of North Carolina exports the most tobacco to Japan — $95 million worth. About $125 million worth of tobacco is exported to Japan from the Southeast each year.

The Japanese attending the conference did not dwell on problems between the two nations. Instead, they emphasized the qualities they share with residents of the Southeast — respect for hospitality, family and the work ethic.

Ryo Kawade, Japan's consul general in Atlanta, said many Japanese businessmen locate company facilities in the Southeast because of the similarities with their homeland.

"The people (in the Southeast) are very friendly and hospitable," he said. "And the climate is exactly the same. It is easy for Japanese businessmen to acclimate themselves to a job in the Southeast."

Many of the Japanese businessmen who came to Pinehurst did just that Thursday. They spent most of Thursday afternoon on area golf courses and Thursday night they celebrated with a pig-picking, a first for most of the Japanese.

Hasegawa, chairman of the Japan-Southeastern United States Association, was presented a Cherokee Indian headdress and he joined Gov. Jim Hunt and several Indians in traditional Cherokee dances.

The officials also joined in dances with North Carolina cloggers and bluegrass musicians.

Two Injured In Wreck

Two persons were injured Thursday morning when their vehicle left Greenfield Boulevard west of Fireside Drive, traveled across a lawn and struck a tree in an adjoining yard.

Greenville police reported that the driver of the vehicle, Carolyn Ann Wooten of 207-B, Cadillac Street, and a passenger were transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital following the 8:30 a.m. wreck.

Investigating officers said that the vehicle left the road and traveled across the yard of Viola Vines at 519 Greenfield Boulevard before striking a tree in the yard of Floyd O'Neal, 521 Greenfield Boulevard.

Police, who estimated damage at $1,500 to the car, charged Carolyn Wooten following investigation with exceeding a safe speed.

A 5:45 p.m. accident Wednesday on Charles Boulevard north from 11th Street resulted in the driver of one of the vehicles involved being charged with a safe movement violation.

Officers reported that Elizabeth H. Pope of 206 Gang Plank Road, New Bern, was charged following the wreck that involved her car and a vehicle operated by Karen Jeannine Edwards of 118 Western Avenue, Henderson.

No injuries were reported and damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Edwards vehicle.

Former Officer Is Sentenced

A former Greenville police officer, who had pleaded guilty to the break-in of a local supermarket while on duty, was given a split sentence, including a three-months active prison term, here Thursday.

Superior Court Judge Elbert S. Peel Jr. of Williamston sentenced Jackey R. Daniels to not less than four years or more than six years in prison. Judge Peel, however, directed that under the split sentence provision that Daniels serve a three-months active sentence, with the remainder of the term suspended for five years on a probationary basis.

Daniels, 29, entered a guilty plea September 16 to charges that he broke into the Foodland supermarket at West End Circle on July 15 and took three cases of chickens and several crates of empty soft drink bottles.

During testimony in the Daniels case, investigators described how Daniels entered a storage room at the rear of the store and took the chickens, valued at $112.50, and the soft drink bottles. The officers also described taking Daniels into custody a short time after the incident as he drove toward his home.

Daniels, according to the testimony, was on duty, in uniform and driving a police department patrol car at the time.

The officer, who resigned from the department following his arrest, became a police officer in Greenville in November of 1973.

Daniels testified that he began taking chickens and drink bottles from the store, while on duty, about a year before his arrest. He tried to implicate other local police officers in the series of thefts, but police and court officials said an investigation indicated that no one was involved other than Daniels.

New Pistol For Marines

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A Marine Corps spokesman says a 9mm pistol soon will replace the corps' traditional .45-caliber pistol as a sidearm for officers, medics and other Marines not armed with rifles.

Gunnery Sgt. Don Gilbert, a public affairs spokesman for Quantico Marine Base in Virginia, said the only thing holding up the changeover is a decision on what size magazine will be used for the pistol. He said the options under consideration are magazines holding 14, 15 and 17 bullets.

Gilbert indicated the change was certain, but an Army spokesman says the announcement may be premature.

Joseph Unterkofler, chief of the light-weapons development team at the U.S. Army Armament Research and Development Center in Dover, Del., said "consideration is being given to the change, but no decision has been made as to if or when a change will be made."

Quantico is the site of the Marine Corps Weapons Development Center.

Gilbert said more than 418,000 .45-caliber pistols owned by the Department of Defense will be replaced by mid-1981, with the Marine Corps tentatively scheduled to receive 129,000 of the new pistols.

