Soviet Buildup 'Unprecedented': Carter

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While key officials say there is no evidence the Kremlin has decided to launch a military strike, President Carter and his top aides are calling the Soviet troop buildup along the Polish border unprecedented and encouraging Moscow to imagine the worst if it decides to invade.

In a written statement Wednesday, Carter said, "The United States is watching with growing concern the unprecedented buildup of Soviet forces along the Polish border and the closing of certain frontier regions along the border."

He added: "I want all countries to know that the attitude and future policies of the United States toward the Soviet Union would be directly and very adversely affected by any Soviet use of force in Poland." Noting Soviet references to "anti-socialist forces" alleged to be operating within Poland's trade unions, which are openly challenging the Communist Party's domination of that nation, the president said: "We know from postwar history that such allegations have sometimes preceded military intervention."

In Moscow, the Soviet Foreign Ministry responded by saying that "as is known, many statements are being made in the West that are clearly aimed at exacerbating the situation in the Polish People's Republic. As for the statement made by the president of the United States, it fully and completely is on his own conscience." The Soviets did not directly deny Carter's claim relating to the buildup along the Polish border.

Edwin Meese III, counselor to President-elect Ronald Reagan, said today the Soviets "would make a grave miscalculation if they perceive any weakness in the structure of this kind of interregnum (transition) period."

He said Carter is in clear control of government foreign policy "and we are very supportive of him in maintaining that control."

Meese said Reagan is trying to support Carter's position by making no foreign policy statements that might undermine the president.

As for the future, he said, Reagan "will be fully ready at noon on the 20th of January to take command immediately of the full apparatus of government in the national security area." He noted that Reagan and top aides are receiving daily briefings on the Polish situation.

Meanwhile, the scope and purpose of the Soviet buildup were uncertain.

Some administration sources who have been monitoring the situation closely said that the president might be overstating the case somewhat by calling the Soviet buildup "unprecedented." These specialists said there has been no overall pattern of reinforcement of the 21 Soviet divisions in western Russia, from which strategists believe any attack on Poland would be most likely to come.

Intelligence sources, meanwhile, said that despite Carter's reference to border closings, traffic between East Germany and Poland has been moving freely.

They said the Soviets have barred only Western military observers from a "temporary restricted zone" in preparation for an air defense exercise within the next few days.

Nevertheless, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said, "The fact is that military preparations have proceeded and are proceeding."

One Carter aide, who asked not to be identified, told reporters "there has been indication of growing Soviet readiness to engage" in military intervention.

And other key administration officials said privately that the potential for a Soviet military move against Poland has become more worrisome with reinforcement of some western Russian divisions.

"The machinery is oiled so that if the decision is made in Moscow, they could move within a week," one military analyst said.

No one in the administration was willing to say exactly how the United States would react to an invasion of Poland.

Asked if the United States had ruled out any military response, Muskie replied: "That's a good question to which we ought to leave the Russians in doubt."

MIAMI — Former Dade County schools superintendent Johnny L. Jones — a Greenville, N.C. native — was described as unfit for public trust by Circuit Court Judge Thomas Scott, who sentenced him to three years in prison and fined him $5,000 for his conviction in the "Gold Plumbing Caper," late yesterday afternoon.

Jones, 46, was released on his own recognizance pending appeals and said he had no comment on the sentencing on convictions for second-degree grand theft, witness tampering, and soliciting perjury.

Scott barred Jones from holding office for at least seven years, saying "Your deeds and actions are a (Please turn to Page 6)

'Fate Of Nation In Balance' Restraint Plea To Polish Labor

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's leaders, faced with a Soviet troop buildup along the nation's borders that President Carter called "unprecedented," have appealed to the militant independent labor movement for restraint and discipline to save the country from "moral and economic destruction."

"The fate of the nation hangs in the balance," said the Communist Party's Central Committee as President Carter and other Western leaders warned the Kremlin against a repeat of its invasion of Czechoslovakia 12 years ago.

In Moscow, the Soviet Foreign Ministry responded by saying that such statements were aimed at "exacerbating the situation" in Poland.

The British Foreign Office said today that British ambassadors have issued new warnings to the Soviet Union and its East European allies to stay out of Poland or face consequences of "the utmost gravity." The British action followed similar statements by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington.

The Polish leadership's statement was issued Wednesday night after a two-day meeting that purged four Politburo members. But the committee's failure to announce other immediate, concrete measures reflected deep disagreement over how to end the deepening political and economic crisis, officially described as the worst since 1944.

The committee's statement coupled a promise to adhere fully to the agreements recognizing the independent labor union movement with a plea for "not one hour more of destructive strikes" and for the public to "oppose further escalation of unrest."

"The development of people's rule and guarantees of independence can be consolidated only within the framework of a socialist state," the statement warned the labor movement. "It is indispensable for the working class and all working people to ensure the socialist trend of newly emerging forms of democratic self-government. They cannot be used against their own socialist state or its policy foundations."

Meanwhile, President Carter said in a statement that the United States was watching "with growing concern the unprecedented buildup of Soviet forces along the Polish border and the closing of certain frontier regions." But U.S. intelligence analysts and other officials in Washington suggested that Carter might be overstating the buildup.

"There does seem to be some kind of a buildup," said one top Pentagon official, but he said it consisted of the reinforcement of several under-strength divisions by reservists.

However, another analyst warned: "The machinery is oiled so that if the decision is made in Moscow, they could move within a week."

The Carter statement noted references in the Soviet media to "anti-socialist forces" alleged to be operating in Poland and said: "We know from postwar history that such allegations have sometimes preceded military intervention."

He apparently was referring to Soviet intervention in Hungary in 1956 and the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968 to crush liberal reforms that the Kremlin regarded as "anti-socialist."

In Moscow, the Soviet Foreign Ministry responded to Carter's warning by saying, "as is known, many statements are being made in the West that are clearly aimed at exacerbating the situation in the Polish People's Republic." While not directly denying the claim of a Soviet military buildup, the Foreign Ministry said Carter's statement "is fully and completely on his own conscience."

The Soviet Union has powerful military forces stationed in Eastern Europe, with an estimated 400,000 troops in East Germany on Poland's western border. There are also two Red Army tank divisions in Poland along with some air, signal and logistics units that are estimated to total 30,000 men.

The Soviet units in Poland, which are there under Warsaw Pact agreements, are clustered near Legnica in the southwest and near Szczecin in the northwest. There are also Soviet troops in Czechoslovakia, on Poland's southern border.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia responded to the Western fears of Soviet invasion with the charge that Western news media were "launching a true psychological war" against Poland and were "acting as an instrument of direct interference in the internal affairs of the sovereign Polish state."

In Poland today, an unidentified Pole hijacked a Polish airliner on a domestic flight carrying 20 other passengers and four crew and forced the pilot to land at an American air base in West Berlin. There was no indication if the hijacking was connected to rising tensions in Poland.

Says Americans Seen In Vietnam

SEATTLE (AP) — A group of Scandinavian construction workers saw a road gang in Vietnam made up of American prisoners, a fellow Norwegian worker has told a Seattle radio station.

The Norwegian, Stein Gudding, said Wednesday that the Americans were seen by other workers he met while helping build a paper mill north of Hanoi.

His comments came in a copyright interview with KIRO Radio.

The other workers were motorcycling in a rural area when they came across a road gang made up of Americans, Gudding said in a telephone interview from Bangkok.

Local police told the Scandinavians to leave immediately, but the prisoners shouted in English, with American accents, "Tell the world about us," Gudding reported.

Gudding said the workers who actually saw the Americans are still in Vietnam. He did not indicate just when the Americans were seen.

The Pentagon has said that the United States knows of no Americans listed as POWs or missing in action who still survive in southeast Asia.

Lt. Gen. Eugene Tighe Jr., Defense Intelligence Agency director, told Congress Tuesday, "Of all the live sighting reports DIA has evaluated, there are none which can be substantiated relative to Americans being detained against their will."

Rear Adm. Jerry Tuttle in Washington, D.C., who heads a team investigating reports of American servicemen missing in action in Vietnam, said all such reports are examined and checked out.

KIRO received a note written by Gudding from Dan Smith, a veteran from Seattle who was vacationing in Thailand and met the Norwegian in a bar.

Fire Claims A Life

FIRE FATALITY FIRST FOR YEAR FOR COUNTY — Pitt County identification officer John Baker (kneeling in smoke) looks through the rubble of a two room wood frame house in which the body of a Rt. 2, Farmville man was found early this morning. According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, a call was received at 1:57 a.m. to the house about two miles north of Farmville on N.C. 258. Firemen arriving on the scene found the house engulfed in flames. Identity of the victim was unclear because two men were known to have had residences there, according to Joyner. The investigator described the body as that of a male approximately 32 years old. Joyner speculated that an oil heater used in the house was the apparent cause of the fire that was the first in the county for the year. The house was located on land owned by Marvin Horton. WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee is moving to attach a nearly 17 percent pay raise for members of Congress to stopgap legislation for federal agencies yet to receive full appropriations for the 1981 fiscal year.

The Senate Appropriations Committee accepted an amendment Wednesday night by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, that would have the effect of raising salaries for members of congress from $60,662 to $70,900. It would also increase salaries of almost 324,000 top-level federal workers.

The action was part of hectic committee consideration of a stopgap spending resolution for several federal departments and agencies after Friday's scheduled adjournment of Congress.

Earlier Wednesday, the House voted 272-106 for a more simple version of the spending resolution that specifically blocked a pay hike.

Following the House action, the Senate Appropriations Committee began adding dozens of amendments, all of which could be deleted when the bill reaches the Senate floor.

The Senate amendments, which even change the expiration date of the measure passed by the House, seemed almost certain to put the House and Senate on a collision course in the closing days of this session.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It was one of those days when I wanted my own apartment...unlisted.

My son was telling me in complete detail about a movie he had just seen, punctuated by 3,000 "You know's?" My teeth were falling asleep.

There were three phone calls — strike that — three monologues that could have been answered by a recording. I fought the urge to say, "It's been nice listening to you."

In the cab from home to the airport, I got another assault on my ear, this time by a cab driver who was rambling on about his son whom he supported in college, and was in his last year, who put a P.S. on his letter saying, "I got married. Her name is Diane." He asked me, "What do you think of that?" and proceeded to answer the question himself.

There were 30 whole beautiful minutes before my plane took off...time for me to be alone with my own thoughts, to open a book and let my mind wander. A voice next to me belonging to an elderly woman said, "I'll bet it's cold in Chicago."

Stone-faced I answered, "It's likely."

"I haven't been to Chicago in nearly three years," she persisted, "My son lives there."

"That's nice," I said, my eyes intent on the printed page of the book.

"My husband's body is on this plane. We've been married for 53 years. I don't drive, you know, and when he died a nun drove me from the hospital. We aren't even Catholic. The funeral director let me come to the airport with him."

I don't think I have ever detested myself more than I did at that moment. Another human being was screaming to be heard and in desperation had turned to a cold stranger who was more interested in a novel than the real-life drama at her elbow.

All she needed was a listener...no advice, wisdom, experience, money, assistance, expertise or even compassion...but just a minute or two to listen.

It seemed rather incongruous that in a society of super-sophisticated communication, we often suffer from a shortage of listeners.

She talked numbly and steadily until we boarded the plane, then found her seat in another section. As I hung up my coat, I heard her plaintive voice say to her seat companion, "I'll bet it's cold in Chicago."

I prayed, "Please God, let her listen."

Why am I telling you this? To make me feel better. It won't help, though.

Dear Abby

Lonely Wife Needs Spice

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I read your column faithfully and hope you can help me. I am so lonely I could die. My husband is gone about 90 percent of the time. He's in Japan right now, and from there he's going to Australia. The company he works for keeps him on the road for months at a time.

I have turned to drink (only wine), but I drink so much, sometimes I'm not even sure what day it is. I live in a place that is quite isolated. I have no children and there is very little to do here. I am 100 percent faithful to my husband. I go nowhere and have only a nodding acquaintance with my neighbors. Most of my neighbors are older. (I'm 28.)

I have started to buy wine by the case. I have nothing to live for, but who cares?

LINDA

DEAR LINDA: I do. Please look up Alcoholics Anonymous in your telephone book, call and tell them what you've told me. I promise you they won't let you down. If you are unable to go to them, they will come to you.

And when your husband returns, have a heart-to-heart talk with him and let him know that you can't handle those long separations. But work on sobriety first; then you'll be able to work out your other problems. Good luck, Linda. Please write again soon. I care.

DEAR ABBY: When I read a letter to you from a divorced man crying because he can't find a "nice" woman anywhere, I had to smile.

I'll tell you exactly where we are. We are teaching their children. If those fathers would attend the next PTA meeting or open house at their children's school, they would meet three or four single or divorced women in every school building.

We are not at the singles bars because we're home grading papers or at a school activity with your kids. We are educated, capable, decent women who love children, but don't meet many eligible men because of the limited exposure of the classroom.

So, gentlemen, if you want to meet a bright, respectable, professional woman, go to your child's school and get acquainted with the teacher, counselor or principal. She just might teach you a thing or two.

DEAR AVAILABLE: Your letter may initiate a "back to school" movement — for single parents.

She has assisted the Boy's Club, Pace Academy, Mental Health, Humane Society and The Salvation Army.

A special toast to the honoree was made by Dot Harrigan, incoming president of the Woman's Club, who also presented her a red rosebud corsage. Joyce Hastings, immediate past club president, was mistress of ceremonies and chairman of the luncheon assisted by Merle Austin.

It was noted Mrs. Savage will be listed in the following publications again this year.

Quota Cut Necessary

Flue-cured tobacco quotas for 1981 were set this week at 1,013 billion pounds. That is 7.5 percent below the quotas for this year.

The cut is large but it is designed to bring production in line with demand. It is also expected to be a help to Stabilization Corp. which must sell some of the tobacco it has on hand and also reduce the amount that it has to take next year.

For the farmer hopefully the production cut will mean higher prices next year. If the grower can get more for the tobacco he grows, and cut production cost by growing less, he may come out better financially.

Tobacco is important to North Carolina. Our state will grow about 668 million pounds next year, and in North Carolina it is estimated that seven percent of the private sector jobs are involved with tobacco.

Most of us have a stake in the industry and it is very much to the state's interest to keep the industry stable.

Cutting quotas might seem like bad medicine but it is necessary to keep tobacco's economy — and North Carolina's — on an even keel.

Invasion Would Be Serious

Soviet military excursions in neighboring countries are well-known, the latest being in Afghanistan. There have been military clashes with the Chinese on their border.

Now there is great concern that Soviet troops might roll into Poland, with Russian troops on the border reportedly on a war alert.

Since the activation of independent trade unions in Poland, the Soviets have been blustering. Whether or not the talk will become military action remains to be seen.

National governments should make it clear to the Soviets, however, that strong actions will be taken if the Russians invade Poland.

The East Is Solid

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The Solid South may no longer be counted upon as secure within Democratic ranks, but in North Carolina there remains the solid East.

That is the pattern produced from mapping the results of county elections held across the state in November, but largely overlooked in the glare of public attention turned on the more glamorous presidential and gubernatorial and senatorial contests.

If you draw a line roughly along Interstate 85 from Virginia up above Henderson then pick up U.S. One on south through Rockingham and into South Carolina, you have roughly traced the Fall Line in North Carolina, so named because the streams and rivers leave the Piedmont hills to enter the Coastal Plain of Eastern North Carolina.

East of that dividing line there is one, lone county commissioner, Jesse Lindsay, hanging around the courthouse at Clinton.

West of that line, it's a different story shaping up after these 1980 elections.

Revolution
Indeed, right on that line, a minor revolution of sorts has taken place. Moore county, home of the world-famed Sandhills golf clubs, has gone under Republican control. Right now there is a two-two split, but incumbent Republican James Craven won election to the North Carolina House of Representatives, so the Republican Party executive committee will name a replacement to finish Craven's unexpired term.

Across the Piedmont and into the mountains, county after county shows growing Republican strength. In the central section, Republicans now control boards of county commissioners in Randolph, Stanly, Rowan, Davie, Alexander, Catawba, and Yadkin counties. They have members on the boards in Alamance, Guilford, Forsyth, Cabarrus, Mecklenburg, Gaston, and Stokes counties.

Running along the mountains and foothills, Republicans control the counties of Ashe, Watauga,

BILL NOBLITT

Wilkes, Avery, Caldwell, Alexander, Yancey, Buncombe, Henderson, Polk, Transylvania and Clay. There is Republican membership on the boards in Burke, McDowell, Graham and Macon.

All told, there are 20 of North Carolina's 100 counties operating under Republican leadership. In numbers, that means only 94 Republican county commissioners to 391 Democrats. But the geographic pattern produces the interesting pattern of strength and control in western areas while the east remains — except for Commissioner Lindsay, solidly Democratic.

