Reagan Flying Home To Begin Choosing Cabinet

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan, his debut among the nation's power brokers over, is flying home to California to begin choosing a Cabinet.

Reagan is expected to spend the weekend reviewing a list of Cabinet finalists prepared by a group of old friends and trusted advisers.

A source close to the transition said Reagan will focus first on the top Cabinet posts — State, Defense, Treasury and Justice — along with the Cabinet-level jobs of running the CIA and the Office of Management and Budget.

Even as the weekend approached, the Cabinet competition was still developing.

A source said California Supreme Court Justice William P. Clark, a Reagan appointee who served as the former Republican governor's first chief of staff, now is in the running for attorney general. Until Thursday, that slot was thought likely to go to William French Smith, Reagan's personal lawyer, who was said by other sources still to be the leading candidate.

Reagan was to talk with former President Gerald R. Ford and meet with his transition team before departing today.

He capped his five-day stay here with a White House conference Thursday with President Carter, their first meeting since the election.

"We're very glad to have you here," Carter told his successor as he and his wife, Rosalynn, greeted Reagan and his wife, Nancy, at the South Portico of the White House. "I think you'll like the place."

Carter said the 90-minute session dealt with some of the problems Reagan will inherit when he takes office. Until then, the two men agreed that Carter is in charge "in the fullest sense of the word," the outgoing president said.

Carter added that he expected to see Reagan often in the future.

Reagan said the man he defeated in a landslide on Nov. 4 "has been most gracious and most cooperative ... and has certainly made it a much easier time than it would otherwise have been."

Reagan, who will be inaugurated Jan. 20, met later with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, breaking tradition by scheduling the get-acquainted session before formally taking office. Reagan declined to meet with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin when Begin was in the United States last week.

Schmidt, who had visited Carter earlier, declined substantive comment on what he and Reagan discussed during their 50-minute meeting.

"The governor with his own hands opened my tobacco box," the pipe-smoking German leader said.

An official joint communiqué issued after the Schmidt-Carter conference said the two men discussed a wide range of political, security and economic issues and agreed to continue close consultation.

Schmidt has often been critical of Carter administration policy, especially regarding military security. Just this past weekend he said, "There is a new decisiveness in the American nation, and that certainly will make itself felt in the new Senate, the new House and obviously in the new White House and President Reagan."

While the meeting between Carter and Reagan was traditional, some of the president-elect's other appointments earlier this week were not.

He visited Capitol Hill — Republican senators as well as Democratic House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. Reagan received Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., visited the Teamsters union and the Supreme Court. He hosted a dinner Tuesday night for Washington's elite and privately Thursday night with columnist George Will.

Reagan also received his second national security briefing Thursday from CIA Director Stansfield Turner and traveled to a government office building to meet with a group of early congressional supporters.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, remained a prime contender for defense secretary, sources said. But one source said that choice "was not as solid as some of the others," while another source said Tower "was in the pack" of candidates.

Reagan met with Tower on Wednesday at the president-elect's quarters near the White House, but Tower refused comment on their talk.

Other names mentioned for the Pentagon job included Haig, former Treasury Secretary John Connally and Texas Gov. William Clements.

Another battle was shaping up over agriculture secretary.

New Pain-Killing Drug Reportedly Lacks Any Harmful Side Effects

By SANDRA BALMER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Clinical tests of a new pain-killing drug show it relieves acute pain as effectively as opium-based drugs but apparently without unusual side effects or physical addiction, doctors say.

The drug, zomepirac sodium, received final approval Oct. 28 from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Such approval means that the FDA considers the drug to be safe and effective, said FDA spokesman Edward Nida.

"There's good reason to be excited about the drug," Dr. William H. Forrest of the Stanford University Medical School said of zomepirac sodium, discussed in the Nov. 21 edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Forrest said it appears the drug "has the unique properties of rivaling morphine, apparently without the harmful side effects."

Doctors think the drug could be a powerful non-narcotic replacement for morphine for use by patients suffering acute pain from arthritis, chronic diseases or painful surgery.

More than 100 post-operative patients at Stanford University Hospital were given doses of zomepirac or morphine for their pain, without out being told which compound they were getting. All rated doses of zomepirac at least as effective as morphine. No significant side effects were reported in either drug, Forrest said.

Zomepirac is classified in a group of drugs called prostaglandin synthetase inhibitors. They relieve pain by blocking production of hormone-like proteins called prostaglandins which are thought to give rise to pain at the site of inflammation on the body.

Since researchers discovered the existence of prostaglandins a few years ago, they have synthesized number of drugs which inhibit an enzyme necessary for the body's manufacture of the pain-producing proteins. Common aspirin, which long puzzled scientists as to its method of easing pain, has been found to be such an inhibitor.

The prostaglandin-inhibiting drugs are especially helpful in easing severe pain because they are not related in chemical structure to morphine and other opium-based drugs.

"Pain can be blocked peripherally, at the site of the inflammation, centrally, at the brain or spinal cord, or along pathways to the brain," said Forrest, an anesthesiologist.

Zomepirac and drugs in its class seem to work peripherally — at the site of the pain — compared to narcotics, which attach themselves to chemical receptor sites in the brain or spinal cord and block the sensation of pain, he said.

The problem with morphine and other narcotics is that the body creates a tolerance to the compound and eventually develops an addiction.

Forrest said "we wouldn't expect to get that type of tolerance" exhibited by opiates because of the difference in chemical makeup.

Changing To Propane Gas

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Yellow Cab Co. announced plans Thursday to convert its 65-car fleet to propane fuel.

A company spokesman said 20 vehicles already have been changed over from gasoline to propane gas at a cost of about $700 per vehicle.

Luncheon Ends Tobacco Festival

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The future of the tobacco industry was the major topic of Ron Hendrickson of the United States Department of Agriculture and Congressman Walter Jones, speakers at the Commissioners' Luncheon held Thursday at the Ramada Inn. The luncheon marked the end of the Third Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

"The political climate in North Carolina demands backing of the support program," said Hendrickson, deputy assistant secretary of marketing and transportation, USDA. "Tobacco is a program that was, is, and will continue to be the product of a segment of government that believes regulation is necessary. There has been a sense of community in the tobacco business from all areas, growers, warehousemen, buyers, etc. What we need to do to protect our price support system is to take a look at where this community stands today," he added. "We must ask ourselves where the cracks are."

Hendrickson commented that future generations must be educated on the politics of defending the tobacco program. "You as taxpayers must make up your mind where to draw the line," he said. "Farmers have made up a great deal of what this country stands for. This, as well as the tobacco program, is worth preserving."

The deputy secretary also said he expected an announcement from President Carter on the scrap tobacco problem sometime in the next seven days.

As to the future of the tobacco program under the new Reagan administration, Hendrickson commented, "Watch what happens to the peanut program, which resembles the tobacco program and you will get an idea about what will happen to the tobacco program. If quotas are reduced or done away with, then watch out."

Congressman Jones called tobacco "a way of life," and added that the average farmer is better off with tobacco than any other crop. "One thing I've learned in my years of experience," he said, "No tobacco season is the same as the last one. Each year brings different problems."

Congressman Jones said he was not satisfied with the importing situation at present and hoped to see a resolution of the scrap tobacco problem soon.

"As far as exports, tobacco has more than justified its existence through the balance of trade," said Jones. "In 1979-80 we exported 617,000 pounds of tobacco, amounting to $1.3 billion."

Awards were also made at the banquet to the Farmer of the Year and the Young Farmer of the Year. Receiving the Farmer of the Year Award was Kenneth W. Jones of Pink Hill and receiving the Young Farmer of the Year Award was Chap Tucker from near Farmville. Tucker owns and operates Tucker Farms.

Most Perfect Bundle Awards were made to Lewis Gregory of Java, Va. in the leaf category; David Gregory, also of Java, Va. in the cutter category; and to Jimmy Miller of Raleigh in the lug category. Miller is a two-time winner of the award.

Plaques were also presented to the winners in the Tobacco Decorating Contest, sponsored by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. First place winners were D.G.

Nichols, NCNB (Greenville Boulevard Branch), and Belk Tyler.

TWO YEARS ADDED

I had a one-year subscription to Motor Trend magazine. Then in August, 1979, I received a notice stating that I could resubscribe for two years at a special price. Even though my first year had not expired, I decided to take advantage of this offer. I sent my check on Sept. 1. But at the end of my first year, I received a notice to renew or my subscription would expire. I wrote a letter to the company and explained and received a nice apologetic letter. Yet my subscription has stopped. Another letter still didn't straighten it out. J. V.

Hotline called the company on your behalf. The customer service representative promised to check and called back a couple of days later. First, she said that a year had been added. We then explained once again that you'd renewed for two years. So now, she says, your subscription will run till Nov., 1982, and you say you're pleased.

Dedicate New Hospital Unit To Howard Gradis

A new educational unit in the surgical suite of Pitt County Memorial Hospital was dedicated to the memory of Greenville physician Howard H. Gradis Wednesday afternoon.

Gradis, a member of the Pitt Memorial medical staff for 25 years, served as chief of staff of the hospital from 1968-70 and was director of emergency room services for three years prior to his death in 1979.

The educational unit contains a library and audiovisual equipment that is used to support surgical education and staff development. The room also has a special closed-circuit monitor that permits viewers to watch surgical procedures without hazard of contamination to the patient or interference with the surgical team.

A resolution adopted by the hospital board of trustees recognized Gradis' services and devotion to the hospital, saying that his approach to the practice of surgery "characterized the full and true meaning of his creed and fulfilled a need to which he gave of his time and energy unselfishly."

Gradis' widow, Lillian, and sons, Bill and Barty, attended the ceremony.

Football Game Route Outlined

The Raleigh Police Department is urging fans going to the East Carolina University — North Carolina State University football game tomorrow to avoid traffic in downtown Raleigh, by using a suggested route to Carter-Finley Stadium.

According to the Raleigh Police Department, the downtown area and most of Hillsborough Street will be congested because of the city's annual Christmas Parade.

Fans coming from Eastern North Carolina are encouraged to come off U.S. 64 at the Raleigh Beltline and follow the Beltline around the city to I-40 and Blue Ridge Road to the stadium.

The Highway Patrol will be on hand to direct traffic from the I-40 exit onto Blue Ridge Road and into the stadium parking areas.

Kickoff time for the ECU N.C. State game is 1 p.m.

GMC Will Recall Light Trucks

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will recall 2,600 light trucks for possible replacement of optional rear disk brakes, the automaker says.

The trucks are 1980 "P" models with Chevrolet and GMC nameplates, GM said Thursday. The automaker said the rear brake hoses could wear through by rubbing against the axle housing, causing fluid to leak out and the rear brakes to stop working.

Front brakes would still work and the dashboard warning light would come on, GM said.

Owners will be asked to bring their trucks to dealers for inspection and free replacement if necessary.

GM said it knew of no accidents resulting from the problem.

Shrewsbury, driver of the third bus in the line, was admitted to University of Massachusetts Hospital with multiple injuries, said police. The hospital said she was in stable condition.

Judith Rivera, 12, the only student admitted, was in stable condition in the same hospital.

All other injured were treated and released from the University of Massachusetts, Hahnemann and Memorial hospitals.

Worcester Mayor Jordan Levy ordered an investigation.

No charges were filed.

No Pay Decision Made In N.C. Budget Session

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Advisory Budget Commission met Thursday without making a final decision on pay or fringe benefits for teachers and government employees, but an ABC spokesman said a proposed budget will include some type of improved compensation.

Commission Chairman Eddie Knox of Charlotte, in a statement after the meeting, said the proposed budget would include money "for a pay raise or offsetting benefits."

Spokesmen for the Hunt administration had indicated the commission was considering improvements in fringe benefits rather than a direct pay raise next year.

State Budget Officer John A. Williams said the panel will not make a final decision on its salary or budget recommendations until next week. "Nothing's been decided one way or the other, on anything," he said.

The budget commission serves as an adviser to the governor, who will present his recommendations for the 1981-1983 state budget to the General Assembly early in January. The budget recommendation is subject to revision, however, before the Legislature acts on the budget in May or June.

The commission has scheduled another meeting Tuesday.

