MX Impact Seen As 'Manageable'

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Air Force today released its long-awaited study of the impact on Utah and Nevada of deploying the proposed MX missile system, and described the effects as "manageable."

Air Force Undersecretary Antonia Chayes told reporters that, "while the impacts may appear severe when viewed from the perspective of a little-developed area of the country, from a national perspective — and MX is a national program — the impacts are not that large."

Briefing reporters in advance of the report's release, she called the impact statement a comprehensive and exhaustive study that can guide policymakers in their final decisions on the MX.

But congressional critics were less charitable, describing the 1,900-page report as "the same old euphemisms suggesting that there is no problem too large for the Air Force to solve."

The report reaffirms the Air Force's preference for the desert valleys of Utah and Nevada for deploying the planned $34 billion missile system.

The $17 million study envisions thousands of construction workers, their families and related workers flooding into Utah and Nevada during the peak MX construction years in the mid-to-late-1980s.

The study says 85,000 people will be added to the region's population during that time, with a permanent population increase of about 31,000.

Ms. Chayes said that the predicted MX impact, while "not negligible," are "certainly ... manageable. The potential mitigation measures combined with good planning and management by both the Air Force and state and local governments can reduce impacts measurably."

Communities will be hard pressed to provide necessary services, and will need federal assistance, the study says. Scarce water supplies will be stretched thin, with significant impact on groundwater levels possible in some areas.

Water may have to be imported from other regions, and the Air Force at the least will have to buy water rights from existing users while stressing conservation and recycling.

But Ms. Chayes said none of the drawbacks is drastic enough to scuttle the project. And none, she asserted, is severe enough to overcome the strategic need for a new missile system.

Lengthy Morgan Surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., was reported in good condition Wednesday night after undergoing a 10-hour operation to remove a large tumor from behind his right ear.

Dr. Calvin Early, who performed the operation at the Bethesda Naval Hospital near Washington, said the tumor was benign.

"He is doing quite well and the prognosis is good. The surgery went well," Early said.

Gibson Prather, Morgan's aide, said the operation took longer than expected because of the tumor's position. Morgan was in surgery from 8:30 a.m. until 6:30 p.m.

Prather said Morgan regained consciousness shortly after the operation and talked to his wife and other family members.

The senator, who was defeated in his bid for reelection in November, was scheduled to be in the hospital's intensive care unit for two days. He is expected to be hospitalized for 10 days to two weeks.

The tumor was discovered after Morgan started experiencing a loss of hearing last summer.

Protests Mount Across Iran Against Clergy Rule

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer is an Associated Press correspondent formerly stationed in Iran who continues to follow events there from his Mideast listening post in Beirut.

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

A mounting wave of protests and counter-protests in Iranian cities is the latest flare-up in a power struggle between secular, Westernized politicians and the Moslem clergy, two factions trying to shape revolutionary Iran to their own designs.

The key showdown appears to be between Iran's top two government figures, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and the clergy-backed prime minister, Mohammad Ali Rajai.

The anti-clergy demonstrations, pro-clergy strikes and virulent denunciations of the president in Parliament clearly have Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini worried about the survival of his new Iran.

Twice in the past six weeks, Iran's supreme leader has personally intervened to prevent confrontations, and he has repeatedly made appeals for national unity.

Today, in a speech broadcast by Tehran Radio,

Khomeini said Iran's universities were communist strongholds and sources of the unrest. He declared the institutions' liberal arts divisions, which were shut down late last year, would remain closed. Only the medical schools and other science departments remained open.

The home-front turmoil is taking place as the three-month-old war with Iraq causes increasing economic hardships for Iranians, strict rationing of fuel and heating oil, nighttime blackouts and bans on private cars. Many analysts see Iraq's invasion of Iran as an attempt to put so much strain on the Khomeini regime that it will collapse.

Iran's powerful Shiite Moslem clergymen were instrumental in toppling the Pahlavi monarchy almost two years ago, but before the revolutionary victory prominent clergymen insisted they had no intention of taking power in the country of 36 million people.

Nevertheless, a month after their victory Khomeini and his fellow Shiite religious leaders won overwhelming voter support for declaring an Islamic republic, with important powers for the clergy.

Following the resignation of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's provisional government in November, 1979, Shiite religious leaders took a still more active role in "guiding" government operations, in the Parliament and in overseeing the military.

Bazargan, who resigned in the aftermath of the U.S. Embassy seizure, represented the Western-educated, left-leaning secular faction of the revolution, those who now support Bani-Sadr. They and their colleagues had joined with the conservative, fundamentalist clergy in order to oust the shah, but disagreed with their plans to fit Iran into a sternly religious and traditional mold.

The simmering conflict broke into the open last month with the brief detention of Bani-Sadr's ex-foreign minister, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, because he had criticized the way the clergy handled television programming. Ghotbzadeh earlier accused the clergymen-politicians of wrecking the economy and failing to prepare adequately for the war.

Bani-Sadr and his rival Rajai have both complained there are no clear lines of authority, and their offices at times issue conflicting orders.

The seriousness of the dispute has been indicated by the following recent events:

— Sixty-eight clergy-oriented members of the 228-seat Parliament condemned Bani-Sadr for leaking state secrets.

came after a one-hour meeting with Sweden's ambassador to Tehran, according to Pars news agency.

"Every measure to speed up the release of the hostages depends on the U.S. government," Rajai said. "The United States can release the hostages before the Christmas holidays if they can give the necessary guarantees."

He said Iran's "final reply" in the negotiations for the release of the captive Americans "will be sent to the United States in the near future."

Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, gave his blessing to the final response prepared by Rajai and his cabinet on Tuesday.

U.S. officials in Washington reacted cautiously, saying they wanted to first see the Iranian reply which carries a demand.

answer to the Algerians. The spokesman identified himself as Mr. Sadeghi of the prime minister's public relations office.

On Tuesday Rajai termed the message Iran's "final reply" and indicated U.S. financial guarantees were needed to meet Iranian conditions for release of the hostages. But he has never spelled out exactly what guarantees Iran seeks and Washington officials were waiting to see if Iran's latest position indicates a softening of the original conditions set by the Iranian government.

Among its conditions, Iran is demanding return to Iran of the wealth of the late shah and his family and cancellation of all legal claims against Iran pending in U.S. courts. The Carter administration has said the United States government cannot legally fulfill the conditions.

Chlorine Linked To Cancer Risk

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Chlorine, the chemical that keeps 80 percent of America's drinking water free of disease, has been linked to several types of cancer in a new study.

The report on "Drinking Water and Cancer," released Wednesday by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, found that death statistics in five states provided fresh evidence to support "an association between rectal, colon and bladder cancer" and chlorinated water.

But officials of the Environmental Protection Agency — which sets the country's drinking water standards — said the new study did nothing to change their position that the benefits of chlorine far outweigh the risks.

Indeed, study researchers conceded the study did not take into account other factors that could alter cancer death rates, including smoking and diet.

The use of chlorine in city water systems became widespread early in the century. The chemical kills a variety of disease-carrying organisms, including bacteria that carry cholera and typhoid germs.

"Chlorine is a very effective disinfectant. It has saved countless thousands of lives," said Dr. Joseph Cotruvo of the EPA.

The Council on Environmental Quality study was a follow-up to a 1977 report by the National Academy of Sciences, which raised the first scientific questions of cancer threats from chlorinated water.

The new studies analyzed death statistics in Illinois, Louisiana, New York, North Carolina and Wisconsin to see if cancer rates differed between people who drank chlorinated water and those who did not.