Like Liston, Ali Sits In His Corner In 11th

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fireworks lit up the sky over the towering mountain range that surrounds this gaming capital of the country. But somehow, they seemed terribly out of place.

Instead of rockets and flares, it was a time for sadness. Boxing had reached the end of an era — in the parking lot outside a gambling casino where a 38-year-old boxer took what should be his last desperate shot at sports' biggest prize.

There, in a temporary ring, surrounded by hosts of high rollers and fistfuls of celebrities, Muhammad Ali sat in his corner, beaten once and for all by Larry Holmes, a former $500 a week sparring partner who graduated to the heavyweight championship of the world.

It is the most glamorous title in sports — a crown Ali wore for an unprecedented three times, a crown he wanted once more. So he thrust aside two years of retirement, punished his body down from a blubbery 254 pounds to a svelte 217½ and returned at age 38 to make his bid.

But it was not to be. When Ali reached into the well for one more miracle, he found it empty. In the autumn of his boxing life, there just were no more springtimes left.

It all ended in his corner when longtime trainer Angelo Dundee refused to let him answer the bell for the 11th round. It was a decision constructed of compassion by a man who has been at Ali's side from the beginning.

The irony of the ending was that 16 years ago, Dundee pushed his fighter out of a corner to a seventh round knockout of Sonny Liston that made him champion. It marked the beginning of an amazing odyssey that weaved its way around the world, from Manila to Munich, from Zaire to Kuala Lumpur. And it ended as it began, with a boxing legend in his corner and Dundee working over him feverishly.

"We all come and we all go," said Holmes. "When you fight a friend, to me a brother, you can't get happiness. I fought a no win situation. I did what I had to do."

What Holmes did was pitch a shutout. He hit Ali almost at will from the beginning of the bout. Sometimes Ali would hang back on the ropes — recalling the rope-a-dope style that captured the championship from George Foreman in 1974. But Holmes found huge holes in the peek-a-boo style, tatooing Ali with a stinging left jab and scoring repeatedly.

There were moments when Ali moved as though in slow motion, almost a ghostly image of the man who once ruled the world of boxing.

Sometimes it seemed as if Ali was walking through a dream, fighting from memory, asking his body to do things it could no longer do.

"There were times when I was hitting him at will," said Holmes, a compassionate man who had a sense of what was happening before him and knew he was watching the disintegration of a once-great champion.

"I pulled back in one round. I didn't want to hit him a few times and I held back, but I did what I had to do."

In the ninth round, Holmes jolted Ali with seven straight punches to the head as the ex-champion, clearly in trouble, reeled along the ropes and covered up. Holmes battered Ali completely around the ropes in that round. Only the ring saavy and experience gathered over two decades of boxing warfare allowed Ali to escape the round on his feet.

The crowd of 25,000 who paid a record $6 million for this Don King-Caesars Palace promotion, tried to help their man, starting a chant of "Ali, Ali, Ali," the cry he has heard all over the world. Before the bout began, Ali had led the cheer, much the way he has so many times before. This time, however, the chant could not help.

"I wanted to stop the fight after the ninth round," said Dundee. "But he wanted to keep going."

So Ali came out for the 10th, still fighting from memory, laying on the ropes and taking tons of leather from Holmes. Somehow, he stayed on his feet, refusing to fall as the champion pounded away at him. Mercifully, the bell rang and Ali sank to his stool. This time, however, he stayed there.

Dr. Donald Romeo of the Nevada Athletic Commission, came into the ring to examine the fighter. Referee Richard Green moved to the corner as well.

"Ali said he wanted to go on but Angelo asked me to stop it," said Green. "He looked bad. I could tell by his eyes. They were glassy. He had nothing left. He wasn't defending himself properly. I really was afraid he'd get hurt."

For a brief moment, there was a lively argument between Dundee and Bundini Brown, a longtime member of the Ali entourage. Bundini was urging Dundee to let the fight continue but the trainer was having none of that. He knew Ali had absorbed enough punishment. He knew there was no hope left. He knew the era was over.

When it ended, Holmes did not celebrate. He simply turned back to his corner, his night's work done. It was not a moment to celebrate. It was a moment to reflect.

Holmes walked across the ring to pay his respects to Ali.

"I told him, 'I love you and I really respect you. You are a great athlete and one of the greatest fighters of all time.'"

Later, Holmes expanded on that.