As the commission met Thursday, about 25 members of Carolina Action, a public interest group seeking tax breaks for the poor and the elderly, demonstrated outside the building. Several demonstrators carried signs calling for increased taxation of big corporations and the oil industry.

"We originally tried to meet with the Advisory Budget Commission and were unsuccessful," said Tom Lominac, a Shaw University math professor and member of Carolina Action. "We were hoping to make a short presentation to them."

Lominac said the group was seeking passage of a "circuit breaker," which would use a formula based on family income to set limits on property taxes levied on family homes. In practice, the plan would provide refunds to families for the amount of property taxes owed to local governments above the limit determined by their income.

The group says its proposal would affect families earning $25,000 or less a year. Lominac said the plan would cost the state an estimated $60 million a year.

In addition, the group said the state should increase its tax audits of corporations and use different accounting methods to increase the taxes on oil companies and large corporations.

Dear Abby

Office 'Leak' Needs Fixing

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I live in a small town. There is this young girl who works in a doctor's office as an appointment girl, and whenever someone comes in to see the doctor, 30 minutes don't go by before everyone in town knows who came in and what the trouble was. I know for a fact that as soon as the patient leaves, the appointment girl calls her mother and tells her that Mrs. So-and-So came in and what was wrong with her. Then the mother spreads it all over town.

It happened to me. What should be done about it?
NEW MEXICO

DEAR NEW MEXICO: Tell the doctor that he has a leak in his office that can't be fixed by a new washer; he needs a new appointment secretary.

DEAR ABBY: I really love my husband, but he has put on so much weight since our marriage nine years ago he isn't the same man.

Abby, he's 5-9 and weighs at least 250 pounds. He has a history of heart disease and knows he shouldn't weigh this much, but he refuses to do anything about it. He won't go on a diet and he eats constantly.

We have three young children, and I don't want to be left a widow to raise them alone.

I love this man, but I can't tell him what I am going to tell you. He has become physically repulsive to me. I just hate the thought of going to bed with him. Believe me, Abby, it's the hardest work I have to do.

Please print this letter for me and my children.
TURNED OFF

DEAR TURNED OFF: Here's your letter, but it's not only for you and your children. It's for anyone who knows he (or she) should lose weight but keeps putting it off "until Monday" or "after the holidays" or whenever. I'm not addressing this to people who are 10 or 15 pounds overweight, but to those whose excess pounds are sufficiently excessive as to be a problem to them or to those who love them.

DEAR ABBY: I'm not surprised at the ignorance of those who still think of Hawaii as a foreign country. Obviously they aren't aware that in 1959 Hawaii became the 50th state of the union.

I'll bet there are even more people who don't know that Puerto Ricans are American citizens, and have been since 1918!

Other Pitt communities had good growth. Farmville's 1980 population of 4,709 is up 6.4 percent, Ayden at 4,272 is up 23.9 percent, Grifton at 2,203 is up 18.4 percent, Winterville at 2,061 is up 43.4 percent, Bethel at 1,822 is up 20.3 percent.

Martin County with a 1980 population of 25,734 is up 4.1 percent and Greene County is up 6.2 percent at 15,898.

The growth of Pitt County and its communities was good during the ten years. At the same time it was not the out-of-control growth which so often overloads the facilities of some municipalities.

We think good planning for growth has paid off in Pitt County.

Issue May Plague Reagan

Something the Reagan administration has to face, is the possibility that the Iranian hostage situation will soon be its problem.

There were hopes, shared by all, that the hostages would be released and no longer a matter of contention when Ronald Reagan takes office in January. The earliest possible release is, of course, desired for the individuals and families involved. But it would also put a major problem out of the way for the new administration.

Now nobody knows what Iran will do, and President Reagan may soon have to chart the course we will follow in seeking the hostages' release.

THIS AFTERNOON

Conservative Tide

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The 1981 session of the North Carolina General Assembly will see lawmakers coming to Raleigh next January in the most tight-fisted, program-cutting, bureaucratic-questioning conservative mood in a long while.

That is the overview offered in talks with legislators, some of the leadership, legislative staff, and state agency people intimate with the process.

Counting Republicans who won election will not give a true picture of what has taken place. Republicans doubled in the State Senate; but that is only 10 instead of five. In the House of Representatives, the back row has expanded from 15 Republicans to 24. So in a legislative body of 170, that number of Republicans is hardly significant.

What is significant, however, are two key things:

—There are already more conservatives in the Democratic Party than there are moderates or liberals, and many have just been waiting for the chance to "get right". The voters who rejected President Carter and U.S. Senator Bob Morgan, turned several Congressmen out to pasture, and boosted the numbers of Republicans however slightly in the Legislature and local offices at the same time sent some clear signals to all politicians.

—The leadership in both houses of the General Assembly is now consolidated in the hands of lawmakers who fall under the conservative banner. Liston Ramsey replacing Carl Stewart as House Speaker is close in political philosophy to Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. In naming committee chairmen and assigning legislators to those committees, a conservative domination is certain in 1981, while in recent years, Stewart was a moderating influence in that direction.

"This is going to be the most immediate, clearly visible, and important result of the election," says a long-time Democratic Party activist and student of the General Assembly. "Remember what was happening back in 1973 and 1974?"

What that refers to was a series of maneuvers by a handful of legislators to give the General Assembly more control of state agency programs and spending, closer review of continuing budgets for agencies, more staff for the Legislature so it could analyze and rewrite the budget, and vastly increased legislative oversight of the entire state government complex.

Some of the legislative machinery to gain those purposes was established, but either failed to work completely, or were dismantled through the political clout and persuasive abilities of Gov. Jim Hunt.

In 1981, many of the same individuals involved in the earlier activities return to power.

Cutting Drawing upon what all observers see as clear direction from voters to hold the line on spending and hiring and expanding — even to cut, if possible — the General Assembly is now ready to move fast and hard to starboard.

This means trouble for Gov. Hunt and free-spending state agencies. New taxes on gasoline will be hard fought. Increased spending for an employee dental insurance program and pay raises will be resisted. Local governments seeking an additional one-cent local sales tax will run into opposition. School people wanting a $600 million bond issue for construction will be frustrated again. Most new proposals will get intense scrutiny.

More significant, however, is the chance that the so-called Base Budget review system will be returned to full strength and begin probing hard at existing state

Astro-chimp In Asheboro

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — My old pal Ham, the chimpanzee, has left Washington, D.C., to find love and companionship in Asheboro, N.C.

He is a little long in the tooth for that sort of thing, but I wish the crusty old bachelor well. They say older men are back in style.

Ham is a great American. Anybody who can keep a sizable press corps in Florida on expenses for three weeks in the dead of winter is bound to be a great American. That was in the winter of 1961.

On Jan. 3 Ham beat astronaut Alan Shepard into space by rocketing 155 miles into the cloudy sky above Cape Canaveral atop a wobbling Redstone missile. The chimp caromed 420 miles down the Atlantic range at a speed of 5,800 miles per hour. Lifted aboard the recovery ship Donner, after pitching about in 17-foot waves for two hours while the helicopters hunted for him, Ham emerged from his capsule hissing and spitting at the press, which proved him a born celebrity, like Ted Williams or Frank Sinatra.

I still have one of Ham's banana pellets. I used to have two of them, but an AP photographer's 7-year-old son ate one before I could say, "careful, it may be radioactive." That kid is grown now, but I wonder if he still glows in the dark.

Ham was rewarded with a banana pellet every time he pulled the correct lever in his space capsule. If the wrong light went on, he got zapped with several volts of electricity through the metal plates attached to the soles of his feet. Project Mercury scientists called this electronic hotfoot psychomotor stimulus. Ham called it a pain in the metatarsal, or chimpanzee coinage to that effect.

So Ham, the overachiever born in the African Cameroons who graduated first in his class of 40 chimps at Holloman AFB, N.M., became a national hero. They changed his name from Test Subject No. 61 to Ham after Holloman Aeromedical Research Labs (others say after the deputy base commander whose first name was Hamilton) and installed him in his own concrete cage at the Washington Zoo, which of course belongs to the prestigious Smithsonian Institution.

Millions came to see him. Ham, a real ham, loved it. He even put on his spacesuit every now and then and posed for the tourists. But life grew lonely for the nation's first astronaut. The fans proved fickle. Nixon brought those two pandas back from China and the crowd went ape over them. Then Ham found himself being upstaged by an upstart white tiger named Mohini.

Next the Smithsonian got all excited over gorillas and orangutans, both endangered species, after breeding them successfully in captivity. Bachelor Ham, who wasn't producing anything, fell from favor.

Women never interested him, which is why he was sent off to the state-owned North Carolina Zoological Park in Asheboro. In their thriving chimp colony, according to a lady I talked to at the Smithsonian, he will "be resocialized, lead a normal life, meet chimpanzees of the opposite sex." The folks at the Smithsonian called it "a breeding loan, paternity leave." Instead of a concrete cage, Ham now lives in a half-acre outdoor enclosure of trees and rocks and stumps with a half dozen other chimps, four of them eligible females.

Ham loved the reception he got in North Carolina, being welcomed by Gov. James Hunt and U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, just like the great old glory days down at the Cape. But I wonder how he's making out as a lover boy. He's 23 years old now, grizzled, gray fringed and wrinkled from the picture I saw of him in the papers recently; getting on for a chimp. He was just under 4 years old when those 17 G's — gravity forces 17 times his weight — were popping his eyeballs and pushing him back onto his couch over Cape Canaveral. The once trim astronaut has gone to pot and paunch since that historic January morning. He weighs 170 pounds now, compared with only 37 when he was on that banana pellet diet.

Bedtime for Ham at this stage in the game may have the makings of a TV soap.

Somehow they don't make anthropoids like they used to back in the days when King Kong was lusting after Fay

UN Esteem Still Fading

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The public's rating of the United Nations' performance has declined to a 35-year low point. Currently, only three Americans in the 10 (31 percent) feel the U.N. is doing a "good job" in trying to solve the problems it has had to face, while 53 percent feel it is doing a "poor job."

Although the latest findings are not significantly lower than those recorded in 1975, when the Gallup Poll's last assessment of the world body was taken, they are far below the ratings in both 1967 and 1966, when about half the public said the U.N. was doing a good job.

The sharp decline since 1967 in approval of the U.N.'s performance has occurred in every population group but has been most pronounced among Republicans. In 1967, 50 percent of Republicans said the U.N. was doing a good job; by 1975, 35 percent made a similar appraisal; currently, only 24 percent give the U.N. a positive rating. By comparison, in 1967 53 percent of Democrats approved of the U.N.'s performance; the figure dropped abruptly, to 29 percent approval, in 1975 but has climbed to 36 percent in the latest appraisal.

The current survey, conducted in mid-September, also measured the attitudes of supporters of the three major presidential candidates toward the U.N. Backers of then-candidate, now president-elect Ronald Reagan were most critical of the world body. Their rating of 24 percent approval mirrored that of all Republicans. Thirty-nine percent of Jimmy Carter's supporters said the U.N. was doing a good job, not significantly different from the 36 percent of all Democrats who said the same thing. And the 32 percent of independent candidate John Anderson's backers who gave a positive rating to the U.N. is identical to the rating given by all independents.

Women have been somewhat more favorably disposed toward the U.N. than have men — at least until the 1980 survey. In 1967, for example, 52 percent of women and 47 percent of men said the U.N. was doing a good job. In 1975, the female and male approval ratings were 36 and 28 percent, respectively. In the current survey, there are no meaningful differences between the sexes; 31 percent of women and 30 percent of men approve of the way the U.N. is carrying out its responsibilities.

Older persons have consistently been less sanguine about the U.N. than have those under 50 years of age. In 1967, 45 percent of older persons had a positive impression of the U.N. The figures for 1975 and 1980 are 25 and 26 percent, respectively. In contrast, 53 percent of persons under 50 gave the U.N. a positive performance rating in 1967, 37 percent in 1975 and 34 percent in the 1980 survey.

The Gallup Poll has measured the public's attitudes towards the U.N. since its formation in 1945, using questions appropriate to the international situation at the time. At no point since then has satisfaction with the overall performance of the world organization been as low as it is today.

Following is the question that has been asked since 1956: "In general, do you feel the U.N. is doing a good job or a poor job in trying to solve the problems it has had to face?"

