More Than 773 Dead In Italian Quake

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer
NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A series of devastating earthquakes battered Southern Italy Sunday, killing at least 773 people in cities, towns and villages, and injuring more than 1,000, officials reported today.

Thousands were homeless after shivering through a foggy, freezing night outside their collapsed homes and apartment buildings. The Italian government declared a day of national mourning and dispatched 10,000 troops to the shattered area.

Rescue efforts were hampered by damage to roads and rail lines.

One of the worst tragedies hit the small town of Balvano, 60 miles east of Naples, where the walls of the church of Santa Maria Assunta collapsed on an evening Mass filled with children. More than 50 bodies were removed from the rubble, half of them children.

Firemen were able to save a two-year-old boy, still holding a toy car, from the church rubble. Next to him, his grandparents had been crushed to death under the stones.

But fragmentary reports from the town of Sant' Angelo dei Lombardi in Avellino province indicated 300 persons perished in that town. Pescopagano, another poverty-stricken small town in the province of Avellino, reported 70 bodies had been recovered from the debris.

The quake, measuring 6.8 on the Richter scale, destroyed hundreds of buildings, including a 10-story apartment house in Naples.

Casualty totals increased as more reports were received from the 29 cities, towns and villages that suffered the most damage in the Naples-Salerno area of southern Italy.

"We have only our eyes left to cry," said the mayor of San Mango, a town of 1,800 in Avellino province. "My house, my car, everything is gone. There is no one left up there."

The quake was felt from Sicily to the Alps, but the hardest hit area was northeast of the bay of Salerno. More than 100 deaths were reported in the provinces of Salerno and Avellino, while the mountainous interior province of Potenza reported more than 150 deaths.

Premier Arnaldo Forlani called an emergency Cabinet meeting, which proclaimed a day of national mourning, then flew south with Italian President Sandro Pertini to visit the stricken area.

Pope John Paul II sent a telegram to the Cardinal of Naples expressing his "shock" for the "unspeakable suffering" of the population, and named a special representative bishop to coordinate church relief efforts.

"I saw the buildings move like waves of the sea," said Luigi Iannone, who was driving near Salerno when the first quake hit at 7:34 p.m. Sunday (1:34 p.m. EST). "It was something terrible."

Aftershocks continued through the night. Countless thousands spent the night in the open. A heavy fog hung over the disaster area inland from the Gulf of Salerno as the government rushed in medical teams, tents and bulldozers.

Doctors canceled a nationwide strike scheduled for today and reported to their hospitals or rushed to the disaster area.

Seismologists said the quake was centered at Eboli, 17 miles southeast of Salerno, and officials reported at least 11 people were killed there.

In Balvano, the worshippers were crushed to death by the collapsing walls of their church as they tried to flee.

"There were at least 300 people at the Mass tonight, including many children. The front wall collapsed as people were trying to get out," said the parish priest, the Rev. Salvatore Pagliuca, his vestments torn and covered with dust.

Authorities said Naples, Salerno, Avellino and Potenza were the major cities affected by the quake, which struck as many were sitting down to supper. Fires broke out as people left their stoves on when they fled their homes.

In Naples, searchers pulled 11 bodies from the ruins of a 10-story apartment building and feared many more were trapped inside.

In Aversa, north of Naples, the bell tower of a 16th century church collapsed and killed the parish priest, his 84-year-old mother and another woman.

In Lancusi, near Salerno, the quake leveled most of the homes. The bodies of a woman and child and two young men were pulled from the ruins of a three-story building. A man wandered among the rescue workers crying, "Who will give me my babies?"

In Potenza, 90 miles east of Naples and near Balvano, an official said virtually all of the city's 50,000 residents fled to the nearby hills and spent the night in their cars or out in the open.

Police in Naples hurled tear gas grenades and fired submachine guns into the air at the Poggioreale Prison after some prisoners tried to escape in the general panic caused by the earthquake. Prison officials said two inmates were killed and three injured in a brawl among the prisoners before guards restored order.

Oppose 'Fringe' Rather Than Teacher Pay Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The directors of the association representing North Carolina public school teachers reaffirmed today their opposition to a proposal substituting changes in the retirement system for a pay raise next year.

Loretta M. Martin, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said the group's board of directors "acted to strongly oppose" the Hunt administration plan in a meeting in Raleigh over the weekend.

"We oppose this plan because it does not equal the fair and equitable salary adjustment educators deserve for the hard work and long hours they put in," Ms. Martin said in a prepared statement. "The state is attempting to substitute a fringe benefit takeover for actual salary increases."

The plan, sources in the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt said last week, proposes that the state pay an additional 5 percent of the retirement contribution now paid by teachers and state workers. The plan would be in lieu of a direct pay raise in 1981.

NCAE executive secretary Lloyd Isaacs said the association does not want total government contributions to the retirement system. "We fear that it soon

Iran Seeking Explanation Of U.S. Hostage Response

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Iran has requested a further explanation of the U.S. reply to Iran's conditions for the release of the 52 American hostages, informed sources in Algeria said today.

The sources said an Algerian delegation that delivered the U.S. response to Iran returned from Tehran on Sunday and were to meet today with Algerian Foreign Minister Mohamed Benyahia.

Iranian officials said Sunday the U.S. reply was unsatisfactory, and it wanted a "clear and explicit" yes or no, reports from Tehran say.

It was not known if the Algerian delegation was planning to head to Washington or if the United States was planning to send a representative to Algeria.

The Algerians went to Iran Nov. 12 to deliver the U.S. response to the four conditions. Algeria has represented Iran's interests in the United States since diplomatic ties were broken between Washington and Tehran.

The Iranian conditions are the release of more than $8 billion in Iranian assets frozen by U.S. presidential order to insure the payment of American claims against Iran, the cancellation of all such claims, a pledge of U.S. non-interference in Iran, and return to Iran of the fortunes transferred abroad by the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his closest relatives.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher went to the North African nation Nov. 10 to deliver the U.S. reply.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said last week that the United States, in its letter delivered in Tehran, accepted the Iranian conditions "in principle." But other U.S. officials said the letter explained the legal obstacles that would have to be overcome in the courts before three of the demands could be met.

Iran's official reply was delivered Saturday in Tehran to the Algerians.

Abdel Karim Gherayeb, leader of the four-member Algerian delegation, said at that time that he was taking the reply back to his country "and we will see what happens next."

"Whatever we do, we will do it fast," Gherayeb added.

According to reports from Tehran, Ahmad Azizi, public relations director of the prime minister's office, said Iran wants a clear answer — "either positive or negative" — to the four conditions, the Greek Radio and Television Service reported.

"We cannot accept the responses with room for compromises or negotiations or anything like that," Azizi said. "We just want clear and very explicit answers."

Another official in Rajai's office said the U.S. response was "neither explicit nor clear," and the Iranian government in its reply asked for a "positive or negative" response, the official Iranian news agency Pars reported.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Joe Reap said the U.S. government had received nothing official yet and was still in a "wait-and-see attitude." He said there were no plans yet for anyone to go to Algiers to get the Iranian reply.

Today was the hostages' 387th in captivity since young Islamic militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and its staff on Nov. 4, 1979.

Reduction Said To Be 'Hog-Wash'

Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne said this morning that a press release issued by Virginia Electric and Power Co. on November 14, reporting a five percent reduction in rates for municipal customers, "is simply hog-wash."

The release said a rate adjustment request filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, to go into effect January 13, "results in an estimated net reduction of .5 percent," for municipal wholesale customers such as GUC.

That, "is simply not true," Horne charged today. "Information received during the past week on the proposed rate change clearly shows that the basic cost of power to Greenville and other cities served by VEPCO will be increased by 9.8 percent, and the fuel adjustment charge will go up approximately 8 percent," the utilities director emphasized.

"What they've done is try to gloss over things," Horne said.

"VEPCO has used some completely imaginary figures to arrive at a rate decrease using the assumptions that our rates would have been increased by 15 percent, except that with North Anna No. 2 nuclear unit being in service, we will experience only a 10 percent increase and this means a 5 percent savings."

"The truth is, if VEPCO is granted the rate adjustment they have requested, our total cost of power will be increased approximately 10 percent above current levels beginning January 1981," Horne explained.

Horne explained that attorneys for Electricities, "have already filed to intervene in this rate adjustment and we hope to delay the adjustment as long as permitted by law."

"Our engineers and the attorneys will examine carefully the rate filing and oppose any unjustified increase to our cost of power."

WRONG ID SOUNDOFF

There has been a serious injustice rendered my daughter-in-law, Donna Jones Peaden, because an arresting officer failed to get a positive identification at the time of the arrest of another person. Donna Jones Peaden is an innocent victim, was in no way involved and was not even present, yet her name and the nature of charges against her name is a matter of court record and was made public in the court section of "The Daily Reflector." I strongly suggest that, in the future, if an arresting officer cannot get a positive identification other than the word of the suspect that the suspect be listed as Jane or John Doe until such time as a positive identification can be made. This incident could have happened to any citizen of Pitt County. Mrs. Joyce Peaden

SPECIAL PLATELET NEED

The Tar River Blood Center has asked Hotline to appeal to groups and individuals who can participate in a special blood collection to be held at the Center on Highway 43 North Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Platelets have only a 72-hour shelf life and, since there will be no drawing of donor blood Thanksgiving Day, the Friday collection is necessary to get through the weekend, Blood Center Director Dick Carney said.

Any group which can recruit several of its members is urged to contact the center, 758-1140, as are individuals. Sixty donors are needed.