"I fought the best heavyweight in the world," the champion said. "He's one hell of an athlete and man. I respect the guy. Most of the guys I've fought, if I hit them as hard as I hit Ali, they couldn't stand up."

That respect was almost evident in the ring where Holmes fought a skillful fight, but was obviously not bent on destruction. He never moved in for the kill as Ali stood against the ropes, arms lowered and apparently unable to defend himself. In the end, the years took their toll on Ali. His age and two years away from the ring were too much of an obstacle to overcome.

But right up until the bell for the first round, Ali had some people convinced he could perform this miracle. They had flocked around his training sessions, paying far more attention and homage to him than they did to Holmes. And the magic of his name made it an $8 million payday for him, about twice as much as the champion received.

"Ali fooled you again," laughed Holmes. "He'll do it to you as long as you let him."

But Holmes was not fooled and neither was Father Time.

The champion came into the ring knowing he was fighting a living legend but an aging one. "He's an old man," Holmes said over and over. But people wouldn't listen. They preferred to believe in the miracle that Ali promised he would deliver.

Open Date Is Welcomed By Pirate Staff, Players

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Some coaches like open dates during their football season. Others would rather have anything but an open date.

East Carolina's Ed Emory and his Pirates have an open date this weekend, and he welcomes it as the best thing that could have happened to the team.

"It couldn't have come at a better time," Emory, fresh back from a four-day recruiting trip, said. "We needed the time to get some of our injured people back. We needed time to regroup. We needed time to get the coaches out recruiting. It just came at the right time."

Emory, who said he visited in 57 different homes in four different states, during the four-day period, said that despite the fact that the Pirates have gotten off to a 1-3 start, he met with positive feelings from nearly every recruit.

"And we're after the very best people too," he added.

East Carolina lost its third straight game Saturday night, falling to Southern Mississippi, 35-7. The Pirates, however, were in the game at the end of the third period, 14-7.

"But you can't give people the ball inside the 15 like we did and not expect them to come away with something," Emory said. "You know, aside from the first two times they had the ball, I think we stopped them pretty well until the final period. Even then, they got it because we just gave it to them."

One of the scores came after the fumble inside the 15, another came after a short Bill Lamm punt, and the other came on a return of another punt that was blocked.

The kicking game, usually one of the strongest points of the Pirate game, failed in the final period as Lamm got off two short kicks and had another blocked. "It was incredible odds that saw him get off two bad punts in a row," Emory said. "That probably hasn't happened to him since he started punting. And on the block, they weren't even trying to block. It was just the guy who normally makes you kick as quickly as he can. Bill was just trying to adjust the ball in his hands when it happened."

For Emory and the Pirates, who face the resurging University of Richmond next Saturday on the Spiders' home field, the philosophy they are taking is that they are starting a new season now. "We hope that the experience of the first four games will help us. We are still a young team, and we have an unusually high number of injuries."

Some 20 people missed yesterday's renewal of drills because of injuries, many of them first or second liners. "This is as high a rate of injuries as I've ever been associated with," the coach said. "And you can't point to any one thing as a cause. They are in super shape, but it's just one more thing that seems to be mushrooming on us right now."

Emory added that he felt the loss to Southwestern Louisiana was what hurt worst of all. "We really should have won that game," he said. "Those five fumbles in the third quarter did it. Then, the Florida State score caused people to get concerned, and even the Southern Mississippi score, which I don't think was indicative of the game."

In grading the films, Emory said there were a lot of good things in the game. "So many times, we were one block away from making it work. The problem is still youth. The young linemen make mistakes, but they don't make them one after another. It seemed like one would have a breakdown on one play, and then another would make a mistake on the next, and another on the next. We were so close to getting everything to work."

Another thing, Emory added, is that "both Florida State and Southern Mississippi are fine football teams."

The coach doesn't feel that the team has lost its morale. "It's easy, especially for young players, to look for someone else to blame. But I haven't heard it from our players. This morning (Thursday) I've met with 15 or so individually and they are all anxious to get back to work."

How much the open date helped won't be seen for a while. The Pirates return to action against Richmond in a 1:30 p.m. game in the Virginia capital city next Saturday.

Cubs Lose First Game

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount's junior varsity football team gained a 15-8 victory over Rose High School yesterday, handing the Rampant Cubs their first loss of the season.

Rocky Mount scored early in the game, on a 40-yard reverse pass for a 7-0 first quarter lead. Rose came back to take an 8-7 halftime lead as Ronnie Worsley went in from five yards out, then added a two-point conversion.

