Tax Proceeds Are Received

Some $785,882 in net distributal tax proceeds were received by Pitt County for the quarter ending September 30, according in Mark Lynch, secretary of the N.C. Department of Revenue.

Lynch reported that on a per capita distribution basis figured relative to population, Greenville received $209,624 of the total amount. Local population was listed in the distribution report as 36,271.

Farmville, based on a population of 5,475, received $31,642 of the total distribution, Lynch said, while Ayden, with a population of 4,371, received $25,261.

Other Pitt towns, their populations and receipts, included: Grifton, (Pitt's share), 2,320, $13,408; Winterville, 2,520, $14,564; Bethel, 2,002, $11,570; Simpson, 520, $3,005; Fountain, 432, $2,496; Grimesland, 433, $2,502; and Falkland, 123, $710.

Total population for Pitt County was listed as 81,513 with the county itself receiving $471,096 of the total proceeds and the balance allotted to the ten towns in the county.

Greene County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $37,576 in net distributions with $35,274 going to the county itself and the balance allotted to Snow Hill, $1,786; Hookerton, $353; and Walstonburg $161.

Lenoir County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $521,449, with $412,155 going to the county and the rest distributed to Kinston, $98,008; La Grange, $8,219; Pink Hill, $2,849; and Grifton (Lenoir's share), $215.

Martin County, based on an ad valorem levy, received $201,772 with $166,263 going to the county and the balance allotted to nine towns. Receiving shares were: Williamston, $27,605; Robersonville, $4,971; Jamesville, $1,069; Oak City, $668; Hamilton, $539; Everetts, $317; Parmele, $185; Bear Grass, $81; and Hassell, $70.

Beaufort County totals, figured on a per capita basis, included $387,281 in total distributions with $287,199 of the total allotted to the county itself. Seven towns shared in the balance, including: Washington, $66,186; Belhaven, $17,218; Aurora, $5,187; Chocowinity, $4,412; Washington Park, $3,958; Bath, $1,584; and Pantego, $1,534.

Urges Use Of Income Taxes For Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two pension experts say Congress could use income taxes to bail out the financially strapped Social Security system over the next 25 years.

A third expert told a Senate committee on Friday that the retirement age should be raised and other changes made in the system to avoid future conflicts between retirees and wage-earners who support them with payroll taxes.

Robert M. Ball, who served as Social Security commissioner from 1962 until 1973, told the Committee on Aging that income taxes could be used to pay all or part of the cost of the hospital insurance portion of the system.

Ball said Social Security taxes scheduled to go into the hospital fund could then be transferred to the other two parts of the system — old age and survivors' insurance and disability insurance.

Henry Aaron, chairman of the 1979 Advisory Council on Social Security, told the committee he was in general agreement with Ball's plan.

Ball's plan would cost $11.4 billion in the current budget year — money that would have to be raised by increasing the federal deficit or by cutting spending for other government programs.

Old-age and survivors' insurance, the biggest of the three parts of Social Security, faces a short-term lack of cash despite the higher taxes that will go into effect on Jan. 1.

Michael J. Boskin, of the National Bureau of Economic Research, indicated he was pessimistic about the future of the Social Security system in the first half of the next century.

"If we wait until the baby-boom generation retires (at the turn of the century) before we begin to deal with the tremendous long-term deficit in Social Security, we will see the greatest tax revolt and age warfare in the history of the United States," Boskin said. He noted that statisticians predict a great rise in ratio of retirees to workers.

Greenville Fourth In Building Construction

Greenville ranked fourth in the state among cities of more than 10,000 population in the total value of construction authorized in September, according to State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks.

Brook said that Greenville was sixth among those cities in building permit totals for the first nine months of the year.

The commissioner noted that Greenville's September total of $5,409,162 placed it behind only Charlotte ($22,159,248), Raleigh ($19,275,747), and Durham ($9,213,573) and ranked it ahead of several larger cities such as Winston-Salem ($4,754,885), Greensboro ($4,601,593), and Fayetteville (2,472,572).

For the first nine months of the year, Greenville recorded a permit total of $26,238,961, behind Charlotte ($129,098,537), Raleigh ($121,784,863), Winston-Salem ($60,718,622), Greensboro ($54,613,713), and Durham (43,263,535).

According to Brooks, total construction authorized in Pitt County during September amounted to $6,271,935, including $1,921,000 for 76 single-family units, $3,507,983 for 178 multi-family units, $384,572 for 12 non-residential units, and $458,380 for 55 additions and alterations.

Building value figures for several neighboring eastern towns for September and first nine months included: Elizabeth City, $678,000, $5,391; Goldsboro, $336,050, $5,683,242; Jacksonville, $1,093,178, $16,250,794; Kinston, $1,060,818, $6,107,341; New Bern, $89,250, $2,860,008; Roanoke Rapids, $1,716,609, $5,601,567; Rocky Mount, $957,192, $12,277,325; Tarboro, $283,200, $2,590,175; and Wilson, $556,022, $10,926,162.

Brooks said that the state's home building industry rallied at least momentarily in September. He noted that permits issued for single-family homes were up 15.7 percent over the August figure and up 43 percent over the number recorded last September.

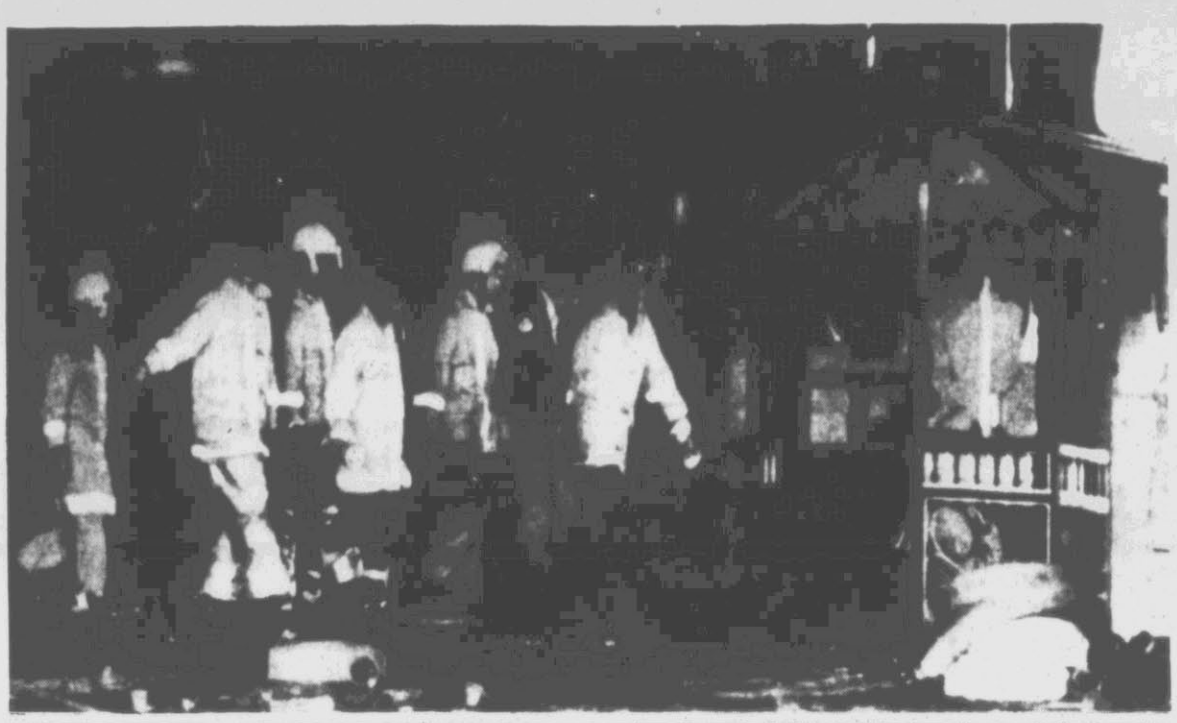

In North Carolina's 44 reporting cities, he related, permits for 803 single-family homes were recorded, compared to 694 in August. Value, at $33,742,453, increased 20.6 percent over August's $27,985,470.

Average construction cost of a new, single-family home in the 44 reporting cities was $42,021 in September, Brooks said, up 4.2 percent from the August average of $40,325.

83 Dead In Las Vegas Fire

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A grim new search for bodies uncovered the 83rd victim of the devastating MGM Grand Hotel fire Saturday as outsiders got their first look at the casino's ghostly ruins and guests returned to their rooms to pick up their belongings.

And Clark County Coroner Otto Ravenholt said he was afraid more bodies would be found — particulary in secondary elevator shafts — and that toxicological tests would be conducted to determine if any of the victims died from inhaling poisonous gases that may have been generated by burning materials such as plastic.

The fire, which authorities said erupted in the main kitchen from an undetermined source, injured more than 500 persons and was the second worst hotel fire in the nation's history.

The latest body was found near a slot machine in the casino a few moments before fire officials gave reporters a tour of the darkened, cavernous casino, where a deathly smell of smoke and water hung over the skeletal remains of burned-out gaming equipment.

Authorities guessed about 8,000 people were in the hotel at the time, including 5,000 guests and perhaps 1,500 gamblers who walked in off the street.

Relatives poured into Las Vegas to search for their loved ones. Many went from hospital to hospital asking after fire victims.

The survivors, many wearing clothes provided by the Red Cross, came back to the hotel for their belongings Saturday. Ray Noble of Shreveport, La., said he was in the casino when a trickle of smoke from the kitchen turned to flame at 7:15 a.m.

"I was at the blackjack table," said Noble. "Suddenly the pit boss said, 'Let's get the hell out of here,' and everybody started running. It was a madhouse.

"I grabbed some of my chips and ran. A guy at my table had about $9,000 in stacks of chips. To my knowledge, he got it all."

At least 1,000 hotel employees and guests gathered in the parking lot and passersby gawked from the street as the guests went into the hotel two at a time, escorted by MGM security guards and a bell captain in his red uniform. As the first two guests emerged from the hotel with their suitcases, the waiting crowd cheered.

The first guests admitted were those with medical problems who needed to get their medicine.

The coroner said it would be days before the toxicology tests would be done. Fire officials said they weren't sure if the materials in the hotel had produced such poison gases.

Dr. Ravenholt said nine of the bodies were found on elevators in the main shaft Friday.

"Four of these were on an open elevator between the 19th and 20th floors," he said.

"With nine in the main shaft, we have to keep the casualty list open," he said. "There are a great many other elevator shafts in the building."

Ravenholt said a number of people were found dead although they showed no sign of panic.

"Quite a few died in rooms sitting or lying or on stairwells just sitting," he said. "It suggests they didn't sense how close to being overcome they were."

One survivor was found late Friday, cowering in her room several hours after the fire was extinguished. "We found one woman in her room," said Fire Capt. Ralph Dinsman at a morning news briefing. "She was just too afraid to come out. She is all right."

As reporters were admitted for the first time to the rubble-strewn casino on Saturday, a fire spokesman disclosed the latest body had been found only moments before near a slot machine.

Hotel security guards and firemen holding lanterns guarded the roped off casino where rubble and dirt lay inches thick and firehoses snaked across the room.

There were reminders everywhere of the festive atmosphere that had started the busy pre-Thanksgiving holiday weekend — singed chandeliers, burned stools

Iran Wants Response

By STEVE HINDY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai's office on Saturday asked the United States for a "positive" or "negative" response to terms for releasing the 52 U.S. hostages because its first reply "was neither explicit nor clear," Pars news agency said. A leading Iranian judge predicted the captives, held for more than a year, would not be freed before Ronald Reagan is installed as president.

Iran's stern Islamic Judge Sadegh Khalkhali, interviewed at his Tehran office by telephone from The Associated Press here, said the United States had refused to give a "clear and sincere reply." He said, "I don't think so," when asked if the hostages would be freed before Reagan takes office Jan. 20.

Meanwhile in Washington, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher briefed relatives of the hostages on negotiations under way to end the crisis.

Louisa Kennedy, wife of hostage Moorhead C. Kennedy and spokeswoman for the Family Liaison Action Group, said Christopher described the government's continuing efforts. "I can't go public with anything further than that," she said, "but that doesn't mean he told us anything much that isn't generally known."

Mrs. Kennedy said in a later interview she could not predict when the hostages might be released but added "a real negotiating pattern appears to have been established."

The report that Iran had requested a second U.S. reply came from the official Pars news agency, quoting an unidentified official in Rajai's office.

Pars said the request was sent to the Algerian government, which is acting as an intermediary in the crisis and received the secret U.S. reply nearly two weeks ago from Christopher.

State Department spokesman John Trattner said in Washington he could not confirm the Pars dispatch and declined to comment on the reported complaint that the U.S. reply was not explicit.

However, Mrs. Kennedy said after the briefing by Christopher that the Iranian message was expected in Washington in a day or two.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said Thursday that America had accepted "in principle" terms for the hostages' release set down by the Iranian Parliament, the Majlis, on Nov. 2. The conditions: returning the wealth of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi; lifting the freeze on Iranian assets in U.S. banks; dropping lawsuits against Iran and pledging non-interference in Iranian affairs. There are said to be legal problems in meeting all but the last demand.

Iran wants the United States to "clearly announce its positive or negative response to the Majlis document," Pars quoted the Rajai office official as saying.

"The U.S. reply, as far as Iran was concerned, did not explicitly and clearly refer to any of the clauses of the Majlis decision." The statement added the U.S. government had not only not offered a direct answer to the conditions "but rather other proposals had been offered instead.

"Since the government of the Islamic Republic of Iran deems itself only the executor of the Majlis decisions in this connection, it has no ... discretion to introduce any alteration or modification," it added.

The statement indicated the Tehran government, charged by the Majlis with responsibility for seeking a U.S. reply to conditions for the hostages' release, did not have the authority to discuss new conditions or details.

The Candidacy Of Dr. Brewer

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A new president is expected to be named by the University of Louisville by mid-December, and it may be East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. Thomas W. Brewer.

A Fort Worth, Texas, native, Brewer became chancellor at ECU in 1978, after six years as vice-chancellor and dean of Texas Christian University in his home-town. Prior to that time, Brewer taught at Southwest Texas State University, North Texas State University, the University of Kentucky and Iowa State University, before going to the University of Toledo in 1968 as professor and chairman of the History Department. He began his career at TCU in 1971 when he was named Dean of Arts and Sciences.

DR. THOMAS BREWER

It was learned here on November 14, that Brewer had been interviewed for the University of Louisville post, and last Tuesday, Dr. Thomas Crawford, secretary of the presidential selection committee acknowledged that he was one of the three top choices for the post.

The other two candidates for the job were listed then as Charles G. Mayo, president of Westchester State College, Westchester, Pa., and Donald D. Swain, academic vice-president of the University of California at Berkeley.

Then Thursday, eight members of the selection committee visited Greenville, to interview more than 30 persons — faculty, staff, students, trustees and community leaders — in their efforts to learn more about Brewer.

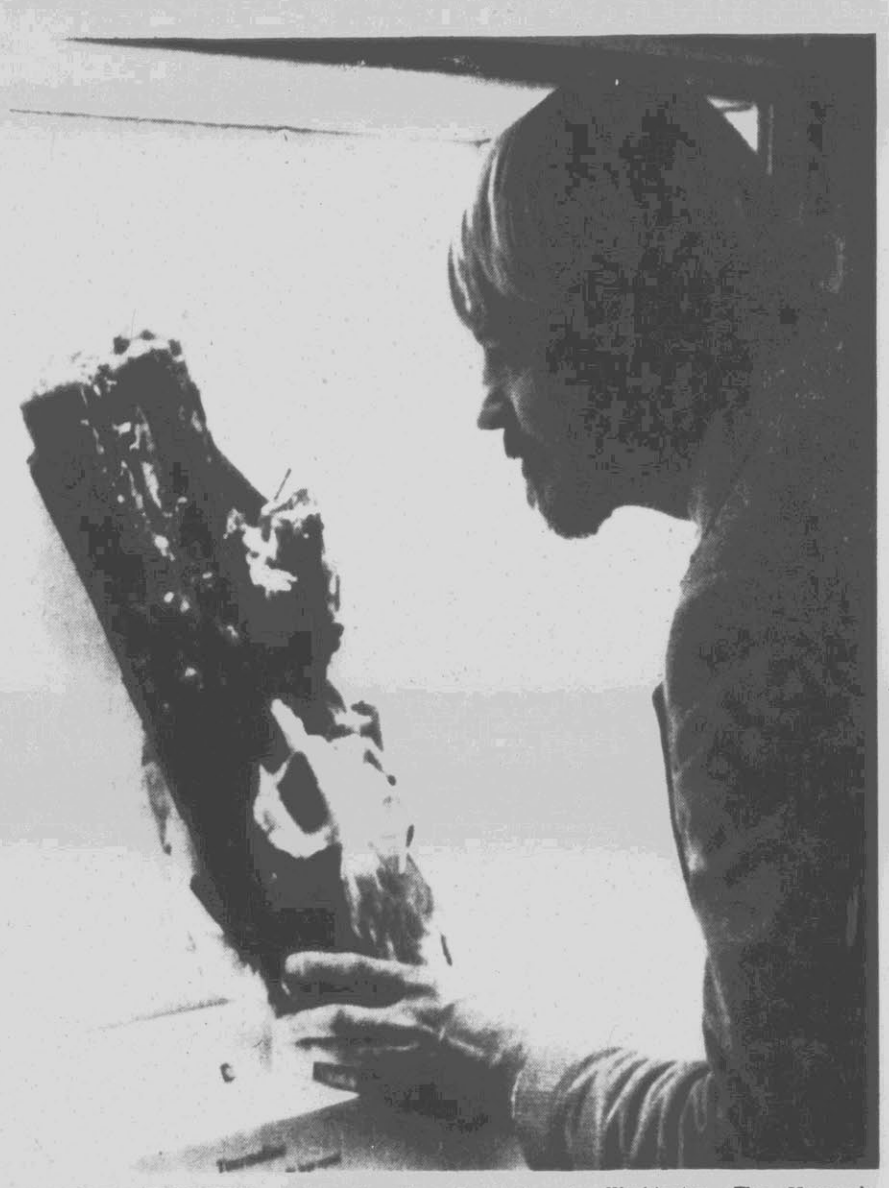

Friday, Crawford said that, "we still have one visit to make," — to the Berkley campus — and acknowledged that now, only Brewer and Swain remain as conetenders for the University of Louisville presidency.

"We were very much impressed with the East Carolina campus," Crawford said, and, "very pleased to know in what high esteem," Brewer, "is held. He seems to be doing an excellent job.

"We came away feeling certainly very good about what's going on at East Carolina."

According to Crawford, "to a person," the members of the selection committee that

Larry Layton To Face Murder Charges

LARRY LAYTON

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Peoples Temple member Larry Layton was flown to California on Saturday to face murder charges in the slaying of U.S. Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., after a procedural hearing here before a federal magistrate.

New York Attorney William Kunstler said his client was put on a plane to San Francisco immediately after a 9 a.m. hearing in which Layton was identified as the person accused in a federal indictment.

Federal and airline officials refused to verify Layton's whereabouts for security reasons.

At the hearing, Kunstler said Layton was prepared to face charges Monday in San Francisco of conspiring to kill Ryan in an ambush at a Guyana airstrip on Nov. 18, 1978, and then returning to Jonestown to "conduct and supervise the executions and suicides of members of the Peoples Temple."

A Georgetown, Guyana, jury already has acquitted Layton of murder charges stemming from the airstrip ambush, in which three journalists and a woman defector from the Peoples Temple also were killed.

Kunstler said, however, that Layton may challenge the validity of the statute used by a federal grand jury in San Francisco to indict Layton on Oct. 9. The statute makes it a crime to kill a congressman or internationally protected person.

Layton's West Coast attorney, Tony Tamburello, also said the indictment may be challenged because it was returned in a closed courtroom. He said the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure require that an indictment "shall be returned...in open court."

Layton arrived in New York late Friday after being extradited from Guyana. He was the only one of several people indicted by the grand jury who survived the bizarre mass murder-suicide in which 900 followers of Peoples Temple founder Jim Jones died.

Besides charges of conspiracy to kill Ryan, Layton also faces charges of aiding and abetting in the murder of a congressman, conspiracy to kill an internationally protected person and aiding and abetting in a conspiracy to kill an internationally protected person.

The latter two charges stem from an alleged attempt to kill Richard C. Dwyer, then Deputy Chief of Mission for the United States in Guyana. Dwyer, who was traveling with Ryan when the ambush occurred, was not injured in the attack.

Two Arrested On Drug Charges

Two drug arrests and one larceny arrest occurred in Greenville Thursday, according to reports of the Greenville Police Department.

Donald Lee Moye of 420 Tiffany St., Kinston, was arrested Thursday at 12:45 p.m. and was charged with larceny and possession of needles, syringes and herion. Moye's bond was set at $5,000.

Also on Thursday, Randy Cole Alford, 218 Churchill Dr., was charged with possession of cocaine at 11:45 p.m. Alford's bond was set at $500.

According to police reports, investigation concerning these cases will continue.

Peace Mission Will Be Tough

By ROLAND TYRRELL

BAGHDAD, Iraq (UPI) — U.N. envoy Olof Palme said Saturday he had encountered "deep differences" in his talks with Iranian and Iraqi leaders and that an end to the two-month-old Persian Gulf war was not yet at hand.

Shuttling across the Persian Gulf on a U.N.-commissioned peace mission, the former Swedish prime minister arrived in the Iraqi capital from Amman, Jordan, where he held a preliminary round of talks earlier in the day with visiting Iraqi Foreign Minister Saddoun Hammadi.

He has already been to Tehran and was expected to see Iraqi President Saddam Hussein on Sunday.

Although he tried not to sound pessimistic, Palme said his talks so far had succeeded only in pointing up the differences between the two sides. He cautioned against expectations of an early end to the fighting, which continued Saturday along a broad front from Dizful in southeast Iran to Abadan on the Persian Gulf coast.

Iran claimed that Abadan's defenders broke through Iraqi positions on two key highways leading to the besieged refinery port, pushing the Iraqis back several miles in dawn attacks on the 62nd day of the war.

Further north, it said Iranian forces killed or wounded 70 Iraqi soldiers on the western front near Susengard and another 65 Iraqis at Dizful, one of several western Iranian cities being shelled by Iraqi artillery.

Iraq for its part said it shot down an Iranian helicopter along the northeastern front and said 23 Iranians and 26 Iraqis were killed in fighting Friday night and Saturday.

While none of these figures could be confirmed, the hundreds of casualties that Iran daily claims to have inflicted on Iraq are considered to be grossly exaggerated. Iraq's casualty claims, by contrast, are usually much smaller and believed to be closer to the truth.

More than just the clouds of war hung over Palme's mission as his delegation arrived in Baghdad. A U.N. spokesman said bad weather forced Palme's white Falcon executive jet to land at a military airport just inside the Iraqi border with Jordan, from where he continued on to the Iraqi capital by car.

"Differences are very deep and we should not jump into expectations for quick results," Palme said after his meeting with Hammadi in Amman.

New Delay For Space Shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With its launch date already three years behind schedule and costs nearly $4 billion over estimate, the Space Shuttle suffered a new setback Saturday when a final linkup between the orbiter Columbia and its fuel tanks was delayed.

After a morning meeting at the Kennedy Space Center, space agency officials decided workers had too much gap filler to apply between protective thermal tiles on the Columbia to move the orbiter from its hangar early Sunday as planned.

That would delay the linkup until midnight Sunday, officials said. They had hoped to move the Columbia from its National Aeronautics and Space Administration hangar to the cavernous Vehicle Assembly Building to attempt the linkup early Sunday.

By Reagan On Posible Cabinet Appointees

No Final Decisions

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ronald Reagan conferred with his talent-hunters on a list of possible Cabinet appointees for three hours Saturday and later said he had made no final decisions.

The president-elect had been scheduled to spend only an hour at the meeting with his so-called "kitchen cabinet," but ended up staying much longer.

"It was a good meeting," he told reporters before entering his limousine for the half-hour ride back to his Pacific Palisades home.

"It's a long and laborious process of combing a lot of names," he said, adding that he still hopes to announce his decisions by the end of the month or early next month.

Asked whether he had slimmed down the list of prospective nominees, Reagan replied, "Oh my goodness, I wish it were down to three (for each of the 13 Cabinet posts)."

The meeting took place in an oak-paneled conference room in the office of Reagan's personal lawyer, William French Smith, himself a contender for attorney general.

Asked as he went into the meeting whether he would take the top job at the Justice Department, Smith replied coyly, "It's a bridge I haven't reached yet."

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., told reporters before the session he believed Reagan and his advisers would concentrate on the "big four" positions: State, Defense, Treasury and Justice.

"We won't be making any final decisions," Laxalt said. "We'll be doing a lot of winnowing today, I'm sure."

He said they would analyze each name on the list and perhaps even add to it.

The close group of Reagan advisers was directed by the president-elect to come up with three possibilities for each Cabinet post. Edwin Meese, who will serve Reagan as a Cabinet-level presidential counselor, said Friday the list contained about 70 names.

Meese said Saturday there will be no appointments announced until after Thanksgiving.

China Denies Rigged Trial

PEKING (UPI) — Proclaiming a new era in democracy and law and order, China denied Saturday that a guilty verdict in the Gang of Four trial was a foregone conclusion.

But a provincial governor, sharing the official nervousness that supporters of the Gang might attempt to disrupt the trial, called for swift punishment for those stirring up trouble.

Meanwhile, a government-inspired hate campaign continued in the national media against the 10 defendants at China's most sensational trial — the Gang of Four led by Mao Tse-tung's widow Jiang Qing and the so-called Clique of Six, composed of former associates of late Defense Minister Lin Biao.

All 10 are accused of mass murder and high treason in connection with the excesses of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution during which Jiang reigned as virtual empress of China. Biao's associates are also accused of plotting to murder Mao by attacking his private train with jetfighters, artillery and flame throwers.

The courtroom drama adjourned until Monday after a dramatic opening Thursday, but questions about the trial's purpose and the possibility of renewed trouble were the main topics of talk on street corners throughout the country.

Former House Speaker John McCormack Dies

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — John W. McCormack, who rose through the tough world of Democratic South Boston politics to become speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, died Saturday at a nursing home. He was 88.

"He went quietly to sleep after lunch and stopped breathing," said his nephew, Edward McCormack. "He was a wake and alert to the very end. He went very peacefully."

McCormack was hospitalized in September for pneumonia. He was recently transferred to the Eastwood at Dedham nursing home where he died.

"He never quite recovered," said his nephew.

McCormack's 42-year congressional career, from 1928 to 1970, spanned eight presidencies. He served as majority leader of the House for decades under Sam Rayburn and became speaker in January 1962.

He held the record for unbroken tenure in the speaker's office.

He was a heartbeat away from the presidency for more than a year after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, as the speaker of the House follows the vice president in presidential seccession.

Before he was hospitalized, McCormack led an active life, keeping regular hours at an office in the federal courthouse that bore his name. Each night he would dine at Jimmy's Harborside, a popular Boston seafood restaurant.

"We have lost a great American," said current House Speaker and fellow Massachusetts lawmaker Thomas O'Neill. "I have lost a great friend and mentor of 40 years."

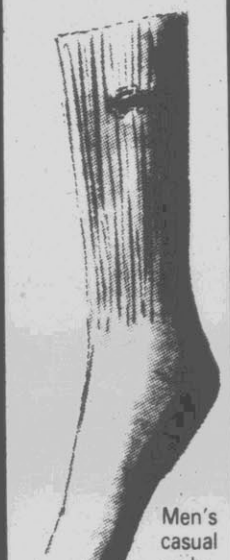

Born John William McCormack on Dec. 21, 1891, he was one of 12 children of a poor Boston bricklayer. Nine of his brothers and sisters died in infancy and his father died when he was 13, forcing him to quit school after the eighth grade and take a job as a $3-a-week messenger.

He later became a lawyer without ever earning a high school diploma as one of that generation of attorneys who learned his profession by apprenticeship.

He began his rise to the nation's top legislative office as a hard-working Boston ward heeler who was ever loyal to the Democratic party.

Judge Tar Heels On Conduct

As could be expected, the innocent verdict in the Nazi-Klan murder trial at Greensboro stirred a storm of protest from various groups about the nation.

There were cries that justice was not done — and everyone has a right to his opinion in that.

There were also efforts to depict Greensboro and North Carolina as racist and repressive. We suppose those opinions can be expressed, too.

To those of us living here, however, it is not the tone of the opinions expressed by those viewing the situation that should concern us, but rather how we as citizens conduct ourselves.

We view all the groups involved in the Greensboro shooting as fringe elements, and we believe their views are overwhemingly rejected by North Carolinians.

The Greensboro verdict has spurred the involved groups to call for redoubled efforts to establish themselves in our state and to recruit others to their causes.

We think, as they have in the past, North Carolina citizens will virtually unanimously reject these causes. That, in the long run, is what our state should be judged on.

Volunteer Efforts Are Appreciated

Wednesday night the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department honored over 150 area people for their volunteer services to recreation.

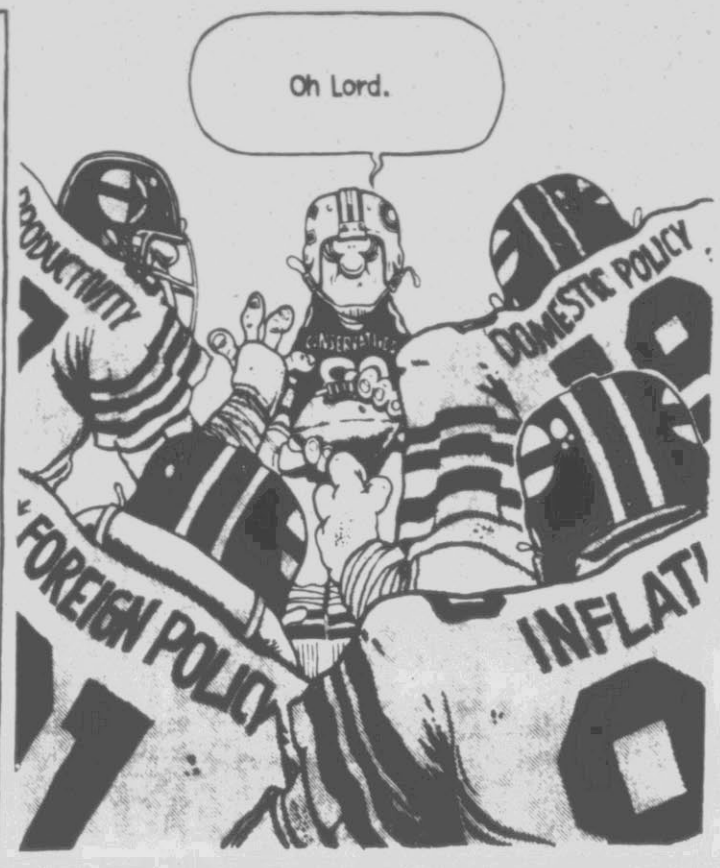

It was called a "$100,000 banquet" because the volunteer work is calculated at that worth.

The event is not unusual. Volunteers work for Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, Boys Club, various health related agencies, farm organizations, fire and rescue and many other endeavors.

A community won't work without the interest of its citizens in worthwhile activities. There is not enough tax money to buy these volunteer services.

Our area citizens seem well involved.

School Holiday Mandated

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Public schools across North Carolina — at least most of them — got a holiday earlier this month; one which caught parents and school administrators alike by surprise.

It was Veterans Day — November 11. It used to be Armistice Day. Hardly anybody other than governmental workers got a holiday. Until this year, not even the schools closed.

The strangest thing is that of all the holidays which school kids get, Veterans Day is the only one which North Carolina state law absolutely requires. All others are left to the discretion of local boards of education.

Back in 1977, State Senator Craig Lawing pushed through the General Assembly a law sponsored by several veterans' organizations which established November 11 as a mandated state holiday. Not even Christmas or Thanksgiving has such status. School officials protested without success that two things are wrong: there are enough holidays already, particularly early in the school year and they need to get as many days in as possible in case of bad weather during the winter; and, state law requiring a school holiday would be highly unusual and meddling in local school affairs.

The law took effect for 1978. But local school administrators complained that the school calendars had already been drawn up and to add a new holiday would cause severe problems. So the holiday was delayed until 1979. It fell on a Sunday, so no holiday was required.

This year the date fell on Tuesdy, so the schools closed——most of them. Some local units either ignored the law or didn't remember it and remained open. That won't happen again. Insiders say a veterans' group is considering a lawsuit, just to remind everybody to close down on November 11. Another problem which school officials see with the holiday is that it must fall on November 11, which puts it at odd times during the week. Most holidays fall either on Fridays or Mondays which make it easier to gear down plant and transportation equipment and restart it.

Fewer Women

Female membership in the North Carolina General Assembly will be one fewer in the next session, a surprising turn of events for those who have seen women growing in numbers, experience, and leadership in recent years.

There will be two senators compared to five in the last session. Both are Democrats: Rachel Gray of High Point and Carolyn Mathis of Charlotte. Both have served previously.

In the House of Representatives there will be 18 women; two more than in the last session. All but four are Democrats. All but four have previous experience.

Republicans are Dorothy Burnely of High Point, Maggie Keesee of Greensboro, Mary Pegg of Winston-Salem, and Betsy Cochrane of Advance in Davie County.

Republican representation shows a pattern in North Carolina. Of 10 senators, only one is from the east, J.A. Wright of Wilmington. The remainder concentrate in Alamance, Guilford, Forsyth, Davie, Rowan, Catawba, Iredell, Wilkes and Caldwell.

Only one eastern Republican is in the House: Tommy Rhodes of Wilmington. The rest are from Guilford, Randolph, Surry, Forsyth, Davie, Davidson, Rowan, Stanly, Wilkes, Yadkin, Caldwell, Iredell, Mecklenburg, Catawba, Avery, and Henderson Counties.

Sunday Morning Notes

David Schlienz, 16 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Schlienz wrote his older brother, Don, to remind him of his birthday.

David suggested to his brother, now an ensign in the Navy, that no gift was necessary but if one were forthcoming a gift of money would be nice.

Soon a birthday card showed up. In it was a check.

"You didn't mention an amount so I chose between one and 20," Don wrote.

The check was for $10.19 . . . which is definitely between one and 20.

And some new citizen of Greenville definitely likes the town.

A letter arrived recently. It wasn't signed but it said in part:

"I have lived here about a year now. As a matter of fact it was exactly a year ago mid November that my wife and I first came to look at Greenville. At any rate I wanted to write something about this town which has certainly impressed me in many ways.

"It was just when we felt we were getting a good idea of what Greeenville was like that we turned the corner and visualized the monolith known as Pitt County Memorial Hospital. I guess those people who watched this structure grow from the ground up do not truly realize how imposing it is. We were definitely impressed. Moreover, we wonder who conceptualized this building and how did it end up in little Greenville of all places.

"Now don't get me wrong. I have heard many a derogatory comment about this town. The college students complain about too many old fashioned ideas and not enough to do and the natives

Other Editors Say Much Is Expected

(Washington Daily News)

The people of North Carolina have a right to expect much from Senator-elect John East as he assumes his new position.

Dr. East won by attacking his opponent rather than by any positive approach as to why voters should vote for him. He succeeded well in his crusade against Senator Robert Morgan. He had the people feeling that a real honest to goodness sin had been committed by Senator Morgan in voting to give the Panama Canal to Panama, in giving money to Nicaragua, and in abandoning the B-1 bomber.

The steady diet of exposure, if that be the word, influenced the thinking of North Carolilnians very much and having the campaign with the shadow of great sin over his head was more than Mr. Morgan could overcome.

Let it be said that Bob Morgan is a very capable person. He now is retiring from public office at a time when his service to people could be his greatest. Admittedly, Senator Morgan could have handled some matters much better. He could have avoided several of the junkets that alienated many voters. He could have been more adept at answering his mail and returning telephone calls. He could have perfected a much better campaign organization than he did. But these matters are all subjects for argument, and in his mind, Mr. Morgan surely feels that he has been crucified at the hands of a winner who won out solely on the basis of what was wrong with Morgan and not what is right with East.

That is a heart-breaking way to win. One fellow said to us "well, we could now save money by keeping Dr. East at home and giving Senator Jesse Helms two votes in the United States Senate." That is a poor and downgrading way to put it, but in full truth, Dr. East still has to prove his own ability to serve and he still has to show people of North Carolina his better side.

As Dr. East goes to the U.S. Senate, we, the people, have a right to expect him to represent all the people — Democrats and Republicans, black, white, and Indian, rich and poor, educated and uneducated, politically astute and politically ignorant, and just plain North Carolinians in every walk of life.

Dr. East does have a great opportunity and a greater challenge. He somehow must show to all that the candidate who saw only bad with Robert Moregan is not the real John East. He must show his own people that there is a real John East who himself stands for something.

It is now time for the real John East to speak up.

Home Is The Sailor

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

WESTPORT, Conn. (UPI) — "Home is the sailor, home from the backyard," I said the other night as the sun was setting and I limped into the mortgaged cottage.

I said it to my spouse who was watching a football game on television.

"Good," he said.

I was favoring a bruised knee. On my hands were assorted nicks and cuts of origin unknown. The knee got knocked when I slipped during my backyard sailor chores, last of the season.

Mate never looked up.

He didn't need to ask why I was doing a cuckoo thing like sailing in the backyard. Earlier he had been helping me put the 19-foot sailboat to bed for the winter, tucking it in on its cradle resting awkwardly on crabgrass beneath scrub maples.

He left after an altercation. I believe that's an apt description of what happened. I nearly crowned him while lowering a 29-foot mast by rope from the boat deck. I slipped. Line slipped. Mast slipped.

Mate was shaken. He and his bad back retreated to a televised football game. He didn't even take time to hoist a white flag.

And me? I was too shook to attempt descent via a ladder to the turf about 10 feet below. So I risked getting dizzy — or was it airsick? — on the deck of the sailboat high off the ground.

Like a pioneer woman I tended the task at hand. I stuck with tucking in the boat — come hades or high water.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Tilting Away From Israel

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's lilting love song for Israel that drove Saudi Arabia and other pro-American Arab states into a frenzy during the presidential campaign has become muted, a result of missionary work by insiders and Menahem Begin's miscalculation.

Prime Minister Begin's lack of gratitude for Reagan's ardent courtship of Israel reduced effusive pro-Israeli comments even before the election. That unwittingly bolstered efforts by advisers urging Reagan to take an even-handed approach in the Mideast.

These advisers seem to be winning out over Reagan operatives selling an all-out, pro-Israel position. If so, Reagan would have his only chance to gain mastery over the Arab-Israeli dispute and win what has eluded his predecessors: the West Bank settlement and Arab-Israeli peace that are inseparable from long-range American interests.

No change in the president-elect's attitude toward Israel has been proclaimed. In fact, some misleading evidence points the other way.

At Begin's gala Manhattan dinner last week, the head table bulged with top Reaganites: Richard V. Allen, national security adviser-to-be; William Casey, campaign chairman; former and perhaps future Secretary of the Treasury William Simon; Republican National Committee Chairman William Brock. "I was asked by the Israeli ambassador," Allen told us, "and I attended with pleasure. We are good friends."

But other Reagan insiders less sympathetic to Israel received no invitations. Gov. Bill Clements of Texas and George Shultz, a key transition adviser, are warning Reagan that he needs equally good relations with Saudi Arabia and Jordan. Reagan's Mideast policy experts are eyeing Jordan as the crucial link in Reagan's plan for peace on the West Bank.

Exponents of a balanced Mideast policy for the new Reagan administration are pushing hard for a shattering

To the Editor:

Given the statistics of American voters, Americans are seen as irresponsible and lazy. When determining these statistics, one must first distinguish between the "eligible voter" and the "potential voter". The "eligible voters" are those who are registered and legally able to vote on Election Day. On the other hand, "potential voters" are those considered by the Census Bureau to be of voting age, regardless of status or citizenship. Therefore, these could include prisoners, military personnel who find it difficult to vote, the young, who tend not to vote, and the old, who find it a burden to get to the polls.

To determine the voter-turnout figure, the number of persons who cast a vote for President is simply divided by the number of the voting age population on Election Day. Hence, this figure will be low.

The truth of the bottom line is that these statistics are not figured correctly. When calculated correctly, taking into consideration the difference between "eligible voters" and "potential voters", one will find that Americans are responsible citizens who take their electoral obligation seriously.

Strength For Today

NO COMPLETE LIBERTY

When a father once reproved his young son for some kind of misbehavior, the boy asked bitterly, "Dad, when will I be old enough to do just what I want to do?"

To this the father made the wise reply, "I don't know. Nobody has ever lived long enough to find out."

Talk as we may about liberty, there is no complete liberty in the world for any human being, nor should there be. Federal and state laws and city ordinances prevent us from doing thousands of things, and no society would be worth living in if these prohibitions did not exist. The rules of etiquette prevent our doing many other things. Every business has its customs of the trade which no one can violate and still remain in good standing with his associates.

The only person who could possibly have complete liberty would be a savage living by himself on a desert island. But when a second savage put in his appearance, the liberty of the first would be at an end. — Elisha Douglass

Never Leaving Home Financing

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Savings and loan associations soon may add checking accounts, credit cards and consumer loans to their product list, but they'll never drop home mortgages. Rollin D. Barnard promises that.

"These new (federal) authorizations make a smorgasbord of appetizers and deserts, but the main course remains meat and potatoes and the good brown gravey of home finance," said Barnard in an interview.

Barnard was scheduled to take office today as the new president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose members account for $610 billion of assets and are the nation's chief source of home mortgages.

Now concluding their annual meeting in San Francisco, a good many S&L executives are concerned whether they should welcome or worry about their new powers, one reason being the powers in some instances will pit them against larger commercial banks. Barnard is a welcomer.

"It's the way you handle it," he said."We'll have new tools to do the same job as yesterday. Home mortgages will remain our business."

S&Ls took a beating this year, and they're not used to it. For years they had made steady profits, but volatile, unpredictable interest rates this year forced many to dip into reserves. It shook them up.

Looking for a corrective, some S&Ls have considered merging with others, a step that Barnard, head of Denver's Midland Federal Savings & Loan, believes should be taken only after much more deliberation.

"I'm ecouraging them to consider carefully before they make the move," he said. "I believe in mergers — my own company has grown through two of them — but to merge out of fear is dangerous."

In his view, the red ink that spilled over the books of half the league's 4,460 members earlier this year is "no reason for considering suicide." Other businesses, he said, go through regular ups and downs over a span of years. "What are reserves for?" he asks.

But it is indeed a new world for federally chartered S&Ls, and not just because of their new power to offer checking accounts (by Dec. 31), consumer loans, credit cards — even data processing and insurance.

Along with these newly granted powers is a mortgage rate structure in which flexibility and interest rate variability replaces rigidity, which had been the enduring quality of home mortgages since the 1930s.

Either change — the new powers or the mortgage flexibility — is bigger than almost any other change in many years. Together, they add up to an unprecedented challenge, and perhaps an opportunity too.

Customers are expected to benefit from the new services, though these services have long been obtainable at commercial banks. But, said one S&L official, "We're good at personal service — better than banks."

The word "service," however, didn't mean much to customers seeking and failing to qualify for mortgages this year. Barnard hopes and believes the flexible mortgages now offered will ease that problem.

To illustrate his belief, he describes the problem the S&L's faced before the recent regulatory changes, and explains how flexibile rates — rates that rise and fall with the market — might change things.

"If I had $100 million of 7 percent interest mortgages (rigid mortgages, with the interest rates fixed for perhaps 30 years), and had to pay 11 percent for money, I had to make up a 4 percent cash loss.

"To break even I had to have another $100 million of loans at 15 percent. And in order to run the store, I'd have to have another 1.5 percent to just to make up for the dead weight I was carrying."

That, he explained, is one reason why lenders charge so much — 14.5 percent and 15 percent are common — for a mortgage today: To overcome losses on existing, long-term, fixed-rate mortgages written at a time when rates were low and almost nobody foresaw today's extremes.

"The sooner we get to universal flexibility, the better it will be for the customer," he said, while conceding that in a more stable age the fixed-rate, long-term mortgage served its purpose well.

If all rates were flexibile — which can't happen until existing fixed-rate loans are finally retired — the practice of new home mortgagors subsidizing old mortgagors might come to an end, he said.

To put it another way, as Barnard did, you wouldn't have the situation of "a guy living off everyone else at 6 percent."

Barnard is one of them. "I have one, and I wouldn't pay it off (in advance) for anything," he confessed.

More Yearn For Changes

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The number of Americans who would like to see changes in the way political campaigns are conducted has increased sharply from a survey taken shortly after the 1976 presidential election.

Currently, as many as two-thirds of adults (66 percent) favor changes in the conduct of political campaigns. The comparable figure in 1976 was 54 percent.

Leading the list of gripes this year are the length of campaigns and the amount of mudslinging. Next on the list of complaints are the lack of discussion of the issues and campaign costs.

Typical of respondents' comments illustrating the public's irritation with the length of this year's campaign are the following:

"They should shorten the campaign time drastically. I would say do it the way they do in Great Britain, six weeks only. As it is now, the campaign is too lengthy and too expensive."

"I think the whole campaign and preparations are too long. If they held all the primaries on the same day, this would shorten the time between the primary and the general election."

To a certain extent, the widespread voter apathy experienced this year can be attributed to the length of the presidential campaign and the way it was conducted. Voter turnout on Nov. 4 was the lowest it has been since 1948. The latest figures show that only 52.2 percent of eligible voters bothered to turn up at the polls.

Cut Campaign Costs

The current survey indicates that the American public wants to put even tighter limits on campaign spending than those already in effect. Ingrained in the thinking of many Americans is the belief that every person should have an equal opportunity to run for office and that money should not be a deciding factor.

The public also believes the federal government should provide a fixed amount of money for the election campaigns of candidates for Congress and at the same time prohibit all other contributions. In the latest survey on this topic 57 percent favor public financing for congressional candidates; 30 percent are opposed.

