PCC's Cooperative Education

By Mary Schulken
Reflector Staff Writer

"Cooperative education is a means of learning about what your're doing and doing it at the same time," commented Terry Shank, director of the Cooperative Education Program at Pitt Community College. "It provides the student and the employer with what they need, experience and a quality employee, respectively," she added.

Cooperative education at PCC is a program that allows students to be placed in jobs in their field of study, and to receive pay and college credit for their work. This program integrates classroom study with employment and according to Shank, is based on the principle that learning does not confine itself to aacademic achievement but is equally dependent upon practical experience.

"We feel it's just a very unique situation," said Shank. "The main thing an employer asks a person going for a job interview is 'Do you have experience?' The answer co-op students are able to provide is 'Yes, I do, and here it is.'"

October 20-24 was Cooperative Education Week at PCC, and special activities were planned daily this week to recognize the program. These activities, beginning with a proclamation Monday by President Fulford and culminating in an open house for employers, instructors, students and staff on Thursday, included a staff development workshop and a seminar for students on job interviews.

"We want to make the public aware of our program and show then how well it works," explained Shank. "There are many benefits to the community, the student, the employer and the college."

Cooperative Education student Lisa Hobgood feels her participation in the program has broadened her learning experience. "It's taught me to do other things in addition to what I've learned in class because I'm doing something a little different at work," she said. Hobgood is a second-year architectural drafting student and is employed at Greenville Utilities as a draftsperson.

"In school we've mostly done house plans but at work I've been placing a lot of underground lines and plotting apartments on lots," she added. "So I feel it's really taught me some things I coudn't have learned in school." The fall quarter was Hobgood's first quarter in the program.

"I was lucky to get the job," she continued. The co-op program placed her at her work. "There were four of us who tried for the job, but I got it for some reason.

"The main thing is that no matter where I go now I will have real experience in my field," Hobgood said, "and I will know, too, when I finish, whether or not drafting is truly for me. It will make my career choice a lot easier."

The amount of credit earned by students varies according to the number of hours they work and with the major area of study. Students are given a notebook when they begin a job, and required to list three specific objectives they hope to accomplish. An objective such as "to become a better typist" is not acceptable. An objective such as "to increase my typing speed from 50 to 60 words per minute without increasing my error rate" is acceptable, though.

TIME AGAIN — One of the many clocks to be set back this morning as Daylight Savings Time draws to a close is the old City Hall clock in Omro, Wisconsin. Ken Cady, caretaker of the 84-year-old clock, prepares for the change earlier this week. Officially, clocks were to be moved back from 2 a.m. to 1 a.m. this morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Hostage Release Speculation Grows

By The Associated Press

On the eve of the Iranian Parliament's scheduled debate on the fate of the U.S. hostages, an aide to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini confirmed that the legislature would set out its demands during today's session.

Speculation that the hostages might be released soon grew steadily, despite the U.S. government's statements urging caution against too much optimism.

Several Iranian officials indicated the length of the debate and the possibility of new conditions or delays in the final action are not settled.

One sign of possible movement was the announcement Saturday by a government lawyer that hostage Michael Moeller, a U.S. Marine Corps sergeant accused of seducing a 23-year-old Iranian woman, would be released with the other hostages, should the Parliament agree to free them.

The lawyer, Iranian Justice Department investigator Ali Akbar Parvaneh, previously had said Moeller should stand trial regardless of the fate of the others. Sexual relations between unmarried people is illegal in Iran.

In telephone interviews Saturday with The Associated Press, an aide to one Iranian leader suggested debate on the hostages may be put off until after the U.S. presidential election Nov. 4. But a Khomeini aide declared: "The Majlis will meet tomorrow today and announce the conditions."

Khomeini gave the Majlis, Iran's 228-member Parliament, final authority over the fate of the 52 hostages, who spent their 357th day in captivity Saturday.

The secretary to Khomeini's son, one of several Iranian leaders interviewed by telephone by The Associated Press from Beirut, Lebanon, predicted a quick release. He identified himself only as Mr. Faridnia, and said he believed the release would be "soon," because the United States had agreed to demands set earlier by Khomeini.

Asked how they would be freed, he replied: "gradually." He did not elaborate. The U.S. State Department has confirmed reports Iran is considering releasing the hostages in stages, but officials in Washington say they have been presented with no formal plan or offer from Iran and have not reached any formal agreement on the conditions. They also repeated U.S. demands that all the hostages be freed at the same time.

Iraq, meanwhile, warned that any U.S. arms aid to Iran in return for the hostages' freedom could broaden the war.

"The conflict would pose no serious threat to world peace unless the United States openly supports Iran by supplying it with arms in order to secure release of the hostages," Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi said in Baghdad.

In Paris, the editor of the respected weekly newsmagazine Jeune Afrique, which is published there, said in this week's edition secret negotiations on the hostages were taking place in Algeria.

Bechir Ben Yahmed suggested that if the reported negotiations succeeded, an Algerian aircraft would pick up the hostages and take them to Algiers to be handed over to U.S. authorities.

In Algiers, officials said they had no knowledge of any such negotiations. They could not confirm Ben Yahmed's suggestion that Mohammed Bedjaoui, Algerian ambassador to the United Nations, made a secret visit to Iran recently.

A State Department spokesman said Saturday: "We have had, through direct and indirect means, communications with the Iranians, but we are not in a position to discuss any of them."

In Tehran, Ansari Kermani, Khomeini's aide, and several other Iranian officials said they were unaware of any changes in plans to debate the issue Sunday and set conditions, some of which may supplement Khomeini's.

Khomeini last month demanded return of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's fortune, a pledge of U.S. non-interference in Iran, unfreezing of Iranian assets in U.S. banks and withdrawal of all U.S. legal claims against Iran. An often-stated demand that the United States apologize for past ties with the shah's regime, was omitted at that time.

President Carter and members of his administration have warned against expectations of an early release. State Department officials also have denied reports the United States already has reached an agreement in principle on terms for the release.

Quake Hits Mexico

By BRUNO LOPEZ KUPITSKY

OAXACA, Mexico (UPI) — Rescue and survey teams said Saturday Mexico's latest earthquake destroyed or damaged 300 villages, leaving at least 6,000 persons homeless. The death toll still stood at 65.

Army and Red Cross teams were still surveying the damage and searching for victims of Friday's quake that measured 6.7 on the Richter Scale and cut a swath of damage from Oaxaca state to Mexico City 150 miles away.

Six persons were killed in the capital, where the quake knocked down three buildings, damaged dozens of others and touched off three fires in ruptured gas lines.

But the worst hit area was Huajapan de Leon, a town near the epicenter of the quake 150 miles southeast of Mexico City in the state of Oaxaca.

Red Cross officials said 40 persons were killed and 175 injured in Huajapan de Leon and in eight nearby villages.

"It was horrible. I walked around aimlessly in the streets all night," said Silvia Rodriguez, a 50-year-old Huajapan de Leon resident. "Why should I go to my home if nothing was left of it?"

Antonieta Solana, another injured resident, said: "I saved my son's life with my own body. I was buried under the wall. It was terrible."

Health officials reported 3,000 cases of hysteria that had to be treated with tranquilizers.

Army teams sifted through the debris of the city and helped injured victims to an emergency tent hospital set up in the town's main plaza, where hundreds of refugees spent the night.

"Sixty percent of the town (Huajapan de Leon) is uninhabitable and we will have to demolish most of it," said Oaxaca state Governor Eliseo Jimenez Ruiz.

Jimenez said the earthquake affected about 300 villages in his state, demolishing cathedrals and churches built by Spaniards more than 400 years ago, among other structures. About 6,000 people were left homeless, Jimenez said.

The quake was felt in Mexico City and all down the spine of the nation and into neighboring Guatemala, but no injuries were reported in Mexico's southern Central American neighbor.

In Mexico City, the quake rocked buildings for more than three minutes, sending residents and tourists fleeing from their offices and hotels.

In the neighboring state of Puebla, officials said the quake claimed five lives, including two children killed in the collapse of a school house. Fourteen people were killed in other villages.

Pacific Tremors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three more strong earthquakes occurred Saturday in the southwestern Pacific Ocean, the U.S. Geological Survey reported.

There were no immediate reports of damage or injury in the sparsely populated New Caledonia region, which was hit by the first in this series of quakes Thursday, survey spokesman Bob Johns said. New Caledonia is an island about 1,100 miles northeast of Brisbane, Australia.

Survey scientists estimate the magnitude of the most recent earthquake, which occurred at 12:19 p.m. EDT, at 6.6 on the Richter Scale. According to the survey's National Earthquake Information Service, two stronger quakes occurred earlier in the day, one registering 6.7 at 3 a.m. and another with a magnitude of 7.2 at 7 a.m.

The Thursday tremor registered 6.7 on the Richter scale, Johns said.

Quakes of these magnitudes can cause severe damage if centered in populated areas. They also can generate ocean waves called tsunamis. Small tsunamis were reported in the New Caledonia area Saturday, but were not large enough to cause concern, Johns said.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by ground motion recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one whole number — from 6.5 to 7.5, for example — means the ground motion is 10 times greater.

Big Local Vote Is Indicated

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer

Nearly 70 percent of the 31,110 registered voters in Pitt County in 1976 cast ballots in that year's general election and indications are that the upcoming election activities will again generate a heavy turnout.

Registration is up roughly 4,000 voters this year over 1976, according to Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt Board of Elections, who said the busy days just prior to the Oct. 6 registration deadline pushed the county eligibility totals to over 35,000.

Miss Register reported that the elections board submitted a registration figure of 35,147 to the State Board of Elections but she emphasized that the total is still considered tentative and could change somewhat when final figures are in the computers. The figure compares with 32,304 recorded as of July 1 of this year.

The current registration breakdown for Pitt County reflects 28,420 Democrats, 5,454 Republicans, eight registered as Libertarians, 74 as Independent Party affiliates, one Citizens Party voter, and 1,190 registered as "unaffiliated."

The elections official said that approximately 3,000 new registrations were received this year although the figure was affected by a heavy number of cancellations from citizens who registered in other areas and also by deaths that occurred since the last election period.

She said that so far, 345 civilian absentee ballot applications have been received for the Nov. 4 elections, as well as 108 military absentees. In addition, 51 persons voted for president as unregistered voters under the federal election law that allows citizens who have not had a chance to register in their home county to cast a ballot in that county for president only. The deadline for applying for a ballot as an unregistered voter is Oct. 29, Miss Register reported.

Applications for one-stop voting at the elections office, for people who will be out of the county on election day, can be secured until the Oct. 30 deadline, she said.

Miss Register noticed "more interest and much more enthusiasm" among visitors to the elections office as the registration deadline approached. Nearly 300 new registrations were processed on the day of the deadline, as well as close to 200 changes in eligibility data such as addresses. Extended registration hours were observed on the previous Thursday, Friday and Saturday and 300 to 400 names were added to the books during those special hours, she recalled.

"The response to the extended hours was very good," Miss Register observed, adding that she is looking for a voter turnout on Nov. 4 at least as good as the 69.4 percent recorded in 1976.

Afghan Official Denounces Soviets

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The official Afghan delegate to a UNESCO general conference dramatically denounced the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan Saturday in an emotional speech that stunned other delegates and then moved them to wild applause.

Before striding silently from the hall, Akhtar Mohammed Paktiawal said he would return to Afghanistan because his wife and children were still there, even though he knew his remarks might have doomed him.

Paktiawal requested the floor for what everybody expected would be a routine speech on a controversial media resoultion adopted by at a general meeting of the 152 members of the U.N. Educational, Scientific Cultural Organization.

They expected him to take the Soviet line on the resolution that some Western observers fear will further curb press freedoms around the world.

"Afghanistan will fight forever for freedom and self-determination," Paktiawal began. "We have the right to live, the right to self-determination.

"Afghanistan wants friendship with the Soviet Union but unfortunately the Soviets are violating human rights, killing us, oppressing us all over the country," the 45-year-old delegate said.

"Afghanistan is not a free country anymore. It is completely dominated by our Soviet friends and it is fighting against this domination."

Referring to his wife and seven children whom he said he would not abandon, Paktiawal declared he was not seeking political asylum and would return to Kabul to "tell the government the same thing I have told you."

"I will not seek political asylum. I am probably in jeopardy if I return, but I must go back. My wife and seven children and other

Carolina Witch Defines His Faith

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Skip Tarrant, a self-described "witch," says his faith in not exactly a religion, but rather a "religious philosophy."

"Religion is too often something you do at a church on Sunday monring," Tarrant said. "My experience has been that people in our craft tend to take the teachings and apply them to everyday life, as a philosphy."

Terrant, a member of the New Bern-based Church of Wicca, said he is disturbed by media attention and "nuts."

"We tend to attact nuts," he said, "like a magnant attacts iron filings."

A recent seminar in Amarillo, Texas, became a "media event," Tarrant said.

"We got all this flap, all this exposure, in what was suppose to be a quiet, philosophical seminar, he said. "This close to the elections, we were counting on getting very little attention. We wound up with more coverage than we've had in the last 10 years."

The seminar was marred by a bomb treat and a protest by Christians, Tarrant said.

"Some things may or may not be a normal practice of some of the people who attend," he said.

Tarrant himself advocates "hugging trees" as a means of gathering strength. "Okay, I know it sounds freaky," he said. "But it really works — some of the American Indians did it, too. If you're tired, just sit down next to a big pine tree.

"This is the kind of thing we feel has a practical value — but we try to steer clear of psychic soap operas."

Minister Charged With Abandonment

SUPPLY, N.C. (AP) — A local minister arrested on charges of abandoning his family and non-support is being held in the Pamlico County Jail under bond of $25,000.

The Rev. Sam Jones, pastor of Supply Bapist Church, has been using an assumed name, according to Sheriff Leland V. Brinson. Jones, whose real name is Samuel Morris Swindell, has been pastor of Supply Baptist Church six months, Brinson said.

In March 1975, authorities investigated an abandoned vehicle in Carteret County. The vehicle, stained with blood, was registered in Swindell's name. The case remaind stalled until this week, when an informant told Brinson that a man resembling Swindell had recently been living in the Shalotte area. Information on Swindell was fowarded to Brunswich County authorites.

At his home in the Palico County, Swindell was married and the father of six children, Brison said. Swindell is also legally married to a Supply woman, Brinson said.

Brinson said Swindell may be charged with bigamy.

Disabled Tanker Adrift Off Coast

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — A Greek liquid asphalt tanker lost engine power Saturday and was adrift off the Virginia coast in 20-foot seas, but the Coast Guard said all 37 people aboard were safe.

The Asphalt Merchant was headed for New York from Curacao in the Dutch West Indies when a rupture in the vessel's power unit caused the steam generators to fail, Coast Guard spokesman Dick Wehn said.

The 556-foot ship was reported 240 miles east of Cape Henry, Va., in 20-foot to 25-foot seas and northeast winds of 35 knots, Wehn said. The vessel was in no immediate danger and was not taking on water, he said.

The Coast Guard cutter Active was sent to assist the fully-loaded Asphalt Merchant, Wehn said.

The disabled vessel had a diesel generator for electricity, but it was being used sparingly because the ship was low on diesel fuel, he said.

family members are there. If there is democracy in Afghanistan, then nothing will happen to me. If there is no democracy, then something will happen," he said.

Paktiawal, who has a Master's degree in vocational education from Wyoming State Universty in Laramie, Wyo., and still wears his class ring, said he had spoken spontaneously.

"I spoke immediately. My concern only was to make the people of the world aware of what is happening in Afghanistan," he said.

The situation in Afghanistan, occupied by an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops who launched an invasion last Christmas Day, "is getting worse and worse and worse," Paktiawal said.

"We have the problem today and you will have it tomorrow. If you do not care, it will all be lost," he told the delegates in an appeal for UNESCO aid.

"We are waiting for the help of UNESCO to get us out of disaster... The result of the conspiracy against my country will have a result for all of you."

In China, Row In's Are "In"

PEKING (AP) — Drive-in movies haven't come to China yet, but "row-in movies" are making a splash in the lake areas of Hubei province, the official Xinhua news agency says.

Mobile film projection teams set up screens at lakeside and peasants row over to watch films from their boats, the news agency explained.

It said there are about 3,700 such projection teams working in rural areas of the central Chinese province, where film shows are more common than television.

Feature films and films of traditional operas are popular among the peasants, Xinhua said in a report today.

Carter Silent On Hostage Situation

LOOKING TOWARDS MECCA — at least that's what both these camels in the Berlin Garden, West Germany, zoo seem to be doing. Or are they simply yearning for warmer climates? (AP Laserphoto)

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — President Carter steadfastly refused Saturday to add to rampant international speculation about the possible imminent release of American hostages in Iran, turning away reporters' questions at each stop on a campaign tour of Michigan and Ohio.

"No, no news this morning," Carter answered when surrounded by reporters following a meeting with citizens in Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Yes," he replied when asked whether he would let the public knows when he knows something.

"No," Carter shot back when questioned on his arrival here on one report saying that Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie was preparing to fly to Weisbaden, Germany, to greet the hostages.

That's the way the Carter campaign tour went Friday, as well, when the president went to Gloucester City, N.J., then traveled on to Michigan.

The only end in sight was the seclusion of Camp David, where Carter was going late Saturday to prepare for a debate Tuesday night in Cleveland with Ronald Reagan.

The issue dogged Carter at every stop on the campaign trail Friday, and each time he was asked about it, he said he saw no signs to support rumors that the captives would soon be home.

"I don't have any information that that's true," he said when asked about one report that the hostages would be released Sunday.

"I think it would be a mistake to build up expectations like that because we have no idea what the Iranians are going to demand, whether or not we can accept their demands, or even if they are going to make any demands," he said. "I think it's a mistake for us to assume the hostages are going to be released."

Several rumors pointing to movement of the hostages surfaced late Friday.

NBC News reported, quoting a Moslem diplomat at the United Nations, that the hostages would be released in two stages Sunday and Monday. The Associated Press was told by a U.S. employee of a foreign firm doing business with Iran that the hostages were being reassembled from various points for possible release.

The president was asked about the report when he stopped in Gloucester City and then in Wyoming, Mich., a suburb of Grand Rapids, where he met with local residents at a public library.

At the library he said, "We don't have any clear signal from the Iranian leaders."

East Coast Storms Forces Evacuation

By The Associated Press

A storm packing gale-force winds and heavy rain rolled northward along the East Coast on Saturday, knocking out power to nearly 200,000 homes throughout New Jersey, Connecticut and New York and forcing the evacuation of undetermined numbers in low-lying areas.

Ships were stranded in the turbulent Atlantic, coastal roads were closed and homes and buildings were damaged by flooding and winds that gusted up to 75 mph.

Residents of two shoreline towns in Connecticut and a 15-mile wide strip of southern New Jersey on the Delaware Bay were evacuated.

Coast Guard spokesman Mike O'Brien said waves as high as 20 feet along the New Jersey coast were impeding relief efforts by water, and a state police spokesman said low-lying coastal areas in Cumberland and Cape May counties were under at least three to four feet of water.

"A lot of the people are staying," O'Brien said. "People in Cape May, where the water is not quite as high, are just taking their belongings and climbing up high in the house. They seem more concerned with protecting their belongings from looters than anything else."

Two people were reported missing in Milford, Conn., where a rescue boat capsized while evacuating residents in a New Haven suburb. Rescuers used boats to evacuate at least 50 people in Milford and about 40 in Fairfield, officials said.

There were no other reports of injuries.

Hostage Speculation. . .

"I think it would be a mistake to build up expectations like that because we have no idea what the Iranians are going to demand, whether or not we can accept their demands, or even if they are going to make any demands," he said during a campaign stop Saturday in Grand Rapids, Mich. "I think it's a mistake for us to assume the hostages are going to be released."

In New York, Iranian special U.N. envoy Ali Shams Ardakani predicted Friday that the release, if terms are met, could come any time from five days after Sunday's Majlis session to "Allah knows" when. He also denied the possible release was linked to rumored resumption of U.S. arms supplies to Iran.

Some members of Iran's Parliament interviewed during the week stressed the debate may go beyond Sunday, and the Parliament might return the issue to a special committee for further study.

"It is unpredictable because opinions vary in the Majlis," said Ali Akbar Nateq Noori, a member of the special committee, interviewed Thursday.

"Maybe there will be a lot of deputies for or against the plan who would want to talk about it," he said. "The duration of the speeches is not clear and it may take a while,"

An aide to Ayatollah Sayyed Mohammad Beheshti said in a telephone interview from Tehran, he had heard the "debate on the hostages may be postponed."

Asked how long such a delay might be, the aide, who identified himself as Hassan Najaf said, "one or two weeks — until after the (U.S. presidential) elections."

Najaf said, however, that he was not certain the debate would be postponed. He declined further comment.

An aide to Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said he was unaware of any plans to postpone debate and also cast doubt on reports the hostages were being assembled in one location in preparation for their imminent release.

"I don't think the hostages have been assembled," said the aide, who identified himself only as Mr. Maleki. "They are in their usual places."

Iranian militants said they moved the hostages from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to a number of Iranian cities after the abortive U.S. rescue attempt in April. They reportedly were moved again after the Iran-Iraq war broke out more than a month ago.

A spokesman for President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, also reached by telephone in Tehran on Saturday, said he was had no knowledge of a delay by the Parliament and added, "The president's office does not interfere in the hostage issue."

Poll Shows Carter, Reagan In Near Tie

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter and Ronald Reagan are in a virtual dead heat for the presidential election, according to new poll results released Saturday.

A Gallup poll of 1,048 registered voters for Newsweek magazine showed Carter favored by 41 percent, Reagan by 40 percent. Independent candidate John Anderson was the choice of 10 percent, and 9 percent were undecided.

Among those considered likely to vote, Republican Reagan had a 42 to 39 percent lead over Democrat Carter. A Newsweek statement did not tell what percentage in that catagory favored Anderson.

The poll, conducted Oct. 17 to 20, pitted Carter against Reagan in 11 questions on leadership qualities. Carter got a higher percentage in eight.

Reagan led Carter 42 to 25 percent when those surveyed were asked who was "best able to deal with inflation"; 43 to 24 percent on who was judged "forceful and decisive," and 39 to 36 percent on who was seen "best able to get the job done."

Carter led Reagan 52 to 23 percent on who is "best able to keep us out of war"; 43 to 25 percent on who "has the highest ethical standards," and 43 to 28 percent on who "has the greatest concern for the average citizen."

Newsweek said that due to statistical variation, the findings are considered to have an uncertainty of 3 percentage points either way.

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

This is the best time of the year to landscape your home. Shrubs that are planted now will have a chance to establish good root systems before the hot, dry days of summer arrive.

Belk Tyler Garden Shops offer a variety of plants to choose from. The Compacta holly is an evergreen shrub which takes the place of Boxwood in many instances because of its tolerance to hot, dry places. The Helleri holly looks good as a foundation planting where the home is low to the ground. It also makes a nice companion plant with the Compacta. By the way, these two hollies do not have the spines the other hollies have. The Burfordi holly is an evergreen holly which has red berries in the fall and winter. It is an attractive plant that adds color during the winter. All of the above plants make nice foundation plantings. Another plant which adds color to the winter landscape with its red berries is the Pyracantha. It looks good as a specimen plant and when it is espaliered against a wall or fence.

Now is also the best time to plant azaleas and camellias. The Camellia Sasanquas will bloom in late fall and offer color at a time when very little else will. The Camellia Japonicas planted now will brighten up your winter and spring landscape.

Be sure to dig your planting hole at least twice the size of the root ball and add plenty of organic matter when planting any shrubs.

While you are planting your shrubs, don't forget the spring flowering bulbs are in the stores and it will soon be time to plant them.

For a beautiful yard next spring, come by Belk Tyler Garden Shops for all your needs. Don't forget to pick up a soil sample box while you are there.

Yesterday's Idea Designed For Today

Keeping Up Is Farmers' Problem

Industry, ecducation and medicine receive much emphasis in Pitt County, but we never forget how important the farm segment of our economy is.

That value was re-emphasized by the 1978 Census of Agriculture preliminary report released by the Bureau of Census last week.

Pitt's 1,342 farms agricultural products had a total value of $103.4 million for that year, or an average of $77,058 each. That was an increase from the $73.5 million of 1973, but there was an accompanying increase in production costs.

The report showed that crops increased from $59.2 million to $78.9 million over the four years. Livestock and livestock products increased from $7.7 million to $13.3 million and poultry and poultry products increased from $6.1 million to $11.2 million.

But expenses went up: feed from $7.3 million to $10.9 million, petroleum products from $3.8 million to $6.5 million. Estimated market value of machinery and equipment per farm went from $23,151 to $43,196.

It was also interesting that the average age of farmer operators was 49.2 years.

The report shows that farming is holding its own in PItt County. There is a reasonable assurance that farming will always be of great importance to our economy. However, there will be difficult financial times for the farm operator.Income is certainly doing no more than keeping up with rising costs.

Farm Products Are To Be Sold

The United States has negotiated a deal with China for the sale of millions of tons of grain over the next four years.

The administration is hoping the deal will appease farmers who were unhappy over the grain embargos imposed when the Soviet Union invaded Afganistan.

There will be some, of course, who feel that we shouldn't be selling grain to any communist nation.

We feel America is the greatest agricultural nation the world has ever known. If we don't sell our farm products anywhere we can around the world we are missing a chance to improve our exports, and also to help the farm economy.

A Benefit In Fuel Costs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — As the cost of fuels rises, North Carolina should actually benefit from the situation.

Industry hunters with the state's Department of Commerce say they are finding considerable interest in what seems to be the ideal goegraphical location of this state: midway between the industrial Northeast, the affluent markets of Florida and Texas, and the Midwest.

This means that shipping goods can be done with less cost for fuel, and explains why industrial prospects put proximity to a four-lane highway on their list of requirements.

And, Weather

Not too hot and not too cold. That's the result of the state's benign climate which many had always figured as having beneficial efffect upon economic development.

The Research Triangle Institute confirms this in a study of growth trends in the nation.

Largely responsible for this growth is the reversal of the trend toward outmigration — people leaving to find better jobs "up North." Now, both states have inmigration.

A "key variable" is energy cost says Sam Leaman, author of a report on "Cities South" in the 1980s.

"On the basis of total heating cost in winter and cooling costs in summer, the Carolinas are one of the most energy efficient areas in the U.S. Increasing energy costs make this area more attractive to both individuals and businesses," Leaman concludes.

Unionism

State officials and civic leaders concerned with continuation of North Carolina's booming economic growth are quietly casting about for ways to put pressure on local governments to keep the clamps on union activity by government employees.

This is one reason that there has been such widespread negative reaction to the obvious direction of the North Carolina Association of Educators toward unionism. That organization has lost membership recently, has seen the superintendants statewide pull out, and has increasingly come under fire for its emphasis on winning dues withholding and professional negotiation legislation. The NCAE battle to represent teachers employed by the federal schools at Ft. Bragg is taken as a clear sign that the teacher units wants to get deeper into unionization.

Meanwhile, police, fire, and sanitation unions in a number of urban areas have flexed their muscles from time to time. When public officials allow public employees to display union activities, say those concerned, the attitude spills over into the private sector.

This ripple effect is not only a threat to present low unionization in Tar Heel industries, but can hamper recruitment of new and expanded business, some state officials fear.

Chief executives of firms looking about for new locations invariably take a close look at union activities. North Carolina has jealously guarded its right-to-work law, and Commerce Department specialists say a firm stance by government against unionization signals a favorable climate in which government and business can work together for economic advancement.

Some of the experts, when listing factors for industrial growth, mention roads, schools, labor supply, utilities, and such...then privately concede that unions is the chief concern of industrial prospects, over-riding all others. It is not, say these experts, concern with working conditions or pay scales, but a commitment to run their own business without interference from union committees which bolsters this attitude.

Sunday Morning Notes

Somehow things work out. The World Series has become a prime time show on television these days, and certainly is one of the most watched sports events of any given year.

The series is over now, ended after six games by the hungry Philadelphia Phillies.

One wonders, though, what if the series had been going on this week at the same time as the presidential debates? Would the series have been postponed? Or would have the debates?

The debates, after all, are aimed at only we American voters, but the entire world wants to know who won the American World Series.

Oh well, as someone pointed out, with the World Series out of the way America can concentrate on politics for the next couple of weeks. Come to think of it there's some similarity to baseball in the presidential game.

At the beginning of the season there are lots of teams in the running. Gradually they fall by the wayside until usually there are only two major candidates left. (Anderson fans please don't write).

A major difference is as the final game approaches in the presidential World Series, there aren't any pinch hitters or relief runners to come into the game. The principals are all we have.

There are things we want to avoid in the current presidential campaign, such as foul balls, hit batters and sliding into second (that dirties the base runner). Hopefully the participants won't argue with the umpire too much, and certainly we hope they won't crash into the outfield wall.

There are reverse similarities between presidential politics and baseball.

Fans may have noted some spirited debates between players and managers, and umpires. It's not always clear what they are saying but undoubtedly the conversations involved stands on SALT talks, who is best suited to maintain peace and how to solve the energy crisis.

Baseball players have become almost as articulate as presidential candidates.

The Phillies Tug McGraw thus included in his postgame comments, after coming in to pitch and save the final game, the expression " . . . since Moby Dick was a guppy."

Polish Hopes Spread

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's summer of unrest has fostered a low-key but fundamental renaissance of critical thought this autumn.

It springs from the workers' rebellion in August, but it now grips students, peasant and religious groups and even the Communist Party itself.

Polish television is screening films "from the shelves" — critical movies never before cleared by the censors. The "flying university" — a term for underground classes held in private homes — is reviving its lectures, with hopes that this time police won't break up the "unedited" lectures.

Each day, pockets of Polish society are breaking away from official trade unions and professional organizations, claiming their share of the "self-government" offered to factory workers and miners after the August strikes.

Yet along with the air of excitement is a kind of jittery suspense. Poles remember that during a similar social experiment in October, 1956, Nikita S. Khrushchev, then the Soviet leader, sent tanks toward Warsaw, recalling them at the last minute, when he got a promise that the reforms would not go too far.

"Anybody who wrote that the process has ended (after the strikes) would be misleading his readers," one Polish official said. "It is fluid, changing each day, a very dynamic situation that will take months to evolve."

In a crowded room at the Roman Catholic Intellectual Club one recent weekend in Warsaw, three leading groups from the intelligentsia met together for the first time in what they called a spontaneous congress on Polish culture. Two Western journalists were present.

Speakers from the club, from the flying university lecture group and from Dip, a loose organization of intellectuals, some of them Communist Party members, acknowledged their debt to the new union movement for sparking a new, creative

The Helmet Law

(High Point Enterprise)

Two hundred people alive today in North Carolina may have died last year but for a law requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets. As it was, 102 people were killed in motorcycle accidents last year, but according to the National Health and Traffic Safety Administration, motorcyclists who refuse to wear helmets triple their risk of death.

So it is at least statistically conceivable that some 300 North Carolina motorcycle riders could have died in accidents last year.

Yet, several states have recently repealed helmet laws like the one in effect here. The result has been costly.

Deaths of motorcyclists nationwide have increased 46 percent in the last four years, according to a federal study that coincides with the repeal of helmet laws in many states.

Four years ago Congress withdrew the federal Dept. of Transportation's authority to levy sanctions against states without helmet laws. Before then, all states but three inposed such laws. Now, only 17 states, including North Carolina, still enforce full helmet laws; though another 23 require riders under 18 to wear them.

In 10 states, any rider is free to ride a motorcycle with nothing between his skull and any hard surface he may encounter other than his scalp.

Helmet law opponents, of course, base their cries on individual freedom. People wo don't want to wear helmets contend it's their lives at issue.

That is true, but enlightened society should look at a life lost as everyone's loss. No one, then, should have the absolute right to taunt death.

Statistics like those provided in this federal study should encourage states like North Carolina to keep the laws they have on the books.

Fatal motorcycle accidents are increasing in this state, as it is. There were 72 deaths in 1975, when motorcycle registration was 111,000. Last year, while registration had declined to 103,000, fatalities reached 102, state figures show.

As disturbing as that is, it could be worse.

Let's keep our helmet law.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Old Republican Disease

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

JOHN DAY, Ore. — The prospect that economically hardpressed voters of Oregon's sprawling 2nd Congressional District will return Rep. Al Ullman to his powerful taxwriting post in Washington after scaring the life out of him symbolizes the great lost Republican opportunity of 1980.

Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, had offended his constituents not only by inattention but by intimate association with the hated federal leviathan. But aggressive Republican challenger Denny Smith offers no alternative vision. That makes it likely Ullman will squeak into a 13th term in Congress through campaign appearances at sparsely settled crossroads towns in expiation of past absences.

Smith, a decorated Vietnam jet pilot and son of the late Gov. Elmo Smith, is making a plucky first attempt at Denny Smith. Substitute the names Carter and Reagan, and the analogy to the presidential race is evident.

Put more tactfully, that was the message Rep. Jack Kemp of New York brought here in a campaign trip for Smith. At a reception for the party elite prior to a fund-raising luncheon in Portland, Smith's television spots ridiculing Ullman were shown to laughing, applauding Republicans. Kemp neither laughed nor applauded. "I'd like to hear something about Denny Smith," he muttered.

Kemp privately urged Smith to take a positive approach, and then showed Smith what he meant in his luncheon stemwinder. He demanded "incentives for the working men and women of the country" and insisted that "we can have full employment and economic growth without inflation." His familiar formula: the Kemp-Roth tax reduction bill.

Assembled Republicans cheered Kemp's rhetoric but did not buy his program. "This is not a tax-cut state," one party leader informed us. "I don't think you'll find Denny or the other congressional candidates stressing it." Actually, Smith does talk about a 10 percent tax cut in nearly every speech, but it is not the campaign focus. Nor does Smith relate tax cuts to incentive, growth and jobs.

That seems a major mistake. It was Ullman's ill-conceived advocacy of a national value-added tax (since repudiated) that got him in trouble here. His record as Ways and Means chairman shows consistent opposition to tax reduction. What's more, his financially depressed constituents east of the Cascades are not nearly so anti-tax cut as Portland's Republican elite imagine.

At the Mt. Vernon Grange Hall a few miles from John Day, the 16 voters there to hear Ullman were bowed down by ravages of federal taxation. One 40-year-old carpenter told us he managed to earn $20,000 last year only to discover on April 15 that he owed Uncle Sam $4,000 more in taxes. "For the first time, I ask myself: Why work? What's the use?" he said.

Questions directed at Ullman were a litany against the big, bad federal government. Although Ullman's record is decisively more liberal than conservative (ratings of 63 percent liberal last year to 3 percent conservative), he commiserated with them in his friendly, painfully inarticulate fashion.

But whereas Jack Kemp promises growth, Al Ullman slow recovery." He promised some kind of 1981 tax cut but suggested it be limited to stimulating investment: "We've got to get people to save money instead of spending it"

That brought a frown and a question from one woman: If nobody spends, how can we have prosperity? Ullman did not quite answer her. But she and the others present at the Grange hall are voting for Ullman. That includes many (including the disheartened

"Be sure your sin will find you out."

This does not mean, "Be sure your sin will be detected." Instead it means, "Be sure your sin will detect you." Sin is never done with us just because we are done with it. No matter how frantically we try to escape it, we can be sure that the evil which we have done will dog us through every turn of life until it pulls us down and makes us see that every evil act brings evil upon him who does it.

One can hardly call this a comforting reality, but reality it certainly is. If we will look fully in the face of the consequences of an evil act before we perpetrate it, we will seldom go through with it.

The worst punishment of our evil is not exposure to others but to ourselves. It is not the fear that someone may discover how we have acted, but the devastating realization day in and day out that we have done an evil thing. — Elisha Douglass

A Major Housing Issue By 1982?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Housing may not be an issue in this election but it certainly will be by 1982, said a housing association official this week.

By then, he and many others in the industry seem to think, two great pressures could converge: A growing number of young people in need of housing, and a depressed rate of housing construction.

The first factor is a demographic certainty: More Americans will reach age 30 in the decade of the 1980s than in any other decade in history. The second factor, equally important, depends on several variables.

Among the variables: the availability and cost of construction and mortgage money, the cost of lumber (expected to rise in 1981), the affordability of the finished product, also destined to be more costly.

Based on a casual sampling of opinion among builders and lending officials, there seems little chance that a serious situation will be avoided.

A good deal of the solution lies beyond the scope and ability of builders, lenders and regulators. It's because of the way the economy works; periodically it pitches homebuilding into a depression.

To illustrate: Since World War II no less than seven distinct cycles have impacted the industry, all associated with the ups and downs of the general economy. But the housing cycles have been accentuated.

In fact, it is fair to say that when the general economy falls into recession the housing industry plunges into depression. In the mildest of the cycles, housing starts fell 35 percent, in the worst 64 percent.

In the past, it was the down cycle of the general economy that hurt the most, but now it seems housing starts will be hurt even when the economy advances. Why? Because of high interest rates and rising costs.

Most lenders now feel that home mortgage rates aren't likely to drop much below 12 percent over the next few years, and some fear they could advance well beyond the 13 and 14 percent rates that now prevail.

Combined with rising prices, those high financing costs present many thousands of families with a demoralizing choice:

Forego ownership and live in an apartment at steadily rising rent; own a house, but in an effort to meet the monthly payments have no money for vacations and entertainment.

The National Association of Homebuilders estimates that when mortgage rates rise from 12 percent to 14 percent on a mortgage of $60,000, more than 2.5 million potential buyers are priced out of the market.

At 9 percent, a rate that was still obtainable four years ago, the monthly payments on such a mortgage come to $483. It is assumed that an additional $215 is required for insurances, taxes and utilities.

The Homebuilders estimate that an annual income of $33,500 would be needed to support such payments, meaning that 11.8 million families, or 20.6 percent of all families, would be able to buy.

Reagan Vote Among Men

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although more women voted for Gerald Ford than Jimmy Carter in the 1976 election, about as many women voters today choose Carter as choose his GOP rival, Ronald Reagan.

Results of the two latest Gallup test elections show male likely voters choosing Reagan over Carter by a wide 43 to 36 percent margin, but women divided, 42 percent for Reagan and 40 percent for Carter. Independent candidate John Anderson receives the vote of 14 and 10 percent of male and female likely voters, respectively.

Women have consistently been more inclined toward Carter than have men since these trial heat measurements began in March.

The results reported today represent a reversal from 1976 when men voted for Carter 53 to 45 percent and women voted for Ford, 51 to 48 per cent. So if women only had voted in 1976, Gerald Ford would be president of the U.S. at this time.

In most presidential elections the vote of women has not been crucial in determining the winner. This was true in the landslide election of 1972 when Richard Nixon defeated George McGovern and the 1964 contest when Lyndon Johnson beat Barry Goldwater.

If women alone had the vote Hubert Humphrey would have been elected over Nixon in 1968, and Nixon over John Kennedy in 1960.

As shown below, a somewhat higher proportion of women than men now claim affiliation with the Democratic Party and proportionately fewer women say they are political independents. This may account, in part, for Carter's better test election showing with women than with men.

Political Affiliation

	Women	Men
Democrats	51%	47%
Republicans	26	26
Independents	23	27

However, in five of the last seven presidential elections, women have voted Republican. As noted earlier, if women alone had the vote, Gerald Ford would have won the 1976 contest and Richard Nixon would have been the victor in 1960.

More Women Likely To Vote

Voter turnout on Nov. 4 can be crucial in case of a close election, as now appears likely. Historically, only slightly more than half of eligible voters bother to Vote on Election Day. To identify those voters most likely to cast their ballots, the Gallup Poll has developed a scale of voting intentions which has been used during the last seven presidential elections.

The importance of women voters in the coming election is accentuated by the fact that although the same percentage of men and women are considered very likely to vote; there are approximately 9 million more women than men in the total eligible voter population.

Sexes Share Views On Most Issues

Although President Carter enjoys substantially more support from women voters than from men, when asked which of the three major candidates could best deal with each of 19 problems or issues, regardless of which man they planned to vote for, the proportion of men and women citing Carter, Reagan, and Anderson on each issue is about the same.

A somewhat greater disparity is found on which of the two men could best deal with women's rights, with 51 percent of men and 45 percent of women saying Carter would be more capable, while 20 percent of men and 26 percent of women cite Reagan in this regard.

On the key issues of peace and prosperity; men and women are in close agreement that Carter would be more likely than Reagan to keep the U.S. out of war, while Reagan is seen by both sexes as the better man for reducing inflation as seen in the table below:

Peace And Prosperity Issues

Keeping U.S. out of war:	Women	Men
Carter	49%	50%
Reagan	25	26
Anderson	11	13
Don't know	15	11
Reducing inflation:
Carter	28	28
Reagan	43	45
Anderson	12	15
Don't know	17	12
Reducing unemployment:
Carter	30	34
Reagan	42	40
Anderson	12	16

Enthusiasm For Candidates Differs By Sex

When the candidates are measured on which man generates more enthusiasm or personal appeal, aside from their positions on the issues, men hold Reagan in substantially higher regard than Carter while the reverse is found for women, who rate Carter more "highly favorably," as seen below.

Personal Appeal Of Candidates	Women	Men
Highly favorable ratings of:
Carter	32%	23%
Reagan	27	34
Anderson	10	9

Lack Of Fire Training Cost 9 Women's Lives

By NOEL YANCEY

If nurse Doris Jane Anderson had been trained to use a fire extinguisher, she may have saved the lives of nine women, including the widow of novelist F. Scott Fitzgerald.

The pretty graduate nurse testified at a coroner's inquest that the fire she discovered in a diet kitchen at Highland psychiatric hospital in Asheville the night of March 10, 1948 was a puny thing at first — only a three-feet by five-feet metal top table was afire when she spotted the blaze.

"One big bucket of water would have put out the fire, now wouldn't it?" asked Solicitor W.K. McLean.

"Perhaps," she replied.

"But you made no attempt to put it out, did you?"

"No," she answered.

Miss Anderson said it was her first experience with a destructive fire and she was frightened. Besides, she testified, she proceeded to do what she had been instructed to do in case of fire — summon assistance.

But Fire Chief J.C. Fitzgerald felt that summons was too long delayed. He said the fire evidently had been burning 30 to 45 minutes when his men arrived, and "if the alarm had come 30 minutes earlier there would have been no need for anyone losing their lives."

Nurse Anderson testified that she left the fire burning, then came back to make certain her eyes were not fooling her, returned to her station on the fourth floor — up one flight from the diet kitchen. She said she immediately tried to telephone an adjoining building for assistance, but got a busy signal. then she called the fire department and got a prompt answer.

She said she then unlocked several rooms on the fourth floor where patients were confined and lead the occupants to saftey. But when she went to the fifth floor which housed 11 patients, heavy smoke drove her back.

The nine women who died were on the fifth floor. Miss Anderson testified that earlier she had given sedatives to four of the nine women to induce sleep. One of the four was Mrs. F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Zelda Fitzgerald, the daughter of a Montgomery, Ala., judge, married the young author in 1920 shortly after the publication of his first novel, "This Side of Paradise," made him and instant success.

They lived in New York, in Paris, on the French Rivera and became notorious for their madcap life style. His masterpiece, "The Great Gatsby," was published in 1925. She was talented, too, as a writer, ballet dancer and painter. She wrote magazine articles, and one novel, "Save Me the Waltz," published in 1932 showed talent despite its incoherence, But she was also a hopeless schizophrenic and was confined intermittently to sanatoriums after 1930. Fitzgerald spent the summer of 1935 in Asheville, living in the Grove Park Inn, to be near his wife. But he died of a heart attack in 1940, at the age of 44.

Fire Chief Fitzgerald testified that the Fire Department received the fire call at 11:44 p.m. and reached the scene six minutes later. But Police Capt. Harold Enloe got there before the firemen. He said he heard the fire call on the radio in his police car and was at the hospital within three minutes. He said flames were shooting from the roof and he could hear the screams of patients on the top floor — where the nine women died.

Police officer G.C. Wible also was an early arrival. He also estimated

Restoring The Family Homeplace Is Big Job

The 60 year old photographer and historian was restoring a plantation house bought by his great-great-grandfather 150 years ago. The house, long considered a community eyesore, hugs the north shoulder of U.S. Highway 90 near Mount Pleasant in northern Florida. It started life as a one-room building in the 1820s, but Avant's ancestor enlarged it into one of the largest homes in the area. By the middle of the 20th century the house had fallen into disrepair and was being used as a corn crib.

Avant acquired the house from a cousin, promising to restore it. He wanted to give a piece of their past to his two children, David III and Eugenia. "I'm trying to make a workable compromise out of the house — to make it so you can actually live there, but to keep it authentic as to period furnishings," he says.

After consultation with professionals, he began by leveling the floor of the house. "I spent a year underneath the house on my back every Saturday," he recalls. "Sometimes I had a man help me, sometimes I didn't. We used a 16-ton hydraulic jack. Jack up a support beam an inch, brace it, take your jack down, move it four feet, jack up the beam there, brace it."

Next came replacement of the piers on which the house rested, straightening the logs in the walls, replacing the exterior clapboard, disinfecting everything in the building, painting, installing insulation. Avant worked there only on Saturdays; he lives in Tallahassee, 37 miles away.

Some tasks were unexpected. An insulation company stapled roll insulation under part of the house, remembers Avant. "Next day two goats ate the paper backing off the insulation and hooked a great deal of it down with their horns." So, Avant had to put up a fence before replacing the insulation.

One cold October Saturday in 1977, David Avant drove to the property to clear pine trees near the highway. A helper, scheduled to show up, never arrived. Avant cleared the first few trees away by himself easily enough. Soon, he reached a pine with a diseased section. Up he went, fifty feet — until the pine suddenly began falling. "I had a choice — go down with the tree or jump. I let the tree go down part way and jumped — I didn't want to get crushed under the trunk by jumping too soon."

Ninety minutes later Avant regained consciousness. He didn't know the extent of his injuries: a compound fracture of one ankle, and a simple fracture of the other; a broken pelvis; several broken ribs and vertebrae; cuts, scrapes and bruises; severe shock. He couldn't move his legs.

"I tried calling for help, but nobody could hear. One car stopped to read the state historical marker out front, then another, but both drove off without lowering their windows. Then another stopped with four ladies from Fort Lauderdale. They turned off the motor and got out to read the sign and walk around.

"I was out in those briars yelling, 'Help! Help!' and waving my hand. It scared them. They could see this man's hand sticking up and they didn't know who I was or what had happened. They got back in their car and then yelled at me to see what was wrong.

"I was pretty weak — didn't feel like carrying on any long conversation — all I could yell back was, 'Broke leg!' Well, they jumped out of the car and came to help me. Those ladies saved me. Yessir, the ladies — and that historical marker."

His accident slowed Avant down, but didn't stop him. "I wasn't able to get out and do much work, but every evening, when I went to bed, I'd make plans for what I'd be doing when I could."

Today the restored house is the pride of the Mount Pleasant community. Local groups hold meetings there, and neighbors to the property call Avant to report if anything is amiss. He and his family use it as both a hunting lodge and weekend retreat. His preservation work has been praised by professionals, but he's not through yet.

"We'll be rebuilding the missing western fireplace. Then there's the added east room, and we'll have a garden...."

A Male In The Kitchen Probably A 'Last Straw'

The only objection I have to the women's movement is that it has unleashed men on the kitchen. I would rather have a Saint Bernard housed in my living room than Phillip in my kitchen. He hasn't put a dish back in the same place since we acquired more kitchenware than would fit in our drainer. He considers the countertop clean if his hand doesn't stick to it.

But it's the way he screws on jar lids that makes me want to post a No Trespassing Sign on the kitchen door. When he finishes with a mayonnaise jar, it could be put in a time capsule without fear of spoliage. Only someone with a set of power tools could open it.

I have pounded jars on countertops; I have worn holes in enough rubber grippers to retread a set of Richard Petty's tires; I have resorted to prayer; I have banged my head up against the peanut butter in sheer frustration; I have threatened to use his head. Nothing works.

