Libya Sides With Iran In War On 'American Proxy'

By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer
BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi forces were reported bogged down today in efforts to gain control of Iran's oil port of Khorramshahr, but the air war flared and Libya became the first Arab nation to declare support for non-Arab Iran in the conflict.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi said it was an "Islamic duty" for other Arab countries to back Iran, Libya's official news agency JANA reported. It quoted him as saying Iraq was a U.S. proxy in the war and adding, "We have resolved to confront America in the Arab world."

The Libyans also were reported supplying Iran with large quantities of arms and ammunition.

A respected Israeli radio monitor said he intercepted messages indicating the air flights of supplies began Wednesday and about 10 planes made trips that day and Thursday. He could not say whether the flights were continuing today.

He said the planes, including American-made Boeing 747 jumbo jets, flew from Tripoli, Libya over Greece and Bulgaria and into Soviet airspace before landing in Iran.

Iranian warplanes bombed the Iraqi cities of Kirkuk, Mosul and Suleimanieh today, the Iraqis reported. They said 13 civilians were killed in the raids and five Iranian planes were shot down.

Iraqi jets raided oil installations near Ahwaz and all planes returned safely, an Iraqi communique said.

Iraq issued little information on its 19-day-old offensive aimed at Khorramshahr on the disputed Shatt al-Arab waterway and at the nearby Iranian refinery of Abadan, some 70 miles south of Ahwaz, capital of Iran's oil-rich Khuzistan Province. It said 22 Iranian and three Iraqi soldiers had been killed in the Khorramshahr area in 24 hours.

But reporters in the Iraqi-occupied sector of Khorramshahr said the Iraqis hold the northwest neighborhoods and the port section but the Iranians hold southeast sector and the bridges on the Karun river, which divides the city.

An Iraqi commander said the Iranians continued to hold a key bridge over an emplacement of five or six tanks. He said the Iranians were able to lob shells on the port but could not advance on the ground.

An Iraqi military communique reported two Iranian helicopters shot down over the southern sector Thursday and said 16 Iranians were killed. It said Iraqi ground forces destroyed power stations and set fuel depots afire in Ahwaz.

The Iranian news agency reported an Iraqi MiG jet raided the railroad station in Ahwaz and artillery shelled the station, killing 14 people. Iran said Iraqi warplanes also bombed two hospitals in Ahwaz, killing "a number of people," and shelled Abadan, demolishing part of the Red Crescent building.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, in a statement on Tehran Radio, urged the Iranian people not to be alarmed by the explosions in Ahwaz, saying "this is a daily occurrence, our own forces are causing similar explosions in Iraqi territory."

He said Iranian ground forces advanced six miles against the Iraqi invaders along a 24-mile front in the sector near Ahwaz and declared, "We are entering the final phase of the war."

Baghdad Radio said Thursday that Iraqi forces were "destroying vital military and economic installations" at Dezful and that the city, 150 miles north of Khorramshahr "is at the mercy of our ground fire."

Iran accused Iraq of using giant ground-to-ground missiles for the first time in the war Wednesday night. It said the missiles hit Dezful and neighboring Andimeshk, killing 110 civilians and wounding 300 in Dezful and killing 60 to 70 people in Andimeshk.

Rezoning Proposals Are Approved By City Council

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Seven public hearings, including three involving rezoning matters and one on a revision of the rate and programming schedules for local cable television, were conducted Thursday night by the City Council.

Approval was given for the rezoning, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-6 (high density residential), of 1.67 acres owned by W. A. Manning west of State Road 1135, adjacent to Red Oak Plaza.

measures are required in the fire district that are not necessary in residential construction.

Approval was given, following a hearing, to a proposal by Greenville Cable TV Inc. for a revision in the rate and programming schedule here, involving the addition of four new channels and a second alternative movie channel. A rate increase of 85 cents per month will be involved for subscribers who only have the mini-service or basic portion of the cable program.

Ray Bell from Greenville Cable TV said that the program schedule revision will involve the addition of Channel 28, WPTF (NBC) in Raleigh/Durham; Channel 11, WTVD (CBS) in Durham; the Cable News Network, a 24-hour news station out of Atlanta; and Home Box Office, a full service movie offering.

scribe only to that movie service.

The council approved an amendment to Section 32-15 of the Zoning Ordinance relative to street access. The purpose of the amendment is to provide uniformity in the Subdivision Regulation, adopted recently by the council.

The amended section will read: "No building shall be erected on a lot which does not abut a street which is publicly dedicated, accepted (and) maintained, or a guarantee for improvements of such street has been filed with the city engineer."

The council also approved a request that a portion of the cul-de-sac of Sara Lane, located in Elizabeth Heights, be closed. The property has been approved for future development and plans call for the extension of Sara Lane.

In a seventh public hearing, the city's performance under the Community Development program was reviewed by Ben Shivar, CD director here. Shivar explained that of the total $7.8 million CD grant for Greenville, 87.5 percent has been expended.

During the five-year grant period, approximately 70 projects have been programmed and implemented and only three projects—West Meadowbrook, 14th Street construction, and street construction in the Southside Project—remain to be completed with current funds.

Shivar said that under the program, 180 acquisitions have been completed, 110 relocations have been handled, 118 sub-standard structures have been demolished, 105 structures have been rehabilitated, nine miles of unpaved streets have been paved, and 15

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — President Carter attacked Republican Ronald Reagan on farm and social policies Thursday, charged that GOP candidates in North Carolina were being bankrolled by "rich outsiders," and stressed his own support for the state's tobacco and textile industries.

Carter spoke at a rally at the Dixie Classic Fair and at a private $500-a-couple fundraiser at Tanglewood Park in what were planned to be his only campaign appearances in North Carolina.

The state gave Carter a majority in 1976 and is considered to be leaning toward him in the upcoming election.

Carter spoke under sunny skies before an enthusiastic crowd of several thousand people at the fairgrounds, where a few people carried signs boosting Reagan and independent presidential candidate John Anderson.

Carter repeatedly blasted Reagan and told the crowd that the GOP nominee has said farm price supports "subsidize the inefficient."

He also said Reagan has opposed the minimum wage, the windfall profits tax on oil companies and the Department of Energy. He said Reagan would "let the oil companies be unleashed to run the energy program for us."

He blasted Reagan's proposals to cut government spending and federal taxes. He said North Carolina received $910 million in federal aid last year and that the state would have to double its own taxes to support those federal programs.

"That's not my idea of progress," he said.

The president was joined by several Democratic officeholders and candidates from across the state.

He praised at length Gov. Jim Hunt, Sen. Robert Morgan and Rep. Stephen Neal of Winston-Salem, all of whom are seeking re-election against Republican opponents.

Carter first referred to the state's Democratic senator as "Jim Morgan" but quickly caught his gaff corrected it to "Bob Morgan."

Council members also authorized the rezoning, from Highway Commercial to Unoffensive Industry, of the Industrial Transmissions Inc. property (.83 acres), located on N. Greene Street at the Industrial Boulevard intersection.

Bobby Roberson, city planning director, said that the property is located across from the TRW Inc. plant and is contiguous to existing Unoffensive Industry zoning.

The rezoning, from Shopping Center to R-6, of the Collice Moore and Max Joyner property (four acres) located some 200 feet east of Greenville Boulevard between Eastbrook Drive and Devonshire Drive, gained Council approval.

Roberson, who pointed out that the property is contiguous to existing R-6 zoning, suggested that the trend in that area will continue to grow toward high density residential use.

In a related matter, the Council approved an ordinance deleting the Joyner and Moore property from the fire district. It was noted that certain types of construction

With the approved rate revision, a customer without the movie or super service would pay 85 cents more per month.

Of the four Nobel recipients named so far this year, three are Americans. The United States has dominated the Nobel annals, particularly in science categories and more strongly than ever in the last five years. After a clean sweep of the science awards as well as the literature prize in 1976, more than half the laureates have been American citizens.

The three newly chosen researchers have explored the genetic regulation of the body's immune response. They showed that so called H antigens (Histocompatibility antigens) determine the interaction of the multitude of different cells responsible for the body's immunological reactions — including the combat of infections and rejection of foreign matter.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two Americans and a Frenchman today won the 1980 Nobel Prize in physiology or medicine for their discoveries on how genetic makeup determines whether a person successfully combats cancer and other diseases.

The award went to genetic researchers and immunologists Baruf Benacerraf, a Venezuelan-born American citizen working at Harvard University; George Snell, of the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor, Me. and Frenchman Jean Dausset of the immunological laboratory of St. Louis Hospital of Paris University.

The three share the coveted prize, this year carrying a sum of $211,000, for their work on "genetically determined structures on the cell surface that regulate immunological reactions."

Recreation Department To Honor Volunteers

Members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission at their October meeting on Wednesday night approved changing the November meeting date from November 12 to November 19 in order to hold a recognition dinner for nearly 150 volunteers.

According to Recreation and Parks Department Director Boyd Lee, these persons have made substantial contributions in the terms of many voluntary hours of service, and the dinner will be to show appreciation for their dedicated service.

The event, which will be held at Elm Street Gym, will also serve as the monthly meeting for November.

On the subject of a policy for fees and charges, discussed at an earlier meeting, Lee told commissioners that he had been informed that members of the City Council wanted to hold a workshop on the proposal before taking action, so that it will be November before the Council considered the matter.

Reporting on the reassignment of personnel within the Recreation and Parks Department in seeking to more effectively utilize personnel, Lee told commissioners that after meeting with staff members and discussing possible changes, several reassignments had been made, with those concerned expressing pleasure about the changes.

Reassignments made are: Jim Parker, formerly the athletic director, has been assigned as the parks development coordinator, with Ben James named as athletic director. Mrs. Leslie Ball of the Senior Citizens Center and Nancy Evans of the Elm Street Center, will be filling

Dear Abby

Help Available for The Miserably Fat

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Do you know what it's like to:
—Walk down the street and have a total stranger say, "You have such a pretty face, it's a shame you're so fat."
—Shop in a grocery store and have people watch to see what you put in your cart?
—Walk into a restaurant and wonder if you'll fit into the booths or chairs? (Or worse yet, go to someone's home and pray there will be a chair that's sturdy enough to hold you?)
—Squeeze into a theater seat, and sit in agony during the entire performance while the sides of the seat dig into your thighs?
—Lose out on a job for which you are highly qualified because of the way you look? (They never tell you that's the reason, but somehow you know it is.)
—Be told that someone would like to date you if you would lose some weight?
—Wonder if maybe you wouldn't be better off dead?
Well, I do. I know there is nothing you or anybody else can do about my problem. Abby, but it felt good to get it off my chest. Thanks for listening.

FAT, FEMALE AND MISERABLE

DEAR MISERABLE: I know of two solutions to your problem. One is Overeaters Anonymous, P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504. They have chapters in nearly every city in the nation, and a more loving, caring, understanding and supportive group of people you could never hope to meet.

The other is The National Association to Aid Fat Americans, Inc., P.O. Box 43, Bellerose, N.Y. 11426. This is a group of frankly fat people who have banded together for the purpose of helping the obese to accept themselves as they are. There is much to be said for both organizations.

When writing, please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: If you have room for just one more letter about "the other woman," I hope this is it, because I am an authority.

When I'd read a Dear Abby letter from "the other woman" who warned girls not to waste their time on a married man, I'd say, "Not me! Mine is different. We are going to wind up together one day!"

He always talked about the "someday" when he'd divorce his wife and marry me, but he never got around to divorcing her. (He said it was too expensive, but he bought himself a $4,000 watch.) Then suddenly a terrible thing happened. His wife died.

Did he marry me? Not on your life. He met somebody else, and now he wants nothing more to do with me. Why not? He could never trust a woman who would sneak around with a married man!

So Abby, please tell women not to be foolish and waste precious years on a married man. Don't hope and wait and sit like I did. I wasted three years for nothing.

Life As It's Lived

Could Never Join The Kitchen Exhibitionists

By GAIL MICHAELS

One of the tackier trends in kitchen decorating is hanging one's pots in public. I don't expect a good homemaker to hide her light under a bushel, but this is really flaunting it. As far as I'm concerned, it's tantamount to wearing a string bikini to your sister's wedding to show off your good figure.

I could never bring myself to join the ranks of these kitchen exhibitionists, and it has nothing to do with my fear that if my guests ever got a good look at the bottom of my cookware, no one would ever eat with me again. This is strictly a matter of taste, although it's true that I am so inured to two-toned cookware (harvest gold and sticky brown) that when I walk into a kitchen in which most of the lighting emanates from the dazzling copper bottoms of Revereware, I immediately suspect that I am being deceived. The woman of the house either sends out for pizza every night, owns two complete sets of cookware, one of which she hides behind the garbage disposal, or is the majority stockholder in the Twinkle Company.

Of course, I realize that there are women who actually care as much about the exterior condition of their pots as they do about the interior. I've even met a few of these women. Their closets look better than my living room.

What's more, they comb the fringe on their bedspreeds. And they keep hors d'oeuvres in the freezer for drop-in company.

They jog an hour each day. They sew their own designer fashions. They wash their children's faces before they take them to the supermarket.

They can always tell who got the girl in the latest Harlequin Romance. They iron permanent press. They put lipstick on before they take out the trash. They polish their children's tennis shoes. To them every water spot on a jelly glass is a major tragedy.

It's not that I have no sympathy for these women. I can understand the temptation of super housekeepers to pull out all the stops and show off their pots. After all, if Picasso had worked with a Brillo pad, no one would have expected him to stash the results in the cabinet next to the stove.

