Iran Premier Vows No Crawling To U.S.

By The Associated Press

Iran has drafted a "just method" for releasing the 52 American hostages, Tehran radio said today, and Swedish airline officials reported a request for a standby airliner, possibly to fly the hostages out of Iran.

The radio statement said Iran's hostage plan, which it did not detail, should not be viewed as a sign of weakness because it will "expose the long criminal history of the U.S.A."

Tehran radio announced today that President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr would hold a news conference Saturday, but shortly afterward a spokesman said the conference was cancelled because the president had to "get out of town on urgent business." There was a brief flurry of speculation the conference had been called to deal with new developments in the hostage crisis.

In Stockholm, airline officials said a 199-seat DC-8 airliner is on standby possibly to fly the hostages out of Tehran on two-hour notice. The officials of Scanair, a subsidiary of SAS, Scandinavian Airline System, told reporters an unidentified company in London, acting on behalf of an undisclosed client, made the request.

Swedish Foreign Ministry spokesman Erik Pierre said the Foreign Ministry had been notified by Scanair of the request for a plane.

Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten, in a separate phone call to The Associated Press, said "the Foreign Ministry is not involved in this case." The U.S. State Department declined to comment on the report.

In Washington, a State Department official who asked not to be identified said he was aware of the Tehran radio commentary, but "actions speak louder than words."

George Havens, a spokesman for the department's Iran Working Group, said said the United States is hoping that the Iranian Parliament will make a favorable decision Sunday on release of the hostages.

Three days of Parliament debate on the hostages ended in sharp disagreement Wednesday and a public session scheduled for Thursday was postponed because recalcitrant deputies staged a boycott and prevented a quorum. They said they did not want any action on the hostages until after the U.S. presidential elections and did not want to help President Carter.

Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, in a separate statement, said Iran was not prepared to "accept becoming servants of the U.S.A." to obtain spare military parts it claims the Carter administration owes it.

Candidate Lake Claims He's Done Everything Possible In Campaign

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer
"I've done everything but kiss a baby during the campaign," Republican gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake commented here today in defending a campaign strategy that has been questioned by some members of his own party.

Lake, appearing at a morning press conference, acknowledged that he has not been as visible during the campaign "as I would have liked" but he contended that at times he has campaigned in "the traditional sense."

The candidate said a great deal of his time has been spent in trying to build a strong financial base to fund the necessary exposure elements of his campaign.

Speaking to news representatives at a local warehouse, Lake denied that any friction exists between his campaign organization and the influential Congressional Club, the political organization that is handling the candidate's schedule and much of his campaign work. Lake, while citing "no problems with the Congressional Club," emphasized that he is not reluctant to express any disagreement he may have with club policy or officials.

Lake said that the reported $2 million that his Democrat opponent Jim Hunt is spending on his re-election effort is "obviously way too much to spend on any statewide election." He said Hunt is "trying to buy the election." At the same time, Lake conceded that his own financial report was not filed on time due to "computer problems," but he said that the figures will show that he is spending only one-fourth of what Hunt has reported.

Lake used the warehouse setting to mention tobacco and charged that "Hunt is putting his political friendship with President Carter ahead of the interests of North Carolina tobacco farmers." He said that Carter has been described by Hunt as a "great friend of tobacco, but with friends like that, we sure don't need any enemies. He is the worst friend tobacco has had."

Lake said that "by placing his (Hunt's) own political interests first, Jim Hunt is contributing to the Carter administration's economic attack on tobacco."

He added that, "Governor Hunt has been a faithful supporter of the Carter administration. And he has failed to challenge the...administration's anti-tobacco policies."

Lake asked, "How can we expect the federal government to cease its attacks on tobacco when the governor of the number one tobacco state refuses to stand up for our farmers?"

The GOP hopeful said that, "Our tobacco farmers deserve more mature leadership than they are getting from Jim Hunt. As governor, I will represent North Carolina's interests — regardless of the political consequences."

Lake's brief stop in Greenville was part of a late-hour campaign tour by plane to several eastern North Carolina cities.

Aver Full Cooperation In Probe Of Billy Carter

By W. DALE NELSON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House denies President Carter was "remarkably uncooperative" with Justice Department investigators looking into his brother's Libyan dealings, and says he will meet with them as soon as he has the information they're looking for.

But sources familiar with the matter say the investigators have considered efforts to compel Carter to testify under oath.

A White House statement issued Thursday said, "The president and the White House staff have cooperated fully" with the investigation by the department's Office of Professional Responsibility into whether the administration acted properly in the handling of a government probe into the actions of Billy Carter, the president's brother.

The statement was issued after some of the contents of an interim report by the investigators became known.

The sources, who have seen the still-secret report, say it called the president "remarkably uncooperative" and contended that he scheduled and then canceled three interviews with department lawyers.

But the White House said the three meetings were merely postponed "because the production and examination of relevant White House records had not been completed." As soon as this is done, "the interview with the president will be promptly scheduled," the statement said.

Sources familiar with the report, asking that they not be identified by name, said the investigators threatened to consider "compulsory process," presumably a subpoena, if necessary to get the president's sworn testimony.

They said the report states the Justice Department investigation cannot be completed without that sworn testimony, so alternatives for "compulsory process" are being explored.

That implies a subpoena for the president, but the sources said the report, which was submitted Wednesday to the Senate's Billy Carter subcommittee, was not specific.

The sources said the report was critical of Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti, presidential national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and White House appointments secretary Phillip J. Wise Jr. as well as of the president himself.

Republicans demanded that the full report be made public, presumably before the presidential election Tuesday.

GOP presidential candidate Ronald Reagan said today of President Carter, "He does seem to be dragging his feet."

Stopped by reporters as he entered a downtown Pittsburgh hotel for a meeting with local union leaders, Reagan was asked if the reports of Carter's lack of cooperation with the investigation would help the GOP candidate's standing. "Well, I don't know the why of it, but I've always had a standard belief that if there's any appearance of wrongdoing then there ought to be a clear and open explanation to the people and an investigation," the GOP candidate said.

James Baker, a senior adviser to Reagan's campaign, said Thursday night: "A presidency built upon trust and integrity should not fear any investigation by the Justice Department. We call upon the president immediately to end his uncooperative tactic and cooperate fully as he has promised to do."

Senate GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said the subcommittee should release the report because of its "importance ... in connection with the conduct of administration officials at the White House and in the Justice Department."

Aides to the committee chairman, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Thurmond's request was being considered but it was not clear how soon a decision would be made.

HOMES FOR UNWED MOTHERS?

I would like to know if there is a special house for unwed mothers in North Carolina. If so, how do I get in contact and with whom do I get in contact? I will be looking for your answer in the paper. Hurry!

You have a choice of two local agencies both willing to quickly make an appointment to talk with you and arrange for you to enter a maternity home if you wish. Call either Fanchon Crawley at the Children's Home Society, 752-5847, or Pam Joyner at Pitt County Social Services, 758-2167.

There are two maternity homes in North Carolina, the Florence Crittendon Home in Charlotte and the Baptist Maternity Home in Asheville. Both agencies refer to both these homes and the Children's Home Society also often refers to the Seton House in Richmond, which is closer to Greenville than either of the other two.

Five Die From Fumes Of Car

WILLOW SPRINGS, N.C.

(AP) — Three Scotland County brothers and two teen-aged Wake County sisters were apparently the victims of carbon monoxide poisoning early today as they waited in a wrecked car for help.

According to the Wake County Sheriff's department, the car apparently spun out on a rural road, hit a traffic sign and became stuck in a ditch.

Lt. David Waller said the car's tailpipe was covered by mud. He said mud found on the pants of some of the men and on a jack in the car's trunk indicated they tried to get the car out of the ditch, then decided to wait in the car for help.

The men were identified as James Lee Rogers, 21, and his twin brothers, Ronald and Donald, both 23, all of Wagram. Waller identified the other victims as 17-year-old Peggy Smith and her sister, Juliette, 16, both of Fuquay-Varina.

Helms Praises East At Thursday Night's Rally

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer
U.S. Senator Jesse Helms praised Republican senatorial candidate John East last night and suggested that the present Democratic administration in Washington has done very little to support the tobacco program which is so vital to farmers in North Carolina.

Helms spoke before some 500 persons attending a dinner for East, who is trying to unseat incumbent Democrat, Sen. Robert Morgan, in Tuesday's general election.

Before Helms spoke, Wake County farmer Bailey Williamson told the audience that he brought the scrap tobacco issue to Helms' attention 2½ years ago, and that Helms has been trying ever since to get the administration to stop the flow of the high quality leaf into the U.S. at low "scrap" rates.

Helms, in praising East, said, "It takes three essential elements for good public service — intelligence, integrity and courage. John East has them all."

Turning to tobacco, Helms explained that the scrap tobacco issue involves, "top quality leaf grown in foreign countries...chopped up and sent into the United States at low tariff rates. It costs U.S. farmers a half-million dollars a day."

Every pound of the "misabled" tobacco that is imported, Helms said, "is one pound North Carolina growers are not able to sell."

"I asked them (President Carter and Secretary of Agriculture Bergland) to take a look at it 2½ years ago." All it would take, Helms suggested, to stop the flow of the scrap is a call from the president to the Customs Service. "All of a sudden, they've discovered the tobacco farmer."

"I believe we're going to elect a president next Tuesday who will pick up that phone and tell Customs to stop it."

"Get out and vote," Helms urged. "The question is how bad do you want Reagan and East to be elected. The point is, do we want to restore the stability of America?"

"We will not be in Washington and forget you," Helms said.

Turning to East, Helms said he supported him, "for what you are...for what you stand for," and termed the candidate, "the most impressive candidate we (Republicans) have this year."

"Each and every one of you do me a great honor by being here. Thank each and every one of you for your interest in what we've been doing. We are on the threshold of victory," East told the audience.

"The candidate is a small part of the whole," East suggested. "The key to victory is the people...just like you...who are willing to make it work, and it's just a great personal honor to be associated with this man," Jesse Helms.

"I'm trying," the candidate said. "Come next Tuesday, we'll see what happens."

East said he has tried to "conduct my campaign on the issues. My ability to attract Democrats who believe as I do," he said, is the key to success.

"No political party is sacred. What's sacred is the well-being and security of this nation. The great majority of Democrats, Independents and Republicans, share our concerns."

"The principal enemy of tobacco farmers and the tobacco industry is our own federal government," East charged, citing the scrap tobacco issue as "a glaring example of the indifference of our government."

Dear Abby

College Or Trade: Only Difference In The Degree

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our middle son, Greg (made-up name), is our problem. He is a very intelligent young man of 19 who went to college for one year just to please us, then he quit. "Why waste your money and my time?" he asked.

His grades were above average and he could have continued. His reason for quitting? He likes to work with his hands. He is now going to trade school, and we are so disappointed in him.

I'm not putting down people who work with their hands, but it seems to me that a man works with his hands only because he isn't smart enough to work with his mind. Greg's father and grandfather are physicians, and both Greg's brothers are lawyers.

Please put something in your column stating that a college degree is absolutely necessary these days. After Greg graduates from college, he can do anything he chooses, but we want him to finish college first. Thank you.

GREG'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: College is not for everybody. If Greg likes to work with his hands, that's what he should do. It's not true that those who work with their hands aren't smart enough to work with their minds. Handwork done well requires as much skill, talent and brains as a profession.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think it means when your partner makes love with his sox on?

MINE DOES

DEAR MINE: He could be in a hurry, suffering from athlete's foot, or maybe he just has cold feet.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a night person. I love to stay up late and sleep until noon. My wife of 40 years is a day person. She is up at the crack of dawn and goes to bed with the chickens.

Before I retired this was not a problem. Now that I no longer have a job, I would like to have fun and do the things I enjoy. I feel my wife should be willing to make the necessary adjustment. She refuses to cooperate, so I have been escorting a neighbor lady who likes to go out in the evening.

My wife is throwing a fit. She reads "Dear Abby" faithfully. Please tell her if she doesn't want to wind up sleeping alone, she'd better wake up.

NIGHT OWL

DEAR NIGHT OWL: If you're out at night and your wife goes to bed with the chickens and is up at the crack of dawn, she's sleeping alone most of the night anyway. Biological clocks are hard, but not impossible, to reset. A compromise is in order for both of you. Escorting your neighbor could be injurious to your marriage.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: The person who says he isn't interested in politics is like the drowning person who says he isn't interested in water. "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing" (Edmund Burke). VOTE! And thank God you're living in a country where you have that privilege.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You can't open the newspaper or a magazine these days without a story on writers who write from their homes for fun and profit... not necessarily in that order.

The last headline to come over my desk was depressing. It said, "HOUSEWIFE HASN'T THE TIME TO DEAL WITH WRITER'S BLOCK!"

It went on to tell about this woman whose magic fingers fairly flew across the typewriter keys eight hours a day, turning out one literary success after another.

Well, Bunkie, I've got the time for writer's block and when I don't have time, I make it!

- For those of you who are not familiar with the term "writer's block," allow me to explain. It's a fancy term used by writers to describe a condition when they can't write. It's when your fingers show up for work and your mind is still out to lunch. When your mind shows up, it isn't ready to settle down. You find yourself:
1. Timing a bug to see how long it takes to get from the baseboard to the ceiling.
  2. Reading the washing instructions label in your blouse and committing it to memory.
  3. Hearing a phone ring in the house next door or in the next apartment and yelling, "I'll get it."
  4. Picking up a waste can with your knees and calling your mother to tell her you've just discovered a way to tighten stomach muscles.
  5. Cleaning the soap out of your wedding ring with a paper clip.
  6. Examining the back of your knees for new broken veins.

7. Going through the Rolodex and trying to estimate the number of Christmas cards you'll need.

8. Indulging yourself by centering "GONE WITH THE WIND" on a title page and putting your own name under it.

I was on a panel of writers once of women who wrote from their homes and the woman next to me said her "well had never run dry." I felt like I was in the presence of a supreme being.

Had she never come back from a vacation, looked at the typewriter and couldn't remember how to insert the paper? Had she never bargained with God to tithe 10 percent for the rest of her life for just one coherent sentence? Had she never opened a window and shouted to no one in particular, "I don't need this job! My face is my fortune!"

I picked up the article and looked at the picture of the housewife again. I should have known better than to trust a woman who smiled as she wrote.

It's No Time To Play It Safe. The Stakes Are Too High.

"One of the things I've always admired about Jesse Helms was the fact that you don't have to wonder how he stands . . . particularly on major issues. You may not always agree with him . . . but you don't have to wonder how he's going to vote in the Senate.

If I am elected to serve you in the North Carolina House there will be times when I need to get more facts on a particular piece of legislation . . . to "feel the pulse" of Greene and Pitt Counties. But, there are some major political and moral issues in our country that practically every candidate is "staked out" on. Tax-Funded Abortions, The Equal Rights Amendment and the so-called New Generation

Law are examples of issues that have been discussed, debated, reported, argued over, polled, researched, voted on and kicked around for literally years.

As a candidate for the North Carolina House, I am firmly committed! I don't need "further study". I'm not "still looking into it". I'm not waiting to see which way the "wind blows" or what someone up the line wants me to do on these very fundamental issues.

I am opposed to funding abortions with public money. I will fight for the equality of women in the job market and society in general. But, I am opposed to the legal jungle an Equal Rights Amendment would produce. And, I am opposed to the additional bureaucratic control of the raising of our children by the state as implied in the New Generation Plan.

I do not feel that any political candidate should try to "play it safe" and skirt these very basic issues. I do not avoid a question of principle. I have more respect for an opposing viewpoint than no viewpoint.

I've taken my stand. You know what my principles are . . . in writing . . . in this newspaper. When you go to the polls Tuesday you won't have to wonder about Henry Aldridge."

