A Rush To Spend In Congress' Final Push

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the Senate decorating the last "Christmas tree" of the 96th Congress, some senators say the presents in a government spending package have piled up more than high enough to reach the budget ceiling.

The Senate was in its second straight day of work today on a stopgap budget resolution originally intended simply to provide money for federal agencies that will not receive their full appropriations for the 1981 fiscal year before Congress adjourns.

But members are using the legislation as a vehicle to carry along measures they have been unable to get passed this year or that they think won't be passed next year in a more conservative Congress.

There seems to be a "great desire to make this a Christmas tree," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

His comment came Wednesday after the Senate had considered the measure for about eight hours and Byrd discovered about 40 amendments still awaited consideration.

The measure had become so complex that Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., the floor manager of the bill, said it is "virtually impossible to summarize."

So much is being lumped into the measure that senators concerned about its effect on the federal budget attached an amendment Wednesday that would allow spending only until the $632.4 billion budget ceiling enacted by Congress last month is reached.

At that point, said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., "there'll be no money."

Domenici, who will become chairman of the Senate Budget Committee next year when Republicans take control of the Senate, said the resolution would be at least $4.6 billion over the budget ceiling.

He said later the amendment "says that unless Congress next year and the president can find ways" to cut spending "one of two things will happen: the country could run out of money, or we could adopt" a higher budget ceiling.

Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., who will head the House Budget Committee in the new Congress, said that without further action next year the budget ceiling could be reached "sometime next spring."

The House earlier had passed a version of the stopgap measure — extending spending until next June 5 — when it became clear that Congress would adjourn before completing action on all the major appropriations bills necessary to keep the government running.

But the Senate Appropriations Committee attached scores of amendments to the bill and more were being added on the Senate floor. The Senate version of the bill would extend spending until next Sept. 30.

After the Senate completes its consideration of the measure, House-Senate negotiators will have to work out differences between the two bills before the legislation can receive final congressional approval and Congress can adjourn.

Next N.C. Speaker Looks For '81 Money Problems

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An estimated 200 persons attended a reception here yesterday for Liston Ramsey of Marshall, in Madison County, slated to be the next speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives.

Ramsey, a veteran of ten terms in the General Assembly, was nominated as the next House speaker at a Democratic caucus in Raleigh, last week. He will be elected at the opening session of the Legislature on January 14.

Speaking to a gathering of Pitt County leaders and General Assembly members from surrounding counties prior to the reception, Ramsey said the 1981 legislative session will have some, "tough issues to face," most of them dealing with money — "what are you going to do with the money you have? We'll be hard pressed to meet our needs."

Ramsey added, however, "By making the wisest possible use of our resources, we'll meet the actual needs of our people."

Greenville and Pitt County, "is a well-rounded community, fast becoming an industrial center," the House speaker nominee continued, adding that the well-kept grounds of the manufacturing facilities is evidence that, "someone has great pride."

Ramsey noted that, "East Carolina University is a great university," and is, "getting greater." He noted that ECU and Pitt Community College, "draws in industry," because the schools provide well trained workers.

And Ramsey called ECU, "a pace setter in helping meet the health needs," of Eastern North Carolina and the rest of the state, through the School of Medicine.

"One of the General Assembly's finest hours," according to Ramsey, was the establishment of the medical school at ECU, which, he said has, "support from the whole General Assembly.

"The medical school is not complete. We know that. But it will be completed," Ramsey emphasized. "It'll have my support."

The reception for Ramsey was sponsored by 11 business and community leaders, including House members Ed Warren and Sam Bundy.

NATO Agrees On Retaliation Plans

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO foreign ministers agreed today to retaliate against any Soviet intervention in Poland with a series of political and economic measures that would have "very grave" consequences for the Soviet Union, the French foreign minister said.

Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet told reporters the 15 foreign ministers were united in planning a series of responses. "The ministers made it clear that if there were an eventual Soviet intervention in Poland the consequences would be very grave on all levels — diplomatic, political, economic and defensive."

By defensive, Francois-Poncet was referring to beefing up the military capacity of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and not to a NATO military response to a Soviet intervention.

The NATO ministerial council also agreed to reconvene in emergency session if the Soviets did take military action against Poland.

After the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan last December, some U. S. observers felt the Western allies dragged their feet in their reaction to the move. Similarly, the allies' response to Iran's taking of the U. S. hostages wasfelt to lack bite.

Francois-Poncet said NATO's main interest now is to leave the Soviets with "no misunderstanding" about the gravity of an intervention.

U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie joined his 14 European and Canadian counterparts in the meeting.

Jones Seen Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., is favored to be elected chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee today, thanks to a key endorsement Wednesday.

The influential House Democratic Steering and Policy Committee endorsed Jones, giving himm a clear advantage over opponent Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y. The House Democratic Caucus chooses new committee chairmen today.

Biaggi reportedly was considering dropping out of the race in light of the steering committee's endorsement.

If elected, Jones, 67, would be the first North Carolina representative to serve as a committee chairman since Rep. David Henderson gave up the chairmanship of the House Post Office Committee to retire in 1976.

Jones, who has represented the 1st District since 1966, currently is chairman of the House Agriculture Tobacco Subcommittee.

That post would most likely go to 7th Distict Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., if Jones wins the new chairmanship.

The merchant marine committee is concerned with such issues as coastal zone management, the Coast Guard, shipping and navigation.

The current chairman, Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y. was defeated in his re-election bid last month.

Jones has campaigned hard for the post and has earned the endorsement of the House Democratic leadership, a House coalition of Southerners and conservatives, and seven maritime unions.

Paper Claims Hostages To Be Freed Christmas

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A leftist Beirut newspaper reputed to be close to Iran's revolutionary regime reported today that the 52 American hostages are expected to be freed on Christmas Day. But there was no evidence that the report was any more reliable than numerous others like it in the past.

Quoting unnamed informed Iranian sources, the newspaper As-Safir said:

"Agreement has been completed between the United States and Iran to resolve the hostage issue. They are expected to be freed on the 25th of this month."

No authoritative officials in Tehran or Washington were immediately available for comment on the report.

As-Safir said a compromise has been reached on the Iranian demand that the wealth the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi transferred abroad be returned to Iran. It said the U.S. government agreed to freeze the shah's deposits in American banks pending a court verdict on whether to turn the money over to the government of Iran or his heirs.

The sources said the Iranian government accepted this position, which was set forth in a U.S. communication delivered to the Algerian government last week and relayed by it to Tehran.

As-Safir's report said nothing about the three other conditions set by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Majlis, Iran's parliament, for the release of the Americans who today were spending their 404th in captivity.

These were a pledge of non-interference in Iran's domestic affairs, the unfreezing of Iran's deposits in U.S. banks and abandonment of all legal action against Iran in the United STates.

The United States has repeatedly pledged not to interfere in Iran. Earlier reports from Tehran and Washington said it told the Iranian government President Carter could rescind his order freezing the bank deposits, but the U.S. government has no power to stop legal action against Iran by private Americans and companies. Even if Carter rescinded his order, much of the Iranian funds would be blocked because of such actions.

Airline Facing $82,000 Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eastern Airlines may have to pay $82,000 in civil fines for prematurely dropping service from Orlando, Fla., and Chicago to St. Croix in the Virgin Islands last year, says the consumer arm of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The Bureau of Consumer Protection said Wednesday that on Oct. 12, 1979, Eastern filed a petition with the CAB to pull out of those markets and ended the service on Oct. 31 even though board regulations require a 60-day waiting period.

Registration For Draft To Be In January

Selective Service registration for men born in 1962 will take place during the week of January 5, 1981. Men born in 1963 (and later) should register within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

This is a continuation of the program begun last summer, when men born in 1960 and 1961 visited post offices across the nation to fill in the registration forms.

The purpose of the registration is to build a pool of names and addresses from which Selective Service could draw in an emergency. This program is designed to return the Selective Service System to the readiness level required for an emergency back-up to America's peace time volunteer armed forces.

Guidelines for registration are:

— Who Must Register — Male citizens and aliens residing in the United States born in 1960, 1961 or 1962 except those on student or similar visas or who are members of trade or diplomatic missions, and men already serving on active duty with the Armed Forces. Members of reserve components not on active duty must register. Men born in 1963 and later years will be required to register within 30 days of their 18th birthdays.

— When To Register — Men born in 1962, during the week of January 5th. Men born in 1963, within 30 days of their 18th birthdays. Men born in 1960 and 1961 should already have registered — those who have not are to do so as soon as possible.

— Where to Register — At any post office in the nation, or at embassies or consular offices overseas.

Final Days Are Spent On Trips

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several members of President Carter's lame-duck Cabinet and their aides are spending their last days in office on taxpayer-financed trips to some of the world's glamour spots: London, Paris, Hawaii, Peking.

The journeys all involve official business, but at least two Cabinet members canceled international tours because of their belief that such travel would seem inappropriate during their transition from office. Even these secretaries sent assistants in their place. Destination: China.

China is particularily attractive to the Carter lame ducks. Three delegations were headed there; others were headed for Europe and the Orient.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall was arriving today in Paris, where he will spend two days before heading to China for five days.

Meanwhile, Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan Jr. was returning from a four-day trip to Paris, where he attended an international meeting of energy ministers.

Citing the need to contain inflation, Carter asked each department and agency head to cut their administrative travel costs by 20 percent.

BEST FRIEND MISSING

A week ago our 11-year-old son walked to the end of the road with his dog to catch the school bus. It was the last time he saw his best friend. This beagle had a collar on with our son's name and phone number. We have advertised in the paper and on the radio and have checked with the health department and all our neighbors to no avail. We did find out that a neighbor's beagle disappeared under the same circumstances last year. Mrs. C. W. Jr.

More N.C. Pupils Pass Competency Test

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The percentage of high school juniors who passed the state competency tests for math and reading rose this fall, according to figures released today.

Gov. Jim Hunt released the statewide results during a news conference and said the greatest percentage of improvement was scored by minority students and those whose parents have less than a high school education.

"In studying this report, I was particularly gratified to learn that there was an improvement in the passing rate for students from all ethnic groups," Hunt said in a prepared statement.

The results indicate that statewide, 92.5 percent of all high school juniors who took the test for the first time passed the reading section. That is a 2.5 percent improvement over the passage rate from the first time the test was given in 1978 and .5 percent better than the score from last fall.

In the mathematics sections, 89.4 percent of the juniors taking the test passed it. That score is 4.4 percent higher than during the fall of 1978 and .4 percent higher than the passage rate last year.

"I want to emphasize that the cutoff scores on these tests were set before the fall 1978 test administration and have not been change," Hunt said.

The governor said the passing rate for black youths increased by 6.1 percent over 1978 in reading. For Indian students, the improvement over 1978 was 7.3 percent.

Hunt said that in math, the passing rate for black students was up 9.5 percent over 1978 and for Indian students the improvement was 7.4 percent.

"There could be no better evidence that our testing program is working," Hunt said. "Teachers, parents and students have been motivated to work harder and take full advantage of the remedial help that is available."

A student must pass the minimum competency test in order to receive a high school diploma. The competency testing was ordered by the General Assembly in 1977 at Hunt's urging.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A couple from Chicago recently discovered it's not easy making a "home" out of a former "house of pleasure."

Oh, sure, you can put in a nice lawn, a Doberman pinscher guard dog, a baby, and a huge sign that reads, "PRIVATE RESIDENCE. KEEP OUT," but to sex seekers, it's kinky and they still pound on the door at all hours of the day and night.

The story brought back memories of a "house" in my neighborhood that was vacated by a madam. Five of us sat around one afternoon and fantasized what a house would look like that was decorated in "Early Brothel."

"Well, I don't want to know," said Peg. "Just knowing that house exists in a neighborhood that voted for Reagan is disgusting."

"It should be torn down," said Juanita. "I don't have time to stand at the window all day and check out the cars."

"I wouldn't have known it was there," shrugged Ardelle, "if I didn't get a glimpse of it through a hole in the south hedge."

"What would you say if I told you I could get a key?" I asked.

They said in unison, "We'd kill for it."

From here on in, there is virtually no dialogue to report. Five long-married ladies who acted like they got their children from a 4-H project that got out of hand filed silently through the rooms observing, touching, each with her own private fantasy.

The kitchen was the size of a broom closet. It was lust at first sight. We were stunned by a large room with nothing in it but a pull-down movie screen at one end. You'd have thought we had never seen a mattress floor before.

But it was the bedroom that stopped all of us dead in our tracks. A zebra-skin bar dominated one end of the room. There was a jacuzzi, a steam room, long flowing chiffon curtains, soft music that floated through the air and a shag carpet that went to your knees. A massive stone fireplace was at the other end and mirrors were everywhere. Lots of mirrors.

Seeing a button, I pushed it. It was like show time. The mirrored ceiling came alive with small, dancing stars, creating a celestial mood. The large, round bed, swathed in red plush velvet, began to revolve slowly. Someone could have slung a dead cat through the window and no one would have moved. We just watched that bed go around ... and around ... and around.

Suddenly, Peg kicked off her shoes, spun through the air, landed in the middle of the bed and shouted, "Hot damn!"

The sign on the front yard read, "By appointment only." It figured.

Mother-In-Law Always Late

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Regarding BEWILDERED IN BUCKS COUNTY, whose wife was always late: I have a lovely mother-in-law whom I love dearly, but she was never on time for anything. Whenever we'd pick her up, we would have to wait about half an hour for her to get ready, and consequently she made us late.

After numerous times of being late ourselves, we figured out a solution. If we had to be somewhere at 3 o'clock, we would tell Mom we had to be there at 2:30. From then on, we were always "on time."

J. IN FLORIDA

DEAR J.: You may have been on time, but your lovely mother-in-law continues to squander half an hour of your time whenever you pick her up. Let's hear it from someone who was "cured":

DEAR ABBY: I, too, was never on time, but my husband cured me of that habit in two easy lessons.

It was simple. Twice when I wasn't ready, he left without me. I was mad as a hornet, but I learned that he who is late gets left.

ON TIME IN TIBURON

DEAR ABBY: Let SIXTY AND NO STUD speak for himself. At 37, I married a 68-year-old man whose performance would be envied by a man of any age.

I had had two previous marriages and several lovers in between. I'm convinced that age is incidental, and all a healthy, normal man needs to be a good lover is a warm, responsive woman.

NO COMPLAINTS IN SPOKANE

DEAR COMPLAINTS: Read on for a legitimate complaint from your neck of the woods:

DEAR ABBY: SIXTY AND NO STUD is mistaken when he doubts that men are sexually active at 80.

When I was 70, I married for a second time. My husband was a widower, 85 and amazingly sexually active! I was far from inactive, but this man's demands were so excessive that after the first six months of our marriage I sought help from my physician. My doctor agreed that five times a day was excessive, so he would put me in the hospital a couple of times a year to give me a rest from my husband.

My husband died at 92. Believe it, SIXTY, when Abby says that some men are sexually active at 80, 85 and 90. Believe me, I know!

RESTING AT LAST IN SEATTLE

DEAR RESTING: Judging from my mail, you know whereof you speak.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who frequently says, "I could care less." What he means is that he really doesn't care at all. To convey that idea, shouldn't he say, "I couldn't care less?"

AL IN OREGON

DEAR AL: To say, "I could care less," means one could care even less than he does. When one wants to convey that he cares so little he could not care less, the proper expression is, "I couldn't care less." Your friend is careless about his expressions.

Nancy Reagan Says A Little Gun In Bedside Table

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan says she keeps a "tiny little gun" in a drawer near her bed for protection and her husband, the president-elect, taught her how to use it.

"I have a little gun," she acknowledged in an interview Wednesday.

"Ronnie was away a lot, you know, during the time before he became a candidate. He was out speaking a lot and I was alone in that house" in California.

But the nation's next first lady joked that she would not likely need the gun after she and her husband move into the heavily guarded White House Jan. 20.

Both Reagan and his wife have long opposed gun control, a position the president-elect reaffirmed after the shooting death of former Beatle John Lennon this week.

Mrs. Reagan said she has never used the weapon and doesn't even know what kind of gun it is. "It's just a tiny little gun," she said, laughing. "I don't know anything about it."

Asked whether she had taken a course in marksmanship, Mrs. Reagan responded: "No, my husband showed me. He shoots."

California residents can legally keep a gun at home without registering the weapon, according to Robin Gray, a spokesman for the Reagan transition.

In Sacramento, Tony Cimarusti, a spokesman for the California attorney general's office, confirmed that no permit is needed unless a person were to carry the weapon concealed. But Cimarusti added that every gun sold over the counter is registered at the time of sale.

Mrs. Reagan was interviewed at Blair House, the government guest quarters where the Reagans are staying on their second trip to the nation's capital since the Nov. 4 eleciton.

In the wide-ranging interview session, she also:

—Denied reports she has never met her new daughter-in-law, Doria Palmieri.

"I have met her," Mrs. Reagan said. "I have known her for a year and a half."

She said Ms. Palmieri, who married the Reagans' son Ron on Nov. 24, was with the Reagans on election night.

But Mrs. Reagan gave no explanation for Ms. Palmieri's absence Tuesday when the president-elect and his son lunched at a New York restaurant.

The incoming first lady said the young couple would have to work out any problems that arise because of the differences in their ages. The Reagans' son, a ballet dancer, is 22; his bride, a literary researcher, is 29. But his mother added that he is mature beyond his years and "very bright."

—Said reports that stepdaughter Maureen Reagan planned to hold her third marriage at the White House were not true. Maureen is Reagan's daughter from his previous marriage to actress Jane Wyman.

"She says she wants a small wedding in California," Mrs. Reagan said, adding she would not try to change her stepdaughter's mind because a wedding "is a purely personal thing."

—Said she does not believe she raised her two children "permissively" and does not know whether they have ever smoked marijuana. Besides Ron, she has a daughter, Patti, who is an actress in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Reagan said she tried to give her children values she thought would "see them through life as they got older" and tried to be "their best friend as well as their mother."

The next first lady was also asked how she thought she and her husband, who earned $515,878 in 1978, would get along on the presidential salary of $200,000.

"I think most presidents take a cut in salary," she said, but added the question could not be answered "until you are actually there."

Asked whether she agreed with critics of President Carter who say the Reagans will restore class and elegance to the White House, Mrs. Reagan replied:

"Well, we will do things our way and they won't be the same way as others, perhaps."

She said she has been reading up on past first ladies and admitted to having "certain natural trepidations" about any new job "and this certainly is the biggest job I will come into."

Mrs. Reagan declined to name a first lady she most admires and said she believes each woman changes the position.

NANCY REAGAN reflects on her future role as First Lady during interview at Blair House. (AP Laserphoto)

"They all deserve a pat on the back becuase I think it's a big job and a huge job and a hard job and there is no way you can criticize people about how they did it," she said.

As for her own role, Mrs. Reagan said she will "certainly not" advise her husband on such matters as the federal budget and nuclear proliferation. "But if he asks me about things or if I have an opinion about certain things, I would voice it."

She and her husband sometimes disagree on the approach to an issue, Mrs. Reagan said, but "I doubt that I would" make their differences known publicly.

Mrs. Reagan said she plans to spend her time working on such topics as "drugs and alcohol and kids.'

Asked about reports White House counselor-designate, Edwin Meese, will function as a sort of assistant president, Mrs. Reagan said flatly: "Not true. Nobody runs it but RR."

ECU History Preserved

Back when nobody eles wanted to do it, Miss Emma Hooper of the ECU English staff was assembling the bits and pieces which made up the history of the institution that she served.

Now what was East Carolina Teachers College has grown to be an important institution to North Carolina and the entire nation, and preserving its history is equally important.

So Miss Hooper, now 92 years old and long retired to Memphis, Tenn., is donating her mountain of information about ECU to the school. The job of preparing a complete history will fall to Dr. Mary Jo Bratton, an ECU research professor.

Dr. Bratton will have a lot of information to draw from — Miss Hooper's papers fill two boxes and occupy 15 cubic feet.

Building the institution that stands today from a tiny two-year teachers training school represented much hard work on the part of a lot of people. There is much more hard work ahead, and it is fitting that there will be a published history of the university to help those who will guide its future.

For assembling and preserving the information, the university owes Miss Hooper a great debt.

How Far Will Soviets Move?

India Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has asked Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev for no further interference in that region of the world.

With Soviet troops in Afghanistan and massed on the Polish border the request virtually takes on the tone of a plea.

It can only be guessed how far Soviet expansionism will go once it gets underway . . . and the Russians have the military power to try anything.

DON'T FORGET!

Priorities In Defense

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's defense research chief has advised the incoming Reagan administration to act urgently to overcome U.S. limitations to sending major military forces to the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Dr. William J. Perry said, "We urgently need to become better prepared than we now are for the possibility of military action in that part of the world."

Perry, who will leave office when Ronald Reagan becomes president on Jan. 20, said Wednesday that short-term measures to bolster U.S. military capability in the Persian Gulf area have been effective.

But, Perry said, these measures "have involved redeploying forces from other areas," referring to the diversion of carriers and other significant naval power from the Mediterranean and the Western Pacific to the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea area.

"Long-term programs are needed to provide greatly increased airlift capability and lightweight mobile weapons for the new light armored divisions," Perry said. "All of these programs are only in the embryonic stage and will need major attention for the next few years."

Perry gave this advice to his as-yet undesignated Republican successor in a talk to the American Defense Preparedness Association.

That talk amounted to a report on the four years of the Carter administration's performance in trying to strengthen military power. Perry also offered a series of suggestions on where the new leaders of the Defense Department should focus their attention.

"Our emphasis on advanced technology has been an outstanding success, I believe, with major achievements in precision-guided munitions, Stealth technology and microelectronics," Perry said.

While claiming success in such strategic programs as the cruise missile development and Trident submarine-launched missile programs, Perry acknowledged there are "unresolved problems remaining" with the MX mobile missile program and construction of giant new submarines to fire the Trident missile.

He appeared to caution the Reagan administration against any more delay in key decisions on deploying the MX missile, which the Carter administration considers essential to neutralize a growing Soviet threat to fixed, land-based Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Saying that the administration has made "major technical and political achievements" in the MX program so far, Perry said he believes the MX "is still very much at risk."

Referring indirectly to Reagan's reservations about the current plan to deploy 200 MX missiles among some 4,600 horizontal shelters in Utah and Nevada, Perry said the new administration will have to make an early decision "about whether they agree with our judgment on the MX."

He cautioned that if the Reagan administration prefers a different deployment, "they have a long struggle ahead to define the new program, get congressional approval, and then initiate a new environmental approval process."

Without saying so, Perry implied that this could delay the combat readiness of the new MX system well beyond the current 1986 target.

Perry acknowledged, as have other defense officials, that the Pentagon is still grappling with production problems with the first Trident submarine.

"We still do not have a Trident submarine in the operational force, and we still cannot predict with confidence the date by which that is going to happen," Perry said.

Slamming A Door

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Moving with uncommon speed to slam the garage door on more than $5 million in taxpayer dollars lost each year through waste, theft, and mismanagement of school buses across North Carolina, the State Board of Education is asking the General Assembly to give it power over the transportation system.

In a move which will be seen in many localities as another step in growing state control over local school business, the state officials seek only one simple change in state law.

Where the law now says plainly that the State Board of Education "shall not" have authority over local management of the bus fleets, it will be changed to say only that the state "shall" have that authority.

Controller Joseph A. Porter, Jr., the state's budget director for public schools, made it clear to members of the board what that means: the state board will then write rules, regulations, and policy guidelines for the buses, and monitor the local systems to see that the rules are followed.

Local Reaction

How will local school people react to such a move? A number of people close to the situation say they will welcome the change. It will give them an out when parents demand favored treatment in bus routes, and according to state experts that element is the single biggest factor in cost overruns locally.

Says Porter, "Unless this (state) agency is given authority over the buses, we are not going to have any improvement over what we now have." What we now have is a "bare minimum" of $5 million wasted each year, and local schools'spending for transportation amounts which vary wildly from one county to the next with no direct relationship to geography, terrain or school population.

A spot check in several local units determined that state law on distance a child must live from the school; distance from the child's home to the bus stop; and distance between stops is flagrantly ignored. "We are in very many instances operating a taxi service using school buses," Porter said.

Simple compliance with the regulations would produce savings of from 20 to 30 percent in many cases, Porter adds.