The question is, where will it end? It started innocently enough with potholders and spatulas. Now one woman can bring a whole bridge club to its knees with a blinding flash from one aluminum fry pan.

I refuse to be impressed. I could hang my cookware, too, if it were cast iron. But someone has to take a stand for good taste. If we don't stand up for decency now, the next trend could be cookie sheet wall-hangings or open oven doors.

That's when I start a vigilante group.

COLLEGE EDUCATED AAUW STILL UNEDUCATED ON ERA

The American Association of University Women (AAUW) is holding its State Meeting in Wilmington October 11 with ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) as a top priority.

The AAUW is an organization of college educated women. They support ERA, ERA Extension, and the ERA boycott. When AAUW president Marjorie Chambers was asked on the TODAY Show why Phyllis Schlafly is not on the Federal Advisory Committee on Women, she replied, "Why should she be! She doesn't support the International Women's Year plan of Action."

In June of this year, the AAUW held its national convention in Albuquerque, N.M. They heard a fiery speech by Liz Carpenter of ERAmerica urging them to "defeat every legislator who is against ERA, or who is too tongue-tied or chicken to speak out about it. No one is worthy of being in a decisionmaking body if he or she is against ERA."

Then the AAUW voted overwhelmingly to continue to exclude men from membership, proving that to them, some people are more "equal" than others. Then they held their election for new officers, BUT the election had to be declared illegal because as Ms. Chambers explained, "more ballots were cast than the voting strength."

And so, covered with embarrassment at their own inability to conduct an honest election in their own organization, the AAUW had to hold a second election. These are the college-educated women who tell us we need ERA! No wonder they want the Federal Government to solve all their problems! They can't even manage their own.

Sorry ladies we can't support your views. The majority of North Carolina citizens don't want ERA.

Vows Solemnized In Private Ceremony

In a private ceremony, Cordelia Faye Strong and Robert Earl Whitfield were united in marriage Thursday evening at 6:30 in the yard of her grandmother's home, the late Mrs. Vina Parrott Simmons of Greenville.

The Rev. Willis Wilson, pastor of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church, performed the double ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by Mark Stone, guitarist, who also sang "Love Song."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Causey Sr. of Rt. 1, Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Louise Whitfield of Macclesfield.

The bride was wearing an ecru gown of lace and organza styled with a high neckline and long sleeves. The floor length gown had an A-line skirt. Her chapel length veil was two tiers bordered with lace and attached to a matching headpiece. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses, carnations, lily of the valley and greenery.

Missy, Kimberly and Amy Strong, daughters of the bride, and Robert Wayne Whitfield, son of the bridegroom, were attendants. The girls wore long lace dresses and each carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

The couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is employed by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the bridegroom is a building contractor.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony.

MRS. ROBERT EARL WHITFIELD

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If your children are like mine, they have led sheltered lives. They have never seen a chicken naked without benefit of seasoning or dressing. They have never witnessed the birth of a casserole. They have never walked in unexpectedly and viewed the massaging of bread dough.

They have regarded the kitchen as an adult community that is not open for children or pets. Their visits have been limited to throwing open the freezer/refrigerator doors and declaring, "There's nothing to eat in this house."

Now that they have their own apartments, I get a wonderful, warm, maternal feeling just knowing they are starving to death.

I cannot tell you the number of times I tried to lure them into the kitchen with teasers like, "Have you no curiosity as to how the cereal gets into the bowl?" Or, "Come. Stand by my side and together we will just add water." But they never took the bait.

Once when I made my son watch as I mixed a Caesar salad, he looked at the oil, bits of garlic, lemon juice, Worcestershire, parmesan and a raw egg floating in the bowl and said, "That's gross!" and walked away.

Now I have become the most important resource in their lives since Pampers.

There is not a day goes by that one of them does not call long distance to ask, "How do you make spaghetti?"

"Put on a pan of water and add the spaghetti."

"Spell that?"

"S-P-A-G..."

"Not that! The water!"

"What happened to all the fast foods you were going to choose from?"

"Mom! Man does not live by secret sauce alone. I have lived under the red warming light and found it wanting. Now tell me again, what does it mean when my potatoes begin to bush?"

In visiting one of their apartments the other night, I flung open the refrigerator door. On the first shelf was half a container of yogurt. On the second shelf was a roll of film and a hardened lime. A doggie bag in the egg keeper was later identified as Sweet & Sour Pork.

"There's nothing to eat in this house!" I announced.

Don't believe what you hear about revenge being empty and meaningless. It was wonderful!

CANCELLED STAMPS... were mailed yesterday by Pitt County Extension Homemakers. Remaining stamps are counted by Miss Addie Gore, left, home economics agent, and Mrs. Herbert Randolph.

Cancelled Stamps Mailed Yesterday

Lilamani Perera started the "Food for Stamps" project in 1973. Currently funds from the sale of cancelled lick and stick postage stamps, U. S. and foreign are used to feed hungry children in Bangladesh.

The Pitt County Extension Homemakers mailed 429,500 cancelled postage stamps yesterday. This number of stamps will feed 170 children for a year. Mrs. Herbert Randolph, of the Mount Pleasant Extension Homemakers, serves as county-wide chairman for the cancelled stamps project.

The project has been in operation here for four years and in previous years, the women have sent a total of 1,367,488 stamps. To feed one meal to a child, it takes 220-240 regular stamps, 140-160 commemorative stamps, 160-180 Christmas stamps and a much lesser number of foreign stamps.

Food for Stamps collects cancelled postage stamps worldwide which are sold and the money used by the Salvation Army children's feeding program. Thus far, $6,164.99 has been raised. Every $1.00 serves 10 plates of food to undernourished children in Bangladesh, said Miss Perera.

The Pitt County Extension Homemakers urge county residents to save stamps for their project. "We do need to have a one-quarter border of the envelope in order that the stamps are not damaged," said Mrs. Randolph.

For additional information, interested persons are asked to call 758-1196.

Sales Halt Might Help

Next week the tobacco warehouses of Eastern North Carolina will remain quiet. Sales have been halted for flue-cured tobacco because of a backlog that is reportedly building up and depressing prices.

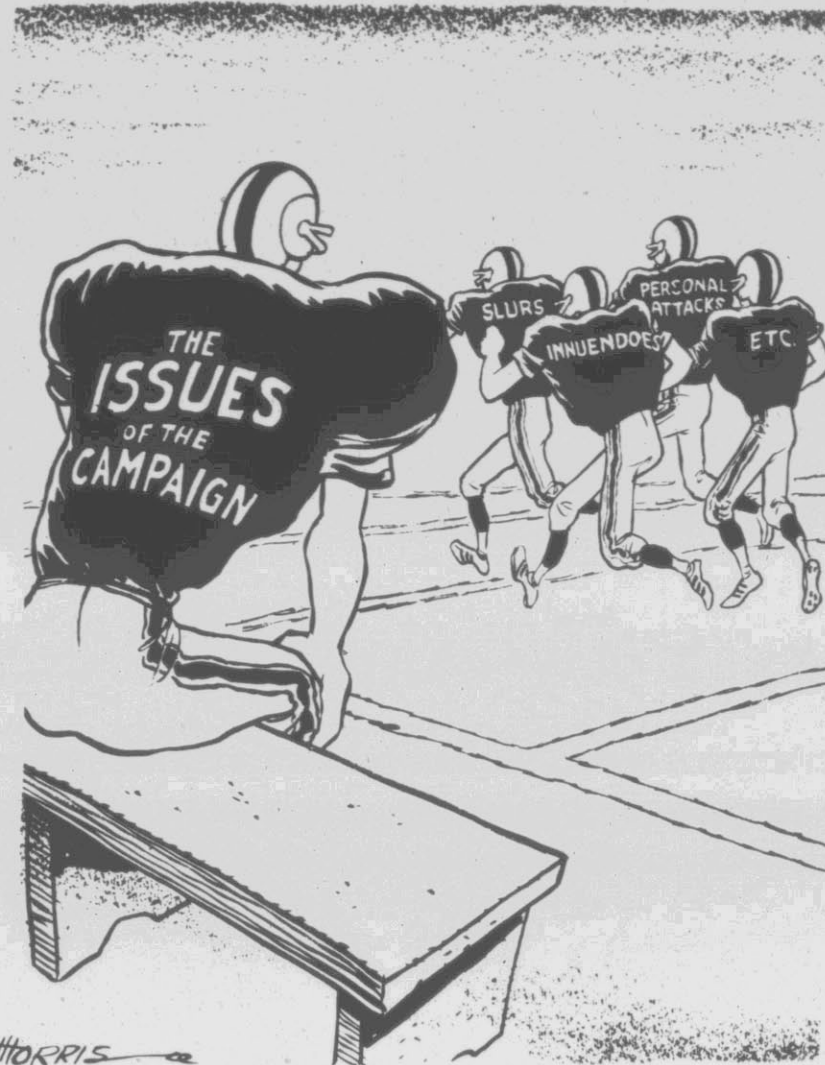

A Monday holiday meant no sales that day anyway and now the remainder of the week will see no sales. The U. S. Department of Agriculture said the holiday was requested by five major buying companies, who were apparently having trouble processing the leaf on hand.

It has happened in the past, and when the companies can't handle the leaf they slow down their buying, the result is a less competitive market.

The situation was reflected in increased receipts by Stabilization Corp. which saw its take double last week.

No doubt farmers are anxious to sell their tobacco and conclude the season. If the demand isn't there, however, the sales holiday is far preferable to accepting lower prices.

complex, more subtle resistance," says the report.

Prisons
Racial discrimination is the foundation of the state's large prison population, along with "uneven sentencing within counties, the lack of good lawyers for the poor, and the Department of Correction's determination to build more prisons," the center concludes.

A personal commentary in order: I was asked to write an article for the project, and did so. It was rejected. That article questioned the image of North Carolina as it is often distorted by national news media reports seemingly anxious to portray the state as backward and racist; reminded that firm but fair justice in cases such as those of Joan Little, the Wilmington 10, the Charlotte 3 and the Klan-Communist shootout wins North Carolina applause from all but the left; and recounted that the state's commonsense handling of unionism is a major factor in present industrial and economic growth as well

WASHINGTON — Every time something happens in Iran, the Iranian students in the United States seem to come out of the woodwork, or wherever they live, protesting alleged American involvement, screaming oaths against the U.S. president, and screwing up the traffic something awful.

This is, of course, perfectly legal, but it does go against the grain of many Americans, who feel that the streets could be better used during the rush hour than for pro-Khomeini demonstrations.

As a defender of free speech, I cannot call for any group to be banned from parading and shouting. But it seems to me that with Iran at war, the students could do so much more good if they went home and defended their country.

From what one can see, the Iranian students have tremendous spirit. Their talents seem wasted in the United States, yelling at the top of their lungs about all the terrible things that are being done to them. These people would make marvelous soldiers in Bani-Sadr's army, and could really play an important part in repulsing the satanic forces which are trying to overrun their country. Instead of lying down in the streets of Washington trying to stop our buses, they could throw themselves in front of the Iraqi tanks. And instead of burning effigies of President Carter, they could lob grenades at the Iraqi soldiers who have invaded their land.

Naturally, all of us here in the United States would hate to see them leave, but we would understand it, if they all packed up tomorrow and left for their homeland.

There might be financial problems in the pro-Khomeini students getting back. But I think this could be dealt with by unfreezing some of the Iranian assets in this country, and providing them with free transportation to Tehran. Let no one make any mistake about this proposal. No Iranian student should be kicked out of the U.S. just because he doesn't like it here. But we should appeal to his patriotism. Instead of the American people looking on with distaste as the students demonstrate, we should urge them to enlist in their own armed services, and go forth to fight their Holy War, where it is taking place.

We should make it perfectly clear that we would love to have them stay in America, but their protests are falling on deaf ears here, and they are much more needed on the battlefield. I would even hold a ticker tape parade down Broadway as they marched off to the troops which would take them back to the land of their birth.

Many people to whom I have suggested my idea seem skeptical. They say the Iranian students don't want to go home. They maintain the students would rather remain here, where they know they are safe from the crazy mullahs who are running their country. They also know they'll be protected in the U.S., no matter what they're protesting which doesn't happen to be the case in Iran.

But I don't believe it. I know every pro-Khomeini student is dying to leave the oppressive police state they maintain we have over here. So I say, "Iranian Students, Unite and Go Home. Your Country Needs You — And Arrivederci, Gang, We'll Miss You — But, When You Gotta Go — You Gotta Go."

Failing Win 'Moderates'

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — One reason why Rep. John Anderson's presidential campaign is failing to gain adherents may be the fact that fewer voters today than last spring perceive him to be "middle-of-the-road."

Earlier this year when Anderson was the choice of one-fifth of registered voters in test races against President Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, nearly four in 10 persons (38 percent) perceived Anderson as being in the center of the political spectrum.

In the latest Gallup survey, at a time when Anderson's earlier support has declined, fewer (26 percent) place him in the center, between the far left and the far right of the spectrum.

What appears to have happened is that many voters who formerly placed Anderson in the middle now express uncertainty about his political philosophy. The proportion has increased from 24 percent in the spring to 34 percent in the latest survey.

Currently, 25 percent of the electorate place Anderson left of center, 26 percent middle-of-the-road, 15 percent right of center, while 34 percent are undecided.

Further evidence that Anderson is not appealing to the middle-of-the-road voter is seen in the results of another recent Gallup survey showing Anderson backers to be more liberal than Carter supporters in their views on many important issues.

