Productivity Up In 3rd Qtr.

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The productivity of the U.S.
economy reversed a string of six quarterly declines to post
a 1.4 percent annual rate of increase in the third quarter,
the government reported today. It was the largest rise in two years.

The rise in productivity,
which has a major impact on inflation, was the first in the private business sector since the fourth quarter of 1978, the Labor Department said.

Productivity gains in the third quarter were even larger when agriculture was excluded. Non-farm businesses showed a quarterly increase at a 2.6 percent annual rate, the first rise in three quarters and the largest in three years.

Productivity for the entire private business sector declined at a 2.7 percent annual rate in the second quarter, while productivity for the non-farm business sector fell at a 3.7 percent annual rate.

Productivity measures
how many goods and services are produced in one hour of paid working time.
As the productivity rate rises, businesses can offset higher labor costs from increased production, and the savings can help stabilize prices at the retail level.

The government said the increased productivity in the third quarter helped hold unit labor costs to an annual rise of 6.8 percent in the third quarter, much less than the 15.1 percent rise in the second quarter and the smallest increase in two years. For the non-farm sector unit
labor costs rose by only 5.7
percent on an annual basis,
the smallest rise since the second quarter of 1978.

The government said output increased by 0.3 percent in the third quarter, while paid working hours declined by 1.1 percent to account for the productivity increase.

In the manufacturing sector, however, productivity

declined at a 2.7 percent annual rate, with both output and hours down sharply
because of the recession.

It was the fourth straight quarter of falling
manufacturing productivity, making it the longest string of declines since 1955-56.

Productivity in the manufacturing sector declined at a 4.7 percent rate in the second quarter.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said major union contracts negotiated in the first nine months of 1980 provided first-year
wage increases averaging 9.7 percent. That compares with an average first-year boost of 7.4 percent in contracts negotiated throughout 1979.

Annual increases over the life of contracts negotiated so far this year averaged 7.3
percent, up from 6 percent in contracts negotiated in 1979.

None of the figures include additional wage increases
provided under cost-of-living contract clauses.

Castro Freeing Thirty Americans; Three Will Be Staying In Havana

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA, Cuba (AP) —
Thirty Americans pardoned
by President Fidel Castro
were to be flown to Florida
today, but three others were staying in Havana, presumably to escape prosecution at home.

The U.S. Justice Department chartered an Air
Florida plane to fly the freed men to an airport near Miami where relatives were expected to meet them. U.S.
security officers were to be aboard the plane — "after all, some of these guys are experienced hijackers," said
a diplomat at the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana.

American officials in Washington said some of the returnees would be arrested on hijacking or other charges
but would not say how many.
Cuban and U.S. officials refused to identify the three men who chose not to go home but said they could remain in Cuba or go to a third country.

About 10 of the 33 are alleged hijackers. Most of the rest were convicted on narcotics charges after their boats or planes were intercepted in Cuban waters or airspace and Cuban authorities allegedly found marijuana or other drugs in their holds.

The 33 men were the last American-born prisoners in Cuban jails. Most were arrested in the past two years,
but one of the alleged hijackers, Anthony Bryant of San Bernardino, Calif., had been in Cuba for 11½ years,
and three of them — Melvin Cale, Henry Jackson and
Louis Moore, all of Detroit, Mich. — would have completed their eighth year next month.

The Castro government announced on Oct. 13 that the Americans were being freed in response to appeals from congressmen, social organizations and relatives of the prisoners. But other sources said it was more of a signal to the U.S. government.

"It's veant as a positive step toward the United States, part of a general
pattern of attempts at reconciliation," said a Western diplomatic source.

There were also suggestions that Castro was trying to give President Carter a boost in his campaign for re-election. Cuban officials acknowledge that their leader has made clear he believes Ronald Reagan's election would be disastrous for Cuban-American relations. But they insist that the prisoner release was part of a continuing Cuban effort to end 20 years of cold war with the United States.

Improving U.S.-Cuban relations suffered a setback
last spring when Castro opened the Cuban port of Mariel to U.S. citizens from Florida that ferried some 120,000 refugees to Key West in an uncontrolled exodus that squeezed Carter into a difficult political corner.

Castro finally shut off the human flood in September.

In other gestures toward Washington, the Cuban government allowed 400
would-be refugees packed into the U.S. diplomatic mission to return unmolested
to their homes and be processed for emigration, and it returned two refugees to U.S.
authorities after they hijacked an airliner to Cuba.

Senate Panel Asked To Reopen Inquiry On Billy

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Senate's Billy Carter
subcommittee is being asked to investigate newly published allegations that Billy Carter met several times with Palestine Liberation Organization leader
Yasser Arafat.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., vice chairman of the subcommittee, in a telegram
to Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the chairman, also urged that the subcommittee investigate a report that President Carter's brother received a previously un-

publicized payment of $50,000
from Libya.

The allegations are contained in an article in the current issue of The New Republic magazine.

There was no immediate reaction from Bayh, who is in Indiana campaigning for re-election.

Thurmond said the allegations in the magazine article
"are obviously of the gravest concern to all Americans."
He urged Bayh to set a hearing for early this week.

"The American public is entitled to know the full Billy

Carter story and to be certain that all the facts have been ascertained," Thurmond said. "I trust that you share that sentiment,
and I ask for your cooperation in resuming the subcommittee investigation and in resuming hearings
forthwith."

The subcommittee's
counsel, Michael Davidson, said he had not seen the New Republic article, but added that he and his staff would
"need to sit down and talk about what issues it raises."

Belvedere Drive, 573 feet south of the Placid

Way intersection. Investigators said young chasing after a ball he and several other youngsters were playing with. No charges were made in connection with the incident.

Hostage Deadlock In Majlis

By The Associated Press
Iran's Parliament, the Majlis, failed again today to reach a decision on the fate of the 52 American hostages
after a debate of nearly six hours and will resume the discussion Wednesday, informed sources in Tehran
reported.

A Tehran Radio broadcast
said the United States was indulging in "wishful thinking" about the debate.

"They are now bragging
about the imminent release of the hostages," it said after the session. "This is a rumor with which they want to gratify themselves."

Continuing the secret debate that began Sunday, the 228-member Majlis met for four hours in the morning,
recessed for two hours for prayers, and then met again
in the afternoon for nearly two hours.

No meeting will be held Tuesday because it is a religious holiday. But the parliament will meet again
Wednesday to continue the debate. Like today's meetings, it will be a special session since the regular meeting days are Sunday,
Tuesday and Thursday.

"It is not clear when a decision will be reached on the hostage issue," a spokesman at the public relations office of the Majlis said before the morning session.

Tehran Radio reported the Majlis also discussed the war between Iran and Iraq at the morning meeting.

Two factors appeared to be extending the debate, which some reports had suggested would be resolved in a single day. One was the wave of optimistic rumors from the United States of imminent release for the hostages,
which a Tehran radio broadcast today implied was a form of pressure on Iran.

The other was Iran's battlefield losses to Iraq in the 36-day-old Persian Gulf war.
Iranian officials have accused the United States of siding with Iraq in the conflict.

A reporter for Pars, the Iranian news agency, who attended the opening session of the debate Sunday, said
"most probably" the hostage issue "will be decided in the near future" because "it is a very important issue."

Majid Sajedi said in a telephone interview from

Tehran the Majlis decision might "coincide" with the U.S. presidential elections
Nov. 4. The date is also the first anniversary of the seizure of the hostages.

"Now the question of elections in the United States is very important," he said.
"Who will come as the head
of state and how will he deal with the question of Iran?"

Moosavi Tabrizi, a deputy contacted by telephone from Beirut after the first round of debate Sunday, predicted it might take a "week to 10 days" to decide the conditions for the release of the Americans, who today were spending their 359th day in captivity.

Mohammad Mohammadi,
a deputy from a party closely linked to the young Islamic militants holding the hostages, said his faction
would try to prolong the debate.

The Majlis voted Sunday to hold the debate behind closed doors for "security reasons."
The first secret session
lasted for two hours and 15 minutes, and the deputies reportedly heard a report from the seven-member commission that drafted
proposed terms for the release of the Americans. No details were made public,
but Mohammadi said the debate was contentious, and there was little common ground among opposing factions.

Before going into secret session, the deputies by a vote of 101-87 voted down a motion to postpone the debate indefinitely pending developments in the Iran-Iraq war. Pointing to the gallery crowded with foreign correspondents, many deputies asked why the Majlis should be concerned with 52 Americans when hundreds of Irani-ans were being killed in the war.

The speaker of the Majlis, Hashemi Rafsanjani, linked
the United States to the Iraqi rocket attack Sunday which the Iranians said killed at least 64 persons in residential areas of the military garrison city of Dezful. Directing his words to the foreign press, Rafsanjani said: "You should pay attention to these important events happening
in the region with the incitement of the same superpower whose hostages
will be discussed in the session today."

Carter Holding Rally In W. Va.

WASHINGTON (AP) —
President Carter moves his study center from Camp
David to Cleveland today,
with a stop for a pre-debate
rally in Huntington, W.Va.,
along the way.

The president spent Saturday afternoon and Sunday at Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland, with several top aides who helped prepare him for Tuesday's night's debate with Ronald Reagan in Cleveland.

Today's rally, at the Huntington airport, was scheduled to draw campaign supporters not only from West Virginia, but from Kentucky and Ohio, the latter a key battleground as Carter and Reagan fight for the votes of the major industrial states.

