GOP Right Wing Is Cool Over Choices

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mainstream Republicans and business groups are applauding Ronald Reagan's Cabinet choices but some GOP right-wingers are upset. One says Reagan has picked men who don't articulate "the views that made Ronald Reagan president today."

A leader of the women's movement and a congressional hawk have reservations, too.

For the most part, however, Republicans — and even Democrats — in Congress welcomed the president-elect's first eight appointments. Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker Jr. predicted they would be confirmed without much trouble and Senate Democratic whip Alan Cranston said he was "favorably impressed."

Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, noted the absence of women in Reagan's selections and said: "His position in opposition to women's rights is well established and he continually reinforces it."

The noisiest dissents, however, came from John T. Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, and Howard Phillips, national director of the Conservative Caucus.

Phillips called the selection of Donald T. Regan, chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co. as Treasury secretary "a real slap in the face at conservatives who thought they were voting for a change.'

He and Dolan said Merrill Lynch's Political Action Committee had given a reported $3,000 to a "Carter-Kennedy unity dinner" and supported a number of Democratic liberals.

Said Dolan: "I share a concern with other conservatives that Ronald Reagan may have chosen to surround himself with those individuals who in the past failed to articulate the views that made Ronald Reagan president today."

Phillips also noted that businessman Malcolm Baldrige, nominated to be Commerce secretary, had worked in Vice President-elect George Bush's presidential campaign.

"I'm concerned about the way President Reagan seems ready to mortgage the Republican future to George Bush," Phillips said. "It means the prestige, influence and patronage of the Commerce Department will be at the service of Mr. Bush's presidential aspirations."

Criticism of the selection of Caspar Weinberger as defense secretary came from Phillips and Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., chairman of the House armed services investigations subcommittee. Phillips said Weinberger's reputation as a budget cutter "sends all the wrong messages to our allies."

Said Stratton: "We had a bad experience with (former Secretary of Defense Robert S.) McNamara, who was another money manager. He turned everything over to the analysts and our military defenses began to deteriorate."

But Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., chairman of the full Armed Services Committee, said, "We'll give him a chance."

And Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois, the new House Republican leader, said, "Having a pruning knife, 'I'm sure he (Weinberger) will be concentrating on making sure we get the most bang for the buck from defense."

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., said a symbolic black, possibly a black woman, still may be appointed to one of the Cabinet posts, such as Housing and Urban Development. Of the selections to date, he said, "I'm afraid it's only a reflection of things to come."

Business leaders reacted favorably to the Cabinet choices. The National Association of Manufacturers noted approvingly that all eight named by Reagan "have achieved noteworthy success in private life" and some Wall Street figures hailed the selection of Regan.

City Council Will Sponsor A Petition For Rezoning

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council voted last night to sponsor a petition to rezone some 11 acres along E. Fifth Street to a higher residential designation and scheduled a public hearing on the matter for the Jan. 8 meeting.

The decision to sponsor the petition followed last month's vote by the Planning and Zoning Commission to recommend denial of the petition submitted and signed by the owners of 25 of the 35 parcels involved in the rezoning.

The petition, as discussed at the planning board session, seeks rezoning of property located generally between Ash and Maple Streets along E. Fifth Street from R-6 to R-9 residential classification.

Since all of the property owners in the affected area did not sign the initial petition, the request for rezoning would have required the planning board to sponsor the rezoning of the parcels not represented on the petition. Planning board members indicated a reluctance to sponsor a request where nearly one-third of the owners had not signed the petition.

In addition, concern was expressed regarding the number of non-comforming uses in the area. The planning staff identified 23 parcels within the proposed rezoning area which do not meet standards of the R-6 zoning district. Staff members noted that if the property is rezoned, the number of non-conformances would increase by three.

Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, pointed out last night that since the planning board meeting, additional petition signatures have been submitted and now only three property owners remain unrepresented in the rezoning request.

The E. Fifth Street property owners stated in applying for rezoning that the petition was submitted in order to upgrade and stabilize their neighborhood. It was noted that the general character of the area is single family residential, with a few duplexes interspersed throughout the area.

Attorney Bob Browning, representing Kappa Delta sorority, said that the sorority applied for a special use permit to locate a sorority in a house at the corner of Fifth and Oak Streets. Browning noted that the board of adjustments denied the permit request and the matter is now under appeal in the court system.

The attorney said that while the sorority thinks that it is appropriate that the E. Fifth Street property will eventually be rezoned, it would ask that the Council give the sorority time to finish the appeals process and delay setting a public hearing on the rezoning until after the appeal is settled.

Charles Vincent, attorney appearing on behalf of the E. Fifth Street property owners, requested that the matter be scheduled for a public hearing in January.

U.S. Senator-elect John East was honored yesterday at a reception co-sponsored by the City of Greenville and the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

The former East Carolina University political sciense professor — a Republican — defeated incumbent Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan in the November 4 election, to become the first man to be elected to the U.S. Senate from Greenville and Pitt County.

East and his family greeted well-wishers for nearly two hours at the reception, held at the Cedar Lane Recreation Center. Overhead, a banner proclaimed, "Greenville is Proud of John East, Our New Senator."

"I've run for public office four times...lost three times and won once," East told the gathering. "I can tell you one thing, it's more fun to win."

East said, "As a candidate...now as a man in public office, I realize how dependent you are on other people. We just have good people...wonderful people over the entire state.

"The people honored me by allowing me to represent them," East emphasized,

Police Hunting Suspect In Bank Fraud

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville police said yesterday that they are searching for a 29-year-old Fayetteville man on charges of fraud and forgery in connection with the theft of $36,000 from Planters National Bank at Pitt Plaza.

Capt. A. G. Whitaker, who said the State Bureau of Investigation is assisting in the case, identified the man as Samuel Richard Harrell.

According to Whitaker, the money was allegedly taken from the bank on December 5, by Harrell, using the ficticious name of Dr. Paul Bryant Richardson Jr. of 100B Ridge Pl.

The officer explained that Harrell allegedly moved into the Ridge Place apartment a month ago after answering a roommate wanted ad. He said later Harrell allegedly went to the bank, identified himself as Dr. Paul Bryant Richardson Jr., and opened an account, telling bank officials that he expected to receive a large check shortly for the sale of a house.

About 5:30 p.m. on December 5, Harrell allegedly returned to the bank with a check drawn on Beneficial Finance Co. for $42,000.

Whitaker said the man deposited the check, less $36,000 in cash, which he told bank officials he needed to purchase gold for investment.

When bank officials checked with Beneficial Finance Co. a short time later, they were told the check had been stolen and was a forgery.

Whitaker said Harrell returned to the Ridge Place apartment for a short time, but left before the incident was reported to police, about 7:15 p.m.

Rep. Walter Jones Elected Committee Chairman

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Walter Jones was elected Thursday afternoon by the Democratic caucus as chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, according to a spokesman for the Farmville Democrat.

The First District representative had served as chairman of the House Agriculture Tobacco Subcommittee but will relinquish that post to assume the committee chairmanship.

Jones, in a statement issued following his election, observed, "It is a high honor to be chosen to lead an important House committee. My colleagues have entrusted me with a major responsibility. I will do all within my power to justify their confidence as chairman.

"I would like the committee to seek ways to restore our nation's merchant marine fleet to a position of prominence. Unfortunately, its position has deteriorated in past years. This not only hurts our world trade efforts, but poses major difficulties for our defense in the event of international emergencies.

"My constituents in North Carolina can take heart in the fact that I will remain as ranking majority member of the House Tobacco Subcommittee, although I must give up its chairmanship," Jones said.

"In fact, serving as chairman of a full committee will give me added authority which I will use to continue full support for preservation of the government's tobacco farm program.

"Finally, my election returns the chairmanship of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to North Carolina's First Congressional District, since my predecessor, the Honorable Herbert Bonner, held this post for many years," Jones pointed out.

The merchant marine committee is concerned with such issues as coastal zone management, the Coast Guard, shipping and navigation.

Jones becomes the first North Carolina representative to serve as a committee chairman since Rep. David Henderson gave up the chairmanship of the House Post Office Committee to retire in 1976.

Dear Abby

No Official Mourning Period

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor was married for many years to a man who finally died of cancer after suffering for over a year. They both knew he was terminal. At his funeral she cried and carried on, telling everyone she didn't think she could live without her beloved husband.

Well, three months later, this "grieving" widow is dating. Last evening a man called for her at 7 p.m. They left together and returned at 10:10 p.m. and his car stood in front of her house until 4 a.m.!

Don't you think for a grieving widow she is rushing things a little? I was always under the impression that the official mourning period was one year. Or is that a thing of the past?

DALLAS

DEAR DALLAS: People handle their grief in their own ways. There is no official mourning period. For some it begins when the "terminal" verdict is handed down. The grieving widow has my sympathy. Not only does her beloved husband die a lingering death with cancer, she's spied upon by a nosy, suspicious, uncharitable neighbor.

DEAR ABBY: I am Jewish and my husband is Catholic. We have two daughters. One is being raised Catholic and the other Jewish. (We gave them their choice.) No problem. Our household celebrates the Jewish holidays and Catholic too.

Every year I have sent Christmas cards from "our family," but this year I was going to skip it because I work and am taking some classes at the "U." I was just too busy.

My 13-year-old daughter who is Catholic offered to address and sign the cards, which was fine except that I had to spell all the names for her and give her the addresses, plus mail them, which was time consuming.

Before my daughter addressed the cards, which my husband had bought, I went through them and pulled out all the overly religious ones with Jesus, Mary and the Three Wise Men on them.

My husband said I had no right to do that — that it is his holiday and I was showing prejudice against his religion. Furthermore, it's my duty as his wife to send the cards.

I say I am going beyond the call of duty by sending the cards. Also, a Christmas card wishing friends good health and happiness for the coming year has as much Christmas spirit as one with Jesus, Mary and the Three Wise Men on it. What do you say?

MIXED MARRIAGE

DEAR MIXED: Since the Christmas cards were from "the whole family," if you had a preference as to what kind of cards you wanted sent, you should have taken the time to help in their selection and expressed your objection to the "overly religious" ones. But since you didn't, you should not have screened and censored them.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: During this holiday season, when entertaining guests you don't know very well, if they refuse a cocktail, immediately serve them a non-alcoholic beverage. (Never say, "Oh, have just one.")

If you are serving punch, eggnog or any beverage containing liquor or wine, announce it loudly. And never, never "sneak" an intoxicant into a beverage.

Don't load drinks, and don't coax a guest who has had enough to have "just one more."

If you're driving, don't drink. And if you're drinking, don't drive. And should a guest become intoxicated in your home, either take him home or send him home in a taxi.

A Recipe To Be Cherished

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Thanks to Loretta Di Marzio, we have finally learned how to make excellent Ciambelline — the slightly sweet biscuits that are an Italian delight — in my test kitchen. I'm particularly happy to pass along her recipe because, to my knowledge, no other one for Ciambelline gives such explicit directions — necessary for perfect results.

Mrs. Di Marzio says she immensely enjoys baking: "I made 500 Ciambelline for my son's wedding. They are very light and dry and rise well. When my husband and I visited the Abruzzi region of Italy, our cousin made them for us and I watched her. In comparing hers with mine, I was happy to find mine were 'the real thing.' They look and taste just like hers."

LORETTA DI MARZIO'S CIAMBELLINE

2½ cups (about) all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
4 large eggs
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup corn oil
1 tablespoon anise extract
⅛ teaspoon salt
Icing, recipe follows

Stir together 1 cup of the flour and the baking powder; reserve.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer at high speed beat the eggs until thickened and lemon-colored — may take about 2 minutes. At medium speed gradually beat in the sugar; continue beating until thick and ivory-colored — may take about 6 minutes. Gradually beat in the corn oil; continue beating 1 minute. Add the anise and beat 1 minute. Gradually beat in the flour mixture; continue beating 1 minute. With a wooden spoon stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a stiff dough.

Turn onto a prepared pastry cloth or lightly floured surface; knead 2 minutes or until smooth; form into a ball. Invert a warm bowl over the dough; let rest 30 minutes; during the resting, knead a few times — at the end of this period the dough should be satiny, shiny and full of tiny blisters. Divide dough in half; divide each half into 8 equal pieces. Using palms of hands, roll each piece into a 6- by ½-inch rope. Form into rings; seal well — use a little water if necessary. Place on a cloth-lined tray or cookie sheet.

In a 5-quart Dutch oven or saucepot bring 3 quarts of water and the salt to a boil. Slightly flatten rings, stretching slightly to keep a uniform shape. Carefully drop 4 or 5 rings at a time into the boiling water. If the rings begin to stick to the bottom, gently loosen with a spoon. After the rings rise to the surface, gently boil 6 minutes, turning once. With a slotted spoon remove to paper towels to drain; cool thoroughly. With a sharp-pointed knife make a cut around the outer edge of each ring, cutting almost but not completely through to the center.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees; place the rings directly on the hot middle rack of the oven and bake for 15 minutes; turn over rings; reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake until golden brown and hard — 15 minutes longer. Cool on a wire rack for about 10 minutes. Frost one side of rings with icing and let dry; turn and frost other side. Store in a tightly covered container at room temperature.

Makes 16.

Icing: In a small bowl vigorously stir together 1½ cups confectioners' sugar, 2 to 3 tablespoons hot water and 1 teaspoon vanilla until smooth.

Officer Suspended For 3 Days

Greenvillle Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Lt. Edward [redacted] Laughinghouse has been suspended for three days for violating the department's Standard Operating Procedure and city personnel policy for city employees.

The chief, who said the shift supervisor has been with the department for 16 years, noted that he could not comment further on the suspension because of the provisions of the State privacy act.

However, sources close to the department said Laughinghouse was suspended for allegedly being under the effect of alcohol while on duty, about 7 o'clock last night.

Laughinghouse was suspended for five days and placed on probation for six months in May, for being intoxicated while on duty.

The department's standard operating procedure provides that an officer may not consume alcoholic beverages, be intoxicated, or be under the effect of alcohol consumed off duty, while on duty. It also provides that an officer suspected of being under the influence of alcohol while on duty may be required to take a breathalyzer test.

Sources acknowledged that Laughinghouse did not take a breath test last night.

Under the city's personnel policy, Cannon is required to recommend to the city manager what action to take in connection with the incident within three working days.

EPA Cuts State Funds Due Emission Failure

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — In a move that makes growth in California "very vulnerable," the federal government is cutting off $850 million in highway and sewer aid because the state has failed to require annual auto exhaust inspections in six cities, officials say.

Kentucky will lose $34 million under the same decision announced Thursday by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Of the 29 states required by the EPA to have inspections designed to reduce urban smog, only California and Kentucky have failed to comply, officials say.

The cutoff affects federal highway and sewage treatment funds scheduled for distribution next year to six California metropolitan areas and two Kentucky counties.

Both states had expected the cutoffs. And while officials here were worried, one Kentucky official was unconcerned.

"We don't care (about the sanction)," said James Dressman, judge-executive of Kentucky's Kenton County. "We don't need any money for another sewage plant" or highway construction.

But in San Francisco, Mayor Diane Feinstein worried that the loss of funds "makes every growth program in California very vulnerable." She urged quick enactment of an emissions bill.

The Legislature, however, is "not likely to be coerced," said Mary Nichols, chairman of the state air resources board.

Lawmakers in both states have rejected bills requiring regular, compulsory inspections of pollution-control devices on cars.

Opponents have branded the program a consumer ripoff and contend the cost of inspections won't justify the decrease in pollution.

But supporters of the program point to tests in Portland, Ore., which show a 34 percent drop in carbon monoxide levels and a 24 percent decline in hydrocarbon emissions since that city began inspections. Hydrocarbons are the key element in smog.

EPA Administrator Douglas Costle said that "in fairness to the 27 other states" which have complied with the program, the "EPA is left with no choice but to institute these funding restrictions."

A similar cutoff was imposed earlier this year against Colorado, but the sanction was lifted a week later when the Legislature agreed to pass an inspection program for Denver.

California lawmakers, fearing annual inspection fees of $15 to $20 would anger voters, repeatedly defeated bills proposed this year, including one that promised to pass such a plan by October 1981.

The proposals also prompted debate over who should do the testing — central stations or individual shops — and whether the emission standards for new cars should be cut as a trade for annual tests.

