Stripped-Down Appropriation Bill Wins Congress Approval

By MIKE SHANAHAN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — A weary Senate gave final approval early today to a stopgap government spending bill, eliminating a threat that major federal agencies would run out of money and clearing the way for adjournment of the Democratic-controlled 96th Congress.

The 34-20 vote ended several days of repeated and occasionally bitter confrontations between the two houses of Congress, and sent a stripped-down, no-frills appropriations bill to the White House for President Carter's signature.

As the night wore on, tempers flared in both Houses. Some senators slumped in their seats, while others were awakened and summoned from home to provide the 51-vote quorum needed to permit a roll call vote.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the Senate surrendered too much in negotiations with the House.

"I think we got a whopping bad deal," Domenici said shortly before the final vote about 5:10 a.m. EST ended one of the toughest legislative impasses of the past several years.

Authority for a major portion of the government to spend money ran out at midnight Monday, and five hours passed before the House and Senate joined to eliminate any risk of impaired government services.

The House passed its compromise stopgap spending measure in a non-roll call vote about 12:45 a.m. today. It then quit and planned to return to 11 a.m.

As the night wore on, there were predictions in both the House and Senate that agencies as diverse as the State Department and the Social Security Administration would have to close.

The heads of affected agencies, said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., "are under instructions to shut down."

Similarly, Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said earlier, "We are faced with closing down the government."

Passage of the final version of the spending bill marked a mild setback for President-elect Ronald Reagan even before his inauguration. Attached to the congressional pay raise was a proposed increase in the salaries of several thousand top federal employees, a hike

Reagan said was needed to recruit aides to staff his administration.

In the end, the pay increases were dropped and the House and Senate agreed on a spending bill designed to do little more than keep the government running through next June 5.

As the Senate met into the pre-dawn hours, Majority Leader Robert Byrd said the time had come to end a game of "legislative ping pong."

A compromise spending bill approved by the House shortly after midnight was similar to one passed hours earlier by the Senate, with the addition of $500 million in aid for Egypt and Israel and a prohibition against the use of federal funds to bar prayer in public schools.

The dispute over several days was mainly the result of a time worn legislative tactic of attaching amendments on a wide variety of subjects and purposes to spending bills because they must be passed for the government to continue to function.

Most federal employees affected by the legislative deadlock were told to report to work today, if only to make preliminary steps toward closing down.

Costlier Gasoline, Fuel Oil

OPEC Sets Oil Price Boosts

By KENNETH L. WHITING Associated Press Writer BALI, Indonesia (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced increases today of $2 to $4 a barrel in base crude oil prices, an action analysts said could hike gasoline and heating oil costs in the United States up to 4 cents a gallon.

A communique issued at the end of a two-day session of the oil cartel also set a maximum price for OPEC crudes at $41 a barrel, authorizing countries who want to charge the maximum a $4 increase.

OPEC's decision established guidelines for oil pricing and it was up to individual countries to settle on the prices they would charge depending on how the market develops.

The communique said Saudi Arabia's benchmark price was being increased from $30 to $32 for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil; the benchmark or base price for other members would rise from $32 to $36, and the maximum price for OPEC crudes was raised from $37 to $41 a barrel.

Analysts estimated the increases could raise U.S. prices of gasoline and heating oil about 4 cents a gallon. But officials from several countries said they were not sure yet what new prices their governments might settle on.

"They just don't know what the market will bear," said one conference source.

The meeting wound up with unusual speed and with a minimum of public acrimony despite the fact that two of OPEC's founding members, Iran and Iraq, have been at war for nearly three months.

The only mention of the war in the final communique was an endorsement of Indonesian President Suharto's "sincere and honest appeal" to the two countries "to seek the best possible solution quickly to their conflict leading to a peaceful settlement of their differences."

Suharto made his appeal in his speech opening the meeting Monday.

The round of price increases was signaled Monday by Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, who announced that his government was increasing its benchmark price.

Yamani refused to give the amount of the increase, but Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti and oil industry sources said it was $2 a barrel, and this was confirmed by the communique today.

The New York industry

newsletter Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported that the Saudi increase was retroactive to Nov. 1. However, the communique made no mention of back-dating any of the increases.

Saudi Arabia at the last OPEC pricing session three months ago in Vienna stayed with a benchmark price of $30 a barrel while most of the other members agreed on $32. But all the members charged a variety of prices calculated according to the quality of the crude oil, its availability to the market and other factors.

Saudi Arabia produces 10.3 million barrels of oil daily, 42 percent of OPEC's total, and supplies 8 percent of all oil consumed in the United States. Its $2-a-barrel increase raises the average OPEC price from $31.79 to $32.59, a jump of 80 cents.

Analysts at several large oil companies estimate every dollar-a-barrel increase in the average OPEC price raises average U.S. retail gasoline and heating oil prices about 2 cents a gallon. Using this formula, the latest Saudi increase means Americans will be paying 1 1/2 cents a gallon more.

White House Tree

TOWERING TREE — First Lady Rosalynn Carter shows off the White House Christmas tree in the East Room to her son Jack's children, Sarah (in her arms) and Jason, during a preview of White House Christmas decorations Monday. This year the tree, which represents what Mrs. Carter calls "an old fashioned Christmas" is covered with Victorian-style dolls, miniature hats, fans and parasols, large balls decorated with antique tapestry fabric and lace, and 1,000 dusty rose tassels. The tree decorations were coordinated by Hartford, Conn., craftsmen and designer Louis Nicole. The Carters' tree at home in Plains, Ga., will be simpler. Mrs. Carter said that she and the president plan to go out into the woods on Christmas Eve and cut their own tree which they will decorate themselves. (AP Laserphoto)

Subsidized Vocational Education Program For Rose High School

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

A program to subsidize vocational education cooperative students at Rose High School who are not easily employable will be put into effect for a six-month period beginning in mid-January and continuing until the end of June.

Mrs. Kay Whitehurst, director of Secondary Education for the Greenville City Schools, explained the program to members of the city school board at its monthly action meeting Monday night.

The pilot program, the first to be put into effect in North Carolina schools, is being funded entirely by state funds and has been approved by Dr. Cliff Belcher, director Division of Vocational Education.

The program will provide payment for student employment in various industries who are willing to take these students at the rate of $3.35 per hour (the federal minimum wage effective in January). The number of students to be employed in this program is limited to 30, and the maximum number of work hours is 15 hours weekly for each student. Efforts will be made to place students in fields of employment in which they have expressed preferences.

Mrs. Whitehurst noted that in placing students to be selected under this program, care will be taken not to put them in jobs where other workers may be receiving less than the federal minimum wage. Also, employers can terminate employment of any student at any time.

Only those students already enrolled in the vocational education cooperative education program at Rose will be considered. The program will be handled by the four instructors in the program, and will not entail hiring additional instructor personnel.

In a discussion of long-range plans, Superintendent Glenn Cox pointed out that a summary of school facility needs for all of North Carolina has been compiled by the State Department of Public Instruction. The summary, updated to November 1980, has been prepared in conjunction with seeking a statewide school bond referendum.

Based on data submitted by school boards to the State Department of Public Instruction, Greenville's facility needs amount to a grand total of $10,257,500. Of this total, $2,120,000 would be for replacement of obsolete facilities; $1,478,000 for renovations on existing buildings suitable for continued

Prime Rate Hits A New Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth-largest commercial bank, today raised its prime lending rate to a record 21 percent.

The increase, from the 20 percent prime rate set just last week, comes amid further increases in banks' cost of acquiring funds and adds further pressure to the economy, which many economists think will slide into another recession.

Accounting Review Set

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray told commissioners yesterday that he would meet with department heads to review recommendations made by Lowmore, Warwick & Co., who audited the county's books for the 1979-1980 fiscal year.

Frank Freuler, a partner in the firm, yesterday made several recommendations to the board, including the limiting of petty cash purchases to items costing no more than $10, and that county agencies make deposits of monies collected when funds on hand amount to as much as $250, as required by N.C. General Statute 159-32.

Specifically, the suggestions said, "Our examination of the Sheriff Department's receipts disclosed that Statute 159-32 was not being followed."

This was the second year in a row that auditors indicated that the Sheriff's Department was not following the requirement of the law.

The auditors also recommended improvements be made in the county's fixed asset accounting system, and that bank reconciliations be made by persons other than those responsible for recording entries into the receipts and disbursements records.

The auditors noted that the comments, "are in no way to be considered criticism of the County of Pitt or any particular individual...they are merely intended to be constructive suggestions for improving the overall effectiveness of the county's accounting system and financial records."

Freuler told commissioners, "your fiscal policies are in the hands of very good people," and noted that the county is in good fiscal condition.

Commissioners took no action after hearing a letter from Glenn Cox, superintendent of the Greenville City School system, written on behalf of the city Board of Education, regarding a study of the possible merger of the city and county schools.

Commissioners had asked that the two boards of education study the possibility of a merger and recommend a plan of merger to be voted on by the people.

Last month, before a plan could be arrived at, the Pitt County Board of Education rejected the idea of a merger.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

INMATES MAY RECEIVE GIFTS

During the Christmas season through Jan. 1, inmates of North Carolina's prisons may receive through the mail or from visitors after inspection during regular visiting days, the following: cigarettes, tobacco, cigars, shelled nuts, packaged candy, fresh fruit, and home-cooked foods like cookies, cakes, candy and meat. All must be consumed before they become a storage or health problem. NOTE: the above does not include items such as raisins, dried fruits or similar food products.

Anyone in this area who would like to send any of these gifts to the Maury Correctional Unit should bring them to Jerry Raynor at the Daily Reflector Office prior to Saturday at noon. He will take them there Sunday.

CEDAR CHRISTMAS TREE SOURCE?

Cedar Christmas trees remind me of my childhood and that's the kind I love. I can't find one this year. Can Hotline help? A. M.

According to a spokesman for Little's Nursery here, to the best of her knowledge, there are no commercial sources of cedars in the Greenville area. Her firm will have some in about three years, she said. Any reader who knows of a relatively nearby source may call 752-1336.

Reagan Now Electoral College Graduate

By MIKE FEINSILBER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

"Well, that was, jolly good fun," said Nancy Bush Ellis, as she voted to elect her brother, George Bush, vice president.

In Delaware, someone forgot to provide ink for the quill pens. So the electors used their trusty ballpoints to mark their ballots for Ronald Reagan and Bush.

Reagan-Bush won in a landslide, as expected, in the election that counts — the polling of the Electoral College.

Its members, faithful to the will of the voters, played out their constitutional role Monday. When Congress meets in joint session Jan. 6, Vice President Walter F. Mondale, presiding officer of the Senate, will have the melancholy chore of certifying his own defeat.

Reagan and Bush carried 44 states, Jimmy Carter and Mondale only six and the District of Columbia, in the Nov. 4 general election, and on that basis Reagan was entitled to 489 electoral votes to Carter's 49. Only 270 are needed to win.

Among Monday's 538 electors was one who is going to take a job in the new administration — New Yorker William J. Casey, nominated by Reagan as director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Only a few states require electors by law to follow the mandate of the people. But custom binds electors to cast their ballots for the candidates who carried their states.

In Virginia, elector Roger McBride, a member of the Libertarian Party, refused to vote for Richard Nixon in 1972. He voted for John Hospers, the Libertarian presidential candidate that year.

Virginia Attorney General Marshall Coleman wanted no such deviation this time.

"I want you all to do what you promised me you'd do during the campaign," he told the electors, who sat under the rigid gaze of a bronze likeness of Robert E. Lee.

Oklahoma elector Tom Harris complained about a 20-year-old state law making it a misdemeanor for an elector to vote for anyone but the state's winner. He said the founding fathers wanted the electors to evaluate the candidates independently after the election. But Harris expressed no dissatisfaction with Reagan or Bush, and cast his ballot for them.

John Sherman Cooper, 79, a former U.S. senator and ambassador and this year an elector in Kentucky, defended the existing system. "Clumsy as it is, I can't think of a better way," he said. And Gov. Charles Thone of Nebraska told his state's electors that the electoral system protects states with small populations like Nebraska.

"There are those who say the electoral college is an archaic institution, to which your governor takes great exception," Thone said.

After Alaska's three electors cast their votes for Reagan and Bush, Lt. Gov. Terry Miller asked visiting high school students if anyone had a question.

"Why in the world would you want Reagan to be president?" one student asked. Responded elector Lloyd Hamed: "I'll see you after Thanksgiving."

DEAR ABBY: I am another one who lives in New Mexico and has been mistaken for a foreigner. I mailed a check to National Geographic magazine for the renewal of my subscription and received the following letter: "We are sorry to inform you that the amount of your check does not cover a subscription to a foreign country." I turned the letter over and wrote on the back: "I have placed a stop-payment order at my bank for the check to renew my subscription. I did not realize National Geographic was not published in the United States of America. I do not wish to subscribe to a foreign publication."

