Italian Earthquake Death Toll Now Estimated At Over 3,000

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
NAPLES, Italy (AP) — The Italian Military Rescue Command estimated the death toll in Sunday's earthquake at more than 3,000 today, making it Italy's worst quake in 65 years. The director of relief operations, Giuseppe Zamberletti, said 1,750 people were known killed, 570 missing with little hope of finding them alive, and 1,879 injured. But the rescue command's office in Naples said it estimated at least 3,132 dead on the basis of reports from previously isolated villages in the mountains behind Naples and Salerno. The Interior Ministry said there were 100,000 homeless, and seismologists reported that more than 40 aftershocks shook the region since the initial quake Sunday night. They said a new tremor in Avellino, east of Naples, knocked down buildings damaged in the first jolt. The Italian military announced that 500 soldiers and 150 pieces of equipment left the northern city of Milan to reinforce the 10,000 soldiers and 1,500 firemen already in the zone digging for survivors. Residents of Laviano, Santomenna and other towns dug through the ruins with their hands in search of husbands, wives, children or other loved ones. Exhausted rescue workers were short of bulldozers and other equipment to clear the rubble. It was difficult to get the large vehicles available up the narrow roads in the impoverished region. "I couldn't even get a chain saw to save my wife who was trapped under a pile of logs," said Alfonso Mignone, a lawyer in Sant' Angelo dei Lombardi. "I had to work with my fingernails." Fragmentary reports indicated hundreds more dead were still to be counted in Teora, San Mango, Lioni, Laviano and Calabritto. In Lioni, 10 search dogs helped find survivors beneath the rubble. Teora, a town of 3,000 was reported leveled, but there was no casualty report from it yet. Bodies were collected in schools or on sidewalks. Blankets covered them until coffins could be brought in. Pope John Paul II planned to tour the stricken region by helicopter today. Press reports said he would stop in Naples, Potenza and the village of Balvano, where 100 or more people were killed when the quake occurred during Mass Sunday night.

DEVOURING CELL — A newly discovered form of white blood cell called the medusa ensnares red blood cells in a manner that puzzles scientists. The cells use tentacles up to ten times the size of the cell body to pull in other cells, and sometimes devours them. They were photographed by Dr. Jacob S. Harker of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, using a new stain technique. (AP Laserphoto)

Voting Date Is Set

The Pitt County Board of Elections, meeting this morning, set Feb. 17 as the date for the city-wide referendum on the sale of liquor by the drink in Greenville.

The board's action followed a Nov. 13 vote by the City Council to request the county elections body to conduct the mixed beverage referendum. The council, acting on a request by the Greenville Restaurant Association to call for the public balloting, voted by a four to two margin to support the group's request.

Margaret Register, supervisor of the county elections board, said that the board received the request from the council on Nov. 14 to conduct the referendum, pursuant to General Statute 18A-51 (b) of the alcoholic beverage law.

Miss Register said the Feb. 17 referendum, which falls on a Tuesday, will involve poll hours of 6:30 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. and registered citizens living within the city limits of Greenville will be eligible to vote.

She pointed out that registration books for those persons who are not already registered will close on Monday, Jan. 19 at 5 p.m. The new registrations, as well as address changes, will be accepted up to the Jan. 19 deadline, the elections official said.

Annual Rate: 12.2

Consumer Prices Still Up

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by surging mortgage rates, consumer prices in October climbed another full percentage point for a 12.6 percent compound annual rate, the government said today.

October's 1.0 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index matched September's rise, the Labor Department said. For the first 10 months of 1980, inflation at the consumer level accelerated at a compound, seasonally adjusted 12.2 percent annual rate.

Last year's inflation rate was 13.3 percent.

The persistent, double-digit inflation rate helped to further erode a worker's pay check in October. The Labor Department reported that real spendable earnings — after deducting Social Security and federal income taxes — decreased 0.6 percent.

Over the year, average take-home pay, after seasonal adjustments, is down 6 percent, the department said.

The inflation report said about three-fifths of October's price jump was due to spiraling housing costs, which increased 1.3 percent after three months of virtually no change.

Food prices, the big villain in recent months, rose by far less in October — 0.7 percent, compared with 1.6 percent in September. But that masks a strong upward trend that will continue through the next six to nine months, said Labor Department economist Patrick Jackman.

The Agriculture Department predicted last week that Americans will pay 10 percent to 15 percent more for food in 1981, particularly for beef, pork and poultry products.

"There's no doubt that these food items are continuing to increase," Jackman told a reporter. "There will be periods of abatement like in October, but the trend is definitely up," he added.

The Labor Department reported that:

— The price of a house rose 1.5 percent, while mortgage rates jumped 1.9, the biggest monthly increase since June. Rents rose 1 percent, the same as in September.

— Prices for food bought at the grocery store advanced 0.8 percent, following much larger jumps in the previous three months.

Smaller increases for pork and poultry, plus price declines for fresh fruits, vegetables and beef caused the moderation. Cereal and bakery products rose by a sharp 1.4 percent and sugar cost 4.6 percent more than in September.

— New-car prices declined 1.5 percent in October after rising 1 percent the month before; used-car prices were up 5.5 percent after surging 5.6 percent in September. Airfares rose 1.5 percent.

— Gasoline prices, which had declined for five consecutive months, rose 0.3 percent.

— Heating oil prices declined 0.7 percent and charges for gas and electricity were down 0.4 percent.

— The cost of entertainment rose 0.5 percent, half the increase in September.

— Medical care increased 0.8 percent, the same as in September.

— The cost of apparel and its upkeep rose 0.5 percent, following a 1.3 percent jump the previous month.

"Energy will be the real key to whether inflation remains high or becomes intolerable," Jackman said. "Nobody has a real hand on it because it's more political than economic."

He called the energy situation "reasonably tolerable for the next couple of months." Home heating oil will go up a little, but its supply is good, he said.

Mortgage rates, however, "can only get worse," Jackman said. He envisions rate jumps of 1.5 percent to 2 percent in each of the next two months.

The Consumer Price Index in October stood at 253.9 before seasonal adjustment. This means that a market- (Please turn to Page 5)

New Blood Cell Found

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Discovery of a new form of white blood cell may open the way to advanced research into cancer, allergies and parasitic infestations, scientists say.

The cell, named Medusa for its tentacle-like appendages, apparently devours other cells, including white cells, red blood cells and platelets, said its discoverer, Dr. Jacob S. Harker, a researcher at the University of North Carolina.

"It's a basic discovery looking for an application," said Dr. John Laszlo, clinical director of the Comprehensive Cancer Center at Duke University Medical Center in Durham.

Harker said the cell's function may not be beneficial. But Laszlo said it "may have a function in cancer research ... (and) may have applications in research of allergic disorders and parasitic infestations."

Harker described the Medusa cell as a form of the eosinophil, a white cell discovered more than 100 years ago by Nobel Prize winner

Paul Ehrlich. The function of the eosinophil is still a mystery.

"The normal white cell kills bacteria," Harker said. "This kills other cells."

Harker said the cell uses its tentacles to attack as well as to provide transportation. He said it is not yet known if the Medusa destroys only diseased cells or eats normal cells.

"I'm fascinated that we've looked at blood cells for many, many decades, and the fact that this escaped our attention because the technique used by Dr. Harker is different from the way we've normally looked at blood cells," Laszlo said.

Laszlo called the discovery "extraordinarily interesting."

Harker discovered the Medusa by accident while doing dental research in the detection of acute myeloid leukemia. He then consolidated his research with a team of scientists doing cancer research at UNC and Duke.

California Has 6 Fires Fanned By High Winds

By BRIAN BLAND
Associated Press Writer
SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Six fires pushed by winds up to 90 mph roared out of control over 30,500 acres of timberland today after burning nearly 240 homes and forcing about 10,000 people to flee, authorities said.

One blaze was headed "over the hill" north of San Bernardino 75 miles east of Los Angeles into the mountains toward several towns. Part of southern Crestline was being evacuated early today, said Jimmy Jews, spokesman for the San Bernardino Fire Department.

Jews said at one point Monday night more than 100 homes in a 10-square-block residential area of northern San Bernardino were in flames, and one entire city block of homes in the $80,000 to $100,000 range was destroyed.

The two major roads into the mountains, Highways 18 and 330, were closed as the fire jumped Highway 18 and threatened the tiny exclusive community of Arrowhead Heights.

Another swiftly moving brushfire that broke out early today in the Malibu Canyon area of Los Angeles County was whipping south toward the Pacific Coast Highway after burning more than 2,000 acres within two hours.

Some residents in Malibu Canyon, about 30 miles west of Los Angeles, were being evacuated, and two major area roads were immediately closed, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Still another fire threatened the entire village of Mount Baldy in the Angeles National Forest west of San Bernardino, and three blazes were out of control in Riverside County to the south.

The latest fires came just 10 days after firefighters controlled a 6,600-acre Bradbury fire, which developed 20 miles southwest of Mount Baldy and destroyed 55 homes and damaged 27 others for a loss of $25 million.

Senator Wants Navy Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, in line to be chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee in the new Congress, says rebuilding the Navy should have a top priority with the incoming Reagan administration.

The Texas Republican said the United States should establish a permanent carrier fleet in the Indian Ocean to protect oil shipments from the Persian Gulf.

"Today, this economic lifeline could be broken by the Soviet Union, and neither we nor our allies could do anything about it," Tower said in a speech Monday at an Overseas Writers Club luncheon.

Special Committee To Assess PCC Building Needs Named By Board

A special committee to assess the building needs and appropriate methods of financing such was named during the Pitt Community College Trustees board meeting yesterday by Chairman

Clifton W. Everett Sr. Appointed to the special committee were Kay V. Whichard, chairman; A.B. Whitley Jr., Henry Oglesby, Vernon White, and Raymond Reddick. The appointees were also approved by the board during its meeting.

The board approved a report from its building committee chairman, A.B. Whitley Jr., to formally accept a machine shed building that had been recently completed and considered acceptable.

Requests from the PCC administration to transfer certain state and local funds within the existing budget were also approved by the trustees.

Chairman Everett informed the trustees that the date and plans for the dedication of the Kay Whichard and Vernon White buildings had been rescheduled for spring, 1981, due to delays in getting outside letters for the names of the buildings.

The need for additional facilities at Pitt Community College was highlighted by a report from President Fulford and deans Edgar Boyd and Ed Bright. Fulford reported that curriculum enrollment was up 19.6 percent over fall quarter, 1979, and that technical and vocational enrollment was up 18.2 and 12.8 percent, respectively. College transfer enrollment accounts for 9.7 percent of the college's total enrolment. Fulford also stated that full-time enrollment was up 29 percent.

A brief review of the critical building needs of the college, both long and short range, was given by Dean of Instruction Ed Bright. He presented growth figures in enrollment and other data that reflected the need for additional vocational and technical shop/lab facilities for industrial maintenance mechanics and instrumentation programs/courses, electronics, data processing, machinists and nursing.

