Muskie Offers Trip To Free Hostages

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie says top administration officials, perhaps even President Carter, would be willing to travel to Iran if such a dramatic gesture would help free the American hostages. Muskie's offer came as Carter, apparently referring to the war between Iran and Iraq, said without elaborating, "I do believe the hostages will come home safely before it's over."

freedom were branded in Iran on Tuesday as American electioneering. And Carter, campaigning in Miami, cautioned that "I can't predict to you that the hostages will come back soon. I don't know yet." Muskie also said the "slow, painful approach" of quiet diplomacy is needed to end the hostages' ordeal. The 52 Americans will have been held captive in Iran for one year on Nov. 4 — Election Day. Muskie, in a radio call-in program in St. Louis, said top U.S. officials would be willing to travel to Iran if it would help resolve the issue.

Asked whether a trip by Carter would help bring the hostages home, Muskie replied: "With respect to the kind of dramatic gesture you are discussing, believe me, I suspect there are any number of people at the top level of your government who would be glad to make that kind of dramatic journey if there were any evidence it would achieve a result." Muskie also said: "If they are interested in sitting down at a table, whatever shape they prefer, we are ready to sit down, and we have prepared ourselves to discuss any of the issues which ... they might raise." But Tehran Radio appeared to rebuff Carter's Monday offer to release frozen Iranian assets, lift restrictions against shipments to Iran and to seek normal relations if the hostages were released. The Iranian government would not "give Carter the slightest signal and will not allow him to show this signal off on American television and bring them news of an imminent solution to the hostage issue," the radio report said.

According to W.C. Cobb, chairman of the Railroad Task Force, members of the chamber's transportation committee will meet with representatives of the three military bases in Norfolk, the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, N.C. Department of Transportation and state and local officials. Cobb said that the purpose of the meeting is to discuss the feasibility of an east-west route for a passenger train through North Carolina. The chamber of commerce delegation is seeking the support of the military representatives and the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce. Attending the meeting from North Carolina will be the following: Cobb, Marvin Blount, Sr., Charles Forbes, Al Haverly, Lyne Olmstead, manager of Community Development for the chamber; Nick Weaver of Senator Robert Margan's staff, Henry Oglesby, Dr. F.L. Brewster, and Larry Sams of the North Carolina Department of Transportation.

Grain Harvest In Soviet Again Poor

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today reported another dismal grain harvest in 1980 and announced a new economic plan for next year placing "top-level importance on solving the food problem." Figures announced at a meeting of the Supreme Soviet, the 1,500-member national Parliament, showed a 1980 harvest of about 181 million metric tons this year, 54 million tons below the announced goal of 235 million tons. The crop, the second poor one in succession, was 9 million tons less than the lowest U.S. prediction. The Soviet food situation has been complicated by the partial U.S. embargo on grain sales. The United States is supplying 8 million metric tons of grain to the Soviets this year under an agreement concluded before the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. President Carter suspended the shipment of an additional 17 million tons after the Afghan intervention 10 months ago. In Peking today, China signed an agreement with the United States to buy 6 million to 8 million metric tons of American grain a year for the next four years at market prices. The agreement, effective Jan. 1, gives China the option of buying a total of 9 million tons within a year without giving prior notice to the U.S. government, but Peking must consult with Washington if it wants to buy more than that. Today's announcement of a Soviet economic plan geared more toward resolving the food problem came a day after Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, at a meeting of the 250-member Communist Party Central Committee, noted a series of economic problems, including difficulties in providing meat and milk to some cities. Soviet annual per-capita meat consumption is 123 pounds, compared with 207 pounds in the United States. Brezhnev and most other top officials were present in the Kremlin meeting hall today when economic planning chief Nikolai Baibakov presented his report. But Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, 76, was not. Kosygin is reported to be seriously ill and was last seen in public Aug. 3. Baibakov did not explicitly give a figure for the 1980 grain harvest. He said production in 1976-80 was 12 percent higher than in 1971-75. On the basis of previously announced figures for 1971-79, that indicated a 1980 crop of about 181 million metric tons, only 2 million tons above last year's production. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds, or 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Philadelphia Busts Loose After World Series Win

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Relief pitcher Tug McGraw called it "the biggest thing since Moby Dick was a guppy," and baseball fans in the City of Brotherly Love agreed. Bartenders in batting helmets broke open champagne. A woman ran down the street kissing every helmeted policeman she could catch. A man ran down the street in a Phillies cap and nothing else. That was the scene Tuesday night after the Philadelphia Phillies won the 1980 World Series — the first world championship in the club's 98-year history. Residents poured out of bars and houses to dance in streets already bedecked in bunting, horns blared and firecrackers popped throughout the city after the 4-1 win over the American League champion Kansas City Royals. With a parade today, the fans were again toasting the team that brought the trophy home. Police in riot helmets stood by, the National Park Service took all "throwable flowerpots" inside, justices in nearby Ridley Township stayed in their courtrooms to ensure swift punishment of offenders and patrols were quadrupled in neighboring Upper Darby. As the night wore on, police — their numbers bolstered by the cancellation of all vacation time and days off — reported some fistfights and scuffles but few arrests. One officer estimated 4,000 fans had mustered at one intersection at the height of the celebration. While the celebration was going on, a man was shot to death in north Philadelphia as a group of 30 to 40 youths fled. But police it was not clear whether the man's death was linked to the festivities. At the McAuley Convent in nearby Bala-Cynwyd, 32 retired nuns hugged each other as McGraw worked his way out of bases-loaded jams in the last two innings to bring the best-of-seven series to an end in Game Six. "We've prayed our heads off," said Sister Joan Marie, 78.

Pitt Hospital Bd. To Allow Pathologist Contract Expire

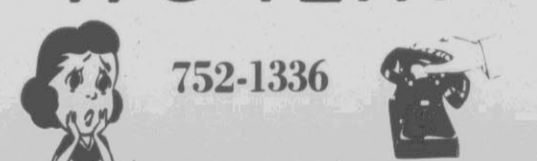

By CAROL TYLER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees voted last night to permit the contract between the hospital and Pitt Pathologists Inc. to expire by its own limitations at midnight Oct. 31 and to enter into no further contract with the pathologist group.

The resolution by the board, made following a discussion in executive session, stated that Pitt Pathologists will be given notice immediately to vacate the offices and facilities within the hospital, except those facilities needed by them to operate their outside laboratory services. These facilities, it said, shall be vacated in a time not to exceed four calendar months from Oct. 31 and Pitt Pathologists will owe $22,000 rent for each month of occupancy. Dr. Seymour Bakerman, chairman of the Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, was charged by the board with the responsibility of managing the Department of Pathology for a period not to exceed the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, 1981. Asked for background this morning, Associate Hospital Director M. E. Gilstrap said the hospital reluctantly gives up the services of Pitt Pathologists, since a contract satisfactory to both parties could not be negotiated after many, many hours of trying. The board made the Pitt Pathologists, owned by Dr. Charles Gibbert and Dr. Lee West, an offer, he indicated, a maximum it would pay for services so as to keep patient costs in line. The offer was refused. A memorandum of agreement on the reading of electrocardiograms with 12 internists and one pediatrician on the medical staff was renewed. The hospital will pay $151,309.32 for these services this fiscal year, Gilstrap reported. The generosity of the Greenville Service League was acknowledged. The League has bought for the hospital a motorized viewer at a cost of $13,406 and some dialysis equipment costing $7,730. Approval was given for the purchase of a heart rate monitor at the cost of $5,205; portable aspirator units at a total cost of $852.20; and for shelving for relocation of the business department at a cost of $4,100. The Business Department will be moved to the space rented in the Hawkins Building in mid-November. It was announced. Hospital Plant Manager Ralph Hall said the final inspection of the addition to the psychiatric unit will be done Nov. 10, and if all goes well, the unit will be moved into the week of Nov. 24-Dec. 1. There are 436 more days of work to be done on the bed towers, Hall said, according to present scheduling. The concrete floors are in place. Long-range plans for computer services continue to be studied, Director Jack Richardson, told the board, with Arthur Anderson and Company as consultants. In the future, but no time soon, the use of computerization of patient data may be needed. Such an operation might cost as much as $7 a patient-day, he indicated. Medical Chief of Staff Dr. William Bost said scheduling of bed occupancy continues to be a problem, but that it's better because of the presence of Miss Jean Owens in the admitting office. He said representatives of this hospital recently visited a trauma center in Maryland to study (Please turn to Page 14)

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

PARADE PACE SOUNDOFF

For the last 15 years I have either taken part in or watched the parades in Greenville. In all that time, the people who have led the parades have paced them much too slowly. The marching units have had to half step it (in effect, marching twice the distance) and the motor units have overheated, causing delays. For those watching the same unit for several minutes, it's very boring. A marching unit moves at approximately 120 steps per minute and its stride is either 24 or 30. I suggest that the police pick up the pace. Even as old as I am, I would be glad to walk with the patrol car. Or two motorcycle patrols could ride, one on each side of the color guard, and let the color guard set the pace. In this year's ECU Homecoming Parade, I noticed fewer bands. Their reasons may be many, but I sure wouldn't make my band, if I had one, endure such slow motion. J. A.

HYPNOSIS FEEDBACK

Robert E. Thurber, Ph. D., past president of the American Heart Association N. C. Affiliate, has written a feedback for Hotline: "To prevent a possible misinterpretation of a recent Hotline column concerning smoking cessation, I would like to bring to your readers' attention that American Heart Association policy does not permit product or service endorsement. In particular, the Association feels strongly that programs using hypnosis to reduce smoking have not received controlled evaluation and are potentially hazardous."

Three Nominated For Morehead Scholarships

Three Pitt County high school students have been nominated to compete in the annual Morehead awards program. One of the nominees, Samuel Leon Tucker, is a student at D. H. Conley High School. The other two nominees, Sarah Caldwell Hester and Michael Arden Tucker, are students at J. H. Rose High School. W. W. Speight, chairman of the Pitt County Committee of the John Motley Morehead Foundation, notes "this year the quota of nominees from Pitt County has been increased from two to three for the first time." In addition to Speight, members of the selection committee are Dr. W. S. Bost, Jr., Mrs. Bert B. Warren, and Robert Michaels, Jr. The committee selected the three on Tuesday after interviewing a field of 24 students nominated by principals and faculty at Rose,

Conley, North Pitt, Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central High Schools. Samuel Tucker of Route 1, Winterville, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Tucker, Jr. Samuel hopes to become a computer technician or an engineer. He has been class president and served on the Student Council for three consecutive years. He is also a member of the National Honor Society, the Literary. (Please turn to Page 14)

Carter-Reagan Debate Scheduled For Oct. 28

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of shouting at each other long distance, President Carter and Ronald Reagan have agreed to air their differences face to face in a no-topic-barred televised debate next Tuesday, a week before the election. With nothing less than the presidency possibly at stake, they'll aim their arguments at the millions of voters, an estimated one-fifth of all those planning to cast their ballots, who are shown by polls to remain undecided. The 90-minute debate will begin at 9:30 p.m. EST, it was announced Tuesday. It will be held in Cleveland's Convention Center and will be nationally televised. The contest will be the first time this year that Carter has taken part in a debate. He opted out of a scheduled debate with his Democratic primary rivals before the Iowa caucuses last winter, citing his need for constant attention to the hostage seizure in Iran. Reagan let other Republicans slug it out in the first debate of the political season in Iowa, then took part in all later GOP pre-convention contests. He debated independent candidate John Anderson last month in a nationally televised debate in Baltimore. To reach their agreement, negotiators for the two candidates met for more than six hours over two days. But afterward they seemed reluctant to talk about what separated them. "The stakes are big, there was a great deal of detail," said Robert S. Strauss, chairman of Carter's campaign. "It just took a little time.

We had a lot of areas of disagreement, but never a lack of cordiality in dealing with them." James Baker, Reagan's chief negotiator, said each side "gave a little bit of this, a little bit of that." Strauss had said earlier that the format was the major sticking point. In Shreveport, La., Reagan told reporters that even when he refused to take part in the Republican primary debate before the Iowa caucuses last January, "I said I'd debate Jimmy Carter... anytime." As to stakes in the debate, Reagan said, "I don't know whether it's all on one roll of the dice or not. I don't know that this campaign is decided either way." Carter, who had recently been the most anxious to debate, indicated he was pleased with the agreement. Deputy White House press Secretary Rex Granum said of the arrangement: "We think it will allow the American people to contrast the positions of the two candidates." The League of Women Voters, which had proposed the Oct. 28 date and Cleveland site in the first place, said the candidates will be questioned by four panelists to be picked by the league. But Ruth J. Hinerfeld, president of the organization, declined to say whether they will be from the news media as they were in past debates. "The people want and need to compare how the candidates stand on the issues," Mrs. Hinerfeld said. "We are confident that face-to-face debate between them will enable the public to better understand the difference between them and their positions."

Anderson Maintains Carter Is 'Buying' Up Voters

Professor Will Be 'Spotlight' Speaker

Jannis B. Shea, Ph. D., associate professor of Child Development and Family Relations at ECU, will be the speaker during the Mental Health Association in Pitt County's "Spotlight" program Thursday at noon.

Her topic will be "Happiness Is Enjoying Your Teenager."

The program will be held at the recreation department administrative building at 2000 Cedar Lane. Those attending may bring or buy sandwiches.

Dr. Shea has been an ECU faculty member since 1962. She also has experience as an agricultural extension service home agent and as a parent. She and her husband, a professor in the geography department at ECU, have two daughters, one a fifth grader, the other a college sophomore. She has been named an outstanding teacher in the home economics department and is immediate past chairman of the ECU Family Life Conference which focused on family violence.

The public is urged to attend this program.

Fire Damages Idle Warehouse

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Fire caused heavy damage to an unoccupied warehouse in downtown Charlotte Tuesday night.

Authorities said the four-story building, which has been used as a storage area for Belk department stores, was soon to be converted for use as an office building.

A police spokesman said derelicks have been sleeping in the building and speculated that one of them may have ignited the fire.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Independent presidential candidate John Anderson maintains that President Carter is setting a record for "vote-buying" through federal grants.

As he campaigned in the New Jersey Tuesday, Anderson told The Associated Press in an interview that Carter is awarding federal grants to crucial election states "than any president" has done.

"I know they've all done some of this," Anderson said. "But I don't think there's ever been a more shameless exhibition of vote-buying. I mean it is Christmas in October."

Anderson confessed he has no figures of Carter's alleged use of federal grants for campaign purposes, but he said, "I've seen five presidents be elected. He's set all the records."

"I think somebody will sit down after this election is over, and they will put down the facts and figures — it wouldn't be that hard to do — of the federal grants that were awarded specifically to aid the Carter re-election campaign. And it will add up to the largest total of federal largesse in the history of the country for a comparable period."

Anderson was speaking today in Washington before making a campaign visit to Ohio.

He also said Tuesday while touring a decaying waterfront area in Elizabeth, N.J., and talking with tenants in two housing projects that Carter has failed to deliver on his promises to help the cities.

He said his own program to aid cities through new federal taxes on alcohol and tobacco would be used to "restore the crumbling streets, restore the crumbling water mains, the so-called basics."

Anderson said specifically that the president was trying to gain votes in New Jersey with his grant of federal funds to relieve the state's water shortage.

During a brief campaign swing in the state last Sunday, Vice President Walter F. Mondale announced a $4.5 million federal grant for emergency water pipelines in northern New Jersey, where mandatory water use restrictions are in effect because of tight supplies. At the time, Mondale emphasized the close political relationship between the Carter administration and New Jersey's Democratic officials, notably Gov. Brendan T. Byrne. But Mondale denied the grant was politically motivated, saying, "I can't take responsibility for a drought."

Byrne's spokesman, Joseph Santangelo, responded that Anderson did not suggest what else could be done in the situation, considering the state has only $2.3 million in its emergency budget.

"We appreciate federal help," Santangelo said. Anderson maintained in the interview that he's in the campaign to stay, despite polls consistently showing him lagging behind Carter and Republican candidate Ronald Reagan. He said many people won't decide how to vote until they are "in the privacy of the voting booth."

Burlington Sees Record Sales

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Burlington Industries Inc. said Tuesday it achieved record sales and a 6.2 percent gain in earnings during fiscal 1980.

The translation of foreign currency items resulted in a decrease of 32 cents per share for the quarter, thus effectively reversing the gain of 32 cents per share reported in the third quarter of 1980.

Liza Minelli Cancels A Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Liza Minnelli, three months pregnant, has canceled her fall concert tour with Joel Grey in order to reduce the chances of a miscarriage, says a public relations firm.

Miss Minnelli was ordered by doctors to remain completely inactive for the duration of her pregnancy after being hospitalized Oct. 3 during an appearance in Boston, said a statement from Pickwick Maslansky, Koenigsberg Inc.

Miss Minnelli was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital, complaining of abdominal pains, and her pregnancy was discovered. She had suffered a miscarriage in January.

"I'm going to keep trying till I do it right," Miss Minnelli was quoted as saying recently.

Her agent said Tuesday that the canceled tour — which would have taken her to nine cities through Dec. 14 — will be rescheduled after the birth of the child, expected in April 1981.

Dear Abby

Guest Causes Resentment

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The first day of school, Amy, my 8-year-old, brought a classmate home from school. (I'll call her Beth.) Beth asked if she could stay here until her mother got home from work at 6 p.m. She said her mother had told her to either play outside or go to a friend's house, as their house would be locked.

I said it would be all right, then I fixed snacks for Amy and her little guest.

Well, the "little guest" has been coming to my house after school with my child every day, and she stays here until she hears her mother's horn outside at 6 p.m.