Space Shuttle Rollout Runs Into New Delays

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Problems with a thermal blanket designed to protect astronauts from the searing heat of re-entry into the Earth's atmosphere today forced another delay in the 300-yard move of the space shuttle Columbia from its hangar to an assembly building.

Space officials said the Columbia's rollout, originally scheduled for early Sunday morning, then Sunday afternoon, then noon today, would be further delayed until at least 6 p.m. today.

Sporadic rains today also threatened to further delay the transfer of the shuttle to the Vertical Assembly Building.

Dick Young, National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman, said the thermal blanket in the shuttle's nose wheel was "binding up" and making it difficult to close the nose landing door.

The shuttle, however, is expected to be launched as planned by March 1981.

"We're almost there," shuttle program spokesman John Yardley told reporters Sunday. "Since we scheduled the Columbia move in July, I think everyone has done a fantastic job and I'm not ashamed at all. There was a lot more work than we planned."

The project is "behind schedule and has had a $4 billion cost overrun."

One of the biggest headaches in the entire Columbia program has been the installation and testing of 31,000 lightweight silica tiles which will protect it and its crew from the scorching temperatures of re-entry into the atmosphere.

Intensive testing of the thermal protection system has been the key factor in repeated launch delays and cost overruns. The original cost estimate of $5.1 billion has soared to more than $8.8 billion, according to NASA officials.

Yardley, assistant administrator for Space Transportation Systems Acquisition at NASA headquarters, said the last tile was fitted into place Sunday morning and the last of the gap-filler was being applied Sunday evening.

The filler goes in the tiny expansion joints between each of the thousands of pieces of thermal tile, each of which has been individually contoured to fit the shuttle's skin.

When the move is finally made, the ungainly, delta-wing aerospace craft will take a 300-yard journey behind a tow tractor to the assembly building.

HEAVY DAMAGE — The driver of this truck, Scott Evans Sutherland of Route 2, Greenville, was injured when the vehicle went out of control after he swerved to miss a dog, ran into a ditch, and struck a utility pole about 2:47 a.m. Sunday on 14th Street at the Osceola Drive intersection. Investigating police, who made no charges, estimated damage to the vehicle at $1,500 and set damage to the utility pole at $2,000. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest).

Game-Law Violations Cases Tried

Ten men were convicted in district court in Pitt County last week for game-law violations, in connection with three separate cases, Wildlife Protector Kay Dunn said today.

Dunn said Donald Scott Cannon and Bill Wooten of Ayden, were fined $250 each and their rifle confiscated after being convicted of firelighting deer in the Black Jack area on November 1.

Two other men, Rubbin Ray Morris of Route 1, Wanceboro, and Van Lee Morris of New Bern, were fined $250 each and had their rifles confiscated after being convicted of firelighting deer on Wiggins Road near Calico, on November 1.

Jack O. Barbour of Clayton, Donald Cummings of Selma, and Marvin B. Gordon of Clayton were convicted of possession of antlerless deer on November 8, near Farmville, according to Dunn.

The officer said Barbour was fined $750 and costs and his 1979 vehicle ordered confiscated and sold, while Cummings and Gordon each were fined $250 in connection with the case.

Dunn noted that the three men had two antlerless deer in their possession which were killed on game lands in Beaufort County.

Two other men, arrested on charges of possession of antlerless deer in connection with the same incident — Daylon Lee Underwood of Clayton and David Milton (Dickie) Flowers of Clayton — were convicted on possession of antlerless deer and fined $250 each.

Flowers was also found guilty of carrying a concealed weapon and fined $50 and costs in that case, Dunn explained.

According to the wildlife protector, other officers participating in the series of cases included William Warren of Chocowinity, Jerry Brady of Deep Run, and J. R. Windon of Snow Hill.

Investigating Union Agency

CLEVELAND (AP) — A collection agency established two years ago by the president of the Carpenters Union in Ohio is being investigated by the U.S. Labor Department, according to Joseph D. Caiola, an agency official.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said in Sunday's editions that the collection agency was established as a non-profit corporation, but has a surplus of more than $100,000. State law prohibits non-profit corporations from showing a profit.

The newspaper said the collection agency handles an estimated $25 million a year in union fringe benefits collected from contractors. Carpenters Union President Milan Marsh could not be reached for comment.

Black Political Party Ends Founding Session

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Delegates to the founding convention of the National Black Independent Political Party were going home today to start organizing at the grassroots level for "social change for those of African descent."

"There are 1,300 delegates here committed to the call for this party," said state Rep. David Richardson, after the three-day convention ended Sunday at Benjamin Franklin High School.

"Now the hard work really begins, the hard work of going out and organizing locally," he said.

The new party took its first organizational steps by adopting a preliminary party charter dedicated to "social change for those of African descent in this country."

At the close of the session, attended by delegates from 27 states, the new party also set up a committee to draft a permanent charter for adoption at a summer convention and to start organizing local party committees around the nation.

"The charter will stand until the First National Party Congress in July or August," said convention chairman Ron Daniels of Youngstown, Ohio.

The party grew out of the National Black Political Assembly, which first met in 1972 in Gary, Ind. At the NBPA's fourth convention, in New Orleans in August, the group adopted a resolution creating its national political party.

"The people who are sort of caught up in it now don't know how historic it is," said the Rev. Ben Chavis, a civil rights activist. "Delegates will leave this convention with a mechanism with which to work. And they have the responsibility to go back to their many black communities and build the party on their local levels."

Party officials promised to "serve the interests of the working class and the poor" and "actively oppose racism, sexism, capitalism and imperialism." Besides nominating and endorsing candidates, they said they would lobby in Congress and state legislatures, establish consumer co-operatives and rape crisis centers and encourage voter registration.

"We are not replicating the errors and contradictions of the Democratic and Republican parties," said Manning Marable, a professor at Cornell University's Africana Studies Center and a syndicated columnist.

"This will be a grassroots

Rummage, Bake Sales Relieve Town's Debt

GOLD BAR, Wash. (AP) — Old clothes and fresh pies have pulled this river town of 620 from the edge of fiscal peril. Now civic leaders are planning a barbecue to get Gold Bar completely out of hock.

"One fellow said the city of New York should take a lesson," a happy mayor said Sunday after a weekend rummage and bake sale raised about $4,000 toward eliminating a $9,000 municipal debt, $3,000 of which was incurred in a heated recall election earlier this year.

Thousands of visitors poured into town and the sale was halted a couple of hours early because townspeople couldn't keep up with the demand for baked goods. Eventually, there was nothing left to rummage, either, said Mayor Ed Grant.

"Most everything is just picked completely dry. There's nothing left," he said. "We just finally made punch. We gave it away."

"It's really nice to know there's still folks out there like that," Grant said. "People have come from all over the state and even outside the state...from Oregon and Idaho."

Cars lined side roads and were parked along U.S. 2, said Patrolman Larry Strauff of the Gold Bar police department.

The unusual municipal fund-raiser was the brainchild of the Citizens Group of Gold Bar. Robert Marshall, a member of the group in this town 50 miles northeast of Seattle, said he was cheered by the community spirit after so much recent bickering.

"The girls all baked for three straight days," Marshall said. "We do care. We care a darned lot about every one of us in this town."

Bad Winter Can Push '81 Food Prices To New High

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

This summer's heat and drought will bring next year's food bills to a boil, and a bad winter could push 1981 price increases to a record high.

That's the bad news from government and private forecasters who say meat prices will lead the spiral. A global sweet tooth, which has pushed the demand for sugar beyond production for two years in a row, will make things even worse.

Howard Hjort, the chief economist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said the 1981 food price increase would be at least 10 percent — almost a full percentage point below the 1979 rise, but higher than this year's anticipated 9 percent boost.

At worst, Hjort said, food prices could jump 15 percent next year, breaking the record increase, 14.5 percent, set in 1973. Hjort said he could not be more specific. "There is so much variation associated with winter weather," he said.

Donald Ratajczak, director of economic forecasting at Georgia State University, was even gloomier. "We're talking about a 15.6 percent rise at retail," he said. "The first half of 1981 is going to be tough. I just hope we have a mild winter."

One supermarket executive, who asked not to be identified by name, said the size of grocery price increases next year will depend, in part at least, on how shoppers react, on whether they are willing to scrimp elsewhere or whether they substitute cheaper products for expensive ones. "It all depends on whether they shop to suit their wallets or their appetites," he said.

During late 1979 and early 1980, food prices increased more slowly than inflation in general. In the 12 months that ended on July 1, food prices went up about 7 percent. The overall Consumer Price Index went up 13.2 percent — almost twice as fast — in the same period.

Hjort said the increases were due mainly to inflation after the food left the farm — to higher transportation, labor and packaging costs. Prices paid to farmers actually went down. Poultry and hog producers, who had expanded their operations in 1979 to take up the slack caused by a drop in beef supplies, were losing money. There was a glut of meat, Hjort said. "It set the stage for what we're going through right now."

At the same time prices for their animals were going down, farmers faced record interest rates that increased their costs. "They had substantial losses," Hjort said. "They took steps to cut back."

Then came the drought. Livestock died. Chickens laid fewer eggs. Feed grain prices went up. Grocery bills, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, went up 2.3 percent in August alone, largely because of higher costs for meat, poultry and eggs.

Hjort said it is "almost impossible" to say exactly how much of 1981's price increases can be blamed directly on the drought.

Ratajczak said, however, that "when you hit records, it's because of weather." The kind of increase he is predicting for 1981 "is due to the drought," he said flatly.