Not all of this pattern emerged in this election year. There have been traditional Republican enclaves in the state; notably Randolph County exactly in the geographic center, and the out-post counties along the Virginia and Tennessee borders to the northwest.

THE GODFATHER?

By JOHN J. KILPATRICK

Tinkering Has Its Risks

WASHINGTON — A depressing announcement came forth the other day from one of the really odd couples of Washington — Senator Strom Thurmond and Congressman John Conyers. They will jointly sponsor a constitutional amendment providing a single six-year term for future presidents.

About all the two gentlemen have in common is that both of them are lawyers. Mr. Thurmond, the old South Carolina States-Righter, ordinarily is tagged as Mr. Conservative. Mr. Conyers, a black liberal from Michigan, usually is on the forefront of every cause that his prospective co-sponsor opposes.

If their proposed amendment is a wise amendment? I dunno — I think not — but it is representative of an alarming urge to tinker with the supreme law of the land. It is hard to recall a time when so many changes have been seriously proposed in the Constitution. In this delicate area, let us make haste very slowly.

Think about it. For the first time since 1912, we now have two proposed amendments simultaneously out for ratification by the states. The Equal Rights Amendment, proposed in March of 1972, is slowly expiring in a swamp of hostility. The D.C. Amendment, which would treat the District of Columbia "as though it were a state," has been languishing since it won approval from Congress in 1978.

Meanwhile, the Senate has decisively defeated a proposal to provide direct national elections for president and vice president. Half a dozen ideas for other amendments have attracted substantial support. I am reminded of the maxim for amateur mechanics trying to assemble a Christmas bike: When all else fails, read the instructions.

The instructions from our Founding Fathers are clear enough. They deliberately made it a difficult business to amend the Constitution. Two-thirds of each house of Congress must approve a resolution; then three-fourths of the states have to ratify. In the 189 years that have elapsed since the first 10 amendments were adopted, only 16 other amendments have won acceptance. Like marriage, amendments plainly are not to be entered into lightly or inadvisedly.

There is this to be said of the Thurmond-Conyers proposal, that in a way it too falls into a pattern. Four of the 16 subsequent amendments have dealt with the presidency in some fashion. The idea of a single six-year term has been talked about for years, but it always has faltered on a homely objection: Six years is too long for a poor president, and not long enough for a good one. Would the people have wanted two more years of Mr. Carter? Just a few weeks ago the people answered that question decisively. No compelling reasons have been advanced to justify the change.

Neither is there much to be said for other current proposals.

Racial-balance busing, in my own view, is a racist, costly, useless abomination; but pernicious as such court orders may be, they scarcely amount to a problem of constitutional dimensions.

An amendment to compel a balanced federal budget, except in clearly defined periods of emergency, might have some merit. The problem here is to draft an amendment that would be simple, effective and enforceable. No one has yet mastered the trick.

I see no merit in proposals to authorize "voluntary prayer" in public schools. Serious prayer, as distinguished from merely perfunctory prayer, is too serious a matter to be undertaken in classrooms provided by the taxpayers for other purposes. Let teachers do their job, and families theirs, and churches theirs.

As for proposals to make abortions criminal, except when a mother's life is clearly endangered, reasonably minded men will disagree. I happen to find the arguments in favor of "freedom of choice" more persuasive than the arguments in favor of "right to life," but because of the deeply religious overtones in this whole controversy, I doubt that it should be resolved by amending the supreme law of the land. The Supreme Lawgiver of the Universe is better suited to adjudicate the issue.

Hatch Eyes 'Quota War'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, one of Ronald Reagan's most steadfast and enthusiastic supporters, may be on a collision course with the president-elect over a proposed constitutional prohibition against government-imposed racial quotas.

As chairman of the constitutional amendment subcommittee in the newly-Republican Senate, Hatch wants neither abortion nor school prayer nor the balanced budget as the subcommittee's first order of business. He feels the affirmative action program, requiring minority hiring, is ruling the nation's economic and social fabric. Therefore, Hatch is pushing a constitutional amendment to prohibit it.

But Reagan is described by adviser Ed Meese as chary about constitutional amendments. Furthermore, the president-elect wants to avoid confrontations with the black community. Reagan's operatives may ask Hatch to back down on grounds that new appointments to the Supreme Court will water down affirmative action anyway. But Hatch is determined to press forth.

A Lady At Labor?

With Anne Armstrong having ruled herself out for a Cabinet post, the best bet for a female member of the Cabinet may be former National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) Chairman Elizabeth Murphy as secretary of labor.

Mrs. Murphy, now practicing law in Washington, has substantial support from Republicans on the House and Senate labor panels. Based on her record at the NLRB, she would be a shock for organized labor after the last four years of invariably pro-union Ray Marshall as secretary of labor.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Murphy would be less objectionable to the labor movement than Rep. John Erlenborn of Illinois, also a possibility. Union leaders would prefer Bethlehem Steel President Richard Schubert, head of Reagan's labor transition team.

No Patronage Czar

Ronald Reagan's high command has vetoed a scheme to establish Republican old pro F. Clifton White as the new administration's patronage czar, with overall control of thousands of federal jobs.

The idea was to invoke political priorities for patronage that were absent from the Eisenhower and Ford administrations. White, a backroom political strategist at the national level for the last 16 years, would have maintained offices at both the White House and the Republican National Committee.

A major reason why the Reagan high command shot down the plan was the fact that the patronage czar would eclipse the Republican national chairman. There is strong sentiment among Republican politicians for the national chairman to play a part in patronage, as he did not in recent Republican administrations.

Schmidt's Carter Snub

White House aides were livid at what they took to be rudeness to President Carter by West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt during his post-election trip here.

At one point in the Oval Office, Carter politely asked Schmidt a question about the conference on European security and cooperation now going on in Madrid. For 10 seconds, Schmidt gazed at the ceiling pondering the question and blowing out wreaths of smoke from his usual cigarette, then turned to his foreign minister. "Herr Genscher," Schmidt said, "you answer that one."

It was Carter's last meeting with the powerful German leader, and one of the least productive in four years of operating on different wavelengths.

Clare Luce's SALT

Ex-Ambassador Clare Booth Luce has sent a private message to Ronald Reagan suggesting that he ask the Senate to consider and vote on SALT II — the stymlized Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty — early in the new Congress.

The idea: The Senate would predictably kill the treaty, possibly by a very large vote. That would dispose of it once and for all and clear the way

Strength For Today

ON ACHIEVING THE IMPOSSIBLE

At a college commencement a minister presiding implored the Almighty in public prayer to give the graduating students high ideals, but to keep their ideals within bounds.

Actually this is a very inappropriate and wrongheaded petition. The Bible encourages people to try the impossible. The twelve men Jesus chose to go forth and establish his kingdom in the world were inept, uneducated, awkward, faltering, and sometimes lacking in courage. Yet these men accomplished what at the time would have seemed an impossible task.

St. Paul did not establish churches in centers where it seemed they had a chance to survive, but in wicked cities where one might expect the gospel to be immediately extinguished. Yet these churches flourished.

The example set by dedicated Christians shows that we should never put any limit on our ideals. With faith all things are possible. — Elisha Douglass

The Calendar Of Celebration

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — Today is a red letter day. Circle it. Today is the day the 1981 edition of Chases' Calendar of Annual Events arrives.

Chases' Calendar, published the last 24 years by an assiduous date-keeper in Flint, Mich., Bill Chase, is a 144-page answer to anyone who finds life humdrum and humorless.

It allows you, for example, to wake up tomorrow night and discover it is not just any old Friday, Dec. 5. It is Martin Van Buren's birthday! It is the day Columbus discovered Haiti! It is the 47th anniversary of the repeal of Prohibition!

Now, won't that make getting out of bed seem less pointless?

Every day offers something to celebrate. In fact, checking the 1981 calendar, every day next year will offer at least four things to celebrate, some days a couple of dozen. Busy, busy.

The month of May has eight pages of celebrations, no less — the Kentucky Derby, of course, and 360 other events.

You can attend in May, for heaven's sake, the Hell Hole Swamp Festival in Jamestown, S.C., the Gillikins of Oz Convention in Escanaba, Mich., Rooster Day in Broken Arrow, Okla. Or you may prefer to sit home and meditate upon the Sack of Rome, May 6, 1527.

"The 1981 edition is by far the largest we have ever compiled," Bill Chase said, "3,280 listings. The first edition, 24 years ago, listed only 364 events. You can see how far we've come."

Chase spent 30 years as librarian for his local newspaper, The Flint Journal, and compiled that first edition merely as a timesaver, a handy reference to answer questions about when such-and-such happened. When was Garfield assassinated, Bill? July 2, 1881.

Last year, at age 57, he left the newspaper because publishing the Calendar had become a full-time job.

It would have to be when you track down such events as Don't Say Ahhh, Ummm and You Know Day (Jan. 7), Be Kind to your Amoeba Day (March 13), the Anniversary of America's First Formal Cremation (Dec. 9), Dunc Day (Nov. 8), Fight the Filthy Fly Month (June), Hate Week (April 4-10), Bachelor's Day (Feb. 28), Old Maid's Day (June 4), Press on Regardless Rally (Nov. 6), Wild Ass Hunters Conference (June 21), and World's End Day (Oct. 22).

If you get around to it, you can also celebrate National Procrastination Week, March 1-7, but it can wait.

Chase's publishing house is known as Apple Tree Press — a bow to his father, who kept an orchard — and the Calendar is the only thing it publishes. It is called Chases' Calendar, plural, because it is a family operation.

His wife, Helen, especially, and offspring Anne, Bob and Bill, all have a hand in producing and promoting the book.

"Each edition is entirely rewritten," Bill Chase said.

"Every sponsored event is supported by documentation from the sponsor, every international and national event by information from an embassy or responsible agent of government. So there is much checking and rechecking to keep us busy."

The Chases have refrained from including any personal or family dates in the Calendar; it is serious business with them. They have, however, taken one tiny liberty.

Next May 20, take time to observe Eliza Doolittle Day. Its sponsor is the Doolittle Day Development Committee, 1113 Kensington Ave., Flint, Mich.

That would be the Chase residence. Bill and Helen believe that speaking one's native language properly is worth celebrating.

for Reagan's announced intention to negotiate and new and much more favorable treaty with Moscow.

But Reagan advisers are not keen about the idea. They feel it could expose Reagan to charges of insincerity. They also believe Reagan's clear campaign attacks against the treaty make it unnecessary for the Senate to kill it.

ECU Political Science Chairman Is Selected

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Tinsley E. Yarbrough, teacher, writer and researcher in constitutional law and judicial and legislative politics, has been named chairman of the Department of Political Science at East Carolina University.

"With his background and research capabilities, we are extremely fortunate in having someone of Dr. Yarbrough's caliber assume the chairmanship of this department," Dr. Angelo Volpe, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, said.

Yarbrough, a native of Decatur, Ala., has been acting chairman of the political science department for almost two years following resignation of Dr. William F. Troutman, who returned to teaching duties in the department. A search committee conducted a nationwide search before choosing Yarbrough, an ECU professor since 1967.

"He had done such an excellent job as acting chairman that he emerged as the clear choice," Volpe said.

Yarbrough holds the PhD from the University of Alabama where he obtained his bachelor's and master's degrees. His MA thesis was on the famous Alabama jurist Frank Johnson and his role in civil rights.

Yarbrough's PhD dissertation was "Fair Trial versus Free Press: Trial Publicity and Procedural Due Process."

Bloodmobile Makes Visit To Plant

The Bloodmobile visited Empire Brushes here for the first time Wednesday and had a successful turnout for the inaugural plant drive, according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said that 81 pints of blood were donated during the visit and 11 persons were deferred for various health reasons.

She expressed appreciation to Empire Brushes for having the visit and to Leon Wright, personnel officer at the plant, for his coordination of the drive. Mrs. Taylor also thanked the women of the Greenville Service League for their help and noted that the organization was so willing to take part in the Bloodmobile effort that they actually had more than enough members on hand yesterday.

The Red Cross spokesman said that blood program officials were gratified at the attitude of the Empire Brushes employees in responding to the first-time appeal at their plant. She added, "We appreciate them letting us come, and we look forward to a return visit."

The Bloodmobile will be at D. H. Conley High School on Monday, Dec. 8 and plans are still being made for a special Dec. 26 visit at the Moose Lodge. The theme, "An After Christmas Party—Give A Gift Of Life," has been adopted for the holiday drive.

Martin Swears In Members

WILLIAMSTON — A new county commissioner, Joe B. Griffin, and two returning commissioners, John L. House and A. C. Bailey, were sworn in for new terms during the December meeting of the Martin County Commissioners held Monday.

On matters before commissioners, approval was given to the low bid for installation of a new roof on the Agricultural Building in Williamston. The low bid of $8,428 was submitted by White's Heating and Sheet Metal Works.

Approval was also given to using money received in rent from the industry utilizing the old Oak City High School gym to apply to repairs on the roof on the gym and for making improvements in the Oak Senior Citizen's Center, another building that was once part of the Oak City High School complex.

A public hearing has been scheduled at 1 p.m. on January 8 on assessment of monies from residents of Woodland Acres near Williamston. The assessment deals with individual property owners' cost share in having roads paved in the area.

Workshop Is Completed

Some 37 city supervisory and management employees completed a two-day management training workshop here Wednesday at the recreation facility on Cedar Lane.

Attending the workshop, conducted by staff members from the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, were city department and division heads and other administrative staff members.

The workshop addressed techniques and methods to improve decision making, organizational communication, and employee motivation.

betrayal, not only of the community as a whole, but a betrayal to your admirers, your friends and your family." Adding that Jones is, "not fit for public office," Scott added that, "you alone must carry this guilt with you for the rest of your life."

Jones was tried on the theft charge in April, after allegedly ordering gold plumbing fixtures for a vacation home he was building and charging them to the Dade County school system. In a second trial in October, he was cleared of allegations he took kickbacks from a school reading program salesman, but he was convicted in that trial of tampering with a witness and solicitation to commit perjury.

Scott sentenced Jones to one year in state prison on each of the misdemeanors in the October trial, and on the grand theft charge, ordered him to pay a $5,000 fine, placed him on probation for five years following his release from prison, ordered him to serve 400 hours of community service, and said Jones could not hold any public office until his sentence was complete.

Held In Probe Of 9 Murders

DALLAS (AP) — A 42-year-old Dallas man who has taken responsibility for the slayings of nine women over the past two months was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond for investigation of murder, authorities say.

One of the nine women whom Carroll Edward Cole claimed to have killed was listed as having died from natural causes, Dallas police said Wednesday. But the case was being reopened in light of Cole's admissions, which came after he was arrested Monday night for questioning in the strangulation of a 32-year-old Dallas woman, police said.

Homicide investigator Gerald Robinson said Cole discussed the slaying for which he was being questioned and the recent killings of two other Dallas women; three women in San Diego including his wife, Diane; two women in Las Vegas, Nev.; and one in Casper, Wyo.

Captive Christmas

Last Christmas, three American clergymen were allowed inside the occupied U.S. Embassy in Iran. They met with the hostages there, held religious services, and distributed packages of food and mail. At that time, the hostages had been held captive for about seven weeks. Richard Queen, a hostage who was there and was later released, said the Christmas cards that came from all over the United States helped lift the captives' spirits. Encouraged by Queen's remarks, a greeting card company in Chicago has donated more than a million Christmas cards, to be mailed to the hostages as part of a National Unity Day celebration today.

Old Mining Town Clings To Its Past

By NANCY SHULINS
Associated Press Writer
CLEATON, Ky. (AP) — Old men huddle outside the post office, their faces pale yellow from years underground. Bitter sighs give way to ragged coughing. The black lung benefit checks are late.

The little parade crosses the main street to Wanda's Grocery, where Wanda Powell clucks with sympathy and slips on the eyeglasses she keeps on a chain around her neck.

She pulls out her accounts. With the checks late, there won't be much cash business today, though a crowd vies for the two chairs she keeps in the store.

Elsewhere, it is quiet in the old mining town, which winds like a coiled spring around the hillside. Patchwork quilts pinned to clotheslines list in the wind.

Dust swirls around the fenders of an ancient black Ford, standing guard in a vacant lot next to what was once the town's barber shop, not far from what was once the town's drug store.

Further down the street sit the ghosts of the picture show, the restaurant, the bakery, two doctors' offices, the train depot.

The oldtimers still talk of the early 1900s, when Cleaton pulsed with life. Lowlife, some say, but life nonetheless.

Ask about it now and their eyes fill with mist and memories.

Used to be saloons and coal mines and passenger trains, they say. Miners looking for liquor and trouble. In Cleaton, they found both.