I wonder what would happen if I had to take Amy somewhere after school and couldn't take Beth? Or if the girls had a fuss, as children sometimes do?

I resent being saddled with the responsibility of looking after someone else's child — especially without having been asked.

What should I do? I have never even met the woman.

IMPOSED UPON

DEAR IMPOSED: Introduce yourself. Tell her you don't mind having Beth occasionally, or even frequently, but she shouldn't assume that you will look after her child until 6 p.m. daily, so she had better make some other arrangements.

DEAR ABBY: Am I unreasonable to ask my husband to please refrain from intentionally striking up long, friendly conversations with waitresses? I don't mean brief remarks on the weather or food. He actually encourages waitresses (especially the young pretty ones) to stay and visit with us while we are eating. This spoils the whole meal for me. It makes me feel as though I am a "dum dum" and my husband needs someone to talk to while I'm sitting right there.

Don't advise me to tell him how I feel. I have, and it hasn't done any good. He says he is just being "friendly." He is a very good-looking man, and I have noticed some of the waitresses take his friendliness to be encouragement of a sort.

What makes him do this? He says it is harmless. Please reply. I want to show him your answer.

HURT

DEAR HURT: A gentleman does not engage a waitress in friendly conversation any more than a lady would do the same with a waiter. Your husband's actions are not "harmless" if they hurt you, and you may quote me.

chairman. Members were reminded to bring articles for the November bazaar-auction.

Mrs. Joe Jenkins and Mrs. Tim Ashburn were guests.

Mrs. Dorothy Johnson was co-hostess.

Conference Held Today

RALEIGH — The third annual Alumnae Club Leadership Conference for St. Mary's College alumnae opened here today in the Sarah Graham Kenan Library at 12:30.

Representing Pitt County will be alumnae, Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, Mrs. Donald L. Hardee and Mrs. Jo Betts Barrett Barringer, all of Greenville.

Prior to the conference, the representatives joined the Alumnae Council for lunch.

Chairman Is Guest Speaker

Mrs. Orice C. Ritch Jr. of Kinston was speaker at the meeting of the Susanna Coutanch Evans Chapter DAR held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Robert Daniel.

State chairman of National Honor Roll, she stressed the importance of the Honor Roll being used as a guide in helping chapters plan their program and services.

Mrs. Donald Collins, national defense chairman, reported on "America's Military Disgrace." Mrs. Dennis Winstead reported articles for veteran patients are being sent to the Fayetteville Hospital. Members were encouraged to sew "walker aprons." She also told of her recent visit to the DAR National Headquarters, Museum and State Rooms.

Mrs. Clara Jordan was appointed DAR Good Citizen

Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Whitehurst of Greenville have returned from a 47-day camping trip through 24 states and Mexico. They visited his aunt, Mrs. Mary Whitehurst Marlow, in the Pioneer's Home, Prescott, Ariz.

The Whitehursts were accompanied by Mrs. Corinne Whitehurst and Mrs. Martha Tarkington to Los Angeles, Calif., who then returned home by plane.

Miss Andreaus Says Vows

SMITHFIELD — Ann Willis Andreaus and Ernest George Davenport Jr. were united in marriage Saturday, Oct. 11, in Saint Paul's Episcopal Church here. The of Smithfield-Seima Senior High School and East Carolina University. She teaches at the Child Development Center, Farmville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest George Davenport of Tarboro. He attended N. C. State University and Pitt Technical Institute. He is engaged in farming.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a formal gown of white silk maracaine over peau de soie. She wore flowers in her hair and carried an Episcopal prayerbook covered with orchids and ivy, which belonged to her great great grandfather.

Mrs. John Breckinridge

Holt of Princeton, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. LeNeve Clark Davenport of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Richard August Jr. and Steven Brantly Andreaus, brothers of the bride, and Charles Pelham Guill.

Trash Unnecessary

What can be done to keep our community cleaner?

Highway litter is rampant, and anyone who has visited the downtown area of Greenville on a Sunday morning is well aware of the beer cans and other accumulated trash left in parking lots and along street rights-of-ways by the night before parties.

It's a shame that so much trash is left nightly by thoughtless people to mar an otherwise beautiful community.

No doubt most of us are guilty at times of thoughtlessly dropping a napkin or paper. It would be so simple for any of us to walk to the nearest trash container and deposit the unwanted trash.

City crews and property owners for the most part bear the burden of picking up all the trash that is left in public areas overnight. It is all so unnecessary, though. How much simpler it would be if everyone cleaned up his own mess.

Undecideds May Determine

There is considerable speculation this year as to whether GOP presidential candidate Reagan or Democratic President Carter has the lead with voters at any given time.

years the momentum seems to be elusive this election year. The speculation may be futile. It appears highly likely that the large number of undecided voters may decide the election...and many of them may not make up their minds until election day.

Succession Factor

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — If you have noticed a big difference in this year's campaigning for governor and lieutenant governor, there is one major factor responsible, succession.

for election to these two top offices in North Carolina have been decorous and keynoted by white papers and issues discussions aplenty. Personality clashes were pretty much restricted to the party primaries rather than the general election.

Succession has changed that. The 1984 election will be different, but in another way; again the result of succession.

There was no outpouring of primary candidates in the Democratic Party this year overwhelming slate in the Democratic primary of 1984 — perhaps as many as a dozen candidates, each faced with the formidable task of not only developing issues for themselves, but sniping at their opponents all the while.

That will abruptly change with a nominee is picked. When no incumbent in the way, the campaign will move to a high plane and the public will wonder, no doubt, what has caused this to be such a quiet, issues-laden race devoid of personality clashes when just four years ago things got awfully close to the gutter.

The challengers, again for the first time, have an individual to shoot at in their electioneering.

That explains, say political observers, why 1980 has been filled with personality clashes and assaults upon the character and the record of the incumbents.

It started off that way in the primaries, before battle lines were even drawn between the major party candidates. In that instance the intramural bloodletting was highly noticeable as hopefuls abstained from attacking across party lines.

Republican campaigning was muted, with little primary activity — largely because there was no incumbent in that race.

But with former Gov. Bob Hunt seeking to unseat Gov. Hunt and House Speaker Carl Stewart aiming at Lt. Gov. Green, the battle was conspicuous in its absence of issues, drilling in on differences in style and manner instead.

State Senator Bev Lake having picked up the Republican nomination, also picked up pretty much the same bludgeon which Scott had used so ineffectively: Hunt as a machine candidate seeking to perpetuate himself in office and in bed with an assortment of petty political cronies. GOP candidate Bill Cobey, gunning at Green, has talked about issues, but has also gotten considerable mileage by hammering at Green's style and conduct of business in office.

Traditionally, campaigns as the faithful chose to stand aside for the incumbent. Many times in the past there has been a confusing field of half-a-dozen or more seeking the nomination.

The political hopes and dreams of any number of individuals who had harbored desires for the governor's office have been dashed; age, changing fortunes, political mistakes, lost elections have taken them from the scene. Some have chosen other paths.

No Incumbent
In 1984 there will be no incumbent to step aside for. Several people once considered front runners are, at least for now, out of contention. Still others are already making noises and seeking to draw public attention in efforts to nail down support and the appearance of an early lead. All of which will only guarantee what most analysts predict will be an

A Shade Of Difference

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The irritating diversion that the Dutch devised and called "Kolf," before the Scots hijacked it for their national madness, is played a tad differently around here on Tuesdays from what you see on your TV screens from Augusta or Muirfield.

Tuesday is ladies' day at Dihy (pronounced Dilly) Ridge, the local public links.

Jack Whitaker and Ben Wright, the whispering Englishman, who cover all the big tournaments, might want to drop by and study the infinite variations on the game Webster thought he had a handle on when he boiled the essentials down to "Golf (Dutch, kolf, kolv — 'club', also Brit. gov) n. a game in which each player uses a number of clubs to hit a small, white ball into a succession of holes, usually 9 or 18 in number, situated at various distances over a course having natural or artificial obstacles, the object being to get the ball into each hole in as few strokes as possible."

More easily defined than done, but that basically is the way King James I and Mary Queen of Scots played the game in days of yore. Mary, it will be recalled, was an avid linksper. When news came that her husband Darnley had been killed, she did the only decent thing. Asked to play through.

Anyhow, Webster's synopsis is pretty much how Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus comfort themselves on the tournament trail today. But then neither they nor the aforementioned royalty have ever been to Ridgefield, Conn., on a Tuesday morning, so they wouldn't know about Bingo, Bango, Bungo.

In fact, the Associated Press Sports Almanac doesn't even list Bingo, Bango, Bungo in a footnote, much less than the index, although it claims to be the definitive work on everything from angling, archery and badminton to wheelchair slalom, wrestling and yachting, not excluding cricket, hang gliding, hurling and marbles.

As the ladies patiently explained to me over a beer when I went to fetch my wife from one of these weekly spinoffs from the ancient game, Bingo, Bango, Bungo awards points to whichever contestant is closest to the green (bingo), nearest to the pin (bango) and then first in the cup (bungo).

Before I could ask whether this version had originated in the Congo because of the crocodile problem on the fairways (I recall a sign warning against foursome snapping saurians at a course in Kinshasa), I was cautioned not to confuse the Bingo, Bango, Bungo with Shotgun or a Scotch foursome.

"Shotgun," explained my informant, a sturdily built outdoor type in a Helen Wills Moody visor cap with a gaudy crocodile embroidered on a generous promontory of golfing tunic, "is where all start together, in foursomes, on different holes, so there is no waiting time to tee off, although it does make it difficult, when we finish, on the girls at the snack bar."

My concentration being off, as usually happens anywhere near a golf course, I made the mistake of asking what constituted a Scotch foursome. Here the experts were divided.

"Partners in a foursome play only one ball, alternating shots between them. One drives off, the other hits the long iron, then the first makes the approach, and so

To the editor:

"We're working hard to cut down on growth in government. The fewer people we have to regulate, the fewer regulations you will have." Sounds good, doesn't it? That is from the address to the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce (Daily Reflector 10/16/81) by Gov. Hunt. That statement is insidious. What Gov. Hunt is not telling is the true reason of WHY and HOW growth in government will be cut. That city, county and state government are on the way to being phased out, becoming cogs in one big bureaucratic machine or that if his push in regionalism succeeds, we will be governed from the federal capitol of Atlanta, Ga.

This is why mergers are so important. Schools, fire-rescue and police departments, city and county. It has been creeping in. As soon as the citizens settle back in their apathy after one merger, another merger is on the horizon. All in the name of operating more efficient for less. Don't believe it. The object is to take power from the people. Government for the people, by the people, must go. So when Gov. Hunt talks about progress in North Carolina, he is coming from regionalism and federal grants that make it possible.

Few people know that Jimmy Carter on July 20, 1979 signed Executive Order 12149 that expands and grants virtually dictatorial powers to the TEN FEDERAL REGIONAL COUNCILS (that our 50 state have been merged into) and their CONTROL AGENTS in Washington, D. C. Said Presidential Document E. O. 12149 signed 7/20/79 — Federal Regional Councils/ is in the Federal Register — Vol. 44/ No. 143/ Tue. July 24, 1979.

"Federal regionalism is a seditious conspiracy which seeks to overthrow the Constitution. Only an irate and informed people can reverse this mindless march toward dictatorship. (Tax Fax # 165)

Strength For Today

THE CHURCH IS ONE
For a long time there has been considerable criticism of Christians because they are divided into so many sects and denominations. Yet these divisions do not necessarily militate against the unity of Christianity as a faith or the spiritual welfare of Christians.

Christians are as diverse in their temperaments and preferences as people as a whole. Some Christians like ritual; some do not. Some see faith as an active force in everyday living; some view it in a more contemplative mystic sense.

Many churches could be joined together by mere administrative changes, but there is no proof that such unions would benefit their welfare nor meet the varying needs of communicants.

The Bible speaks of the Holy Celestial City as having twelve gates. These may be considered symbolically to represent the Christian denominations. The important point is that all these lead to the same place. — Elisha Douglass

Nixon Test Of Influence

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — One test of just how much influence Richard M. Nixon really exerts in the Reagan camp will be whether Ronald Reagan, if elected, names industrialist George Shultz as secretary of state. Nixon, surprisingly, opposes his former Cabinet strongman for the post.

Shultz, now the California-based president of the Bechtel Corp., is the clear front-runner inside the Reagan camp for the State Department post. But Nixon has passed the word to Reagan operatives that he thinks it would be a bad selection indeed.

Ironically, Nixon plucked economist Shultz from the obscurity of the University of Chicago in 1969 as his unexpected choice for secretary of labor. Shultz quickly rose to a dominating position in the Nixon administration, ending up as secretary of the treasury. Nixon's opposition to Shultz to become secretary of state is based on the belief he would be too friendly with foreign service professionals, always high on the former president's enemies list.

CIA Stall
On orders from the top, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has abruptly halted a "finished intelligence" report on the status of Soviet anti-ballistic missile (ABM) progress.

The hold order, issued personally by CIA director Stansfield Turner last until after the Nov. 4 election, caused a quiet but unsuccessful revolt in the CIA. Turner's reason: The intelligence report is expected to show Soviet gains in the field of ABM technology and in the use of anti-aircraft radar for detecting incoming ballistic missiles, which violates SALT I. Turner and the White House feared that the all-but-completed assessment would lead to the press and damage President Carter on the defense issue.

Shackling Begin
Heavy White House pressure is being applied to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin not to stage another Israeli invasion of Lebanon, but Jordan's new alliance with Iraq is making it much harder to restrain him.

"If Jordan gets involved militarily in the Iraq-Iran war, Israel will move," a White House aide told us. That would put President Carter in a political bind. If he lets Israel get away with it, he will mobilize the entire Arab world against the U.S. If he forces Israel to withdraw as in the past, he will alienate the all-important Jewish vote just before the election.

The temptation for Begin to move now is extreme. Once the election is over, Begin knows that the U.S. would react harshly and publicly to any new incursion into South Lebanon.

Carter's Kochphobia
Even though President Carter seems to have moved ahead in New York, his operatives in the state still regard Mayor Ed Koch of New York City with fear and loathing.

No meeting of Carter's New York campaign organization is complete without the president's men inveighing against Koch. They express loathing that the mayor's critical statements cost Carter the state's Democratic primary last spring and fear that he might yet defeat the president of the state's 41 electoral votes Nov. 4. The Carterites claim Koch has privately commented that Ronald Reagan in the Oval Office would be no disaster for the city.

A footnote: Fears of Koch aside, Carter's New York operatives consider the battle for the state all but over. They have canceled special media advertising campaigns aimed at disaffected Jewish voters on grounds the effort is no longer needed.

Jerry Brown's Slump
Just how far Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has slumped in California since his landslide re-election two years ago is shown by a private poll exposing him as a decided underdog in any third-term try.

If the election for governor were held today, according to the poll, Brown would be defeated by Republican Lt. Gov. Mike Curb by 17 percentage points. That's one good reason why Brown in 1982, instead of seeking an unprecedented third term in Sacramento, may oppose Republican Sen. S. I.

Sugar, The Sweet Investment

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Its price has risen faster in the past year than that of gold. You are familiar with it and, in fact, right now you probably have a supply of it in your kitchen and a spoonful in your coffee.

Investment. It's the sweetest of the year. A year ago a pound of raw cane wholesaled for under 16 cents a pound here. Last Friday the going price had soared to more than 42 cents, close to a 5 1/2-year high.

In the same period, gold rose from a base price of $390 to $670.50 a troy ounce, and silver, after a dramatic rise and plunge, settled at a price of about $20.50 a troy ounce, or $2.31 more than a year ago.

Even those startling numbers don't tell the full story of what has occurred in the sugar markets. About 16 months ago you could have laid in a supply at about 8 cents a pound, had you the foresight and cash.

To have taken advantage of that price, however, you or your agent would have had to buy a contract, 112,000 pounds worth, larger than you will note is much larger than the size of the cubes in your sugarbowl.

True, you might have purchased only a piece of paper, which you could sell later, but it would have cost nearly $9,000, to most people a very large sum — until compared with a selling price of roughly $45,000.

Since you didn't buy, you paid, because no wholesaler or manufacturer who uses sugar has yet found a formula to avoid passing on his price increases. Cookies and other bakery products have been hit hard.

In liquid products, such as colas and sodas, it is possible to avoid using sugar by switching to high-fructose corn sweeteners, and some have done so. But producers of bakery products don't have that choice.

As a result, their frustrations are seen in frequent price increases, in complaints to Congress and in generally ineffective carping about the weather and the agricultural abilities of Soviet sugar beet growers.

The Soviets, some market analysts say, seem likely to come in with an unusually small beet crop this year, and may be forced to buy in world markets. News of this sort inspires speculation and high prices.

At the moment, some of those speculators are examining whatever data they can obtain on Soviet weather. Crostins, they observe, could further reduce the crop and delay harvesting, which is now under way.

Even before the Soviet influence, however, conditions were favorable to a price increase because consumption had been rising and production falling, in part because of the very low prices as late as last year.

With rising prices the production problem eventually will be solved, analysts say, but they note that it won't mean very much until supplies are rebuilt. Those supplies now are described as very low.

The only immediate prospect for a price drop seems to be associated with the level of speculation. How much is informed versus amateur? How much of it is mere gambling on the chance to make a quick buck?

If there really is an unusually heavy element of gambling — that is, if much of the increase results from wishful thinking rather than supply-demand — then prices could pop like a sugar cube into coffee.

That would be sour news indeed for speculators, but it might be the sweetest news of the year for the consumer, the baker, the soda vendor and candymaker.