Confusing Halloween And Christmas Spirits

By GAIL MICHAELS
Meg looks forward to Halloween the way other children look forward to Christmas. She begins to make her plans weeks in advance. In fact, she has been trying to decide on her costume since Labor Day weekend.

change." I suggested that we make a ghost costume from an old sheet. She was opposed. She pointed out that if she wanted to eat any of her candy before she got home, she'd have to push it through the hole for her nose.

She finally decided that this year she preferred a store-bought costume. I thought a cute little Bugs Bunny costume would be just the thing. She was appalled. "Cute is not what you're s'posed to be on Halloween," she said scathingly. "To make the right impression you must be simply frightening."

Her choice was a stunning werewolf costume. "Raaaar!" she growled from behind the mask as she wriggled her fingers at the check-out woman. "Raaaar!"

The woman jumped back. "Goodness, you scared me." "I'm s'posed to," Meg crowed. "I'm an evil spirit."

"I can see that. You're going to terrify everybody this Halloween." Meg nodded solemnly. "Everybody but my friend, Maura. She just loves evil spirits. She even believes in the Loch Ness Monster—the one in Scotland, not at Busch Gardens. She wants it to be real. And she knows all about sharks and bats and Dracula." Meg bared her teeth and wriggled her fingers again. "Raaaar!"

"Is this kid in school yet?" the woman asked me. "Just during the morning. She starts kindergarden next year."

"I'll bet you can't wait." She didn't know the half of it. After we made our purchase, I took my small spook home and listened gravely as she laid her final plans.

"I'm gonna wear my costume to school Halloween and chase my teacher down the hall. She'll be scared out of her pants!"

"Meg!" "Well, I'll let her know it's me before she faints or something. But Halloween night you've got to paint my face green so that if some lady says, 'Who have we got here?' and lifts my mask, she'll turn pale with fear." She rubbed her hands together. "And I'm gonna give out our candy, too, and scare everybody who comes to our door."

"How are you going to trick-or-treat and give out candy, too? You'd have to be in two places at the same time."

She thought a minute; then her face brightened. "Ooooooo," she moaned as she stalked around the room. "Who knows where the shadow goes?"

Having already had an overdose of morbidity, I tried to change the subject. "Well, after Halloween comes Christmas. Have you thought about what you want?"

"A black cloak and fangs!"

I'm asking for a silver bullet.

FOCUS Festival For Witches

For centuries, people have recognized Halloween, October 31, as a festival for witches. Witches are people who are believed to use magic powers, usually to harm other people or damage property. The word "witch" comes from an Anglo-Saxon word, "wicca," meaning "wise one" or "magician." At various times, people have blamed witches for destroying crops, creating storms, and turning persons into animals. From the 1400s through the 1700s, the church in Europe killed thousands of women for witchcraft. Sometimes people would tie a suspected witch's arms and legs, and throw her into deep water. If she floated, she was guilty of witchcraft. If she drowned, she was innocent.

DO YOU KNOW — What is an assembly of 13 witches called?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Thomas Jefferson succeeded John Adams as president.

Voters Still Must Decide

The Great Debates of 1980 are completed. President Carter and GOP Challenger Ronald Reagan came face-to-face in a nationally televised debate and presented their views to the public.

Who won? Well it wasn't that kind of a debate. Both men clearly have broad experience in public speaking, television appearances, answering questions from the press and even engaging in debate. Carter has served as president for four years and before that, he had served as governor of Georgia. Ronald Reagan served as governor of California and has vast experience as an actor and on television.

Both are thoroughly accustomed to the rigors of campaigning. Thus it would have been surprising, indeed, if either of them had performed dismally in the debates. There were differences, of course.

Reagan presents a more imposing appearance on television. Carter's delivery is not considered the best. On the other hand Carter perhaps came across a little more presidential because he is the president.

Nevertheless there was no general consensus as to who won or who lost the debate simply because neither lost. Nor were there many new thoughts brought out by the candidates in the debate. What they said had been said many times before.

The debate was not a waste, of course. If nothing else it brought the two candidates face-to-face, so their contrasts could be emphasized.

The undecided voters, however, could find little there to help them make up their minds. They will have to make their choices before Tuesday based on the overall campaign.

No Reprieve On Nov. 4

WASHINGTON — The sun was just rising over the horizon when McNally heard the shuffle of feet. There were four men, including a minister who was reading the Bible.

"Okay, McNally, it's Nov. 4. It's time to vote."

"Any word from the governor?" McNally asked.

"No, there doesn't seem to be any chance of a pardon. You're going to have to go in to the booth and pull the switch."

"I don't want to do it," McNally said. "I'm innocent. Why do I have to vote?"

"We're sorry. But we are only here to take you to the booth."

The minister came in. "McNally, it's God's will. We will all pray for you. Is there any last word of comfort I can offer you before you go into the polling station?"

"Why me, Father? I've been a good man. I worked hard. I never did anything to hurt anybody. Why do I have to vote?"

"Everyone has to vote sooner or later. Go bravely, my son. It won't take long to pull the lever, and then it will all be over."

"I'm scared, Father. I've never been so frightened in my life."

"We're all frightened of the unknown, my son. But try to think of it as taking a nice journey into a beautiful country that you have never seen before. Imagine that you will be reunited with all the loved ones who have voted before you. Pray with me."

One of the men said, "Come on, McNally. You're just stalling for time. We gave you what you wanted for dinner, and let you order anything for breakfast. We have to get the show on the road."

"Can I see my wife before I vote?"

"It won't do any good. She can't help you now. Nobody can help you."

"I won't go. You can't make me go."

"McNally, you can either walk into the voting booth or we can drag you there kicking and screaming. Which way is it going to be?"

"Okay, I'll go, but someday you're going to find out you got the wrong man to vote and it will be on your conscience forever."

Two men walked on each side of McNally as the minister read from his Bible.

Other men along voters' row shouted at him.

"Good luck, McNally. We'll see you soon."

The group arrived at the green door.

By this time McNally was perspiring and shaking. One of the men opened the door and McNally saw the forbidding booth. A man was making the final adjustments on the voting machine.

A registrar was seated at a desk. He checked off McNally's name.

"Maybe the governor has pardoned me and knows it," McNally said.

The man in charge said, "We've been in touch with his office and he says there is no reprieve. You're going to have to vote."

Two men took McNally by his arms and shoved him into the booth. They pulled the green curtain behind him. They could only see his legs, which were quivering.

Suddenly there was a scream from behind the curtain.

McNally had pulled the lever for one of the three presidential candidates, and his scream would be remembered by everyone in the room for the rest of their lives.

High Hopes In Detroit

Third quarter losses by the top three domestic auto makers have the ring of the federal government deficit.

General Motors lost $567 million in the three month period; Ford, $595 million and Chrysler, $567 million.

Such losses are awesome for this industry which is so basic to U. S. economic well-being.

Still there is optimism in Detroit. Some of the loss was caused by heavy expense of changing to production of light-weight high gas mileage cars. The auto makers have high hopes that these cars will win the favor of American motorists.

Exemptions Issue

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — In just three years, a number of problems have become obvious in North Carolina's homestead exemption for older people.

Designed both to provide relief in local property taxes for low-income citizens, and to encourage retirement living in the state, it has become clear that the system provides too little help to too few, and is too complicated.

The law, adopted by the General Assembly, allows a $7,500 exemption on local property taxes for those aged 65 or older when disposable income is less than $9,000 yearly.

For the average person, this break provides relief of between $75 and $150, depending on the local tax rate and property valuation procedure.

Several problems have come to the attention of the General Assembly's Committee on Aging chaired by State Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood.

First, says Messer, the disposable income level is both difficult to substantiate and inflexible in such inflationary times.

Confusing
Second, the exemption must be requested during tax listing each year with a special entry on local tax forms. The forms vary from county to county and may be confusing or hard to notice.

Third, while the exemption should be signed for in January, a later deadline has been allowed, but a change in the date this year has caused many taxpayers to lose their exemptions. Gov. Jim Hunt says he will push a proposal in the 1981 General Assembly to restore the original deadline, and make the change retroactive so that those who lost their tax break will recover it.

Finally, for many low-income people, the homestead exemption simply does not provide enough help to allow them to keep their major changes be made in the homestead exemption, beyond restoring the registration deadline which was used in previous years.

BILL NOBLITT

homes. Study continues on a "circuit-breaker" proposal to protect these individuals.

As property values have soared, with correspondingly higher taxes, numerous older citizens find they are unable to pay the bill. A circuit-breaker would allow the occupant to remain in the house while the tax bills mount up until such time as the property changes hands. The accumulated taxes would then fall due. Thus, no tax payments would be required until the owner died, or the property is sold.

Meanwhile, Hunt and the Commission on Aging are considering a proposal to the 1981 General Assembly that

To the editor:

The Claude Sitton column in Sunday's News and Observer made a strong attack on the New Right. Obviously, Mr. Sitton is a member of the Old Left, although he also subscribes to the new tenets which the Old Left has adopted for the period of this national election. These temporarily held tenets include (1) a strong US defense (2) fiscal responsibility (3), and (3) cleaning out the Bureaus. Note that all politicians are voicing these tenets at election time, and that the Old Left always votes contrary to them. TV statements by Carter, McGovern and Morgan are good illustrations of vocal adoption of these tenets for electioneering, but their official actions in Washington belie their conversion to those tenets.

Mr. Sitton apparently thinks that any support of New Right politics is naturally evil and he uses the name Birchers to personify the evil of the New Right. He associates Birchers with the evils of profits, especially if the profits are by oil companies, which he apparently thinks are all Big Oil.

Mr. Sitton thinks that the support given to New Right candidates such as Reagan and East, whom he names, is because the supporters think they have something to gain thereby. Mr. Sitton is absolutely correct. We of the New Right believe that our gain will be resurgence of America as the land of the free. We believe that the Old Left is leading American rapidly to destruction by forces both internal and external, either being lethal.

That is why hundreds of thousands of New Righters throughout America have contributed sizeable amounts to New Right causes and candidates. This multitude of citizens are acting as individuals. There are no checkoffs, no portion of required dues, no union-supervised "volunteer" services.

Strength For Today

FOLLOWING THE TRUE GUIDE

Oh, that blinking blue light! We know what it means and whom it means. The traffic officer is bidding us slow down and turn in at the curb.

Yes, we went through a red light. We certainly would not have done so intentionally, but the trouble was that we were following the guy in front. He was halfway across the street when the light turned, and instead of watching the light we watched him and followed him.

Much of the trouble in life comes from following the guy ahead instead of obeying the traffic light. And there are many different kinds of traffic light. On the highway it is represented by the respect for law which every person should have. In the realm of everyday living it is an innate sense of decency which makes us avoid loose moral behavior. For the Christian is the teaching of the Bible.

Following the other fellow gets us into needless trouble when we have other infallible guides. — Elisha Douglass

Carter Has Lead In Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — In a nationwide in-person survey completed Monday, the Democratic ticket of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale has moved ahead of the Republican ticket of Ronald Reagan and George Bush; 45 to 42 percent; with the independent slate of John Anderson and Patrick Lucey winning 9 percent of the likely vote.

In the previous, mid-October, survey; the GOP ticket held a 45-to-42 percent lead over the Democratic ticket, with the independent ticket the choice of 8 percent. Thus, in the two-week interval between the two surveys the Carter slate has gained three percentage points and the Regan ticket has declined by the same amount.

Factors Behind Gains For Carter

Factors helping to explain Carter's gains in recent weeks include:

"Carter has made gains as the candidate best able to keep peace. In a recent Newsweek survey, Carter was seen by 52 percent of voters as better able to keep the nation out of a third world war compared to 23 percent who named Reagan. In mid-September, the results were 38 percent for Carter and 23 percent for Reagan.

"Despite continuing double-digit inflation — the government reported last week that inflation was running at an annual rate of 12 percent — 48 percent of respondents in the Newsweek survey said they had a great deal or a fair amount of confidence in President Carter's ability to deal with the economy against 54 percent with a similar amount of confidence in challenger Reagan. However, the CHANGE in confidence since June favors the president: Confidence in Carter's ability to handle the economy has increased (up five percentage points since June), while confidence in Reagan's ability has slipped in the interim (down nine percentage points).

Following are the questions asked:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY, which would you vote for — the Republican candidates Reagan and Bush, the Democratic candidates Carter and Mondale, or the independent candidates Anderson and Lucey?"

Those who named other persons or who were undecided were asked:

"As of today, do you lean more to Reagan and Bush, more to Carter and Mondale, or more to Anderson and Lucey?"

The results shown below are from the three test elections in which the full tickets were offered to likely voters for their choice:

	Test Elections (Choices of likely voters)
	Carter-Mondale	Reagan-Bush	Anderson-Lucey	Other/undecided
Latest (Oct. 24-26)	45%	42%	9%	4%
Oct. 10-12	42	45	8	5
Sept. 12-15	37	41	15	7

For comparison, following are earlier test election results, when registered voters were asked to choose among the three presidential candidates, with vice presidential running mates not included:

	Test Elections (Choices of registered voters)
	Carter	Reagan	Anderson	Other/undecided
Aug. 15-18	39%	38%	13%	10%
Aug. 1-4	29	45	14	12
July 11-14	33	37	21	8
July 27-30	32	37	22	9
June 13-16	35	33	24	8
May 30-June 2	39	32	21	8
May 16-19	40	32	21	7
May 2-5	38	33	21	8
April 11-14	42	34	18	6
March 28-31	40	34	21	5

The low undecided vote in the latest Gallup trial here is due to two principle factors: the use of in-person as opposed to telephone interviews and a secret ballot technique which approximates the actual voting situation.

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,487 adults, 18 and older; of whom approximately 800 are considered to be "likely voters." The interviews were conducted in scientifically-selected localities across the nation Oct. 24-26.

For results based on the sample of likely voters, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be four percentage points in either direction.

It is important to bear in mind that the current survey findings refer to the popular, not the electoral vote. To report the electoral vote, it would be necessary to conduct separate, full-scale surveys in each of the 50 states.

Other Ways To Finance Home

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) —

There's more than one way to finance a home, as young Americans have learned in recent years. Many thousands have managed to conclude deals by using their wit, nerve and salesmanship.

Sellers have helped. Some brokers say that nearly half their sales of existing homes have involved such financing in one form or another, with benefits frequently accruing to seller as well as buyer.

The simplest form of seller financing is the first mortgage, in which the seller performs the same role as a lending institution, accepting a down payment to begin with and regular monthly installments thereafter.

This form often involves a seller with a large equity buildup and a desire to avoid the maximum tax on his gains, or in some instances, a seller seeking a monthly income, perhaps to supplement a pension.

If less than 30 percent of the price is accepted as downpayment, with the remaining payments spread over at least another year — and usually several years or many years — the seller may defer or lower his taxes.

Variations abound. Brokers report that in some instances the seller gives a 5-year mortgage but with monthly payments based on a 30-year amortization table, which results in a balloon payments after 5 years.

The assumption made is that the buyer will be in a better financial position five years later or that financing at that time will be more easily obtained, and maybe even at better interest rates.

During this time, of course, the buyer builds up considerable equity from having made regular payments and from appreciation, and thus becomes a more attractive risk to the conventional lender.

Such contracts involve dangers, of course, because not everyone will be better off five years from now. And the prospect of better financing terms is remote. The trend has been to steadily higher rates.

Properly written, the seller's end of the bargain might be saleable at a discount to another party, and thus permit him to get off the hook. The buyer, however, generally has no choice but to pay up or default.

Renting, with the option to buy, has also proved useful to both seller and buyer. The seller receives rental income, and continues to benefit from appreciation and tax deductions. And while renting, the option holder is able to study the property, locale and perhaps his own mind.

Again, there are variations. The buyer, for example, might be allowed to apply rental payments, or a part of them, toward reducing the purchase price. The seller, however, might charge for giving an option.