Hjort and Ratajczak said that meat — which eats up about one-third of a typical family's food bill — will be the biggest factor in the coming price rise. Not only were meat producers directly affected by the bad weather, they also will face higher prices for the grains they must feed their animals. The total U.S. production of feed grains for 1980-81 will be down an estimated 18 percent from last year. Corn prices are expected to average $3.30 to $3.75 a bushel, topping the previous high of $3.03 a bushel in 1974-75.

During the last quarter of 1980, there is expected to be about 1 percent less red meat and poultry than there was during the same period of 1979 and forecasters expect the situation to be about the same through the first three months of 1981. Beef production should be up about 6 percent early next year, but there will be 9 percent less pork and 1 percent fewer broiler chickens.

The drop in overall supplies has increased the demand — and the price — of beef. Choice steers sold at feedlots were bringing about 65 cents a pound in the second quarter of this year. By the third quarter, the price had moved up to about 71 cents a pound — a little bit below where it was during the second quarter of 1979. By the first quarter of next year, the price is expected to be around 75 cents a pound.

Retail beef prices, according to the USDA, went from $2.31 a pound in the second quarter of 1980 to $2.43 a pound in the third quarter and are expected to average $2.50 a pound in the fourth quarter.

The pattern is similar for pork and poultry. Prices declined steadily from the second quarter of 1979 through the middle of this year, then started rising.

Sugar prices also will have a major effect on food bills through the end of this year and into 1981.

One wood technique that is designed to control dimensional changes in furniture is veneering or plywood construction. Two hundred years ago, veneered pieces were made simply by gluing a thin layer or veneer of fine wood over a panel of common woods. Over the years, antiques made this way often deteriorated because glues were inferior. Expansion and contraction of the wood caused swelling and peeling. More recently, sandwich panels were developed. Layers of wood were glued on either side of a core then placed cross grain to hold the unit together.

Festival Will Grow

The third annual Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival and Tobacco Farmer Show is history now.

It goes without saying that the event was a great success this year. There were numbers of fun events during the festival week which drew large numbers of farmers, tobacco industry representatives, and many citizens. The activities prove more popular each year.

The Tobacco Farmer Show includes an impressive array of farm and farm-related equipment. It drew crowds estimated at 100,000 during the three days it was underway in Farmer's Warehouse. The equipment show is worthwhile viewing even for those not directly involved in farming.

But the best lies in the future. It is clear that the festival and show are growing each year and we fully expect that growth to continue in the future.

We anticipate more and more people coming here for the annual event as time goes by. That has to be good for Pitt County, as well as the tobacco industry.

Late Recognition Accorded

The Democratic controlled U. S. Senate agreed to allow some $39 billion in the 1981 budget for income tax cuts.

It is a last hurrah for this Senate which will soon be replaced by a Republican controlled Senate.

The action is sort of a weak gesture to the taxpayers. If the Democrats had properly read public opinion, they would have been whittling away at federal spending for years and passing on the savings to the taxpayers.

They didn't, however, and allowing for the tax cut will be the final act of a Democratic Senate for some time.

THIS AFTERNOON

Plan A Newspaper

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A weekly publication underwritten by state government is on the drawing boards of planners in the attorney general's office and a legislative study commission.

Loosely modeled after the "Federal Register" which records the doings of the bureaucracy in Washington, the state register would record state agency rules and regulations and changes, purchasing and building contract activities, public hearings, agency and legislative meetings, etc.

Planners anticipate the newspaper would run about 160 pages, and would cost anywhere from $250,000 to $500,000 annually.

Some public money would be needed to launch the enterprise, but officials hope that eventually, the publication would pay for itself through a $50 yearly subscription fee to users, and from publication of legal advertisements by various state agencies at the rate of $50 per page of the register. State agencies currently spend about a quarter of a million yearly on legal ads required by state law informing the public of various hearings, meetings, building projects and purchases open for bids, etc.

Planning
Gregory Wallace, assistant attorney general in charge of the Administrative Procedures Act division of the Justice Department, is developing the plan for possible submission to the 1981 General Assembly.

A number of changes in state law will be required, including provisions that all agencies must file timely reports for the publication, and that legal ads can be printed in the register rather than in newspapers of general circulation.

Wallace is working with the Legislative Committee on the Administrative Procedures Act. That study group oversees activities involving the filing of the thousands of rules and regulations being written within the state bureaucracy. The Justice Department is designated as the depository of those records, and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has publicly complained of the rapidly growing stockpile of paper, the problems with filing it and keeping it up to date, and the cost of the process.

BILL NOBLITT

In addition to filing all rules and regulations, agencies must conduct a public hearing before any change can be made. Thus, to even a simple adjustment with no impact, agencies must schedule and advertise a hearing at which, most often, nobody shows up.

All state contracts and purchases are also advertised (above certain minimum amounts), and almost daily there are meetings, hearings, and new rules and regulation being issued. All of which should mean a circulation of between 2,000 and 5,000 for the state register, planners believe.

Local governmental officials, individuals and firms regularly doing business with the state, attorneys, journalists, special interest groups, and lobbyists will make up the major subscription list.

On View

Copies available to the public would also be sent to local schools and libraries.

Additional study is being done on likely interest and financing of the venture. It will probably be 1982 before publication is underway.

A major problem confronting those planning the newspaper is whether it should contain only "straight" governmental information, which would necessarily mean a lot of bureaucratic jargon, numbers and legal talk which would appeal to a select audience. Or, some narrative sections could present plain-English accounts of the impact or effect of various agency or legislative proposals and programs, but that would present serious problems of objectivity and editing.

(Greensboro Daily News)

When the American Civil Liberties Union recently challenged the singing of Christmas carols and other religious holiday observances in public schools, the U.S. Supreme Court sensibly refused to go along. It recognized the folly of laws which negate religious freedom. It likewise recognized that imposing a ban on Christian, Jewish and other religions in American schools runs counter to the very principles which inform our Constitution and our cherished heritage of liberty.

Then the Supreme Court ruled on another issue: Kentucky's law enforcing the posting of the Ten Commandments in public school classrooms. Here it opposed the state-sponsored religious indoctrination. Again the Supreme Court made an intelligent decision in distinguishing "a matter of private devotion" from a "state objective."

The two cases make for instructive comparisons. In Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where the ACLU suit originated, school officials reasonably enough resented civil law swallowing religious freedom. On the other hand, Kentucky's eleventh commandment ate away at civil freedom. The point here is that prohibition and enforcement have no business in the province of religious practices. In a democracy, neither civil liberty nor religious doctrine can have the whole pie.

When church meets state head on, common sense often becomes the most practical ruling principle. Liberty consists, as Daniel Webster noted, of wholesome restraint. But both the Kentucky law and the ACLU suit vied for unwholesome restraints.

The effort to restrain the state's power over the church and vice versa is a wholesome one — but one which will forever become entangled with challenges by heady traditionalists, from both our civil and religious leagues.

Clearly there is a positive side to these two stories. The spirit of freedom rings loud where a healthy tension exists between church and state. And the Supreme Court's rejection of both the Kentucky law and the ACLU plea proves once again that you can't force doctrine on folks and still call it liberty.

Strength For Today

DON'T TEAR DOWN

Any person can tear things down; it takes a really creative individual to build things up. Any malicious person can rake up scandal; it takes a person of true Christian heart to build up the courage and faith of the people with whom he comes in contact.

We make a great mistake when we take any other attitude toward life than a positive one. The best way to get evil out of our lives is to crowd it out with good. The way to get rid of anxious thoughts is to place wholesome and hopeful thoughts firmly into one's consciousness. Effective reformers know instinctively that it is not enough just to eradicate some particular evil in society; this evil must be replaced by an effective program of social betterment.

We are all likely to err on the negative side. We should try to remember to praise rather than criticize; and to emphasize the beauty and power of good rather than the awfulness of evil. — Elisha Douglass

GLAD YOU DIDN'T TRY FOR THE JOB

Transition Plans Stuck

WASHINGTON — The Republicans are in power and there are going to be tremendous changes in government. Right? No, wrong. It isn't that they are reluctant to make the changes — it's just that they can't. Thousands of patronage jobs are available, but no one can take them, and I'll tell you why. There is no available housing in Washington for the middle-management people who are supposed to take over the town.

The sad truth of the matter, as the GOP loyalists are starting to discover, is what the Democrats have learned in the last four years. Real estate rules the town and, although many people will be out in the streets, nobody is moving out of town.

The people on Reagan's team think this is very unfair. As one told me the other day,

"How can we move in if they won't move out?"
"I guess the people you're firing have no place to go."
"But how can we increase military spending, cut taxes represent those who are trying to shaft the people. That's why there is no turnover in real estate."

"I'm beginning to learn that," he said. "I went to see another high official in Carter's administration and asked him when he was moving back home. He told me he planned to stay through Reagan's entire first term, because with all the changes that would take place he'd be in heavy demand as a 'consultant.' He said he had messed things up so badly in his department that he was the only one in Washington who understood it."

"That's usually the case when someone leaves the government. He is then in great demand as a consultant."

"What am I supposed to do?" he said. "How can we ask our people to come to Washington if they have no place to live?"

"You could build Quonset huts on the Mall. They did it during the war. Or maybe you could put mobile homes on the back lawn of the White House. You could hook up water and electricity and set and balance the budget if our supporters have no place to live?"

"You should have thought of that during the campaign. Anyone who lives in this city would have told you that no one intended to pull out if Carter lost the election. Our $50,000 homes are now worth $350,000. If the Republicans want to come to Washington, they're going to have to pay through the nose."

