

Both Carter, Reagan Lay 'Peace Candidate' Claim

By The Associated Press

President Carter, keeping alive his war issue against Ronald Reagan, charged today that his Republican challenger has a "naive" policy about Soviet intentions that would deal "a devastating, and perhaps fatal, blow to the long-term process of nuclear arms control."

Speaking to reporters on the White House South Lawn before leaving for a campaign trip through blue-collar areas of Pennsylvania and Ohio already wooed by Reagan, the president had scathing comments about Reagan's nationally televised address on defense policy Sunday night.

Reagan sought to portray himself as a man of peace, as Carter did earlier in the day in a 15-minute radio speech. But the GOP nominee stressed that peace was possible only by rebuilding America's defenses — which he said Carter had allowed to erode — and negotiating a new arms control treaty with the Russians.

Carter said Reagan "does not understand the serious consequences" of his proposals, which the president said would "throw the existing nuclear arms limitation treaty in the waste basket ... threaten the Soviet Union with a nuclear arms race ... launch a quest for nuclear superiority."

Carter said Reagan would "make the naive assumption" — and the wrong one — that the Russians would respond by making new concessions and reducing their nuclear arsenal, and the result would be a perhaps fatal blow to the arms control process.

In his radio speech at midday Sunday, for his he purchased time on the Mutual Broadcasting System, Carter said: "Peace is my passion ... peace is my pledge."

Reagan, for his part, said during the half-hour that he bought on CBS television that he shares with all Americans "the deep and abiding hope for peace."

Each man also tried to portray the other as more likely to get the nation into war. Reagan said Carter had allowed the nation's military strength to erode, and Carter declared that Reagan's policies could lead toward "the nuclear precipice."

Independent presidential candidate John Anderson, meanwhile, spoke before a Jewish group in the Chicago suburb of Evanston and warned of growing anti-Semitism.

"An attack on the Jewish people is by implication an attack on us all," Anderson said. "If we do not draw the line here and now, we can't draw it anywhere."

Carter and Reagan left the paid airwaves today to head out on the campaign trail, the president to Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York, and his Republican rival to Ohio, Kentucky and Illinois. Anderson speaks tonight in Schenectady, N.Y.

The president's trip today into the Industrial Northeast follows a staff assessment that Reagan's forays into the traditional Democratic strongholds may be producing few results among the blue-collar voters he's fighting so hard to win.

Credits Commissioners

Pitt County Commissioners were told this morning that the test scores of county school children in one through the ninth grade have improved over the past five years.

John McKnight, reporting on the results of the school's testing program, said the progress and success of the program is, 'due to the support of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.'

According to McKnight, five years ago, children in grades one and two did well on the tests, while third through ninth grade students fell short of the national norms on reading tests. This year, he pointed out, students in grades one, two, three and five exceeded the norm, while others showed marked improvement.

In the area of math, only grades one and two reached the national norm five years ago, while today, students in the first six grades exceeded the norm and pupils in the other three grades exhibited marked improvement.

Commissioners this morning gave Ed Garrison, director of the Department of Social Services, permission to proceed with the federally-funded low income energy assistance program in the county.

Garrison said Pitt is scheduled to receive $562,300 this winter and $48,286 to administer the program.

Under federal and state guidelines, the local DDS office will determine the eligibility of persons to receive payments, with the administrative costs being paid with federal grant money.

Ray Bell, manager of Greenville Cable TV, reported to the board that the Greenville City Council at its Oct. 9 meeting had approved a rate increase for basic cable TV service of from $7.50 per month to $8.35. He noted that the increase will be effective for subscribers living outside the city limits of Greenville because of the franchise agreement with the county which ties the city and county rates together.

County Manager Reginald Gray told the board that changes in the state minimum standards for the operation of jail facilities have been made.

Under the changes, according to Gray, the county will have to purchase new mattresses by Feb. 1, and install smoke detectors by July 1.

Commissioners authorized the changes to be made as soon as possible.

Iraq Claims 'Airtight Siege' On Refinery City Of Abadan

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq said its infantry and armor consolidated an "airtight siege" of Abadan and Khorramshahr as the Persian Gulf war entered its fifth week today. But Iran said Abadan's defenders prevented Iraqi tanks from penetrating the city's defenses and that house-to-house fighting raged in Khorramshahr for the fourth straight day.

Iran also announced it renamed Khorramshahr — which means fertile city in Farsi — to Khuninshar, which means "city of blood." It said the name change was in tribute to the "epic resistance" put up against the invading Iraqis by diehard

Islamic revolutionary guardsmen in the port, which is 10 miles from the refinery city of Abadan.

Iran's leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini agreed to allow a mediation commission of Islamic heads of state to go to Tehran but said its task was to be confined to "investigating the criminal invasion" ordered by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, Tehran Radio reported.

The broadcast, monitored here, said the patriarch of Iran's Islamic revolution gave the statement in response to a plea for a negotiated settlement of the war made by Habib Chatti, Tunisian secretary-general of the 40-nation Islamic Conference.

The leaders of both Iran and Iraq ignored appeals from other Moslem nations for a four-day cease-fire during Islam's holiest holiday, the feast of id el-Adha, which began Sunday. The Koran, the Moslem holy book, forbids the spilling of human blood during the period.

Meanwhile, the 52 Americans held hostage in Iran began their 352nd day in captivity today, and the speaker of the Majlis, Iran's Parliament, indicated that it would decide their fate late this week or early next week, just before the first anniversary of their being made prisoners.

Speaker of the Majlis, Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press that the Parliament would decide in the "next two or three days" on conditions for the release. He also said it was a "very remote possibility" that the hostages would be put on trial, although some hardline members of Parliament have called for spy trials for at least some of them.

Iranian communiques reported heavy fighting at both ends of Iraq's 300-mile invasion front as well as in the central sector. But no major change in the battle lines was reported by either government.

Iran acknowledged for the first time that the Iraqis controlled all the highways leading into Abadan and said they hit the besieged city with "heavy weapons and artillery fire" Sunday.

Radar Planes Not Bargaining Point

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, skeptical yet hopeful that Iran is near a decision on the hostage question, apparently is rejecting an Iranian call that U.S. radar planes be withdrawn from the Persian Gulf to remove "obstacles" to the Americans' release.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said Sunday the AWACS reconnaissance planes were deployed at Saudi Arabia's request to protect its territorial integrity during the Iran-Iraq war. He said they have no offensive capabilities and denied they are being used to pass intelligence information to Iraq.

At the same time, Muskie reaffirmed the U.S. position of impartiality in the war, but added without elaborating: "That position may have to be adjusted as circumstances develop."

Muskie said the war is a separate issue from the hostages.

Iran's Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai suggested Saturday that the United States could improve prospects for releasing the 52 hostages, now in their 352nd day of captivity, by removing the aircraft and keeping Jordan from aiding Iraq during the war. He called the planes "obstacles to solving the hostage question."

Rajai, while in New York to address the United Nations, also predicted that the parliament's decision on conditions for freeing the hostages was "not far away."

"We've heard statements like that so many times over the recent weeks that we've learned not to raise our expectations," Muskie said on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

"I hope it (the parliament) does act soon and there're some indications that it may," he added.

Vice President Walter Mondale, campaigning in Hartford, Conn., backed Muskie's assessment, saying: "I see no reason to be unduly optimistic or unduly pessimistic."

Iranian lawmakers, meanwhile, gave conflicting assessments Sunday.

A hardline legislator, Assadollah Bayat, said consideration of the hostages will have to wait until the Iran-Iraq war is over. Reached by telephone from Beirut, Lebanon, Bayat said the Parliament is to meet on Tuesday, but that the hostage issue is still in the hands of a seven-member committee and there are no immediate plans for a full debate on the subject.

But the speaker of the 270-seat Parliament, Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani, was quoted in an interview with a Swedish radio correspondent as saying the conditions for the hostages' release would be decided "by the end of this week at the latest."

In a telephone interview today with The Associated Press in Beirut, Lebanon, Rafsanjani said the decision would be made "in the next two to three days."

He also said that the conditions probably would be the same as those enunciated last month by Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini: return of the late shah's wealth, cancellation of U.S. financial claims against Iran, release of Iranian funds in the United States and U.S. guarantees of non-interference in Iran.

Rajai said at his news conference in New York it would be easy to resolve Iran's previous demand for an official apology for American interference in Iranian affairs during the rule of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

High Court Leaves Ruling On Laetrile Intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court gave federal regulators a major victory today by turning away arguments that terminal cancer victims have a constitutional right to use Laetrile.

The justices, without comment, left intact a federal appeals court ruling that because no such right exists the government is free to ban the controversial substance. Today's action was not a definitive ruling. It is conceivable, though not likely, that the high court could at some later date agree to study the issue in depth.

But for now the practical effect is just as momentous. Cancer victims determined to get Laetrile without leaving the United States must do so illegally.

The Laetrile controversy has been an emotional one because of modern medicine's failure thus far to conquer cancer.

A number of physicians advocate the use of Laetrile, an apricot-pit derivative, for cancer victims. Others in medicine and science discount its effectiveness, portraying its use as medical quackery.

By a unanimous vote in 1979, the Supreme Court upheld a federal ban on the interstate shipment of Laetrile. But that 1979 decision left unanswered the question of whether terminal cancer victims have a right — grounded in their right to privacy — to use the substance.

The 1979 ruling also did not resolve whether Laetrile is eligible for an "grandfather" exemption to the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1962 that required proof of safety and effectiveness before a drug is marketed.

Last Feb. 19, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals answered both questions in favor of the government. On the constitutional issue, the appeals court said: "The decision by the patient whether to have treatment or not is a protected right, but his selection of a particular treatment, or at least a medication, is within the area of government interest in protecting public health."

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the cancer victims argued: "To recognize a right to decline medical attention of any kind while denying a right of terminal cancer patients to utilize the non-toxic substance Laetrile would create a bizarre anomaly in the law."

HYPNOTISM?

A relative of mine recently attended a program in Greensboro on hypnosis. A hypnotist did a session on helping people quit smoking and one on helping people lose weight. The therapist was from out of state, but came to North Carolina and did the program in several towns. I think it was sponsored by the Heart Association or Lung Association or someone like that. Do you know if any such program will be offered around the Greenville area? M. E.

As a matter of fact, the American Lung Association, Eastern Region, is sponsoring both a smoking control and a weight control program by the hypnotist you seem to describe, John Greer, clinical hypnotist from Self Psych Inc. in Southfield, Mich. Tuesday, Oct. 28 at the Ramada Inn here.

The smoking clinic will start at 6:30 p.m.; the weight loss clinic at 8:30 p.m. The smoking fee is $30; the weight loss fee $25.

Greer uses hypnosis to help people overcome their conflict between intelligent desire to be in control of eating or smoking and the emotions which need the gratification either or both represent, Lung Association Director Connie Landen said. To obtain more information or to pre-register, contact Mrs. Landen at 752-5093.

Greer has previously held sessions in a number of western N. C. cities. He also will be appearing in New Bern, Rocky Mount, Wilmington, Fayetteville, Jacksonville and Roanoke Rapids, Mrs. Landen said.

Farm Scene

By Leroy James
 County Extension Chairman
 An objective of most farming tenants and landlords is to develop a leasing agreement that is economically sound and equitable to both parties.

Local custom may provide some guide as to "what's fair" but rapid changes in technology and economic development and the variability among businesses warrants careful planning of current or potential leasing arrangements.

Leasing may be viewed as a means of finance, in that the farmer can hire the use of assets without a down payment requirement and the obligations of ownership.

In the past, leasing has been one of the main routes into farming for younger operators, an important growth strategy for mid-career farmers.

Farm leases may be either cash or share-type leases.

Emphasis here is placed on cash leases, where the landlord is paid a specified cash amount and usually provides land, buildings, allotments and other real estate improvements.

Cash leasing can be advantageous to the tenant with adequate operating capital, good management skills and the desire for flexibility and the potential rewards that accrue to superior practices.

Cash rent may be either variable dependent upon prices and yields or fixed.

The fixed cash rents can be determined by at least three approaches: (1) cost (2) income, and (3) the market method.

Let's focus on the cost approach. Landlords or lessors are interested in recovering their fixed costs, which include depreciation, interest, repairs, business taxes and insurance on the leased assets. Recovery of all of these costs might not be feasible, in which case recovery of fixed cash costs becomes first priority.

What are some of the contents or considerations of a farm cash lease? First, identify the parties, property, and terms of the agreement. A land-use and cropping plan may be appropriate. Many leases state that the business is not a partnership in an effort to avoid certain legal and social security tax pitfalls.

Session On Justice Set

The Criminal Justice Committee of the League of Women Voters will present a program, "Women and Criminal Justice," Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, corner of 14th and Elm streets.

Speakers will be Sheriff Ralph L. Tyson; Assistant District Attorney Nancy Barnhill; Police and City Staff Attorney Judy Kornegay; and Director Shelby Teel of the Halfway House for Women here. There will be a taped interview with a former prison inmate and reports from League members who have observed at both the Pitt County Jail and Central Prison.

A visit was made by interested League members Oct. 16 at the Pitt County Jail to assess local conditions for imprisoned women. There will be time for questions from the floor.

Kay Adler, chairperson for the sponsoring Criminal Justice Committee, urged all League members to attend, since the local League will need to take action on recommendations concerning the topic.

The public is invited to hear the discussion of this important issue, Adler added.

Saying It In Welsh

In Wales, a region of the United Kingdom known for its coal mines, steel mills and rugged, hilly countryside, a language is fighting for its life. The language is Welsh. Welsh is the ancient language of Wales, with poetry dating back to the 6th century. Although it is one of Wales' two official languages, only about 20 percent of the country's people still speak it. Many Welsh-speakers are concerned that if the language goes out of use, an important part of Welsh culture will be lost. Because of recent protests in Wales, the British government has agreed to establish a new commercial television channel. The channel will broadcast in Welsh.

See No Risk From China Nuke Cloud

SEATTLE (AP) — The Pacific Northwest apparently escaped any fallout from a cloud of radioactive debris that passed over Washington and lower British Columbia, federal officials said.

The cloud, which moved over the area Sunday, carried particles from a nuclear detonation Thursday in China.

Air quality tests conducted at the top of the Smith Tower in downtown Seattle showed no measurable radioactive fallout, said Robert Mooney of the Environmental Protection Agency.

"With a stable atmosphere, such as we're experiencing right now, it is likely it (the debris) would remain suspended rather than dropping," said Ed Cowen, a radiation representative for the EPA.

"Without some violent disturbance — a storm or rain — it would more likely dissolve through the atmosphere rather than dropping," Cowen said.

Letter From Begin Read

"The Jews, most of them refugees from Nazi concentration camps, were being attacked from the north, the south and the east," Harriett Chused told Greenville-Kinston Hadassah at a recent meeting held at the home of Pearl Schechter in Kinston.