BILL NOBLITT

Members of the State Board of Education commented that the school buses have gotten involved in politics in many areas, with local school board members running for election on promises to provide door-to-door service, while local officials cave in to such public demands without a fight.

As things now stand, the state provides the money to run the buses with loose guidelines on amounts, and an open checkbook to come back for more money if the allocation runs out.

Park Them

Why can't the state simply tell local officials that the amount is all there is, and if that is gone, there will b no more? Porter says he tried that with some local officials. Their response was outspoken: "We won't have to park these buses but one day — just one day — and when the parents get through calling the Governor's office ... there'll be somebody over there throwing you out your third-floor office window."

State officials believe that in those counties where the bus systems already operate efficiently and with good management, the state regulation will make little difference. It is in those areas where route designs, loose security, and improper management are running the costs up that the state crackdown will be felt most keenly, officials believe.

A Season To Think Flat

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Flat out of ideas, I took time out from an editors' convention down here in the sun-blessed Southwest to do some Christmas shopping for a New England neighbor who is dreaming of a flat Christmas.

It is hard to think flat with purple mountains all around and a passel of bikinis populating the pool, but that basically is the problem.

Billy — that's my friend's name — has let it be known that he only wants flat Christmas presents this year because there isn't room in his pad up there in Danbury, Conn,m for any other kind.

He just got married, and his wife moved into his small apartment with all her stuff until they find a bigger place. There just isn't space enough to open up a newspaper or unfold a tea towel without knocking over her pile of cookbooks and cool jazz records or his collection of seashells and antique bar stools or whatever communal property is contributing to the congestion.

Their living space shortage is a lot like the late Fred Allen's Pittsburgh hotel room, which he said was so small the mice were huchbacked.

Anyhow, people sending Billy and Suzanne flat Christmas presents which can fit under the bed or on top of the liquor cabinet or which can be stacked like the dishes in the closet will be adding to the joy of a feast that began with no room at the inn.

The trouble is there just aren't that many flat presents on the market, and I speak with the experience of a dedicated shopper who has gone through almost all the ornate Christmas mail order catalogues and spent many hours browsing the aisles of the classy Phoenix department store that bears the family name of a prominent Republican senator from Arizona.

Flat is just not the style these days. The best things in life seem to be round or rectangular.

O.K. there are towels and sheets and electric blankets and bathroom scales.

There are skis and surfboards and sleds and golf clubs and tennis rackets and pool cues that meet the specifications of flat but will also leave the donor flat busted.

Sweaters, socks, bathrobes, gloves, jogging togs and other personal haberdashery that can be folded tend to fall flat as gifts if you don't know the sizes.

Books and record albums are flat, and so are magazine subscriptions, games like Scrabble, Monopoly, electronic bridge, home and wrestling and a genuine English pub dart board ($149, not including liability insurance for the dartees) but their accumulation probably already is more a part of the problem than the solution.

They already have an electric toothbrush apiece, a good corkscrew oblong, almost flat and an icet, so that takes care of life's necessities.

I was looking at a Bo Derek 1980 calendar in the book store the other day, which shows how the mind

Other Editors Say
The Dead Issue

(Washington Daily News)

The Equal Rights Amendment appears to be dead today in North Carolina, and unless we misjudge the temperament of the country, it might be dead nationwide, also.

Here in our state, even those who have worked so long and so hard for its passage in the state legislature, admit that election results have sounded the death knell for ERA in North Carolina.

We do not believe that any cndidate for the legislature either won a seat or lost a seat on November 4 on account of any position taken on ERA. It might have been a contributing factor in the conservative versus liberal fight, but other issues gained far more publicity and had far more impact upon the voting practices than did ERA.

Yet, the very fact that so many conservatives won legislative seats in our next assembly cannot be overlooked. And those conservatives will vote against ERA if it happens to be brought up.

According to one survey quickly made since the election ERA "lost 10 to 12 votes in the state senate." We suspect that more than a dozen votes have been lost for ERA in the House. Since over the years the measure has never been approved, it just makes good sense now to realize that it hardly has any chance of being approved next session.

It is not that ERA is unimportant. Certainly, to a lot of people it is a burning issue. To many members of the legislature it is of great importance. But to many others, there are far more important issues that need to be disposed of, and to have a month's debate on ERA when it seems so sure to lose hardly will do North Carolina any good. So we very strongly doubt that the ERA measure will even be introduced. If it is sent up, it might never get out of committee.

The fact that only three states are needed for ratification makes it seem rather cruel in one way to put it aside. But in full truth President Jimmy Carter has pushed it hard for the past four years and yet not one state has ratified it during his term of office. Rosalyn Carter made many calls and spoke up many times in its behalf, but to no avail. Legislators over the country in those states in which ERA has not been ratified received many calls from the White House. To say that the president did not stand up for ERA is not right. He did, but he had poor success.

Strength For Today

BUILT ON ROCK

A suburb of a near-by city is built upon man-made land. Many decades ago engineers scraped off the top of a hill and carried the soil over into a marshland. Later the suburb was built in this area.

Because the soil is thin it is possible to erect small buildings here but no large ones; and certainly no skyscrapers. These require firm foundations. Man-made land does not constitute a satisfactory basis for towering and impressive structures.

When we want to erect majestic buildings, we have to seek out places where the soil is deep and the rock stratum secure. In building our lives we must guard against building them on the superficialities which man-made land represents. Of course, if we care little about the quality of our lives or the integrity of our principles, we can build our lives small, like the suburb mentioned above. But if they are to be rewarding and meaningful, they must be built upon firm ground — upon rock structure. —

Power Centers In Bureaucracy

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Once President-elect Ronald Reagan has put the pomp and ceremony of the inauguration behind him he must obtain a map that identifies the power centers in the Washington bureaucracy.

If he seeks to attack that bureaucracy without first determining who holds that power, says Eugene Jennings, his efforts to"get government off our backs" will be doomed from the start.

"The natives will win," said Jennings, a professor, author, and adviser to members of the corporate hierarchy, who wrote the book, so to speak, on ascending into the top levels of the corporate hierarchy.

Because of the special challenge in Reagan's promise to cut government, Jennings has been studying the federal bureaucracy and all its rites and powers in recent weeks. He is impressed with its power.

"Reagan may blunder if he follows advice to strike out immediately aganst the bureaucracy," said Jennings. "As formidable as the power of the presidency is, it is no match for the intractable bureaucracy."

In effect, said Jennings, the new president will be an enemy among the natives, "and whether it is Vietnam, Afghanistan or the Rose Bowl, the natives have the advantage." In Reagan's case, it is especially so.

"The home team that is lined against the Reagan cadre of appointees are bureaucrats protected by their GS ratings and 'years of service' who may not give a damn about what their new master wants," he said.

An intelligent "immigrant," said Jennings, "would know that to turn an organization around he must first find and control the center of gravity in each department and agency."

"It is the middle managers. Here lies the real power of government. They are the ones who have the greatest competency about the law, policy, rules and regulations," Jennings stated.

What the immigrants must do, he continued, is obtain a map from the natives about who are the people occupying these centers. In short, determine who does and who doesn't know how to exercise power.

To seek to overwhelm the centers of gravity from the top, through appointments by Reagan, would fail for several reasons, said Jennings.

1. The law of nature is to survive. The need of new immigrants is to control. The natives survive by being controlled just enough. Smart natives eventually co-opt immigrants by teaching them how to survive.

2. Hierarchical authority — such as appointments made by the president — are no match for constituency or radial power. "Bureaucrats are no longer public servants but constituency servants," said Jennings.

He explained that "directions coming down from on top, as from a Reagan appointee, may be offset by bureaucrats reaching out to their constituencies, who have a vested interest in their survival."

These constituencies might include senators, representatives, and public interest groups. "In no time at all the immigrant chief is flooded with threats and litigation, and native power has won."

3. Any information that advance people may get from natives is subject to the law of survival. "Usually, immigrants don't know what they don't know, but natives know what the immigrants don't know." What the wise native supplies to the immigrant, claims Jennings, is whatever information the native needs to give the impression of cooperating.

4. Business management is no match for bureaucratic expertise. "Nowhere in the book of business management will you find rules for shrinking a bureaucracy. In short, Reagan is moving against a whole culture established before he got there and which no president in 40 years has mastered."

Jennings offers this advice: Do not be in a rush to seize control. Rather, take time to learn the power centers, and then cut with a fine, delicate knife rather than a poleax.

In six months, he declares, Reagan can acquire enough information to control sensitive positions in the center of government and then go on from there to cut back the size and cost of government.

tends to hallucinate when you're thinking flat too long, but my wife came along and bought a Norman Rockwell calendar instead. Dear Abby has been called in to arbitrate this one.

Down here in the Southwest where they specialize in mailing off citrus fruit to rot on the doorsteps of New Englanders fleeing the snow in the Bahamas, I naturally thought of perishable items as a cop-out on the flat dilemma. Now fruit isn't flat, unless you're into dates, figs and pre-squeezed bananas, and neither are fruitcakes or bottles of Scotch nor tins of beluga caviar, but at least they are consumed fairly quickly and don't clutter up the place even if the guests do.

In the Neiman Marcus catalogue you can get an ostrich egg for $35. You can get the whole ostrich for $1,500, but I believe it remains in the custody of the Oklahoma City Zoo and you only get visiting rights.

Anyhow, you can buy the egg and sit around waiting for it to hatch, which may eventually get you the whole ostrich but will only aggravate the flat problem, or you can follow the store'a advice and have an ostrich omelette party.

Now the catalog doesn't say how many guests one little ostrich omelette will serve. Cooking up an ostrich egg into a delectable omelette would certainly flatten out the gift in a satisfying manner but it could play havoc with the garden.

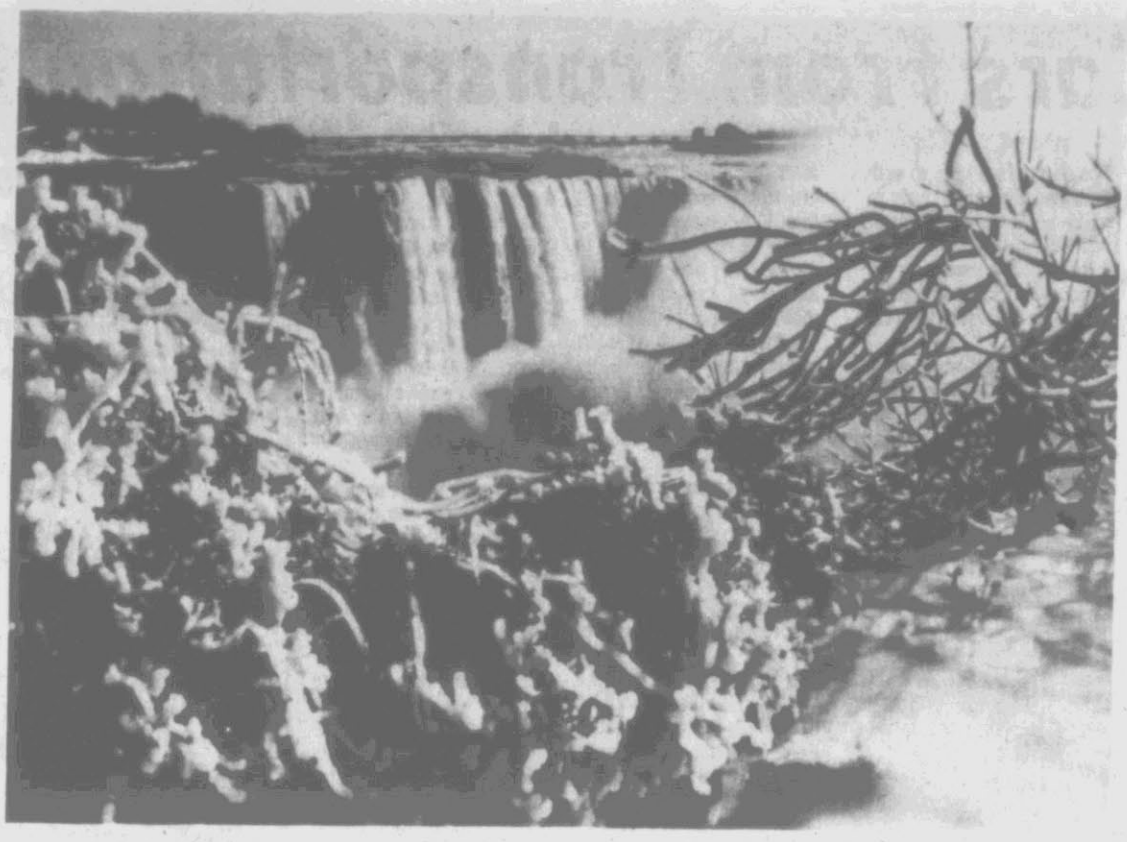

Half an hour after breakfasting on an ostrich omelette, your guests might be seized with an unconquerable urge to bury their heads in the backyard and ruin the rhodedondrons.

One Christmas catalog listed a hot air balloon. It comes packaged flat for mailing and the recipient supplied the contents. This being a presidential year, there should be no supply problem anywhere in the land.

I'd like to send my friends a gift certificate for warehouse space to store their things until the right house comes along, but at the moment I'm flat broke, fresh out of what W.C. Fields called "the elusive spondulix."

As soon as I get my hands on the readies, however, I'll enroll them both in the Flat Earth Society as a token of the attention I have given to this one dimensional conundrum.

Less may be more, but flat is futile.

More Cancer Is Found In Grasso

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gov. Ella Grasso, who already has announced plans to resign her post because of liver cancer, was in satisfactory condition today after an operation to remove a malignant growth blocking her bowel.

The governor, who plans to give up her office at the end of the month, had the cancerous growth removed from her large intestine during a 3½-hour operation Wednesday at Hartford Hospital.

Doctors also bypassed a portion of her small intestine because of a cancerous growth.

The doctors said the cancer in her intestines had spread from earlier cancers. They said they anticipated no further surgery.

Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said Mrs. Grasso's husband, Thomas, and her children, Susane and James, visited the governor Wednesday night. He said Mrs. Grasso was alert and able to recognize those who visited her.

The governor probably will remain hospitalized for about two weeks, Battaglio said. He said he didn't know whether the 61-year-old governor would be able to go home for Christmas.

Doctors performed a colostomy, which involved removing a portion of the large intestine and inserting a tube to carry bodily wastes.

The remaining cancer should be treatable with chemotherapy, which will probably begin in a few weeks, Battaglio said.

Mrs. Grasso was admitted to the hospital Monday, complaining of nausea. On Tuesday, officials announced she would undergo surgery to correct what they said was a "blockage" in her large intestine. The nature of the blockage was not known until the operation actually began.

The discovery of the governor's intestinal cancer followed the Nov. 24 discovery of cancer in her liver. Doctors have said they will not attempt surgery on that organ but have treated the cancer with chemotherapy.

Mrs. Grasso underwent a hysterectomy for ovarian cancer in April and started radiation treatment.

Lt. Gov. William O'Neill will succeed her at the end of the month.

PAGEANT

The Winterville Baptist Church will present the annual outdoor Christmas pageant December 14 at 5:30 p.m. on the church lawn. The pageant features rustic props and live nativity animals. The adult choir will interpret through music the scenes which depict ther birth of Jesus. The public is invited to attend.

Find Defect In Missile Alarm

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A portable vapor detector that sounded an alarm in a Titan II missile silo near Quitman was defective, and there was no vapor problem, the Air Force says.

A spokesman at Little Rock Air Force Base said the alarm went off Wednesday while a maintenance team was doing routine work in the missile silo.

The silo is about 10 miles from a similar one at Damascus where one airman was killed and 21 others were injured in a vapor-leak explosion on Sept. 19.

Facts, Figures On Cars From Transportation Dept.

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Volkswagen Rabbit gets the best mileage of all cars on the American market, the Ford Escort is the cheapest to fix, and the Pontiac Lemans has the lowest average insurance claims, according to a new government publication.

The 68-page Transportation Department booklet issued Wednesday doesn't tell consumers which car to buy, nor does it rank the best and worst.

But "The Car Book" does give a lot of facts and figures that could help interested consumers. It tells which cars passed government crash tests, which get the best fuel mileage and which are the least expensive to maintain.

For example, the 1981 model with the best mileage is the VW Rabbit Diesel, which gets 42 miles per gallon. The worst-mileage cars — at 16 mpg — were the Buick Riviera, Chrysler Imperial, Ford LTD and Mercury Marquis.

The Transportation Department compilation of facts is available without charge by writing The Car Book, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The book's introducation says, "We believe that by talking to friends and a trusted mechanic, reading publications about new automobiles and using the information in 'The Car Book,' you will be a well-informed consumer ready to make a wise decision about which car to buy."

Besides information on individual cars, the booklet offers the following general advice:

—Radial tires, while more expensive, can improve gas mileage by 3 to 7 miles per gallon over conventional tires.

—A manual transmission is generally more fuel-efficient — up to 5 percent — than an automatic.

—Some cars are cheaper to insure. They cost less to fix and some companies pass these savings on to owners.

—Installation of a cutoff switch that automatically disconnects the air conditioner during rapid accelerations can increase mileage by 4 percent.

—When buying a used car, the best purchase is generally two to three years old. That is old enough to be depreciated from the new-car price but young enough to present few repair problems.

In the crash tests, the Cadillac Seville, Chevrolet Citation, Dodge Mirada, Ford Mustang, Ford Thunderbird and two-door Plymouth Horizon were the only American-made cars to pass all six checks after being crashed into a wall. Cars failing four of the six checks, the worst score, included the Toyota Tercel, Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme and the Buick Riviera. Not all models were tested.

In other categories:

Fatality rates — Ford Mercury (large size) and American Motors intermediate-size cars ranked lowest, with 1.2 occupant fatalities per 10,000 cars. AMC Mazda ranked highest, with 5.1 fatalities. The index was based on data collected from 1976-78.

Safety belt comfort and convenience — All had problems except the Buick Electra Park Avenue, the Cadillac DeVille, Mercedes 300D and Volvo 244. Cars with problems in five of seven measurements, the worst score, were the Chevrolet Camaro and Chevette two-door, Fiat Spyder 2000, Toyota Celica two-door and Pontiac Firebird.

Maintenance — Ford Escort's $115 total was the lowest preventive maintenance expected in the first 45,000 miles. The highest was the Peugeot 505's $728.

Insurance and accident costs — The lowest average loss payment per insured vehicle year was the Pontiac Lemans four-door at $64. The highest was the Datsun 280ZX, $244. The figure is what the insurance companies pay on average claims.

Cars for which some companies provide discounts are Chevrolet Chevette, Citation, Impala and Caprice Classic; Ford Escort and LTD; Mercury Lynx and Marquis; Buick Skylark, Century, Electra and LeSabre; Oldsmobile Omega, Cutlass, Delta 88 and Delta 98; Plymouth Horizon; Pontic Phoenix, LeMans, Bonneville and Catalina; AMC Concord; Cadillac Seville; and Chrysler Lebaron.

Cars for which some firms assess insurance surcharges are Dodge Colt and Omni; Honda Prelude; Mazda GLC and RX7; Plymouth Champ; Renault Le Car; Suburu DL; Toyota Corolla, Tercel and Celica; VW Rabbit, Datsun 200SX and 280ZX; Ford Mustang; Mercury Capri; Plymouth Arrow; Chevrolet Camaro; Pontiac Firebird and Grand Prix: Cadillac El Dorado; and Lincoln Mark VI.

Banquet speaker Ed Walker, executive director of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, told the employees attending the banquet "Pat yourselves on the back for your contributions to making Pitt Memorial a great hospital.

"Together, you represent 778 years of service to the hospital. You have tasted of success and your work will continue to be successful."

Also honored at the event were retiring employees, including Gertie Allen with 28 years of service, Della Williams with 20, Grace Arseneau with 14 and Nina Ruth Harrell with 11.

The banquet was held in the hospital dining room. The program also featured remarks by General Director Jack W. Richardson, Board of Trustees Chairman Harry Leslie, and Personnel Director Craig Quick.

Former Teacher Sues Over A Loyalty Oath

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former substitute teacher has filed suit against the state Board of Education, contending that a loyalty oath she was forced to sign to obtain her job was unconstitutional.

"Last spring, I applied as a teacher with the Richmond school district, and this oath was in the stack of papers they gave me to sign," Marvin Schmid, 36, of Kensington said at a news conference Wednesday. "When I protested, the secretary told me if I didn't sign, I wouldn't get the job."

Ms. Schmid signed the oath, which required her to affirm that she was not a communist. But she added a disclaimer objecting to the oath on the grounds that it discriminated against communists and then called the American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California.

The ACLU filed a lawsuit late Tuesday in Contra Costa Superior Court on Ms. Schmid's behalf, asking that the state Board of Education be ordered to abandon all use of the loyalty oath. The suit also named the school district and six other defendants.

A spokesman for the state board said that it hadn't seen a copy of the suit yet and so could not comment.

But spokesman Vic Biondi said the oath isn't uniformly required. "Some districts do, and some don't."

George Blumenson, a spokesman for the district, said that officials there believed they had to ask teachers to sign the oaths under state law.

"We depend on state funding, and under the law, if we knowingly violate the code, our funding can be withheld," Blumenson said.

But ACLU attorney Amitai Schwartz said that 1966 and 1967 decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court declaring loyalty oaths unconstitutional supersede state law. Such oaths often were required around the nation during the anti-communist McCarthy hearings of the 1950s.

Ms. Schmid said her objections were based on religious grounds.

"I felt that to be true to my faith and my commitment to Christianity, I had to object," said Ms. Schmid, who was hired as a substitute teacher but left the job this summer.

Ms. Schmid, who said she was studying to be a minister in the United Church of Christ, said her religious beliefs forbid discrimination. She said if communists could be discriminated against through a loyalty oath, so could people of various religious faiths.

Judge William Channel set a Jan. 16 hearing in the case.

The New Chairmen

When Congress opens next month, Republicans will outnumber Democrats in the Senate for the first time in 26 years. This means that Republicans will replace Democrats as chairmen of the Senate committees. The committees are important because most bills go to them for study and some revision before the entire Senate votes on them. Each committee has Democratic and Republican members. But the majority party has the most members on every committee. The majority party senator who has been on the committee the longest usually becomes the chairman. Strom Thurmond, pictured here, is scheduled to replace Edward Kennedy as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

DO YOU KNOW — What state does Strom Thurmond represent in the Senate?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Julius Nyerere is the president of Tanzania.

Farm Bureau Award For Pitt Women

The first ever North Carolina Farm Bureau Women's Award was presented to women of Pitt County at the North Carolina Farm Bureau Convention held earlier this week in Raleigh.

Mrs. Lois Briley and Mrs. Alma Worthington accepted the award on behalf of the women of the Pitt County Farm Bureau — Mrs. Briley is chairman of the Women's Committee and Mrs. Worthington is publicity director of the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

A bronze scroll plaque mounted on wood was presented to the Pitt County women, inscribed "For Excellence of Achievement in The Women's Program."

Some of the acomplishments realized during the past year for which women of the Pitt County Farm Bureau were cited for oustanding achievement include a program to improve and clean up roadsides in Pitt County; interest shown by women in local government, including talks with county commissioners; action on the part of women in writing congressmen and senators expressing their views on proposed legislation; appearances on radio and television programs to acquaint the community with Farm Bureau work; and service as a member of the Tobacco Festival Board of Directors.

Pitt County Farm Bureau women also sponsored a family picnic to help celebrate the annual Farm-City Festival last April, and took part in the R. Flake Shaw Scholarship Sale held in Raleigh in November.

Also, members of the Pitt County Women's Committee were actively involved in the total Farm Bureau program. They served on the county publicity, legislative and law and order committees, on state committees and on the Women's Advisory Committee. One member served on the Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival board of directors.

In addition to Mrs. Briley and Mrs. Worthington, members of the Pitt Women's Advisory Committee are: Loucile Dilda, Mamie Smith, Christine Bell, Charlotte Garris, Louise Lewis, Clara Baker, Margie Hart, Patsy Galloway, Linda Paramore, Joyce Bright, Patsy James and Helen Worthington.

A Pall Of Smoke In Ten Counties

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Residents of 10 Northeastern North Carolina counties are battling their own brand of air pollution — heavy smoke generated by fires set to clear thousands of acres of land.