ROSWELL, NEW MEXICO

DEAR MRS. KOPP: So what happened? Did the magazine acknowledge the human error, or blame the computer like everybody else does?

DEAR ABBY: Bobby and I grew up together on the same block. My mother and his father are brother and sister — that makes us first cousins.

Bobby is four months older than I am. We are both 17 and will be 18 when we graduate from high school next spring. Our closeness over the years grew into a real love affair by the time we were 13. We had discovered early the difference between boys and girls and freely experimented with that discovery until we finally went all the way. Our relationship was a well-guarded secret until about a month ago when my mother came home early and caught us.

Now we are trying to convince our parents that we want to marry after graduation next June. We have been planning it for almost a year. They say cousins shouldn't marry—that any children from such a marriage may not be normal. Is this true? Bobby and I are sure that this is what we really want.

LOVERS FOR SURE

DEAR LOVERS: Perhaps you are mistaking the excitement of your first sexual awakening for "love." Don't rush into marriage. Date others, and later, when you are more mature and experienced, if you do decide to marry, consult a lawyer to learn in which states first-cousin marriages are permissible. Then see a genetic counselor to determine your chances for having healthy, normal children.

TODAY'S STORY

Five years of courting. It seemed to Melissa that they had been swinging in the porch swing for five long years, with Ronald doing nothing in the world but looking down at his feet. Melissa was about to pop. At last she said, "Kiss me, Ronald."

"Where?" said Ronald.
"Oh, wherever," said Melissa.
So he did.

"Gee, Ronald," said Melissa, "If you kiss me there again, I'll likely succumb to that Advance."

"What's that mean?" said Ronald.
"Do and see," said Melissa.
So he did. "Oh-h-h, Ronald!"

For her silver she chose Gorham's Chantilly. For her china, Wedgewood's Singapore Bird. Crystal, Lizmore by Waterford. "This is some shop!" said Ronald, looking around admiringly.

"Class, Ronald, Class!" said Melissa. "Home now, Ronald?" And they went home and swing swang swung.

Tuesday: Saw Marge in supermarket. Marge bought a ticket and sold me two tickets to a ball to fund "Save the Whale Sperm." Gave me 60 flyers to distribute for a race to be run a week from Sunday to Stamp Out Puberty Among Our Young People.
Tuesday Night: At the tennis match, met Nancy who bought a ticket and in turn sold me ten chances on a pony and enlisted me to sell peanut brittle to benefit restoration of an 1890 brothel that was being torn down to build a 1980 brothel.
Thursday morning: Sold two tickets to Elaine who sold me a cookbook and two tickets to a luncheon with proceeds going to a Home for Retired Girl Scout Cookie Chairmen.
Thursday Afternoon: Called Marty and sold her a ticket. Marty, in return, asked me to make a table decoration for a luncheon and solicit a Weight Watchers scholarship as a door prize. The luncheon would benefit a Shotmobile that would administer flu shots to the elderly.
Thursday Evening: Saw

Mayva. She bought a box of peanut brittle and sold me a ticket to a house tour benefiting Misplaced Homemakers. She was sorry she couldn't attend my style show but signed me up to drive a group of Women in Crisis over Night Driving to a concert Friday night.
Friday: Saw Helen selling fruitcakes in a supermarket to buy a camper for the nuns at the school. She reminded me that when she bought a ticket from me last year for the Sponsor-a-Tree picnic, I told her I would collect door-to-door for Foot Health Week coming up next month.
Friday Afternoon: Heard Marsha just got home from the hospital and wanted to get to her before anyone else. Sold her two tickets to the style show, but not before she made me promise to serve as chairman of the next year's Devotion to Motherhood and Wine-Tasting Seminar.
Saturday Morning: Georgia finally returned my call. Before I could make my pitch, she asked me to fill a table of eight for a style show benefiting needy children.

Smith Named To Board Of Planters

Eddie C. Smith Jr. of Greenville has been appointed to Planters National Bank's general board of directors, according to James B. Powers, chairman and president of the Rocky Mount based bank. Smith joined PNB's Greenville board of managers in 1972. Powers said, and served as its chairman in 1979.

EDDIE SMITH JR.

The new director is president of Grady White Boats here. He is currently serving as chairman of the board of the National Association of Boat Manufacturers, and treasurer and board member of the National Marine Manufacturers Association.

Smith graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1965 with a B.S. degree in industrial relations. He has served as president of the Educational Foundation at UNC.

He is a member of St. James United Methodist Church, the Greenville Rotary Club, and has served as area chairman of Ducks Unlimited.

PNB has 41 offices in 19 North Carolina cities.

Rate Comments Explained

Greenville realtor and builder Connally Branch said yesterday that wanted to explain a comment he made in a story on the effect high interest rates are having on housing construction and sales, published in Sunday's edition of "The Daily Reflector".

Branch, who said the high mortgage interest rates, "are causing home sales to virtually come to a stand-still in the mid to upper price range," explained that there is less money available for home loans because, "investors are moving their money from home savings and loan institutions to banks, where they are able to earn more money on their deposits."

Branch yesterday explained that investors are shifting funds from mortgage institutions to banks to take advantage of higher interest available on investments in government bonds and treasury notes and other higher-interest investments. Banks, he noted, do not pay higher interest than home mortgage institutions.

FOCUS

Middle East Survivor

Recent events in the Middle East have again focused attention on one of the world's longest-ruling leaders: King Hussein of Jordan. At age 45, Hussein has spent his entire adult life as Jordan's king. He was only 17 when he became king in 1952. Since then, he has survived many problems, including three wars with Israel. Jordan lost control of the region called the West Bank when Israel seized it during the 1967 Middle East war. Relations between Jordan and other Arab countries, especially Syria, also have often been tense. As Jordan's ruler, King Hussein appoints the country's prime minister, as well as all Cabinet officials, judges and district governors.

Commission Has 12 Items

Twelve items of business, including three requests for rezoning, are scheduled for consideration Wednesday night by the Joint City-County and Greenville Planning & Zoning Commissions.

The meeting, set for 8 p.m. in the third floor council chambers, is being held a week early this month due to the regular fourth Wednesday meeting date falling on Christmas eve.

Items on the joint agenda include: request by Bill Clark for rezoning 15.3 acres south of Section II of Oakdale Subdivision from RA-20 to R-9; request by David Evans Jr. for rezoning 29.2 acres south of Section II of Tucker Estates Subdivision from RA-20 to R-15;

Petition for annexation of 4.4 acres of Section III of Professional Center, located west of Pitt Memorial Hospital; request by Clara H. Bland to amend Section 32-44B of the Zoning Ordinance to allow a mobile home park development as a permitted use in the R-6 Mobile Home zoning classification; discussion of the Clara Bland mobile home development; and discussion of the preliminary plat of Section III of Tucker Estates.

The city board will consider: an amendment to the rules of procedure by allowing the Subdivision Review Committee to act in lieu of the planning board for final approval of soil erosion and sedimentation control plans;

Request by Harvey Bradshaw for rezoning 2.2 acres north of Carolina Telephone on the west side of Hooker Road from Highway Commercial to R-6; preliminary plat approval of Fairlane Farms located on the west side of Hooker Road;

Final plat approval of Section I of Fairlane Farms; preliminary plat approval of Court A of Twin Oak Townhomes, located on David Drive; and preliminary plat of Court B of Twin Oak Townhomes, located at the intersection of David Drive and Laura Lane.

Garrett Re-Elected President

D. D. Garrett Jr. has been re-elected president of the Pitt County Branch of the NAACP.

The action was taken during the monthly meeting at Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church in Farmville Sunday evening. Installation will be held during the mass meeting to be held Jan. 11.

Elected along with Garrett were the following: Willie Henderson, Pervis Cohens, Fannie McCarter, Rev. J. R. Person, Willie Mae Carney and Clarence Moore, vice presidents; Olga M. Mike, secretary; Mary Daughtry, assistant secretary; D. D. Burge, treasurer; and Lucy Jones (church work); Jesse Harris (education); M. W. Rountree (community coordinator); Shirley Brown (youth work); Ann Brown (life membership); Marina Darden (regular membership); Carrie Williams (Freedom Fund); Richard Dupree (legal redress); Donovan Phillips (political action); Willie Pettway (veterans' affairs); James Brown, labor, business and industry); Lucille Sharpe (Christmas seals); and Calvin Henderson (press and publicity), executive committee members.

The business meeting Sunday night was preceded by a sing-spiration with several church groups participating.

Dollar Club Holds Meet

The Dollar Club of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church held its annual Christmas dinner Saturday afternoon at Western Sizzlin Steak house.

Officers elected for 1981 are as follows: James Hardy, president; Mrs. Martha Merritt, vice-president; Mrs. Juanita Green, secretary; Willa Monroe, treasurer; and Deacon Joseph H. Taylor, advisor.

Plans were made to celebrate the churches 60th anniversary in May. Also discussed were objectives and goals for serving the church and community.

Opines Christmas Sales In N.C. To Top Last Year

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians apparently have set aside some of the caution they exercised last Christmas and are staging what could be considered a conservative gift-buying spree.

Many of the frills are being passed by, but practical gifts and those that retain value, such as jewelry, are in demand.

"They're buying practical but they're buying," according to George Henderson, director of the Charlotte Merchants Association.

"There was some doubt about what kind of a Christmas season this would be, sales-wise. But it's turning out to be better than last year from the feedback I've been getting."

G. Wesley Williams, executive director of the Raleigh Merchants Bureau, predicted a 10 percent increase over sales last December in the Raleigh area.

He said higher interest rates have had a slightly depressing effect on sales, "but we'll have an increase this year because people are buying more."

North Carolina shoppers spent about $3.2 billion in December 1979, according to state Revenue Department figures. This year could be better, but statistics are not yet available.

"We've already done better in two weeks of sales than we did in five weeks during the Christmas sales period last year," said Charles Thomas, general manager of Ivey's in downtown Charlotte. "Sales are very good this season and we expect them to get better right up until Christmas eve."

Jim Caronis, a Belk store manager in Charlotte, agreed that luxury items seem to be slow sellers and that shoppers are looking for practical, quality gifts.

"Of course, investment dressing is still popular. People are willing to spend a lot of money to get a classic, quality suit or blazer that they can wear for years," he said.

"From what I've observed, people are just saying to themselves, 'I don't care about the economy. Doggone it, it's Christmas and I'm going to enjoy it.'"

That could be the reason that business is booming at specialty shops — known for their often-costly, luxury gift items.

At Caswell-Massey in Charlotte, an international shop specializing in expensive perfumes and hand-milled soaps, sales are "definitely up," owner Jacques Harris said.

"Our imported perfumes and soaps — it's all selling well," said Ms. Harris, who said her shop sells "everything you would expect to find in an 18th Century apothecary.

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS

Effective January 1, 1981 we find it necessary to add a $3.00 trip charge on all service calls in the city limits of Greenville. All calls outside Greenville city limits, the charge will be 20¢ per mile in addition to the trip charge. We find this necessary in order to overcome the increase in costs of operating and replacing our service trucks.

Opts For Retrenchment

It is fashionable to think of Duke University as having an unlimited money supply, and it undoubtedly is one of the better endowed private universities of the nation.

Even at that, though, Duke cannot carry on an unlimited array of educational programs and maintain the quality of education for which it is well-known.

Thus the institution's board of trustees approved plans last week to eliminate the Departments of Education and Nursing and to reorganize the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

It was not a popular decision. The nursing program fits well with the world famous Duke medical center, and a Department of Education is virtually basic to most colleges and universities.

Yet the Duke administration recognized that there had to be some retrenchment and its aim is a "downsized, reorganized and financially stronger" university.

Like governments, businesses, institutions and individuals Duke has recognized that in these inflationary times it can't have everything. It has opted for keeping its major programs financially and academically strong, even though it means dropping some other good programs.

Industry Work Continues

Greenville Industries, Inc. has chosen a new president, W. W. Speight, the former general counsel. He succeeds the late Eugene West.

It is not always recognized how much this organization has done in bringing quality industry to Pitt County — from obtaining sites at fair prices to making contacts with industrial prospects.

We are certain Greenville Industries will stay active under the leadership of its new president, and will be on the alert for quality industrial prospects.

Senate Test For Reagan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Gen. Alexander Haig's chances to be secretary of state were fading into oblivion when Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd unwittingly came to his rescue with an attack perceived by Republican senators as endangering not merely one Cabinet prospect but Ronald Reagan himself.

Haig seemed finished after Senate Republican leader Howard Baker slipped Reagan's agents a private memo detailing Senate confirmation problems posed by Haig's Watergate background. It was then that Byrd jumped to the attack. Always eager for his regular Saturday news conference to yield a headline, Byrd scored in the Sunday newspapers of Dec. 7 when he warned that Haig would face deep trouble in Senate confirmation.