Other facility needs cited by Dean Bright included additional facilities for the Learning Resource Center, general classrooms and faculty and staff offices.

Chairman Everett told the committee to "assess the institution's present and future facility needs, develop (Please turn to Page 6)

Dear Abby

Family Totem Pole Has Slippery Sides

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: CURIOUS asked, "Which is the hardest? Being the youngest, middle or eldest child?" You replied, "It all depends where you're coming from."

Well, I'm the youngest, and I think being the youngest is an advantage. Sure, I got plenty of hand-me-downs, but they were mostly good as new and I was always the best-dressed kid in my class.

Since I was the last one to leave home, I was treated like an only child and got plenty of attention and love. Because my folks were much better off financially after my brothers and sisters left home, they were able to do more for me than they did for the others.

Also, I had plenty of examples to follow. My parents were more relaxed and made fewer mistakes raising me than raising the older ones. I honestly can't think of any disadvantages in being the youngest.

LUCKY IN NEW CASTLE

DEAR ABBY: I think being the oldest child is definitely the hardest — especially when there are only two in the family and they're both boys.

I'm the oldest, and when a fight breaks out between me and my brother, I'm always blamed. They say, "You're older and you should know better."

Being the oldest means that you start out being an only child, then all of a sudden you've got to share your parents and divide everything with another child. And the baby gets more attention just because he's little and cute and helpless. It's only normal to be jealous of him.

Being older means having more responsibility, like looking after my little brother. My parents give me the job, but they don't give me the authority to do any hitting.

If I could choose, I would be the youngest.

RICKY IN KANSAS CITY

DEAR ABBY: The middle child definitely gets the worst of it. If the oldest accomplishes something, it's a big deal because it's the first time. Same with the youngest, because "the baby is growing up."

When the middle does it — nothing. It's neither the first nor the last.

The middle child is second in everything. Never first.

Do you know what it feels like to be introduced by your parents? It goes something like this: "This is our oldest. And this is our youngest. And the other one is Kathy." You feel like nothing.

I'm sure parents don't realize they do this. Maybe this will help.

A MIDDLE NOTHING

DEAR ABBY: I'm the youngest in a family of five children. When our mother died at 77, she left a houseful of lovely antique furniture, plus enough silver, linen and china to open a store. She also left some valuable heirloom jewelry. She didn't leave a will, but guess who got first crack at everything?

Mother's first-born daughter, of course.

GYPPED IN JOPLIN, MO.

DEAR ABBY: You ask, "Is it better to be the youngest, middle or eldest child?" Strange you should ask.

I have three sisters and two brothers — all older, married and living lives of their own. I've never been married and probably never will be.

I'm home caring for my mother who is 88 and has been an invalid for 19 years, and my father who is 90 and blind. You may sign me, "The youngest," or . . .

53 AND TRAPPED

Car Hits Pole At Bells Fork

Gregory Gene Bazemore of Winterville, was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign and having improper brakes following investigation of an 11:05 a.m. Sunday collision at the intersection of Secondary Roads 1708 and 1725 at Bell's Fork, which caused an estimated $6,000 property damage.

Investigating Highway Patrolman M. B. Johnson said the Bazemore car was traveling east on 1708, failed to stop for the stop sign at the 1725 intersection, ran into a ditch, then collided with a utility pole. The force of the impact, the officer reported, broke the pole, and two transformers on it caught fire when they fell to the ground.

Bazemore and a passenger in the car received minor injuries from the mishap, which caused an estimated $2,500 damage to the car and $3,500 damage to the pole and transformers.

Robbery Of Pizza Hut Investigated

Greenville police are pressing their investigation of an armed robbery at the Pizza Hut at 305 Greenville Blvd. yesterday afternoon, during which an armed man tied two employees in a bathroom and took money from the cash register and the company safe.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the robbery occurred about 3:15 p.m.

He quoted Pizza Hut employees as saying a man entered the restaurant, went to the restroom, then left.

About five minutes later, he returned, asked the price of a pizza, then produced a revolver and forced the hostess, Cynthia R. Drenta, into the kitchen area where they met took Lawrence H. Lee.

Cannon said the intruder then forced both employees back to the front of the building, and demanded the money from the cash register and safe.

After placing the cash into a bag for the robber, Cannon said Lee and Ms. Drenta were taken to a restroom, where they were tied with a pair of socks and a small rope, and told to count to 400 before they attempted to escape.

The chief noted that the two Pizza Hut employees left the restroom area after about two minutes and reported the incident.

Pizza Hut officials told police that an estimated $450 was taken in the robbery.

Teacher Award Is Presented

Mrs. Vera L. Claybrook, an English teacher at Ayden-Gritton High School, has been named the Pitt County Teacher of the Year for 1980-81.

She will compete in January in Williamston in the district competition.

Mrs. Claybrook has taught for 29 years in Pitt County schools. She is a career member of NCAE and ACT. A graduate of Atlantic Christian College, she has also attended East Carolina University and done graduate work there. Claybrook says she has enjoyed teaching from the start.

"I have always enjoyed it," she explained. "I was influenced from the beginning by a teacher I had who read things to me and really sparked my curiosity. Her enthusiasm and zest made me want to teach."

Claybrook feels she has always been able to communicate with her students. "Our relationship has always been one of give and take," she said, "and one of respect. I love children, I always have and I always will."

In addition to a love of children, the teacher of the year feels enthusiasm in the classroom is important. "A teacher must possess enthusiasm," she commented. "If the teacher is enthusiastic, then the children are — it rubs off."

Discipline, to Mrs. Claybrook, is entwined with respect. "Discipline is not taught, it is absorbed and comes with the respect."

Mrs. Claybrook competed with 14 other teachers from the county schools for the Teacher of the Year Award. On October 30 the teachers were screened by a committee consisting of principals, counselors, students, parents, board members and others. Questions asked the contestants vary from philosophy of education to success in disciplining.

The award was presented at a luncheon for the 15 contestants held earlier in November at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. "This is the happiest moment of my teaching career," said Mrs. Claybrook when she received the award.

waistline and long illusion sleeves, which were also lace trimmed. Seed pearls trimmed the lace cuffs of the sleeves. The long full skirt extended into a chapel train.

The bride chose a fingertip length mantilla bordered in lace with an illusion blusher flowing from a lace cap etched with seed pearls. She carried a nosegay of white carnations and pom poms accented with baby's breath and streamers trimmed in lace.

The honor attendant wore a light blue floor length gown of polyester organza designed with a standup collar, lace trimmed sleeves and sash. She carried blue tinted carnations tied with blue streamers. The bridesmaids wore light blue full length organza dresses styled with capelet sleeves and ruffled bodices. They each carried a white mum accented with baby's breath with blue and white streamers.

The flower girl selected a floor length white dress and carried a miniature bouquet styled like that of the bride.

Miss Cindy Jones presided at the register.

After the ceremony, the bride's parents and her aunt, Mrs. Helen Hill, entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

The couple will live in near Greenville after a wedding trip to Virginia.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of North Pitt High School. She works at Winn Dixie and he works at Garner-Wynne-Manning.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Delicate shadings of yarn and simple straight stitches create beautiful Bargello pillows, suitable for any type of decor. These needlepoint designs are centuries old, but can look as modern as tomorrow depending upon your choice of colors.

The pillow on the right features a small rose design in each of the center circles. The rose motif is worked in a basic tent stitch surrounded by Bargello stitchery. This design is beginner-easy while the pillow on the left would be considered an intermediate level design.

To obtain directions for making both pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. NP-448 with $2.00 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order a kit for making either pillow by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. For the pillow on the left, send $16.00, requesting Kit 448-A; for pillow on right, send $19.50, requesting Kit 448-B. Each kit contains instructions, interlock canvas, Persian-type yarns, 14-inch pillow form and needle. Fabric backing for pillow is not included. Please specify your choice of brown/beige tones, coral/russet tones, blue tones or bayberry green tones.

DEAR PAT: I have been told that I should never use a strand of yarn longer than 18 inches for needlepoint. With this length strand, however, I spending a great deal of time threading the needle with a new strand and securing the old and new strands. Is it really necessary to work with such a short length? — Mary Sue, Milwaukee, Wis.

It all depends, Mary Sue, on the mesh size of your canvas and the type of stitch used.

In years past, most needlepointers in this country worked everything on reasonably fine mesh canvas, using the small diagonal tent stitch covering just one mesh of the canvas with each stitch. For this type work, the length you mentioned would be just about right.

The reason for the short length was because each time the needle passed through a hole of the canvas, tiny bits of the yarn fiber would cling to the canvas, causing the yarn to wear thinner with each stitch.

Much of today's needlepoint, however, is done in pattern stitchery with each stitch covering several threads at once.

The Bargello pillows shown today, for example, are worked with a straight stitch covering four canvas threads for every stitch. Obviously the yarn will not wear thin as quickly as when each stitch covers only a single thread.

You would not cut your yarn into lengths four times as long, though, as a 72-inch length of yarn would be too awkward to work with. Personally, I would never try to work with anything more than a 32-inch length.

Also, if you are working on a 14-mesh canvas for one project and a 7-mesh canvas for another, you can use longer strands for the 7-mesh canvas. Trial and error is probably the best way to find out the proper length for any given project. Cut a strand of yarn the length you think is best and work a row or two of stitches on a scrap piece of canvas.

If the stitches at the end of your row are obviously thinner than those at the beginning, you should be working with a shorter length. Some yarns will leave more fuzz on the canvas than others, also, so for these various reasons, I would suggest that you always test for the proper length rather than depending upon some hard and fast rule.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Birthdays are getting a terrible reputation in this country. Six of them have already been declared "milestones" and several others are under consideration.

I'm not really sure what this means except when you hit a "milestone" your mind shifts gears, your new age doesn't fit any part of your body, and your sense of humor goes underground.

What made me think of this was a letter from a girl named Charlotte who goes to college in Virginia. She wrote to ask why everyone thought her 18th birthday was such a big deal. Her friends treated it like a timetable. According to them, age 18 is jump-out-of-the-cake time. Time to buy-beer, watch X-rated movies and swing whether she wanted to or not. As everyone pointed out, "You're only 18 once."

I think I've hit most of the milestones and I've always been intrigued with the myth surrounding them vs. the reality.

Take age 21. Everyone said, "It's the best year of your life." The reality: I hadn't finished college, didn't know where the tuition was coming from and according to my vocational guidance scores had a big future in license plates. My wisdom tooth was coming in weird, I was the only girl in North America who wasn't going steady, and my mother said you're not getting any younger.

At age 30 I was told, "These are the years you'll look back on and want to relive." The reality: My husband worked from daylight until dark and the baby wore orthopedic shoes that cost $34 a pair and were outgrown every three weeks. I got a water heater for my birthday. I wanted long fingernails and a dinner ring. I saved money for three months to have my hair frosted.

