Suggests Services Be Pitt Function

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon last night, at a joint meeting of the city council and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, suggested that the Pitt-Greenville Airport, emergency medical services and possibly Sheppard Memorial Library, should become total county functions.

The airport, EMS and library questions arose from an agenda item, "Percentage of participation in joint ventures."

In discussing that item and another matter on the agenda, "Participation in expansion of airport terminal," McGlohon said the city did not have the funds necessary to participate in a proposed expansion of the terminal building at the city-county owned airport at this time. However, he suggested city-county cooperation and joint effort might be expanded in such areas as risk management, equipment sharing, personnel management, and recreation.

"My question is maybe the airport ought to be a county function...emergency medical services ought to be a county function," the mayor remarked. "From the city's standpoint, emergency medical service care needs to be discussed," he emphasized, suggesting that the two governing bodies meet, "after the first of the year," to review the possibilities.

"I really didn't have any idea you all thought the airport ought to be county," commissioner Charles Gaskins remarked.

"If you are ever going to do away with this problem," of duplication in government, commissioner Bob Martin said, the only solution would be the formation of one administration for the county and city, "one government."

"Some counties and towns have done it," he noted.

In connection with another area of city-county cooperation — solid waste disposal — McGlohon asked if the county plans to maintain a solid waste disposal container at the site of the former city landfill, which had been operated by the county until the facility was filled several months ago, and if the county is looking for another landfill site.

Commissioner Charles Gaskins responded by saying, "no plans at this time are being thought about," to maintain a container site within the city.

Other spokesmen noted that county officials have looked at three possible landfill sites in the past six months, to be used when the present Allen Road disposal area is closed.

County Attorney W. W. Speight, responding to a question about payment for the liquor by the drink election, said after contacting the N.C. attorney general and State Board of Elections, the cost of the referendum should be, "paid for by the city."

City officials asked for the county's cooperation in formulating a new comprehensive land use plan.

McGlohon noted that representatives of the city, county, Pitt Memorial Hospital, East Carolina University, and the ECU School of Medicine, met last week to discuss the plan.

"It has to be a cooperative venture between those five groups," McGlohon emphasized.

The director of planning for the city, Bobby Roberson, said Greenville's original plan was developed in 1969. "The plan itself is vastly outdated," he said. "The emphasis tonight is to solicitate your input," into a new plan.

City staff planner Skip Browder explained that, "the charge that we've been given is taking a close look at physical development...look at where the city and environs will be in the year 2000...based on past performance and current trends...to get an idea of what the needs will be."

Councilman Louis Clark said that the plan should not be a, "one man show," but rather, a coordinated effort. "It will be some guidelines for both of us to look into."

The plan, according to Roberson, will take into consideration such things as energy, population, economics, recreation, water and sewer service, zoning, and others.

region by Tuesday evening. "We will set up a well-organized exodus for those who have survived in the towns choked with thousands of deaths," said Giuseppe Zamberletti, who was put in charge of relief operations on Monday.

"The model which will guide us will remain the Friuli emergency," he told a news conference. In 1976, when two violent tremors and torrential rains killed about 1,000 people in the northern Friuli region, Zamberletti bused and trucked 120,000 survivors to requisitioned hotels, pensions and private homes for the winter on the Adriatic coast. About 95 percent were able to return home eventually, but about 35,000 still live in prefabricated housing.

"We will give ample margin to local mayors, while using military support facilities in various areas," he said. "But we will not have the benefit of the numerous military bases of northern Italy, so we will have to fly many soldiers down."

The U.S. government announced it was sending 1,000 tents from military stockpiles in Europe, but Zamberletti said tent cities were only a partial answer. He said with winter at hand, they could not be used for "the old, the weak and the sick."

Speculate New Eruption For Mount St. Helens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Two strong harmonic tremors rumbled under Mount St. Helens this morning, leading officials to speculate the restless volcano may be building to another eruption, a Forest Service spokesman said.

Ben Hurliman, night director at the Forest Service volcano center, said the first tremor came at 2:43 a.m. and lasted 35 minutes, followed by a 15-minute tremor that started at 4 a.m.

"It was one of the bigger ones we've had so far," Hurliman said of the first tremor.

Harmonic tremors have continued at a low level for about a week. There was another strong seismic burst at 8:54 p.m. Monday.

The tremors, named for their rhythmic motion on seismographs in contrast to the sharp jolts of earthquakes, indicate the movement of molten rock within the mountain.

The pattern of tremors is similar to three weeks of seismic activity on the volcano before an eruption in July, Hurliman said.

"I think it's some kind of foreplay for another one (eruption)," he said. "Usually the events we've experienced the last six months get some kind of

Rain, Aftershocks Add Quake Misery

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer
NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Heavy rains and more aftershocks added to the misery of earthquake survivors in the Naples-Sorrento area of southern Italy today as workers kept digging for bodies. The chief of relief operations said he was planning the evacuation of many thousands of the homeless.

The Interior Ministry reported 3,000 bodies had been recovered, at least 1,300 more people were missing and 5,000 were injured. The ministry put the figure of those left homeless following the quake Sunday night at 50,000, but the army, which sent 10,000 troops to the area, reported 200,000 homeless.

The conflicting figures were typical of the chaos which has marked the three days following the quake and efforts to rescue survivors. The army blamed the Interior Ministry for the problems while opposition political parties blamed the government.

Volunteers and reporters beat official rescue squads to many of the destroyed villages, sometimes by 24 hours. In many cases, lack of bulldozers and cranes prevented removal of the heavy stones under which survivors still breathed.

It was Europe's deadliest quake in 65 years, since one in 1915 killed 30,000 people in the Avezano region of central Italy.

The continuing tremors brought down buildings that escaped the earthquake Sunday night and frightened the survivors bivouacking in parks, beaches and other open spaces.

"We have offered them school buildings, but they don't want to go in with anything over their heads. It is understandable because they were so shocked and frightened," Salerno health official Antonio Ercolano said.

Beary-eyed soldiers, police and firefighters helped grieving villagers dig out the living and dead from the quake. Rescue teams worked slowly because they did not have enough bulldozers or other equipment.

Fallen stones and collapsed bridges blocked many roads, but an Interior Ministry official said relief teams had reached every community in the stricken region by Tuesday evening.

"We will set up a well-organized exodus for those who have survived in the towns choked with thousands of deaths," said Giuseppe Zamberletti, who was put in charge of relief operations on Monday.

"The model which will guide us will remain the Friuli emergency," he told a news conference. Southern California Fires Racing On Out Of Control

By BRIAN BLAND
Associated Press Writer
SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Fires fanned by swirling "devil winds" of 55 mph raced unchecked across suburban Southern California for a third day today, routing hundreds more people in a region that has seen 50,000 acres and about 300 homes and buildings go up in flames.

A devastating brushfire called the Panorama fire just north of this scarred city of 112,000 residents, one of several still burning out of control, jumped Interstate 15E and swooped into the community of Devore. With four people already known dead in the fires that broke out Monday, authorities warned residents of 500 more homes to flee.

As three structures burned in Devore, firefighters stood watch in the driveways of nearby houses, trying to protect them, said Bill Johnson of the U.S. Forest Service. One firefighter at Devore suffered second-degree burns, he added.

The Panorama fire was the worst of the nine blazes that burned in five counties today, three of them in San Bernardino County. The weather service had forecast that the Santa Ana winds, the so-called "devil winds" that come down from the mountains, would abate today, offering a ray of hope to thousands of exhausted firefighters trying to head off the outbreak of fires that apparently have destroyed more homes than any other in Southern California in a decade.

But the winds had not died down this morning, and the Panorama fire was threatening the town of Crestline to the north in the San Bernardino Mountains, about 70 miles east of Los Angeles. Thousands of people have abandoned their homes since the blazes erupted Monday and some 400 were reported injured. Nearly 2,000 firefighters were battling the fires and 90 National Guardsmen were being sent today to help at the Lakeland fire near Lake Elsinore in Riverside County.

Nearly 300 buildings in San Bernardino either were in ruins or irreparably damaged as the Panorama fire raged. Within city limits alone, damage to 267 buildings — mostly homes worth $80,000 to $100,000 — was estimated at $25 million. Of those, 180 were completely leveled and the rest were charred hulks.

"Most homes seem to have been either totally destroyed or not touched," said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Marsha Brown.

About 25 small homes and cabins also were wiped out in the suburbs and foothills, and watershed valued at $4 million went up in smoke.

Not since September 1970, when the Newhall-Malibu fire destroyed 403 homes and left 10 dead, has there been so destructive a fire in Southern California.

There was no word on when any of the major blazes might be controlled. Few of the thousands evacuated reported to emergency shelters. Officials said it appeared most had taken refuge with friends or relatives as the fires raged.

The Panorama fire blazed through almost 11,000 acres by late Tuesday. It had been contained to the south, within city limits, but still was burning toward the west, north and east.

The burned bodies of Earl F. Welty, 83, and his wife Edith, 82, were found in their yard Tuesday after their children reported them missing. Welty was clutching the dead puppy he apparently was trying to save when they were overcome.

Joseph Benjamin, 54, died after suffering an apparent heart attack while trying to wet down his property. Rosa Myers, 64, also suffered a fatal heart attack after taking refuge in the home of a friend as her home burned, officials said.

Also in San Bernardino County, the Summit fire had burned 4,000 acres near Rancho Cucamonga.

Can't Keep Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Real earnings of families with at least one wage earner fell 4.2 percent during the past year because their wages could not keep pace with inflation, the Labor Department said today.

The department said median weekly earnings for working families rose 8 percent to $412 in the year ended in October. However, consumer prices during the same period rose 12.8 percent.

Median weekly earnings of individuals who worked full time rose 9.4 percent over the year to $266, but after adjusting for rising prices their real earnings fell 3 percent, the department said.

The median is the figure at which half the population is above and the other half below.

Weekly earnings of married couple families averaged $443 compared with $235 for families maintained by women and $371 for those maintained by men.

Because of the method of computing the figures, the decline in real earnings is not a simple subtraction of the wage increase from the consumer price increase.

CHARGE CARD SOUNDOFF

I went to buy some gas the other day and paid for it with Mastercharge. But when I started out to pump my own, the proprietor told me I'd have to get it from the higher-priced full-service pump. Mastercharge, she explained, charges the store four percent and they can't come out ahead letting the charge card customer pump from the self-service tank. This makes sense, I guess, but I feel that such store policy should be posted, so the customer could make a decision in advance. Another store owner once told me he couldn't take Mastercharge as payment for repair work. Again, he should have had a sign up to that effect, I feel. H. E.

STRONG MALE IMAGE NEEDED

The Pitt County Department of Social Services has asked Hotline to appeal for a foster home for a 15-year-old black male. "We feel it's essential that this child live in the home of a couple, the male member of whom can relate to and guide a boy with strength and love." DSS Worker Becky Starkey said. Anyone who can help is asked to call Ms. Starkey at 758-2167.

Search Continues For Escapee

Pitt County authorities are continuing their search for a man who escaped from an officer's custody and fled from the courthouse here Monday afternoon as he was being taken from a courtroom to a holding cell.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning that William Henry McDaniel, 29, of Eastwood Trailer Park, had been taken to District Court to appear before Judge Burt Aycock. The sheriff said that prior to the escape, Judge Aycock increased bond from $100,000 to $200,000 for McDaniel, who had been charged earlier with rape and first degree burglary in connection with an incident in Winterville involving McDaniel's estranged wife.

Sheriff Tyson reported that the alleged assault took place on Oct. 26 at 205 N. Mills Street in Winterville.

The sheriff said that the court officer was in the process of unlocking the holding cell door just off the courtroom behind the judges' office Monday when McDaniel fled from the officer's custody. Sheriff Tyson said that McDaniel ran through the courtroom past Judge Aycock, down the courthouse stairs, and left the premises.

The incident occurred around 5 p.m. as court activities were ending for the day, according to Sheriff Tyson.

PCC Presents 19 Certificates

Nineteen Pitt Community College students received Hospital Ward Secretary certificates during ceremonies at the Ramada Inn here last night.

Patricia Daniels, a member of the graduation committee, presented Mrs. Betty Robertson, a PCC counselor, who was the principal speaker for the program.

Mrs. Robertson said the woman who works is not alone. Over one-half of the women in the U.S. are working away from the home, as well as one-half of all mothers with children ages six through 17.

"We no longer can look at the old role models. We must ask each other for help and we must take risks, set long-range career goals, and be willing to accept responsibility for our successes as well as our failures," she said.

"I feel that education is one of the most important factors in career advancement. Each graduate should look at the more than 40 programs offered at PCC. These curriculums train graduates to fill the jobs most in demand by industry today. It is especially profitable for women to consider careers that have been traditionally male oriented," he noted.

Special awards were presented by PCC instructor Angela Buck. The achievement award went to Marsha Rentschler, while Janemarie Rodgers received the most likely to succeed award. The most congenial award went to Ellen Silverthorne. Graduates of the class were: Iristeen Atkinson, Rose A. Bernard, Brenda Fay Carr, Patricia Daniels, Gloria Harrington, Doris A. Hollis, Ethel Keys, Pat Pleasant, Marsha Rentschler, Jeanne Roberts, and Janemarie Rodgers, all of Greenville; Annie Best and Patricia A. Little of Bethel; Patricia Pittman, Kim Robertson and Ellen Silverthorne of Winterville; Eddie Holloman of Walstonburg, and Nettie Sharkshnas of Ayden.

Farm Bureau Meeting Held

Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee of Greenville and Brent Weisner of W. F. Ferris Company were principal speakers at the meeting of the Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors Tuesday night.

Hardee spoke on the necessity of the tax re-evaluation and discussed the procedure used to arrive at the new tax values. Weisner answered questions.

Farm Bureau president Atlas Wooten noted that farmers are very much concerned about the $2 per pound value placed on the tobacco quotas in Pitt County. In reference to this concern, a resolution was passed and will be sent to the State Convention in Raleigh.

The resolution states: "We propose that legislative action be taken to eliminate farm allotments being used as a tax base unless all other franchises or dealerships are taxed as an addition to the real property."

Delegates to attend the 45th State Farm Bureau Convention to be held in Raleigh December 7-10 were named.

Mrs. Lois Briley, chairman of the women's committee, made a report on the hospitality booth at the Tobacco Trade Fair. She reported that 22 counties helped serve 6,000 cups of coffee and nine cases of cookies.

The Rev. Patrick addressed the subject, "The Heritage and Future of Mount Olive College."

An Ayden native, Patrick has been a Free Will Baptist minister since 1946. He has served six churches including First FWB of Greenville, Free Union of Greene County, and Smith's New Home of Deep Run, and has been parliamentarian and president of the State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists and moderator of the Central Conference of the FWB churches in North Carolina. He has served his community through the American Red Cross, Heart Fund and Cancer Society drives, and as a volunteer fireman.

Prime Rate Is Still Increasing

NEW YORK (AP) — Several major banks today increased their prime lending rate by three-quarters of a percentage point to 17 3/4 percent, bringing their basic business loan rates to the highest levels since early May.

The move was initiated by Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third-largest commercial bank.

Among banks which quickly followed were Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Chemical Bank, both of New York, and First National Bank of Chicago.

The increases from the prevailing rate of 17 percent continued a trend of rapidly escalating interest rates in recent weeks. The prime stood at 14 percent only a month ago.

The rising prime rate reflects raising interest rates in money markets which have raised the costs of acquiring funds for lending at banks, analysts said.

Banks use the prime rate as the base rate for business loans. It generally applies to a bank's most creditworthy business customers and many pay more than that. But the prime rate is also watched as an indicator of general interest rate trends.

Although not directly linked to consumer loans, its rapid escalation signals tighter loan requirements or higher rates on many consumer loans as well.

The prime hit a record of 20 percent in early April before falling rapidly as the nation slid into a recession. The lows, of 10.75 percent at some banks and 11 percent at others, were reached in late July.