Guard Has Training At West Point

The annual training this year for the Greenville National Guard's 514th Military Police Company took place at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y.

For two weeks, members of the 514th worked alongside active Army Military Police of the 57th MP Company of West Point.

Training duties included coordinating activities with the 101st Airborne Division during the training of cadets, gate security, and traffic control. Greenville unit members were commended for their appearance and duty performance during the 15-week tenure.

The Greenville unit is commanded by Capt. Hoyt Leggett of Tarboro. Leggett commented, "I am thankful for the kind things the people at the Point had to say about our troops. It is a positive indication that guardsmen from the Greenville area have represented the state of North Carolina well. I thank all of them for doing a fine job at the military academy."

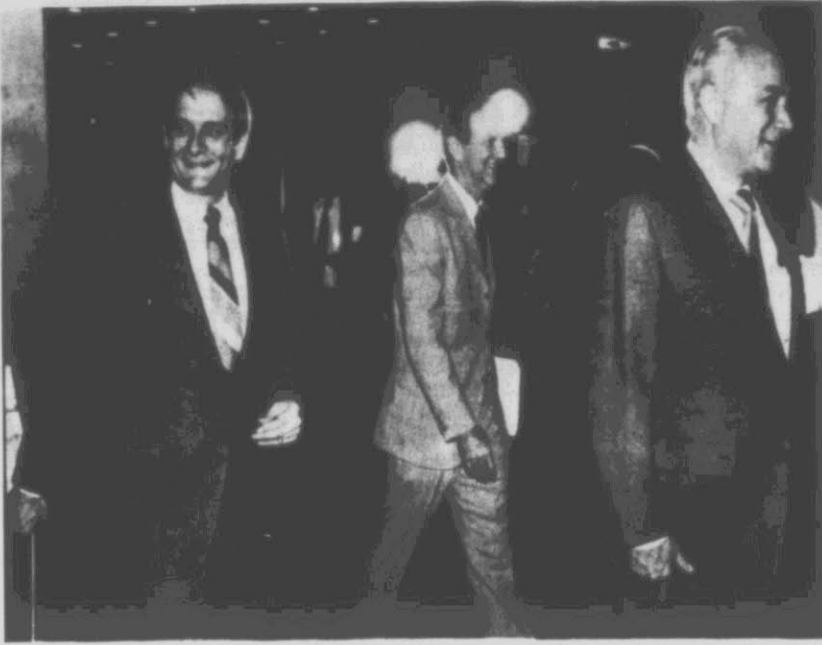

Transportation to and from the military academy was provided by the Georgia Air National Guard.

Former JC President Cites Early Borrowing

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Former state Jaycee President Maurice H. Wilson said Tuesday that leaders of the service organization began as early as 1972 borrowing money from its charity funds to make up operating expenses.

Wilson, who was released under $50,000 bond Tuesday to await court action on an indictment accusing him of misusing Jaycee funds, said the "borrowing started before I got there."

"I thought it was OK to do that," said Wilson, who became the organization's top officer in 1975.

Wilson, in an interview, said he would plead innocent to eight counts of embezzlement and one count of misapplying Jaycee funds.

"I'm not going to the big house," he said.

Wilson's arraignment on those charges was scheduled for Nov. 10 in Randolph County Superior Court.

He is the first person to be charged as a result of an investigation that was ordered after several Jaycee members revealed earlier this year that money had been diverted from charitable funds for other purposes. Some of the money was used to pay national dues for phony members and fake chapters, Jaycees said.

Wilson said Tuesday withdrawals from the Jaycee Foundation fund began as 10 percent deductions for administrative costs. Eventually the withdrawals exceeded the 10 percent limit, he said, but "we tried to keep it at 10 percent."

"When the Jaycee checking account got overdrawn, money was borrowed from the foundation," he said.

Jaycees have estimated that $140,000 to $190,000 was diverted from the charity fund to other purposes. Much of the money in the fund was raised through the sale of grape jelly.

Superior Court Judge Douglas Albright set the $50,000 bond for Wilson at the request of District Attorney Russell Walker Jr., who said State Bureau of Investigation agents had reported that Wilson might try to avoid prosecution.

"We have heard rumors that he has made statements that he is not prepared to present himself to face these charges," Walker told the judge.

Wilson's attorney denied the allegation, saying Wilson's appearance in court Tuesday showed that he did not intend to flee.

REJECTS APPEAL — Prime Minister Menachem Begin tells reporters he has rejected a personal appeal by two Palestinian leaders to cancel deportation orders against two mayors from the occupied West Bank. "Don't confuse it with Captain's Choice," she warned, "in which everyone tees off and the captain decided who had the best drive and they all take their next shot from there. Then a selection is made again and they all move to whichever lie is closest to the pin. Very congenial: A weak partner doesn't penalize the better player and everyone gets through earlier. Something similar to Pinehurst or Best Ball, if you grab me."

I didn't, of course, and I durst not.

Anyhow, as a placard on the bulletin board announced, the ladies were not the only innovators of the grand exasperating old game that Barry Fitzgerald, as the old Irish pastor in "Going My Way," defined as "a pool table moved out of doors."

The male addicts of the sport were holding a "Three Club Tourney" to keep ahead of the high cost of equipment. Participants could choose any three weapons from their golf bag; no less, no more. They tell me the grounds keepers are still interested in interviewing the chap who did not regard a putter as essential artillery.

Come to think of it, I recall once getting a haircut in the university town of St. Andrews, Scotland, the shrine of the sport, its mecca, holy of holies, etc. It was close to noon, and as soon as the proprietor pasted my last snipped lock into place with a dab of bear grease, he pulled down the shutters, inserted three golf

Leadership Award Given

S.Sgt. Blaney Parker of the Greenville National Guard's 514th Military Police Company received the outstanding leadership award recently for his accomplishments at a military police school in Ft. Meade, Md.

The award cited Parker for excellence in areas such as military law, investigating procedures, weapons qualification, and traffic control.

Accompanying the award was a letter of appreciation from the commanding officer of the school, Capt. Lewis Buckingham III.

The overall aim of the leadership school, it was pointed out, is to stress responsibility and self-improvement as a soldier and an MP.

Loyalty Night Is Planned

Jarvis Memorial Church will be having its annual Loyalty Night gathering Thursday, October 23 at 6:32 p.m. at the Moose Lodge.

This year's theme is "Bearing God's Light." Fellowship, barbecue chicken, and a program presented by Jack and Ted Miles will be the order of the evening. All members and persons interested in the life and ministry of Jarvis Memorial Church are invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles represent the Kaleidoscope House of Atlantic Beach, a center of the arts and Christian expression. Their program for Loyalty Night will involve music and drama.

All activities will conclude at 8 p.m. The church's Boy Scout Troop, No. 30, will be assisting with the parking.

clugs into a paper shopping bag and strode forth onto the Old Course, still in his white smock with the scissors protruding from the top pocket.

His choice: an 8-iron, a 3-wood and a putter.

For the glory of the Royal and Ancient, I just hope he was better at hacking the dog's leg right on the Road Hole (the 17th), around the hotel garden, than he was a trimming sideburns. My right one still meanders like Granny Clark's Wynd across the fairway of my face.

My wife, who took up golf a few weeks ago, has devised a scoring system that a study group from the Honorable Company of the Royal and Ancient might want to pursue. If she loses two golf balls, but finds three on any given day, she figures she has won her match by one. If she finds as many balls as she has lost, that for her is scratch golf, par for the course. If she drops six in a row into that pond on the second hole, she spends the rest of the afternoon shagging balls in the deep woods to avoid a bogey.

Golf, they say, can become compulsive.

PLO Seen 'Loser' In Iraq-Iran War

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Whoever may be victorious in the Iran-Iraq war, Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization is likely to come out a loser.

The war has shifted attention away from the Arab-Israeli conflict. It is weakening two of the PLO's chief allies. It has divided other Arab backers of the organization as well as pro-Iraqi and pro-Iranian factions within the PLO.

It is wrecking the military machines with which Iran and Iraq might have supported the Palestinians. And it threatens financial support of the Palestinian cause from the Persian Gulf oil states and the potential of Arab oil as a political weapon against Israel.

The war broke out as the PLO was making strides on the diplomatic front in its battle for recognition.

"The spotlight has now shifted to another conflict and it is not benefiting the Palestinians," said one Beirut source. "It has divided Arab ranks."

"We lost Egypt (in the Camp David peace process). Now we have lost Iran and Iraq, albeit temporarily. Our assets have been diminished," said Salah Khalaf, a top PLO official, in an interview with the Beirut magazine Monday Morning.

Arafat had built up good relations with both Iraq and Iran before the war, viewing the two nations as military counter-balances to Israel and replacements for Egypt after it made peace with the Jewish state.

The PLO as a whole and Arafat's Al Fatah, the biggest of its guerrilla groups, have adopted a position of strict neutrality in the war.

But the pro-Iraqi Arab Liberation Front faction fought street battles in the Lebanese city of Tripoli with pro-Iranian groups recently, and the Marxist Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine is reported to have sent guerrillas and weapons to aid the Iranian war effort.

With time sapping the momentum of the diplomatic campaign for recognition, the PLO has been one of the most active forces in seeking a negotiated settlement to the war. Arafat is said to be planning a new mediation effort if the current attempt by the conference of Islamic nations fails.

Western diplomats say a hallmark of Arafat's inter-Arab diplomacy has been balancing competing powers and interests to preserve the PLO's independence.

"We are depending on all those forces to strike a balance between ourselves and Israel and its giant allies, especially the United States," said Khalaf in his interview with Monday Morning.

But the war has brought Saudi Arabia and the other conservative oil countries along the Arabian side of the Persian Gulf closer to the United States because of fear the Iranians will export their revolution. With the Saudis leaning closer to the United States and such hardline states as Syria and Libya more closely aligned with Moscow as a result of the war, PLO maneuverability could be restricted.

The Saudis' turn to the United States for military aid also appears to have implications for their big financial subsidy to the PLO. And the big Palestinian communities in the gulf states have always been viewed by many as potential revolutionary fifth columns.

"Palestinians in the gulf were always suspected, probably because they were seen as sympathizing with the Iranian revolutionaries and the Shiites," said one source. He added that even before the war some Palestinians found it difficult to obtain work permits and travel in the gulf for this reason.

The PLO also looks askance at the U.S. naval buildup in and around the gulf, fearing the Western powers will step in to take control of the oil routes.

"One of the surprises of this war may be the internationalization of Middle Eastern oil in the sense that this oil will no longer be under Arab or Iranian control but will be under the control of the United States, which will argue the Arabs ... are not fit to bear the responsibility for this oil," said Khalaf.

But he and other Palestinian sources predicted their setback would be temporary and the focus would shift back to their fight against Israel after the fighting between Iran and Iraq stopped.

Seven Charges Facing Marine

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Onslow County authorities filed seven felony charges, including rape and kidnapping, against a young Marine Tuesday.

Dwight E. Mays was arrested in Craven County Tuesday by Highway Patrol troopers who found him walking along U.S. 70. He had been sought since his escape Monday from Onslow County authorities in Jacksonville, where he was awaiting court action on bad-check charges.

Mays was accused of ab-ducting an 18-year-old Jacksonville woman at gunpoint Monday afternoon. Officials said the woman was alone at her house when a man forced his way into the house and kidnapped her.

Mays was charged with armed robbery, first-degree rape, common-law robbery, kidnapping, breaking and entering, larceny and assault on a law enforcement officer.

No bond was allowed on the rape charge, but a magistrate set bond for the other charges at $116,500.

Aver Artificial Fever Can Kill Cancer Growth

ATLANTA (AP) — Heating cancer patients' blood to produce an artificial fever has reduced or eliminated tumors in half of those tested, according to University of Mississippi researchers.

The experimental treatment raises the body temperature to 107 degrees — normally considered a killing fever — for four to eight hours, according to Dr. Leon C. Parks of the university's medical center at Jackson.

Parks and his colleague, Dr. George V. Smith, reported on the treatment at the American College of Surgeons' annual clinical meeting this week in Atlanta.

Parks said their studies of "whole body hyperthermia" are preliminary, "but even at this early stage of development, it appears a new, effective approach to cancer treatment has been developed."

The Mississippi study included 104 patients with advanced tumors, most of whom had failed to respond to standard cancer therapy, Parks said.

"In other words, these patients had been given up as hopeless. Most of them would have been expected to die within two or three months," he said.

Forty percent of the 104 patients had regression of all detectable tumors, and more than half the cancers disappeared in another 12 percent. Another 24 percent had a "less measurable" response to the treatment, Parks said.

The results are "uncommon for patients with cancer this advanced and resistant to treatment," Parks said.

The machine that heated the blood was attached to blood vessels in the thigh.

Using warm water, the machine heated the blood and the anesthetized patient to 106.7 to 107.3 degrees.

Doctors took special care to avoid convulsions and heat stroke, common complications of high fever.

The course of therapy consisted of four to six treatments. Low doses of anti-cancer drugs and radiation were given to some patients. He said the treatment apparently works because cancer cells are more sensitive to the destructive effects of heat than normal cells. Heat also apparently makes tumors more susceptible to anti-cancer drugs and radiation, he said. He did not speculate about why the cancer cells are susceptible to heat.

Locomotive In Runaway Crash

ATLANTA (AP) — A runaway freight train raced past Underground Atlanta and through the downtown business district before smashing into another train, piling wreckage across six tracks in a railroad yard Tuesday.

Two men in the second train were injured, officials said.

A small fire in one engine was quickly put out, an Atlanta Fire Department spokesman said.

Vandalism "has not been ruled out," by investigators trying to find out how the Seaboard Coast Line engines got out of control, said a spokesman for the Family Lines System, which owns Seaboard.

Engineer Clyde Linnenkohl of the runaway train theorized that an electrical short circuit caused the problem as the seven engines left the Hulsey Yards just east of downtown Atlanta at about 1 p.m.

Crew members tried all their emergency brakes and safety devices before abandoning the engines, then, "we jumped off before they got going too fast," Linnenkohl said.

As the engines roared westward at up to 30 mph, they plowed into a train of 16 unmanned freight cars and pushed them along the tracks, under a complex of viaducts downtown.

The runaway train rolled on a total of six miles to the Tilford Yards in northwest Atlanta, where five of the engines derailed and the other engines and cars slammed into a train waiting to leave the yard, throwing wreckage for hundreds of feet, officials said. They said 12 of the 16 cars derailed across six of the nine out-bound tracks.

Joseph Liggon, the waiting train's 32-year-old engineer and his brakeman, Richard Darlington, 41, both of Manchester, Ga., were injured in the collision and taken to Georgia Baptist Hospital, authorities said.

Hospital officials said Liggon was in stable condition with head and back injuries and would be kept for observation. They said Darlington was released in good condition after treatment for minor injuries.

Yard officials said no damage estimates were available. Traffic was delayed but cranes were expected to have the tracks cleared by this morning, they said.

The Other Heavyweight Champion
This Saturday in South Africa, Mike "Hercules" Weaver is scheduled to defend his half of the world heavyweight boxing title. Larry Holmes still owns the other half. The heavyweight title has been split since March, 1978, because boxing's two rival organizations, the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council, have refused to recognize the same boxer as champion. Holmes kept the WBC title by stopping Muhammad Ali after 10 rounds earlier this month. Weaver won the WBA's version of the crown last April with a 15th round knockout over Big John Tate. His opponent on Saturday will be South Africa's heavyweight champion, Gerrie Coatzee.

DO YOU KNOW — Which heavyweight champion held the title the longest?

Philosopher Will Speak At ECU

ECU News Bureau
Ernest Nagel, professor emeritus of philosophy at Columbia University, will visit East Carolina University Oct. 28 as part of the Visiting Distinguished Philosophers Program, a project of the Council for Philosophical Studies and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

He will speak on "The Supremacy of Method" Oct. 28 at 4 p.m. in the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center auditorium. The program is free and open to the public, with an informal reception afterward.

Nagel will also meet with faculty members of the ECU Department of Philosophy and visit an ECU class in the philosophy of science.

Formerly John Dewey Professor of Philosophy at Columbia, Nagel is most noted for his studies of the philosophy of science. He is a past president of the American Philosophical Association, and, according to ECU Professor Nicholas Georgalis, a "significant figure in contemporary philosophy because of the important contributions he has made to the logical empiricist and naturalist movements."

Eugene Ryan, chairman of philosophy at ECU, said Nagel's lecture would be of interest to persons in the community as well as the campus.

"Prof. Nagel will present, in a nontechnical way, the result of his reflections on science and philosophy in the contemporary world," Ryan said.

MUSICAL PROGRAM

The Golden Aires will render a musical program this Saturday at 7 p.m. at Allen Chapel F.W.B. Church on the Falkland Highway. This program will benefit the building fund.

The program is sponsored by Charlie Jones and there is no charge. The pastor, the Rev. J.L. Tyson invites the public to attend.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Seven riders to appropriations bills pushed by the conservative right in Congress could spell death for the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the chairman of North Carolina's advisory committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission says.

W.W. Finlator, on returning from a meeting of the 51 state advisers to the national commission, said the anti-civil rights nature of the amendments is indicative of a national mood.

"I'm not a believer in conspiracies, plots and schemes ... but I do see an open coalition gaining momentum and speed," said the 67-year-old Raleigh Baptist minister, who has become controversial and widely known for his stands on social issues.

Though Finlator says he sees no covert plots against civil rights, he does see a national "shift to the right ... which seems to be planned by an orchestrated, well-financed coalition."

He included in the coalition groups such as the Moral Majority and similar fundamentalist religious groups plus right-wing political organizations.