"I'm aware of that," he said angrily. "I went out to see a Carter appointee yesterday and asked him if he would be willing to give up his house for his replacement. He just laughed at me and said, 'You can take my office away from me, but my home is my castle.' I told him he owed it to our American political system to move out of Washington when the other party came to power. He said he had no intention of leaving, that he was joining a law firm and would be representing all the clients he had tried to throw in jail while he was in the government."

I said, "We in Washington call that the 'revolving door' system of government. When you're in, you represent the people; when you're out, you

Weakening Generosity

By R. GREGORY NOKES

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Future U.S. support for the World Bank and other institutions that provide development aid to the world's poorest nations is very much in doubt in light of two recent events.

One was the election of Ronald Reagan as president and a much more conservative Congress. The other was the breakdown in Congress last week of a last-minute agreement aimed at enactment of a three-year U.S. contribution of $3.2 billion to a bank program for needy nations.

A supporter of the program, Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb., wonders what chance there is for the program if it couldn't pass in a Democratic-controlled Congress with the backing of President Carter.

Nobody seems sure where Reagan stands on aid for needy nations, although many believe he will support a change from giving U.S. aid through institutions like to World Bank to giving it directly to recipient countries.

Cavanaugh says Reagan's feelings are shown by his failure to help win enactment of the funds. He said many Democrats were so wary of the new conservative mood that they didn't want to appropriate the money unless Reagan assured his backing.

"It leaves the strong sense that the right-wing, anti-bank forces are at least temporarily in the driver's seat in the Reagan camp," Cavanaugh said.

But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., who favors the program, said it is absurd to blame Reagan for the failure of a Congress with a heavy Democratic majority to approve the funds.

He acknowledged an attempt was made to win Reagan's support at the last minute, but it wasn't successful.

"It just boiled down to ... the lateness of the hour for bringing the bill forward," Hyde said, explaining that Reagan's advisers "just didn't want to be stamped."

The money was for the International Development Association, a subsidiary of the World Bank, which makes development loans to the world's poorest nations.

Last year, the IDA approved loans for $12 billion to countries where per capita income is less than $625, and most of the money went to countries with income of no more than $360.

For example, the three latest IDA loans, announced last week, were:

—Mauritania, $15 million for an irrigation project in the southeastern part of the country. Per capita income in Mauritania is $270.

—India, $35 million to help finance construction and improvement of all-weather farm roads in Bihar state. Per capita income in India is $160.

—Cameroon, $25 million for rural development to benefit 163,000 farm families. Per capita income in Cameroon is $420.

The U.S. contribution of $3.2 billion, to be appropriated over three years, is about 27 percent of the total of $12 billion agreed to by a group of industrial nations.

Had it not been for other countries, notably West Germany and Japan, which were willing to advance their contributions, IDA would have run out of money to lend in July. Action by the U.S. Congress is unlikely before March.

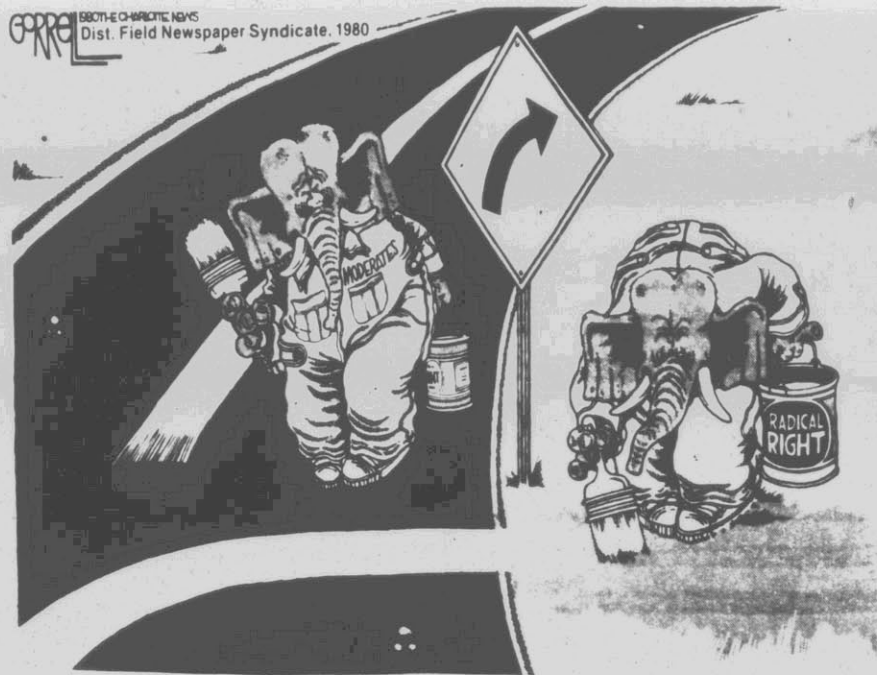

Why has U.S. support for programs to help poor nations declined even though all recent U.S. presidents favored it? The reasons include anger over oil price increases, anger that some countries receiving aid have opposed U.S. foreign policy, concern over waste and corruption in recipient countries, and the recession and other economic problems at home.

A 1978 IDA loan to Vietnam for $50 million angered many lawmakers.

Robert S. McNamara, who is about to be replaced as bank president by A.W. Clausen, now president of Bank of America, recently defended the bank's programs, saying they have improved the lives of millions of people over the years. He said the U.S. aid effort, scarcely 0.18 percent of the nation's gross national product, has been "disgraceful."

But with a new U.S. president and a new World Bank president, changes are sure to be in the works.

Hyde promises he will continue to work for the aid programs from the Republican side, although he believes there will be a shift in favor of direct U.S. aid to recipient countries, a change favored by many conservatives, including some Reagan advisers.

Dependence On Rare Minerals

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Heavy American dependence on imports of critical raw materials, many of them from Russia and potentially unstable African countries, has put the United States in a "dangerously vulnerable" situation, says the head of weapons research for the Air Force.

Gen. Alton Slay, in a recent report to Congress, said that American dependence on foreign oil is only part of the nation's resource problem threatening security.

Slay, as head of the Air Force Systems Command, is in charge of weapons research, development and procurement programs.

He also told Congress that the United States' "alarming dependence on imports of critical industrial raw materials from the Soviet Union or potentially unstable southern African sources creates a potentially dangerous flaw in our nation's defense preparedness posture."

"The price and availability of vital materials such as cobalt, chromium and manganese are almost completely dependent on geopolitical events in southern Africa."

"The adoption of Marxist regimes by five African countries south of the Sahara has contributed to the political instability in this region and the likelihood of future supply disruptions. Only a few more nations would have to fall under Soviet influence for the elements of a super-cartel to coalesce."

Slay described the United States as a "have-not" nation in terms of many essential minerals.

To illustrate U.S. vulnerability, Slay said that the manufacture of modern jet engines depends to a large extent on imported minerals.

"There is no substitute for chromium-bearing stainless steels in applications such as jet engines," Slay said, adding that the United States must import 90 percent of its chromium, which comes from the newly independent Zimbabwe, South Africa and the Soviet Union, which he said "exports considerable chromium" to the United States.

Slay said federal restrictions on mineral exploration on 750 million acres of public lands in the United States stand in the way of reducing dependence on imports. He also was critical of the effect of anti-pollution and conservation legislation.

Further, Slay said the stockpile of strategic materials authorized by Congress before World War II has eroded and that there are now "many shortages and imbalances." The last major stockpile purchase was made 20 years ago, he said.

"Even if we had the processed minerals, we don't have the industrial capacity to turn it into finished items at the rate we need," Slay said.

"What this all means to me is that if we go to war today, we don't have the ability to surge quickly or to quickly increase production rates significantly above what we're already doing," he said.

"The bottom line is that even if we go all-out for mobilization of our resources, we won't be able to deliver significantly larger aircraft quantities in the first 24-month period," Slay said.

Conservationists Feel Less Certain On Future

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Emerging conservatism in the federal government has cast doubt about the fate of some environmental programs, according to spokesmen for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina.

John Runkle of Chapel Hill, executive coordinator of the Conservation Council, and Dave Howells of Raleigh, chairman of the Research Triangle chapter of the Sierra Club, said they were apprehensive about the role Republicans will play in protecting the environment.

"If environmental protection had been left up to the state, which is the way a lot of (Republicans) think it should be, some of these environmental programs we have (at the state level) simply never would have happened," Runkle said in an interview.

Runkle said the Environmental Protection Agency, which some environmentalist fear will be crippled by the Reagan administration, "has been the main force keeping North Carolina interested in pollution control."

He said North Carolina "has basically been doing what the feds mandated." In addition, the state lacks the money and manpower to effectively enforce anti-pollution standards, Runkle said.

Howells said he suspects much of the conservatives' talk about abolishing federal programs such as EPA to be mere rhetoric, contending that the Republican-dominated Senate includes more pro-environmental members than most people realize.

"I'm apprehensive, sure, because no one knows what direction the new government will take," says Howells, a member of the North Carolina Management Commission. "But there are strong conservationists among the Republicans."

Charges Are Made In Break-Ins

Greenville police have charged six persons, including two juveniles, on breaking and entering charges in connection with separate incidents here Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Jerry Coward, 21 of 609 Ford St. and Arthur Lee Tyson, 19 of Route 1, Greenville, were charged with breaking, entering and larceny and possession of stolen goods following investigation of an 11:50 p.m. break-in yesterday at Famous Subs on Memorial Drive, near the Chestnut Street intersection.