A Top Lawman's Career Ended On A Sour Note

By NOEL YANCEY

Behind his back they called him, "Bull." But to his face, he was always addressed as, "Colonel." He was Col. James R. Smith, commander of the State Highway Patrol. He both looked and acted the part of a tough, top cop.

Present and past patrol officers remember Smith as an outstanding officer — a stern but fair disciplinarian — who led the North Carolina Highway Patrol as it became one of the best in the land. In fact, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, called it the nation's best in 1956, 1957 and 1958 — while Smith was commander.

"I thought he was an outstanding leader, a very good disciplinarian," said Col. John T. Jenkins, the present patrol commander who was "a trooper in the field" when Smith headed the force.

"He was a great highway patrolman, and a danged good commander," said Col. E.C. Guy, a former patrol commander who now directs the governor's highway saftey program.

"He was one of the best. He ran a good,Btight organization," said Charles B. Pierce," special assistant to the state agriculture commissioner who served in Patrol headquarters under Smith.

So Smith's host of friends were saddened a decade later when he was fired from another state job, manager of the state property warehouse, in disgrace and later charged with embezzlement. Smith was accused of falsifying his expense accounts — with charging the state for hotel rooms and meals for more than 100 days when he was actually in Raleigh and spent the night at home. He also was accused of having two state employees perform personal work for him on state time.

The charges against Smith and a former employee of the surplus property warehouse were not disposed of until about six years later. District Attorney W.G. (Buck) Ransdell said there was never enough court time or personnel to try the cases. But during the interim two key state witnesses had died.

Finally, in July, 1974, a new district attorney, Burley B. Mitchell, agreed to let Smith and Carl W. Franks Sr. plead no contest to misdemeanor charges. Each was fined $500. At the time, Mitchell explained that without the testimony of the employees who had died, "we could not convict on a felony."

Smith, now 75, is living in Wilmington, his home town. Friends say he is in poor health.

Perhaps, he can look past the misfortunes of recent years to the 31 years he spent on the patrol — from the time he joined it in 1929 as one of its 37 charter members to the day 21 years later when Gov. W. Kerr Scott promoted him to colonel and named him patrol commander. He was the first man to rise through the ranks to the top spot.

Two years after the patrol's creation, the legislature voted to boost its strength to 67 men. Smith was promoted to sergeant and transferred back to Wilmington to take charge of a district of several counties. He spent the next 15 years in Wilmington and became known as a likeable, hard-working, capable officer.

During the mid-30s, law officers throughout North Carolina and especially the patrol were on the lookout for two notorious outlaws — bank robbers Bill Payne and Wash Turner. The FBI had tagged them "public enemies number 1." The patrol especially wanted to capture the two because they had killed a young trooper, George Penn, who had chased them into a dead end road.

One day, Smith got a tip they were in the Carolina Beach area. Shortly, Smith and a trooper named Sloan were chasing a car containing two men at 90 miles per hour. Smith was driving while Sloan was answering the rifle fire from the pursued men.

Sloan finally hit the driver in the head and his car veered off the road and smashed into a barbecue stand. The wounded driver, Bowling Bird, was arrested on a bank robbery charge, but Turner leaped from the wrecked vehicle and escaped into some woods. But several months later, Payne and Turner were captured, convicted of murder and subsequently executed.

"Those minutes riding down the highway with bullets flying everywhere, I'll never forget," Smith said years later. "I'm just glad I had a chance to get in on the events leading to their capture."

In 1946, Smith was promoted to lieutenant and transferred to Fayetteville to command Troop B. A year later he was promoted to captain but remained in command of Troop B. In 1949, he was transferred to Raleigh as the patrol's first executive officer and given the rank of major. His promotion to patrol commander break with President Carter's Camp David process, which is clearly failing. Key elements in their plan:

— Replace Camp David's design for West Bank autonomy with a territorial exchange between Israel and Jordan. That would abruptly shoot down Begin's claims to security rights over the entire West Bank.

— Terminate Ambassador Sol Linowitz's mission impossible as special Egyptian-Israeli-U.S. go-between on the autonomy plan.

— Assure Saudi Arabia that the new administration will quickly approve the bomb racks and fuel tanks the Saudis must have to give their F-15 fighter-bombers worthwhile range in the Persian Gulf.

Adm. Thomas Moorer, a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, warned Reagan just before the election that Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf oil states will never fully cooperate with the U.S. until the Palestinian homeland on the West Bank has been returned. That directly contradicts Begin's line that biblical authority gives Israel perpetual West Bank rights.

Begin's allies in the Reagan camp, who believe the fate of the U.S. in the Middle East will rise or fall with that of Israel, are battling back. This is their program in the Reagan transition: Give Israel "veto power" over U.S. arms to the Arabs; push for a ruthless housecleaning of so-called anti-Israel "Arabists" from the Defense and State Departments; persuade Reagan to insist on U.S. military base rights in parts of the Sinai being returned to Egypt by Israel.

Until just before Election Day, the struggle for Reagan's Mideast policy was tilting toward the pro-Israel faction. It is now tilting the other way. Besides the efforts of the even-handed school, Reagan felt Begin's government failed to show proper gratitude for his effusive pro-Israeli positions early in the campaign.

In the three weeks before the election, while former Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman went campaigning with Carter in Air Force One, Reagan scarcely mentioned Israel. One senior Reagan aide, conceding that Reagan had put a silencer on encomiums to Israel, claimed the reason was simply that "he said it all before."

In fact, it was during this period that Reagan heard alarm from advisers advocating even-handed treatment of Israel and the Arabs. Sen. Richard Stone, defeated for Democratic renomination in Florida and now being considered for a high State Department or diplomatic post, warned Reagan to beware Israel's claim to sovereignty over all of Jerusalem. The private advice from Stone, who is a prominent Jewish leader: Work at a Vaticanization of Jerusalem as a minimum favor to Saudi Arabia.

Stone's advice had an impact on Reagan. The battle to pull the president-elect back from the brink of all-out support for Israel is far from over. But if it continues on its present path, there is reason for hope in the Mideast by the U.S. and its allies.

putting the boat to bed crowns a series of happenings best described as "bringing home the boat."

Tucking in, the last phase, this season included raking leaves out of the boat, pumping out rain water, poking nooks with a boat hook to rout furry creatures trying out boat as a winter haven.

Tucking in also requires that a 30-by-14 foot cover be placed over the boat and then laced up tightly underneath to keep out leaves, water, snow. The first weekend I tried to do that, a gale struck.

Wind gusted at hurricane force — 76 mph — and the rain was a deluge! No time to fool with a boat cover, unless one wanted to see what kind of impromptu kite it might make.

Covering was postponed for a week. That's how leaves and water collected, giving me the odd experience of raking leaves in a boat.

Bringing home the boat summons patience, fortitude, agility, gratitude, humility and a certain amount of money — this season, to buy a new boat cover; to pay for sweeping barnacles off the bottom with a high pressure hose.

Also, to pay Billie Bates for his services, including driving his flatbed pulled by a Jeep. With flatbed in tow, he runs the boat's custom cradle from backyard to boatyard and returns it with the boat, a Rhodes 19, resting on cradle.

often become irritated with the noise. But it is a remarkable contrast that seems to keep things balanced."

"Greenville has one more quite interesting feature. I have termed it 'the great disappearing act'. It goes like this. In the spring of the year you can drive for miles out in the country and see acres and acres of corn and other crops and an occasional roof of a house or tobacco barn over the top. Looks pretty desolate doesn't it? Drive that same road in the late fall and you are in for a bit surprise. Hidden behind all the fields are houses and people and swingsets. The landscape is not static but ever-changing and that is another remarkable contrast.

' . . . Greenville is a good place to be and despite all the adjustments my wife and I had to make, I think we are gonna stick around.

Facing South

Writer's Ideal Settings To Portray Characters

JACKSON, Miss. — Novelist and short story writer Eudora Welty says that weddings, funerals and family reunions form a perfect setting for her characters, who are mostly small-town Southerners: "To portray their strenghts and petty imperfections, I need a small stage."

Among Miss Welty's best known works are several novels including "Delta Wedding," "Losing Battles," and "The Optimist's Daughter," and short story collections such as "Golden Apples," and "The Wide Net."

Miss Welty still lives in her family home in Jackson, a place, she says, where nothing much happens. This presents no problems for the writer's imagination, however, since she prefers to use incidents from everyday life rather than overpowering cataclysmic events in her works. A master at representing Southern speech and idiom, she may make use of such seemingly trivial phenomena as the chatter that goes on in beauty parlors. "People in my stories often invent stories to amuse themselves. I see folly in those people who are always going around, trying to solve others' problems."

The Natchez Trace — where one can follow Andrew Jackson's escapades from Nashville to the Mississippi river port — forms the historical backdrop for some of her stories. But to Miss Welty, the past is not as provocative as the present.

"I prefer to focus on what my characters stand for, rather than simply showing them as historical beings. Names are evocative in themselves, also giving social condition. I find that the greatest appeal comes from the here and now. People I meet today provide my most exciting challenges." But that doesn't mean she uses real people in her works: "Real folks I find far too complicated for what I need in a story."

Miss Welty is frequently asked, "Which comes first, the moral or the story." The answer is, "always the story." Although she never sets out to teach a lesson, readers often do learn and gain insights from what they've read. The moral is implicit. Wetty also likes to make use of dreams which reveal the inner person. "If a dream sequence seems to fit, then I use it."

Miss Welty speaks of her work as an art and a craft. "Writing is hard work, requiring patience and rewriting. When I've written a lot, then I'm tired, just as I am after spading." Though she has been prolific, she has also suffered an occasional "dry spell."

She prefers to write her stories first by hand, then type the work soon to get a sense of balance and proportion. She feels this makes her more objective. "I can think best with something on the page to work with, and I do revise a lot. When I read stories aloud, I can see their weaknesses."

To write as one's occupation requires a great deal of solitude, but Miss Welty has not allowed her life to become lonely. "Lots of people come into my life, not all literary ones." She likes especially to encourage young writers and guide them through pitfalls. She often makes campus appearanaces and has belonged to a local writers' club.

When Miss Welty first began to write and mail out manuscripts, she had the same self-doubts and misgivings as anyone else. Once, she threw a manuscript into the fire. It took six years of trying before she published her first short story.

Back during the Depression, she became a photographer for the WPA. She gathered material through pictures which helped crystalize her sense of Mississippi's history. This job also provided a fine opportunity to observe people and how they behave. Miss Welty traveled to small towns, farms, ate at boarding houses, and listened to tales on the courthouse square.

Though Welty's Jackson friends seem, at times, awed by her fame, at other times they appear unimpressed. To many she is just their friend Eudora who brings them beans and Japonicas she has raised, and who cares for sick relatives.

Welty writes about the south because that is what she knows. But at the same time she seems to be writing about "everyone." "I have travelled widely, and I have found that the people in the North are not as heartless as they are often portrayed. Yet the South is the base where I come from. I need it as a base, a touchstone."

The Trauma Of Thirty Not To Be Sneezed At

I made a significant passage the other day — I turned 30. Suddenly, I found myself a member of the generation against which I had protested in the 60s. My mirror warped, and I bought my first bottle of Geritol.

The trauma of this event is nothing to wheeze at, especially at five in the morning after a night of walking the floor with a sick baby. When Phillip rolled over and said, "Happy Birthday," as I crawled into bed, I was not particularly gratified.

"Oh, you remembered. How thoughtful of you," I said from between clenched teeth.

"You didn't think I'd forget the big three-O."

"You could have gone all year without mentioning that."

"What's the big deal? Most of us live through it."

Yes, I thought, but at what cost?

The advent of dawn did nothing to lighten my misery. "Look at these crow's feet," I said as I peered into the mirror. "It's disgusting. And I have a new wrinkle too."

"Where?"

"This is ridiculous, Gail. You've got to get a grip on yourself."

I bared my teeth. "What Kind? Poly?"

The morning went from bad to worse. I washed my hair, and half of it seemed to fall out in my brush. My neck was stiff from the night of half-dozing in a rocking chair, and I was certain I had developed rheumatism. Even my tummy-control pantyhose couldn't stand the pressure.

Just as I was ready to call the drugstore to see if I was eligible for a senior citizen's discount, Phillip called me. "I just wanted you to know that I think you look better now than when I married you," he said.

It was a lie, but it worked. I felt better. I began to think that I might have a few years left before I had to crawl into bed and age gracefully. I perked up so much that I decided to spend the rest of the day in the park with the children.

The cool breeze and bright sunshine bouyed my spirits even more. As I sat in the grass and played with the baby, I couldn't believe I had been so silly. After all, getting upset about birthdays was something out of the Victorian Era.

Meg, meanwhile, was playing her favorite game. "We're orphans." she called from the monkey bars. "You're the big sister, and I'm the little sister. Our poor parents were ated up by a fearsome jabberwock when they were only 30. That's very young, isn't it?"

I smiled. "Well, I think so. That's how old I am."

She gave me the once-over. "Then I think I had better make them 20."

Forming A Govm't Is Not Always To Govern

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan will discover when he takes command in January that there is at least one rose among the thorns of office, and for this he can thank his predecessor. Mr. Carter's reforms of the Civil Service seem to be working. Possibly, just possibly, Mr. Reagan may be able not only to form a government, but also to govern.

If things work out so happily, Mr. Reagan will be the first president since Franklin Roosevelt to bring off the trick. Harry Truman railed against the Washington bureaucracy. Dwight Eisenhower successfully had commanded whole armies, but he could not get civilians in the Navy Department to do his bidding. John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford at various times voiced the same complaint: They gave orders, but nothing happened.

Their troubles were rooted in the same intractable soil. Presidents have power to appoint only 2 or 3 percent of federal personnel. The 97 or 98 percent who do the work — or as the case may be, do not do the work — hold their jobs under the rules of Civil Service. And until Mr. Carter came along, it was virtually impossible to fire even one of them.

The first fruits of any "reform" should be approached with caution, but even so, some figures recently obtained by the Washington Star are encouraging. Since enactment of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, the number of federal workers fired for all causes has increased 10 percent, and the number fired for incompetence has soared by 15 fold.

In 1977, the Star reports, 9,700 workers were dropped from federal payrolls for one reason or another, but only 115 of them were fired for poor performance. In the 1980 fiscal year, it appears, 10,700 were dropped, and 1,738 of them were ousted for failure to measure up. In the January-March quarter of 1980 alone, 709 incompetents were flat-out fired. That leaves only a hundred thousand to go.

This is bound to be good news for an incoming administration that hopes to institute some reforms of its own. Mr. Reagan will be able to fill roughly 4,000 top positions in the executive agencies, but unless his own supercrats are able to direct the people down below, his most ambitious programs slowly will lose momentum in the bureaucratic goo.

My own wistful thought is that the Carter reforms, admirable as they are, should have been much extended. What was so wrong in the bad old days? There was a time when political victors could turn the old rascals out, the better to put their own rascals in. This was called the spoils system, and it developed an undeservedly poor reputation.

For a specific example, consider the postal service. Can anyone truly contend that today's U.S. Postal Service, dominated by powerful unions with costly work rules, is more efficient than the old Post Office Department? When local postmasters, clerks and carriers were political appointees, they had to perform. Party bosses would not tolerate conspicuous incompetence. Verily it is said that those who live by the ward may die by the ward, but the perils and rewards of old-fashioned party politics provided incentives we do not have today.

To pursue the point: Within the Department of Agriculture the Soil Conservation Service employs some 13,000 workers. Mr. Reagan can appoint only eight of them. All the rest are untouchables under the Civil Service. It might be a most salutary development if Republican chairmen, state by state, had power to reward their faithful workers with at least the 788 jobs in grades 13 through 16. This way lies party accountability.

Alas, our politics have become so sanitized and antiseptic that any such proposal would set off cries of wild alarm. Government unions would howl to high heavens. The folks at Common Cause would be aghast. Ralph Nader would take to his couch in despair. But when a Republican president gave the word to a Republican secretary, who gave the word to Republican subordinates in regions, states and counties, by damn something would happen down on the farm. And if things went badly, 788 hungry Democrats would be waiting in the wings for 1984.

Grim Search Goes On For Fire Victims . . .

where gamblers had played the slots and broken, blackened statues of women in Grecian attire holding the masks of comedy and tragedy.

The blaze broke out in a large kitchen that supplies a half-dozen hotel restaurants, said Clark County Fire Chief Roy Parrish, who ruled out arson. Kitchen employees were being interviewed Saturday in an effort to determine exactly what sparked the holocaust.

Dinsman discounted reports that the fire started in a Keno board, and said that if the electric gambling device did explode, it was because of heat generated by the fire as it spread.

The Clark County coroner's office said Saturday morning that about 50 of the dead had been positively identified as the search for bodies continued in charred closets and blackened stairways of the monolithic 2,076-room pink granite hotel on Las Vegas' famed Strip.

"This building has a basement, a sub-basement and closets all over the place. It's so big — there are places you'd think we'd never find a person, but that's where we might find them," Dinsman said.

The injured included 13 hospitalized firemen, who suffered smoke inhalation, cuts and broken ribs.

There was no warning and no apparent fire alarm for the thousands of guests trapped inside after the fire broke out at 7:15 a.m. PST Friday. The blaze, after racing through the kitchen, exploded in a "wall of flame" in the casino, apparently destroyed the fire alarm system.

Suffocating smoke almost instantly churned through all 26 floors by way of open stairwells that acted as chimneys. Flames were limited to the first two floors. Most of the people who died were killed by smoke inhalation on the upper floors, investigators said Saturday — and by their own panic.

Some of them jumped from as high as the 17th floor, even though the fire never really threatened them. One elderly couple fell to their deaths "holding hands," and one man tried to descend on knotted bedsheets but died when he fell from the 10th floor, said Fire Capt. Wayne Littlefield.

"People panicked," said a security guard. "We got out a lot of people...a lot of them. You did what you could." The guard, who wouldn't give his name, shook his head sadly and walked away.

Gov. Robert List, who toured the burned-out area Friday, said he was appointing a commission to study whether the city's standards for fire alarm systems were sufficient.

Flames apparently destroyed the amplifiers on the manually operated fire alarm system before they could go into action,

The chimney-like stairwells were open because of construction at the hotel, and Dinsman said the sprinklers — located only on the basement level, first floor and top floor — also failed to work.

Damage was in the millions, and authorities said it might be a year before the seven-year-old $106 million hotel could reopen.

Gallup Poll

Others want to see presidential election campaigns "cleaned up":

"I don't think it is right to get up there and run the other person down," commented one survey respondent. "Why can't they just spell out their own platform — what they are going to do — and let the other person do the same."

Said another: "The candidates should talk about the issues and stop back-stabbing."

Among other suggestions for changes are the following:

1. Eliminate of the Electoral College, basing the election of the president on the popular vote.

2. Replace the many state primaries with a single national primary or with regional primaries.

3. Increase the number of TV debates and build these into the electoral process.

4. Try to discourage the TV networks from making early projections of the results prior to the close of polls in the Western states. Or have a single closing time for polls across the nation.

Single National Primary Favored

One of the changes called for by a substantial number of persons interviewed in the current survey is a single national primary. With the number of presidential primaries having more than doubled over the last 12 years, from 17 in 1968 to 35 this year, the American people continue to favor a plan which would replace the many state nomination races with a single national primary, allowing voters in all 50 states to choose the nominees by direct popular vote.

In a survey conducted earlier this year, 66 percent were in favor of such a plan, while 24 percent were opposed and 10 percent did not express an opinion.

The proposal for a nationwide primary has had the backing of the American public for nearly three decades. As early as 1952 Americans gave their support to such a plan, by an overwhelming 6-to-1 margin. Each of seven national Gallup surveys conducted since that time has shown a heavy majority in favor of the plan.

In all these surveys, including the latest, the plan has had bipartisan backing. Currently, 64 percent of Democrats, 62 percent of Republicans and 72 percent of independents say they favor a nationwide presidential primary.

visited ECU, were, "impressed with the beauty of the campus. The people we met were very cooperative."

The only statement made by Brewer, regarding the University of Louisville possibility, came on Thursday.

He said then that, "there have no offers or negotiations...and I need more information before I can determine my interest in the position. Even if the new position is declined, looking at some depth at another institution provides new ideas which should be of benefit to the school. This attitude, I believe, is commonplace in the field of higher education."

He added, "For as many years as I have been in administration, I have encouraged faculty and staff to investigate professional possibilities. By comparing institutions, they either reaffirm their dedication to their present institution or move to new challenges."

The University of Louisville, formerly supported by the City of Louisville, became a Kentucky state school in 1970. With 20,300 students, the urban institution in the heart of the City of Louisville, has 14 schools and academic units — including medicine, dentistry, engineering, and law — with at least 40 percent of the degrees awarded being graduate level or professional.

And Friday, the UL basketball team was rated number three in the country.

The salary of the former president, James Grier Miller, who retired, was $60,000 a year, plus other benefits, UL spokesmen said.

Iran's Clergy Demands Obedience

By United Press International

Iran's Islamic clerics warned that all politicians, including the nation's president, must obey their commands, in a powerful counterattack on President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr for criticizing their interference in government affairs.

The long and complex struggle between Iran's Moslem militants and the moderates, cooled temporarily by Iran's war with Iraq, burst into the open again Friday with the uncompromising reply to the president's attacks.

For months, Iran refused to consider the fate of the 52 American hostages, now in their 385th day of captivity, because of the infighting between the two groups, but there was no indication if the latest struggle would affect the outcome of the long ordeal for the captives.

Bani-Sadr, the leader of the moderates, did not retreat, saying in a magazine interview Friday he would not back down from his charge Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, chosen for his post by the Islamic militants who control parliament, was an incompetent.

The clerics hit back at Bani-Sadri in a prayer sermon in Qom attended by Rajai and his entire Cabinet. Ayatollah Ashiq Hussein Montazeri, Iran's second most powerful cleric after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, warned the Cabinet against "plots" to split the "progressive clergy" in remarks clearly intended to refer to Bani-Sadr.

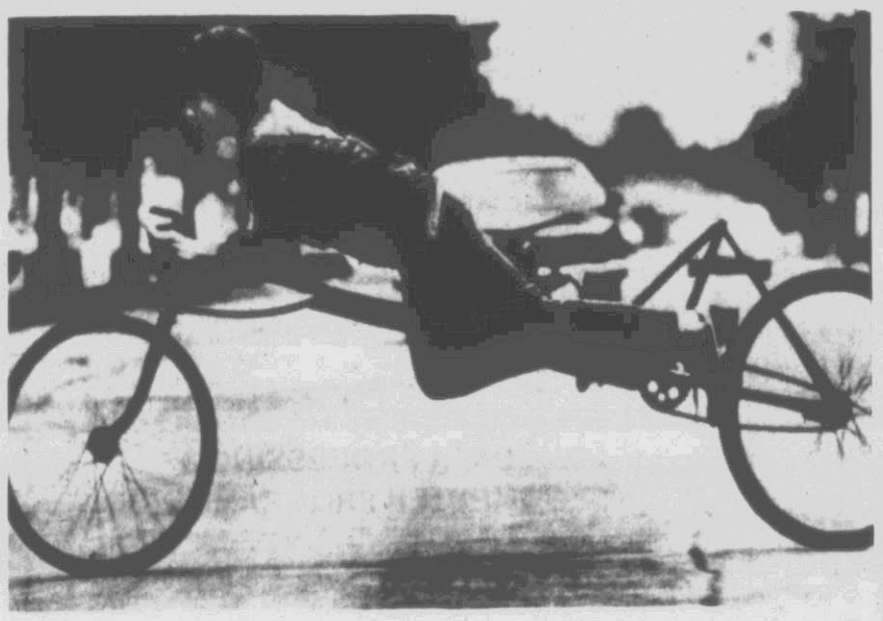

"A ruler under Islam should have complete supervision of all government organs," Tehran Radio quoted Montazeri as saying. "Moslems should try to strengthen the hand of their religious leaders in their onerous responsibilities ... Those in charge of Islamic government should act only in the direction of responsibility to God," he said.

In Tehran, another prominent clergyman, Hojjatolesam Sanei, told a prayer rally that, "respect for the elected president notwithstanding ... all should obey" their religious leaders, especially Khomeini.

"The leader (Khomeini) can do anything he wishes. His decrees, like those from Allah, must be obeyed," Sanei said.

Bani-Sadr earlier this week accused the clerics of instituting a reign of terror in Iran and sending their opponents off to prison "as easily as a man sips water."

Tehran Radio also reported Rajai had met with special U.N. envoy Olof Palme who is seeking an end to the Persian Gulf war and asked him how member nations could raise such an outcry over the freedom of the U.S. hostages, then fail to protest the war.

Alarmed Over Nuclear Capability

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.N. General Assembly committee has approved a resolution expressing "deep alarm" over a report before the assembly that "has established South Africa's capability to manufacture nuclear weapons."

The assembly's main political committee Friday voted 124-0, with 13 abstentions, in favor of the resolution, sponsored by 20 African countries. The vote virtually guaranteed the resolution's later passage by the 154-nation assembly.

Poland Names Catholic To Post

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's communist government has a named a prominent Roman Catholic as a deputy premier and dropped four Cabinet ministers in its fourth major shakeup since last summer's labor rebellion reshaped Poland's future.

Jerzy Ozdowski, who was received by Polish-born Pope John Paul II last week, was named by the Parliament Friday to serve as the deputy premier responsible for family and social affairs.

Ozdowski became the first Catholic layman to hold such a post since the communists took power here after World War II. The last prominent Catholic to serve as deputy premier was Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who fled to the West in 1946.

Catholics and other groups in Poland are allowed seats in Parliament, but under a membership formula the Communist Party is assured a legislative majority.

Ozdowski, a 55-year-old economist and two-term member of Parliament is not a member of the Communist Party. Senior Cabinet posts in Poland and elsewhere in the Soviet bloc normally are held by party members.

His promotion came as the Parliament, acting on Premier Jozef Pinkowski's recommendations, fired Labor Minister Maria Milczarek, Construction Minister Edward Barszcz and minister without portfolio Maceij Wirowski and accepted the resignation of Health Minister Marian Sliwinski, the official PAP news agency reported.

Parliament approved Jerzy Brzostek, deputy mayor of Warsaw, as construction minister. Deputy Labor Minister Jerzy Obodowski was elevated to minister of the department and Stanislaw Ciosek was named minister without portfolio in charge of overseeing labor relations.

The health minister's post was left vacant, and Vice Minister Tadeusz Szelachowski was named acting chief of the ministry pending selection of a new minister.

To Resume Oil Flow

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish and Iraqi technicians have begun testing the sabotaged oil pipeline from Iraq to Turkey's Mediterranean coast and expect it to resume pumping next week, sources in Ankara said.

The sources said Turkish authorities were keeping information on the pipeline "under wraps," apparently fearing that news of a resumption of a pumping could instigate another sabotage attempt.

The line, capable of carrying 700,000 barrels of crude oil a day, was blown up by Iraqi Kurdish rebels just inside the Turkish border shortly after the Iran-Iraq war began Sept. 22. There also were reports that Iranian jets had bombed the line inside Iraq.

The damage at Silopi reportedly was the work of the Kurdish Liberation Army. The Kurds in both Iraq and Iran have been fighting bloody secessionist battles with the central governments. Turkish Kurds have been peaceful.

There are an estimate 15 million Kurds living in the common border regions of Turkey, Irqn and Iraq. About 7.5 million are estimated to live in Turkey.

Officials at the Turkish Petroleum Organization, a state agency, could not be reached to comment on a resumption of pumping. Several Turkish news organizations said they had been asked by martial law authorities not to publish stories about the pipeline.

SELLERS BILL OF RIGHTS

The consumer who has gold and silver to sell has a right to expect certain things from the dealer he does business with. Coin & Ring Man has adopted and pledges to follow these principals or "rights" that should apply to the seller.

1. The seller has the right to do business with an honest, reputable, well-established dealer.
2. The seller has the right to have his merchandise weighed accurately on official government approved scales.
3. The seller has the right to sell his merchandise to a dealer who is fully licensed by the state and county.
4. The seller has a right to sell his goods in a secure environment where he feels protected from theft or harassment.
5. The seller has a right to expect courteous service from well-trained professionals who are proficient at evaluating and appraising gold and silver merchandise, and who will gladly test any unmarked gold or silver.
6. The seller has the right to expect consistently fair prices in line with the market price of gold and silver.
7. The seller has the right to sell his goods to a dealer who is a permanent member of the community and who contributes to its growth and welfare.

FBI 'Hotline' Is Now Active

Robert L. Pence, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in North Carolina, said here Friday that FBI "hot-line" at the Charlotte office (704-372-5488), since it was installed on September 8, has received some 100 calls and, "resulted in 40 significant investigations."

Several of the calls, he explained, have been from the Greenville area.

The hot-line was installed to make the reporting of public corruption and white colar crime easier.

Pence described white collar crime as, "a major problem," and added, "if we don't get the word on it," and public corruption, "it's very difficult to address it."

One case reported through the hot-line, Pence said, involves a, "major coropration fraud...in excess of several million dollars in North Carolina."

In addition to that particular case, which is under investigation, Pence said calls have dealt with, "advanced fee swindles...fraud by wire," in which individuals or corporations pay a fee for someone to, "locate" a large amount of money for them to borrow, then make off with the fee and fail to produce a loan; corruption of public officials; bank examiner schemes in which someone poses as a law enforcement officer, has a person withdraw money from a bank and makes off with it; and "kickbacks and pay-offs," and other abuses in federal programs such as Medicare, Medicaid, and CETA (Comprehensive Employement and Training Act) programs.

Pence said the FBI had rather have hot-line users identify themselves. "It gives us a head start," in the investigation by allowing agents to get more information.

But he emphasized, "The important thing is to call. We're happy to talk to them." The hot-line, he added,"is one of the only techniques we can use when crimes are not readily noticable." The other, he pointed out, is undercover investigators.

Medicare abuses, according to Pence, "is one gigantic problem," and, "one of our new major target areas."

If a crime is reported, Pence emphasized, "we will listen and we will do something about it. We won't back away."

Japanese Hotel Fire Death Toll At 42

KAWAJI, Japan (AP) — Rescuers digging through the still-crumbling ruins of the burned Kawaji Prince Hotel found eight more bodies Saturday, bringing the death toll in Japan's worst post-war hotel fire to 42. Police said three people were still listed as missing three days after fire swept the four-story, 55-room resort hotel in this northern Japanese town. The three are presumed dead, officials said. Twenty-four people were injured in the fire, which broke out Thursday afternoon and destroyed the hotel. Thirteen of the injured had broken limbs from jumping from windows to escape and were hospitalized, authorities said. About 120 people, most of them elderly members of a tour group from Tokyo, were staying at the hot springs hotel when the fire broke out. Police said no foreign guests were registered at the hotel.

Historic San Francisco Club Burns

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As hundreds of Fisherman's Wharf tourists looked on, a five-alarm blaze gutted the historic San Francisco Rowing Club, injuring seven firefighters and causing $1.2 million in damage. It took firefighters about three hours Friday night to control the fire, which started under a wooden pier behind the 108-year-old club, said Fire Chief Andrew Casper. Officials were unsure of the cause of the fire, but Assistant District Attorney Tom Crary said arson investigators were looking for a man with a long red coat and no shoes who lived under the pier. The blaze spread quickly through the aged wood building, Casper said, burning boats and threatening a neighboring swimming club. Firefighters smashed windows and vented ceilings and walls to keep the flames out of the swimming club. City Parks Director Tom Malloy said the club had operated in Aquatic Park since 1872 and had been in its present building since the 1930s.

Death Toll Climbs In Italian Train Wreck

VIBO VALENTIA, Italy (AP) — Searchers cutting through the crumpled coaches of two wrecked passenger trains recovered five more bodies Saturday, bringing to 25 the death toll in the bizarre chain-reaction collision near this southern Italian town, police reported. More than 110 other people were injured Friday when two high-speed trains slammed into a string of boxcars that had been lost by a passing freight train. Nearby hospitals reported many of the injured were in grave condition. Police say they believe there are more bodies in the twisted steel wreckage. A heavy-duty crane was brought in today to lift a 120-ton locomotive which ended up on two passenger coaches, police said, adding that searchers were still using blow torches and crowbars in an effort to retrieve the victims. The hospitals were packed throughout Friday night with screaming and crying families of the victims, police said.

Cannon Cup To Dr. Coe

RALEIGH — Dr. Joffre Lanning Coe of UNC-Chapel Hill received the coveted Ruth Coltrane Cannon Cup for his contributions as a scholar, an educator and as a leader in North Carolina archaeology. The award was presented Thursday at the day-long meeting of the Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina, one of the several events taking place during N. C. Culture Week.

Also receiving a Cannon Cujp was the board of "Fort Defiance" of Caldwell County for the authentic restoration of the county's oldest building, the former home of General William Lenoir.

The $1,000 Stedman Incentive Grant went to the Person Place Preservation Society, Inc. for restoration of the house that was the forerunner of today's Louisburg College. A new award, a special recognition award, went to the N. C. National Bank Corporation in recognition of the bank's contribution in renovation of commercial structures in Washington, New Bern, Raleigh, Durham, Statesville and Reidsville.

In addition to these awards, 12 individuals and organizations were recognized for outstanding preservation achivement.

Bible Week Proclaimed

Mayor Don McGlohon proclaimed Nov. 23-30 as Bible Week here and urged "all citizens to participate in this annual interfaith observance by reading the Bible and developing a study program to become familiar with its teachings and principles."

The mayor pointed out that "the Bible continues to be the world's best seller, yet millions of Americans remain ignorant of its teachings." He suggested that "this ignorance and the rise of secular humanism have blunted the influence of the Bible in shaping morals and values."

McGlohon pointed to the "great need for a recovery of the teachings of the Bible, especially the Ten Commandants and the Sermon on the Mount."

The Laymen's National Bible Committee, he said, "has developed an excellent mass media campaign to promote Bible reading and study, particularly among young people."

Stokes Power Knocked Out

STOKES — Customers of Greenville Utilities in the Stokes area were without power for close to three hours early Thursday as GUC workmen repaired two utility polls here that were broken when a car struck them around 1:30 a.m.

Malcolm Green, assistant director of Greenville Utilities, said that the car-pole collision did not short out the main power line but left wires hanging across the road. Crews were dispatched and one of the poles was replaced around 3 a.m. and repairs to the second pole were completed about 6 a.m., he said.

Green explained that workmen had to "kill the circuit" to make the final repairs and customers were without power during the overall repair period.

According to the spokesman, customers living in Stokes and on out to the area of the county line toward Robersonville, as well as towards Williamston, were affected by the problem.

Conley Group Hears Speaker

Mrs. Gail Wainright of Little's Nursery spoke at the November meeting of the D.H. Conley Chapter of FHA/HERO.

Jan Carmon welcomed the group and introduced the speaker whose theme was "Decorating for the Holidays."

Mrs. Wainwright instructed the group in bow tying and wreath making using a straw form. She shared various types of homemade and purchased tree decorations urged each member to experiment using creativity in preparing decorations.

One of the highlights was homemade hand-painted dough ornaments which she suggested as a good activity for family participation.

Meeting Has Been Cancelled

The special interest meeting "From the Kitchen With Love" — Christmas gifts scheduled for November 25 — has been cancelled.

The program on "Holiday Foods With the Microwave" will be held Wednesday, December 17, at the Agricultural Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth Street, Room 201, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. The program will be given by Miss Addie R. Gore, Home Economics Extension Agent. Call 758-1196 to register by December 11.

Bombshell Sex Symbol Mae West Dies At Age 87

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Legendary Hollywood bombshell Mae West — who starred in Vaudeville, plays and films as a brassy, bosomy sex symbol of the 1920s and '30s — died Saturday at her apartment here at the age of 87.

The aging sex queen died just three weeks after leaving a hospital where she had spent three months recuperating from a mild stroke stroke that left her speech impaired.

Her death at 10:30 a.m. PST Saturday in her Hollywood apartment was confirmed by Conrad Joshua, an operator at the front desk of the Ravenswood Apartments.

After a 27-year hiatus from filmmaking, she returned to the big screen twice in the 1970s. "Myra Breckenridge" in 1970 was her first picture since 1943, and in 1977 she played a film star on her sixth honeymoon in "Sextette."

But for the most part she was rarely seen in public in recent years. She lived in palatial splendor near Beverly Hills — almost a recluse — on enormous wealth resulting from shrewd real estate investments and top salaries in her years as a star.

Miss West made millions muttering spicy comments, while her chassis moved like a parked car with the motor running.

She had perfected an inimitable style, although many tried: the silken, hip-swinging walk; the languid glance; the lethargic but meaningful gestures, and the tantalizing drawl.

And there were her sybaritic phrases such as: "Beulah, peel me a grape" or the famous invitation she issued to Cary Grant in "I'm No Angel" in 1933 — "Come up and see me sometime."

MAE WEST . . . sex symbol of the 1920s and 30s, died Saturday in her Hollywood apartment. Miss West was 87. (AP Laserphoto)

It was in the 1930s that she made herself a sex goddess and an American institution — a violet-eyed blonde with a figure her press agent said matched the statue of the Venus de Milo.

It was said that the only person who ever upstaged her in a film was comedian W.C. Fields, who was her partner in several movies, including the comedy classic "My Little Chickadee" in 1939.

She claimed a contribution to a change in American lifestyles:

"I was the first person to bring sex out in the open," she said. "Before I came along nobody could print the word on billboards."

In fact, she opened on Broadway in 1926 in a play she had written: "Sex." Police raided it, it folded, and she was sent to jail for eight days, but earned national fame wih her demands — finally granted — that jailers provide her silk underwear in her cell at Welfare Island.

Ironically, Miss West deplored the current trend toward sex and nudity. "I don't approve of it," she said. "It's just not right."

She noted she never had to undress to exude sensuality but could give that impression with the most innocent and highest-necked dresses.

"I didn't have to show myself naked, and I never did," she said.

Miss West's first hit performance was as the dance hall queen in the 1928 play "Diamond Lil." After she hit Hollywood in 1932, she was a top star from her debut in "Night After Night" to 1940, when she starred with Fields in "Chickadee."

Many of her films have become classics of the late show. To the end of her life she got fan mail — including, she said, proposals of marriage from teenagers who had seen her only on television.

The Mae West style left its mark. In 1940 Royal Air Force pilots nicknamed their inflatable life jackets Mae West; the name persists. Decades of Hollywood starlets copied her hair, her strut, her decolletage. But, said Miss West:

"They don't really know how to imitate me. They don't see the comic side of sex."

At 17, Miss West was married, briefly, to a song-and-dance man named Frank Wallace. They had no children and she never remarried.

Philippine Detainees End Hunger Strike

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — More than 130 detainees who call themselves "political prisoners" of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' martial law regime have ended their 19-day hunger strike, military and church sources have reported.A spokesman for Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime Sin said one of the prisoners sent a note to the cardinal saying the fast ended Friday. Sin visited the prisoners at the Bicutan military stockade on Wednesday and told them Marcos had promised "many" of them would soon be freed. An officer at Bicutan, who identified himself as Henry Rapina, said all the prisoners were eating today.

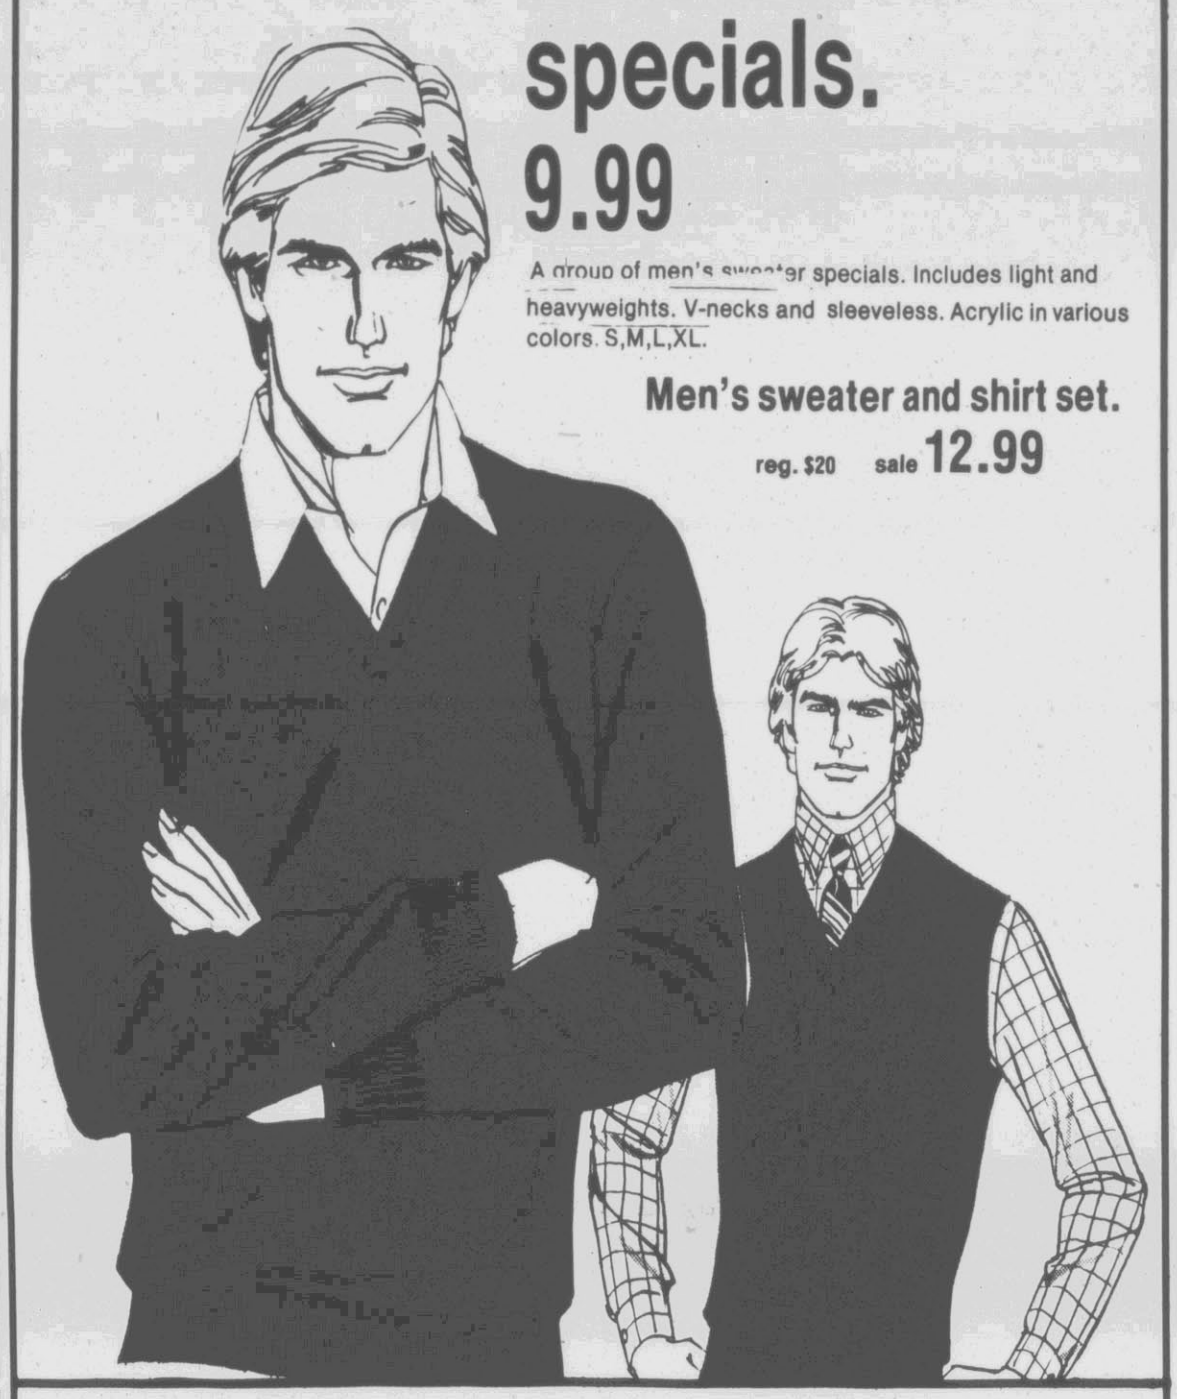

Italians Arrested On Espionage Charges

ROME (AP) — Nine Italians, eight of them employees of an electronics firm, have been arrested on espionage charges, accused of trying to sell plans for a new radar system intended for NATO, police said Saturday. Police sources said the system was a "highly advanced, three-dimensional" radar developed at the request of the technical-scientific commission of the Italian Defense Ministry. They said negotiations to sell the technology to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the United States for $120 million have been under way. Police said eight of those arrested, all Italians, were employees of the state-owned Selenia electronics firm, which manufactures radar systems, missiles and electronic warfare equipment. The ninth was an Italian former pilot.

Book Week Activities

BOOKS ALIVE! — Children and teachers at G.R. Whitfield Elementary School, Grimesland, dressed as their favorite book characters and launched balloons Friday afternoon in celebration of Book Week. Indoor activities were held in the gym prior the the balloon launching. Parents were invited to view the children's costumes, hear the band and join in the festivities. South Greenville Celebrated "Book's Alive" Theme

"Books Alive" was the theme used by South Greenville School for the celebration of Children's Book Week last week.

An assembly program to kick off the special week was held Friday, Nov. 14. An introduction to the Book Week Song, written by Mrs. Mattox's fifth grade to the tune of "Upside Down," was the highlight. Local dermatologist Dr. Cameron Smith, author of a recently published book titled, "Your Skin — Indoors and Outdoors, gave a talk/slide presentation. This was an assembly to initiate the school-wide reading contest that will end Dec. 18.

Each of the three wings of the school emphasized a special author — Beverly Cleary, Betsy Byars and Judy Blume. Each classroom door was decorated with a scene from one of these authors' books.

Book Week activities were climaxed with an assembly held Friday in which each class gave a production which related to reading, books, and/or Book Week.

School Group Takes Trip

Second and third graders of W.H. Robinson Elementary of Winterville visited the North Carolina Museum of Natural History in Raleigh.