Historically, presidential candidates who have veered too far to the left or to the right of the political ideology of the electorate have failed to win elections. Two examples are Sen. George McGovern in 1972 and Sen. Barry Goldwater in 1964.

In the 1976 presidential race, then-candidate Jimmy Carter was also viewed by an increasing number of voters as veering left. This trend helped explain why Carter was not able to maintain his early wide lead over President Ford at the time.

Center Party Has Wide Appeal

The attractiveness of the center in American politics is seen in the fact that a proposed new "center party" has wide appeal for American voters. In fact, a political alignment which would include a center party in addition to the Republican and Democratic Parties would have the support of three voters in 10.

The current survey shows little change in the public's perceptions of Reagan, with 16 percent viewing him as left of center, 24 percent as middle of the road and 46 percent as right of center.

About three voters in 10 (29 percent) see Carter as left of center — an increase over the comparable figure in May — while 35 percent currently place him in the center and 21 percent to the right of center.

Following is the question asked and a tabular summary of the responses:

"People who are conservative in their political views are referred to as being right of center and people who are liberal in their political views are referred to as being left of center. Which one of these categories (respondents were handed a card with categories listed) best describes your own (Jimmy Carter's) (Ronald Reagan's) political position?"

A Litany Of Sins

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Reciting a litany of North Carolina's "sins" as perceived elsewhere in the nation, the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research concludes that the state's image is on the decline.

The list is familiar to most Tar Heels: the Joan Little trials, the J.P. Stevens union battle, the Wilmington 10, the Charlotte 3, conflict between the University of North Carolina and the federal government over desegregation, the state's prison and death row population, low wages, infant mortality, spending on public schools...

An independent research institution funded by private grants and dedicated to exploring public affairs with the goal of better understanding of "the profound impact state government has on the lives of everyone in North Carolina" the center's report on image concludes that recent events have "cast the state in its most negative national image in this century..."

Progress

The current issue of "NC Insight", a periodical published by the agency, is devoted to what people elsewhere think of North Carolina, and recalls that just 30 years ago in his "Southern Politics", V.O. Key attached the progressive label to the state, noting that it "enjoys a reputation for progressive outlook and action in many phases of life, especially industrial development, education, and race relations."

Bill Finger, editor of the research center magazine and a free-lance writer with credits in The New York Times and The Washington Post among others, reports in his lead article: "Today, these three arenas of life — industrial development, education, and race relations — remain at the top of the concerns of many North

Carolinians. "Ironically, though, lack of progress in these three has been chiefly responsible for the declining image of the state."

The exhaustive report explores the state's low unionism and "massive resistance" by the political leadership to change of the state's Right-to-Work laws, the rebirth of racism in Klan activities and politics; the plight of minorities who are oppressed, and mistreatment of migrant farmworkers, among other topics.

Two institutions — the university system, and the prisons — come in for particularly hard knocks: UNC President William Friday is accused of "reporting steady progress" in desegregation while no one challenged that stance, particularly "liberal" North Carolina journalists, many trained "a stone's throw away from Friday's home in Chapel Hill", the Research Center points out.

The desegregation cases leaves the public with "the specter of retrenchment at the heart of North Carolina progressivism, Chapel Hill". There is no open defiance such as that seen in some other states, but a "more

Other Editors Say Give Us A Rest

(Kannapolis Independent)

If Governor Jim Hunt and our legislature really want to do us North Carolinians a favor, we can think of nothing better than a moratorium on study commissions and new programs.

It seems that every time anybody has a problem — mental, physical or spiritual — the only thing the governor and the legislative leaders can think of is form a commission to study it.

A few legislators are named to the commission and expensive consultants are brought in to help the legislators think. The study goes on and on. The longer it lasts, the more it costs and the more the original problem grows.

And invariably, the study commission comes up with a stock answer: scrape up a few million dollars to start a new program.

In the past dozen years, new programs have been started faster than we could implement them and money has been shoveled out faster than we could spend it wisely. We have seen this in the schools, we have seen it in medical care, in social services, in all phases of government. We are beginning to think this is the crux of the turmoil at the Cabarrus County Public Health Department.

The result has been a shoving of bureaucrats' solutions down our throats before we realized we had problems. Benefits are hard to find.

After all the studies and all the new programs that government has said North Carolinians need, our social ills are more numerous and more serious.

It seems that for every problem we manage to solve, government creates a half-dozen new ones.

We're going around in circles.

Strength For Today

TREASURE A FEELING YOU ARE NEEDED

Few things raise us to such heights of dignity and fulfillment as the feeling that we are needed. People who cease to feel they are needed either become bitter or wither up and die.

Many examples of being needed can be cited. Some parents, for example, work desperately hard for their children and continue to do so until the end of their lives. There is love behind this, of course, but there is also the stimulating experience of knowing that the parents are needed.

If we are to be happy, we must learn how to serve other people. And it is equally important that we learn how to accept gracefully the loving service which others offer us. Nothing will kill the spirit of a person so quickly as to be repulsed and given the feeling that he or she can contribute nothing to the life of a loved one or to the welfare of a social group or community. — Elisha Douglass

Short On Cents

Do you have a cookie jar full of pennies at home? Do you throw your spare pennies in a drawer and forget about them because they're too much trouble to carry? If you do, you may be contributing to a penny shortage affecting some banks and businesses. The penny, or cent, is the most widely used U.S. coin. The government produces about 10 billion pennies each year. This year, the U.S. Mint has increased penny production to about 60 million cents a day, compared with 42 billion in 1979. Treasury Department officials believe the shortage exists because people are hoarding the coins rather than spending them.

Court Lacked Time For Ballot Appeal

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals panel said it denied a state request for a quick hearing on a Georgia general election ballot controversy because there wouldn't be time to get John Anderson's name off the ballot even if they ruled in favor of the state.

In the written denial released Thursday, the three-judge panel of the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals gave that reason for the decision it made Tuesday on the request by Secretary of State David Poythress.

A lower court had ordered Anderson's name included on the state ballot for the Nov. 4 general election.

The appellate judges noted that state attorneys on Monday told them a decision on the state's appeal of that order would be needed by Tuesday in order for the ballots to be printed on time.

"It was readily apparent that no expedited briefing schedule or consideration of the appeal on the merits could be accomplished in time to prevent Anderson's name from appearing on the November 4 ballot," the court wrote. "An expedited appeal at this time therefore would not serve the purpose for which it was requested."

The judges, after first saying they would render a decision Tuesday, changed their minds and put the matter on the court's regular docket.

recreation projects have been implemented.

Shivar said that approximately 80 percent of all expenditures have directly benefited Greenville's low and moderate income residents.

He reported that the CD staff will conduct annual neighborhood meetings in November and December and the current and upcoming applications for funding will be reviewed.

Council members approved the adoption of a Memorandum of Understanding between the city and the Department of Housing and Urban Development relative to the New Horizons program of promoting fair housing and fair lending. As part of the memorandum, the city agrees to "establish a city-wide fair housing task force composed of influential citizens and others affected by fair housing programs." The task force will develop a city-wide fair housing strategy and action program.

Other business on the Council agenda included:

- Scheduling of five public hearings for the November meeting, to consider a request for rezoning, from RA-20 to R-15, of Section IV of Westhaven Subdivision, the annexation of the Westhaven section, an amendment to the uses permitted in the Industrial and Unoffensive Industry zoning classifications, an amendment to the Zoning Ordinance to clarify the design standards for off-street parking facilities, and the deletion from the Transportation Plan of Sedgefield Drive, from Hooker Road to St. Andrews Drive.

- Approval of an application by the Pitt County Health Department for a one-year renewal of the permit granted for the mobile home located behind the Health Department (used for medical supply and records storage);

- Approval of a recommendation by the Traffic Commission that "no parking" be implemented on Chestnut Street, from Raleigh Avenue to an alleyway located on Chestnut, approximately 155 feet.

- Approval of a Traffic Commission recommendation that "no parking" be implemented from 1 a.m. to 8 a.m. on the east side of Forbes Street from Ninth to Tenth Street.

- Concurrence in a recommendation by the traffic board that a request from residents of Queen Anne Road to reduce the speed limit on the street to 25 miles per hour be disapproved (it was recommended that the Traffic Commission meet with residents of the area in an effort to work out some type of solution to speeding problems on Queen Anne Road).

- Approval of applications by Rite Aid of North Carolina, doing business as Rite Aid Discount Pharmacy at West End Shopping Center, Carolina East Convenience Center, and at 2814 E. Tenth Street, for off-premise beer privilege licenses.

- Approval of an application by Winn-Dixie at Carolina East Convenience Center for an off-premise beer and wine privilege license.

- Appointment of Devana Cherry and Greg Fidler as Rose High School representatives on the Human Relations Council and Judy Carol Lucas and Jessamine Ann Calhoun as East Carolina University representatives on the HRC;

- Reappointment of Richard Blake to a second three-year term on the Stallings Field Advisory Development Commission;

- Adoption of an ordinance requiring any person owning real property within the city to cut and remove from the property all weeds and grass before it reaches 12 inches in height and to keep the property free from trash and refuse matter at all times, "provided, however, that such property owner shall not be required to cut real property and remove therefrom all weeds and grass more than four times in a calendar year"; and

- Adoption of a resolution abandoning an unused sewer easement on the southwest corner of the intersection of US 264 Bypass and NC 11.

Real Growth In Defense Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) -

The Carter administration remains committed to a "real growth" rate of about 4.5 percent for next year's defense budget despite considerable uncertainty in trying to estimate the full impact of inflation, officials say.

Senior officials said Thursday that largely due to inflation, the final military budget for fiscal 1982 may exceed President Carter's current guidelines by a substantial margin.

They described as incorrect a published report that the Pentagon already has sent its proposal to the White House's Office of Management and Budget.

"We don't have anything close to a budget submission from the Defense Department," one OMB official said.

According to Pentagon sources, the overall budget package will not be ready for submission OMB before late November.

The "real growth" sought by the administration means tangible increases in defense buying power after allowing for the effects of inflation.

Carter issued a set of defense spending guidelines in March, but revised them upward in July to keep pace with inflation.

The July guidelines established a ceiling of $190.6

billion in total defense budget authority and about $175 billion in spending for fiscal 1982, which begins next October. Budget authority is normally larger than the actual spending figure because some outlays under continuing programs come in later years.

Big Potato

Clarence Ward has grown what can be called a good size sweet potato in his Greenville garden.

The big potato, a Puerto Rican, measures eight and one-half inches in length and is 15 inches in circumference. The potato weighs in just a little over five pounds.

Ward, a resident of 1103 Van Nortwick Street, says his two rows of potatoes, each about 50 yards in length, gave him a good yield of a little over ten bushels.

main intact, the coming year's Pentagon budget would involve increases of $22 billion in budget authority and about $21 billion in spending over the current 1981 fiscal year.

However, an administration official noted that because of the volatility of inflation, "we may be looking at a 1982 defense budget substantially above present guidelines."

PEOPLE ON THE MOVE

On affluent avenues like this one . . . and on the more modest streets and lanes as well . . . people leave and people come. For all of them, moving is a traumatic experience that touches deep chords of family life.

Psalm 121 was originally written as a "pilgrim song" for those journeying to Jerusalem to celebrate religious festivals. Perhaps its message is just as appropriate in our moving experiences . . .

The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth and even for evermore.

Part of getting one's bearings in a new neighborhood is finding a place of worship where the family will continue or renew its spiritual life. There will be new friends there eager to welcome you . . . and to share with you their faith.

Three Churches Share One Building In Minnesota

By GALE TOLLIN
Associated Press Writer
MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — Four years after their three churches started living together, sans marriage but with full benefits of clergy, the ministers sat back and said it was good.

In their block-long Multi-Church Center, the congregations of Centenary United Methodist, First Baptist and First Congregational maintain separate identities.

But they share Sunday schools and youth groups, two sanctuaries and a library, office workers and equipment, choir rehearsal rooms and singers, audiovisual gear, ideas and strengths.

The shared facility has been called many things.

Some people call it the "three-in-one" church.

Retired businessman Elmer A. Fritts, 79, a prime mover in the project, calls it a "people church."

Pastors see the facility as a unique experiment that may well become a model of efficiency for other churches. The ministers note:

—Financial savings. First Baptist, of the American Baptist Churches, and First Congregational, United Church of Christ, already have paid their share of construction costs. Each pays only about $5,000 yearly for maintenance, insurance and utility services.

—Improved programming. There's one Sunday school, with classes of 10 to 15. Separately, the smaller churches might have had three children in a class. Similarly, youth groups might have numbered three or four each but, by joining with the Methodists, there are about 40.

—Energy. Fuel isn't burned to heat three separate churches.

—Shared staff. The large Methodist church has two ministers, a parish visitor and one secretary, but the three churches share another secretary and a salaried Christian education director.

—Witness. The community has seen that Christians can live and work together.

About the only detectable shortcoming, if it is one, is softened denominational feelings. Some folks speak of attending the "multi-church" instead of relating to their particular denominational congregation.

The Rev. Bill Kvale, Centenary's senior pastor, says, "We have to keep working to remind people of their denominational identity."

The ministers agree, however, that the advantages of shared facilities heavily outweigh any deficiencies.

"We have given expression to Christian unity," says Kvale.

"We have developed a great cooperative spirit," says the Rev. Lon Schneider, the Baptist pastor.