TRIAL SERMON

Ronnie Taylor will preach his trial sermon tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Soul-Saving Station, 1515 Broad Street here. The public is invited, says Pastor Inetta Fleming.

He said such groups back single issues aimed at diminishing civil rights. They support prayer in public schools and draft registration and are against the Equal Rights Amendment and busing, he said.

And, he said, they are targeting civil rights advocates in Congress for defeat in the elections.

"The long way we've come is about to be curtailed and the clock turned back (for civil rights)," said Finlator. "And Americans don't know this."

The seven bell-weather riders before Congress, some of which have already passed in the House, he said, are:

— An amendment to the Labor, Health and Human Services and Education Department appropriations bill to prohibit use of funds to implement or enforce programs which include ratios, quotas or other numerical requirements in employment of admissions policies or practices. The amendment is by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa.

— An amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and Joseph Biden, D-Del., in effect for three years, to prohibit the Department of Education from requiring "the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home."

— An amendment by Rep. James Collins, R-Texas, to prohibit the Department of Justice from bringing action "to require directly or indirectly the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home."

— Two amendments attached to the Treasury Department's appropriations bill to restrict the Internal Revenue Service's ability to assure that racially discriminatory private schools do not receive tax-exempt status.

— A rider by Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, to prohibit expenditures to enforce regulations requiring a state or local education agency to address needs of students who speak limited English through programs other than intensive English instruction.

— Another Ashbrook measure to prohibit expenditure of funds under any court order or injunction for any purpose specifically prohibited by the labor, health and human services and education appropriations bill.

— A third Ashbrook rider to stop expenditure of funds to enforce parts of regulations regarding Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 that have been the subject of conflicting court decisions. The decisions revolve around discrimination against female employees.

He said passage of the amendments would spell death for the 1964 civil rights act.

Finlator said the times are right for conservatives backed by religious fundamentalists to organize and fight civil rights progress because of inflation and recession.

He said people become more selfish during such times.

However, he said the Civil Rights Commission is encouraging people to check with their senators and representatives concerning the riders to make sure they don't pass on voice vote, tacked on to appropriations bills at the last moment.

"These amendments are indications of what's happening in this country," he said, and must be stopped to protect civil rights.

"No matter who wins this election, this problem is going to be around," Finlator said, "We're going to lose ground unless effort is put in to stop it."

Hunt, Morgan Rap 'Negativism' By Republicans

By The Associated Press
Democratic incumbents Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Robert Morgan joined forces Tuesday night at a 6th District rally in characterizing their Republican opponents in the Nov. 4 general election as having said "not one positive word" during their campaigns.

Haw River home of former Gov. Bob Scott, who lost a primary fight to Hunt. Republican gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake Jr. campaigned in Murfreesboro Tuesday, telling 300 soil and water conservation supervisors that "we've got to balance — with fine tuning — the conflicting interests of our economy and environment."

candidate for Morgan's seat in the U.S. Senate, was preparing for a campaign appearance in Raleigh today with Sen. John Heinz III, R-Pa. In Haw River, Morgan said East's campaign has attempted to "put together an image of Robert Morgan as soft on communism and soft on defense without saying one word about what they are for."

Hunt coupled his criticism of Republicans with a general endorsement of President Carter and all Democratic candidates. But he singled out Morgan's campaign for an enthusiastic and lengthy endorsement. "I think it's mighty important that North Carolina have one U.S. senator, and he's the only one you and me and the average people of this state have. He spends all his time not trying to get on the six o'clock news but trying to get something done," Hunt said.

Hunt accused Republicans of "distortions" in their campaign attacks on Morgan's record. "Not one positive word have you heard from them, and that goes for their candidate for governor, too," Hunt said. Earlier Tuesday Hunt told members of the North Carolina League of Municipalities he would support increased state financial aid to cities, but he stopped short of endorsing the league's proposal for a state revenue-sharing program.

In a far-ranging speech, Lake attacked state government's growth, called for an overhaul of state regulatory controls for utilities, objected to any increase in the state gasoline tax, and called for major changes in the state's education program — including a teacher bill of rights and the removal of "unqualified, unmotivated teachers."

error, Bill Cobey, issued a statement saying that — if elected — he would not use an office being prepared for the lieutenant governor and his staff in a new legislative office building under construction in Raleigh. "This new office is just another example of the wasteful government spending that causes inflation," Cobey said. "The professional politicians running government already have enough space. When people are being hurt by double-digit inflation, government ought to be cutting back to save money — not getting bigger."

dinner hosted by Mount Olive College and the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities last week. The dinner also included a review of the North Carolina program of aid to students attending private institutions.

Prices Improve At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Sales Tuesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market consisted of mostly leaf and smoking leaf grades. More smoking leaf was on the floor yesterday than at any time this season. Prices on several grades of low quality tobacco have improved considerably since the holiday. Top quality tobacco continues to sell for $1.75 and $1.80 per pound. Stabilization receipts accounted for 4.10 percent of gross sales.

The market sold 695,412 pounds yesterday for $1,118,771. The average was $160.48 per hundred. To date, the market has sold 27,397,703 pounds for $412,391,513. The season average is $151.08 per hundred pounds.

In Murfreesboro, Lake promised to address the problems of water pollution in places such as the Albemarle Sound and the Chowan River, saying, "We must see conservation in the context of the principles of conservatism."

Conservation of resources, Lake said, goes hand-in-hand with "the necessity of conserving our fundamental principals ... individual freedom and responsibility, honest work and the free enterprise system."

Later in the week East will campaign with Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. Next week East is scheduled to campaign in Charlotte with Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Meanwhile, the GOP candidate for lieutenant governor, Bill Cobey, issued a statement saying that — if elected — he would not use an office being prepared for the lieutenant governor and his staff in a new legislative office building under construction in Raleigh.

Ask SBI Help In Crime Wave

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief Malcolm Niven has called for assistance from the State Bureau of Investigation in halting a concentrated series of thefts and break-ins.

Niven, calling it the worst outbreak in his 23 years on the force, said Monroe has recorded about 35 thefts at businesses and office buildings since Aug. 1.

Most of the break-ins have involved the theft of bulk merchandise such as television sets and clothing, safe cracking and petty cash forays.

"I feel the biggest part of this is related to (illegal) drugs," Niven said.

EPILEPSY MEET

The Pitt County Epilepsy Association, which serves all of northeastern North Carolina, will hold its monthly meeting on October 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the Willis Building on the corner of First and Reade Streets.

The guest speaker will be Ms. Brenda Gray, executive director of the Mental Health Association of Pitt County. She will speak on the work of the group she leads. Visitors are welcome.

PARENTS VISIT

ROCK MOUNT — Mr. and Mrs. Jepson of Greenville were among the more than 130 parents of Wesleyan College Students attending the annual Parents Weekend at the Rocky Mount School October 11-12. They are the parents of Stephen Jepson.

Lung Group Will Sponsor Two Clinics

If overeaters can change their attitudes toward food, they can lose weight and if smokers can change their attitudes toward cigarettes, they can give up smoking, clinical hypnotist John Greer says.

Greer will use hypnosis to help participants in clinics to be held at the Ramada Inn here Tuesday, Oct. 28, change their emotional attitudes that prevent them from accomplishing the changes they want.

The stop-smoking clinic, costing $30, will be held at 6:30 p.m.; the lose-weight clinic, costing $25, at 8:30 p.m.

The Eastern Lung Association, sponsor of the clinics, is accepting reservations for these clinics and also for the ones to be held at Craven Community College in New Bern Oct. 29. Checks may be sent to American Lung Association, Eastern Region, P. O. Box 1407, Greenville. To be guaranteed a seat, one must pre-register. When pre-registering by mail, include name, address, and telephone number.

The office phone number is 752-5093.

JOHN GREER

According to Greer, who represents Self Psych Inc. of Southfield, Mich., participants will relax during three group hypnotic inductions while he gives suggestions to their subconscious minds. They will each receive literature and a cassette tape for reinforcement of the suggestions at home.

"The constant conflict between a smoker's or an overeater's intelligence and emotions make will power quitting difficult," he said. "A person's intelligence wants to quit smoking or overeating, but his emotions still need the gratification either or both give him. Hypnosis helps a person convert to a non-smoker or moderate eater, rather than give up something he still wants to do."

He regresses smokers to the time when they smoked their first cigarettes, with the coughing and terrible taste it caused. He also gives suggestions to keep them from substituting food for cigarettes.

He helps those with weight problems re-program their minds to enjoy nutritious foods and proper eating habits.

Physician Attends Meet

Loftus Hengeveld Jr., M.D., attending physician in the Emergency Department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, recently participated in a three-day seminar on Emergency Medical Services system and Trauma Center Development at the Maryland Center for EMS Studies in Baltimore.

More than 35 physicians and administrators throughout the southeast attended the seminar to discuss methods of implementing a nationwide emergency medical system to deliver life-saving care to the half-million trauma victims critical and annually in the United States. In 1979, the cost of trauma to the nation was over $75 billion.

'Inflation' Idea For Today: Say It With Balloons

By NANCY GOTLER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —
Amina Stephens is bursting with joy over inflation. She recently quit her job as a manicurist to join the ever-expanding bunch making soaring profits blowing up balloons.

Making balloon bouquets, as opposed to the floral variety, began as a fad on the East Coast and gradually floated across the country to Southern California, where it's become a serious business. In the Los Angeles area alone, there are more than a half-dozen shops trying to take the bloom off the florists' nose.

Just like flowers, balloon deliveries are made for all the usual reasons — get-well gestures, birthday wishes and wedding surprises.

"People have discovered that balloons are not just for kids," said Ms. Stephens, who claims her firm, The Red Balloon, pioneered the concept in Los Angeles. "I've seen men cry when they get a delivery, and it's so moved me I've had tears in my eyes, too."

An ordinary bouquet includes two-dozen helium-filled balloons of assorted colors, tied with ribbon, and sold for $24, plus a delivery charge. But most balloon deliveries are far from ordinary.

Sandye Dinato, who started The Balloon Express in suburban Torrance last May with partner Shelly Anderson, hired a nude magician to deliver a batch of blue balloons decorated with "creative smut" to a woman's "stagette" party.

Lorraine Packer, owner of The Ballooney in Tarzana, got a request for two-dozen black balloons printed with the words "I quit" to be delivered to a disgruntled employee's boss.

One man who decided to say it with balloons sent a floating marriage proposal to his girl with the help of Stephen Blunck, owner of Balloon Bouquets of Los Angeles. She accepted by sending her beau a heartfelt helium bunch in return.

Both owners of the delivery businesses and their clients say balloons create a unique kind of magic flowers can't match.

"I don't think balloons are going to do away with flowers, but everyone in life deserves one bouquet of balloons," Ms. Packer said.

Added Ms. Dinato, "When somebody hands you a balloon you have a big choice. You either smile or you smile."

Hazel McNair is still smiling three weeks after friends celebrated her birthday with an order of 100 balloons sent to the coffee shop where she works.

"They came in and released the balloons and they filled up the place," she said. "It was right in the middle of the lunch hour and I wondered how the customers would react, but everybody loved it. If someone had brought me roses it would have been nice, but this was something special."

Roslyn Smith used a balloon bouquet to get the attention of a businessman who was reluctant to give her an appointment. "I sent a note with the balloons saying, 'I'm up in the air waiting for an appointment with you,' and got a call within half an hour. It was the perfect thing to do."

If balloons have affected the lives of those who have sent or received them, they have profoundly changed the people who deliver them for a living.

Blunck opened a local balloon bouquet franchise last December after being told by doctors that he might have cancer. "I was the young executive working my way up the corporate ladder. I could never put myself in the posture of being a balloon man," he recalled.

Happily, cancer was not found, but the experience changed Blunck's perspective. "I realized this is no dress rehearsal," he said, "so I quit my job as sales manager for a Cadillac agency and got into balloons. Now I'm much happier."

So is Roxer Scholl, who finds his "ballooney buffoonery" antics as Roger the Clown a welcome respite from the drudgery of retirement.

"The best move I ever made was to retire from the postal service and start living," said Scholl, who personalizes his deliveries with a funny costume, animal-shaped balloons and a washboard musical accompaniment by his wife.

Japanese Stranded In China Now Look For 'Roots'

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — On Aug. 14, 1945, the day before

Japan's surrender in world War II, Yukie Taniki slit the throat of her 2-year-old adopted daughter, Miyoko Yasuda, on a Manchurian hilltop as Soviet troops poured into the Japanese-occupied territory.

Taniki then took the razor to her own throat along with 2,000 other Japanese, mostly women and children, who chose mass suicide on that hill rather than capture by the enemy. Unknown to either mother or child, both survived.

Last Aug. 13, 35 years later, Miyoko, calling herself Chen Chengjiu and accompanied by her two Chinese children, stepped from a plane at Tokyo's Narita Airport to embrace the 81-year-old Taniki. The two women, each unable to speak the other's language, wept in greeting.

Miyoko, who still bears scars on her neck, is one of several thousand Japanese orphans brought up by Chinese families after the war who are now seeking their Japanese roots. Since China and Japan restored diplomatic relations in 1972, there has been a steady trickle of orphans back to Japan, a few to rejoin their families and start new lives, most for a glimpse of the land of their origins before going back to their adopted homeland.

There were about a million Japanese civilians living in Manchuria, now northeast China, when Japan's military collapse thrust the area into chaos.

"Many of those who survived the enemy attacks and starvation left their children with sympathetic Chinese," said Hiko Gunji, director of the Japan-China Orphans Problem Liaison Council.

"Many other families were torn apart during flight, or at the refugee camps. Some Japanese and Chinese even sold children to buy food and clothing," he said.

What little proof they possessed of their origins in many cases was destroyed during Mao Tse-tung's 1960s Cultural Revolution in China, to avoid accusation by radical leftists of being Japanese spies.

The passage of time, and the dearth of clues to the past held by orphans, has made the search for family links in Japan difficult. Since normalization of relations in 1972, and particularly after Mao's death in 1976, 1,096 orphans have asked the Japanese government for help in finding their families. So far only 361 have been traced.

"Discovering the origins of one out of three is about as good as we can do," said Tetsuji Mizumoto of the Health and Welfare Ministry's repatriation bureau. "And we estimate that there are up to 3,000 orphans in China who have not yet sought our aid."

Gunji, whose private organization also conducts searches for missing families, said there are pockets in the northeast China provinces of Heilongjiang and Jilin where "there must be Japanese orphans living, but not one person has stepped forth."

He said in these remote areas, with little contact with Peking, people still may fear reprisals if they admit to being Japanese.

Since the repatriation efforts began, 210 orphans whose families were identified have come to Japan on six-month passports issued by Peking. Of these, 47 decided to stay permanently.

There have also been about 5,000 Japanese settlers in Manchuria who stayed in China after the war and have been able to visit their birthplaces after decades of separation. Almost all returned to their families and homes in China.

Many orphans have made frustratingly little progress in seeking out their roots. A Japanese agricultural group which visited Fangzheng in Heilongjiang this past summer was met by hundreds of orphans waving tattered photos, singing fragments of Japanese lullabies, and pleading for help in locating their Japanese families.

Noriaki Watase, an assistant to a member of the Diet, Japan's parliament, who visited northeast China in August, said Japan has failed to do all it can to help the orphans.

"We spent a $100 million this year to aid Indochinese refugees, but budgeted only 240 million yen ($1.14 million) for Japanese orphans left behind in China," he said.

The government plans to start a program of bringing 60 orphans with concrete clues to their origins to Japan every year to help their search. But Watase proposes that Japan also charter a "friendship boat" to give even those orphans whose links to the past are hopelessly cut a chance to see the land of their ancestors.

"Most are satisfied with their lives in China and aren't interested in moving permanently to Japan. But to ignore their wishes for one look at their native land is to leave a final chapter of the war unfinished," he said.

The Saving Place

Offer Similar Prescriptions

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Polls show that the economy may be the paramount issue among voters next month, yet President Carter and Ronald Reagan have developed surprisingly similar economic prescriptions for voters to choose between.

Moreover, there is a wide consensus among economists and financial analysts that the economy, at least in the short term, will be the same under either Carter or Reagan as president. That means a sluggish recovery from the 1980 recession, with continued high unemployment and inflation through 1982 — and probably a lot longer.

The stock market plunged sharply last week when a highly respected Wall Street analyst, Henry Kaufman, forecast higher interest rates on the ground that inflation will worsen no matter who wins the Nov. 4 election.

"There is simply no indication that either of the major political parties can or will ... make a significant dent in the inflationary forces that will swell as the new business recovery progresses," Kaufman said.

Most business leaders seem to believe Reagan, the Republican candidate, will do a better job of managing the economy, although they have a hard time saying why.

Walter B. Wriston, chairman of Citicorp., the New York-based banking firm, thinks Reagan will be more willing to veto congressional spending bills. Reginald Jones, chairman of General Electric Corp., believes Reagan is more likely to "emphasize the longer-term needs of the economy."

Both Reagan and Carter have proposed significant tax reductions for 1981. Individuals would receive larger tax cuts under the Reagan plan than under Carter's.

Both also have backed an accelerated tax depreciation allowance to spur business investment in plant and equipment, and both promise special aid for distressed industries and communities.

When Carter recently announced a special program to help the steel industry, Reagan accused him of pirating his program. Their approaches to helping the auto industry also are similar.

Clearly, each has influenced the other's programs. Carter hurried his Aug. 28 announcement of a $27.7 billion tax cut plan to counter the appeal of Reagan's proposal for a 30 percent tax cut over three years.