Mrs. Sue Worthington's second graders and Myra Pinner's third graders went on the field trip as a continuation of a study on animals being done by their student teachers.

Highlights of the Raleigh visit were George, a Barthum python and a tour of the Capitol where the students met and talked with Governor Jim Hunt.

Others who assisted the group on the trip included Nancy Lovelace and Debbie Smith, student teachers; Mrs. Betty Lou Brock; Sheila Barrett and Johnny Pinner, assistant principal for A.G. Cox, who drove the bus.

School Observed Nat'l Book Week

Students and teachers at Third Street Elementary School observed Children's Book week in several ways.

Hansel and Gretel and Little Red Riding Hood were shown on Monday. Tuesday, the students and faculty dressed as their favorite book characters; Thursday, the Superintendent of Greenville City Schools, Glen L. Cox, shared a story with all the students; and Friday was the climax when students and teachers released balloons. Attatched to the balloons were notes asking the finder to respond by writing a letter telling about their favorite book.

CBC TO MEET

The Citizens Bikeway Committee will meet Tuesday, Nov. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall. Future meetings of the committee will also be held at city hall, rather than at Jaycee Park as in the past.

Toilet Seat With Silver Stolen

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Somebody has snatched the toilet seat out of the ladies' room at the Mark Twain Cafeteria again.

A plastic toilet seat with more than $200 worth of silver coins embedded in it is missing. The theft was reported Friday and authorities suspect a "well-groomed" woman was the culprit. She apparently used a blowtorch to remove the silvery seat.

"This is the most bizarre thing I've ever heard of in my life," cafeteria manager Dan Beck said Friday.

"There were only a handful of people still eating here at the time it must have occurred," said Spiros Angelakis, cafeteria owner. "We figure it might have been done by a couple that had a baby wrapped up in a baby carriage.

Thanksgiving Service

The annual Thanksgiving Eve Service of the Greenville Ministerial Association will be held at the Oakmont Baptist Church on November 26. The service will begin at 8 p.m.

The Rev. Frank Gentry, pastor, First Pentecostal Holiness Church, will bring the message. Others participating in the service will be the Rev. John R. Price, rector, St. Timothy's Episcopal Church; the Rev. Glen A. Holm, pastor, Holy Trinity United Methodist Church; and the Rev. E. Gordon Conklin, pastor of the host church.

The Rev. Gentry is a native of Hopewell, Va. and a graduate of Holm's College of the Bible in Greenville, S.C. He has pastored churches in Virginia and North Carolina before coming to Greenville in 1975. In addition to his pastoral duties, Gentry serves as a member of the board of publications for the International Pentecostal Holiness Church and as vice president of the Greenville Ministerial Association.

Special music will be presented by the Chancel Choir of Oakmont Baptist Church under the direction of David Faber, accompanied by Diane Bridger.

The offering received at this service has been designated to help the needy of Greenville in emergency energy situations. It will be held in escrow by the association and shared through Real Crisis Intervention, Inc.

The public is invited to attend.

REV. FRANK GENTRY

ECHSA Meeting

The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet December 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

Included on the agenda is the appointment of a nominating committee, the confirmation of new governing body members, and various project reviews.

"LA PERICHOLE" . . . a happy, lilting Offenbach operetta, will be presented at 8 p.m. today at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. Young singers from the National Opera Company of Raleigh will be supported by the ECU Orchestra in this production. The public is invited and there is no admission charged.

Joint Concert Of Folk, Christmas Music

The Mens' Glee Club and the University Chorale are together presenting a concert of folk songs and Christmas music at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, November 25, in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend. Seating will be on a first-come first-seated basis.

Edward Glenn is director of the Men's Glee Club and Charles W. Moore directs the University Chorale. Danny Dial is pianist for the glee club.

The concert will open with a Christmas medley of Nanini's "Hodie," "Good Christian Men Rejoice," Palestrina's "Adoramus te, Christe," an old English air, "What Child is This?," and Mendelssohn's "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing." This will be followed by three Brahms' German folk songs — "I'd Enter Your Garden," "The Fiddler," and "How Sad Flows the Stream;" Palestrina's "Gloria Patria;" and Pierce's "How Still He Rests." Vocalists for the Pierce piece are Vanessa Parker and Suzanne Quick, with Penny Hartlaub, oboe and Peggy Depasquale, Dee Ann Frazier, and Millie Shinn on wind chimes.

Pinkham's "Evergreen" will feature Phil Brown, organ, Peggy Depasquale, harpsichord, Sandy Paternotte and Vanessa Parker, guitars, and Russ Allen, chimes. Ira Jacobs will be soloist for an arrangement of Wagner's "Lowlands; Doug Newell will be soloist for Moeran's "Ivy and Holly;" and in Bullard's "Winter Song" Tim Ward will be soloist with Danny Dial, pianist.

Other selections on the program include the Shaw/Parker arrangement of "Vive L'Amour;" Pitoni's "Cantate Domino;" the de Paur arrangement of "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming;" and the traditional "O Come, O Come Emmanuel."

In a joint presentation by the Men's Glee Club and the University Chorale of Hale's "Et Les Cloches Sonnaient," soloists will be Russ Allen, chimes and Jeff Hargett, piano.

Boys Choir To Perform Today

The third annual Greenville Boys Choir Vesper Service is being presented at 5 p.m. today at Immanuel Baptist Church. The public is invited to attend. There is no admission charge; however, an offering will be taken to help defray expenses.

The 38-member Boys Choir, directed by Thomas (Tom) E. Hawley, Jr., will be accomnpanied by Diane Bridger of Suffolk, Va., a student in the School of Music, ECU, majoring in organ performance.

Selections to be performed in the Vesper Service will include Franklin Ritter's "Praise God;" J. S. Bach's "Now Let All the Earth Adore Thee;" "God of Great and God of Small by Natalie Sleeth;" Hal Hopson's "Oh Praise the Lord;" and "Hear my Words" by Stephen Paulus.

Roy Tripp will be soloist for Frances Williams' "Give Thanks"; and an ensemble — Cam Evans, Roy Tripp, Dewey Dunn, Bert Threewitts, Paul Sullivan and Scott Greene — will be featured in Georg Strattner's "Father Lead Me Day by Day."

Psalm readers in the service will be Donald Cherry, Tyrone Savage, Torrance Greene, Robert MacKenna, Jason Lee, John Parker and Cam Evans.

Prayers will be said by Mick Lemish and Mike Futrell, who also wrote the prayers.

The Greenville Boys Choir, a non-profit organization,is designed to give young boys from Greenville and Pitt County between the ages of 9 and 11 an opportunity to explore musical and character development experiences.

The boys rehearse each week from mid-September to mid-April, and perform at churches, schools, art festivals, civic clubs and at special events.

Concerto Finalist Winners

Soprano Anne Gunn and saxophonist Kenneth Hubbard have been chosen as winners in the concerto final auditions of the School of Music, East Carolina University.

The auditions, open to juniors, seniors and graduate students in the ECU School of Music, had 17 students participating in the preliminary round of the competition which was held on November 13. Of that 17, six were selected to compete in the final round which was held on campus on Thursday, November 20.

For her presentation in the final rounds, Ms. Gunn sang the aria "Un bel di vedremo" from Puccini's "Madam Butterfly." She was accompanied by pianist Alysa Wetherington.

Hubbard, accompanied by Patricia Foltz, played three pieces from Villa Lobos' "Fantasia" — "Anime," "Lent," and "Tres anime."

The four other competitors in Thursday's finals were: Ellen Kaner, flute; Terri Svec, oboe; Bruce Smith, percussion; and Mark Ford, percussion.

As winners, Gunn and Hubbard will be presented in a special public performance. Details on the performance will be announced at a later date.

Free Performance Of Operetta At ECU Today

Raleigh's National Opera Company, supported by the East Carolina University Orchestra, will present a free performance of Offenbach's "La Perichole" at 8 p.m. today in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. Admission is on a first-come, first-seated basis.

This lilting classic has been a favorite in the U.S. since its first production in 1895 with Lillian Russell in the title role.

The present English version was prepared by Maurice Valency for the Metropolitan Opera's spectacular new production in 1956.

"La Perichole" is based on the life of a real person, Mariquita Villegas, whose debut in Lima in 1760 launched her as Peru's most famous theater personality. In the version of her life contained in the operetta, La Prichole and her friend Paquillo are street singers in the city of Lima. They are in love and want to be married; however, neither can raise the price of a marriage license.

Then along comes Don Andres de Ribeira, viceroy prowling incognito about the city on his birthday. He comes upon the beautiful Mariquita, offers to take her to supper, then to his palace. She does not hesitate to accept, and merely takes time first to write a letter of regret to Paquillo.

Overcome by despair, Paquillo decides to hang himself with the cord of his departed love's guitar — but is interrupted by the viceroy's chamberlain. It has come to the viceroy's attention that Peruvian law restricts his choice of ladies-in-waiting to those already safely married. So, a husband must be found for La Perichole. The despairing Paquillo is persuaded to take a wife unseen — and as fate would have it, the lady proves to be La Perichole.

The two are joined in "more or less holy matrimony" and are then dragged off in opposite directions. The rest of the libretto is devoted to working out the fate of these characters through astonishing turns until a happy ending is reached.

Slide/Tape Program Set

A slide/tape program entitled "Sweet Adelines Invites You To Sing" will be presented at the weekly meeting of the prospective Greenville Chapter of Sweet Adelines on Monday, November 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church, Greenville Boulevard.

Mrs. Mary Koonce, president of the local chapter which has been meeting since late summer, invites all women interested in singing harmony to attend the program and learn more about Sweet Adelines, with a view to joining the chorus and the Greenville prospective chapter — to be the first one chartered in Eastern North Carolina.

Sweet Adelines, Inc., is an international organization for women who perform music in four-part barbershop style and who perform for charitable and civic organizations within their community.

Choral Society Concert

The Christmas concert of the Greenville Choral Society will be presented at 4 p.m. Sunday, December 14 at Immanuel Baptist Church, 1101 South Elm Street, (across from Rose High School).

Three festive compositions expressive of the Christmas season are to be performed — Gabrieli's "Jubilate Deo;" Daniel Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata;" and the Vivaldi "Gloria." The first two selections are works to be performed by brass choir and organ. The Vivaldi composition is for solo voices, a mixed chorus and orchestra. These work will be sung in Latin with translations provided in the program for the audience.

An admission fee of $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for children, students and senior citizens will be charged.

Rhonda Fleming, professor in the School of Music, East Carolina University, director of the Greenville Choral Society, will conduct the society's Christmas program.

Film Features Washington

WASHINGTON — Several historic Washington buildings are being featured in "A Time Past, A Place Remembered," a 30-minute color film to be shown over WITN-TV, Channel 7 at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, November 27.

A production of the documentation program of the Communications Office of the N. C. Dept. of Cultural Resources, the film is also a survey of the status of the historic preservation movement in North Carolina. It explores preservation from the standpoint of its economic and social importance, as well as its aesthetic value.

The E. Peterson Building is shown as a prime example of careful and creative use of an existing older structure, and acts as an anchor for further historic preservation in Washington.

The film is narrated by Tom Sweeney, formerly a North Carolina newsman, now an anchorman with WMAR-TV in Baltimore, Md.

Royal Tour Scheduled Dec. 5-7

RALEIGH — Reservations are still being accepted for the December 5-7 trip retracing colonial Gov. William Tryon's journey from Wilmington to Edenton 216 years ago.

Plantations along the way will host the travelers of 1980. The trip begins on Friday, December 5 in New Bern, with a visit first to Brunswick Town's St. Phillips Church and cemetery where Royal Governor Arthur Dobb is buried. The group will then see Orton Plantation and Wilmington's Burgwin-Wright House.

From Wilmington the travels lead to Swansboro's Jonathan Green and Peter Ringware houses, with the final stop on Friday near Pollocksville at a plantation home built for Simon Foscue and owned by his descendants since its beginning.

On the Saturday, December 6 leg of the tour, the group will tour the Tryon Palace complex, and outside New Bern, visit Bellair Plantation, begun in 1757 as a country home for Richard Spaight, whose son and grandson — Richard Dobbs Spaight, Sr. and Richard Jr. both became North Carolina governors. Back at Tryon Palace for the evening, the group will be invited to the candlelight tour opening the Tryon Palace Christmas evening.

The Sunday, December 7 part of the three-day tour will cover Edenton's historic district including the 1767 courthouse, St. Paul's Episcopal Church — second oldest church building in North Carolina, and the 1725 Cupola House. Lunch will be served at the Penelope Barker House.

On Sunday afternoon, tour participants will cross the Albemarle Sound to Somerset Place on Lake Phelps near Creswell, and then go to Historic Bath in Beaufort County, incorporated in 1705. Bath, North Carolina's oldest incorported settlement, was the early home of many prominent planters, colonial governors and Quakers as well as a place visited by the pirate Blackbeard. A candlelight dinner at historic Palmer-Marsh house in Bath concludes the three day tour.

Qualified guides will accompany the tour as the group retraces the steps of Governor Tryon. Transportation will be by Trailways bus. The price of the tour is $165 per person, with double accomodations at the Holiday Inn in New Bern.

Additional information and reservations are available from M. F. Gray, director of sales, Seashore Trailways, P. O. Box 1229, New Bern, N. C., 28560 — or by phone (call collect) at 633-1672.

By MARGARET CLARK

"Margaret's Story" by Eugenia Price is the third novel in this popular author's nothern Florida trilogy, all based on actual families. It is the romantic story of Margaret Steton who at nineteen in 1832 fell in love with newly widowed Lewis Fleming. She waits for him to survive his grief and the Second Seminole War, when the Indian uprising devestates both his plantation, Hibernia, and his cousin's land across the river. Beginning their marriage with three children, their lives are punctuated with the arrival of seven more children and the building of another house in which they cater to the burgeoning Northern tourist trade. This enterprise is interrupted by the Civil War during which Margaret, by then widowed, and her young daughter are driven from Hibernia. Meticulously researched, "Margaret's Story" re-creates the life of a real woman who lived during a most dramatic period of American history.

Another romantic novel by a popular author transports us to the years of World War I for a stunning tale of the tangled lives of a haughty heiress, her self-willed maid, and an English gentleman. Dorothy Eden's "The American Heiress" is about Hetty, an illegitimate half sister/maid, who accompanies her spoiled, social climbing mistress on her pre-wedding voyage to England. Clemency Jervis is to marry Lord Hazard, a charming, if debt-ridden young man. Lord Hazzard easily accepts Hetty, the opportunist, as his finacee when she arrives in England impersonating the drowned Clemency, who died when the ship on which they had been travelling was sunk. A live-in mistress, family suspicions, and World War I make life not quite happy-ever-after for Hetty.

Readers of Catherine Cookson's beguiling novels are sure to enjoy "Tilly," a story involving a young woman of innate courage and fortitude. Tilly Trotter's troubles begin while she is living with her grandparents in a cottage near the Sopwith estate. The time is early in the reign of Queen Victoria when the extremes of wealth and poverty are almost beyond belief. Beset with terrible situations and working conditions, subjected to unreasoning hatred and accusations of witchcraft, Tilly is a survivor. She is certain to become one of Catherine Cookson's most beloved heroines.

Cherokee Missionary Without Portfolio

EAGLE PASS, Texas (AP) — Nakai Breen is a mother, medicine woman and missionary without portfolio who has spent 38 years of her life trying to help a forgotten tribe of Kickapoo Indians.

She is a full-blooded Cherokee born in Oklahoma but raised by adoptive parents in this Rio Grande border town.

She has never gotten a nickel for helping the Traditional Kickapoo of Texas and Mexico. Her black eyes flash as she says, rapid-fire: "You can't buy love with money."

She met her first Kickapoo when she was 12. She brought an old woman home because she had no place else to go. By the time the first of her Kickapoo "grandmothers" died two years later, she had taken on the cause of her life.

"I am ashamed to say I used to steal money from my adopted mother's house to buy food for the people who lived in the cane huts," says Mrs. Breen. "Later, I used money I should have spent on my own babies to keep buying the grandmothers and grandfathers food. Now it is my husband's money from his paintings that gets the groceries. But who can spend money in heaven?"

Her husband, Bud Breen, is a successful self-taught Western artist who used to wrangle for some of the biggest cattlemen in Texas. Now his paintings command prices in four figures, but the Breen family has to scramble every month to pay the phone bill.

The Breens live in Bracketville, 35 miles northwest of Eagle Pass. At least three times a week Nakai makes the round trip.

One day this fall she arrived at the makeshift village to find Christina Jimenez writhing in agony with a foot bursting with gangrene. What had begun as a small sore, and advanced to an amputation of the toe, had been neglected to the point of death.

Neglect and apathy cost Christina Jimenez her right leg to above the knee.

She says she can't sleep at night for worrying about the bored, poorly clad and uneducated young of the Kickapoo tribe.

She fought City Hall for months to get her 600 Kickapoo running water, a toilet and a shower in their makeshift village. Reluctantly, she settled for one water spigot and one outhouse.

She has stood up to U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials, harangued Washington bureaucrats who've come down to investigate the Kickapoos' plight, and politely queried a Mexican storekeeper's "mistake" when he cheated old Kickapoo women out of small change because they don't understand white man's money.

"I do the dirty work," says Nakai, shrugging her thin shoulders and lighting the inevitable cigarette. "I don't want glory, I want help. I know what the Indians need."

U.S., Mexico Engaged In Direct Gas Sale Dispute

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Mexican government Friday denied a report Mexico is planning to sell gasoline directly to motorists in the United States, bypassing big American oil companies, but an American refinery stood by its story the deal had been made.

Francisco Alonso Gonzalez, identifying himself as a representative of Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, told reporters Thursday the Mexican government oil agency, Pemex, will work with small U.S. refiners to market its own line of gasoline and other products in the United States.

An agreement had been made with West Coast Oil Co., he said.

In Mexico City, a Pemex spokesman said Friday the Mexican agency had never heard of Gonzalez. A spokesman for the president's office denied Gonzalez represents Lopez Portillo.

Told of the denial, West Coast spokesman Bert Wootan countered that Gonzalez was a friend of President Lopez Portillo, acting for his office with the agreement of Jose Andres de Oteyza, secretary of natural resources and development.

He said Pemex had not finalized the agreement but is expected to do so in about two weeks. West Coast announced the deal before Pemex was prepared, he said.

In Mexico City, Pemex's chief spokesman, Reynaldo Jauregui Zentella, said "There is no deal between Petroleos Mexicanos and the West Coast Oil Co ... Gonzalez does not have and has never had the character of Pemex representative, neither there (in Los Angeles) nor in any other place."

Gonzalez represented himself to reporters as a friend of Lopez Portillo, speaking on his behalf, and also as a representative of the Mexican interest in West Coast Oil Co. He said he represented the office of the Mexican president to the World Oil Conference in Munich in September.

Such a plan by Mexico, if true, would be a sophisticated marketing strategy and a lesson to the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries, an industry analyst said Friday.

"It has been a constant issue of producing nations," Chacin said, "to move downstream in the oil operations — to refine and market and get the full dollar rather than only the portion returned by sales of crude," said German Chacin, executive editor of "Energy Detente," a publication of the Lundberg organization, said in an interview.

"They have the producing facilities but as the the oil moves downstream, it goes into private enterprise."

"Interested insert buyers should also pay close attention to how the appliance connects with the existing fireplace flue—at or above the damper being the safest and most efficient point. In Oregon, for example, state codes require a "positive connection" between the insert flue and the chimney flue. Installations that vent into the open area behind or above the insert have the potential of depositing large accumulations of creosote inside the fireplace cavity."

Barges Pop Up When Lake Refilled

DELCAMBRE, La. (AP) — Nine of 11 barges sucked into a hole when a lake bottom collapsed into a Diamond Crystal Salt Co. salt mine popped up like iron corks Saturday when the sea refilled Lake Peigneur, authorities reported.

However, the crater kept its grip on a $5 million drilling rig and a small tugboat — the most expensive items that went down when the 1½-square-mile lake began pouring into the maze of mine tunnels on Thursday.

Despite the potential danger of surface turmoil in the event of the collapse of dissolving mine walls and pillars, a tugboat was sent out to try to moor the barges so they would not ride free on the current.

"The tug went out because the tide could bring those barges over here to ram into our bridge and tear it down," explained Police Chief Jun Delcambre.

However, Delcambre said the tug crew decided not to venture over the dangerous crater area of Lake Peigneur, but to lurk in the vicinity, ready to waylay barges that drift their way.

All 50 men in the mine rode a slow creaky elevator up to safety Thursday before water trapped them. Seven men on the drilling rig were removed when it began to lean. The crew on a nearby drilling rig that toppled but was not swallowed up also was removed safely, oilmen said.

Shallow Lake Peigneur, with an average depth of three feet, refilled overnight. Sea water poured into it through the Delcambre Canal from the Gulf of Mexico, 12 miles south.

It took nearly two days to fill the mine, which had five levels of tunnels going down to 1,800 feet.

Salt mine tunnels are as wide as four-lane freeways, with ceilings 80 feet high. Miners use trucks and bulldozers.

Diamond Crystal, a St. Clair, Mich., firm, filed a damage suit against Texaco in U.S. District Court at nearby Lafayette, La., on Friday while its multi-million dollar mine was still rumbling and gurgling with the rush of water. It did not specify damages but called the mine a total loss.

The suit said Texaco's rig drilled into the salt mine and led to the flooding.

Max Hebert, a spokesman for Texaco in New Orleans, said the well was drilled in the exact location provided by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers permit — and that Diamond Crystal was informed when the permit was issued but failed to tell Texaco that an abandoned mine shaft was 1,300 feet below.

Given Until Dec. 4 To Repay $78,857

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A non-profit corporation headed by state AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby has been given until Dec. 4 to repay $78,857 in federal job training funds. The state demanded Friday that Carolina Skill Advancement Center repay the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds or file an appeal. Hobby, chairman of Carolina Skill's board of directors, could not be reached for comment. Three CETA contracts totaling $653,973 were given to Carolina Skill by the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development to use in training women in construction trades. Earlier this year, the State Auditor's Office audited those contracts and released a report questioning $159,938 spent by Carolina Skill.

Trial Offers Glimpse Of Horror

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The first full week of testimony in Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood's desertion trial provided a glimpse of a North Vietnamese prison camp in a horrifying reminder of the movie "The Deer Hunter."

Garwood's long-awaited court-martial opened at this military base last week before a jury of five Marine officers. He is accused of deserting, collaborating with the enemy, assaulting two fellow POWs and trying to entice other Americans to surrender.

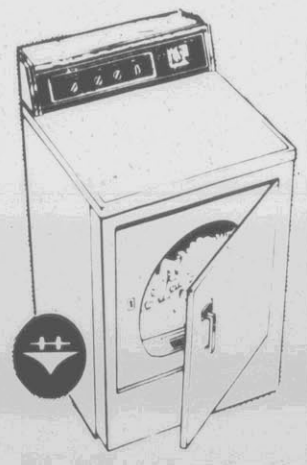

A native of Indiana, Garwood disappeared while driving a jeep near Da Nang in 1965. He resurfaced 14 years later after slipping a note to a Finnish businessman in Hanoi asking for repatriation.

Garwood is the only Vietnam War-era serviceman to be tried since the war for desertion and collaboration with the enemy. His court-martial has provided insights into the methods used to drive POWs to reveal information or to sign propaganda statements.

In voices charged with emotion, Garwood's fellow prisoners described experiences only imagined in the gripping Hollywood story about Vietnam POWs.

The court-martial was recessed for the weekend. Testimony is to resume on Monday.

Wolfpack 'Rushes' Past East Carolina By 36-14

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RALEIGH — The saying is that the wars are won in the trenchs, and Saturday afternoon, N.C. State dominated the trench play — and won the ball game, 36-14.

The victory, in which State ran a school record 80 rushes for 200 yards more than the Pirates of East Carolina did, gave State a 6-5 mark on the year, while the Pirates fell to 4-7.

Led by the play of quarterback Tol Avery, State constantly battered the ends of the ECU defensive line, piling up most of the yardage in these areas. Avery went to the air only eight times, hitting five for 69 yards.

Wayne McLean paced State's ground attack, picking up 176 yards on 30 carries, scoring once. That came on a five-yard end play that closed out the scoring late in the fourth period.

Earlier, Eddie Jackson had scored twice in the second half, on runs of one and three yards. Andre Marks scored from 13 away early in the third to put State ahead for the first time, while Avery got the only first half State TD, from a yard out. Nathan Ritter booted a 47-yard field goal and three extra points.

East Carolina led, 14-10, at the half, helped along by two specialty team plays. First, Anthony Collins opened the game with a brilliant 97-yard kickoff return to put the Pirates into a 7-0 lead after just 16 seconds. Then, later, Theo Sutton scored from five out after the Bucs recovered a fumbled punt at the five.

But the Pirates were unable to sustain their drives the rest of the day, running only 51 total plays to N.C. State's 88.

"I really thought we had a chance to win when we came up here," ECU's Ed Emory said as his team closed out his first year at the helm. "But they played better down the stretch, and it showed today.

"Their offensive line was the difference between the two teams. We did get some breaks in the first half, but we didn't take advantage of them. If we had we could have been ahead 21 or 28 to 10 at the half, and that might have done it."

Still, Emory felt there were several critical times in the game in the second half.

The first came after State took the second half kickoff and waltzed to the go-ahead score, making it 16-14. Then, on the kickoff, Collins fumbled the ball and State recovered at the ECU 17, turning that into another quick score. "That hurt us, and it hurt more because he could have done it again (gone all the way) if he had cut the other way."

Emory also called a key loss on defense, to Jeffrey Warren (sprained ankle) in the second quarter critical. "He is our intensity on defense. Our young kids just can't seem to be as intense without him out there."

Emory also hit out at the officiating in the game. "Their ACC showed through I think. I don't usually say anything about the officials, and I think we had good officiating in our other ACC games, but today, they (State) were holding on every sweep, and the officials never called it once. They really leaned away from calling anything on them if they could."

State was penalized five times for 35 yards, as compared to eight calls for 80 yards against the Pirates.

State, however, did give the Pirates every chance to win it, as the Wolfpack turned it over five times in the first half and ECU was able to take advantage on it but once.

Collins, after tucking in the ball at the three yard line on the opening kickoff, avoided a group of tacklers at the 20, and was free except for kicker Todd Auden. He faked by then, cutting crossfield, then outraced the final State pursurers to the end zone. Bill Lamm provided the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead after just 16 seconds.

Tar Heels Win Crown Behind Bryant, Amos

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It was the day of the running back in Chapel Hill Saturday.

Fifteenth-ranked North Carolina won the Atlantic Coast Conference football title, beating Duke, 44-21. But it was the exploits of UNC's tailback twosome that had the crowd of 51,389 on it feet.

Senior Amos Lawrence and sophomore Kelvin Bryant combined for 342 yards and four touchdowns, and both went over the 1,000-yard mark for the season.

Lawrence's 143 yards pushed him to 1,118 for the season and marked him as only the second running back in NCAA history to have four consecutive 1,000-yard seasons. Pitt's Tony Dorsett, now with the Dallas Cowboys was the first to do it. Bryant exploded for 199 yards to finish the season with 1,039 yards.

The last UNC team to have two 1,000-yard rushers was in 1974 when Mike Voight and James Betterson did it.

Lawrence, who finished his career with 4,391 yards, was happy when he went over the mark. But he appeared just as thrilled when Bryant did it, running out on the field to jump in his arms and congratulate him. Seating on the sidelines watching Bryant didn't bother him.

"I didn't mind at all," Lawrence said. "I was happy that I had gotten my 1,000 yards. I was keeping up (with Kelvin) all the time. I was pushing him hard. I'm very proud that he got his 1,000 yards today."

Bryant said the coaches told him that he was nearing that magic number in the final minutes.

"I wanted it real bad," Bryant said. "I just ran tough."

Duke coach Red Wilson was left without much to say except about North Carolina and its running backs.

"It was just too much of a great Carolina football team," he said. "I would like to have one back like Amos or Kelvin, let alone two. They were tremendous today and we just couldn't stop them. It was their day."

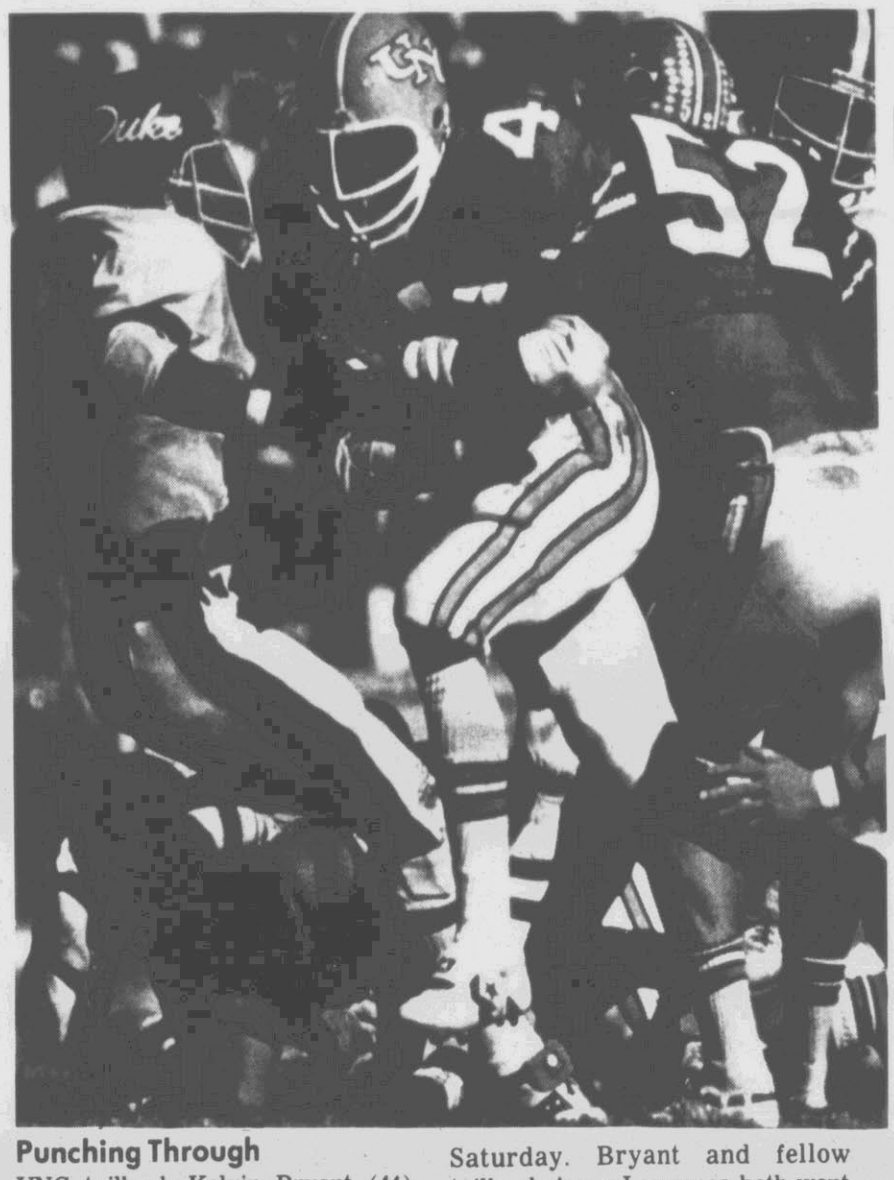

Lawrence went over the 1,000 mark with a 56-yard touchdown run. Bryant broke loose for 44 yards in the final period to pass the magic mark. Lawrence finishes the regular season with 1,117 and Bryant finishes with 1,039.

The game had the looks of a rout early as North Carolina jumped out to 16-0 lead and then scored again early in the second to make it 23-0. But Duke came back to score before the half, and in the second half the Blue Devils scored twice more after North Carolina fumbles to pull within 23-21.

But North Carolina's Steve Streater came up with a clutch interception and North Carolina drove 59 yards in 10 plays. Quarterback Rod Elkins then went over from 4 yards out to put the game out of reach, and North Carolina added two more touchdowns in the final period to wrap it up.

The Tar Heels did most of their damage on the ground, rushing for 432 yards.

North Carolina, bound for the Bluebonnet Bowl and a match with Texas, wraps up the regular season 10-1 overall and 6-0 in the ACC. Duke finishes 2-9 and 1-5.

The Tar Heels and Texas meet Dec. 31 in Houston's Astrodome.

North Carolina began the game like a bowl team, going 71 yards in five plays on the first possession to score on a 56-yard burst by Lawrence. Then following the first of two interceptions by Streater, North Carolina drove 32 yards and Bryant ran in from nine yards out.

After a Streater punt put Duke on its own two, Tar Heel linebacker Lawrence Taylor dropped Duke running back Mike Grayson in the end zone for a safety. UNC then took the free kick and drove 41 yards and Bryant scored on a two-yard run.

Aroused Clemson Stuns No. 14 Gamecocks, 27-6

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson's Tigers saved the best for last and ended a so-so football season Saturday with a stunning 27-6 upset over Gator-Bowl bound and 14th-ranked South Carolina, and Coach Danny Ford said the team probably the players "never won a bigger game in their careers."

Senior safety Willie Underwood, who ran an intercepted pass back 37 yards for a Clemson touchdown, "went out in great style," Ford said.

The aroused Clemson defense held the Gamecocks to a pair of field goals while its inspired offense exploded for 21 points in the second half.

In addition to Underwood's touchdown, quarterback Homer Jordan sneaked one yard late in the third period, and fullback Jeff McCall scored on a 15-yard run to put the game on ice late in the game.

Ford told reporters, "I've said all year long that the sun was going to shine on this team sometime during the year, and this was the last chance it had.

"It was by far our best game of the year," he added with understatement.

His counterpart at South Carolina, Jim Carlen, said Clemson won because it didn't make the mistakes that had plagued the Tigers all season. And Carlen accepted blame for the loss, saying he should have continued sweep runs. "They couldn't stop it," he said.

Carlen, "we still have had a great season and ... we still have to get ready to play in the Gator Bowl" against Pittsburgh.

Tiger place-kicker Obed Ariri set more records in Clemson's final game of the season as he kicked his 59th and 60th field goals from 41 and 47 yards out, both in the first half.

Gamecock tailback George Rogers, the nation's second-leading rusher, gained over 100 yards for 11th time this year. But South Carolina's scoring was limited to field goals by Eddie Leopard from 29 and 39 yards out.

The loss dropped South Carolina's record to 8-3. Clemson finished 6-5.

Underwood's t usxt w 0y terception was just his second in his career. He picked one off deep in Clemson territory and returned it 64 yards to the Gamecock 24, a play that eventually led to Jordan's touchdown.

Underwood's first interception slammed the door on a Gamecock drive that appeared certain to break the field goal deadlock.

With Rogers, the main ball carrier en route to a 168-yard game, South Carolina moved from its 24 to the Clemson 16. Then Underwood stepped in front of receiver Willie Scott and set off down the sideline. Rogers pushed him out of bounds to save a touchdown.

Clemson did score nine plays later with Jordan pushing through the middle from inches away on fourth down.

On South Carolina's next series, Rogers gained one yard to the 31 before Underwood grabbed a pass intended for Ben Cornett and the Tiger's most valuable player raced untouched to score.

The Tiger defense kept South Carolina at bay the rest of the game while the fired-up offense, deftly piloted by Jordan, sprang McCall free for his TD run to climax the stunning turnaround in the traditional rivalry.

Jordan completed 10 of 19 passes for 152 yards and had one picked off. Record-setting receiver Tuttle caught three for 79 yards.

Gamecock quarterback Garry Harper completed 12 of 22 for 142 yards but had three picked off. Clemson's rubberband defense allowed South Carolina to roll up 21 first downs and a statistical lead in rushing, but stiffened when back near its own goal line.

Odom's Club Faces Marathon Oil Monday

Newcomers Fill Pirate Roster

When you go into the East Carolina men's basketball game on Monday evening in Minges Coliseum, you had better buy a program.

You sure won't be able to tell the players without one.

The East Carolina Pirates open the 1980-81 season against Marathon Oil in an exhibition game at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Minges, prior to getting the season off to an official start on Saturday night at the University of Ohio. The first "real" home game is Saturday, December 6, against Texas Wesleyan.

Only four of the faces that will be seen on Monday night will be familiar to most of the fans. Only Michael Gibson, Tom Szymanski, David Underwood and Mark McLaurin return from last year's team that posted a winning season for the first time in five years.

Everyone else is a newcomer.

"I'm pleased with the start," second-year coach Dave Odom said. "Considering the number of new faces, the minimum number of veterans, the slow start, and the inconvenience of practice times and the like, it's okay."

Odom feels that the Pirates had mentally digested all that he would like for them to have taken in at this point, but noted that putting the mental with the physical still has to be proven. "They do know what we want them to do. And you sure can't do the physical things if you don't understand the mental."

Right now, too, the defense seems to be better off than the offense, but that's not about to make Odom unhappy. Last year's team took much of the season to progress to the point that made Odom happy defensively.

Of the 12 players on the varsity, which include one walk-on returning from last year, 6-2 guard Greg Batson, Odom expects nine or ten to make immediate contributions to the team. "I've never been a multiple substitution coach," Odom said. "I don't get into the feel of the game doing things like that. But it could be more necessary than ever this year. I'm not worried about getting into a fast paced game, however, unless it's against a team that is very much better than we are."

While the defense is where Odom wants it to be, he expects further improvement from it. He also feels that the offense is better than last year's. "But right now, we're not executing as well as we could. I think we realized in the Purple-Gold game that we're not penetrating as well as we should. We're playing more horizontally than vertically, and we're beginning to emphasize this part of the game. Underwood, Gibson and (Morris) Hargrove are beginning to make the strides inside that we hoped they would."

Rebounding could be a problem, however. "It's hard to tell right now since we haven't gone against anyone but ourselves. We've had lots of competition for the ball, but we haven't really stressed it as much as we need to. It's going to be interesting to see how we do against Marathon Oil because they are bigger than we are. I think we'll do better on loose balls because we're more aggressive, but I am worried about rebounding."

Team speed and quicknes will be one of the better points of the team, and the outside shooting is not as bad as expected. "When you lose people like (Herb) Krusen and (George)

DePaul Nips Louisville

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Denny Crum cried foul Saturday after his defending national collegiate basketball champions, the Louisville Cardinals, lost their 1980-81 opener, 86-80 to DePaul in the Hall of Fame Tipoff Classic.

"When DePaul goes to the line that many times," said the Louisville coach, "there aren't many teams that are going to beat them. We just can't foul that much."

Crum obviously was not happy after watching the Blue Demons march to the foul line for 41 shots and convert 34 times. Meanwhile, his Cardinals went to the line for only 15 shots and made eight.

"We have got to play better defense," added Crum, while refusing to blame the officiating for the large discrepancy in foul shooting.

While DePaul outscored Louisville at the foul line, the Cardinals did have a bright spot in their six-point loss, with a 38-27 advantage in rebounds.

"They made us look bad on the boards," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "They were going for the boards better, pounding it in better than any team has done against us in a long time. If it were not for the baskets they got within five feet, it would not have been a contest."

Mark Aguirre scored 24 points, including seven during a decisive 13-3 burst in the second half, and grabbed 14 rebounds in leading DePaul. The DePaul ace not only scored and rebounded well, but also triggered several of the Blue Demons' fast breaks with his outlet passes.

"The turning point of the game was in the second half when Mark took over the defensive boards," said Meyer.

The two Top Ten powers never were more than six points apart before the second-ranked Blue Demons broke the game open against the third-ranked Cardinals behind their superstar forward.

With the score tied 61-all at the 9:23 mark of the second half, the Blue Demons moved into a 74-64 lead with their 5½-minute game-breaking burst. The closest the Cardinals could come to the Midwest powerhouse was six points at the final buzzer.

With the score tied following a basket by Louisville's Jerry Eaves, DePaul rattled off seven straight points, with Aguirre hitting a field goal and a foul shot. Louisville then broke the spell with three quick points by Eaves, trimming DePaul's lead to 68-64 before the Blue Demons scored six more in a row, with Aguirre pitching in four.

Along with his team-high point total, Aguirre also chipped in with a team-leading 14 rebounds.

The Cardinals were led by Derek Smith's 25 points and 13 rebounds.

ECU Gymnasts Finish Second

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Longwood College outpaced East Carolina, 120 to 112, Saturday in a three-way gymnatics meet which opened the 1980 season for the Pirates.

Finishing third at the meet was Navy with 100 points.

The Pirates, now 1-1, were led by Jennifer Bell, who finished second on the balance beam with a score of 7.05. Nan George was third on the uneven bars with a score of 7.10 while Kathy McNerney was third on the balance with a score of 6.95.

Fourth in the balance beam was Carol Layton (6.75). George was fourth in the vault (8.15) while freshman walkon Joanie Ford was tops in the floor exercise with a score of 7.1.

"I'm pretty pleased," ECU coach Jon Rose said. "We had a high percentage of hit routines but you can't fight the judges. I know we're capable of 120 or even better."

The Pirates' next meet is at home against N.C. State on Dec. 5 at 7 p.m.

NAPA 250 Set

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Richard Petty and Bobby Allison head a field of 40 entries in Sunday's running of the Arizona NAPA 250 stock car race — the season finale of the Winston West NASCAR championship series.

Petty, 43, won the 156-mile event in 1978 and was well on his way to winning it last year when a leaking tire allowed Neil Bonnet to slip past him on the next-to-last lap.

Petty won the pole position during Saturday's qualifying with an average speed of 116.301 mph. Allison qualified on the outside of the front row at 115.451 mph.

Allison has had one second-place finish and two thirds in three trips to Phoenix International Raceway.

Petty, Allison and several other drivers who normally run the more prestigious NASCAR Grand National circuit stayed out West for this race after last weekend's Grand National season finale at Ontario, Calif.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Oklahoma freshman Buster Rhymes ran 1 yard for a touchdown with 56 seconds remaining Saturday, lifting the ninth-ranked Sooners to a dramatic 21-17 victory over fourth-ranked Nebraska that gave them at least a share of the Big Eight championship but left the conference's Orange Bowl representative up in the air.

Rhymes' touchdown capped an 80-yard drive that began after Nebraska took a 17-14 lead with 3:16 to play on quarterback Jeff Quinn's touchdown plunge from less than a yard out. Rhymes set up the touchdown with a 43-yard gallop to the Nebraska 14 five plays earlier.

It was Oklahoma's ninth victory in the last 10 meetings with Nebraska in one of college football's great rivalries and gave the Sooners at least a tie for their eighth consecutive Big Eight championship with a 6-0 record. However, they are 8-2 overall to 9-2 for Nebraska, which finished its regular season Saturday, and the Sooners must defeat Oklahoma State next week to meet Florida State in the Orange Bowl. That would send Nebraska to the Sun Bowl against Mississippi State.

The last-minute touchdown brought Oklahoma from behind for the second time in the game. The Sooners earlier overcame an 89-yard touchdown dash by Nebraska's Jarvis Redwine and erased a 10-0 deficit on 3-yard scoring runs by J.C. Watts and Chet Winters late in the second period.

Oklahoma moved quickly down the field for its winning score, covering the 80 yards in eight plays that used up two minutes and 20 seconds. A 2-yard run by Rhymes, a a personal foul against Nebraska and a fumble by Stanley Wilson which tackle Louis Oubre recovered for a 6-yard gain put the ball on the Oklahoma 43.

Rhymes then took a pitchout from Watts, circled right end and made it to the Cornhusker 14 before Sammy Sims bumped him out of bounds.

Two running plays failed to gain but Watts fired a crucial 12-yard pass to Bobby Grayson at the 1 and two plays later Rhymes took another pitchout around the right side for the winning touchdown.

WACO, Texas (AP) — Fullback Dennis Gentry rambled 64 and 16 yards through the rain for touchdowns Saturday and Baylor's ballhawking defense made them stand with a 16-0 Southwest Conference victory over the Texas Longhorns. The triumph gave the Cotton Bowl-bound Bears their winningest season in the school's 81-year history.

Baylor, which will take its 10-1 record against Alabama in Dallas New Year's Day, swept throught the league unbeaten with an 8-0 record.

Texas, playing in the Bluebonnet Bowl New Year's eve against North Carolina, is 7-3 overall and 4-3 in the SWC with a game remaining next week against Texas A&M.

The No. 12-ranked Bears intercepted four passes against the frustrated 20th-ranked Longhorns who tried two quarterbacks, Donnie Little and Rick McIvor to no avail.

With the rain coming down and a sellout crowd of 48,500 fans in the stands, Gentry broke a scoreless standoff in the second quarter with his zig-zag dash down the sidelines.

Gentry struck again in the fourth quarter right after linebacker Cedrick Mack made a vital interception at the Baylor 5-yard line. McIvor tried to hit tight end Lawrence Sampleton but linebacker Doak Field tipped the ball and Mack alertly picked it off before he stepped out of bounds.

Baylor quarterback Jay Jeffrey scrambled 32 yards on a third-and-12 play then flipped a 15-yard pass to Robert Holt. Baylor worked the ball to the Texas 16 where Gentry burst off guard and carried a Longhorn into the end zone for the clinching score with 9:00 to play.

Miami To Meet VPI In Peach

ATLANTA (AP) — The Miami Hurricanes, fresh off a 26-8 victory over North Texas State, accepted an invitation on Saturday to battle Virginia Tech in the 13th annual Peach Bowl here Jan. 2, bowl officials said.

The victory over North Texas State at the Orange Bowl was the third straight for the Hurricanes. The defeat of other bowl candidates including Stanford, Indiana and Kansas on Saturday "made the selection fairly easy," saidPeach Bowl Managing Director Howard Towns.

The invitation to the bowl, which will be televised nationally (CBS) at 3 p.m. EST on Jan. 2, was the first in 13 years for the Hurricanes, 7-3.

The Virginia Tech Hokies, 8-3, will be the home team.

In last year's contest at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, Baylor defeated Clemson 21-18 before a sellout attendance of 59,933.