He noted that an estimated $700 damage resulted when windows in the building were broken and a coin operated cigarette machine was forced open.

James Ronald Braxton, 23 of 1907A McClellan St., and Tony Alonza Edwards, 17 of 1902A Norcott Cir., as well as two juveniles, were charged with breaking, entering and larceny following investigation of a break-in at Greenville Pawn Shop at 805 Dickinson Ave. That incident was reported at 1:45 a.m.

Cannon said a quantity of merchandise was removed from the building, including watches, a television, radios, a stereo and speakers, and a ten-speed bicycle.

stores or the alcohol beverage control boards that run them.

But for those who want a piece of the more than $5 billion a year state budget, and know enough to go about getting some of it, the letters mean something entirely different.

The Advisory Budget Commission goes by the same acronym, and state bureaucrats and lobbyists have been vying for the attention of the 12 men that sit on it — all but one of them legislative powers — for the past several weeks.

Take the groups representing teachers and state workers, for instance. It's been only five months since they won a better than 10 percent pay raise from the Legislature, but already they've been pressing Gov. Jim Hunt and the budget commission for another one.

Their clamoring for a pay raise next year has so far met more resistance, however, than did their election-year raise. Hunt's budget-making staff and the members of the ABC have been sending out signals for weeks that this will be a "tight" budget with little room for a direct raise — and maybe none.

"My opinion is the budget is so tight there's not going to be much to talk over," said state Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Albemarle.

That thinking is one reason the governor has proposed to the commission it forego a direct pay raise this time and instead change the formula to give workers a break in their contributions to the retirement system.

Charged With Two Murders

KERMIT, Texas (AP) — A 19-year-old man has been charged with two counts of murder and one count of attempted murder in the stabbings of three Kermit women during a burglary, police said.

Victor Velasquez, of Kermit, was charged Friday after being arrested in Odessa on traffic charges, police said. Jeannie Marie Pardue, 51, and her daughter Lee Ann Wallace, 15, were slain Nov. 15 while sleeping at the home of Mrs. Pardue's son, Carey Gene Wallace. Wallace's wife, Molly Ann, was seriously wounded.

A 16-year-old girl covered in a back bedroom during the attack after Miss Wallace staggered to the door and told her to "keep quiet, stay hidden." Police have refused to identify the girl for her protection.

The commission will be considering that issue and other ways of splitting up the state's resources when it meets in closed sessions tonight and Tuesday. Although the money they are talking about will be spent a long time from now — from July 1981 through June 1983 — the teacher and state workers' associations know now is the time the legislative leaders who sit on the commission make decisions that usually go unchanged through the

Rural Calls Are Reported

During October the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 50 alarms with 48 fires.

There were fires in 12 houses, one house trailer, three buildings, 18 autos, three grass and woods areas, one commercial building, and 18 "others"; with two mutual aids and one false alarm.

There was $624,500 involved in fires; $2,243,000 exposed; $38,720 lost and $2,828,780 saved, County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said.

Grifton Fire Department had the most fires — eight.

Elm Grove FWB Church invites the public to attend quarterly meeting services beginning Saturday at 7:30 p. m. ensuing General Assembly session.

It is just for that reason, however, that the Advisory Budget Commission has come under fire, both from outside observers and from legislators who don't share in its power.

In a report earlier this year, the independent North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research issued a bulky report on the commission, which it described as having a profound and often overlooked influence on state government.

"They formally involve legislators in the governor's exclusive constitutional responsibility for the preparation and administration of the budget," the report said. "They intrude on the independence of the Legislature. And they limit the development and participation of legislators in the work of the General Assembly."

Recognizing that power, several legislators — including defeated GOP candidate for governor I. Beverly Lake Jr. — tried to have the ABC abolished this year. They reasoned the powers on the panel reach their agreements on how tax money should be spent in private, before the budget ever gets to the Legislature, and with the support of legislative leaders behind it the budget becomes nearly impossible to change later.

But the ABC continues, and its authority will be felt when the commission members

Workshop At Third St.

A "Make and Take" Title I workshop was held at Third Street School Thursday.

Parents and children in the Title I resource program came, some with other family members, and made games and activities to take home to reinforce reading skills the children are learning at school. About 50 persons attended.

The workshop was directed by Mrs. Betty Quinn, Title I coordinator for Greenville City School, and those helping included Freager Sanders, Title I Director, and the resource teachers and aide at Third Street. This is an annual family event.

and Hunt send to the Legislature in January the budget they will decide on this week.

This year's panel has several lame duck legislators, like Sen. Ralph Scott, D-Haw River, who lost his reelection bid, and Reps. Ed Holmes, D-Pittsboro, and Horton Rountree, D-Greenville, who are retiring. But its power isn't likely to be diminished by those changes. The next House speaker, Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Marshall, is on it, as are Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's Senate budget chairman.

And while they talk over the next few weeks about the tight budget, it should be remembered that they are still talking about a large state surplus, amounting to millions projected to be in a year, according to the best estimate of the state's last report of state revenue. It was more than twice that amount last year, a comparison to 1979, when $220 million was reported.

And not in comparison to what some other states are facing.

Michigan is having trouble, Kentucky called me last week and they're $100 million out of balance, South Carolina is cutting across the board," said deputy state budget officer Marvin Denson. "Although things are tight here, we're probably in better shape than other states."

"MAKE AND TAKE"

Eastern School was the site of a Title I "Make and Take" session Tuesday.

About 25 parents, children and teacher attended. Games and activities were made to allow the parents to help their children at home. Each child made two or three different games to help their parents help.

Periodondal Disease Campaign Pushes On-Going Dental Care

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

"I believe people fear pain the most when they come to the dentist's office," said Dr. Bill Lee, a local dentist. However, what they ought to fear, according to Lee, is periodontal disease, the number one cause of tooth loss in people over 25.

"A big myth is being perpetuated," he said, referring to the assumption of most people that if their parents lost their teeth than they will too. "A patient's teeth should last as long as they do, if they know what to do and how to take care of them."

In the advanced stages of periodontal disease, or pyorrhea, the gums withdraw from the teeth forming pockets which become filled with bacteria, food residue and eventually pus. In its most extreme form the actual bony support of the teeth is destroyed resulting in complete loss of the teeth. The disease is preventable by using proper brushing technique and flossing with unwaxed dental floss. "Hard tooth brushes are the worst thing for dental health ever made," commented Lee when discussing proper brushing technique.

Project '80, a campaign leveled at treatment and recognition of periodontal disease is being sponsored by the North Carolina Dental Society and Dental Foundation of N.C. The main object, according to Lee, is "to get dentists more attuned to the fact that there is a large problem."

Children are also in need of on-going dental care beginning as early as two years, said Lee. "They should visit the dentist's office this early to acquaint them with the office so they won't be so intimidated later when work has to be done."

New developments in the field of dentistry come about every day. However, the two most important in the past few years, according to Lee, are the air driven hand pieces, the machine that sounds like a drill, and an anesthetic, Lidocaine, which virtually replaced Novocaine 20 years ago. Lidocaine provides almost total or profound anesthesia, not available through Novocaine. Commenting on laughing gas, or nitrous oxide, Lee said he feels it is rarely needed; only in cases with a very active child or a very nervous adult. "If people understand what is going to happen, this type of thing is not needed."

"Patients won't talk to you but they'll talk to your assistant," was one thing Dr. Lee said he was told while attending dental school. However, he feels that if a patient has explained to him how and why a thing is being done there is no need for fear. "The patient should be able to talk to the dentist and then we can begin to work on these dental health problems."

Hope For Settling UNC Desegregation Dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some federal and state officials believe President-elect Ronald Reagan's administration will move for a settlement — including the possibility of dismissal — of a government desegregation suit against the University of North Carolina.

Leonard L. Haynes, head of the black college office for the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, said he expected the Reagan administration to re-evaluate the decade-old dispute with

UNC. "I am about to find out the hands of the law," said John R. Jordan of Raleigh, president of the UNC Board of Governors. "If he means that, it would certainly mean that the present posture of the Department of Education will be changed." Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., also said he expected some softening of the government's attitude, but noted that it may not come quickly. "I think some of the officials in the federal bureaucracy who have been harassing the University of North Carolina as well as their colleagues because they're going to go from here and presentable by people in the government. When we have the better aid, how the hands of the bureau

UNC President Bill Friday said the university was proceeding as if the election will not affect the case, but he added, "I have been carefully reading what Mr. Reagan and his top lieutenants have been saying."

Meanwhile, Julius L. Chambers of Charlotte, president of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, has threatened to sue the government if it does drop the desegregation proceedings against UNC.

Taylor Waited a Day

Zachary Taylor, who was born on this day in 1784, was the first president who represented a state west of the Mississippi River. He was a resident of Louisiana when the Whig Party nominated him for president in 1848. Taylor won the election by 36 electoral votes. On March 4, 1849, the term of Taylor's predecessor, James K. Polk, expired. Polk's vice president had resigned as president of the Senate two days before. Because Taylor took the oath of office on March 5, some historians claim the presidency was vacant on March 4. Others believe the president pro tempore of the Senate, David R. Atchison, was president on that day.

Plan To Reopen Fire-Ruined Hotel In 7 Months

Farm Scene

By Sam Uzzell
Asst. Agr. Ext. Agent

There has been a tremendous interest in planting wheat across the southeastern United States, especially in the past two years. Worldwide shortages of wheat supplies, poor crop conditions abroad and expanding use of wheat as a feed grain make wheat futures quite profitable. These trends suggest that more and more farmers will be planting wheat this year.

