Approve City By-The-Drink Referendum

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council took action last night that will allow citizens of Greenville the opportunity to participate in a referendum on the local sale of liquor by the drink.

Acting on a request by the Greenville Restaurant Association to call for a referendum on the sale of mixed beverages, the council heard statements in support of and in opposition to the referendum measure and then voted by a four to two margin to approve the request.

In voting to request that the Pitt Board of Elections conduct the city-wide referendum, the council acted on a matter that has been the subject of heated discussion here since the 1980 General Assembly ratified a bill allowing mixed beverage elections in cities meeting certain conditions.

The council, meeting in July with only four of the six elected members present, denied a request by the Chamber of Commerce to call for a referendum. In July, Councilmen Joe Taft Jr. and Louis Clark voted in favor of the Chamber request, while Councilwoman Judy Greene and Councilman Clarence Gray offered opposing votes. Since an affirmative vote of the majority of the council was not received, the request was defeated.

Last night, with the full board in attendance, Taft, Clark, Dick McKee and William Hadden Jr. voted in support of the restaurant association request and Mrs. Greene and Gray again opposed.

Addressing the matter, Hadden said that, "It is my firm conviction that the issue I and other members of this council face tonight is not whether or not we, as individuals, favor liquor by the drink. It is whether or not we will credit the citizens of Greenville with the maturity to decide the issue."

Hadden observed, "I believe we would be on very fragile ground if we six council members were to determine an issue which has become a partisan ethical and moral one for our 36,000 people."

The council member said that, "Good people stand on both sides of this issue here tonight and in our town. Each indeed has the right to his or her conviction, pro or con. Every citizen should have the right to express his or herself at the ballot box. For me, as a member of this council, to pre-empt or abuse the right of either side would be a misuse of my authority, and an act alien to our basic democratic tradition."

"Therefore Mayor (Don McGlohon), I would like to express my preference for a referendum of all the people of Greenville on this issue of liquor by the drink," he concluded.

Mrs. Greene said that the issue touched for her "very deep moral convictions" and she added, "I can't go against my convictions." She said that she was not against the people voting on the matter but she had to vote her convictions.

Gray said that another avenue exists, a petition of 20 percent of the city's registered voters, whereby citizens are able to express their opinions on the issue. He recalled that other issues were resolved without calling for referendums and council members voted then on "what is good for the citizens of Greenville."

McGlohon suggested that "this is a tough decision," but he observed that the only question that the council faced last night was whether or not to call for a referendum.

Bob Sauter, representing the restaurant association, asked the council to reconsider its July denial and allow local citizens to vote on the matter. Sauter noted that state law has granted citizens the right to vote on mixed beverage sales.

Frank Steinbeck, local merchant who is involved in Concerned Citizens of Pitt County, a group opposing liquor by the drink, urged the council to let the matter "go by way of the petition method." He noted that the law provided for the petition alternative.

Several local ministers spoke in opposition to the mixed beverage issue and the Rev. J. M. Bragg, pastor of People's Baptist Temple, told the council that "whether you like it or not" an affirmative vote on the referendum request would seem to indicate support for mixed beverage sales.

Hadden took issue with the implication that his measure of being a Christian would be reflected in how he voted on the request to call for a referendum.

Doug Norville, representing the Rev. Van Dale Hudson who could not attend, said that the council did not have to call for a referendum and he asked the board to have the proponents of mixed beverage sales do the same thing the opposing group would do if it sought a vote, secure petitions.

The Rev. Jim Nason said that the county rejected liquor by the drink and Greenville should be responsive to the wishes of the entire county. He said that the council action will affect citizens of the county as well as the city. Nason said that if a group of proponents "want to push it on the people, at least let them go the route of petitions as prescribed by law."

Lawrence Behr said that local citizens expressed an interest in the matter by participating in the last county-wide referendum and he said the city has a right to vote. Behr contended that the petition issue is irrelevant since the turnout at the last referendum reflected citizen interest.

During the county-wide referendum, Greenville and Grifton voted in favor of having liquor by the drink and Greenville meets certain conditions that makes it eligible to conduct a referendum on liquor by the drink.

City Manager Ed Wyatt explained in a memorandum to the council that the law provides a timetable for conducting ABC referendums: The referendum election cannot be held on the day of or within 45 days of any biennial election for county offices; and the Board of Elections must give at least 30 days public notice of the election before the closing of the registration books for the election. General election law also requires a 30-day interim period between the time the registration books close and the date of the referendum.

Wyatt said that therefore, if the council wished to have a local referendum, it would be necessary to count 105 days from the date the council requested the elections board to conduct the referendum. Following that timetable, he said, the earliest possible date for the vote would be the first week

Hunt Seeks Money For Pay Boosts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Taking issue with a statement by his budget officer, Gov. Jim Hunt today said he expects to come up with enough money to provide a pay raise for state employees and teachers next year.

Budget Officer John A. Williams said Thursday that tight budget conditions may knock out any pay raises for state employees' and teachers in 1981.

But Hunt said he is reviewing budget requests from all state agencies and expects to be able to cut enough from the requests to provide a raise of some kind for employees of the state.

"I've been working on the budget every day this week. Money is very tight and we will not be able to have as much of a pay raise as we want, but I think there is going to be a pay raise," Hunt said.

Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, said the governor has been "cutting and trimming everywhere" as he reviewed the budget. He said most of the reductions will be in requests for new programs and expansion of existing programs but that it might be necessary to make reductions in some existing programs.

Pearce said Hunt has not set a target amount for a pay raise. Williams said Thursday.

Williams had said a pay raise would be considered by the administration and that even if there is one "it will be very modest ... I don't see one right now."

Organizations representing state personnel have asked for pay raises approximating the rate of inflation, currently at about 12 percent, for the fiscal year starting in July 1981.

The General Assembly granted a 10 percent general raise and increased teacher salaries by an average of 12.9 percent last year. At that time, the state had a $358 million budget surplus.

Recession and recurring operating expenses fueled by this year's pay raises have cut into that surplus, and state sources now estimate less than $175 million will be available at the end of the current fiscal year.

The Legislature will adopt a new state budget for two years when it meets in January.

Williams said he expected that most of the budgetary increases would go for built-in costs increases such as social programs and inflationary costs in operating government.

"There won't be any money for new buildings or significant capital improvements," he said.

Williams also expressed doubt that a $25 million dental insurance program proposed for state employees and teachers would be included in the next budget.

"It's not much fun being governor in times like this," Williams said. "I know every organization in this state is on mine and the governor's back because they have great needs..."

Property Owners Appeal Okayed By City Council

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

In a move that was not recommended by the city engineer but requested by a contingent of property owners, the City Council voted to delete a portion of Sedgfield Drive from the Greenville Thoroughfare

Plan and to suggest state concurrence.

The Planning & Zoning Commission, meeting last month, voted to recommend that Sedgfield, from Hooker Road to St. Andrews Drive, be deleted from the plan. Residents of Sedgfield Park had submitted a request that the transportation plan be amended by deleting the proposed segment.

City Engineer Ron Sewell said last night, however, that his department was not in favor of the deletion. Sewell

SPECIAL KIND OF MATTRESS

I have bursitis terribly and the only mattress-bedsprings combination that has ever been comfortable to me is one I bought in 1944. It was a Southern Cross, made by the Southern Spring Bed Company in Atlanta, Ga., and was so flexible I could and did roll it up and take it in my car wherever I went so I could get a good night's sleep. It's worn out now and I can't find anything like it in the stores. S. J.

Hotline had you bring us the labels from your old innerspring mattress and with these in front of us, we called the Southern Cross Company, as its now called, in Marietta, Ga. We talked to a customer service person who said there is no way her company can help you. "The bedding industry has changed drastically in the past five years," she said, "much more since 1944. The materials you mention like latex foam rubber are no longer being used at all." She said her company has no mattresses that have the flexibility you describe. Her only suggestion was that you seek out a bedding firm that can custom make a mattress for you. If any of Hotline's readers have suggestions for you, they may call you at 752-1459.

Report Brewer Interviewed By Louisville U.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, chancellor of East Carolina University since 1978, has been interviewed for the presidency of the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky., according to "The Louisville Courier-Journal."

The newspaper yesterday published a report that Brewer arrived in Louisville on Wednesday and was being interviewed by 100 members of the faculty, staff, administration and Board of Trustees of the school. The newspaper said Brewer was scheduled to leave Louisville today.

A Fort Worth, Texas native and vice-chancellor of Texas Christian University for six years before coming to ECU, Brewer was the third candidate for the post to be interviewed, according to the report.

The University of Louisville, considered the fastest growing university in the United States, has 20,000 students.

University officials said this morning that a decision on the selection of a president for the school by the Board of Trustees, is scheduled, "on or about the end of the year...sometime in December."

Brewer could not be reached for comment today.

His office said he would be out of town until next Thursday attending the inauguration of the new president of North Texas State University.

Plan Mandatory Kindergarten

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative study commission has agreed to recommend that North Carolina make attendance in kindergarten classes mandatory for all children.

The Committee on Public School Dropouts, which will report to the General Assembly in January, also called for expenditures of $26.8 million between 1981 and 1983 to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio from 30-1 to 26-1 in grades 4-6.

The committee also proposed spending $38 million during the same period to expand basic skills instruction for low achievers in high school, $46 million to add more than 1,300 vocational teaching positions for grades 7-12, and $11.7 million to reduce the student-guidance counselor ratio.

Jeanne Moving

By The Associated Press

As Tropical Storm Jeanne pushed westward in the Gulf of Mexico today, storm-wise Louisiana residents began leaving coastal towns or preparing for flooding, and some parishes closed their schools.

In Cameron, a west Louisiana town right on the coast, "everybody has done the important things," said Geneva Griffith. "Pen up the horses and load the guns for snakes or looters."

The National Hurricane Center in Miami reported Jeanne's center was about 125 miles east of Brownsville, Texas, at 5 a.m. EST today. The unusual November storm, downgraded Wednesday from hurricane status, was moving westward at about 5 mph.

Klan-Nazi Jury Begins 6th Day Of Deliberating

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

With 33 hours of debate behind them, jurors weighing the murder case against six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis today began their sixth day of deliberation.

The jury of six men and six women remained behind closed doors for six hours Thursday, debating the five counts of first-degree murder and single count of felonious riot lodged against each defendant.

The charges stem from the shooting deaths of five demonstrators at a Communist Workers Party "Death to the Klan" rally on Nov. 3, 1979.

All six men pleaded innocent.

The top administrative officer for North Carolina's court system said Thursday the jury had deliberated longer than any in his memory.

"I don't remember anything like this ... at least in the past 40 years," said Bert Montague, adding the average deliberation time for North Carolina trials ranged from 30 minutes to three hours. The trial, which is in its 22nd week, has been the longest on record in North Carolina. It has cost the state more than $1 million and 16 other people remain to be tried on charges stemming from the bloody confrontation between communist sympathizers and white supremacists.

As deliberations continued, the defendants wandered in and out of the courtroom, talking with friends and family.

Tobacco Market Season Ended

The Greenville Tobacco Market held its final sale of the 1980 season Thursday and recorded the highest season average in the history of the market.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said the market finished the season with an average of $146.82 per hundred pounds, a record figure for the market.

The official noted that the record average in Greenville was achieved through the sale of 53,506,242 pounds of tobacco for $78,556,925. The market sold 40,894,930 pounds last year for $57,541,577 in averaging $140.71 for the 1979 season.

Thursday's final sale saw an average of $108.38 per hundred pounds posted as local warehouses closed out their auction activities by selling 69,619 pounds for $75,455.

Bryan said that total Stabilization receipts for the season were 7.31 percent, which consisted of 3,898,384 pounds.

Stabilization receipts yesterday totaled 20.01 percent as offerings involved mostly leaf and non descript grades.

The sales supervisor commented, "I would like to thank the farmers who sold on the Greenville Market this year and to tell them that we will look forward to serving them in the future."

Bryan said that, "Early designation will make the operation of the 1981 marketing season as successful as 1980." He urged farmers to designate their tobacco to the "warehouse of their choice in Greenville as early as possible for the 1981 season."

The Greenville Market began sales in 1890 and has had 90 years experience in the tobacco business, Bryan added. He said that some two million square feet of floor space is devoted to handling tobacco in Greenville.

Referendum....

in March. Wyatt pointed out that the actual date is set by the elections board. He said that the cost of conducting a special referendum would be around $3,000 to $3,500.

The city manager noted further in the memorandum that according to the Institute of Government, Pitt County will receive more revenues from liquor by the drink. There is an additional $10 tax on each gallon of liquor purchased for sale by social establishments and restaurants selling mixed beverages and of the amount, $9 remains with the county ABC Board and $1 goes to the state.

Greenville presently receives about $24,000 annually from Pitt County ABC profits, he reported, adding that it is not known whether the city would receive additional revenues if liquor by the drink is passed here. That decision, he observed, rests with ABC and county officials.

Productivity Up In October

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's industrial production surged ahead by 1.6 percent in October, the third straight monthly gain and the largest increase in more than two years, the government reported today.

The improvement was broadly based, with heavy production in the auto and steel sectors, industries that had been particularly hard hit during the recession, which appears to be over.

The Federal Reserve Board reported that industrial production has increased 4 percent since July, expanding 1 percent in August and 1.3 percent in September.

Despite the steady improvement, production at U.S. factories and mines remains 4.4 percent below the level in September 1979, the board said.

The 1.6 percent increase matches the gain in August 1978. Before then, the largest one-month increase was a 2.2 percent rise in August 1975.

Output of consumer goods rose 1.2 percent in October, reflecting a large gain for durable goods but almost no change for non-durable items, the report said.

Prosecution Of Garwood Begins

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Corps prosecutors were to begin presenting testimony today in the court-martial of Pfc. Robert Garwood, a 34-year-old Indiana native charged with desertion and collaboration over a 14-year period in Vietnam.