Seasoned Washington operatives on the Reagan transition team quickly relayed word to the president-elect back at Pacific Palisades: He simply could not let Bob Byrd pick his Cabinet for him. Having smelled a little blood in previous small victories over Reagan, the Senate sharks were encouraged to attack again. Furthermore, throwing Haig's carcass overboard would only prompt fresh attack from senatorial carnivores.

Just as the Soviet Union can be counted on to test a new American president, so does Congress. The attack on Haig, regardless of its merits, was a test of Reagan's willingness to stand up to senatorial bullying. If he would not stick to the man he had selected for secretary of state, he scarcely could be expected to confront senatorial arrogance in years to come.

That selection had been pondered by Reagan's closest advisers long before the election. Haig was by no means the choice of the right. Anti-detentists feared his old connection with Henry Kissinger and resented his ambiguous testimony in the 1979 Senate ratification hearing on SALT II.

Even after industrialist

George Shultz took himself out of consideration, Haig was not secure for the State Department. One of Reagan's most trusted advisers paid the president-elect a confidential visit to warn of the luggage carried by the general: the Kissinger connection, his role in arranging the Nixon pardon and those hours and hours of recordings of confidential discussions between President Richard M. Nixon and his trusted chief of staff, Al Haig, over Watergate-defense strategy.

Reagan persisted. He admired Haig's record as NATO commander and liked him personally. Haig was set for the State Department when the New York Times of Dec. 4 carried a column by Anthony Lewis condemning Haig as a "careerist" with "no feeling for American constitutionalism."

That caught the eye of Sen. Baker, soon to be majority leader of the newly-Republican Senate. He delegated his legislative assistant, Howard Liebengood (soon to be Senate sergeant-at-arms) to list the arguments that would be raised against Haig in confirmation hearings. Liebengood's document became a formidable weapon against the general.

The mood in the Republican cloakroom grew sour. Senate Republican Whip Ted Stevens told associates that putting a military man in the State Department was bad policy. The mood was transferred to Reagan's own aides. "Why do we need this rock in our knapsack?" asked one. As the weekend of Dec. 6-7 approached, Haig's prospects were adjudged at no better than 50-50 by Reagan insiders.

But more than Haig was at stake. In the month since the election, Reagan had permitted himself to be shoved around by the Senate grandees. He had acquiesced in plans (later scuttled) to pass a tax cut not his own; he had not pressed his own opposition to lame-duck passage of the "super-fund" bill against toxic wastes; he had permitted Senate opposi-

Math Teacher Push

By JOHN J. KILPATRICK

Limitations On Reagan

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Faced with a critical shortage of math teachers in grades seven through 12, a group of state educators are preparing a push in the 1981 General Assembly to get a salary differential for certified math instructors.

This would be the first step through the door of merit pay for teachers, and a move which high echelon officials hope would lead for the strength to push that door wide open.

The notion that one teacher should make more than another is the most volatile political conflict going on in the field of education. The North Carolina Association of Educators has fought any hint of such action, arguing that there is no honest way to judge professional teachers so that one can be paid more than another with comparable credentials and experience.

But it is clear to top decision makers on the State Board of Education, in the Department of Public Instruction, in the General Assembly, and in local school systems that merit pay is essential to upgrading the quality of classroom teachers.

No Action

So far, the leadership has failed to find either the political courage or the mechanism to produce the result which is almost universally accepted: that better teachers would be rewarded for their efforts, while the mediocre or worse would be penalized.

This time, education leaders are carefully searching through the political process in hopes of getting the merit pay off dead center. David Bruton, chairman of the State Board of Education; Gene Causby, executive director of the statewide School Board Association; and former personnel chief in the Department of Public Instruction, Robert Jones, head of the math section of the Department of Public Instruction; and members of the governor's advisory council on science policy are working on strategy to move the issue through the General Assembly.

The lever is a severe shortage in math fields across North Carolina, largely created by the exploding demand for high technology people in areas of computers and electronics. People strong in math and with computer expertise are in great demand — at jobs paying twice what teachers make. With IBM, Data General and General Electric already off and running with such installations in North Carolina, and Gov. Jim Hunt pushing to turn the state into a major microelectronics center, experts can only see the math teacher shortage getting worse.

"So, we are taking a page from private industry's book," says Robert Jones of the state's math division. "We are talking about offering a salary differential for math teachers. There are those who want to work with kids, who would like to teach, but are attracted by the salaries paid in private industry. If we can provide just a small boost, perhaps it would help."

Small Boost

At this point, the proposal would only amount to five percent; probably not enough to make a great difference, but representing at least a start.

Other steps are also underway to combat the math problem: high school counselors are spreading the word that there is a math shortage despite overcrowding in many other teaching fields, and that grant and loan programs are available for those who major in math and enter the teaching profession. Assistance is also being given to teachers who are working in math areas even though not qualified — encouraging them to go back to school to get certificates.

Across the state, more than 45 percent of the teachers who are handling at WASHINGTON — For the past six weeks, ever since the Reagan landslide, persons close to the incoming president have been trying to hose down the leaping flames of expectation. Even with the best advisers and the most cooperative Congress, there is not but so much Mr. Reagan could do in his first few months in office.

True, all true. If interest rates are close to 20 percent late in January, Mr. Reagan cannot make them go down. If these interest rates continue to depress the stock market, he cannot make the market go up. Do events in the Middle East threaten a stunning increase in the price of oil? Mr. Reagan cannot control these events. The gentleman cannot overnight create jobs, build houses, sell automobiles, and put the invidious commies on the run.

But there are certain things that Mr. Reagan can do, on his own authority as president. He can set immediately to work suspending or rescinding scores of costly regulations that are about to fall upon the struggling American economy.

For example: The Department of Energy has completed 18 months of intensive work on a massive regulation having to do with energy labels on nine appliances. The basic proposal consists of 400 pages of regulation and explanatory material. This is supplemented by an additional 1,000 pages of technical documentation. Seventeen departmental contractors have filed 75 supporting reports. More than 1,300 written comments swell the depressing record.

Is all this regulation necessary? Milton Stewart, chief counsel for advocacy, Small Business Administration, calls the proposed rule a "regulatory disaster." A Department of Justice spokesman finds it "impossible to demonstrate the need for or efficacy of the proposed regulations." A witness from the Department of Commerce testified that the Department of Energy's own data "demonstrate convincingly that benefits to consumers are exaggerated and that costs to manufacturers are understated."

On the other hand, it may fairly be assumed that Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and his key people are enchanted by their own regulation. Presumably they believe the rule will save more in energy than it will cost the appliance purchaser in higher prices. But as of January 20, Mr. Duncan and his key people will be gone, and Mr. Reagan's new secretary and key people will be moving in. This is what the election was all about. Without significant harm to anyone, this questionable rule could be indefinitely suspended.

For example: The Department of Transportation and the Environmental Protection Agency have a dozen regulations that are now cooked and loaded. These deal with airbags, with heavy duty truck emission standards, with ambient air standards, with fuel additive testing programs, with standards on small industrial boilers. At a more propitious time, when the economy has regained its health, perhaps the multibillion dollar costs of these rules may be acceptable. But the time is not now.

Almost everyone, it may be surmised, is generally in favor of clean air, clean water and safe workplaces. But there is a serious question that pending regulations in these areas can be justified in terms of net benefits after heavy costs are deducted. The estimated annual cost to industry of a new rule on workplace noise is $250 million. Could the truly bad problems be solved for less?

Many other regulations impose paperwork demands that are clearly unreasonable. The endless reports demanded of civil rights administrators — reports that detail employment by sex, race, age and the like — are stupid, degrading and frivolous. This past August the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts sent out a form demanding to know, among other things, how many "Hebrews" were employed in the judicial system. The form was recalled, but its spirit lingers on.

Other Editors Say It Takes Time

(Kannapolis Independent)

It has been two and a half months since the Kannapolis Sanitary District petitioned the state for permission to fluoridate its water to prevent tooth decay.

The other day we wondered about the status of the resolution in its slow movement through the governmental process.

Bachman S. Brown, Jr., the KSD's legal advisor who hand-delivered the resolution to Raleigh officials in mid-September, said he hadn't heard a word. Everette Murph, KSD chairman, said he hadn't heard anything either. Both wondered what was going on.

We called the dental health section of the N.C. Department of Human Resources and asked about that petition. The receptionist referred us to the regional dentist, Dr. Bruce Hawkins at Black Mountain. Dr. Hawkins told us that the matter was in the hands of the water supply section, which is responsible for checking out the water source, the treatment plant and the distribution system to make certain that they were ready for fluoridation. He said Darrell Herndon, the regional engineer who would know where the petition stood, was out in the field somewhere.

We finally got up with Chuck Rundgren, chief of the water supply branch of the N.C. Department of Human Resources. He checked with his staff people and called us back.

Everything looks fine, he assured us, but it takes time to check out all the facilities connected with the distribution of the water and the plans and specifications for the fluoridation equipment and chemicals. Matters such as this have to be dealt with between emergencies, he explained.

He guessed that the Kannapolis fluoridation matter should be cleared out within another month.

It seems that everything is wrapped in red tape. It takes time to cut through this red tape, and the process can't be hurried up.

In dealing with government on any level, you have to have the patience of Job.

Losing Perspective And Shirt

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When the prime rate hits 20 percent you begin to lose your perspective as well as your shirt. You know that 20 percent is high, but how high? Well, would you believe it was 2 percent in 1949?

Losing one's economic reference point is common today, because most of the usual measurements of economic health are bouncing around like a dinghy in a squall, leaving most people unaware of their whereabouts.

It took 17 years, until 1966, for the prime rate to reach 5 percent. But in less than 8 months this year that same measure of borrowing costs fell from 20 percent to under 11 and then back to 20 percent.

Where it will go from here is really a matter of guesswork. There are some who foresee 30 percent, and others who say the rate is now close to its top. But even bank chairmen, such as Walter Wriston of Citibank, have found the rate moving opposite to their just-issued forecasts.

Whichever way it moves, however, you may be certain that nobody for a very long while will have any good idea of where the prime rate "should" be. That assurance is gone as surely as the 2 percent prime.

More familiar, but equally confusing these days, is the consumer price index, a measurement that as recently as 1959 through 1965 never rose as much as 2 percent in a year. Even in 1967 it rose only 3.4 percent.

That latter year is an important one, because it is now the base year for determining relative prices. For most purposes you can pick any year and say it's prices equal 100, and then measure future changes from it.

Since the federal government chooses to use 1967, we are able to calculate that prices today are at an all-time level of 254.1, or that they were in October. That is, according to Federal officials, retail prices today are about 2½ times what they were in 1967.

Nevertheless, the once slow-moving CPI is so volatile now that its rise in just one month sometimes exceed the changes for entire years during the early 1960s. In fact, so swiftly do prices change today that few people can say what a can of beans "should" cost.

They find it difficult also to relate to the size of federal budget deficits, to increases in retail sales, to declines in productivity, to the low rate of savings ... maybe even to their own paychecks.

Simply for the sake of perspective, consider this contrast: In fiscal 1974 the federal budget deficit was $4.7 billion, but in fiscal 1980 it was $59 billion, and the combined deficits since 1974, including the anticipated deficit for fiscal 1981, will exceed $300 billion.

Such contrasts give some indication of direction, and probably serve as navigation guides of a sort. But now hear this: All those big budget numbers are to some extent distorted by inflation. And for rough calculations, the CPI just referred to is a measure of the distortion.

Those budget figures, as you will recognize on reflection, include a lot of inflation. The dollar used to measure deficits today is not the dollar used to measure deficits yesterday. It's like measuring the depth of the snow with a 12-inch foot one day and a 10-inch foot the next.

And the same distortions apply to the level of retail sales, to the measurement of gross national product, and of course to the nation's income. Your paycheck proves that when you take it to the store.

No wonder at all that people feel adrift in uncharted waters. All the buoys have lost their anchors and the landmarks have faded into the mists. And we sit here lost, wondering when the fog will lift.

To the editor:

The approaching holiday season brings joy to the lives of many of us. The hustle and bustle of shopping for gifts keeps us busy. This time of year has a special magic all its own.

It's important for all of us to be mindful of those who won't feel this magic. The hungry people of the world don't share our joy. For them, the change of season is meaningless. Their daily struggle to stay alive is all they know.

Hunger can be stopped. This reality further exemplifies this tragedy! Much is being done by a select few, but unity is needed for true success.

All human beings must unite in this struggle to save our brothers and sisters from starvation. We are all part of the same human family.

As you struggle with last minute holiday plans, be sure to remember to give generously to those whose vital struggles we will never know.

