Polish Communist Party Is Purging Its Politburo

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish Communist Party's central committee purged four more Politburo members and brought Wladyslaw Gomulka's hard-line police boss back into the inner circle in its attempt to cope with the independent labor movement and the country's acute economic crisis.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union denied rumors of threatening troop movements, and the Carter administration warned Moscow against military intervention.

Ending a two-day meeting Tuesday, the central committee ousted Wladyslaw Kruczek, a former trade union boss; Alojzy Karkoszka, another former associate of purged party leader Edward Gierek; former Interior Minister Stanislaw Kowalczyk, and Andrzej Werblan, a longtime party ideologist.

The central committee also stripped Gierek of all party and public posts.

Two Politburo positions were left empty but the other two were filled by Gierek's foe Tadeusz Grabski and Gomulka's interior minister, Mieczyslaw Moczar, whose police were used in the bloody suppression of worker riots in 1970 that resulted in Gomulka's replacement by Gierek.

Gierek himself was purged Sept. 5 and replaced by Stanislaw Kania after the massive strike wave during the summer.

The latest purge was another step by Kania to consolidate his power and deal with the nation's $20-billion foreign debt, food and consumer goods shortages and the restive free labor movement led by Solidarity, the first big union formed free of party control in the Soviet bloc.

In a speech preceding his elevation to the Politburo, Moczar said Solidarity leaders were young people without experience and at times were bound to get carried away with themselves. He warned of a trend of "adventurism" within the union but added that it "should not upset us so much" because "those adventurous elements will be eliminated from the healthy social movement."

Kania, in his keynote address to the central committee meeting Monday, warned militant independent labor leaders to "sober up" and said they are threatening the peace of Europe. He offered to cooperate with union leaders who show restraint but warned against "downright political strikes."

A flurry of reports of Soviet military moves on Poland's eastern and western borders swept Europe as the central committee met, but the Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow said: "We categorically deny all these rumors."

"Troops in the trans-Carpathian area as well as in other areas are living in a normal life," it said. "There is no urgent or non-urgent mobilization or draft of reservists. All inventions about this are on the conscience of those who circulate them."

The Carpathian area stretches along southern Poland to Romania and is home to major Soviet units with headquarters in Lvov. Units from that area participated in the Soviet-Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

President Carter's chief spokesman, Jody Powell, told reporters in Washington a Soviet "intervention or invasion of Poland would be most serious and adverse, both for East-West relations in general and in particular for relationships between the United States and the Soviet Union."

He also warned that it would be "serious mistake" for the Russians or any of their allies to assume that the American government could not respond to such intervention if it occurred during the transition to the new Reagan administration.

Some Pentagon analysts believe a Soviet military move is possible within the next few weeks.

Commission Choice Soon

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners are expected to name a replacement for Ed Warren, who resigned last week after six years on the board, sometime soon — possibly as early as tomorrow.

Who that replacement might be remains to be seen.

Warren resigned as a commissioner November 26, when he was certified as a representative from Pitt and Greene Counties to the North Carolina House of Representatives. He won election to the House seat in the November 4 election. He could not hold both elective offices.

State law requires that Warren's replacement be from the same district (Greenville Township), and be a member of the same political party (Democratic Party).

The law also requires the board of commissioners to consult with the executive committee of the party of the commissioner to be replaced, before the appointment is made. However, the board is not bound by the executive committee's recommendations.

In this case, the Democratic executive committee met Monday night and voted to recommend Dr. Tom Johnson, a professor in the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety at East Carolina University, as Warren's successor.

Following that session, Pitt Democratic Party Chairman George Saleeby said, "We hope the board of commissioners will honor our recommendation. Tom is an outstanding Democrat with a long record of service to the citizens of Pitt County." And Saleeby is scheduled to meet with the commissioners tomorrow afternoon to "consult" with the board about Warren's replacement.

However, Johnson, a member of the ECU faculty for 23 years, is not the only person known to be interested in the appointment. Neither is he the only one to have been considered by the executive committee.

Kelly Barnhill — president of Hendrix-Barnhill Co., a farm equipment sales and water and sewer construction firm — was one of two other persons considered for the seat on the board of commissioners at the Monday meeting. He is known to be interested, and has been mentioned by others as a possible choice.

Mrs. Ruth Trevathan — a former member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission — was the other person considered by the executive committee.

Among other persons who have been mentioned as a possible replacement for Warren is former Greenville mayor Percy Cox, although he said yesterday that he is not interested in the appointment.

But Greenville businessman Jack Edwards is another matter. His name has been mentioned, and according to Edwards, "yes, I've expressed interest."

Who Warren's replacement will be is still undecided. And if the members of the board of commissioners have any favorites, they are not making their choice known.

But it is known that most feel like Greenville Township's other representative on the board, Charles Gaskins, who said, "We're going to make the appointment right away...get it out of the way."

Farmville Commission Asks Re-Study Of TV Cable Franchise Plans

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners Tuesday night asked their cable television committee to go back into deliberation and make a new decision based on all the information that the three companies vying for the town's cable television franchise will submit prior to Dec. 16 at noon.

Committee chairman, Commissioner David Stowe, earlier announced a decision to award the franchise to Alert Cable TV of Wilson, which was competing against Farmville Cable and Tar River Communications. He said the committee had been working over a year on the matter and had made the decision based on the town's cable television ordinance as it seemed to them to apply to the information submitted by the three firms.

Commissioner John Turner Walston said that Frank Styers of Farmville Cable had submitted more information, as had one of the other firms, and he would like to see the matter reopened. He said, all things being equal, he would like to see the money stay in Farmville, i.e. that Styers receive the franchise. After other cable television committee members, Jack Lewis and Jim Hockaday, said they had no objections, it was decided to let all three firms submit whatever new information they would like up to the Dec. 16 deadline.

Stowe said he has been told by Farmville citizens that they wish the commissioners would go ahead with a decision and that he hoped there would be no further delays.

Town Librarian John Barker told the board about the beginnings of a Friends of the Library organization that would work in conjunction with the librarian, the trustees and the town to maintain an interest by the public in the donation of books, magazines and equipment and in endowments and bequests to the library. He said he feels that in the economically troubled years ahead such a program will greatly supplement the allocations of the town for the maintenance of the good library services that Farmville has long enjoyed.

In further action the board did the following:

— Awarded a bid for 58 electric poles to Southern Wood Piedmont Company of Wilmington;

— Approved a bid that did not require a deposit on cylinders for liquid chlorine to Ence Chemical of New Bern. This was for 18 one-ton cylinders and 24 150-pound cylinders at a total cost of $4,968.

— Approved addendums to the town's recently adopted water/sewer adjustment policy, including (1) that a request for adjustment should be made by the 10th day of each month to allow time for an investigation and billing adjustment (If the investigation and billing adjustment cannot be completed by the 20th, the customer shall pay the total billing with a refund being made upon completion of the adjustment if it is determined to be warranted.) and (2) that no request for adjustment be made unless

Competency Test Results Hopeful

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

In a report to the Pitt County Board of Education during its monthly meeting Tuesday, Assistant Superintendent of Testing John McKnight called the results of this year's competency testing "favorable and encouraging."

"We have continued to grow," said McKnight. "A larger number of juniors taking the test for the first time have passed the test in reading than ever before." Eighty-nine percent passed reading in 1980, compared with 87 percent in 1979 and 85 percent in 1978. "Reading continues to show rises," added the assistant superintendent.

"Math, on the other hand, has seen-sawed somewhat, reflecting a little less stable score from year-to-year," reported McKnight. "In 1980, the percentage passing math is 82 percent, compared with 85 percent in 1979 and 80 percent in 1978." He added that the county had always produced lower math scores, but that he considered these results good nevertheless.

"We are quite pleased with our sustained efforts and the fall results. We experienced only a 12-15 percent failure to graduate last year due to students failing the competency test, and we believe that to be a good track record," concluded McKnight.

In reading, Pitt County's scores rank above the region average but below the state average. The 89 percent passing compares with 88.4 percent passing in the region and 92.5 percent passing in the state.

The county is below both the region and state averages in mathematics. In the region, which consists of 17 counties in eastern North Carolina, 85 percent of those taking the test for the first time passed the math. In the state, that figure stands at 89.4 percent, compared with 82.2 percent for Pitt County.

Other figures presented to the board by McKnight included a breakdown in male-female scores and black-white scores. More females than males in the county passed the competency test. The percentage of males passing the reading is 86.5, compared with 91.5 percent of the females. In math, 80.1 percent of the males passed and 84.4 percent of the females passed.

Seventy-nine percent of the blacks taking the test passed the reading, and 68 percent passed the math. Ninety-seven percent of the whites passed reading and 94.5

Rep. Ramsey Is Nominated Speaker N.C. House

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Liston Ramsey, formally nominated as the next speaker of the North Carolina House, says he will make no attempt to damage Republicans when legislative and congressional district lines are redrawn next year.

Ramsey made his pledge to avoid any attempt at gerrymandering during a speech to the House Democrats Tuesday, but at the same time signaled that he would offer a highly partisan brand of leadership during the next term — and maybe several more.

"I, for one, will try to see that redistricting is done in a fair manner with no gerrymandering that would adversely affect any races or groups of people," Ramsey said. "To do otherwise would not be true to the principles of democracy and representative government."

Ramsey, 61, is from

Marshall in Madison County and has served in the Legislature since 1961, except for one term in the mid 1960's when he was defeated.

He and other mountain legislators said his victory for the House's top leadership post makes him the first House speaker in 80 years to come from the extreme western mountains beyond Asheville.

Ramsey's formal election will only be a formality when the Legislature convenes Jan. 14, as Democrats outnumber Republicans by 96-to-24 in the new House session.

Redistricting, Ramsey said in his speech to Democrats, will be among the top issues facing the Legislature next year.

Later he told reporters that House and Senate committees would begin work immediately redrawing district lines on the basis of preliminary census figures. But he said a delay in the release of the final U.S. Census count could force a delay in the legislative session of 10 or 12 weeks beyond the customary early July adjournment.

"You might have heard rumors today to the effect that I am a partisan Democrat. There is some substance to those rumors," Ramsey said, drawing applause from the House majority members.

"We have been elected as

Democrats and we will be expected to administer our offices in accordance with the policies and principles and aims of the Democratic

ROAD 1719

I invite anyone who will to try to drive the .4 of a mile on Road 1719 near Ayden. It's a mess, wet or dry. There's a trailer park and a proposed subdivision there and it needs to be paved. When is something going to be done? L. W.

Department of Transportation Engineer C. W. Snell said a meeting is tentatively scheduled for today to discuss the future of this road. One may check with Ayden Town Manager Don Russell to be sure of the time and place. There's a right of way problem, Snell said, and it seems unlikely that everyone involved will be happy, regardless of what's worked out. The state will consider paving only if all the problems between people are settled, so that paving can legally be done.

The Jan. 2-Feb. 15 motor vehicle licensing period is the transition to a year-round staggered motor vehicle registration in North Carolina.

It is hoped that, after this year, long lines will be eliminated for patrons and the volume of work to register vehicles will be spread more evenly, resulting in greater productivity. N. C. Department of Transportation Motor Vehicles Commissioner Elbert Peters Jr. said.

His division will begin mailing out approximately 2.25 million 1981 vehicle registration renewal notices Dec. 8. All should be in the mail no later than Dec. 19, he said.

Under the new staggered registration system, owners of cars, motorcycles, trailers, private 4000-pound pickup trucks and rental vehicles will be assigned registration months alphabetically by the first letters of last names. During the renewal period, vehicle owners may be required to renew for as few as eight months or as many as 19. They will pay for the actual number of months from January to their renewal dates. "The annual license tag cost has not been changed," Peters said. "The license tag cost has only been pro-rated."

Each license plate issued under the staggered system, except farm truck plates, will display two validation stickers. One will be the year validation sticker and the other will be the permanent renewal month sticker. Farm trucks will have both the month and the year on one sticker.

Motor vehicle owners who have special license plates (personalized, official, handicapped, fireman, etc.) will still renew their license plates from Jan. 1 to mid-

February each year.

Peters said vehicle owners who register under the staggered system between July 1 and Dec. 31 will receive their renewal cards in mid-May, 1981, since they renew in June.

If your last name begins with A or B, your new expiration date will be Aug. 1981; C-D, September; E-G, October; H-I, November; J-K, January, 1982; L-M, March; N-R, April; S-T, May; and U-Z, July.

Motorists should make sure they take or send both sections of their perforated license renewal cards with they purchase their license tags and stickers. Peters reminded them to fill out and sign the insurance certification on the back of the cards. He noted that those who have moved to new addresses need to show correct address on both sections of the renewal card.

Pitt County license agencies are located in Greenville at Home and Auto Supply, 718 Dickinson Avenue, and in Farmville at Farmville Toyland. The Greenville contractor is Anna O. Garris; the Farmville one, Ruby L. Johnson.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just had to respond to FAT, FEMALE AND MISERABLE, as my lovely wife is also overweight. I am 6-4, she is 5-4, and we weigh about the same, but I wouldn't trade my darling for a dozen size 9's.

We've been married over 15 years and she has given me two beautiful children and more happiness than one man deserves in a lifetime.

They say there is someone for everyone in this world. I thank God that I have found someone special, and FAT, FEMALE AND MISERABLE will find hers, too. Not everyone measures people by the size of their waistline.

CAROLE'S JERRY

DEAR JERRY: What a lovely man you are. You should be cloned.

DEAR ABBY: Boy, did you ever blow it with your answer to CONFUSED, whose fiance wanted to keep his possessions in his name for the first five years of their marriage.

As a self-employed, hardworking man of 25 who has owned his own business for the last three years, owns a house, a nice car, is negotiating on an apartment building and has a comfortable little nest egg in the five-figure area, I would not share my acquired assets with the woman I marry for at least five years either.

Nowadays, with divorce so easily obtainable, I'd be a fool to let a woman walk into my life and claim half of what I've amassed alone through hard work.

In this day of women's lib, my approach is simple. If a man finds a woman he thinks is for him, before discussing religion, future children or anything else, they should agree that what's mine is mine, what's yours is yours, and what we build together during our years of marriage is ours — to be split 50-50 in case of divorce. That's fair, simple and easy. And the woman who is unwilling to accept it is clearly after a man's money — not his love.

D.S. IN SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: After years of accepting congratulations and gifts on my birthday just for having been born, it suddenly occurred to me who really deserved the gifts.

After that, on my birthday, I sent my mother one rose for every year of my life. I enclosed a note, "With loving thanks." She knew who had sent them.

Now that she is no longer living, I send a contribution on my birthday to my mother's favorite charity in her name. The card still says, "With loving thanks."

DIANA

DEAR DIANA: Thank you for sharing a beautiful idea.

Advise Limited Adoption Files Access

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
What are the rights of an adopted child, even after growing into adulthood, to find out who his biological parents are?

And what are the offsetting rights of an adopted family to live without interference from someone who may have a blood tie to an adopted child, but who gave up legal obligations long ago?

And what about biological parents, who gave up their legal ties but may still feel moral ones. Do they have any rights left?

Those are thorny questions that have faced a legislative study commission this year.
The panel took its first real steps Tuesday toward answering them by recommending legislation that would provide, for the first time, access about adoption in severely limited cases.

"This is the most conservative bill we could approve," said Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Greensboro, chairman of the panel.

The Committee on Rights of Adopted Children stripped away the most controversial parts of a draft bill it had agreed to this summer and voted 6-to-1 to back a more conservative version.

If approved by the General Assembly next year, the measure would allow biological parents and adoptees to have access to information now kept confidential by law in adoption procedures. The panel removed from its main bill provisions for an exchange of information before the adopted child reaches the age of 21, however.

"To me this is just bottom-line right," said Willis Whichard, a state appeals court judge and member of the panel. "I don't see how anybody could be against two consenting adults agreeing to this."

In general, the legislation would make it possible for biological parents to learn the name and address of their adopted child, and for the adoptee to learn the name and address of their biological parent.

But the information would be released only when the adopted child reaches the age of 21, and when both the adoptee and the biological parent independently sign consent forms agreeing to the release.

In addition, it would allow the release to an adopted child of some non-identifying information about the biological parents, once the adoptee reaches the age of 21. It includes information such as the age, background, religion, medical history and education of the biological parents, if known.

Although that information is now confidential, Whichard said many people with the money for research now discover that information through illegal means.

The bill stops short of the earlier version, which would have additionally allowed access to adoption information when the adopted child reaches the age of 12, if the child, the adoptive parents and biological parent agreed.

"Many of us would like to go with the original draft, but we recognize the political climate," Mrs. Seymour said.

The panel also voted to include in its final report, however, a second bill that includes the provision for consent by the child at the age of 12.

Left entirely out of the final recommendations was a tentatively approved proposal to allow either the adopted child or biological parent to initiate a search for the other party. It would have provided for social services agencies to seek out the biological parent or adoptee and ask on behalf of the other party if they were willing to consent to opening records.

"I think 'search' will come, but I don't think society is ready for it," said state Sen.
Bill Redman, R-Statesville, a member of the panel.

"I don't think the Legislature is ready for it," added Rep. Doug Clark, D-Kenansville.

The committee's final recommendation, which now goes to the full Legislative Research Commission, came after five emotion-charged public hearings were held around the state.

"My reunion with my birth-mother brought both of us much satisfaction as I learned the answers to my questions and she felt a sense of relief knowing I was all right," Vicki Campbell, an adoptee from Greensboro who spent several years searching for her biological parents, told the committee during one hearing.

But others, such as James Vosburgh, a lawyer who was adopted in Durham in 1934 and now has an adopted son, took the opposite view.

"There is no justification for, nor is there any need for, any legislation which could be a key to unlock the door to the room full of happiness and love which I have known all my life, and fill it with doubt, hurt or trouble," he said.

New Focus On Women As Household Heads

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Government attention and aid may have to be focused on the explosive growth in the number of women who are heads of household, a new Census Bureau report says.

During the 1970s, the report states, families headed by women increased more than 51 percent, from 5.6 million to 8.5 million.

Because women often earn less than men, and these families generally lack the benefit of a second income, they face particular economic hardships, with a median income less than half that of all families.

"When large numbers of families have found it difficult to fulfill their traditional responsibilities, public programs have been devised to ameliorate the attendant social and economic difficulties," said Steve W.
Rawlings, who wrote the report.

And, he added, the emergence of large numbers of female heads of household "has enlarged the pool of families which may require the attention and assistance of policymakers."

Rawlings attributed the shift to various factors, including child-bearing outside marriage, the dissolution of traditional families "through separation, divorce or widowhood; the inclination and ability of women to establish or maintain independent families rather than residing with parents or other relatives as they might have done at one time, and the disproportionate population increase in the young adult ages."

According to the report the median income in 1978 of families maintained by women was $8,540, or just less than half of the $17,640 median income of all families.

"In other words, a woman with no husband contributing directly to the family income can expect to have only about $1 for essential expenses for every $2 available to most families," the report says.

While the number of families maintained by women was growing 51.3 percent during the 70s, the bureau reported that families maintained by a man without a wife increased 33.6 percent and the number of traditional husband-wife families grew only 6.6 percent.

However, husband-wife units still comprise 82.5 percent of all families, compared with 14.6 percent maintained by a woman only and 2.9 percent maintained by a man only.

Among whites, 12 percent of all families were maintained by women, while females headed 20 percent of Hispanic families and 41 percent of black families, the report stated.

Families headed by females are distributed across the country in basically the same manner as other families, the report said, and they were slightly more mobile than other families.

Between 1975 and 1979, 47 percent of female-headed families moved, compared with 41 percent of all families.