The study said the chance of dying from rectal cancer rose between 13 percent and 97 percent and noted slightly lower increases for the other two types of cancer among groups that drank chlorinated water.

That would mean if 20 persons in a population of 100,000 that did not drink chlorinated water died of rectal cancer, the level of deaths among chlorine water drinkers could be expected to increase to between 22 and 38.

While the study found up to a two-fold increase in cancer deaths among people who drank chlorinated water, by comparison, smokers have 10 times the chance of developing lung cancer as non-smokers.

Break-In

AYDEN — The Ayden Police Department is looking into an early morning break-in Thursday at Ayden-Grifton High School. An unknown number of band instruments were allegedly taken from the room in which they were stored. Investigation is continuing.

Police Officer Is Dismissed

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville Police Chief

Glenn Cannon said yesterday afternoon that a 16-year veteran with the department, Lt. Edward E. Laughinghouse, has been dismissed for violating the department's Standard Operating Procedure and the city's personnel policy.

Cannon said he could not comment further on the dismissal because of the provisions of the State privacy act.

Laughinghouse, a shift supervisor, was suspended for three days last week. Under the city's personnel policy, Cannon was required to recommend to the city manager what action to take in connection with the incident. Cannon made his recommendation to the city manager yesterday.

Although Cannon could not comment on the suspension or dismissal, sources close to the department said Laughinghouse was suspended and dismissed for allegedly being under the effect of alcohol while on duty, about 7 p.m. December 11.

Last week's incident was the second time the officer had been suspended for allegedly being under the effect of alcohol while on duty. He was suspended for five days, and placed on probation for six months in May on a similar charge.

The department's standard operating procedure provides that an officer may not consume alcoholic beverages, be intoxicated, or be under the effect of alcohol consumed off duty, while on duty. It also provides that an officer suspected of being under the influence of alcohol while on duty may be required to take a breathalyzer test.

Sources acknowledge that Laughinghouse did not take a breathalyzer test following last week's incident. However, a breathalyzer test given Laughinghouse by the North Carolina Highway Patrol following the May incident did indicate that the officer had alcohol in his blood.

However, reliable sources said at that time that the amount of alcohol was less than the .10 percent blood alcohol content level, which under State law, is a presumption of guilt of driving under the influence.

Laughinghouse joined the department in April, 1964 after serving five months as a reserve officer. He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant and shift supervisor in March 1976.

Three Rezoning Matters Approved By Board

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Three rezoning matters received the endorsement of the Joint City-County and Greenville Planning & Zoning Commissions last night as the two boards met in brief sessions.

The city-county board handled two of the rezoning requests and recommended both of them to the city council for approval.

Commissioners discussed the request of Bill Clark to rezone 15.3 acres, located south of Section II of Oakdale Subdivision, from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-9 (medium density residential).

Staff planner Wade Pitt pointed out that zoning in the area is generally RA-20, with the exception of a tract of land across the street designated for Office and Institutional (O&I) usage and the Red Oak Shopping Center which is zoned Neighborhood Commercial (CN).

The second rezoning matter that gained recommendation for approval involved a request by David Evans Jr. to change 29.2 acres south of Section II of Tucker Estates from RA-20 to R-15.

Pitt explained that R-15 makes up most of the zoning in the area, with some R-9 zoning to the north, R-6 to the west, as well as the Windy Ridge development which is R-6. The Evans property abuts R-15 zoning, he said.

Questions were raised regarding drainage but it was pointed out that the drainage factor could not be considered in the rezoning, but rather in the discussion of the preliminary plat.

Commissioners voted to continue action on the preliminary plat of Section III of Tucker Estates until the council acts on the rezoning request. Planning Director Bobby Roberson said that plat approval, if the board considered it last night, would have to be contingent upon favorable council action on the rezoning matter.

Joint board commissioners also recommended to the council that a petition for annexation of some 4.4 acres involving Section III of the Professional Center, located west of Pitt Memorial Hospital, be approved. Pitt said that the various city departments had reviewed the petition and projected no problems in providing service to the area if annexation is approved.

The city planning board voted to recommend to the council that a request by (Please turn to Page 16)

Little Saved In Consolidating

BOSTON (AP) — The federal government's plan to slash medical costs by consolidating hospital services and eliminating excess beds would actually save little, if any, money, a study concludes.

The survey calculated the effects of eliminating duplicate services and found that extra paperwork and inconvenience to patients would wipe out most of the savings.

The study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted by Dr. William B. Schwartz, a physician at Tufts Medical School, and Paul L. Joskow, an economist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The researchers figured out how much could be saved by following guidelines set by the federal Health Resource Administration for CAT-scanners, a kind of sophisticated X-ray machine; hospital beds and facilities for open-heart surgery, cardiac catheterization and radiation therapy.

By closing hospitals and consolidating the other services, it is theoretically possible to save $1 billion, the study said.

But this saving would be offset by the paperwork necessary to comply with state certificate-of-need laws as well as higher transportation costs and inconvenience to patients.

The real savings, they wrote, would be "perhaps a few hundred million dollars a year, but possibly nothing."

Other efforts at cutting costs might be more effective, they said.

"Excessive use of laboratories, X-ray procedures and surgery might be reduced," they wrote.

"More outpatient care, pre-admission screening, shorter stays, more intensive use of hospital facilities during off-peak periods and other improvements in hospital management may also save resources without affecting the quality of care."

Santana Founder Is Going Solo

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gregg Rolie, one of the founders of the rock band Santana and currently with the group Journey, is leaving the group to begin a solo career, Columbia Records has announced.

Rolie, who handles the keyboards and some vocals for Journey, has an album in the works that should appear next year. He also will be producing a San Francisco Bay area group called 415, Columbia said Wednesday.

He helped Carlos Santana found Santana in 1968. His vocals are on many of Santana's early hits, including "Black Magic Woman."

Rolie moved to Journey when it was founded and appeared with the group in its first live performance in San Francisco on New Year's Eve 1973.

Teachers' Affair Gets Flunking Grade

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As a teacher at a junior high school (no name or location, please) I am deeply concerned about a situation that exists here.

First, let me say I think a major aspect of teaching is to set a good example for the students to follow in terms of behavior. However, it is common knowledge that two teachers here (both married, but not to each other) are having an affair. It has progressed to the point where it is a topic of discussion among students and other teachers.

I realize that what two adults do in private is their own business, but by being so open about it, our students might get the impression that all of us teachers condone such behavior, which is certainly not true. Thus I am truly concerned about the detrimental effect this example is having on our students.

The administration is aware of this problem, but I'm told they have taken the position that it is a private matter, and not within their jurisdiction.

I welcome your advice as to how this situation should be handled by both me and the administration.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Children formulate their moral values at home, long before they reach junior high school, so you needn't be concerned about their following the "bad example" set by the teachers you mention.

If this alleged affair is, as you say, common knowledge, it is possible that the administration is dealing with it in ways unknown to you. Since they haven't solicited my advice, I'll offer them none, but if I were you, I'd stay out of it.

DEAR ABBY: One of the women I work with fixed me up with a friend of hers last Saturday night. I hate blind dates, but I must admit that this one lived up to her billing.

On Monday I received a bouquet of flowers from my date. The card said, "Thank you for a terrific evening." I was really shook, but I must say I liked it.

Abby, maybe I'm behind the times, because I have never heard of a woman sending flowers to a man to thank him for a date. I suppose this is part of the women's lib thing. Tell me, is this the way women do things today?

JEFF

DEAR JEFF: Only the smart ones.