An aide to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said the administration would work to enact an inspection program in the upcoming legislative session.

In Kentucky, Dressman estimated the program would cost the county $300,000 to $500,000, "which we don't have. We don't think it's worth it." He added that the "legislature should have done something."

The 1980 General Assembly rejected Gov. John Y. Brown Jr.'s proposal for the testing.

In California, the cutoff would affect the Los Angeles, Ventura, San Francisco, San Diego, Sacramento and Fresno metropolitan areas. In Kentucky, Kenton and Campbell counties near Cincinnati, would be affected.

Pedestrian Dies From Injuries

A Rt. 1, Fountain man, James Smith (Tom) Deans, died of injuries received when he was hit by a truck yesterday about 10:30 a. m. on Highway 222 five miles north of Saratoga in Wilson County.

North Carolina Highway Patrolman Clayton E. Williams, who investigated, said Deans, 51, was said by two witnesses to have walked into the path of the truck, which reportedly was driven by Jessie Jack Daniel of Farmville. They said Deans previously had been walking northward along the shoulder of the road and that the Daniels vehicle was traveling southward. Daniels swerved to the left to avoid striking Deans, they said, and the right side of the vehicle struck him knocking him about 10 feet from the point of impact.

Deans was taken to Wilson Memorial Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

An estimated $50 damage was reportedly done to the Daniels truck. Trooper Williams said no charges will be filed.

N.C. Depends On Roads

At this point no one knows what will be proposed for additional financing for highway maintenance and construction; it is known that something will be needed.

It comes at a time when there is violent opposition to additional taxes; yet the gasoline tax, at a fixed rate, is far out of kilter with the present cost of gasoline.

Consequently we are rapidly using up the funds designated for new highway construction. Projections indicate that eventually there would be no money for new construction; all the gas tax funds would have to go for maintenance.

It prompted Gov. Hunt at a recent news conference to say, "I think the people of North Carolina do not want their road system to break up.

"To look at this is going to require people who will be coolheaded, who will not get emotional and jump off the deep end, but who will look very critically at all the needs that have been analyzed by the blue ribbon commission to make a judgment about what is going to be required.

Hunt said there had been no tax increases during the eight years he had been lieutenant governor and governor. He said he didn't know what is going to be needed now. "But I know this: I'm going to be willing to recommend whatever I think is necessary for the future of North Carolina and to keep us from sliding back and losing the good state we have now."

What is done will eventually be decided by the mood of our people. We should always keep in mind, however, that North Carolina depends of its vast road system more than most other states.

Borrowing Is Out-Of-Reach

The prime interest rate hit the anticipated 20 percent when Chase Manhattan Bank raised it to that figure Wednesday.

For most of us the prime rate is a remote figure, but we do know that as it climbs so do the rates we pay for consumer and mortgage loans.

There is no guarantee that the prime rate will stop even at 20 percent.

The sky high interest is heralded as the way to slow inflation. Undoubtedly it will since most of us cannot afford to buy much with financed money at such high rates.

Looking For New Respect

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The success of President Ronald Reagan in the early months of his administration will depend in considerable measure on how well he lives up to the expectations of the U.S. public.

To discover these expectations, the Gallup Poll posed questions dealing with five key areas.

The results show that three in five Americans (62 percent) think the Reagan administration will be able to increase respect for the U.S. abroad, while a somewhat smaller majority (52 percent) thinks the new administration will be able to trim the size of the federal government.

However, when it comes to the two issues on which the Reagan campaign focused — unemployment and inflation — less than half of the public is expecting the new administration to meet with success.

A total of 47 percent of voters think the Reagan administration will be able to reduce unemployment, but no fewer than 37 percent hold the opposite view. Similarly, 46 percent believe the new team in Washington will be able to reduce inflation, but 37 percent think not.

On the question of balancing the budget — a cherished goal of the American public for many years — a majority of 55 percent say the Reagan team will not be able to bring expenses into line with expenditures, while 30 percent think this is achievable by the new administration.

Differences By Carter/Reagan Voters

There is agreement among both supporters of Reagan and President Jimmy Carter that the new president will be able to increase respect for the U.S. and reduce the size of the federal government. But those who voted for Reagan are much more likely to subscribe to these beliefs than are people who voted for Carter.

Disagreement between the two groups of voters is much wider, however, on the questions of reducing unemployment and inflation; Carter supporters are far less likely than Reagan voters to think that the incoming administration will be able to achieve these goals.

Here are the questions and results:

"Do you think the Reagan administration will or will not be able to:

A Hostile Rejection

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Class size has been sanctified by the educational establishment of North Carolina, along with teacher tenure and opposition to merit pay.

That is the conclusion apparent in the hostile rejection of a study by the division of statistical services of the Controller's Office and the Division of Planning in the State Department of Public Instruction.

The bottom line of that project is that teacher quality as measured by the National Teacher's Examination, along with the child's family environment (parent income and education), are the "single most important predicator of student achievement."

Class size, per-pupil spending, and school facilities were held not statistically significant influences.

Reaction from much of the educational community was best summarized in this quote attributed to Eliot B. Palmer, assistant executive director of the North Carolina Association of Educators: "I don't know what fool could conclude that there is a correlation between a (potential teacher's) score on a test and the achievement of a student on a student test."

Defense

Assistant Controller Alan T. Hill defends the study report, and points to other research projects elsewhere which have reached the same conclusion. Indeed, all the while that drums have beaten loudly for reduced class size, proponents have been unable to produce any evidence that such reduction will result in improved student achievement.

David Bruton, chairman of the State Board of Education, makes two critical points which must be studied before moving too far in rejecting Hill's conclusions:

1. Class size in North Carolina is so near the same everywhere, and reductions are talked about in terms of one or two students, that achievement data is not likely to be impacted. Only if major reduction far below the current level were possible would results likely occur.

2. The National Teachers Exam is an intelligence test measuring ability to read, comprehend and answer questions. It does not meausre all those elements such as commitment, dedication, special aptitude and personality which make us a good teacher. But it does say whether you have a smart teacher or not. And, with North Carolina's required score for teacher certification so low, it is little more than a minimum competency test which, not unlike that given for high school graduation, can be passes easily by almost anyone.

Those rushing to denounce the study would do well to read the report, and to consider several political realities. Pupil enrollment is declining. The North Carolina Association of Educators has been pushing reduction of class size vigorously, not just as a means of improving education, but also to improve teacher working conditions, and perhaps most importantly to expand the job market at a time when it would otherwise be shrinking.

Now, The Sordid Side

WASHINGTON — "Mr. McCall, Mrs. Wesley Heights, the wife of Congressman Heights, is here to talk to you about publishing her book."

"Send her in. Ah, Mrs. Heights, this is indeed a pleasure. I'm terribly sorry about your husband being found guilty in the Abscam trial. I definitely believe his constitutional rights were violated."

"You know he was a lush, don't you?"

"It seems to me I did read something about that in the papers."

"They didn't really go into the sordid details. It's all here in the book. He was smashed from morning till night. I used to have to pour a pot of coffee over his head to sober him up enough so he could attend his Congressional Prayer breakfasts."

"I'm sure you don't want to talk about it, Mrs. Heights."

"Are you kidding? It's all here in Chapter One. He was a mess."

"It must have been very tough for you."

"It wasn't as tough as his playing around — that's in

ART BUCHWALD

Chapter Two. I swear you wouldn't believe the type of women he would drag home with him at night. They were old enough to be his mother."

"How did you put up with it?"

"That's in Chapter Three. I was determined to be a good congressional wife, and pretend that nothing was wrong. It was a role the people in Wesley's district expected me to play. So I just closed my eyes when Wesley came into the house with a paramour, and closed them again when she left."

"This is all in the book?"

"You bet your life. There was this one night when I woke up and ..."

"That's all right, Mrs. Heights, I'll read the manuscript. Does your book tell anything about how Washington works socially?"

"Of course. That's in Chapter Four. I went to this fund-raising party and someone offered me coke — and I said I didn't do coke, and he said everyone in Washington did coke and I wasn't a team player. So I got mad, and we went for a drive along the Potomac, and when we got back in the morning, the party was still going and everyone was stoned."

"You paint a different picture of Washington than, let's

Other Editors Say And Thumbprints?

(The Raleigh Times)

No honest citizen would delight in being thumbprinted and photographed "like a criminal" in order to sell something to a second-hand dealer.

But "like a criminal" is the point. Today's criminals often don't look like criminals either — especially the clever types who're successful in unloading stolen goods at flea markets, antique shops or second-hand stores.

That is one reason for their success. Robbers and their helpers have gotten wise to the fact that even a second-story man can wear an alligator shirt. As the tribe of respectable-looking burglars increases, so does the desperation of law enforcement officials.

Hence the thumbprint-and-mugshot proposals from the Governor's Crime Commission. Each dealer would have to get prints and photos of every seller of used goods valued at over $20.

Without doubt, a dealer's seller relations would take a sharp chill the first few times he or she had to say "Sorry, Mrs. Silverblue, we've got to mug and print you before we can take your great-aunt's tarnished teapot off your hands." After the first few months resentment would decline as word got around, but the nuisance would remain considerable.

It may never happen, with opponents like auctioneer Craig Lawing in powerful positions like the Senate's pro-tem presidency. Other auctioneers and dealers are already lining up lobbying guns.

They'll fight other commission proposals too, including making dealers keep for a year, on everything they buy, seller names and addresses along with merchandise photos and records.

Taken as a whole, the commission plan goes too far. The sternest measures — including the mug-and-print rule — could wait at least until more moderate efforts to stem the tide of theft have had a fair trial.

But we don't think it's a bit unreasonable to require records of seller names and addresses, descriptions of valuable goods, and a waiting period before resale or altering. We hope the legislature will agree this is the least we need to do to arm the enforcement of the Eighth Commandment.

Reminder Of Great Depression

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — By many measures, the economy this year has been as troubled as any since the Great Depression of the 1930s, even if we've learned to adjust to difficulties a bit better than we did back then.

It has been a year also of much talk but little constructive action about problems, which today are essentially the very ones that made last year's holiday lights seem a bit dimmer to the beholder.

There are energy and housing problems, inflation, high interest rates, big budget deficits, lagging productivity, unemployment, threatened bankruptcies, and warnings again that recession is around the corner.

The wage earner has seen median weekly earnings rise 8 percent and consumer prices 12.8 percent in the 12 months through October. And many companies — in autos and steels especially — are in trouble after corporate profits fell 13 percent in the third quarter of the year.

Oil prices are being blamed for almost everything, which adds to the feeling that we've come this way before. Just return to the beginning of the year and listen to the public dialogue and you get the point.

The president began the calendar year with promises to cut the budget deficit, but again it got away and ended the fiscal year $59 billion in the red, the second largest (Ford had $66.4 billion) deficit ever.

In the first month of the year the consumer price index rose 1.4 percent, the sharpest monthly increase since a rise of 1.8 percent in August 1973. And then it hit the same figure in February and March.

These increases were, of course, declared outrageous, just as the 1 percent increases in September and October were said to be intolerable. And the November and December figures will get the same tongue lashing.

As the year began the prime rate was heading toward 20 percent, and when that point was reached in April it was said to be a unique event. But on Wednesday, Dec. 10 the prime hit 20 again and was headed higher.

The warning flags are flying, just as they were earlier in the year. Henry Kaufman, credit-wise partner in Salomon Brothers, the investent firm, said last February the nation faced "a national emergency" because of big credit demands. This week he warned of "enormous new credit demands" of $412 billion in 1981, a third higher than in 1980.

The amazing thing about the persistent weaknesses and excesses, and all the promises and threats in regard to them, is that the country in the meantime has come through a supposedly "corrective" recession.

The big difference over the past year has been political. In fact, for one of the few times in recent history the economics of geles, the situation outweighed the political considerations. And a President lost his job.

Various analyses have been made of Ronald Reagan's defeat of Jimmy Carter, but one that seems fair and logical is that people were upset about the depressing economy and the unfilled promises to improve it.

Hardly an economic thing has improved over the past year, unless it is the slight improvement in productivity during the third quarter, and some of the problems have turned much, much worse, to wit:

—The entire automotive industry, once the nation's strongest, is in trouble, having lost $3.5 billion in just the first nine months of the year. And now, with inflation outpacing wages, and with interest rates rising, the outlook is worsening.

—Millions of Americans — and a record 42 million will reach age 30, homebuying age, in this decade — have been shut out of the housing market by high prices and high interest rates. Neither problem is likely to disappear or even to soften over the next few months.

—Small businesses are strangling under the weight of regulations, high interest rates, and costs that are rising so fast they cannot pass them on to their customers and still expect to make sales.

The hope which seems to have been expressed in the recent elections is that a new administration with new ideas eventually will make headway against the problems. But right now those problems seem intractable.

THE HOME A SCHOOL

If you are determined that your child receive a good education, it is well to remember that the child will get the most of its education in the home, and that you will be the teacher.

Expensive boarding schools, colleges, and graduate education may have their place in the lives of aspiring students and their parents; but children's lives are pretty definitely set before they go away to school. A quiet home devoted to honesty, love, self-restraint, and religion does a thousand times more for a child than all the institutions of higher education that he can attend.

A prominent minster wrote some years ago, "The Christian home is the true school, as it ought to be a true church. Here the most powerful of all educational forces are at work — atmosphere and example. Through the interaction of life and time, the truth or falsehood of tone and temper, the attitude and ideals of the home seep into a child's mind and character."

say, Arthur Schlesinger does."

"He's never been a congressman's wife. Then, in Chapter Five, I talk to other politicians' wives and they tell me what they've been through. This chapter tells how they have to beat off every woman in a skirt who thinks the hunting season on congressmen is 12 months long. The wives really have been through the mill and, boy, do they have stories to tell. It makes my life sound like 'The Waltons.'"

"You've done a lot of work in a short time."

"I kept a diary and I'm a fast writer. Besides, my husband helped me fill in the gaps that he could remember."

"Then your husband knows about the book?"

"Of course. He has no objection to my writing it. He voted against ERA, but he thinks a woman should do anything she wants to, as long as it makes her happy. He made a big contribution to Chapter Six, when I tell how he took the money from the phony Arab sheiks."

"He didn't mind your writing that?"

"Au contraire, he gave me lots of good stories that aren't on the tapes, about how he stuffed the $100 bills into his socks, and stole the sheik's gold cigarette lighter when he wasn't looking."

"I must say, Mrs. Heights, this is not your ordinary Washington memoir. But it may have some interest for the reading public, particularly since it's told from a woman's point of view. I'm sure we can make a very generous offer. But I'm curious about one thing. Why did you write this book in the first place?"

"I was bored just being a congressman's wife — and it was either this or getting a job selling real estate."

million to reduce class size to 26 in lower grades; 25 in upper ones.

In his report, hill makes the point that class size and spending are fixed by law. "If greater variation were experienced in these factors, it is reasonable to expect that they too would affect achievement scores," he points out.

In fact, the higher per-pupil spending takes place in schools where low income — mostly black — students dominate. Federal funds are pumped in, but Hill finds that this has a negative effect on teacher quality — the same conditions which draw the funds prevent those particular schools from attracting the best qualified teachers.

Which raises the serious question of race; a subject usually avoided in public comment. Those who fail or score lowest on the National Teachers Exam are often products of deprived homes, overwhelmingly black. Those scoring lowest on student achievement tests are overwhelmingly black. Hill determined the problem is concentrated in counties east and south of Raleigh.

Meanwhile, conscience and policy dictate that large numbers of black teachers be hired who are not as well prepared to help the very students who most need quality help. Until time erases these historic conditions, test scores of many teachers and students will remain low.

Five Accused Of Trying Smuggle Cocaine By Air

NEW YORK (AP) — Three West Coast men and two women have been arrested at Kennedy International Airport here and accused of attempting to smuggle $1 million worth of cocaine by air from Bolivia to West Germany, federal officials said.

The alleged scheme involved a switch in baggage claim checks to avoid a search of cocaine-laden luggage by German customs officials.

Federal officials acting on a tip seized the five Thursday after inspecting two suitcases, each said to contain 20 pounds of cocaine. They were aboard Lufthansa Flight 493 from La Paz, Bolivia, en route to Munich via New York.