And Reagan, in an announcement Sept. 9, scaled back some of his more ambitious economic promises to counter Carter's criticism that his proposals would lead to enormous budget deficits and higher inflation, or a major dismantling of government programs. In a new analysis of the Reagan and Carter programs, Lawrence Chimerine of Chase Econometrics, a major private forecasting firm, says that "the only significant difference remaining is the outlook for tax reductions beyond 1981."

Reagan has proposed reducing tax rates by 10 percent in each of the next three years, while Carter has promised reductions only for 1981. But Chimerine isn't betting that Reagan will cut taxes after 1981 either.

"In our judgment, it is becoming more unlikely that additional large tax cuts will be enacted in succeeding years because the deficit will remain very large, partly because of the pressure of rising defense spending," he wrote.

Some of Reagan's key economic advisers are known to be skeptical about Reagan committing himself to cut taxes after 1981. While Reagan still holds to his promise, it would be an easy matter for him to postpone the 1982 and 1983 reductions, citing changed economic conditions.

Independent candidate John B. Anderson opposes a tax cut for individuals, and favors a 50-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax. He said the economy should be in better shape before individual tax cuts are provided, although he favors selective cuts for business.

Budget deficits are an issue for both Reagan and Carter. While the GOP nominee says he believes it will be possible to balance the budget by 1983, Carter says the cumulative cost of all Reagan tax and spending initiatives would result in a deficit of more than $100 billion.

Reagan's people counter that Carter's computation includes many things

Reagan wouldn't do until later and fails to take into account the reductions that Reagan is promising in government spending.

The budget deficits of the four Carter years have been enormous and are likely to continue.

Much of what the candidates say about their economic policies has to be taken on faith. Reagan promises to reduce inflation-adjusted government spending between 7 percent and 10 percent by 1985 — without hurting needed programs — by cutting waste, inefficiency and fraud.

Armed Theft Is Investigated

Greenville police are investigating the Tuesday afternoon armed theft of over $1,000 in cash from Carolina Gold and Silver Exchange here.

Chief Glenn Cannon said that the store attendant told investigating officers that two men, one of them carrying a pistol wrapped in cloth, entered the Pitt Plaza business and told her that they wanted all of the money in the store.

The attendant, who was alone in the facility, reported that the two men fled after taking some $1,150 in cash, according to the chief.

Cannon said that the woman attendant was not injured in the 2:28 p.m. incident.

Jaguars Host Havelock, Panthers, Vikings Home

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The past year has not treated Farmville Central and Havelock kindly.

When last we saw the two teams, the Jaguars were ranked #1 in the state and Havelock #2. Farmville solidified its hold on the top spot last October with a hard-fought 19-14 victory over the Rams.

This year neither team is ranked and both would have trouble staying on the field with their counterpart of a year ago.

The 1980 Jaguars are all but out of the race for the Eastern Carolina Conference title — a championship they have won the past four seasons — following a 32-22 loss to Southern Nash last Friday.

Havelock leads the weak Coastal Conference with a 2-0 mark but must still play White Oak. And outside the league the Rams have been anything but their usually unbeatable self, losing two of five games.

Still, Friday's battle in Farmville should be close — if for no other reason that both teams were hurt almost equally by graduation.

In ECC games this week, Ayden-Grifton (3-5 overall and 3-3) travels to Stanhope to face Southern Nash (5-1-1, 5-0), winless D.H. Conley (0-7, 0-5) has the unenviable task of playing host to unbeaten Charles B. Aycock (7-0, 5-0) while North Pitt (1-6, 0-6) entertains disappointing Greene Central (1-6, 0-5).

In other games this Friday, Roanoke (5-2, 2-2) travels to Tarboro, Williamston (6-1, 3-1) plays host to Edenton, and Jamesville (1-7, 1-6) goes to Scotland Neck.

In results from last week, North Lenoir beat Ayden-Grifton, 20-6, Conley fell to Southwest Edgecombe, 18-7, and C.B. Aycock flattened North Pitt, 55-0. Also, Roanoke Rapids upset Roanoke, 14-13, Williamston lost its first game of the season to Ahoskie, 28-7, and Manteo blasted Jamesville, 29-2.

er, may be the Ram defense, which last week held an admittedly weak East Carteret team to 21 yards total offense in a 14-0 victory.

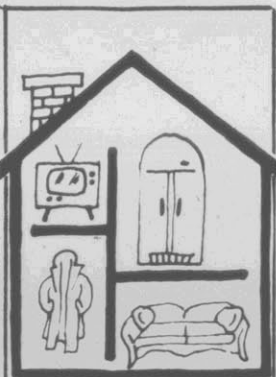

The Jaguars, meanwhile, lost to Southern Nash, 32-22, this past Friday after leading 14-0 in the first period.

"We played exceptionally well for the first quarter and a half," Brewer said. "In the second half, though, we didn't execute well and they did a good job of blocking. We had very poor tackling in the second half, especially one-on-one in the open field."

Brewer hopes he can correct that before Friday evening.

"They're not as imposing size-wise as they have been in

Phillies Beat Kansas City, 4-1; Capture First Series Title Ever

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They came from ignominy, this rag-tag bunch of malcontents, molded into world champions by guts, desire and the iron will of a man named Dallas Green.

The Philadelphia Phillies reign today over baseball's world of grownup kids, supreme in their own very special realm of make-believe. They rule it for the first time in the history of a club that has been baseball's lost child for so many summers.

Mike Schmidt, the Peter Pan of this "Never-Never Land," could not express his feelings.

"I can't muster the right words to describe how I feel," he said. "We're world champions, and I've barely had two sips of champagne. I just feel so good there's no batting practice tomorrow."

Schmidt, who led the major leagues with 48 home runs during the season, leant his bat to this fairy tale with decisiveness. His two-run single in the third inning started the 1980 Philadelphia Phillies on their way to baseball immortality. He was chosen Most Valuable Player of the Series with seven RBI, six runs scored and a .381 batting average.

The Phillies defeated the Kansas City Royals 4-1 in the sixth game of the World Series to wrap it up by four games to two, and Steve Carlton tied a big bow around it for the two million inhabitants of this town. The town took the gift joyously.

The Phillies left-hander, who almost certainly will win his third Cy Young for his 24-9 season, went seven strong innings and didn't give up a run until the eighth. He struck out seven and walked three to win his second game of the Series, and he left to a standing ovation from the crowd of 65,838, the largest ever to witness a baseball game at Veteran's Stadium and largest to watch a Series game in 16 years.

"It's a monumental feeling," said Tug McGraw, who finished up for Carlton. "I've been through a lot. It goes back to a club that's been able to put everything aside when we get on the field and learn how to win."

The Phillies won the first two games of the Series at home, then lost the first two in Kansas City. They came back to win Game 5 in Kansas City and send the Series back home for the clinching game, the game that gave the Phillies their only world championship since the franchise was moved from Worcester, Mass., 98 years ago.

It began with a third inning error by perhaps the best defensive second baseman in the American League, Kansas City's Frank White. Royals right-hander Rich Gale issued a walk to Phils catcher Bob Boone. Fleet-of-foot Lonnie Smith then bounced a grounder to White's right. White fielded the ball cleanly, but his throw pulled shortstop U.L. Washington off the bag. Royals Manager Jim Frey came out to argue, but everybody was safe.

Pete Rose loaded the bases with a bunt single, and Schmidt strode to the plate, holding that tiny stick of wood in his Popeye arms. Schmidt worked the count to 1-1, then looped a single toward right field, scoring Boone and Smith.

That brought Frey out of the dugout again, and Gale was through for the season. Reliever Rennie Martin got the side out, and the Phils were quiet until the fifth.

Smith led off that inning with a liner to center that he stretched into a double. When Rose flew to center, Smith was on third. Martin then walked Schmidt, and he was through. Left-hander Paul Spittorff made his first appearance of the Series, yielding Bake McBride's run-scoring grounder, and he was in almost immediate trouble again in the sixth.

Garry Maddox led off the Phils sixth with a single but was doubled up on Manny Trillo's grounder back to the mound. Larry Bowa then doubled and scored Philadelphia's last run of the 1980 season on a single by Boone.

By then the crowd was cheering at nearly every pitch, roaring as each Phillie batter came to the plate.

Carlton, meanwhile, cruised along with some fielding help and an overpowering fastball. He walked two men with one out but escaped on a double play initiated by Bowa at shortstop. He yielded his first hit of the game to Washington, who led off the fourth with an infield single, but Washington was cut down in a double play, again started by Bowa.

Bowa wound up initiating a record seven double plays in the Series.

"I didn't even know it until they flashed it on the scoreboard," Bowa said.

"This is the greatest feeling in the world," added Bowa, a target of fan derision earlier in the season after he criticized their lack of support. "We went down the tubes in three playoffs (1976-77-78), and we carried around the label of chokers. There wasn't a guy on this team who choked. We've proven we're a good baseball team."

Carlton had given up only three hits through seven innings, but he started the eighth by walking John Wathan. Jose Cardenal then lined a single to left, and Green stalked to the mound.

"I knew from the first pitch that Steve had it tonight," Boone said. "He was outstanding. He had a good slider, but we went mostly with his power game, his fastball. I think he got tired a little at the end, but overall, he pitched real well."

Carlton left to a standing ovation. He held his head down and didn't even acknowledge the cheering until he touched the bill of his cap before stepping into the dugout.

Enter Tug McGraw. McGraw, who had 20 saves and a 1.47 ERA this year, got White on a popup but loaded the bases by walking Willie Wilson. Washington drove in a run with a sacrifice fly, and the bases were loaded again after George Brett beat out an infield single. McGraw worked the count to 3-2 on Hal McRae, who then fouled off two pitches before grounding out to end the inning.

The drama had not quite run its course, however, for these harum-scarem Phillies. McGraw struck out Amos Otis to lead off the ninth, and the crowd went wild, breaking into several different chants in unison.

But McGraw walked Willie Aikens, who was replaced by

Rampants Fall To Ninth

By The Associated Press
Fayetteville Terry Sanford, headed into its biggest game of the regular season on Friday, has solidified its hold on first place in the 4-A portion of this week's Associated Press high school football ratings for North Carolina.

Sanford, which got 14 of 19 first-place votes from a statewide panel of sportswriters, totaled 178 points, 29 ahead of runner-up Hickory. Sanford plays at home Friday against Division III rival Fayetteville Pine Forest, ranked sixth this week. Both teams are 7-0.

Sanford took the lead a week ago from Greenville Rose and retained it with a 48-25 victory over Fayetteville E.E. Smith. Greenville, second a week ago, fell to ninth after a 12-9 loss to Bertie.

Hickory advanced a notch after improving its record to 7-0 with a 34-7 conquest of McDowell. Kannapolis, a 4-A leader earlier this season, is third this week, followed by Henderson Vance and Greensboro Page.

In the smaller school categories, the leadership remained mostly unchanged from last week.

The top six schools retained their positions in 3A, with all scheduled to play Friday night. Those teams are Lexington, Burlington Williams, Ahsokie, Lincolnton, East Wake and Eastern Alamance. Williams and Eastern Alamance play Friday.

All members of the 3A Top Ten have 7-0 records.

In the 2A-1A ranks, Southwest Guilford remains on top. Robbinville and Fuquay-Varina traded second and third places, with Robbinville four points ahead of Fuquay-Varina. Littlefield and Randleman tied for fourth.

This week are Lee County (10th in 4A); Mount Airy (10th in 3A); and Sylva Webster (eighth), Charlotte Catholic (ninth) and St. Pauls (10th) in 2A-1A.

Gone from the 10 are Goldsboro (4A); West Caldwell (3A); and Swain County, Monroe and Princeton (2A-1A).

Here is how a statewide panel of sportswriters rates top North Carolina high school football teams this week for The Associated Press. Points are assigned on basis of 10 for first-place vote, then 9, 8, 7 and so on. First-place votes are in parentheses.

'Heels Looking For No. 7

Seventh-Ranked UNC Faces ECU Saturday

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It isn't easy to go 7-0 during a football season. The last time it happened to a North Carolina team was 45 years ago when the 1935 team went 8-1. Before that it was 1914 when the Tar Heels went 10-1.

But seventh-ranked North Carolina is doing a lot of not-so-easy things this year. The Tar Heels are 6-0 this season — the first time they have done that since 1948. And they have won nine straight dating back to last year.

Win No. 6 came Saturday against in-state and Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina State. The Tar Heels will try for win No. 7 this Saturday against another in-state opponent — East Carolina.

While the 28-8 score does not imply a close game, North Carolina coach Dick Crum said the game with the Wolfpack was not so easy.

"There are 28-8 games that are easy and there are 28-8 games that are tough. This was a tough one," Crum said at his Tuesday press conference. "It was tough, physical football game. I thought we caught State's best defensive effort of the year. That coupled with some penalties early in the game and it became a punters duel.

"Our defense kept us in the game until the fake punt by Steve Streater. After he scored that gave us good lead to protect."

Streater, a defensive back and punter, faked a punt on fourth down and raced 37 yards to score in the second period. Then the UNC defense recovered an N.C. State fumble on the Wolfpack 17 and the Tar Heels were on the scoreboard again 43 seconds later.

Crum also praised his offense, despite its only having one sustained touchdown drive in the game. He was especially pleased with the performance of tailback Amos Lawrence, who had only 49 yards rushing while his backup Kelvin Bryant ran for more than 100 yards.

"Amos probably played his best game of the year," Crum said. "You have to realize that we had two penalties that cost him 50 yards. That would have given him 99 yards and he probably would have gone over 100. But his blocking was excellent and he graded out very well."

The prospect of facing East Carolina this Saturday in Chapel Hill does not ease Crum's mind. Despite the Pirates' 3-3 record and shaky 1-3 start, he does not expect them to be a pushover.

"East Carolina is a very good football team," he said. "They present a different problem for us because they run the wishbone. We haven't seen the wishbone yet this year. And they have the quickest set of backs we've seen. They had some problems early but they've bounced back.

"We can't overlook this game. Some people assume it's not going to be tough, but I assure you it will be."

Crum was adamant on that point, especially in light of the game with Oklahoma coming up the next week. He doesn't want to look ahead.

"The thing I want our team to do is be prepared for each opponent individually — not to overlook anyone," he said. "That's one thing we haven't done so far this year and I don't want it to start now. Oklahoma is a problem down the road. Our immediate problem is East Carolina."

Crum knows from experience that the Pirates are likely to give the Tar Heels problems. Last year, it took a 47-yard field goal by Jeff Hayes with 13 seconds left to salvage a 24-24 tie in Chapel Hill.

Phils Just Kids Playing A Game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Believe it or not, the Philadelphia Phillies are really a bunch of kids playing a game.

Their cool, calculating image was drowned in champagne Tuesday night after they clinched the 1980 World Series.

The Phillies beat the Kansas City Royals, 4-1 to win the best-of-seven Series in six games, 4-2.

The manager, Dallas Green, and his boss, personnel director Paul Owens, hugged and cried together for several minutes.

The players indulged themselves in the usual champagne bathing and drinking. The clubhouse was bedlam.

The only player not in sight was winning pitcher, Steve Carlton, who maintained his policy of not talking to the media. Carlton wasn't missed as the Phillies let it all hang out.

Shortstop Larry Bowa, who set a World Series record of starting seven double plays, shouted his feelings to the world.

"Everybody said we're smug, overpaid athletes who didn't want to win. We proved them wrong. Gentlemen, I told you so."

Bowa screamed, "There are no more guys to beat. We are the best baseball team in the U.S.A."

The Phillies' shortstop recalled sinking out of Pittsburgh in mid-August, beaten four straight times by the Pirates.

"We were six down in the loss column and could have died. But we went into New York and swept the Mets five straight. That turned the season around," Bowa said.

Green, who has said he doesn't want to continue as a manager, left his position hanging.

"At this point, I'm going to wait before I make my decision. I want to savor this victory," said the manager.

Green wasn't surprised that the Phillies are World Champions. "I told them in spring training that we could win. It just took us time to get our act together. We had some sinking spells... We had some ghosts to put to sleep and we did it," Green said.

Green said the key to the Phillies victory was keeping the Kansas City rabbits, Willie Wilson (4-26), U.L. Washington (6-22), and Frank White (2-25) off base.

Green was asked why he took out Carlton when the ace left-hander got in a little trouble in the eighth. Carlton was pitching a strong game.

"Steve was feathering his fastball a little bit. Lefty and I have a good rapport. He has to be the Cy Young Award winner (in the National League)," Green said.

Phillies third baseman Mike Schmidt was voted the most Valuable Player of the Series. He had eight hits in 21 at bats for a .381 average, two home runs, seven RBI, scored six runs. He batted in the game winning runs Tuesday night.

"I'm in a coma," said Schmidt. "I can't muster up the right words to say how I feel...I hope we get the credit we deserve around the country."

Schmidt was asked how he felt being voted the MVP of the Series.

"It's a great feeling, but it must have been a tough decision," Schmidt said. "I don't know who voted...but there were six guys who could have won. I probably eked through because I knocked in the winning runs."

Schmidt stood and talked with the mob, calmly answering all questions. Someone noted that he was still a cool, calm character.

"I'm just cooperating with you guys," said Schmidt. "I'll pour (champagne) and leap as soon as you leave and I can celebrate with my teammates."

Green, his face beet red, the bubbly stuff dripping from his hair, admitted that he was drained.

"I'm happy for the organization, the players and their families. A lot of little people helped and this is for them too," Green said.

Tug McGraw explained that after the first batter in the ninth inning, he felt tired.