Collision Investigated

Mavis Wright Allen of Route 2, Greenville, was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 10:15 p.m. collision yesterday at the intersection of Evans Street and Arlington Boulevard.

Police Department investigators said the Allen car collided with an auto driven by Magalene Armwood Deans of 1404 Mill St., causing $700 damage to the Allen vehicle and $6,000 damage to the Deans auto.

Both drivers were reported injured in the mishap.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Piedmont Airlines recorded a 7 percent increase in passenger traffic during October, vice president W. R. Howard announced Tuesday.

Passenger boardings were up 504,534 or 7.14 percent over October 1979. Howard attributed the growth to expansion into new markets.

Class Toured Texasgulf Mine

The sixth grade class of Mrs. Suejette Jones at Wahl-Coates recently toured the Texasgulf phosphate mine and the Aurora Fossil Museum in Aurora. The tour was an outgrowth of a science unit on "The Earth's Past."

At the mine, students saw the huge open-pit mine where phosphate is mined to make fertilizer and other products. At the museum, they viewed a movie explaining how phosphate was formed about 15 million years ago in this area, then saw specimens of fossilized shark's teeth, shells and other marine life excavated from the mine.

Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Rita McDaniel, who sang "The Wedding Song" and "One Hand, One Heart" and by Mrs. Elisabeth Warren, organist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore an ivory gown of crepe and chiffon. The gown featured a sheer blouson overlay bodice and a lace Victorian neckline. Her wedding attire was accented by a veil of bridal illusion and alienon lace designed by her mother. The bride carried a cascade with a single orchid and stephanotis.

Ruth Ann Parker of Fayetteville was the bride's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Elisabeth Shilliday of Winston-Salem, Carolyn Pettigrew of Burlington, Lisa B. Tripp of Grifton and Melissa Warren of Greenville. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore formal gowns of pale pink tiana. Each carried nosegays of mixed fall flowers.

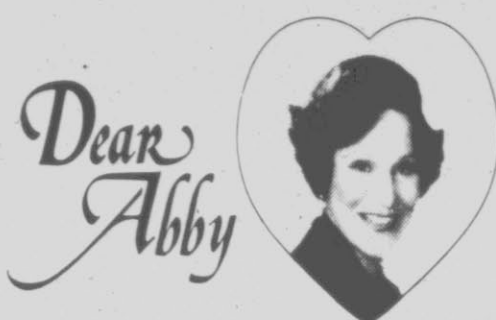

The father of the bridegroom served as his son's best man. Groomsmen were Terry and Bobby Phillips, brothers of the bridegroom, Keith West, brother of the bride, and Ed Burr of Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Louisburg College and East Carolina University and holds a B.S. degree in intermediate education. She is employed by Beaufort County Schools. Party Mood, Fighting Mood

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: About the question, "Who else is coming to the party?" You say it's bad manners to ask. I say, sometimes it's good to know.

I recently broke up with John, the man I had lived with for two years. It was a very unpleasant parting with much bitterness on both sides. All our friends were aware of it.

A couple with whom John and I had been very friendly invited me to a party and told me to bring a date. The man I brought was an old friend of whom John had always been insanely jealous.

When we arrived at the party I was shocked to see John there. I had all I could do to keep John and my date from each other's throats. Everyone there knew what was going on. It was a miserable experience.

Afterward I asked this couple why they had invited John and me to the same party, and they said, "You are both our friends, and we didn't want to choose between you."

They should have told me that they had invited John, so I could decline. Now I'm sorry I didn't ask, "Who else is coming?"

Do you still think that would have been rude?
SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR SAN FRANCISCO: No. In your case, it would have been shrewd.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for the letter from the policeman who resented mothers who threaten their kids by telling them that if they don't behave, a policeman will lock them up in jail.

I'm a nurse, and I resent parents telling kids who are in the hospital, "If you aren't good, I'm going to get the nurse and she'll give you a shot!" Then they wonder why kids are afraid of doctors and nurses.

My sister is a school teacher, and she has told me that parents threaten their children with "the teacher." Then they wonder why kids hate school.

JOY IN TULLAHOMA, TENN.

DEAR JOY: And in some quarters the surest way to scare a kid is to say, "I'm going to tell your mother." (And Mamma says, "Just wait until your father comes home!")

DEAR ABBY: It is appalling to think that people will stoop to sneaky, devious methods to get rid of their company. Whatever happened to honesty? What's wrong with saying, "Well, folks, I've enjoyed your company and we've had a pleasant evening, but it's getting toward my bedtime and it's time to say good night."

Then see them to the door cheerfully and go to bed without any feeling of guilt. A lie is still a lie.

HATES A LIAR

DEAR HATES: Nothing is "wrong" with simply announcing that the party is over and it's time to go home. But no matter how you phrase it, it's still sending the company home, and that takes courage.

DEAR ABBY: This is for SENSITIVE, who was embarrassed and annoyed because someone he called "English Teacher" insisted on correcting his grammar in the presence of others.

To paraphrase Lord Chesterfield's advice to his son: Wear your education like your watch. For use, and not for show.

Several art students at Rose High School received recognition in the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Art Contest. John Little won $50 and a plaque and for Rose's art department, $75, with his second place wood cut.

In addition, three students won honorable mentions for their entries: Brad Griffin, pencil drawing; AnaRita Weber, plexiglass etching; and John Joyner, scratchboard drawing.

The contest was divided into first through third, fourth through eighth and ninth through 12th grades. The final judging of over 600 entries took place Nov. 14.

Members of the Art Club have recently finished painting a mural in the school cafeteria. The mural, designed by President Brad Griffin, depicts the progression of a student's emotions on each day of the week. Art clubbers are presently working on ceramics, crafts and prints to sell at their annual Christmas sale to be held Saturday, Dec. 13, at Pitt Plaza. Other activities planned for the year include entering several local art shows, holding an art auction and taking a trip to the beach in the spring.

Other officers of the Art Club are Kathy Ridenour, vice president, Gray Garrett, secretary, Linda O'Leary, treasurer, Kim Fisher, publicity chairman, and John Joyner, sergeant-at-arms.

The Health Occupation Students of American recently celebrated HOSA Week. The HOSA Club is open to students interested in health careers and stresses leadership development. As part of the week's activities, club members made a banner and name tags for teachers and staff members. Throughout the week they gave free blood pressure checks to the faculty. On Wednesday, the students wore navy blue, white and maroon, the official colors of HOSA and on Friday, Mrs.

Energy Problems Ahead

There were reassurances during the presidential campaign that the United States had abundant energy. It well may, but energy such as shale oil, coal and undiscovered natural gas and oil has yet to be developed. It is unlikely that it will be in the first year, or even the first four years, of the Reagan administration.

The prospects are still for ever higher gas and oil prices and the possibility of shortages, depending on conditions in the Middle East at any given time.

It would not be practical to expect anything else in the near future.

The Senate Energy Committee reported last week that the United States is unlikely to become energy self-sufficient in this century. It urged the stockpiling of oil to tide us over in the event of international crisis.

It is obvious energy problems will be with us a long time. Even if the United States should manage to become self-sufficient, many of our staunchest allies are still at the mercy of the oil producing nations.

Abundant energy is a long way off and until it comes oil will be a major factor in international relations.

Plan Ahead For Fire Control

A disastrous fire, such as the one which hit the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas last weekend brings calls for tightening fire regulations in all cities.

Well it should.

Greenville and Pitt County have few tall buildings, but we should constantly be studying our fire evacuation plans, fire fighting techniques and building codes as related to fire control to be certain our structures are safe as we can make them.

There is no time to plan once a fire strikes. We must do our homework beforehand.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Major Culprit

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — While theft and abuse of equipment are taking their toll on North Carolina's school bus fleet, it is clear from an auditor's report turned over to a legislative committee that simple mismanagement is the biggest culprit in losses which cost taxpayers more than $5 million yearly.

Mismanagement is apparent in a comparison of cost figures from county to county which show the lowest operating cost per mile is in Iredell County at 39 cents, while Clay County shoots up to nearly 75 cents.

Iredell County also has the lowest per-pupil cost annually of under $50, while Madison County spends $107.79.

nearly half-a-million quarts of oil are used each year. The average quarts per vehicle is 36.92. In Union County, the buses average 64.63 quarts of oil each; just under 60 quarts in Robeson County; and all the way down to less than 20 quarts in Northampton, Scotland, and Franklin Counties.

Anti-freeze is another item measured. In mountainous Transylvania, Franklin, Mitchell and Lenoir Counties where the weather is colder than average, each bus uses control. That "blank check" approach creates a situation in which "meaningful cost containment cannot be expected..."

Two Ways

Two alternatives under consideration by legislators are:

— Allot transportation funds to each local school unit with the clear understanding that requirements exceeding the allocation are to be paid by local funds; or,

— The state would assume control, and would exercise supervision over bus routes and stops, maintenance schedules, qualification of personnel, ceiling on rates for contracted transportation, etc.

If the state takes control, regional parts depots, centralized garages, multi-county gasoline storage

GOOD LUCK, GENTLEMAN!

The Walking Wounded

WASHINGTON — You see them all over Washington these days. Bright young men and women in their best clothes, carrying their resumes in their briefcases, going from one private office to another hoping to land a job.

They are the walking wounded of the Carter defeat, which not only brought down a president but a Democratic Senate. There are thousands of them, hired without the protection of the Civil Service and now bright Republicans are going to get their jobs. Some of the wounded are qualified for the private sector and others, unfortunately, are not.

"Mr. Walcott, I've been reading your resume. But I'm not too clear on exactly what you did for the government."

"I was in planning and statistics and dealt mostly with credibility discrepancies and shortfalls in the oversight department."

"I see. Could you be a little more specific?"

"My department made reports and studies involving budgetary problems that were outside long-term outlay ratios. We would assess the impact of these

I went to my office and wrote a memorandum concerning the meeting, which I classified and then submitted to all those concerned, keeping a copy for myself just in case someone called me on it at a later date."

"Could you give me a more specific example of exactly the services you rendered?"

"Of course. Let's say that at the meeting we discussed a restructuring of the infrastructure of the department. My superior wanted to know what grievance response mechanisms had to be built into the program for it to succeed, and how we could move the staff around without endangering the efficiency of his department by adopting the reforms. We didn't want to send a rocket up in the building that would crash down on our heads."

"Correct me if I'm wrong, but it seems to me that one of your many functions was to protect your superior's job."

"I never thought of it that way, but now that you mention it I guess that was what I was doing. You have to understand how the department worked. The seventh floor kept sending down memos that they were getting flak from the eighth floor to cut out the fat in the agency. The seventh floor said they had no fat to cut, and it was up to fifth floor to enact a cost-saving program. We passed on their demands to the third floor for suggestions. But the third floor was very uncooperative and kept sending back memos insisting that any major savings in running the department could only be made on the upper floors. Obviously, we had to protect our own turf."

"How did you do this?"

problems and then make recommendations on whether to pass them up the line to the seventh floor or send them back to the third floor for further clarification."

"Then your office was above the third floor?"

"Yes, sir, I was on the fifth floor with windows overlooking the Washington Monument. The people on the third floor reported to me and I reported to my superior who reported to the people on the seventh floor."

"That's very interesting. Could you tell me exactly what your day was like?"

"The first thing we did in the morning was to have a meeting on the fifth floor to discuss discretionary input policy. Then we broke up, and

Other Editors Say No Vindication

(The Charlotte Observer)

It may have come as a shock to anyone who had followed the 23-week trial that the jury found the Klan members and two Nazis not guilty of first degree murder and rioting. But that doesn't mean the verdict was tainted or that the trial was a sham, as Communist Workers Party (CWP) members claimed. And if Klan members believe the verdict in any sense vindicated their actions a year ago, they are wrong.

The jury had heard eyewitness accounts of the violence that broke out when Nazis and Klan members showed up at an anti-Klan rally sponsored by the CWP last November in Greensboro; they had seen television news film of the incident that left five CWP members dead; they heard evidence that the first shot came from the nine-car Klan caravan, although it apparently was never clear that any of the six defendants fired any shots before the CWP demonstrators started shooting.

At this point there is no reason to believe that the jury's decision, after more than six days of deliberation, represented anything other than a difficult but honest verdict based on the evidence.

Both sides were looking for publicity and asking for trouble that day in Greensboro. The CWP, in announcing a "death to the Klan" rally at a low-income housing project, in effect dared Klan members to show up. They apparently hoped a confrontation with the Klan would help them attract blacks to the CWP. Klan leaders admittedly responded to the CWP's challenge in hopes of getting publicity that would help them recruit more members.

The CWP members' refusal to testify suggests that they were more interested in making general indictments of the judicial system than in helping the system work, and using the "failure" of the system as a point in their recruiting efforts.

Both groups got the publicity they wanted. The greatest injustice would be if that publicity, or the verdict, leads to further violence or encourages anyone to join either cause.

Average miles per gallon for the entire fleet runs from a low of 4.6 in Clay County to a high of 7.2 miles per gallon in Hyde County. Transportation experts have always argued that it takes more gas to run a bus in the mountains, and other costs are higher as well. The report dismisses that contention, and the facts prove otherwise.

"There exists numerous reasons for the cost differences: geography, climate, population distribution, condition of roads, etc.

Abilities

"However, a major influence is the philosophy and management abilities of the local administrators, transportation supervisors, and school staffs," auditors wrote.

"Their decisions over bus routes play a major factor in costs, as do such items as maintenance schedules, new versus recapped tires, repair or purchases of various parts, security over vehicles, and contract negotiations...it is up to each Local Educational Agency to make these decisions."

Some of the comparisons are startling. A total of around two quarts. Buses in coastal Hertford get eight quarts, and many eastern or Piedmont counties use from five to 10.

In Gaston County, tires are costing five times as much as in Gates County. Repair parts in McDowell County are about a penny per mile while in nearby Madison County they cost six cents per mile.

The committee on public school transportation, chaired by State Senator Helen Rhyne Marvin of Gaston County plans to revise the system in an effort to correct the problems.

Auditors explained that the state pays some $90 million yearly to run the buses, but local officials have complete

Tensions In Transition

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Turmoil within President-elect Reagan's national security transition, which now begins to threaten his policy goals, erupted Nov. 17 in the sudden resignation of an exasperated Lawrence Silberman as leader of the CIA transition team.

The proximate cause was the exclusion of Silberman, considered a possibility to be Reagan's director of Central Intelligence, from CIA briefings for the president-elect. Silberman denied to us a policy reason for quitting. "I don't have the time to deal with the complications," said Silberman, a San Francisco banker. Whatever the true causes, a shockwave of paranoia was felt through the national security community.

Silberman, who stood up to then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as ambassador to Yugoslavia in 1975-77, is a tough-minded realist whose permanent loss would be a serious blow for anti-detentist Republicans. His departure deepens fears among like-minded members of Reagan's transition organization that they are losing during the interregnum the vital defense issues that Ronald Reagan promoted during the campaign.

If Silberman is gone, there are fears that William Van Cleave's days are numbered. Van Cleave, a former SALT negotiator and a steadfast critic of Kissinger-style diplomacy, is under intense attack as leader of Reagan's national defense transition team. The reason given by his transition superiors is personal style ("Bill just comes over too hard"). But the overriding cause is Van Cleave's insistence on radically higher spending to restore the depleted U.S. defense posture.

Van Cleave's team members see an anti-defense spending crunch inspired by Nixon-Ford administration retreads and directed through William Timmons, a former Nixon-Ford White House aide who is Reagan's deputy director of transition. Behind Timmons, they see the menacing specter of Henry Kissinger, resurrected in influence though not in person.

Much more pressure has been directed against Van Cleave than Silberman. But tough-talking Larry Silberman does not stand for much nonsense — such as dismissal from the Senate intelligence committee's Republican staff of three aides because they joined Silberman's transition team. Silberman was not pleased when this abrupt action by the committee's senior Republican member, Sen. Barry Goldwater, was backed by his superior in the sprawling Reagan transition bureaucracy: national security group director David Abshire.