DEAR ABBY: For whatever this is worth: I drove a taxi for a while, and Christmas Eve was a heartbreaker. Nearly all my calls came from bars. Most of my passengers were elderly; all of them were lonely. As the evening progressed, some of my fares were so drunk I had to help them into and out of the cab.

Abby, please remind your readers to remember elderly friends and relatives who are alone on Christmas Eve.

Airlines Stage War On Fares

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines and Trans World Airlines have started a fare war on the busy New York-South Florida route, announcing deep price cuts for unrestricted one-way tickets.

Eastern said Tuesday it would slash its fare on the tickets in half, from $198 to $99, starting Jan. 1 on southbound flights and Jan. 7 on northbound flights.

TWA announced it would charge $89 for an unrestricted ticket. And Pan American World Airways and Delta announced they would "remain competitive." Air Florida said its one-way fare for flights operating between New York and South Florida would remain at $99.

irritated. But afterwards, I think he figured out we were Paul Vick, 18, filed the claim after his parents fired him Oct. 15 from their gas station, grocery and sporting goods business near West Lake Okoboji.

He was initially granted compensation, but his parents appealed and a state hearing officer has disqualified him. Job Service of Iowa announced this week.

The elder Vick said his son was fired for his "general attitude towards the customers" and because he had been working on his car while he was supposed to be on the job.

"If it had been any other employee, he would have been fired a couple of weeks earlier," Vick said. "When we hired him, it was with the understanding that he was going to be treated like any other employee."

Vick said his son's dismissal and benefits claim caused few family problems. The younger Vick lives at home.

"I don't think there are any hard feelings," the elder Vick said. "At first when he

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Need a shot of optimism to get you through the holidays? You're gonna love this. Most of us have never seen anyone smile in a post office. It's like a clinic for lower back pains. Well, I was in line yesterday when the door opened and in walked a lady with a big smile on her face weighted down with boxes for mailing. She held the door open for her three little girls who filed in, each one carrying a package. It was quite obvious they had never been in a post office in their entire lives.

She bounded over to a man standing by a counter pasting on stamps and asked, "Are you a carrier?"

"Of what?" he snapped.

Another one in line said, "To the back of the line, lady!"

Her eyes fairly danced with excitement as she announced to no one in particular, "It certainly is a nice day, and just think, girls, Christmas is only one week away."

"Will Granddad get his presents?" asked one child.

"Of course he will," said her mother. "We've got it timed just about right. On Christmas eve, he'll be sitting around the fire, the doorbell will ring and a postman will knock on the door and say with a big smile, 'Merry Christmas from your family in Arizona.'"

Every eye in the post office turned to stare at this cross between Mary Poppins and Tiny Tim. Granddad would be lucky to get those packages while Reagan was still president.

"Look, girls, doesn't the

Share An Heirloom For Christmas

If you have lived long enough to acquire pieces of jewelry, books, lamps, art objects of furnishings that have some special family significance, and you would like for a younger family member to have these things eventually, why not make a special occasion of giving them for Christmas this year?

As you look around your home (and in the closets or cupboards) you probably can see that your children have admired and have inquired about their origin. Lovely quilts your grandmother made, the chair or table that belonged to a favorite aunt, Victorian books or lamps that graced your parents' home — these are the nostalgic items most prized today by many collectors. Don't think they are worthless! A quick look at the articles for sale in local antique shops or flea markets can help you realize that many of these items not only have a value but may be irreplaceable at any price.

Many young adults are furnishing their homes with purchased antiques or old family pieces. You can help them have an attractive home that is also unique with one-of-a-kind family treasures. You will not only be assured that those items are received by the people you desire to have them, but you will be able to receive appropriate expressions of appreciation now during your lifetime. This might prevent family squabbles later on when your estate is to be settled.

Some Judgment Is Required:

1. Do not give away assets that you still need! Do not deprive yourself now or give anything that will affect your future security.
2. Do not give away anything that you will only have to replace. The replacement will probably cost more but not be worth near as much as the item you give away.
3. If you give any individual gifts valued over $3000, North Carolina or federal gift taxes may be due. But it is good tax planning to give away items you don't need that will be more valuable in the future.
4. Get some indication of interest in particular items, or give appropriate items to individuals with identifiable interests in the type of article you plan to give. You want to be assured that your gift will be honored and cared for as the treasure it is.
5. If you are giving old furniture, or other items that might need some repair, make sure it is in reasonably good condition or workable. But, do not refinish or make changes to modernize the object. Some old furniture is more valuable with its old finish even if it is not in perfect condition. If the recipient wants to re-do the item let him/her make the decisions for changes desired.
6. If you are considering a gift to a minor child who may not have the maturity to appreciate or care for the gift, plan ahead for the parents to supervise or train the child in caring for this object. Old coins or stamps, for instance, might be given to the parents in trust for the child.

7. On the gift card, or on the bottom of the object, share some bit of information about the gift or its history that will help the recipient understand why the gift should be handed down within the family. Facts about the original owner, the place or occasion of original purchase might be of special interest. How did you become the owner?

8. Remember that a gift is a gift! A gift is not a promise that someone will own something of yours in the future. When you really give you no longer have any control over the object given, and it will not be in your possession. So, do not be distressed if the object given is misused, sold or lost. If you have made a wise choice of gift and recipient this should not be a real concern.

9. Giving these gifts will cut your out-of-pocket cost for Christmas gifts this year, and if you have enough property that your estate will be subject to inheritance taxes when you die, those taxes could be reduced by disposition of some of your property now.

