Demos' Tax Cut To Get GOP Votes

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders say they will push for a Democratic tax cut in next week's lame duck session of Congress, even though it is not chapter and verse the plan put forward by President-elect Ronald Reagan. And Reagan says that's all right with him.

Robert Dole, R-Kan., in line to chair the Senate Finance Committee during the upcoming 97th Congress, announced Thursday he immediately will push for the committee's $38.9 billion tax cut plan rather than Reagan's proposal for a 30 percent tax cut.

Reagan, at a news conference Thursday in Los Angeles, said he would go along with an immediate cut even though it would not be under his sponsorship.

A number of prospective GOP Senate chairmen met with reporters to outline their views as they near Republican control of the Senate for the first time in a quarter-century.

They drew an outline of a more conservative legislative agenda.

John Tower of Texas, prospective chairman of Armed Service Committee, says he will push for approval of a new strategic bomber and bigger military paychecks. The incoming head of the Judiciary Committee, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, will move on behalf of a federal death penalty.

Republicans captured a 53-47 Senate majority in Tuesday's elections on the coattails of Reagan's presidential sweep.

Democrats still hold a 243-192 House majority in the new Congress after losing 33 seats.

Dole told a news conference that he will try to get the Senate committee tax cut bill through the "lame-duck" Congress convening next Wednesday.

"It's not precisely the bill Gov. Reagan supported," Dole said. "But the economy needs this legislation now."

Reagan proposed a 30 percent tax cut — 10 percent in each of the next three years — although he said later that the second and third year cuts would depend on the state of the economy.

But Dole said Thursday, "I'm not certain you can do that ... without fueling the fires of inflation."

The pending Senate bill, he said, "will stimulate the economy without heating up inflation."

Dole could give no examples of the size of individuals' tax cuts under the Senate bill. But he said the total for individuals would be about $22 billion in 1981 and the total for businesses about $17 billion.

In comparison, Reagan's advisers have estimated that the president-elect's tax cut proposal would amount to $18 billion for individuals in fiscal 1981, $48 billion in fiscal 1982 and $172 billion in fiscal 1983.

At another news conference, Thurmond pledged to seek congressional approval next year of a death penalty bill. He said he favors that penalty for treason and murder.

In Dallas, Tower told reporters that "the likelihood is that we will authorize a penetrating bomber" in the next Congress.

He said it could be either a stretch FB-111, some version of the B-1, which President Carter cancelled in 1977; or an entirely new plane. Congress has already instructed the Pentagon to tell Congress which bomber it wants by next March.

SATURN AND TWO OF ITS MOONS — Saturn and two of its moons, Tethys and Dione (left) were photographed by Voyager 1 on November 3, 1980 from 13 kilometers (8 million miles). The shadows of Saturn's three

More Marvels In Photos Of Saturn

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Voyager 1 spaceship, just days from a close encounter with Saturn, is tantalizing earthbound scientists with photographs revealing dozens of previously undetected ringlets within the giant planet's shimmering rings.

The latest photographs from the robot laboratory — a billion miles from home and still 4½ million miles from the sixth planet — show rings within rings, ringlets of particles in what were thought to be empty spaces between rings and more bands of colored planetary clouds than current theories anticipated.

Most puzzling to astronomers are the fingers of darkness, which first appeared in photographs two weeks ago, reaching across the rings.

"With any scientific investigation of this magnitude, (many of) our longstanding theories — those cherished interpretations of the universe around us — are going to become casualties," Bradford Smith, head of Voyager's photography team, predicted Thursday.

Speaking at a Jet Propulsion Laboratory news conference, he said: "Our pre-Voyager knowledge of Saturn is poor. Much of what we are seeing and will see is new, (so) I think we can predict that much of what we thought we understood will be found to be wrong."

The spaceship will come closest to Saturn on Wednesday, when it will soar within 80,000 miles of the cloudtops.

After 38 months in space, the ship and its payload of scientific instruments are generally in good condition, said project manager Raymond Heacock. And no major problems are expected as the National Aeronautics and Space Administration mission approaches its climax.

Voyager pictures taken Monday showed a complex structure within the rings, which are believed to be frozen particles like dirty snowballs that reflect light and therefore appear to shimmer.

Scientists believed there were six rings, barely three miles wide but stretching nearly 300,000 miles from the planet, with dark divisions that were considered empty gaps.

But Monday's photographs have changed that concept, said Smith, a University of Arizona astronomer.

Voyager 1 showed "many, many individual ringlets — literally dozens, perhaps hundreds of these structures" spreading like ripples through the rings.

Other changes revealed at the canvass included: Bobby Yates Emory, candidate for governor, 101 votes rather than 110; Douglas Cooper, (gubernatorial), 22 rather than 19; lieutenant governor

Unemployment Up; Wholesale Prices Climb

By GLENN RITT

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices jumped 0.8 percent in October, equal to a 10.6 percent compound annual rate, and the nation's unemployment figure edged up one notch to 7.6 percent, the government reported today.

October's jump in the Producer Price Index contrasted markedly with September's 0.2 percent dip. The increase was fueled by rising automobile prices and significant boosts in the cost of sugar, meat and other foods, the Labor Department said.

Higher prices for motor vehicles in the new model years accounted for half of the overall rise in the index during the month, the report said.

For the first 10 months of 1980, wholesale, or producer, prices have accelerated at a 12.4 percent annual pace, a rate very similar to the double digit mark of 1979 and further evidence of inflation's persistent nature despite the recent recession.

Wholesale prices had risen 1.5 percent in both July and August.

Unemployment, meanwhile, inched up 0.1 of a percentage point from 7.5 percent in September, the department said. But behind the nearly stable figure, there was significant movement. The unemployment rate for adult men declined over the month to 6.4 percent, while the rate for women rose sharply to 8.8 percent.

Unemployment among teen-agers rose to 18.4 percent last month following a decline in September.

The number of unemployed workers, at about 8 million, returned to its August level following a September dip. Joblessness was up 1.7 million from October 1979, with adult men accounting for about 1 million of the over-the-year increase, the department said.

The factory work week rose, reflecting the nation's apparent emergence from the sharp but short recession that began late last winter.

On the inflation front, the Labor Department reported that wholesale prices at the finished goods level rose 0.8 percent, with half the jump caused by higher prices for cars and trucks.

Sharply rising food prices accounted for most of the rest of the advance.

The introduction of 1981 model vehicles in October followed large price decreases in September, when Detroit closed out its 1980 model year with across-the-board discount to dealers.

That dip in September became an instant campaign issue in the presidential campaign, with Republican nominee Ronald Reagan accusing the Carter administration of "jimmying" the figures. The claim was strongly denied by government officials.

The Producer Price Index includes three categories: finished goods, which are ready for sale to consumers; intermediate items, which are semi-processed; and raw or crude materials, such as iron ore or grain.

In October, intermediate goods rose 0.9 percent, compared with 0.6 percent the month before.

Soviet Parades Might; Warns Against Effort To Obtain 'Supremacy'

By THOMAS KENT

Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union paraded its military might, including a new battle vehicle believed in use in Afghanistan, through snow-whipped Red Square today on the 63rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution and warned against the "efforts of imperialism to obtain military supremacy."

Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, addressing the huge crowd, made no direct reference to U.S. president-elect Ronald Reagan, who has emphasized U.S. military strength.

The ambassadors of the United States, most of its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Japan and China boycotted the parade, just as they did the May Day celebrations, to protest the Soviet military intervention against anti-communist Moslem rebels in neighboring Afghanistan.

Some 5,000 crack troops, backed by tanks, artillery and missiles in tight formation, moved through the brightly decorated square under the gaze of President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Ustinov and others who stood atop the Lenin Mausoleum in blustery 30-degree temperatures.

Ustinov, in full dress uniform, told the massed soldiers, sailors, airmen and commandos that "the forces of oppression, militarism and aggression and the actions of American imperialism and the aggressive NATO bloc oppose the peace-loving trend in international politics."

He said "the activities of the enemies of peace demand our constant vigilance and the strengthening of the defense potential of the Soviet state so as to undermine the attempts of imperialism to attain military superiority."

He added "Soviet armed forces have everything necessary to give a crushing rebuff to any aggressor."

The military parade, an annual event, unveiled a new armored personnel carrier believed in use in Afghanistan, observers said. The parade involved about 220 vehicles and weaponry ranging from light, air-transportable infantry vehicles to multi-round rocket launchers and anti-aircraft and surface-to-surface missiles.

As T-72 tanks, the nation's main battle tank, rolled by at about 10 miles per hour, a Moscow radio announcer praised their "strong armor" and said "their crews are well protected from nuclear blast and radiation."

The military parade was followed by hundreds of thousands of Moscow workers, who marched in loose formation with hundreds of banners, floats and red flags.

A huge portrait of Vladimir I. Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, dominated the square just outside the Kremlin. Red balloons soared overhead and live and recorded marching music reverberated off the walls of the Kremlin and the massive GUM department store nearby.

Brezhnev and other leaders saluted the military marchers — led by 172 youthful drummers — and waved to the mass of civilians. The marchers carried portraits of Soviet officials and escorted floats praising Soviet policies.

Missing from among the leaders on the 40-foot-tall mausoleum was Alexei Kosygin, 76, who resigned as premier last month because of failing health. His replacement, Nikolai Tikhonov, was present for the parade.

Ethiopian leader Mengistu Haile Mariam, a close Soviet ally, also stood with Brezhnev on the mausoleum reviewing stand. Brezhnev, 73 and reported suffering from a variety of ailments, looked healthy and mounted the stand without difficulty.

Polish Walkouts Back Non-Strikers' Demands

By ROBERT REID

Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Transport workers in Gdansk and four northern Polish cities began a one-hour strike today to support wage demands of teachers and health workers who stayed on the job, union officials said.

A spokesman for the "Solidarity," the nation's largest independent trade union, said an undetermined number of workers struck in Gdansk, Gdynia and three other towns in the region.

The walkout began shortly after government officials flew to Gdansk to try and break deadlocked wage negotiations with the teachers and health workers who did not plan to strike. Officials also negotiated with striking postal workers in Poznan.

Earlier, Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania, taking a hard line on the eve of the 63rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution in the Soviet Union, said his regime will insist that Solidarity recognize the party's supremacy in its charter.

But a senior adviser to "Solidarity," which claims half of Poland's 20 million workers, said it might be impossible to prevent a lengthy nationwide strike by the rank and file Wednesday if the Polish Supreme Court does not delete a supremacy clause inserted in its charter by a lower court.

Striking workers agreed to recognize the party's supremacy during agreements ending nationwide strikes last summer, but refused to include a specific statement declaring such recognition in the Solidarity charter submitted for government approval.

Kania's speech came amid new government reports of a deepening economic crisis. The government announced the suspension of fertilizer exports and decreased production of coal, its major export, and acknowledged severe shortages in food staples.

In a speech delivered Wednesday in Krakow and broadcast nationwide on Thursday, Kania said: "Who is interested, what reasons speak for it, to keep away from statements which determine the socialist character of the Solidarity trade union?"

"I don't know any reason workers' interest would speak for it. This brings harm to Solidarity itself, creates unnecessary tensions, which may raise doubts on the purity of intentions" of union leaders, Kania said.