Abshire, a former assistant secretary of state, is chairman of Georgetown University's Center of Strategic and International Studies where Kissinger has an office.

Silberman was not enchanted by the requirement of constant transition reports to Abshire. Nor did he get much help from above in confronting lame-duck CIA Director Stansfield Turner's non-cooperation. The last straw came when Silberman was barred from the CIA briefing.

Silberman's resignation was a shock to Reagan's senior echelon, which would welcome a similar departure by Van Cleave. While Van Cleave's brusque personality is stressed as the source of his troubles, he never has been forgiven for telling the hard truth during the campaign: defense spending increases exceeding 7 percent a year will be needed to restore the nation's defenses.

In current discussions at the Pentagon, Van Cleave's team members are laying out the tough requirements: strengthening the Minuteman missile, accelerating the MX mobile missile program, reviving the B-1 bomber. That angers Timmons, who contends the transition team has no such mission, and worries Reagan's economizing budget-makers out in California (led by Casper Weinberger).

Van Cleave's men have found common cause with Pentagon officials who silently endured the last four tragic years of defense decay. But they have outraged lame-duck Defense Secretary Harold Brown, who presided over those years. Brown has complained, through White House channels, about the size and persistence of Van Cleave's team and the presence on it of a congressman — Rep. Robin Beard of Tennessee.

Beard was removed from the team, and the impression was given that Brown's complaints received a sympathetic ear from Reagan transition leaders. Van Cleave and Co., accustomed to defeat in years of struggle for a stronger defense, have felt a Kissingerian cloud rolling over them.

That may explain an ugly exchange between Van Cleave and Abshire's deputy, defense consultant John Lehman. Although Lehman's hard-line defense credentials and courage in fighting SALT concessions equal Van Cleave's, he is a former Kissinger aide and present Kissinger friend. Consequently, Van Cleave rejected four additional to his team proposed by Lehman, stigmatizing them as the invasion of the "Gucci-loafer set."

Instead of battling Lehman, Van Cleave had better join him. Their common enemy is Weinberger and other economizers who resist drastic but necessary jumps in defense spending. The president-elect's critically-important arms program can afford neither turmoil in his own ranks nor the loss of such doughty battlers as Larry Silberman today and Bill Van Cleave maybe tomorrow.

Strength For Today

IDLING EXPENSIVE

In these days when every effort is being made to conserve gasoline, we are often reminded that unnecessary idling of a car's engine wastes gas.

But "idling" in our personal lives can be much more costly than idling an engine. It is when we are doing this that the devil has his best chance at us. When our minds are idling, all sorts of unwholesome and evil thoughts often creep in. The "idle rich" are noted for their unhappiness. Men who retire after active careers often note that idleness is very depressing.

All of us should make every effort to avoid idleness. It is too costly — in energy and in peace of mind. The person who keeps himself busy, who keeps his mind active, who, although careful to observe periods of relaxation, never indulges in idleness — such a person has every right to be happy.

Just as an idling engine eats up gasoline, an idle life eats up much of what makes life worth living. — Elisha Douglass

Data-Lack Hurts Bond Rating

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Mirror
NEW YORK (AP) — Taxpayers might be paying as much as $150 million a year in penalties because their local and state governments are unable to provide bond rating services with vital information.

That message from Brenton Harries, president of Standard & Poor's, largest of the rating services, could portend a refusal by S&P to rate governments that fail to correct accounting practices.

What especially irks rating services is "cash-basis" accounting, under which municipalities show expenditures and revenues only when cash is received or spent — not when spending commitments are made.

"We are becoming increasingly concerned that the cash-basis method of financial reporting may not provide us with information sufficient to rate bonds," Harries told a recent meeting of state executives.

If modern accounting systems aren't installed by such bond issuers, he Harries said, S&P will decide if it "should simply withdraw from the business" of rating them.

If that happened, municipalities would likely pay even higher money costs or, conceivably, might even find themselves unable to raise money at any price because they couldn't demonstrate credit-worthiness.

Harries appears to have support from the Securities and Exchange Commission in his campaign for more modern accounting practices.

The SEC, which regulates the corporate market, earlier stated that "the market for municipal securities provides investors only limited protection compared with corporate, government or other issuers."

Because their accounting practices fail to provide needed information, some municipalities find their credit ratings lowered by the rating agencies, a move that almost always raises their borrowing costs.

Based on its own in-house experience, S&P estimates that the penalties may average from one-eighth to one-quarter of a percentage point.

On a typical $100 million issue of bonds with a 10-year average life that percentage difference equals $1.25 million to $2.5 million in added costs to already overburdened municipal budgets.

S&P estimates that the total market for new general obligations bonds totals about $12 billion a year, and that half don't comply with generally accepted accounting principles.

It means, says S&P, that "taxpayers could be penalized from $75 million to $150 million over the 10-year average life of the bonds."

These added expenses could be reduced or eliminated, Harries suggested at a Nov. 17 meeting in Little Rock of the National Association of State Auditors, Comptrollers and Treasurers, if municipalities would:

— Conform to generally accepted accounting principles rather than their own notions of what information they wish to make available.

— Be independently audited within six months of the end of the fiscal year.

— Keep their books on a modified accrual, rather than cash basis, so that revenues are reported when they become measurable and available to pay expenses.

— Contain with their accounting report an auditor's opinion and disclosure notes, and cite any variance from generally accepted accounting practices that might lead to misinterpretation.

"General obligation bonds are suffering from an erosion in confidence — a credibility gap," he told the officials, warning them that the market would continue to exact a big price because of it.

Governments, he said, cannot defeat the market. "Investors have too many other bond issues to choose from, and may continue to penalize general obligation issuers using archaic accounting systems."

Gasoline Trucker Charged In Train Collision

By ED McHALE
Associated Press Writer
KENNER, La. (AP) — A gasoline trucker who allegedly tried to beat a freight train to a railroad crossing has been charged with negligent homicide after a collision and blast killed seven people, torched a neighborhood bar and plunged parts of Kenner into darkness.

Flames shot 100 feet into the air and hundreds of people were forced to flee their homes following the accident Tuesday night in this New Orleans suburb. The truck driver, identified by police as Glendon R. Russey, 36, of Baton Rouge, a driver for Mobil Corp., was booked on seven counts of negligent homicide. Kenner's chief administrative officer said the driver passed a stopped car and a barricade at the crossing and drove onto the track, where the tanker collided with an Illinois Central Gulf train.

Administrative Officer Jimmy Warren said interviews with several witnesses indicated the truck "attempted to out-run the train to the crossing." "There was a collision. The truck exploded and broke in half. Half of the truck fell on a car behind it and half of it on a barroom," Warren said. Warren said six of the victims were in the bar, Buck's and Chuck's, a popular after-work watering hole. The bar was leveled by a fire sparked by explosions which followed the collision. "Everyone ran to the door and the fire shot up all around us," said Charles Albrecht, 50, who was playing pool at the bar, which is 20 to 30 yards from the railroad tracks. He escaped out a back door. The seventh victim was identified as 6-month-old Heidi McGill, who was in the car the truck allegedly passed, officials said. State trooper Wallace Gettys said the child's mother, Alice McGill, was pulled from the wreckage by the truck driver, whose clothes were aflame. Neither adult was hurt seriously. The other victims were not identified immediately.

The blasts and fires knocked out power lines and plunged the area into darkness. Hours later, firemen were still toiling burning utility poles while electrical lines crackled overhead. Officials evacuated 200 to 300 people from surrounding homes and opened an emergency center at the Kenner City Hall. Officials said most of those evacuated stayed with friends or relatives. Only shattered hulls remained of four vehicles in that part of Kenner and some lights at the airport went out," he said, referring to the New Orleans International Airport, about a mile away. "There were explosions. It was just unbelievable," said Joe D'Gerolamo, 52, of Memphis, Tenn., who was visiting relatives in the area.

Haitian Says Economy Troubles Spur Flight

By SUSAN POSTLEWATE
Associated Press Writer
KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — New jobs are the key to halting the flight of refugees from Haiti to the United States, a top official of the island nation's government says. In his closing address Tuesday to the Miami Conference on the Caribbean, Georges Salomon, Secretary of State on Foreign Affairs of Haiti, asked representatives of Caribbean nations and the United States to work with Haiti in solving its economic problems.

Buchwald Col. ...

"By increasing the staff on the fifth floor, so that in case we were forced to cut back we would have the same number of people we started with." "I seem to be very thick, Mr. Walcott, but I'm perplexed as to how your job served the people." "I don't understand the question." "What contribution did you make to the taxpayer to justify your salary?" "I believe that if you read the reports I've written over the past four years you'll see that I earned every nickel I got."

"We must eradicate the situation which is causing our people to leave home to find work," said Salomon. "Our people are our most precious resource."

The two-day conference, which began Monday, was primarily an economic one and public officials, including Florida Gov. Bob Graham, attempted to skirt such politically sensitive issues as Caribbean drug smuggling and Florida's refugee problem.

Some 25,000 Haitians have sought political asylum in South Florida in recent years, but U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service authorities contend the Caribbean boat people are fleeing poverty in their homeland.

Graham, when asked if he was satisfied with Salomon's acknowledgement of the refugee problem, said it would be "inappropriate" for him to comment on what he considered a national political problem.

"I don't deal with the Haitian government," Graham said. "I respect the fact Haiti is a sovereign government."

Salomon told the conference his government is concerned about the refugee flight, which it considers an economic problem spurred by inflation and high unemployment.

"These so-called boat people, so no one should be under any misapprehension, no one is more concerned than my government at this situation," he said.

He expressed hope that the conference would help lay a foundation enabling Haiti to attract new factories, get on a sound enough financial basis to buy insurance and get financing for building projects such as roads.

"There cannot be too many meetings," he said of the conference, but added, "we want to return home certain that action is going to follow."

areas, and transfer of vehicles from one county to another when needed could be implemented.

Opposition to such a move is certain however, from state and local officials who see such a development another move in the direction of state control over local educational activities.

China's "Gang" On Trial
For several months, news reports from China have often mentioned government plans to try the so-called "Gang of Four." The four are all former high-ranking Chinese leaders. They are charged with planning an armed rebellion to take over the government during the rule of Chairman Mao Tse-tung. One of the four is Mao's widow. Their trial won't be like trials in the United States. In China, it is customary for persons to plead guilty to the crimes the government charges them with. Lawyers there usually don't argue against the government's case. Instead, they simply present evidence and arguments urging the court to be lenient.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the Vice Premier of China, considered to be the most powerful leader in that country?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Roberto Duran is a native of Panama.

The Holiday Turkey Is Marked By Loving Care

Taste that turkey with joy and appreciation on Thanksgiving Day. Chances are it had tender, loving care before it ever reached your table.

Whether it's simple turkey or kosher turkey, the care exercised by producers is the same - don't mark the bird.

And that goes all the way to toe-nail cutting. In the case of turkeys, that translates to beaks and claws.

They're snipped early to prevent scratching and cannibalism.

"People want a turkey with no marks on it," says Jay Derby, feed production manager for Goldsboro Milling Co., a major supplier of turkeys through contract growers.

"They won't buy one that has a big scratch down its back."

That's the kind of care that leaves the bird in tip-top shape for your carving knife.

And if it's kosher turkey, there may have been a special knife from Israel that prepared the bird for your final preparation for cooking. Celia Copeland, whose family operates a turkey farm near Belvidere in Perquimans County, says the blood of one turkey never touches that of another in the process.

So delicate is the care that the Copelands produce their own feedstuffs and mix it on the farm, using a multitude of supplementary additives including soy meal, fats, calcium phosphate, meat and bone meal, fish meal and vitamins.

You don't really need the cranberry sauce, do you?

The attention goes all the way back to the egg.

Use the Copelands as an example. Eggs are picked up four times daily, taken to a barn where they are they cleaned with steel wool, and then dried. There's a disinfectant bath included. After all that, the eggs go into crates of 200 and are placed in incubators. They stay there for 25 days, then go to a hatcher and, usually without fail, new turkeys come through the shells on the 28th day.

From that point on, the birds really get it. Derby's crew even sends "service men" around to their growers to prescribe medications and teach proper managerial practices as well as animal husbandry.

It's just after birth that the birds are sexed, de-beaked and their nails cut. For the next six to 10 weeks they are kept in brooder houses, with controlled heat and plenty of food available, and then they go to the open range or to special finishing houses.

And if you didn't know, a turkey hen's lifespan - in this case from shell-cracking to the table - is about 16 weeks and a tom's is 18 weeks. It's a short life, but as Derby points out, a chicken's is shorter. They go to market in four to six weeks.

Unemployment In N.C. Drops For 3rd Month

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - State officials said Tuesday North Carolina's unemployment rate dropped in October for the third successive month, reaching 6.3 percent.

The national rate for October was 7.1 percent.

Employment Security Commission analysts reported an unemployment rate of 6.6 percent in September, 7 percent in August and 6.1 percent in July.

Unemployed workers in the state in October dropped to 174,200, compared with 181,700 in September. A seasonal loss of 19,300 jobs in agriculture was partially offset by gains of 5,300 workers in government jobs as public schools resumed full employment and by small gains in other industries.

Textile employment showed a gain of 200 workers, but the industry's total employment of 250,800 still was 3,700 fewer than in October 1979, when North Carolina's unemployment rate was only 4.8 percent.

Furniture employment climbed by 300 jobs in October, while the apparel industry dropped 100 jobs.

Floyd E. Outland, an ESC analyst, said the jobless rate actually rose in 39 of the state's 100 counties. He said those increases were attributed to the end of the harvest season and the drop in agricultural employment in rural counties.

Richmond County had the highest rate in the state at 12.1 percent, up from 9.5 percent in September. ESC officials blamed the situation on loss of agricultural and manufacturing jobs.

Two banking executives welcomed the declining unemployment rate, but warned that the recessionary trend was not gone completely.

"It's much too early to say,

"Yes, this recession is over," said Theodore B. Sumner Jr., chairman of First Union National Bank in Charlotte.

"My personal opinion is that we'll probably see the unemployment rate going back up. The automobile industry is still flat on its back. With interest rates going to the levels they are now, obviously housing is going to fall off. Both of those affect North Carolina."

Camp Cheerio Movie Set

Camp Cheerio, owned and operated by the High Point YMCA, is now accepting registration for the 1981 season.

Founded in 1960, Camp Cheerio is an accredited member of the American Camping Association. It is located in the Blue Ridge Mountains near Roaring Gap. Three sessions are offered for girls and four sessions for boys.

Children from the Greenville area who attended the camp in 1980 include Rob Barnes, Charles Corey, Tal Greene, Jarvis Groome, Nancy Johnson, Kevin Ricks, and Dennis Smith.

A color sound movie about Camp Cheerio will be shown at Minges Coliseum December 1, at 7 p.m., Room 144 Ron Austin, camp director, will be in Greenville at that time to show the movie and talk with interested parents about their child going to camp next summer.

Applications and brochures are available by contacting Camp Cheerio at (919) 869-0195. Mailing address is P.O. Box 6258, High Point, N.C. 27262.

To Increase Milk Prices

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The North Carolina Milk Commission agreed Tuesday to increase the price paid to farmers for raw milk by 59 cents per hundredweight, or 5.2 cents a gallon, in January.

If custom is followed, that will mean an increase of about 10 cents per gallon for milk in retail stores.

The commission, meeting one week early because of the Thanksgiving holiday, based the increase on a formula adopted earlier this year. That formula allows for quarterly changes in the prices paid to farmers.

Under the scheduled increase, farmer prices will go up to $15.82 per hundredweight.

Isabella W. Cannon, former Raleigh mayor and the newest member of the commission, said she was upset by the increase.