Before the president arrived at Camp David on Saturday, aides said they were preparing several hundred questions that might be raised in the 90-minute meeting of the Democratic and Republican presidential nominees.

Before leaving for the debate, the president planned
only a brief stop at the White House. His schedule called for a midafternoon arrival in Cleveland.

He is unlikely to return to the White House until election day.

Carter is leaving the Ohio
city Wednesday morning to begin a six-day campaign
trip that in the first day alone will touch states with a total of 110 electoral votes — more than one-third of the 270 needed to win on Nov. 4 —
and each one considered too close to call.

While the president remained secluded at his mountain hideaway, Vice President Walter F. Mondale was on the campaign trail on the West Coast.

The president's campaign
chairman, Robert S. Strauss, appeared on the NBC News
program "Meet the Press," playing down the debate and apparently trying to cushion
any possible negative impact it could have.

Strauss cautioned against expecting either candidate to win or lose. Sounding like a football coach before a big game, he built up the opposition by stating, "Reagan is a far more accomplished performer. He's an actor."

Links Tariffs To Emigration

WASHINGTON (AP) —
President Carter has reaffirmed his support for a provision that links granting of nondiscriminatory tariff
treatment to the Soviet Union
with the issue of free emigration by Soviet Jews and others.

In a letter dated Saturday
to Sen. Henry M. Jackson,
D-Wash., Carter said the 1974
Jackson-Vanik Amendment
"represents an important statement of our nation's commitment to the free emigration of Soviet Jewry."

Carter noted that about 50,000 Jews were allowed to emigrate in 1979, compared with 14,000 the year before he took office. This year's emigration figures, however,
have been running considerably lower.

Couple Speaks Vows On Sunday Afternoon

Kimberly Dee Daniels of Greenville and Marcus Timothy McClanahan of Homestead AFB, Fla., were united in marriage Sunday at Grace F.W.B. Church at 3 p.m. Officiating at the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Wayne Adkisson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.R. Daniels of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Ms. Helen McClanahan of Greenville and Marcus McClanahan of Ayden.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a portrait neckline outlined in silk Venice lace, threaded with white satin ribbon with floral motifs accenting the lace which was bordered in a ruffled bertha collar of organza. The same design was featured on the cuffs of the full bishop sleeves. Matching threaded lace encircled the waistline of the empire bodice. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accented with a deep ruffled flounce at the hemline topped by a row of lace threaded with satin ribbon.

She wore a walking length veil of illusion edged in the lace to match her gown and was attached to a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace. She carried a cascade of white silk gardenias mixed with silk azaleas and apple blossoms tied with white organza ribbon etched in lace.

Maid of honor was Sonya Daniels of Greenville, sister of the bride, and matron of honor was Diann Heath of Clyde, aunt of the bride. Bridesmaids included Nancy Berg and Sandra Smith of Greenville and Gwen Nichols of Grimesland, cousin of the bride. Honorary bridesmaids included Lexanne Keeter and Melanie Tyson of Winterville and Pam Manning and Wendy Bowen of Greenville. Tracey Heath of Clyde, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl.

The matron of honor and bridesmaids wore formal gowns of apricot tinaseta with open necklines and gathered empire bodices. The dresses featured miniature rolled shoulder straps and full accordin pleated skirts. The sleeveless gown was complimented with a sheer chiffon drape accented with the bows at the shoulder. They each carried one long-stemmed silk rose tied with variegated ribbons.

The flower girl wore a floor length dress of white organza and carried a lace basket trimmed with apricot rosebuds filled with rose petals.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of matte jersey in a floral design of rose, shrimp, blue and green on a blue background. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of plum silesta designed with the bodice overlaid in French Nottingham lace, sheer chiffon sleeves and accordin pleated skirt. The mothers and grandmothers wore corsages of white carnations.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers included Mike McClanahan of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Donnie McClanahan of Clinton, uncle of the bridegroom, Jerry Nichols of Grimesland, cousin of the bride, and Allen Hudson of Greenville. Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church. After the first slice of wedding cake was cut by the couple, Mrs. Faye Smith served cake and Mrs. Sandra Peede poured punch.

Dear Abby

Candy Gets Stale, Pencils Last At Halloween

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: For the last 10 years I've been meaning to write this letter to you, but I always put it off until it was too late for Halloween. This year I finally got around to writing it on time, and I sure hope it makes your column, because it could be very helpful.

My kids used to go out on Halloween for the usual "tricks or treats" in their neighborhood. They would come home with food bags filled with candy. They really couldn't appreciate the candy because there was so much of it. Besides, all that candy at one time wasn't good for them.

Well, while shopping in the variety store one day, I happened to see an assortment of colored pencils. They came in some beautiful colors — lavender, orange, shocking pink, robin's egg blue, deep purple — just about every color in the rainbow. I bought several dozen, and then shopped other stores to add to my collection.

Came Halloween eve, I offered the trick-or-treaters a colored pencil of their choice or a candy bar. Much to my surprise, eight out of 10 kids chose a colored pencil instead of a candy bar.

The next year I picked up an assortment of inexpensive toys — rings, marbles, toy cars, the type of things one used to find in a box of Cracker Jacks. Some of the smaller children were delighted with that for a treat.

After 10 years I find that the pretty colored pencils rank No. 1 with the trick-or-treaters in my neighborhood. If one shops around, these pencils can be found for about 3 cents each, which is a lot cheaper than candy. They're much better for the youngsters, too. And if there are any left over, you can always use them the following year. Candy gets stale, pencils last.

PENCIL PUSHER IN ARIZ.

DEAR PUSHER: Write on!

DEAR ABBY: After trying for five years to get pregnant, I went to a fertility specialist. He gave me some tests and everything checked out perfectly, so he suggested that my husband take some tests. At first my husband refused, but after much pleading and nagging, he finally consented. He found that his sperm count was very, very low, which accounted for my inability to conceive.

Now my husband wants me to have an artificial insemination using his brother's sperm. His brother, who has been married less than a year, agreed to be the donor on the condition that absolutely no one except the three of us knows about it. He definitely does not want his wife to know. He says if she's told, she might forbid it. And if we do it without her approval and she finds out later, it might break up their marriage.

Abby, I would feel deceitful and guilty not letting his wife in on these plans. And even if she did approve, I'm afraid my brother-in-law might take a special interest in our child, or it might create a special bond between them. And what about the child? Should he be told that his "uncle" is his biological father?

I told my husband I would rather have an anonymous donor from the sperm bank — that way I'd never have to face the father, and I wouldn't feel guilty. My husband says if his brother is the donor, our baby will be a blood relative and seem more like his own.

I am terribly torn. What should I do?

CHILDLESS

DEAR CHILDLESS: Don't go along with your husband's scheme unless you feel absolutely comfortable with the idea and have the unconditional approval of the brother's wife.

The eye's ability to discern color and substance depends upon the amount and type of illumination provided. Some useful tips may then be gained with respect to interior decoration and lighting. First, the best and most normal tint for light sources at low levels of intensity is a warm one. Light sources of high intensity should have a cooler tint. One should not, then, use a yellowish light at high levels. Consequently, avoid a cool, white light at low levels.

TRAIN AND JEEP COLLIDE — An east-bound train on the Southern Railway tracks collided with a Jeep Sunday afternoon killing a Greenville man. Trooper D. R. Taylor, investigator of the accident said a Jeep driven by Walter Bradley Gray, Jr., of 3005 S. Elm St., Greenville was headed south on rural paved road 1728, when he collided with the engine of the train. Taylor said witnesses on U.S. 264, a short distance from the railroad crossing said the Gray vehicle apparently did not make any attempt to stop. The train engineer was identified as George Halthcock, of New Bern. Damage to the train engine was listed as $1,500. The accident occurred about 2.4 miles east of Greenville in the Eastern Pines community. Members of the Eastern Pines fire department and the Greenville Rescue Squad responded to the call. Advises State Against Cutting Med Students

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Winston-Salem doctor who participated in a project to determine future enrollment needs says North Carolina's medical schools should do nothing to alter their rolls during the next 10 years.

Dr. George Podgorny made the comments in light of a study recently released by the Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee.

The committee predicted that the nation would have 536,000 doctors by 1990, but would need only 466,000. The group also recommended a 17 percent enrollment cut, but Podgorny took issue with the figures.

"If I were a (medical school) dean, I wouldn't do anything," Podgorny said. He added that the forecast involved "extremely divergent numbers."

"At best, what they have come up with is guesses. To take that and apply it directly to North Carolina is too simplistic and probably not defensible," he said.

Several health professionals asked about the study agreed that more doctors are needed in rural areas. They said North Carolina's doctor supply is growing, but shortages remain.

"We must take into account that we are a highly rural state," said Dr. Richard Janeway, dean of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem.

"The (GMENAC) implications for the specialties are more applicable to an urban environment," he said.

James D. Bernstein, head of the Rural Health Office in the state Department of Human Resources, said areas suffering shortages of doctors remain across the state.

"It is still hard to get doctors to go to a lot of smaller towns without hospitals and some with hospitals, especially in the eastern part of the state," Bernstein said.

No detailed figures exist on the availability of physicians for North Carolina in future years. The closest thing is provided by the Chapel Hill-based Area Health Education Center program.

The center has determined the state will have more than 11,000 practicing physicians in 1990, as compared with about 7,100 in 1978. It also says the physician-to-patient ratio, which was 129 per 100,000 in 1978, should increase to 168 per 100,000 in 1990.