Attorneys for the prosecution and defense were to present opening arguments at the start of today's session. They were to be followed by the first witness, expected to be Army Warrant Officer Francis Anton, who was in a Vietnamese POW camp with Garwood in 1968-69.

Garwood, then a 19-year-old jeep driver, disappeared near Da Nang in 1965. He was returned to the United States last year to become the first American POW to be charged as a collaborator in Vietnam.

The military judge at his court-martial, Marine Col. R.E. Switzer, reaffirmed an earlier ruling Thursday denying defense lawyers an opportunity to delve into the possibility that American prisoners may still be alive in Vietnam.

The ruling came on a defense request to be allowed to explore a hypothesis on why the Vietnamese held Garwood captive for 14 years, longer than any other POW in American history.

"I previously ruled that (issue) was not material," Switzer said. "I will adhere to that previous ruling."

Switzer, who instructed the five-man jury Thursday, also turned back a government attack on Garwood's competency to stand trial.

"I don't foresee this (Garwood's competency) as a problem at this time," Switzer said, noting that government psychologists concluded last month that Garwood is capable of standing trial.

"While I appreciate government's concern, I see no cause at this stage to require another (psychiatric) evaluation," Switzer said.

The issue was raised by Capt. Theresa Wright, a prosecution attorney, who cited an earlier defense contention that Garwood may not be able to defend his actions because of his mental state in Vietnam.

Garwood's mental state will be the backbone of his defense, but his present capacity to stand trial has not been challenged by his attorneys.

Administration Blasts Vote On Busing

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says efforts to end public school discrimination could be crippled by a conservative-led Senate vote to deny the Justice Department its last resort: seeking court-ordered busing.

But President Carter may find it difficult to veto the provision. Like one previously passed by the House, it is attached to a $9.57 billion appropriations bill to keep the Justice Department and several other federal agencies operating through the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

Carter could not reject the amendment without vetoing the entire bill.

The proposal would not ban busing but would forbid any federal expenditure on efforts to require busing to achieve integration. Liberal

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who led the provision's opponents, said the Justice Department would have to withdraw from any case in which busing is involved.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who offered the amendment with Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said it might give some federal judges second thoughts about busing.

Thursday's 42-38 Senate vote — 21 Democrats and 21 Republicans voted for it — came despite a plea from Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti that the measure is unconstitutional and would effectively hamstring government officials working on school desegregation cases.

Helms and Thurmond both argued that Ronald Reagan's landslide victory last week was a sign that Americans oppose forced busing to achieve racial balance.

During the debate on the bill, Helms asked: "How long are we going to allow federal bureaucrats in the Justice Department to torment the little children of America? The vast majority of Americans, black and white, are fed up to here seeing their children hauled past neighborhood schools, sometimes as far away as 15 miles."

Weicker acknowledged that busing may be unpopular but added that the Senate "is not supposed to be a body of politakers."

"It's supposed to exercise leadership," he said. "I'm not speaking for busing. I'm speaking for individual rights, for equality of opportunity."

A final vote on the appropriations bill, including the amendment, is due Monday. Assuming approval then, the measure would go to a Senate-House conference committee to work out minor differences in the two versions.

Civiletti, in a letter to the Appropriations Committee chairman, Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., argued that the amendment's provisions could "unconstitutionally withhold from the executive branch any ability to ensure through the courts that federal funds are spent in a non-discriminatory manner."

As the law now stands, courts may order busing as a last resort to enhance racial balance. But Civiletti said that if the Senate action becomes law, even that use of busing would be eliminated.

"This is the very situation the courts have suggested raises serious constitutional doubts," Civiletti said.

He noted that Congress voted three years ago to prevent the government from withholding aid from school districts that refuse to bus to achieve racial balance. But that amendment did not prevent the Justice Department from filing suit against school districts that allegedly discriminate against minorities.

said that he felt there would be a need for Sedgfield as a collector street and he suggested that the street would be comparable to Belvedere Drive in terms of traffic volume.

Various residents of Sedgfield Park spoke in support of deleting the Sedgfield segment and Kelly Adams of St. Andrews Drive said that the previous deletion of a section of the street involving the Union Carbide property had destroyed any continuity of east-west traffic. He said that the street can no longer be a thoroughfare and he contended that the comparison with Belvedere Drive was not fair since Sedgfield Drive handles "cut through" traffic and Belvedere serves the neighborhood.

Harvey Bradshaw of 1404 Hooker Road also supported the deletion of the Sedgfield Segment from the thoroughfare plan. He said that he feels Arlington Boulevard could handle traffic needs and he contended that the original plans for Sedgfield were no longer valid. Bradshaw mentioned that if the street section is deleted, he will redesign the Fairlane Farms development and provide two access points on Hooker Road to handle traffic.

Reflecting the sharp downturn in housing during the recession, production of construction supplies was down 12 percent over the year-earlier level.

The October report also showed a sharp 3.7 percent increase in production of durable materials such as basic metals. Non-durable materials jumped 2.5 percent following similar large boosts in August and September.

The question of the state Department of Transportation's role in the matter was discussed and it was pointed out that D.O.T. concurrence in changes involving the Thoroughfare Plan is necessary. Sewell said that if the state does not approve the deletion, the segment will remain on the plan.

City Manager Ed Wyatt noted that the city should make its stance clear to D.O.T. when it recommends the deletion. The vote to delete Sedgfield from the plan was unanimous.

Council members approved a resolution increasing the city automobile license fee from $1 to $5. Councilman Clarence Gray opposed the increase to $5, saying that he supported an increase but felt $3 would be enough.

Mayor Don McGlohan said that not many methods are available for increasing city revenues and the license fee is one way of reaching some people who receive city services but pay no local taxes other than a license purchase.

The Council also approved a request by the city license agent for an increase in the fee for selling city automobile tags from 15 cents to 20 cents.

The Council, taking action on a variety of agenda items, voted to approve a request to rezone, from RA-20 to R-15, of Section IV of Westhaven Subdivision located just south of the existing Section III of the development, and east of Club Pines. Council members also voted, following a public hearing, to annex Section IV of Westhaven.

Following a third public hearing, the Council approved the addition of a "vocational rehabilitation center and its accessory uses, when engaged in the collecting, assembling, and distribution of component parts" as a permitted use in the Industrial and Unoffensive Industry zoning classification.

Technical revisions in the Zoning Ordinance, involving an amendment to clarify the design standards for off-street parking facilities, were also approved after a public hearing was conducted by the board.

Other action taken by the Council included:

— Public hearing on the pre-application for the Small Cities Community Development grant program and adoption of an ordinance amending the 1978-79 and 1979-80 CD budgets;

— Approval of an application by BMR Inc (operating as Papa Katz) for renewal of a permit granted for the operation of a private club on River Bluff Road behind the Honda building;

— Approval of a Greenville Utilities Commission resolution authorizing the execution of an agreement with Seaboard Coast Line Railroad for the installation of a water line under tracks along State Road 1708;

— Approval of an amendment to the Electric Fund of the 1980-81 Utilities budget ordinance;

— Acceptance of Ridge Place from Hooker Road westwardly some 773 feet to the end of the cul-de-sac on Ridge Place, Cortland Road from Ridge Place some 99.5 feet south to the property line of Orchard Hill Subdivision, Crestline Boulevard from Antler Road westwardly some 980 feet, and Pinkney Drive from Crestline Boulevard southerly some 160 feet to the Westhaven Subdivision property line, for permanent maintenance;

— Scheduled a public hearing for the Dec. 11 regular meeting on a recommendation by the Public Transportation Commission that bus fares be increased, effective Jan. 1;

— Approval of the sale of disposal parcels on the east side of Railroad Street in South Evans and at the northwest corner of Wyatt and Pitt Streets in Southside by the Redevelopment Commission;

— Approval of a bid submitted by Phelps Chevrolet of Greenville for five Police Department vehicles;

— Approval of an offer by J. J. Perkins in the amount of $1,400 for the purchase of surplus city property at 531 Roosevelt Street; and — Appointment of James W. Grimes to the Redevelopment Commission for a five-year term, reappointment of Kenneth Hilton and Janice Faulkner to their first full three-year terms on the Sheppard Memorial Library Board (both were filling unexpired terms), and the appointment of Inez Fridley to the Environmental Advisory Commission to fill the unexpired term of Barbara Ellis, who resigned (term expires April of 1983).

Arrest Man On Break-In Count

Bernard Williams, 22 of 404B Darden Dr., was arrested by Greenville police last night on breaking and entering charges after he allegedly entered a car parked in the Hollowell's Drug Store parking lot on West Sixth Street.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers saw Williams enter the car after the driver and a passenger entered the store about 7:15 p.m.

Butterflies Fly West

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Judith Leach told her kindergarten class that their monarch butterflies might get cold in Rhode Island because "they can't wear hats and coats and mittens."

On Thursday, the two butterflies were among the passengers of a California-bound jet. They even took their own lunch — sugar water.

"We had to go to the counter and get little tiny tickets," Mrs. Leach said with a smile.

The cross-country trip came after the kindergarten teacher at Washington Oak School, Coventry, found two caterpillars last month. They were eating milkweed, leading her to believe that they were monarchs which could not survive a New England winter.

She took them to her class, where the caterpillars became the subjects of class drawings and stories. On weekends, they went home to a box in Mrs. Leach's bathtub.

Finally, last weekend, the insects spread their beautiful black and orange wings — and Mrs. Leach began looking for a way to get them to a warmer climate.

When she ran into United Airlines custom service supervisor Joe Dzialo in a store, she told him her story. And they ended up in the cockpit of a United Airlines jet destined for San Diego.

But the tale may not be over. A student has brought in another caterpillar.

"I think it's starting all over again," Mrs. Leach said.

True Story From Hawaii

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A Hawaiian complained that a lot of people didn't know that in 1959 Hawaii was admitted to the United States of America as the 50th state. Instead they considered Hawaii a "foreign country."

Well, hear this: One of the oil-rich countries in the Middle East got mad at the U.S. and decided to punish us by cutting off shipments of oil. However, the country continued to ship oil to Hawaii because it didn't know that Hawaii was part of the U.S.A.!

Then some idiot in the State Department had to go tell the country that Hawaii was part of the U.S.A., and that put an end to the oil shipments to Hawaii.

TRUE STORY FROM HAWAII

DEAR ABBY: You always advise people who know that a friend's spouse is having an affair not to tell the unsuspecting wife or husband.

I just found out that my husband has been having an affair for six years, and I am now in the process of getting a divorce. He surely must have been seen by some of our friends. Or they certainly must have heard about it. Had I known about this earlier I might have been able to save my marriage, but how can you fight back when you don't even know there is a problem?

You don't ignore a fire in the hope that it will burn itself out. To stop it, you've got to throw water on it.

I think your policy of keeping quiet is wrong, Abby. Please reconsider.

TOO LATE IN CLEVELAND

DEAR TOO LATE: I would never recommend informing a friend that his or her spouse is having an affair.

In the first place, it may not be true. But if it were, the spouse possibly already knows but is trying to put up a good front in hopes that the fire will burn itself out. (Some do.) However, each case is different. Generalizations are useless — including this one — but I still wouldn't make it my business to inform.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 15, I gave birth to a baby girl out of wedlock. She's a beautiful child, and I know I did the right thing by keeping her.

Now, three years later, I am getting married to a wonderful guy who loves me and thinks of my daughter as his own.

My problem? My father says that a girl who has "made a mistake" doesn't deserve any kind of wedding — she just goes off to a judge and gets married without any celebration, publicity or parties.

I say that the past should be forgotten and that because this is really my first marriage I'm entitled to be married by a minister in a church with a few flowers. Abby, I don't want a big, expensive wedding. All I want is a small wedding with my friends and family present. And I wouldn't wear white. And most of all I want my dad to give me away.

My mother is on my side, but Dad is the boss, and he is stubborn. I told him I was going to write to Dear Abby to settle this, and he agreed to go along with your decision. So what do you say?

GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: I hope your father will enjoy walking you down the aisle in a lovely little church wedding, because that's what I think he should do. Good luck, and may all God's blessings be yours.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Time To Fade Away?

The lame duck Congress has limped back into Washington, ready to do its final deeds and then make way for a radically changed 97th Congress in January, 1981.

As might be expected the talk was highly political, with the Democrats wanting to make things as uncomfortable as possible for the Republicans who are about to take over.

One of the things proposed is a two percent cut in government spending in the still-hanging budget, leaving it to the Reagan administration to decide exactly what should be cut.

That's not wise. A responsible

Congress if it proposes cuts in spending will actually make those cuts in the budget it presents to the administration.

Come to think of it, if this Congress had done its work properly, it would not have had a budget to consider following the election. In fact, it might not have had to come back at all.

It is possible that Congressional inaction had as much to do with the Republican landslide as anything.

Perhaps this Congress should complete its essential work as quickly as possible and then fade away.

Activities Crowd Pleasers

The Third Annual Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival continues to move with a parade scheduled for tomorrow at 11 a.m. and the Tobacco Festival Queen competition tomorrow night at Ayden-Grifton School.

There can hardly be two more popular events with the public in general than a parade and a beauty competition.

Following the parade the Tobacco Bowl football game will be held at Ficklen stadium.

All these events promise to be first rate. There will be floats and bands in the parade and the beauty pageant is a preliminary to the Miss North Carolina competition.

Area citizens will get enjoyment out of attending these and other events of the festival.

THIS AFTERNOON

The No-Win Fight

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The upcoming battle over increased gasoline taxes to bolster North Carolina's sagging highway fund is developing into one of the most serious fights Gov. Jim Hunt has faced.

Close aides to the governor see it as a no-win situation:

—Without the tax, road construction and maintenance will fall far behind that which Hunt and other highway interests consider an acceptable level.

—With the tax, funds are boosted to a barely acceptable level, but at serious political consequences for the governor.

Members of Hunt's staff have made an informal survey of members of the General Assembly which indicates that there is considerable opposition to the proposed new tax.