The median age of women maintaining families in 1979 was 42 years, down from 48.2 in 1970 as more and more younger women chose to have their own homes.

Talks May Continue

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., has recently talked to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and he says he told the Soviet official that SALT II is dead.

Percy, who may be the next chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the Soviets feel there should be a new treaty.

If that is correct, it is important the Russians are willing to renegotiate the treaty in view of the major shift which is about to take place in American leadership.

The SALT treaties have been worked out through several administrations, Democratic and Republican. There may be flaws in SALT II, and it became particularly unpopular when the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan took place.

We shouldn't give up on the idea of arms limitations, however. The huge costs of developing and providing new armaments is a burden to both the United States and the Soviet Union.

The Reagan administration may be able to work out a better treaty with the Soviets. For right now, it is encouraging to know that both nations are willing to try.

Look for The Best Qualified

With the resignation of Ed Warren from the Pitt board of commissioners, it falls to the other commissioners to select a successor to fill his unexpired term.

There are, no doubt, plenty of recommendations and certainly a number of qualified people for the position.

It is important that the best qualified individual be chosen as one of the two Greenville district representatives on the board. The position shouldn't remain vacant too long. At the same time the commissioners should look over the all possible candidates in an effort to name the person best equipped to serve the public.

Hunt's Hole Card

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When Gov. Jim Hunt went to California recently to woo the giants of the new microelectronics industry he produced a hole card which other governors on the same journey couldn't produce.

All could talk about worker productivity, government-business relationships, and some could even offer tax breaks or direct incentives.

Hunt offered to produce a $30 million North Carolina Microelectronics Center where the best brains of three of the nation's most prestigious universities, the sophisticated talents of Research Triangle Institute, and a center staff devoting fulltime to advanced research could solve problems and stimulate new technology.

That offer is not met with unanimous endorsement in North Carolina. The General Assembly will be asked to put up some $25 million. Grants from federal or private sources would provide another $5 million. It is hoped that down the road, contracts with electronics firms will put the center on a self-supporting basis.

BILL NOBLITT

convinced that North Carolina can get out of that pit — "We can jump ahead 10 or 15 places in per capita income in the next few years."

Is it a legitimate state investment? Should the public put up the venture capital for a speculative project?

"It's an investment in the future," says Hunt. "It's an investment that is going to result in these things (revolutionizing the economy of North Carolina) happening."

"It's just like our investment in agricultural research. We have put millions and millions into this to enable our farmers to produce more and better...and make more money."

Widespread

There are other ingredients in the formula besides the Microelectronics Center, and other state agencies and local government will be called on to produce. Before this chapter in North Carolina history is written, the community colleges, the high schools, the new Math and Science High School at Durham, the university system, land use planners — a host of people — are going to find themselves drawn into what seems certain to be a top-level attempt to catapult North Carolina into the Space Age.

Will it work? Hunt has no commitments from electronics firms. But already, IBM is in the Research Triangle Park with its research and manufacturing facility; Data General is growing and expanding in several locations; and General Electric is set to go with its microelectronics center which will ultimately be a

We'd Better Do A Test

WASHINGTON — I hate to be critical of the medical profession, but have you noticed that doctors are ordering up more tests all the time? Gone are the days when M.D.s used stethoscopes and wore reflecting mirrors over their eyes. Now they sit behind their desks and, no matter what your complaint is, they say, "We better do a test on that."

So you give the nurse your blood, and they tell you to call back in a few days and they'll let you know if "you have it" or "you don't."

Now there is absolutely nothing wrong with this because medical science has become so sophisticated that technicians can now look at a cell in a lab and tell more about you than if they made you breathe in and out all day long.

The only problem is that, while we are putting your patient is dead."

A neighbor who had returned from the Middle East wound up with an exotic bug that mystified the doctors at another Washington hospital. They were going to call in a tropical disease man when my neighbor's blood report revealed he had hepatitis. Everyone breathed a sigh of relief that they finally had a diagnosis until it was discovered that my neighbor's blood sample had inadvertently been switched with one belonging to another patient.

The other patient's doctor was so confused by my neighbor's blood sample that he ordered it sent to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

ourselves in the hands of trained experts who have devoted their lives to medicine, they are now basing their diagnoses on the results of laboratory tests which, in many cases, are done by people barely out of high school.

I don't know if Washington is typical of the rest of the country, but I hear more and more stories about labs messing up on medical tests. The following ones are all true and took place during the last six months.

A lady friend of mine had a blood count done while she was in a hospital in the nation's capital. The results were so perplexing that her internist called a hematologist and checked it out with him. The hematologist said, "You have nothing to worry about. If that blood count is correct,

Who Knifed Wm. Simon?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The unseen hand of Sen. Robert Dole, a lethal weapon in the backroom chicanery of Capitol Hill, fashioned the campaign against William Simon that led him to reject the Cabinet post that two weeks earlier he thought was securely his.

Quite apart from the desirability of Simon's return engagement at the Treasury, that intensifies post-election questions about Ronald Reagan: Are non-Reaganites like Dole supplanting Reaganites like Simon in setting policy for the new administration? Can the new president cope with the velvet-gloved grandees of Congress, including those wearing Republican colors?

That leads to a broader concern beyond the confines of Congress: the seeming passivity of Reagan. If Simon were really his first choice at the Treasury, surely the president-elect could have shrugged off intrigue to insist that Simon take the job.

Dole, who will be finance committee chairman in the Republican Senate, sharpened his knives after we reported Nov. 14 that Simon was telling one and all that he would definitely be secretary of the Treasury. Keeping in the background, Dole created a strong impression that the Senate Republican cloakroom was rising en masse against Simon.

The end result within 10 days was a prearranged transcontinental telephone conversation — Reagan offering the post, Simon turning it down. Simon ignored the vicious backstairs Senate campaign against him. The reason he gave Reagan was his disinclination for a revival of wars with the White House staff that he continuously fought in Nixon-Ford days.

Simon's injudicious claims that the Treasury portfolio was his quickly spawned this report, circulated through the lobbyist community to the press: Senate Finance Committee Republicans had actually voted 7-to-1 to recommend against the Simon nomination. The source of the information was not hard to find: Bob Dole.

Savoring his imminent chairmanship, Dole had no desire for four years of combat with hard-driving Bill Simon. During a Nov. 17 meeting with finance committee Republicans, Dole suggested Simon would be in big trouble if he tried to walk over the backs of senators as in his previous Treasury incarnation. A few senators chimed in with support; nobody defended Simon.

Contrary to the circulating reports, no vote was taken. Sen. William Roth, Reagan's truest ally on the committee in pursuing supply-side tax cuts, characteristically kept his cards face down when it came to discussing Simon's abrasive personality. At least one member, Sen. John Chafee, was not even present.

The reports of a finance committee campaign against Simon dovetailed with bad-mouthing from old enemies in the Ford administration, possibly including Gerald R. Ford himself. In his Nov. 21 meeting with Reagan, Ford did not attack Simon but may have tried to kill him with kindness by indicating it is a burden for a president to have to deal with a Cabinet member of Simon's competence.

The hot-tempered Simon sizzled over the burgeoning attack, complaining to friends it had "injured my reputation." He knew he was still the first choice of the California kitchen cabinet (thanks mainly to efforts by drugstore magnate Justin Dart), and he wanted a speedy announcement. He also was Reagan's choice.

But by Nov. 25, Simon had had enough. The Nov. 26 telephone call from Reagan was arranged as a vehicle for Simon to bow out. When that story broke two days later, some Reagan insiders spread word that the president-elect really had decided against him. "That's a lie," Simon told us, adding that he was Reagan's "first choice and only choice." Simon told others that Ed Meese, soon to be Reagan's White House chief counsel, considered Simon "too conservative" and would commence open war against him at the Treasury; Simon did not relish that.

Not even veteran insider

Strength For Today

CHILDREN OF THE WAY
Three things characterize the Christian way of life. First of all, it is a life of joy — since true Christians are always happy people. Again, the Christian life is a life of security. To be sure, many Christians have had to suffer torture and death for their faith. But they had an inner security of heart which made them willing to do this, and more, for the faith to which they were committed.

Last of all, the Christian way of life confers power upon those who walk therein.

The Christian is a good man, but he is more than that — he is good for something. He sets himself to the living of a life that will be helpful to those around him.

Even if only a humble person of no station or wealth, the true Christian exerts a profound influence upon everyone with whom he comes in contact.

The Christian way of life — a way of gladness, security, and power. Christians are children of the Way. — Elisha Douglass

Prime Rate Is Taking Its Toll

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — With the economy beginning to look like a plucked turkey, millions of dismayed and fearful Americans are wondering when Paul Volcker and his crew at the Fed will ask the magic question.

The prime rate is now at 18.5 percent and rising, which means that only the strongest companies have a friend at the bank anymore and that small companies have been run out of the money market altogether.

Car sales are way off, homes sales are beginning to fall again, commercial construction is stalled, and pretty soon you might hear merchants complaining about their Christmas goods moving slowly.

And yet, the prime rate continues to rise toward the 20 percent range of last April when, you will recall, record-high high interest rates were considered necessary to stomp out what was left of a minor boom.

Now, however, the economy is just squeaking along. It is a broken down, ungreaased piece of machinery that isn't doing a thing to raise productivity, lift living standards, or maybe even pay for itself.

In spite of this, Americans it seems are unwilling to recognize the grim gray truth, which is that they expect just as much out of the machinery as they did when it was functioning well, like in the 1960s.

This, the Fed concludes, can only lead to greater inflation. If America — its businesses, its government, its people — want to live well they have to produce well. They cannot borrow their way to wealth.

And so it keeps the pressure on. People are groaning as loudly as the machinery now, but still interest rates rise and the Fed hasn't even asked the magic question, which is "Had enough?"

In fact, if you pin down the folks at the Fed they will aver that you rather than they are the cause of high interest rates. They will tell you they merely react to and seek to correct credit markets, and that the imbalances that force them to clamp down arise from your shenanigans.

From living beyond your means especially. From living off credit. From refusing to recognize that to live well you have to work well, which is to say you must work productively and put funds away for a rainy day.

"You" is used collectively. You are not just yourself and your household. You are American business, labor, management, government. You are white collar, blue collar, producer, consumer, bureaucrat.

The messages to you in the form of high interest rates are these:

Productivity, or output per manhour, must be raised. The machinery of the economy must operate more efficiently to create something bigger than existed before. A bigger pie, they sometimes call it.

Currently, the economy is not making that bigger pie. Therefore, the living standards of one person or one group rise only at the expense of others. The "other" category is growing.

If the economy isn't providing, then those who make up the economy must cut. The day can be postponed, but the cost grows. Rising interest rates are said to demonstrate the inevitability of this phenomenon.

By far the biggest postponer has been the federal government, although some municipalities have shown their own agility at this game. In the past few years Washington has consistently operated beyond its means.

If you cut back, you might be able to save. Higher interest rates are supposed to do this, but so far it hasn't seemed to work. But if you save, those savings in theory would go toward improving the economic machinery, making it more productive, helping to bake a bigger pie.

But until then, the Fed seems to be saying, it will become more and more expensive to live beyond your means.

It is conceivable that the Fed might eventually back off rather than risk a serious recession. But as of now it hasn't even asked if you've had enough. It just keeps tightening the noose.

ing up test tubes and putting the wrong labels on microscopic slides.
The obvious solution would be to up the standards required of lab technicians and pay them a lot more money. Nobody would agree to this, so the second best answer is to put the doctors to work in the labs and put the lab technicians to work in the doctors' offices.

Since all of the important work in diagnosing an illness is now done in the laboratories, that is where the M.D.s should be. Anyone can man a desk in a doctor's office and listen to someone's complaint. It doesn't take much to ask someone to say, "Cough, when I say cough," or "When I do this, tell me if it hurts."

Nobody needs in-depth training to say, "Take off your clothes and stand on the scale over there." But it does take a lot of education and experience to look into a microscope and know whether a person "has it" or "doesn't have it."

My dream is to some day walk into a lab at one of our hospitals in Washington and see M.D.s hunched over microscopes, solving the mysteries of their patients' illnesses, while up in their offices are seated fresh, young lab technicians saying to the nurse, "I don't like the sound of that elbow. I think we had better order some tests."

Simon perceived Dole's hand at work. Earlier, Dole had ensnared the president-elect into endorsing a Democratic tax cut in the lame-duck session of Congress that died thanks to Democratic opposition. Dole is no friend of Reagan's supply-side economics, which has few supporters on the finance committee aside from Roth.

That is why a strong advocate at the Treasury is essential. But the quickly-mentioned alternative to Simon, Citibank Chairman Walter Wriston, cannot be expected to face down power-hungry senators in Simon style.

The Republican Senate will not be a gentle paradise for the Republican president. His party's leaders there ignored Reagan's wishes in pressing for a lame-duck passage of the anti-toxic Superfund bill. Sen. Charles Percy, the new foreign relations chairman, has been conducting diplomacy in Moscow without Reagan's authorization and Bob Dole has deftly managed to change the secretary of the Treasury, circumventing the president-elect's own wishes.

HOUSE
SCHOOL BUSING — By a vote of 240 for and 59 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate the conference report on an appropriations bill (HR 7584) that would, in part, prevent the Department of Justice from asking federal judges to order school busing. Administration officials say President Carter may veto the bill because of the anti-busing provision. The bill provides 1981 operating funds for the State, Justice and Commerce departments, the federal judiciary, and other agencies.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., a supporter, said Congress and the president should "let the courts decide the propriety of these provisions."

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., an opponent, said the busing language "may signal to the nation that the concept of equality of opportunity in education is a concept which we no longer value."

Most members voting "nay" opposed the busing provision, although some opponents were contesting other aspects of the bill.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Ike Andrews, D-4, and Stephen Neal, D-5, did not vote.

SENATE
CONSUMER OFFICE — The Senate voted 39 for and 32 against to eliminate funding for the Agriculture Department's Office of Consumer Affairs. The office has a staff of three and a proposed 1981 budget of $200,000. After Congress defeated President Carter's plan for a government-wide consumer office in 1978, the president ordered each department to set up its own consumer staff. This vote occurred during debate on an agriculture appropriations bill (HR 7591) which was later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Harry Bellmon, R-Okla., a supporter of eliminating the office, said most Agriculture Department agencies protect consumers. "I see no reason to set up another agency," he said.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent, said the office would "establish department-wide policy and philosophy on involving consumers in decisions and programs."
Senators voting "yea" opposed the Agriculture Department's consumer office.
Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

CROP INSURANCE — By a vote of 38 for and 44 against, the Senate rejected an additional $49 million outlay for advertising and other costs of implementing the new federal crop insurance program. Federally subsidized crop insurance for farmers is to replace government disaster aid payments. An amendment including the additional money was offered to an appropriations bill (see vote above).

Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., a supporter of the amendment, said: "It is very important that the program be implemented effectively and correctly because it is not unlike starting a business venture."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent, said such funding requests should not come at the last minute. "Even our rather hasty perusal of (the amendment) causes us to believe this is a less than perfect expenditure of $50 million."

Senators voting "yea" favored the additional appropriation.
Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

SUPERFUND — The Senate rejected, by a vote of 29 for and 50 against, an attempt to delay consideration of a bill (S 1480) providing $1.6 billion to clean up toxic wastes at the nation's most hazardous dump sites. Opponents of the so-called Superfund wanted to block consideration of the measure on the Senate floor in order to preserve their bargaining power in behind-the-scenes negotiations. A compromise version of the bill, which levies a new tax on the chemical industry, was later approved by a lopsided margin and sent to conference with the House.
Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., an opponent of delay, said the compromise bill "might represent a pretty fair consensus of the Senate."
Senators voting "yea" wished to delay the Superfund bill.
Helms voted "yea."
Morgan did not vote.

Okay Program For Dropouts

RALEIGH, N.C.(AP) — A study committee gave final approval Tuesday to a proposed legislative program designed to curb North Carolina's high school dropout rate.

The recommendations, including mandatory kindergarten and reduction of class size, will go to the Legislative Research Commission later this month and then to the General Assembly in January.

The Department of Public Instruction has said that nearly one-third of all students entering high school do not graduate.

FOCUS
The Shah's Money
When Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was still the ruler of Iran, his portrait often appeared on the country's money. How big was the shah's own fortune? And how much of it did he get out of Iran before he went into exile? Those questions have become important since Iran demanded the return of the shah's wealth as a condition for the release of the American hostages. Iran claims the shah left a fortune of at least $20 billion. Some financial experts think that figure should be much lower. The real answer may never be known because the shah himself is dead. His portrait no longer appears on money Iran's Islamic revolutionary government has issued.

Senators Buy And Buy; Charge It To The Taxpayer

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Sen. Lloyd Benisen plunked down $8.95 for a copy of
"2,500 Jokes to Start 'Em

Laughing." Sen. Howard Baker paid $30 for "Oxford Quotations." Sen. Thad Cochran forked over $2,500 for some Mississippi voter lists.

The taxpayers picked up the bills. Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., billed the taxpayers
$1,100 to pay accountants who prepared his 1979 financial statement. For $5, Sen.

John Heinz, R-Pa., bought a copy of his own voting record on consumer issues. Sen.
David Boren, D-Okla., bought a $480 camera for his office and charged it to the government. These were among the thousands of expenditures made by the Senate in the six months ending last Sept. 30, covering everything from senators' visits to China, to staff salaries, to the purchase of paper towels.

They are listed in a 1,600-page report prepared by the secretary of the Senate.

If salaries are an indication, the Senate is more concerned with its image than with its soul. Among the highest-paid service employees are the postmaster at $48,000 a year and the chief video engineer in the Senate Recording Studio at $39,000. The chaplain got $36,800; his secretary was paid $22,000.

The director of parking was paid $39,600. The chief barber was paid $24,600 plus tips; the chief janitor cleaned up $30,600. The head telephone operator earned $24,600. Laborers were paid $13,000 to $15,000. A truck driver earned $21,600.

At the bottom of the pecking order were the pages, the high school students who serve as messengers and errand runners, who were paid $9,200 a year.

Salaries, which generally are about 10 percent higher than when the report was issued, rank with travel and telephone service as major items of expense in running the Senate. But there are lots of incidentals, including joke books, newspapers, paper clips and photographs — thousands of photographs.

Sen. Daniel Patrick
Moynihan, D-N.Y., bought 8-by-10s of himself by the box, at a cost of $28 per 100.
Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., also went for the volume discount, paying $370 for 941 glossies of himself.

There are documents to be written, typed, printed, stapled, folded, packaged and mailed. The Senate paid $72,557 during the six months just for folding those documents; the going rate per folder was $3.50 to $5.15 an hour. Take a guided tour of the Capitol and you'll use the services of the Capitol guides. You'll have no trouble identifying them: they generally wear blue skirts ($55 each), blue vests

($34.65) and red blazers ($135). They earn from $14,000 to $30,000 a year.

Here's how some other tax dollars were spent:
—The Small Business Committee paid $4.95 for a copy of "Big Business Reader" and $95 for a two-month subscription to "Paperwork Scoreboard."

Another $6.83 got the panel
"Clip Art, Scrapbook No. 2, 800 Line Drawings for Offset Printing and Paste-Up."

—Fifty hats from Irving's Sports Shop cost the sergeant-at-arms $199.50. A month's supply of Mountain Valley Water cost $690.

—The Joint Economic Committee bought "Hotel and Motel Red Book" for $27.
The panel paid $345 for a newsletter on what's happening at the Department of Energy.

