

Unemployment Dips As Wholesale Prices Climb

By GLENN RITT

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate dipped a notch to 7.5 percent in November while wholesale prices rose 0.6 percent, down from October's 0.8 percent increase, the government said today.

MORE WORKING — The unemployment rate edged down from 7.6 percent to 7.5 percent in November, the Labor Dept. reported today. The jobless rate has shown little change since May, wavering between 7.6 percent and 7.5 percent. (AP Laserphoto Chart)

Despite the overall, slower rate of inflation last month, gasoline prices increased for the first time in six months and food prices continued their substantial climb, the Labor Department said.

Last month's price increase translates to a seasonally adjusted 7.9 percent compound annual rate of inflation, the department said. However, for the first 11 months of 1980, wholesale — or producer — prices rose at a 10.1 percent yearly clip. Unemployment, meanwhile, declined from the 7.6 percent rate registered in October, as the number of people holding jobs grew by 220,000, the labor department said in a separate report.

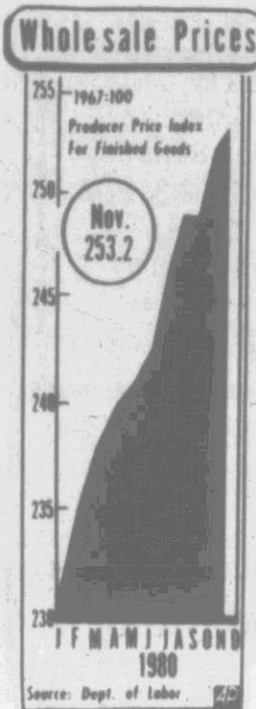

The jobless rate has remained fairly static since May, when the recession caused it to soar to 7.8 percent.

A Labor Department economist attributed last month's slower price rise entirely to automobiles and trucks.

"There's still a lot of inflationary pressure," said Craig Howell. "The prices of intermediate goods such as steel, chemicals and plastics are rising and this is worrisome."

The cost of those products will increase prices of finished wholesale goods, and these, in turn, will be passed on eventually to consumers, he noted.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index measures three levels: finished goods, intermediate items and raw materials.

PRICES — The Labor Department announced today the Producer Price Index, before seasonal adjustments, stood at 253.2 for November. That means a marketbasket of goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 sold for $253.20 in October. (AP Laserphoto Chart)

The department reported that:

— Food prices rose 0.5 percent last month, the same as in October. Most economists expect this rate to pick up in coming months, the result of a long-term grain shortage. The largest advances in November were for pork, cereal, bakery products, dairy goods, fresh fruits and vegetables.

Prices for beef and veal declined due to a large slaughter by farmers who chose not to feed cattle such high-priced grain. Poultry prices also fell.

— All energy prices at the finished goods level advanced 1.3 percent, after falling 0.4 percent in both September and October. Gasoline prices jumped 1.7 percent after declining for five straight months. Home heating oil costs rose 0.9 percent following two months of small decreases.

— Automobile prices rose only 0.7 percent last month, far less than the 3.4 percent increase in October when 1981 models were introduced.

The department's Producer Price Index, before seasonal adjustment, stood at 253.2 last month. That means that a marketbasket of goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 sold for $253.20 in October.

The price of all intermediate, or semi-finished goods, climbed 1 percent last month, about the same as in October and substantially more than September's 0.6 percent rise.

Raw goods prices accelerated 1.1 percent after going up 1.9 percent the month before, the department said.

"The November data provide further evidence of the gradual improvement that has been in effect since late summer," said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"Both payroll and household surveys registered employment gains in November and the factory work week continued to rise," she said.

Could Invite Soviet Role

By ROLAND PRINZ

Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland would have the right to request Soviet bloc assistance if authority slips "into the hands of anti-socialist elements," a top Polish official said. The Kremlin accused the West of whipping up tension in Poland, and the Carter administration advocated restraint on all sides.

Jozef Klasa, head of the media department of the Polish Communist Party's Central Committee, told reporters who asked him Thursday about the possibility of Soviet intervention to end Poland's rising labor turmoil.

"I think such endangering would occur only when authority would slip from the hands of democracy into the hands of anti-socialist elements. Then Polish communists would have the right and duty to ask for assistance from the communists of other countries."

Klasa said, however, it would be imprudent to apply military force to solve Poland's problems. He said he believed Poland's communists, with the help of the rest of the nation, would solve the crisis on their own and find a solution with "no other than a social program."

The crisis began with 8 wave of summer strikes and escalated after the government agreed to allow unions to form independent of Communist Party control for the first time ever in the Soviet bloc. Since then there have been rumors of Soviet troops intervening like they did to crush the liberalization in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Klasa tried to defuse such rumors and charged the Western news media with "purposely" inciting Polish public opinion with accounts of a Soviet troop buildup on Poland's eastern and western borders, and seeking "a division inside socialist countries."

The Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow reacted to President Carter's recent claim of an "unprecedented buildup" on the Polish frontier by declaring that Western speculation was aimed at "exacerbating the situation in Poland."

Soviet television accused Carter, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and other U.S. and Western European military officials of waging "a real psychological war" against Poland.

"Passions are pressurized with the open purpose of deepening tension in Polish society and to prevent the process of making it healthy on a socialist basis," a Soviet TV commentator said.

Barnhill Is Named To County Board

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer
R. Kelly Barnhill of Greenville, was appointed by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners yesterday to fill the unexpired term of Ed Warren, who resigned from the board November 26.

Barnhill was named to fill the vacancy at a 4 p.m. meeting held by commissioners to consult with members of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee. He took the oath of office about 30 minutes after his appointment.

Under state law, a vacancy on the board must be filled by a member of the same party and a resident of the same district as the former member. Commissioners must also consult with the executive committee of the same political party as the board member to be replaced, but are not bound by the committee's recommendation.

George Saleeby, Pitt Democratic Party chairman, told the commissioners that the executive committee, at a Monday night meeting, voted to recommend Dr. Tom Johnson as Warren's replacement. Although Barnhill and Mrs. Ruth Trevathan were considered by the committee, Saleeby said, the committee voted to recommend Johnson — a precinct chairman and thus a member of the executive committee — because of his active support of the party.

"I would be disappointed if the commissioners didn't go along with the recommendation. We do not need to divide the Pitt County Democratic Party," Saleeby emphasized. The party chairman suggested that if Johnson — a professor at East Carolina University for 23 years — were appointed, "it would make it easy for you as commissioners."

After commissioner Burney Tucker said, "We've had a lot of people to call us and a lot of pressure," for various candidates, and commissioner R. L. Martin said, "The buck stops here," commissioner Charles Gaskins concluded, "We'll have to live with the decision. Not you."

"The law says the Board of County Commissioners has to make the appointment. Therefore, they are going to have to stand behind the person they appoint."

"In my opinion, Kelly Barnhill will make a better county commissioner than other people" who have been recommended.

Gaskins then nominated Barnhill and the vote for his appointment was unanimous.

Following the vote, Saleeby, saying, "I'm not mad," told commissioners, "I'm highly disappointed in you all's action today. I'm deeply disappointed on behalf of the Democratic Executive Committee."

Barnhill, 41, is a Greenville native and president of Hendrix-Barnhill Co., a farm equipment sales and service and water and sewer construction firm.

A 1958 graduate of J. H. Rose High School, he attended East Carolina University for a year, was prevented from accepting an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy because of a broken neck, and attended N.C. State University for four years.

After leaving N.C. State in 1963, Barnhill worked for Carolina Sales Corp. here and for Honeywell in South Carolina before returning to Greenville in 1967 and Hendrix-Barnhill Co.

A former Jaycee, he is past president of the University City Kiwanis Club, president of the North State Little League, chairman of the National Dealer's Council for Allis-Chalmers Farm Equipment Dealers, past president of the Carolina Farm and Power Equipment Dealers' Association, past president of the North Carolina Irrigation Society, a member of the board of directors of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, was chairman of the First

Wilmington 10 Verdict Overturned By Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Citing several flaws in their trial, a federal appeals court on Thursday overturned the 1972 firebombing convictions of the Wilmington 10 — nine black men and one white woman who had won international support in their bid for pardons.

The reversal was ordered by a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., which had before it a brief signed by 55 congressmen earlier this year supporting the Wilmington 10's contentions that their trial was "replete with prejudice and error."

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said late Thursday he would seek a review by the full appellate court and possibly by the U.S. Supreme Court. He gave no indication, however, whether new trials would be ordered for the group.

The "10," led by the Rev. Ben Chavis of the United Church of Christ's Commission for Racial Justice, were convicted in 1972 on charges connected with the firebombing of Mike's Grocery — a white-owned neighborhood store on the fringes of a black community ravaged by fear and violence during racial turmoil in Wilmington in January and February of 1971.

Chavis, then a field organizer for the commission, had worked with black students during a boycott of the Wilmington high school. He is now director of the Commission for Racial Justice office in Washington.

All of the people involved in the ruling Thursday have been paroled from prison — nine of them as the result of (Please turn to Page 8)

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

WOOD HEATER APPEAL

Susan Lehman of Pitt County Department of Social Services has asked Hotline to appeal for a wood heater for a family with whom she's working. "The one they have doesn't really have a top," she said. "There's just a sheet of metal lying across it and the pipe doesn't fit into it correctly. It's one of those thin skinned ones that's only meant to last a year or so, yet it's already been used several years. I fear for them and their small children."

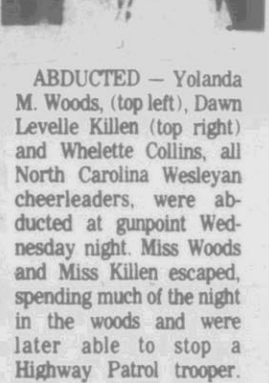

Anyone who can help is asked to call Ms. Lehman at 758-2167 as soon as possible.

ADOPT A BOARDING HOME

Pitt County Social Services has asked Hotline to appeal to readers to "adopt a boarding home for Christmas."

Beverly Wheeler of Pitt Co. DSS suggested that organizations consider providing gifts such as small articles of clothing and personal items to elderly and/or disabled residents of boarding homes in the county — perhaps on a one-club-to-one-home basis. Many of the residents do not have anyone to remember them at Christmas, she said. The number of residents range from five to 10 persons, usually, she said.

It seems best, she said, for whole home to be adopted at once, rather than for individuals within the homes to be, so no one feels slighted. Anyone who can help is asked to call Mrs. Wheeler as soon as possible at 758-2167.

ABDUCTED — Yolanda M. Woods, (top left), Dawn Leveille Killen (top right) and Whelette Collins, all North Carolina Wesleyan cheerleaders, were abducted at gunpoint Wednesday night. Miss Woods and Miss Killen escaped, spending much of the night in the woods and were later able to stop a Highway Patrol trooper.

Abducted Cheerleader Slain; 2 Girls Escape

WELDON, N.C. (AP) — A cheerleader abducted from the North Carolina Wesleyan College campus was found in a watery grave Thursday, her head crushed by a heavy blow and her feet implanted in a cinder block.

Two other cheerleaders kidnapped with her Wednesday night escaped from their captor after hitting him on the head with a tire tool and then led officers to the abandoned rock quarry where their companion's nude body was found.

Kermit Smith, 23, of Roanoke Rapids was arrested at the pit by Halifax County Sheriff William C. Bailey. Smith, charged with rape, robbery and murder, was scheduled to appear in Halifax County District Court today.

Bailey said the body of Whelette Collins, 20, of Rocky Mount was recovered from the pond by a rescue squad.

She and the other two cheerleaders, Yolanda M. Woods of Baltimore, Md., and Dawn Lavelle Killen of Somderdale, N.J., both 19, were abducted Wednesday night as they returned to their dormitory after a junior varsity basketball game at the Rocky Mount college, Bailey said.

Miss Woods and Miss Killen told officers they were forced at gunpoint into the trunk of a car. They said Miss Collins was placed in the front seat of the car with their abductor.

After arriving at the quarry, Miss Woods said the trunk lid was raised briefly and slammed shut. While they waited in the trunk, the cheerleaders hid a tire tool in a blanket they found in the compartment.

Later, the gunman returned and ordered them out of the trunk. The women took the blanket — and the tire tool — with them.

The man told them, "I want one of you to come with me," Miss Woods said. "I knew he meant me, and I hit him" with the tire tool.

The man reeled away from the car at first but then turned on the two women with a pistol, forcing Miss Woods to give up the tire tool.

Desperate, the two women "decided to rush him, and we tackled him," Miss Woods said. They bit him on the hand and the man dropped the gun.

"I got the gun and put my finger on the trigger and pulled the trigger. That's when I found out (the pistol) was a blank," Miss Woods said.

Bailey confirmed that a pistol found in his investigation would fire only blanks.

Miss Woods and Miss Killen ran into a nearby wooded area and spent the rest of the night there. At dawn, they made their way through dense brush about two miles to Interstate 95, where they stopped a Highway Patrol trooper.

Bailey said he and the trooper arrived at the quarry a short time later. Smith was driving away as he arrived, Bailey said.

Bailey said Smith's jacket and shirt as well as the interior of his car were soaked with blood.

'Old Flame's' Legacy Scars Troubled Wife

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am in a nightmarish mess! I'm a 27-year-old married woman expecting my first baby next month. I love my husband and he loves me, but I cannot keep this baby because it isn't my husband's.

Two months before we were married I went out with an old flame. I got drunk and he took advantage of me, and I know this baby is his. My husband and I didn't have relations until after we were married, and my doctor tells me I am eight months along, instead of six as I had hoped.

Abby, I don't want this baby. I can't keep it. I told my husband the truth. He says he still loves me, but he can't love the baby knowing it's not his. Please don't think I'm an animal, but I want to give this baby up for adoption. I'm sure there are lots of people who would love to have it. I simply can't bear the thought of raising this child. What if it looks like my old boyfriend? Don't try to talk me into keeping it. Just tell me where to go to have it adopted, and may God forgive me.

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: You don't say where you live, but there must be an adoption agency near you. Your Family Service Association can help you. So can your doctor. Or contact Birthright. If you don't get immediate satisfaction from any of the above suggestions, write again and include your name and address. I promise an immediate response and absolute confidentiality.

DEAR ABBY: My 15½-year-old grandson is nearly 6 feet tall and looks like a full-grown man, but he has two years of high school left. I'll call him Billy. Billy has always been a good boy and never gave his mother (my daughter) any trouble. Now it turns out that Billy has been seeing a friend of his mother's. She's a 30-year-old divorcee with two children. She claims she's 4 months pregnant with Billy's child!

My daughter says that this divorcee has had several affairs with other high school boys, but she's blaming this pregnancy on Billy. He admitted he had been skipping his first class at school every day and going up to this woman's place to have sex with her. He says he will quit school and marry her if that's what she wants. Abby, he is only a child himself, and this would ruin his life.