Arrested were Kenneth Charles Feld, 26, an artist, of Bolinas, Calif., described as the ringleader; Albert B. Foreman, 27, of Emeryville, Calif.; Michael J. Muench, 31, a salesman, of Ephrata, Wash.; Miciala Evans, 35, a restaurant owner, of Bolinas; and Michelle A. Lewis, 25, a San Francisco model.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Susan Shepard said Feld brought the cocaine to Kennedy from Bolivia, where it was transferred in suitcases to Foreman and Miss Lewis, who remained in a customs area where no search of luggage was required.

The plan, according to the prosecutor, was for the two couples to exchange baggage claim checks, since German customs officials ordinarily examine baggage from South America more thoroughly than baggage from the United States. The cocaine would have been listed as ski equipment when Foreman and Miss Lewis went through German customs, officials said.

The five appeared before U.S. Magistrate A. Simon Chrien in Brooklyn on charges of possession and intent to distribute cocaine. He scheduled arraignment for Dec. 19.

Conviction on the charges carries a maximum sentence of 15 years in federal prison and a $10,000 fine.

Bail was set at $500,000 for Foreman, $250,000 for Miss Lewis, $100,000 for Feld, and $15,000 each for Muench and Evans.

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,551 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 21-24.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction. For results based on Carter or Reagan supporters, a five percentage point margin of error should be allowed.

State Asks Authority Over School Busing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state education official, urging a legislative panel to give the state more power over local school bus operations, said Thursday that some North Carolina school systems are providing the equivalent of "private, individualized limousine service."

To remedy the situation, Jerome Melton told a legislative study commission on pupil transportation that better management of school bus operations is needed. Melton is deputy superintendent of public instruction.

"We've got some severe problems in the way we're managing our transportation system, both at the state level and local level," Melton said.

The study commission, which conducted a public hearing last month, is considering a long list of suggestions for changing state law regarding student transportation.

Currently, Melton said, some systems are providing transportation for children who could walk to school or take another bus route. He said a recently approved state law requiring equal education opportunities for exceptional children, including the handicapped, has increased transportation costs even more.

"We probably can't justify and can't afford a transportation system that picks up every child at his front door," Melton said.

In an interview, Melton said he is proposing the legislative commission recommend giving the state Board of Education authority to set policy and guidelines for local school bus systems. That proposal was backed by a recent state auditor's report which also recommended increased state authority in regulating school bus systems.

Currently, Melton said state law restricts the Board of Education's authority to setting safety standards. The money for bus transportation is administered by the controller of the state Department of Education, who is under the state board but independent of the superintendent.

Joe Porter, the Department of Education controller, told the commission he would like to see the board have greater authority over money spent on school busing. Porter added that control over school bus routes should rest with the local systems.

Predicts Gasoline Price Rise

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline prices could climb 40 to 45 cents a gallon by next summer due the Iran-Iraq war, a new congressional analysis predicts.

Such a hike is possible even if the conflict ends by spring and the two Persian Gulf nations begin rebuilding their oil empires, said the analysis by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress

Tighter supplies will be a major cause of the price increase, not only in higher prices for crude oil but also in refiners taking advantage of the tight market to recoup profits lost during this year's gasoline glut, said the study, released Thursday.

In addition, the study said, refiners are unlikely to dump their record inventories on the market — the historical practice, and one that helps hold down prices — because the war has convinced the industry that stockpiles are valuable assets and should be conserved.

"Gasoline prices might rise by 40 to 45 cents per gallon between now and mid-1981 if all the components of this increase are realized," the study concluded.

Before their war, Iran and Iraq were exporting a total of 4 million barrels of oil a day. But those sales have virtually stopped.

While the report estimated that the actual impact on global oil markets of the war is somewhat less — 400,000 to 1.4 million barrels a day — nevertheless "higher world oil prices will likely result in the aftermath of the war, even if it ends within the next few months."

The world oil price was about $32.50 per barrel before the Iran-Iraq war and had been expected to climb $2 per barrel next month. But the report said that, "rather than this modest increase, a notably sharper one should be anticipated ... in a market where countries previously dependent on Iran and Iraq scramble to make up supplies on the spot market."

The analysis said an "informed, best-guess reaction to the present situation" would put world crude oil prices at $38 to $40 a barrel next year.

The analysis said such price increases would add 26 to 31 cents a gallon to gasoline prices by the middle of next year.

But that is not the only impact gasoline prices will feel, the study said.

Gasoline prices are federally controlled, but refiners can pass on their cost increases — an action refiners were forced by competition to forego during this year's supply glut. That, in turn, cut their profit margins.

Federal law, however, allows the refiners to "bank" those allowable increases and impose them later, when the market will bear them.

The study says some $8 billion a year in "banked" priced increases have accumulated and are likely to be passed along soon.

The tighter supplies also will allow refiners to raise their legal ceiling prices, the report said, for a total impact on gasoline prices of an estimated $14 billion, or 14 cents a gallon.

The analysis said refiners now have plentiful stocks of gasoline, which ordinarily would have held down gasoline prices as refiners dumped their inventories.

But the study said the war has changed the oil industry's views of stockpiles — "from a liability to be unloaded to a valuable asset which should be husbanded ...

"They are now seen as becoming too valuable to be dumped," the study said.

Will Probably Endorse Aid For El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. commission sent to El Salvador will probably recommend the resumption of American aid to that strife-torn Central American country, after finding no clear-cut evidence linking Salvadoran troops to the slaying of four Americans earlier this month, according to a published report.

The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted unidentified sources as saying that while the recommendation would probably be made to help moderate forces gain the upper hand in El Salvador, a final decision has still not been reached.

The United States suspended $25 million in aid to El Salvador last week, until it could learn whether Salvadoran security forces may have had some part in the killings of three American Roman Catholic nuns and one lay worker on Dec. 2.

Meanwhile, The Post also reported that a second U.S. ambassador to a Central American nation has joined the American envoy to El Salvador in criticizing the transition team of President-elect Ronald Reagan for allegedly undercutting the envoy's authority.

The Post quoted Lawrence Pezzullo, the American ambassador to Nicaragua, as saying leaks from the transition team about a reported "hit list" of ambassadors to be replaced has hurt his role.

Earlier, Robert White, the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, made similar charges against the transition team.

Both Pezzullo and White are reportedly on the "hit list," the Post said.

The newspaper said that before resuming any aid, the United States would require assurances from Salvadoran officials that a genuine effort would be made to solve the murders and that moderate forces would be placed in sufficient control to stop excesses of rightist sympathizers within the military.

William D. Rogers, a former under secretary of state and a former assistant secretary for inter-American affairs, led the mission, which recently returned from El Salvador.

The group was dispatched after the bullet-riddled bodies of the four women were found Dec. 3 southeast of San Salvador. Authorities said they were murdered the previous day.

Disguised Bloc Invasion Seen

BOSTON (AP) — Administration officials believe the Soviet Union may stage a big Warsaw Pact military exercise in Poland to disguise military intervention in that country, the Boston Globe reported today.

William Beecher, a Globe foreign affairs writer, said the strategy is to make it hard for the West to set retaliatory economic and military measures if Polish authorities have invited in Soviet, Czech and other forces.

He said a major show of force also might intimidate dissident Poles enough to prevent a major bloodletting.

Beecher said, "Coming in under the guise of an exercise also might enable the Soviets to place themselves in key positions at airfields and military command centers and around the 15 Polish divisions in such a way as to make it difficult for resistance by organized elements of the Polish armed forces."

He quoted an unidentified official as saying, "There's no longer any doubt that a big exercise inside Poland is planned. We're getting reports from all over."

The report said Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev has returned from India, and the most likely time for a show of force would be Dec. 16 when ceremonies are planned at Gdansk for the 10th anniversary of bloody riots in the Baltic ports. He said as many as one million Poles may gather at Gdansk.

Beecher said intelligence reports pointing to the strategy show that five major troop gatherings have been spotted, the largest pointing to Gdansk, a second along the border east of Warsaw, a third near the border southeast of Kracow, a fourth in East Germany west of Poznan, and four to six Czech divisions south of Silesia.

The report also said that added Soviet troops are moving toward staging areas with stocks of ammunition and fuel, and that mobile hospital units are being moved in place along the Polish border.

NO SPECIAL BONUS

Hostage Letter Reaches Family

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Iranian captive Richard Morefield, consul general to the U.S. Embassy in Teheran, has sent a letter to his family with word that he's fine, his wife says.

The letter, which arrived at the family home Thursday, was the first from Morefield since August.

"He says he's fine," Dorothea Morefield said. "He's gotten mail, pictures and clippings we've sent. Above all he sounds well."

The letter contained brief messages to each of the five Morefield children — ages 22 to 14 — and to Morefield's mother.

"He refers to a letter that he's written to me, but I haven't received it yet," said Mrs. Morefield, adding she would meet in Washington, D.C., today with other hostage families.

Meanwhile, at a 20-minute ceremony in New York City, officials suggested citizens use yellow ribbons as a sign of unity with the Americans held captive since the seizure of the embassy on Nov. 4, 1979.

"The deep hopes of all our citizens go to our hostages in Iran and their families during this holiday season — a season to express our love and faith," Mayor Edward Koch told 200 people who gathered in sub-freezing temperatures.

Also Thursday, attorney Paul O'Dwyer, a former City Council president who is now representing Iran in claiming the late shah's wealth, predicted the hostages could be home by Christmas.

"The vibes are good," O'Dwyer said. "I think it's a probability and a possibility that they will be released by Christmas."

pledging not to let the position affect his perspective, and to keep in close contact with the people he represents.

Many Other Actions Taken At City Council Meet

Action on a variety of business was taken Thursday night by the City Council, including the scheduling of six items for public hearings at the Jan. 8 meeting.

The public hearings will be held on: rezoning of the Susie T. Rollins property, Pitt County school bus garage site, and a portion of the Nannie M. Combs tract, located west of Carolina East Shopping Center, from RA-20 to Highway Commercial; rezoning of the B. B. Sugg heirs property (.75 acres) located on Pamlico Street from Unoffensive Industry to R-6;

An amendment to the Zoning Ordinance to allow exercise studios, whose activities are limited to weight lifting, body building, aerobic dancing and weight reduction/fitness centers, as permitted uses in the Neighborhood Commercial zoning classification;

An amendment to the City Code to allow the Subdivision Review Committee to approve the soil erosion and sedimentation control plans instead of the Planning and Zoning Commission; annexation of a portion of Lindbeth Grove Subdivision on US 264 Business south of Westwood Subdivision; and Annexation of Section I of Bedford Subdivision located south of Grayleigh Subdivision and east of Evans Street Extension.

Council members scheduled a public hearing for Jan. 8 on a proposed ordinance dealing with residential parking. The ordinance follows a review by the Residential Parking Task Force Committee dealing with the concern of the lack of residential parking in the area east of the Central Business District.

It was pointed out that many neighborhoods and areas in the city do not have sufficient residential parking space in the vicinity of their homes. In addition, the city has found that the excessive practice of non-residents parking their vehicles for long periods of time creates unnecessary hardships on the residents of the areas.

Mayor Pro-Tem Joe Taft Jr., who served as chairman of the committee, said that in order to implement the proposed parking program, several residential areas have been identified which have the potential to be designated controlled residential parking areas. The areas include the residential neighborhoods between First and Fifth Streets, the subdivisions of Brook Green and Dalebrook, the area in the vicinity of Elmhurst School, the Rock Springs Road area, and an area between Evans Street and the university.

In designating a section as a controlled parking area, residents of each block could submit a petition to the Traffic Commission signed by 51 percent of the residents within the block. If the area is recommended by the Traffic Commission as a controlled area, a resident of the area would be able to purchase a permit decal for each vehicle owned at a cost of $5. Signs would be posted in the areas and vehicles not bearing the decal would not be permitted to park there any longer than two hours between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Council adopted a revised ordinance governing charitable solicitations in the city. Under the new ordinance, the authority to issue solicitation permits is placed with the police chief rather than the city manager. The filing period for a permit has been reduced from 14 days to five days and the ordinance applies to any type of fund raising activities in the city limits.

Several new ordinances designed to curb litter and odor problems related to disposal of beer containers, especially in the downtown area, were adopted last night. An ordinance was passed prohibiting the consumption of malt beverages or unfortified wine "on or in any public place owned or occupied by the city."

City Manager Ed Wyatt said the new ordinance is aimed at both stopping the open display of public drinking by some young people who often congregate outside downtown and and in other places and eliminating the litter they leave.

Some responsibility for litter control is assigned to tavern operators under the new laws, it was explained. The new regulations also limit outside storage of beverage containers to 24 hours and requires daily cleaning of the storage receptacles.

Vehicle standards for recycling trucks were also enacted along with a regulation prohibiting parking a vehicle loaded with containers for recycling long enough to create an odor problem.

The council noted that the "excellent cooperation of tavern operators" had resulted in "solving many of the litter and odor problems, thereby greatly reducing the number of new regulations needed." The regulations were considered in response to numerous citizen complaints concerning the litter and odor problems, it was noted.

Other action taken by the council included:

— Appointment of Col. Ed Tadlock to the Human Relations Council to replace George Pleasant, who is deceased;

— Adoption of a resolution endorsing the formulation of a comprehensive plan to promote orderly physical growth in Greenville and its surrounding area;

— Adoption of a resolution approving the sale of Disposal Parcel E-3 in the Central Business District to Dixon & Horne, attorneys, for $48,867;

— Adoption of an ordinance deleting a portion of Block D of Section IV of Twin Oaks Subdivision from the fire district;

— Adoption of a resolution authorizing the execution of an agreement with the Department of Transportation for the inventory, inspection, and analysis of three bridges in the city;

— Adoption of a resolution granting easements to Greenville Utilities on a portion of Howell Street;

— Approval of a revised pay and classification plan incorporating the three percent cost of living increase;

— Approval of applications by the Happy Store at Tenth and Evans Streets, General Cash and Carry Inc. at 1401 Forbes Street, and by Convenient Food Shop at 500 N. Greene Street, for off-premise beer and wine privilege licenses;

— Acceptance of Cedar Court from Cedar Lane to the cul-de-sac some 400 feet, Tobacco Road from US 264 Business to the southern right-of-way line of Alice Drive, and Shiloh Drive from Tobacco Road to the southern right-of-way line of Stuart Circle, for permanent maintenance;

— Approval of three applications for mobile home permits;

— Approval of a request by the Greenville Foundation that the city amend its Trust Indenture to include Peoples Bank & Trust Co. and Branch Banking & Trust Co. as trustees; and — Adoption of an ordinance establishing advertising policies for the Greenville Area Transit System.

City Council.....

In voting to schedule the hearing for January, the council agreed to sponsor the rezoning of the three properties missing from the petition, as well as the remaining parcels owned by the petition signers.

In other business last night, council members voted to grant a one-year hardship permit to Art Dellano to locate a mobile home on property adjacent to Gladson Brothers Garage on Greenville Boulevard for use by Dellano as resident manager quarters.

It was pointed out that Dellano0had applied for a mobile home permit to locate a unit on property he has leased on W. Greenville Boulevard adjacent to Johnny's Mobile Homes for resident quarters use. Since the application was submitted, Dellano has found that he will not be able to utilize the property until the present tenant leaves.

Dellano said that he has located a site across the highway adjacent to the garage where he can set up a mobile home business until the first site is available. He said that he has to vacate current resident quarters, where his family also resides, at Mobile Home Brokers.

Mayor Don McGlohon pointed out that the matter was advertised for the location adjacent to Johnny's Mobile Homes and the question involved whether a residence could or should be allowed on the property.

Dellano said that for security reasons, it is desirable to reside on the site of the mobile home sales business. He added that as soon as the other property is available, he will reapply to the city for a permit and again relocate the business.

Council member Judy Greene said she had reservations about a family living in quarters designated for resident manager usage.

Councilman William Hadden said that while the board should "not draw the line on this man," the council in the future should look more closely at the mobile home-resident quarters situation.

In voting on the motion to approve a temporary hardship permit, Mrs. Greene cast her vote in opposition. The matter will still be readvertised and scheduled for a January public hearing.