THE BOUNDARY LINE
A minister had announced that he was going to preach on the topic, "Proclaiming the Word of God."

The minister apologized for what he called a mistake. He seemed embarrassed by the whole thing ... but he didn't need to be for he might very well have preached on the topic "Proclaiming the Word of God."

There is a world of God and there is a world of the devil, and you and I live in both of them. The world of the devil is a world of selfishness, anger, and violence. It is a world of introspection and brooding. It is a world of jealous thoughts and hostilities.

But the Bible describes the world on the other side of that boundary line. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, self control." This is the World of God. —Elisha Douglass

Moratorium On Electric Cut-Offs

RALEIGH — County social services departments, are certifying eligible low-income households for a five-month moratorium on having their utilities cut off by electric and natural gas companies for failure to pay their bills, according to the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

On November 4, the North Carolina Utilities commission issued an order which requires these utilities to give written notice to their customers and contact them personally where possible before terminating their service. The order also states that customers must be provided an opportunity to make installment payments over six months for past and current bills.

"In addition to these requirements in the Commission's order, it states that services cannot be discontinued for certain households from November 1, 1980 through March 31, 1981. This is referred to as a limited moratorium on termination of services," said Robert H. Ward, director of the Division of Social Services. Ward said that households eligible for the moratorium must have at least one elderly member (age 65 or over) or a handicapped member. They also must not be able to pay their utility bill and meet the eligibility requirements for the Low-Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP). They must be certified by the county social services departments that they are eligible for LIEAP. The household does not actually have to receive assistance through LIEAP to qualify, though.

While Jimmy Carter's defiance of Congress proved fatal, subservience by Ronald Reagan would have the same result. The abandonment of Haig would have branded Reagan nearly two months before Inauguration Day as a president who can be bullied.

That was when Byrd came to the rescue, with so frontal a challenge to Reagan as well as to Haig from the leader of the Senate's Democratic minority. Whereas private memoranda by Howard Baker could not be depicted by Reagan agents as undermining presidential authority, public threats by Bob Byrd certainly could.

Reagan's men now argued with Republican senators that it was intolerable that Byrd, New York Times columnist or even Republican senators were picking Reagan's Cabinet. It was past time, they added, to bury the politics of Watergate. Soon, key senators — including that independent-minded Democrat, Henry M. Jackson — put out the word that Haig surely could be confirmed. The battle was over when Baker publicly put himself on Haig's side.

By good luck mostly, Reagan had survived a severe congressional test. There is no serious doubt that Haig will be confirmed, possibly without much trouble. It is a lesson for the president-elect to ponder as he confronts senatorial obstacles to his radical plans for reform of taxes, the budget and the national defense that will determine the fate of his presidency.

T. L. Edwards On Branch Bank Board

The board of directors of Branch Banking & Trust Co., meeting in Wilson, elected Tommy L. Edwards to the bank's Greenville city board, according to Carl E. Brown Jr., assistant vice president and branch manager of the office.

Edwards is president of Carolina Dairies Co. Inc. of Greenville and Kinston.

He attended Grainger High School and Campbell University and served in the Army.

Edwards currently serves as president of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club, chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, and is a member of the Greenville Golf and Country Club. He is a director for the N.C. Dairymen Association and the East Carolina University Foundation.

TOMMY EDWARDS

He will serve on the 1981 Salvation Army advisory board and will serve as chairman of the stewardship committee of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church in the coming year.

The new board member is married to the former Carla Hartsfield of Kinston.

will go out and prisons will stay open," said Robert Havel, a spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget.

But Havel said federal employees in the departments of State, Justice, Commerce, Treasury and Health and Human Services would be prohibited from doing routine work such as government research or processing grants.

Before this year, there were often lapses in appropriations and agencies simply continued working until Congress passed the needed bill.

But early in 1980, the Justice Department issued an opinion that said normal activity could not continue without money from Congress. The first affected agency was the Federal Trade Commission, which had to close for two days in May and for one day later in the year when Congress failed to meet deadlines for passing money bills.

The latest chapter of the prolonged and increasingly bitter lame-duck session saw the Senate pass two versions Monday night of the appropriations measure, one a "bare bones" proposal and the other including a lengthy list of amendments to provide money for legislators' pet projects.

The more expensive "Christmas tree" version had been given little chance of House approval.

Proposals for a $10,000 pay raise for members of Congress had earlier been dropped.

When the Senate measure was taken up by the House, members from New York state sought to obtain approval for $2 million for the 1980 Winter Olympics, exactly the kind of legislation congressional leaders were trying to avoid to pass the spending bill.

Senate approval of the scaled-down version came after nearly two weeks of congressional confrontation. The "bare bones" measure was designed to provide the minimum necessary to keep the government functioning into 1981.

Without authority to spend money, according to Havel, the departments involved could only "carry out an orderly shutdown while still protecting lives and property."

That means, he explained that all employees of the departments would have to go to work today, but could do only work that was essential or part of closing the agency.

At the Justice Department, spokesman Robert M. Smith said employees would do only business related to the protection of life and property and police and emergency functions, plus closing the department.

Smith said Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti would cancel a news conference this morning. But, he added, the department Christmas party would go on because it was being paid for by employee contributions.

missioners said the city school board, "asked that I make contact with the commissioners in an effort to determine what future course of action is open to us in regards to the study of the merger of the two systems. It would be appreciated if you would...provide us with some direction as to how the Greenville City Board of Education might now proceed to comply with the commissioners' request."

"The Greenville City Board of Education in its commitment to provide a strong public school system for citizens of this district stands ready to discuss with the Pitt County commissioners alternatives that are now available to insure that its commitment can be met," Cox's letter concluded.

Commissioners, commenting on the letter, indicated that essentially, no action can be taken.

Commissioner Charles Gaskins said simply that the effort by the board to plan a merger of the two school systems was an attempt, "to improve education in Pitt County."

In other action yesterday, the board named commissioner Kelly Barnhill to the Board of Health; Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger to the Mid-East Emergency Medical Services Committee; Dr. Jack Allison, Don Davenport and Stuart Savage to the Mid-East Region Q Emergency Medical Council; and Mel Joyner to the joint Greenville City-County Planning Board.

Winterville Club Meets

The Winterville Ruritan Club held its regular monthly meeting last week to install the 1981 officers.

Leck Keeter installed the following officers: President Tony Moore; Vice President Richard Minnick; Secretary Don Boyle; Treasurer Paul Hunsucker; and Director Elwood Nobles.

President Tony Moore recognized last year's president, Elwood Nobles, for his outstanding leadership during the past year. He also appointed committee chairmen and assigned monthly program chairmen.

Donald Boyle explained the Community Watch Program. Following his explanation, the club approved this as one of the objectives for the coming year. Everyone was reminded of the special blood drive to be held December 26 at the Moose Lodge.

Leroy Smith gave a report on the success of the fruit cake sale.

Final Reply On U.S. Hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The only thing blocking release of the American hostages is a U.S. guarantee to meet Iran's financial terms, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said today after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini approved Iran's "final reply" on the hostage issue.

"We only require a financial guarantee from the United States to be given to the Algerian government, which is responsible for Iranian interests in the United States, and then (they can) take the spies," Rajai told Iran's official Pars news agency.

"It is up to the United States to take the spies from Iran anytime it wishes," Rajai said, adding the 52 Americans could be returned "either on the feast or the birthday, whatever it likes to call it," an apparent reference to Christmas, the birthday of Jesus.

"God willing, we will soon not have a problem of hostages in Iran. This is a dead issue for us and we gave our answer because it was taking so much of our time," Khomeini met with Rajai and Executive Affairs Minister Behzad Nabavi today, the hostages' 409th day in captivity.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti news agency quoted Algeria's foreign minister as saying the United States provided new clarifications to Iran on the hostage issue two days ago. The agency, quoting Foreign Minister Mohammed Ben Yehia, did not give details of what clarifications might have been offered.

Man Charged In Stabbing

NEWPORT NEWS — Greenville area native Curtis Taft has been charged in Newport News, Va. with the knife-stabbing murder of his wife, Bernice Shelley Taft, also a Greenville area native.

Newport News police said the body of Bernice Taft was found the morning of Dec. 3 at her residence, 3204 Marshall Avenue, Newport News. She was six months pregnant, police records showed. The couple's two-year-old daughter, Janet, was in the residence at the time and was turned over to relatives, police said. Mrs. Taft was a former employee of Prepsirt Company, Greenville.

Taft is being held in Newport News, with probable cause hearing time not yet set, police said.

Col. Sanders Dies, Age 90

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Harland Sanders, the white-haired, white-suited Kentucky colonel who parlayed sales ability and a secret recipe into a fried chicken empire, died of pneumonia today at Jewish Hospital. He was 90.

Sanders, internationally known as the founder and symbol of the Kentucky Fried Chicken fast food franchise, died at 7:40 a.m. EST, according to company spokesman John Cox.

HARLAN SANDERS

Sanders, who was diagnosed earlier this year as suffering from leukemia, had entered the hospital Nov. 7 for treatment of an infection of the kidney and bladder. He developed pneumonia and lapsed into critical condition.

Sanders' doctor said he "went comfortably," according to Cox. "The doctor checked on him an hour before he died and saw that he was failing fast," Cox said.

Cox said a private nurse was in attendance when Sanders died.

CARTOON SPECIAL

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor a Christmas Cartoon Special at 6:30 p.m., Thursday, December 18 in the Administrative Building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

Children ages three to 12 are invited to take part in activities such as games, cartoons, and a visit from Santa Claus. Refreshments will be served.

Rescue Squad Gives Award

FALKLAND — The Falkland Rescue Squad honored one of its own last night with a special award for service beyond the call of duty.

Luther Hedgepeth was surprised with a plaque in recognition of his devotion to the squad's work for the community. The presentation was made by Squad Captain Frankie Edwards during the squad's annual Christmas dinner for members and spouses.

New officers were installed. They are Frankie Edwards, captain; Ruel Tyer, first lieutenant; Ed Cobb, training officer; Edith Edwards, secretary-treasurer; Rose Wilkinson, parliamentarian; Alice Mae Baker, chaplain; and Edna Corbett, social treasurer.

Hedge Against Inflation Overridden By High Court

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, fashioning something of a compromise, has given its nine members and all other federal judges hefty pay raises while rejecting an apparent lifelong hedge against inflation.

By an 8-0 vote Monday, the high court ruled the Congress had twice violated the Constitution when blocking previous pay raises for federal judges.

The decision boosts the salary of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who authored the court's opinion, from $75,000 to $84,700. The court's eight other members got their salaries raised from $72,000 to $81,300.

Salaries for all federal trial judges were raised from $54,500 to $61,600; and salaries for all federal appeals court judges rose from $57,500 to $65,000.

The ruling affects 669 judgeships.

In addition, the decision provides a one-time award of back pay for judges who were on the federal bench in 1976. That amounts to $1,333 for Burger; $1,250 for his Supreme Court brethren; $875 for appeals judges and $833 for trial judges. Monday's ruling stems from two suits by 13 federal judges and is based on that portion of the Constitution providing for all federal judges "a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office."

In 1975, Congress passed the Executive Salary Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act. It applied to most high-ranking federal officials, including judges, and made their salaries subject to annual raises based on the percentage of the pay hikes given to lower-ranking government workers.

Marijuana Arrest Made

Jeffery Atterson Warren, 19 of Raleigh, was arrested by Greenville police Sunday night on charges of possession of marijuana.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Warren was charged about 10:20 p.m. after officers allegedly found a quantity of marijuana in his possession near the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets.

But in 1976 through 1979, Congress withheld the cost-of-living increase from the higher-ups. That, the judges' suits charged, violated the Constitution's compensation wording by denying them raises provided for by the 1975 law.

Patrol School Is Completed

Jeffrey Ray McLawhorn, a former Greenville police officer, is one of 42 Highway Patrol cadets scheduled to graduate Friday from the 68th Highway Patrol Basic School.

McLawhorn will be stationed in Kinston in Lenoir County following his graduation, Patrol officials said.

Robert L. Pence, special agent-in-charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Charlotte Division will speak at the graduation ceremonies.

The 20-week basic school includes 850 hours of instruction in more than 90 different topics, ranging from human relations, criminal and constitutional law and firearms, to precision driving.

The controversy placed the Supreme Court in the potentially embarrassing position of authorizing a potentially lifelong annual cost-of-living pay boost for all judges.

Burger's opinion said the 1976 and 1979 laws withholding the raises were unconstitutional, but the 1977 and 1978 laws were valid. The crucial difference, Burger said, was when the legislation was signed into law by the president.

In 1976 and 1979, those signings took place after the pay increases were to have taken effect.

"The compensation clause does not erect an absolute ban on all legislation that conceivably could leave an adverse effect on compensation of judges," Burger said in upholding the 1977 and 1978 laws signed before the increases were to take effect.