"A wonderful fellowship has developed among the staffs and the laity," says Clarion Olsen of First Congregational. "Youth is receiving a better training in ecumenicity."

"We are able to join in mission emphasis," says the Rev. Ed Shannon, Centenary's associate pastor.

The common stimulus for the joint venture was that all three downtown churches had major building needs. The Baptists' old building was cramped; the Methodists' 1907 sanctuary had structural cracks; the sagging roof over the U.C.C. church threatened to collapse.

It was decided to build on Centenary's property, where an education building constructed in 1953 could be retained as an annex. The churches deeded their properties to Multi-Church Foundation, a non-profit corporation. The percentage of ownership is proportionate to church membership — Methodists, 73½ percent; Baptists, 15 percent; U.C.C., 11½ percent.

Some $86,000 came from selling the Baptist and Congregational properties. Before ground was broken June 29, 1975, all three congregations had completed building fund drives. The total cost of the project was $920,936.

While no church owns a specific part of the 16,000-square-foot structure, the Methodists have 1,070 members and normally use the south sanctuary, seating 350, for two services each Sunday.

The Baptists, with about 175 members, and U.C.C., about 140, hold joint services in the north sanctuary, seating 150. The pastors rotate liturgy and sermons.

The "commons" between the sanctuaries provides dining space, a reception area, a place for people to mingle in fellowship before and after worship, and overflow space for services.

All three churches provide teachers for the joint Sunday school. The Methodists have one choir, the U.C.C. and Baptists another. Three youth choirs are drawn from all three churches.

Because they worship together, the U.C.C. people and Baptists have become especially close.

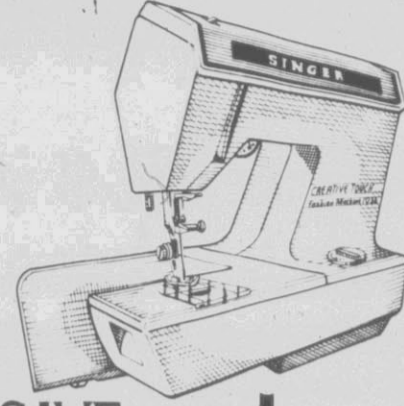

Youth choose which denominational events they'll attend. It once happened that all the Mankato seventh and eighth graders attending a Baptist camp in Iowa were from the U.C.C. and Methodist churches.

"We call on each other's people in the hospital," says Schneider. "We have been drawn together..." says Olsen. "...as one," adds Schneider.

Seek Airline Crews

DALLAS (AP) — Uncle Sam wants furloughed flight crews.

The Air Force has sent a trio of recruiters to convince veteran pilots and navigators laid off by financially troubled airlines that they can find job security in the service.

Capt. Vincent Ricci said Thursday a special team of Air Force recruiters will be in Dallas Oct. 17-25 to talk to former officers who have been laid off by airlines.

Recruiters already have tried to hire furloughed flight crews in Denver and are planning similar recruiting forays in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago and New York.

"The indications we have from the industry is that there will be about 800 former Air Force pilots on furlough by the first of January," said Capt. Pat Caldwell in San Antonio, Texas.

He said 39 pilots filled out applications in Denver three weeks ago, and nine definitely have decided to return to the Air Force.

The program is designed to beef up Air Force ranks in the face of a projected shortage of 2,000 flight-qualified positions by the end of 1981.

"Of course that projection does not affect first line units or Air Force readiness," Caldwell added. "Those units are run at 100 percent."

The shortage was expected in the Air Force Training Command and other flight-rated support positions.

But pilots and navigators who qualify for the return program will be able to negotiate their assignments, said Caldwell.

To qualify, the flight crew members must have previous military experience with the Air Force, Navy, Marines or Air National Guard, must sign up for at least four years and meet certain active duty requirements.

The flight crew members would enter the Air Force at the rank they held when they left the military, said Ricci.

Caldwell said the Air Force is recruiting the furloughed flight crews as part of on-going program to recruit former officers. The program saves the Air Force on training costs, he said.

"We figure the average training savings at $1.5 million per man," said Caldwell. "That savings includes the cost of his undergraduate flight training, his major weapons system training and 1,000 to 1,500 hours of flying time. We are buying experience."

Carter Audience....

Convention in August, "so naturally we like what he said, especially about farmers."

Carter made a strong statement of support for the state's tobacco industry and for farm price support.

"I really think his speech was more positive, more on the issues than it has been," Mrs. Hoyle said. One of her companions, Loretta Woodard of Princeton, said, "I like his programs for the elderly and his appreciation of the farmer."

Carter's statement that he would continue to support the nation's Social Security program seemed the high point of his speech for many others as well. "I'm so glad to hear him say that he's not going to leave us out in the cold," said Alice Broomley, a retired Wake County school teacher. "You don't know how glad that makes me."

Another retired woman, Geneva Jackson of Winston-Salem, said, "I like that he's a religious man and he doesn't mind showing it."

Signs which waved above the heads of the crowd were mostly pro-Carter, such as those which read, "Gimme Jimmy" and "Peace, Prosperity with Carter."

But one group in the middle of the crowd was equally as vigorous in their anti-

Carter sentiment: "Nuke Plains" and "Re-elect Rosalyn Carter in 1980" signs were held aloft by members of the Young Republicans organization of Wake Forest University.

"If he gets re-elected, we'll just get more of the same incompetence," one of the Wake Forest group said. "Man, Reagan is our only chance."

As the crowd milled through the gates after the speech, many stopped to buy Carter-Mondale campaign hats and buttons from vendors.

"I want some more," said a woman who already wore several Carter buttons. "I'll take them to my neighbors."

"But a man strolling by at the same time laughed and shook his head when he was asked to buy a Carter bumper sticker. "Son, I wouldn't have that on my car," he told the vendor. "I'm a Republican — just came to hear the competition and I wasn't impressed."

The roped-off fairgrounds had nearly emptied when one young man, a student at Winston-Salem State University, came strolling through looking at the abandoned posters and signs littering the ground. "No, I didn't come to hear him (Carter)" he said, "I just came out here to the fair."

Rapped By Carter..

who has been under attack, as you know, on your television, from outside forces' spending, against a great North Carolinian. And I hope that you here in North Carolina will show those outside, rich, politically misguided Americans what you think of Bob Morgan."

Carter praised his administration's record on textiles, a major industry in North Carolina, by saying foreign imports have been reduced and American exports increased during his term.

"That's the kind of progress I'm talking about, now and in the future," he said.

Campaigning in the nation's largest tobacco-producing state, Carter said he is concerned about reports that foreign leaf is being shredded and imported into the United States as scrap to circumvent federal law.

"I intend to see the loophole that permits this unfair practice closed once and for all," Carter said.

He said he is directing the Department of Agriculture to determine the quality of the tobacco and that he will propose legislation, if necessary, to stop the practice.

While on the platform, Carter signed a congressional resolution proclaiming National Agriculture Day on March 19, 1981.

After his appearance at the fair, Carter went by motorcade to Tanglewood Park at nearby Clemmons, where he attended the fundraising dinner and reception.

While his campaign garnered a reported $152,000, Carter cautioned a crowd of about 600 supporters that this election year is particularly crucial because the right wing has attacked traditional Democratic tenets.

"We are running a hard, difficult campaign," Carter told a group gathered on the lawn of the Tanglewood Park clubhouse, where a bluegrass band, clog dancers and lobster canapes had amused contributors before the speech.

"We face enormous bankrolls with all kinds of groups, financed with unlimited resources that don't even count."

"And the campaign for United States Senator here, when Bob Morgan is attacked every day with thousands and thousands of dollars from outside the state — a man who is courageous and who is committed to those principles that I have outlined to you."

Carter, who received praise from introductory statements by Hunt, Morgan and Neal, was in turn lavish with his praise for the "unity Democratic ticket in North Carolina."

In a light moment in his 10-minute speech, Carter said he often receives telephone calls from Hunt and Morgan.

He said that when Hunt is not on the telephone, then Morgan is at his elbow saying, "I want you to be as good a president for North Carolina as Jim Hunt would be if he was in the Oval Office.

"That's a pretty high standard to meet but I try to meet it," Carter said, brandishing his familiar smile.

Carter strategists termed the swing through the Tar Heel state "successful" — politically and financially — in Carter's attempt to secure the state's 14 electoral votes.

Flu Vaccine Shortage Reported In 2 States

ATLANTA (AP) — Declining production of influenza vaccine coupled with an unusual clamor for the shots may bring nationwide shortages just as the flu season gets into full swing this year, health officials say.

Georgia and Indiana already have reported vaccine shortages and other states are being surveyed, said Dr. Alan Hinman on Thursday. Hinman directs the immunization division at the National Center for Disease Control.

In an effort to avoid the large vaccine stockpiles left after recent winters, vaccine manufacturers apparently held production steady or reduced it slightly this year, officials said.

Meanwhile, the demand soared in Georgia, Indiana and elsewhere.

Last year, the Georgia Department of Human Resources administered 39,000 doses of vaccine during the September-through-May flu season. The agency already has given 40,000 shots this season, and its stockpiles are exhausted.

"It's pretty bad," said Dr. Jules Terry of the DHR. "I talked yesterday with six different (pharmaceutical) companies about getting more vaccine. We did get promises for 1,000 vials, but we need 2,000." Each vial provides enough vaccine for 10 vaccinations.

"It's quite possible that there is vaccine in distribution channels which just hasn't reached users yet," Hinman said. "But it may well be that the demand will exceed the supply."

The CDC has said Influenza A probably will be the most common flu strain in the United States this winter. Last year's outbreaks were dominated by Influenza B.

Vaccine produced for one season is not recommended for use the next year because each vaccine is formulated to combat the flu strain prevalent during that year.

Even if manufacturers decided to produce more vaccine now, Terry and Hinman noted, the new supplies would not be available until near the end of the current flu season.

Terry said the state is limiting flu immunizations to those who run the highest risk of serious complications from the illness — the elderly and those with diabetes or chronic kidney or respiratory problems.

He noted that doctors usually urge high-risk patients to receive flu vaccinations in the fall. But the reasons for the boost in requests remain unclear, he added.

"I guess the people have suddenly decided it would be a good thing," he said, adding that most people seeking the vaccine are in the high-risk group.

Vaccine supplies now will be distributed to local health departments in Georgia on the basis of their use last winter, Terry said.

A Higher Level For Aflatoxin

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration agreed Thursday to raise the level of aflatoxin allowed in corn intended for interstate shipment — subject to strict monitoring guidelines — and said clean corn could be mixed with infested corn to meet the new levels.

The FDA, acting on recommendations from state agriculture officials in North Carolina and South Carolina, set the new maximum at 100 parts per billion aflatoxin, up from 20 ppb. Under the monitoring plan, the FDA said states from which the corn is being shipped must make certain that no corn with more than 20 ppb aflatoxin reaches human food or feed for lactating livestock.

Aflatoxin, a product of a fungus that develops on corn in hot, dry weather such as this past summer, has caused widespread damage through the Carolinas this year.

North Carolina authorities estimate the loss to growers and grain elevator operators in this state alone so far is about $45 million from corn that could not be sold or shipped.

Aflatoxin has been shown to cause cancer in some animals under certain conditions, and — if taken in sufficient quantities — can kill. The lethal dosage varies from one animal to another.

State estimates show that 63 percent of North Carolina's estimated 104-million bushel corn crop is contaminated at levels above 20 ppb. About half of the state's corn usually is shipped to other states, primarily to Florida, Georgia, Tennessee and Virginia.

The FDA's agreement to allow blending is unprecedented in North Carolina. Under that agreement, state officials said corn containing up to 400 ppb aflatoxin could be blended with clean corn to meet the new standard.

Dr. William Y. Cobb, director of the Food and Drug Protection Division of the state Department of Agriculture, said his major concern was with the required monitoring of shipments out of state.

"This is one thing that is sort of problematical... There is no way we can force another state to delegate time" to monitor the use of the corn, Cobb said.

The ultimate user of the corn must sign a document showing that he or she understands that the feed is to be used only on non-lactating animals.

SBI Asked Probe Dept. Phone Calls

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation has been asked to investigate more than 7,000 telephone calls made between a state government office in Raleigh and Fayetteville over a period of 41 months. Motor Vehicles Commissioner Elbert I. Peters Jr. said Thursday.

Peters said the SBI study was requested by the state auditor's office, which questioned the phone calls during an audit of the Division of Motor Vehicles.

Peters said 7,094 calls were made between the two cities and were charged to a state credit card issued to Lewis P. "Crow" Wilson, an assistant motor vehicles commissioner, or to the telephone in Wilson's office.

The calls covered the period between April 1977 and last August.

Peters said 78 of the calls were made to Professional Insurance Corp. in Fayetteville. Wilson is an agent for that company, according to the state insurance commissioner's office.

As an assistant commissioner, Wilson serves as liaison with local governments, local law enforcement agencies, the division's field personnel and the public.

"The whole job is mostly public relations," Peters said. "His job requires him to make a lot of phone calls."

Peters said Wilson verifies his own bills before those bills are paid.

Wilson, who said he was contacted by the SBI on Wednesday, said that, "At this point, I don't care to may any statement in regards to this. I'm going to be cooperative to them to the fullest extent."

Wilson, 51, was appointed to his $43,692 a year post by Gov. Jim Hunt in March 1977.

Peters said Wilson wrote five checks totaling $59.42 to reimburse the state for telephone calls made in June 1977 and in 1978 during January, April, July and September.

"We don't have any record of any paid since that time," Peters said.