I know there's a law against having sex with a minor girl. How about sex with a minor boy? Can't this woman go to jail? And isn't there some way to find out if the baby is really Billy's?

Can you see a way out of this mess? And how can I help Billy?

BILLY'S NAMAW

DEAR NAMAW: Having sex with a minor — girl or boy — is punishable by law. Billy needs legal advice and counsel. The best present you can give your grandson is a competent lawyer to represent him.

DEAR ABBY: When I read letters in your column from people in their 80s claiming that they were still enjoying sex, I was skeptical. However, I changed my mind after the following incident:

I invited my older brother to visit me in Nevada the week of his 88th birthday so we could celebrate. This brother, who's a farmer in Minnesota, has been a widower for 25 years, but he's led a very active life. He had a pacemaker put in a few years ago, but it hasn't slowed him down one bit. He still farms, and bowls on two teams.

My brother phoned to tell me he'd be a few days late because he had to stop off at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn., for a day or so, but not to worry as it was nothing serious.

When he arrived we celebrated his 88th birthday in fine fashion at a family gathering. We were all in good spirits, and I might add the spirits were in us, too.

I took my brother aside and jokingly asked him when he last experienced sex. Without batting an eye, he said, "Just before I came here. That's why I was late. I met a widow I knew in the bowling alley and she asked me to drive her home. On the way, I drove off the road into a pasture and we climbed in the back seat. That's when I pulled the wires loose in my pacemaker and had to go to St. Mary's for a new one."

True? I'm sure it was. His first experience was with his school teacher when he was 14.

Life As It's Lived

Raising Second Child Is Not Like The First Try

By GAIL MICHAELS

Rumor has it that the second child is easier to raise than the first. I have my suspicions that this is another one of those goodies circulated by the "Ask me about my grandchildren" bumper sticker set. But no matter who is responsible for it, I'm here to state that it's not true.

I don't deny that in the process of raising the first child, you learn a few valuable lessons. One of these is that if the kid isn't crying, keep your distance. I used to believe that Meg was incapable of health or happiness without benefit of my body heat. I had to check on her every 5 minutes when she wasn't in my arms. If I awoke to find that she had slept through the night, I sped to her room in a frenzied state of apprehension.

I don't do this with Zachary. The only way I'd risk checking on him would be in case of fire or earthquake.

But on the whole, I make it just as hard on myself as I did when Meg was an infant. In fact, in some ways it's harder because the second pregnancy brings on premature senility. By the time Zachary arrived, I had experienced significant memory loss which deprived me of even those bits of trivia I had picked up from my extensive reading on baby care before Meg was born. I even had to have a bath demonstration in the hospital.

My memory didn't improve after I got home. For instance, after Meg's arrival I was so eager to get back what I euphemistically called my figure that I wouldn't have given up my nightly knee-bends for anything less important than an early scoop on who shot J.R. But the only time I've remembered to exercise since Zachary was born was the two nights after I went to the obstetrician for my 8 weeks check-up and the woman seated next to me asked me when my baby was due.

Of course, I don't blame all my problems on an elusive mental condition. I blame some of them on Meg. When she was a baby, I did everything I could to avoid restricting her learning environment. I child-proofed the house and let her explore freely. Unfortunately, there's no way to child-proof the house for her little brother unless I get rid of her. When my father asked me not too long ago if Zachary could crawl yet, I looked over at the poor child chewing a rail on his playpen and answered, "I don't know."

I don't even have any relief from the medical worries which kept me in a permanent state of anxiety during Meg's infancy. I had always heard (probably from my mother) that I would be better equipped to diagnose a second child's physical problems without running to the doctor everytime the baby coughed.

But when Zachary started shaking his head in a peculiar manner one Saturday afternoon and I couldn't get in touch with his doctor, I found it difficult to relax.

"The poor child has probably got an ear infection, and he'll have to suffer until Monday," I moaned.

Phillip was pacing the floor. "Well, he doesn't have a fever and he isn't screaming with pain so it might not be his ears."

"What else could it be?" "Neurological damage."

By Sunday morning both a low-grade fever and general fussiness had developed, and we didn't know whether to be relieved or dismayed. The doctor, whom we finally located, checked him thoroughly, lingering for a moment over his mouth.

"What's his problem?" I asked anxiously.

The doctor looked grave. "He's cutting teeth."

They will light an estimated 6,000 candle luminaires across the campus as a special holiday offering for residents of Greensboro and the Piedmont.

This will mark the 11th year the UNC-G students have presented the annual display.

The ninth annual candlelight Christmas tour of historic Oakwood, Raleigh, will be held Dec. 13-14 from 1-7 p.m. The entire neighborhood will gather fresh greenery and fruits to recreate the traditional decorations of yesteryear.

A Christmas tour of homes, sponsored by Kinston High School, will take place Dec. 11 from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. In addition to the homes, there will be a Christmas shop on the corner of Pawnee and Eleanor that will be selling handmade decorations and gifts as well as fresh wreaths and roping. For information contact the Kinston High School office.

Nine homes decorated for the holiday season will be open to the public on the Chapel Hill Preservation Society's fourth annual Christmas candlelight tour of the historic district Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 13-14, from 4-8 p.m.

Jewelry fashions, facts, fictions

GEMS OF THE MONTH

The reasons why particular gemstones were assigned as birthstones to each month of the year remain a mystery. There may not be any satisfying explanation. One conjecture is that whoever was responsible for the assignments wanted everyone covered by adequate talismanic powers (as I discussed in my last two articles). If a gem was short on power, a second was added. Therefore, some months carried more than one birthstone.

A number of birthstone lists sprang up over the centuries, so to eliminate the confusion the National Association of Jewelers drew up an official list in 1912. Over the past 25 years the Jewelry Industry Council, Jewelers of America and the American Gem Society have modified the list. The following is the current official list recognized by these top jewelry trade associations:

January - garnet
February - amethyst
March - bloodstone or aquamarine
April - diamond
May - emerald
June - pearl, moonstone or alexandrite
July - ruby
August - peridot or sardonyx
September - sapphire
October - opal or tourmaline
November - topaz or citrine
December - turquoise or zircon

If you would like to know more about any of these gemstones, our store passes out brochures on them free of charge. These brochures are published by the American Gem Society for increased consumer knowledge.

Staggered Sales Begin

Next year the state will begin its long-awaited transition to year-round staggered motor vehicle registration.

Instead of the annual stand in long lines during the month of January and early February, vehicle owners will see their licenses expire at various times during the year.

To make it work, vehicle owners will purchase license plates for varying lengths of time from eight months to 19 months. The cost will be pro rated according to the number of months involved.

Then when the licenses expire the owners will fall in the months assigned to their last name initial: Aug. A-B, Sept. C-D; Oct., E-G; Nov. H-I; Jan., 1982 J-K; March, L-M; April, N-R; May S-T and July U-Z.

There will, of course, be some confusion and some will have to come up with more money to purchase their tags in 1982. That will balance out in the long run, however, and we will have a much more efficient system for license plate distribution.

Energy Efficiency Ahead

We never know when we are seeing a technological revolution.

The Wright Brothers flight at Kitty Hawk was little appreciated at the time it was made.

Today a flight by a 175-pound plane powered by electricity which solar cells generated creates more attention, but still is only a curiosity.

It may led to nothing, of course, but eventually such developments will lead to new ways to use our energy sources more efficiently.

Growth Has Cost

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One of the most difficult questions for a community to answer is whether economic growth is something which the people who live there really want.

A great deal is usually said about the benefits of a new industrial operation, or the expansion of an existing one. Those benefits are most often measured in total investment by the company, and new jobs created.

and in many North Carolina communities industries are benefitting from industrial revenue bonds which provide government-sponsored low interest loans. That method is costing a loss to government — which must be made up by other taxpayers — because the bonds are not taxed by either state or local governments, and is costing private financial institutions the income they might have ty, explains it, a poultry firm with increased output would buy more chickens from farmers who would buy more feed, seed, and fertilizer, and hire some more people who would buy groceries, clothes, cars, houses, and use the services of doctors and lawyers .. and so on. The firm itself would also be buying other commodities and services.

Each $1,000 increase, moving through the producer chain reaction, would generate $1,660 in producer and consumer spending. A similar increase in tobacco output would produce $2,239; in food processing, $2,176; in textiles, $1,472; in lumber and wood, $2,287; and in non-electrical machinery, $1,513.

Further study continues to evaluate other factors, including impact on governmental revenues and costs of public services.

gotten from standard loans for construction.

Then there are other costs such as congestion and environmental damage.

What about benefits to balance against those costs? It has been obvious for a long while that investment and jobs created are not clear measurements. Now, however, a pilot project is being carried out in Wilkes County to try and pin down actual benefits and costs related to economic growth.

Preliminary work with the study by economists at N.C. State University has produced some detailed analysis of what is termed the "Producer chain reaction."

Output

The key measurements are created from "output", which is the increased sale of goods produced by the new or expanded industry.

As an example explored in detail in the November issue of "Tar Heel Economist", published by State University,

Other Costs

Higher prices for houses is another cost of growth; at least for those seeking to buy one of the higher-priced homes. For those selling and for the real estate business, this is not considered a cost.

A cost for those operating existing businesses in a community may result from the new industry paying higher wages. The existing firm must raise its pay to meet the labor market demands, and this factor is often seen as a major one in local resistance to industrial growth.

Another local cost — even more difficult to define — is the loss to local or state tax coffers from incentives which may be given to attract economic growth. In some places, lower property tax rates and other favorable treatment may be extended,

Public opinion polls tell us that we Americans have lost confidence in our democratic institutions and faith in our future. But many are confident we will recover from our present "down" period.

The figures show how "bad" things are. Yet other less publicized facts give us reassurance that we still have a lot of good things going for us.

Last year Americans shelled out nearly $40 billion in voluntary contributions to a variety of causes — from the Arthritis Foundation to the United Way. We are still a generous people willing to help those who are less fortunate.

Many Americans have retained their spiritual faith. There seems to be a revival of support of churches of all denominations. Much of that support comes from young people.

The general health and life expectancy of Americans improve each year. In 1960 we had 8,000 new doctors, while this past year we graduated 18,000 new physicians.

More Americans are showing confidence in their future by attending institutions of higher learning. The vital ingredients of American strength are still alive and well.

A recent national poll stated that the vast majority of our people believe in the soundness of our political system. So, maybe we should step back and take stock of what's good about America.

Our youth have some exciting opportunities awaiting them. We are just now entering into the electronic, computer and space age. Innovation abounds in agriculture. Since the 18-year-olds of today were born, man has walked on the moon. Twenty-five percent of the items we buy in our stores were not there when they entered this world.

If we will work and put faith in the good — and, yes — in the "square" things which built America, we can make the world a better place before we leave it.

Strength For Today

NEVER CAUGHT

A man engaged in making out a questionnaire recently encountered the query, "Were you ever in jail?" He answered that he never had been. The next question was "Why?" — intended, of course, for those who had been incarcerated. The man had a sense of humor and wrote, "I was never caught".

Most people, at some time in their lives, could be sent to jail for something. There are obsolete laws on the statute books of every state which could condemn to jail nearly everyone living by today's standards. Furthermore, people often inadvertently break laws, particularly traffic violations.

The old story of the man who sees a criminal being led to execution and who says, "There but for the grace of God go I," has a great deal of truth in it. A few untoward circumstances ten, twenty, fifty years ago might have put many of us in the class of serious malefactors.

Religion attributes this escape not only to changes in the law but to the grace of God, as well. — Elisha Douglass

TWO OF HIS IMPORTANT AIDES!

BY ART BUCHWALD

Everybody Is Helpful

WASHINGTON — According to the reports I hear, the Carter appointees and the new Reagan people are working smoothly to make the transition. You don't find the bitterness which has been present during the changeovers of other administrations. In many cases, the Carter people even seem happy to turn over the reigns of government to the Reaganites.

I dropped in on one of the departments where a Carter appointee was briefing a Reagan lieutenant on what to expect.

The Carter person said, "Now in this blue metal file cabinet here and look up 'Cost of laying new tracks for Super Train.'"

"Good, I'll go through them this afternoon."

"They cover everything from buses, to subways, to railroads, to movable sidewalks. If it transports people — we've made a study of it."

"Excellent. What are in

those six green cabinets over there?"

"The reasons why we can't build them. Let me show you how the system works. Let's say you were planning to build a 165-mile-an-hour train for the Northeast corridor of the United States. You would look up 'Super Train' in the blue cabinet. We have photos of Japanese trains, French trains, German trains and Swiss trains, as well as plans for each of those systems."

"They all look beautiful," the Reagan man said.

"Now we go over to this green file cabinet and look up 'Super Train.' This photo shows you what would happen if you tried to go 165 miles an hour on an American track bed."

The Reagan man said, "It looks like the train has crashed into a garbage dump somewhere in Philadelphia."

"It's actually Baltimore.

Our engineers have figured out that, at 165 miles an hour, the Super Train would fly off the tracks in Philadelphia and land just about here in Maryland, unless it smashed into a freight train in Washington first."

"How would I find the answer to that problem?"

"You go to this green file cabinet here and look up 'Cost of laying new tracks for Super Train.'"

"Twelve billion dollars!" the Reagan man exclaimed.

"That doesn't include switching equipment and computers. When you have a train going that fast, you have to keep the tracks clear at all times, because it can't stop if it sees something ahead. In order to make sure that it is safe, you would have to build electric gates at all the railroad crossings, which we figure will cost another $6 billion."

"I guess we better forget about the Super Train. What other ideas are in the files?"

"We have an excellent plan for busing."

"Gov. Reagan is against busing."

"This would not be used for busing schoolchildren; it would be used for busing people to work. Here is a prototype of a new air-conditioned vehicle that would seat 80 people and have room for 60 standees."

"That makes a lot of sense. What's wrong with it?"

"To make it pay for itself, it would cost $4 per person for a two-mile ride. The cities won't buy them unless we give them $1 billion in supplemental payments."

"That's ridiculous. What about monorails? Gov. Reagan was very impressed with the monorail he saw at Disneyland."

"I think the monorail folder is over here. Yes, here it is. A

An Electoral College 'Nay'

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — If a nationwide referendum were being held today, a large majority of the electorate would vote in favor of a constitutional amendment that would replace the Electoral College with direct popular election of presidents.

In a Gallup Poll conducted shortly after this year's election, two persons in three approved of such an amendment. Similar majorities have backed such a plan in five surveys dating back to 1966. The greatest support was recorded in a survey after the 1968 election, when Richard Nixon defeated Hubert Humphrey in one of the closest elections in history. In that survey, eight persons in 10 called for the elimination of the Electoral College.