10. Be generous, give wisely, and have a Happy Christmas!

Creaky, But It Works

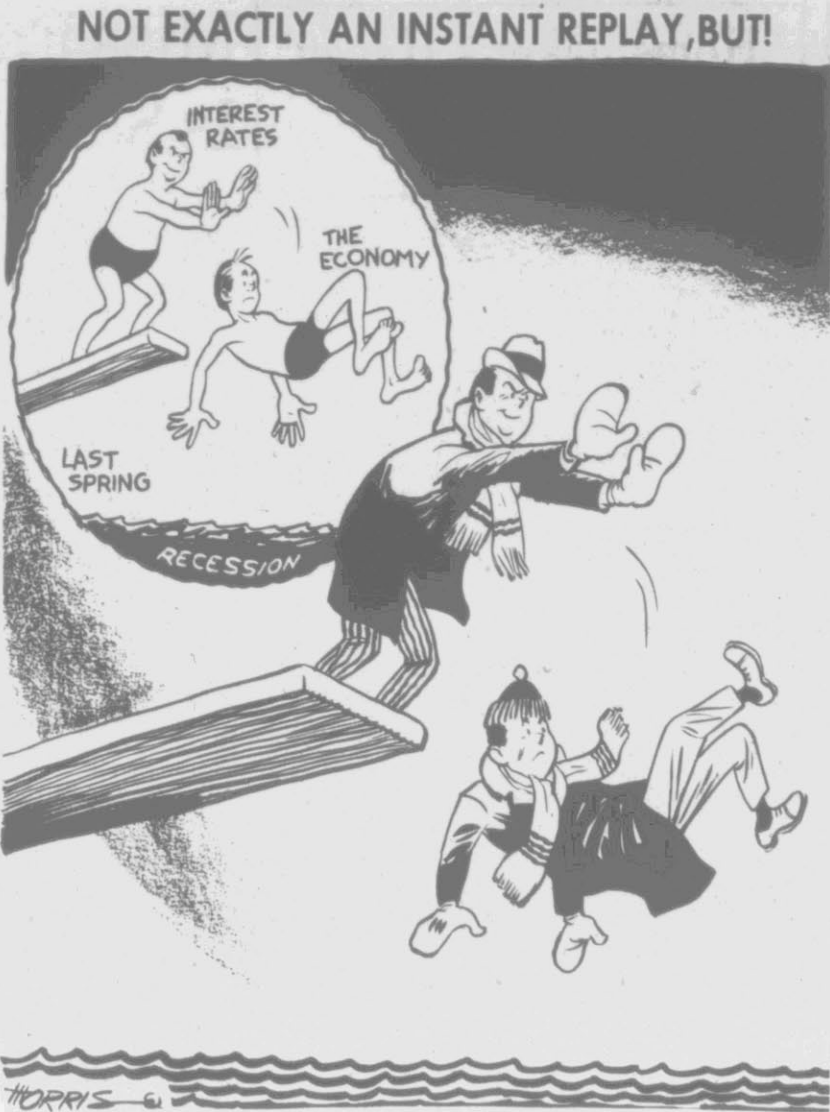

In November the votes were counted in the national elections and everyone assumed that Ronald Reagan was elected president. Not so. In the first place the voting totals announced on election night were all unofficial. They later were made official and declared the results of the election.

Even then, though, the new president had not been chosen. The constitution provides for an electoral college, whose members we were choosing, to finally elect a president. By tradition the electoral college members vote for their party choices, although there have been exceptions.

The electoral college has been called creaky and obsolete and there have been calls for a constitutional amendment to provide for election by popular vote. We regard the constitution as a masterful document and we shudder whenever modern day citizens attempt to revise it. Still there always remains the possibility of an electoral college rebellion which could lead to the election of a president who was not favored by the voters.

The meaning of the constitution is constantly under review, and perhaps someday the courts will rule electors can be bound to their party choices.

Sen. Laxalt Dominating

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — House Republicans who have been longtime supporters of Ronald Reagan are furious that Sen. Paul Laxalt, the president-elect's designated emissary to Capitol Hill, cut them out of decision-making during the transition.

Laxalt was the only member of Congress who sat with Reagan and his inner circle selecting members of the Cabinet. Nor did Laxalt consult any House members. That effectively excluded longtime Reagan hands in the House: Reps. Thomas Evans of Delaware, Jack Kemp of New York, Trent Lott of Mississippi, Carroll Campbell of South Carolina.

It was bad enough for the House members to be kept away from Cabinet selections, but the crowning indignity came when Laxalt failed to consult the House members on the selection of Max Friedersdorf as Reagan's chief congressional lobbyist. Friedersdorf, a White House lobbyist in Nixon days and currently chairman of the Federal Election Commission, is a stranger to junior House Republicans.

New Budget Face?
The election by the House Democratic Caucus of moderate conservative Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma as chairman of the House Budget Committee may spell the end of Dr. Alice Rivlin's five-year rule over the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) with liberal Keynesian principles.

As CBO director, Rivlin has doggedly refused to permit its econometric models to reflect supply-side tax-cutting principles. Nevertheless, the prospective new Republican chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, has been reluctant to sack Rivlin on grounds that it would be too partisan. He is being pressed hard to do just that by two ardent supply-side members of his committee, Sens. Bill Armstrong of Colorado and Orrin Hatch of Utah. But the election of Jones puts a different tone on the whole proceeding. Jones is no Keynesian and accepts some supply-side principles, advocating moderate tax reduction. He is expected to confer privately with Rivlin — a meeting that conceivably could culminate in a request for her resignation.

Weinberger's Deputy Members of Ronald Reagan's defense transition team are trembling in fear that Secretary of Defense-designate Casper Weinberger will push present Deputy CIA Director Frank Carlucci, not much more knowledgeable about the Pentagon than Weinberger, as deputy secretary.

Reagan's defense experts had brushed aside Weinberger's ignorance of military matters and his pinch-penny reputation on grounds that he would be surrounded by experienced hard-liners. But Carlucci definitely does not fall into that category.

Carlucci, who began as a Foreign Service officer, has become a career civil servant working for both Republican and Democratic administrations. He shows a neutral face ideologically with no known leanings on defense policy. But Weinberger was deeply impressed with Carlucci's performance under him at the Office of Management and Budget and the Health, Education and Welfare Department during the Nixon-Ford administration and has indicated he would like him by his side once again at the Pentagon.

Ignoring The South
When a furious Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina observed that President-elect Reagan had named not one single Southerner to his Cabinet, he immediately called the other nine Southern Republican senators and senators-elect to his office for an emergency session.

Thurmond could scarcely believe the insensitivity of Reagan and his Cabinet-makers. Reagan had clin-

Complicated Problems Ahead

The question a few weeks ago was whether or not the prime rate would hit 20 percent. Now it has and as this is written stands at 21 percent. The question is how much higher will it go.

The awesome interest can soon paralyze many industries which depend on financing to exist — and it can add to the prices consumers pay because the financing costs have to be added to the final sales price.

By contrast most observers believe interest is high because inflation has forced it there.

It is all part of the complicated knot of economic problems which the new administration will face when it takes office in January.

THIS AFTERNOON

How Much Is 10%?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Certainly it is simplistic for members of the General Assembly to suggest that the state's budget can be cut 10 percent overall without hurting services.

But that is precisely what a number of lawmakers have in mind as they prepare for the 1981 session of the General Assembly.

When you talk 10 percent of a budget the size of all state government, you're talking real money — that's half-a-billion in a total budget of $5 billion. It's half of all the money already being spent by the state for public schools.

Is it really simplistic? Not necessarily so, say some legislative leaders who recall chopping activities during the 1974-75 sessions of the Legislature. At that time, a number of agencies who paraded before the Appropriations Committee seeking more money were told to go and cut 10 percent.

BILL NOBLITT

No Strain
Most were able to do that without strain. A couple argued about the process, and were told to do it themselves, or the legislators would do it for them.

Later, most agency people confessed that no hardship resulted.

That is not surprising when you listen carefully to what top leadership says from time to time. When he first took office four years ago, Gov. Jim Hunt trimmed state employment more than 10 percent. Since then, the total has slowly risen back, but the exercise demonstrated that in fact, jobs can be eliminated without hurting either programs or people. Such cuts are usually made by either not filling a job when it becomes vacant, or by taking off the books jobs which have remained unfilled for long periods of time. Why the agency resistance to doing such? Two primary problems are evident: a cut in numbers of employees means a cut in budget which often means less chance for advancement in salary or rank for the top administrators; and, unfilled jobs is where the so-called budget surplus is routinely accumulated, and chief administrators count on that surplus money to launch new programs in coming years, or to finance projects which had not been approved by the General Assembly but can be paid for by transferring surplus dollars.

Take the state bid-rigging scandal involving highway construction as another example. Gov. Hunt commented recently that the situation had not overly inflated highway spending — probably no more than 10 percent. But 10 percent of the $212 million highway fund budget is $21 million.

Big Bucks
Testifying before a legislative study commission earlier this year, a number of building contractors said their bids on state construction projects are normally padded because of state red tape and the constant harassment and threat of legal problems anything they get involved in putting up a state building. That, plus what they termed "gold-plating" in state buildings push construction costs up somewhere between 10 and 20 percent.

Take the minimum waste. With some $200 million spent yearly in such areas as college, prison, hospital, office building, and others, that's another $20 million blown.

When you get down to it, cutting the state budget by 10 percent across-the-board may not be so simple, but it's likely not so simplistic as it appears, either.