The council conducted a public hearing on a proposed ordinance amending the charter in order to provide for the non-partisan plurality method of municipal elections and, as required by law, continued the matter for consideration at the January meeting. Statutes prohibit voting action on a charter amendment at the same meeting that the public hearing is held.

Under the plurality system, as opposed to the present majority format, the top six vote recipients in the municipal elections would be elected, without consideration as to majority totals. It was pointed out that a key change in the plurality system is that run-offs are eliminated. Elections would be held in November.

City Attorney Louis Singleton said that the amendment involved a legal requirement under federal annexation statutes and the city really does not have a choice in the matter.

McGlohon said that the council has been advised that it would be in the best interest of the community to change the charter.

Action was taken on two rezoning matters forwarded by the Planning and Zoning Commission. Council members voted to adopt an ordinance rezoning property (2.3 acres) owned by Phil Carroll north of Greenville Boulevard on the south side of David Drive from Shopping Center to Office and Institutional.

The council also accepted the recommendation of the planning board and denied a request by Ms. Emma Turner Olsen for rezoning some .51 acres at the corner of Arlington Boulevard and Memorial Drive from R-6 to Highway Commercial. Roberson said that property in the area is generally R-6 and the planning staff felt at this time that the Olsen property should remain in the R-6 zoning classification.

Approval was given on a recommendation by the Public Transportation Commission to increase bus fares effective Jan. 1. The changes in fares involve an increase for elderly/handicapped from 15 cents to 20 cents per rider and for regular passengers from 35 cents to 40 cents per rider.

The council conducted a public hearing on the Small Cities Community Development program, involving the city's fourth submission of a pre-application for funding to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Wyatt said the main reason the city has been turned down previously has resulted from the city being unable to spend local CD funds as required by HUD. He added that HUD has again changed its threshold requirements to stipulate that 95 percent of CD funds must be spent in order to apply for small cities funding and 100 percent of all of the funds must be encumbered.

Funding under the program would invlve the South Evans project area. Wyatt noted that if the pre-application is accepted by HUD, the city would then be invited to submit a complete application for consideration.

McGlohon acknowledged that the city has some reservations as to whether the new pre-application will be accepted.

The Rev. R. E. Griffin, pastor of Cornerstone Church, said that residents of the South Evans area, representing the South Evans Neighborhood Association, requested that the present project plans be amended to include the "wishes and desires" of the residents.

Griffin said that the residents propose that the area from S. Pitt Street westward to the railroad be zoned commercial in view of the number of commercial establishments now in that section. He also said that it is proposed that the area from S. Pitt Street eastward remain residential. A petition containing the names of 611 signatures was submitted.

Council members approved the bid of Carvir Corp. of Goldsboro in the amount of $8,000 for the purchase by the city of a used aerial bucket truck that will be utlized in trimming and pruning tall trees, painting traffic poles, and replacing lights in street lamps, among other uses. Wyatt said that the city has had to pay Greenville Utilities for use of its aerial vehicle in the past.

A $12,724.60 bid submitted by Traffic Engineers Supply Co. of Alexandria, Va. for traffic signal equipment at 14th Avenue and Farmville Boulevard was also approved.

ElectriCities Asks Increase Suspension

RALEIGH — ElectriCities of North Carolina today asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to suspend a 10 percent wholesale rate increase sought by Virginia Electric and Power Co. for the full five months permitted by law.

VEPCO, in November, filed a request for an $18.5 million annual increase in rates it charges municipalities — such as Greenville — that purchase power at wholesale and resell it at retail to their own residents and customers.

In announcing its filing, VEPCO said its proposed increase in wholesale rates would be offset by a higher projected savings in nuclear fuel costs, prompting the company to attempt to claim an overall rate reduction.

"VEPCO's attempt to make a 10 percent rate hike seem to be a rate reduction is totally absurd," ElectriCities executive director Ralph W. Shaw said.

ElectriCities also cited the findings of an FERC Administrative Judge in June 1980, recommending that the FERC initiate a, "full, formal and public investigation," into VEPCO's management practices.

Among the reasons the judge listed in support of his recommendation was, "the utility's persistent inability to bring its nuclear units under construction into commercial service on a realistic and reliable timetable."

Ohio Is Trying To Halt The Sale Of Fake Honey

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Agents for the Ohio Department of Agriculture are trying to halt the sales of a batch of corn syrup labeled as 100 percent pure honey.

State officials have embargoed shipments of Miss Kathy's Honey in Cincinnati and Portsmouth, but don't know how much of the bogus sweet stuff has been brought into the state or sold to consumers.

Shipments also have been seized by federal and state officials in other eastern states, including 1,000 cases in North Carolina.

"(But) it's very apparent that seizing the product has not stopped it," said Hayward Mayfield, the director of the Federal Drug Administration for Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Chemists for Ohio's agriculture department said the jars of honey actually contain between 65 percent to 88 percent corn syrup. They sell for about $3.40 cents for two pounds — "a good buy for honey, but a lot to pay for corn syrup," said John Stackhouse, the agency's director.

Nothing is unhealthy about the product, however, he said.

The corn syrup is packaged and labeled as honey in Dekalb and Philadelphia, Miss. Ohio officials are working with investigators in North Carolina, Kentucky and Illinois.

B.J. Hoover, director of the Division of Foods, Dairies and Drugs, said he was alerted to the problem when a Mansfield grocer reported that two men tried to sell what they called honey for a very low price — but cash only.

"The product is hard to track down because it's mostly sold in little roadside markets," Hoover said.

Agents are trying to persuade grocers to remove the product from their shelves when it's found, Hoover said. Agents cannot take the jars from store shelves until the contents are tested. By the time the process is finished, usually two weeks, the honey often is sold already, he said.

According to Hoover, Delano Roe of Pomroyton, Ky., distributed Miss Kathy's Honey in Ohio. Roe promised to remove the product from the state after the department sought an injunction against him in Hamilton County Municipal Court, he said.

Despite having a pistol pulled on federal investigators visiting one of the Mississippi packing locations, there's little likelihood the case will take precedence over drug enforcement business, Mayfield said.

There will be no court action, "until I can convince the Bureau of Foods, the associate commissioner for regulatory affairs and our general counsel office," he said.

Area Schools Do Well On Tests

Pitt County and Greenville City students taking the 1980 competency test scored favorably compared to the state and regional average scores, according to figures released Thursday.

Eighty-nine percent of the 765 Pitt County juniors taking the test for the first time passed the reading section, compared to a state average of 92.5 percent and a regional average of 88.4 percent. Eighty-two percent of the juniors taking the math section passd it, compared with 89.4 percent for the state and 85.0 percent for the region.

Ninety-one percent of the 403 Greenville city juniors taking the reading section for the first time passed it. This figure is nearly equal with the state figure and exceeds the regional average by three percentage points. In math, 87 percent of the students passed, two points high than the regional average but two points lower than the state average.

School officials are pleased with the competency results. Pitt County, whose reading scores are up from last year, had a larger number of students taking the test and passing it than ever before.

According to Greenville City Schools Superintendent Glenn Cox, a full report on the city schools results will be presented at the school board meeting set for Monday night.

The region the scores were compared with consists of 17 eastern North Carolina counties.

Two Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $2,100 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:25 p.m. collision on Pitt Street, 100 feet south of the Arthur Street intersection, involving a parked car owned by David Lee Williams of 1712 South Pitt St. and a car driven by Albert Lee Sherrod of 1205 Clark St.

Investigators estimated damage at $800 to the Williams car and $700 to the Sherrod vehicle.

Cars driven by Bette Lavonne Bates of 200 South Library St. and Clyde William Spear Jr. of 402A Second St. collided about 8:10 a.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Library Streets, causing $200 damage to the Bates car and $400 damage to the Spear vehicle.

Hold Brothers For Extortion

WACO, Texas (AP) — Two brothers have been arraigned on federal charges in connection with telephone calls demanding $80,000 in cash in exchange for the location of grocery items supposedly laced with strychnine.

U.S. Magistrate Roy Rutland on Thursday set the bond of Steven Van Howard, 24, and David Wayne Howard, 21, at $100,000 on charges of interference with interstate commerce. Police Chief Larry Scott said state charges of attempted theft of more than $10,000 were being prepared.

Two other men also have been accused of participating in the alleged plot, in which a telephone caller said food had been poisoned in three of the H.E.B. chain's six Waco stores.

Officials of the chain said they considered the poisoning claim a hoax, but closed six Waco stores for 3½ days and replaced 680 tons of food rather than take the chance. Attempts to arrange ransom drops were unsuccessful.

Federal charges were prepared against Daniel Ray Glenn, 23, but he remained hospitalized Thursday for treatment of a diabetic condition, officials said.

A fourth man, David Lloyd Foster, 19, was arrested Wednesday and arraigned on state charges. Peace Justice John Cabaniss set Foster's bond Wednesday at $100,000.

Greg Rampton, an FBI agent from Austin, said he agreed with H.E.B. officials that the extortion call was a hoax.

"There is no indication that there was any poison in the food at any time," Rampton said. The federal charge carries a possible $10,000 fine and 20 years in prison, and the state charge a maximum penalty of ten years and a $5,000 fine.

Publisher To Be Retiring

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Ralph J. Cooper, 34, of Grafton, W. Va., will succeed J.D. Fitz as publisher of the Morganton News Herald. Fitz, publisher of the newspaper for the past 20 years, will retire Dec. 31.

"Fitz's great talent, outgoing personality, sense of humor and deep conviction of community service have been clearly evident during the 35 years he has been part of the News Herald Team," said Roy H. Park, president of Park Newspapers.

Park purchased The News Herald last year.

Fitz will continue as a member of The News Herald Publishing Company board of directors, said Park, adding that "he will provide valuable input on what the News Herald can do for the betterment of the Morganton area."

Cooper is moving to Morganton from the Mountain Statesman in Grafton, a six-day-a-week newspaper with a circulation of 3,500 and an extensive offset printing operation.

Fitz, 64, joined The News Herald in 1945 as advertising manager. In 1949 he became assistant publisher, in 1955 general manager and publisher in 1960. He also serves as publisher of the Valdese News.

Fitz previously worked at the Reidsville Review, the Greensboro News-Record, the Shelby Daily Star, the Northwestern Press in North Wilkesboro, the Daily Independent in Kannapolis and the Cleveland Times.

Cooper is a native of Lewistown, Pa., and a graduate of Penn State University.

His newspaper experience began in 1972 after being an officer in the Army.

Given Authority To Ban Open Burning Practice

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a decision that eventually may affect all 100 North Carolina counties, the Environmental Management Commission gave the state's Division of Environmental Management authority Thursday to ban open burning in 13 eastern counties.

The ruling by state officials comes in the wake of problems caused in the eastern counties by heavy smoke from burning debris containing organic matter, including peat.

Environmental experts said the smoke was causing severe visibility problems on highways, harming people with respiratory problems and was interrupting normal business activity.

State officials said Thursday that authority to ban burning could be applied to emergencies in other counties if the need arises.

On Dec. 5, Director Neil Grigg had ordered a limit on any new fires related to land clearing in 13 eastern counties. The order cited air quality violations and adverse effects on populated areas.

Those counties include Chowan, Hyde, Dare, Tyrell, Washington, Carteret, Beaufort, Bertie, Perquimans, Gates, Pasquotank, Camden, and Carrituck.

Grigg cited a state statute which gives the agency authority to review and withdraw permission for open burning.

Member P. Greer Johnson objected to giving Grigg the authority to declare a burning ban. Greer said the agency should not have power to prohibit anything on a county-by-county basis. He was the only member who voted against the resolution.

Howard N. Lee, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, said deputy secretary E. Walton Jones will be sent to Hyde County next week to discuss problems resulting from the heavy smoke.

Lee also has scheduled a public hearing on the problems Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Hyde County Courthouse.

In other action, the commission instructed the Environmental Management Division to protest the drilling of two wells on Navy land in Virginia because it might affect the North Carolina water supply. The board also asked the staff to recommend alternatives for dealing with the problem, including meetings between the two state governments and possible litigation.

A Weekend Of Meteors

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mother Nature will be lighting her Christmas tree this weekend with one of the best meteor showers of the year.

Most of the meteors in the Geminid shower will be white, but Jim Manning of the Morehead Planetarium in Chapel Hill says many also are yellow and some display blue, red, orange or green hues.

"Under dark, ideal conditions as many as 30 to 50 meteors, sometimes more, can be seen in an hour," he said.

The best time to see the shower in North Carolina will be late Saturday or very early Sunday morning, Manning said.

Geminids, which means children of Gemini, appear to streak across the sky in the direction of the constellation Gemini. Although Gemini is visible from sunrise to sunset, the best time to see the constellation is when it passes overhead about 2 a.m.

For viewing the meteor shower, Manning suggests choosing a dark, open area away from direct lighting. He also suggests stretching out on the ground with feet generally pointing southeast before 2 a.m., or southwest after 2 a.m.

"The Geminids will be falling all night long, and also in smaller numbers for several nights before and after Dec. 13 and 14," Manning said. "And since we're so near the winter solstice (when the sun is farthest south of the equator), we have the longest nights of the year to watch."

This year, the winter solstice occurs at 11:56 a.m. on Dec. 21. That day marks the official start of winter and it is the day with the smallest amount of daylight.

Says Reagan Advisor Spurred Salvador Violence

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comments by President-elect Ronald Reagan's foreign policy advisers endangered the life of the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador and contributed to the murders of American nuns in that strife-torn country, a high-ranking State Department official charges.

Patricia M. Derian, assistant secretary of state for human rights, accused Reagan transition team members of making "imprudent statements" that played down U.S. support for human rights and thus encouraged increased brutality by right-wing forces.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Thursday, Ms. Derian particularly criticized one transition team member for indicating that the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, Robert E. White, might be fired because he supported economic reforms in that country.

"In El Salvador, I believe our ambassador's life was endangered," she said. "Others were emboldened to take action that led to the deaths of some individuals."

Ms. Derian said she was referring to the murders of four American women, three of them Roman Catholic nuns, in El Salvador last week and the assassinations of six Salvadoran leftist leaders last month.

The killings were allegedly carried out by right-wing terrorists in the tiny Central American country that has been increasingly torn by fighting between right- and left-wing forces.

Ms. Derian's statement was the sharpest public criticism yet of the Reagan transition team by a high-ranking Carter administration official.

Although claiming right-wing groups had been encouraged by Reagan's election and remarks by some of his advisers, she added, "there's nothing on Governor Reagan's record ... that would give assurance that the U.S. is going to throw in with the rightists."

Fred Ikle, an aide to Reagan foreign policy adviser Richard V. Allen, termed Ms. Darien's remarks "totally irresponsible" and themselves a danger to the U.S. ambassador's life, considering El Salvador's violent instability.

"If someone is to be withdrawn, why would that endanger his life," Ikle said.

The foreign policy aide also noted that authorities still do not know who carried out the murders.

The Washington Post, in today's editions, reports that a special U.S. presidential commission sent to El Salvador last weekend has found no clear-cut evidence linking Salvadoran security forces to the murders of the four Americans.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying the commission probably would recommend that President Carter resume sending economic and military aid to the Central American country. Last week, the State Department announced it was suspending $25 million in aid until it could learn if military forces had taken part in the murders.

Meanwhile, James Brady, Reagan press spokesman, called Ms. Derian's comments "farfetched" and "uncharacteristic of a State Department official."

Earlier this week, Ambassador White accused members of the transition team of "weakening my authority to carry out policy" by leaking a report that criticized White's support for the Salvadoran government's land reforms and bank nationalizations.

According to today's Washington Post, Lawrence Pezzullo, U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua, also claims his role has been hurt by the leaking of the report.

The report, written by Pedro San Juan, a Reagan adviser on Latin American affairs, said ambassadors "are not supposed to function in the capacity of social reformers and advocates of new theories of social change," The New York Times reported.

White was one of several ambassadors accused of improperly acting as "social reformers" slated for removal after Reagan takes office Jan. 20.

The leaking of the San Juan report also brought an official State Department protest Wednesday, when a department spokesman said "statements by persons who do not represent the incoming administration but who claim to do so have complicated an already difficult crisis situation in El Salvador."

In the interview, Ms. Derian expounded on that criticism in what appears to be emerging as the first major rift in relations between Reagan and Carter officials in the transition period.