Age 40: Everyone said, "Next week you won't even remember hitting 40." The reality: These stupid remarks were made by well-meaning people who were only 31 at the time. I remembered them every time I saw my mother's hands coming out of my coat sleeves. Every time I used Erase for my wrinkles and my entire face disappeared. I remembered every time I ate lunch and had to rest while it digested. I remembered every time I spent $30 to cover God's frosting.

Age 50: Everyone said, "You got it made. Just sit back, relax, and enjoy it." The reality: We installed a revolving door in the house for the returning children. The dress I could afford now only came in size 10. And the idiot who said, "You're only 50 once," didn't know about women.

I have not hit the last "milestone" yet, Charlotte, but I'm like you. Don't tell me what to expect. Just let me be surprised.

Suddenly the front door flew violently open and in rushed a band of hideous Dracoë.

"Sheezabird!" cried their chief, "Your money or your life!"

Sheezabird paled, "I have no money," she cried. "There is nothing of Value in this house except that Kosta Boda vase from Ariane Clark on the mantel there."

"From Ariane Clark!" cried the chief. "O Class!" And he grabbed the vase and ran triumphantly out of the house, followed by the other hideous Dracoë, all laughing fiendishly.

"That was sure close," said Sheezabird, and fainted.

Everybody soon went out of the house because there was no cheese or anything.

Prejudice Dies Hard

At East Carolina University there is a program which offers a minor in journalism to interested students. It has been highly successful. Among its graduates are those now working at the Fayetteville Observer, Charlotte Observer, Associated Press in Raleigh and our own Daily Reflector. Others have gone on to communications-related fields.

Almost to a person those who have gone through this program in the past several years have told us that if a journalism major had been offered they would have opted for it. There is also a communications program offered on campus and it, too, has been successful. Other related courses, such as advertising, are offered in various departments and schools.

So it is contended, why not bring these courses together and offer a communications major which would embrace all phases of journalism and best serve the students who have already proven they are highly motivated for this profession?

It would be assumed no one could argue with the logic of that. It is just what is supposed to happen in the academic world — a constant upgrading and improvement of the curriculum offered. It is going on at all campuses of the University of North Carolina System and all good college and universities of the nation.

No one could question it? Someone has. Apparently there is some movement to fight this simple and perfectly logical change in a program which has already proven itself.

We are surprised, although we shouldn't be. Old prejudices die hard.

Cabinet Make-Up A Tip-Off

Ronald Reagan, after a trip to Washington, flew back to his home in California where this week he will be choosing his cabinet.

The choices made will tell the public much about what kind of policies to expect from the new administration.

Chances are there will be some familiar names in the list, but also there will be some not-so-well-known to the public.

We will all do well to inform ourselves of the backgrounds of these new cabinet members if we are to understand the directions the nation will take in the next four years.

School Bus Losses

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Waste, mismanagement, and outright thievery are costing North Carolina taxpayers millions of dollars each year in the operation of the state's school bus fleet.

A study commission of the General Assembly, told the facts and figures resulting from a probe by State Auditor Henry Bridges, is now intent upon changing the way the system is operated in an effort to plug the holes.

Nobody can give a reliable estimate of how much is being lost, but knowledgeable sources put the figure somewhere over $5 million each year.

"We are looking at what is happening with a view to correcting the problem. That may mean a state takeover of the entire transportation program, even though this may be seen as state control over local school programs," State Senator Helen Rhine Marvin, chairman of the committee, commented.

From the auditor's report, and from reports from budget and transportation experts in state and local agencies, legislators have learned that:

Stealing

—Theft of gasoline and other material from school buses is reaching epidemic proportions in some areas, but security measures are not uniform nor required.

—There is no equity in how local systems operate, with state guidelines on distance from school to qualify for a ride, waiting times for students running late, and no stops closer than two-tenths of a mile being widely ignored.

—Operational costs vary so much from one county to another that the simple figures alone sound a warning signal that something is wrong. The lowest per student cost, for example, is under $50, while the highest while the state buys new buses to replace worn out ones, and hire any aides or monitors over and above the state allotment of drivers and mechanics. Auditors found another $6 million not is more than $170 per year.

—The state does out the funds but has no clearcut way to determine need, or control spending. The system ends up with local units getting pretty much what they ask for, and despite a 12-member staff and the annual expenditure of $323,000 for a state supervisory unit in Raleigh and in regions, the reams of data collected are not put to use, and local units in effect tell the state supervisors to leave them alone.

The state this year is paying more than $87 million for transportation of students. Local school units must provide only garage space, buy the new buses when enlarging the fleet

Other Editors Say Timely Warning

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Edgecombe County Sheriff Phil Ellis recently sounded a warning that should command full attention from citizens of this area.

The warning was directed to deer hunters, who will be in the field early and late on into next year.

It brings to mind many grief-stricken hours that occur annually when a friend or loved one falls victim to a careless shot. This is all the more tragic in the knowledge that such accidents are really avoidable.

Four main points were stressed by Sheriff Ellis in his warning to hunters:

—Be certain that all firearms are in safe condition.

—When you shoot, be sure your target is a deer and not a fellow hunter or a person taking a casual stroll through the woods.

—Be up to date on the state's rules and regulations on hunting.

—Respect the rights of the land owners.

It's as simple as all that.

However, one must take into consideration the hunter who fires at anything moving in his path; the fellow whose gun has not been cleaned since it was last used; the temptation to hunt after hours; and failure to obtain permission from the owner before hunting on his land.

Most of the fatalities and near-fatalities can be traced to failure to observe the points emphasized by Sheriff Ellis.

Almost everyone knows of instances when a friend, a relative or a neighbor has been killed or maimed by a hunter who really had no business being in the woods in the first place.

Deer are numerous in the area and satisfying the desire of the hunter can be easily realized.

Hunting with high-powered rifles is not permitted, thus reducing the danger of being struck by a stray bullet.

On grounds leased by hunting clubs care has been taken to space deer stands at distances that make it virtually impossible for the hunter to be hit — unless he strays from his stand.

Of course, there are the poachers who often face as much danger to themselves as for other hunters by their failure to observe the rules.

Let's hope that every effort is made to see that those who carry guns into the field and woods have met all the regulations and that the long deer-hunting season will be accompanied by safe and sane action on all sides.

Hunting is much like driving when it comes to safety. Obey the rules and regulations, conduct yourself in a cautious and reasonable manner, and above all, give high regard to the safety of others.

Strength For Today

BASIC CREED

Many years ago there was a young Frenchman who loved to boast of his atheism and made a continuous display of impiety. He was especially critical of evangelists and scoffed at their repeated assertion that Christ died for man's sin. Even his companions, quite as unbelieving as he was, winced when they heard him cry out gayly, "Christ died for my sins, and I don't care."

But somehow or other, this impious young man was converted and became a clergyman. How he never seemed to tire of relating how he had once hated religion and all that religion stood for and how God in his mercy had reached down and made him a true and happy believer.

There are many people who would class themselves as orthodox in matters of faith, but who, in the bottom of their hearts, care not at all that Christ died for them. Yet it is this atoning sacrifice which is the basis of all Christian happiness. Without it there is no foundation for our faith. —Elisha Douglass

Camera In Courtrooms

WASHINGTON — The immediate question before the Supreme Court, of course, is whether Noel Chandler and Robert Granger got a fair trial, and doubtless this is of immense importance to them. The larger questions are of abiding importance to everyone else.

Chandler and Granger formerly were police officers in Miami Beach. They were convicted in 1977 of burglarizing a restaurant. Now they are challenging that verdict on one contention only — that the televising of their trial in itself denied them due process of law.

The Supreme Court heard argument in their appeal on November 12, amidst a flurry of hostile questions from Chief Justice Burger and a couple of friendly questions from Justice Rehnquist. If the convictions of Chandler and Granger are to be affirmed, the high court will have to overrule its 1965 decision in the case of Billie Sol Estes. In that case a slim majority of the court held that in a notorious trial, television is so "disruptive" that a defendant's constitutional rights are denied him.

Overruling the Estes case shouldn't prove an impossible task, and in my own view this should be done. Television has come a long way since October 1962, when Estes went on trial in Tyler, Texas. Not only in the technology of TV, but also in the public's awareness of TV, the whole medium has vastly changed.

Estes was charged with swindling. At a pretrial proceeding in September 1962, a dozen TV cameramen crowded into the courtroom with tripods and lighting equipment. "Cables and wires snaked across the floor," the Supreme Court would later observe. Microphones were clustered on the judge's bench. The atmosphere "was not one of that judicial serenity and calm to which the petitioner was entitled."

At the trial itself, a month later, the TV cameras had been relegated to an unobtrusive booth in the rear of the courtroom. Only the opening and closing arguments, and the return of the jury's verdict, were telecast live. Videotaped segments, without sound, were shown on evening newscasts in the area

Even this limited coverage was too much for Justices Clark, Douglas, Goldberg and Warren. They agreed that unconstitutional "disruption" is caused not solely by the physical presence of a camera, but also by "the awareness of the fact of telecasting."

Justice Clark, writing for the court, conjured up horrible speculations of witnesses who might be rendered tongue-tied or cocky, of jurors who might later be harassed on the streets. Justice Harlan, reluctantly concurring, saw no constitutional prohibition against television coverage of routine cases, but notorious cases, he felt, were something else.

Four members of the court dissented in the Estes case — Justices Stewart, Brennan, White and Black. All save Black are still on the court. All five members of the majority have died or retired. Today's Supreme Court has a fresh shot at an issue of continuing concern to the press, to the people, and to the principle of federalism.

Eighteen years after Estes, TV cameras are as familiar as lamp posts on the American scene. Today's equipment is neither intrusive nor disruptive. And the eye of the camera, looking impassively upon a courtroom, often can tell the American people more about the administration of justice than those of us in print journalism can convey in words. Is a judge abusive, or sleepy, or drunk on the bench? I have known such judges. Is a prosecutor competent or incompetent? I have known both kinds. Television could be the greatest mechanism ever devised for promoting respect — or disrespect, as the case may be — for the administration of justice. The

How To Tilt Tip O'Neill

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan got solid advice on how to approach Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill on the delicate matter of committee duties: Butter him up, ask about his wife, Millie, and tell him how much you will welcome him to the White House.

The advice-giver was canny Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona, who is voluntarily stepping down as minority leader and probably knows O'Neill better than any other Republican. At issue was the refusal of O'Neill and the Democratic majority, which lost 33 seats in the election, to increase Republican ratios on committees — especially appropriations and rules, where the Democratic edge is about 2-to-1.

Rhodes advised Reagan to play heavily with O'Neill on the well-known fact that when President Carter arrived in Washington four years ago, he gave the O'Neills the back of his hand. Reagan accepted the advice, but it is too early to predict whether it will work or not.

A Footnote: Leading the battle for additional committee seats for the replenished Republicans is Rep. Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican policy committee. He has enlisted aid from the soon-to-be Senate majority leader, Howard Baker. If O'Neill refuses to compromise, Baker will retaliate against Senate Democrats.