"Today one has to say there are borders which no one can cross."

Only Minor Changes In County's Vote Canvass

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer
The canvass yesterday by the Pitt Board of Elections of Tuesday's general election results confirmed most of the totals published by "The Daily Reflector" as reported by precinct officials on election night.

Some of the key changes in the unofficial table of returns, however, resulted from the addition of overseas votes and absentee votes cast by unregistered citizens for president and vice president. Those votes were added to the overall totals at the board's canvass.

None of the changes affected the overall outcome of any of the Pitt results.

Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt Board of Elections, said canvass totals revealed that some 26,651 or 75.8 percent of the total county registration of 35,147 voted Tuesday. The turnout for the 1976 general election was just under 70 percent.

The addition of overseas and presidential votes by unregistered citizens changed the total for Jimmy Carter in Pitt County from 12,480 to 12,590, while Ronald Reagan received 12,816 rather than 12,705, as a result of the absentee additions. Other totals in the presidential balloting affected by the additional votes included: John Anderson, 827 rather than 814; Ed Clark, 101 rather than 100; and Barry Commoner, 32 rather than 31. Clifton DeBerry received five votes rather than 15 as indicated in the table.

Other changes revealed at the canvass included: Bobby Yates Emory, candidate for governor, 101 votes rather than 110; Douglas Cooper, (gubernatorial), 22 rather than 19; lieutenant governor candidate Craig Franklin, 158 votes instead of 150.

U.S. Senate candidates Robert Morgan and John East, 12,604 and 11,657, respectively, rather than 12,598 and 11,655; 63 votes instead of 62 for senate candidate F. W. (Rick) Pasotto; 17 instead of 16 for senate candidate Rebecca Finch; 6,644 votes rather than 6,570 for Edwin Tenney Jr., candidate for Commissioner of Insurance; 16,454 rather than 16,456 for State House candidate Sam Bundy; and 17,321 rather than 17,371 affirmative votes for the constitutional amendment.

The canvass also revealed vote totals for the various candidates on the ballots who faced no opposition. Those totals included: (judicial officers), Joseph Branch, 18,505; J. P. Carlton, 18,460; Cecil J. Hill, 18,147; Hugh A. Wells, 18,116; James D. Llewellyn, 17,978; Robert H. Hobgood, 18,255; James H. Pou Bailey, 18,295; William H. Helms, 18,287; J. D. DeRamus Jr., 18,092; Claude S. Sitton, 18,112; Robert E. Gaines, 18,113; and Hollis M. Owens, Jr., 18,072.

(District judges and county officers), E. Burt Aycock Jr., 18,703; Herbert O. Phillips, 17,738; J. E. Martin, 18,110; H. Horton Rountree, 18,243; R. D. Wheeler, 17,907; James Edward Ragan III, 17,360; Elvira Allred, 18,801; Charles P. Gaskins, 18,579; R. L. Martin, 18,425; and Bruce Strickland, 18,169.

(State officers and congress), Harlan E. Boyles, 17,173; James A. Graham, 17,842; John C. Brooks, 17,377; Craig Phillips, 16,717; and Walter B. Jones, 18,368; and J. Earl Sermons, unopposed for the board of supervisors of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District, 21,383.

70-Year-Old Just Cruises

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — For 70-year-old Mary B. Rankin, life is just one pleasure cruise after another.

Since September 1978, she has logged 45 cruises aboard the Norwegian luxury liner Sagafjord, living in a special double stateroom that she said gives her "needed closet space."

She said Wednesday she hopes to keep traveling "as long as the bank keeps me afloat."

At the moment, however, Mrs. Rankin is laid up at a Manitowoc hospital for treatment for a foot ailment, "perhaps from too much dancing."

"Maybe on the next cruise I'll have to sit a few dances out," she said.

She plans to catch the Sagafjord at Southampton, England, on Dec. 20 for a trans-Atlantic cruise. Then on Jan. 10, her third world cruise begins and she's booked on every Sagafjord cruise through 1981.

Mrs. Rankin took her first cruise with her husband, and after his death decided to keep at it.

On her most recent voyage, cruise officials threw a 70th birthday party for her, presenting her with a bronze plaque and introducing her as the "First Lady of the Sea."

Life As It's Lived Familiar Road Is Paved With Good Intentions

By GAIL MICHAELS

The road to remodeling is paved with good intentions, and in our house that's just about all.

We were just full of good intentions when we bought our house. We had to be. The only attractive feature of this abode was its price. But to a couple emerging from two years of school and negative income, this was enough. And we were certain that with a negligible amount of our own time, we could transform our new residence into a veritable dream cottage.

One of the first big projects was the kitchen. I set aside one evening to strip the cabinets. The previous owners had rendered them antique yellow. Actually, we weren't sure if the antiquing came from Glidden or grease. Whatever the source, the effect was less than appetizing, so I bought myself a can of Strip-Ease and prepared to restore their original pine finish.

Unfortunately, the instructions called for neoprene gloves. Not a paint store in town carried this seemingly exotic product. Neither did the hardware stores. What's more, none of the proprietors had any idea where I could get such a thing. Two months later I made a special trip to Chapel Hill to buy them.

I thought I had really made a find. The next day I spotted some at Smithfield's Revco.

Although my enthusiasm had waned a bit, I gathered my materials once more. Upon further reading of the instructions, however, I discovered that I must extinguish the oven's pilot light. I wanted to blow it out. But for some reason Phillip insisted that I turn off the gas at its source.

He said something about there being too much risk of blowing up the house. By that time I figured it was a risk I was willing to take.

Still, I marched out to the gas tank behind the house, lifted its lid, and studied the gadgetry underneath. As far as I could see, there was nothing to indicate that it was anything more than a Tinkertoy exhibit. I would have had a better idea of where to begin if I had been at the controls of a Boeing 747.

I stomped back into the house. "You know so much about gas, you turn it off!"

Phillip rolled his eyes and walked out to have a go at it. Fifteen minutes later he was back.

"You'll have to call the gas company. I don't know anything about these older models."

"You know more about the new ones?"

He scowled. "This one is an antique."

"Like everything else in this house."

"Well, don't look at me. You're the one who said we could fix it up in no time."

"I must have meant that in an intergalactic sense. I'll be 70 before I can carry out all the instructions on this Strip-Ease."

"There's no need to despair. Once you call the gas company, you'll be all set."

"That's what you think. While you were outside, I did some more reading. We're supposed to have excellent air circulation at floor level. That means air conditioning."

"So?"

"So, only someone who wears a keg around his neck and eats Alpo could do that in November. Besides, this stuff is not supposed to work well below 65 degrees."

Phillip sighed. "What are the alternatives?"

"We could leave them as they are. Actually, that shade of yellow is beginning to grow on me. It's sort of rustic."

Phillip looked up at the livingroom ceiling. "I know what you mean. It's the same way I feel about green."

Afternoon Ceremony Performed Saturday

WILSON — The marriage of Shirley Jean Brooks Worley to Fred Thomas Speight Jr., both of Greenville, was solemnized Saturday afternoon at two o'clock on the lawn of the home of the bridegroom's parents.

The Rev. William Edwards officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Brooks of Hot Springs and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomas Speight Sr. of Rt. 4, Wilson.

The bride was wearing a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and chantilly lace. The fitted organza bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline outlined with a scalloped chantilly lace ruffle and full length tapered sleeves ending with a ruffle over the hand. Bridal buttons fastened the sleeves. The bouffant tiered organza skirt flowed to floor length. Scalloped chantilly lace edged each tier, ending with a lace bordered hemline. The detachable chapel train of organza was encircled with a scalloped chantilly lace ruffle.

She chose a layered fingertip mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with scalloped chantilly lace accented with lace motifs flowing from a lace cap etched with seed pearls for her headpiece. She carried a colonial bouquet of daisies, mums and baby's breath. Her only jewelry was a diamond necklace belonging to the mother of the bridegroom. She was given in marriage by her daughter, Candice Love Worley, who was dressed like her mother.

Mrs. Phyllis Hunter of Culloden, W. Va., sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a dusty rose gown of qiana styled with a surplice bodice and cowl drape in the back and long pleated skirt. She carried a colonial bouquet of fuji mums, pixies and daisies in shades of pink and burgandy with rose streamers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Sandra Mercer and Miss Vivian Speight of Wilson, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Angela Pangle of Hot Springs, cousin of the bride, Miss Donna Mitchell of Goldsboro, Miss Mary Sykes of Rocky Mount, Miss Becky Gibbs of Greenville. Each were dressed in pink or burgandy like the honor attendant with a floral hair accent and carried similar bouquets.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Jeff Speight, brother of the bridegroom, Danny Mercer, brother-in-law of the bridegroom,

MRS. FRED THOMAS SPEIGHT JR.

Frank Bogue and Cooper Pitt, all of Wilson, Danny Jernigan of Pikeville and Scott Mazingo of Eureka.

Wedding music was presented by Russell Roebuck of Wilson, organist, and Vivian Speight, vocalist.

Following the ceremony the parents of the bridegroom entertained at a reception on the patio. Assisting in serving were Miss Phyllis Smith and Miss Tammy Procter. The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and decorated with an arrangement of pink and burgundy mums, gladioli and baby's breath.

The bridal table was covered in lace and held the bride's register and her portrait. Miss Donna Tripp presided at the register.

The bridegroom's parents entertained the wedding party at a brunch at the Western Sizzlin, Wilson, prior to the wedding. The bride and bridegroom presented gifts to their attendants and to their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Speight are managers of Western Sizzlin, Greenville, where they will live after a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., and Nassau, Bahamas.

Dear Abby

Godchildren, Remember Godparents

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from RECONSIDERED the widow who changed her mind about being a godmother when she was told that she was expected to heap gifts on her godchild, reminded me of my own situation.

My husband and I are godparents to six children. We remember them on all gift-giving occasions — birthdays, Christmas, Easter, confirmations and graduations — but not one of them has ever remembered us. Their mothers telephone to say that Johnny or Susie has received our card with check enclosed. . . . but you know how kids are these days: they are too busy to write thank you notes, but they really appreciated it.

I wonder how many godchildren remember their godparents on their special days? We have birthdays, anniversaries, and there is also Mother's Day and Father's Day.

What a joy it would be to receive a card from a godchild. It wouldn't take much time to sign the card and address the envelope.

Giving is a two-way street, you know. I suppose I really shouldn't blame the children. Their parents should have taught them better manners.

FORGOTTEN GODPARENTS

DEAR FORGOTTEN: Thanks for writing. This should activate a few guilty consciences. Godchildren, when was the last time you remembered your godparents?

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen a problem like mine in your column, but I hope you can advise me. I am in love with a man who by his own admission is a homosexual. He is a very fine person, and we think the world of each other. Abby, I have been in love with him for several years — I don't care if he is a homosexual. He would make a wonderful husband and companion.

Do you think he could ever change and forget about men if he really tried? Maybe I should tell you that he has never encouraged me in a romantic way — never kissed me or even held my hand. He has friends galore, but isn't interested in any particular man.

What are a homosexual's chances for changing? I won't give up unless I am certain it is absolutely hopeless. I can't stop thinking about him. I've never been in love like this before. Please help me.