In other matters Monday, the court:

—Barred federal judges from reviewing Federal Trade Commission complaints against private industry before the commission completes its administrative rulings on those matters.

—Narrowed, in a case from Delaware, the time period in which workers who want to claim they were illegally fired must file federal suits. That time period begins when a worker is informed of the boss' decision, the court said.

—Left intact rulings that bar San Francisco school officials from setting aside at least 25 percent of all new construction contracts for minority-owned businesses.

—Agreed to decide, in a case from Newport, R.I., if cities successfully sued for violating constitutional rights can be forced to pay punitive damages. At stake for Newport and its city officials is the $125,000 in punitive damages it was ordered to pay for trying to cancel a 1975 music concert.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a small loss today as the bank prime lending rate climbed to a record 21 percent.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.04 to 909.56 by noon.

Loser outnumbered gainers by a 4-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Not long after the market opened, New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust raised its prime rate from 20 to 21 percent. Many other large banks swiftly matched that increase in the basic charge on blue chip loans.

The previous record high of 20 percent was first reached early this year, and then equaled with the last general round of increases last week.

The latest jump came as no real surprise. But analysts said high rates were nevertheless weighing down the market, by heightening fears of a return to recession and at the same time luring money away from stocks into interest-bearing investments.

Stocks sensitive to interest-rate prospects were mixed, suggesting divergent opinions among traders about how soon rates might peak. Commonwealth Edison rose 1/8 to 16 1/2 and American Telephone & Telegraph gained 1/8 to 45 1/8.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .02 to 74.29. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.09 at 332.19.

ONCE ACCUSED — Jackie Presser, Teamsters Union vice president who was once accused by an FBI informant as being controlled by organized crime, was selected as a senior economic adviser by President-elect Ronald Reagan on Monday. Reagan Unaware Of Reputation

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
 Ronald Reagan says he was unaware that a Teamsters Union official named as a senior adviser to one of his transition teams is reputed to have links with organized crime.

Jackie Presser, a Teamsters vice president from Cleveland, was once accused by an FBI informant in court testimony of taking orders from the city's organized crime boss. He is also a defendant in a suit brought two years ago by the Carter administration's Labor Department alleging misuse of union pension funds.

Presser, considered a possible successor to union president Frank E. Fitzsimmons, heatedly denied having any organized crime ties at a news conference Monday after his appointment as a senior transition adviser on economics and liaison to organized labor.

"I'm sure that the U.S. president (elect) as well as his Cabinet would not make an appointment such as this unless my record was impeccable," Presser told reporters in Cleveland.

In Los Angeles, where Reagan is spending a quiet week at his home, he said, "I was not aware" of any allegations linking Presser to organized crime.

"If that's true, that will be investigated and brought out," Reagan told reporters at Santa Monica Airport on Monday after returning by helicopter from a day at his ranch in Santa Barbara.

Asked why the appointment was made, Reagan said, "Mr. Presser happens to be an official ... of the Teamsters organization in Ohio and I think he was a legitimate contact with labor."

At a Monday news briefing in Washington, Reagan spokesman Jim Brady dismissed as "conjecture" the allegations that Presser had

Reggie Ready With Advice

Yankees Sign Winfield

NEW YORK (AP) — Yankee Stadium may not be the Bronx Zoo any more but New York City is still a lion's den. The source for that information is Reggie Jackson, who was on hand Monday for the end of Dave Winfield's cross-country baseball odyssey.

"I'm sure we'll talk and rap about how to deal with the city," Jackson said shortly after Winfield became the richest free agent in baseball history, signing with the New York Yankees for a reported 8-10 years at something approaching $1.5 million a year, yet insisting he could have had more from other teams.

"It's a lion's den," Jackson said of New York City. "It's the greatest place to play, but also the most difficult. It can be Disneyland or it can be hell."

The 29-year-old Winfield, who opted for free agency after starring with the San Diego Padres for eight frustrating seasons, is used to the latter atmosphere. He was roundly booed in San Diego last season after announcing his intentions.

"I'm not worried about that," he said. "After what I went through my final year with the Padres, I think I can handle just about anything. I enjoyed the time I spent in San Diego, but now I am anxious to see how I perform with the motivation of playing for a championship contender."

For that reason, Winfield said he chose the Yankees over remaining in the National League with the crosstown New York Mets, who staggered home fifth in the NL East after three consecutive last-place finishes.

During Winfield's eight-year career in San Diego, the Yankees won four American League East Division titles, three pennants and two world championships while the Padres finished as high as fourth only twice.

"The Mets were right in it until the very end," said the 6-foot-6 outfielder's agent, Al Frohman. "But basically they just weren't in as good a position talentwise."

Winfield delayed his decision to give the Mets time to acquire some solid hitters at last week's winter baseball meetings. They struck out, however.

Winfield declined to disclose the length of his new contract, except to say that it was "definitely not the highest offer."

Frohman indicated, however, that Winfield would finish his career with the Yankees. "There will be no more contracts, most likely," he said.

Although Winfield and Jackson are primarily right fielders, both said they expected no problems. Winfield probably will get a shot at left field.

"I hit 40 home runs last year and I think Gene (Manager Gene Michael) can find a spot for me," Jackson said. "I'm sure they'll find spots for both of us."

Winfield's pact figures to be a complex one, probably containing numerous bonus and incentive clauses and perhaps other options, as well. It is believed to be tied to the cost-of-living index.

Frohman said Winfield was "not looking for the top money available" and signed with the Yankees for three reasons.

Williams, 'Sonics' Still Deadlocked

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Remember Gus Williams, the speedy guard who led the Seattle SuperSonics to the National Basketball Association championship in 1979 and has topped the team in scoring the last three years?

This season the 6-foot-2 Williams has yet to don a uniform bearing Seattle or any other team name. Since the season is more than one-third over, some folks are starting to get nervous — particularly in Seattle, where the Sonics have stumbled to a disappointing 15-17.

It's a no-win situation, for both Williams and the Sonics.

The problem is that Williams became a free agent at the end of last season, but he's not really free.

Under terms of the Robertson Agreement between the NBA and the Players Association, any team that signs Williams must pay compensation — in the form of veteran players, draft choices or cash — to the Sonics. If the teams can't reach agreement, compensation is set by Commissioner Larry O'Brien. And since Williams made the All-NBA second team last season, that compensation figure is to be mighty high.

To further complicate the issue, the compensation system expires at the end of this season and will be replaced by the right of first refusal. That means the old team can keep a player who has completed his contractual obligations by matching the best offer he receives. Although it has yet to be proven, this is expected to help the player's bargaining position, since he'll be able to deal with teams that won't have to worry about compensation.

Williams received a reported $175,000 last season. The Sonics offered him more than three times that amount in each year of a long-term deal, but Williams and his agent, Howard Slusher of Los Angeles, turned that down. They were unable to reach agreement with any other team, however, at least partially because interested clubs feared the compensation question.

So when the season started, Williams was on the sidelines — and neither he nor the Sonics were happy about the situation. By the way, if he sat out the year and did not sign until the 1981-82 season, his new team would still have to pay compensation because the rule that is in effect at the time the player first became a free agent is the one that applies.

If all of the above sounds complicated, hold on. It gets worse.

While they were discussing a new long-term contract, the Sonics also offered Williams a one-year contract under the same terms that applied during the 1979-80 season. That was done, according to the Sonics, to protect whatever compensation rights they had under terms of the Robertson Agreement. As expected, this contract was rejected.

Two months later, Williams was still on the sidelines and the Sonics were still losing, so the idea of the one-year contract was revived.

The Sonics opened a spot for Williams on their roster by waiving guard Rudy White and a deal was all set to be announced 10 days ago. But Seattle contended that in spite of the agreement it retained its compensation rights if Williams signed with another club next season, based on Williams' original refusal of the one-year contract that was offered Sept. 30.

Williams and Slusher balked at this stipulation and refused to sign unless the Sonics agreed to waive any compensation claim, which the club wouldn't do. So Williams and Slusher asked that a hearing be held before Telford Taylor, the court-appointed Special Master who oversees disputes related to the Robertson Agreement.

The problem is that the Robertson Agreement doesn't spell out what applies. "There is one transition paragraph," said Russ Granik, the NBA's General Counsel, "but it doesn't cover instances where the player first rejects the one-year offer, then accepts it."

That hearing will be held Wednesday in New York, but don't expect to see Williams suiting up in a hurry.

The NBA and the Sonics contend that there is nothing for Taylor to decide right now, since the compensation issue doesn't come up until and unless Williams signs elsewhere.

Ho, Ho, Ho! NY Owner Plays Santa

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Leave it to George Steinbrenner. The man has classic timing.

Ten days before Christmas, the New York Yankee owner played Santa Claus. One week to the day after Commissioner Bowie Kuhn warned about the siege of free agent-created "economic pneumonia" plaguing baseball, Steinbrenner gave Dave Winfield all but the Bronx side of the Triborough Bridge to autograph a Yankee contract.

Ho, ho, ho! Not to worry, Bowie. Steinbrenner assured all listeners that Winfield would not be the highest paid player in baseball.

"Oh no," he said. "I'm sure Dave Parker and possibly a few others make more."

But that's not what they were saying in other corners of the room.

There was testimony, for example, from Dick Moss, an expert witness. Moss serves as Winfield's attorney and sat in on most of the talks with Steinbrenner. He also negotiated the $1 million a year free agent contract for Nolan Ryan with the Houston Astros last winter. Until now, that was the barometer by which all megabucks deals had to be measured. "I called Nolan last night and told him the pressure's off," said Moss. "He's not No. 1 anymore."

Then there was Al Frohman, the agent who looks like a pint-sized Zero Motel. Frohman, who once catered bar mitzvahs and weddings for a living, said there was at least one other club prepared to go far higher for Winfield than what the Yankees paid.

"One offer ... if the figure were ever to be printed, I'm afraid the guy would be taken to Creedmoor," said Frohman.

There is, however, no clinic at that New York State-operated mental facility to treat economic pneumonia.

But who would be so crass as to discuss money at an historic moment like this? Certainly not Winfield.

"There are market values for anything," he said. "In San Diego, I had a different value. It's like appraising a precious stone. This is my value in New York. I plan to contribute on the field and off."

Certainly not Steinbrenner. "We have pledged nothing but total support for the Winfield Foundation and its program of health examination for underprivileged youngsters," Steinbrenner said. "This is so important. Some of these people don't get to see a doctor until they're 25 or 26."

But there were some noseys in the audience who insisted on finding out about dollars and cents. Steinbrenner pleaded innocent to the charge of spreading the economic pneumonia.

"It's not George Steinbrenner's money," he said, sounding oh so sincere. "It's the people of New York's money. The fans ... 2.6 million of them last year. They enabled us to sign Winfield."

"People talk about my desire to win, but you should add two words to that — 'for New York.'"

Right about there, you'd expect to hear Frank Sinatra's recording of "New York, New York" in the background. It's a shame George didn't think of it.

For the signing of Winfield, Steinbrenner paraded out the some of Yankees' best names. Willie Randolph, Reggie Jackson and Rick Cerone showed up for the coronation. So did Yogi Berra and a couple of the scalps that hang from Steinbrenner's belt.

At one table sat former manager Dick Howser, who was in town for a Yankee organizational meeting. He is a scouting supervisor now after resigning as pilot a couple of weeks ago. His resignation was not unexpected and it was graciously accepted by Steinbrenner, who after all, would never force a man to manage the Yankees against his will.

Also on hand was Mike Ferraro, once the Yankees' third base coach until Steinbrenner found a better assignment for him. He was seated on the first base side of the room.

Howser and Ferraro are the ghosts of seasons past. Winfield is the ghost of seasons future. If Tiny Tim ... or Bowie Kuhn ... has been around, he might have said, "God bless us, one and all."

Mets Obtain Jones From San Diego

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, foiled in their bid to obtain free agent outfielder Dave Winfield, who signed with the New York Yankees, swung their first big deal of the winter Monday, obtaining pitcher Randy Jones from the San Diego Padres.

"Anytime you have a chance to acquire a pitcher of the caliber of Randy Jones, you have to take it," said Mets General Manager Frank Cashen.

"I know he had arm problems last year but the reports we have on him are that he is fine now. A healthy Randy Jones is going to be a fine addition to our pitching staff."

The Mets sent pitcher John Pacella and infielder-outfielder Jose Moreno to the Padres for Jones.

In 1975 and 1976, Jones was one of the top pitchers in baseball, compiling earned run averages of 2.24 and 2.74. In 1976, he won the NL Cy Young Award after posting a 22-14 record and tying Christy Mathewson's league record by going 68 innings without giving up a walk.

However, in an injury plagued 1980 season, Jones compiled a 5-13 record.