Ohio State.....3

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — John Wangler's 13-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Carter gave 10th-ranked Michigan a 9-3 victory over No. 5 Ohio State Saturday for the Big Ten Conference football title and accompanying Rose Bowl berth.

The Wolverines, running their winning streak to eight games after a 1-2 start this season, will carry a 9-2 record against Pacific-10 champion Washington in the New Year's Day classic in Pasadena, Calif.

The Buckeyes wound up 9-2 and will face Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl Dec. 26 in Tempe, Ariz.

An all-time Ohio Stadium crowd of 88,827 and millions more on regional television watched Wangler find Carter for the game's lone touchdown on a third-and-11 situation.

The bitter rivals traded first half field goals for a 3-3 standstill in the opening half.

Vlade Janakievski, a senior specialist, gave Ohio State its only lead. He kicked a 33-yard field goal into the wind for a 3-0 advantage with 12:11 remaining in the first half.

Ali Haji-Sheikh, a sophomore from Arlington, Texas, matched it with a 43-yard field goal with the wind less than six minutes later.

Although Ohio State became the first team in four games to score on the Wolverines, Michigan's defense was dominating. It marked the fourth straight game that an opponent failed to muster a touchdown against the Big Ten champions.

Michigan's effort over a four-game stretch was the best for the school since the 1931 squad posted six straight shutouts.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Backup quarterback Jay Schroeder hooked up with tailback Freeman McNeil on a 58-yard pass play with 2:07 remaining Saturday to lift 18th-ranked UCLA to 20-17 Pacific-10 Conference football victory over crosstown rival Southern California.

A crowd of 83,491 at the Los Angeles Coliseum and a nationwide television audience watched as Shroeder's pass to McNeil was deflected off the hands of Southern Cal defensive back Jeff Fisher at about the USC 40-yard line. McNeil gathered in the ball and raced down the left sideline untouched for the winning touchdown.

The triumph snapped a four-game UCLA losing streak against the 12th-ranked Trojans. The Bruins are 4-2 in Pac-10 play and 8-2 overall. USC dropped to 4-2-1 in conference action and 7-2-1 for the season.

The Bruins drove 80 yards in six plays for the winning touchdown, following a missed 29-yard field goal attempt by Eric Hipp of USC with 4:22 remaining.

The Trojans had taken a 17-14 lead on Marcus Allen's 1-yard dive with 12:23 remaining. The score capped a 43-yard, 10-play drive in which Allen carried on all but one play.

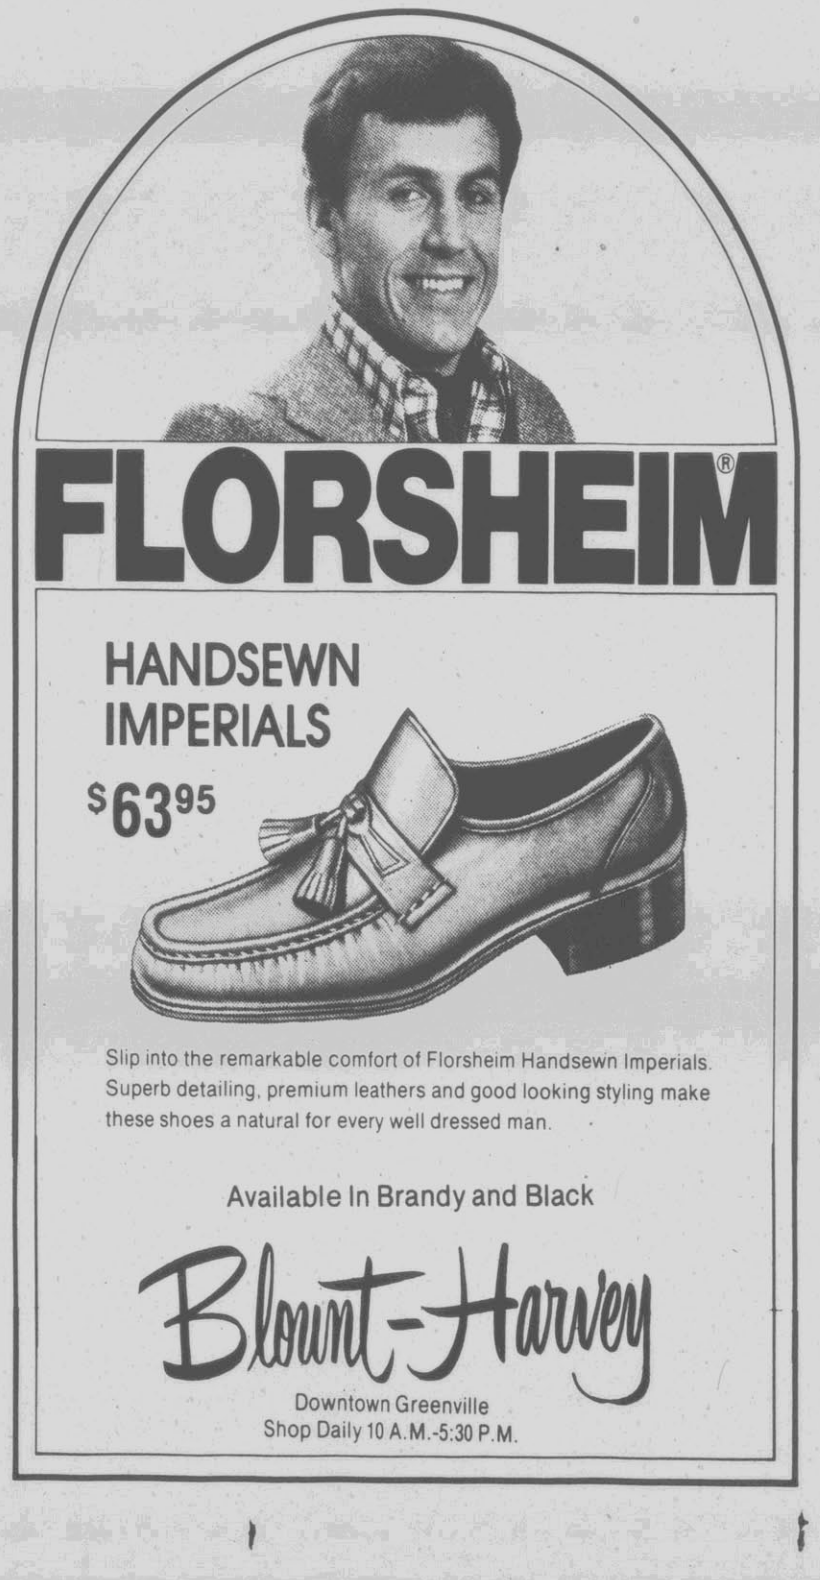

A 32-yard field goal by Hipp late in the first quarter gave USC a 3-0 lead. The Bruins went ahead 7-3 on a 6-yard scoring run by McNeil early in the second quarter, which capped an 80-yard drive. The Trojans made it 10-7 just 2:55 into the third quarter on a 12-yard pass from quarterback Scott Tinsley to wide receiver Jeff Simmons.

Newcomes Fill ECU Roster . . .

Maynor, you expect a drop-off, but (Mike) Fox, (Barry) Wright and McLaurin have been doing very well, and our point guard shooting is much better."

Odom is somewhat worried about the passing attack. "We still haven't shown consistantcy. We're not smart passers yet. We're allowing the defense to dictate how and when we throw the ball, but I think we just need experience here, and we're better than we were."

The fact that there are so many new faces doesn't worry Odom. "I try to be realistic. The players are who they are and I can't change it. We have to work with what we have and bring them as far as we can. A lot of times, when you say someone is young, you mean they don't have confidence yet. Our job is to build that confidence in the players, and we want to do it as quickly as we can."

Odom also feels that younger players come quicker in basketball than in such sports as football. "They play it all year 'round, so they learn more than they would if they were playing another sport."

As to this Monday's starting lineup, Odom isn't settled. "The other day, the four of us (Odom and his three assistants) each drew up a starting lineup independently of each other. We came up with four different ones. So either we don't know what we're looking it, or the competition is so close that even the keenest of eyes can't tell the difference. I hope it's the latter."

Odom feels that things are fairly equal at all five positions. "I don't mean every position is super, but that the depth is about equal at all five positions. We're okay, but we're not at the highest level."

At the post Szymanski (6-10) and Underwood (6-6) are working on one side with Gibson (6-8) and Hargrove (6-6) at the other. Freshman Jeff Best (6-9) backs both of them up.

At the small forward position, McLaurin (6-6) and freshman Willie McNair (6-5) are sharing duties, while at the big guard spot, Wright (6-5) and Fox (6-3), both freshmen, are lined up.

"I really thought that this would be a runaway with Wright, but Fox has made up a lot of ground," Odom noted.

The point guard finds Mike Bledsoe (6-1) and Herbert Gilchrist (6-1) vieing for starting time. "This position changes daily in which one is in front," Odom said.

He also noted that at least early in the year, the position will go to the older player. "I'm going to go with them early and give them every opportunity to do well," the coach said.

As far as the Marathon game is concerned, Odom said the end result isn't that important to him. "I just want to give everyone a reasonable opportunity to show what he can do under game conditions. We're ready to look at some outside people. Winning would be nice, but it's not a major concern unless of course we really get blown away."

East Carolina's Michael Gibson has gone from pupil to teacher in just a year's time.

A year ago Gibson arrived in the Pirate front court after transferring from Truett-McConnell Junior College. Gibson quickly fell under the tutelage of five returning seniors. He listened and learned.

Those five seniors are gone now. Gibson, however, remains, one of but two players with any starting experience off last year's 16-11 team. It is now Gibson's turn to teach and with six freshman and two sophomores he has plenty of pupils.

"I tell them how it's going to be in a game situation," said Gibson during Wednesday's picture day in Minges Coliseum. "I tell them how the crowd gets into the game and how it's a lot more physical than high school."

The 6-8, 220-pound Gibson does more than talk. He also gives out lessons — free.

"Oh yeah, I get to pushing them around some. I'll hit'em with a 'bow." Not that Gibson doesn't expect an elbow in return. He does.

"I tell them that this is the college game," Gibson said. "Elbows are thrown, but they're also thrown back. When I was in high school I was always the biggest player and when I grabbed a rebound and swung my elbow they'd move back. Here, a lot of the players are bigger and stronger and they don't move away."

Such are the lessons Gibson has learned in his two years of college basketball.

Michael Gibson

Gibson, one of seven children, attended Maggie Walker High School in Richmond, Va. As a sophomore he helped lead his team to a 21-3 record and a state championship.

From there, he moved on to Treutt-McConnell in Cleveland, Ga. In his one year stint there Gibson averaged 16.2 points a game on a team that went 25-5 and received a bid to the junior college tournament.

Clemson had recruited him out of high school and he had gone to T-C with the understanding that he would transfer to Clemson the next season if things worked out. Things didn't.

"I talked to the coach that had been recruiting me from Clemson and he told me they had enough big men and that if I came there I might only get two or three minutes playing time," Gibson said.

So he began shopping around. "I went visiting a number of places, but I knew I wanted to get closer to home. I had only been home twice in a year when I was in Georgia and I was really home sick."

East Carolina had just hired Dave Odom, who subsequently hired Eddie Payne, Gibson's coach at Truett-McConnell. After a phone call home to his parents, Gibson was headed to Greenville.

"Coach Payne had said Coach Odom needed another post player," Gibson said. "Another reason I decided to come here was they had a whole new coaching staff. They hadn't seen any of the players and I figured there was an open position."

Last year as a sophomore Gibson played both center and forward and averaged 5.9 points a game and just under six rebounds. He shot 52 percent from the floor and his 532 minutes are the most of any of this year's three returning letterman.

Gibson knows that more of the scoring and rebounding burden will fall on him and junior forward David Underwood, the only other player with any starting experience off last year's club. The adjustment has taken time.

"We had a scrimmage game among ourselves and I only had two rebounds," he said. "I was so used to relying on the other guys (from last season) to get the ones I couldn't, that (the other team) was getting second and third shots. I've had to train myself to change that."

Although the Pirates are without Herb Gray and George Maynor, Gibson feels ECU may turn out to be a better team this year.

"The younger players are catching on real fast," Gibson said. "They've really surprised me. We're a lot quicker this year and I think we have better shooters."

He also believes in setting some lofty goals for the Pirates. "I want the NIT. I want to get a bid. I also want to win 20 games this season," Gibson said. "That might be saying too much but I'm like that."

NOTES...

The Pirates open their 1980 season with an exhibition game against Marathon Oil Monday night at 7:30. ECU's first regular season game is Saturday night at Athens, Ohio, where the Pirates face Ohio University.

The Bobcats return only one starter off last year's 8-18 club, quard Kirk Lehman, who averaged 17.6 points a game. Early scouting reports indicate Ohio is slightly bigger than ECU but the Pirates are said to be much quicker.

East Carolina's first regular season home game will be Dec. 6 against Texas Wesleyan.

Lady Pirates Open Season Today

East Carolina women's basketball coach and salesman Cathy Andruzzi can fit a half hour's conversation into five minutes, an ability that comes in handy on the recruiting trail.

Sometimes, however, it's more what you have, not what you say, that counts with recruits.

"I was talking to a kid from Pennsylvania who was also looking at ODU and I told her we had a radio and tv show down here and she said, 'Really?' Things like that add up," Andruzzi said. "It's just another plus in that direction for us."

The direction Andruzzi hopes her Pirates are headed toward is that of becoming one of the better women's programs around. The obstacles, however, are many, including recruiting.

"Our main goal is North Carolina," Andruzzi said. "We're competing against N.C. State and Carolina and if we can get the kids in our own backyard we feel people will come out and see us.

"The only frustrating part about it is that we work so much harder and take more time with each individual and then an established program gets her."

Still, Andruzzi has won her share of the recruiting wars. Her latest victory came this past year when she signed Lisa Fennell, a high school All-America who led Goldsboro to the state championship in 1979. Andruzzi also picked up two above-average transfers: Sam Jones from Mt. Olive and Caren Truske from N.C. State.

Problems, however, remain, due mainly to the rules which the AIAW — the women's version of the NCAA — have set down for recruiting. Andruzzi and assistant coach Sherri Pickard are not allowed to talk to a play after a game or at home, or to talk to her parents.

They can talk to her on campus or over the phone and they can also talk to her coach. The player can also visit the campus and have a tryout, something the men cannot do.

"Our phone bill is tremendous," Andruzzi said. "It hurts us that we can't talk to mom or dad, but I can understand. The AIAW doesn't want the coach at the player's doorstep every day, but we're two young coaches who love it here and are trying to sell East Carolina and it hurts us."

Among the factors that sell a recruit on a school is its schedule. Andruzzi, in her third year at ECU, has arranged what she calls "an appetizing" schedule. It may turn out that she's a glutton — for punishment.

The Pirates, who open their 1980 season today at home (3 p.m.) against Virginia Tech, play three preseason top 20 teams in Minges Coliseum: second-ranked Old Dominion (37-1 a year ago), 11th-rated N.C. State (26-8 last season) and 12th-ranked Southern Cal (22-12 last year). ECU also faces UNC-Chapel Hill, Duke and Wake Forest at home.

The road schedule isn't much easier. The Pirates travel to New York City twice, playing Queens College and Wagner College over Thanksgiving and later playing in the Queens College Tournament. ECU also plays UNC, Virginia, N.C. State and Florida on the road.

"We're out to be a more highly competitive team and to do that you've got to play those type of teams," Andruzzi said. "If you want to be good you've got to play the best."

It also doesn't hurt recruiting when your team travels to New York and Florida. "We get a lot of exposure when we go up to New York and its easier for the kids we're trying to recruit to get to see us," Andruzzi said. "Our goal isn't to recruit in California. We want to work more in our area."

The selling of East Carolina doesn't end with the recruits. Perhaps just as tough to sell are the fans, most of whom still do not believe women can play quality basketball.

"We've got to get out and tell the people about our program and what we're trying to do," Andruzzi said. "We've got to expose people to it. We've got to tell them what women's basketball is.

"We had a clinic and scrimmage two weeks ago in Gastonia and had over 150 people there," she said. "Now they didn't know anything about East Carolina women's basketball, but they came out. We need to go to the people more like that."

Still, Andruzzi realizes her players are her ultimate responsiblity. "We've got to take care of the kids here first," she said. "That's more important than those we're trying to recruit. They're here and we owe it to them to never sacrifice their practice time to recruit."

Revils, Osman Win Wrestling Crowns

CHAPEL HILL — Paul Osman and Butch Revils won individual championships and East Carolina had seven wrestlers gain the consolation finals this Saturday afternoon at the North Carolina Collegiate Wrestling Tournament.

Revils, who is academically ineligible this semester but will rejoin the team next semester, won the 182-pound class by beating Auburn's Belazeff, 5-4, Saturday afternoon.

James Ellison took third place at 172 pounds by defeating fellow ECU wrestler Andy Heffner, 4-3.

Among other East Carolina wrestlers reaching the consolation finals but losing to end up fourth at the tournament were:

Jeff Leaf, who lost 4-3 at 123 pounds; Danny Keene, who lost 11-0 at 131; Harry Webb, who lost 11-3 at 139; Chris Giles, who lost, 4-3, at 155; Scott Eaton, who lost in overtime, 6-4, at 167; Sam Moye, who lost 9-0 at 172.

The Pirates open their 1980 home schedule Wednesday when they face N.C. State.

Maryland Routs Cavaliers, 31-0

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Maryland's Terrapins made Jerry Claiborne a proud coach Saturday as they completed their regular season with a 31-0 rout of Virginia's Cavaliers and began to think about a Dec. 20 engagement with Florida's Gators in the Tangerine Bowl.

The terps, with a 3-3 record, were unlikely bowl candidates at midseason. But they won each of their last five games, piling up 117 points and limiting the opposition to just 31 in the process.

"We lost three tough football games and then came back strong," Claiborne said. "I'm proud of this team!"

Claiborne, who will be taking Maryland to a bowl for the seventh time in eight years, said "I think our defense has gotten some confidence and is making the big plays to keep opponents from scoring.

"You have to get those big plays on defense as you do on offense. It helps everyone's confidence, and success breeds success. We've been very successful in the last few weeks."

Claiborne added that "we are very happy to be in the Tangerine Bowl and will start thinking about that now. I don't know anything about Florida. I haven't seen them on film because we haven't had a common opponent."

Virginia Coach Dick Bestwick was dismayed by the outcome, saying "the last 20 minuters of the ball game was probably as poor as we've played in five years. Everything that could go wrong went wrong. Anybody that said Maryland wasn't ready to play was very, very wrong."

The Terps' victory over Virginia, which finished with a 4-7 record, featured the running of junior tailback Charlie Wysocki and a stout defense that held the Cavaliers to minus 17 yards rushing.

Wysocki, playing just over three quarters, set a Maryland single-season rushing record as he carried 38 times for 148 yards. That gave him a season total of 1,359 yards, 98 more than the previous record set by Steve Atkins in 1978.

Tackles Ed Gall and Todt Benson and guard Mike Corino spearheaded the Maryland defense which completely shut down the Virginia running game in the second half after giving up only 12 yards during the first half.

Texas Tech 7

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Houston quarterback Terry Elston threw a pair of touchdown passes and scored twice himself Saturday as the bowl-bound Cougars whipped Southwest Conference rival Texas Tech 34-7.

The Cougars, tuning up for a Garden State Bowl date with Navy, mounted a swift 17-0 lead and unleashed a swarming, unruly defense to hoist their season record to 6-4.

With a 5-2 SWC record, Houston can clinch second place with a victory next week over Rice.

Miami (F).....26
N. Texas St. 8

MIAMI (AP) — Dan Miller kicked a school-record four field goals and quarterback Jim Kelly threw for 182 yards and one touchdown Saturday as Miami, hoping for an invitation to the Peach Bowl, took a 26-8 college football victory from North Texas State.

It was the third victory in a row for the Hurricanes, 7-3.

Miller, a junior from Clewiston, Fla., booted field goals of 42, 29, 41 and 42 yards, becoming the first kicker in Miami history to make more than three in one game.

Sophomore quarterback Kelly, of East Brady, Pa., completed 12 of 20 passes, many of them to wide receiver Larry Brodsky, who made eight catches for 143 yards.

Brodsky, who had only 18 yards during the first half, grabbed a 37-yard scoring strike from Kelly to cap a hot third quarter for Miami. The Hurricanes' other touchdown came on a 1-yard plunge by junior halfback Chris Hobbs in the first quarter.

Washington St.....23

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Tom Flick fired three touchdown passes Saturday as the 16th ranked Washington Huskies overcame a 14-0 deficit late in the first half to beat Washington State 30-23.

Flick, a fifth-year senior from Bellevue, completed 20 of 32 passes for 311 yards for the Pacific-10 Conference champions. He was intercepted twice, both in the first half.

Flick teamed with Paul Skansi for a 22-yard scoring toss in the second quarter, combined with Aaron Wlliams for a 41-yard scoring pass in the third quarter and connected with Anthony Allen for a 47-yard bomb in the fourth period.

The Cougars completed their season at 3-4 in the conference and 4-7 overall.

New Seating For Minges

East Carolina's Minges Coliseum is getting some new seats with seatbacks for the upcoming 1980 basketball season. The seats, which include all of the downstairs area on the North side, will be ready for use today when the Lady Pirates open their 1980 season against Virginia Tech at 3 p.m. The men play Monday night in an exhibition match against Marathon Oil. Venuto Leads Deacs Past ASU

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Jay Venuto ran for one touchdown and threw two scoring passes to wide receiver Kenny Duckett to lead Wake Forest to a 28-16 college football victory Saturday over Appalachian State.

Deacon wide receiver Wayne Baumgardner caught a 39-yard pass midway through the third quarter and moved the ball to the 3-yard line. On the next play, Venuto ran around left end to score his first touchdown of the season.

Venuto completed 18 of 34 passes for 226 yards.

On the game's first play after the kickoff, Deacon linebacker Joel Triplett intercepted Appalachian State quarterback Steve Brown and returned the ball to the 18.

Two plays later, Carlos Cunningham scored from 6 yards out to give Wake Forest its second touchdown in 43 seconds.

Appalachian State went ahead three minutes into the game when Arnold Floyd caught a 15-yard scoring pass from Brown.

The Mountaineers of the Southern Conference went ahead 10-7 late in the first quarter when Mark French kicked a 36-yard field goal. The kick ended an 80-yard drive.

With 9:15 to play in the fourth quarter, the Deacons increased their advantage on an 8-yard pass from Venuto to Duckett, climaxing a 78-yard drive.

Earlier in the game, Duckett caught a 4-yard scoring pass on the end of a three-minute drive aided by two Appalachian State pass interference penalties.

Duckett tied teammate Baumgardner with his second touchdown reception. Both have tallied 12 touchdown receptions in their careers, setting Atlantic Coast Conference records for individual touchdown receptions.

The Deacons contained Appalachian State for the final three periods until Brown found Rick Beasley on a 20-yard touchdown pass. The Mountaineers scored with two seconds remaining in the game.

The win boosted Wake Forest's season record to 5-6, while Appalachian State fell to 6-4-1.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Quarterback Jim McMahon threw for three touchdowns and scooted for another as 13th-ranked Brigham Young crushed upstate rival Utah 56-6 Saturday, earning the Cougars their third straight Holiday Bowl berth.

The victory, Brigham Young's 10th straight after one loss, boosted the Cougars to their fifth straight Western Athletic Conference title. BYU will play Southern Methodist in the Dec. 19 bowl in San Diego.

McMahon, the nation's total offense and passing leader, connected on touchdown pass plays of 5, 11 and 76 yards. McMahon's first scoring toss broke the NCAA season touchdown pass record of 39 set by Dennis Shaw of San Diego State in 1969. McMahon also broke Shaw's record of being responsible for 45 touchdowns in a season.

Mississippi St.....19

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Freshman John Bond accounted for more than 300 yards and set up Michael Haddix's game-winning 10-yard touchdown run midway through the fourth quarter as 17th-ranked Mississippi State trimmed Mississippi 19-14 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

A 54-yard pass play from Bond to Glen Young set up the winning score. Young, who made the catch at the Ole Miss 40, eluded two defenders and raced to the Rebel 10.

On the next play, Haddix skirted right end for the touchdown with 7:40 left in the game played in a steady, drizzling rain.

Ole Miss had taken a 14-13 advantage 40 seconds earlier when John Fourcade scrambled out of trouble and fired a 7-yard scoring strike to Gino English.

Richard: Only A Matter Of Time

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Less than four months after a stroke nearly cost the Houston Astros' 30-year-old right-hander his career — and his life — J.R. Richard is in Phoenix to continue therapy which he hopes will bring him back to major league baseball.

"I've been working out two weeks now — running three miles a day, lifting weights and doing certain exercises with my arm. I feel great," Richard said Saturday. "The doctors don't know when I'll be able to pitch again. Maybe in January. To me, it's just a matter of time."

The 6-8 player collapsed July 30 during a workout at the Houston Astrodome. Surgeons removed a blood clot from the junction of two arteries in his neck which impeded the flow of blood to his brain.

"The operation was a success," Richard said. "Everything's going smoothly. I'm not worried about a relapse at all. I know I'll be back, and soon.

"All I'm trying to do now is get myself in the best possible shape I can and prepare myself mentally," he added. "I got more motion in my arm now than I've had in a long time. I'm not worried at all. I'll do fine."

Before the stroke, Richard complained of fatigue and a "deadness" in his throwing arm.

At the time, he had a 10-4 record, a 1.84 earned run average, 119 strikeouts and was considered the favorite for the Cy Young Award in the National League.

"It's life. I accept it. It happened," Richard said as he lounged in an apartment with his wife, Carolyn. "I know it happened for a reason.

"It brought me closer to God. And other people look at me now more as a person than a baseball player," he added. "I told people I was hurting. Now they know I was serious."

Richard's lawyer and longtime friend, Tom Reich, said his client had a falling-out with the Houston news media prior to the injury. The media made him out to be baseball's tragic version of television's J.R. Ewing — run yng headlines ov 'Who0Sh t Z⅞R⅞7s arm?"

"They couldn't resist," said Reich. "But they just didn't understand. We're talking about a man whose left side was totally paralyzed at one point."

Pitt's Green Leads List

Lombardi Finalists Named

HOUSTON (AP) — Hugh Green of Pittsburgh, E.J. Junior of Alabama, Ron Simmons of Florida State and Mike Singletary of Baylor were named Saturday as finalists for the 11th annual Vince Lombardi Award, symbolic of the nation's outstanding football lineman.

The winner will be announced Dec. 12 at an awards dinner with proceeds going to the American Cancer Society for research. The trophy, a 45-pound block of granite, is named in honor of the former Green Bay and Washington coach who died of cancer in 1970.

Green, an All-America selection last season, was a finalist for the Lombardi award as a junior and earlier this week was named winner of the Outland Trophy, which also honors linemen.

Junior, a defensive end, was a second-team All American selection last season as a junior. Simmons, a nose guard, was a Lombardi semifinalist last year and the only lineman in the top 10 for the Heisman trophy voting.

'Pack Whip Pirates...

tercepted a pass at the Stae 34 three plays after the kickoff. But the Pirates were intercepted in return three plays later.

Hillery Honeycutt grabbed it off at the State 33 and returned it to the ECU 34.

Avery then guided an eight-play, 34 yard drive, taking it the final yard himself for the score. Ritter's kick tied it up with 7:45 showing.

After failing to move the ball, ECU kicked it away, but State fumbled it at as Louie Meadows tried to field the ball on the bounce at the 30, only to see it brush off him and tumble further downfield. The scramble for the ball finally ended with Chuck Jackson recovering for the Pirates at the five.

On the first play, Sutton cracked through the middle for the score, and East Carolina led, 14-7 with 5:34 left in the period.

It was the final gasp for the Bucs.

State started another drive, but lost it on a fumble at the ECU 28. The Pirates got it back to the midfield stripe before giving it back on another fumble. State carried it back to the ECU 25 before another fumble-halted play.

East Carolina drove to the State 29, where a 45-yard Lamm field goal was wide, hen got it back on another umble at the State 35, but ailed to move it, losing back to he 49.

From its own 15, the 'Pack drove for a field goal to close out the first half scoring. Most of the time, it was the work around the ends that got the yardage. Finally, however, the drive stalled and Ritter booted a 47-yard field goal with 2:12 left, cutting it to 14-10.

East Carolina, moving in the closing seconds, got back to the State 42 before time finally ran out.

The Wolfpack took the opening drive of the second half in, and then got another quick one to wrap it up. Using the end play to great advatage, State drove 75 yards on just seven plays, the big one being a little swing pass to Jackson, who cut back across the field and scrambled all the way from the State 33 to the ECU 30.

Marks burst through the middle five plays later for the final 13 yards and the go-ahead score. Ritter's kick missed, leaving it at 16-14 with 12:00 showing.

State then recovered Collins' fumble on the kickoff and scored in just three plays. Jackson got it, from a yard away and a two-point try failed, leaving it at 22-14 with 10:55 left in the third.

East Carolina came back to drive from its own 20 to the State 35 before being pushed back, and then pinned the Pack in a hole at the one on a Bill Lamm punt that rolled into the end zone, then out again to go out of bounds.

State punting for the only time, and it was a bad one, giving the Pirates the ball on the 32. But again, the Bucs failed to drive and a 40-yard field goal try was just wide.

"That was another key play," Emory said. "If he had hit then, we would have been within five."

Instead, Avery then engineered a 75-yard drive that shut the door. It took 12 plays, the longest of which were two 11-yarders, one a run by McLean, and another a pass to him. The nearly six minute drive climaxed with Jackson going through the middle for the final three yards and a 29-14 lead with 11:04 left to play.

State then blew another chance when the Pirates fumbled on the first play of the next series, at the 19. Instead, State fumbled it back.

State came back, after holding the Pirates, to drive 72 yards for the final score. A 15-yard run by McLean was the highlight of the drive, and he got the touchdown from five yards away to finish the scoring with 3:36 left.

"This has been a long, hard season," Emory said, "but we are young and we have a chance now to get everyone healthy, use our strength program to our advantage, and get ready for next year.

"We lost 12 top seniors, and we'll miss them, but we have some good people coming back too."

V'ball Team Eliminated

HIGHLAND HEIGHTS, Ky. — East Carolina University's volleyball team was eliminated from the Region II AIAW Volleyball tournament Friday.

The Lady Pirates were defeated by North Carolina, 15-9, 15-11, and then fell to Eastern Kentucky, 15-1 and 15-5.

The loss dropped the Pirates from the field. In addition, North Carolina and N.C. State were also eliminated during play Friday, as no N.C. teams made it to the finals of the tourament.

Irish Overcome Stubborn Air Force

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Phil Carter's 2-yard touchdown run capped a self-propelled 76-yard, tie-breaking drive in the third quarter Saturday to lead second-ranked and Sugar Bowl-bound Notre Dame to a 24-10 victory over Air Force.

Carter gained 71 of the 76 yards in 13 carries to finally put the Irish ahead in what had been a defensive struggle until the smaller Air Force team simply tired out.

Jim Stone's 7-yard touchdown run in the closing seconds of the third quarter gave the undefeated but once-tied Irish breathing room.

Notre Dame, which had not allowed a touchdown in a school-record 23 quarters, finally yielded in the fourth quarter after Johnny Jackson intercepted a Blair Kiel pass and returned 26 yards to the Irish 21.

The Irish clinched it on Stone's second touchdown of the game, a 2-yard run with 1:51 left to end an 80-yard drive.

The Irish boosted their record to 9-0-1 and have a Dec. 6 date against Southern California before going on to the Sugar Bowl to meet top-ranked Georgia.

Yale Blanks Harvard For Ivy Title

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — John Rogan fired a 25-yard touchdown pass to Curt Grieve and John Nitti bulled 1 yard for another score as Yale dominated Harvard 14-0 Saturday to claim undisputed possession of the Ivy League football title for the second straight year.

The victory in the 97th renewal of this series boosted Yale's overall record to 8-2, and conference mark to 6-1. Harvard, 7-3 overall and 4-3 in the league, could have tied for the title. But the Crimson never got its offense rolling as its three-game winning streak ended in the season finale for both teams.

The Eli took a Harvard punt and marched 80 yards in 12 plays to score on Rogan's first pass of the game with 11 seconds left in the first quarter.

Yale had advanced to the Crimson 16-yard-line before Rogan was sacked, setting up a fourth-and-18 play from the 25. Grieve went into the right corner of the end zone and beat cornerback Rocky DelGadillo for his eighth touchdown catch of the season.

Four running plays brought the ball to the 3, and, after Harvard stopped three tries for the goal line, Nitti charged up the middle for his sixth touchdown of the season.

Physician Used Phillies' Names For Prescriptions

HARRISBURG (AP) — A doctor who serves as team physician for the minor league Reading Phillies baseball club has been charged with illegally prescribing drugs by using the names of Philadelphia Phillies players.

None of the players was connected or charged in the alleged scheme, said state Justice Department spokesman Stephan Rosenfeld.

Dr. Patrick Mazza, 56, was charged on Friday with prescribing amphetamines by using the names of Steve Carlton, Greg Luzinski and his wife Jean, Pete Rose, Randy Lerch, Larry Christenson, Tim McCarver and Sheena Bowa, wife of Larry Bowa.

The only comment from the Phillies was a brief statement by Executive Vice President William Giles who said:

"A thorough investigation into the matter was held last summer and all Philadelphia Phillies players were found to have no involvement in the matter whatsoever."

Asked if any of the players were aware that Mazza allegedly used their names, Rosenfeld said, "There is no evidence indicating any participation by the players in the illegal conduct."

Mazza, who served as the Reading Phillies' physician when some of the current Philadelphia Phillies played for the minor league club, was not available for comment.

The drug story first emerged last summer, when the Phillies were battling for the National League baseball pennant. The Trenton (N.J.) Times said in a copyright story that state narcotics officials wanted to question some Phillies and members of their Reading farm club concerning alleged illegal prescriptions.

Several Phillies players hotly denied that they were tied to any criminal activity. Third baseman Mike Schmidt, mentioned in the newspaper account, called the report "totally ridiculous."

In all, Mazza is charged with illegally writing 23 prescriptions that totaled 2,630 dosage units of various amphetamine compounds, Bartle said.

Michael Knows Managing Risks

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Michael, following in the footsteps of so many, realizes the risk in working for New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, but he says it's worth it.

Michael became the fifth field manager of the Yankees in five years Friday, leaving his job as general manager to take over for Dick Howser, who resigned.

Howser's resignation was announced at an afternoon news luncheon in Steinbrenner's office at Yankee Stadium, less than a day after the manager made his decision to go into private business in his hometown of Tallahassee, Fla.

"I know there is some risk. I know there is some gamble," Michael said, "but it's a chance to do something in New York, and that's what I'm after."

On Friday, Michael signed a multiyear contract to manage the Yankees, Steinbrenner said. The owner said certain parts of the contract still remained to be ironed out, and he refused to be specific about terms.

Howser's resignation came after several weeks of speculation the manager was being forced out by Steinbrenner. Steinbrenner was openly critical of Howser after the American League playoffs, which the Yankees lost in three games to Kansas City.

He was particularly critical of Howser when he stood behind third base coach Mike Ferraro, who drew fire for allowing the potential tying run to be thrown out at the plate in the second game of the AL series.

"I enjoyed managing, but this other thing popped up," Howser said. "I couldn't do both. I was almost late getting in as it was. I pushed for 10 or 20 days to get in."

Howser said he could not get specific about his new job "because there are other people involved," but he did confirm it was in the area of real estate development. Howser also will stay on with the Yankees as supervisor of scouting in the Southeast.

Howser said a business group approached him after the season, and he met with them and witx Steinbrenner several times, mulling over his decision until the right offer was made.

"As of right now, I'm perfectly happy with what I got," Howser said.

Steinbrenner added: "The door was open to Dick to return. He made the decision...if you only knew the deal he got. It's an unbelievable deal. I've been through every facet of it with him."

Still, Howser twice refused to comment on questions: when asked point blank if he resigned or was fired, and when asked if he was unable to accept conditions placed upon his return.

"If it didn't work out, maybe it was my fault. I don't know," said Steinbrenner, denying he had laid down any conditions for Howser. "But with what he's got now, he'll look back in five years and wonder why he ever wanted to coach.

"Dick and I had our differences. I won't hide that," Steinbrenner said, "but anyone that works with me has differences with me. That's just me."

In answer to a question, Steinbrenner replied: "Yes, Dick could still be manager of the Yankees if he wanted."

Steinbrenner said he would not hire a new general manager to replace Michael. Instead, executive vice president Cedric Tallis and Bill Bergesch, vice president for baseball operations, would handle Michael's front office duties.

Steinbrenner said he would supplement his front office by hiring someone to fill the vacant Yankees presidency.

Running Backs Leading Teams To First In NFL

By The Associated Press

Real quick, try to name four National Football League running backs who have played the key roles in putting their teams in first place in their respective divisions this season.

Earl Campbell of Houston is an obvious answer, and Billy Sims of Detroit and Joe Cribbs of Buffalo have gotten lots of attention as rookie stars who have turned around their teams' fortunes. That's three.

Stumped? The fourth is fullback William Andrews of the Atlanta Falcons, who are one game ahead of Los Angeles in the NFC West.

Andrews follows the Campbell mold of punishing the tackler and he has done it well enough to be the NFL's No.5 rusher. He has 843 rushing yards in 165 carries and his average of 5.1 yards per carry is second only to Campbell.

"What I try to do is take the fight to them," says Andrews, whose team plays host to Chicago and star runner Walter Payton Sunday. "It makes a defense give a lot more respect to you. It also keeps you from getting hurt. If you let the defense come to you, nine times out of 10 you're going to get hurt. I'd rather deliver the blows than take them."

Andrews wasn't drafted until the third round in 1979 before the Falcons took him. He had spent most of his career at Auburn as a blocker for Cribbs.

"We knew he was an excellent receiver, a great blocker and that he was very tough," Falcons personnel director Tom Braatz said. "But we didn't see him run the way he has. Otherwise, he would have been a No. 1."

Ahead of Andrews in the NFL are Campbell, Sims, Payton and St. Louis' Ottis Anderson. "I think I'm in their class," he says.

Quarterback Steve Bartkowski quoted former Falcons defensive back Ray Easterling about Andrews.

"He used to tell me that he hated to come up to get William," Bartkowski said. "All he shows you is helmet, shoulder pads and knees. There's nothing soft there. He's like tackling a bowling ball. He doesn't give you anything to hit."

Borg Withdraws From Tournament

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg was withdrew from the $75,000 Italian International Indoor Tournament because of a respiratory causing breathing difficulty.

On his doctor's orders, Borg canceled exhibition games in Strasbourg, Grenoble and Milan and an appearance at a party in Milan.

On the court, Richard Meyer downed Sweden's Jan Norback 7-6, 7-5; and Italy's Paolo Bertolucci downed Jeff Borowiak 7-5, 4-6, 6-3. Tomas Smid of Czeckoslovakia gained the semifinals because of Borg's illness.

Sugar Dances, Duran Scowls As Fight Nears

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard skipped and danced over the jump rope, putting on a show. Every so often, he'd steal a peek at the crowd of school kids packing his workout and give them a wink and a wave as they squealed with delight.

He plays to the people, and with his cover-boy good looks and charismatic personality, he wins them over in no time.

Roberto Duran ignores the crowd. There are no winks and no waves. Instead of a smile, he wears a scowl.

The differences between these two fighters are vast.

Duran is a squat, compact puncher who loves to stand toe-to-toe and slug it out. Leonard is taller, more angular in build and a more stylish, classic boxer.

Duran learned his craft in the streets of Panama City. Leonard is a gym fighter who grew up in suburban Palmer Park, Md.

Both of them have ring-wise handlers. Working in Leonard's corner are Angelo Dundee, who masterminded Muhammad Ali's career, and Janks Morton. For Duran, it's Ray Arcel and Freddie Brown, who have, oh, a century or so of boxing savvy locked in their fertile brains.

The contrasts are so great that Duran-Leonard seems a natural for a continuing ring rivalry. They don't like each other, and they don't hide their feelings.

"Mr. Leonard is going to kiss the floor of the ring," promises Duran, who outpointed Sugar Ray for the crown in 15 gruelling rounds at Montreal on June 20.

For his part, Leonard thinks he knows what went wrong in the first fight.

"I didn't utilize my skills," he said. "I was determined to stand my ground and fight Duran his way. I have conquered my stubborness."

That would indicate that Leonard plans to use his speed and agility against the champion. But in sparring sessions, he also has been working on roughhouse tactics.

"I'll do what's done to me," he said. "This time, I'll give back what I receive. What took place in Montreal is something I can correct here in New Orleans."

Dundee promises that Leonard will use his left hand to better advantage this time.

"Nobody knows Duran better than Ray," Dundee said. "He's had 15 rounds to learn."

Dundee and Morton have convinced Leonard he must use his most effective weapons. "I can't forget technique and movement," Sugar Ray said.

Duran scorns Leonard, often teasing the ex-champ with word and action. "He tries to psyche you," said Leonard.

Arcel and Brown assure you that's not necessary at all.

"When Duran walks in the ring, he's the boss," Brown said.

Duran and Leonard are a study in contrasting styles and approaches to their work. And that contrast is what makes their second confrontation so fascinating.

N.C. A&T 49
N.C. Central 13

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina A&T's Roland Myers ran for two touchdowns and passed for a third Saturday to help the Aggies defeat traditional rival North Carolina Central 49-13 in a college football game.

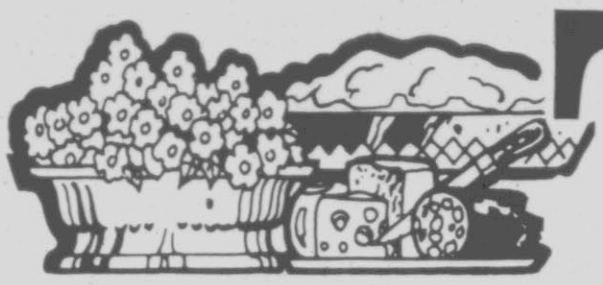

Also contributing two touchdowns for the Aggies were Wayman Pitts and Cleotis Johnson.

Despite the loss, Central clinched the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship with a 7-4 overall record and 7-0 record in the league. The win means Central will play in the Goal Bowl in Richmond, Va., on Dec. 6.

The Aggies took advantage of a number of fumbles by Central. Emmanuel Thompson recovered a Central fumble on a kickoff return in the second quarter to set up Myers' 17-yard pass touchdown pass to Frank Carr.

After Central quarterback Kenneth Pugh was sacked in the third quarter, the Aggies scooped up another fumble for a score. That time Myers took the ball in from the 1-yard line.

Myers' other score came on a 6-yard run in the second quarter.

Kareem 'Hands' Suns Big Defeat

By The Associated Press

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar took things into his own huge hands Friday night as the Los Angeles Lakers evened the score with the Phoenix Suns.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 29 points and, perhaps more important, pulled down 20 rebounds to spark the Lakers to a 116-88 National Basketball Association romp over the Suns just 24 hours after Phoenix handed Los Angeles a heartbreaking 102-99 loss.

Referring to the recent loss of Earvin "Magic" Johnson due to a knee injury, Abdul-Jabbar said, "In the first half tonight, without Earvin, my job changed to get more rebounds (13). It's hard to explain my 20 rebounds and nine offensive boards tonight. A lot of it had to do with position.

"There was an intensity created because of what happened last night, which was one of the worst ways ever to lose a game."

The defeat was only the fourth of the season for the Suns and the most one-sided victory ever by a Los Angeles team over Phoenix.

Los Angeles was outrebounded 50-35 Thursday night, but led by the 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar, controlled the boards Friday night. The big man's offensive rebound total was his best effort since being trade by Milwaukee to the Lakers before the 1975-76 season. He also hit 14 of 27 shots and had four of the Lakers' 13 blocked shots.

Los Angeles took command of the game by scoring 12 of the final 17 points of the first half and 13 of the first 21 points in the second half, stretching a 44-43 LA lead to 69-56.

Bulls 130, Knicks 121

Artis Gilmore scored four of his 29 points and Ricky Sobers added six more in the final 90 seconds to help the Bulls avoid blowing a game in which they led by as much as 20 points, 104-84, late in the third quarter.

The Knicks got a season high of 36 points from Ray Williams, while teammate Bill Cartwright scored 32, including 11 of 11 shots from the field in the second half.

Chicago's Larry Kenon contributed 24 points.

76ers 97, Pacers 88

The 76ers overcame a 14-2 deficit at the outset to pick up their fifth straight victory and 17th in their last 18 outings.

Celtics 108, Warriors 106

Larry Bird's 27 points helped the Celtics rebound from a 19-point deficit and go on to gain a narrow victory.

Boston trailed 81-70 with 1:52 remaining in the third quarter, but came roaring back as center Robert Parish's five points keyed a 14-0 spurt that sent the Celtics ahead 84-81 with 9:17 left in the game.

Two jumpers by Bird helped keep Boston in front 106-101 with a minute remaining and, after a Warrior basket, Chris Ford's driving hook iced the game for Boston, now 13-5.

Rockets 116, Nets 108

Moses Malone pumped in 33 points to pace the Rockets, but it was Mike Dunleavy, who sparked a fourth-period surge when he scored nine consecutive points.

The lead changed hands six times in the second half until Dunleavy's one-man drive tied it again at 101-101 in the final quarter. The Rockets then pulled away and Dunleavy added two more points, giving him 11 for the night.

Bullets 102, Clippers 90

Elvin Hayes and Kevin Grevey each popped in 21 points to help the Bullets to the victory over the slumping Clippers. Hayes also grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked seven shots to help deal San Diego its seventh straight setback.

Supersonics 101, Mavs 91

James Bailey scored 22 points and Jack Sikma hit 20 to pace Seattle past the tenacious Mavericks.

Geoff Huston led the Mavs with 20 points, with Abdul Jeelani contributing 16 points, most of them at the end of the third quarter and in the fourth quarter when Dallas was battling back.