In the latest survey, 67 percent give their endorsement to the proposed constitutional amendment that would base the election of presidents on the popular vote, abolishing the Electoral College system that was written into the Constitution in 1787. Only one person in five, 19 percent, opposes such a change; 14 percent are undecided.

Although Ronald Reagan's decisive victory Nov. 4 made elimination of the Electoral College seem less urgent for some people, John Anderson's independent candidacy and the closeness of the race between President Jimmy Carter and GOP candidate Reagan earlier in the campaign made it a distinct possibility that neither of the two major-party contenders would receive an electoral vote majority, in which case the House of Representatives would have decided the winner.

As it turned out, Reagan won 51 percent of the popular vote to 41 percent for Carter and 7 percent for Anderson. This translated into a lop-sided electoral vote of 489 for Reagan to 49 for Carter.

Heavy support for a constitutional amendment to replace the Electoral College with direct popular elections is found in every major population group, including Republicans, Democrats and political independents. However, substantially more Republicans (28 percent) than Democrats (16 percent) oppose elimination of the Electoral College, perhaps reflecting GOP satisfaction with a system that delivered such a resounding victory to their candidate.

This question has been asked since 1966 to determine attitudes toward the change:

"Would you approve or disapprove of an amendment to the Constitution which would do away with the Electoral College and base the election of a president on the total vote cast throughout the nation?"

Here is the trend and the latest results:

The present system of voting for electors who in turn vote for their preferred candidate is the result of a compromise reached when the Constitution was written in 1787.

It's What You Have To Spend

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "It isn't how much money there is in the family," said the Beacon Hill matron who lived threadbare in her brownstone on a monthly dole from the family trust. "It's what you have to spend."

Many Americans are finding the statement now applies to them. And since it does, it could hurt retail sales and other businesses over the next few months. Americans have lots of assets, but can they use them?

And, since paychecks are losing in the contest with inflation, will they be in the mood to use their assets.

It is estimated, for example, that between the end of the first and third quarters of the year, consumer holdings of corporate stocks rose more than $260 billion, and the market value of houses $190 billion.

Even if you discount for inflation, say economists at Goldman Sachs, the securities house, Americans in that period increased their real financial assets, including homes, by $146 billion to $2.16 trillion.

When you look at where the assets are, however, you wonder how easy it is to tap those assets, even if some analysts consider consumers today to be more liquid than they were back in the recession of 1973-1975.

Besides houses and stocks, sizable assets are tied up in savings certificates, on which costly penalties are incurred if redeemed before maturity, and in short-term and long-term Treasury securities.

While in theory most of these assets can be converted to cash, the realities are different, especially in regard to housing.

During the 1970s, for example, many thousands learned to tap their home equity by refinancing. They considered it a good deal if they could withdraw $35,000 for education or automobile expenses even if it meant adding two percentage points to the interest on their mortgage.

Times are different now. To reopen a mortgage might mean an additional 6 percentage points, to say nothing of up-front "point" payments of maybe $1,500 or $2,000 and a $150 filing fee.

So-called equity loans — second mortgages — are now widely advertised as a solution to that problem because they allow the first mortgage to remain untouched. But equity loans may cost nearly 20 percent.

Stocks are more liquid, but again the theory is more understandable than implementable. How many people seek to sell stocks when the market is rising? Few, unfortunately. That's why markets rise.

Even if the temptation is there, it can be resisted. Past experience has shown that consumer resistance can be high when funds are being considered for big ticket items such as furniture and automobiles.

Such items are postponable, as one survey after another has shown. In almost every instance those interviewed say that in a pinch they could cut back significantly for travel, furnishings and automobiles.

And that's why the matter of whether Americans are liquid or illiquid must be considered in making any predictions about improved retail sales over the next few months.

Generally speaking, when household assets rise, as they have in recent months, consumers begin to feel more confident, and confidence is often followed by a buying spree.

But when you consider how difficult it is to get hold of those funds, and so expensive too, you wonder if people aren't just going to postpone purchases. Especially when inflation is shrinking paychecks.

Big Observatory Marks Its 150th Anniversary

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the nation's oldest scientific institutions, the U.S. Naval Observatory, celebrates its 150th anniversary this week with one eye on the stars and the other on the future.

Located on a small hill along Washington's Embassy Row, the observatory run provides navigators with the most precise information possible on the movements of the sun, planets and stars. The information is vital to determine location and to set a course.

Observations being made continually through special transit telescopes at the observatory are used to keep the positions of the stars up to date, to precisely predict their future locations and to measure variations in the rotation of the earth.

"We expect that with the new technology ... the next decade will see many improvements in detecting stars and planets, understanding the motions of objects in the solar system and the rotation of Earth," said Dr. Gert Westerhout, scientific director of the observatory.

The Naval Observatory also operates what it touts as "the world's most accurate atomic clock." It provides reliable time used for many military operations and is also used to synchronize clocks for use in navigation and astronomical research.

It was the need for accurate timekeeping that gave birth to the facility in the first place. The U.S. Navy of 1830 was facing accuracy problems with shipboard chronometers, which keep track of time at the home port. By comparing that with the local time, a navigator can calculate longitude.

These clocks must be accurate, because an error of only a couple of minutes can result in a miscalculation of several miles in location.

So the navy created a Depot of Charts and Instruments to check the chronometers in use and determine their accuracy. The navy turned to the most accurate system available, measuring the movement of the stars and planets.

well enough informed to make an intelligent judgment and by those who feared the public would vote disproportionately for favorite-son candidates. Election by the Congress was rejected because it was felt such a procedure would compromise presidential independence from congressional pressure.

Similarly, election by the state legislatures was opposed because it was felt an indebted president would be unable to resist state usurpation of federal authority. The Electoral College, which gives each state one electoral vote for each member in Congress, was finally adopted to accommodate all factions, but since 1797 hardly a year has passed without a plan to change the Electoral College.

Scorecard In Abscam Cases

NEW YORK (AP)—Here is the status of the cases of the seven members of Congress indicted in connection with the FBI's Abscam probe:

—Rep. John Jenrette, D-S.C.: convicted Oct. 7; appealing on entrapment grounds; defeated in re-election bid; House Ethics Committee found Wednesday that he violated congressional rules; hearings set for next week but current session likely to end by then.

—Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla.: lost in primary; trial in Washington, D.C., begins today; says he took the bribe money as part of his own probe of the corruptors, who were actually undercover FBI agents.

—Rep. Raymond Lederer, D-Pa.: slated for Jan. 5 trial in Brooklyn; only House member indicted in Abscam probe to win re-election.

—Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., heads Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee; defeated in re-election bid; convicted Wednesday with Thompson on conspiracy charge but acquitted on more serious bribery count; also convicted of conflict of interest and accepting an unlawful gratuity; plans appeal.

—Former Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa.: convicted Aug. 30 on bribery-conspiracy charges; expelled from Congress; defeated in bid to regain seat; awaits due-process hearing on whether government entrapped him; appealing jury verdict.

—Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., chairman of Administration Committee; convicted Wednesday of conspiracy, bribery and aiding and abetting in the acceptance of a criminal gratuity; said he will appeal and awaits due process hearing in February; blamed Abscam for re-election defeat.

—Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J.; trial tentatively set for mid-February but more likely will open March or April; numerous pre-trial motions seeking indictment dismissal; says he is innocent; term ends in 1982.

Robbery Investigated

Greenville Police are continuing their investigation into a robbery at the Stop-N-Go on Hooker Road, at the Arlington Boulevard intersection, that occurred about 3:10 p.m. yesterday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said employees had placed a bag containing a bank deposit on the counter, when four people entered the building. While the employee was assisting a customer, one of the four took the bag and left.

The chief said the bag contained about $500.

GROUP CLEARED

MIAMI (AP)—A group of Cuban-Americans who chartered a freighter that brought 731 relatives and friends to the U.S. in the "Freedom Flotilla" have been cleared of federal charges of importing illegal aliens.

Redesigning Of Post Office Parking Lot Wins Approval

U.S. Postal Service authorities have approved proposed changes in the parking lot configuration at the main Post Office on W. Second Street, including a redesign of the entrance and exit facilities.

Postmaster Lloyd Mills confirmed that postal officials in Atlanta, through the Rocky Mount district office, have endorsed the changes, which include the closing of the present Greene Street entrance, construction of a new entrance/exit on Second Street, and widening of the Pitt Street exit for entrance/exit use.

Mills also noted the changes will involve a redesign of the parking lot, changing from the present angle parking arrangement to straight-in or perpendicular parking. The handicapped ramp will also be redesigned, he said.

Ron Sewell, the city's director of engineering, said that the Public Works Department will handle the work, with the postal service paying for the necessary materials.

Sewell pointed out that the new Second Street entrance/exit will be located some 100 feet down from Greene. He said that the change from angle to perpendicular parking should actually add a couple of spaces to the lot and post office customers should have no trouble finding parking space.

According to Sewell, the work is proposed to begin within the next month and take approximately four days to complete.

Efforts to have the changes made in the lot's entrance/exit avenues have been spearheaded by the Downtown Greenville Association, involving the DGA's Parking and Traffic Committee chaired by Clarence Tugwell.

David Mosier, DGA executive director, said that the association appreciated the cooperation exhibited by the postal authorities and the city in working towards the needed improvements.

The present parking lot configuration was adopted by the postal service based on the Thoroughfare Plan approved by the state which called for the addition of a Tar River bridge on Pitt Street, Mills added. Construction of that bridge would have complemented one-way situations on Greene and Pitt Streets and would have made the Greene Street entrance workable.

The present Greene Street entrance conflicts with straight-through traffic on that street, Sewell observed.

The President's Cabinet

One of the most important jobs of a president-elect is choosing a Cabinet. Cabinet members are the men and women who head the executive departments of the federal government. The Constitution does not mention a Cabinet. But President George Washington organized the heads of the executive departments into a group to advise him and help him make decisions. People soon started calling this group the "Cabinet." There were only three executive departments then: state, treasury and war. The attorney general, who did not head an executive department, was also a member of Washington's Cabinet. Ronald Reagan is scheduled to make 13 Cabinet appointments before he takes office.

DO YOU KNOW—What executive department does the attorney general now head?

History Left Poland With Pride In Independence

AP News Special
By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A history of partition and occupation at the hands of Germans, Russians and Austrians has left Poland fiercely proud of its independence and deeply conscious of the sacrifices required to preserve it.

More than any other European people, the Poles have been deeply affected by a history of foreign domination, in particular the partitions of 1772, 1793 and 1795, and the Nazi occupation in World War II which took 7 million Polish lives.

Pride in national independence and honor touches virtually every facet of Polish life, from religion, to history, to arts.

"Poland has not yet perished — as long as we are alive," begins the national anthem, written by Jozef Wybicki as a call to arms after the 1795 partition. "What alien might has seized — let us win back with the sword."

Every Polish child grows up learning the legends of the medieval wars against the Prussians, the unsuccessful uprisings against the Russians in the 1800s, the resistance to the Nazis during World War II.

Some of the nation's greatest artists — such as poet Adam Mickiewicz and pianist Ignacy Paderewski — are remembered as much for their efforts abroad on behalf of Polish independence as for their art.

Streets of downtown Warsaw are filled with small shrines, marked with flowers and Polish flags, commemorating places where resistance fighters and innocent bystanders were slain by German occupation troops.

Even religion is imbued with a sense of nationalism. Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński and other leaders of the Roman Catholic Church never tire of reminding the faithful that the church gave the Poles a sense of individuality during the years of domination by Orthodox Russians and Protestant Germans.

Despite their membership in the Soviet bloc, today's 35 million Poles have been given wide latitude in running their internal affairs since a worker uprising in Poznan in 1956 brought national leader Wladyslaw Gomulka to power.

But Polish nationalism sometimes proves embarrassing to the regime in its relationship with Moscow. The regime does not commemorate the September, 1920, victory by Polish forces over the Soviet Red Army at the gates of Warsaw.

The government also frowns on histories that blame the Soviets for the World War II deaths of thousands of Polish officers whose bodies were found buried in mass graves in the Katyn Forest.

East bloc histories lay blame for the "Katyn massacre" on the Germans, while many Western experts say the evidence remains unclear who was responsible.

Although a Polish kingdom was first established more than 1,000 years ago, a truly independent Poland disappeared from the map of Europe in 1795 and did not reappear until November, 1918, at the end of World War I.

The empires of Russia, Prussia and Austria had carved up what was left of a once-prosperous country, either annexing territory outright or establishing puppet states with limited autonomy.

In 1807, Napoleon I created a puppet state called the Grand Duchy of Warsaw out of the Prussian occupation zone, then enlarged it two years later after defeating the Austrians.

But in January, 1813, Russian troops pursuing Napoleon from Moscow overran the Grand Duchy, killing thousands of Polish troops fighting alongside the French.

Two years later, the Congress of Vienna, which redrew the map of Europe in the wake of Napoleon's downfall, gave part of Poland to Austria and Prussia.

The rest of what had been Poland became the "Congress Kingdom," an impoverished territory which became little more than a Russian province.

In 1863, the Congress Kingdom rose up against the Russians because of plans to draft Poles into the army and deprive small farmers of their land. The Russians crushed the uprising and ended the last vestiges of autonomy.

Polish officials were replaced by Russians and an intense Russification drive began in Polish schools.

After World War I, Poland was re-established under the leadership of Marshal Jozef Pilsudski. The Congress of Versailles endorsed the sovereignty of Poland as part of its policy of granting statehood to the welter of mostly Slavic peoples who had been living under Austro-Hungarian, German or Russian domination.

Dubious On Job Outlook

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The widow of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. says she does not believe that President-elect Ronald Reagan's plan to create jobs will benefit those who need work the most.

Mrs. Coretta Scott King made the comment Thursday while here to perform her "Freedoms Concert" presentation as part of the 25th-anniversary celebration of the Montgomery bus boycott.

Reagan plans to create jobs by rearranging the government's spending and taxing priorities to encourage growth in the private sector, she said. "But I'm very concerned about what is going to happen to the poor people of this country," Mrs. King said.

She said no one has been able to explain to her how long it will take for jobs to trickle down through the private sector to the people who need them.

Mrs. King was an unknown preacher's wife from Marion, Ala., until her late husband led the bus boycott that began on Dec. 5, 1955, four days after police arrested Rosa Parks, a black seamstress, for refusing to give her bus seat to a white man.

TO SPEAK

Sam James, director of orientation and development for the Foreign Mission Board, Va., will speak at Arlington Street Baptist Church Sunday, December 7 at 7 p.m.

The newly created Poland soon found itself in a two-year war with the Soviet Union over border disputes. The fighting ended in 1921 with Poland's borders pushed far to the east, making the Polish army the only one to have ever defeated the Red Army in war.