It was not known how much the telephone calls cost.

However, Transportation Secretary Thomas Bradshaw said the matter would be pursued.

"If there appears to be anything that is not proper, we will ask for full restitution and we will take whatever action the investigation may suggest," Bradshaw said.

Prices Steady At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Grade for grade, prices on the Farmville Tobacco Market were relatively steady yesterday, with the exception of some medium grades of leaf that sold higher, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade Sales Supervisor Louis Williams said.

The $1.75 class of tobacco was also somewhat stronger. Volume was heavy, consisting of mostly nondescript and leaf grades. Variegated tobacco is appearing in larger volume than at any time in several years. The market sold 425,831 pounds for $653,760, for an average of $153.53 per hundred pounds. To date, the market has sold 25,999,433 pounds for $39,140,943, for a season's average of $150.55.

Sierra Club Outing Slated

A Brice Creek Day Canoe Outing has been announced by a spokesman for the Joseph LeConte Chapter of the Sierra Club.

On Sunday, October 12 an easy five-mile paddle outing will be made on a low country tidal creek in the Croatan National Forest. Due to the unusual semi-tropical scenery in the undisturbed section, it is rated as one of the best canoeing streams in a publication on scenic streams and rivers in the U.S.

For more details and reservations for the trip, contact Pat Garton, 756-6263.

Also on Monday, October 13 at 8 p.m. the October meeting of the club, commonly called the Cypress Group, will be held in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church, 14th and Elm Streets. All interested persons are welcome.

Pirates Seek To Regain Winning Ways

Inside The Park Homer

Graig Nettles, with the ball close by, slides safely into home plate on an inside-the-park home run in the fifth inning of the second game of the American League playoff series Thursday in Kansas City. The Royals gained a 3-2 victory in the game to take a 2-0 lead in the best of five series for the American League pennant. (AP Laserphoto)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina's Pirates, trying to regroup after three straight losses, travel to Richmond, Va., Saturday, meeting long-time rival the University of Richmond Spiders.

The Pirates, 1-3, are coming off an open date, while the Spiders, winless last year, have opened up with a 2-3 mark. They opened up with a win over Bowling Green and followed that up with a victory over Villanova.

But they have lost the last three weeks, to Wyoming, West Virginia and Auburn. "They were right in the game against West Virginia and lost in the final minutes," Pirate Coach Ed Emory said. "They were able to move the ball against Auburn, too." That game, however, came out with Auburn on top, 55-16.

Getting back on the winning track won't be easy for the Pirates, Emory points out. "There are five 'M's' to a successful football program. They include Methods, Motivation, Management, Morale and Manpower. Manpower may be the most important, and it's the one we're most short of right now."

With injuries taking their toll in unusually high numbers, the Pirates will carry 66 players to Richmond, 39 of whom will be sophomores or freshmen.

"I feel that we have the proper methods, the motivation and management, and our morale is excellent, but our manpower will have to be made up for in terms of enthusiasm," Emory said.

He pointed out that the starting defensive unit will include no one who went through spring practice in that position. Several starters, however, missed the spring because of injuries or other reasons. "We have a lot of newcomers, people who's names aren't that well known yet," Emory added.

"But we've had good practices this week, and I think we're mentally ready to go."

The Spiders, who lost to the Pirates last year in Ficken Stadium, 52-10, aren't the same team. They have a new coach in Dal Shealy, and a veteran group of players. "They lost virtually no one off last year's team. Plus they've added about 15 good junior college players," Emory said.

Tops among those players is quarterback Steve Krainock, who has already passed for nearly 900 yards this year. He is joined in the backfield by two fine running backs, Reggie Evans and Steve Catlett.

"Krainock is a great football player," Emory said. "He has added a lot of poise and stability to Richmond's program and made them an instant success."

The Pirates, with a victory in the game, could even up the long-standing series with the Spiders. Richmond currently leads it, 11-10, but hasn't won since 1975, when the Spiders took a 17-14 victory.

Shealy's Spiders will feature a new look too. "They do something that I've never had to coach against," Emory said. "They have great line splits. The field is almost not wide enough for their line. If the ball is spotted right in the middle of the field, their tackles would be out on the hash marks. That would seem to make them vulnerable, but I'm sure that they wouldn't take such splits if they couldn't protect them."

Emory is hopeful that the Pirates' speed and agility will help to overcome the Richmond offense. "We've got to have a pass rush. We've worked hard on it, and we have quick, animated people in there."

Emory calls the Richmond game a "critical one" for the Pirates. "The Richmond game is a season unto itself. We've got to get back on the winning track."

"Our players haven't lost confidence, however, and the morale is great. We just have to stop their running game and make them pass to beat us. I think then, we'll have a good chance."

Steinbrenner Blames Base Coach After Royals Nip Yankees, 3-2

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Frank White is batting .714 against the New York Yankees in the first two games of the American League playoffs, exactly 286 percentage points below Kansas City's level of confidence.

"I shouldn't say this," grinned the Royals' second baseman moments after he nervously helped turn a double play to save a 3-2 victory and give Kansas City a commanding two-game lead in the best-of-five American League playoff series.

"But I will. We're going to get 'em this time."

"This was the hump we needed to get over," said catcher Darrell Porter, the third man involved in a dramatic eighth-inning play that infuriated Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and turned Mike Ferraro from an obscure third-base coach into the center of controversy.

"We finally beat them in a close game," Porter said. "We stopped them from doing what they always did to us before."

The Royals nicked Yankees starter Rudy May for all three runs in the third inning, on Willie Wilson's two-run triple and an RBI-double by U.L. Washington. The Yankees scored their two in the fifth on an inside-the-park home run by Graig Nettles and Willie Randolph's RBI-double.

But the Royals won it in the eighth and ninth when the Yankees failed to score despite four base hits.

"We can win three under any circumstances," said Yankees Manager Dick Howser, reminded that no team has ever rebounded from an 0-2 start to win a playoff series. "But this just makes it a little tougher. We'll do the same things that got us here."

Tonight in Yankee Stadium, Tommy John, New York's 22-game winner, will oppose Kansas City left-hander Paul Splittorff, who cautiously admitted the lion's share of the pressure will rest on John.

"When you're two games up, you feel like you have less to lose," said Splittorff, a veteran of Kansas City's bitter playoff losses to New York in 1976, '77 and '78. "My job is still the same. But we've been through this before and hopefully we've gained from our experiences."

Right-hander Dennis Leonard, Kansas City's only 20-game winner during the regular season, nursed his one-run lead into the eighth and struck out leadoff hitter Bobby Brown. Then Willie Randolph singled and Bobby Murcer fanned. Up came Bob Watson, who drilled a fastball into left field.

Randolph rounded third base and dug for home on a signal from Ferraro.

But left fielder Wilson, in perfect position to catch the hard bounce off the wall, turned and fired to third baseman George Brett, who turned and fired to Porter at the plate.

Porter caught the ball, braced, and held on as Randolph slid into his tag. Dangerous Reggie Jackson, the on-deck hitter, watched helplessly as Randolph was tagged out.

"We got taken out of the eighth inning with Jackson next at bat," fumed Steinbrenner. "The players didn't lose it."

The outspoken Yankee owner dispelled any doubt that he was implying Ferraro lost the game with a statement he made later.

"There's no way you can send the runner," he said. "He's been doing that to us all year."

Howser defended his coach. "When I saw Wilson's throw go a little high, I thought we had a chance," he said. "But with two outs, you've got to take a chance and Randolph runs well. It took a perfect play by three guys."

Wilson admitted he actually was throwing to shortstop Washington, but overthrew him.

"It's something we work on every day in spring training," said Brett. "There's always got to be a trailer, if they throw the ball over the head of the shortstop."

"That's as hard as George Brett ever threw a ball in his life," said Porter.

"By far," said Brett. "By far." But the drama was not finished. Jackson opened the ninth with a single to left and Kansas City Manager Jim Frey summoned from the bullpen sinkerball specialist Dan Quisenberry, the American League's most effective reliever this season. Oscar Gamble popped up. Then Rick Cerone singled Jackson to second and Nettles marched to the plate.

"George Brett told me, 'Here's a good guy to double up, he hits a lot of ground balls,'" said Quisenberry. On the first pitch, Nettles hit a sharp grounder to White at second, who fumbled the ball a moment, then threw to Washington at second. Washington, too, slightly mishandled the ball before making a perfect throw to first base to end the game.

East Carolina University's Pirates go up against one of the top throwing quarterbacks in the country this Saturday, and one of those trying to put up a defense against him will be strong safety Marvin Elliott.

That is, if Elliott gets over an injury received in the last Pirate game, against Southern Mississippi. He expects to be ready.

"Their quarterback (Steve Krainock) led the nation in passing last year in junior college, and he's in the top ten this year in the NCAA, I understand," Elliott said. "So it's going to be a tough job for us."

While admitting that his pass defense is his weakest point, Elliott feels that he's improving. "I think I do a better job of coming up on the rush and making the tackle. So far this year, he's been credited with 23 tackles, fifth on the Pirate defense. Included in that is one safety blitz that was good for a two-yard loss."

A full-time starter this year, Elliott played about half the time last year as a sophomore. "I started out on the specialty team, and eventually got more and more time in the secondary."

A native of Alexandria, Va., Elliott played his high school ball at Bishop Ireton in that city, where he won three letters, and was all-independent three times, twice Catholic all-state and once all-metro Washington third team. He also was a star on the school's basketball team, earning all-star honors.

While he was used mostly as a running back and linebacker in high school, he's made the switch to the secondary fairly easily.

"The biggest change was

having to read the quarterback. I try to key on his eyes, to watch and see where he looks."

Some quarterbacks will look everywhere but where they're going to throw until the final second. "That's when the pressure is greatest," Elliott admits. "What we have to do (the defensive unit) is not give him that kind of time."

Putting that kind of pressure on Krainock may not be easy. He's operating behind a veter-

The standings had some movement in them last week, and they produced a new leader — this writer.

We moved past Rick Scoppe with a 10-2 record last week to hold a one-game lead over the sports assistant. We now stand 48-12 on the year, while Scoppe is close behind with a 47-13 mark, tied with our guests for second. Etha Allen currently stands fourth at 45-15, while Tom Baines and Joe Jenkins are brining up the rear, tied for fifth at 43-17.

Last week's guest, Ed Emory compiled a 10-2 record, good, but still not as good as Jim Kyle's 11-1, which still leads the way.

This week's guest is the newest mother in coaching: East Carolina volleyball and softball coach Alita Dillon. She promised to get no help from week-old daughter Rita, but we believe we overheard her asking the newest Dillon about one of the games.

Our high school picks came up with a 5-1 mark last week, as that perfect slate continues to elude us. We stand 29-8 on the year so far.

This week features one cross-county game, Ayden-Grifton at Conley. The Vikings have come close and have been one of their own worst enemies. The Chargers seem to have found a ground game to help put it all together. This could be Conley's week, but we'll stick with Ayden-Grifton.

North Pitt, still looking for a win in the Eastern Carolina Conference, hosts Southwest Edgecombe. The Panthers have been scoreless the last two weeks, which hasn't helped their defense do its job. Southwest squeaked past Greene Central last week, and should make it past the Panthers this week.

Farmville Central travels to North Lenoir: The Hawks, rolling along unbeaten, were trampled last week by Southern Nash, 70-0, and toppled off their mountaintop. This week, it should be Farmville Central's turn, as the Jaguars gain momentum.

Our other area picks have Williamston over Tarboro, Roanoke over Washington, Matamuskeet over Jamesville, and C.B. Aycock over Greene Central.

Turning to the panel's choices, we find Rose traveling to Beddingfield. The Rampants jumped on Rocky Mount early to win last week. Beddingfield, however, may be tougher, having a good defense, and a balanced offense. The panel gives the Rampants the nod in this one, by a split decision, 5-1.

East Carolina's Pirates, after losing three straight, travel to Richmond this weekend. The Bucs are having manpower problems, while Richmond is experiencing a comeback year after being winless last year. The panel is divided on this one, calling it a toss-up, 3-3.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over Virginia; Tennessee over Georgia Tech; North Carolina over Wake Forest; Notre Dame over Miami, Fla.; Florida State over Pittsburgh; South Carolina over Duke; Penn State over Maryland; N.C. State over Appalachian State; Texas over Oklahoma; and Brigham Young over Wyoming.

Brett: No Yankee Curse, They Just Played Better Before

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Have the Kansas City Royals — after three long years of frustration — finally overcome the curse of the New York Yankees?

George Brett says no — mainly because there wasn't any curse in the first place.

"There's no curse," insists the Kansas City third baseman. "They just played better than we did."

That's Brett's assessment of the Royals' previous American League playoff clashes with the Yankees in 1976, '77 and '78 — all bitter losses.

Here's his view of Kansas City's status after defeating New York 3-2 Thursday night for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five AL Championship Series:

"Fantastic. We're just where we want to be," said Brett in the jubilant Kansas City clubhouse. "We're in Position A. If anybody's in Position A, it's us and not them."

"Position A" translates into the Royals needing to win just one of three games in New York this weekend for the first World Series appearance in their 12-year existence.

"I wouldn't change positions with anyone in the world. We're pleased, real pleased," said Kansas City Manager Jim Frey. "We couldn't ask for more. All it takes is one more win."

It was the first time in the four playoffs between the Royals and Yankees that either team has won the first two games, and a quiet confidence hovered over the Kansas City clubhouse.