Nuggets 134, Kings 121

John Roche threw in a season-high 30 points and rookie Cedric Hordges contributed career highs of 21 points and 11 rebounds in Denver's victory, which ended an eight-game losing streak.

Livestock Prices Fell On Friday

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Livestock prices on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange fell Friday, in part because of what analysts said was an attempt to bring futures prices in line with seasonally weakened cash markets.

"The thought is that the cash market will be a little bit lower next week," said Bob Kuhn in reference to industry expectations that hog prices will suffer because of the traditional strength of poultry at Thanksgiving.

Kuhn, a livestock analyst with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, said prices on pork bellies (uncured bacon) were lower because of large supplies. He said price declines Friday were a reaction to figures released Thursday on the amount of bellies in cold storage.

"The amount of bellies in storage (42.37 million pounds) may not be a record but it is extremely high ... it is among the largest on record," he said. "And it is higher than it was expected to be."

Cattle prices fell partly in sympathy with pork bellies and partly because cattle futures prices also are at a premium to cattle cash prices, Kuhn said. He said there also was pressure because there are expected to be big deliveries on the December contract.

Lower prices on grains used as livestock feed also were said to be weighing on the market.

At the close, live cattle were 1.03 cents lower to .02 cent higher, December 66.57 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .95 cent lower to .40 cent higher, January 77.80 cents a pound; hogs were .13 cent lower to .45 cent higher, December 49.92 cents a pound; pork belies were 1.60 cents to .95 cent lower, February 71.15 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices closed mixed after bouncing up and down in what sources said was "nervous" trading.

Prices in all pits closed above the opening prices, which had been dragged down as traders sold to take profits from Thursday's advances.

Soybeans recovered the best, closing mostly higher on short covering, traders said. Locals, moving back and forth as buyers and then sellers, were said to dominate activity in that pit and cause the erratic price moves.

Corn prices were lifted somewhat on heavy commission house buy orders just before the close, and wheat got support from commercial buying, traders said.

At the close, soybeans were 2 cents lower to 5 cents higher, January $9.47 a bushel; oats were ½ cent to 1 cent lower, December $2.20 a bushel; wheat was 3¾ cents lower to 1 cent higher, December $5.20¾ a bushel; corn was ¼ cent to 1¾ cents higher, December $3.89 a bushel.

Analysts said interest rate futures settled lower in an adjustment to news that some banks had raised their prime lending rates to 17 percent from 16.25 percent and to the announce-ment by the Department of Housing and Urban Development that Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administraton loans on single and multifamily homes will rise from 13 percent to 13.5 percent on Monday.

New Japanese Trade Agreements To Help N.C. Tobacco Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Japanese trade agreements represent a "major breakthrough" that will help North Carolina's tobacco farmers and tobacco industry, Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., said Friday.

Morgan said Japan had granted new concessions that would allow more American tobacco products to be exported to that country. North Carolina is the leading tobacco-producing state.

The Japanese actions, which include tariff reductions on cigarettes, cigars and pipe tobacco, follow allegations by U.S. manufacturers that Japan has violated trade obligations by obstructing these imports.

"The concessions granted by the Japanese government will benefit both North Carolina tobacco growers and tobacco manufacturers," Morgan said in a prepared statement. "My office has worked long and hard for this and I am gratified that we have had this success."

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said the agreements are "important to our tobacco farmers at a time when increased exports are essential in raising the incomes of farmers."

Morgan agreed, adding that, "These concessions should be of great benefit to our tobacco interests and it should be evident as early as next year."

Meanwhile U.S. Trade Representative Reubin Askew said the U.S. government welcomes the trade initiatives.

"We expect that implementation of these commitments will result in increased market opportunities for the U.S. manufactured tobacco industry and, thus, in substantially increased sales to Japan," Askew said.

Morgan said Japan had agreed to several tobacco-export changes, including one new policy that would reduce tariffs on cigarettes from 90 percent to 35 percent and also reduce tariffs on cigars and pipe tobacco by 110 percent to 60 percent.

He said other changes would:

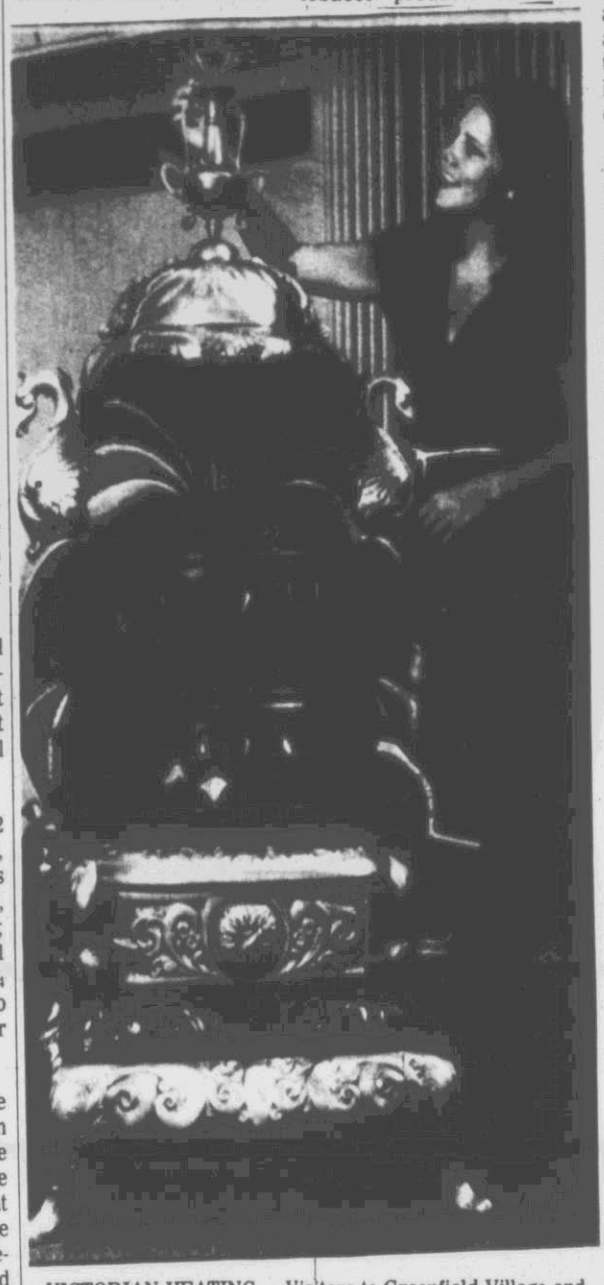

— Increase profit margins for retailers in Japan from 7 percent to 8.5 percent in 1981 and to 10 percent in 1982.

— Insure the price differential between imported cigarettes and distorted cigarettes should not exceed 100 yen or 45 cents in 1981.

— Increase the number of Japanese retailers that handle imported tobacco products next year from 14,000 to 20,000.

— Increase the number of test market outlets from 40 to 60 and liberalize test market standards.

Wendy Holcombe, 17

Picking's Her Talent And Her Goal

Wendy Holcombe is the first to admit she's not an honor student, but she's not worried or down on herself. She doesn't think her academic performance will have much effect on what she plans to do with her life. She wants to continue what she's already begun: being a country music star.

17-year-old Wendy is repeating the 11th grade because she missed so many days last year. She's transferred from her Alabaster, Ala. high school to Hillsboro High School in Nashville, Tenn.She's spending every weekend and all her summer and holiday vacations throughout making personal appearances with her banjo, her guitar, her fiddle, her dobro, her steel guitar, and her mandolin.

She and her three-piece backup band even traveled to Greenville midweek — Wednesday — to appear at the Tobacco Farmer Show here. They misjudged the time from Nashville to Greenville by van and the show had to be delayed 45 minutes, but the audience didn't seem to mind. Wendy charmed them when she did get onstage just like she's charmed everyone else she's entertained from Alabaster, Ala., to Las Vegas, Nev. in the last five years.NBC has already signed her for a television show of her own as soon as she can complete her high school education. She said she is not free to divulge too many details about plans for the show, but that it will involve acting, an art she hasn't pursued yet, but isn't afraid to try. After all, she went professional as a musician within a year after she first picked up a musical instrument. And she hasn't had a music lesson yet, unless you count the music-reading and trumpet instruction her high school band instructor attempted to give her after she'd already hit such highs as an appearance on the Grand Old Opry, seen by every country music hopeful everywhere as the epitome of success.

Because she was running late Wednesday, she invited this interviewer to chat with her as she applied makeup, rolled up her hair, and changed from jeans and t-shirt to stage togs after her harried arrival here and prior to her performance. She's a sweet-natured Haley Mills lookalike with an Alabama Hill Country drawl, a delightfully bubbly teenager who's going after what she wants with the help of promoters who see much potential in her varied musical ability and the ease with which she relates to audiences everywhere.

Wendy said she left her family farm near Alabaster, Ala. about six weeks ago to go to Nashville and live with Andrea Smith, a vice president of Top Billing Inc. talent management firm. Until six weeks ago, her father, Bill Holcombe, had traveled with her all the time, but a family decision was made recently, she said, that he should have more time at home with Wendy's mother and brother, Bill.

Laetrile Results Could Be Reported In April

EDITOR'S NOTE — Laetrile has long been hotly contested as an anti-cancer treatment. The federal Food and Drug Administration deems it worthless and seeks to ban it. Now a series of rigorous clinical tests is under way which scientists hope will settle the question, but already there are rumbles among Laetrile proponents that the tests are designed for failure.

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The woman watches the doctor raise a syringe filled with a clear liquid. As the needle slips into a vein, she sees the liquid disappear into her body. Her last chance? She has terminal cancer and she's just received Laetrile.

This is taking place not in an out-of-the-way Mexican Laetrile clinic, where the controversial substance has been dispensed for years, but in a major American medical center.

The woman is one of scores of cancer patients receiving Laetrile in an attempt to determine, in a scientific way, if Laetrile works.

The $500,000 test program, sponsored by the National Cancer Institute, started last July. The circumstances are unusual because most doctors don't think Laetrile is useful.

"We would not normally pick Laetrile for clinical testing," says Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of the institute, explaining that animal tests generally have shown Laetrile ineffective.

Nevertheless, Laetrile has been used by thousands of cancer patients, with many claiming that the substance helped them. The institute says it's difficult for lay people to weigh such claims against the contention of most medical doctors that Laetrile is useless.

The federal Food and Drug Administration considers Laetrile as unproven and has been pressing a campaign to ban it.

Yet 23 states have approved Laetrile for use within their borders, even though the FDA bars its interstate shipment. And many patients who want the treatments go to Mexico where they are not banned. Among them was actor Steve McQueen, who died Nov. 7.

DeVita says this situation shows that a scientific test is warranted.

"We hope to find reasonable information that reasonable people will believe," he says.

Some Laetrile advocates already are asserting that the tests are purposely designed to show that Laetrile is ineffective against cancer.

This accusation is hotly denied by the cancer institute and the scientists involved, who contend that the advocates are just trying to hedge their bets in case the results prove negative.

The lead institution in the studies is the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., which is coordinating the data from the other centers.

The Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City, the Jonsson Cancer Center of the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center in Tucson are the other institutions participating in the clinical tests.

In the first study done early this year, Mayo Clinic researchers did a three-month test on how toxic Laetrile therapy might be. The test was designed to see whether patients developed dangerous levels of cyanide from the treatment.

Laetrile is made from the pits of apricots, bitter almonds and other kernels containing cyanide. The six patients in the first study got Laetrile along with the special "metabolic" diet favored by advocates of the therapy. This is a general "health food" diet plus extra vitamins and enzymes.

Five patients showed no side effects. A sixth had clinical evidence of toxicity after eating large quantities of raw almonds, which appeared to stimulate the release of cyanide.

The Mayo Clinic researchers decided that the side effects were not serious enough to interfere with full clinical trials. Patients in the medical trials are using the special diet, but have been warned not to eat raw nuts.

The other two studies are to find out whether Laetrile shrinks malignant tumors and if the substance can relieve the pain, loss of appetite and other symptoms associated with cancer.

The tests involve advanced cancer patients who are beyond hope of a cure by any established therapy. The study on tumor activity is well under way after some initial problems in getting enough of the right kind of patients. The researchers didn't want patients who were so sick they would be unlikely to respond to any treatment and likely to die before the trial is over.

"We have patients who are living with cancer, not patients who are dying with cancer," says Dr. Charles Moertel of the Mayo Clinic.

About 120 patients at the four centers were enrolled in the tumor activity trial by November. Moertel says the full complement of 150 to 175 should be enrolled by the first of the year.

There will be groups of at least 30 patients each with colon and rectal cancer, lung cancer and breast cancer, three of the most common types. The test also calls for at least 14 patients with lymph gland cancer and malignant melanoma.

Some with less common types of cancer who meet the study criterion also will be admitted.

A rigorous treatment schedule was worked out by the cancer institute, initially with the help of some Laetrile advocates.

Each participant gets a complete physical examination and an extensive series of tests to establish current status. The patients get daily intravenous injections of Laetrile for a total of 21 doses. At the end of the injection phase, they begin taking Laetrile pills daily for maintenence.

During treatment, patients get the nutritional supplements recommended by Laetrile advocates. This includes many times the recommended daily allowances of vitamins C, A, and E, as well as vitamin B-complex and mineral supplements.

They also get four daily tablets containing pancreatic enzymes, proteins capable of accelerating the action of other substances, also recommended by advocates.

Another key part of the treatment is diet, say the proponents, and participants follow strict health food menus.

This means no eggs, dairy products or meat, particularly during the three weeks of Laetrile injections, and no pies, cakes, candies and similar foods.

The diet allows fruits, vegetables and grains, but no sugar, salt, coffee, tea or alcohol.

In this study, doctors principally are looking for evidence that tumors are shrinking because of the therapy. Tumors will be measured after the 21 injections, again after two weeks on oral Laetrile and every five weeks after that.

"We should have followed this group long enough to report some results in April," Moertel says.

The cancer institute says it's generally accepted that a 20 percent response rate in previously untreated patients, and a 10 percent response in previously treated victims, represents significant anti-tumor activity from a new treatment.

The last of the three studies, due to start this month, is to test the ability of Laetrile to relieve the symptoms of cancer.

In this trial, about 150 patients go on the special diet with the supplemental vitamin and enzyme regimens. But half will get Laetrile and half a placebo — an innocuous substance which has no effect, like sugar water, for example.

This will be a "double blind" test in which neither the doctors nor the patients will know who gets Laetrile or placebo. The schedule of treatments — injections and pills — and dosages are the same as in the previous trial.

Researchers want to see if Laetrile cuts pain, aids in weight gain, makes it easier for patients to perform normal activities and prolongs life.

Patients in this study generally will be sicker than those in the anti-tumor activity trial. "These will be, for the most part, patients dying of cancer," Moertel says.

Early in the study, the symptomatic status of each patient will be evaluated. During the later oral therapy, status will be assessed weekly.

The cancer institute says a previous similar study with patients at this stage of disease found that 25 percent claimed symptomatic improvement with placebo therapy alone.

By using more patients, the researchers hope to separate this "placebo effect" from any relief that may come from Laetrile.

Scientists are confident that these trials will resolve many questions surrounding Laetrile. But proponents of the treatment suspect the intent of the "medical establishment" in finally doing tests it has opposed for so long.

Michael Culbert of San Francisco, board chairman and a founder of the Committee for Freedom of Choice in Cancer Therapy, is a skeptic.

"We were one of the few pro-Laetrile groups in favor of cooperating with the government in the tests and even helped them design them," Culbert says, "but now I suspect a conspiracy."

The group has sued to stop the trials because it doesn't feel the government is using pure amygdalin, as Laetrile is sometimes called. The group initially offered to supply the amygdalin used in the tests, but the government decided to make its own to assure purity and consistency.

"We don't think they are using real amygdalin," Culbert says. "If they are testing something like amygdalin or quasi-amygdalin, it's not a fair test."

Dr. Paul Davignon, chief of the cancer institute's Pharmaceuticals Resources Branch, says the trials are using amygdalin made by several American contractors from apricot pits.

"We then do potency and purity tests at the institute and have independent laboratories verify the results," Davignon says. "It is of the highest quality."

Moertel agrees. He says the Mayo Clinic even does a separate analysis of the Laetrile it gets from the cancer institute to make sure it's the right thing.

"This is by far the purest amygdalin ever given," he says. "You can expect that the critics will say we are not using the right Laetrile, the right diet, the right vitamins, the wrong patients, etc.

Couple Speaks Vows In Afternoon Wedding

GRIMESLAND — Brenda Faye Holloman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Earl Holloman of Rt. 1, Grimesland, became the bride of Stephen Mark Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leslie Dixon of Rt. 1, Grimesland, Saturday afternoon at four o'clock.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Joseph Friddle in the Proctor Memorial Christian Church.

A program of music was rendered by Ruth Majette, organist, and Evelyn Davenport, soloist.

The bride's sister, Debra Hudson, of Grimesland was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Alice Thorne and Pat Waters of Washington, Teresa Harris of Greenville, Susan Tyndall Hairr of Kinston and Donna Dixon of Grimesland, sister of the bridegroom.

Angie Cannon of Winterville was flower girl and Scott Hudson of Grimesland was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man while ushers included Jay Stacks of Ayden, Harold Mills, Warren Cade and Mickey Sawyer, all of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was overlaid in beaded French chantilly lace and the full bishop sleeves were of sheer matching lace with scalloped lace trimming the cuffs. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated with a double ruffled flounce at the hemline trimmed in scalloped chantilly lace that extended up the back of the train to an orgnza bow at the waistline.

She wore a walking length veil of illusion, pencil edged and featuring a panel of scalloped chantilly lace trim, attached to a caplet overlaid in matching lace beaded with scrolls of pearls. She carried a colonial nosegay of white daisies, miniature carnations, cushion poms and baby's breath with white lace interspersed with streamers.

The honor attendant wore a formal dress of green polyester with a crepe bodice and carried a hand bouquet of white cushion poms with a touch of pink with a white picot bow and streamers. Bridesmaids wore formal gowns of fuchsia with spaghetti straps with matching floral bodices. Each carried a hand bouquet of pink cushion poms with a touch of white with white and pink picot bow and streamers.

MRS. STEPHEN MARK HARRIS

The flower girl was dressed like the honor attendant and carried a white wicker basket of pink and white cushion poms with pink and white bow and streamers.

The church was decorated with two baskets of white gladioli, daisies, chrysanthemums and cushion poms. The bridal couple knelt on a white prie-dieu.

The couple will live at Rt. 3, Greenville, after a wedding trip to Washington, D. C

The bride graduated from D. H. Conley High Scool and works at Stanadyne, Washington. The bridegroom works at Dixon's Used Cars, Grimesland.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony and was given by the mother of the bride and her aunt, Anna Holloman.

Hyatt-Manning Vows Said

EDENTON — Miss Betty Nelle Manning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nelson Manning of Edenton, became the bride of James Henry Hyatt Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Hyatt of Rt. 4, Ahoskie, Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

Dr. John A. Allen performed the double ring ceremony in the Edenton Baptist Church. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Larry Smith of Edenton. Music was rendered by the church's Adult Choir.

The bride, given in marrige by her father, wore a gown of crystal organza and imported guipure lace styled with a modified Queen Anne neckline and long fitted sleeves appliqued with matching lace medallions. The A-line skirt had a border of matching lace trim that overlaid a self-fabric ruffle outlining the hemline of the skirt and chapel length train. Her veil was alencon lace draped over a satin peau covered Juliet cap. She carried a prayerbook, which belonged to her great grandmother, centered with orchids.

Anna Kay Manning of Buies Creek, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the matron of honor was Laura L. Hawkins of Fayetteville. Bridesmaids included Mrs. W. F. Edmundson, Martha Jo Hollowell, Mrs. C. E. Small III and Mrs. Gordon K. West, all of Edenton, Mrs. Nancy Hall and Pamela Madaris of Greenville, Mrs. Kathryn Minnick of Ayden and Rebecca W. Warren of Greensboro.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Bland Baker and Bennie W. Hyatt, brother of the bridegroom, of Ahoskie, Kyle Dilday of Kinston and Richard H. Manning of Elizabeth City.

The couple will be living in Edenton after a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University and teaches at John A. Holmes High School, Edenton. The bridegroom graduated from Mount Olive College, ECU and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. He is minister of music at Edenton Baptist Church.

Couple Marries In Ceremony Saturday

Kimberly Jo Miller and Thomas Stephen Joseph were united in marriage Saturday at 7 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Pat Houston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Miller of Vienna, Va., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Joseph of Fayetteville.

A program of nuptial music was performed by Mrs. Sharon Irwin, organist, and Ms. Teresa Guion, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a gown of ivory silk organza with pearl trimmed alencon lace embroidered on the Queen Anne neckline, bodice, long fitted sleeves and waistline. The skirt had a triangular shaped insert with matching pearl trimmed lace falling to a flowing cathedral train. Her matching fingertip veil was accented with a headband of alencon lace and pearls. She carried a formal cascade of rubrum lilies, red roses, baby's breath and sprays of ivy.

Pamela Miller of Lansing, Mich., sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of dubonnet matte jersey designed with an open neckline in front, shirred bodice featuring a dubonnet silk Venise lace yoke and cap sleeves. Dubonnet piping outlined the lace yoke and was finished with a tie bow in back. The gown also featured a full gathered skirt falling from the semi-natural waistline. She carried a cascade bouquet of rubrum lilies, pink roses, baby's breath and ivy tied with pink satin ribbon. She wore a rose and baby's breath in her hair.

Serving as bridesmaids were Brenda Burrouws of High Point, Debbie Paul and Holly Lupton of Greenville. Their gowns were styled identical to that of the honor attendant and they carried matching bouquets. Kimberly Hampton, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a formal gown of ivory matte jersey. She carried a miniature of the bride's bouquet with rubrums and burgundy pixie carnations. She wore white flowers in her hair.

Serving as best man was the brother of the bridegroom, Robert Jospeh of Ormond Beach, Fla. Groomsmen included James Blanton and Graham Moffit of Greenville and Jeffery Packard of Baltimore, Md.

The reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the Greenville Country Club. Music was provided by the Tommy G Band.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents honoring the bridal couple and family at Sweet Caroline's.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of East Carolina University. She is a special education instructor with Pitt County Schools and the bridegroom is an audiologist for Rutherford/McDowell County School Systems.

The couple will live in McDowell County.

Engagement Announced

MARY MAC WILLIAMSON. . .is the daughter of Mrs. Romie Floyd Williamson of Fayetteville, who announces her engagement to Timothy Lee Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Johnson of Richlands. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. Williamson. A Dec. 20 wedding is being planned.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

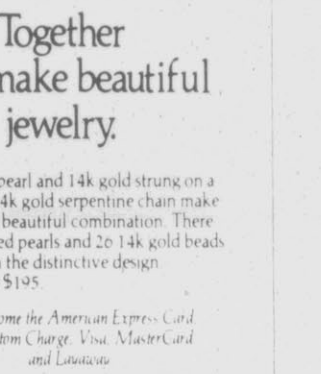

Chapter Has Recent Meet

Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its first November meeting at the home of Mrs. Sue Likosar. Mrs. Jackie Gehrlein and Mrs. Lynn Sprecher gave the program.

Their program topic was "Saving Time and Money."

The group will be selling pecans and its first service project.

Thousands Reply To Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: I invited readers to tell me where they were when they first heard that President Kennedy had been shot. I've received over 16,000 responses, and they're still pouring in! Some excerpts from this incredible collection:

"How could I forget that day? I had gone to the grocery store, where I heard the shocking news. I rushed home immediately to find my dear husband slumped in his chair — dead of a massive heart attack! The radio beside him was still blasting."

LILLIAN MILLER, PHOENIX, ARIZ.

"I was on the operating table in the middle of a hemorrhoidectomy when a nurse rushed in and shouted, 'Doctor, I just heard that President Kennedy was shot in Dallas!' The doctor dropped the instrument he was holding and gasped, 'Oh, my God!' I was left in a jackknife position until he regained his composure, after which he completed the surgery with somewhat unsteady hands. Later, the informer stuck her head in the room and said, 'Sorry, Doctor, I guess that news could have waited.' To which he replied, 'It sure as hell could have!'"

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION READER

"I was in third grade in a Catholic school when the news came over the loudspeaker. The sister cried, then we were all sent ho... At that age I thought that was the way we got rid of our p.sidents. Later when I saw Mrs. Kennedy on TV moving out of the White House so Mrs. Johnson could move in, I thought, 'The least they could do for Mrs. Kennedy was to let her keep the house.'"

PETER J. SMALL, L.A., CALIF.

"We were at the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo when some Americans we had just met phoned us from the lobby to give us the news. We joined them downstairs and wept openly with other Americans. The Japanese, reputed to be unemotional, wept with us. J.F.K. was loved by them and still is."

JACK AND ELLA, N.Y.C.

"President Kennedy's assassination was announced as I entered USC's dental clinic, where 24 students were working on patients. Twenty-four dental instruments were held skyward and 48 mouths opened simultaneously — 49 including my own."

ELBERTA, LONG BEACH

"I was in the waiting room of my psychiatrist's office, slightly early for my appointment. I had a transistor radio with a silent attachment plugged into my ear. When I heard the shocking news, I ran to the desk girl and shouted, 'The president has been shot!' She came out, calmly took my arm, led me into the doctor's office and asked the doctor to see me at once!"

ST. LOUIS MEMORIES

"I was in the Peace Corps in Liberia, West Africa, when the tragic news came over the short-wave radio on the Voice of America. I will always remember the deep sorrow expressed by the people of Liberia over the death of the man who had inspired me to join the Peace Corps."

RAY HATLER, L.A.

"My husband and I (both Canadians) were in our hardware store in Hamilton, Ontario, when we heard the first bulletin on the radio. We and our customers waited in shock and disbelief for further news. We Canadians shared your grief. The border, after all, is at times only an imaginary line."

American Style: The Chicago Makeover

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — In Chicago, there's a place where they can make a long face appear shorter, a rough face smoother, pale cheeks as rosy as two taillights.

It's called The Paint Shop, and it's a place where you can get "the high fashion look." I was never quite sure what that look was, but I knew I didn't have it.

It's something you see at exclusive, members-only discos. You see it at fashion shows. You see it at opera houses. You don't see it in your typical newsroom.

So I decided to visit The Paint Shop to offer my face for a "makeover." I wanted to see whether they could give the "high fashion look" to someone who had spent her adult life making up with 69-cent lip gloss and powder compacts with broken mirrors.

"Is that all the makeup you usually wear?" The Paint Shop's owner, Jane Domurot, asked the day I walked in.

I looked in the mirror. There were a lot of doubts painted on my face, and little else.

"Yeah, that's it," I said, a bit apologetically. I looked around the shop and my heart melted like a pot of warm rouge. I was getting scared.

"Oh dear, I hate to say this," Ms. Domurot began, as I bellied up to her makeup bar.

"Oh, go ahead," I said nonchalantly, panicking inwardly.

"Well, you've distorted your eyebrows," said Ms. Domurot, who has made up the likes of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, TV personality Tom Snyder and several Miss Americas.

My eyebrows? Well, I thought, if you were as shaggy browed as the gorilla at the Brookfield Zoo, you'd get tweezer-happy too.

But eyebrow improvement was to be the first step en route to that "high-fashion" look. Armed with an eyebrow pencil to draw in the hairs I had erroneously plucked out, and a set of tweezers to pull out the ones I had erroneously left in, she began.

I grabbed for the mirror. I looked better! My panic eased.

"Now for the cleaning. Most people don't clean their faces well enough," Ms. Domurot said, whipping out a bottle of white cleansing lotion and shaking it the way my mother used to shake cough medicine.

Ms. Domurot, who has developed her own line of Domurot Cosmetics, explained that she was using a water-based cleanser as opposed to a cream-based one because my skin type is "combination" (still some acne) "going into normal."

"Press upwards when you clean your face," she said, "because your skin is like the shingles on a slanted roof."

I dutifully pressed up, getting some of the stuff up my nose.

After tissuing that off, it was time for the Blackhead Scrub, a product with some of the gritty properties of kitchen cleansers.

"It's like scouring the kitchen sink," Ms. Domurot said. "After you're done with the dishes, you still need some abrasion to get the sink clean."

Finally, after toners and moisturizers, it was time to start with the paint. First was the foundation, or makeup base.

"Press down, so you won't get it in your pores," Ms. Domurot said.

Press up when you clean. Press down when you paint. This was getting confusing.

But I was just getting started. The eyes, a sort of paint-by-number process, involved about five different shading operations, plus mascara. The cheeks necessitated "contour" powder as well as rouge. The lips were coated with lip liner, lipstick, and lip gloss.

It was involved, but it turned out to be worth it. I took a last look in the mirror. Presto, high fashion look!

Most unfortunately, I couldn't go to the opera or the disco. I had to go to work.

"Ah Chicago, I've seen your painted women. ... " one co-worker intoned, attempting to wax poetic. Then, "I laughed, I cried, I'll give it three stars," he said.

I'm still not exactly a painted woman, but I am wearing more makeup now. It's sort of a compromise between what The Paint Shop did to me and what I used to do to myself.

Copycat Cooking: Home Pudding

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press
Food Editor

DEAR TWOSOME: I also regret that the vanilla pudding mix flavored with pure vanilla extract is no longer available, because I, too, used to buy it. But your query came at the right time. When it arrived I remembered that the first chapter in "Pure and Simple" by Marian Burros (Berkley, $2.95) gives some recipes for "convenience foods" minus chemicals and preservatives. Sure enough, when I checked, I found a recipe for the pudding mix in the book. My adaptation of it follows.

I've used Marian Burros' proportions for making the mix. But because, like you, I love the flavor of pure vanilla, I've upped it in making a batch of pudding mix. I think the addition helps mask the flavor of the nonfat dry milk in the mix.

The vanilla pudding may be served plain, but I must warn you that its color is as white as driven snow, because it has no food coloring added. I like to serve it topped with fresh fruit — for example, sliced strawberries, plain or sweetened. Sometimes I add an orange-flavored liqueur or kirsch (clear cherry brandy) to the berries. There is a domestic kirsch that is much less expensive than the imported one and is decent enough to use with fruit.

You're bound to find many other recipes in "Pure and Simple" that you'll want to try. As well as being one of this country's best-known reporters on consumer affairs, Marian Burros appreciates delicious food. She is the author of a number of cookbooks that have been extremely well-received because, as I said when I wrote about the hardcover edition of "Pure and Simple," her books always deliver what their titles promise.

HOME PUDDING MIX

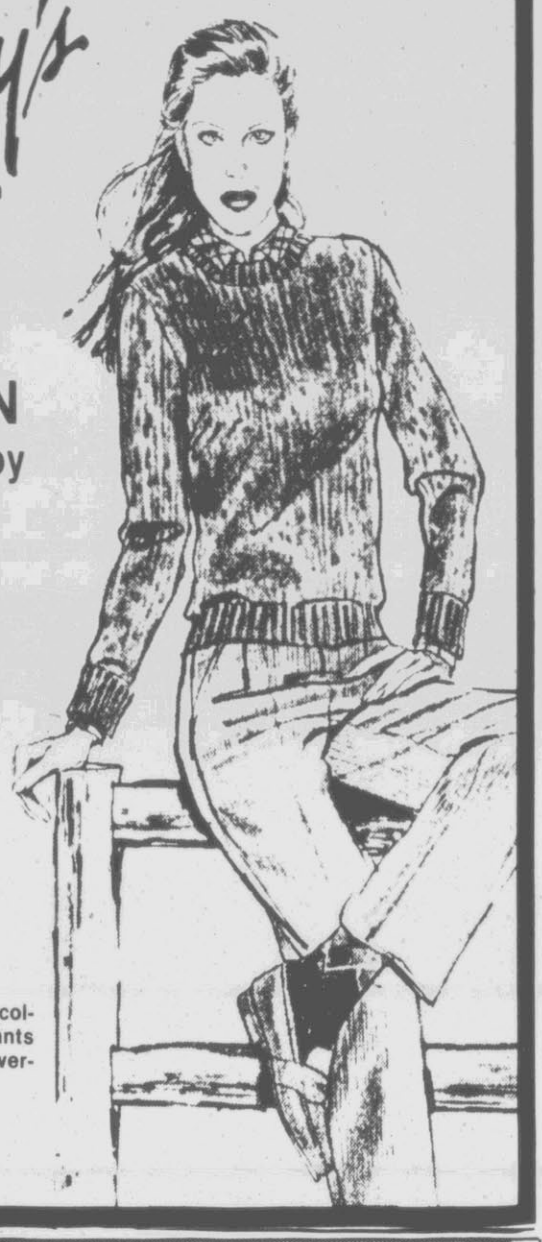

3½ cups nonliquidized nonfat dry milk
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup cornstarch

In a large bowl thoroughly stir together the dry milk, sugar and cornstarch. Turn into a jar with a screw-top lid; cover tightly; store in the refrigerator. Before using, stir thoroughly. Makes about 5 cups.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, NOV. 23, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to make long-range plans that could provide greater affluence for you in the days ahead. Try to be more cooperative with associates and be more productive.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Listening to ideas of close ties and cooperating more with them is wise at this time. Devote evening to loved one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Accept your friends as they are instead of trying to change them, and you get along better. Schedule your time well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may be in a mood to spend a lot of money for a good time, but stay within your budget and you'll be happier.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use more kindness and gentleness at home and improve harmony there. Make this a most worthwhile day.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to make detailed plans that could give you added security in the future. Catch up with your reading today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may want to add to income but be careful of tricky individuals that could bring you much trouble. Express happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Not a good day to be forceful with others. Plan how to have a more ideal social life. Be charming with everyone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You had better carry through with an important responsibility you have instead of trying to get out of it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Some friends may appear thin-skinned today so treat them with kid gloves for continued harmony. Be diplomatic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to assist less fortunate persons than yourself and gain their goodwill instead of expecting favors from them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have different ideas now than usual but do nothing to upset others. Live by the Golden Rule and be happy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your intuition is fine now, so follow it for best results. Make new arrangements for gaining your most cherished aims.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one endowed with many talents and should have fine surroundings and personalities about early in life in order to set the right pattern for a most successful life. One who will lend a helping hand to others.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, NOV. 24, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are now able to reduce those lofty plans you have in mind and put them to practical use. A new property arrangement can be worked out to a mutual satisfaction.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study personal financial matters and make sure your records are correct. If you have any doubts, consult an expert.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan the most practical way to gain personal goals and get wheels rolling without delay. Avoid one who is tricky.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Sit in the quiet of your study and plan how to gain whatever means the most to you. Show that you are thoughtful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to please those in high position and gain the support you need. Listen to what an expert has to say.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after your aims in a positive manner and gain fine benefits at this time. Analyze your progress in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more alert to new ways of doing things so that you get better results in the future. Maintain a pleasant manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Cooperate more with persons you deal with in business and get better results. Make sure to improve your appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to please an associate more and prevent possible misunderstanding. Strive to be more successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have many tasks to handle during the day, so do them efficiently and forget about going on a pleasure spree.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Go to the right source for the data you need. Stop putting off important duties at hand and gain added benefits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go ahead with plans to improve conditions at home after consulting family members. Budget your money wisely.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make long-range plans that can bring excellent benefits in the future. You can easily gain a8personal aim now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be most capable at whatever is of a practical or business nature, so direct the education along such lines for best results. Be sure to give good spiritual and ethical training early in life. Sports are a must.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1980 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN:

Q.—We had a disaster the other day after this sequence:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble.	Rdble.	1 ♡

North-South reached four hearts doubled, and went down three tricks. South held:

♠x ♡Jxxxx ◇xxx ♣Qxxx. North screamed at South for bidding with nothing. He claimed that South should have passed, and that the free bid showed values. Was he right?—G. Williams, Toronto, Ont.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—I am surprised that there is still so much confusion about this situation. I thought that it had all been cleared up by now.

First, let's consider the simple mathematics of the situation. If no one has made a psychic bid, North should be able to account for about 36 of the 40 points in the pack whether or not South bids. West has about 13 points for his opener, North has about the same for his double and East has at least 10 points for his redouble. Therefore, on a good day North can expect his partner to produce about four points; on a bad day, South will have a complete bust.

Why, then, should South bid at all rather than leave it to North to rescue himself from one club doubled? Simply because South has a strong preference for one suit and fears that if he allows North to bail himself out, it could result in North-South having to bid one level higher than necessary to reach the proper strain.

Consider the actual hand. If South passes, North will almost surely bid one spade, and that is unlikely to be the best contract. If someone doubles, North-South must now play hearts at the two-level. South can avert that catastrophe by bidding one heart right away.

Let's give South another hand:

♠xxx ♡Jxxx ◇Qxx ♣xxx. With this holding there is no need to act over the redouble. South has no clear-cut preference, for hearts will be no better than either diamonds or spades unless North has four cards in the suit and can bid hearts of his own volition.

What if one of the opponents has psyched, and South actually does have a good hand? In that case, South has two options available. If he has length in the opponents' suit, he can pass to await developments. Either the opponents will run to some other spot, and he may then be able to double, or partner will bid and South can then enter the fray with some number of no trump or a cue-bid. And if South does not have anything in the opponents' suit, he can tell partner that he has a good hand by cue-bidding right away.

Bible Week Proclaimed

Mayor Don McGlohon proclaimed Nov. 23-30 as Bible Week here and urged "all citizens to participate in this annual interfaith observance by reading the Bible and developing a study program to become familiar with its teachings and principles."

The mayor pointed out that "the Bible continues to be the world's best seller, yet millions of Americans remain ignorant of its teachings." He suggested that "this ignorance and the rise of secular humanism have blunted the influence of the Bible in shaping morals and values."

McGlohon pointed to the "great need for a recovery of the teachings of the Bible, especially the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount."

The Laymen's National Bible Committee, he said, "has developed an excellent mass media campaign to promote Bible reading and study, particularly among young people."

Wendy Holcombe...

"It's working out real well," she said. "I go home real often —Alabaster's only three hours and a half hours from Nashville — and it's easier to travel out of Nashville. I'm enjoying being there very much and it's a good start on my career. I like picking for an audience more than anything in the world."

Wendy is one of three stairstep children of Bill and Helen Holcombe. Bill used to be in the printing business, but for the past five years he's managed the talents of his middle child who discovered natural musical ability in herself after he bought himself a used banjo when she was 11. Their older daughter, Cindy, is a college student —"She got the brains of the family," Wendy said — and their son Billy is a high school student who enjoys football and hunting with his father.

From her first attempts at teaching herself "Mountain Dew" on the banjo, Wendy practiced and practiced that instrument out in the barn and began appearing on local television and winning county fair talent contests. For her 12th birthday, her father took her to the Grand Olde Opry. They couldn't get tickets and went browsing through music shops in the vicinity. In one, Wendy belted out a rendition of "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" on a banjo she picked up. She was heard by a professional musician who had them backstage at the Grand Olde Opry within hours. During the next four weeks she was invited to appear on such well known Music City shows as the "Porter Waggoner Show" and Pop! Goes the Country."

And in December, 1975 she fulfilled the dream she had shared with her mother shortly after she began teaching herself to play the banjo. She appeared on the Grand Olde Opry and "just busted out crying" right on the stage. "Opry stars hugged me," she recalled, "and told me 'Honey, you just go ahead and cry.You might appear here hundreds of times during your career, but there will never be another first time.'"

Big Colorama Of 2 Big Ships

BIG SHIPS

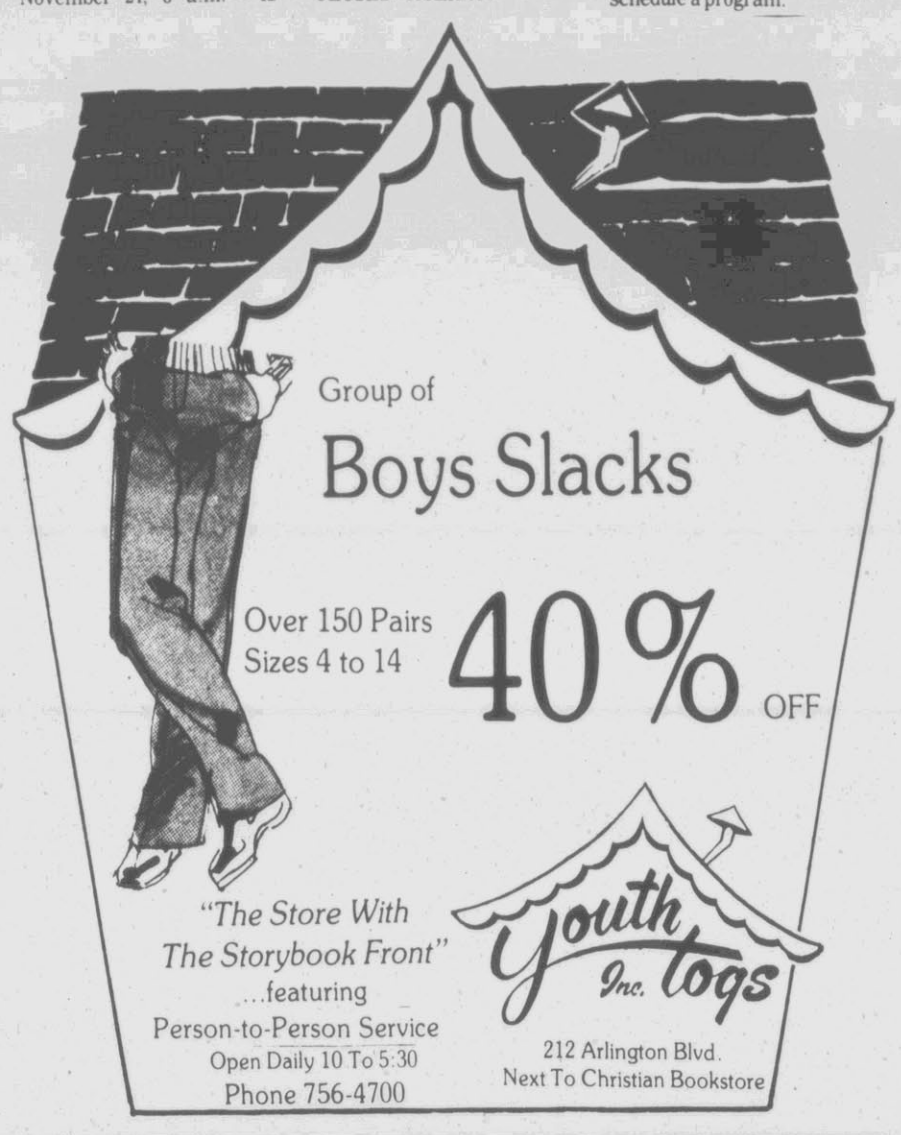

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes the world's largest color transparency to display a one-shot meeting of the oceans' largest liners — in the world's largest railroad station.

This fall, visitors to Grand Central Terminal here can see the R.M.S. Queen Elizabeth 2 and the S.S. Norway photographed in a Kodak colorama. The two vessels were photographed May 17 when they passed each other in New York harbor, for the first and possibly last time.

The Norway is 1,035 feet long, while the QE2's length is 963 feet. The transparency measures 18 feet high and 60 feet wide.

More than 250,000 visitors and commuters who pass through the terminal each day will be able to view the colorama from Oct. 6 through Nov. 17.

According to the "Guinness Book of World Records," the terminal covers 48 acres on two levels.

Women Set Relationship

NEW YORK (AP) — The business world may be in flux as far as women are concerned, but one constant remains, according to a New York City executive recruiter and career counselor.

"The woman," says Sheila Wolf, "still determines the nature of her relationship with male colleagues."

While many women are achieving professional equality, business relationships are still their responsibility and, according to the counselor, it's the wise woman who never forgets that.

"Men tend to make a sex appraisal of a woman on first meeting, and it's right then that she sets the tone of the relationship," explains Mrs. Wolf, of The Goodrich & Sherwood Co.

Mrs. Wolf, a former practicing psychologist, offers these on-the-job tips to women:

— Remember, doing a good job is your major objective. Concentrate on that.

— Don't give mixed signals. If you don't want a pass made at you, but your dress or behavior invites one, you'll probably get it.

— When a boss or male colleague asks you to dinner, suggest a foursome, including his wife or one of his friends.

— Traveling together, make it a point to pay your own way since you both have expense accounts.

— Also when traveling, try to keep your reports and paper work up to date. That way you'll be busy and won't have extra time to fill or kill.

— Accept a well-meant compliment simply, graciously. Disregard any other kind.

Vintage Varieties Of Apple Trees Are Preserved

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

BALL GROUND, Ga. (UPI) — Down on Hawks Nest Branch, Jim Lawson is preserving a bit of history — saving from extinction old varieties of apple trees that flourished in the American past.

Along the creek in the moist soil grow carefully tended one-and-two-year-old trees with names like Black Twig, Rambo, Sops of Wine, Roxbury Russett, Horse Apple, Crow Egg Apple, Rusty Coat and Wolf River, all familiar names more than a century ago.

Lawson, a 54-year-old self-taught nurseryman and horticulturist, has saved 185 varieties of old apple trees that were dying out. His nursery may be the only place in the nation one can find so large a variety of vintage apple trees, some of which were mentioned in Thomas Jefferson's Garden Book.

The Sops of Wine variety, says Lawson, is an ancient English culinary and cider apple. The Sweet Winesap apple has a history that goes back at least to the middle 1800s. The Wolf River apple was originated by W.A. Springer near Wolf River in Fremont County, Wis., and entered in the catalogue of the American Pomological Society in 1881.

Lawson grew up on the family farm near this North Georgia town, about 50 miles north of Atlanta. Appletrees were a part of his youth. But as family farms disappeared and people moved to the cities, many varieties of apple trees began to disappear.

Commercial growers dropped the older types because the new kinds of apples were prettier and stood up to shipping better, said Lawson, who is convinced that apples like the Tenderskin, the Horse, Schockley and Black Twig are far superior in taste and keeping ability than any of the commercial varieties.

"People don't taste, they just look at something," he said. "I got concerned that all the old varieties would disappear. It got so I couldn't find any."