—When dignitaries visit the Senate, they are presented at a reception. When Egyptian President Anwar
Sadat came to town last April, the food bill was $137.
When Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin visited a week later, the tab was $639.

—The Ethics Committee spent $1,137 in little more than a month for newspaper clippings. —Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., paid $5 to see a movie on Cambodia in the Senate Recording Studio.

—Last May 16 the Aging Committee subscribed to six newspapers — all Florida dailies. The panel is headed by Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.

A DEER OF A CALF — With hunting season open this white doe decided to camouflage herself in a field of white cows. The

as they chased the doe around the field several times before deciding that catching the deer was a lost cause. The deer left the scene shortly after the photo was taken when a large horse ethnic groups taking the test passed both sections.

A breakdown of school-to-school results shows the following: Ayden-Grifton, 91.5 percent passed reading,
84 percent passed
mathematics; D.H. Conley, 88.4 percent passed reading,
81.8 percent passed
mathematics; Farmville Central, 90.4 percent passed reading, 85.0 passed mathematics; and North Pitt, 86.2 passed reading, 78.3 percent passed math.

Community Schools Coordinator Alice Keene also reported on the development of the softball field at Ayden Middle School and on the summer and fall activities of community schools and use of school facilities.

The board approved a contract between the board of education of the Ayden Town Board providing for the two boards to meet and decide the fate of the new lights on the softball field at Ayden Middle should the lights be no longer be used.
These lights were mutually funded by the boards.

Keene reported that summer use of community school facilities reflected an eight percent increase over the 1979 figures. General participation showed an ten percent increase. The fall figures reflect approximately the same amount of use as last year. "All of this represents a lot of cooperation," explained Keene. "It shows a lot of people working together to provide our communities with more access to our schools."

In other business, the board approved a request for the State Board of Education to allow 21 classes in the county to exceed class size.

The classes are at Belvoir Elementary, Chicod Elementary, H.B. Sugg, G.R.
Whitfield, and A.G. Cox.

The board also approved the 1981-82 budget timetable.
This timetable will be presented to the principals on December 19, and principals will submit their needs to the board on January 30. On February 17 an overview will be presented to the board and on March 24 a full review will be made. The budget will be approved on April 7 and presented to the county manager on April 20.

An amended budget resolution totaling $7,881,487.52 in local current expense funds was passed.

A grandparent from the Farmville area appeared before the board to voice her concern over conduct on county school buses. Calling the behavior on buses
"atrocious," she said she had followed school buses constantly on their routes, observing conduct. "I have seen a little girl tripped getting off the bus and then seen her books thrown out after her," she said. "The drivers simply cannot control what is happening. The time is coming when we need security guards on these buses."

The woman also voiced concern over an incident in which a 12-year-old girl was molested by an older boy on an A.G. Cox bus last September. "The boy wasn't required to undergo any type of counseling for what he had done, and his punishment was to be suspended from riding the bus for two weeks," she explained.

"The situation at Cox was dealt with appropriately," responded Superintendent Ott Alford. "We feel it was just an unfortunate situation."

Asking the board to recommend that the State Board of Education hire adult drivers, the woman commented, "What money we spent on walking arms and mirrors last year we should have spent on hiring adult drivers." No action was taken by the board.

"We have made a recommendation to this effect twice in the few years," said Chairman Mark Owens.

the gallons billed is 10,000 higher than the average monthly billings.

Authorized the purchase of 59 additional roll-out refuse collection carts using $2,500 from the general fund contingency account.

Asked for an update on the paving needs of Church Street extension before it would agree to adopt a preliminary resolution of intent to pave Davis Drive from East Church Street to the Southern Railroad.

Called public hearings for Jan. 6, 1981 for (1) the rezoning of Bill Suggs' property on the 264 Bypass from light industrial to R-20A residential; (2) the annexation of the Farmville Housing Authority's 35-unit addition; and on (3) the adoption of the Community Development Department's Redevelopment Plan.

Authorized Town Administration Robert Morgan to accept the substitution by the Wayne Computer Resources of a CS-30 model computer for a smaller one that had been ordered. Morgan said the company had the larger model with more diverse uses in stock and would sell it for the same price (a savings of $600) with only a little large maintenance cost. The computer will be here by Dec. 23 and its payroll function should be operational by Jan. 1. A utility billing conversion package is included, Morgan said.

Approved the addition of Christmas Eve afternoon to the town employees' paid holidays.

Passed a resolution encouraging Farmville citizens to give blood Dec. 26 during a special holiday Bloodmobile visit here.

Mayor Linwood Mercer took the following actions:

Asked the fire department to provide "the benefit of their thinking" to a plan for the staffing of a proposed Southside Fire Station. A new truck for this station will be delivered in May or June, he said, and the town must get busy with land purchase and construction of the facility as well as with plans for staffing.

Referred the Police Department's recommendation for the removal of parking spaces near the corner of Belcher and North Main streets to the public safety committee for study.

Referred a request for an additional Community Development employee to the planning and finance committee

Three Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $3,700 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 2:45 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard 200 feet east of the Seaboard Coastline Railroad, involving cars driven by Charles Thorne of Route 2, Winterville, and Robert Pollock of Ayden.

Damage from the mishap, officers reported, was estimated at $200 to the Thorne car and $1,500 to the Pollock car.

Cars driven by Darlyn Alberta Sharp of Route 4, Greenville, and Jerry Stanhope King of Shady Knoll Trailer Pk. collided about 2:15 p.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Greene Street, causing $675 damage to the Sharp car and $325 damage to the King auto.

Investigators reported cars driven by Annie Carr Maye of 1709 West Conley St. and Elbert Lee Whitmore of Route 6, Greenville, collided about 8:28 p.m. on Third Street, 60 feet west of the Stutz Street intersection.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $800 to the Maye car and $200 to the Whitmore vehicle.

HEAD SHOPS
ATLANTA (AP) — "Head shops" will be reopening in the Atlanta area following a federal judge's ruling that a Georgia law limiting the sale of drug paraphernalia is unconstitutional.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressionally chartered panel is suggesting that spending an extra $5 billion a year on preventive measures could markedly improve the health of the nation's women and children.

The Select Panel for the Promotion of Child Health said government and the private sector should provide "universal access" to prenatal, delivery and postnatal care for pregnant women, comprehensive health care for children through age 5 and family planning services.

In releasing its report Tuesday, the panel concluded that with these services, "there is such a clear consensus regarding their effectiveness and their importance to good health that it should no longer be considered acceptable that an individual be denied access to them for any reason."

The 17-member committee also outlined about 100 other steps that could be taken to promote the health of children and pregnant women.

The report identified five persistent problems:

—The nation's efforts at health promotion and disease prevention aren't generating adequate returns.

—Sharp disparities exist in the health status of children between rich and poor, white and non-white and urban and rural dwellers.

—Available services do not always match the current major health problems of children.

—Government programs suffer from gaps, duplication and administrative conflicts that reduce their effectiveness.

—The organization and delivery of health services does not re-enforce the family as the chief means of maintaining children's health.

The study said $8.1 billion is being spent on prenatal and maternity care and suggested increasing the sum by $2.1 billion to cover everyone.

An increase of $2.4 billion more than the current $5.6 billion on health care for children up to age 5 would be equally effective. And the report suggested raising the outlays for family planning services from $212 million to $558.5 million.

Plan More Food Stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food stamp benefits for about 22 million Americans will go up by 11.5 percent on Jan. 1, the government says.

The across-the-board increase, the first in a year, means a family of four with no net income will receive $233 in food stamps, up from $209, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

However, only a small number of households have no net income, and most participants in the program will receive less than the maximum amount because benefits drop as net income increases.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman also said upward adjustments will be made Jan. 1 in the deductions used to calculate net income for households receiving food stamps.

Preliminary government figures show 22 million people were participating in the food stamp program in September, receiving an average benefit of $34.11.

During the same month of 1979 19.3 million people received food stamps with an average benefit of $33.24, the government said.

PAGEANT LEAVING
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Miss USA pageant will be leaving Mississippi because the local city council decided it might be too costly to serve as host. Businessmen said it interfered with tourism.

Party. Let us never lose sight of this fact," he added.

Ramsey follows Carl Stewart of Gastonia as speaker. Stewart became the first to serve two terms as speaker, and Ramsey did not rule out a further break with tradition by seeking to keep the office beyond the next two legislative terms.

In an interview after his selection, Ramsey repeated his intention to keep the speakership in 1983 and said he would make no plans for beyond that year until then.

But many House members believe Ramsey can make the speaker's post a lifetime job. "Well, I'm getting a little age on me," he said with a grin when asked about that. "That shouldn't bother anybody."

The Democrats also voted unanimously to give new terms to the those in the three top House staff positions: Principal Clerk Grace Collins, Reading Clerk Sam J. Burrow Jr., and Sergeant-at-Arms Larry P. Eagles.

Ramsey said he would announce his appointments for committee chairmen when the session opens and would announce his choice for a speaker pro tem within the next two weeks.

Although he has officially appointed none of them, legislative observers believe he will give his most powerful chairmanships to a circle of close allies that include both conservatives and liberals: Reps. Billy Watkins, D-Oxford; Ernest Messer, D-Waynesville; Allen Barbee, D-Spring Hope; George Miller, D-Durham; Al Adams, D-Raleigh; Bob Jones, D-Forest City; and Tom Ellis, D-Henderson.

Ramsey also has named a former legislator, Jim Long of Burlington, as his chief counsel during the session. Long ran unsuccessfully for insurance commissioner this year.

Festival Deadline

A deadline of Friday, December 12 has been set for the submission of preliminary program plans for participation in the 1981 Eastern Carolina Springs Arts Festival.

At a program planning meeting held by coordinators at the Recreation and Parks Building on Tuesday night, a decision was made to set this deadline due to the time element needed to plan and incorporate the various arrangements for the calendar of the festival.

The festival, which is scheduled to be held April 5-16 will involve a large number of groups in the Greenville-Pitt County area within three basic areas — East Carolina University, the general public, and special interest groups.

Lynne C. Olmstead, program coordinator, noted that the festival is being funded by a $5,000 grant from the North Carolina Arts Council, matched by $5,000 in local funds.

The 1981 Eastern Carolina Spring Arts Festival will have time blocks scheduled for public events to be presented by groups representing

Hiring Killer Said Not Always Case Of Murder

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An individual who hires someone else to kill cannot be convicted of murder unless the individual is present when the crime is committed, the state Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

Without the actual presence, such an individual "may not be prosecuted, convicted and punished as an accessory before the fact," the court said in an opinion on a case from Robeson County.

The ruling came on an appeal by James Lenard Small, who was convicted of first-degree murder and conspiracy in April in the 1979 death of his wife, Evelyn Hamilton Small.

Testimony and court records stated that Mrs. Small, who had been separated from her husband since 1977, was smothered by Paul Lowery of Maxton. Lowery, who was hired to kill her, was sentenced to life imprisonment for first-degree murder.

Another man, Vincent Dean Johnson, 21, testified that Small hired him and Lowery to kill Mrs. Small and provided them keys to her home. Johnson pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was sentenced in May for up to 25 years in prison after testifying for the state.

Trial Judge Donald L. Smith instructed the jury that Small could be convicted of first-degree murder. The jury did so, and Small was sentenced to death.

"The most important question ... is whether one who is an accessory before the fact of a felony ... may be convicted and punished as a principal perpetrator," the justices wrote. "We hold that he may not."

"The jury, in effect, has found him (Small) guilty of being an accessory before the fact to the murder"

So finding, the court remanded Small's case back to Robeson County with directions that he be sentenced to life in prison as an accessory.

The ruling was based on a change of law effective in October 1979.

When Small was indicted the state law held that a person indicted on a felony count also could be convicted upon that indictment as an accessory before the fact. That law was changed effective Oct. 1, 1979, one month before Small's trial.

The law now states that any person "who shall be charged with the principal felony in an indictment ... may not be convicted as accessory before the fact to the principal felony on the same indictment."

Justice J. Frank Huskins dissented with seven other justices participating in the opinion. Justice Walter E. Brock did not participate.

Turner Avers Network TV Destroying Nation

ATLANTA (AP) — Values trumpeted by the three major networks have led the United States to the "brink of destruction," says Cable News Network owner Ted Turner.

Speaking Tuesday to the annual conference of the National League of Cities, Turner urged the city officials to license cable television franchises in their communities as an alternative to the networks.

He said television is "the most powerful propaganda medium the world has ever known" and has undermined such values as the work ethic and patriotism.

"The people who run those three networks have changed the system of values," Turner said.

Turner advised the city officials to make available cable channels for their local colleges and city libraries and to telecast their own government functions.

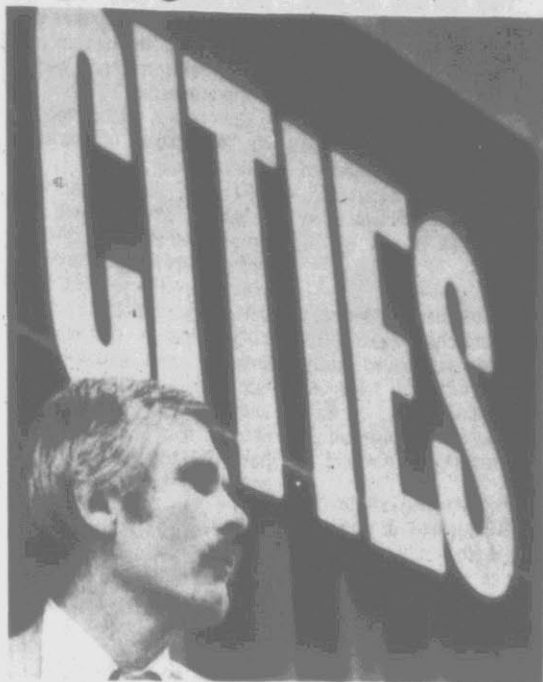

He said his own television operations would offer different programming, such as "Walt Disney-type movies." The Atlanta-based CNN, which began operating last June, will report instances of good performance in government, he added.

"Good things are just as newsworthy as bad things," Turner said, drawing applause from the mayors and other city officials attending the conference.

"In our nation, television has been used to destroy us. If the networks had been run by our most powerful enemies, they couldn't have done a better job of breaking us down."

Cable television is the alternative to networks and any city without a cable system "will be a disadvantaged community," said Turner, who also owns WTBS-TV, the so-called "Superstation" which is beamed by satellite into millions of homes via cable systems.

A National League of Cities task force has begun writing a code of conduct for local officials involved in cable TV franchising negotiations.

Rita Jenrette To Tell All In Article

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The wife of Rep. John Jenrette says she once caught the Abscam-convicted congressman "drunk, undressed and lying on the floor in the arms of a woman who I knew was old enough to be his mother," according to excerpts from an upcoming magazine article.

The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer published today portions of a story by Rita Jenrette, "Diary of a Mad Congresswife," to be published in Sunday's Washington Post Magazine.

An aide to Jenrette said the congressman has seen the article and "thought it was fine."

In the article, Mrs. Jenrette says she ultimately forgave her husband and attributed his womanizing to his drinking.

Jenrette's alcoholism was part of his defense in his recent Abscam trial, which ended in his conviction for bribery and conspiracy.

His conviction led to his defeat for re-election and ultimately to the Sunday article, which Mrs. Jenrette said was written because, "I have nothing left to lose now."

The 30-year-old former model who once aspired to be a country music singer had harsh words in the article for the Washington establishment. She described the congressional world with stories of sex, drugs and hypocrisy.

Mrs. Jenrette, who says in the story she intends to be candid and not vindictive, writes, "Congress is a world of thirsts that can't be quenched. The drug habits, the drinking problems, the mistresses, the boyfriends, the broken homes attest to that."

In writing about her husband's love affairs, Mrs. Jenrette said, "Every congressional wife learns there is something about a congressman that brings women out of the woodwork. If he's young, handsome and flirtatious, trained attack dogs won't be able to keep them away. I know. I tried."

Suggest Change Jury System

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The prosecutor in the five-month-long Klan-Nazi murder trial says jury deliberations in that case point out the need for changes in North Carolina's jury system.

District Attorney Michael Schlosser said Tuesday he will seek legislation that will allow jurors to take notes on testimony, to carry evidence into the jury room during deliberation and to have copies of legal instructions given to them by the trial judge.

State law does not now allow jurors to make notes or carry evidence into the jury room unless all parties agree. In the Klan-Nazi trial, the defense objected to both practices.

However, Superior Court Judge James Long gave jurors copies of his legal instructions.

"It should become standard procedure," Schlosser said.

Schlosser declined to say whether he thought his proposed changes would have reversed the acquittal verdicts in the trial of six Klansmen and American Nazis, who had been charged with murder in the shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party demonstrators.

He said the trial did magnify the problems with the trial jury system because of its complexity, duration and large number of defendants. Schlosser said his proposals would help jurors resolve questions about the law and evidence in a trial.

"If just one juror out of 12 becomes confused, that could lead to reasonable doubt which leads to acquittals or hung juries," he said.

In Raleigh Gov. Jim Hunt asked the North Carolina Courts Commission on Tuesday to study the representation of blacks and minorities on jury lists throughout the state. His request followed a meeting Monday with about 20 black and white leaders to discuss concerns growing out of the Greensboro trial.

"Many people feel that our jury lists, which frequently come from telephone books and property tax rolls, do not adequately represent blacks," Hunt said. "I am asking the courts commission to study this situation and determine whether we need to make any changes in our jury selection system."

Meanwhile, Greensboro police charged an eighth person Tuesday in connection with four firebombings a few hours after the Klan-Nazi acquittals were announced.

Kurt Krumpelman, a CWP member from Durham, and Signe Waller, widow of Communist demonstrator James Waller who died in the Nov. 3, 1979, shooting, called news conferences Tuesday to defend the eight people accused in the firebombings at a service station, a storage warehouse, a supermarket and a fire station.

"The CWP will do everything it can to develop broad-based opposition to these charges and support the ... people being railroaded by this unjust system," Krumpelman said.

He charged that the government was trying to break up a united front against "Hitler-type fascism" by using the firebombings to portray the CWP as terrorists.

Treating The Autistic Child Is Slow, Difficult

FRUSTRATION — After struggling 45 minutes to make his bed, Bob, 20, an autistic student at Raineswood Residential Center in Memphis, Tenn., hides his face in frustration. (UPI Photo)

By AMANDA ATKINS
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Jason hunched forward, rocking back and forth, fascinated by his hands as they made meaningless gestures in the air. Occasionally the 19-year-old punctuated the action with shrieks or guttural noises.

Jason's actions are typical of the four children in 10,000 who suffer the mysterious behavior and communication problems of autism. He is one of only a handful who benefits from public school system training.

Jason and six other students, some with disorders similar to autism, live in a home funded by the Memphis City School system and a church charity.

Raineswood Residential Center is the first public school of its kind in the nation and one of two in the world.

The center was launched in 1978 for children with severe behavior problems. It became the model for a second school in Newark, N.J.

Autism victims are withdrawn from reality. The ailment is poorly understood and rarely treated effectively, said Robert Randall, Raineswood's director. Autistic children can be subject to violent, uncontrollable tantrums for no apparent reason. As they grow older, parents find coping almost impossible. When such children lose control, Randall said, they may bite their arms or slam their heads against walls or floors, seeming to disregard pain.

"In the past it was felt the only way to handle these kids was in a negative way," Randall said.

Raineswood's seven students, ages 13-20, are taught to control their bizarre behavior.

"We manipulate their behavior in a positive way," Randall said. "We try to replace arm-biting with socially accepted behavior."

Their advances are rewarded with pats, hugs and praise. Unacceptable behavior is punished by a lack of physical contact, ignoring the child or a method called "overcorrection."