"I'm going to look into this. I don't know yet what I'll come up with, but milk in this state is just too high compared to other states," she said.

HARVEST RALLY

A Thanksgiving Day service will be held at Tabernacle Missionary Baptist Church at Calico Thursday at 11 a.m.

The public is invited to attend this annual Harvest Rally celebration.

IBM Will Boost N.C. Facilities

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - IBM announced plans Tuesday to add four more buildings to its facilities at Charlotte, boosting its complex in the University Research Park to more than 1.4 million square feet.

The plans call for a second laboratory-administration building, an additional manufacturing area and two new warehouses. The buildings will be completed in phases beginning in early 1982 and running through 1983.

Besides electronic equipment, the Charlotte plant develops and manufactures computers and document processors used by financial institutions.

Offers To Give Erosion Devices

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A researcher-inventor offered Tuesday to donate 500 erosion-control devices for use in combatting shifting sands that threaten to topple North Carolina's Cape Hatteras and Cape Lookout lighthouses.

Bill L. Garrett of Wilmington, Del., a market developer for DuPont, said he held patents on the devices, which he said were worth about $10,000. He said they could help catch and hold sand deposits at the century-old lighthouses.

National Park Services officials acknowledged skepticism of the offer.

"We would ask for a resume of testing and try to evaluate it" before accepting such an offer, said William A. Harris, superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

Jim M. Howard, a spokesman for the park service's regional office in Atlanta, said the service was appreciative of Garrett's offer. But, he said, "I imagine with the way the government works, it would take considerable testing before they used these things."

Garrett's device is called a "Seascape" and he said they had been tested privately in the Bahamas with some success. He also said a state facility will begin testing some of the devices in Alabama next week.

Each unit weighs less than one pound and is made of polypropylene, a plastic that Garrett said could withstand the pounding of the ocean.

The device consists of two sections. The bottom piece, a 6-foot-long tube, is filled partially with sand and gravel and acts as an anchor.

How N.C. Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Nov. 13 through Nov. 19.

HOUSE
IMPOUNDMENT — The House declined, 154 for and 232 against, to recommend that presidents once again have power to refuse to spend money appropriated by Congress. Such impoundment authority, outlawed in 1974, was advocated by Republicans wanting to enable Ronald Reagan to withhold appropriations that exceed congressional budget ceilings. The vote came during debate on fiscal 1981 budget measure (H Con Res 448) that was later passed.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, a supporter, said "one of the saddest days in history of this Congress" was the 1974 enactment of "this anti-impoundment legislation which forces the president of the U.S. to spend taxpayers' dollars he feels should not be spent."

Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., an opponent, said: "Remember the impoundment fights around here in the days of Richard Nixon? Let us not go back to that now, particularly when we have this exciting new Congress that is going to come and solve these (spending) problems."

Members voting "yea" wanted a restoration of presidential impoundment authority.

Reps. James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Richardson Preyer, D-6, W.C. Hefner, D-8, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Reps. Stephen Neal, D-5, and Charles Rose, D-7, did not vote.

A FEDERAL BENEFIT — By a vote of 313 for and 56 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 5888) providing a $50,000 death benefit to survivors of federal firefighters and law enforcement officers killed "in the line of duty." The bill broadens a federal program already in place for survivors of state and local peace officers and firefighters.

Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich., a supporter, said "it is a major injustice to ask someone to risk his or her life and then not make adequate provision for those who are dependent upon that person's income."

Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., an opponent, predicted that "in a few short years the state and local employees will be coming back to Congress" asking for additional survivors' benefits equal to those in this bill. "So the equity argument will again be made and will start the game of leapfrog, each one trying to get back ahead of or equal to the other."

Members voting "yea" favored the death benefit bill.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Hefner, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain and Martin voted "nay."

Neal and Rose did not vote.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS — The House adopted, 239 for and 123 against, an amendment giving judges authority to lock up certain juvenile "status offenders" who have been found in contempt-of-court for violating a court order. Status offenders are incorrigible youth who have committed non-criminal acts such as chronically missing school or running away from home. Under present federal law, a juvenile judge can order a status offender to a half-year house but has no recourse if the youth disobeys the order. The law applies in the 43 states which accept federal juvenile justice grants and thus agree to abide by the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act. The amendment was offered during debate on HR 6704, later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Thomas Coleman, R-Mo., a supporter, said that if the amendment is not enacted there will be "hundreds of thousands of youths who ... can simply thumb their noses at the judge and know that nothing — absolutely nothing — will happen to them."

Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., an opponent, said it was wrong to incarcerate non-criminal youth with criminal offenders because "these secure facilities become schools of crime..."

Members voting "yea" favored the incarceration of certain non-criminal juvenile offenders.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Neal did not vote.

SENATE
THE BUDGET — The Senate approved, 48 for and 46 against, the fiscal 1981 federal budget blueprint limiting outlays to $633 billion and anticipating a deficit of $34.7 billion. The resolution (H Con Res 448) later received final congressional approval. In its final form, it limits spending to $632.4 billion and assumes a $27.4 billion deficit. The measure is not law but will discipline the Congress in its spending decisions.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said he was unenthusiastic about approving the congressional budget blueprint during the lame-duck session, but would vote for it by way of "preserving the integrity" of the congressional budget process.

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., said that to cut federal spending the Senate should "reject" this budget and mandate a new budget for FY 1981, as the American people recently did.

Members voting "yea" favored adoption of the congressional budget blueprint.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

Playing A Big Education Role

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

More than 25 per cent of the superintendents of public school systems in North Carolina and more than 22 per cent of the principals are products of East Carolina University's graduate program in education administration and supervision, a study shows.

In many cases, especially in eastern North Carolina, the percentages are much greater.

In the Cumberland County school district, for example, 45 of the 55 principals are ECU graduates. In the Kinston and Lenoir County districts 16 of the 20 principals are from the ECU program.

In Wayne County and Goldsboro schools, 22 of the 30 principals are from ECU. In Robeson County, Lumberton, Red Springs and Fairmont 20 of 44.

"This study shows the impact of East Carolina University on the public schools throughout the state of North Carolina," says Dr. William C. Sanderson, chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Supervision, ECU School of Education.

Carolina employee pay records for the 1979-80 school year, was concerned only with the quantitative aspect of employment of ECU graduates in the state's public schools.

Of administrators, the study showed that graduates of the program with Masters of Arts in Education or Educational Specialists degrees occupied 37 of 145 school superintendent posts, 69 of 249 or 27.7 per cent of the associate/assistant superintendent jobs, 456 of the 2,033 principal positions. In addition, 157 ECU program graduates were employed as school supervisors but the total number of people holding these positions was not determined.

The findings did not include irregular certification. Historically, one third of students enrolled received irregular certification rather than a degree. "It is reasonable to assume that many currently employed administrators and supervisors received graduate certification through this department, although they are not included in this study," Sanderson said.

Sanderson, who co-authored the report with Prof. Keith C. Hudson, said another significant point is that "we have had a tremendous impact in the community colleges, non-public schools and school systems outside the state of North Carolina."

Also, among the ECU graduates not included in the study, one is assistant State Superintendent of Public Instruction, three are directors of N.C. Regional Education Centers, one is the executive secretary of the North Carolina School Boards Association.

"Many of our graduates occupy prestigious positions outside the state's public school systems," Sanderson said.

"Each year we send about 10 students to other universities that award doctoral degrees. They are not included in this study. We also have many graduates employed in the university system throughout North Carolina."

The primary mission of the department is to provide certified administrators and supervisors for the public schools of the state. "The purpose of this study was to determine whether this mission is being accomplished," Sanderson said.

The study, based on North

Interviews for the scholarship program will take place in January, 1981, and winners will be announced in March. Students selected to receive the Truman Scholarships will receive funds to cover two years of university study.

VEPCO To Drop North Anna 4 Plans

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. says it will cancel a fourth planned nuclear unit at its North Anna Power Station and will attempt to recover from its customers $165 million already spent on the proposed unit.

Veeco President William W. Berry told a reporters at a news conference here Tuesday that Unit 3 at the station in Louisa County will be the last nuclear unit the company will build in this century.

"When a new generating station is needed, it will be coal-fired instead of nuclear," Berry said. Berry said the company also plans to complete the $1.6 billion Bath County pumped storage project as scheduled for service in 1985 and 1986.

He said the decision to abandon North Anna 4, already 10 percent completed, will involve the write-off of $165 million already spent.

The State Corporation Commission will be asked to grant Veeco permission to charge this loss to Veeco customers in Virginia at 36 cents a month over a 10-year period, Berry said. A company spokesman said the same type proposal for Veeco's North Carolina customers would cost them about 44 cents a month.

"The decision to build North Anna 4 was made for the benefit of our customers and I think it reasonable that the customers should pay for that investment," Berry said.

But he said there will be a net reduction in customer bills over the period compared to what they would be if construction on North Anna 4 proceeded.

Veeco serves all or part of 22 counties in northeastern North Carolina.

Berry said the decision to abandon North Anna 4 is not a repudiation by Veeco of nuclear power.

"This is a sensible choice. It is not a denial of the benefits of nuclear power," he said.

He said the high capital cost of nuclear plants, much of it because of new regulations imposed in the wake of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident, require a reexamination of generating options.

A major reason for continuing construction of North Anna 3, he said, is because Veeco already has $400 million invested in it.

North Anna 3 is scheduled for completion in 1989. Veeco, one of the first utilities in the nation to make a heavy commitment to nuclear power, already has two nuclear units at the North Anna site. North Anna 1 has operated for several years; North Anna 2 is to go into commercial operation at the end of November. Veeco has two more nuclear units at its Surry Power Station in Surry County. One is operating; the other is down for replacement of steam generators.

The Allegheny Power System agreed last month to share the billion cost of the Bath County project on Back Creek, where two dams are 57 percent complete. A work force of 815 will be maintained, Veeco said, and no others of the 2,000 workers laid off in May will be recalled. Employment on the project may be increased in 1982, the utility said, to complete the first three generating units by 1985 and the next three by 1986.

When Veeco cut back the Bath County project, a $1.2 million monthly payroll that helped fuel an economic boom in the area was cut to about $300,000 and unemployment rose.

Suspect Acid Rain Caused Irritations

ORMOND BEACH, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Environmental Protection Agency technicians were being dispatched from Atlanta to a 35-mile stretch of northern Florida beaches today to investigate a mysterious mist sunbathers have blamed for scratchy throats and watery eyes.

The Volusia County Health Department in nearby Daytona Beach received "reports (of the irritant) all day long" Tuesday, county environmental division chief Frank Langrove said.

Sunbathers from Ormond Beach south to New Smyrna Beach have complained since Nov. 16 of sore throats and watery eyes. The U.S. Coast Guard and several state agencies have taken air samples in the area, but no conclusive data has emerged from the studies.

Some scientists assigned to the project theorize that acid rain — a mild irritant caused when air pollutants combine with water to form nitric and sulfuric acid compounds — may be the culprit.

On Tuesday, two lifeguards stationed at Ormond Beach reported "a little burning sensation in their throats," Beach Patrol Lt. David Dickinson said. The lifeguards were allowed to take the rest of the day off, the lieutenant said, while inspectors from the Florida departments of Environmental Regulation and Natural Resources examined the area.

"We don't know what it is, but it can't be good for you if it irritates your eyes and throat," said Dennis O'Donnell, a Beach Patrol captain. "There are plenty of people reporting irritations."

So far, about 15 people have sought treatment for the mist's effects, but no one has been hospitalized. Health officials said the symptoms tend to disappear when the people leave the beach area.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, faced with a new increase in the bank prime lending rate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 51 to 982.17 in the first hour.

Gainers held a slight edge on losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, New York's Chase Manhattan Bank raised its prime lending rate from 17 to 17 1/2 percent.

Many other major banks across the country quickly matched that increase in the basic charge on blue-chip loans.

In the past month, the prime has soared almost four percentage points.

But with the open-market interest rates that help determine the bank rate having also skyrocketed of late, analysts noted that today's news came as no big surprise.

Standard Oil of Indiana led the active list, up 1 1/2 at 92 1/2. On Tuesday the company announced a large gas discovery in Louisiana.

Langston Is Honored By Group

Guy C. Langston of Greenville, was presented a resolution of appreciation at the N.C. Criminal Justice Education and Standards Commission meeting in Raleigh last week.

Langston, a former North Carolina highway patrolman and Greenville police chief, covers 26 Eastern North Carolina counties as a field representative for Law Enforcement Training with the Department of Community Colleges.

The resolution described Langston as a dedicated law enforcement training officer who has served the people of the State for many years. It pointed out that he has devoted many of his personal hours and resources to the criminal justice system in order to insure equitable performance of the duties by the officers trained by him, and has generated a model for regional training unsurpassed elsewhere in the state.

Along with five other Eastern North Carolina police chiefs, he helped to create the Coastal Plains Law Enforcement Academy.

Langston, a retired colonel with the North Carolina National Guard, saw 33 years of active duty with the military and has 28 years service in the field of law enforcement. He was presented the North Carolina Distinguished Service Award by Gov. Bob Scott.

Charge Five With Arson

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Five Explorer scouts whose post is sponsored by a fire company have been charged with arson in 10 blazes that caused nearly $250,000 in damage this fall, officials said.

Deputy state fire marshals Richard C. Lynch and Stewart McLaughlin said Tuesday three of the five youths arrested last week were members of an Explorer post sponsored by the Mill Creek Fire Co. Two were former members, they said.

Lynch said he believed the youths allegedly started the blazes, which began in September, so they could assist firefighters.

They liked being part of the excitement, part of what's going on and being part of the official record," McLaughlin said.

Although they are not allowed to ride in fire trucks or help extinguish blazes, Explorers are permitted to gather at the fire house during fires and bring coffee and donuts to firefighters, said Mill Creek Fire Chief Mergenthaler.

The Explorers also help clean the station, he said.

Mergenthaler said the Explorers receive credit for assistance at each fire.

The five youths, all high school students, were booked on multiple charges of second-degree arson and conspiracy and were released to their parents while awaiting family court trials, officials said.

One youth was charged in nine of the fires, another youth in eight, another in seven, and the other two in five each, officials said.

No one was injured in any of the blazes, Lynch said. Some of the blazes occurred in barns.

Mergenthaler said one of the youths had dropped out of the Explorer post last year while another was expelled in an unrelated incident last month.

Noted Drop In U.S. Car Sales

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association said Tuesday sales of American-made new cars decreased sharply in the state during October while foreign makes showed an increase.

The association reported 11,995 domestic cars were sold in October in North Carolina, down 29 percent from last October's sales. At the same time, import sales rose 7 percent over last October.

'Undue Force' Plaintiff Investigated By SHP

By STUART VAUGHAN Reflector Staff Writer

The Internal Affairs Section of the North Carolina Highway Patrol is investigating a complaint filed by the parents of Kenneth Holland Jr., 17 of Winterville, alleging that a patrolman stationed in Pitt County — Trooper D. R. Taylor — used undue force in arresting the youth on multiple traffic charges on November 11.

Highway Patrol spokesmen noted that the Internal Affairs Section, "will conduct an objective investigation and if any action is warranted, it will be taken."

Officials said Holland was charged with speeding 100 miles per hour in a 55 mile per hour zone, failing to stop for a stop sign, careless and reckless driving and speeding in excess of 15 miles per hour over the speed limit while attempting to elude arrest, following a high speed chase which began on secondary road 1711 about 2:30 p.m., and continued for about 7 1/2 miles.

Spokesmen said Holland allegedly tried to elude arrest after Trooper Taylor attempted to stop his car after clocking the vehicle at 72 miles per hour on radar.

Holland finally stopped his vehicle when other highway patrolmen converged on the area.

Officers noted that Holland suffered a broken front tooth after he was forced down onto the hood of his car by Taylor after the youth allegedly resisted being handcuffed.