During the same period, the national ratio will increase from 164 per 100,000 to 209 per 100,000.

A Tricky Issue For Us

The hostage release situation is back in the news with rumors abounding that Iran may be willing to release them because it badly needs the funds which the United States has tied up.

It is doubly important at this time because the presidential campaign is nearing an end and all candidates are talking about the hostages.

Presumably the release of the hostages at this time would be of some benefit to President Carter, but not necessarily so.

There will be conditions attached to their release. The Iranians talk of an apology, a pledge not to interfere with their internal affairs, release of Iranian assets and return of the shah's wealth.

Any apology by the administration is virtually certain to be viewed negatively by the voters. We have nothing to apologize for: It is Iran which has violated all rules of world diplomacy, and the laws of most civilized nations.

Releasing Iranian assets would not raise such an uproar and certainly no one cares to meddle in Iranian affairs.

Promising military parts might be viewed as paying ransom to kidnappers by the American voters.

It will be a tricky negotiation with the election less than two weeks away. If the hostages are released it could be helpful to the president in his quest for re-election... but it could also boomerang.

Facility Is Art Museum

The local art center has a new name... it is now the Museum of Art.

Mary Ann Pennington, executive director, recommended the change because, as the possessor of a permanent collection, the facility is not an art center.

The new name does, indeed, sound more imposing. Much has been done by the art society and others to develop a permanent collection of art for the museum.

Our community is fortunate to have such a facility.

THIS AFTERNOON

N.C. And Realities

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Mass Transit may be a popular topic of conversation in today's fuel-short atmosphere, but the reality is that North Carolina is not ready.

One of the state's most pleasant aspects — one which keeps residents happy and attracts newcomers — is the dispersed nature of the population. Almost equally balanced rural-to-urban and with no dominating urban center, this is an area in which rural settings and small towns predominate.

Even the handful of urban centers is not a solid mass of humanity, but sprawling complexes of commerce and industry interspersed with parks, golf courses, winding streets, and large lots.

Dreams surface from time to time of some method of connecting these clusters of population, particularly in the more heavily populated Piedmont region, with regularly scheduled train service.

No Change
The bottom line is that private automobiles will be the foundation of North Carolina's transportation system well into the next century.

That is not all bad, say transportation specialists. A car — especially as they become more economical to operate — is both efficient and realistic. It carries people where they want to go, when they want to go.

Matching that through public transportation is completely out of the question. The recent experience of those cities which have bus systems proves that even where there are enough people to justify a transportation alternative to the private car, it is totally unrealistic to expect the bus system to make a profit — or even break even. Local, state, and federal subsidies are being pumped into the bus systems in order to keep them in operation.

A prime example of the cost is a review of federal grants being prepared for the next fiscal year for smaller urban and rural areas of the state. A total of 13 applications from around the state is being processed, with a grant-total cost of $4.7 million. The federal government provides 90 percent of that.

Few Buses

Most of the money is for administration and planning projects. Altogether, only 26 vehicles are included, with about half being vans or mini-buses. Rocky Mount, Chapel Hill, and Salisbury are asking full-sized buses.

State officials no longer talk about mass transit, but prefer the term "public transportation" for North Carolina. The number of vans, small buses, and lifts illustrate that the emphasis is on helping the poor, the elderly, or others who do not own cars and drive themselves.

It is impossible to devise a regularly scheduled transit system in the rural and small town areas of the state, say transit experts. Any program designed must be centered around demand — that is, individuals who call for transportation and can be added to the list of others in similar circumstances who are getting rides to work, shopping, or health centers.

All of which adds up, a government study has concluded, that "many communities and citizens (in North Carolina) are not served by mass transit, nor are many of them likely to receive such service in the foreseeable future."

Quotes

Other Editors Say Carolina Wine

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

"The care we put into our wines is not surpassed anywhere."

The speaker is not a portly actor, and perhaps the phrasing is not so elegant as, "We will sell no wine before its time"; nevertheless, the wine in question is of high quality, and David Fussell is every bit as proud of it as Orson Wells seems of his brand on TV.

Russell, president of the co-op that runs Duplin Wine Cellars at Rose Hill, is one of a growing group of Tar Heels trying to turn more of the state's delectable muscadine grapes into champagnes, wines, ports and brandies. Fussell says the cooperative came into existence to protect the $75 million invested in the state's grapes — which, until recently, have all been shipped to New York except for a paltry 5 percent.

The recent success of such efforts to help recover some of North Carolina's winemaking status is encouraging. State agricultural officials should take a keen interest in the prospect of a thriving native winemaking industry. Winemaking is not exactly a new idea in the state. Before Prohibition, North Carolina produced more wine than any other state. The 33 wineries operating during the heyday now have dwindled to three, but the renewed interest is promising. The fact that Duplin Wine Cellars is nestled in the midst of tobacco country should give farmers a good idea for a supplement to the state's leading cash crop. The troubled outlook of tobacco is reason enough for farmers to think about vineyards as an alternative. (In Forsyth County, local grape growers believe there is a strong potential for a wine-making industry in the area, and a three-year-old informal experiment shows that some varieties of grapes could do well here, says agricultural extension agent Roger Galloway.) Even if grape-growing for a native winemaking industry turns out to be impractical as a partial substitute for tobacco, it could be a welcome addition to the state's many agricultural products.

After Prohibition, North Carolina was better known for moonshine in Mason jars than for beverages at home in crystal stemware. But now it looks as though Tar Heel wines could easily become as famous as the state's shine once was, and with official blessings, as well.

Strength For Today

A RIGHT TO GROW

If we look up the word "liberty" in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, we find reference to another word, "liberal". Then we read that the words "liberal" and "liberty" go back through the Anglo-Saxon, the French, the Latin, the Greek, into the ancient Sanskrit. This was the basic Aryan language, parent of many of the languages spoken today. The word "liberty" derives ultimately from a Sanskrit word which means "to grow

Inside Executive Suites

WASHINGTON — The big story this month has not been the presidential campaign or the war in Iran, but the saga of Mary Cunningham, the brilliant 29-year-old Harvard Business School graduate who climbed her way up the corporate ladder of the Bendix Corporation in 15 months to become an Executive Vice President, only to be forced to resign because she was too beautiful, too young and too close to the Chairman of the Board.

It has divided the country, turned families against each other, and raised so many questions that even the "Moral Majority" can't deal with it.

On one side are those who say Ms. Cunningham would never have reached her position had she not been young and beautiful. On the other are people who say no one would care if she succeeded in the executive suite, if she hadn't been a beautiful woman.

The most interesting part of the story is that this is the first time people have been more interested in what went on in the private plane of a large corporation than what happened when Farrah Fawcett split up with Lee Majors, and Jackie Onassis had dinner alone at the Stage Delicatessen.

The country was riveted by Gail Sheehy's syndicated newspaper feature of the step-by-step rise and fall of this poor young lady and, based on readership interest, we may soon be reading countless other Mary Cunningham sagas from "Fortune Magazine's 500 leading corporations list."

My worry is that most people will get a distorted view of the executive suite and how we operate.

As most people know, this column is a conglomerate. We're into books, lecturing, recycling of old columns, and TV and theatrical enterprises — too numerous to mention.

There'll Be No Re-Match

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — It's supposed to be the Super Bowl of politics, the campaign World Series, one roll of the dice with stakes as high as the White House.

But it is at least an even-money bet that nothing President Carter and Ronald Reagan say in Tuesday night's debate will be nearly so dramatic as the fact that they are face to face at last, saying it to each other and to millions upon millions of voters.

After all the haggling, both principals give the impression that they are rather reluctant to risk everything on one night's performance. That is understandable; there have been too many nights, in too many cities, for either campaigner to be comfortable with the risk that it might all be lost one week short of the goal, on a stage set for television in Cleveland.

Not only does the debate come late, one week before election night, it also comes alone, with no chance for a rematch or a comeback.

In the two earlier campaigns that featured nationally televised debates, the candidates met in series. In 1976, there were three debates between Carter and then-President Gerald R. Ford. Carter said later that he wouldn't have been elected without the debates.

The opening debate seemed to be to Ford's advantage. Carter appeared nervous, deferential, ill at ease. Round two clearly belonged to Carter, not because he suddenly blossomed as a debater, but because Ford blundered. The finale was routine — in fact, it was dull. The date was Oct. 22, 1976, and both candidates were extra cautious, avoiding risks with the election drawing near.

There were three debates in 1960, too, between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon. The first of that series is the one that apparently counted most. It established Kennedy as a candidate who could hold his own, and more, with the vice president of the United States. And Nixon looked bad, almost sinister, on the television screen. He paid more attention to his makeup in the succeeding debates, but the opening match had taken its toll.

This time, the opener will be the finale. Carter and Reagan meet for 90 minutes, and when they are done, there will be only six days left for campaigning.

That's likely to make them extra cautious as debaters. Neither is likely to take the risk that would go with breaking new ground on campaign issues, for the one thing that could make the Cleveland debate crucial to one or the other is a mistake, a slip akin to Ford's 1976 declaration that there is no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe.

The rehearsals the two campaigners have been conducting are designed to guard against just such an error. Reagan strategists claim they will be content to emerge in a standoff, saying

Recession Proved Poor Cure

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It was the recession that didn't accomplish much of anything except to throw people out of work, depress production, add to the government's debt and tie a millstone to the leg to any recovery.