And here is the trend since 1956, showing a steady decline in the proportion saying the U.N. is doing a good job:

United Nations' Performance
	Good Job	Poor Job	No opinion
LATEST (Sept. 12-15)	31%	53%	16%
1975	33	51	16
1971	35	43	22
1970	44	40	16
1967	49	35	16
1956	51	37	12

The following table shows the attitudes of key demographic groups in the latest survey:

United Nations' Performance
	Good Job	Poor Job	No opinion
NATIONAL	31%	53%	16%
Republicans	24	60	16
Democrats	36	48	16
Independents	32	54	14
Test election voters for:
Reagan	24	61	15
Carter	39	44	17
Anderson	32	58	10
Men	30	58	12
Women	31	49	20
College	34	56	10
High school	30	54	16
Grade school	28	45	27
18-29 years	34	49	17
30-49 years	34	53	13
50 and older	26	57	17
East	33	54	13
Midwest	30	53	17
South	32	50	18
West	25	59	16

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,602 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Sept. 12-15.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

To the Editor:

I noticed in the News and Observer (Wednesday, Nov. 12) that "Commissioners of Northeast Back 1-Cent Sales-Tax Hike." The above headline to an article by Virginian Pilot Staff Writer Gordon Borrell was most interesting, especially since these same politicians didn't dare mention being in favor of tax increases during their pre-election campaigns.

Maybe they are just acting as surrogates for Jim Hunt who is pretty sneaky when it comes to heaping more burdens on the taxpayers of our state. These county commissioners, the governor and all other politicians would be well advised to reevaluate the recent election.

The results obviously showed the American people to be fed up with ever increasing taxes and too much government.

There is plenty of "fat" to cut from county and state government without raising either property or sales taxes. Property taxes are unfair to people who save and purchase property only to be penalized by the government for their hard work. Sales taxes are unfair to all of us who purchase food, including farmers who must take less for producing food so the tax collector can get his cut out of a shopper's grocery budget.

All taxes are a form of legalized slavery. We are a little more than indentured servants to the state or county bureaucrats who pretend to be performing necessary services. Certainly, some state and county activities are necessary; however, we should not allow politicians to take an increasing percentage of our hard-earned income to construct buildings we don't need, provide services citizens have not requested and pay more "fat cats" extravagant wages to do nothing.

I am certain that if it was put up to a statewide vote of citizens we would vote to reduce taxes rather than increase them. Elected officials had better quit misrepresenting our trust. They should stop looking for ways to raise taxes and start looking for ways to lower the cost of government.

Strength For Today

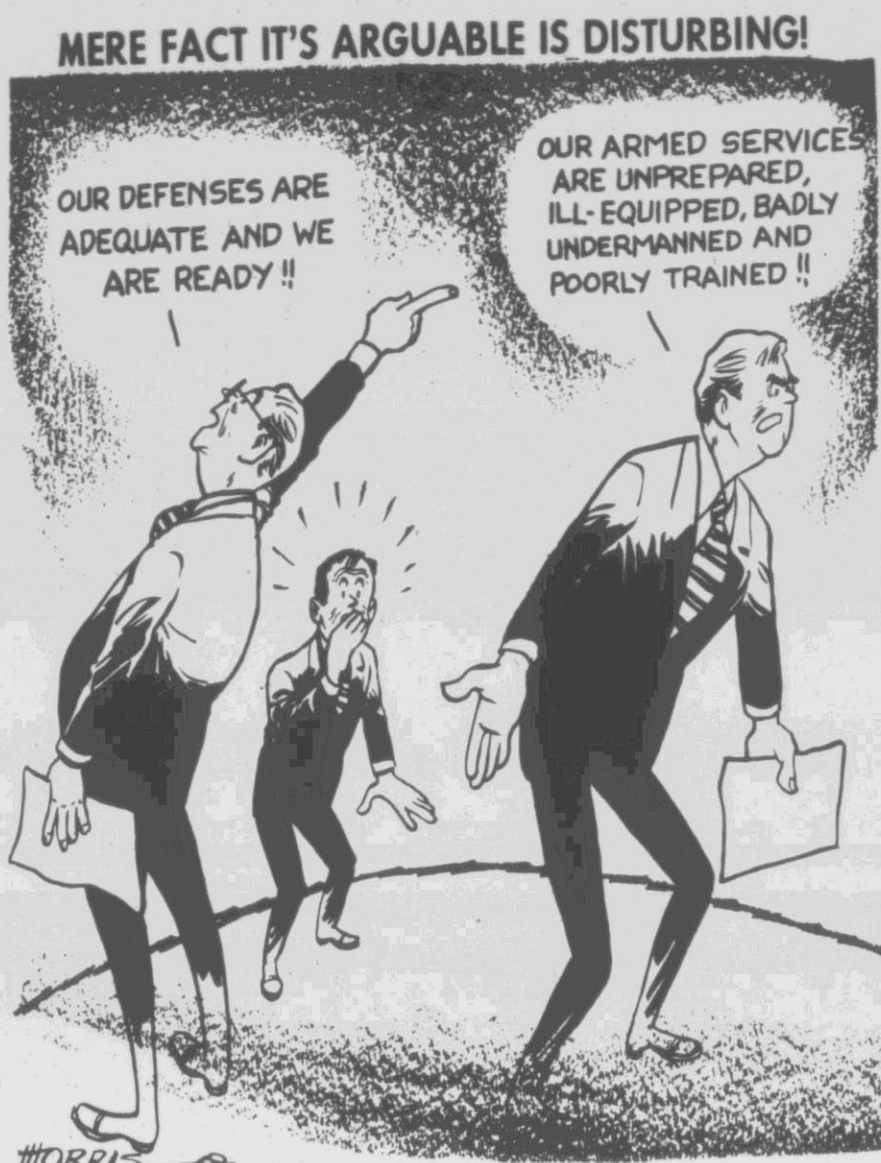

STRAIGHTENING OUR PICTURES

Dr. Samuel Johnson, the noted lexicographer and man of letters of the 18th century, was known for his eccentricities. For example, if invited to dinner or to a reception at the house of a friend, he would not converse or even sit down at table until he had straightened all the pictures on the walls.

We might smile at Dr. Johnson, yet there are thousands of people in the world today whose behavior is much like that of the old lexicographer. They do not come into our homes and start to straighten the pictures on the wall, but they do consider it their duty to differ with every opinion expressed, to interfere with other people's business, and to try to straighten out everybody on all issues.

We should let other people's pictures and opinions alone. Our duty is not to straighten people out but to love them and help them. Let them straighten their own pictures. — Elisha Douglass

MORRIS

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economic confidence of households appears to have surged in the days following Ronald Reagan's election as president, even though their immediate financial burdens weren't lifted.

One researcher, a pioneer in consumer economic studies, said it was the greatest gain he has recorded since beginning his measurements 26 years ago. That was Albert Sindlinger, of Sindlinger & Co., Media, Pa.

"More than one-half of households in the nation now expect income gains during the next six months," said Sindlinger, whose researchers have been calling 1,100 different families each week since 1954.

Included in those whose confidence has risen, said Sindlinger, are many who didn't vote for the president-elect, and many whose current financial condition is considered by them to be distressing.

"People at least temporarily shook off their present plight to resoundingly project increases in their own income, expansion of job opportunities and better business conditions," Sindlinger said.

The news many not be altogether positive, however. So high are expectations, Sindlinger suggests, that "the landslide of hope" could present the new administration with a serious problem.

"Reagan begins with expectations so high he couldn't possibly do all the public wants," said Sindlinger, who foresees an impending credit crunch, with the prime interest rate reaching as high as 28 percent.

Sindlinger's "Household Money Supply," a term he converted to when he felt the term "consumer confidence" had become so popular as to lose any specific meaning, is made up of four components.

Current income, first of the four, measures how a household perceives its current earning power. The others record household perceptions six months hence — on income, the local job market, and local business.

The current income component deteriorated, but more than half foresaw higher incomes by next April, and about 40 percent said they expected more jobs and improved business over the six months.

The results shot Sindlinger's Forecast Confidence Index up to 109 in the week ended Nov. 12 from 92.5 in the previous seven-day period, making it the biggest gain in the company's 26 years of such research.

Sindlinger is involved with many other economic projections, including automobile sales and the nation's money supply, and some of its projections in these other areas seem counter to consumer projections.

The Sindlinger Letter for Friday, Nov. 14, for example, projects "continuous increases in 18 major interest rates through July 1981, with historical peaks being shattered by next Spring."

Shatter isn't an exaggeration. Unless major, unnamed factors change, the letter projects that by mid-July the prime rate will be 28 percent, federal funds nearly 26, six-month Treasury Bills more than 24, commercial paper above 27, Treasury Bills more than 24, AAA-rated corporate bonds 14, and conventional mortgages nearly 20 percent.

Sindlinger doesn't project Ronald Reagan's personal appeal index for next July, but he strongly suggests that the high expectations of American households are at odds with his interest rate projections.

Life As It's Lived

Birthday Stuff Is Fun,
But Can Be Exhausting

By GAIL MICHAELS

November birthdays abound at our house. First comes Meg's. Meg was five years old November 7. A whole handful, she announced proudly. Her father said that she was more like two handfuls.

She rolled her eyes. "Silly Daddy. He thinks I'm ten."

Ten is nice, but five is old enough, in Meg's estimation. There are lots of things a girl is supposed to be able to do at age five. One is go to kindergarten.

On the afternoon before her birthday she told me, "Well, I said goodbye to my teacher today."

"What for?"

"I'm not going there any more. You go to public school when you're five."

"But sweetheart, you have to start at the beginning of the year. You weren't old enough at the beginning of this year so you have to wait until the beginning of next year."

"What will I do till then?" she wailed. "I can't go to preschool any more! I'm too big!"

"Your teacher needs a big girl like you. You can help her with the younger children by setting a good example. I'll bet they think you're really special because you're so old and smart."

"That's true," she mused.

There were other compensations as well. One was the birthday party at school.

She attended to every detail, from the Kool-Aid flavor to the correct brand of potato chips. "The teacher said we could have peanuts, but I think potato chips are better, don't you?" Peanuts are so dangerous for the young children, and we wouldn't want anyone to get choked, would we?"

She also decorated her own cake. It was chocolate with a yellow "Happy Birthday, Meg," and blue and green acne. "I could make this because I'm five," she told the little girl seated next to her. "But don't worry, four is almost as important."

This was not the only birthday party. That evening we celebrated with a small friend who was spending the night, and the next day this friend and another little girl accompanied Meg and me to the Stewart Theater in Raleigh to see a production of "Little Red Riding Hood".

Meg provided a critique on the ride back home. On the whole she thought it was a pretty good play. "Of course, in many stories the grandmother is ate by the wolf, but they couldn't show that in a play."

"He couldn't eat her anyway," one of her guests pointed out. "He was wearing overalls and no real wolf I ever saw wears overalls."

"You're pretty smart," Meg said approvingly, "for a four-year-old."

At the end of the party she ushered her guests to the door with a world-weary sigh. "Do I have anymore parties?"

"No," I said. "That's it for this year."

"Good. This birthday stuff is fun, but it's just too exhausting, even for a five-year-old."

During the eight years I lived in England, the London zoo was always going to astonishing lengths to find a suitable mate for its favorite attraction, a big hairy gorilla named Guy. Gal gorillas would be imported from Germany and Switzerland and wherever for Guy's pleasure, and the reporters and photographers would be invited out to witness the courtship. Guy would fire a chair at his betrothed, dump a pan of water over her head, thump his chest, bare his fangs, rattle the bars of his cage as if to break away, but they never could get him to coo into that sweet young thing's ear the primitive love song of the primates: "Gorilla My Dreams." It was bruted about in the House of Commons that Guy was gay.

And just a few weeks ago, more than a dozen women telephoned the Columbus, Ohio, zoo offering to breast feed their babies in front of the bars of the ape cage to show the female gorillas how. It seems the gorillas had forgotten how, because the zoo had previously taken new born apes away from their mothers. Now the curators were trying to return them to breast feeding to prevent a disease that took the life of a baby gorilla and landed another in the intensive care ward. Zoo Director Jack Hannah was going to show the gorillas a how-to film on breast feeding until all these women called in offering to bare their chests for science.