Safire 'On Language'

WASHINGTON — If your Christmas gift list includes someone who loves the language — truly loves words, their meaning and their usage — let me suggest the perfect present: William Safire's "On Language." It is pure fun.

The volume is a meaty collection of Safire's Sunday pieces for The New York Times, interlarded with scores of shame-on-you letters of amplification and correction from his readers. My brother pundit may not be as eminent an authority as the Times' old master, Theodore Bernstein. He may not match the erudition of such linguistic professionals as Henry Fowler, Ernest Gowers, Roy Copperud, Basil Cottle and Wilson Follett. But by golly, Safire goes haring through the fields of usage like a beagle on a hedgerow.

On most points, my brother is sound. He wants to preserve the nice distinction between "anxious" and "eager." He insists that one does not graduate college; one is graduated from college. He scorns those language slob who use "less" when they mean "fewer." He fights one more round against the misuse of "literally," as in, "she literally mopped up the court with her opponent."

Safire charges head-on against "a number of," as in, "Pretoria has ordered the expulsion of a number of embassy personnel." If the writer does not know precisely, or even approximately, how many diplomats have been expelled, such preferable fudges are available as "a few," or "several," or "dozens," or "scores." Suppose Marlowe had inquired, thinking of the beautiful Helen, if she were "the face that launched a number of ships." Or Lincoln at Gettysburg: "A number of years ago, our fathers brought forth..."

All of us who write for a living have such crotchets. (A crotchet, for the record, started out as a small hooked instrument, and emerged by metamorphosis as "a highly individual and usually eccentric opinion or preference.") One of my own losing crusades has to do with "replica," which as any schoolboy ought to know, is a reproduction or facsimile made by the maker of the original work. Language slob have let this precise and

The battle against crime in North Carolina is far from won, according to statistics released by the N.C. Department of Justice.

Crime figures from North Carolina's five largest cities show an 8.97 percent increase for the first nine months of 1980 compared to the same period in 1979.

"This is the highest cumulative total ever reported for a first nine-month period of any given year. It's staggering to think what this means to our citizens in personal suffering and economic loss," said Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten.

The statistics released by the Police Information Network, a division of the Department of Justice headed by Edmisten, record a total of 53,707 major crimes reported from the five cities.

The surge in the crime rate was attributed by Edmisten to a "deteriorating economy and to the usual consequences of a society changing from rural to urban and from farm to industry."

Major crimes are classified as violent, such as murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault; property, including burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft; and arson.

The only downward trend was that shown for murder, with a one percent decrease. That was about the only bright note. Reports of rape increased 33 percent. Other upward trends were for aggravated assault, eight percent; robbery, seven per cent; burglary, 12 percent, including residential burglaries up by 16 percent; motor vehicle thefts, eight percent; and larceny 7.5 percent.

Arson is a recently established index crime and cannot be compared to previous years. However, the five cities reported a total of 412 arsons during the period, with property damages estimated to be more than $3.6 million.

Of the nearly $21 million worth of property stolen, not including fraud and embezzlement cases, about $5.5 million was listed as recovered.

Arrests have increased only about three percent this year, which the attorney general said demonstrates that law enforcement resources are sorely strained.

Protection of the lives, liberties and property of citizens is a most important function of government and the present state of affairs shows the necessity for a top priority in those efforts.

Strength For Today

MINUS ATTENDANCE
Are you a church member or a church alumnus?

Many people who used to go to church back home forget all about their church duties when they move to another town or city. Some people continue to go to church while they are in moderate circumstances, but when their income rises and they move with a different social set, they forsake the church. Some young people starting off in college think that skipping church is a sign of newly-won independence and growing maturity. A certain number of older people who used to go to church seem to find that getting up on Sunday morning at 9 or 10 o'clock just becomes too much of a chore.

It is a striking paradox that less than half of the professing Christians in America go to church. A few people as they grow older increase their church attendance and take on new church duties, but many others think of Sunday as just a day for fun and games. Don't be a church alumnus — or alumna. — Elisha Douglass

Confrontation Is U.S. Style

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If cooperation among government, business and labor has helped make Japan an amazingly efficient producer, what does it say about the United States, where productivity growth has nearly ceased?

Confrontation rather than cooperation, at least of late, has been the American style, and it has been revealed time after time in recent years, most glaringly between the Federal Reserve and the White House.

Cooperation hasn't been very evident either between Congress and the White House, management and labor, and business and government. And at least two consequences have been raging inflation and soaring interest.

At the Federal Reserve, where the lessening of inflation is considered a battle to the end, there long has been a feeling that a reduction of government spending is a necessary form of cooperation. It hasn't come.

Instead, the White House repeatedly promised to balance the budget, and even claimed to have balanced it, only to find it imbalanced again within weeks. Neither White House nor Congress could cut spending.

As a result, the fiscal 1980 budget added $59 billion to the growing ocean of red ink, and it appears now that fiscal 1981 will add another $30 billion. Government, that s, spurred inflation mightily.

Simultaneously, the Fed was claiming to fight inflation, sing high interest rates to discourage would-be borrowers. You can do this with the private sector, but not with government. It just spends anyway.

Now the country has both high inflation and high interest rates, and a very real threat that the private sector will get demolished again by big government, which magnanimously will then offer to bail it out.

The fact that government and business have been at odds hasn't helped lessen the inflationary pressures.

Bureaucratic regulations, some of them mindlessly enforced, have added billions to production costs, and in documented instances have closed plants and cost workers their jobs. Cooperation would have helped enormously to keep productivity increases from falling to near zero.

Labor has insisted on enforcement of minimum wage laws at the expense of training for the unskilled. And business, while publicly damning government interference, has sometimes sought public financial aid.

You can say that confrontation and competition are the American way, and you probably won't be wrong. But there is a difference: competition can destroy as well as construct. It can bring out the best — or worst.

After years of labor-management and government-management conflicts, during which important modernization efforts were put off, is part of the background of the automobile industry's $3.5 billion in losses.

Those losses, for just the first nine months of the year, have left Chrysler nearly bankrupt and Ford endangered. And now, the damage done, management, labor and government seek to cooperate for the common good.

Chrysler is asking government for the right to use more of the $1.5 billion in loan guarantees it has been granted, and it is seeking an agreement with labor to forego wage increases. Ford too says it might seek concession from its workers. And GM could very well do the same.

The industry hasn't received the government support it seeks on the matter of foreign competition restraints, but it still could get some aid if Japan fails to make its market more accessible to U.S. exports.

More cooperation seems to be developing, even if, as in the case of federal financial aid, it might not considered the most desirable sort. Even so, it is enough perhaps to suggest a lesson, to wit:

Competition is American, desirable, necessary, constructive. It forces companies to be efficient. It generally raises productivity, which enables jobs to be created without simultaneously generating inflation.

Cooperation in certain areas also is desirable, and for the very same reasons.

Hidden Gifts

Go To Dump

FAIRFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Carol Genenbacher thought her garage would be a safe hiding place for a bag full of children's Christmas presents.

Her husband, Chuck, thought the lumpy bag was supposed to be put on the curb with the garbage.

Mrs. Genenbacher didn't remember the cache until about 10 minutes after trashmen made their regular pickup. So she followed the garbage truck to the landfill and searched it for the bag of presents.

"I didn't think we'd find it," Mrs. Genenbacher said. "I never realized how much garbage comes out of one of those trucks — and we had to go through two truckloads."

That's about 12 tons of garbage, according to Bill Rumpke, who runs a private garbage collection service.

Mrs. Genenbacher and some friends searched about two hours in the cold, muddy landfill recently before retrieving the bag, which contained about $100 worth of presents.