The gray pall over the area comes from open-air burning associated with land clearing in areas where organic soil, or peat, is abundant.

The peat continues to burn underground after the debris above ground has been extinguished.

The smoke has been so bad in parts of Pasquotank County that drivers have had to use headlights to see the road, said Pasquotank Sheriff D.M. Sawyer.

And about a week ago, U.S. 17 North was closed for hours after several traffic accidents occurred in the dense smoke. Sawyer said the road had been closed on a number of occasions during the past five months because of smoke.

In Camden County, Sheriff Troy E. Toppin said the smell of the smoke has permeated everything. "You can smell it in your car, and when you go home you can smell it in your house," Toppin said. "People that have asthma or something like that, they're suffering from it."

James Mulligan, supervisor of the Washington, N.C., regional office of the Division of Environmental Management, said smoke levels had been found to be five to six times the normal amount during recent readings.

As a result, the state issued a ban last week on open-air burning in Cartaret, Beaufort, Bertie, Hyde, Tyrrell, Dare, Washingon, Chowan, Camden and Gates counties

"We recognize that windrow burning (burning debris, such as tree stumps and roots, cleared from land) cannot be tolerated because that's what causes the problem," Mulligan said. "We're looking into other kinds of land clearing suitable for the area."

A Third Award In 22 Years

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Frederick Sanger, the second person in history to win two Nobel prizes in the same category, says he could pick up an unprecedented third award if he lives long enough.

"I don't want to give you any odds, but I'll give it a try," the British chemist said Wednesday while in Stockholm to receive his prize.

"I probably would have to wait until I become 84 years old," said the 62-year-old Cambridge professor, "as it took me 22 years to get a second gold medal."

Sanger won his first prize in 1958 for explaining the structure of insulin. He won the prize this year for developing a method to decode DNA, the long molecules that contain the genetic code in living organisms.

James Bardeen of the United States is the only other scientist to pick up two prizes in the same field — in physics in 1956 and 1972.

Congressman Jenrette Resigns Office

JENRETTE RESIGNS — Rep. John Jenrette, D—S.C., announced Wednesday he was resigning from the House to end expulsion proceedings against him, stemming from the FBI's Abscam investigation. (AP Laserphoto)

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Jenrette, the only target of the Abscam investigation to resign from Congress, choked with emotion and said he's leaving "to spare the House ... from further embarrassment."

The South Carolina Democrat, who would have had to give up his seat next month anyway, told the House ethics committee Wednesday he would resign rather than face the possibility of further moves to expel him in the last days of the lame-duck session.

"With the desire to spare the House . . . from further embarrassment, I'm submitting to the speaker my resignation," Jenrette told the committee, and paused as his voice choked, "effective today."

A spokesman for the congressman said a letter of resignation was been sent to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill later Wednesday, although the document had not arrived by the time the speaker's office closed for the day.

In Columbia, S.C., a spokesman for Gov. Richard Riley said the required letter or telegram containing notice of Jenrette's resignation had not been received late Wednesday night.

The House ethics committee was meeting today to decide whether to drop a proposal that it recommend Jenrette's ouster to the full House, although one panel member called the action "probably moot" in light of the congressman's resignation.

Jenrette was defeated in his re-election bid last month.

Less than a month earlier, on Oct. 7, he was convicted of splitting a $50,000 bribe from an FBI agent posing as a representative of two nonexistent Arab sheiks seeking legislation to allow them to immigrate to the United States.

But Jenrette told the ethics committee in a sometimes emotional statement that he took no bribe and is confident the courts ultimately will clear him.

He said he tried only to help his co-defendant, Virginia businessman John Stowe, get what he thought was Arab financing for a munitions plant to save 550 jobs in Jenrette's district.

The congressman began crying and his voice broke as he told the committee, "I prided myself on trying to help the district. Those people looked to me for the first time ever to help them, and I helped many of them."

The committee recessed for several minutes to allow Jenrette to compose himself.

Jenrette said he hopes to get his conviction overturned as early as next Wednesday at a court hearing.

While Jenrette is the first Abscam defendant to resign from Congress, the House has expelled former Rep. Michael J. Myers, D-Pa., for his conviction on bribery charges in the FBI's undercover probe. Myers lost his re-election bid on Nov. 4.

Two more congressmen were convicted last week — Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., of accepting an illegal gratuity, and Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., of bribery. Both were defeated in their bids for re-election.

Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., who lost his primary election, is now being tried on bribery charges in Abscam.

Rep. Raymond F. Lederer, D-Pa., who was re-elected, and Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., whose term ends in 1982, face trial on bribery charges later in the Abscam case.

Arms Sales Is Increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA says the Soviet Union increased its arms sales to Third World countries by $5.9 billion last year and that most of the sales were to Arab countries.

The sales went from $2.5 billion in 1978 to $8.4 billion in 1979, the CIA said Wednesday.

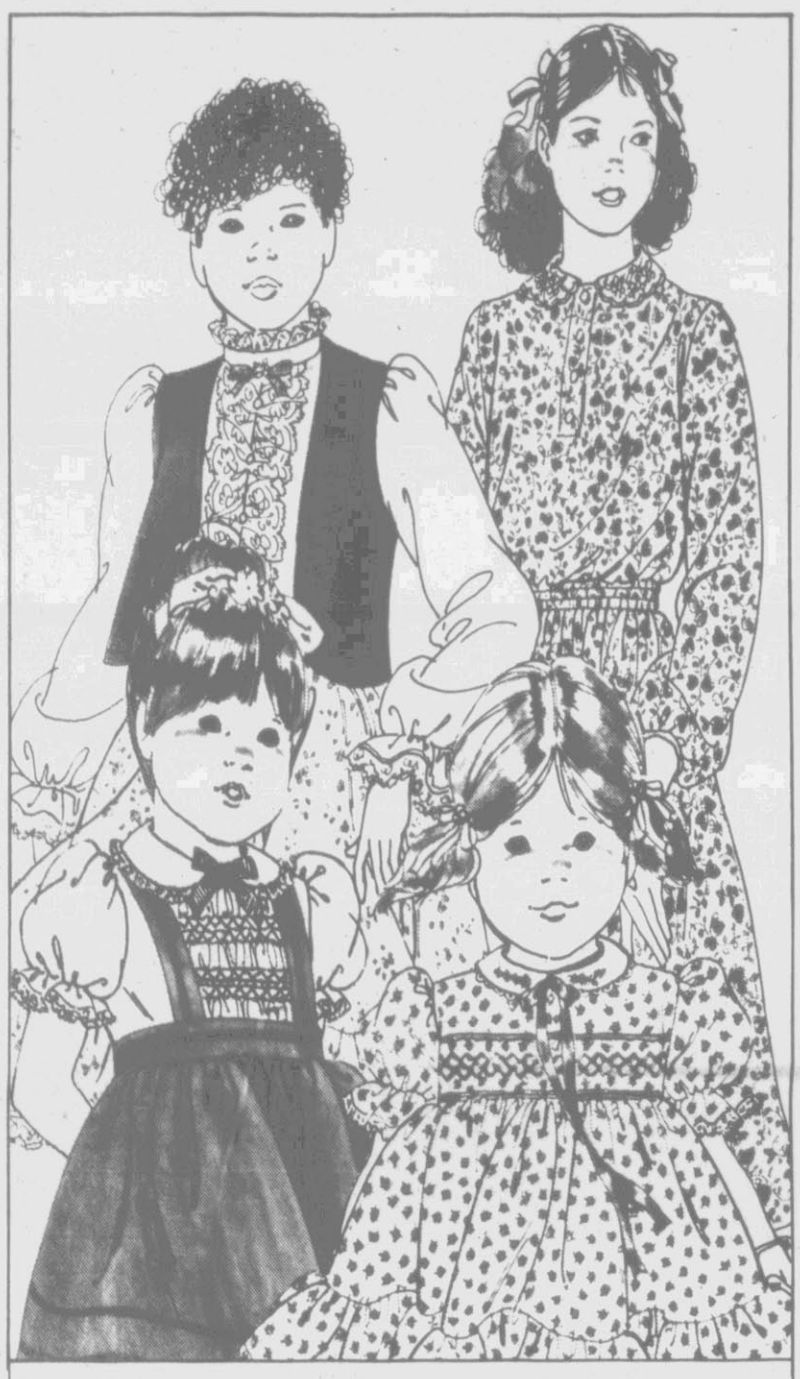

The CIA report concentrated on arms sales to less developed, noncommunist countries. It did not give details of Soviet arms sales to countries that do not fit that description.

"In 1979, communist economic and military aid programs continued as a major means of penetrating the military establishments and influencing the governments of key Third World countries," the CIA report said. "Arms sales rebounded from a five-year low."

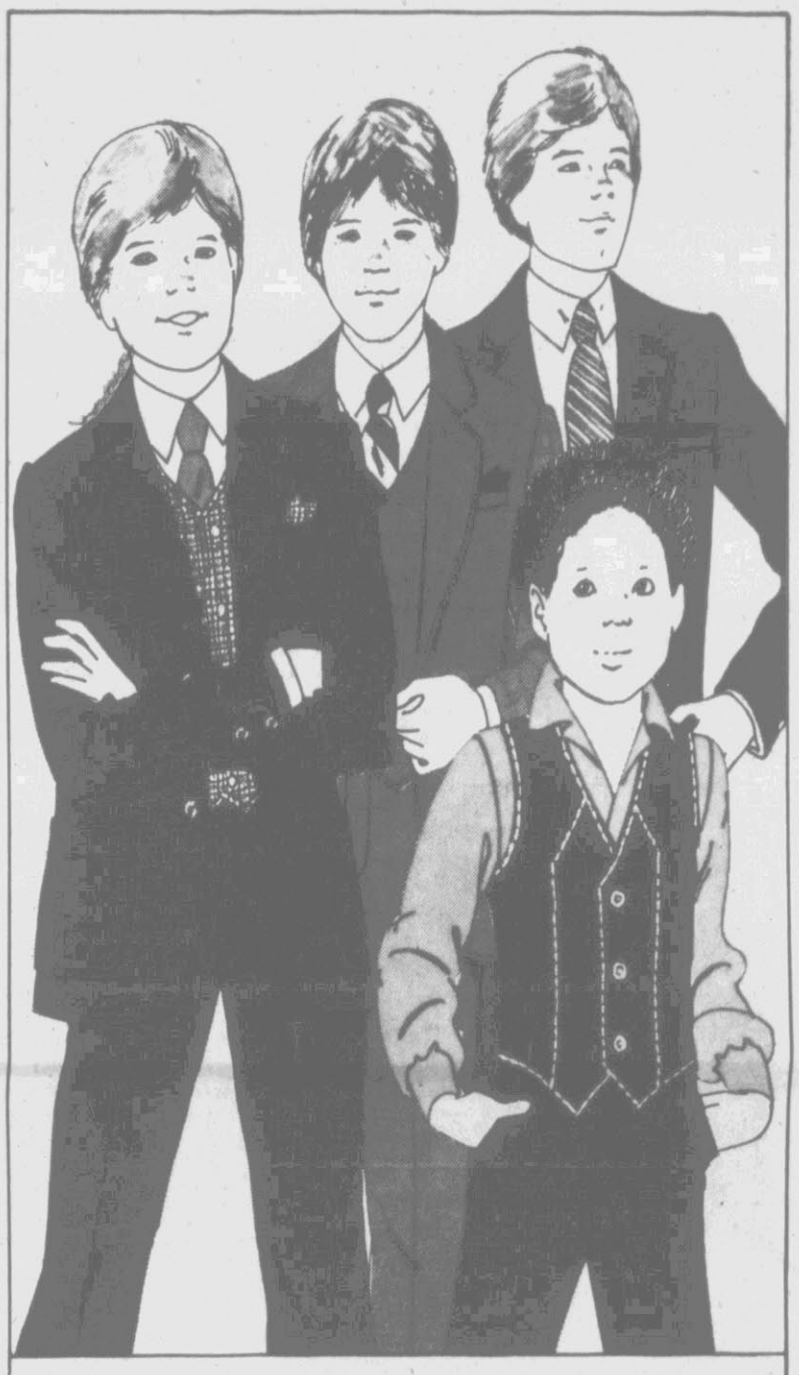

"Brisk Soviet sales in 1979 were largely the product of heightened political unrest across North Africa and the Middle East," the CIA report said. "The Arab states accounted for nearly 90 percent of Soviet arms sales. Moscow concluded major new arms agreements with Iraq for additional T-72 tanks and MiG-25 fighter aircraft. Syria also arranged for new arms."

Soaring Interest Rates Bring Halt To Construction In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Soaring interest rates have hit the North Carolina building industry hard for the second time this year and builders said Wednesday that construction in the state has come to a screeching halt.

"Nobody's buying homes," said James C. Field, head of James C. Fields & Co. of Wake County.

A Durham builder, who asked not to be identified, said "If things don't pick up by March or April, we're going to lose some builders. They've survived on bad year, but they won't survive two years like this one back-to-back."

Construction loans are tied to the prime rate, which soared to 20 percent Wednesday, tying a record level set April 3. And when interest rate go up, so do mortage payments and the cost of construction.

New housing starts are down at least 27 percent, from 48,000 in 1979 to about 35,000 this year, said Nicholas DeMai, executive vice president of the state Home Builders Association.

Builders said 1978 was their last really good year. There were 58,000 new houses built that year, a 40 percent drop from the current situation.

Immediately, the economic impact will not be as great as the slowdown in April, when the home builders group said 60,000 of the industry's 128,000 workers in the state were laid off. Building activity normally slows in the winter months because of cold weather.

"We've got to be thankful that it's winter this time," M. Durwood Stephenson, new preident of the home builders association, said after taking office Wednesday.

But the outlook for spring isn't that good. The National Association of Home Builders has predicted a "virtual depression" for the industry to last at least four months, with a slight improvement at the end of 1981.

"We can't wait that long," Stephenson said. "A lot of our people have been holding on by their fingernails. We need some quick cures."

W.A. Taylor, head of Taylor Building Co. in Cary, said some builders are in peculiar situations.

"A lot of builders are having to consider how to stay in business for a period of time without doing much of anything," Taylor said.

With rates for mortgage loans at 14 to 15 percent in North Carolina, Stephenson said middle-income families have been blocked from buying a house.

"Less than 5 percent of all Americans can qualify for a home loan right now," he added.

Daughter To Get Data On The Presley Estate

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A lawyer for Elvis Presley's 12-year-old daughter has won the right to more information about her late father's estate.

Probate Judge Joseph Evans ruled Wednesday that a lawyer for Lisa Marie Presley could inspect the financial records of the estate's dealings with the Presley's manager, Col. Tom Parker.

Lawyer Blanchard E. Tual won the expanded powers over the protests from D. Beecher Smith III, attorney for executors of the Presley estate.

During Wednesday's 90-minute hearing, Tual said the executors of the estate, with the exception of Miss Presley's mother, Priscilla Presley, were afraid of Parker.

"The estate has, in many ways, been living in the Middle Ages," Tual said. "Until six months ago, Col. Parker, like the popes, ruled supreme."

Parker, 70, of Los Angeles, was not in the courtroom, but Jack Magids, a Memphis attorney employed by Parker, was a spectator.

Tual was appointed by Evans in May to look after Miss Presley's interests after executors of Presley's estate — including Mrs. Presley — asked the court to approve a management agreement with Parker.

In September, Tual filed a 52-page report critical of the agreement.

Parker's fee, which Tual called exorbitant and unreasonable, stemmed from a 1963 agreement calling for him to receive half of Presley's income in return for exclusive services as manager and adviser.

Tual also said Parker collected all the money coming to the estate from record and music sales, movies and mementos, took his share and forwarded the estate's portion.

"There has not been any annual accounting or audit of Parker as the executors have relied on the accuracy of his statements," Tual wrote.

Smith said he agreed on the need to protect the interest of Miss Presley, but said he differed with Tual on how to go about it.

"If there is anything self-dealing or wrong-doing ... we of course want to get to the bottom of it," he said. "At this time, executors aren't sure whether continuing the relationship (with Parker) would be good or bad."

Tual told the court he had failed to get a look at the estate's dealings with Parker. A full accounting of Presley's wealth has never been made public.

Presley died on Aug. 16, 1977. He named his father, the late Vernon Presley, executor of the estate and an heir, along with Miss Presley and his grandmother, who died last year.

Asks Reduction Of His Sentence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former San Francisco Supervisor Dan White, convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the slayings of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, has asked that his sentence be reduced by more than a year.

An attorney for White argued before a three-judge panel of the state Court of Appeal on Wednesday that the trial judge, Walter Calcagno, erred when he considered the shootings two crimes and that the sentence of seven years and eight months was therefore too long.

The attorney argued that the November 1978 slayings at City Hall should be considered one "frenetic" act of violence and the sentence should be reduced by 16 months.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

We have frequently exhorted our readers to search for an extra chance before committing themselves to a line of play. This hand turned up in the recent World Team Olympiad. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play three no trump after the lead of the jack of spades.

North-South were playing 15-17 point no trumps, which accounts for the auction. But even if you opened the South hand with one of a suit, the final contract should be the same.

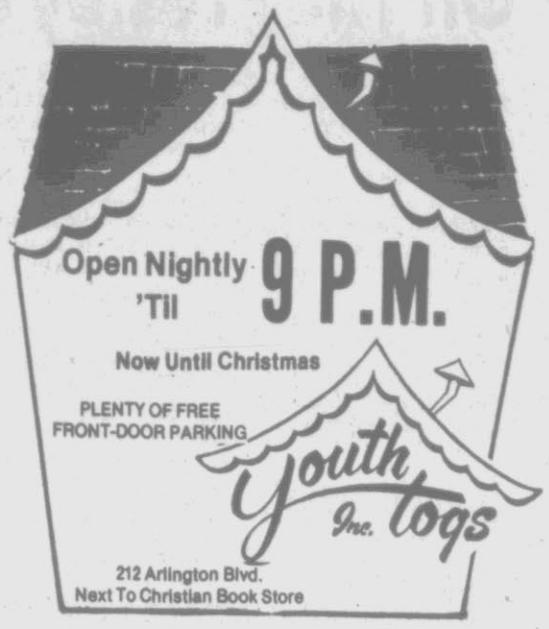

Declarer has only seven fast tricks, and it seems that the obvious suit in which to develop two extra tricks is diamonds. It is slightly better than 3-to-1 that West holds at least one diamond honor. So almost every declarer won the spade trick in hand and finessed the jack of diamonds.

East won and forced out declarer's remaining spade stopper. Declarer crossed back to his hand with a high heart to repeat the diamond finesse. East won and the defenders took three spade tricks for a one-trick set.

Georg Norris of Denmark found a line that gave him an additional chance. He realized that the chances of collecting three club tricks were exactly the same as those of taking four diamond tricks—he needed to find East with either the ten or king of clubs. So he won the first trick with the ace of spades and led a diamond to the ace!

Had either the king or queen of diamonds dropped under the ace, Norris would simply have continued diamonds and he would have ended up with eleven tricks when the jack of hearts came down. But when neither honor appeared, declarer still had time to turn his attention to the club suit.

Declarer led the jack of clubs, and when East covered, the contract was home. But observe that if the jack of clubs lost to West, declarer would win the spade continuation in dummy and lead the nine of clubs, and the contract would still succeed if East held the ten.

Tax Credit Proposal For Manufacturers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Manufacturers would be able to offset local property taxes paid on plant inventories under a proposal made by a legislative study committee Wednesday that would provide them with a state tax credit.

The state income tax credit would be phased in over a 10 year period, beginning with a 10 percent credit next year and rising to a 100 percent credit by 1990.

That recommendation was among a long list of recommendations made by the Legislative Research Commission's study committee on revenue laws. The recommendations now go to the full commission and, if approved, to the 1981 General Assembly.

The committee also recommended North Carolina approve a change in its policy on personal income tax deductions to end a provision that has penalized persons who live in South Carolina but work in North Carolina.

The committee also agreed to extend a tax break on anti-pollution equipment sought by the textile industry, to an increase in the tax exemption on gifts and to a proposal to lift the ceiling on sales tax collections in Mecklenburg County.

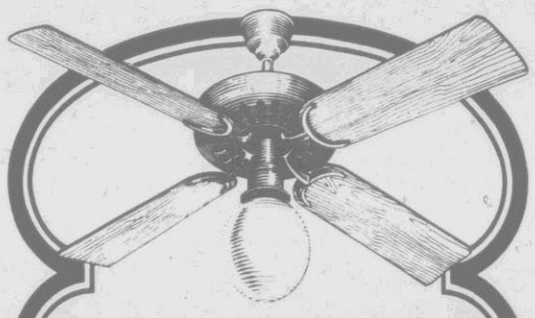

Gerry Cohen, a legislative staff lawyer for the committee, said the inventory tax proposal would not affect tax collections by counties.

The credit paid by the state to offset the inventory taxes paid by manufacturers, however, would cost the state an estimted $1½ million in its first year.

Staff estimates for cost of the full credit in 1990 were around $120 million.

The credit would add to a more limited one passed in 1978 that applied to manufacturers with large inventories.

Drug Smugglers 'Victims' Of New N.C. Sentencing

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Darrell Johnson and Larry Ozella are sitting in the Burke County jail these days, facing the possibility of spending the next 32 years inside a North Carolina prison without chance of parole.

They were convicted in October of landing at a nearby airport with a kilogram of cocaine — a little less than seven pounds of the illegal drug and worth, according to prosecutors, $800,000 to $1 million on the street.

And they were unfortunate enough, from their point of view, to be caught with the illegal substance in August, one month after North Carolina's severe new drug sentencing law took effect.

Johnson, from Virginia, and Ozella, from Massachusetts, are the only people convicted so far under the new law, which was proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten earlier this year.

Both were convicted on two counts, and while a Superior Court judge delayed sentencing until March, the amount of cocaine they were convicted of handling was so large that they fall in the category of the law setting a minimum sentence of 16 years without parole and a $250,000 fine on each count.

"How would you feel facing 32 years with no hope of parole?" said Gary Triggs, a Morganton lawyer who represented Johnson, the pilot of the twin-engine Beechcraft plane.

The sentences, approved by the General Assembly in its brief June session, are among the toughest in the nation. They were modeled after a law passed in Florida earlier this year, which is now being challenged in that state's Supreme Court.

Already law enforcement officials are hailing the law as forcing big-time drug smugglers to find other states for their import centers.

"It is an excellent sentencing procedure. It should have a deterring effect on drugs being smuggled into North Carolina," said Donald Young, agent in charge of the Wilmington office of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

"We can't point to it actively, but we have noticed an increase in seizures in South Carolina," Young added. "And in one investigation it was stated to agents that they didn't want to do anything in North Carolina because of the law."

But at the same time the law is being attacked as draconian by its opponents, many of them defense lawyers.

"It seems to me to be cruel and unusual punishment," said Robert Hodges, a Morganton attorney for Ozella.

Triggs said that the law's ban on parole makes it harsher, in the case of multiple counts, than for a person given a life sentence for murder. Under North Carolina law a life sentence carries with it the chance for consideration for parole after 20 years.

"He's staring at longer time without parole (consideration) than Sirhan Sirhan or Charles Manson," Triggs said of his client.

The law was proposed to counter the rising use of North Carolina as a port for drug smugglers. Its long and isolated shoreline has proven attractive to smugglers by boat, just as it did to pirates such as Blackbeard. And its rural airfields also have been frequently used.

The law sets a new scale of sentences and fines in drug cases — up to 16 years in prison and a $250,000 fine for large amounts of marijuana and cocaine, and up to 20 years and a $500,000 fine for heroin. The sentences are minimums, which a judge must impose when the amounts seized fall into the largest categories.

And the law rules out any chance of suspended sentence, parole or probation except under one circumstance — when a defendant provides "substantial assistance" to authorities.

"I think it's having that effect," said Bob Melott, assistant secretary of crime control. "The people that have been arrested have tended to be very cooperative when they understand the provisions of the law."

Thomas I. Barrows, the assistant district attorney who prosecuted the case, declined to say if negotiations are underway now to lessen sentencing.

Prior to the new law, the maximum sentences for trafficking in large amounts of cocaine or other hard drug was 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine; for marijuana the maximums were half those amounts. Federal law carries maximums of 10 to 15 years.