In 1939, the Germans and the Russians overran Poland again. Thousands of Polish troops escaped to fight abroad with the Allies, distinguishing themselves in campaigns in Italy and the Battle of Britain.

Leftist Polish troops who linked up with the Soviet Army took part in the capture of Berlin in 1945.

At home, underground groups loyal to the rightist exile government in London and the leftist rival regime in Moscow fought German occupation forces.

The resistance culminated in the Warsaw uprising of Aug. 1, 1944, which was crushed by the Germans after some 15,000 Poles had died.

Soviet troops routed the Germans in 1945 and two years later a Communist-dominated Democratic Bloc came to power in national elections. Poland was firmly in the Soviet bloc.

MARKETS HAVE NO MEAT — Inside view of a meat shop in Warsaw shows no meat on the shelves and only some sausages left Wednesday. Soviet military moves in western Russia have some Washington officials worried about the potential for an invasion of Poland by the Red Army. In a written statement President Carter said that any Soviet use of force in Poland would adversely affect U.S. policies toward the Soviet Union. (AP Laserphoto)

CONVICTIONS REVERSED — Damu Smith, a "Wilmington 10" activist, left, meets with Joe Wright, a defendant in the case after hearing that Wright and nine other defendants' 1971 conviction was reversed by a federal appeals court in Richmond, Va. (AP Laserphoto)

Wilmington 10....

an order issued in 1978 by Gov. Jim Hunt, who said then that he agreed with the convictions but thought the sentences were too long. The 10 people were sentenced to a total of 282 years in prison. Chavis had the longest sentence, 25 to 29 years, and was the last to be paroled.

Chavis said Thursday he was "happy that a court somewhere in the United States agrees with the Wilmington 10. We should have never been convicted, we were totally innocent of those frame-up charges and had to suffer many years unjustly."

The appeals court left the way open for a new trial as it did not rule on the merits of the conviction. The reversal was based on denial of constitutional rights for the defendants.

The court said the convictions were flawed on at least three grounds:

— The failure of the prosecution to make available to the defense an amended pretrial statement of a key witness, convicted felon Allen Hall, who recanted his testimony and then changed the recantation.

— The refusal of the trial court to permit cross examination of Hall ad Jerome Mitchell, another key prosecution witness.

— Concealment of favorable treatment of Hall, including accommodations at a luxury beach hotel and a visit by his girl friend.

"As to these issues, the facts are undisputed," the court said. "Hall was a crucial witness for the state and his credibility was the most basic issue in the case."

The court also noted that, "If the jury had known that Hall was a borderline defective, it might well have concluded that he lacked the ability to recall accurately events about which he testified with such exquisite detail that had occurred at least 1½ years earlier."

Gastonia attorney James T. "Jay" Stroud, who headed the prosecution of the Wilmington 10 as an assistant district attorney for New Hanover County (Wilmington), said that "professionally, I'm very disappointed ... After the case was reviewed by so many courts, the 4th Circuit said they were not given a fair trial when in fact they were."

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal in January 1976, temporarily ending the Wilmington 10's four-year struggle to remain out of prison. During that period, they had been in and out of state courts seeking bail.

Eight months later Hall repudiated his testimony, setting the stage for a post-conviction hearing in state Superior Court. Hall changed his story at least twice, saying the 10 were guilty and then telling defense attorneys that he had lied to the prosecutor. The conviction was upheld.

In January 1978, the state Court of Appeals refused to review that ruling, ending any appeal process within the state. Three weeks later Hunt reduced their sentences, clearing the way for early release from prison for the nine men. The woman had already been released.

Their fight, and publicity surrounding Hall's testimony, led to international attention. Amnesty International labeled the 10 as "prisoners of conscience." The Soviet Union retaliated to President Carter's emphasis on human rights by pointing to the Wilmington 10 as an example of such violations within the United States.

Criticism of the convictions was as strong within North Carolina as it was elsewhere.

Edmisten said he did not intend to drop the case without appeal.

"This is probably the most litigated case I have ever come up on or heard about. I don't think it would be fair to the judicial system to abandon it at this point," he said.

Barnhill....

Annual Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival, and is a member of the board of directors of First Federal Savings and Loan.

Barnhill said this morning, "I'd like to express my appreciation to the commissioners, and to all the people in the county that supported me. I'm excited and looking forward to working on the board."

"My aim is to represent the people of Pitt County, and hopefully, to insure that Pitt County will be as fine a place to live for my children as it has been for me."

Chased Auto Has A Wreck

A Rt. 3, Washington man and apassenger in the car he was driving were injured late Thursday night when their vehicle wrecked on a dirt road near Pactolus following a high speed chase that originated on the East Carolina University campus.

Highway Patrolman John Brinkley, who was not involved in the pursuit but investigated the wreck, said that the car was operated by Ralph Lee Moore, 27, Moore and a passenger, Elizabeth Holly Mason, were reported injured in the 11:40 p.m. wreck and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment.

A spokesman for the ECU campus police said that university authorities became involved in the pursuit around 11 p.m. after officers observed a car operating erratically. A chase followed through Greenville, with city police and the Pitt Sheriff's Department called for assistance, and out N. Greene Street.

According to the campus spokesman, the car was pursued out on Pactolus Highway and the vehicle collided with the ditch bank on rural unpaved road 1557 and overturnedY approximately one mile east of Pactolus.

Moore was charged by campus police with driving under the influence, driving while his license was revoked, speeding in excess of 85 miles per hour in a 55 zone, speeding in excess of 15 miles over the speed limit to elude arrest, failing to stop for a blue light and siren, and reckless driving.

Elizabeth Mason was charged by police with possession of a controlled substance.

According to Trooper Brinkley, the car operated by Moore was registered to Marvin Leon Mason of Washington.

Greyhound Drivers' Contract Is Urged

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Some 15,000 Greyhound Lines drivers and terminal employees are being asked to approve a tentative contract settlement reached just one day after a previous agreement was rejected.

Federal mediator Sam Franklin announced Thursday that a settlement had been reached on a new proposal. On Wednesday it was announced that union members, in a mail vote, rejected a tentative pact approved last month by their negotiators.

Ollie Classen, vice president of Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, predicted approval of the latest contract offer. Details were withheld pending the membership vote.

Greyhound issued a statement Thursday saying union leaders would submit the proposal to members "with a recommendation that it be accepted. In the meantime, the present contract extension will remain in effect."

After Wednesday's rejection, mediators asked both sides to resume discussions immediately. There were no reports of service interruptions.

Neither Greyhound, which is headquartered in Phoenix, nor the union would disclose the exact vote. The Arizona Republic quoted unidentified sources Wednesday as saying the package was turned down by about 60 percent of the union members.

Three years ago Greyhound workers approved a contract by a margin of 84 votes out of more than 13,000 cast.

Details of the original tentative settlement — like the company's new wage proposal — have not been disclosed. The union sought a 10 percent increase in hourly wages that range from $8 to $10 and improvements in fringe benefits and mileage payments to bus drivers.

Greyhound says it operates 100,000 route miles in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Report A Major Soviet Oil Find

PARIS (AP) — A French oil industry bulletin today reported the discovery of a giant oil field in western Siberia, which if correct, would be history's largest.

The Bulletin of the Petroleum Industry quoted the Swedish consultant firm of Petrostudies as saying the oil reserves in the field are estimated at 619 billion tons.

The reported reserves are said to be "several times" larger than those initially discovered in the entire Middle East.

The bulletin said if the "incredible" report turns out to be true, the discovery would represent twice as much as the recoverable reserves of 300 billion tons estimated at the Istanbul Energy Conference of 1977.

There are seven barrels in a ton, and each barrel contains 42 gallons.

The bulletin said the information was passed on to Petrostudies by experts of the Soviet Geology Ministry, who called the discovery "a unique and sensational natural phenomenon," especially since about 50 percent of the find is likely to be extracted without too much difficulty.

A resume of the Petrostudies report was made available to the industry bulletin in Paris.

The discovery was named "oil field of Bazhenov" by the Soviets.

Petrostudies said the quality of the oil is excellent with very little sulphur and other corrosive substances, little water and light density. That means the oil would not need any complex processing and could be pumped directly into pipelines throughout Europe.

The French oil publication said if the discovery is confirmed it will lead to major changes in the Soviet Union's long-term oil strategy and to a postponement of the major exploration program in eastern Siberia that was scheduled to begin next year.

The Soviets are likely to exploit the new discovery in stages with priority given to the best known area of the field named "Grand Salym" and located in the center of western Siberia, the oil bulletin said.

'Armistice Meeting' For Rev. Bailey Smith

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The blunt, folksy Rev. Bailey Smith, the Southern Baptist chieftain who has stirred a hullabaloo with his remarks about Jews, has arranged an armistice meeting with some of them to try to soothe the fracas.
But so far, says a spokesman, Smith isn't saying "yea or nay" about whether he intends to modify his comment that first aroused the clash, — that "God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew."

There since have been other chafing words, on both sides.
In any case, the ebullient Smith, 41, president of the nation's largest Protestant body, the Southern Baptist Convention, has a meeting set in New York City Dec. 18 with Jewish leaders.

"I have a great desire for better understanding with you and your people," he wrote to Nathan Perlmutter, head of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, in initiating proposals for the meeting.
"I deeply regret any hurt that may have come by remarks credited to me. You and I both know that situations are not always what they appear to be when more information is revealed."
However, as to whether he still would maintain that God does not hear Jewish prayers, he relayed word through a spokesman he did not consider it appropriate to discuss the point before the meeting.

"We want to deal with good relations for the future, not events of the past," he says. "I look forward to a good meeting, a very warm meeting."
Smith, pastor of the big First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., was expected to bring denominational colleagues with him to the session and several Jewish leaders also were expected to take part.

Several of them had sharply denounced Smith's statement, made too a mid-June political-religious rally in Dallas, as bigoted and anti-Semitic. Numerous Southern Baptist scholars also called it invalid and un-Scriptural.

But Smith has not altered it. And more recently, his remark in a broadcast sermon that "Jews have funny looking noses" further fanned the controversy.

On that occasion, Smith later explained, his remark was only a jesting aside, directed mainly at a Jewish-Christian member who before the service had kidded Smith, saying, "Preacher, you've got a bald spot and we Jews have funny looking noses."

Know why we build skyscrapers? In order to have many more people working in a limited area. We package people vertically!

Among the skyscrapers our photographer has discovered a church. It too has a vertical element — a steeply pointing heavenward.

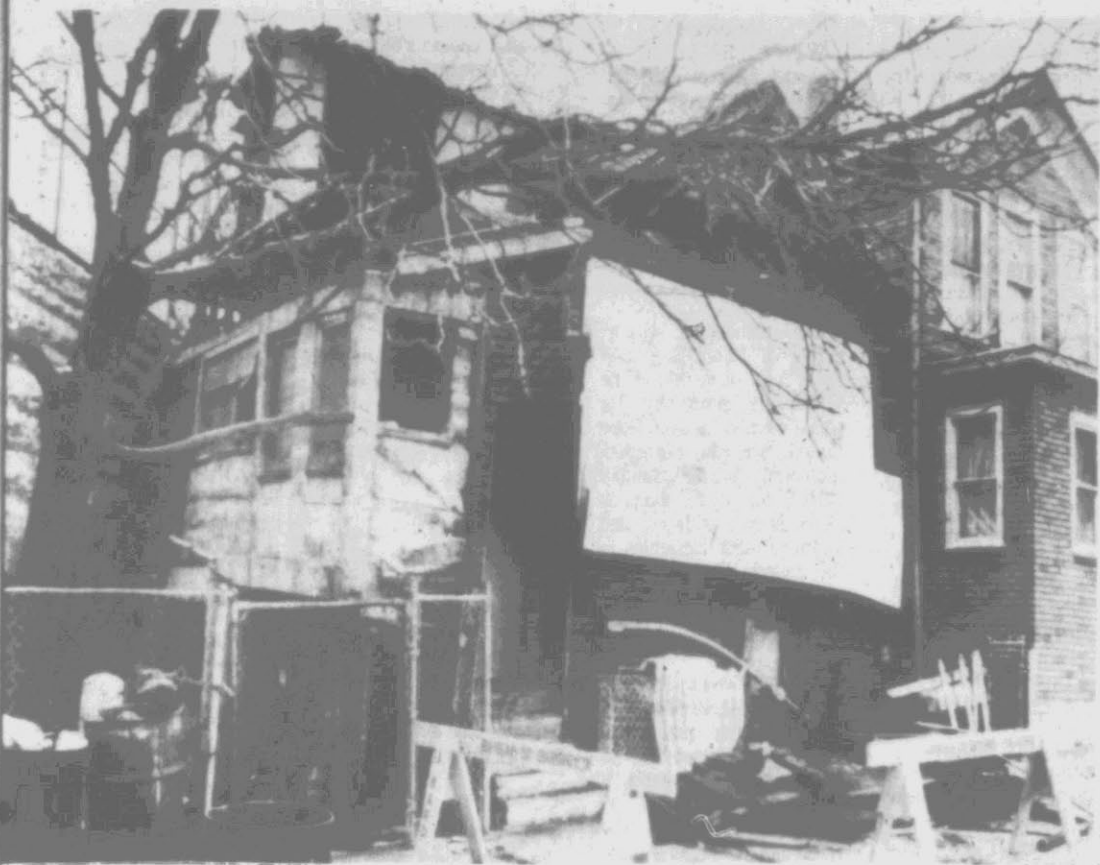

Church architecture with its traditional spires expresses our beliefs. People today are packaged too tightly. Pressure, custom, conformity crowd in upon our souls. Christ teaches that every person is important... each one of us is loved by our Lord.

As we worship God each week side by side, our beliefs point us heavenward.

HOME WAS NOT HIS CASTLE—The home of John Burns stands partially demolished and boarded-up after a wrecking crew allegedly tried to raze the house with a bulldozer, knowing that Burns was still inside the home and the gas and electricity were still in service. (AP Laserphoto)

Wrecking Crew Began Razing House With The Owner Inside

CHICAGO (AP) — There was one problem when a wrecking crew began demolishing a North Side house — the owner was still inside.

John Burns, 44, was released from a local hospital after being treated for minor injuries received when his living room ceiling collapsed on him Wednesday.

Although city officials would not defend the actions of a wrecking crew whose bulldozer had rammed the front of Burns' 1½-story wood structure, they said Burns had no right to be in the house.

Burns told police he recently got a stay-of-demolition order until Dec. 19. He said that when the wrecking crew arrived, he went inside to get a copy of the order.

"I heard a racket, and the house began to shake," said Burns. "The next thing I knew, a neighbor was asking me if I was OK and another one was saying he was going to call an ambulance."