DePaul Remains No. 1

4 ACC Teams In Top 20

NEW YORK (AP) — DePaul, Kentucky and UCLA maintained their stranglehold on the top three spots in The Associated Press college basketball poll Tuesday as defending national champion Louisville — a surprising victor over then No. 4 Maryland last week — returned to the Top 20 despite its 1-3 record.

DePaul, 5-0, claimed the No. 1 position for the third consecutive week, collecting 32 first-place votes and 1,150 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. But the Blue Demons, who posted easy victories over Northern Illinois and Texas last week, do not have much breathing room. Preseason favorite Kentucky, 4-0, is just 12 points back after getting 23 first-place votes.

And the Wildcats are gaining momentum.

Last week, DePaul held a 32-20 first-place vote advantage over Kentucky in the poll and a 24-point margin. Two weeks ago, the poll gave the Blue Demons a 38-15 margin in No. 1 ballots and 1,171 points to 1,085 for the Wildcats.

UCLA, 4-0 following a triumph over Pepperdine, was third, being tabbed No. 1 on two ballots and receiving 1,039 points.

Oregon State, 5-0, and Virginia, 5-0, each moved up a slot and took over the No. 4 and 5 positions, respectively. The Beavers got one No. 1 vote and 988 points, while the Cavaliers, who grabbed the final No. 1 ballot, amassed 963 points.

Rams Power By Dallas; Clinch Wild-Card Berth

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams, displaying productive passing by Vince Ferragamo and strong running by Jewell Thomas, gave the Dallas Cowboys a taste Monday night of what may lie ahead for them should the teams meet again in the National Football League playoffs.

The Rams whipped the Cowboys 38-14 at Anaheim Stadium to assure themselves of an NFC playoff berth as a wild card team. The Cowboys had qualified earlier. They most likely they will square off as wild card teams in the opening round of the playoffs.

Five of their last nine meetings have been playoff games, with Dallas holding a 3-2 edge, but the Rams were 21-19 winners last year.

Ferragamo, still suffering from bruised ribs he received a week ago against Buffalo, hit touchdown passes of 40 yards to Billy Waddy, 34 to Preston Dennard and 1 to Victor Hicks.

All told, he completed 15 of 25 throws for 275 yards, with no interceptions.

Ferragamo said his ribs hurt him, but his offensive line saw to it that Dallas defenders made a minimum of meaningful contact.

"Jackie Slater and Doug France (the offensive tackles) did a fantastic job protecting me," Ferragamo said. "Nobody really touched me all night. Not direct, anyway."

"Thomas was fantastic. He adds a great additional dimension to our offense."

The 5-foot-10, 223-pound speedster from San Jose State showed great acceleration in piling up 147 yards on 16 carries.

Dallas defensive end Harvey Martin said only, "We were all just mixed up tonight. Ferragamo had a great night, but we contributed to it. He has a great offensive line, but we were not playing defense. We just made too many mistakes."

Quarterback Danny White, who completed nine of 23 passes for 147 yards with three interceptions and three sacks, said, "We really played badly. It was a team effort to get beat like that. They took it to us early and we never got back into it."

"When we meet them in two weeks, it will be a different story. We didn't practice well during the week. We should have expected this."

The Rams gained 517 total yards to 271 for Dallas. Cowboy veteran Tony Dorsett was limited to 77 yards on 14 carries.

The outcome of the nationally televised game left Los Angeles at 10-5 and Dallas at 11-4.

The Rams built a 38-0 margin through three quarters and it wasn't until early in the fourth quarter that White hit Tony Hill with a 36-yard pass for a touchdown. In the waning minute reserve quarterback Glenn Carano found Butch Johnson with a 17-yard scoring pass.

Cullen Bryant had opened the scoring, capping a 98-yard advance with a 4-yard smash. Then Thomas contributed his 34-yard touchdown run and Frank Corral added 3 points with a 27-yard field goal before the crowd of 65,154.

The Silent Game... Call It 'Awfulgame'

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
Next Saturday, NBC tries its latest great experiment, even greater than Supertrain. Call it Awfulgame.

They won't have the usual complement of announcers in the booth. It is, somehow fitting, since the National Football League won't have the usual complement of teams on the field. The schedule says one of them will be the New York Jets, which isn't saying much.

The other team in the Orange Bowl will be the Miami Dolphins, and if you're thinking the hometown guys in the aqua and orange are going to have an easy time of it, just consider the insidious thought Bruce Harper has floated southward from his locker in the wintry wind tunnel called Shea Stadium:

"Can you hear the Dolphins talking among themselves?" the New York running back and kick return specialist mused. "They're gonna be saying, 'We can't lose to the Jets! They lost to New Orleans!' I think we're gonna wind up in the same category as the Saints."

"I think that's what it was like with some of us. Some individuals were walking around thinking, 'Hey we can't lose to these guys. They're 0-14. We just can't!'"

Greg Buttle, the linebacker and defensive captain, wasn't of quite the same mind. The Jets, he said, had no right to be wound up. "When you're 3-11 you can't be too tight. So we had three wins. So New Orleans had none. Big deal! We didn't have any room to think, 'Let's not let New Orleans beat us.' We're not that good a team."

There is something special about having a record that's so bad it's almost funny. It is we do every Sunday."

And so, with one game remaining in the regular season, the New York Jets, a team which began 1980 with all the promise that accompanies high draft choices and two break-even years, trudge into Miami for a game that promises to send millions of fans scurrying to "Legends of Bowling." "The Best of the Flintstones" or somesuch stuff.

spawns jokes and spinoffs whereas mere mediocrity brings only bitterness.

Remember the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of 1976-77? There were signs in the stands, roughly at the 10-yard lines, proclaiming, "The Bucs stop here!" All Johnny Carson had to do was pick up the Monday morning papers and he had Monday night's monologue in hand.

Remember the New Orleans Saints of 1980? There were fans in the stands wearing "Aints" paper bags over their embarrassed faces, 70,000 unknown comics in the Louisiana Superdome watching the Gong Show cast assembled by John Mecom Jr.

On Sunday, the Jets became, as one banner proclaimed, the "Ets."

Whatever they were after the game, after New Orleans beat them 21-20, the Jets sure weren't the usual NFL team before it. They were, a few players suggested, a bit paranoid. It was more than just the usual fear — or knowledge — that somehow they would find a new way to lose, something they've managed to do 12 times this year, more than any NFL team save one. "We succeeded," Jets running back Kevin Long observed afterward, "in doing whatever it is we do every Sunday."

And so, with one game remaining in the regular season, the New York Jets, a team which began 1980 with all the promise that accompanies high draft choices and two break-even years, trudge into Miami for a game that promises to send millions of fans scurrying to "Legends of Bowling." "The Best of the Flintstones" or somesuch stuff.

Bullet Girls Look For Better Days

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
JAMESVILLE — Jamesville girls' basketball coach Jerry Godley believes his club's 44-35 victory over Aurora Saturday night may portend of better days ahead.

The proof, however, of Godley's belief may not come until the end of this week, following games with Bath (tonight) and Bear Grass (Friday). Or it might not come until after the Martin County Holiday Basketball Tournament, where they face Williamston in the opening round.

"I'm hoping Saturday night's game will give the girls some confidence," Godley said. "We've been hitting only 21 percent from the floor, making like 15 of 53 shots a game, but that didn't happen Saturday night."

"Now I'm just hoping we can put back-to-back good games together. I feel like if we can beat Bath and then beat Bear Grass Friday we'll be respectable again and then maybe we can go into the Holiday Classic and maybe surprise a couple 3-A teams."

Up to now the Bullets have been surprising only in that they have won but three of their first six games. Still, those three wins are as many the Bullets managed all last year.

"I'm really not disappointed," Godley said. "I'm unhappy, but only to a degree. You've got to be patient, any coach will tell you that."

"But I feel we should have won two more games," Godley added. "We should be 5-1, but like I said we've had some bad games. We haven't been shooting well and turnovers have really hurt us. We have a good defensive team, we're just not scoring enough points."

"We're also averaging something like 25 to 30 turnovers a game. We didn't do that Saturday night, though, and maybe we're getting away from all those mistakes."

What's surprising about the Bullets' problems is that they are being made by a veteran starting lineup. All five starters are returnees. Back this season are guards Tammy Williams (senior, 5-7) and Kellie Hardison (junior, 5-5) and forwards Terry Bell (senior, 5-8) and Donna Hardison (5-10). At center Angela Hagen (5-11, senior) returns and has split time this season with Kim Floyd, a 5-11 sophomore who was a top reserve on last year's club.

Reserves include sophomore guards Lorie Hardison (5-7), Crystal Perry (5-6) and Donna Coburn (5-7) and junior forward Dani Job (5-9). The Bullets also have three freshmen on the bench, 6-1 center Angie Crede, 5-10 forward Venessa Keyes and 5-7 guard Debra Gray.

"This is Angie's first time playing basketball and she's improved tremendously since the season began," Godley said. "We've always lacked a big girl her and if she comes around like we think she will, it'll help a lot."

As for the conference, Godley sees Chocowinity as taking the top spot, followed by Belhaven and Manteo. He added that he feels the Bullets may sneak into that fourth slot.

"If we play basketball the way I feel we can we'll get that fourth spot," Godley said. "I've got a good ball club. It's just that they seem to get out there on the court and panic and not do the things it takes to win."

Gregg, Star Race Car Driver, Shoots Himself To Death

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A business associate of Peter Gregg, the all-time leading winner on the International Motor Sports Association GT championship circuit, believes Gregg took his own life because he was depressed over an accident that kept him off the track.

The associate, Bob Snodgrass, says the veteran sports car driver, who was found dead Monday on a northwest Florida beach, never fully recovered from the effects of the accident.

Gregg, 40, was found shot in the head. A .38-caliber gun was under his left leg and a suicide note addressed to his new wife, his ex-wife, his two children and Snodgrass was found in a nearby briefcase.

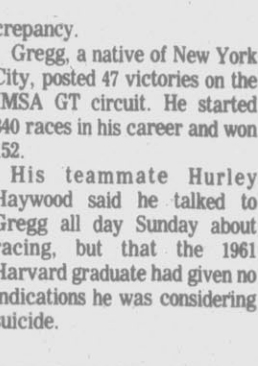

"I don't want to live with my lifelong (unintelligible) of driving everything away, with making myself and other(s) miserable. I just don't enjoy life anymore. I must have a right to end it," the note said.

Snodgrass, a business associate of Gregg for the past 8½ years, said that while Gregg was highly energetic, he also had been concerned with his health following the accident in Paris last June 10. Gregg was driving to the track to qualify for the 24 Hours of LeMans when he swerved into a ditch to avoid a car that had pulled in front of him.

He suffered a concussion, complained of double vision for several months afterward and was forced to miss half of the 14 IMSA GT events on the 1980 schedule.

Investigators said a recent sales slip for the gun and the box the weapon came in were also inside the brief case. A statement issued by St. Johns County Sheriff Dudley Garrett said that Gregg had been under psychiatric care recently.

The body was discovered by a hiker along sand dunes off scenic highway A1A at about 1:30 p.m. Investigators said the suicide note was dated Monday, 2:30 p.m., but they could not explain the apparent discrepancy.

Falcons Ready For Rams

But Not Before Coach Jumps Into The Lake

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons have turned their attentions to next Sunday's National Football League game against Los Angeles, but before they did that, team staff members paid off their bets.

Included was one coach who took a dive Monday into a cold north Georgia lake adjacent to the team's practice field.

"We're going out there to win the ballgame," Coach Leeman Bennett said of his team's regular season finale against the Rams next Sunday.

"We've never beaten them out there," he said, adding the team will be going for the home-field advantage if the Falcons make it to the National Conference championship game Jan. 11.

Meanwhile, Falcons linebacker coach Doug Shively took a swim for the team. He had told his linebacking corps he'd jump in the lake if the Falcons won the ational Conference's Western Division, which they did Sunday with a 35-10 romp over San Francisco.

Defensive coordinator Jerry Glanville was shopping for hats. He'd promised all the defensive back fancy western hats if they won the NFC west.

Owner Rankin Smith arrived a few minutes late before the television cameras at city hall where Mayor Maynard Jackson proclaimed Atlanta Falcons Day.

"Better late than never" said Smith. "I've been saying that for 15 years."

"We're committed to not only bring many division championships, but also perhaps a Super Bowl championship" to Atlanta, Smith told the mayor.

Bennett, however, was concerned about the route to that first Super Bowl, and having the home field advantage along the way. Atlanta will have home field advantage if the Falcons' season record is no worse than the Dallas Cowboys or Philadelphia Eagles.

A victory over the Rams would guarantee home field for the NFL title game if Atlanta wins the semifinals.

"We're going out there with the idea that the people that are well will play," Bennett said when asked if he would rest his regulars against the Rams.