"The thing that mystifies me is who speaks for them," she said. "They all talk too much. ... I'm dumbfounded by the reckless quality of not only this talking but people who pop up all over the world and purport to speak for the (incoming) administration."

She said the San Juan report was interpreted in El Salvador as the position of the U.S. government when "all it was was aggrandizement of a low-level person who has no (government) position but is simply a worker on the transition team."

Allen and other top transition officials have urged people listed as Reagan's foreign policy advisers to avoid public comment to prevent their personal remarks from being misinterpreted as the policy of the incoming administration.

Ms. Derian said she hoped some of the confusion would be eliminated when Reagan appoints his top foreign policy officials, but she added that his advisers now "look disorderly, undisciplined, out of control (and) unreliable. ...

"What gives me a cold chill is (the question) 'Are these the people we're going to have to rely on for the conduct of our foreign policy?' (If they are), we're going to be in disastrous trouble."

N.C. Prosecutors Say New Crime Law Needed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State prosecutors say they plan to recommend legislation that would make a person who helped plan a felony crime as guilty as the person who actually committed the crime.

Such a law could be used in drug conspiracy trials, said Wake District Attorney J. Randolph Riley.

The proposal follows a Dec. 2 ruling by the state Supreme Court that a person cannot be convicted as a principal to a felony unless the person was present during the crime. At most, the court said, the person can be convicted as an accessory before the fact.

The ruling came in a case involving James Lenard Small, 36, of Red Springs. The state Supreme Court ruled a Superior Court judge erred in instructing a jury that it could convict Small of first-degree murder on the grounds that he hired someone to kill his wife.

The court held that a conviction of accessory to the fact and a life-in-prison sentence would stand for Small.

"That poses a problem with major drug conspiracies in which a person doesn't actually ever lay his hands on any drugs, but masterminds and is reponsible for the drug traffic organization," Riley said.

He said the executive committee of the state District Attorneys' Association has decided to ask the 1981 General Assembly to enact a law abolishing the distinction between an accessory before the fact and a principal to a felony.

The proposed law also would make all persons who are accessories to the fact guilty as principals.

In federal court, all coconspirators are equally liable for all other coconspirators' actions in a crime. North Carolina courts had interpreted the law in a similar fashion and the state Supreme Court had followed suit.

Until Oct. 1, 1979, state law held that a person could be convicted both as a principal and an accessory to the same crime. But the law was changed so that now a person charged as the principal may not be convicted as accessory before the fact.

Riley said there was a chance some persons who were no at the scene of the crime but were convicted as principals in a crime since the new law became effective can challenge their convictions. The district attorney's group also plans to call for repeal of the 1979 law.

Commission Is Job Service

Employers are paying for the world's greatest employment service, the public job service which has 2,300 local offices nationwide, according to James E. Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the N. C. Employment Security Commission.

"Many employers are helping make Job Service more effective by taking part in a cooperative venture, the Job Service Improvement Program," he said. "Local Employer Advisory Committees sit down with local Job Service personnel and let them know what their needs are and how Job Service can help fill those needs. This results in better communication between employers and Job Service, as well as better service to employees."

The Pitt County Employer Advisory Committee has been active for more than a year under the chairmanship of Mrs. Betty Laws, personnel manager of McGraw Edison Corporation, he said. This month the chair will be assumed by Jeff Sarvey, district supervisor for Stop 'N Go Stores.

The benefits to employers are both immediate and long-range. Some of the immediate advantages received are quality job applicants, rapid filling of job vacancies, and more personalized service in such areas as testing, labor market information (for Affirmative Action Plans), etc.

Some of the long-range benefits are business input into government, less reliance on government-subsidized jobs (because of a closer relationship between business and government), and lower unemployment insurance costs (due to more rapid placement of jobless workers).

"Make sure your business takes full advantage of all services provided by Job Service," Hannan said. "You may also wish to join the others who are participating as Employer Advisory Committee members by contacting Jeff Sarvey, chairman of the local committee at 758-2920 or me at 756-2686.

Religious Affiliation An Asset In Elections

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious affiliation apparently is an asset nowadays in winning a seat in the U.S. Congress. Indications are it usually has been, at least in the past for Protestants, but this time the figures suggest it across-the-board.

In the new 97th Congress, both Roman Catholics and Jews increased their share of seats, as they have generally over the last decade. Both now hold a slightly greater share of seats than their proportion of the population.

So also do Protestants, but shrinkingly and only as compared to active membership.

In short, the situation now is that for Catholics and Jews as well as Protestants, a bigger percentage of winners claim religious affiliation than is recorded for the population, implying a plus factor about it now in all three cases in gaining office.

While Protestants still strongly predominate in the incoming Congress, it's to a steadily lesser degree. They hold 355 or nearly 67 percent of the 535 seats.

But their proportion gradually has declined for the past decade, dropping from a total of about 400 seats, or 74 percent of them, in that period, and down this time a fraction of a percent through loss of nine seats.

In contrast through that period, Roman Catholics and Jews have increased their seats. With their gains this fall, Roman Catholics now hold an all-time high of 135 seats, or 25 percent of the total. This is up by 3 percent — 20 seats — over the decade, up six seats this time.

The number of Jews has more than doubled in a decade to a record 33 seats, about 6 percent of the total, with three additional seats won this time.

The breakdown of religious affiliation was compiled by the evangelicalfortnightly, Christianity Today, which in recent years has regularly kept tab on the religious balance in Congress.

Compared to their higher share of Congress, Catholics make up about 23 percent of the U.S. population, Jews about 3 percent.

Protestants, in active affiliation, are about 55 percent of the population. But since their churches more consistently drop those not active, the part of the population of Protestant background is considered higher than the statistics show, estimated at about 70 percent

In the November elections, about 17 percent of the seats in both houses of Congress changed hands, and about a third of the new faces are Roman Catholic, 27 in the House, eight in the Senate. Considering the incumbents removed, however, the overall Catholic gain was six.

Jews captured seven of the change-over seats in the House and two in the Senate, but again considering losses, the net Jewish gain was three, up four in the House, and down one in the Senate.

Among Protestant denominations, the Episcopal Church, fourth in size up U.S. Protestant bodies, moved ahead to match the United Methodist Church, second largest Protestant body, in holding the most seats. Each now holds 72 of them, Episcopalians up one, Methodists down three.

Southern Baptists, the denomination of President Jimmy Carter and the country's largest Protestant body, dropped three seats, down to 55.

But the biggest losers this time were the Unitarian-Universalists, who lost a fourth of their previous 12 seats, now down to nine. Presbyterians lost five seats, down to 55.

Lutherans gained two, now up to 22 Gainers of one each among Protestants, besides Episcopalians, included Mormons, now 11; Churches of Christ, 6, and United Church of Christ, 16.

Retaining the same numbers were the Christian Church (Disciples), 6 seats; Christian Science, 3; Quaker, 2, and Eastern Orthodoxy, 5. Eleven smaller denominations kept one each.

Nineteen House and Senate members listed themselves as "Protestant" or "Christian" without specifying a denomination — the same as in the previous Congress. Seven others listed themselves as religiously "unaffiliated," compared to six before.

CHURCH CANTATA

WALSTONBURG — The presentation of "His Love Reaching," a cantata by Ronn Huff and Bill and Gloria Gaither will be presented here at the Walstonburg Christian Church by the Adult Choir Wednesday, Dec. 17, at 7:30 p.m. and again at 11 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 21. The choir is directed by Tim Corbett. The public is invited to attend.

It snowed yesterday and when it stopped, I walked along the creek in a world of frosty splendor. The woods were hushed in majestic stillness, and I tread softly. A jay screeched overhead, and bending trees shivered stealthily, with squeaking, icecoated branches. The falls at the curve of the creek stood immobilized with hoarfrost and icicles, but bending near I heard soft and surely the murmur of the moving creek beneath the icebound surface.
It came to me, how like that creek, my faith has been. At times this faith has been covered by rimes of doubt and selfishness. Often it has been embittered by anguish and despair. But always under that glacial exterior there coursed a stream of consciousness that knew no turning from God — and the things I had been taught from childhood.
How glad I am my parents took me to church and brought me up with such a sure knowledge of God's love that it sustained me even when I tried to turn from His ways.

FOCUS

Following Phileas Fogg

In a famous 1873 novel by Jules Verne, an Englishman named Phileas Fogg made a fantastic bet that he could travel around the world in 80 days. Starting this Sunday, a group of travelers plans to retrace Fogg's fictional journey. The trip will begin in England, where the group will leave Fogg's London address by horse-drawn carriage. Traveling by train, ship, airplane and elephant, the 1980 travelers will circle the globe more quickly than Fogg. The journey is scheduled to last 58 days, at a cost of $15,000 per person. A London travel agency is sponsoring the trip to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Verne's death.

DO YOU KNOW — What was Jules Verne's nationality?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Strom Thurmond represents South Carolina in the Senate.

Life As It's Lived

Differences In Ability And The Expectations

By GAIL MICHAELS

The biggest problem Phillip and I have as parents is striking some balance between our expectation concerning Meg's behavior and her ability to live up to these expectations.

Meg already has a well-developed moral code. This doesn't keep her from misbehaving, but it does compel her to tell on herself.

One afternoon last week I went outside to compliment her on the way she and her friend were playing.

"Whew," she said after I had finished this well-rehearsed bit of positive reinforcement. "I thought you were coming out to get after me for squashing berries on the patio."

"I didn't see any berries."

"I know. We turned on the hose to wash them away, but we hid the water by putting all the toys over it."

As compulsive as she is about acknowledging, in one way or another, our established rules, she actively resists any new additions to the list. "You want me to be perfect," she tells me. "You know that's impossible."

"You can try."

"I did try one day. It's just no use."

In spite of her attitude, I make an attempt to be fair in disciplining her. If possible, I anticipate trouble and explain what I expect from her before the fact.

Rarely is she cooperative. If all other arguments against the new structure fail, she brings up her defective memory.

Now it's a puzzle to me how a child who can repeat with alarming accuracy any slip of the tongue I've made in the last three years cannot remember a simple instruction. But she insists that this is the case. When I told her the night before Thanksgiving that her grandparents were arriving very late that evening and that she was not to disturb them the next morning, she immediately said, "But I might forget."

It made no difference that I refused to accept this as an excuse. The next morning I heard the thud of footie pajamas as she bounded off the sofa bed and scampered to her room, where her grandparents were staying.

I was there almost as fast. "I told you not to bother Grandmommy!"

"Well, I didn't remember that."

"I don't believe that."

"But it's true. Besides, Grnadmommy doesn't mind, do you Grandmommy?"

I ignored my mother's muffled reply. "Yes, she does mind. Now you come out of here and leave her alone."

"But it's my room."

"Not today it isn't. Come out immediately!"

She sat in the hall grumbling to herself until her grandmother emerged from the room.

"I'm sorry you got into trouble," my mother said.

"Oh it's all right. Mommies do have to try to teach their children right from wrong."

My mother was impressed. "I'm glad you understand that."

Meg shrugged. "Yes, but it doesn't mean I have to learn it."

Program Graduation Is Held

Twenty-seven inmates from several institutions within a 26-county area of eastern North Carolina graduated from the Pre-Release and Aftercare program in a graduation ceremony Wednesday held at and hosted by the Bachelor-Benedict Club in Greenville.

Men attending classes conducted during the course of the program are housed in the prison unit near Williamston and commute to Greenville each day.

Mrs. Ann Maxwell, training coordinator for the program, notes the Wednesday graduating class is the 18th to be held since the program's inception two years ago. Pat Higgins is director of Pre-Release and Aftercare, located at 108 Dexter Street.

Dr. Kenneth Taylor, professor, School of Social Work and Correctional Services, East Carolina University, was guest speaker. In his remarks, Taylor related his friendship with a boxer who served a prison term for killing a man. He told how his friend, when released from prison, became active in helping others because he had discovered that his own way of starting over was by giving himself, his time and efforts to other people.

The graduates presented entertainment in a program of seasonal music, and the meal for inmates, their families and friends was provided by Burroughs Wellcome.

Speight Heads Industry Group

The board of directors of Greenville Industries Inc., meeting Thursday, elected Greenville attorney W. W. Speight as the organization's new president and director.

The board's action fills the vacancy created by the death last year of former Mayor S. Eugene West, who had served as president and director since Greenville Industries was revitalized in the late 1960's.

Speight has served the organization as general counsel since the revitalization. Charles Horne is currently vice president.

Officers and directors of Greenville Industries, the stock of which is held by area citizens, will be elected or re-elected at the annual meeting next spring. If Speight is re-elected president, a new general counsel will be named at that meeting.

During Thursday's session, board members discussed the possibilities of selling timber on the 250-acre Hopkins Farm site located on Industrial Boulevard north of the city. The board decided to have Reese Hart, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, secure a plat of the property through the Regional Development Institute to determine how the land should be developed, how much timber should be cut, and the route for a road to be cut for property access.

Board members also voted to appropriate $1,800 for nationwide industrial media advertising of the area's prospective industry sites. The advertising is done through the regional marketing program of the N.C. Department of Commerce, which provides matching funds for the program.

Farm Supply Store Robbed

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating the Wednesday night break-in of Warren's Farm Supply on Highway 903 that resulted in the theft of some $8,400 worth of merchandise.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the owners reported that 23 chain saws as well as an assortment of knives, pipe wrenches, axes, and two rifle scopes were taken from the firm.

According to the sheriff, entrance to the building was gained after a hole was cut in the roof. The firm's cash register was forced open but no money had been left in the machine, he noted. Damage to the roof was estimated at some $200, while damage to the cash register and several locked cases which were forced open was set at $300.

The break-in was discovered Thursday morning when the firm was opened for business.

Tree Theft Is Reported

Billy Ray Taylor, 24, of Rt. 8, Box 216, Greenville, was arrested by Pitt County deputies this week and charged with the theft of two cedar trees from the yard of a county resident.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Taylor was charged with the Monday night theft after William A. Robie of Rt. 5, Greenville reported that someone cut down two cedar trees which were growing in his front yard.

Sheriff Tyson said that Robie told officers that he heard an engine running and when he went outside his home to investigate, a vehicle pulled away from his property. He said he discovered then that the two trees had been cut down.

Value of the trees was set at $75 each, according to the sheriff.

A first appearance hearing for Taylor was set for Thursday in District Court here.

Barbee commented on an article, "Time Management: How to Control Time and Enjoy Your Life," appearing in "Tomorrow's Business Leaders," the FBLA organ. "In the world of work, good management of one's time is most important," Barbee said.

Compare Data From Voyager

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists studying data from Voyager 1's rendezvous with Saturn last month say winds rage as high as 1,118 mph across the ringed planet and temperatures fall as low as 334 degrees below zero.

They discussed their findings and tentative conclusions at a meeting of the American Geophysical Union here Thursday.

Virgil Kunde of the Goddard Space Flight Center said under the haze and clouds that make Saturn appear striped with gold and buff are layers of frozen ammonia. Beneath that are organic chemicals such as methane, ethane and acetylene.

Scientists have been conducting a computer analysis of thousands of photographs and instrument readings beamed back a billion miles through space by the unmanned space probe last month.

They say Saturn appears to be a cold, barren ball of hydrogen and helium surrounding an interior of electrically conduqting hydrogen frozen into solid metal and enveloping a much smaller core of rock.

The anaylsis also is focusing on the intricacies of Saturn's rings: the mysteriously "braided" triad of thin rings barely 60 miles across that had not been seen until the spacecraft's journey; the "D" ring, whose existence had not been confirmed until last month, lying close to the planet's cloud tops; and previously unknown tiny moons that orbit on either side of many of the rings.

The scientists also are studying Saturn's huge moon Titan. Although Voyager's television cameras could not see its surface, instruments have determined that the satellite — second largest in the solar system — may be composed of far more methane than had been previously thought.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today in relatively quiet trading, attracting some support after a three-week plunge.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 91 points since Nov. 20, rose 4.95 to 913.40.

Advances outnumbered declines by a margin of nearly 2-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Federal Reserve was to issue money supply and loan demand figures after the close of trading today, a report that is closely watched as an indicator of prospects for further Fed credit-tightening.

Monte Gordon at Dreyfus Corp. said trading activity has been restrained while investors await the Fed report. "We're really peering over the top of the wagon to see where the Indians are," Gordon said.