Quoting from a letter written by Prime Minister Begin, Ms. Chused explained that as long as the Jews had fought for the liberation of Israel from British colonial rule, there had been peace between Arabs and Jews. But when the Israelis declared their independence from Great Britain, Arabs invaded the country and tried to destroy them. In his letter, Prime Minister Begin reminds the recipient that the entire territory of Israel is merely 40 miles between the Jordan and the Dead Sea.

Begin recalls that going back to the post-World War I period, when Palestine was under British mandate, the Preamble to the mandate stated that there was a "historical connection between the Jewish people and Palestine." This was in reference to the fact that Jews had lived in the land since Biblical times.

As Ms. Chused continued, she read that even though the Arabs had sought to deprive the Jews of their lives as well as of their homeland, the Israeli government has proposed autonomy for the Arab inhabitants of Judea, Samaria and the Gaza District.

However, Begin writes, he does oppose a 22nd Arab state, ruled by the PLO, which he believes would be "a jumping-off ground for the destruction of Israel."

Eighteen members attended the local meeting.

Reprinted from The Augusta Chronicle, Aug. 1980 Professional Diet Control: a program that works

"I can't begin to tell you how much money I've spent trying to lose weight," Donna Baker says. "It's a wonder my husband didn't leave me before he did."

Donna says she has had a weight problem since age three, and has, at one time or other, tried every weight-loss method there is. Then she discovered Professional Diet Control and the firm's use of HCG.

"I went from a size 20-1/2 dress to a 13 — from 230 pounds to 150 today I'm going to lose 20 pounds more," she says confidently.

Donna Baker doesn't pretend that her method or any other method of weight-loss is easy or "magic."

Empathy and a sincere willingness to help a person lose weight are essential, Donna believes. "The answer is having someone who understands your problem and talks with you daily about it," she says. "Someone who genuinely cares and is determined to help you succeed."

Donna has just described herself. As manager of Professional Diet Control's Augusta office (2118A Walton Way, corner of Meigs Street) Donna Baker is a perfect role model for anyone with a weight problem.

If you choose to participate in the Professional Diet Control program, you will take part in a medically-supervised diet plan that is supplemented by injections of HCG — Human Chorionic Gonadotropin — a substance found in the body during pregnancy.

The use of HCG as a weight-control aid was first explored by Dr. A. T. W. Simeons in research begun in 1954 at the Salvatori Mundi International Hospital in Rome, Italy.

During studies conducted at that hospital, Dr. Simeons noticed that when small doses of HCG were administered to patrons who were overweight, obvious changes in body measurements began to take place. Study revealed that these changes were due to a redistribution of fat, resulting in a more even distribution throughout the body.

Donna Baker went from a size 20-1/2 dress to a size 13. From 230 pounds to 150. She has 20 pounds to go, and she knows she will make it — thanks to Professional Diet Control's programs using unique HCG.

At Professional Diet Control the emphasis is on Professional. The Augusta office is staffed with three full-time nurses, a manager, and a counselor.

Doctors are familiar with HCG. Donna Baker says "They refer many patients to us."

Persons with certain medical problems such as heart trouble or diabetes may be accepted into the program with their doctor's okay. The program has proven especially beneficial to those clients who, because of back or other problems, find physical exercise nearly impossible in their case.

A prospective client is first interviewed and a brief medical history taken. If there are no medical problems that would prevent the diet's success, a physical and lab work is then begun. The Professional Diet Control program depends on a 500-calorie diet and injections of HCG which causes a redistribution of body fat, allowing abnormal body fat to be more easily used by the body as a fuel source. Accomplished by a restricted daily caloric intake, the program has proven to yield a weight loss of five pounds per week.

Anyone with a weight problem can benefit from Professional Diet Control, according to Donna Baker. "Men do fantastically well," she says. "They lose 7 to 10 pounds a week and they're not hungry! We have a special program for teenagers. Dieteen" which involves no medications. And we've had 70 year-old women and men who do very well on our program, they're a lot of fun to work with."

Charges for Professional Diet Control programs are based on the number of treatments and the amount of medication necessary.

"We have many competitors," Donna Baker says, "but our prices are still the lowest in town. We are offering a free week with any program. For instance, if you sign up for four weeks, you only pay for three. Also, your first visit to Professional Diet Control is always free and without obligation. Visits are by appointment. Interested persons should call me at 758-8238."

Candlelight Ceremony Performed On Sunday

Roselind Parrott Causey and Michael Wade Gibson were united in marriage at 5 p.m. Sunday at St. Peter's Catholic Church in a candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Causey Sr. of Greenville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gene Gibson of Clover, S.C.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Father Phillip Walsh.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a formal gown of candlelight bridal satin, with a fitted bodice and Queen Anne neckline. The long fitted sleeves were overlaid with re-embroidered lace accented with seed pearls. The semi-fitted full skirt was trimmed with lace appliques and scalloped lace hemline border. The skirt extended into a full length chapel train. She wore a cathedral mantilla of English net bordered with alencon lace attached to a chapel cap highlighted with pearls.

The bride wore her mother's diamond necklace and carried a formal cascade of candlelight roses, stephanotis and silk lily of the valley, intertwined with English ivy and tied with lace streamers.

Miss Roselind Michelle, daughter of the bride, was maid of honor. She carried a bouquet identical to her mother's. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Robert Whitfield, sister of the bride, Mrs. John Lewis Causey Jr., sister-in-law of the bride, all of Greenville, Gail Marie Gibson of Charlotte, Cheryl Anne and Donna Elaine Gibson, both of Clover, S.C., all sisters of the bridegroom.

They wore formal length gowns of honey gold matte jersey design with an open neckline, shirred bodice and featuring honey silk Venise lace yoke and capped sleeves. Honey piping outlined the lace yoke finish with a tie bow in the back. The gowns also featured a full gathered skirt falling from a semi-natural waistline. They carried full cascades of hybrid orange tiger lilies, silk talisman roses and bronze bachelor buttons entwined with eucalyptus, golden wheat and fall leaves.

Honor attendants, Lisa Glidewell, Vickie Tedder, Cindy Patrick, Carol Holden, Amy Tinkham, all of Greenville, and Ce Ce Huruity of Columbia, S.C., each carried a silk talisman rose.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers included Robert Ward and John Lewis Causey Jr., brothers of the bride, Richard Gene Gibson Jr., brother of the bridegroom, Leon Edward Therrien of Charlotte and Paul Lee Colletti of Smyrna, Ga.

Mothers of the bride and bridegroom wore hybrid cymbidium orchids.

A program of nuptial music was presented by organist Mrs. Tullio Pignani and soloist Leon Edward Therrien, who sang "The Wedding Song." The reception was held in the church hall.

The bride's parents gave a pig picnic Friday night at their home for the bridal couple and friends. The parents of the bridegroom gave a rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Rotary Club Saturday night. The bride and her bridesmaids were also honored at a bridesmaids luncheon given by her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Lewis Causey Jr., and Mrs. James C. Paige Jr.

Following the wedding trip to the Shenandoah Valley mountains the couple will live in Greenville.

DEAR ABBY: My 60-year-old husband has emphysema so bad he can hardly draw a deep breath or laugh without coughing. His doctor said he absolutely had to quit smoking, so he saw a hypnotist a few times, came home and announced that he was "cured." I knew he was lying because whenever he'd come in from the outside he'd smell of smoke. He thinks he's fooling me, but I keep finding cigarettes stashed all over the house.

Abby, I feel like I'm living with a dope addict. Should I throw the cigarettes out when I find them? It's bad enough to live with a man who's killing himself because he isn't man enough to quit smoking, but to know that he's a liar and a cheat hurts even more. I really love him, but I feel so helpless. Please tell me what to do.

HEARTSICK WIFE

DEAR WIFE: First, I'll tell you what not to do. Don't tell him that if he were a "man" he could quit smoking. He hates his habit as much (or more) than you, but he's hooked. His craving for nicotine is as real as a heroin addict's need for a fix. Don't throw away the cigarettes he's stashed. It will only make him feel guiltier, and Lord knows, he already feels guilty enough.

If you love him, tell him! He needs to hear it to help him conquer the habit.

I've heard from literally hundreds of smokers who have been as hooked as he, but managed to quit. Some used the tapering-off method; others said "cold turkey" was the only way. Many recommended behavior modification. Some credited prayer. But of all the programs for which people pay, according to my readers, the most successful by far is Smokers. (For information, the toll-free number is 1-800-227-2334. In California it's 1-800-642-4772.)

Your man may have to try several methods before finding the one that works for him. But with your love and support, his chances for quitting are infinitely better.

DEAR ABBY: A writer asked whether it was proper to ask "Who else is coming?" after receiving an invitation to a party. Your reply, "It's not considered good manners," prompts this letter.

Recently we drove 20 miles to a party only to find that our neighbors had done the same thing. Our "good manners" in not inquiring who else was coming was both wasteful and expensive.

I suggest that hostesses consider this, and offer information that would promote sharing a ride. Or perhaps a guest might properly inquire as to whether he could give any other guests a ride.

WARSON WOODS, MO.

DEAR WOODS: Asking "Who else will be there?" out of curiosity is tacky. Offering to provide transportation to other guests is thoughtful.

worked into one hole of the canvas.

If you are using pattern or novelty stitches which are composed of straight stitches, try it out on a scrap of canvas first. These do not always work as well as the diagonal stitches.

The ten-mesh canvas usually has ridges which run in one direction on one side and the opposite direction on the other side. If you are using straight stitches, these should be worked over the ridges and not between them. Run a finger nail across the canvas and you can easily tell which way the ridges run.

A number of yarns may be used. On the larger mesh canvas, knitting worsted yarn or bulky rug and craft yarns are the most popular. Tapestry and persian type yarns are more often used with the ten mesh. Again, experiment and use whatever gives you the effect you want.

Give Swirl Loaves A Whirl

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Men and women who have turned to bread-baking as an enjoyable craft may be interested in a recipe we've just come upon for pumpernickel-style Swirl Loaves. Tested in our own kitchen, the recipe worked well: it turned out two loaves as enjoyable to see as to savor.

SWIRL LOAVES

- 3 cups all-purpose white flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 packages dry yeast
- 1/2 cup instant potato flakes, see Note
- 1 1/4 cups water
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
- 1-3rd cup molasses
- 2 1/2 cups rye (medium) flour

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together 2 cups of the white flour, the sugar, salt, yeast and potato flakes.

In a 1-quart saucepan gently heat together the water, milk and butter until liquids are very warm (120 to 130 degrees); butter does not need to melt. Gradually stir into dry ingredients in the large mixer bowl; at medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally, beat for 2 minutes. Add the remaining 1 cup of white flour and at high speed beat for 2 minutes. Divide batter in half.

Into half the batter stir the cocoa, molasses and enough of the rye flour to make a stiff dough.

Turn out both doughs separately onto a lightly floured smooth surface; knead each until smooth and elastic — 8 to 10 minutes. Place each in a greased bowl, turning to grease tops. Cover; let rise in a warm draft-free place until doubled — about 1 hour.

Set aside half of each kind of dough. Roll each remaining half into an 8- by 14-inch rectangle. Place dark dough on top of white, forming two layers. Roll up from short end to shape into a loaf. Pinch edges together to seal. Place loaf, seam side down, in a greased 8 1/2 by 4 1/2 by 2 1/2-inch loaf pan. Repeat with remaining dough. Cover, let rise as previously until doubled — about 1 hour.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 35 to 40 minutes. Turn out loaves on wire racks and cool.

Makes 2 loaves.
Note: Be sure to use dehydrated potatoes in flake form as called for; dehydrated potatoes in powdered form do not work in this recipe as it is given.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

You can create a gift of distinction with "quickpoint" plastic canvas and bulky craft yarn — or double strands of knitting worsted yarn. Four easy-to-learn novelty stitches are used to achieve the sculptured look of Aran Isle stitchery. This elegant little tissue box cover is equally at home in bath, den, bedroom or office.

To obtain directions for making the Aran Isle Tissue Cover, send your request for Leaflet No. 3304 with $1.00 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-3304 by sending check or money order for $12 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains materials for making two tissue box covers plus instructions. Shipping charges are included. Please specify your choice of any one or two of the following designer colors: cream, gladiola, deep aqua, geranium, straw, white, imperial blue or meadow green.

Plastic needlepoint canvas, once quite difficult to find is now readily available almost everywhere. While not suitable for soft items such as pillows and garments, and not advisable for items destined to become heirlooms, its uses are wide and varied.

Usually found in six, seven and ten-mesh sizes, plastic canvas is an excellent choice for the beginning stitcher. The mesh count determines the number of stitches per inch, using the basic tent stitch which crosses just one mesh of the canvas. A "mesh" is the point where the vertical and horizontal threads or ribs of canvas cross. With ten-mesh canvas, for example, you will take ten stitches per inch.

The six and seven-mesh canvas is usually sold in sheets while ten-mesh is most often sold by the yard. The sheets will usually retail for about $1.50 per sheet, while the cost will be around $9.00 a yard for the ten-mesh. This may sound steep, but you can make quite a large number of small items from one yard of canvas.

When you purchase the recommended amount for a project, you are almost certain to have small amounts of canvas and yarn left over.

Practice new pattern stitches with these scraps and make small items at the same time. Bookmarks, key chain tabs or coasters are just a few ideas. With larger scraps, you can make eyeglass cases, scissors cases, checkbook covers, cigarette cases or little trinket boxes.

Almost any graph chart design can be adapted to plastic point, with each square of the chart representing one stitch. If you want to know the finished size of a charted design, just count the number of squares used in each direction and divide each of these numbers by the mesh of your canvas.

The phenomenon of seeing a shimmering mirage on a hot day can be explained by the process of refraction. Some of the reflected light from the sun and a tree will be bent upward as it passes through a hot, dense band of air which hugs the ground. When our eyes intercept this refracted image, our brain interprets it as coming from below the actual source. We then see the image of the sky and tree as emanating from below the horizon. Hence, the sky will appear to be a lake with the reflection of the tree.

Committee Is Moving

The Mayor's Advisory Committee is moving along in its work. Chairman Wallace R. Wooles has reported that some 150 area residents have consented to serve on a number of committees which will help make recommendations for the community's future directions. Included are Protection and Safety, Leisure Activities and Recreation, Environmental Protection, Public Transportation, New Revenue Sources, Administrative Services. Wooles said at an executive committee meeting that all of the committees are organized and have met.

Many of the community's leaders are listed as serving on the committees and we are certain that they will develop some ideas for community development. In addition there will be provision for public input. Finally the executive committee will consider the suggestions and draft final recommendations to the city council for long range directions. We are happy that the advisory committee's work is not dragging. Rather it is being approached with enthusiasm by a large number of local citizens.

Show Ours For Asking

North Carolina has many natural wonders to awe us, but nothing tops the beauty of fall when the forest leaves are at their peak. They are beautiful in the east but nothing surpasses the breath-taking foliage in the North Carolina mountains this time of year. And it is that time in the mountains. The National Park Service expect this great natural show to peak this week and it will bring a huge number of visitors. For those who can't make it to the mountains there will soon follow a forest show here in the east. It is ours to see merely by taking a ride in the country.