Holland has been convicted of speeding and passing a stopped school bus and has another case pending in District Court — operating on the wrong side of the road — in addition to the charges stemming from the November 11 incident.

Polish Govm't Rushes Delegation To Parleys

By ROBERT H. REID Associated Press Writer

The Polish government rushed a delegation to Gdansk today to confer with leaders of the biggest independent trade union and a new labor crisis threatened over the arrest of a worker for the union.

Solicitor General Lucjan Czubinski sent four senior aides to the Baltic port city of Gdansk to talk with Lech Walesa, the leader of the Solidarity union federation, and his legal advisers.

Polish newspapers, meanwhile, quoted Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania as expressing concern at the "manipulation of the weapon of strikes," which jeopardizes "the obligations resulting from our alliances."

The reference to Poland's alliances meant the Moscow-led Warsaw Pact, and reflected the same concern expressed by the official Soviet media in recent days that widespread strikes in Poland could disrupt rail links through Poland that the Soviet Union uses to supply its troops in East Germany.

Kania, who took over as party secretary Sept. 5, was quoted by the official Polish press as saying, "the symptoms of anarchy, disruptions of the economy and campaigns against people are reasons for concern for us." He spoke of "progressive destabilization of the economic and political life of the country."

A Solidarity delegation met in Warsaw with Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski and Mayor Jerzy Majewski to discuss the detention of Jan Narozniak, a printer arrested when police raiders found a classified document from the solicitor general's office in Solidarity's Warsaw office. The document reportedly outlines actions to combat anti-socialist forces.

Zbigniew Bujak, president of the union's Warsaw chapter, said workers at the Ursus tractor factory and six other plants in the capital

Steads A Major Item In Thefts

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The New Bern Sun-Journal announced Tuesday it has hired a private auditor to examine financial records of the Craven County Hospital, where an investigation is under way into the reported theft of food.

The newspaper said its auditor began surveying food service records Tuesday, accompanied by an auditor representing the hospital.

The newspaper has quoted an unnamed source as saying the major item taken in the thefts was rib eye steaks. Hospital records show that two companies have delivered nearly 3,300 pounds of steaks to the institution between Aug. 5 and Sept. 30.

If most rib eyes and no other items were stolen, the theft could have easily amounted to nearly $78,000 during the past 12 months alone, considering data from only the top companies identified so far, the Sun-Journal reported.

Rampants Take Opener Over North Pitt

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Donald Johnson paced Rose High School to a 76-60 victory over North Pitt last night as the two schools opened the 80-81 basketball season. Johnson poured in a game-high 21 points as Rose jumped out to an early lead, and never trailed in the contest. Earlier, North Pitt's girls had rolled over the Rampettes, 57-39, to get their season off to a good start. North Pitt, troubled by turnovers throughout the game, shot well after the opening minutes, but Rose got away to a fiery start, hitting six of their first ten shots to take a 13-2 lead over the Panthers that they never rallied from. The Panthers outshot the Rampants, percentage-wise, but they shot 17 less times, hitting on 26 of 49. Rose canned 29 of 66 after being just under 50 percent at the half. Rose made good at the foul line, too, pushing in 18 of 24 attempts, while the Panthers got just eight of 18 for the evening. North Pitt, after being totally dominated early on the boards, rallied in the second half to hold a 41-35 edge in that department. But it was the turnovers that spelled the real difference, as the Panthers committed 36 to just 23 for the Rampants. "We had a chance there in the third quarter," North Pitt's Cobby Deans said. "But we made too many mistakes. Overall, I'd have to say that I was pretty well pleased with our play from the second quarter on. "They're right much quicker than we are, and that made a difference too. We did have too many turnovers, and we've got some people who aren't thinking out there, but that will come around." Rose coach Jim Brewington was quite pleased with the initial effort of his charges. "We still have the third quarter blues," he noted. "But I'm proud of the way we hustled. We got a real good effort from just about everyone."

Brewington praised Johnson's play in the game, calling him a super athlete. "It's a long, hard road, and we expected to have some turnovers like we did. We have to work too against the press more. We have the people who can bring it up."

Rose, led by nine points by Johnson quickly established a lead at 13-2 and never trailed in the game. They extended that to as much as 15 in the first quarter, 25-10 with 1:49 left on a basket by Calvin Joyner. Rose led at the horn, 25-14. North Pitt refused to be shaken any further behind in the second quarter until William Battle made a three-point play, then followed it with a slam dunk for a 39-23 lead, largest of the half with 1:48 left. Rose again led at the half, 41-27.

Early in the third period, Rose ran its lead to 20, 49-29, but the Panthers finally began to get their act together and trimmed back to 53-44 before trailing 56-44 at the horn.

In the early going of the final quarter, North Pitt closed to within seven at 57-50 but Rose ran through seven unanswered points to open the lead to 14, and it never got closer. In addition to Johnson's 21, Battle added 14 and John Sheppard had 10.

North Pitt was paced by Juan Atkinson with 17, while Greg Hines had 11. After an initial lead by Rose, 2-0, North Pitt's girls took over and pushed out to an 8-4 lead in the first period. Rose tied it twice more, at 8-8 and 11-11, but North Pitt pulled out to a 19-15 lead at the end of the quarter.

In the second period, the Pant-HERS continued to pull away, leading by as much as 13 at 31-27. During the third frame, the margin climbed to 19, 39-20, before Rose cut it back to as little as 14. In the last period, North Pitt again ran out, this time to a 53-30 lead, the biggest of the night. Alice Pittman led the Pant-HERS with 18, while Jeanette Brown had 15. Monica Gatlin and Frances Barnhill each had ten for Rose. "I was quite pleased with the win," Pant-HER coach Randy Avery said. "We shot better than I expected and we played better defense and were more aggressive. Maybe it was just the time for us to play someone. This win has got to help us."

Losing coach Dennis Gibson felt that his team's inexperience hurt. "We wanted to control the tempo, but their shot selection was much better than ours. Their shooting was the key and they got back quicker on defense. Their press intimidated us too."

Duran Quits; Cites Stomach Cramps

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, an artist in the sometimes brutal business of boxing, is World Boxing Council welterweight champion again, wrestling the crown from Roberto Duran who quit the fight and boxing in the middle of a remarkable rematch. "I'm tired of fighting," said the man whose fast, powerful style earned him the nickname Hands of Stone and the admiration of his native Panama and of people throughout Latin America.

Duran, who quit fighting in the 8th round because of what he said were arm and stomach problems, spent the night in Baptist Hospital here, said Luis Henrique, an interpreter attached to the Panamanian embassy. He confirmed what Angelo Dundee, Leonard's trainer, said. Henrique said Duran was OK and that he had merely entered the hospital for a checkup — though not the checkup which boxing officials said they would require.

The proud Duran walked into retirement a ring legend. Frustrated from chasing Leonard and complaining of stomach cramps and weakness in his arms, he quit unexpectedly with 16 seconds left in the 8th round. He waved Leonard away as the boxing technician advanced on him.

The judges had Duran slightly behind on points when he turned his back on the career so uniquely suited to the man. "I was surprised," said Leonard. "I don't know why he quit. He just stopped throwing punches and walked away. I took full advantage."

At first, both Leonard and referee Octavio Meyran misunderstood Duran's action. It looked as if the champ was showing contempt for Leonard, saying to his opponent, "No, you can't hurt me."

The referee waved the fight on and Sugar Ray crashed a right to Duran's midsection. Again the champ walked away, shaking his head from side to side and waving Leonard off. It was over and a stunned crowd saw the green title belt taken away from the man who was many things, but surely not a quitter.

"At the end of the fifth round, I got cramps in my stomach and it kept getting worse and worse," Duran said later. "I felt weaker and weaker in my body and arms."

Then came the shocker. "I am retiring from boxing right now," he said. "There will be no more fights. I'm tired of fighting."

And so one of the great careers in the ring ended with a suddenness that even his seconds failed to completely comprehend.

"I was shocked," said cut man Freddie Brown. "There was no indication he was in pain or getting weak."

"I've been with him too long not to believe there was some legitimate reason for it," said trainer Ray Arce.

Leonard was ahead on the cards of all three judges, winning four of the seven rounds. But it was by no means a one-sided fight and that's why its sudden ending raised some eyebrows. Officials of the Louisiana State Athletic Commission said Duran's $8 million purse would be withheld pending a medical examination of the Panamanian.

"I've never seen anything like that before," said Emile Bruneau, chairman of the commission. "The trainers don't even know what happened."

Jerry White, a member of the commission, said, "We have to give some explanation. Some people paid $1,000 to watch this and they don't know what happened."

What the Superdome crowd of about 30,000 fans saw was a lesson in ring artistry administered by Leonard straight out of the boxing textbook.

"The name of the game this time was boxing and scientific techniques," said Leonard, whose dancing and darting jabs drove Duran to distraction.

"This time, I boxed," said Sugar Ray, who tried to slug it out with Duran in their first meeting and lost the WBC title to his opponent June 20 in Montreal. "I'm versatile. He couldn't change tactics. I could."

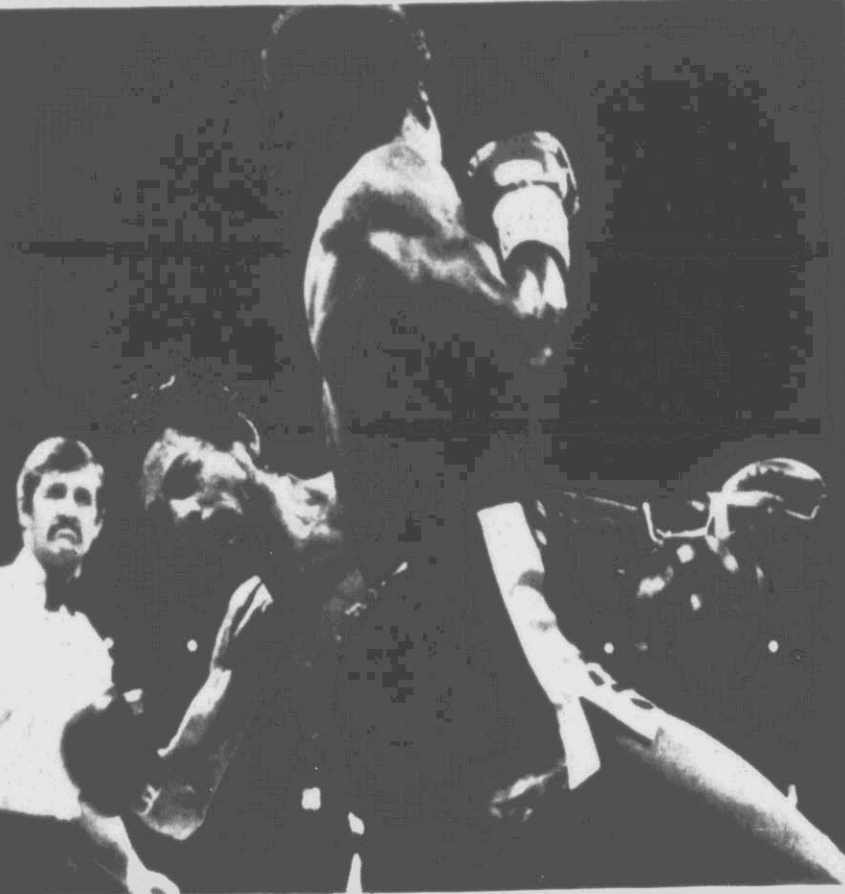

Leonard set the tone for the fight in the first two rounds. He came out jabbing, sticking Duran with lefts and scoring with effective counter punches every time the champion attacked.

Duran, whose swarming style has always made him a crowd favorite, kept stalking Leonard and paying the price as Sugar Ray repeatedly tagged him coming in.

"When I walked in the ring, I knew I had Duran," Leonard said. "I was confident."

In round three, Duran had Leonard cornered on the ropes and loaded up a right. But before he could deliver it, Sugar Ray had danced away. And as he did, Leonard mugged at the champion, taunting him at a moment which must have been terribly frustrating for the champion.

In the fourth and fifth rounds, both men

Getting An Attractive Schedule Isn't Easy For Pirate Cagers

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Getting that attractive schedule in Minges Coliseum isn't all that easy, East Carolina basketball coach Dave Odom told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

And getting the blue chip recruit always isn't just a case of convincing the player.

"There are a lot of problem areas in any athletic program, and scheduling is one of them," Odom said. "Scheduling for an independent team is one of the most difficult jobs. As an independent you can play 27 games, one more than a conference team."

But, Odom pointed out, the conference teams have an advantage. With an eight-team conference, 14 games, including seven at home are already built in. "Everyone now plays in at least one tournament, so that gives you a couple of more games. You can always get a couple of 'gimmies' so that gives you 20 or 21, and you only need a few more and you can bargain with some name schools."

However, as an independent, it isn't that easy. There are no built-in games. And trying to schedule conference teams in January and February is very difficult since they are involved in their own league races, Odom pointed out.

"We'd like to play 13 to 15 at home, and we'd like to bring in some real good names. But say we tried to get Marquette in here. We have about 6,500 seats. Three thousand of them are reserved for the students. The remaining 3,500, at $4 each would bring in $14,000, but it would probably take at least $15,000 to get them in here. So you've lost on the deal."

There are some good name teams coming, however. Odom said that among upcoming foes in Minges are UNC-Charlotte, Richmond, William & Mary, Old Dominion, Illinois Stae, Oral Roberts, Penn State and Detroit. Ohio, this year's opening foe, will make a visit here next year to open the season.

"We don't want to be a sacrificial lamb for anyone," Odom said. "We have to be realistic with our schedule and build as we grow."

He also noted that the Pirates needed to broaden their fan appear and start drawing from outside Pitt

County. "We sit in the middle of a circle of towns and cities that we could draw from that are all about an hour away."

Odom said that as far as recruiting is concerned, the Pirates face an uphill battle in some areas, just convincing people that ECU is a "major school."

He told of one recruiting effort in which the player is being sought by several other schools. He was impressed with East Carolina on his visit here. Later, one of the ECU assistants met his coach, who said, "He'll probably come to ECU unless a major school recruits him."

"This is the problem we're facing," Odom said. "We are trying to show these people that we are 'major' too. We play the schedule that the 'majors' do."

Odom said that recruiting top players who live within driving distance "Say, less than six hours from here" is within the foreseeable future for the Pirates.

Odom also listed his picks in the Atlantic Coast Conference, listing Maryland as the favorite because it returns its whole team. "Dean Smith has never finished below second, and I can't see them far out of the race if they stay healthy," he added. He figures UNC and Virginia in a battle for second. Wake Forest is a dark horse title contender.

Duke and State could both pull off surprises, while Clemson and Georgia Tech are in the lower reaches.

Nationally, Odom listed Kentucky, Louisville ("despite its loss to DePaul"), UCLA and Indiana all to finish in the top five.

Former ECU football coach Sonny Randle will be the guest for the next meeting of the club, set December 9.

In January, guests include Monte Kiffin of N.C. State and Bill Dooley of Virginia Tech.

Is Georgetown The Best Of The East?

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
With the Big East emerging as one of the nation's strongest conferences last season, eastern basketball was a big exclamation point in 1979-80. This year, it's a question mark.

"It's really hard to pick out anyone outstanding in the East this year," says Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim. "A lot of talent was lost to graduation." Boeheim's own team was among the depleted, with Louis Orr and Roosevelt Bouie now just a pleasant memory. Other Big East powers such as Georgetown and St. John's also suffered heavy losses. Georgetown's defending league champions will be missing John Duren and Craig Shelton, while the Redmen lost their fine backcourt of Reggie Carter and Bernard Rencher.

The Big East, though, is still the class league in eastern basketball and will be one of the most exciting in the country this year with just about everyone in the running for the championship with perhaps the exception of Providence and Seton Hall.

Despite the loss of its two big players, Georgetown can be considered a prohibitive favorite with a veteran team led by Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, one of the best shooting guards in the country. Coach John Thompson can also count on veterans Eric Smith, Ed Spriggs and Mike Frazier, and also recruited a fine guard in New York's Freddie Brown.