Mornings, they turned their attention to Kentucky's No. 9 seam, a four-foot-thick vein of coal that helped power the war machines and feed the Industrial Revolution.

From 1914 to 1926, times were good. Then trains turned to diesel, power plants and homeowners to gas. By 1930, the bottom had fallen out.

In Cleaton, coal shovels chewed up old stores and spat out rubble. Fires finished the job. The undergrounds shut down. The 2,500 residents dwindled to 500.

Wanda watches over them now, dispensing kindness and candy and chewing tobacco, along with bits of news.

Wanda's, the post office and Riley's garage are the sum total of Cleaton's job opportunities; occasional bootlegging, the extent of the mischief. Like most of rural Kentucky, Cleaton is dry.

For those still fit to work, there are two surface mines — Sugar Creek just across the road and Gibraltar 10 miles away.

Though the last mine in Cleaton had closed by World War II, retired coal miners still make up the bulk of its population. Why do they stay? "I don't know," Wanda says. "They just like it, I guess."

To Kentucky historians like Dr. M. David Orrahood of Owensboro, Cleaton stands for "the worst the coal industry had to offer. There were company stores, company doctors, company houses, company water, company electricity. When you died, the company buried you."

"The roads were so bad that the people couldn't get out and the law couldn't get in," he says.

"Cleaton was a madhouse, a hellhole. And we'll never see anything quite like it again."

Neighborhood Playground Equipment Installed

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A variety of rugged playground equipment for children is now in place in the play area amid sturdy oak trees just west of Agnes Fullilove Community School.

In a Higgs neighborhood community project headed by Donna Whitley, plans have been in the making for some time to secure playground items to be used by about 125 young children of the Higgs neighborhood in the western area of Greenville — located roughly north of Dickinson Avenue and east and west of 14th Street.

"Our efforts in this project have been focused on the needs of children in the six to 12-year old age group," Ms. Whitley said. "These are the children who are most active and need some place to play without having to go long distances."

In addition to a basketball court located in an open space in the sun, climb-on and play-around items have been installed in a line between the double row of oak trees. These include a climbing bar, a balance beam, a wacky tire fun piece, a slide, swings, and the largest and most challenging of the playground items, a staircase climb constructed of sturdy redwood logs.

"We even have a bench for parents to sit on while watching children play," Ms. Whitley pointed out.

Funding for the project was provided by the city in the amount of $10,000, earmarked from Greenville's Community Development Fund.

In a brief, informal ceremony at the site early Wednesday afternoon, city representatives were on hand to congratulate Ms. Whitley on the fruition of her efforts. The representatives were Ben Shivar, Community Development Fund, Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission chairman Roy Carawan, and Recreation and Parks Department director Boyd Lee.

Also Violated Code Of Ethics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John Jenrette, convicted of accepting a bribe from undercover FBI Abscam agents, also violated the House's code of ethics, a committee of his congressional peers says.

But there appears to be only the slimmest of chances that the South Carolina Democrat will be subjected to disciplinary action in the final two days of the lame-duck Congress.

And Jenrette, defeated for re-election, won't be around for any discipline after adjournment.

The House ethics committee ruled 10-0 Wednesday that Jenrette's conviction on the bribery charges was sufficient to conclude that he also violated House rules.

The panel said it would open hearings on recommended punishment next week — in the unlikely occurrence that the House was still in session.

The committee did offer to hold an earlier hearing on punishment possibilities if Jenrette requested one. But there was no indication that Jenrette would ask for such a proceeding. And even if he did, the committee probably wouldn't have time to bring a disciplinary recommendation to the floor before Friday's scheduled adjournment.

With the committee thus unable to act before adjournment, only one way remains for Jenrette to be disciplined by his colleagues. House rules allow members to introduce at any time a motion of expulsion and require that the House immediately take up the motion.

Jenrette's duties as a lawmaker will automatically end with adjournment even though he will remain a member — and on the federal payroll — until Jan. 3, when the new Congress convenes.

Permit Is Needed For Work

Before doing any new construction — new homes, storage buildings, new business places, repairs, alterations, roofing, insulation, signs, additions over $100 in value — Greenville citizens are required to obtain building permits from the inspection department of the City of Greenville. Alton Warren, chief building official, reminds.

The inspection department is located in the municipal building, corner of W. Fifth and Washington streets. The cost of a permit is based on value of labor and materials, Warren said.

Prior to installation of any plumbing or heating units, either the owner of the structure or the contractor is responsible for obtaining the proper permits.

Anyone having questions may call the Inspection Department, 752-4137, Ext. 221.

Brazil Now An Exporter Of Weapons

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer
BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) —
The military-backed government is stepping up efforts to make Brazil a leader in exports of high quality, low-cost weaponry. Its products range from rifles to guided missiles.

While official secrecy covers most transactions involving Brazil's weapons industry, Brazilian sources say arms exports in the first four months of 1980 reached $1 billion, surpassing the total for all of 1979. The exports could total $3 billion this year.

Top equipment for sale includes the so-called Cascavel light armored tank, now being used by Iraq in its war with Iran; hand weapons, including a machine gun rated by U.S. military specialists as among the best available, and a series of increasingly sophisticated aircraft easily adapted to military use.

Diplomatic and military sources say development plans call for eventual production of a conventionally powered attack submarine and a sophisticated guided missile. According to unconfirmed reports, the missile will be capable of delivering a nuclear warhead.

"The weapons industry is diversified and includes some excellent material, although Brazil still depends on design copying and sub-contracts many parts from other countries," said a ranking Western military source, who asked not to be further identified.

The Iran-Iraq war is giving the Brazilian arms industry a rugged test. Military and diplomatic sources say the Cascavel — which its manufacturer, Engesa, calls the best-selling light armored vehicle in the world — has performed well in action for the Iraqis. It is equipped with a 90mm cannon and two 50mm machine guns. Brazil is believed to have already delivered about 200 Cascavels to Iraq at an estimated cost of slightly more than $300,000 each. There are unconfirmed reports Iraq now is ordering more.

Brazil's arms export program is coordinated by an army-controlled agency called the Brazilian War Material Industry, which has the Portuguese-language acronym IMBEL. As one sign of prosperous times, the agency recently moved from cramped office space in a government building to its own headquarters here in a ceremony led by President Joao Figueiredo, the fifth former army general to rule the country since a 1964 military coup.

IMBEL also has been in charge of a domestic equipment program that has turned the nation's armed forces from reliance on World War II vintage vehicles, ships and artillery to a modern fighting force.

The growth of the industry has included use of license agreements and joint ventures to win Brazilian production rights and eventual domestic control as technical skills are obtained.

There have been recent contacts with Italian officials which may lead to production in Brazil of a tactical fighter plane known as the AMX. Britain has been collaborating with the Brazilians on production of so-called Free Gates class support ships.

European diplomats say there is little doubt that the acquired technology already is making Brazil a keen competitor in international weapons sales, especially in the Third World, where it is an acknowledged leader.

"We must say there has been a tendency to inflate the importance and sophistication of some of the Brazilian weaponry," said one West European diplomat. "But in fact we are headed for strong competition from Brazil and conflicting production of similar types of equipment."

One major objective of the government's accelerated military sales overseas is to improve Brazil's balance of payments standing, predicted to end the year with a deficit of about $3 billion. Officials say another is to create jobs.

Air Concern U.S. Immigration Now Out Of Control

By AMY SABRIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The kindest critics of U.S. immigration policy say it is unfair, the toughest that it is literally murderous. But with an estimated 1.2 million legal and illegal newcomers expected to cross American borders this year, the most commonly heard concern is that immigration is "out of control."

"When Fidel Castro can do what he did to the United States, immigration is definitely out of control," said Lawrence Fuchs, executive director of Congress' Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy.

Federal immigration laws are unwieldy and unfair, Fuchs said, and are in themselves a major reason why the United States has been unable to slow the flow of newcomers.

Some 776,000 immigrants and refugees will enter the United States legally this year, their ranks unexpectedly swollen by boatloads of Cubans and Haitians granted special refugee status.

In addition, thousands of illegal aliens are crossing

U.S. borders. Estimates place their numbers anywhere between 300,000 and 500,000, bringing the annual immigration total to its highest level since the first decade of this century.

With the current record low U.S. birth rate, immigration will account for almost half the nation's population growth this year, said Michael Teitelbaum, a population expert at the Ford Foundation.

To deal with this flood, "We have a system which looks good on paper but, in reality, doesn't work very well," Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner David Crosland said.

On paper, the laws provide a ceiling of 20,000 immigrants a year from each country. In reality, that means spouses of American citizens in a country like Mexico, where there is a long list of people hoping to immigrate, have to wait as long as nine years to be legally reunited with their relatives, while a pastry chef from Norway with no relatives here can be admitted in a matter of months.

The select commission — made up of four cabinet secretaries, four members of the House and Senate and four presidential appointees — was established in 1978 to propose new immigration laws. With final recommendations to Congress and the president due on March 1, the commission staff is meeting beginning Wednesday, joined by the commissioners on the weekend, to review two years of findings.

In previous sessions the commission heard from a number of critics, including activist immigration attorney Rick Swartz who says that U.S. government policy led to the death of scores of Haitian refugees who were sent back to Haiti because they were not qualified to enter under U.S. refugee laws.

"During the Carter administration, several thousand Haitians have been returned to Haiti, totally outside the law, without access to attorneys. Scores and scores of those persons, if not hundreds, are dead today," he said, backing his claim with court testimony about starvation and imprisonment in Haiti.

On the other side of the debate is the Federation of Americans for Immigration Reform, whose executive director, Roger Connor, argues for severe reductions in the number of immigrants.

"In every other industrialized nation on Earth, it is illegal to hire a foreigner who does not have the legal right to work in that country," said Connor.

U.S. law does prohibit undocumented aliens from taking jobs in this country but does not penalize employers who hire them.

The commission seems likely to recommend employer sanctions. The difficulty with such sanctions is that they place the burden of identifying undocumented workers on the employer. And Hispanic groups object to sanctions, claiming that employers worried about complying with the law will discriminate against all persons of Hispanic descent, including U.S. citizens.

The commission is also considering several identification systems, including identification cards for every legal worker, citizen and non-citizen alike, perhaps in the form of a Social Security card that would be difficult to forge.

Civil libertarians object to this, however, saying it would make it easier for the government to invade a worker's privacy. Fuchs said the commission's recommendations will probably also include the following:

—New rules on which and how many newcomers are granted entry.

—A revamped foreign aid program aimed at eliminating the factors which cause people to immigrate in the first place, mainly poverty and repression.

—Tighter controls on illegal immigration. These efforts are likely to be linked to an amnesty program for undocumented aliens already here. A Government Accounting Office report estimates their numbers to be around 5 million.

Experts differ on the economic impact of illegal aliens, but Fuchs said there is little disagreement among commissioners that amnesty is a wise, necessary and humane step.

"We have people in the United States without documents, most of whom are productive working members of society," he said. "They are an underclass. They are here already. They live in fear of apprehension. In some cases, they are so anxious they don't seek proper medical attention. They are afraid to send their children to school. ... Is this in the self-interest of the United States?"

No Joints For Boy Victim Of Cancer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year-old cancer victim whose mother gave him marijuana says the hospital took it away and he wants it back.

And his mother seconds him.

The boy, John Beames of nearby Georgetown, is in the University of California Medical Center following surgery for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. He has recently been getting chemotherapy every eight hours, and it makes him nauseous.

His mother, Alice Mork, said in an interview published today that she had read about marijuana reducing the nausea which often accompanies chemotherapy.

A new California law permits cancer patients who aren't helped by anti-nausea drugs to participate in a 4-year trial of marijuana. But John doesn't fit the hospital's guidelines on frequency of treatment.

Mrs. Mork said she taught him last month how to puff a joint.

But Sunday, the hospital police confiscated his two half-joints.

John's physician, Dr. Charles Abildgaard, says he is given anti-nausea drugs which sometimes make him drowsy. But Mrs. Mork says they don't work.

Said Mrs. Mork, "I...taught him how to smoke marijuana. It worked quickly. He could eat a meal after that. It doesn't work for everyone, but it does for John. For him, it's medicine. It's what he needs when other medications don't work. He understands that, and knows how opposed I am to drug use by teen-agers. We're not talking about flaunting it, but being very discreet."

Sunday, John's father, Edward Beames of suburban North Highlands, who is divorced from his mother, visited him and saw the two half-joints. He told the hospital staff.

Dohrn Plans Continue Rebellion

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Bernardine Dohrn, the former leader of the militant Weather Underground who turned herself in after 11 years on the run, says she looks forward to spending time with family and friends and intends to continue a rebellion against "the system."

"I remain committed to the struggle ahead," Ms. Dohrn told reporters Wednesday after a court appearance. "Given the system which perpetuates...harsh oppression and suffering, rebellion is inevitable and continuous."

Ms. Dohrn, 38, pleaded innocent to nine charges — seven stemming from the 1969 "Days of Rage" anti-war demonstration in Chicago and two more for jumping bail. She was released on $25,000 bond and a hearing was set for Jan. 13.

Ms. Dohrn, who once appeared on the FBI's most-wanted list, arrived in court with a lawyer and William Ayers, another ex-radical who said he lived with Ms. Dohrn in New York and is the father of her two children.

No charges are pending against Ayers, 35, son of former Commonwealth Edison chairman Thomas Ayers.

Ms. Dohrn and Ayers read brief statements to reporters, refusing to answer any questions about their past.

"We will not talk about our lives," said Ayers, adding that it would endanger the "millions on the run."

"In that world, survival depends on silence," he said.

Ms. Dohrn's surrender — the latest in a series by radical figures of the late 1960s — was preceded by rumors she was negotiating with prosecutors. But Larry O'Gara, an assistant state's attorney, said there had been no attempt to plea bargain with his office.

Circuit Judge Fred G. Suria, who reduced her bail from $300,000, said "from past experience, I have found that the people who turn themselves in, in fact abide by the conditions of the bond."

Ms. Dohrn faces no outstanding federal charges. However, local felony charges of aggravated battery, mob action and solicitation of mob action are pending, in addition to the bail-jumping charges.

O'Gara said the most serious of the charges was that she struck a police officer with a club during a demonstration. "I believe in the necessity of underground work, so I am returning to open life with a sense of loss as well as hope," Ms. Dohrn said. "I look forward to spending time with family and friends, new and old," she said.

Ms. Dohrn's parents, Bernard and Dorothy Dohrn, said they were glad to know their daughter was safe. The Dohrns said that prior to Wednesday they had neither seen nor heard from their daughter since she went underground in 1969.

Other radical figures from the anti-war movement who have surfaced recently include student leader Mark Rudd, also indicted in the "Days of Rage" protests, and Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman, who jumped bail on a drug charge.

At least two of those indicted in connection with the "Days of Rage" remain in hiding. An FBI spokesman in Chicago said Jeffrey Jones, 33, is wanted on a 1979 federal warrant from New Jersey charging possession of bomb paraphernalia. Kathy Boudin, also sought in connection with a 1970 bomb explosion in New York, was thought by investigators two years ago to be living in the Soviet Union.

Declare Speedy Trial Exemption

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal courts in North Carolina's 44-county Eastern District have been declared exempt from the speedy trial act for the second time in 13 months because of a backlog of cases blamed partially on a shortage of judges and heavy load of drug-related trials.

Chief Judge Clement F. Haynsworth of the U.S. 4th Circuit of Appeals, who declared a "judicial emergency" in the district, said he was reassigning eight federal judges from Virginia and one from North Carolina's Middle District for temporarily service during the first quarter of 1981 in the Eastern District.

The district is supposed to have three judges, but has operated for several months with only two.

The district's criminal case workload has increased 101 percent from fiscal year 1979 to fiscal 1980. That is the second largest increase in any court in the nation, according to the 1980 annual report of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

The number of civil cases increased by nearly 16 percent during the same time span. Together, there are 1,445 cases now pending in the district.

"It's been a two-judge court when it should have been a three-judge court for almost two years now," Court Clerk J. Rich Leonard said Wednesday.

Leonard said the Virginia judges and Judge Hiram H. Ward of the North Carolina Middle District would alternate in holding court for a week at a time in Fayetteville and Raleigh during the first three months of next year.

Leonard attributed part of the caseload increase to the handling of drug smuggling cases involving large numbers of defendants and to the expansion of the district's jurisdiction to include the Fort Bragg area.

Judge Gerald Arnold of the state Court of Appeals has been nominated for a judgeship in the district, but

Finally Testing Dream Of Energy From The Oceans

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Fifty-four years after the eminent French scientist Georges Claude proclaimed the possibility of generating vast amounts of energy from sea water, the United States is moving to achieve Claude's goal.