Fearful Victims

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — To the average person, robbery or theft happens to somebody else and is a mention on the nightly news or a paragraph or two in the police blotter wrap-up, casually noted and forgotten. For victims, in all too many cases, it means profound changes in their lives, suffering even after the thieves have done their time and are back on the street.

"You see, we have been a victim of crime and we are at rock bottom as to anything to look forward to," a letter from a jewelry store owner in a western Piedmont city begins. The woman who wrote that letter is afraid of the publicity if her name is used. Some members of the gang who ripped off their store are still at large, three were caught for this and a number of other jobs, fought amongst themselves, testified against one another and plea bargained out till, with time off for good behavior, will be out of prison in three-to-five.

BILL NOBLITT

Owners of the mom-and-pop jewelry store have refinanced the family car, spent untold hours hopelessly searching for the stolen goods, cried over what they consider an uncaring attitude by police and courts, continued to pay bills due on merchandise long since gone, and regretfully looked forward to losing their business. Aid Plan The merchants wrote in response to a recent column in this space detailing a proposal by the Governors Crime Commission that a revolving fund be established so that victims of crime could be compensated for their losses immediately rather than waiting for payment from the criminal, spread over time and uncertain. The state would put up seed money, and the fund would operate from money paid into it under court sentences. "They are supposed to pay a sum of money after their sentence. Why can't what you spoke of in the paper be brought to pass before we lose everything?" the jeweler wonders. "I am having to take a job and our health is bad because of our great loss...it's hard to start over with nothing to do with when it takes everything to live on and nothing to sell to make any money." As best can be determined, the stolen merchandise entered a well-organized fencing system: to Charlotte right away, onto an airplane to New York, and into the hands of organized crime where the goods can be moved about so owners are not likely to be able to identify it when it goes back on the market. Some of the gang are in jail, some are not. Neither the stolen goods nor the money which changed hands for it has been recovered. (Continued on page 6)

Write It Down, Ronnie

WASHINGTON — The Reagan forces were sitting back relaxed at headquarters. Ronnie was sticking to the script as they had written it for him, and everything had been going well. Then suddenly, out of the blue, Reagan decided to ad-lib his opinion on the environment, and the sulphur dioxide hit the fan. One of the aides rushed in with a wire story. "Ronnie just announced the battle for clean air is over and attacked the volcanic eruption of Mt. St. Helens." "Okay, can the jokes. The election isn't won yet." "I'm not kidding. He said in Ohio that Mt. St. Helens had released more sulphur dioxide into the air than had been released by automobiles in the last 10 years." "Automobiles don't pollute with sulphur dioxide."

"Well, don't get mad with me. I didn't tell him to say it." "Get him on the phone ... Ronnie, where are you? ... You think you're over Los Angeles? Aren't you sure? ... You can't see because it's all brown smog down there? Ronnie, why did you get into the clean air thing without checking with us first? ... I know it sounded like a good idea comparing Mt. St. Helens with pollution but, Ronnie, you got it all wrong. Cars pollute with nitric oxide, carbon monoxide and other gases. Mt. St. Helens sulphur is peanuts compared with what man-made pollutants are doing to the atmosphere ... I know you're not a scientist, Ronnie ... but people want their President to have the facts before he speaks. Can you see the airport yet? ... You can't see anything but dirty clouds ... Los Angeles isn't going to like what you said about the battle for clean air being won. "Ronnie, remember how you promised you would not say anything unless we put it on cue cards for you? ... I know how much you hate EPA. Everyone hates EPA, but you're not going to win votes attacking it when no one can see Los Angeles. "And while I've got you on the phone, why did you have to attack trees? People love trees ... Yes, you did attack them. You said that 93 percent of all nitrogen oxide pollution comes from vegetation. You got nitric oxide mixed up with nitrous oxide. Trees give off nitrous oxide, which is harmless and non-toxic ... I'm not loading you down with a lot of chemistry, Ronnie. But this is the kind of stuff the other side can throw at you to prove you don't know what the heck you're talking about. Now all they're going to be asking you for the

Wooing The Blue-Collar

An AP News Analysis By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — Across the salt marshlands in Jersey City, Ronald Reagan started the custody argument seven weeks ago, urging blue-collar Democrats to forsake the party of their past and rally to his Republican standard.

Now, in the waning weeks of a long campaign, it was President Carter's turn, and he was summoning them home, insisting that a conservative Republican is no friend of the workingman. It is a battle waged every day in other swing states, as well, in Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Illinois. The outcome among blue-collar voters, and the intensity of organized labor's campaign for the Democratic ticket, could be the key to the outcome on Nov. 4. "My election can be in your hands," Carter told New Jersey labor leaders in a Secaucus hotel hall. "The future of our country is in your hands, perhaps, in this state."

The arithmetic behind the rhetoric is simple: There are more Democrats than Republicans, and if Carter can hold their votes in the battleground states, he can win. That is why Reagan has made a major effort all year to woo them away, to fashion what would seem an unlikely alliance with labor voters, even as labor leaders generally push the Democratic ticket. "I don't want you to turn your back on the working people of New Jersey, on the working people of this nation," Carter said, as he asked the state's labor chieftains to put 25,000 campaign workers on the streets and on the telephones in behalf of the Democrats. Reagan chose Democratic Jersey City as the scene for his Labor Day campaign keynote, accusing Carter of putting people out of work with failed economic policies. " ... This administration has betrayed the working men and women of this country," he said.

With variations, that is the theme he has tried to stress ever since, along the assembly line in Detroit, the all but deserted port in Buffalo, the steel mill in Youngstown. The message has been diluted by Reagan's excursions into such topics as the theory of evolution, the Ku Klux Klan, and the allegedly adverse effects of trees and volcanoes on American lungs. But then, blue-collar workers don't always vote on blue-collar issues, and Carter's labor-come-home efforts have not been advanced by some of his own campaign side trips into headline accusations that Reagan could mean war, that the Republican has introduced racism into the campaign, that he would divide black from white, Christian from Jew. Carter is more careful now. He wants no more diversions in the crucial campaign days ahead. He recites the Reagan record, says the interests of the blue-collar voter can hardly be advanced by a man who has in the past assailed the minimum wage, criticized unemployment compensation, opposed federal medical care for the aged. It leads to his chosen theme: "Times don't change much." Republicans opposed the social programs of the past, he says, and this Republican would follow the pattern. Carter says that he, too, has a tradition behind him, the Democratic tradition of Roosevelt, Truman, Kennedy, Johnson, Humphrey. Four years ago, he often campaigned as a different kind of Democrat, as an outsider who would change Washington's way of doing business. Not now. "I'm a Democrat in the same tradition as Franklin Roosevelt and John Kennedy," he said in the heart of Pennsylvania coal country the other day. That is the message of his late cam-

Other Editors Say Blazing A Trail

(The Wilson Times)
North Carolina's new School of Science and Mathematics was dedicated with the hope that it will spark a national response to the United States' failure to place sufficient emphasis on scientific and technological studies in secondary schools. Principal speaker at the dedication ceremony was U.S. Secretary of Education Shirley M. Hufsteler who quoted some shocking statistics in comparing education in this country and the Soviet Union. She noted that Russian schools produce six engineers for every one produced in the U.S. Mrs. Hufsteler also pointed out that 5 million Russian students are graduated from high school each year with at least two years' training in calculus, compared with barely 100,000 American graduates with even one year of such mathematical training. The U.S. still retains an edge in mathematics, science and engineering training, but, Mrs. Hufsteler said, this superiority is fast eroding. At present, 150 students selected from more than 900 N.C. applicants are attending the school, but within five years the student body is expected to reach 700 to 900. The school is the brainchild of Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. who called it "an investment in our state's genius" and said he expected some of the students to be Nobel Prize winners. Gov. Hunt also announced a campaign to raise $7 million for the school and reported $2 million of this amount had already been pledged. Some $1 million of the $7 million — if raised — will be used to endow student scholarships, $1 million for faculty merit awards, and $5 million to renovate and equip the school. At present, none of the students pay tuition and the governor hopes to continue this policy in order that "people of all backgrounds have the opportunity to attend." We expect the N.C. School of Science and Mathematics to blaze a trail in education that will receive national recognition. The endorsement of the Secretary of Education cannot help but focus attention on the Tar Heel state as a pioneer in encouraging academic excellence at the secondary school level.

Strength For Today

PERFECTION "Be ye perfect." That is what the Book says. But how can mankind, a fallen creature since Adam, succumb to temptations, seeking repentance, and then succumbing again, ever achieve perfection? The answer is that there is no inconsistency between the state of imperfection and striving for the ideal of perfection itself. Nobody has ever attained perfection save the Man who uttered these words in the first place, Jesus Christ. He was tempted, "yet without sin". He practiced what he preached. He said "Be ye perfect," and then proceeded to show us what it means to be perfect. This commandment is the ideal toward which we are constantly to press. We may never achieve it — no one ever has — but if we try for anything less, we shall make a poor showing of life. We have to keep perfection in our minds and in our sight if we expect to live life to even half of its potential. — Elisha Douglass.

Gains Endangered By Economy

By JAMES F. SMITH Associated Press Writer WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland, the world's fourth-largest coal producer, has a coal shortage at home. It is one of the visible signs of what government officials describe as the nation's mounting economic miseries — difficulties that jeopardize the gains of the defiant worker strikes in August. Problems also cited are falling production, a potent currency black market and, most serious, huge debts to Western banks. Communist Party and government leaders are admitting numerous "mistakes and deformations of socialism" as they try to revive the economy. The result is a rare glimpse at the severity of the crisis, which one party commentator said threatens to make Poland "the sick man of Europe." Among the problems: — Production dropped 9 percent in August and 6 percent in September over the same periods of a year ago, with Polish industrial output running at 80 to 85 percent of capacity and small strikes still occurring each day. — Coal production has developed a backlog of 4 million tons in the last few months, a shortfall that could rise to 8 million to 10 million tons by the end of the year. — Poland became a net importer of food in 1980 for the first time — a year after the country recorded its first drop in national income. "One cannot describe the present situation as a crisis, but rather as an approaching catastrophe," wrote Mieczyslaw Rakowski, a party Central Committee member and editor of the influential Polityka weekly. Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania said the key economic error in the last decade was "an enormous overburdening of the national economy with investments....The actual scope of the investments far exceeded the possibilities." Kania said in the first five years of the 1970s alone, investments in huge plants and other development schemes ran 500 billion zlotys ($16 billion) too high, one-third above the forecast in the central plan. To make those investments, the Polish economy went into tremendous debt, reaching $20 billion to Western banks alone. That created a vicious circle. "The new planning chief, Henryk Kisiel, said paying back those debts now devours "the major part of our income from exports," preventing investment of the income in self-help development. A grim assessment came from outside Poland recently. The Geneva-based United Nations Economic Commission reported on Oct. 10 that Poland's exports fell $220 million in August, from $1.327 billion to $1.106 billion. That was down from a June total of $1.768 billion. Imports and new construction also dropped sharply. The report said total industrial production was down more than 12 percent in August from July. On the day the U.N. report was issued, the Polish government signed a new credit agreement with 25 West German banks worth $667 million in loans. The loans will finance expanded coal production and imports of West German consumer goods, in return for shipments of coal to West Germany beginning in 1986 as well as low-interest repayment. That came a few weeks after the United States approved a credit guarantee of $670 million to allow Poland to import more U.S. food commodities. The Soviet Union also has provided credits worth hundreds of millions of dollars. Coal products have been exported as fast as they can be produced to bring in Western currencies, often at the expense of the needs of the Polish people. The rush to increase capital-producing exports and the lack of cash caused severe shortages in agricultural equipment such as fertilizer, fodder and modern machinery — depressing Polish agriculture and forcing imports of grain and other food products. Meanwhile, income has climbed — including a roughly 12 percent increase resulting from the strike settlements that will cost the government an extra 25 billion to 30 billion zlotys this year alone. One zloty is slightly more than three cents. But with few goods on the shelves, the increases don't mean much.

paid television commercials, too.

And there are signs that the voters may be returning to the historic patterns of presidential elections. The latest AP-NBC News poll showed Carter gaining strength among blue-collar workers, Reagan picking up support in suburban precincts.

That survey, completed Oct. 10, showed Reagan the preferred candidate of 43 percent of likely voters, Carter supported by 35 percent, independent John B. Anderson by 10 percent. The Reagan-Carter margin was not significantly different from that in a poll completed on Sept. 24.

But the new survey showed both major candidates had gained strength in the territory where their parties usually run strongest. Reagan was preferred by 47 percent of suburban residents, up from 42 percent. Carter polled 29 percent in those areas.

At the same time, Carter gained ground in working-class areas. He was the choice of 43 percent among blue-collar workers, Reagan of 37 percent. That could represent a virtual deadlock, since the margin of error in the poll was 3 percentage points.

But in late September, the AP-NBC survey gave Reagan a 6-point margin over Carter among that group of likely voters.

They'll be hearing from the president daily, from now until the polls open two weeks from tomorrow.

Rap Failures

On Middlemen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee has criticized the Energy Department for failing to crack down on middlemen who avoid price controls by fraudulently claiming their domestic oil came from low-yield wells.

The subcommittee's study says those false claims have cost American consumers more than $2 billion in overcharges during the past two years.

The report claims the Energy Department has failed to act aggressively to stop the misclassification of domestic oil from the price-controlled category to the "stripper oil" category, which is more expensive because it has been exempted from price controls.

Stripper wells are defined as those that produce less than 10 barrels of oil a day.

An Energy Department spokeswoman said she had no comment on the report issued Saturday by the House Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

President Carter has begun decontrolling domestic oil prices to spur production.

Prisons and school facilities are often dismayingly alike in appearance, says Philadelphia architect Aase Eriksen; but if children's ideas are used to improve the design of existing schools, the result is an inviting and attractive learning environment.

Ms. Eriksen, featured speaker at a Thursday luncheon sponsored by the East Carolina University chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers, is the originator of the National Endowment for the Arts Architects-in-Schools program.

As an educator and an architect, she emphasized the importance of drawing upon the imagination and suggestion of children themselves in the redesign of schools. Children of all ages find pleasure in designing environments, she said.

"Houses built of various materials, elaborate block constructions, puppet theatres, doll houses and even the teenager's decorated van speak of a real need to create space with a personal touch," she said.

"Children use cardboard cartons, fabric and construction paper to create private spaces, showing a tendency to want soft forms to crawl into or sit on, and often decorate their spaces elaborately."

As youngsters reach school age, however, they have fewer opportunities for designing their surroundings, and Ms. Eriksen believes they are led to think that "design is neither important, nor necessary, particularly in the school."