From the viewpoint of the buyer, an option has the benefit of making time stand still. Though he might not purchase the property for a year or so, he nails down the price, sometimes at current market value.

As usual, there is opportunity and risk for both parties. The option buyer might benefit from a sharp rise in market value. For $1,000 he conceivably could benefit by $5,000. He might also find himself unable to buy, and in that instance might be forced to forfeit his $1,000.

For the seller, the option gives some assurance that a sale will take place, or that if it doesn't he may keep the option payment.

Families have been helping. Some empty nesters — parents with children grown and on their own — find their big house excessive. They sell it. And, because of tax law changes, they often find themselves without capital gains taxes to pay. It may leave them with money to invest.

What better investment than to take money that once might have gone to Uncle Sam, and lend it — even give it, sometimes without gift taxes — to your children? Many parents have asked and answered that question.

Lots of variations to this style of financing. Interest payments, for example, may be delayed until the buyer is older and better able to afford it, and the lender is retired and in a lower income tax bracket.

Friends have been helping. Unable to afford down payments or carrying costs on their own, young couples have pooled their resources to buy two-family houses or large single-family houses that can be divided.

These and many other financing variations, you will note, have little or nothing to do with the institutional market, which itself is in flux, with variable rates, shared equity, rollover mortgages, et al.

Conclusion: Ingenuity in home financing hasn't been lost, not even dulled. The challenge keeps it alive. Deprived of regular financing, Americans have learned there's more than one way to finance a house.

Socialist Jamaica Leadership Is Overwhelmingly Defeated

by LEW WHEATON
Associated Press Writer
KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Edward Seaga, a Harvard-trained financial expert, scored an overwhelming victory over socialist Prime Minister Michael Manley in Jamaica's bullet-riddled election and vowed to restore economic growth, pursue a balanced foreign policy and send Cuba's ambassador back to Havana.

Vote-counting was suspended for the night after gunmen strafed the central Electoral Commission and main police station in Kingston. Authorities said one policeman was killed, increasing to three the number of people slain on election day.

Before the counting stopped, the returns indicated Seaga's party would take as many as 51 of the 60 seats in House of Representatives, nearly four times more than the 13 seats it held. Manley's party had held 47 seats. Final returns and Seaga's installation as prime minister were expected later today.

Seaga, in a victory speech after the polls closed Thursday, called the win by his conservative Jamaica Labor Party over Manley's People's National Party the most "dramatic election victory in the history of this country."

Seaga said the win would enable him "to form a government with a comfortable majority" and that "our first priority will be the restoration of economic progress. Our job is to rebuild an almost battle-torn, war-torn economy and restore it to health."

He pledged to "restore a balanced foreign policy. Do not expect a high profile in any single direction. We are a member of the Third World, a non-aligned country, and not tied to the coattails of any superpower. "The people have spoken and it is a decision against communism in Jamaica and against the reckless mismanagement of the economy by the People's National Party." Seaga said he would "pursue no witch hunt against people with beliefs different from our own."

However, he said he will request the removal of the ambassador representing Fidel Castro's communist regime. "We have already indicated we are displeased with the conduct and behavior of the present Cuban ambassador to Jamaica. He has offended us as a people and a nation. When I am sworn in I will ask the Cuban government to relieve him," Seaga said.

Ulysses Estrada, the ambassador, has been accused by Seaga of being a top figure in the Cuban secret police and interfering in Jamaica's internal affairs through spying.

Manley, in a post-election news conference, conceded that his party suffered a major defeat. Asked what his party had done to cause such a massive loss, he said, "If the result of the election was fair, then what we did wrong was to challenge the power of Western financial institutions and if that is the final conclusion I will remain unrepentant and un-reconstructed."

Seaga has blamed Manley's Cuban ties and friendship with Castro for scaring away foreign investment and professional and managerial workers, thousands of whom have left Jamaica to seek opportunity in the United States, Canada and Britain.

Seaga claimed Manley's long-range aim was to make

Jamaica a communist country along Cuban lines. He blamed Manley for Jamaica's economic plight — one-third of the 1 million workforce unemployed, 30 percent inflation, and a severe shortage of foreign exchange.

Manley denounced the allegations about communism as a "smear tactic," and counter-charged that Seaga wanted to derail Jamaica's move toward "democratic socialism" and return the country to capitalist "elitists."

Noblitt Col. ...

The effect would be to make all citizens over 65 eligible, with no income limitations and no annual recertification.

Major Loss
Preliminary figures indicate such a change would result in a loss of income to the counties somewhere between $14 and $20 million each year. Some county officials are certain to oppose such a move, and some still oppose the limited exemption now in effect. A means of providing state funds to offset the local loss will likely be needed before the measure would be adopted by the General Assembly.

Especially hard hit are those counties in which retired people are congregating, such as Dare, Moore, and Polk. The dilemma is that as efforts are made to promote retirement living in the state, those areas in which retirement is most popular must provide more and more service for increased populations with less local income.

Tax specialists predict that eventually the state must find a way to assume the financial loss in both the homestead exemption and the circuit-breaker before local opposition can be overcome.

Scholarship Awarded To AF-ROTC Cadets

ECU News Bureau
Four students in the ECU Air Force ROTC detachment have been awarded

$7,000 Air Force Scholarships. All are pursuing majors in fields important to Air Force Operation and will be commissioned second lieutenants upon graduation from ECU.

The four cadet recipients are Elizabeth Henry of Springfield, Va., Jacqueline Womack of Pinehurst, David Brown of Gainesville, Fla., and Eleanor Avery of Greenville. Miss Avery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Avery of Route 2, a graduate of Conley High School and a chemistry major at ECU.

According to Lt. Col. James Thomas who heads ECU's AFROTC unit, each scholarship includes $3,000 for personal expenses, with the remainder for books, fees and tuition.

The Air Force provides scholarships each year to selected students enrolled in fields most essential to Air Force needs. These included mathematics, physics, computer science, chemistry, nursing and industrial technology.

Dedicating Office Facility Here Today

The dedication and open house for the newly occupied office facility at 200 W. Third Street here was scheduled from 4-6 p.m. today for guests invited by the owners and tenants of the building.

Louis Clark, who developed the property with Clarence Tugwell under the name of T&C Co., said that the law firm of Pegram, Hahn & Roberts occupies one half of the one-story structure, while the brokerage firm of Wheat First Securities has offices in the other half.

Clark said that construction on the 4,000 square foot building began last October and the tenants were agreed upon in the spring. The building, which features a Spanish architectural theme, has been occupied for some two months. Landscaping around the building compliments the exterior appearance, he added.

The structure was designed and built by J. H. Hudson Inc. of Greenville.

The developer pointed out that the lot, located at the corner of Third and Washington Streets, was purchased from the Redevelopment Commission. He said the construction of the building was in keeping with the commission's goal of property development by private enterprise and subsequently increasing the city's tax base.

Lake Says Rival Became 'King James'

By The Associated Press
Republican gubernatorial nominee I. Beverly Lake Jr. took to the campaign trail again Thursday, braving a chilling rain in Randolph County to carry his charge that his Democratic opponent had become "King James."

Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, who is seeking reelection, remained in Raleigh for his weekly news conference. He spent most of the time with reporters defending his $2.1 million campaign effort, saying the broad-based list of contributors shows he has "real citizen support at the grassroots levels."

Lake, who was slowed last weekend by a throat infection, spent most of Thursday touring Randolph County, talking to small groups of people who ignored the rain long enough to listen to him at industrial plants, shopping centers, country stores and restaurants.

"If you listen to King James (Hunt), he's saying we don't have a chance," Lake told the voters. "But the polls show a very significant trend and that is that we are very much on the way up."

Lake said he has heard that state employees are beginning to lead toward Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and the GOP ticket.

"Reagan is going to be the next president, so they're thinking we better have a governor who can get along," Lake said.

In Raleigh Hunt refused to discuss Lake's campaign or polls.

"The only poll that counts is the one election day. I feel very good. I think we can win if we keep working," Hunt said.

Bobby Emory, the Libertarian Party's candidate for governor, accused Hunt and Lake of wanting to "throw more state and federal money at our social problems ... Government is the problem, not the solution."

Speaking in Durham, Emory proposed North Carolina areas with high unemployment be designated "free trade zones" to attract more businesses and to create jobs.

"These free trade zones would be de-taxed, de-regulated, de-licensed, and de-zoned .... Investments would pour in," Emory said.

In the race for the U.S. Senate, incumbent Democrat Robert Morgan said in Charlotte the federal budget must be balanced but not at the cost of reduced spending on education or the elderly. In Greensboro Republican challenger John East of Greenville unveiled a new set of television commercials and accused Morgan of failing to protect North Carolina's textile industry.

Morgan said he had tried during his six years in the Senate to help eliminate unnecessary federal programs.

"The people of North Carolina know that the state has a balanced budget, and they believe the federal government should. I do, too," Morgan said.

But in Raleigh Jack Lee, the Republican Party's state chairman, said Morgan voted against an amendment that would have required a three-fifths vote of Congress to increase the national debt unless the budget was balanced the following year.

"Mr. Morgan is playing politics with the balanced budget — saying one thing and doing another," Lee said. "North Carolina can't afford that kind of senator any longer."

Morgan said the recession and the rising cost of oil have complicated the task of balancing the federal budget.

He defended President Carter's decision not to campaign in North Carolina, and noted that Reagan also has not been to the state.

"I don't think that it made any difference," Morgan said. "I think Carter and Governor Hunt and I and other Democratic candidates will win by a good margin."

Speaking in the textile-conscious Piedmont, East called for new limits on all types of textile imports, particularly from China. He said Morgan and the Democratic administration have endangered the state's apparel industry by allowing cheap imports to flood into the country.

"The textile industry is well nigh on the brink of experiencing what the automobile industry is experiencing in this country," East said, adding: "Senator Morgan has been a faithful supporter of this administration on every issue."

In one of his new commercials, East says 17,000 jobs have been lost in the domestic textile industry because of imports and that 1,200 of them were in North Carolina.

East was in Greensboro before going to events scheduled in Kinston, Jacksonville and Greenville, where he and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., were to appear at a dinner.

Meanwhile, The Greensboro Record and the Winston-Salem Sentinel gave editorial endorsements to Reagan's candidacy for president. The Wilmington Morning Star announced it was endorsing "Carter, alas for president."

the year.

Also, the art work will be exhibited at the Tobacco Farmer Show which is sponsored by Specialized Agricultural Publications. The Tobacco Farmer Show, the largest in the southeast, will be held in Greenville at the Farmer Tobacco Warehouse on Greene Street on November 18-20.

Gay Students Concerned Over Reported Taunted Tobacco Policies

By The Associated Press
A campus minister said Thursday that gay students at East Carolina University have been taunted and harassed during meetings at a house for Catholic student activities near the ECU campus.

Sister Helen Shondell blamed the harassment on the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, which has a house next to her ministry's Newman Center.

She said the ministry for gays is considered an integral part of her work at ECU.

"We would like them (other students) to accept people who are different ... and learn to live with people who are different," she said.

Sister Shondell said the problems started in August when the ministry moved into Newman Center. She said she had complained to members of the fraternity several times, and expressed the hope Thursday that "it's a problem that's under control at this point."

TKE president Chip Russell acknowledged that some people had said things to the gay students.

But, he said, "I don't know what the big deal is ... Guys will be guys. You know how they are when they get together."

Russell said the fraternity has about 36 members, 16 of whom live in the house. He said the members had agreed to leave the gay students alone.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
"They're giving us (tobacco farmers) lip service and working to get rid of it (the tobacco price support program)," J. C. Galloway of Grimesland said yesterday at a noon press conference at Hudson's Warehouse here.

Galloway, accompanied by George Dunlop, minority staff director of the U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee, criticized Pres. Jimmy Carter, Sen. Robert Morgan and other members of the Democratic administration for their stand on tobacco and other farm issues.

"I feel like we've got more problems today than in the 36 years I've been producing tobacco," Galloway said. "I don't think we'll have a program in two more years unless things are changed."

"The most recent thing that has happened," Galloway continued, "is that Bob Bergland (U.S. secretary of agriculture) says that tobacco allotments represent windfall profits for farmers. I feel like that's another job at our program. They say they support the tobacco program but they are jabbing at it from behind the door."

The windfall profits, "dig is real serious in my estimation. It makes me real mad. It looks like to me they (the Democrats) are using the tobacco program to get votes...to mislead the tobacco farmers as to what their intentions are."

"Democrats have to cross over this year," and vote Republican if the tobacco program is to continue, Galloway suggested.

Dunlop, citing the Carter administration's lack of action on the scrap tobacco issue termed the import of so called scrap tobacco, "a very grave problem."

He said about 130 million pounds of high quality tobacco imported as low tariff rates as scrap, worth $200 million, were imported this year. "This is tobacco North Carolina farmers can't sell," Dunlop noted.

Scrap tobacco imports also create problems for the Stabilization program. "If farmers can't sell their tobacco to companies, it goes to Stabilization. If Stabilization can't sell it at a profit, it will mean an end of the program," Dunlop suggested.

He pictured the scrap tobacco as, "very fine quality filler tobacco," and said that, "it causes the tobacco industry to go overseas," where it can be bought at a much lower cost than tobacco grown in the United States because of the cheap labor used to produce it. "We can't compete against that," according to Dunlop who added that, "all it would take to stop it, is a call from the president to the U.S. Customs Service."

Arms Race Will Be Topic For Lecture

According to John Swomley, political scientist and professor of Christian ethics, the arms race is the biggest subject this Halloween. His solution to it is non-violent action, and he will explain his views at the First Presbyterian Church on Elm and 14th Streets at 8 p.m. Friday.

His current tour, arranged by the Fellowship of Reconciliation, will take him to Winston-Salem and Boone as well as to other cities in the country. His appearance in Greenville is sponsored by the Greenville Peace Committee.

Swomley has taught, lectured, and helped organize nonviolent resistance to political repression in the Philippines and Argentina. In 1977, he spent three months in Africa, teaching and visiting religious and political leaders in eight countries, including Zimbabwe and South Africa.

His experience includes work as executive secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and director of the National Council Against Conscription. During the 1950's he worked with James Farmer, Bayard Rustin, A.J. Muste and others in laying the groundwork for the emphasis on non-violence in the civil rights movement.

The public is invited to attend.

Damaged Leaf Showing Up

FARMVILLE — Volume of sales on the Farmville Tobacco Market continue heavy for this late in the season, says Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Offerings yesterday consisted of mostly low grades of leaf. More lugs and primings were on the floors than in some time. Damaged tobacco is beginning to show up in larger quantities. Quality grades continue in strong demand by all companies. The market sold 667,932 pounds for $1,021,511 for an average of $150.68 per hundred pounds. To date, the market has sold 31,478,868 pounds for $47,728,834 for a season's average of $151.62, which is approximately $9 per hundred pounds above last year.

Sees No Simple Christian Norm

By STEELE PHILMANN
 Associated Press Writer
 ATLANTA (AP) - Leaders of the religious right have made an issue of strong national defense in their new political activism, but an Emory University professor says neither militarism nor pacifism represents a "peculiarly Christian" view on war.

"There is no simple Christian norm, and as we should not pretend there is, as if there were some Christian obligation to build ourselves to superiority vis-a-vis the Soviet Union or some Christian norm that would require us to support cutbacks in military spending," said Dr. Ted Weber, professor of ethics at Emory's Candler School of Theology.

The Rev. LaVoy Johnson, director of Concerned Christians for Good Government, however, said it's clear "if one takes Scripture literally, to see that one should always be on guard against his enemies." He said Americans are "naive" to believe the Soviet Union is not bent on world domination.

However, Weber, noting the variety of Christian views that have prevailed about arms through history, maintained that "being for a strong national defense is not peculiarly Christian and has nothing to do with one's commitment to faith."