IN LOVE IN JERSEY

DEAR IN LOVE: A homosexual's chances for changing his sexual preference are zero — unless he is very strongly motivated to change. From what you say, he appears to be perfectly satisfied the way he is. Do yourself (and him) a favor and give up.

DEAR ABBY: I have finally learned to be completely honest when I am asked a direct question by people who want to know me better. It has to do with what I have been doing lately.

I don't know quite how to handle their uneasiness when I tell them that I spent the last two years in a mental institution.

I am now ready to get back into the mainstream of life, but I'm not sure many people are ready for me. Any suggestions?

BEEN THERE AND BACK

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your honesty is admirable, but the problem is not yours; it's that of the people who get uneasy. The more natural and relaxed you are, the easier it will be for them to overcome their initial discomfort. Let's hope the day will come when people will learn to accept mental illness as naturally as they accept other illnesses. Honesty such as yours helps. God bless.

Waiting For Disaster

Tuesday the Pitt County Board of Education voted to oppose the possibility of a city and county school systems merger.

The action apparently means that the county school board will withdraw its support of the Merger Study Committee, which recently has voted to proceed with its work.

It is a short sighted attitude on the part of the Pitt County Board of Education.

There are big problems concerning financing and district lines which involve both school districts. The lines are no more than artificial ones set years ago when some of what is now Greenville was a rural area. In addition, the Pitt County commissioners are having major problems in providing adequate funding for the two separate school systems.

These problems are not going to go away; rather they are going to get worse.

The time could come when the county board's head-in-the-sand attitude may result in forced action, perhaps by the State Legislature or the courts.

We can study our problems now and attempt to work out solutions, or we can take the course the county board is assuming and do nothing until disaster strikes.

Voting Record A Proud One

Regardless of any individual voter's choice of candidates, Pitt County has something to be proud of in regard to Tuesday's election.

We had what is sure to be a record vote. Not only were the numbers impressive but so was the percentage of eligible voters going to the polls.

Some 74 percent of our electorate cast ballots, well above the state average of 67 percent and far ahead of the national average.

The large turn-out came on a dreary day, which meant many voters had to stand in line in the rain.

That is outstanding participation in the political process, and we are proud of our citizens.

Ideal Guest Is In Demand

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.

(AP) — From time to time, in keeping with the democratic processes and for want of a better idea, this podium is turned over to the patient public who make these thrice weekly ravings possible so they may have their day in court.

Quite a few readers have been taken with my modest boast of being the perfect guest. "Cheerful, attentive, tidy. Capable of a two-minute shtik on almost any topic of conversation from Afghanistan to Zen... I even make my own bed."

That description of my traveling repertoire resulted in many invitations from across the land, including a standing invite from editor Becky Barber of the Grants, (N.M.) Daily Beacon, who assures me that the ambience in uranium country is without parallel.

Winnie and Saul Siegel, who write that they recently moved to Santa Cruz, Calif., inform me that I "sound like a splendid guest: it does not sound as if you store things in other people's houses as you take off for the trip of a lifetime, nor would you bring a package of Miso as a house gift."

Of that, dear sir and madam, I am perfectly innocent. I have never brought a package of Miso as a house gift, since I do not even know what Miso is or does.

Still, the Siegels wrongfully suspect that I am a Californian: "What gave you away was your reference to available two-minute conversations on a variety of subjects. This is the absolute perfect amount of time for a California conversation. I would like to call to your attention Truman Capote's remark that everyone he knew who moved to California lost two I.Q. points a year for each year lived there."

Well, I am glad Capote and the Siegels said it, as I am still receiving several invitations to a hanging each month because of what I wrote about imperious restaurant hostesses who delight in sitting you where you don't want to sit.

"I am perplexed over the descriptive words you used for hostesses," writes Gertrude Riley, of Winneconne, Wis., who has been a hostess for 15 years. "Hostile, Teutonic, surly, hellions... Have you ever watched the footwork of a hostess and her waitresses? Would you have a better understanding if you walked in their footsteps?"

Like several other guardians of the "Wait to Be Seated" sign, hostess Riley offered to cook my goose if ever I dropped by her restaurant.

In a recent column I lamented the demise of filler writers on big city newspapers, the ingenious trivia curators whose job it was to even off columns of hot type with odd facts.

"Weep no more," writes Robert J. Scott from Lancaster, Pa. "Fillers are alive and well here among medium-sized city newspapers. It seems the old filler writer never really passed away... As testimony to his vitality, here is a smattering of fillers from recent issues of the Lancaster New Era, all under the AP slug:

"Moscow (AP) — Russian revolutionary Leon Trotsky was ordered into exile in 1928."

"London (AP) — Britain introduced the penny post system in 1840."

"Cairo (AP) — The Great Sphinx was built for the fourth Egyptian dynasty."

Well, fancy that.

"Damn, but you were' rough on the Swedes," writes John Betolatti from neighboring Bethel, Conn., after I rebuked them for failing to give the Nobel Prize to Vladimir Nabokov in his lifetime. "Sometimes I resent them, too, because they seem to have such a purchase on things we just can't seem to handle... common sense to seek happiness, fairness, mental stability, warlessness. They are the best examples of humanity, except for maybe the Eskimos."

Dozens and dozens of readers have written in telling me how to cure the larcenous habits of Bruce the Bold, the squirrel who regularly raids my bird feeder. Many more have written in to confess failure against a like predator.

"Have a feeling," writes Sue Gaslie of Bristol, Conn., "that Bruce is the same thief who enjoys our 50 percent sunflower-cracked corn mixture. If I'm a day late with the seeds, he sits on the pile of logs outside 'with a maloccluded smile of defiance!' — loved your line — I too have tried every scare tactic, much to his amusement."

Mrs. Lawrence Liebowitz of Matawan, N.J., claims to have "finally found a way to outsmart your Bruce... Instead of using a wire or string to hang your feeder use nylong fishing line."

Edmund Zawacki of Madison, Wis., told me about an ingenious bird feeder made of aluminum and glass by a man in Sauk City "that looks like an antique street lamp but I assure you no squirrel or pigeon can raid." I mean to send for it one of these days to see if Bruce really can be contained.

No way, insists Hazel Kirchner of Rexford, Kan. However, she offers "a tip to save costs. Go to the feed store and buy hen scratch (not chicken) in 50-pound

Glaring Weakness

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The scene is familiar to any visitor to another country: the American trying to make himself understood in the market, restaurant or hotel and believes that if he shouts loudly enough, the poor "foreigner" will finally get the message.

Language is a glaringly weak point for otherwise well educated North Carolinians, as documented at a recent conference on international education held at Chapel Hill.

Resulting from that gathering of educators and state officials was a look at problems in teaching foreign languages in North Carolina, and some possible solutions.

Why this growing concern with speaking a foreign language? In countries whose borders are short and whose neighbors speak another tongue, second and even third, languages are commonplace.

The United States has been for a long time relatively isolated and most people saw no need for another language.

All that is changing rapidly. What happens in the Middle East or Soviet Union or China has far-reaching consequences for us. The technological and knowledge explosion sweeping the globe is taking place not just in this nation, but Japan and Europe as well.

World Trade

Then there is the matter of rapidly increasing international trade as the European Common Market gets into operation, and Tar Heels find themselves dealing in commerce with counterparts in many different lands. This close contact with people and languages from abroad will intensify even more as the electronics communication revolution continues apace, daily shrinking the world.

North Carolina has three major industries much involved in world trade: tobacco, textiles, and furniture. There is a growing automobile components manufacturing industry. Attendants at the conference felt that foreign affairs — not only language, but geography and philosophy and religion — will increase in importance and require improved educational opportunities in high schools and colleges across the state.

In looking at problems currently hampering international studies, the conference catalogued these concerns, as detailed in a report compiled by the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research:

— Classroom work is heavy on textbooks pushing grammar and translation rather than conversation and understanding.

— Spanish, German, French and Latin are practically the only languages available to high school students. Only one school offers Russian; nine teach Chinese. Only about one-third of the schools provide language studies beyond two years. No public elementary schools offer language programs.

— Fewer than one-fourth of the students are enrolled in a foreign language, and the dropout rate is sharp, with up to half dropping after the first year, and up to 80 percent dropping after two years.

Unlearned

— And even when completing two years for college certification, almost 75 percent of the some 3,000 students taking foreign lan-

The IRS Is Everywhere

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service is everywhere. An item in the newspaper the other day revealed that IRS agents had their field glasses focused on the VIP boxes in Philadelphia Veterans Stadium for the world Series. The boxes are, for the most part, owned by corporations who use them to entertain their customers.

The reason the IRS was watching so carefully was that in order to make the boxes a deductible business expense "Businessmen entertaining clients must engage in the active conduct of business during the entertainment with the person being entertained. The active conduct of the business must be the principal aspect of the combined business and entertainment."

This has made many businessmen who take their customers to sports events very nervous.

ART BUCHWALD

I was at the Meadowlands watching a New York Giant football game a week after the IRS ruling was publicized, and I happened to be sitting in a box next to two men who apparently were in the dress business. I overheard their conversation.

"Now Sam, the reason I brought you here today is I wanted you to see my new spring line."

"I'd like to watch the game, Irving, if it's all the same to you."

"You see the green jerseys the Giants are wearing? That's the green we're using in our pullover sequin disco dresses. The jerseys will be cut a little lower at the neck than what the tackles are wearing, but the sleeves will be the same length and you can roll them up like the guards have done."

"Irving, it's third down and inches to go. Will you please shut up."

"You're probably wondering what I've done with my pantsuits. Would you believe we've designed a knicker just like the center is wearing? You can wear them with bright wool socks. The women will go crazy for them. We're offering them in Redskin Maroon, Oilier Blue, Steeler Black, or Cleveland Brown."

"They missed the first down! They're going to have to kick."

"You won't have any kick coming, Sam, if you take the whole line. I guarantee you you'll be sorry you didn't order more. We also have a teen-age look this year with leather belts in goal-line stripes."

"Look, Irving, the left end hurt his shoulder."

"I'm glad you mentioned that. We have a lace off-the-shoulder gown that Dior couldn't duplicate for $1,000."

Other Editors Say Back To Stability

(The Wilson Times)

Jamaica's rejection of "democratic socialism" last week went largely unnoticed in the U.S., overshadowed by the Iraqi-Iranian war and renewed hope for the release of the 52 Americans held hostage by the Iranians.

Following a landslide victory, Boston-born Edward Seaga was sworn in Saturday as prime minister, ending a six-year reign by pro-Cuban Michael Manley's Peoples National Party. Seaga's Jamaican Labour Party won at least 51 of Jamaica's 60 parliamentary seats.

The victory of Harvard-educated Seaga was hailed by the Carter administration and Republican Ronald Reagan's advisers as a defeat for revolutionary socialism in the Caribbean.

Jamaicans traditionally vote along party lines, but ideology took a back seat to economic issues in the campaign. After over 8 years of PNP control, unemployment reached as high as 30 percent; production of goods and services, including tourism, fell steadily for six years; and the foreign debt reached $1.5 billion this year when foreign banks refused to extend credit.