The Yankees, aware that no team has ever lost the opening two playoff games and gone on to win, displayed a grim determination born of having their backs to the wall.

"We can win under any circumstances," insisted New York Manager Dick Howser. "But this just makes it a little tougher. We'll be ready when we get home."

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, although visibly upset with his team's play Thursday night, visited the New York clubhouse afterward in an effort to bolster his troops.

"Let's get going, guys," said Steinbrenner. "We're not out of this thing yet."

Kansas City, which defeated New York for the 10th time in 14 games this season, got all three of its runs in third when Willie Wilson's triple and U.L. Washington's double capped a four-hit inning.

New York came back in the sixth when Graig Nettles slammed an inside-the-park home run and Willie Randolph socked an RBI-double, but the Yankees' hopes faded in the final two innings in the face of solid Royals defensive play.

In the eighth, Randolph was on first base when Bob Watson lined a two-out double into the left field corner. Wilson fielded the carom, whirled and threw to the infield. The ball sailed over the head of Washington, the cut-off man at shortstop, but Brett was backing him up and relayed the throw to catcher Darrell Porter, who put the tag on the diving Randolph.

"Wilson's throw was so high, I thought Brett was going to call for a fair catch or something," said Howser, defending the decision of New York third base Coach Mike Ferraro to send Randolph.

"And with two outs, you can't lay back. When you do, that's when you get beat. We hadn't had that much offense anyway. We had to try to make something happen."

That was the final out of the inning and left Yankees slugger Reggie Jackson in the on-deck circle.

"It's an awfully tough thing to say," said Jackson, "but when I'm coming up next and (Oscar) Gamble behind me, I think you have to be thinking about that even more than where the ball bounces in the outfield."

The Yankees had two more baserunners in the ninth on singles by Jackson and Rick Cerone. But Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry got Nettles to ground to White, who bobbed the ball briefly before combining with Washington for a game-ending double play.

"The first game wasn't that close (7-2). But I think tonight was a big test of the club to see if we would crack," said Brett. "We made a big play in the eighth and we made a big double play in the ninth. It was the biggest double play I have seen in my life."

It was also a big one for right fielder John Wathan, who got a glove on both Nettles' homer and Randolph's double in the sixth, but dropped both balls.

"If we'd have lost, I would have felt bad and probably put more pressure on myself, wondering if we'd have won if I'd caught them," said Wathan.

"We're so much more confident now than at the beginning. I think in the back of our minds a split (of the two games) would have been fine.

A sweep...It was hard to imagine. Now we only need to win one of three there. Fantastic!"

Rampettes Forfeit

Beddingfield gained a forfeit victory over Rose High School's girls' cross-country team yesterday, as only three Rampettes showed up for the meet.

Pam Hill of New Bern, the only runner from her school, was first, with a course record of 19:58. C. Richardson of Beddingfield was second in 23:06, followed by teammates T. Fergus in 23:48, D. Bowns in 25:07, and J. Swinson in 26:30.

The second five were A. Wood of Beddingfield, 27:02; Maria Howard of Rose in 27:15; J. Ruffin of Beddingfield in 27:16; Lisa Koonce of Rose in 31:32, and Karen Green of Rose in 34:58.

Rose Loses First Meet

Despite a first and second place finish by Rose's Kenny Smith and Harry Williams, the Rampants suffered their first cross-country loss of the season Thursday afternoon.

New Bern became the first team to overcome Rose, defeating the Rampants 33 to 34 in a tri-meet. Beddingfield was last with 61 points. The Rampants are now 12-1 overall.

Rose's Smith was the meet's medalist Thursday, with a time of 15:03. Right behind him, however, was teammate Williams, who finished at 15:04. New Bern's Richard Staten was third, at 15:46, followed by Beddingfield's Steve Dew, at 15:59, and New Bern's Greg Duval, at 16:10.

Other Rose finishers included: (8) John Ormond, 16:22; (11) Chip Little, 16:49; (12) John Byrd, 16:52; (15) Robert Stancill, 17:18; (17) Larry Talbert, 17:51; (20) Max Parker, 18:07; (22) Joel Mauger, 18:52; (23) Bobby Nichols, 19:11; (25) Will Hester, 19:50; (30) Erving Bennett, 21:18; (33) James Midgett, 24:00.

Rose travels to Beddingfield next Thursday for the conference meet. If the Rampants win, their next meet would be the following week at the sectionals, where Rose would probably face New Bern again.

Girls' Tennis Roundup

Rose 7, Beddingfield 2

Rose High School's girls' tennis team rolled to a 7-2 victory over Beddingfield High School yesterday.

The Rampettes swept through the singles without a loss, sewing up the victory. They allowed Beddingfield to come back with two doubles wins, in a pair of hard-fought matches.

The victory raised the Rose record to 7-2 in league play and 7-3 overall. The Rampettes return to action Wednesday, hosting New Bern.

Tar Heels Face Deacons With More To Lose; Clemson Sees Cavs

By The Associated Press
The highest ranked team ever to play in Wake Forest's Groves Stadium invades Winston-Salem Saturday, but the Demon Deacons didn't have to look far to find that opponent.

Eighth-ranked North Carolina, undefeated in Atlantic Coast Conference play this season, meets a Wake Forest team which handily defeated North Carolina State two weekends ago and is searching for its share of the ACC lead.

And, while the conference lead awaits an owner at the end of Saturday's game, it is the Tar Heels with the bigger stake in the contest.

Not since 1948 has a UNC team remained undefeated through its first five games; that year also marks the last time a Tar Heel football team attained such a lofty perch in national gridiron circles.

Most important of all is the Tar Heel defense. It has not allowed a touchdown in four games and ranks seventh in overall defense in the country. As a result, coach Dick Crum has worked to bolster his pass rush to stop Wake Forest quarterback Jay Venuto.

It was Venuto's passing that led the Deacons, 3-1, to an upset of an undefeated Tar Heel squad last year.

In the only other ACC game Saturday, Clemson (3-1) opens its conference season against Virginia (2-2, 1-1).

In other contests, Maryland (3-2, 0-1) hosts No. 14 Penn State (3-1), Georgia Tech (1-3) hosts Tennessee (2-2), North Carolina State (2-2, 1-1) is at home to Appalachian State (4-1) and Duke (0-4, 0-1) is at 17th-ranked South Carolina (4-1).

CLEMSON AT VIRGINIA, 1:30
Clemson has never lost to Virginia in their 19 previous meetings, but Saturday is homecoming in Charlottesville, and the Cavaliers will be anxious to break the skein.

The Tigers repulsed Virginia Tech at the goal line last weekend to save a 13-10 victory, while the Cavaliers committed six second-half turnovers and fell to West Virginia 45-21.

PENN STATE AT MARYLAND, 1:30 p.m.
Coach Jerry Claiborne, in search of his missing offense, will find the going tougher this weekend, even though the game is in Byrd Stadium at College Park.

Only once in the past 26 games have the Terrapins pulled off a victory, that one in 1961. But unless Charlie Wysocki can rebound from performances of 17 and 40 yards in his last two games, Maryland could have a hard time beating the jinx.

APPALACHIAN STATE AT N.C. STATE, 7 p.m.
With his defensive secondary in disarray, this was not the year coach Monte Kiffin would like to see his team facing the Steve Brown-to-Rick Beasley show.

N.C. State has yielded more than 200 yards passing in three of its four contests, and the Wolfpack defense was bounced around for 193 yards last weekend by South Carolina's George Rogers.

But Kiffin, always searching for the superlative, calls the night-time battle with the Mountaineers "a bowl game" for Appalachian.

The last meeting between the two schools resulted in a 38-0 romp for the Wolfpack.

ACC, they, too, would be playing for a share of the conference lead Saturday night against the winless Blue Devils.

South Carolina whipped North Carolina State last Saturday by mixing the running of George Rogers with Garry Harper's passing.

Duke fell far behind Indiana before making its now-famous last quarter try for victory. That try, however, fell short by 10 points, 31-21.

TENNESSEE AT GEORGIA TECH, 1:30 p.m.
When it rains, it pours, and coach Bill Curry must prime his team for another high-powered offensive unit. The Volunteers, though 2-2, have looked impressive in losses to Southern California and Georgia. They did manage to bounce back with wins over Auburn and Washington State.

The Yellow Jackets must find some semblance of offense after last weekend's disheartening 33-0 loss to North Carolina. Georgia Tech only managed 112 yards of total offense and quarterback Mike Kelley spent most of the afternoon on his back, the result of a fierce Tar Heel pass rush.

Cliff-Hanging Astros Meet Phils In National's Third Game Today

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros could have been named the cliff-dwellers — that's where they've lived throughout the 1980 National League regular season and they've carried the habit into the NL championship series against Philadelphia.

The Astros' style is to scratch and claw for a one-run lead and then cling to it as if they were about to be pushed over the precipice. And the bigger the game, the harder they hold on.

"We've been able to win the big games when we had to have them over the past month," said Joe Niekro, the National League's only 20-game winner both of the past two seasons. "We have lost some here and there but we've come through when we had to."

Niekro was scheduled to start against the Phils and Larry Christenson today in the third game of their best-of-five National League championship playoff series in the Astrodome.

The fourth game is scheduled Saturday afternoon and a fifth game, if necessary, would be Sunday night.

The Phils also have won the games they needed.

"We needed to win two of three games at Montreal and we got them," Phillies Manager Dallas Green said referring to the final series of the season that clinched the East pennant. "We seem to do pretty good in this ball park."

The Phils beat the Astros in nine of 12 regular season games, including a 4-2 edge in the Astrodome. Even more impressive, Philadelphia won 21 of its last 28 road games.

Although it takes strong-hearted fans to sit through an Astros game, Manager Bill Virdon says that style of play may be helping in the playoffs.

"I think they are more relaxed in the playoffs," Virdon said. "That's been our style of play all year so they are used to it. But that shouldn't be a factor. We still have to beat the team we're playing."

The Astros seldom had the ability during the regular season to put another team away but conversely, few teams blasted the Astros, hence, a season of close games, close series and a close division race.

"I'd say that's the mark of a good ball club, probably a better club than most people give it credit for," Virdon said. "Our pitching keeps us in the game. We don't get that much hitting so it takes us longer to score runs."

Since Virdon, along with General Manager Tal Smith were instrumental in rebuilding the Astros from a laughable last place team to the division champions, obviously Virdon likes the nickel-and-dime offense, right?

"I'd much rather have five guys who hit 50 home runs and not worry about all this other stuff," Virdon laughed. "But it's great to win, no matter how you do it and I think it's a credit to the players who have given a maximum production all year."

The Astros aren't the only team long on confidence however.

"I'm not worried, why should I worry?" asked Phils first baseman Pete Rose. "We've done pretty good in the Astrodome this year and we've got (Steve) Carlton to come back with."

The Phils worked out in the Astrodome Thursday afternoon but Virdon gave the Astros the day off to recuperate from the long road trip that started last Friday when the team went to Los Angeles for the regular season-ending series.

Cubs Win Late, 16-13

Rose High School's junior varsity football team gained a 16-13 victory over Wilson Beddingfield yesterday, scoring the winning touchdown in the final minute of play.

Rose had gained the early lead, 6-0, when Ronnie Worsley went over from a yard out in the first period.

In the second quarter, however, Beddingfield scored 13 points to take the lead. First they scored on a short run to tie it at 6-6. Then, after Rose got a safety to take an 8-6 lead, the Baby Bruins scored late in the half on a pass to move out to a 13-8 margin at intermission.

Late in the game, Rose recovered a fumble in Beddingfield territory and used it to score the winning touchdown. After about a 20-yard gain on a reverse, Kenny Kirkland passed 19 yards to Donnell Lee for the score. Roderick Harrell ran over the conversion for the final 16-13 margin.

The win left Rose with a 5-1 record. The Cubs play host to Bertie next Thursday.

Kite's Decision Might Be Right

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite, who hadn't even planned on being here, took a one-stroke lead into today's second round in the $200,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament.

"He hadn't planned on playing here at all," said wife Christie. "It wasn't until the last minute, that he decided to enter."

"We were at home and Saturday afternoon he said he was just playing too good to stay home."

The decision appeared to be the proper one. Kite fired a no-bogey, 7-under-par 65 in the first round to take the lead in the final individual tournament on the 10-month PGA Tour schedule.

'Up And Coming' Has Promise

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of television's enduring faults is its often insensitive portrayal of minorities. Another of television's problems is that the one network always willing to mend TV's ways is the Public Broadcasting System.

PBS' last effort in that line, a sitcom called "Righteous Apples," set new standards in dreary. It was a noble effort, to be sure, conceived by a talented producer (Topper Carew) and executed with the help of Norman Lear ("All in the Family," etc.).

But the result was worse than castor oil. You had to be locked in a room to endure it, and even then, the "off" knob had to be removed.

You can imagine the restraint that greeted PBS' new comedy-drama, "Up and Coming," this season. According to its publicity sheet, the show endeavors to "present a more realistic perspective of black life than is commonly seen on television, while discouraging racial stereotypes." More castor oil.

But lo, "Up and Coming" is a series that seeks first to be good television. Its situations are realistically crafted, its characters carefully developed. And the lessons of "Up and Coming," to the show's everlasting benefit, are subtly delivered.

The series is about the Wilson family, a black clan struggling to rise out of the urban ghetto and into the rewards of the great American promise.