A one-megawatt plant mounted on a converted oil tanker will be operating off the coast of Hawaii early next year under a $79-million Department of Energy contract, according to Curtis Cooke, an executive of Global Marine Development Corp., Newport Beach, Calif. Cooke said all the components from ship to shore, to lift the wide, 2,000-foot-long pipe off the beach and to suspend it vertically on gimbals under the ship. This pipe must bring the cold water up from the depths for half the sea thermal cycle which, in this case, involves a process of reverse refrigeration to produce electric power.

In another project, a consortium of seven companies organized by Devco International, Inc., of Tulsa is submitting a proposal to the DOE for a self-contained plant to operate 200 miles off the coast of Brazil just south of the mouth of the Amazon. This plant is to use sea thermal energy to make ammonia by extracting hydrogen from the sea water and reacting the hydrogen with nitrogen from the air. "The world needs an alternative source of ammonia because we now are dependent on natural gas for about 97 percent of our ammonia," says John F. Babbitt, president of Devco. "Theoretically we could get unlimited amounts of ammonia from the sea and the air by using the electricity made by sea thermal energy to crack sea water and get hydrogen."

Ammonia is the life-blood of the fertilizer industry. The world's food supply increasingly depends on steadily expanding the supply even though temporary overcapacity in conventional ammonia output occurs at times because of economic fluctuations.

It was little noticed last summer when, in the midst of other turbulent energy debates, Congress set up a program of $2 billion in federal loan guaranties to finance sea thermal energy research and development. The goal: at least 10,000 megawatts of sea thermal capacity by the end of the century. One reason it didn't attract too much attention was that the bureaucrats spoke of ocean thermal energy conversion instead of sea thermal energy, a term which had been popularized by oceanographers.

However, DOE moved promptly. In September, it asked for design proposals for up to three pilot plants of 40 megawatts each to be built starting in 1984. The plants will cost around $250 million each.

Although DOE indicated it expects firms making the proposals to bear 15 to 40 percent of the cost, a lot of companies have shown a lively interest in bidding.

Initial costs of a sea thermal energy plant might run to $2,000 a kilowatt against $1,000 for a nuclear plant and $900 a kilowatt for a coal-fired plant. But, once built successfully, the sea thermal plant would operate without any fuel cost whatsoever.

The logistics problems still are tremendous.

A sea thermal plant must operate in a most rigorous environment. The wide pipe to bring the cold water up from the deep will be extremely vulnerable to storms and to corrosion and slime and barnacle clogging.

The small 60-kilowatt sea thermal electric plant which Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. recently built and tested successfully for the state of Hawaii lost its deep water pipe in a storm. The plant wasn't big enough to justify replacing it.

Both Global Marine and the Devco group believe they can solve the problem of the deep pipe vulnerability. Cooke said "our gimbaled pipe can be jettisoned if the plant is struck by a big enough gale, then recovered from the ocean floor after the storm has subsided."

Babbitt of Devco said that since the sea thermal ammonia plant will be operating far offshore, it will have more room to maneuver and its suspended deep water pipe will be much less subject to violent ocean turbulence. The ammonia plant would have propulsion engines for keeping its position.

When Claude first postulated sea thermal energy in his 1926 speech to the French Academy of Sciences, he said the difference between the temperature of the ocean's surface in favorable locations and that of the water 2,000 feet down would create low pressure steam that would generate electricity by turning a turbine.

A temperature difference of about 37 degrees F. is needed. The cold water can be brought to the surface by gravity for mixing with the warm water to make the steam. Claude proved the scientific feasibility of his idea with a crude 25-kilowatt installation at Matanzas Bay in Cuba in 1931. He was teaching at the University of Wisconsin graduate school at the time.

Although many oceanographers urged further work on sea thermal energy, nothing much was done about it until the present projects were started. It was believed there were not enough places in the world where the deep water was close to the shore, the surface water was sufficiently warm and there was enough protection from severe storms that might wreck the plants.

In the modern sea thermal projects, Claude's idea of getting low pressure steam from the ocean water temperature differences has been succeeded by a reverse refrigeration cycle. The warm water is used to expand ammonia, from some other suitable chemical, to make a gas to operate the turbine and generate the electricity. The cold water brought up from the depths then is used to condense the expanded gas and repeat the cycles.

What are the economic possibilities?

Devco's Babbitt says he believes ammonia can be produced by sea thermal energy at prices competitive with projected 1990 prices for ammonia made from natural gas. This is the predicted $230-million plant with a capacity of 1,250 tons a day.

Despite the high capital costs, the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory is projecting an overall cost of making electricity in 1990 by sea thermal energy and bringing it ashore of only half the cost of generating electricity by the combined nuclear and fossil fuel and plant system.

The ammonia plant idea intrigues the Johns Hopkins Laboratory people. They say that could eliminate costly power transmission. The ammonia could be brought ashore reasonably by ship and part of it could be broken down again into hydrogen and nitrogen, the hydrogen to be used to power cells or for a variety of fuel purposes.

Bermudans
To Polls On

December 9

By PAMELA CATTY
Associated Press Writer
HAMILTON, Bermuda
(AP) — This tiny British colony in the Atlantic is preparing for what is being described as the most exciting and important general election in its history.

The balloting next Tuesday (Dec. 9) is a "winner take-all" election. The party that wins will be able, by prior agreement, to choose a new electoral system for the island and to fix a voting age for future elections.

Despite the significance of this, however, it has been an election campaign almost without issues. Each of the two main political parties is desperately seeking to appear moderate, to grab the center position — to win the "floating" 10 percent of the electorate.

The predominantly black opposition Progressive Labor Party has temporarily abandoned plans for the introduction of an income tax and an immediate move toward independence.

The mainly white and long-governing United Bermuda Party has become far more liberal in a bid to shrug off its "Establishment" image.

Bermuda's system of government is modeled on the British parliamentary style. The island about 600 miles east southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., has a Parliament made up of a lower House of Assembly, similar to Britain's House of Commons, and an upper Legislative Council, similar to Britain's House of Lords.

A new House of Assembly is at stake in this election. Its maximum term is five years.

Bermuda, with a population of 55,000, is divided into 20 electoral constituencies and each constituency is represented in the House by two members. The make-up of the House before Parliament was dissolved in October was 25 seats held by the United Bermuda Party (UBP), 14 by the Progressive Labor Party (PLP), and 1 seat held by an independent.

Bermudians over the age of 21 and a limited number of foreign residents are allowed to vote.

It is expected that while the UBP will be returned to office, the PLP will take a healthy slice off its majority.

The opposition benefits this time from a decision to forbid short-stay "expatriates," or foreigners, to vote. The residency vote for British citizens living in Bermuda was a key issue at the 1979 constitutional conference here. The opposition wanted the removal of the residency vote altogether — then given to Commonwealth citizens who had been in Bermuda for at least three years.

The UBP wanted things to stay as they were, since most white expatriates support the party. In the end, talks on the residency vote broke down and the British government imposed a compromise — that only people who were registered to vote before the last election in 1976 would be allowed to vote in the future.

The PLP — lead by Lois Browne Evans, a lawyer — has also learned a great deal from 12 years in the opposition. In this election the party will run, for the first time, a full slate of candidates to contest every seat, backed up by an efficient party campaign machinery.

Labor's theme is that Bermuda is ready for change — change, they say, to a more sympathetic government that will make sure that the island's economic wealth is shared by all. The PLP has promised it will not re-introduce its income tax plan for at least one term and has pledged it will not interfere with the island's rich international business interests.

The party's election manifesto is almost identical to that of the UBP, which is asking the electorate to re-elect it on the basis of its record of the past 12 years. The UBP is led by the David Gibbons, who as premier and finance minister has seen Bermuda through five years of economic stability while the rest of the world reeled under inflation.

Under his government, Bermuda has been without unemployment, has had a comparatively low rate of inflation, and a budget so well balanced that the national debt has been consistently reduced.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today amid reports of slow retail sales in November and government predictions of continued high inflation. Oil issues lost ground after Saudi Arabia's oil minister predicted the development of a world petroleum surplus.

The federal Council on Wage and Price Stability said "double-digit inflation is almost inevitable in the near future" due to rising food prices. Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, meanwhile, said the tight-money "squeeze" will last until inflation recedes.

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, was quoted in a published interview as saying world oil prices are not likely to rise much soon and that a world oil glut may develop by 1982.

Skeleton May Be Identified

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A skeleton found in a soybean field near Greenville Villa Nursing Home has been tentatively identified as that of Greenville Villa resident Mary Frances Tyson, 68, originally of the Farmville area, Pitt County Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris said this morning.

Greenville police and Greenville Villa Administrator Carolyn Harrell both said they had not, at the time of The Daily Reflector's contacting them about 10:30 a. m. today, been told by the medical examiner of the tentative identification.

Mrs. Harrell said Mrs. Tyson had had lunch in the Greenville Villa dining room early the afternoon of Aug. 11 and was seen walking to her room. When it was discovered about 15 minutes later that she had not reached her room, a search was begun.

"This was that extremely hot time in August," Mrs. Harrell said. "We found that the back door was disarmed and have to assume that this is how Mrs. Tyson got out without being noticed."

Mrs. Tyson had been a resident of Greenville Villa only three days at the time she disappeared, Mrs. Harrell added.

Mrs. Harrell said she was never satisfied with the search the Greenville Police conducted and remembers that, when she went to the police station to file a missing person report early the evening of Aug. 11, she had to insist on filing it, that she was encouraged to wait and see if the woman would turn up.

"It was already getting dark and we'd tried on our own, so I insisted," she said. "Our staff members searched on their own for three days," she said, "many of them on their own time. We're awfully upset out here since we heard the skeleton was found. We still can hardly believe that Mrs. Tyson's body was in that field all the time."

The field is located some distance south of the nursing home near the Stantonsburg Road.

Greenville police say their search for Mrs. Tyson lasted until Aug. 14 and included some combing of the fields in the area and inquiries at homes and offices in the area.

To her knowledge, no bloodhounds were used, Mrs. Harrell said.

The remains were spotted late yesterday morning by a person harvesting soybeans, Dr. Harris indicated. He said determination of cause of death is not possible because of the state of decomposition of the body. "We have to assume it was natural," he said. "I think it's also safe to assume that the extreme heat may have been a causative factor."

Maine Romps Over Bucs

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
ORONO, ME. — Maine is a team with potential. And Wednesday evening the Black Bears forced much of that potential to an outmanned, outgunned and outpassed East Carolina team.

The Black Bears, behind an offensive performance that saw them shoot 63 percent from the field and record 33 assists, dismantled the Pirates, 112-81, before 1,700 in Memorial Gym.

"We were soundly beaten by a well-oiled, well-coached team," ECU coach Dave Odom said. "Maine has potential. Unfortunately, they fulfilled a lot of that potential against us.

"They were a team that played with a purpose tonight. They knew exactly what they wanted to do."

And did it. Not only did the Bears outshoot ECU 63 percent to 53 percent, they also outrebounded the taller Pirates, 44 to 33.

And, unlike last week, when they turned the ball over 16 times in a tough 66-57 loss to 14th-ranked Texas A&M, the Bears committed only 10 turnovers Wednesday night. ECU had 14.

"It was an excellent game, I guess," said Maine coach Skip Chappelle, whose team outrebounded the Pirates despite not having a starter over 6-6. "We handled the backboards well. I guess we're making up for our lack of height with our team play and hustle."

"Just as important, though, we cut down on our turnovers. We had 16 against Texas A&M. We corrected that tonight."

The victory also evened Maine's record at 1-1 and dropped the Pirates to 1-1 as well.

Junior Michael Gibson hit six-of-eight from the field and two-of-two from the line for 14 points to lead the Pirates in scoring. Guard Mike Bledsoe added 10 (5-of-12). Senior center Tom Szymanski again topped the Pirates in rebounding with eight.

The Bears were led by Champ Godbolt's 23 points (eight of 11 from the field) and Clay Gunn's 22 (11-of-14). Gunn also pulled down a game-leading 11 rebounds.

The most startling statistics, however, was the 33 assists the Bears handed out. Four players had five or more assists for Maine, led by Rick Carlisle's eight. It was that passing attack that helped Maine to such a sizzling shooting performance.

After trailing by three in the early going, the Bears grabbed the lead for good at 18-17 with just under 12 minutes left in the first half. From there, Maine quickly burst ahead to lead by as many as 18 before intermission.

The Pirates stayed within 10 until a four-point play started a surge that saw the Bears outscore ECU 17 to 8 in the final six minutes of the half.

With Maine up 31-23, Paul Cook canned a short jumper and was fouled. Cook missed the free throw but the rebound was tipped in by Gunn, giving the Bears a 35-23 lead.

Moments later, with David Underwood at the free throw line for a one-and-one that could have cut the lead to seven, ECU was called for

ODU Outshoots Lady Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A hotter hand with the ball, and the domination of the area under the baskets were the key factors as number two ranked Old Dominion gained an 89-77 victory over East Carolina's Lady Pirates last night. It was the first loss for the Lady Pirates, now 3-1, while Old Dominion climbed to 4-0.

Anne Donovan, the Lady Monarchs' 6-8 center dominated the inside game, hitting 25 points and pulling off 21 rebounds, as the much smaller Pirates had little success in stopping her or keeping her off the boards.

Then, too, Old Dominion canned 50.6 per cent of its shots, many of them "chippies," while the Lady Pirates could collect on only 40.8 per cent of their shots.

"We knew we had to keep Donovan off the boards and we just didn't do that early in the game," East Carolina Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We did stop their fast break."

However, once the Monarchs got past the Pirate defense, they were able to connect. Many times, especially in the second half when the Monarchs really needed the baskets, they foiled the East Carolina double team by springing Jean Walling loose under the basket on the weak side for easy layups.

The transfer from South Carolina dumped in a game-high 29 points in the contest, and also had ten rebounds.

"They are an excellent club," Andruzzi said. "There is no doubt about that. They could have blown us out, but we didn't let them do it."

In the second half, the Pirates, down by as many as 18, came storming back, using the double-teaming defense to great advantage, and rushing down the court for baskets.

For a long while, however, the second half offense was limited to either Sam Jones' jumpers or drive and jumpers by Kathy Riley. Between the two of them, they scored the first 26 points of the second half for the Pirates.

"We broke their press and they quit using it," Andruzzi noted, "and we were able to keep the pressure on them most of the time to keep them out of their offense."

Andruzzi also noted that the Pirate depth was a problem. "We don't have the bench to keep up with them," she said. Andruzzi would not comment, however, on the absence of guard Lydia Rountree in the second half. The senior guard started the game, played only briefly, did not play in the second half, and was absent from the bench.

Old Dominion coach Marianne Stanley feels that this club isn't as good as last year's national championship team — yet. She does feel that it has the potential to return to the final four this season.

And she wasn't surprised by the caliber of game last night's turned out to be. "We expected it to be a tough game. East Carolina is the best transition team that we'll play all year. We played tentative at times, but we didn't fold or lose our composure when they got it close again."

"We still are working some new faces into this team, and this was the first game that we didn't play everyone on the bench." Old Dominion used just three subs, with only one, Jan Trombly playing more than five minutes.