The 2.7 million people of Jamaica have suffered other hardships. Last August Hurricane Allen wiped out most of the island's banana crop, an important earner of foreign exchange, and damaged cocoa and sugar-cane crops.

There is a shortage of necessities such as oil and soap and basic foods — rice, sugar, beans and corn — are in short supply.

Politics is a dangerous game in Jamaica. An estimated 600 persons have been killed this year, with the JLP and PNP each blaming the other.

Seaga advocates increased private enterprise and foreign investment, and has promised to steer Jamaica away from what he considers Manley's ruinously spendthrift programs and dangerous ties with the Cubans.

Washington officials expect Seaga to reopen negotiations with the International Monetary Fund, broken off by the Manley government, to obtain loans for foreign payments. And officials of the World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank and the U.S. Agency for International Development say the Manley regime failed to take advantage of lines of credit aimed at reducing unemployment.

Seaga has vowed to pursue a nonaligned foreign policy, maintaining ties to the West as well as to underdeveloped and Communist countries, but he has no love for Castro and says the Cuban dictator instigated the violence that marked the campaign.

Strength For Today

MEN OF FAITH

What is faith?

The Epistle to the Hebrews defines faith as follows: "Now faith is giving of substance to things hoped for, a test of things not seen." Faith is that power which we poor, weak humans have which enables us to add our efforts to the efforts of the Creator and so continue the process of creation. Faith involves belief, but faith is more than belief. It is the movement of one's whole personality Godward. The Bible urges us to ask God for great things, believing that we will receive them.

Most people have only a limited ability to reach their goals in life by their own efforts alone. As a result, people without faith have a discouraging sense of failure as the years go by. But the person of faith is spared this because he knows that regardless of his condition on this earth he has the power to achieve the greatest of all goals — fellowship with God and ultimate salvation. — Elisha Douglass

Hard Decisions For Investors

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Sometime over the next few years, said the broker, the stock market must make up its mind. It will have to decide whether the country is going to solve its problems or stagnate instead.

He continued: It probably means that you, as one of millions whose fortunes are involved with the stock market, either as direct investors or through pension funds, have some hard decisions to make.

Soon to come, if it hasn't begun, he said, is a milestone of investing history, an economic turning point, perhaps equal in magnitude if not in direction to that which followed World War Two.

At that time, some will recall, there was clear division of opinion, with some people convinced the country would return to the depression of the 1930s, and others who forecast the dawning of a new age.

Said the broker: Something similar is now occurring on Wall Street, where analysts say the Dow Jones average is undervalued and headed higher or, contrarily, that it is now too high and is headed lower.

Two years ago you wouldn't have found such a neat split on the Street, but now they seem to be taking positions, said the broker, whose name is unimportant to the story because he is but one of thousands.

These thousands of brokers and market analysts, he said, seem to be splitting into two schools that assume either of two attitudes:

—Stocks are undervalued. Investors don't realize that stock prices haven't adjusted for inflation. When they do, the Dow, no higher than it was 15 years ago, will double in the next two or three years.

—Stocks reflect the troubled times. There is very little future for industrial growth, and stock market growth, so long as government debt, taxes, regulations and inflation grow, while productivity falls.

As usual, that dumps the amateur investor, who can't afford the risk of an all-or-nothing bet, into the crevice between the two planks, where he sits anxious, confused and unable to act. What does he do?

He averages, said the broker. He "dollar costs." He invests a little bit at a time on a regular monthly or quarterly basis, buying a few shares or even fractions of shares at a time, regardless of price.

Dollar costing is an old, old principle, already used by thousands of investors in mutual funds, dividend reinvestment plans, brokerage house monthly investment plans and investment club portfolios.

When you use dollar cost averaging you assume that while prices will fluctuate day by day, they will rise over a prolonged period of time. When you buy, therefore, becomes of relatively minor importance.

A dollar cost is more interested in investing a fixed sum without fail than in buying a certain number of shares. When prices rise, his fixed sum buys fewer shares. When it falls he acquires more shares.

Since the assumption is made that prices over the long run will rise, you could argue that the dollar cost wins whether prices are rising or falling. In fact, declines are viewed as a buying opportunity.

In her new book, "Money Dynamics For The 1980s" (Prentice Hall), Venita Van Cappel gives this example: You have $100 a month to invest. In the first month you acquire 10 shares at $10 share, in the second you buy 20 shares at $5, and in the third month you again obtain 10 shares for $10 share.

Result: You invested $300 and acquired 40 shares of a stock that has a current selling price of $400. "You have made a $100 gain with the market dropping 50 percent and only returning to where it started."

Dollar costing doesn't preclude losses. A stock, or in fact the entire market, can decline and leave the dollar coster with a loss. But it does reduce the risk, and that much has been proven time after time.

The National Association of Investment Clubs endorses the principle. Ideally, says Tom O'Hara of the association, a member not only invests a fixed sum on a regular basis but also reinvests all dividends.

Many large concerns also lend support through reinvestment plans, in which the company uses dividends to buy shares or fractions of shares, and permits shareholders to make additional investments too.

Such plans have other benefits also. A shareholder can buy fractional amounts of shares — 323 percent of one IBM share, for example; and he can save considerably on brokerage fees, and sometimes even avoid them.

The lesson: If you fear the market, but also fear being left out on a possible rise, dollar costing might be the way to go. It reduces the risk. It eliminates decisions about the day-to-day ups and downs.

"Irving, for heaven's sake, I want to watch the game. Will you shut up?"

"Of course, that's why I brought you here today. You see the cheerleaders with the pompons? I'll tell you a secret, Sam. Pompons are going to be very, very big this spring. We're putting them on all our jumpsuits, and we're backing them with full-page ads in all the newspapers."

"What a runback! Oh, oh, there's a clipping penalty."

"If you don't breathe a word to our competitors we're clipping two inches off our culottes. And we're adding ruffles. It's going to be a big year for ruffles. We're making them in cotton acrylic so all a woman has to do is put them in the washer and hang them up."

"This is turning into a tightknit game."

"Irving, will you stop discussing business for just a few minutes?"

"I can't, Sam. You see, the guy with the binoculars over there? He's from the IRS and someone told me the SOB reads lips."

Patronage Appeals Are Flooding GOP Office

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Republican Party, victorious to an extent surprising even to its own members, has been inundated with calls from people seeking appointment to federal jobs, state party chairman Jack Lee said Tuesday.

Lee, announcing a GOP drive to draw more Democrats into the Republican fold at the local levels in North Carolina, said he was "getting beaten" by the patronage calls.

Noting that the election was barely over, Lee smilingly said: "We aren't used to winning."

Lee said his office has been swamped with calls from Republicans wanting to be considered for federal jobs from U.S. attorneys to officials of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, some of whose employees are political appointees.

The calls have come from party workers as well as some newly enthusiastic Republicans, Lee said.

He said a decision still was to be made on which jobs are political and how those appointments will be made.

Lee said the Convert-a-Democrat drive was intended to give Republicans more strength at the local level across the state to support the party's standing with both U.S. senators, four congressmen and 34 legislators.

Lee said two former Democrats — Bernie Harrell and Dick Titus — would lead the conversion effort.

Harrell and Titus changed their party affiliation to lead the gubernatorial campaign of I. Beverly Lake Jr., also a former Democrat.

Lee said firm plans had not been developed for the drive, which would be aimed at those registered Democrats who have voted Republican.

Addition of the GOP-voting Democrats would bolster the party's rolls and could lead to more Republican candidates, volunteers and organizational strength, Lee said.

"Then we'll be able to show we've got people to tap for raising money and knocking on doors," Lee said.

He said the GOP will be "after the people who vote Republican in the general elections but are registered Democrats," but acknowledged that the party could not readily identify that type of voter.

"I realize there are only two ways to get new Republicans, breed them or get (Democrats) to switch," Lee said, "and I can't last long enough to breed them."

Latest state registration figures show 677,077 Republicans and nearly 2 million Democrats.

Harrell said initial emphasis may be on Democrats in northeastern North Carolina. "No area of the state is more ignored ... and they've given the Democratic Party their votes almost by rote," he said.

Stressing that the GOP "is the party of new ideas," Harrell said, "We're going to go right into the teeth of the Democratic Party."

Mrs. Marty Kaplan wrote her advice in the form of a poem:

Just read your write-up in the Burlington Free Press Love you more and more, never, never less... I feed our feathered friends early every day And they never ever seem to fly away... We feed them salami — that they adore! And spaghetti they seem to love even more... Donuts and waffles are a favorite of theirs too And left over mixed vegetables, so try Mulligan's Stew...

guage placement tests at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1979 failed and had to start language study from the beginning.

The conference concluded that foreign travel, exchange programs, teacher workshops, information for students about future career opportunities, and a broader public recognition of the importance of languages are essential to future success.

The suggestion was made that the state consider establishing a specialty school for international studies.

The possibility of once again requiring two years of a foreign language to qualify for graduation from high school was mentioned, but not pursued in view of the fact that weaknesses in the English language are already abundantly apparent in the schools, and is indeed a contributing factor to the decline of interest in foreign languages by students.

GARLIC IN THE WINDOW

—Don't step on a crack, or you'll break your mother's back.

—Place a clove of garlic in your window frame to ward off the evil eye.

You may be chuckling at these suggestions, but how many of you chucklers nonchalantly walk around a ladder rather than beneath it or are terrified of breaking a mirror?

Although superstitions linger only faintly in American culture, they are still quite strong in many parts of the world. In centuries past, they played a major role in daily life the world over.

Did you know that people were afraid to be without talismans or lucky charms? And gemstones were among the major objects used as such.

For instance, a warrior would wear or carry an agate to protect himself from danger and to ensure victory over his foes. If he was inclined to lose sleep after a day's battle, the agate would cure his insomnia and ensure pleasant dreams.

Amethyst was thought to have a sobering effect—not only on those drunk on alcoholic spirits but also on those drunk with the passion of love.

The emerald was believed to confer the ability to foretell the future and to recognize whether or not a lover was being faithful to his or her vows. Its psychic powers carried over into the realms of memory and logic, so that the wearer of an emerald was assured of eloquent speech.

Gemstones were probably chosen to carry beneficial powers because their mysterious beauty was so spellbinding to our ancestors. More in my next article.

Moscow's Big Parade

Each year on November 7, vehicles carrying missiles, guns and other army equipment rumble through the streets of Moscow in a long military parade. The parade marks the anniversary of the revolution that brought a communist government to Russia. In the fall of 1917, an uprising of workers, sailors and soldiers overthrew the Russian government. The leader of the uprising was Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov, who used the name Lenin. Lenin became the leader of Russia's new communist government, a ruled until his death in 1924. Now on November 7, a huge portrait of Lenin looks out over Moscow's Red Square, as the military parade rolls by.

DO YOU KNOW — What was the name of the revolutionary group Lenin led?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — William Shakespeare wrote "Macbeth."

See Relaxing Of Mail Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service says changes in airline schedules may force it to relax speedy-mail-delivery standards — but not anytime soon.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger told the service's board Thursday that schedule changes since the standards were adopted in 1972 may force alterations in the guidelines also.