Although grain prices fell sharply again today, metal prices rose. As a result, commodity markets, under heavy pressure in recent days, steadied this morning. Analysts said that helped calm down the atmosphere in the stock market as well.

Apple Computer, a new issue that Wall Street has been awaiting for months, came to market today at $22 a share.

After the shares of the Cupertino, Calif. company, which makes personal computers, began trading in the over-the-counter market, they were quoted in the 28¼-28⅜ range.

General Motors was the most active NYSE issue, up ½ at 43⅛, in trading that included a block of 100,000 shares at 43.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.49 to 73.60 On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.65 at 321.34.

Volume on the Big Board reached 17.35 million shares over the first two hours, down from 26.74 million in the comparable period Thursday.

Mobil, which said today that the Department of Energy has selected its proposal for studies on the construction of a synthetic fuels plant to convert coal to gasoline, was up ¼ at 80½.

Other active Big Board prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, unchanged at 45½; International Business Machines, up ¼ at 64¾; and Texaco, up ⅜ at 46⅛.

Leonardo Codex Could Bring A Record Price

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Some foreign museum is expected to pay a record price of more than $9 million today for the only manuscript by Leonardo da Vinci in private hands, the Codex Leicester.

The 36-page scientific notebook, written in the neat, right-to-left "mirror" script of the Italian Renaissance genius and illustrated with 360 of his drawings, was put up for sale at Christie's auction house by the sixth Earl of Leicester.

The earl needs the money to help pay inheritance taxes on the estate of his grandfather, the fifth earl, and to keep up Holkham Hall, the family's Palladian mansion in Norfolk county.

The bidding, at the end of a morning sale of Old Master paintings, was not expected to last more than two minutes. There was speculation that the successful bidder would be an American, Japanese or West German museum.

Arts Minister Norman St. John-Stevas tried unsuccessfully to persuade Lord Leicester and the trustees of his grandfather's estate to sell the manuscript to the nation, but they decided they would get more by auctioning it off.

British museums were not thought to have enough funds to participate in the auction. Italy, which had hoped to repatriate the manuscript, dropped out after the Nov. 23 earthquake, when Arts Minister Oddo Biasini said aid to the victims had priority.

The Codex was found in Rome in 1690 by an Italian, Giuseppe Ghezzi. He sold it in 1717 to Thomas Coke (pronounced Cook), who became the first Earl of Leicester in 1744. It has been the property of the Leicester family ever since and has been translated several times and reproduced photographically.

The notebook consists of sheets of brown paper with the writing and drawings in darker brown ink. It is bound in 17th-century red morocco leather, measures about 9 by 12 inches, and is kept in a brown morocco box stamped with the Coke family's crest.

Compiled about 1508, when Leonardo was in his mid-50s, it explains his conclusions on the earth, moon, water and astronomy. It expounds his vision of the world as a "great living body, crisscrossed by circulatory channels, breathing with the tides and in a state of flux," said Martin Kemp, an arts lecturer at Glasgow University and expert on Leonardo.

Kemp said the notebook occupies a very special place in Leonardo's surviving works because it complements and amplifies his paintings. For example, he said, it helps one understand the landscape in the background of the "Mona Lisa."

Polish Bishops Urge Caution

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Bishops of Poland's powerful Roman Catholic church warned today against efforts to halt national renewal and expressed "deep concern for the future of our motherland."

The statement came as Poland's communist government sought to persuade its Warsaw Pact allies that it can control the independent labor movement, while the NATO allies warned Moscow of the "appalling" Western consequences it would face if it intervenes in Poland.

"There is a decisive need to counteract all attempts to stop the national renewal, to set the community at variance and abuse existing difficulties for aims alien to the nation's good," the bishops said.

The appeal came in a communique issued after a Warsaw meeting of bishops of the church, which claims some 90 percent of Poland's 35.5 million citizens as members.

It appeared to be a call for moderation and cooperation by both the Polish government and the country's new independent labor movement, Solidarity.

A pastoral letter prepared for reading in churches throughout Poland this Sunday warned that Poles "are in the throes of yet another historical test, another experience, another tremor and at the same time another rising high to prove national maturity."

Dunn Runs In National Meet

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central does not have a cross country team but does have one of the best — if not the best — female cross country runner in North Carolina. And she's only a sophomore.

Because Farmville lacks a cross country team, Karen Dunn goes without the luxury of a few regular season meets which enable runners to tune up for the more important state meets. Instead, Dunn was left to open her 1980 cross country season with the State Junior Olympic meet in Raleigh.

It didn't seem to bother her. She just went out and finished first, defeating in the process the state champ and runnerup.

One week later Dunn returned to Raleigh, this time for an Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) cross country meet.

This time she was ninth, out of 80 runners. That finish qualified her for the Regional AAU meet in Atlanta. There she finished first again, outrunning more than 30 other runners from across the south.

The latest chapter in Dunn's amazing cross county trek will be written Saturday afternoon when at 1 p.m. the Farmville sophomore toes the starting line in Cheyenne, Wyoming, at the Athletic Congress's National Cross Country meet.

It is an elite group Dunn joins in Cheyenne. The Athletic Congress invites 12 runners from 15 regions across the country in five age groups. Dunn estimates that there will be between 60 and 80 runners in her 15-to-16 age group.

Not all of the runners make the trip. Many times the costs are too high for a high school girl and and her parents to make the trip. For awhile Dunn thought she might be in that number.

"I didn't know if I was going out there or not. But I got some help from people around here," Dunn said. The Farmville Civic Club squashed Dunn's concern by raising the necessary $1,200 to send Dunn and her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Clyde Dunn, to the meet.

And now there, her coach, Clem Williams, is confident of her chances.

"She'll be in the top five," said Williams, a teacher and coach at Farmville Middle School. "You've got to understand that the ones who go out there are the cream of the crop. But she'll do all right."

Dunn, however, is more reserved about her chances. "I just hope I do real well out there," she said. "I don't want to disappoint all the people back here. I'll just try as my hardest and hope for the best."

Up to now her best has been just fine, thank you. And there is room for speculation that she has yet to run her best race. Only a sophomore, Dunn did not begin training seriously for cross country until this year.

"Coach (Clem) Williams wanted me to run but I wasn't interested in junior high," Dunn said. "I did run, but only for three months out of the year."

As an eighth grader, Dunn ended those three months by finishing 10th in the state.

Last year, as a freshman at Farmville, Dunn ran the mile and two-mile with the same skill and ability she runs cross country, finishing fifth in both in the state meet.

Williams, however, believes this is only the beginning. "I predict that before she's through she'll be close to the state record, if she doesn't break it," he said. "That's up there with Julia Shea, and that's world class."

This fall, however, Dunn has concentrated on training for cross country. The training has been as intense as any she's done.

In the early morning hours Dunn, whose brothers Ted and David were football stars at Farmville, arises and runs from three to four miles. Then she does speed work, one to two miles worth of quarter- and half-miles.

In the afternoon she practices basketball. Once she returns from this, her last cross country meet of the season, she will be a starter for Coach Hilda Worthington.

For now, though, she is wed to cross country for a few more days.

"This is the first year I've really run serious and it feels good," Dunn said. "I feel good about running and training now, more so than I have in the past.

"Now when I don't feel like running I still do, especially when you know you've got a chance to go somewhere. That makes me train a little harder."

That, according to Williams, is what sets Dunn apart from other cross country runners.

"She pays the price," said Williams, who along with Worthington, has carefully watched over Dunn's progress. "She a natural talent and she has great people backing her. She's the smoothest runner and the most relaxed runner I've ever seen.

"But mainly she's a hard-nosed kid who knows what she wants."

Penn State Next Foe For Bucs

East Carolina University's Pirates hit the road again to start a five-game road trip that will include two tournaments. Saturday night, however, they will start the series by meeting Penn State, one of the up-and-coming powers of the East.

Penn State opened its season with three straight wins before bowing to Nebraska earlier this week, 75-50. The Nittany Lions earlier beat Ursinus, 64-56; Indiana State (on the road), 101-68, and Southern Methodist, 61-54. They stand 2-0 on their home court.

And it's how they stand that worries East Carolina coach Dave Odom.

"Their lineup is not big," Odom said. "It is HUGE! They start 6-10, 215; 6-9, 232; 6-8, 240; 6-7, 207, and 6-3, 185. This has got to be one of the biggest teams in the country in terms of weight and height."

"I don't think that their loss will help us. Sometimes when a team loses, they start questioning what they're doing wrong and it does carry over. But I don't think that will happen with this team."

One reason for Odom's thinking this way is that the squad is a veteran one. Four of the five starters returned from last year. They include guard Rich Fetter, 6-7, with a 15.0 point average (through three games), guard Mike Edlman, with an 8.0 average; 6-8 forward Mike Lang, 7.3 ppg, with 8.7 rebounds, and 6-9 center Frank Brickowski, hitting 16.3 points and pulling off 6.5 rebounds.

The fifth starter is 6-10 freshman Dick Mumma, scoring 5.3 points a game at his forward spot.

"They don't play that fast a tempo. I said that about Maine, too, and that turned out to be a joke. We made the wrong decision (to run) there."

Odom said that during the practice sessions between Monday night's game with Berry and the Saturday contest with the Lions, the Pirates planned to try out some moves in the lineup, to see how they work.

"We're going to experiment some. Playing Penn State is much like playing Duke last year. We changed some things around to get a little more bulk in there, and we may do that this time. I don't know for sure, but we don't want to get beaten up phyically in the first half."

Odom said the Pirates would probably use much more zone defenses against the Nittany Lions than they've used in other games this year. "We've been straight man-to-man all year, and that (a zone) might give them some problems. And we've got to be as competitive as we can on the boards."

Odom looks for Penn State to put up a straight man defense. "They will be very physical with a lot of body-checking. We have to be able to shoot from outside, but we don't want to back down on the inside game either."

Odom is hopeful that the five day layoff from game play between Monday and Saturday will help too. It's the longest period since the season opened.

East Carolina has three players in double figures as it takes a 3-1 record into the game. Barry Wright leads with a 13.8 mark, followed by Mark McLaurin's 10.8 and Michael Gibson's 10.3. Tom Szymanski is the leading rebounder with 8.5 per game.

"These next five games are really going to be tough," Odom said. "I'd like to be able to come back with at least two wins in them. Of course, we're going to be trying to win them all. And it is possible that we could win them all. But it's also possible that we could lose them all."

Following the game, the Pirates are off for a week before playing in the Iron Duke Classic. There, and in the Elm City Classic in New Haven, Conn., just after Christmas, the Pirates will be attempting to do what no other ECU team has done since the school entered Division I of the NCAA — win an invitational basketball tournament.

Brewers Seek Simmons OK On Deal To Get Him

DALLAS (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers were poised to acquire veteran catcher Ted Simmons from the St. Louis Cardinals at baseball's winter meetings today.

The only thing holding up the multi player deal was the need for Simmons' approval and his agent, LaRue Harcourt, has placed a $1 million price tag on that.

Harcourt met into the night Thursday with Harry Dalton, general manager of the Brewers after Milwaukee and St. Louis agreed on the basic structure of the trade.

Because he is a 10-year veteran with the last five years on the same team, Simmons holds veto power over the transaction. And Harcourt wasn't surrendering that item easily.

If Simmons agrees to the transaction, Milwaukee would also receive reliever Rollie Fingers, obtained by the Cardinals on Monday, and pitcher Pete Vuckovich. In exchange, St. Louis would get a number of players including outfielder Sixto Lezcano and pitcher Lary Sorensen.

The Brewers reportedly also would give up outfielder David Green of the Dominican Republic, one of their prize minor league prospects.

Harcourt's price for Simmons' approval could be reduced and it may be that St. Louis and Milwaukee would splyt the cost. A similiar arrangment allowed the Cards to trade another Harcourt client, Ken Reitz, to the Chicago Cubs earlier this week. In that deal, St. Louis received reliever Bruce Sutter and that made Fingers expendable.

Simmons was angered over the Cardinal signing of free agent catcher Darrell Porter on the eve of the winter baseball meetings and demanded a trade.

If it comes off, the Simmons trade would be the third major deal completed by the Cardinals this week, following the 11-player Fingers trade with San Diego and the four-player transaction with the Cubs for Sutter.

Harcourt met with Brewers General Manager Harry Dalton for 2½ hours Thursday night and resolved nothing in the Simmons case. After the meeting, Dalton told the press that he would get back to the Cardinals tonight for further discussions.

Should the Brewers-Cardinals deal fall through, Milwaukee has another direction in which to turn.

A source disclosed that the world champion Philadelphia Phillies hae offered the Brewers four players for Lezcano. The Phils are willing to part with starter Randy Lerch, relievers Dickie Noles and Ron Reed and minor league pitching prospect Scott Munninghoff.

There were no major trades completed Thursday with the major business at the meeting centering around the American League rejection of Ohio businessman Edward DeBartolo's bid to purchase the Chicago White Sox.

The vote of the 14 American League clubs was 11-3 against admitting the 71-year-old shopping center magnate into their exclusive club.

Rose took six of the 13 weights, including four by pins and one by a forfeit. Rocky Mount's seven wins included three pins.

Rose, now 0-5, plays host to Farmville Central next Thursday.

It's nitty-gritty time for our folks on the panel of experts. We're down to our final picks of the season: the 15 bowl games.

Rick Scoppe is the leader going into these last games, and he's hoping that his onegame lead over Tom Baines, and his three game margin over this writer will prove to be enough. The remaining members of our panel are out of the running.

Scoppe leads the standings as the final weeks open with a 109-33 record. Baines is next at 108-34, followed by this writer at 106-36.

In fourth place is Etha Allen at 99-43, followed by our guests with a 98-44 mark, and Joe Jenkins, 89-53. Our last guest during the regular season was Susan Nobles of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, who unfortunately posted the worst record among our guests, carding a 4-8 week.

For the final choices, we have brought back former Reflector sports writer Jim Kyle, who turned in the best record, 11-1, during the regular season.

Jenkins, who is out of it for this year — naturally — has already served warning that next year, he will return to the head of the pack.

We'll wait.

Of the 15 games, the first get underway this weekend, as McNeese State, the Southland Conference champs, hosts Southern Mississippi in the Independence Bowl. It's McNeese's bid for the big time, and our panel looks 'em over and calls Southern Miss the favorite.

Next up comes the Garden State, on Sunday, where Houston meets the Naval Academy. The Cougars get the nod from the panel on this one.

On Friday, Dec. 19, Brigham Young, the Western Athletic Conference champ, meets Southern Methodist in the Holiday Bowl. The passing attack of the BYU team impressed the panel, and they are the choice.

The first of the area teams in action, Maryland, goes up against Florida in the Tangerine Bowl on Saturday, Dec. 20. In that, the panel is torn, but goes with the Terps.

Friday, December 26, sees Ohio Stte and Penn State meeting in the Fiesta Bowl. The panel is more certain on this one, going with Ohio State.

On Saturday, Dec. 27, there is much more action, with three games on tap. Tulane and Arkansas meet in the Hall of Fame Bowl, with Arkansas the pick here. Missouri and Purdue collide in the Liberty Bowl, and we pick Missouri. Then, Nebraska and Mississippi State play in the Sun Bowl, with Nebraska our choice.

Pittsburgh and South Carolina play in the Gator Bowl on Monday, Dec. 29, and we like Pittsburgh in that one.

The Tar Heels of North Carolina and the Longhorns of Texas go at it on Wednesday, Dec. 31, in the Bluebonnet Bowl. The panel is split here, calling it a toss up.

The big day, Thursday, Jan. 1, finds the Big Four games. Alabama and Baylor meet in the Cotton Bowl, with our panel favoring Alabama. Florida State and Oklahoma are rematched in the Orange Bowl, with the panel rating this one a toss-up. Michigan and Washington face each other in the Rose Bowl, with Michigan favored, and Georgia and Norte Dame meet in the Sugar Bowl, with our panel picking Notre Dame.

Finally, on Friday, Jan. 2, Miami, Fla., meets Virginia Tech in the Peach Bowl. Miami, one of four ECU opponents playing in the bowls, is our choice.

We'll let you know the final outcome when it's all over.