False Colors In Moscow
National security members of the Reagan transition team were boiling that Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, a Kissinger-trained detestant, did not vigorously enough knock down news reports depicting him as an agent of President-elect Ronald Reagan on a post-election trip to Moscow.

Those reports incorrectly made Scowcroft seem to be an "advance man" sent by Reagan to sound out the Russians on U.S. relations and new SALT negotiations. That caused a stir in the Reagan transition because of Scowcroft's background: Henry Kissinger's deputy and later his successor as national security adviser. Scowcroft is definitely not regarded by Reagan's national security aides as part of the incoming team. To them, he is Kissinger-tainted. Scowcroft's visit to Moscow with a group of American foreign policy experts who have little politically and less philosophically in common with the president-elect was a surprise to most Reagan insiders — and to Reagan himself. They first learned about it by reading the newspapers.

Brock At State?
Republican National Chairman William Brock, who may not get the secretary of commerce post he covets, has been offered the possibility of a prestigious subcabinet post: deputy secretary of state.

The idea intrigues Brock, who previously had turned down the idea of going to Brussels as ambassador to NATO. Brock has no intention of going back to Tennessee to seek the Senate seat he lost in 1976. There still remains an outside possibility that Brock will serve another term as national chairman, particularly if no high-ranking post in the administration for him opens up. There are no notable prospects for chairman. Drew Lewis, the Pennsylvania political operative who played a key role in the national Reagan campaign, is not interested (though he has put in a bid to be secretary of transportation).

Conservative Watchdog
Board members of the American Conservative Union (ACU) elected Oklahoma's Rep. Mickey Edwards as national chairman only after expressing considerable doubt that a member of Congress can maintain enough independence from the Reagan administration to be an effective watchdog on the right.

Edwards replaced the disgraced and defeated Rep. Bob Bauman of Maryland as ACU chairman. His election came as conservatives were expressing fears that President-elect Reagan was being surrounded by Nixon-Ford veterans who would press moderate appointments and policy on him.

ACU board members expressed doubt that Edwards as a member of Congress could take a sufficiently detached view of the new administration to criticize a leftward drift. Edwards assured him that he could,

Inflation Is Used To Winning

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the nation's financial centers these days the two biggest questions are how long the Reagan stock market will continue, and how long the "recovery" will last if interest rates don't fall.

The two concerns are really one, and that much seems clear to anyone who managed a grade C in Economics 1. But it apparently isn't clear to those who have been vigorously buying stocks in the past few weeks.

The prime interest rate has ascended to 17 percent, and you don't have to look long in the literature of financial forecasting to find those who believe it will continue rising, maybe to 20 percent or more.

Meanwhile, inflation continues just as if it hadn't heard of the new president-elect and wasn't concerned about his promises to stand firm against its advance.

Inflation is confident; it is used to winning.

What drives the stock market ahead, in spite of what used to be very serious obstacles, seems to be a widespread conviction that eventually Reagan will triumph over high prices, interest rates, and taxes.

That brings up the question of how much can the market discount and how far ahead can it look. Almost all analysts agree that no matter how successful Reagan is eventually, he faces serious problems immediately.

Value Line Investment Survey, the largest advisory service, observes that high unemployment, inflation and interest rates "will almost certainly be a deterrent to renewed economic growth." It adds:

"Rising interest rates directly affect almost all sectors of the economy. The recent upturn in these rates threatens to choke off the recovery which only recently appeared."

The depth of the problem has been stated several times in the past few weeks by Henry Kaufman, a partner in the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers and a profound commentator about credit markets.

"It would be dangerous for us as citizens and for our new political leadership to bask in the hope created by the election," Kaufman told the New York State Bankers Association on November 21.

Inflation prospects are almost everywhere, said Kaufman. In wage demands, in deregulated oil prices, in food products. And the credit system, he said in effect, is now unlike anything in our lifetimes.

He noted that debt continues to grow rapidly — at an annual rate of 11.5 percent in the 1970s compared with 7.5 percent in the 1960s.

"If this acceleration continues in the 1980s, then there will be no way out except through the destruction of values and damage to our economic and political system," he warned. That's just the beginning.

If the credit system, and the high interest rates and prices, remain uncorrected, he said, "the worth of financial savings will continue to diminish rapidly" the flight away from financial assets will become prominent; and confidence in political, economic and financial contractual arrangements will dissipate.

Fiscal policy, said Kaufman, must gain credibility, and quickly, if a successful economic recovery is to be launched.

Therein lies a challenge to the new administration, to the stock market and to that vague measure of well-being that is commonly called consumer confidence. All are riding high right now.

But so are interest rates.

basket of goods and services that cost $100 in the 1967 base period sold for $253.90 last month.

The index is 12.6 percent higher than it was in October 1979.

Another troublesome inflation signal was posted Monday when the Federal Reserve Board reported that the money supply category including cash in circulation and checking deposits at commercial banks grew $1.8 billion in the week ended Nov. 12, from a revised $388.4 billion to a seasonally adjusted $390.2 billion.

And the board said the money supply figure that also includes checking-type deposits at other financial institutions expanded $2.4 billion in the period, from a revised $413.1 billion to a seasonally adjusted $415.5 billion.

In addition, the board also increased sharply its money supply figures for the week ending Nov. 5.

"This strongly confirms the possibility that (1980) money supply targets will be exceeded," said David Jones, an analyst for Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

Marchers In Tax Protest

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Approximately 40 Harnett County residents marched to the county office building Monday night to protest what they consider are high local taxes.

Following an American flag, the group marched to the beat of a drum and chanting "reduce taxes now" and "airport, no," in a pouring rain.

The group, calling itself Harnett County Citizen's For Tax Reform, Inc., was protesting the present tax rate of 89 cents per $100 valuation.

Donny R. Phillips, the group's president, spoke before about 200 people who had gathered at the office building and presented the Harnett County commissions with a 7 point petition bearing the signatures of nearly 10,000 Harnett County citizens.

Phillips called on the commissioners to reduce the 1980-81 tax rate by 25 percent in 1981-82. Phillips also requested a Jan. 15 public meeting in Lillington.

"Taxation without representation is not the American or Harnett County way of governing," Phillips said.

Jesse Alphin, chairman of the board of commissioners, said the people had to make "hard choices" on whether to demand more police protection, senior citizens programs, recreation programs, waste disposal, and health programs. "If we want these things we're going to pay for them," Alphin said.

in the transportation budget, but being spent directly for transportation — items like training drivers, paying claims, hiring clerks, and paying social security — so the total expenditure is more than $93 million yearly.

Big Business

Riding the bus has become so commonplace that about 72 percent of all pupils in the state now get a free ride, and the budget represents almost six percent of the total education budget for the state. The 12,298 vehicles carried 724,029 students daily and piled up more than 100 million miles last year.

Here is what the auditors said of the system: "In effect, the local units have no incentive to operate efficiently because they have a blank check to spend whatever is needed to operate their system as they consider necessary....

"Thus, the state provides funding for operations over which it has no control. In our opinion, meaningful cost containment cannot be expected under such an arrangement. We believe legislative changes are necessary."

Top officials in the State Department of Public Instruction have embraced the criticism as "realistic" and support the need for legislative change.

(More Tomorrow)

"That is precisely why the Fed is tightening aggressively in recent weeks — out of fear the growing money supply will lead to a renewal of inflation," Jones added. "I think we'll see the Fed going all out to cool money growth rates for the rest of the year."

And, in an apparent reaction to the Federal Reserve's money-tightening moves, interest rates on short-term Treasury securities climbed Monday to their highest levels since early April.

For 26-week securities, the rate climbed to 14.03 percent, meaning banks and thrift institutions may, beginning Thursday, pay interest of 14.28 percent on six-month, $10,000 money-market certificates, up from the current 14.167 percent.

The Federal Reserve recently raised by 1 percent the interest rate charged member banks for loans and instituted a lending surcharge of two percentage points for large borrowers.

The tighter money policies, while aimed at tempering inflation, could dampen the economy, particularly the already-battered housing and auto industries, both very sensitive to high borrowing rates, said Otto Eckstein, head of Data Resources Inc., a leading forecasting firm.

"All this is fairly likely to lead to no economic growth in the first quarter (of 1981)," predicted Eckstein.

Would Revamp White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study recommending a thorough revamping of the Executive Office of the President says the White House staff should be restructured into economic, international and domestic units.

The report by the National Academy of Public Administration says the office has grown too large and inefficient. The study, released Monday, was drafted by the Commission on Presidential Management created by the academy.

Rocco Siciliano, co-chairman of the 26-member study group, said Edwin Meese III, director of President-elect Ronald Reagan's transition team, has read the report and met with the study panel.

County Council officers for 1981 were installed in a candlelight ceremony. They are: President Glenn Buck, Bushwackers; Vice President Rita Mize, Ayden Collardneers; Secretary-Treasurer Gloria Hinson, Fountain Trailblazers; Reporter Kelly Wall, Bushwackers.

A plaque was awarded to the club which had completed an outstanding community service award. The Clark's Neck 4-H Club was selected this year for beautification and clean-up around the church where they meet and their 4-H church Sunday program.

The Ayden Collardneers 4-H Club was presented the plaque for the most outstanding 4-H Club of the year. They were selected on an evaluation of project work, community service, county council participation and activity in county, district and state 4-H competitive events.

The Candlewick Flames 4-H Club was presented a club check for $50 for completing the most blue ribbon project books in 1980.

Four clubs received new club charters and flag sets for being organized and active for at least one year. They were: Record Breakers, Candlewick Flames, Bethel Blue Rams, and Ayden Collardneers.

Three "Friend of 4-H" awards were presented to outstanding county supporters of the 4-H program. They were given to Chuck Owens, Chuck Vallertson, and to the Winterville Jaycees.

According Dale Panero, "We have had a good year in the Pitt County 4-H program. As 4-H involves new volunteer leaders and a new audience of 4-H'ers, our 4-H program changes and adopts to the needs of our county's youth. We are thankful for all the support from parents, leaders and community resources and hope to grow and involve more youth in the year ahead."

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish workers today interrupted commuter service in Warsaw and the Baltic port of Gdansk, shut down five factories around the capital and staged a slowdown at nine coal mines in the southern province of Katowice.

The Polish news agency

PAP said the railway workers from Solidarity, the nation's biggest independent union, temporarily shut down service on commuter lines in Warsaw and Gdansk. The union staged a two-hour warning strike on the lines Monday and said the stoppage would be extended to four hours today.

The action came as union and government negotiators began their second day of wage negotiations in the locomotive roundhouse in Wroclaw, southwest Poland, PAP said. The Wroclaw local is negotiating the workers' demand the government accept their formula for distributing pay raises worth $6.3 million rather than one worked out with a rival, state-controlled union.

Solidarity's Warsaw local announced work stoppages today at five plants around the capital to demand the release of Jan Narozniak, a printer arrested in connection with the theft of a classified court document.