For Johnson and Ozella, difference is a big one. With a maximum sentence under the old state law or federal law, they could have been eligible for parole after as little as two years.

Several other cases are pending under the new law, including a large marijuana smuggling case in Brunswick County. A Miami lawyer, Frank A. Rubino, represents two charged in the Brunswick case and also represented Ozella.

"The penalties are just far and away too excessive," Rubino said.

Rubino said he specializes in representing defendants in drug cases, and objects especially to the provision that encourages cooperation in exchange for a lighter sentence.

"It tends to reward the person who has great knowledge about the goings on and inner circle of activity. The fellow who is just a boy and unloads the boat, he's going to derive the maximum sentence," he said.

Although prosecutors and agents say they are pleased with the law, a pair of concerns remains. A third defendant was found innocent in the Burke County case, and prosecutor Barrows said he believes the jury found it harder to convict when faced with such certain and severe sentences.

The other is that with little to lose, a cornered smuggler might start shooting. "It opens up the chance of violence," said Young.

Three Arrested In Pitt County

Pitt County authorities and Alcohol Law Enforcement (ALE) agents arrested three men Wednesday morning after being alerted to an armed robbery that occurred earlier at a convenience store near Tarboro in Edgecombe County.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the arrests were made after a car fitting the description of a vehicle allegedly used in the robbery at Sawyer's Mini-Mart was spotted by ALE agents at a home on Porter Road in Pitt County.

Arrested and turned over to Edgecombe County authorities were James Clifton Jones, 26, of Rt. 6, Greenville, Willie Lee Smith Jr., 27, and Van Council Jr., 21, both of Princeville near Tarboro.

Edgecombe County Sheriff Phil Ellis, who said that two of the men were arrested at Jones' house while the third suspect was apprehended nearby, reported that all three were charged with armed robbery. First appearance hearings were scheduled for today in District Court in Tarboro.

Sheriff Ellis explained that the owner of the store, Jewell Sawyer, told officers that two men entered his store on Highway 33 around 10:30 a.m., one of them carrying a sawed-off shotgun.

Sawyer reported that the men tied his hands behind his back and when a customer drove up, he was instructed to tell the customer that his store was closed. The proprietor said that after the first customer left, another customer arrived and when he went to the door to meet the customer, he was able to run out the door of the store. According to the sheriff, Sawyer went next door and authorities were notified of the incident.

Sheriff Ellis said that a customer followed a car from the store but lost sight of the vehicle out in the county. Pitt County authorities, ALE personnel and the Highway Patrol were notified and the car was later spotted at the Pitt County residence.

The Edgecombe County official cited the cooperation of Sheriff Tyson and the Sheriff's Department, as well as the ALE agents and Highway Patrol, for assisting in the apprehension.

Georgia Increasing State Park Fees

ATLANTA (AP) — The cost of relaxing at Georgia's 42 state parks increases on Jan. 1, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

Almost all fees charged at the state parks will increase at the first of the year and an entrance fee will be charged for the first time at 13 state historic sites, said DNR Commissioner Joe Tanner.

"Our costs continue to increase to the point that we have no choice but to raise our rates or else be forced to close some facilities," said Tanner.

The fee increases which go into effect Jan. 1 include:

—Campsites for recreational vehicles, from $4 to $6 per night; for tents and popup trailers, from $3.50 to $5.

—Cottage rental, now $18 to $30 per night depending on the number of people, will go to $24 to $36 per night.

—Mobile home rentals from $20 to $22 per night.

—Rooms at Unicoi Lodge will go from $15-$26 per night to $22-$32. Children under 12 sharing a room with adults still will be lodged free.

—Swimming pools and beaches, from 50 cents to 75 cents.

—Miniature golf, from 50 cents to $1.

—Golf green fees, $5 to $7.

—Golf carts for nine holes, $4 to $5, for 18 holes, $8 to $9.

—Group shelters: 50 capacity, $15 to $20; 80 capacity $25 to $30; 150 capacity, $35 to $40.

—Canoes, $6 to $8 for all day. Hourly rates remain the same.

—Fishing boats, $4 to $5 for half-day, $6 to $8 for all day. Hourly rates remain the same.

—Boat, motor and one tank of gas at Stephen C. Foster State Park in Okefenokee Swamp, $10 to $12 for four hours, $16 to $20 for eight hours.

—Regular group camps, $1 to $1.25 per person per day; Willa-A-Way for handicapped, $4.25 to $5 per person per day.

The entrance fees for all state historic sites will be $1 per adult and 50 cents per child between 12 and 17 years of age. Children 11 and under will be admitted free. Special group rates are 25 cents per person.

Can't Be Denied Due To Illness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 25-year-old woman suffering from an incurable intestinal disorder cannot be denied admission to a county nursing school solely because of her illness, a federal court has ruled.

Mary L. Kling was accepted into the School of Nursing at County-University of Southern California Medical Center two years ago. But she was rejected six months later after she revealed she suffered from Crohn's disease. Miss Kling challenged the rejection in a suit.

Governor Discusses Rate Case

The North Carolina Governor's Office yesterday released the contents of a letter written by Gov. Jim Hunt to Dr. Robert Fischbach, executive director of the public staff of the North Carolina Utilities Commission. The governor wrote:

"Dear Dr. Fischbach,

I share your disappointment over the recent decision of the North Carolina Supreme Court to deny certiorari with respect to the lower court's decision reversing the commission's order of July, 1979, in the VEPCO case.

It is my understanding, from a reading of the lower court decision, that it found no fault with the findings and conclusions of the Commission's order regarding VEPCO's excessive costs and imprudent management. The Court merely held that issues of this type should be dealt with in the context of a general rate case, rather than in the context of fuel clause proceedings. Consequently, I want you to know that I feel very strongly that the public staff should raise these issues again in VEPCO's next general rate case. I understand that VEPCO has submitted a letter indicating its intention to file a general rate case in the near future. I know I can rely on the public staff to again fully utilize its resources, including its powers of inspection and discovery to conduct a thorough investigation of VEPCO's operations and management. It is simply unfair for any of our citizens to pay disproportionately high rates and be inversely affected in their economic development where that is a consequence of excessive costs or imprudent management by a utility regulated by the State of North Carolina."

Sees Takeover Of El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — A foreign policy adviser to President-elect Ronald Reagan says a leftist takeover of El Salvador's government appears likely.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, a Georgetown University political science professor who advises Reagan, said that her comments in a presentation prepared for a seminar reflect her personal opinions rather than the policy views of the Reagan transition team.

"The government of El Salvador appears near collapse. The government is divided, the harvest under violent attack, the people sick of threats, murder, lawlessness and insecurity," she wrote.

COMBAT ALCOHOLISM

PARIS (AP) — The French government has announced 35 measures to combat alcoholism, including higher taxes on alcohol, stricter application of breath tests for motorists, and a massive anti-drinking publicity campaign.

Kept In Jail Without Bond

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge has invoked a seldom-used provision of the city's criminal code to order Bernard C. Welch kept in jail without bond. Welch is accused of slaying noted cardiologist Dr. Michael Halberstam.

Welch's lawyer, Sol Z. Rosen, argued Wednesday that his client's identification was made by Halberstam's widow, Elliott Jones, when she "obviously in shock and frightened." Rosen also pointed to police testimony that Ms. Jones never saw the face of the intruder inside the house where Halberstam was shot.

But Judge Robert Shuker of the District of Columbia Superior Court ordered Welch held under preventive detention, which is allowed only when the safety of the community would be put in jeopardy by the release or if the suspect has been convicted of a serious crime in the past 10 years.

Angels, Red Sox Trade Five Players

AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The American League finally got into the act at the winter baseball meetings when the California Angels and Boston Red Sox made a five-player deal which included a swap of All-Star shortstop Rick Burleson and young third baseman Carney Lansford.

The Angels acquired Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson from California Wednesday night for Lansford, relief pitcher Mark Clear and outfielder Rick Miller.

The Angels-Red Sox deal was the first major transaction made by American League clubs at these weeklong meetings. In all, seven trades have been completed involving 34 players.

Another major action Wednesday was the signing by the Houston Astros of utility player Dave Roberts for $1.3 million over five years.

The Astros don't seem to be paying much attention to baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn's warning of economic disaster if franchises continue to hand out rich, longterm contracts to free agents.

Meanwhile, American League club owners gathered today for a meeting to consider a second attempt by Edward DeBartolo to purchase the Chicago White Sox for $20 million.

DeBartolo, whose offer was accepted by the White Sox stockholders, was turned down Oct. 24, when he fell two votes short of the 10 necessary to get the franchise.

It was indicated at that time that DeBartolo was turned down because the owners were afraid he would move the team to New Orleans and because of his interst in race tracks.

Lee MacPhail, American League president, said Wednesday that DeBartolo would be given another chance here to sway the owners.

"But I am unable to detect any change in their sentiments," MacPhail said. "I was surprised he got as many votes as he got in October and I'll be surprised if his total is any bigger.

MacPhail, in reference to an offer by DeBartolo to sell his race tracks and spend more time in Chicago, said he doubted if that would affect the vote.

In the Angels-Red Sox trade, both clubs felt they had strengthened themselves considerably.

"We have obtained one of the finest shortstops (Burleson) in baseball," said Angels' Manager Jim Fregosi.

California owner Gene Autry said, "we feel Burleson fills a great void we have had at shortstop since Jim Fregosi," nodding toward his manager. "We haven't had a first line shortstop since Fregosi."

Burleson had been having difficulty negotiating his salary with Boston. He and Hobson will move right ino the California starting infield, which features Bobby Grich at second and Rod Carew on first.

"It gives us one of the best infields in baseball," said Autry.

Hobson lost his third base job at Boston to rookie Glenn Hoffman last season after experiencing elbow problems that required surgery. The Red Sox plan to move Hoffman to his original position at shortstop replacing Burleson, giving the third base job to Lansford.

Lansford, 23, hit .261 with 15 home runs and 80 RBI in 151 games last season for the Angels. Clear, who was 11-11 as a reliever, gives Boston needed bullpen help.

"I think the trade strengthens our club," said Ralph Houk, the new Red Sox manager. "We have had a kid (Hoffman) playing third base who ought to be at shortstop and that's where we'll play him," said Houk. "We got a fine reliever in Clear and Miller can be a fourth outfielder."

The Red Sox aren't through wheeling and dealing. They're still trying to trade outfielder Fred Lynn, who is in the last year of his contract. The Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Mets appear the main contenders for him.

The Mets said they had made a concrete proposal for the outfielder, but refused any details.

Acquiring Lynn likely would help the Mets in their quest to sign outfielder Dave Winfield, this year's most sought after free agent. Winfield reportedly had narrowed his choice to the Mets and New York Yankees, but was waiting to see if the Mets strengthen themselves at this meeting.

A trade given the most likely chance of materializing was being developed by the St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers. The Cards, already involved in a fee agent signing and two trades totaling 15 players, were at it again.

The report is that Whitey Herzog, general manager and manager of St. Louis, was prepared to send catcher-first baseman Ted Simmons, pitcher Pete Vukovich and recently acquired reliever Rollie Fingers to the Brewers for infielder Jim Gantner, pitcher Lary Sorensen and outfielder Sixto Lezcano.

In a two-player exchange Wednesday, the Detroit Tigers acquired left-handed relief pitcher Kevin Saucier from the Texas Rangers for shortstop Mark Wagner. Saucier pitched for Philadelphia last year and was the player to be named later in the September deal when the Phillies obtained reliever Sparky Lyle from Texas.

A question heardfrequently Wednesday was what do the Astros see in Roberts that prompted them to pay such big money (the contract includes $200,000 in incentive bonuses) for a potential backup performer?

In 1979, Roberts batted .262 in 44 games while playing first, second and third base, the outfield and catching. He also can play shortstop. Last season in 101 games with the Rangers, the 29-year-old Roberts batted .238 with 10 homers and 30 RBI, again playing five positions.

"His value is is versatility," said Al Rosen, president and general manager of the Astros. "It is an asset most players don't have. We think he's a late bloomer."

Roberts said from San Diego that the key to selecting Houston was that he would get more opportunity to play.

Illinois Upsets Missouri; Maryland Wins Again

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Big Ten has proved its mettle for years as one of the best, if not the best, basketball conferences in the nation.

Four teams from the Big Ten are in this week's Top 20 basketball ratings, and one more put in a strong bid for national recognition Wednesday night.

Illinois won its third straight game by swamping 14th-ranked Missouri 84-62, but Coach Lou Henson and several Illini players denied interest in the rankings.

"I'd just as soon not be ranked," Henson saig. "Rankings really mean nothing. We're just trying to get in the top 50."

Craig Tucker and Eddie Johnson, who both had 20 points for Illinois, basically agreed with their coach's sentiments.

"Rankings don't mean anything," said Johnson, a 6-foot-8 forward. "But if we beat Marquette (Saturday), we definitely belong."

In other games involving ranked teams, fourth-ranked Maryland swamped Fairleigh Dickinson 109-83, No.18 Michigan tripped Kent State 97-72 and No.20 Syracuse outscored Detroit 93-79.

Illinois led 41-36 at halftime as Johnson scored 16 of his points, but Missouri went nearly eight minutes without a field goal in the second half and fell behind 68-47 with 8:53 remaining.

"I thought our pressure defense in the first seven or eight minutes of the second half made the difference," Henson said.

Missouri Coach Norm Stewart agreed that guards Tucker and Derek Harper, a freshman, were instrumental in the defeat for the Tigers, now 4-2.

"They've obviously helped themselves at the guard position," Stewart said. "I guess that's an understatement."

The Tigers' leading scorer was Ricky Frazier, with 17 points.

Center Buck Williams hit 12 of 13 shots and scored 25 points and guard Greg Manning hit eight of eight for 18 to pace Maryland over Fairleigh Dickinson, who got 27 from Ken Webb.

The Terrapins, 5-0, were tied 21-21 before pulling away with 15 consecutive points in a 2:14 span midway through the first half and a 14-2 binge after intermission.

Mike McGee scored 30 points and Thad Garner added 15 as Michigan also stayed unbeaten with its easy win over Kent State. The Wolverines, 5-0, led 40-24 at halftime and extended the margin to 58-28 with an 18-4 spurt to start the second period.

Senior center Dan Schayes, son of longtime pro star Dolph Schayes, scored a career-high 33 points for Syracuse on the road against Detroit. Schayes hit 11 of 13 shots from the floor to lead a 67 percent shooting night for the Orangemen.

In other major-college games, Boston College beat Brown 70-56, Georgetown swamped Southern University 79-43, La Salle edged Xavier-Ohio 70-65, Penn crushed St. Francis (Pa.) 76-56, St. John's drubbed Columbia 58-42, St. Peter's clubbed St. Francis (N.Y.) 62-47, West Virginia beat Ohio 69-61, Mississippi dropped Mercer 70-58, South Carolina blitzed Biscayne 80-60, Tulane crushed Roosevelt 109-63, Virginia Tech beat East Tennessee 72-68, Miami-Ohio edged Cincinnati 91-87 in overtime, Lamar tripped Texas Southern 88-73, Oklahoma State nipped Houston Baptist 78-75, Texas Tech ripped U.S. International 77-60 and Washington State beat Montana State 73-59.

Buc Tankers Qualify At S.C.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — East Carolina University's swimmers qualified a number of swimmers for the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships during the first day of the South Carolina Invitational yesterday.

The meet, which is for swimmers to post top times, rather than for scoring purposes, continues today.

"The team has made big improvement over the last two weeks," Coach Ray Scharf said. "I'm real pleased with the effort and results. I think we'll be okay."

One varsity record was set during the first day of activities, and one time could be ranked nationally.

The record came when Perry Newman swam home in the 200-yard butterfly in 1:54.49. Four other Pirates also had qualifying times in the event. They included Kevin Richards, 1:56.61; Doug Nieman, 1:57.65; Bjorn Johnsen, 2:00.43; and John Akright, 2:00.54.

Jack Clowar's time of 21.33, which qualified him in the 50-yard freestyle, is likely to be nationally ranked.

Qualifying in the 200-yard freestyle were Akright in 1:44.37, Jan Wicklund, 1:45.62, and Nieman in 1:45.4.

Matt McDonald and Brian Duncan qualified in the 200-yard breaststroke, with times of 2:13.58 and 2:15.79, respectively.

Nieman led the qualifiers in the 200-yard backstroke with a 1:58.78 times. Others qualifying were John Richards, 2:02.37, John Bennett, 2:03.47, Kevin Richards, 2:03.89, and Johnsen, 2:04.2.

Clowar qualified in the 100-yard butterfly in 51.18, while Rick Michaels made the 100-yard freestyle in 48.84. Wiklund and Bennett qualified in the 500-yard freestyle in times of 4:47.87 and 4.51.8 respectively.

Nieman led the qualifying in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 1:57.41. He was followed by Kevin Richards, 1:59.45; Bennett 2:02.0, McDonald 2:02.1, John Richards 2:02.3 and Akright 2:02.5.

The Eastern Intercollegiate is a 16-school confernce that swimming participates in.

Rose Girls Cancelled

Rose High School will not play a girls' basketball game on Friday when the Rampants entertain Washington.

The Washington girls' team, which forfeited its game Tuesday to D.H. Conley, is down to only three players, due to injuries and other unannounced problems, and asked that Friday's game with Rose be cancelled.

The junior varsity game between the two schools will begin at 6 p.m. Friday in the Rose gym, with the varsity game starting at approximately 7:30 p.m.

Rose, now 2-1, will be seeking its second win over the Pam Pack this year.

No Wake For Big Four Tourney

By BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer

When they finally turned the lights out in Greensboro Coliseum Saturday night, the arena was strangely silent.

Wake's are customary when someone or something passes away. But no one was left to raise a glass and toast the Big Four Tournament. For 11 years the basketall tournament had filled Greensboro Colisum with screaming fans and exceptional basketball.

The only celebration Saturday night was not a wake, but rather for one. Wake Forest had won the last Big Four Tournament and inscribed its name in the history books as the only team to win the event four times.

The Deacons players performed the annual rituals of cutting the nets down and jumping into one another's arms. Those duties were expected of the champion.

Wake Forest seemed destined to win the event's finale. On the cover of its basketball brochure, Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy was pictured sitting beside three trophies — golden basketballs inscribed with the words, "Big Four Champions."

In the 1 previous seasons, the Deacons had not once won the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season title. But in the Big Four, they were the spoiler, the team that always had to be reckoned with. They won it in the 1974-75 season, ending North Carolina State's 38-game winning streak with 83-78 win in the first round. And they won it the next two years. Their third title may have been in the most exciting Big Four ever.

In the 1976-77 season, Wake Forest edged Duke 81-80 in the first round, then won the title the next night with a 97-96 overtime win over the Tar Heels.

That year the Deacons had a freshman guard named Frank Johnson, who was playing in his first Big Four.

This year, Johnson played in the fifth Big Four. He played last year but sat out most of the season because of a broken foot and achieved red-shirt status.

It seemed another bit of predestintion. Johnson did his job in the tournament this year with 38 points and provided the leadership the team desperately needed. He turned out as the only man to participate in five Big Fours and won most valuable player.

In the end it was Wake Forests tournament. And the Deacons shined at the end. All the teams will miss the $80,000 they each received for playing in the event. And while many will not miss the chance to lose two games, the Deacons will miss it tournament and its competition, as will their fans. It was always their time to shine.

Maybe Wake Forest's performance was the final toast to the Big Four and the strange silence in Greensboro Coliseum may have been a tribute to Wake Forest, which left North Carolina, Duke and N.C. State silent on many occasions.

Vikings Need To Quit Watching, Go To Boards

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's basketball team has been a victim of its own special affliction during the early going this season.

"We're a team of ballwatchers," Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "What I mean is that instead of getting in good position to rebound after the shot's in the air we just watch the flight of the ball."

That fascination with the basketball's flight has been the main reason the Vikings, picked by many to be among the leaders in the Eastern Carolina Conference, have won only two of their first four games.

Another reason is that, according to Marsh, the Vikings have the toughest early schedule of any team in the ECC.

"Although we're considered big, we've been outrebounded in every game," Marsh said. "We're just not concentrating as a team so far.

"But I also don't think that anyone in the league has had a harder opening schedule," Marsh said. "We've lost to Kinston, who's undefeated, by one t their place and lost to Southern Nash by two over there. And we never play well there."

Marsh is, however, optimistic his team will play better — if they ca begin hitting the boards, a must for a team that starts four players 6-2 or better.

"Because we're big it's expected that we'll do well on the boards, but we don't have all that much quickness and we've got some players who are still a year away," Marsh said. "If we're to have the type of season we want the rebounding is going to have to come."

The Vikings, 14-10 a year ago, also must replace seven players lost to graduation. Gone are Curtis Spencer, Carnell Burney, O'Hara Parker, David Brock and Mitchell Moore, all of whom started for Marsh last season. Conley also lost reserves Carlton Small and Charlie Speller.

The Vikings, however, do return a good nucleus. Back is sophomore guard Keith Gatlin (6-4), forwards Sammy Tucker (6-2, senior) and Anthony Burney (6-3, senior) and center Sammy Tyson (6-7, senior). Up from the junior varsity to complete the starting five is senior guard Jimmy Jennette (5-9).

Reserves, all of whom were on the junior varsity last season, include Dixon Page (5-10, junior), Tommy Joyner (5-11, junior) Terence Roundtree (5-10, senior), Tim Neal (6-6, junior), Leon Cox (5-11, sophomore) and Stoney Speller (6-0, senior).

"Right now we're not concentrating very well on the court," Marsh said. "But I'm excited about the season. We haven't played a decent game yet and we've been able to win two games and stay close in the two others.

"If we can get our rebounding straight and smooth out the rough spots we'll be all right. We figure our chances as as good as anybody else's. We want it and I think we can get it together."

Looking For Mistakes

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Florida State is the second best college football team in the nation, according to The Associated Press poll, but Coach Bobby Bowden says the Seminoles will need some help from Oklahoma to win their Orange Bowl rematch ... against Oklahoma.

"If they don't make mistakes, I don't know if we have a chance," Bowden said Wednesday during an NBC-TV Orange Bowl luncheon that also featured Coach Barry Switzer of fourth-ranked Oklahoma and the respective quarterbacks, Florida State's Rick Stockstill and OU's J.C. Watts.

"I don't know if anyone can beat Oklahoma if they don't make mistakes," Bowden said. "I think we've got a chance, no matter what they do, but most coaches feel that if they don't fumble, they don't lose.

"I know we don't have the speed and possibly the physical strength of Oklahoma. We have to win with perfection — great kicking, keep the other team backed up and our offense has to cash in on the mistakes other team makes. If Oklahoma doesn't make mistakes you don't stop Oklahoma."

Fumbling is something Oklahoma did as "well" as anyone until mid-season, when the Sooners suddenly found the handle on the football. After fumbling 33 times in their first five games and losing 18 of them, they coughed up the ball only 16 times in the final six contests and turned it over just eight times.

Accordingly, their Wishbone attack, run by Watts, perked up so much that Bowden refers to the standard triple option as a "quadruple option."

"They take the triple option one step further," he said. "I've never seen a quarterback take the ball as far as Watts does before pitching it. He's the most daring one I've seen."

Best Of 76ers Given Honors

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There are championship teams and there are great teams, but now a team from this sports-hungry city has laid claim to the title of greatest pro basketball team in history.

The 1966-67 Philadelphia 76ers, winners of the National Basketball Association championship in a record-setting, dynasty-busting year, were honored here Wednesday night as the greatest team in the 35-year history of the NBA.

The selection was made last month by the U.S. Basketball Writers Association, and NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien presented plaques commemorating the title to 11 team members, in a nostalgic reunion before a game between the 1980 76ers and the Chicago Bulls.

Philadelphia won the game, 113-100.

"The basketball writers made a tremendous selection," said O'Brien. "It's historic in basketball and historic in sports. I congratulate the 76ers."

In their best-ever year, the Sixers finished the regular season with a record-setting 68-13 season. They followed that with the NBA championship, ending Boston's eight-year reign by defeating the Celtics in the Eastern finals.