Whenever I complain, he counters with the accusation that I screw the lids on so loosely that when he picks the jar up, it falls to the floor. Now I ask you, what dummy picks up a jar by the lid?

His other justification is that tightly closed jars keep the food fresh.

"I should hope so," I told him the last time he said this, "because it will be months before I can get it open."

"You exaggerate."

"Sure I do. Opening this jar is as easy as opening a tin can. The problem is, I have to do it with my bare hands."

"What are you blaming me for? You can't even open a pop top can."

"That's not true. I'm just not used to the new design."

"You had to use pliers with the old design. Face it, Gail. When it comes to manual dexterity, you couldn't win a contest with Flipper."

"No, I'm merely saying that making a sandwich in this house defies the laws of physics."

He grabbed the jar out of my hand and gave the lid a twist. "There, is's open. And it was easy."

"Of couse it was," I grumbled. "I loosened it for you."

If he hadn't smirked, I might have been able to pass over the incident. But every time I had to wrestle with an air-tight seal that day, his smug expression flashed before my eyes. Before I knew it, I picked up a can opener and stabbed the nearest lid. The next time Phillip opened the refrigerator, he was confronted by a row of jars topped with aluminum foil.

He shook his head. "I can't believe you did this."

"You have a complaint?"

"What do you think? Of course I do."

"Well, I think you had better do with it what you do best in this world."

"What's that?"

"Keep a lid on it."

Answering our questions, these and other voters we met in the John Day area could name nothing Smith stands for — certainly not tax reduction — except attacking Ullman and maybe disrupting the Social Security system. Right-wing Republicans, resembling moths who cannot resist the flame, persist in tinkering with Social Security. Like Reagan, Smith has disavowed any desire to make the system voluntary; like President Carter, Ullman ignores the disavowal. It is, in fact, the centerpiece of Ullman's campaign.

"I think people around here just wanted to scare the pants off Al for ignoring us," a John Day businessman predicted. Ullman's lack of an Oregon home is Smith's favorite TV spot. That this and other Republican challenges, including Reagan's, do not lock in on deeper discontent may save the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee as well as lesser Democrats Nov. 4.

atmosphere. Then they discussed "the unity of Polish culture," questioning the censorship that has deprived them of the works of 1980 Nobel laureate Czeslaw Milosz, an emigre Polish poet.

At the same time in Wroclaw, university students gathered to discuss the progress of the new independent student association. The group was set up in September as a rival to the existing Socialist Union of Polish Students to press demands for more autonomy for Poland's 91 universities.

"The movement started from the workers. But now it's obvious it has spread to the whole society," said Jacek Czaputowicz, one of the organizers of the new student union.

"The people who are the most willing to welcome change are the intellectuals and students. It's always that way. But the whole society sympathizes with what has happened," he added. "It's a movement for more democracy, more autonomy."

The Hostage Case; After 358 Days, Why Now?

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 358 days, why now?

Iran's desperate scramble for arms to fight its month-long war with Iraq and a desire for a more sympathetic hearing in the international community may be major factors behind the decision in Tehran to take up the plight of the American hostages this weekend.

But is the timing, in the waning days of the U.S. presidential campaign, merely a coincidence?

If their 358-day ordeal is indeed nearing an end, it might well help President Carter win re-election, although the Iranians deny that intention.

Quoting Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai that the decision had "nothing to do with November or the American election." State Department spokesman John H. Trattner said Thursday "that's the most eloquent statement I can give you at this time."

And, he added, "I believe it."

Why, then, are the Iranians finally moving on the hostages after almost a year of repeated delays?

According to one U.S. analyst, military forces in Iran may have persuaded the radicals that Iran's need for equipment in the conflict with Iraq should take priority over other considerations.

Whatever value holding the hostages had as an anti-American gesture, reopening trade with the United States is now more vital, this theory goes.

And, according to the official, who asked not to be identified, Iran might feel it can strike a better bargain with the administration before the election than afterward — no matter who wins.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Thursday he expects the hostages to be released "in the relatively near future" because they have served the purposes which their captors had in mind.

But emphasized his belief that the release, if it occurs, will be due to Iran's internal needs rather than Carter administration diplomacy.

He said two of the initial objectives in seizing the U.S. Embassy at Tehran had been achieved — enhancing the position of the radical captors and demonstrating the weakness of the United States within Iran.

According to Kissinger, who has been advising and appearing with Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan, these objectives were met months ago but there was no consensus among Iranian forces to release the Americans until recently.

Although Carter and Reagan were silent on the issue Thursday, independent candidate John Anderson called on Carter to disclose details of efforts to free the hostages. "I don't think we want to feel we have decided the election on the basis of some sleight of hand that has gone on where moves have been made and decisions taken and concessions made that we don't know about when we go into the polling booths," he said.

Within the Carter administration there is a feeling that there are three basic reasons that the Iranian Parliament apparently is ready to act: the war with Iraq has made Iran feel the pinch of sanctions that cut off military spare parts and reduced other essential goods; a desire to erase the country's outcast image; freeing the hostages would remove a destabilizing factor in the troubled Persian Gulf region.

Diplomatically, release of the hostages would enable Iran to start emerging from the isolation that overtook the revolutionary regime in Tehran when the hostages were seized.

That act was condemned by a wide spectrum of nations as a violation of international standards.

The war with Iraq, which has sent Iran reeling on the defensive, key cities encircled, has underscored its solitary status in the world community.

Even some Iranian leaders have sounded a warning.

"This is the first time in history," President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr lamented recently, "that a country is being attacked and is supported by no one in the world. It's total isolation and it should make us think; we have to realize that our words and our slogans satisfy no one but us."

The Carter administration, groping for a strategy aimed at releasing the hostages, has played on this theme of self-inflicted isolation.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie repeatedly has made the point that it is in Iran's own best interest to free the Americans so that the country could go on with its priorities.

Utilities Approves $58 Million CP&L Rate Increase

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Utilities Commission has approved all of a proposed $58 million Carolina Power and Light Co. rate increase to cover fuel costs.

But the commission agreed Friday to soften the impact of the increase by spreading it over an eight-month period instead of the usual four months.

The increase is intended to allow CP&L to recover high fuel costs from last summer under the utility's fuel adjustment clause, an adjustment made three times a year to allow for fluctuating fuel costs.

CP&L's four-month proposal would have meant an average increase of $9.23 per month for the typical customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours from December through March.

The commission's action extended the period through July.

It will decrease the charge for an average customer to $4.62 a month for December through March. Final cost figures for April through July will have to await adjustment for fuel costs from the period running from September through December.

The commission also is considering a $91.3 million — or 13.63 percent — increase in base rates for CP&L that could go into effect as early as December.

That increase would raise the average bill another $5.99, a CP&L spokesman said Friday.

CP&L did not contest the eight-month period. It had asked that 60 percent of the increase be paid in the first four months and 40 percent in the second. Instead, the commission approved a 50-50 split.

The commission also ordered CP&L to submit a review of its procedures for finding safety problem areas as they relate to government orders and for shortening the time nuclear plants must be shut down for maintenance and modification.

Buyers Want Quality Furniture

HIGH POINT, N.C. (UPI) — Fad buying has disappeared and consumers now want quality furniture that offers versatility, fashion and value, say manufacturers at the Southern Furniture Market.

"I think people are much more quality and investment conscious and the furniture trend indicates this," said Suzanne Mathis, vice president of StavOak, which markets contemporary furniture handcrafted from Jack Daniel's whiskey barrels.

"They spend more to get quality and styles that last longer," she said. "The fad buying we saw 10 or 15 years ago has almost gone by the wayside in the young people."

StavOak is only one of 520 manufactures showing in High Point at the market that opened Thursday. Buyers from every state as well as 45 foreign nations are attending the annual fall showing that will continue through Oct. 31.

"People are looking for furniture that does more than what a piece of furniture normally does," said Bob Leonard, vice president-director of marketing communications for Bassett Furniture Industries Inc. "For example, instead of having a conventional china cabinet we manufacture one that can also be used as a stereo center or an entertainment center."

But it's the return to the basics that has dictated the style of furniture this year.

"Basic things never go out of style," Leonard said. "People feel secure in investing in the classics."

Furniture of the 18th Century design, Queen Anne and Sheraton styling is making a comeback as well as upholstry that presents a heavy, plusher, more casual look.

Some fabrics used on the furniture have a corduroy look, Leonard said. Others are of Herculon or a Teflon fabric that requires a minimal amount of care.

Donna Kaiser, showroom coordinator and fabric stylist for Drexel Heritage Furnishings Inc., believes the use of damasks and brocades is increasing. Prints also are taking on a more distinguished character with formal documentary designs and historic Oriental patterns.

"There is a new maturity and sophistication in the marketplace," said Darrell Ferguson, vice president-general merchandise manager for Drexel.

the fire had been burning 30 to 45 minutes when he got there. Firemen said rescue operations were hampered by heavy screens over some of the windows and by chains that kept casement windows from opening wide enough for patients to escape and by shubbery around the building which interfered with the placement of ladders. But the majority of the 29 women confined to the structure, Highland hospital's Central Building, made their way to safety down inside or outside stairways or connecting porches or were carried down fire ladders. Two patients suffered from smoke inhalation and one Mrs. Allison Crater of High Point, fractured both ankles. Dr. Wiley D. Lewis, a resident physician, suffered a severe burn on his left hand while aiding in the rescue work.

Dr. Basil T. Bennett, the hospital's medical director, and other hospital personnel disputed the claims of firemen and police that the fire had not been promptly reported. Bennett said he drove through the hospital grounds after 11 p.m. and saw no sign of fire in the Central Building. Willie Mae Hall, a registered nurse who was night supervisor, testified she went in the kitchen adjoining the diet kitchen between 11:15 and 11:20 p.m. and detected no sign of fire.

After hearing the testimony of witnesses during hearings that lasted several days, and after deliberating for several hours, the coroner's jury reported its conclusion that "there was evidence of negligence but not to the extent of being cupable." With this finding that there was no criminal negligence, Buncombe County criminal authorities closed their books on the Highlands hospital fire. The coroner's jury said it did not know what caused the table to catch fire.

Highlands hospital, then and now, was a highly regarded psychiatric hospital. It was founded in 1904 by Dr. Robert S. Carroll, a nationally recognized psychiatrist who donated the hospital to Duke University in 1944. Duke still operates the institution.

The fire and the deaths of the nine women produced an interesting aftermath. About a month after the blaze and two weeks after the coroner's jury reported, Miss Hall, the night supervisor, startled Asheville police when she asked them to lock her up "because I am afraid of what I might do." She said her dreams were haunted by visions of the nine fire victims who kept complaining that "she had burned them up." When police asked if she had set the fire, she answered that she did not know, she could have but she did not think she did.

By court order, Mrs. Hall was examined by Dr. J. Wesley Taylor, a prominent Greensboro psychiatrist. After talking with the young woman for several hours, he concluded that she had not had "anything whatsoever" to do with the fire. He said she was hysterical as a result of overwork, worry and "too much emphasis on dreams."

Office Dedication

The new Pitt County office building at 1717 West Fifth St. will be dedicated in ceremonies on November 2. An open house will follow the 3 p.m. dedication program.

Renovation of the building — formerly the Pitt Memorial Hospital facility — for use as a county office complex, began in 1978 and was completed earlier this year at a cost of $2.3 million.

Congressman Walter Jones will be the guest speaker at the program, which will be followed by a floating open house, with guided tours of the building, and refreshments, until 5 p.m.

Among the departments and agencies housed in the renovated hospital, and included in the tours are: the County Manager and County Finance officer, Planning Department, Data Processing, Agricultural Extension, Buildings and Grounds, Department of Social Services, and the Pitt County Board of Education, as well as the East Carolina University School of Medicine, which occupies the the building's "A" wing.

The "A" wing contains 33,805 square feet, while the main building housing county departments includes 77,340 square feet.

When the medical school facilities move into the new medical science building now under construction, the county will have a total of 111,145 square feet available in the building

County Manager Reginald Gray emphasized that the general public is invited and encouraged to attend the program and tour.

At the end of the quarter, the work supervisor evaluates the student and assigns him a grade.

"We've used co-op students for the past five years," explained Malcolm Green of Greenville Utilities, Hobgood's supervisor. "And we've had a good experience with every one of them."

Green said he felt the work gives the students valuable experience at basic drafting, tracing and using the leroy (professional ink set). "We have retained one or two of the students, also, as positions have become available," he added.

In addition to the advantages to the student and employer, the program offers the college a realistic involvement with the business community, according to Shank. "We feel it also provides increased stimulation to the faculty to keep up to date on field developments," she said. "This in turn, benefits the community as the college becomes a more valuable asset to the community by constanting changing to meet the needs of the businesses and professionals.

"We hope the program will continue to grow in the next few years," said Shank. "As our community grows, we will be able to place more and more students in jobs that will better fit them to a successful future."

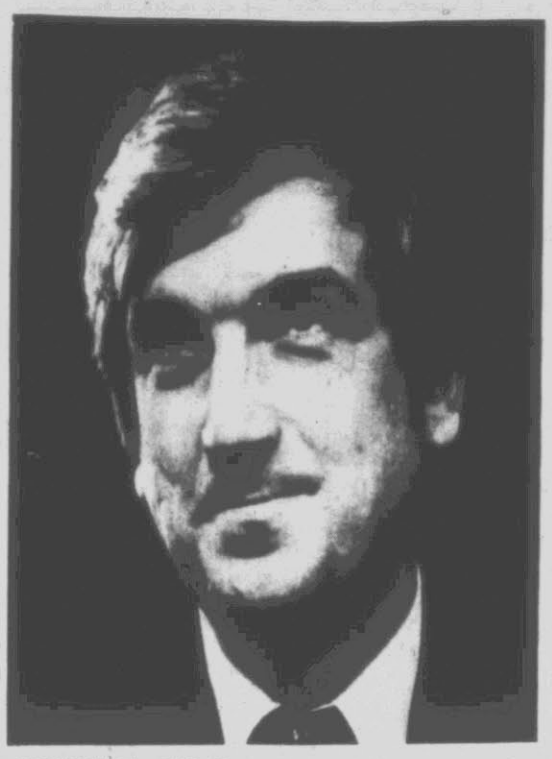
Iran Claims Advances In Khorramshahr



VESCO CASE — White House aide Richard Harden appeared Friday on Capitol Hill before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee investigating an alleged scheme to bribe Carter administration officials in 1977 to stop extradition proceedings against fugitive fianancier Robert L. Vesco. (AP Laserphoto)

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraqi and Iranian forces backed by missiles and artillery battled for the oil refinery center of Abadan Saturday, with both sides claiming they were inflicting heavy casualties. Iran said it had regained "critical positions" in the port city of Khorramshahr.

Iran denied Iraq's claim that Khorramshahr, nine miles northwest of Abadan, was under Iraqi control, and at midday Saturday, the 34th day of the war, Tehran radio reported: "Our military brothers since early today launched ... air operations against the enemy in Khorramshahr and surrounding areas and inflicted heavy casualties on them."

Iranian state television showed film of Iranian troops at the city's main mosque and said they were resisting attacks "with fire and blood." The broadcast did not say when the film was taken.

Iranian units "regained a number of critical positions from the enemy" including government offices, the mosque and a tobacco company building, it said.

Iraq claimed its groundfire chased away two Iranian jets headed for bombing runs against the northern Iraqi town of Kirkuk and its forces sank an unspecified Iranian ship in the Shatt al-Arab waterway at the northern tip of the Persian Gulf. On Friday, Iraq announced its troops had captured Khorramshahr and said the 60 neutral ships trapped in the waterway by the war would be allowed to sail south into the gulf.

Tehran Radio reported that Iran's Supreme Defense Council, including virtually every leader except the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, gathered near the battlefront in southwest Iran's Khuzistan Province and decided to increase Iran's international contacts "to prove Iraq's aggression."

Iran has been isolated from much of the international community, in part by its own suspicion of outside influences, since the fundamentalist Islamic regime came to power in February 1979 following the ouster of the late shah.

The council appointed President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr its president, according to the Tehran broadcast. It said Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, with whom Bani-Sadr has feuded in the past, was appointed vice president.

Bani-Sadr later vowed to remain at the scene of the fighting until the Iraqis were driven back across the border, Iranian television said.

In another development, Tehran Radio reported that 13 Iranian members of the joint Iran-Iraq Secretariat and their families, all of whom were seized in Iraq at the beginning of the war, were released and allowed to travel to Kuwait. The broadcast said they were released after Iran pressed their case at the United Nations.

Tehran Radio said Iran had pushed Iraqi forces 550 yards back from the vital Khorramshahr bridge on the highway to Abadan, but the enemy controlled the city's customs department, railway station, post office and "some residential districts." On Friday Iraq claimed it controlled the bridge.

Reports from both sides said the front shifted closer to Abadan, centering on highways leading to the city. On Friday, Iraq's military command said Abadan was "as good as fallen, from a military standpoint."

The two Iranian oil centers, about midway on the eastern coast of the Shatt al-Arab waterway, have been Iraq's key targets along the 300-mile-long war front since its troops crossed into Iran Sept. 22 after months of sporadic border clashes.

Iranian air and artillery attacks thwarted a narrowing "enemy siege" of Abadan, inflicting heavy casualties, according to a military communique issued in Tehran. Heavy clashes flared on the east-west highway between Abadan and Mahsahr with Iranian forces using surface-to-surface missiles to force open a supply route to the beleaguered city, an Iranian military communique said.

Iran said it mounted a three-pronged helicopter attack accompanied by airborne delivery of ground squads, at positions near the embattled Iranian cities of Dezful, Kermanshah, and points farther north.

In Abadan itself, Iraqi MiGs bombed the giant refinery, which sustained new "air and artillery hits," and destroyed a large part of Abadan's residential area, the Tehran communique said.

A communique from the Iraqi defense command in Baghdad said its forces were chasing Iranian defenders from Khorramshahr down the main highway to Abadan as air battles flared overhead.

Facility To Appeal Insurance Decision

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Reinsurance Facility will appeal a recent court decision describing surcharges on automobile insurance policies as rate increases subject to review by the state insurance commissioner.

The facility, a pool by the insurance companies to insure drivers considered unacceptable risks, also voted Thursday to implement an 8.3 percent surcharge on all auto liability policies that are sold or renewed in the first quarter of 1981.

The state Court of Appeals earlier this week agreed with state officials who challenged the facility's right to implement planned surcharges from 6 to 25 percent. State officials argued that surcharges are actually rate hikes subject to review by the insurance commissioner.

The facility said it will take its appeal to the state Supreme Court.

The facility issued a statement saying the 8.3 percent surcharge would be implemented to recover a $13.4 million operating loss during the quarter ending June 30.

Pope Rules On Role Of Divorced Catholics

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said Saturday that divorced Catholics who remarry outside the church should participate "in the life of the church" but they must not receive Communion unless they abstain from sexual relations.

The pope spoke at the Vatican's Sistine Chapel during a Mass he celebrated with 216 bishops who participated in a month-long synod on family life.

The prelates marked the end of the gathering with affirmations of the permanence of marriage and the church's opposition to artificial means of birth control. They also accused some governments and international agencies of doing "violence to families" by compelling them to practice contraception, sterilization, abortion and euthanasia.

John Paul's comments on divorce and the sacraments came one day after the Canadian delegation said the synod had recommended "a new and far-reaching study" to consider allowing remarried Catholics to take Communion.

Current policy allows divorced, remarried Catholics to attend Mass, pray and go to confession. But the administration of sacraments is not allowed unless the second marriage, which is not recognized by the church, is without sexual relations.

The pope, speaking in Latin, told the bishops that the remarried Catholics "are not to be considered separate from the Church."

"By virtue of their baptism (they) can and ought to participate in the life of the Church by praying, by hearing the word, by attending the Eucharistic celebration of the community and by fostering charity and justice," the pope said.

However, the pontiff continued, the remarried Catholics cannot be admitted to the sacraments unless they "live in a manner which is not opposed to the indissolubility of marriage," i.e. they must remain celibate.

"He (the pope) is not approving it (the bishops' recommendation)," said Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, who headed the U.S. delegation to the synod.

"The pope is simply reaffirming the traditional church stand," said a Vatican-based U.S. priest who asked not to be named.

The Canadian delegation said the synod also called for "continuing research toward a new and full presentation" of Humanae Vitae, the 1968 encyclical of Pope Paul VI reaffirming the church's opposition to all forms of birth control except the rhythm method of periodic sexual abstinence.

John Paul called "singularly fruitful" his first synod, an assembly of bishops convened every three years to help shape church policies.

He commended the bishops for their "accurate examination of doctrinal and pastoral questions which certainly needed such scrutiny."

The bishops presented the pope with 43 propositions reflecting the majority views of the closed-door sessions. The pope may accept, reject or modify the proposals, which were not made public.

The bishops' eight-page "Message to Christian Families in the Modern World" was read during the Mass. It reaffirmed the indissolubility of marriage and the ban on contraception contained in Humanae Vitae.

But the prelates also expressed compassion for Catholics who have trouble accepting "the difficult but loving demands" of Christ in all phases of family life, including matters concerning birth control and divorce.

"We are fully aware of the frailty of our common human condition," the bishops said. "If because of human weakness one does not live up to these demands, there is no reason for discouragement."

The message continued, "In no way do we ignore the very difficult and trying situation of the many Christian couples who, although they sincerely want to observe the moral norms taught by the church, find themselves unequal to the task because of weakness in the face of difficulties."

Says Legal To Fire Navy Gays

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that the Navy has a right to dismiss homosexuals to "protect the fabric of military life."

"A substantial number of naval personnel have feelings regarding homosexuality...which would create tensions and hostilities," the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in its ruling Friday that upheld a Navy regulation.

John Vaisey, attorney for one sailor who has acknowledged homosexual conduct, said the ruling "perpetuates the hypocrisy of the military."

He also said the ruling could give recruits "a way out" of the armed forces by assuring their explusion if they say they have practiced homosexuality.

Corruption Uncovered In Commissaries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Widespread corruption reaching the highest civilian employee levels has been uncovered in the central purchasing agency for the Army and Air Force commissaries, the Los Angeles Times reported Saturday.

The fraud, bribery and kickback scandal is centered on the Dallas-based Army Air Force Exchange System — the seventh largest retailer in the nation. The scandal has led to 24 convictions and more indictments are expected next week, the newspaper said.

A joint FBI, Internal Revenue Service, Justice Department and Air Force task force has investigated about 80 employees, more than one-fourth of the procurement personnel at the Dallas agency.

The focus of the investigation is millions of dollars in alleged gifts and kickbacks from sales representatives seeking favorable contracts, according to a federal investigative report not yet released, the newspaper said.

New Jersey Senator May Be Indicted

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., is expected to become the first U.S. senator indicted on charges stemming from the FBI's Abscam investigation when grand jury findings are returned next week, his lawyer says.

The FBI undercover investigation of alleged influence-buying has already resulted in charges against six members of the House of Representatives and several other public officials.

Two congressmen — Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., and Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C. — have been convicted of Abscam-related charges. Abscam is a codeword for an FBI investigation in which undercover agents posed as representatives of Arabs seeking official favors.

Claims Convicts Politically Well Informed

By MARK SCHWED

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — There's a fair number of tough guys — and women — for whom home is a cramped and littered cell in one of Tennessee's 16 prisons. Campaigners are learning it is also tough to sell them on a presidential candidate.

Convicts attending political forums offered behind prison walls are surprisingly well-informed, according to campaigners for President Carter, Ronald Reagan, and John Anderson.

Deputy Correction Commissioner Robert Morford, whose "off the cuff guess" is that up to 4,000 prisoners requested voting applications, agreed with the campaigners' assessments.

"The average convict has a lot more time to read than the average citizen does," Morford said. "Of course, being physically isolated from their community, inmates of normal intelligence often try to learn as much as they can on what's going on outside. It's a method of coping with the social isolation."

The prisoners' right to vote — possibly for the first and last time in Tennessee's Nov. 4 election — has been upheld by the courts. Campaign statisticians are reluctant to write off the 6,200 adult inmates across the state for obvious reasons.

Because prisoner voting is a touchy situation, you won't hear candidates proclaiming, "I've received a great endorsement today. The members of the Lifers Club at the Tennessee State Prison have given me their full support."

Sam Watridge, media spokesman in Tennessee for Ronald Reagan's campaign, said to his knowledge, no official from the Republican's campaign has visited the prisons.

But a Reagan spokesman has debated the issues recently with supporters of independent John Anderson and President Carter inside at least two state prisons.

The so-called political debates have been held at the women's prison and main prison in Nashville, and several other state facilities, with inmates turning out in good numbers.

Tight security applies even to spokesmen for the politicians. They must be thoroughly searched and have to pass through four or five massive cell blocks before reaching the room where the debate will be held. Several guards stand by in case of trouble.

"I'm not afraid at all. I almost feel too comfortable," said Jude Smith, 43, Carter's "prison spokesman." "People are people. I've got the feeling that it's more dangerous sometimes driving on the street or the expressway."

Smith, a credit union manager, said he was surprised at the "intelligence" and enthusiasm of the prisoners attending the political forums.

"They really impressed me," said Smith, who doesn't think all prisoners should have the right to vote. "When I go to other rallys outside the prison, I usually get one or two questions. At the prisons, each one of them wants to ask two or three questions."

George Thomas, 31, who deserted the Democratic ranks to support Anderson, recently visited the Tennessee State Penitentiary for Women, where he, Smith and a Reagan supporter competed with a Clint Eastwood movie for an audience.

"If all sessions I had were like that one, I would actually be happy," said Thomas, a South Central Bell employee. "They didn't ask any run-of-the-mill garbage questions you hear from the general public. They went straight to the heart of the issues such as abortions, funding for colleges and capital punishment."

"In some respects, they were better informed than most of the people I go in front of," said Thomas, who hasn't made up his mind on whether prisoners should be allowed to vote.

"Most are concerned about state and local issues. Others want to get something off their chests," Thomas said. "There is one great similarity: they are all convicted prisoners. Therefore, they have very strong views on the prison system. I tell them that's more of a state and local politics issue.

"But they get a lot out of it, much more than seeing a face from the outside world," Smith said. "I promised them I would be back."

N.C. Funds To Bauman

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., who is charged with soliciting sex from a 16-year-old boy, has received a $2,000 campaign contribution from a North Carolina-based conservative group.

The contribution was made by the Congressional Club, an organization founded by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who was nominated for vice president by Bauman at the 1976 Republican convention.

Raleigh attorney Tom Ellis, chairman of The Congressional Club, said the organization made the contribution to Bauman because of his long-time conservatism.

"We don't endorse what happened, but we certainly appreciate what he has done for conservative causes," Ellis said Wednesday.

At this year's Republican convention, Bauman was among leading conservatives who spent several hours with Helms while Helms was attempting to decide whether he should drop his opposition to George Bush as the party's nominee for vice president.

Bauman later introduced Helms to the convention when Helms gave a brief speech.

FIVE PERFORMERS . . . Saxophonist Brad Foley will appear in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday, October 27 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. He will be assisted in his program by (left to right) Antonia Dalapas, soprano, Donna Coleman, pianist (seated), Anne Searl, flutist, and Patricia Foltz, pianist. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

Foley Recital Monday

Brad Foley, saxophonist and a member of the ECU School of Music faculty, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday, October 27 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

He will be assisted by pianists Donna Coleman and Patricia Foltz and soprano Antonia Dalapas, all School of Music faculty members, and Anne Searl, a local flutist.

Foley will perform a program of transcriptions and modern compositions for soprano and alto saxophone. Compositions to be performed are: the J. S. Bach Sonata No. 2 in E flat Major and selections from three Bach cantatas; Villa Lobos' "Fantasia;" Joaquin Nin's "Wachterlied;" Charles Koechlin's "Epitaphe de Jean Harlowe;" sonatas by Alec Wilder and Edison Denisov, and Rudy Wiedoeft's "Valse Erica" and "Saxophobia."

Before joining the ECU faculty last year, Foley taught woodwinds at Austin State University, Texas, and at Butler University's Jordan College of Music.

Foley is active as a recitalist and soloist with bands and orchestras, and will direct a saxophone clinic at the N. C. Music Educators Convention in Winston-Salem in November. The ECU Saxophone Quartet, which Foley directs, will also perform at the convention.

PROGRAM CORRECTION

The performance by the East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble at 8:15 today will be held in Wright Auditorium on campus, not at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall as stated in the article appearing in Friday's issue of this paper.

Ellen Kaner Flute Recital Scheduled

Ellen Kaner, a graduate student of the School of Music, ECU, will give a flute recital at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, October 29 at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the campus.

She will be accompanied by Brenda Miles, piano and harpsichord; Barbara Salter, cello; Michael Elliott, flute and bass; Angela Boone, flute; and Mark Shelton, percussion.

Compositions for her program are: "Trio in C for Two Flutes and Cello" by Haydn; the "Concerto in D" by Vivaldi; Hue's "Fantaisie;" the andante and rondo from Doppler's "Two Flutes and Piano;" "Three Romances" by Schumann; Martin's "Ballade;" and Bolling's "Javanaise" from "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano."

Currently a graduate teaching assistant in flute at ECU, Ms. Kaner holds the bachelor degree from Yale University.

The recital is free, with the public invited to attend.

The senior recital by John Jones, tuba, previously scheduled for October 29, has been cancelled.

All persons interested in poetry are invited. Those bringing manuscript poems are asked to bring several copies.

Wild Foods Tour Set

ATLANTIC BEACH — The idea of edible wild foods, to many people, conjures up visions of foul-tasting greens, eaten only to sustain life in an emergency situation. That's too bad, for there's good reasons to become acquainted with the edible fare of field and forest.

To acquaint interested persons with wild foods available in coastal (and other parts) of North Carolina, a Fall Edible Wild Plant Walk will be held beginning at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, November 2 at the Marine Resources Center, Bogue Banks, near Atlantic Beach.

Mark Joyner, educational coordinator at the center, will conduct the walk through the maritime forest. Each participant will be given a guide to the plants discussed, describing what parts are edible and how to prepare them.

The program is free and open to everyone, however pre-registrtion is required. To pre-register call the center at 726-0121.

Wild foods are an excellent source of vitamins and minerals. Including wild foods on the menu can also be an effective way to economize on food costs. Searching them out further has the advantage of putting people more directly in touch with nature.

Dried leaves of many wild plants, such as the native goldenrods and yaupon, produce delicate flavored teas. Other wild plants — cattails, for example, produce pollens which, without further preparation, are suitble as protein-rich flours. Some, like acorns from oak trees, which are high in protein and fat content, must be boiled to remove the bitter tannin in their cells.

People planning to take the walk are advised to wear good walking shoes and to bring along suitable clothing for the weather.

SAMPLING BERRIES . . . Mark Joyner, educational coordinator at Marine Resources Center, Bogue Bank, shows a visitor how to recognize edible berries. Joyner will lead the Fall Edible Wild Plant Walk at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, November 2. Reservations for the walk can be made by calling 726-0121, and pre-registration is required for this free wild food sampling trip through the maritime forest.

Scenes From Operas To Be Presented

Students in the ECU School of Music, as well as area singers, will perform in the East Carolina University Opera Theater presentation of scenes from four operas on two evenings, Friday and Saturday, October 31 and November 1, with curtain time at 8 p.m.

Performances both nights will be at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. Tickets, available at the door, are priced at $1.00.

A scene from Act I of Prokofief's "The Love of Three Oranges" opens the program. Roles and performers in this opera are: Prince Arlecchino, Douglas Newell; Trauffaldino, Michael Elliott; and two choruses ("empty heads" and "comedy lovers") sung by ten singers who also appear in other roles. Ann Yates will accompany.

The second selection on the program will be a scene from Act II of John Phillip Sousa's "El Capitan." Roles and performers are: Don Medigua, Constantine (Dean) Peters; Princess Eulalia, Stephanie Scoville; Isabel, Teresa Guion; Estrelda, Cheryl Holder; Inez, Beth Carter; Don Cazarro, Alan Jones; Pozzo and Scaramba, both James Farlow; Nevado, Douglas Newell; and ladies of Princess Eulalia's Court, Angela Boone, Alice Bowler, ValerieSegraves and Ane Wegwart. Carolyn Sue Bell is accompanist.

In Mozart's "Don Giovanni," the third opera, with a scene from Act I (following intermission), those performing are: Don Giovanni, Alan Jones; Zerlina, Beth Carter; Donna Elvira, Susan Jones; Don Ottavio, Jeffrey Krantz; and Donna Anna, Patricia Hiss. The accompanist is Alisa Wetherington.

The fourth and final scene in the evening's program is scene from the prologue of Verdi's "Giovanna D'Arco," with Jacqueline Carnes as Giovanna D'Arco; Charles Moore as Carlo VII; Clyde Hiss as Giacomo D'Arco; and the entire Opera Theater membership performing as the chorus of voices. Ann Yates accompanies.

A SCENE . . . from the "Love of Three Oranges" has Teresa Guion as Isabel (center) and Stephanie Scoville (right), as Princerss Eulalia, bringing a smile to the face of Constantine (Dean) Peters as Don Medigua in John Philip Sousa's opera, "El Capitan." Scenes from this and three other operas will be presented at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights, October 31 and November 1 at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. Tickets are priced at $1 and will be available at the door prior to curtain time. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

Business Items At Sheppard

The fifth and last article in this series about the business materials at Sheppard Memorial Library concerns the sources of statistical information available.

— "Weekly Business Statistics" — is a weekly summary of business statistics on unemployment, business failures, finance (currency in circulation, Federal Reserve Bank system, assets and liabilities of large commercial banks, average bond yields, and average stock prices) and quarterly statistics on general business indicators such as national income and product, personal income, disposition of personal income, new housing starts, value of building permits, value of construction contracts, and new mortgage loans.

— "Survey of Current Business" — is a monthly cumulation of the 2,500 different series of information in "Weekly Business Statistics" giving statistics for each of the previous 12 months plus a survey of the general business situation. Articles on topics of current importance are also included.

— "Business Statistics" — is a biennial survey of business indicators from 1947 to the current year.

— "U.S. Industrial Outlook" — primarily contains the outlook for 200 industries with projections for 1984. Other sections describe the large economic picture which underlies the projections for the various industries; the climate for small business in the 1980s; and the profits, investments, and financing in manufacturing and trade during the years 1978-80 and rank selected industries by real growth prospects during the years 1980-1984.

— "Editor and Publisher Market Guide" — is an annual publication which gives data on every market in which a daily newspaper is published in the United States and Canada. Data for the various towns and cities include total and per household disposable income, retail sales, transportation, banks, principal industries, principal shopping centers, and the types of retail outlets.

— "Monthly Labor Review" — is a monthly statistical report on employment, unemployment, turnover rate, hourly and weekly earnings by industry; spendable income; Consumer Price Index; Product Price Index, and productivity data. Also included are survey articles on some aspect of labor such as safety or industrial relations and special research reports on such topics as energy, laid-off workers, or the disabled worker.

— "Handbook of Labor Statistics" — is an annual cumulation of the "Monthly Labor Review" plus additional statistical information in such areas as consumer expenditures, family budgets, and occupational injuries and illnesses.

— A comparable publication to the "Monthly Labor Review" just for North Carolina is the "State Labor Summary" which is a publication of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina. The "Area Labor Market Newsletter" is a monthly report of the local Employment Security Commission office which gives statistics for Pitt County.

— The U.S. Bureau of the Census in the Department of Commerce produces an economic census which is published for each state every five years. The library now has most of the 1977 series for North Carolina which consists of the "Census of Manufactures," "Census of Wholesale Trade," "Census of Retail Trade (for North Carolina and the major retail centers in the state), "Census of Service Industries," and "Census of the Construction Industry." The data are catregorized by the state in general then by county and city by the kind of business. Information such as number of establishments of a particular kind of business, sales, receipts, payroll, expenditures, and number of employees is given.

— Another publication of the Census Bureau is "County Business Patterns" for North Carolina. Just as the emphasis in the economic censuses is on the kind of business, the emphasis here is on the county. Using this source, one can find the kinds of businesses in a given county and the number of employees and payroll for a particular kind of business in that county.

Awards Tickets

RALEIGH — November 12 is the deadline for reserving tickets to the 17th annual N. C. Awards presentation and dinner to be held in the Raleigh Civic Center at 7 p.m. on November 24.

At this annual event awards are presented to North Carolinians for distinguished achievement in the fields of fine arts, literature, public service and science.

Tickets to the dinner are priced at $17.50 per person. To reserve, write: Office of the Secretary, Dept. of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N. C., 27611 — or call 733-4867.

Birthplace Festival Set

GOLDSBORO — From 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, November 1, the Charles B. Aycock Birthplace State Historic Site north of Goldsboro will be the setting for free festivities, including traditional crafts demonstrations, country clogging and musical performances.

Morning activities include a 10:30 fireplace cookery and demonstrations of weaving, and making of hand shingles by Charlie Smith, who makes shingles for historic restorations across the state.

Performers include — Norwayne Jr. High School cloggers, 11:30 a.m., cowbell playing by Mrs. James Rose, 12:30 p.m., the Charles B. Aycock High School Band and drill team at 1:30 p.m., Goldsboro's Third Century Singers at 2:30 p.m., and the Buck Swamp Kicking Cloggers at 3 p.m.

Those attending are encouraged to bring picnic lunches. The large site can easily handle lunch crowds. Trained guides will be on hand to lead tours of the site, which include the original Aycock farmhouse, several outbuildings and a one-room schoolhouse.

Charles B. Aycock, who lived from 1859 to 1912, served as governor of North Carolina from 1901 to 1905.

The historic site is located on U.S. 117 between Pikeville and Fremont, north of Goldsboro.

Maritime Conference

RALEIGH — A conference designed to identify and preserve North Carolina's maritime resources — both human and material — will be held in Beaufort on Friday, October 31.

The first-ever Maritime Heritage Conference will be held at the Duke Marine Laboratory and will feature statewide and nationally-known maritime historians and preservationists.

Among those to speak at the day-long conference are author David Stick, who will discuss the scope of North Carolna's maritime history and the extent of the proposed undertaking; Judith M. Spitsbergen of Hampton Mariners Museum, who will outline activities in North Carolina to date; and Captain Harry Allendorfer (USN, Ret.), who will give the luncheon address on the National Trust Maritime Preservation program.

A 3:30 p.m. tour of Hampton Mariners Museum and boatshop will conclude the day's program.

Persons interested in attending the conference may contact Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner Street, Beaufort, N.C., 28516, telephone 728-7317; or the Division of Archives and History, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C., 27611, telephone 733-4763.

GALLERY TALK

RALEIGH — A gallery talk entitled "The Reformation and Counter-Reformation" will be given at 2:15 p.m. today by docent Elizabeth Reid Murray at the N. C. Museum of Art, 107 E. Morgan Street, Raleigh. Admission is free.

A TRIO OF PRE-COLUMBIA WORKS OF ART . . . A collection of about 100 small pieces of Pre-Columbian Art is going on view at the Gray Gallery, ECU, today. A reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. inaugurating this exhibit, along with exhibitions of prints from the senior portfolios of former students and works from a gradudate student traveling show. There is no admission, and the public is invited to the reception.

Pre-Columbian Art Is Well Represented

New Shows At Gray Gallery

The Gray Memorial Gallery on the East Carolina University campus has scored high again — with an outstanding collection of Pre-Columbian Art being shown jointly with two primarily local exhibitions, one of prints drawn from ECU alumni senior portfolios, the other, work by ECU graduate students recently exhibited in the N. C. Museum of Art Traveling Exhibition Service.

These shows go on view today, with a reception open to the public (no charge) from 7 to 9 p.m.

The Pre-Columbian Art, while limited to smaller pieces, is nonetheless an eye-filler and constitutes a rare opportunity for work from old American Indian cultures to be seen. Work by unknown artists of Mayan, Incan and other Indian civilizations are represented — and the scope of work shown encompasses ceramics, fabrics, and small stone carvings.

About 100 pieces of Pre-Columbian Art are in the show. Some are utilitarian objects, many are ritual objects related to religious and funerary rituals. The well known characteristics of Pre-Columbian art — it's primitive power, it's bold and often sophisticated delineation of human and animal figures, and the marvelous techniques those artists of centuries past had knowledge of — all these things are manifest in this fascinating array.

Traces of original paint remain on many pieces, and their survival to this day can frequently be attributed to their having been interred in burial sites.

The assembly of this collection has been made possible by the generous loan of items from Duke University, pieces in the Anthropology Department at East Carolina University, and loans from private collectors.

— The exhibit of prints from the senior portfolios of former ECU art students will, for many viewers, bring back memories of past shows on campus and at the Greenville Museum of Art where some of these works have been seen previously. It's good to have this chance to see them again.

— In the third part of the joint exhibition opening today, the work being shown represents a "return home" of graduate student art selected earlier to be included in a Graduate Traveling Exhibition assembled by the North Carolina Museum of Art's Traveling Exhibition Service and circulated throughout the state during the past spring and summer.

The alumni prints and traveling show art, admittedly, is typical of collegiate exhibitions seen locally in recent years — and are certainly worthy of a second viewing.

It is the showing of Pre-Columbia Art, however, that makes this an exhibit that should be taken in while there's an opportunity to see work of this caliber without having to travel to Raleigh, Norfolk or Washington.

Gray Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily Mondays through Fridays, and 1 to 4 p.m. on Sundays (except on occasions when an exhibit opens on Sundays), and closed on Mondays. (If the gallery is closed during these hours, off-campus visitors should ask at the Art Office for arrangements to be admitted to the gallery.)

Jerry Raynor

Has Work In Two Shows

Clarence Morgan, artist and faculty member in the School of Art, East Carolina University, has a one-man show opening on Monday and is also to be featured in a second show soon.

Approximately two dozen paintings and collages by Morgan will go on view in a one-man exhibit opening Monday, October 27 at Seigfried Gallery, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio. This show will be up through November 8.

Work by Morgan will also be seen in an exhibit, "Afro-American Artists: North Carolina USA," scheduled to open in early November at the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh.

Morgan has been a School of Art faculty member since 1978, and teaches painting and drawing at the university.

Piedmont Crafts Fair

WINSTON-SALEM — More than 125 juried members of Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc., will be exhibiting and selling a broad range of contemporary and traditional craft work in the three-day 1980 Piedmont Crafts Fair.

The fair is being held in Winston-Salem at Memorial Coliseum, 2825 Cherry-Marshall Street on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, November 7, 8 and 9. Hours on Friday and Saturday are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m.

Crafts being represented include more than 40 craftsmen in clay; 27 in fiber; 20 in metal; ten in wood, and lesser numbers in printmaking, blown glass, stained glass, leather, basketry, photography, and book-binding. In all instances, booths will be maintained by the craftsmen themselves.

Admission to the fair is $2 for adults, $1 for senior citizens and students through high school age. Customers may leave and re-enter all day on a single ticket.

Last year more than 15,000 visitors came to the fair from 35 states and from three foreign countries, and nearly every city and town in North Carolina was represented.

Permanent Collection On View

A couple of years or so have passed since the last full use of exhibition space at the Greenville Museum of Art was devoted to show a representative portion of the museum's permanent collection.

Since the size of the permanent collection grows by several pieces each year, and the exhibition space remains the same, for the time being there is no possiblity of displaying for public view the entire collection.

The museum's director, Mary Anne Pennington, has chosen wisely from the collection, including some of the poorer works along with some of the better works in the collection to give an honest overview of the strengths and weakness of the collection. Paintings, prints, sculpture are shown in the two galleries, with Jugtown pottery and other smaller pieces displayed in the hallway case. The newly painted walls of the South Gallery make an amazing difference in bringing out the highlights of paintings being shown in that area.

One of the most striking impressions in this exhibit is how well art by local and regional artists fare when compared to works by nationally and internationally known artists. In several instances an exciting interplay is provided (as in the case of Roxanne Reep's color filled painting in close proximity to Louise Nevelson's flat construction in unpainted wood and black sprayed cardboard).

Contrasts in early and more recent work of a particular artist is also possible in a few instances — i.e., a series prepared jointly by Paul Hartley and Gerald Johnson of historic places in Williamston a number of years ago, and a large painting by Hartley of recent vintage.

Some day in the future, hopefully, it will be possible to show the entire collection of the Greenville Museum of Art at one time. Until then, the occasional display of a representative cross-section of the collection is a rewarding experience that local residents should not miss — chances are they will be pleased with the riches that belong to them as the public who are the owners of this fine collection.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays; 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays, and 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays, closed Sundays and Mondays.

The statue, like many works in the permanent collection of the Greenville Museum of Art, was purchased with investment proceeds from the Rachel Maxwell Moore Foundation.

Moratoc Show Opens Nov. 2

WILLIAMSTON — A reception to honor the opening of an exhibition by two artists, Jane Perry and RoseMary Furstenberg, will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, November 2 at Moatoc Arts and Craft Shop in Moratoc Park in Williamston.

The work by the two will remain on view for the month of November. The public is invited to attend the opening and to meet the artists.

Legendary Blues Band Played Here Thursday

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer

A little bit of Pinetops, and a little bit of Portnoy, Jones, Smith, and Myers, and what have you got? A whole lot of blues — Legendary Blues, that is.

The Legendary Blues Band, formerly The Muddy Waters Blues Band, brought some of those "legendary" sounds to J.J.'s Music Hall before a blues loving crowd Thursday night.

Having left The Muddy Waters Blues Band this past June after a combined musical relationship of more than forty-five years, The Legendary Blues Band is strictly a road band now, and they seem to love every minute of it.

While playing with Muddy Waters, members of The Legendary Blues Band have performed in practically every state in the U.S. and more than twenty-five foreign countries. They have appeared at Carnegie Hall, The Kennedy Center, Radio City Music Hall and in worldwide festivals including Montreaux Jazz Festival — Montreaux, Switzerland 1977; Grande Parade du Jazz — Nice, France 1977, 1979; New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival 1976, 1978, 1980; and Capitol Radio Jazz Festival — London, England 1979.

Performers including Bob Dylan, the Rolling Stones, Johnny Winter, B.B. King, Stevie Wonder, John Belushi, Dan Aykroyd, and George Benson have appeared on stage with members of The Legendary Blues Band.

"It feels so good to do our own thing," said Calvin Jones, bass. "Sure, we got to see the world and play with many great performers, but we also lost our own identity as musicians. When you're always playing someone else's stuff, it's easy to get lazy — lazy in the sense of developing your own style and doing new things."

"We want to let people know that we're still around, and strangely enough, this is our first trip to the South — where blues began," said Jerry Portnoy, harmonica and business manager.

"We love playing in the South," smiled Pinetops Perkins. "But we're never sure what kind of reception we will get." Pinetops said that people just need to relax, listen, and be receptive to different styles of music. "They're going to hear some blues tonight," he said.

Headed by the famous Pinetops Perkins on piano, other members of The Legendary Blues Band are Jerry Portnoy, harmonica; Calvin Jones, bass, and Willie Smith on the drums. Louis Myers, guitarist, was a special guest.

"Willie was with Muddy for nineteen years, and Pinetops was with him for over eleven years — that's a long time," said Portnoy. "Muddy has another band now, but he will never be able to replace us." "But," he added, "we're much happier on our own."

Blacks File Suit

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A suit has been filed against the North Carolina State Board of Law Examiners by 11 blacks who failed the state bar.

In the suit filed earlier this week in Wake Superior Court, the plaintiffs contend the examiners are "arbitrary, unreasonable, discriminatory and capricious" in grading the exam.

Appointed by the council of the state bar, the board of law examiners licenses attorneys, sets regulations for admission to the bar and administers the bar exam.

Three of the plaintiffs graduated from North Carolina Central University Law School, while the others received their degrees from Duke University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the University of South Carolina, Howard University and Georgetown University.

Except for 1979, the number of North Carolina Central law school graduates who passed the state bar exam has declined during the last decade, creating demands for improvement at the predominantly black school.