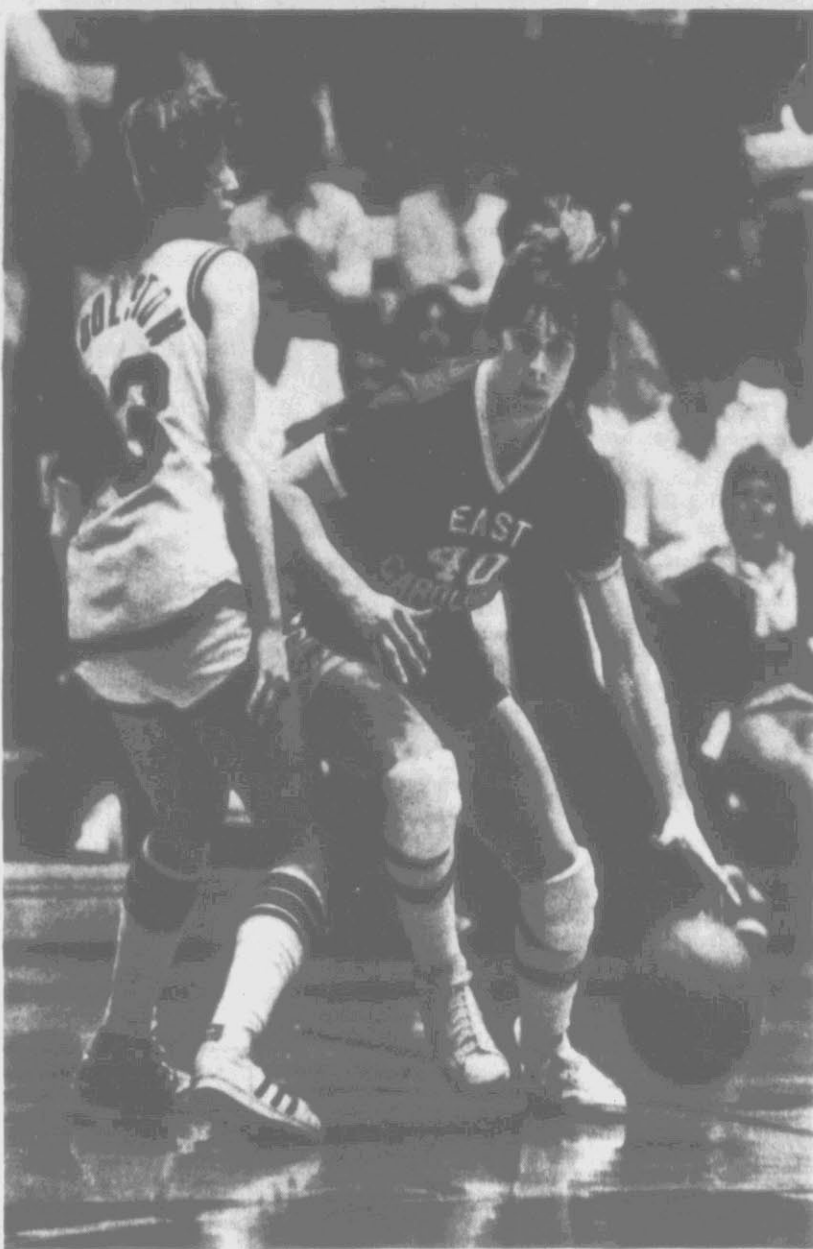

"I think we played hard," Stanley continued. "And this was a hard, physical game. The officials let both teams play. We had a lot of offensive opportunities get away from us, however. But I think we played an excellent defensive game."

East Carolina held the lead only once, at 2-0, on a fast break basket by Riley. But Old Dominion took the lead at 6-4 and began to pull away after that, getting 15 first half points from Donovan, ten from Walling and 12 from Trombly.

The Lady Monarchs ran their lead to ten at 24-14 with 12:38 left, and after being ahead by 12, saw the Lady Pirates cut it back to six on free throws by Marcia Girven and Jones and a basket by Jones. But once again, Old Dominion streaked away, hitting seven straight to

Coming Around

East Carolina's Kathy Riley moves around the guard of Old Dominion's Suzanne Woolston during play between the two teams in Minges Coliseum last night. Riley pushed through 21 points, while Sam Jones added 26, but it wasn't enough against the number two ranked Lady Monarchs, who won, 89-77. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

ATLANTA (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers of South Carolina and record-setting quarterback Joe "747" Adams of Tennessee State head The Associated Press 1980 All-South Independent football team announced today.

Howard Schnellenberger, who steered Miami of Florida to an 8-3 record and its first bowl bid since 1967, was named the Southern Independent Coach of the Year. The Hurricanes will meet Virginia Tech in the Peach Bowl game.

Rogers, who was named to The AP All-America team for the second straight year Wednesday, led the nation in rushing with 1,781 yards and capped his brilliant collegiate career Monday when he was named recipient of the Heisman Trophy.

Adams hurled 30 touchdown passes in his senior season, lifting his career total to an NCAA record 81.

Joining that duo in the All-South backfield were the nation's leading scorer with 120 points, Sammy Winder of Southern Mississippi, and Virginia Tech's Cyrus Lawrence, ranked eighth nationally in rushing with 1,221 yards.

FSU, ranked No. 3 nationally, provided both of the kickers — placement specialist Bill Capece, second nationally in scoring with 99 points, and punter Rohn Stark, who was third in the nation with a 45.7 average.

The defensive line was led by middle guard Jim Burt of Miami, a third team All-American who moved onto the No. 1 unit when FSU All-American Ron Simmons missed considerable action this year because of injury.

Sutton Inks Pact With Astros

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Pitcher Don Sutton says he won't have any trouble fitting in with his new teammates on the Houston Astros — all he'll have to do is pull on his jeans.

"You can wear blue jeans and drive a pickup truck here and still be considered normal," Sutton said Wednesday shortly after signing a four-year contract with the Astros.

Sutton, the winningest pitcher in Los Angeles Dodgers history during his 15-year career there, also said he and his new teammate Nolan Ryan had a common pitch.

"His changeup is the same as my fastball," Sutton said.

The announcement that Sutton had shunned an offer from the New York Yankees and signed with the Astros, was not a laughing matter, however, to Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, who thought he had Sutton in the bag.

"Steinbrenner was very courteous throughout our negotiations with the Yankees," said Larue Harcourt, Sutton's agent. "But when I called to inform him we had accepted the Astros' offer, he was not courteous and he hung-up the phone on me."

Steinbrenner, who has seldom lost a free agent he really wanted, later downplayed Sutton's decision.

"We would have liked to have Sutton, but he's not indispensable," he said. "There's one free agent we'd like to have and that's (outfielder Dave) Winfield."

Winfield has been drafted by the Astros by has not yet signed a contract.

Rumors had circulated all week that Sutton, 35, who led the National League with a 2.21 earned run average last season, would sign with the Yankees for a reported $900,000 annually.

But after hearing the offer made to him by Astros majority stockholder John McMullen and General Manager Al Rosen, Sutton decided to play for the Astros. Term of the contract were not announced, but Harcourt said the first three years were guaranteed.

"I have to think Sutton is making a big mistake," said the Yankees new manager, Gene Michael.

Georgia Gives Sigh Of Relief

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — The sighs of relief spread from the University of Georgia campus to the governor's mansion Wednesday when Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley announced that he had rejected Auburn's offer to become head football coach and athletic director.

"I was delighted by Coach Dooley's decision to remain at the University of Georgia," Gov. George Busbee said. "The experience he amassed during his 17 years would make him extremely hard to replace."

Dooley, after toying for several days with a reported $1.8 million, eight-year contract offer from his alma mater Auburn, announced at a news conference Wednesday that he would remain at Georgia.

"I am a Bulldog and proud to be one," Dooley said. "I have reached a decision that was most difficult in coming, and that decision is to remain at the University of Georgia."

There were emotional ties to my alma mater involved, and I hope everyone can understand that."

While Georgia fans were greeting Dooley's decision with relief, Auburn officials announced that they immediately would begin a search to find a successor to Doug Barfield, who resigned under pressure this week as the Tigers' head football coach.

Georgia freshman sensation Herschel Walker, meanwhile, said he knew all along that Dooley wouldn't abandon the top-ranked Bulldogs.

"I knew he wouldn't leave," Walker said. "I'm proud that he stayed and I'm very happy. He's a super coach."

Erk Russell, Georgia's defensive coordinator and the man most speculation had centered on as Dooley's successor had he left, said he too was pleased with his boss's decision.

"This is what's good for Georgia," Russell said. "It's the best thing that can happen."

Academic counselor Curt Fidd said he would have "dropped dead if he left. I didn't feel he was going to leave. We have such a close-knit family here. I just had a gut feeling."

Rick Scappe

ORONO, ME. — It was bound to happen. East Carolina's basketball team is too young for it not to.

The Pirates suffered their first genuine blowout of the 1980-81 season, a 112-81 shellacking at the hands of the Maine Black Bears.

"A team like this is going to have nights like this," ECU coach Dave Odom said. "The coaching staff must work doubly hard to eliminate many nights like this."

"We've got to learn from each game, even ones like this," he added. "But I don't want the team getting down. When we get back to North Carolina we've got to get this out of our minds."

For his part, Maine head coach Skip Chappelle would just as soon relish a little longer in his team's first victory of the season.

"Putting a hundred points on the board is good, but doing it effortlessly like that is even better," said Chappelle, whose Bears opened the season with a 65-57 loss to 14th-ranked Texas A&M. "We're really in the flow out there tonight. We've just got to stay in it."

The Pirates, meanwhile, were the victim of that flow.

While a wind-whipped snow fell outside Memorial Gym, known otherwise as "The Pit," inside the Bears were controlling the ball with deft passes that more often than not led to easy shots. Time and again the Bears found themselves open underneath the bucket with room to move in for a short jumper or a power layup.

"If we're to be a good defensive team we're going to have to work on the middle," Odom said. "We're going to have to control the middle so we can eliminate the layups like Maine got tonight. We've got to contest those shots."

"We're not a good defensive team yet," Odom added. "You've got to be a good defensive team and a good rebounding team to control the game. When you aren't that causes break downs in your offense."

Maine took full advantage of the ECU breakdowns - both offensive and defensive - to run up the most points scored against an ECU club since Old Dominion beat the Pirates by, ironically, the same score, 112-81.

Against ECU, Maine shot 63 percent from the floor, hitting on 47 of 75 shots. Odom counted seven unmolested layups in the first half and at least that many in the second half.

Many of those layups came at the end of Bear fast breaks, unusual for a team that had run a deliberate, patient offense against Texas A&M.

"When we scouted them we found out they love to crash the offensive boards," said Chappelle, explaining his team's change of strategy for the Pirates. "Any team that does that we're going to try to run on."

When they weren't running the fast break, the Black Bears were using screens along the baseline to break open players across the middle.

"They got away with a lot of back picks," Odom said. "We did not defend them well. We had seen them last year when we played them, but we handled them well. Of course we had a more experienced club last year."

During the preseason, University of Maine head basketball coach Skip Chappelle was asked by a area newspaper to give an evaluation of his club's schedule.

Under the ground rules set up, Chappelle rated the teams Maine played from one to five, five being a team it would take a minor miracle to beat and one being a sure win.

Further, those teams Chappelle felt his club would beat or lose to would not be revealed. Not included in the survey were Maine opponents Texas A&M, Kentucky and DePaul.

Of the 22 clubs the Bears face this season, Chappelle figured 10 would make life more than a little difficult for the Bears. Two other games were rated as tossups. The remaining 10 games Chappelle thought his team should win.

East Carolina was among that group. And, unfortunately for the Pirates, Chappelle proved to be a prophet.

NOTES FROM MAINE...

•Last year the Pirates beat Maine, 67-65, in overtime. After that game Chappelle was upset over the officiating. Wednesday, he said: "No, we didn't have revenge in mind tonight," he said. "I just told the kids that we didn't need the refs. That was one of the worse experiences I've ever had."

•This is Chappelle's 10th season with Maine. He has a record of 126-99. The Black Bears were 15-13 last year.

•The Pirates open their 1980-81 home season Saturday night against Texas Wesleyan. The Rams are 6-1 going into last night's game with Old Dominion. Wesleyan is averaging nearly 90 points and 10 steals a game.

ECU then plays host to Berry College (1-4) Monday before taking to the road for a Saturday game with Penn State.

FOOTBALL NOTES...

Had Vince Dooley left Georgia for Auburn former ECU coach Pat Dye was reportedly the top choice to replace him.

Two writers, one from Chattanooga, Tenn., and another from Athens, Ga., contacted ECU sports information director Ken Smith for background information on Dye.

Both writers indicated that Dye, who played football at Georgia, would be the top candidate for Dooley's job - had Dooley left.

Still, the Auburn job is open...

Virginia Rolls To 83-62 Victory

By The Associated Press

Seventh-ranked Virginia took on little Randolph-Macon College Wednesday night, whipping them 83-62, and the losing coach said it was still a good basketball game.

Coach Hal Nunnally said his team had a simple reason for taking on the likes of the Cavaliers each year. The reason:

"$3,500. We get a nice guarantee and can buy a new set of warmups which we can keep."

The game, one of two non-conference contests played by Atlantic Coast Conference teams Wednesday night, was never in doubt as Virginia's big center, Ralph Sampson, hit on 12 of 17 from the floor en route to a 26-point performance.

It was the third highest scoring effort by Sampson, a 7-foot-4 sophomore. As a team, the Cavaliers hit on 58.2 percent of their shots from the floor.

The victory also was the 200th win for Virginia coach Terry Holland, who said it really didn't bring any special satisfaction to him.

"If it was the last game of the season or for the national championship, then it might mean a little more," Holland said.

Clemson had five players in double figures as the Tigers recorded their third straight victory in a 102-52 walkaway with Samford. That was coach Bill Foster's 100th victory as Clemson's mentor.

Foster missed the first half of the game because of a dislocated shoulder he received earlier Wednesday. Foster was injured while using a chain saw.

He wasn't really missed. The Tigers blistered the nets with a 61 percent field goal average and used a 27-2 scoring burst in the first half to go up 49-21 at halftime. The rest was a breeze.

Senior center Larry Nance led the Tiger scoring with 20 points and had 10 rebounds.

All ACC teams are idle tonight.

Sophomore Claudia Hauck will enter the vaulting, floor exercises and uneven bars competition in hopes of working toward the 120.0 team goal. The Lady Wolfpack is in its first year of intercollegiate competition. Until this year, the group was an intramural club team.

Gymnasts Host NCS

East Carolina University's gymnastics team will open its home season Friday night, hosting North Carolina State University. The match will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

"We're anticipating a good meet," Coach Jon Rose said. "We're looking forward to some good close competition. We're looking for a 120.0 score and won't be satisfied until we get it."

Freshman standout Nan George will not be in competition due to a knee injury, but teammates Kathy McNeerney, also a freshman, and co-captain Elizabeth Jackson will lead the team in the all-around events.

Sophomore Claudia Hauck will enter the vaulting, floor exercises and uneven bars competition in hopes of working toward the 120.0 team goal.

The Lady Wolfpack is in its first year of intercollegiate competition. Until this year, the group was an intramural club team.

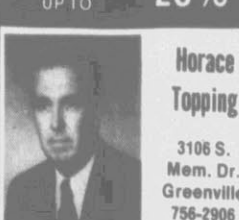

East Carolina enters the meet 1-1.

having a player below the foul line extended.

"If Underwood makes those two free throws we're back within (seven)," Odom said. "I think that was the turning point. I'm not saying that it would have been any different, but we were still in the game at the point."

"After that, they came down and put in four or five baskets and we were down by 18. For about six minutes there we were ineffective, both offensively and defensively."

The Pirates trailed at the half, 50-32. The closest they got in the second half was 16, in the early moments.

After that the Black Bears returned to a poised offensive attack that had them passing the ball quickly and smartly to open teammates under the basket for shot jumpers of layups.

"When they got their motion offense going it was tough," Odom said. "We gave them seven unmolested layups in the first half. Our defense just broke down."

"But you've got to give the Maine team credit. They'll go far and they deserve to," Odom said. "They have surprising talent."

"Not that we underestimated them, but I didn't realize they had as many good athletes as they really do. They played together beautifully tonight."

Something the Pirates failed to do for the most part. Still, sounding the optimist, Odom said he and the Pirates do not have long to brood over the 31-point loss.

"We can still have a good season. I'm not the kind of coach who wants the players to punish themselves because of a loss like this," he said. "We've got to go on and forget this one."

"That's hard for me to do and it's easy to say, but it has to be done. We were beaten badly. To say otherwise would not be telling the truth. But I don't want the team to get down because of this."

go out by 15, 45-30 just before the end of the half.

In the second half, it stayed right around that area until East Carolina put on one more streak, led by Riley and Jones, to cut it back to eight, 62-54. But the Pirates could come no closer, and again Old Dominion pulled away, building up an 18 point spread at 76-58. East Carolina tried for one more rally, but time became a factor and they never got closer than 11.

In addition to Donovan and Walling's scoring, Trombly added 17 and Rhonda Rompola had 10 for Old Dominion.

East Carolina was led by Jones with 26, Riley with 21 and Laurie Sikes with 10. Girven had 10 rebounds to lead the Pirates, who were outbounded, 54-38.

East Carolina returns to action Monday night at 6:30 p.m., hosting Campbell University in the first game of a doubleheader. The men host Berry College in the second game.

Kentucky Nips Ohio State

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Two of the nation's best centers battled it out Wednesday night when Kentucky met Ohio State.

Sam Bowie appeared to have won the battle...and because of it, Kentucky won the war.

"It was the most physical game I've ever been in," said Bowie after leading his second-ranked Wildcats to a 70-64 victory over the ninth-rated Buckeyes.

Bowie, only a sophomore, outbounded Ohio State senior Herb Williams 11-5, while scoring 19 points to Williams' 21.

"Sam seemed to loosen up in the second half and played with more confidence," said Hall, pointing to Bowie's 17 second-half points. "He didn't post up well in the first half, but posted up really strong in the second."

Bowie's rebounding superiority over his opposite number helped the Wildcats hold an 11-rebound margin over the Big Ten team.

"Bowie really hurt us in the second half, when we were trying to front him," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "We just didn't do the job on him."