"If a child deliberately pours out a glass of water, that child is made to clean it up and to continue to clean," Randall said. The cleaning can last as long as a half-hour to impress on the child that his action was wrong.

Overcorrection is a behavior management technique that may seem harsh or severe to persons unfamiliar with autism. Raineswood parents say the methods are painless and they work.

"You have to civilize them before you educate them," one mother said.

One problem that makes treatment difficult is the children's silence.

Randall said most autistic children cannot or will not talk unless forced to.

"A lot of autistic children will develop normally until age 2, and then lose everything — just quit talking," he said.

He said some who enter the center are unable to dress themselves or shower. They must be methodically taught in ways they will remember.

"We break it down into steps and give it to them in real small doses," he said.

The round-the-clock center has proven the most effective way of dealing with constant behavior problems, Randall said.

"Parents have got to sleep and kids may get up in the middle of the night," he said. Teachers and aides make them sleep through the night.

"They (parents) are more emotionally attached," Randall said. "We're objective — we can go home and rest for eight hours. Parents can't."

Despite training, the children are still subject to seizures, but Randall said behavior management often reduces the severity of the episodes.

One teacher's aide bore long scratches where a 16-year-old was pulled away from her throat after an unprovoked attack.

"Progress is slow, there's no overnight cure," he said.

Part of the slow cure is "quiet training," in which a child is physically held down or even sat upon with his hands gripped behind his back. The label belies the severity of the method. Randall and parents said the action is neither severe nor cruel.

Randall said it is a last-ditch restraint — used when a child suffers an uncontrollable seizure, loses awareness of his surroundings and threatens to harm himself or others.

An aide said two or three teachers may be needed to hold down a child until he regains enough composure to be punished through more conventional methods such as overcorrection.

Such help is seldom possible for parents of autistic children living at home.

Frances James, whose daughter, Carol, has lived at Raineswood since the center opened, said the girl, even at age 14, was too powerful for the family to handle.

"She had a tantrum a couple of years ago, and she was trying to bite herself, and kicking me in the head. She did not really mean to hurt me, but (she was) just completely out of it," Mrs. James said.

"My husband, my college-age daughter and I were wrestling with her and she was about to win," she said. "There's no way I can handle that."

Carol, now a pretty 16-year-old, copes more easily with her surroundings. Daily chores that were once impossible are now part of her daily routine.

"It's like a butterfly coming out of her cocoon," Mrs. James said.

Other parents agreed. "My son's made such improvement," said Juanita Ward. Michael Ward, 19, moved to the center in March.

"He lived at home and had such terrible temper tantrums. I'd have to take him out of the house to keep him from breaking furniture," his mother said.

"His behavior is so much better, so controlled, whereas he was like somebody almost wild (before)," Mrs. Ward said.

Michael soon will begin speech lessons.

Mrs. Ward said the center taught her to use behavior management methods, including a time-out technique in which a child who shows signs of becoming upset or distressed is told to sit quietly with eyes closed or covered, and hands behind his back until he grows calm.

Memphis and Newark are the only cities with residential programs for autistic children, said Ruth Page of the National Society for Autistic Children, a Washington-based advocacy group. She blamed lack of funds.

"Many have tried it," she said. "The idea is that schools say they're responsible for five hours a day."

"Schools argue, 'If we have residential services for autism, why not for juvenile delinquents?'" she said. "And they say there are already agencies to provide that kind of (residential) service."

She said most schools assume state and local mental health and retardation agencies have residential responsibility, and it's hard to convince school officials of the difference between autism and other mental problems.

The distinction is real to the Raineswood parents, who have seen children improve rapidly.

Once students learn to control themselves, Randall said, they can be taught basic vocational skills similar to jobs for mentally retarded adults.

He said a major objective of the center is prevention of institutionalization when the children reach legal age. Public schools are responsible only until a child reaches 22. After that, it's up to the parents.

"We don't want them to be thrown to a mental institution or anything like that," Mrs. James said. "Now they are learning some vocational skills. Instead of being a real burden on society, they may be able to contribute."

She said many parents seek establishment of group homes for autistic adults, where they can live and work, supervised by autism specialists.

"We hope they can go to a group home with a lot of supervision," Mrs. James said. "They would need more than mentally retarded (adults)."

No home for adult victims of autism exists in Memphis, but Mrs. James said she and a group of other parents would try to establish one.

"We're going to have to go to the community," she said. "There are some government grants, but of course you have to match the funds."

"I don't know how we're going to do it, but we're going to try."

Wyoming 3rd Fastest Growing State

By DENNIS E. CURRAN
Associated Press Writer
CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — After years of trying to lure people to its wide open spaces, Wyoming now struggles with a new problem — urban sprawl.

An influx of energy workers has made Wyoming the nation's third fastest growing state, packed its cities and towns and spilled onto its plains, deserts and mountainsides.

The little house on the prairie has neighbors.

As energy development brings prosperity and "the good life" to many of Wyoming's 470,000 inhabitants, the state's new subdivisions are offering amenities not found in the cities — magnificent views, spacious acres, simple serenity.

But Wyoming's new suburbia is also bringing new problems to a state that still ranks 49th in population, a team of reporters from The Associated Press and AP member newspapers and radio stations has found.

New subdivisions are springing up willy-nilly on urban fringes, sometimes without benefit of planning and often without zoning.

Some merely are eyesores, but others have spawned road and water problems, sewerage system failures, pollution and rising municipal costs. Sprawl has set neighbor against neighbor in zoning battles and taken some of Wyoming's best farmland out of production.

Urban sprawl is most striking in the energy boom-towns, but the reporters also found it in resort communities and quiet ranching towns.

"I think it's happening any place where you have rapid growth and where there hasn't been a strong policy of planning and trying to guide that growth," said Gillette city administrator Flip Mc-

Connaughey.

Gillette, which sits on top of one of America's richest reserves of coal, almost doubled in population during the last decade but, said McConnaughey, "I think we have a much better handle now on the planning aspects."

Other communities are still looking for that handle.

—Evanston expects to double its population of 6,500 in the next few years because of oil and natural gas development in the Overthrust Belt of southwestern Wyoming and northeastern Utah.

Apartment buildings and trailer parks already compete with sheep for pastureland, but Evanston officials say they are less a problem than having no housing at all. "We've got to have them — that's the only practical method of alleviating the shortage of housing," said Evanston Mayor Dennis Ottley.

—Modern "homesteaders" live in tents and camper-trailers in the desert of southwestern Wyoming. Police in Green River and Evanston complain people sleep in their cars and move from street to street each day. Officials in Kemmerer found construction workers paying to get into the municipal pool just to use the showers.

—In Rawlins, an old chicken coop was fixed up — and rented for $350 a month. Horror tales abound about families living in motels putting their children to bed in bathtubs.

—In Cheyenne the development of "ranchettes," homes on lots big enough to allow residents to keep horses and other animals, grew so intense that well water was being polluted by seepage from neighboring septic tanks.

—Park County, one of the few counties with local zoning districts outside cities, officially "encourages" farmers and ranchers to keep agricultural land in production. Nevertheless, some 1,400 empty subdivision lots sprawl between Cody and Powell on what is considered some of Wyoming's best crop land.

—In scenic Teton County, where only 3 percent of the land is privately owned, there is constant conflict between the need to provide housing for newcomers and to preserve the scenic values that attracted them in the first place.

According to Collin Fallat, who directed the now defunct Wyoming Land Use Commission, control of urban sprawl is possible, but it will take foresight, initiative and greater cooperation among local governments.

Wyoming cities may now zone areas one mile outside their boundaries. More counties are looking at zoning as a means of protecting fringe areas, too, although resistance to zoning continues and the state's role is reduced to providing technical assistance.

"There's an attitude prevalent in Wyoming that utilization of personal property is a matter of the landowner providing for himself, within the bounds of public safety and welfare," Fallat said.

State Agricultural Commissioner Larry Bourret said one answer may be to compensate farmers and ranchers for not selling their land to subdividers. "What I see concerns me," he said pronged approach to meeting students' and teachers' needs, he says.

First, it stimulates initial student interest with a 30-minute color film followed by a student-participation game show.

Second, it provides teachers with a Student Environmental Education Kit designed to teach environmental concepts in the classroom. And, third, the program encourages classes to select neighborhood environmental projects and to submit project results to a Community Activity Awards Committee.

Among the projects suggested for the elementary level are: cleaning up a pond, stream or vacant lot; collecting paper, cans and cardboard for recycling; maintaining energy-conservation checklists in the home or school; selecting a two-block area in the neighborhood and keeping it clean for a period of time.

Other ideas: working with city officials in cleaning up a public park, playground or athletic field; painting benches and recreational equipment; making or refurbishing trash containers for public use; and planting flowers and shrubs donated by community businesses.

To date, nearly 15,000 fifth- and sixth-grade students and teachers have participated in the New York area "Living Planet" pilot program.

"We are extremely pleased at the enthusiastic response given to the program by the New York schools," says Johnson Wax vice chairman William K. Eastham. "It reinforces our belief in the importance of youngsters' learning about the environment."

Performers Find Audiences In Residency Program

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Navajos of Crown Point, N.M., had never seen classic pantomime until Graciela Binaghi settled into the Indian community for a week to play her ancient art and explain its concept.

She performed in such informal settings as a barbecue and a rodeo as one of nearly 300 performing artists who have been placed in residence in more than 300 American communities by Affiliate Artists.

The unique program can celebrate its 15th anniversary next year with a record of having brought the performing arts in an intimate way to more than 10 million people.

Affiliate artists have completed some 900 residencies ranging from one week to seven weeks in cities, mill and seacoast towns, mountain villages, rural counties and Indian reservations in 46 states, Puerto Rico and Canada.

The artists are young professionals — vocalists, dancers, actors, mimes, instrumentalists and conductors — who find it difficult to develop careers and earn a living at the same time. Affiliate Artists, a New York-based organization which was born in Wisconsin in 1966, enables them to stay busy at their craft.

The program is supported by the National Endowment for the Arts, major foundations, and principally by more than 30 corporations including Westinghouse, Metropolitan Life, Levi Strauss, John Deere, Sears, U.S. Steel and Mobil. It was Mobil that sponsored Miss Binaghi in Crown Point on the basis of her previous success as an affiliate artist in Corpus Christie, Tex.

"Cultural events are almost non-existent in small communities such as Crown Point, and this residency was a real first there," said Mobil community affairs advisor Jan Waring in Denver. "Residencies are a wonderful way of developing audiences for the performing arts. Bringing Graciela to Crown Point emphasizes our special concern for our communities and their people."

Mobil has a pilot plant for a new process of leaching uranium from the earth at Crown Point. Most corporate sponsors of the program underwrite residencies in communities where they have main or regional headquarters, plants, or a big marketing public. Caterpillar focuses on its plant communities of Peoria-East Peoria, Ill., while Union Pacific tours its artists through Nebraska.

The affiliate artist usually gives at least one formal concert but the emphasis is on informal but articulate conversational performances, dubbed "informances", which draw audiences into the art and life of the performer. Audiences are "very impressed with the artists talking, becoming a human being, making them laugh," according to one affiliate artist. "They just soak it up."

Informances are scheduled in schools, factories, clubs, churches, union halls, hospitals, recreational centers, senior citizen centers, jails, and on docks, oil rigs and river boats. Artists are given special training in performance techniques, and they exchange experiences and ideas at frequent artists' conferences in New York that are helpful in sharpening these techniques.

Affiliate Artists Residency is just one of several Affiliate Artists programs including:

—Community Artist Residency Training (CART), a basic training program in grassroots organization and residency operation for the local residency director and community volunteers working with artists in one-week residencies. This has been pioneered in 160 communities in the Southeastern states since 1978 and will soon be extended to Massachusetts, California and five Midwestern states. About 100 volunteers from all walks of life are enlisted in each

CART city to handle programming, publicity and other organizational chores.

—Reader's Digest Affiliate Artists Weeks, one week residencies at 32 independent colleges across the nation.

—The Exxon-Arts Endowment Conductors Program, placing mid-career orchestral conductors in three-season residencies with major symphony and opera companies. Twenty-six conductors have participated and nine orchestras currently are active in the program.

—Affiliate Artists Conducting Assistants, a pilot project supported by NEA to aid career development of beginning conductors and conductors who have remained outside the profession by placing them in residencies with major, regional and metropolitan orchestras.

—Xerox-Affiliate Artists Pianist Program, placing six exceptionally talented young pianists in eight-week residencies with symphony orchestras beginning in 1981 as a means of developing concert pianists.

"We've grown very rapidly in the past few years," said Richard C. Clark president of Affiliate Artists, in an interview in his panelled penthouse office near Lincoln Center. "We have a roster of 150 artists qualified to do residencies — the largest roster of young performers any group has — and we need them to fill the demand Affiliate Artists is creating around the country."

Clark, formerly a professional singer, said the constant problem of young artists is unemployment.

"Solo recitals have been on the decline for 25 years in this country," Clark said. "They were once a source of revenue for young artists. But there has been increased competition from other events and no real growth in interest in music, plus economic hard times. Colleges and universities took up the slack for a while, but that has declined too."

Affiliate Artists pays its residents $1,000 a week, a more or less set salary for all its programs with the exception of the Exxon-Arts Endowment Conductors Program. Conductors begin at $20,000 a year and progress to $24,000 in the third year. Exxon pays two-thirds of these salaries and the orchestra pays one-third.

"As orchestras seek conductors, they look more and more to our Affiliate Artists program and want to work with us," said Clark. "More orchestras wish to participate than we can accommodate. We look for orchestras where conductors can achieve and grow and where the orchestra director wants to involve himself as a mentor."

All Affiliate orchestra conductors so far have secured important posts with symphonies and operas including the principal conductorships of the New Jersey, Oklahoma and Wichita Symphonies.

Artists come to the program by many avenues. Most program executives, such as Jesse Rosen who heads the conductors program, act as talent scouts. Rosen visits the Berkshire Music Festival workshops at Tanglewood, Mass., in the summer, attends the Baltimore conductors' competition, and cases scores of New York musical events.

"I observed 130 conductors last year," he said. "Then a lot of conductors are recommended to us or apply to us on their own. Selection is made by a jury of conductors."

Affiliate Artists also is working with the San Francisco Opera on a program designed to overcome a problem common to young singers: most are jobbers who live in New York but have no regular artistic home.

"We want to prove that an artist can live in a community and if enough effort is made, employment can be generated," said Clark. "In San Francisco they get a 40-day residency sponsored by several corporations, getting leading roles in the spring season at the opera. They can learn roles for the fall season and do outreach programs in other California communities. We place six singers in this program each year."

For a current annual investment of a little more than $2 million on the part of public and private sponsors, Affiliate Artists has developed an unusually rewarding program, both for the artists and their audiences. It produces side effects, too, that are quite unexpected.

"Many successful events rode into Moultrie (Ga.) on the coattails of our CART program," reported Harold Chambers, former Director of the Colquitt County Cultural Center in Moultrie.

"This past year we moved into a new arts center. As a result of our growth and potential, we were able to bring to Moultrie an exhibit of French Impressionist art valued at $12.5 million which was loaned to us by Armand Hammer. Because of good publicity and demographic techniques we learned from CART, over 17,000 people from 28 states came to see the exhibit. Mr. Hammer was so impressed he donated $5,000 to our center."

Tattoo Artist Finding More Women At Shop

By CAROLYN ANDERSON
The Prescott Courier
PRESCOTT, Ariz. (AP) —

"I am an artist," says Clutch Massengale, "and I require a perfectly still canvas."

A little hard to obtain, perhaps, when the "canvas" is a human body.

Mark Massengale of Prescott — or Clutch as he prefers to be known — is a tattoo artist. He finds that, contrary to traditional belief, his work is in greater demand by women these days than by men.

"People from all walks of life come in here for tattoos," he said in a recent interview in his shop. "Secretaries, laborers, construction workers, lawyers, nurses, housewives — it's no longer restricted to military people."

"Over 50 percent of my customers are women," Clutch added. "They usually start with a small tattoo — such as a rose — and often return for a more elaborate or original design."

Where tattoos are placed is a matter of some interest to non-tattooists. Women, he said, prefer their shoulders above all other skin areas. There is also a big demand for embellishing less public areas, to paraphrase Clutch.

"They use a shoulder tattoo as they would a piece of jewelry," he said. "Depending on the clothing, it can be completely covered or exposed. It's different for men. They want something that will be seen, so they usually start with their arms."

Since women are notorious for changing their fashion minds, why would they opt for non-removable jewelry?

"The designs are often original, either their own or worked out with me," said Clutch. "and no two tattoos are applied exactly alike. They are really works of art that stand the test of time."

"It's the use of color, detail work and subtle shadings that make tattooing a work of art," he said, "and that's what makes each artist's work unique."

"This isn't a trade you learn in school," he added. "It's passed on from teacher to student. The man who did the tattoo on my back was my teacher."

"Each year there is a convention that is attended by tattoo artists from all over the world. That's where I hear about the new inks, new sterilizing techniques, as well as the display of work by the great artists."

Although the inks are modified from year to year, the basic ingredient is still "pure India ink," he said.

The tattoos are applied with an electric tattoo gun which is operated by a foot pedal. The gun needle travels thousands of times per second back and forth on a person's skin.

"There are eight layers of skin," he explained. "The needle is adjusted so it will travel through three of those layers — and it isn't painful. It feels like a sunburn and the minute I stop the gun, the sunburn stops."

Supermarkets Began In 1930

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's first supermarkets opened in 1930.

Long before their 50th anniversary in 1980, supermarkets came to symbolize American ingenuity and abundance, a supermarket magazine reported.

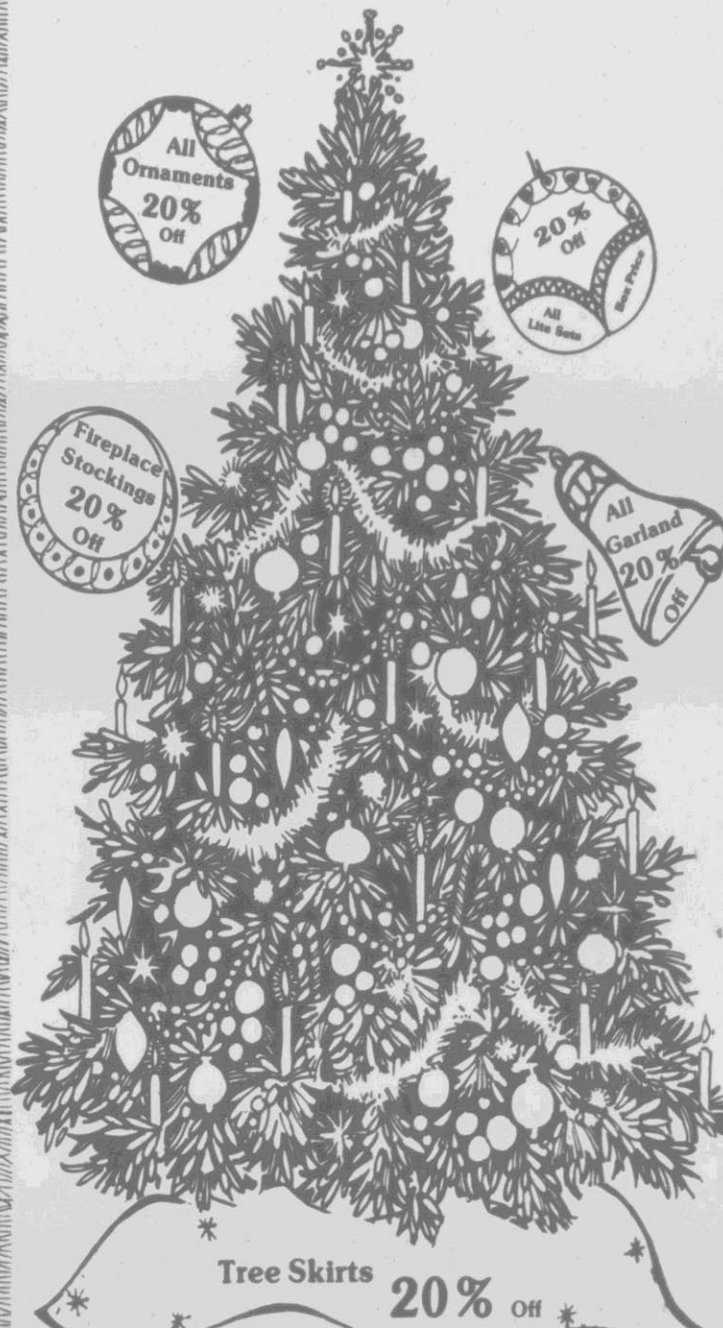

Queen Elizabeth II visited one during her 1957 U.S. tour and so did Russia's Nikita Khrushchev in 1959.