Johnson, an independent Baptist minister, said his stand on defense "is not hatred; it is a matter of being smart."

"The pacifist tradition predominated in the Church's first three centuries. Most, but not all, Christians be sure that our strength is superior to that enemy that says it will destroy us, or bury us."

However, he added, "I don't know of anybody advocating ... going to war with Russia."

The House of Kings

What stories could be told by the White House on Pennsylvania Avenue. It has seen men plucked from the ranks and lifted to the heights of power almost overnight; it has housed large and small families, fed them, entertained them, challenged them and watched them eventually depart to make way for newcomers.

Think of the secrets this House has heard - the hopes and plans for a nation's future. No doubt about it ... the White House could fill many books with the stories it has witnessed.

Each president has been given a great privilege, as well as a grave responsibility. The opportunity to lead your nation as commander-in-chief is a rare one indeed.

There is another king who has led and inspired the lives of countless millions over the ages. He needs no White House. He is everywhere. His power is infinite, and His oral office is in the hearts of people everywhere. Let His love and guidance sustain you. Worship this week in the House of your choice.

Anti-Nuclear Referenda In 6 States

By LEE MITGANG
 AP Urban Affairs Writer

Voters in six states will decide the fate of anti-nuclear propositions on Election Day, and nuclear power foes — who until now have fared poorly at the polls — are given a chance of victory in at least one or two of the contests.

The only major ballot victories for opponents of nuclear power have been in Oregon and Missouri, where voters in 1976 prohibited utilities from passing the cost of nuclear plant construction along to consumers while the work was in progress. The Oregon measure applied equally to non-nuclear plants.

In September, nuclear foes were defeated in a Maine referendum that would have shut down the state's only nuclear power plant and banned future nuclear development.

But public concern over radioactive waste, and how to dispose of it safely, may turn the tide in statewide referendums which focus on those concerns in Missouri and Oregon.

Montana, South Dakota, and Washington state will also consider nuclear propositions in November.

In Massachusetts, voters in 34 communities will consider a non-binding referendum on whether future nuclear plant construction should be halted. A strong anti-nuclear vote is forecast. "I guess 50 percent of the people will vote against nuclear power," said Murray Campbell, a Cohasset, Mass., consulting engineer who heads the pro-nuclear Massachusetts Voice of Energy.

Even if anti-nuclear issues are passed in one or more states, it won't necessarily signify that the public has soured on nuclear power. In Missouri, for instance, polls have said that voters may be willing to pass referenda halting nuclear construction until safe ways are found to dispose of radioactive waste. But the polls also say most Missourians do not oppose nuclear power in principle.

"We would obviously have concern if these things pass," said Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the pro-nuclear Edison Electric Institute. "But it's hard to say it would have a drastic national effect. The most important one this year was Maine. Maine was the only one to date that would have closed down the operations of an existing nuclear plant."

In Missouri, voters will consider a measure that would ban the operation of nuclear plants until there are federally licensed disposal sites for storage of nuclear waste. Since no such sites exist yet, that would effectively ban nuclear plants in the state. Missouri presently has one nuclear plant under construction.

The measure also would require any utility building a nuclear plant to post a bond adequate to decommission it once it became obsolete.

In Oregon, Measure 7 would, like Missouri, require the existence of federally licensed nuclear waste sites before new nuclear construction could take place. It would further require voter approval for future nuclear plants.

Jim Hulden, a spokesman for Portland General Electric which operates the Trojan nuclear plant near Rainier, said that "most likely the issue will pass, because people don't understand the measure."

He said in an interview that PGE had hoped to have another nuclear plant built and operating in Oregon by the mid-1990s. But if Measure 7 passes, it would mean there would be no new plant until perhaps the year 2010, since there won't be any federal waste disposal sites ready until 1995.

In Washington state, an initiative would ban, after June 30, 1981, importation of nuclear waste into the state except for medical wastes. Washington, South Carolina and Nevada are the only states that have commercial nuclear waste dumps, and the ballot measure is specifically aimed at the Hanford reservation operated by Nuclear Engineering Co.

Initiative 84 in Montana would not outwardly prohibit uranium mining, but would prohibit the milling of radioactive waste. The Montana Mining Association maintains that would effectively end uranium mining in the state since the ore would have to shipped out of state for milling, or mill wastes would have to be shipped out.

In South Dakota, Measure 2 would require voter approval of future nuclear power plants, radioactive waste disposal sites, and uranium mines and mills. South Dakota has no nuclear plants at present.

Resource Development Director Is Appointed

ECU News Bureau
 F. Douglas "Doug" Moore of Raleigh will become director of resource development for ECU effective Nov. 1, it was announced today.

Moore, 37 years old, has served for the past two years as director of development for the North Carolina Symphony Society, Inc., and earlier worked in alumni affairs and fund raising activities at Western Carolina University and the University of Tennessee.

Donald L. Lemish, vice chancellor for institutional advancement and planning, said Moore's appointment "will bring an added dimension to our resource development program." He noted Moore's "strong background in corporate and private foundation support as well as many years of experience as an alumni and development officer with other state universities." The post of resource development director involves administrative responsibility for all ECU alumni and development of Pierce, musical director, and two performers — Carin Cowell and Ted Fellenbaum. The latter two will sing two of the show's numbers — "Some Enchanted Evening" and "Cockeyed Optimist."

The second group of guests are from the Three Tier Vocational Education Program in Duplin County. The program, a pilot one for economically disadvantaged and handicapped students, will be explained by Dr. Austin Carter, the director; Tom Yates, personnel manager; Guilford East Textile Plant, Kenansville; Dr. Alice Scott, assistant superintendent of Duplin County Schools; and Dr. Gene Ballard, dean of instruction of the James Sprunt Technical College, Kenansville.

Lemish noted that during the past year total private support to ECU "has increased dramatically." Alumni and development staff has increased, major donor clubs were instituted, the annual fund was organized and a deferred gifts program has been started.

During Moore's tenure with the N.C. Symphony, annual sustaining fund contributions increased by 28 per cent in 1978-79 and 112 per cent in 1979-80. Moore initiated planning for a large endowment campaign and began a deferred contribution program.

At Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, from 1971-1976, Moore served as Director of Alumni Affairs, planned, organized and implemented a fund-raising program, served as chief liaison between the university and its alumni, assisted the chancellor's office in all fund-raising projects and edited the Alumni News.

He entered North Carolina State University in pursuit of a doctoral degree in 1976 and his now completing a doctorate in adult education organization and administration. He holds an MA degree in administration in higher education from Western Carolina University, and a BS degree in business administration, University of Tennessee.

He served as assistant alumni director at UT's Central Administration, Knoxville, from 1967 to 1969.

Medicine For Unwanted Hair

BOSTON (AP) — Women with unwanted body hair caused by glandular imbalances can be helped by a medicine generally prescribed for ulcers, a study says.

In a report in today's New England Journal of Medicine, doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington reported giving the drug cimetidine to five women who were plagued by excessive hair, mostly on their faces.

"Cimetidine produced a decrease of 64 percent in the rate of hair growth in four of the five patients," the doctors wrote. Dr. Robert A. Vigersky said the medicine reduces hair growth in women who have excessive levels of androgen, a sex hormone.

Banged-Up Pirates Hosting Indians

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sport Editor

When the 1980 football season opened up, the fans of East Carolina University could look down the schedule and find what some would call certain victories. One of these was this Saturday's date with William & Mary.

But the Indians, operating behind a new coach in Jimmie Laycock this season have turned out to be a little tougher than was originally imagined. Kickoff is at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

East Carolina's Pirates have been crippled by injuries during the season. Coach Ed Emory can count 29 sidelined right now for the rest of the year. The latest to join the list is quarterback Carlton Nelson, who was declared out yesterday when X-rays showed up an old neck injury. Nelson will undergo three months of rehabilitation before a definite decision will be made on whether he needs surgery.

He joins defensive back Marvin Elliot, out with a thumb operation, on the newly injured list for this week.

"We've got about 50 players who have missed at least two games," the Pirate coach, also in his first year, pointed out. "I'd like to see what a team like North Carolina could do if it had lost as many players as we had. Last week they took out just five first line players late in the game and we moved the ball almost at will on them."

The injuries, coupled with some new-found defensive strength on the part of the Indians, has made the game somewhat of a tossup in the eyes of the odds-makers.

The Indians come into the contest with just a 2-6 record, as compared to a 3-4 mark by East Carolina. Their only wins came back-to-back against Dartmouth (17-14) and Rutgers (21-18). Rutgers, the week before, had carried number one Alabama to the wire before bowing, 17-13.

"They've been up and down," Emory said. "They were blown out twice, by N.C. State in their opener (42-0), and by Navy (45-6). But the rest of their games have been right down to the wire. They lost to both VMI and Virginia Tech right at the end of the game." In the former, the Keydets took a 13-10 victory, while the Hokies nipped the Indians, 7-3. This past week, William & Mary bowed to Delaware, 7-3.

"Delaware beat them 40-0 last year, so you can see how much they've improved," Emory said.

The key to it seems to be the Indian defense, much improved over last year. The defense has been led by tackle John Cannon with 86 tackles, while linebackers John Mitrovic and Owen Costello are next with 77 and 76, respectively. Free safety Steve McNamee has 75 tackles.

The team has allowed 217.6 yards rushing and 132.6 passing.

Offensively, the Indians show a lot of sets, trying to confuse the defense. They have a good passing game, but their running game has not been able to firmly establish itself so far this year.

On offense, the Indians have collected only 76.7 yards a game on the ground, and 140.5 through the air. Tailback Tom Franco is the lone runner with more than 100 yards, collecting 353 so far this year. Quarterback Chris Garrity has been the primary weapon, hitting 101 of 213 passes for 1,070 yards and four touchdowns. He's been intercepted 11 times, however.

"We are going to have to play a good game against them to win," Emory said. "How we come off the Carolina game is going to be a big test of our character."

Emory said that at least two changes have been made in the Pirate defense, to shore up the injury situation. Doug Smith was moved last week from tackle to end, playing the Carolina game there. Brian McDaniels was moved from end to strong safety in a back-up role, after Elliott's injury.

East Carolina holds a definite advantage in the series between the two schools, having won eight of 12 games. One, the first meeting in 1966, ended in a 7-7 tie. William & Mary's last win was a major upset of the Pirates, a 21-17 victory in the Oyster Bowl in Norfolk, Va., and kept the Bucs out of a bowl game that year.

East Carolina's offense was led by Nelson. Nelson has rushed for 306 yards and passed for 276, having hit on 26 of 56 attempts. He was not intercepted. His replacement, Greg Stewart, has passed for 101 yards on 11 of 25 attempts.

Theodore Sutton, with 372 yards, became the career number two rusher for the Pirates last week. He has run for 2,516 yards, moving ahead of Butch Colson, and is 373 yards shy of all-time rushing leader Carlester Crumpler, with 2,889.

Anthony Collins, with 369 yards on the year, has upped his career yardage to 2,073, and trails number six all-time rusher Eddie Hicks by just 28 yards. Collins, the leading scorer for the Pirates this year with 44 points, is just two shy of number three all-time career scorer Colson, who had 164 points.

Halfback Mike Hawkins is the number three rusher with 307 yards to his credit.

As a team so far this year, the Pirates have rushed for 226.6 yards a game while allowing 198.1. They have passed for 53.9 while giving up 135.1.

Following the William & Mary meeting, the Pirates have three games remaining. They travel to Miami, Fla., next week, then return home to close out the Ficklen Stadium schedule against Eastern Kentucky, the defending Division II national champion. The Bucs close out the year on November 22 against N.C. State at Raleigh.

Allen's Kicks Brightest Thing For East Carolina

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last Saturday afternoon, when East Carolina played the University of North Carolina's nationally ranked Tar Heels, the Pirates found little to brag about in their 31-3 defeat.

But one member of the Pirate squad had fans and members of the media ohing and ahing throughout the day — punter Rodney Allen.

Allen's soaring boots, averaging over 43 yards, including several kicks into a strong wind, helped the Pirates maintain some field position against the defensive-minded Tar Heels.

"I guess it was my most consistent day," Allen said. "I've had a better average, but they weren't all good kicks. Saturday I was the most consistent I've ever been."

Allen had no great secret. "I just relaxed and let it flow," he said. "If you get the slight bit tense, it throws everything off. I try to do it every game. I realized that there is a challenge there, and playing Carolina is always an inspiration.

"It's happened before up there (a good kicking day). It's hard to explain, but I just try to concentrate."

Back for his final year, Allen had some problems early in the year, having two of his kicks blocked, one returned for a touchdown against Southern Mississippi.

"Both times, it was a breakdown in the line. I don't think I took any more time than usual. It was just a case of someone not picking up a rusher."

Operating behind a relatively new line, Allen has had some pressure this year, but tries not to let it worry him. "You can't let it worry you. You just have to do your end of the job and not think about it. I have faith in the line, however."

So far this year, Allen has not faced the task of having to pick up a bad snap and running for it. "Oh, the desire to try and run is always there, to pick up that first down. I was a halfback in high school, and I miss that part of it," Allen said.

"But I've never done it unless I did get a bad snap, or it was planned. Like last year against North Texas State, I ran at the end of the first half to run out the clock. Then, I had to run with a bad snap against Louisiana Tech in the Independence Bowl."

Allen would like to try his luck in the professional ranks when his college days are over. "I'd like to see what it's all about, but I really need to put a lot more work into it before then."

For the aspiring young punter, Allen offers these tips. "I'd encourage lot of practice. The repetitions will help in the mechanical end of it," he said. "Concentration is the big key. It's like golf or baseball, it's eye contact with the ball. You just have to keep your mind on what you're doing and not worry about what else is going on."

Red Agrees With Media: Russell Is The Greatest

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For once, Red Auerbach agreed with the media.

Auerbach, who often has had his differences with the working press during his lengthy tenure in Boston, heartily endorsed the selection of Bill Russell as the greatest player in the 35-year history of the National Basketball Association.

"I don't care how strong your guards or forwards are, you have to build from the middle," said Auerbach, who was Russell's coach on the Celtics and now is the club's president. "If I was starting a team, there's only one player I'd pick: Bill Russell."

Russell edged archrival Wilt Chamberlain in the voting among members of the Pro Basketball Writers Association of America, conducted in conjunction with the NBA's 35th anniversary. Auerbach was voted the league's greatest coach, while the 1966-67 Philadelphia 76ers — led by Chamberlain — were named the league's greatest team.

Russell and Chamberlain headed the 11-member all-time team announced Thursday. Also selected were centers George Mikan and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, forwards Elgin Baylor, Bob Pettit, Julius Erving and John Havlicek and guards Oscar Robertson, Jerry West and Bob Cousy.

Auerbach praised Russell as "one of the brightest, smartest players ever. You might fool him once, but you could never fool him twice — never. He always made the big play. He made the blocked shot into an art form. And he was team oriented — all he wanted to do was win."

Russell and the Celtics won with greater regularity than any other team in NBA history. After leaving the University of San Francisco in 1956, Russell led Boston to 11 championships in 13 pro seasons. That included a streak of eight in a row that was ended by the 1967 Philadelphia club.

"When I signed my first pro contract," Russell recalled, "Red (Auerbach) asked me whether I was concerned about my scoring. I had a reputation as not being much of a scorer in college, and I said I was a little worried. So he told me, 'From this day on, every time we talk about contracts we will never discuss statistics. I want you to think about winning, not about scoring.' That took a lot of the pressure off me."

"I always played to win. And I found out the best way to play in a style that would make my teammates play better. I was fortunate to play with teammates like Cousy and Havlicek, who were winners; for a coach like Auerbach, who knew who to mold a winner; and for an owner like Walter Brown, who knew what it took to build a winner."