The standards are that a letter going up to 50 miles should be delivered the day after it is mailed. A letter going up to 600 miles should be delivered in two days and one going farther should get there in three days. The goal has been to meet the standards 95 percent of the time.

The standards are met consistently for letters carried short distances by truck, but not for letters sent longer distances by air.

After the standards were established, the Postal Service showed improvement in meeting them. But the trend toward improvement has changed in recent years and Bolger said changes in airline schedules are responsible.

Because of sharply higher fuel costs and industry deregulation, airlines have reduced or eliminated flights to many cities.

"If this trend continues, we may have to change our service standards," Bolger said.

He told the board: "Our last resort is to lower our standards. But we are looking at alternatives. ... If we can't reach the goals because of changes in the transportation situation, we should make them more realistic," he said.

A spokesman, who requested anonymity, said after the meeting: "What we are trying to do in the two-day and three-day areas can't be done. That is why the standards might change."

But he any change in the standards would not come soon.

Warns Social Security Going Deeper Into Red

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The national mood against government spending and taxes will make it hard to bail out the failing Social Security system, which will dip deep into the red soon, an economist warns.

"There's no good solution," says Janice Halpern, an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. "The program costs more than we thought. We're either going to have to cut benefits to people or increase taxes on others."

Ms. Halpern, who published a study this week in the New England Economic Review, said new taxes are unlikely in Ronald Reagan's administration.

"In order to assure that they (Social Security officials) can pay the current benefits, they have to raise revenues, and Reagan has indicated he is for tax savings, not increases," she said.

The Social Security fund for the Old Age and Survivors Insurance program will begin to run out of money in 1982 and go $3 billion into the red by 1983, Ms. Halpern said. By 1985 the deficit could be as high as $27.

The fund is one of three in the Social Security system that also includes Medicare and disability insurance.

Association Holds Meeting

The North Carolina Cooperative Education Association held its annual fall conference in Wrightsville Beach recently with the following Pitt Community College personnel attending: JoAnn Leith, chairperson of the business education department; Shirley Moore, advisor to the medical secretary curriculum; Gail Wallace, placement officer; and Terry Shank, director of cooperative education.

Opportunities for in-service participation were offered in the areas of sales techniques, interpersonal communications, interviewing preparation and evaluation of the co-op experience.

Terry Shank was elected as secretary-treasurer for the 1981 year. Ms. Shank served on the publicity committee during 1980.

Elected president was John V. Hamme, N.C. State University, and Holly Carrington of Carolina Power and Light was named president-elect.

We Are Not Afraid To Say "I Don't Know"

"The problem is when there are less people working, there are less people contributing to the fund," said Ms. Halpern. "At the same time, inflation is going up, and the amount of benefits go up with it."

"Traditionally, wages rise faster than prices. But it's really been a negative wage growth since 1977 that is responsible for this."

The Social Security system has been in trouble since the 1960s, and Congress has raised the amount workers and employers contribute to the fund seven times since 1967.

The latest increase comes Jan. 1 when most workers and employers will pay an additional one-half percent of pay to Social Security. But the additional money won't be enough to keep the fund afloat, Ms. Halpern said.

Other suggestions for keeping the fund solvent face resistance. One way — halting escalation in benefits now tied to increases in the Consumer Price Index — would anger the elderly.

"All the lobbying groups for the elderly are going to demonstrate against any change that might cut benefits," Ms. Halpern said.

Another method would mangle surplus money in the disability and Medicaid funds with the depleted retirement fund, or shift financing of the Medicaid program to individual and corporate income taxes, freeing Social Security tax money for the retirement fund.

But that solution presents problems. "Where is that money going to come from, since Reagan wants to cut those taxes as well?" asked Ms. Halpern.

Death Penalty Push Is Raised By Thurmond

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, about to become chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, says he'll do "everything I can" to press for re-enactment of the death penalty for some federal crimes.

"It helps to deter crime. We have so much crime," the South Carolina Republican said Thursday.

"As a circuit court judge in South Carolina," he told a news conference, "I had to send four people to the electric chair. It was my duty to do it. I had no alternative. I think the death penalty helps to deter crime, and I expect as chairman of this committee to do everything I can to bring about a reduction in crime in this country."

Thurmond will replace Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., as committee chairman thanks to the Republicans' winning control of Congress for the first time since 1954.

The bill Thurmond supports would restore capital punishment for treason, espionage and first degree murder, including the assassination of the president, other high-ranking federal officials and visiting dignitaries. It also would cover kidnapping resulting in a death.

Last June, the Senate Democratic leadership headed off a move to pass a death penalty law favored by conservative Republicans.

The Supreme Court struck down a federal death penalty statute in 1972, ruling the law unconstitutional because it had been administered in a capricious and haphazard manner. Several states have since adopted new capital punishment laws that have been upheld by the court.

Thurmond also said that blacks and other minority groups have nothing to fear from Republican control of the Senate.

Blacks, he said, "have one of the best friends they could have in me. I believe in equality for all. I've always tried to treat them fairly and squarely."

Thurmond was once allied with the Dixiecrats, Southern Democrats who opposed the civil rights platform of the regular Democratic Party in 1948.

He became a Republican in 1964 and campaigned for GOP presidential nominee Barry M. Goldwater against President Lyndon B. Johnson, who had been instrumental in congressional passage that year of the Civil Rights Act.

He said he "wouldn't hesitate to confirm" a black to the Supreme Court, but said it was "not absolutely necessary" to have one replace Justice Thurgood Marshall when he leaves the bench.

Marshall, 72, the court's only black justice, has given no hint he plans to step down, although he has had health problems.

Thurmond noted that he and Kennedy compromised on a pending proposed revision of the federal criminal code this year and said he hoped to have Kennedy's cooperation next year.

But Thurmond said he would like to restore the full power of home-state senators to block presidential judicial nominations, a system Kennedy challenged.

And Thurmond reiterated his opposition to school busing to achieve racial balance and his support of restrictions on abortions and voluntary public school prayers.

But he was cool toward the idea of enforcing those ideas through constitutional amendments. "You can't put everything into the Constitution," he said.

Speaker

The Rev. Lacy E. Simpson will deliver the services at Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church on Sunday at 11 a.m. The Rev. Simpson is a resident of 506 Peedin St., Selma. He graduated from E.E. Smith High School and from Shaw University in 1963 with a B.A. degree in Sociology. He received his masters of divinity in 1966 from Shaw also. He has furthered his studies at East Carolina University and the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

The chairman of the pulpit committee Clarence Bradley and the church invites the public to attend.

Dr. Monroe

Recommended

Dr. Edwin W. Monroe of Greenville has been recommended by Senator Robert Morgan for membership on the National Advisory Environmental Health Sciences Council.

The council is headed by Dr. David Rall, currently at Research Triangle Park, near Raleigh.

The appointment is for four years. Dr. Monroe is associate dean for external affairs, School of Medicine, East Carolina University.

PARTIES GIVEN

The members of the Mother's League presented post-Halloween parties this week at the Winterville Rest Home, Gray's Rest Home, and Ennis' Rest Home. Each patient received Halloween goodies, cake and punch. Rosa Barnes read a family prayer and "Step by Step" from "Daily Word." The president, Mrs. Emma May, says that gestures of this kind are shown to needy and disabled at other times during the year.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

South, declarer at six hearts, presented his opponents with a trick that he did not have to lose. But the trick was "twice blessed," for it returned 100 percent interest immediately.

Once North jump raised hearts, South's hand became enormous. He started to cuebid, since he wanted to convey to his partner that a grand slam was laydown if North had both red kings and the heart and club aces. When North failed to cuebid these cards, South contented himself with six hearts.

West led the king of clubs, and when dummy appeared, it seemed that even a small slam was in jeopardy. South had no losers except in the diamond suit, but he might easily lose two tricks there.

Looking at all four hands, it is obvious that the diamond finesse is doomed to fail. Had declarer relied on that chance alone, he would have been defeated. Fortunately, his technical skill was equal to the task he had set for himself.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and immediately ruffed a club with the nine of trumps. After drawing the outstanding trumps in two rounds, declarer cashed the ace and king of spades. Dummy was re-entered with a trump and the ten of spades was led. When East followed with a low spade, declarer sluffed his three of diamonds!

West was rather surprised to find himself winning a spade trick, but he was not exactly pleased with the unpleasant choice of alternatives he now faced. If he led a diamond, it would be in the jaws of declarer's ace-queen tenace. If he exited with a black card, declarer would ruff in dummy while discarding the queen of diamonds from his hand. Either way, the defenders would score only a spade trick.

What if East produced an honor on the third round of spades? Declarer would ruff, and would have to fall back on the diamond finesse for his slam. However, he would be no worse off than when he started.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deal opening leaders!" Another guest, Louis S. Styns, minister of Old Fort Church of Christ, provides the Thought of the Day, that of decision making in life.

Currently, "Hospitality House" is airing from 3 to 3:30 p.m. on Saturdays over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington. At a later date the program will be rescheduled for its regular Sunday slot.

Loan For Motor Home Easier
Than One For 1980 'Dallas Party'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mr. Lucrelov, the loan officer, peered over his glasses, incredulous. "You want a loan? For a party?"

"Yes, sir," I said, feeling my face redden. "It's a

'Dallas' party." Lucrelov frowned. "See, some friends of ours gave a 'Dallas' party last spring, when J.R. Ewing was shot. We drank Lone Star beer and ate ranch-style barbeque and watched the final episode of 'Dallas.' We had so much fun, my wife and I promised to throw a 'Who Shot J.R.?' party this fall."

"Mmm-hmm." "We thought it would be simple enough, but then the actors' strike happened and then, well, CBS sort of complicated things."

I explained that the CBS genius for hype, which so had expertly manifested itself in keeping the "Dallas" mystery alive through the long TV summer, had struck another high mark in promotion. CBS and Lorimar Productions, which makes "Dallas," aren't simply going to reveal who shot J.R. in an hour-long episode.

No, they're staging "Dallas Week," as the promo call it. "Dallas Month" is closer to the truth. You can almost see the network executives rubbing their hands in glee. The great revelation has been spread over a 22-day period. It's the Texas "Shogun."

Last night (Thursday), CBS broadcast a "Dallas" repeat. Then, tonight (when many thought the revelation would be made) CBS will repeat the episode in which J.R. was shot.

Afterward, the premiere episode of "Dallas" finally hits the air. Alas, it doesn't spill the grand answer. Instead, our slimy hero lies close to death as his wimpy brother, Bobby, takes control of Ewing Oil and Miss Ellie screws her face into a worried expression and says, "Oh my God."

On Sunday, Nov. 9, there's yet another new "Dallas." This time J.R. gets another operation while his wife, Sue Ellen, grapples with guilt (of the irrational variety, presumably). She thinks she may have given the boy some hot lead in a boozy fog.

Then, on Friday, the 14th of November, there is a third new "Dallas" of this delayed CBS season, and a week later, on the 21st, the culprit is at last revealed. We find out why he (or she) did it in an episode one week later.

"Understand why I need the loan, Mr. Lucrelov? I mean, that's one heck of a party. Maybe CBS can afford that, selling those 'Dallas' ads for half a million per minute, but I can't."