It barely even slowed the double-digit inflation rate. "Whoever takes office in January will have to take that into account," said Otto Eckstein, an economic adviser in the Lyndon Johnson administration.

He'll also have to deal with a prime interest rate that, at 14 percent, is higher even than the inflation rate. With the recession barely over, if it is at all, the prime is rising again.

Ordinarily, a recession gives temporary relief from adverse trends: interest rates decline, the inflation rate diminishes, production costs fall. It helps clear away the debris so a new start can be made.

It really didn't happen this time. True, the prime rate declined from its extraordinary high of 20 percent last April, but it settled at a double-digit level that in historic terms is one of the highest ever.

It is true also that the rate of inflation declined in the past 12 months, but by an almost imperceptible degree — from 13.3 per cent in 1979 to an annual rate of 12.1 percent through September.

But by historic standards, 12.1 percent is not low — it is one of the highest rates in U.S. history, higher than rates during previous inflationary peaks. And economists now think it may go higher.

High and rising interest rates and high and rising costs are hardly incentives to new investments, risk-taking and innovation, all of which are considered necessary in the battle against rising prices.

High rates are in fact the factors that in the past have signaled the end of a period of economic expansion. When such factors already exist at the cycle's bottom, what kind of an expansion can be anticipated?

The literature of finance and business is now filled with foreboding.

An investment adviser, Wright Investors' Service, has just warned that a "a very serious 'double-dip' recession" is almost a certainty if interest rates continue rising. It commented:

"With economic recovery rather obviously turning into stagnation, there can be little doubt that the villain is the extraordinary and unprecedented rise of interest rates when they should be declining."

"While one can argue that consumers have become inured to high interest rates, there is no precedent in U.S. history for double-digit, post-recession interest rates."

Merrill Lynch Economics Inc. is more optimistic, but not enthusiastic. It comments: "The economic expansion expected to begin next year should be less vigorous than most of the other postwar recoveries."

Chase Manhattan's International Finance, recently ran these headlines: 1. Rapid Auto Recovery Unlikely. 2. Rising Rates Threaten Housing Recovery. 3. Further Decline Seen for Business Spending.

Citibank's Economic Week seems happier with the outlook. "The inflation rate isn't likely to slow much before year-end," it says. "For one thing, hikes in food prices are probably in store."

Then it states pointedly: "But this doesn't rule out a slowdown in inflation over the course of the next year," based in part, it says, on a belief the Federal Reserve will follow a less expansionary policy.

Whatever the comments, few seem enthusiastic about what's coming up in the economy, and to a great extent that's because of the legacy of the recession that failed and left us with high prices and costly interest.

Iraq's Strongman

Before the war broke out between Iran and Iraq, many people had never heard of Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein. Hussein, who took over as Iraq's president in 1979, has been a powerful figure in his country for many years. To make sure he stays in power, Hussein has had many of his political opponents killed or put in jail. His government strictly controls Iraq's press, and newspapers and magazines from the United States and Europe are banned from the country. Hussein has established a program to teach all Iraqis under 45 to read and write. Those who refuse to go to class are jailed or fined.

the Republican challenger is ahead and needs only to avoid losing anything to Carter because of the debate.

"I don't know whether it's all on one roll of the dice or not," Reagan said the other day. "I don't know that this campaign is decided either way." He acknowledged the debate is a gamble but said it is one he had no choice but to take in a race against an incumbent. "I still feel I'm the underdog," he said.

Robert S. Strauss, Carter's campaign chairman, said Reagan is the more polished debater, the president the more informed candidate. "My guess is that there will be no winner and no loser," he said.

"I don't know about winning it," Carter said. "I'm a careful enough observer to know that Governor Reagan is a professional in dealing with the media. ... He's articulate and I don't underestimate him."

"But I think that the result of the debate is not who's the best debater, but which of the two candidates the American people judge can resolve the issues most effectively as a president."

In fact, each candidate is heading for Cleveland because he thinks he has something to gain. Reagan thinks he can undo what he calls a stereotype created by Carter, depicting him as warlike and risky. He believes he can use the debate to shift the focus to Carter's economic policies, the issue he wanted to stress all along.

Carter, clearly, will try to make Reagan the issue, as he has from the outset of the campaign.

But they'll both proceed with care, because neither wants to play the heavy and risk a backdash.

And the one guaranteed result is this: each candidate will say he succeeded.

each other that if it hadn't been for her looks she would never have been made an Executive Assistant in such a short time. But I ignored the whispering because Jeannie was too valuable to me to replace.

Six months later, she came to me again and said she was desperate for more money. I said she had hit me at a bad time, and instead of a raise I would make her Vice President of the Column.

Once again there was shock and outrage on the floor. Jeannie had been with me less than a year and yet she was in on all my important business decisions. Evans and Novak said that if Jeannie was a man she would never have been made Vice President of the Column in so short a time.

The final blow came a month ago when Jeannie again asked for a raise. This time I had no choice but to make her Executive Vice President of Mergers and Acquisitions, which meant ordering my lunch for me in the office when I didn't go out.

This was too much for everyone on the floor to swallow and the pressure is on now for me to ask for her resignation.

But I'm hanging tough. If she couldn't do the job she wouldn't be here and her beauty has nothing to do with her new title.

The lesson in all this is that some companies such as Bendix give women titles because they are better than men at what they're doing. Others such as mine hand them out in lieu of giving a person a raise.

Vote Cabot Prizes For Journalists

NEW YORK (AP) — An ABC-TV foreign correspondent executed while on assignment covering the Nicaraguan revolution was among five people named to receive this year's Maria Moors Cabot Prizes, Columbia University officials have announced.

Bill Stewart, the ABC correspondent whose shooting death last year was filmed by his camera team, and Richard T. Baker, a journalism professor at Columbia and longtime member of the Cabot Prize advisory committee, will be honored with special citations, officials said.

The three others who are to receive the prizes are Guido Fernandez, former editor-in-chief of La Nacion, in San Jose, Costa Rica; freelance journalist Penny Lernoux, and Alan Riding, Mexico City bureau chief for The New York Times.

The awards, which signify "distinguished journalistic contributions to the advancement of inter-American understanding," will be presented Tuesday at Columbia.

The awards were established by the late Godfrey Lowell Cabot of Boston as a memorial for his wife. They were first presented in 1939, and are awarded by Columbia's trustees, with the advice of a committee that consults Latin American and North American editors.

Each prize consists of a gold medal and certificate, $1,000, and traveling expenses.

The Times, which won the award in 1949, and La Nacion, which won it in 1959, will receive silver bars to affix to their plaques.

Arab Officials Warn U.S. To Avoid Supporting Iran In War

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The United States would "precipitate a very grave oil situation" and alienate the conservative Persian Gulf states if it tilted the scales in the Iran-Iraq war by supplying Iran with military spare parts, Arab officials and oil industry sources on the Arabian peninsula warn.

Most Arab oil officials ruled out the possibility of another oil embargo. But they predicted Saudi Arabia and other Arab oil states would call off the production increases they are planning to offset the cutoff in exports from the two warring gulf nations.

"We would reconsider our oil production policy, with a view to exporting just enough of it to meet our financial needs for economic development, and not in any way to help those who deliberately hurt us," said an official in Kuwait.

Another high-ranking Arab official who refused to be identified said the Arab gulf oil states would be "intolerably offended" if Washington helped non-Arab Iran against Arab Iraq.

"Anti-American feelings already are brewing in the gulf region, with some Arab governments producing more oil than they should, only to help out the non-communist industrialized nations," he said. "These governments have been raising their production levels against the wills of their peoples who do not see the United States worthy of assistance or sympathy by the Arabs."

Since the war began Sept. 22, Carter administration officials have maintained a neutral stance but in the past week have labelled the Iraqi attack an invasion and said they oppose the "dismemberment" of Iran. Those statements have led Iraq to charge that Washington is supporting Tehran. Iranian officials, however, charge America is backing Iraq.

As for the possibility of military equipment being sent to Iran, Vice President Walter Mondale said Sunday the administration was not negotiating any deal to exchange the 52 American hostages held in Iran for military equipment. But in an interview on CBS's "Face the Nation," he left open the possibility of delivery of $370 million in U.S. military equipment already bought by Iran if the hostages were freed.

"We would like to see the American hostages released, the Iraqi-Iranian war ended, and stability re-established in Iran," said one official in Bahrain. "But nothing of this should be done at Iraq's expense. The Arabs will not tolerate this."

"No Arab government can condone a U.S.-triggered reverse in the Iran-Iraq war without risking public resentment," said an oil industry official of the United Arab Emirates.

In addition to their inborn sympathy for the Iraqis as fellow Arabs, the leaders of the conservative Arab governments on the Arabian peninsula hold anti-Iranian feelings because of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's repeated threats and loud propaganda campaigns to export his Islamic revolution to their countries.

They also reject Tehran's claims to the island state of Bahrain as an Iranian province and they want the return to the UAE of the three tiny islands at the entrance to the gulf which the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi seized to give Iran control of the gulf shipping lanes.

With a market surplus of 2.25 million barrels of oil a day before the outbreak of the war, the supply position is not yet bleak and the industrialized countries are said to have enough oil for 100 days, according to sources here.

The oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the UAE and Qatar reportedly held a secret meeting in Taif, Saudi Arabia, two weeks ago to discuss increasing oil production.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait agreed to boost production by about 500,000 barrels of oil a day each while the UAE increased production by 50,000 barrels and Qatar, by 20,000, the sources said.