Figures released last month showed that 23.6 percent of the North Carolina Central graduates who took the bar this summer passed. At Duke, 83.3 percent passed while 85.9 percent passed at UNC-Chapel Hill. Figures for the law schools attended by the other plaintiffs were not available.

Files $24 Million Suit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A former husband of country star Tammy Wynette filed a $24 million suit Thursday, charging her autobiography, "Stand By Your Man," has exposed him to "public hatred, contempt and ridicule" and forced him to change his name for his "own safety."

Singer-songwriter Don Chapel, who filed the suit in Davidson County Circuit Court under his real name, Lloyd F. Amburgey, said as a result of the book and other publications, he has been denied the "fruits of his labor and talents and has been continually harassed, humiliated, embarrassed and put down by his fans, coworkers, peers, employers, agents and managers."

Joan Dew, co-author of the book, and Simon & Schuster, the New York-based publishers, also were listed as defendants.

Fine Arts Ball Assists Greenville Art Museum

FINE ARTS BALL. . .was held Friday evening at the Greenville Country Club. Pictured, left to right, are Mr. and Mrs. Hoover Taft III and Dr. and Mrs. R. W. McConnell.

The new naming of the Greenville Art Center to the Greenville Museum of Art was announced just prior to Friday evening's Fine Arts Ball, sponsored by the East Carolina Art Society. The ball benefits will be given to the facility.

Ball patrons and guests, upon arriving at the Greenville Country Club, crossed a bridge and stream in the club's foyer where they were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. William Monroe. She is this year's Art Society president. Others in the receiving line were Dr. and Mrs. R. W. McConnell and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Weaver. The McConnells served as co-chairmen of the ball while the Weavers were co-chairmen of reservations.

Blooming mums in varying fall colors, greenery and pieces of statuary were placed near the tranquil stream. The ballroom was transformed into an enchanted garden through the usage of plants and more statuary as well as reflecting stars. Hurricane globes over lighted candles and greenery decorated the tables of those attending.

The buffet table was highlighted by an ice sculpture of a garden fountain which was carved by Bob Sauter. The table was also accented by a silver candelabra filled with white mums and greenery.

The bandstand was decorated with twinkling lights, hanging baskets and other green plants. Music for the evening and dancing was provided by the Bill Bolin orchestra.

A highlight of the evening was an art auction of some 29 pieces of art from 26 contributing North Carolina artists during a pre-ball cocktail party in the Fieldcrest and Grill Rooms.

Contributing artists were Bea Behr, Paula Blumenfeld, Chuck Chamberlain, Warren Chamberlain, Marion Crounse, Emily Farnham, Van C. Fleming Jr., Helen Mosely Gant, Charles Gilbert, Marilyn Gordley, Leo W. Jenkins, William L. Johnson, Rufus Knott, Marriott Little, Nancy Tuttle May, Diane Mulheim, Maggie Noss, Mary Ann Pennington, Bob Pittman, Walter Pories, Daretta Smith, Rachel Speight Snyder, Anna Bell Sugg, Bob Timberlake and Edwin Vorhees.

Tentative Agreement At The Met

By JOAN J. CIRILLO
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera Co. and its locked-out musicians reached a tentative settlement Saturday, spreading hope the stage would once again brighten at the nation's premier opera house.

The settlement was announced shortly before dawn by top federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz, who asked that details of the pact be withheld pending ratification.

It was only the first of several steps before the canceled 1980-81 season could begin.

"Nobody knows if there is a season (or) what form it would take," said Met spokeswoman Johanna Fiedler, adding it is too soon to say when and if the opera house doors will reopen with its live national broadcasts.

Met officials declined to detail plans until the 93-member orchestra meets Monday to vote on ratification of the pact.

Any resumption of the season, which was to have run from Sept. 22 to April 18, is expected to take at least two weeks from contract approval. Resumption also will depend on the availability of top performers who were released from contracts shortly after the season was canceled Sept. 29.

In addition, the company must negotiate contracts with its 16 other unions, some of which were scheduled to meet with management over the weekend to discuss the effect of the musicians contract on their own talks. The musicians pact usually sets the pattern for the 16 unions.

"We are going to go to our membership with a unanimous recommendation" to approve the contract, said I. Philip Sipser, the lawyer-negotiator for Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians.

Once there was only life insurance.
Now there's variable life.

Why do you buy life insurance? Because you want guaranteed financial security for your loved ones. If that sounds like the usual life insurance policy, you're right. But, now you can get lifetime insurance coverage with one big difference. Variable Life Insurance – the life insurance policy with growth potential through investments in the stock market. We think it's one of the most important innovations in life insurance in the last sixty years.

There's more: in addition to this growth potential, you still get a guaranteed minimum death benefit, no matter what happens in the stock market.

Here's how it works: Funds supporting your policy are invested in a Separate Investment Account, which is managed by the professional investment staff of The Equitable. Your insurance coverage may increase or decrease annually, depending on the Account's investment results. But, whatever the performance of the Account, your life insurance coverage can't fall below the guaranteed minimum.

Your cash value will also reflect the Account's investment experience, but there is no guaranteed minimum.

Offered by Equitable Variable Life Insurance Company – EVLICO – a wholly owned subsidiary of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

For more complete information about the Separate Investment Account and the policy, including charges and expenses, send for a prospectus by mailing the coupon. Read the prospectus carefully before you purchase a policy.

Available only through Equitable Agents.

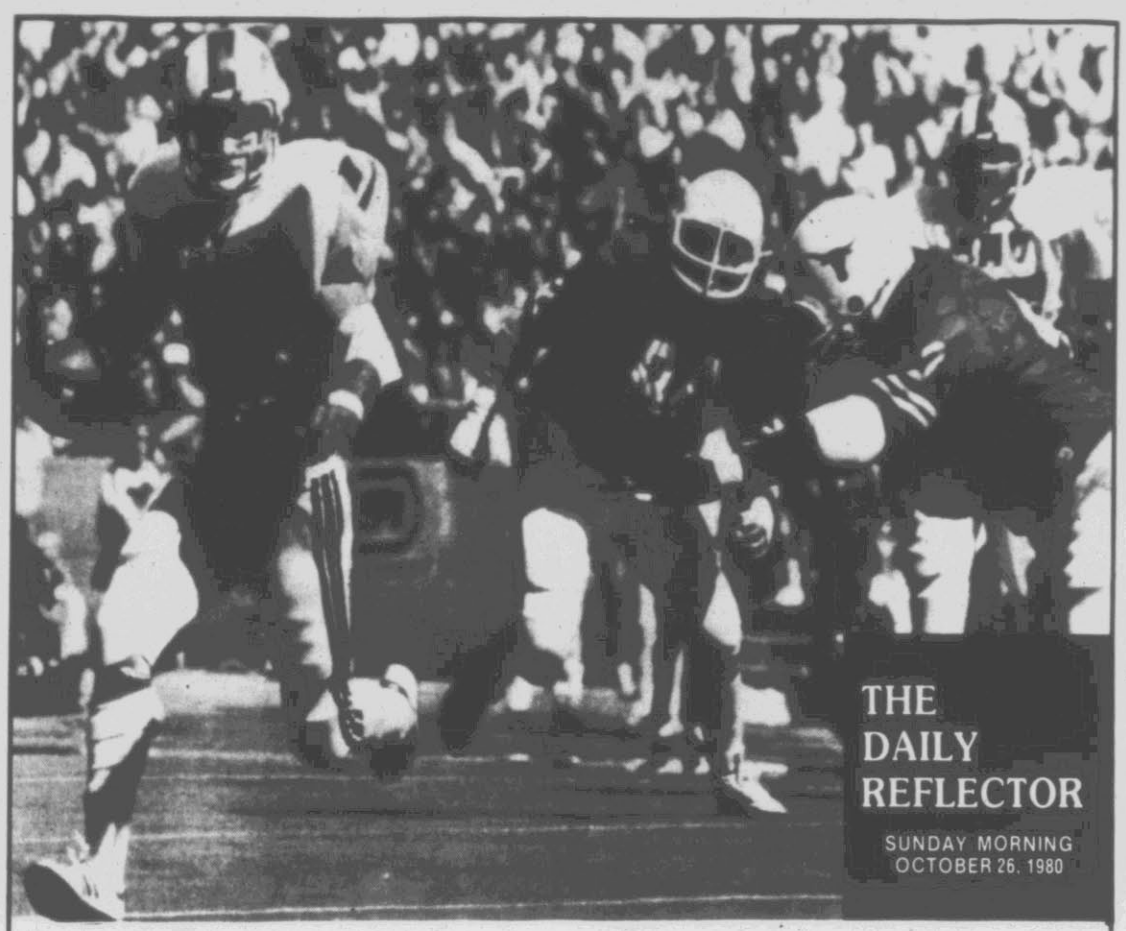
Pirates Victim No. 7 For Tar Heels



Moving Ahead

CHAPEL HILL — Amos Lawrence scored twice and Kelvin Bryant once as both amassed over 100 yards rushing in guiding the University of North Carolina to its seventh straight win of the year as East Carolina bowed, 31-3 yesterday.

Lawrence, one of the top runners in the country, raced for 138 yards on 24 carries while Bryant picked up 109 in 19 lugs as the Tar Heels picked up 333 yards on the ground against just 119 for the Pirates.

The solid North Carolina defense, ranked fourth in the country, seldom allowed the Pirates to mount a scoring drive. The lone score, a 40-yard field goal by Rodney Allen came following a fumble on the UNC 24 by Lawrence.

That field goal, however, kept the East Carolina scoring streak, fourth longest in the nation, intact at 105.

That field goal, however, kept the East Carolina scoring streak, fourth longest in the nation, intact at 105.

Lawrence's scores came on runs of one and two yards, while Bryant scored from a pair away. The other Tar Heel touchdown came on a 20-yard pass from Rod Elkins to Jon Richardson. Jeff Hayes kicked a 47-yard field goal — the same distance as the one which tied last year's game, 24-24 — and added all four PATs.

It was the defense that really told the tale, however. North Carolina's defense, led by Donnell Thompson, Lawrence Taylor, Calvin Daniels and Harry Stanback, swarmed over the Pirates, shutting them off inside and outside and seldom gave the Pirate quarterbacks time to get set to pass.

"They have a great football team," ECU Coach Ed Emory said. "They play with great recklessness and quickness. They're agile, mobile, and hostile."

Emory also felt his team did a good job on defense most of the way, but were worn down by having to spend so much time on the field. The Pirates put together few drives, and got only ten first downs on the day.

"Except for their first drive, we held them in check in the first half," Emory said. He noted that the second touchdown of the0half by Carolina was set up by good field position after the offense had left the defense in a hole.

"It was that way all afternoon. We always had bad field position."

Another big factor in the game was the loss of starting quarterback Carlton Nelson late in the first half with a pinched nerve in his shoulder. With about five minutes left in the period, Nelson, going back on first and ten at his 19 after a punt, suddenly collapsed in pain on the 12 yard line. He left the game then, returning for a few plays early in the second half, and except for those the Pirates went with Greg Stewart at the helm.

"He got hit hard in the shoulder on the last play of the previous series," Emory said. "When he took the ball and turned, the pain hit him hard. He tried to come back, but just couldn't do it."

Emory said Nelson's availability for next week's game against William & Mary is uncertain.

"Stewart did a good job after he finally got into things in the fourth quarter. We're going to have to play him more and probably start getting Larry Brobst ready, too." Brobst has yet to take a snap.

Emory compared Carolina's defense to Florida State's, another of the top ten teams in the country the Bucs have faced. "They are better than Florida State, personnel-wise and overall," Emory said.

"But I don't think their offense is as good. They do have great talent in Lawrence, Bryant and (Billy) Johnson. People like that are hard to stop."

Emory was pleased with the ECU effort, however. "Our kids stuck in there. They didn't give up. I think we came together more as a team this week than we have in any other week this

OUCH!
Mustangs Shock Longhorns, 20-6

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Ron Meyer's most traumatic week as a collegiate football coach ended in triumph Saturday with him carried off the field on the shoulders of his maligned Southern Methodist University team.

The Mustangs shocked No. 2 ranked and previously unbeaten Texas 20-6 in a thorough Southwest Conference whipping fashioned on the running of sophomore tailback Craig James.

James gained 146 yards against the well-rested Longhorns and scored SMU's first touchdown on a 53-yard touchdown run that took the heart out of Texas.

Meyer decided at midweek to bench junior quarterback Mike Ford, who had suffered eight interceptions in the last two weeks, in favor of freshman Lancey McIlhenny.

The move paid huge dividends as McIlhenny maneuvered the Mustangs without error. SMU completed only one pass for 3 yards but didn't need an overhead game with 283 yards rushing.

James said the change at quarterback never bothered the team.

"It was a big thing in the media, but it didn't affect us," said James.

A stunned Texas Coach Fred Akers said, "SMU just lined up and whipped us. They deserved to win.

"The Southwest Conference is tough and the season is long and people haven't heard the last of us."

Meyer said, "Our defense was absolutely fantastic. And Craig James ran very, very hard."

Meyer, who had seen his team suffer close losses to Baylor and Houston in the past two weeks, said, "This victory is a big lift for our program. It is the first time a SMU team has won in Austin since 1966. That's how big the win is."

An interception return by James Mobley in the fourth quarter sealed the victory for SMU.

It was the first time in 14 years SMU had beaten Texas and the loss dropped the previously unbeaten Longhorns to a 5-1 record and 2-1 in the SWC. SMU0is05¾20q t02-2.

SMU, starting freshman quarterback Lance McIlhenny in place of Mike Ford for the first time, directed an errorless Mustang attack that overwhelmed Texas on the ground.

Texas led 6-3 at halftime on field goals of 20 and 47 yards by barefoot John Goodson but the Mustangs struck for the go-ahead score on their second possession of the second half.

James took a pitchout, circled left end and sped 53 yards for a touchdown untouched to give SMU a 10-6 lead. Eddie Garcia, who had earlier kicked a 41-yard field goal, kicked a 44-yarder and SMU led 13-6 going into the fourth quarter.

The 13-point underdog Mustangs then applied the clincher when Texas quarterback Donnie Little overthrew tight end Lawrence Sampleton. Mobley grabbed the ball and bolted 22 yards down the sidelines for a touchdown.

Texas later drove to the Mustang 3-yard line but Dick Blaylock tackled Darryl Clark for a six-yard loss and when backup quarterback Rick McIvor threw incomplete the Mustangs celebrated joyously while the partisan crowd of 73,535 sat in stunned silence.

The Mustangs killed Texas' final threat when John Simmons intercepted a pass at the SMU 30 with less than two minutes to play.

Terps Nip Duke Behind Wysocki

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — "We were just a little better in the second half," Maryland coach Jerry Clayborne said Saturday after his Terps rallied behind tailback Charlie Wysocki's rushing to slap Duke 17-14 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football test.

"We had problems in the first half getting drives going," Clayborne said, noting his team's lackluster performance in the opening periods.

Duke jumped out to a 14-0 first-half lead, but two second-half touchdowns by Wysocki and a 25-yard field goal by Dale Castro proved the winning margin.

Clayborne said he decided switch to quarterback Brent Dewitz in the second half, who responded with three clutch plays, all of them passes to Chris Havener.

Duke coach Red Wilson said, "You saw today what I would call the typical Maryland team, the physical Maryland team that does what they do best in order to win. I certainly feel that Maryland has a very fine football team.

A regional television audience and a rain-drenched crowd of 17,400 saw Wysocki turn in a dazzling performance, carrying 51 times for 217 yards and rallying the Terps from a 14-0 halftime deficit.

Secrertary of State Edmund Muskie, whose son Ned is a Duke student, watched the game from the president's box and saw Duke grab a 14-0 first-period lead on two touchdown passes by quarterback Ben Bennett.

Bennett put the Blue Devils on the scoreboard on a 38-yard pass to end Marvin Brown. Later in he same period he hit John Brinkman on a 14-yard pass in the end zone.

Maryland took the second-half kickoff and marched 70 yards in 11 plays with Wysocki going over on an 11-yard run.

The Terps went ahead early in the fourth period when Wysocki raced over from the Duke 7 after Todd Simpson had recovered Bennett's fumble, who dropped the snap.

Maryland drove from the Duke 49 to the Blue Devils' 7, and on fourth down Castro hit on the game-winning 25-yard fieldgoal with 5:32 remaining.

Maryland, 5-3 overall and 2-1 in the ACC, was deep in Duke territory when the game ended. Seconds earlier Castro had attempted a 42-yard field goal, but it went wide right.

Duke coach Red Wilson lauded Maryland in post-game remarks, saying Maryland has a "very fine, powerful team."

But Wilson pointed out the lack of experience on his own young squad, noting that three times Bennett was called by officials for intentionally grounding the ball when he was back to pass.

Bennett completed 11-24 passes for Duke and 146 yards. He had one interception and fumbled once, the latter leading to Maryland's second touchdown.

Dewitz took over Maryland's quarterbacking the second half and provided able leadership, hitting on four of seven passes for 56 yards.

'Pack Escapes, Edges Clemson

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State took advantage of fumbles, pass interceptions, kicking errors and penalties Saturday but still barely escaped with a 24-20 victory over Clemson in a sloppily played, rain-soaked Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

And although the Wolfpack came out on the short end of most of the statistics, except for the crucial figure — the score — Coach Monte Kiffin said he was pleased with the results.

"It feels great to win," Kiffin said. "I love it. It was one of the wildest football games I've ever seen. Everything seemed to happen."

Sophomore Tol Avery scored on a 1-yard run and threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Mike Quick — both after Clemson turnovers — and the Wolfpack defense added a touchdown and safety on the two muffed punts by Clemson.

"We had a fumble, a deflected interception, a blocked punt and a safety. It's hard to win when you have things like that to happen," Clemson Coach Danny Ford said.

"We are a pretty good football team, but we aren't good enough to play any opponent as well as ourselves," Ford said. "I don't know of many teams that can do that."

Clemson got 19 first downs to only eight for the Wolfpack and had an advantage of 180 yards to 147 yards in rushing and 93 yards to 65 yards in passing. However, the Tigers lost three of five fumbles and had two passes intercepted.

N.C. State, 4-3 overall and 2-2 in the ACC, scored twice in the last 1:08 of the first half on Avery's pass to Quick following a pass interception and a safety when Clemson punter Rich Hendley was caught in the end zone.

The Wolfpack took control of the game in the third quarter on another Tiger kicking error. Hendley fielded a poor snap from center in the end zone, his punt was blocked by Vaughan Johnson and end James Butler scooped the ball up and ran it five yards for a touchdown.

Clemson's Obed Ariri, the natio's fifth all-time leading placekicker, tied a school record with four field goals of 19, 45, 39, and 30 yards. The Tigers' only touchdown came in the second quarter on a one-yard dive by tailback Chuck McSwain.

The loss left Clemson with a record of 4-3 for the season and 1-2 in the conference.

N.C. State turned three Clemson mistakes into scores in the first half, striking for a touchdown and safety in the final 1:08 of the second period, and held a 15-14 lead at the intermission.

Sophomore quarterback Homer Jordan engineered three scoring drives in the first half for Clemson, which got field goals by Ariri on its first two possessions.

Jordan set up the opening score, a 19-yard field goal, when he faked up the middle and ran untouched around right end for 46 yards to the Wolfpack 31. The Tigers moved to the N.C. State 2, but stalled and settled for 3 points.

After holding N.C. State on three plays, Clemson drove on its second possession from its own 47 yard line to the Wolfpack 29 before Ariri, bucking a stiff wind, booted a 45-yard field goal that barely cleared the crossbar.

N.C. State quarterback Avery passed 23 yards to Quick at the Clemson 39, then circled right end for 32 yards and fumbled into the hands of Clemson end Bill Smith at the five. However, fullback Edgar Pickett fumbled on the next play and Robert Abraham recovered at the 2, setting up Avery's one-yard run over the right side for a touchdown to give the Wolfpack a 7-6 lead.

Clemson defensive back Eddie Geathers intercepted a pass by Avery at the N.C. State 48 to set up the Tigers' other first-half score.

Virginia Never, Never Gave Up

By TOM FOREMAN, Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Virginia's Cavaliers stole a page from John Mackovich's 1979 book of quotes Saturday and came up with a 24-21 Atlantic Coast Conference college football victory over Wake Forest.

It was Mackovic who told his team last year to never, never give up. But it was his own Demon Deacons, who after scoring the apparent winning touchdown, allowed the Virginia offense to march 80 yards and win the game on Todd Kirtley's 1-yard dive with 18 seconds left.

"To succeed in life, you must have a will to win," said Virginia coach Dick Bestwick. "If you will that you're going to do it, you're going to get it done. We played with a tremendous will to win today."

Bestwick's team was aided by a 104-yard performance by senior runningback David Hall. Hall, a walk-on at Virginia, spurred the winning drive with a 34-yard run.

"Hall came here as a walk-on and was waiting for a chance to prove he could play in the big-time, and obviously he proved it today," Bestwick said.

"We need to play all 60 minutes of the game every week," he said. "I know our team is extremely disappointed. We're going to have to work hard and come back next week against Clemson."

Kirtley's score capped an 80-yard scoring march which started with little more than four minutes left in the game. The drive was aided by a 34-yard run by David Hall and 13-yard pass completion from Kirtley to tighend Kevin Riccio.

Wake Forest, now 3-4 overall and 1-3 in the ACC, took a 21-17 lead when late in the fourth quarter tailback Wayne McMillan scored from eight yards out to cap 60 yard scoring march.

The Cavaliers, who boosted their record 3-4 and 2-2 in the conference, took a lead in the third quarter. Wayne Morrison's 28-yard field goal with 9:28 remaining gave Virwinya a 10-7 lead. But Wake Forest marched down the field to regain the advantage as quarterback Jay Venuto threw a eight yard scoring pass to Kenny Duckett.

With the score 14-10 aand Wake Forest forced to punt, David Couch's kick attempt was block by linebacker Rickey Callinder. Virginia pounced on the ball at the Deamon Deacon 12 yard line. Despite simultaneous penalties for holding and unsportmenlike conduct, Virginia managed to score when David Hall scored on 19-yard run with 11:55 left in the ball game.

Top-Ranked 'Bama Buries Southern Miss, 42-7

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback Don Jacobs ran for two touchdowns and set up two others on passes to pace top-ranked Alabama to a 42-7 football victory over No. 20 Southern Mississippi Saturday for the Tide's 28th consecutive triumph.

The victory, Alabama's 51st in a row at Bryant-Denny Stadium, came only five days after the Golden Eagles had moved into the Associated Press Top 20 for the first time in history.

Jacobs scored Alabama's first touchdown on a 25-yard scamper on fourth down in the first period and ran it in from 13 yards in the final period.

After the first Tide score, Southern drove for 78 yards to tie the game on a 1-yard dive by Sammy Winder, who went into the game as the nation's leading scorer with 78 points.

But two second-quarter breaks helped Alabama ice its 23rd straight homecoming victory.

Southern's Ricky Floyd fumbled a punt and Alabama's Danny Holcombe recovered it at the Eagles' 22. Jacobs passed to the 13 and three plays later, Charlie Williams took it in from the 8.

Quarterback Ken Coley took Alabama 60 yards on its next possession. On the scoring play, Coley had a bad pitchout, but the ball trickled into the end zone, where Major Ogilvie recovered it for the score.

The victory gave Alabama Coach Bear Bryant a career record of 303-71-16, moving him one step closer to the late Amos Alonzo Stagg's all-time winning record of 314.

Alabama, now 7-0, travels to Jackson, Miss., next Saturday to play Mississippi State, while Southern, 6-1, will entertain Lamar.

UCLA 32

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Tom Ramsey passed for two touchdowns and ran for another Saturday to lead the third-ranked UCLA Bruins to a 32-9 victory over California.

The Bruins, now 6-0 overall and 2-0 in the Pacific-10, broke the backs of the Bears in the second quarter when Jo Jo Townsell returned the kickoff 100 yards for a touchdown after Cal had scored a field goal to make the score 10-3.

UCLA went on to take a 32-3 lead before the Bears got their only touchdown on a one-yard run by quarterback Rich Campbell.

Ramsey, the Pac-10's top-rated passer, hit on 11 of 16 passes for 154 yards. His two scoring passes were nearly identical, a two-yard toss to Ronnie DeBose in the first quarter, and a four-yarder to Ricky Coffman early in the final period.

Ramsey scored UCLA's other touchdown on a one-yard run. The Bruins' other points came on field goals of 27 and 43 yards by Norm Johnson.

Campbell completed 28 of 42 attempts for 225 yards, but much of that came as Cal tried to catch up in the second half. Bruin tailback Freeman McNeil, who had been averaging 148 yards rushing per game, gained 115 in 25 carries.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Tailback Sam Platt rushed for a school-record 188 yards and one touchdown Saturday to lead sixth-ranked Florida State to a 24-3 victory over Memphis State in a regionally televised football game.

Platt, a 6-foot, 190-pound senior from Jacksonville, raced to 105 yards in the first half, including a 1-yard plunge at 3:47 in the first period that gave the Seminoles a 6-0 lead.

A 25-yard field goal by Florida State's Bill Carpece and an 18-yard scoring pass from quarterback Rick Stockstill to Hardis Johnson gave the Seminoles a 17-0 halftime edge.

The Seminoles opened the third quarter by blocking a Memphis State punt and recovering the ball on the eight. Two plays later, fullback Mike Whiting went over from the three. Carpece's kick made it 24-0.

The Seminoles, 7-1, were never in trouble. Memphis State, 1-6, didn't score until midway in the third period, then had to settle for a 27-yard field goal by Rusty Bennett.

Platt's 188 yards broke the school single-game rushing record of 170 yards set by Larry Key during the Seminoles' 1977 game with Auburn. His 29 carries were three shy of another school record.

Nebraska 45
Colorado 7

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Third-string I-back Roger Craig rushed for 176 yards and three touchdowns as ninth-ranked Nebraska overpowered winless Colorado 45-7 Saturday in Big Eight football.

Craig — a sophomore who entered the game late in the first quarter after Nebraska's top two I-backs, Jarvis Redwine and Craig Johnson, were injured on back-to-back plays — scored on a pair of 3-yard runs in the first half as Nebraska built a 31-0 lead at intermission.

The victory was the Cornhuskers' 13th in a row over Colorado and raised their conference record to 3-0 and overall mark to 6-1. Colorado dropped to 0-3 in the Big Eight and 0-7 overall.

Oklahoma 42
Iowa St. 7

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Quarterback J.C. Watts and fullback Stanley Wilson reeled off long scoring runs in the third quarter to break open a tight game and spark 17th-rated Oklahoma to a 42-7 victory over Big Eight Conference opponent Iowa State Saturday.

Iowa State drove 69 yards for a touchdown the first time it had the ball and held the Sooners to a 7-7 tie at halftime. However, Oklahoma's speedy running backs exploded in the second half, and the Sooners handily beat Iowa State for the 19th straight time.

Watts stunned an Iowa State record crowd of 52,974 when he faked a handoff and circled right end on a 45-yard scoring run to give Oklahoma a 14-7 lead with 10:49 left in the third quarter.

Wilson raced 53 yards for a score with 27 seconds remaining in the period, and the Sooners were on their way. Wilson finished with a career-high 160 yards in 24 carries as the Sooners rolled up 269 yards on the ground in the second half.

Missouri 13
Kansas St. 3

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Ron Verrilli's 37-yard field goal and a one-yard touchdown run by reserve quarterback Mike Hyde capped a fourth-quarter rally and lifted No.16 Missouri to a 13-3 Big 8 football victory Saturday over scrappy Kansas State.

The heavily-favored Tigers, now 6-1 overall and 3-0 in the Big 8, led only 3-0 at halftime on a 22-yard Verrilli field goal. Kansas State's Jim Jackson, who had hit on only two of five field goal attempts for the year, booted a 23-yarder to knot the score at 3-3 in the third period.

A fierce wind hampered the passing game and played tricks on the kicking game throughout the regionally televised contest.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Quarterback Art Schlichter ran for two touchdowns after a pair of Wisconsin turnovers and fullback Tim Spencer raced 50 yards for another score, leading 10th-ranked Ohio State to a 21-0 Big Ten college football victory.

Ohio State, 6-1 overall and 4-0 in the Big Ten, took a 14-0 lead by scoring two touchdowns in a one-minute, 25-second span late in the first quarter and early in the second.

Cornerback Vince Skillings made a diving interception of an underthrown pass by Wisconsin's John Josten at the Badger 40. A Schlichter to Calvin Murray screen pass gained 27 yards to the Wisconsin 10, and Schlichter scored on a rollout to the left from the six.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's Mark Herrmann broke the NCAA career passing record with 340 yards Saturday and directed the Boilermakers to a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns that rallied them to a 36-25 Big Ten football victory over Michigan State.

Herrmann, who completed 24 of 46 attempts, boosted his career passing total to 8,087 yards, breaking the former NCAA major college record of 7,818 by Washington State's Jack Thompson in 1975-78.

The Boilermakers trailed 25-19 early in the final period after Michigan State quarterback John Leister lofted a 31-yard touchdown pass to Jim Williams. Herrmann, a 6-foot-5 senior, then started the Boilermakers' go ahead drive from their own 20.

He completed four straight passes totalling 60 yards including a 20-yarder to Bart Burrell and a 15-yarder to Steve Bryant that put the ball at the Spartans' 12. Jimmy Smith then ran 11 yards and plunged over from the 1 on the next play for the tying touchdown.

Pittsburgh 30
Tennessee 6

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Twelfth-ranked Pitt answered Willie Gault's Tennessee record 100-yard kickoff return with 1-yard touchdown bursts by Joe McCall and Randy McMillan in the second period and went on to defeat the Vols 30-6 Saturday.

Rick Trocano, who began the season at free safety, made his first start at quarterback since the seventh game of the 1979 season in place of the injured Dan Marino and directed Pitt to its sixth victory in seven games by completing 14 of 25 passes for 237 yards. He also darted 31 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown.

Mississippi St. 24
Auburn 21

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Wingback Mardye McDole ran 19 yards on a reverse for a fourth quarter touchdown and the Bulldog defense twice held at its one yard line late in the game Saturday to give Mississippi State a 24-21 win over Auburn.

In addition to McDole's game-winning run, the Bulldogs scored on a 23-yard run by fullback Donald Ray King and a 32-yard field goal by Dana Moore in the first quarter and a 15-yard run by freshman quarterback John Bond in the third.

State had to overcame a 100-yard kickoff return by Auburn's Sam DeJarnette at the start of the second half and a 159-yard rushing performance by Tiger tailback James Brooks to capture its sixth win against two losses.

Brooks, the second leading rusher in the Southeastern Conference, scored on a three-yard run in the first half, but was stopped twice at the Bulldog one-yard line late in the fourth quarter. An interception by State's Willie Jackson at the goal line with two minutes to play killed Auburn's final drive.

Georgia 27
Kentucky 0

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Georgia tailback Herschel Walker, nation's most touted freshman, rushed for 131 yards and a touchdown Saturday night as the fifth-ranked Bulldogs overwhelmed Kentucky 27-0 in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Walker, who had 91 yards in the first half — 21 more than the Kentucky team — got Georgia on the scoreboard with a 2-yard dive that capped an eight-play, 32-yard drive with 2:02 remaining in the first quarter.

Rex Robinson's 50-yard field goal gave Georgia a 10-0 lead with 6:14 left in the half, and his 47-yard field goal five minutes later gave Georgia a 13-0 lead at halftime.

Baylor 21
TCU 6

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Eleventh-ranked Baylor erupted behind reserve quarterback Mike Brannan for three touchdowns in the second half and defeated Texas Christian 21-6 Saturday and remain unbeaten.

Three interceptions inside the 5-yard line and two blocked kicks by defensive end Max McGeary helped boost Baylor's record to 7-0 record, its best start ever, and a 5-0 mark at the top of the Southwest Conference.

Alfred Anderson scored twice for Baylor on 2-yard plunges. Dennis Gentry caught a 40-yard pass from Brannan for the other touchdown and ran 29 yards to set up one of Anderson's scores.

J.C. Morris got TCU's touchdown on a 1-yard run in the third quarter. Steve Stamp, who set a school passing record with 28 of 53 passes for 408 yards for TCU, connected with Phillip Epps on a 59-yard pass to set up the score.

The touchdown cut Baylor's edge to 7-6 midway through the third period, but McGeary got his 15th career block to keep the Frogs from tying the score. He had charged through to block Greg Porter's 53-yard field goal try in the final play of the first half.

Rose Runners Win Sectionals

SMITHFIELD — Greenville Rose, with Kenny Smith finishing first and Harry Williams second, won its sectional meet here Friday afternoon, far outdistancing second-place New Bern.

The Rampants won the meet, which included 27 schools from the East, with 60 points while the Bears, the only team to beat Rose this season, was second with 84 points. Douglas Byrd was third with 95 points.

Leading the way for Rose as usual was Smith and Williams. Smith ended up first with a time of 15:01 while Harry Williams was second at 15:02.

Both broke the old course mark of 15:20, set last year by now-UNC cross-country runner Dick Larson. Smith and Williams were second and third last season at the sectionals, behind Larson.

"They ran together all the way," Rose coach Ron Hochmuth said. "They were challenged early by some of the better runners at the sectional but gradually pulled away."

Third was Douglas Byrd's George Johnson, fourth was Wilson Fike's Tony Hills and fifth was Beddingfield's Steve Dew.

All five runners will advance to the state meet in Charlotte next Saturday, as will the Rose and New Bern teams. Ten teams in all will compete for the state title.

"This was a big meet and I'm obviously proud of the whole team, but the sophomores especially," Hochmuth said. "They really responded well to the pressure."

Indeed. Sophomore John Ormond and junior Chip Little finished 17th and 18th in the meet, with Ormond coming in with a time of 16:05 and Little at 16:06.

Rose's Playoff Hopes Trickle Away

Rose quarterback Kenny Barnes (7) breaks through the Wilson Fike defense. Tryin to catch Barnes is Wilson's Jay Matthews (84) and an unidenfied player stetched out to the left of Barnes. Jerry Culliper (70) looks to seal off pursuit. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

A steady downpour of rain, expected to put a crimp in the Wilson Fike passing game, instead hampered Rose High School Friday night, and the Rampants saw their Division I title hopes and playoff dreams trickle down the drain with the muddy water.

Fike, buoyed by two first half 40-yard field goals by Lee Gliarmis, scored two fourth quarter touchdowns on big plays, and sent Rose, ranked as little as three weeks ago as the number one team in the state reeling to its second straight loss, 20-6.

The Golden Demons were bottled up much of the night by the Rose defense, but they were able to come up with the big play when it was needed and that was the story of the game.

In addition to the long range three-pointers by Gliarmis, Fike scored on a 67-yard sprint by Anthony Moore and a 51-yard pass from quarterback Tom Benson to Dennis Dew.

Just seconds before the final score, Rose had Fike backed up deep in its own territory, facing a second and 22 situation at its own 21, but a defensive lapse gave Moore the chance to race 26 yards for a first down and set up the scoring play that sealed the fate of the Rampants.

The loss, the second for Rose against Division I competition, just about insured that the Rampants will be staying home in three weeks when the playoffs begin. There is still an outside chance, but it would mean Fike would have to lose both of its games, including a final one to Rocky Mount, while the Gryphons must lose one other game. That would create a three-way tie for first.

Under conference rules, the team with the worst overall record would then drop out — that would be Fike, since it lost two non-conference games. Then, the team that won over the other would go. Since Rose beat Rocky Mount, it would claim the bid.

Any chance of that happening, is remote.

"They are the best team we've played," a soaked Dave Bumgarner said afterwards. "They just beat us. They made the big plays and we weren't able to get them when we needed them."

Bumgarner felt Rose opened smartly, moving for a touchdown on its first possession in the rain. However, he felt the team didn't respond as well after that. "I don't think the touchdown came too easy," he said. "We just didn't play well after we got it.

"When you give up the big play like we did, it hurts you. Then, too, we had the same old fumble trouble (losing three of seven)," he added.

Rose started off well, moving on a long 82-yard, 14 play scoring drive that erased 6:36 from the clock. But after that, Fike seemed to be able to come back and get what it needed.

Rose stopped the Demons cold on the first possession, then took off on its scoring drive. After reaching the 41, Barnes, attempting to pass, scrambled for yardage and ended up with a 25-yard gain, to the Fike 34.

Short yardage plays moved it to the 10 for the first down, but Alonza Taylor slipped trying to cut the corner on the next play for a loss of two, then failed to pick up yardage on second down.

Facing third and goal from the 12, Barnes faded back and hit a leaping Johnson in the end zone for the touchdown. Scott Taylor's kick, however, was off target, and Rose had to settle for a 6-0 lead with 3:51 left in the period.

Fike came right back with its first score, a 40-yarder by Gliarmis. On the opening play, from the 25, Benson hit Jay Matthews for 17 yards, then Moore ran for nine more to the Rose 49. Calvin Barnes later picked up ten to the 25, but the drive stalled there, and Gliarmis kicked the first of his two 40-yarders, that coming on the second play of the second period. Rose then led, 6-3 with 11:47 to go in the half.

Rose got a big break just a few plays later as Mo Ruffin fumbled a punt and Robert Brown recovered for the Rampants on the Fike 25. But after getting a first down at the 15, a fumble, a no-gain play, and a sack of 11 yards pushed the Rampants back to the 26 and a fourth-down pass fell incomplete.

"That really hurt us," Bumgarner recalled. "We should have pushed that one it. It could have made a lot of difference."

Instead, Fike took over, driving for the tieing score. From the 26, Fike picked up nine yards on a run and a penalty, then Greg Edwards burst through the left side, spun away from two tacklers and raced 38 yards to the Rose 27.

Rose took the ball on the second half kickoff and moved it, getting two first downs on fourth down plays, to midfield. But there, Barnes fumbled it away.

After forcing a punt, Rose again moved to midfield before another sack cost it the ball as the Rampants failed to make up the first down yardage.

On the first play of the final period, however, on third and two, Moore took a handoff draw from Benson, sped by a couple of Rose defenders, then broke into the clear, outracing the secondary on a 67-yard scoring play that put Fike ahead for good, 13-6. Gliarmis' kick came with 1:34 left.

Helped along by a personal foul against the Demons, Rose picked up a first down at the Fike 48 after the next series began. But two plays later, another fumbled turned it over.

After getting it back on a Marty Barnes interception at the Rose 38, the Rampants moved back to the Fike 46, helped by a 13-yard rip by Taylor. Then, Barnes hit Chris McLawhorn for nine more. After a first down at the 33, however, Barnes was intercepted — only the second time this year — and another Rose threat went by the boards.

Fike then put the game on ice with two big plays. After being penalized 15 yards for holding, Fike faced a second and 22 on its own 21.

But Moore, after getting a pitchout, appeared stopped for no gain. But he didn't give up, struggling away from the Rose tacklers. The rest of the defense, apparently feeling Moore was stopped, slowed, only to see the back streak away from the tacklers and into the clear for a 26-yard gain and a first down at the Fike 47.

Two plays netted just two yards, but on third and eight, Fike again pulled off the big play. Benson hit Dew along the right sidelines, and he spun away from the defense and outran the remainder on a 51-yard scoring jaunt.

Even then, Rose nearly had a chance to score and try for a miracle.

Taking over on the 46 after a brilliant return on the kickoff by McLawhorn, the Rampants got 15 more to the 31 on an unsportsmanlike conduct call against Fike.

A holding penalty moved it back to midfield, but a 23-yard gain by Jeff Porter, followed by a loss on another fumble made it fourth and 12 at the 33. Barnes then hit McLawhorn for a first down at the 15. But after a gain to the nine, another fumble turned it over with 1:42 showing and that was it.

The Demons thus remain unbeaten in league play, with a 5-0 record, while Rose dips to 3-2. Fike is 6-2 overall, as is Rose.

The conference title, barring something unforseen, will come down to the Fike-Rocky Mount game in two weeks.

Rose, which can now only hope for a back-in miracle, travels to Hunt Friday for its final road game of the year. They close out the season in two weeks, hosting Northeastern.

Falcons Ground Down D.H. Conley By 28-14

PIKEVILLE — Vernell Grantham rushed for 169 yards and one touchdown and J.L. Gurley ground out 110 yards and two scores and then unbeaten Charles B. Aycock held off winless D.H. Conley for a 28-14 victory Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference game.

Four minutes later Aycock, who ground out 354 yards rushing on 50 attempts to up its record to 8-0 overall and 6-0 in the ECC, was back for more. Again it was Gurley, this time on a three-yard run and after the kick failed Aycock led, 12-0, with 8:17 left in the half.

Minutes later the Falcons scored what proved to be the back-breaking TD when Vernell Grantham burst up the middle and raced 87 yards for the score. Gurley's run gave the Falcons a 21-0 lead with still 4:49 left.

The Vikings did get on the board in the first half — barely. With no time left, quarterback Leon Cox hit Jimmy Jeanette with a 10-yard scoring toss. The run failed, and the Falcons led, 21-6, at the half.

Conley, now 0-8 overall and 0-6 in the ECC, made things more uncomfortable for the Falcons early in the second half. The Vikings took the opening kickoff and took it in when Jesse Maye, who had 85 yards in 12 carries, went over from three yards out. Cox hit Sammy Tucker for the PAT and Conley suddenly trailed by only seven, 21-14, with 8:38 left in the third quarter.

Neither team could much from then on until Kenny Grantham scored on a one-yard run with less than six minutes to go in the game. Vernell Grantham (no relation) ran for the PAT.

The Vikings travel to Greene Central Friday.

Crumel's 163 Yds. Paces Firebirds Past Chargers

STANHOPE — Anthony Crumel rushed for 163 yards and two touchdowns and quarterback Jeffrey Lucas ran for another score to lead Southern Nash past a spirited Ayden-Grifton team, 23-6, Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference battle.

The Chargers, now 3-6 overall and 3-4 in the ECC, took the initial lead while holding the potent Firebirds scoreless until late in the first half.

Greg Jackson, who had 71 yards on 11 carries, keyed the drive with a 38 yard scamper and was backed up by Cleveland Coley's 15-yard run. Coley had 46 yards on 11 carries.

The Firebirds, now 6-1-1 overall and 6-0 in the league, finally solved the Charger defense — thanks mainly to two 15-yard penalties against A-G, one a roughing the punter call. Crumel, who leads the ECC in rushing with 1,196 yards, capped the march when he went over from six yards out with 2:13 left in the half. George Horrison's kick gave Southern Nash the lead at the half, 7-6.

The Firebirds wasted little time in the second half establishing their offense. On the first play from scrimmage Crumel burst outside for a 69-yard scoring run and when Lucas went over for the two points SN led, 15-6.

"The defense played as aggressively as they've played all year," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said. "But we made the key mistakes again, which is the story of our season."

Havelock Whips Jaguars, 28-8

Farmville Central halfback Roger Joyner stretches for extra yardage against Havelock Friday night. Havelock's Mark Yates (24) gets set to tackle Joyner, who gained 114 yards in 16 carries against the Rams. Helping block for Joyner is Willie Davis (18). (Reflector photo by Macon Dail)

FARMVILLE — It was 15 minutes Havelock will long remember. It was 15 minutes Farmville Central would like to forget but probably won't — for a long time.

With the Jaguars looking on, the Rams posted 21 points in the first 15 minutes and then hung around long enough to take home a 28-8 victory Friday evening over a less-than inspired Farmville club.

In those 15 minutes the Rams gained 142 of their 254 yards total offense, driving the ball at will in their wishbone attack. By the time the Jaguars figured out where they were — which was behind — it was too late, the Rams had ended a three-game losing streak to Farmville which dated back to 1974.

The loss came on the heels of last week's disheartening 32-22 to Southern Nash, a loss that all but ended any hopes of a fifth straight ECC crown. The Jaguars may have not forgotten that loss yet, but Farmville Coach Gene Brewer would not blame that for the loss.

"I really don't know what happened in the first quarter and a half," Brewer said. "If I had to make an excuse I could say that last week's loss, not having a good week of practice this week, and I and the other coaches not doing a very good job this week, all were to blame for the loss.

"But I think it was mainly that we didn't do a good coaching job this week. They weren't any better than we expected. They ran the option a little better, but it was about what we expected."

Run the wishbone the Rams did. Halfback David Preo, who also played wingback when the Rams went away from the 'bone, led the Havelock ground attack with 139 yards on 15 carries and one touchdown.

The Jaguars had their own 100-yard runner Friday night in halfback Roger Joyner. Joyner gained 114 yards in 16 carries, giving him 926 yards in 146 carries for the season. When he wasn't running the ball on offense, Joyner was returning punts and kickoffs and also playing linebacker on defense.

"I can't fault him," Brewer said. "Roger played well. We just didn't give him much support."

Especially in the early going. Before the sparse crowd had time to get its pants wet on the bleachers from a rain that fell throughout the game, Havelock was ahead.

The Rams, after stopping Farmville on its first possession, took the ball on their 47 and quickly began moving.

Two plays into the drive Preo, lined up as a wingback, took an inside reverse 16 yards, down to the Farmville 35. Two plays later Ram quarterback Mike Green faked to fullback Lindbergh Frazier up the middle and then sliced between two defenders en route to a 33-yard touchdown run. Preo's run for the PAT gave the Rams an 8-0 lead with 8:09 left in the period.

Farmville was again forced to punt — the Jaguars kicked six times for just under a 30-yard average — and the Rams had the ball on their 26.

Their stay their was short. On second and 10, Preo raced outside for 43 yards before beingcaught from behind by Joyner. Frazier burst ahead for 17 yards, down to the 6 before Preo scored two plays later on a four-yard run. The run for the PAT was no good, but Havelock still led, 14-0, with still four minutes left in the first quarter.

Three possession and one Farmville fumble later the Rams had their third TD of the evening. Forced to punt, Havelock's Frank Swartz got off a wobbly kick that Joyner fumbled, giving the Rams the ball on the Farmville 29.

It took the Rams six plays to capitalize on the mistake, with Joey Smith going over from four yards for the score. Afer Chris Amidon's kick, the Jaguars suddenly found themselves down, 21-0, with still nine minutes left in the half.

Willie Foreman then one-handed a pass from Cutler for a 22-yard gain to the Havelock 41. After a 15-yard holding penalty against Farmville, Joyner blew around right end for 48 yards down to the Havelock nine.

Two plays later Cutler floated a pass over Havelock defense back Zeke McCabe to teammate Jonathan Joyner for a six-yard TD pass. Cutler then hit Andrew Edwards for the the PAT and Farmville trailed, 21-8, with six minutes left.

Moments later, the Jaguars seemed ready to make it even closer following a 53-yard punt by Havelock that rolled into the end zone.

From their 20 with just over three minutes left in the half, the Jaguars moved rapidly. Cutler hit Edwards twice, for 25 yards and 35 yards, moving the ball to the 14 with 37 seconds left. Three plays later the Jaguars were but one yard closer to the goal. The drive ended when on fourth and nine Joyner pulled in a quick pitch around left end that wound up two yards shy of a first down.

"If we could have scored there I think it would have been a different ballgame," Brewer said. "We had the right play called there. We caught them by surprise. When you only have four of five plays working for you it makes it tough. That had been working, we just came up a little short."

In the second half Havelock came out and drove to the Farmville 31 before being stopped. On their next series, the Rams got to the 18 but a 38-yard field goal attempt was short.

The Rams did not get inside the Jaguar 35 again until Robbie Rice intercepted a Cutler pass on the 25 and sailed down the sideline 75 yards as time ran out for Havelock's final score of the evening.

While Farmville's defense held Havelock to 93 yards total offense in the second half, the Jaguars' offense was forced to start drives from the 15, 36, 10, 32 and 33. Because of that, and a fumble and a pass interception, the Jaguars did not once cross midfield in the second half.

"We moved the ball some, but we just couldn't get any consistency," Brewer said. "We'd make the big play and then fumble the ball or drop a pass. It wasn't the rain. If you do what you're suppose to the rain won't bother you.

"I'm proud of the way they played in the second half, but there's no excuse for the way they played for the first quarter and a half. I don't give a damn if they hadn't practiced all week, there's just no excuse for that."