In 1954, when he was 29, Lawson and his wife, Bernice, began collecting cuttings from ancient apple trees they found in the area and grafting them onto healthy root stock. They roamed the mountains, exploring abandoned farms looking for old and dying trees, finding many on their own, such as the Rusty Coat and the Winter Banana.

"It smelled so good," said Lawson of the Winter Banana apple. "I went back and got some cuttings the next year. We're constantly looking for new varieties."

When word got around about Lawson's hobby, people began bringing him cuttings and asking him to propagate new trees.

"It spread by word of mouth. Every year there were more and more people. We gave away a lot of trees. It got so it took up so much time we just went into business."

Lawson grows about 40 thousand trees a year on his 25 acres, with 20 acres in nursery stock. He ships about 20,000 trees annually to buyers in every state. Customers in the Midwest, he says, prefer varieties that are wind resistant.

The Horse Apple is one of Lawson's best sellers, along with Sops of Wine and Sweet Winesap. Most of his trees are the semi-dwarf kind that Lawson says can produce three or four bushels of apples each growing season. From some trees, Lawson has picked as many as eight bushels.

Using special grafting techniques, Lawson can graft many different varieties of apples onto a single root stock, giving the owner a wide selection of apples from one tree. Eleven varieties are the most he has ever grafted onto one tree, a job he doesn't particularly like to do because such trees do not ship well, he says.

Some of the older varieties such as Tenderskin, Rusty Coat, Roxbury Russett and Golden Russett, unlike the modern day apple trees that need constant spraying, are resistant to insects and disease, he says.

"I sell more trees than I can dig, really," says Lawson who believes he may have more varieties than anyone else selling the oldtime trees.

It's a year-round business of grafting, planting, digging and shipping. Digging and shipping begins in November after the young trees, or "whips" have shed their leaves and continues into the early spring. He tries to ship the trees the same day they are dug to increase their chances of survival.

Lawson is aided in identifying and finding the old varieties by fellow members of the North American Fruit Explorers Association and by Dr. Elwood Fisher of Harrisburg, Va., a biologist who has made a hobby of collecting ancient fruit tree types. He also has several out-of-print books, one dated 1905, about types and culture of apple trees, like the Rambo, grown in the 17th Century, or the Baldwin, a favorite in Massachusetts before the American Revolution.

"There's a lot of interest in these old varieties that we didn't have a few years ago," Lawson said.

Visions Buildings On Ball-Bearings

By LLOYD G. CARTER

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In this city that expects a major earthquake in the next decade, a structural engineer proposes to protect high rise buildings by putting them on ball bearings.

With his "base isolation" method, Marc Caspe says a building could roll with the motion of the quake. The building would be anchored to the separated foundation with steel rods or pipe which can give or stretch.

The idea of separating a building from its foundation in order to absorb earthquake shock is not new, but Caspe says his variation is.

He says many skyscrapers are currently protected from the hazards of earthquakes by long flexible support columns meant to "give" during a temblor. Unfortunately, the columns don't always "give," instead suffering major damage.

As examples, Caspe points to the destruction of the Olive View Hospital in the 1971 San Fernando Valley earthquake, and heavy structural damage to the support columns of the Government Services Building in El Centro, Calif. last October.

"Both failures occurred to buildings that were designed to modern standards, during moderate earthquakes having less than one-thousandth the energy released during the 1906 San Francisco quake," he wrote in a publication of the Structural Engineers Association of Northern California.

Abandoned Shaft Swallows Lake , Rig

And the big question after the collapse of an abandoned salt mine shaft — which also drew a $5 million oil rig, a tug boat, 10 barges and a botanical garden into its gaping maw — was whether this entire island might be next.

The island is part of a massive outcropping of salt. If the lake waters sucked into the mine during the shaft's collapse Thursday dissolve the subterranean pillars of salt, the salt dome beneath this marshy island could go crashing inward, officials fear.

The island, 10 miles square, was evacuated Thursday after a 1,300-foot-deep abandoned salt mine shaft collapsed when it apparently was punctured by oil drilling and seeping lake water caused a cave-in.

A growing crater sucked in more lake water, creating a whirlpool that emptied the 20-acre lake and swallowed almost everything on and near it.

"There is the potential for the island to cave in," warned Wayne Knack, district manager of the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration office in Dallas.

The danger stemmed from the fresh lake water that had drained underground, said deputy sheriff Ron Sonnier.

"The whole dome is sustained by 90-foot pillars of salt. If the water eats up those pillars, the dome itself will go in," he said.

On or near the dome is Jefferson Island with a Diamond Crystal Salt Mine Co. mining operation, a tourist garden and some oil operations.

Texaco's Max Hebert said a well "may have entered a shaft," and spokeswoman Brenda Buras said the oil company did not know its rig was resting above an abandoned shaft.

Seven men on the rig escaped by tugboat, 50 men in the salt mine got to safety, and no injuries were reported, officials said.

Once the shaft collapsed, a crater grew rapidly, devouring two Texaco rigs, the lake, a tug, a string of salt barges, thousands of gallons of water and mud and nearby Rip Van Winkle Gardens, a tourist botanical attraction.

"That water was roaring. I'm not kidding you a bit," said fisherman Leonce "Spec" Viator Jr, who was fishing on the lake at the time. "The wind was blowing and everthing seemed to go dry on the earth and we were sitting on the mud."

At one point, water in the Delcambre Canal, a shrimp boat channel linking Lake Peigneur with Vermilion Bay in the Gulf of Mexico, was running backwards, pulling Gulf water into the crater at about 20 mph, witnesses said.

As the flow of water and mud slowed Thursday night, a natural gas fire broke out in the crater's mouth, which was about a half-mile wide.

"The only thing we know is that there was a natural gas well there. How it got ignited we have no idea. It could have been a barge rubbing against a pipe or anything," said deputy sheriff Herrin Ducote.

"The fire is not any danger to anybody," added Sonnier. "But it may cause the hole to get a little bigger."

Natural gas pipelines lace the lake, and the Federal Aviation Administration restricted flights for three miles around the lake for fear a gas line would rupture.

The dome is one of the major salt outcroppings along the Louisiana coast. The nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve is being stored in another dome about 50 miles to the west. At another salt mine in the chain of domes — the nearby Belle Isle dome — an explosion killed five miners last year.

Sweet Tooth Is Even Sweeter

NEW YORK (AP) — America's sweet tooth is getting sweeter.

The nation's away-from-home favorites are candy, cookies, sweet snacks and sugar-sweetened soft drinks, according to a trade publication.

In its 34th annual census of the automatic vending-machine industry, Vending Times magazine reported that in 1979 Americans deposited a record $12,803,000 in the nation's five million vending machines in locations ranging from airports to zoos all over America.

Soft drinks — up 23-plus percent over 1978 — provide nearly 36 percent of all vending sales. Packaged candy bars and cookie snacks make up nearly 13 percent, for a total $6.1 billion in sales.

And, in a year that saw hot coffee vending sales fall off 7 percent, the growth leader in hot beverage sales was hot chocolate with an 8 percent increase.

TWO DEFECTORS

As the price of everything rises, so must the price of carpeting. Petroleum prices critically affect the cost of man made fibers and 95% of today's carpets are manufactured with man made fibers. All major fiber producers have announced price increases of 15% to 20%, effective December 1st and our manufacturers have stated that they will be passed on. If you are considering a major purchase of carpet, do not hesitate. Act now, before December 1st.

News, Not Happy Talk, For Cincinnati

By RICK VAN SANT

CINCINNATI (UPI) — In some cities, "Mr. Local TV News" is more at home in a hair salon than a newsroom.

"Me first, film later."

Cincinnati's king of the hill proves that bouffant is not necessarily best. "Mr. Cincinnati TV News" is a 53-year old man with a round face, a short build, a dozen children and a hard-to-pronounce name.

"I take a business-like approach to news," says Al Schottelkotte, anchorman and news director of WCPO-TV the last 21 years. "We are not happy talk. We are news."

His trademarks are saturation coverage and pictures, pictures, pictures.

Out-of-town visitors are astounded to see the screen filled with video tape, film, slides, maps and charts for virtually the entire 30-minute newscast.

His concept of what a local newscast should be intrigues TV executives across the country, including Walter Cronkite, who is one of Schottelkotte's biggest boosters.

Schottelkotte (pronounced Shot-Ul-Cot-E) has been offered many jobs at bigger money in other cities, but he remains pure Cincinnati. He was born here, has reared his 12 children here and has become, without a doubt, "Mr. Cincinnati TV News."

In a recent interview, sitting at his desk filled with videotape casettes, he traced his roots in news and disclosed how his "100 percent visual" concept of news came about.

"I started at the Cincinnati Enquirer as a copyboy on my 16th birthday," he recalled. "Three months later, I was put on the staff as a reporter.

"That was 1943, during World War II, and there was obviously a manpower shortage. The city editor looked up one day and didn't have any bodies around.

"I had dropped out of school. I wasn't really thrilled with school and told my dad I wanted to go to work. He said go to work, find out what it's like and then maybe you'll find out why you need school.

"And, I was hired by the city editor only with the directive that I would return to school. I did, but I didn't finish school in the standard way. I finished my high school in the Army."

While World War II indirectly gave the energetic 16-year-old his first shot at newspapering, the Korean War indirectly nurtured his "visual" concepts with which he would later revolutionize Cincinnati TV news. He was drafted in 1950 because of the Korean War and sent to Fort Knox, Ky.

"I was an education specialist," he grinned. "That was the Army. I didn't have a high school diploma."

But the Army figured Schottelkotte's news career more than made up for a diploma.

"I gave troop lectures on current affairs, politics, geography. I used to give five 50-minute lectures a day, five days a week. It was excellent training for me. It really made me do some deep studying. The two years in the Army were the hardest two years I ever worked.

"I incorporated a lot of film and recordings into my classes. Later, I found those techniques directly applicable to news programs. You get 100 GIs in a class, they're going to go to sleep on you unless you keep it interesting.

"I had old line GIs, who had thought lectures were a lot of bunk, tell me they looked forward to my presentations. It became very evident to me just how much visual material could help."

After the Army, Schottelkotte returned to Cincinnati and the Enquirer and took over the paper's top column, the brightly written "Talk of the Town." He became so well known that the words "Talk of the Town" were dropped and his name stood alone at the top of the column.

Radio stations also sought him out. In 1953 Schottelkotte began doing a daily 15-minute news and commentary show on a local radio station in addition to his Enquirer column.

Then, in May of 1959, the general manager of WCPO-TV invited Schottelkotte into his office.

"The station had never really gotten into news," Schottelkotte said. "The ratings showed they had no news audience at all. The other two stations had it locked up.

"The station manager told me, 'I want to get a news department established and I want you to do it. Go to it the way you want and I'm with you.'"

After discussing money and other matters, Schottelkotte asked about a possible starting date.

"Tonight," he was told.

That night, Schottelkotte began turning the station's news around.

How did he trigger the last place TV news station to No. 1?

"Coverage and pictures," he says.

"Up until then, there hadn't been 'coverage' on TV. All they were really doing in those days was reading radio newscasts on TV. So we began to go after coverage and soon developed a style in which 100 percent of our coverage was visualized.

"We did it with film, with slides, sketches, maps. We tried to develop the story visually. Our format became 100 percent visual and it pretty well remains that today.

"I know what any teacher knows. Keep the attention of your audience. Do everything you can to help them understand the story. And I don't know how you can cover news any better than to show it."

AL SCHOTTELKOTTE, anchorman and news director of WCPO-TV in Cincinnati, says "We are not happy talk; we are news!" His concept of what a local nescast should be intrigues TV executives across the country. (UPI Photo)

Many items in this ad carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops, and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this ad are listed as "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. Wild Turkey Count Rises

By SUSAN LOTH
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — The wild turkey has something to gobble about: Its population is in the best shape yet this century.

This sleeker, cagier cousin of the domestic turkey has faced some hard times since the Pilgrims drew on a "great store of wild Turkies" for their Thanksgiving in 1621.

The turkey declined steadily in the 1700s and by the 19th century was eliminated from most of its original 39-state range. North America's largest game bird, Meleagris gallopavo, was the victim of overhunting and the loss of its woodlands habitat to man.

Postwar Comeback

"Even as late as 1942, there were only an estimated 20,000 or 30,000 birds left in the entire country," said Gene Smith, editor of Turkey Call and an officer of the National Wild Turkey Federation. At that time turkeys were confined to 21 states, most in the Southeast.

Today, said Smith, there are an estimated 1.8 million wild turkeys in 49 states — all but Alaska. More than 40 states have spring or fall turkey hunting seasons.

What turned the tide was wildlife management, with a little trial and error. Restoration efforts began after World War II with pen-reared wild turkeys. But problems arose, as Smith explained:

"The wildlife management profession discovered that pen-raised (wild) turkeys weren't truly wild. They weren't self-sufficient and they lost the wariness that let them survive."

The subsequent mingling of pen-reared birds and purebred wild turkeys caused other problems, Smith asserted: "It polluted the gene pool and introduced poultry diseases such as blackhead and fowlpox."

So instead, managers began using a trap-and-transfer program to move wild flocks from high-density areas to habitats where the species could flourish. Some turkeys are snared with rocket-fired nets; others are lured to eat a drugged bait, then wake up in a new home.

Franklin's Choice

In the mid-1950s, ornithologist S. Dillon Ripley put several dozen wild turkeys on his family farm in northwestern Connecticut. Today Ripley, the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, estimates there are 200 or 300 wild turkeys on and around the farm.

"I like having them around simply because they're native — they were there 100 years ago and they represent an American thing," he said.

"As you know, Benjamin Franklin thought the turkey ought to be the national bird. He thought it was very vulgar to pick the bald-headed eagle because it's a carrion-eater, whereas he thought the turkey a noble bird.

"I don't necessarily feel exactly the same, but I think they're awfully pleasant to see — if you ever can. They're hard to see."

That's because keen eyesight and a big streak of wariness are two of the bird's greatest assets. And once the turkey spots an unnatural shape or movement, it can fly to safety at speeds of up to 55 miles an hour, or take off at a run of 15 mph or more.

"The population levels could go out, say in three years, if we continue to hack away at the hardwood forest and flood river bottom lands to remove the ideal habitat."

ECU Early Saw Rural Health Needs

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Less than 10 years ago Eastern North Carolina had virtually no public health educators to serve the population of its vast rural area, its many small towns and crossroads communities.

That a need existed was recognized by experts, but there were no bachelor's degree — entry level — health education professionals at work in the region and no formal academic program existed to provide them.

Today there are more than 80 professionally trained educators working in dozens of local community health departments, small hospitals and rural health centers, organizing efforts to promote healthy bodies, healthy minds and healthy environments.

They are working where a decade ago such programs did not exist at the local level — in such places as Aurora and Tarboro, Swanquarter and Snow Hill, serving farmers and fishermen, blacks and migrants.

Two-thirds of these educators are entry level professionals and most are East Carolina University graduates — products of a bachelor's degree program in School and Community Health Education which has become the first of its kind in the nation to receive curriculum approval by the Society for Public Health Education (SOPHE).

Dr. Robert H. Maier, Vice Chancellor-Academic Affairs, said the success of the curriculum "is another indication of the confidence expressed in a significant East Carolina University academic program. It is also another sign that the university's academic programs are in the vanguard of American higher education."

Approval of the degree curriculum by SOPHE marks a "major milestone" for ECU's large and rapidly growing School of Allied Health and Social Professions, says the dean, Dr. Ron Thiele.

The program, Theile says, "is a major achievement in providing entry level professionals where they previously did not exist in Eastern North Carolina."

"Our graduates have filled what was a virtual vacuum in public health education and in patient education," says Professor William Byrd who was instrumental in designing the community health program and obtaining initial funding.

The program involves an interdisciplinary effort by the Department of Community Health, chaired by Professor Don Dancy, and the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety chaired by Dr. Ray Martinez.

Byrd interprets curriculum approval by SOPHE as showing that the faculty and students "have demonstrated the need, the role and effective utilization of entry and graduate level health educators" in regions such as rural Eastern North Carolina.

"In these times of tight budgets and demand for program accountability in higher education, we are delighted that we have met the goal. We are extremely proud of this progress," Dancy said.

Thiele noted that nearly 50 per cent of more than 2,000 graduates of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions since 1970 have remained to work and live in Eastern North Carolina.

"As in Health Education, in most instances, they represent the bulk of the health professional manpower in their fields in this region," Thiele said.

Dr. Rick Barnes, program coordinator for the school health curriculum, said that an inherent plus is that the program provides a student with eligibility for dual certification, as a community health educator and as a qualified health teacher for the public schools.

"The need for competent health teachers in public schools remains to be met," Barnes said. Eighty nine per cent of the state's public school districts employ no teachers certified in health education.

"While health education has come of age in the health care setting, the greatest opportunity for prevention of illness is the public schools, where little progress has been made in the vast majority of cases," Barnes said.

The program for which SOPHE has approved the bachelor's degree curriculum has 28 per cent of its declared majors black or other minority students. The minority representation is "substantial," Dancy said.

The eastern counties of North Carolina have a large non-white population. "It is highly desirable that minorities be well represented in the health profession, both in schools and in the health care setting," he said.

Bridal Lines
by Anne Marie
Registered Bridal Consultant

The wedding cake has been a delicious part of marriage for so long that brides often wonder how the tradition began. Here at Ann Marie's, we have been able to trace wedding cake back to some American Indian tribes — and to some Fiji Islanders. In both cases, brides offered their husbands cakes of meal. The Romans broke a cake made of salted meal over the bride's head as a symbol of abundance. The early Britons baked large baskets of small, dry crackers for weddings, and every guest took one home — thus the tradition of taking wedding cake home "to dream on." So bon appetit, brides: you're sharing a delightful tradition with brides of yesteryear.

Innovative Day Center Plan Benefits The Elderly

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — An innovative program of care for the elderly has been set up in the New York metropolitan area, where two community organizations have joined hands to create a special kind of Day Center.

"It's a formula that other people might want to look into," says Dr. Abraham Lurie, director of Social Work Services at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center in New Hyde Park.

The medical center and the Samuel Field YM-YWHA in nearby Little Neck have created a Day Center that can accept and care for the frail and ailing elderly on a full day basis — 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. The program also accepts healthy senior citizens who need maintenance care and diversion.

The format calls for door-to-door transportation to the Field facility, medical care and counseling, together with physical and recreational rehabilitation, all integrated into the day's activity.

"Most neighborhoods have their senior citizen centers, but we see elderly people each day who never go," Lurie says. "So many things pose obstacles — lack of transportation, a handicap and, in some cases, the habit of isolation. These are the ones we want to bring in for medical care, for a hot meal and some companionship and fun."

As Lurie explains, the center is one of the ways being tested to keep the frail elderly in their own homes and in the community rather than relegating them to a nursing home or other health-related facility. "This alternative has its virtues in lower costs and a happier way of living for many of our elderly people who do not require round-the-clock nursing care, but must have some kind of support system."

A schedule is worked out for each individual, according to needs and preferences ranging from exercise classes to discussion groups, card games, crafts, and a leisurely lunch hour. The midday meal, which must be sugar and salt-free, is hot and nourishing to compensate for an otherwise meager or careless diet.

"Nothing boosts flagging appetites like company," says one of the staff members who told a story of opening day, when things were not yet quite organized and the food was ordinary and casually presented.

"This is terrific," said one of the women who had just enrolled.

"I haven't enjoyed anything this much in a long time," said another.

According to Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, which provides the medical personnel involved in the project, the medical component will be comprehensive. It will include monitoring each participant, counseling for medical conditions and "coping" problems, psychiatric consultation, arrangements for further medical care either at the hospital or elsewhere, and emergency dental and optical care.

Because of the strong medical aspects of the program, the Medicaid program of New York State will pay for all those who are eligible. Geared to accommodate the daily attendance of about 40 men and women of 60 years of age or older, the program is expected to be able to pay for itself.

Joan Wachtler, social work administrator for the program, points to a valuable aspect of the program. "The fragile and often depressed older people tend to focus on their physical symptoms when they are confined to their own four walls. In contrast, at the Day Center they are sharing their day with healthy older people in a busy, upbeat atmosphere. The setting, in a sense, is the therapy.

"Considering the 'push-pull generation' — the children who are now in their 40s and 50s, torn between parents, children, jobs and households — it is an enormous weight off their minds to know that their parents are being well cared for."

Professor Has Magical Ways

By R.D. GERSH
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Old Dominion University Professor Fred Culpepper has a magical way with his industrial arts education students. And a few teaching tricks up his sleeve.

Disappearing coin tricks. Knotted rope tricks. Torn newspaper tricks. Magic tricks.

"Methods classes in education can be terribly dull for both teacher and students, so I consciously looked for something to pep it up," Culpepper said.

Presto! It works.

The 55-year-old Culpepper has been conjuring with magic since a child's fascination led him, while stationed with the Navy in Chicago during World War II, to study with a master named Tarbell who "taught me the ropes — literally and figuratively."

Culpepper, who has been at ODU since 1962, used magic when he taught high school industrial arts, and now he uses it when he teaches teachers.

"There's a certain amount of showmanship a teacher has got to possess to keep the attention of the students. We are competing with TV programs, and unless it's darn interesting the kids just turn you off," he said.

He has none of the magician's reputed hesitancy about letting out the tricks of his trade.

Magicians' secrecy "is the greatest trick of them all," he said. "All this stuff is written up in books that are in the public library. They just get uptight if somebody does the same trick better than them."

Part of the magic is that teaching students how to make coins reappear or torn newspaper sheets whole does more than give them a repertoire of tricks.

"The youngsters are taking these tricks and showing them to friends and in this way are getting experience in presenting material," Culpepper said.

"Since our work is highly manipulative, it fits in with teaching them to direct people's attention to what they want to show."

It actually is an aid to education, not just entertainment, he says.

"It gets them over the stage fright of standing up and teaching a lesson. It's easier when they have something in their hands to play with."

Culpepper relies on tricks that use readily available material — coins, chalk, paper. But not cards. "We don't want anyone to think we are running a casino around here," he said.

He also insists the tricks, some dating back centuries, are simple and the only talent needed is a "gift for gab."

Times, Changes Grinding Down Labor Union Power

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With the relentlessness of assembly-line machinery, time and technology are grinding away at labor unions' foothold on the nation's work force.

And those unions which survive into the 21st century will bear only a vague resemblance to those of today as they try to meet the needs of a post-industrial society, according to futurists, academicians and labor leaders.

As manufacturing moves increasingly overseas, unions will lose their traditional mainstay — blue-collar industrial workers — and be forced to turn their attention to the service sector, women and minorities if they hope to survive.

Traditional bread-and-butter contract concerns are likely to take a backseat to more amorphous issues that fall generally under the heading of humanism — flextime, boredom on the job, professional autonomy.

And the strike — labor's ultimate weapon — will become less viable as industries automate to the point that they can continue running without workers, at least until the machines break down.

"As automation occurs, the longterm trend may be toward fewer strikes but more longterm strikes," notes Dr. Charles Maxey of the University of Southern California School of Business. "But the transitional stage will really be a crisis situation for unions, and the strikes that occur in that period will be very bitter because crafts will be fighting for their very existence."

Hank E. Koehn, the futurist for Los Angeles-based Security Pacific National Bank, sees the same trend, but warns, "There is no way they can stop automation."

Contending that unions' power will continue to wane as the nation's manufacturing base dwindles, Koehn insists, "In the 21st century, the strike simply will not be an option."

Koehn predicts the unions' main alternative to the strike will be to make life uncomfortable for managers by staging slowdowns.

But Jack C. Blackburn, head of the Labor Center at the University of California at Los Angeles, and Rosemarie Short, a business economist with SRI International in Palo Alto, see a more basic change in the structure of labor-management relations, with unions seeking to participate in corporate decision-making.

Earlier this year, Douglas Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, was given a seat on the board of financially troubled Chrysler Corp. in exchange for union concessions at the bargaining table.

But Blackburn insists, "I'm talking about more than a seat on the board. That only gives you a voice. I am talking about a more effective role in decision-making, in planning the kinds of things that will be produced."

For Blackburn, an inescapable era of limits is just over the horizon.

He explains that hard choices in production lie not too far down the road, and workers are going to demand a say in those decisions.

Unions' biggest challenge, says Security Pacific's Koehn, will be adapting to a radically different kind of world.

"Their role came into existence with the Industrial Revolution," the futurist says. "Now they have to learn to adapt to a post-industrial society if they hope to survive."

But for the past three decades, as more and more manufacturing has fled overseas in search of cheaper labor, the nation has been edging further and further into its next stage — the service economy.

Taken broadly, the service sector encompasses workers from waitresses to computer programmers, from doctors to bankers, none of whom have provided fertile ground for unionism.

Since 1950, manufacturing has declined from 30 percent of the nation's Gross National Product to just over 23 percent, while the number of persons employed in that sector of the economy has dropped from 34 percent to 23 percent, according to figures from the federal Commerce and Labor departments.

Dr. Lynn Reaser, chief national economist of United California Bank, projects that by the year 2000, only 20 percent of the nation's workforce will be employed in manufacturing. That's half of the figure for 1920.

In 1955 when the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations merged, one of every three American workers was a union member. Today, that figure is hovering around one in four.

"When (the late AFL-CIO President) George Meany was alive, he pretty much had a tight rein on what he thought unionism was all about. And that was very much an industrial era concept," Koehn says.

Meany's successor, Lane Kirkland, has shown little tendency so far to shift from Meany's long-established bread-and-butter orientation or to fully acknowledge women and minorities, who make up an increasingly large portion of the workforce.

A few union leaders are trying to cope with post-industrial issues, but they are the exception, Koehn says.

"In the past, unions have scorned humanistic issues because there was no outcry from members," says Jeff Miller, a spokesman for the Communications Workers of America.

"But today's workers have a different outlook than Depression and post-Depression babies," Miller says.

Part of the difficulty in making unions more attractive to white-collar workers is the public perception of unions, claims William Winpisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists.

The IAM recently completed a $100,000 survey of how unionists are portrayed on prime-time television.

The survey found union members are consistently portrayed as clumsy, poorly educated and bigoted, often as buffoons, and more often than not violent, degrading and obstructive.

"We are not blaming television exclusively for this situation, but it is a very powerful vehicle in forming attitudes," Winpisinger says.

Clower Feels At Home With Tobacco Farmers

They don't grow tobacco around his hometown of Yazoo City, Miss., but Jerry Clower feels at home among tobacco farmers anyway, he said in an interview here Tuesday.

He ought to, the country yarnspinner says. He has entertained at the Tobacco Farmer Show here each of the five years since it began.

"Greenville's the only place I come back to year-after-year," he said. "And I hope I'll keep on coming back. These folks is my folks. I just love 'em."

Folks everywhere are Jerry's folks. He's makes about 200 appearances a year, including those for his nationally syndicated television show, "Nashville On the Road" and enjoys every minute of the entertaining and the traveling. He doesn't employ writers, he says. "Don't need 'em. Long as I can get around and meet people, I have all the inspiration I need to make up my own stories. Life is funny and people are funny and living's the only source I need. I don't go through life biting my fingernails. I go through giggling and grinning. Every morning when I get up I say, 'Lord, You don't make no mistakes. You ain't never made no mistakes and You ain't gonna make none with me today. I'm putting everything in Your hand and I know it's gonna be a good day.'"

And every day is a good one for Clower, judging by the successes of both his personal and professional life. He describes himself as a fertilizer salesman who backed into show business about 10 years ago. "I love to talk," he said, "and I love to tell stories. I used to tell stories as I peddled fertilizer all 'round Mississippi." (He was director of field services for Mississippi Chemical Corporation.) "A friend of mine asked me why didn't I make a record. I wasn't that interested, I thought, 'cause I liked what I was doing fine. But he brought along a recorder to one of my sales meetings and offered the tape he made there to MCA records. They bought and I've been recording for them ever since."

He makes an album a year on the MCA label and every one is a million-seller. Much of the material for his show here Tuesday was taken from his recently released, "Ledbetter Olympics" album.

Clower said he feels no guilt at being away from his family and home community so much of his time. "I'm doing my job, earning our living," he said. "I believe every man has a duty to support his family to the best of his ability and that's what I'm doing. And I'm not neglecting my community and my church, either. I do what I can when I'm there, and I tithe to the First Baptist Church of Yazoo City just like I always did. Ten percent of my income now is more than my whole salary used to be back when I was making a right good living as a fertilizer salesman."

Besides, he says, flying to and from engagements enables him to spend much of his time at home with Mama, as he calls his wife, Hommerline. "I have a home filled with love, a wife that is just exactly the woman I'd of made if God had said, 'Go 'head, Jerry, and make yourself your ideal partner.'

"When I was 13 years old, I went down the aisle of a little church on Rt. 4, Liberty, Miss. while the congregation was singing No. 197, 'Only Trust Him.' I looked up and there was a beautiful little blond-haired girl making her profession of faith at the very same time. Hommerline and I were baptized together in the East Prong of the Amite River and we've been sweethearts ever since, married 33 years with four beautiful children — Ray, 27; Amy, 25, Sue, 18, and Katy, 10. Katy slipped up on us just about the time I got into show business just to prove we was still on our honeymoon."

"I don't profess to know what other people should do with their lives," he said. "But I know that mine works best when I follow the laws of God. He told me to cleave to my wife and love no woman but her, and it's brought me nothing but happiness. I'm on the road a lot, but the joy never goes out of coming home to Mama."

Clower expounds on his views of his personal development as an entertainer and a Christian in two books, "Ain't God Good!" and "Let the Hammer Down." The first has become a best seller.

Asked about his views of the promotion of tobacco use here, he said. "I don't smoke, but again, I don't feel like one person oughta tell another what he should and shouldn't do. I do like a chaw of tobacco when I get around to fishing a few times a year." He doesn't drink, he adds; and doesn't curse. "But I do make a more natural HAWG out of myself at the table, though. You can tell that to look at me, can't you? People that love me are concerned about my weight now, even though I don't have any symptoms of illness or any lack of energy. I'm dealing with that now and may do something about it soon. And that's gonna be hard, you know, for a guy whose favorite food is french fries with molasses!" he said with a snort, one of the many trademarks of his expansive on-stage style.

He courteously cut the interview short and invited the interviewer to sit in on a taping of a Thanksgiving program for a WPTF farm show. He went through the 12-minute talk without a hitch and then was on his feet ready to get to the backstage for his 2 p. m. performance 10 minutes ahead of time. "These folks is my folks," he said, "and I ain't gonna keep 'em waiting."

Topical Innovations Shown In Tobacco Festival Decorations

Photographs By Mary Schulken

Fifteen Student Winners In Agricultural Art Competition

Fifteen student artists, from first graders through high school seniors won prizes for themselves and for their schools in the 1980 Agricultural Art Contest, one of the activities held at the Third Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

Again this year, this children's competition in agricultural art was sponsored by the Powell Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of farm equipment.

Students from Greenville and Pitt County schools and from schools in Beaufort, Craven, Edgecombe, Greene, Lenoir, Martin, Nash and Wilson Counties were eligible to enter. About 100 students entered art work.

A panel of judges was drawn from area artists, from Greenville and Pitt County Schools, and the faculty of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

Awards were given in six basic categories — for artists in grades 1-3; for grades 4-8; for grades 9-12; and for the same grade divisions for exceptional children.

In the exceptional children category of competition, first place winners received $10 and second place winners received $5.

In the other categories, awards for each grade division category were: first place, $100 to the art department of the school the winner attends, an engraved plaque and a $75 savings bond to the student — second place, $75 to the school's art department, an engraved plaque and a $50 savings bond to the student — third place, $50 to the school's art department, an engraved plaque and a $25 savings bond to the student.

The 15 student winners in first, second and third place and the ten students receiving honorable mention are:

— Exceptional Children (First and second places only) — Grades 1-3 — Alfonso Reddick and Jennifer Scott, both Rodgers School, Martin County — Grades 4-8 — Joseph Scott and Raleigh Roscoe, both E. J. Hayes School, Williamston — Grades 9-12 — Derek Price and John Yelverton, both Bear Grass School, Martin County.

— Grades 1-3 — (First, second, third places and one honorable mention) — Chris Wade, Carolina Country Day School, Pitt County; Patrick Winstead, Robinson School, Winterville; Bonnie Biggs, Robinson School; and Kenyetta Arrington, Phillips School, Edgecombe County.

— Grades 4-8 — (First, second, third places and two honorable mentions) — Kathy Springer, Chicod School; Paul Most, Sims School, Wilson County; Carol Lynn Barnes, Savannah Jr. High, Lenoir County; Derek Price, Bear Grass School; and April Devor, Ayden-Middle School.

— Grades 9-12 — (First, second, third places and seven honorable mentions) — Elizabeth Edwards, Southern Nash School, Nash County; John Little, Rose High School; Rachel Pope, Southern Nash; Joyce Dupree, Linda Perry and Angie Robbins, all Tarboro High School, Edgecombe County; Joey Rhodes, North Pitt High School; and Anna Weber, Brad Griffin and John Joyner, all Rose High School.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Springview

Home Planned For Today's Lifestyle

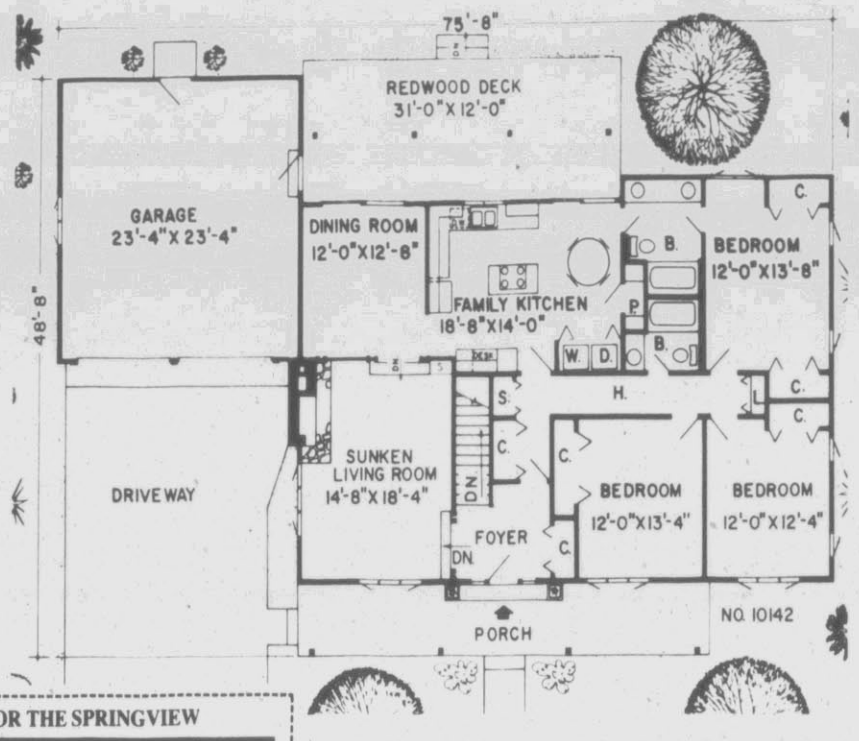

By Jerry Bishop

People who enjoy the relaxed informality of today's lifestyle will appreciate the Springview, a three bedroom, two bath ranch style plan.

The design offers a charming facade, open family kitchen, and immense redwood deck, set within reach of all living areas. Both adults and children will be satisfied with the floor plan, which arranges for adults-only living and dining room to balance the spacious informal areas.

For seclusion and strongly defined space, the sunken living room is unbeatable. This one nestles a wood-burning fireplace in one corner and adjoins a large formal dining room, which merits sliding glass doors to the deck.

The family kitchen measures 18 by 14 to create an excellent group activity area. A center work island promotes efficiency, a pantry supplies food storage space, and a mini-laundry center is housed in a corner. For family meals, a dining area is outlined.

Sliding glass doors merge the area with the 31-ft. redwood deck. A natural for barbecues, the deck offers endless summer party possibilities.

A hallway to the right of the foyer leads to the sleeping quarters which take in three bedrooms and plenty of closets. Particularly useful is the second full bath, accessible from either master bedroom or kitchen. A double garage is shown, and the full basement adds another 1,705 sq. ft. of potential space.

More See The Beauty Of Small Scale Improvement

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Thinking small used to be quite unfashionable in the United States. In some circles, it still is. But a growing number of Americans have begun to see the beauty of small-scale improvements. Among them are members of the America the Beautiful Fund.

The Washington-based, non-profit group supports grass-roots efforts to preserve and enrich the environment. The Fund provides seed grants of less than a thousand dollars — plus lots of encouragement and expertise — for small-scale projects to reclaim or rescue some aspect of the natural, physical, historic or cultural environment.

Since its beginnings in 1965, perhaps 5,000 projects have been given money and help.

Over the years, the Fund's volunteers and paid staff have learned that recognition and support are just as important as the small grants it makes to get things started or to bail out projects in need, according to Bruce Dowling, executive director of the Fund.

According to Dowling, the small amount of money granted to about 400 projects in the first six years of the Fund's existence led to eventual additional grants of about $6 million from many other organizations.

This year's just announced awards to projects around the country illustrate the kinds of little efforts that are making a difference in thousands of American communities.

Among those singled out was a group of citizens from Great Falls, Mont., who rescued a landmark stone barn slated for demolition.

Other award winners include: citizens of Mayo, Fla., who restored the town's main street by their own efforts without outside funds of any kind; a group of Greenville, Maine, individuals who have instituted numerous heritage activities tied to local history; and some fishermen from Gloucester, Mass., who have developed an educational program that takes youngsters out to sea in dories for a first-hand experience of the occupation that earns many Gloucesterites their living.

Also honored were a group in Sand Point, Idaho, who built a community center with donated materials and labor.

Several awards grew out of the Fund's gift of about 60,000 seed packets to a number of communities last spring. Communities in Jessup, Md., Bridgeport, Conn., Santa Fe, N.M., and Austin, Texas, used the seeds to help start community gardens for senior citizens, handicapped individuals, children and prison inmates.

The America the Beautiful Fund grew out of a White House Conference on the environment held during the administration of President Lyndon B. Johnson. From the beginning, the Fund was interested in backing small projects that would involve many local residents.

"There had been a decline in the numbers of people able to donate lots of money and time for a major restoration. And we saw the need for greater involvement among average citizens," recalls Nanine Bilski, program director for the Fund. The founders also wanted to encourage the kind of initiative that led to the development of this country.

"After all, our forefathers didn't wait for a subsidy to take them to the United States. They just got on a boat and came," added Ms. Bilski.

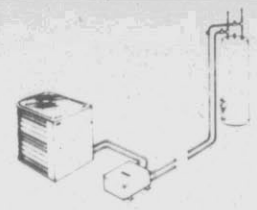

Dowling calls the type of efforts his group funds "the new civics." By this he means that through volunteer projects, Americans get involved and learn how to work together. Some of them develop leadership qualities and a spirit of public service that they then carry on to other areas of American life.

A great variety of projects are given information, encouragement, recognition and help in the form of workshops and the names of nearby individuals who have completed similar projects and can provide information.

Typical activities include rescue and revival of crafts skills, restoration and reuse of historic buildings and sites, innovative cultural programs in drama, art and music, and the stimulation of the untapped creative energies of groups such as youth, senior citizens, migrant workers, hospital patients and prison inmates. Local festivals, oral-history projects and environmental design that relates to peoples' needs are other popular programs, Dowling said.

The Fund runs on a budget of about $300,000 a year and the paid services of five individuals plus hundreds of volunteers. It is supported by grants from arts councils and donations, as well as by membership dues.

Q. I plan to buy a white pine Christmas tree this year that I can later transplant. Please give me some tips on choosing and planting the tree. I've had bad luck in the past getting a white pine to live. (M.B., Statesville)

A. Many folks make a mistake of buying a species of tree that cannot adapt to its new location. White pine (Pinus strobus) is an excellent example. White pines do well in the Mountains and parts of the Piedmont. They cannot tolerate the soils and climatic factors in Eastern North Carolina and parts of the Piedmont. A six to seven foot balled and burlaped white pine should have a root ball of 18 to 22 inches in diameter. Make sure the ball is firm, and not cracked open. Always handle the tree by the ball and not by the trunk. Place the ball in a large container while inside the house and keep it mulched. Keep the ball moist but not saturated. You might want to spray the needles with an anti-transpirent. After Christmas, place the tree in a carport or garage for a few days to acclimate it to colder weather. Dig a large hole and add plenty of good topsoil. Don't plant too deeply. Keep well watered for the next year and hopefully you'll not have to replace it. (Kim Powell, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. I have a yard full of leaves and pine straw. What should I use them for? (G.C., Fayetteville)

A. I would use the leaves in a compost pile but not the pine straw since it is slow to decompose. The pine straw can be used as a mulch to discourage weeds, hold soil moisture during dry periods and to keep clay soil from crusting over. Leaves, grass clippings, old cut flowers, vegetable waste from the kitchen and refuse from the garden are also excellent for the compost pile. Compost makes the soil loamier and thus improves aeration and tilth. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A window insulation that fits inside any window frame.

Manufacturer's claim — That this insulation is made from a non-conductive plastic channel frame that uses both winter and summer insulator sheets...that, in warm weather, this system eliminates more than 95 percent of ultraviolet rays and 75 percent of scorching infra-red rays...that independent tests show the insulation is up to 32 times more effective than regular storm windows in keeping out the cold...that the plastic self-stick channel frame comes in 26-inch lengths that can be cut to size and pressed into position around the inside perimeter of the window or patio door...and that the vinyl insular sheet locks easily into place with plastic retainer strips which snap into the frame.

THE PRODUCT — A self-contained rachet screwdriver set that holds in its handle the four most commonly used driver bits.

Manufacturer's claim — That the four bits are held securely in a plastic tray that slips in and out of the plastic rachet handle...that the reversible rachet head at the other end gives 10 times more turning power than that of a conventional screwdriver...that the rachet snaps out of the handle head for work in close quarters...and that the pocket driver is only 7½ inches long and weighs about 8 ounces, making it easy to carry.

THE PRODUCT — A new residential roofing shingle available in a special kit for testing.

Manufacturer's claim — That the kit includes a complete guide for do-it-yourself application, a bundle of shingles for test application and other equipment necessary for simplifying alignment and installation...that kit test buyers thus can determine their reroofing capabilities before attempting a complete project...that you can order the test shingles in your choice of color...that doing the reroofing yourself can save from 50 to 75 percent of the price of a new roof...and that this shingle is designed for do-it-yourself application over one layer of old asphalt shingles.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

(The window insulation is manufactured by Tyzall Plastics, 240 Glen Head Road, Glen Head, N.Y. 11545; the screwdriver set by Litton Industries, P.O. Box 1320, New Britain, Conn. 06050; and the shingle kit by Celotex Corp., Tampa, Fla. 33622.)

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Our dining-room table has a veneered top. It has developed a blister in one spot. We are afraid that if we attempt to fix the damage, we will make it worse. Is there any accepted way of repairing this kind of damage? We are not expecting it to look perfect. We just want it to be a bit less conspicuous.

A. — You should be able to make a repair that won't be noticeable if you work very carefully and take enough time. First, split the blister with a razor blade, cutting in the direction of the grain. Very gently, lift the split veneer and spread some glue under it. A toothpick makes a good spreader in such a tight area. Press down the veneer and quickly wipe away any glue that might have squeezed out. Put a piece of non-print paper over the spot and weigh it down with books or some heavy article. After a day or two, remove the weight and see how it looks. Sometimes it will be all right as it is, sometimes you can get by refinishing just the repaired area and sometimes you will have to refinish the entire top.

Q. — We have an old bureau that has been in our attic for some years and which we now want to refinish. It apparently has several coats of varnish or something similar on it. Can we remove the old finish by sanding it with very coarse sandpaper?

A. — Yes, but you are likely to find it a time-consuming, messy job. Before you get through, you may be sorry you started, especially when you find dust over everything. Taking off several coats of an old finish is never a simple task no matter how you do it, but you probably are much better off using a chemical remover. Check the label carefully to determine how long the remover must remain on the bureau before taking it off and what to use on the wood after it has been stripped. If the stain remains on the surface after the varnish is off, you may have to use a commercial wood bleach.

Window Quilt™ insulating panel

CALL THIS NUMBER BEFORE YOU GO UNDERGROUND
1-800-632-4949

If you plan on digging, excavating, demolishing, or moving the earth in any way that could damage buried utility lines, take a few minutes to call this toll-free number, at least 48 hours before work begins. It could save you from disrupted service, expensive repairs and personal injury.

A phone call to the number above will put you in touch with ULOCO, the Utilities Locating Company, a corporation formed and funded by participating utility companies and municipalities in order to increase job safety and reduce utility damages. Within minutes of your call, ULOCO will contact participating members in your area and tell them of your plans.

If there are buried utilities in your path, they will be staked or marked at no cost to you. If there are no lines in the area, the local companies will notify you. If the utility companies serving your community are not members of ULOCO, they should be contacted on an individual basis.

Don't risk the trouble, cost and danger of damaged utility lines. Call ULOCO and you'll be sure of avoiding them. ULOCO's toll-free number operates Monday through Friday between the hours of 7:00 am and 5:00 pm. And remember, it doesn't cost a thing.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 11-22

DXKGHGXZ TGZQL EUXHWGHS DXYSL KBBQ WUGHYL ESUTSHW

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: GRAY FROGS FRISK AROUND IN WIDE, MURKY MEADOW.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: B equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

MIRACULOUS TALENT — May Lemke claps in time as Leslie, the blind, retarded young man she has raised from infancy, plays a piano at their home in Pewaukee, Wis. She said Leslie, 26, had not learned to speak when he suddenly displayed the ability to play pieces on the piano. (AP Laserphoto)

Piano Drop-Outs Taught To Play

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When surgeon Byron Hero put his talented hands to a piano keyboard, popular tunes promptly died.

Lee Phillips, vice president of a large brokerage firm, had one investment — a Steinway piano — that did little but gather dust.