As the comic Lew Lehr used to say, "Monkeys is the kwaziest people."

Anyhow for Ham the astronaut, has got to beat banana pellets and electric shock tap dancing. Someone of his intelligence will be sorely missed in the nation's capital.

programs to see if they ought to be continued, let alone expanded. Probably, expansion of the State Auditor's office to provide more study of all spending by agencies will result; and the legislators will be searching for a way to get more staff to study, analyze, and seek out waste or mis-use of funds throughout state government.

The promotion is in conjunction with the United States Postal early mail delivery campaign. Santa will be delivered via mail truck.

He will be in a gift wrapped box and will appear as the children shout Merry Christmas. Santa will greet the children as the raggedy anns (santa's helpers) pass out candy canes and coloring sheets to all the children.

Santa will then be seated at the Candy Cane Forest in Central Court. His hours will be from 1 to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturdays. November 28th Santa will be on the mall from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Christmas Eve 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Unions Win Radio Time

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's independent trade unions will get an hour of time each week on the state-run radio, starting Saturday, to broadcast news of the fledgling labor movement, Polish newspapers reported today.

"The aim of the program is to accompany the changes in the union movement and also on a broader scale, the whole economic and social life of the country," the newspaper Trybuna Ludu said.

It said the producers of the show "desire the closest contact" with Solidarity, the largest of the new independent unions, as well as other new labor groups.

The paper said the first shows will feature "the coexistence of new and old unions in the work shops, worker rights and wages and cooperation."

Solidarity had been demanding access to the state-controlled mass media so it could inform Poland's 35 million people about its activities. The union has won the right to publish its own newspaper, and state television, radio and newspapers have been reporting more fully on its activities.

Polish workers won the right to unions, independent of the Communist Party labor network, during a series of strikes that spread across the nation last summer.

In the agreement ending the labor rebellion, Poland's communist government allowed the creation of the independent unions and promised them access to the media. The government has already made good on its pledge to broadcast Roman Catholic Church every Sunday in this predominantly Catholic nation.

$4.6 Million Is Paid For A Diamond

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The "Polar Star," a 41.3 carat diamond once owned by French Emperor Napoleon's brother, has been sold at auction here to an unnamed Indian buyer for $4,651,162, the highest price ever paid for a single piece of jewelry.

The cushion-shaped stone was from the estate of Lady Lydia Deterding, widow of the founder of the Royal Dutch Shell company. She died in France this year at the age of 76.

Heike O'Hanlon, a spokeswoman for Christie's, which organized Thursday's sale, said the unnamed Indian buyer probably was a dealer and was "hell-bent on getting it." Christie's experts had estimated the diamond's value at $1.5 million.

Jewelry experts believe the diamond comes from long extinct mines in India. Joseph Bonaparte, Napoleon's eldest brother who was made King of Spain, is said to have paid about $10,000 for it in 1809.

After the fall of Napoleonic rule in Europe, it was bought by Princess Tatiana Yousoupoff, a member of Czarist Russia's wealthiest families. The clan fled to the West after the Bolshevik revolution. In the early 1920s, the stone was sold to Dutch industrialist Sir Henry Deterding, who was looking for a gift for his young wife, Lydia.

Sir Henry died in St. Moritz, Switzerland, in 1939. The death of his only child, Olga, on Jan. 1, 1979 left no direct heir to the Deterding fortune, according to sources here. Distant relatives put the diamond and other jewelry up for auction.

According to documentation confirmed by the leading international auction houses, the previous top price for a single piece of jewelry was $1,352,900 for a 66-carat Sapphire ring at a Sotheby's auction at Zurich last May.

It was the second time in eight days that auction world records were broken in Geneva.

Last week, a pair of diamond earclips were sold for $6,647,059 by Sotheby's, the highest price ever paid for any work of art or jewelry at auction.

Iran claims the earclips were property of former Iranian empress Farah Diba, and Iranian lawyers have secured an order from a Geneva court attaching the proceeds of the earclips and other contested jewelry pending proof of ownership. Sotheby officials have emphatically denied the Iranian claim, and a court decision is likely to take weeks.

Big Gift From Film Producer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The cinema-television school at the University of Southern California will get a start on a new five-building complex with a $4.7 million gift from producer George Lucas.

Lucas, 36, whose films "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back" are among the highest-grossing in movie history, is a 1966 graduate of USC.

Sidney Ganis of Lucasfilm Ltd., Lucas's production company, said the producer hopes the new center will become the source of young talent for the film and television industry.

Lucas will provide the funds for the first building in the complex and part of the second, Ganis said. It is hoped that private contributors will kick in for the remaining construction, Ganis said.

Heroin Wave Spurs Fear For More Young Addicts

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
BALTIMORE (AP) — A fivefold increase in heroin-related deaths is alarming America's experts on drug abuse, stirring fears that the gains made in halving the nation's addict population from a high of 800,000 may be wiped out with a host of young new recruits.

Thousands of once-cured addicts are shooting up, these experts say, with a more-powerful variety of the narcotic extracted from poppies grown in the Himalayas.

"We are facing a major test of our whole drug abuse program," said Dr. William Pollin, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

The reported rapid increase in addiction is straining the resources of many of the nation's 3,500 treatment centers. And as smugglers breach America's drug defenses, there are fears that another generation of youngsters is being introduced to heroin.

The crisis is most evident in the eastern cities of Baltimore, Washington, D.C., Newark, N.J., New York and Boston, where long lines of desperate addicts sometimes form in the pre-dawn hours, seeking the heroin-substitute methadone to get them through the day.

"I was finding up to 30 people on my doorstep each morning, and they were fighting for the front positions," said Dr. Laura McCall of Baltimore's Addict Referral and Counseling Center. "I knew that if we didn't take care of them they'd have to hustle for a fix on the street."

In New York's Beth Israel Hospital, the drug center is treating 500 more heroin addicts than its capacity. New York estimates its addict population has risen to 213,000, with 50,000 undergoing treatment in overloaded facilities. Many others are awaiting help, a situation Gov. Hugh Carey describes as "a massive crisis."

The epidemic has also resulted in increased crime. "The heroin surge is unpredictable. But we know that increased addiction almost requires a significant degree of criminal behavior to pay for it. It brings destruction within a community," said Pollin.

That effect is apparent in west Baltimore, a black section of the Maryland city where pioneering treatment programs were launched in the 1960s.

"Eight recent murders around one of our housing projects were drug-related," said Richard Hamilton, director of the state's Drug Abuse Administration. "Two out of five people in our treatment centers have admitted committing some crime against the community."

Pollin said statistics in Boston indicate that addicts might need to commit two to three crimes daily to support an average habit costing $150. "That means 100 addicts in a year could conceivably commit 90 to 100,000 crimes," he said.

Many now lining up at East Coast treatment centers are old addicts thought cured during a major federal effort against addiction in the mid-70s. National addiction was halved to about 400,000, according to the NIDA.

"Easier availability of heroin has tempted the old addicts back into their former habit," said a New York narcotics officer, Capt. J.L. Wallace. "The youngsters becoming addicted now won't even show up statistically for a couple of years. That's how long it takes to devalue your life to the degree where the only recourse is to seek government help."

A few patients are seeking only limited help "... detoxing down to a level they can afford," said Dr. Harold Ginzburg, chief of the NIDA's clinical-behavioral branch.

But most are like a 39-year-old black woman at Ms. McCall's center who said she sought treatment in response to continuing publicity about the heroin epidemic.

"I just got tired of trying to find the stuff after 12 years of using it," she said.

An emaciated male patient at Baltimore's Project Adapt, who said he spent "90 percent of each day" looking for heroin, was similarly persuaded to come in.

Ms. McCall said sheer desperation was driving some addicts to treatment. "This morning already I've seen a once-beautiful blonde girl in her 20s who had been shooting-up in her neck vein. Her throat was horribly disfigured. And a young man had a bleeding ulcer on his forearm where he was injecting," she said.

On any given day, about 100,000 heroin addicts are being treated nationwide. Half of them are male and more than half are white, according to NIDA statistics. Two-thirds are on drug-free programs. But a third are on the once-controversial but now accepted methadone maintenance program, the first line of defense in the treatment war.

Critics argue that the heroin-substitute keeps patients addicted legally while freeing communities of their potential criminal activities. But Doris Rice, administrator of Project Adapt, disagrees.

"Our goal is to help each client recover from the social and emotional assault which led him here in the first place," she said. "That doesn't mean we keep our patients on methadone indefinitely."

The more than 300 patients in Project Adapt might be on the commercially made heroin substitute "from 22 days to infinity," said the program's director Laurie Butler. "Some people do well in two years, others take longer."

The patients receive a small dose of the cherry-flavored methadone in small cups. "A big factor is that they no longer have to fear the police," said Butler. "The drug is legal."

Methadone costs just $12 a quart bottle, and each 400 milligram serving costs a fraction of a cent. But when an addict smuggles his dose to the street, he can sell it for $25, Butler said.

Project Adapt officials demand that their patients participate in a full program that includes frequent counseling.

"We look beyond detoxifying to behavioral problems to rebuild the structure of their lives," said Rice. "We have to break the circle of people they move with. And we sometimes have to deal with needle freaks who actually enjoy just puncturing their skin."

Project Adapt and other Baltimore programs are trying to get their patients jobs, and many have started working again. "These include school teachers, a psychologist, steel workers and city employees," said Butler, whose program costs about $2,000 per patient a year.

"Eventually, we hope they can reach a totally drug-free state, and one day the nurse will say to them, 'This is your last dose.'"

The alternative to treatment is grim. While statistics are as hard to evaluate as in war, the trend in recent months is toward a rapid started at age 16, a cap of heroin was a dollar. I could panhandle for that. Today, the first shot costs $70. And to support a $200 habit you might have to steal $1,000 worth of merchandise a day."

Lost French Painting Is Finally Found

By MARIANNE MCGOWAN
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Art historians at the Cleveland Museum of Art were startled to learn that a 19th century French painting they thought lost was hanging in the library of a Catholic boys school 10 miles away.

The 1861 "Le Pardon de Kergoat" by Jules Breton depicts a pilgrimage called the Pardons in a village in the northern French province of Brittany.

Gabriel Weisberg, museum curator of art history and education, wrote about the painting in an essay for the current issue of Arts Magazine and listed its location as unknown.

"All of a sudden to find it in Cleveland is truly both heartening and amazing," Weisberg said Thursday. "It's an extremely important painting. It's a miracle that it's resurfaced."

Weisberg received a telephone call Tuesday from Brother Robert Lavelle, headmaster of the Gilmour Academy in suburban Gates Mills. Lavelle asked him whether a Breton painting in the school's library might be the lost masterpiece mentioned in the article.

"I said, 'My goodness, I'll be right out,'" said Weisberg, who identified the painting that evening.

Lavelle called Weisberg after the painting's donor, Thomas Holzheimer, notified him of the current museum exhibit which includes many works by Breton.

Lavelle said the school has not decided what it will do with the painting, but it will be restored.

increase in drug-related deaths.

"There has been a five-fold increase in such deaths in the third quarter of 1980," said Pollin. Such deaths may exceed 600 in New York this year, more than twice the number in 1978.

The use of all drugs has increased 1,000 percent since the 1960s, and until recently drug abuse experts were troubled "by a general feeling of helplessness about the whole drug situation," said Pollin. "But now there is a change of attitude," he said. "There is much more concern in communities and in government."

A part of that concern seems to be that the rapidly inflating costs of a heroin habit are leading to potentially more violent crime.

A 45-year-old addict seeking treatment at Project Adapt told the Associated Press that his habit had become more than he could afford. He had spent a lifetime of street hustling, con gaming and thievery to pay for the narcotic but now it was costing him as much as $300 "on a good day."

"Youngsters getting hooked today face a tough time," he said. "When I

$1 Million To Fight Nematode

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State University announced Thursday that the Agency for International Development has committed more than $1 million for a worldwide fight against the root-knot nematode.

The study will be centered at N.C. State.

The ultimate goal of the program is to provide small farmers with practical control methods which will enable them to increase yields and the quality of urgently needed food crops.

The N.C. State program began in 1975 and the new contract brings total USAID support to $2.9 million.