In most years, the first frost of the year will occur in Pitt County around the first week of November. In some years, the peanut crop will be damaged by an early frost, but peanuts will have escaped frost this year.

The onset of cold weather brings to a close a growing season that lasts from late March to early November. The average length of the frost-free growing period lasts some 220 days or seven months.

Protection from frost is important for some landscape plants. Tender flowering annuals will be killed by cold weather. They can be replaced with hardy flowers such as pansies or sweet peas, so if flowers in the landscape are important, then there are good alternatives.

Tomatoes, roses and many other warmth-loving plants can be protected from frost by covering them with sheets of burlap, canvas, or plastic. It is important to note that plastic sheets should not be allowed to come in contact with the plant. Instead, it should be suspended above the plant so that moisture will not condensate on the surface of leaves and turn cell contents from liquid to ice.

When water freezes, it contracts slightly until it almost freezes. When water turns to ice, it expands and therefore will break cell walls and destroy plant tissues. The disruption of cell walls causes plant tissues to turn black and become much more susceptible to bacteria and fungi which will rot the tissue.

To make plants more able to withstand frost, do not overfertilize them in late summer. If plants are allowed to use up most of the soil nutrients available to them, they will slow down their growth and tissues will become thicker and smaller in size. The most cold-sensitive tissues are those that are growing rapidly and are large in size with thin cell walls. Obviously, some plants lack the ability to stand up to sudden frosts because they are not adapted to frost. Such plants are normally houseplants and should be kept indoors. These plants may be protected in some ways, but it will only be a matter of time before cold temperatures kill the plant.

Some plants thrive in the cold, and a good example of this type of plant is the many bulbs that are planted each fall. Bulbs should not be planted too early in soils that are too warm. Tulips, daffodils and crocus bulbs should be put in the ground only after several hard frosts have cooled the ground off. Planting bulbs too early will cause the bulbs to sprout prematurely. It's a good idea to place newly-bought bulbs in the refrigerator for several weeks to prevent early sprouting.

Cold weather is once again around the corner. For some people as well as some plants it is an extremely tough time of year. For other plants and other folks, it is a time to become more dormant.

Inmate Still A 'Revolutionary'

BOSTON (AP) — Susan Saxe, a one-time student radical, says she still considers herself a working revolutionary although she is in prison.

Ms. Saxe, 31, who is being held at the state prison in Framingham, is a leader of several inmates' rights programs.

She was sentenced to 12 to 14 years in prison in 1977 on a conviction for robbing a bank in 1970 with four accomplices to fund revolutionary causes. A bank guard was killed in the holdup.

Ms. Saxe, who will be eligible for parole in three years, has helped put

VFW Auxiliary Plans Christmas

Plans for Christmas were made at the monthly meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 7032, held last Thursday at the Post Home.

Donations were authorized for the Pitt County Social Services, the O'Berry Center, the Fayetteville VA Hospital and the VFW National Home for widows and orphans.

O'Berry Chairman Verna Mizzelle announced a trip would be made to O'Berry Center this week to take fruits and candy for Halloween. President Alice Mosley and Hattie Manning will accompany her.

Carrie West, poppy chairman, made a report on the Buddy Poppy sale, held on October 17 and 18. Five thousand poppies were sold. Proceeds of the sale totaled $1,893.79, which is used exclusively for rehabilitation of veterans and their families. Mrs. West expressed appreciation to the people of Greenville and the ECU students for their contributions.

A $50 donation was sent to the Chapel Fund to build chapels for all centers for the retarded. This is the main project for State President Jean Polsun this year.

Myrtle Meeks reported that $81 was made for Cancer Aid and Research. To date, $521.86 has been sent to headquarters.

Donations were made to the Otis Brown and Earline Mayberry Scholarships. These scholarships are given each year to the children of veterans.

The Art of Carpeting & Decor

by Larry C. Whitlow

Wall-to-wall carpeting has long been thought an excellent and popular way to cover a floor. It can serve as the backdrop or harmony point for the colors and decor of the rest of the room. If more color is needed in the floor area, there is still no need to do away with the idea of wall-to-wall carpeting. The carpeting can be cut with special places for smaller area rugs. Or simply place some highly colored or patterned area rugs over the wall-to-wall carpeting for special emphasis.

A wide selection of wall-to-wall carpeting is available from us at LARRY'S CARPETLAND INC., 3010 E. 10th St., 758-2300. Call us for our Shop At Home Service. No high pressure is used in any part of our service. We want you to take all the time you need to find the exact carpet to blend with your decor. "We put a world of styling at your feet". Hours: Mon. thru Fri. 9 a.m. - 5:30 p.m., Sat. 9 a.m. - 1 p.m.

DECORATING TIP: A decorative area rug under the coffee table or special piece of furniture will draw attention to the furniture without detracting from the rest of the room.

The loan that improves your home can also improve your budget.

At Branch Banking and Trust, we call it the Simple Interest Loan.

It's designed to save you money when your home needs improvements—like redecorating, an extra room or perhaps some energy saving features.

BB&T's Simple Interest Loan is the fairest kind of financing you can get, allowing you to sign a note for only the amount you borrow for the time you borrow it. With no interest added in advance.

This means that, instead of paying interest on the principal throughout the term of your loan, you pay it only on the amount you still owe. Which means your interest decreases as you pay off the loan.

You can save money by making payments early, or by paying extra amounts at any time. There's never a prepayment penalty. And never a delinquency charge.

We are specialists in home improvement and FHA Title I property loans for major improvements. We arrange payments structured to fit your needs.

So visit any BB&T office and tell us what you'd like to do to make your house a nicer place to live. We'll work hard to provide the Simple Interest Loan that'll do the job—without doing a job on your budget.

East Making Strong Inroads On Morgan Support

By The Associated Press
Republican senatorial challenger John East of Greenville has made strong inroads in support previously shown for incumbent Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan, according to a Charlotte Observer poll.

The newspaper, reporting on its third poll leading to the general election next week, said East gained 6 percent on Morgan between its second poll and a survey conducted during the third week of October. Overall, East has shown a 10 percent increase during the polling period.
In other major races, the newspaper's poll showed that Democratic candidates from Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green to President Jimmy Carter are likely winners in North Carolina.

Morgan was supported by 52 percent of those surveyed for the latest poll, while East was the choice of 32 percent. Fifteen percent were undecided, and 1 percent preferred other candidates.
Morgan, who said he had no quarrel with the poll, picked up an editorial endorsement Sunday from The News and Observer of Raleigh. The newspapers said Morgan "is easily the best choice for the Senate this year." It said the Republican campaign has "made little effort to suggest why anyone should vote for Mr. East."

Morgan issued a statement Sunday thanking the Congressional Club — which has directed East's campaign — for planning to bring Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., to Charlotte on Wednesday to campaign for East.

Morgan said Baker joined him in voting for the Panama Canal treaty and a loan to Nicaragua. East has criticized Morgan's votes on both matters. Morgan said he hoped Baker would clear up the questions raised by East about those votes.

Campaigning by the candidates was minimal Sunday, and a spokesman for Republican gubernatorial nominee I. Beverly Lake Jr. indicated his campaign would remain quiet until election day.

Lake press aide Mary Michaux said his campaign advisers decided Sunday to keep Lake's schedule clear for the coming week. She said Lake was ill Sunday with a throat virus but indicated the illness was not a significant factor in the campaign decision.

Meanwhile, former President Ford appeared in Asheville for a speech before about 1,500 people and for a $250-a-person fundraising reception. He was in Asheville on behalf of Republican Bill Hendon, who is seeking the U.S. House seat now held by Democratic Rep. Lamar Gudgeon.
The Charlotte Observer poll was based on contacts with 822 registered voters, chosen randomly from every county.

The poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percent — meaning if a comparable sample were drawn 20 times, results would vary by no more than 3.5 percent in 19 instances.

The poll showed Carter continuing to lead Republican Ronald Reagan in the presidential by a 12 percent margin, while incumbent Gov. Jim Hunt shows a commanding lead over Lake.

The poll showed:
— Carter ahead of Reagan

47 percent to 35 percent. Five percent favored independent candidate John Anderson, 1 percent favored other candidates and 12 percent were undecided.
— Hunt was ahead of Lake 71 percent to 20 percent, with only 9 percent undecided.
— Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was ahead of his Republican challenger, Bill Cobey, 61 percent to 20 percent. Nineteen percent were undecided in that race.

Break-In Arrest Is Made

Greenville police last night arrested three 16-year-olds on breaking, entering and larceny charges after they allegedly broke into Pitt Tire Service at 2204 Dickinson Ave., and took five new tires from the building.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who identified the three as Billy Charles Best of 302A Watauga Ave., Calvin James Ebron of 1706 Myrtle Ave., and Darrell Moore of 505 Watauga Ave., said two juveniles taken into custody in connection with the incident were turned over to juvenile authorities.

According to the chief, a report of a break-in in progress at the tire company was received at 9:25 p.m. About five minutes later, responding police units stopped a car in which the five youths were traveling, on Farmville Boulevard at the Bancroft Avenue intersection.

Cannon, who noted that entrance to the building was gained through a rear window, said the five tires were recovered from the vehicle in which the teenagers were riding.