The unemployed Burns said he has been unable to make tax payments on the house since 1977. He said a wrecking crew came to tear down the house two months ago, but left when he refused to leave it.

David Clay, 50, a neighbor, said he saw a work crew drive up with a bulldozer. While Burns was in his home, Clay said, a crewman yelled, "This is the second time I've been here. Come on out. We'll knock down the house and bury you in it."

The crewman then got on the bulldozer and drove it twice into the porch, Clay said.

Clay said he told the work crew he was going to call police and an ambulance. Then the crew reloaded the bulldozer on the truck and left.

Police said they were investigating the incident but no charges had been filed.

John McCaffrey, chief assistant counsel in charge of the building and housing division, said Burns had been ordered on Oct. 3 to vacate the house immediately. McCaffrey added that he in no way was trying to justify the wrecking company's action, but said Burns had no right to be in the house.

He said Burns' case has been in housing court since 1978 and the first time Burns answered a summons was Aug. 12. On Aug. 1, a housing court judge ordered the house razed, McCaffrey said.

Burns won a stay of demolition Aug. 12 after promising to make necessary repairs, McCaffrey said. However, he failed to make any improvements and the stay was vacated on Oct. 3.

McCaffrey said Burns was ordered to vacate the house and remove his belongings at once and the house was to be destroyed by Dec. 19.

Rocket Spawns Lights In Skies

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — A barium-filled rocket launched from this base in the Florida Panhandle spawned a spectacular pink and green light show across six Southern states Thursday night and had some residents fearing an alien invasion, officials said.

"Are we going to be attacked," one caller asked The Pensacola News Journal after the barium cloud was spotted over Florida, South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia and Alabama at about 6 p.m. EST.

A huge, pale green cloud was visible from South Florida and points north for at least an hour as it drifted across the southern sky.

Eglin Air Force Base officials said the launch was the first in a series of four scheduled this month as part of an experiment to determine whether ionized clouds block communications among aircraft, orbiting satellites and the ground.

The dates of the future tests will depend on weather conditions, the officials said.

Communications data was collected in similar tests done in 1971, 1976 and 1977.

The barium-filled rocket took about two and a half minutes to climb 116 miles high over the Gulf of Mexico, where 106 pounds of barium was scattered into the ionosphere and glazed by the rays of the setting sun.

Lt. Garrett Mason of Eglin's public affairs office said scientists on the ground and in airplanes monitored the tests. He said one aircraft was positioned opposite a experimental satellite, circling 25,000 miles in space, with the barium cloud in between.

"The test involved how the transmission of satellite signals through the cloud affects communications," he said.

In future launches, a second rocket will carry instruments to gather data from within the cloud and will be fired from a second launch pad an hour later.

GOP Jobseekers Face Penetrating Questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — True or false: "Federal funds should be made available for abortions for poor people."

The Republican Study Committee, a conservative group of 115 House GOP members, is asking congressional job-seekers for answers to that and 43 other politically volatile questions.

Richard B. Dingman, the committee's executive director, said Wednesday there is no one set of correct answers, but the survey was designed to separate liberals from moderates and conservatives.

Dingman said the study committee collects resumes and uses the questionnaire "to see if (job-seekers) are in the general philosophical ballpark of our people."

"We don't try to tell them who to hire," he emphasized.

Dingman said the survey is conducted as part of a "personnel clearinghouse" the committee operates for old and new members of Congress.

The job survey gauges political sentiments on a host of issues, including abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, gun control, aid to education, defense spending, affirmative action and freedom.

Created seven years ago to conduct research and analyze legislation, the committee says its aim is "to promote conservative principles of government."

Neither its counterpart, the Democratic Study Committee, nor the non-partisan Congressional Placement Office uses any similar screening device. "We don't even ask age, weight or sex," said a placement office aide.

Dingman wrote the questionnaire himself and began using it a month ago as resumes began piling up around Capitol Hill. He said "a couple of hundred" persons have filled it out.

Other true-false questions include:

— "School books reflecting liberalized moral judgments and street language are as beneficial as those reflecting more traditional conduct codes and formal English."

— "Affirmative action" programs actually limit the avenues of opportunity for all citizens and substitute bureaucratic decisions for those of merit in selecting personnel."

— "Members of Congress should encourage state legislators to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment."

Dingman said many new House members would tap the study committee for advice on job-seekers.

The survey begins with a caveat: "This is not a pass-fail quiz. It simply gives us some guidance regarding your feelings on certain issues so we can match applicants with potential employers who generally share the same feelings."

Wreck Occurs On Memorial

According to Greenville police, a car driven by Joseph McKinley Ward of 106 Lindenwood Dr., collided with a car parked on Memorial Drive about 6:49 a.m. yesterday, 171 feet south of the Pine Street intersection.

Officers said the vehicle, owned by Rhonda Rose McLawhorn of Ayden, was disabled and unattended at the time of the mishap, which caused an estimated $1,000 damage to the McLawhorn car and $1,500 damage to the Ward auto.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices dropped sharply in early trading today as key interest rates rose again but the government reported improved unemployment numbers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 6.66 to 963.82 in the first half hour of trading.

Losing issues outnumbered gainers by about 5-to-2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Federal Reserve Board raised its direct loan rate to banks by one percentage point to 13 percent after the close of trading Thursday. In response to that, some banks this morning raised their prime lending rates to 19 percent from 18.5 percent. The prime rate which applies to business loans has not been that high since last April.

There was some encouraging news in reports from Washington. The government said the nation's unemployment rate declined to 7.5 percent in November from 7.6 percent the previous month. The producer price index, which measures inflation at the wholesale level, rose by 0.6 percent, slightly less than its increase in October.

Among actively traded issues in the early going, Sony Corp. slipped 1/4 to 16; American Telephone & Telegraph was off 1/4 to 46 1/2; and General Electric slipped 1/4 to 61 1/2.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 1.79 to 970.48.

Advances outnumbered declines 8-7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 51.17 million shares, against 43.43 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index fell 0.21 to 78.60.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 0.63 at 362.58.

Let's Talk Real Estate

by Connally Branch

Selling your home? Since conditions still exist creating a so-called "buyer's market", your home should be shown off to best advantage. Go through the house and put it in order from top to bottom. The best way for prospective buyers to see the house and consider all its possibilities is if it is clean. Wash windows and floors and clear walkways and lawns. Make sure storage areas and closets are neat to insure that they show to best advantage. Keep the kitchen and bathroom areas impeccably clear of family clutter. And, nothing sells a kitchen faster than the smell of good food cooking. Remember that qualified buyers need to be properly impressed with the best features of your house.

Pirates Play Host To Texas Wesleyan

East Carolina's basketball Pirates will open their home season Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, playing host to Texas Wesleyan.

The Pirates bring a 1-1 record into their first "official" game on the Minges hardwood, having beaten Ohio, 70-65, and lost to Maine, 112-81. Texas Wesleyan comes in with a 6-2 record.

"Anytime you win six games this early, you must be doing something right," East Carolina coach Dave Odom said of the Rams. "While we don't know a lot about them, we did have a chance to see them against Old Dominion Wednesday night, and they played very well."

In that game, Old Dominion gained a 75-50 victory, but led only 37-34 at halftime.

"They are small but quick," Odom pointed out. "They have excellent outside shooters, and are the type of team that if you play them loose and they shoot well, they can beat anyone."

Going into the Old Dominion game, the Rams had five players averaging in double figures, led by Charles Field, a 6-3 forward, at 17.0. The others include 6-2 guard Danae Wilkerson, 13.3 points per game; 6-0 guard Wayne Treardo, 15.4; 6-3 forward Demetric Shaw, 13.0; and Rodney Bowen, 6-5 center, 13.9. The Rams also start Michael Congress, a 6-5 forward, from time to time.

The Rams have beaten St. Edwards, 89-67 in overtime; Mary Hardin-Baylor, 112-84; McMurry, 89-86; Concordia Lutheran, 100-96; Mary Hardin-Baylor again, 92-63, and Southwestern, 66-67. They lost to St. Edwards, 81-77, in addition to dropping the game to Old Dominion.

Texas Wesleyan is not as big a worry to Odom right now, however, as are his own Pirates.

Following their blow-out loss to Maine on Wednesday, Odom said that the Pirates had to readjust their thinking as to the type of game East Carolina wants to play.

"We tighten our belts defensively and begin to rebound again," Maine was able to get inside throughout the game for easy shots, and also easily controlled the boards.

"I'm really more concerned about us than I am Texas Wesleyan," Odom said. "If we don't execute and rebound better, it's not going to matter anyway."

While Odom said that the Pirates played well early, he said that a lot of little things mounted up against them. "We still haven't had the steady leadership we need out there. Like, we were only five points down and several little things went against us, and they blew it out to 18 in a hurry. Those little things then become big things."

Odom added that the Pirates have to concentrate harder when things go against them and fight had to overcome these handicaps.

The contest is the first of two straight home games for the Pirates. Monday night, they host Berry College in the second game of a doubleheader. In the opening game, which starts at 6:30 p.m., East Carolina's women will take on Campbell University.

The two games, too, are the only home games in December for the Pirates, who travel to Penn State next Saturday, then participate in the Iron Duke Classic on December 19-20. They will play in the Elm City Classic in Connecticut on December 29-30, returning home January 3 to host Campbell.

Oilers Kick Down Steel Curtain

HOUSTON (AP) — Just as Houston Coach Bum Phillips promised, the Oilers finally kicked in the door of the Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain.

Unfortunately for the Oilers, when they knocked the hinges off Pittsburgh's title hopes with a 6-0 shutout Thursday night, they found the Cleveland Browns waiting on the other side.

Houston kicker Toni Fritsch returned to the team's good graces with a pair of pressure 37 and 33 yards field goals and the Oiler "Blue Curtain" defense made the kicks stand up for a victory that virtually eliminated the defending world champions from the playoffs.

Despite the personal triumph, the Oilers still find themselves in second place in the American Football Conference Central Division behind the Cleveland Browns, who beat the Oilers 17-14 Sunday when Fritsch missed a field goal that would have tied the game.

Cleveland leads the division with a 9-4 record followed by Houston at 9-5 and Pittsburgh at 8-6.

The Oilers have lost to the Steelers in emotional AFC championship games the past two years and the thought of not facing them a third time displeased Phillips.

"It makes me a little bit sad," Phillips said. "I'd rather play them again. They are still a good football team and we've had some great games."

Oiler safety Mike Reinfeldt, who intercepted two Terry Bradshaw passes, had few regrets however.

"As much money as they've taken out of our pockets the past two years, it's nice to take money out of their pockets for a chance," Reinfeldt said.

Fritsch, who had missed three of his last four field goal tries after hitting 14 in a row, provided all the offense the defense needed to keep the Oilers' playoff hopes alive.

"The first field goal I kick for the team — and for myself," Fritsch said. "When I made it, I knew I'd be kicking them straight the whole game. I've been in this league 10 years and I've known pressure before. It doesn't bother me."

Houston's defense played a superb game, forcing five Pittsburgh turnovers, including two interceptions by safety Mike Reinfeldt and one by cornerback Greg Stemmick. The Steeler offense that once terrorized all comers, managed only 22 yards in thesecond quarter.

Oiler defensive coordinator Ed Biles said the Oilers made only minor changes in their defensive scheme for the Steelers. "The whole key was we kept the pressure on Bradshaw," Biles said. "He couldn't sit back there all day and do what he wanted to do. We didn't think they could beat us running the ball so we concentrated on the pass."

Neither team had a serious scoring threat in the first half but the Steelers got a big break in the third quarter when cornerback J.C. Wilson's pass interference penalty gave Pittsburgh a first down at the Oiler one.

After a five-yard illegal motion penalty, however, Reinfeldt picked off a Terry Bradshaw pass into the end zone and the Oilers drove to Fritsch's first field goal.

The Oilers put Fritsch on the field again early in the fourth quarter after linebacker Gregg Bingham recovered Franco Harris' second fumble of the game at the Steeler 33.

Pittsburgh's other deep penetration into Oiler territory came with 5:03 left to play when kicker Matt Bahr missed on a 42-yard field goal attempt.

Reports of the Steelers' demise have been greatly exaggerated, however, according to the Steelers.

"This club isn't going to get far off their winning ways," Center Mike Webster said. "Nothing ended here tonight, things began. We will correct our errors and benefit from our mistakes and then we'll be back as strong as ever."

Defensive tackle Joe Greene said "They would have won the ball game no matter where it was played. We played as good a football game as we could and we just lost to a better

Tulsa Pulls Off Upset Victory Over Louisville

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Richardson has just graduated to the major college ranks at Tulsa and already is making high marks against the opposition.

Coaching a team that largely resembles his junior college national champions from Western Texas, Richardson pulled off one of the early surprises of this college basketball season Thursday night with a 68-60 victory over eighth-ranked Louisville.

"I did a heck of a job and I'm going to take credit for it," said Richardson, glowing over his team's upset of the defending NCAA champions.

Richardson, starting four players from his junior college champions, insisted that the victory was not a fluke.

"We should have been up 15 points by rights at halftime," said Richardson, pointing out that his team blew several easy shots. "Missing those kind of layups, in the second half some of those have got to fall."

The loss was the second straight for the winless Cardinals, who dropped their opener to DePaul in the Hall of Fame Game at Springfield, Mass.

"Tulsa just outthrew us," said Louisville Coach Denny

Crum. "When you get out-hustled, there's no excuse."

In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 6 Oregon State walloped Cal State Northridge 78-47; No. 13 Notre Dame stopped Texas Christian 79-63 and No. 20 Georgetown routed St. Leo College 108-73.

David Brown scored 13 second-half points, including a game-breaking slam-dunk with 20 seconds left, to lead the Hurricane's upset. Brown finished with 15 points and Tulsa's arm-waving defense stymied the defending NCAA champion Cardinals down the stretch in a contest with bizarre twists.

Tulsa led 35-32 after a first half played without benefit of a game clock or scoreboard. A hockey scoreboard was used in the second half after the overhead board blinked out three minutes into the game.

Early in the second half, Louisville's Wiley Brown, who scored a team-leading 12 points, was ejected on a flagrant foul when he jumped off the bench to scuffle with Brown.

Louisville led 46-45 at the time but the Cardinals never put their offense together after that. The game was last tied at 50 with 10:48 left. It was one of 13 ties in the contest in which the lead changed hands seven times.

Steve Johnson scored 21 points to pace Oregon State over Cal State Northridge. The Beavers had no difficulty as Johnson scored 17 of his points at the half, helping them to a 45-26 lead.

Kelly Tripucka scored 22 points and pulled down 10 rebounds as Notre Dame rolled past TCU. The Irish led all the way, never letting the Horned Frogs closer than 11 points, which happened with 4:42 to play as Notre Dame went into a deliberate offense. TCU was outrebounded 22-15 at the half and 39-29 for the game.