In eastern North Carolina, wheat prices have been strong and are forecast to be above last year's $3.82 per bushel average. Southeast Farm Press indicates that wheat prices are forecast to be in the range of $3.95 to $4.25 per bushel as an average price. As of this writing, wheat can be contracted for July delivery at $5.43 per bushel, according to figures released from wire service reports from the Chicago Board of Trade. Extremely favorable prices plus the ability to produce soybeans after wheat has made wheat planting extremely attractive.

Many farmers have planted soybeans behind wheat and found that now two profitable crops can be grown on land that previously had made only one crop per year.

Small grains such as wheat are fairly easy to grow and do not require heavy inputs of fertilizer or agricultural chemicals. However, wheat may suffer yield loss from a deficiency of copper. Agronomists have found that soils in eastern North Carolina may require additional copper, especially in poorly drained sandy soils and high organic soils. The sooner a copper deficiency is discovered and treated, the more likely a yield response is to be observed. Copper deficiency in wheat is not likely to be noted until early spring and warm weather periods occur and promote rapid growth.

The symptoms of copper in wheat include the leaves taking on a grayish-green cast and becoming twisted; tip burn on the tips of leaves die back; young seedheads may bend over or there may be poor seed set. An application of 2.5 pounds of copper per acre can pay for itself in one season. Also, there will be enough copper remaining for several years to adequately nourish soybeans, corn or other crops in the rotation. It should be noted that soybeans frequently suffer some copper deficiency.

Copper can be applied by air foliarly or broadcast in fertilizer mixtures or as a preplant spray. Common sources of copper include copper sulfate, tri-basic copper sulfate, copper oxide, copper chelates and complexes and as fritted (glass) materials. There are often wide price variations in the materials.

A soil test at the North Carolina Department of Agriculture's lab in Raleigh can predict a copper problem prior to planting. If a grower finds a copper index of 25 or less on the soils test report for wheat, it will pay to apply 2.5 pounds of copper per acre depending on the organic matter. A soil test is extremely valuable — it will indicate the organic material level of the soil also.

Anyone who has invested time, money and effort in wheat this winter should take a close look at soil samples reports and study the copper index. An early application of copper will help insure the maximum yield of wheat and increase net profit at harvest. For further information contact your agricultural extension office. A micronutrient can be needed by a crop in ounces per acre, but if the micronutrient is lacking, all the nitrogen in the world will not make a bumper crop.

Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — As gawkers photographed the charred wreckage of the deadly fire at the MGM Grand hotel and guards stood by to fend off looters, operators of the hotel said it would reopen in seven months with all its former glitter.

But Fred Benninger, chairman of the board of MGM Grand Hotels Inc., wouldn't say Sunday whether the new MGM Grand would include smoke detectors or sprinklers in all rooms.

The hotel had sprinklers only on the first two floors and the 26th floor and guests said they heard no alarms before choking black smoke filled the 26-story building Friday. The fire, the second worst ever in an American hotel, killed 83 people and injured more than 500.

Clark County Coroner Otto Ravenholt said he did not expect that any more bodies would turn up.

"It may have been a blessing in disguise" that the alarm system did not go off at the MGM Grand, Benninger said. "A lot of guests would have gone into the hallways and suffocated from the smoke. Staying in their rooms may have saved them," Benninger contended.

Fire officials said they would close their investigation of the blaze today.

"We may have some officials from Washington and elsewhere going in there to observe what happened," said Capt. Ralph Dinsman. "But as far as we're concerned, the investigation is concluded."

Meanwhile, in Reno, a grease fire broke out Sunday night in a kitchen at Harrah's Club, forcing evacuation of the 25-story hotel-casino. No injuries were reported and guests were allowed to return after the blaze was extinguished.

Armed guards ringed the MGM Grand hotel as survivors went back in to reclaim their possessions and complained that their rooms had been looted.

"There's some stealing going on up there," said policeman Dan Harness. "There's one lady who lost a $30,000 ring. We won't know how much was lost until later, when people go home, look in their suitcases and really see what's missing."

It was not known how much of the hotel's money was lost in the fire. Nevada Gaming Commission Chairman Harry Reid said he believed the hotel would have had at least $1 million on hand to pay off gamblers.

One security guard at the hotel, John R. McManus, 47, a retired New York police sergeant, was arrested Saturday at the neighboring Barbary Coast Hotel after allegedly dropping fire-blackened coins into a slot machine. He was arrested for investigation of grand larceny and carrying a concealed weapon.

Gift shops at other hotels reported brisk sales of film as people took photographs of the MGM Grand. Traffic snarls, some over a mile long, plagued the Strip as gawkers lined up to view the wreckage.

Roy Parrish, the Clark County fire chief, said the blaze began in electrical circuits above a delicatessen on the hotel's main floor and smoldered for four hours before exploding down out of the ceiling in a fireball that sent dense smoke upward through elevator shafts.

Guests dangled out of windows by bedsheets and, despite warnings from firefighters with bullhorns, some jumped in attempts to save themselves. At least three people were killed that way.

Many guests were out of reach of fire department ladders, which extended only to the ninth floor. Some people fled to the roof of the building, where they were ferried to safety by helicopter.

Authorities guessed there were about 8,000 people in the building at the time, including 5,000 guests and 1,500 gamblers who walked in off the street.

Benninger said the fire disabled the alarm system. One guest, Randy Rodman of Los Angeles, was angered by that failure.

"Can you imagine designing a fire alarm system that can be destroyed by fire?" Rodman said. "It doesn't make any sense."

Capt. Mike Patterson, chief of the fire investigation unit, appeared surprised by Benninger's theory that the failure of the alarm system may have saved lives.

"Why would he say that?" Patterson asked. But Dinsman said Benninger's theory was plausible because the fire spread so rapidly. "This all happened in five or 10 minutes. It might have driven people out into the halls."

Benninger promised to reopen the 2,076-room MGM Grand with a new addition by July 1, but he would not discuss what safety measures would be taken.

"We will bring the hotel up to any code requirements as of today," he said.

Benninger repeatedly said that the MGM Grand, which opened seven years ago at a cost of $106 million, complied with a 1970 code that required neither smoke alarms nor sprinklers on every floor. The code was revised in 1978, but did not deal with existing structures.

Benninger said that after the hotel was built. "We really did not consider adding sprinklers."

Hauling Out 10 Beached Whales

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — A Coast Guard cruiser and a Navy tug were dispatched to an isolated cove today to haul the carcasses of 10 beached sperm whales back to the sea, officials said.

The whales died Saturday after stranding themselves despite efforts to push them back into deep water. Officials said they did not know why the mammals headed inland to their deaths.

"They could have been cruising and simply have gotten lost," said Ed Asper, a marine biologist and curator of a marine attraction. "Then they possibly panicked when they found themselves touching bottom as the tide went out. Finally, when the tide was down to its lowest ebb, several animals found themselves literally high and dry, and dead or dying."

The whales which entered the inlet near this North Florida coastal town ranged in length from 14 to just over 30 feet. The largest weighed up to six or seven tons.

Initial reports indicated that as many as 15 whales entered the inlet. "There were some that were headed back out to sea, but we lost them during the darkness," said Asper.

Asper, fellow workers from Sea World Inc., an attraction and marine-life center near Orlando, and other marine experts from state and federal agencies spent the night cutting open the 10 whales stranded in the cove, taking tissue samples and vital organs.

"We didn't find anything obvious," Asper said. "It will be a couple of weeks before we get any results from the tissue studies."

Beachings by deep-water animals such as sperm whales and certain species of dolphins are not unheard of but are not common, Asper said. Beachings by shallow-water or coastal animals, such as pilot whales, are more common.

Sometimes, sperm whales beach singly, like a 47-footer that nosed itself ashore near Jupiter, Fla., a few years ago. Forty-one whales died last year after beaching near Florence, Ore., and "we have records showing 100 in one beached group, many, many years ago," said Asper.

"Whales are schooling animals, so usually when one goes, everyone goes," Asper added. "It could be nature's way of doing things, of thinning the population."

Riley Sparks Women To Triumph

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Kathy Riley came off the bench, where she had languished for most of the second half with four fouls, and sparked a 70-65 victory over Virginia Tech Sunday afternoon in Minges Coliseum.

It was the opening game of the year for the Lady Pirates, while Virginia Tech suffered its first loss in two starts.

The win almost didn't come. After leading by as many as 15 points in the first half, the Pirates pulled their players with two fouls, and that included Sam Jones, Marcia Girven, Lydia Rountree and Riley. It allowed Tech to rally to within nine by the end of the period, 37-28.

Then, early in the second half, Riley collected two more quick fouls and went to the bench, as Tech controlled the opening minutes of play and quickly scratched away at the lead.

The Lady Gobblers not only erased the lead, they built up

ECU Men Face Marathon Oil Tonight

East Carolina University's Pirates open the 1980-81 basketball season tonight with an exhibition game against Marathon Oil. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Marathon comes in with a 1-3 record, having beaten South Florida handily, then lost to Florida State by five, Georgia by three and Wake Forest by eight. The Oilers are led by 6-11 Jim Andrews of the University of Kentucky, who scored 30 points against Wake. Others include 6-7 Larry Stamper of Kentucky, 6-5 Ron King of Florida State, 6-5 Andy Williams of Georgetown (Ky.) College; and 6-3 Bob Bender of Duke.

Season tickets will not be honored for this game, which is strictly a general admission affair. All tickets will be $2 for adults and $1 for children and students. ECU students will be admitted on their ID and activity card.