Navy 24
Washington 10

SEATTLE (AP) — Underdog Navy, with quarterback Fred Reitzel scoring three touchdowns, the last one on a fumble recovery in the end zone, knocked off 18th-ranked Washington 24-10 Saturday.

The Huskies, favored by 11 points after their important Pacific-10 Conference victory at Stanford last weekend, couldn't handle Reitzel when the Midshipmen, 5-2, got close to the goal line.

Reitzel scored on runs of 10 and 2 yards and fell on an Eddie Meyers fumble for a touchdown early in the final quarter.

Reitzel, a senior who was a starting safety for Navy for two seasons before being made into the Middies' quarterback this year, accounted for 158 total yards.

He carried the ball 10 times for 54 yards and completed six of 15 passes for 104 yards with one interception.

Despite the loss, Washington, 5-2 overall, remained in the driver seat at 2-1 in the Pac-10 Rose Bowl race. Only five schools are eligible for the game in Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's Day.

Washington quarterback Tom Flick completed 19 of 30 passes for 228 yards and one touchdown. He was intercepted once.

Washington's only TD came on a 69-yard Flick pass to Aaron Williams late in the third quarter that cut the Navy lead to 17-10.

Vanderbilt 14

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Diminutive running back Malvin Gipson rushed for 193 yards and one touchdown and junior quarterback John Fourcade ran for one score and passed for another Saturday to lead Mississippi to a 27-14 Southeastern Conference victory over Vanderbilt.

Richmond 18
Va. Tech 7

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Barry Redden rushed 48 times for 233 yards and a touchdown and Scott Schramme booted three field goals Saturday as Richmond's Spiders shocked Virginia Tech's heavily favored Hokies, 18-7, in the 32nd annual Tobacco Bowl football game.

The victory snapped Richmond's five-game losing streak, improving the Spiders' record to 3-5, while Virginia Tech dropped to 6-2.

Redden's 6-yard touchdown run and two of Schramme's field goals were set up by Virginia Tech turnovers. In all, the Gobblers lost the ball six times, four by interceptions and two by fumbles.

Schramme connected from 42, 29 and 25 yards.

Furman 21
Appalachian St. 20

BOONE, N.C. (UPI) — Mike Glen rushed for 103 yards and two touchdowns to lead Furman to a 21-20 victory over Appalachian State Saturday in a key Southern Conference game played in a light snowfall.

Glen staked Furman to a 14-7 lead on first-quarter runs of 88 and 10 yards, but quarterback Tim Sorrell's 1-yard plunge midway through the third period provided the winning score for the Paladins, now 6-1 overall and 5-0 in Southern Conference play.

Appalachian State, which entered the game tied for second in the conference race, fell to 5-3 overall and 3-2 in league play.

Rams Blank North Pitt, 26-0

By PAUL COLLINS
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — The Greene Central Rams came to North Pitt with the rains Friday night, and the Panthers went slip-sliding away to a 26-0 defeat.

In a game full of mistakes the Rams were able to capitalize on North Pitt's blunders, including a blocked punt that gave the visitors their first touchdown.

Greene Central turned the ball over six times, including five fumbles, but was still able to dominate the game. The Rams piled up 354 yards in total offense while allowing the Panthers only six. North Pitt was minus 19 yards on the night rushing.

Three fumbles within a seven-play, two-minute span of the first quarter helped begin the game on an inauspicious note. Greene Central took the opening kickoff and moved to the Pitt 22. On the next play, however, Joseph Williams fumbled the ball away to the Panthers.

But North Pitt couldn't hold onto the ball either. Three plays later Tony Pittman returned the favor, fumbling at his 32. Not to be outdone, though, the Panthers held onto the ball for only two plays before Williams fumbled for the second time.

Greene Central settled down on the ensuing series, forced a Panther punt and took over at its 25. Atoning for his fumbles, Williams ripped off a 24-yard run to the 49. The drive bogged down though, and Jeff Jones' punt pinned North Pitt deep in its own territory at the 12.

An errant pitchout from quarterback Bob Hemingway to Pittman created a fourth and 15 for the Panthers. Ken Whitehurst stood at the back of his end zone ready to punt, but Ervin Rouse barrelled through and smothered the kick. Robert Anderson grabbed the loose ball in the end zone for the touchdown with 11 seconds remaining in the first quarter.

The Rams attempted an onsides kick, but Juan Atkinson fell on the ball at his 44. With its best field position thus far in the game, North Pitt came out throwing. On three plays, though, Hemingway missed two open receivers and was sacked by Donald Warren.

The Panthers missed several other first-half opportunities when they were unable to get either their passing or running game in gear. Gordon Dunn was continually open, but Hemingway was unable to get the ball to him except on one play when Dunn dropped the ball.

The Rams, who fumbled four times in the half, seemed glad to take a 7-0 lead into the locker room.

The third quarter was primarily a defensive one as both teams made key plays to quash opposition drives. Williams sprinted around left end for 45 yards before Panther defender Jerry Simpson dragged him down on the Pitt 40. Simpson was the last man between Williams and the end zone. House sacked Ram quarterback David Braswell for a ten-yard loss five plays later, and North Pitt held on fourth down to end the threat.

Rouse stopped the Panthers for two consecutive losses, and Whitehurst's 29-yard punt gave Greene the ball at the Pitt 47. The Rams moved the 47 yards in four plays for the period's only score. Braswell's play-action pass fooled the Panther defense, and he hit a wide-open Thomas Bullock with a five-yard touchdown pass.

Whitehurst replaced Hemingway as the Panther quarterback, but North Pitt could still not move the ball.

The Panthers had their best field position late in the fourth quarter when the Rams were called for personal fouls on two plays in a row. Whitehurst was shaken up on the second play and left the game.

The penalties gave Pitt the ball at its opponents' 27, and the Panthers seemed ready to break into the scoring column. Once again, however, they couldn't generate any offense, and GC took over on downs.

The Panthers seemed downheartened as Melvin Hawkins ran through the defense for a Ram touchdown on the very next play, putting his team up 19-0.

Sam Sheppard made North Pitt's defeat complete when he added an eight-yard scoring run with eight seconds to go in the game.

Greene Central notched its first conference win and raised its overall record to 2-6. The Panthers remained winless in conference play and is now 1-7.

Tarboro Bombs 'Skins

TARBORO — Quarterback Maxie Coker passed for 116 yards and three touchdowns and Gerald Reynolds rushed for 131 yards and two touchdowns to lead Tarboto to a 43-21 win over a fumble-plagued Roanoke club Friday night in a Northeastern Conference battle.

The Redskins, now 5-3 overall and 2-3 in the league, scored first, on two yard run by Jesse Everett, but it was downhill from there, as they fumbled six time, losing four.

The Vikings, now 4-4 overall and 3-2 in the conference, closed within one on Reynolds' first TD run, a three yarder, and then spurted ahead with 23 second-quarter points.

Pete Bell got Tarboro's first score of the second period on a 48-yard pass from Maxie Coker. Bell also ran for the two points, giving the Vikes a 14-7 lead.

Coker then hit Glen Shaw with a 30-yard TD pass and with Kell Peterson's kick, the Vikes led, 21-7. Later in the period, Reynolds went over for his second score, this one a five-yard run and with Calvin Bridgers pass to Shaw for the PAT Tarboro led, 29-7

The Redskins managed to score late in the half, on a 31-yard pas from Neal Cargile to Maurice Chance. That made it 29-13 at intermission.

In the second half, Tarboro came out scoring. Coker hit Hyman with a 15-yard scoring pass and Peterson's kick made it 36-13.

Roanoke's final score of the evening came on Everett's two-yard run. Angelo Spruill ran for the two points.

Tarboro's final tally came moments later when Rodney Hussey ran it in from one yard out.

Tulane Blisters Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Vince Gibson praised his quarterback, Nickie Hall, as "an outstanding athlete whose getting better every game" after Hall led Tulane to its first road victory over Georgia Tech in 47 years, 31-14 Saturday.

Hall accounted for three touchdowns and 212 yards and Marvin Lewis added another score on a 42-yard run as the Greenies surged to a 24-0 lead and then withstood a Tech comeback in the final quarter which was led by freshman quarterback Stu Rogers.

"Georgia Tech fought hard with a lot of courage but so did we," Gibson said. "I thought our last drive killed their momentum."

That drive came after the Jackets had chopped the lead to 24-14 with just under nine minutes remaining.

"Tulane played a strong game, obviously we played poorly," said Tech coach Bill Curry. "We had pitiful execution in the first half. We'll keep working to improve our toughness and intensity."

Hall scored two touchdowns on runs of 1 and 8 yards and also rifled a 15-yard scoring pass to Robert Griffin. He finished with 16 completions in 32 attempts for 161 yards.

Lewis, who had 124 yards on 14 carries, scored his touchdown in the third quarter, breaking clear at the Tech 30.

Tulane, which still trails in the series 34-12, last beat the Jackets at Grant Field 7-0 in 1933 on Howard "Bucky" Bryan's 100-yard kickoff return.

Tech, 1-6, never penetrated the Tulane 30 until Rogers, making only his second appearance of the season, connected on 4 passes for 75 yards in a 79-yard drive that ended on Rogers' 9-yard TD pass to Leon Chadwick with 10:10 remaining. Rogers then hit Matt Rank for the 2-point conversion.

The Jackets struck in 1 play on their next possession when Rogers fired a strike to Marlon Heggs at the Tulane 45 where he got a key block from Rank, hit the right sideline and scored on a 73-yard play with 8:35 left in the game.

Tulane had three scoring opportunyties before the Greenies managed to punch across their first touchdown.

The Green Wave moved to the Tech 28 with the opening kickoff before Tech's Ted Thurson intercepted Hall's fourth-down pass in the end zone.

Moments later, Reggie Reginelli returned a punt 31 yards to the Tech 34 and Tulane reached the 15 before bogging down and Vince Manalla failed on a 28-yard field goal try into a brisk 20 mph wind.

Manalla did get a 37-yard field goal with the wind in the second quarter.

Tulane's other early threat that failed came when Tyrone Smith intercepted a Ted Peeples pass at the Jacket 30 but the Green Wave lost 27 yards when Hall was charged intentionally grounding a pass.

Tech got into Tulane territory only three times in the first three quarters, reaching the 39 near the end of the opening period on an 18-yard screen pass to Ronnie Cone, the 32 in the second quarter before bogging down and the 37 late in the third period where Rogers was sacked for a 12-yard loss by Donnie Rice.

Marshall 13
W. Carolina.....13

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Freshman Barry Childers kicked a Southern Conference record 59-yard field goal with seven seconds to play to give Marshall a 13-13 tie with Western Carolina Saturday afternoon.

The tie snapped Marshall's streak of 19 conseutive losses in Southern Conference play stretching back to the 1977 season.

Marshal is now 2-4-1 in the season and 0-3-1 in Southern Conference play and Western Carolina is 2-5-1 and 1-2-1.

Marshall took advantage of four WCU turnovers in the first half for a 10-0 lead at halftime only to have the Catamounts come back to take a 13-10 lead late in the fourth quarter.

Marshall scored on its first possession as Childers kicked a 38-yard field goal after WCU lost three fumbles inside the Thundering Herd's 20-yard line.

Marshall came back for a sustained drive of 66 yards in 10 plays to take a 10-0 lead when freshman quarterback Tony Konopka scored on a 25-yard bootleg play. That was the first touchdown scored by Marshall's offense in 18 quarters.

Florida.....13
Louisville.....0

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Freshman quarterback Wayne Peace passed to Cris Collinsworth for a touchdown and Brian Clark kicked two field goals to lead Florida to a 13-0 victory over Louisville before 62,687 homecoming fans Saturday.

The Gators, 5-1, scored the first time they got the ball on a 78-yard drive that ended with Peace's 5-yard pass to senior flanker Collinsworth, who got behind a Louisville defender in the end zone.

The touchdown, which came with 6:08 left in the first quarter, was set up by a 40-yard end around pass from Florida flanker Tyrone Young to Collinsworth.

The Gators let another scoring opportunity slip through their hands in the final seconds of the first quarter when fullback James Jones fumbled on Louisville's 2 and the Cardinals' Leon Williams recovered.

With 8:33 remaining before the half, another Gator drive stalled on the Lousville 5 and Clark, who last week kicked five field goals against Mississippi, notched a 21-yarder.

VMI 6

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Villanova's Wildcats used first half touchdowns by Shawn Passman and David Martin, a field goal by Chuck Bushbeck and a stiff defense to turn back Virginia Military's Keydets 17-6 in college football Saturday.

Passman went in from the 4, six plays after VMI fumbled away the ball on its own 28 late in the first quarter. Martin, weaving his way past would-be tacklers for the first 10 yards, scored on a 75-yard punt return midway through the second period.

Rose Girls In Sectionals

SMITHFIELD — Westover High School won the girls' cross-country sectional here Friday afternoon and E.E. Smith was second while Rose, with only three girls competing, did not compile a team total.

Westover's Lori Norwood was first with a time of 18:52, followed by Rocky Mount's Susie Dresser (18:58), Pine Forrest's Mary Horz (19:22), New Bern's Pam Hill (19:32) and Rocky Mount's Susie Ess (19:44).

Defense Sparks Bullets To Win

SCOTLAND NECK — Jamesville held Scotland Neck to 91 yards total offense and got two four-yard scoring runs from Matthew Moore en route to a 14-6 win Friday evening.

After a scoreless first period, Scotland Neck took the lead on a 30-yard pass (names unavailable). The kick failed, but SN still led, 6-0, at the half.

Coming out in the second half, the Bullets quickly got on the board when Moore ran four-yards for a score. Jamesville then took the lead when David Hardison hit Greg Sullivan for the PAT.

The Bullets increased their lead in the fourth period when Moore, who rushed for 52 yards, got his second four-yard scoring run.

William & Mary.....3

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Delaware quarterback Rick Scully sparked a second-quarter drive with 46 yards through the air and capped it off with a three-yard scoring toss to Ed Wood for the Blue Hens' 7-3 victory over William & Mary's Indians Saturday.

Delaware senior fullback Hugh Dougherty rushed for a career-high 150 yards on 34 carries.

Weaver KOs Coetzee In 13th To Keep Title

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Mike Weaver survived a barrage of crashing right hands from Gerrie Coetzee in the eighth round and slammed the South African challenger to the floor with a 13th-round knockout Saturday to retain his World Boxing Association heavyweight title.

The scheduled 15-rounder — the 28-year-old Weaver's first title defense since taking the crown away from John Tate with a 15th-round knockout March 31 in Knoxville, Tenn. — took place in a still-unfinished sports arena erected on the grounds of a South African-owned resort hotel in the sparse African bush.

Coetzee, a 25-year-old former dental technician who had hoped to become the first white holder of a heavyweight title since Sweden's Ingemar Johansson's brief tenure in 1959 until Floyd Patterson knocked him out June 20, 1960, fell like a tree when Weaver connected with a crunching left hand to the head.

Coetzee was making his second bid for the WBA title: Tate defeated him on points over 15 rounds last October in Pretoria, the South African capital. He entered the ring Saturday knowing that another defeat would almost certainly put him permanently out of the big-time boxing world.

Weaver was behind on points throughout the Tate fight until he hit Tate with a short right to the head. So Coetzee's handlers wanted him to try and finish Weaver in the early rounds, before Coetzee tired.

Coetzee went on the attack from the first round, pummeling Weaver with right-left combinations. Weaver seemed to be caught off guard by Coetzee's fierce assault. In the eighth round, Coetzee caught Weaver on the ropes with a series of vicious rights. Weaver's hands dropped and his head snapped backward.

Tension was so high in the sold-out 16,000-seat covered arena that several people fainted during the round, including an American woman in Weaver's party that flew here from his hometow ....v ⅓ .... s0Angeles. The woman, a friend of Weaver's who wouldn't be identified by members of the party, had to be taken away on a stretcher. Other women threatened to beat up photographers who tried to take her picture.

But Weaver pushed off the ropes and survived the Coetzee attack, which presented the South African with bad news.

"Coetzee lost his confidence because he couldn't put me down in the eighth," Weaver said after the fight.

Weaver went on the offensive and opened up a deep cut on the bridge of Coetzee's nose. Coetzee was backing off when Weaver launched his left, and Coetzee toppled into Weaver's corner and stayed there for the count from referee Jesus Celis of Venezuela. He had to be helped back to his corner where his handlers worked on him for several minutes after the fight ended.

Coetzee stayed in his room at the hotel for the post-fight news conference. But his trainer, Alan Toweel, said: "One knockout means nothing. Gerrie will be back."

Coetzee, interviewed at his hotel afterwards by the Associated Press, conceded "Weaver is the better man, much better."

"It was close," he said. "I almost had him. I never thought he would be that tough. Normally when I hit a guy he goes down. I think the title kept him up."

The South African wore a bandage on his nose and had a swollen face and hand.

Hal Tucker, Coetzee's manager, was literally speechless after the fight. He walked to his room as though in a trance.

"Gerrie was winning," Toweel said, until Weaver gave him the goodbye punch. Toweel said he wasn't sure why Coetzee wasn't able to finish Weaver in the eighth.

"I don't know," he said. "Gerrie had hurt his right hand. You can see it. But I'm not making excuses. Weaver is a great fighter."

Coetzee's right hand was operated upon several years ago after he broke it and after he suffered chronic ligament problems. Small bones in the hand were surgically welded together to form a so-called "bionic hand."

Weaver was complimentary toward Coetzee in his post-fight comments. He said Coetzee was a tough opponent.

"Sure he hurt me," said Weaver, who didn't show too much wear and tear. "Coetzee is the hardest puncher I've ever fought."

Weaver said he would now like to meet Larry Holmes, owner of the rival World Boxing Council's heavyweight title.

"I want to fight Holmes again because I fought a better opponent than he did," Weaver said. "He fought Ali, an old man."

This was a reference to Holmes' defeat of three-time heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, who tried to make a comeback last month in Las Vegas, Nev., at age 38.

But American promoter Bob Arum said he doesn't think a Weaver-Holmes fight will happen for a long time, "because it's going to take a lot of tough negotiations."

Ralph Houk Set For Bosox Job?

BOSTON (AP) — Ralph Houk, whose military heroics in World War II preceded the exploits of such fictional characters as James Bond, may be ready to embark on another suicidal mission — as manager of the Boston Red Sox.

While General Manager Haywood Sullivan and other top Red Sox officials remained incommunicado, there were persistent reports Saturday that Houk will be named Monday as the club's sixth manager since 1965.

Houk, still employed by the Detroit Tigers, could not be reached for comment. In Detroit, General Manager Jim Campbell of the Tigers said he knew nothing of the report, and had not talked to Sullivan for about three weeks.

Sullivan admitted Houk was on his list of candidate after he fired Manager Don Zimmer early this month. Zimmer was dismissed after the Red Sox fortunes dwindled on the field and home attendance dropped more than 300,000.

That list also included such names as Ted Williams, Ken Harrelson, Frank Robinson, Bob Lemon, Pat Corrales, Dick Howser and Joe Morgan of Boston's Pawtucket farm club in the International League.

Houk's availability was questioned at the outset. He retired as manager of the Tigers in 1978, supposedly to enjoy his big cigars while fishing near his home in Pompano Beach, Fla.

After quitting as manager, the Tigers kept Houk on the payroll as a consultant. However, a Detroit source reported he did "little consulting" and got the bug to return to baseball.

Knights Fall In Soccer

Goldsboro took a 3-1 lead in the first half on two goals by Tice and one by Frank Martin. The Knights' lone goal was by Jim Laney.

"We played a good game, one of the best of the year," Knight coach Dale Thatcher said. "But it was just one of those games we weren't suppose to win. They scored on their first goal of the game. We controlled the game most of the way but we just couldn't get the goals."

The Knights, now 5-7 overall and 1-2 in the conference, travel to Rocky Mount to face Falls Road. A win would tie the Knights for the league championship with Falls Road, which is 2-1 in league play.

Emory also noted that it is very tough for his team to put together a passing game against a team like Carolina. "When you have people like that coming in on you, and you have a rookie line up there, it really makes a difference. People think we ought to pass more against them, but you just can't do it when your protection can't stand up against their rush. What you have to do is try to stick it in there, get a piece of 'em and go north and south against them.

"Our backs didn't block well today on pass protection and their line was too much for our line. It all served to leave us in poor field position."

The Heels took their first possession down the field for their first score. With Lawrence carrying on eight of the ten plays, the Heels went 79 yards. Tops among the plays was a 41-yard burst by the speedy back that put the ball on the one. Lawrence went over from there on the next play, leaping high over the line with 10:55 left.

East Carolina got one of the few breaks of the day late in the period. That came when Lawrence was hit and fumbled and Glenn Morris recovered at the 24. The Bucs couldn't move it, howver, and Lamm booted his 40-yarder with 1:43 left to pull the Pirates within 7-3.

The field goal represented only the 16th, 17th and 18th points against the Heels in the first three periods, and just the second score against them in the first period.

Early in the second frame, the Pirates got a drive moving from their own 13 to the UNC 38 before running out of gas. Ernest Byner broke away for 21 yards from the ECU 34 and only a tackle by safety Greg Poole kept the freshman from going all the way for the first TD against the first team this year.

East Carolina got back to midfield following the kickoff, where a 60-yard field goal attempt by Vern Davenport fell harmlessly in the Blue colored Tar Heel end zone, several yards short.

Midway in the third period, the Heels drove again, from their own 49 after a punt. This time, Bryant got most of the yardage, but Lawrence came for the final three plays of the seven-play drive, including the final 29 yards. He went over from the two with 6:25 left, making it 21-3.

Following a Pirate punt on the next series, Carolina drove from its own 45 to the ECU 30 before stalling and settling for a 47-yard Hayes field goal with 2:29 left in the period. That made it 24-3.

Early in the final period, the Heels moved for their final touchdown. Driving 60 yards in six plays. Bryant carried all but one play, accounting for all but 15 yards. The final two put him into the end zone with 11:02 left and it was 31-3.

East Carolina, going against the number one line and the number two secondary, got the ball moving on the next series, going from the 40 to the 8 before being thrown back and losing it on downs.

East Carolina dropped back to 3-4 with the defeat, while the Heels are now 7-0. East Carolina returns home to face William & Mary this Saturday, while Carolina travels to Norman, Okla., to meet the University of Oklahoma.

ECU V'ball Team Falls

COLLEGE PARK — East Carolina's volleyball team, after winning the opening game, lost to Catholic University in the finals of the consolation bracket of the Maryland Invitational Tournament Saturday afternoon.

UNC-Chapel Hill was to have played Pittsburgh for the championship last night.

The Pirates, now 12-24, won the first game, 15-7, only to see Catholic rally to win the next two, 15-13, 15-5, and take the consolation championship.

ECU made it to the finals with victories Saturday over Navy (15-7, 15-7), Georgoetown (11-15, 15-9, 15-9), Virginia (15-13, 15-3) and West Virginia (11-15, 18-16, 15-13).

"We shouldn't have lost to them," ECU volleyball coach Lynn Davidson said. "That second game took awhile. It was eight-all and then 11-all, but they finally won it."

Of the victory over Navy, Davidson said: "They're a big team, but they're slow. We made them go to the floor." Davidson also praised Mitzi Davis, who served a perfect game of 11 points. (In pool play, the teams start at 4-4 and play to 15. After Navy had scored the first three points, it lost serve and Davis served out the game.)

In Friday's opening round, the Pirates lost to Rhode Island, 15-11, 9-15, 15-11, and Penn State, 15-4, 15-9, and were thus put in the consolation bracket on Saturday.

Nittany Lions Hold Off West Virginia, 20-15

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Curt Warner's 88-yard kickoff return, his second touchdown of the game, lifted 13th-ranked Penn State to a 17-8 lead early in the third quarter and the Lions then held off a late rally by West Virginia to post a 20-15 victory, their 22nd consecutive triumph over the Mountaineers.

West Virginia, after recovering an onside kick with 3:45 left in the game at the Penn State 47, had a chance to pull out the victory. A third-down pass by quarterback Oliver Luck was tipped in the air by Lions defensive back Pete Harris and was intercepted by his brother, Giuseppe Harris, to end the scoring threat.

The margin of victory was the smallest by Penn State since it began a quarter-century domination of West Virginia in 1955 that has seen the Mountaineers lose 24 times and tie the Lions only once.

Warner, a sophomore tailback, staked the Lions, 6-1, to a 10-0 lead late in the first quarter with a 3-yard scoring run. His kickoff return touchdown with 11:05 left in the third quarter, the third of his Penn State career, capped a madcap series in which the two teams scored 15 points in a 49-second span.

After Warner's second touchdown, the two teams got locked into a punting duel on the wet, windy and cold day in which at least half of the estimated crowd of 40,000 had left midway through the third quarter.

A 29-yard field goal by Herb Menhardt, his second of the game, gave the Lions a seemingly insurmountable 20-8 lead with 8:27 remaining in the game.

Indiana 35
Northwestern 20

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Lonnie Johnson and Tim Clifford scored two touchdowns each Saturday to lead Indiana to a 35-20 come-from-behind Big Ten football victory over winless Northwestern.

Johnson carried 22 times for 160 yards and his two touchdowns — one on a 23-yard run — came in the fourth quarter and sealed the triumph.

Boston College 30
Army 14

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Junior Leo Smith, who had rushed for just 6 yards all season, ran for 145 yards and one touchdown and John Cooper kicked three field goals to lead Boston College to a 30-14 college football victory over Army in a driving rain Saturday.

Sophomore quarterback John Loughery guided the Eagles on first half scoring marches of 89 and 88 yards. He scored Boston College's first touchdown on a 2-yard run early in the second quarter and passed 7yards to Kevin Benjamin for its last touchdown late in the third quarter.

Army, 2-4-1, was held to just two field goals by Dave Aucoin, covering 36 and 28 yards in the first half, which ended with the Eagles holding a 20-6 lead.

The Eagles, 3-4, played without their leading rusher Shelby Gamble, who 'ad a high fever. But Smith stepped in and broke loose for his second strong game against Army in as many years.

Michigan 45
Illinois 14

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Senior fullback Stanley Edwards had the best day of his career with 152 yards and sophomore wide receiver Anthony Carter starred in the first half Saturday to lead Michigan to a 45-14 romp over Big Ten foe Illinois.

Edwards scored a 4-yard touchdown and carried 18 times, good enough to let his sophomore understudy, Gerald Ingram, see enough playing time to score two touchdowns on runs of 1 and 4 yards.

Syracuse 17
Rutgers 9

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Joe Morris ran for 157 yards, including a 38-yard touchdown sprint to become the No. 1 ground gainer in Syracuse football history as the Orangemen beat Rutgers 17-9 Saturday.

Morris' touchdown run came in the third quarter to break a 3-3 deadlock after both teams had traded second-quarter field goals.

Rutgers pulled to within 10-9 midway through the fourth quarter when backup quarterback Ralph Leek scored on a one-yard run. A two-point conversion try was ruined by Syracuse defensive end Ken Kollar who hit quarterback Ed McMichael in the act of passing.

Minnesota 24
Iowa 6

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Marion Barber crashed in for three touchdowns and Minnesota patched up miscues with solid defense to down Iowa 24-6 Saturday in a mistake-ridden Big Ten game before the first sellout crowd at Memorial Stadium in 18 years.

Wyoming 34
San Diego St. 9

LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — Quarterback Phil Davis and fullback Mandel Robinson each scored twice in the first half Saturday to lead Wyoming to a 34-9 rout of San Diego State in Western Athletic Conference play.

The win raises Wyoming's record to 5-2 and 3-2 in the WAC.

W. Kentucky 13
E. Kentucky 10

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Jim Griffiths' 24-yard field goal with 5:20 left in the game lifted unbeaten Western Kentucky to a 13-10 victory Saturday over Eastern Kentucky in an Ohio Valley Conference football showdown.

Western Kentucky, 7-0 overall and 4-0 in OVC play, trailed 10-7 after three quarters.

But reserve quarterback Ralph Antone, who helped rescue Western in last week's win over Tennessee Tech, got the call again to open the fourth period. He twice guided the Hilltoppers, the nation's No. 4 Division I-AA team, on long drives that resulted in field goals. Antone completed all four of his passing attempts for a total of 84 yards.

DeBartolo Vows To Continue Fighting Despite Sale Veto

CHICAGO (AP) — Despite rejection by American League owners, Ohio multimillionaire Edward J. DeBartolo Sr. has vowed to continue his battle to purchase the Chicago White Sox.

"I don't think that the vote is such a big disappointment," DeBartolo said Friday following a meeting of AL owners. "We're going to pursue this. We'll take it to the next meeting of the league owners and then we'll be ready to approach it in a much more positive way."

And White Sox President Bill Veeck, who appeared alongside DeBartolo at a hastily arranged news conference following the vote, added, "The whole thing is weird."

"We have certain things that we can do and we intend to take advantage of every opening," said Veeck. "It was unreasonable and unfair, and I don't know what the problem was with Mr. DeBartolo."

Added Charles O. Finley, who retained the Oakland A's vote despite his recent sale of the club, "I think it (the vote) was ridiculous. Period."

The American League will convene in Dallas beginning Dec. 8 for major league baseball's annual winter meetings.

"The owners' concern appeared to be that the team would be leaving Chicago, but that had been abated," said AL President Lee MacPhail. "Now there appears to be a strong feeling to keep local ownership if it is available."

Eight of the 14 AL owners voted in favor of DeBartolo's bid and six voted against after a three-hour meeting in suburban Rosemont. The 71-year-old DeBartolo needed 10 affirmative votes to win approval of the sale.

MacPhail said other reasons the owners may have denied DeBartolo's bid were his interest in race tracks, his age — "though it was not discussed, my guess is that it was a factor," and "...the fact that he had so many business interests."

MacPhail said the league would not "to my knowledge" reconsider the vote, which came after some three hours of meetings. He added that baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's stated opposition to DeBartolo did not influence the owners' decision.

"I have no reason to believe it would have come out differently even if Kuhn was not involved," MacPhail said.

In a statement issued in New York, Kuhn said: "I fully support the decision of the American League. I will have no further comment."

Despite repeated promises from DeBartolo and Veeck to continue their efforts, the league's decision left the White Sox ownership question in limbo. Veeck, part owner and head of a shareholders group that bought the franchise in 1977, said he would continue to operate the club and make trades "that are to our advantage."

He also said the club would participate in the re-entry draft, but it is unlikely that any major moves would be made without the stronger financial backing that the board of directors hoped would come with the new owner.

However, some observers believe the vote may have opened the door for a Chicago consortium headed by William Farley and Jerry Reinsdorf to buy the club for an amount reportedly close to the $20 million offered by DeBartolo.

"The feeling of a lot of people was that quality local ownership was available," MacPhail said. He also said he had met with the Farley-Reinsdorf consortium and "felt they were a quality group.

"I'm not telling the White Sox who to sell the ball club to. Let me make that much clear," he added. "But it's impossible to say what happens when a team is owned by an organization with no real tie to the community. We've seen some bad things come out of that situation before."

DeBartolo had met with the owners behind closed doors for 25 minutes earlier in the day and appealed for them to accept his bid. After leaving the meeting he had said he was optimistic he would obtain approval.

Rodgers, Others, Chase Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — For Bill Rodgers, Sunday's New York City Marathon will be another race in which to enhance his credentials as the world's best long-distance runner. For Lasse Viren, it will mark the end of a remarkable career. For Filbert Bayi, it will be the start of a venture, and for three Chinese runners, it will constitute a breakthrough.

The contrasting emotions of those six competitors alone would be enough fodder for the script of a highly dramatic and intriguing race. But there are nearly 16,000 other entries in the record field, and they also will have their own stories, their own desires to fulfill.

Two — most likely Rodgers among the men and Grete Waitz of Norway among the women — will experience the joy of victory. The others will truly feel the agony of defeat, in this gruelling 26-mile, 385-yard test of strength, stamina, conditioning and willpower.

The losers, however, will not necessarily be losers. Marathoners don't necessarily run to win. They run instead to finish and lower their personal bests.

Rodgers, winner of each of the New York City Marathons since 1976, will be running both to win and to lower his personal best — an American record of 2 hours, 9 minutes, 27 seconds, set in capturing the 1979 Boston Marathon.

"I want a fast time for this year," said the world's top-ranked marathoner from Sherborn, Mass.

For Viren, the Olympic 5,000 and 10,000-meter gold medalist in 1972 and 1976, the marathon probably will be the last race of his outstanding career. Earlier this week, he won another race, for a political seat on the municipal council in his home town of Myrskyla, Finland.

For the versatile Bayi, former world record holder at 1,500 meters and a mile and the 1980 Olympic silver medalist in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, this will be his first marathon. The Tanzanian is ranked among the world leaders this year in five events, and has told race director Fred Lebow that he intends to run a 2:10:00 marathon.

The runners from China — Liu Zonggui, Fang Menshun and Shan Changmin — also will be making a debut, of sorts — their debut in the West. Each has run a marathon in 2:19:00 or less.

Other top men's entrants include 1980 Olympic silver medalist Gerard Nyboer of The Netherlands, Dave Chettle from Australia, Jerome Drayton from Canada, Rodolfo Gomez from Mexico, Martti Vainio from Finland, and Americans Don Kardong, Jeff Wells, John Lodwick, Alberto Salazar and 1979 runnerup Kirk Pfeffer.

In the women's division, Waitz, who made her marathoning debut in the 1978 New York race with a world best of 2:32:30 and lowered it in last year's event to 2:27:33, is an overwhelming favorite.

Her strongest challenge is expected from Patty Lyons-Catalano of Boston, the American record holder at 2:30:57.

It's Dallas, San Diego Sun. Night

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Chargers take their aerial circus to Dallas Sunday, and the Cowboys, in danger of slipping off their perennial perch atop the National Football Conference East Division, are hoping to get back on the winning track.

The night game, which will be nationally televised by ABC, highlights Sunday's midpoint of the National Football League season.

In other games Sunday, Pittsburgh is at Cleveland, Cincinnati travels to Houston, New England is at Buffalo, Seattle plays at Oakland, Chicago is at Philadelphia, Los Angeles goes to Atlanta, Minnesota is at Green Bay, New Orleans travels to Washington, San Francisco plays host to Tampa Bay, Denver is at the New York Giants, Detroit is at Kansas City and St. Louis plays at Baltimore.

Monday night, the Miami Dolphins take on the Jets in New York.

With quarterback Dan Fouts at the controls, throwing for 444 yards, the Chargers unleashed several lightning bolts last Sunday as they crushed the Giants 44-7. San Diego leads the American Conference West with a 5-2 record.

The Cowboys, also at 5-2, are one game behind Philadelphia in the NFC East after dropping a 17-10 decision to the Eagles.

"We pretty well know what kind of offense the Chargers will run because we've faced (San Diego Coach Don) Coryell teams before," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "They throw a lot to their backs. We'll try to just slow San Diego down. You can't totally stop their passing game."

Landry and Coryell matched wits 10 times while Coryell was at St. Louis, with Landry emerging victorious six times.

"This is the usual Cowboy team — outstanding," said Coryell. "They are always well coached and (quarterback) Danny White is throwing the ball better than we are, just absolutely great."

Last week, however, White suffered his worst day of the season as the Cowboys' offense failed to score a touchdown.

The Pittsburgh-Cleveland clash will go a long way towards straightening out the AFC Central race. Both teams are tied with Houston with 4-3 records and a share of the division lead.

The New England-Buffalo game pits the top two teams in the AFC East against each other while the Los Angeles-Atlanta game does the same for the first-and second-place teams in the NFC West.

Bodine On Card Pole

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Record-breaking Geoff Bodine has joined Maynard Troyer as a pole-starter for Sunday's $112,595 Cardinal Classic 500 doubleheader at Martinsville Speedway.

Bodine, who had qualified fifth Thursday for the 250-lap Modified race that opens the program Sunday at 12:30 p.m. EST, turned in a record speed of 92.699 mph Friday to earn the No.1 spot for the second half of the twinbill, a 250-lap Late Model Sportsman race.

The Pontiac driver, a six-time Martinsville Speedway winner from Chemung, N.Y., who now lives in Pleasant Garden, N.C., broke both the track and Cardinal 500 qualifying records.

Sonny Hutchins of Richmond, Va., held the old record for the .525-mile track of 91.185 mph and Ray Hendrick, also of Richmond, set the previous Cardinal 500 mark of 91.074 mph.

The old record also was bettered Friday by Sam Ard of Asheboro, N.C., who hit 92.059 mph in an Oldsmobile, and Tommy Ellis of Richmond, who had a fast lap of 91.374 mph in a Pontiac.

Fourth and fifth were Jack Ingram of Asheville, N.C., and defending Cardinal 500 and new national champion Morgan Shepherd of Conover, N.C., who will be married in prerace ceremonies.

Pacers Whip Atlanta, Now 5-2

Indiana Finally Awakening In NBA?

By The Associated Press

The Indiana Pacers, once the scourge of the American Basketball Association, may finally be reawakening in the National Basketball Association.

Indiana teams led by stars such as Roger Brown, Mel Daniels, Billy Keller and Freddie Lewis won three ABA titles. But, since being accepted into the more prestigious NBA in 1976, the Pacers have struggled just to be respectable.

This season may be different, though. The Pacers have bounded out of the starting gate with five victories in seven games, including a 104-97 triumph over the Atlanta Hawks Friday night that gave them a share of the Central Division lead with idle Milwaukee.

Silk-smooth Billy Knight led Indiana with 23 points, 14 of them in the pivotal fourth quarter, and George Johnson came off the bench to score 17 more. The two Johnson's, George and Clemon, and James Edwards each had 10 rebounds as Indiana became the first team this season to outrebound the Hawks, 55-46.

"Billy Knight was absolutely fabulous out there," said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown. "He ignited them off the dribble. He just makes things happen and we just forced too many shots out there tonight."

Indiana Coach Jack McKinney wasn't thinking about being in first place; only about the game.

"At halftime, we talked about how badly we were playing, and that we were still in the game," McKinney explained. "Atlanta didn't really play that well and we really went after it in the second half."

George McGinnis missed the last 7½-minutes after suffering a knee sprain that could keep him out of action for a few games. That gave George Johnson his chance.

"I've always said it's not whether I can play the game, it's just getting a chance to show that I can," Johnson said. "You have to have someone who is willing to come in in clutch situations and pull the team out."

Danny Roundfield topped Atlanta in scoring with 17 points and rebounds with 14. The Hawks slipped to 4-2 with both losses at the hands of the Pacers.

Lakers 104, Sonics 98

Jamaal Wilkes and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar each scored 26 points to lead the Lakers, who improved their record to 6-1. Los Angeles built a 23-point first quarter lead and coasted from there.

Norm Nixon had 24 points and Magic Johnson 18 for Los Angeles, which remains tied with Phoenix for first place in the Pacific Division.

The Sonics, 3-5, were led by guard Freddie Brown's 19 points.

Suns 117, Nuggets 94

Len Robinson poured in a game-high 23 points to lead the Phoenix romp. The victory was the sixth in seven games for the Suns.

The Nuggets, 2-5, appeared to lose their composure after rookie Cedrick Hordges was banished for a flagrant foul against the Suns' Walter Davis. Hordges stepped in front of Davis in a two-on-one break and knocked him down and referee Jim Capers ruled it was intentional. Davis converted both free throws to start the Suns on a run of 10 unanswered points and the Nuggets managed only five points the rest of the third period.

Trail Blazers 120, Mavericks 105

Mychal Thompson and Calvin Natt led eight Portland players in double figures as the Blazers shot a sizzling 57 percent on 52 of 91 from the field.

However, Portland needed a 9-0 spurt in the third period to come from behnd.

Thompson, with 22 points, and Natt, with 21 points and 10 rebounds, gave the Blazers, 3-3, an inside game that overwhelmed the expansion Mavericks, 2-6.

Cavaliers 126, Nets 112

Reserve Bill Robinzine, who wound up with 10 points, sparked a second-period 20-8 burst that put Cleveland on top to stay and Randy Smith scored a game-high 31 points — 23 in the second half — in the victory over New Jersey.

The Nets, 5-4, have lost three of four games at home this season. The Cavaliers are now 3-6 after recording ther first road victory.

Clippers 103, Jazz 100

Phil Smith, Swen Nater, Freeman Williams and rookie forward Michael Brooks each scored 20 points or more to pace the Clippers.

Utah pulled to within 97-96 with three minutes remaining, but Nater and Williams each sank foul shots to boost the Clippers' lead to 99-96. The Jazz couldn't close the gap again as San Diego, 2-4, ended a four-game losing streak.

Cooney Flails Away

KO Puts Cooney Amid Heavyweight Picture

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Gerry Cooney was trying to get loosened up when the fight ended and the Long Island Irishman found himself right in the middle of the heavyweight championship picture.

"I was just getting loosened up," said the unbeaten Cooney Friday night. I was trying to make the jab work when I saw an opening and I just dug my left hook into his body and just kept it there."

That left hook knocked veteran Ron Lyle through the ropes and onto the ring apron, where he was counted out at 2:49 of first round of a scheduled 10-rounder at the Nassau Coliseum.

Jones and the other manager, Dennis Rappoport, said they have had offers to fight WBC champion Larry Holmes and the winner of today's WBA title match in South Africa between champion Mike Weaver and South African challenger Gerrie Coetzee.

"We don't care who we fight," said Rappoport. "We're going look at all the facts, see what the best offer is and make a deal in best interests of Gerry Cooney.

Cooney said he would not like to fight in South Africa and Rappoport said, "we have no qualms about fighting the fighter (Coetzee). We have serious reservations about fighting in South Africa. I feel strongly that we wouldn't go."

The victory was Cooney's 24th in as many fights and his 21st knockout, and it was a big one for him because it came in front of the home folks. A crowd of about 10,000 showed up and screamed his name from the time he started down the aisle to the ring until he left.

"I love this feeli g," said Cooney. "I love what happened tonight. There's no feeling like it."

The loss for Lyle, who weighed 211, probably eliminated the Denver fighter as a serious factor in the heavyweight division. His record is now 40-7-1. One of the other losses came when he was stopped by Muhammad Ali in the 11th round in a title bid in 1975.

Roanoke Island Settlement 400th Anniversary Being Planned

AN ANCIENT NATIVE GRAPE VINE . . . on Roanoke Island is said to have been in existence at the time the first English explorers came to the area of what is now North Carolina. Early writers on the scene extolled the goodly abundance of native grapes, fishes and thick forests of cedars in the New World (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor).

By CHANCY M. KAPP
N.C. Dept. Cultural Resources

1984 may seem long years away to many people, but to the members of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee (AFHAC), it's just around the corner.

They are the people charged by the governor with making plans to turn 1984 into a spectacular send-off for four years of festivities marking the 400th anniversary of the first English attempts to settle North America.

They have taken two big steps already: selecting an official logo adapted from a compass drawn on maps by explorer John White; and hiring an executive secretary, Dr. John Neville, who works out of an office in Chapel Hill.

"Between 1584 and 1587, England reached out to a new continent and forever changed the history of Europe and America," according to Neville. "The period has been shrouded in misinformation and legend, and part of our mission is to help people understand and appreciate the facts. Of course, we want them to have fun, too!"

Probably the most famous of the settlements was the mysterious "Lost Colony" of 1587, which disappeared from Roanoke Island without a trace. But the "Roanoke Voyages" included several trips throughout the period, such as the 1584 expedition of Phillip Amadas and Ralph Lane's unsuccessful attempt to establish a colony in 1585.

"Those voyages give northeastern North Carolina a unique link to the England of Elizabethan times," says Neville. "It was a wonderful era of romance and high adventure, and that's where we want to focus to festivities."

Neville emphasizes that AFHAC, an arm of the N.C. Dept. of Cultural Resources, does not have funds for direct grants to sponsors of specific events. However, it does have the power to give official sanction to activities, which permits use of the copyrighted logo. Committee members also take seriously their responsibilities as coordinators and want to help individuals and groups find funds for celebrating the Four Hundreth.

As Neville says, "There are only so many foundations and so many agencies with money for this kind of thing. If we work together, I think we'll avoid a lot of duplication and competition."

AFHAC has already sanctioned several projects, the most spectacular of which is the building of a sailing ship designed to resemble as closely as possible the 16th century vessels used by explorers.

Money for the ship is being raised by the American Quadricentennial Corporation, a private, non-profit group founded to assist AFHAC.

Charles Wade, coordinator of the ship project, estimates it will cost between $300,000 and $600,000.

"We're going to have a beautiful ship," says Wade. "Of course, we can't say it's an exact reproduction, because we don't have any pictures or detailed descriptions, but we know enough to give people an idea of just how samll these ships were, and how brave people who sailed on them were!"

Also sanctioned by AFHAC is an ambitious publications program. William Powell, an AFHAC member and veteran professor of history at the University of North Carolina, is supervising development of a series of pamphlets geared for the general public dealing with topics ranging from native plants of the New World to Elizabethan customs. David Stick, also a member of AFHAC and a distinguished writer, is working on a concise history of the Roanoke Voyages.

"If we want to lay the myths to rest, we're going to have to do it with solid, readable publication," sayd Stick. "Events will come and go, but the books will stay."

Archaeological digs also play big roles in AFHAC's plans. A massive effort to uncover the remains of Indian culture in the Albermarle region is already underway, thanks to cooperation from East Carolina University's David Phelps, the N.C. Division of Archives and History and the national Park Service. Several important sites have already been uncovered.

Plans are also in the works for an Elizabethan festival, musical concerts and special dramatic presentations.

"We're not thinking small," says John Neville. "We want to hear from people who have ideas about involving public schools. We want to hear from local governments, especially in northeastern North Carolina. We want to hear from arts organizations and historical societies. Our job is to make sure all North Carolinians are involved in this celebration of their beginnings."

Those who want to be involved should contact:

NEEDLEWORK

FAYETTEVILLE — An exhibit of original needlework will be displayed at the Arsenal House, 822 Arsenal Avenue, Fayetteville, beginning Sunday, November 2 and continuing through November 30. The show is sponsored by the Arts Council of Fayetteville/Cumberland County, Inc.

An opening reception will be held from 2 to 4 p.m.

Jeri Bullock At Tobacco Festival

Miss Bullock is representing the state of North Carolina and will be competing with representatives from each of the other 22 tobacco producing states in the U.S. The National Tobacco Festival is held annually in Richmond and is in its 32nd year.

JERI BULLOCK

The contestants will be judged for three days on talent, poise, personality, conduct and other accomplishments. The grand finale to the pagaent and the tobacco festival will be the crowning of the queen during halftime of the Tobacco Bowl Football game Saturday.

The Queen will receive an educational scholarship, numerous gifts and will serve as a goodwill ambassador for the tobacco industry, travelling in the U.S. and overseas.

This will be one of Miss Bullock's final appearances as the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Queen prior to the crowning of the 1981 Queen. The pagaent is scheduled for November 15 at the Ayden-Grifton High School during the third annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

Jeri is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hagan and is a freshman at East Carolina University.

Sets Tobacco Festival Decorating Contest

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival kicks off its schedule of events in a couple of weeks with the Tobacco Festival decorating contest.

Area businesses will show their pride in the flue-cured tobacco industry by decorating lobbies, counter tops or any other appropriate area in their business establishments. The decorating must be centered around a segment of the tobacco industry or tobacco farm life. Judging will be on originality and neatness.

The competition is divided into four segments: retail stores and businesses with 10 or less employees; retail stores and businesses with 11 or more employees; restaurants and motels; banks, savings & loans and other financial institutions. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company will present a cash award of $100 to the first place winner in each classification.

Committee Chairman Charles A. Forbes says response has been good for this year's competition and expects to hear from many more businesses before the deadline which is extended to October 31.

For further details on the Tobacco Festival Decorating Contest call Mr. Forbes at 752-3468 or Festival Director, Kaye Hampton, at 752-4101.

The 1980 Festival is scheduled to run from November 10 through 20.