Russell, a five-time winner of the NBA's Most Valuable Player award, is the game's second leading career rebounder, behind Chamberlain. Chamberlain also is the all-time top scorer, while Robertson heads the assists list.

Members of the PBWAA were given a ballot of 50 names chosen by the NBA and asked to vote for 10. The only active players on the ballot were Abdul-Jabbar and Erving, and both made the all-time team.

Mikan, 56, is the senior member of the team.

Rampant Cubs Rally By Hunt

Rose High School's junior varsity football team rallied from a 12-0 deficit to gain a 20-12 victory over Wilson Hunt yesterday.

The Rampant Cubs spotted Hunt one score in the first period when the Baby Warriors converted a fourth and one situation into a 55-yard touchdown run. The other Hunt score came early in the second period.

Rose came back to score its first touchdown before halftime when Rodney Smith went over from the one yard line.

In the third period, Reggie Clark broke through to block a punt, and that set up the tying score for Rose. Ronnie Worsley scored on a five-yard pass from Kenny Kirkland to knot it at 12-12.

Then, in the final period, Donnell Lee returned a punt about 60 yards to set up the go-ahead score. He got that himself, going in from five yards away.

Later, Rose got a safety when the Hunt quarterback, about to be sacked in his end zone, was called for intentionally grounding the ball.

The Cubs, now 8-1, close the year next Thursday, traveling to Northeastern.

Woody Peele

The leaders in our poll once again put together weeks that matched and the standings changed very little last time around. Perhaps this weekend, there are again some toughies.

Currently we find Rick Scoppe still in the lead, 75-20, while this writer continues to hold to second, 74-21. Tom Baines has climbed into third place, 72-23, while the guests have dropped to fourth, 70-25. Etha Allen continues in fifth place with a 69-26 mark, followed by Joe Jenkins, who is 64-31.

Jenkins recently said that he had decided on a goal, one week, of trying to pick them all wrong. The rest of us agree that that feat would be tougher than getting them all right.

Our guest of last week, Kathi Diamant turned out to have the worst record of the season so far, getting only a 5-6 record (we threw out the Western Carolina-Marshall tie—the first tie of the year in our picks). That didn't beat fellow "Carolina Today" panelist Henry Hinton's 7-5, and didn't come close to season leader Jim Kyle's 11-1. Better luck next time, Kathi. (Don't rub it in too hard, Henry!)

This week, we've asked still another television personality, WITN-TV new sportsman Hub Burton to be our guest. We'll see if he can improve on television image in the written media.

Turning to our high school games, we find the season rapidly ending, with no one team from our area headed for the playoffs—a real oddity.

In the top regional game, Farmville Central plays Ayden-Grifton. It's been five years since the Chargers beat the Jaguars. This may be their best chance since those days. This could be a very close game, but we must still go with the Jaguars.

North Pitt plays host to non-conference foe East Carteret. If the Panthers can get any offense at all going, they have a good chance. The defense and mistakes will probably decide this one, and we'll pick North Pitt.

In the other Pitt game, Conley plays at Greene Central. The Rams won their first conference game last week, while Conley is still looking for number one — of any kind. Things don't seem to be getting any better for the Vikings. We like the Rams here.

Elsewhere, it'll be Williamston over Plymouth, Edenton over Roanoke, and Creswell over Jamesville.

The panel has really been scratching its collective heads this week over some of the picks, mainly the Oklahoma-Carolina game. In normal times, this would be the easiest of the picks. But the Heels have the defense this year, and are unbeaten. Oklahoma is not the Sooners of usual.

First, Rose High School travels to Wilson Hunt for its final road game of the year. The Rampants have nothing left to play for but pride now, after having lost their chance at the Division I championship. Still, the panel is with them this week, giving the Rampants a 6-0 vote.

East Carolina will be playing host to William & Mary on Saturday. Despite the fact that the Pirates have lost quarterback Carlton Nelson, the Bucs have the backing of the panel, 6-0. In fact, the votes were gathered in prior to the announcement, but no one wished to change after it was made public.

Now, our other picks: Clemson and Wake Forest, a toss-up; Maryland over N.C. State; Tennessee over Virginia; South Carolina and Georgia, a toss-up; Michigan and Indiana, a toss-up; Duke over Georgia Tech; Florida over Auburn; LSU over Mississippi; Virginia Tech over West Virginia; — and North Carolina and Oklahoma, another toss-up.

Three And Five Records Haven't Put Redskins, Vikings Out Of It

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
They're a couple of 3-5 teams — but in these days of parity, of competitive balance and of multiple wild cards, the Minnesota Vikings and Washington Redskins aren't in such bad shape.

have to win the second half of the season if you have any playoff aspirations. But you have to be next to insane, with a 3-5 record, to talk about the playoffs. If we can work our way back to a contending position, then we'll worry about it."

"Three and five is nothing to smile about," says Coach Bud Grant, whose Vikings, trailing first-place Detroit by two games in the National Conference's Central Division, visit Washington on Sunday. "To be a coach, you've got to be optimistic. If you're not, you're in tough shape."

Also on Sunday it's Philadelphia at Seattle, Dallas at St. Louis, San Francisco at Detroit, Atlanta at Buffalo, Baltimore at Kansas City, Green Bay at Pittsburgh, the New York Giants at Tampa Bay, San Diego at Cincinnati, Houston at Denver, Miami at Oakland, New Orleans at Los Angeles and the New York Jets at New England. On Monday it's Chicago at Cleveland.

The Redskins, meanwhile, are a distant four games behind Philadelphia in the NFC East. "We got ourselves in a hole losing five of our first six games," Redskins Coach Jack Pardee said. "We know you

The Vikings have lost four of their last five games to share last place with Chicago and has been limited to just one field goal in the past two games. Two of Minnesota's victories have come against Chicago.

Quarterback Tommy Kramer, a hot passer earlier this year, has a jammed thumb and dislocated fourth finger, both in his right hand — his throwing hand — and may not start. If he's benched, untested Steve Dils will get the call.

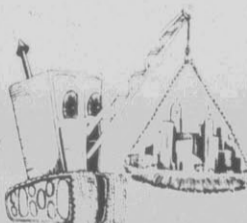

The Eagles own a 7-1 record, the best in the league, and will be trying to improve on that against a Seattle team still trying to win its first home game of the year. The Seahawks are 0-3 in the Kingdome and 3-1 on the road. Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski, knocked out of last Sunday's narrow victory over Chicago, is expected to start.

Dallas, meanwhile, trails the Eagles by one game and will be out to stay in shooting distance of first place. The Cardinals probably will be going after Cowboys quarterback Danny White the way they went after Bert Jones a week ago, when they sacked the Baltimore passer a dozen times.

San Francisco, in a five-game skid, hopes to snap out of it in the Silverdome, where Detroit, too, is trying to right itself.

Richardson's Unusual Rebound Helps Knicks Slip Past Hawks

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Guards are not supposed to win games with offensive rebounds. Then again, Michael Ray Richardson is not an ordinary guard.

The 6-foot-5 Richardson grabbed nine rebounds for New York Thursday night, including one off the offensive boards that he turned into the winning basket with six seconds left in overtime as the Knicks beat the Atlanta Hawks 116-115 in the only National Basketball Association game played Thursday night.

"It's a great win for them and a tough loss for us," said Hawks Coach Hubie Brown. "The key play was when New York missed a shot at the end of overtime, Richardson got the offensive rebound and put it in. Give him credit — he outjumped our three frontcourt guys, who were all there, got the ball, pump-faked and got the shot off."

"When we miss as many foul shots (15) and let their guard beat us off the offensive boards, we don't deserve to win."

The Hawks almost won anyway, after layups by Dan Roundfield and Wayne Rollins put Atlanta on top 115-114 with 1:04 left in overtime. The Hawks gained possession of the ball on a steal by Eddie Johnson, but promptly gave it back when Armond Hill fumbled the ball out of bounds with 21 seconds to go.

The Knicks tried to get the ball inside to Cartwright, their center who led all scorers with 28 points. But the Hawks collapsed on him and he dished it back out to Williams, who tried a 20-footer that bounced off the rim — right to Richardson.

"When Ray shot I went to the boards and got it on the left side in heavy traffic," said Richardson, who was New York's No. 2 rebounder with 539 last season and was second in rebounding to Los Angeles' Magic Johnson among all guards in the NBA. "I threw a fake on Roundfield and he just stayed there, so I put it up. He tried to intimidate me. He thought he'd stay there and freeze, but I put it in his face."

Atlanta had one last chance, but Roundfield fumbled a pass at the top of the key and then missed with a desperation heave from the left corner at the buzzer.

"We beat a good team," Cartwright observed after the Knicks' fourth victory in the last five games. "Last year we lost many games like this, but tonight we didn't throw it away. We made the big play when we had to. That shows a lot more composure."

The Knicks had raced to an 18-3 lead in the first four minutes and led by as many as 17 points in the second quarter, but Atlanta trimmed the deficit to four at halftime and pulled even at 54-54 when Sam Pellom and John Drew scored the first two baskets of the third quarter. After that it was tight all the way, the lead changing hands 11 times and the score being tied 13 times in the rest of regulation. Atlanta led 104-101 with 44 seconds to go, but one free throw by Richardson with 32 seconds left and a basket by Cartwright 11 seconds after that sent the game into overtime tied at 104.

Clippers File Suit, Say Walton Through

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superstar center Bill Walton was supposed to make a contender of the San Diego Clippers when he joined the National Basketball Association team in 1979, but mostly he has just been an expensive bystander because of his injuries.

Now the Clippers say his career is over, and they are trying to collect insurance. "The doctors are unable to give us any comfort he will ever be able to play basketball

Career Over?

Basketball star Bill Walton does stretching exercises before an exhibition game earlier this year. The club claims Walton is "permanently and totally disabled." (AP Laserphoto) again," said Stuart A. Benjamin, a lawyer who filed a $12.5 million suit in federal court here Thursday on behalf of the Clippers against two British insurance companies.

"Walton is now permanently and totally disabled and will never again be able to continue his occupation as a professional basketball player," the suit says.

The Clippers had insured Walton, a former UCLA All-American, with Lloyd's of London and Home Insurance Co. of Great Britain for $1.25 million and are seeking that amount, plus $6.25 million in general damages and $5 million in punitive damages.

The suit alleges breach of contract, fraud, negligent misrepresentation and a breach of duty, good faith and fair dealing.

Walton could not be reached for comment.

The 6-foot, 11-inch native of San Diego was picked first in the 1974 college draft by the Portland Trail Blazers and led them to their only NBA title in 1976-77. However, he has been plagued with foot and ankle injuries throughout his professional career.

He sat out the entire 1978-79 season and played in only 14 games last year before reinjuring his left foot. He appeared in several preseason games this season but hurt the three-fractured foot again Sept. 26 in the first half of an exhibition game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

He twice led the UCLA Bruins to a NCAA championship before entering the NBA, where he averaged 18.6 points a game during the 1976-77 season and was named the Most Valuable Player. He also was the MVP of the playoffs that year.

ACC Eyes Are On Oklahoma

By The Associated Press
Two league games are scheduled Saturday but Atlantic Coast Conference attention will be on Norman, Okla., where the conference-leading Tar Heels of sixth-ranked North Carolina take on Oklahoma's Sooners.

Despite their national ranking, the Tar Heels are going to Norman as the underdog for their intersectional football game with 16th-ranked Oklahoma.

The odds come, possibly, because Oklahoma (4-2) will be playing on its home turf against North Carolina, undefeated in seven games this season.

Pregame publicity has focused on the idea that Oklahoma isn't taking North Carolina too seriously, but Tar Heel tailback Amos Lawrence — who needs only 37 yards to become the school's all-time leading rusher — has warned that the Sooners "better not take their eyes off us."

Statistically, the game is a good matchup.

Oklahoma is third in the nation in total offense, averaging 475.3 yards a game. North Carolina is fourth in total defense, yielding only 215.6 yards a game.

Oklahoma is second in rushing offense with a 371.3-yard average. North Carolina is third in rushing defense, allowing a mere 76.9 yards a game.

Oklahoma is fourth in scoring, averaging 35.8 points a game. The Tar Heels are No. 1 in scoring defense, holding their opponents to only 5.6 points per game.

In the ACC, second place in the conference will be at stake at College Park, Md., when Maryland (5-3) plays host to North Carolina State (4-3). N.C. State is 2-2 in the conference while Maryland is 2-1.

In another conference game, Clemson, 4-3, visits Groves Stadium in Winston-Salem to take on Wake Forest, 3-4. Both teams are trying to snap losing streaks. The Tigers from South Carolina have lost two straight ACC games, to Duke and N.C. State. The Deacons have lost three consecutive conference games, to North Carolina, Maryland and Virginia. Clemson is 1-2 in the ACC and Wake Forest is 1-3.

In a non-conference game,

Virginia, 3-4, takes on Tennessee, 3-4. The Cavaliers are coming off a big victory over Wake Forest and hope to continue their winning ways. But this is homecoming for the Vols, who were whipped last week by Pitt, 30-6. Game time is 1:30 p.m. in Neyland Stadium in Knoxville, Tenn.

Duke, 1-6, hosts Georgia Tech, also 1-6, in a 1:30 p.m. game at Wallace Wade Stadium in Durham. The Yellow Jackets are not yet eligible for the ACC title, so it is considered a non-conference game.

Montreal May Seek NFL Team

MONTREAL (AP) — A National Football League franchise will be pursued by the city if a roof is installed on the 70,000-seat Olympic Stadium, says Yvon Lamarre, chairman of Montreal's executive committee.

Petty Back In Dodge

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Stock car driver Richard Petty, who ended a long association with Chrysler two years ago after a winless season, plans to switch from a General Motors car to a Dodge in the 1981 season.

The switch is expected to be announced officially today, when the STP Corp. also is expected to announce its plans to sponsor both Petty and his son, Kyle, on the Winston Cup tour again in 1981.

Maurice Petty, Richard Petty's brother and crew chief, confirmed that a 1981 Dodge Mirada is being built at Petty's shop in Level Cross, N.C. The Mirada was approved recently for Winston Cup competition by 1981 NASCAR rules which reduce the size of cars.

Maurice Petty said several factors were involved in the decision to make the switch.

Claude Charron, provincial government minister responsible for the Olympic Installations Board, is awaiting reports on the possibility of adding the roof on the stadium, built for the 1976 Summer Olympics.

Lamarre said Mayor Jean Drapeau is involved in securing an NFL franchise. Drapeau presented a formal franchise bid to the NFL on March 10, 1979, and also attended the 1980 Super Bowl to again promote the city's bid.

"With its big stadium, its proven experience in professional sports, its adeptness at running quality, professional sports franchises, and its geographical location, Montreal has all the attributes necessary to bring an NFL franchise here and make it work," Lamarre said.

Unlike the Canadian Football League to which Montreal Alouettes belong, Lamarre said, the franchise would attract a significant number of tourists.

The franchise would be a direct threat to the CFL and the Alouettes, and a spokesman for the club said the NFL never has indicated a desire to expand into Canada.

Greg Fulton, secretary-treasurer of the CFL, said in a telephone interview from Toronto: "This isn't anything we haven't encountered before."

The players' associations of both leagues have voiced strong opposition to establishing an NFL franchise in Canada. The CFL has long been a haven for players cut from the rosters of NFL teams.

When the defunct World

Football League tried to establish a franchise in Toronto in 1974, the federal government introduced legislation to keep it out of Canada. The bill went to third reading but never was implemented.

A spokesman for NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said in New York that the league has no immediate expansion plans, and the commissioner plans to await the result of collective bargaining with the NFL Players' Association in 1982 before making an expansion decision.

"We would make a move into Canada only if we were invited to do so by the Canadian government," the spokesman said.

South, declarer at four spades, knew full well that "pride goeth before a fall." So he did not consider it beneath him to enlist the help of the opponents to fulfill his game once the groundwork had been completed.