At Syracuse, Boeheim might have lost the "Louie and Bouie Show" but has a capable replacement at center for Bouie in supersub Dan Schayes, a good forward in Eric Santifer and a shining backcourt with the likes of Tony "Red" Bruin, Eddie Moss and Marty Headd. St. John's returns a veteran frontcourt that includes Wayne McKoy, Ron Blair, Frank Gilroy and sophomore sensation David Russell. Curtis Redding, a swingman last year, should be primarily a guard to fill in for the Carter-Rencher loss.

Villanova, a new member of the Big East after leaving the Eastern Eight, Connecticut and perhaps Boston College should also figure in the Big East race.

The Wildcats are led by Alex Bradley, one of the best power forwards in the country, while Connecticut features Cory Thompson and Kentucky transfer Chuck Aleksinas. Boston College Coach Tom Davis has retained three double-figure scorers from last year's 19-10 National Invitation Tournament squad — Joe Beaulieu, Vin Caharer and John Bagley.

LaSalle lost its three top scorers, including superstar Michael Brooks, and would appear to be out of the picture in the East Coast Conference. There, St. Joseph's had one of its best recruiting seasons in many years, as Coach Jimmy Lynam landed some high school All-Americans in Philadelphia's Tony Costner and Lonnie McFarland, plus a big player from Long Island (N.Y.) in guard Wes Correa.

Rhode Island has replaced Villanova in the Eastern Eight and while Jack Kraft's Rams make their league debut with nine lettermen, they won't be one of the league's strongest teams.

That honor will belong to several others in one of the most balanced Eastern Eight seasons in years. Duquesne, St. Bonaventure, Pitt and Rutgers are among the contenders.

If 7-foot Ricky Tunstall continues to make progress as a sophomore, Duquesne could have one of the best frontcourts in the East. The Duke's fine frontcourt should give them enough firepower to improve on last year's 18-10 NIT team.

At St. Bonaventure, Jim Satalin has one of the country's best shooting forwards in 6-6 Earl Belcher. Roy Chipman has taken over at Pitt, a team that lost only one letterman and is led by a fine frontcourt player in Sam Clancy. Rutgers is paced by Kelvin Troy, one of the top guards in the East.

The Ivy League is rebuilding after big graduation losses two seasons ago and Penn and Princeton are still the class of the league, as usual.

The Quakers don't have any big names, just what Coach Bob Weinbauer calls "a lot of good players" returning from last year's Ivy champs. These include, among others, 6-5 Paul Little and 6-8 Vincent Ross. Pete Carril's Princeton team features a lot of good, young talent such as Rich Simkus and Randy Melville.

Among the independents, Penn State, St. Peter's, Holy Cross and Old Dominion appear to be the best.

Last year, the Nittany Lions had an 18-10 record and an NIT berth and Coach Dick Harter is thinking higher with a good recruiting haul. St. Peter's, coached by Bob Dukiet, has one of the best defensive teams in the nation.

Holy Cross will miss backcourt star Ron Perry, but the Crusaders still have a nice blend of talent that includes Garry Witts and Kevin Greaney. Old Dominion lost a top player in Ronnie Valentine, but the Monarchs, led by Ronnie McAdoo and Bobby Vaughn, can still have another NCAA-tourney season.

Aching Duran Has Had Enough

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There was no downcast look on his face. There was no pained expression.

Roberto Duran just sat before the lights, cameras and newsmen and calmly said Tuesday night: "I am retiring from boxing right now. I don't want to fight anymore."

Duran had just lost his World Boxing Council welterweight title to Sugar Ray Leonard. He lost it by turning his back and walking away with 16 seconds left in the eighth round.

"At the end of the fifth round I started getting cramps in the stomach," the 29-year-old Panamanian said through his interpreter. "They got worse and worse. My body and arms were weakening."

He said he thought the fight was even when he stopped. The three judges had given a slight edge to the challenger Leonard.

The boxer who wore his nickname "Hands of Stone" as a sign of pride, continued to hold his head high. "No way should I be ashamed. This could happen to anybody."

Duran suffered only his second defeat in 74 bouts, dating back to March 8, 1967, when he won a four rounder from Carlos Mendoza. The only other defeat was a 10-round decision to Esteban DeJesus in 1972. Duran knocked DeJesus out the next two times the men fought.

Leonard never hurt Duran, the boxer said, adding that he thought Leonard was tiring but "I couldn't pressure him."

"I wasn't tired, my arms just felt weak," Duran said. He said he probably would have announced his retirement if he had been the victor.

Despite his loss to Leonard, Duran continued to scorn the new champion as he had during the pre-fight training. "Just because he beat me doesn't mean I have to respect him," Duran said.

Duran won the title when he beat Leonard in Montreal June 20. Duran also had been the undisputed world lightweight title holder but he gave up that crown because he was having trouble making the weight limit and finding opponents.

But he indicated he had had enough after nearly 13 years of professional fighting.

"I have been fighting for a long time," he said. "I have gotten tired of the sport. It is time to retire."

But when he walked out of the ring Tuesday night he did so both a loser and a legend.

Named one of the co-fighters of the decade for the 1970s, Jose Sulaiman, head of the World Boxing Council, praised him after the defeat as "one of the great fighters of all time. I express my deepest admiration for him."

Duran said before the fight he has never liked any of his opponents and that he would have lost if he had. But it made it plain that he held no love at all for Leonard. The street-trained Duran never could appreciate the gym-sharpened skills of the new champion.

And Leonard let it be known the feeling was mutual. "If he was my neighbor I would move," Leonard told a press conference during the week before the fight.

So it is ironic that the two names will be forever linked in boxing lore.

No Questions About His Win

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Others may question why Roberto Duran suddenly threw up his hands, stopping his multi-million dollar re-match with Sugar Ray Leonard. But Leonard doesn't.

"I beat the man with the 'Hands of Stone.' I beat Roberto Duran. I beat a legend," Leonard said after regaining the World Boxing Council welterweight title Tuesday night.

Asked if the Duran's concession of the fight tarnished the title, Leonard said, "It doesn't take anything away from the victory. I'm the champion and that's the way it is."

Duran astonished the 30,000 spectators at the Superdome and a million or more watching by closed circuit television when he stopped the fight at 2:44 of the eighth round.

He said later that he had stomach cramps and his arms were getting weak.

"I will never fight again. I am retiring from boxing now," Duran said at a news conference following the fight.

"I got so weak I couldn't go on," Duran said. "Leonard was weak but I didn't have the strength to pressure him."

Roanoke Tops Ayden-Grifton

ROANOKE — Roanoke High School swept an evening of basketball from Ayden-Grifton High School last night, as the Redskins opened the 1980-81 season. Roanoke won the girls' battle, 41-38, while the boys came up with a 60-53 win.

In the girls' game, Roanoke jumped out to an early lead, piling up a 13-6 lead in the first quarter. The Chargerettes rallied in the second quarter, outlasting the Squaws, 12-8, trimming the lead back to 21-18. In the third period, Ayden-Grifton managed to nip another point off the margin and trailed by only two, 29-27. In the final quarter, however, Roanoke held off the Chargerettes, 12-11, to preserve the victory.

Sylvia Parker led the Roanoke scoring with 14, while Wanda Roberson and Dezella Jones each had 10. Angela Griffin led Ayden-Grifton, scoring 17 points.

In the boys' contest, Roanoke also took off early, soaring out to a 17-11 lead in the first quarter of play. Ayden-Grifton gained control in the second quarter, however, outshooting the Redskins, 16-7, to take a 27-24 lead into intermission.

In the third quarter, however, Roanoke returned to the fore, holding a 20-14 edge over the Chargers, gaining a 44-41 lead. The "Skins then outhit A-G, 16-12, in the final quarter to take the win.

Angelo Spruill led the Roanoke scoring with 21, while Ricky Highsmith had 12 and Maurice Chance had 10. Timothy Edwards had 16 and Thomas Anderson had 12 to spark Ayden-Grifton.

Leonard The Winner
Sugar Ray Leonard raises his arm in victory after defeating Roberto Duran and winning the WBC Welterweight title in New Orleans Tuesday night. Duran quit in the eighth round, citing stomach and arm pains. (AP Laserphoto)

Duran Quits...

went to the canvas ever so briefly, neither on a knockdown. Duran slipped to his knees as he rushed at Leonard in the fourth. In the fifth, he pushed Leonard down in the challenger's corner. Throughout both rounds, the pattern of the fight continued — Duran stalking and Leonard slipping punches and scoring with counter attacks.

It was about that time that Duran began feeling the stomach cramps. Leonard knew why.

"If someone hit your body as hard as I hit his," Sugar Ray said, "you'd have cramps, too."

Leonard seemed to regain control of the tempo in the sixth round, stinging Duran with a series of lefts. Then, in the seventh, the challenger did the unthinkable. He taunted Duran, mocked the macho champion and dared him to do something about it.

It started with a swivel of his shoulders. Then his hips followed and soon, Sugar Ray went into a Muhammad Ali shuffle, almost daring Duran to hit him. Duran laughed, but Leonard knew that behind the smile, the champion was in trouble.

Next Leonard mugged at Duran, mocking him. Then he went into an exaggerated windmill windup with his right hand and tagged the champion with a left. It was the kind of trick kids pull in a schoolyard, not in a championship fight. Still, it worked, baffling Duran and frustrating the champion.

"It just happened," Leonard said when he was asked about his seventh round antics. "I felt myself in complete control. What I did confused him. Even with his brutal strength and superior strength, he wasn't hitting me. I was surprised."

By now, the fight had swung back in Leonard's direction. All three judges gave him the seventh round and two of them gave him the sixth, as well. But Duran certainly was still in the hunt when the eighth round began. He trailed by two points, 68-66, on the cards of judges Mike Jacobs and Jean Deswert, and a single point, 67-66, on the card of judge James Brimmell.

Sugar Ray seized the offensive at the start of the round, tagging Duran with three quick left jabs in the first half minute. The men fought on fairly even terms for the remainder of the round when suddenly, Duran decided he'd had enough and simply walked away.

He left behind a remarkable career. The loss was his first in eight years and only the second in 74 professional fights. He held the lightweight championship from 1972 until 1978 when he relinquished it to move up to the welterweight division.

Together with Leonard, Duran generated two of the biggest paydays in boxing history. Sugar Ray earned $10 million and Duran got $1.5 million for their first fight in Montreal June 20. This time they split $15 million with Duran getting $8 million and Leonard $7 million.

Next for Leonard could be World Boxing Association welterweight king Tommy Hearns. But the money must be right.

"This was unique, two little guys fighting for millions," Leonard said of his two fights with Duran. There was a touch of respect in his voice for the man he had beaten.

"Certainly, I respect him," Leonard said. "He's one of the greatest fighters pound for pound in history."

The feeling, however, was not mutual. "Just because Leonard beat me, I don't have to respect him," said Duran, who made no effort to hide his contempt for Sugar Ray in the days before the fight.

That contempt had been strengthened in Montreal where Duran won the crown by a narrow decision in a gruelling 15-round battle. Afterward, Leonard said he had learned his lesson. He said he could beat Duran with his left jab and his foot speed and those were the two weapons he used to reclaim the crown.

The ending was strange but it did not diminish the job Sugar Ray did.

"You never can predict how a fight will end," said Leonard.
No one could have predicted the way this one wound up.

Short Tigers Working Hard

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston's first-year coach Bob Ringer has one big problem: the Tigers are small, v-e-r-y small.

The tallest Tiger starter going into the season is 6'3" senior center Chris Peel. The rest are 6'1" or under.

"That's going to be a problem," Ringer said. "It's going to hurt us inside, but we've worked hard on our rebounding. That's something as a coach I feel you can overcome if you spend time working on it."

"It just takes a lot of hard work," something the Tigers have not had enough of Ringer said.

"Our biggest problem is that we've only had two weeks of practice," he said. "Quite a few of the kids played football and they're still playing physical. Some of them are just now beginning to come around."

The Tigers showed Ringer just how far they've "come around" Monday night when they opened their season with a 53-44 victory over Ayden-Grifton.

A year ago the Tigers were 19-6 and finished second in the Northeastern Conference but came on to win the league tournament. Gone from that team are James Woolard, an all-conference selection who averaged over 20 points a game, and Happy Jack Williams, one of the Tigers' mainstays last season.

Jim Lilley, a 6-2 senior guard, was expected to lead the Tigers this season but broke his leg in Williamston's last football game of the season and is lost for the year. Lilley was honorable mention all-conference last year.

Gone also this season is coach Rick Waldron, who left to take a coaching and playing position with a team in Sweden.

Ringer, who was an assistant under Waldron last season, does have one starter returning and four others who saw some playing time.

Back for his second year as a starter is junior forward Woody Sadler (6-1), who averaged just over 10 points a game last season. Other starters are Peel, guards McKinley Williams (senior, 6-1) and Vincent Washington (senior, 6-0) and forward Tom Bennett (senior, 6-1).

Top reserves include senior guard Vincent Lloyd (5-7) and senior forward Mike Peele (6-1). Other backup players are centers Steve Wilhelm (senior, 6-3) and Rodney Jones (junior, 6-5) and guards James Maye (junior, 6-0) and Randall Daniel (junior, 5-8) and forward Donnell Horner (junior, 5-11).

Admittedly small, the Tigers must rely on quickness and defense this season, Ringer said. "We've got good quickness. I won't say exceptional, but it's got to be the mainstay of our team this year," Ringer said.

"That, and pressure defense. We've got to put pressure on to stay in the ballgame. I like man-to-man and we'll use that a lot, but because of personnel we may go to zone also."

Also because of personnel Ringer did not want to make any predictions about how his team will do this year.

"I don't know and I hate to say that we'll finish second or fourth or seventh," Ringer said. "I do expect us to finish in the top four so we can get into the playoffs."

"Right now I'd say Roanoke will be picked to be one or two and Tarboro has a front line of 6-7, 6-4 and 6-4 and if they can walk they'll be tough. I just think it's going to be a close race all the way."

Schmidt Is National's Most Valuable

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Schmidt, power-hitting third baseman for the world champion Philadelphia Phillies, was named the National League's Most Valuable Player today in a unanimous vote of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Schmidt collected all 24 first-place votes from a BBWA committee comprised of two writers from each National League city. Gary Carter of the Montreal Expos and Jose Cruz of the Houston Astros finished second and third, respectively, and were the only other players named on all 24 ballots.

Schmidt joined Orlando Cepeda, the winner in 1967 for the St. Louis Cardinals, as the only unanimous NL MVP in history.

Schmidt is the third Philadelphia Phillies player to win the award, and the first in 30 years. Jim Konstanty won in 1950 and Chuck Klein in 1932.

Unlike George Brett, who won the AL MVP award last week primarily on the strength of his remarkable .390 average, Schmidt slugged his way to the NL award.

His average was only .286, but his 48 homers, 121 runs batted in and .624 slugging percentage each led the league. The No. 2 slugger in the NL, Jack Clark of San Francisco, had a slugging average 107 percentage points lower than Schmidt's.

The 48 homers by Schmidt were a major-league record for a third baseman, breaking the previous mark of 47 by Eddie Mathews.

The 31-year-old slugger also was the MVP of the World Series, in which the Phillies beat Kansas City in six games. The regular-season MVP balloting is done before the playoffs.

Schmidt amassed 336 points with his 24 first-place votes, each of which was worth 14 points. A second-place vote was worth nine, third eight, etc.

Carter got 193 points to finish second and Cruz 166 for third.

Schmidt was at his best in the last weeks of the season, when the Phillies were locked in a do-or-die pennant race with Montreal and Pittsburgh.

Schmidt had 13 homers in September and hit one in each of Philadelphia's last four games, including a dramatic game-winning blast in the 11th inning Oct. 4 against the Expos to clinch the division title.