The shutdown of the five plants, including electronics and machine works, follows similar action at the Ursus factory, where workers shut down the assembly line Monday to demand Narozniak's release.

Dissident sources said Narozniak had been served with a 90-day detention order pending possible charges of revealing state secrets. If convicted, he could receive a prison term from six months to five years.

The solicitor general's office announced that one of its employees in the printing shop had been arrested and charged with leaking the document to Solidarity.

Workers at nine coal mines in Katowice delayed entry into the pits for two hours today to press demands for an extra dollar a day payment for underground workers, PAP reported.

"It was a wildcat strike," a Solidarity spokesman said. "We heard about it last night. We feel deep anxiety about the strikes."

Solidarity has clashed with the communist regime on and off since it was created in September following six weeks of crippling nationwide strikes. The union recently won an appeal over the wording of its founding charter when the Supreme Court ruled the charter did not have to assert the party's supremacy.

Representatives of state-controlled trade unions appeared in a meeting Monday with Premier Jozef Pinkowski for restoration "of order" in the union movement, PAP reported.

It quoted one speaker as saying the old unions could not accept the "situation of constant turmoil and chaos." Pinkowski told the group that the government did not expect "such an escalation of demands" when it signed the Aug. 31 Gdansk agreement establishing independent trade unions, PAP reported.

"We must oppose the extreme demands, as they accelerate the inflationary process," urging the state-backed unions to find a "common platform of action," PAP said.

Monster Telescope To Peer Into Remote Past

By TOM MURPHY

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Astronomers at the University of California here are designing the world's most powerful optical telescope, a 500-ton instrument which would allow them to see back to the earliest days of the universe.

The telescope, featuring a system equivalent to a mirror 396 inches in diameter, would be placed atop the Mauna Kea volcano in Hawaii, where the clear air should allow astronomers to see 8 billion to 9 billion light-years away.

"It would allow us to look back almost to the beginning of the universe. We would see galaxies the way they were 1,000 million years ago," said Robert Kraft, acting director of the university's James Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton.

The telescope would gather four times as much light as any existing telescope, allowing astronomers to see dim galaxies on the edge of the ever-expanding universe.

Optical telescopes differ from radio telescopes, which gather sound waves that can be translated into pictures.

Kraft said Monday that the new optical telescope would see galaxies in their formative stages, not as they are today, because light has to travel for so many years to cross the vast distances between the galaxies and Earth.

"When we look out in space, we look back in time," he said. "What we are trying to do is to make a breakthrough in science that can't be done with present telescopes."

"When we see those galaxies the way they were forming, we make the assumption that must be the way our own galaxy looked when it formed," said Kraft, administrator of the project.

He said electronic equipment has pushed the usefulness of light-gathering mirrors in existing giant telescopes to the limit and "the only direction to go now is for a bigger bucket."

Mauna Kea was chosen as the site because its summit of about 13,000 feet is above most water vapor in the atmosphere and its non-turbulent air allows a clearer view of the heavens.

Key to the telescope's design is the use of a mirror system made up of 36 hexabut he election did not erase all such doubts.

Although the chairman of the judiciary committee in the newly Republican Senate will be South Carolina's conservative Strom Thurmond, business lobbyists are worried that a shortage of Republican lawyers in the Senate may tilt the committee to the left.

Out of 16 new Republican senators, only four are practicing lawyers. Of these, three — state Attorney General Slade Gorton of Washington, former state Attorney General Warren Rudman of New Hampshire and former Philadelphia District Attorney Arlen Specter — are considered liberals. The fourth, Rep. Dan Quayle of Indiana, is a moderate conservative.

Since the judiciary committee traditionally is the exclusive preserve of practicing lawyers and there will be three or more Republican vacancies there, this creates a problem for Thurmond. One way out is to get sitting senators to switch to judiciary, but the committee's controversial agenda makes it politically unattractive.

people have a right to know how their courts are conducted.

My own chief concern is that the states not be denied their power to experiment in these directions. When Billie Sol Estes went on trial, only two states permitted TV in their courtrooms. Today 30 states permit at least some form of TV or still-camera coverage. Florida pioneered in the field, and I know of nothing to indicate that due process has suffered because of the privilege. For the Supreme Court to wipe out these experiments, the court must find in the Constitution some intimation that in every instance, TV prejudices a defendant's rights. For my own part, I can't believe that TV denied due process to Chandler and Granger — or to anyone else.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced moderately today, bouncing back from the sharp decline of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 21.42 points last Friday and Monday, recovered 2.05 to 980.80 by noontime today.

Gainers held an 8-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In the last two trading days, the market showed signs of weakening under the influence of rising interest rates.

Today the government reported that the consumer price index rose 1 percent last month, providing no sign of a letup in inflationary pressures.

But stock prices headed higher nevertheless, evidently buoyed by traders who had been waiting for a pullback to do some buying.

Several oil issues turned up-ward after taking a tumble on Monday, when the British government proposed a new tax on North Sea oil. Allied Chemical gained 1 1/4 to 57, and Amerasia Hess 1/2 to 48 3/4.

Tosco, which projected a decline in earnings for the fourth quarter from the previous three months, tumbled 4 1/4 to 38 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index rose 21 to 79.88. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.52 at 357.96.

Volume on the Big Board came to 24.45 million shares at noontime.

Section Of Pier Washed Away

AVON, N.C. (AP) — Ocean swells washed away a section of the Avon Fishing Pier for the second time this year Monday, forcing the pier to close for the rest of the winter season.

Swells up to 10 feet high wiped out about 90 feet at the ocean end of the wooden pier Monday.

"Every once and a while, we get damage like this," manager J.W. Cushing said. "It goes with living in this area."

N.C. Ski Resorts' Season Is At Hand

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's ski resorts begin their 19th season this week, opening what an industry spokesman says is a $36 million business for the state's mountain area.

Rick Coker, president of the North Carolina Ski Areas Association, said the 10 ski resorts help maintain the tourist-based economy of western North Carolina all year.

Coker said some 500,000 skiers spent $6 million directly last season and generated the spending of another $30 million.

Coker said most of the resorts have improved their snow-making abilities and offer a wide range of prices for ski lift tickets, rental equipment and lessons in weekend, holiday and weekday rates, group rates, special package rates and varying rates for adults, children and students.

One new resort, Scaly Mountain in Macon County, will be in operation this year. Scaly, located seven miles west of Highlands on N.C. 106, will open Dec. 15. The resort offers two slopes, a double chair lift and rope tow.

Most of the other resorts will be open by mid-December, but three open this week, although snow conditions are far from perfect.

Appalachian, on U.S. 321 between Boone and Linville, opens Thanksgiving. Seven Devils, near Boone, will open Friday. Cataloochee, located four miles off U.S. 19 above Maggie Valley, will open about Dec. 1.

suggested building plans to meet those needs and develop plans for adequately financing the building project.

According to Everett, "The importance of your task cannot be over-emphasized. Your suggestions, plans, and ideas will help chart the future growth and development of PCC."

President Fulford reviewed with the trustees the priority requests of the North Carolina Community College system for funding by the state legislature for 1980-81, 1981-82 years. Major requests include funds for equipment, improved funding per FTE, and construction. He stated that $33.2 million is needed by the system to replace obsolete equipment and provide appropriate equipment in adequate quantities.

New General Of Airborne

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Maj. Gen. James J. Lindsay, an officer with old ties to the 82nd Airborne Division and Fort Bragg, will succeed Maj. Gen. G.S. Meloy as commander of the 82nd Airborne.

Lindsay's last Fort Bragg assignment was as chief of staff for the XVIII Airborne Corps, but the 48-year-old officer has served also as assistant commander and chief of staff for the 82nd Airborne, nicknamed the "All-American Division."

Now commander of the U.S. Army Readiness Region VI at Fort Knox, Ky., Lindsay was promoted to major general in September 1978 at Fort Bragg.

In a telephone interview from his home at Fort Knox Monday night, Lindsay said his first task before taking command in January or February is to catch up on current activities of the 82nd Airborne.

"Division is a fast-moving place, and I've got to get a feel for what's going on there now," Lindsay said. "But I was Maj. Gen. Meloy's replacement as division chief of staff and assistant commander, so I know he'll have it in good shape for me."

"I guess there's a certain sense of embarrassment now that it is all over," Belker said. "It was certainly real to me, and I'm not an excitable type person."

Space Shuttle Moved To Assembly Building

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The beleaguered space shuttle has passed a major milestone with a 300-yard journey, and National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials say they're confident it will be ready for a mid-March launch date.

"If the next four months go as well as the past four months, we'll make it in March," John Yardley, associate administrator for Space Transportation Systems, said Monday after the trouble-free transfer of the squat, 75-ton orbiter Columbia from the Orbiter Processing Facility to the Vehicle Assembly Building.

The move, put off several times due to last-minute problems, came off without a hitch in about 35 minutes shortly after 6 p.m. Monday.

The Columbia's transfer after 20 months in the Orbiter Processing Facility was the start of a 36-hour process to mate the 122-foot long orbiter with its 150-foot external fuel tank and twin rmcket boosters.

After that, testing of the entire shuttle system will continue until it is rolled out to Launch Complex 39, the same launching platform used by the Apollo moon astronauts. That rollout is set for Dec. 26.

The shuttle program is three years behind its original schedule.

Some 2,000 workers, officials and reporters watched the rollout. Some of the workers cheered and applauded when the Columbia began moving.

The Columbia's two-man crew, John W. Young and Robert Crippen, was not on hand.

"Fantastic," and "Looks pretty good," commented Rockwell International Corp. workers who had installed 31,000 thermal tiles on the shuttle. Each of the tiles had to be individually contoured to the shuttle's skin.

The tiles, which will protect the shuttle and its astronauts from re-entry heat, had to be replaced when it was discovered that their bonding wasn't strong enough to withstand the pressures of launch.

The installation and testing of the lightweight silica tiles and intensive testing of the thermal-protection system have been the key factor in repeated delays and cost overruns.

The original cost estimate of $5.1 billion has soared to more than $8.8 billion, according to NASA officials.

After its post-Christmas move to the launch pad, the Columbia will undergo a brief flight-readiness test firing on Feb. 7.

The Columbia will be one of a fleet of four "space trucks" that will fly routinely between Earth and space once a series of test flights are complete.

Fire Damages Way House

An early morning fire heavily damaged the rear portion of The Way House at 2007 East Fifth St., according to Greenville Fire-Rescue Department spokesmen.

Officers said the blaze was reported at 2:51 a.m. They noted that the fire caused heavy damage to two apartments at the rear of the dwelling. Light smoke damage resulted to the main portion of the house, they added.

Marathon Slides Past Pirates, 103-83

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"It would be a grave mistake for anybody to believe that this is the East Carolina team that they will see on a night-to-night basis," Coach Dave Odom said last night after watching his Pirates open the season against Marathon Oil.