Compassion Surprises

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rep. Robert Bauman, a spokesman for conservative causes who created a furor when he acknowledged having had homosexual tendencies, says he has been surprised to find that liberal Democrats have been compassionate about his plight.

Bauman, a Maryland Republican, said suggestions that he resign by prominent conservatives such as columnist William F. Buckley, Jr. and Sen. Barry Goldwater hurt him.

"Strangely enough, I would say that the compassion has come from the more moderate Republicans and from the very liberal Democrats and some middle-of-the-road Democrats, many of whom I was rather surprised ... many of whom I've never been that close to," he said in a copyright interview published in the Sunday News American.

Bauman, 43, acknowledged Oct. 2 that he had been charged with sexually soliciting a 16-year-old boy in Washington, D.C. Bauman pleaded innocent to the charge, but said he had "homosexual tendencies" triggered by a drinking problem. Officials agreed to drop the charge if Bauman completed a program for alcoholics.

Bauman said that if he is re-elected Nov. 4, "I am going to present my views, maybe with a lot more humility and understanding and give and take."

A poll published by the Baltimore Sun said Bauman was trailing Democratic challenger Royden P. Dyson by 21 percentage points.

Cosby Suggests Elect All 3

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Each of the three major presidential candidates has his deficiencies, but as a team they might work pretty well, says comedian Bill Cosby, who has decided to endorse them all.

"One is mellow, the other just wants to kill, and the other one wants to give everything away," Cosby said of candidates Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John Anderson.

"It's an oval office. Just put all three of 'em in it. They'd fight all the time, but at least we'd have something," Cosby said Saturday. He was performing in the Spokane area.

INAUGURATES TUNNEL — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat cuts a ribbon inside the Ahmed Hamdi tunnel, which connects mainland Egypt with the Sinai Desert, during inauguration ceremonies Saturday. The tunnel, which is about a mile long and runs under the Suez Canal, is the only land link between Asia and Africa. Looking on as Sadat cuts ribbon are: Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak, left, Minister of Reconstruction Mohammed Kafrawi, and presidential adviser Sayed Marei. NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined in slower trading today amid worries that interest rates may climb again.

Higher interest rates tend to attract money out of stocks and into interest-bearing investments.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 5.72 to 937.88 by midday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to 15.21 million shares down from 19 million in the previous session.

Analysts said a report by the Federal Reserve which showed continued growth in basic money measurements had aggravated worries about interest rates and inflation. The report came out Friday after the close of NYSE trading.

Uncertainties about the presidential election next week and the fate of the 52 American hostages in Iran also have tended to undermine traders' confidence in recent sessions, analysts say.

By midday today, losing issues outnumbered gainers by almost 3-to-1 on the NYSE.

Among actively traded issues, Natamats dropped 1 1/2 to 37 1/2. Trading included a block of 125,000 shares at that price.

Southland Royal lost 2 1/2 to 65 1/2 and a company which last week spun off from Southland, Permian rose 1 1/2 to 23 1/2.

Oil company stocks were generally lower. In active trading Exxon lost 1/2 to 77 1/2; Atlantic Richfield fell 1 1/2 to 58 1/2 and Mobil dropped 1 to 80.

Gold and silver stocks bucked the lower market trend. ASA Ltd. gained 1/2 to 83 1/2; Dome Mines rose 1 1/2 to 117 1/2; Homestake gained 2 to 79 1/2.

The NYSE composite index fell 0.65 to 74.25. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped 1.84 to 353.60.

Extensive Damage To House By Fire

A Sunday night fire caused extensive damage to a wood frame house at 1111 South Washington St., Fire/Rescue Department officers reported.

Firemen, called to the scene at 7:40 p.m., reported flames had broken through the roof of the dwelling by the time they arrived.

Officers said the fire apparently started from a faulty fire place, traveled up the inside of a wall, and into the attic of the one-story dwelling, causing extensive damage to the structure.

Firefighters remained on the scene for two hours combating the blaze and conducting overhaul operations.

Youth Dragged By A City Bus

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A teen-ager apparently thrown from his car in a traffic accident died after being dragged more than a half-mile by a city bus, police reported.

Police Sgt. Robert Trout said Sunday that Mark Arguelles, 18, of Westchester, died at the scene Saturday night.

Trout said the bus had stopped at the accident scene before continuing on its route. The bus traveled nine blocks before the driver discovered Arguelles under the vehicle, he said.

Trout said that Arguelles apparently was thrown from his car when it was broadsided by another vehicle after Arguelles failed to stop at the intersection. Police did not know how he wound up under the bus. No citations were issued in the incident.

Concern Over 'Agent Orange'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam Veterans of America, an organization of former servicemen, says it has received 11,655 inquiries about the health effects of exposure to Agent Orange since it set up a toll-free telephone number six months ago.

Agent Orange, a defoliant used in South Vietnam to deny Communist forces cover in the jungles, contained dioxin, a toxic contaminant. Many veterans blame a variety of ailments, ranging from nerve disorders to cancers, on contact with the substance. But the Veterans Administration has disputed this, pending the results of a health study on thousands of veterans.

The toll-free number has now been changed to 1-800-424-7275, a spokesman for Vietnam Veterans of America said Sunday.

Rookie QB To Start For Miami

NEW YORK (AP) — David Woodley, who wasn't even a full-time starter in college, is currently the only rookie starting quarterback in the National Football League. And a national audience will see what he can do tonight when Woodley leads the Miami Dolphins against the New York Jets.

"It's kind of like I've got a lot to learn and no time to learn it," said Woodley, who shared quarterback duties with Steve Ensminger at Louisiana State last season and was the 214th player chosen in the NFL draft.

Woodley had an impressive training camp, prompting Coach Don Shula to trade backup quarterback Guy Benjamin to New Orleans. That left Woodley as Miami's No.3 passer behind Bob Griese and Don Strock.

Shula alternated his quarterbacks early in the season, with Woodley getting his first shot as a starter on Sept. 28 against New Orleans. That turned into a disaster when he was intercepted three times in the first half before being yanked in favor of the veteran Griese.

"I was disappointed," said Woodley. "I knew one of the biggest things I had to look out for was to get down on myself. I had to go back to the drawing board."

He did, and last week he found a formula for success. The 6-foot-2, 185-pounder from Shreveport, La., completed 11 of 17 passes in a 17-14 victory over Buffalo.

"I thought he did an outstanding job," Shula said of Woodley. "He kept his cool and there was good communication... You take everything into consideration, the pressure that was on him, the way he reacted to the responsibility and I was very happy with him."

"He does what he's supposed to do," one NFL scout said of Woodley. "He stays out of trouble and he gives the Dolphins a dimension they don't have with Griese or Strock: he can move."

Miami is still very much in the running for a playoff berth with a 4-3 record going into the final game of the first half of the NFL season.

The Jets, on the other hand, are a disappointing 1-6. Their defense has played well the last three weeks but the only victory was a 14-7 decision at Atlanta two weeks ago.

The Jets, led by Kevin Long and Scott Dierking, have rushed for 339 yards in their last two games. The emphasis on the run is at least partially a product of injuries to wide receivers Lam Jones, Wesley Walker, Derrick Gaffney and Paul Darby.

Spurs Now Spurred By A Defense That Defends

By The Associated Press
George Gervin is still doing the bulk of the scoring for the San Antonio Spurs this year, but now the team has a new coach and a defense that actually defends.

The Spurs' game plan in the '70s was to give the ball to Gervin and outscore the other team.

That formula only worked about half the time as Gervin led the National Basketball Association in scoring three times and the Spurs had one of the worst defenses in the league. After a season-opening loss, Coach Stan Albeck's new system has resulted in eight victories in a row, including a 108-102 road triumph Sunday night over the defending league champion Los Angeles Lakers.

"This year we play more as a team than in years past," Albeck said after San Antonio's latest triumph. "Our second group was the key to our win tonight. We're playing great defense. And great defense wins in this league."

"We're playing good basketball," said Gervin, who led the Spurs with 25 points. "Stan has initiated a good system to play by, with everyone on the team contributing."

Lakers forward Jamaal Wilkes agreed that the Spurs are a different team.

"They play more of a team game than before. Everybody contributes, and they are full of confidence."

The Lakers led 32-20 after one quarter, but a 35-13 spurt by San Antonio gave them a 10-point halftime margin. The Spurs didn't take the lead for good until Gervin hit a jumper with 4:08 remaining in the third quarter for a 70-69 advantage.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led all scorers with 30 points, while James Silas and Dave Corzine supported Gervin with 17 and 16 points, respectively.

Bucks 111, Bullets 88
Brian Winters led a 34-24 Milwaukee surge in the third quarter that put the game away, scoring 10 of his 17 points in the period.

Marques Johnson hit nine of his game-high 21 points in the same quarter for the Bucks, who won their sixth straight game. Elvin Hayes was high for Washington with 17.

Sonics 111, Blazers 96
Seattle broke a three-game losing streak behind the scoring of Fred Brown, who hit 28 points as starting guard Paul Westphal sat out the game with an injury.

Portland trailed only 94-92 with 5:31 remaining, but the Sonics outscored the Blazers 15-2 in the next four minutes to seal the victory.

Mychal Thompson scored 16 points to lead Portland.

There can be little doubt that the University of North Carolina has one heck of a football team this year.

Saturday afternoon, they went about the task of putting together the seventh straight win of the year for the Tar Heels, beating East Carolina, 31-3.

It marked one of the easiest victories the Heels have had in the seven game series, which now stands at 5-1-1 for North Carolina. Most of the games have been close and not settled until the final gun.