Hero and Phillips had some musical knowledge and wanted more. But time-consuming piano lessons were out of the question. A class called "How to Play the Piano Despite Years of Lessons" was just the short cut they needed.

Housewives, lawyers and even sculptors with rusty fingers are learning or relearning the piano thanks to the class, which now is offered on 75 college campuses from California to Michigan to Florida and in adult education programs.

Of 30 million pianos in the United States, fewer than 5 percent are played, studies have found. The course is an attempt to bring those pianos alive.

"We felt it was time we in music education offered something to people who took lessons and quit," explained Shelby Neely, education director for The Piano Consortium, a nonprofit educational group that sets up the courses.

"There are millions of people who didn't have the desire to stay with it. Why shouldn't they be able to learn to play?"

Every Wednesday night, Hero, Phillips and a dozen others with rusty fingers gather around a piano on Manhattan's East Side, trying to resurrect and refine their piano skills.

"Most of these people took some piano lessons when they were kids, but they've spent their lives wishing they were able to simply sit down and play," said Neely.

An aim of the course is to make playing piano fun by substituting methods that emphasize understanding music and the ability to play by ear for the monotonous scales and rote exercises of traditional piano instruction.

The course's only prerequisite is the ability to pick out a one-finger, simple tune on the piano — no matter how haltingly.

Phillips, a broker and former piano salesman, could play "well enough to sell a piano. But I never knew what I was doing." After his first two classes, he said, "I'm starting to play."

Hero could play the violin, trumpet and guitar. But on the piano, he was less than proficient. "I didn't have the time nor the patience to learn scales and classical music," he said. "But this fits into my schedule and it makes playing the piano easier."

In New York, students pay $150 for 17 two-hour sessions, but class length and cost vary across the country.

A group of musicians studied offbeat ways to teach piano. Then Ward Cannel, a former newspaperman, and Fred Marx, a pop and classical pianist, wrote what became the basic text for the consortium.

During a recent class, students were taught to make basic three-note chords on the piano by putting a finger on the root note, counting up four notes and putting a finger on that key, then counting up three notes and putting a finger on that key.

Later the class studied a diagram called the "circle of root notes," which teaches the common progressions of chords and helps student anticipate where their hands must move along the keyboard to continue playing.

Lowe's Pricing Policy
Many items in this ad carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our retail selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this ad do not include delivery charge. Ask us about our delivery rates.)

You and each of you will take notice and are hereby served with notice that the Petitioners have moved the Court to amend the Petition filed in this proceeding by substituting the actual description from an actual Court ordered survey for the description used in the original Petition, this being necessary because the description originally used was taken from the description used in the deed in which the twelve children of Amie Short conveyed said lands to their mother, Amie Short, following the death of their father, Simon Short, and said description was in error and did not reflect the true description of the lands owned by Amie Short heirs. If you or either of you object to or oppose the Motion you should file your opposition with the Clerk of the Superior Court of Pitt County, Greenville, North Carolina, within thirty days from the date of this notice.

The true description as shown by actual Court ordered survey is as follows:

That certain tract or parcel of land lying and being situated in Pactolus Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, located on the north side of N.C. Highway 33 near the intersection of N.C. Secondary Road 1530 (Mumford Road) and N.C. Highway 33 and being more particularly described as follows:

BEGINNING at a point marked by a railroad spike in the centerline of N.C. Highway 33, said point being the southwest corner of the property herein described and the southeast corner of the property conveyed to Hiram Edsel Garris, by deed of record in the Pitt County Registry in Book R-42, page 198 and running thence with the eastern line of Garris North 37°34'51" East, 50.83 feet to a point in the northern property line of N.C. Computers Aid Career Choice

By LLOYD G. CARTER

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Students considering the future can now consult a computer.

The computer counseling system, called Discover, can provide a blizzard of information on a college or a career.

International Business Machines sells the service to high school districts and colleges. Larry Blasch, an IBM expert who demonstrated the system for educators here, used a video screen with a keyboard underneath and a light pen which the user touches to the screen to call up information.

"Surveys have shown the average high school student gets four hours of counseling in four years," Blasch said. Overworked high school counselors can hardly be expected to provide all the information a curious student might want in that time.

The Discover system allows a student to delve as deeply as he or she wants into the prospects for a future in, for example, nursing.

Schools offering nursing training, job prospects on graduation, wages in different parts of the country as well as drawbacks of the profession can all be called up on the television screen for study and a hard copy printout of the information can also be made.

Blasch said school districts, charged $900 a month, have access to an IBM databank in Los Angeles containing information on more than 1,500 four-year colleges, 1,000 two-year colleges, over 600 types of jobs, 450 military training programs and some 1,000 technical and specialized schools.

Since IBM began marketing the system 18 months ago, 30 high school and college districts have signed up.

The system was developed by career counselors JoAnn Bowlsbey and James Boyd, along with IBM experts.

Ms. Bowlsbey, now a counselor at Western Maryland College, said "the system supplements the work of the guidance counselor but it doesn't replace the counselor."

"It's intended," said Boyd, technical director of the Discover program at the College of Du Page in Glen Ellyn, Ill., "to do four things: help a student help himself; help him understand the decision-making process; help him understand the world of work and his relationship to it; and help him to identify training paths related to occupations."

In some districts, students who might feel shy or confused in front of a counselor can sit down at the computer screen located in the school library or learning center, and daydream about the future with no pressure.

Blasch said the system has proved especially helpful to middle-aged mothers and housewives entering the job market for the first time. In some areas, local jobs currently available are also listed.

While the system is now geared to careers, Blasch said a time may come when persons nearing retirement can consult it.

Tooth-Painting Proves Low-Cost Alternative

By JULIANNE HASTINGS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. James Eisdorfer's specialty is making people smile.

He smiles as he recalls some of his patients — a teen-age girl from New Jersey who never smiled outside her house, a Staten Island housewife who always talked with her hand in front of her face, a young boy with a football injury, a television anouncer and plenty of models.

"I give them immediate smiles," Eisdorfer said.

Eisdorfer is one of about 10 percent of the nation's dentists who now are restoring chipped, lined, stained, pitted or crooked teeth with a method that is faster and less expensive than capping.

The method, composite resin restoration, entails using a mixture of silica and quartz — compounds previously used only to fill cavities in front teeth — to paint over various flaws. After the thick mixture sets, which takes about 10 minutes, the dentist uses disks to "sculpt" the tooth into the desired shape.

Eisdorfer said his work costs about half as much as capping a tooth, a long, often painful process that involves grinding a tooth down to a stub and then crowning it with a cap of porcelain filled with gold.

While capping can run $500-$600 a tooth and take a minimum of three or fours hours per tooth with multiple visits required, painting costs $200-$250 and often can take less than an hour to restore a tooth, Eisdorfer said.

Eisdorfer also is confident that his work lasts "in excess of five years," which is about how long he has been using the process. None of his patients thus far have needed new work, he said.

"But nothing lasts forever," Eisdorfer said. "Crowns have to be redone when the gum grows up" exposing the line between the cap and the tooth stub, he said.

Eisdorfer, who received his degree in dentistry from New York University in 1973 and then specialized in capping during an internship at Mount Fiore Hospital here, does not believe resin restoration will replace capping entirely, but it is a practical alternative.

The process is particularly practical for persons who want their teeth changed solely for cosmetic purposes — models, performers or television personalities whose smiles are their livings.

"There's no destroying a perfectly sound tooth by filing it to a stub," Eisdorfer said. "You clean the tooth and then you put the mixture over it."

Eisdorfer said he has never had a case where decay developed under the mixture.

"The Most Apartment For Your Rental Dollar"

The "true" cost of your apartment each month includes not only rent but also your monthly utilities. Wilson Acres Apartments are Greenville's newest. Because of energy saving design features such as heat pumps, thermal pane glass, insulated doors and extra insulation throughout, your monthly utility bill will be considerably less than most apartments in Greenville.

Add your monthly rent at Wilson Acres to your greatly reduced monthly utility bill at Wilson Acres and we think it's the most apartment for your rental dollar.

New 2 bedroom apartments. ENERGY EFFICIENT with washer/dryer hook-ups, dishwasher, frost-free refrigerator, self-cleaning oven, Cable TV hook-ups, heat pumps, tennis, pool, saunas, laundry and club house facilities, ample parking, 3 blocks from ECU, $295 per month.

When you're looking for living affordably, can you afford not to look at the energy efficient townhouses at Wilson Acres? 752-0277 evenings 6-10 p.m. and weekends call 756-2766.

A unique opportunity from Merrill Lynch:

How to live in the house you want and take up to a year to arrange the best mortgage

We are now able to offer you the unique opportunity of living in a fine home of your choice, with the unusual feature of being able to take up to a year to find the most favorable mortgage that you can arrange.

Even though the value of your house may rise before you close on it, the price you pay is the one quoted to you when you first agree to live in it.

This unusual opportunity is made possible through a special arrangement with Merrill Lynch Relocation Management Inc., which assists corporations in moving their employees to new locations, and in the resale of their previous homes.

These are all fine residential properties, usually preowned by executive level people, presently maintained in move-in condition, professionally appraised and competitively priced.

Under this unusual program, it is now possible for you to:

1. Move in at once and pay monthly rent under a lease agreement.
2. Protect yourself against the purchase price going higher by making a low down payment now, and
3. Hold off on closing for up to a year's time while you arrange the best mortgage available.

If you wish to close sooner on one of these attractive homes Merrill Lynch Relocation Management may be able to help you in other ways.

To find out if you qualify for this offer, simply call us. Because of the nature of this program, it cannot be held open for an unlimited period. If interested, please call today and learn how this program could apply to you.

130,900 - Lynndale-farmhouse style, 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, formal living and dining room, family room with fireplace and wet bar. 9 feet ceilings create space, sprinkler system, wood deck, many extras.

210,000 - 5 bedroom with separate office-storage building, on 3½ acres of land near Bells Fork, combine home and business.

Kingsbrook - Look at the comfort and solid value offered in this fine home. 4 bedrooms, all large, 2½ baths, family room with fireplace, bookcases, and other built-ins, formal areas with drapes, and soft tones, fenced rear yard, 12 3/8% money available.

'Little Lord Fauntleroy' On CBS-TV

He has been Hamlet, Hitler and Pope Innocent III. He played eight different roles, including that of dowager Lady Agatha, in "Kind Hearts and Coronets." He won a Tony Award for his portrayal of Dylan Thomas in "Dylan" on Broadway, and an Oscar for his role in building that famous "Bridge on the River Kwai." He was decapitated in "Cromwell," but kept his head against all odds as an intelligence agent in "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy." Then he hit heights of a different sort as Ben Kenobi in "Star Wars."

Now Alec Guinness is starring as what he terms "a redeemed narrow-minded stuffy curmudgeon" — the Earl of Dorincourt — in the new adaptation of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," telecast by CBS, Tuesday, Nov. 25 (9-11 p.m.). Talented young Ricky Schroder stars in the title role.

As the heir to his grandfather's vast fortune, lands and title, young Cedric is forced by the patriarch, who loathes Americans, to live in a separate house from his mother and to become properly prepared for his new role in the British peerage. As he and his grandfather share their days, each learns from the other.

ALEC GUINNESS, stars as the Earl of Dorincourt, the grandfather of the title character in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which airs as a special movie presentation Tuesday, Nov. 25 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

'Remember The Days?'

When Annette Funicello was asked to star in "25 Years of Mouseketeers," a retrospective airing on NBC-TV's Disney's Wonderful World (Sunday, Nov. 23, 7 p.m.), she admits to having felt apprehensive.

"I wondered if we might look silly," she said. "I couldn't imagine how we would look attempting the club songs and routines we had done as 12-year-olds. I doubted if these old bones would still move. But they did! It's amazing that we could remember the lyrics of every song.

"Being a Mouseketter was one of the best things that ever happened to me," Annette said. "I have the fondest, most beautiful memories of those days, and I'm absolutely thrilled to have a chance to relive them again during this "reunion."

Now a mother of three children, Annette found herself recalling cherished memories while taping the special.

"In the days of the Mickey Mouse Club, the Disney studio was like a second home," she recalled. "We were a group of boys and girls that behaved like brothers and sisters. We enjoyed singing, dancing and each other's company. It was like going to Disneyland every day."

Annette makes appearances on television but devotes most of her time to her husband Jack Gilardi, and children — Gina, 15, Jack Jr., 10, and Jason, 6. "My family means everything to me," she's quick to point out. Other interests include needlepoint, horse racing, horseback riding, tennis, skiing and dancing.

Historic Event Recalled

"Enola Gay," airing Sunday, Nov. 23 (8-11 p.m.), on NBC-TV, depicts the actual events leading up to the dropping of the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945, which forever changed the course of human history.

Portraying the characters whose career and lives were entwined with the Manhattan Project — history's most closely guarded secret — are Patrick Duffy, Gregory Harrison, Billy Crystal, Kim Darby, Gary Frank, Stephen Macht, Robert Pine, James Shigeta and Robert Walden.

Such historical figures as Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Drs. J. Robert Oppenheimer and Albert S. Einstein, Generals George C. Marshall, Leslie Groves and Henry H. Arnold also play out their roles in this dramatic tapestry.

This drama explores the development of the atomic bomb that ushered in the nuclear age. Then it shows the uncompromising stance of the Japanese during the final months of World War II, how they remained committed to victory even if it meant fighting to the last man, woman and child.

Faced with a critical decision to end the war and save perhaps tens of thousands of lives — both American and Japanese — President Truman authorized the mission. Training was conducted in a top-secret atmosphere until the very day of the flight to Hiroshima. Even then, only the commander and one other member of the crew on this historic mission knew what the aircraft was carrying when it took off from Tinian Island in the Pacific on the morning of Aug. 6, 1945.

Enola Gay was the B-29 Superfortress that carried the atomic bomb, and it was named for the mother of the pilot, Col. Paul W. Tibbets, Jr.

Tibbets, now a retired Air Force Brig. General, says he had his mother's name painted on the aircraft just the day before the historic mission.

"My mother encouraged me when I told her I wanted to fly," Tibbets said, "even though my father was not too happy about it. She advised me, 'Paul, if that's what you want to do, go ahead and do the best you can.'"

Tibbets was technical consultant in the production of the epic drama, which was filmed entirely on location in Arizona and California.

PATRICK DUFFY stars as Col. Paul W. Tibbets in "Enola Gay," the dramatic television film depicting the events leading up to the dropping of the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima 35 years ago, airing as the Sunday Big Event, Nov. 23 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Operas In Future

Noted film director Fanco Zeffirelli will be devoting his time to operas over the next several months. He's to direct "I Pagliacci" at Milan, Italy's La Scala opera house in January, then he'll direct "La Boheme" for the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York City in March. Following this, he travels to Egypt, where he plans to produce and direct a lavish movie version of "Aida."

Signs For Film

Danny Kaye has been signed for a starring role in a telefilm titled "Defend to the Death." This will be his first motion picture in 11 years, and he'll portray a Holocaust survivor who takes a stand against American Nazis.

Michele Will Tell

Q: What's going to happen to the character Scotty Baldwin on "General Hospital"? D. HEWITT, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: When Kin Shriner galloped off into the sunset with "Texas" as his destination, 'G.H.'s' producer, Gloria Monty, said she would find another actor for the part. However, now that "Texas" can't seem to find its way out of the ratings' corral, it's conceivable that Kin might return. Anyway, Scotty will be back — with or without a new face!

Q: I wasn't aware until recently that 'Edith' on "Archie Bunker's Place" was dead. Will you please give me some information about this? B. FUGITT, LITTLETON, N.C.

A: Prior to the premiere of "Archie Bunker's Place" last year, Jean Stapleton announced that she would not return to episodic television. Something had to be done about her character, of course, so the decision was made to write her out of the show.

Q: Who played the part of Michael in the TV film titled "Sandcastles"? W. JACOBS, LUMBERTON, N.C.

A: Jan-Michael Vincent, who's one of Hollywood's most talented actors in the 30-ish age bracket. Michael, who grew up on a ranch near Hanford, Calif., says he was "openly rebellious and totally alienated" as a teenager. "I was also constantly in trouble for one thing or another — drinking, fighting and even setting off carbide bombs in school," he recalls. Finally he 'saw the light' when he began to concentrate on drama. He's been a regular on one series — a total disaster called "The Survivors," that aired for three months about 10 years ago.

Q: I'd like to know something about actress Jamie Lee Curtis. Who are her parents? Does she have any brothers and sisters? K. POLLOCK, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Jamie's the 22-year-old daughter of performers Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis. There's an older sister, Kelly, from that same union, and four half-brothers and sisters via her dad's other wives. Jamie lived with her mom until recently when she moved into her own pad.

Q: What relation is Cathy Lee Crosby of "That's Incredible!," to the late Bing Crosby and his daughter, Mary, who's on "Dallas"? E. MARTIN, LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C.

Humans & Chimps Star

Linda Gray and Granville Van Dusen portray scientists involved in chimpanzee research in "The Wild and the Free," to be broadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Nov. 26 (9-11 p.m.). The often comical adventure develops when a group of American-trained, home-raised chimps — whose ability to communicate and comprehend makes them seem almost human — comes into contact with a band of wild chimpanzees in the African jungle.

Gray is cast as Linda Davenport, who works according to her beliefs that research on chimpanzees should be carried out in the wilds of Africa with no human interference in the animals' lifestyle. Van Dusen's character, Dr. Rafelson (Raif), is an American university-based researcher who works under a government grant to train chimps in sign language in a domesticated atmosphere where they are taught to act as human as possible.

These two are thrown together when the government announces its intention to cut off the language grant and use the university chimps for radiation research in cancer research. To save his hairy students, Raif flees with them to the African wilderness at Linda's invitation.

Fascinating developments in primate studies unfold, along with the monkeyshines, as the chimps demonstrate their ability to communicate through Ameslan, the American Sign Language of the Deaf.

Granville Van Dusen has shared top-billing with several of Hollywood's top stars in a number of outstanding films, but he'd never co-starred with chimpanzees before. This meant that 'introductions' and a lot of instructions were necessary.

Robertson Stars

About 30 actors from the Boston, Mass., area have been cast in "Charly II," now being filmed in that city. Cliff Robertson stars.

NOSTALGIC EVENT — Appropriately costumed in her bobby sox, Annette Funicello will be a host of the two-hour "Big Event" presentation, "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days: From Bobby Sox to Bikinis," a nostalgic look at the late 50s and early 60s, on Friday, Nov. 28 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Coburn Co-Stars

James Coburn has been signed to co-star with Albert Finney and Susan Dey in "Looker," a drama for Warner Bros.

Coburn's been cast as the film's principal antagonist. The character owns a giant conglomerate whose experiments in mind control via television commercials triggers a chain of bizarre murders.

Grammy Awards

The 23rd Annual Grammys Awards Show will be telecast Feb. 25, from the stage of New York's Radio City Music Hall. Performances by nominees and the presentations of Grammys to recipients by other leading figures in the recording field will be featured.

Dr. Brothers Tells Why

Dr. Joyce Brothers, noted psychologist and TV personality, has a logical explanation.

"We look back at the good old days for the security we need in these tense times," she said. "It's like going over our baby pictures — to assure us we have roots and an identity."

Dr. Brothers voices her thoughts during "Dick Clark's Good Ol' Days: From Bobby Sox to Bikinis," to be telecast on NBC Friday, Nov. 28 (8-10 p.m.).

The special, hosted by Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon, recalls the nostalgic warmth of the late 50s and early 60s. Over thirty stars and celebrities participate in a then-and-now look at themselves and the period — its fads, fashions and music.

"The period of the late fifties and early sixties was like a calm before the storm," says Dr. Brothers in an interview on the show with Avalon. "We were taking our first tentative steps toward the sexual revolution. This was evident in our fashions. Women began exposing more of their bodies on the beach. The bikini became popular and the man in the gray flannel suit began wearing a pink shirt."

The latter, she explained, was the result of TV, because male TV stars wore colored shirts rather than white for technical reasons.

"This gave other men permission to start wearing more colorful clothing," she said.

Dr. Brothers singled out Elvis Presley and President Dwight Eisenhower as the two people most representative of the forces at odds in the good ol' days — Ike representing stability and security; Elvis, rebellion and change.

Highlights of the special include an opening beach party production number reminiscent of the period; a fads and fashions montage; and a nostalgia quiz involving a look at TV kid stars as they were then and how they are now.

Among the stars featured are Edd 'Kookie' Byrnes, Freddie Cannon, Joey Dee, Bo Diddley, Dion, Fabian and Connie Francis. Also, Lesley Gore, The Kingston Trio, Robert Klien, Anne Meara, Martha Reeves and The Vandelles.

Payton Is Eighth Runner

The Chicago Bears seem to always have exciting running backs, and Walter Payton is no exception. His prowess as a running back is attested to by the fact he is already the eighth leading rusher in NFL history in his sixth year as a pro.

Thursday, Nov. 27 at 12:30 p.m. on CBS-TV, Payton will display his considerable talents against the Detriot Lions and another great running back, Billy Sims.

The Payton and Sims clash will rank among one of the top running back duels in the annals of professional football. It will rival the days when Paul Hornung and Jim Brown dueled for the Packers and the Browns respectively.

Some of the records Payton has set should stay in the record books for some time.

Of course this is another year, and the opposition has been tough on the Jackson State product.

Several weeks ago, he was held to only 27 yards rushing, something that just doesn't happen to Walter Payton.

Two weeks ago he got his touch back and rushed for 170 yards against the Redskins and ex-Bears Coach Jack Pardee. Payton also caught a touchdown pass in the game.

The great pass catching ability of Payton makes him doubly dangerous to defensive teams. When he lines up behind the center, it's bad if he takes a handoff, and its bad when he suddenly darts out of the backfield for a pass from quarterback Vince Evans.

The quarterback situation should help Payton as the NFL season winds down. Vince Evans is firmly established as the top quarterback now, after a stretch when the Bears used three different quarterbacks trying to find the right combination.

Another asset Payton has is in the form of another player. Payton has always rushed better when he had Roland Harper blocking for him from the fullback slot.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — Even-tempered JOHN DENVER flew into a near uncontrollable rage when he heard the song on MONTY PYTHON's newest comedy album titled "AND NOW FOR THE SOUND OF JOHN DENVER BEING STRANGLED." As if that's not enough, background music for the jibe is his hit "ANNIE" song. You can expect a law suit — that's a sure bet!

Speaking of law suits...ELTON JOHN'S neighbor in LA is hopping mad over the huge barbed wire fence the little guy has built to divide their properties and is suing for a whopping amount — $600,000, no less.

CHERYL LADD will probably spend her hiatus from "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" toiling away in her first feature film — a suspense thriller titled "LINKS" She's not given a definite 'yes,' but it's expected momentarily.

CARY GRANT wasn't upset over being portrayed as SOPHIA LOREN's also-ran suitor in her recent TV film: "I thought she treated it with very good taste. I was flattered," he commented. But his reaction to CHEVY CHASE's oh! so-naughty insinuations on an edition of TOM SNYDER's "TOMORROW" show a couple of weeks ago was far from pleasant.

Get ready to take a second look when the new flick, "CONTINTNEAL DIVIDE," hits the big screen. Yes, it's JOHN BELUSHI starring opposite BLAIR BROWN. But it's a different Belushi than the one you remember as a 'regular' on "SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE." He's lost 40 pounds and looks at least 10 years younger, thanks to a strict diet and strenuous daily workouts with a professional trainer.

JEFFERSON STARSHIP fans continue to bite their nails because of the severe stroke the group's leader, PAUL KANTNER, had a while back. The 39-year-old musician is still listed in 'serious but stable condition.'

There's such a constant turnover among the cast of TV's daytime dramas that it's hard to keep up with who's leaving what show. One of the latest 'exits' is ELLEN HOLLY, who's been a regular on "ONE LIFE TO LIVE" for 12 years (She played Carla Scott.)

Another 'daytime defection' — this one from "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS" - JOHN McCOOK, did a double-take during a performance of his play, "PERFECTLY FRANK," when he looked out into the audience and saw his 'ex' — JULIET PROWSE applauding wildly. So..who says divorce can't be pleasant!

She's all for dollars — and sense.

FOR BETTE B. ANDERSON, Under Secretary of the Treasury

If we save, we lose money because of double-digit inflation; if we spend, we are fueling inflation. Just what is right? — C.M., Terre Haute, Ind.

● Generally, concerned people can help the nation's fight against inflation the same way they conduct their own economic struggle — by spending their money wisely (that is, by buying less of those products and services whose costs are rising the fastest), by conserving energy and by resisting the tendency to spend unnecessarily today in the fear that things will cost more tomorrow. A helpful booklet on inflation was prepared for the Advertising Council in cooperation with the Dept. of the Treasury, Commerce, Labor and Agriculture. You can obtain it free by writing: Dollars and Sense, FW., Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Do you know what was served at our first Thanksgiving? — T. Evins, Flint, Mich.

● At Plymouth Colony, 1621, the Pilgrims prepared this line-up of goodies to serve their Indian guests — wild turkey roasted on spits and stuffed with cornbread; venison stew; baked oysters; baked sweet corn (in their husks); baked pumpkin with maple syrup flavoring. Incidentally, the food was dished up on big wooden serving platters referred to as trenchers; each guest had a smaller version. Irving Wallace, in The People's Almanac #2, states that after they finished eating at that first dinner, the brother of Chief Massaoit (one of the guests) took off for the woods and came back bearing a bushel of popped popcorn — which was new to the colonists.

What was the film you made that you said put years on your life? Was it that bad? — B.G., Bangor, Maine

● The movie was Romeo and Juliet that I made about 12 years ago. It wasn't bad. It was frustrating. Although I was 22, I was said to be 17 — to make me nearer Juliet's age. Which meant that fellows I'd been dating stopped calling because they didn't want to go out with a "kid." Afterward, I announced I'd aged five years as a result of the film.

FOR STEVE DUNLEAVY, author of The Very First Lady

Is it true that you have a hard time with interviews because people think that talking to you is like the kiss of death? — G.J., Westchester, N.Y.

● No. Just because Elvis Presley, Carmine Galante (the Mafia hoodlum), Albert De Salvo (the Boston Strangler), Prince William of England and Peter Finch, the actor, all died within days of being interviewed by me, doesn't mean that I'm a jinx. All it means is that I'm a victim of coincidence — or they were.

FOR JIMMY COCO, star of Only When I Laugh

What was your most memorable Thanksgiving dinner? — N.D., Cocoa Beach, Fla.

● What made it "memorable" was not because of all the things I ate (and you know how I love to eat), but because of all the things I didn't eat. On this occasion, right before Thanksgiving, I got an infection in my gums. The medication made my mouth tender, and I could not eat solids, only soft stuff. Imagine me, watching everyone tuck in to turkey, stuffing, potatoes and all!

FOR DELLA REESE, recording star

You're said to be a whiz in the kitchen, so what did you conjure up at your first Thanksgiving dinner? — W.M., Tupelo, Miss.

● Peeled potatoes! That's because I was only 5. When I was in the kitchen, as a child, it was not a treat for me, it was a necessity. Mom insisted I must learn. I didn't mind peeling potatoes, but on that Thanksgiving I wanted to be in charge of dessert. So, to mollify me, she let me cut the dough for the cookies.

FOR GILBERT CATES, producer-director Oh, God! Book II

What sticks out most in your mind about working with George Burns? — B.B., Mesa, Colo.

● Our scene where Johnny Carson appears on the Tonight Show coincided with his renegotiating his contract with NBC. All signs pointed to his quitting. So I was reluctant to go ahead with our scene because if Johnny left, our movie would look dated. George was sure he'd continue, saying, "What else can Johnny do?"

FOR KEN NORTON, boxer

Why does the U.S. dominate the heavyweight boxing scene? — G.D., Racine, Wis.

● In Mexico, where they have many great fighters, they just don't seem to grow big enough. The same is true of Orientals and many of the South American fighters. There used to be a lot of top heavyweights coming out of Europe years ago, but lately, it seems they all have too much of an Olympic style to make it in today's era of the "Super" heavyweights.

PRO AND CON

Is a College Degree A Necessary Factor for Success in Employment Today?

PRO Harold Howe II, Vice President for Education and Public Policy, The Ford Foundation

Having a college degree improves the odds for getting a job, for holding a job and for promotion. Although a degree is no guarantee of these objectives and even though the extra dollars earned today by degree holders have diminished in comparison with the advantage of a degree some years ago, a degree is still a good investment — both for the individual and for society. Persons with degrees lead more interesting lives, go to jail less often, vote more frequently and earn more money.

CON Richard B. Freeman, professor of economics, Harvard University

No. You can succeed in life without a college degree. Recent economic trends suggest you have a better chance of earning good money without a degree than in the past. A degree helps but is not necessary for economic success. Millions of people without college training earn more today than the average college graduate and are happier at their jobs. A third of the 25-34-year-old high-school graduates have earnings above the median for college graduates of the same age. You could be one of those.

How Any Parent Can Learn To Be a Better Parent

Being a parent is no easy job. Now, all over the country, people are going to school to learn how to be better moms and dads.

Joan Moir

Staffer Rita Pinardo (left) helps parents at Philadelphia's Child and Parent Demonstration and Resource Center.

By Gloria Hochman

The plumber who fixes the leak under your sink has a license. So do architects, hairdressers and pilots. But mothers and fathers, no matter what their background, their age or their skills, are expected, without training, to be loving, nurturing child-rearers.

Now, for the first time, parents all over America are gathering in centers and enrolling in schools to learn how to be better parents.

There is Philadelphia's Child and Parent Demonstration and Resource Center, Seattle's Parent Place and St. Louis' Mothers' Center — only three of dozens of new programs that focus on "parenting." Each one operates a little differently, but they all share a recognition that being a parent is a difficult job, that healthy, productive children can only be reared by fulfilled parents and that the well-being of the family is the nation's highest priority.

"This is not a new idea, but an idea whose time has come," says Dr. Edward Zigler, Sterling Professor of Psychology at Yale University. "In the old days, people grew up in stable neighborhoods with a predictable group of people around them," explains Dr. George Albee, psychology professor at the University of Vermont. "Today we live in a society of strangers, a mobile world where one American in five changes residence each year. The extended family has disappeared, so has tradition. Parents feel isolated and confused. There is more of a need to join groups where they can learn from each other."

"There was a time when most people didn't think that rearing children was anything more than instinct," says Dr. Dorothy Huntington, former director of Peninsula Hospital's Child and Family Services in Burlingame, Calif. "But in the past five years, there has been growing recognition that all parents can benefit from programs that teach them how to be more effective parents."

Linda Michaels, for instance, who attends the Parents' Workshop in New York City (co-directed by Naomi Siegel), has a master's degree in early childhood education, but, by the time her son, Alexander, was 10 months old, "everything I had read didn't mean a thing," Linda admits. "I needed to talk with other people who were grappling with the parenting process, struggling with their conflicts about being a parent and pursuing a career, and learning from other people how they handle it when their child throws a tantrum in the supermarket."

In many cases, the impetus to form groups and develop programs has come from parents themselves. But some mothers and fathers admit that it was painful, at first, to acknowledge that they needed help with a job they felt they should instinctively know how to do. A Chicago woman, for instance, told a social worker who was starting a parents' program, "I'll come if you promise not to tell me I'm a bad mother."

That's why Susannah Eldridge, co-director with Kyong Lischner of the Philadelphia Center (operated by the Paul Mercer Center of Pennsylvania Hospital), calls her program "parent centered."

"We want parents to have experiences that will give them confidence in their inner resources," says Ms. Eldridge. "We don't teach any one 'right' way of child-rearing but encourage parents to be themselves and see that there are alternative ways of responding. You choose what makes sense to you. Nothing makes a parent feel yuckier than some expert who tries to cram knowledge of child development down their throat."

Parents who come to the Philadelphia program or to the Parents' Workshop in New York bring their children. Ms. Eldridge points to 16-month-old Chris, wearing only a diaper, who has been happily pouring water in and out of plastic cups.

itself a "runaway center" for parents. Parents "drop in" to talk with a counselor about a specific problem or sometimes just to mingle with other parents. There are rap sessions, a telephone hot line and classes on subjects ranging from toilet training to the two-career family.

The Parent-Child Development Center in Indianapolis is providing a more intensive parenting experience and is part of a national experiment in parent education initiated in 1970 by the Federal Government. It is one of five such programs funded by Government and private money — others are located in New Orleans, Birmingham, Houston and Detroit.

In Indianapolis, parents (mainly low-income and teen-age mothers) commit themselves to attend the program four days a week for three years, beginning when their babies (who come with them) are three months old. They learn about child development, medical care, nutrition, vocational opportunities for themselves, and they discuss concerns of single parents. As they move through the program, the mothers take increasing responsibility for running it and work in every classroom in the center.

Do parenting programs work?

A five-year evaluation of the three original parent-child development centers — Birmingham, New Orleans, Houston — gives strong testimony that they do. Mothers and fathers who participated showed greater sensitivity and responsiveness to their children. And their children, at age 3, scored significantly higher than non-participating children on tests that measured language skills, personality and cognitive development.

Parents are enthusiastic. "My life has changed 180 degrees," says Resa Workman, who started a parents' group in St. Louis. "When I moved to St. Louis in 1970, I longed for the 'mothers' group I had belonged to in New York," Ms. Workman says. "I felt isolated, and I needed someone to share my feelings with. My neighbors were talking about diapers and detergents and I needed to discuss what was happening inside me and to feel as though I counted as a person.

"The group helped me to realize that I was a good enough mother. No, I wasn't perfect, but I was good enough, and that was tremendously freeing. And, in the process, I went from a simp to an assertive woman who feels good about herself. I credit all of that to the Mothers' Center."

"It is time this country stops giving lip service to our commitment to children and does something concrete about it," insists Yale's Dr. Zigler. "Programs should be mandated in the schools (more than one-fourth of the nation's school systems have parenting electives) for boys and girls, and there should be more programs to support families when they need it most. Do you know that 90 percent of all child abuse is caused by caretakers under too much stress?

"We are willing to spend tens of thousands of dollars on a child once he has serious problems, but teaching 'parenting' as prevention almost seems a little luxurious. I call that short-sighted vision," says Dr. Zigler, bristling. "The future of this country is its children. If we make the commitment, I guarantee that the payoff will be there." FW

Wayne earns more than $10 million a year performing. Those numbers bojangle the mind of even so estimable an entertainer as Sammy Davis.

UPI

Newton, right, with Lucie Arnaz and Desi Jr. on the Here's Lucy! show in 1967 during his plumper days.

The King of Las Vegas Is... Wayne Newton. Really!

At 21, he sang at a rock concert in a tux and was laughed off the stage. But now, 100 pounds lighter and millions of dollars richer, Wayne and his audiences are in perfect harmony.

By Bruce Pollock

He has virtually been the music world's ambassador to Las Vegas for the past 10 years. For 36 weeks a year, seven nights a week, two shows a night, he struts the stages of mega-hotels like the Frontier, the Sands and the Desert Inn as if he owns them, and he probably could. With an annual take of over $10 million parlayed into shrewd investments in Arabian horses and antique cars, Wayne Newton is, at 38, one of the richest men in the world.

Yet nothing in his 21-year career has come without a struggle. "Rejection will affect people in one of two ways," he says. "It will either destroy them, or it'll make them lean back on their heels and fight. It's always made me fight."

Tall and muscular, Newton is a commanding figure onstage and an imposing presence off. Very few who come to see his patented Vegas show where he's known as the Midnight Idol, remember the stocky young man of 21 (with the voice of a 13-year old), who emerged as a curiosity to most record fans in 1963, with his rendition of "Danke Shoen," produced by his friend and mentor, Bobby Darin. This moderate hit, along with his exposure on Jackie Gleason's TV show, prompted Newton to break from the confines of the lounge act he'd developed in Vegas with older brother Jerry and test himself in the larger world outside.

Mark Sennet / Camera 5

While he scored well at some club dates, he was really looking for the approval of his peers, who in those days were into rock 'n' roll. It never happened. Top New York disc-jockey Murray the K put on a show that featured Wayne Newton on a bill with Little Anthony & the Imperials, and, for Newton, the experience was a disaster.

"It was the first time and the only time in my life that I've ever been booed," Wayne confides, years and years removed. "When I walked out on the stage in my tux — because that's how I learned show biz — they thought I was some kind of freak." Instead of winning the acclaim of his contemporaries, Wayne went on to become the favorite of their parents.

In the years since, Wayne has been able to make a triumphant return to Las Vegas — a 100 pounds lighter — building a staggering career as a solo artist and imparting a totally professional ease and charm on the big stage. He is a bigger Vegas draw than Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., even the late great Elvis.

His lack of similar success in the record field has remained a sore spot, however. Even with "Danke Shoen" behind him, he was unable, throughout the 60's, to dent the Top-10. There was one high point, though — in 1972 he recorded "Daddy Don't You Walk So Fast," which became his biggest hit, selling more than 5 million records worldwide.

After that, though, more silence. Why is it that Newton has enjoyed such success onstage and yet hasn't been able to transfer it to a record? In his opinion it has to do with being unable to control the various elements that go into the creation, marketing and politics of a hit single. It is this control that is at the center of his Las Vegas act, from the hiring of musicians and the selection of songs, right on down to ringside chatter and light cues.

But now he may finally have that same control when it comes to records. With a huge smile of vindication, Wayne Newton mentions that his latest album, Night Eagle, released on his own label, Aries II, featured the popular song, "Years." "It's exciting for me because I wanted to prove something, if only to myself, that if people can hear it they'll buy it."

Ironically, his audience in Vegas is composed primarily of people his own age, many who have seen him dozens of times. Among them, compounding the irony, are some of the top rock acts in the business today, who call upon Wayne for the benefit of his expertise.

The highlight of Wayne Newton's act is still his intense reading of "Daddy Don't You Walk So Fast," the emotional tale of a young daughter chasing after her departing dad in an attempt to convince him not to leave home for good. And while it may have meant one thing to him career-wise in 1972, in 1980 it packs a decidedly double wallop, now that he has a daughter of his own, Erin, born three years ago. "I view that song a lot differently today than when I first recorded it, I can tell you that," he says emphatically. "I don't know how many times I've said if something should happen to my wife and me, my God, what about her?"

While Wayne and his wife, Elaine, have enjoyed 12 years of marriage, for Wayne, parting ways with his brother Jerry carried almost the same impact as a divorce. "It was probably the turning point of my life," he says. This past Christmas, after nine years, he reunited with Jerry Newton. "It's a wonderful relationship now," he says. "He's looking at me differently than he did then, and I'm looking at him differently because neither of us has anything to prove anymore. So we can truly accept each other as adults."

As an adult in the last 10 years Wayne Newton has amassed riches and success certainly beyond the wildest dreams of a working-class, part-Indian boy from Virginia. His latest investment is a casino-hotel. He is justifiably proud of his accomplishments. "Nothing ever came easy for me," he says. "Everything in my life has been a battle. But somehow when you win those battles they're a lot more meaningful." FW

Quarterback Danny White: The Real Hero of Dallas

By Mark Goodman

Danny White came to professional football with all the makings of celebrity greatness in him. He could throw a football 70 yards on a dime — and punt it into the ionosphere. He was as handsome as any TV motorcycle cop around. He was assertive — but not aggressive. He was articulate — but not lippy. He was, in short, the perfect gunslinger for the Dallas Cowboys.

The only problem was that there was another man in the saddle, one Roger Staubach, not an easy fellow to dismount. Staubach may have been the most exciting football player of the 70's, the swift and strong-armed king of the two-minute drill who carried Dallas to 23 come-from-behind victories in the fourth quarter, 14 in the last two minutes.

So White came in on fourth downs to punt, and to step into action on the rare occasions when Staubach was sidelined. Mainly, he played his football in headphones — and waited.

But his time has come this season. Staubach, 38, tearfully stepped down last March, leaving White, 27, with an impressive pair of cleats to fill. And Wilford Danny White Jr. has handled it all with remarkable grace. It hasn't been easy, though, particularly the past four years of quiet frustration. "One of my pet peeves," White says, "was that they always talked to Roger. It was 'Roger, do this,' or 'Roger, did you see that?' as if I weren't there. I could understand it, but it was kind of a blow to the ego."

Then, during summer training camp, White found that the peaceful days of anonymity were over. The question was beaten into his brain: "What's it like...?" "Ask the President how he feels being President," he sometimes says. "Naturally, he'd be happy. Asking me how it feels to be the Number One quarterback seems a pretty stupid question, but I guess they have to hear it in my own words. And those depend on whether I'm in a docile, cooperative mood or want to be a smart aleck because I'm sick and tired of the question."

Such questions are also ironic in that folks have said for four years that White could be a starter for most teams in the NFL. "That slowly drove me crazy," he says. "It would remind me how frustrated I was. It got so bad that when people would introduce me as 'Danny White, backup quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys,' I felt like strangling them."

Still, the focus of White's frustration lay essentially in his position, not in Roger himself. A crazed grizzly could not dislike Roger Staubach, and he and Danny became fast friends. Coach Tom Landry notes, "Danny has the same type of character about him. He is confident and he's a

"How many insurance agents do you really need?"

State Farm Agent Mike Kohlbrecher, Carlyle, Illinois: "These days a lot of people are deciding they want their State Farm agent to be their only agent. They want someone they know and trust to handle all their family insurance needs.

"Makes good sense. Just about all the help you'll ever need is right there in one place. Life, health, home and auto protection.

"And you only have one number to call when you have a question or want to report a claim.

"But best of all, you'll have an agent who'll be available to give you all the personal service State Farm is famous for."

leader." As Danny says, "That was the problem all those years. I could never get mad enough at Roger to beat him out. Not that I could have."

When the Cowboys began trumpeting themselves as "America's Team," White began calling Roger "America's Quarterback," and Staubach called Danny "America's Punter." And last season, before Staubach decided to retire, White stuck a note in his locker. It read: "Roger, Danny needs your locker for next year. Please turn in your equipment as soon as possible." It was signed, "Coach Landry."

Danny has the locker he wants now and, after a rocky beginning, he has demonstrated poise and confidence in guiding the Dallas attack this year. Despite a broken finger (on his non-passing hand), he threw 4 TD passes in a 59-14 win over the 49ers. He's even displayed the Staubachian flair for drama; in the Tampa Bay game, for example, he rallied the Cowboys from a 17-7 deficit, throwing three touchdown passes to give them a 28-17 victory. All this as he continues to be the team's punter, as well.

Interestingly enough, White had planned on a career not on the gridiron but on the baseball diamond. He went to Arizona State as a baseball player who could also kick a football. But coach Frank Kush saw the rifle arm and cool talent for leadership, and abruptly gave White the starting quarterback assignment before the New Mexico game in his sophomore year. Danny responded by throwing six touchdown passes as ASU racked up 60 points. The other quarterback quit the team the next day.

He was impressive enough in his three-year career for the Cowboys to draft him on the third round in 1974. But 1974 marked the infancy of the World Football League, when owners paid extravagant salaries for name talent. So White signed instead with the Memphis Southmen. Even then, he began as a backup quarterback to John Huarte — ironically, Staubach's chief rival in college.

The Cowboys grabbed him when the league folded in 1976, and White's odyssey as the man who held the clipboard and ran onto the field to punt was launched. He had his moments, to be sure. The grandest triumph came in a play-off game against Atlanta in 1978, when he took over for Roger and engineered two TD drives that led Dallas to the Super Bowl.

But these were shadow performances; now he is tested in the spotlight every Sunday. White has the looks to easily outshine Joe Namath if he chose, but he is married and lives quietly with his wife, JoLynn, and their three children. During most of the season, he will arise at 5 A.M. and drive to nearby McKinney for a 6 o'clock Mormon seminar with a group of schoolchildren. But like the devout Roger, he is no Bible-walloper. "I'm not going to ever cram my religious beliefs down anyone's throat," he says.

The Cowboys' front office, though, has made it clear it believes religiously in Danny White. Says president Tex Schramm: "When a player like Roger, who has been such an integral part of your team, leaves, the personality of the team can never again be quite the same. That's not to say it can't be as successful — just not the same. So the Cowboys of the 80's will adapt to Danny White." FW

A: It's just what it says: Tobacco you enjoy without lighting up.

Q: How do you use it?
A: First, you don't chew it. Just take a small pinch between your thumb and forefinger, put it between your cheek and gum, and leave it there. The tobacco will slowly release its great flavor to give you real tobacco satisfaction.

Q: Is it hard to use?
A: Not really. When you first try it, the tobacco may move around in your mouth more than it should, and your mouth may water a bit more than you're used to, but getting the hang of "going smokeless" is all part of the fun. In a couple of weeks you'll be a "pro."

Q: Is there a difference between the three most popular brands?
A: Sure...HAPPY DAYS is a mild, satisfying blend of mint-flavored tobacco, while SKOAL is full-bodied with the added good taste of wintergreen. COPENHAGEN is a stronger, natural blend of choice tobaccos. All three are packed in convenient cans and each is dated for freshness.

Q: Is the date on the can the expiration date?
A: No, it's the date of manufacture. It's our way of letting you know how fresh and moist our tobacco is.

Q: How much does "Going Smokeless" cost?
A: An average user "dips" about 1½ cans per week, and that's about a dollar's worth. Not bad, when you think how much everything else costs these days.

Q: Do a lot of people use smokeless tobacco?
A: A lot more than you think. Last year we sold over 325 million cans. And more and more people from every part of the country are "going smokeless" all the time. (Even loose-leaf chewers are mixing it in with their brands for extra flavor.)

Q: Where can I buy it?
A: Ask for it at your favorite tobacco counter; or mail the coupon below and you'll get a free can of HAPPY DAYS to try.

Thanks a lot, Walt....

"Home heating costs were eating me alive... until I got my Buck Stove."

Mr. Gobel Green — Candler, N.C.

The Buck Stove: Whole-house heating that saves you money.

The Buck Stove is not just another wood stove, freezing you in one room and roasting you in another. It's a low cost, high-technology alternative to your present gas, oil or electric heating system.