The United States team, installed as the favorite to win the Sixth World Open Team Olympiad held in Valkenburg, Netherlands, made heavy going of the early rounds and, at the halfway mark, was not certain of qualifying for the semifinal stage. By world championship standards, the overall quality of play was rather disappointing. Witness this hand from the U.S.'s first round match against Yugoslavia.

North-South for the U.S. were Paul Soloway of Seattle and Ira Rubin of Paramus, N.J. They reached an aggressive, though reasonable, slam after Soloway opened the bidding with one heart and the Yugoslav West interposed with one spade.

West led the ace of clubs, and Soloway's problem was to bring in the trump suit without losing a trick. The percentage play with nine cards in the suit missing the queen is to play for the drop — that will succeed 52% of the time. As the cards lie, that would result in a one-trick defeat.

The spill occurred while a storage tank valve was receiving routine maintenance.

Great Apes Dying Off In U.S. Zoos

ATLANTA (AP) — Because of declining birth rates, all the great apes in north American zoos may die off, according to leading zoo experts.

Infertility in males is the prime cause for the lowered birth rate, the zoo experts say.

Because great apes, particularly gorillas and orangutans, are disappearing in the wild, countries which still maintain groups of those animals are refusing to let any of them be exported to zoos.

"We are faced with the possibility that most, if not all, of the great apes that will be alive in the next century in this country will be those borne from the apes now in our zoos and research centers," said Dr. David K. Johnson of the National Institutes of Health.

"Therefore, the captive population of great apes that we now have in the United States is an important national resource which must be maintained," he said.

He and other experts are gathering in Atlanta for a three-day conference, which begins Sunday, on how to increase reproduction among captive great apes.

The conference will be hosted by the Yerkes Regional Primate Research Center of Emory University.

Among conference participants will be Dr. Dian Fossey, who will speak about her long-term field study of mountain gorillas in Africa.

"While some zoos and research centers have excellent records of propagation among gorillas, the overall picture is not bright," said Dr. Benjamin Beck, curator of primates at the Chicago Brookfield Zoo.

The conference will study various theories about the cause of male lowland gorilla infertility, said Dr. Kenneth G. Gould, chief of reproductive biology at Yerkes.

It's possible, he said, that the fertility rate of wild gorillas may be dropping too, "but it will be difficult to conduct fertility studies on gorillas in their natural habitats," Gould said.

Other theories about infertility in captive animals say it is caused by human diseases or it is a reaction to being kept in captivity.

One possible answer is artificial insemination of female gorillas. The technique produced one gorilla, born at the Memphis zoo, and three baby chimpanzees, one in Toledo, Ohio, and two at Yerkes.

Cruise Missile Fails In Flight

POINT MUGU, Calif. (AP)

— A Cruise missile crashed into the Pacific Ocean shortly after being launched from a B-52G bomber, bringing the missile's test score to three successes and three failures, the Air Force says.

The missile, released by the bomber Thursday over the Pacific Missile Test Range, fell into the ocean off Point Mugu after what was termed a "normal separation" from the mother ship, said Air Force public affairs officer Maj. Scott Duncan.

The missile had been scheduled to zoom across California to Nevada, then turn north and land in the Air Force Test and Training Range near Dugway Proving Grounds, Utah, Duncan said.

The missile is being built for the Air Force by Boeing Aerospace Co. of Seattle, Duncan said, which won a contract in competition with General Dynamics.

In that competition, a missile built by General Dynamics had six successful flights and four crashes. The Boeing missile had six successful flights, three crashes and one mission aborted, Duncan said.

Thursday's flight was the sixth in a series of 19 follow-up evaluation flights being conducted on the Cruise missile. There have been three successful flights and three flights which were either aborted or failed after launch in this series, Duncan said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward today in selling that pushed the Dow Jones industrial average off its perch at the 1,000 level.

The average, which closed above 1,000 Thursday for the first time in nearly four years, dropped back 5.20 to 994.97 by noontime today.

Losers took an 8-5 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In its powerful advance in recent weeks, the market has benefited from high hopes for the economic and tax policies of President-elect Reagan.

Until today, it had shrugged off a sharp rise in interest rates. But after the close on Thursday, Chicago's Continental Illinois bank raised its prime lending rate from 16 1/4 to 17 percent.

Many other large banks matched that increase today, while New York's Citibank increased its basic charge on blue-chip loans from 16 1/4 to 16 3/4.

Energy issues, a leading group in the post-election rally, ran into some selling today. Texaco, which traded at record highs Thursday, dropped 1 1/4 to 48; Mobil lost 3/4 to 81 1/2; Superior Oil 1 1/2 to 229, and Occidental Petroleum 1/2 to 35 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .45 to 80.45. At the American Stock

Landscaping can greatly improve the look and value of a house. Even with limited land, a home's appearance can be improved by tasteful use of shrubbery, grass, trees and flowers. A professional is not needed to landscape your property unless that is your preference. There are many magazines that provide ideas and garden centers will be happy to discuss the kinds of vegetation that do well in your area. A soil analysis can be obtained inexpensively. It will indicate the types of fertilizer needed and suggest the proper watering schedule. With some time and energy a delightful setting can be created for your home.

The successful sale of a piece of property can also be tremendously influenced by many factors other than landscaping. At REALTY WORLD-CLARK-BRANCH REALTORS, INC., 1902 S. Charles, 756-6336 we are experienced in the real estate field and are aware of "what makes a difference" when showing property. Pirates Close Year Against N. C. State

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
It's the last chance for the Pirates to gain a certain amount of respectability. East Carolina challenges N.C. State this Saturday at 1 p.m. in Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh.

For the Wolfpack, it will mean the difference in a winning and losing season. They are currently 5-5 on the year. For East Carolina, it could only improve the record to 5-6, but it could mean a lot.

"We really need to beat someone that we're not supposed to beat," Coach Ed Emory said at his Wednesday press conference. And this is the last chance for the Pirates to do just that.

It won't come easy, however. Over the past few weeks, the Wolfpack has shown steady improvement. They faulted only against Maryland when they were shut out for the first time in over ten seasons, 24-0, three weeks ago.

Just before that, the Wolfpack upset Clemson, 24-20, and the week after losing to the Terrapins, they gave Penn State a scare, 21-13. Last week, they bombed Duke, 38-21.

"State is playing its best football of the year right now," Emory pointed out. "So Big Mo (momentum) is definitely on their side."

Adding to the Pirate problems is their continuing long injury list, which saw 47 players sidelined for the Eastern Kentucky game of last week.

This week, the Pirates have made a few changes in the offensive line, moving Billy Parker from center to guard, as Mike Jordan is not expected to see action this week. Oscar Tyson was moved from tackle to guard for added depth. "We are very thin in the line right now," Emory said.

Defensively, the Pirates will go with the same personnel, although Emory said that none of the injured on defense will be back in action this week.

Another factor could be some added help from a former ECU aide, Dick Kupec, now on the Monte Kiffin staff at State. "He certainly is familiar with our personnel and what we do," Emory said. "This will be an added weapon for them."

The Pirates can't hold back anything, the coach added. "This is our last chance. We've got to do all we can to win. We'll lay it all out on the field. I guess it's our bowl game, and we've made some changes for it and will do some things differently."

N.C. State has a balanced attack led by quarterback Tol Avery and running back Wayne McLean. Avery has completed 93 of 176 passes for 1,045 yards and 6 touchdowns, with 12 interceptions. McLean is the leading rusher with 530 yards on 117 carries, while backfield teammate Eddie Jackson has picked up 447 yards on 93 lugs. Avery has rushed for 434 yards on 130 carries.

Avery's main target has been split end Mike Quick, who has amassed 632 yards and three touchdowns on 43 catches. No one else on the Wolfpack team is close in that area. Next is tight end Lin Dawson with 11 for 116 and Jackson with 10 for 96.

The leading scorer, however, is Nathan Ritter, who has 44 points, kicking 20 of 21 PATs, and 8 of 12 field goals. Avery is next with 42 points, having scored seven touchdowns.

As a team, the Wolfpack is rushing for 203.4 yards a game, while allowing 154.4. They are passing for 120.1 while giving up 183.7.

That last factor could make the game fairly wide open as both teams may take to the air.

East Carolina has rushed for 222.5 yards a game, giving up 213.9. The Bucs are passing for just 66.8 yards a game, allowing 136.1. However, this past week, against Eastern Kentucky, the Pirates went to the air late and passed for over 160 yards.

Fullback Theodore Sutton is the leading rusher with 534 yards on 124 carries, while halfback Anthony Collins has 488 on 102 trips. Mike Hawkins, the other halfback, has run for 385 yards on 73 carries.

Greg Stewart, who took over the quarterbacking duties three games back, has now passed for 392 yards, hitting 35 of 75 with two interceptions. Both interceptions came, however, during his second team activities. He's thrown for two touchdowns.

The leading receiver is Vern Davenport, who moved into the tenth career yardage spot and tied for the tenth catch spot in receiving last week. He has 14 grabs for 186 yards this year, while Hawkins had 14 for 154 yards. Collins also had been a leading target, getting 14 for 111 yards.

Collins is the leading Pirate scorer with 50 points, eight touchdowns and one two-point conversion.

One of his scores came on his 100-yard kickoff return against Florida State, one of three ECU foes bound for post-season play. Collins has averaged 24.8 yards in kickoff returns, and has a 141.9 all-purpose running mark, both good for number 12 among NCAA Division I-A players.

While FSU is bound for the Orange Bowl, Southern Mississippi will be in the Independence Bowl, with North Carolina in the Bluebonnet. Three other foes could also be bowl-bound before it is over. Southwestern Louisiana is battling for the right to be the host team in the Independence Bowl, Miami is one of the contenders for the Peach Bowl, and Eastern Kentucky is bidding for the right to return to the Division I-AA playoffs.

Should all three make it, it would mean that all of the six teams to have beaten the Pirates at this point would be involved in post-season play. Those six teams have a combined 46-11 record, not counting games played against each other.

Open Play Sunday

East Carolina University's women's basketball team will open the 1980-81 season Sunday at 3 p.m. in Minges Coliseum against Virginia Tech. These

Lady Pirates Open Against Tech; Injuries, Illness Slowed Drills

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
This past Sunday, East Carolina women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi felt good for the first time in a long time. She had all 12 of her players on the court for practice.

It was the first time this season. Injuries and illness had caused headaches during the pre-season drills. At times, the Lady Pirates had but six or seven players on the court — not even enough to hold the usual Purple-Gold game.

This Sunday, East Carolina will be opening the season against Virginia Tech, in a 3 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum.

"It felt good to have all 12 of them out there this past Sunday," Andruzzi said. "The people who are rehabilitating are taking it slow, too. They tend to want to push themselves to try and catch up, but we're making them go about half speed for a while. Everyone has a great attitude, too."

While everyone has been at practice all along, Andruzzi points out that progress can't be made sitting on the sidelines. "We're behind because of this," the coach said. "But we are going to try to be sound in the basics. But I don't know how well we'll succeed when we start trying to switch defenses or run off some specialty plays."

"Right now we're concentrating heavily on defense. I hope our offense will come along with it but we feel that we have to work on the defense most of the time because of the problems we've had. It's our priority."

Andruzzi admits that she is excited about opening the season. "If we stay healthy from here on out, take it step-by-step and don't expect miracles, I think we will be all right. We just have to progress from day to day."

Virginia Tech, which lost to the Lady Pirates, 75-58, will be a much better team this year, Andruzzi said. "They've gotten a real tough forward in Maureen Corrigan, a 5-9 transfer. Then, they have everyone else back, so Y1... ok for them to be much more experienced."

With four starters returning this year, Andruzzi should feel more comfortable, but the one player lost was the school's leading career scoring and rebounding leader, Rosie Thompson.

Returning to the center position is Marcia Girven, 6-0, who averaged 6.4 points and 7.6 rebounds last season. Donna Moody, 5-11, is her backup.

averaging 1.3 points and 1.2 rebounds last year.

"In general, center is our weakest position," Andruzzi said. "Marcia is not a big gun, and Donna is just a sophomore and still learning."

In contrast, one of the top players from last year returns at the power forward spot, Kathy Riley. The 5-9 senior averaged 17.3 points a game and 6.0 rebounds last year, and is expected to be the leader this year. Mary Denkler, a 6-0 sophomore will share playing time with her. Denkler averaged 7.4 points and 5.2 rebounds in relief as a freshman.