Some remarkable results are visible in school cafeterias, libraries, classrooms and lounges throughout the nation, as "impersonal" school environments have been transformed by the pupils under the expert guidance of architects involved in the NEA's Architects-in-Schools program.

In brief, the program sponsors an architect's residency at a school or group of schools for a set period up to two years, during which children are taken through "carefully structured" activities designed to increase their awareness of environmental design.

Children's drawings and models of furnishings, murals and grounds landscaping are examined, discussed and incorporated in a redesign project.

One group of second-graders' plans led to a redesign of a standard classroom to include a loft, a rug made from carpet scraps, large floor pillows for comfortable seating and a "private space" into which individual children could crawl when they need to be alone for awhile.

"Both the teacher and the Architect-in-Residence felt that the children had discovered new talents within themselves and had matured dramatically," said Ms. Eriksen. "The changes, achieved after much analysis and experimentation were practical and attractive."

Other schools have been enlivened by bright murals in barren, narrow hallways, large design-coded signs and logos to differentiate areas within a large building, installation of a student lounge in an unused room, and more attractive grounds through children's landscape designs.

"These projects, executed by the students with the help of the Architect-in-Residence, have changed attitudes and caused vandalism and graffiti to disappear," notes Ms. Eriksen.

In the initial excitement of a redesign project, students are "often tempted to start painting or pushing the furniture around at once." A benefit of the Architects-in-Schools program is that they learn the importance of careful planning and attention to detail, she explained. Existing facilities and projected improvements are examined on maps, blueprints and layouts.

"The children are led through selecting a project, analyzing the needs of the space, often by building a model, creating alternative solutions, selecting and improving the best solution and implementing the design. They learn firsthand about administrative roadblocks, bureaucratic inertia and difficulty in obtaining materials. But they also learn that they can change their environment, and change it for the better."

Involving students in school design projects not only helps them improve the appearance of "cold and barren" places, but also introduces them to an "awareness and understanding of the built environment," which has various applications — landscaping, interior design, architectural history and city planning and structure.

Ms. Eriksen, executive director of Educational Futures, Inc. and a former teacher who holds a PhD degree in comparative education from the University of Pennsylvania, is a practicing architect (Aase Eriksen Associates, Philadelphia).

She was in Greenville to attend formal opening ceremonies at the new corporate office annex of Empire Brushes, Inc. which she designed.

Refugees Stage Hospital Uproar

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 100 Cuban refugees went on a rampage at a federally owned mental hospital here after they apparently became upset by workmen installing iron grates on the windows of the building where they were housed, officials say.

District of Columbia police said no one was injured in the half-hour disturbance, which broke out Sunday afternoon.

The refugees were transferred to St. Elizabeth's mental hospital last week for treatment of emotional and mental problems.

Officials say several windows were smashed, furniture was destroyed and a small fire was set before security guards brought the Cubans under control.

Arrested On Drug Charges

Bombing Cancels Manila Gathering

Greenville Police arrested five persons on drug law violation charges in three separate incidents in the downtown area late Saturday night and early Sunday morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said David Kevan Jordan, 17 of 403 Middlebury St. and William Dale White, 17 of Route 9, Greenville, were charged about 10:45 p.m. with possession of marijuana after officers found a small quantity of the illegal drug in their possession in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Reade Streets.

In addition to the drug charge, Cannon said White was charged with possession of alcoholic beverages under the age of 18.

Cannon said officers charged Timothy Alan Davis, 20 of Route 1, Kinston, with possession of marijuana after finding a small quantity in his possession in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets, about 11:10 p.m. Saturday.

George Milton Fesperman, 20 of Rocky Mount, was charged with possession of marijuana, and Samuel Kelly Searcy, 25 of Route 8, Greenville, was arrested on a charge of possession of hashish, following a 1:50 a.m. incident Sunday, the chief noted.

According to Cannon, Fesperman and Searcy were charged after officers found a small amount of the illegal drugs in their possession in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets.

Expect Future Production Dip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional study predicts that by 1985, conventional U.S. oil production could drop by as much as 3 million barrels a day from its current level of about 10.2 million barrels a day.

The study released Sunday says that to maintain current levels of oil production, the country would have to rely more heavily on "unconventional" sources such as oil shale and synthesis from coal.

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. travel agents jammed an airline counter today to book flights out of the Philippines after their convention was cancelled when a bomb blast injured seven Americans and about 13 others shortly after an address by President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Marcos was not hurt and none of the injured was in serious condition. The April 6 Liberation Movement, which opposes Marcos and his government by martial law, had warned the travel agents not to come to Manila and claimed responsibility for the bombing Sunday.

Marcos condemned the bombing as a "heinous act of terrorism" and vowed "vigorous action shall be taken to seek exemplary justice and punishment for all those responsible." He ordered 30 people arrested for alleged links to the April 6 group, but did not directly tie any of them to Sunday's bombing.

The delegates mobbed an airline counter beside the lobby of the convention center. But many of them took advantage of free sightseeing tours offered by the Association of Philippine Travel Agents, and most said they were leaving early not out of fear but because cancellation of the American Society of Travel Agents' 50th anniversary congress left them with little to do.

The society scheduled a series of educational TV programs for delegates staying until Saturday, when the convention was to have ended. But "I don't like to stay in my room and watch TV," said Bruce Templeman of Brea, Calif.

"I don't think there's any great fear among the delegates," said Roger Hauge, an airline executive from Minneapolis, Minn., "but there's a feeling of sadness that something like this can put a damper on the efforts of so many Filipinos and ASTA delegates who traveled so far."

The bomb exploded during the opening session of the ASTA congress. About 5,000 people were in the seaside convention center, and Marcos had just finished a speech in which he told them: "You come to the Philippines perhaps for the first time and you are warned that the Philippines is under martial law, raising fear and apprehension that you come to visit a country where bloodshed is rife, kidnapping, arson, murder, pillage and destruction commonplace.

"But this is a nightmare which we hope is past and gone."

The bomb went off during a slide film depicting the U.S. naval bombardment of Spanish ships in Manila Bay in 1898. Marcos was seated 20 rows from the explosion, and his guards immediately surrounded him. Many in the audience dropped to the floor of the auditorium. Hundreds fled through the smoke and dust.

Investigators said several of the travel agents saw two people leave seats in the balcony moments before the explosion.

Tourism Minister Jose D. Aspiras said the bomb exploded in a section of seats occupied by U.S. and Brazilian delegates, and that it was placed in a delegate's bag atop a seat. He said the bomb was similar to those used in other recent bombings in Manila and was believed imported from the United States.

The U.S. Embassy said the injured Americans were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Archer of Glendale, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cooper of Aiken, S.C., Roberta Fisher of Arlington Heights, Ill., and Joseph Hofrichter of Loveland, Ohio. Hospital sources said June C. Breen of Washington, D.C., also was injured.

Carter And Reagan Disagree On Defense Questions

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Questions of "war and peace," and the Fitness of the American military in the face of international crises, are dominating the camaign duel between President Carter and Ronald Reagan. One result is certain to be sharply higher military spending, no matter who wins on Nov. 4.

"The cold, hard fact of the matter is that our economic, military and strategic strength under President Carter is eroding," says Reagan. "Peace is lost when such strength disappears, or — just as bad — is seen by an adversary as disappearing."

Says Carter, "in balance, in my judgment, we are stronger and in balance we will remain stronger." Nonetheless, he is shepherding the largest peacetime defense spending increase in the nation's history.

Under Reagan, the increase likely would be much bigger, in part because the Republicans propose a number of major "fixes" to prevent what they see as an ominous Soviet advantage in missile power in the years just ahead.

Reagan is the first candidate in years who does not shrink at the prospect of an arms race with the Soviet Union, contending that a willingness to compete is the only way to slow Russia's strategic buildup. Carter ridicules this approach; he believes the United States is stronger than the Soviets and advocates U.S.-Soviet balance as the safest and sanest course.

Reagan, whose campaign slogan is "Peace through Strength," would junk the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), which he regards as unfavorable to the United States, and negotiate "legitimate arms control" only from a position of unquestioned strength.

Carter told the AP last Friday that "to insinuate that a superiority in nuclear weapons would be a card that could be played to future arms control, in my opinion, is not only dangerous but it's ridiculous."

To Carter's embarrassment, the campaign year has been marked by a series of reports indicating chronic problems with the all-volunteer military force and with the readiness of units and their equipment.

The administration blames readiness problems on neglect by Congress, the armed services and successive administrations in withholding sufficient funds for spare parts, ship overhauls, aircraft maintenance and other measures needed to keep the forces in working order.

After Democrats regained control of the White House, the Carter administration cut the Ford administration's Navy shipbuilding program by 50 percent and sought to promote U.S.-Soviet negotiations aimed at removing outside military forces from the Indian Ocean area.

Then came the Iranian revolution and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, and the Carter administration found it had to stretch the fleet to maintain a force near the vital, oil-producing Persian Gulf.

Carter also set in motion a long-term, costly plan to increase U.S. ability to project ground troops into the Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf region and said the United States would repel any Soviet attempt to control the gulf area.

Tanting Carter, Reagan has said the president "pronounced doctrines to extend American commitments without the strength to support them."

Reagan has carefully avoided projecting any defense spending figure and his advisers say they are still considering the costs of a range of options.

Among other things, the Reagan camp is considering reopening the Minuteman III production line and digging extra launch silos — part of a "shell game" designed to reduce Minuteman vulnerability to Soviet attack until the new MX mobile missile is ready for combat later in this decade.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said recently the Minuteman force already may be vulnerable to big multi-warhead Soviet missiles that have been deployed at a steady rate for several years.

Reagan and Carter both support the MX missile, but Reagan doubts the Carter plan to place the mobile MX in horizontal shelters in the desert valleys of Utah and Nevada.

Rep. John B. Anderson, the independent candidate, opposes the MX entirely but, like Carter and Reagan, supports a buildup in the conventional Army, Navy, Marine and Air Force forces.

Reagan has been vague about how he would go about improving those forces, although he has said he would restore the goal of a 600-ship Navy. The present fleet totals 456 ships; Carter's program calls for 550. Considering the huge cost of new ships, the difference would add up to big bucks.

Carter, who campaigned for the presidency in 1976 with a pledge to cut defense spending, has reversed direction during his first four-year term. He has opted for what he describes as "rebuilding our military strength steadily, carefully and responsibly."

And, They Also Split On Health, Welfare -- Not Social Security

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the third day of every month, stiff green U.S. Treasury checks are mailed to more than 35 million retired or disabled Americans and their families. One in every seven citizens. Many of them vote.

This is not a system you would fool with if you were running for president.

For President Carter and Ronald Reagan, the challenge in the 1980 campaign has been not to land blows on the $135 billion Social Security program, but to avoid being clobbered by it.

This year, with the nation's electorate growing older, Reagan and Carter are competing to become Social Security's dearest friend. The system, long a target of conservative critics, has a secure foothold no matter who is elected on Nov. 4.

But Carter and Reagan differ greatly on other social issues.

Carter favors — and Reagan opposes — national health insurance, a more federalized welfare system and controls on hospital costs. Carter has been unable to achieve his goals in any of these areas, thus giving Reagan a chance to question the president's effectiveness.

But on Social Security, Carter and Reagan are in the same corner, promising to keep those green checks coming. Each has pledged to study the system's need for more money, in the near future and beyond the turn of the century, but neither has said how he would shore up the system.

Both oppose taxing Social Security benefits, as the 1979 Advisory Council on Social Security and others have recommended.

Carter takes credit for pushing through Congress in 1977 legislation that raised the payroll tax and bailed Social Security out of its latest crisis.

He's been less talkative about his midterm effort to reduce some benefits, including the $255 death payment, and stipends for college students, and to cut off widows' benefits when a child turns 16 instead of 18.

Congress never agreed to any of the reductions, and Carter did not renew requests for them in this year's proposed budget.

Far from looking for economies in Social Security, Reagan has proposed eliminating the limits on how much retirees can earn without losing benefits. Currently, those aged 65 to 72 lose $1 in benefits for each $2 they earn over $5,000 a year.

The Social Security Administration says Reagan's plan would cost $2.1 billion a year, but the Reagan camp puts the net cost at only $440 million, on the ground that more of the elderly would work and pay income and payroll taxes.

Carter, as part of his response to Reagan's call for an initial 10 percent cut in income taxes, has proposed a new tax credit equal to 8 percent of the Social Security payroll tax — an effort to cushion the impact of the fast-rising tax.

While neither Carter nor Reagan has made clear if he would cut benefits or seek alternatives to the escalating payroll tax, independent candidate John Anderson has outlined some far-reaching proposals for Social Security.

Anderson wants to cut the payroll tax in half and make up the revenues with a 50-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline sales.

He also has suggested gradually raising the age for full Social Security retirement benefits from 65 to 68 — a step that would be as politically popular as the plague, but which many experts view as inevitable if Social Security is to stay afloat when the post-World War II baby boom hits retirement age in 2015 and later.

Carter has sought to make political hay of Reagan statements in years past suggesting that Social Security might be made voluntary and opposing the introduction of Medicare for the elderly as "a foot in the door of a government takeover of all medicine."

However Reagan once felt about the government's role as the major provider of retirement, disability and health insurance, he knows how deeply woven these programs are in the fabric of American society. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who discovered the dangers of criticizing Social Security in his disastrous bid for the presidency in 1964, has championed moves in Congress in recent years to eliminate the earnings test.

While Reagan opposes national health insurance, he says he will offer tax incentives to expand private health insurance for catastrophes illness.

Congress never acted on Carter's catastrophic health insurance bill, which was touted as a first step toward national health insurance.

The president also tried in vain to single out the hospital industry for mandatory federal price controls if voluntary restraints failed. Administration officials expect to combine cost controls in a national health plan if Carter is re-elected.

Reagan favors replacing federal welfare grants with a system of block grants to the states. He says he wants to turn over both control of welfare programs and "the tax resources to pay for them," but he has not offered any other specifics.

Carter, and former President Richard M. Nixon as well, got nowhere with a bill that would have set a national minimum for welfare payments and created jobs and work incentives for welfare recipients.

Refugee Aid Ante Raised

MIAMI (AP) — The federal government is offering volunteer agencies $1,000 per refugee to resettle 8,100 hard-to-place Cubans remaining at Fort Chaffee, Ark., and 100 still at a Miami camp, a State Department official says.

"It's a fair amount and the voluntary agencies have not said they are displeased with it," State Department spokesman Art Brill told The Miami Herald from Washington.

The federal government had been paying the agencies $300 per Cuban resettled out of the camps.

Brill said the State Department is more than tripling the fee because many of the remaining refugees have psychological problems and require long-term institutional care.

Last month, voluntary agencies found new homes outside of Florida for 700 Cubans in a Miami tent city in less than a week after the federal government offered them $2,000 per refugee.

The Republican challenger accuses Carter of allowing the United States to slide into second place and endangering peace by tempting Soviet adventurism.

The Carter campaign strategy has been to characterize Reagan as rash, even dangerous. Carter has warned voters that the presidential election will determine "whether we have peace or war."