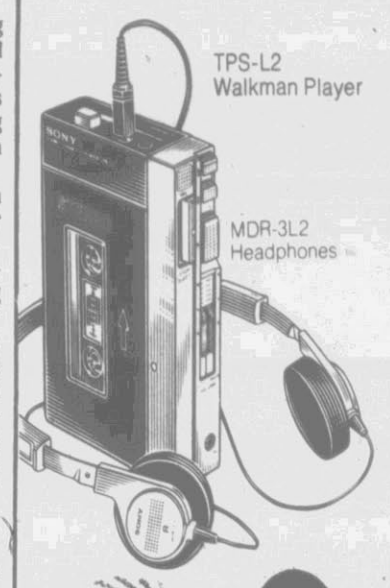

They defeated the Golden State Warriors in six games for the title.

Present from the championship team were starting forwards Chet "The Jet" Walker and Lucius Jackson; starting guards Hal Greer and Larry Costello; former coach Alex Hannum; Billy Cunningham, now coaching the team; and Dave Gambee, Matt Goukas, Wali "By Golly" Jones and Bill Melchioni.

But the standout was 7-foot-1 Wilt "The Stilt" Chamberlain, the center whose stature and play have left a permanent mark on pro basketball.

The 13,871 fans were cheering for "The Big Dipper," before he stepped onto the court at the Spectrum, wearing his black-and-orange jacket from Philadelphia's Overbrook High School. No introduction was necessary.

Bradley Shows Off His Talents

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

What basketball fans learned three years ago about the way Dudley Bradley plays defense, Walter Davis knew two years before that.

"He played behind me in college and didn't get that much of a chance to play until I graduated," said Davis, a perennial National Basketball Association All-Star at Phoenix, about his former North Carolina teammate. "But he sure showed what he could do in practice. He has great anticipation and real quick hands."

Bradley, in his second year as a pro, will never be a big scorer in the NBA — he wasn't at North Carolina, either — but what he showed with the Tar Heels he is also showing as an Indiana Pacer.

His five steals Wednesday night increased his NBA lead to 97 and he also neutralized Davis offensively as the Pacers defeated the Suns 102-90, only the Pacific Division leaders' seventh loss in 32 games. Indiana is now 18-12, the first time the Pacers have been six games above the .500 mark in their five NBA seasons.

"Tonight, I wasn't thinking steal. But a few times I stuck up my hand and the ball was there," said Bradley. "The rest of the guys make it (stealing the ball) easy because they're putting pressure on the other guys."

Davis did score 16 points, but most of them came after Phoenix Coach John MacLeod moved him to forward, where Bradley did not cover him.

"The key is shutting down their guards," said Indiana Coach Jack McKinney of the Suns' attack, which revolves largely around Davis and Dennis Johnson. "If you stop their guards, you've stopped two of their three big offensive threats."

In other NBA games, Philadelphia stopped Chicago 113-100, New York edged New Jersey 106-104, Atlanta beat Detroit 100-92, Kansas City clipped San Diego 112-100, Boston nipped Washington 101-99, Los Angeles trimmed Houston 109-108, Denver defeated Dallas 116-107 and Seattle beat Golden State 108-103.

76ers 113, Bulls 100

Philadelphia, with the best record in the league at 27-4, won its fourth in a row and handed Chicago its fourth straight loss as Bobby Jones scored 25 points, Julius Erving 24 and Darryl Dawkins 21.

Celtics 101, Bullets 99

Larry Bird scored 21 points and rookie Kevin McHale hit two turnaround jumpers in the final 72 seconds to lead Boston to its 13th victory in 16 games.

Knicks 106, Nets 104

Mike Newlin scored 38 points for New Jersey, but had the ball stolen from him by Mike Glenn in the last minute to help New York edge the Nets. Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 26 points, while Campy Russell added 17 to pass the 7,000 mark for his career.

Hawks 100, Pistons 92

Atlanta snapped a 12-game losing streak on&the road as John Drew scored 36 points, continuing a recent hot streak.

Kings 112, Clippers 100

Scott Wedman scored 22 points and Otis Birdsong added 20 for Kansas City to offset the 41 points by San Diego's Freeman Williams, who had 31 in the first half.

Lakers 109, Rockets 108

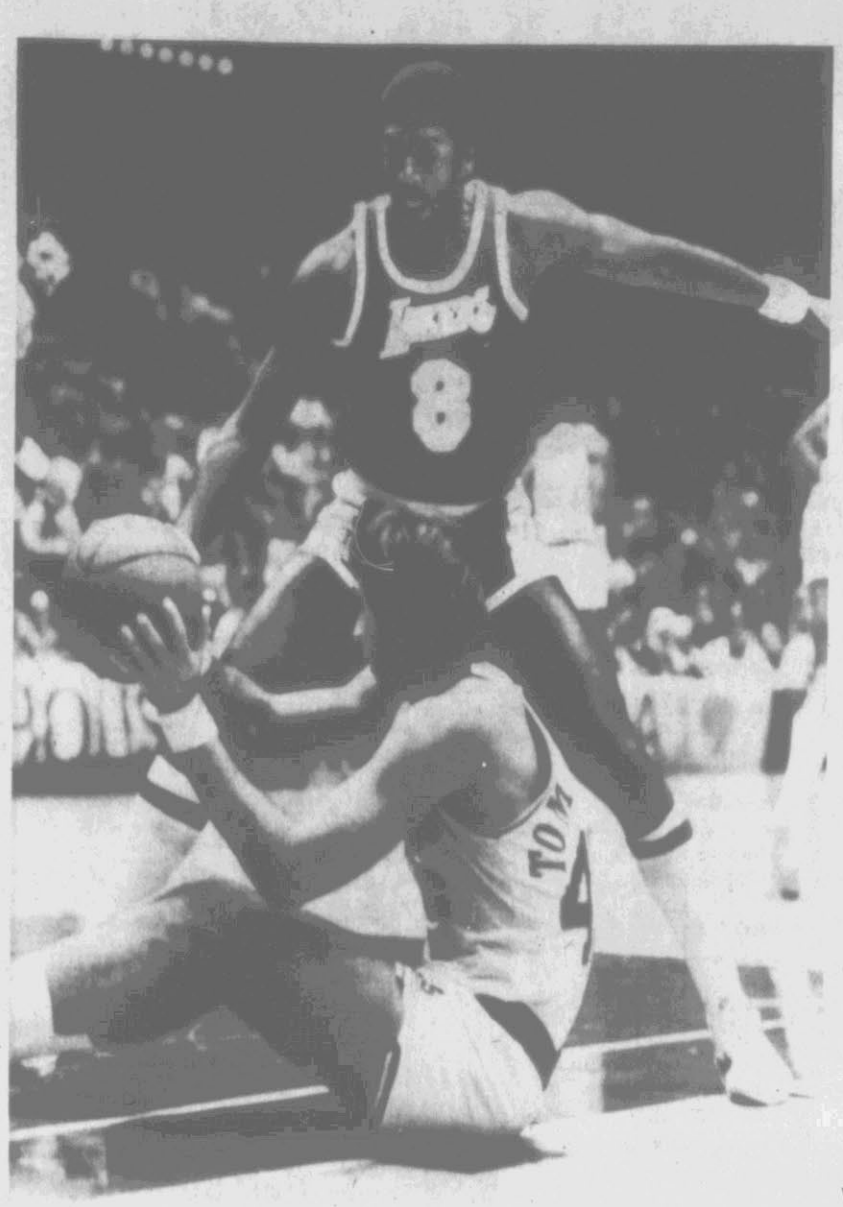

Jamaal Wilkes scored 32 points, including 15 in the fourth quarter and the last six for Los Angeles in its victory over Houston.

Nuggets 116, Mavericks 107

Denver halted a five-game losing streak and extended Dallas' skein to 12 as Alex English scored 27 points. Kiki Vandeweghe, Dallas' No.1 draft pick who was traded to the Nuggets earlier in the day, played in his first NBA game and scored six points in 19 minutes.

Sonics 108, Warriors 103

Jack Sikma scored 11 of his 27 points in the third quarter, when Seattle outscored Golden State 31-17, to pace the winners.

Vandeweghe Traded To Denver By Mavericks

DENVER (AP) — Kiki Vandeweghe, who had failed to come to contract terms with the Dallas Mavericks since being selected by that team in the first round of last June's National Basketball Association draft, finally made his NBA debut in a Mavericks' game.

But Vandeweghe was wearing a Denver Nuggets' uniform when he began his pro career Wednesday night in a game against, ironically, the team he had feuded with for six months.

Seeing considerable playing time, Vandeweghe scored six points in the Nuggets' 116-107 victory.

The 6-foot-8 former UCLA forward signed a multi-year contract with the Nuggets earlier Wednesday. Denver obtained his rights after Dallas had unsuccessfully sought a trade with various other clubs. In exchange for Vandeweghe, Dallas will receive Denver's first-round choice in the 1981 draft. In addition, Dallas will receive Denver's No.1 draft choice in 1985, with the Nuggets getting Dallas' top selection in 1986.

"We're tremendously pleased to have Kiki Vandeweghe join our organization," said Carl Scheer, Nuggets president and general manager. "He's an outstanding player who comes from a winning program.

"Signing him now is like getting our 1981 draft choice a year early. We'll have the benefit of working with him for the remainder of this season, and that gives us a big head start over any rookie we could have drafted next year."

Vandeweghe, a 21-year-old Los Angeles resident, finished his college career as the eighth best scorer in UCLA history. His career field-goal percentage of .570 was third behind only Bill Walton and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and he established a school record for forwards with a .622 field-goal percentage as a junior.

Vandeweghe averaged 19.5 points per game last season, second best in the Pac-10 Conference, and h helped lead the Bruins into the championship game of the NCAA Tournament. He was the 11th player selected overall in the draft last summer.

Denver Coach Donnie Walsh said he felt "Kiki's type of game will fit into our style immediately, and although he'll have some things to learn about the NBA, we think he's good enough to help us in a matter of weeks. We know he'll give us scoring off the bench right now."

Vandeweghe said he was "grateful to the Nuggets for expressing an interest in me. Otherwise, I might have sat out all year, and that's not a happy thought. I'm glad to be playing here.

He said Larry Brown, his coach at UCLA and a former Nugget head coach, influenced his decision to sign with Denver. "Larry loves Denver and this team, and he was one of the main reasons I was so excited to come here," Vandeweghe said.

To make room for Vandeweghe on their roster, the Nuggets placed rookie forward James Ray on the injured list.

Winfield And His Agent Feel Time Right For Him

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Corespondent

"I have the right talent, I am the right age and I am at the right place at the right time," says big Dave Winfield.

"It's impulse buying," adds Al Frohman, his agent. "Homes are up. Clothes are up. The pattern was set four or five years ago. Owners fix the market. Baseball is entertainment. People will pay for quality performances."

Thus a ballplayer and his negotiator-financial adviser rationalize the $12 million to $20 million price tag that may be necessary to land the 6-foot-6, 220-pound free agent outfielder, formerly of the San Diego Padres.

Winfield and Frohman are ensconced in an 18th floor, three-room suite at a midtown New York hotel, waiting for baseball executives to break from their winter meetings in Dallas and return home.

Then Winfield and Frohman can expect an early call from George Steinbrenner, the principal owner and master salesman of the New York Yankees, as well as contacts from principal owner Nelon Doubleday and president Fred Wilpon of the rebuilding Mets. There also will be gestures from Atlanta, Cleveland and possibly Houston.

Who's going to get the multimillion dollar piece de resistance of the 1980 free agent re-entry draft? The betting is that it will be either the Yankees or Mets, with Steinbenner's persuasiveness a 5-4 shot to tilt the scales.

Winfield isn't saying. The reason, he says, is that he honestly hasn't made up his mind. He spent five days on the beaches of Hawaii trying to sort out all the tangibles and intangibles. He returned as undecided as ever.

"I have been getting advice from a lot of people," he said. "Crystalball gazers have been predicting what I will do. I have to put it all together.

"Maybe somebody in the next few days will come up with something that stikes a chord. Then I will say, 'That's it. That's what I am waiting for.'"

Oh, the problems of a man who can't decide which pot of gold to pluck from the end of the rainbow.

The Yankees can offer him pinstripes, prestige, dignity, national exposure and possibly a gleaming World Series ring for the third finger on his left hand. Also some turmoil. The Mets can offer him equal stardom, a challenge, a 371-foot power alley and familiarity with the only league — the National League — in which he has ever played.

"Money is not the overriding factor," says Winfield, whose original demand was for $1.3 million for 10 years. The Mets reportedly have offered $12 million for eight years. Steinbrenner's checkbook knows no bounds.

Regardless of who signs him, Winfield, at age 29, stands to become the highest paid performer in baseball, topping Nolan Ryan ($1.125 million a year), Al Hrabosky ($1.10 million), Phil Niekro ($1.066 million), all pitchers, World Series hero George Brett ($900,000) and such other superstars as Rod Carew, Dave Parker and Pete Rose.

Winfield is a low-key, soft-spoken Midwesterner (St. Paul, Minn.) who remained faithful to the Padres for seven years although he was underpaid and underappreciated without a chance to exploit his unquestioned potential.

At the end, the fans were booing him.

"I was stifled, the Padres were anemic," he said. "Rarely did I come to bat with men on base. Pitchers always could pitch around me. I never reached my home run or runs-batted-in potential.

"I can play rightfield as well, or better than, anybody. They don't go from first to third on me. They don't score on a rightfield incident. All I want is a chance to prove what kind of ballplayer I am."

Winfield declined to list the positive and negative factors in his team optios, but both he and Frohman insisted that the Yankees' controversial owner George Steinbrenner and impulsive Reggie Jackson were not deterrents.

"I am enthralled with George Steinbrenner — he is a winner," Frohman said. He called Jackson a pushing, shoving street fighter, adding: "I am a street fighter, too. So you get a soft guy like Dave and a street fighter like Reggie — perfect chemistry."

Is that a hint or a smokescreen?

Wooten Is The Winner

CLINTON, S.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina offensive guard Ron Wooten has won the 1980 Jacobs Blocking Trophy for the Atlantic Coast Conference.

More Sparks Flying In Feud Between Al Davis, Pete Rozelle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More fuel has been added to the running feud between Al Davis, the managing general partner of the Oakland Raiders, and Pete Rozelle, the commissioner of the National Football League.

Davis wants to move his franchise to Los Angeles, a proposal which Rozelle has clearly opposed since it became public nearly a year ago. Since that time, sparks have flown several times between the two.

The latest episode occurred Wednesday with a report in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner that Davis claims Rozelle may have profited from the sale of tiskets for last January's Super Bowl.

The newspaper reported that a sworn statement by Davis said Rozelle may have received money from the sale of tickets to the game between the Los Angeles Rams and Pittsburgh Steelers and also accused Rams' owner Georgia Frontiere of being involved in scalping tickets for the game.

Davis' statement was prepared for a trial in his dispute with the NFL over the Raiders' proposed move to Los Angeles.

Rozelle responded with a prepared statement:

"The only testimony suggesting that I sold Super Bowl tickets for personal profit has come from Al Davis. This ridiculous contention is totally untrue. I've never sold a Super Bowl ticket for personal profit to anyone.

"It is ironic that Davis' testimony cites Melvin Durslag, sports columnist for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, as a source fo this rumor when I am now responding to a story printed in that newspaper. Davis' testimony admits that he has communicated weekly with Durslag concerning the litigation over the past year."

"I deeply regret that those pursuing this case against the National Football League, and others associated with them, are resorting to fallicious character assassination on matters not even relevant to the litagation."

Frontiere, meanwhile, was unavailable for comment.

Durslag responded to Rozelle's statement with one of his own, which said:

"It is a little frightening that one in the responsible position of Pete Rozelle would resort to such distortion of fact. At no time, under any circumstances, did I accuse him of profiting personally from Super Bowl tickets. Nor did I serve as Al Davis' source for such a charge.

"I called Davis to check the deposition he gave, and he assured I was not listed as his source for that statement.

I'm not the only one who needs to prepare for winter. With a CRAFT STOVE in your home, you can save up to 80% on your heating bill. You can also have the warm feeling that your wood stove has been tested and listed by Underwriters Laboratories, meeting all requirements for safety. Guaranteed air-tight and designed to burn wood slowly, the CRAFT STOVE will utilize up to 80% of the available energy in a piece of wood where a conventional fireplace uses only 10%. Even if you already have a fireplace in your home, you can retain the charm and romance of a traditional fireplace and still gain tremendous savings on your heating costs. Visit your local CRAFT STOVE dealer for complete details.

COMPARE THE FACTS—CHOOSE CRAFT

PANELS—Available in any size to suit your fireplace needs.

VENTS—(4) openings through which heated air is more evenly distributed throughout the home.

HEARTH EXTENSION—Protects hearth area from becoming damaged or soiled by the ashes and debris.

DRAFT CONTROL CAPS—When adjusted correctly the spin draft caps enable the most efficient combustion (or burning of the wood), and are engineered to prevent sparks from escaping the stove.

AIR-TIGHT SEAL—Sealed with V shaped design of high heat resistant fiberglass.

CAST IRON DOORS—Airtight closure for maximum efficiency. Their extreme thickness prevents warping.

DOUBLE WALL CONSTRUCTION—Creates a chamber where air is routed through an engineered baffle system to be heated and then forced out into the home.

FIREBRICK BOTTOM—Safely withstands extreme temperatures, retains Heat within the stove, and protects the bottom of the stove from ever burning through.

DAMPER—When adjusted correctly, it becomes a slow burning baffle designed to retain more heat within the stove.

STEEL CONSTRUCTION—Constructed of the highest quality carbon steel.

VARIABLE-SPEED BLOWER—3-speed rheostat blower forces air through a specially designed baffle system inside the stove. External mounting on either the right or left side (rather than behind the stove) frees the blower from excess heat problems and also easy removal for service or storage

PORTABLE HEATERS

KERO-SUN portable heaters can keep you cozy and warm all evening for a few cents an hour. Take another look at your utility bill...then see TAR ROAD ANTIQUES about a KERO-SUN PORTABLE HEATER!

Although the CRAFT STOVE is not advertised as a primary heating system, we have many customers who use it as their primary source of heat. It can be more effective than many conventional central heating systems. With proper adjustment, CRAFT STOVE customers have reported burning times from eight to eighteen hours on one fill of wood. CRAFT STOVES ARE DESIGNED to burn wood slowly through an "air-starvation" method which will utilize up to 80% of the energy available in a piece of wood. Conventional fireplaces use only about 10%.

The CRAFT STOVE is a forced air heating system whose blower pushes 265 cubic feet of hot air per minute. Basically the CRAFT STOVE heats your home by using warm air to push the cold air from you house into the stove. It then circulates this air through an engineered baffle system over the heated area inside the stove, and then forces it back into the room. From there, this warm air is circulated through the house on the principle of convection (as the stove pulls cool air from one room, its heated air moves in to take its place). In a normal insulated home with the inside doors open, there should never be more than a few degrees difference in the temperature of the various rooms.

Morgan Assails Senate Judiciary Investigation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., released a report Wednesday that strongly criticizes the Senate judiciary investigation process, saying it "reeked of unfairness" in rejecting Charles B. Winberry for a federal judgeship.

It was apparently an attempt by Morgan to exonerate Winberry of his precedent-setting rejection for a federal judgeship. Winberry is a close associate of both Morgan and Gov. Jim Hunt.

The report was written by a five-member committee of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers, which Morgan asked to investigate the Senate Judiciary Committee's treatment of Winberry during a hearing early this year.

"These proceedings were not just casually, incidentally, or technically unfair to the nominee," the five attorneys concluded in their report. "They reeked of unfairness at every turn from beginning to end, and our study left us with the conviction they were very shabby proceedings, indeed, quite unworthy of the Senate Judiciary Committee, or, for that matter, any organization with lawyers connected with it."

Conducting the investigation were Arthur J. Donaldson of Salisbury, Clarence E. Horton. of Concord, Eugene H. Phillips of Winston-Salem, Walter E. Clark Jr. of Greensboro and Harry J. O'Connor Jr. of Greensboro.

Morgan recommended the 39-year-old lawyer from Rocky Mount for the judgeship and President Carter nominated him. But the Senate committee rejected Winberry's nomination, 9-6, on March 4. He was the first nominee to be turned down in 42 years.

Winberry's involvement as defense attorney in a 1976 cigarette smuggling case drew scrutiny from the Senate committee. There were allegations that Winberry agreed to "fix" the case in return for cash.

The American Bar Association also found Winberry "not qualified" for the judgeship.

Winberry managed Morgan's 1974 senatorial campaign and served as legislative lobbyist for Hunt in 1977.

Morgan praised the five attorneys who conducted the review of the Winberry hearings as the Academy's "most able members" and emphasized they have no "close personal or professional association with Mr. Winberry or myself." He added that at least one of the five is a Republican and supported John East, the Republican who successfully defeated Morgan in the November election.

In a 21-page report, the committee of attorneys concluded the Senate investigation was one-sided, that newspaper articles were generated unfairly by the staff or members of the Senate committee and that the Senate hearings were prosecutorial rather than investigative.

Morgan, in a prepared statement, urged the Senate committee to "adopt a more deliberative, fair minded and compassionate approach to its business."

N.C. Fair Employment Agency Plans Shape Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal by a legislative study committee to establish a new state commission that would protect North Carolinians against discrimination in hiring is near completion.

The comittee stopped short of taking action Wednesday on the bill that would establish a new state Human Relations Commission, but the panel agreed to most of its major provisions — except on whether to include state government employees under the provisions of the measure.

The bill would replace the current Human Relations Council with a new group, made up of 15 members appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives. The measure would give the state group authority to investigate claims and initiate legal action in cases of employee discrimination.

It would cover discrimination cases that are prohibited by Title VII of the 1964 federal Civil Rights Act.

But Michael Crowell, a staff counsel to the group and member of the North Carolina Institute of Government, says the bill under consideration stops short of a bill that failed in the 1979 session of the General Assembly. That failed bill would have given the commission the additional authority to enforce fair employment practices where discrimination is found on account of age or handicap, and would have given the agency the power to make rulings on employment practices.

"This draft leaves out age and handicap discrimination and gives the commission the authority ... to investigate and sue," he said. "But the courts will decide."

The measure would cover businesses with 15 or more employees, as well as city and county governments.

The panel agreed to delete requirements that would have the General Assembly confirm members of the commission and require the governor to choose a member from every congressional district.

It also agreed to give the governor more power in selecting the chairman and executive director of the commission.

The panel rejected the suggestion to establish a new panel to hear employment complaints and leave the Human Relations Council to mediate problems involving race and community relations.

"If this is good for private employees, it's good for the state," said Robert Valois, a Raleigh lawyer and commission member.

"We're going to have opposition all the way on this," said Rep. Lura Tally, D-Fayetteville, chairwoman of the study committee. "I'm not sure we have enough (support) now to go with this."

Beatles Changed Face Of Music

Lennon No 'Average' Rock Star

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Comparing John Lennon to the average rock star is like comparing Abraham Lincoln to Millard Fillmore.

The Beatles, of whom Lennon was the most dynamic and perhaps the most creative member, were more than rock stars — they were innovative and original musicians whose arrival changed the face of popular music.

Bob Dylan, who stood at the top of the '60s rock pyramid with the Beatles, has openly acknowledged he didn't think about changing his style until he heard them.

The Beatles didn't think about it — they simply breached the barriers, those previously sacrosanct boundaries of rock and folk and country and jazz and classical.

Growing up in Liverpool, England, they were weaned on rhythm and blues and early American rock — on Bill Haley and the Comets, Elvis Presley, Carl Perkins, Chuck Berry, Roy Orbison, Buddy Holly, Little Richard, Fats Domino. Performing in the seamy cellar night clubs of Hamburg, West Germany, they fused those styles into a distinctive sound that even today can be recognized as "early Beatles."

Some testimony from Dylan, who was a folk singer with a relatively restricted following that frowned on rock'n'roll as childish frivolity when the Beatles exploded onto the International Top 40 in 1964:

"We were driving through Colorado and we had the radio on and eight of the Top 10 songs were Beatles songs. 'I Want to Hold Your Hand,' all those early ones. They were doing things nobody was doing. Their chords were outrageous, just outrageous, and their harmonies made it all valid.

"But I kept it to myself that I really dug them. Everybody else thought they were for the teenyboppers, that they would pass right away. But it was obvious to me that they had staying power. I knew they were pointing the direction where music had to go. In my head, the Beatles were IT."