But Saturday afternoon, the Heels showed early that they have the stuff this year to deserve their high national ranking. And with the defeat of second-ranked Texas, the Heels should climb even higher in this week's poll.

The key to the whole thing is the defense. North Carolina's squad is a devastating, veteran crew that thoroughly gets the job done. They make life miserable for the quarterbacks and swarm over the ball carriers. About the only success East Carolina had in moving the ball came in single plays, and in a late series through the air against the number two secondary.

The lone Pirate score, which kept its scoring streak intact at 105 games, came after the recovery of an Amos Lawrence fumble in the first period. The three-pointer was only the second score against the number one defense in the first quarter this year.

The action once again pointed out the youth and inexperience of the Pirates. With no veterans in the offensive line, it made it much more difficult for the Bucs to move the ball against the highly experienced Heels. The injury to Carlton Nelson in the first half, too, hampered the Pirates as back-up Greg Stewart didn't really get into the swing of things until late in the game.

Carolina's next task will probably be its toughest. The Heels travel to Norman, Oklahoma, Saturday to meet the rugged Sooners. In years past, this would be an exercise in frustration for the Tar Heels.

But this season, there is an air of expectation in Chapel Hill. It could be done. If so, it will just about guarantee the Heels of a major post-season date.

Houk Set To Take Bosox Job

BOSTON (AP) — Ralph Houk, itching to get back into a baseball uniform after two years of retirement in Florida, was set to become manager of the Boston Red Sox today, 21 years after he first was offered the job.

The Red Sox called a news conference for 5 p.m., apparently to announce the signing of Houk as the club's sixth manager since 1965.

Although he will be 62 next August, Houk is considered by the Red Sox as the tough disciplinarian and teacher of young players to give the team a new image and restore sagging fortunes on the field.

Stung by the fall from championship contention and a drop of more than 300,000 in home attendance, to 1.9 million, General Manager Haywood Sullivan fired Don Zimmer as manager Oct. 1.

Sullivan drew up a list of possible successors, including Houk, Ted Williams, Frank Robinson, Ken Harrelson, Bob Lemon, Dick Howser and others. He apparently decided on Houk with the approval of his co-owners Buddy LeRoux and Mrs. Thomas A. Yawkey.

Houk, who rose from private to major and won a flock of military medals in the Army in World War II, became noted for his toughness in baseball as manager of the New York Yankees and the Detroit Tigers.

"He's a very capable man who doesn't stand for any bull," Boston coach and former Manager Johnny Pesky said. "When he talks to a player he does it in private. If you want to fight him, he'll fight you. He gets right to the nub of things."

Houk was a catcher with the Yankees for six full years and parts of two others. However, as backup to Yogi Berra and Elston Howard, he appeared in only 91 major league games.

He began managing at Denver of the American Association in 1955. Three years later he returned to the Yankees as a coach. He rejected an offer to manage the Red Sox in 1959 when the Yankees promised he would succeed Casey Stengel as manager in 1961.

As manager, Houk led the Yankees to American League championships for three years in a row. He then moved up to general manager in 1964.

downs from punt formation, while rookie fullback Tim Newsome twice scored from 1 yard out in the third quarter.

Eagles 17, Bears 14

Tony Franklin kicked an 18-yard field goal with 2:02 to play and Louie Giammona, filling in for the injured Wilbert Montgomery, ran for 79 yards to help the Eagles raise their record to 7-1, best in the NFL.

"I'm really excited to be

7-1," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. "A lot of people expected we would have a letdown this week, after beating Dallas, but we didn't."

Buccaneers 24, 49ers 23

Garó Yepremian's 30-yard field goal with 47 seconds remaining gave Tampa Bay its victory. It was the 198th field goal of his 13-year career.

Joe Montana completed 24 of 31 passes — including a club-record 13 in a row — for 200 yards for the 49ers.

Raiders 33, Seahawks 14
Jim Plunkett, who replaced the injured Dan Pastorini at quarterback for Oakland three games ago, threw three touchdown passes to Bob Chandler and Chris Bahr kicked four field goals as the Raiders posted their third straight victory.

Bills 31, Patriots 13

Joe Ferguson threw to Frank Lewis for two touchdowns and Joe Cribbs ran for 108 yards and two TDs as Buffalo snapped a three-game losing streak.

"We try to go into each week like it's an important game — but in reality you've got to look at this one as being the biggest," said Lewis.

"This was a big game for us because the Patriots were leading the conference and we knew we had to win," Cribbs added.

Falcons 13, Rams 10

Steve Bartkowski fired a 54-yard scoring strike to Alfred Jackson with 1:15 remaining to enable Atlanta to break Los Angeles' five-game winning streak.

"Bartkowski just told me to give him a good route and to be ready," Jackson said. "He just made a perfect pass."

Cardinals 17, Colts 10

St. Louis tied an NFL record set by Dallas in 1966 by sacking Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones 11 times in beating the Colts.

"It's been a long time since I've seen an offensive team so dominated," said Cards tackle Dan Dierdorf. "Offensively, we didn't play all that well. It was the defense that did it."

St. Louis' defense had recorded only seven sacks in the team's seven previous games before breaking loose against Baltimore.

Chiefs 20, Lions 17

Nick Lowery kicked a 52-yard field goal in the first half and a 40-yarder with 1:14 left as St. Louis beat Detroit despite 155 yards rushing and two touchdowns by Lions rookie Billy Sims.

Steve Fuller completed three straight passes to J.T. Smith for 43 yards to set up the kick that gave the Chiefs their fourth straight victory.

Redskins 22, Saints 14

Mark Moseley broke out of a season-long slump with five field goals as Washington handed winless New Orleans its eighth loss. Moseley, 4-for-14 going into the game, connected on kicks of 52, 50, 38, 35 and 28 yards in his best game as a pro.

Waitz First Woman To Finish Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — It's an elite group of runners that is given the privilege of sprawling on the floor of a cramped gym filled with the peppermint smell of linament.

Of the 14,012 who started the New York City Marathon, only the thousand or so "invited" runners could be sheltered from 46-degree weather and biting wind in the hours before the 26-mile race.

Indoors and out, competitors did stretching exercises and wished each other luck. But outdoors, running suits were complemented with such innovations as windbreakers fashioned from plastic garbage bags.

When the race began, a group of runners the size of a small town charged across the Verrazano Bridge as a military band played the theme from "Rocky." A world record two hours, 25 minutes and 41 seconds later, crowd favorite Greta Waitz of Norway smashed the women's world record for the third year in a row.

Waitz, a 27-year-old high school teacher from Oslo, was the first woman to cross the finish line, the 74th runner overall. Although she finished 69th overall last year, she still broke the world mark of 2:27.33 she set in last year's New York Marathon.

In her first New York marathon in 1978, Waitz was clocked in 2:32.30.

"I didn't go in to break a record — I went in to win a race," she said after the victory. "I'm pleased but also very tired."

Waitz said she and Patty Lyons-Catalano of Boston ran within sight of each other for the first eight or nine miles. But then, Waitz said, she pulled away and "I didn't see any women after that. I was running with the men the rest of the way."

"When I got to the half-point, I believed I could win it," she said. "I understood that I had a chance to run a record, but it depends on the wind."

Lyons-Catalano, who holds every American women's record from five miles to the marathon, wound up a distant second among the women with a time of 2:29.33. Yet the time broke her American record of 2:30.57.

The finishing line crowd gave Waitz a rousing welcome. "Sometimes I felt I was running in my hometown," she said. "My husband was at the Queensboro Bridge, but I couldn't hear what he told me because people were cheering."

TO ALL TELEPHONE COMPANY SUBSCRIBERS NOTICE OF HEARING

DOCKET NO. P-100, SUB 53 BEFORE THE NORTH CAROLINA UTILITIES COMMISSION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the North Carolina Utilities Commission has instituted an investigation into the rates, charges, and regulations applicable within North Carolina for long distance, WATS and interexchange private line service. This action is made necessary as a result of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company application for a rate adjustment as filed in Docket No. P-55 Sub 784, wherein Southern Bell proposes changes in rates, charges and regulations which, if approved in whole or in part for Southern Bell alone, would result in non-uniform rates for long distance services in North Carolina.

The Commission is of the opinion that it is in the public interest for uniform intrastate long distance, WATS and interexchange private line rates to be maintained for all telephone companies under its jurisdiction. Accordingly, the Commission has assigned this matter to Docket No. P-100, Sub 53, has instituted an investigation into said intrastate long distance, WATS and interexchange private line rates; has made all telephone companies under its jurisdiction parties to the investigation and has set the matter for hearing. The Commission's investigation is for the purpose of determining if changes should be made in the present intrastate rates for these services and, if so, if the rates should be made applicable to all telephone companies under the Commission's jurisdiction.

LONG DISTANCE MESSAGE TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE

The changes in long distance rates herein under consideration include changes in rates for all categories of intrastate toll calls, changes in the mileage bands, and the establishment of two new discount time periods during weekdays of 8:00 A.M. to 9:00 A.M. and 1:00 P.M. to 2:00 P.M. The present and proposed schedules are shown below:

CBS Opens New Shows For Season

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The new TV season officially begins tonight with the arrival on CBS of the very first new series premiere of 1980-81. The following is a viewers' guide, a list of pointers meant to assist the prime time consumer toward full enjoyment of the new TV year.