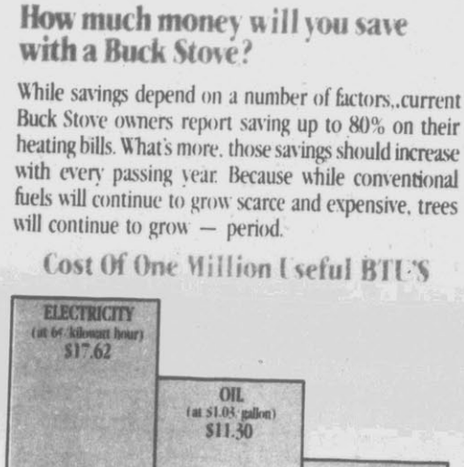

With its own built-in thermostatic blower, the Buck Stove works effectively and efficiently, safely and quietly. And very inexpensively — using less wood than a conventional fireplace and no more electricity than a 100-watt bulb. Yet, unlike a Franklin-type wood stove, it can dependably heat your entire house — up to 3,000 square feet. And keep your family toasty warm, day and night.

In fact, it's uncommon to find more than a 10°F difference between the room in which the Buck Stove is located and the far end of the house.

How much money will you save with a Buck Stove?

While savings depend on a number of factors, current Buck Stove owners report saving up to 80% on their heating bills. What's more, those savings should increase with every passing year. Because while conventional fuels will continue to grow scarce and expensive, trees will continue to grow — period.

Cost Of One Million Useful BTU'S

There is only one Buck Stove heating system.

Buck Stove invented the forced air wood heating system and has continued perfecting it ever since. Its exclusive and patented design — for both fireplace insert and freestanding models — cannot be duplicated.

Since many Buck Stove imitations have appeared on the market, we think you should know why Buck Stove is still the leader.

Quality Construction — The Buck Stove is made with three steel walls. The firebox is pressure vessel plate steel — the highest quality steel available. The doors are cast grey iron, and the glass door inserts resist breaking at temperatures as high as 1200°F.

Airtight Design — The Buck Stove heating system is engineered to burn wood or coal slowly and completely, allowing a controlled, even flow of air across the fire. This precise draft control makes it easy to build a fire and eliminates constant fire tending.

3-Speed Thermostatic Blower — The Buck Stove's powerful rear-mounted blower can completely recirculate the air in an 1800 square foot house once every half hour, insuring even heat distribution. And since the thermostat is regulated by the firebox temperature, very little heat is lost up your chimney when the fire is hot. And your house isn't flooded with chilly air when the fire cools down.

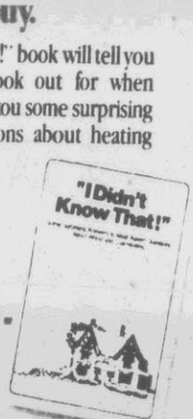

Factory Certified Installation — The Buck Stove has been rigorously tested for safety and is UL listed. But more important, every Buck Stove installer has been factory trained and certified, so every Buck Stove installation can meet the strict specifications of Underwriters Laboratories, the National Fire Protection Association and all local fire and building codes.

One Buck Stove owner leads to another and another and another...

If you really want to know how good a Buck Stove is, ask a Buck Stove owner. On an average, every Buck Stove owner sends us five new customers. Customers who are looking to save money and keep warm with the best wood heating system money can buy.

Read this before you buy.

The Buck Stove "I Didn't Know That!" book will tell you what to look for and what to look out for when shopping for a wood stove. And give you some surprising answers to the most-asked questions about heating with wood and coal.

More Take-Home Pay Through New Job Benefits

By Shirley Sloan Fader

There may be ways that you're not aware of to get extra cash benefits on your job. Here are a just a few suggestions on improving your earning power.

Cash for Unused Vacation Days

Now that 1980 is nearing its end, you may want to try to convert your unused 1980 vacation days into cash.

Often, for personal reasons, you're unable to use all the vacation to which you're entitled. And many employers won't allow you to carry over the time to next year. If that's your situation, you may be able to turn those vacation days into extra take-home pay.

International management consultants, Hay Associates, says that its recent survey indicates that officially only 13 percent of employers permit extra pay for unused vacation. But Hay Associate Madeline Hellegers comments, "It's probably much more widespread on an informal basis than the reported 13 percent. Employers don't want to encourage people to skip needed rest time. Yet, when you go to them and explain you really cannot use the days, they are often very flexible about making the cash exchange."

If you do arrange it, you'll probably receive double your usual salary for each vacation day you work. You'll have the vacation money you would receive if you took the time as well as your regular pay for working. Ninety-five percent of the organizations in the Hay survey who offer money follow this system. The other 5 percent allow partial pay: total salary for time you work plus partial salary for vacation days not taken.

Bus Fare from Your Boss

Employee discounts for traveling back and forth to work are now available in many parts of the United States. Because the idea is so new, very, very few employers have taken advantage of the opportunity for their employees. When an employer does act, the transportation company usually sells the passes to the employer at a discount. Then, if it wishes, the company can add an additional discount of its own. For example, Northwestern National Life Insurance Company in Minneapolis buys the passes from the St. Paul Metropolitan Transit Commission at 12½-percent off, then adds a 25-percent discount of its own which gives employees a 37½-percent saving.

A recent study by the American Public Transit Association indicates that thousands of suburbs, towns and cities are already served by companies that offer the passes. To find out whether the bus line that serves you offers such a pass program, call the marketing director of the company. If the answer is yes, suggest to your union or your boss that the company join the plan. If the answer is no, you, your union or your employer may wish to obtain information on how to set up fare benefits for employees. For a free packet of how-to information, write: Mr. Albert Engelken, American Public Transit Association 1225, Conn. Avenue N.W. Washington D.C. 20036.

Pregnancy Cash Benefits

New health benefits can mean extra family cash for pregnant jobholders. Since most married women share their income with their husbands and families, this is good news for men and children as well as for women.

Under new Federal Government extra-money pregnancy protection, health benefits must be paid to employees for pregnancy disabilities to the same extent they are paid to employees who are disabled for other reasons. For example, if a company normally pays for long-term disabilities for an employee recovering from an auto accident or a long siege of back trouble, it must pay long-term disability benefits for incapacity to work caused by pregnancy.

Also, a company cannot create special time conditions for pregnancy health benefits. That means it cannot say that pregnancy benefits will be paid only after a few months of employment if the same time conditions don't apply to other health problems. For instance, if the company pays health benefits for physical problems, like respiratory ailments, which existed before the employee was hired, then it cannot refuse health benefits for pregnancy which began before the employee joined the organization. Only companies with fewer than 15 employees are excused from these laws.

For more information on Government protection for pregnancy write: Brief Highlights of Major Federal Laws on Sex Discrimination in Employment, Women's Bureau, U.S. Dept. of Labor, Room S3005, 200 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D.C. 20210. FW

Fruited Wine Punch

1 jug (1.5 liters) Rhine wine
1 cup KARO® Light Corn Syrup
Grapes, orange slices, lemon slices
1 bottle (28 oz) club soda, chilled

In punch bowl mix wine and corn syrup. Add fruit. Cover; refrigerate several hours. Before serving add soda and ice. Makes 24 (4 oz) servings.

Mix and chill early in the day.

Spinach Dip

2 cups HELLMANN'S® Real Mayonnaise
1/2 cup parsley sprigs
1/2 small onion, cut up
1 small clove garlic
1 Tbsp lemon juice
1/4 tsp pepper
1 pkg (10 oz) frozen chopped spinach, thawed, drained on paper towels

In covered blender container blend all ingredients at high speed just until finely chopped. Cover; refrigerate at least 4 hr. Makes 2-3/4 cups.

Can be made one or two days before serving.

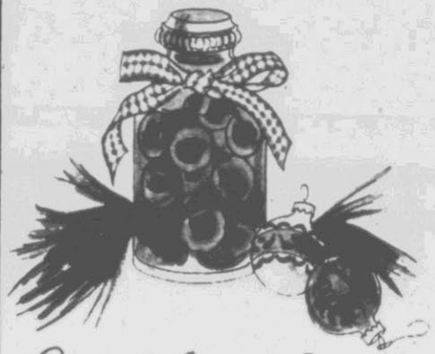

Bourbon Cake

1 pkg (18-1/2 oz) yellow cake mix
1/2 cup ARGO® or KINGSFORD'S® Corn Starch
1/2 cup sugar
1 cup water
4 eggs
1/2 cup MAZOLA® Corn Oil
1 tsp vanilla

Grease 12-cup fluted or 10" plain tube pan. Mix cake mix, corn starch and sugar. With mixer at low speed beat in next 4 ingredients. At medium speed beat 3 min. Pour into pan. Bake in 350°F oven 50 to 60 min. Cool 15 min in pan. Prepare glaze. Remove cake from pan; pierce thoroughly with fork. Brush with 1/2 of the glaze. Let stand 1 hr. Repeat. Store tightly covered up to 1 week. Decorate with whipped cream and cherries.

Glaze: In saucepan mix 1 cup KARO Light Corn Syrup, 1/4 cup sugar and 1/4 cup MAZOLA Margarine. Stir over medium heat until smooth. Remove; add 1/2 cup bourbon.

Peanut Butter Crinkles

1 cup MAZOLA® Margarine
1 cup SKIPPY® Peanut Butter
1 cup sugar
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp vanilla
2-1/2 cups unsifted flour
1 tsp baking powder
1 tsp baking soda
1 tsp salt
Sugar
Nuts, chocolate kisses, jam or jelly

In bowl with mixer at medium speed beat first 6 ingredients until fluffy. At low speed beat in next 4 ingredients. Shape into 1" balls; roll in sugar. Place 2" apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in 350°F oven 12 to 15 min or until browned. Immediately press nuts or candies into cookies, or press with thumb and fill with jam. Cool. Store in airtight container. Makes 6 dozen.

Bake up to one week ahead.

Blue Cheese Dressing

2 cups HELLMANN'S® Real Mayonnaise
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 cup vinegar
4 tsp sugar
1/2 tsp dry mustard
1/2 tsp garlic powder
1/2 tsp onion powder
4 oz blue cheese, crumbled

Mix first 7 ingredients; stir in cheese. Cover; refrigerate at least 2 hr. Makes 3 cups.

Keeps well in refrigerator two to three weeks.

Marinated Vegetables

1 cup MAZOLA® Corn Oil
1 cup cider vinegar
1/3 cup sugar
4 tsp salt
1/2 tsp pepper
2 cans (16 oz each) red kidney beans, drained
2 cans (16 oz each) whole baby carrots, drained
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
3 pkg (10 oz each) frozen broccoli spears, cooked, drained

Mix first 5 ingredients. Place beans and carrots in 13" x 9" x 2" dish. Sprinkle with onion. Top with broccoli. Pour oil mixture over vegetables. Cover; refrigerate overnight. Drain; arrange on platter. Makes 12 servings.

Allow a day for flavor to develop.

Chicken & Ham Supreme

6 whole chicken breasts, boned, halved
1/4 cup MAZOLA® Margarine
2 cups chopped onions
1/4 cup ARGO® or KINGSFORD'S® Corn Starch
1/2 tsp salt
1/4 tsp pepper
1 cup dry sherry
4 cups milk
3 cups water
12 chicken-flavor bouillon cubes
1 lb 8 oz spaghetti, cooked 8 min, drained
12 slices Swiss cheese
12 slices boiled ham

In Dutch oven brown chicken, a few pieces at a time, in margarine over medium heat 15 min or until tender. Remove chicken. Add onions; cook 5 min. Mix corn starch, salt and pepper. Gradually stir in sherry until smooth. Add to onions with next 3 ingredients. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat; boil 1 min. Grease 6-qt shallow baking pan or two 3-qt casseroles. Add spaghetti. Pour on sauce; toss. Roll cheese inside ham. Arrange with chicken over spaghetti. Bake tightly covered in 325°F oven 45 to 60 min or until hot. Makes 12 servings.

Or, prepare the day before but do not bake. Cover; refrigerate. To serve, bake 1-1/2 to 1-3/4 hr.

SQUASH CASSEROLE

1 cup butter or margarine
12 ozs. herb-seasoned dressing mix
3 cups sliced or diced cooked squash, drained (zucchini or crookneck)
1 can (10½ ozs.) cream of mushroom or cream of chicken soup
1 cup sour cream
1 large onion, grated
3 large carrots, grated
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. Melt butter and toss with herb-seasoned dressing mix.
2. Mix half of dressing-mix mixture with squash, cream of mushroom soup, sour cream, onions, carrots and pepper.
3. Turn mixture into lightly greased 13 × 9 × 2-inch baking dish and spread evenly. Sprinkle remaining dressing mixture over all.
4. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 45 to 55 minutes.

Makes 8 servings

Edith reads FAMILY WEEKLY in the Enterprise, High Point, N.C.

From a new reader in Hebronville, Texas, Pam Brewer, comes a spicy old-fashioned cookie recipe.

MOLASSES COOKIES

1 cup sugar
1 cup solid shortening
1 cup molasses
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup hot coffee
4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 cup raisins and chocolate bits

1. In large bowl, using electric mixer, cream together sugar and shortening.
2. Add molasses to sugar-shortening mixture. Dissolve baking soda in hot coffee and add to shortening mixture. Beat at low speed until blended.
3. Sift flour, salt, ginger and cinnamon together and gradually add to shortening mixture. Beat at low speed until blended.
4. Stir in raisins and chocolate. Cover dough and refrigerate 1 hour.
5. Drop by large teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheets, allowing 2 inches between each drop. Sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar after baking.
6. Bake in preheated 350°F. for 8 to 10 minutes.

Makes 4 to 6 dozen

Pam wrote that she read FAMILY WEEKLY for the first time on August 31, 1980, and she tried all the recipes in the Neighbors' Recipe Exchange; they came out well, and her family and friends enjoyed each one. Pam says, "These molasses cookies are great for an informal gathering of friends for watching football." Pam and her family read FAMILY WEEKLY in the Times, Laredo, Texas.

From the Carlsbad, Calif., kitchen of Michael E. Loge we have a great hors d'oeuvre recipe.

CLOVE-STUFFED MUSHROOMS

2 dozen medium- to large-size mushrooms, rinsed and stemmed
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
½ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup cooked, crumbled bacon
Ground cloves

1. Line mushrooms, stem side up, on a shallow, greased baking pan. Preheat oven to 450°F., or broil.
2. In medium bowl, mix shredded cheddar cheese, onion and bacon. Using a small spatula or spoon, stuff and pack mushrooms generously and sprinkle with a dash of ground cloves on top.
3. Bake 5 to 10 minutes until bubbling. Serve warm.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

Michael writes, "I have stuffed mushrooms with many different stuffings, but while experimenting one day with a small amount of ground cloves, I hit on a really unusual flavor in a very popular hors d'oeuvre." The Loges read FAMILY WEEKLY in the Blade Tribune, Oceanside, Calif.

From the Indianapolis kitchen of Judith Dow here's an easy recipe for Pumpkin Bread Pudding.

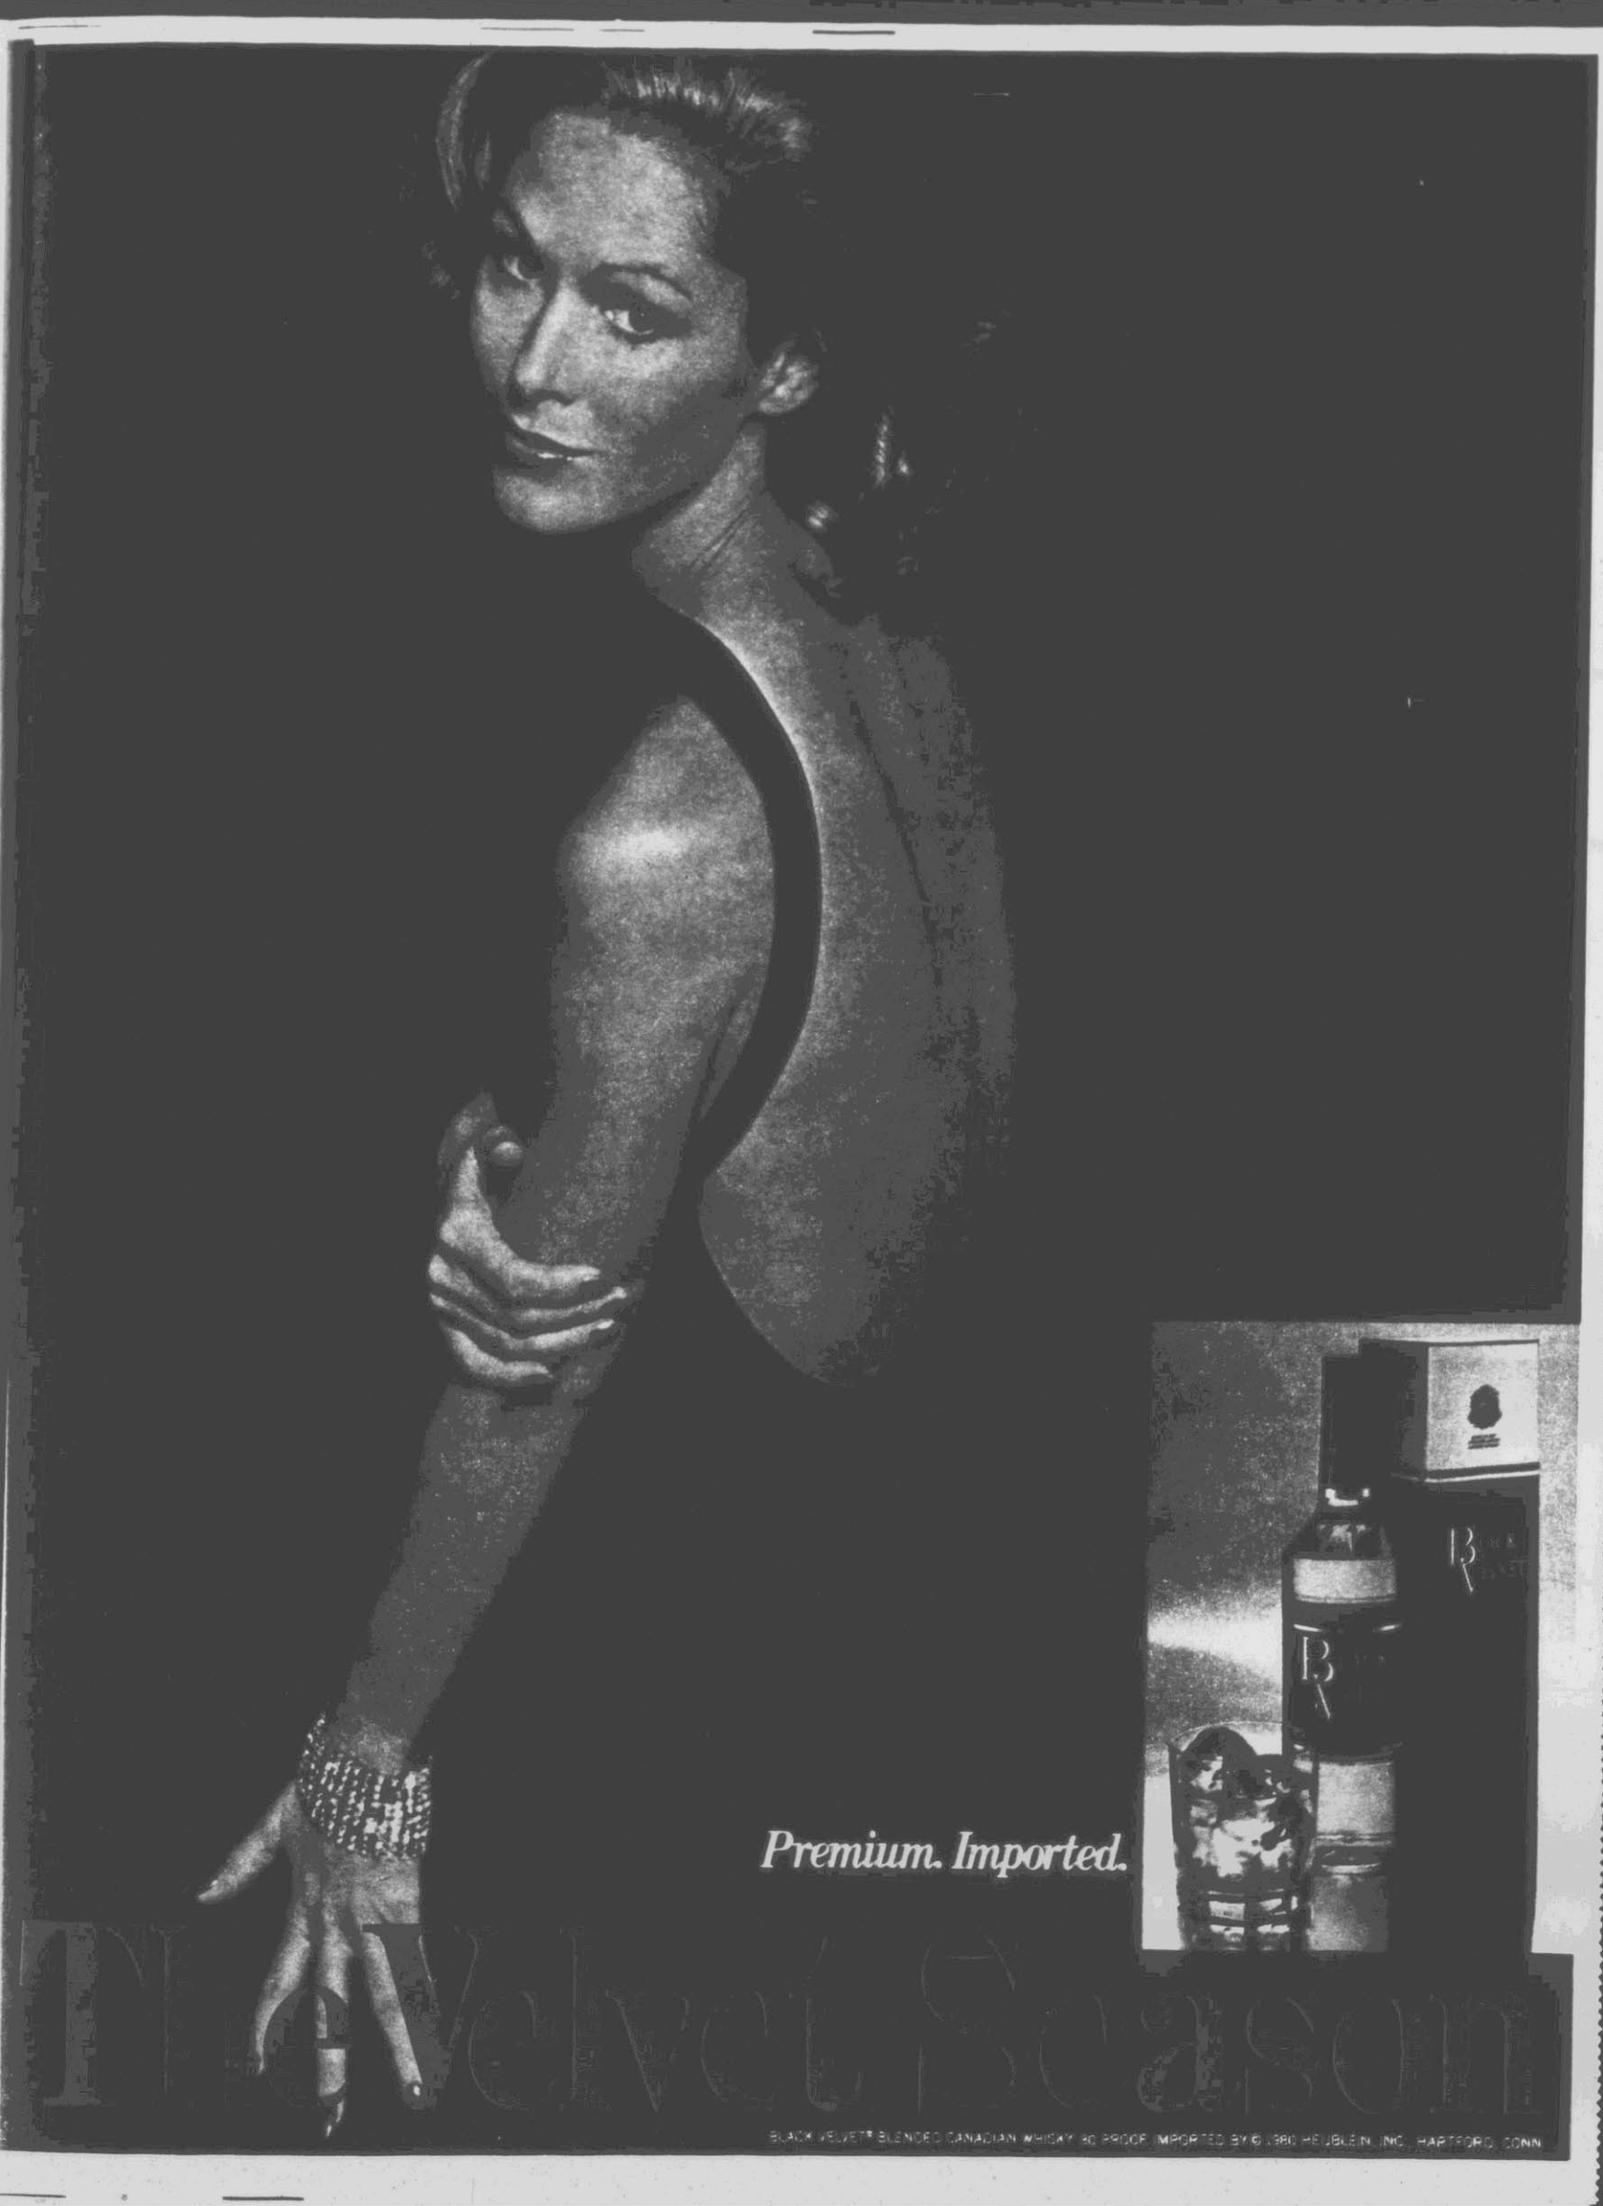

PUMPKIN BREAD PUDDING

1 cup milk
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs, lightly beaten
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup mashed canned pumpkin
2 cups stale bread crumbs
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon

1. In medium bowl, mix milk, sugar, eggs, salt, vanilla and pumpkin until thoroughly blended. Stir in bread crumbs.
2. Pour into greased 1½-qt. baking dish. Bake for 45 to 50 minutes in 350°F. oven.
3. About 10 minutes before pudding is done, mix brown sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle on surface of pudding. Return pudding to oven to finish baking.

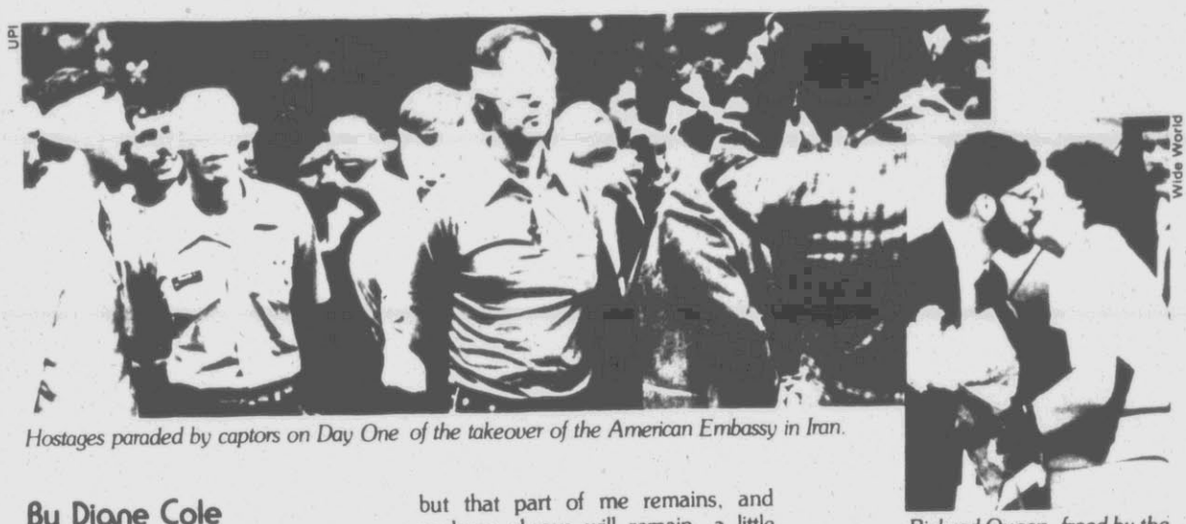

Makes 4 to 6 servings

HOSTAGE!
THE TRAUMA OF A SURVIVOR

From Entebbe to Teheran, the taking of hostages has become a political reality. And doctors are finding that the problems of hostages don't end when their captivity does.

Hostages paraded by captors on Day One of the takeover of the American Embassy in Iran.

By Diane Cole

One night shortly before I turned 25, a well-meaning friend took me out to dinner and marveled that I was alive. Only a month before, in March 1977, I had been seized with 133 men and women by a band of Hanafi Muslim gunmen in their takeover of three Washington, D.C., buildings.

I explained that I had returned to work and to the daily routine of life, but that my captors' voices — as they vowed to chop off our heads with the swords they wielded above us — echoed loudly in my memory. After 39 hours of terror, we had been released, but I continue to think about that time and to dream about it.

My friend shook his head. "This hostage business," he began. "It's like falling off a horse. You've got to pick yourself up and get right back on again."

Now, nearly four years later, I would answer him as I answered then: that I had dusted myself off and jumped into the saddle as best I could, but that part of me remains, and perhaps always will remain, a little bruised or scarred. On occasion, I still dream that I've been seized once more. When a truck backfires, I jump, and in a crowded theater I eye the people around me with suspicion.

Author Diane Cole is a freelancer who is at present working on a novel.

Not all of the effects of my experience have been negative. On the night of my release, I decided to marry the man whose face I thought I would not live to see again. And when a cashier shortchanges me or when an unexpected rainstorm drenches me and ruins my new shoes, I remember that things could always be worse: I could not be here at all.

Responses such as these are not uncommon among people who have been held hostage. On the first anniversary of their rescue from Palestinian terrorists at Uganda's Entebbe Airport, 89 victims of that June, 1976, Air France airplane hijacking gathered for a reunion in Tel Aviv. Some survivors said they were afraid to fly, and others reported that they made regular visits to the hospital where one of the Israeli commandos who rescued them lies paralyzed from the neck down as a result of wounds suffered at Entebbe. A barber who had been on the flight refused to hold a razor or scissors for three months after his ordeal, for fear he would lose control.

A group of those held hostage at the B'nai B'rith building (one of the three Washington buildings involved) go out to lunch together every year on the anniversary of the seizure. Some say that the experience continues to affect them. "I'm not jumpy, and I don't have bad dreams," says Ms. Besse Zaritsky, 58. "But I do have a strong sense of my own mortality and vulnerability. For instance, I'm about to go on a trip. I've put my will in order and told my family where everything is. I don't push death away from me. I try to be good to myself and to live my life better. I've tried to turn the thing around for good."

One victim of that takeover developed a heightened sense of compassion for people in trouble or those close to her. Another, a woman in her 30's, reports, however, "I'm bothered if I hear strange footsteps behind me, and I can't stand being in a crowded place."

While there are at present few studies of the psychological effects of being held hostage, the increasing number of terrorist incidents may change that. According to Dr. Yonah Alexander, director of the State University of New York's Institute for Studies in International Terrorism, terrorist acts worldwide rose from 293 in 1970 to 1,511 in 1978.

For former hostages, "there is definitely a survivor syndrome," says clinical psychologist Lawrence I. Sank, associate professor of the department of health care sciences at the George Washington University Medical Center. Dr. Sank worked with many of the victims of the 1977 Hanafi Muslim siege and later helped train a special Washington, D.C., police team formed to deal with hostage incidents. Recently, he consulted with members of the Government team of doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists and psychiatric social workers who will examine and counsel the American hostages held in Teheran.

Dr. Sank emphasizes that every hostage will react in his own way. In general, though, he has found that former hostages display an overriding sense of being vulnerable. "Their existence has been threatened, and they are shaken," he says. "Life may seem more precious. Some people may make important life decisions — to change jobs, leave a marriage, change a family relationship. A lot of this will depend on the victim's state of mind. Say someone was in precarious shape beforehand. A terrorist attack could put him over the brink."

Is there such a thing as a hostage mentality? "When people say that they usually mean the Stockholm Syndrome, which is very infrequent but which everyone wants to hear about, maybe because of Patty Hearst," Dr. Sank reports. The term was coined when a woman held hostage in a Swedish bank fell in love with one of her captors. It is used in describing hostages who come to identify so strongly with their captors that they mouth the same demands and, in effect, switch sides. "Very rarely will you see that kind of total disorientation," Dr. Sank says, "becoming a turncoat and forgetting what you stand for."

Dr. Sank predicts that the Iranian hostages will experience "long-lasting and probably indelible" effects as a result of their captivity. "Some people may thrive afterwards," he notes, "but others may suffer malignant effects. People just can't be expected to be the same when they come out as when they went in. Problem areas might include sleep disorders, a change in eating habits, loss of sexual interest, difficulty in functioning in close relationships or trouble holding down a job. These are characteristics of depression."

Dr. Sank suggests that the hostages stay together for a time after their release in order to compare notes and thinks that periodic reunions are a good idea. "I'd like to see the families treated, too, and told what kinds of things they might expect — not should, but might. Psychiatric treatment should be readily available to the returning hostages, but it should be soft-pedaled as much as possible so that the message comes out, 'You're not nuts.' It's not a sin to have symptoms."

I wonder whether it is possible to face death and not be changed. Perhaps the changes will not be visible, or easily analyzed, but they will be there. Besse Zaritsky voiced my thoughts when she said, "Being held hostage — it's not an obsession. I seldom talk about it anymore. But it is a part of me. It's a part of my life." FW

OPENING ROUND

"What'll you have?"
Is the very first question

QUIPS & QUOTES

The host asks the guest,
Then awaits a suggestion.

"What've you got?"
The guest asks the host,
Who recites a long list
With a trace of a boast.

"Well, have you some this?"
Then "Have you some that?"
Asks the guest, with the host
Now pinned to the mat.

"I'm sorry, I don't,"
Says the host, humble now.
(It was something the guest Didn't want anyhow.)

WHAT APPLES A DAY?

The speeches droned on at the businessmen's luncheon, but at last the chairman introduced the final speaker: "We are running dreadfully late, so I've asked Doctor Smite to be very brief. As you know, the subject he's going to talk about is sex." The doctor rose to his feet, shuffled through his notes and said, "Gentlemen, it gives me great pleasure...."and then sat down.

Hope for Youngsters With Scoliosis

By Paula Dranov

Scoliosis — side-to-side curvature of the spine — affects thousands of American youngsters, mostly teen-age girls. It's a correctable condition, but only early detection can halt its progression in time to save youngsters from surgery or physical deformity.

Unfortunately, scoliosis is difficult to detect. There's no pain, no limitation of motion that would alert parents and children to its presence. There are some early signs, but they are not easy to spot. "You may notice that hemlines are uneven or that slacks are longer on one leg than the other," reports Dr. Clyde Nash, director of the University Youth Spine Center of the University Hospital in Cleveland. "Occasionally, this is due to the fact that one leg is longer, but it's usually because there is curvature of the spine."

Mild cases of scoliosis affect an equal number of boys and girls, but 90 per cent of severe cases occur among girls. No one knows why.

With scoliosis, the spine usually curves to one side, bending in a gentle arc to the right or left. Sometimes the spine also twists and rotates — these cases account for most of the disfigurement associated with curvatures.

Physicians stress that curvatures need not limit a child's activity, although Dr. Nash does discourage heavy weight lifting by youngsters with even mild curves until the skeleton and bones are mature.

Those youngsters with more severe problems — curves ranging from about 20 to 40 degrees — usually can be treated with a back brace that helps correct the curve. Here is where strengthening exercises are important, notes Dr. John R. Denton, an orthopedic surgeon at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York. Brace-wearers are encouraged to remain active, although they can't participate in contact sports or sports in which they're liable to fall. The brace usually must be worn 23 hours a day with an hour off for any activity the child chooses.

The length of time a child must wear the brace depends on how close he or she is to full growth when the curve is detected. Some doctors insist on keeping patients in their braces beyond the time of reaching skeletal maturity until the ligaments that hold up the spine have become strong enough to keep it from bending.

The most severe cases of scoliosis — curves greater than 40 degrees — do require major surgery. The operation involves straightening the spine and fusing it so the curve will not worsen. Afterward, patients are placed in body casts, which are worn for up to nine months.

Improvements in the casts have eliminated the need to keep patients in bed while they recover. "We usually get them up about two weeks after surgery," says Dr. Denton. The casts extend from just below the ears to the buttocks, but they do enable youngsters to go to school and lead normal, if restricted, lives.

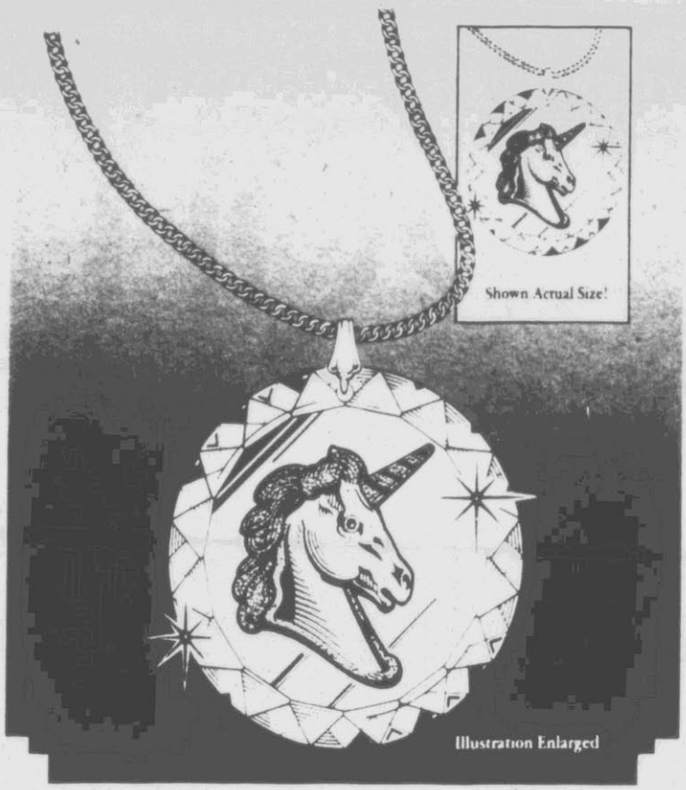

Uncorrected scoliosis can result in bad cosmetic deformities — hunchback, for instance — a lifetime of low back pain and even, in the most severe cases, stress on the heart and lungs. There's not much that can be done to prevent scoliosis. No one knows the cause, although it does tend to run in families.

While scoliosis is hard for a parent to detect in the early stages (Dr. Denton suggests insisting that youngsters be checked every time they see a doctor for a school or camp physical exam), there are some telltale signs you may be able to spot if you're looking for them. The National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases suggests you have your youngster stand erect with his or her bare back toward you, and then note the following 1) Balance — does his head line up over the crease of the buttocks, or does he lean to one side? 2) Is one shoulder higher than the other, or is there a fullness on one side of the neck? 3) Is the "wing" of one shoulder blade higher or more prominent than the other? 4) Is the waistline the same on both sides, or is there a greater distance between the arm and flank on one side? 5) Does there appear to be a curve when you run your fingers down the spine? 6) Are the hips level and symmetrical? Merit Dominates Smoker Testing.

MERIT low tar/good taste combination scores convincing 3 to 1 victory over high tar leaders.

High Tars Suffer Setback

Latest research proves smokers prefer MERIT.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.

Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine—100's Reg: 10 mg "tar," 0.7 mg nicotine—100's Men: 11 mg "tar," 0.8 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Dec.'79

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Lightning-Fast Cure

When Edwin Robinson of Falmouth, Maine, says this Thanksgiving will be special for him, he means it.

Robinson, 62, blind and deaf since a tractor-trailer accident in 1971, was walking under a tree in his backyard one day last June, searching for his pet chicken, Took-Took, when a bolt of lightning hit him. A few hours later, he could see and hear perfectly again. And a month later, hair started growing on his bald head.

No one actually saw the lightning hit him, but Robinson noted in a phone interview recently, "First I heard what sounded like the crack of a whip. Then when I woke up — 20 minutes later, I'm told — I felt like I was burning up inside. I had to drink ice-cold water for three days just to cool off.... The grass all around the tree was burned out and so was the mechanism in my hearing aid.

"The doctors are still trying to figure out what happened," Robinson laughs, but frankly he doesn't care. He plans to spend the holiday with his family — including two grandchildren he had never seen before his flash of good fortune. And he says he has plans for a worldwide lecture tour: "I'm not saying that everybody is going to meet God through a bolt of lightning, but I want to help give hope to elderly people and all others who are ready to give up."

Helping Kids Screen TV's Messages

"Children as young as 9 months are now watching one and a half hours of TV a day," says Dr. Jerome Singer, who with his wife, Dorothy, heads Yale's Family Television Research and Consultation Center.

To help youngsters utilize television better, the Singers, with a $150,000 grant from ABC, have developed a new curriculum for use in grades three to five. Called "Getting the Most Out of TV," the program consists of seven video-taped segments — 10 to 12 minutes long — that are used in conjunction with a written lesson plan to improve children's vocabulary, writing and critical thinking skills.

The tapes, which will soon be available to schools around the country, are narrated by TV's Nan-Lynn Nelson and Bing Bingham and cover such topics as how special effects really work, distinguishing between fantasy and reality, stereotyping, TV violence and the purpose and techniques of commercials.

Ladies Blue

Women are no slouches when it comes to police work, according to Edmund Grosskopf, an assistant professor of criminology at Indiana State University.

Grosskopf, a burly ex-cop, recently spent 10 months riding with both male and female police officers in Cook County, Ill., and concludes that women prove just as capable — sometimes even more so — than their male counterparts. He says the female officers really outshine the men at interviewing crime victims — particularly female ones.

Reactions to the female officers differ, from humorous awe shown by offenders to antagonism from some older male officers. The central issue, according to Grosskopf, is: Could the women come through in a real brawl? "But most physical deficiences can be overcome by proper training," he notes. "And all officers carry such tools as guns, handcuffs and batons to give them an advantage anyway."

If the women have one chief complaint, it's that many officers are going out of their way to try to protect them. But, reports Grosskopf, "The women's attitude is, 'You back me up and I'll back you up. I don't need any protection.'"

UPI

"We don't need any protection."

Holy Molars!

The next time you bite into a candy bar and pain shoots through your mouth, here's something to chew on: Within the next decade, we may be vaccinated against tooth decay.

Dr. John Bozzola, assistant professor of microbiology at the Medical College of Pennsylvania, is one of several persons investigating such a vaccination, which induces antibodies against the enzyme that joins with bacteria to dissolve our teeth.

Bozzola reports the vaccine has been used successfully in rats, but that it is as yet impractical for humans because it would have to be painfully injected into our salivary glands.

"It's possible the vaccine may be best administered through a slow-release capsule or a nasal inhaler," says Bozzola. "And we hope one day to immunize children against cavities before they even enter school, much as they are now protected against diphtheria, tetanus and typhoid."

Here's A Tip

It can be much cheaper for a small family to eat out than to prepare the same meal at home, according to a Purdue University study.

Lee Kreul, a professor at Purdue's School of Consumer and Family Sciences, compared the costs of preparing a roast beef sandwich and a fried chicken dinner both at home and in a restaurant. The smaller the family, the greater the savings in choosing the restaurant meal, his study revealed. In fact, a single person could save as much as 92 percent by eating the fried chicken dinner out rather than cooking it at home.

No Frills Cuts Bills

If you're willing to search out generic "no frills" groceries in supermarkets, you can save as much as 50 percent of the cost of similar national brands, according to a recent survey by the Suffolk (N.Y.) County Department of Consumer Affairs. However, few people buy the non-brand items, because, according to Suffolk Consumer Affairs Commissioner Kenneth Rosenblum, the supermarket chains deliberately segregate them in a separate section to avoid competition with their own store brands. He says this makes comparison shopping difficult and gives the products a "slummy, low-rent" quality.

Counterfeit Diamonds So Fiery And Flawless They Pass For Real

DIAMONDS ARE THE MOST BEAUTIFUL GEMS IN THE WORLD! (AND THE MOST EXPENSIVE)

Diamonds are so brilliant they almost knock your eyes out to look at them. BUT they cost at least $1,000 a carat and few people want to pay such a high price for the luxury. NOW YOU DON'T HAVE TO. GEMFIRES LOOK ALMOST AS EXPENSIVE AS MINED DIAMONDS.

The Gemfire Counterfeit Diamonds on this page are fiery, 58-faceted, laboratory-made stones so brilliant even experts must examine them under a powerful magnifier to be absolutely sure they're not expensive, mined diamonds. Gemfires are clear white and disperse a blaze of spectral colors even in the moonlight. It is almost impossible to tell Gemfires from diamonds with the naked eye. Indeed, Gemfires so closely resemble diamonds that people wear them — without apology — for their own luxurious appearance. Even TV and movie stars often keep their expensive stones locked up for safe-keeping and wear expensive looking counterfeits when they make public appearances.

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN TELL THAT GEMFIRE® COUNTERFEIT DIAMONDS ARE NOT CHEAP COSTUME JEWELRY

A. Count the facets. Gemfire stones all have 58 facets — just like expensive diamonds prepared by diamond cutters.

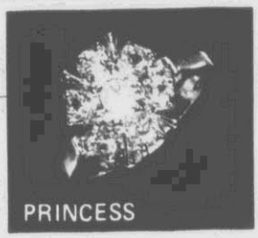

B. Examine your stone in a dimly lighted room. It should sparkle like in daylight. Gemfire stones sparkle even in the moonlight.

C. Study your ring under a powerful magnifying glass to look for flaws. Gemfire stones have clarity — are flawlessly perfect. No specks! No blemishes! No cracks!

D. Gemfire stones are so hard you can actually scratch your initial in glass with them! Prove it to yourself.