Before the game, Odom had said that winning or losing in the contest was not important, but he certainly didn't expect the Pirates to bow by a 103-83 margin.

The Oilers, playing in their 17th game of the season, were a much more polished unit than the Pirates, who were seeing their first outside competition. And it showed.

Marathon blistered the nets with a fine 53.2 percentage, including a 57.5 mark in the first half, when they built up most of the lead. East Carolina, which had shown fine shooting in its Purple-Gold game, found itself just a little long or short much of the night, and fired only 40.8 per cent for the game.

On top of that, the Bucs, who drilled in over 75 per cent of their free throws in the Purple-Gold game, managed only 37.5 per cent against the Oilers, hitting just three of eight.

"I have confidence in this team, and what I saw tonight is not what I have seen in practice," Odom said. "We probably didn't sell any tickets tonight, but that's going to be their loss (the absent fans) later on."

East Carolina led briefly in the game, during the early minutes, moving out by no more than two at one point and one at three other stages of the first five minutes of play.

Then, with 16:13 left, 6-11 Jim Andrews put the Oilers ahead, 8-7, and they pulled away from there on out. East Carolina managed to pull back only once after that, when Barry Wright hit with 13:51 left to tie it at 16-all.

Andrews, however, made two free throws, followed by baskets by Henry Ray and William Mayfield to run the lead to six. The Oilers eventually led by 22 before they began to slack off, missing eight of their 17 that were off-target during the final two minutes of the half.

In the second half, the Oilers eventually led by 32, 70-38, before the Pirates finally began to put things together and pull back to within 20 at the end.

"We were clearly outclassed, outplayed and outthusted," Odom said. "That won't happen often. I know the character of this team and I know they won't let it happen."

Odom said that Marathon was a difficult team to play. "They play at a very disturbing tempo. It is so uncollegiate. They weren't this good last year, either, and some of our guys seemed to fit into that tempo well."

Odom was also unhappy about the shooting. "We have good shooters, but I think the way they played, leaving us so completely open so early that we got unsettled. Their philosophy is 'I'll give you a shot if you'll give me one,' and they expect to get the last shot. They play three people at one end and two at the other. They leave you open to shoot, and we just weren't used to being that open that soon."

Williamston Tops Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — Williamston High School swept a pair of basketball games from Ayden-Grifton last night. In the boys' game, the Tigers posted a 53-44 win, while the girls took a 45-29 victory.

In the boys' game, Williamston jumped out to a 17-8 lead in the first period and never trailed again. The Tigers led, 25-14, at the half, only to see the Chargers rally, 16-10, to trail 33-30 going into the final period. Williamston outhit Ayden-Grifton, 18-14, in the final quarter.

Vincent Washington, Tom Bennett and Chris Peel each had ten, with Woody Sadler leading the way with 13 for Williamston. Edwards led Ayden-Grifton with 16 points.

In the girls' game, Williamston led 10-6 after one period and upped that to 23-12 at the half. They outhit the Chargerettes, 12-6, in the third and allowed an 11-10 A-G margin in the final quarter.

Theresa Duffy had 18 and Cathy Everett had 12 to lead Williamston. No one had double figures for Ayden-Grifton.

The Chargers travel to Roanoke tonight, while Williamston returns to action next Tuesday, hosting Ayden-Grifton.

Pam Pack Nips Jags

FARMVILLE — Washington took advantage of three forfeits to edge Farmville Central, 36-35, in an opening-season wrestling match for both schools.

The Pam Pack won the first two matches by forfeit only to see Farmville win the next three to take the lead.

Washington, however, then won three straight to take the lead for good. The Jaguars won three of the last four matches (a pin and two major decisions) but it wasn't enough.

The Jaguars play host to Camp Lejeune next Tuesday.

Summary:

The coach said that the Pirates would learn from the game. "I'm not that disappointed about anything except that we didn't really hustle well. I think we were somewhat intimidated."

While Odom started the tandem of Mark McLaurin, Michael Gibson, David Underwood, Mike Bledsoe and Mike Fox, he said he really has not settled on a starting lineup for Saturday official opener with Ohio University.

"I had some thoughts before tonight, but they were dispelled. I thought Tom Szymanski played well, as did Gibson. I'm talking about the whole time they were on the court. Some of the others played well at times. It's going to take a few more days of practice before I finally make up my mind. I don't really expect to substitute like I did tonight either, but we wanted to see what everyone could do."

Wright led the Pirate scoring with 14 points, while Underwood and Bledsoe each had 12 and Gibson and McNair scored ten each. Szymanski led the Pirate rebounding with nine, as the Bucs held a 53-48 edge in that department — one of the few led by East Carolina.

Mayfield sparked Marathon with 23 points and 18 rebounds. Andrews added 16 points, while Herbie Stamper and Henry Ray each had 15. Ron King had 14 and Bob Bender and Larry Stamper each had ten.

"This was a game to learn from," Odom said. "Nothing else." It does not count in the statistics for East Carolina, or in its game record.

The counting, however, begins Saturday, when the Pirates travel to Athens, Ohio, to meet Ohio University. They then go to the University of Maine next Wednesday, and are at home for their first true home game on Saturday, December 6, against Texas Wesleyan.

East Carolina Again Shooting For Top Mile Relay Honors

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The mile relay is fast becoming an institution at East Carolina. Last year the Pirate mile relay team wound up third in the NCAA meet, a finish which brought the Pirate quartet All-America honors.

Whether the Pirates can match that — or improve on it — this indoor season will depend in part on how quickly Coach Bill Carson's young recruits can replace two of the mainstays of last year's relay quartet.

Gone from last year's record-setting squad are All-Americans Stan Curry and Otis Melvin, who is now with the Muhammad Ali Track Club. Back, however, are junior Carlton Bell and sophomore Shaun Laney.

"I'm optimistic, but guardedly so," Carson said. "With the youth we have it's hard to tell. We're going to be good, but what will be important is how they handle jumping from high school to college."

"These kids were some of the best in high school, but they'll be competing against some of the best in the country real soon. Early on I expect they'll have their ups and downs."

They'll get a little stage fright, but by outdoors I expect we'll be running faster than we did last year."

Among those fighting for the two empty slots in the mile relay are sophomores Tim Cephus and Charles Watkins and freshmen Keith Clarke, Ray Dickerson, Craig Rainey.

Cephus, an outdoor standout last season in the 4 x 400, is perhaps the best of the bunch. So close are the remaining four that Carson has visions of running two relay teams at some of this season's meets.

"I really don't know who will be the top four," Carson said. "I'd like to run two teams in the East Tennessee meet (the Pirates' second of the season)."

No matter whether Carson runs one team or two, the Pirates will be seeing some of the best mile relay teams in the nation right away at the East Tennessee State Invitational.

"You know you've heard this is the year of the pass in football, well this is the year of the mile relay team in track," Carson said. "Right off the bat we're going to face some of the best teams in the nation at the Tennessee meet. Kansas will be there and so will Florida State, Morgan State and I think N.C. State is sending a team."

The Pirates also will compete in the Philadelphia Track Classic (Jan. 23) and the Wanamaker Games (Feb. 6) in New York this season.

One of the reasons Carson feels his mile relay and 4 x 400 teams may better last year's times is the improved weight training.

"This has been the finest fall workouts we've ever had," Carson said. "The new weight coach (Jeff Johnson) and the improvement in the weight room has really helped us. I can physically see the change in Clarke and others at practice."

"It's really been a good fall all around," he added. "I'm optimistic and I think the kids are."

NOTES...

Carson expects freshman Jimmy Wiggins and Rick Burke to also help the Pirates, if not in the indoor season than in the outdoor season, which begins March 21 with the Duke Invitational.

"This is Carson's 14th season with the Pirates. He coached at Furman and Florida before coming to ECU."

S'Wheels Split Two

The Greenville Steelwheels won two and lost two this past weekend in wheelchair basketball action.

The Steelwheels lost to Palmetto twice Saturday night, 64-39 and 46-33. James Breeze led the Steelwheels in scoring in both games with 20 and 10 points.

Sunday the Greenville club came back with two victories, defeating Asheville 47-32 and 56-45. Richard Hudson led the Steelwheels with 14 and 19 points in the two games while Breeze had 11 and 13. Miller Sanders had 10 in the first game.

Greenville is now 2-4 in the conference and 2-6 overall.

High School Coach Is Named To Replace Devine At Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Gerry Faust of Moeller High School in Cincinnati will travel a few miles up the road to become head football coach at Notre Dame, a destination that seems like a second home.

"I'm a strong believer in tradition and discipline in educating young people," Faust said Monday after being named to replace Dan Devine, who announced before the start of the season that this was his last year at Notre Dame.

"I don't believe there is a university in the country that combines these two items along with academic and athletic excellence better than Notre Dame does," added Faust, 45, who was to be introduced at a news conference today as the school's 24th head football coach.

Faust has been head coach at Moeller since 1963, during which time his teams have posted a 174-17-2 record. On Sunday, Moeller crushed Massillon 30-7 to win the Ohio Division I championship for the fifth time in the last six years.

Moeller finished the season with a 13-0 record, has won 33 straight and 70 of the last 71 games. Moeller also captured 12 greater Cincinnati football championships and three mythical national titles.

While some might not consider a high school program — even a fantastically successful one like Moeller's — sufficient training for a major college job, Faust's organizational skills and his program rival those already in place at many colleges. Consider the following:

—At Moeller, Faust had 18 assistant coaches, 15 of them working full-time. The program also had 25 student managers.

—From the sophomore class up, some 210 players participate in the program out of a total enrollment of just more than 1,000 students.

—Fifteen former Moeller players have played at Notre Dame, including six on the current Irish squad: linebacker Bob Crable, split end Tony Hunter, placekicker Harry Oliver, quarterback Tim Koegel, receiver Dave Condeni and defensive back Rick Naylor.

The selection of Faust was announced by the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame.

The Rev. Edmund Joyce, executive vice president of Notre Dame and chairman of the athletic board, said, "We feel quite strongly that Gerry Faust is the perfect individual to carry on the great tradition associated with athletics at the University of Notre Dame. I don't know of anyone acquainted with Gerry who doesn't have the greatest respect and admiration for him and his accomplishments."

Notre Dame, which is undefeated and ranked second in the Associated Press poll, was tied by Georgia Tech earlier this season and has only a Dec. 6 regular-season game remaining on the schedule at Southern Cal before meeting top-ranked Georgia in the Sugar Bowl in a game that could decide the national champion.

If the Irish succeed in winning the crown, it will be their second under the guidance of Devine. Devine succeeded Ara Parseghian in 1975 and won the national title in 1977 when Notre Dame upset top-ranked Texas 38-10 in the Cotton Bowl.

Devine has a 53-14-1 record at Notre Dame and his overall total of 173 victories is second only to that of Bear Bryant at Alabama.