Lucrelov didn't smile as he shook his head. He was clearly no lover of "Dallas" nor sponsor of three-week parties.

"Sorry," he said, not meaning it. "Come see us when you want to buy a motor home."

Ron Sewell, the city's director of Engineering and Inspections, informed local citizens that in order to successfully continue the progress that has begun on the 14th Street improvements project, it will be necessary to close 14th from Dickinson Avenue to Farmville Boulevard, effective Nov. 13 through Dec. 31.

Sewell said the street segment will be closed to all but local traffic and access will be maintained to all local businesses and property.

Motorists, according to Sewell, will be asked to utilize Raleigh Avenue, located one block from 14th, as a detour street during the improvement phase on 14th.

"We realize the inconvenience and at times the hardships that may be placed on the residents of the area and the public in general during this transitional period of construction," the city spokesman said. "Therefore, in order to accomplish the desired results, we are soliciting the cooperation of all citizens."

Sewell said that anyone with questions relative to the closing of the street should feel free to contact the Engineering Department at 752-4137, Ext. 211.

Might Take Court Offer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan, who lost his bid for a second term in this week's elections, indicated Thursday he would consider appointment to North Carolina's Supreme Court if such an offer is made.

Speculation that Morgan or possibly Rep. L. Richardson Preyer of Greensboro, also defeated in Tuesday's election, might win a seat on the court arose Thursday after Justice Walter E. Brock announced he will retire Dec. 1. Preyer resigned a lifetime appointment as a U.S. district judge when he ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1964. He could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Morgan said he would not rule out accepting a seat on the court if it is offered.

"I just haven't given any thought to what my future plans will be," said Morgan, who was unseated by Republican John East of Greenville. "I hadn't even had time to think about such a thing."

But Morgan added, "I love the law, I'd say that. I practiced law all of my life until the last six years in the Senate. It never dawned on me about being a judge."

State Rep. Henry E. Frye of Greensboro, who had been considered a possible candidate for the Supreme Court bench, said he was no longer interested. Frye was elected Tuesday to the state Senate.

Both ECU, Miami Face Similar Problems

Freshman Standout

East Carolina's Chuck Bishop (8) is brought to a halt after a 20-yard gain on a fake punt Saturday night against William & Mary. Bishop, originally a quarterback, is currently seeing most of his action in the defensive backfield, but would love to return to the duties for which he was recruited. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The last time the Pirates of East Carolina went to Florida, it turned into a nightmare. They lost to Florida State, 63-7. The lone bright spot in the game was a 100-yard kickoff return by Anthony Collins for the Pirate touchdown.

This Saturday afternoon at 4 p.m., the Pirates will be back in Florida for another date. This time, in the Orange Bowl, they'll be facing the University of Miami Hurricanes — the only team to beat Florida State this year.

Oddly enough, both teams are going into the game with similar problems. But that of Miami seems tame compared to East Carolina's.

Miami quarterback Jim Kelly, injured (hip pointer) in last week's game against Penn State, is injured, and it is uncertain how much, if any, action he'll see.

East Carolina lost its regular starting quarterback two weeks ago, when Carlton Nelson was ruled out for the rest of the year with a neck injury. Now, his replacement, Greg Stewart, may be sidelined for the Miami game with an ankle injury.

Backing up Kelly will probably be Mike Rodrigue, who had attempted 34 passes, completed 12 for 173 yards with two interceptions. He's rushed 15 times for 53 yards.

Backing up Stewart will probably be Larry Brobst. His statistics follow:

That's it. He has yet to play a down as a varsity collegiate player. The freshman from Savannah, Ga., will be getting the roughest kind of baptism.

Miami, ranked as high as #13 on the polls earlier in the year, after opening up with four straight wins, has since found the going tough, bowing in three straight games — all to nationally ranked teams.

The Hurricanes beat Louisville, 24-10; Florida A&M, 49-0; Houston, 14-7; and Florida State, 10-9, before losing to Notre Dame, 32-14, Mississippi State, 34-31, and Penn State, 27-12.

"They have a great team with great talent," Coach Ed Emory of East Carolina said. "They run a pro-type team. They don't switch around a lot of offense, and they don't do a lot of moving on defense. They are just solid, and get the job done."

The loss to Mississippi State was considered something of an upset right after it happened, but that team turned right around and handed previously unbeaten and number one ranked Alabama a 6-3 defeat the next week.

"Every team that has beaten them is ranked this week," Emory added.

"We are really going to have to play heads up ball. Matching up against their secondary is going to be awfully tough, but playing Miami should give our young kids a great opportunity."

Having to use a green quarterback puts an extra load on the Pirates. "We aren't waiting until the last minute on this," Emory said. "We announced Wednesday to our team that Brobst is the number one quarterback now and that Stewart will not start. We want them to be mentally prepared when they take the field knowing the situation, not having to wait until just before the game to tell them."

Emory has confidence in Brobst. "He ran the wishbone at his high school in Savannah, where he was named 'Player of the Year' last year. His team won the Georgia state championship the past two years, so we know that he has great potential."

Backing him up will be Bob Miller, also a freshman, but with a year of prep school behind him. Chuck Barnett, another freshman, from Charlotte Olympic, is next in line.

With Kelly, the Hurricanes can be as devastating as their namesakes. Without him, they are still a very good team. During the past three years, Miami has had excellent recruting years. "Last year's recruits were one of the best classes in the country," Emory said.

East Carolina, too, will be trying to continue its scoring streak, now at 106 games in a row. That streak stands third in the nation, behind Oklahoma and Southern California.

Miami's offense has rushed for 135.3 yards a game, and passed for 180.1. Defensively, the Hurricanes have held their opponents to 141 yards on the ground and 131.4 through the air. But one must remember that four of their opponents are nationally ranked teams.

Halfback Smokey Roan is the leading rusher, compiling 295 yards on 80 carries. Fullback Chris Hobbs is next with 220 on 58 lugs. Roan's backups, Mark Rush and Keith Griffin, are the only other Hurricanes with more than 100 yards with 115 and 110, respectively.

Kelly, meanwhile, is the key to the offense. While he has only 13 yards rushing, he's hit on 74 on 144 passes for 987 yards and six touchdowns. His top receivers have been flanker Larry Brodsky, listed as second team for this game, with 17 catches for 329 yards and one touchdown. Flanker Jim Joiner has pulled in 14 for 265 yards, while split end Pat Walker has 8 for 148 yards. Rush has caught 15 for 121 yards.

Their leading scorer, however, is kicker Dan Miller, with 27 points, including five of 12 field goals and all 12 PAT's.

East Carolina's offense has rushed for 241.3 yards a game, while picking up 48.3 through the air. The defense has given up 186.0 on the group and 138.0 through the air.

However, it is the aerial defense that has been the weakest for the Pirates this year.

Theodore Sutton, who is making a run at the career record of Carlester Crumpler in rushing, leads the ground-gainers so far with 493 yards on 109 carries. Anthony Collins is next with 390 followed by Mike Hawkins with 333.

Stewart, should he play, will be trying to improve on his 36 yards rushing and 146 passing, hitting 36 of 63 passes.

Vern Davenport and Collins have been the top receivers, each catching nine. Davenport has 116 yards and Collins, 89. Hawkins is next with eight for 65.

Collins, who is the third leading scorer in ECU history, has 50 points on the season.

The game will be 'Homecoming for the Hurricanes, and coach Howard Schnellenberger calls the game one of "the most important of the season," since the 'Canes are in the midst of a three-game tumble. "It is vital that we get back on the right track during the month of November," Schnellenberger said.

Next week, the Hurricanes travel to meet Southeastern Conference member Vanderbilt in Memphis, while the Pirates are at home to close out their Ficklen Stadium slate against defending Division II national champion Eastern Kentucky.

If Bishop Had 'Druthers' He'd Be A Quarterback

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When Chuck Bishop came to East Carolina, he fully expected to be playing quarterback for the Pirates.

But early on, the Richmond County freshman found himself headed for the defensive secondary. He didn't like it, but he wanted to play.

Last week, Bishop had two runs that helped set up touchdowns for the Pirates against William & Mary. First, he was the up-man in the Pirate punt formation, and got the ball instead of the kicker, running for over 20 yards and a first down. Later, he took a free kick return back over 40 yards to set up another score for his teammates.

Despite this, he would just as soon be up behind center, getting that snap.

When injuries sidelined Carlton Nelson and Greg Stewart, the top two quarterbacks on the ECU team, there was some question as to whether Bishop might be moved back to quarterback this fall, but he doesn't foresee it — at least right now.

"I'm not planning on going back to quarterback this year,

It would be hard to move back this late in the season," he said.

"But I wouldn't mind moving back for next season. I've played both offense and defense before, but I lean toward the offense."

Coach Ed Emory, too, does not foresee Bishop's return to an offensive position for the present. "He's much too valuable where he is. He's the back-up to both of our corner men, plus he has that great return ability. It's a possibility in the future."

Emory admitted, too, that it was no easy task convincing Bishop to move to the defense. "We just about had to rope tie him to get him to move."

Bishop said that switching to the defensive secondary was no big problem for him. "I've played just about every position on the team anyway," he said. "I've been playing since I was a little kid, and I've been at every position except the defensive line during that time."

Chuck also was 't hurt by his home life. His father has been a football coach for some time, and was head coach at Richmond County during the son's senior year. "We spent a lot of time looking at film together, and that helped me a lot," Chuck said.

Bishop was recruited by a number of schools, including Duke, State, East Carolina and Georgia Tech. "I really was looking at State until Bo Rein left. Pat Dye was recruiting me here and Coach Emory recruited me originally for Georgia Tech."

"I wanted to play quarterback, but most of the schools told me that I was too small (5-9, 175). I felt that I could still play on a wishbone team. That was one of the reasons I came here."

While Bishop likes to be where the ball is, he admits that being the deep man on the punt return team gives him some of the thrill he misses by not being on offense. "I feel good with the football. If returning punts is the only way for me to get the football, then I'll take it."

"I'm always a little nervous on my first reception of the game, but after that it's no problem. I just concentrate on catching the ball, and judge where everyone is by peripheral vision."

Bishop has the "go" signal at all times. He decides whether to run or take a fair catch, regardless of whether the line is in a return situation or trying to block the punt. There is only one rule, and that is not to fair catch the ball inside the ten.

"On the deep kicks, I line up with my heels at the ten. If I see that the ball is going to go over my head, I give a fair catch signal and try to look like the ball is somewhere else to draw the defensive people's eyes away from where it really is to give it a better chance to get into the end zone (for a touchback)."

Still, Bishop longs for the offensive side of the football. "I really want to get back into quarterbacking," he admits. "But the defensive coaches seem to like me where I am."

In Wake Of Upsets, You Wonder Who's Next

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

A betting man would have to say there won't be much of an encore when the nation's college football teams go at it again Saturday, but then many a betting man didn't collect last week on what were supposed to be some sure things.

But, in the wake of Mississippi State's shocking upset of Alabama, Arizona's stunning victory over UCLA and San Jose State's surprising defeat of Baylor, one can't help but ask who's next?

Perhaps with that thought in mind Southern California Coach John Robinson said he didn't intend to see his fourth-ranked Trojans join the latest trend, which this week includes the smoldering ruins of four Top Ten teams. In some cases their national championship aspirations went up in flames.