Claim Hypnosis Alternative To Pills And Scalpel

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. Herbert Spiegel and his doctor son, David, use hypnosis to help patients manage pain, psychosomatic diseases, anxiety, and self-destructive habits such as excessive smoking, drinking, over-eating.

Hypnosis, say the psychiatrists, shows much promise. They say it is a frontier too few doctors have crossed.

"The prevalent and wrong attitude in the practice of medicine is use a pill or scalpel or a gadget for problem-solving," Herbert Spiegel said.

Modern medicine puts such extreme emphasis on high technology and drugs that it often overlooks the oldest, and at times the most effective, therapeutic instrument that humans possess — the mind.

"Medicine resorts to it last instead of first."

"Hypnosis — which accomplishes alterations in human awareness — is a great way to very directly and quickly get people to alter pain."

One reason more doctors don't use hypnosis: its place in medical practice is taught by only a few medical schools. The Spiegels named Harvard, Stanford, University of Chicago, University of Texas, University of Pennsylvania, Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Herbert Spiegel said he used hypnosis for pain control when he tended wounded in World War II.

"We used much less morphine on our battle casualties in North Africa. I found the strain of pain lies mainly in the brain."

The psychiatrists are convinced the practice of medicine in America would be elevated and patients would be better off if doctors used hypnosis as a first-line pain-controller and behavior modification technique.

The Spiegels are critical of the contemporary doctor's "heavy reliance" on prescription drugs, ranging from chemical pain-killers to mood-changers.

"The oldtime family doctor used hypnosis intuitively," Herbert Spiegel said. "His power of suggestion was potent."

Herbert Spiegel is a retired clinical professor of psychiatry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, New York. He still lectures there and directs the post-graduate program in hypnosis.

His son, David, is assistant professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at Stanford University School of Medicine in Stanford, Calif., and director of social psychiatry and community services at the Palo Alto VA Hospital.

The Spiegels also are co-directors of the Hypnosis Research and Training Foundation, Orlando, Fla. The Foundation is conducting several three-day seminars for healthcare practitioners, including qualified nurses.

The psychiatrists talked about hypnosis during a four-day college conference on the subject.

Lectures concerned smoking, weight control, migraine headaches, thoracic surgery and child psychiatry. Not one of the sessions on "induction" — hypnotizing — contained directions for swinging a watch on a chain back and forth in front of a subject's eyes.

The swinging watch method, the Spiegels said, is one of the many myths about the use of hypnosis in medicine or dentistry. The Spiegels said "induction" is much more subtle.

"Dad used to bang on the podium," David Spiegel said.

"He used to say anything you do to get someone to pay attention can do it. Induction happens in seconds."

"You don't need a swinging watch — just disciplined concentration that focuses the mind more intensely. It is a form of shifting gears to form an altered sensation in pain, for one example."

But isn't it dangerous to turn over the control of your mind to a doctor using hypnotism?

The Spiegels chuckled over that.

"I wish we could say hypnosis is dangerous," Herbert Spiegel said. "It would have attracted more followers."

He told of an airline pilot who was grounded by acute low back pain.

"He still has the pain," the doctor said, "but he has an altered perception of it. And he is back to flying."

David Spiegel said one of his most memorable uses of hypnosis came when he was serving at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

"I was in the emergency room," he said, "and this patient who had lost a hand was in terrible pain. Everyone descended on him, all kinds of specialists, to assess the condition and prepare for surgery. They descended on him and left and I was there alone."

"In a situation like that you don't give pain killer usually — with the operation coming. My impulse was to leave, too. But remembering what Dad had taught me I asked the man if he wanted to go through a little exercise to help the pain."

"He said yes."

"I put him in a trance centered on the fact that pain was going to leave the injured arm. In about five minutes the man said all he felt in the arm was a sense of tingling, needles — like his arm had gone to sleep."

"No drug, no side effects and genuine help. It was impressive."

The Spiegels said one 45-minute session is all that is usually needed to teach a person how to use self-hypnosis to control pain, psychosomatic disease, anxiety or modify self-destructive habits.

"After that, the patient does it on his own," David Spiegel said.

"No side effects, no drugs, no harm."

Herbert Spiegel sorts people into two groups, based on their susceptibility to hypnosis: cerebral and heart types. Cerebrals are harder to hypnotize. These were said to be orderly, logical, organized persons who keep emotions under control.

"If they are to make a change, they want to know why," he said.

"Easier to hypnotize are those controlled by the heart. This type doesn't put a high priority on being organized and make judgments more on aesthetics or feelings than logic."

"Most people are a combination of the two."

Two societies cater to doctors, dentists, and other healthcare personnel interested in hypnosis: the Society of Clinical and Experimental Hypnosis; the American Society of Clinical Hypnosis. The American Psychological Association has a formal section or sub-division devoted to hypnosis.

In separate policy statements some years back, the American Psychiatric Association and the American Medical Association recognized hypnosis as a viable adjunct in the practice of medicine.

"You don't get to medical hypnosis by going to the Yellow Pages," Herbert Spiegel said.

"That can be dangerous. It's like letting just anyone use a can of ether to put you to sleep. Any idiot can induce a trance. It is simple. To call that hypno-therapy is an exploitation."

What about hypnotists who advertise they do hypno-therapy?

"There is no such thing as hypno-therapy," said Herbert Spiegel. "Using hypnosis in the practice of medicine is an adjunct to regular therapy. It is not hypno-therapy."

In "Trance and Treatment" — a medical textbook by the Spiegels — hypnosis is defined as "an alteration of human awareness."

"No absolute dividing line exists between non-hypnotic and hypnotic alterations in consciousness," they said, "but altered, dissociated or hypnotic-like experiences clearly occur in everyday life and provide a backdrop for understanding the hypnotic experience."

They cited these examples:

"Daydreaming... For defensive purposes, for relaxation, or for numerous other reasons, an individual can indulge in vivid imagery in such a concentrated way that his usual awareness of the surrounding world is suspended."

"Intense concentration in either work or play maximizes focal awareness so that events may occur around a person and be entirely outside his awareness..."

"It is frequently observed that the most boring people to be with are two people who are in love with each other. They are so intensely involved with one another that they are unaware of the usual cues or counter-cues that go on in relation to the other people around them."

"Natural childbirth, such as the Lamaze Method, provide us with another example of a hypnotic-like experience occurring in everyday life..."

"The placebo effect... is often dismissed as a triviality of medicine. Careful critical study, however, suggests that spontaneous trance may well be a part of it." (A placebo is a dummy pill given to a patient who is told it is medicine. Frequently, the fake pill has a therapeutic effect.)

"There are thousands who have experienced the so-called miracle cures at Lourdes or similar shrines. It is undeniable that some people come there handicapped in their own way; and as the result of their inspirational experience or enlightenment leave improved or no longer handicapped." (Faith healings have something of the power of suggestion over them, too.)

The Spiegels punctured

these myths:

"Hypnotism is sleep. Not so. 'In fact, the subject, if he is to enter the trance state, becomes more alert and awake than usual. He is entering a state of intense concentration.'"

"Only weak or sick persons are hypnotizable."

"Data... indicate that, if anything, the capacity to be hypnotized is a sign of relative mental health and that the most severely disturbed patients are in general incapable of hypnotic trance."

"Hypnosis occurs only when the doctor decides to use it."

"The trance state is a continuum with our normal waking consciousness. Individuals with trance capacity commonly slip in and out of trance states. Thus it is naive for a doctor to assume that if he is not formally employing hypnosis, it does not occur."

"Women are more hypnotizable than men."

"Our data on several thousand cases indicate no difference in hypnotizability of women as compared with men."

U.S. Warns Russia Against An Invasion Of Poland

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, declaring that the United States is not weakened just because it is changing presidents, is warning the Soviet Union that an invasion of Poland would cause "the most serious" deterioration of East-West and U.S.-Soviet relations.

The statement drew strong support from President-elect Ronald Reagan's senior foreign policy adviser, Richard V. Allen, who said "the imagination would undoubtedly be the limit" in calculating how the United States might respond to a military strike against Poland.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, speaking with reporters Tuesday, refused to say what specific steps the United States might take.

But he said: "An intervention or invasion of Poland would be most serious and adverse, both for East-West relations in general and in particular for relationships between the United States and the Soviet Union."

His statement came amid escalating labor strife in Poland and reports that Soviet army divisions have been mobilized on the Polish border.

Reagan, talking to reporters in Los Angeles Tuesday night, said the reports of Soviet movements represent "a very tense moment for the Free World."

Powell said President Carter has discussed the situation by telephone with key European leaders over the last few days and Reagan has been kept informed.

"I think it would be a serious mistake for any government under any circumstances to assume that in a period of transition between one administration and the next that the American government would lack either the will or the ability to respond," Powell said.

He added: "It's a situation that's being watched closely and with concern."

Carter, it was learned, had spoken with the leaders of Britain, West Germany and France.

Allen, in an interview Tuesday night with ABC News, said a Soviet invasion of Poland would have "grave overtones for our new administration. It would be one that would set the tone for a long time to come. It would be one from which the world would be a long time recovering, if indeed it would recover."

Asked what the new administration might do to retaliate, Allen replied: "I don't think it would be productive to speculate on specific policy measures, but the imagination would undoubtedly be the limit in terms of a reaction."

Powell refused to say whether warnings have been sent to Moscow via diplomatic channels, although it was disclosed earlier that Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin was called to the State Department Monday night to discuss the situation.

State Department spokesman John Trattner said only that Dobrynin conferred with David Newsom, undersecretary of state for political affairs.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie, meanwhile, told reporters the Soviets seem to understand that military intervention in Poland could be costly to their relationship with the West.

"I am quite aware that the Soviets have been impressed by the heavy costs of that kind of action on their part, and I'm sure they are going to seek to avoid such costs," Muskie said.

He said he does not know whether Soviet military activities near the Polish border represent routine exercises "or pressure on the Polish people or something more than that."

"I don't think it's useful to speculate," Muskie said. "Speculation sometimes becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy."

Some military analysts in the Pentagon say a Soviet move could come within the next two weeks. But officials say intelligence reports show no extraordinary measures that might indicate the Soviets are preparing to strike.

Pentagon spokesman Maj. Gen. Jerry Curry said Tuesday that U.S. officials were notified in advance that the Soviets planned to close a portion of the East German-Polish border between Nov. 29 and Dec. 9. Other officials said the border closing was believed related to routine Warsaw Pact military maneuvers.

Curry said no American forces in West Germany have been placed on alert because of the Polish situation, although routine U.S. maneuvers are continuing.

Administration officials noted with approval that the European Common Market issued a veiled warning to the Soviets not to interfere in Polish affairs.

The heads of government of the nine member nations, meeting Tuesday in Luxembourg, expressed their willingness to meet, as far as their resources will allow, Poland's request for economic aid.

Set Free Due Juror's Error

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A California man is free of a charge on which a jury found him guilty, but faces a new trial on a charge that the same jury acquitted him of, because the jury's foreman mixed up the verdict forms.

A state appeals court said Larry Romero, who had been charged with two counts of burglary, can be retried on the one for which a conviction was reported. Because of the ban on double jeopardy, he can't be retried for the count on which he was reported acquitted — even though the jury actually found him guilty.

The state appeals court acknowledged that a "manifest injustice" is likely to result.

The court said Romero was on trial for the burglary of a residence in the San Joaquin County town of Escalon in February 1979, and the burglary of a Stockton car repair shop and warehouse where he was arrested 12 days later.

According to six affidavits from jurors filed by Romero, the jury voted for acquittal in the Escalon burglary, and conviction on the Stockton charge.

But the jury foreman wrote the verdict for the first count on the form for the second, and the second on the form for the first.

The error went undetected while the verdict was read by the court clerk. The jury was polled, and agreed with a guilty verdict of second-degree burglary in the Escalon case, for which they had acquitted Romero.

After the mistake was discovered, Superior Court Judge Chris Papas refused to grant Romero a new trial.

But the appeals court, in a ruling issued Nov. 19, said the reported conviction "cannot stand, being inconsistent with the jury's vote" as revealed in the affidavits.

"This case illustrates the crucial need for utmost care by a trial judge in examining a jury's verdict form. ...," said Justice George Paras for a unanimous three-member panel of the court.

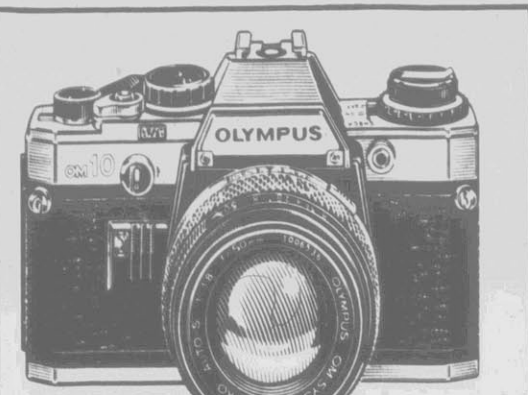

"Proper care and action here would have avoided the manifest injustice to the people and wasted judicial effort that our decision necessarily will bring about."

Planters Bank	15 1/2-16 1/2
Little Mint	1-1 1/4

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved lower today as high interest rates and worsening tensions in the Middle East and Eastern Europe discouraged investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 4.95 points Tuesday in a last-hour rally powered by oil and computer issues, was off 5.71 at 68.69 at 10:30 a.m.

Advances held only a slim edge over declines on the New York Stock Exchange as the 2-1 lead gainers held over losers in the previous session evaporated.

Jordan said it would not accept Syria's plan for ending the two countries' border crisis, while a government shakeup in Poland brought a hard-line former police official into power as the nation's economic troubles deepened.

On Tuesday, banks across the country raised the prime lending rate three-quarters of a percentage point to 18.5 percent. The level was 1.5 points short of the 20 percent record set last spring.

In early trading, Standard Oil (Ohio) rose 3/4 to 85 1/2. It is buying coal properties from U.S. Steel for $750 million. IBM fell 1/4 to 67 1/2.

Gulf Canada fell 3/4 to 20 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. Gulf Oil Corp. said in Pittsburgh it does not intend to reduce its 60 percent interest in Gulf Canada despite Canadian moves to boost local ownership of oil companies.

Tuesday's Big Board volume totaled 52.34 million shares, against 48.18 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.25 to 78.91 Tuesday; the Amex market value index was off 2.22 at 362.81.

OVER THE COUNTER

Planters Bank	15 1/2-16 1/2
Little Mint	1-1 1/4

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved lower today as high interest rates and worsening tensions in the Middle East and Eastern Europe discouraged investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 4.95 points Tuesday in a last-hour rally powered by oil and computer issues, was off 5.71 at 68.69 at 10:30 a.m.

Advances held only a slim edge over declines on the New York Stock Exchange as the 2-1 lead gainers held over losers in the previous session evaporated.

Jordan said it would not accept Syria's plan for ending the two countries' border crisis, while a government shakeup in Poland brought a hard-line former police official into power as the nation's economic troubles deepened.

On Tuesday, banks across the country raised the prime lending rate three-quarters of a percentage point to 18.5 percent. The level was 1.5 points short of the 20 percent record set last spring.

In early trading, Standard Oil (Ohio) rose 3/4 to 85 1/2. It is buying coal properties from U.S. Steel for $750 million. IBM fell 1/4 to 67 1/2.

Gulf Canada fell 3/4 to 20 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. Gulf Oil Corp. said in Pittsburgh it does not intend to reduce its 60 percent interest in Gulf Canada despite Canadian moves to boost local ownership of oil companies.

Tuesday's Big Board volume totaled 52.34 million shares, against 48.18 million in the previous session.

Poor Shooting Kayos Rampants, 77-67

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Kinston's Vikings climbed five men in double figures and fought off a fourth quarter rally by the Rose High School Rampants for a 77-67 basketball victory last night.

The loss was the first of the year for the Rampants, now 1-1, while the Vikings climbed to 3-0.

Earlier in the evening, the Kinston girls won their first game in three tries, beating the winless Rampettes, 52-43.

The problem for the Rampants was icy shooting most of the evening. Only in the final period, after Kinston had rolled out to as much as a 20-point lead did the Rampants begin to hit from the floor.

As it turned out, Rose and Kinston hit the same total from the field, each getting 27 field goals. However, Kinston made their 27 on just 57 attempts, a good 47.4 percent. Rose, meanwhile, attempted 22 more shots, 79, and that figured out to a chilly 34.2 percent.

Another difference came at the foul line, as Kinston made 23 of 35, including eight of 14 in the final period when Rose was forced to foul to try and get the ball. The Rampants made just 13 of 23.

Otherwise, it was a fairly even ball game, with the rebounding and turnovers close. Rose ended up with a rebound advantage, 54-50, but much of that came after the game was in hand. Kinston had three more turnovers, 20-17.

"We played a good second half," Coach Jim Brewington said. "I'm still proud of them. They are young and they are going to be all right."

"We played a good ball club tonight, too, and that made a difference. Our shooting hurt us, but playing a good club had something to do with that. They took away some of the things we like to do."

Brewington felt that the Rampants learned from the game, despite the loss. "We saw that we can come back when we have to. I said earlier that it would be January before we jelled, and I still say that."

Brewington admitted that shooting like the Rampants did gave them little chance in the game. "I just hope we do better next time."

Kinston took the early lead on a turnaround jumper by 6-9 Eric Lewis and never trailed in the game. During the early minutes Kinston pulled away, led by five points by Derrick Johnson and built up a 9-2 lead before the Rampants finally began to connect. Rose did run off six in a row, with baskets by James Perkins, Barry Smith and William Battle, to cut it to 9-8.

Lewis then hit another jumper for an 11-8 lead before Battle hit off a rebound and Calvin Joyner hit the second of two free throws to tie it at 11-11 with 11 seconds left. Neither team hit the rest of the way.

Walt Witherspoon hit 13 seconds into the second period to put Kinston back up again, and Derrick Miller added a jumper at the 6:29 mark for a 15-11 lead and Rose never got closer than two after that.

The Vikings began to pull away, moving out to an eight-point lead at 27-19 just past the mid-point of the period. Late in the half, Herbert Suggs canned two straight jumpers to up the margin to 12, 35-23, and it stayed that at the half, with Kinston up, 37-25.