"Notre Dame was just too big, too strong and too good," said TCU Coach Tim Killingsworth. "I knew the Irish would be big and strong. I knew we would have a lot of difficulty trying to control the boards."

Eric Floyd scored 24 points, including a perfect 11-for-11 from the field, to lead Georgetown to an easy victory over St. Leo. The taller and quicker Hoyas scored at will as they opened a 24-point halftime lead behind Floyd's shooting.

One cannot help but wonder how much the Maine-East Carolina game really told about the Pirates.

How good is Maine? How good are the Pirates?

We will have to wait until much further down the line, but it would appear that Maine is quite good, maybe even good enough to win its conference championship and make it into the NCAA playoffs.

East Carolina, a young team despite the fact that coach Dave Odom doesn't want to classify it thusly, is still learning. They will continue to learn for most of this year.

Apparently, Maine fooled the Pirates, who didn't think they would want to get into a running game. Maine, in fact, appeared to love that kind of game, as witnessed by their 112 points. Once a game of that type gets out of hand, it tends to continue in that way, too.

Hopefully, the Pirates will, as they should have done against Marathon Oil, learn from their mistakes of the game and be better prepared for the next game.

This comes up quickly, too, tomorrow night, as they entertain Texas Wesleyan in the home opener for the year. A victory there could put the Pirates back above the .500 mark, and another on Monday night against Berry could move them further ahead of the break-even mark.

East Carolina University's football team lost seven games during this past season. Only one of those, against Southwestern Louisiana, could really have been called an upset.

As it turned out, five of the seven opponents have ended up in post-season play.

As we pointed out earlier, Florida State, ranked number two in the country, will be meeting Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. North Carolina, 12th on the poll, will play Texas in the Bluebonnet Bowl. Southern Mississippi, ranked earlier in the year, but not so now, will be in the Independence Bowl against McNeese State.

Since we listed those teams, Miami, now 20th, was picked for the Peach Bowl against Virginia Tech, and Eastern Kentucky, the defending Division I-AA champion, was picked as an at-large entry in that group's four-team playoffs, and will face Lehigh in the first round. Grambling and Boise State meet for the other berth in the finals.

Only N.C. State, which didn't have that good a season, and Southwestern Louisiana, didn't make it to a bowl. Southwestern, however, went into the final week of the season tied with McNeese for its conference lead and a bid to the Independence Bowl. McNeese, however, took a 14-0 victory in the game to sew up the berth.

Come to think of it, State's 6-5 mark was not all that bad. A brief look at the bowl schedule will show that two bowl teams, Houston and Arkansas, both produced that record.

It all goes to show that it ain't what you do, but who you are when the bowl folks get ready to make their picks.

We would imagine that the wires are humming in the Alabama region as coaches apply or get word to "helpers" for the job at Auburn. Among those being mentioned is former East Carolina coach Pat Dye.

Dye is known to have been considered earlier for the job earlier, and was mentioned as a top candidate for the Georgia job, had Vince Dooley opted for Auburn.

A lot of folks in this area will be watching to see how it comes out.

This Is It: The Final Big Four Tourney Opening In Greensboro

By BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — This weekend, in Greensboro Coliseum, basketball fans will witness the last Big Four Tournament.

There are any number of sayings that fit the occasion: "All good things must come to an end" or "Parting is such sweet sorrow."

North Carolina coach Dean Smith was there for the first one in the 1970-71 season and he'll be there for the 11th and final one Friday and Saturday.

His 10th-ranked Tar Heels face Duke in the tournament opener at 7 p.m. Friday, followed by Wake Forest and North Carolina State at 9 p.m. The two losers play at 7 p.m. Saturday, followed by the championship game at 9 p.m.

But "Sing no sad songs" for Smith, because he'll be glad to see it go.

"It's harder to play in the Big Four than it would be to play the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the country, DePaul and Kentucky, back to back," said Smith. "In the Big Four, you're playing rival schools. You know them and they know you. We're better off playing intersectional rivals."

Smith lobbied hard to rid himself of the Big Four Tournament for a number of reasons that a majority of the four schools athletic departments eventually agreed with. This early-season warfare can't help but leave some team with two losses, and two more with one loss. It also raises the possibility of playing the same team five times in a season.

And no matter how much fans would like it, Smith does not want to face Duke, N.C. State or Wake Forest that many times in a season.

Finances obviously had little to do with it. Madison Avenue types would be jealous of anything that yielded $80,000 a team in just two days, gave a great deal of exposure and sent fans into a frenzy.

Even though his team has the worst overall record in the tournament, Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy will be sorry to see the event become a bit of sports trivia.

"It is awfully good for the fans," Tacy said. "It's been a huge financial success. And it provides a lot of recognition and attention across the country for the team that does well."

"It is, however, a tournament that is extremely hard to play this early in the season because of the tremendous competition and caliber of teams you face. And there's always the matter of re-establishing confidence if you come out of it 0-2. That was a strong feeling many had."

Two of this year's tournament coaches don't have a lot of experience in the Big Four. Rookie coaches Mike Krzyzewski of Duke and Jim Valvano of North Carolina State will be coaching in their first and last Big Four Tournament. But they still have some feelings about the event. "It has a great history," Krzyzewski said. "But with the changes in the NCAA Tournament, I can understand why they are not playing it anymore. But I feel fortunate to get a chance to coach in it."

Valvano has watched the tournament from afar (Iona) and is particularly sorry to see the tournament end.

"Obviously, for me, I'm thrilled but I feel a touch of sadness, too. It's one of the tournaments that made this conference special. Some of the coaches say the teams play each other too much. But one of these reasons I came to this league — because of the competition," Valvano said.

"Win or lose, I'm looking forward to it. Not just from a coach's standpoint. It has brought a lot of good memories and I'm sorry to see it go."

Of course, that's now. Talk to me Sunday.

All four coaches are worried. Tacy is obviously worried about the speedy Wolfpack, even though his team is more experienced, especially with the return of point guard Frank Johnson. Johnson broke his foot last year and was red-shirted. But he is back with to help out a solid front line that is big and physical.

Valvano admits his team has had two "relatively easy wins." And the Deacons will be a real test. But, "Now, we are more worried about what we do," he said. "You can't be changing from game to game. You have to play your game and find out how it works against tough competition. But this is a tough way to find out."

Krzyzewski has about the same philosophy while preparing for North Carolina.

"UNC is a good basketball team, but we're more concerned with our system and making sure its working. You cannot get all caught up about your opponent. That can get you in trouble. You must be concerned with your own team's progress. Anytime we ACC team plays another ACC team, they get up," the Duke coach said.

Gene Banks, the Blue Devils 6-foot-7 forward, is the key for Duke.

"We need him to play well," Krzyzewski said. "His defense is a real key for us. He's showing everyone he is the complete player."

And Smith isn't without his worries. Duke won the tournament last year with a win over the Tar Heels.

"I'm worried about Duke," Smith said. "They've got a great young coach and three first-round draft choices."

Smith was speaking of Banks, forward Kenny Dandard and guard Vince Taylor.

But Smith has a number of future NBA players of his own, even though he lost five to that group last season.

And his team is nursing some injuries. Center Pete Budko is recovering from a stress fracture and has played sparingly. And 6-foot-9 sophomore James Worthy is still tending a sore ankle, although he has contributed greatly to the Tar Heels early-season success.

Lack Of Height Biggest Problem Facing Bullets

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
JAMESVILLE — The Jamesville Bullets have jut one problem this year — height. They don't have any — repeat — any.

Among the starting five players, there is not one who cannot walk through a six-foot high door bolt upright. Three of the starters are listed at 5-11, while the other two are 5-8 and 5-9.

"We do have three who are over six feet tall," Coach Ron Davenport. One of them is a potential starter, but he's on the injured list and may not be available until after the Christmas break — if then. The other two are listed as reserves, with little experience.

In their two games so far, the Bullets have split, however, beating Creswell, 77-53, then losing to Manteo, 68-66, in overtime. So all it not lost.

"I guess we've done about as I expected us to until this point," Davenport said. "We're just short and we are unable to do much on the boards because of this. We do have good quickness and good shooting ability, but Manteo was just too tall for us to handle."

Of the top six players, as stated, there is no one as tall as six feet. Currently, Davenport is starting Clarence Thomas, a 5-9 senior at the point guard, and Kervin Cross, a 5-8 senior, at the other guard.

The center is 5-11 senior Gerald Keys, hile 5-11 junior Keith Waters and 5-11 sophomore Rex Bell handle the forward slots.

The chief reserve is 5-9 junior Anwood James.

"We don't have any returning starters from last year's team," Davenport pointed out. "Keys played just over half the time, however, and Cross played just under half-time, so they have pretty good experience."

Depth this year is a problem, too, since it is pretty inexperienced. And the future is clouded since this year's ninth grade, the smallest in some years at Jamesville, didn't send out enough athletes for the school to field a junior varsity program.

"We are carrying two sophomores and one freshman, and they do have potential, but they have little experience."

Hopefully, however, Jamesville will be helped shortly when 6-1 senior Ricky Bell returns to the team. Bell was injured last in football and has been sidelined since then.

"We hope that he's going to be ready shortly, at last by the time we come back to the court after Christmas. But we don't know for sure. He definitely could help us, and probably will work into the starting lineup as soon as he's ready. He's the fastest guy in school."

Meanwhile, with just four lettermen and only five who were even on the team last year, Davenport and his Bullets have their work cut out for them. "Seven of these guys are new to the varsity team, and two of them have no junior varsity experience either."

The remainder of the team includes 6-2 senior Steve Davis, 6-1 sophomore Kenny Moore, junior Eddie Carman, junior William Bundy, freshman Matthew Moore and junior Robbie Barber.

"This is probably the quickest team that I've ever coached," Davenport said, "but it's also the shortest."

Davenport feels that Pantego is the team to beat in the league. "They'll probably go unbeaten," he added. Other top contenders include Aurora and Mattamuskeet.

This year, too, the Beaufort-Hyde Martin and Tidewater conferences merged into the Tobacco Belt. Four teams from the conference will advance into the district tournament.

"I'd like to think that by the end of the season, we'd have a team good enough to make the district tournament," Davenport said, "but it's going to be a dogfight for that spot."

The Jamesville schedule:
Home Games in Italics
Nov. 24 Creswell (W 77-53)
Dec. 2 Manteo (L 68-66 OT), 5 at Mattamuskeet, 9 Pantego, 12 Belhaven, 13 Aurora, 16 at Bath, 19 Bear Grass.
Jan. Chocowinity, 9 at Columbia, 13 at Creswell, 17 Mattamuskeet, 20 at Manteo, 23 at Belhaven, 27 Pantego, 30 at Aurora.
Feb. 3 Bath, 6 Columbia, 10 at Bear Grass, 13 at Chocowinity.

Jacksonville, Page Clash For 4-A Title; Two Others On The Line

By The Associated Press
Jacksonville hosts Greensboro Page for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's 4-A football championship Friday night, while undefeated Burlington Williams and Lexington tangle for the state's 3-A crown.

The Cardinals, now 12-1, avenged their only regular season loss by downing Goldsboro, 24-13, to earn the right to host the finals. Jacksonville was paced by the 221-yard rushing performance of Eddie Colson, as well as six Goldsboro turnovers.

Page rallied from a 14-0 third quarter deficit in its game with Henderson Vance to capture a 24-21 victory. The clincher came on Bobby Dunn's 17-yard pass to Micky Johnson.

Elsewhere in the state Friday night, Currituck travels to Sylva-Webster for the state 2-A title.

Robbinsville captured the 1-A title last weekend with a 40-0 romp over Rosewood.

Williams gained 261 yards while limiting Edenton Holmes to just 95 en route to a 21-6 victory. Coach Pete Stout will make his second trip to the state finals in the last three years as a result of the victory.

Lexington rode the bruised shoulders of Associated Press Player of the Year Joe McIntosh to a 14-6 victory over Crest. McIntosh scored one touchdown and set up another on a 51-yard gallop. He finished the night with 130 yards on 12 carries.

Currituck resorted to razzle-dazzle football, but it paid off in a 14-13 come-from-behind victory over Southwest Onslow.

team. It's disappointing, but we've won in the past and we've been fortunate."

The Oiler victory convinced Bradshaw of Houston's talent.

"This is a much better football team than Cleveland," Bradshaw said. "There's no comparison. We did all we could do tonight and we lost to a great effort. They put a lot of pressure on me and I wasn't able to do the things I wanted to do."

Houston quarterback Ken Stabler, who shouldered some of the criticism from the Oilers' two straight losses prior to Thursday night, said he preferred to be judged at the end of the season.

"If I throw 30 interceptions and we make the playoffs, that's fine with me," Stabler said. "A lot of people write you off after a loss. All that matters to me are the people in this (dressing) room."

The shutout was the first Pittsburgh has suffered since Sept. 29, 1974 when they lost to the Oakland Raiders, and, yes, quarterback Stabler.

Find Cocaine In Pastorini Home

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A vial containing a cocaine residue was found by sheriff's deputies during a search of Oakland Raiders quarterback Dan Pastorini, the San Jose Mercury-News reported in a copyright story today.

Pastorini, who had been hauled into the sheriff's office last week due to an outstanding traffic warrant, was not charged or cited for any crime and a detective captain said the vial might not be valid evidence in court, the newspaper reported.

Pastorini admitted he had paid an $83 traffic warrant, but charged that the cocaine allegation was "totally false. However, the newspaper said it had obtained a copy of the sheriff's department report — originally marked "not for press" — in which the discovery was reported.

Detective Captain Ron

Conway confirmed the report and said the sheriff's crime lab had determined that the plastic vial "contains cocaine."

He also said the matter would be referred to the district attorney's office for a decision on whether to file charges against the 31-year-old quarterback, who has been sidelined with a broken leg.

Pastorini came to the Raiders this year in a trade with the Houston Oilers, where he had played since graduating from Santa Clara University.

In the report quoted by the newspaper, Deputy Steve Carr said Pastorini's vehicle had been stopped for suspected speeding. A check showed that Pastorini had failed to post bail on an earlier speeding ticket.

Carr said he handcuffed the quarterback and discovered the vial during a pat-search for weapons before putting him into the patrol car.

Everyone should like someone this much.

Four Ink ECU Grants

East Carolina University announced the signings of four more North Carolina high school seniors to grants-in-aid yesterday afternoon.

This brings to ten the number of players signed by coach Ed Emory and his staff.

The four new signees include Steven Ray Johnson of Brevard, Thad Smith of High Point Andrews, Charles Flippin of Graham and Fred Garrett of Northern Durham.