PCC Committee Holds Meeting

Pitt Community College Adult Basic Education Participatory Planning Committee (PPC) held its first meeting for the year Thursday night on PCC campus.

Mary Outterbridge, ABE coordinator, gave a progress report on the ABE program and shared the evaluation of last year's program with members.

PPC members, Virginia Carlton and Margaret Wirth volunteered their services to work as a committee on the volunteer tutor program. Ray Thomas, Argie Cannon, Dorlas Cayton, and Josephine Reeves will work on the ABE Rally Month which is being planned for December.

Argie Cannon, chairperson, and other officers will remain active in their present positions until February, 1981.

Anyone who is interested in working on this committee or being a volunteer tutor is to call 756-3130.

Oil Paintings On Display

RALEIGH — Oil paintings by Greenville's Sarah Blakeslee Speight are included in the "Stable Artists" exhibit on the first floor of the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh.

Other North Carolina artists with works being shown in this exhibit are Robbie Tilliotson of Denton with cray pas drawings on paper; Marianne Mannase of Durham, collages; and Susan Gardels of Greensboro, paper works hand-made and sewn.

In addition to these two-dimensional works, there will also be a showing of weavings and other fiber arts by Dean Johns of Charlotte, Sarah Vincent of Durham, and Sharon Parker of Raleigh.

The "Stable Artists" and the fiber works are being exhibited in the Collectors Gallery of the museum.

Business Notes

STOCK PURCHASES

C. B. Tugwell, president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County, announced that in the near future all eligible depositors will receive an offering circular and order forms which they may utilize if they wish to purchase stock to be issued by the firm.

Tugwell said no determination has yet been made as to the date at which the stock offering will commence, although plans are underway for commencing an offering as early as January.

DECLARED DIVIDEND

NCNB Corp. is a Charlotte-based holding company which has North Carolina National Bank as its principal subsidiary.

HIGHER RESULTS

TRW Inc. reported higher sales and earnings for both the third quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30.

Sales for the quarter reached $1.19 billion, a seven percent increase over 1979's third period total of 1.11 billion. Net earnings increased to $48.9 million, a six percent gain over the $46.3 million recorded in 1979's third quarter.

For the nine months, TRW sales totaled $3.68 billion, a nine percent gain over the $3.37 billion posted in the first nine months last year. Net earnings rose to $154.7 million, up seven percent from $144.3 million the period a year ago.

ACTIVITY LEVEL UP

The level of business activity in North Carolina moved upward in September, according to the Wachovia Business Index, registering 155.4 or three-tenths of a percent above the revised August level.

The gain in the Index, it was reported, resulted from employment increases in both the manufacturing and non-manufacturing sectors, as well as a slightly longer work week in manufacturing industries. Price adjusted average hourly earnings were unchanged from the August figures.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for the state was 7.4 percent in September, down two-tenths of a percent from August.

INCOME DOWN

First Citizens Bank reported income before securities transactions and after applicable taxes of $7,648,000 for the first nine months of 1980, compared to $8,537,000 for the same period in 1979. Net income for the period ended Sept. 30 totaled $3,614,000, down from $4,150,000 for the first nine months of 1979.

Income before securities transactions and after taxes for the third quarter of 1980 totaled $2,210,000, compared to $3,357,000 for the third quarter of 1979. Net income for the quarter was $1,048,000, compared to $1,662,000 for the same period in 1979.

NAMED ASSISTANT

Gene Hudson has been appointed assistant general manager of radio station WCPS/WKTC in Tarboro, according to Robert L. Harper, president and general manager of the Coastal Plains Broadcasting Co.

Harper said that Hudson will also retain his position as sales manager for the station.

Hudson graduated from Belvoir-Falkland High School in 1964 and later graduated from Elkins School of Radio Broadcasting in Dallas. He formerly worked in radio announcing positions with WOOW and WPXY in Greenville.

The new assistant is married to the former Carolyn Moore of Falkland and they have one daughter, Angela.

BANK POSITION

David M. Brown Jr. has been elected assistant vice president of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. in Greenville, according to T. A. Bennett, senior vice president and regional executive of the bank's Eastern Region.

A Greensboro native, Brown joined Wachovia in 1973 as a field representative, retail banking, a position he held until 1975 when he accepted new duties as assistant retail loan administration officer. In 1977, he became assistant regional loan administration officer, his present position.

Brown, a graduate of Greensboro College, is married to the former Nicole Sills May of Nashville and they have two children, Maggi and Mitchell.

CASH DIVIDEND

The board of directors of First Union Corp. declared the regular quarterly cash dividend of 26 cents per share, payable Dec. 15 to shareholders of record on Nov. 14.

RECORD REVENUES

Stewart Sandwiches Inc. reported that it attained record revenues of $50,937,789 in 1980, a 7.1 percent increase over 1979 sales of $47,573,039.

Net earnings were $1,408,183, compared with earnings of $1,411,276 in the previous year.

Corn, Soybean Prices High

By KATHY OSOBA
AP Business Writer

Aggressive demand for soybeans and soybean products in the European cash market and good speculative buying pushed corn and soybean prices to new contract highs Friday.

Trading volume on the close at the Chicago Board of Trade was especially heavy with last minute buy orders from brokerage houses as new highs were established.

The market moved higher early on European demand and an Agriculture Department re-port that showed lower corn stocks than expected.

The Department said corn stocks total 1.6 billion bushels, 100 million bushels less than traders expected. Wheat stocks were slightly more than expected at 2.47 billion bushels.

But analysts said cash market buyers were anxious to lock in the current high prices levels reasoning that good world demand and poor crop production overseas could move prices still higher.

New contract highs were established in all corn futures months and five of eight contract months in soybean futures.

Farmer selling has been lighter than usual this fall with some producers opting to keep more grain on farm while awaiting still higher prices. But analysts said the new contract highs and the prospect of reserve corn being released in the coming week could result in more farmer selling to take ad-vantage of the current market levels.

Reports of wet, cool weather in the wheat growing regions of Argentina gave some support to wheat prices. The International Wheat Council in London lowered its estimate of Soviet wheat production by five million metric tons to 100 metric tons. That's 8 percent above last year's crop, but still sharply below the record 1978 crop.

Soybeans prices were ½ cent to 15½ cents higher with the November contract quoted at $9.05½ per bushel; wheat was 2 cents to 3½ cents higher with the December contract at $5.38 per bushel; corn was 2 cents to 6¼ cents higher with the December contract at $3.73¾ per bushel; and oats were 2 cents to 2½ cents higher with the December option at $2.12½ per bushel.

Livestock futures closed mixed and traded in a narrow range, with live cattle and live hogs getting some strength from the higher grain prices.

Confusion in the market about the number of hogs on farms and concern about weak cash prices kept traders from taking large new positions in the market.

At the close of trading at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, live cattle were .20 cent to .33 cent higher with the December contract quoted at 70.92 cents per pound; feeder cattle were .25 cent lower to .40 cent higher with the November option at 77.77 cents per pound; live hogs were .25 cent lower to .20 cent higher with the December contract quoted at 51.85 cents per pound; and pork bellies were .05 cent lower to .32 cent higher with the February option at 71.90 cents per pound.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

George M. Fesperman, senior vice president and senior trust officer of Planters National Bank & Trust Co., was elected president of the Trust Division of the North Carolina Bankers Association at the NCBA's 47th annual Trust Conference at Hilton Head Island, S.C.

A Charlotte native, he is a graduate of Duke University and the National Trust School at Northwestern University.

REDUCTION APPROVAL

Virginia Electric and Power Co. reported that it has received approval from the N.C. Utilties Commission to reduce customers' bills almost three percent during December, January, February and March.

Vepco said the reduction will lower a 1,000 kilowatt-hour per month residential customer's bill by 1.87, from $62.86 to $60.99 based on present winter rates. Those customers qualifying for the energy conservation rate would see a reduction to $58.41.

Randy McIver, Vepco's Southern Division vice president, said the reduction reflects lower fuel expenses during May, June, July and August because Vepco was able to increase use of nuclear and coal generation, and decrease use of expensive oil.

Drs. Malene And Fred Irons Chair Operation Santa Claus

DR. MALENE IRONS

DR. FRED IRONS

Dr. Malene Grant Irons and Dr. Fred Irons will serve as honorary chairmen of this year's Mental Health Association in Pitt County Operation Santa Claus Campaign.

The announcement was made by Dr., Frank G. Fuller, president of the MHA in Pitt County, during a kickoff tea given recent by a former campaign chairman, Betty Brewer, wife of ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer. The campaign is to enable citizens from throughout Pitt County to give gifts to patients at Cherry Hospital and Caswell Center who otherwise might not be remembered at Christmas.

Dr. Malene is associated with the ECU School of Medicine. She was the first woman physician in Greenville, having practiced pediatrics here for many years before becoming director of the ECU Development Evaluation Clinic, which now bears her name.

Dr. Fred is director of Student Health Service at ECU. He practiced family medicine here for many years.

The couple have three sons, two of whom are doctors, the other an attorney.

Dr. Malene said, "Despite the exciting advances in the care of mental illness, many persons with severe problems remain hospitalized. Operation Santa Claus gives all of us the opportunity to show these patients that we do, indeed, care and share."

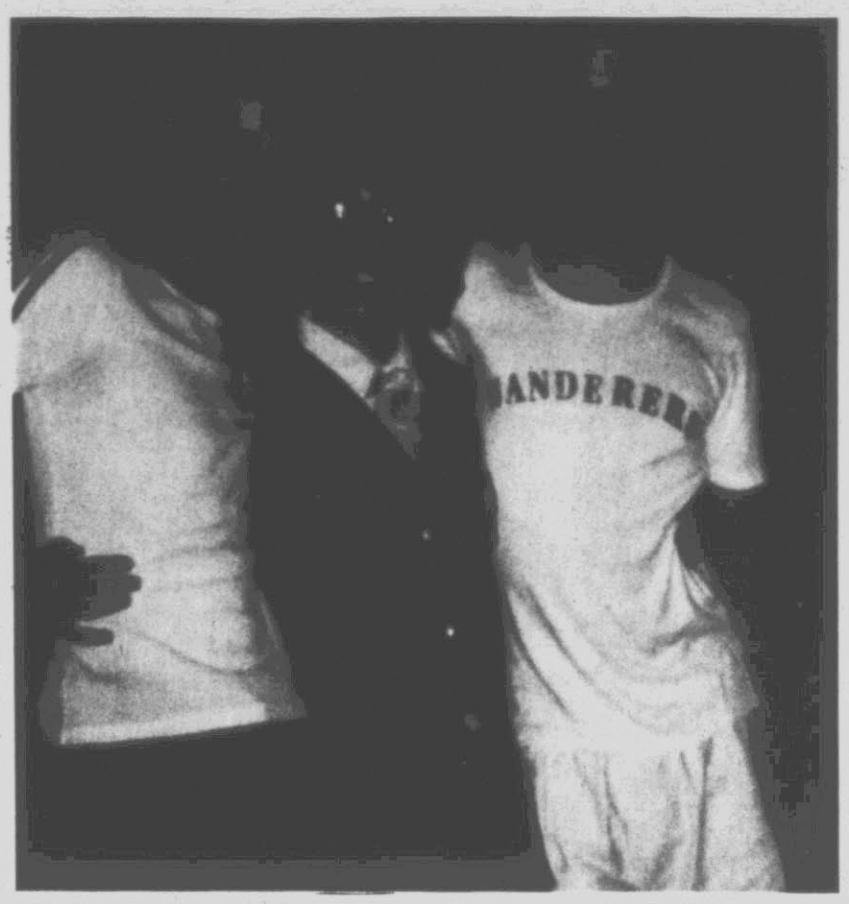
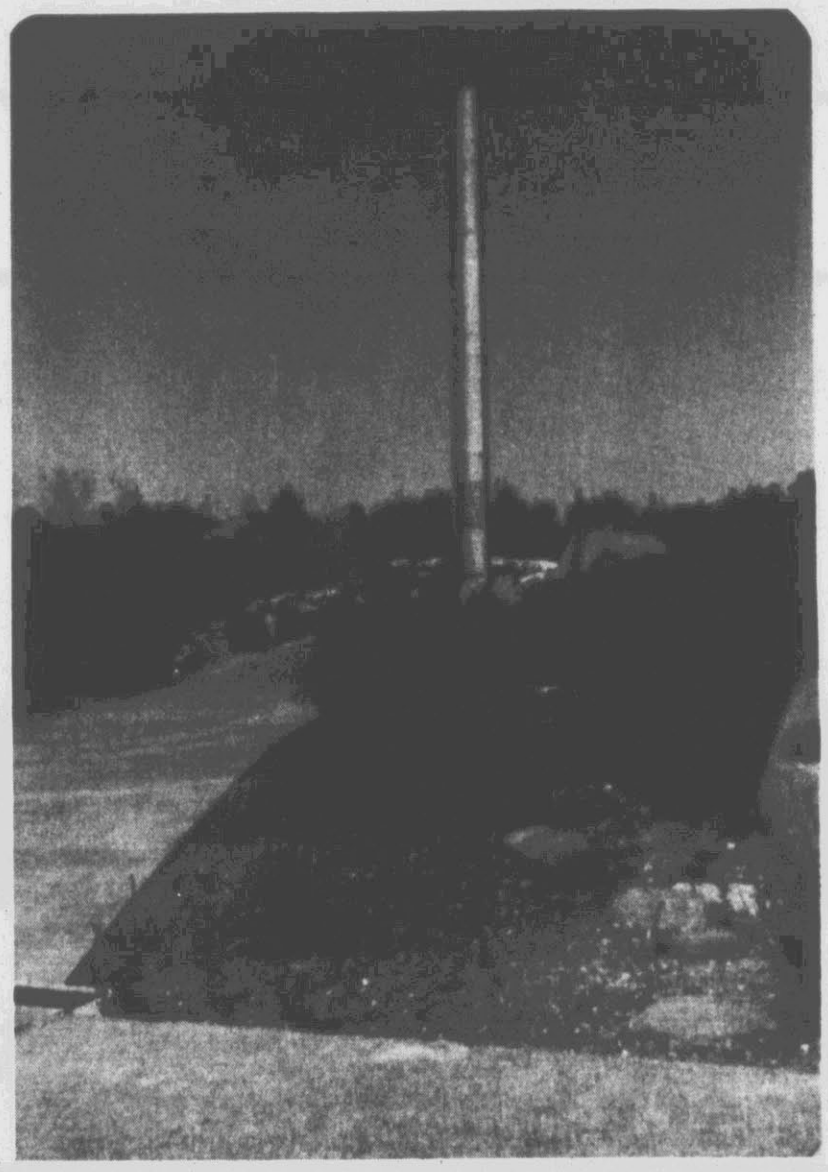
AIR GLIDING. . .was provided by the Israeli Air Force in some of their old gliders, which were towed by a truck. Here Sara is pictured in front with her pilot, seated in back.



COUSINS MEETING. . .Sara Baker of Greenville had a reunion with her Israeli cousin, David, right and another cousin, Bobby, who was also visiting there.

Exchange Program Was Incentive



SECOND PILLAR. . .was built in rememberance of those who resisted in World War II and is part of a museum dedicated to the six million Jews who died.

Civil Air Patrol Cadet Sara Baker of Greenville learned of the group's international exchange program when she became a member over three years ago.

"When I joined the CAP, I was told the exchange was an important and much sought after side benefit of the program. It was my main incentive for working to achieve my present rank of captain which is a minimum requirement for participation in the exchange. To achieve rank in CAP, the cadet must take two tests and run a mile in a certain amount of time. In addition, one must attend meetings," she said.

"The reason I joined CAP was due to my interest in learning to fly. While I was a member in Raleigh, I did just that every Saturday. Here, we have a different system. As soon as a cadet passes a test, he or she is given a flight. CAP not only offers aviation but also search and rescue, first aid and communications."

The purpose of the exchange is to promote international understanding among young people. The exchange sends cadets from several countries — European, Canada, United States and Middle East — to a central country where they are then sent to their host country, where they are sponsored by the Air Cadet group or Air Force. Germany was the central country this past summer and Cadet Baker's host country was Israel.

Her particular group of about 30 (five girls and 26 guys) included nine Americans. "After we boarded the airplane that would take us to Israel, we set about meeting the others in our group and luckily English was the main language they spoke during the trip. We flew over the Swiss Alps down the western coast of Italy, across Greece and then to Israel. The scenery from the airplane was fantastic, especially the Alps, which showed quite clearly from 33,000 feet high.

"We landed at Ben Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv and the first unusual thing I noticed was that some sort of crop was being grown between runways. After disembarking and having passports stamped we were taken by bus to a nearby air base where we were served refreshments. This proved to be a pattern, for almost everywhere we went, we were fed. We heard a short lecture on the geography of Israel and given maps of the city we were in. The city, Ramat-Gan, has been hosting cadets for 22 years," said Miss Baker.

"Families would take us in, feed us, wash our clothes and help us spend our freetime, what little we had. I was delighted that we stayed with families. Some of the cadets who went to other countries spent their time in hotels. The entire experience would have been incomplete without the opportunity to meet the people and see how they lived," she continued.

"The families treated us well and we spent our two Saturdays at the beach getting sunburns. The beaches there were wonderful but very crowded. The water was the most beautiful shade of blue I had even seen. Altogether we swam in five different bodies of water, Mediterranean Sea, Sea of Galilee, Red Sea, Jordan River and the Dead Sea. We were escorted on a tour of the country by the Israeli Air Force and we saw all that we could of the country from the Golan Heights to the very tip of the Sinai Desert.

"We climbed Masada, bargained in the Arab market in Jerusalem and visited the Israeli Aircraft Industries. We visited the Carmel Wine Cellars, the president's house in Jerusalem and the Knesset or Parliament building. We saw the wall of the temple in Jerusalem, borders of Lebanon and Jordan and visited a kibbutz or farm," she recalled.

"When I first discovered I would be traveling to Israel, I was apprehensive. So were a lot of my friends who told me I was crazy to go there. Some expressed doubts as to my safety. We were safe the entire time we were there. In fact we could not have been in danger with all the soldiers around us. At no time did I fear for my safety. After a while, though, I was no longer bothered by the presence of the soldiers.

"I was quite surprised to see how green Israel was. Parts of the country were as green as Greenville. In fact, if it weren't for the street signs in Hebrew, I might have thought I was in North Carolina in a particularly hot summer. The heat was not as bad as I thought. It wasn't as humid as Greenville, therefore much more bearable.

"The biggest problem that faced me was the language. Most people spoke English but I had to call back my ninth and 10th grade German at times especially when I went shopping by myself or when I had a conversation with my friend from Austria, who spoke very little English. Another problem was the money which took three or four days to master," she said.

PRESIDENT'S HOUSE. . .which is located in Jerusalem was included in the cadet's tour of the country. The house is filled with display cases with old books and treasured artifacts. The architecture was fantastic according to Sara.

Teenagers' Reading Tastes Are Changing

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Teenagers are swinging away from explicit sex, divorce and what-not books to romantic tales that leave something to the imagination.

Maurice R. Robinson, peerless as an observer of the school set's reading tastes, said so, puffing on a thin Dutch cigar, eyes twinkling.

Cherubic at 84, Robinson is founder and chairman of Scholastic Magazines Inc., an institution on the American school scene and 60 years old Oct. 22.

"After years of being deluged with young adult books dealing with the unhappy sides of life such as divorce, pregnancy outside of marriage, alcoholism, mental illness, and child abuse, teenagers seem to want to read about something closer to their daily lives," Robinson said.

"The adolescent girl is now reaching out for novels which deal with the experience of teenage life she can relate and identify with."

To keep up with the switch in reading tastes, Robinson said "Scholastic" last year brought out four titles in a series, "Wildfire Romances."

They are going like tickets to an Elton John concert. Two more are in the pipeline. The firm is looking into romantic novels for adolescent boys, too.

The young men also are reaching for the upbeat and books more directly related to their real life experiences. Books on biking, marathons and other sports books are moving well with both sexes.

"Scholastic" business is dependent on keeping in touch with reading tastes of kids, including curriculum needs charted by teachers.

Robinson arrives at the skyscraper headquarters before most other employes every morning. He stays late and puts in a six-day week. The sixth day he gets to match notes with the firm's president and chief executive officer, M. Richard Robinson Jr.

"Scholastic" started in Robinson's home in Pittsburgh, Pa., as a school newspaper for Western Pennsylvania. Operated in the red for many years, it now is a $125 million a year business with 2000 on the payroll.

The firm puts out 31 magazines for elementary and secondary schools. Combined circulation: 11 to 12 million per issue. It runs five classroom paperback bookclubs for all grade levels and moved more than 60 million volumes last year.

—SEE-SAW Book Club. Nursery school, kindergarten, first grade. 1979: "Clifford's Good Deeds" by Norman Bridwell. About a big red dog's adventures. 1969. "I Know an Old Lady," based on song of an old lady who swallows a fly, a spider, a bird and other creatures.

—LUCKY Book Club. Grades 2-3. 1979: "Charlotte's Web," a classic by E.B. White. 1969: "Wizard of Oz." 1959: "Adventures of Black Rock Cave," a mystery.

—ARROW Book Club. Grades 4, 5, 6. 1979: "Unidentified Flying Oddball," by Vic Crume. Based on a Walt Disney movie. 1969: "Arrow Book of Brain Teasers. 1959: "Old Yeller."

—TEENAGER Book Club, grades 7, 8, 9. 1979: "The A Guide To Good Grades." Shows students how to develop better study habits and gives tips on test-and-note-taking. 1969: "Romeo and Juliet". 1959: "Jokes and More Jokes."

Some scholastic magazines are the remedial type. The newest one, "Scholastic MATH" is a bestseller. Its circulation soared past 400,000 this month.

"Scholastic" growth was slow at first, Robinson said. It wasn't always smooth sailing.

"In 1928 an issue was banned in New York City schools because in a short story the villain poured a scotch and soda and a woman lit a cigarette," he said.

Is the reading matter in "Scholastic" harder or easier than it was in the 1920s?

It is difficult to say due to the fact that today reading must be geared to reach a wider range of students — with compulsory education laws forcing all to go to school.

In the 1920s, the schools, especially in the higher grades, got just the highly motivated — kids who wanted more learning to help them get on with a career or college.

Robinson's success in the publishing field won him the Henry Johnson Fisher Award in 1970, the magazine industry's most prestigious honor.

He doesn't count the hours he works but he finds time on Sundays for golf and, in winter, ice skating.

In an interview with "Nation's Business," ten years ago and marking 50 years of "Scholastic," Robinson said:

"I just devote most of my time to thinking about this place, thinking about this job, working with my associates to correct the problems we have. I don't know what I would do if I didn't have to work. When the end comes, I hope it comes awfully fast so that I am not out there puttering around someplace doing something I know I am not interested in."

"Scholastic" is more than magazines. Robinson said it is a service organization providing a range of print and audio visual materials for the schools.

"From the beginning we championed the concept that lifetime reading habits could best be engendered by offering students a wide choice of books at prices they could afford to pay.

"Through our magazines we inspire students to develop the love of reading at an early age and help teachers

Wedding Vows Exchanged

CHARLOTTE — Molly Estelle Hall and Charles Paul Mohle, both of Raleigh, were married here Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Covenant United Methodist Church. The Rev. Ralph Eanes Jr., of Archdale United Methodist Church, High Point, performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Hall of Charlotte and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mohle of Ayden.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her matron of honor was Debbie B. Brim of Winston-Salem. Bridesmaids included Holly Harris of Chicago, Ill., aunt of the bride, Robin Edwards of Atlanta, Ga., Amy A. Snipes of Ahoskie and Becca G. Palmer of Moncure.

Heather Hall of Huntersville, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Standard C. Lamb III of Rock Hill, S. C., cousin of the bride, was acolyte.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers were Paul Harris of Chicago, Ill., uncle of the bride, Ralph M. Hall of Huntersville, brother of the bride, and Marty Palmer of Moncure.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Betty Blue Guinyard of Charlotte and soloist, Beth Rose Hunnicutt of Fayetteville.

The bride wore a full length white qiana dress styled with long sleeves, off the shoulder, the neckline was low cut and fell into a cowl effect. She wore a band cap accented with pearls and a white rosebud. She carried a sheath of red and white roses with greenery.

The honor attendant wore a black rosewood fabric blouson gown styled with a draped cowl front neckline and three-quarter dolman sleeves. She carried a single long-stemmed red rose. The bridesmaids were dressed like the honor attendant.

The flower girl wore a full length dress styled with an empire waist, scoop neckline with lace trimming the sleeves and neckline. She carried a basket of rose petals.

A reception was held at the Pawtucket-On-The-Green Club, Charlotte. A wedding breakfast was given by the bridegroom's parents in the Marion Room of the Rodeway Inn, Charlotte.

The couple will be living in Raleigh after a wedding trip to Chimney Rock.

The bride graduated from Meredith College and is a loan officer for Great Century Mortgage Co., Cary. The bridegroom attended NCSU and is a sales specialist for General Electric and Aerotron with Radio Communications Co., Cary.

Briley-Hines Vows Solemnized On Friday

Corrine Hines and Robert Dail Briley were united in marriage Friday at 7 p.m. in the St. Paul Pentecostal Honiness Church. The Rev. Maurice Phelps officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Stocks of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Mae Briley Parrott of Greenville and the late Mr. Robert Edward Briley.

The chancel of the church was centered with an arrangement of fall silk flowers with a three branch candelabra on each side. Two seven branch candelabra were also used. Family pews were marked with salmon bows.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride was attired in a formal gown of ivory satapeau designed with a high neckline encircled with ruffled ivory cluny lace. The empire bodice featured a French Nottingham lace bib trimmed in pink satin ribbon and ruffled cluny lace. Matching lace edged the cuffs of the long full sleeves. The hemline and attached chapel train were also edged in the ivory lace and pink ribbon. She wore a formal bouffant ivory illusion veil attached to a Camelot cap trimmed in ruffled cluny lace and pink ribbon. The bride carried a colonial nosegay of white cushion pom pons, pink baby's breath, pink bows and streamers.

Ms. Delores Waters, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and was attired in a floor length gown of salmon knit, gathered at the empire waist with flowing pleats.

MRS. ROBERT DAIL BRILEY

The bodice featured a scooped neckline with long sleeves caught up in a bow at the shoulder. She carried a hand bouquet of white cushion pom pons with salmon bow and streamers.

Miss Nicole Dale Briley, daughter of the bridegroom, and Miss Julie Nicole Hines, daughter of the bride, were flower girls. They wore full length gowns of pink dotted swiss which featured an empire waist enhanced with a pink ribbon and streamers, short puffed sleeves and a scoop neckline. Each wore a pink bow with silk flowers and streamers as a headpiece and carried s single white carnation with salmon bow and streamers.

Billy W. Sawyer, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mrs. Diane B. Sawyer directed the wedding and Mrs. Jean Heath presided at the register.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. After the traditional cake cutting by the bridal couple, Mrs. Cherry Ann Haddock served cake while Patricia Rouse poured punch.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 3, Greenville.

Couple Marries On Saturday

FOUNTAIN — Sarah Delois Joyner, daughter of Mrs. Margie Ruth Joyner of Farmville, and Linwood Earl Gay, son of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Gay also of Farmville, were married Saturday afternoon at 4:30 in Dildy's Chapel FWB Church.

The double ring ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Robert Gorham.

The bride was given in marrige by her son, Ronnie Devon May. Bessie L. Hinton of New Haven, Conn., was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Hattie M. Joyner of Farmville, Wilhelmina Joyner of Greensboro and Margie D. Joyner of Washington, D. C., sisters of the bride, Beverly A. Gay, sister of the bridegroom, Doris M. Moore of Farmville and Nellie M. Blount of Greenville.

Jacquline Joyner of Farmville, niece of the bride, was flower girl and ring bearer was Micheal K. May of Farmville, son of the bride.

Ushers included George E. and Lester F. Gay, brothers of the bridegroom, Douglas R. Joyner, brother of the bride, Harvey J. Gardner, brother-in-law of the bride, and Joseph E. Moore, all of Farmville, and Arthur Barnes of Fountain. The escort was Horace Joyner of Farmville, brother of the bride.

A program of wedding music was presented by Johnnie Wooten, organist, Molly Small and Nathan Cobb, all of Farmville, vocalists.

The bride wore a formal gown of polyester organza and chantilly lace fashioned with a high see-through neckline, empire bodice of chantilly lace accented with satin ribbon which formed a bow. Long sleeves of matching lace ended with clusters of sequins. The A-line skirt was trimmed with matching lace and sequins. The detachable chapel train was accented with lace and sequins. Her veil was fashioned of chantilly lace and satin ribbon edged in silk floral Venise lace attached to a lace Camelot cap. She carried a formal cascade of white glamelias, miniature carnations, baby's breath and ivy tied with bridal satin ribbon.

The honor attendant wore a floral print gown of polyester organza lined in acetate taffeta. The gown had a ruffled front and back V-neckline with capelet sleeves, set-in waistband and flared skirt. She wore a blue wide brimmed hat with a white bow tie and carried a long-stemmed blue mum with greenery and a white satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were dressed similar to the honor attendant and each carried a white mum with fern and blue ribbon. The flower girl wore a white long dress in woven dacron polyester styled with a front bodice insert and a tie sash. She wore a veil with a pearl crown and carried a basket of blue and white daisies.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hospitality Hut, Farmville. After the couple cut the first slice of the tiered wedding cake, it was served by Joan Ruffin, aunt of the bride. Punch was poured by Mary Gardner, sister of the bride. Others assisting were Carolyn Joyner, Beth Laughinghouse, Joyce Bullock, Margie Joyner, Joyce Joyner and Barbara Barnes.

The couple will live in Farmville.

The bride graduated from H. B. Sugg School and the bridegroom graduated from Robinson Union High. Both work at Collins and Aikman.

Quilt Show To Be Held During Festival

The last three days of the Southeastern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival will have a special event for those interested in the folk art of quilting.

On Nov. 18-20, a quilt show is being planned by the Greenville Quilter's Guild in cooperation with the Continuing Education Department of Pitt Community College. It will be held at the Community Building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Street. The hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday. Admission will $1.00.

There will be antique quilts of many designs, quilts made in Pitt and surrounding counties, contemporary quilts and wall hangings and a display of quilted items other than bed coverings.

As an added feature, the Quilter's Guild is holding a day of seminars Nov. 18 in the fellowship hall of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The seminars are designed to give a better understanding of the history and techniques.

During the morning session, Mrs. Blanche Monroe of Greenville will show slides of quilts from Pitt County. Mrs. Ruth Roberson, a fabric artist of Durham, will give a history of quilting in North Carolina and also displasy some contemporary works.

The afternoon seminar will be given by Mrs. Becky Sudsbury of the Mesda Museum, Winston-Salem, who will share information on the preservation and care of antique fabrics and quilts.

The evening session will be a demonstration of lap quilting methods by Mrs. Georgia Bonesteel of the PBS television Lap Quilting Show and author of "Lap Quilting Your Legacy Quilt."

Advanced registration of $7.50 for one or all of these seminars is required by Nov. 10. For further information call Louise Downing, Continuing Education Department, Pitt Community College.

Bridal Lines

Registered Bridal Consultant

The wedding cake has been a delicious part of marriage for so long that brides often wonder how the tradition began. Here at Ann Marie's, we have been able to trace wedding cake back to some American Indian tribes — and to some Fiji Islanders. In both cases, brides offered their husbands cakes of meal. The Romans broke a cake made of salted meal over the bride's head as a symbol of abundance. The early Britons baked large baskets of small, dry crackers for weddings, and every guest took one home — thus the tradition of taking wedding cake home "to dream on." So bon appetit, brides: you're sharing a delightful tradition with brides of yesteryear.

A Good Cry Is Said Healthful

EMMAUS, Pa. (AP) — A good cry by men, as well as women, can help them avoid numerous emotional and nervous disorders, according to a national health-care magazine.

High blood pressure, ulcers and certain types of allergic, cardiovascular and kidney disease may be caused by the illogical way we handle stress, says Hans Selye, the father of stress research, in a Prevention article.

That's why, he claims, men in our society who have been taught that crying is a weakness have a higher incidence than women in such diseases — and also live shorter lives.

FOR THE UNWANTED

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My mother is going to drive me crazy.

She has this habit of walking down memory lane and once she's there can't recall the names of the people or the places.

It's like living with Wink Martindale.

It's easy for her, she can just ask a question and then pick up her life and go on, but I'm stuck with the challenge of coming up with the answer or admitting that senility has set in.

She was watching an old movie on television while I was reading a magazine the other night when she said, "Isn't the inspector's name . . . oh, you know!"

"You know who he is. He's in all the old movies. Never the lead but . . ."

"E. G. Marshall? Aldo Ray? Leon Ames? Sebastian Cabot? Sterling Hayden? Broderick Crawford? Dennis O'Keefe?"

"No, he's funny."

"No, no. He married that girl who always wore tights and danced and was a dead ringer for . . . what was her name?"

"Ann Miller? Judy Garland? Betty Grable?"

"No, her last name begins with a D."

"Wrong. It was Mitzi Gaynor."

That doesn't begin with a D," I said irritably.

"I lied. So, it's not important. Just forget it."

Around 11, the ringing of the phone jolted me out of a sound sleep. The voice at the other end of the line said, "It was Lyle Talbot. He's the one who played opposite the guy . . . you know . . . who was always the comical sidekick in Westerns with tobacco juice running down his chin. I'll think of it tomorrow. I'm sleepy. Good night."

All night I was to stare at the ceiling mumbling, "Edgar Buchanan, Gabby Hayes, Smiley Burnett, Percy Kilbride, Noah Beery, Alan Hale ..." She had done it again!

CINCINNATI CHILI

2 pounds ground beef
2 medium onions, chopped medium fine
4 garlic cloves, minced
15-ounce can tomato sauce
2 beef bouillon cubes dissolved in 1½ cups boiling water
1 bay leaf
4 tablespoons chili powder
1 tablespoon ground cumin
1 tablespoon unsweetened cocoa
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
Salt to taste

In a large saucepot over medium heat crumble beef with a fork until it loses its red color. Add remaining ingredients and bring to a boil; simmer, covered, about ½ hour or until you get the consistency you like. Makes about 1¼ quarts. Cook 2 pounds of spaghetti and serve chili over it.

MRS. EDWARD FRANKLIN EVANS JR.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

WINTERVILLE — Nettie Alma Tyson and Edward Franklin Evans Jr. were united in marriage at 5 p.m. Saturday at the Winterville Missionary Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wayne Adkisson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Kermit Tyson Sr. of Ayden and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Frank Evans Sr. of Greenville.

The bride, presented in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore her mother's gown of antique bridal satin and chantilly lace with a sheer nylon yoke outlined by an qpplique of chantilly lace forming an off shoulder effect extending into the fitted starpoint bodice of satin. The long tapering sleeves of satin ended in calla points over the hands. Her bouffant skirt of satin was outlined with chantilly lace and extended into a cathedral train. Her fingertip mantilla of bridal illusion was edged with chantilly lace and appliqued with lace motifs for the headpiece. She carried a white Bible adorned with a cascade of white roses.

Anna Tyson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of apricot qiana. The blouson bodice featured a scooped neckline and the waistline was encircled with a rolled tie sash from which fell the flared accordian pleated skirt. Bridesmaids included Amy Tyson, sister of the bride, Connie Tyson, sister of the bridegroom, and Robin Smith of Greenville. They wore gowns of spice qiana identical to the maid of honor and carried wicker fans adorned with silk flowers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Gary Porter, cousin of the bridegroom, F. K. and Charlie Tyson, brothers of the bride, Bill Penny of Wilmington and Eddie Stallings of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by pianist, Vanlora Teel, and soloist, Tony Smart. Selections were "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer."

A reception, given by the bride's parents, followed the ceremony and was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted and introduced to the receiv ing line by Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Stancill. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Finch.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of D. H. Conley High School and ECU. She is a BSN graduate and is presently working toward a master's in nursing. She is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a staff nurse. The bridegroom is a BSBA graduate and is presently employed by Weyerhaeuser as a financial analyst.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Greenville.

Teenagers'...

Robinson Jr. said "Scholastic" is expanding in the area of textbook and trade publishing as well as in the electronic media.

"During the past year," he said, "we formed a 'Scholastic Productions' to identify and package material for children's programming for film and television.

"There are many signs pointing to a widespread need for better television programming for children, a need that was recently underlined by the Federal Communications Commission calling for an increase in the number of hours allotted to children's programs."

"Scholastic" has had a taste of controversy over its 60 years. In 1931 there was outrage over publication of a prize-winning essay by Francis Farmer, a West Seattle High School student in Seattle, Washington.

The essay, "God Dies," was voted for the first prize by four outstanding judges in the "Scholastic" writing contest.

Uproar over "God Dies" led to subscription cancellations from some schools, mainly parochial. Robinson was denied a display booth at the annual meeting of the National Catholic Educational Association that year.

Boothless, he went to the convention to see the leaders of the association. A representative of the association was put on Scholastic's National Advisory Council.

In the essay, Farmer came to the conclusion that "God is gone" and wondered why other people hadn't also found that out.

Farmer became an actress and starred in 19 movies and three Broadway plays. She died of throat cancer in 1970.

Thirty years later, "Senior Scholastic" carried an article — "Is God Dead?"

It dealt with the same concept as Frances Farmer's essay.

There was not one protest.

Fall Bazaar Announced

FARMVILLE — The United Methodist Women of Farmville invite the public to their fall bazaar and luncheon to be held Friday, Oct. 31, at the church, 903 W. Church St.

The bazaar will open at 11 a. m. and close at 4 p. m. A luncheon will be served from noon to 1:30 p. m. Call the church, 753-4803, for a ticket, the cost of which is $4. A snack bar also will be available with drinks, sandwiches and desserts.

Many quality items will be available in the booths with themes including arts and crafts, garden, kiddie korner, Christmas, country kitchen and white elephant.

Wash walls by starting at the bottom and working up, recomends Charlotte Womble, extension housing specialist at N. C. State University.

In that way, she said, any dirty streaks running down on the cledan part can be wiped off without leaving a mark that may be hard to remove.

On The Young Side

By Elizabeth Ito

Rose High's vocational education department held a public auction of its "live project" house Thursday at noon. The house is a product of three years of work by the students in the bricklaying, cabinetmaking, carpentry, masonry, technical drafting and architectural drafting classes.

An open house was held Sunday, Oct. 19, to allow interested persons to tour the house.

The Vocational Department of the Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh, has approved plans for Rose's next "live project" which is to be a passive solar heated home. The plans were drawn up by the architectual drafting three class. Additionally Rose's vocational department is receiving a $5,000 grant from the N. C. Energy Institute, Department of Commerce for the project. The participating classes hope to have the house completed in approximately 18 months.

The food service classes have been planning activities for the upcoming months. As part of homecoming festivities the students baked applesauce-spice cupcakes to sell Friday. For Halloween they plan to bake and sell a "spook cake." The students will prepare and serve refreshments at the Third Street School's annual Halloween carnival Wednesday from 6-9 p.m. In addition, the classes are taking orders for homemade Italian bread, which sells for $1.00 per loaf.

The FBLA recently held installation of officers. Sandra Hudson will serve as president with Rose Jackson, vice president, Jimmy Hardee, secretary, Michael Taylor, treasurer, Lori Jo Edwards and Leigh Anda Summerfield, reporters.

Sarah Caldwell Hester and Michael Arden Tucker were among the three seniors from Pitt County chosen to compete for the John Motley Morehead Scholarships to UNC-CH. The students were chosed from a field of 24 nominees from the five area high schools on the basis of their applications and an interview held Oct. 21. Hester and Tucker will now go to regional competition to be held in Williamston.

Real Estate Wife May Lose Home

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How can I get the message to my mother (age 49) that if she doesn't start spending more time with her husband (he's 51), her marriage could be in trouble?

Dad has always been an excellent provider, so Mother never had to work. Well, two years ago, Mother got bored and started selling real estate. I respect Mother for doing her own thing, and she's good at it, but daytime appointments should be enough. Now she's seeing clients in the evenings, too, so Dad has to shift for himself.

Last night Mom was working again, so my husband and I invited Dad, a very handsome man, to have dinner out with us. We ran into Peggy, a beautiful blonde I went to college with. Peggy joined us for a while and lost no time in announcing that she's newly divorced. She really came on to Dad, and he lapped it up. She mentioned where she was working, and I could see Dad making a mental note of it. Abby, he's not a dirty old man — he's lonely and neglected.

So how does a 28-year-old daughter tell her mother to start acting more like a wife and less like a real estate agent?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Just tell her what you told me — in exactly the same way — and if she's smart, you won't have to draw her any blueprints.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm madly in love with a guy named Freddy. It was love at first sight. I had car trouble on my way home from work, and he stopped to help me. I treated him to a hamburger, then we went to my place and he stayed all night. (It's not what you think. He slept on the floor.)

I know it sounds awfully fast, because two weeks ago I didn't even know him and now he wants to marry me. He's 24 and I'm 20.

There is only one problem, Abby. Freddy is crazy about disco and I hate it. I'm not a very good dancer to begin with, and that loud music gives me a headache. Freddy is a fantastic dancer and he's trying to get me to learn, but I really don't care for it. You see, I'm sort of against dancing (I'm from a strict Baptist family), and I'm also against going to places where there is drinking. Freddy likes to go to discos, and even though he's not a big drinker he'll have one or two because he has to order something.

Please don't think I'm a stick-in-the-mud, Abby. I'm not. I just don't care for disco and drinking. I really love Freddy, but I wonder if a marriage can work with a man who wants to disco every night when I'd rather stay home and watch TV.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT

DEAR LOVE: Take a second look, and a third, and a fourth. If it's really love, it will last. In the meantime, I vote for a long engagement.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My wife has always been jealous of the women I worked with. She said she knew she wasn't as pretty or smart as they were. Abby, I never put her down or made comparisons. I was a good husband and came directly home every night. I never mentioned any woman I worked with, but that didn't matter. We got to fighting over little things continually.

Abby, I love my wife, so I went to someone for help. He told me that a man can make his wife feel pretty and loved, or ugly and unloved. He asked me how many little gifts I bought her other than the expected ones for birthdays and Christmases. I said, "None, but I don't have much extra money." He said, "You could get the extra money if you wanted some fishing equipment, couldn't you?" I had to agree I could.

He then asked me when I last paid her a compliment. I said I couldn't remember. He said, "Think of something to praise her for. Her cooking — or the way she looks." He said, "Unexpected gifts and compliments are to a woman what a raise in salary is to a man! It makes her feel appreciated."

The man I talked to was not a minister or a marriage counselor. He was my father, who had been happily married to my mother for 48 years. I took his advice, and my wife and I are a lot happier now.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, OCT 26, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Much confusion is in your mind today. But if you accept new and modern methods you can turn trouble into interesting opportunities. Don't force any issues with family members.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Follow only accepted rules for handling any problems you may have, whether private or otherwise, and avoid trouble.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day to be with influential persons who can help you in your line of endeavor. Take no chances with your health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A new project you have in mind needs more research before you put it in operation. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may be thinking you are not progressing as you should, but keep plugging and you will gain your goal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Listen to advice of a family tie who has your best interest at heart. Make long-range plans for the days ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day to visit friends and relatives for mutual enjoyment. Be more precise in handling your personal affairs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Forget a worrisome affair and delve into something more practical and profitable. Make plans to improve your social life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to study facts and figures so you can advance in career affairs. Strive for increased harmony at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact friends in the afternoon and discuss an important plan you have in mind. Allow time for recreational activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Perfect day for getting out to new activities and perking up your enthusiasm. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listening to the suggestions of an expert can be most helpful to you now. Make this a most worthwhile day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Follow your hunches early in the day because they are likely to be off target later. Take no risks with your reputation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can comprehend a task easily, so be sure to give as fine an education as possible along the chosen field of endeavor. Don't neglect sports early in life and give religious studies that are helpful.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, OCT. 27, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is excellent for making plans to expand your activities, personal interests and gain more benefits. Be sure to compliment others if and when it is deserved.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to discuss new ideas with associates. Any delays should be accepted philosophically. Take needed exercise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan your affairs on a more satisfying basis and have more security. A new contact could give you good suggestions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Have talks with partners so you can take advantage of a new situation that arises. Analyze your progress in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Stop putting off tasks at hand and gain more profits. Take treatments to improve health and appearance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Jump into regular routines without delay and get much accomplished, whether of a business or personal nature.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more willing to compromise at home for the sake of harmony. Study projects that could give you added income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are now able to get the support of associates in a new project you have in mind. Use extreme care in motion today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Analyze your financial status and find better ways of adding to abundance. Listen to what an expert has to suggest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go after your aims in a most positive way and gain excellent results. Strive for increased happiness. Be poised.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take steps to improve the quality of your life. Let your conversation with others be quiet and cultured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Sociability is the keynote today and much can be accomplished. You are able to gain a personal aim at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to gain the respect of higher-ups who can give you the support you need. Many benefits can come your way now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can comprehend matters of great importance, so be sure to give the best education you can afford. One here who will have a great interest in religious matters. A sports-minded person in this chart.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1980 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We had a tragedy the other day. My partner dealt and, vulnerable, opened one club. I held: ♠xxx ♡K10xxxx ◇xxx ♣x. With only three points in high cards and a singleton in partner's suit, I passed. Unfortunately, one club was passed out, down three! Partner happened to have a very strong hand with only three clubs and a heart fit, and we could have made four hearts. Partner argued that my hand was worth 5 points, counting distribution, and that I should have responded. I maintained that I should not count a singleton in my partner's suit, and therefore had no bid. We agreed to abide by your decision.—J. Charles, Knoxville, Tenn.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—This is one of those days where I can make everyone happy. To a certain extent, you are both right!

First, your premise that you should not consider a singleton in partner's suit as having any distributional value cannot be questioned. But partner is correct in that you should have responded.

The reason for that is not because you can count two points for your singleton, but because there are a number of other factors to be considered. One of these is that partner might have made a "convenient" one club opening on a three-card suit. More important, though, is that when responder is weak and has a long suit, he should make some effort to play the hand in his suit where his long cards can be used to ruff away the opponents' winners.

When partner opens one of a minor, you should strain to keep the bidding open in an attempt to locate a possible major-suit fit. Here, you have a reasonable six-card major suit. In fact, we think so highly of it that should partner jump raise to three hearts over our one heart response, we would venture game simply on the strength of our trump length.

A.—A jump rebid of 2 NT is one of those strange animals—a non-forcing bid that is seldom passed! Consider the logic of the situation.

By opening and then jumping to 2 NT, opener has shown a hand of 19-20 points, and responder has announced at least 6-7 points with his one-over-one response. Therefore, the combined strength of the partnership rates to be enough for game.

Once in a while, however, responder is sub-minimum for his action—for instance when, as in the first question, he has stretched to keep the bidding open so that he can show a major suit. When opener then describes his hand exactly, responder is free to pass rather than get his side overboard.

Canned Goods To Be Collected

Trick or treaters will come on two days this year. Thursday night they will be asking for canned goods to help needy families in this area. Students from the Brookhaven Seventh Day Adventist Church School will be calling on Greenville residents between 6 and 8 p.m. October 30.

The 20 students will be divided into groups which will be supervised by parents and the pastor, according to Vonnie Strang, teacher at the school. The goods will be arranged in Thanksgiving baskets and given to several familes in this area. Last year the children collected about 300 to 400 cans which were divided between three families.

Strang says this type of activity gives the children a sense of self-worth by helping other people and using their own time to help others. A sadly need thing in this day and age, she commented.

Carnival Is Planned

A Halloween Carnival will be held at Greenville Villa Nursing Home Wednesday from 7 to 9 p. m. for the residents and their families to have an evening of fun and entertainment in the Halloween tradition.

Coordinators Nancy Wester and Arlene Evans, both ECU Therapeutic Recreation majors, will wear costumes, as will the volunteers helping out.

For further information, contact Terri Fuller, activities coordinator, at Greenville Villa.