Reagan, in effect, called this a low blow. Sunday night, he said the "real peace issue in 1980" is this: "Did he (Carter) keep his promise? Has he kept our nation strong?"

Reagan and his advisers contend the Soviets could not win an arms race — that their economy could not stand the strain. Therefore, they argue, the Soviet Union would be forced to accept more equitable arms limitation terms, possibly including actual reductions in nuclear weaponry.

"The one card that's been missing in these negotiations has been the possibility of an arms race," Reagan said in an October interview with The Associated Press. As Reagan sees it, the Russians "will be far more inclined to negotiate in good faith if (the Soviet Union) knows that the United States is engaged in building up its military."

Carter told the AP last Friday that "to insinuate that a superiority in nuclear weapons would be a card that could be played to future arms control, in my opinion, is not only dangerous but it's ridiculous."

To Carter's embarrassment, the campaign year has been marked by a series of reports indicating chronic problems with the all-volunteer military force and with the readiness of units and their equipment.

Referendum On Spending Curbs

By GERRY NELSON
Associated Press Writer
ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota voters decide next month whether state political candidates running with public funds will continue to be required to abide by campaign spending limits.

But the proposed constitutional amendment has become controversial amid accusations that lawmakers rigged the wording of the ballot question so that no one can vote to keep things the way they are.

Since 1974 the state has given public funds to candidates for legislative and statehouse offices, provided they abide by spending limits.

About one-third of the candidates are ignoring the offer this year, preferring to raise private funds and spend as much as they want.

The proposal, Amendment No. 2 on the ballot, has a sort of apple pie wording: it seems to ask only whether voters want candidates to abide by spending limits, but actually does more.

Legislators have worded the amendment so that some state laws will be changed whether voters say "yes," "no" or don't vote at all. Some experts think the package may be illegal because voters have the option to choose between no spending limits or higher spending limits, but not the same spending limits.

The voters also have no opportunity to vote against public funding of campaigns.

As placed on the ballot by the Legislature, the question simply reads: "Shall the Minnesota constitution be amended to require campaign spending limits for executive and legislative offices and public disclosure of campaign spending for all state candidates?"

But the fine-print explanations of the measure placed in newspaper advertisements by the secretary of state's office indicate that lawmakers have tied defeat of the amendment to automatic repeal of the existing campaign spending limits at the end of 1981.

If the measure is approved, public funding will still be available, but spending limits will be indexed to the 1974 cost of living and will roughly double the present ceilings of $7,500 in House races, $15,000 in Senate races and $600,000 in the gubernatorial race.

If voters say "no," all spending limits come off, but candidates can still get public funds.

Common Cause, the League of Women Voters, the Minnesota AFL-CIO and the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party support No. 2. The Republican Party, including Gov. Al Quie, opposes it.

A voter who skips No. 2 will in effect cast a "no" vote because the Minnesota Constitution requires that amendments get a majority of all voters, not merely a plurality of those voting on a question.

Damages Heavy In Wrecks

An estimated $11,550 property damage resulted from a series of six traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police, Saturday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 10:30 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Fourth and Jarvis Streets, involving cars driven by Lisa Dawn Jarman of 804 Willow St., and Frank Douglas Moore of Raleigh.

Damage from the collision was set at $1,000 to the Jarman car and $2,000 to the Moore auto.

A 3:46 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 500 feet West of the Trade Street intersection involved cars driven by Catharine Curl Murray of 2301 East Fifth St. and Charles S. Lytle of Hampton, Va.

Police, who charged Ms. Murray with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $800 to the Murray car and $1,800 to the Lytle vehicle.

Investigators reported a car driven by Mark Carlton McCraw of Route 5, Greenville, collided with a parked car owned by Gentry Vance McLawhorn of 1408 N. Greene St., about 12:20 p.m. on Greene Street, 150 feet North of the Gum Road intersection, resulting in an estimated $2,000 damage to the McCraw car and $400 damage to the McLawhorn vehicle.

Laura Crawford Tyndall of 906 Charles St. was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 4:15 p.m. mishap on Charles Street, South of the Stratford Road intersection.

Police reported the Tyndall car collided with a vehicle driven by Stephen Elwood Jernigan of Route 1, Ahsokie, causing $100 damage to the Jernigan car and $2,000 damage to the Tyndall auto.

Investigators reported Carlton Ray Scott of 707 East Gum Rd. was charged with having improper breaks after the truck he was driving collided with a car operated by Jonathan David Williams of Route 2, Greenville, about 6:20 p.m. on Arlington Boulevard at the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Police estimated damage at $350 to the Scott truck and $500 to the Williams car.

investigation of the collision.

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 1:11 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Charles Street and Red Banks Road.

Investigators, who identified the drivers involved as Cornelious Paul Harris of Route 5, Greenville, and Douglas Paul Edwards of Kinston, charged Harris with failing to stop for a stop light.

Cars driven by Laurine Sue Ross of Henrico, N.C. and Judith Lyn Emery of Raleigh, collided about 12:35 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, two-tenths of a mile West of the Bismark Street intersection, causing an estimated $20 damage to the Ross car and $450 damage to the Emery vehicle.

Investigated Three Mishaps

Greenville Police reported an estimated $7,170 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated Sunday.

Heaviest damage, investigators reported, resulted from a 3:38 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Wilson and Chestnut Streets.

Officers said cars driven by Ledrew James of 1205 Ragsdale Rd. and Ronald Earl Miller of 312 London Inn, collided, causing $2,000 damage to the James car and $2,500 damage to the Miller auto.

James was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of the collision.

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 1:11 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Charles Street and Red Banks Road.

Investigators, who identified the drivers involved as Cornelious Paul Harris of Route 5, Greenville, and Douglas Paul Edwards of Kinston, charged Harris with failing to stop for a stop light.

Cars driven by Laurine Sue Ross of Henrico, N.C. and Judith Lyn Emery of Raleigh, collided about 12:35 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, two-tenths of a mile West of the Bismark Street intersection, causing an estimated $20 damage to the Ross car and $450 damage to the Emery vehicle.

While neither Carter nor Reagan has made clear if he would cut benefits or seek alternatives to the escalating payroll tax, independent candidate John Anderson has outlined some far-reaching proposals for Social Security.

Anderson wants to cut the payroll tax in half and make up the revenues with a 50-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline sales.

He also has suggested gradually raising the age for full Social Security retirement benefits from 65 to 68 — a step that would be as politically popular as the plague, but which many experts view as inevitable if Social Security is to stay afloat when the post-World War II baby boom hits retirement age in 2015 and later.

Carter has sought to make political hay of Reagan statements in years past suggesting that Social Security might be made voluntary and opposing the introduction of Medicare for the elderly as "a foot in the door of a government takeover of all medicine."

However Reagan once felt about the government's role as the major provider of retirement, disability and health insurance, he knows how deeply woven these programs are in the fabric of American society. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who discovered the dangers of criticizing Social Security in his disastrous bid for the presidency in 1964, has championed moves in Congress in recent years to eliminate the earnings test.

While Reagan opposes national health insurance, he says he will offer tax incentives to expand private health insurance for catastrophes illness.

Congress never acted on Carter's catastrophic health insurance bill, which was touted as a first step toward national health insurance.

The president also tried in vain to single out the hospital

All Safe In Plane Fire

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An engine and part of a wing of a South African Airways jumbo jetliner caught fire off the African coast but the plane made a successful emergency landing, an airline spokesman said today.

The Boeing 747 jetliner left New York's Kennedy Airport Thursday night for South Africa with 151 passengers aboard and made a refueling stop at Ilha do Sal, in the Cape Verde Islands off West Africa.

About 20 minutes after taking off, the inboard port engine caught fire and flames spread to the wing. The pilot turned back to Ilha do Sal for an emergency landing.

"We were told, in so many words, that our landing was in the lap of the gods," said Oddy Sampson, the president of the South African Golf Union. "As it turned out, the pilot managed to touch down perfectly."

Half of the passengers were flown to South Africa aboard another South African 747 which stopped at the island on Saturday. Meanwhile, the plane that caught fire was repaired and brought the rest of the passengers to Johannesburg Sunday.

Farmers May Apply For Aid

Congressman Walter B. Jones today announced that the Farmers Home Administration has named Greene County an Emergency Loan Area as a result of damages and losses incurred to tobacco, corn and soybeans during the extreme heat and drought from June 1 through Sept. 15 and scattered hail and wind between Aug. 1 and 15.

Farmers may apply for Emergency Loan Assistance at the FHA county office located at 108 SE First Street in Snow Hill. Applications for physical and production losses will be accepted until July 21, 1981.

Song Writer To Be On Show

Durham native Don Schlitz whose song "The Gambler" was made a top hit by Kenny Rogers, performs on "The Songwriters Show," one of the five Country Music Association Fan Fair programs taped at the 1979 event in Nashville.

This one-hour program gives country music fans a chance to meet the people who've written the hits and some of their favorite songs. It airs October 25 at 8 p.m. on channel 28.

Ed Bruce, who wrote, "Mamas, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys," is the master of ceremonies. Many of the writers will perform their own music. Other songwriters appearing include Randy Goodrum ("You Needed Me"), and Dennis Morgan ("Sleeping Single in a Double Bed").

Rebuilding Old Whaling Ship

MYSTIC, Conn. (UPI) — The whaling ship Charles W. Morgan, originally built in 1841 and for several years an attraction at the Mystic Seaport museum, is undergoing extensive building in the Seaport's own Preservation Shipyard.

Visitors to the Seaport, a restoration of a 19th Century New England seaport which is one of the area's top tourist attractions, will be able to watch the rebuilding of the Morgan daily while it is in progress. A special exhibit for visitors will explain the construction techniques and the tools being used.

The restoration of the old whaler's rigging and masts will bring it more accurately to its appearance in 1867 while in service as a whaler, as determined by Seaport research into old records.

Strike Underway At Disney World

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Union musicians walked picket lines at Walt Disney World today in a salary dispute, but a Disney spokesman said the huge Central Florida theme park was operating as usual.

"We do not expect it to have any effect on the other 14,000 employees and very little effect on our other operations," said the spokesman, Charles Ridgway.

Some of the 109 members of Local 389 of the American Federation of Musicians, whose three-year contract expired at midnight Sunday, were manning picket lines, according to John Pellegrino, president of the union local.

"We're not that far apart," Pellegrino said of the negotiations. The musicians are seeking a two-year contract, while Disney World wants a three-year contract, he said. He declined to give any specifics on what pay level was being sought, saying

New Lockheed Contract OK'd

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — A new contract has been approved by some 35,000 Lockheed Corp. aerospace workers — the last major settlement in the labor disputes that have plagued the industry.

Lockheed members of the International Association of Machinists voted on Sunday 74 percent in favor of the three-year agreement. The settlement will raise wages by 13 percent plus grant cost-of-living hikes beyond that. Under the old contract, workers were earning an average $9.90 an hour.

Workers at Seattle-based Boeing Co. settled earlier this month on the same terms, setting the trend for the industry. The United Auto Workers at McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Co. in Long Beach ratified a similar pact on Thursday.

Lockheed has facilities in Burbank, Palmdale and Sunnyvale, Calif., and in Marietta, Ga. It produces the L1011 jumbo jet, a Navy anti-submarine patrol plane and missile and space components.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson is the favorite among students at five Ivy League schools, and nearly half of those surveyed believe they are smarter than both major party candidates.

Of the 2,500 students surveyed at Harvard, Brown, Cornell, Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania, 41 percent said they would vote for Anderson, 29.3 percent for President Carter and 14.8 percent for Republican candidate Ronald Reagan.

The survey, taken during the week of Oct. 6, also showed that 45 percent believe they are more intelligent than Carter or Reagan; 1.4 percent think Anderson will win, and 57 percent believe Anderson benefitted most from last month's League of Women Voters-sponsored debate with Reagan.

Students at the Ivy League schools of Yale, Columbia and Dartmouth did not participate.

Wins Her Suit Against Santa

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — A woman has won an out-of-court settlement in a slander suit against Santa Claus, attorneys say.

Carol Roberts, 42, filed the suit against the Priebe Department Store here and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Krueger, who played Santa Claus and Christmas Carole. Mrs. Roberts contended she was humiliated three years ago when Krueger accused her of stealing $40 from his North Pole photographic concession at the store. The money was found later behind a cash drawer.

The settlement was reached Saturday, moments before a jury was to decide on a verdict. The amount of the settlement was not disclosed, but it was more than $4,500 — the amount offered by an impartial mediation panel, said William Ross, Mrs. Roberts' attorney.

Musical Event

ECU News Bureau
 Twenty-four advanced student musicians from North Carolina and Virginia high schools participated in the Eastern Carolina University School of Music's "High School Day."

Designed to help orient junior and senior students considering careers in music, "High School Day" featured a recital presented by ECU faculty and student musicians, masterclasses or private lessons in their respective instruments, a discussion of music degree programs and an illustrated lecture about the ECU campus.

Student participants came from schools in Jacksonville, Grifton, Ayden, Wade, Fayetteville, Stedman and Fairmont, as well as Chesapeake and Virginia Beach, Va.

Arrangements for the annual event were coordinated by a faculty committee headed by Beatrice Chauncey of the School of Music instrumental faculty.

Student participants from Pitt County were: Betsy Costello (tenor saxophone, flute and oboe) of Ayden Route 2; Alex Warren, trumpet (Forest Acres) and Russell Rhodes, percussion (Meadow Green) of Grifton.

Seized 20 Tons Of Marijuana

STONINGTON, Maine (AP) — Federal and state drug agents swarmed onto this island town early this morning and seized an estimated 20 tons of marijuana in what authorities said was the biggest drug bust ever made in Maine, authorities reported.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard was preparing to board the Jubilee, a large boat registered in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and suspected of hauling the marijuana, according to Coast Guard officials.

By 8:30 a.m., more than seven hours after authorities closed in, 10 men and two women were being held in Penobscot County Jail in Bangor, about 45 miles from Stonington, state police Sgt. Peter McCarthy said.

Authorities were searching for up to 10 other people believed to be hiding in the woods, McCarthy said. Eight vehicles, including pickup trucks, station wagons and one freight trailer, were seized in the operation in the Oceanville section of Stonington, McCarthy said.

Officials were trying to find temporary housing for two young children whose parents were among those arrested.

Cmdr. Donald Jenkins, at the Coast Guard station in Southwest Harbor, said a Coast Guard boat was posted about 500 yards from the Jubilee, waiting for an 82-foot patrol boat to arrive so authorities could board the vessel.

Six people were believed to be aboard the Jubilee, which was described as between 70 and 80 feet long. It was not known whether any contraband was still aboard, Jenkins said.

The Jubilee fled when the raid began, ignoring a warning shot from a Coast Guard shotgun and throwing "some material" into the water, Jenkins said.