This is one of the more serious fallouts from an otherwise lackluster opposition campaign by Republican I. Beverly Lake. One of his television ads lambasted Hunt for proposing to increase gasoline taxes by 44 percent — while riding around in his limousine at taxpayer expense.

Careful

Hunt went out of his way to avoid being identified as the architect of a gas-tax increase prior to the election. He named former Gov. Dan Moore to head a "blue-ribbon" study panel to recommend ways to increase highway money, delaying the report beyond election day, and carefully avoiding endorsement of any approach. He then pledged to study recommendations carefully, and pitched hard for public support of what he and everybody else close to the situation knew would have to come — a tax hike.

But Hunt advisors are keenly unhappy with what they consider outright falsities in the Lake commercial: the governor seldom uses the state limousine, a Cadillac, held in reserve for visiting dignitaries — especially businessmen being courted by the state with an eye to locating new commercial or industrial operations in the state. Hunt chooses to ride in an unmarked Highway Patrol car, usually a Plymouth or Chevrolet sedan.

Hunt's people also remind that the governor did not endorse outright the gasoline tax increase, and that while the proposed four percent increase in the tax on wholesale gas prices does come close to 44 percent more than the present nine-cent-per-gallon tax, the casual viewer perceived an increase of much bigger proportions from the way the figures were stated.

Repercussions across the state were strong. Voters turned to their local candidates for General Assembly demanding that no such gas taxes be imposed, and as some Hunt people put it: "They had an election to win, too ... they promised to oppose the tax."

Meanwhile, State Treasurer Harlan Boyles is drawing fire from Hunt partisans for his public denouncement of the need for any increase in highway fund revenues; especially a higher gas tax.

Boyles suggests that with

Other Editors Say The Message

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Six years ago Robert Morgan was elected to the United States Senate as one of the most popular and promising political figures in North Carolina. His record as attorney general had been impressive, he had been a respected member of the State Senate and teamed with Dr. Leo Jenkins to lead East Carolina University to unprecedented growth.

As Senator Morgan went to Washington, many of us who had admired and supported him over the years confidently predicted that he would be equally effective in the United States Senate. Last week, nearing the end of his first term, Robert Morgan was defeated by a college professor whose name was hardly known across the state 12 months ago.

What happened? The political demise of Robert Morgan should be a matter of sober reflection to the senator himself, to Dr. East who will succeed him, and to all others who are entering public office.

Senator Morgan lost sight of an essential ingredient to sustained political success: service to constituents. For at least the first four years, his office, administratively, was a disaster in this respect. It took weeks for constituents to receive responses to letters.

Some letters were never acknowledged. One in particular stands out as we reflect on what happened to our friend the senator. This newspaper had been an enthusiastic supporter of Robert Morgan. It observed with growing alarm the buildup of constituent disenchantment.

Following a social function attended by some who had been among Morgan's closest political allies, a short letter was sent to the senator. It noted simply that the senator had a problem of grave concern to his friends and the writer requested an opportunity to sit down with the senator and discuss it.

There was never any acknowledgement of that letter. Senator Morgan, it should be said, attempted in his later months to come to grips with the problem; and he admitted during his campaign that improvements would have to be made in a second term.

But the damage was done. There would be those who would sincerely but respectfully disagree with Mr. Morgan on some of the issues of the day. And many would agree with his own assessment that his first term had not been spectacular. But North Carolinians do not turn out their senators for those reasons.

But to be treated with what one regards, although perhaps mistakenly, as indifference on problems felt to be serious enough to warrant writing one's senator, is another matter.

Among the few thousand who made the difference between Robert Morgan's election and defeat undoubtedly were many who felt they had suffered that indignity. If others fail to learn from this, the political decline of Robert Morgan will be all the more tragic.

PERSONAL SUCCESS

In a book published recently on the subject of personal success, the author maintains that two-thirds of the people discharged from their jobs are fired because they cannot get along with their associates.

It is interesting to see the different types who fail in this regard. There are some who fight with the boss. They are popular with their associates, but they are always in trouble with those above them. Others get along fine with the boss, but not with their associates. Still

You don't want to talk to the president any more? ... I'm sure he'd like to talk to you ... Mr. Tiger, before you hang up, you wouldn't be in the market for a bright young man from Georgia who knows his way around Washington and has White House experience? ... You wouldn't? Well, if you change your mind, can I give you my number? You have it? Yes, Mr. Tiger ... you have a nice day, too.”

Little Shift To 'Right'

By GEORGE GALLUP
PRINCETON, N.J. — Examination of political indicators and the views of voters on key issues shows that the Reagan landslide was not so much the result of an ideological shift to the right among the electorate as dissatisfaction with the leadership of the nation and a desire for change.

Gallup Poll measurements of both the ideological stance of the electorate and public opinion on certain key issues reveal surprisingly little change since the presidential election four years ago.

For example, when Americans are asked to place themselves on a left-right continuum, the proportion who are “right of center” is virtually the same today as it was in the presidential election year of 1976, as seen in the following table (based on those who indicated a position):

Political Ideology	1976	1980
Right of center	31%	32%
Middle of road	45	49

During this year's campaign Reagan was perceived by voters to be not only to the right of President Carter but also to the right of where voters place themselves on the left-right scale. Gallup Polls in previous election years have clearly shown that the candidate whose perceived ideological stance more closely matches that of the electorate has fared better in the election. However, this was clearly not the case this year, strongly suggesting that factors other than those related to political philosophy were crucial to Reagan's victory.

Paralleling the findings on political ideology are those on political affiliation, which likewise show little change in the party affiliation of the electorate since 1976:

Political Affiliation	1976	1980
Republicans	23%	26%
Democrats	48	48
Independents	29	26

No Swing To Right Seen On Issues

Not only is there little evidence of a swing to the right in terms of voter self-perceptions, but little change has been found on those issues on which the views of conservatives and liberals frequently diverge: abortion, the death penalty, the Equal Rights Amendment, gun control and a balanced federal budget.

For example, the proportion of Americans who favor making abortions “illegal under all circumstances,” the position of ultra-conservatives, has shown little change since the mid-'70s, as seen in the table below:

Attitudes Toward Abortion	1975	1977	1979	1980
Legal under any circumstances	21%	22%	22%	25%
Legal under only certain circumstances	54	55	54	53
Illegal under all circumstances	22	19	19	18
No opinion	3	4	5	4

Regarding the death penalty for persons convicted of murder, since 1974 support for capital punishment has diminished somewhat, as seen in the table below:

Death Penalty For Murder?	1974	1980
Favor	64%	56%
Oppose	36	44

On the Equal Rights Amendment, again little change is apparent since the mid-1970s, as seen in the table below:

Favor Or Oppose ERA?	1975	1976	1978	1980
Favor	58%	57%	58%	58%
Oppose	24	24	31	31
No opinion	18	19	11	11

On the issue of gun control, support for registration of all firearms continues to run high, although it has lessened since 1974:

Registration Of Firearms	1974	1980
Favor	72%	62%
Oppose	28	38

And finally, little change has come about in attitudes toward balancing the federal budget, which has had the overwhelming support of both conservatives and liberals in both parties, since 1976, as seen in the following table:

Constitutional Amendment To Require Balanced Budget	1976	1978	1979
Favor	78%	81%	78%
Oppose	13	11	12
No opinion	9	8	10

Dissatisfaction With Nation's Leadership

The prime reason for Carter's defeat was growing dissatisfaction with his leadership rather than any apparent conservative tide among the electorate.

Goal Is Clear, The Route Is Not

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The availability and moderate cost of energy, and the willingness and ability to innovate are among the most basic requirements in restoring vitality to the United States economy.

Few knowledgeable critics dispute that assertion, but there exists great disagreement on how to bring it about. The goal is clear, it seems, but the route isn't. And maybe not even the starting line.

Here are three observations on the situation that might bring the starting line into better focus.

—From an address by E.E. David, president of Exxon Research and Engineering Co., former science advisor to the president and former president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science:

“The problems of innovation today are usually documented by statistics on research and development budgets, particularly, as a percent of gross national product. The U.S. figure has been stagnant while others have been increasing ...

“Actually, there is a sense of vitality in industrial research and development.

Industry's R&D budgets have been rising steadily since 1972, and last year U.S. industry spent a record $24 billion of its own funds on R&D for new technologies for the 80s and beyond ...

“The problem today is not with industrial support levels. The problem is with the declining demand for what R&D produces. The symptoms are clear enough and most of you are familiar with them ...

“One cause is a loss of spirit by the public. There are proliferating fears of risk-taking and unfamiliar technology. These are reinforced by volatile government regulation and by loss of confidence in institutions of all kinds.

“When we are not fearful and uncertain, we are contentious. It is a fact that the United States has four times as many lawyers per capita as West Germany, and 20 times as many as Japan.”

—From an article by Prof. Walter D. Fackler, in “Issues & Ideas,” a University of Chicago publication:

“No one can peer ahead at the 1980s without seeing energy problems. What can one say except that energy is a disaster area ... Witness what we have done.

“For years we controlled the price (and underpriced) natural gas, and thus encouraged overuse and misuse of this premium fuel while running down our reserves. We even rebuffed the Mexicans when we could have enlarged our long-run supply at bargain prices.

“In response to OPEC we controlled domestic crude oil prices below world levels and subsidized imports on a large scale through an entitlements program.

“We are now decontrolling domestic oil prices gradually, rather than instantaneously, and adding an excess profits tax on production of domestic oil. Gradualism here is simply stupid because it creates large and certain financial incentives to delay production.

“We have made the use of coal expensive and uncertain by environmental restrictions on its recovery and use. I do not say this is a bad thing, but coal suffers from uncertainty as to the future rules of the game.

“We have allowed ‘Woodstock economics’ to cripple the development of nuclear power. I realize there are legitimate differences of opinion here, but we have allowed ignorance and hysteria to crowd out rational resolution of the issues.”

—From an address to the annual meeting of Deloitte Haskins Sells, an accounting firm, by Alan Greenspan, chairman of Townsend-Greenspan & Co., economic consultants, and former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers:

“This year OPEC will be running something in the area of a $100 billion surplus, which means that there's a $100 billion deficit to be financed by somebody ...

“You get to the question, can these oil-related balance of payments deficits be financed, and the answer is: maybe not. If you can't finance the deficit, obviously it can't exist.”

It means, Greenspan suggested, that the OPEC surplus has to be reduced, and that leaves two alternatives: Lower OPEC production or lower the real price of oil.

“I think there will be a reduction in OPEC production well under what I think had been originally assumed, but I also suspect that our earlier expectations of increases in world crude oil prices, from say 3 percent to 4 percent per annum in real terms, are probably too high.”

Gallup Poll...

In a series of surveys of the public's perceptions of the personality traits of the three leading presidential candidates, the proportion of the public saying Carter has "strong leadership qualities," already low in January at 34 percent, sunk yet further in the latest survey.

Parallel declines in the proportions of voters crediting Carter with possessing other traits related to leadership have likewise been in evidence:

Carter Leadership Traits		1980
		January	September
Has strong leadership qualities	34%	34%	29%
Has well-defined program for moving the country ahead	31	31	24
Decisive, sure of himself	39	39	35
Offers imaginative, innovative solutions to national problems	41	41	34

Further evidence of a widespread lack of confidence in President Carter's leadership is seen in the decline in his job performance rating. In early December 1979, some four weeks after the American hostages were seized in Iran, as many as 61 percent of Americans voiced approval of his performance in office; in mid-September 1980 only 37 percent approved.

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews from various surveys conducted in scientifically-selected localities throughout the nation. In each of the surveys, a minimum of 1,500 adults (18 and over) were interviewed.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

FOCUS

Plotting In Paris

In January, 1979, Shahpour Bakhtiar was prime minister of Iran, and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was in exile in Paris, plotting to overthrow the Iranian government. Today, Khomeini is Iran's highest ruling authority, and Bakhtiar is in exile in Paris, plotting to overthrow Iran's current government. Paris has become the headquarters for several exile groups hoping to overthrow Khomeini and seize power in Iran. Some of the exiles favor a monarchy, and want Reza Pahlavi, the late shah's son, to return to the throne his father was forced to leave. Other Iranians in Paris, including some who oppose a return to the monarchy, support Bakhtiar or other exiled leaders.

you, and I think you're more of a phony now.

"I feel sorry for you, Bumsted, because you won't have Wallenberg to kick around any more. That's the difference between being civil service and a presidential appointee. Those of us in civil service see some dodos come and go, but as far as everyone in my department is concerned, you are the pits."

"Is this the Washington Souvenir Shop on 15th Street? This is the Gamble Knick-knack Co. We seem to be overstocked on President Carter salt and pepper shakers — you know, the ones shaped like peanuts. We'll give them to you at our cost ... wait, don't hang up. How about half our cost? ... Will you just take them off our hands by paying for the shipping? ... Okay, we'll pay for the shipping."

"Charley, Eddie here. Listen, start cranking up the plans again for the B-1 bomber. Don't ask questions, just do what I tell you. It's just a hunch, but I think we're back in business."

TWO CHARGED

improved management of available funds, changes in highway design and concepts, and special levies from those who directly benefit from highway projects, the state can do without increased taxes. This stance is causing bad blood between the governor's office and the treasury, particularly as Hunt people recall that it was Boyles who cut the legs from under a proposed $600 million school construction bond which was pushed by State School Supt. Craig Phillips, and once delayed must again face the test of action in the 1981 General Assembly.

A reluctant General Assembly, stiff public resistance and opposition from the treasurer are combined with yet another element: Having won a second term, Hunt is a lame duck governor to a degree different from that which has plagued past governors. His position is intensified by the fact that his "green stamps" in the form of key state jobs and appointments are already largely exhausted.

Even so, some observers say, the governor could probably use his popularity and persuasive powers to push the gas tax to a successful vote. But, they wonder, would the people of North Carolina ever forgive him, politically, for doing so?