Along with the Kentucky-Ohio State game, three other raked teams were featured in Wednesday night's college basketball action. Seventh-ranked Virginia beat Randolph-Macon 83-52; 11th-ranked Arkansas ripped Southwest Missouri State 98-65 and No. 16 St. John's stopped Manhattan 78-58.

Along with, Bowie, Derrick Hord was another big gun for Kentucky. He scored 14 points for the Wildcats and sealed their victory with two free throws and a dunk shot at the end.

"A lot of little things added up," said Miller. "We were outbounded by 11 and that won't take you very far. Our turnovers (21) doubled our number of assists and that should be just the opposite. Plus, they had a lot more shots than we did (71 to 49)."

Ralph Sampson scored 26 points, 20 in the first half, as Virginia's Cavaliers gave Coach Terry Holland his 200th career victory.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson began the game with two dunks and scored 18 points in the first 10 minutes as the Cavaliers roared to a 26-8 lead en route to their third straight victory. That included a 15-2 spree, with Sampson contributing nine of the points.

Scott Hastings scored 24 points as Arkansas rolled past Southwest Missouri State. Hastings hit 8 of 10 shots from the floor in the first half to trigger the Razorbacks into a game-breaking 43-26 lead at intermission.

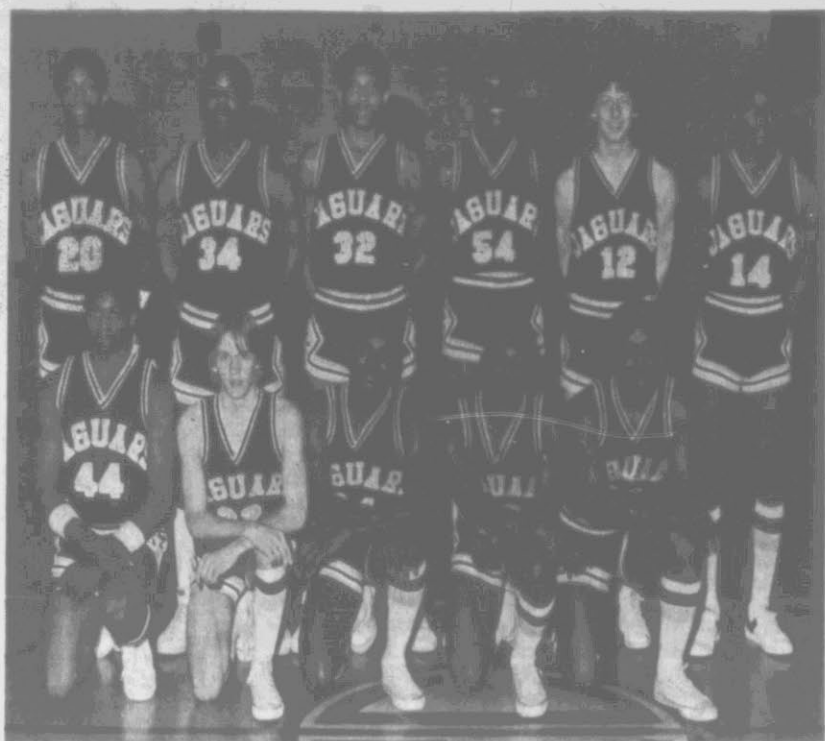

"Last year we couldn't play against a zone," Hastings said. "It took a little while tonight for the inside game to start working. We handled the zone well once we got use to it."

Kevin Williams scored 16 points as St. John's placed five scorers in double figures and breezed past Manhattan. Frank Gilroy added 14 points for the winners while Wayne McKoy had 12, David Russell 11 and Curtis Redding 10.

Elsewhere, Darrell Lockhart scored 19 points to pace Auburn past Tennessee 75-65; Mike McGee scored a game-high 28 points to trigger Michigan over Kansas 64-52; Jeff Malone's 18 led Mississippi State past Virginia Tech 68-61; Clemson romped over Samford 102-52 as Larry Nance scored 20, and Michael Hunt scored the first two baskets in overtime to send Furman ahead and the Paladins held on for an 87-82 decision over VMI.

Also, David Maxwell's 21 points led Fordham past Seton Hall 72-57; LaSalle defeated Vermont 81-61 behind Kevin Lynam's 20 points; Kevin Greaney scored 16 to pace Holy Cross past Navy 82-71; Frank Brickowski scored 18 to lead Penn State past Indiana State 61-54; a 21-point, 13-rebound performance by Kenny Stancell powered Virginia Commonwealth to a 77-58 victory over William & Mary; Eddie Phillips and Phillip Lockett scored 15 points apiece as Alabama trimmed Florida Southern 73-59; three field goals late in the game enabled Washington State to beat Eastern Montana 78-70; Mike Howse had a career-high 23 points to lead Niagara over Buffalo 82-62 and Pat Hicks hit a layup and four free throws in the final minute as North Texas State held off SMU 69-66.

Farmville Central Faces Rebuilding Cage Year

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE - Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell has a problem. Make that five problems.

A year ago the Jaguars finished 24-6 and made it to the district finals. Terrell's problem is that not one of that team's five starters returns.

Gone are forwards Donald Reid and Mike Baker, guards Mike Horne and Dennis Pitt and center Jeff Tyson.

Gone with them is the Jaguar quickness, which as much as anything helped Farmville to its second straight Eastern Carolina Conference crown.

Further complicating the situation is the fact the Jaguars lost three reserves off last year's club.

"We lost a lot of people last year and this is a rebuilding year for us," Terrell said. "We aren't going to be as quick as we were last year and we'll be a more conservative team due to the personnel."

"It's going to be a learning situation. But as soon as they get experienced they'll be all right."

Until then Terrell must wait for his youngsters to mature.

The Jaguars, who opened their 1980-81 season with a 75-51 loss to Southern Nash Tuesday night, return only one player with any varsity experience, center Ronald Dixon.

Dixon, a 6-1 senior, was a reserve last year but this season will team with Andrew Edwards (6-2, sophomore) at the two center positions in Farmville's double-post attack.

Melvin Sutton (6-0, junior) will start at forward while at the guards will be Reggie Fields (5-8, junior) and Stuart Gordon (6-1, junior).

Top reserves this year include centers Barry Gay (6-2, junior) and Terrence Pettaway (6-2, sophomore) and guard Willie Foreman (5-8, junior).

Other reserves are Lindwood Williams (6-0, junior), Ricky Dixon (5-10, junior) and Arthur Wooten (5-10, junior).

"We're not that tall, but I think rebounding could be one of our strong points," Terrell said. "But right now I don't know how they'll play."

"The guys have got to realize what they're capable of doing and they've got to realize that's going to take some time," he added. "This is the type of team that's going to get better as the season goes along."

"We're inexperienced, but the guys are working hard. But you can't coach experience."

As for the conference race, Terrell sees Southern Nash, Greene Central and D.H. Conley among the leaders.

"I'd say they're among the favorites, and maybe North Pitt," he said. "I'll just be happy to be in the top four and make it into the playoffs."

"We've been there the past five years and that's our goal this year. I just hope we can make it this year."

Farmville Schedule
(Home games in italics)

Jan. 2 at Tarboro, 6 North Lenoir, 9 Greene Central, 13 at D.H. Conley, 16 Southern Nash, 22 North Pitt, 23 at Ayden-Grifton, 30 Southwest Edgecombe.
Feb. 3 Charles B. Aycock, 6 at North Lenoir, 10 at Greene Central, 13 D.H. Conley.

Winfield And Padres In Battle

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres and star outfielder Dave Winfield are tangled in a legal dispute stemming from the club canceling a program for underprivileged children sponsored by Winfield.

The National League club contends the All-Star slugger, on estranged terms with the team since declaring his free agency last month, owes $62,763 as part of a $100,000 bonus to purchase tickets for disadvantaged area youths.

But Winfield's agent insists the money is not owed because Padre President Ballard Smith recently signed a three-year extension.

Smith confirmed on Wednesday that he signed the extension, but added, "I got conned."

The dispute centers around a clause in Winfield's four-year contract that expired at the end of the season. When the contract was signed in 1977, the Padres agreed to pay Winfield an additional $100,000 above his regular $1.4-million contract. The clause stipulated that $100,000 would go toward purchasing seats for underprivileged children.

Smith told The San Diego Tribune that only $37,237 worth of tickets were purchased during the four years.

Al Frohman, Winfield's agent, said it was a case of lack of interest in the Padres.

"We would invite 3,500 kids and only 900 would show up," he said.

He added that Smith "is looking at a class action suit" if he attempts to sever the extension.

Frohman says Winfield doesn't owe the money because Smith granted the Winfield Foundation a three-year extension.

Parish and Larry Bird, who had 16 of his 22 points in the second half, combined to rally the Celtics from an 11-point deficit late in the third period. Guard Gerald Henderson also was a factor in the comeback, scoring eight of his 15 points in the fourth quarter.

"When we have a big man like Parish in the middle, we've got to utilize him," Bird said. "Our game plan was to go low against Atlanta and it worked."

76ers 104, Knicks 9

Philadelphia improved its league-best record to 24-4 as Maurice Cheeks fueled a fourth-period rally and finished with 27 points.

Cheeks broke a 98-98 tie with two free throws that put the 76ers ahead to stay. The

Rockets 118, Cavaliers 109

Mike Dunleavy scored 12 fourth-quarter points, including 10 in the final four minutes when Houston outscored Cleveland 13-0.

Rudy Tomjanovich scored 20 points for the Rockets and Dunleavy finished with 17. Moses Malone, who left the game in the fourth quarter with a sprained ankle, scored 19, while Mike Mitchell led Cleveland with 28.

Warriors 131, Nets 108

Purvis Short led seven teammates in double figures with 21 points, including five in a row late in the third quarter when Golden State pulled away

Pitt Bows In Opening Game

KINSTON — Pitt Community College opened the 1980-81 season last night, bowing to Lenoir Community College, 92-87.

The contest was close throughout the game, with neither team able to build much of a lead. Pitt led for much of the first half, but late in the period, Lenoir was able to forge ahead. Dennis Batts and Calvin Horne combined for 19 points during the first half, which saw Lenoir emerge into a 45-43 lead at the horn.

In the second half, it again remained close. Pitt was able to regain the lead and pulled out into as much as a five-point lead, 55-50, but they were unable to hold it, as Lenoir warmed up from the outside and began to hit the long bombs.

Despite 18 points by Batts in the half, Lenoir moved ahead and held off Pitt for the victory as the Paladins lost two of their starters to fouls late in the contest.

Batts led the Pitt scoring with 27 points, while Horne and Dennis Pitt each had 14 and Mike Baker and Jeff Tyson each had 10. No scoring figures for Lenoir were available.

Lenoir is now 3-0 while Pitt is 0-1. The Paladins travel to James Sprunt for their next game, on Saturday.

Lobos Fined, Given 3 Years Probation

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association put the University of New Mexico's basketball program on probation for three years and slapped a $36,000 fine on the school, but has not said whether New Mexico can still host two important tournaments.

The New Mexico campus, in the basketball-crazed city of Albuquerque, was chosen as the site for the West Regionals of the 1982 NCAA basketball tournament and the finals of the 1983 tournament.

The probation announcement, issued from the association's headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan., on Wednesday, did not address the tournament questions.

But it did say the basketball team will be barred from post-season competition and television appearances during the 1980-81 and 1981-82 academic years.

New Mexico Athletic Director John Bridgers declined to comment on the decision Wednesday, because university officials were holding a news conference today.

"The university council advised us not to comment until then," Bridgers said.

University President William E. "Bud" Davis and UNM attorney Peter Johnstone could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Charles Alan Wright,

chairman of the NCAA Infractions Committee, said, "The violations of NCAA legislation in this case were numerous and significant, involving cash benefits as well as tampering with academic records."

"The committee would have imposed an even more severe penalty were it not for the constructive attitude the university has displayed in cooperating with the NCAA throughout this investigation, and the vigorous actions the university has taken to prevent the recurrence of similar violations in the future," Wright said in a prepared news release.

The NCAA said the probe uncovered violations of NCAA rules regarding complimentary tickets, extra benefits, institutional control, academic standards, ethical conduct, financial aid, various recruiting regulations and certification of compliance with NCAA legislation.

During an NCAA investigation of the New Mexico athletic program, law enforcement authorities uncovered information concerning falsification of transcripts for student-athletes. The scandal became one of the most highly publicized and widespread in collegiate athletic history.

Early in the investigation, in November 1979, seven New Mexico basketball players were declared ineligible, assistant coach Manny Goldstein resigned and head coach Norm Ellenberger was fired.

For using ineligible players in the first-round game of the 1978 NCAA Basketball Tournament, New Mexico must return to the NCAA approximately $36,000, or 90 percent of its net receipts from the event. Contrary to speculation, the program wasn't stripped of any basketball scholarships.

Although the probation announcement did not answer the questions of two important upcoming tournaments, an NCAA spokesman said a recommendation could be made by the Division I Basketball Committee, which meets next week in Chicago. A final decision would be up to the NCAA's Executive Committee.

The NCAA Infractions Committee heard from five

University of New Mexico officials Nov. 1 in Colorado Springs about the 92 allegations facing the school's athletic program.

Bridgers said after the 4½-hour hearing, "The charges are serious and you've got to weigh those against the actions we've taken."

Bridgers was hired as athletic director last December in the midst of the recruiting and transcript-doctoring scandal.

Stabler Hopes To Shake Loser Label With Win

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

HOSTON (AP) — Winning, Ken Stabler says, is everything.

The Houston Oilers' quarterback knows what he's talking about. In the National Football League (and in almost any sport you'd care to mention), the name of the game is numbers — the numbers in the win column. And "Snake" speaks from experience.

Two years ago, when he wore an Oakland uniform, he was intercepted 30 times while throwing just 16 touchdown passes in the regular season and the Raiders took a tumble. The blame was placed squarely on his shoulders. It didn't suit him, and he said so. The talk that he was washed up infuriated him. And in 1979 he was the American Conference's second-best passer with, among other things, 26 TD passes and 22 interceptions.

Now, in his first year as Houston's quarterback, he's back throwing to the wrong people with 24 interceptions in 13 games, five of them against Pittsburgh in a season-opening 31-17 loss. The talk is starting up again — and it's starting to bug him again.

"All people see is the No. 24. That's all they think, 24 interceptions. But I've probably had 7, 8, 9 balls that were tipped, that were catchable passes. But it doesn't count that way. It counts as 24 interceptions," Stabler said after the Oilers' brief workout for tonight's game with the Steelers.

"Interceptions have hurt us. Turnovers have hurt us. But we still have a shot at it (the playoffs). If we get in the playoffs and do well in them, nobody'll bring up the fact that I had 24 interceptions. If we don't make the playoffs, well, then I'll be one of the scapegoats...It all hinges on winning and losing."

The loser tonight is almost certain to watch the playoffs from the stands or on television. But Stabler, who has been through plenty of pressure situations before, says this game is no different from any other one.

"It's a big game, no doubt about that, but I don't feel any pressure. To me it's just another game. All games are important. I look at every game we play as being important from game one to game 16. Look at the Kansas City game now. It's important 'cause we got beat. Seattle was important; we got beat. New York was important; we got beat. This is an important game because it's the next one we play."

Just two weeks ago, the Oilers owned first place in the American Conference's Central Division, then losses against the Jets and, last Sunday, Cleveland dropped Houston into its present second-place tie with the Steelers, one game behind the Browns. Stabler said he can't pin down the reason for the Oilers' erratic season.

"If I could figure that out," he said, "I'd quit playin' and start coachin' and I could straighten out all the teams that have trouble, make more money and not get beat up as bad."

Pat Dye Among Those Mentioned At Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — With the signing of high school recruits coming up next week, Auburn is again looking for a football coach and Billy Atkins of the St. Louis Cardinals says he wants the job.

After Vince Dooley announced Wednesday that he did not want to leave the University of Georgia to return to his alma mater, Auburn officials began a frantic search to find a head coach before Dec. 13, when football players sign Southeastern Conference letters of intent.

"We will begin a thorough search process immediately to obtain the best available coach for Auburn," university President Hanly Funderburk said. "We want a man with a proven track record, someone who will unify our people and channel Auburn's great resources toward a championship football program within the proper framework of the university.

Atkins, a defensive backfield coach for the Cardinals, said he can fill the requirements and was applying for the job.

Dan Reeves, an offensive coach for the Dallas Cowboys, also is reported to be interested in the assignment. Members of the Auburn board of trustees reportedly have expressed interest in Wyoming's Pat Dye, John Mackovic of Wake Forest and Erk Russell, a Georgia assistant.

Atkins, 45, was the leading scorer and most valuable player on Auburn's 1957 national championship team. He won a small college national championship coaching at Troy State University in 1968.

The coach said he was disappointed he didn't get the Auburn job when the late Coach Ralph Jordan retired five years ago, but he hopes things will be different this time.