1. Turn off the TV and leave it off. Just kidding.
2. Remember there is a basic difference between actors' strike and, say, a garbage men's strike. In fact, in some cases the effect will be quite the opposite. When garbage men return to work, the smelly stuff goes away.
3. Try to recall the precise feelings you experienced last season when sampling the new series. This should have the effect of lowering your expectations, thereby lessening the chance of serious disappointment.

4. Finally, bear in mind that no matter how awful the new program at hand is, at least it's not "Speak Up America." That is already canceled, assuring this season some measure of success even before it begins.

You are now ready to experience the 1980-81 prime time television season. Happy watching.

CBS, has the honor of being the first new series out of the chute this strike-delayed season. It may remind baseball fans of a Tug McGraw fastball, which he has labeled The Peggy Lee Pitch. After he throws it, he asks himself, "Is that all there is?"

"Ladies Man" is pretty much an amalgam of the last 50 situation comedies to hit television, churned up and spit out as a 1980s version.

Different situation, same comedy.

The situation: Lawrence Pressman plays a single parent (oh, that enduring breed) raising a young daughter alone. Here's the difference. He is a writer at a women's magazine, the only man in the place.

The comedy: Sexual allusions and a goodly portion of precocious wit from the kid.

Pressman is perfect as the besieged hero, conveying just the right ambiguity demanded of the New American Male. You know, the tenderness and sensitivity of a woman encased in the masculine presence. His co-workers are Gretchen (Simone Griffeth), a beautiful, strident, mandodger; Andrea, a beautiful man-chaser; Susan (Allison Argo), who's beautiful and normal; and Holstein (Louise Sorel), the tyrannical (but beautiful) editor.

So far, so good (or at least, containing possibilities). Now comes the hard part — giving these folks something to say and do. A sample of what was settled for:

Andrea, describing her latest romance, gushes, "It was so romantic... We met at the Supermarket, in produce. I accidentally grabbed his zucchini."

And so it goes. Pressman encounters some sitcom-type problems, his fourth-grader solves them, and the new TV season is under way.

Talk-Back Television System Has Encountered Difficulties

By THOMAS RIZZO
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — QUBE, the nation's first talk-back television system, was supposed to revolutionize America's love affair with the tube. The revolution is under way now, but there have been some difficulties — and defections.

Three years ago, QUBE went on the air in this statistically typical community of 580,000, offering an opportunity to communicate with computers through TV.

Warner Amex Cable Communications described its system as a preview of television's future for a minimum of $3 a month in addition to its standard cable TV fee which some 36,441 households now pay.

Some 30,000 subscribers had signed up for QUBE when the service peaked in January, but since then 7,500 have dropped out, according to a Warner Amex employee who asked not to be identified.

as pay TV movies or sports events.

QUBE, available only in the part of Columbus where Warner Amex holds the cable TV franchise, has been used to sample public opinion on presidential speeches and on the national program "Speak Up America!"

Some 2,000 homes are wired for security, with round-the-clock computer surveillance against fire and theft — and panic buttons for medical or police emergencies.

This fall, people will be able to subscribe to a system that provides information retrieval, video computer games, stock market information and personal finance information.

"We've established the technology ... and now we have the technological capability to perform a lot of services," said Larry Wangberg, a Warner Amex vice president and former QUBE general manager.

The project has not been without setbacks for Warner Amex, which reportedly spent $20 million to $50 million developing it.

For example, all of the push-button consoles used to communicate with QUBE had to be replaced after about a year because some subscribers learned how to jimmy them to avoid being billed.

Former QUBE executives, now with other companies, say subscriptions might have reached 40,000 the first year if technical problems had not interfered.

"There were massive billing problems in the beginning," said one such executive, who did not want to be identified. "Customers were charged for programs they didn't watch or not charged for services they did watch."

Says Wangberg, "In the beginning we underestimated the complexity of some of the business support systems that go along with some of these services."

QUBE now has its own billing system and is perfecting marketing techniques — using advertising to generate call-in sales, direct mailing and door-to-door solicitation.

Warner Amex is planning a QUBE system in Pittsburgh, and says it will offer the system in part of Houston, some 42 communities in suburban Cincinnati and 15 in suburban St. Louis.

QUBE now offers access to 30 channels — including 10 reserved for pay programming. Planned consoles will have 110 channels.

It is by pushing a button on this book-size console that subscribers register opinions, cast votes and tune into educational TV. Punching the button signals a bank of computers at QUBE's main studio, where responses are tabulated.

Last year, QUBE subscribers could order from the American Express Christmas catalog at the punch of a button, a use Wangberg says interests retailers and manufacturers.

A Dim View Of Comedy Theme

NEW YORK (AP) — Situation comedies on television these days are "pitiful" and dwell too much on sex, says Jackie Gleason, star of the old "Honeymooners" series.

"Everything is sexual innuendo," Gleason said in an interview in the current issue of People magazine.

Another problem with the comedies, Gleason says, is a lack of good characters.

"If you're doing situation comedy, you have to have the people like you. That's what's probably wrong with the sit-coms today. There's no one you can really feel you want to like," said Gleason, who played the grouchy bus driver Ralph Kramden on "The Honeymooners."

How about the popular comedy-variety show "Saturday Night Live?"

"Horrible," Gleason says. "Shock isn't funny. Funny is funny."

Bertinelli Has TV Film Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Valerie Bertinelli of "One Day at a Time" plays a young bride whose husband is killed in Vietnam in the CBS movie "The Promise of Love," set for Tuesday, Nov. 11.

In the film, set in Southern California in 1967, Jameson Parker plays a civilian recreation director at Camp Pendleton Marine Base who helps her rebuild her life.

Jewelry And Cash 'Gone'

CHICAGO (AP) — Jewelry valued at about $25,000 and $400 in cash were stolen from the downtown hotel suite of actress Gloria DeHaven, police said today.

Miss DeHaven called police Sunday night to report the theft from her suite in the Blackstone Hotel, said police investigator Gregory Sellars.

The actress, in Chicago to star in the play "Tribute," discovered the loss after she returned to her room following a performance at the Blackstone Theatre, Sellars said.

She said her suite had not been ransacked but that her trunk, containing the jewelry, had been opened. She said she had had the jewels, valued at $25,000, in the trunk.

The actress said two diamond watches, earrings, a ruby ring, and jewelry that had sentimental value were taken.

Sellars said police believe the burglary was connected to two other jewelry thefts at the hotel Sunday. No arrests have been made in the thefts.

The bidding has proceeded:

2 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—North's rebid should sound an alarm of the first magnitude. He probably has a sub-minimum two-over-one response with long diamonds. The hand has all the earmarks of a misfit. Get out of the auction before the opponents start wielding the axe. Pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦K5 ♥KQ952 ♦83 ♠K764

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Slam is quite possible, but with no first-round control to show, you cannot be the one to press on recklessly. For the moment, be content with a bid of four clubs. Once partner learns of the double fit, he will become aggressive if his hand is rich with aces.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦85 ♥972 ♦AK73 ♠A874

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—For his vulnerable overcall, partner should have a hand that can take about six tricks with hearts as trumps. You have three-card support for partner's probable six-card suit, three top tricks and a potential ruffing value in spades. Surely your hand is worth four tricks to partner. Since six plus four equals ten, bid four hearts.

The bidding has proceeded:

1 ♥ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Make no mistake about it—you are headed for slam. It is simply a question of whether you are going to play a small or a grand slam. For a grand, you must find partner with exactly the right holding. Nothing you can do at this moment will elicit that information, so simply continue to describe your hand with a cue-bid of four spades.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦873 ♥Q92 ♦QJ872 ♠A6

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—In theory, your hand is worth 11 points in support of hearts, so the normal action seems to be a two diamond response, followed by a heart raise. With a hand that contains one ace, no king, and only three-card support, however, that series of bids is much too aggressive. A simple raise to two hearts will suffice. If partner cannot move after this encouragement, it's unlikely that game will have been missed.

Opera Contract Signing Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1980-81 Metropolitan Opera season, already delayed for a month, could resume in three to four weeks if the Met can solve its remaining labor disputes, an opera company spokesman says.

But just who might sing the leading parts remains in question. Lead singers were released from their contracts last month when management said it was canceling the season because of a dispute with orchestra musicians, and many quickly made other arrangements for the upcoming months.

The Met reached a tentative agreement Saturday with Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians. The contract reduces the number of performances the musicians must play each week from five to four — a stumbling block in the negotiations.

Union members were to meet today to consider ratification.

In the past, the musicians' agreement has provided a pattern in talks with the other unions at the Met.

Opera company spokesman David Reuben said Sunday he hoped the other talks could be wrapped up "in a couple of days" and the season could begin in three or four weeks.

"It's a lot of work, a lot of telephone calls and an incredible number of pieces to put together," Reuben said.

Reuben said he hoped the opera company also could make its scheduled tour, but said, "it's a question at this point."

The pact with the musicians, reached with aid of government mediators, includes four additional hours of rehearsals as part of a musician's basic work week.

Previously the base salary covered five performances a week, with extra pay for rehearsals.

The four-performance week for the musicians would not affect the company's schedule of seven evening performances and a Saturday matinee, but would require the hiring of some substitute musicians, officials said.

Met officials resumed talks Sunday with the American Guild of Musical Artists, which represents members of the chorus and ballet and solo singers who have been locked out along with the musicians since Sept. 29. The season was to have started Sept. 22.