By 1966, they had gone far beyond what anybody in rock had done before, both instrumentally and lyrically. "Yesterday" and "Eleanor Rigby," for example, both emphasized the cello, of all instruments. In rock music?

Those songs, as were most Beatles tunes, were credited to Lennon and Paul McCartney. But they were usually the work of one or the other, and Beatles aficionados could spot the difference.

McCartney was sweet, melodical, lyrical, whimsical, sometimes bordering on the saccharine. Lennon was hard-driving, tough, often angry and irreverent toward queen and country.

"Yesterday" was typical McCartney: "Yesterday, all my troubles seemed so far away..."

Typical Lennon was "Her Majesty," a ditty less than a minute long that ended the 1969 "Abbey Road" album: "Her Majesty's a pretty nice girl but she hasn't got a lot to say."

Post-1966 Beatles songs were analyzed to death for covert meaning.

"I Am the Walrus" was said to contain the words, "Paul is dead" if played backwards. The rumor that McCartney was indeed dead and had be replaced by a double swept the Western world.

"Sergeant Pepper's Lonelyhearts Club Band" in 1967 was considered their classic album, a paean to rebellious youth and to the drug culture in particular with "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds" said to be an abbreviation for the drug LSD.

The Beatles broke up in 1971 and the subsequent careers of the individual Beatles — Lennon, McCartney, George Harrison and drummer Ringo Starr — demonstrated that the whole was greater than the sum of its parts. McCartney was the most successful commercially, but without Lennon, his music was cutie-pie pop-rock, appreciated by teen-agers but not by most critics.

Lennon was only moderately successful, in part because, at age 30, he was tired of writing and performing for teen-agers. His music meandered into the eclectic and he insisted on teaming with his second wife, Yoko Ono, whose talents, to be kind, are not in music.

His new album, "Double Fantasy," his first in five years, was made with Miss Ono, and is No. 16 in the Cash Box Top 100 Albums with a single — "Starting Over" — sixth among singles.

Lennon, who played rhythm guitar for the Beatles, was never considered a great instrumentalist. But he understood music. In explaining how the Beatles built layers upon layers of music, he cited basic 12-bar blues as the root of rock'n'roll. As he told an interviewer in 1970:

"The blues is a chair, not a design for a chair or a better chair. It is the first chair. It a chair for sitting on, not chairs for looking on or being appreciated.

"You sit on that music. We don't sound like anybody else, that's all ... 'Please Please Me' and 'From Me to You' and all those were our version of the chair. We were building our own chair."

The chair lives on. Praised by highbrows like Leonard Bernstein and Aaron Copland, performed by classical orchestras, jazz and pop artists like Ella Fitzgerald and Frank Sinatra, lumped with Gershwin and Porter, the ultimate tribute to Lennon and McCartney may be more subtle.

Two decades after they came together, 16 years after they became a legend, nine years after they broke up, on the day of Lennon's death, their music lives subliminally, seeping daily into the public consciousness — on elevators, in department stores, in doctor's offices, wherever background music is played.

Lucie Arnaz Now Mother

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If "I Love Lucy" were still on the air, the writers of the popular series would have to find a place in the plot for a grandchild.

Lucie Arnaz and her actor-husband, Laurence Luckinbill, are the parents of an 8-pound, 6½-ounce baby, Simon Thomas Luckinbill. He is named for playwright Neil Simon, a family spokesman said Wednesday.

Charles Pomerantz said

LUCIE ARNAZ

the baby was born Tuesday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

The couple met while they were performing on Broadway in plays written by Simon. Miss Arnaz was appearing in a musical, "They're Playing Our Song," while Luckinbill was in the comedy, "Chapter Two."

Simon Thomas is the grandson of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, who starred in the 1950s TV show before their divorce.

Kate Smith Serenaded

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After decades of cheering Americans with her robust singing voice, it was Kate Smith's turn to be entertained.

Serenading the 77-year-old singer, now retired and in ill health, were 26 first-graders from Raleigh's Effie Green Elementary School, who sang Christmas carols and brought gifts.

Miss Smith, who listened to the concert Tuesday from a white love seat in her living room, responded with a smile.

"She really enjoyed it very much," said Suzanne Andron, Miss Smith's niece and guardian. "She had really been looking forward to them coming."

Miss Smith has been ill since 1976, when she lapsed into and then recovered from a diabetic coma. She is confined to a wheelchair and, Mrs. Andron said, doesn't talk much anymore.

Wearing green slacks, an aqua blouse and bedroom slippers, Miss Smith sat silently as Janell Martin's pupils gathered around and sang 10 songs, ranging from "All I Want For Christmas Is My Two Front Teeth" to "Silent Night."

Bowed Out Due Cold, Fatigue

CHICAGO (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti, suffering from a cold and fatigued by several recent performances, canceled a scheduled appearance at Chicago's Civic Opera House.

The world-renowned opera performer was scheduled to sing the role of Ugustavos in Wednesday's production of Verdi's "A Masked Ball," according to Danny Newman, a spokesman for the Lyric Opera of Chicago.

Pavarotti was replaced by Carlo Bini of the Metropolitan Opera of New York, Newman said, and the performance was given as scheduled before an audience of about 3,000.

Newman said it is not known whether Pavarotti will be able to take part in Saturday's performance of the opera.

Pavarotti performed in and was general chairman of a benefit concert Sunday for victims of the recent Italian earthquake. The benefit raised at least $200,000.

CHOIR SINGS

The Greenville Boys Choir, under the direction of Tom Hawley, Jr., will be singing for the public in an appearance at the Carolina East Mall on Friday, December 12. The program, from 6 to 6:30 p.m., will feature selections of seasonal music. The public is invited to attend.

EXHIBITION

The Greenville Recreation and Park Department will have a gymnastic exhibition in the Elm Street Gymnasium Sunday at 2 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

'Number 96' Falls Short Of All Those Promises

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's advertisements scream promises of new adventures in adult comedy: "The Series They Tried To Ban In Australia! 'Number 96'"

Below one ad's headline was a cartoon tableau showing, among other things, four undressed women and a transvestite. "The most outrageous group of TV characters ever collected under one roof!" teased NBC. "The newlywed baseball player who strikes out! The starlet in search of a casting couch! The open-marriage couple who are ready for anything!" Etc., etc.

The most outrageous group of TV characters ever collected under one roof, revealed in Wednesday-through-Friday showings this week, turns out to be a mild collection of sitcom types, tittering behind a naughty-soap opera facade.

Outrageous? C'mon. "Number 96" is a landlocked "Love Boat." If Australia tried to ban this, Australia should be admired throughout the Western world. In fact, however, this isn't quite the "Number 96" some in Australia were worried about. The down-under version, according to reliable accounts, really was outrageous, featuring frontal nudity and the sort of comic shock that networks (and sponsors) fear would send American audiences reeling in horror.

So, Americans are getting what they usually get when a network turns its hand to "adult" entertainment — a soft tease that wouldn't raise a blush on a Mississippi spinster. Strictly Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders stuff.

That form would be fine if it weren't used as a substitute for substance — and substance in this case would mean a good laugh or two. Instead, there is this:

Max (Greg Mullavey), of the open-marriage couple, bemoans a mean hangover as he fixes himself a drink. "What did I have in my mouth last night?" he asks. "Our hostess's shoulder," responds wife Marion. And that's one of the show's funny lines. The dialogue soon descends to this level:

Max: "I don't think you could handle me (sic) making love to another woman."

Marion: "Why not? Misery loves company."

And you thought you were shed of "The Ropers."

All of this isn't to suggest that "Number 96" is a hopeless cause. The structure of the series — focusing on the schizoid life in an adult apartment building in Southern California — presents interesting storyline possibilities. The creators and the network are clearly trying to out-"SOAP" ABC, and it can be done. There's no reason to suppose that "Number 96," given time to work into a groove and given some snappier scripts, can't be at least as successful as "SOAP."

On the other hand, there's no reason to suppose that "Number 96" will be granted those benefits. This week's three-night run is said to be the show's make-or-break opportunity. Judging from just the first two hours of the show, I'd have to wager break.

Center Team Is Champion

The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center basketball team walked off with the state championship title in the Division I playoffs held for Special Olympic teams last Saturday in Asheville.

The team, coached by Terrie McManus, is comprised of young men between the ages of 17 and 23. Coach McManus explained that the team qualified for the Division I championship competition by winning over the North Pitt team by two points in the November local playoffs.

The four state teams vying for the championship title were — in addition to the Vocational Center team, the Lee County (Sanford) Team and city teams of Greensboro and Winston-Salem.

"We arrived in Asheville on Friday for the opening ceremonies," McManus said. "Then the first thing on Saturday morning screening took place to determine the line-up of the competing teams."

After the Vocational Center team defeated the Sanford team, they were then pitted against Winston-Salem, which had won over Greensboro.

"We were lucky to make it on to a win," McManus said, citing a string of mishaps that almost decimated her team. "We had one player hurt during the Sanford game, another injured during warm up, and still another injured in the first part of the game with Winston-Salem. But we managed to go on to a victory."

In a special event following the championship games, players from the participating teams, including three from the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center team, were picked for a game against the Wilson all-star team.

"We came surprisingly close to a victory there too," McManus said, "losing to them by only two points."

Coach McManus noted that the Pitt County Schools had been most helpful to the vocational team. "They've let us use the gym at Wellcome Middle School, and I feel that made a big difference." Plans are for the Vocational Center to have its own gym within the new construction now underway.

Nothing New By Brezhnev

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it finds "little that is new or different" in Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's proposal to guarantee peace in the Persian Gulf.

Brezhnev, during a visit to India, proposed the plan in place of the "Carter Doctrine" for U.S. defense of the oil-rich region.

The State Department said Wednesday it was studying the statement, which it said is "basically a reiteration of longstanding Soviet proposals."

Ray Jenkins, an assistant press secretary for President Carter, said, "The text of the speech is being reviewed. But at this time we have no reaction." Meanwhile, the office of Richard V. Allen, foreign policy adviser to President-elect Ronald Reagan, said Allen would have no comment.

Brezhnev rejected Western claims of a "Soviet threat" in the gulf, and called on the United States, China, Japan and other countries to join Moscow in renouncing force, military bases and nuclear weapons.

Privately, State Department officials said they saw the Soviet leader's statement as an effort to placate Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who is concerned with Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan and the buildup of U.S. forces in the Indian Ocean area.

Iranians Are 'Hooked' On U.S. Habit

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's one thing for Iran's revolutionary leaders to tell their Moslem followers to abandon Western habits. But it's something else when it comes to actually kicking the habit of smoking American cigarettes.

There is some circumstantial evidence that rank-and-file Iranians are busily puffing away on bootleg American cigarettes, according to an Agriculture Department analysis.

"In fact, it may be that Iranians are now smoking more American cigarettes than when they were importing directly from the United States," it says.

The department's Middle East experts say U.S. cigarette sales to Iran plummeted to zero following the rise to power of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in 1979. But sales to other nations in the Persian Gulf area have soared.

The analysis — which was made available Wednesday by the department's Economics and Statistics Service — said Iranian imports of cigarettes and other tobacco products from U.S. and other sources — notably the Common Market countries — also have dropped sharply.

"It seems, at first glance, that the Iranians have become religious and have sworn off smoking," the report said. "But if the Iranians seem to have quit smoking, the rest of the (Persian) Gulf area has not."

Imports of tobacco products "have increased dramatically" in Iraq, Kuwait, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, it said.

"It is, however, extremely unlikely that all of these cigarettes are being smoked in the countries where they are officially listed as going," the report said. "Rather, a large portion are being transshipped into Iran from Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates."

The report said if efforts by Iranian leaders to curtail sales of American brand cigarettes are successful in the future, however, it could help boost Iran's sagging domestic cigarette industry.

"This means larger imports of leaf tobacco, possibly from Zimbabwe and India," it said. "In any event, since Khomeini's rise to power, people in the Persian Gulf region have been smoking substantially more."

The report said U.S. sales of tobacco products to Iran rose to $89 million in 1978, dropped to $23 million in 1979 and have been zero since trade was cut off more than a year ago. Tobacco sales to the Persian Gulf countries overall, however, rose from $169.5 million in 1978 to $205.6 million in 1979.

WASHINGTON (AP)– The latest Agriculture Department estimate of the Soviet Union's 1980 grain harvest is 185 million metric tons, unchanged from last month.

Poor weather has once again shriveled Soviet grain production. This year's estimated output would be 21.3 percent below Moscow's plan target for 1980 and not much more than 1979's reduced harvest of 179.2 million metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and, for example, is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

"Although Soviet officials have not published a preliminary figure for total 1980 grain output, press reports from the USSR's three major grain-producing regions suggest a crop that will not be significantly higher than last year's drought-ravaged harvest," officials said Wednesday.

Looking at global harvests, the department said total world grain output in 1980-81 is estimated at about 1.53 billion metric tons, up slightly from prospects a month ago.

The slight increase was due to larger grain production estimates for Canada, India and Western Europe, the report said.

PUBLIC NOTICE
- SUGGESTED MODEL NOTIFICATION OF BACTERIOLOGICAL MAXIMUM CONTAMINATE LEVEL VIOLATION
Water Exceeds . Bacteria Limit
Grayden Jackson, of Jackson's Mobile Home Park reports that analyses of samples taken during the November reporting period showed a coliform bacteria concentration above the maximum contamination level listed in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations.
Although there is no routine laboratory procedure for determining the presence of specific disease producing bacteria in drinking water, coliform bacteria which is normally found in the intestinal tract of man or other warm blooded animals can be readily detected. Therefore, the presence of this non-disease producing bacteria is used to indicate that some contamination has occurred.
The System has been disinfected and repeat samples show the water to be free from coliform bacteria.
If you have any questions concerning this notice, please call Mr. Graydon Jackson, Owner, at 756-0130, or write to Route 2, Box 35, Winterville, N.C. 28590.

Only 52 days left to be a very shrewd buyer.

Jeannette Cox Realty has purchased a limited amount of first mortgage money at 12⅜%. These funds are available to qualified buyers on a first-come, first-serve basis for any of our listings. The money is available to finance up to 90% on homes to $100,000 and 80% on homes $100,000 to $200,000.

Why is now a shrewd time to buy?

- Buyers Market -- Many sellers are anxious to sell.
- Low Down Payment -- Many sellers are willing to take a 2nd mortgage.
- Higher Home Prices in Future -- Building material and labor costs are rising rapidly.
- Inflation Economy Dictates: "We may never see these home prices again."

While these 12⅜% funds last, you may be able to qualify for the home of your dreams at a value that will never exist again in The 80's. Compare the current financing options that are being presented to home buyers today looking for a typical $60,000 loan.

Financing	Terms	Monthly Payments (P&I)	Est. Gross Yearly Income Required
VA/FHA	13½% 30 yr.	$ 687	$ 35,000
Conventional	14% 30 yr.	$ 710	$ 37,000
Conventional	15½% 30 yr.	$ 782	$ 40,000

Recruiting Ring Awarded Commander

SFC Jay Chastain, station commander of the Army's Greenville Recruiting Station, was awarded the recruiting ring, the Army's highest recruiting award, in recent ceremonies.

The Army noted that the recruiting ring is based upon the exceptionally high education level of people a recruiter enlists for service.

Chastain, a Lumberton native, has served as a recruiter since 1972 with assignments in Fayetteville and Lumberton prior to joining the Greenville station. He has also been assigned to the St. Louis District Recruiting Command.

JAY CHASTAIN

Other military assignments include three years of service in Vietnam, a tour of duty with the First Ranger Battalion at Ft. Stewart, Ga., and a tour of duty with the 101st Airborne Division, Ft. Campbell, Ky.

Chastain is a graduate of the Army's Noncommissioned Officers Academy, Ranger School, Jumpmaster School, and the Recruiting and Career Counseling School.

Find Clues To Help In Pain Of Heart Disease

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A coronary heart disease patient's employment status, among other things, may help determine if he will respond better to surgical or medical treatment, a research team has found.

The Duke University Medical Center team has isolated several keys that may help treat the hundreds of thousands of Americans who suffer from angina pectoris, the medical term for the choking pain associated with coronary heart disease.

Each year, 70,000 to 80,000 Americans spend an average of $12,000 each on coronary bypass surgery in an effort to find a way to stop the excruciating pain.

But surgery doesn't always help.

Dr. Redford Williams, Duke professor of psychiatry and assistant professor of medicine, studied 803 coronary heart disease patients to find a way to predict which patients will find relief with surgery and which will find help from medical treatment.

The results were reported to the American Heart Association's 53rd Scientific Sessions in November.

Williams found hysteria levels, hypochondriasis levels and employment status could be used to predict which patients would respond to a certain treatment.

The patients were tested psychologically and scores were devised to measure hysteria and hypochondriasis. But such measurements are not new, Williams said.

"We took our cue from orthopedic surgeons, who have long used psychological tests to see which patients are most likely to receive relief from low back pain after spinal infusion operations," Williams said. "The test scores help the physician decide whether to send the patient to surgery or not."

Williams said patients who score high on the hysteria and hypochondriasis tests have a high risk of not obtaining pain relief.

"Such patients could be targeted for special attention — either with a more intensive drug regimen or with such behavioral approaches as biofeedback, relaxation or stress management training," Williams said.

He said doctors agree surgery is a better pain reliever for coronary heart disease patients than medication, but the standard approach has been to first try medication, and if that doesn't help, surgery is advised.

In addition, the researchers concluded more coronary heart disease patients who are working fulltime get pain relief than those who aren't working.

Williams said 42 percent of those patients who were not working got relief from pain, while 70 percent of the fulltime workers got relief.

A sense of purpose and feeling of doing something useful may contribute to the success of working patients, Williams said.

"Perhaps doctors should stop advising their coronary patients to quit work," he said. "Right now, there is often a tendency for physicians to recommend early retirement after a person suffers a heart attack but keeping those patients at work may actually help them cope better with their disease."

School Has 'Santa Shop'

At the beginning of December the library at Pactolus Elementary School became "Santa's Secret Shop." Students purchased gifts for family members at school in secret. The gfts were wrapped and tagged so the students could place their surprise presents under the tree when they got home.

Santa's helpers were mothers who volunteered to assist students with their shopping and wrapping.

The "Santa Secret Shop" is a part of Fun Services, Fund Raising Specialists. The library received one-third of the profit. The money will be used to purchase materials for the library.

Three Held For Murder,Robbery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three teen-agers were being held on bail of $1 million apiece after being charged with murder and robbery in the mugging-robbery of a graduate student from the University of Pennsylvania.

Douglas Huffman, 24, of New Richmond, Ohio, was attacked Nov. 23 near the Penn campus and beaten on the head by a group of six or seven youths, authorities said. He refused treatment and was found dead in his apartment the following day, officials said.

Charged were Orlando Stewart, 18, and two juveniles, aged 14 and 16, whose identities were not revealed.

Judge Arthur S. Kafrissen set bail Wednesday.

Shad Theme Is Selected

GRIFTON — "Headin' for the Shad Roundup" has been selected as the secondary theme for the 11th annual Grifton Shad Festival, scheduled for April 1-5, 1981.

Since the bicentenial year in 1976 when a secondary theme prompted a wide variety of creative floats in the Shad Festival parade, festival planners have chosen a different secondary theme each year and encouraged decorations, etc., to follow the new theme as well as the traditional one of fish and fishing.

The 1981 theme combines the themes of "returning" with the current western fad in the country. The theme was suggested by Mrs. Maxine Carey Harker of Grifton, coordinator of the Shad Festival Art Show.

Organizations and individuals wishing to enter units in the Shad Festival Parade may contact Mrs. Jean McLawhorn at 524-4565 or drop a note to Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C., 28530. In addition to trophies for the best motorized and best non-motorized representations of fish, a trophy will be awarded for the unit judged the best "Headin' for the Shad Roundup" unit.

Parents Encouraged Look At Role In Special Class

By JOY FRANKLIN
Forest City Daily Courier

SPINDALE, N.C. (AP) — "Being a doctor, lawyer, preacher, referee, villian, liar, all-around good guy and a reed shaking in the wind ..."

That is one father's poetic description of what being a parent is like.

He offered it recently at a class on becoming an effective parent being given at Isothermal Community College.

The course, taught by Rutherford-Polk mental health counselor Kelly Burgin and mental health nurse Linda Buchanan, is designed to help parents take a look at their own roles, the roles of, their children and the roles of communication, discipline and values.

Being a parent is perhaps the single most important role a person undertakes, and often is a very frightening one. But there is very little training available to help a person do a better job, Burgin said.

Their objective in offering the course, said Burgin and Mrs. Buchanan, was preventative — to help parents foresee the consequences of their behavior toward their children, before real problems developed.

"Parents greatly influence the emotional development of their children, especially at a young age, and emotionally mature parents can help their children more," Mrs. Buchanan stressed.

There are certain physical needs that must be met if a child is to mature physically — enough of the right kind of food, appropriate exercise and sleep.

To mature emotionally, certain needs must also be met, she said. These include love, acceptance and security.

One of the most important things about being a good parent is learning to use authority in an acceptable way, she said.

She described three different styles of parenting: the traditional or authoritarian parent, the permissive parent and the effective parent.

The traditional parent imposes his will by force, by threatening. This type of parent uses commands and requires compliance.

The permissive parent allows the child to define his own limits. This type of parent may make suggestions but doesn't really demand anything.

The effective parent uses authority in a positive way to help the child develop confidence and self-esteem. This type of parent remains close to and involved with the child and is firm but respectful of the child.

The effective parent is willing to use discipline and establish routines, but also provides support and influence.

According to Mrs. Buchanan, this kind of parenting calls for good eye contact and also good body contact — hugs, pats, etc.

Parents are mirrors for their children, Burgin said, "Mirrors through which children learn to value themselves and develop their own self-concept and self-esteem."

Self-concept is the answer to the question "Who am I?" Self-esteem is derived from how much you value the answer to that question.

Burgin explained that people with high self-esteem are able to incorporate all the components of their total being into an acceptable package.

"We all have problmes, but instead of seeing their problems in big blocks, people with high self-esteem see them as areas for growth, and that's the message you want to get across to your child," he said.

He stressed that high self-esteem does not mean conceit, which he called "a phony facade" that hides insecurity.

Children measure what they do against their parents' expectations of them and develop some aspect of their self-esteem according to how well they meet those expectations.

Consequently, Burgin said, it is a good idea for parents to analyze how they got their expectations for their children.

He listed four items that can affect parental expectations: 1, borrowing standards from their parents; 2, hangover wishes from their childhood; 3, unfulfilled needs in current relations; 4, unresolved conflicts.

Burgin stressed that because parents have unrealistic expectations of their children does not mean that they are malicious people planning to damage their children.

They are "well-intentioned men and women who fall into these things."

On the other hand, he said, it is ridiculous to expect nothing of the child.

But after making sure parents know what their expectations are based on, they should communicate clearly to the child what they want from it.

"Don't give mixed messages. Do what you say you will do, say what you feel and say what you mean. To say things you can't enforce or don't mean is only to undermine your creditbility. Mixed messages create anxiety.," he said.

Burgin said that it is better to communicate reactions to children rather than judgments. In other words, instead of saying to Johnny, "You're a good boy," say, "I really appreciate your helping me."

One of the best ways to avoid judgment is to change "you" to "I" statements, he said.

"Start with 'I' and give your gut reaction," Burgin said.

"If Bibby Bob hit Suzy Q on the head with a tennis racquet, don't say, 'I was very disappointed you did that.' That's not your gut reaction. Your gut raction is, 'I thought you were going to kill her.'"

Burgin had some reassuring words for parents when he said, "Don't think if you make one mistake your child will be ruined forever. That's just not true."

Overall, most important in helping a child develop a healthy emotional outlook is for the parents to give him or her the "safety of being cherished," Burgin said.

"Acceptance is not sufficient. We accept acne, tornadoes in the Midwest, summer drought. I used the term 'cherish,'" he said.

TRAFFIC JAM — An advancing column of Iraqi armored vehicles is held up in a traffic jam caused by a flock of sheep being herded over a narrow river bridge in Mohammar-ah, Iran. Hopeful News in Medicine

Sickle cell disease is now being attacked from a brand-new angle. Dr. George J. Brewer, professor of medicine at the University of Michigan, is using a combination of drugs to prevent sickling of the red blood cells and to help return them to normal.