Helms 'Appalled' Over Arguments In Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although jubilant over a major victory in an anti-busing campaign, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Thursday he was "appalled" at arguments that his proposal should be killed because it wouldn't stop busing in Southern school systems.

Asked if he was referring to North Carolina's other senator, Democrat Robert Morgan, Helms declined to say. "I'll let the statement stand for itself," he said.

"I was appalled to have a senator stand on this floor and say: 'Well, we already have busing in the South. It is not going to help us. Let the other children suffer,'" Helms said in a speech to the Senate.

The amendment bars the Justice Department from asking a court in desegregation cases "to require directly or indirectly the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home."

Morgan, one of three senators speaking against the amendment on Wednesday, was the only one to raise the North-South issue.

Informed of Helms' statement Thursday, Morgan — who lost his bid for reelection this month to Republican John East — responded: "He is not referring to me, because I did not say that."

In his speech Wednesday, Morgan told the Senate. "There is nothing in the amendment that would in any way alleviate the busing now going on in the South."

The amendment, Morgan argued, would create a "dual system of education" by which the South would have to comply with civil rights laws and the rest of the country would not.

Morgan said Thursday his opposition to the amendment was not related to Helms' campaign support of East. He said there was "nothing at all unusual" about his opposition to the anti-busing proposal.

Morgan said he was philosophically opposed to busing, but he said the same standard should be applied to all regions of the country.

Life As It's Lived

Washer Repairman Is Not Really That Lonely

By GAIL MICHAELS

I wish I could say that my washer repairman is as lonely as Maytag's, but he's not. Approximately every three months he pays us a housecall that makes the bill for major surgery look like a refund from the power company.

These bills send Phillip up a wall. But it's not the expense that upsets me the most. It's the waiting period. Two days normally elapse between my frantic call to the service center and the repairman's appearance. I would rather go without food for two days than without my washer. As I see it, simple gnawing hunger is far easier to face than the dismal prospect of going to a laundromat. And in a household with an infant and a preschooler that prospect usually becomes reality any time the washing machine is out of order for more than an hour and a half.

Phillip has never been able to understand my aversion to laundromats. His only experience in this area was at an exceptionally well-run laundromat owned by a friend of his. All he had to do was to sit and chat with this friend until the wash was done.

I haven't been so lucky. For some reason, I am always the one who gets caught between two kids playing demolition derby with the laundry carts while I wait for a dryer that is stuck on Perma-Wrinkle.

So naturally, I panicked the last time my washer broke down. It happened on Saturday afternoon, so the soonest I could call the repairman would be Monday. That meant I'd be washerless till Wednesday. Unfortunately, I had just changed the sheets, the dirty towels were mildewing in the corner of the bathroom, and Meg was wearing the only clean outfit she had, a Mickey Mouse sweatshirt, a cowgirl skirt, and size 3 tights.

Zachary has three clean outfits, and all his cloth diapers were dirty. With him in disposables instead of six layers of cloth, I'd have another hour at the outside before I'd be dressing him in receiving blankets and safety pins.

"I don't see what all the fuss is about," Phillip said as I grudgingly slung the dirty clothes into the station wagon and crawled into the breathing space behind the steering wheel. "If you ask me, this is a good way to save money instead of sending the repairman on a European vacation this year."

I gunned the motor. "I didn't ask you."

"There's no need to get hostile. If you want, the kids and I will go with you to keep you company. Then maybe you won't mind as much."

The laundromat had its usual Saturday afternoon crowd. Just inside the door a toddler in a brown diaper was wrenching candy corn from a partially petrified puddle of soft drink. A charming fellow with three upper teeth missing aided us in our search for a machine. He aimed a plug of chewing tobacco at one and said, "That un thar's empty."

While I waited, four children playing tag used my legs as base. Meg grabbed the sleeve of my sweater in an attack of separation anxiety. Phillip sat mutely in one of the four chairs and held the baby. Finally, the ordeal was over. "Did you enjoy our little outing?" I snarled on the way back to the car.

Phillip stopped to peel the gum off the back of his pants. "I think we can find a better way to economize."

Alexander's Treasures Put On Display Sunday

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — King Tutankhamen, the "boy pharaoh" of ancient Egypt, set off a wave of excitement when the artifacts found in his 3,300-year-old tomb toured America. Now the Greeks are trying to upstage Tut.

"The Search for Alexander" opens Sunday in the new East Wing of the National Gallery of Art and goes to Chicago, Boston and San Francisco over the next 18 months.

But, unlike the exhibition of golden objects found in the tomb of young King Tut, none of the 175 artifacts from ancient Greece are directly associated with Alexander the Great, who 2,300 years ago conquered and ruled the areas which today are Turkey, Egypt, Syria, Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan and Pakistan before he died at age 33.

These treasures are objects Greeks used in Alexander's time to enhance their homes and their graves — wreaths of gold oak leaves, armor, coins, a gold casket, silver cups and bowls, busts and finely wrought gold jewelry. About 100 of them have never previously been outside Greece.

The show is accompanied by a big buildup — a television series, an art book and a scholarly symposium at the National Gallery.

Gallery spokeswoman Katherine Warwick says she doubts Alexander will out-draw Tutankhamen.

"We don't believe anything will top Tut," she says. The Tut show drew 8½ million visitors in its 1977-79 tour.

To welcome the artifacts from antiquity, 300 senators, ambassadors, bankers, Supreme Court justices, millionaires, cabinet members, museum directors, art collectors and archaeologists were invited to a black-tie banquet Thursday night in the gallery.

They ate at tables covered in blue and white. A Marine band played a new two-minute fanfare composed for the occasion.

At the heart of the show is a collection of 90 objects which lay hidden for 2,300 years until unearthed by archaeologists in 1977 in a tomb in the Macedonian village of Vergina. The tomb is believed to be that of King Philip II, father of Alexander.

The show will be seen in Washington until April 5, 1981; in Chicago at the Art Institute from May 16 to Sept. 7, 1981; in Boston at the Museum of Fine Arts from Oct. 23, 1981 to Jan. 10, 1982; and in San Francisco at the Fine Arts Museum from Feb. 19 to May 16, 1982.

Court Temporarily Brings Halt To Action Over Iranian Assets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After reviewing classified documents from the departments of state and treasury, a federal judge temporarily halted action on 20 corporate claims seeking an estimated $500 million in frozen Iranian assets.

U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham said Thursday he granted the 90-day stay on a government "suggestion of interest" request that "all further proceedings be stayed" in an effort to help the hostage crisis.

The State Department has sought deferrals in about 230 other claims in a dozen other states against the Iranian assets, estimated to total $8 billion. The ruling in San Francisco brought the government petitions to public attention.

In Washington, spokesman Joe Reap said the move was made so that legal action "would not prejudice our efforts to obtain the release of the hostages." He said that to his knowledge, no judge has ruled on the validity of any of the Iranian claim cases.

The Iranian government has demanded that all claims against its assets be dropped as a condition for releasing the Americans held hostage for more than a year.

The assets were frozen by President Carter after the hostages were taken, and many U.S. firms and individuals went to court seeking compensation for losses they sustained when the government of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini came to power.

"It is the position of the government that 'judicial proceedings at this time ... would create a serious risk of prejudicing the continuing efforts of the United States government to resolve the hostage crisis,'" Peckham wrote.

Peckham's action came 10 days after Carter declared in a televised statement that "any action taken by our government will be in full accordance with our laws and our Constitution."

The Iranian government assets are said to include $1.34 billion in securities and $1 billion in gold on deposit with the U.S. federal reserve. The assets, in addition, include $4 billion in foreign branches and subsidiaries of U.S. banks, and about $500 million held by U.S. companies.

Legal specialists have estimated that only $3.5 billion is under government control.

Peckham said modifications could be requested by any party because of extraordinary circumstances.

He added that the government must submit a written report to the court within 80 days on its views and specifying any added circumstances that might support a continuation of the stay.

The plaintiffs listed in the cases stayed Thursday include Bechtel Inc., Sylvania Technical Systems Inc., Bank of America, Aeronutronic Overseas Services Inc., Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp., Tchacos Co., Blount Brothers Corp., Citibank, Wells Fargo Bank, Crocker Bank, Equibank, Watkins Johnson Co. and Granger Associates, Mellon International Finance Corp., Cabot International Capital Corp., Pacific Far East Line, John Carl Warnecke & Associates and National Airmotive Corp.

Aycock Observes Career Week

In celebration of National Career Guidance Week, the Student Services Team of E. B. Aycock Junior High School sponsored a Career Fair as a team project. The fair took place on Thursday, November 13 at the school.

Representatives from 15 cluster areas of occupations provided information to help students in considering choices for their future careers.

Individuals representing firms, agencies, organizations and career fields presenting programs were: Henry Hinton, WNCT-TV; Donna Moore, Pitt County Health Department; Gene Parker, Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce; Helen Logan, school psychologist; Norma Barrett, Pitt Community College counselor; Paula Pressly and Pat Brannigan, Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy; Tim Norris and John Deluze, Procter & Gamble.

The Iranian government has demanded that all claims against its assets be dropped as a condition for releasing the Americans held hostage for more than a year.

The assets were frozen by President Carter after the hostages were taken, and many U.S. firms and individuals went to court seeking compensation for losses they sustained when the government of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini came to power.

"It is the position of the government that 'judicial proceedings at this time ... would create a serious risk of prejudicing the continuing efforts of the United States government to resolve the hostage crisis,'" Peckham wrote.

Bleak Prospects Continue To Face Polish Govm't

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish government has avoided a showdown with the country's biggest independent labor union, but Poland still faces the bleak prospect of food and fuel shortages, declining economic growth and local labor disputes.

Premier Jozef Pankowski estimated in a recent speech that it would take at least two or three years to rebuild the economy after years of mismanagement and months of labor unrest.

"We must all be aware that we are faced with a difficult period of time," he said.

Some Western observers believe the potential for new and potentially devastating social and labor unrest will remain until the economy is restored.

Settlement of the controversy over the charter of Solidarity, the country's biggest new independent union, apparently has ended the threat of widespread strikes for the time being. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called off plans for nationwide selective strikes after the Supreme Court ruled the union's charter need not include a clause affirming the leading role of the Communist Party.

But local labor disputes ranging from temporary work stoppages to full-fledged walkouts continue.

The government has warned repeatedly that the cumulative effect of local strikes will add another burden to the already strained economy. However, Poland's 34.5 million people do not need dire government warnings to let them know the economy is in bad shape.

"I spent an hour in line this morning for butter," said one Warsaw office worker. "I could understand it if it was for a car, but butter is a staple."

Sugar has all but disappeared from most supermarkets in the Warsaw area. Potatoes are hard to find. The government said the crop this year would be about 25 million tons, half the planned yield, due to spring flooding.

Improvement in food supplies was the first demand of the workers during last summer's strikes, and the government has mapped out plans to put more goods on grocery shelves.

Agriculture, which had been neglected in favor of industrialization, will receive about 30 percent of the investment funds under the next five-year plan, compared to about 20 percent under the current plan.

The government next week will unveil the food rationing plan demanded by the strikers to stop diversion of meat, fats, sugar and other scarce staples to the high-priced black market.

The Communist Party Politburo ordered an increase in the number of television sets and other luxury items to be sold abroad to pay for imports of farm products.

As a stopgap, the regime is considering asking East German and Czechoslovak mills to provide flour to customers in Polish border areas.

Pinkowski has said Poland will have to import 10 million tons of grain and fodder during the 1981 fiscal year. He said food imports during that time will exceed the value of exports by $1.4 billion, adding to an already crippling burden of foreign debt.

U.S. officials in Washington said the Polish government has asked the United States for $3 billion in emergency aid. The New York Times reported that Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie has recommended that President Carter increase grain credits to Poland from $670 million to $900 million.

Just as serious for the government and the people are shortages expected in coal, copper, steel and other related areas.

The government says coal production is lagging 8 million tons behind the target, copper production is 20,000 tons down and steel 417,000 tons below plan.

Officials warn that concessions made to strikers in the Silesian coal fields to give them more time off might reduce production further unless operations in the mines can be made more efficient.

Coal exports have been the leading source of foreign currency to buy products abroad, but now it is becoming difficult to meet domestic demand. PAP, the official news agency, reported that during a cold snap this month, 100,000 tons of coal per day were needed for private customers but only about 85,000 tons could be delivered.

Because of the shortages, workers may find it hard to spend the increased wages they won in the summer strikes. Government economists estimate that the amount of money in circulation next year will exceed the value of goods for sale by 200 billion zlotys ($6.7 billion), four times the size of this year's gap.

To soak up some of the excess, the government has increased interest rates on savings accounts an average of 2 percent effective Dec. 1. There is also a government plan to sell cars for half the price down and the remainder in two years when the car is delivered.

Stokes School Has Book Fair

The students and faculty of Stokes Elementary will celebrate American Education Week and Children's Book Week, November 17-21. Preparations began during the week of November 10-15 with a Book Fair sponsored by the media center.

Throughout Book Week the entire school will observe a 15 minute Read-In each day. At this time, students and faculty will set aside their tasks and read books of their own choosing. During the week many of the students in Mrs. Weeks' fourth and fifth grade class will tell stories to the younger students.