It remained 8-7 until the late stages of the game, when Rocky Mount scored on a 60-yard pass. On the play, the two Rose defenders collided and fell down trying to intercept. With a two-point conversion, that made it 15-8, the final score.

Rose, now 4-1, plays host to Beddingfield next Thursday.

The weekend's sports activities are off to a busy start, what with the heavyweight fight last night, the pennant races coming to a close, and all of the rest, so we're going to keep this one short.

The standings changed a little last week, and we now find Rick Scoppe still atop the pile at 39-9, followed by this writer at 38-10. Our guests are third with a 37-11 record, followed by Etha Allen and Joe Jenkins, tied at 35-13. Tom Baines brings up the rear with a 33-15 mark.

There are few differences this week, however, so more changes may have to wait a while.

Our guest last week, county manager Reginald Gray had a 9-3 mark, still off Jim Kyle's 11-1 record. This week, we used East Carolina's open date to get Coach Ed Emory to make his choices for us.

In the high school picks, our record dipped a bit as we went 4-2 to come up with a 24-7 mark overall.

There are six games this week.

First off, North Pitt is at Ayden-Grifton. The Chargers won their first last week. North Pitt is still looking for an ECC win. Their defense has been the key to keeping it close, but they haven't been able to pick up a win. This could be their week. We'll pick North Pitt.

Conley travels to Farmville Central in the other cross-county contest. The Vikings came close two weeks ago, then nearly pulled off a surprise against Southern Nash. Farmville, however, is getting it together now. We'll stick with the Jaguars to win.

In the other games, we like Williamston over Washington, Roanoke over Plymouth, Aurora over Jamesville, and Southwest Edgecombe over Greene Central.

Turning to the panel, with East Carolina open, we find only one real local game with Rose hosting Rocky Mount.

The Rampants rallied from behind to win their first conference game last week, but so did the Gryphons. The two were favored to battle it out for the title this year, so this should be the big one. The panel gives the Rampants the nod, casting a 4-2 vote.

Our other consensus picks find Indiana over Duke; Pittsburgh over Maryland; West Virginia over Virginia; The Citadel over VMI; Missouri over Penn State; Clemson over Virginia Tech; North Carolina over Georgia Tech; South Carolina over N.C. State; Wake Forest over William & Mary; Baylor over Houston; and Nebraska over Florida State.

Rampettes Finish 2nd In Four-Way Contest

ROCKY MOUNT — Greenville Rose's girls' cross-country team, buoyed by Bobbie Holloway's third place finish, came in second to Beddingfield Thursday afternoon in a four-way Division I cross-country meet.

The Bruins wound up first with 41 points followed by Rose's 54 while Northern Nash was third with 81 points. Rocky Mount, which had three runners among the top five finishers, had only runners and therefore did not have a team total.

The Gryphon's Susie Ess finished first with a time of 20:51 and was followed by teammate Susie Dresser in second with a time of 20:57.

The Rampettes' Holloway was third at 23:26 while Rocky Mount's Sandy Ess was fourth at 23:33. Fifth was Beddingfield's Jackie Welsh at 23:51.

Other Rose finishers were:

HIGH POINT — The East Carolina women's field hockey team suffered its first loss of the season Thursday as High Point College shut out the Lady Pirates, 2-0.

Despite the loss, Pirate goalie Jane Radford had an outstanding game, stopping 20 High Point shots.

The Purple Panthers were led by Liz Taylor, who drove in both her team's goals, one in each half, for the win.

The Lady Pirates are now 1-1. ECU will play host to Catawba and Davidson in a doubleheader on Oct. 18.

Pearson Comes Back After Wreck Slows Him

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Bill Elliott, driving a Mercury, led the list of 15 new qualifiers Thursday for Sunday's National 500 stock car race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Elliott, from Dawsonville, Ga., finished his run with a one-lap speed of 161.667 mph. He is in 16th position behind Dick May of Charlotte, N.C.

Right on Elliott's bumper was David Pearson, whose wreck in qualifying trials on Wednesday forced him to make a second bid. Pearson closed his trials at 161.046 mph in a Chevrolet. John Anderson, also in a Chevrolet, placed 18th with a speed of 160.500 mph.

Richard Petty, fourth in the NASCAR points standings this racing season, is at the 19th spot after posting a time of 160.438 mph.