The Vikings continued to pull away in the third period, moving out by 16, at 45-29 before Rose reacted with six straight. But the Vikes shot away again, and finally took a 59-39 lead on a basket from underneath with two seconds left by Vincent Lewis.

Rose finally began to find the mark in the final quarter, but the 20-point lead was too much to overcome. They did scramble back to within seven at 72-65 with 1:23 left, but the Vikes hit five of six at the foul line in the final minute to sew up the win.

Johnson led the Viking scoring with 18 points, while Hubrey Streeter and Vincent Lewis each had 12, Suggs had 11 and Derrick Miller had 10.

Rose was paced by Donald

Johnson with 23, while Battle added 10.

In the girls' game, the Rampants looked like easy winners, moving out to a 13-point lead late in the first half. But Kinston came back as Rose found trouble with the press and saw the 13 swing the other way.

After an early 4-2 Valkyrie lead, Rose took the lead at 8-4, and upped that to 15-8 before the first quarter ended.

In the second period, Rose scored the first six points to take a 21-8 lead with 3:40 left in the half.

But the bubble burst at that point. Kinston began a comeback that outlasted Rose 12-6 during the remainder of the half.

In the third period, Kinston hit the first three points, then exchanged two baskets with the Rampettes to trail, 31-25 with 4:52 left.

Over the next seven minutes, Rose was held scoreless, however. Kinston kept up its shooting taking the lead at 32-31 on a basket off a rebound by Terri Sutton, and the Valkyries led, 34-31 going into the final period. In that, they led by as much as 13, 44-31, before Rose finally found the range again, but it was too late by then.

"They pressed us right from the start, and eventually our guards got tired," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "Monica (Gatlin) was hurting when the game started, and that cut down on the effectiveness of our guards, too. Then, turnovers hurt us, and that third period we were just ice-cold."

Terry Sims led Kinston with 14 points, while Sutton added 12. Mary Gay and Bernestine Haselrig each had 12 for Rose. The Rampants return to action on Saturday night, traveling to Washington.

Chargers Get Revenge, 48-43

WILLIAMSTON — Ayden-Grifton, loser in its first two outings, got revenge for one of those losses, taking a 48-43 victory over Williamston last night on the Tigers' home court.

The Lady Tigers, however, rolled to a 54-28 win over Ayden-Grifton in the preliminary.

Williamston got off to a cold start in the boys' game, scoring only two points in the first period. That was to prove the difference in the game. Ayden-Grifton, with ten points, built up an eight-point spread. Williamston outshot A-G, 17-15, in the second frame, but still trailed, 25-19, at the half.

In the third quarter, Ayden-Grifton again held Williamston off, 9-8, to lead 34-27. Williamston once more outshot the Chargers, 16-14, in the final quarter, but it wasn't enough.

Clarence Baker led Ayden-Grifton with 11 points, while Thomas Bennett had 12 and Woody Sadler had 10 for Williamston.

In the girls' game, Williamston eased ahead, 12-10, at the end of the first period. They outshot the Chargerettes by ten in the second quarter, and expanded the lead to 26-14 by halftime. That was expanded to 37-20 by the third period horn, and the Tigerettes outshot A-G once more, 17-8, in the last quarter. Theresa Duffy led Williamston with 20, while Cathy Everett had 12. No one hit in double figures for Ayden-Grifton.

The Williamston boys are now 1-1, while Ayden-Grifton is 1-2. The Williamston girls are 2-0 and the A-G girls, 0-3.

Ayden-Grifton opens Eastern Carolina Conference play Friday, hosting Greene Central, while Williamston is idle until next Tuesday when it travels to Bear Grass.

Vikes Open League Race By Bopping North Lenoir

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley opened the 1980-81 Eastern Carolina Conference race with a 49-45 victory over North Lenoir. The Lady Hawks, however, downed Conley's girls, 33-25.

Conley inched out into the lead in the boys' game, taking a 10-8 lead after one period. The Vikings were able to pad that a little, building the margin to 14-19 by halftime.

In the third period, the Vikings continued to pull away, building their lead out to 40-29. North Lenoir put on a rally in the final quarter, outthitting the Vikes, 16-9, but it was not enough.

Sammy Tucker led Conley with 16 points, with Keith Gatlin adding ten. E. Connor led the Hawks with 13, while J. Fisher added 10.

Conley's girls were ahead, 8-7, at the end of the first period, and pushed that into an 18-15 margin by the end of the half. But in the third period, the Valkyries were unable to find the mark at all, going scoreless. North Lenoir, meanwhile, pushed in eight to take a 23-18 lead, and Conley never recovered. The Lady Hawks held a 10-7 margin in the final period.

S. Gillette and M. Harris each had 13 to lead North Lenoir, while Jackie Hansley led Conley with 12.

The Valkyries are now 2-1 overall and 0-1 in league play, while the Vikings go to 2-1 overall and 1-0 on the year. Conley travels to Southern Nash on Friday for its next outing.

Rampant Tankers Look For Improved Finish

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last year, Rose High School's boys' swimming team entered the season with high hopes, aiming for a great finish in the state meet.

But things didn't turn out quite as well as were planned. Oh, the dual meet season went fine. But when the Rampants got to the state meet, they sort of fell apart and ended up placing only sixth overall. They had been picked to finish no worse than third.

Several top swimmers are gone off that team, but coaches Beth and Greg Richardson are confident that this year's team can have as good a finish at the state meet — if not better.

"We have several swimmers who could do real well this year," Beth Richardson said. "A sophomore, Mark Schmidt, and a senior, Jim Piephoff, both have excellent shots at placing high in the state meet to help us along."

There are 17 swimmers out for this year's team, which will open the season on December 20 in a relay at Ravenscroft in Raleigh.

"Our sixth place finish last year was a disappointment," Richardson admitted. "But I think we can finish at least that high this year, and maybe even as high as third."

"While we have several who have the potential to do very well, we need for our depth to improve to really have a good shot. Mark and Jim both have state championship potential, and Kevin O'Neal is another who could win a title, along with Danny Scharf, if he wants to work hard enough for it."

Piephoff is listed as the number one man in the distant freestyles, with Will Monroe and Greg Churchill adding valuable depth. In the sprint freestyles, James Midgette, O'Neal, Dominick Dirisio and Schmidt are the standouts.

O'Neal is listed as the top prospect in the breaststroke, with Jon Thomas and Shawn Wallace adding strength. Schmidt and O'Neal will be the top butterflyers.

Schmidt will also headline the individual medley, with Scharf and Churchill handling the backstroke.

"We have several others who could come through for us in various events," Richardson said. They include Matt Chamberlain, and John Pringle.

Rose will have Woody Whichard and Kevin Coyle in the diving events. "Most of our meets are dual meets, and I think we'll do quite well," the coach said. "Some of our swimmers have been working with the Greenville Swim Club, too, and are already in excellent shape."

Charboneau Is AL's Top Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Charboneau, a sometimes-bizarre personality who brought power hitting to Cleveland and became one of the most popular Indians players in decades, was named today as the American League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Charboneau, 25, drew 15 first-place votes from the 28-man BBWAA committee for a total of 102 points, far ahead of second-place finisher Dave Stapleton of Boston.

The runnerup spot was closely contested, with infielder Stapleton getting three first-place votes and 40 points, relief pitcher Doug Corbett of Minnesota three and 38, infielder Damaso Garcia of Toronto three and 35 and pitcher Britt Burns of Chicago four and 33.

The only other players with votes were Rick Peters of Detroit and Richard Dotson of Chicago, with three and one votes. The point totals were reached on a 5-3-1 basis for first, second and third-place votes.

Charboneau, signed originally by the Philadelphia Phillies and dealt to the Cleveland system in 1978, batted .289 in 131 games, with 23 homers and 87 runs batted in. A groin muscle pull in the final month kept his power totals from rising higher.

Stapleton batted .321 for the Red Sox with seven homers, Corbett had an 8-6 record with 23 saves and a 1.99 earned run average for the Twins, Garcia batted .278 and fielded brilliantly for the Blue Jays and Burns was 15-13 with a 2.84 ERA for the White Sox.

Charboneau is the first Rookie of the Year for Cleveland since Chris Chambliss in 1971 and only the third in the franchise's history. Pitcher Herb Score won in 1955.

His rugged good looks, flakey reputation and quick start made him an instant hit with the Cleveland fans and spawned his nickname, "Super Joe," a hot-selling poster, a best-selling song and a fan club.

He hit a home run in his second major-league bat in the season opener and was 3-for-3 with a double and a home run, in the home opener. The crowd of 61,753 gave him a standing ovation that day when the team was announced.

"The guy is something else," said Manager Dave Garcia. "No matter how we used him, he came through."

His off-field antics expanded his fame. When a Mexican stabbed him with a pen before an exhibition game in Mexico, many fans were stunned, but not Charboneau.

"I was stabbed three times before with knives in fights," he said. "This was only with a ballpoint."

Charboneau once straightened a broken nose with a pair of pliers, sewed a stab wound in his arm with fishing line, was bitten on the thumb by his pet alligator and removed a tattoo from his arm with a razor blade.

Four ACC Teams Capture Wins

By The Associated Press
Lefty Driesell explained the strategy his Maryland Terps used Tuesday night to smother an out-manned American University basketball team, saying simply: "Offensively, we didn't have much trouble scoring."

The fourth-ranked Terps beat American 95-65 as 6-foot-7 center Ernest Graham, playing much of the game with reserves, scored 21 points and pulled in 13 rebounds.

The Maryland game was one of four non-conference contests involving Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams Tuesday night.

In the others, 10th-ranked North Carolina dropped a stubborn Mercer team 89-74, Georgia Tech overcame a second-half stall to beat the University of the South 45-42 and Duke spoiled South Florida's dedication of a new athletic center in an 83-72 game.

"I think we pretty much came together tonight," Graham said of the Maryland team. "You can see we're progressing. When we play teams like American, we have to beat up on them to get ready for teams like Syracuse and Louisville."

Albert King scored 13 points but, possibly more importantly, held American's Boo Bowers to just nine points. Bowers, one of the nation's leading scorers last season, missed scoring double figures for the first time in 51 games.

Maryland's Buck Williams had 19 points and 13 rebounds, and teammate Greg Manning had 10 points.

At Chapel Hill, North Carolina coach Dean Smith acknowledged disappointment and frustration after the Tar Heels went to the line before finally sending Mercer to the ropes.

"They're not fun to play. They out-hustled us. They've been ready to play every time we've played them," Smith said of the Bears.

Sam Perkins, the Tar Heels' 6-foot-9 freshman center, scored 22 points. Al Wood had 20 and James Worthy added 19 for North Carolina.

Georgia Tech picked up its second victory against one loss in surviving the freeze put up by the University of the South. Fred Hall led the Yellow Jackets with 12 points. The game was scoreless for more than 11 minutes in the second half during the height of the slowdown.

Gene Banks put on an offensive show for Duke, hitting six of 12 from the floor and 12 of 13 from the free-throw line for 24 points against South Florida. Vice Taylor added 21 and Kenny Dennard had 18 as the Blue Devils hit on 71 percent of their shots from the floor during the second half.

Tonight's schedule for ACC teams has Clemson at home against Samford and Virginia is host to Randolph Macon.

Vince Dooley Said Staying At Georgia

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer
ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Vince Dooley, coach of the No. 1-ranked Georgia Bulldogs, has turned down a million-dollar offer to rebuild the football program at his alma mater, Auburn, a source close to Dooley told The Associated Press today.
A press conference was scheduled for today.
"I can't say, but the press conference is here," Dooley said when asked whether it would be to announce that he was staying at Georgia, where he has been head football coach for 17 years.
The news conference will be in the office of Georgia President Fred Davison, Dooley said.
"Despite the very generous offer from Auburn, he (Dooley) has weighed all the factors and decided that Georgia is the place for him," the source told The Associated Press.

The Macon Telegraph, meanwhile, reported Dooley had confirmed he was staying at Georgia.
The Columbus Enquirer quoted a source as saying Dooley had phoned Auburn officials Tuesday and asked that his name be withdrawn from consideration as a replacement for Doug Barfield, who resigned Monday.

Dooley met with Davison for two hours Tuesday, then said he had not decided whether to stay or return to his alma mater.
Published reports said Dooley had been offered the head coach's job and the athletic director's job at Auburn, although Athletic Director Lee Hayley has neither resigned nor been fired. The reports put the pay offer at anywhere from $1 million for five years to $1.8 million for eight years, with $500,000 cash in advance.

Asked if Georgia were going to match that offer, Dooley said: "I'm not looking for anything."
Davison emerged from the meeting saying: "I have no comment."
Other attending the conference were Al Barber, university vice president for business and finance and treasurer of the athletic board, and Virginia Trotter, vice president for academic affairs.

Davison appeared optimistic before the meeting Tuesday and said, "As far as I'm concerned, Vince Dooley's still our coach."
He said he could understand Dooley's wanting to go to Auburn, his alma mater, but added, "I can think of just as many reasons why he would stay here."
Davison denied reports that

Dooley was upset over the failure of Bulldog officials to offer him the full athletic director's job when former Georgia Athletic Director Joel Eaves retired in 1979. Dooley currently shares the job with Reid Parker.
"As far as I can remember, Vince never asked for that," Davison said.
Dooley, No. 8 on the list of winning, active coaches, has a 129-56-6 record in his 17 seasons at Georgia. During those seasons, all but one of which were winners, Dooley produced 12 bowl teams and five Southeastern Conference champions.

The No. 1-rated Bulldogs, led by freshman tailback Hershel Walker, who set an NCAA record for yards rushing by a freshman, play No. 2 Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1, in a game billed as the national college championship — one thing a Dooley-coached team hasn't won.
Dooley was an unknown Auburn freshman coach when Eaves was told to rebuild the Georgia athletic program in 1964. Eaves brought in Dooley to handle the football.

When Eaves retired in 1979, many alumni were stunned when Davison named Parker to Eaves' job. Eventually, two posts were created, with Parker named athletic director-administration and Dooley named athletic director-sports.
At that time, Dooley told Georgia officials he didn't want his automatically renewing contract renewed again. He has two years remaining on the contract.

Drew Finally Out Of Doghouse

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
John Drew has never been one of Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown's favorite players. In fact, because of what Brown considers to be spotty defense and a lack of concentration, Drew has been in and out of the doghouse more times than Snoopy.
But Tuesday night, all was forgiven. Drew was Brown's favorite.
"It was one of his best games ever since I've been Atlanta Hawk coach," Brown said after Drew scored 39 points, including five in overtime, to lead the Hawks to a hard-fought 112-108 victory over Philadelphia that snapped the 76ers' National Basketball Association winning streak at 10 games.

"Considering the night he had, I was glad that John Drew hit the two free throws in overtime," said Brown, referring to the final two points that nailed down the victory.
In other NBA games, the Phoenix Suns beat the San Antonio Spurs 122-107, the Indiana Pacers topped the New York Knicks 113-96, the Washington Bullets defeated the Kansas City Kings 107-103, the Boston Celtics downed the Detroit Pistons 94-85, the Milwaukee Bucks outscored the Utah Jazz 119-108, the Cleveland Cavaliers trimmed the Dallas Mavericks 109-102, the Chicago Bulls defeated the Denver Nuggets 129-124 and the New Jersey Nets beat the Portland Trail Blazers 118-105.

Atlanta ran off bursts of 16 and 8 unanswered points to take a 28-5 lead with 5:39 to go in the first quarter before Philadelphia got untracked. But the Sixers outscored the Hawks 37-23 in the second quarter to close the halftime deficit to seven, and the rest of the game was a struggle.
The Sixers had a chance to win in regulation when they set up Julius Erving for the last shot, but as he drove to the basket he was triple-teamed and his off-balance jumper bounced off the rim. A similar situation arose in overtime with the Hawks leading 110-108, and this time Erving's driving shot rolled off the rim. Drew grabbed the rebound, was fouled and made both free throws to ice the victory.
"I thought it was the best performance John Drew has had against us in the last couple of years," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham.

Junior Bridgeman didn't play because of injury.
Bullets 107, Kings 103
Kevin Grevey scored nine straight points in the fourth quarter to break a 91-91 tie and lead Washington to its eighth victory in the last nine home games despite a season-high 39 points by Kansas City's Otis Birdsong.

Pacers 113, Knicks 96
Indiana fell behind 24-6 in the first 7½ minutes, then totally outplayed the Knicks to win going away. Billy Knight came off the bench to ignite the Pacers' surge with 30 points in just 27 minutes. Center Bill Cartwright shot 12-for-14 and led New York with 31 points.

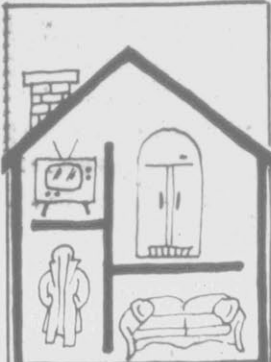

Panther Rally Tops Aycock

PIKEVILLE — North Pitt's Panthers inched past Charles B. Aycock, 60-57, in their opening Eastern Carolina Conference basketball action last night. Aycock's girls topped the Pant-HERS, however, 51-37.
In the girls' game, Aycock shot away to a 14-4 lead in the first period and were never headed. North Pitt matched them, 11-11 in the second frame, but trailed, 25-15, at the half.
In the third quarter, Aycock added three to its lead, 40-27, and then coasted in for the win, adding one more in the final quarter.

each had ten. Coach Cobby Deans cited Parker and Bradley for their play in the second half as keys to the Panther victory.
Aycock was led by Steve Lewis with 24 points, while Tim Howell added 10.
The North Pitt girls are now 1-2 overall and 0-1 in league play. The boys are also 1-2, with a 1-0 conference record.
The Panthers are idle until next Tuesday when they host Southwest Edgecombe.

In the final quarter, North Pitt held off the Falcons, 13-12, to gain the win.
Vince Parker led North Pitt with 14 points, while Greg Hines had 12 and Juan Atkinson and Dennis Bradley

Green, Easley Again Are All-American

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer
Defensive end Hugh Green of Pittsburgh and safety Kenny Easley of UCLA were named to The Associated Press All-America 1980 college football team today for the third year in a row, joined by running backs George Rogers of South Carolina, the Heisman Trophy winner, and super freshman Herschel Walker of Georgia. Rogers also is a repeater from the 1979 team, as are wide receiver Ken Margerum of Stanford and linebacker Mike Singletary of Baylor. Tight end Dave Young of Purdue and outside linebacker

E.J. Junior of Alabama moved up from last year's second team. College football's most prestigious All-America team also includes quarterback Mark Herrmann of Purdue, sophomore wide receiver Anthony Carter of Michigan and offensive tackle Mark May of Pitt, winner of the Outland Trophy as the nation's top interior lineman. The rest of the offensive unit consists of tackle Keith Van Horne of Southern California, guards Frank Ditta of Baylor and Randy Schleusener of Nebraska and center John Scully of Notre Dame.

Joining Green, Easley and Singletary on the star-studded defensive unit are end Scott Zetek of Notre Dame, tackles Leonard Mitchell of Houston and Kenneth Sims of Texas, inside linebacker David Little of Florida, outside linebacker Lawrence Taylor of North Carolina and deep backsRonnie Lott of Southern Cal and John Simmons of Southern Methodist. White and Archie Griffin. He will carry a string of 21 consecutive 100-yard games into the Gator Bowl against Pitt and he holds South Carolina's career total offense mark without ever having thrown a pass.

"If I were going into the NFL and I had to draft a back, the first person that I would take would be George Rogers," says Southern Cal Coach John Robinson. "I think he probably had his best game ever against us (26 carries for 141 yards). The reason I say that is that he took the beating of a lifetime and still when we gave him an inch he took it all the way. My God, he took some hits. A back that gets hit over and over again and still comes back strong is a very special person."