From Sept. 1 on, he hit .304, drove in 27 runs and had a .688 slugging percentage.

"This year, we found a way to win at an important time in the season," Schmidt said. "That's so important, more so than great statistics. That's what every team wants to find — a way to win."

"If he isn't a runaway MVP, I've never seen one," said teammate Tim McCarver, a major-leaguer since 1959, before the playoffs. "This was also the year he emerged as a real leader. He was the guy the players looked up to to carry them offensively. And he kept doing it, which just reinforced their confidence and his."

The Phillies defeated Houston in the NL championship playoff despite a poor performance by Schmidt, as he failed to deliver numerous times in the clutch. But he responded in the World Series with a .381 average, two homers, seven RBI and two game-winning hits.

"I was trying too hard," Schmidt said of his hitting against the Astros. "I was carrying too much on my shoulders."

"I really started having success as a hitter just before the All-Star break last year," Schmidt said after the 1980 season. "I moved back off the plate in a series against the Dodgers and tried to hit everything straightaway. I found I was less vulnerable to the pitches that had been getting me out — especially the inside pitches the Dodgers used to bury me with. "I stand away from the plate and stride into the ball like George Brett and Rod Carew. It's sort of the Charlie Lau approach. A hitter must adopt a particular style and learn everything he can about himself." Schmidt, a six-time Gold Glove winner at third, including this year, has been recognized for years as a player who consistently hits the ball hard, even when he makes an

Faust: Tough Decision On Job

By JOE MOOSHL
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Gerry Faust will become Notre Dame's 24th head football coach next season and is expected to produce winners, but nothing in the manner of his accomplishments at Cincinnati Moeller High.

Faust, 45, was head coach at Moeller for 18 years and ended up with a record of 173 victories, 17 losses and 2 ties for a .906 winning percentage.

"Not Knute Rockne nor the Angel Gabriel could be expected to duplicate a record like that," said Rev. Edmund Joyce, the executive vice president at Notre Dame who is in charge of the athletic board and made the selection of Faust.

Wearing a blue tie dotted with shamrocks, Faust Tuesday was introduced to the press at a conference on campus.

Speaking in a deep, raspy but natural voice, he said, "No, I don't have a cold. People always ask me that."

"The toughest decision I ever made was to leave Moeller High," said Faust. "There's no other place I'd leave Moeller for other than Notre Dame."

Faust ended his career at Moeller Sunday with a 30-7 victory over Massillon to win the Ohio Division I championship for the fifth time in six years, closing one of the most successful reigns in high school football annals.

Moeller sent some 250 players into the college ranks including 15 to Notre Dame, where six graduates are on the current undefeated and oncedited Irish squad.

"We were impressed with the young men that came to us from Moeller both as students and athletes," said Father Joyce.

"Their priorities have been in order by seeking an education instead of just a football career," said Joyce. "That was a major factor in bringing Gerry Faust to our attention."

Faust succeeds Dan Devine, who announced his resignation prior to this season.

Devine, who has a Dec. 6 date at Southern California before taking his Irish to the Sugar Bowl and a meeting with top-ranked Georgia, made a brief appearance at Faust's inaugural Notre Dame press conference.

"I welcome Gerry, we have been close friends," said Devine. "We are seeking a successful end to the season and a smooth transition. He'll do a splendid job. I know he'll be successful. I would like to have my son play for him and that's the highest recommendation one coach can give another."

Faust said it would be "a difficult task to emulate what Dan Devine has done here" and "there is no greater honor than being named the Notre Dame football coach."

"When I was in the fifth grade I knew the Notre Dame fight song but I never had an opportunity to go to school here," said Faust. "I wasn't good enough to play."

Best Has Easy Time Against NBA's Worst

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The best played the worst in the National Basketball Association, with predictable results.

Julius Erving scored 15 of his 31 points in the third quarter as the Philadelphia 76ers pulled away to a 108-92 victory over the Dallas Mavericks Tuesday night. Philadelphia's 20-3 record is the best in the NBA, while the expansion Mavericks are 3-20.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said that despite Dallas' poor record, he hadn't taken the Mavericks lightly.

"No game is a tuneup game," he said. "We came to play this game and win."

And Dallas Coach Dick Motta said he had approached the unenviable task of sending his expansion club against powerful Philadelphia with optimism.

"You can't go into a game just hoping for a 10-point loss," said Motta. "Heck, we're in the NBA. If you don't think you can win, if you don't think you belong, then get out."

In other NBA games, the San Diego Clippers beat the Denver Nuggets 108-94 and the Atlanta Hawks edged the Portland Trail Blazers 112-108.

The victory at Dallas was the 10th straight road win for the Sixers, who lead Boston by five games in the Atlantic Division.

"We've gotten out of the chute pretty good," said Cunningham, "but we've still got a long way to go."

A basket by Jim Spanarkel, who led Dallas with 20 points, cut the Sixers' lead to 67-61 with 4:32 left in the third quarter. But the 76ers outscored the Mavs 10-2 over the next 1:58, with Erving getting seven of those points, to break the game open.

Motta blamed the loss on sloppy ballhandling. "When you play the best team in the world, if you expect to win you can't pass the ball the way we did," he said.

Clippers 108, Nuggets 94 Reserve guard Freeman Williams scored 28 points, 19 of them in the second quarter, as San Diego beat Denver.

Denver trailed 80-71 entering the third quarter but scored the first five points of the period. But Williams made a three-point basket, two free throws and a dunk to give San Diego an 11-point lead and the Nuggets didn't threaten after that.

Center Swen Nater added 26 points and 20 rebounds for the Clippers, while Dan Issel and David Thompson led the Nuggets with 20 points each.

Hawks 112, Blazers 108 John Drew's 34 points helped Atlanta win its third in a row and handed Portland its 10th straight road loss.

The Hawks scored the first 10 points of the game, led by as many as 17 points late in the first quarter and were never headed.

Final Picks Of The Year

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"Ten little Indians...Nine little Indians...Eight little Indians...and then there was one."

That one is Georgia, the only undefeated, untied team in college football. If the nursery rhyme goes to its conclusion the bottom line will read:

"Then there was none." The combination of the nursery rhyme and Murphy's Law, which stipulates that whatever is an inconvenience to the most people is certain to happen, makes such an eventuality possible.

So, the script of college football's great final showdown should look this way: Georgia to go into the Sugar Bowl still unblemished, Southern Cal to upset onced-tied Notre Dame on Dec. 6 and Notre Dame to bound back for a victory over Georgia at New Orleans.

Thus, who winds up No. 1? Leave it to the polls and polls. Last week's score: 30-10, 750. Season: 428-147, 744.

Now the final picks, with favorite's point spread in parentheses:

FRIDAY Penn St. 10, Pittsburgh (3½) 7: A reversal. Both teams tough as anthracite.

SATURDAY Georgia (20) 19, Georgia Tech 10: Remember this is the same Tech team that tied the Irish.

Navy (17½) 14, Army 3: The point spread is meaningless in this service spectacle.

Oklahoma (23), 30, Oklahoma St. 14: The Sooners are shooting for the whole ball of wax.

Texas (12½) 7, Texas A&M 14: Wouldn't be surprised to see an upset in this crusher.

Miami, Fla. 22, Florida (5) 18: The Gators may be guilty of looking ahead to Florida State.

Alabama (17) 24, Auburn 17: Auburn's best chance in years to trap the Bear, but no luck.

Tennessee (13½) 32, Vanderbilt 7: The Vols take out their frustrations on an old foe.

The others: Arizona St. (3) 33, Arizona 20; Houston (19) 28, Rice 7; Boston College (23) 35, Holy Cross 14; Arkansas (5) 18, Texas Tech 14; Brigham Young 32, Las Vegas 14; Hawaii 23, Air Force 15.

SUNDAY UCLA (30) 43, Oregon St. 12: The Bruins still ride the euphoria of victory over USC.

SATURDAY, DEC. 6 Southern Cal 27, Notre Dame 20: The Trojans get bowl fever when they play the Irish.

East Carolina Goalie Steve Brown

Steve Brown's Play Was Bright Spot For Soccer

By BOB BENSON
Special To The Reflector

Although Steve Brown's team did not finish with a winning record, he added a shining star to East Carolina University's soccer program.

Brown has now been invited to try out for the U.S. Macabee Team at Columbia University. This team is selected from hundreds of collegiate soccer players across the nation, and the tryouts will be held this weekend. To qualify, one must be an amateur and one must be Jewish. If selected, Brown will travel to Israel to play against teams from other nations.

East Carolina coach Brad Smith feels Brown has a good chance to make the Macabee team. "I think Steve has a good chance. He needs work on his techniques and this will help him to get to the balls where pure physical ability will not get to."

Brown started his soccer career at the age of 12 at the junior high school level. "I've never played anywhere else but goalie," he said. "It's the only place I feel comfortable."

He continued his play at Connetquot High School in Bohemia, N.Y. There he received such honors as Most Valuable Defensive Player and was named team captain his senior year.

Brown was contacted to play at small colleges around the New York area but decided to stay around home so he could be near his fiancée. Brown played his 1978 season at Suffolk Junior College, where he earned all-region honors. His skills developed swiftly and he felt he needed to move on to tougher competition and a Division I school. He was contacted by such teams as Virginia Commonwealth, New York Tech and St. John's.

However, during his two years at Suffolk, he became interested in Law Enforcement as a concentration of study and found East Carolina to have an excellent program in that field.

"I first contacted Coach Smith back in 1978," Brown recalled. "I knew of East Carolina's Law Enforcement program and wanted to hear more about it."

He then transferred to East Carolina, but sat out the 1979 season with a broken collarbone.

This season, Brown broke two school records and came up just seven short of breaking another. Brown tallied 34 saves against N.C. State and collected five shut-outs in one season, exceeding the old record of shut-outs by two.

"Brown has very good game sense; he knows what is going to happen and where the ball is going to go," Smith said. "If he gets to the ball he's going to stop it. He has great quickness and good reactions."

Brown admits that the competition up north is more physical than in the south. "Players are more aggressive up north. I really can't put my finger on it, it's just something about soccer up north. I'm not saying it's better, I'm just saying it's more physical."

As Brown sat out the 1979 season, he found that there were too many individuals on the team. "We play more like a team this year. I think our overall attitude has improved. I have to give a lot of credit to Dwayne DeGaetano. He anchored our defense this year and Dennis Elwell also did a fine job at sweeper back."

As for next year, Brown feels if East Carolina has a good recruiting year, and pick up a good striker, the Pirates will do just fine. "We just added one year of experience to a young team, and we show a lot of promise," Brown said.

Kinston Nips Conley, 63-62

KINSTON — Kinston High School gained a close 63-62 victory over D.H. Conley's Vikings last night in the opening game of the year for the Vikes.

In the girls' game, the Valkyries rolled over Kinston, 50-19.

Details of the games were not made available to The Daily Reflector.

Eskimos Of Canada Look For Piece Of The Action

CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
YELLOWKNIFE,
Northwest Territories (AP)
— The Eskimos of Canada's far north, those inoffensive curiosities of old travelogues, are barging into the Canadian consciousness.

They want a piece of the action — a share of the petrodollars and about a third of the country. "As an aboriginal people we have a right to control over our resources," said Michael Amarook, paramount leader of the Canadian Eskimos, or "Inuit," which means "the people."

The issue is urgent for the Northwest Territories' 18,000 Inuit — the energy industry is moving toward commercial exploitation of gas and oil found under the arctic's islands and icy seas.

The Inuit say they are not trying to secede from Canada. Rather, they want to establish a homeland within the Canadian confederation, a place they will call "Nunavut," which means "our land."

They hope this will give them what every other Canadian has, the right to a more direct share in the revenues from natural resources.

The greatest share of Canada's oil and gas revenues goes to the 10 provincial governments because the national constitution makes the provinces owners of their resources.

But the Northwest Territories are federally administered — a "colony," say its residents. The federal government in Ottawa makes all decisions on resource development and collects all royalties from production.

A couple of Inuit trappers on Banks Island, in the western arctic, can make as much as $80,000 in a good year of trapping white fox, said the official in Yellowknife.

Teachers Taking Course To Reignite The 'Spark'

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer
BUTLER, Pa. (AP) — Teachers in northwestern Pennsylvania have been jumping off roofs, huffing through a Marine-style obstacle course and dangling from parachute sails — all with hopes of polishing their performance in the classroom.

"You destroy their spirit by constant ridicule and persecution from the public, administrators and parents. And when their spirit is broken, self-image and morale goes down."

He was talking about teacher burnout, a recently recognized but largely unmeasurable phenomenon. "I have no doubt it exists," said Virginia Koehler, assistant director of the teaching and instruction division at the National Institute of Education in Washington.

20 teachers has been attacked in the United States," Musko said, referring to NEA statistics from 1979. Other factors in teacher stress include overcrowded classrooms, reams of paperwork and expectations that teachers assume cultural training abandoned by parents.

The spark just goes out. Teaching becomes a routine," Ms. Koehler said. Enter Ken Musko and his unconventional course.

In the three years he has been teaching the program for the Midwestern Intermediate Unit, which provides various services for schools in Butler, Lawrence and Mercer counties, the course has gotten rave reviews from 150 participants.

"Self-image is the key," he said. "This program tries to help people find out that they're better than they think they are."

To do that, Musko believes individuals must be challenged — maybe even a little bit frightened.

BLIND TRUST — With eyes covered, a teacher falls from a desk top into the arms of colleagues during a "trust activity" that is part of a program to build enthusiasm for teachers. (AP Laserphoto)

Not every instruction period involves derring-do. Time is also spent in group dynamics, trust activities and problem solving. At the end of each class the "point of the day" is discussed.