"I think I have support from a lot of Auburn alumni," he said.

Funderburk said the same people who sought Dooley as a replacement for Doug Barfield are leading the new search for a coach.

"I have asked Mr. Morris Savage, Mr. Mike McCartney and Mr. John Denson, all of whom are members of the Athletic Committee of the board of trustees, and Mr. Bobby Lowder, president of the Auburn Alumni Association, to continue assisting me in the search for Auburn's next coach."

"I have asked Dr. Wilford Bailey, chairman of the Faculty Athletic Committee, to work with us and he has agreed. We will proceed with deliberate haste. We are concerned about 1981, but we are more concerned about the years beyond. We want Auburn to be a dominant force in college football in the decade of the 80s. We will spare no reasonable effort to achieve this goal," Funderburk said.

Auburn's effort to lure Dooley included a reported offer of an eight-year, $1.8 million contract.

While Auburn searches for a coach, school officials said Frank Young, the director of recruiting, will try to attract high school seniors.

Barfield resigned Monday at the request of the board of trustees after leading Auburn to a 5-6 season.

Two Leagues In Bowl Ties

By GEORGE STRODE
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Mid-American football champions have not earned a bowl berth since 1975, when the Tangerine Bowl dropped its ties with the conference.

But that will change in 1981. The champions of the Mid-American and the Pacific Coast Athletic Association are to meet Dec. 19 next year in the first California Bowl in Fresno.

"We tried to secure a bowl tie-up with another conference with similar problems," said Mid-American Commissioner Fred Jacoby.

Jacoby's league plays in the shadow of the Big Ten Conference in the Midwest. The Pacific-10 Conference dwarfs the Pacific Coast Athletic Association on the West Coast.

Jacoby is confident the new bowl will succeed in Fresno State University's new 30,000-seat stadium.

"The thing that will make it go is the San Joaquin Valley Sports Association," he said. "It's a group of businessmen who are putting up $250,000 a year for the bowl. We are committed to take 2,000 tickets and the PCAA 3,000 tickets."

"We're the only show in town in the Fresno area. And by moving the game from the second weekend to the third weekend in December, we might negotiate an independent television network contract. It would have been a violation of the NCAA's contract with ABC-TV on the second weekend."

The two champions have a five-year contract with the California Bowl. Each team will receive 37½ percent and the sponsoring agency 25 percent of gross receipts.

"We expect to gross $100,000 before our expenses, which will be heavy," Jacoby said. "It's the only closed bowl (league champions only) besides the Rose Bowl. It's a good incentive for the conference. It will help us in our recruiting. It will give an extra dimension to our football programs."

University of New Mexico officials Nov. 1 in Colorado Springs about the 92 allegations facing the school's athletic program.

Bridgers said after the 4½-hour hearing, "The charges are serious and you've got to weigh those against the actions we've taken."

Bridgers was hired as athletic director last December in the midst of the recruiting and transcript-doctoring scandal.

"We won six of the eight games, including the last three over Florida, Georgia and South Carolina," he said. "That's not too shabby. They're all in bowl games this season."

Jacoby understands why the Orlando, Fla., bowl dropped the Mid-American.

"The first thing bowls ask you is how many tickets can you sell," he said. "The most we ever sold was 4,000 by Toledo for the Tangerine Bowl. They wanted bigger game."

Plans Income Tax Hike Vote For Clevelanders

By M.R. KROPKO
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor George V. Voinovich, concerned about declining city services, plans to seek a special election in February for passage of a proposed income tax hike.

"During the 1970s, our taxes stayed low, our services declined and the city lost 24 percent of its population," Voinovich said Wednesday during a news conference. "At this rate, the city of Cleveland will become extinct sometime in the 21st century."

Voinovich publicly announced plans for extensive layoffs in virtually all city departments, including safety forces. The layoffs were expected since Cleveland voters rejected a proposed income tax hike from 1.5 percent to 2 percent in November.

The 214 layoffs will enable the city to balance its budget according to terms stipulated by the state-created Financial Planning and Supervision Commission. According to Voinovich, the average salary of a laid-off Cleveland worker is $18,000.

"During the recent income tax campaign, I frequently said it would be necessary to lay off workers if the tax issue failed," Voinovich said. "Today we have made cutbacks in all departments which share in the general fund, starting with the mayor's office."

The layoffs include eight emergency medical technicians, 24 traffic controllers and 53 uniformed police officers. Some 80 Service Department workers, paid through Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds, also will lose their jobs if the CETA office in Chicago grants the city a waiver.

In addition, overtime pay for police and firefighters will be slashed by more than $3.7 million, according to annual budget tabulations.

Representatives of the Fraternal Order of Police and the Cleveland Police Patrolmen's Association went to court Wednesday to fight various aspects of the order. A hearing is set for Friday.

"We did not take the traditional way out," Voinovich said. "We laid off many white-collar workers and tried to maintain as many service-related jobs as possible."

The first-term mayor, elected a year ago, campaigned vigorously for a tax increase before the Nov. 4 election. Former Mayor Dennis Kucinich opposed passage of that measure.

Voinovich said he plans to go to City Council soon to seek a special election involving the tax increase proposal.

Benton of Route 3, Ayden, and Willie Mills of Grimesland.

Police, who charged Mills with failing to yield the right of way in connection with the mishap, estimated damage at $800 to the Benton car and $300 to the Mills auto.

Vehicles driven by Marshall McClain Preston of Route 1, Pinetops and Dalton Thomas Raynor of Kinston, collided about 11:30 p.m. at the intersection of Evans and Arthur Streets.

Damage was estimated at $200 to the Preston truck and $700 to the Raynor car.

But No Mention Of N. Carolina

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-three billboards bearing the name of Gov. Jim Hunt and a message extolling the virtues of North Carolina have been erected across the country — with no mention of the state's name in the message.

Don Pierce, president of the Raleigh-Durham branch of the Naegele Outdoor Advertising company, said Wednesday 10 of the billboards are located in other states. He said they were designed to promote North Carolina's image as part of the company's public service program.

The state's name was omitted intentionally as a gimmick to arouse reader interest.

"By not having the name of North Carolina on it in some other states, it's going to create some interest," Pierce said.

Both Pierce and Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary for Hunt, denied that the boards were an effort to promote Hunt's public image, possibly for future political races.

"That's definitely not the purpose of it," Pierce said. But he added, "Of course we'd like to see our governor known everywhere." Hackney said Hunt didn't know anything about the billboards until Robert Naegele — head of the company and designer of the signs — visited the governor Wednesday and showed him photos of the billboards.

"That's the first the governor knew about it," Hackney said.

The entire message of the billboards, which have been erected in the past two weeks in places as far away as Palm Springs, Calif., Jacksonville, Fla., Des Moines, Iowa, and New Orleans, La., is: "What state has 5,883,121 warm, intelligent, industrious, capable citizens? Ours. (signed) Governor Jim Hunt."

Pierce said Naegele, a Minneapolis native, is especially fond of North Carolina, and considers it his second home.

The firm has offices in Wilmington, Raleigh, Winston-Salem and Asheville, and is building a new facility between Greensboro and Winston-Salem.

Two Congressmen Are Convicted Of Bribery

By RICHARD T. PIENIAK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Two House committee chairmen beaten at the polls last month have become the third and fourth congressmen convicted of charges stemming from the government's Abscam operation.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., a 13-term Democrat from New Jersey, was convicted Wednesday night of bribery and conspiracy by a U.S. District Court jury that deliberated 21 hours over two days.

John M. Murphy, a nine-term Democrat from New York City, was found guilty of conspiracy, conflict of interest and receiving an unlawful gratuity in the FBI investigation, in which undercover agents posed as representatives of fictitious Arab sheiks seeking help with immigration problems. Murphy was acquitted of bribery.

Murphy, 54, his pregnant wife, Kathleen, at his side, would say only: "We will appeal this decision."

"Obviously I'm upset and disappointed," said Thompson, 62. "I maintain my innocence."

In another Abscam case, proceedings were beginning today in the trial of Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., who contends he accepted $25,000 from undercover agents only because he was conducting his own probe of men he considered suspicious.

In Washington, the House ethics committee ruled 10-0 on Wednesday that Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C., a lame duck convicted of bribery in another Abscam trial, had violated House ethics. It was doubtful the matter would come before the whole House in the closing days of the lame-duck session.

In the Brooklyn case, the jury acquitted Murphy of bribery but convicted Thompson even though Murphy was the only one of the two present when a $50,000 bribe was passed in a briefcase on Oct. 20, 1979.

Bribery is the most serious charge, carrying a possible 15-year sentence. Conspiracy carries a maximum five-year term. The other two charges carry maximum sentences of two years each.

Juror Alfred Moskowitz said the panel believed Murphy knew there was money in the briefcase, but acquitted him because it believed he did not make any specific promise in return for the cash. "He's too slick for that," Moskowitz said.

Moskowitz said Thompson was found guilty because he took specific action in return for the money, including bringing Murphy into the plot.

Murphy, head of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, received $15,000 of the payoff while Thompson, chairman of the House Administration Committee, received a $10,000 finders fee, according to testimony at the 3½-week trial.

Following announcement of the verdicts, U.S. District Judge George C. Pratt said he would hold hearings in early February on the remaining question of whether the due process rights of Murphy and Thompson were violated by government misconduct.

Last week, a federal judge in Philadelphia dismissed the Abscam convictions of two city councilmen there on grounds that they had been entrapped by FBI agents. The judge also said that the government overreached its bounds by setting up the crimes.

The Justice Department has said it will appeal.

Former Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., was convicted last Aug. 30 in Brooklyn on Abscam charges with Philadelphia attorney Howard Criden while Jenrette was convicted in Washington on Oct. 7.

Sudden Spurt In New Satellites

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission today approved the construction and launches of 20 new communication space satellites by eight firms, providing in a single action the greatest impetus ever to the expansion of satellite service.

The agency also approved the construction of five other satellites while deferring approval of launch authority pending a later showing of demand.

FCC officials said the decision would pave the way for investments by the eight companies exceeding $2 billion.

In addition to more than tripling the number of commercial satellites providing domestic service, the 7-0 vote clears the way for four major firms to join a select group of companies operating their own satellite networks.

The decision also means the current shortage of satellite capacity faced by such groups as the cable television industry will be alleviated as the new satellites are launched between now and 1983.

The commission also sorted through a variety of conflicting claims for specific orbital slots, while agreeing that satellite companies could trade slots among themselves if they wish.

The final outcome was thus seen as a reaffirmation of the FCC's "open sky" policy, which holds that any company that wants to take the risk of entering the satellite field should be allowed to do so to promote competition.

The decision will give real meaning to that goal of competition, say FCC officials, because it marks the first time that independent telephone companies have seized upon an opportunity to compete directly with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in the long-distance field instead of merely tying their local networks to the Bell System.

The independent companies making that jump by building satellites of their own are the General Telephone & Electronics Corp. and the Continental Tele-

Challenging Air Force Policy

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Air Force policy is being challenged in a federal court suit that claims a Minneapolis man was dismissed from the service's preparatory school because he carries the trait for sickle-cell anemia.

A class-action suit filed Wednesday contends it was unconstitutional for the Air Force to dismiss Stephen Pullens, 20, from the Colorado Springs, Colo., school in July 1979 on the basis of the anemia finding. The school prepares candidates for the Air Force Academy.

The Air Force said the policy was instituted because those with the trait may collapse or suddenly die if subjected to strenuous physical exertion or lack of oxygen at high altitude. Sickle-cell anemia is an inherited chronic disease found chiefly among blacks. Pullens is black.

phone Corp.
The satellite field is currently dominated by three companies that are operating a total of eight commercial satellites. The Western Union Telegraph Co. has three satellites in orbit; RCA American Communications Inc. is operating two, and the COMSAT General Corp. owns three that are leased entirely to AT&T and General Telephone.

In addition, a ninth commercial satellite was just launched last month by Satellite Business Systems Inc.

All four current owners — Western Union, RCA, COMSAT General and Satellite Business Systems — will further expand their satellite operations as a result of today's decision. In addition, AT&T and General Telephone will construct their own systems for the first time, as will Hughes Communications Inc. and the Southern Pacific Communications Corp.

Continental Telephone will enter the field by virtue of its purchase, along with partner Fairchild Industries, of 50 percent of Western Union's Space Communications Corp.

New Battle ground On Reinsurance Facility

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Legislature, long the battleground in the controversy over the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, is likely to be the scene of the next skirmish between the insurance industry and the state insurance commissioner's office.

The possibility of a truce appears slim as the two sides have not agreed on what they're fighting about.

Oscar Smith, a spokesman for Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, said the dispute involves rate surcharges totaling 28 percent that insurance companies are charging high risk drivers.

Officials in the insurance industry say the dispute is over increases in the basic auto insurance rates, paid by high risk and normal drivers alike, which the insurance commission has consistently turned down.

Ingram won a recent skirmish when the state Court of Appeals ruled surcharges collected on automobile insurance policies constitute rates that come under Ingram's review.

However, it was a hollow victory. The appellate court declined to overturn a decision by Superior Court Judge E. Maurice Braswell, in which the lower court denied a state request for a preliminary injunction to block collection of the surcharges.

Caught in the middle are more than half a million North Carolina drivers, who for one reason or another have been declared high risks.

The way the law is written, consumers have no way of knowing what the criteria are for being thrown into the category. The 85 insurance companies who are members of the reinsurance facility do not have to list a reason for ceding a customer.

Smith says the area in which you live, the recent death of a spouse, or the location of a tavern in your neighborhood can force you into paying higher auto insurance rates.

Insurance companies counter that the facility has cost them more than $173 million since it was put into effect by the North Carolina Legislature in 1973, and they are only trying to recoup some of their losses.

The facility works this way: when a client goes to an insurance agent and asks for coverage, the agent is required by law to provide it. The agent submits the application to his company. The company then decides whether to accept the applicant as a voluntary risk, or cede the policy to the high-risk facility.

If the company cedes the risk, it retains only expenses to provide the policy plus a commission for the agent. Any losses are paid by the facility. At the end of the quarter, losses are divided among all insurance companies according to the percent of auto insurance market they hold in North Carolina.

Smith said more than 60 percent of the people assigned to the high-risk category in 1978 never had an accident, or cost the insurance companies a penny. He said there has been no audit to verify the losses claimed by the insurance companies.

The facility has reported losses by member companies of 15.6 million in 1976-77; $31.4 million in 77-78; and $36.7 million in the 1978-79 fiscal year.

As a result, the facility's governing board — comprised of five insurance companies and four insurance agents — has approved surcharges to recover more than $65 million lost during the past 2½ years. The rest has been written off.

Sen. Carolyn Mathis, chairman of the state Senate's Legislative Insurance Committee, called the facility concept a "shambles," and said something will have to be done soon.

She suggested the state abandon compulsory insurance and open the auto insurance market to free competition. She also suggested reinstatement of the assigned risk program.

"People don't care, they want the cheapest insurance, and they'll pay more if they have points (for tickets and accidents) whether they're in the facility or out of the facility," she said.

She said insurance for high risk drivers is a tough problem for all states, made tougher because North Carolina has a compulsory auto insurance law.

"Let those who can afford it buy insurance and buy protection for damage from uninsured drivers and let those who can't afford it resolve it through litigation," Huskins said.

"In effect, they've made the Legislature sit in the role of rate making, and that's not our role, never has been our role. But because of the feud between the industry and the commissioner, we've had to set ceilings on auto rate increases in the last two sessions, saying insurance companies can't raise rates more than 6 percent," she said.

With open competition, each company would be allowed to request rate increases individually. Doing away with compulsory liability would relieve the state of the responsibility of making coverage available.

"If a person shopped around and couldn't get insurance, maybe he shouldn't drive a car. If he had an accident and couldn't take care of the person he injured, he shouldn't drive until he made provisions through a bond underwriter," Ms. Mathis said.

"A lot of us in the Legislature have many concerns about what has been happening. It has been a sad situation. A lot of things in the law were done at the suggestion of the commissioner. Now things are compounded — everything we do makes the situation a little worse. Things are so bad it's hard to get legislators to even serve on the insurance committee."

"Our problem is compounded by the adversary relationship of the commissioner and the industry. But I'd hate even more to have a commissioner that would do anything the industry wants, a buddy-buddy relationship."

Rep. J.P. Huskins of the House insurance committee said insurance companies are putting people who don't belong into the reinsurance facility and charge them a higher rate. He also recommended doing away with compulsory auto insurance.

"Let those who can afford it buy insurance and buy protection for damage from uninsured drivers and let those who can't afford it resolve it through litigation," Huskins said.

Garwood Trial Takes Recess

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy has been recessed until next week while court officials prepare for the testimony of a foreigner who helped arrange Garwood's departure from Vietnam.