Bennett said offensive tackle Warren Bryant has a pinched nerve in his neck, but probably will play. Wide receiver Alfred Jenkins has a sore jaw and defensive end Jeff Yeates has sore shoulders, but both should play, he said.

After the Ram game, the Falcons will take a four-day break, because there will be a two-week layoff before their first playoff game, Bennett said.

"I expect them to run" during that time, Bennett said. "I think they know what's at stake. They've paid the price all year and there's no reason to believe they won't now."

UVA's Sampson Gets ACC Player Award

Purple Aces Shake Up UCLA

Bruins Escape With Win

By The Associated Press

UCLA Coach Larry Brown stopped just short of relegating his Bruins to the Pacific 10 Conference cellar.

"Those who are talking about a national championship or even a conference championship are reading our press clippings too closely," he said. "We're just not doing it on the court."

Brown was in a hang-dog mood after the third-ranked Bruins defeated the Evansville Purple Aces Monday night at Pauley Pavilion, 69-62. The Bruins never seemed able to shake a determined Evansville team.

"We looked tired tonight, and it seemed liked Evansville got every loose ball," Brown said. "That comes from being tired and, I'm sorry to say, from getting outthusted. I guess we weren't really ready to play."

UCLA won its fifth game without a loss while dealing the Purple Aces their second straight defeat after they had opened the season with four victories. But the night was not without some tense moments for UCLA.

The Bruins led by 15 points at the half. Evansville rallied to cut the lead to 10 at 51-41 with 12 minutes left, and the Purple Aces paced UCLA the rest of the way until cutting the margin to its final seven points.

"I'm proud of the way we played and the character our kids showed," Evansville Coach Dick Walters said. "We made this a difficult game for UCLA but we're not Notre Dame or Oregon State..."

Freshman center Kenny Fields scored a career-high 17 points to pace the Bruins, and sophomore forward Darren Daye added 16. LeRoy Mitchell led the Purple Aces with 17 points, and Brad Leaf had 15.

Only one other game Monday night involved a ranked team. No. 11 Indiana, led by Ted Kitchel's 16 points, easily handled Oral Roberts, 65-56.

Many of Kitchel's 16 points came from long distance — what ORU Coach Ken Hayes called three-point range — as Oral Roberts concentrated on the Hoosiers' inside game.

"I thought we had to stop Indiana inside, but Kitchel was hitting them from where you don't even bother to guard anyone," Hayes said.

Guard Randy Wittman added 15 points for the 5-2 Hoosiers, who have rebounded from consecutive losses to second-ranked Kentucky and sixth-ranked Notre Dame with three victories in a row.

Indiana put Oral Roberts away with 14 unanswered points midway through the second half after the Titans had pulled within two on baskets by Cat Johnson and Tom Prusator.

'Signs Of The Times'— Will They Bring Results?

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Signs of the times must be placed in boxing arenas under order of the California State Athletic Commission.

The signs, in the English and in Spanish, will explain that throwing things at the ring is a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

But will signs have any effect on the clowns who threw things into the ring while Johnny Owen lie fatally injured on the canvas after being knocked out in the 12th round of a fight against World Boxing Council bantamweight champion Lupe Pintor Sept. 19 at the Olympic Auditorium in Los Angeles? Owen died Nov. 3.

Would signs mean anything to the sportsmen who hurled bottles into the ring after Marvin

Hagler stopped Briton Alan Minter in the third round to win the world middleweight title at London's Wembley Stadium, robbing Hagler of the proud moment of being announced champion and turning him into a man frightened for his life?

The animals who mugged and terrorized spectators at the Muhammad Ali-Ken Norton fight in 1976, while New York City police picketed outside Yankee Stadium, could have cared less about signs.

There weren't any behavior signs posted at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum when one manager punched a referee and another broke the nose of a security guard because the guard wouldn't let him into the ring after his tiger scored a one-round knockout in a preliminary card.

ECU Wrestlers Defeated

Northwestern University won all but two weight classes in gaining a 38-9 victory over the East Carolina University wrestling team last night in Minges Coliseum.

East Carolina's lone wins came in the 134-pound and 150-pound classes. In the former, Tony Mitchell pinned Bob Moylan with 56 seconds left in the match. The other came on a Chris Giles decision over Jim Janick, 6-3. The loss left East Carolina with a 0-2 record in dual meets. Northwestern is now 1-1.

Some members of the team will participate in the Wilkes Open on Dec. 26-27, and the entire returns to action against Bucknell on January 11, in a home match.

Summary:
118: Rich DeCatur (NW) decisioned Jeff Leaf, 9-7.
126: Lou Bolano (NW) won by disqualification over David Jerose. 134: Tony Mitchell (EC) pinned Bob Moylan, 7:04.

142: Don Prior (NW) decisioned Gary Webb, 13-5.
150: Chris Giles (EC) decisioned Jim Janick, 6-3.

158: Tom Janick (NW) pinned Curtis Sendek, 4:57.

Rosettes Take 2 Thirds

RALEIGH — The Rosettes, Greenville's gymnastic team, placed third in both class II and class III competition at a meet held this past weekend at the Raleigh School of Gymnastics competition.

Caroline Lee and Nancy

Johnson, both competing in class III (beginners) level led the Rosettes in the five-team competition. There were also teams from Durham, Fayetteville and Lancaster, Pa.

Lee, in the 15 and over age group, was the all around champion, capturing firsts in the vault, the balance beam, the uneven bars and the floor exercise.

Johnson, in the 12-to-14 age group, was second all around, taking first in the vault, second on the uneven bars and fourth on the balance beam and floor exercise.

In class II competition (intermediate level), Judy Benson was third all around and Jenny Johnsrude was fourth. Both are in the 15 and over age group.

Benson tied for first (with Johnsrude) in the vault and floor exercise, fourth on the bars and fifth on the beam. Johnsrude was second in the beam and fourth in the floor exercise.

Christy Garrison, in the 9 through 11 age group in the class II competition, was second all around, finishing second in the vault, on the bars and in the floor exercise while winding up third on the beam.

Ginger McLendon captured one first for the Rosettes, in the floor exercise, and fifth in the vault and on the bars. She was sixth on the beam and all around.

Carmela Weber captured first on the balance beam and was fourth in the vault and sixth on the bars and in the floor exercise. She was fifth all around.

Colorado Receives 2 Years Probation

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Barring the University of Colorado from postseason football games and NCAA-controlled television programming isn't much more than a "slap on the wrist" for the perennial whipping boys of the Big Eight gridiron, says a CU regent.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association's Infractions Committee slapped Colorado on Monday with two years' probation after finding the school guilty of 62 violations — stretching back to the 1969-70 school year.

But the NCAA banished CU from bowl games only through Dec. 5, 1981, meaning the Buffaloes conceivably could be in a bowl game after that — a prospect which seems less than probable considering their 1-10 record the past season.

The CU football team will be subject to close scrutiny during the second year, NCAA officials said.

"I was going to say that I consider this just a slap on the wrist, but I guess it's really more than that," said Jack Anderson, chairman of the CU Board of Regents intercollegiate athletics committee.

"But it's really not so bad," he said. "We can live with it." CU Athletic Director Eddie Crowder declined comment, and Coach Chuck Fairbanks and university President Arnold Weber could not be reached for comment.

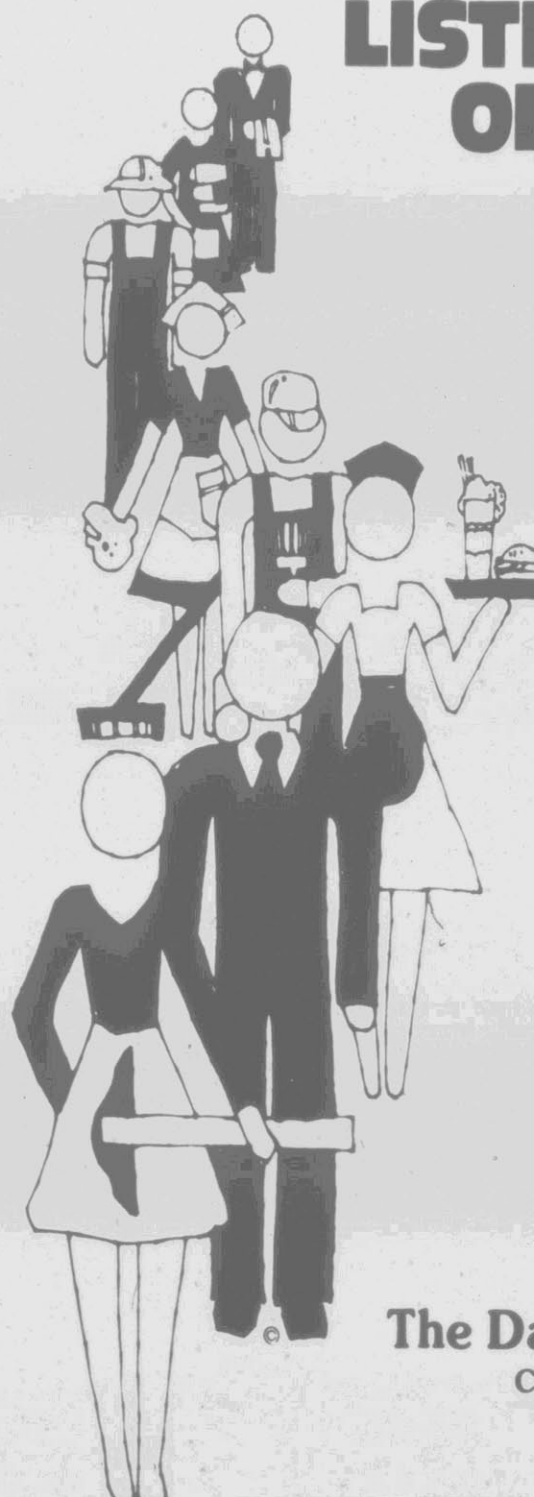

The alleged violations of NCAA rules covered the tenures of three coaches: Crowder (1963-73), Bill Mallory (1974-78) and Fairbanks (1979-present).

Last July, CU officials admitted guilt to 50 of the original 132 charges.

But on Monday, Charles Alan Wright, chairman of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, said the university was guilty of 62 violations, "including some that are serious in nature, or even, in a few instances, willful."

He added that "the apparent pattern of lack of attention to NCAA requirements made a significant penalty necessary," but he said there did not appear to have been an "organized effort" at CU to thwart NCAA jurisdiction.

Path To Showbusiness Glory Has Beginning In The American South

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Of the many paths to show business glory, this has to be the most preferred:

First, you repair to the front porch (best if situated somewhere in the American South) to drink heavily and bemoan the foul luck that has led to the present circumstance.

Next, you vow success as, say, a television comedy writer. You write a script and submit it to an agent, who loves it. You move to California, write a monologue for a big-name comedian, and he loves it. You're in.

This way, you get to bypass some of the squalid scenery that decorates the busier routes to the big time. You don't have to wait on tables while praying that Cousin Morty wasn't lying about knowing someone at Paramount. This way, you don't even have to have a cousin Morty.

With just a couple of bumps smoothed over, this is the path that brought Gail Lawrence and Peter Rich from Atlanta to Hollywood, from dashed dreams of civil service to success as TV writers. With no network TV experience, they were hired by Bob Hope to help write tonight's Christmas show. At 25, they've got jobs in Hollywood, with the promise of more to come.

The unabridged account: Peter and Gail began their collaboration at Henry "The Orator" Grady High School in Atlanta. Their first work was a phonied up version of the school annual, slipped past the faculty adviser.

They were graduated anyway, to the University of Georgia. Peter wanted to run the Department of the Interior bureau in Atlanta. Gail wanted to run Life magazine. Neither job was immediately available upon their graduation from Georgia, so they hit the porch, and regrouped.

TV comedy writing seemed a reasonable vocational alternative, so the two young friends moved to New York. "Just up and went," says she. They each had an advertising job within a week. They kept regular comedy-writing "office hours" at night. "Under the threat of death," says he. "We each agreed to kill the other if he or she didn't show up to write," Gail explains.

After trying their stuff out in local clubs, they wrote an episode script for "WKRP" just to see if they could do it. "We came out here with it and showed it to Bob Schwartz, the business manager at Mary Tyler Moore Productions," says Peter. "He liked it and showed it to his fiancée, Debbie Klein, who happened to be an agent."

"M-T-M didn't buy the script, but Debbie told us to write another one, which is being very strongly considered by 'SOAP.' She also told us we'd need to live out here. So, last month, we showed up in our '68 Nova."

At Ms. Klein's suggestion, they submitted a monologue script for Hope's NBC special. Hope liked it, and hired them.

They haven't reached glory just yet. That will come when they're introduced to the Hollywood version of the front porch — the hot tub. But that's the beginning of the road to dissipation, and another story altogether.