Johnson, a member of the all-State AP's team, is a 6-4, 254-pound defensive lineman. He attended Rosman High School where he lettered in four sports and holds conference shot put and discus records. The heavily recruited senior has been selected as a member of the North Carolina Shrine Bowl team.

Smith is a 6-5, 225-pound tight end. He was all-conference in football, basketball and track, and was Andrews High School's Best All-Around Athlete.

Flippin is a 6-2, 212-pound linebacker, credited with 100 tackles during the past season. He also is a three-sport letterman. Garrett, at 6-2, 222, played tight end and defensive end for Northern Durham.

FSU-Florida Is Big Rivalry Now

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — At one time a perennial underdog, Florida State is after its fourth straight defeat of Florida, a reversal that has turned the intrastate contest into one of the nation's outstanding college football rivalries.

"Anyone who thinks this is just another game on the schedule is crazy," said Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden.

Although a prohibitive favorite last year, undefeated Florida State received a big scare from the winless Gators before pulling out a 27-16 victory.

The third-ranked, 9-1 Seminoles again will be favored when they host the Gators Saturday in a 12:25 p.m. game rescheduled from earlier in the season to accommodate national television. But this time Florida is 7-3 and bound for the Tangerine Bowl.

"It's as big as Oklahoma-Nebraska, Pitt-Penn State, Army-Navy, USC-UCLA or any of those other big games," Bowden said.

Florida Coach Charley Pell agrees and gives Bowden, who has a 3-1 record against the Gators, the credit for making it that way.

"The series record is 16-5-1 (in Florida's favor), but they have won the last three years," said Pell. "That makes this the game it is."

Pell takes the rivalry so seriously that he has taken the unusual step of closing his practices.

"We don't want any distractions this week, such as pro scouts or the players' wives," Pell said. "I'm not sure even my pappy could get in."

But Pell also admitted the Gators are working on some surprises for the Seminoles that they don't want to leak out.

In an interview with Today of Cocoa, Florida, center John Redmond indicated the Gators may have been looking ahead to the Seminoles in practice for last week's game against Miami, which the Hurricanes won 31-7.

He said the Gators set aside five minutes per day to "hate Florida State."

Pell denied that any formal hate sessions were held, but added with a smile, "Our players have been doing it all year on their own."

Trojans Look Forward To Irish

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The circumstances are unusual for a Southern California-Notre Dame football game, but that hasn't stopped Coach John Robinson of the Trojans from looking forward to Saturday's annual battle between the two perennial powerhouses. And that's putting it mildly.

"I'm more excited about this game than any I can remember," Robinson said earlier this week. "It's that element of fear. Our team is stimulated by what has happened. I believe we are going to play very hard."

What's happened, among other things, is this: Notre Dame, 9-0-1, is ranked second nationally and controls its own destiny as far as winning the national championship is concerned.

All the Irish have to do to win the national title is beat the 17th-ranked Trojans (7-2-1) and then defeat top-rated Georgia (11-0) in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1.

Southern Cal, on the other hand, had an unbeaten streak of 28 games before losing to Rose Bowl-bound Washington on Nov. 15. The following Saturday, the Trojans were beaten by crosstown rival UCLA, giving them two losses in a row.

Both were suffered at the Los Angeles Coliseum, site of Saturday's game. For USC to lose three straight at the Coliseum would seem to be impossible.

"All the news we get is that they are approaching this as the biggest game in USC history," said Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine. "They're looking at our ranking, plus they don't want to lose three in a row."

"And don't forget, one of the greatest incentives for any team is to finish on a winning note."

The nationally televised game will begin at 12:50 p.m., PST before an expected crowd of nearly 90,000. The possibility of a wet field loomed according to weather forecasts.

Notre Dame, a slight favorite, hasn't had much luck against the Trojans in recent years. USC has won five of six last six games against the Irish and is 9-2-2 since 1966, when Southern Cal was thrashed 51-0.

Both teams will rely on youngsters in key positions. The Irish have been doing that most of the season with freshman Blair Kiel at quarterback at sophomore Phil Carter at tailback, among others.

The Trojans offensive backfield will feature nothing but inexperience, with five sophomores sharing the duties.

Senior quarterback Gordon Adams suffered a knee injury and was lost for the season in the Washington game. He was replaced by Scott Tinsley.

Junior tailback Marcus Allen, one of the country's top rushers, won't play because of an eye injury suffered in the UCLA game. Anthony Gibson and Michael Harper are expected to alternate at that spot.

Two fullbacks have been lost — Doug MacKenzie had knee surgery at mid-season and Paul DiLullo has been excused from the game because of a death in his family. Thomas Jefferson and Bob McClanahan will share the position.

"The key will probably lie in which offense gets going," said Devine, who is stepping down as the Notre Dame coach at the end of the season. "Like us, they're inexperienced on offense."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The latest rankings of the World Bridge Federation show that the top U.S. grandmaster is Bob Hamman of Dallas. He is ranked seventh overall, but he is closing the gap on the Italians who head the list. Here is an example of his style, taken from the World Pairs Championship he won in Las Palmas in 1970.

Hamman chose to play three no trump rather than four spades because of his excellent stoppers in the unbid suits. Had West led a club, Hamman's decision would have been justified at trick one. Unfortunately, West led a diamond, and Hamman had a problem.

At rubber bridge, it is of little consequence whether you make nine tricks at no trump or ten playing in a major suit. In pairs competition, however, the difference between 120 for your contract and 100 can mean the difference between a very good score and a very poor one. Hamman could see that even if the club finesse lost, there were ten tricks at a spade contract unless the suit broke very badly. To avoid a poor score, he had to make at least ten tricks at no trump.

East won the ace of diamonds and shifted to the ten of clubs. The queen lost to the king, and back came a low club to the nine and ace. Now declarer cashed the ace-king of spades, but the queen did not drop. Next came the king and ace of hearts, and declarer learned the bad news that the hearts were not going to produce four tricks.

At the risk of going down in his contract, Hamman found a line that produced the vital tenth trick. He cashed three rounds of diamonds, forcing East to part with a heart and a club. Declarer knew that two of East's three remaining cards were hearts, and he gambled that the last one was the queen of spades. He boldly exited with the jack of spades!

All was well. East had to win the spade, and he was forced to return a heart into dummy's queen-ten tenace to

Deadline Set

For Entries

The deadline for entries in the upcoming Christmas Parade, sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees, is Wednesday, Dec. 10, a Jaycee spokesman noted.

Floyd Little of the local club said that persons with inquiries regarding parade entries should contact him at 752-4137. Little noted that some 50 entries have been received so far for the aturday, Dec. 13 event, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

The parade route will be the same as in recent years, according to Little, with the activities beginning on Dickinson Avenue at W. Ninth Street, proceeding down Dickinson to Washington, north on Washington to W. Fifth, east on Fifth to Reade Street, and then north on Reade Street to E. Second for termination.

give declarer an overtrick.

Since the normal lead against four spades was the ten of clubs, Hamman earned an excellent score for his daring play.

Has One 'Very Boaring' Cap

ELDORA, Iowa (AP) — Larry Hagman is interested in hats, but he finds at least one cap in his collection to be very boaring.

Hagman, who wears a large cowboy hat while portraying the evil oil tycoon J.R. Ewing on the hit CBS series "Dallas," was discussing his hat collection on a recent television talk show when Pat O'Reilly just happened to tune him in.

O'Reilly works for International Boar Semen of Eldora, a firm that extracts semen from male pigs and markets it worldwide to impregnate sows. O'Reilly decided to send Hagman one of the company's promotional caps to add to his collection.

Hagman wrote back, saying he thought the cap was "fantastic" and enclosing $50 to pay for 16 more hats for members of the "Dallas" crew.

Blame Rightists In Slaying Of 3 Nuns

BY VICENTE MORALES
Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's ruling junta accused right-wing terrorists of assassinating three Roman Catholic nuns and a lay missionary, all Americans, and piling the four women into a common dirt grave after shooting each in the back of the head.

"I totally repudiate this crime that is not only a crime, but a premeditated murder, irrational and of a paranoid mind that wants to destabilize the government. It is a premeditated murder of the right wing," José Napoleon Duarte, a member of the civilian-military junta, told a news conference Thursday.

No group claimed responsibility for killing the women. But right-wing terrorists opposed to the strong human rights advocacy of the Catholic Church in El Salvador have assassinated at least nine priests since 1977, including Archbishop Oscar Romero, who was shot to death while celebrating Mass March 24. The last priest to be assassinated died Monday.

The women were shot late Tuesday and discovered by peasants Wednesday. They were identified as Sister Dorothy Kazel, 41, of Cleveland, a member of the Ursuline Order, Ita Ford and Maura Clarke, Maryknoll sisters from New York City, and Jean Donovan 27, a lay volunteer from Cleveland. A soldier at the scene said all four were shot in the back of the head with a large caliber pistol and buried one on top of the other.

"Helping others cost them their lives," said a nun who knelt and prayed beside the makeshift grave.

The bodies were exhumed Thursday from the grave beside an unpaved, isolated road about 30 miles south of the capital while reporters, peasants and U.S. Ambassador Robert White looked on.

"I am sorry," White said as the first bloody body was uncovered.

The ambassador, visibly furious, turned his back on a reporter who asked if he had been informed by the National Guard on Wednesday about the discovery of the bodies.

"I am not going to say anything because this time nothing will be done incorrectly," he said.

Another reporter overheard him say, "This time they won't get away with it. They just won't."

An embassy official said the U.S. government would take charge of the bodies.

A squad of about 12 National Guardsmen arrived as the bodies were being exhumed and surrounded the area with guns drawn.

White, in shirtsleeves and heavily guarded, was heard asking another embassy official, "Do you think they are going to do something to us?"

"No, I don't think so. Too many foreign journalists," the other official replied.

The sisters were in El Salvador to aid refugees from rural areas who were fleeing the violence between leftist and rightist guerrillas that has claimed an estimated 8,500 lives this year.

A Maryknoll spokeswoman in Ossining, N.Y., said the whereabouts of Sisters Ford and Clarke were last known when they were confirmed to have boarded a commercial airlines flight from Managua, Nicaragua Tuesday night for San Salvador. She said Miss Donovan and Sister Kazel met the pair at San Salvador's airport later that night. The van they picked them up in was found burned out on a road near the airport Wednesday.

Sister Kazel and Miss Donovan worked at a mission in La Libertad, about 30 miles west of here, teaching children and adults and running a nutrition program for pregnant women.

Miss Donovan's father, reached in Sarasota, Fla., said the missionary's family had tried in vain to convince her to leave the violence-wracked Central American country.

"We tried to get her to come back, but she thought she was doing some good," Ray Donovan said. "She had signed on for three years. She was determined to stick it out."

Ford And Chrysler Bid For Buyers Via Rebates

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. are making new money-saving offers to potential buyers amid fears that surging interest rates will stall car sales.

Chrysler is offering a rebate that gets bigger as interest rates rise. Ford is offering 12-percent loans on certain models at a time when the financing cost sometimes approaches 18 percent.

Though Chrysler was the only domestic manufacturer to show sales gains in November, Chairman Lee A. Iacocca said Thursday said there is little hope of showing a profit for October to December, so the No. 3 automaker is preparing to make more cuts in investment plans.

Chrysler is keying its latest rebates to the prime rate, the rate banks charge their best-risk business customers. That rate is now 18½ percent, up from a summer low that ranged at about 11 percent.

Buyers will get a check equal to the percentage-point difference between the prime rate and 12½ percent, multiplied by the price of the car. Thus, a $6,500 car bought today would carry a $390 rebate — 6 percent of the price — because the difference between 18½ percent and 12½ percent is 6 percentage points.

Chrysler already is offering rebates of $250 to stockholders, employees and employees of supplier companies for purchases of all its models except the Imperial.

Ford is making available 12 percent financing "through participating (dealers and) financial institutions," including its wholly owned subsidiary, Ford Motor Credit Corp.

According to a Ford announcement Thursday, the offer applies to only six models — the Ford Granada, Mustang and Thunderbird and the Mercury Cougar, Capri and Cougar XR-7.

Ford's offer applies to cars delivered through Feb. 7. Chrysler's applies to cars delivered or ordered through Jan. 20.

Ask Suspending Of Bid-Riggers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Five paving contractors indicted earlier this week on bid-rigging charges should be suspended from North Carolina's bidding list, state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Thursday.

Edmisten said he also had advised state transportation officials that pending contracts with two of the companies totaling nearly $16.5 million should be voided.

Any action to suspend the companies would have to be taken by the State Board of Transportation, which meets in Asheville Dec. 11-12. The board already has suspended 31 companies from bidding on state business because of bid-rigging allegations.

The companies cited by Edmisten were indicted Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Charlotte. Two of the companies, F.T. Williams Co. of Charlotte and the L.A. Reynolds Co. of Winston-Salem, have submitted low bids on five projects up for consideration at the meeting next week.

"My initial response would be that we would recommend against those companies having the bids," Edmisten said. "That's the official position of this office."

Edmisten said that while "an indictment is not a legal determination, the context of the matter is that the federal government hasn't goofed yet (in its investigation) and as a practical matter, these individuals (and companies) will likely be judged guilty."

Edmisten added, "It is not in the best interests of the state to award contracts to firms or persons accused of bid rigging."

Other companies indicted Tuesday were Superior Paving Co. of Statesville, Crowder Construction Co. of Charlotte, and Crowder Asphalt Corp. of Charlotte. Several individuals also were indicted.

State officials said the Williams company had submitted low bids of $8.55 million on projects in Pender and Columbus counties.

The Reynolds company had the apparent low bids on projects totaling $7.93 million in Onslow, Guilford, Beaufort, Greene, Jones and Pitt counties.

Determined To Finish Terms

By The Associated Press
The parents of a Roman Catholic lay missionary shot to death with three American nuns in El Salvador say their daughter was determined to finish her three-year assignment in the tiny Central American country despite mushrooming violence.

"She was determined to stick it out," said Raymond Donovan of Sarasota, Fla.

Jean Donovan, 27, a volunteer from Cleveland, disappeared Tuesday from a trip to the airport in the capital of San Salvador and her body was found Thursday outside the village of Santiago Nonualco.

The dead nuns were identified as Ita Ford and Maura Clarke of New York City and Dorothea Kazel of Cleveland.

Missionaries from other countries had been slain by right-wing terrorists because of their strong human rights stands.

"She seemed to feel there wasn't any danger because up to this point they hadn't bothered any Americans ... and no women," Donovan said of his daughter.

Cleveland Bishop Anthony M. Pilla, whose diocese sponsors the mission in the town of La Libertad where the four women served, said the operation would be reassessed. The women had been involved in nutrition programs for pregnant women and providing aid to refugees. The Rev. Alfred Winter, head of the Diocesan Mission Office, said Sister Kazel was "a woman slight of build, a woman of great wit who worked easily with others."