His collegiate record is 173-54-9 since 1955, when he started his head coaching career at Arizona State. He concluded his stay at Arizona State in 1957 with a 10-0 season, then coached 13 years at Missouri, where he compiled a 93-37-7 mark.

Devine then took a fling at Green Bay in the National Football League and in his second season he had a 10-4 record to lead the Packers to the Central Division title of the National Conference.

He guided Notre Dame to victories in the Gator Bowl over Penn State in 1976 and Houston in the Cotton Bowl to end the 1978 season with a come-from-behind 35-34 triumph. He also led Missouri to four bowl victories.

DePaul Is Best Among Talented Midwest Teams

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

Basketball talent abounds in the Midwest from the El tracks of Chicago which border DePaul University through the central plains which house the powerful Big Ten and Big Eight conferences.

Strong teams with superstars capable of great achievements dot the midlands but the pre-season nod must go to DePaul.

Coach Ray Meyer, the grandfather figure, has a proven and veteran team returning led by All-American Mark Aguirre, player of the year last season, playmaker Clyde Bradshaw and awesome Terry Cummings.

The Blue Demons were picked second only to Kentucky in the preseason Associated Press poll, which is fine with Meyer whose team was No. 1 most of last season and then was ousted from the NCAA playoffs by UCLA.

DePaul isn't the only independent with lofty aspirations. Notre Dame is deep in talent with the likes of Kelly Tripucka, Tracy Jackson and Orlando Woolridge. And Marquette has a winning tradition to pass onto freshman sensation Glenn Rivers.

The Big Ten calls itself the strongest conference in the nation from top to bottom and backed it up last season with a 77.9 winning percentage against nonconference opponents in addition to sending four teams into the NCAA Tournament and three more to the NIT.

Indiana and Ohio State appear to be a shade above the others. Iowa, which made it to the final four of the NCAA, is a title threat.

Minnesota lost Kevin McHale but Coach Jim Dutcher has developed a lot of young talent and watch out for Illinois.

Indiana returns 13 of 15 players from last year's championship team including playmaker Isiah Thomas. Coach Bobby Knight also has outstanding players in Randy Wittmann, Ray Tolbert and Landon Turner.

Ohio State also has a veteran team with 6-11 Herb Williams ready to take over from Purdue's Joe Barry Carroll as the league's dominant "big man." Williams will be joined by Clark Kellogg and Jim Smith in the front line with Carter Scott in the backcourt.

Iowa has everyone back from the team that lost to Purdue in the consolation game of the NCAA except Ronnie Lester, who was hampered by injuries. Seniors Steve Kraficisin and Steve Waite, both 6-10, give Coach Lute Olson awesome size up front along with 6-6 Kevin Boyle, a unique talent.

Illinois has the forward tandem of Mark Smith and Eddie Johnson back along with centers Derek Holcomb and James Griffin. Freshman Derek Harper and junior college transfer Craig Tucker will solve Coach Lou Henson's backcourt problems.

The Big Eight has a national contender in Missouri but Kansas State and Kansas might not be far behind the Tigers.

Missouri has four starters returning, including 6-10 Steve Stipanovich, 6-8 Curtis Berry, 6-5 Ricky Frazier and Jon Sunvoid. But Mark Dressler, the sixth man last season, is out for the season because of a leg injury.

Kansas State has a superstar in 6-6 Trolando Blackman who made the Olympic squad. Injuries hampered Coach Jack Hartman's team last season but that didn't prevent Kansas State from giving NCAA champion Louisville its toughest game in the playoffs.

Kansas has Olympian Darnell Valentine returning and figures to improve its 15-14 record and challenge strongly in the Big Eight. Nebraska and Colorado figure as the darkhorses in the conference.

Bradley captured the Missouri Valley title last season by going from last to first, winning a number of cliffhangers along the way. The Braves, who again have Mitchell Anderson and his 20-point plus average, will be improved but hard pressed to shake the challenge of Wichita State.

Wichita State, led by 6-8 Cliff Livingston and 6-9 Antoine Carr, could be the favorite in the Valley. Creighton also could be a strong contender with the likes of 6-7 Kevin McKenna, George Morrow and 6-9 Jim Honz.

Loyola of Chicago will have a new coach in Gene Sullivan, an outstanding player in Darius Clemons and could repeat in the Midwestern City Conference.

Evansville, three years removed from the airline tragedy which wiped out the team, is expected to contend if 6-11 freshman Kenny Perry lives up to expectations.

The unpredictable Mid-American Conference has strong contenders in Northern Illinois and Bowling Green.

Northern is led by 6-9 Allen Rayhorn, one of four returning starters, and Bowling Green has four starters coming back from a 20-10 team which includes a budding star in sophomore Colin Irish, a leading scorer in Joe Faine plus 6-9 Mike Miday.

Los Angeles Brings More Misery To (S)aints In 27-7 Licking

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dick Nolan knows the ax is a little sharper after his New Orleans Saints bowed 27-7 to the Los Angeles Rams, but somebody else will have to swing it.

"I will not resign," Nolan said after the Monday night game that left the Saints 0-12 in the National Football League this season. "John Mecom (team owner) and I spoke briefly after the game, but I will not comment on the conversation."

The Rams, 8-4, administered an old fashioned country whipping to the Saints Monday night, outgaining New Orleans 393 yards to 96, sacking the quarterback eight times and allowing the Saints past mid-field only twice.

The victory kept the Rams one game back of Atlanta in the NFC West.

"The whole idea in football is to dominate the line of scrimmage," said Rams defensive end Fred Dryer. "If you can do that, you're going to win the football game."

Nolan agreed with Dryer's assessment.

"They were beating us on the line of scrimmage. We couldn't knock them off the line," he said.

The first quarter was scoreless only because the Rams stopped themselves.

A holding call stalled one drive at the New Orleans 36 and Frank Corral missed a 53-yard field goal attempt. The next drive stalled at the New Orleans 17 and Corral was sent back out of the game and told to sit out a play when he was found to have illegal tape on his kicking shoe.

Deprived of the use of their field goal kicker, the Rams had to go for it on fourth-and-four and fell short.

"He had tape covering the laces on his kicking shoe," said Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi. "Last week he had the same tape on, and nothing was called. That shows an inconsistency."

The lapses were eliminated in the second quarter and wide receiver Preston Dennard caught two touchdown passes for the Rams. One was a 31-yard halfback pass from reserve Mike Guman, the other a 16-yard toss from quarterback Vince Ferragamo.

Elvis Peacock scored a fourth-quarter touchdown on a 1-yard dive, and Corral booted two field goals — a 23-yarder in the third quarter and a 19-yarder in the fourth quarter.

The Saints scored on a 15-yard pass from backup quarterback Bobby Scott to tight end Henry Childs midway through the final quarter.

Every member of the Rams' defensive front got at least one sack, and linebacker Jim Youngblood got a pair.

Safety Nolan Cromwell came up with two pass interceptions that led to Corral's field goals.

Lifegate Falls To Faith, 41-35

GOLDSBORO — Faith Christian Academy downed Lifegate Christian of Greenville, 41-35, yesterday.

Faith was led by L.A. Benson with 14 points, while Lifegate was paced by Terry Duncan with 13 and Greg Jones with nine.

Now 0-1, Lifegate will play at Mount Calvary on December 2.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — IT IS TOO BAD THAT HONOR ROLLS ARE NOT EDIBLE.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: O equals D

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

By playing better bridge, France upset the United States to win the Sixth World Team Bridge Olympiad, which broke a drought of 20 years. France's last world team title was the first Olympiad in 1960.

This hand is from their qualifying match against Poland. North-South were using transfer bids—North's two diamond response showed a hand containing five or more hearts. Since responder could be weak, South could do no more than accept the transfer by bidding two hearts. North made the value raise to four hearts and the result of all this was that the strong hand was concealed.

Paul Chemla of Paris was the declarer. He received the lead of the ace of clubs, and West continued with a club to the king. If the defenders attacked diamonds early, it seemed that Chemla would have to lose two spades and a diamond as well as the club already lost, but the position was by no means clear to the defense.

At trick three, declarer led a low spade. Had West played low, declarer would have to decide whether to finesse East or West for the ten of spades. But West, fearful that declarer might be leading from the ace of spades, rose with the king. East played the six.

West kept the defense on the right track by shifting to a diamond—the king. East played the six and Chemla smoothly dropped the four, concealing the three. West was at the crossroads. Both the two of spades and the three of diamonds had not appeared. After some thought, he elected to continue with a diamond, and declarer was home.

He captured the queen of diamonds with the ace, drew trumps ending in his hand and then sluffed a spade from dummy on the jack of diamonds. Dummy's jack of clubs and remaining trumps took the rest of the tricks.

East might have made life easier for his partner had he dropped the ten of spades rather than the six. Wasting such a valuable card could have been costly, so we do not fault him.

ABC's Rebuttal Time Shocks Media

By PETER J. BOYER

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last April 3, Gerald Rivera, reporter for ABC's "20-20," did an investigative story on faulty aluminum wiring. In the piece, Rivera apparently hinted that Kaiser Aluminum knowingly passed off hazardous aluminum wiring.

Seems routine enough, maybe even a bit of a yawner, for Rivera. But the report touched off a fury, still unsettled, that may put a chill on TV newsmagazine investigations — or "trials by television," as Kaiser refers to the phenomenon.

Although Kaiser declined a chance to participate in the Rivera story, the company was predictably incensed over the report. However, Kaiser didn't stop at a little spilled choler.

The Oakland-based company demanded air time for response. ABC consented.

The capitulation, advised by network lawyers, shocked and angered many in the news department at ABC. But ABC attorneys apparently felt they had no case. And they did negotiate Kaiser down from its original 12-minute demand to four minutes.

Still, no network has ever yielded its air time for unedited response, a precedent that could make TV investigative reporting simply not worth the effort.

Don Hewitt, creator and executive producer of the prototype TV newsmagazine, "60 Minutes," said that program would not allow direct, unedited response. "If we make a mistake, we'll correct it ourselves, on the air," Hewitt says.

Said Paul Friedman, producer of NBC's "Magazine":

"It's inconceivable to me that we'd give that kind of rebuttal time."

Indeed, even an FCC

lawyer expressed some surprise over ABC's easy capitulation.

"We've made it very difficult" for the subject of a news story to intervene, the attorney said, "because of the First Amendment guarantee of a free press."

"Why ABC did it is something we'll never know."

Why did ABC do it?

The FCC has never forced a station to yield rebuttal time to subjects of a network news program. News programs are exempt from the Fairness Doctrine, and news programs (except documentaries) are exempt from the "personal attack" rule, which allows redress against unfair programs.

"20-20" has not been ruled an exempt news show by the FCC, but only because no case against the show has ever been filed before the FCC. "60 Minutes" and even NBC's "Today" show have news status, and therefore, protection.

No one at the network will comment on the matter, claiming it is still under consideration. It's still under consideration because Kaiser finally submitted its rebuttal a month ago, and the rejoinder was so cranky it inspired second thoughts at ABC.