"I felt all shook up," said the usually nerveless reliever. "At this point I tried not to over-throw, but just throw strikes."

pinch runner Onix Concepcion, and gave up consecutive singles by Wathan and Cardenal to load the bases. White then hit a high popup toward the Phillies dugout on the first base side, Pete Rose charging from first and Boone from behind the plate. The ball hit Boone's glove and bounced toward the dugout, where Rose snared it for out No. 2.

"Pete grabbed it so fast, I didn't quite know what to think," Boone said. "I thought Pete had the ball all the way. I was waiting for him to call me off. I was waiting to crash into him and go flying into the dugout. I guess I was using that metal glove again."

Up strode Wilson, who had had a dismal Series. With only four hits in 24 at-bats before the final game, he already had struck out twice. McGraw had him 1-2, and Wilson swung feebly at a low fastball. It was his 12th strikeout of the Series, a record, and by far his most embarrassing moment.

"If you want to say I lost it, you can say that," Wilson said. "I haven't struck out 12 times in six games in I don't know how long."

Thus came the end to the Phillies' most glorious season since they were purchased and moved to Philadelphia in 1883 by Alfred J. Reach. Police with dogs and on horseback ringed the stadium afterward to prevent mayhem, but in the stadium stands and the streets of Philadelphia, the celebration was unbridled.

Green took over for Danny Ozark in August, 1979 and guided the Phillies to their first pennant since 1950 and third in their existence. He inherited a club torn by dissension and player unrest. When he instituted his disciplinarian ways, some players resented him.

"When you change managers, there will always be some guys who don't get along," said Garry Maddox. "I was taken out of games in some situations, and he never even talked to me about it, but I think when two people don't see eye-to-eye, the person who gives in is the one who benefits."

"If I was wrong, I would try to admit it, but Dallas won the world championships, and I have to respect him for that. You've got to make adjustments along the way."

It was testimony to the man who inherited the family name of Dallas and a team that was anything but family.

"We've worked so hard to get here," Green said, "and we've put some ghosts away. The enormity has not gotten to most of us yet. I'm just sort of drained right now."

Green still has not decided whether he will return as manager next season.

When will that decision be made?

"When I wake up," Green said.

Royals: Proud To Get In Series

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Losing the World Series to the Philadelphia Phillies was not as depressing to the Kansas City Royals as their fans would think.

After Willie Wilson struck out, setting a dubious World Series record in the fatal Game 6, the Royals were quicker to reflect on what they had done rather than what they failed to do.

"We're proud to get in a World Series," said Dennis Leonard, who would have started tonight had there been a seventh game.

"We're on of the two best teams in baseball. To come in second out of 26 teams — that's not bad."

Only Wilson, who had a miserable series and put his name in the record book with 12 strikeouts, was uncooperative with the media after the game.

"I haven't struck out 12 times in six games in I don't know how long," he said. "All that is irrelevant. We lost, if you want to say I lost it, you can say it."

The bitter weeping that followed three championship series losses to the Yankees was not in evidence; sweeping the Yankees in three straight games this year may have brought as much satisfaction to the Royals as beating the Phillies would have.

"I think everybody is a little shocked at what happened," said Darrell Porter. "We still feel we have a better team."

"Sure, we wanted to be World Champions, but we didn't do it," said John Wathan. "We have nothing to be ashamed of. There are 24 teams who wish they could have been here."

"We played a good series," said pitcher Paul Spittorff, one of five hurlers Manager Jim Frey used to try and stop the Phillies Tuesday night.

"The thing that will stick out in my mind about the 1980 World Series is that you start two competitive, strong-willed teams that didn't expect to lose. There was no giving up."

"You can't die with this," said second baseman Frank White, the defensive star of the entire series. We're one of the two best clubs in baseball. We have to be happy because we had a great year. Why should I be crushed?"

"You get crushed in playoffs because then everything you've done seems like it doesn't matter," said Hal McRae. "We made a lot of people happy. We didn't do it. But we almost did it all."

"That's the good part. You learn by doing, that's how you grow. It's going to make us a better team next year."

The Royals left the bases loaded in the eighth and ninth innings. In the eighth, on a 3-2 pitch from Tug McGraw, McRae slapped an easy groundout that might have been ball four.

"It could have been," he said, "but I wasn't going to get called out on strikes in the World Series."

Asked if he felt the best team won, McRae hesitated a moment before answering.

"I can't really express my true feelings because it wouldn't sound right," he said. "I'll just say no comment. What beat us was our not holding the leads."

Humble Schmidt Choice For Series MVP Award

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The most important hit for Mike Schmidt in the Philadelphia Phillies' march to their first World Series championship was the one he didn't get.

"It was in the final game of the National League playoffs at Houston," said the reluctant Series hero. "I failed to get the hit that I wanted more than any hit in my life."

It was the eighth inning of the fifth and decisive playoff game, the Phillies trailing the Astros 5-4 with runners at first and third. Schmidt, the league's top home run hitter with 48, strode to the plate.

"I struck out on three straight pitches, looking at the last one," he added. "I went back to the dugout saying, 'Good Lord, what am I trying to do?' I went 0-for-5 in that final game."

"I was trying too hard. I was carrying too much on my shoulders. It was as if I was getting a message from God."

"Del Unser, who was next up, got a hit and we finally won in 10 innings 8-7. I was really humbled."

Schmidt was wearing his blanket of newly found humility when he came to the plate in the third inning Tuesday with the bases loaded.

"I kept saying to myself, 'Keep it in the park, just keep it in the park,'" he said. "I wasn't trying to knock it out of sight."

The slugging third baseman drilled a single to right center, scoring the first two runs in the 4-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals that gave the Phillies their first World Series pennant ever.

Schmidt was a solid choice for the coveted Most Valuable Player award, finishing the Series with eight hits in 21 at bats for a .381 average. He hit two homers and batted in eight runs.

The 6-foot-2, 203-pound powerhouse accepted the award with the cloak of humility he had gained 10 days before.

"I am ecstatic," he said when he received the news at the post-game press conference. "I wish I could chop it up into 25 pieces and spread it around."

"This is not a one-man team or a two-man team. At least six or seven guys could have been voted MVP justifiably. I am honored it happened to me."

"This is a team that has had to grub and claw and fight for every inch it gained. We've done it all year. When the so-called big guys let down, the little guys would pick them up."

Schmidt said he hoped the triumph would forever douse suggestions that the Phillies are an arrogant, uncommunicative team which collapsed in big pressure situations.

"I think the charge that we are a 'choke' team was eliminated at Houston," he said. "This team is not at all the way a few people picture it."

the past, but they have some good backs," Brewer said. "Basically, they're the same type of team Havelock normally has. And they're one team with a lot of tradition going for them."
Then again, however, Farmville is not without its tradition. Still, as Brewer said, "This is definitely not the #1 and #2 teams in the state playing Friday night."

North Pitt
For a quarter the Panthers stayed with unbeaten C.B. Aycock. Then, suddenly, North Pitt crumbled in the face of the Falcon onslaught and the result was a devastating 55-0 loss.

"The biggest thing I can say about a football team over the course of a year is that you either get better or you get worse," Panther coach Pat Smith said. "And we're just getting worse."

"After the first quarter Friday night we did not play well at all. I don't know why, but we've just got to put that behind us."
The loss was the most lopsided of the season for the Panthers, who have lost three games this year by a total of nine points.

"You can think back on games like those and see plays that could have won it for you," Smith said. "But in a game like this you know you were beat by a better team."

"The only thing I'm saying is that we did not battle them. We just layed down and quit."

The Panthers, 1-6 overall and 0-6 in the league, face a similar team physically this week in Greene Central, picked to be among the conference leaders this year but instead have won only one game in seven outings. The Rams, who lost to the Falcons, 9-0, are 0-5 in the ECC.

"They're a much better team than their record indicates," Smith said. "Sizewise, they're larger than we are but if we play ball, it will be good game. If not, it won't be."

D.H. Conley
Improvement is the word this week at D.H. Conley, despite its seventh loss in as many games last Friday to Southwest Edgecombe, 18-7.

But whether the Vikings have improved enough to compete with Charles B. Aycock, unbeaten in seven games and ranked #9 in the state by AP, is a question to be answered Friday night in Hollywood.

Terp DE Gets ACC Honor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Defensive end Mark Wilson of Maryland has been named the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie-of-the-week for his performance in the Terrapins' 11-10 victory over Wake Forest last Saturday.

The 6-1, 194-pound junior college transfer recorded one of the Terps' biggest plays in the contest when he sacked Demon Deacon quarterback Jay Venuto in the end zone for a fourth-quarter safety.

Rec Notes

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer a second five-week fall session of adult tennis classes starting October 27.

Information concerning registration may be obtained by calling 756-9343.

Beginning October 27, Greenville's River Birch Tennis Center will be open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. seven days a week.

"Ain't nobody scared of C.B. Aycock," said D.H. Conley coach Jimbo Walker, whose Vikings will celebrate homecoming this week. "I ain't, and I don't think the kids are."

Scared, no. Concerned, yes. "They're a big, physical team," Walker said. "They just run straight at you with two tight ends and a T-formation. But we don't match up that bad physically."

"And our kids are improving. They played a lot better last week than they had the two weeks before."

Against the Cougars, the Vikings suffered four interceptions, three of which were turned into touchdowns by Southwest, including one that was returned to the DHC 20 with the Vikings down only 12-7.

"It's the same ole' mess," Walker said. "We played them even except for the interceptions. We got down to the two yard line early in the game and didn't score. That hurt."

Still, the Viking defense held the Cougar wishbone to 103 yards in 46 carries — an average of just over two yards a carry.

"We're playing better defense. You can look at the stats and tell that," Walker said. "If we can improve some more this week we could stop them. We've just got to go toe-to-toe with them if we want to win."

Ayden-Grifton
Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls hasn't raised the white flag, but he realizes that his team's battle with powerful Southern Nash in Stanhope Friday will be anything but easy.

"Right now Southern Nash is playing as well as anyone in the conference," Sauls said. "Physically, they are the strongest team in the league."

Stronger than Charles B. Aycock? "Yes, physically," said Sauls, whose Chargers lost to the Falcons, 54-6.

"We will have to play with tremendous effort on every down and try to eliminate our mistakes as we did during our winning streak if we hope to have a chance to win."

Mistakes. Five of them — four fumbles and an interception returned for a TD — cost the Chargers a 20-6 loss to North Lenoir last Friday.

"I felt we fairly outplayed them in the first half, but we lost momentum with a fumble early on the goal line and never regained it," said Sauls, whose club took a three game winning streak into the contest.

"It was a very disappointing loss, especially from the standpoint of our turnovers and mistakes," he said. "We felt the turnovers were unforced, and that's our biggest disappointment."

Perhaps just as disappointing was that the Chargers, now 3-5 overall and 3-3 in the league, managed only six points, despite the passing of quarterback Bernard Riccarelli, who completed 17-of-20 passes (85 percent) for 177 yards.

A victory in Stanhope would erase those disappointments in a hurry. To beat the Firebirds, however, the Chargers must first stop the league's leading rusher, Anthony Crumel, who went over the 1,000 yard mark against Farmville Central last week. It is a task few teams have accomplished this season.

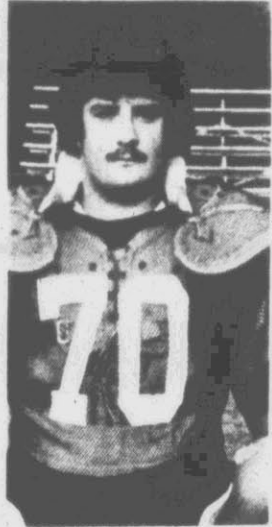

"We're going to have to show some different fronts and have to stunt more than we normally do to try and stop him," Sauls said. "Physically, it's going to be difficult for us to stack up with them one-on-one. But we're just going to have to go out and let the cards fall where they may."

Parade Of Series Records Set

By The Associated Press
Steve Carlton and Tug McGraw, who combined to shut down the Kansas City Royals 4-1 Tuesday to give the Philadelphia Phillies their first World Championship, led a parade of new entries in the World Series record book.

Carlton, who won Game 2 as well as the sixth game finale, became one of the many pitchers to sport a perfect 2-0 record in a six-game Series. No pitcher has posted three triumphs in a six-game Series, although many have done it in Series of other lengths.

McGraw, meanwhile, became the first pitcher to post two saves in a six-game Series since the current save rule was established in 1969. Pittsburgh's Kent Tekulve holds the all-time Series save mark of three, set last year.

And when McGraw struck out Willie Wilson to end it all, it marked the 12th time that the Kansas City speedster had fanned during the Series, establishing a new all-time Series record. The previous mark of 11 was held jointly by Eddie Mathews of the 1958 Milwaukee Braves and Wayne Garrett of the 1973 New York Mets.

Other records abounded, as well. The Royals' Willie Aikens became the sixth player to hit four homers in one Series. Duke Snider did it twice, while Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth, Hank Bauer and Gene Tenace all did it once. The Series high for homers is five by Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees in 1977.

Dan Quisenberry of the Royals became the first relief pitcher to appear in every game of a six-game Series, breaking the mark of four appearances held by Larry Sherry and Gerry Staley. The all-time Series mark is seven appearances by Darold Knowles of the 1973 Oakland A's. Quisenberry also finished six games, tying Hugh Casey's all-time Series record.

Larry Bowa, the Phillies' 11-year veteran, set a new all-time Series record for shortstops by starting seven double plays. Phil Rizzuto of the 1951 Yankees held the old record of six.

Bowa also tied a six-game Series record with three stolen bases, matching the mark set by the Chicago White Sox' Eddie Collins in 1917. Lou Brock holds the all-time mark of seven steals in one Series.

Kansas City's U.L. Washington joined Wes Westrum, Roy Campanella and Brooks Robinson as the only men to hit two sacrifice flies in one Series.

Jose Cardenal endured a record wait before getting into his first World Series. The Royals outfielder appeared in 18 major league seasons before participating in the Series, tying a record held by Washington pitching great Walter Johnson.

The Phillies and Royals combined for a total team batting average of .292, breaking the six-game Series record established in 1953, when the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers hit a combined .290. The all-time mark is .300, set by the Yankees and Pittsburgh Pirates in 1960.

With Wilson accounting for a dozen, the Royals struck out 49 times, tying the six-game Series mark held by the 1944 St. Louis Browns. The Oakland A's of 1973 hold the all-time Series record by fanning 62 times.

By contrast, Kansas City also drew a total of 26 walks, tying a six-game Series standard also held by the Yankees of 1936 and 1951. The Yanks walked 38 times in 1947 for the all-time mark.

Symbolizing their ultimate frustration, however, the Royals left 54 runners on base during the course of the Series, a new six-game record. The 1935 Detroit Tigers and 1944 St. Louis Cardinals shared the previous six-game mark with 51.

The combined total of 16 Series double plays, eight by each team, established a new six-game standard.

The Phillies used 10 pitchers, tying the six-game Series standard set by the 1953 Brooklyn Dodgers. The 1946 Boston Red Sox used an all-time Series record of 11 pitchers.

For only the fifth time in history, both clubs went through the entire Series without getting a complete game out of their pitching staffs. That hadn't occurred since 1974, when both the Oakland A's and Los Angeles Dodgers had to call on their bullpen in every game.

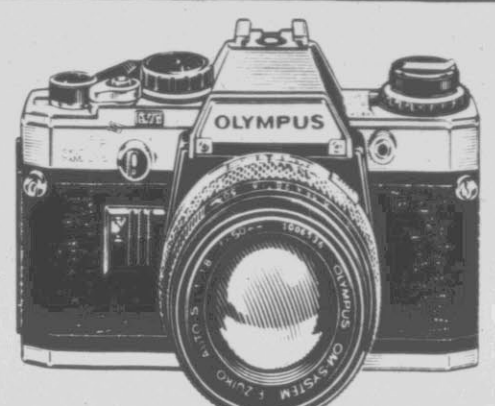

Philadelphia's Dallas Green became the first National League rookie manager to lead his club to the World Championship since Eddie Dyer did it with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1946. In the AL, Ralph Houk led the New York Yankees to a world title in 1961, his first year at the helm.

After a 50-year wait, the city of Philadelphia could finally claim baseball's World Championship. The last Philadelphia-based team to win the title was the Connie Mack-led Athletics of 1930, who beat the St. Louis Cardinals in a six-game Series. Ironically, the Athletics moved to Kansas City for the 1955 season.

The Phillies won their title before 65,838 fans, the largest crowd in Pennsylvania baseball history. The old mark of 65,791 was set in the first game of this year's Series.

It was the first time the National League triumphed in a six-game Series since 1959.

So little money never bought so much SLR

Here's a 35mm SLR compact with features you'd expect from much higher priced cameras. Or never expect from an SLR at any price!

The fully automatic OM10 features "off-the-film" direct light measurement (OTF). It measures the light that actually reaches the film surface during exposures from 2 seconds to 1/1000.

During self-timer operation it beeps and blinks, with super-bright LED.

A viewfinder LED signals full flash charge and confirms correct flash exposures.