Future Appears Brighter For Greene Central Girls Cagers

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

SNOW HILL — Things might not be going all that smooth for the Greene Central girls basketball team right now, but folks maybe better start looking over their shoulders. The Lady Rams may be moving up fast once they start on the climb.

Coach Jim Fulghum's 1980-81 version of the Lady Rams might not set the world on fire, especially with the likes of Alphelia Jenkins and her entourage at Southwest Edgecombe. But with a 6-2 center waiting in the wings, the future may lie with the Rams.

"We've played some good games and some bad ones," Fulghum said, "maybe more bad than good right now." The Lady Rams have a 2-4 record going into this Friday night's meeting with North Pitt.

"We've had a rough time trying to find the right combination. What works one night may not work the next. Of course, too, we've played three of the tougher teams on our schedule in Beddingfield, Charles B. Aycock and Southwest Edgecombe."

Fulghum said that the Greene Central ballhandling and the shooting haven't been as good as he had hoped they'd be at this point. With a 6-16 record last year, he felt that there would be some improvement this year.

It may still come, and he thinks it will, but so far the leadership role isn't there.

Letha Taylor, a 5-5 junior guard, was one of the leading scorers in the area last year, but she hasn't come close to performing like she did last year — yet. "Last year, we depended on Melody Ham to bring the ball down and set things up for us and for Letha," Fulghum said. "But she's gone now, and we haven't had anyone to come up with the leadership role that she held."

Joining Taylor are two other returning starters, also both juniors. (There are no seniors on the squad.) They are Sharon Suggs, a 5-7 forward/center, and Sylvia Swinson, a 5-6 forward.

Joining them are three others who saw some action last year. They are 5-7 forward Amy Kearney, 5-9 center Vicki Dupree, and 5-0 guard Wanda Atkinson. All three of these are also juniors.

There are 12 girls on the team alltogether. The others, however, lack experience before this year. They include one junior, 5-8 center Beverly Pitt, four sophomores, 5-5 guard Saraphania Cox, 5-5 guard Sharon Breann, and 5-3 guard Lisa Radford.

One other player who would have been a junior died in an auto accident earlier this year, Wanda Newton.

The lone freshman is Bobbie Jo Beaman, a 6-2 center. "She's not ready yet for a lot of play," Fulghum said. "But she could be a dominating force in the future."

Currently, the team is starting Suggs, Taylor and Cox, but the other two spots remain up for grabs.

"We are a young team. We're still looking for floor leadership and consistancy. Our defense has probably been the bes thing about our game so far, and our quickness is in good shape. We're just not responding as well as I thought we would at this part of the season."

Like everyone else, Fulghum picks Southwest Edgecombe to defend its conference championship. "It'll be tough for anyone to challenge them," he sqid. "Aycock has a good team, too, and the rest of us are about even, I guess."

As for Greene Central, Fulghum looks for the team to show improvement throughout the year, getting better and better. "In the past two or three years, we've just tried to stay close. Now, it's time for us to start winning some."

When they do, the rest had maybe better watch out.

The Greene Central schedule:

Injured Football Player Is Close To Keeping Promise To His Mom

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — George Bristol promised his mother he would be walking by Christmas.

The East Rutherford High School senior, who was paralyzed from the chest down by a football injury, is moving about on crutches now and he may fulfill that pledge.

"That's what Momma wanted for Christmas," he said this week. "I'll probably bring my wheelchair (home) for when I want to sit down but I'm going to use my crutches."

Bristol is in the Shriners' Spinal Treatment Injury Center in Philadelphia, where he hasbeen undergoing treatment since Nov. 11. The 17-year-old was injured in a game against East Gaston High School on Oct. 27.

A defensive back, Bristol suffered broke a vertebra in his neck making a tackle. Through the efforts ot the Thermal Bglt Shrine Club of Rutherford County, he was admitted to the Pennsylvania hospital.

Bristol is aware that his recovery so far has been a fast one.

"I knew I was going to get up on m feet," he said. "I told the doctors that."

But not even Bristol could have predicted the results.

"I was wanting it to come back this fast," he said. "I prayed every night. I think what's where most of it came from.

"Whatever I did in therapy, the next day I would be doing by myself. One night in bed, I was moving my hands and it seemed like someone else was doing it for me. It was really a good feeling."

Bristol's mother will join him in Philadelphia on Dec. 15, and bring him home for the holidays. She says she plans to help him with his therapy while he is at home.

"The doctors have said it's coming back to him day-to-day," she said. "At first he was the only one who had hope when the doctors said he woudn't walk.

"He wants to get up and walk. He believed like the doctors said, if you've got the confidence and don't quit, you'll be able to do it," she said.

But no one knows if Bristol will fully recover.

Angry Coach Hits At Officials

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Florida Southern's Moccasins were looking to snake-bite No. 13 Wake Forest, but the Deacons staged a first-half rally and came away the easy victors 98-73 Thursday nigh in a non-conference college basketball matchup.

Florida Soutern played Wake Forest even through the first eight minutes before Wake's Frank Johnson started a rally that saw the Deacons outscore Florida Southern 30-10.

During the rally, the play inside was physical. Florida Southern Coach Hal Wissel, already charged with one technical foul, had to be restrained as he was hit with a second technical after disputing an official's call.

Moccasins senior forward Felix Tertulien compounded matters as he was charged with a technical for disagreeing with the call.

Wissel continued to harass the officials with colored cue cards in the second half.

Asked about the officiating afterwards, Wissel replied, "Yeah? What about it? You saw it. Why should I have to tell you about it? It's sad — the ACC doesn't need that. That's (officiating) a disgrace."

Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy said his Deacons still need some work despite a 6-0 record. "We played in spurts ... we had some good runs and some poor ones. We still have a few things to iron out.

"Our togetherness and cohesiveness certainly has been a big plus. I think this group may be closer togetherthan any we've had here."

It was Alvis Rogers who ignited the Deacons in the second half after Florida Southern for the first eight minutes, before Wake Forest took the lead 14-12 and held that lead the rest of the game.

With senior Frank Johnson and junior Jim Johnstone leading the way, Wake Forest outscored the Moccasins 30-10 in the next 11 minutes.

Florida Southern hit two 3-point plays and canned a shot at the buzzer to close to 46-32 at the half.

Florida Southern made a run at Wake Forest early in the second half, closing to within 10 at the 14.24 mark.

Then Rogers caught fire, beginning with a dunk that turned into a 4-point play on an undercutting call.

The Deacon forward scored of the next 16 Wake Forest points as Wake opened a 21 point lead at 88-65 with 3:08 remaining.

Florida Southern battled desperately, but Wake Forest hit a parade of charity shots to make the final 98-73.

Rogers paced the Deacons with 23 while Johnson had 20 and freshman Anthony Peachey added 10 and gathered in 9 rebounds.

Florida Southern's John Ebeling had a game-high 27 points.

The 13th-ranked Decons are now 6-0 and will take the week off until playing against Santa Clara in the opening game of the Cable Car Classic in San Francisco on Dec. 19 and 20.

Florida Southern drops to 3-3 and will play the University of Florida in Gainesville on Dec. 18.

Duke, Virginia In ACC Battle

By The Associated Press

The preliminaries are over and it's down to brass tacks tonight as Duke hosts sixth-ranked Virginia in the first Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game of the season.

In non-conference action Thursday, 13th-ranked Wake Forest, led by veteran player Frank Johnson, crushed Florida Southern 98-73.

The Cavaliers come to Durham tonight with an unbeaten record, 4-0, while the Blue Devils are coming off two defeats in the Big Four Tournament and one close overtime win, 72-69, over Vanderbilt Tuesday night.

But the Blue Devils have a score to settl. Virginia was the only team in the conference to beat Duke twice last year, once in Durham and once in Charlottesville, Va.

Cavaliers' coach Terry Holland knows what he's facing tonight.

Cardinals Have Opportunity

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — If the University of Louisville is going to snap out of its doldrums, this weekend could be a very opportune time for the Cardinals.

Off to its worst start since the 1940-41 season, Louisville has dropped its first three games. After losing to No.1-ranked DePaul in the Hall of Fame Classic, the Cardinals fell to Tulsa and Oklahoma State last week.

Now the defending national champions have the opportunity to regain some of their lost respect when they entertain fourth-ranked Maryland on Saturday in a nationally-televised game (1:30 p.m. EST). The Terrapins of Coach Lefty Driesell are 5-0 this season.

The disastrous start has knocked Louisville out of the rankings, but they still rate high in Driesell's estimation.

"I really don't think their record is any indication of the kind of team Louisville has," said the Maryland coach. "Whoever made that schedule made a horrible mistake. It's not that they aren't a good club.

"I ranked Louisville this week in my top 10 — easy. You have to look at the scheduling when you look at a team's record."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum senses that the Cardinals may returning to the caliber of play of last season's championship team.

"I'm disappointed but not upset," he said of the losses. "I still feel we'll be an outstanding team before the year's over."

Driesell, whose team beat Fairleigh-Dickinson 109-83 on Wednesday night for its fifth victory, thinks Louisville will provide the biggest test thus far for the Terrapins.

"I know it will be a tough game, even though they've lost three straight," he said. "We know they're good."

Senior guard Greg Manning has provide a hot-shooting hand for the Terrapins in recent games. The 6-foot-1 sharpshooter, who is averaging 17 points a game, has connected on his last 15 field-goal and 14 free-throw attempts.

Buck Williams, a 6-8 center, leads Terrapins in scoring with 20.8 points a game. Forwards Albert King is at 16.2 and Ernie Graham at 16 oints a contest.

Turnovers and poor foul shooting proved to be the downfall for the Cardinals on their visit to Oklahoma. The Cardinals turned the ball over 35 times in a 68-60 loss to Tulsa and missed 21 of 42 free throws in a 72-71 setback to Oklahoma State.

"We learned a lot about ourselves on this trip" said Crum. "For one, we're not in as good a shape as we were last year. And we weren't hustling and showing the same desire that we had a year ago.

"But against Oklahoma State, the players showed a turnaround in their attitudes. They showed me some hustle and desire that were missing in o;r first two games."

Dunn Runs...

Dunn and her parents left Farmville Thursday morning for Raleigh. From Raleigh they flew to Denver and then drove to Cheyenne. Dunn will get her first look at the course she will run later today.

"I'll walk the course and see what it's going to be like to run on it," she said. "I look for muddy spots and at the turns and hills."

The preparation done, all that is left is for Dunn to run the 5,000-meter (3.1 mile) course.

"I pay more attention to the course when I'm running cross country than I do when I'm on the track, but I really don't think a lot in either one," she said. "I just go out and run. I think about running but that's it. I just think about running hard."

Coach Worries About Defense

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When you give up 86 points in a college basketball game, you'd better have your shooting clothes on.

The Purdue Boilermakers did Tuesday night — but Coach Gene Keady didn't like the fit.

"When you score 100, it hurts your defense," said the Boilermaker cach after a 101-86 decision over the Oklahoma Sooners. "We must play better defense than that."

Keady, however, wasn't completely negative about the 15-point victory.

"We shot so well, we got into a transition game," said Keady. "Our offense ran well against all of their different defenses. Our (offensive) practice is beginning to pay off."

The way Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs expained it:

"Purdue beat our defenses with long passes. Our players were coming up too soon to stop the fast break, and gave up too many dunk shots. They beat us on the boards. You've got to win the boards and stop the fastbreaks to win."

Meanwhile, No.13 Wake orest defeated Florida Southern 98-73 in the only game Thursday night involving a Top Twenty team.

Keith Edmondson scored 28 points and Russell Cross had 26 to lead Purdue. The Boilermakers trailed 20-17 midway through the first half before scoring 14 straight points and never fell behind after that. Oklahoma's Larry Hendrix had a game-high 30 points.

Alvis Rogers scored 23 points and ignited a second-half rally that carried Wake Forest past Florida Southern. The Moccasins held a 14-12 lead in the first half, but Frank Johnson and Jim Johnstone helped the Deacons outscore Florida Southern 30-10 in the next 11 minutes.

Florida Southern made a run at Wake Forest early in the second half, closing to within 10 points at the 14:24 mark. Then Rogers took charge, beginning with a dunk that turned into a four-point play.

Florida Southern's John Ebeling had a game-high 27 points.

Elsewhere, Mark Murphy scored 26 points to pace Fordham over Yale 85-73; John Smith's basket at the buzzer lifted St. Joseph's (Pa.) over Cornell 42-39; Garry Witts and Tom Seamen each scored 14 points to pace Holy Cross over Harvard 72-46; Terry Adolph's 22 assists helped West Texas State defeat Pan American 85-77 and Ron Dixon scored 21 points as Duquesne trimmed Robert Morris 83-59.

Also, Lewis Lloyd's 21 points powered Drake over Knox 95-58; Roosevelt Anders and Andrew Burton teamed for 42 points to lead Austin Peay over Tennessee-Martin 75-60; Connecticut's Chuck Aleksinas scored 12 points as the Huskies defeated Maine 55-51; Charles Bradley's 28 points led Wyoming over Boise State 76-51; Granger Hall came off the bench to score 20 points as Temple defeated Point Park 105-75; Paul Atkins scored eight straight points in the last four minutes as New Mexico State beat Texas-El Paso 70-58 and Orlando Ward's 16 points powered Stanford over UC-Davis 68-62.

Milwaukee Tops Knicks, But Can't Agree On How

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Milwaukee players couldn't seem to agree on the key elements of their 119-107 victory over New York Thursday night. No matter. Whether they were more effective on the inside or outside, the Bucks still came away winners.

"We were dtermined to shut off the attack of their guards," said Sidney Moncrief, who recalled a 104-94 loss to the Knicks last Saturday in which the Bucks didn't play their best defensively. "I concentrated more on defense tonight. We wanted to stop their fast break."

Bucks Coach Don Nelson felt his team won the game under the boards, even though substitute center Harvey Catchings was benched with an injured shoulder. Catchings was replaced by Len Elmore as backup to Bob Lanier.

"I'm very pleased with the way Len responded," said Nelson. "He has been sick the last few days with the flu. He gave us a few good minutes tonight and I'm grateful for that."

Forward Mickey Johnson was an important man under the boards as well.

"Considering that Harvey is out, my main concern was to go to the boards," said Johnson. "Nelson told me to block out, so he sort of initiated my natural concern to fill in."

It was a tight contest most of the way after the Knicks rallied from a 12-point hole to knot the halftime score 54-54. With the game tied at 97, Lanier hit a turnaround jumper to put Milwaukee ahead to stay.

Quinn Buckner topped Milwaukee with 22 points while Moncrief and Marques Johnson hit for 17. Rookie Mike Woodson paced the Knicks with 22 points while Bill Cartwright and Mike Glenn had 19 apiece.

In other National Basketball Association games, Indiana defeated Cleveland 103-100 and San Antonio took Kansas City 122-104.

Pacers 103, Cavaliers 100

Indiana held off Cleveland down the stretch with some smart basketball, according to Pacers Coach Jack McKinney.

"Our players played their roles well, they're becoming an intelligent team," noted McKinney, who, in his first year at the Pacers' helm, has guided them to a 19-12 record, their best in five NBA seasons.

"They're getting used to winning. I told them after the game that at the end we made a lot of big plays, which is what a good team has to do to win."

Forward Mike Bantom — his four points late in the game on a 20-foot shot and two free throws iced the contest — found another reason for Indiana's success so far.

"We've got a lot of versatile talents on this team," he said.

Billy Knight had 22 points for Indiana and Randy Smith scored 23 for the Cavs.

Spurs 122, Kings 104

San Antonio outscored Kansas City 23-8 in the final six minutes and won despite just 19 points by George Gervin. James Silas sparked the attack with 27 points and Mark Olberding had a season-high 25.

Otis Birdsong led KC with 28 points and Scott Wedman had 25.

John Lennon's Widow Urges Fans Not To Despair

NEW YORK (AP) — John Lennon's widow says the despair over her husband's slaying is getting out of hand, and she has urged rock fans not to treat his death as "the end of an era."

"So many things are happening ... people are committing suicide. They are sending me telegrams saying this is the end of an era. I'm really so concerned," Yoko Ono said Thursday.

Earlier this week, two people apparently despondent over Lennon's death took their own lives.