To prepare for a rebid, North chose to open with a "convenient" bid of one diamond (his better minor). He could then describe his hand accurately with a simple raise to two spades, and South had no qualms about going on to game. The best contract for North-South, which admittedly is difficult to reach, is three no trump. Declarer has nine top tricks and will be defeated only if the defenders can take five club tricks on the go, an unlikely possibility.

West led a heart against four spades, and when dummy came down, declarer realized that he might lose three club tricks and a diamond. However, dummy's ten-nine of diamonds offered chances of an end play if the opponents could be forced to break the suit at the right time.

Declarer won the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart. He drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and ruffed another heart. Now he simply got off play with a club. The defense could do no better than take their three club tricks.

It mattered not who won the third club. Since either a heart or a club return would allow declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a diamond from the other, the defenders were forced to break diamonds. By simply playing for split diamond honors, the contract was assured.

As the play went, East won the third round of clubs and tried his best to confuse the issue by leading the queen of diamonds. But declarer did not fall for this reuse. If, in fact, East had started with both diamond honors, it would be a simple matter for the defenders to take their club tricks, ending

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — I've had this nagging sense of remorse about the new season, a feeling born months ago that has remained at large in my head. I've isolated it now. It is a dread of "Archie Bunker's Place," production No. 0201 (second season, first episode of the renamed "All in the Family").

With the broadcast of this episode, Edith Bunker is dead.

The long-suffering first lady of Queens, America's beloved dingbat, died during the off-season, victim of reality's rude intrusion into a lovely fantasy.

Jean Stapleton, who played Edith on "All in the Family" for 10 years, wanted to appear less often on the show so she could pursue other opportunities. Last year, Carroll O'Connor decided that occasional Edith wasn't enough. It limited Archie.

The death sentence was pronounced. The actors' strike delayed the melancholy moment. It arrives at last on Sunday night in a special hour-long premiere.

The death of Edith Bunker passes by with only a tiny fraction of the noise attending the revelation of who shot J.R. Ewing, but it is a special moment in television's powerful relationship with our culture. Edith Bunker, better or worse, was the personification of TV's pervasive reach. She was real, so rendered by creative minds and a thousand living room visits.

The 10-year metamorphosis of Edith Bunker saw her progress from a crude, Archie-like suburban wretch (the earliest episodes) to easy-natured dingbat (the middle years) to mature, slightly liberated grandmother who had at last learned to stand her ground (at selected moments).

Through it all, she was America's Ma, much less the shallow caricature the occasional viewer might have supposed. In the course of her residence on Queens' Hauser Street, Edith Bunker was assaulted by a rapist, confronted with menopause, tempted by the "Total Woman" fad, tempered by feminism and made a grandparent.

Through most of it, her basic character — warm, outwardly involved, happy — prevailed. She was carefully sewn into the American fabric and isn't easily ripped out.

Sunday's ripping out of Edith is gently done, focusing on Archie's typically responsive response to Edith's death. It's less a requiem for a dingbat than a device meant to move the series along. Archie refuses to sleep in their bed or move Edith's things, refuses even to sign her death certificate for insurance before finally letting the grief through.

It's a heartfelt moment, guaranteed to loosen a million prime time tears.

So long, Edith. See you in the reruns.

Photo Finish In The Works For Midwest Contests

By GERRY NELSON
Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) —
The presidential race is headed for a photo finish in Ohio, Michigan and Illinois — three big electoral vote states in the Midwest that will be key to victory for either President Carter or Ronald Reagan.

In the nine-state crescent around the Great Lakes, Carter now can count only on Minnesota with its 10 electoral votes, according to an Associated Press survey of political insiders.

Safely in the Reagan column are North and South Dakota, Iowa and Indiana, with 28 electoral votes among them. Wisconsin, with 11 votes, is probably safe for Reagan but his lead is narrow.

That leaves the 72 electoral votes in Ohio, Michigan and Illinois as blue chips still on the table, to be won or lost in the final days of a campaign shaping up as the closest since 1960.

Political pros say Ohio and Michigan are leaning to Reagan, but the races are too close to call. Everyone rates Illinois a tossup.

In Illinois, three polls since late September indicate Reagan has a slight lead but two others put Carter ahead. The usually reliable Chicago Sun-Times straw poll has Carter ahead by five points, but Democratic National Chairman John White calls it "dead even."

Michigan polls indicate only a two-point spread, but 15 percent to 30 percent undecided in a state of traditional ticket-splitters.

"There is a little bit of movement for us. Democrats are starting to come home," says Shirley Gray, spokeswoman for the Michigan Democratic Party.

Here's a state-by-state look at the Midwest:

MINNESOTA (10 electoral votes): Minnesota normally is a bellwether state, voting for the presidential winner. But voting patterns change when a favorite son is on the ballot. Minnesota went for Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968 but the nation went for Richard Nixon. This year, Minnesota's Walter F. Mondale is the vice president, and even Republicans concede their chances are no better than even. Republican Gov. Al Quie says he felt Reagan was ahead a week ago but now is in trouble on the "trigger happy" issue. Democrats feel they'll win by 100,000 votes out of around 2 million votes cast.

MICHIGAN (21): Insiders give Reagan a narrow lead going into the home stretch, but there's a hint it's tipping toward Carter. With 15 percent to 30 percent undecided, Democrats feel more will stick with the incumbent than jump on the Reagan wagon. Feelings of auto workers and Detroit's black community are key. Various polls show only a two-point spread. After releasing polls earlier, Republicans now are keeping their numbers secret.

ILLINOIS (26): It's going down to the wire and independent John B. Anderson remains a factor here, although he's now considered a negligible footnote in most other Midwest states. The Sun-Times straw poll has interviewed 20,000 persons so far and will tabulate 34,000 votes by election day. The poll has correctly forecast every presidential winner since 1932, except for a blunder in 1948. It now has Carter leading, 46.3 percent to 41.3 percent, with Anderson holding 12.4 percent.

OHIO (25): A usually accurate newspaper poll in early October gives Reagan a 13-point lead, but most polls suggest an undecided bloc of about 20 percent. Democrats say Carter will win, but narrowly — perhaps by the 11,000-vote margin he squeaked out in 1976. Democratic Chairman Paul Tippo now says, for the first time, that Carter is ahead. Republican Chairman Earl Barnes believes the Reagan lead is at least 10 points. "I sure don't see a dead heat in Ohio," he says.

WISCONSIN (11): Insiders rate Reagan ahead, but a Milwaukee Sentinel poll Oct. 7-12 gives Carter 37 percent, Reagan 31 percent, Anderson 14 percent. "Carter's definitely the underdog," concedes Democratic Chairman Joseph Checota. But another Democratic official, Suellen Albrecht, calls voters "volatile," and sets the undecided vote at 20 percent. Blue collar voters may be the key.

IOWA (8): The harvest is booming, crop prices are climbing and all should be right for President Carter, but it's not. Reagan looks like a sure winner in Iowa. A Des Moines Register poll

Oct. 12 had Carter barely making a dent in an earlier Reagan lead. It showed 47-30 percentage margin for Reagan among likely voters. An Oct. 19 poll indicated two-thirds of Iowa farmers don't believe Carter deserves credit for improvement in the farm economy.

INDIANA (13): Solid for Reagan from the start, there's no change in the homestretch. Polls give Reagan lead of from 16 percent to 22 percent.

SOUTH DAKOTA (4): Firm for Reagan, with campaign chiefs predicting a 60 percent Reagan vote. If Reagan's margin is big enough, it could provide coattails for U.S. Rep. James Abdnor in his bid to oust Sen. George McGovern. McGovern is one of the targets of the "New Right" conservatives.

NORTH DAKOTA (3): The state is traditionally Republican in presidential races, and no change is expected this year, making it safe for Reagan. Democrats concede Reagan will win but hold out hope the margin will be smaller than usual. Republicans say farmers still chafe at Carter's grain embargo.

Mystic Occult Shop Is No Halloween Happening

By AL ESPOSITO
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —
Don't say "Boo" to the lady running the Mystic Occult store. Despite the orange paint job out front and the giant eye staring down at passers-by, the store is not a Halloween happening.

Lillian Nellons, the owner, won't deny that the season of things that go bump in the night is good for business. But the trappings of religion, not revelry, are her stock and trade.

"If you're a Satanist," she says, "you should be able to buy the things you need for your religion."

That, along with the fact that they make money, is why Mrs. Nellons and her husband, Theodore, run the store. Witches — and others — know if they need a new eye or bat's wing, the Nellons are likely to have the articles in stock. They also carry herbs and potions, as well as amulets, witch's robes, voodoo masks, satanic books, ritual knives, black crosses and literature on Islam.

Mrs. Nellons and her husband wear the traditional white robes of the Moslem faith, and express belief in religious freedom. But it's business that brought the teachings of Mohammed and devilry together, not the sharing of ideology, she says.

She says Satanists should be able to find religious paraphernalia for their ceremonies. "But you want the truth?" she asks with a smile. "We make money."

The shop was fresh out of $20 ritual knives. But there was a blood chalice priced at $17. Only one inverted black cross with the devil's numbers "666" was in stock, but there was a variety of oils for all occasions.

An ounce of Love Oil guaranteed to win the heart of the most unloving cost $6. There was Bend Over Oil to subjugate the most stubborn. And Bingo Oil, which "you rub on your hands and money before going to play," was on sale.

TALL TOMATOES — S. L. Rowland of 1801 E. Fourth St., stands beside one of his three tomato vines that tower about ten feet high. Rowland, who says he just grows the tomatoes for a hobby, started with ten vines of the "Better Boy" variety in the spring, three of which grew over his carport, producing many tomatoes averaging about a pound each. Rowland said this is the third crop of these vines, and there were tomatoes still on the vines in spite of the cooler weather. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Afghan Insurgents Say One Million Lives Lost

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — "More than a million innocent people, including women and children, have been killed" in Afghanistan since Soviet troops moved in 10 months ago, says Afghanistan's former UNESCO delegate, who defected to West Germany last weekend.

In an interview published Wednesday in the West German newspaper Bild, Mohammed Paktiawal was quoted as saying that since the first pro-Moscow Marxist government seized power in Kabul in 1978, "16,000 intellectuals, students, academics and business leaders have been executed in the central prison in Kabul."

Moscow intervened in Afghanistan, its neighbor to the south, last December to prop up the Marxist government in its war with anti-communist Moslem guerrillas. According to Western estimates, about 85,000 Soviet troops remain in the Central Asian nation.

Those fighting the Soviet presence are "not rebels and not partisans, but Afghan freedom fighters who are held as heroes," Paktiawal was quoted as saying.

He said Kabul, the capital, and two or three other large cities are under Soviet control, "but on the flatlands and in the mountains the freedom fighters rule." Paktiawal claimed military leaders, not the civilian government of President Babrak Karmal, are the real rulers of Afghanistan, and he alleged that Czech and Cuban advisors are training Afghan troops, and East Germans are "bringing police and security services up to first-rate," the newspaper said.

Paktiawal, 45, fled a conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Belgrade, Yugoslavia last weekend after publicly denouncing the Soviet occupation of his homeland. He asked for political asylum in West Germany and remains in Frankfurt awaiting completion of the necessary paperwork.

The defector said he left his wife and seven children in Afghanistan because he had no choice. "I hope they will be treated humanely and allowed to travel to the West," the newspaper quoted him as saying.

Meanwhile, Afghan sources in Moscow said Karmal has extended his current visit to Moscow because of an ongoing medical checkup at a hospital outside the Soviet capital. The Afghan Embassy said Tuesday that Karmal would leave by Thursday, but the sources said he now expects to leave "by the weekend." His official schedule ended last Friday.

Afghan officials gave no details of the medical examination but said it was only a checkup and that Karmal was in "perfect condition."

Karmal was installed as president in a Soviet-engineered coup that coincided with the Kremlin's military intervention last December. His predecessor, Marxist President Hafizullah Amin, was killed in the coup.

In another development, an Afghan guerrilla group claimed its forces attacked

Jalalabad airport in eastern Afghanistan last weekend and destroyed two Soviet-built helicopters. A Pakistan-based spokesman for the guerrillas said it was the second rebel attack on the airport in as many months.

Reports Rural Mexico Relies On Folk Cures

ECU News Bureau
If villagers in isolated communities such as those of rural Mexico fail to seek modern medical facilities, it's not a simple matter of preferring traditional folk remedies, says an East Carolina University anthropologist.

Dr. James Clay Young, a medical anthropologist in ECU's Department of Sociology and Anthropology, researched this subject for his forthcoming book, "Medical Choice in a Mexican Village."

He says his findings indicate that the benefits of good medical care "are too far away and too expensive" for many, including the natives of Pichataro in rural Mexico.

Therefore, sick and injured people in such places rely on self-help with homemade remedies, help from a local folk healer or treatment by a nearby lay practitioner.

Private physicians, modern clinics and well-equipped hospitals would be readily sought by rural Mexicans if they were more accessible; the villagers do not need much persuasion of modern medicine's effectiveness, in most cases," Young concludes. "They do need subsidized care and better transportation to medical centers."

His book, to be published in January by the Rutgers University Press, draws on research he began in Mexico in 1975 and continued last summer.

Medical anthropology is a relatively new field of study, and knowledge acquired by anthropologists regarding how groups of people make decisions on their medical care is a matter of great importance to the medical profession and other deliverers of health care, says Young.

Physician Horacio Fabrega Jr., who reviewed Young's book for the Rutgers Press, praised it as successfully addressing "issues which straddle anthropology and medicine."

A native of Idaho with degrees from the University of California at Riverside and California State University, Dr. Young has research interests in attitudes toward illness and treatment among rural Mexicans, medical terminology in Mexican folklore, and most recently, the use of health care facilities among the population of eastern North Carolina.

The latter topic has been the subject of several studies with ECU School of Medicine personnel.

Young and his wife, Linda Garro, an anthropologist who is pursuing advanced studies in psychology at Duke University, were collaborators on the field work for his new book. They plan to spend some weeks in Mexico next summer for further research.

Dr. Young has reported on his previous research at meetings of the American Anthropological Association and the Society for Applied Anthropology.

TIRED OF WAITING IN LINE?

If you're fed up with waiting in line to use the family bathroom, add another one.

Adding a bath is not a tough job if you let a professional home improvement contractor help. Little used closets, pantries, nooks or corners can often provide the necessary space.

What about cost? Home improvement loans are available to help you finance the project. NHIC suggests you ask your banker for details.

Adding a bath may increase the resale value of a home.

RANCH HOME WITH MANY CONVENIENCES

As a home builder, land developer, and REALTOR in the Greenville-Pitt County area for many years, The Evans Co. of Greenville, Inc. has been involved in the development of many of Greenville's finest subdivisions. Residents of Brook Valley, Oakmont, Forest Hills, and Greenbrier are filled with pleased homeowners who are impressed with the quality of their neighborhood. Tucker Estates, Singletree, and North River Estates are now being developed by the Evans Company.

David A. Evans, Jr. is president of The Evans Company. Mr. Evans is past-president of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS and is a former president of the Greenville Home Builders Association. Kenneth Lilley is secretary and manager; Max Pollard, construction superintendent; Delphia Barrington, secretary; Faye Bowen and Winnie Evans, REALTORS.

This one story, 3 bedroom - 2 bath ranch is situated on a cul-de-sac in the Singletree Subdivision, which makes it ideal for the young family who appreciate a safe play area for the children, or an older couple who wish to enjoy a smaller, more energy efficient home in a quiet setting without the bother of traffic.

Our 1250 square feet energy efficient home has earned Greenville Utilities Commission's E-300 rating and includes such energy saving features as storm windows, storm doors, and a heat pump.