The wings find a number of players available, including one returning starter, 5-6 Lydia Rountree. Rountree averaged 13.0 points and 6.8 rebounds last year. Joining her in competition for the jobs will be 5-9 transfer Sam Jones, a junior

A victory over Duke Saturday will give 15th-ranked North Carolina the Atlantic Coast Conference football title all to itself.

The Tar Heels, 9-1 overall, are 5-0 in the ACC and have clinched at least a tie for the title. But Maryland takes a 4-1 conference mark into its game at Virginia Saturday, and the Tangerine Bowl-bound Terrapins would like nothing more than a co-championship.

On the surface the Tar Heels are heavy favorites over 2-8 Duke. But UNC coach Dick Crum is not taking anything for granted. He is well aware of the rivalry between the two schools and knows the last three encounters between the two in Chapel Hill's Kenan Stadium have been decided by a total of three points. The rivalry goes back a long way and records don't seem to have much bearing.

Crum does not want his team to get caught looking ahead to its Dec. 31 date with Texas in the Bluebonnet Bowl. He made that quite clear at his news conference this week. Duke can be explosive behind the passing of freshman quarterback Ben Bennett. He has completed 157 passes for 1,911 yards this season and has 17 different receivers who have caught the ball.

But the Tar Heels are not without any offensive power and their defense is one of the best in the country.

Barring the unforeseen, UNC tailback Amos Lawrence will become only the second player in NCAA history to rush for more than 1,000 yards in four consecutive seasons. Lawrence needs only 25 yards in the 1 p.m. game to accomplish that and he is averaging 97.5 yards a game. He is also tied with Clemson place kicker Obed Ariri for the scoring lead in the ACC going into the final game. Both men have 78 points.

Maryland, 7-3, wraps up its regular season Saturday at Scott Stadium in Charlottesville, Va., at 1:30 p.m. And the Terps still have a shot at the ACC title which seemed a distant goal early this season.

After winning the first three games, Maryland suddenly ran into three nationally ranked opponents and lost to all three. One was to North Carolina for its only conference loss. But since that stretch, the Terps have not lost.

On the other hand Virginia is 4-6 and has had one of those seasons. The Cavaliers beat Navy and Tennessee but have fallen down in the conference. Coach Dick Bestwick keeps saying they are not far from being a good team. The Cavs have to look to next season.

Georgia Tech has the week off and wraps up its season next Saturday at No. 1-ranked Georgia, but the rest of the ACC wraps up its season with non-conference games Saturday.

Clemson, 5-5, hosts nationally ranked South Carolina in what Clemson fans consider the biggest game of the Tigers' season every year. Heisman Trophy candidate George Rogers and the rest of the Gamecocks visit Death Valley at 1 p.m.

North Carolina State, 5-5, hopes to end the season with a winning record. To do that the Wolfpack must beat East Carolina. The 4-6 Pirates visit Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh at 1 p.m.

Wake Forest, 4-6, has had a disappointing year after it's Cinderella 8-4 and Tangerine Bowl year last season. It wraps up the season by hosting Appalachian State at 1 p.m. in Groves Stadium in Winston-Salem. Both teams have potent passing games so it should be quite an air show. Plus ASU coach Mike Working was an assistant at Wake Forest last season.

Spikers Bow After Fast Start

HIGHLAND HEIGHTS, Ky. — East Carolina's volleyball team started quickly but failed to keep it up as the Pirates dropped two matches Thursday in the opening round of the AIAW Region II Tournament held at Northern Kentucky University.

The Pirates opened play by beating Tennessee state champion Memphis State, 15-10. ECU extended MSU before bowing in the second game, 17-15. The Pirates then dropped the third game to lose the match, 15-3.

Later Thursday N.C. State, the North Carolina state champ, whipped the Pirates, 15-9, 15-2.

The Pirates, one of five at-large teams in the 10-team tournament, face UNC-Chapel Hill and Eastern Kentucky today. Tournament seeds will also be determined today.

"We played very well in the first and second games against Memphis State," ECU assistant coach Lynn Davidson said.

Chargers Nip Dolphins In Overtime

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer
MIAMI (AP) — San Diego kicker Rolf Benirschke, whose confidence hit rock bottom last weekend, said his concentration was so intense against the Miami Dolphins that he couldn't see potential disaster starting him in the face.

"Routine? No kick is routine after the week I had," Benirschke said Thursday night after booting a 28-yard field goal with 7:46 remaining in overtime to lift the Chargers to a 27-24 National Football League victory.
Benirschke, who missed on three field goals tries and had another blocked in addition to missing an extra point in San Diego's 20-7 triumph over Kansas City last Sunday, said he was so determined to make good on the game-winning field goal attempt that he didn't see the snap from center bounce before it reached holder Mike Fuller.
"I was so tuned in and so confident that Mike would give me a good hold that I didn't know the ball bounced until we got in the lockerroom," the fourth-year placekicker from California-Davis said.
Linebacker Woodrow Lowe's interception of a David

Woodley pass set up the winning kick. Lowe picked the aerial off at the Miami 40-yard line and rambed down the right sideline to the Dolphins 12.
Three running plays netted two yards and Benirschke, who had kicked a 37-yard field goal in the second quarter, came on end the season's sixth overtime game.
Woodley said his primary receivers — wide receivers Nat Moore and Jimmy Cefalo — were covered and that he spotted running back Tony Nathan open near the sideline. "He was open. I just threw the ball behind him," he said.
"I lost sight of him (Lowe) when I went outside," said Nathan. "I saw Woodley throw the ball, and didn't see him (Lowe) until the last moment. I'm not sure if I was open."
"We were in no special defense. But Lowe sure made it look like we were rolling to that side just like we had draw yt up. It was a helluva play," said Chargers Coach Don Coryell.

The victory moved the Chargers, 8-4, to within a half game of American Conference West leader Oakland, who will carry an 8-3 record to Philadelphia Sunday. The Dolphins dropped to 6-6 and fell out of a third place tie with Baltimore in the AFC East.
Delvin Williams' desperation dive for a touchdown on a fourth-and-one play from the Chargers 1-yard-line with 1:21 remaining in regulation forced the overtime period as the Dolphins rallied from a 24-17 deficit.
The Dolphins, who bounced back from costly mistakes all night long, had been stopped on downs at the San Diego 1-yard-line on their previous possession.
"For everybody to work so hard and then lose it on one play is tough on a team," Woodley said. "We kept fighting back, forced it into overtime. Then it seemed like we really had a chance and in a matter of three or four seconds it's over."

Miami Coach Don Shula called the defeat, "one of the toughest losses we've had around here for a long, long time. You have to feel bad for the players who battled out there tonight."
San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts completed 25 of 41 passes for 230 yards to hike his season total to 3,530. He had scoring tosses of 4 yards to running back Clarence Williams and 7 and 6 yards, respectively, to wide receivers Charlie Joiner and John Jefferson.
But the Dolphins' young secondary, consisting of one second-year starter and three first-year starters, refused to give up big gainers to Fouts, who increased his touchdown pass production to 26.

"Obviously Miami had a game plan to take away our deep stuff. It became a battle of discipline then," said Fouts. "We had to take short stuff, be satisfied with it and let Miami get frustrated giving up 9-and-10-yards."
Woodley, starting for the sixth straight game since veteran Bob Griese went down with a shoulder injury, hit 22 of 34 passes for 251 yards. He tossed a touchdown pass of 7 yards to Nathan to complete a drive keyed by a 61-yard pass play from Woodley to Nathan.

Terry Robiskie's 6-yard scoring run gave Miami an early 7-0 lead, but the Chargers stormed back with a 11-play, 73-yard drive capped by Fouts' scoring pass to Clarence Williams. Benirschke's 37-yard field goal made it 10-7.
The teams exchanged touchdowns — Woodley's pass to Nathan and Fouts' flip to Joiner — before Miami's Uwe von Schamann kicked a 48-yard field goal three seconds before halftime to tie the game 17-17.
San Diego running back

Chuck Muncie, who had been listed as questionable with a knee sprain, came off the bench in the second half and went on to gain 77 yards in 10 carries. His 53-yard run in the second period led to Fouts' scoring pass to Joiner.
It was the second overtime victory of the year for the Chargers, who beat Oakland 30-24 in the second game of the season. They have won three of five overtime games overall, while Miami has lost all three overtime games it has played in regular-season play.
The game was played before a crowd of 63,013 — most this season for a Dolphins home game — in the Orange Bowl.

The close of the 1980 season comes around this weekend, and with it our panel of experts puts one their next-to-last attempt at letting you know in advance of the week's football.
Rick Scoppe continues to lead the pack and last week was able to pull his one game lead out to a two-game slot. But with 27 games still left to play, there is a lot left to be decided.
We'll be picking 12 games for this week (one of which won't be played until next Friday night), then finish up on December 12 with the 15 bowl games. So a lot can still happen in the race for the championship.
Scoppe's record currently is 101-29, followed closely by this writer and Tom Baines, still deadlocked at 99-31. Our guests have moved back into fourth place with a 94-36 record, followed by Etha Allen at 93-37. Joe Jenkins continues to trail the pack with an 84-46 mark.
Last week's guest, Pitt County Superintendent of Schools Ott Alford did well, finishing 10-2 in a tough week to easily beat out his Greenville colleague Glen Cox, who had a 6-5 mark the week before.

Our guest this week is Susan Quinn Nobles, a former Reflector staff member who now handles publicity for the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.
Our final high school record for the year was 52-16, a .765 record, which is good, but could be better. We'll try and improve in 1981.
There are a few differences this week in the picks of the leaders, so there could be a further shake-up — or a wider margin for the leader — depending on how the games go.
First off, we have the East Carolina-N.C. State game in Raleigh. The Pirates could spoil State's bid for a winning season and gain a certain amount of respectability at the same time. State, of course, will be out to finish on a high note, also, so a tough battle can be expected.
The panel, however, favors the Wolfpack in the contest, going down the line with State, 6-0.
Our other consensus picks include: South Carolina over Clemson; Maryla d over Virginia; Wake Forest over Appalachian State; Furman over The Citadel; Nebraska over Oklahoma; Penn State over Pittsburgh; North Carolina over Duke; Baylor over Texas; Houston and Texas Tech, a toss-up; Ohio State over Michigan; and Southern California vs. UCLA, a toss-up.

college all-America selection from Louisville, who twice scored over 40 points a game; 5-7 freshman Lisa Fennell, who averaged 21.3 points a game as a senior on the state 4-A championship team at Goldsboro; 5-8 Fran Hooks, who saw some duty last year and was one of the brightest prospects before coming down with mono earlier this year; and Lillian Barnes, 5-6, who also saw some action last year. All but Jones, however, are coming off injuries or illness.
At the point guard there is some concern too. Last year's starter and team MVP Laurie Sykes returns, sporting an 8.5 average and 225 assists, but she has had knee problems throughout pre-season practice and Andruzzi calls her availability a day-to-day situation. "We just never know. Just when she seems to be getting over it, it hits her again," Andruzzi said.

Hooks could provide backup here, as could Rively, along with another transfer, 5-6 sophomore Caren Truske.
"Our speed and quickness has to be the key for us this year. And our outside game has got to carry us. We have to rely on Kathy and Denk to help Marcia with the rebounding, since we don't have a lot of height."
"We do feel that we are ahead of last year, but I don't feel that we'll be able to equal last year's 21 victories," Andruzzi continued.
"We have to be realistic. With our schedule, if we can break even, we'll have done well. It's by far the toughest schedule we've ever had. If we stay even, it will be great for the girls and the growth of our program."

Andruzzi feels that the tough schedule will help in recruiting. "We can see this already with Sam and Lisa, two fine recruits. We still haven't gotten a big girl, but I feel that will come. And the schedule will be one of the reasons we get these people. We can tell people the type of schedule we'll be playing, against the best in the country, and that we'll also be playing them at home, and that will help us a lot."
Among the upcoming opponents are such nationally ranked teams as Old Dominion, the defending national champion, N.C. State, and Southern California, all appearing in Minges Coliseum this winter.