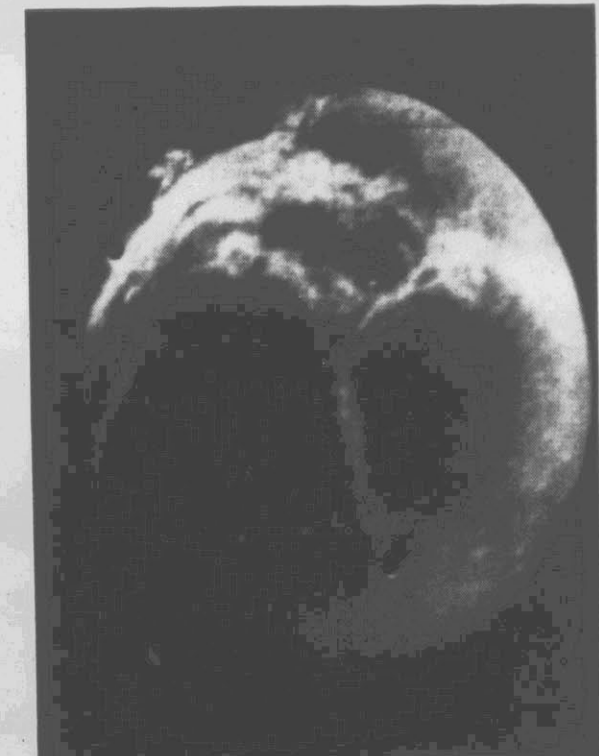

On Friday morning Supt. Ott Alford will visit the school to present a storytelling program to grades three, four and five. That afternoon, Beverly Cotton, visiting artist with Pitt Community College, will give a presentation of folk music and dance for the entire school.

Allsbrook Calls For Caucus

State Senator Julian Allsbrook of Roanoke Rapids, has called for a caucus of Democratic members of the Senate for December 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the Senate Chamber of the State House in Raleigh.

Allsbrook, dean of the Democratic membership of the Senate, termed the session an organizational meeting prior to the convening of the 1981 session of the General Assembly on January 14.

YOUTH PROGRAM
The Youth Department of Haddock's Chapel FWB Church is sponsoring a Jam For Jesus Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Speakers will be Eldress Vivian Hines and Eldress Watson. Two skits will be presented: "Which Plane Are You On?" and "The Devil Can't Win".

SATURN'S MOON DIONE — Circular craters can be seen in this image taken by Voyager I of Saturn's moon Dione from 790,000 kilometers (500,000 miles). The icy moon surface is only 11 kilometers (700 miles), and the markings on the moon are slightly brighter than the brightest features seen by Voyager on Jupiter's moons, suggesting that they are surface frost deposits. litical activists who campaigned for the conservative forces swept into power in last week's national elections see their crusade as barely begun, with more work ahead.

"Now is the time to plant our feet and stand firm," says Texas TV evangelist James Robison, vice president of Religious Roundtable, which enlisted and trained thousands of pastors in the political effort.

"If the people who have taken a stand go back to sleep, we're in trouble."
Gary Jarmin, campaign director of Christian Voice, which counted 25 victories out of 38 U.S. Senate and House race in which it was active, says the outcome is only the start of refurbishing American standards.

Some objectives, such as barring most abortions through a human-life amendment or a reversal of the 1973 Supreme Court decision allowing abortions, still are "several years down the road," he said.

"But we have embarked on a course in which conservative moral values and ideals are going to be the dominant force in politics for the next decade, and probably through the end of the century."

While the groups consider their continuing activity as essential, their leaders disclaim any political aspirations for themselves, saying they simply would keep exercising their influence on public issues.

"None of our people are interested in running for any political office," says independent Baptist TV
evangelist Jerry Falwell, head of Moral Majority, which has branches in all 50 states.

It says it registered 4 million new voters supporting "pro-morality" causes in the campaign and influenced more than 10 million others.

As for its goals of stopping abortion, pornography and illicit drug traffic, restoring voluntary prayers to public schools, strengthening national defense and supporting the security of Israel,
Falwell says:

"It is rather fine ... to now have a government in Washington that is friendly in its philosophy to what we are trying to do."

However, he says that "we no not play to ask any favors" of President-elect Ronald Reagan, but will support and pray for him and the new Congress, and keep working "for return of this nation to moral sanity."

Falwell's TV program reaches millions and his Doubleday book, "Listen

America," has soared in sales.

TV evangelist Robison, also with a national audience, says he thinks the evangelical activists
"alerted the people and awakened them to their responsibility" in the campaign, and he adds:

"Concerned Americans who are tired of excessive government masquerading as God rose up to say that we love the family, we believe in basic morality and we want to return this nation to the foundational strength of the past."

Disclaiming any personal political ambitions, he says he plans only to continue preaching, "I won't rest until the message that needs to be heard is presented to every person in this country over and over again."

Karl Moor, a Presbyterian and Moral Majority's coordinator of political affairs in Washington, says
"America has discovered a new majority," and the conservative movement
"can't help but grow."

"It can only get better," he says. "We knew it was out there, but we've only seen the tip of the iceberg."

Moral Majority has 500,000 active participants, including 72,000 pastors. Christian Voice has 210,000 members including 37,000 pastors, mostly evangelicals, but including many Mormons and 1,300 Catholic priests, with branches in 35 states. It, unlike the other groups, sided for and against particular candidates and openly backed Reagan.

Jarmin, a Baptist, says the movement had varying impact across the country, but that he thinks "it was decisive in the South," taking Jimmy Carter's "home base away from him."

Annoying, isn't it? We who love to think of ourselves as FREE are always being asked to conform. And if we show our spirit of independence by ignoring some stuffy convention — the shock wave registers on society's seismograph like an earthquake.

Despite manners and customs shouldn't each of us be making his own decisions?

Important decisions — moral and spiritual, should never be based on conformity. They must express our faith, always keeping God's purposes in focus.

Every one of us is free to search the Bible's truth. In God's Word we find foundations on which to build our lives.
In His promises we discover our hope and destiny.

Decisions we base on the Bible's truth today will be an influence for good in society tomorrow.

Officers Proposed For Club

WINTERVILLE — The Ruritan Club presented its slate of 1981 officers for approval at a meeting this week in the Community Building.

Those presented by the nominating committee included Tony Moore, president; Richard Minnick, vice president; Donald Boyle, secretary; and Paul Honey-suckle, treasurer. The officers will be installed at the December meeting.

It was reported at the meeting that the 1981 birthday calendars have arrived. "Anyone interested in one of them may contact a Ruritan member," said President Elwood Nobles. "We want to thank those people that participated in the birthday calendar, those who bought ads and those who had their names on there." Susan Purser and Angella Stallings, who helped prepare the birthday calendars, were special guests at the meeting.

Voting delegates for the district convention at Southern Wayne High School November 15 are Leck Keeter, Tony Moore and Buck Weaver.

Nobles reported that the fruitcake sale was coming to a successful close. "At this time we only have three left, and expect to sell them quickly," he commented. "Again, we want to thank everyone that participated."

Soviets Developing A New Submarine Missile

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy says the Soviets are testing a new submarine-launched missile that could strike deeper than anything in the American sub fleet.

It at least may have greater range, better accuracy and more power than any of the current Soviet submarine-launched missiles, which are just being matched by the U.S. Navy, officials said.

The Navy says, without elaboration, that the Soviets may be experiencing difficulties in their flight test program. But officials indicate they expect the Soviets to overcome those problems and eventually deploy the new missile, with a probable range greater than 4,500 miles, in tubes aboard their giant Typhoon submarines.

The U.S. Trident missile has a range of about 4,500 miles. That is roughly equivalent to the best the Soviets now have in service, the SSN-18.

Giving an unusual amount of detail on Soviet missile developments, the Navy said the first Typhoon sub was launched in September at a northern Russian shipyard and that the vessel is the first of a new class of "extremely large" undersea craft representing a new design.

"It is estimated it closely approximates or may even be larger in size and weapons fit than the U.S. Navy's new Ohio-class submarines, which have a submerged displacement of about 18,000 tons," the Navy said in response to questions.

"It is believed that the Typhoon will be capable of carrying at least 20 advanced design submarine-launched ballistic missiles," the Navy said.

Each of the United States' Ohio-class subs will carry 24 Trident missiles.

According to naval estimates, the first ship of the Typhoon class could begin sea trials next spring, which would be about the time that the U.S. Navy expects to accept delivery of its first Ohio-class submarine, which will be equipped with Trident missiles.

The Soviets' SSN-18, which can hurl three warheads each at widely separated targets, went into service two years ago.

The Typhoon sub is the third new class of submerged war vessel to appear in the Soviet navy in less than a year.

Last spring, the Russians launched a new type of cruise-missile sub, called the Oscar class, from the same shipyard that gave birth to the Typhoon.

This cruise-missile vessel, too, is huge, and some naval analysts say it might be able to launch saturation attacks on U.S. Navy carriers and other warships.

Last December, U.S. intelligence sources reported that the Soviet Union had begun a new nuclear-powered attack submarine that is rated faster and deeper-diving than the most advanced American sub.

This new Russian attack submarine is called Alpha. It is built of titanium, which reduces its vulnerability to certain types of detection by magnetic means. One Navy source has estimated that an Alpha-class sub can travel at speeds greater than 40 knots, which would make it faster than the most modern U.S. attack subs of the Los Angeles class.

Auto Production Layoffs Are Down ; Expect Slow Recovery

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. automakers say indefinite layoffs are down a bit this week, but depressed production schedules mean the rolls could go back up.

The five major producers said Thursday they had 182,475 workers home without a recall date, compared with 182,765 last week.

The General Motors Corp. total will fall by 3,000 next week, but that will be almost offset by the previously announced idling of 2,350 from the dropping of a shift by American Motors Corp. at its Kenosha, Wis., car assembly plant.

The following week, Chrysler Corp. will transfer

1,500 workers from the temporarily furlough list to indefinite layoffs by the dropping of the second shift at its Warren, Mich., plant.

This week's production of 154,139 cars will be 1.8 percent above production of 151,442 in the same week of 1979, said Ward's Automotive Reports. Last week, 157,378 cars were built.

Ward's survey of assembly schedules showed the manufacturers now betting on a spring sales upturn rather than one any time soon. The 2,046 million cars slated last month for production from January through March has now been cut to 1,934 million.

That would be an 8.5 percent increase from the 1,783 million cars projected for assembly in the final quarter of calendar 1980 and still an 8 percent increase over the 1980 first quarter, the first quarterly increase after seven quarters of decline from year-ago quarters.

Sales reports Thursday showed early November sales 3.5 percent better than the corresponding period last year.

Inventories on Nov. 1, according to Ward's, had declined from a 71-day supply a month earlier to a 56-day supply, under pressure from the fall sales increase and the tight rein on production.

GM's supply fell from 60 days to 48, Ford Motor Co.'s from 93 to 62 and Chrysler's from 102 to 87 while AMC's stocks rose from 76 to 93 days and Volkswagon of America's ballooned from 44 days to 72 days.

GM said it had 96,000 indefinite layoffs, the same as last week, and no temporary furloughs in effect or planned for next week.

Ford reported 50,500 indefinitely laid off, down from 50,990 last week. Ford will halt car production for a week starting Monday at Lorain, Ohio with layoffs for 3,700, and for two weeks at San Jose, Calif., idling 1,000. Ford had no temporary layoffs this week.

Chrysler indefinite layoffs rose from 33,300 to 33,500. Reopenings of two plants next week will recall 6,000 workers from short-term layoff, but a week's extension of the closing of the Warren plant will keep 4,000 at home.

AMC had 2,475 on open-ended furlough this week, unchanged from last week, and no temporary downtime. VW had no layoffs.

ECU Closes Out Home Slate

Heading Upward

East Carolina's Anthony Collins (33) can become the third man in career rushing at East Carolina, and the eighth in total offense, as the Pirates close out their home season against Eastern Kentucky Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium. Collins has rushed for 2,116 yards in his career at ECU.

East Carolina University will honor its seniors Saturday as the Pirates close out their home season against strong Eastern Kentucky. Kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

The Pirates will be attempting to even their record at 5-5 against the defending Division I-AA national champions, who are 7-2 on the season, and who have been ranked among the leaders in their division all year.

A total of 14 seniors will be honored in pre-game ceremonies. They include Anthony Collins, Theodore Sutton, Rodney Allen, Rocky Butler, Vern Davenport, James Freer, Mike Hawkins, Willie Holley, Chuck Jackson, Bill Lamm, Jeffrey Warren, Nate Wigfall, Tim Swords, and Wayne Inman.

The meeting between the two teams will be the second. They last met in 1962, when East Carolina took a 29-12 victory. That game was the last played on the old college field where Fletcher Music Building now stands.

"Eastern Kentucky is a fine football team," East Carolina coach Ed Emory said. "They were a late addition to our schedule, and we knew that they would be a challenge to us. They won a national championship last year, and I suspect that they will be favored over us in most places." Emory added that the Colonels are blessed with lots of speed, have outstanding receivers, fast backs, and a quarterback with 4.5 speed who leads the conference in passing.

"They have a big defense, too," he added. The defensive lines weighs in at 232, in comparison to East Carolina's 218. The linebackers average 205 and the backs 185.

"To win we are going to have to play a great defensive game and we are going to have to move the ball on offense and not make mistakes," Emory said. "We want to even our record on our home turf and keep alive our chances for a winning season." The Pirates are shooting for their ninth straight winning season this year.

"Some of our w...s are still alive, but we have to win these next two games if we are to have a chance at them. It's going to be awfully tough, however, to beat both Eastern and N.C. State."

Eastern Kentucky comes into the game ranked nationally in only one area — but it is the best possible area, scoring defense. The Colonels are allowing but 10.2 points a contest, third best in the country among Division I-AA teams.

Last week, against Tennessee Tech, the Colonels rolled to a 48-7 victory, piling up 522 yards in total offense.

"We seem to be coming into our own like we did last year at this time," Eastern Kentucky coach Roy Kidd said after that game.

Junior tailback Tony Braxton was the Ohio Valley Conference Offensive Player of the Week for his 124 yards on 17 carries, which included three touchdowns.

Braxton is second in rushing for the team, gaining 427 yards, while tailback Alvin Miller leads with 536. Fullback Dale Patton has 394, while quarterback Chris Isaac has 129.

Isaac, in the passing game, has hit on 51 of 105 attempts with five interceptions for 673 yards and four touchdowns. His top receivers are flanker Jerry Parrish with 15 for 215 yards, split end David Booze with 14 for 190, tight end Cris Curtis with 12 for 164, and split end Steve Bird with 10 for 164. Bird has three touchdown receptions.