Walker smashed Dorsett's all-time NCAA freshman rushing record by gaining 1,616 yards. He finished third in the Heisman voting — best ever by a rookie — and became the first freshman since Dorsett in 1973 to make the first-team All-America squad. He also helped Georgia to its first perfect regular season in 34 years.

Herrmann, the All-America quarterback, finished second nationally in total offense and set major college career standards by completing 717 of 1,218 passes for 9,188 yards. "No one can hold a light to him," says Iowa Coach Hayden Fry. During the 1980 campaign, Herrmann completed 220 of 340 passes for 2,923 yards and 19 touchdowns, despite missing one game with an injury.

Young led the nation in receiving, a rarity for a tight end. He caught 67 passes for 917 yards.

Margerum caught 44 passes for 691 yards and 11 touchdowns and set Pacific-10 Conference career records with 32 touchdown catches and 2,517 reception yards. He ranks third on the Pac-10 receiving list with 146 catches. Before the halfway point of his college career, Carter had forced a revision of the Michigan record books. In 1980, he caught 46 passes for 750 yards and set school record for touchdown receptions in a season and career, as well as establishing a mark for career kickoff return yardage. "He's the best receiver I've ever had," says Coach Bo Schembechler.

Walker and Carter are the only underclassmen on the offensive unit. The defense consists of 10 seniors and Sims, Texas' junior tackle.

Engine sludge and varnish can cost you big money.

Why put up with budget-busting repair bills when it's so much smarter and easier to keep your engine in good shape with regular servicing?

Remember, most automobile manufacturers recommend earlier oil drains and/or an oil supplement for severe driving conditions like rigorous stop-and-go driving and towing trailers or boats.

So to be safer now, instead of sorry later, make sure you get frequent oil changes and WYNN'S® X-TEND® Supreme Oil Supplement. Designed to work with today's automotive oils, WYNN'S X-TEND Supreme Oil Supplement helps provide your engine with added protection from friction and wear, rust formation, oil thickening and harmful deposits. And, old or new, it helps keep your car's engine running better longer during extended trips or rush-hour traffic.

Ask for WYNN'S X-TEND Supreme Oil Supplement the next time you top up or change oil.

It'll help save your engine, while it saves you big money, too.

Bluebonnet Coaches In Swap Of Team Praises

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — North Carolina Coach Dick Crum graciously paid homage to the reputation of the Texas Longhorns, the 12th-ranked Tar Heels' opponent in the Bluebonnet Bowl, but Texas Coach Fred Akers would hear none of it.

"For a team coming out of the eastern half of the country, Texas has a super image," Crum said. "When you mention Texas you think of someone in the top 10. Few people want to tangle with them."

But Akers was quick with a correction.

"With the kind of season we've had, Coach, there were a lot of people who wanted to get a shot at us," Akers joked.

The Longhorns, once ranked as high as No. 2 in The Associated Press poll, lost to Southwest Conference champion Baylor and second division finisher Texas A&M in the final two regular season games to finish with a 7-4 record.

They also were decimated by injuries and now hope to have A.J. Jones, the team's leading rusher, back in time for the New Year's Eve game in the Astrodome.

"Year in and year out, it doesn't matter what the record is, they have the reputation as being a top team," Crum said.

Despite Crum's praise, the Longhorns likely will be underdogs against North Carolina, which brings a 10-1 record and a pair of 1,000-yard rushing tailbacks into the game.

The Tar Heels can boast about senior tailback Amos

Lawrence, who gained 1,118 yards on 229 carries, and sophomore running mate Kelvin Bryant, who picked up 1,039 yards on 117 rushes. Their performances marked only the 11th time in NCAA history that two runners on the same team had 1,000-yard seasons.

Crum has used the pair almost equally this season, trying to keep both runners healthy.

Quisenberry To Talk Contract

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — If there was an award for "Most Underpaid Baseball Player," reliever Dan Quisenberry, who figured in almost half of Kansas City's 97 victories this season, would lap the field.

The sidearm sinkerballer compiled a 12-7 record and American League-leading 33 saves in his first full season but was making barely more than the major league minimum of $30,000 a year.

In a few days, he and his agents will begin negotiations with the Royals on a new contract, but there could be a number of problems.

For one, his 1½ years of major league experience means he can only accept what the Royals offer. For another, there seems to be little precedent for relief pitchers arriving with such a bang in their first complete season.

"It had been difficult to keep Amos healthy," Crum said. "We'd get to about the fourth game of the season and start having injury problems. We were a different team when Amos came out."

"It's all at their discretion. If Amos starts to get tired, he comes out and Kelvin goes in," he said. "I don't feel there's any drop off when Kelvin goes into the game. They work very well together."

"We're going to decide in the next day or two exactly what direction we're going to take in our contract talks," Quisenberry told The Associated Press Tuesday. "The problem is, it's sort of unprecedented."

Quisenberry has signed with Frank Knisley and Bill Katzbeck, the Pittsburgh, Pa., businessmen who also represent catcher Darrell Porter, who is now one of the liveliest commodities on the free agent market.

After next season, Quisenberry would be eligible to go to arbitration in the event of a contract impasse.

"Here's the dilemma," he said. "I can sign a multiyear deal and hope everything works out, or I can sign a one-year contract and have the option of arbitration after next season if I need it."

At the moment, he said he's leaning toward a multiyear deal but will decide definitely "in the next day or two."

"I expect to be fair with them. I'm not going to ask for anything unprecedented or outrageous. And I expect they will be fair with me. I've always had a good relationship with (General Manager) Joe Burke," he said.

The closest parallel to Quisenberry's situation is probably Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs, who was 7-3 with 31 saves in his first full season in 1977. Last spring, an arbitrator awarded Sutter a contract reportedly in the range of $700,000 a year.

"I'm not really worried at this point," Quisenberry said. "I have a world of confidence in my agents. I have a feeling they are going to be my friends for life."

Katzbeck said he would prefer to conclude negotiations for Porter, who was drafted by eight clubs, before entering serious negotiations on Quisenberry.

"Quiz came in and shored up the only weakness the Royals had," said Katzbeck. "Before the season, everybody was saying the bullpen was Kansas City's lone weakness. Then Quiz made it one of their greatest strengths. The problem is, relief pitcher generally develop slowly, they don't just explode on the scene as Quiz did. So there's not much precedent to base negotiations on."

Terps Come Together In Romp

By The Associated Press
It was a blowout of the worst order, and forward Ernest Graham of the fourth-ranked Maryland Terrapins explained why.

"I think we pretty much came together tonight," Graham said. "You can see we're progressing."

"When we play teams like that, we have to beat up on them to get ready for teams like Syracuse and Louisville," said Graham, who scored 21 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to pace Maryland to a 95-65 victory over American.

"I saw a couple of teams on television who shouldn't be ranked ahead of us: Louisville (8), Notre Dame (13), DePaul (1) and UCLA (3), if they are in front of us. I use that as a crutch to get up for these games," Graham said.

The Terps' 2-3 zone and the tenacious defense of Albert King, held American's Boo Bowers, one of the nation's top scorers, to just nine points, snapping a string of 51 games in which he has scored in double figures.

"It really doesn't mean much," Bowers said of the streak. "I would have liked to have kept the game close."

"Now people will probably say I made the right choice in going to American," he said. "They'll say I'm not on the same level as King and (Buck) Williams, but I think I belong in that category. I think if I was playing with King and Williams, they'd make me play better. From that aspect, tonight was very frustrating."

King added 13 points and Williams 19 points and 13 rebounds for Maryland, 2-0. The Terps ran off to a 46-25 lead at the halftime in handing American its second loss of the young season.

There were three other games involving ranked teams Tuesday night. No. 10 North Carolina downed Mercer 89-74, 13th-ranked Notre Dame defeated Montana State 89-68 and 14th-ranked Texas A&M beat Texas Southern 61-50.

Freshman Sam Perkins scored 22 points to pace North Carolina over Mercer. Al Wood added 20 points and James Worthy had 19 for the Tar Heels, who put the game away in the first half after Mercer closed to within six points.

Southern Nash Rolls Past Jaguars In Opener

STANHOPE — Southern Nash gave Farmville Central a rough welcome to the 1980-81 basketball season last night, sweeping a pair of games from the Jaguars. In the boys' game, Southern took a 75-51 win, while the Lady Firebirds took a 48-38 decision.

Farmville and Southern kept it close throughout the first period of the boys' game, with the 'Birds leading 16-15 at the horn. It stayed close through the second quarter, with the Jaguars inching into a 32-32 tie by the horn.

In the third quarter, however, the Firebirds began to wear down the Jaguars, pushing into a 48-44 lead. Then, in the final quarter, Southern shot away, outscoring the Jaguars, 27-7, to win going away.

The game was a rough one, with 54 fouls called, 30 of them on the Firebirds and 24 on Farmville.

McCullen Wiggins led Southern with 15 points, while Frankie Toney had 14, Anthony Crumel had 12 and Dwight Evans and Tony Taybron each had ten. Farmville was led by Clarence Pettaway with 11.

In the girls' contest, it was a little closer to the end. The teams were tied at 10-10 at the end of the first period, with Southern inching ahead, 19-18 at intermission. In the third quarter, however, Southern began to move, pulling ahead, 32-27 going into the final quarter. In that, Southern held a 16-11 advantage to wrap it up.

Dora Harrison led Southern with 28 points, while Karen Dunn had 12 to pace Farmville Central.

Farmville is now 0-1 in both league and conference play.

The Jaguars travel to North Pitt on Friday.

Aurora Romps Over Bears

AURORA — Aurora High School took a pair of Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference games from Bear Grass last night. Aurora won the boys' game, 79-49, and the girls' by a 49-39 score.

In the opener, Aurora zoomed out to a 20-6 lead in the first period and had no problems the rest of the way. Bear Grass closed it to 30-20 during the second period, but the host team pulled away again in the third period to lead 45-30 going into the last quarter. In that, Bear Grass held a 9-4 advantage.

Charlene Moore led Aurora with 14 points, while Janice Griffin had 13 and Michelle Simpson had 10. The Lady Bears were led by Angie Mizelle with 18, while Mary Rawls had 10.

The Bear Grass boys fell behind by ten in the opening eight minutes, 18-8, and also never caught up. They were shot down, 16-11, in the second frame and trailed 34-19 at the half. Aurora added just one to the lead in the third frame, 52-36, but then outshot the Bears, 27-13, in the final quarter. James Clark led Aurora with 26, while Vincent Blount had 17 and Craig Moore had 13. Clay Gardner led the Bears with 19 while William Roberson added 19.

The boys and girls both hold 1-4 overall and 1-2 conference records. They play host to Bah on Friday.

Crisp 'n crunchy, good 'n munchy Chex Party Mix has been a big part of the holidays for 24 years.

TRADITIONAL CHEX® PARTY MIX

The recipe that's been a favorite for years

1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 1/4 teaspoons seasoned salt
1 1/2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
2 cups Corn Chex cereal
2 cups Rice Chex cereal
2 cups Bran Chex cereal
2 cups Wheat Chex cereal
1 cup salted mixed nuts

Preheat oven to 250°. Heat butter in large shallow roasting pan (about 15 x 10 x 2 inches) in oven until melted. Remove. Stir in seasoned salt and Worcestershire sauce. Add Chex and nuts. Mix until all pieces are coated. Heat in oven 1 hour. Stir every 15 minutes. Spread on absorbent paper to cool.

Makes about 9 cups.

Party Mix may be frozen, so make a double batch. Thaw at room temperature in container in which it was stored.

Tokyo Faces Scandals In Medicine

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — A series of medical scandals involving phony doctors, unneeded surgery and the illegal sale of an experimental cancer drug has pushed Japan's Health and Welfare Ministry into a full-scale review of the country's much-criticized medical system.

The government says it is making a special effort to root out dishonest doctors and hospitals.

The spurt of official activity was prompted mainly by accusations that the operator of the Fujimi Maternity Clinic near Tokyo was not licensed, but had been diagnosing patients for at least seven years. He allegedly authorized more than 200 operations on healthy women — removing ovaries and other organs simply to collect medical insurance payments.

A doctor who owns a hospital near Osaka is accused of selling interferon, a cancer drug classified as experimental, for up to $35,000 per patient.

Several similar but lesser scandals, and a report by the national tax office that hospitals and clinics topped the list of tax evaders last year, have led to a series of hearings on medical practice in each Japanese state.

Offices and a toll-free telephone number have been set up to handle complaints, and officials have hired medical investigators and proposed a national medical investigation squad — all actions that some doctors say are long overdue.

"(Unnecessary operations at) Fujimi Hospital are nothing. That's just one. There's plenty more," said Dr. Hideo Makuda, a former World Health Organization doctor who now runs a clinic at Kamakura.

"Similar things happen in many Japanese hospitals — unqualified people doing examinations, unnecessary operations for income," he said. "But it's important not to blame only the doctor. The entire Japanese medical system is wrong."

Japan has few big public hospitals and thousands of tiny "clinics" — miniature hospitals of two to 20 beds staffed by the owner-doctor and perhaps a couple of nurses.

"For prestige and to get income, they buy many big instruments — X-ray machines, etc. Then they must get back the money by doing unnecessary examinations and operations," Makuda said.

In addition, most medical expenses are paid through national or company health insurance according to a complicated fee schedule set up by the government. Many doctors say the schedule is badly outdated and is structured to encourage complicated tests.

"It's more profitable to make certain diagnoses," said one foreign doctor who has practiced in Japan for 27 years. "For instance, a pain in the neck is diagnosed as a possible slipped disc, requiring extensive X-rays and tests, instead of a boil."

"A doctor here gets almost nothing if he tells a patient 'You're OK.' If he's going to make his clinic run, he has to find something wrong," said the doctor, who asked not to be identified.

A third major fault in the system, according to many doctors, is the lack of a prescription setup. Instead of writing prescriptions which patients take to a pharmacy, doctors buy medicine from pharmaceutical companies and sell it directly to their patients. This, critics say, leads to overprescription, as well as questionable tactics by the companies.

"There's a lot going on between the pharmaceutical companies and the government," the foreign doctor claimed, saying he was referring to reports of lavish wining and dining and free golf trips for bureaucrats from the companies. "There are no rules or regulations to stop them from doing this."

Another problem involves specialties. There is only one post-graduate qualification — a kind of a Ph.D. Therefore, a doctor could study one specialty and theoretically set himself up in another, surgery for instance.

Children's Home Society Drive Begins

The Children's Home Society of North Carolina Inc. has launched its Little Red Stocking fund-raising campaign.

The goal set by its board of directors is $130,000, according to David C. Calhoun, president.

Traditionally the appeal is made during the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons. All contributions go to help with the agency's ongoing program of service to children and their families.

Executive Director Ruth McCracken said, "More than 18,000 children have found the love and security of permanent adoptive homes through the services of the Children's Home Society since it was established 78 years ago."

CHS is North Carolina's oldest and onl statewide, private non-sectarian adoption agency. In addition to adoption planning for infants and older children, it offers free professional problem pregnancy counseling and post-adoption counseling. Offices are located in Greenville, Asheville, Charlotte, Greensboro, Chapel Hill, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

About 30 percent of the CHS operating budget is allocated from North Carolina United Way. Almost half comes from direct contributions, a large portion of which is derived from gifts made to the Little Red Stocking.

Gifts to the Little Red Stocking are tax-deductible and may be mailed to Children's Home Society, P. O. Box 6587, Greensboro, N.C. 27405.

Only Five, And Drives The Car

BEMIDJI, Minn. (AP) — Police were somewhat taken aback when Chad Engrebetson told them he had been driving for at least a year without an accident.

It wasn't Chad's safety record that surprised them as much as his precociousness behind the wheel, being he's only 5 years old and stands a little more than 4 feet tall.

Police said Chad drove his grandparents' 1973 Pontiac in Leonard on Sunday afternoon about 25 miles on a highway to Bemidji in northern Minnesota. He cruised around town, including the downtown area, before bringing the car to a stop on a Bemidji street.

Dennis and Renee Engrebetson, Chad's parents, said the Sunday drive was a first for the boy, whose grandfather had taught him a few things about how to drive a car around the property.

Banking On 'Dallas' In TV Ratings Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Still riding the nation's fascination with "Dallas," CBS won the networks' ratings race for the fourth time in five weeks and bolstered its position as the No. 1 network in the season that began Oct. 27, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

Though "Dallas" lost more than a third of its record-setting audience for the previous week's "Who shot J.R.?" episode, the show continued as prime-time TV's highest-rated series for the fourth straight week.

The Nielsen rating for "Dallas" was 34, robust though down sharply from the all-time high 53.3 of the week before. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, 34 percent saw at least part of the follow-up installment.

CBS had seven of the week's 10 highest-rated programs, and compiled a rating for the week of 19.7, compared to 18.8 for ABC and 16.4 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.7 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

Both CBS and ABC maintain the 1980-81 season was delayed by the 10-week-long actors' strike and began Oct.

27. By that standard, CBS leads the three-way competition for the TV year with an average rating of 20.8, compared to 19.1 for ABC and 16.5 for NBC.

NBC maintains the season started Sept. 15, and taking that measure, leads the competition by half a point over CBS.

ABC's top-rated show in the most recent survey was "Love Boat," in fourth place, with NBC's most-watched program, a movie called "Children of Divorce," No. 13.

Four of the week's five lowest-rated shows were from NBC, beginning with "Dick Clark's Good Old Days" in 60th place, a movie, "The Secret War of Jackie's Girls," 61st, "NBC Reports: American Fashion ... Rags and Riches" 63rd and "NBC Magazine with David Brinkley" 64th. CBS' "Linda Lavin Special" was No. 62.

The correct location of the office is the Skinner Building.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 4, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are now in a good position to improve relationships with others by extending some courtesy or kindness. Be sure to carry through with plans you have made.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Situations arise that give you a better picture of your relationships with associates. Show others you have wisdom.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to establish more harmony with co-workers and everything will work out better in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure that you are handling financial matters wisely. Spare time should be spent at amusements with congenials.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to give more thought to home improvements and increase harmony with close ties. Express happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't invest more money than you can afford in a new enterprise or you could regret it later. Don't neglect to pay your bills.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look into the detailed part of a financial matter and be sure you understand it thoroughly. Sidestep a troublemaker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study details of any plans you have made and correct possible errors. Be sure business affairs are running smoothly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Gain favors from your friends since they are in a fine mood for such now. Make the evening a happy one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are desirous of gaining aims that are vital to your existence, but first study every angle involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put your talents to work and make a fine impression on higher-ups. Express happiness with loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan to meet talented persons who can help you advance in career matters. Avoid heavy expenditures of money.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal day to keep promises made and clear the slate, be it in business or personal life. Not a good day to take risks.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who likes to please others, so whether it be in the field of entertainment, nursing, or whatever, be sure to give as fine an education as you can. There's a talent for music in this chart. Don't neglect ethical training.

Everyone knows the old saw that when missing the queen, the rule is: "Eight ever, nine never." In other words, finesse with eight cards in the suit, play for the drop with nine. But we would do well to heed the Gilbert and Sullivan warning: "What never?" "Well, hardly ever!"

Despite the fact that his partner had reopened in balancing position and could have a slightly weaker hand than normal for a takeout double, South elected to jump to game. Two aces and a king are useful values opposite even a weak takeout. Throw in a five-card suit and a doubleton, and South decided that four hearts was a calculated, though reasonable, gamble.