Sound familiar? Yes, but CBS' "The Jeffersons" deals in standard-issue one-dimensional cartoon people — painted black instead of white and given weekly supply of pasteurized TV jive. The Wilsons are human, creatures of blood and sinew, of hopes crushed and fulfilled.

Robert DoQui plays father Frank, an unyielding self-made (still building, actually) man who demands that his family share his ethic. He is an American patriarch, of that sweat-on-the-blue-collar breed that is ever clutching single-mindedly for the next rung, kicking away hindrances with tightly laced work boots.

When the series began last week, Frank was in the process of moving his family from a San Francisco ghetto to a "nicer" mixed neighborhood, away from ragged schools and barred-up shops, the graffiti of squalor that symbolize prison walls to those of his upward inclination. He is surprised that his three teen-aged children are not unanimously enthusiastic about the move.

The two-part opener, concluding this weekend (check local listings), focuses on the special transition difficulties of Frank's 17-year-old stepson, Kevin (L. Wolfe Perry). Kevin was a basketball star in his old neighborhood, comfortable in his circle of friends and with his dream of becoming an NBA star.

His new situation, simply, isn't easy. A prejudiced guidance counselor, who's seen Kevin's "type" a thousand times before, is unsympathetic to the new students curriculum problems. The new coach mistakes Kevin's plea for help to be a jock's dodge. Kevin quickly decides to give up and transfer back to his old school.

Where "Up and Coming" succeeds, at least in the story at hand, is in avoiding the easy good-guy, bad-guy moralizing you expect, finding instead resolution in that vast middle ground so fastidiously avoided in most situation television.

"Up and Coming" won't be a smash hit, located as it is on the very unwatched Public Broadcasting Service. But the stuff of commercial success is there. In fact, after last week's premiere, "Up and Coming" creator Avon Kirkland of San Francisco's KQED received a few phone calls from Hollywood inquiring about syndication.

"Of course, we can't, since this is funded by the U.S. Office of Education," Kirkland says.

McQueen Is Receiving Unorthodox Treatment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Laetrile, megavitamins and cells from sheep and cattle fetuses are part of actor Steve McQueen's therapy for a form of cancer that's usually incurable, one of his doctors says.

The treatment has shrunk tumors on McQueen's neck, abdomen and chest by "about 25 percent — something like that," Dr. Rodrigo Rodriguez said at a news conference Thursday.

The 50-year-old actor is suffering from mesothelioma, a form of cancer that is centered in the lungs.

"He is feeling much better," McQueen's wife, Barbara, said in a statement read by a publicist.

"His great wish is that the United States would allow the medical treatment he is undergoing to be done in this country so we could go home," she said.

The use of Laetrile, a highly controversial substance made from apricot pits, is generally illegal in the United States.

But Dr. Dwight McKee, chief medical consultant for Plaza Santa Maria Hospital, where McQueen is staying, said the program "is completely legal for carrying out in the United States."

McQueen has been at the hospital, about 75 miles south of San Diego, for three months. But it was only a week ago that he acknowledged, through his publicist, Warren Cowan, the persistent reports that he had cancer. McQueen has not met with reporters, and information about his case has come through Cowan and the actor's doctors.

FIXED AT LAST — Bill Monroe, called the father of Bluegrass music, holds the mandolin he has played for the last 40 years. Monroe sent the instrument to Gibson Guitar Co. for repairs 18 years ago, and he said the firm did such a bad job he cut off the Gibson logo. Thursday, Monroe got the instrument back after a team of the company's top craftsmen spent weeks refurbishing it — and restoring the Gibson logo. (AP Laserphoto)

Young Violin Maker Believes In His Hand-Crafting

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — When you think of a violin maker you think, perhaps, of a wizened old master toiling in an ancient workshop in Cremona, quaintly mindless of time and technology.

You certainly do not think of Paul Weiss.
You do not think of a 23-year-old American who believes that making violins by hand is as sensible a pursuit as any for a young man of the 20th century. Nothing quaint about Paul Weiss.

"I intend to make a go of it," he was saying the other day as he stroked a coat of varnish on a cello he had made.
He had made the varnish, too, from a formula he found in a 16th century manuscript.

This was the 14th thin coat. He hung the cello on a clothesline to dry in the dappled autumn sun.
"I wouldn't have gotten into it if I didn't intend to make a go of it," he said. "Well," he said, "maybe I would have. When I got into it, not making a go of it never occurred to me."

It is apparent that for Paul Weiss, making violins by hand — to sell — is not some handy escape route from an impersonal world. His enterprise is not in the category of one of those craft shops that seem to sprout in season in such places as Aspen and Carmel and Cape Cod.

No sudden, impulsive notion, he said, about life or about the world, set him upon the unlikely career he chose. His upbringing was not different from that of his brothers, one a lawyer, one in med school.

As a teenager, he had discovered an interest in woodworking. He also had an interest in music. Other kids bought guitars; Paul Weiss bought a cheap violin and a book that showed him where to place his fingers.

"I guess the two sort of came together, the violin and my wanting to learn to do highly skilled woodworking."
"Making violins seemed like an interesting combination of both. But where do you learn to make violins? I discovered there are only a handful of violin makers in America, none around here."

"I talked to some violin repairmen. They all told me about a school in England."
So Paul Weiss left home for three years and returned last summer carrying two violins, a viola and a cello, all of his own making, and a diploma, with merit, from the Newark School of Violinmaking, Nottinghamshire, England.

"I was one of only 36 students, 12 in each grade, from all over the world: Australia, France, Switzerland, The Netherlands."

"We had four instructors. They were all professional violin makers and they were not easily satisfied. We worked nights. We worked weekends. We worked until the work felt right in our hands.

"Violin making is not simply precision woodworking. You have to have a complete sense of what you are doing.

The sound you seek doesn't come simply from woodworking."

Manufacturer Is Chief Donor To Libertarians

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the spring of 1979, David Koch, a manufacturer of pollution control equipment, wrote out a check for $1,000 to the campaign of Ed Clark, who was seeking to become the presidential candidate of the fledgling Libertarian Party.

Five months later, Clark won the nomination — and chose Koch as his running mate.

Since then, Koch has returned the favor, giving the Clark campaign — and his own — three out of every four dollars it has reported collecting, or over $1 million.

Specifically:
On Oct. 15, 1979, Koch gave the Clark-Koch campaign $20,000. On Nov. 29, he gave $35,000. On Jan. 10, he gave $35,000.

On Jan. 15, he gave $100,000. On April 3, he gave $100,000.

On May 8, he gave $100,000. On June 9, he gave $100,000. On July 2, he gave $125,000.

On Aug. 1, he gave $300,000.

On Aug. 15, he gave $125,000. On Aug. 28, he gave $125,000.

To total it all up, records on file at the Federal Election Commission show that through Aug. 31, Koch has given the ticket $1,165,000.

Under federal law, individuals may give only $1,000 to a candidate for federal office. But candidates may give any amount to their own campaign, as long as they don't accept federal campaign funds.

So, unless the Libertarians had nominated Koch for office, they could not have accepted his contributions.

Ed Crane, communications director of the party, recalls that at the Libertarian Party convention in Los Angeles in September 1979, Koch circulated an open letter saying he was seeking the vice presidential nomination "because he was disturbed the law denies independent parties the opportunity to raise substantial amounts."

But Crane and presidential nominee Clark say Koch was not picked as Clark's running mate because of his pledge in the letter to give a substantial amount — "several hundred thousand dollars," as Clark recalls.

Koch and his brother, Charles, of Wichita, Kan., are heirs to a large oil and industrial fortune. Charles Koch has spent several million dollars underwriting a variety of Libertarian projects, publications and think tanks.

David Koch — president of the Koch Engineering Co. of New York and Abcor Inc. of Wilmington, Mass., both makers of pollution equipment — was nominated at the Libertarian national convention Sept. 8, 1979, in Los Angeles.

Boy Scout Canoe Flotilla Shares Tar River Outing

By PATRICIA M. MOORE
The early morning mist was rising from the water as the 24 canoes, manned by 37 Boy Scouts and 10 adult leaders slipped into the Tar River landing at Old Sparta. Within minutes, their splashing paddles had transported them away from all traces of civilization. For a weekend trip of some 20 miles from their departure point to the Town Common in Greenville, the Boy Scouts of Greenville Troop 30 were dependent on canoes for transportation and their own resources for camping. They were to cook all meals "from scratch."

Some had never been in a canoe. The majority were inexperienced. The only qualifications for the outing were parental permission and the ability to swim 100 yards. Each boy was required to wear a life jacket. Working in two-man teams, every scout had to learn how to paddle, steer and cooperate with his buddy to maneuver the canoe and achieve the troop's goals — only one of which was, to reach the Town Common on Sunday. Each was to learn that it took more than individual or even team participation to make the trip successful. Since every canoe contained camping gear, a change of clothes and food, its weight totalled between 100 and 150 pounds. Consequently, four to six scouts were needed to launch a canoe into the river. Careful planning by Scout leaders and parents preceded the outing. Twelve of them, including several physicians, accompanied the youths at various times on the river trip. Others assisted at the campsites. Mrs. James Carter, who served as chairman of transportation, was responsible for securing and returning 11 canoes from the scout reservation at Camp Bonner. Six more canoes were obtained from the city of Greenville, two came from a rental agency and five were furnished by participants. The canoes and troop members were transported from headquarters at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church on Friday afternoon to Old Sparta. There, the campers pitched their tents for an overnight stay and cooked their evening meals over camp fires. On Saturday morning of the weekend that saw summer change into fall overnight, the boys were up at 6:30 preparing breakfasts of eggs or pancakes — again, over camp fires. By 9 a.m. they had washed their eating utensils, disassembled and packed their tents and gear in plastic bags and loaded them into the canoes. The first day's outing consisted of about nine miles of water, nature and self reliance. "Few people realize that when you are floating down the Tar River, there is almost no contact with civilization," Scoutmaster William E. Fuqua Jr. said. "You are in unfamiliar territory. The topography of the land is sometimes hilly and there are cliffs that you don't realize exist in eastern North Carolina." "The scouts seemed to be intrigued with the element they were in, as well as the concentration it took them to handle their canoes," he said.

THIS FLOTILLA OF CANOES . . . was part of 24 manned by 38 Boy Scouts of Troop 30 and their leaders for their trip down the Tar River from Old Sparta to the Greenville Town Common. They had just passed under the Greene Street bridge when they stopped to pose for this picture.

Those in the lead met great blue herons, wood ducks and mallards, who yielded the right-of-way to the lively canoeists. Overhead, hawks soared. Turtles splashed from logs into the water. Sandbars sparkled white in the sunlight, revealing campsites left by others who had taken to the river before them. Rest stops were for more than rest. Fuqua and the other adults provided instruction in paddling and steering. During the trip, Dr. Larry Means began the first phase of instruction in paddling and steering.

The second night of the trip was spent near Falkland in an area adjacent to the Pitt County Wildlife Club. Canoes were lifted from the water and secured on the bank. Tents were pitched again and wet clothes were hung out to dry.

Scouts scurried to the woods to gather wood for their fires. Dinner turned out to be a surprise "Blue Ribbon Award Cookout." Scoutmaster Fuqua and Dr. Charles H. Moore, assistant scoutmaster, had planned a barbecue chicken meal complete with french fries and hush puppies cooked over an open fire, and slaw that had been prepared before hand.

The reward was for the group's accomplishments at the Regional Camporee last spring, when Troop 30 earned one of only two citations of merit given during the camporee, as well as four blue ribbons — one for each of the participating patrols. On Sunday morning, they were on the river again, embarking on the longest leg of their journey.

The rewards Sunday afternoon as they passed under the Greene Street bridge and sighted the Town Common landing were sweet success for the scouts and their leaders.

"Not one Scout needed assistance in being towed. Each achieved a fantastic amount of confidence in being able to accomplish what we set out to do," Fuqua said.

Here the Scouts pitch in to reload onto racks for a return trip to Camp Bonner.

"They learned that they had to work together to control the canoe. The trip also promoted teamwork among the troop as a whole. One of the most important aspects of the weekend was that the boys learned that they could cope with a relatively unfamiliar situation," Fuqua noted.

They saw things that many people see only in magazines — nature in the raw. Those who wanted it had isolation and serenity. They learned the importance of securing their clothing and equipment in watertight containers.

And some learned the hard way to prepare for the unexpected, as the temperature dropped from the mid 80s to 49 degrees. The leaders learned a few things, too. They saw their young charges reach the landing point and unload personal items. No one told them to pitch in and reload the canoes onto the racks for the return trip to Camp Bonner, but they did it anyway. Most stayed to help return troop equipment to the church.

Three days later, the leaders found out that the trip was more successful than they had first thought. Dr. Moore asked who was ready for a longer trip down the Roanoke. Fuqua asked for a show of hands. All volunteered.