This morning's raid culminated a three-month investigation by the Maine State Police and the Division of Special Investigations, according to state police spokesman Richard Moore.

Agents from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, the Customs Service, and other state and local law enforcement agencies took part in the raid, which Moore said began shortly after 1 a.m.

Maine's jagged, 3,500-mile coastline has long been considered prime territory for smugglers. Authorities acknowledge that they are only able to stop a fraction of the drug traffic.

Harris Doubtful For Game With Raiders

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers may be forced to battle the Oakland Raiders tonight without a key offensive weapon, running back Franco Harris.

Harris, who strained ligaments in his left knee in last week's loss to Cincinnati, was listed as "doubtful" for the nationally televised game.

If Harris is sidelined, he'll be replaced in the starting lineup by Rocky Bleier or Russell Davis. Harris is just 63 yards shy of becoming the third player in National Football League history to rush for 9,000 yards.

The Pittsburgh-Oakland rivalry, considered one of the most intense in professional football, dates to 1970. The Raiders hold a 6-5 edge in season and post-season play, but the Steelers have won three of the five games played at home.

Are the Raiders the arch enemy of the Steelers, or just another football team?

"Nothing special," says Steeler Coach Chuck Noll. "All we're concerned with is playing one game," he said. "They all count one."

Not so long ago, the Steelers ended the decade with four Super Bowl trophies. Oakland with one, and players on both teams with a handful of vivid memories.

Not Noll, who says he's forgotten the biggest rivalry of the 1970s, when Pittsburgh won three of five consecutive

Phils Rally Again, Within 1 Of Title

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — It now comes down to Steve Carlton and the rest of the Philadelphia Phillies' "Comeback Gang."

And for that, the Phils can be thankful to a small man with a big bat.

Del Unser, a castoff two years ago when the Phillies latched onto him, performed nobly once again Sunday, sending Philadelphia home with a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven game World Series.

The sixth game of the Series will be played Tuesday night with a seventh game, if necessary, Wednesday night. The Phillies will start the left-hander Carlton, baseball's premier pitcher, Tuesday night against Kansas City Royals right-hander Rich Gale.

Carlton may or may not share the spotlight when he has a chance to wrap up the Phillies' first World Series title, but on Sunday, the light of victory shone directly on Unser.

Unser stroked a pinch double, his third hit in six at-bats during the Series, to tie the game at 3-3 in the ninth inning, then scored the winning run for a 4-3 victory that backed the Royals into a deep, dark corner.

"Having to go into Philly and win two, the odds are against you," Unser said. "It's a good feeling going one game up and having Lefty pitching the next game and Rufus (Dick Ruthven) if he's needed, but we'll stick with our one-game-at-a-time philosophy."

The Phillies, who have trailed at one time or another in all five Series games, came into the ninth down 3-2. They faced Kansas City's ace reliever, Dan Quisenberry.

Mike Schmidt, who hit a two-run homer in the fourth, led off with an infield single on a drive that Royals third baseman George Brett dove to his left and knocked down. Phils Manager Dallas Green then sent Unser in to pinch hit for Lonnie Smith. That got a lefty hitter against a righty pitcher, but moreover, it brought to bat a man who repeatedly has rallied the Phillies to victory this year.

Unser became a Phillie in 1978 when he was released outright by the Montreal Expos. Seven teams drafted him, but none made an offer. Philadelphia decided it could use a 33-year-old journeyman outfielder and acquired him in the re-entry draft.

Unser has more than proven his worth. He stroked a pinch single that keyed a five-run rally in the eighth inning and tied Game 5 of the National League playoffs with Houston. In the next inning, he doubled and scored the run that got Philadelphia here.

Unser's pinch double in the eighth inning of the second game of the World Series started a winning, four-run rally and caused Schmidt to comment: "He's unreal."

When Quisenberry got his sinker just a hair too high on a sunny but cool Sunday afternoon, Unser lashed it toward Royals first baseman Willie Aikens. The ball took a wicked hop and bounced over Aikens' glove, scoring Schmidt all the way from first as Unser motored into second.

Moreland sacrificed Unser to third. After Garry Maddox grounded out, Manny Trillo lashed a line drive that caromed off Quisenberry's glove and bounced toward third for an infield single that scored Unser.

"I've been lucky in this Series," Unser said. "The ball bounced over Aikens' glove by two of three inches, maybe. He

Eagles Alone Atop NFC East

off despite the rush of Atlanta Falcon linebacker Al Richardson Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia Eagles were just going for a field goal, hoping to break a 10-10 tie, when quarterback Ron Jaworski noticed something.

"Ron saw their double coverage on Harold Carmichael and realized he had enough time to see (Charles) Smith coming over," Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil said.

Instead of a possible field goal attempt, Jaworski connected with Smith for a 15-yard touchdown and a 17-10 National Football League victory over the Dallas Cowboys Sunday.

The victory gave the Eagles a one-game lead in the National Conference's Eastern Division with a 6-1 record. Dallas dropped to 5-2.

"Not too many people can stick it in between people like Ron did on that play," Vermeil said. "He showed tremendous poise."

Smith, who scored with 4:27 remaining in the game, called it "the biggest play I've ever made."

"I didn't see the defensive back on the play," said Smith. "I just knew where I was supposed to be. I saw Ron looking at me and he really drilled it."

The winning score came three plays after middle guard Charlie Johnson intercepted a pass by Dallas quarterback Danny White. The ball was tipped by linebacker John Bunting and Johnson made a diving catch.

"I saw their backs coming out," Johnson said. "And I knew White was under pressure to get rid of it. I was just in the right spot when J.B. (Bunting) got a piece of it and tipped it to me."

In other games Sunday, Miami upset Buffalo 17-14, Cleveland edged Green Bay 26-21, Cincinnati blanked Minnesota 14-0, Washington stopped St. Louis 23-0, Seattle downed the New York Jets 27-17, Atlanta clobbered New Orleans 41-14, Chicago toppled Detroit 24-7, Kansas City defeated Denver 23-17, New England tripped Baltimore 37-21, Los Angeles beat San Francisco 31-17, San Diego crushed the New York Giants 44-7 and Houston downed Tampa Bay 20-14.

Tonight, Oakland will be at Pittsburgh in a nationally televised game.

Jaworski, who completed 13 of 25 passes for 214 yards, gave the Eagles their other touchdown in Philadelphia's 10-point second quarter when he hit Carmichael on a 5-yard pass, Philadelphia's other points came on Tony Franklin's 35-yard field goal.

The Cowboys' only touchdown was scored by the defense when Jaworski, sacked in the first period by defensive tackle Randy White, fumbled the ball at his 10-yard line. It rolled into the end zone and linebacker Mike Hegman pounced on it for the score. Rafael Septien kicked a 33-yard field goal for Dallas in the second period.

Oilers 20, Bucs 14 Running back Earl Campbell rushed for a career-high 203 yards on 33 carries, quarterback Ken Stabler hit Mike Barber with a 17-yard touchdown pass and Rob Carpenter ran 10 yards for another score as Houston stopped Tampa Bay.

The victory ended a two-game losing streak for Houston, 4-3. Tampa Bay is 2-4.

Stabler completed his first nine passes of the game and hit 10 of 12 tosses as the Oilers scored points on three of their four first-half possessions.

Dolphins 17, Bills 14 Buffalo rookie running back Joe Cribbs fumbled three times, setting up all of Miami's scoring as the Dolphins snapped a two-game losing streak.

Cale Closes On Dale In NASCAR Points Race

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — If Dale Earnhardt glances over his shoulder, he'll find Cale Yarborough getting uncomfortably close.

Yarborough, who is looking for his fourth NASCAR Grand National championship in five years, moved within waving distance of current point leader Earnhardt Sunday by winning the American 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Meanwhile, the 29-year-old Earnhardt, the season-long point leader in only his second full year on the circuit, finished 18th after nearly wiping out his car entirely.

The youngster, who was going after his third straight victory, was running with the leaders on the 119th of 492 laps when he suddenly spun in some oil and slammed into the wall on the treacherous turn two banking.

Later, he clouted the wall again after breaking a tie rod, but Earnhardt managed to keep the car going to the end.

"I guess the old race car took quite a beating today," Earnhardt said. "But we've got two races left this season, and that means I've got two more chances to win. We just take 'em one at a time and race to win."

Yarborough, who went on to lead five times for a total of 167 laps, outdueled Harry Gant to the wire, wheeling his white and black Chevrolet across the finish line 3.6 seconds ahead of the second-place car, the only other competitor on the same lap.

The victory cut Yarborough's point deficit from 115 points to 44 with races at Atlanta and Ontario, Calif., the only events left on the 1980 schedule.

"We had a little problem adjusting the tire pressure on the left side tires early in the race, but after that things went pretty smooth," said Yarborough, a 40-year-old veteran from Timmonsville, S.C.

"I felt all along if Dale had a little bit of the bad luck I've had all year, and I got some of his good luck, this thing would go right down to Ontario. I think that's what's going to happen now."

Yarborough, who has seen his greatest success driving for former stock car great Junior Johnson, announced several weeks ago that he is jumping from Johnson's team to M.C. Anderson's at the end of this season in order to drive a limited schedule and have more time for his family.

"If I could win this championship, it would be the best one of all because I'd be leaving Junior a champion. That would be wonderful," Yarborough enthused.

Hrabosky—Intimidation His Game

Woody Peele

East Carolina University's victory over Western Carolina was a fairly easy one that maybe could have been a little easier. The Pirates had only two breakdowns that led to the Western Carolina scores.

First, they had a breakdown that allowed Anthony James to streak 89 yards for the first touchdown. Then, the other came when Willie Holley fumbled a punt and set up a short drive for the other score.

The Pirates, who scored 24 points, probably should have had at least six more. Anthony Collins clearly scored a touchdown that was negated by an official's blunder.

With the ball on the Pirate 38, quarterback Carlton Nelson faked a handoff to fullback Theo Sutton, gave the ball instead to Collins, who then followed Sutton's block into the line. Collins was quickly through the hole and into the clear before the official managed to blow his whistle, thinking that Sutton had received the ball. More than likely, had the whistle not been blown, Collins would have scored anyway.

However, the rules say that when the whistle is blown, whether correctly or inadvertently, the play is over. Only recently has a rule change been made that keeps it from becoming a gross penalty against the offense.

Under the old rule, when the whistle blew early, the ball was then spotted at the point where the official thought the play ended, and the down was changed. That clearly is unfair to the offense, since it lost the extra yardage gained, plus the down.

Now the rule states that the officials shall return the ball to the line of scrimmage and replay the down. While the offense does lose the yardage, and in this instance, the touchdown, the defense can just as easily argue — rightly — that it relaxed when it heard the whistle, and that was one reason for the play gaining so much.

Under the circumstances, it is the fairest rule. In this case, however, we do not believe that any relaxation by the defense would have made a difference. Fortunately, the lost touchdown didn't come back to haunt that official.

While the Pirates put together one of their best games of the season against Western Carolina, they'll be facing a horse of an entirely different color next weekend, and a much greater effort will be needed.

How good are the Tar Heels? Perhaps in two weeks, when they play Oklahoma, we will know. But for now, East Carolina can be sure that they are one of the best, if not the best team the Bucs have faced this year.

And in company with Florida State and Southern Mississippi, that's saying a lot.

While we are on the subject of rules, we'd like to address this to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

The "encroachment" rule has long been a pet peeve of ours, and it has gotten to be more so of late.

This is one of the worst rules that has ever been put on the books for high school football. Coaches hate it, players hate it, fans hate it and the media hate it. Apparently the only ones who like it are the administrators who sit and watch on the sidelines.

We would hope that North Carolina could become a leader in a movement to rid the National Federation rules of this white elephant.

The rule, when put in, was supposed to protect a lineman from injury after he had reacted too early, then had to take a hard hit from a charging opponent who was then "drawn" off sides by the first movement.

However, good intentions aside, it has been turned only into a cheap weapon for the offense. It's an extra play to get out of tight situations or short fourth-down yardage plays.

High school teams, time after time, will go on simple snap counts, then alter it when they need a few easy yards. Despite the fact that no contact is made — and no harm done — the defense is penalized.

The rule takes away from the defense, and give the offense too much of a good thing.

It is a rule that has lost its intent, and should be repealed at the earliest possible moment.

Bruin Girls Win X-C, Rose Fourth

WILSON — Beddingfield won the Division I girls' cross-country meet here Friday while Greenville Rose finished a distant fourth.

The Bruins came in with 50 points to outdistance second-place Rocky Mount, which ended up with 60 points. Northern Nash was third with 74 points and Rose followed with 97 points. Wilson Fike was next with 99 points and Northeastern was last with 101 points.

Susie Dresser and Sussie Ess of Rocky Mount finished one-two in the race, with times of 19:24 and 20:25. Fike's Caren England was third at 20:57, followed by Beddingfield's Charlene Richardson at 21:14 and Yanlanda Weatherspoon at 21:17.

Rose's top finisher was Heather O'Neal, who finished 13th with a time of 22:28. Other Rose results: (16) Linda Winstead, 23:07, (17) Bobbie Hollaway, 23:15, (22) Tammy Mayo, 23:55, (29) Kathy Queen, 26:16, (34) Maria Howard, 28:09, and (35) Faith Lee, 28:23.

By JOHN STALLINGS
Special To The Reflector

If it weren't for his famed angry man routine, Al Hrabosky might have been a pretty obscure minor league pitcher.

"At the all-star break in 1974, I had a 1-1 record and a 7.0 earned run average. I was headed for the minor leagues," the "Mad Hungarian" admitted. Hrabosky had spent three undistinguished years in the St. Louis farm system before being promoted to the big leagues in 1974. He knew that if he didn't come up with something quickly, he'd be back in the minors.

"I needed something to key my concentration. I was letting my mind wander in the middle of games.

"They key to the walk off the back of the mound is getting my concentration. I step back off the back of the mound and visualize the batter, imagine him swinging. I think about my pitch. I can really see the whole thing," Hrabosky says without a hint of humor.

"When I step on the rubber, I try to intimidate the batter."

Hrabosky has been intimidating batters for seven years now, and has a nice free agent package with his new club, the Atlanta Braves. After four seasons with St. Louis, Hrabosky was traded to Kansas City in 1978. He became famous via his spectacular strikeout of New York's Reggie Jackson in a 1978 American League playoff game. He parlayed free agent status into a million-dollar pact with Atlanta last summer.

Intimidation is the name of the "Mad Hungarian's" game, and he learned the game well during his childhood. Born in Hungary, he spent two of his first four years in a Czechoslovakian detention camp. In the war that kept Hungary from gaining freedom, Hrabosky's relatives were on the losing side.

"It was like the detention camps that the U.S. had for Japanese during World War II, except a little rougher," Hrabosky said while visiting the East Carolina baseball practice Thursday. The pitcher was in the area for the dedication of a library in Washington.

His family finally was granted a visa and left for California. The culture shock was swift in coming.