One of the top offensive people, too, is placekicker David Flores, who leads the team's scoring with 40 points, including 16 of 17 extra points and eight of ten field goals. Flores next point will set a new career scoring record for the school of 221 points. His next field goal will be his 35th and will tie the Ohio Valley Conference record.

The Eastern team as a whole is rushing for 200.4 yards a game, while allowing 138.7. They are passing for 99.4 yards a game, giving up 127.7.

As a team, the Pirates are averaging 282.2 yards a game, 225.9 rushing and 56.3 passing. Defensively, they are allowing 347.3 yards, 131.6 through the air and 215.7 on the ground.

Fullback Theodore Sutton, whose chances of breaking the career rushing mark of Carlester Crumpler are dwindling, leads the individual rushing with 510 yards. Halfback Anthony Collins is next with 412, followed by running mate Mike Hawkins with 349. Quarterback Greg Stewart has rushed for just 88 yards in two starting roles.

Stewart, through the air, has hit 21 on 51 passes for 231 yards and one touchdown — the only aerial score of the year for East Carolina. Hawkins is the leading receiver with 14 catches for 154 yards, while Collins is next with 11 for 94, and split end Vern Davenport has nine grabs for 116 yards.

Punter Rodney Allen, who winds up his career at East Carolina this year, recently passed the five-mile mark in punting, having kicked for 9,109 yards during the past four years.

The Pirates will close out the 1980 season, Emory's first as head coach of the Bucs, next week in Raleigh's Carter-Finley Stadium against N.C. State. Eastern Kentucky ends the season hosting OVC foe Morehead State.

UNC, Maryland Bid For Bowls

By The Associated Press
Bowl bids will be in the spotlight, but Atlantic Coast Conference football games at Chapel Hill, N.C., and College Park, Md., Saturday carry top billing so far as ACC standings are concerned.

North Carolina, 8-1 overall and 4-0 in the conference, can clinch at least a tie for the ACC title with a victory over Virginia, 4-5 for the season.

At College Park, Maryland, 5-3 and 3-1, needs a victory to keep alive any chance for a share of the conference championship. A loss there means the Terps only chance for even a tie would depend on a big "if" — if North Carolina loses to both Virginia and Duke and Maryland beats Virginia next week.

Added to the anxiety over both games will be the presence of bowl scouts. Several bowls have expressed interest in both the Tar Heels and the Terps.

Tar Heel coach Dick Crum said his team is not taking Virginia, which fell to North Carolina 13-7 last, lightly.

"They (Virginia) think they have their best team up there this year," he said. "I know their defense is better."

Virginia is going into the game on the heels of a 19-17 loss to Rutgers. The week before Virginia upset Tennessee in Knoxville.

UNC tailback Amos Lawrence goes into the game needing only 120 yards to become only the second player in NCAA history to gain more than 1,000 yards four consecutive years in college. Pitt's Tony Dorsett is the other one.

Virginia tailback Tommy Vigorito has missed two games this season but still has gained 639 yards and is averaging 91.3 yards a game.

Maryland must be wary of Clemson quarterback Homer Jordan, who has been playing his best of the season in the last few games. But the Terps have their own weapon in the person of tailback Charlie Wysocki, who has piled up 1,105 yards rushing already this year.

In the other conference game Saturday Duke, 2-7, visits North Carolina State, 4-5.

In non-conference games, Wake Forest, 4-5, visits 14th-ranked South Carolina.

Cagers To Play Game

East Carolina University's men's basketball team will go on public display Saturday evening in Minges Coliseum.

The annual Purple-Gold game will be held starting one-half hour after the completion of the ECU-Eastern Kentucky football game in neighboring Ficklen Stadium.

Coach Dave Odom, in his second year at the helm of the Pirate cage team, will feature a young team which includes only four members of last year's squad: Michael Gibson, David Underwood, Mark McLaurin and Tom Szymanski.

The men open the season on Monday, Nov. 24, with an exhibition against Marathon Oil in Minges.

There will be no women's Purple-Gold game due to a rash of injuries which has left the Lady Pirates shorthanded. The women open the season on Sunday, Nov. 23, hosting Virginia Tech.

Swimmers Open Season Against Old Dominion

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina's men swimmers will play host to Old Dominion tonight at 7 p.m. as the Pirates open the 1980-81 season in Minges Natatorium. The Lady Pirates and Lady Monarchs will also be in action in the meet.

"We've had some losses since last year," Coach Ray Scharf said, "but overall I think we're in pretty good shape."

One of the losses was unexpected. Kelly Hopkins, a national qualifier in the breaststroke last year, elected not to rejoin the team this year. "That hurts us some, but I think we will overcome it," Scharf said.

"The swimmers are working hard so far, and are very tired going into this meet, but we feel like they'll be ready by tonight."

As usual, the Pirates are deep in freestylers. Leading the way may be Jim Wiklund of Sweden, a newcomer to the team. "He can do anything from the 100 to the 1,500," the coach said. "He's a very strong swimmer."

Scott Ross will help in the shorter distances, having made the AAU national cuts this summer, working in California. Danny Michaelove will work in the distances, while John Bennett, one of five former Rose High School swimmers on the team, in the middle distances. Richard Michaels has looked good in the short and middle distances, according to Scharf, with Lance Timmons and Roger Clemmons, both former Rose swimmers, joining in.

John Akright, one of the co-captains, will handle middle and distance freestyles and be strong in the individual medley.

The other co-captain, Jack Clowar, is the only senior on the team. Last year, he was on the Eastern Regional championship relay team, and was the champ in the 50-yard freestyle, finishing third in the 100-yard butterfly. "He's a top sprinter and a good all-around swimmer," Scharf said. Clowar, however, is coming off a shoulder operation in the summer, and may be slowed early.

Joining him in the butterfly will be another Rose swimmer, Kevin Richards, who also will work in the IM. Perry Newman could be the best of the butterflyers, with Joe Murtagh and Chip Green, who also swims the distance freestyles, joining in.

Doug Nieman should lead the backstrokers, and will also lead the IM'ers. John Richards, still another Rose swimmer added depth. Also in the back are Bjorn Johansen of Norway (who recruited Wiklund and one of the female swimmers), will help here, and could also become a top man in the fly and the freestyle sprints; and David Giovine, who also is good in the distances and the IM.

Matt McDonald is the leader among the breaststrokers, and Scharf also lists him as a top IM'er. Brian Duncan backs him up, and also swims the individual medley.

"We don't have any divers this year, again, so we will be giving away points there in every one of our dual meets," Scharf said. "This really hurts us, but we do have some hope

Vann Made Switch From Throwing To Catching

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Those who managed to make the trip to Miami, or who caught one of the television replays, saw one member of the East Carolina Pirate team come up with his first catch as a receiver.

And what a catch it was.

For Norwood Vann, a second-year freshman, the catch came at the right time, too. His one-handed, reaching-back catch of Greg Stewart's throw over the middle got the Pirates started on their lone touchdown march. The completion went for 29 yards.

"I had released outside," Vann recalled, "but the linebacker tipped the ball and knocked it out of line just a little." Vann had to reach back over his shoulder to make the one-handed grab. "I just concentrated hard on getting it," he said.

While the Pirates did go on to score on the drive, Vann felt that if the pass had been on the money to start with, he might have made it. "There was only one man between men and the goal, and he got the tackle. If I hadn't had to hesitate to make the catch, I feel like I would have had a chance to break it."

Recruited from James Kenan High School, Vann played quarterback and defensive end in the prep ranks. But after an injury in the All-Star game, the coaching staff wanted to try him at tight end also. "Coach (Pat) Dye had me working a little at both positions last year. I was sort of in-between. Later, they told me that because I had such big hands that I might be better at tight end, so I was moved there for good."

It was a move that hasn't bothered Vann that much. "I did play some tight end as a junior in high school, so it wasn't completely new.

"I had to improve my blocking, get used to hitting instead of getting hit," he said, noting that his primary duty has been as a blocker. "I've gotten more aggressive as the year went along."

Early on, Vann had some trouble picking up the ball because of his face mask, but that's been changed, and as shown against Miami, he can find it now. "I like to catch the ball and run with it," he said.

Vann, with three more years ahead of him, could figure in a lot of pass patterns in the future, and he thinks the ECU future is bright. "We have so many people back next year that we should be improved. I'm really looking forward to it."

In Memorium

It has been ten years, but the memory still remains with me. It probably always will.

Ten years ago this evening, the plane carrying the Marshall University football team clipped a tree while approaching the airport near Huntington, W. Va., and crashed. All of those aboard were killed. In addition to the team members, also killed were most of the coaching staff, the sports information director and other officials of the university.

It threw the Greenville area into a frenzy, and that night's activities here at The Daily Reflector were turned from the usually hectic to truly frantic.

Earlier in the afternoon, East Carolina's Pirates had edged past the Thundering Herd, 17-13. Both teams had struggled during the year, and both wanted this game badly. As my family and I left the Ficklen Stadium area, we were passed by the team bus, and looked up into the faces of the Marshall players.

Some probably still had their minds on the game, wondering what they could have done that might have turned things around. Others were looking forward to getting home — to that girl friend or wife, toward hitting the books for an exam early in the week, or to just sacking out for the flight back.

While time has dimmed the actual faces, I can't forget looking up at them as they passed us and feeling that they had been worthy opponents.

Later that night, the telephone rang. It was a reporter on a paper in Ashland, Kentucky. "Do you know whether the Marshall football team has left Greenville yet?" he asked. "We've got a report of a plane crash near the airport, and some people are saying it might be the one with the Marshall team aboard."

It left a sinking feeling, but I told my colleague that I would check with the Kinston airport and get back to him.

Minutes later, I was asking about the flight of someone at the airport. "They left some time ago," he said. "Have they had time to get there?" I asked.

"They should have arrived just a little while ago," he answered.

When I explained what I had heard from Ashland, he said, "Oh, no. Oh, my God. It probably is them."

My call back to Ashland confirmed it.

The rest of the night was consumed with putting together the sports pages for the next morning paper, with talking to people from Ohio to Florida about the crash, in getting reactions from local people — the coaching staff and administration at East Carolina.

And with writing of the crash from the Greenville perspective.

The newspaper provided background information to the national wire services about the game, which had gone from being an obscure game to one of national prominence.

It was a night in which I was to be too absorbed by work to have a chance to think about the people who had been lost, some of whom had become friends through the series with the school. I guess, looking back, I was lucky. I didn't have a chance for the tragedy to set in until later.

In the days that followed, there were memorial services both here and in Huntington for the dead. Members of the ECU staff and several players flew to West Virginia for those services.

I remember them telling me that they could see the scars of the crash as they flew in, and it left them even more affected than they had been earlier.

Too many times, we tend to see or hear of a tragedy, and since it doesn't affect us, we think little of it. It becomes a tsk-tsk, tough luck, type of feeling.

But when you are touched by the people who have been lost, you don't forget.

It's been ten years now, and it seems like yesterday. I certainly haven't forgotten, and I won't.

Apparently some who had good intentions have, however. After the crash, money was raised to provide some type of memorial here in Greenville for those lost. It was said at the time that some type of plaque, memorializing them should be placed permanently in Ficklen Stadium at a featured spot.

I would like to see that followed through, even at this late date.

For after all, they gave their last effort here. They fought hard, gave their best...and they died.

LeFlore, McGraw Ignored In Baseball's Re-Entry Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — There was an air of mystery surrounding baseball's re-entry draft today after Ron LeFlore and Tug McGraw, two of the biggest names available in the talent grab bag, were all but ignored by the 26 clubs.

LeFlore, the speedy outfielder who stole 97 bases last season, was selected only once — almost as an afterthought in the 11th round by the Chicago White Sox. McGraw, one of Philadelphia's World Series heroes, was ignored completely, not selected at all. Under the rules of the draft, both players become eligible to negotiate with all 26 major league clubs.

Now come the questions. Why would Dave W. Roberts, a utilityman with routine credentials, be the most popular selection, chosen by 12 teams? Why would journeyman outfielder Jim Dwyer, who has already played for five clubs, be No. 2 on the shopping list, picked by 11 teams? And why would more familiar names like LeFlore and McGraw be virtually ignored?

Some think it was a case of bargain-basement shopping. Teams know Roberts and Dwyer can't demand the kind of contract numbers LeFlore and McGraw can.

"I was very surprised," said Paul Owens, director of player personnel for the World Champion Philadelphia Phillies. "It was like it was two separate drafts, one for LeFlore and McGraw and one for the other players. Maybe it's a trend. Players who indicated they would try for big sums ... maybe clubs are finally getting to the point where they say, 'This has gone far enough.'"

That's one theory. Another is that the draft is really a chess game, a battle of nerves with clubs waiting each other out. That's Marvin Miller's theory.

"I think this was an outgrowth of last year when clubs deliberately hung back as long as a player had one pick or no picks because under the rules, when a player is drafted by less than two teams, it is not necessary to draft him or give up an amateur schoice if you sign him," the executive director of the Players Association said.

Another intriguing side of the draft comes from the other extreme — the high-priced auction it created for the services of slugger Dave Winfield and pitcher Don Sutton. Both were picked by 10 teams — three below the limit allowed. The bidding began immediately.

Weekend Football Possibilities Are Enough To Bowl You Over

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The possibilities could bowl you over.

Just who will be headed to what college football bowl games pretty much will be decided this weekend ... or next ... or the next.

Actually, bowl bids will officially be tendered Saturday, though many of the major postseason games won't have solid matchups.

For instance, No. 1 Georgia, the only major unbeaten, untied team in the nation, can clinch the Southeastern Conference crown and the host spot in the Sugar Bowl by defeating Auburn on Saturday. But if the Bulldogs stumble against Auburn, either Alabama, Mississippi State or Louisiana State could wind up in New Orleans on New Year's Day.