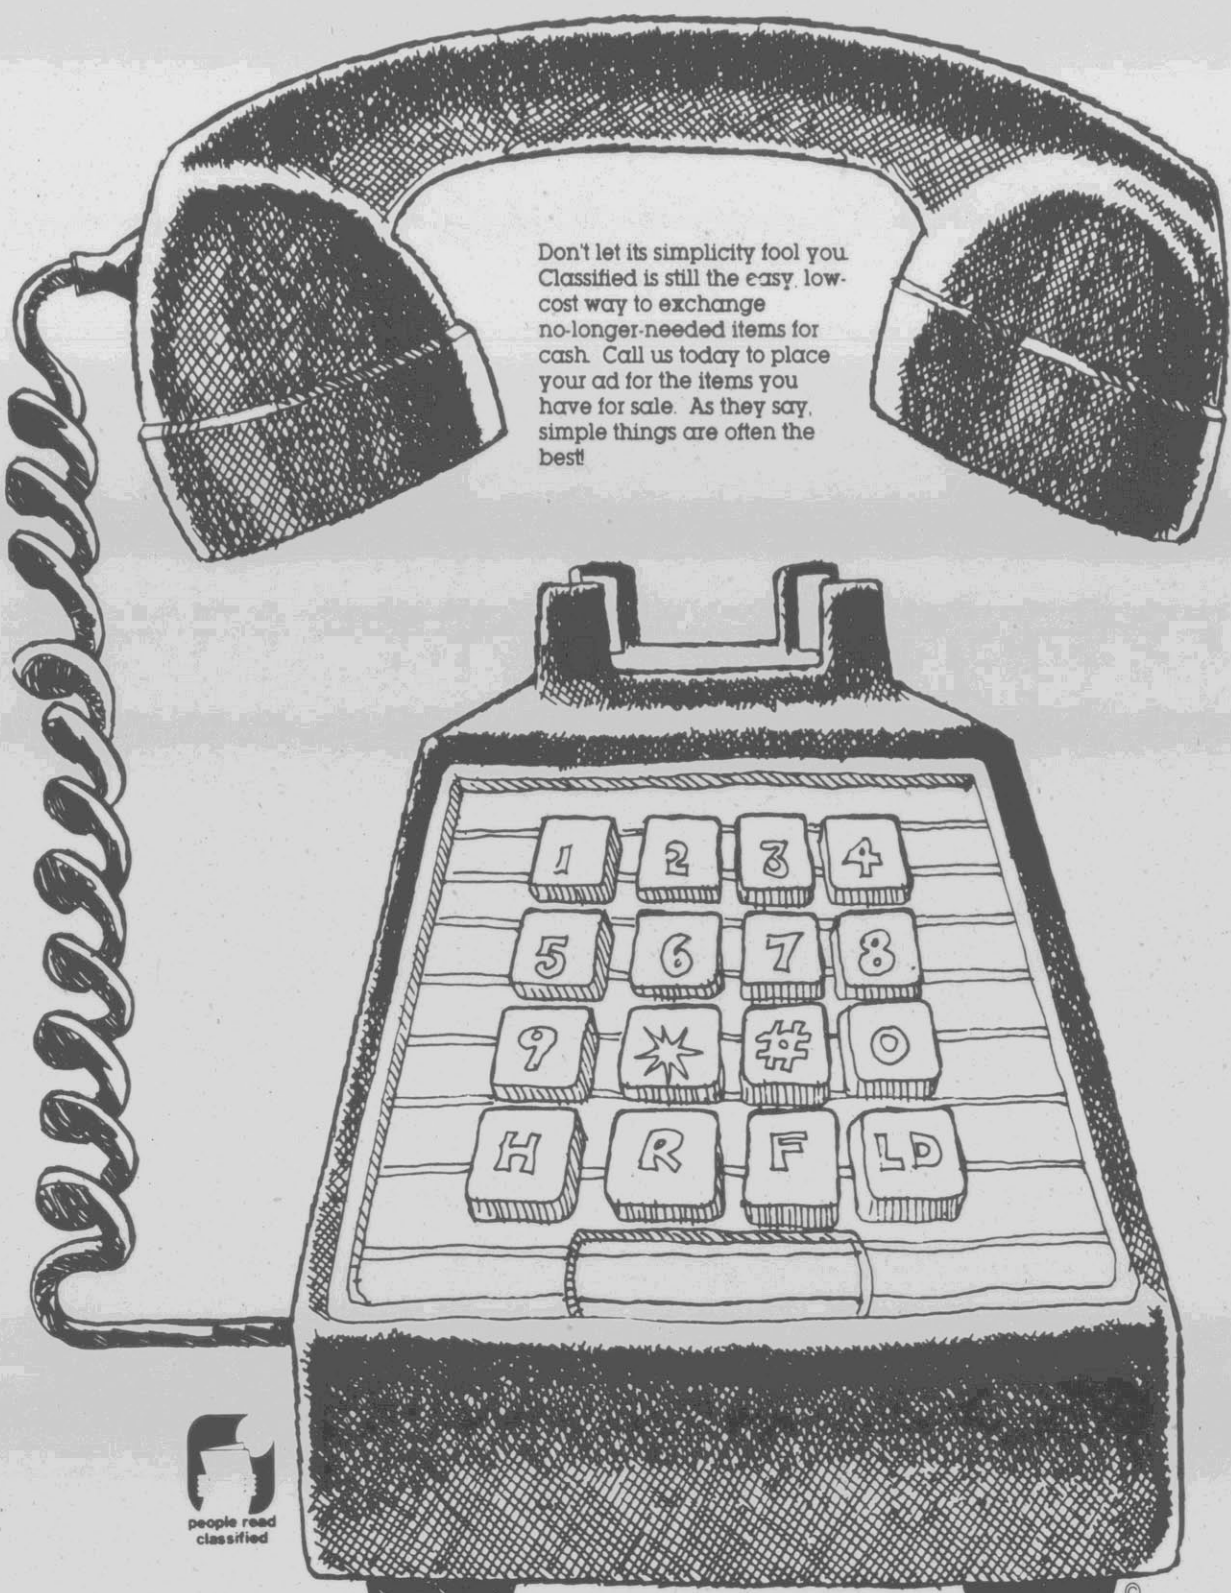

Typically the first of four sessions begins with teachers "ventilating." "I get them to talk about themselves, about education and what is really bothering them," said Musko.

Then come the icebreakers — activities to get class members laughing and interacting with each other. "In one of them we get teachers to make a real loud 'Oh' sound, like this," Musko warbled as he mimicked an opera baritone, one arm outstretched, the other resting against his orange and green western shirt.

U.S. Has A Listening Post On An Unseen Universe

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
GREENBANK, W. Va. (AP) — Among West Virginia's apple orchards and rambling old farmhouses stands a row of gigantic dishes staring into space, silently eavesdropping on the hum of the universe.

The radio telescopes of The National Radio Astronomy Observatory, located in the Greenbrier Valley near the Virginia border, hunt for sounds of life across the universe, turning radio blips and static into pictures of galaxies that would take spacecraft hundreds of light years to reach.

They also reach back into the origins of time, hunting for debris and other clues from the explosions and stellar collisions that formed the first stars and planets at the birth of the universe.

"It's as if we're on the shore staring out across an endless sea without ever knowing where it goes or ends," says a guide leading the way to the telescopes.

George Russano sits in the observatory's control room, poring over calculations of an experiment on the birth of stars. Around him banks of sophisticated computers whirl and click.

"We're trying to understand what makes a star, what triggers star formation and the evolution of galaxies and galactic structures," Russano said.

"We're looking for what started it all."

The giant telescopes — rotating metal dishes up to 300 feet in diameter and two acres in size — stand in the fallow fields of farms that were purchased when astronomers established a listening post on the universe here in the early 1960s.

Crumbling buildings still dot the observatory's grounds, and deer and rabbits roam freely amid the spindly legs of the telescopes as they turn slowly to track distant stars and planets.

"It's all a bit obscure, I suppose," Russano said. "Someone once did a calculation that the articles in which we publish our findings are read by three people in the whole world."

Scientists built the nation's first major radio observatory in the sleepy valley because its seclusion helped protect the extremely sensitive telescopes. (The Greenbank observatory is now aided by installations at Socorro, N.M., and Tucson, Ariz.)

The telescopes, tuned to detect the finest details on distant worlds, can be sidetracked and confused by a transistor radio or the electric starter of a car. Radio stations and many types of machinery are banned in the area.

Astronomers and technicians travel around the observatory grounds in old 1950s diesel taxicabs that don't need electric starters. An old yellow school bus takes larger parties around the observatory.

As one of the cabs lurches and sputters down the road to the telescopes, Wally Oref, an observatory official, explained, "The government had to buy American and the scientists said we had to have diesels — these were all there were."

Oref recalled the observatory's early days when radio astronomers were expanding humanity's knowledge of the universe almost daily, discovering new galaxies and charting the unseen quadrants of the sky.

The days of dramatic discoveries have passed and the telescope's crews now spend most of their days filling in details, he said.

"We're mainly preoccupied with the day-to-day drudgery of mapping the universe. And that's what we'll be doing for years and years to come," Oref said.

The steady routine of mapping a universe that human eyes may never see is occasionally broken by unexpected discoveries. A group of graduate students training on a telescope recently found a new star, Oref said.

Astronomers are working to develop practical applications for their discoveries, including navigating in space, measuring movement of the continents and predicting earthquakes.

Stars and planets emit natural radio signals which travel across space and can be captured by radio telescopes. By studying the signals radio astronomers discover new celestial formations and can determine some of their chemical and physical characteristics.

But often, instead of solving old problems, the faint signals and blips picked up by radio astronomers lead into seemingly endless new mysteries. Much of the information gathered by the telescopes is stored away for the day when science may be able to decipher it, Russano said.

"It's really a haphazard thing. We stumble across signals that we don't understand and have to try and explain," he said. "We're tackling vast problems with very limited technology. We're pushing the equipment to its limits."

GIANT EAR — The giant 300-foot radio telescope of the National Radio Astronomy, Greenbank, W. Va., is the centerpiece of a systematic exploration of deep space. The giant scope, which has a surface area of two acres, detects radio waves from other planets and stars and converts the blips into pictures of distant worlds. (AP Laserphoto)

Old Letters Show Jeff Davis Was A Warm, Caring Person

By LÊS SEAGO
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A box of letters and business papers, hidden away in a bank vault for almost a century, is helping fill in the gaps in the story of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America.

Scholars who have seen the letters say they could change the way history views the man who piloted the South through the Civil War. The letters go on public display Nov. 25 at Memphis State University, where they will be available for research.

In contrast to the haughty Davis portrayed in history books, the letters — most written by Davis to his son-in-law, Joel Addison Hayes Jr., between 1864 and 1882 — reveal Davis as a man who cared deeply about his family and worried about the Southern soldiers and civilians who suffered because of the war.

And despite imprisonment and years of financial distress following the South's defeat, none of Davis' letters express anger at his treatment.

Most of the letters deal with Davis' tangled business and legal affairs, primarily his long battle to win title to Brierfield, the Mississippi plantation his brother, Joseph, gave him 30 years before secession.

Throughout the collection is evidence Davis was bothered by the same problems facing other Southerners of the day: high prices, poor medical care, taxes and difficulty in finding dependable workers.

The collection includes 35 personal letters and an assortment of financial records. Among the latter are bills for medical care and a funeral for Jefferson Davis Jr., a victim of the 1878 yellow fever epidemic in Memphis.

The existence of the Davis papers was known to but a few Davis heirs and officials of the First Tennessee Bank until recently. The bank had had custody of the collection since 1882 because Hayes, who married Margaret Howell Davis in 1876, was then cashier of the State National Bank, one of First Tennessee's predecessors.

The papers were kept in a strong box in the bank vault until two years ago when they were turned over to the John Willard Brister Library at Memphis State. The Davis Family Association, a group of Davis descendants, two months ago finally granted title to the university for use by historical researchers, allowing the collection to go on display.

A $40,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities was used to catalog and microfilm the collection.

The letters, addressed to "Dear Addison," provide a fascinating view of life among what had been the Southern aristocracy. The writing, most of it in Davis' hand, is easily readable although the language today seems stilted.

Most of the letters were written on finely lined embossed paper, and many are in their original envelopes. The postage stamps bear the 1880s price of sending a letter — three cents.

In a letter dated Nov. 26, 1880, Davis wrote of his pleasure over Hayes' collection of an outstanding debt. Nevertheless, Davis said he was returning the draft to Hayes.

"I intended that you should keep the money when you collected it, and put it to my credit ...," he wrote. "I therefore have cancelled the draft you sent me, and return it to you, to be used as above indicated, this being safer than to endorse it to you and so send it through our not over reliable mails."

The same letter discusses the price of brick for chimneys in tenant farmhouses. There is a poignant addition about his late son.

"I recently received a letter from a brother member of Jefferson's. ... He writes very affectionately of my boy, and asks for the society a picture of him," the father wrote.

In a Dec. 11, 1881, letter from Louisville, Ky., Davis brought his son-in-law up to date on his travels with Varina, his wife, and Winnie, a Davis daughter. Both women had become ill during the trip, and Davis said as soon as they were able to resume the journey, they would go to Brierfield.

In 1882, Davis wrote to complain about the proposed price of new tenant farmhouses at Brierfield. "The price is out of the question, being nearly double the highest price we have ever paid for such buildings," Davis wrote.

His distress at the inflation of the times is mirrored by modern money moans, although prices have changed somewhat — Davis was responding to word from Hayes that a builder had offered to erect the houses for $300 apiece.

Natalie Ewart-Smith, a historian who has been working with the Davis collection, said the papers are important because they deal with a period of the Confederate leader's life that has been given scant attention.

"They fill in the gaps," Mrs. Stewart-Smith said. "They were written after he returned to private life, and that period has been almost ignored."

Workshops On Child Reasoning

ECU News Bureau

Educating the young may be easier if teachers understand how children think, and workshops will be held across North Carolina to teach teachers more about powers of reasoning as applied to the classroom setting.

Co-sponsored by the science education department at East Carolina University and the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, the workshop will focus on a style of teaching developed by California educator Robert Karplus.

"It will help teachers come up with ideas on how they can modify their teaching," says ECU science education chairman Dr. Floyd Mattheis. "Most secondary school science teachers have not been exposed to this before."

Basically, the workshops are intended to teach teachers to use objects the students can see and handle to teach science. This is a departure from the straight lecture method.

Using concrete objects to teach abstract concepts takes into account the student's undeveloped reasoning ability, Mattheis says.

Mattheis said several factors, such as development of the brain during early adolescence as well as the student's experience might lead to a concrete level of comprehension. The student might be able to memorize certain scientific concepts without truly understanding them. Understanding is increased, he said, when the student can work with materials he can see, handle and manipulate.

Bill Spooner, a science consultant with the Department of Public Instruction said that concepts cannot be effectively memorized.

"Driving is a concept," he said. "But you have to experience it. You can't just read about it in a driver's manual."

All schools in the state which have grades 7-12 were recently mailed a brochure describing the workshops. "We hope we'll have a lot of responses, but it's too soon to tell," Mattheis said.

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Thanksgiving is the best holiday, I think, but it's not quite properly arranged as far as television is concerned.

I might as well admit that I've evolved (or dissipated) to the point where television plays a role in holiday making at my house, especially at Thanksgiving.

Unfortunately, the best Thanksgiving TV is on when you don't need it; that is, during the day. NBC starts early in the morning, with the Macy's Parade, Santa's first appearance of the season.

This year, as seems to be the trend in parades, the Macy's procession is going to seem more like a mobile disco than a holiday parade - the Captain and Tennille, the Spinners, Stephanie Mills, Jerry Orbach and Chita Rivera are among those who'll be singing (singing!) in the parade.

Still, Macy's parade will have all those giant balloons, including the 50-foot Snoopy and the 57-foot Mickey Mouse, as links to tradition.

About mid-morning, PBS is presenting a live holiday montage, featuring Thanksgiving observances from a Baptist church in Florida, a fox hunt in Massachusetts (a universal Thanksgiving tradition) and Thanksgiving dinners with a Nebraska family and a San Francisco foster home.

CBS checks in with some swell children's programming, depending upon your location, including a cartoon version of "The Nutcracker" and "The Adventures of Sinbad."

And CBS has its own Thanksgiving parade extravaganza, a three-hour job hosted by William Conrad. CBS always shows clips from the Honolulu All-Floral Parade (with a sun-drenched Hawaiian Santa Claus), perhaps to cheer Californians depressed about their unseasonal weather.

And of course, there is football. CBS will broadcast its traditional Detroit Lions game (this year the Lions get the Bears) and NBC will televise the Seattle-Dallas game in the afternoon.

The problem with all of this is, the routines of the holiday don't allow for much TV watching.

When Pop is visiting (as he is this year), the turkey cook starts at about the same time the Macy's Parade does. Pop is chef, which means that he gets to direct the rest of us - preparing Grandma Jo's sausage stuffing, minding the fire (or the air-conditioning), peeling the yams, cutting onions and the like.

This done, and the turkey cooking, Pop breaks out the bourbon and egg-nog and we all sit around and tell lies for a while. Then comes supper, followed by dessert, and the traditional Indian poker game.

By evening, when we're too stuffed and tired to do anything else, we're ready for TV. But TV, for some reason, has already finished with Thanksgiving and moved on to business-as-usual.

The closest thing to a network Thanksgiving show on Thanksgiving night is NBC's "The Sound of Music," which really has nothing to do with the day (and has been known to cause stomach cramps if viewed too soon after ingesting Grandma Jo's sausage stuffing). Most of the promising conversational ground has been well covered in the egg-nog-and-letting-session.

But this year, this Thanksgiving, we are saved. A local station, channel five, is broadcasting a Thanksgiving night Japanese sci-fi festival. Featured are not one, not two, but THREE Godzilla classics - the original (in which Raymond Burr plays the lead human), plus "Godzilla on Monster Island" and "Godzilla's Revenge."

Let me give my thanks now.