The kitchen is designed with today's busy woman in mind. It features an abundance of cabinet storage coupled with a carefully planned arrangement of appliances and counter space to create a time-saving area that makes cooking a pleasure. The house features appliances by Kenmore including a continuous cleaning oven, disposal, and energy-saving dishwasher.

The sunny eating area adjacent to the kitchen features stained wainscoting and overlooks a 10 x 12' deck easily accessible by the large sliding glass door.

Beautifully co-ordinated earth tones create a relaxing, yet sophisticated look throughout this lovely home which features a striking brick fireplace for the focal point of the spacious living room.

MODERNIZE WITH HOMEMAKER IN MIND

A poorly designed kitchen wastes your energy, by causing you extra steps and extra work.

But don't despair. Remodeling can convert a kitchen that's draining your energy into one that will work for you, says the National Home Improvement Council.

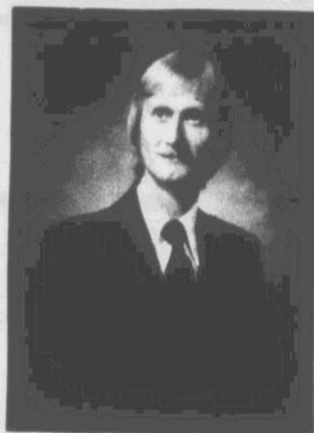

Redesigning an inefficient layout using the 'kitchen triangle' principle in which each major appliance is conveniently located at equidistant points of a triangle steps between work areas.

In kitchens too small to seat the whole family, install a built-in snacking counter to make serving and clean-up easier on the homemaker.

To keep kitchen maintenance to a minimum, shop for washable wallpaper, flooring that won't show dirt easily and stain resistant cabinets. Cabinets certified by the National Kitchen Cabinet Association are tested to assure years of service under tough kitchen conditions.

TRADITIONAL AT IT'S BEST

Tar River Realty & Construction's Parade of Homes entry begins with a traditional two story, four bedroom design. The exterior is beaded masonite siding painted white while the trim is amber in color with sharply contrasting dark green shutters. The final result is an eye-catching blend of subtle and striking contrasts.

Entering the front door, the visitor will notice the fully open two story foyer. It should be noted that to expand the spacious entry surroundings, sidelights are provided as well as a full size window in the upper portion of the foyer.

The practical arrangement of the first level consists of a "great room" with typical wood wainscoting and mouldings on the walls and framing the floor level masonry fireplace. An adjoining formal dining room is trimmed with two-piece chairrail and crown moulding, and is enhanced by French doors leading to the wooded back yard. The pullman style kitchen is efficiently arranged and offers ample work and cupboard storage space. A vital feature in any two story home, the downstairs bedroom, lends itself to a variety of functions, e.g., guest bedroom, study, office, master bedroom, or den. It is served by a full ceramic tile bath which is accessible from the hallway or the bedroom.

Getting back to the foyer, the upper level originates with a wide hallway which overlooks the grand entrance. To the left is found a master bedroom large enough to accommodate a full bedroom suite with room to spare. Be sure to notice the walk-in closet and the nicely arranged master bath. Also on the second story are two other full size bedrooms, another centrally located ceramic bath, and plenty of closet and storage area.

This home has been built with adherence to the Greenville Utilities E-300 energy efficiency program. It has also been professionally decorated with colors and textures designed to blend with a wide variety of furnishing colors and styles.

Tar River Realty is located in Bethel on East Railroad Street and they have been building residential homes in the Greenville and Bethel area for four years. Ferrell Blount is President and Bob Whitehurst is Vice President and in charge of field operations.

ADD A ROOM TO KEEP FAMILY IN THEIR PLACE

Homes, like old clothes, are sometimes outgrown. As a family grows, a once perfectly sized home may begin bursting at the seams.

One solution is to move to a bigger house. However, high moving costs, soaring real estate prices and the trauma of 'pulling up roots' are convincing many home owners to increase the living space of their present homes instead.

GROW WITH FAMILY

The National Home Improvement Council offers some ideas to make your home grow along with your family.

*Add a room, or a whole wing. Be sure the windows, siding, roofing and architectural style of the new addition complement the rest of the house.

*With a little insulation, an attic or basement can be converted into an extra bedroom or recroom. Garages and porches can also be made into year-round rooms.

*Add another bath. An additional bathroom is a great convenience, if not an outright necessity, in larger families.

*Install a patio or deck, which can extend your family's living quarters to the outdoors.

RANCH WITH PERSONALIZED CHARM

Ben Everett, one of the area's outstanding young builders, builds with a "personal touch." Careful consideration is given to exquisite detail in each of Ben's homes, always incorporating comfort, grace and style. Quality construction and personalized charm are evident in this ranch at 501 Crestline.

Situated on a corner lot, this home offers limitless potential for your own personal touches. The entrance hall has a parquet floor which will welcome your guests in the warmth that is evident throughout the home. The arrangement of the living area lends itself to formal entertaining as well as those informal get-togethers.

The den, located directly off the entrance hall is most appealing, with its earth tones of grass wallcovering and rust carpeting. A fireplace with mantel and raised hearth, wainscoating, chair-rail, and crown molding accent the den. A built-in bookcase adds a custom look. The den also is open to the kitchen and back entrance area, but features a french door so it may be closed off from the rest of the living area at the entrance hall.

In the tradition of Williamsburg, the pineapple says "welcome", and your friends will be welcomed to this light and airy kitchen. The wallpaper is a pineapple motif in light earthy colors blending perfectly with the other neutral colors featured in the formica and woodwork. A dishwasher and built-in range with hood are added features.

The dining room is conveniently situated off the kitchen and entrance hall. It features crown molding and gracious chair-rail. Once again the look of elegance comes through the soft glow of brass chandelier and exquisite chippendale railings which sets this room apart from the living room. The sunken living room is inviting and the placement of windows in this room will allow for easy furniture arrangement. Neutral color carpeting is in this room and is featured throughout the rest of the house.

The bedrooms are in a wing by themselves and may be closed off from the living area with a french door. The divided bath located off the hall, features sparkling ceramic tile, plus a separate dressing room with lavatory. The lovely captain's window in this bathroom will allow light, but also privacy. The linen closet is placed at the end of the hall for convenient access to each bedroom.

The master bedroom will delight you! It features soft neutral tones and offers a separate dressing area with vanity and sink. The master bath is also of ceramic tile. Ample closet space is an added feature in the master suite.

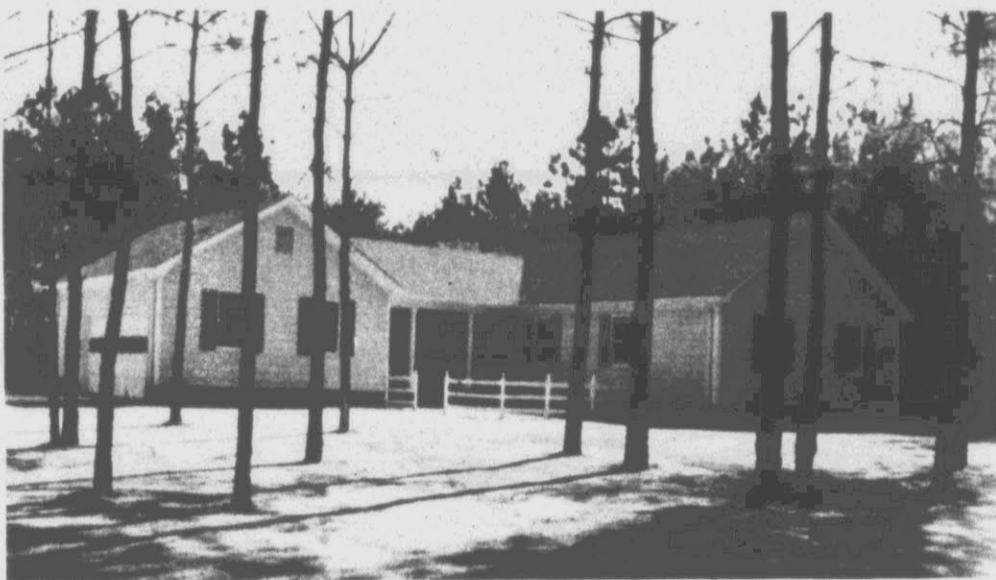

The panelled double car garage features a storage room and an entrance to the kitchen area. A half bath plus a washer-dryer area with cabinets built-in are also featured.

The outside of this home is just as quaint and appealing as the inside with its charming yellow masonite siding, trimmed in white with slate gray shutters. For that special added touch, Ben has a three-rail Williamsburg fence at the front entrance which frames the quarry-tiled front porch. Thermo-pane windows are added features throughout the house. This home was constructed under the E-300 rating for energy efficiency.

Home furnishings in Ben's home are courtesy of Tommie Willis Interiors, Greenville, N.C.

Mr. Everett is the President of William B. Everett, Jr., Inc., with offices located in Robersonville, NC. He has been in the construction business for the past seven years. He is a member of Greenville Home Builders and National Home Builders. His houses are constructed under the HOW Corp. of North Carolina. Each of his homes has an E-300 rating.

FARMHOUSE WITH CHARM

BOWSER CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, INC.

Even though Bowser Construction Company is only into its third year, Merle Bowser, president, has eight years previous experience with one of the country's largest builders. Bowser Construction Company has become one of Greenville's leading builders specializing in quality energy efficient "farm house" style homes. Mr. Bowser shares an energy concern with the consumer and therefore, has joined with Greenville Utilities' E-300 program in providing the consumer with high energy efficient homes. He has also been extensively researching passive solar theories and shall commence building in this field during the current year.

Merle Bowser is active in the Greenville Home Builders Association where he currently serves as 2nd Vice President and a Director. He also serves on Greenville's Builders Council, is a member of Home Owners Warranty Corp., and is a graduate of NCHB Builders Institute.

116 RIPLEY

The charm of Early America is reflected in this farm house being built for Mr. and Mrs. Gwynn Cockey. Mrs. Cockey has rearranged the "traditional" floor plan by bringing back the colonial family atmosphere that focuses around a large country kitchen

Bowser Construction Co. has recaptured rustic America in nearly every aspect of the 1900 square foot house. He has brought back the warmth of a fireplace in the kitchen and the authenticity of heartwood pine tongue-and-groove flooring. Mrs. Cockey has contributed some of her personal antiques into the finishes of the home which includes the mantle and stone around the fireplace. Mr. Bowser has also added some of the conveniences of today such as extra insulation and G.E. heat pump for greater energy efficiency.

Bowser Construction has indeed typified a homey era of the past in architecture while adding quality construction and fine-tuned workmanship which has become a trademark of the company. As with all Bowser Construction Co.'s homes, this home is also covered with HOW warranty. This home should quite suitably house the Cockey's numerous antique treasurers.

NEW WINDOWS ABLE TO PROVIDE 'FREE' HEAT & CUT FUEL BILLS

No home energy check is complete without a careful look at your windows. If your windows are tight-fitting and well-insulated, they probably supply your home with more solar heat than is lost by cold air leaking in through the glass.

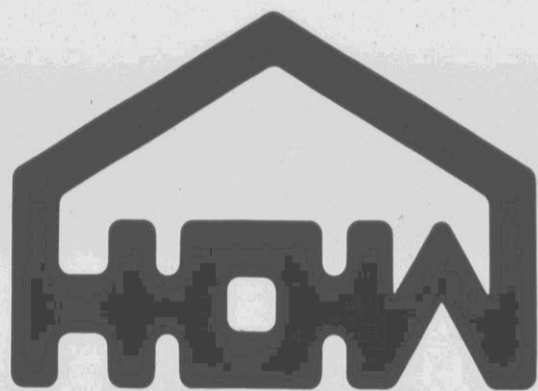

While old, worn-out windows can be a major cause of energy loss in the home, efficient new ones can offer the biggest opportunity for conserving energy.

Careful planning of replacement window installation for efficient insulation and solar heat can give the homeowner the best of two worlds—plenty of see-through glass to enjoy the surroundings and lower fuel bills.

Can You Afford

The average income family has been priced out of the new home market by rising costs and inflationary factors? Not so at all, according to Walter S. Pollard, Jr., president of Pollard Construction Company, Inc.

Pollard a recognized housing expert, and developer, and builder for Rosewood Subdivision, speaks with the authority of a man who has spent more than seventeen years studying and working in all phases of the homebuilding business - from member of the national, state, and local HBA to Director of Region II North Carolina Parade of Homes, 1979. First place award winner, 1979 Parade of Homes under $50,000.

Pollard said that over the last 10 years until 1979 the average price of all new homes in the country have risen 100.4 per cent. And, in the same period of time, average income has risen 101.8 per cent, which bears out his contention that income is keeping pace with the inflationary factors that have a bearing on the price of a new home.

One of his side benefits to the current inflationary factor's effect on the housing market is that escalating costs have brought about a revolutionary improvement in construction techniques. To keep the cost per square foot within reason, new and better technology, along with new and better materials have been developed to utilize every square inch of space.

"With our energy situation becoming more critical every day," Pollard said, "nobody can afford a loosely put together home that leaks air and wastes fuel." That's one of the reasons Pollard Construction uses the most efficient insulation available. The windows and doors, all of the framing members are cut to such exact tolerances that you just don't get any air leaks.

Pollard contends that a modern home will be a much better home than great, great grandfather ever dreamed would be possible. For one thing, it will be a better insulated home. Because of the critical energy situation, the homebuilding industry has had to respond with better building methods to prevent air leaks, and the addition of full thick insulation in floors, walls and ceilings has become a standard construction feature for any quality builder.

A New Home?

"You see," Pollard explained, "it's no longer only original price and the mortgage payments that represent the major cost concerns of families. Energy costs have also come to be of great importance, and as they continue to climb, we can see them becoming the single most expensive element in the family budget. A new, well-insulated home, can literally save thousands of dollars on heating and cooling costs, and when you take that savings into consideration, it's much more economical to buy a new home than to continue to maintain an older, less energy-efficient home."

The homebuilding industry has come of age in the past few years, and great, great grandfather would be amazed if he could witness the technology at work in the construction of a modern home.

As Pollard put it, "For affordability, sound construction, availability of financing and energy-conserving insulation factors that make dollars and sense - the good ole days of home ownership are now - right now."

GRACIOUS WILLIAMSBURG LIVING

Donnie Spain, a Greenville native, is a licensed building contractor and member of the Home Builders Association who has been exposed to the building business since he was five years old, having worked with his father, a local building contractor, from a child up. After graduating from Rose High School, Donnie attended college in Georgia and returned to Greenville to live. His speciality is single family dwellings and he strives to please the buyer in quality and workmanship.

Elegant, efficient, practical, energy-saving, and convenient are just a few words that could be used to describe this quality built home located on a wooded lot at 508 Crestline Boulevard in the Club Pines Subdivision. The two story Williamsburg home utilizes every possible foot to the advantage of the homeowner, as there is a minimum of wasted space.

GREAT KITCHEN HELPERS

Kitchen cabinets offer an easyway to stay organized and at the same time conceal the tools of the trade. If your kitchen lacks adequate storage space, why not consider the advantages of kitchen remodeling.

When shopping for kitchen cabinets you may be impressed by their beauty. The convenience they afford will be obvious. But how can you be sure you are buying durability as well?

Look for the blue and white certification seal of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association. It is this seal, usually found on the inside of a cabinet door or drawer, that leads the way to cabinets that have been tested for durability, stain resistance and low maintenance.

place where it's wanted.

The experts at General Electric explain: in winter it absorbs heat from the outdoor air and releases it indoors. In summer, the refrigerant flow is reversed and the heat is collected inside the house and pumped outdoors to make the house cool.

The heat pump is able to gather heat from the cold winter air because even at 0 PER CENT F. there is 89 percent as much heat in the air as there is at 100 per cent.

This capability of capturing outside heat in winter makes it possible for the heat pump to save from 30 to 60 percent on electric bills, depending on geographic location and the equipment used.