"I imagine there's some added pressure," said Georgia Coach Vince Dooley of his top-ranked team, "but we're relaxed, just as we have been for the first nine games of the season."

No. 5 Alabama, meanwhile, plays in the spotlight game of the weekend, a matchup with No. 6 Notre Dame. The winner is expected to get the other bid to the Sugar Bowl — provided Georgia wins or ties with Auburn — while the loser could be headed to the Cotton Bowl. The nationally televised game is a confrontation between the two teams which preceded Georgia at the top of the polls.

Alabama Coach Bear Bryant has 304 career victories but he has never beaten the Irish. The Crimson Tide is a 7-point favorite to change that but Bryant isn't impressed by the odds.

"I don't like our chances," said Bryant, whose club was beaten 6-2 by Mississippi State two weeks ago. "They're a big team with a great defense. We're just not that good."

One must wonder just how good Notre Dame is after being held to a 3-3 tie last week by lowly Georgia Tech.

"This is the most important game of the year for us," said Irish Coach Dan Devine, whose squad may have been looking ahead to Alabama last week.

Also looking ahead to bowl bids after their games Saturday are:

No. 11 Michigan and No. 16 Purdue, who face off in a nationally televised battle at Ann Arbor, with the winner staying alive in the Rose Bowl race and the loser being considered for the Fiesta, Gator and Garden State bowls.

No. 7 Ohio State, which is at Iowa and needs a win to remain in the running for the Rose — the Buckeyes are certain to get a bid to a bowl even if they fall short of Pasadena.

No. 4 Nebraska and No. 10 Oklahoma, the favorites for the Big Eight title and a spot in the Orange Bowl. The Cornhuskers travel to Iowa State while the Sooners entertain Missouri, which also has a shot at the conference championship and the Miami game. All three schools will receive bids, with the Liberty and Sun bowls figuring to invite the conference runnersup.

Eastern independents Pitt, No. 8 and at Army this week, and No. 9 Penn State, which visits Temple. Both Pitt and Penn State have designs on the Orange Bowl, with the Cotton, Sugar, Liberty, Gator and Fiesta bowls also possibilities.

No. 12 Baylor, which like Georgia, has the opportunity to clinch a host spot on New Year's Day. The Bears need just a tie at Rice to nail down the Southwest Conference and the invitation to the Cotton.

No. 13 Brigham Young and unranked Colorado State, who face off for first place in the Western Athletic Conference. The high-powered BYU offense will attract several bowl offers even if the Cougars lose the WAC crown. The winner of the WAC goes to the Holiday Bowl.

No. 14 South Carolina, which plays Wake Forest on Saturday, is said to be a shoo-in for the Gator Bowl. Virginia is at No. 15 North Carolina, which is tops in the Atlantic Coast Conference and said to be a lock for the Peach. No. 18 SMU plays at Texas Tech and afterwards is expected to get an invite from the Holiday Bowl.

In a key SEC contest, it's LSU vs. No. 19 Mississippi State at Jackson. The victor remains in the hunt for the conference title and a slot in the Sugar Bowl — provided Georgia loses — while both are being considered for the Hall of Fame, Tangerine and Peach bowls.

Second-ranked Southern California, which is on Pacific-10 probation and ineligible for a bowl, will try to slow Washington's march for the Rose Bowl.

Battered, Bruised NFC Central Division Gets Down To Business

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
After being battered all season long, the National Conference Central Division now gets down to deciding who will go to the National Football League playoffs.

All five teams in the NFC Central still have a shot at the division crown after 10 games, and Tampa Bay moves into Minnesota Sunday for the first showdown.

The Buccaneers, the defending division champions, will play all six of their remaining games in the division, including two each with the Vikings and the Detroit Lions.

"This is the season," Tampa Bay Coach John McKay said. "We are going to play a six-game season."

Detroit leads the NFC Central with a 6-4 record while Minnesota is 5-5, Green Bay and Tampa Bay both 4-5-1 and the Chicago Bears 4-6.

"Everybody is even in our division, literally," said Coach Bud Grant, whose Vikings have won the division 10 times. "And everybody in our division feels they can win it."

In other games Sunday, Green Bay meets the New York Giants, Detroit plays host to the Baltimore Colts and Chicago is at home with Houston.

Elsewhere, Buffalo is at Cincinnati, Cleveland plays at Pittsburgh, Kansas City travels to San Diego, the New York Jets are at Denver, New Orleans goes to Atlanta, Philadelphia is at Washington, St. Louis is at Dallas, Los Angeles goes to New England and San Francisco is at Miami.

Monday night, Oakland is at Seattle.

"Going into it (the season), I thought we would have about six games won by now," said McKay. "But whatever we did, we knew these (final six) would be the most important games of the year."

Cleveland has won five straight games, including a 27-26 victory over the Steelers three weeks ago when Browns quarterback Brian Sipe completed a club-record 28 passes, including the decisive 18-yard TD toss to tight end Ozzie Newsome with 5:38 to go. Pittsburgh barely got past Tampa Bay last week as most of the Steelers' injured players returned.

Philadelphia, at 9-1 off to its best start since the Eagles won the NFL championship in 1960, tries to extend its winning streak to seven and hand the Redskins their third straight loss.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who figure they lost on a fluke two weeks ago, get another shot at Dallas. The Cowboys beat the Cards on a 28-yard scoring pass with 45 seconds left in the game. Last week, Dallas was shocked by the Giants while St. Louis fell to Atlanta in overtime.

The Houston-Chicago contest pits the Oilers' Earl Campbell, the NFL's defending rushing champion, against the Bears'

Walton Payton, a four-time NFC rushing champ.

New England, which shares the AFC East lead with Buffalo, hopes to make it two in a row over Los Angeles, which is one game behind Atlanta in the NFC West. In their only other meeting, the Pats downed the Rams 20-14.

Both Kansas City and San Diego are trying to stay alive in the AFC West. The Chargers, 6-4, have lost four of their last six games while the Chiefs, 5-5, have won five of their last six.

"If we can upset the Chargers, it will determine whether we are in the race or not," said Kansas City Coach Marv Levy.

Cincinnati, 3-7, will try to halt its slide but will be taking on one of the NFL's top teams. Last year, the Bills crushed Cincinnati 51-24.

The NFC West-leading Atlanta Falcons hope to stretch their winning string to five and, at the same time, avoid becoming the first team to lose this season to New Orleans, 0-10.

"We realize that beating the Atlanta Falcons would erase much of the disappointment of the Saints' season," said Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett. "The rivalry is intense, and while it is a cliché, I don't think the records have a great of meaning when these two teams play."

Denver, 5-5, is coming off an impressive victory over San Diego while the Jets, 2-8, lost last week to Buffalo with only six seconds left in the game. Denver will start Craig Morton, a former New York Giant, who has taken over as the starting quarterback from Matt Robinson, a former Jet.

The Giants, 2-8, snapped an eight-game losing streak last week by beating Dallas. This Sunday, they go up against improving Green Bay, 4-5-1. The Packers beat San Francisco 23-16 last Sunday, the most points Green Bay has scored this year.

Yarborough Grabs Pole Position In NASCAR Championship Bid

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Cale Yarborough has taken what he hopes is the first step in his last-ditch effort to win the 1980 Grand National stock car championship.

Yarborough, of Timmonsville, S.C., must finish at least six places ahead of Dale Earnhardt in Saturday's Los Angeles Times 500, the final event of the NASCAR season, to win the stock car crown.

On Thursday, Yarborough won the pole position for the Times 500, but Earnhardt will be right beside him when Saturday's 500-mile event begins.

Earnhardt, 29, the rookie of the year on the NASCAR circuit in 1979, was clearly pleased to qualify on the outside of the front row.

"I'm really surprised that we ran that well," he said. "I'm really tickled. This means we can keep an eye on Cale."

"Cale and I both will have a lot of pressure on us. I plan to run a race exactly the way we've run all year...as hard as I can. If the car breaks, we'll probably lose the championship."

Yarborough won the pole with a best lap of 155.499 miles-per-hour over the Ontario Motor Speedway oval. Earnhardt, of Kannapolis, N.C., recorded the second fastest time over the 2 1/2-mile course with an average speed of 154.855. Both drove 1977 Chevrolets.

The next three among the 30 qualifying that qualified Thursday were Neil Bonnett with a speed of 154.831 mph; Benny Parsons, who went 154.406 mph, and Bobby Allison, with a speed of 154.347 mph.

Defending national champion Richard Petty, out of the running this year, was eighth at 154.086 mph.

There will be 10 more qualifiers Friday to boost the field to 40 for the annual race.

Yarborough had to go on the track with the second car trying to qualify and expressed surprise that his time held up to win the pole position.

"I knew we were running good," he said. "But I really didn't expect the time to hold up for the pole. I thought the later starters would have a better chance because it was hotter when I went out (11 a.m. PST) and cooler for them."

The race itself starts at 11 a.m. on Saturday.

If Earnhardt wins the $207,000 race — the top prize is $21,585 — it would push his earnings to more than $550,000, bettering the top money mark of $531,292 set by Petty last year when he won his seventh Winston Cup championship.

Rookies Appear To Be Money's Worth To 76ers

Speed Mark Bid Ends In Death

By The Associated Press
Andrew Toney and Earl Cureton were both big shots in college last season — Toney at Southwestern Louisiana and Cureton at the University of Detroit.

The Philadelphia 76ers expected a lot of them this year after taking them high in the National Basketball Association draft. And if Thursday night's performances were any indication, the 76ers will get their money's worth.

Toney, a 6-foot-3 guard, scored a season-high 32 points and Cureton a 6-9 forward-center, had 15 as the 76ers beat Indiana 130-103.

"The two rookie starters were a little nervous in the first few minutes," said 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham, "but when they got into the flow of the game, they played real well. I think it shows them I have confidence in them and their ability to play the game."

Toney hit nine of 11 shots from the field and scored 19 points as the 76ers opened a 61-48 halftime lead. His previous high for a game was 16 points.

"If it was a little frustrating sitting on the bench in the early part of the year," said Toney, "I was learning against a lot of different players. I think it really helps to learn while you're watching."

Cureton, starting in place of the injured Darryl Dawkins, scored eight points in the final 8½ minutes of the first half. He topped his club in rebounds with 14.

The 76ers, a hot 14-3 so far this season, also got 26 points from Bobby Jones.

Noted Cunningham: "I thought Indiana looked tired — a lot like we looked last night. We're fortunate that we are deep in a lot of areas. We were really sharp and aggressive. Our last three road games — Milwaukee, Chicago and Indiana — we've always had a lot of trouble at beating those teams. But it seems like we beat all three of them by an average of 30 points."

Rookie Louis Orr topped Indiana with a season-high 20 points.

Cavaliers 114, Hawks 111
Richard Washington came off the bench to score 14 second-half points, including a clinching three-point play, to lead Cleveland over Atlanta.

Cleveland's victory snapped an eight-game Cavalier losing streak, while Atlanta's losing string was extended to nine games.

Spurs 113, Clippers 107
George Gervin scored 35 points and rookie forward Reggie Johnson came off the bench to add a career-high 22 leading San Antonio past San Diego.

The Spurs, who have won all nine of their games against the Clippers since the San Diego franchise was established, took command early, racing to a 60-45 halftime lead.

GLENBROOK, Nev. (AP) — Crews were expected to be back on Lake Tahoe today to resume the search for the body of Lee Taylor whose rocket-powered boat disintegrated in his bid for the world speed record.

Searchers using floodlights and television cameras worked into the night, peering through the frigid lake waters for the boat's cockpit section which they presumed contained Taylor's body.

The search was temporarily abandoned late Thursday after five futile hours.

Sheriff's Sgt. Doug Struthers said: "He is presumed dead. He has not been officially declared dead."

Before darkness fell Thursday, crews recovered an unopened drag parachute, Taylor's helmet and several sections of the boat, but found no sign of the 45-year-old Bellflower, Calif., pilot.

Denver Dickerson, Tahoe project director for the attempt, said it appeared that the boat hit a "black line" of shifting currents that caught a wing-like stabilizer at the rear of the boat. The boat "just blew apart," Dickerson said.

He said a black line creates a surface disturbance similar to going over a bump, and the line was where Taylor started to shut off his engine.

The accident occurred after Taylor had made one of two required runs through the one-kilometer speed trap at well below the record of 317.6 miles per hour.

Doug Freeman of Taylor's organization, said the official speed clocked on the first run was 269.835 mph, but Fratello said the boat peaked around 350 mph before slowing.

A crowd estimated at nearly 1,000, including Taylor's mother, wife and daughter, greeted the pilot with cheers as he raced through the speed trap. The shouts turned to screams when the boat flew apart in 200 feet of water about one-half mile off the shore.

Taylor tested the boat this summer on Walker Lake southeast of Reno and reached unofficial speeds of 333 mph.

"It's euphoric" traveling at that speed, he said. "It's sort of like riding the tip of an arrow just shot from a bow."

He said he hoped to hit 350 mph in Thursday's attempt to take the record from Australian Ken Warby.

"My goal is to bring the world's water speed record back to the United States in 1980," Taylor said before Thursday's attempt.

Warby broke Taylor's previous record in June 1978 after Taylor held the mark for 11 years. Both records were set in jet boats. This was the first attempt in a rocket-powered craft.

Taylor, who survived a 1964 jet boat crash on Lake Havasu, said he made Thursday's run on Lake Tahoe because of the length available for approach and shutoff on the course.

If you can finesse for a queen either way, it is sometimes a pure guess how you play the hand. Often, a count will lead you to the better line. And, on occasion, finding the winning way is simply a matter of technique.

North-South bid aggressively to three no trump.

South's hand was certainly worth a game try, especially since it was improved by the fine fit in opener's suit. But North had a difficult bid over South's two notrump. Despite his unbalanced distribution, he chose the course that was likely to pay the top reward.