West led the jack of spades, and when dummy appeared, declarer saw that he had to lose two spades and, apparently, a diamond trick. Therefore, he could not afford to lose a trump trick. Looking at all four hands it is easy to see that the queen is going to drop. But declarer did not have that advantage. He ended up losing a trump trick — while securing his contract in the process!

East won the first two tricks and continued with a third spade, ruffed in dummy. Declarer cashed the ace and king of clubs and ruffed a club. Next came the ace and king of diamonds. Now declarer cashed the ace of hearts and led a trump to the ten, East won the queen, but he was end played. His forced spade return allowed declarer to sluff his losing diamond while ruffing in dummy, so he avoided losing a diamond trick.

Was declarer lucky? Not at all. His trump finesse guaranteed the contract, regardless of whether it won or lost.

East had already shown up with six spades, one heart, two diamonds and three clubs. That accounts for twelve of his cards. If his thirteenth card is a minor suit card, the heart finesse will win and declarer won't lose a trump trick. If his thirteenth card is the queen of trumps, East will score the queen, but will then have to concede a sluff-ruff.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. DA Sees Lack Of Evidence That Profits Withheld By Producers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Allegations that the producers of "Charlie's Angels" tried to keep $1 million in profits that belonged to investors, including actors Robert Wagner and Natalie Wood, have not been substantiated, according to a prosecutor.

District Attorney John Van de Kamp said Tuesday that because of lack of evidence he would not file criminal charges against Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg.

Spelling and Goldberg said they never had anything to hide.

But they said they were hurt by "sensationalized media coverage" of allegations they diverted up to $30,000 per episode from "Angels" to another of their series, "Starsky & Hutch."

"We have from the outset cooperated fully and openly with Mr. Van de Kamp's office," Spelling and Goldberg said in a statement.

Wagner and Miss Wood, who own 43.75 percent of "Angels," but none of "Starsky," said they were satisfied with the investigation.

"As friends of Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg we are delighted with this result and we look forward to a continuing relationship with them," said the married acting duo in a statement.

Van de Kamp said that reallocation of funds between the two shows had indeed taken place, but that all such transactions were on the books, although sometimes sketchily.

He said "shoddy business practices" such as incomplete bookkeeping and lack of audits needed to be cleaned up "to avoid misunderstandings and avoid the kind of trouble with which this investigation necessarily had to deal."

The fraud charges had been leveled by former ABC attorney Jennifer Martin in a series of memos to ABC officials in October 1979. She said extra fees being paid to the "Angels" producers were improper and the money should go to the profit participants.

She was fired shortly thereafter and has filed a $6 million lawsuit against ABC.

saying her firing was improper.

Van de Kamp said he thought Ms. Martin sincerely believed "she was onto something," but she did not know the entire picture, he said.

Van de Kamp said records show that the money was paid back to "Angels" through special payments and increases in basic licensing fees for the show and that, because Spelling-Goldberg did not charge the Wagners allowable overhead and interest, the actors came out about $3 million ahead in the 1978-79 season alone.

ABC said in a statement from New York on Tuesday that the district attorney's report "confirms the results of ABC's prior independent investigation..."

Investigations by the federal Securities and Exchange Commission and the FBI are also under way, but no results have been announced.

Rose High Is Presenting "Our Town"

Thornton Wilder's staple American drama, "Our Town," is being presented three days this week by The Rose High Theatricals, drama students at Rose High School.

The play is being given at the auditorium in Whal-Coates Elementary School on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, December 5, 6 and 7. Curtain time is 8 p.m. each evening.

Tickets are priced at $2 per person for all ages, and will be available at the door prior to performance time.

Mrs. Paul Topper, drama teacher at Rose, is directing the play. Stuart Ward is stage manager.

Cast members are: Alison Keel as Emily Webb; Jeffrey Jones in the role of George Gibbs; Mike Thurber as Dr. Gibbs and Ann Halevay as Mrs. Gibbs.

Also, Mary Kate Cunningham as Mrs. Webb; Shawn Wallace as Mr. Webb; Myra Clark as Rebecca Gibbs; Jon Pringle, Wally Webb; and Jasper Dixon as Howie Newsome.

CORRECTION

The headline, "Symphony Concert Today" in the Sunday, November 30 edition of this paper on the East Carolina Symphony concert was in error.

The concert will be held on Sunday, December 7 in Wright Auditorium as noted in the text of the article.

Actress Juliet Mills Is Wed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — British actress Juliet Mills married an actor 18 years her junior in a chilly dawn ceremony on a Malibu bluff overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

Miss Mills, 39, married 21-year-old Max Caulfield on Tuesday in a private, 6:30 a.m. ceremony.

DATE CORRECTION

The date "Friday, December 6" given in the article in Sunday's paper on the performances of "The Fantastiks" at Ayden-Grifton High School is in error.

The correct date is Saturday, December 6. Performances are being given on Saturday at 8 p.m. and on Sunday at 3 p.m. The Thursday, December 4 opening night is sold out.

Lech Walesa Long Bucking The System In Poland

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN
WARSAW, Poland (UPI)

— Five thousand people, huddled against the cold, waited beside the courthouse for news of the biggest showdown between the unions and the government since Polish workers threw down their tools in August.

When victory came, no one doubted who would bring the word: Lech Walesa.

The salty-tongued labor organizer — his name is pronounced Valensa — has called rallies, threatened strikes, demanded talks, made speeches openly and spoken freely with foreign reporters. It is only a hint at the enormity of his accomplishments in the Polish labor movement to realize that any one of these tactics — attempted just once — would draw a five-year prison term in virtually any other communist country.

But Walesa held firm, forcing the government and the Communist Party in a crucial Supreme Court case in November to acknowledge complete independence of the nation's largest labor coalition.

When the verdict was read, Walesa strolled outside the yellow sandstone courthouse to tell the world.

Grabbing a bullhorn, he climbed aboard a waiting bus and told them, "It was a victory for common sense. A Pole came to terms with a Pole."

"The workers should know for whom and for how much they work," he said.

Then he joined the jubilant crowd for a chorus of "God Save Poland."

"Long live Walesa," the people chanted as the bus pulled away.

It was a sweet moment for the electrician, and a long time coming.

Walesa, whose walrus moustache and rumpled clothes have become an international trademark, has been bucking the system for nearly a decade.

Walesa has built a reputation among fellow workers of mythic proportions.

"People attribute to him some abilities that even he doesn't have because there is a demand for a leader in this country," said one of his closest friends.

What Walesa does have is the keen ability to pull together a nation's restless labor force whose emotions often threaten to erupt into anarchy.

In 1970, three years out of electrical school, Walesa led a brief, unsuccessful strike in the same Lenin shipyard where workers balked last August.

"We lost because we were inexperienced," he said.

He has held three jobs and was fired from each for political reasons, the first time in 1973. After he was fired from the Gdansk shipyards following the unrest in 1976, he went to a building firm and was fired again in 1979 — officially for missing a day's work but really because he addressed a rally commemorating the scores of workers who died in the 1970 strikes.

He has been unemployed this year. When shipyard workers went on strike last summer to protest higher meat prices and long lines, Walesa was on his way home from the hospital with a new daughter, his sixth child.

Police, nervous over his previous role in labor unrest, arrested him anyway. Word spread to the shipyard and his release became a major demand.

Walesa was freed and ran off to find his followers, jumping a shipyard fence to reach them.

He is tough, but with a sense of humor. When he sits down before a prime minister or a supreme court judge, he does so as an equal, despite his limited formal education.

That, perhaps more than any other factor, has made him a folk-hero among his own people. From them, Walesa — a deeply religious Roman Catholic — draws his power and inspiration.

"Hey, Leshik, hey Leshik," they yell, using his nickname.

"The crowd changes him from a tired man into a man beaming with energy," said one Pole who has watched him work.

Before a meeting in a union hall in Gdansk or a soccer stadium in Krakow, he sits alone, thinking. Then he takes a quick nap on an office couch.

"I am not a politician, I am a trade unionist," Walesa is fond of saying. But he draws crowds like a politician. In Krakow, 30,000 people turned out to surround him with flags and flowers and carry him through the streets on their shoulders.

Even Walesa, a man of enormous self-confidence, seemed overwhelmed, and rushed quickly through a set speech.

"He was a little frightened by the size and the emotion of the crowd," an aide said, later.

One Westerner who has observed Walesa at close quarters throughout the recent months says "he has a bit of the messianic touch" and has come to expect the adulation he now receives, but it has not turned his head.

Walesa is beginning to take it all in stride.

"I don't like to travel," he said. "But the people in Krakow want to see me in person. This is a bad habit we have in our country. We put all our confidence in one man as a leader. Then, when we don't like them later on, we spit on them. I don't want people to spit on me like they have spit on other responsible leaders in Poland."

Some say Walesa has studied crowd psychology and uses it to lead the workers. It may come in handy — the labor coalition he heads, called Solidarity, now counts 10 million members.

But he is no dictator. He doesn't always get his way. In the last round with the government, he was strongly opposed to issuing new strike threats, but the union did anyway. Still, even as a moderate, he can tap the feelings of the majority. He can voice their hopes and demands.

"He chooses the best solution like a computer," said one close associate.

He is not the brainiest of the labor leaders, nor the best theoretician, but he likes to sit down with workers. They trust him to speak their mind and win without bloodshed.

The brown-eyed Walesa, whose shaggy, reddish-blond hair always looks slightly disheveled, was born Oct. 29, 1943, in Wloclawek in northern Poland. He moved to Gdansk after finishing school. He was one of five children. After his father's death his mother married her late husband's brother, Lesh's uncle Stanislaw.

The couple emigrated to the United States seven years ago at the invitation of the elder Walesa's sister.

A member of the Walesa family in the United States — there are "50 or 60" in New Jersey and Massachusetts — says that Stanislaw intended to save money and then return to enjoy retirement with his wife in Poland. But Mrs. Walesa was killed in an auto accident four years ago. Stanislaw decided to remain in the United States.

Stanislaw Walesa now lives in Jersey City, N.J., where on Sept. 1 he shared a Labor Day podium with presidential campaigner Ronald Reagan (he met President Carter too). It was one day after Polish television had broadcast to the country his nephew's signing of an agreement with the communist government establishing the first independent trade union Poland has had since World War II.

If Stanislaw Walesa were to return to Poland now he would find Lech's life rapidly changing.

Lech Walesa, his wife, Elizabeth, and their children have moved from a two to a six-room apartment. He used to show up with an open-collar shirt. Now he wears a tie. He says he used to have just one suit but now owns five, given to him by priests.

He has also learned to handle the press, though he can be outspoken.

After one 14-hour day of talks with Premier Jozef Pankowski, he told reporters he was tired, "but the government is even more tired."

An aide on his right gave him a nudge — a signal to watch his tongue.

After the union faced down the government in court, Walesa was whisked off for an audience with Cardinal Stefan Wysyznski. He waited nervously for the cardinal to approach, wiping the sweat from his palm with a handkerchief before shaking the cardinal's hand.

Wyszynski hugged and kissed him. Walesa beamed.

"I would like to have a shot of vodka, though I don't drink at all," Walesa told hundreds of workers later at a press conference. "Pardon me that I am not serious."

He takes his religion as seriously as his labor activity. His office is more like a shrine than a workplace. On the walls are a crucifix, rosaries and a photograph of the pope.

Poetry Man's Voice Was Used In Carter Campaign

By JIM MORRIS
BALTIMORE (UPI) — To most of those lunching in downtown Baltimore's outdoor plazas, Lary Lewman is simply a pleasant diversion — the Poetryman who recites odes while dressed in Elizabethan costume.

That's what Lewman does for fun, dramatizing "The Highwayman," "Richard Cory," "Casey at the Bat," and others while dressed in breeches, boots, ruffled shirt and plumed hat.

But when it was time for work this fall, his voice changed to a less dramatic, tone. He recited the wonders of President Jimmy Carter's four years in the White House.

Lewman was the voice on Carter's television campaign commercials. He was heard daily praising Carter's record and urging voters to give him a second four years.

While millions know his voice, his face is known mostly to those who catch his performances as "Poetryman," a character he came up with more than two years ago.

"It is my idea of how people envision poetry. I really didn't like the way most people did poetry — it was stuffy and inaccessible — and I had done this several times before, the first time at a cabaret," said Lewman, 43, who came to Baltimore from Terre Haute, Ind., in 1959 to work for a local radio and television station.

Baltimore's Convention and Tourist Bureau provides the sound equipment when Lewman performs, generally Monday through Friday. But he pays for everything else, including decks of cards that list his poems and his costume, which he calls "vaguely Elizabethan and apropos of the city."

Few who watch Lewman at his lunchtime performances are aware of his Washington connection. No lines from his Carter connection ever came out in public. But recently, he managed a dig at the federal government.

"They tell me a billion seconds ago was Pearl Harbor. A billion minutes ago, Christ walked on earth. A billion hours ago, man wasn't even here," Lewman said while taking a break between poems.

"But a billion dollars ago" — here he took a look at his watch — "it was only 11:15 a.m. in Washington, D.C."

He then launched into one of his poems, ending with: "It takes a heap of living in a house to make it home."

The manner in which Lewman expresses his love for performing poetry is made easier by his vocation. After being seen on both commercial and public television, he switched to the background and became a professional "voiceover" —

a switch that led to his being named as Carter's official campaign "voice."

"I did one line on the election eve film (in 1976), and I worked for some political consultants in Washington," Lewman said. "One of those guys introduced me to Gerald Rafshoon (Carter's media adviser) and Rafshoon used me."

Lewman will not say how much money he made from the Carter commercials. But he said there is "more than enough work" in the Baltimore-Washington area to keep a professional voice busy now that the election is over.

A Carter supporter, he said the last two lines of one of his favorite poems took on added meaning then:

"But there is no joy in Mudville, Mighty Casey has struck out."

LARY LEWMAN, dressed in Elizabethan costume, recites odes as the "Poetryman". That's what he does for fun. For work and pay

he was the voice on President Carter's television campaign commercials. (UPI Photo)

Hybrid Car Out Of Junkyards

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — The "Stude-a-Ford-a-Linc-a-Lac" is a hybrid car that has been Waller Hunt's pride and joy for 30 years.

"I went to every junkyard within 50 miles of Middletown looking for body parts I thought I could use and blend," said Hunt.

Heads turn when Hunt drives his creation, dubbed "Havoc," down Middletown streets. The auto has won a shelf-load of trophies at various shows, where it's judged in the pre-World War II radical custom category.

Hunt said he started on the car around 1950, when someone gave him a 1941 Cadillac Fleetwood sedan that was twisted in an accident.

Plasma Sold As Matter Of Survival

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Ricardo Torres Martin has scars on the inside of his right arm that look like the "tracks" of a heroin addict. The marks actually were left by what some call "border draculas."

The puncture marks on the 16-year-old Mexican's arm are from needles used to remove his blood in exchange for cash.

Martin says he has sold his plasma four times for $10 a pint to the El Paso Plasma Corp. clinic, located about five blocks from the international border here.

The boy, who left home earlier this year, says that selling his plasma is a matter of survival. "There were 12 persons in my family ... and it was time for me to go out and make it on my own."

At least 13 plasma collection centers are thriving in four Texas cities along the border with Mexico. Seven operate in El Paso.

They are different from blood banks in that the plasma clinics filter out and return to the donor all red blood cells, keeping only the hazy, off-white fluid — plasma — that makes up slightly more than half of human blood.

Doctors say it is safe to give a pint of plasma every 72 hours. One El Paso clinic reports taking plasma from 1,500 to 2,000 donors a month. Local hospitals say they pay approximately $20 a pint for plasma.

Critics of the clinics say Martin and countless other aliens who sell their plasma are being victimized. Some doctors say the clinics increase the risk of hepatitis.

Directors at many of the plasma centers counter that their clients provide life-saving fluids without causing anyone harm.

"Does anyone ever ask where the serum come from when their son needs gamma globulin or a shot for tetanus, mumps or rabies?" asked John Coffey, director of the Laredo Plasma Donor Center Inc.

The centers advertise in English and Spanish. Most pay bonuses for repeat donors and reward those who bring friends willing to sell their plasma.

"It is not our problem what their nationality or legal status in this country is," said Rebecca Ramirez, director of one of three clinics operated by El Paso Plasma.

The centers have been frequent targets of U.S. immigration officers searching for illegal aliens.

"At times we would get large numbers of aliens out of there," said Assistant Border Patrol Chief Michael Williams. "Sometimes we've gotten 25 or 30 at a time."

Donors must be at least 18, although Martin says he has been accepted by using an altered Mexican identification card. "That's possible, as much as I'd like to say no," said Miss Ramirez.

Hematologists — doctors specializing in blood chemistry — said the plasma-for-pay operations are statistically riskier than plasma donations because those who sell their plasma are down on their luck and are more likely to be unhealthy.

"You have the lowest incidence of hepatitis with volunteer donors, and your most likely chance of getting hepatitis with professional donors," said El Paso hematologist Thomas Twele.

A professor of hematology at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine, who asked that his name not be used, said, "When you have a paid donor situation, you run a greater risk that you're going to encounter a drug user."

The plasma centers must abide by Food and Drug Administration regulations, but Jay Cole, FDA resident investigator in charge of the El Paso office, said there's no way to guarantee a prospective donor doesn't have hepatitis.

"That's what we're most interested in, but the test (to detect hepatitis) is only 40 percent accurate," Cole said.

"Usually you get it from an injection. If you're more debilitated, you won't build up antibodies so you can fight the disease, so it's usually the poorer population that has hepatitis."

Doll Show Is Planned

The Annual Salvation Army Doll Show will be presented December 7 from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. at the Salvation Army Citadel.
 Ladies of the Auxiliary will act as hostesses showing the dolls and serving tea.
 Local church groups and organizations hve helped dress the dolls and are presenting their contributions in competition with each other.
 Judges of this event will be Mrs. Lymon Ormond and Mrs. Lee Hannah. The dolls will be gifts for children who otherwise would not receive much at Christmas.
 The show is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Reg. $64.99 54⁸⁸
4-Wheels
Reg. $109.99 89⁸⁸

We'll replace shoes or disc pads, brake fluid, brake springs and front oil seals. Turn and true drums or rotors. Rebuild cylinders or calipers.
We'll also repack front bearings. Sears may decline to perform partial brake jobs, if it appears in Sears judgment, that additional work is needed for your brake system to function properly.

Brake service available for most American-made cars. (Not available in: Anderson, Danville, Florence, Gastonia, Greenville, N.C., High Point, Jacksonville, Lynchburg, Rock Hill, Rocky Mount and Shelby.)

SEARS HIGHWAY TIRE WARRANTY

- A. Full Warranty During 25% of Usable Treadlife
Tire Failure. During the first 25% of original usable tread, if the tire is properly sized for your car, Sears will, upon return, replace the tire, free of charge, or refund the purchase price, if a failure occurs apparently due to a defect in material or workmanship of the tire.
- B. Limited Warranty
Tire Failure. After 25% of the tread is worn, and for the remaining 75% of the original usable tread, if tire is properly sized for your car, Sears will, upon return, replace the tire or give you a refund, charging you only the proportion of the current price that represents the portion of the usable tread used, if a failure occurs apparently due to a defect in material
or workmanship of the tire.
- C. Limited Warranty
Tire Wearout. For the number of miles of usage specified, if the tire is properly sized for your car, Sears will, upon return, replace the tire or give a refund, charging you only the proportion of the current price that represents miles of usage received compared to the miles specified, if wearout (2/32" or less tread remaining) occurs.
This does not apply to wearout caused by failure to use and maintain the tire in accordance with recommendations.