Miss Donovan "had more guts than I'll ever have," Winter said. He described her as a "strong individual, but sensitive and with great compassion."

A Jesuit priest, participating in a New York memorial service for the nuns, called on the United States to end military aid to El Salvador. "We must collaborate so that military aid will be terminated," the Rev. Rafael Moreno told about 1,000 worshippers at St. Patrick's Cathedral. "It only promotes violence and bloodshed."

"Why were these sisters killed?" Romero asked in his Spanish-language sermon. "They cannot be called leftists or terrorists, these sisters, because all they did was distribute food and medicine to our people."

Junior Ewing's License Plate

HERINGTON, Kan. (AP) — Can you guess what Junior Ewing's personalized license plate says?

"JR Ewing," of course. The tag was an anniversary gift to Ewing, who has been called Junior for years.

Like the villain played by Larry Hagman on the hit TV series "Dallas," Junior Ewing also has been shot. A conductor for the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad, he suffered a minor leg wound in August 1974 when a sniper shot at a freight train he was riding.

In a highly publicized "Dallas" episode two weeks ago today, fans finally learned who wounded the fictitious Ewing.

But six years after the local Ewing was wounded, residents of the town of 3,800 can still wonder: "Who shot 'JR Ewing'?"

Turkey Ends All With Chickens

EAST GRANBY, Conn. (AP) — A 15-pound wild turkey, in what appeared to be a kamikaze-like attempt to avenge the deaths of its kindred fowl, smashed through the windshield of a truck loaded with frozen chickens, state police reported.

The truck's driver was wearing glasses and was uninjured in the incident, but "the bird was deceased," police said.

A state trooper in a cruiser was directly behind the truck and witnessed the event Wednesday. The name of the driver was not released.

Leukemia Flares In Col. Sanders

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The leukemia that has plagued Col. Harland Sanders, founder and symbol of Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants, flared up again recently, said a spokesman for the fast-food chain.

The blood disease had been in remission since September, according to John Cox, a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken. Cox said Thursday the flareup "means Sanders won't be going home from the hospital any time soon."

Reagan Expected To Take Tough Anti-Castro Stand

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The sun-drenched but mostly poor islands of the Caribbean can expect greater aid and cooperation from the incoming administration of Ronald Reagan, observers say.

The president-elect gained the support of the Cuban-American community during his campaign by vowing to stop Cuban President Fidel Castro from "exporting communism." He also promised to increase economic assistance to the Caribbean.

Hints about a possible Reagan policy emerged just before the election from Roger Fontaine of the American Enterprise Institute, a senior Reagan adviser mentioned frequently as a likely choice for a high State Department post.

"Caribbean countries in trouble — friendly to the United States and in trouble economically — would get our support in the Caribbean and Central America, but the Caribbean in particular would receive higher priority than the previous administration (gave it)," Fontaine said.

Reagan's chief foreign policy adviser, Richard V. Allen, last week put a gag on the president-elect's foreign affairs advisers, suggesting they postpone meetings with reporters and foreign visitors because of "the distortions that might result from your conversation."

However, a story in Thursday editions of The New York Times detailed a transition team report recommending a reduction in the influence of "social reformers" and human rights advocates in the State Department's Bureau of Inter-American Affairs, which deals with the Caribbean and Latin America.

The report criticized President Carter's advisers on the National Security Council and the role played by some ambassadors, specially Robert White, ambassador to El Salvador.

Ambassadors "are not supposed to function in the capacity of social reformers and advocates of new theories of social change" in the countries to which they are accredited, said the report.

White has supported land redistribution and nationalization of the banking system in El Salvador, now ruled by a military-civilian coalition fighting against extreme leftists.

In regard to human rights, the report said the Reagan administration should avoid confrontations with governments accused of violations. In contrast, Carter has actively encouraged other nations to improve their records on this issue and has sometimes threatened to withhold aid from countries who abused human rights.

Despite the silence of Reagan's advisers, a consensus emerging from interviews with State Department experts, scholars and Republican Senate sources on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is that Reagan, like Carter, will concentrate on providing economic aid to friendly governments, while taking a much harder line toward Castro.

"The Carter administration has tended to ignore Cuban activities in the last four years and tried to adopt a warm relationship with Castro," said a Republican source on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who asked not to be identified.

"I think it would be fairly safe to say those sorts of relationships are not likely under President Reagan. I think Cuban involvement in places like Angola, Ethiopia, Nicaragua and other countries will be looked upon more seriously and with grave concern by the Reagan administration," he said.

Under the Reagan presidency, U.S. immigration laws will likely be toughened to stop the flow of refugees, which in 1980 alone brought more than 125,000 Cubans and some 25,000 Haitians into the country.

American companies might be offered incentives to invest in U.S.-leaning nations like the Dominican Republic, Haiti and Jamaica.

And money will likely continue flowing into hurricane-ravaged Windward Island countries such as Dominica and St. Lucia to revive their one-crope economies.

Hurricane David in 1979 and Hurricane Allen this year virtually destroyed the banana crop on Dominica and heavily damaged crops on other islands. U.S. aid to the Windward islands for fiscal 1981 is $193 million.

Franklin Knight, a professor of Latin American history at Johns Hopkins University and a Caribbean expert outside Reagan's sphere of advisers, suggested the new president might find it easier to work with new governments in the Caribbean because of the conservative tilt of recent elections there.

"I think it will be easy to formulate some kind of economic assistance package because (the new governments) won't be screaming about social responsibility," Knight said. "There's going to be less concern about government-to-government relations or having the same kind of dispute this country had with the Manley government."

Before former Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica was defeated last mis administration's growing dependence on Cuba.

Knight says any new American policy must concentrate on economics and put less emphasis on military and strategic matters.

Seaga last week told the annual Miami Conference on the Caribbean that unless countries like the United States provide aid, his nation again could drift towards communism.

But he also said he expects that help will be forthcoming once Reagan takes office next month.

"We expect to have a very good and effective working relationship with the Reagan administration, especially as far as economic policy is concerned," Seaga says.

But a current State Department official warned that the United States should not grow overconfident.

"You have to remember there are acute social problems, unemployment rates of up to 30 percent and, in some cases, 50 percent among young people.

"Other islands face serious economic problems because of dependence on only the few commodities they export. Their economic futures aren't bright unless there is a considerable development of resources," the expert said.

Legal Rights Are Discussed

The legal rights of volunteers in public service activities was one of the topics of discussion of the December 3 meeting of members of the Community Schools Advisory Council held at Sheppard Library.

Executive Order Number 48, signed by Governor James B. Hunt, Jr. in April of this year, gives legal sanction to volunteers working in state agencies.

Among stipulations in the order is one that requires state agencies to recognize documented volunteer work as partial fulfillment for state employment training and experience requirements.

The order also insures protection under the laws governing tort claims against the state and confirms the exemption of volunteers from the State Personnel Act and the Worker's Compensation Act.

The matter of legal protection of volunteers in the event of an injury incurred by persons with whom they might be working with as volunteers has been a matter of concern to volunteers — and the provisions of Executive Order 48 clarifies their status. It also provides representation by the Attorney General should the need for such representation arise.

The Community Schools Advisory Council, whose members advise Carolyn Ferebee, the program's director on a variety of decisions, has three officers and three committees.

Advisory Council officers are Frank Morgan, chairman; Louise Perry, vice-chairman; and Rosa Edwards, secretary.

One committee deals with community groups use of school facilities. This committee studies and helps determine which community groups and organizations may sponsor programs and activities in school facilities with provisions for payment of custodial fees and utility charges paid from funds allocated to the Community Schools Program. This committee is chaired by Shirley Morrison, and members are Rufus Huggins, Frank Morgan and Charles Vincent.

A second committee, one designed for improving communication and coordination of programs and activities, is chaired by Mary Williams, with Sandra Harshberger and Patricia Alligood as committee members. This committee's task is to study, investigate and determine better ways of communicating between homes and schools, and for ways to coordinate system-wide programs and activities.

Paula Bridges is chairperson and James Brown and Lillie Reid are members of the third committee — one on the extended school programs. The primary purpose of this committee is to investigate possibilities of establishing extended school programs in the Greenville schools.

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Interested in a Christmas present guaranteed to give you a natural high?

Try Mount Juneau, a 3,576-foot-tall mountain that towers over Alaska's scenic capital. It comes complete with development rights for a tramway to the peak and mountaintop property suited for a fancy resort, not to mention a history of controversy.

The price: $6 million.

Chuck Keen, a local filmmaker whose latest adventure was filming great white sharks off the coast of Australia, says he has decided to put the peak on the auction block.

In 1971, Keen paid $10,000 for 15 old mining claims totalling 191 acres on the top of the mountain, which rises sharply outside Juneau.

For years Keen has talked of building a tram from downtown Juneau to the peak and a hotel-convention center on the top, but lack of financing appears to have left the plan a dream.

Besides money problems, questions about the feasibility of the scheme have been raised because winds that blow off nearby Taku Glacier and adjacent icefields are reported to reach 200 mph on the peak. And some residents oppose the project because of environmental concerns.

But Keen insists the tramway will be built some day. He claims that criteria established by city officials for the proposed development and objections raised by tram opponents have hamstrung his efforts and hurt his chances for financing.

'Medicine' Made By Honest North Carolina People

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — The liquid was described as being used daily "by frail children, invalid ladies and diseased, suffering men for the betterment of their health."

In fact, it was called "the best medicine in the world." "It" was Casper's whiskey, made by "Honest North Carolina People."

John L. Casper published a 32-page booklet to extol the merits of his products and to explain, "I claim to be an honest man and I sell honest whiskeys. I guess I am the only real, living man engaged in the mail-order whiskey business who is not afraid to show his face."

And there, on page one, mustachioed John Casper's photograph was signed, "Yours for honest whiskeys."

That was back in 1904, and Casper took great pains to explain that whiskey-making was a time-honored occupation in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Proudly he recounted that his family had for generations been "engaged in the manufacture of this product after their secret formula," mainly for their own use. Then, in 1861, his grandfather began selling the products of his distillery.

When J.C. Casper returned from four years in the army during the Civil War, he joined his father as an apprentice, eventually taking over the business and expanding it. This may have been Private James C. Casper from Rowan County who served in Co. K, Fourth North Carolina Regiment.

Finally, before the end of the century, J.C.'s son, John L. Casper, became actively connected with the still and took over its operation. Soon John acquired more stills, and by 1904 he owned an even dozen in western North Carolina.

But he did not stop there. In the face of competition from "greedy unprincipled dealers," he convinced the owners of 21 other distilleries that there was a need for controlled quality and mail-order sales.

He formed the Casper Co. and contracted for these 21 other distilleries to add their entire output to that of his own stills. In Winston-Salem he constructed a six-story fireproof building covering a city block.

The stock from the various stills was brought to the receiving room in seasoned oak barrels whose interiors had been charred over maple wood fires. After being tested initially, to determine acceptable quality, the liquid was aged in rooms with glass roofs so that the sun's rays could strike the barrels at right angles.

This provided an average temperature of about 120 degrees in the summer and 90 degrees in the winter.

The heat slowly forced evaporation of impurities through the charred barrels, leaving the pure whiskey in a mild, mellow form.

After aging — sometimes for many years — the whiskey was filtered through huge tanks packed with layers of white sand, maple charcoal, linen and heavy woollens.

The filtered whiskey was then placed in 225-gallon barrels and tested. If Internal Revenue Service officials approved its quality, tax stamps were affixed.

As sales required, the liquid was poured into bottles, jugs, kegs and demijohns ranging from small flasks to five-gallon vessels.

By 1904 the Casper Co. handled up to 2,000 orders per day. In November and December, the plant operated 24 hours a day. It claimed a quarter of a million customers around the world.

Prices ranged from $1.50 per gallon for three-year-old "Mountain" whiskey to $3.80 per gallon for "Gold Band," claimed to be "without a vestige of headache."

A hundred half pints of corn whiskey could be bought for $15. Peach brandy sold for $1.50 and scuppernon wine for 85 cents per gallon.

For $1.25, one could get a quart of "very old private stock" in a glass bottle in the form of a naked lady.

Casper's success was advertised in large letters running the length of his plant in Winston-Salem: "Largest building in the United States devoted exclusively to the mail order whiskey business."

But the days of the business were number. Four years later North Carolinians voted for statewide prohibition.

Casper later entered the grocery business and operated a "basketeria." He died July 22, 1921, and was buried in Salem Cemetery.

Forsyth County histories have conveniently ignored the Casper Co. which three-quarters of a century ago held the record as the world's largest mail-order whiskey company. One wonders if the record would have been ignored if Casper had made Bibles rather than whiskey.

New Hope for Cancer Vaccine

Three letters arrived in this week's mail that carried the same overtone of anxiety and interest in cancer. All three readers asked about the possibility of being immunized and vaccinated against cancer.

This idea once was thought to be only a farfetched scientific dream. Today, however, the possibility is slowly being converted to a reality.

Some types of cancer in experimental animals can indeed be controlled and even cured by the new advances in the science of immunology.

The body's immune system calls out all its forces to control invading germs and viruses in an effort to cure infection. By a most complex process, the white cells that circulate in the blood go into immediate action. They attach themselves to the germs and overwhelm them, thus protecting the body from infection.

Today, extensive investigation is a continuing process in laboratories and universities all over the world — with the goal of discovering techniques for the early detection of cancer, for its control and for its cure.

Progress in the science of immunology has demonstrated that there is great hope for the eventual prevention and control of this scourge of mankind.

Our 14-year-old boy has a very definite enlargement of the breasts. This causes him embarrassment. He now is at the point where he refuses to go to the gym or to swim with his friends. Should we wait until he becomes an adolescent or should we do something about it now? — Mrs. C.K., La.

Dear Mrs. K.:

"Gynecomastia" is the technical name for abnormal enlargement of the breast in males. The basic cause of this is often a hormone imbalance, especially of the male sex hormone known as "androgen."

No, I would not wait any longer before getting specific advice about how to handle this delicate problem. As you already seem to suspect, psychological and emotional consequences are associated with gynecomastia. Everything you do must be aimed at giving your son the feeling that his masculinity is not threatened.

In addition, complicated hormone studies can provide valuable information about any hormone imbalance that may be present. Most often this balance can be adjusted.

It is also important that your son be given the assurance that something is being done to control his condition.

Very frequently the enlarged breasts spontaneously disappear as the youngster passes through adolescence and into young adulthood.

In some instances, when medical or hormonal adjustment is not effective, simple safe surgery — performed by a plastic surgeon or by a general surgeon — can be tremendously rewarding. Now is the time for you to seek, through your doctors, the options that are available to you.