The foreigner, who has not been identified by name, reportedly has refused to testify without having an attorney from his own company present. Prosecutors have identified the man only as being employed by an "international association."

Garwood, who disappeared near Da Nang in 1965, returned to the United States last year after he passed a clandestine note to the foreigner in a restaurant in Hanoi. The note asked for Garwood's repatriation to the United States.

Garwood has maintained he was held captive in Vietnam during the 14 years after his disappearance and his return to this country. The government contends he remained in Vietnam voluntarily after becoming a turn-coat in a Viet Cong prisoner of war camp.

Another problem witness, Dr. Harold Kushner, is scheduled to testify when court resumes next week. Kushner, a former U.S. Army captain and an ex-POW, reportedly has expressed a reluctance to submit to questioning by defense attorneys. Col. R.E. Switzer, the presiding judge, said he may hold a session Monday without jurors to instruct Kushner.

Testimony Wednesday centered on Garwood's status on attendance records when he disappeared in 1965.

Defense attorney John Lowe objected to testimony from Garwood's battalion commander in Vietnam. Lowe argued that much of Lt. Col. John A. Studts' testimony should be disallowed because he did not personally carry out any investigation of Garwood's disappearance.

Studts is now stationed on Okinawa.

Garwood's lawyer argued that, because the report listing Garwood absent was prepared by then-Lt. Charles Buchta, Garwood's platoon commander, and various others who reported to Studts, Studts could not offer personal investigative knowledge.

GRAB IT AND RUN — Earthquake survivors in Avellino, Italy, protesting the slow distribution of relief aid, help themselves to a truck full of food and fruit. Public disturbances and looting have been reported in Naples and elsewhere in Italy's quake-stricken areas. (AP Laserphoto)

Owens Fleet Of 21 Antique Cars

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — Fred O. Lindberg has his own fleet of 21 antique cars.

The vehicles, collected over 12 years, are valued to more than $140,000, he said.

Most of the cars, which include a 1920 Model A Ford and a 1938 DeSoto, are in driving condition. The Ford is worth $20,000.

Lindberg, an operator's helper at the Phillips Coulee fertilizer plant near here, says he spends a lot of time buying license plates.

"It's hard trying to keep track of which car needs a new plate, and believe me, it does cost money to keep those plates current," he says.

Price - Gouging In Quake Area

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — More than 1,000 paramilitary police have begun a massive crackdown on price gouging in the quake-stricken Naples area, authorities reported.

First police reports said at least 20 shopowners were arrested for charging inflated prices for daily necessities such as spaghetti, coffee, milk and bread.

Police arrested two youths for looting in Torre del Greco, south of Naples, and two others in Potenza as they tried to steal blankets and underwear from a warehouse stocked with relief material, authorities said.

Milan's Corriere della Sera newspaper reported that the Camorra, Naples' Mafia-style underworld racket has been stealing "chunks" of relief material bound for earthquake victims.

Police officials said they could not exclude the possibility of the Camorra's involvement, but they had no firm evidence.

The Camorra has stepped up its terror campaign against the city's merchants this year, police said, adding that the Camorra gangs made at least 500 known extortion demands against shops, businesses and street vendors this year.

On Wednesday, Giuseppe Zamberletti, the government's special commissioner for the disaster zone, ordered judges and prosecutors to set up courts in tents and trailers in refugee camps to deal with looters.

A court in Avellino handed down the first conviction for looting in the quake area, sentencing a 45-year-old man to prison for 20 months for stealing military tents.

Police reinforcements have gone to dozens of southern towns where looting and disturbances had been reported the past few days.

Two strong aftershocks hit the quake-shattered area early today, sending thousands of persons out of their homes in panic in the Avellino and Potenza provinces, police said. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Govm't Cracks Down On Investors' Tax Shelters

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — During three frantic months in 1976, a thousand well-heeled investors ranging from Elvis Presley to the attorney general of Maryland eagerly laid down $20 million to get in on a coal mining deal.

But prosecutors say they were buying income tax deductions, not mining rights, in a scheme intended solely to cheat the federal Treasury.

Now, 15 people are under indictment, including seven lawyers, two investors and two producers of the Broadway show, "Annie."

Some two dozen other investors will probably face criminal prosecution, and authorities say they are looking into similar investment deals people used to avoid paying federal income taxes.

Presley was the biggest investor in the coal deal. Like other prominent entertainers, doctors and businessmen involved in the deal, Presley claimed huge losses. The late rock'n'roll singer paid $505,000 and deducted $2.6 million from his taxable income in 1976.

According to court records, other buyers included singer Alice Cooper, actors David McCallum and Margaux Hemingway, professional basketball players Earl Monroe and Spencer Haywood, "Candid Camera" host Allen Funt, former Maryland Attorney General Francis Burch and Frank G. Wells, president of Warner Bros.

None of these celebrities has been indicted and no charges are anticipated against them. But the Internal Revenue Service is expected to insist that they pay their taxes, for the government claims the deal was marred by a critical flaw: In their haste to avoid taxes, they bought mining rights that did not exist.

The deal began to crumble two years ago when the Securities and Exchange Commission charged in a civil suit that the organizers owned grazing rights, not strip mining rights, to most of the 22,000 acres of ranch land they claimed to control in Wyoming.

Criminal indictments were returned by a federal grand jury in Boston last month, identifying the key men in the scheme as George Osserman and Paul Garfinkle, partners in a suburban Newton law firm, and Irwin Meyer and Stephen Friedman, Broadway theatrical promoters and producers of "Annie."

In a memorandum filed in U.S. District Court, the SEC described the venture as "a device to generate vast amounts of cash for Osserman, Garfinkle, Meyer and Friedman and their associates in return for the distribution of fraudulent tax deductions in connection with a sham mining venture."

According to the government, the scheme worked this way:

The promoters bought the land rights from ranchers for $300,000 through one company, then transferred them to Prodamat, a corporation controlled by Osserman and Garfinkle.

Next, they set up a limited partnership, called S-J Mineral Associates, and sold interests in the partnership for $30,000 each.

Osserman and Garfinkle organized other tax shelters and set up a nationwide network of salesmen, lawyers, accountants and investment advisors, says the SEC. Meyer and Friedman used contacts in show business to sell interests to actors, singers and backers of Broadway shows.

Money flowed in.

"As demand for more and more participation in the coal tax shelter deal mounted, the defendants created one sham limited partnership after another to accommodate people seeking to avoid personal tax liability," according to the indictment.

In the last three months of 1976, the backers created three more partnerships and took in $20 million in cash, investigators say.

"It was getting near Christmas, and people were trying to find tax deductions," said one government lawyer. "People were jumping to get in on this."

Prosecutors say the salesman and accountants received commissions of 15 to 20 percent that totaled $4 million. Most of the other money was funneled to Garfinkle, Osserman, Meyer and Friedman. They bought cars and a jet airplane and stashed money in foreign bank accounts, the government claims.

Mainstays Of Saudi Economy

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Oil, oil products and gas are the mainstays of the Saudi Arabian economy.

In the 830,000 square miles that compose the country, only 1 percent of the land is under cultivation.

The country occupies nearly one-quarter of the land mass of the United States.

The offering memorandum for the tax shelter said investors could write off $5 for each dollar they invested and that when mining began, they would receive an annual 43 percent return on their investments.

It worked this way: With each $30,000 cash investment, the buyers signed a $126,000 note with the understanding that the note would never have to be repaid. The $156,000 total was shown on the books as payment to Prodamat as an advance royalty for future coal production.

Under tax regulations at the time, advance royalties for coal mining could be claimed as a tax loss. But since there was no way the concern could mine coal, the government claims the tax shelter was a sham.

Defense lawyers deny this. In a memorandum filed in the SEC case, Garfinkle's attorney, Paul Holian, maintains that Garfield and Osserman were gripped by an "optimism amounting to coal fever" and were simply duped by the ranchers who sold the rights to the land.

Thirteen alleged organizers of the tax shelter, including Osserman, Garfield, Meyer and Friedman, were indicted Nov. 14 on mail fraud and conspiracy charges. Two investors, a Rhode Island businessman and Dr. Gaspar Anastase, chief of plastic surgery at Boston University Medical Center, were charged with tax evasion.

Federal Trial Attorney David Geneson said two dozen other people who bought interests in the coal deal in 1977 but claimed them on their 1976 returns will also be indicted.

"Obviously, most people bought because they saw a tax benefit," said one lawyer representing several investors. "But it was also represented as a wonderful way to make money eventually. Nobody thought it was a blue chip. But their material gave you the feeling that you could make some money after a while."

Blame Auto Sales Lag On High Interest Rates

By MICHAEL L. GRACYK
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — High interest rates are being blamed by industry executives for the failure of domestic automakers to produce a sales turnaround in November.

November sales figures, announced Wednesday by the five major U.S. companies, were 8 percent below last year. But the final 10 days of the month were even worse, down 17.3 percent.

November sales by the U.S. manufacturers totaled 529,288, compared with 599,247 a year ago. There were 24 sales days this year, one more than last year.

At American Motors Corp., Thomas Staudt, vice president for marketing, said escalating interest rates "continue to draw down industry sales performance from what would otherwise be its demand potential."

But Bennett Bidwell, car and truck group vice president at Ford, said it was "incorrect" for buyers to believe that interest rates on auto loans rise along with the prime rate, now at 18.5 percent.

"In actual practice, most auto-loan interest rates for individual buyers are controlled by state regulations and do not automatically rise with the prime," Bidwell said.

One company analyst, who requested anonymity, agreed. "To blame interest rates is wrong," he said. "The interest rates on autos are no higher than they were four months ago. It's the perception of higher interest rates that's hurting."

Imports continued a strong year-long showing, taking 24 percent of the domestic market in November with sales estimated at 170,000, up about 8 percent from last year.

Import manufacturers, whose share of the U.S. market has been as high as 29 percent this year, only report monthly sales.

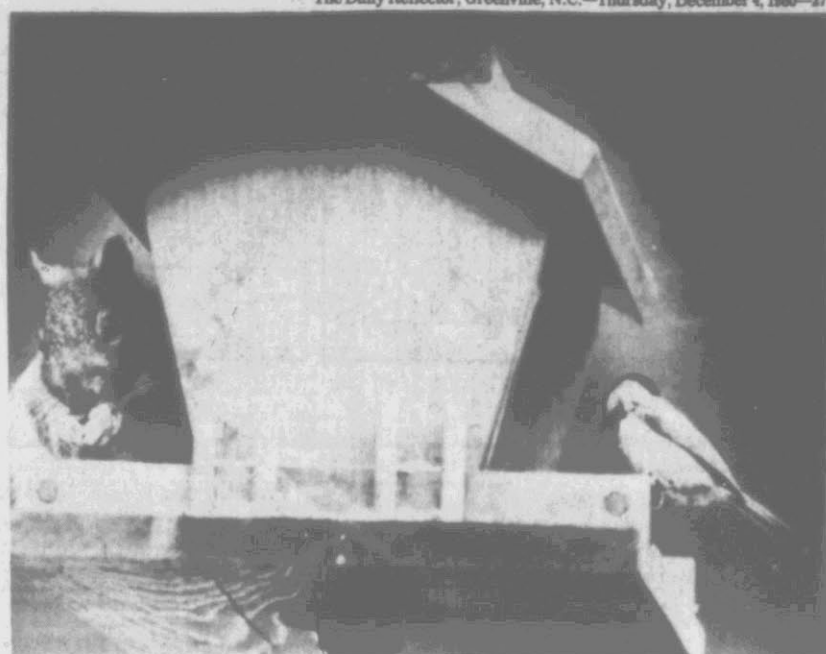

Among the U.S. carmakers, GM sales fell 6.5 percent for the month, compared with the same period a year ago. But GM plunged 20.5 percent for the final 10 days. At Ford Motor Co., sales were off 14 percent for November and 19.3 percent for the month-end period. At Chrysler Corp., November sales were up 6.8 percent from depressed levels of a year ago and up 3 percent in the final third of the month.

AMC, which only reports monthly sales, was down 19.2 percent, but up an estimated 18.5 percent in the last 10 days. Volkswagen of America dropped 23 percent for the month, 17.3 percent in the final 10 days.

"We are pleased that we are performing at a better selling rate than last year in a market severely depressed by exorbitant interest rates," said Gar Laux, Chrysler's vice chairman. Chrysler's performance enabled it to maintain a 10 percent share among domestic makers, the level the troubled No.3 automaker has said it must maintain to survive.

The new Chrysler compact "K-cars," whose success is essential to keep Chrysler afloat, were delivered to 16,001 buyers in November, a 2.3 percent share of the overall market. The cars they replaced — Dodge Volare and Plymouth Aspen — took 3 percent of that market in their second month of sales, January 1976.

No 'Radical' Changes For Agriculture

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If there is such a thing as a consensus Among agricultural observers, it may be that the incoming Reagan administration won't try to do anything radical to farm policy or the Agriculture Department.

That is not to say the Republicans won't seek substantive changes in the months and years ahead. But even those may not represent much of a departure from trends of the past decade or so.

During his presidential campaign, Ronald Reagan — when he or his aides mentioned farm issues — raised no loud outcry for radical change. He attacked President Carter's partial embargo of U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union, called for increased farm exports in general and deplored the sag in the incomes of farmers.

And Reagan's people say they are taking another look at the embargo, raising the possibility that if the president-elect does lift the ban, it may not be among his top priorities once he takes office in January.

No doubt there has been and will be strong calls for Reagan to clean house at the Agriculture Department, as with other agencies in the executive branch. But the most obvious voices so far seem to be asking for moderation and restraint.

One evidence of this is a draft report by The Heritage Foundation, a well-established conservative research and think-tank group, that outlines a "Mandate for Leadership" for the Agriculture Department.

The draft, made available to The Associated Press, by no means represents official Republican policy, nor does it necessarily signify or portend policies and decisions that will be made by the new administration's farm leaders.

It does, however, provide at least some threads of thought that will be involved in Reagan's farm policy.

The report also carries additional weight and prestige because Don Paarlberg, the Agriculture Department's chief economist during the administrations of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, was chairman of the project.

Paarlberg, widely respected as an agricultural economist at Purdue University and for his many other activities and interests related to food and agriculture, also served as President Dwight D. Eisenhower's team at the Agriculture Department in the 1950s.

As outlined in its summary, the draft report said:

"Certain activities of the Department of Agriculture, particularly the food programs and the rural development area, have expanded exponentially and are in need of restraint. We counsel the secretary (of agriculture) to request an audit of the Farmers Home Administration.

"We find it desirable to lay before the Congress a 1982 budget which is $5 billion (or 15 percent) less than the projected budget of the Carter administration.

"We counsel against major reorganization, either interdepartmental or within the department.

"Priority attention should be given to: personnel changes, departmental budget, recommendations for the Agricultural Act of 1981, trade policy issues, strong agricultural representation on the staff of the Council of Economic Advisors.

"The department should address itself to these long-range problems and opportunities: issues regarding natural resources, re-emphasis on science and technology, the maintenance of diversity in the structure of agriculture, restoring a sound nutrition emphasis to food programs, the geopolitical application of our agricultural productivity.

Among the short-term problems for the new administration will be changes in department personnel. Those "should be made early," the report said.

How we improved the 1980 Rabbit Diesel:

Introducing the 1981 Rabbit Diesel.

We never seem to just let well enough alone. Our 1981 model actually has an engine that's even bigger than last year's. Which means you'll get a more powerful car, with better acceleration and passing power. Plus the kind of astonishing mileage and superb comfort our Rabbit tempted you with last year. In fact, EPA estimated 42 mpg, 56 mpg highway estimate. (Use estimated mpg for comparison. Mileage varies with speed, trip length, weather. Actual highway mpg will probably be less.)

Buy your 1981 Rabbit Diesel now without the usual waiting list. Volkswagen has given us a few extra diesels for December. We have all models in stock ready for delivery.

ATTENTION

Joe Pecheles Volkswagen, Inc. is pleased to announce the installation of the very latest Hunter Computer 4 Wheel Alignment Machine. This machine checks the thrust line of the automobile which is the way the automobile is travelling down the road. The straighter the auto travels down the road, the less wind resistance and the better the gas mileage. We will check all 4 wheels for alignment and adjust front alignment for $18.00. Call Service Department for an appointment.

Merit 100's Win Big In Tests.

Low tar/good taste combination scores impressive
3 to 1 victory over leading high tar 100's.

There's a low tar cigarette that's challenging high tar smoking—and winning.

The cigarette: MERIT 100's.

More MERIT Proof

Latest research provides solid evidence that MERIT 100's is a satisfying alternative to high tar smoking.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT 100's equal to—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT 100's low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT 100's, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and report MERIT 100's is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT 100's is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.