"We've never lost a payback game, and this is in that category," said Robinson of the Trojans' meeting with Stanford.

Southern Cal narrowly lost the national title last season despite finishing with an 11-0-1 record. That blemish was a 21-21 tie with Stanford, something USC would like to avenge in its regionally televised meeting with the Cardinals at Stanford Stadium.

Elsewhere in games involving Top Ten teams, second-ranked Georgia meets 20th-ranked Florida in their annual scrap at the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., third-ranked Florida State hosts Virginia Tech, No. 5 Nebraska entertains Kansas State, sixth-ranked Alabama hosts LSU, No. 7 Ohio State entertains Illinois, eighth-ranked UCLA hosts Oregon, No. 9 Pitt entertains Louisville and 10th-ranked Penn State hosts North Carolina State.

The revenge factor and national hopes are all the incentive USC has this year because the Trojans are one of five Pac-10 teams eliminated from the conference race and the Rose Bowl picture for various rules violations. A victory by the Trojans, 6-0-1, would eliminate the Cardinals, 6-3 and 3-2 in the Pac-10, from the Rose Bowl picture.

USC's incentive may be good press for the game, but Stanford Coach Paul Wiggins isn't even considering it in his preparations for the game. All he can see is what he calls "the best defense USC has ever had."

Stanford quarterback John Elway is hot, having thrown 11 touchdown passes the last two weeks in Cardinal routs of Washington State and Oregon State. But Wiggins is quick to point out that those teams don't match up to USC.

"The real test will be this week," he said.

The Trojan defense, not likely to permit a damaging aerial circus by Elway, has surrendered just 238 yards per game.

And then there is the USC offense, led by tailback Marcus Allen, the nation's third-leading rusher with 1,080 yards. He will be going against a Stanford defense that ranks ninth in the Pac-10, giving up 414 yards per game.

Clearly, those trends must be reversed if Stanford is to win.

Florida's assignment sounds simple enough on the surface. Stop Herschel Walker and probably wind up beating Georgia to move into contention in the Southeastern Conference race.

But that's easier said than done, and the sensational Bulldog freshman running

The Greenville Steelwheels and the East Carolina intramural office will co-sponsor the first ECU Wheelchair Basketball Tournament this weekend.

The tournament gets started Saturday at 7 p.m. with the Steelwheels meeting the Capital City Hustlers out of Raleigh. At 9 p.m. the Winston-Salem Smokers face the Richmond Rim Riders.

The third place game will be played Sunday at 1 p.m. and the championship game will follow that at 3 p.m.

The Steelwheels, 0-2 on the season, are led by Richard Hudson with a 12.5 points-per-game average. The Hustlers, 0-4 this season, are led by Troy Perkins, who averaged 12.4 points a game a year ago.

Winston-Salem, 5-1, are led by the Carolinas Conference top two scorers, Otis Thompson and Elmer Clayton. Richmond, the Capital Conference champions in 1979 and a member of the National final four two years ago, is paced by Tom Brown, who hit 17.2 points a game last season.

Admission is $1 for a single doubleheader and $1.50 for the tournament. Tickets can be purchased at the door or from team members, the ECU intramural office, Circle K or Gamma Sigma fraternity.

Neither State Nor Penn State Want Repeat Of Last Year's Game

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Football coaches for Penn State and North Carolina State both will be hoping their teams' matchup this time around is different from last year's.

The Wolfpack lost in 1979 and the Nittany Lions developed a collective nervous ulcer.

On the final play of the game, Herb Menhardt's 54-yard field goal gave Penn State a 9-7 win at Raleigh.

"Last year's win was one of the most exciting games I've ever seen," Lions tight end Brian Scovill recalled. "But that was last year. We have to keep our pose and keep the proper frame of mind."

First-year head coach Monte Kiffin's Wolfpack is 4-4, coming off a 24-0 loss to Maryland. Averaging 325 yards offense previously, N.C. State was held to 194 yards by the Terrapins in absorbing its first blanking in 112 games since 1970.

Penn State heads into Saturday's game with coach Joe Paterno pleased about his squad's last performance but, as usual, looking for a better one.

"The Miami game was our best effort on all levels against a good football team," Paterno said of the Nittany Lions' 27-12 win over the Hurricanes. "Overall, it was the best balanced game we have played. We get better all the time and I'm happy with the improvement."

The win propelled the 7-1 Lions to No. 10 in the Associated Press college poll this week.

"We still must get better," Paterno said. "I was disappointed with our kicking game again, so we must work on it. We have to find our second receivers more often. We need to be more consistent and more disciplined."

His complaint centers largely on the punting game as Menhardt is 20 for 20 in point-after-touchdowns and has made 11 of 14 field goal attempts.

On Saturday, Penn State again will be without the services of Terry Rakowsky, a junior wide receiver, who reinjured a knee in practice Monday.

The extent of the injury will be determined next Monday when he undergoes a hospital orthogram to check for possible cartilage damage.

Penn State will be led by Todd Blackledge, who has won the starting quarterback role with a 49.1 pass completion percentage, 661 yards and four touchdowns in spot duty at the position.

"This year we're a running team, although we are working for a better balance between the run and the pass," observed Scovill, whose job description centers largely on blocking but who contributed four receptions for 69 yards against Miami.

Penn State's stable of running backs is led by Curt Warner, with 793 yards and a 4.7-yard-per-carry average, and Booker Moore, 574 yards, 6.3 per carry.

N.C. State's quarterback is Tol Avery, a 51 percent passer who has 793 yards and three touchdowns in the air. Halfback Wayne McLean has 415 yards on the ground.

Rampant Cubs Close With Win

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School's junior varsity completed the 1980 season with a 34-14 victory over Northeastern High School yesterday.

The win left the Rampant Cubs with a 9-1 record on the season.

Both teams scored in the first quarter of the game. Rose scored first, with Donnell Lee going over from six yards out.

Tied at 6-6 going into the second period, Rose regained the lead, and never lost it again. Ronnie Worsley scored on a 20-yard run, and later in the period, Edward Frazier returned an interception 50 yards for a second touchdown. Sammy Hodges passed to David Sneed for the two-point conversion.

Rose also suffered a safety during the period. In punt formation, the kicker had one of his own teammates back into the ball, and the rebounding ball went out of the end zone for the two-pointer.

Rose added single scores in the third and fourth periods. In the third, Tim Shank scored on a three-yard run, and in the fourth Worsley scored from 35 yards out. Frazier ran over the conversion.

Northeastern gained another touchdown on a long pass in the final quarter.

Brown Has New Mark

Goalie Steve Brown set an East Carolina soccer team record for shutouts in one season Thursday as he helped lead the Pirates to a 2-0 victory over N.C. Wesleyan.

Brown registered his fourth shutout of the year, a school record. Brian Winchell provided the scoring punch for the Pirates, putting in both goals, one in each half.

"The second goal is the one that wins, not the first," Pirate coach Brad Smith said. "The second goal breaks their back."

ECU is just one game — with one to play — of tying the school record for wins in a season. The Pirates are 6-14-1 going into Sunday's match against at Coker College in Hartsville, S.C.

Tom Baines put a move on the pack last week, turning in an 11-1 card in a week filled with surprises. His fine week enabled him to move past this writer into second place in the standings.

Rick Scoppe continues to hold first as he gets past week after week in the lead. Right now, he holds down an 84-23 mark, while Baines is hot on his heels with an 83-24 record. We are next with an 82-25 mark, leaving just two games separating first and third places.

Our guests continued to cling to third, with a 78-29 record, while Etha Allen is right behind at 77-30. Joe Jenkins is in fifth with a 72-35 record, well behind the leaders.

Our guest of last week, Hub Burton of WITN-TV turned in the best record of the three television people we had as guests this year, posting an 8-4 record.

This week, our guest is Greenville City School Superintendent Glen Cox.

While the games we have chosen for this week are all rated as very close, the leaders have only one or two differences between them.

Joe Jenkins, too, has followed through with his threat and is trying to pick every game wrong. But if he succeeds, which we think is impossible, we'll give him credit for getting them all right.

In the high school area, this is the last go-around. Our record currently stands at 50-14 for the season, with just four games left. Two teams, Ayden-Grifton and Jamesville, completed their seasons last week.

Roanoke travels to Williamston for one of the top area games. The two have both posted good starts, only to have troubles in the late stages. This is for the championship of Martin County at any rate, and we'll go with Williamston.

North Pitt visits Conley in what can only be called the Consolation Bowl. The Panthers have won but one game on the year, while Conley hasn't won at all. Could it end in a scoreless tie? Nope, not with the overtime rules. So we'll pick the Vikings to finally come up with a victory.

Southwest Edgecombe will be at Farmville Central. This game could see Farmville's Gene Brewer suffer his first losing season. The Jaguars probably will try to prevent this, but the Cougars appear to be just a little too strong. We are forced to pick Southwest.

Finally, Greene Central is at North Lenoir. The Rams, off to a poor start, have come back strong and won their last two outings. But North Lenoir has been one of the surprise teams of this year. We will go with North Lenoir in this one.

Now, turning to the two area games in our panel's picks, we find Rose entertaining Northeastern, while East Carolina goes to Miami.

The Rampants have lost out on their chance for a post-season playoff berth. Northeastern would love to finish with a 7-3 record and at least a share of second place in the league. This looks like a close contest, with desire being the key. The panel will stick with the Rampants, going 5-1 (remember Joe is trying to pick the "wrong" way).

East Carolina's Pirates are even more banged up that before. Right now, they are planning on using a quarterback who has not taken a varsity snap before. It's a heck of a way to get your baptism. Miami, however, may also have quarterback problems, but nowhere as serious. The Hurricanes, after three straight losses to nationally-ranked teams, are hungry, too. The panel goes down the line, 5-1 (Joe, again), for Miami.

Our other consensus picks: North Carolina over Clemson, Notre Dame over Georgia Tech, Virginia over Rutgers, Syracuse over Navy, Wyoming and Nevada-Las Vegas, a toss-up; Wake Forest and Duke, a toss-up; Penn State over N.C. State, Baylor over Arkansas, Southern California over Stanford, and Army over Air Force.

Clemson Game On 'Must' List

By The Associated Press
It's not another match with Oklahoma — and the Tar Heels might say "thank goodness!" — but Saturday's Atlantic Coast Conference football game at Clemson's Death Valley ranks high on the must list for league-leading North Carolina.

The Tar Heels, mauled by the Sooners last week in their first defeat of the season, are 3-0 in the ACC and need a victory to stay in front of idle Maryland, 3-1 in league play.

One thing North Carolina will have to watch is the foot of place-kicker Obed Ariiri, who has booted 19 field goals so far this year to tie the NCAA career record with 56.

In the only other conference game, Wake Forest will take a four-game ACC losing streak to Durham for a game against Duke's Blue Devils.

The records aren't that impressive — Wake Forest is 1-4 in the conference and 3-5 overall and Duke is 1-2 and 2-6 — but the game will include a family feud. Brian Baldinger, 6-foot-4 and 244 pounds, is the starting offensive guard for Duke. His brother Richard, 6-foot-4 and 269 pounds, is the starting offensive tackle for Wake Forest.