"We're so glad and so thankful. It really meant a lot to us," she said. "Financially, I don't think we could afford to replace the things."

perienced" car. Maids have become "household technicians." A recession is a "rolling readjustment," and a flack, publicity chief or press agent has risen to director of an "Office of Public Awareness."

Here and there my Homer nods. (The cliché is by Pope out of Horace: Indignor quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus). Saffire has embraced the orphan "hopefully," as in "hopefully, the sun will rise." He does not even flinch at such verbs as "to impact" and "to obsolete." He is entirely too tolerant of "to prioritize." He has a lamentable habit of using "since" when "because" would be better.

But by and large (the expression comes out of sailing, and once meant to sail alternately — not alternatively — close to the wind and with the wind abeam or aft), forgive the digression, my brother Saffire scores exceedingly well. I wish he had turned around on "fulsome," and "transpire," and "nauseous," and "virtually," and "pinch-hitter" (which means something more than "substitute" or "replacement"), but we can't have everything all at once. Saffire's "On Language" is a box of Christmas candies for anyone who savors words. The temptation is to eat them all at once.

cheo his nomination with Southern primary election victories and carried all Southern states except Jimmy Carter's Georgia on Nov. 4. Republican victories in North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama had ended Democratic control of the Senate after 25 years.

Accordingly, Thurmond and his colleagues determined to press hard for selection of Southerners to sub-Cabinet posts. The first step: a bluntly-worded letter to Reagan, pressing him to remember Dixie.

A SHORT PARADE

Although a storm of protests has cancelled early plans for U.S. military units to march without weapons, Ronald Reagan's inaugural parade planners have won their battle to keep the usually endless procession down to an hour in length — prompting deep aggravation among state Republican politicians.

Those politicians now have to say no to bands and other groups accustomed to marching down Pennsylvania Avenue once every four years. But their complaints transcend that petty annoyance. They fear the decision makes Reagan look old and elitist.

"It's the worst kind of politics," one Southern party leader told us. He and other Republicans feel the decision will be interpreted as the 69-year-old Reagan's inability to sit out in the January cold as his predecessors did. The elitist impression, they fear, will be fostered when he leaves from the parade to formal balls attended only by the rich and the powerful. (Copyright 1980 Field Enterprises, Inc.)

COMSAT Asks First Satellite-To-Home Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's first satellite-to-home television system has been proposed by a company which says the system would supplement commercial networks and provide "enormous public benefits."

"We will be expanding viewer choices, promoting competition and providing minority and dual-language programming," said John A. Johnson, chairman of the Satellite Television Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Communications Satellite Corp., or COMSAT.

The company on Wednesday filed a 1,200-page application with the FCC for permission to begin building the first phase of the system. Johnson, at a news briefing, estimated that it would take three or four years to begin service after receiving FCC approval.

The first phase calls for building two satellites, one of which would be a spare. Three channels of subscription programming would be broadcast to residents of the eastern time zone.

COMSAT said it expects development costs plus the costs of the first three months of operating the system to total $465.9 million. The application says COMSAT is prepared to transfer $225 million in capital to the Satellite Television Corp. and that a proposed commercial banking syndicate headed by the Chase Manhattan Bank "is expected to provide a $400 million line of credit."

Johnson said studies indicate places without access to high-capacity cable TV systems would be prime areas for selling a direct broadcast satellite service. He said 2 million households in the United States can receive only one television station.

Johnson suggested it would not be too optimistic to expect 5 million to 7 million subscribers nationwide.

Technology for providing TV programs directly from orbiting satellites to the home is being tested in other nations, including Japan and Canada. The key to such a system is the development of special high-power satellites that can beam a signal to earth with sufficient intensity to be received by antennas as small as 2½ feet in diameter.

COMSAT said it would scramble its TV signals and use special decoders to prevent piracy of its programs. The company would rely primarily on existing retailers to sell and install the small antennas for about $100, Johnson said.

If the homeowner bought the required decoding equipment, for $200 to $300, his monthly subscription fee would be between $14 and $18, he said. If the consumer leased the decoder, the monthly fee would be about $25, Johnson said. The company does not plan to lease antennas.

The television service would feature commercial-free movies, sports, entertainment specials, minority and children's programming and cultural shows, Johnson said. Options would include stereo sound, closed captioning for the hearing impaired, simultaneous

Two Wrecks This Morning

An estimated $2,600 property damage resulted from two early morning traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police today.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:15 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Fourth and Summit Streets, involving cars driven by Paul Bryan Bullock of Rocky Mount, and Danny Thomas Brimrage of 503 East Fifth St.

Police, who charged Brimrage with careless and reckless driving and failing to stop for a stop sign, estimated damage from the collision at $700 to the Bullock car, $1,000 to the Brimrage vehicle, and $900 to a utility pole at the intersection.

Vehicles driven by Benjamin Harold Norris of 703 Willow St., and Patricia Rose Smith of Route 1, Greenville, collided about 1:05 a.m. on Tenth Street, 80 feet East of the Riverbluff Road intersection.

Investigators estimated damage at $200 to the Norris car and $100 to the Smith truck.

European Parliament Won't Debate Strikers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has adamantly refused to give in to the demands of convicted Irish terrorists on a hunger strike "to the death" in a prison near Belfast.

"This government cannot and will not" give in to the hunger strikers' demands for political prisoner status, Mrs. Thatcher said Wednesday in a telegram to Cardinal Tomas O'Flaherty, the Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland, who asked her earlier this week to personally intervene to save the strikers.

"I believe there's now almost universal agreement in Ireland that men of violence can have no right to political status," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Her position was echoed today by the European Parliament, which rejected a request for an urgent debate on the hunger strike by a vote of 204 to 81.

Seven of the IRA prisoners today began the 53rd day of their hunger strike. They have taken only water and salt since beginning the fast on Oct. 27. Thirty other male prisoners at Maze joined the hunger strike last Monday in sympathy with the original seven, and three women at Armagh prison stopped eating Dec. 1.

All 40 strikers were convicted of terrorist crimes committed under the banner of the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army or the smaller Irish National Liberation Army.

One of the original seven strikers, 26-year-old Sean McKenna, is not expected "to live much longer unless he starts accepting treatment," the British Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, quoted unnamed medical experts as saying Wednesday.

Supporters of the prisoners say McKenna and another hunger striker, 28-year-old Tommy McKearney, are weakening fast and going blind from the effects of the fast. McKenna's relatives claim he could be dead within three days.

The first death of a hunger striker is expected to trigger IRA reprisals in British-ruled Northern Ireland and on the British mainland.

"Belfast is as taut as a tightrope," one senior police commander said.

The hunger strikers in the Maze prison near Belfast want to be treated as political prisoners rather than common criminals. Britain has refused, saying this would legitimize their terrorist crimes.

The IRA has been fighting for years to end Britain's control of Northern Ireland and unite the primarily Protestant province with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

Meanwhile, six convicted Protestant extremists, members of the Ulster Defense Association, abandoned their six-day hunger strike at Maze Wednesday in response to appeals from UDA leaders outside the prison. They, too, demanded political prisoners' status as well as segregation from rival IRA convicts.

Varied Charges After Incident

George Kevin Hall, 26 of Wilson Acres Apts., was arrested by Greenville police early today on charges of damage to real property, assault, and resisting arrest, following a series of incidents in the downtown area, Chief Glenn Cannon reported.

According to the chief, Hall allegedly kicked a door at Newby's Sub Shop at 205 East Fifth St., causing the door to strike and break a window.