Symposium Is Planned By Committee

A symposium titled, "A Growing Up of Women," is the most recent undertaking of the ECU Committee on the Status of Women. It will be held Monday, Nov. 3, with the opening session in Fletcher Music Hall Auditorium from 1 to 2 p. m. and the evening session at Freddie's Restaurant from 6:30 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Dr. Patricia Gurin, professor of pscychology and faculty associate at the Institute of Social Research, University of Michigan, will be the keynote speaker on the theme topic.

Workshops and small-group seminars will deal with the following topics: sexual harrassment by Ken Wilson and Linda Krause; career planning and vocational choice by Linda Gaddis; changing careers by Nan Cheek; and women in management by Maxine Brown.

The evening session will include a dinner with a panel of speakers on the theme. All sessions are open to the public and day sessions are free to ECU students. There is a fee for the evening session which includes dinner.

This standing University committee chaired by Mary Ann Rose, School of Nursing, has been in existence since 1979, originally composed of 15 members of the ECU community. It serves in an advisory capacity to the chancellor on affairs of concern to women faculty, staff and students. The upcoming symposium will address the changes necessary for mature decision-making and problem-solving on the part of women in contemporary society.

For more information, call Mary Ann Rose or Peggy Balcome at ECU, 757-6061.

Halloween Fun Night Wednesday

Wednesday, October 29 will be Halloween Fun Night for children at the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Activities will begin at the administration building, 2000 Cedar Lane, at 6:30 p.m. and last until 8 p.m.

Children ages 3-12 are invited. Those with costumes should come dressed for the costume contest and be ready to play games, win prizes and watch Halloween cartoons. For further details, call 752-4137, extension 263.

Christmas Catalogs Run Amok With Exotic Gifts

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

By the time you get through paying for Christmas catalogs this year, you may be too broke to buy presents.

Of the 67 listed in one fashion magazine's annual Christmas catalog guide, only nine are free. The others range in price from $1 to $40 and you'd have to shell out $273.40 for all 58.

Publication costs today can run into the millions — which accounts for the charges being made by more and more retailers. A catalog is apt to be free to active charge customers and selected mailing lists, but $1 or more to everyone else.

Bloomingdale's price is $3, says Gordon Cooke, the store's senior vice president for sales promotion, "to discourage people who just collect catalogs." Cooke estimated production costs for this year's one million (104-page) catalogs at $1 to $2 million, partly because about 30 percent of its photographs were shot in China.

Gucci's Fifth Avenue shop in New York City sends an $8 gift certificate with its $8 Christmas catalog of high fashion merchandise but limits the certificate's use to purchases of $50 or more.

A famous Dallas-based company now sends catalogs free only to active charge account customers, whom mail order director Ron Foppen defines as "someone who has bought merchandise in the past 18 months." All other Neiman-Marcus customers pay a nonrefundable $2.

Town & Country magazine's catalog listings include at least two that are not the sort you order from. The $40 publication and one for $24.95 describe and picture only articles that have already been sold by Christie's and Sotheby's auction galleries around the world in the course of the past year. The articles range from Old Master paintings to pre-Columbian pottery.

Christmas catalog shopping has come a long way since Aaron Montgomery Ward opened his first mail order store in Chicago with a small shipping room on North Clark St. and a one-page price list.

One of Ward's early lists contained 163 items, mostly priced at $1. Among the $1 articles were Kentucky jeans, lace curtains and 12 yards of printed dress fabric.

—A $220,000 helicopter fitted out as an airborne recreational vehicle for six persons;

—A $150,000 walnut pipe cabinet — 366 pipes and leather attache case included;

—An $8,000 Premier Colt six shooter;

—A weekend for 100 at a Texas ranch for $60,000;

—$50,000 will buy a musical production of "The Twelve Days of Christmas" staged on the recipient's lawn with live performers, including the 12 lords aleaping and the partridge in a pear tree.

For somewhat less, say, $25 and up, you can order a gold-plated tooth to wear on a chain or display as an objet d'art — from The Tooth Fairy catalog, of course. Its publishers are Gladys and William Doak, retired motel-restaurant operators from Rock Island, Ill., who now live in the St. Petersburg, Fla. area.

"We didn't want to retire," Mrs. Doak said. "We wanted something we could do at home."

She said they hit upon the tooth idea because she regretted not having saved the baby teeth of their two sons, now grown.

Customers can supply teeth themselves for plating, or buy readymades. The brochure is 50 cents, the minimum order, $25. Prices for gold-plated chompers follow the gold market.

The Tooth Fairy is among about 375 entrepreneurs whose product and service companies are listed in "The Unusual-by-Mail Catalog," by The Print Project (St. Martin's $14.95 hardcover, $5.95 paper).

Other extraordinary products from catalog merchants listed in the book include clocks that run backward, loggers' ear plugs, cricket cage glue and Gabby Tabs for people who haven't time to talk to their houseplants.

Gabby Tabs release low levels of carbon dioxide as people do when they lean over plants to talk to them.

Mail order shopping generally was an $87 billion dollar a year retail business in 1978, the most recent year for which sales figures are available.

Most of that money is spent for Christmas gifts, says Donna Sweeney of the Direct Mail Marketing Association.

"Well over 50 percent is conservative," Ms. Sweeney said. "I've even heard that most do about 70 percent of their business between October and January."

The 8,000-member trade association she represents includes any company that sells by mail order. Some sell directly to consumers but have no catalog. Some are catalog stores only. Others are retailers with regular stores and catalogs.

Ms. Sweeney said the start of the boom in catalog shopping was in the late 1960s. She thinks large numbers of women entering or reentering the workforce "are the most significant factor in the increase.

"I think the gas shortage has contributed to it in the past year," she said.

She said the most popular products with mail order shoppers probably are any kind of general merchandise, including home gadgets and housewares; magazine subscriptions and clothing, followed by books, sporting goods and crafts.

She estimated 4,000-5,000 of the association's members publish general and-or special interest catalogs. Many are free. Others sell for 25 cents and up.

The tradition of offbeat, outrageously expensive Christmas gifts has been widely copied since the Dallas store's first offering of his-and-hers presents in 1952: a live steer for hubby, a sterling silver roast beef serving cart for his wife. Records of their retail prices were lost when fire destroyed much of the store in 1964, Foppen said.

This year's $60,000 ranch weekend, which includes a longhorn roundup with real cowboys, is in the catalog of Sakowitz, a Houston-based retailer. The ranch is the Y.O., whose own first Christmas catalog offers the $8,000 six shooters. It is a 60,000 acre spread in Kerr County, Texas, about 130 miles from San Antonio.

If that's too dear, consider a one-week fishing trip for six aboard the 81-foot Taurus. It's only $16,000, from Creme de la Creme, a new catalog from Kitty and Jody Krug, two Chicago sisters who are also road construction company executives. The yacht's amenities include Beta-vision video with movie tapes, grande or simple cuisine and a local fishing guide, if needed.

Bloomingdale's is also in the trip business, with a choice of four ranging in price from $350 to $4,600 or more per person. The first is for a Chinese art tour of New York City, and the other, a guided tour to the People's Republic.

The most expensive gifts we located were the $220,000 Sikorsky Helicamper in Sakowitz' catalog and the $150,000 pipe cabinet at Alfred Dunhill of London, Inc. shops in eight cities: Atlanta, Beverly Hills, Chicago, Dallas, Houston, New York, San Francisco and Washington, D.C.

If beef and seafood have become so expensive you can only afford them for Christmas presents, you'll find frozen steaks and Alaska king crab even in Sears, Roebuck's catalog this year.

Spokeswoman Kathy Gucfa said the company has expanded both its high-and low-end food categories and, "We don't think our selection is totally extravagant."

The five packages offered range from just under $33 to about $90 each. Comparable deals from the Omaha packer supplying Sears tend to be $2-$3 less.

Yes, Virginia, there are still big spenders.

Foppen said his store, with one exception, has always sold "at least one set" of his-and-hers gifts. "The only bomb was an exact replica of Noah's Ark for $600,000," he said. It would have had a Texas A & M College veterinarian aboard to tend the animals.

"The Twelve Days of Christmas" production is offered by the Pepperidge Farm Mail Order Co. Inc., of Clinton, Conn.

A customer doesn't have to buy the whole package, said company president Robert L. Schmalz. "You can have your pick of one day or all of them.

"I haven't the foggiest idea," he added, of the price for fewer than 12 days. "It would depend on which day and where the customer lives."

The most outrageous catalog we located is "Carrion House," whose cover correctly proclaims it "The Ultimate in Bad Taste!"

This $3.95 paperback parody of mail order catalogs was written by Adrienne Marcus, William Dickey and Wayne Johnson and published by St. Martin's.

Its "merchandise" ranges from the funny and-or silly — "attack hamsters" and "historic Girl Scout cookies" mounted on plaques, for instance — to some really disgustingly sick jokes.

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — In Kentucky, a hillbilly is a hillbilly, but in Maine, he's a hayseed.

In the "American" language — or English as it is spoken in America — there are at least 479 differing things one can call a person of conspicuously rural origin, according to Raven McDavid, who has spent decades collecting such terms.

McDavid, a professor emeritus at the University of Chicago, has toiled since the 1940s gathering words and pronunciations for his "Linguistic Atlas of the United States," which, when it is finished, will be a virtual library of all the dropped r's, mispronounced vowels, ain'ts, cain'ts, and t'aints in the country.

It will document for Americans, who tend to think they all speak alike, just how differently they sound to a trained ear.

Not only do the words used by Americans vary vastly from community to community and state to state, but the pronunciations vary drastically, even from one city neighborhood to another, says McDavid, editor-in-chief of the atlas.

"There are at least 18 different dialects in Charleston (S.C.) alone," he says.

In Charleston, if they tell you to go sit on the piazza, they are inviting you to sit on what is called a porch in Kentucky and a stoop in the Hudson Valley, McDavid says.

In Baltimore, policemen don't hit people with their nightsticks, they hit them with their espantoons. In the Minneapolis area boys don't flip each other with rubber bands, they do it with rubber binders. In Savannah, Ga., and Philadelphia, when they speak about the pavement they mean the sidewalk, not the street, according to McDavid.

There's no end to the variation because each community develops its own local expressions and pronunciations based on its history, McDavid says.

Despite the common myth that there is "pure American" spoken somewhere, that's not true, McDavid says.

"It used to be thought that there was Eastern, Southern and General American," he says. But field workers conducting research for the Linguistic Atlas have discovered there is a great deal of differentiation in the "General American," or catch-all, category.

People from Northern Indiana do not talk like people from Southern Indiana, and neither group talks like folks from Oklahoma or Nevada. That's because dialects — like customs, culture, and modes of government — tend to follow lines of settlement, McDavid explains.

One of the widest belts of Southern-influenced speech follows Daniel Boone's historic Wilderness Road westward from Virginia and the Carolinas into Tennessee, Kentucky, Southern Indiana, Southern Illinois and Missouri, McDavid says.

However, you can't predict the way a person will speak based solely on his home town, McDavid says. Linguistic Atlas researchers have found people who says "warsh," generally a Southern pronunciation for "wash," as far north as Vermont, he says.

Some of the mixing dialects is due to mass communication, urbanization and the speed and frequency with which Americans travel, he says.

If America had not come into being at a time of improved means of communication and travel, differences in speech around the country would be much more marked, he says.

"If we had a serious energy shortage in this country that lasted 50 years, it would affect our language, because people couldn't travel," he says.

However, he adds, television is not the great leveler of language that some people think — largely because people do not talk back to the television set. A Bostonian who hears the Midwestern accent of Walter Cronkite on the nightly news is still going to talk like a Bostonian.

How long before this awesome dialect-gathering project is complete? McDavid can't predict, except to say it will be several years, probably more than a decade.

That's because of the size of the United States, the huge amount of time needed to interview people and edit the findings, and, to some extent, funding difficulties, he says.

The atlas is being published by sections of the country. The New England states and the upper Midwest are the only sections already in print.

Years are spent on each region because it takes that long to analyze the region, choose interviewees, make up questionnaires, do the interviews and edit the results.

Responses are plotted out on maps. When there are enough similar responses, a dialect area is plotted out. In addition to the maps, each volume of the atlas has information about the region's history, culture, settlement, population and geography.

The atlas was started in 1929 by the American Council of Learned Societies under the leadership of Hans Kurath, a linguist who is now retired but who was the editor-in-chief of the New England portion of the atlas.

McDavid, who holds a doctorate in Milton from Duke University, started as a field worker in his native South Carolina, then ended up doing one-fourth of the interviews on the Atlantic seaboard. McDavid has been editor for 28 of the 49 years that research on the atlas has been conducted.

"Now I have to carry the bucket on my shoulder," he says of the atlas. Asked where he got that expression, he laughs.

"Ah don't know," he says.

Program to Prevent Strokes

My father and grandfather both had strokes before they were 60. I am in good health, yet occasionally I do have some concern that this might happen to me. Are there any long-range problems that I should consider in order to reduce the possibility of a stroke? I am 34. — Mr. H.B., Neb.

Dear Mr. B.:

With a history such as yours, many people are inclined to be anxious about their own medical destiny. Even though there is little possibility that stroke may be hereditary, you are wise to give thought to some plan by which you can minimize that possibility.

It is important that you have expressed your anxiety so that you can be reassured not only by me, but especially by your own doctor. Only in this way can you be liberated from the fear that apparently has been accumulating within you.

There are very definite, sensible ways by which you can plan to continue enjoying good health. Much is known about strokes, their causes and their prevention. Probably most important are undetected and untreated high blood pressure, marked obesity, high cholesterol and triglycerides in the blood, and unrecognized diabetes. Tobacco is an extremely important culprit and is responsible for narrowing the blood vessels that lead to the brain.

Regular checkups by your physician, strict adherence to a sensible diet, control of weight, well-planned exercise and the elimination of tobacco will go far to aid you in a prevention program.

These same rules, of course, apply to the reduction of heart attacks and other cardiovascular problems. Emotional tension, stress and an aggressive, driving attitude to life are important factors in the causation of all disease. They are particularly significant in relation to vascular problems.

Famous Pheasant Shoot A 4-Day Affair In Ontario

By MADELINE DREXLER
Associated Press Writer

PELEE ISLAND, Ontario (AP) — Pelee Island has a private social club, but no bank. It has a policeman, but no jail. Two restaurants, but they're closed in the winter. No movie theater. No doctor. No high school. Naturally, it is a quiet place.

But every year since 1932, this flat, marshy Canadian possession between Ohio and Ontario crackles with buckshot for four days in the late fall, during its famous pheasant shoot.

Hundreds of hunters from mainland Canada and the United States come here, dragging guns and dogs through shorn soybean fields and sparse woodlands and along the overgrown drainage canals, stalking their prey — 16,000 just-released birds.

"It would be about as much fun as clubbing butterflies," says Daryl Smith of the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources. "When the birds are released, it's almost like picking them up off the supermarket shelf."

These tame, pen-raised pheasants have no place to hide on Pelee, which is 90 percent cultivated.

"It's like a little civil war when it starts," says Bill Krestel, a farmer who has lived here all his life and also participates in the hunt every year. "For the first two hours, it's bang, bang, bang, as fast as you can shoot. The dogs don't know which bird to chase."

Even the hunters are dangerously exposed. "You get 800 hunters on an island of 10,000 acres, where only a thousand acres are brush — just think of what the chances are of getting shot," says Charles Wallace, the township reeve (mayor) and customs officer. Yet, nobody has been killed at the hunt in recent memory, though dozens have been injured.

"It's like a holiday," Wallace says of the hunt. "You come downtown, and there's no friction between people. Even the dogs seem to get along. It's just a merry old time."

The pheasant is Pelee's only claim to fame. The bird appears wherever you go — on menus, belt buckles, wall plaques, visors.

Except during the two consecutive weekend hunts — the first of which was scheduled this year for Oct. 30 — Pelee is a rural, unassuming place with a mild tourist trade in the summer. "If we didn't have the tourists, it would be pretty dull," says Doris Dennis, who runs the motel.

The municipal government sponsors the local farm where day-old chicks are raised in brooders until they graduate to outdoor pens covered with nylon netting. They feed on sunflower seeds, cracked corn, and sometimes each other — cannibalism being a peculiar pheasant trait. Twenty-five weeks later, they are packed in crates, hauled away in pick-up trucks and set free all over the island.

The farm costs $109,000 a year to run, but the four-day hunt alone brings a profit of $30,000, liquor sales quintuple, and even the private residents rake in tidy sums by providing bed and board for hunters. In practical terms, the hunt is Pelee's largest source of revenue.

The Chinese ringneck pheasant had never even strutted across Pelee's gravel roads until the 1920s, when it was experimentally introduced. Within five years, it was a pest, with a few natural predators and plenty of ground cover in farmers' haystacks. The hunt was originally intended to cut the excess pheasant population.

But while the annual shoot became a fixed holiday, the island's topography underwent crucial changes, which eventually reduced the pheasant numbers to the point where, even without the hunt, they became a threatened species on Pelee. Their nesting spot — hay — grew scarce, as agricultural holdings were consolidated and farm animals became unprofitable to keep.

In the 1960s, pen-raised pheasants were first used to supplement the dwindling native population. The pheasant farm was built in 1969. Since then, it has become nearly impossible to find a wild bird here.

But modernization has affected more than just pheasants; it has also steadily reduced the residential population. Self-employed fishermen and farmers were squeezed out of the economy. Island services dried up. In 1962, the high school was closed. Many parents preferred moving to Canada to boarding their children at the mainland school from Monday to Friday, and flying them home for the weekend.

From a residential peak of about 1,200 persons in the early 1940s, Pelee now shows a year-round population of 265. This number swells by about 1,000 in the summer, when cottagers, mostly from Ohio, flock to their tiny beachfront properties. After the fall hunt, though, and until the next May, the place sleeps.

"I like the quietness," says Wallace, swatting away mosquitoes on the front steps of his house. "You don't have the hustle and bustle of the city, the rat race. You don't have juvenile delinquency. The cost of living is a little higher than the mainland, but you gear yourself to live that way. You can save a lot by not having the luxuries they have in the cities."

But when a tourist flees the city, he finds a mixed blessing on Pelee. The lake is soothing, the eastern shore has a clean beach, and the marshes offer sanctuary for herons, egrets and water snakes. But the interior is a dismal expanse of soybeans and scrub trees. Alianthus crowds the drainage canals, which are the most distinctive feature of this island where half the total farm acreage has been reclaimed from marsh.

"Pelee Island is a very quiet and rural place," says Duncan McTavish, the township clerk. "There's nothing flashy, and not a lot of facilities. It's just a place people like to escape to."

Matched By Computers

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Computerized informational retrieval systems are helping physicians match donors with patients in need of kidney transplants, reports a management information publication.

The largest of the systems, says MIS Week, is the Southeastern Organ Procurement Foundation located here. It maintains information primarily on kidney patients but also lists emergency cases awaiting heart or cornea transplants.

Currently the data base contains information on more than 4,500 potential recipients in 42 states.

Information on patients in need of a transplant is entered into the data base at a center that links the hospital to SEOPF. The medical information includes tissue-typing (identifying the protein and carbohydrate substances located in the chromosomes of white blood cells) as well as a hospital code and telephone number so that if a match becomes available arrangements for delivery can be made quickly.

AGENCY TO MEET

The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet November 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

Included on the agenda will be the presentation for approval of the ECHSA appropriateness review of computerized tomographic scanning in North Carolina Health Service Area VI (Eastern North Carolina), and other items.

Stationary Mobile Home Is The Answer To Many

By CANDACE PAGE
United Press International

For just $160 a month, Ed and Maureen Phillips of Jonesville, Vt., have found themselves a country dweller's dream.

Their two-bedroom home, complete with woodstove, sits among willows and lilacs on a half-acre lawn at the edge of a clear, rocky trout stream amid wooded hills.

In Oxnard, Calif., Jack and Feryl Fox have retired to a house overlooking the Pacific — a six-room mobile home with an enclosed porch, a patio and backyard garden.

"This is not particularly luxurious," says Fox. "The really fancy (mobile homes) have sunken tubs, cathedral ceilings and fireplaces."

Like the Phillips and the Foxes, homebuyers are turning to the new generation of mobile homes — roomier, better built but still priced for the average pocketbook.

They are misnamed because they are far less mobile than their ancestors. Most are stationary.

Ten million Americans now live in mobile homes. Each year one-fifth to one-quarter of the country's single-family housing starts are "manufactured homes" — the term the industry now uses for mobile homes.

The mobile home industry predicts that by the mid-1980s, Americans will be moving into mobile homes at the rate of 500,000 a year.

By the 21st century mobile home high rises — factory-made modules stacked like bricks, 10 or 20 stories high — may be a common form of American housing, says Arthur Bernhardt. an MIT engineer and mobile home expert.

The average price of the conventional, single-family home now approaches $70,000. The day of single-digit interest rates is gone. Many Americans can simply no longer afford conventional housing.

The cost of the average mobile home, including land and installation, is about $40,000. But many models still sell for $15,000 to $20,000.

"For the average lower to moderate income person, a mobile home is probably the only way they are going to get housing," says Jess McElroy, director of mobile home standards for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

And mobile homes themselves have changed.

The old "tin can" homes transient workers hauled from trailer park to trailer park are only distant relatives of today's two-section, 24-by-64 foot mobile home.

James Carroll, spokesman for Skyline Corp., of Elkhart, Ind., the largest mobile home manufacturer in the country, says, "Ninety-nine percent are moved only once — from the factory to the (home) site,".

As mobile homes change and become permanent homes for middle-income people, so their public image changes.

Banks and federal agencies have liberalized credit terms for mobile home loans. Towns that once zoned them out as eyesores and a burden on the public purse are gradually changing their laws.

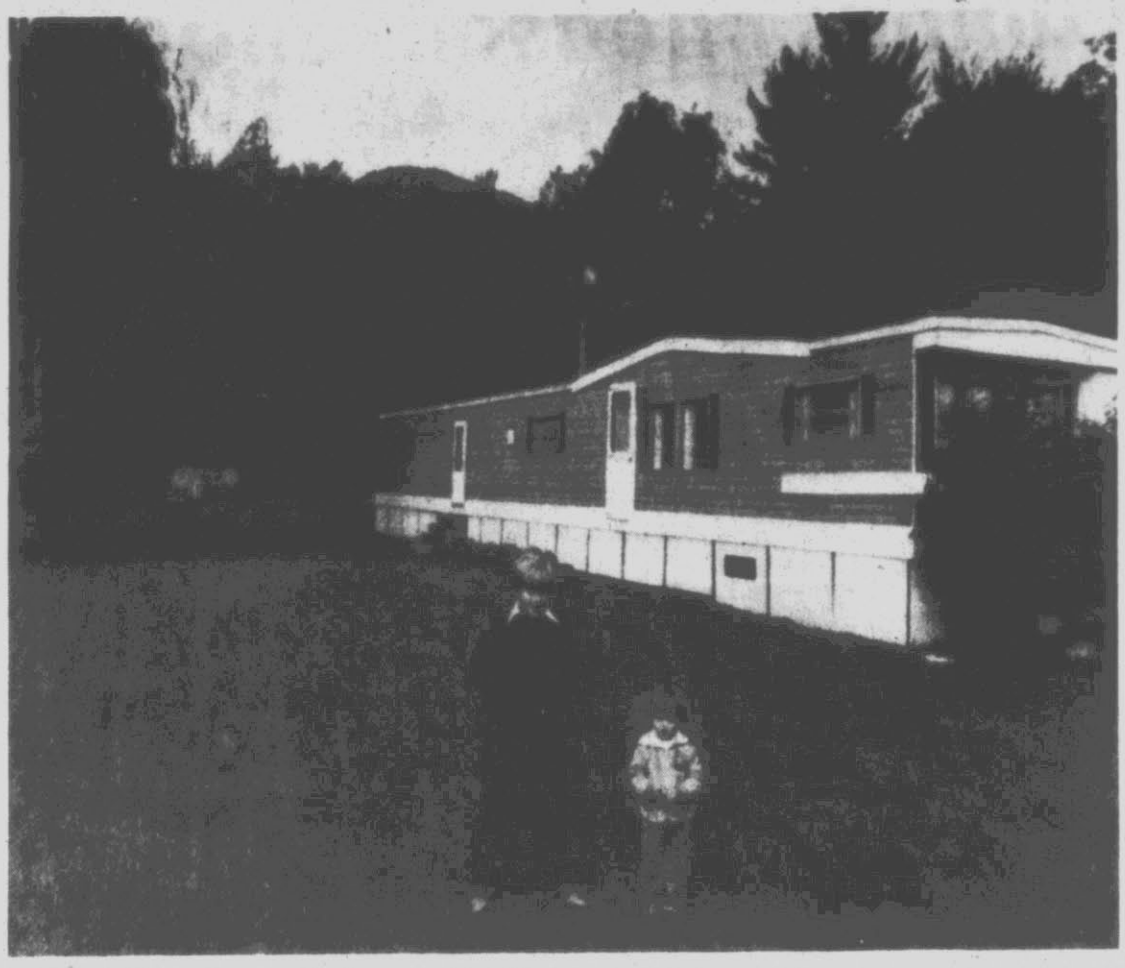
"All my residents have their space and their yard... and we expect them to do their own thing on their areas and leave everybody else's alone," says Lillian Niederhofer, who owns a mobile home park in Conroe, Texas. "It's just like any other neighborhood." In 1977, Dot and Joe Loh sold their home outside Los Angeles and paid cash for a mobile home and lot in the Seven Hills development in Hemet, a town of 22,000 at the base of the southern California mountains.

Retired people attracted to Hemet's dry, sunny climate have made it one of the country's fastest growing mobile home communities. Seven Hills could serve as a pattern for the new mobile home developments across the Sunbelt.

Seven Hills residents own, not rent, their homes and land. Every home is a so-called "doublewide," composed of two factory-produced sections assembled on the site into a 24-by-64 foot home. Two car garages are mandatory. The homes cost between $70,000 and $165,000.

It is not unusual, says W.T. Vander Weide, manager of Seven Hills, for a resident to sink $200,000 into a home, including $10,000 for exterior

(Please turn to C-12)



FOR JUST $160 a month, the parents of Scott Phillips, 9, and sister Lisa Ann, 2, have found themselves a country dweller's dream with this factgory-made mobile home. It was the only home the family could afford on the father's wages. Ten million Americans now live in mobile homes — of which most, for all intentents and purposes, are stationary. (UPI Photo)

Dome Home Is Extolled

ENERGY SAVER — The curving walls and the two levels provide an open, airy look for this "underground dome" housing designed by Dale and Gene Pearcey of Tempe, Ariz. They say the design, with half the house below the surface and half above, reduces heating and air-conditioning costs up to 75 percent. They also say it's designed for the do-it-yourselfer.

By ROBERT McEWEN
Associated Press Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Home sweet home for the Pearcey brothers is an underground dome that has natural lighting and ventilation, cuts heating and air-conditioning costs by 75 percent — and might make them some cool millions.

"It's the very first underground dome in the world that I know of — and it's FHA-financed," said Gene Pearcey, who along with his brother, Dale, markets the dome-building kits through dealerships in Arizona, New York, Kentucky and Texas.

Their firm is called "Earth Systems," and Pearcey lives in the company's prototype home — a 1,900-square-foot, three-bedroom, two-bath structure in the small, planned community of Ahwatukee just west of Tempe.

The two-story house is half above ground and half below, but its steel-mesh and concrete frame is entirely covered by dirt, a natural insulation which kept the temperature inside at 76 degrees on a summer day when the natives outside were sweltering in 106-degree heat.

The only inside appliance working that day was a small fan.

The Pearceys claim their house offers a 75 percent reduction in heating and cooling costs, "or maybe even better than that," Gene said.

"We're looking for a total disconnect from electricity in about two years," he said, noting that water for the home is already heated by solar collectors on a sun deck atop the three-car garage.

Every room in the house — except one small bathroom — is lighted and ventilated naturally, through either a large skylight or windows that open onto garden atriums.

The entrance to the home is at ground level, and its landscaping and plant cover give it an appearance not notably dissimilar to other houses on the block, Pearcey said.

Although the Ahwatukee house is the only one completed so far, Pearcey said Earth Systems' local dealership was planning others in Tempe, Mesa and Chandler. Dozens of other potential buyers are seeking financing, he said.

The price of an Earth Systems home varies, depending on how much of the construction work the buyer does, Pearcey said. The basic shell kit costs $10,500, but the cost of the finished product ranges from $40,000 to more than $100,000, according to size.

"We designed it with the do-it-yourselfer in mind," Pearcey said. "If you subcontract, it's a fairly conventional cost. Basically it runs about $40 to $50 a square foot," Because Earth Systems is a fledgling company without even a fiscal year under its belt, Pearcey could provide no earnings figures.

But he said energy conservation was an idea whose time had arrived, adding — only partly in jest, "We hope to be millionaires by this time next year."

Stationary Mobile Home Is The Answer For Many brickwork alone.

The development has its own 18-hole golf course, swimming pool and a community hall with a large dining room and ballroom.

"We love to play golf and the air quality was so much better out here," Dot Loh says. "There is more than the average person can keep up with. Between golf and bridge and socializing, we never find it necessary to go out for entertainment."

Her two-bedroom home is finished in the beige and burnt orange decor of the "rustic California" style. She says she likes its compactness because it is easily cared for.

In the three years they have owned it, the Lohs' home has doubled in value, from about $35,000 to roughly $70,000.

Their development, Regency Cove, is a traditional mobile home park. The residents own their homes but pay a monthly rent up to $150 for their site.

Regency Cove has a minimum age requirement of 40. It offers residents a beach on Tampa Bay, a "Junglelandia" picnic area landscaped like a tropical hideaway and therapeutic whirlpool baths.

"The people in the park are very, very friendly," says Mrs. Cutter. "You can get outside around a pool at a condo, but here you have your own yard and you don't feel quite as closed in."

Developments like Seven Hills and Regency Cove have begun to change public attitudes towards mobile homes, once considered the unattractive homes of transient, often low-income people.

"In all candor, part of the problem was the industry," says Jack Wynn, spokesman for the Manufactured Housing Institute, the industry's lobbying arm.

"Before there were federal construction standards, you had shoddy manufacturers. The shoddy trailers lined up along the highway became an indelible imprint in peoples' minds in the 50's."

Says MIT's Bernhardt, "They were horrible boxes scattered through the most beautiful parts of our country."

Since 1976, HUD has had construction standards designed to make mobile homes safer and more durable. The standards are essentially equivalent to building codes for conventional homes, Bernhardt says.

On their own, manufacturers have begun to replace traditional mobile home siding and flat roofs with pitched roofs and conventional house siding. Homes are wider, windows larger.

Inside, the makers have added more bedrooms and bathrooms and offer buyers a choice of decor, from chintz colonial to modern steel-and-glass.

As the homes became more attractive and better investments, government attitudes began to change.

In the mid-1970's, Vermont banned anti-mobile home zoning ordinances, the first state to do so.

Since then, courts and individual towns in other states have made similar decisions.

In California, mobile homes faced a slighty different problem. There, the state registered its 1 million mobile homes as vehicles, not real estate.

Mobile home owners thus paid minimal taxes, which hurt their image with local officials and complicated financing.

Since July 1, mobile homes have been treated as real property in California, just like other homes, and will be taxed as such.

The 1970's also saw a trend away from financing mobile homes with expensive consumer loans to traditional home mortgages.

In Florida, savings and loan associations now offer 30-year mobile home mortgages with 5 percent down at the same rate as condominium loans.

Throughout the Sunbelt, mobile home subdivisions and condomiums have become big business.

"For years, mobile homes were sold as interim housing, something you lived in until you could afford a 'real' house. People have started to realize this is the 'real' house," says Sydney Adler, a Sarasota, Fla., attorney and one of the largest developers,.

Adler developed the first mobile home subdivision in Bradenton, Fla., in 1954. He now has 18,000 mobile home sites from Florida to Nevada.

Adler is designing a "family" park, complete with a gymnasium, day care center and "a guard at the gate to give people a feeling they're proud to live here."

For Ed and Maureen Phillips of Vermont, a mobile home was not a choice, but a necessity.

"It was the only home we could afford," Phillips says, as he sits by the woodstove in the kitchen.

The couple borrowed $7,500 to buy the home in 1971.

Including $40 rent for their isolated brookside lot, their monthly payments total $160. Next year they will own the home, free and clear.

"We wanted to put our rent money into something that was ours," says Phillips. "We didn't have a down payment for a house, so this is what we got."

By and large, they are satisfied.

"It's hard in the winter sometimes with two kids," says Mrs. Phillips, "but it's definitely easier to keep clean."

In addition to giving her the chance to build equity, she says the home is "more convenient than an apartment... There's no neighbor on the other side of the wall...

"Friends who come over for the first time are amazed the place doesn't wobble when they walk across the floor."

But she complains the home is not as well insulated as a conventional home and is difficult to keep cool in the summer.

The Federal Trade Commission also has some complaints about the mobile home industry.

After years of study the FTC recently issued a report criticizing the quality of some homes and recommending better warranty protection for buyers.

The FTC said many home owners complain of such problems as leaky roofs and have difficulty getting them corrected under their one-year warrantys, criticisms disputed by the industry.

Mobile Home Park Can Be Good Neighborhood

By JACK V. FOX

OXNARD, Calif. (UPI) — There was a time — and not too long ago — when my wife and I would have said we wouldn't be caught dead spending our retirement years in a mobile home park.

But that's where we are. And we like it tremendously.

We grew up in a generation which called them trailer camps, with all the tawdriness that term implied.

Rusting cars alongside flimsy trailers on axles. Freezing in winter and stifling in summer. Primitive bathroom facilities if not outhouse toilets. Butane gas for cooking and kerosene lamps to read by.

We knew things had changed just from passing glimpses from the highways of tidy colonies of mobile homes. But we still thought they couldn't fit our lifestyle after years of owning a home and then renting big city apartments.

But we were weren't prepared for the mobile home of the 1980s.

The mobile home we bought has two bedrooms, a den, a family TV area, a living room, dinette area, kitchen, two bathrooms and an enclosed porch. It has a carport and a patio barbecue space.

There is also a small vegetable garden where we are growing corn, tomatoes, asparagus, beets, bell peppers, artichokes, potatoes and strawberries. And ours is by no means unusually large for a mobile home today.

It is about a four iron shot from the beach. We looked up and down the Pacific Coast from the Mexican border to north of Santa Barbara and we never came close to finding a regular house or condominium we could afford located so close to the ocean.

One reason that mobile homes are so much less expensive, of course, is that you do not own the land in parks like ours. You pay a monthly rental that has been steadily going up in these days of inflation so that some communities have voted rent freeze ordinances for such parks.

The rental fee also entitles residents of our park to the use of a large clubhouse with a dining and dancing area for special occasions, a swimming pool, exercise rooms, a billiard room and a card room.

It is an adults only community — no permanent residents under 18. That is the case with many mobile home parks and the fairness of such discrimination on grounds of age is certainly open to question.

It has led to a preponderance of residents who are either retired or whose children have left home although they are still working. We have found them to be a lively, well informed cross section of people.

Among the men are a retired Lockheed executive, a former fighter pilot and a retired university professor. Among the women are a former New York department store buyer, an accountant and a nightclub singer.

If you want privacy and seclusion, you can have it. People will leave you alone. But if your are a joiner, this is the place.

They have bridge, sewing, bicycling, poker, golf, shuffleboard, swimming, macrame, dances, surf fishing, pool and pot luck suppers.

And you can have one dog as a pet. But the regulations say the dog can't be more than 16 inches high at the shoulders.

Canoe Trip Is Planned

An overnight canoe trip on the South River Gorge in Bladen and Sampson Counties will be taken by members of the Cypress Group of the local Sierra Club. The trip will be on Saturday and Sunday, November 8 and 9.

Reggie Perry and Susan Monaghan of Wilmington will be the two guides for the 17 mile canoe trip through a winding and scenic gorge. Saturday night camp out will be on a high bluff.

Persons interested in more information on possible space available for the planned trip are to contact Pat Garton at 756-6263, or Bob and Caryl Graham, 756-9595.

Marshlands Offer Autumn Serenity

With irritating mosquitoes on the wane (hopefully to be gone soon), the weather cool enough for snakes to be sluggish, and the days becoming just right for rambling walks without getting too hot, it's an ideal time to hit the trail for serene autumn viewing in eastern North Carolina marshlands.

While botanists may not totally agree on classifying low areas of several coastal counties as true marshland, no one can deny it has elements of marsh areas interspersed with forested and cultivated lands ... which together make these areas even more enticing.

In nearby Beaufort, Pamlico, Hyde, Dare, and Craven counties, as well as in counties more distant from Greenville, a number of similar physical characteristics are common — small dark streams winding through dense stands of native myrtles, bay, willow, cedar and sassafras trees; stretches of boggy ground covered with tall, stiff swamp and marsh grasses, clusters of cattails, tall cypresses festooned with Spanish moss; and interspersed between these wild areas, cultivated farmlands where soybeans, sweet potatoes and corn are tended.

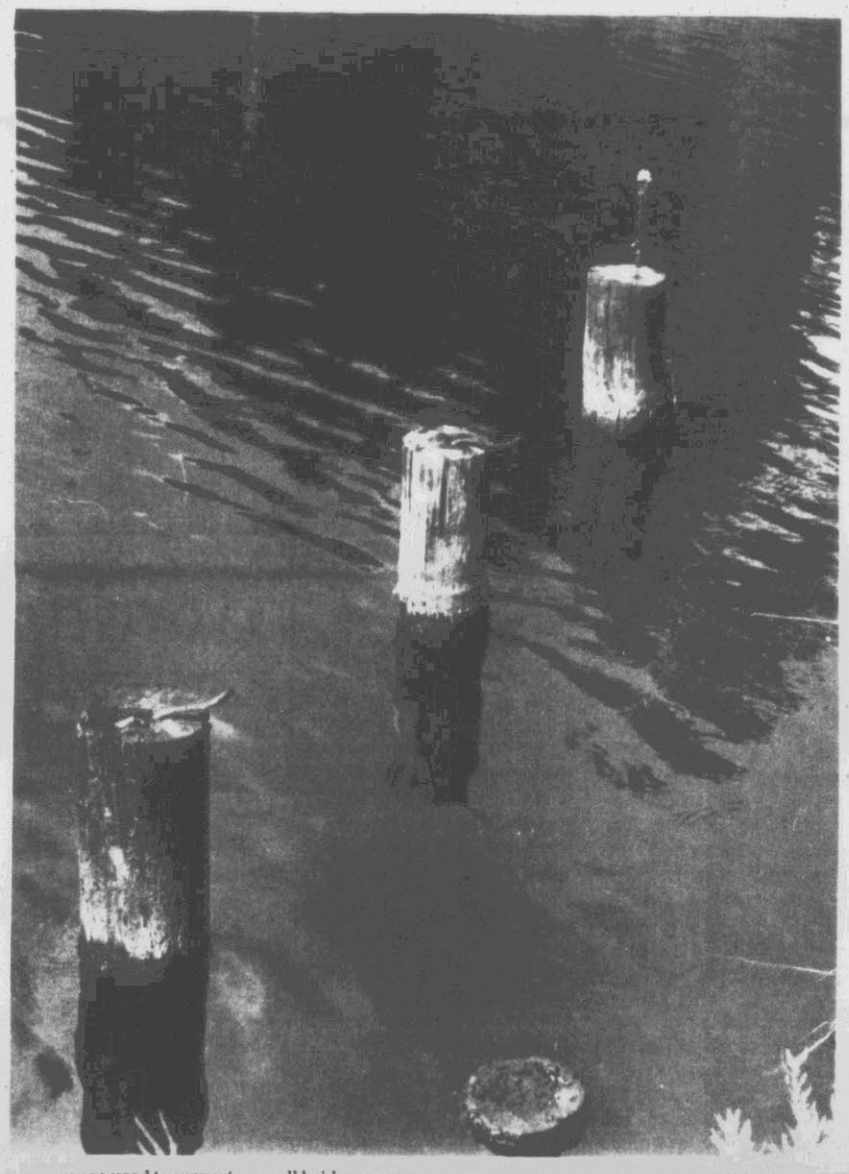
The photographs on this page were taken in Pamlico County, a sparsely populated area dotted with small fishing villages — Vandemere, Mesic, Hobucken, Lowland, Marybelle, Stonewall, Florence, Oriental and Bayboro, Pamlico's county seat.

Along highways and the numerous rural roads, paved and unpaved, that branch off, often seeming to lead to nowhere, there's a delighful feeling of being away from the everyday hustle and bustle. It's possible to drive for miles and encounter only a handful of people — a couple fishing with cane poles, a school boy driving a tractor in after school hours, or men in pick-up trucks carrying hunting dogs in the back of the truck.

Canals of dark, barely moving water reflect the first brilliance of autumn leaves. Several varieties of dark green myrtles are in full fall flowering or seeding glory — some capped with soft mounds of white cottony flowers; others offering bronze beaded sprays of seed; and others still heavy with clusters of small, bluish-black berries.

Ruins of long lasting cypress, silvered and heart-gnarled, stand like spiny statues above ponds and streams. Along shores, the many splendored gold of goldenrod, and soft spun grasses in autumn colors of smokey lilac and golden-tans sway to the touch of every passing breeze.

For sightseeing travel that enchants with a quiet beauty and which brings a sense of peace, it's hard to surpass the nearby marshlands of our coastal counties.



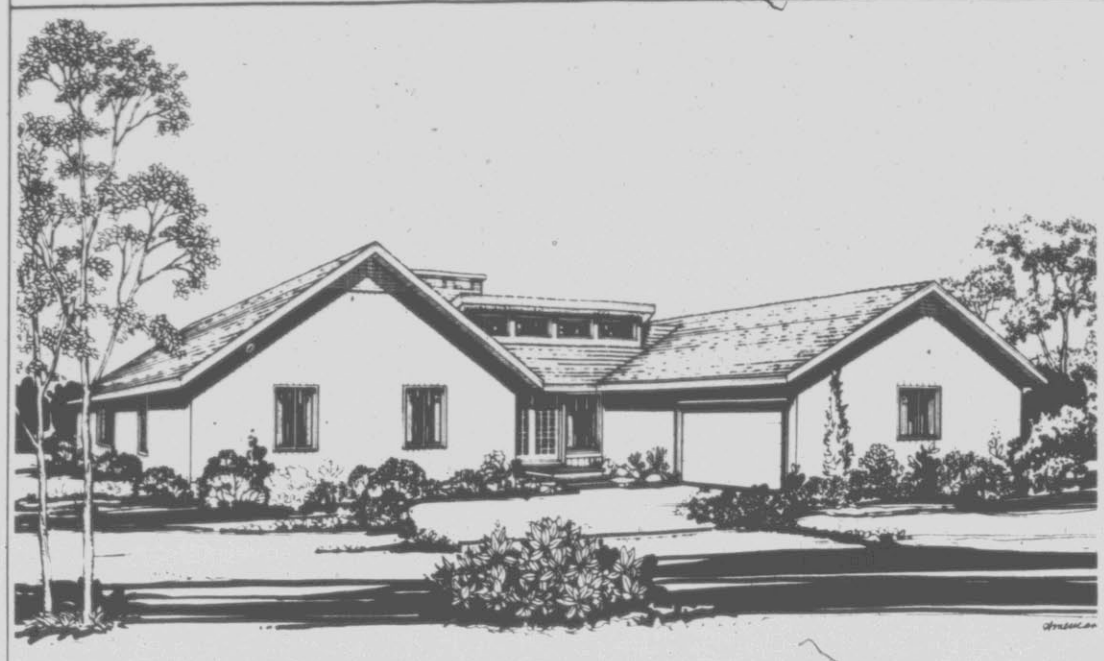
...once used to support a small bridge over a narrow creek at Mesic, these three creosoted poles are ideal for tying up a small boat while fishing — or for sea gulls to perch on.

...clumps of marsh grass bearing spikes of brown seed surround the silvered ruin of a dead cypress tree in the wildlife refuge pond a short distance from the U.S. Coast Guard Station at the Intercoastal Waterway near Hobucken. A heavy growth of yellowish algae covers the water along the shoreline.

...soft spun grasses of smokey lilac color grow amid roadside grass still emerald green, interspersed with taller stalks of wheat color broom straw. This misty line of grass was photographed along the highway between Hobucken and Lowland.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Cheyenne



Dramatic Contemporary Involves Nature

By Jerry Bishop

Sliding glass doors, decks, and a unique redwood bridge contribute to the rugged beauty of the Cheyenne, a three bedroom contemporary design. In slightly over 2,000 square feet of living space, the plan blends three bedrooms, including a lavish master bedroom, with formal and informal living areas and gears itself for enjoyment of the outdoors.

A novel redwood bridge introduces the design and leads, through double doors, to the foyer. Ahead, the sunken living room displays the wood-burning fireplace skirted by two pairs of sliding glass doors that reach outward to the 22-ft. deck. Instead of a formal, enclosed living room, the Cheyenne chooses a more relaxed area for entertaining and devotes a generous amount of space to it. The dining room at right, spanning nearly 18ft., will satisfy any formal entertaining needs.

Bordering the living room is the open kitchen and breakfast room. This sprawling are takes in a sizable country kitchen and family dining are and annexes a laundry room, storage closet, and pantry. Sliding glass doors open the area to a wooden deck, a natural setting for family barbeques. A carefully planned garage entrance to the kitchen complex promises efficiency in unloading groceries and transporting packages.

Bedrooms occupy the entire left wing of the home and take in three substantial rooms and two full baths. Placed at rear to border the living room, the master bedroom merits an extra large walk-in closet, a full bath, and a central dressing area with built-in vanity, and separated from the main bedroom for easy, uncluttered furniture arranging. A walk-in closet is also featured in another bedroom, and the second bath is long and compartmented for efficiency.

Sporting a side entry, the double garage blends well with the rustic facade, and the full basement provides additional storage or living space.

Fitting A Piano In Home's Decor

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

There are 30 million pianos in the United States. But many of them are gathering dust in American homes, unplayed, unloved and ignored.

In a move to end this piano obscurity — and in hope of increasing sales — the National Piano Manufacturers Association has begun showing consumers how to integrate a piano into a decorating scheme.

The association recently asked a number of interior designers for suggestions on decorating around a piano. What emerged from the exercise are two different categories of decorative possibilities.

One group of ideas might be considered part of the "flaunt it" school of piano decorating. It calls for emphasizing the piano by treating it as a piece of sculpture. A second type of decorative possibility is to integrate the piano into the room as part of a musical wall system or a room divider, for example.

Emily Malino, a designer based in Washington, emphasizes the piano as an integral part of the living-room furniture. She suggests fitting an upright piano into a wall and surrounding it with built-ins as part of a home-entertainment wall. Paint the piano the same color as the built-ins and it will blend right into the room, she says.

Adelle Faulkner, a Hollywood designer, has a similar idea. Take the legs off the piano and build it into the wall, allowing only the keyboard to protrude into the room, she suggests.

Another of her ideas is to use the piano as a kind of room divider, covering its back with a suitable fabric, if feasible.

You can achieve room-divider status for the piano and yet make it a spectacular accessory by covering it with mirror tiles, said Bob Rubenstein, a Miami designer.

From the "flaunt it" school come these suggestions: Set the piano on a raised platform to make it a focal point in the room. If the raised platform doesn't work, the same effect can be achieved by lowering the ceiling directly over the piano.

Lighting can be used to highlight the piano without any structural changes at all. Directional lights of either a soft, pink quality or a harder, more diamond-like light can shine directly on the piano, giving it either a soft or hard look, as desired.

Cynthia Ruhaak, a Chicago designer, suggests the piano be considered a kind of sculpture. She positions a grand piano where its curved shape will stand out, jutting into the room.

If the living room or family room will not stretch to include a piano, consider putting it in the dining room, said several designers. All in all, dining rooms are not much in demand for formal sit-down dinners. Rethinking the space to make it a room for entertaining or a music room is a good idea for some people.