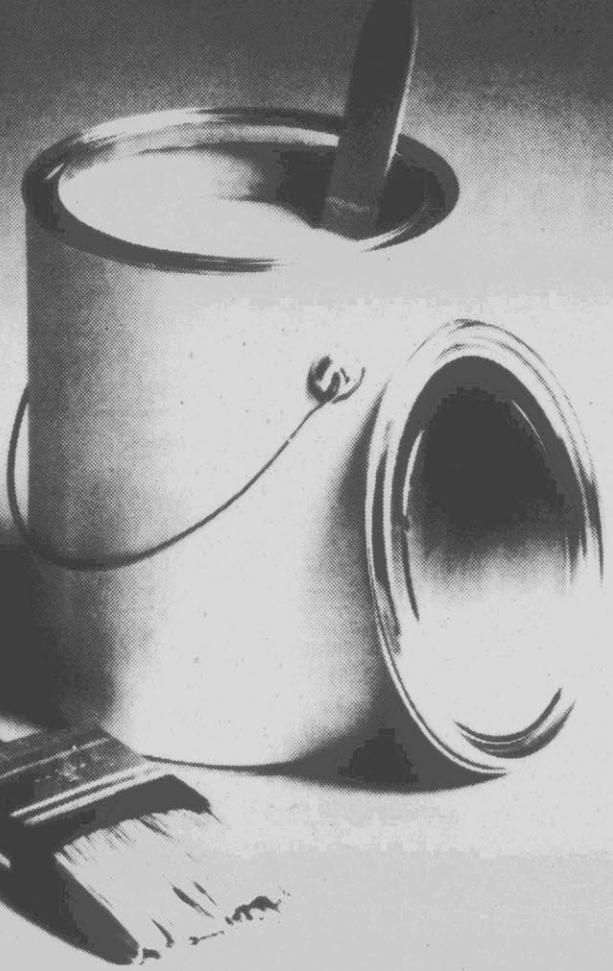

Come in and find out about the many other features—including the OM System of over 300 lenses and accessories.

Take a good look at that price—we'll bet you're as surprised as we were!

The loan that improves your home can also improve your budget.

At Branch Banking and Trust, we call it the Simple Interest Loan. It's designed to save you money when your home needs improvements—like redecorating, an extra room or perhaps some energy saving features. BB&T's Simple Interest Loan is the fairest kind of financing you can get, allowing you to sign a note for only the amount you borrow for the time you borrow it. With no interest added in advance. This means that, instead of paying interest on the principal throughout the term of your loan, you pay it only on the amount you still owe. Which means your interest decreases as you pay off the loan. You can save money by making payments early, or by paying extra amounts at any time. There's never a prepayment penalty. And never a delinquency charge. We are specialists in home improvement and FHA Title I property loans for major improvements. We arrange payments structured to fit your needs.

So visit any BB&T office and tell us what you'd like to do to make your house a nicer place to live. We'll work hard to provide the Simple Interest Loan that'll do the job—without doing a job on your budget.

Nobody works harder for your money.

Long Awaited Close-Up Saturn Pictures Coming

By JAMES J. DOYLE
PASADENA, CALIF. (UPI) — Voyager 1 will race past the giant ringed planet Saturn nearly a billion miles from Earth Nov. 12, send back thousands of pictures and reams of data and then leave the solar system.

The space probe, one of two Voyagers, has been cruising toward Saturn ever since it swept by Jupiter 20 months ago and startled scientists with one discovery after another.

Before Voyager with its two television cameras makes its closest approach to Saturn at 77,174 miles, it will take an even closer look at its moon Titan, the largest satellite in the solar system and the only one with a substantial atmosphere.

Voyager will fly to within 2,500 miles of Titan, which is about the size of the planet Mercury. The moon is blanketed by clouds but scientists hope there will be enough breaks to give Voyager's cameras the first look at the mysterious moon's surface.

Scientists have speculated that Titan's atmosphere could support life, but its prevailing low temperatures of 324 degrees below zero Fahrenheit makes it unlikely.

Voyager 1 is followed by its twin, Voyager 2, which will arrive at Saturn in August of next year and then shoot onward to other encounters with Uranus in January 1986 and possibly Neptune in September 1989.

Voyager 1, however, will be kicked by Saturn's gravity onto a trajectory that will take it eventually out of the solar system and into deep space.

When Voyager arrives at Saturn, the giant planet will be 947,633,145 miles from Earth. It will take an hour and 25 minutes for pictures and data traveling at the speed of light to reach Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

Voyager, under the influence of Saturn's gravity, will be traveling at 68,669 mph when it makes its closest approach to the planet. As it speeds around Saturn, the planet's gravity will hurl it even faster, adding about 3,000 mph to its speed.

Voyager 1 has been sending back about 60 pictures a day of the full disc of the planet since Aug. 22. Before its mission ends Dec. 15, the probe will have sent back about 18,000 photos of Saturn and its six rings and 11 of its 13 known satellites.

Very little is known about the Saturnian satellites, including their total number. Of those which are known and named, their densities indicate they could be solid ice or a combination of ice and rock. Water, ice or frost has been identified on some of the surfaces.

It is assumed that Voyager will confirm the existence of other moons of the giant planet, second only to Jupiter in size.

In Earth-based photos,

Saturn presents a subtle face of glowing yellow, surrounded by bright rings. Its extreme cold causes a haze over its gaseous cloud tops, and the speed of its winds prevents the gigantic storm systems seen on Jupiter.

Winds at the cloudy surface travel as fast as 900 mph and atmospheric phenomena are short lived, according to a JPL spokesman.

Saturn has a volume 815 times greater than Earth but its mass is only 95.2 times greater. It takes 29.46 Earth years for it to orbit the sun once, but a day on Saturn lasts only 10 hours and 39 minutes.

Like Jupiter, Saturn is a huge multi-layered globe of gases with what scientists believe is a small core of rock and metallic hydrogen. The core, twice the size of Earth, is so dense it contains 15 to 20 times the entire mass of Earth.

The rings of Saturn have always held a particular fascination for scientists. As Voyager approaches and then passes Saturn and its rings, it will click off and transmit back to Earth 276 pictures each day.

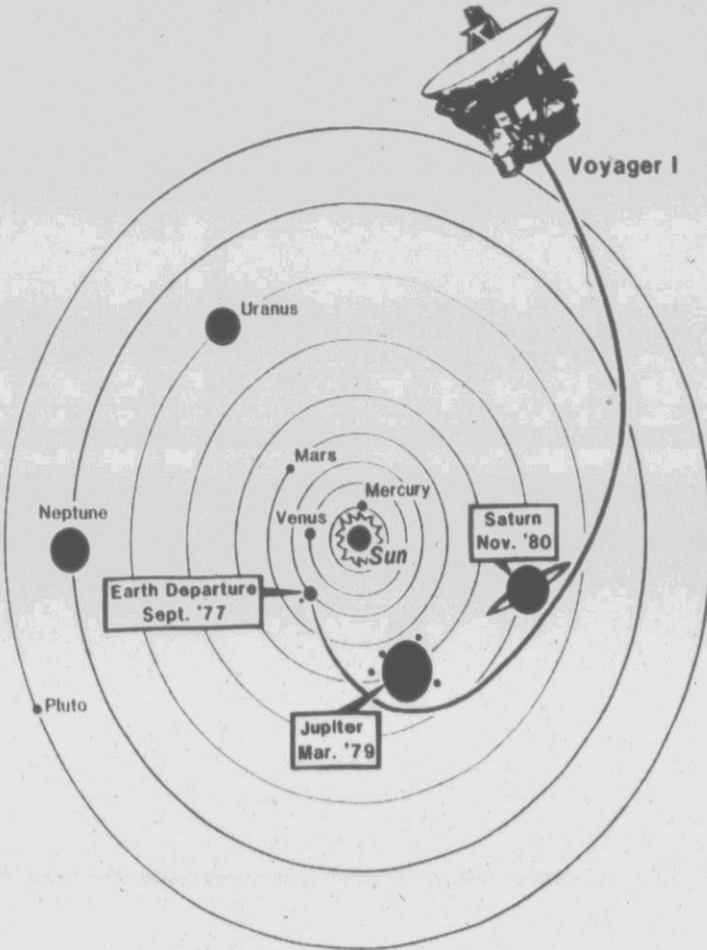

When Voyager 2 arrives next August, its file of photos will add to the total of about 35,000 pictures of Saturn and its system, more than was taken of Jupiter and its satellites in the two passes last year.

The divisions between the rings are believed caused by the orbital paths of small moons. Three satellites were recently discovered to add to the 10 already known and they are believed to follow the orbital paths of two other moons.

The 10 moons earlier identified and named are Janus (whose existence has come into some doubt), Mima, Enceladus, Tethys, Dione, Rhea, Titan, Hyperion, Iapetus and Phobe.

With its 10 instruments, including two telescope-equipped slow scan television cameras, Voyager will examine not only the planet, rings and moons, but also the magnetic and radiation environment of Saturn.

SATURN SCAN — Voyager 1 will race past the giant ringed planet Saturn nearly a billion miles from Earth Nov. 12, send back thousands of pictures and reams of data.. then leave the solar system. (UPI Sketch)

Winning A Nobel Prize Starts Phones Ringing

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Czeslaw Milosz won the Nobel Prize for Literature Oct. 9, it sent reverberations through a small New York publishing house.

Ecco Press, which has a full-time staff of two and produces only 10 titles a year, was thrust into the spotlight because it is the publisher of one of the few Milosz works currently in print in English — a book of poems entitled "Bells in Winter."

"The phones haven't stopped ringing here for days," said Charlotte Holmes, a spokeswoman for Ecco.

"A number of publishers have called, wanting to buy any rights we have to Milosz' books," said Daniel Halpern, editor-in-chief. Ecco wouldn't sell to those firms "who just want to put 'Nobel Prize winner' on the cover," he said.

"Bells in Winter" promises to be the biggest seller in Ecco's 10-year history. Halpern said the first printing of 4,000 copies sold "like we were giving them away," and a second printing of 5,000 is planned.

In addition, Ecco will bring out the little-known Polish writer's revised "Selected Poems" in February or March.

The prize for Milosz — who is admired for his translations of other Polish poetry and his standard text on the history of that nation's literature — sounded a timely note for Ecco Press, too.

Founded as an offshoot of the literary magazine "Antaeus" 10 years ago by Halpern, Ecco Press had lost the essential distribution and warehousing services of a larger publisher.

"Viking, which had distributed our books and warehoused them since the beginning, notified us they were releasing us in December. We contacted every publisher in New York and no one could afford the luxury of carrying a small publisher of such things as poetry," Halpern said.

"At the last minute, Norton — which had been asked before — offered and saved us. The prize solidifies us with them."

The Milosz book was recommended to Halpern three years ago by poet Philip Levine. "We were pretty full at the time, but once I saw

'Bells in Winter,' there was no doubt in my mind that Ecco would publish it.

"The last long poem is one of the most beautiful and intelligent written."

Two weeks before Levine called, Halpern gave a reading of his own poetry at the University of California at Berkeley, where Milosz teaches. "He (Milosz) came to the reading and then introduced himself at a gathering afterward. He was very quiet and stood off in a corner," Halpern remembered.

Halpern said he had first come into contact with Milosz' work while doing a review for the Village Voice.

Oddly, "Bells in Winter" never has been printed in Polish. Halpern said the Lithuanian-born Milosz translated his own poems from a manuscript and sent them to Ecco Press.

He said there is a possibility that the press — which has also gained recognition for its "Neglected Books of the 20th Century" series — will publish a prose work by the latest Nobel prize winner.

"But if he (Milosz) gets a large advance for a book of prose from a larger publisher, I hope he takes it.

Data Processors In Big Demand

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The three job titles most in demand today are all in data processing, according to a survey by National Personnel Associates, a network of management-level personnel agencies. The job titles are programmer, systems analyst and electronic-circuit design engineer.

But I think we can do a better, a quality job with poetry and that he'll return to Ecco," Halpern said.

NBC Maintains Its Pace In Ratings Race With Series

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC set its ratings record with "Shogun" last month and came close to duplicating the effort for the week ending Oct. 19 due largely to four games of baseball's World Series, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

NBC compiled a rating of 25.5 last week, based on audience figures from Nielsen's latest weekly survey, compared to the 26.4 recorded during "Shogun" week. The 25.5 rating was the third-highest ever reported for NBC.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 25.5 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to NBC.

ABC and CBS tied for the runner-up position with average ratings of 15.9 for the week.

NBC finished the 1979-80 season a well-established third. When actors walked off their jobs July 21, delaying production of most prime-time series, ABC and CBS put off the start of fall programming as NBC went ahead with "Shogun."

NBC now has won the ratings competition three times in the five-week period. In the most recent check, the network listed eight of the 10 highest-rated shows of the week, including all four of the World Series games played in prime time.

The portion of Game 5 between Philadelphia and Kansas City broadcast in prime-time Sunday evening — 38 minutes — was the week's No. 1 program, by NBC's account, with a rating of 35.3. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 35.3 percent saw at least part of the program.

Neither ABC nor CBS counted that part of Game 5 in their calculations, but the difference of opinion did not affect the ratings.

In addition to the baseball, which occupied the first four positions in the week's standings, NBC had the third rerun of a Clint Eastwood movie, "The Outlaw Josey Wales," in fifth place, and an episode of "CHiPs" sixth.

ABC and CBS each had one program in the Top 10, ABC with "That's Incredible" in seventh place, CBS with the "Country Music Association Awards Show" in 10th.

Repeats and paid political announcements continued to figure in the ratings, though ABC, unlike CBS and NBC, does not include the political spots in calculating its weekly averages. The distinction has not affected the three-way standings.

Four ads promoting presidential candidates — one for Libertarian candidate Ed Clark and three for Republican nominee Ronald Reagan — were among the week's five lowest-rated shows. The week's least-watched show was an "ABC News Closeup" called "The Apocalypse Game," in 67th place.

Here are the week's 10 highest rated shows: World Series, Game 5, with a rating of 35.3 representing

27.5 million homes; Game 2, 34.4 or 26.8 million; Game 1, 32.9 or 25.6 million; Game 3, 32 or 24.9 million, all NBC; Movie—"The Outlaw Josey Wales," 27.9 or 21.7 million, and "CHiPs," 25.4 or 19.8 million, both NBC; "That's Incredible," 25 or 19.5 million, ABC; World Series, Pre-Game 1, 23.5 or 18.3 million, and World Series, Pre-Game 2, 23.1 or 18 million, both NBC; "Country Music Association Awards Show," 22.9 or 17.8 million, CBS. The next 10 shows: "M-A-S-H," CBS; "Love Boat" and Carter-Mondale Political Spot, both ABC, tie; Movie—"Piranha" and World Series, Pre-Game 3, both NBC; "NFL Monday Night Football," ABC; "Dallas," CBS; "Little House on the Prairie" and Movie—"Other Side of the Mountain," both NBC, and "Fantasy Island," ABC.

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Philo T. Farnsworth — O, suffering spirit — you are wronged again.

Number 302 Green Street, San Francisco, has been refused status as a protected historical site. In 1926, at that forgotten and now vulnerable address, 20-year-old P.T. Farnsworth invented television.

Against the long history of travail suffered by Farnsworth's brain-child, I suppose this repudiation by the city of San Francisco is a minor indignity, a tiny bureaucratic sting. After all, Farnsworth's wonderful invention has been trivialized by generations of programmers, stunted for the lucre it magically yields.

Nothing can be done about all that, of course, which makes so much sadder San Francisco's petty denial of 302 Green Street's proper station in the scheme of things. It seems such a minor effort.

Couldn't just a little more room have been found within the landmark board's protective embrace, in which no less than 103 addresses are now comfortably nestled? The favored ones, including the standard run of old

Litrary Award To Wm. Golding

LONDON (AP) — Novelist William Golding has been awarded Britain's top literary award for his latest book, "Rites of Passage," about life aboard a 19th century ship sailing from England to Australia.

Announcement of the Booker McConnell prize, worth $24,000, was made Tuesday night. Golding, 69, was selected as the recipient by a panel of five judges.

Golding made a name for himself with his first novel, "Lord of the Flies," about boys turning to savagery when stranded on a desert island. Other works include "Pincher Martin" and "The Inheritors."

firehouses, churches, something called The Bank of Lucas Turner and the home of the fire chief, seem no more worthy than 302 Green Street.

Perhaps the rejection is a form of the cultured posturing to which Farnsworth's lovely little box should be accustomed by now. It ain't art.

That's okay. Philo Taylor Farnsworth (1906-1971) will be redeemed. Tonight, a special portion of my own house — previously named The Den — will be rededicated as "302 Green Street South." It is to be evermore maintained in the manner denied it by the city of San Francisco, protected by two painters and Shiloh the Wunder Dachshund. It's a surrogate landmark, yes. But worthy. There,

'Appalled' By Antagonism

NEW YORK (AP) — Famed violinist Isaac Stern says he's appalled by the antagonism between musicians and management that led to the Metropolitan Opera strike and its canceled season.

In comments Tuesday as he accepted an award from the Arts and Business Council Inc. for exceptional achievement in the arts, Stern said: "The kind of mutual respect and work this organization does would have kept that strike from happening. They would not have allowed themselves to get into such an attitude of antagonism. I'm appalled by the antagonism and by the result."

Composer Morton Gould at the piano and actress Phyllis Newman at the microphone led in singing "Happy Birthday" to Stern, who is having his 60th birthday celebrated repeatedly, this fall.

Farnsworth's creation has reigned supreme, flashing forth sitcoms and sports events and banal TV movies like lightning bolts from Zeus.

There, on countless early Saturday mornings, has Godzilla engaged his many foes in mortal battle. There, in a glorious string of miracles, did the young UCLA basketball team march into last year's championship game.

There, in a typical display of foresight and wisdom, did my wife hook me on "Dallas." And there, at my wife's invitation, has Richard Dawson kissed many strange women on "Family Feud."

There did Fred Silverman's "Supertrain" derail and crumple in an expensive heap before our very eyes. There, did the Chuck Barris circus of TV humiliation go joyously unwatched.