In a small but satisfactory group of patients, a special tranquilizing drug, thioridazine, has been combined with a zinc substance which already has been tried for sickle cell disease.It is said that the combination is believed to be most significant as a new form of treatment.

The preliminary studies have already been presented at a large and important medical convention. It is believed that sickle cell victims will markedly benefit from these scientific studies. The work is sufficiently exciting to induce research workers all over the country to try to duplicate it.

Cystic fibrosis is a very severe disease that begins early in infancy. It is a genetic disorder that affects the pancreas, the sweat glands, and the respiratory system.

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation has been in the forefront,encouraging vast research projects that continue in hospitals and universities all over the country.

An interesting approach to the problem has been taken by research workers at Emory University's Yerkes Primate Center. There they have been able to reproduce cystic fibrosis in the rhesus monkey. This unusual observation is still being studied with cautious optimism. It is hoped that if the disease can be reproduced regularly in experimental animals, it may hold a clue to its eventual eradication.

Sometimes the urinary bladder must be removed because of cancer. When this is done, many difficult problems of management arise. At the University of Miami, Dr. E.C. Eckstein and Dr. Jacob Kline have devised a new prosthetic bladder in the hope that it would serve as a substitute and thus alleviate many of the problems with which these patients are faced.

The early tests in experimental animals are most promising, but the studies suggest that it will be a few years before the device will be ready for human use.

It is always gratifying to know that dedicated scientists are constantly at work in an effort to eradicate the major ills of mankind.

Catch Thieves Green-Handed

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The state Department of Fish and Game is using a light-sensitive green paste to catch poachers who take lobsters from other people's traps.

"We're catching them green-handed," said Howard Martin, DFG marine patrol captain in Santa Barbara.

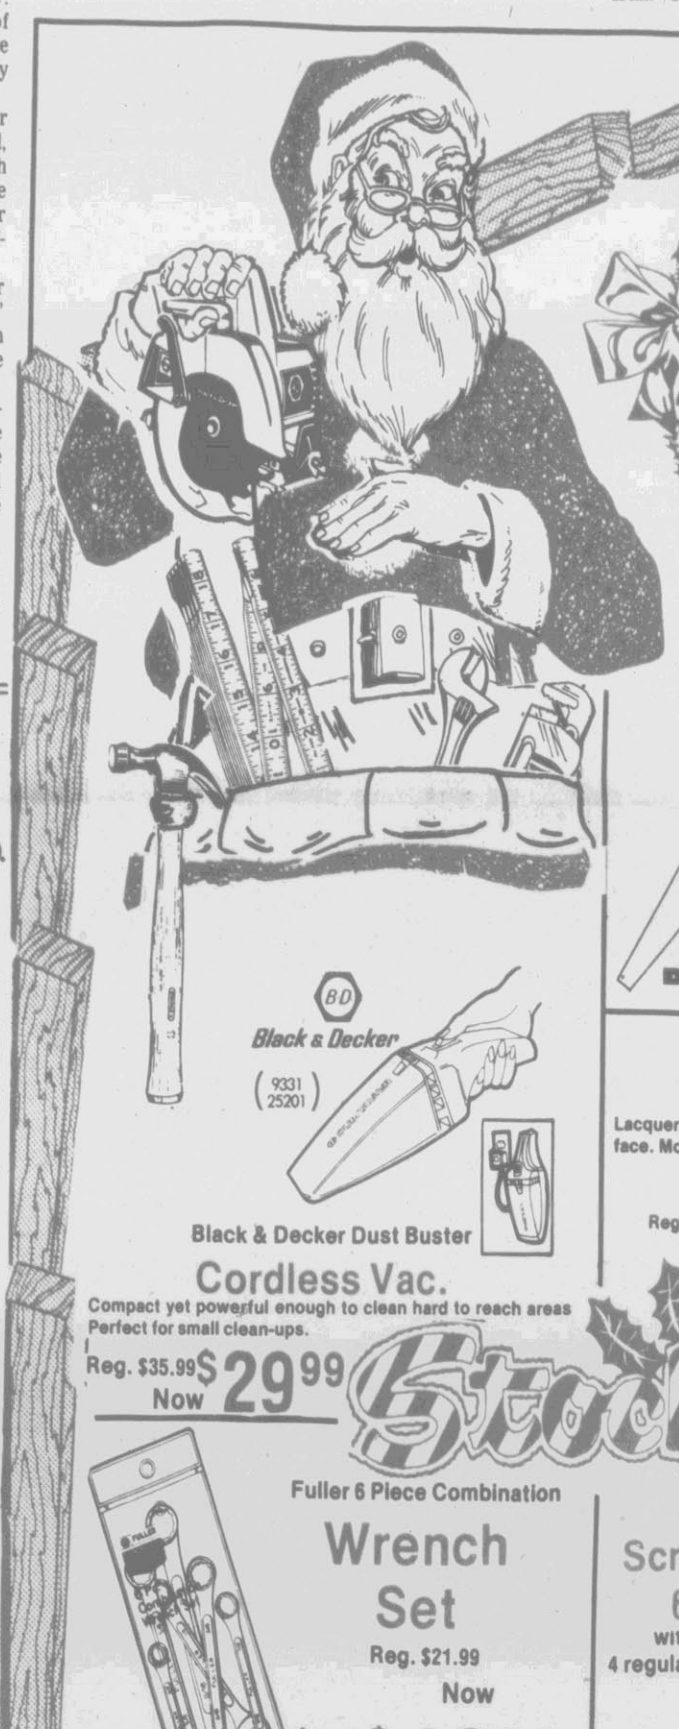

He said three Oxnard men were recently captured on a sailboat with the telltale green on their gloves and on lobsters in their possession. The green dye, invisible to the naked eye, showed up under ultraviolet light.

The "green" lobsters had been placed in traps set by a Santa Barbara lobsterman who had complained of poaching off Anacapa Island, he said.

Suggests Human Immortality In Industrial Robot

By FRED FERGUSON
United Press International

If man ever does achieve immortality, at least one seer says you'll be able to blame it on industry; more specifically, industrial robots.

Farfetched? Science fiction?

Maybe.

But Hans Moravec is serious about his soothsaying.

There is a good deal to support his idea that eventually the development of the computerized industrial robot will enable man to transfer his brain to the machine, thus preserving his intellect for generations past death.

Moravec is young, 32. But he knows robots and computers. He is credited with creating a nine-eyed moving robot called Cart while at the Artificial Intelligence Laboratory of Stanford Univerity. It can travel around on its own without bumping into things.

He built a robot while in high school — "tin cans with motors and lightbulbs." It won a prize.

He built a computer while getting an engineering degree at Montreal's Loyola College and another robot while getting his masters in engineering. He used photocells as touch sensors. Then he picked up a doctorate in computer science.

After Cart, at Stanford, he moved this year to the brand new Robotics Institute of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh where he is on the frontier of robot research. He continues to work on mobile robots. He proposes to design a machine that can do such three-dimensional modeling as simulating the path of a ray of light. He plans to design a mechanical manipulator many times more dextrous than a human hand.

All the time, he's been looking ahead — far ahead. That's not so unusual. Many of today's robotics engineers and scientists have visions of what will happen with the real R2D2s of the next century. But even some of them may be awed by Moravec's visions.

"In 20 to 30 years," he says, "computers will be as smart in virtually everything as human beings. The evolution at that point will speed up. Robots will be the scientists. The big question is what do people do?

"In the long run, people will have to abdicate completely and say the machines are the offspring of our culture.

"An example: Pocket calculators are getting smarter. Eventually, they will be the sources of advice. Eventually, that won't be good enough. The machine will do it (the thinking).

"Imagine a direct link. This sounded crazy 10 years ago. It may be something like a direct brain-to-computer interface. Retrieving from the computer will be just like retrieving from your own mind. That's only the intermediate stage.

"Eventually, this machine will be 20,000 times as smart as you are. Everybody gets old and dies eventually. Imagine if surgical techniques are developed well enough and can replace parts of the nervous system.

"You can imagine a person being replaced in this manner without losing their personality. In the end, what you have is your mind being transferred into this machine.

"I can imagine a lot of objections to this, but once you have done it, you now have all the advantages that the computers have. You can improve yourself. You can transfer the program being run to other machines. You have abilities (of others). The memories of different people are encoded in this machine and you can transfer between people.

"Telepathy and immortality sort of fall naturally into this."

Compare that with where robots are today. Although the first that can see by television and feel by touch sensors are just beginning to take hold, most remain deaf, dumb and blind. Mobile and talking robots remain experimental. Computer systems now used with robots are just moving from the rudimentary to the more advanced.

But two years ago, Moravec presented a little-noted paper on the subject, "The Endless Frontier and The Thinking Machine." He set down his speculations on the possible development of a world of machines. Man to robot brain transferral comes close to the end of that brief dissertation.

Moravec was not the first, of course. Many similar ideas were projected in science fiction writer Isaac Asimov's 1950 novel, "I Robot," which roboticists still love to quote.

In the end, Asimov, who has a chemistry Ph.D and taught biochemistry at Boston University, had the machines take over from man.

But today Asimov thinks the robots of the future, serving industry and mankind, will differ drastically from individuals depicted in that little sci-fi mystery.

"In the future," he said, "there'll be a central computer and it will govern a group, possibly by long distance radio waves.

"I believe they'll be beneficial — be able to do all things too dangerous or too stupid for human beings to do. Humans are infinitely more precious than robots. Leave humans for those creative jobs robots may never be bright enough to do."

ROBOTICS RESEARCHER Hans Moravec theorizes that eventually the development of the computerized industrial robot will enable man to transfer his brain to the machine, thus preserving his intellect for generations past death. (UPI Photo)

Moravec is thinking along this line. He and other scientists talk about the applications of robots in space. Take Peter Hart, director of the Artificial Intelligence Laboratory at SRI International, the famed West Coast basic and applied research center.

Robots in the long range, Hart believes, "will probably not be humanoid in appearance — they won't look like something from Star Wars." (Asimov, incidentally, disagrees. He believes they may be made anthropomorphic to win human acceptance.)

Hart says they'll have a whole system of sensors, more than one computer selection of microprocessors. They'll likely function in space exploration and, after that, they'll be functioning in space, he says. They'll be used in deep sea work and in the household, operating by voice command.

Then he envisions their control by long range telemetry. "You could tell a robot to explore the surface of mars: 'Pick up that rock and sample it.' You would command the robot but you wouldn't have to use detailed specifications for its actions." It would figure such things out on its own.

All this may not be very far in the future. NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory is already working with "artificial skin" for robots that could adapt to their environment, quite likely in space, using the sense of touch to register varying amounts of pressure.

At Battelle's Pacific Northwest Laboratories in Richland, Wash., Bob Mahan, associate manager of computers and information systems, talks of a project there in which robots would work under the earth in mines utilizing gang drills, 10 or 12 at one time.

"There is real interest in reducing the amount of time a human has to be exposed to that environment," he said. He went on to describe developmental work in which robots would be utilized after a nuclear accident such as that at Three Mile Island to enter the facility and "do the actual inspection."

Battelle's little Micromouse of several years ago utilized the microprocessors that would make robots capable of complex intelligent operations in confined spaces for such efforts.

Such applications would also apply to space environments.

"If NASA gets funded for a Mars rover, sometime in the next decade," Moravec said, "then there is a good chance that some of the techniques developed for mobile robots will wind up on a Mars explorer."

He believes "a $10 million general purpose computer powerful enough to be programmed for human equivalence will exist by the 21st century." He talks of their preferred use over frail humans in the extension of civilization into the solar system, the galaxy and beyond.

Moravec leads up to his exotic speculations by first dealing at length with the evolution of man and other creatures — how it has speeded up. He relates it to the progressive evolution of machines to show that although now it may take several thousand times the intelligence of a conventional computer to equal that of a man, very rapidly that situation will be reversed.

The fully automated robotic factory is already in prospect in Japan as soon as 1985. But unlike the structured factory, homes are unstructured. The housemaid robot, Moravec says, will be harder to develop.

But he says household robots will be "in great demand when computers become smart enough. They will be cheap, partly because other robots will assemble them."

Joseph Engelberger, head of robot maker Unimation and considered a pioneer of today's industrial robots, is right up with him on that. He told an industial robotics symposium in October about the galley in his new conference room.

"Within 18 months, there will be a robot in the closet," he said. "It will come from the closet on command and its name will be 'Isaac' (for Isaac Asimov). And Isaac will prepare the snacks, will clean up and do the dishes, sort of a robot maid."

Engelberger told of a research program to give paraplegics the use of robots operated by voice command. His soon-to-be-published book's final chapter on the future of robots sticks closer to what is in prospect now, while Moravec, in that 1978 white paper, went beyond.

"Outer space is prime grazing land for machinery. Robot mines and robot factories making more robots on the moon or in the asteroids ought to be a fast-growing and lucrative investment, once the machines are good enough."

This is pretty much where other robotics engineers and scientists stop in their own visionary efforts.

But some talk now of the day when robot productivity from robot-automated factories no longer produces more work for man — when robots become self-maintaining, self-reproducing — something a little further along than current talk of jobless productivity. How will the rewards of such robotic productivity be distributed?

James S. Ablus, an electronics engineer with the Institute for Computer Science and Technology at the National Bureau of Standards, proffers one idea in his book, "People's Capitalism: The Economics of the Robot Revolution." He suggests income from sale of goods produced in such factories might be equally distributed among the population providing a basic income for all.

The fear that robots might get out of control persists, even among engineers. Already, the Japanese plan to use robots in the construction of other robots. Engelberger's Unimation plants in Danbury, Conn., use parts constructed by subcontractors who use robots. These are man-controlled robots.

The Air Force and aeronautics industry project called ICAM, which has an ultimate automated factory goal, envisions control of that factory essentially by computers directed in part by design computers although all still at the command of humans.

Asimov 30 years ago envisioned the point at which the robots would take over, might dominate man instead of the other way around. His answer was simple. Scientists now regularly refer to "Asimov's three laws of robotics," which he fictionally reported programmed into robots' intellect:

—"A robot may not injure a human being or, through inaction, allow a human being to come to harm.

—"A robot must obey the orders given it by human beings except where such orders would conflict with the first law.

—"A robot must protect its own existence as long as such protection does not conflict with the first or second law."

Wall Street Journal science writer Jerry E. Bishop recently wrote of a discussion among General Electric Co. engineers some years ago in which it was suggested that robotic reproduction could best be controlled, thus controlling robots, by requiring a variety of types, or as he put it, sexes, of robots to reproduce one robot. This would require a complex combination for expansion in robot numbers.

Moravec, however, notes genetic engineering or cloning might be man's alternative answer to achieving immortality. But he says that is "just building robots out of protein." He says it would have the disadvantages of their limited lifespan and inability to live in non-earth environments.

With a bit of humor, he adds, "Anyway, second-rate superhuman beings are just as threatening as first-rate ones..."

That's the point at which he details how the human brain might be transplanted into a robot. Yes, he suggests, it would be done by a robot brain surgeon.

By the way, we asked, what does he do when he's not involved in exotic research?

"I read science fiction a lot."

Separation Surgery For Twins Planned

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — Doctors for Siamese twin girls born last February to a Forest City couple say the babies have more than doubled their birth weight and will be ready for separation surgery next month.

The twins, Shannon Elaine Beaver and Fonda Michelle Beaver, were 10 months old Tuesday. They are joined just below the rib cage at the top of the abdomen.

The babies were born Feb. 9 at a Rutherford County hospital to Kim and Arlin Beaver. They were transferred immediately after birth to Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville where they were monitored for two weeks before being sent home.

Mrs. Beaver was 14 at the time and her husband was 20. But Dr. Bob England, the Beavers' family physician, said Tuesday that the couple has "matured" since the twins' birth.

"It has been simply beautiful to watch those two cope with this," England said. "It has been very pleasing to watch the remarkable maturity occur as they take care of their babies."

Mrs. Beaver, reached by telephone Tuesday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fisher, said the infants weigh 30 pounds and are "eating real well." The two weighed a total of 12 pounds at birth.

Mrs. Beaver said the babies aren't able to walk or crawl but are "happy babies."

England said the twins' mobility is hampered by their combined weight and the fact they have only one leg apiece. They share a pelvis, bladder, colon and rectum.

"They can move their upper extremities and their heads, but they simply can't do much getting around," he said. "But otherwise, they are two healthy, beautiful little babies. It's something to behold."

England said the twins are "physically, emotionally, psychologically healthy."

A team of doctors, including vascular, orthopedic, urological and neurological specialists, will take part in the surgery at Memorial Mission Hospital, England said. He said the twins will enter the hospital soon after the first of next year.

Building Historic Ship Requires A Lot Of Research

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.(AP) — When America's 400th Anniversary Committee decided to look into the possibilty of encouraging construction of a ship as a part of the commemoration of the expeditions sponsored by Sir Walter Raleigh, it turned to the world's foremost architect of historic ships.

The reputation of William Avery Baker had spread since he designed the "Mayflower II," which was built in England and made a goodwill gift by the British to Plimouth Plantation in Massachusetts in 1957.

Subsequently, he designed and oversaw construction of the "Adventure" for South Carolina's tricentennial, the "Dove" of 1634 for the state of Maryland, and several other vessels, including drawings for William Penn's "Welcome" of 1682, which has not yet been built.

For 30 years Baker was supervising engineer of the shipbuilding division of Bethlehem Steel Co., and upon his retirement he assumed the directorship of the Francis Russell Hart Nautical Museum at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Baker came into the North Carolina picture when the anniversary committee took up Gov. Jim Hunt's suggestion that the committee consider replicating one of the ships sent to Roanoke Island by Sir Walter Raleigh.

Initial research indicated that the reconstruction of a historic ship was not as simple as the idea sounded. In fact, neighboring Jamestown was downright embarrassed over the three reconstructions silted in there, and specialists in naval history urged extreme caution.

Rather than depend upon amateurs, the committee sought advice from Baker, whose response was not altogether reassuring.

Wrote the architect: "It is difficult to decide whether to discourge you quickly or encourage you slowly."

He proceeded to discuss the many problems involved in any effort to build a vessel reputing to be a replica. Without contemporary drawings and definite illustrations, any "reconstruction" would be at best a "representation" rather than a replica.

Thus the preparation of design plans of a "historic" ship would involve detailed research on navigation and vessels of the period and a braod acquaintance with the skills and materials of earlier centuries.

Baker also pointed out that the initial cost of a ship eventually would be dwarfed by its staffing and maintenance costs.

Having received from Baker neither "discouragement nor delirium," the committee arranged for him to spend two days on the coast of North Carolina with committee members H.G. Jones, Charles B. Wade Jr. and David Stick.

They visited shipbuilders and came to the conclusion that a small vessel representative of the 16th Century could be built in the state.

Based upon that encouragement, the American Quadricentennial Corp. — a nonprofit organization assisting the anniversary committee — applied for an received a $2,500 grant fromt he National Trust for Historic Preservation to match a similar amount from the state, and with these funds the corporation conducted a feasibility study which included preliminary drawings by Baker.

These preliminary plans represent the "Elizabeth" of the 1585 expedition which brought the first colony to Roanoke Island. The plans depict a 50-ton vessel measuring something over 55 feet in length.

The "Elizabeth" appears to be the most appropriate choice for several reasons: it is small and could be built in North Carolina; it honors the queen who ruled over the Roanoke colonies as well as the one on the throne today, and we have rare pictures of its captain, Thomas Cavendish.

Charles Wade, chairman of the ship feasbility subcommittee, reported in August that the shipbuilding proposal appeared both feasible and desirable, and he recommended that the corporation proceed with fundraising and the contracting with Baker for working drawings.

Further action awaits the new gubernatorial appointments to America's 400th Anniversary Committee.

Selling Of The Inaugural Is Unabashed Promotion

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For $10, you can go to a ballroom in Port Arthur, Texas, and dance to the music of Harry James, brought by satellite from a ball in Washington celebrating Ronald Reagan's inauguration.

For $50, you can sit in the worst seat at the Capital Centre on Washington's outskirts and see Frank Sinatra's inaugural gala, featuring Johnny Carson as emcee.

For $100, you can be among 40,000 sardined into eight inaugural balls around town — white-tie affairs — too crowded to dance but affording, perhaps, a glimpse of the new president and his wife.

The unabashed selling of the inauguration is under way.

"We are very revenue conscious," Charles Z. Wick, co-chairman of the presidential inaugural committee, told the committee's first news conference Tuesday.

"We are interested in selling the rights to anything that will permit wider distribution of the inaugural events."

The committee expects to spend more than $6 million for three days of celebration. It plans to raise the money by selling gold inaugural medallions; red, white and blue inaugural license plates; and, of course, tickets to the the inaugural festivities.

"We are planning a shared inaugural,';' said the committee's other co-chairman, Robert K. Gray. "Television is the way to reach the most people, and most events are being planned with television in mind."

The balls will be beamed by satellite to any community that wants them. To date, Gray said, groups in Port Arthur and 31 other communities have signed up and the committee expects to have 100. The dances from Washington will be shown on large screens in the various local ballrooms; the admission fee will be $10.

Wick said the committee is still trying to interest a television network in carrying, for money, the Capital Centre gala the evening before the Jan. 20 inauguration. Its cast includes Grace Bumbry, Debbie Boone, Charlton Heston, Rich Little, Dean Martin, Ethel Merman, Donny Osmond and the Osmond brothers, Charlie Pride, Jimmy Stewart, Mel Tillis and Ben Vereen. Seats come at three prices: $50, $100 and $150.

Reagan, it was announced, will be dressed formally — morning coat, striped trousers, light gray tie, but no hat — when he takes the oath at the Capitol at noon. The balls in the evening will be white tie; black tie is optional.

"We want to avoid the feeling of no frills," Wick said.

The celebration in the capital will begin on Saturday night, four days before the Tuesday inauguration, with a reception by various state societies. On Sunday there is a church service at the National Presbyterian center, a governors' reception and three concerts at the Kennedy Center with candlelight suppers preceding and following each.

On Monday, there will be a distinguished ladies' reception, a vice presidential reception and a gala.

On inauguration day, Reagan and his wife will attend a private church service at St. John's Episcopal Church across Lafayette Park from the White House. After the swearing-in, he will have lunch with members of Congress in the Capitol's Statuary Hall, and then watch a parade scheduled to last no more than an hour.

The list of things that can be had free isn't ready yet. So far it includes a concert by massed bands and fireworks.

The inaugural committee said there are only 40,000 invitations available to the balls. Having $100 to spare and tails or a long gown isn't enough. An invitation is a must.

"The supply is not up to the demand," said Gray.

Unusual Irritations In U.S. & Canadian Relations

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — The sweet old love affair between the United States and Canada is getting a little sour these days. The squabble is over fish, dirty air, trade and taxes, and the Canadians are more than miffed.

Foreign Secretary Mark MacGuigan came straight to the point recently.

"I want to give notice to the new administration in Washington that it must consider its relations with us as a priority," he said.

There have been stormier periods during the relationship that began 113 years ago when Britain gave Canada its independence. But the current irritations have reached a level unusual in recent years.

Many of the issues might be considered minor, but that does not apply to the No. 1 item on the Canadian list — the failure of the U.S. Senate to ratify the U.S.-Canadian maritime boundaries and fisheries treaties.

"This issue has become the centerpiece of the bilateral relationship," Kenneth Curtis, the U.S. ambassador to Ottawa, said in an interview. "The Canadian government has said this is the most important bilateral issue Canada has with any country in the world."

After both nations declared 200-mile economic zones off their shores in 1977, it became necessary to redefine water boundaries and fishing rights. The resulting treaties assign to American and Canadian fishermen percentage shares of fish stocks in various sectors off the two countries' coasts.

The documents were signed by the Carter administration in March, 1979, but have since languished in the Senate because of the opposition of Democratic Sens. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, whose fishermen constituents complain that the treaties favor the Canadians.

Other key irritants in U.S.-Canadian relations:

ACID RAIN

Rain falling on eastern Canada contains acidic air pollution that often originates in the smokestacks of coal-burning U.S. power plants. The two governments have agreed to work toward a treaty to combat the problem, but the Canadians are worried by U.S. plans to increase the use of coal and by President-elect Ronald Reagan's environmental positions. Reagan says he will name people "who know and care about the coal industry" to lead the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

TRADE

The Canadians are disturbed by "Buy American" laws that limit the access of their products to parts of the American market. They also are dissatisfied with a 1965 agreement providing for duty-free two-way trade in the automotive industry because it has led to a consistent Canadian deficit in that trade.