All seats, including the new backed seating on the lower North level, will be on a first-come-first served basis.

The "official" opening of the season comes Saturday when the Pirates travel to the University of Ohio.

one of their own, 58-53, before Riley came off the bench and sparked a 17-7 splurge by the Lady Pirates in the final 4:24 of play.

"I'm real pleased with the effort," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "Today was really the first time this year that we've been able to get what we feel is our best lineup on the floor (Riley, Girven, Jones, Rountree and Laurie Sikes)."

"When we were up by 15, we wanted to protect our players with two fouls and we took them out and that helped Tech come back to within nine. Then, in the second half, Kathy got those two quick fouls and we had to take her out. I don't think we played that bad in that period, but we just couldn't get ball to drop for us. Mary (Denkler) had a lot of good shots, but they wouldn't fall."

During that second half period, East Carolina went scoreless for the first three minutes, and then got only ten points in the first eight minutes.

The Lady Pirates fell behind early, as Tech led by two three times during the opening minutes. But a jumper by Jones moved the Pirate into an 8-6 lead and they never trailed again in the first half. A three-point play by Riley moved it out to 12, 19-7, before two quick baskets by Sandy Berry started a rally that cut it back to four points.

Still, the Pirates held the lead and led by 33-18 with 3:40 left in the period. Tech scrambled back, however, and cut it to nine by halftime.

In the second half, the Lady Gobblers put on a nother spurt, scoring the first eight points to trim the lead to one. East Carolina hung on, however, until a jumper from the circle by Kim Albany put the Gobblers up, 46-45. After an exchange of the lead, Tech inched out to as much as a 58-53 lead with 4:32 left.

But at that point, Riley came back into the game, and got things going again, hitting from underneath to cut the lead to three, then helping to get the ball back for a Jones jumper that cut it to one.

Rountree then scored on a drive to put the Lady Pirates back up, 59-58, with 2:26 left, and a three-point play by Rountree jumped it to four and Tech never overcame that.

"Kathy's fourth foul was critical for us. But when she came back in, it really made a difference," Andruzzi added.

She also praised the games of Jones and Rountree, noting that the latter made a fine comeback off an injury that had sidelined her most of the preseason.

"Our offense needs work. We're not running the break like we should, but we had the intensity to get the win. We're not as relaxed out there as we should be, either."

Jones, a junior transfer from Louisville, led the ECU scoring with 20, while Riley added 19. Rountree had 13 and Denkler hit 10. Girven, who led Tech center Julia Williams to just two points, also pulled away 11

Bills Handle Pittsburgh

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Steelers have won the Super Bowl four times in six years, so they're not surprised at some obituaries because of their 7-5 record and a multitude of injuries this season.

"It's like buzzards are flying over Pittsburgh," said wide receiver Lynn Swann after the Buffalo Bills, heretofore a doormat in the American Football Conference but now a 9-3 powerhouse, beat the Steelers 28-13 Sunday. "We have four more games, but the injuries just seem to follow us where we go."

Five Steelers, including quarterback Terry Bradshaw, had to leave the Buffalo game because of injuries, which have depleted Pittsburgh's magnificent depth all season.

"We're not concerned about the playoffs yet," said Coach Chuck Noll. "We're just concerned about suiting up 33 guys next week."

Indeed, the Steelers are only a game behind Houston and Cleveland in their division.

"The AFC Central may not have great records, but we still have a shot," Swann said. "Our fate is in our hands. If Houston loses to Cleveland next week, then we beat Houston and win the rest of our games, we'll be in the playoffs."

The Bills have participated in postseason play only once in 14 years, but they have a lot of believers now with a one-game lead over New England in the AFC East.

Joe Ferguson threw three touchdown passes, two of them to Jerry Butler, and Curtis Brown raced 34 yards for another score to pace the Bills' triumph.

"This year, we had to win to stay ahead of New England, and I think we showed people across the country that we could be for real," said Ferguson, who completed 16 of 28 passes for 212 yards.

Buffalo played Steeler-like defense, holding Pittsburgh runners to 84 yards, while rookie sensation Joe Cribbs ran for 110.

Eagles 10, Raiders 7 Philadelphia won its eighth in a row and handed Oakland its first loss in seven games on Wilbert Montgomery's 3-yard TD sweep with 2:56 to go.

The Eagles, 11-1, became the first NFL team to clinch a playoff berth. They lead Dallas by two games in the NFC East, while Oakland, 8-4, dropped into a first-place tie in the AFC West with San Diego, which beat Miami 27-24 last Thursday night.

Packers 25, Vikings 13 Minnesota, 6-6, fell out of a tie for first place in the NFC Central as Green Bay, in a day reminiscent of the Jim Taylor-Paul Hornung era, got a touchdown and more than 100 yards rushing from both Gerry Ellis and Eddie Lee Ivey.

Ellis gained 101 yards and scored a 1-yard touchdown.

while Ivey was impressive with 145 yards and a 38-yard TD dash.

The 1980 football season came to an end Saturday afternoon in Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh, as the Pirates went down to defeat, 36-14.

The big difference in the final game was the play in the line. There, State was in solid control, both offensively and defensively.

Now comes the critical time for the program of Ed Emory. This will be the first full recruiting year for the new coach, and a good year is almost a necessity. While the Pirates do return a large number of players, they will need help in other areas, especially on the defensive unit. They need help in the secondary, at linebacker and in the line, well, everywhere.

Offensively, things are not as bad. It was pointed out that of all the offensive players on the current roster as offensive players, only three do not return, but they are three big ones.

They are running backs Theodore Sutton, the number two rusher in ECU history, and Anthony Collins, who wasn't that far behind him. Also in the group is the tenth leading career pass receiver Vern Davenport.

Emory will be looking for some other backs, a couple of linemen, a couple of quarterbacks, and that's about it on offense.

Hopefully, too, during the off-season, the Pirates will get stronger physically, through the new weight training program, and will not have to suffer through the rash of injuries that they went through this year. Those injuries, coupled with the inexperience and youth of the team were the primary reasons that East Carolina finished with the record it did.

The 1981 season will be more of a true test of the Emory era at East Carolina, where it is going and what it will do. One thing is certain, it will be almost as tough a year as this year as far as schedule is concerned.

While the 1981 schedule has not been released, it is known to currently open with N.C. State, Duke and North Carolina, all on the road — of course. Then, Miami will be making a return visit here. Who the remaining teams are, one can only guess, but it is likely that Richmond and William & Mary will be among them. As to the remaining games, that will have to wait for the release of the schedule.

Right now, the name of the game is recruiting. Everyone will be watching with great interest.

Kepley Wins CFL Defensive Award

TORONTO — Former East Carolina linebacker Danny Kepley captured the Schenley top defensive player award for the second time in his Canadian Football career.

Kepley, a former standout middle linebacker for the Pirates, plays for the Edmonton Eskimos and was one of several Western Football Conference players to earn awards.

Kepley played his high school football at Goldsboro before moving on to East Carolina where he earned the name "Captain Crunch" while leading a defensive unit nicknamed the "Wild Dogs."

Kepley was a third team All-America in 1974 to become the first ECU player to be named an All-America since the university began Division I play in 1964. He also earned honorable mention All-America in 1972 and 1973.

He was recently named to the ECU Sports Hall-of-Fame.

Duran Vs. Leonard

Spurts Of Venom Highlight A Case Of Genuine Dislike

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard is doing everything but sticking pins in Roberto Duran dolls as he prepares for Tuesday night's rematch with the tough Panamanian who took away his WBC welterweight boxing title five months ago.

And he's getting a lot of help from his Svengali, Trainer Angelo Dundee, a master at psychological warfare.

Spurts of venom are flying between the two camps — not fabricated barbs designed to bolster a sagging gate but a genuine case of mutual dislike.

"Sugar Ray didn't know what to make of Duran when he fought him last June in Montreal," Dundee said, referring to the Panamanian's close 15-round decision.

"He was a bit in awe — not afraid, mind you — of Duran and Duran's reputation of being pound-for-pound the best fighter in the world. So outside the ring he treated Duran with respect.

"When Duran threw tantrums and put on those macho displays, Sugar Ray thought it was cute and laughed it off. He found out later Duran was a bad guy, an animal.

"Duran was rude. He was vulgar. He fouled my man 25 times — look at the films and count 'em — and rubbed it in. He took Sugar Ray's decency and courtesy as a sign of weakness. Sugar Ray was stunned by it. I am sure it affected his fight.

"I won't happen this time. We'll give the guy what he gave us."

Dundee has taken the initiative in the war of intimidation and started grabbing most of the media attention.

He keeps vigorously protesting Duran's rough and tumble butting tactics. He has insisted the Panamanian shave his craggy beard. And he has offended Duran's Spanish interpreter.

It was Dundee who conceived the idea that he and Leonard appear at last Thursday's news conference in long black beards and mimic the champion's boast, "I weel keel him."

Dundee accused Duran's interpreter, Luis Henrique, of using his own words and not those of Duran in interpretations.

"Duran can speak English as well as I do," Dundee charged. "To use an interpreter, it's like throwing out a wet fish."

Dundee has gone further to charge that Duran has been even more objectionable than in the last fight.

"He had Sugar Ray's brother and sister thrown out of his workout, saying they were spies," the trainer said. "Every time he or one of his people sees one of our group they make a vulgar remark or gesture."

"Sugar Ray is fed up to here with it. I think you'll see a different Leonard Tuesday night."

The mild-mannered Leonard was asked if he disliked Duran.