Later, he allegedly assaulted several persons at Pantana Bob's on Cotanche Street, including David Jackson of 106 Belk Dorm, who signed a warrant charging Hall with assault.

The resisting arrest charge came after Hall allegedly resisted officers, causing an estimated $86 damage to the policemen's uniforms.

Cannon noted that the damage at Newby's Sub Shop was estimated at $600.

FOCUS

Oil and Alberta

50 years ago, the Canadian province of Alberta was a region of rugged mountains and vast plains, inhabited mostly by cowboys and farmers. Today, modern skyscrapers are taking their place on Alberta's landscape, and wealthy businessmen are becoming as common as the farmers and cowboys. The reason is oil. Oil was discovered in Alberta in 1947. Since then, it has helped make Alberta Canada's richest province. Scientists believe Alberta's total petroleum reserves are much greater than those of Saudi Arabia. Provincial leaders have been battling for control of the resource with Canada's federal government, which would like to use Alberta oil to help make Canada self-sufficient in energy by 1990.

AT & T Enjoys Record Profit

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s reported 12-month profit of $6.04 billion has set a record for the most profitable year ever recorded by a U.S. corporation.

AT&T said it earned $6.04 billion, or $8.18 a share, in the 12 months ended Nov. 30. That was up 7.7 percent from $5.61 billion, or $7.98 a share, in the preceding 12 months.

The previous record for earnings in a 12-month period also belonged to AT&T, which made $5.8 billion in the 12 months ended Aug. 31. Exxon Corp. reported profits of $5.7 billion for the 12 months ended Sept. 30.

AT&T also reported Wednesday that it had the largest quarterly gain in more than a year, but expressed concern over inflation and high interest rates.

For the quarter ended Nov. 30, AT&T earned $1.6 billion, or $2.12 a share. That is up 11.1 percent from $1.4 billion, or $2.01 a share, in the same quarter last year.

Revenues for the latest quarter were $13.1 billion, up 12.6 percent from $11.7 billion a year earlier. The company said return on average total capital was 10.02 percent during the quarter, up from 9.76 percent.

AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown said quarterly earnings per share rose faster than at any time since the second quarter of 1979.

Brown said it was not clear "whether our experience of increasing demand in the most recent quarter will be sustained."

Lagging On Army Tanks

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is at least two months behind schedule building the Army's new XM-1 tank, the Detroit News reported today.

The newspaper said the problem, which involves a subcontractor, could delay the weapon's deployment as much as a year.

The XM-1, considered the most sophisticated tank in the world, is designed to replace the M-60 tank built by Chrysler and used by the Army since 1959.

A Chrysler subcontractor, Avco Lycoming Division in Stratford, Conn., has been slow in supplying turbine engines for the tank, said Jacob D. Neu, manufacturing vice president for Chrysler Defense Inc., a wholly owned Chrysler Corp. subsidiary.

Other problems on the Chrysler XM-1 production line in Lima, Ohio, also have slowed production, the News said.

Under its contract with the Army, Chrysler is supposed to deliver 110 XM-1 tanks by Jan. 31, 1981, and an additional 352 the remainder of the year. The Army is considering buying as many as 7,068 XM-1 tanks, the paper said.

Chrysler says the first 110 tanks will be ready on time, but 20 to 30 won't have engines, according to the News. Neu predicted tank

Evolution Foe A Campus Issue

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Since Dean Kenyon began telling his biology class that "supernatural creation" brought the cosmos into being, a professorial controversy has raged at San Francisco State University.

Embarrassing, says one colleague. Entertaining, says another.

"It's very nice to shake the basket and see what goes on. I'm always in favor of controversy," said Charles Hagar, a physicist and astronomer.

But another professor, Lawrence Swan, calls Kenyon's teaching "an aberrant misinterpretation" and "an intolerable representation of the truth."

"Do geologists allow a flat-earth advocate to teach?" he asks. "Would astronomers like astrologists? Does a professor have the right to teach anything he wants? Can society afford to deny science?"

Kenyon, 40, has taught a class on evolution here for 12 years and four years ago began lecturing on creationism, a theory close to the biblical account of creation.

"In the relatively recent past, 10,000 to 20,000 years ago, the entire cosmos was brought into existence out of nothing at all by supernatural creation," Kenyon says.

To support his theory, he cites gaps in the Earth's fossil record and lack of proof of transmutation of species — the linchpin of the Darwinian theory of evolution.

That theory, accepted by most scientists, holds that all species of plants and animals developed from earlier forms by hereditary transmission of slight variations in successive generations over eons of time.

The theory of evolution is too full of "holes," he says. He also believes fossils and rock strata formed during a worldwide flood, not over billions of years.

Swan dismissed Kenyon's contentions as a "You don't know, therefore God" argument.

Department Chairman William Wu has taken the step of limiting the time Kenyon may spend on his theory in class. Kenyon's classes also are audited by another faculty member, Wu said.

Kenyon, who is not supposed to allow religion to intrude in his classes at the state-supported school, says he believes there are "no errors in the Bible."

During a leave in 1969, he attended the University of California's graduate theological union and in 1974 he attended Trinity College in Oxford, England, to work on a project involving Darwinism and the Church of England.

The controversy makes the department's course offerings more interesting, said Sarane Bowen, a specialist in cell and molecular biology.

Hagar enjoys the controversy and thinks it's healthy.

"I think that's how science progresses. All too often evolution has been presented as fact, and it's kind of interesting to see that challenged by alternative theories. If they're wrong, let the scientists knock them down," he said.

Avers Presser Has Mob Ties

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A Teamsters official on President-elect Ronald Reagan's transition team has denied allegations that he had ties to New Jersey and Boston mobsters seeking loans from the union's pension and welfare funds.

The official, Jackie Presser, issued a statement Wednesday saying that while he had been contacted by a man identified as a member of the Mafia, he had refused all requests for loans. Presser is on the economics affairs panel of the transition team.

In testimony before the state Commission of Investigation last week, state police Detective Sgt. Robert Buccino said Presser was a contact for the approval of union loans to mobsters.

Testimony from Buccino, who monitors mob activity in northern New Jersey, was taken at a hearing on alleged mob influence on union dental plans.

Buccino said a member of a Cleveland crime family reported going to Presser for approval of loans to mobsters. He identified the man as Camillo "William" Molinaro of West Orange, allegedly an associate of reputed Cleveland mobster Anthony Libertore.

According to Buccino, Molinaro said he arranged loans ranging from $500,000 to $2 million for "10 to 50 percent front money."

SCI Director Michael Slavage said the commission would invite Presser to testify.

Presser, 54, of Cleveland, the vice president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the Ohio Conference of Teamsters, issued a statement through a spokesman in Cleveland.

"Mr. Molinaro has called my office on several occasions and each time I told him that I could not and would not assist him with any loans.

"I am unaware that he was ever successful in obtaining any loans from Teamsters funds. This is probably another example of a person claiming falsely to have influence in order to promote himself."

The Trenton Times reported Wednesday that a secret Justice Department memo said Presser is a "La Cosa Nostra figure" and that his underworld affiliation is "well documented."

Presser was in Washington meeting with Reagan transition officials and was not available for elaboration on his statement.

Lawrence Speakes, a spokesman for Reagan's transition team, said Presser's appointment would expire Jan. 20.

In another development, the Cleveland Plain Dealer reported today that in an affidavit dated Nov. 13 and on file in a New Mexico court an acknowledged mob executioner says Presser sought through him to obtain a favor from the Carter administration.