Unfortunately, "302 Green Street South" will not be open to the public — security costs, and all that. But the spirit of Philo T. Farnsworth will be daily honored by judicious employment of his remarkable machine.

It's the least I can do.

Uncertain Over Reception To 'Shogun' By Japan Audiences

TOKYO (AP) — Novelist James Clavell says the film version of his book, "Shogun," "turned American television upside down." But he says he is uncertain how it will be received in Japan when it opens next month.

The novel, about an English navigator caught in a Japanese feudal conflict, was turned into a five-part, made-for-television movie that received top ratings when aired by NBC at the start of the fall season.

Clavell, in Japan on Tuesday to promote a shortened version of the film which will open in 150 Japanese theaters next month, rejected Japanese and American criticism that the work does not accurately depict the history of feudal Japan.

"I write about heroes and heroines," he said. "Nobody really knows what went on in 1600, even from the eyewitness accounts." He added: "So far I have not been hanged. But I am waiting."

The bidding: North East South West 1 ♠ 1 ♥ 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT Pass 3 NT Pass Pass Pass Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

We have repeatedly urged our readers to consider the play of the whole hand before committing themselves at the first trick. More points are thrown away at trick one than at any other stage of the game.

The auction was routine and the three no trump contract was quite sound. Unfortunately, South's play was not up to the standard of his bidding.

West led the queen of his partner's suit, which was won by the king. Declarer entered dummy with a high diamond to try the club finesse. Unfortunately, that failed, and West's heart continuation enabled the defenders to collect four heart tricks in addition to the king of clubs.

Declarer was unlucky in that the overcaller was a strong favorite to hold the king of clubs. Nevertheless, he had only himself to blame for failing to make his game. South should have taken precautions to prevent East from taking more than three heart tricks. Since it was most unlikely that East had overcalled on a weak four-card heart suit (a fact virtually confirmed by the opening lead) and no king of clubs, declarer had an unusual—and easily overlooked—play to shut out East's long suit.

All declarer had to do was allow East's queen of hearts to win the first trick! West can continue with a heart to the ace, but the defenders cannot take more than three heart tricks because of dummy's ten. Now declarer can afford to cross to dummy to take the club finesse, and even though it loses, South is assured of his game with four club tricks, three diamonds and two spades.

Carter And Reagan In Past Debate

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a fleeting affair, little noted and long forgotten, but seven years ago in Lake Tahoe, Nev., there was a "debate" between President Carter and Ronald Reagan. Carter won.

It occurred at the National Governors' Conference when Carter was governor of Georgia and Reagan was chief executive of California.

They weren't arguing over arms control or tax cuts but over a fine parliamentary point involving government funds that Reagan was trying to corner for California.

The transcript, recently unearthed by the governors' association, tells little of the political undercurrents beneath the exchange, but it clearly shows Carter scolding Reagan and winning the vote that followed. Of course, it didn't hurt that Carter took the tact that was sure to be popular with a large majority of the voting governors.

At issue was a resolution sponsored by Carter objecting to new rules imposed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to limit state grants under the Social Security Act.

The Nixon administration was trying to hold the lid on the program, which provided $2.5 billion for social services such as day care, drug and alcohol abuse prevention and treatment and programs for the elderly.

HEW sought to do this by targeting the funds toward persons who already were on welfare. Since California — and New York, then governed by Nelson A. Rockefeller — had the country's largest welfare populations, they stood to gain.

This wasn't too popular with the majority of governors, whose states stood to lose.

But none of this was mentioned in the great debate. Reagan, leading the attack because Rockefeller was absent from the closing conference session, opposed Carter on procedural grounds.

Carter had given his resolution to the conference's executive committee, which then handed it over to the human resources committee, coincidentally headed by Rockefeller.

The human resources committee then approved Carter's proposal despite Rockefeller's reservations and it went before the full conference.

Had Carter gone through regular channels and introduced the measure directly to the Rockefeller committee, he would have had to give his fellow governors at least two months notice. By letting the executive committee carry the ball, he got around this rule.

"What we are, in effect, doing is taking advantage of a technicality to adopt a resolution that I believe requires more study and consideration," Reagan said when the issue reached the convention floor.

"I would like to have consultation with my own staff in the Human Resources Department on the various facets of this," Reagan argued. "So I am opposed on that basis and believe that it should come before this body as a separate resolution."

After some parrying among Reagan, Carter and conference chairman Marvin Mandel of Maryland over whether the proposal's introduction had been proper, Reagan added:

"I chose to object on this matter because I believe that this resolution requires more study than any of us have had opportunity to give."

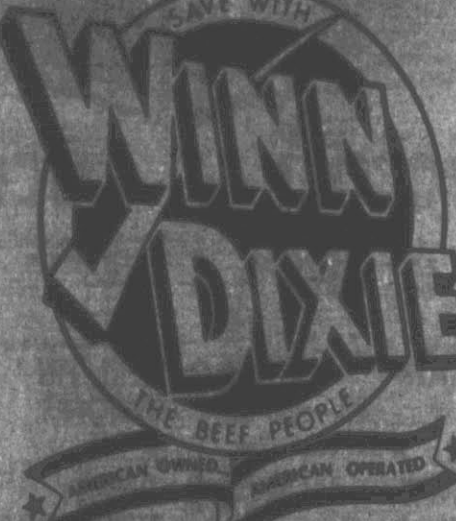

Carter responded that the question already had been "debated in quite some depth" by the Rockefeller committee.

"There were three meetings of the committee held during which time I think the governor of California was not present," Carter said. "He came in on the fourth meeting, and perhaps that is one of the reasons that he didn't have an opportunity to go into it as deeply as some of the other members."

Carter's proposal then was passed, and HEW later abandoned the controversial rules.

Reagan Says Industry To Solve Pinch

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential campaign dialogue on energy is a classic confrontation between a Republican's "free market" instincts and a Democrat's belief that energy independence hinges upon federal intervention.

Simply put, Ronald Reagan thinks private industry can solve the nation's energy problems, and he trusts business to do it without federal subsidies.

Jimmy Carter, on the other hand, pushed for creation of two huge new energy bureaucracies during his first term, authoring a $20 billion program of federal funding to help profit-seeking industry develop synthetic fuel sources.

Symbolizing his objection to government energy programs in general, Reagan has said he would seriously consider abolishing the Department of Energy, established shortly after Carter took office.

More concretely, however, Reagan's anti-intervention attitude has led him to attack federal energy funding programs which industry itself welcomed.

He would support energy research, but not the Carter-launched programs to stimulate commercialization of solar and other "renewable" energy sources or new fuel-saving techniques.

Even the new Synthetic Fuels Corporation established to develop synthetic oil and gas from coal might be limited by Reagan to support of demonstration projects, stopping short of pioneer commercial plants.

Independent John B. Anderson, in his platform, would support synthetic fuel development funding, but link continued support to the resolution of environmental and economic questions. He also supports strong government programs to commercialize alternative energy sources and conservation.

Perhaps the widest split between the candidates shows up in nuclear energy.

Following the March 1979 accident which severely damaged the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., Carter reorganized the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, replaced its chairman, and quietly dropped his support for legislation to speed up the siting of new nuclear plants.

The NRC, an independent regulatory agency which does not take orders from the president, processed no new plant licenses for more than a year, until it had adopted new safety measures in response to the accident.

Reagan has continued to urge "streamlining" the nuclear licensing process at a time when the NRC has become gun-shy of anything that might look like a shortcut past essential safety reviews.

Anderson, on the other hand, favors a moratorium on licensing until the difficult problems of radioactive waste disposal are solved.

Reagan favors reprocessing spent nuclear fuel to recover uranium and plutonium that could be used again.

Carter has blocked reprocessing, arguing that it would increase the risk of spreading nuclear weapons among more and more countries.

Reagan has described that fear as "foolish."

He would offer more "flexible" application of clean air requirements on industry, and allow increased mining and drilling on federal land, opening up natural areas now protected by the government. Anderson has sided with Carter for maximizing environmental protection.

Reagan pledged to consult the coal and steel industries "for help in coming up with reasonable (environmental) rules."

Anderson also supported the "windfall profits tax" on oil companies, which Carter proposed and Congress adopted earlier this year.

Reagan opposed the windfall tax but says he would not seek its immediate repeal because the government needs the money; it should be reduced, however, and might be phased out later, he has said.

Washington Voters May Claim Land

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — They are calling it a "Sagebrush Rebellion" — a measure on this state's November ballot attempting to force the return of 314,000 acres of federal land to the state. But even if it passes, Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus insists no land will change hands.

Andrus, on a campaign swing through Washington state last Friday, said federal officials look on passage of a "Sagebrush Rebellion" measure the way a bank would regard a customer wanting to rescind a collateral agreement on a car the bank was financing.

"Do you think the bank would let you get away with it?" he asked.

If approved by voters on Nov. 4, Senate Joint Resolution 132 would repeal language in the state constitution, required by the Statehood Enabling Act of 1889, disclaiming any state ownership of unappropriated federal lands.

The state would then have to start lengthy legal action to reclaim the lands, and almost certainly the question would be decided by the Supreme Court.

The bulk of the land is in eastern Washington — 55,100 acres in Okanogan County, 37,683 acres in Douglas County and 35,418 acres in Grant County. National forests, wildlife sanctuaries and national parks would remain in federal hands.

Although Andrus is campaigning against the measure, it has gained significant support at the state level, including Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, who was defeated in a primary in her bid for a second term.

In March, Miss Ray said: "The amount of federal land ownership in Western states is something that needs to be rectified. Much of it needs to come under state jurisdiction."

Opposition to the measure comes primarily from outdoorsmen and environmentalists who claim the revolt is a scheme by mining and energy interests to eventually acquire and exploit the property.

State Rep. Hal Zimmerman argued that the proposed constitutional amendment was premature. "We're looking at a great idea — get the federal government out of our hair," but he said Washington state should await the outcome of a federal court case involving the states of Nevada's and Arizona's claim to unappropriated federal land within its borders.

The "Sagebrush Rebellion" idea has gained popularity in many Western states where a majority of the land is federally owned. But Washington is the first state to put such a measure to a popular vote on the ballot.

Only 29.5 percent of Washington is federally owned — compared to Alaska, with over 90 percent; Nevada, 86 percent; California, 45 percent; Arizona, 43 percent; Colorado, 36 percent; Idaho, 64 percent; Montana, 30 percent; New Mexico, 34 percent; Oregon, 53 percent; Utah, 66 percent; and Wyoming, 48 percent.

Says Tea Fights Tooth Decay

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Tea fights tooth decay, says a Washington University professor.

Prof. Memory Elvin-Lewis, whose specialty is microbiology, says scientists have known for years that tea contains fluoride that has anticariogenic potential. Now she has published a paper in the Journal of Preventive Dentistry telling how much is needed to do the job.

The professor writes that parents living in areas where water is not fluoridated should consider putting their children on a regular tea-drinking program: a daily intake of 1½ cups of China black tea or 1 cup of green or Russian tea or ½ cup of oolong.

Ms. Elvin-Lewis says the effects of caffeine in such amounts would be negligible.

Endowment For The Arts Plays Strong Influence

By D'VERA COHN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Livingston Biddle's daughter was seven and he had locked himself away while writing a novel, the teacher at her Philadelphia private school asked the class to describe its fathers' offices.

One by one, the girls detailed elegant and lavish suites for doctors, lawyers, bankers. Finally, Miss Biddle's turn. "My father," she blurted out, "my father works in the ATTIC."

Biddle related that bit of childish wisdom to President Carter three years ago when he applied for his current job as chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, the federal government's culture agency which now is celebrating its 15th anniversary.

"I told him," Biddle recalled with a shy smile, "that I came to Washington to get out of the attic."

There are times when he may have wished he'd stayed.

His nomination was criticized by some as political: Biddle had spent most of the years since his mid-1960s arrival in Washington as a congressional aide. Carter "could not make a worse appointment if he tried," huffed The New Republic.

Just before Biddle's arrival, the Endowment won a "Golden Fleece" award from Sen. William Proxmire for alleged boondoggling — a $6,025 grant for films of artists tossing mile-long rolls of crepe paper from a high-flying airplane and of skydivers parachuting out trailing backpacks of burning gases.

"I see no reason for the federal government to support these activities," said Proxmire.

Biddle reacts serenely to such flaps, which have continued off and on under his tenure.

"Art is always evolving," he said. "What seems terribly controversial today is old hat tomorrow."

"When people say to me that we should be safe and avoid controversy that might hinder our acceptance, I say unless there were controversy about this program it wouldn't be the arts."

He shrugs off accusations of politics tainting the arts, often claiming his political background helps.

"Our funding comes from the Congress," Biddle said. "Congress has perceived this as a growing priority. The reason for this, I think, is that the arts are in the political process."

Biddle's political links go back to his first days in Washington. He drafted the legislation that set up the Endowment in 1965, and served as one of its first deputy directors.

The Endowment began with a $2.5 million budget. Its current $154 million budget mirrors the blossoming of the arts in America.

Where there were less than two dozen state arts agencies in 1965, there now is one in every state and territory. Supporters say more people patronize the arts than buy tickets for professional sports.

In 1964, a recent House Appropriations Committee report said, there were 147 professional dance, symphony, opera and theater groups performing for an audience of 20.7 million.

This year, the report estimated, 700 professional groups will perform for a live audience of 118 million, with more watching on television.

The Endowment's grants go to 105 orchestras, 42 opera companies, 500 museums, 150 theater groups, 63 dance companies, 200 literary magazines and 700 independent presses.

Livingston Ludlow Biddle Jr., 62, lounges back in his chair with the ease of a man on his front porch. His eccentricity of dress — a black checkered suit, blue striped shirt, multi-colored striped tie, longish wisps of gray hair — contrasts to his office's industrial decor. Save for a small, red Calder sculpture and two bright paintings by his artist-wife on the wall, it could be an accountant's.

Born with a famous name identified for generations with Philadelphia banking and the money for a leisurely life, he grew up with season tickets to the symphony and regular trips to European art galleries.

"In 1963, in the United States, the arts were seen as the activities for a very limited number of people, for privileged people, for people with a strong educational background or people in major cities," Biddle said. Now, he said, that has changed. He likes to tell of visiting an arts center in a rundown Hispanic neighborhood in Houston. The building once housed a health clinic, its organizers said, but they discovered "physical well-being wasn't enough. They wanted something for the human spirit."

On a recent visit to Phoenix, he noted a sculpture gallery at the airport. "We're seeing more of that — art in public places. It's opening people's eyes."

Biddle credits the Endowment with being "the major catalyst to bring this about." Without subsidies, museum admission could cost $10.50, a symphony ticket $30 and an opera seat $40, the Business Committee for the Arts has estimated.

Some credit for the arts boom, Biddle says, goes to television.

"Just the fact that people have television sets now," he said, "suggests that someday they'll be tuning them to the arts. Whenever there is a quality program, it attracts a wide audience."

One of Biddle's favorite topics is bringing culture within popular reach, a view that doesn't always endear him to traditionalists.

"Some people say high art and low art," Biddle said. "I say it's all art. The bowl made by an Indian artist... has the same dedication to art involved in its creative birth as applies to a writer doing a poem."

Biddle says he's not neglecting the big museums and others that are traditional recipients of federal money. But half its funding goes to making the arts more available — through a dance touring program, artists in more than 7,000 schools and paintings and sculpture in public places in 37 states.

Firm Sponsors Cash Incentive

NEW YORK (UPI) — The F.W. Woolworth Co. is sponsoring a cash-incentive program for its truck drivers which it hopes will save the company 300,000 gallons of diesel fuel in a year.

The company is offering cash awards to drivers with the best miles-per-gallon record of fuel consumption over a three-month period. The drivers participate in a fuel consumption program sponsored by the rental company from which Woolworth leases its fleet of 123 tractors and 443 trailers. Company trucks are expected to travel 30 million miles this year making deliveries to 1,700 stores in the continental United States.

Flood Insurance Not 'Standard'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Flood insurance is not included in standard homeowners insurance policies, according to the Insurance Information Institute, but is available in every state as well as Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands through a special program administered by the Federal Insurance Administration (FIA).

Priced Back To Dormitories

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Living off-campus became the preferred way of life for many college students in the 1960s and '70s, but one campus life publication reports that the high cost of such housing has driven students back to college dormitories this year.

The publication, Nutshell Magazine, says dormitories are at or close to 100 percent occupied for the 1980-81 college year. In addition to prices, the magazine says, another factor in the return to campus is that many colleges have made significant improvements in the quality of the dorms.

The magazine reports that, also because of costs, many colleges are converting hotels and other buildings to dorm use instead of constructing new buildings.

British Stamps Honor Maestros

LONDON (AP) — Britain's musical heritage has been commemorated by the British Post Office with a set of stamps featuring a quartet of the nation's most celebrated conductors.

Portraits of Sir Henry Wood, Sir Thomas Beecham, Sir Malcolm Sargent and Sir John Barbirolli appear on the new stamps, in tribute to their international reputation for interpretation of music during careers that spanned the late 19th century through the 1960s.

Compare Our Prices!

A FEW WORDS ABOUT FOOD SHOPPING. It's the "Total" cost of your food bill that really counts. Some stores claim to have Greenville's lowest food prices; that is, they have super low prices on just enough grocery items to confuse the issue...then they sock it to you on the meat prices and other grocery items. We don't claim to have the lowest prices on every item in our store, no one can truly make that claim, but we do claim to be competitive on the total cost of your food bill including the meats. (Some stores exclude meat prices from price comparisons. Why? Shouldn't that tell you something?) We will save you money, day in and day out. Our prices are right and our services are Greenville's best. No one can put it all together like Overton's.