Tom Gale of North Huntingdon, Pa. took the 20th spot with a time of 160.219 mph. Gale and Jody Ridley, who placed 22nd with a time of 159.977 mph, were the only Fords to qualify in the second day of time trials.

Sitting in the 21st spot is Tim Richmond of Ashland, Ohio, who finished his run on the 1.5-mile track with a time of 160.219 mph.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

Bridge is a game of counting. Any help that you can give partner on defense to enable him to count out a hand not only will be greatly appreciated but also can, in some circumstances, be crucial.

The bidding is not without interest. North felt that, because of his flat hand, he did not have quite enough to act freely over West's overcall. When South reopened with a double, however, North could now afford to jump raise his partner's suit. Since he had not acted at his first turn, the raise to three spades was not forcing, and could not possibly show more than he actually held.

Against four spades, West led the king of clubs. East made a fine defensive play when he overtook the king with the ace and shifted to the jack of diamonds.

Declarer covered with the king and West won the ace. He cashed to queen of diamonds, on which East played the three and declarer the eight. Should West try to cash the setting trick in diamonds or clubs?

Logically, he should try diamonds. If declarer is out of diamonds, it is improbable that he will be able to get enough discards, either from his hand or dummy's, to avoid a subsequent club loser. But West does not need logic to solve this problem—the solution lies in the card that his partner played to the second diamond!

With an odd number of cards remaining in the suit, the expert practice is to follow with the lowest. Thus, East's play of the three of diamonds on the second round of the suit showed either three or five cards left in the suit. Obviously, East couldn't have five remaining diamonds because declarer followed suit! Therefore, East must have started with a four-card suit and so declarer had to have another diamond. Simple, isn't it?

Jewelry Theft Is Investigated

Greenville police are investigating the Thursday morning theft of approximately $70 to $100 worth of costume jewelry from Tetterton Jewelers, 214 E. Fifth Street.

Chief Glenn Cannon said that the jewelry was taken from a display area at the store after a glass panel at the front of the building was broken.

The chief, who said that the store was not entered in the incident, reported the thief apparently reached through the broken glass section and removed the items from the display area. He added that fresh blood was discovered on the sidewalk below the broken glass.

The theft was discovered around 7:25 a.m., he reported.

Jury Ponders Gun Trial Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal court jury was to resume its deliberations today in the trial of a Wilson gun shop owner and two New York men accused by the government of conspiring to ship weapons to the Irish Republican Army.

The jury in U.S. District Court deliberated for more than two hours Thursday without reaching a verdict on the government's allegations.

On trial are Howard Bruton Jr., owner of the B and B Gun Shop in Wilson; George DeMeo, and his nephew, Robert Ferraro.

Bruton, who also is the sales supervisor of Wilson's flue-cured tobacco market, could get 25 years in prison and a $30,000 fine if convicted. DeMeo could get 20 years and $25,000 and Ferraro could get five years and $5,000.

Judge Franklin Dupree dismissed all but a conspiracy charge against Ferraro Thursday.

Defense attorneys, in their closing statements Thursday, challenged the trustworthiness of Binford Benton, a former partner in the gun shop and the government's chief witness. Benton, under a plea-bargaining agreement two years ago, received a suspended prison sentence and immunity from further prosecution in exchange for his testimony.

Joseph B. Cheshire, attorney for Ferraro, told jurors that the "government wants you to believe evidence against Mr. Ferraro from the mouth of a convicted felon."

Prosecutors contended Benton showed more character than the defendants because he admitted his involvement in the alleged conspiracy.

Benton testified that he sold 80 to 100 off-the-record guns to DeMeo at Bruton's direction.

DeMeo's lawyer, Harvey Kaminski, said DeMeo traveled to Wilson from New York on business for his leather, gun parts and bronze businesses, not to buy illegal guns as the government and Benton alleged.

Julian Greenspun, head of a three-member team of federal prosecutors, challenged defense lawyers' contention that Bruton didn't know Benton and others in the shop were selling guns off the record.

"Bruton was living right there behind the shop," Greenspun said. "Bruton knew how to use money to make money — but he got other people to do the dirty work."

Volume Heavy At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Volume of sales was heavy on the Farmville Tobacco Market Thursday with low grades of leaf and nondescript grades accounting for most of the volume.

Prices were steady to slightly weaker on some grades. Quality cutters and leaf grades accounted for most of the sales that brought from $1.75 to $1.80 per pound. Stabilization receipts accounted for 12.50 percent of gross sales.