KIM NOVAK RETURNS TO THE MOVIES — Kim Novak and her husband Dr. Robert Malloy, a veterinarian, arrive at the Zigfield Theater in New York Monday night for the premiere of "The Mirror Crack'd", an Agatha Christie mystery starring Kim Novak, Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and Tony Curtis. It is Kim Novak's first feature film in six years. (AP Laserphoto)

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The editor and publisher of Bridge World magazine, the world's most prestigious bridge publication, is U.S. internationalist Edgar Kaplan. Here's a hand from a recent team game at the magazine's headquarters.

Observe North's false preference to two spades. That tactic is common for your first response when you have a good hand, since it gives partner an opportunity to bid again with extra values. Change North's king of diamonds to the jack, and he would have passed two hearts.

West led the king of clubs, and declarer could count only five fast tricks. If both major suits broke 3-3, there would be eight tricks, but that was greatly against the odds. Normally, you increase your number of trump tricks by ruffing losers in dummy, but Kaplan found a way to reverse this procedure.

West continued with a second club. On the first two tricks East produced the ten and nine of clubs, so Kaplan decided that West probably had length in the suit. The rest was just a simple exercise in timing.

'Bo' Admits To Laziness
NEW YORK (AP) — Bo Derek was "lazy as an actress" when she met the man who became her husband, and she says she would "still be on the beach" if not for him.

John Derek agrees, saying "it's all my fault that Bo's been seen in anything but sailboats." But, in an interview with the couple in McCall's magazine, he adds "She's intelligent, clever, and honest. She was ready to develop."

That doesn't mean he thinks she should develop as an actress. Derek, a Hollywood photographer, sees his wife as a natural force, and says her untrained reactions make other actors look "artificial."

"I know actors who've had fantastic training, and they're always scared to death," says Mrs. Derek. "To me, acting's just pretending, like playing with dolls. I'd like to keep it that way."

The 24-year-old, who became a star in the movie "10," says her husband has taught her to "rock the boat." She is producing her next movie, a remake of the 1932 classic "Tarzan the Ape Man," and says she will play Jane as a "strong, resourceful, dominant" person.

Guard Ended At 'Dakota'

NEW YORK (AP) —

While police stood guard for the last night at the luxury apartment building where John Lennon was shot to death, his widow sent her thanks to the hundreds of thousands who paid their respects to the former Beatle in silent vigils around the world.

In a five-line statement Monday, Yoko Ono told those who observed the 10-minute vigil Sunday:

"Bless you for your tears and prayers. I saw John smiling in the sky. I saw sorrow changing into clarity. I saw all of us becoming one mind. Thank you."

The note was signed, "Love, Yoko."

The vigil, suggested by Miss Ono, drew some 100,000 people to New York's Central Park. Other gatherings were reported in Lennon's native Liverpool, England, and in cities in the United States and around the world.

Police said Monday would be the last night they would have officers guarding the Dakota, the century-old apartment building where the Lenons lived with their 5-year-old son, Sean.

Lennon was gunned down at the entrance of the building Dec. 8, and fans stood vigil there for a week. No fans were in evidence early Monday.

Mark David Chapman, 25, of Honolulu, Hawaii, has been charged with the killing. He is being held at the Rikers Island prison while undergoing a 30-day psychiatric examination. He is also under suicide watch, isolated in a section that normally holds 20 inmates.

Judge Richard Banks of Roxbury District Court freed Lawford, a student at Boston College law school, on his own recognizance Monday and set Jan. 30 for a hearing.

According to police records, two Boston officers Saturday followed a red Datsun registered to Lawford and ordered its driver to pull over after they allegedly saw the actor's son buy a substance in front of a tavern in the Mattapan section.

According to the officers, Lawford was in the passenger seat of the car, which was driven by a man identified as Douglas Spooner, 31. Police said Lawford emerged from the car and allegedly "palmed" — or hid in his hand — what they identified as heroin.

Ronny Milsap Facing Surgery

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Blind country singer Ronnie Milsap was to undergo surgery today at the Duke University Eye Center.

Milsap, 34, a North Carolina native who attended the Gov. Morehead School for the blind in Raleigh, is expected to be in the hospital for at least eight days, spokeswoman Betty Grooms said in Nashville, Tenn.

She said Milsap "has been troubled for some time with a recurring, painful infection behind one eye" and that the surgery was being done to prevent further damage to the optical nerve.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CALICO CAT DISPLAYED PRETTY RED SPOTS.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Seek To Allow Spouse Testify

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The attorney general's office has asked the state Supreme Court to change North Carolina law that prohibits a husband or wife from testifying against a spouse in most criminal cases.

Marvin Schiller, an assistant attorney general, said Monday he has asked the court to modify the law so that it would neither compel nor prevent a spouse from testifying.

"It's a very subtle point," Schiller said.

Existing law, on the books since 1856, permits husbands and wives to testify only about acts done to each other. A person cannot testify to a criminal act done by his or her spouse to or with a third person.

Schiller's proposal would allow the husband or wife to decide whether to testify.

Schiller said he made the proposal to the Supreme Court, rather than the Legislature, because the 1856 law became effective after a judge's ruling restricted the testimony of one spouse against another.

His request coincides with a recent decision by the state District Attorneys Association to seek legislative changes in the law.

Schiller filed his brief with the court in a Mecklenburg County case. He argued that the trial judge erred when he prevented the estranged wife of Johnny Lee Freeman of Charlotte from testifying against Freeman. Schiller said the woman, Rosemary Caldwell Freeman, was willing to testify against her husband in connection with the June 1980 shooting of her brother, Steve Louis Caldwell.

Mercer said Mrs. Freeman could obtain a divorce if she wants to testify.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 17, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to make sure that you are aware of the needs and wishes of close ties and to be truly cooperative. Make long-range plans to have more abundance in the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Associates are likely to be demanding today so try to cooperate with them and avoid arguments. Keep calm with everyone.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to be more cooperative with co-workers and improve harmony and quality of work. Sidestep an opponent.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't get involved in any expensive pleasures or new projects that you cannot handle comfortably. Be logical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't irritate anyone at home but try to establish more harmony there instead. Strive for happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have to exercise great care in motion today to avoid possible accident. Do nothing that could harm your good name.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your duties well and then handle them in a most precise manner. You can easily gain your aims at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't try to force others to do things or you could get negative reactions. Make sure you keep your eye on your wallet.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Investigating into whatever is puzzling to you is wise and beneficial at this time. Maintain a cheerful manner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It's important you show friends that you are devoted, otherwise you could lose some of them. Be wise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have to use much tact in handling public affairs at this time to be successful. Show that you have ability.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Many fascinating new outlets come into the horizon, but study them objectively before making any decisions.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure to handle your responsibilities in a most efficient and conscientious way, and they are soon behind you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be good at solving own problems as well as those of others, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can that will stress modern ways of doing things. One who will be interested in religious subjects.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Require New Chrysler Concessions For Guarantee

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Treasury Secretary G. William Miller says banks, suppliers and employees of the Chrysler Corp. must make more concessions before the ailing automaker can qualify for more of the federal loan guarantees it needs to stave off bankruptcy.

Miller, speaking after Monday's two-hour meeting of the federal Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board, which had been called to discuss Chrysler's latest financial plans, voiced doubt about whether the company can put together a qualifying package by the end of this week.

"In terms of whether all the pieces will fall in place, I cannot tell," he told reporters. "We're just trying to assess the information."

But if a decision needs to be made, he promised, the Carter administration will make it instead of leaving it to the incoming administration of Ronald Reagan, who becomes president Jan. 20.

"If it is necessary to make a decision, we will make it," Miller said. He pledged to keep Donald Regan, the Treasury secretary-designate, informed of the board's thinking on Chrysler.

Regan's judgment is "welcomed" and "appropriate," Miller said, explaining that he doesn't think his successor's views would be much different from his own.

Chrysler officials are expected to ask the board for $300 million to $400 million in additional loan guarantees, probably later this week. Chrysler has already drawn $800 million of $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees granted by Congress. It can get more only if the board certifies that Chrysler can survive.

Meanwhile, as the five principal domestic automakers reported early December sales figures Monday, Chrysler was the only one of the Big Three to report an improvement. The company's sales, buoyed by a rebate program, were up 2.6 percent compared with the period a year earlier. Chrysler's small-car sales increased 37 percent and sales of intermediate and larger cars declined 28 percent.

Industry analyst Arvid Jouppe of John Muri & Co., an investment firm, said, "They (Chrysler) clearly need additional financing, but when interest rates come down they can move into profitability. They've cut their costs to almost nothing."

At a meeting last week of the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board, federal officials warned Chrysler that it must cut much further to qualify for the loans.

As a result, the company is seeking new wage concessions and a price freeze on supplies in 1981. The company also wants to convert some $500 million to $700 million in unguaranteed loans into preferred stock.

Miller refused to make a specific judgment about any single aspect of Chrysler's cost-cutting efforts, insisting that "all constituents really need" to make sacrifices.

Top officials of Chrysler planned to meet tonight with the leaders of the United Auto Workers to seek a wage freeze for UAW employees. The UAW, in return, was expected to ask for concessions, such as protection against Chrysler contracting work now done by UAW members.

"I think the company would and could expect the workers' cooperation to the fullest. But if they want me to love them, they've got to love me back," said Joe Zappa, president of Local 212 in Detroit.

Chrysler's workers, in two rounds of bargaining starting last October, approved contracts incorporating wage and other concessions calculated at $462 million over three years — $5,000 per worker, according to the union.

Selling a third round of concessions "might take some persuasion by the leadership," said Red Harden, president of Local 122 in Twinsburg, Ohio, where month-long layoffs for 2,500 out of 3,000 workers began Monday at Chrysler's stamping plant.

Report Plentiful Fuel Resources For State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has plentiful supplies of renewable wood resources and peat as alternative sources of energy for the coming years, according to a report by the North Carolina Energy Institute.

Institute director James Bresse said Monday the state's annual wood growth, originally estimated at about 52 million tons, actually may exceed 200 million tons.

"With the proper technology, we could in fact supply the entire state's energy needs from wood. I wouldn't expect that to happen, but we can certainly increase the percentage," Bresse said.

Bresse said wood now supplies less than a tenth of a percent of the state's needs. He predicted that, by the turn of the century, North Carolina could obtain as much as 10 percent of its energy needs from wood.

"Our main point in terms of planning for future commercial and industrial use of wood is so industries can count on a continuing market. They wouldn't convert from oil to wood if they were concerned that the supply wouldn't be there," he said.

"This doesn't mean any depletion of our resources — we're just taking what nature gives us every year."

The study also showed that North Carolina has ample supplies of peat, a non-renewable fossil fuel found primarily in coastal areas.

Peat mining operations have already been approved at First Colony Farms in Washington County, and Texas Gulf is experimenting at Aurora with oil derived from peat for calcifying phosphate.

The biggest disadvantage of using peat is its light weight.

Because it is lighter than wood, it requires a lot of volume to move it. A truck can carry three times as much coal as peat. Consequently, peat will primarily be a source of energy in coastal areas.

Bresse said the technology for using both sources is expensive, but with the rising cost of oil, conversion will become more economical.

"I wish I could say it would help reduce our dependence on foreign oil. It does mean any cost increases will be slowed. We won't be strictly dancing to the tune of OPEC in North Carolina," he said.

Chapter Night Was Held

The Women of the Moose held its regular chapter night on Thursday night, December 11 at 8 p.m. Approximately 25 co-workers were present.

Mary Beddard conducted the meeting. Sandy Smith, chairman of Social Services gave the program and had two candidates enrolled in her honor, Ann Wilson and Virginia Brock.

Smith also entertained the co-workers with a social hour in the twilight room. The next meeting will be held December 18 at 8 p.m.

Chrysler Up In Car Sales

DETROIT (AP) — New car sales by domestic automakers fell overall in early December, but Chrysler Corp.'s sales rose, the companies reported Monday.

Chrysler said it sold 18,535 cars in the first 10 days of the month compared with 16,054 in the same period last year. Since there was one more selling day in this year's period, the increase amounted to 2.6 percent when calculated according to sales per day. For the calendar year so far, Chrysler is off 29 percent from a year ago.

The five major producers delivered 174,498 cars in the early December reporting period against 166,890 a year ago, a drop of 7.1 percent on the basis of daily sales.

General Motors Corp. said sales were off 6.2 percent in the Dec. 1-10 period while Ford Motor Co. sales tumbled 12.6 percent.

GM delivered 108,585 cars in nine sales days, compared with 102,946 in eight days a year ago.

Ford said it sold 39,688 cars from Dec. 1-10, compared with 40,383 last year.

For calendar year 1980, Ford sales are down 30.6 percent. GM is off 15.4 percent.