Mark David Chapman, who is charged with the shooting death of the internationally famous rock star, was taken to court in a bulletproof vest for a hearing Thursday in which his court-appointed attorney withdrew from the case. A new lawyer was appointed.

Lawyer Herbert Adlerberg said the case was "becoming an albatross," with his one-man practice interrupted by a flood of telephone calls from journalists and the curious. Adlerberg denied reports that he had received death threats.

Jonathan Marks, a former federal prosecutor, was appointed in Adlerberg's place.

Meanwhile, fans continued to mourn Lennon's death, maintaining a vigil outside the exclusive Dakota apartment building where Lennon lived in Manhattan. The rock star was shot just outside the building on Monday night, just hours after he had signed an autograph for Chapman.

"This has completely devastated me," said Pat Whitcomb, 30. "I can't work and I can't sleep. I'm here because I feel I just have to be with people who understand what I'm going through."

About 20 people held a memorial service for Lennon, who was 40, at the Illinois state Capitol on Thursday.

Miss Ono has asked that 10 minutes of silence be observed worldwide at 2 p.m. Sunday to honor Lennon's memory.

In Miami, WWWL program director Rick Peters said 10 Florida stations would go off the air for the vigil. Two Ohio rock music radio stations, WWWN-FM in Cleveland and WSAI-FM in Cincinnati, said they would suspend broadcasting for 10 minutes.

A memorial service was scheduled for Sunday at the University of Illinois campus at Champaign-Urbana, and Mayor Edward Koch invited New Yorkers to observe the vigil in Central Park where "appropriate recorded music" would be played.

Lennon's body was cremated in suburban Hartsdale, N.Y., and his ashes given to Miss Ono to be buried privately at a secret place.

In a recent interview, Lennon said he did not believe in worship of the dead. He was also said to have an aversion to the cult worship at the graves of such stars as Elvis Presley.

In another development, an aide to U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said the legislator would introduce a bill to award Lennon U.S. citizenship posthumously. Lennon, a British subject, won a permanent visa to remain in the United States in 1976 after a lengthy battle with the Immigration and Naturalization Service over an earlier marijuana conviction.

Miss Ono, in an interview published today in the New York Daily News, said Lennon's death was not the end of an era for the generation that grew up on Beatle music.

"The '80s are still going to be a beautiful time, and John believed it," she said.

Miss Ono said she was having a hard time coping with Lennon's death, especially in handling their 5-year-old son, Sean.

"I wish I could tell you how hard it is. I've told Sean and he's crying. I'm afraid he'll be crying more," she said.

Chapman, who Adlerberg said has twice attempted suicide, remains in solitary confinement in a psychiatric observation cell under "suicide watch" pending a psychiatric examination.

New Eye Test To Be Used In Centers

Thousands of youngsters in day care centers across the state will be identifying figures on a new eye chart being distributed this month by the N.C. Society of Ophthamology.

The society, a group of medical doctors specializing in eye care, designed the new chart for use especially with pre-schoolers, and is coordinating distribution to over 2,000 day care centers throughout the state.

"We recognize the fact that more and more young children are spending their pre-school years in a day care situation," said Dr. Thomas C. Kerns, Jr., president of the society. "Since it is especially important that certain eye problems be recognized and treated before the ages of six, we felt that the day care center was a suitable environment for early visual screening."

The tests will be administered by day care teachers and will hopefully help to spot youngsters who have crossed eyes or amblyopia, which is often called "lazy eye".

According to Dr. Kerns, parents and day care centers should be alert to certain signs which may indicate an eye problem. Clues include burning or scratchy eyes, blinking or squinting, stumbling over objects, blurred vision or dizziness, headaches or nausea following close work and inflamed or watery eyes.

Individuals interested in receiving a copy of the society's chart for home use should write the N.C. Society of Ophthalmology, P.O. Box 1801, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

Get Windfall By Liberace

OBERLIN, Ohio (AP) — Oberlin College, where names like Liszt and Leinsdorf are revered, has gotten a windfall from a different kind of musician.

The Liberace Foundation of Las Vegas, Nev., recently told the private northeast Ohio school it would donate $10,000 a year to the college. The foundation was set up by the popular pianist Liberace, who dazzles audiences with candelabras, glittering jackets and keyboard acrobatics.

Oberlin officials said they were delighted with the money, which will go toward scholarships for students of the performing arts.

George Liberace, the pianist's brother, said the foundation chose five schools to receive such grants. The others are Marquette University in Milwaukee, the University of Nevada, Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore and the Young Musicians Foundation in Los Angeles.

"Oberlin people should realize that Liberace has a serious musical and pianistic background," said Emil C. Danenberg, head of Oberlin's conservatory. "We find it appropriate that his foundation should choose to encourage college students who are developing their skills in the arts."

No Relaxing On Her 'Day'

CHICAGO (AP) — It was "Marva Collins Day" for Chicago, but the honored educator didn't leave her teaching duties at Westside Preparatory School.

Mrs. Collins has never taken a day off since she opened the school in her home six years ago to work with inner city youngsters — "teaching the unteachables."

Her fame as an educator spread nationally. She and her small school were spotlighted on CBS television's "60 Minutes" and a movie about her life and dedication is now being filmed on the West Side.

Cicely Tyson portrays Mrs. Collins in the movie entitled "Welcome To Success — The Marva Collins Story."

Gov. James R. Thompson and Mayor Jane Byrne proclaimed Thursday to be "Marva Collins-Westside Preparatory School Day" for her service to the children of Chicago's poor.

Ernie Banks, former Chicago Cubs star and a member of Baseball's Hall of Fame, was among those honoring Mrs. Collins in ceremonies held at the school. Banks was instrumental in establishing a fund for contributions to help defray Mrs. Collins' expenses. The former public school teacher had used her own money to start the school.

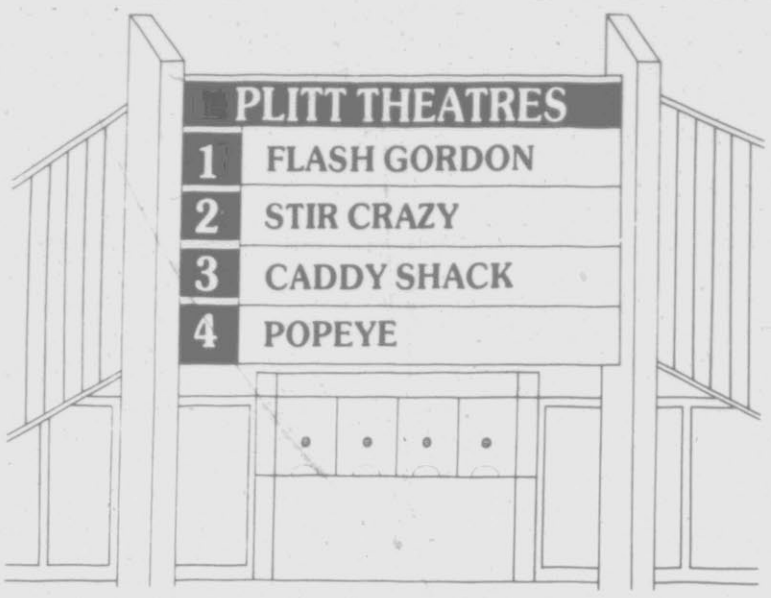
Greenville's First Quad Movie Theatre



Setting Pace In Entertainment

The grand opening of the new Plitt Theatres complex at Carolina East Convenience Centre, located on Highway 11 adjacent to Carolina East Mall, is scheduled for today at 6 p.m., Plitt officials announced.

H. Crockett Webb, who has been named manager of Plitt Theatres here, said that the new entertainment facility represents the first quad theatre complex in eastern North Carolina.

Webb said the 15,000 square foot facility is also the first theatre complex operated by The Plitt Companies in North Carolina with four separate auditoriums for the simultaneous showing of four motion pictures.

The manager noted that today's grand opening activities will center around the theme, "Greenville's Biggest Christmas Present," with Santa Claus and Raggedy Ann coming over from Carolina East Mall to "cut the ribbon and open up the package."

Saturday morning "kiddie features" will be a regular segment of the Plitt program format, according to Webb, and "lady shopper" shows will also be scheduled at times during the week.

"The theatre complex has been designed for maximum comfort and convenience," Webb pointed out, "bringing to the Pitt County/Greenville area one of the finest entertainment centers in the southeast."

According to the local manager, the four-auditorium complex features a spacious "centered" lobby, a central refreshment area, and a full range stereophonic sound system. Some 996 seats are included in the four viewing sections.

Webb said that Plitt executives are "pleased with the continuing growth of East Carolina University and the Pitt/Greenville area" and they are "certain that theatre patrons will be pleased with the Plitt entertainment facility."

Plitt Theatres is part of an 80,000 square foot community retail center located on a 14-acre site. Some 660 spaces will be available for use by patrons of the shopping complex.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Imagine our surprise when, after an absence of more than a year, who should walk into the club but Trump Coup Tommy. You all remember him—his bidding need not be dignified with comment and his play leaves a lot to be desired except in one instance: when trumps are breaking badly.

It did not take long for Tommy to have a chance to display the full spectrum of his talents. You might notice that there are a lot of tricks to be taken in seven spades (or seven no trump), but it was beneath Tommy's dignity to support his partner's suit. The point of his five no trump bid is lost on us.

Against six hearts, West dutifully led a club, the king losing to the ace. Tommy was disappointed that he was not in a grand slam. But when he led a trump to the ace and East discarded a club, Tommy came to life—suddenly, even six hearts was in great jeopardy. It seemed that declarer would have to lose two trump tricks.

Tommy soon discovered that, because of his trump spots, there was one distribution that would enable him to bring in his slam. He cashed three rounds of spades, and was relieved when it was East who showed out. Next came three diamonds ending in his hand, and all was still well. And when East followed to the second club, the hand became a lock.

Both West and Tommy were down to nothing but four trumps each. Tommy led a trump to the queen and a trump back to the eight. West won the ten, but he was end played. He was forced to lead a trump from the jack-seven into declarer's king-nine tenace. So one of the defender's trump tricks vanished into thin air.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Delayed Film To Be Costlier

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Universal Pictures announced it will delay the start of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" until April 1981, thanks to the recently concluded actors strike.

The film was originally scheduled to begin production last summer with Burt Reynolds and Dolly Parton in the starring roles.

Originally budgeted at $12 million — before the signing of Reynolds and Parton — the screen version of the hit stage play will now cost at least $20 million, a spokesman for the studio said.

TV Soap Operas Luckily Judged By Different Viewer Standards

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the luxuries enjoyed by TV soap operas is that they're judged apart from other TV entertainment. Viewers tend to indulge soaps their weaknesses in areas of dramatic structure, execution and dialogue. Character is the thing in soaps.

What I'm trying to say is, CBS' new prime time soap, "Secrets of Midland Heights," could become a hit show in spite of its dreadfulness.

In a very busy debut episode last Saturday, "Midland Heights" showed itself to be a creature grossly fat with overacting and ludicrous situations. But, in the way soaps are, it was also sort of amusing.

It's like this...

Midland Heights is a little town out there somewhere in Soapsville County, where every citizen's life is a tangled web of deceit, lust, passion and sorrow, and where all the webs are interconnected.

The burg is run by old lady Millington (Martha Scott), a crusty old bird whose people founded Midland Heights. Running point for Mrs. Millington, and for himself, is Guy Millington (Jordan Christopher), the series' chief misanthrope.

Of Guy's many reasons for unpleasantness, the most pressing seems to be that his niece, Ann (Doran Clark), somehow stands between him and the family fortune. Ann's mother is suggested to be insane, and Guy is most willing to assist Ann along a similar path.

Ann loves a poor dropout, John. So, Guy has John run out of town. John might be saved, though, by Holly and Teddy, who ... never mind. Let's just say "Secrets of Midland Heights" wasted no time in setting up shop.

Some of the situations were just too goofy to let pass without a snicker. There's a lot of emphasis on adolescents in this soap, so it wasn't surprising to find in the first episode a young virgin seeking to alter her situation. She talked a young man into going to a motel with her. Who do you suppose was in the next room, consummating infidelity? The girl's mother.

Who do you suppose the girl's mother was with? The boy's father. (Tee hee. I have to giggle even now.)

As I say, soaps are accounted on a separate ledger. This is a really bad show. But bad, in this case, could prove to be good. It doesn't matter to me, in any case. I'm equipped to handle but one soap at a time, and "Dallas" came along first.

"Magnum, P.I.," which premiered Thursday, is CBS' updating of "Hawaii Five-0." It's shot in Hawaii, and the show even gets "Five-0's" old time slot.

While "Magnum" promises nothing apart in the world of TV detective yarns, it tries to go about its dreary business with a sense of humor, and that's welcome.

Tom Selleck plays private eye Tom Magnum, a former Navy intelligence officer who lives on fringes of the high life while trying to make it in the sleazy P.I. business. He lives on the estate of a rich writer pal, and does constant battle with the writer's valet, a retired British major.

Magnum drives cars fast and recklessly, loves and leaves pretty ladies and gets shot at. The stuff of TV detectives. He also experiencess a lot of Vietnam flashbacks, which seem a little out of place.

But he laughs at himself along the way. Can you imagine McGarrett laughing at himself?

Give "Magnum" a chance, and hope the show loses that phony Vietnam gimmick. It could develop into something.

NOTIFICATION OF
BACTERIOLOGICAL MAXIMUM
CONTAMINATE LEVEL
VIOLATION
Water Exceeds
Bacteria Limit

Grayden Jackson, of Jackson's Mobile Home Park reports that analyses of samples taken during the November reporting period showed a coliform bacteria concentration above the maximum contamination level listed in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations.

Although there is no routine laboratory procedure for determining the presence of specific disease producing bacteria in drinking water, coliform bacteria which is normally found in the intestinal tract of man or other warm blooded animals can be readily detected. Therefore, the presence of this non-disease producing bacteria is used to indicate that some contamination has occurred.

The System has been disinfected and repeat samples show the water to be free from coliform bacteria.

If you have any questions concerning this notice, please call Mr. Graydon Jackson, Owner, at 756-0130, or write to Route 2, Box 35, Winterville, N.C. 28590.

Passive Solar Design

"The Most Apartment For Your Rental Dollar"

The "true" cost of your apartment each month includes not only rent but also your monthly utilities. Wilson Acres Apartments are Greenville's newest. Because of energy saving design features such as heat pumps, thermal pane glass, insulated doors and extra insulation throughout, your monthly utility bill will be considerably less than most apartments in Greenville.

Add your monthly rent at Wilson Acres to your greatly reduced monthly utility bill at Wilson Acres and we think it's the most apartment for your rental dollar.

New 2 bedroom apartments. ENERGY EFFICIENT with washer/dryer hook-ups, dishwasher, frost-free refrigerator, self-cleaning oven, Cable TV hook-ups, heat pumps, tennis, pool, saunas, laundry and club house facilities, ample parking, 3 blocks from ECU, $295 per month.

When you're looking for living affordably, can you afford not to look at the energy efficient townhouses at Wilson Acres? 752-0277 evenings 6-10 p.m. and weekends call 756-2766.

The Best "True" Monthly Rental In Greenville

Only 51 days left to be a very shrewd buyer.

Jeannette Cox Realty has purchased a limited amount of first mortgage money at 12⅜%. These funds are available to qualified buyers on a first-come, first-serve basis for any of our listings. The money is available to finance up to 90% on homes to $100,000 and 80% on homes $100,000 to $200,000.

Why is now a shrewd time to buy?

- Buyers Market -- Many sellers are anxious to sell
- Low Down Payment -- Many sellers are willing to take a 2nd mortgage
- Higher Home Prices in Future -- Building material and labor costs are rising rapidly.
- Inflation Economy Dictates "We may never see these home prices again."

While these 12⅜% funds last, you may be able to qualify for the home of your dreams at a value that will never exist again in The 80's. Compare the current financing options that are being presented to home buyers today looking for a typical $60,000 loan.

Financing	Terms	Monthly Payments (P&I)	Est. Gross Yearly Income Required
VA/FHA	13½% 30 yr.	$ 687	$ 35,000
Conventional	14% 30 yr.	$ 710	$ 37,000
Conventional	15½% 30 yr.	$ 782	$ 40,000