WATER PROJECTS

Canada says the proposed $860-million Garrison Diversion irrigation project in North Dakota would harm commercial fisheries in Manitoba. The Canadians also object to other water projects in Maine and Washington State.

TAXES

In an effort to help Canadian broadcasting, the Ottawa government in 1976 prohibited income-tax deductions for Canadian firms that advertise on U.S. stations. American border stations lost Canadian revenue as a result. That same year, the United States restricted tax write-offs for conventions held abroad, a move that cost Canada millions in potential spending by American conventioneers. A new tax treaty would exempt Canada from the convention restrictions, but the Canadians fear that the U.S. broadcast industry may lobby to hold up the treaty until the advertising-tax rule is reversed.

The Carter administration has complained about the "increasingly restrictive direction" of the Ottawa government's controls on foreign investment in Canada. Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau recently unveiled a national energy plan that envisions a Canadian buy-out of some U.S. holdings in the oil industry here.

Many Canadian policymakers fear the protectionist undertone of Reagan's presidential campaign — regarding foreign-car imports, for example — "could make the trade questions a lot more tough," as MacGuigan said.

"These trading problems always increase when you're in a period of recession ... because protectionist attitudes crop up," Sen. H.A. (Bud) Olson, Trudeau's economic development ministeh, told a reporter.

On the world stage, Canada in recent decades has generally followed closely in the U.S. shadow, although Trudeau blazed his own trail in his dealings with China, Cuba and much of the Third World.

Some here believe a tough Reagan line internationally could further trouble the U.S.-Canadian link. Despite Reagan's determination to scrap the SALT II treaty, MacGuigan says Canada will continue to urge U.S. adoption of the arms limitation pact.

The Canadians also expect increased pressure from a Reagan administration to spend more on defense, something Trudeau has been reluctant to do.

"Reagan may push us into a greater role in NATO, or perhaps in doing so push us out of it," said Pauline Jewett, foreign affairs critic of the New Democrat Party. The leftist New Democrats, Canada's third-biggest party, favor Canadian withdrawal from the U.S.-led alliance.

The U.S.-Canadian North American air defense agreement (NORAD) comes up for review early next year, and at least one influential member of the Canadian foreign-policy establishment, former U.N. Ambassador George Ignatieff, has suggested that Canada reconsider this two-nation pact. He says NORAD's time is past.

This questioning and complaining north of the border does not foretell a fundamental change in U.S.-Canadian relations, however. If nothing else, the complex web of economic and personal relationships between the two nations would prevent that. In fact, the monumental future task of tapping the continent's wealth may require closer cooperation than ever.

Place 20th In Forecasts

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Those who complain about weather forecasters who predict sunshine just before a downpour may have gotten some fuel recently for their griping.

The National Weather Service put its weather predictions to the test against a group of Colorado State University students and faculty members — and failed.

The federal government's official meteorologists placed 29th in a field of 45 entrants in a recent weather-predicting contest for the area around Fort Collins, a college town nestled against the Front Range of the Rockies in northern Colorado.

Three times a week, the entrants predicted the precipitation and temperature range for 24-hour and 48-hour periods. A computer recorded their predictions and compared them with the actual weather of the period.

The contestant with the lowest score won — Colorado State graduate student Bob Merrill, with a score of 26.

The National Weather Service scored 168.

More Concur Fossil Fuels Mean Hot Times Ahead

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The world must prepare for a warmer future or face potentially disastrous problems, scientists warn, because a byproduct of fossil fuels is creating what amounts to a greenhouse around the Earth.

Researchers said Tuesday that carbon dioxide released by the burning of oil, gas and coal could raise temperatures worldwide and ultimately produce major climate changes and rising seas that might send waves rolling over coastal cities.

Roger Revelle, former president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said major research efforts and worldwide planning should minimize many problems and perhaps even reap some benefits from the expected changes.

But right now, he said, "We don't know what the proper steps are. There are so many uncertainties ... and there are some risks that are so great and so unresponsive to human action that all we can do is try to find out just what they are."

But Revelle, of the University of California-San Diego, told a news conference during an American Geophysical Union meeting here Tuesday, "It's not clear whether the net effects will be bad or good. ... We can try to change (and) see if we can get more benefits than harm out of it."

The problem is called the "greenhouse effect."

If enough carbon dioxide — an inevitable byproduct of burning fossil fuels — accumulates in the atmosphere, it would act like the glass walls of a greenhouse, permitting sunlight to pass through and warm the Earth but slowing the escape of heat back into space.

If carbon dioxide levels double as expected by the middle of the next century, average global temperatures could increase about five degrees Fahrenheit.

Perhaps the most ominous possibility of warmer weather is the risk of melting the huge ice sheet of West Antarctica. That would add so much water to the world's oceans that sea levels could rise up to 20 feet and inundate many coastal cities.

The theory has been kicking around scientific circles for decades, but it has won wide acceptance only in the past few years. Scientists believe atmospheric carbon dioxide has increased more than 10 percent since 1900.

William Kellogg of the National Center for Atmospheric Research said, "Theoretically, the increase in temperature that we would have had so far is only about half a degree and that is of the same magnitude as the natural fluctuations, so you can't prove that the atmosphere has been warmed."

Revelle said, "I don't think we are going to be able to tell (the real effects of carbon dioxide on climate) before we actually have a small climate change."

By then, the results would be irreversible, said Kellogg.

Revelle said major impacts may be inevitable unless the world begins "backing away" from fossil fuels within about 20 years.

But with the problems would come benefits. For instance, Revelle said, "Carbon dioxide is a fertilizer so you might get a very considerable increase in world food production. But that's not going to get done without a lot of research" to design new crops that would take maximum advantage of the airborne fertilizer.

Video-Disc Players Are Hot; Buy Now, Or Wait?

By SYDNEY SHAW
United Press International

You've seen it — the ad for a gizmo resembling a phonograph, except it hooks up to your TV set and plays movies from a record that looks like something out of Star Wars.

Or you may have seen it in a store, if you managed to fight your way through the tangle of fascinated shoppers who got there first. The sign said it was a "Magnavision" or "LaserDisc," but the salesperson probably called it a videodisc player, or an optical laser videodisc system.

You've read about this mysterious gadget. During the past 10 years, millions of words have chronicled its development, including movie company deals with electronic firms, electronic companies' deals with each other and much talk of the future. And if you're beginning to suspect there's more to this "videodisc" than just an expensive Christmas gift, you're right.

It's probably the biggest thing since the invention of television.

Videodisc makers promise to serve up current movies, musical performances, plays and original programs on a platter about the size and price of a long-playing phonograph record. Before long, there will be videodisc "trips," which, when played on a wide-screen television, simulate travel so convincingly that they could one day replace the automobile. And videodisc players will eventually replace audio turntables, giving your stereo system the capability for pure digital sound.

It's the second chapter in the declaration of independence from network television's dull fare of sit-coms, reruns and commercials. It's also a solid alternative to the first alternative — the $1200-plus videocassette player and $50-plus pre-recorded VCR movie.

And the videodisc picture is much better than the VCR.

Just one problem. Only a small part of the videodisc cornucopia is currently available to the consumer.

Today the most readily available videodiscs, or "software" — at $25 or more apiece — are "Animal House," "The Blues Brothers," "Jaws," "Earthquake" and "Saturday Night Fever."

Today's $700-$800 videodisc players, made by either Magnavox or Pioneer, are only the first wave of at least three completely different and incompatible formats that will be on the market within the next year.

The second version comes on March 22, 1981, when RCA introduces its under-$500 player in 4,000 U.S. cities. The third machine, made by JVC, should be available in this country by the end of 1981, at a price somewhere between the first two.

Other than fast-forward and reverse settings, about the only thing the systems have in common is that none of them record — they only play back pre-recorded material.

Whether any or all of the three will survive is anyone's guess.

To avoid investing in a potential electronic fossil and a pile of incompatible videodiscs, you might want to wait until a clear victor emerges, or at least until more than one system is on the market before buying.

Although they aren't all available, all three formats already exist, and the pros and cons of each can be compared in advance.

For those who don't want to wait, the Magnavision and Pioneer videodisc players are on sale in most large cities. The system uses a laser beam instead of a needle to "read" the grooveless, shimmering silver discs, which spin much faster than any ordinary record.

Discs for the optical laser machines, made by MCA, are extremely durable. A child could play Frisbee with them, or scrape peanut butter off the surface with a serrated knife, with no ill effects. Unfortunately, each side yields only a half-hour's play, so an entire movie requires a bulky packet of three videodiscs.

Like motion picture film, the laser videodiscs are composed of single frames — 54,000 on each side — which can be viewed one at a time, with instant access to any single frame. So besides movies, the discs can store the pages of a book or an entire museum full of art treasures.

The suggested retail for Magnavision is $775. LaserDisc costs $749, with full remote features for another $50.

By plugging either laser player into your hi-fi, you can get stereo sound.

Notably, the first competing format, RCA's "CED" system, will not have stereo sound. RCA's "SelectaVision," which will also be sold under the Zenith, Sanyo, Sears, J.C. Penney and Radio Shack labels, will make its debut in mono. But the price is right — $500 or less. As for the stereo problem, RCA promises to bring out a stereo version in 1982, still priced below the optical laser system.

CED players work somewhat like a conventional phonograph. The "SelectaVision" videodiscs have grooves which are tracked by a diamond stylus that should be replaced yearly at a cost of about $50. The disc slides out of a protective case only after it has been put into the player, so there's no danger of dragging a needle across the surface and ruining it. CED discs are inherently less durable, but should last through at least 200 plays.

Each side of a CED disc plays for an hour, which means RCA can put an entire movie on one disc. And the price is closer to the videodisc ideal — $15 to $25.

Herb Schlosser, RCA's vice president in charge of Selectavision programming, insists that the CED system will have the software edge. In the past two years, Schlosser has been making movie deals with United Artists, Paramount, Disney, MGM and Fox, music deals with Don Kirschner and a production deal with CBS to manufacture SelectaVision discs.

RCA already has the hardware edge. It sells at least 50 percent of the color televisions in the United States, and at every RCA outlet on March 22 of next year, the CED videodisc player will be on display.

RCA's first titles are expected to include some NBC programming, such as "Holocaust" and "Star Trek," and movies including "The Godfather," "The Black Stallion," and "Saturday Night Fever." It has "Hair" and "West Side Story" under license.

The third format — video high density, or "VHD" — is currently sold in Japan, and is a sort of cross between the CED and laser systems. It uses a diamond stylus, but instead of grooves, it tracks a series of pits on the record surface. Japan Victor Co. will make the VHD player for JVC, GE, Panasonic and Quasar, who begin distributing it in this country at the end of the year.

VHD discs are stereo and play one hour per side, spinning at 900 rpms. It can go forward or backward in slow or fast motion and all the optional features, including full remote, work flawlessly. But adding on all the features found on the laser optical system will probably drive the price of the VHD higher, since they won't be built in, but contained in a separate plug-in unit.

Algerian Wine Production Dips

By MAGDA EL SANGA
Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Heavy, solid, unpredictable and often unavailable, Algerian wine — once a major export and source of hard currency — has now fallen prey to both Islamic tradition and socialist revolution.

France, the colonial ruler here for close to 130 years, used Algeria as a vineyard. When the French left in 1962 they left behind 988,000 acres of grapevines, more than 5 percent of Algeria's total cultivatable land.

Algerians, never great wine consumers, had to put the vineyards to some use, and sought contracts with France and other European nations to export the mammoth wine crop.

"The French used to mix the Algerian wine, which is of higher alcoholic content, with their own to give it more potency," said one Algerian official.

But after independence, France succumbed to the pressure and resentment of its own grape growers and sharply reduced all imports of wine from Algeria.

"France used to import from us some 18.5 million U.S. gallons of wine each year. It brought it down to 5.2 million U.S. gallons in the early '70s," the official said. The drop caused the loss of 18,000 jobs.

Until the early 1970s, wine represented 50 percent of Algeria's exports, not including oil and gas.

"It used to bring in an income of about 24 billion dinars (some $6 billion)," said a French economic advisor here. "Now it's down to barely half a billion dinars (about $140 million).

But the French boycott did not do all the damage on its own.

Religion became involved in 1971 when the late president Houari Boumedienne decided that a Moslem nation that does not drink wine should not be producing it anyway.

Both to offset the boycott and follow his Islamic inclinations, he ordered the uprooting of a third of all Algeria's vineyards, at a cost of $10 million. The remaining two-thirds were divided between the production of wine and the production of grape juice.

Algeria has found customers for its remaining wine output: France, Germany, Italy and the countries of the Benelux. Algerian wine also goes to some African nations.

But Algeria's major customer is the Soviet Union, which uses about 13 million U.S. gallons of wine each year, and 5.3 million U.S. gallons of brandy.

In 1970, the Soviets agreed to help build five wine-manufacturing and bottling plants in Algeria.

Wine has been replaced by oil and gas as the nation's main source of income, and hydrocarbons now represent 96 percent of Algeria's exports.

The country's food needs will also affect the wine produce. The vineyards are now more than 40 years old, and weakening. When they die, a food crop for the population of 20 million will take priority over wine.

"I really can't say who will miss the Algerian wine," said the French economic advisor, "probably only the French who once owned the vineyards, from a sentimental point of view."

British Press Chilled Warm Ties To Royal Palace

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — It was the "Royal Love Train" story that finally cracked the stoic palace facade. Since then, the relationship between Buckingham Palace and Fleet Street has itself become the story.

"Charles and Lady Diana Special," headlined the Sunday Mirror. "Secret Meetings in the Sidings."

And below that: "The Sunday Mirror today can reveal two late night meetings between Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer — the girl many believe will be the next queen.

"The couple met secretly aboard the royal train as it stood in secluded sidings in Wiltshire," the newspaper reported last month. It gave no sources for its story.

"A total fabrication," shot back Buckingham Palace in a statement the palace implied came directly from Queen Elizabeth II. The palace demanded a retraction and an apology.

The Sunday Mirror carried the denial, which raised more eyebrows than did the original story, one week after it printed the offending article. The newspaper also published an exchange of letters between the palace's press spokesman, Michael Shea, and the newspaper's editor, Robert Edwards.

Shea's letter said his denial was made "on the express instructions of those most directly involved at Buckingham Palace." He requested that the letter be printed.

All along Fleet Street, London's newspaper row, ears pricked up.

"Never before have denials been so forcefully put, in language much stronger than any previously used," Anne de Courcy of the New Standard said.

Oliver Prichett wrote in the Sunday Telegraph that Shea's "stinging and indignant denial at once led to speculation that Prince Charles really did intend to marry Lady Diana."

The object of all the fuss was a shy, blue-blooded 19-year-old kindergarten teacher whose older sister, Lady Sarah Spencer, was a previous front-runner in the press until she married someone else.

The furor over the Mirror article was great fun for the catty columnists of rival tabloids. Jean Rook of the Daily Express said the Mirror "should print cast-iron proof of its allegations. Or withdraw them, and crawl."

The Mirror stood by its story and the story was hotter than ever.

The domestic Press Association got the next scoop, with an interview at the kindergarten that had Lady Diana saying she would like to marry soon and asserted she "blushed and giggled" when asked if the prince had already proposed to her.

She immediately denied having said "anything about marriage," and several papers joined in the fun by quoting statements she made to their reporters under such headlines as "Lady Di Appeals to the Star for Help" and "Lady Diana's Plea" in The Express.

Finally, it was all too much for her mother, Frances Shand-Kydd, who did what any outraged mother in Britain might do: she wrote to The Times.

"May I ask the editors of Fleet Street whether, in the execution of their jobs, they consider it necessary or fair to harass my daughter daily from dawn until well after dusk?" Mrs. Shand-Kydd asked.

"Is it fair to ask any human being, regardless of circumstances, to be treated this way?"

Traveling in India, Prince Charles also had a word for the press: "Honesty and integrity are vital factors in reporting and often get submerged in the general rush for sensationalism."

Finally even Parliament was aroused. Last week, the House of Commons tabled a resolution that "deplored" press treatment of Lady Diana but said the House "is angered by the obsession of the media with real or imagined royal trysts and would welcome relief from such boring trivia."

Newspapers themselves then stopped to take a look at what they had been doing.

It was suggested that some interviews were the result of sly chats by reporters who did not identify themselves. It was noted that one photographer had gone so far as to crawl through the bathroom window of Lady Diana's kindergarten to snap a picture.

Keith Deves of the Sun said Lady Diana "is a very nice young girl who is too polite to tell you simply to go away."

The Guardian speculated that it was all a "cruel but necessary ordeal" cunningly contrived by Buckingham Palace to "test her suitability for a royal role" in the glare of publicity.

Finally, the question was raised whether in 20th century Britain any crown prince can find the privacy needed to court and choose his queen — without resorting to trysts on the royal train.

James Whitaker of the Daily Star, who has been hot on the trail of the royal romance, admitted to The Times: "I think the whole thing could collapse now. We have all tried to hurry the relationship along too soon. People like me don't give them a chance."

Simulated Earthquake To Test Construction

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

TSUKUBA, Japan (AP) — U.S. and Japanese engineers plan to destroy a seven-story building here with a simulated, slow-motion earthquake. The idea is to test "quake proof" construction techniques used on buildings in tremor-prone areas like California and Japan.

A reinforced concrete building of the type used in the test, said James K. Wight of the University of Michigan, "should be able to survive a small earthquake virtually undamaged and stand up enough under a big tremor to allow the people inside to get out."

Although the Japanese have not forgotten the Great Kanto earthquake of 1923, in which an estimated 140,000 people died in the Tokyo area, the engineers are confident that carefully constructed reinforced concrete medium-rise buildings can withstand major tremors.

"We think that with modern building techniques maybe less than 3,000 people would be killed in a repetition of the 1923 earthquake," which was believed to have measured the equivalent of 7.9 on the Richter scale, said Makoto Watabe, director of structural engineering at the Ministry of Construction's building research institute 50 miles northeast of Tokyo. Other estimates of a possible death toll run as high as 97,000.

Convinced of the safety of modern construction techniques, the government 10 years ago lifted a 100-foot height limit on buildings, and now Tokyo with a population of 11 million, is dotted with skyscrapers as tall as 60 stories. Although there has been no definitive test of the high-rises, Watabe claims that they passed the test in a 1978 earthquake measuring 7.5 on the Richter scale which claimed 27 lives in the northern Japanese city of Sendai. Only a handful of the deaths were caused by collapsing structures, he said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Japan is shaken each year by more than 10,000 tremors, of which 1,000 can be felt by humans. Japanese seismologists claim they can give up to two days' warning of an earthquake measuring more than 7.0 on the Richter scale, and the central and local governments have laid elaborate plans to alert, evacuate and care for people in the event of a big one.

A major earthquake is expected within the next 30 years in the Tokai coastal region, said Tatsuo Usami of Tokyo University's earthquake research institute. He predicts the tremor will be centered offshore about 100 miles southwest of Tokyo.

As part of the earthquake preparedness program, more than 4.3 million people in the Tokyo and Tokai areas took part in an alert on Sept. 1, the anniversary of the Great Kanto quake.

Another aspect of preparedness involves a building code which goes into effect in the middle of 1981 and embodies many of the design concepts developed by Watabe and his associates at the building research center.

The critical factor in building quake-proof reinforced concrete structures, said Wight, is to use enough steel to tie them together.

"As far as the main reinforcement goes, not that much more is needed. But you might use two or three times as much steel in the reinforcement which runs across the building, and be much more careful about details, such as how a wall ties into a column, or a beam into a column, or a column into the foundation."

"There will be at least two simulated earthquakes," said Wight, a 33-year-old professsor of civil engineering. "In between, there will be a certain amount of pushing and pulling to see just how strong the building is."

Wight arrived here in September to represent the interests of the U.S. National Science Foundation, which is paying for the $875,900 test building, and the institutions taking part — the University of Michigan, the University of Illinois, the University of Texas, the University of California at Berkeley, Lehigh University and the Portland Cement Co.

The test edifice has been under construction since October inside a $50 million research facility in Tsukuba city, a recently constructed science city.

The pushing and pulling will be done by eight giant hydraulic jacks, each capable of lifting 100 tons, with one end fastened to the building and the other to a concrete wall 20 feet thick. Both the test structure and the jacks are wired to a computer which will orchestrate the "earthquake" and monitor the damage. Between 600 and 800 electronic sensors are being built into the structure, principally strain gauges on beams and displacement measuring devices on steel reinforcement rods.

"An earthquake can last a minute," said Watabe. "Ours will last three days."

Data from the series of tests will be made available to construction engineers around the world, Wight said.

Shady Label On Products

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Clogged sink? Try Break-Out, the drain cleaner recommended and manufactured by inmates at the North Dakota Penitentiary.

Frisk, another prison product, will strip the old, dull wax from kitchen floors. Shake-Down is a scouring powder. Warden's Wonder is an all-purpose cleaner.

The cleaning aids with the shady names are all produced by prisoners at the state penitentiary in the Rough Rider Industries program, a factory operation using inmate labor.

Tim Schuetzle, a prison employee assigned to the cleaning products shop, dreamed up the whimsical brand names with his fiancee, Ann Berle of Bismarck.

Consumers can't be conned into buying the janitorial products. Since prison labor is inexpensive, North Dakota law allows the penitentiary to sell only to state and local government entities, charitable organizations, and wholesalers.

So, the floors in North Dakota's public schools get "Frisked" regularly, and the sinks in the state Capitol get a good "Shake-Down" now and then.

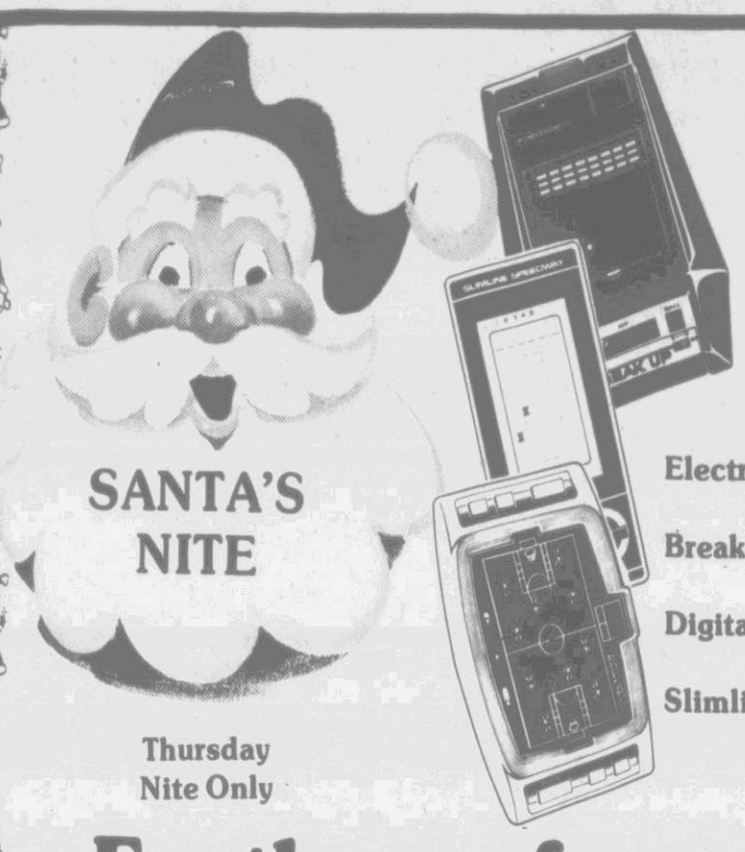

YOUTH AT WAR — A young Iranian boy, claiming to be 17 years old, pauses with his canteen near the Irqqi border on Iran's western front where artillery battles occur daily. On his helmet is written that Ayatollah Khomeini is his leader and that there is no God but the true God. (AP Laserphoto)

Busiest Hours For Shoplifters

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — More than one-third of shoplifting apprehensions occur between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m., it was reported recently in a survey of 917 supermarkets, drug stores and discount stores.

That is also the busiest grocery shopping time.