Their parents will be in the bleachers at Wallace Wade Stadium.

Elsewhere, Georgia Tech — which isn't eligible for ACC competition this year — is at home against nationally top-ranked Notre Dame and N.C. State, 4-4 overall, travels to Penn State for another go at the 10th ranked Lions. Virginia, also 4-4, is at home against Rutgers.

The North Carolina-Clemson game will be televised regionally.

Norton, Cobb In Heavy Fight

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former World Boxing Council champion Ken Norton says he's in better shape than ever for tonight's bout with undefeated heavyweight Randy Cobb, a young Texan with a salty vocabulary and penchant for busting jaws.

Norton trimmed off 35 pounds for his first bout in 16 months. He weighed in Thursday at 218 pounds and Cobb was at 226-14.

Norton, 35, says he is emerging from retirement because he has "a lot to prove" against the feisty 23-year-old in a match billed as "The Battle of the Jawbreakers."

It's been seven years since Norton broke Muhammad Ali's jaw while building a 41-6-1 record that included 33 knockouts.

His power on the wane in the late 1970s, Norton lost the WBC heavyweight crown to current champ Larry Holmes in 1978, then was knocked out by Earnie Shavers in the first round of a March 23, 1979 fight.

Cobb cracked Shavers' jaw in two places in his last fight Aug. 2 and has collected 16 knockouts in 17 straight victories.

"Randy is a very good fighter," Norton admitted. "He's young. He's tough. He's hard. He comes to fight."

Punctuating his comments with unprintable language at a prefight news conference, Cobb offered a few left-handed compliments to his opponent.

"I really like to tie up with a man of his age," he quipped. "I'm glad I caught him now when he's still 32 for the last six years."

"I'm here to fight. Ken's here to fight," said the WBC's ninth-ranked heavyweight. "I expect a good fight."

The main event is part of a boxing card assembled for the HemisFair Arena by Muhammad Ali Professional Sports. It also features a 12-round match between San Antonio boxer Mike Ayala, the North American Boxing Federation junior featherweight champion, and Javier Flores. Two former Grambling football players, NABF heavyweight champion Leroy Jones and Lynn Ball, also will stage a 12-round title fight.

UNC Downs Lady Bucs

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina swept to an easy victory over East Carolina University in a volleyball match yesterday.

The Tar Heels took the first game, 15-8, won the second, 15-6, then closed it out with a 15-9 victory.

"Two of our starters were not with us," assistant coach Lynn Davidson said without explanation. "So we were limited in experience to start with. We played a real scrappy defense, but the passing game was hurting on offense."

"When you play a good team like North Carolina, you can't just play good defense and expect to win. You need an effective offense, too."

She added that the Pirates did not serve well, especially in the second game. "When you get the ball back playing good defense, then don't do anything with it, it hurts."

Davidson singled out Sharon Perry for her play in the game, especially on defense.

East Carolina, now 14-24 overall and finishing 1-9 in Division I NCAIAW play, travels to Pembroke State on Tuesday.

Garbacz In LPGA Lead

HANAYASHIKI, Japan (AP) — Lori Garbacz shot a 6-under-par 68 Friday to take a 2-stroke lead after the first round of the $175,000 Mazda-Japan Golf Classic.

Garbacz, playing her second year on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, made seven birdies against one bogey on the windless 6,135-yard, par-74 Hanayashiki Golf Course in Central Japan.

Americans Barbara Barrow, Vicki Fergon and Sally Little and Japanese veteran Yuko Moriguchi all shared second place with 4-under 70s.

Beth Daniel, considered one of the favorites for the first prize of $26,250, completed the first round with a 2-under 72 for an eighth place tie.

Defending champion Amy Alcott was in a 20th place tie after an even par round.

A field of 80 players from six countries are competing in the tournament, the only LPGA-authorized overseas event.

back has racked up 1,096 yards to prove it. Florida Coach Charley Pell says a pro scout this week told him he considered Walker "the best running back to come into college football in the last 25 years."

Pell said Georgia, 8-0, is in excellent position to win the national title because Notre Dame still must play Alabama and Southern Cal. He figures that, plus the tradition of the matchup, will put the 6-1 Gators in a precarious spot.

"The Florida-Georgia game is a classic any year, and this year it's no different," said Pell. "Georgia is undefeated and untied, the No. 2 team in the nation, and it's obvious to everybody in the United States that they're playing this game for the national championship."

"Georgia is a veteran, battle-scarred team without a weakness and an unstoppable tailback in Herschel Walker."

Georgia Tech's 1-7 record would indicate it doesn't stand much of a chance against unbeaten Notre Dame. But the Irish didn't get to 7-0 in Coach Dan Devine's final season without experiencing their share of problems. So, they're taking nothing for granted.

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer

Bob Griese has been playing football long enough to have learned a few things.

There is, for example, the tradition of blaming the quarterback for anything and everything that goes wrong with a team.

Griese is sidelined with a sprained shoulder right now and his replacements have been veteran Don Strock or rookie David Woodley, or sometimes a combination of the two.

When he was healthy, Griese occasionally found himself in a relief role, too, as Miami strove to put together an attack. His view of the Dolphins' offense is simple.

"If I go in and the offense doesn't work, if Strock goes in and the offense doesn't work, and if Woodley goes in and the offense doesn't work, then maybe it's not the quarterback," he said.

Sounds reasonable.

Miami tries its revolving door system against Los Angeles Sunday as the National Football League season moves into its 10th weekend. In the other interconference game, Pittsburgh plays at Tampa Bay.

In American Conference matchups, Buffalo plays the Jets at New York, Cincinnati is at Oakland, Baltimore hosts Cleveland, Denver goes to San Diego, and Kansas City plays at Seattle.

In the National Conference, Atlanta visits St. Louis, Dallas plays at the New York Giants, Detroit is at Minnesota, New Orleans hosts Philadelphia, San Francisco plays Green Bay at Milwaukee and Washington goes to Chicago.

On Monday night, New England plays at Houston.

The Dolphins are 11th in the AFC in passing and have dropped two straight games. They are the first of four AFC East teams who'll face the Rams over the next five weeks and try to control a Los Angeles offense which leads the National Conference in scoring.

The Rams churned out 486 yards in beating New Orleans last week when Vince Ferragamo threw a club record-tying five touchdown passes. For the season, Los Angeles has scored 263 points. The only NFL team with more is San Diego with 272.

Los Angeles may be without linebacker Bob Brudzinski, who left the club this week in a contract dispute. Ferragamo, ranked No. 1 among NFL passers this season, has also had contract problems, but he's still working.

The only other interconference game is Pittsburgh's visit to Tampa Bay. Both the Steelers, laboring under an avalanche of injuries, and the Bucs have been struggling this season. Defending champion Pittsburgh, 5-4, is one game behind both Houston and Cleveland in the AFC Central. Tampa Bay, 4-4-1, is 1½ games behind Detroit in the NFC Central.

This could be a memorable game for a couple Steelers. Franco Harris needs nine yards to become the third player in NFL history to rush for more than 9,000 yards.

Only alltime leader Jim Brown (12,312) and O.J. Simpson (11,236) have more yards.

Lynn Swann tied Buddy Dial's club touchdown record with the 46th of his career last week and his next TD catch will give him a line in the Steelers' record book.

Population Decline As Factor In Social Decay

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rare insights are a mark of a grand, old British scholar of many fields, Colin G. Clark. Out of his breadth of learning and experience, he characteristically comes up with original perceptions.

Now 75, a veteran of many university classrooms, government posts and published works as well as an astutely dedicated Roman Catholic, he recently offered on a U.S. campus some observations about the modern world.

"You are growing up into a decaying civilization," he told students last June at Thomas Aquinas College in Santa Paula, Calif., and he saw a surprising reason for it: lack of people.

"The decline of population is a central element in the decline of civilization," he said.

He also saw other reasons for it, particularly a crumbling of religious faith. His unusual overall analysis led the college to circulate the lecture widely this fall and to plan reprints of it.

Clark, chiefly an economist, but also a philosopher, sociologist, chemist and demographer, challenged not only the notion that population needed to be curbed, but that resources are running out.

"I find it astonishing that so many supposedly educated people believe all this nonsense ... about the exhaustion of resources," he said, citing findings and estimates that seemed to contradict it.

Concerning numbers of people, he said "it is with population growth that vigorous civilizations are associated." He listed instances from ancient Greece to recent pasts in Europe and America.

But population throughout the Western world already has fallen below the "zero growth" line, he said, although it's generally claimed this hasn't happened by misleadingly comparing the numbers of current deaths with births.

"Those who reason this way are making a mistake which is so obvious that nobody seems to see it," he said, noting that current deaths now derive from a much smaller bygone generation of 60 or 70 years ago.

The death figures from that smaller past don't in any way indicate the births now needed to keep the current larger generation replaced, he said, adding that computations show it's actually not being replaced.

"In the whole of the so-called Western world, North America, Western Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand, the number of births now falls short of replacement requirements by 10 percent or more," he said.

He said "civilizations are built on a foundation of faith" and that faith is declining. While civilization's collapse might in the future be attributed to rising uncontrolled crime, a lopsided obsession with technology, over-consumption and a "thoroughly decadent" culture, he said a bottom-line cause would be "theological chaos."

He denounced contraception, abortion and "mood advertising" to create demand for useless things and disappointing activities. He said the main effect of women's liberation — although women don't realize it — "has been to benefit men, enabling them to take life more easily."

Regarding world resources, he said that economically this refers to means of production — labor (people) and land (self-renewing). He added: "If the potential agricultural land of the world were properly farmed, it could provide, not a subsistence, but a rich, American-style diet to more than 10 times the world's present population."

As for mineral resources, he recalled that 30 years ago he took part in a United Nations conference on amounts still left. Subtracting usage since then, he said, "the world's copper, lead and zinc were used up years ago."

Quoting an adage that Christian faith "saves man from the degrading necessity of being the child of his time," he said, "If you are living in a decadent age, as I think we are, you must try to alter it, and not adapt yourself to it."

Civilization may yet prove "capable of recovery," he said, and he told the students: "Here I put to you what you must regard as your primary duty ... bear and bring up children. What is needed is population, and only you can provide it."

HARVEST DINNER AND SALE

The annual harvest dinner and sale will be held Saturday evening at Red Oak Christian Church. The hours are five to seven o'clock with an auction beginning at 7:30. The dinner menu is chicken, collards, sweet potatoes, green beans, cake, cornbread, rolls, coffee or tea. Billy Clark II will serve as auctioneer.

The Background Of Integrity

There are millions of men in this world whose word is trusted — whose handshake is a binding contract — whose integrity others accept without question.

We've come a long way from the days when a strong man and a stout club were the social graces.

And this growth in man's capacity for integrity has paralleled his growth in religious expression.

Of course, the cynics will point to men and nations who still live by the code of the cave man. Must we believe that the clock of progress has turned ... is running backward?

The sound, the sensible, the sincere still feel the strength of God's Bible in every handshake. With their children they are finding new spiritual opportunity and hope in the churches they cherish.

Are you with them? Are you, too, pushing forward the frontiers of faith?