WOOD LOUVER DOORS ARE HOME NATURALS

The natural look is in, especially in home decorating. And, what could be more natural than the look and warmth of wood.

Nowhere is the combination of form and function more versatile than in wood louver doors. Because they are attractive as well as efficient, wood louver doors are popular in homes ranging from colonial to contemporary design.

Available as folding or sliding units, wood louver doors are excellent choices for closets in narrow hallways or foyers where there is little room for ordinary swing out doors.

In either folding or sliding styles, these doors can be obtained either fully louvered or with louvers in the top half and closed panels in the bottom half.

The slats permit the free circulation of air to keep clothes fresh smelling and free of mildew. This characteristic also makes wood louver doors popular decorating choices for high humidity areas such as laundry rooms, baths and kitchens.

Louver doors also make eye-appealing wall accents when used singly or in pairs, or they can be used as room dividers or connecting doors.

Wood louver doors can be painted to accent or blend with room colors. Or they can be stained to enhance the natural wood grain.

Easy to install and available in stock sizes at local lumber dealers or building supply centers, wood louver doors can be a relatively in-expensive home improvement for a do-it-yourselfer.

HEAT PUMPS CAN COOL

Each year the heat pump captures a greater share of the heating and cooling market, yet there persists a mystique about the product.

What is it? It's a single system that provides central heating in the winter and central cooling in the summer by means of transferring--pumping--heat from a place where it is to a

SPACE AND UNIQUENESS

In forming Blount & Ball Realty Co., Inc. in 1971, Bill Blount and Lee Ball's concept was, as it is today, to provide the most comprehensive service to clients in buying, selling, or building a home. This has allowed the prospective home buyer to receive "one stop" service whether his interest lies in existing resale homes or new custom construction.

In addition to supervising construction at Blount & Ball, Lee has been very active through the years in local and state construction related organizations. A charter member of the Greenville HBA and a past president, he is currently on the Board of Directors and the Builders Council. In 1978 Governor Hunt appointed him to serve on the North Carolina Code Officials Qualifications Board until 1982. Active, too, in the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS Lee is a past president and member of the Board of Directors and is currently serving on the By-Laws Committee. In addition Lee serves his community through other organizations and is now Director for the University City Kiwanis Club.

Other than his duties at Blount & Ball, Bill Blount is also President of Lynndale Development Co. He, too, is a past president of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS. A graduate of the North Carolina REALTORS Institute (G.R.I.), Bill last year obtained the designation of C.R.S. (Certified Residential Specialist) from the REAL-TORS National Marketing Institute. Bill holds offices and directorships of several local businesses and organizations, including Home Builders Supply Co., Dixie Supply Co., Blount-Harvey Co., Branch Banking & Trust Co., North State Savings & Loan Assoc., and is Chairman of the Board of Carolina Country Day School.

From the street the house and lot appear to have weathered time together and aged into graciousness slowly. The natural stain applied over the cypress siding will further mellow with age and the house will continue to blend further with its surroundings. The natural wood deck that encompasses the entire back of the house is accessible from the back yard, the driveway, the Den and the breakfast nook. Partially open for sunning and partially covered for shade, and protection from the elements, the deck provides endless possibilities for outdoor entertaining.

The use of a central foyer, highlighted by distinctively patterned wallcovering and the rich parquet flooring, creates a convenient traffic pattern for easy living and entertaining. Simplicity enhances the formal natures of the living and dining rooms, leaving numerous decorating possibilities. In the kitchen, custom cabinets are filled with built-in features including a slide-out racks for pots and pans, a corner lazy susan, a spice rack, and a tray storage rack.

The greenhouse window with its tile base will add cheerfulness no matter the season. A JennAir range and energy saving dishwasher complete the efficient, practical design of this open kitchen work area. Large windows off the breakfast nook provide brightness in addition to a lovely view of the wooded surroundings. The half bath and a large coat closet in the hall are convenient to all rooms downstairs which creates an added plus for those times when company arrives. In the den the ceramic fireplace is maintenance free and the built-in bookcases combined with the soft effect of the grasscloth wall covering and subdued carpet give off a warm, relaxing aura. Double french doors leading onto the deck outside provide a pleasant view and the filtered light that is so good for indoor plant life.

Upstairs, the hall bath has a completely enclosed linen closet with added shelves, cabinets, and a built-in clothes hamper. The two complementary light wall-coverings and the large white floor tile help to emphasize the spaciousness of this bath. Both of the two bedrooms to the right of the hall bath have large closets with shoe racks and/or shelves and shirt rods. Whether used as a children's rooms or guest rooms, there will be ample space for accomodating everyone. The master bedroom and bath encompass the entire left side of the upstairs with uncompromising space and functional amenities, including double walk-in closets. In the master bath, the corner Futura step-in tub and the separate glass shower are unique and are accented by the contrasting brown tile and use of complementary patterns in the wallcoverings. The dressing/vanity area is highlighted by the rich tone of the countertop and the bronze vanity lights.

Blount & Ball's 1980 Parade house is fully covered by the ten year HOW warranty and is approved for Greenville Utilities' E 300 energy efficient award.

FREEDOM OF SPACE

For those who appreciate the fine exterior designs of the past, and the conveniences of today, will discover in this construction, a "house with many moods." Viewing quickly, one can associate the Gothic and Victorian designs which swept from Maine to California during the 19th century. The appeal remains with stunning high pitched roofs and intricate styling. It captures the spirit of an era of American architecture when the rein of these creations came into being.

The freedom of space is no accident. Prior to construction, plans were reviewed at great length to assure the most functional of living patterns. The home is well suited for most any family; offering four bedrooms, three and a half baths, storage and playroom areas and extras too involved to list. Its rooms are spacious, well proportioned and inviting.

Among the most interesting features is the private enclosed solarium, acting as a continuation of the living room. Double skylights accentuate the delight found in this addition.

Eclecticism reigns in this home, so rich in historical associations. And color; so carefully selected and subtly done as to escape immediate notice, still it dominates the versatile overall scheme.

The quality of construction can best be observed at the stages prior to its completion. We invite you to visit with us for an observation of a home you will enjoy.

It surpasses the standards set by the E-300 Energy Efficient homes. It is ideal for the large family that loves open living, as it contains over 3000 square feet of heated space with a 400 square foot garage. Dual heat pumps provide the heating and cooling for this home and it is placed on a corner wooded lot in a very attractive location.

Elegant lines of distinction are the hallmark of homes constructed under the supervision of Jim Rice, builder, developer, and general contractor of Rice Construction Company, Inc. Residential and commercial building are the specialties of the firm with emphasis on total coordination between the client, builder, structure, and site.

SELF-CLEANING OVENS SAVE TIME AND ENERGY

Electric ranges with the Self-Cleaning oven feature sometimes are accused of being wasteful of energy.

But studies show that such ranges use no more electricity than do conventional ranges that must be sprayed, foamed, scrubbed and scoured by hand. It takes only seconds to set the Self-Clean controls, which results in saving hours of a homemaker's time over the course of a year.

It cost about 16 cents for the oven to clean itself. That is the present national average cost (based on a national average cost of 3.8 cent/kwh for electricity).

However, the specially designed insulation system means using less electricity during normal baking and roasting. In fact, enough energy is saved throughout a year's time to offset substantially the average cost of using the self-cleaning feature.

JIM RICE

Ariane Clark Custom Kitchens and Cabinetry, Inc. would like to thank Tommie L. Little Builders, Inc. for allowing us to present this J-Wood Kitchen.

"While looking at many of the new homes in the area, we had the opportunity to see a lot of cabinets and we concluded that these cabinets contain the finest craftsmanship of any we have seen. It's the wood that really stands out! I love the Lazy Susan because it provides access to normally wasted space. My favorite feature is the Jenn Air Grill because it is great for a delicious quick meal and the ventilation system is fantastic!"

TURN YOUR GARAGE INTO BEAUTIFUL LIVING SPACE

To expand living space, it is possible to convert a garage or car port into a comfortable easy-care family room, using materials readily available at any home or building supply center.

WINDOW WALL

Plasterboard will conceal concrete walls, and can be covered with a handsome wallcovering—for example, a patent-finish vinyl in a bright geranium color—to complement a white ceiling.

Where once was a garage door, or no wall at all, there can be a window wall. For storage, install plasterboard cabinets and top them with pine shelf board, leaving the finish natural to match pine studs between windows.

The whole room can be a do-it-yourself project, with wall-to-wall carpeting for color and warmth, except for one element.

Treat yourself to Levolor Riviera blinds at the windows, custom made to your exact measurements and striped in whatever colors you choose from a palette of nearly 200. These, too, are available through home and building supply centers where samples of slat colors (and photographs) will supply you with ideas.

Have a flair for contemporary and country? The mixing of the two can be found in "Baytree", built by Stanley Peaden, with interior selections by Fuqua's Interiors.

The house itself sets the mood for contemporary - but upon entering, and seeing other ideas incorporated one will see how it begins to lend itself to a flavor of country.

The parquetery entrance introduces a feeling of warmth which is carried through directly to the Englander wood stove. This not only enhances a country flair, but also serves as a practicality to modern day energy prices.

With the presence of a paddle fan and a cool breeze coming from the kitchen, one is reminded again of such a quaint style. Open soffit cabinets offer an array of ideas for collections, baskets and canned goods to be displayed.

Skylights, clear story windows, sliding doors, and cathedral ceilings invite you to enjoy the concept of large open spaces that are so typical of today's contemporary homes.

The involvement of Baytree in color was kept at a minimum - letting only soft-muted tones convey a sense of simplicity.

Come tour "Baytree" and enjoy the warmth and simplicity of the country, and imaginative ideals and styles of contemporary.

HOW TO GIVE OLD FIREPLACE FRESH NEW CLEAN-UP

A fireplace can be the focal point of any room and an element of beauty throughout the year. This spring, be sure to include it in your cleaning and decorating schedule.

Before you start to clean your fireplace or hearth, make sure the damper is open. Then, brush all hearth and interior surfaces with a strong, natural bristle brush and dispose of ashes; do not use a nylon or steel brush which could harm fireplace surfaces.

Don't clean the fireplace with your vacuum cleaner as the air from the unit might blow dust around the entire room. The sticky soot of the fireplace can also dirty your vacuum attachments.

Cleaning a well-used fireplace is a super-size job: after removing loose soot and ashes, to remove ground-in dirt and grime use Fantastic spray cleaner. Just spray and allow to soak for two minutes; then scrub and rinse with fresh water. Accessories can also be spray cleaned using a soft sponge or clean cloth - wipe dry and polish.

The firm of Watson Associates has two licensed contractors: Dillon Watson, and Etsil Watson. Both have been involved in the construction industry for a number of years.

Dillon Watson, as a graduate of East Carolina University and the Planning Institute at Chapel Hill is an expert in the field of land development. As a member of The Greenville Builders Council, he works closely with the city on pertinent land and construction policies. He is also Vice President of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and a licensed broker.

As a firm, Watson Associates have built homes, townhouses, apartments, duplexes and offices. As well as land development projects. It is a young firm with plenty of experience and innovative ideas.

A rustic contemporary home tucked into the trees designed for easy comfortable living. It makes maximum use of space and as a E-300 home - efficient use of energy. To the right of the small but dramatic foyer is a spacious great room with an energy efficient fireplace, the clerestory windows beam a shaft of light onto the stepped up dining area. A pass through bar complete with sink and glass storage combine these areas with the patio for relaxed entertaining. The kitchen design will win the approval of any good cook with plenty of beautiful handmade pine cabinets. In the bedroom area located to the left of the foyer you will find a dramatic flare in bedroom design and a minimum of eight foot of closet space in each of the three bedrooms. The washer/dryer area is neatly tucked away in the hall. The homes location on Red Banks Road makes it convenient to shopping, work, and schools, but when you step out to the pation you'll feel that it is truly a retreat from the rest of the world.

VALANCE CREATES A NEW MATCHING WINDOWRAMA

More and more, people are using blinds as window treatments, keeping them simple. Levolor Riviervas work well because they're colorful, easy to install and easy to keep clean thanks to their one-inch aluminum slats and slender ladders. They provide privacy and complete light control.

Now, what makes the best window blind even better is its finishing touch: a matching valance that covers the head and gives each blind an even trimmer look, top to bottom.

Made for blinds that mount inside or outside a window frame, valances come in all of the nearly 200 Riviera colors and patterns and also match Levolors new "Genus" line of chromes and woodgrains.

Use of the valance is optional. Most people will use it, since it attractively bridges the gap between head rail and blind. Others needn't, if they're of the "tell it like it is" school of design.

ARE YOUR WINDOWS WORN OUT?

If your windows are worn out and you are thinking about replacing them, shop around. Investigate the various types available and carefully look at samples.

Picture windows, bay windows, double-hung and single-hung windows, vertical and horizontal sliders, tilt windows and doors of all kinds, including those to the patio, can be fitted snugly with aluminum replacements.

Aluminum replacement windows come in a variety of architectural styles with either an anodized finish or with a bakes-on enamel coating to match or blend with any indoor or outdoor color scheme. They can be custom fit for virtually any opening.

There are many types of replacement windows, but each year aluminum is most popular.

RESIDING RESTORES AN AGING HOME

Is your home aging gracefully? If not, maybe it needs a 'face lift.' New siding can rejuvenate an aging home, says the National Home Improvement Council.

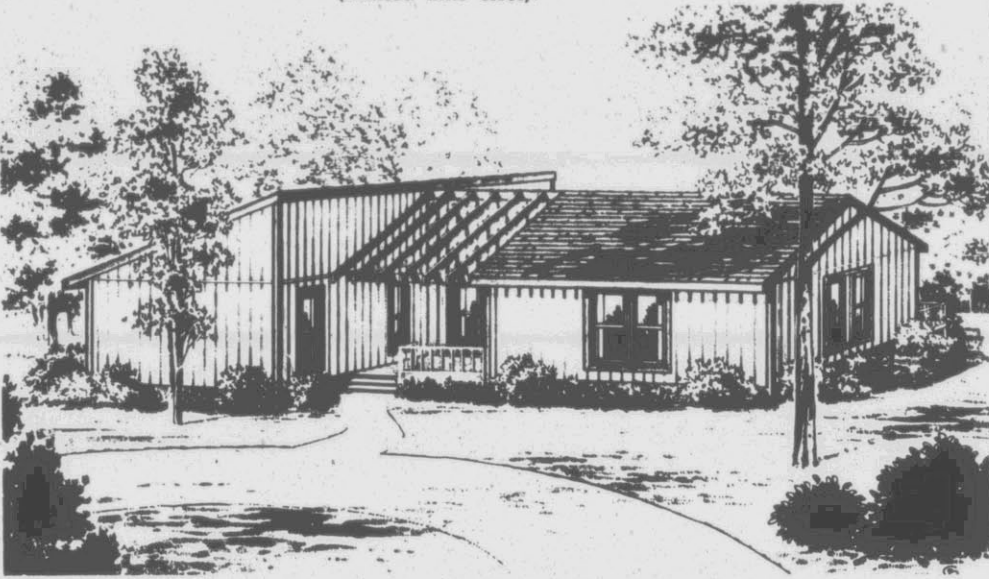

Residing your home can restore its looks, or it can give your home a completely different appearance.

Textures, colors and patterns can be varied to make your home appear taller, wider, more rustic or more modern. With the application of one of of numerous sidings that simulate other materials your home can be made to resemble fieldstone, clapboard or brick.

But residing is more than cosmetic surgery, notes the Council. New siding can also reduce upkeep and maintenance costs. Depending on the material, siding can provide protection against cold, heat, noise, fire, rot, peeling and warping.

Among the siding materials available are vinyl, aluminum, wood, hardboard and steel. With such a large selection to choose from, your home can easily put its best 'face' forward.