Discloses Overall Statistics On NCCU Law Test Results

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — All graduates of North Carolina Central University's law school taking state bar exams last year succeeded at the rate of 77 percent, say two NCCU law school professors. Dr. Patricia Marshall and Dr. Charles Markham, in releasing the overall statistics for the school's graduates, said figures released showing only the fail-passing rate for NCCU graduates in North Carolina are misleading. When out-of-state exams are included, the percentage improves sharply. Their comments followed widespread reports when only 2 percent of NCCU's law school graduates passed the North Carolina bar exam this year. The passing rate in 1979 in the state was 49 percent. "Of the 14 Central 1979 graduates who are known to have taken out-of-state examinations since graduation last year, 10 passed — a 71 percent success rate," they reported. "When you include these graduates in the overall statistics for 1979, 36 NCCU law school graduates out of 54, or 67 percent, passed a state bar examination." After this year's North Carolina scores were released, NCCU Dean Harry Groves said many of the law school graduates were students who would not be accepted in other schools. Others at the university also have expressed dissatisfaction with reports emphasizing the bar passing rate. Some of the issues they said are overlooked include the number of people who take and pass bar examinations in other states, the number of white graduates who pass the test and a possible inflation of the passing grade by the N.C. Board of Bar Examiners. In response to the latter charge, Bob Howison, chairman of the examiners, said the percentage of graduates who pass the bar exam is dropping each year but the number is increasing. There are only four universities in the country with predominantly black law schools: NCCU, Southern University, Howard University and Texas Southern University. While nationwide figures show that more graduates are applying to take bar exams, the percentage of those who pass is steadily dropping. But according to an article in the August issue of the National Law Journal, the passing rate at Howard University has fallen as low as 25 percent. The article also said 26.6 percent of black applicants in California passed the bar, compared with 71.9 percent of the whites.

FAILS FIRST DRIVING TEST — Three-year-old Jason Springer, of Detroit, failed his first driving test Wednesday when he drove the family car into a school bus and the family home. Jason's mother, Bonnie, said that when Jason was told he would have to wait because his sister was not ready to go to school, he became impatient, took his mother's keys from her purse and calmly started the car. He accelerated into an intersection, caromed off a school bus, made a hard left turn, and drove straight into the family home, injuring no one. Because this is simply the latest in a series of adventures for the tot, his mother has nicknamed him "Dennis the Menace, Inc." (AP Laserphoto)

Poisoned Children 'Diagnosed' After Fourteen-Year Tragedy

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer
BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Something terrible was happening to Mary White's children, one by one, something with no name.

Danny was the first. That was 14 years ago and he was only 2.

"I noticed he started holding his hands over his ears like he couldn't stand noise," she said. "Then George started acting the same way."

Mrs. White took the boys to a doctor, who diagnosed them as retarded. Social agencies said they had behavioral problems. School officials told her the boys were hyperactive and undisciplined.

"It was a nightmare," she said. "I kept saying something's wrong, something's medically wrong with my boys. You could see it by looking at them ... but people acted like I should be quiet."

Paul was next, then Michael. Her children were running around the house, slamming into walls, screaming at things that were invisible.

Six months ago, she found her youngest, 2-year-old David Wayne, under a table screaming at things nobody else could see.

Then, in August, a routine screening of welfare mothers by the McLean County Health Department found out what was wrong — lead poisoning.

Subsequent testing revealed that eight of Frank and Mary White's 13 children had dangerously high levels of lead in their blood. At least four — Danny, George, Paul and Michael — were irreversibly damaged. Somehow, nobody in 14 years had tested them.

The Whites are poor and they are black. In 17 years since moving here from Chicago, the family has lived in old houses painted with lead-based paint. The children chewed on the woodwork or ate paint chipping from walls, and one by one they poisoned themselves irreparably.

Ben Boyd, county health director, called it "a terrible tragedy" and acknowledged that had the discovery been made years ago, the family could have been moved to safe housing — as is now being done — and the younger children likely could have been saved.

"I tend to blame the agency system," said Boyd. "... Somehow when the children were seen, nobody asked the question why."

Boyd said agencies tend to think of psychological or genetic reasons for problems in children, not medical reasons. And, he added, doctors simply just didn't expect to find lead poisoning — a familiar problem in urban ghettos — in a middle-sized Midwestern city surrounded by cornfields and fresh air.

"It never really occurred to us that this could be a problem," said Dr. C.B. Saksena, a Bloomington pediatrician and one of several doctors who examined the White children over the years.

Lead-based paint was used in houses constructed generally before 1950. Thousands still stand, in big cities and small.

A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in 1972 found lead in the blood of almost 19 percent of the children examined in 14 Illinois cities with populations ranging from 10,000 to 150,000.

"The findings suggest that pediatric lead intoxication is not confined to urban slums, but does occur with alarming frequency in smaller communities," the study said.

Nationwide testing between Oct. 1, 1978, and Sept. 30, 1979, found lead poisoning in about 7 percent of all children tested, showing up in such cities as Portland, Maine; Waterbury, Conn.; Lynchburg, Va.; Milwaukee, Wis.; New Orleans, La.; and Davenport, Iowa.

Gareth Johnson, who heads Illinois' 7-year-old lead detection program, says doctors in smaller cities just don't think in terms of lead poisoning. Early signs are lethargy, vomiting and weight loss.

"Those things could be attributed to so many things that in its early stages it is unreasonable for us to expect a physician to make a diagnosis" based on symptoms, Johnson said.

Local health officials say the White case has assured that future problems will be spotted more quickly. But for Mary White, it is too late. Her children are permanently damaged, and she cannot understand why it took so long to find out what was wrong.

"They were born smart," she said in an interview. "It's like they were in their own little world now, like if you rang a bell they'd come out again."

As she talked, a low, steady moan intruded from the next room where the boys were, rocking back and forth on the floor, staring blankly at the television.

Danny is 16 now, George is 17, Paul is 7.

"I dreamed it, you know," she said finally in a kind of slow anguished voice. "A long time ago, I dreamed that something was going to happen to my kids and that nobody could find out. There was a voice in the dream and it said you got to walk a long way in the dark with these boys, but the light will come on."

Mrs. White said her grandfather was a Creole prophet. Dreams are messengers, he used to say, and cannot be denied.

"You can't move from what's planned for you," she said. "You can see it, but you can't change it."

She could hear Danny through the walls. He was louder than the others, and after awhile his moaning rose to a kind of howl, then into a long, shuddering scream.

His brothers, rocking absently, paid no attention at all.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF 1980 by Chicago Tribune

North-South vulnerable. North deals. NORTH ♠ K Q 9 3 ♥ A K 9 7 ♦ J 7 4 ♣ A Q 7 5

WEST EAST ♠ 10 8 ♥ 10 7 5 4 2 ♦ K 6 ♣ J 9 8 4 SOUTH ♠ A J 6 4 2 ♥ Q 6 3 ♦ 8 5 ♣ 10 6 3

The bidding: North East South West 1♣ 1♦ Pass Pass 2♦ 2♥ Pass Pass 3♣ Pass 4♣ Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣. "A curious hand," remarked the kibitzer. "If the finesse were going to succeed, there was no need to take it."

North-South conducted an orderly auction to arrive at their best spot. South might have made a free bid over East's overall, but he was a conservative soul.

The bank said Thursday that it has no comment about its missing $1 million. A bank spokesman said that the money was written off as lost - "Our insurance covered thefts of any amount over $1 million, and precisely $1 million was taken."

The FBI said its suspect, who has no criminal record, had access to the money and later was found to have a tie to the crime syndicate.

West started the king of diamonds and continued the suit to his partner's queen. East led a third round of the suit, and declarer ruffed high as West sluffed a heart.

Declarer used dummy's king and queen of trumps to draw the enemy's trumps, then cleared the ace and king of hearts. He now made the unusual play of the ace of clubs!

South re-entered his hand with a trump and cashed the queen of hearts, discarding a club from dummy. The count was now complete. East had started with two spades, at least three hearts and six diamonds, so he could not hold more than two clubs - and one had already been played under the ace.

Declarer was down to a sure-trick ending. He led a club, West followed with the eight and dummy's queen was inserted. Declarer did not mind whether this won or lost. If West held the king, the queen would win the trick and declarer would lose only a club in addition to the two diamonds. If East had the king, he could capture the queen, but then he would be forced to return a diamond, permitting declarer to sluff a club from one hand while ruffing in the other.

Note that declarer would have been defeated had he carelessly taken the club finesse. East would win and exit with a club, and declarer would eventually have to lose a second club trick.

Small Turnout For Long-Shot Campaign Message

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It didn't bother Zeb Vance Kitchin Dickson that his audience Thursday on the RUNNING FOR GOVERNOR — Zeb Vance Kitchin Dickson, a long-shot candidate in the North Carolina governor's race, plays the fiddle after delivering his major campaign speech in Raleigh. (AP Laserphoto)

Capitol grounds consisted of a flock of pigeons and three news reporters.

The write-in candidate for governor had arrived in his Sunday best, straw hat in hand. He brought no campaign workers, band or posters — just his fiddle to make music and copies of hand-typed speeches to distribute. And Dickson's spirits were never dampened. The speech was the realization of a lifelong goal and the height of his second gubernatorial campaign.

"This is something I've long wanted to do whether I was a candidate or not," he concluded after the speech beside the statue of his namesake, former Gov. Zebulon B. Vance.

But Dickson reasons that since "I've been carrying around all those names all these years" — he was named for two governors, Vance and W.W. Kitchin — it was inevitable he decide to run for the office.

"You might say I've reached the end of an old trail I hope leads to a new frontier," the 71-year-old said.

And the self-proclaimed farm boy and poet acknowledges the chances are slim he'll be elected.

"I know the cards are stacked against me, but sometimes you can cut the cards," he said. "I decided long ago I wouldn't be discouraged no matter what the situation is."

Dickson is not concerned about the traditional worries of a candidate — endorsements, contributions and popular positions.

"I have set a precedent for a candidate because I don't ask for endorsements," he said. "Whenever a group, a newspaper or even a wealthy individual endorses a candidate, they've got an ax to grind."

"I had rather lose than to win based on pressure groups. People should become more concerned about the general welfare of the population and not pursue their own special interests."

The elimination of endorsements to a great extent eliminates political contributions as well, but that doesn't worry the Eden resident.

"I told my family I wouldn't take a penny from them for this campaign. Some of them mailed me money and I mailed it back."

He has set a $100 limit on contributions, a limit he says he's still waiting to receive.

And the issues Dickson raises may not appeal to everyone. His major concern, and the focal point of his gubernatorial campaign in 1972, is highway safety.

He said he made a New Year's resolution in 1967 to work to lower the highway speed limit from 55 mph to 50 mph during the day and 45 mph at night.

"Highway safety is something we can achieve," he said. "All we've got to do is work on people's minds and their feet."

He also wants to see every North Carolinian working. "And those who aren't working should show cause why they don't work," he said.

Dickson only talks about the changes he would make, not about the current administration's shortcomings.

"I don't criticize other administrations. They must stand on their own two feet," he said.

A teacher by career, Dickson says he was born in a log cabin in Allegheny County. He worked his way through what is now Appalachian State University and earned a bachelor's degree in math and science. He returned later for a master's degree in English and education.

He took an early retirement in 1972 from the Eden city schools to run for governor as a Democrat. It was his first political campaign.

When he lost in the Democratic primary, he continued the campaign as an independent candidate. In the general election, he garnered 4,470 votes, or as Dickson boasts, "at least one vote in every county."

This year, Dickson says he's out to win.

"Many people have won against overwhelming odds," Dickson said. "They vote for people they think can be a winner. I'm trying to get them to believe I'm a winner."

Center Has Dental Program

The children of Moyewood Child Development Center are participating in a program to prevent dental disease.

The children brush their teeth under the teacher's supervision each day at the center. Once a week they participate in a fluoride mouthrinse program, which promises to reduce decay by 35 percent if used correctly. The teacher prepares a sodium fluoride solution and the children swish the solution around in their mouths for 60 seconds.

The children also receive dental inspection and referrals to the dentist for necessary care.

Moyewood is the only day care facility in Pitt County now taking part in the dental health program, which is carried out under the supervision of Kathy Pressly, the public health dental hygienist for the county.

Linda Hix Club Speaker

The Cypress Group, the Sierra Club organization in eastern North Carolina, will have as its guest speaker on Monday, October 13, Linda Hix.

Ms. Hix, Greenville Energy Program Coordinator, will speak before the group at 8 p.m., in the basement meeting room of the First Presbyterian Church, corner of Elm and 14th Streets.

The public is invited to attend this meeting. Ms. Hix's subject will be the Greenville Community Energy Program, one sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy.

Toe Is Taking Place Of Thumb

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Charles Stone's new thumb is adjusting to a place in the sun after 47 years of traveling around in his shoe.

Two weeks ago, in an operation that lasted 18 hours, Drs. Richard Morris and Kenna Given replaced the old thumb with the second toe from Stone's foot.

Stone, of Jacksonville, Ga., lost his thumb and part of two fingers when his hand was caught in a corn harvester. Doctors predict it will take three to six months for him to develop feeling in the new thumb.

Stone was released from the hospital last week.

The second toe was used rather than the big toe because the larger toe is needed for balance, Morris said. "A person can be disabled by the loss of the big toe."

Working under the microscopes which have revolutionized plastic surgery, the surgeons connected the bones, tendons, arteries, veins and nerves in the toe to the hand.

Given, head of the department of plastic surgery at the VA medical center and the Medical College of Georgia, said the first toe-to-thumb transplant in the United States was performed in 1968.

"Only two to three dozen" such operations have been performed since the early 1970s, Given said.

Microsurgery enables doctors to transfer skin tissue from one part of the body to another, connecting the nerves and blood vessels. This sort of tissue differs from a skin graft, in which skin is attached without blood vessels and must develop its own blood supply.

Before tissue transplants arrived, amputation was the only alternative in a number of cases, Morris said.

One patient suffering from large sores on his foot which would not heal was offered a transplant just two hours before he was scheduled to have the foot amputated, he said.

"That's one of the more dramatic cases, but there are many in which the healing process cannot take place because there is not an adequate blood supply," he said. "The tissue just dies."