West led his fourth-best spade, and East's jack lost to the king. Since declarer was now faced with four spade losers and the ace of diamonds, he had to run eight more tricks without surrendering the lead. The club suit offered a chance for five of those tricks, and declarer was on the right track when he elected to play East for the queen. Since West was presumably long in spades, East rated to have more clubs. Declarer would also need the heart finesse.

Unfortunately, declarer chose to lead the ten of clubs to dummy's king, and then finesse the jack. That won, but the contract failed when West showed out. Seven tricks were all that declarer could collect before the opponents gained the lead to defeat the contract.

It is better technique for declarer to cross to the king of hearts at trick two and lead a club to the ten. When this holds, declarer tries the heart finesse. When dummy's jack wins, the contract is secure unless West was holding up the queen of clubs.

Declarer repeats the club finesse, then cashes the ace. Dummy is entered with the high heart and the king of clubs fells the queen. The long club is now the game-going trick. In all, declarer takes five clubs, three hearts and a spade.

RESURRECTION — Actress Ellen Burstyn, portraying a woman who nearly loses her life in an accident and recovers with powers to cure her own, and other people's ills, attempts to bend a laser beam in a scene from the Universal film "Resurrection". She declines to exploit her powers and finds her life in danger all over again. The film is proving difficult to categorize and promote; with elements of life after death, healing, a feminine ideal figure, and the supernatural. (AP Laserphoto)

Gov. Hunt Plans A Trip To Hollywood

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday he is planning a weekend trip to Hollywood, in search of moviemakers for North Carolina, and to California's Santa Clara Valley on an industry-hunting trip.

Hunt said the main purpose of the one-week trip was to recruit electronics firms for the state, starting with companies in the so-called "Silicon Valley" development near San Francisco.

The governor, his wife and several state and private business officials will accompany him to the Santa Clara area. Hunt said the trip would cost taxpayers $15,000 to $17,000.

Hunt will leave Raleigh on Saturday for the Santa Clara Valley.

Next Thursday, Hunt said he would move to Hollywood for meetings with top officials of the major movie studios.

The governor also is scheduled to tour film production facilities and attend a screening of a new Universal Studios film.

Hunt said movie-making could bring millions of dollars into North Carolina, contended that an additional $2 million in local revenue was generated by two recent movies filmed in North Carolina — "The Private Eyes," a Don Knotts-Tim Conway film, and a CBS television movie.

Both were filmed in the western part of North Carolina.

Hunt, speaking at his weekly news conference, predicted a major comeback by the Democratic Party in the wake of the recent election losses.

Hunt also said he had talked with President Carter by telephone earlier in the week, telling Carter that his administration would get favorable attention by historians.

"I told him I thought history would treat him very kindly," Hunt said.

Astaire To Be Honored

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Film Institute says hats off to Fred Astaire, the classy crooner and dancer of "Top Hat" fame.

The institute will present its Life Achievement Award to the star of "Daddy Long Legs," "Swing Time," "The Gay Divorcee" and other film classics, institute director Jean Firstenberg announced today.

Astaire, 71, will receive the award in Los Angeles at the ninth annual Life Achievement Award dinner in late February or early March. It will be televised on CBS.

Astaire first put on his dancing shoes in vaudeville at age 8, dancing with his sister, Adele. The pair captured Broadway and London stages, and in 1931, when Adele married, Astaire went to Hollywood to begin his film career.

Previous recipients of the life achievement award include the late John Ford, James Cagney, Orson Wells, William Wyler, Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, the late Sir Alfred Hitchcock and James Stewart.

TONIGHT CAROLINA OPRY HOUSE IN CONCERT ALABAMA

By R.D. GERSH
Associated Press Writer
VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Buddy Riggs, lover of his country, is trying to uncouple the words "old-fashioned" from "patriot."

What he has planned is an entertainment-parade extravaganza here called "I Love America Day." It's really two days — Dec. 5 and 6.

While he's certainly part of the new-fashioned, flag-waving fervor, he also is at the head of it, with an ability to make people show their red-white-and-blue colors.

"I've got the mouth for it," he said. "I'm not ashamed to shout 'I love America.' Most people are too shy. So if I can get people together, they're all going to do it."

Dec. 5 is the first anniversary of Riggs' first public patriotic outburst, spurred by frustration at the Iranian militants who made hostages out of Americans. Last year, he hired a plane for an hour to fly around Tidewater bearing his "I Love America Slogan."

The pilot had some much fun and got so much response from the patriots down below he stayed up for an extra three — and free — hours.

The outpouring of letters and phone calls started him thinking about a larger and more public celebration of the patriotism he is convinced exists.

"I just wish I had more time, I had more knowledge to know to get to it," he said.

For this year's much expanded version, Riggs has had enough time and know-how to get the mayors of all seven Tidewater cities and the governor to agree on something and proclaim Dec. 5 "I Love America Day."

Although he got a note from presidential press secretary Jody Powell complimenting him last year, he has not convinced Congress to make the proclamation nationwide — yet.

"I set my sights for the moon, but I'll be satisfied with a slice," Riggs said.

He hasn't been able to draw the big-name stars he was after for his evening of entertainment at Virginia Beach's plush new arts and conference center.

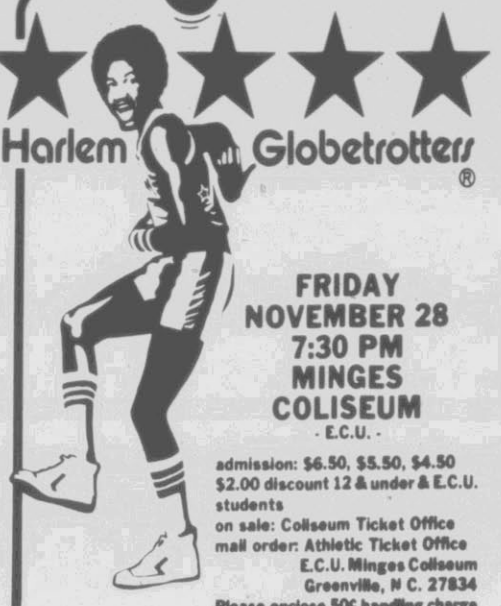

But he's just as satisfied with lesser lights, including the Navy's top band and, if they can find a place to land during the Dec. 6 parade, the Navy's star performing parachute team.

"If I had Frank Sinatra or Bob Hope there, the people would be coming to see them," Riggs said. "I want them to come to show their emotions."

But as a good American patriot should be, Riggs is optimistic. "Everything's going to work out."

German Beauty Takes 'Miss World' Crown

LONDON (AP) — Gabriella Brum, 18, of West Germany began her reign as Miss World today by fending off questions from reporters about her 52-year-old boyfriend, a film cameraman in Los Angeles, who she said was "not too pleased" about her victory.

Britain's domestic news agency, the Press Association, quoted Miss Brum as saying after her win Thursday night that cameraman Benno Bellenbaum was the man she had been "living with for the last six months" in California, where she has been working as a model. Her mother lives in West Berlin.

During the traditional morning-after champagne breakfast with the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Ronald Gardner-Thorpe, Miss Brum said she called Bellenbaum to tell him of her victory, adding, "I think he did not expect it, just like I did not expect it."

Miss Brum, blonde, blue-eyed and tallest in the contest at 5 feet 11 inches, won over 66 other contestants. Promoters said she was the first Miss World chosen on the basis of characteristics other than beauty.

Reacting to criticism that the 30-year-old contest was nothing but a "cattle market," the organizers this year said the contestants would be judged on personality and intelligence as well as looks, and the usual bust-waist-hips measurements were not given to the judges or the press.

But Miss Brum told reporters she thought she won "more because of my beauty."

Miss Guam, Kimberly Santos, 19, a travel consultant representing the U.S.-owned South Pacific island, was second, and 17-year-old Miss France, student Patricia Barzyk, was third.

Miss Israel, Anat Zimerman, finished fourth; Miss Britain, Kim Ashfield, was fifth; Miss United States, 17-year-old receptionist Brooke Alexander from Kailua, Hawaii, was sixth among the seven finalists, and New Zealander Vicki Lee Hemi was seventh. Just before the start of the contest, a group of feminist students confronted late arrivals outside the Royal Albert Hall.

"We are not trying to get at the contestants," one said. "We feel the men are using

Two Groups For Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing Saturday from 3 to 3:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7 this week, features two world wide traveling performing groups.

The first group, "New World Singers," is a gospel quartet under the direction of Charles Whisnand. The group will sing four songs.

The second group, "Covenant Players," is directed by Australian Ian Banks. "Covenant Players" specialize in vivid dramatic skits and work out from the Hollywood, California area across the U.S., Canada, and also tour in Australia and New Zealand.

them and the whole contest is sexist."

Crowned by outgoing queen Gina Swainson of Bermuda, the new Miss World got a cash prize of $12,050 and a $36,150 contract for 12 months of traveling commercial and promotion work.

A capacity audience of 6,000 was in the hall, and the worldwide television audience was estimated at 400 million.

There were no contestants from Soviet Bloc countries, but that may change next year.

Scott Luce Radio Guest

Scott Luce will be guest Sunday at 1:06 p.m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCT radio.

He will talk about his work as geriatric specialist at Pitt Co. Mental Health Center, as well as the activities of the Epilepsy Association in Pitt County.

November is Epilepsy Month, nationally, statewide and locally, according to Luce, who is president of the local Epilepsy Association.

He will discuss plans for a workshop to be held Tuesday, Nov. 25, for teachers and counselors. Designed to make school personnel more knowledgeable about epilepsy, it will be held at the Mental Health Center and will feature Luce and other speakers. Packets of information will be presented to representatives of each school for use in the school. These packets are being purchased by the local Epilepsy Association and the Mental Health Association in Pitt County.

Introducing the Born Again Rabbit.

In 1981, you'll be seeing a different kind of Rabbit. Outside there's a new grille. Inside there's a plusher interior. And under the hood there's a bigger engine, even though the Rabbit uses less gas. EPA estimated, 42 mpg highway estimate. (Use "estimated mpg" for comparison. Mpg varies with speed, trip length, weather. Actual highway mpg will probably be less.) But as much as the 1981 Rabbit has changed, there's one thing that's still the same. Its first name is still Volkswagen.

Defense Secretary Urges Major Budgetary Change

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown has urged the Senate to make major changes quickly in a House-passed military money bill to avoid a "serious and debilitating impact" on the Pentagon's ability to carry out its mission. In a 20-page letter to the Senate Armed Services defense appropriations subcommittee, Brown urged more than two dozen changes in the bill, which was passed by the House in September. The effect would be a $1 billion increase, to $158.2 billion, for fiscal year 1981, which started Oct. 1 and overlaps the Carter and Reagan administrations. Brown said final congressional action on the defense bill is imperative in the next four or five weeks because "passing this chore to the new Congress and administration would be unfair and extremely time-consuming."

The outgoing defense secretary asked the Senate to take back about $2.1 billion in items it added to the Carter administration's program, including about $1 billion in additional military warplanes such as the F-14, F-15 and F-18 fighters. At the same time, Brown sought restoration of about $3.1 billion in programs cut by the House, including about $1.6 billion for research and development. Any additional delay in wrapping up action on the bill in the waning weeks of the Carter administration and Congress "will introduce a ... serious instability and uncertainty" in the Pentagon's operations, Brown said, adding that this "will have far-reaching effects on its field commanders, program managers, contractors and subcontractors." Brown's letter, sent to Capitol Hill four days after President Carter's defeat by Republican Ronald Reagan, was made public by defense officials while Brown was in Brussels attending a NATO meeting.

Brown said he was particularly disturbed by the deep cuts in research spending, including a $120 million reduction in the MX mobile missile program, which he said would force a slippage in the schedule for flight testing. He told Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., the subcommittee chairman, that the overall research reductions are "inconsistent with the need for the U.S. to maintain a general technological advantage over the Soviet Union as a counter to Warsaw Pact numerical advantages." Brown also objected to House action increasing from four to six the number of new frigates to be funded in fiscal 1981, saying this "is not a prudent use of limited funds." On the other hand, he said, "I most strongly oppose" a $207 million reduction in the Pentagon's request for a new type of cargo ship which would be "prepositioned" in remote areas, loaded with military equipment for Army or Marine forces deployed in an emergency such as a Persian Gulf war. Brown also balked at another House cut in a new air transport program which also is designed to enhance American ability to project ground combat power over long distances. Noting that the House had reduced a $35 million research proposal for the new CX transport plane by $15 million, Brown said that this would "slow full-scale development, introduce inefficiencies ... and increase costs."

Farms Lost To Growing Cities

By PAUL RAEBURN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Farmland in nine San Francisco Bay area counties, where food production equals the agricultural output of 13 states, could disappear in 40 years due to urban sprawl, a study says. The report, released Thursday by the non-profit People for Open Space, said the 2 million acres of farmland contributes $2 billion to the Bay area's economy each year. But a third of the area's farm acreage has disappeared in the last three decades and it is decreasing at a rate of 19,000 acres a year, according to the report, which the group says is one of the first such studies at a metropolitan area. A recent federal study said the United States is losing 3 million acres of agricultural land annually, according to the report. The land now under cultivation is also producing less as it is drained of nutrients, officials say. Protection of the farmland does not mean that the Bay area's critical housing needs cannot be met, according to Allan Jacobs, president of People for Open Space and head of the city planning department at the University of California at Berkeley. Jacobs said the Bay area has ample land for housing without developing farmland. The two-year $170,000 study of Bay area agriculture, which produced 18 technical reports and an 80-page summary, concludes that at least three-fourths of the farmland is being lost to urban sprawl. Regional farms and ranches now produce $750 million worth of food a year, including 60 percent of the area's milk supply, and employ 60,000 people, according to the study. The output includes more than 100 different agricultural products. People for Open Space called in its report for the creation of a special commission to develop a plan for the protection of local farmland and to propose it to voters in the nine Bay area counties.