"I wouldn't want to live next door to him," the former Olympic gold medalist replied. Duran was asked if his attitude toward Leonard and Leonard's camp was a publicity hype for the fight.

In translation, Duran's reply came out firm and clear: "No, I do not like heem."

Dundee insists that the second fight between the two will be fought with heads and much as fists with mental toughness prevailing.

It's this kind of steel resolve and determination that Dundee is pouring into his fighter's cranium.

No one is better suited.

Dundee, a native of Philadelphia who survived the New York ring jungle before settling in Miami Beach, Fla., has been tutor of two of the greatest fight personalities of our time.

In addition to Leonard, he has programmed the ring fortunes of Muhammad Ali for two decades, the glamorous pair winning purses of some $50 million between them.

It was Dundee who pushed the blinded Ali off his stool against Sonny Liston in Miami Beach in 1964, when Ali won the title for the first time, and conceived the "rope-a-dopa" strategy that beat George Foreman in Zaire 10 years later.

How do the two compare?

"They have one common denominator, charisma," Dundee said. "That's where comparison ends. We'll never see another Ali, a man who thrived on controversy and made an impact on the world. Sugar Ray is the great American kid — family, lovable. "Both have given me great joy."

Jets 31, Oilers 28

Pat Leahy, who missed a 36-yard field goal at the end of regulation time, hit a 38-yarder 3:58 into overtime to give New York a victory after it blew a 21-0 lead in the fourth quarter.

Ken Stabler threw four touchdown passes in the final period for Houston to force extra session after two interceptions set up easy Jets touchdowns in the first half.

Browns 31, Bengals 7

Cleveland, 8-4, moved into a tie with the Oilers as Brian Sipe threw touchdown passes to four different receivers and passed for more than 300 yards for the fourth time this season.

Ricky Feacher caught a 55-yard bomb, while Reggie Rucker, Calvin Hill and Greg Pruitt caught shorter tosses from Sipe.

Falcons 28, Bears 17

Steve Bartkowski hurled three touchdown passes to give Atlanta a controversial victory over Chicago and a 1½-game lead in the NFC West over the Rams pending tonight's game.

The key play came with the Bears ahead 17-14 in the third quarter when Walter Payton fumbled on the Atlanta 1 and was ejected for touching an official. Shortly thereafter, Bartkowski threw a 42-yard pass to Alfred Jenkins for the go-ahead touchdown.

"I thought it was a bad call," said defensive back Roland Lawrence, who recovered Payton's bobble for Atlanta. "I told Walter that, but the referee sees it the way he sees it."

Lions 24, Buccaneers 10

Rookie star Billy Sims ran 21-yards for a touchdown and handed off to Ray Williams on a reverse that went for an 11-yard touchdown.

Detroit, 7-5, is in first place in the NFC Central despite five losses in its previous seven games.

Patriots 47, Colts 21

New England stayed a game behind Buffalo with three touchdowns by the defense. Rick Sanford and Allan Clark returned fumbled kickoffs for scores and Rod Shoate raced 42 yards with an intercepted pass for another TD.

"I can't remember in 30 years of football a kickoff where a team fumbled and the other team ran it in for a score," said Colts Coach Mike McCormack after it happened to him twice.

Cowboys 14, Redskins 101

"I really had an eerie feeling all day that I was going to score," said Dallas defensive tackle Larry Cole, who scored a touchdown for the first time in 11 years, the fourth of his career — all against Washington.

The 43-yard interception return gave the Cowboys a 14-3 lead and they held on to ensure their 15th straight winning season. They are 9-3 with four games remaining.

Chiefs 21, Cardinals 13

Kansas City trailed 13-7 late in the fourth quarter before Arnold Morgado made a tumbling catch in the end zone of Steve Fuller's 2-yard pass and J.T. Smith returned a punt 75 yards for another touchdown 76 seconds later.

49ers 12, Giants 0

Phil Simms had led New York to two straight victories, but San Francisco's much-maligned defense sacked him 10 times, once for a safety, and Earl Cooper scored on a 66-yard pass play from Joe Montana.

The victory broke an eight-game losing streak for the 49ers.

Broncos 36, Seahawks 20

Denver won its third in a row as weak-kneed, 37-year-old Craig Morton rifled two touchdown passes and ran for another.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
1980 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ83 ♠AJ872 ♣Q ♣Q3

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—If partner's bidding is to be trusted, he should have a long, broken club suit and, possibly, sub-minimum values for his two-over-one response. Still, you have a very good hand, which is improved by the queen in partner's suit. You are worth one move toward game. However, don't rebid your hearts. The only sensible try is a raise to four clubs. Even a full-blooded five clubs is acceptable.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q872 ♠103 ♣KQ854 ♣K10

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Dble.

What action do you take?
A.—Opposite a partner who opened in third seat, your hand doesn't quite measure up to a raise to four spades. In addition, it is too strong for either three spades or two spades, and two diamonds could be passed. The correct action is to redouble, and then support spades at your next turn.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ109643 ♣J ♣95 ♣K82

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner has shown a very strong hand, so you should be in the slam zone because your hand has excellent trick-taking possibilities. We suggest a jump to five spades. That must show a long, strong suit and no outside first round control to cue bid.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠109652 ♠J72 ♠AK7 ♠95

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♠ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't let the fact that you have a fifth spade tempt you into any rash action. You have a hand full of losers, and a simple raise to two spades describes your holding quite adequately. There is no game unless partner can make some move over your raise.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:
♠7 ♣KQ104 ♠93 ♠AKQ982

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very fine hand and, if partner has a couple of aces, you could easily have a slam. You can convey this to partner by jump to five spades. That must show a long, strong suit and no outside first round control to cue bid.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠87642 ♠7 ♠AQ5 ♠AKJ7

What is your opening bid?
A.—Normally, you should always open a five-card suit before a four-card suit, especially if it is a major. Here, however, we see problems ahead if we open one spade—a response of two hearts by partner would leave us without a good rebid. So we would treat our weak spade suit as a four-carder and open the bidding with one club. Now we have an easy rebid, and unless partner can voluntarily bid or raise spades somewhere along the line, the hand might play better in another strain.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:

A Richly Filmed, Well-Acted Product

'Bat Motel'

Nominated

SUGARLOAF SHORES, Fla. (AP) — A "bat motel" built to lure nocturnal visitors here has never done much business, but it's been around long enough to be nominated for placement on the National Register of Historic Places.

Sugarloaf Shores was developed as a fishing retreat in the 1920s by Richter Clyde Perky. But Perky discovered he couldn't attract many guests with all the mosquitos in the area.

Working on the theory that bats ate mosquitos, he ordered construction in 1929 of a 30-foot wooden tower filled with bat droppings in hopes of luring the flying mammals.

Although there was an abundance of bats in the Florida Keys then, "no bats ever showed up" at the motel, according to Fred L. Johnson, 75, who built the tower.

If the shingled tower is accepted for placement in the register, Sugarloaf Shores would become eligible for a federal grant to preserve the structure, according to Wright Langley, director of the Historic Key West Preservation Board.

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The last time PBS offered a Mark Twain sample, you had to lock away sharp objects and household poisons before viewing it. It was called "The Humorist's Dark Side," or something equally bleak, and while its point was expertly struck, you didn't necessarily feel good about seeing it.

Oh, how happily opposite is tonight's PBS offering of Twain. This is the Mark Twain of the wry smile: "Life on the Mississippi," the author's memoirs of his youthful riverboating experiences.

Richly filmed, superbly acted, it is filled beginning to end with the telling of extravagant yarns, illuminations of the American character and the pure, naked joy of a boy steaming down-river on a paddle-wheeler.

David Knell plays young Sam ("Mark Twain") Clemens, a 20-year-old innocent yearning to be a riverboat pilot. The man who can make him one by taking him on as his "cub" is Mr. Bixby (Robert Lansing) — dashing, in a weathered way, and clearly a pilot of heroic accomplishment.

Mr. Bixby, who has "always found that cubs are far more trouble than they're worth," is none too encouraging.

Condescending to take the boy on, Bixby asks, "How do you feel about sudden death?"

"I can't say I favor it," young Clemens responds.

Thus begins the education of Samuel Clemens. Bixby is an unyielding catechist, abiding nothing less from his student than a knowledge of the river as complete as his own.

It's impossible, of course, and Bixby isn't inclined to spare the chides.

"Taking you by and large, boy," Bixby says after one Clemens misstep, "you do seem to be more different kinds of ass than any creature I ever saw."

Or, "I do believe you are the stupidest dunderhead I've ever saw or heard of. The idea of you bein' a pilot, why, you don't know enough to pilot a cow down a damn lane."

The gruffness is a facade, of course, and a warm affection fast develops between cub and pilot, a sentiment fired in the boy's heart by Bixby's deft night crossing of a boat-hungry bend in the river.

And there is that element of sadness that can be found residing in most of Twain's works wedged between youthful dreams and blunting reality. When young cub Sam comments to the second pilot that the raw, terrible beauty of the river seems to fade with complete knowledge of it, the pilot responds:

"There's not a pilot goin', boy, who hasn't pondered all that, who doesn't sometimes wonder whether he's gained most or lost most by learnin' his trade."

The wisdom and insight is handed out with great gobs of wit; and there is a goodly portion of riverboat exaggeration. Of a slow boat, one pilot offers, "She raced with an island and lost."

That slow? "She was so pokey, she burned down and was five years before her owners found out."

A good evening's entertainment, this. "Good enough," to borrow from Mr. Bixby, "to make a man go out and learn to spell the word splendiferous" just to write a column about it.