Following Sunday's opener against Virginia Tech, the Lady Pirates travel to New York City to face Queens College and Wagner College on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 28-29. They return home against Old Dominion on December 3.

Sugar Ray After Shave

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The bearded fighter sat there wearing a blue knit longshoreman's cap that is a Roberto Duran trademark. But it was Sugar Ray Leonard.
Leonard showed up at his workout wearing a beard and the cap, and after the training session, he donned the disguise again, grabbed a microphone and shouted: "Me no like Duran. I keel him. Be there."
At a news conference, Leonard, still wearing the beard and cap, was told that Duran had said he considers the flashy-boxing Leonard a clown.
"Do I look like I'm clowning," said Leonard, laughing.

Davis Wakes Up, Sparks Sun Victory

By The Associated Press
The Los Angeles Lakers would like to know what they did to wake up Walter Davis in the fourth period Thursday night. If they find out, they won't do it again.

The stylish Phoenix guard might as well have been snoozing for the first three quarters, but his fourth-period, 14-point awakening sparked the Suns to a 102-99 National Basketball Association victory over the Lakers.

In other NBA action Thursday night, Milwaukee beat Portland 97-93, Houston stopped Cleveland 117-114 and Detroit tipped San Diego 97-90.

Davis, who wound up with 20 points, poured in the last four for the Suns, including a game-winning layup that put Phoenix on top 100-99 with 44 seconds to go. He also added a jumper with 13 seconds left.

The Lakers, 15-6, failed to cash in on a desperation three-point try by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar at the end and fell 2½ games behind the Suns in the NBA Pacific Division.

"We never cracked and we never lost our composure," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "We were down by seven with four minutes to go and came back. I think that's a sign of a good ballclub."

"Dennis (Johnson) made a big steal and then Walter had the big jump shot at the (24-second) buzzer, which was needless to say, critical."

The Suns, 17-3, trailed most of the way until Johnson stole the ball with 1:04 to go and went from a breakaway layup to tie the game at 98-98. That set up Davis' heroics.

"I thought we played as hard and as well as we could," noted Lakers Coach Paul Westhead. "We just ran into some misfortune there at the end. I don't think we stopped, we just missed a couple of shots that went in and out."

Len "Truck" Robinson added 19 points for the Suns, while Abdul-Jabbar and Jamaal Wilkes shared high-scoring honors with 29 points and Norm Nixon added 20 for the Lakers.

Bucks 97, Trail Blazers 93
Bob Lanier's field goal and two free throws the last two minutes lifted the Bucks past the Trail Blazers for their 10th straight road victory and 11th in 12 games away from home.

Milwaukee's big center was held to eight points in the first half and scored none in the third period as Portland took the lead. But Lanier was the man of the hour in the stretch as the Bucks made their season record 17-5.

Six players scored in double figures for Milwaukee, led by Mickey Johnson with 22 points and Marcus Johnson with 18. Kermit Washington led the Blazers with 17 points and nine rebounds, and Mychal Thompson had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Rockets 117, Cavaliers 114
Moses Malone scored 31 points and Calvin Murphy came off the bench to add 26 in the Rockets' come-from-behind triumph.

Cleveland led by 18 points several times in the second quarter and held a 66-54 halftime advantage with four Cavaliers in double figures before the half. But Murphy pumped in 14 third-quarter points to help forge an 85-all tie after three periods.

Houston built a six-point lead, but Randy Smith's three-pointer cut the lead to 115-114 with 14 seconds left. Robert Reid then made two of three foul shots for the Rockets with 13 seconds remaining. The game ended after Smith missed on one three-point attempt and Mike Mitchell, who led Cleveland with 25 points, misfired on two tries.

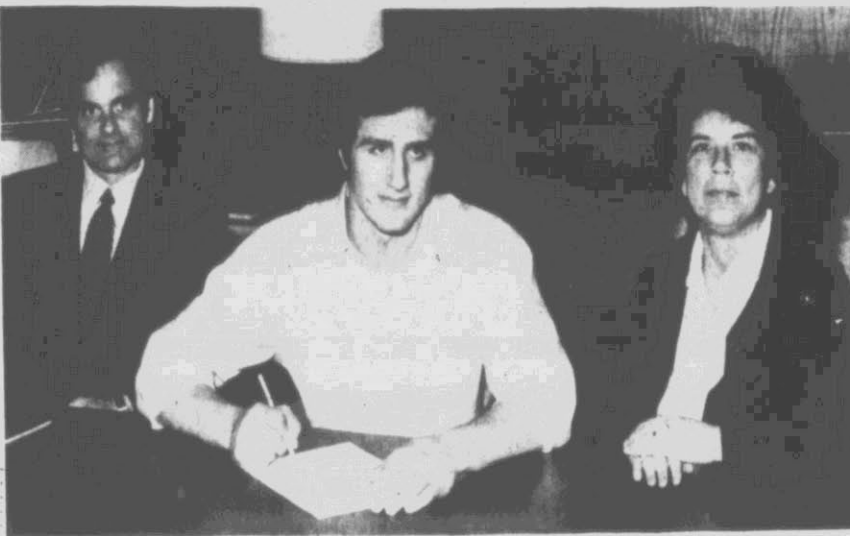

Mitchell led Cleveland scoring with 25 points and Smith added 21.

Pistons 97, Clippers 90
Keith Herron's 21 points and 19 apiece by Phil Hubbard and Terry Tyler helped the Pistons win this battle of NBA also-rans.

Detroit guard Larry Drew's layup with one second left in the first quarter gave the Pistons a lead, 22-21, they never relinquished.

The Pistons raised their season record to 5-16, while San Diego — now loser of six straight — fell to 6-14.

San Diego rookie Michael Brooks and Freeman Williams each hit 23 points, while Kent Benson chipped in 15 points for the Pistons.

Martin Gets New Pact, Will Be Gen. Manager

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — "I have nothing against general managers," Billy Martin said.

But he obviously feels more comfortable now that he's handling the job himself under a new five-year contract with the Oakland A's, as announced Thursday by Roy Eisenhardt, president of the American League team.

"When I was at Texas, you might recall, I tried to get them to send (pitcher) David Clyde out to the minors, and they fired me a month later," Martin said at the news conference at which the makeup of the A's front office was revealed.

There will be no general manager working over or with Martin, who was named AL Manager of the Year by The Associated Press Thursday. Eisenhardt will handle player signings and Martin, now director of player development as well as manager, will make all other decisions involving players in the organization.

"Billy will be responsible for the destiny of the team on the field," Eisenhardt said.

"This is something I've wanted to do for a long time. I think it's needed," Martin said in discussing his dual role.

Both Eisenhardt and Martin said the A's plan to put much more emphasis on development of players in the minor leagues.

"Our farm system, in the very near future, will be one of the best, if not the best, in baseball," Martin said.

The Walter A. Haas Jr. family of San Francisco bought the A's from Charles O. Finley, who always had the smallest front office staff in the majors. The sale became final Nov. 6 and the front office already is much more populated.

Andrew Dolich, who was general manager of the Washington Diplomats of the North American Soccer League, was named A's vice president of business operations Thursday.

Dom Valentino, one of the team's radio play-by-play announcers last season, is now director of a newly created speakers bureau. Craig Amerkhanian has been hired as director of youth programs, and Sharon Jones as executive assistant to Eisenhardt.

Carl Finley, a cousin of the former owner, is staying with the A's with the title of vice president of baseball administration. Others staying on include farm director Walter Jockey, traveling secretary Mickey Morabito and ticket director Lorraine Paulus.

Film Studio Pondering Big Failure

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — United Artists was hoping that its $36 million Thanksgiving release, "Heaven's Gate," would provide a feast of profits. Now Hollywood is wondering why the film ended up being such a turkey.

The 3½-hour Western was pulled from circulation Wednesday, the same day it opened in New York to terrible reviews. One critic suggested that director Michael Cimino could improve his work by releasing it in Russian — without subtitles. "Watching the film is like taking a forced four-hour walking tour of one's own living room," said Vincent Canby of The New York Times.

Movies have been savaged by reviewers before. But never has a major film been withdrawn and sent back to the cutting room in the face of complete rejection. The studio said the film — which also played briefly in Toronto and was to have opened in Los Angeles — was pulled at Cimino's request.

How could United Artists produce such an Edsel? "There's no control at the top of the industry anymore," explains a veteran observer. "The companies are run by men who never made movies. They're lawyers and businessmen and former agents who are awed by hot new directors and are willing to hand them blank checks."

That was what Cimino seems to have had in making "Heaven's Gate." The budget tripled to $36 million, and his final cut came to three hours and 39 minutes, which would permit only one nightly performance in theaters. Apparently no one at United Artists said no to him. After all, Cimino's previous film, "The Deer Hunter," was an Oscar winner in 1978. But while it earned a respectable $16 million in U.S. rentals, the film was no blockbuster. And it failed to sell to the networks because of excessive violence.

Cimino's experience follows the trend of other new film makers. After hits with "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," Stephen Spielberg spent $30 million on the disastrous "1941." John Landis followed the surprise hit "National Lampoon's Animal House" with "The Blues Brothers."

The "Heaven's Gate" fiasco is likely to accelerate a new attitude in the executive suites of Hollywood. That is already in evidence at Universal, which got stung on "1941" and "The Blues Brothers" — both of which are just now turning profits.

"The days of complete control by directors is over at Universal," says Gordon Armstrong, vice president of publicity, advertising and promotion. "If our money is involved, we intend to have a say in how it is spent."

What happens next to "Heaven's Gate"?

Cimino flew back from the Toronto premiere to ponder his next move. He is likely to seek outside help, perhaps from fellow directors, such as Francis Coppola or George Lucas. Cimino might also seek a "film doctor," such as Verna Fields, who is renowned for her editing of "American Graffiti" and "Jaws."

Liz Taylor To Try Stage Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor has been in plenty of movies, but never a Broadway play. And at age 47, she's decided it's time to remedy that.

Her vehicle will be "The Little Foxes," the play by Lillian Hellman about life in a Southern family. Miss Taylor will play the greedy, heartless Regina.

"I've been wanting to do a play for a long time and now that the election campaigning is over, this seemed like a perfect time," said Miss Taylor, who is married to Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

The play opens in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 27 and will move to Broadway in April after an engagement in Washington.

Rhymes For The Times

Four Verses Tell Those Dallas Curses

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
"To 'Dallas' (With Malice)"

"To 'Dallas' (with malice)
I offer these thoughts,
No longer concerned with
who fired the shots,
I'm worried instead that this excess of hype
Will render sweet 'Dallas'
a bundle of tripe.

"O, how I once watched those doings so vile
And marveled that trash
could be done in such style.
Clan Ewing, that lusty and various crew
Kept me in Friday nights,
and away from the brew.

With pizza before me and wife at my side,
I missed not one 'Dallas,' indeed, never tried.

"Miss Ellie, so sweet, loves
Jock, a bit rude,
Whose hate of D. Barnes he passed on to his brood.
The youngest of these, a plump dumpling niece Named Lucy could tensions most nimbly release.

In fact she first did so with Southfork hand Ray,
Who himself had once rolled with Miss Pam in the hay.
Miss Pam, by her blood,
was a staunch Ewing foe
The daughter of old Digger

Barnes—but wait, no;
It turned out that Bobby's
sweet wife little Pammy
Was daddy'd by some man
who'd got to her mammy.
And Bobby, her husband, a wimpering geek

Crenna Stars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Richard Crenna will star in "Body Heat" for the Ladd Co. with William Hurt and Kathleen Turner. Lawrence Kasdan will make his debut directing the contemporary murder mystery from his original screenplay.

Brought morals and ethics
to 'Dallas' each week.
Wonderfuly blind to all this was Sue Ellen Whose booze habit led to much screamin' and yellin'.
Hers was the misfortune of being the spouse
Of Texas' most loathsome,
despicable louse.
She was well-oiled but her marriage was rusty
Thus did she meet with a cowboy named Dusty.

"But mostly I watched for the commonest reason
To witness the depths reached by J.R. each season.
Last year was his best one in guile and deceit,
I watched and I watched,
first-run and repeat.
I saw his raw deals, his affairs and his schemes
'Till 'Dallas' did wantonly
enter my dreams.
I twice saw his shooting

and wondered along
With all of the others, who done our boy wrong?
And now after months of enduring this stress
So shamelessly dealt to us
by CBS,
Perhaps we from 'Dallas'
should unglue our stares,
After six months of word'ring whodunnit, who cares?