"The first time somebody tossed me a baseball, I looked for the pin to pull before I threw it," he chuckled. "The only thing I'd seen thrown were grenades."

His baseball future seemed doomed, as he was cut from Little League's at 8, 9 and 10. Later he failed to make his junior high team, and finally turned to football in the ninth grade.

But he returned to baseball because of the lack of demand for 175-pound linebackers — and he wanted to prove to himself that he could play baseball.

He pitched well enough his junior and senior years to draw a scholarship from Fullerton Junior College. Instead he opted for a pro contract with St. Louis.

The rest is history as Hrabosky became one of the better know, if not one of the better, relief pitchers in the majors.

He wasn't happy with his year at Atlanta, however, watching most of the late season from the bench. "I feel a need to pitch three or four times a week to be effective," he said. But his 4-2 record, with three saves and a 3.60 earned run average, found little favor with manager Bobby Cox.

He does see a bright future for the Braves. "I think they are a year ahead of where I thought they would be right now. We obviously need some starting pitchers, and we count too much on the long ball. We don't run much and just wait for the home run. We don't have a solid RBI man in the lineup, either."

Hrabosky believes that a good catcher will help the Braves too.

"Darrell Porter is a free agent now and I'd love to be pitching to him," Hrabosky said with a smile.

Lakers Bomb Warriors

Jabbar Returns, Makes 10,000th FG

By The Associated Press
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar knows how to make an entrance.

Wearing goggles to protect the eye he injured in an Oct. 12 game against Houston, Abdul-Jabbar returned in style Sunday night — leading the unbeaten Los Angeles Kings to a 125-107 win over the Golden State Warriors, and making the 10,000th field goal of his 12-year National Basketball Association career.

"It looked like we had the game put away with a little while to play and he wanted to go back in," said LA Coach Paul Westhead. "He's more concerned with his rhythm than getting his 10,000th field goal."

"It's good to see him back in the sky again."

Abdul-Jabbar made the record field goal with 5:27 remaining in the third period, becoming only the third player in NBA history to accomplish that feat. Wilt Chamberlain and John Havlicek.

He scored 18 of his 29 points in the first half, made 12 of his 15 field goal attempts and grabbed nine rebounds for the defending NBA champions.

"They're a good team, better than the score indicates," Abdul-Jabbar said of the Warriors. "But we got them down and they couldn't reorganize."

Forward Truck Robinson scored 29 points and pulled down 10 rebounds as the Suns won their first NBA game ever in San Diego.

Dennis Johnson and Walter Davis added 20 and 16 points respectively for the Suns, who have won four of their five games this season. The Clippers have lost three straight outings after winning their opener.

"We're struggling and we're really not that confident in ourselves," said Clippers guard Brian Taylor.

The Milwaukee Bucks, with Brian Winters' 22 points leading balanced scoring, pulled away late in the third quarter en route to their win over New Jersey.

Cliff Robinson and Darwin Cook each scored 19 points to lead the Nets. Mickey Johnson sank a dunkshot after a steal, then nailed a hook and a long jumper as the Bucks outscored New Jersey 14-2 for an 18-4 lead.

Eagles Win...

Coach Chuck Knox, who saw his Buffalo team drop out of the American Conference East lead. "It's just one of those things."

Cribbs, the AFC's leading rusher, was held to 41 yards on 14 carries and his fumbles set up both Miami touchdowns and a 23-yard field goal by Uwe von Schamann.

Rookie quarterback David Woodley of Miami completed 11 of 17 passes for 93 yards in only his second pro start, including a 3-yard TD strike.

Bengals 14, Vikings 0

Ken Anderson passed for 270 yards and one touchdown, and fullback Pete Johnson rushed for 115 yards and another score as Cincinnati crushed Minnesota. It was the first time the Vikings had been shut out in seven years and only the second time a Minnesota team coached by Bud Grant had been shut out. The Bengals blanked the Vikings 27-0 in 1973.

Anderson, who connected on 21 of 28 passes, hit wide receiver Don Bass with a 55-yard scoring pass in the third quarter to ice the victory for Cincinnati, 34.

Bears 24, Lions 7

In his first start of the season, quarterback Vince Evans hurled a 64-yard touchdown pass to James Scott and scored once himself, leading Chicago over the first-place Detroit Lions.

Evans, who threw only eight passes, completing five, also set up Chicago's other touchdown with a 59-yard toss to Scott while the Bears' defense throttled Detroit, which came into the game leading the NFL in offense.

Detroit rookie sensation Billy Sims, who came into the game leading the league in rushing with 651 yards, was held to 53 yards in 14 carries. Chicago's Walter Payton, No. 2 in rushing with 582 yards, carried 27 times for 101 yards.

Patriots 37, Colts 21

Horace Ivory raced 98 yards with a kickoff to give New England the lead for good as the Patriots defeated Baltimore for their fifth consecutive victory and took over sole possession of first place in the AFC East.

Ivory's electrifying dash at 7:18 of the third quarter came after an 8-yard TD pass from quarterback Bert Jones to Reese McCall had given Baltimore a 21-17 lead.

Rams 31, 49ers 17

Four touchdown passes by Vince Ferragamo powered Los Angeles to its victory over San Francisco. The Rams, posting their fifth straight victory, improved their season record to 5-2 while the 49ers, 3-4, lost their fourth straight.

The 49ers, who haven't beaten the Rams in San Francisco since 1966, got two short touchdown passes from Joe Montana in the final quarter.

Chargers 44, Giants 7

Quarterback Dan Fouts passed for a club-record 444 yards as San Diego crushed the

New York Giants to snap a two-game losing streak.

Fouts, who last year broke Joe Namath's all-time single-season passing record with 4,082 yards, completed 26 of 41 passes before leaving the one-sided game midway through the final period. The performance bettered Fouts' previous club record of 388 yards set last week in a 38-24 loss to the Oakland Raiders.

The victory raised the Chargers' record to 5-2 and kept them atop the AFC West standings. The hapless Giants suffered their sixth straight setback in dropping to 1-6.

Chiefs 23, Broncos 17

Two touchdown passes by second-year quarterback Steve Fuller, including a go-ahead 46-yarder to wide receiver Henry Marshall late in the third quarter, led Kansas City past Denver.

The deciding score came on the last play of the third period when Fuller scrambled out of the pocket to escape Denver's pass rush and found Marshall wide open near the goal line.

Falcons 41, Saints 14

Capitalizing on two third-quarter interceptions and a pair of short punts, Steve Bartkowski and Lynn Cain led a four-touchdown second-half explosion that gave Atlanta its victory over New Orleans, the NFL's only winless team.

The interceptions, both by linebacker Joel Williams, came on consecutive passes by Saints quarterback Archie Manning.

Atlanta is now 4-3 while the Saints are 0-7. The Saints' dismal record ties the team's record for most futile beginning to an NFL season, a mark set in 1967, the first year for the franchise.

Seahawks 27, Jets 17

A blocked punt by Sam McCullum in the third quarter accounted for Seattle's first touchdown and Jim Jodat added two short scoring runs in the final period as Seattle toppled the New York Jets.

The Seahawks have now won all four of their road games this season, while losing all three home starts. The Jets are now 1-6.

Redskins 23, Cardinals 0
Joe Theismann passed for two touchdowns and Clarence Harmon rushed for another TD to give Washington its victory over St. Louis.

Theismann's 4-yard scoring toss to Harmon with only 2:32 gone in the first quarter was the first TD the Redskins have scored at home in three games this year.

Browns 26, Packers 21

Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe connected with wide receiver Dave Logan on a 46-yard touchdown pass with 16 seconds to play, sparking the Browns over Green Bay. Sipe, who hit on 24 of 39 passes for 391 yards and two touchdowns, led an 87-yard drive in the final two minutes for the winning TD.

Green Bay had come back from a 13-0 deficit to take a 21-13 lead.

'Real' Maverick Could Combine 'Rockford' Cast

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It appears the past isn't irretrievable, after all. What's done and gone, ain't. "Maverick" is coming back.

Oh, joy unspeakable. "Maverick" is coming back to prime time series television. Please say this isn't a cruel joke, like the time my sister swore that leap year meant there were two Christmases.

No, NBC promises that this is true. "Maverick" will be on NBC's fall schedule. And it will be the real "Maverick," with the real James Garner, not the anemic, prissy imitation that ABC and CBS tried to peddle recently.

LONI ANDERSON stars as Jayne Mansfield in "The Jane Mansfield Story", a new motion picture-for-television based on the life of the actress whose meteoric career ended in tragedy. It is scheduled for broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies", October 29 (9:00-11:00 p.m., ET)

Ah, the Tall Dark Stranger will once again work cons and dodge trouble from Natchez to New Orleans, mangling the myth of the Western Man along the way. Much of that roaming will be done on trains. Bret Maverick, remember, hates horses almost as much as he hates guns and fists.

Let's see...the 1981-82 TV season ought to start on Sept. 14. That's 47 weeks from tonight. I'm actually looking forward to a new NBC series.

I'd better get a grip on myself.

OK, there is that dark possibility that the new "Maverick," with the real James Garner, won't live up to its glorious past.

Nah, this will be just as good. Better, maybe. Garner has had all these years to polish that sweet act. Worked on it for six seasons in "Rockford Files."

In fact, the suggestion that "Rockford Files" was a modern "Maverick" is no profound revelation. For "Rockford," Bret Maverick traded in vest and hat for a polyester shirt and loose sport jacket, got into the P.I. business and simply kept on being Bret Maverick — cool, but not studiously so, and never, never unduly courageous.

In that sense, the new "Maverick" will be "Rockford Files" returned to its original place in time. Meta Rosenberg, who produced "Rockford," will be back with "Maverick" (which is being made by Garner's production company in association with Warner Bros.).

Now, to make "Maverick" perfect, Garner will have to find a spot for Joe Santos (Rockford's cop buddy), for Stuart Margolin, Rockford's sleazy, yellow-hearted pal, and for Noah Beery, Rockford's innocent father.

Santos could be a sheriff or a saloonkeeper, Angel could easily carry his spineless con act to the Old West. And Beery, of course, could play Maverick's oft-mentioned, never seen Pappy. Or maybe Pappy Maverick was supposed to be dead. No matter, "Maverick" itself was supposed to be dead.

And the song, they've got to bring back the "Maverick" song: "Who is that tall, dark stranger there? Maverick is his name. Dum da dum (I've forgotten the words here), luck is his companion, gambler is his game..."

If something happens to this, if "Maverick" doesn't show up on NBC next fall, I'll have my vengeance against Fred Silverman, just as I had against my sister those many years ago. And Silverman's mommy won't be there to clean the peanut butter out of his hair.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1980 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K10762 ♦J82 ♦AK6 ♦93
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Your task is to find not only the best level, but also the best strain in which to play this hand—it could be either no trump, spades or clubs. Don't rebid such a motheaten spade suit just to show that you have five, and you can't bid no trump with out a heart stopper. We suggest a call of three diamonds. That is forcing, and partner's next action will go a long way toward answering those two questions that were posed in the first sentence.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AJ92 ♦K873 ♦763 ♦83
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is worth only one forward-going move. To make sure you don't miss a possible 4-4 fit in a major suit, we suggest you respond one heart. For opening bid purposes, your heart suit is not biddable, but when responding, the requirements for introducing a suit are much lower. In fact, as responder, it is usually sound policy to show four-card suits up the line (lower-ranking suits first) to facilitate finding a fit. In this case, your one heart response gives partner the opportunity to raise hearts with four or to bid one spade.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K1092 ♦73 ♦K985 ♦A62
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—In support of spades, your hand revalues to 12 points—just short of a jump raise of partner's suit. The only way you can describe your hand accurately is to make a temporizing bid of two diamonds, followed by a spade raise at your next turn.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦1076 ♦743 ♦AJ954 ♦K6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You are worth some action, but don't go overboard and bid three diamonds. That would be virtually forcing to game, and you do not have anything near enough for that move. The only bid that you can make which is unlikely to get your side into trouble is a raise to two spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦93 ♦J6 ♦AK854 ♦9762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ?
What action do you take?
A.—East has frozen you out of the auction for the moment. You cannot bid three diamonds for the reasons stated in the answer to Question 4, and this time you cannot even support partner's suit. All you can do is pass and hope that partner has enough to reopen with a dou-

Films Based On Romance Books

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Paramount Pictures will make films based on the Silhouette Romances in hopes of attracting a new and heretofore unattainable movie-going audience.

The best-selling books offer readers contemporary romantic fiction set in exotic locales. The Silhouette Romances debuted in May with nine titles and six new titles have been added each month since.

Silhouette Romances are published by Simon & Schuster and Pocket Books, which, like Paramount, are subsidiaries of Gulf & Western Industries.

ble. Only then will you be able to act with any degree of safety.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K1092 ♦73 ♦K985 ♦A62
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Yes, this is the same hand as in Question 3, but the auction is different — this time you are a passed hand. Now you cannot afford delicate, temporizing bids because they are not forcing and partner might pass, stranding you in an inferior contract. We suggest a jump raise to three spades. Four spades is also a possibility, but give partner some leeway in the event that he might have opened light in third seat.

Country Music Prospering In 'Hard Times'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — In an otherwise rocky entertainment business reeling from the recession, country music isn't singing the blues, executives say.

Officers of Nashville-based record companies say the loyalty of country music fans has a lot to do with the continued success of the industry.

"You can count on them," Jim Foglesong, president of MCA-Nashville operations, said about country music lovers. "Most of them are over 25, and that gives them more solidity."

The number of country music artists starring in films and on television is also keeping the dollars moving.

"Country people just kept doing their thing, so the recession is not hurting them that much," said Joe Talbot, a partner in two Nashville record companies and past president of the Country Music Association.

But the executives say they have taken budget-tightening measures to hold down production costs.

"We have to use good, sound business principles," Rick Blackburn, vice president and general manager for CBS Records' Nashville operation, said.

Some Nashville record companies have cut back on personnel, promotion and travel costs, and agents say they are booking show dates closer to home and are making tours more compact.

Reggie Mac, assistant manager of United Talent's Nashville office, says audiences are getting more for their money during the recession. His agency's biggest acts, Loretta Lynn and Conway Twitty, now use a well-known entertainer to open their concerts instead of a lesser-known act.

Record-manufacturing companies, which stamp out 150,000 records a day in Nashville, have been hurt by increases in vinyl and other petroleum-based products and are looking for more efficient ways to make records. Officials in two companies say their efficiency has improved 30 percent in recent months.

Also, record producers have become more selective in signing talent and are reluctant to invest in unknowns.

"The costs of speculation will kill you, so some companies have to be more select on what they roll the dice with," Blackburn said.

Some companies are still paying for mistakes of over-hyping in rock and disco and over-shipping their product, executives said.

But, country music sales are up and the executives say it is because of their selling tactics as well as the nature of the record business.

"People stop spending money on things they don't need to have," Bill Denny, president of Cedarwood Publishing Co., said about unfavorable economic times.