Clearly, ABC's original decision was made by lawyers, not journalists, and it was made in an atmosphere of increased corporate activism in the media.

Last year, for example, when "60 Minutes" suggested that the Illinois Power Co. mismanaged the construction of a nuclear power plant, the power company demanded — and got — on-air corrections of two mistakes and then produced and distributed its own video rebuttal to the "60 Minutes" piece.

And companies are increasingly pressing networks to accept their issue-oriented advertisements, which all three networks have thus far resisted.

Indeed, Kaiser fairly bounded for joy when ABC conceded air time.

"Where the trail may lead with the wall once having been bounded no one can tell," wrote a Kaiser executive, encouraging other corporations to fight "trial by television." "The precedent set could be of real importance in the future."

If there is a chilling effect on TV journalism, says Kaiser's Art Miller, "We think that would be good."

"The medium is unique. In print, offended parties have redress through letters to the editor, they reach the same audience that the story reached. But in TV, without issue-advertising access, you can't reach the same audience. We don't feel there's adequate response opportunity."

If ABC does finally air the Kaiser response, it will try to couch it by adding further comment of its own, creating a sort of "update" effect. But the message will be well-taken by other parties wishing to subvert TV investigations, and you can be sure the Kaiser case will encourage future demands for on-air responses.

If ABC yields, you can chalk one up for the gray suits. The easy way out will have been charted.

Journalism, and the public it intends to serve, will have another mark on the debit side of the ledger.

A ReviewBilly Price Has A Polished Act

For the past two weeks, people on campus and in town kept asking me, "Are you going to JJ's Music Hall Friday night? There's really a great band playing there."

After no one could tell me the name of the group — as if I didn't already know — I realized that Billy Price and the Keystone Rhythm Band had stirred up some excitement and curiosity in the entertainment circles of Greenville.

Billy Price and his six-piece rhythm-and-blues band performed at JJ's Music Hall on a Sunday night in the middle of October. Needless to say, the crowd was rather sparse, but the response from those few who attended was incredible. Jay Steinberg, co-owner of JJ's said that everyone kept asking him when he was going to get the group back.

Steinberg got the group back, and on Friday night, Price and his "boys" turned what Price's road manager, Dave Prelosky, called "a stonefaced crowd" into a "loose group of people having a good time."

Price's act is well-polished, and he is a true performer. With sweat trickling down the side of his face as he sways from side to side, Price extends his outstretched hands to the crowd as if giving a sermon. The well-rehearsed performance, Price's soulful voice, and the tight horn section make it seem like every song is being played for the first time. His songs range from funky, fast-stepping dance tunes, to the slow, heart-aching blues. From start to finish, Price captures the complete attention of his audience.

Raised in New Jersey, Price's musical interests date back to the middle 1960's. Instead of listening to the more popular tunes of the 60's by the Beatles or the Beach Boys, he was fascinated with the soulful rhythm-and-blues by James Brown, Otis Redding, and the Bobby "Blue" Band. It wasn't long after that that Price starting imitating James Brown and performing in talent shows and sock hops. After going off to college at Penn State, Price formed a band called The Rhythm Kings. The group was soon playing for fraternity parties and in the local bars in Pittsburgh. The group had a loyal following, but the members were burning themselves out by playing in the same clubs.

Price played with Roy Buchanan from 1973-74 and worked with him on a couple of albums. During that time, he toured with Buchanan, appeared on "In Concert" and played Carnegie Hall. After a year of musical incompatibility with Buchanan, Price quit his job. Shortly thereafter, he re-enrolled in school at Penn State and formed another band.

Billy Price and the Keystone Rhythm Band will have been together for four years in January. They are now touring the East Coast regularly, and their first album, "Is It Over" has just recently been released on their own label, Green Dolphin Records.

Price said that they thrive on the immediacy of a crowd, and the people in the South seem much more receptive to music once they get to know a band. They are going home for a couple of weeks to "recycle their batteries." But don't worry, they'll be back soon.

Hagman Missed 'Tonight' Show

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — When Larry Hagman failed to show up for a "Tonight" show appearance, his host threatened to shoot J.R....again.

Hagman, known to millions of Americans as ruthless oilman J.R. Ewing on the TV soap "Dallas," usually is fanatically punctual, but when the show finished taping at 6:30 p.m. PST Monday, he still hadn't arrived or called.

In fact, Hagman was caught in rush hour traffic during the 20-mile trip from the MGM Studios where "Dallas" is filmed to Burbank. He pulled into the NBC parking lot 10 minutes after the taping ended.

"If he wasn't caught in traffic I'd shoot him myself," grumbled guest host Joan Rivers as the show ended, leaving millions of "Tonight" show viewers in suspense.

The last time his friends remembered Hagman being late was in the 1960s, when he was filming "I Dream of Jeannie."

Royal Couple At Opera House

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived at the Brussels opera house to the cheers of 200 admirers and boos of a dozen Irish Republican Army supporters.

As Great Britain's royal couple appeared for a gala ballet performance Monday night, an unidentified man crossed police lines and several Belgian IRA supporters chanted "Elizabeth, go home! Free the Irish people."

Police were questioning four demonstrators.

The performance, marking Belgium's 150 anniversary as an independent nation, ended the first day of a two-day visit to Brussels by the queen and her husband.

Tough Guy Movie Roles Gave Raft His Reputation

State's Highest Honor Presented By Gov. Hunt

RALEIGH — Governor James B. Hunt on Monday night presented the 17th Annual North Carolina Awards to a poet and novelist, a choreographer, a medicinal chemist and a former governor and first lady.

The state's highest honor, the awards were presented at a special banquet at the Raleigh Civic Center. Final selection for the awards in literature, the fine arts, science and public service were made by the North Carolina Awards Committee, headed by Mary D.B.T. Semans of Durham.

This year's winners are: Literature — Fred Chappell of Greensboro, poet and novelist and professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Chappell received the North Carolina Award for Literature for his accomplishments as a novelist, short story writer, poet and teacher.

Chappell has been a member of the UNC-Greensboro English faculty since 1964 and is considered a major contributor to the national reputation enjoyed by the creative writing program there.

Science — Dr. George H. Hitchings of Durham, medicinal chemist and former vice president in charge of research of Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Research Triangle Park. established the North Carolina Dance Theatre as a professional affiliate of the School in 1970 and has since served as its artistic director.

Public Service — Former Governor Dan K. Moore and Jeanette C. Moore of Raleigh. Governor of North Carolina from 1965 to 1969, Moore received the North Carolina Award for Public Service for his leadership in that position and as a jurist.

Mrs. Moore, the former Jeanette Coulter of Pikeville, Tennessee, was cited in the award presentations not only for the active nature of her tenure as first lady but also for her work on behalf of the state before and since that time.

She includes in her present activities positions on the N.C. Museum of Art Board of Trustees, the Museum Building Commission and the Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities. She presently serves as executive director of Keep North Carolina Beautiful, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —

George Raft, the dapper veteran of 105 films whose underlying air of menace made him a natural for such roles as the coin-flipping gangster in "Scarface," has died at 85 after a lengthy bout with emphysema.

The aging actor, who also was linked with underworld figures in real life, was admitted to New Hospital one week ago and died Monday afternoon, said hospital spokeswoman Susan Lindquist. She said he had been in and out of a coma.

Raft recently had developed an "unusual blood condition" which might have been considered "pre-leukemia," said Dr. Rexford Kenamer, who had treated the actor for 20 years.

He said Raft had no living relatives, but hospital officials said a friend was nearby when the 50-year movie veteran died.

"I was sorry to hear the news. I've known this good man for 40 years and I loved every minute of our friendship," said Frank Sinatra.

Raft had been inactive professionally in recent years, although he made a cameo appearance as a gangster in the spoof "The Man With Bogart's Face" this year.

It was his performance as the cool killer in "Scarface" in 1933 that brought the dark-haired actor stardom and set off his career as a movie gangster. In his most famous scene, he flipped a half-dollar as he was gunned down by Paul Muni.

In the 1930s and 1940s he was one of Hollywood's highest-paid stars. He was in "Souls at Sea" with Gary Cooper, "Each Dawn I Die" and "Invisible Stripes."

Sometimes he played such straight parts as the truck driver in "They Drive By Night" with Humphrey Bogart and Ann Sheridan, or the entertainer in "Follow the Boys."

But most often he played men with shady pasts, as in "Background To Danger," "Mr. Ace," "Johnny Angel," "Intrigue," "Dangerous Profession," "Lucky Nick Cain," and many others.

When film styles changed, Raft began playing cameos in films like "Around the World in 80 Days," and "Some Like It Hot."

A product of New York's Hell's Kitchen, Raft was a boxer, electrician and baseball player before landing a job as a dancer in night clubs owned by New York underworld figures in the 1920s.

He became a vaudeville star and then moved on to films, first as a dance contest winner in "Taxi," a role friend James Cagney asked him to play. Raft was famed almost as much for his snappy appearance and entourage of beautiful women as for his acting.

In the mid-1950s, Raft left the silver screen for the gaming tables of Las Vegas and purchased a 2 percent interest in the lavish Flamingo Hotel. Recently he had appeared in a few TV commercials, often in prison garb, and spent his afternoons as a greeter in the Beverly Hills office of the Las Vegas Riviera.

Raft's money had vanished, partly because of his support of his estranged wife who refused to divorce him. He said he paid Grayce Mulrooney Raft more than $1 million by the time she died in 1970.

He made headlines in 1965 when he was convicted of income tax evasion and in 1966 when he appeared before a federal grand jury investigating Mafia financial transactions. When he sought to buy an interest in the Flamingo, the Nevada Gaming Commission said it was concerned about reports that he was an intimate of such reputed underworld figures as the late Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel.

In 1967, he was barred from England as an "undesirable." He had been working for a London casino, his last full-time employment.

"I've never been locked up, I've never taken a drink, I never hurt anyone, and I gave all my money away. So how come I got this bum reputation?" he asked in 1974.

In 1961, United Artists made "The George Raft Story," a picture Raft said concentrated on his roles as "an egotistical tough."

"I'm not like that," said Raft, who once pointed out he knew presidents and governors and never hurt anyone. "I think I'm a nice guy."

Two Wrecks Are Reported

Greenville police estimated $11,000 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated here yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:30 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 150 feet north of the Red Banks Road intersection, involving cars driven by Mary Elizabeth Downey of 34 Courtney Square Apts. and Kenneth Stanley Simpson of Carriage House Apts.

Damage from the collision was set at $2,500 to the Downey car and $7,500 to the Simpson vehicle.

Investigators reported an estimated $1,000 damage resulted to a car driven by Richard Perry Pierce III of C-7 Oakmont Apts., in a 6:45 p.m. incident on Charles Street, 485 feet north of the Oakmont Drive intersection.

Police reported the Pierce car slid into a roadside ditch when Pierce attempted to avoid a collision with another vehicle.