When choosing an arrangement to include a piano, make sure to consider the instrument's physical needs. Guard especially against exposure to abrupt changes in temperature which damage the mechanism. Eliminate as locations places next to frequently-opened outside doors or in front of a picture window, heating duct or radiator. The ideal is a constant temperature of 72 degrees Fahrenheit and 40 percent humidity.

Piano manufacturers suggest having a piano tuned four times the first year you own it. After that, a twice-yearly tuning is adequate.

Don't set drinks or flowers on a piano. Spilled liquids cause metal parts to rust and wood parts to stick. Have the piano professionally cleaned about once every three years. And to keep it sounding good, play it often. Frequent use prevents dust from accumulating and retards rust.

You can expect a piano bought new to last about 40 years. And although piano sizes vary they do tend to be large, since a good tone requires a fairly sizeable minimum length of string and soundboard size.

There are two basic piano types: grands and uprights. Grands come in several sizes from five to nine feet and cost an estimated $6,000 to $16,000 new and $1,500 and $8,000 used.

The upright types are studio pianos (the largest from 44 inches up), consoles and spinets. Spinets, from 36 to 38 inches high, are the smallest pianos to be found. Prices for new uprights range from about $1,200 (for a spinet) to about $4,000. Used upright pianos are often found in the $500 to $900 category.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A type of mortgage that offers a kind of lender-buyer ownership will soon be offered to the public by two private organizations — the Rocky Mountain Research Institute in Denver and the Home Partners of America in Westfield, N.J.

The mortgage isn't exactly new, having been used in some instances in commercial properties, but its entrance into the residential housing market is reported by Housing magazine. The theory is that the lender can cut 2 or 3 percentage points off the interest rate because he will get a percentage of the increased value of the home when it is sold.

It sounds like a fine arrangement, but there are some questions that remain to be answered. As Housing magazine points out, these are: Will buyers accept a mortgage that requires involvement of a partner in home maintenance and improvements? Will investors want to gamble on an untried investment? Will buyers be willing to share future profits in return for home equity?

In reply to some questions about a water table, it can be defined as the upper surface of ground water or the level below which the soil is saturated with water. This level may fluctuate by several feet throughout the year depending on soil, landscape and weather conditions. In many areas of the United States, especially where annual rainfall is 20 inches or more, the seasonal high water table is 2 to 5 feet below the ground surface. This year, of course, the water tables are very low in many areas because of drought conditions.

A reader, commenting on a recent query about an aluminum saucepan that got discolored after potatoes had been boiled in it, has this to say:

"I have had good results with this problem by either putting a couple of spoonsful of cream of tartar in the pan with water above the discoloration mark and boiling it or cutting a lemon and doing the same thing with the water. The discoloration disappears and the shine can be restored with steel-wool soap pads."

If you use mildew-resistant paints, be careful. Painted surfaces containing some mildew-resistant paints can be injurious if they reach the mouths of small children. The U.S. Department of Agriculture cautions that mildew-resistant paints, while generally excellent for outdoor wood surfaces, should not be used on such surfaces as window sills, playpens or toys.

Have you noticed the many magazine ads for Italian ceramic tile? That's because the Association of Italian Ceramic Tile Manufacturers is spending nearly $5 million in the United States for advertising the advantages of the many varieties of Italian ceramic tile.

Garden Clinic

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. How can I control the small animals called "voles" that burrow in my garden whenever I put down mulch? (M.S., Fuquay-Varina)

A. Here's a method that some homeowners have used successfully. Take a container of at least a gallon in size with a wide mouth or top. Make some holes about three inches from the top. Fill the container with water and set it in a hole in the ground. The water, of course, will run out above the holes. Place a few pieces of styrofoam on the water so they will float. Place a board or piece of metal over the container, leaving enough space for the voles to crawl under. The voles will jump on the styrofoam, plunge into the water and drown. Fish the dead voles out every few days with something like a kitchen spatula. A metal container will soon rust when placed in the ground. Some people have used wide-mouth glass jars. They shoot holes around the top with a BB gun. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Is my houseplant, Dumb Cane, poisonous? (Mrs. W.E., Banner Elk)

A. Yes. This tropical plant, Dieffenbachia, is very popular because of its large, thick, variously spotted foliage. But a bite of this foliage is known to cause throat irritation resulting in loss of speech for several days. An extreme result would be swelliing of the tongue and clogging of the windpipe. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. What are the cultural requirements for an India Rubber Tree? (T.W., Barnsville)

A. Ficas elastica 'Decora' is a low maintenance houseplant. It requires an average to warm temperature with a night-time minimum of 62 to 65 degrees. Give it diffused sunlight and keep the soil uniformly moist but not wet. Keep the foliage clean by wiping with a water-moistened cloth. Fertilize every two months and repot as needed. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Let's Talk Real Estate

Many people are buying homes even further away from urban work areas than the suburbs. These people often either still work in the city or in other urban areas some distance away. As a result, transportation becomes an issue. Sometimes cities or other agencies help by arranging commuter buses, or workers themselves arrange van or car pools. Rarely are there extensive public transportation systems that extend far out of the city. Commuting problems should receive consideration when buying a house, especially in view of continuously rising fuel cost.

When buying or selling a home it makes sense to work with the professionals at REALTY WORLD-CLARK-BRANCH REALTORS INC., 1902 S. Charles, 756-6336. Because we know the entire Greenville area we can give you information on any neighborhood you are considering and the services it offers. "Professional Service from Professional People" Open: Mon.-Fri. 8:30-5:30, Sat. 8:30-1, other times by appointment.

DID YOU KNOW? Lower home prices can sometimes offset the cost of commuting.

Is There A Dracula In The House? Stand Please

EDITOR'S NOTE — Is there a Dracula in the house? Come on, stand up and be count-ed. Dr. Stephen Kaplan, a self-described vampirologist, has found 22 in North America, fang you very much, and is looking for others. Here's a toothsome tale, at the least.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — This survey has some unusual questions. It asks for a day address and a night address. It asks you to rate on a scale of zero to 10 the violence of your reactions to things like sunlight, the cross, garlic and Frank Langella.

It is the Official Vampire Research Center Census and even if you haven't gotten one yet, take heart. You could either write to the Vampire Research Center in Elmhurst, N.Y., and ask for one or you could write to President Carter and ask for his. The man behind the project doesn't think Jimmy will fill it out.

That man is Dr. Stephen Kaplan, a 40-year-old sociologist who describes himself as "the foremost vampirologist in the world, a respected scholar as well as someone who knows something of show business."

He's also a man who has drunk blood, posed in graveyards and slept in a coffin. Research.

The sandy-haired Kaplan says he's deadly serious, even though he allows as how he'll be happy if 1 percent of the replies are serious.

A sampling of the 116 questions:

— If you could bite anyone in the world, who would you bite?

Historic personality — —

Current personality — — —

— Do you find it necessary to sharpen your teeth?

— Do you have many vampire friends?

— Do you date — — other vampires — — humans — — both?

— Yearly salary — — —

— If you live in the United States, are you planning to or did you vote in the presidential election? For whom?

— What is your favorite television show?

— Did you become a vampire — — voluntarily — — involuntarily — —?

— Do you use a mouthwash?

Actually Kaplan knows a great deal about vampires already. But he's unwilling to give a lot of it away since it's contained in his book, "Vampires Are," as told to Carole Kane. Kaplan says it is the definitive work on vampires and vampirism. There's only one problem. You can't read it yet. It is what is known in the trade as a book in search of a publisher.

He will share some tidbits, however. Did you know, for instance, that there are currently 22 vampires in North America and that Wisconsin is the leading contributor? Even the foremost vampirologist cannot explain that phenomenon.

Of these 22, there are five who live solely on blood. Or so they say. Kaplan admits that he has not tried to verify that claim and he has his doubts, based on caloric requirements.

The others fit the various vampire categories on the questionnaire — psychic vampire, vampire-like person, psychological vampire, vampire tendencies, and, as in any good poll, "unsure."

A psychic vampire, incidentally, is a person who psychically drains the people around them. Some non-scientists call those folks pains in the fanny, but for science, remember, that's your basic psychic vampire.

The Vampire Research Center is on a tree-lined little street in the Elmhurst section of Queens, its exact location kept secret because of threats Kaplan says he has received.

The world of Count Dracula could not be expected to be completely safe. Kaplan will not interview potential vampires alone for safety reasons.

He also says he has been called in by the police on occasion when they are investigating blood cultists, a fetish he says is on the increase in the United States. He estimates there are 10,000 to 20,000 satanic cults in this country alone.

The center has 10 volunteers standing by to analyze the data once it starts pouring in. So far, the volunteers — and Kaplan — have been amazed by the number of people who have written in volunteering to be bitten if some vampires show up.

And, a further note to any vampires reading this, Kaplan says he will have blood on hand.

Kaplan is a parapsychologist as well as a vampirologist, and he says he is a available to investigate if you feel your house is haunted or if you've been invaded by a poltergeist. There will be expenses to be paid, of course, in addition to an honorarium.

But Kaplan is an expert on ghosts — and on hoaxing as well. He won the 1980 Albert Einstein Award for exposing the Amityville Horror hoax. He's also won an award from the Count Dracula Society, but that's another story.

But back to vampires. Kaplan says he has been called an idiot and a moron, but says, "That's just part of the territory one accepts when one goes out for vampires."

NORTH CAROLINA WILDLIFE RESOURCES COMMISSION
Notice of Public Hearing

In accordance with Sections 143B-18 and 150A-12 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission will conduct a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. on November 12, 1980, in the Commissioners' Room, Second floor, Pitt County Office Building, 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina, for the purpose of soliciting public reaction to the following proposal:

To amend Rule 15 NCAC 10B .0115 so as to add Pitt County to the list of counties in which the intentional shining of lights on deer is prohibited between 11:00 p.m. and one-half hour before sunrise in areas frequented by deer and which are subject to substantial night deer hunting or in which residents have been greatly inconvenienced by such shining of lights.

The said amendment is proposed under authority of Section 291.1 of Chapter 113 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, to become effective December 21, 1980.

Interested persons may present their views either orally or in writing at the hearing, or prior to November 14, 1980, by communicating with the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, Archdale Building, 512 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611.

This 20th day of October, 1980.

Jamaicans' Choice; Socialism Or A Free Economy

By LEW WHEATON
Associated Press Writer

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — The longest and bloodiest political campaign in the history of this resort island comes to a climax next Thursday with an election described by leaders as its most important. Voters will decide whether they want to stay on a socialist path or return to a more free-enterprise system.

In the background is an economy teetering on the brink of disaster and violence that has killed a member of Parliament and hundreds of other people.

Prime Minister Michael Manley, 55, whose People's National Party has greatly expanded social programs, forged links with Cuba and other Communist countries and thrust this former British colony into an important role in the Third World, is seeking an unprecedented third term.

Opposition leader Edward Seaga, 50, whose Jamaica Labor Party favors closer ties with the United States and other Western nations and a stronger role for private enterprise, claims that Manley's socialist rhetoric and alleged mismanagement has led to the nation's economic plight.

Manely denies those charges. "We are not communists," he said recently. "We are proud of our democracy and proud of our socialism."

Manley says he issued the election call last February, constitutionally not required until early in 1982, in order to obtain a renewed mandate for his party's programs. The normal term of office is five years.

He said that since taking office in 1972 his party has achieved more social and economic reforms than any other government in Jamaican historic. He cited laws guaranteeing a minimum wage, equal pay for woman, the elimination of bastardy, free school tuition and recognition of labor unions.

"Before we came to power, Jamaica, after 10 years of independence, was the house salve to the Western world," Manley said at a rally.

Manley acknowledged that Jamaica had economic problems and predicted "a time of great struggle, great difficulty" ahead. But he denied charges of mismanagement, citing his party's construction of more than 40,000 housing units, the imposition of the bauxite tax on aluminum companies and planned $1 billion in investments over the next five years in the bauxite and alumina industries.

After borrowing $250 million from the International Monetary Fund and imposing IMF-ordered spending limits and currency devaluation, Manley broke off talks early this year with IMF officials on further funding to cover a huge and growing foreign exchange gap.

Statistics indicate the economy has declined for the past six consecutive years. Unemployment at the middle of this year was estimated at 35 percent, with inflation expected to average 30 percent for the year. Jamaica's foreign debt has soared to $1.5 billion, and Seaga says that since the the People's National Party took over in 1972 from the previous Labor Party administration, the amount of foreign exchange earnings spent just to service the public debt has climbed from four percent to nearly 50 percent.

The lack of foreign exchange has cut imports to the bare essentials, and earlier this year there were near-riots at food stores. A report by the U.S. Embassy in Kingston says Jamaica is so short of funds that it may have to choose between buying food and fuel or continuing to pay its foreign debt.

Seaga said that as Manley's government spent huge sums on poorly managed social programs, revenues stagnated because the National Party's ideology "scared off investment and caused the flight of foreign exchange. Economically, Manley crippled the country and he crippled himself."

A Labor Party administration, Seaga said, would "substitute a market system economy under proper government regulation to prevent the consumer from being exploited."

Seaga said in a recent interview that the "social fabric of Jamaica is holding together only because of the proximity of elections and the certainty of a (Labor Party) win."

A poll conducted in September by Carl Stone, a journalist who predicted Manley's 1976 victory that gave the National Party a 47-13 seat advantage in the legislature, said Labor at the time of the poll would have received 53.8 percent of the popular vote, compared with 46.2 percent for National. The Labor Party's share was down from 57.6 percent in April, but still enough to win 38 to 40 of the legislature's 60 seats.

Western diplomats early this month said their own estimates would give Labor 33 to 38 seats.

Manley's finance minister, Hugh Shall, said, however, that a National Party poll indicated the governing party was on the way to a strong win. He declined to release any figures.

He said he is moderate who favors "change without chaos." Under a Labor administration, he said, Jamaica would continue a non-aligned foreign policy but without an "offensive high-profile position" that would endanger the nation's other interests.

Both Manley and Seaga say a key to their respective plans for salvaging the economy will be rescheduling Jamaica's debt to give the nation enough operating capital to revive its industry and agriculture, both of which have suffered losses in output.

Both also emphasize controlling Jamaica's exploding violence, which each blames on supporters of the other's party. Small says the violence could have a disastrous effect on tourism, one of the brightest spots in the economy, if it is not halted.

The violence has increased sharply since Manley issued his election call on Feb. 3. Police say 470 people were killed in the first nine months of this year, 380 of them by gunmen. In addition, police killed 144 suspected criminals.

The number of deaths eased after joint police-military patrols were begun and Manley and Seaga issued a joint statement in July calling for peace.

But 16 days before the scheduled election, a National Party member of Parliament and his police bodyguard were shot to death in what police said was a "political confrontation" involving members of both parties.

Each party blamed the other for the death of Roy McGann, deputy minister of national security, and the policeman in Gordon Town, 15 miles north of Kingston. Police said the two died in an exchange of gunfire between police and members of both parties.

Both Manley and Seaga decried the deaths and called for calm and peaceful elections, which both parties see as crucial in deciding the nation's path for the foreseable future.

"This election is going to seal things for the rest of the 20th century," said Finance Minister Small. "If the (National Party) is returned to power, that is the end of any capitalist path for the country. If we are not returned to power, that is the end of democracy for the country."

Seaga concurred that "this is the most important election this century," but he added: "The question before Jamaicans is, do you want a socialist system, with all the sacrifice it entails, or a return to the market system, which has provided you with better economic prospects and still enabled you to finance some social programs?"

Bible Soc. Sees Cash Shortage

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top officials of the the United Bible Societies have been warned that severe cash shortages could seriously impair the work of Bible printing and distribution during the next decade.

Officials from the American Bible Society, the U.S. arm of the international organization, said they were told at the UBS' once-a-decade meeting that cash for printing costs rather than wars, closed borders or antagonistic regimes was the major block in increasing Scripture distribution throughout the world.

The present shortfall in capital is estimated at about $7 million.

The officials said that demand for Bibles and other Scripture publications has has been going up "dramatically" year-by-year for the past decade but program expansion is hampered by the shortage of cash for printing.

Bob Kaliban's DRAWTIME

Come On Kids . . . Give It A Try!

There's a fantastic Grand Prize — an exciting, expense-paid weekend trip to New York City — to the winner of a unique contest NBC-TV is conducting for youngsters 11 years old or younger. Just read the contest rules below, then draw likenesses of Bob Kaliban (in cap), Lenny Schultz and Kari Page, the stars of a new Saturday morning show, "Drawing Power."

WHO CAN ENTER: Anyone residing in the U.S., who is 11 or under on Oct. 31, 1980, except children of employees of NBC, RCA and its subsidiaries.

ENTRY & MAILING: Print your name, address and the age you'll be Oct. 31, on the back of entry. Mail to: "Drawing Power," NBC-TV, P.O. Box 1334, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101. Entries must be received by Oct. 31.

MAKING YOUR DRAWING: Using water colors, crayons, felt-tip pens, paints, pen, pencils or any other medium, draw likenesses of "Drawing Power's" three stars. NO tracing paper. ALL ENTRIES MUST BE ORIGINAL AND DRAWN BY ENTRANT ALONE. JUDGING & PRIZES: All drawings will be judged on originality, neatness, use of color and balance, and appropriateness of drawing in developing a likeness of the characters. Prize will be an expense-paid weekend in New York City, including hotel for two nights, all meals, transportation and tour charges for winning child and his parents or guardians. Trip must be taken by Jan. 23, 1981 and is subject to airline and hotel availablity.

GENERAL: All entries become the property of NBC-TV and none will be returned. Contest void where prohibited, restricted or taxed. Winners will be notified by mail after Nov. 7, 1980.

Winner's name may be obtained after Nov. 7 by writing to "Winner," P.O. Box 1334, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101.

"Our contest not only stresses creativity, but strengthens a child's image of himself," says Mary Alice Dwyer, of NBC-TV. "The winning youngster will have the opportunity to do something significant for his parents — perhaps for the first time in his or her life. And we are offering this potential to literally millions of children — giving them the chance to truly excel."

WHAT IS YOUR "DRAWING POWER?" — If you are 11-years-old or younger on October 31, 1980, you can win an expense-paid week-end trip to New York City for you and your parents or guardians by drawing likenesses of the three stars of NBC-TV's weekly children's series "Drawing Power," airing Saturdays (12:30-1 p.m.).

ROYAL ROGUERY — The queen who created a few problems for Snow White is among the animated characters featured in the Sunday, Oct. 26 presentation of "Disney's Wonderful World," (7-8 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

What Bad Villains

Call the cops! Batten down the hatches! Women and children out first!

There's a nasty villain in town — the red-haired, slouch-shouldered, shrill-voiced, simply mad Madame Medusa — whose nasty number was seen in the animated film, "The Rescuers."

Medusa is but one in a long line of dastardly, diabolical, deceitfully devilish doers of evil who will be spotlighted when "Disney's Wonderful World" honors "Disney's Greatest Villains," Sunday Oct. 26 at 7 p.m. on NBC.

Has A Baby Girl

Dual Role Was Unique

The work of Oscar winner Sophia Loren in "Sophia Loren Her Own Story," can very well be deemed both unprecedented and unique.

In the three-hour drama, airing as NBC-TV's Sunday Night Big Event, Oct. 26 (8 p.m.), Loren (1) takes on the demanding assignment of two challenging roles; (2) portrays herself in one of the roles — a motion picture rarity; and (3) stars as her mother in the second role — even more unusual in Hollywood annals.

The childhood and close relationship of Sophia and her mother is a central theme of the drama, based on her best-selling biography, "Sophia/Living and Loving/Her Own Story."

In discussing her dual role, Loren indicated that portraying her mother proved to be the most interesting role she has essayed in her career.

"It was one of the most moving experiences I've had as an actress. I put myself inside of her personality and now I understand her much more. I have a feeling for all that she went through."

As a young woman, Sophia's mother, Romilda Villani — from the small village of Pozzuoli, just north of Naples — entered a Greta Garbo look-alike contest with 350 other women, and won. But her parents adamantly refused to allow their daughter to travel to Hollywood for a screen test that was offered as first prize. (Later in life she reacts in a most personal way when her own daughter begins to gain the recognition of agents and producers.)

Romilda becomes romantically involved with Riccardo Scicolone, and eventually bears his child, Sophia. But he steadfastly refuses to marry and accept a family life style.

Years later, after watching Sophia grow from a spindly youngster into an attractive young woman, Romilda urged her daughter to compete in a beauty pageant. Sophia won a runner-up prize, which included acting lessons in Rome. Romilda accompanied her to the Italian capital and remained with her until her career began to flourish. Only then did she feel she could leave her daughter and return home.

HAPPY MOMENT — Ritza Brown (l) portrays the young Sophia Loren, who is about to have a successful audition, as her mother, Romilda Villani — portrayed by Sophia Loren — looks on happily in "Sophia Loren Her Own Story," a world premiere drama airing on the Sunday Big Event, Oct. 26 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'It Doesn't Matter'

"I've spent a good part of my life preparing for acting roles in comedy, musicals and drama, and I enjoy them all," says Hal Linden. "It doesn't matter which of the three I happen to be working in at the time, I'm always delighted."

Linden, television's "Barney Miller," recently completed filming "Father Figure," a tele-movie that will be broadcast on CBS Sunday, Oct. 26 (8-10 p.m.).

The story of a man trying to reestablish a relationship with his two sons after the death of their mother, his divorced wife, is about as far afield from the comedy of "Barney Miller" as one might expect an actor to travel. But Linden seemed to enjoy it.

"How could I not enjoy it?" Linden asks. "There we were on the beach in southern California, and I got a nice tan, working at the thing I most enjoy.

Linda Tripp
Director
How many times have you broken a fingernail and been so upset, you rushed to the store and bought some gelatin, hoping to cure your problem. Many people don't realize that gelatin is not a complete protein. That is, it lacks some of the essential amino acids which are necessary for building strong bodies. For this reason, unfortunately, gelatin will not help with the growth and development of fingernails. Many things will affect the developement of your nails. Nails will not be strong if you do not eat a well-balanced diet, if you are ill and your body is not functioning properly and if you don't take care of yourself. Remember, Diet Center believes that by eating nutritious meals, you can have a healthy body clear down to your fingernails.

Michele Will Tell

Q: What happened to Michael O'Shea, who co-starred in a series called "It's a Great Life"? T. EDWARDS, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: The toothy, red-headed actor who came on strong with the charm, died eight years ago at the age of 67. After 'Great Life' went off TV in the mid-60s, O'Shea guested on several other shows, then just 'threw in the sponge' and became a plainsclothes detective with the sheriff's department in Ventura County, Calif. He was married to actress Virginia Mayo.

A: Beverly Owen originated her character on the series, then left after one season to get married. She's not been active in films or TV since.

Q: Is "Facts of Life" coming back to television this year? Who is the actress cast as Blair, and will she still be on the show? B. CRIBBS, PIKEVILLE, N.C.

A: The show will definitely be back, but only three of the original seven girls are returning, and Lisa Whelchel's (Blair) among them. The others are Kim Fields (Tootie) and Mindy Cohn (Natalie). Lisa, the only girl in last season's cast to have graduated from high school, is 17 and a former 'Mouseketeer' for "The New Mickey Mouse Club."

Q: I would like to know something about Joan Van Ark, who's in "Knots Landing." What other TV shows has she been on? B. KETNER, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: Joan's made more than 50 appearances in other series, including "Vega$," "The Love Boat," "The Rockford Files" and "Quincy." She's also an ardent runner and competed in the last Boston Marathon.

Q: Is there any chance of "Beacon Hill" returning to TV? It was a series that ran a few years ago. L. CARNETT, RHODHISS, N.C.

A: It's doubtful. This was one of CBS-TV's most expensive 'disasters' and never climbed out of the cellar, as far as ratings are concerned.

Strange Incidents In 'Omen'

The powers of darkness rally for a terrifying showdown with mankind in "The Omen," to be colorcast as NBC's Movie of the Week, Wednesday, Oct. 29 (9 to 11 p.m.). The drama is a chillingly effective excursion through a series of nightmarish incidents that engulf and eventually destroy a married couple who are the unsuspecting parents of a young child given to devilishly destructive behavior.

Gregory Peck and Lee Remick star as the couple whose adopted son is possessed by evil spirits.

When Robert Thorn (Peck), an American diplomat based in Rome, learns that his first child — unbeknown to its mother — has died at birth, he is urged by a hospital administrator to adopt an infant, born on the same evening, whose mother died giving birth. Reluctantly, he decides to adopt the boy without telling his wife that their son is dead.

Shortly after, Thorn receives a transfer to England. At a party celebrating the fourth birthday of the youngster, Damien, a mysterious dog appears, and moments later the child's nursemaid takes her life.

In a few days, another nursemaid, Mrs. Baylock (Billie Whitelaw) arrives without a reference, but is reluctantly accepted by the couple. Following a number of mysterious occurrences, Thorn is confronted by Father Brennan (Patrick Troughton), who suggests that Damien may be inherently evil.

After his wife dies under mysterious circumstances, Thorn becomes convinced that Damien is actually a powerful demon and decides to carry out the only satisfactory solution — to slay the child.

Shares All Duties

In real life, George Gaynes, who's cast as Mr. Smith in "General Hospital," is an outspoken women's libber. Married to actress Allyn Ann McLerie and the father of two children, Gaynes comments, "We totally share household responsibilities equally, including cooking."

Kids Ask Questions

Jessica Savitch, Bill Sternoff, Irving R. Levine and Mike Jensen are the correspondents featured on "Ask NBC News," which has returned for its second season.

"Ask NBC News" elicits questions from young people across the country on current events and news-related subjects. But there's been one change since last year — the segments — each one minute, 45 seconds in length — are airing four times each Saturday morning instead of only three (8:57, 9:44 10:57 and 11:57 a.m.).

An example of the questions asked is this one from Tamar Gargle, 10, who's a fifth-grade pupil at the Little Red School House in New York City: "Why can the President of the United States serve only eight years and no longer?"

Sternoff recently answered the following question from another 10-year-old, Valerie Roche, who's also Tamar's classmate: "How long will it be 'til the dust from Mount St. Helens doesn't affect the people anymore?"

"I want to know how many people get unemployed a year," asked Neal Berger. The 12-year-old is in the seventh grade at Spring Valley Junior High School, in Spring Valley, N.Y.

One of the most thought-provoking questions came from Tonya Hunsucker, 12, who's a seventh-grade student at the Edmund Burke School in Washington, D.C.: "What are the chances of Russia controlling the oil shipments from Saudi Arabia to the United States?"

Jensen answered this one, and taped his reply from the site of the recent OPEC meeting in Vienna.

Big Bad Butkus

Mention the name of Dick Butkus, and any football fan will immediately conjure up flickering visions of the former Hall of Fame middle linebacker. As the hungriest and most ferocious of the Chicago Bears, Dick terrorized running backs and quarterbacks for nine years before chronic knee injuries hastened his retirement.

Now, seven years later, Butkus reverts to similar form as he plays the brawny Brom Bones, who tries to frighten the timid schoolmaster Ichabod Crane with tales of the dreaded 'Headless Horseman' in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." The World Premiere movie, based on Washington Irving's classic tale, will be telecast Friday, Oct. 31 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC.

"I was only vaguely familiar with the story," said Butkus. "But I found Brom kind of like me, playing jokes on people. Of course, I'm more subtle."

Butkus already had embarked on an acting career before he left football, and he continued with it, although his size usually relegated him to playing heavies.

"When I arrived on the set of 'Sleepy Hollow,' they all said, 'We thought you were bigger than that' I mean, I only stand 6 foot 3 inches and weighed about 250 lbs. then (he has since trimmed to 230)."

These ventures include tending his 30-acre fern farm, along with operating a management agency as an independent producer in a videotape operation that supplies educational and how-to programs for cable TV.

"Florida isn't the mecca for an actor," Butkus concedes. "I planned to move to L.A., but I like it too well on the farm. Once in a while, I'll get a part, if they have me in mind for it and I like it."

Butkus readily acknowledges that football made all of this attainable — even if it extracted a painful physical toll in the process.

"Playing football was something I always wanted to do since I was a kid," he said. "It opened up a lot of possibilities for me that I wouldn't have done otherwise. But I had problems with my knee for the last three years and I knew the handwriting was on the wall. It was a blessing in disguise. It was a great thing while it lasted, but then it was time to move on.

Ten Years Service

Tenure with one team is extremely scarce in the NBA, and only three men currently active have been with their original clubs for 10 years. They are: Wes Unseld, with the Bullets; the Celtics' Dave Cowens; and Calvin Murphy, who plays for the Rockets.

Goody Two Shoes

Roger Staubach, the Dallas Cowboys' star quarterback who's not a sportscaster, says he's embarrassed by all those comments about his religious and moral ways of life. "I don't like to be pictured as Goody Two Shoes," he says. "I'm not one-dimensional, and I'm just like almost any other guy I know."

Rich Mauti Tackles Cancer

Nobody does it better in the National Football League. That's one reason Rich Mauti of the New Orleans Saints is a hero.

A player of average size and speed who does not possess a starting position, Mauti won his special fame as a special teams player. He returns punts and kickoffs for the Saints, but his specialty is making the tackle on punt and kickoff coverage. Mauti will be in action when the New Orleans Saints meet the Washington Redskins on Sunday, Oct. 26 at 1 p.m.

The fans love the four-year veteran free agent wide receiver from Penn State. They cheer him as a player who gives everything he has on every play and often succeeds. All eyes are on No. 84 as he charges down field with an uncanny angle of pursuit that leads to the return man.

Mauti made 27 unassisted tackles and had four assists on special teams in 1978. Nobody had ever done it better in the NFL. As a reward he gained unheard-of double teamming in 1979 and still posted 16 unassisted tackles and six assits, tops in the NFL.

But it is Rich Mauti, as a young man of 26, who has handled his moderate success with class and added another dimension to his popularity. He is the young man who started and continues to spark the Rich Mauti Cancer Fund.

This is no publicity stunt. Mauti feels strongly about cancer because of the death of his father last year. He also feels a football player has an obligation to the fans of his community.

Mauti started his cancer campaign (The Mauti Challenge, Help Rich Mauti Tackle Cancer) when he learned that his father, Dominic, was dying from lung cancer. He pledged to give $10 for every tackle he made and $1 for every yard he gained on punt and kickoff returns to the American Cancer Socity. He challenged other individuals and organizations to match his contributions.

"We had responses from California to New York and letters of encouragement from 5-year-old kids to 70-year-old ladies.

"I loved my dad and I'm dedicating whatever years I have in football to him. He was my biggest fan. He tried to keep me from finding out how long he had to live once the cancer was diagnosed because he didn't want anything to bother me while I was playing ball.

"But we all knew it was coming. I'm told that smoking caused it. He had something called oat-cell cancer.

"I love to play football and really enjoy the special teams," said Mauti. "Every kid wants to be the one who runs down and makes the tackle. That's for me. You have a freedom you don't have otherwise. It's my vehicle. I really enjoy it."

PIKE'S PEEKS

HOLLYWOOD — LANI O'GRADY is the latest "EIGHT IS ENOUGH" cast member to make that all-important trek down the aisle. She and business exec JAMES SMITH were married in Massachusetts recently.

Let's hope Lani's marriage will last longer than PAMELA SUE MARTIN, who didn't even wait around for her first wedding anniversary...Pam's already walked out on her short-lived merger with GEORGE BRUZ!

While in New York, BURT REYNOLDS' dinner guests were none other than foxy LEIF GARRETT, his mom, CAROLINE, and sister DIANE. Caroline used to sew for Burt's ex-wife, JUDY CARNE, and he's known the Garrett kids for years.

RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN will be reading passages from the Bible on PERRY COMO's Christmas special, which will be filmed in Israel next month.

It's a good thing actress JILL CLAYBURGH will be wearing flowing black robes when she portrays a Supreme Court judge in the film version of "FIRST MONDAY IN OCTOBER"...she and hubby DAVID RABE are expecting their first child in April.

WILLIAM CONRAD should be given a medal, but not for his starring role in the long-running "CANNON" series. It seems the portly actor's best friends didn't even know he'd married TIPPI HUNTLEY 'til ten weeks after the ceremony. That's got to be a record for keeping a secret in Tinseltown's history!

JACK LEMMON flew to Alaska for a fishing vacation with son CHRIS, but limped home a few days later after falling and breaking his leg. Now he's having to cancel all plans until the cast is removed sometime next month.

Apparently everybody's jittery after hearing the sad news of STEVE McQUEEN's terminal illness, and WILLIAM HOLDEN's the latest rumor 'victim.' "I'm alive, well and I don't have cancer," the actor says, hoping to stop the rumors circulating about him. "There's absolutely nothing wrong with me — I'm in excellent health," he assures.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Disasters: when the Feds step in.

FOR JOHN W. MACY, director, Federal Emergency Management Agency

How long has your agency been in operation; what was the first disaster you handled, and how big does one have to be for you to get involved? — S.G., Santa Fe, N.M.

● F.E.M.A. has been in operation since July 15, 1979. The first disaster we handled was a severe storm and tornadoes in Wyoming. Our agency is dedicated to the protection of people by research, planning and training before disasters and to reduce human suffering and hardship after major disasters. An underlying premise in Federal disaster assistance is that disasters will be dealt with initially by private resources and local and state governments. Not until problems grow beyond their capabilities does the Government step in.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What exactly caused the split between Princess Caroline and Philippe Junot? — N.M., Key West, Fla.

● The most popular version is, to quote a close friend of the Princess, "What Caroline wanted from her marriage was essentially a family life. She dearly wanted to have a baby. Philippe wanted neither. And she was deeply hurt by the way her husband did not give up his playboy routine." One of Philippe's pals reports that Junot could not accept a life where his movements had to be screened by his in-laws at the palace. To be admired in this situation is the way Caroline's parents have behaved. They were against the marriage (they felt their daughter was too young, and their prospective son-in-law, age 40, was too old), but never once did they say, "We told you so."

Pictorial Parade

For them, no royal road to romance.

FOR HELEN W. MILLIKEN, wife of William C. Milliken, governor of Michigan

What impressed you most on your trip to China? — G.G. Crabtree, Lansing, Mich.

● The Chinese people themselves were the most intriguing and heartwarming part of our experience in China. I expected the negative characteristics of the "Red Chinese" as popularly portrayed to the World War II generation. But I found the Chinese to be among the warmest, most gentle and civilized.

FOR RAY ANTHONY, bandleader

Please explain why you think that now is the time for the big bands to come back? — E. Backe, Westchester, N.Y.

● During the last six months, the disco fad has started to fade: actually, it was more of a young adult thing; it never got to the kids. Kids are searching for something new and "different." There are no Beatles or Elvis Presleys around today, to capture their imagination. I believe in cycles and think the time is ripe to bring back the big-band sound — in today's style.

FOR ALEC GUINNESS, star of PBS-TV's Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy

Was the set used in the series based on fact or fiction? — J.H., Green Bay, Wis.

● On fact. The series was filmed at the headquarters complex of the British Secret Service. The buildings excelled in endless secret passages and hallways. Truly, every time I tried to get to the set, I lost my way. Would you believe it took me longer to learn my way through the maze, than to learn my lines.

FOR DANIELLE BRISEBOIS of TV's Archie Bunker's Place

Do you want to be an actress when you're grown up? — J.S., Salina, Kan.

● Probably, as long as I'm still wanted. If not, I'd like to be a vet, or a scientist. I love science. I just did a 15-page report on the moon. I wouldn't mind being a vet because I love animals. Now I come to think of it, helping sick people is more important than science. Unless, of course, I could be a vet in space.

FOR HENRY FORD II, Chairman, Finance Committee Ford Motor Company

How did the early Fords come to be called "Tin Lizzies?" — Mrs. F.J. Fitzpatrick, Pennington, N.J.

● "Tin Lizzie" seems to have derived from two facts: In the early part of the century, "tin" was used to describe anything that was thought to be not long-lasting, such as the so-called "tin cans" in use back then. Also, "lizzie" (stemming from lizard) was a slang term applied to anything that darted about rapidly.

FOR JEANE DIXON, astrologer

I read that the lines in your hands are unusual ("occurring once in a thousand years"). What do they look like? — B.P. Carbondale, Ill.

● They have been described by persons well versed in the lore of palmistry as deeply formed stars. These unusual patterns have caused the greatest interest in the Orient, where their rarity — and their apparent significance in terms of psychic ability — is widely appreciated.

PRO AND CON

PRO Alan Jay Rom, staff counsel, Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, Boston Bar Assn.

Yes. The Secretary of Education must promulgate strong, effective regulations to require bilingual/bicultural education for all children of limited English proficiency. Students cannot learn in a language they don't understand; they must be proficient (read, write, speak, understand) in their native language before they can become proficient in the second language. Effective bilingual/bicultural educational programs enable these students to become English-proficient while they receive the same academic instruction in their native language as their English-proficient peers.

CON Dr. S. John Davis, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Virginia

Foreign-born students with limited skills in English should be able to move as rapidly as possible into the mainstream of the public-school system. This is best accomplished by immersion into the regular school program and by intensive instruction in English as a second language. This approach has been successful in Virginia. In my opinion, continued instruction in the native language impedes the acquisition of skills needed for success in school and in society. I recognize, however, that there are occasions when modifications in instruction are necessary to meet individual needs.

Shirley then...: MacLaine had her first important starring role opposite Frank Sinatra in Some Came Running.

20th Century-Fox

Shirley MacLaine at 46
Stardom — and Solitude

On stage and screen Shirley MacLaine is the female equivalent of vintage champagne. Here's a backstage look at what makes Shirley bubble.

By Kate White

She is a leggy, auburn-tressed dynamo who, like a classy sports car, appears to be going 80 miles per hour even while standing still. What really makes Shirley MacLaine run? "Carrot juice," she says, laughingly.

"But seriously," she adds, "I don't really know how or why I am the way I am." Perhaps, she muses, her parents inadvertently created her drive by telling her she didn't have what it took for success: "If you curtail or discipline a child to just the right point, you can in effect teach them to defy you."

Regardless of where her spunk came from, nothing has been able to squelch it. At 46, Shirley still loves working hard and hates letting much grass grow underfoot. "I don't want to have to live anywhere," she exclaims. "It's always bothered the men I've been with. But as long as I've had my work and can write, I feel at home anywhere. I love touring, I love living out of a suitcase. My home is in my head."

Not so long ago, a good part of her energy went into crusading for causes she believed in — and she often drew flak because of it. She spent a year on the campaign trail for George McGovern and produced a documentary film about mainland China. But these days her energy is being focused closer to home. Shirley MacLaine is busy finding out more about Shirley MacLaine.

Her most recent projects include two new films: Loving Couples (being released now) with James Coburn and Stephen Collins and A Change of Seasons (due out in December) with Anthony Hopkins and Bo Derek — both about marriages under stress. She is putting the finishing touches on her third book, a novel. ("After reading it, some people will think I should be taken off in a white coat, but it's very important to me.") And she has been touring Las Vegas and Reno with a rousing song and dance act.

Dancing, by the way, is something she has been doing since she was 3 years old, growing up in a red brick home in Virginia (which also happened to be the home of actor Warren Beatty, her brother). And dancing, she believes, has a lot to do with her stamina: "I think that dance has probably had more influence on me than anything," she says. "That's why I'm young-spirited. If I gave up dancing I would get old very fast."

Dancing was also her original ticket to success. At 18, Shirley left home for New York and landed a part on Broadway as a chorus girl and understudy for the female lead. With a twist of fate right out of the movies, the star broke her ankle and Shirley went out to thunderous applause. Not long afterward, Alfred Hitchcock happened to be in the audience and decided to cast her in The Trouble with Harry. There followed a succession of not-so-sensational movie roles.

Then in 1958, there was Some Came Running with Frank Sinatra and a part "I could finally sink my teeth into." With that she sprang for good out of the pack of would-be starlets, and her next films were sensational: The Apartment (for which she got an Oscar nomination), The Children's Hour, Irma La Douce and Sweet Charity.

It was during her early years in New York that Shirley met Steve Parker, her husband of 26 years. For a while he managed her blossoming career, but then, in danger of becoming Mr. MacLaine, he decided to move to Japan — where he'd spent some of his boyhood — to start his own business. The couple commuted across the Pacific for a time, but eventually the marriage faltered, though they remain legally married.

"I always knew we would never divorce," Shirley says. "It would be a mistake, though, to say that this is a long-surviving and therefore unusually solid Hollywood marriage. It's not. It's a long-surviving, unusually solid friendship. The fact that we're married is incidental."

Shirley has also had a somewhat unconventional relationship with the lone product of that marriage, her 24-year-old daughter, Sachie. Sachie was raised mainly by her father in the Far East, though she and her mother visit each other regularly. "She doesn't like picking up a magazine and reading about herself," her mother says, "because she likes her anonymity. She is very intelligent, very well educated, very sensitive, but almost Alice-in-Wonderland in quality. She has definitely had her own life, her own circumstances and her own surroundings. So I want to respect her. She gave me such hell the last time I talked about her."

Frank Edwards / Fotos International

Though Shirley has chosen to remain married, she has dated other men regularly — including writer Pete Hamill for six years. She has recently been involved with a man whose name she prefers not to mention, and she admits that she believes in throwing herself wholeheartedly into relationships: "I haven't got a lot of time to just date. I enjoy men. I love men. It's better for me if I have someone who's close to me, who understands my sort of needs — and I love to understand his."

Because of her fast-paced lifestyle, it has been difficult for her at times to touch base with people she cares about — including young brother Warren. ("I haven't talked to him for about a year and a half.")

Despite her globe-trotting and her many successes, Shirley has managed to keep her life in order. But that's not saying it's been easy. "It's an essentially lonely business," she remarks, "with a lot of emotional wear and tear. Perfectly wonderful people are pitted against each other. But I don't seem to have gone through those terrible traumas I read about people going through. I think it may be because mine hasn't been a blinding, meteoric explosion of success. Rather it's been a gradual, long-distance runner's story.

"Also, I never got into being the Hollywood golden girl or having the Photoplay love affairs. I felt I would be losing my own self-center. I'm sort of on an even keel, and I feel I've been that way all the time...I think I've managed to survive because I've been on a constant self-search."

If anything has worried her about her career, it is that she would never develop into a really fine actress because she cared more about life beyond the camera than the life in front of it. Her feelings on this have shifted slightly of late, however. "I've begun to take the world of acting more seriously because I think that acting — the enactment of human life — is an important area in any civilization."

Her new attitude is influenced in part by the new treatment of women in films. For five years, Shirley appeared in no movies because, she says, there was such a dearth of good roles for women. The Turning Point in 1977 was her own personal turning point, "the first script I thought was fair to the woman's point of view."

Still, as much as she loves acting, it is but a means to an end for her: "I don't think there's anything more important than knowing yourself. That's at the bottom of everything I do." FW

The Power of The Christian Right

UPI

Rev. James Robison: "It's time for God's people to come out of the closet."

By Lisa Myers

"I'm sick and tired of hearing about all the radicals and perverts and liberals and leftists and Communists coming out of the closet!" declared the Rev. James Robison. "It's time for God's people to come out of the closet and the churches and change America."

With that, the spine-tingling Texas preacher summed up the philosophy of the new wave in politics — the conservative evangelicals. After years of dismissing the political process as too unseemly for true men of God, the Christian Right is mounting the political equivalent of a 20th-century religious crusade to purge the evil forces that they contend control the U.S. Government.

To these evangelicals, it is a war of Christianity vs. godless humanism; freedom vs. communism; the forces of light vs. the forces of darkness. Their principal immediate goal is to replace President Carter, "an amoral humanist," with Republican Presidential nominee Ronald Reagan. They have a "hit list" of Congressmen whose voting records they allege are not in accordance with the wishes of God.

The strategy of the conservative evangelicals is to use the air waves, the mails, the churches and even the pulpits to elect a government that is strongly pro-defense, anti-Communist, anti-abortion, anti-Equal Rights Amendment, pro-family, pro-school prayer and anti-homosexual.

The generals of the controversial movement are the "electronic preachers" — such as Robison and the Rev. Jerry Falwell — whose multimillion dollar broadcast empire makes up a communications network never before enjoyed by a political group. The foot soldiers are to come from the ranks of the nation's 30 million to 65 million evangelical ("born-again") Christians.

The movement has been denounced by politicians and ministers alike, including some who are born-again Christians. Senator Mark Hatfield (R.-Ore.), a born-again Baptist, says that the contention that one can't be a Christian and a liberal too is "a throwback to the Middle Ages."

"The business of trying to approach matters as a concerned Christian is one thing. It's quite another thing to purport to be the arbiter of positions in the name of Christ," agrees Senator John Danforth, (R.-Mo.), an ordained Episcopal minister. "That's a usurpation of Christianity for political purposes."

UPI

George L. Bailes, chairman of the Alabama Democratic Party, decries Moral Majority (MM), the biggest overtly political organization of the growing movement, as "the John Birch Society wrapped in the flag of the church." And Dr. Bob Jones Jr. of Bob Jones University, calls Falwell, whose Old-Time Gospel Hour is watched by an estimated 25 million Americans and who founded MM, "the most dangerous man in America."

Senator Jesse Helms (R.-N.C.), the Christian Right's political patron saint, contends that all this furor over the evangelicals is hypocritical. "Everybody says, 'Oh, gee whiz, you can't mix politics with religion.' Where were they when other religious leaders were hip-deep in politics during the anti-war and civil rights movements?"

During a political revival meeting in Dallas this past summer, designed to mobilize the Christian Right, the fiery Robison put it even more bluntly. "You read about our Savior. They say He didn't get involved in politics. Well, I ask you then: Who crucified Him?"

While the debate goes on, the determined evangelicals already have made their presence felt on the political scene. The recent upset of a moderate, Representative John Buchanan, a Baptist minister in the Alabama Republican primary, struck fear in the hearts of legions of already edgy politicians.

Using the church buses to round up their vote, the Moral Majority — aided by local ministers — delivered 15 times the number of voters expected to turn out in certain rural areas. Buchanan's alleged sins included voting for extension of the period for ratification of ERA and for implementing the Panama Canal treaties, as well as being too soft on defense and welfare.

Evangelicals

As a result, he was branded only 29-percent "moral" under a new Congressional voting index devised by Christian Voice, a leading evangelical political organization.

Another unexpectedly large turnout helped Representative Charles Grassley (who received a perfect score of 100 on the index) overwhelm his opponent in the race for Iowa's Republican senatorial nomination.

Although the Carter campaign is confident of maintaining its lock on born-again blacks, senior officials worry that defections among conservative white evangelicals could threaten the President's solid hold on his native South. "Only a fool would not be concerned about as many as 50 million people who are conscientious enough to attend church three times a week," says one Carter lieutenant.

Some contend that because of the lethargy of many voters, the highly motivated evangelicals could be the single-most influential force in the 1980 election, particularly in close Congressional races. But the key is potential. The fledgling movement has just begun to assemble the national grass-roots organization that its leaders say is critical to attaining political power. Despite some early successes, their efforts have been plagued more often than not by political amateurism that will take time and training to overcome.

Political experts, such as Democratic pollster Peter Hart, question whether religious values will become the principal determinant in the voting behavior of born-again voters, whose voting patterns to date have been only marginally more conservative than the general electorate.

The Dallas session, as well as smaller gatherings around the country, was designed to educate ministers and their flock on rudimentary political techniques, such as voter registration, education and get-out-the-vote efforts. The Republican Party, which views the evangelicals as a potentially vast new resource, has gone out of its way to lend a hand; G.O.P. leaders hope both to utilize and moderate the group.

Thus far, the alliance has been rocky. Moral Majority virtually took over the party apparatus in Alaska, ousting many outraged regulars. Similar efforts met with more limited success in some Southern states, but were turned back in other parts of the country, such as Indiana.

Leaders of the Christian Right profess to be strictly nonpartisan. They say their budding relationship with the G.O.P. is due to the fact that the party and its platform are far more in tune with their beliefs than are the Democrats. They point out that conservative Democrats are some of their friends.