Nah. Let's watch.

Canada's Super Bowl
In the National Football League, teams are still battling for playoff spots, and the chance to play in the Super Bowl next January. Canada's version of the Super Bowl takes place this Sunday, when the Canadian Football League's two top teams compete in the Grey Cup game. Canadian football is somewhat different from American football. Canadian football fields are 30 feet longer from goal line to goal line and 35 feet wider than U.S. football fields. The offensive team has three downs, not four, to gain 10 yards. Canadian end zones are 25 yards deep, and a punt that lands behind the goal line must be run out of the end zone, or the kicking team scores a point.

DO YOU KNOW — How deep are the end zones on U.S. football fields?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — North Carolina is the country's leading tobacco producer.

Thursday, as more than 2,000 people marched in three North Carolina cities to protest the verdict.
In Greensboro, about 500 students, ministers and older local residents linked arms and marched silently to the Guilford County Courthouse, where an all-white jury delivered the verdict Monday after a 23-week-long trial.

And Georgia state legislator Julian Bond accompanied more than 500 black students in Durham as they marched from the North Carolina Central University campus to the Durham County Judicial Building and back.
Perhaps the largest gathering was on the University of North Carolina campus, where 1,000 students participated in what officials believed to be the largest campus demonstration since the Vietnam War.
The Guilford County Superior Court jury cleared the six defendants Monday of first-degree murder and felonious rioting charges stemming from a shootout Nov. 3, 1979, in Greensboro. Five Communist Workers Party demonstrators were slain when gunfire erupted at the CWP-sponsored anti-Klan rally.
Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux was to meet today in Greensboro with Dan Rinzler, chief of the criminal section of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department, and his assistant, Michael Johnson to discuss possible federal prosecution in the shootings.
All the marches Thursday were peaceful but police protection was evident, especially in Greensboro. There uniformed police were dotted along the parade route and marksmen were stationed atop buildings at the courthouse.
The Greensboro demonstrators called onlookers and merchants to join them as they marched past a shopping center where the CWP organized a funeral march for the slain communists last year. But some were hesitant to join the protest.

Two-Way Guarantee Is Involved

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —

Youngsters may now sing Christmas carols — and also songs of the Jewish Hanukkah — in public schools. But they can't voluntarily pray there together. Nor can states require posting of the Ten Commandments there. So say the courts.

The decisions, decisions, one supporting and the others blocking manifestations of religion on school premises, came this month, indicating the deep and sometimes ambiguous friction over the issue.

There were strong reactions to the decisions, pro and con, variously insisting that all vestiges of religion be removed from the public arena, and laments at the secularizing effects of doing so.

The controversy, and the legal struggle over it, centers on the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment provision that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

It's a two-way guarantee, both barring laws to set up an official government religion and also barring any law that abridges the free practice of religion.

That double-barreled assurance is open to varied interpretations, as the long record of court battling and decisions shows. One theory takes a literal view of the no-establishment clause — that it simply means no state church.

Others, increasingly in modern times, hold that the clause erects an impregnable wall between government and religion so that neither can help or recognize the other. A third theory takes a middle-road view, going beyond the literal phrasing, yet recognizing areas of inter-relationship between government and religion.

In any case, with steps to restore prayer to the schools, a commitment of the incoming national administration, growing conflict over the issue seems likely.

One of the latest decisions came Monday in New York where the U.S. Court of Appeals took the "wall of separation" position, holding that students couldn't meet at school on their own to pray.

Involved was a group called Students for Voluntary Prayer at Guilderland High School near Albany, N.Y. They sought to meet in some empty classroom before the start of classes each day to pray.

They maintained that a school board ruling that they couldn't do it violated their right to religious freedom. Other groups met, it was noted, for various extracurricular secular activities.

But the court held that allowing prayer meetings would give "an improper appearance of official support" for religion.

In another decision Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down a Kentucky law that required the posting of a copy of the Ten Commandments in every public school classroom in the state.

The court said an appended notation saying the Commandments serve as the fundamental legal code of western civilization does not limit the posting of them to a strictly secular purpose.

Earlier this month, however, the U.S. Supreme Court, by declining to review a long-standing South Dakota case, allows public schools to observe religious holidays, including Christmas.

That case had its origins in 1977 over a kindergarten class in Sioux Falls, S. D., singing such Christmas songs as "O Come All Ye Faithful" and "Silent Night."

Some objecting parents, joined by the American Civil Liberties Union and others,

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prompted by continuing violence in El Salvador, the general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference has called again for an end to U.S. military aid to the El Salvadorean government.

Bishop Thomas Kelly said a "campaign against the church" in El Salvador has in recent weeks resulted in deaths of numerous Catholic social workers and other personnel and destruction of church property.

Protests Action On South Africa

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A Minneapolis banking executive, Roger A. Severson, has resigned from the board of trustees of the American Lutheran Church, protesting its convention decision to sell off holdings in companies doing business in South Africa.

He says his conscience does not permit him to "engage in what I perceive to be a series of improper and possibly wrongful acts."

A black bishop from Southern Africa also had voiced objections to the action.

Services

The following weekend services at Holy Mission, 905 Dickinson Ave. have been scheduled:

Friday, 7:30 p.m., a healing service will be held with the Rev. Mercee from Piney Grove Church in Saratoga as the speaker; Saturday, 7:30 p.m., a prayer and praise service will be held with Evangelist Diane Harris from Greenville appearing.

Sunday, 9:45 a.m., Sunday School, 11 a.m. morning worship with the sermon by Eldress Shirley Atkinson, the choir will sing; 7:30 p.m., the speaker will be Eldress Martha Stranz from Haddock Chapel F.W.B. Church, Haddock's Cross Roads.

The public is invited to attend.

Criticism For Church Council

NEW YORK (AP) — Several Jewish groups have issued sharp criticisms of a recent declaration by the National Council of Churches that negotiations are necessary between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization to solve the Middle East crisis.

Rabbi Sol Roth, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, said the PLO is a terrorist organization taking "criminal pride in its unconscionable record of cruelty" and the NCC position about it "cannot be justified by any moral or religious criteria."

Third ECU Scholarship Fund Set Up By Dr. Richard Todd

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Richard C. Todd, professor emeritus of history, has established a third scholarship fund bearing his name for scholarships in the Department of History at East Carolina University.

Proceeds of Todd's latest gift of $5,000 to the ECU Foundation Inc., and future gifts, will be used to provide up to two scholarships for members of Lambda-Eta chapter of Phi Alpha Theta international honor society in history, according to Donald L. Lemish, Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning.

The fund will be known as the Richard Cecil Todd Phi Alpha Theta International Honor Society in History scholarships and the amount available for scholarships will be determined by the earnings accrued on the corpus of the fund, Lemish said. They are expected to range up to $500 each.

"Dr. Todd has been responsible for endowing three different scholarship funds in the history department," Lemish noted. "His generosity has been an inspiration to other faculty, alumni and students to provide gift support to the department."

"Support from Dr. Todd, Dr. Lawrence Brewster, Drs. Joseph and Lala Steelman, and others, has made the history department the most endowed department on the campus."

In 1974, Dr. Todd established the Richard Cecil Todd Scholarships for Undergraduate Scholars in History with a basic fund to be maintained at a minimum of $20,000 for one or more annual scholarships in the department.

The Richard Cecil Todd and Claudia Pennock Todd Scholarship fund, established in 1970, was set up on an annual matching basis with Tau Chapter of Phi Sigma Pi national honor fraternity, which Todd has served as advisor for many years. This fund recently exceeded $22,250.

Todd, a faculty member in the ECU Department of History for 27 years prior to retirement, founded Tau chapter of Phi Sigma Pi at East Carolina in 1950. It is the university's oldest fraternal honor organization and has consistently been recognized as the most outstanding chapter in the nation. Todd has served as national president, vice president, counselor and historian of Phi Sigma Pi and has received plaques, gold medallions and a number of outstanding service keys for his leadership.

Five years ago, a gift of $1,000 by Dr. Todd was used to furnish a lounge for use by Lambda-Eta chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, of which he is a charter member and was instrumental in establishing at ECU in 1966. The chapter room in Brewster Building was dedicated in Todd's honor. He was presented an engraved silver tray at a testimonial banquet.

Todd retired at the end of the 1976-77 school year after 27 years on the history faculty. He held the rank of full professor and was director of the department's honors program and chairman of the honors committee since 1957.

At Duke he served as graduate assistant in history and as a university fellow. He taught history at High Point College prior to coming to East Carolina in 1950.

His wife is the former Claudia Maye Pennock of Christiana, Pa.

Intercepts Said 'About Average'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. jets have intercepted 176 Soviet military aircraft off Iceland, the continental United States and Alaska this year, the Air Force reports.

Air Force officials say this is roughly the normal number of routine intercepts carried out under air defense precautionary procedures practiced for more than a quarter of a century.

Fresh attention was focused on U.S. jet intercepts of Soviet aircraft in international airspace by the release this week of Air Force photos of F-4 Phantom fighters flying near Soviet TU-95 reconnaissance bombers off Iceland.

The United States has based interceptors in Iceland since 1954 to cover some of the key over-water approaches to the United States by Soviet aircraft flying from bases in northern Russia.

Under general air defense procedures, the Air Force is concerned about any Soviet military aircraft that fly into what is called the Air Defense Identification Zone, which extends seaward about 200 miles.

Any Soviet planes sighted in that zone, and spotted by radar, are routinely inspected by interceptors scrambled from bases on the U.S. coastline or in Iceland.

Ground rules limit U.S. pilots from flying no closer than 500 feet from the Soviet planes.

The U.S. planes observe the course and actions of the Soviet aircraft but do not interfere with their flights.

In the past 10 years, Russian reconnaissance bombers have periodically flown between the Soviet Union and Cuba, passing normally outside the 200-mile zone, but sometimes entering its edges. On several, particularly in 1977, some TU-95s appeared to deliberately enter the zone as deep as 75 miles from the American coast to test U.S. air defense alertness and to find gaps in American air defense radar, which has been thinned out since 1964 because Pentagon officials no longer believed there was a serious bomber attack threat to the United States.

According to the latest Air Force figures, made available to newsmen on request, there have been 26 intercepts of Soviet aircraft since Sept. 25, 18 of them off Iceland, four off Alaska, and four off the continental United States.

By comparison with the 176 intercepts so far in 1980, the Air Force said its records show there were 173 such instances last year and 188 in 1978.

Golden Eagle Among Killed

By LILLIAN SWANSON
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Earl Schriver says Furious was a "a perfect lady." But he wishes the golden eagle had fought back before she was clubbed to death while tethered to a backyard perch.

Rewards totaling $3,500 have been offered for information leading to the conviction of those who killed the 23-year-old eagle and eight other birds, Schriver, the eagle's keeper, said Thursday.

"She was feather-perfect. She was a perfect lady," Schriver said, adding the eagle had a wingspan of more than seven feet.

"She was big, as big as any golden eagle in the world," he said.

The golden eagle is common in the Rocky Mountains, but rare in the eastern United States. The species is listed by the federal government as endangered.

Schriver, an amateur ornithologist, had kept Furious for eight years for breeding. The eagle was owned by Lou Gaeta of Cleveland, who captured the bird in Montana in 1957.

The eagle, six pigeons and two hawks were beaten to death by intruders early Wednesday. Schriver said the vandals used a tree limb, a piece of firewood, lumber and a snow shovel to batter the birds.

"My dearest wish is that Furious would have gotten ahold of one of them," he said.

The Economy resident said he suspected young adults in the area were responsible for the deaths.

"They knew where everything was," he said. "This was just a group out for kicks."

Sophia May Try Empress' Role

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Actress Sophia Loren may play the part of deposed Iranian Empress Farah Diba in a movie to be made by Miss Loren's husband, director Carlo Ponti.

The couple on Thursday ended a four-day visit to Panama as guests of former head of state Gen. Omar Torrijos, who suggested the film and Miss Loren's role in it.

The Iranian royal family was in exile for a time earlier this year on the Panamanian resort island of Contadora. The family later went to Egypt, where the shah died.