"One of the major markets is the young buyer, who, with the increased cost of gasoline, is faced with a decision of whether to spend money on a record or to put gasoline in the car. You know what he does, he puts it in the gas tank," Denny said.

Figures from the National Association of Record Merchandisers show country accounted for 10.2 percent, rock 41.7 percent and pop 13.1 percent of the record sales in 1978. Last year, country rose to 11.9 percent, while rock fell to 37.4 percent and pop dropped to 11.3 percent.

Brown Shirts Retreated Under Egg, Rock Barrage

UNDER BARRAGE — A small group of neo-Nazis try to shield themselves from a barrage of rocks, eggs, tomatoes and other missiles thrown by part of a crowd of several thousand who turned up to protest a rally held by the Nazis Sunday in an Evanston park. (AP Laserphoto)

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — It was supposed to be an hour-long demonstration of Nazi party strength and white supremacy. But it was over in five minutes for 11 brown shirts who were pelted by rocks and eggs by thousands of counter-demonstrators and decided to beat a hasty retreat under police protection.

Six arrests were reported on charges varying from disorderly conduct to aggravated battery.

Evanston Police Officer James Boone was struck on the leg by a brick and released after hospital treatment. He was the only person reported injured.

The Lovelace Park confrontation Sunday came after a two-mile march by 2,000 people who attended an anti-Nazi rally at Northwestern University.

The largely Jewish crowd there gave independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson, an Illinois congressman, a warm greeting as he called for an end to "the blot of anti-Semitism in America."

"We ignore, at the peril of all we hold dear, the resurgence of anti-Semitism in America," Anderson said. "An attack on the Jewish people is by implication an attack on us all. If we do not draw the line here and now, we can't draw it anywhere."

Several people at the rally wept as they sang Hebrew songs proclaiming "Israel lives" and "Let My People Go." Many of the speakers, who stood above signs admonishing spectators to "Remember Auschwitz" and other Nazi-run concentration camps, paid homage to those who died in the Holocaust and warned of a recent upsurge in anti-Semitic activity around the world.

"(We are) Jews who will never forget what Nazism did to us," said Sol Goldstein, chairman of the Public Action Committee on Individual Liberty and Jewish Security. "Not in Jerusalem, not in Paris, and not in Evanston." The crowd cheered.

At Lovelace Park, the mood was ugly as counter-demonstrators gathered to shout at the members of the National Socialist Party of America and hang a brown-shirted effigy from a tree. "Hoodlums! Hoodlums!" one man shouted at the Nazis while other men threw rocks, eggs and tomatoes and shouted "Death to the Nazis."

The 11 Nazis were backed to a park restroom wall by the barrage and were forced to duck continuously behind Jewish calendar.

Lovelace Park is about a half-mile from the suburb of Skokie, home of a large Jewish population and a number of concentration camp survivors. In 1978, the Nazis wanted to march there, but the City Council repeatedly denied permits after passing three ordinances designed to bar the Nazis from marching.

State and federal courts overturned the ordinances and in 1978 the U.S. Supreme Court said the National Socialist Party of America could demonstrate in Skokie. However, then-party leader Frank Collin decided to hold the rally in Chicago.

Defeat Foe In 'Computer War'

FORT IRWIN, Calif. (AP) — Reserve troops from four states repulsed a "Warsaw Pact" army on the California desert in what was believed to be the largest computerized war game ever played, officials said Sunday. More than 1,200 soldiers and officers took part in the Computer Assisted Map Maneuver Simulation held Saturday and Sunday at this installation 150 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

There was no marching, crawling in trenches or bombing of enemy positions. The entire attack existed only as messages of troop movements relayed from 30 outposts to a central computer. The computer was used to sift and analyze information, just as it would be in a genuine battle, said Maj. Arthur Evans of the 40th Infantry Division of the California Army National Guard.

At headquarters, the battle was played out on a 30-foot by 10-foot horizontal board representing West Germany, Evans said.

It was like a "mind-boggling chess match," he said.

Personnel around the board took the parts of forward observers, scouting parties and artillery spotters and recorded aerial and satellite information.

As the battle progressed, the computer kept score of losses and gains.

"Finally, the aggressor momentum was checked and this particular battle ended," Evans said.

The "Warsaw Pact" forces, wearing uniforms of eastern European nations, were played by the 75th Maneuver Area Command of the U.S. Army Reserve from Houston, Texas.

In addition to the California Army National Guard, reserve units from Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico participated.

Evans said the idea was to train officers in the National Guard for "roles they may be called on to perform."

He said if the game had been a conventional field exercise, it would have taken many weeks and involved some 20,000 reservists and officers.

"But this kind of training — with a play board, maps, symbols and a computer — allowed our guard leaders to participate in the time and with the resources available," he said.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Investigate Cause of Chest Pain

I'm going out for the basketball team. After a stiff workout I feel a pain in my chest. I'm 17 years old. I know if I tell this to my parents they'll stop me from playing. I'm a little scared, but I don't know what to do about it. — Gary B., R.I.

Dear Gary: It's hardly likely that the pain you're having has any serious connotation. At your age, it does not seem possible that your heart or lungs might be responsible.

Sometimes, especially when one is not in prime condition, the muscles of the chest wall may be the cause of temporary pain in the chest after a strenuous workout.

Nevertheless, you should be thoroughly examined by your doctor to make certain that no injury or serious condition exists.

Sports are great fun, but health is far more important. You can be sure that your basketball coach is much more interested in your health than he is in winning a game.

All pain and injuries should be reported to parents and to coaches immediately. Only in this way can sports enthusiasts avoid converting an uncomplicated problem into a difficult one.

Gary, don't be a "hero." Do the sensible thing. Speak to your parents, your coach and your doctor.

My doctor thinks I may have a stomach ulcer. I am being treated for it, but he thinks I may have to have a special tube put down my stomach if I have more attacks. I'm frightened about this. Is this necessary? Does it mean that I may have a growth? — Mrs. H.T., La.

Dear Mrs. T.:

The new drugs, especially cimetidine, have revolutionized the treatment of stomach and duodenal ulcers. Restrictive diets are not emphasized as much as they formerly were. It is very likely that with the new drug treatment your ulcer will be controlled.

The tube your doctor referred to need not call forth so much anxiety. It is known as the "gastroscope." It is a brilliantly-conceived device which is painlessly passed into the stomach. By means of this, every part of the lining of the stomach can be seen. Pictures can be taken of the stomach. These, when later studied, can contribute greatly to the diagnosis of any existing disease.

When necessary, small pieces of tissue can be removed (biopsy) for microscopic examination. The contents of the stomach can also be withdrawn and studied.

Many people owe their lives to the early recognition of conditions of the stomach that might have been missed without the use of the gastroscope.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

J.P. Stevens And Union End A 17-Year Conflict

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — J.P. Stevens Co. and organized labor Sunday ended their 17-year feud over unionizing workers in Stevens' Roanoke Rapids plants when union members unanimously approved a new contract — the first union contract ever for Stevens.

About 750 of some 2,000 union members at seven Stevens plants in Roanoke Rapids voted on the 2½-year contract. The contract formally was signed by union and company officials at 6 p.m. Sunday.

At the same time, top company officials and the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union announced the pact in the New York.

Stevens and the union reached agreement on the contract late Friday, setting the stage for Sunday's vote.

The vote came more than six years after the union won the right to represent Stevens workers in North Carolina. The union had been unable to obtain a contract from the company, which had become a symbol of industry's effort to keep unions out of the South.

The contract will give 3,000 Stevens workers in Roanoke Rapids about $3 million in back pay, with each worker getting about $1,300. Stevens said the money will be paid within the next 30 days.

The back pay will include two retroactive pay hikes that Stevens granted during the past two years to workers at its 70 non-union plants, but not to those in Roanoke Rapids. They include an 8.5 percent pay raise retroactive to July 1979 and a raise of about 10 percent that became effective in July of this year.

It would be the first pay increase since July 1978 for Stevens workers in Roanoke Rapids, who earn an average of $4.36 an hour. Union officials said Sunday that, under the new contract, workers will earn more than $5 an hour.

The contract also provides an improved benefit package, including retirement benefits, and a union dues checkoff clause.

The contract guarantees that any other benefits which the company initiates at other plants will be offered simultaneously at all union plants.

In announcing the contract, union vice president Scott M. Hoyman praised Roanoke Rapids workers on their "spirit and solidarity."

"I want to congratulate Stevens workers who gave so much of their time and effort over the years for the success they have earned," Hoyman said. "We are proud that the Stevens workers have stood by their union principles. We are confident that a better era is at hand for the textile workers of this country."

After the vote Sunday at Roanoke Rapids High School, cheering Stevens workers wearing buttons proclaiming "I'm proud to be union" called the contract "a victory for the union."

"I think it's great," said Dale Jenkins, 27, a Stevens employee for six years. "Things are going to be a lot better now. I think the contract is a fair one."

State AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby agreed, calling the pact "a very good agreement."

"I'm especially pleased for the workers who have retired because this will mean increased pension benefits for them," Hobby said. "This is a definitely good contract."

Hobby was present during the vote Sunday.

However, Clyde Bush, a union international representative who has been involved in union organizing efforts in Roanoke Rapids for five years, expressed doubt that the contract would bring any immediate change to Stevens plants.

"It's a victory for Roanoke Rapids and a victory for the South. That's for sure," Bush said. "But we've had war with this company for 17 years. I'm not expecting it to roll over and die tomorrow. I expect to still have problems with this company."

Sunday's settlement apparently brings to a close one of the most celebrated labor disputes in American history.

Under the agreement, the union will drop its four-year national boycott of Stevens products in exchange for the Roanoke Rapids contract. The union also will end its anti-Stevens publicity campaign.

In return the company will use the Roanoke Rapids contract as a pattern for agreements at three other small Southern plants recently organized by the union at High Point, Allendale, S.C., and Montgomery, Ala.

The company is reserving its right to contest union efforts to organize in other plants. However, Stevens officials are bound by the new contract to fight union campaigns through strictly legal means.

Since the organizing drive began in 1963, Stevens has been found guilty of unfair labor practices by the National Labor Relations Board on 22 separate occasions. Violations have included firing workers for union activities and other means of intimidation aimed at discouraging workers from voting for the union.

Stevens employs 34,000 workers at 80 plant.

N.C. Tourism For 1980 Better Than Last Year

By The Associated Press
Tourism apparently is on the upswing in North Carolina this fall. Unlike last year, tourists may be able to see other tourists as they travel.

In fact, the travel industry appears to be one of the bright spots in North Carolina's economy as the year draws to an end. Despite setbacks to the textile and furniture industries, North Carolinians — and visitors from out of state — are traveling.

Preliminary tourism reports indicate bigger crowds along the beaches gave the Outer Banks and other coastal spots heavier business than during the travel-depressed summer of 1979.

The Carteret County Chamber of Commerce reported a 30 percent hike in motel business and a 40 percent rise in out-of-state visitor traffic as tourists took the vacations they postponed last year. But lodging operators said economy still is the watchword in traveling.

"We knew money was tight across the country, but business people really didn't feel it here," said Mildred Hill, who runs the Ocean Veranda Resort Complex in Nags Head.

"The crowds were bigger than last year," she added. "But some people tended to do whatever they could to save a little money here and there. A lot more of them rented efficiency apartments, often so they could do their own cooking...but they still got to the coast."

Dawnena Darnall, director of the Cherokee Tribal and Travel Promotion office in Swain County, agreed.

"It all has to do with the fact that people still want to take vacations," she said. "They want to get away...But they cut out the things that aren't necessary."

In the mountains, 1979 was so bad that Asheville and Boone area promoters banded together to start a sophisticated advertising campaign.

Sue Wilmoth, executive director of the Boone Area Chamber of Commerce thinks the efforts are paying off.

"We're saying now we're back to 1978 in numbers of people," she said. "It's too early to say how much they're spending. When all the figures are in, we think it's going to be a very good year."

Blue Ridge Parkway officials cautiously estimate that by the end of 1980, volume could approach the 10,056,490 of 1976. Through September 1980, there have been about 7,676,480 parkway travelers. That represents a 25.9 percent increase over the same nine months of last year.

To hold on to a good share of the vacation traffic, North Carolina's Travel and Tourism Division is spending about $2 million to advertise coastal and mountain attractions mainly in cities within 200 miles of key tourist spots.

Tourism ranks as North Carolina's third largest industry, behind agriculture and textiles.

'Not Worth' The Bullet

BREEZEWOOD, Pa. (AP) — Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy says former White House counsel John Dean wasn't worth the cost of the bullet it would have taken to kill him.

"The price of a 9-mm round, due to inflation, has gone to 20 cents. He's not worth the price of blowing away," Liddy said Sunday at a news conference during a meeting of the Independent Truckers Association. Liddy spoke to the group.

Liddy gained notoriety during the Watergate scandal because he refused to divulge details of a scheme to break into the Democratic National Headquarters in Washington. The burglary and cover-up sent Liddy to jail and forced Richard Nixon to resign the presidency.

Dean, former White House counsel, made key disclosures that helped investigators unravel the cover-up.

Liddy was paroled from prison in 1977 after serving 52½ months of a 21-year term. He got off parole last week. He has said that he had considered killing columnist Jack Anderson, who published Watergate stories, and co-conspirator Howard Hunt. In his appearance in Breezewood, Liddy did not say he had considered killing Dean.

Liddy was also asked for his assessment of federal judge John Sirica, who played a key role in forcing Watergate disclosures.

"I feel sorry for anyone that stupid," Liddy said.

Seven Lives Lost In Weekend Traffic

By The Associated Press
Seven people were killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina during the weekend, raising the state's highway toll for the year to 1,172.

The Highway Patrol said 1,200 people had been killed at the same time last year.

All of the weekend deaths occurred in single-fatality accidents.

Gerald Oxendine, 19, of Route 3, Lumberton, was killed Sunday when the car in which he was riding went out of control and struck a ditch on a rural road 10 miles west of Lumberton.

Ola Smith Hudson, 84, was killed in a two-car collision on a rural road 10 miles south of Burlington Sunday morning.

Leroy Simmons, 17, of Rt. 1, Jackson Springs, was killed when the car in which he was riding overturned on N.C. 73 in Moore County 13 miles west of Carthage.

A pedestrian, Joseph Lee Blount, 42, of Route 1, Seaboard, was killed when he was struck by a car on a rural road four miles north of Seaboard in Northampton County.

Paul Dane Sherfy, 31, a motorcyclist from Merryfield City, Va., was killed near Wilson when he was struck by a car. The patrol said Sherfy's motorcycle and another car had collided at an intersection on U.S. 301. Sherfy apparently was standing near the wreckage when the second car struck him.

Randall Craig Wiles, 25, of Route 1, Hayes, was killed when his motorcycle left a rural road and struck an oil drum in Forsyth County.

Mark McCoy Drew, 22, of Wilmington was killed when his bicycle was struck from behind.