Still, most of the incumbents they seek to defeat are moderate or liberal Democrats who are doomed to low "morality" ratings by the very nature of the voting index.

The index, which was greeted with derision on Capitol Hill, is based on a lawmaker's vote on 14 key "moral" issues. Not surprisingly, leading the list are such matters as school prayer, abortion and tax treatment of church schools. But most of the issues are more secular in nature — treatment of Taiwan, school busing, the Department of Education, balancing the budget, tax cuts.

The bedrock conservatives also are unforgiving of anyone less than devoutly pro-defense. "The way some of these men talk," complains Bailey Smith, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, "I think they're more excited about missiles than about the Messiah."

Falwell, who claims that the political positions of the Christian Right come straight from the Bible, says the Messiah and missiles go hand-in-hand. "Jesus was not a sissy."

"...I'm a lawyer myself — and I may be cutting my own throat — but I'm going to tell you the truth:"

Using a Lawyer may be Dangerous to your Wealth

My name is Charles Abbott. I'm a lawyer myself — and I may be cutting my own throat — but I'm going to tell you the truth:

The bulk of what most lawyers do could be done by someone who had never seen the inside of a law school — and usually is.

Lawyers secretaries do most of the work on wills, divorces (as well as annulments and legal separations), bankruptcies and creditor plans, simple contracts, real estate deals (buying, selling, and leasing), run-of-the-mill personal injury cases, adoptions, filing homesteads, insurance claims, minor criminal cases... and the list goes on and on.

And what do these Legal Secretaries do? They follow directions and fill in the blanks on forms. That's all. It's as simple as that.

That's why I think you may be ready to try being your own lawyer — and save a 'ton' of money.

But before you decide, answer these two questions: (1) Can you follow simple directions — no more complicated than assembling a Christmas toy or reading a cook book? (2) Do you have the few cents necessary to buy the correct forms at a Legal Stationery Store?

If your answer to both of those questions is "yes," you're ready. Well, almost ready. There are just two more things you should know:

(1) You don't necessarily have to have "the few cents necessary to buy the correct form at a Legal Stationery Store." Because I'll tell you how and where to get many of these forms free.

(2) You'll need my book. It's called "Do Your Own Legal Work." (And you can do your own legal work — no matter which State you live in!)

The book took more than a year to write. Based on what I've actually been earning in my law practice, that represents more than $100,000 worth of advice.

I mention that, not to brag, but so you'll know that I'm not some kid, fresh out of law school, and hungry for a few bucks. Along that line, you should know that I have a juris doctor degree in law, that I've been practicing for 13 years, and that I've written the book about the legal problems I work with, day in and day out.

Some other things you might want to know: I've published technical legal articles that explain the law — to lawyers. I've served as a research assistant to a Judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. In addition, my biography appears in the prestigious Marquis' "Who's Who in American Law."

What will it cost you to "hire" a lawyer with those qualifications? Ten dollars. Just about what I—and lots of other lawyers—would charge you for 10 minutes of legal advice.

Why so cheap? Because I hope to sell a million copies—or at least enough so I can take some time off and enjoy life with my family.

How to find and use forms ...page 7

How to draft your own will...page 36

How to handle your own criminal case...page 72

How to handle an adoption ...page 99

How to dissolve your marriage...page 113

How to solve debt problems — from consumer-credit counseling to bankruptcy... page 127

How to draft a contract ...page 209

How to handle real estate transactions...page 216

How you can use a Law Library—free—to avoid probate!...save taxes!...form a corporation!...and handle hundreds of other matters! ...page 25

Now I'm not saying that you're never going to need a lawyer. I am saying that if you do need to see one, you'll be ready and be able to handle a lot of the simple, clerical work yourself. You'll save his time.

Here's an example of how my book will cut down on those precious minutes: For an attorney to draw up a simple contract might cost you $400 if he had to start from scratch. It could cost you $30 if he had to take only a half hour to review the work you'd already done — and can do, using my book.

Lawyers get $60 for husband-wife wills; I'll show you how to do your own in less than an hour. Lawyers charge $450 for a simple divorce which may take less than two hours of their time. Lawyers get between $3,000 and $4,500 for obtaining a $9,000 personal injury settlement. I'll show you how to do as well, or better, by yourself. Lawyers get $150 for an adoption, but their secretaries do the work — and so can you.

You still may be a little skeptical, so let me share just a few comments from other people:

E.G., Los Angeles, California

Followed easy instructions and saved $300.00

B.P., Benton Harbor, Michigan

"It is well worth its price"

"I have purchased your book entitled "Do Your Own Legal Work," and found it quite interesting and enlightening. It is well worth its price."

M.C., Wampum, Pennsylvania

"Save our members thousands of dollars in legal fees"

"I have found your book to be most helpful. I have completed my trust and wills...with savings of over $200.00 in attorney's fees.

We have a movement pending through our credit union to save our members Thousands of Dollars in legal fees through the use of your book."

C.D.M., Nine Miles Falls, Washington

Your best guarantee that my book is everything I say it is, is this: My fellow lawyers will be watching me like a hawk. I wouldn't dare mis-step or mislead you. It could cost me my license.

What's more, I'm so sure you'll find my book immediately profitable — that I'll let you read it without paying for it!

Here's how you can read my book without any risk at all. Go ahead and order my book by mail. Keep it 30 days and read and check it out. Feel free to show it to a lawyer or anyone else you want. Then if you are not 100% satisfied, send it back and my publishing company will return your entire payment to you quietly and without question.

If you want to play it extra safe, you can post date your check or money order by 30 days. If you do that I personally guarantee that my publishing company will not deposit your money for at least that amount of time. Then, if you decide to return the book, the company will send back your uncashed check or money order with no questions asked.

There's no way you can lose. Your book will be sent promptly by return mail. If you have any questions, you can telephone (801) 224-6508. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the Citizens Law Library. It is not a good idea to mail cash.

Lose Weight

The lovely lady on your left has written what could be the last diet book you'll ever have to buy.

You know that extra pounds are unattractive—and unhealthy. Millions of us suffer the constant struggle to shed weight.

If you are overweight, you have probably tried some of those diets that promise you quick weight loss. You may have bought many diet books too. They fail: they must fail.

TEMPORARY SUCCESS

If your story is typical, you tried some and they seemed to work. That is, they worked for a little while. You dropped some pounds—but then you put them back on again.

WE NOW HAVE INSIGHTS INTO WHY MOST DIETS FAIL FOR MOST PEOPLE.

THE DISCOVERY

There are different reasons for different people. Some are psychological. Some are physiological. Once you establish the principle that it can be a pleasure to take weight off and that you can enjoy keeping it off, your weight problems will be solved. Not just for this week—or for next month—but for as long as you live!

NO MORE PUNISHMENT

Let's talk truth. Losing weight is never easy. You struggle. You deprive yourself. You punish yourself. The heartbreak is what happens afterwards.

A few weeks or a few months later, you've not only put back the pounds—you may even have added a few more.

FAD DIETS

For example, a current fad is something called The Scarsdale Diet. It promises quick weight loss in fourteen days. It also warns against continuing for more than fourteen days. (And with good reason: some cardiologists say this is a dangerous diet.)

We questioned one dozen men and women who had "done" the Scarsdale diet. Without exception all have regained the weight they lost. Four now weigh more than before they started!

THE REALITY

Fewer than five percent of the people who lose weight are able to keep it off for as long as one year.

Discouraging?

Stop being discouraged.

It is possible to lose weight—and sensibly. Without fasting, starving, pills or potions. And it is possible to keep it off.

Forget the fad diets and the crash diets. They are not the way to success. The results they give you are, at best, temporary.

CAROLE LIVINGSTON

Carole Livingston is a beautiful veteran of the wars against overweight. You may have seen her on television, for hers is a genuine success story. She has written the ultimate book about the extra-pounds problem.

What does she know?

Well, for one thing, she knows that twelve years ago she lost 45 pounds—and for twelve years she has kept them off.

That in itself sets her apart from virtually all of those so-called experts who write those best seller diet books.

NOT FOR FIRST TIMERS

Her book is called I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN. We could have titled it "Everything You'll Ever Have To Know About How To Lose Weight And Keep It Off."

We prefer I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN.

Listen! This is a most unusual book—but it isn't for first time dieters. If you're a "first-timer" you probably believe that you'll find something magic and easy. In which case, I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN isn't for you.

Rather, it's for the person who has tried everything and often succeeded—at least a little—if only temporarily. If that's your story, this is your lucky day.

In I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN you will find all the direction you need to change your own life. Once you understand and embrace Carole Livingston's principles, you too will find it real fun to discard extra pounds and a true pleasure to keep them off.

The fact is that unlike diets that deprive you and seem to be punishment, this sure-thing method lets you enjoy all of your favorite foods.

SOUND APPROACH

Does she still love to eat? You can bet a bundle on it! She's a member of several gourmet societies. Recently, she was the hostess at two dinners for 114 people at New York's elegant Palace restaurant. Guests paid $120 for a four-hour feast, sponsored by the famed gourmet society, Confrerie de la Chaine des Rotisseurs.

Yes, Carole Livingston loves food. And, as she explains in I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN, she deprives herself of nothing.

She knows all the secrets of getting thin and staying thin. And now she shares them with you.

STILL PESSIMISTIC?

If you have pounds that you wish you could lose, we urge you to read this book. It is for the person who needs to lose only five pounds as well as the person who needs to lose fifty.

I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN will act as your guide and inspiration. You can lose weight the only sound way: slowly and steadily, while all the time eating foods you never thought were on any diet. AND YOU WILL ENJOY DOING IT!

WHAT THEY SAY

Publishers Weekly, the influential magazine of the book publishing industry, and usually a severe critic, found I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN a pleasure to read. They wrote: "Readers . . . will find Livingston's guide to getting and staying thin ingratiating. Not only has she shed long-standing pounds, she has retained her svelte figure . . . Her candid approach, supportive strategies and 'canny psychological advice make this upbeat book effective."

"Effective!" They said it: we didn't. Others are saying it too. For, although I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN was published only weeks ago, readers are already writing to tell us how effective it is for them.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

The next step is up to you. Some 6,000 book shops all over America have copies of I'LL NEVER BE FAT AGAIN. Go to any bookshop and get your personal copy today.

If there isn't a bookseller convenient to you, you may order your copy directly from the publisher by using the convenient coupon below.

GUARANTEED WEIGHT LOSS

Do we keep our promises? We sure do. If you buy your copy directly from the publisher, read it and apply its wisdom. Then, if after thirty days you don't find this the very best and most effective dieting approach you've ever known—send the book back for a full return of your purchase price.

Can anything be more fair? You risk nothing and you have nothing to lose—except those excess pounds.

If you'd like, Carole will autograph your copy to you personally.

Do yourself a favor and get this book today. At your nearest bookseller's or use the handy coupon below to bring a copy to your door.

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Can You Really Prevent a Murder?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Homicide is one type of crime that is not preventable because a person can't be arrested for murder until after he's committed it.

2. Many murders wouldn't happen if the victim didn't help.

3. The murderer who cold-bloodedly premeditates a murder is more of a threat to society than the individual who commits a crime impulsively.

4. If you become a mortality statistic before your 40th birthday, the odds are that violence will be the cause.

5. Professional criminals look at life differently from the rest of us.

ANSWERS

1. False. A 10-year, wide-scale University of California study indicates that homicide is a preventable public-health problem and that one of the myths surrounding homicide is that it is an uncontrollable event. It is concluded from the findings that "the course of nearly all homicides follows a trajectory — or pattern — beginning with the child who is neither loved nor wanted and that as such a disadvantaged child develops, frustration builds, sometimes exploding in a violent act against what is believed to be a barrier." It is further indicated by the study that impoverished home conditions, lack of positive reinforcement, unemployment and illiteracy, combined with alcoholism or drug addiction, increase stress and the risk of becoming an assailant — and that children exposed to the regularity of violence at an early and impressionable age come to feel that killing is an acceptable way of resolving any conflict.

2. True. The University of California study investigated murder victims as well as their assailants, and it was found that "although some victims may unintentionally contribute to their violent deaths, others participate more directly." Such victims, it is pointed out, precipitate their own demise by taking unnecessary risks, such as engaging in quarrels with agitated people, hitchhiking and walking alone at night in deserted areas.

3. False. Emory University studies of impulsive and premeditated homicides and parole behavior show that society has much more to fear from the impulsive murderer — who is more likely to violate parole by committing another violent crime than is the premeditated murderer. Unlike the impulsive murderer whose lack of self-control results in violence, the premeditator does not act on impulse but thinks things out coolly and carefully before he acts, and most of the time decides against violent behavior since he is better able to fully appreciate the potential consequences of the act and the extreme jeopardy in which it would place him.

4. True. Extensive studies and examination of national mortality data, conducted by investigators from the University of Illinois and the Institute for Psychosomatic and Psychiatric Research, Michael Reese Medical Center and the Harvard University School of Public Health, show that "in the United States violent deaths (homicides, suicides and accidents) are the leading cause of death in people aged 1 to 39, and the third cause of death for people of all ages." The investigators conclude from an analysis of their findings that homicides, suicides and accidental deaths are not unrelated and that all may represent destructive tendencies in part (evidence indicates that many homicides are victim-precipitated and represent suicide). It also is pointed out that "accidental" deaths may be due to accident-proneness and risk-taking that reflect depression and suicidal tendencies.

5. True. In a University of Illinois study of a specimen group of hardened criminals — prisoners, chiefly armed robbers with long sentences — were interviewed individually and given a series of intelligence and personality tests. Findings are reported thusly: The most striking feature was the conditions under which most had been reared. Rejection by parents from birth and a background of crime, vice and poverty were commonplace. Intelligence test scores showed a high scatter, with a large number of very high as well as very low scores. In personality, they were mainly anxious extroverts. Most justified their behavior by claiming they only stole from large concerns, not from people. One prisoner (I.Q. 178) said, "My philosophy of life's simple. What do you want? Money. Where do you get it? From a bank. How do you get it? With a gun." When it was pointed out that he had spent 20 out of 28 years of adult life in prison, he said, "Yeah, but what about the eight out of 28 with a blond in Miami?" Conclusion of the investigators: "Sadly, the overriding impression was that it was hopeless to try to reform the hardened criminal. All their attitudes, humor, odd remarks, insinuations and casual conversation carried the implication that they wanted this way of life and were determined to go on with it."

Popcorn Popularity Soars

By Marilyn Hansen

One of America's natural fun foods, popcorn is stepping out smartly as an inexpensive, low-calorie snack alternative. Do you know that 520,000,000 pounds of unpopped popcorn were sold last year? That very impressive amount means 38 quarts of popped corn per capita, that is for every man, woman and child in America. Calorie-wise, one cup of plain, unbuttered popcorn yields 25 to 55 calories, and one cup lightly buttered popcorn yields 40 to 65 calories. Enjoy popcorn plain or buttered, or try one of our tempting newfangled recipes.

HALLOWEEN SUGAR 'N' MOLASSES POPCORN

- 1½ cups sugar
- ¾ cup light molasses
- ½ cup water
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2½ qts. warm popped corn
- Licorice strings
- Wooden skewers

1. Combine sugar, molasses, water and salt in a heavy saucepan. Place over medium heat and cook, stirring until sugar dissolves.

2. Wash sugar from sides of pan with a wet brush. Cook to 270°F. (soft crack stage on candy thermometer).

3. Remove from heat; stir in butter. Pour glaze over popcorn and mix well. Shape as directed below or shape with buttered ice-cream scoop into balls.

Makes 10 balls

Witch's Hat: Pack one recipe of mixture into a large buttered funnel or similarly slanted bowl. Immediately turn out of mold and finish shaping into a pointed cone with your hands. Cool. To assemble hat, place popcorn cone on a 12-inch black cardboard circle or a 12-inch plate. Decorate brim of hat with candy corn and licorice string tie.

Makes 1 hat

Broomsticks: Make one recipe. Measure 1 cup of mixture to shape into each broom head. Insert wooden skewer for handle. Wrap with a licorice string. Licorice strings may also be cut into 2½-inch lengths and used for broom straws.

Makes approximately 9 brooms

MABEL'S CARAMEL CORN

- 2 cups packed light brown sugar
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- ½ lb. butter or margarine
- ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 6 qts. freshly popped popcorn

1. In 2½-quart saucepan, combine brown sugar, corn syrup, butter, cream of tartar and salt.

2. Heat to boiling, stirring, over medium-high heat. Stirring constantly, boil rapidly to hard-ball stage, 260°F. (about 5 minutes).

3. Remove from heat. Stir in baking soda quickly but thoroughly and pour at once over popcorn in large roasting or baking pan. Stir gently until all kernels are coated.

4. Bake in preheated 200°F. oven for 1 hour, stirring 2 or 3 times during baking.

5. Turn out at once on waxed paper; spread apart and allow to cool completely. Break apart and store in tightly covered container.

Makes 6 quarts

SLIMMER'S POPCORN TREAT

- 5 qts. freshly popped corn
- ¼ cup soft low-calorie margarine
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
- ¼ teaspoon onion salt
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder

1. Keep popped corn warm or heat in a 250°F. oven if it has been popped earlier. Blend together margarine, cheese and seasonings. Pour off any water that is worked out of margarine.

2. Toss margarine-butter mixture with popped corn. About 75 calories per cup.

Makes 5 quarts

MAMA MIA POPCORN

- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter or margarine, slightly softened
- 1 pkg. (0.6 oz.) Italian salad dressing mix
- Hot, popped popcorn
- Salt

1. Mix together softened butter and salad dressing mix. Spoon amount of seasoned butter desired over popcorn (freshly popped or heated in a 300°F. oven). Salt to taste.

2. Store remaining seasoned butter, covered, in refrigerator. Remove from refrigerator a short time before popping next batch of popcorn.

SEASONED 'N' SPICED POPCORN

- 3 qts. unsalted popped popcorn
- ½ cup melted butter
- 3 tablespoons Spice Shelf Potpourri (recipe follows)

1. Heat popcorn in a 250°F. oven if it has been popped earlier. Pour butter over popcorn, tossing to mix.

2. Sprinkle with Spice Shelf Potpourri and toss until well mixed.

Makes 3 quarts

Spice Shelf Potpourri: Combine 6 tablespoons salt, 2 teaspoons paprika, 1 teaspoon dry mustard and ½ teaspoon each of garlic salt, celery salt, thyme, marjoram, curry powder and dill weed; mix well or blend in electric blender. Store in a covered jar.

Makes ½ cup

Observations

Shooting from the lip. Bang-bang!—it's vote-hunting time again...and watch out for the cheap shots! For some politicians, it's still open season on oil companies, but all these vote-hungry politicos seem to blast is the truth. Maybe, as writer G. K. Chesterton noted, "half a truth is better than no politics." But so you get the truth—not consequences—when oil becomes a political issue, here's our 1980 guide to a few of those cheap shots.

"Devil theory." If something's wrong, it must be the oil industry's fault somehow, right? Like last year's gasoline shortage? Wrong. Blame the shutdown in Iran, and also—significantly—our own government's attempt to allocate supplies artificially. We'd been saying that all along, but finally the Departments of Energy and Justice wound up a year's investigation by reaching the same conclusions. But that didn't stop some politicians from trying to make scapegoats of oil companies.

"Big-Business-Bad," cry some politicians. "Bah," we have to say, because it takes big companies' ability to mobilize thousands of specialists and bundles of money to produce energy. Like over $1 billion for a refinery, as much as $2 billion for a North Sea producing platform. And future synfuels plants will cost many billions of dollars.

"Lock up the forest." To protect wildlife, must your car or home oil burner join the endangered species list? They shouldn't, of course, despite vote seekers who aim for easy political trophies on environmental issues. Forget their "solution" of banning or delaying oil and gas exploration on federal lands; energy and the environment can coexist. You'll find fish thriving around oil platforms, and ducks paddling in man-made ponds at an Illinois refinery. Mobil's West Ranch oil field in Texas is home to deer, cranes, pelicans, cattle, and geese.

"Keep 'em quiet." How about those campaigners who would muzzle free speech—for business voices—while they themselves have free rein to blast oil companies? Sounds like they know more than the Supreme Court...which held not long ago that the First Amendment right to free speech isn't lost "simply because its source is a corporation." And why, if the oil industry is so "powerful," was it the target of a punitive "windfall profits" tax that will discourage future production?

Politricks as usual? Or is a treat in store this season? It's up to you to sort out these cheap shots and see the difference between the politicians just interested in winning, and statesmen and stateswomen interested in the next generation. And for America's future, what we need is more energy.

It's a fact: Voter turnout has been declining for 20 years, to 54 percent of those eligible in presidential elections and only 35 percent in congressional elections. You don't count if you don't vote.

Couples Who Choose To Remain Childless

By Karen Lindsey

"A childless couple." Fifteen years ago, these words conjured up the image of an unhappy pair, doomed by some physical flaw to an unfulfilling existence. Children were expected from a marriage. And the couple who decided not to become parents were perceived as selfish and immature.

Doris Ettlinger

Today, however, attitudes are changing. As more and more women enter the work force in pursuit of full-time careers, many couples are postponing their decision about children. And with the improvement of birth control and sterilization techniques, the discussion is shifting from "when" and "how many" to "if."

Although the majority of couples who marry will eventually have children, there are indications that more and more couples are choosing to remain childless. Ann Ulmshneider, program director of the Washington, D.C., based National Alliance for Optional Parenthood (NAOP), cites Census Bureau statistics reporting that in 1967 only one percent of wives between the ages of 18 and 24 expected not to have children. By 1977, the figure had risen to 5 percent, and 11 percent of all women between the ages of 18 and 34 planned to remain childless.

Numerous factors influence a couple's decision not to have a family. For one thing, traditional expectations in regard to "family" have changed. In fact, many couples who have had children are voicing regret about their decision. In January 1976, a now-famous Ann Landers column asked readers whether they would have children if they had the choice to make over again. Out of 10,000 respondents, 70 percent answered no.

Some of their disillusionment may arise from the shattered assumption that adult offspring will provide their aging parents with companionship and support.

NAOP cites a survey by Dr. E. James Lieberman, associate clinical professor of psychiatry at George Washington University School of Medicine, indicating that less than 25 percent of parents have weekly contact with their grown children. In 1976 the Census Bureau found that only 4 percent of men and 13 percent of women over 65 lived with relatives.

Nevertheless, ours is still a child-centered society, and couples who decide not to become parents face their own set of pressures and difficulties. What leads a couple to make the decision to remain childless? For the Tudors, a Miami couple in their mid-40's, the decision was arrived at gradually. "We got married relatively late in life," says Beverly. "I was 27 and he was 30, and it was the first marriage for both of us. We were old enough to know that we couldn't afford to have children right away. So we put if off until we could afford it, and by the time we could, we realized that we liked the way we lived." In 1971 Ralph had a vasectomy.

Cindi and Jerome Anderson made the decision before they married. "I always knew I didn't want children," says Jerome. "Neither of us has a 'career,' in the money-making sense of the word. I work in a bookstore and Cindi's a secretary — but both of us have strong interests that we put our time into." Cindi adds, "I really prize my privacy. With a child you're bombarded with emotion all the time."

For Rob and Rita Deacon, the decision has been less clear-cut. They don't want to have their own biological children, and Rita was sterilized several years ago, but they are not committed to permanent childlessness. "We might decide to adopt one day — not an infant, but a child of 5 or 6," says Rob. Adds Rita: "I want to devote the next several years to my studies — there's no room for a child in that." She and Rob also cite financial reasons for their nonparenthood. "At this point we can barely afford to feed ourselves, let alone a child," she explains.

Obviously the decision whether to have children or not is a difficult one, and many couples make their choice the way the Tudors did — by postponing the decision until they are set in their lifestyle or until their biological time clocks make it for them. In a 1972 study of 52 childless wives, Canadian sociologist Jean Veevers found that two-thirds had permanently "postponed" childbearing.

Childless Couples

And in another study of 156 childless couples, Veevers found that nonparents go through a number of stages in making the decision to remain childless. Initially, pregnancy is postponed for a specific period of time — until a certain career goal is reached, for instance. Then more ambiguous deadlines such as "when we're ready" are substituted. Finally, as the couple realize that parenthood is not in their life plan, they come to terms with the final and most difficult step — announcing their decision to others.

It is not easy to convince others that remaining childless is the right decision. Often, couples find that the pressure to reconsider comes from parents who want grandchildren or who see their children's desire to remain childless as reflections on their own ability as parents. Ralph's parents, now dead, were never told of their son's decision. His mother assumed that Beverly was unable to conceive, and the couple didn't correct her. Beverly's parents know and are unhappy about her decision. "I was an only child," says Beverly, "so it's been quite a disappointment to them. To this day, they haven't accepted it — they still think we'll regret it."

Often, the pressure to become parents stems from society's expectation that children are the natural products of marriage and that not having them is a sign of immaturity and a marriage in trouble. But recent research indicates that childless couples are no less happy with their lives than parents. One survey by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research found that more than 60 percent of the parents questioned included such factors as family unity, love and closeness among the advantages of having children and that almost as many nonparents cited those same reasons as factors in their decision to remain childless.

Some couples chose to remain childless because they feel ill at ease around children, but many nonparents want children to be part of their lives, and find satisfactory means of making contact with them. One elderly woman, who decided in 1927 that she would not have children, today does volunteer work for the Boy Scouts. A middle-aged lawyer and his wife, who were the Philadelphia NAOP's "Nonparents of the Year" in 1976, spend many of their holidays with children they have helped place for adoption. As the wife told a reporter, "It doesn't stop you from liking children because you don't have them under your roof."

For those couples who do decide to remain childless, the decision is made much easier by the increased simplicity and safety of birth-control methods and voluntary sterilization. About 40 percent of married couples of childbearing age use sterilization as a birth-control method within five years after the birth of their last child, reports Family Planning Perspectives magazine, and requests for sterilization from couples who have decided not to have children are on the rise.

And while vasectomies have long been the most popular means of sterilization, Cookie Moss, patient accounts manager at Boston's Charles Circle Clinic, has seen a dramatic increase in the number of childless women choosing to be sterilized. "Women are saying, 'Look, I don't want children and I don't feel guilty about it,'" she reports. "The laparoscopy [a simple sterilization procedure that can be performed on women on an outpatient basis] has made a difference."

Ultimately, the decision about whether or not to have children is a very personal one. And as childlessness becomes more common and more accepted, increasing numbers of couples will ask themselves seriously whether they really do want children, instead of accepting parenthood as the necessary product of marriage. If the question is honestly asked and honestly answered, we may see more nonparents comfortably pursuing their own lives without being burdened by unnecessary guilt. FW

New Hope for Those With Spinal Injuries

By Sarah Hardesty

After his car smashed headlong into a telephone pole, John Davis, 22, was rushed to the hospital. Having seriously injured his spine, John feared he would never walk again. Today, only six months later, he is walking.

Spinal injuries occur frequently and can be the most difficult to heal. It is estimated that more than 200,000 people in the U.S., of which two-thirds are under 30 years of age, have damaged spinal cords — and 10,000 new injuries occur each year. Now, however, significant advances in research and actual treatment may offer some new hope for the spinally injured.

The spinal region is one of the most complex in the body. The "spine" of bones surrounds the "spinal cord" — a bundle of millions of nerve cells and fibers which intricately connect the brain with muscles and internal organs. When cut or severely damaged, these nerves do not grow back, and paralysis automatically results. "It's probably the single-most difficult problem in all of biology," explains Dr. Murray Goldstein, deputy director of the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke (NINCDS), which has launched the largest spinal cord injury research effort in the world.

The most common spinal injuries occur at the base of the neck and in the lower back below the rib cage. Fractured bones in the spine can often be treated with braces and casts — and usually no long-term damage results. But if the spine is stretched in an accident so that the bones pull apart from each other, the spine can press against the cord, causing pain and eventually creating deformity, such as a hump.

In the worst accidents of this type, the upper spine traps and pulls the cord forward, so that the bones of the lower spine dig into the cord. If the cord is cut or severely crushed, the victim will have no feeling below the injury. A paraplegic is someone whose spine has been injured from the level of the chest down and is paralyzed in both legs and the lower part of the body. A quadriplegic has been injured in the neck area of the spine and is paralyzed from the neck down in both arms and legs.

Eugene Cook / Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center

Even when only badly bruised, the spinal cord can begin to self-destruct within as little as four hours. Thus, recent studies — still inconclusive — are evaluating whether high doses of hormones, called steroids, and other chemical agents, as well as cooling the cord, can arrest this deterioration.

If the cord is injured but still intact and functioning, other studies suggest that spinal cord nerves heal fastest in a rigid, motionless environment, and the injured part of the spine should be made as straight and rigid as possible. The latest technique uses hooks and rods, developed by Dr. Paul Harrington, at Baylor College of Medicine, which basically work like a jack, pulling the spine into approximate alignment.

Dr. Charles Edwards, head of orthopedics at the University of Maryland Hospital, has recently further advanced this process by creating special polyethylene sleeves of different sizes which fit over the rods and make it possible to apply pressure over the injured area so that almost perfect spinal alignment is possible. The damaged bones are later fused with bones from the pelvis.

Results to date have been quite encouraging, Dr. Edwards says. "In three months to a year, some can even walk without a cane."

There is no chance today for recovery, though, if the cord is destroyed at any point. Doctors cannot repair or replace severely damaged nerves. But, according to a study by the NINCDS, the traditional belief that the spinal cord could never regrow is no longer certain. Regrowth has occurred in lower animals, and the nerve cells of a cut spinal cord do produce new sprouts — yet, strangely, these sprouts stop growing. Extensive research into these areas is going on in medical centers throughout the country.

If someone you know is in an accident and has the slightest chance of a spinal injury, doctors advise that you treat that person as if his cord is damaged. The victim should be handled extremely gently, and a hard board should be slipped under him before moving him. Also, he should remain flat, and his head and neck should be held steady while moving.

The treatment of the spinally injured is rapidly evolving. "What has been a pretty dismal field has become very exciting," Dr. Edwards comments. "Some patients with major injuries are referred to me thinking nothing can be done. It's wonderful when you see one of them walk back in to you half a year later." FW

A Portrait in Steel: Pittsburgh's Rocky Bleier

Wide World

By Mark Goodman

On August 20, 1969, a company of the 196th Light Infantry Brigade set out among the sweltering palms of Vietnam, in the Diep Douc Valley, to pick up the dead from Bravo Company. Among the troops on that mission was Specialist Four Rocky Bleier, of Appleton, Wis., Notre Dame and the Pittsburgh Steelers. Just a year before, Bleier had been battling to win a job with the N.F.L. Steelers — no mean task for a 16th-round draft choice. But then came another sort of draft, and with it, a different type of battle.

Suddenly the company was raked by automatic weapons fire. Bleier and his buddies dived off a dike and into a rice paddy. He flung off his pack and reached for his launcher and a couple of grenades. As he rose to fire he heard someone shout, "Hey, Rock." Then he felt a dull thud in his thigh. Blood began to pour from holes in front and in back of his leg as he waited for the doctor to crawl to him.

"You think you'll be able to walk?" the medic asked.

"I don't know," was Rocky's earnest reply. "I've never been shot before."

Then he was hit once more. Rocky lay there for several hours while the North Vietnamese regrouped. As he lay in the bushes alongside his company commander and another soldier, a "potato masher" grenade went off near him, hitting his captain between the knees and catching Bleier in the right foot.

The firefight blazed on, and it was hours before reinforcements arrived. Two four-man teams were dispatched to carry Bleier and the captain to a helicopter, waiting some two miles away. The trip was a sweaty, searing nightmare. At one point, a single soldier carried Rocky slung over his shoulder, fireman style, stumbling along with Bleier into the gathering darkness, until he collapsed 500 meters from the hill. Then another group of guys came along and hauled Bleier over the final lap of this torturous course. At midnight he was flown out to Danang.

That's where Rocky Bleier's odyssey — and his real fight — began. He was moved through hospitals in the Philippines and Tokyo to Fort Riley, Kan. The doctors gave him the classic "you-will-live-but-you-will-never-play-the-violin-again" speech. Walk; yes. But run, cut, swivel; no way. At first, Rocky was primarily concerned with his own survival. He had several operations for scar tissue and bone spurs but was left with no feeling in three of his toes.

Throughout the ordeal he continued to receive postcards from Steelers' owner Art Rooney. Bleier decided to return to the Steeler camp in 1970, wounds or no wounds. But the first time he got up to run, he fell down after a quarter mile and began to cry. Then he got up and ran some more. He lifted weights. He underwent additional surgery. And one year after he was shot up in a Vietnam rice paddy, he was back in the Steeler training camp.

The rest, four Super Bowl rings later, is part of football folklore. Bleier rebuilt his speed to become a valuable man on the Steeler special teams, where he excelled in running back kickoffs and punts. By 1973, he was being used as a blocking back in short-yardage situations, mopping up linebackers for fullback Franco Harris. By the end of 1974, the year of the Steelers' first conference championship in the team's 40-year history, Bleier had established himself as a quality running back and a handy receiver coming out of the backfield on swing passes from quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

When the Steelers won the first of four Super Bowls in January 1975, Rocky Bleier was no longer a bona fide Silver Star winner who happened to play pro football; he was a bona fide pro football player who happened to have won a Silver Star.

Rocky Bleier

UPI

This tale has been spelled out in Bleier's book, Fighting Back, and told again in ABC-TV's two-hour movie of the same name, starring Robert (Vega$) Urich, a former football player himself, as Rocky, Bonnie Bedelia as his wife, Aleta, and Art Carney as Art Rooney.

"People kept asking me what it was like to see my life reenacted before my eyes," relates Rocky. "They thought it really must have hit home, brought back memories. In all honesty, it didn't at all. I was more taken up with all of the behind-the-scenes stuff. I asked my wife, 'Is there something wrong with me that this doesn't cause any emotional upheaval?" She said, 'No, you're just a normal, healthy person.'"

Now, at 34, Rocky Bleier is one of the most respected elder statesmen on the Steelers and, indeed, in all of pro football. He's announced, though, that this will be his last year in pro football. He's no longer a starter but has dealt with his diminished status with the same attitude he showed in Vietnam and throughout his long rehabilitation program.

"I never got involved philosophically or politically in the Vietnam situation," he once said. "I think that made it easier for me. I wasn't really a hawk or a dove. I was just there, I knew I couldn't do anything about it, so I accepted it." Now, he says of his role as a Steeler reserve, "I look at it in realistic terms. I'm just here to do whatever I can do to help. I give them security and back-up experience."

It might be said, melodramatically, that he also provides his own special ration of inspiration — as if the Steelers, arguably the best team in the history of the game, needed it. Nothing short of the 101st Airborne — or perhaps the Houston Oilers and San Diego Chargers — seems likely to halt the Steeler march to another Super Bowl, and Rocky admits he would dearly love to have that fifth ring. ("One for the thumb!" is Pittsburgh's 1980 battle cry.)

Rocky and wife Aleta will continue to live in Pittsburgh after the football wars are done. They have two children (Samantha, 6, and Adri James, 3) and have put down roots in the city that has come to love him. Rocky is a partner in a municipal securities firm, part owner of a California winery and is also a favorite on the collegiate and corporate lecture circuit. He has no desire whatsoever to coach; he simply wanted to play. "I could have quit and justified it to myself," he says, "but I guess I was too stubborn."

More than stubborn. After all, no other man in history has played pro football while drawing 40-percent disability pay from the U.S. Army. FW

Royal Roman Country
Estate Bell

Give your home or patio a touch of luxury out of the past—an authentic replica of the Roman Country Estate Bell that might have once graced the royal summer palace of the mighty Caesar himself!

Since you may not have as large a household staff as Caesar, we've had the entire bell carefully antiqued so that it will never need polishing. Its beautiful luster will last year after year, throughout the four seasons, and its musical refrain will delight your guests.

Of course, with the price of metals and craftsmanship skyrocketing, you could expect to pay an emperor's ransom for a collector's treasure like this, complete with its own chain pull! 20" long. Act now, you can still obtain this decorator's gem for just $19.95—because our supply comes directly from the source.

SUBSCRIPTIONS CUT TO $2.97!

Mind-Boggling Announcement

Publisher slashes price to celebrate Tenth Anniversary

BY R. GINZBURG

Moneysworth, the monthly magazine, has stunned the publishing world by announcing a price for one-year subscriptions of just $2.97. This is as little as some magazines charge for merely a single issue.

"We're doing this to celebrate our Tenth Anniversary," a spokesman said, "and to solidify Moneysworth's position as America's Number One Biggest Publishing Bargain. Since it was launched in 1970, Moneysworth has consistently lowered subscription rates while other periodicals raised theirs. We began by charging $10 a year and now offer Tenth Anniversary Special Subscriptions for THE UNREAL PRICE OF ONLY $2.97!"

Moneysworth, which tells how to get the most for your money and the most out of life, is read by an estimated 5,000,000 people. Its chief competitors are Consumer Reports, which sells for $12 a year, and Money magazine, for $14.95.

HOW TO ORDER

Readers who wish to take advantage of this unparalleled offer should send their name and address with $2.97 to: Tenth Anniversary Special Subscriptions, Moneysworth, 251 W. 57th Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

As you see, Moneysworth is an easy-to-follow instruction manual for building a better life. Each day, Moneysworth's readers inundate it with ecstatic testimonials such as the following:

- "You're not going to believe this, but I have parlayed $146 into $90,000, due to your informative article on how to break into real estate. How can I ever express my gratitude enough?"—H.T. Pinrose; Montgomery, Iowa.
- "Your advice on Social Security resulted in a $3,135 lump-sum cash payment to my wife and $171 monthly pension. The best investment I ever made was my subscription to Moneysworth."—Dr. Herman Hortop; La Grange, Ill.
- "Your tip on flying to Europe via the Middle East saved me $450. You've made me a subscriber for life."—Charles B. Fager, M.D.; Harrisburg, Pa.
- "Your article on high interest paid by foreign banks has enabled me to retire in style. I can't thank you enough."—Eric Svenson; Fallbrook, Cal.
- "Your news reports on investments have brought me, in just months, $12,996 profit, tripling my money. I assure you I shall remain a Moneysworth subscriber for the rest of my life."—Lawrence E. Gray; Ypsilanti, Mich.
- "Your article 'Inaccurate Billing by the Phone Company' led me to discover four years of overcharges. It resulted in a $1,583 refund!"—Alexander DiRienzo; Bristol, Pa.
- "Moneysworth's product ratings sure stretch the dollar. I bought the 35mm camera you recommended, saving 30%."—R. Goodrich; Tucson, Ariz.
- "Your article 'How to Avoid Paying an Exorbitant Doctor Bill' saved me $65. Here is my subscription extension."—Carl Wagner; Yorktown Heights, N.Y.
- "Thanks to your article 'How to Buy a New Car for $125 over DEALER's Cost,' I just bought a Chevy at a saving that I conservatively estimate at $350."—Rudy L. Grange; Anita, Iowa.
- "Moneysworth is aptly named. To paraphrase Churchill, never have so many paid so little for so much."—Dave Alpern; Pittsburgh, Pa.

Exquisite Silverplated

COLLECTORS SPOON 10¢

New! AMERICAN STATES SERIES

This beautifully crafted collectors spoon honors our nation's capital—The District of Columbia. It is one of the 51 fascinating spoons that make up the Heritage Collection of American States. At the top of the handle is a rendition of the official seal encased in an attractive cartouche design. Below that, the Stars and Stripes and the official flag of the District of Columbia. Then the year of admission, the official flower and the District's name. Finally, pictured in the bowl is a scene of the capital building where Congress meets to conduct the nation's affairs.

The spoon is a masterpiece of design and craftsmanship. About 4½" long, it is plated with .999 pure silver and hand polished to bring out each gleaming highlight of the engraver's art.

We want to send you this elegant collectors spoon for only 10¢, hoping you'll want to collect the others, at surprisingly low cost, through our "three-at-a-time" spoon program. So send for your spoon today. Limit, one per household. adults only.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Stars In Disguise

If children who aspire to be physicians play doctor, what do Hollywood's future stars pretend to be when kids?

In honor of Halloween, a few grown-up personalities related their childish costume choices. Brooke Shields, the nymphal actress/model, used to dress as Charlie Chaplin, according to her mother, Terri. Part of the reason: Chaplin was the godfather of Brooke's father, Jack. Alice Cooper, demonical rock star, used to weave his way up the street as a spider, while Lou Ferrigno was always into monsters, dressing as Frankenstein or a werewolf. And who'd be nuts enough to deny candy to the Incredible Hulk. House of Wax landlord Vincent Price said that he was more into mischief as a youth but reports, "When I was an adult, all the local kids would present their costumes to me for approval, since they fancied me the authority on macabre."

Rich Little, the man of 1,000 voices, rewarded those who gave him treats with his budding impressions, but Gary (Diff'rent Strokes) Coleman, exhausted after work, stays home and gives out the candy, according to his mom. And Margaret (Wicked Witch of the West) Hamilton preferred ghosts as a girl, but when Halloweeners follow the yellow brick road to her house these days, she still enjoys standing behind the door and delivering a maniacal laugh — "just to give 'em a little scare."

Turning On The Power

Do nice gals finish last? Often, says Dr. Jerald Jellison, whose two-day, $150 seminar, "Power Management," has been taken by more than 600 people so far, mostly women.

Jellison, behavioral psychologist at U.S.C. and author of I'm Sorry I Didn't Mean To and Other Lies We

Love to Tell, observes that trying to reach the top by getting people to like you may not work. "Liking is the method used by the powerless," he says. "If you don't control any other resources, you have to use liking."

He also debunks the myth that "women fear success." "So often," he says, "women are punished for doing well on the job. Their husbands and children complain of neglect, and their co-workers, both male and female, show resentment. So, there is actually a reward for lower performance."

Giving Fire The Cold Shoulder

Mark Cummins, a 35-year-researcher for Texas A&M University's Texas Forest Service, has come up with the hottest innovation in fire fighting in years — a chemical foam that's called the Texas Blizzard because, when squirted, it turns the ground absolutely white.

Cummins's patented process takes the soapy skim produced at paper mills (previously dumped into the creeks), adds it to water, injects it with air under pressure and forces it all through a special nozzle. The process turns 100 gallons of water into 1,000 gallons of fire-fighting foam.

"Using foam on fires is nothing new," notes Cummins. "However, the cost was prohibitive." Previously, the fire trucks cost at least $150,000 and the foam $25 a gallon. But Cummins designed a truck for under $6,000 that can deliver the Texas Blizzard at only 14¢ a gallon.

There are currently between 100 and 200 units around the country using Texas Blizzard, and Cummins reports his foam is environmentally safe. "Chemically," he says, "it's identical to grandma's old lye soap."

Dog Disease Booklet

A free brochure offering information on symptoms, treatment and prevention of canine parvovirus infection, a newly found contagious viral disease that has killed several dogs around the country, is available from the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA). To order single copies of the booklet What You Should Know About Canine Parvovirus Infection, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to AVMA, 930 North Meacham Rd. Box FW, Schaumburg, Ill. 60196.

Bubble Trouble

Another of life's little pleasures down the drain. The Food and Drug Administration (F.D.A.) recently reported that bubble-bath products may cause skin irritation and urinary tract problems. The F.D.A. says that the foaming agents themselves, particularly with long and repeated exposure, can remove the skin's natural oils and cause drying, fissuring, irritation and inflammation. By August 1981, all bubble-bath products must carry a warning that identifies the dangers, the F.D.A. has ordered.

Take My Wife's Mother — Please

Since Sunday, October 26 has been proclaimed national Mother-in-Law's Day, we decided to call noted comedian and son-in-law Henny Youngman for his thoughts on the occasion. Replied Henny, "I just came back from a pleasure trip. Drove my mother-in-law to the airport....My mother-in-law is so neat, she puts paper under the cuckoo clock....I told my mother-in-law, 'My house is your house.' Last week she sold it."

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT'S TRIAL FOR MURDER IS PLUNGED INTO CHAOS WHEN ALETA REVEALS THE TRUE MURDERER. THE GUILTY CHESTER OF CORNWALL CHARGES, BUT THE SENESCHAL, HIS ONETIME ACCOMPLICE, STRIKES HIM DOWN FROM BEHIND.

HIS COWARDLY ACT COMPLETED, THE SENESCHAL BEGS VAL FOR MERCY. "SPARE ME! I SAVED YOUR LIFE. YOU HAVE NO ARMOR. YOU WOULD HAVE BEEN KILLED."

VAL'S AUTHORITY IN CASTLE CORNWALL IS NOW TOTAL. THE PRISONERS EXIT IT AT HIS COMMAND. "YOU'LL ANSWER TO KING ARTHUR'S LAW IN CAMELOT," HE CALLS AFTER THEM.

THE PROVINCE MUST BE ADMINISTERED UNTIL KING ARTHUR APPOINTS A NEW DUKE. GWYNN HAS QUIETLY POINTED OUT THE KNIGHTS MOST QUALIFIED. SHE HERSELF WILL REMAIN ARTHUR'S SECRET AGENT.

IN THE PRIVACY OF THEIR CHAMBERS, VAL AND ALETA THANK GWYNN FOR HER LOYAL SERVICE TO CAMELOT. "THE KING WILL KNOW OF YOUR DEEDS," PROMISES VAL.

ALETA GLOWS WITH COMPETENCE AS SHE EXPLAINS IN DETAIL THE TANGLED SCHEMES OF LAMBERT AND HIS BROTHERS. GREED AND LUST ARE TIMELESS MOTIVES. "KISS ME AND I'LL TELL YOU HOW I..." HER VOICE TRAILS OFF AS VAL BEGINS TO SNORE.

I'VE GOT A NEW SYSTEM

FIRST I START MY BATH WATER

THEN I BRUSH MY TEETH WHILE I LATHER MY FACE

THAT'S EIGHTY-SIX SECONDS SAVED RIGHT THERE

THEN I SHAVE WHILE I'M TAKING MY BATH AND SAVE NINETY-TWO MORE SECONDS

BY BRUSHING MY HAIR AND SHINING MY SHOES AT THE SAME TIME, I PICK UP ANOTHER FIFTY-THREE SECONDS

AND THEN DRESSING ON MY WAY DOWN THE STAIRS SAVES ME ANOTHER FORTY SECONDS

BY PUTTING ON MY HAT, OVERCOAT AND GETTING MY BRIEFCASE BEFORE BREAKFAST, I SAVE TWENTY MORE SECONDS

I SAVE FORTY-SIX MORE SECONDS BY MAKING A SANDWICH OUT OF MY FRIED EGGS, BACON AND TOAST

THEN I TAKE THE NEWSPAPER TO READ ON THE WAY, KISS YOU GOODBYE, AND DRINK MY COFFEE ON THE WAY TO THE DOOR... SAVING ANOTHER TEN SECONDS

KISS

WHICH GIVES ME FIVE MINUTES AND FORTY-SEVEN SECONDS TO LEISURELY STROLL DOWN TO THE BUS STOP

MIDNIGHT CLIFF

THE FAKE MAID OF NINE TURNS OUT TO BE STEVE'S OLD NEMESIS — MADAME LYNX! IN RETURN FOR NOT BEING SHOT, THE VETERAN RED AGENT OFFERS TO SHOW THE GROUP A WAY OUT OF THE VALLEY IN WHICH THEY ARE TRAPPED...

CANYON, THE CAVE IN WHICH THE OIL IS STORED IS BELOW THIS...

WE MUST WALK AROUND IT ON THE NARROW LEDGE TO REACH DAYLIGHT!

I SHALL GO AHEAD — TO LEARN IF IT IS SAFE

IN A PIG'S PATOOTIE, YOUNG IRONSIDES!.. YOU WAIT TILL WE'RE ON THE OTHER LIP!

I THINK NOT! I DON'T CARE FOR THE SHEER CLIFF AT THE END OF THE TUNNEL!

WHY, YEW WALKIN' IRON LUNG, I--

HOW YOU CACKLE, OLD MAN!

SHOOT HER, STEVE!

WE WANT HER ALIVE!

WHICH DROPS THE GRILLE...