James Fratianno said in the affidavit that Presser had asked to be referred to someone who could obtain political favors from Carter's staff. Fratianno testified he introduced Presser to an Albuquerque lawyer, but was unsure whether Presser was able to obtain the favor through him.

The Plain Dealer said that when Presser was told of the affidavit, he said: "The statement is absolutely false. If you choose to accept and put into print the statements of an admitted killer then so be it."

Operators Plead Guilty

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Operators of two Lee County nursing homes pleaded guilty Wednesday to misdemeanor charges of mingling more than $6,000 in patients' Medicaid funds with institutional funds.

The pleas were entered by Nelson P. Tibbitt and Frank B. Tibbitt, chief executives of Convalescent Care of Lee County Inc. and Convalescent Care of Sanford Inc.

Frank Tibbitt, as vice president of the two companies, also pleaded guilty to two felony embezzlement cases against the corporations involving the Medicaid funds.

William C. Tucker, an investigator with the Medicaid fraud unit of the attorney general's office, testified at a sentencing hearing that during 1975, 1976 and 1977, over $67,000 in patient money had been mishandled in the operation of the Sanford and Lee County nursing homes. All monies except the $6,000 mentioned in the indictments had been replaced, according to Tucker.

Nelson Tibbitt was sentenced to a two-year suspended sentence, fined $500 fine and ordered to divest himself of all ownership interest in the nursing homes.

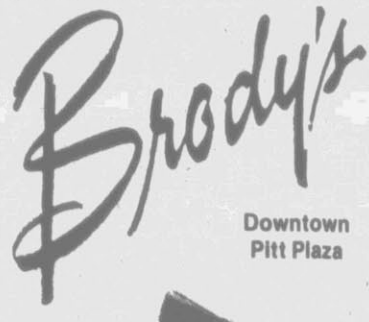

Frank Tibbitt also was given a two-year suspended sentence and ordered to pay a $500 fine. Both were also ordered to transfer all patient funds from banks in Virginia to banks in North Carolina.

The two corporations were ordered to pay $2,500 fines each and to make restitution to the patients and accounts of the $6,000 in funds.

Congressman Says Haig The Real Watergate Hero

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander Haig was the hero of Watergate while the president he served, Richard M. Nixon, doesn't even deserve a ticket to Ronald Reagan's inauguration, contends outgoing House Minority Leader John C. Rhodes.

Rhodes, R-Ariz., said Wednesday he doesn't think Haig's links with Nixon will hurt his chances of being confirmed as President-elect Ronald Reagan's choice for secretary of state.

"For the last couple of weeks (of Nixon's presidency), Haig was the president of the United States," Rhodes told a group of reporters.

"Nixon was so preoccupied, the day-to-day operations of the government were in other hands. Haig was the one who was able to give the impression of continuity."

Haig was the White House chief of staff in the waning days of Nixon's administration.

Rhodes said he doesn't know if Nixon will get invited to the inauguration, but he doesn't think he should be.

"It's a personal thing with me. If I were being inaugurated, I wouldn't invite him," Rhodes said.

He also said Nixon "should have no further role in government whatsoever — not even committee precinct man."

Rhodes said he has no knowledge that Reagan planned to either invite Nixon to the inauguration or to give him a role in his administration.

Rhodes, 64, decided not to seek re-election to the House GOP leadership post he has held since 1974, even though he was re-elected to another two-year House term last month.

In his last session with reporters as minority leader, Rhodes contended that Republicans would have won control of at least the House in the 1974 elections if it hadn't been for Nixon and Watergate.

"When I think of where we could have been now..." Rhodes said.

Rhodes said he dealt several times with Haig in 1974 on Watergate issues, including a meeting at Rhodes' house, shortly before Nixon's resignation, to discuss the "smoking gun" Watergate tape.

"If any hero emerged from Watergate, it was Al Haig," Rhodes said.

Rhodes said that the 1972 Nixon landslide victory was "as broad-based a political turnover as I've ever seen," even more of a potential watershed event than the 1980 Reagan landslide that handed over both the White House and the Senate to Republicans.

But instead of being able to convert that landslide to big gains in the House and the Senate in 1974, Nixon's conduct and resignation left the government and the GOP in shambles, Rhodes said.

Rhodes served as House minority leader from 1974, when his predecessor, Gerald R. Ford, was picked by Nixon to be vice president, to the end of this month.

Earlier this month, House Republicans elected Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., to succeed Rhodes in the post.

Rhodes said Wednesday that, even though he indicated earlier this year that he would retire after his next term expires, he is now reconsidering — and may run again in 1982.

Warns Reagan Against Central America Moves

By VICENTE MORALES
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro said Ronald Reagan's threats against Cuba are "repugnant and cynical," and warned the next U.S. president not to intervene in Central America or the Caribbean.

"Whoever tries to take possession of Cuba will take back the dust of their land wet with blood, if they do not perish in the struggle," Castro said Wednesday at the end of a 10-hour speech inaugurating the second congress of the Cuban Communist Party.

Castro said the election of Reagan has caused "uncertainty and a sensation of danger" in Cuba and the rest of Latin America. He said Reagan appears to be attempting to return to "the policy of the big stick in Latin America," but added, "the people Latin America no longer fear anything or anyone."

During his presidential campaign, Reagan suggested a military blockade of Cuba might be the way to get the estimated 85,000 Soviet troops out of Afghanistan. The Soviets intervened in Afghanistan a year ago to fight Moslem rebels battling the communist regime.

Castro said Reagan has the mistaken idea that "to make

Narrow Search In Water Probe

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Armed with results from a laboratory test, police are narrowing their search for the person who injected pesticide into a water system that serves up to 20,000 people.

"Whoever did this is totally unrelated to the water company, but has a knowledge of water systems and has a mental hangup," Allegheny County Police Superintendent Robert Kroner said Wednesday. "I'm hoping to God we get lucky."

Investigators discovered the pesticides chlordane and heptachlor, as well as alkyl hydrocarbon, a component of gasoline, in the water after receiving complaints Dec. 7.

Residents in the city's Beechview and Banksville sections and a part of neighboring Greentree Borough have been told not to use the water for drinking or cooking. Water has been trucked in.

An official of the county Health Department said the ban on use of the water will probably continue for at least another week.

Kroner said a private laboratory analysis provided "a great breakthrough" in the investigation by coming up with the brand name of the pesticide.

He said only one local company carries the brand. Detectives were talked with the concern about recent sales and possible theft of the pesticide.

Kroner declined to disclose the brand name or the company that handles the product.

He said the lab test positively identified the contaminant as a pesticide with a heavy concentration of chlordane. The results were from water and ground samples taken where the pesticide was injected into the system at a connection valve.

Authorities said Monday they were convinced the contamination was deliberate. The Western Pennsylvania Water Co. has offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible.

Castro opened the party congress by recommitting his nation to communism. He told the 2,000 delegates that "not everything we have done has been wise" in the nearly 22 years since his band of revolutionaries drove right-wing dictator Fulgencia Batista from the country.

But during the time, he added, Cuba has "never regressed, never made a single concession to imperialism or renounced a single one of its revolutionary ideals and principles. The best way to be a revolutionary is to be a communist."

N.C. Population Makes Top Ten

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has made the Top Ten, edging out Massachusetts in national population estimates, a spokesman for the governor said.

According to figures released by the U.S. Census Bureau Wednesday, North Carolina has 5,846,159 people. Massachusetts reported 5,728,288.

"We're the leading state in the South," crowed Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary. "Everybody knows, Florida is not really the South."

Pearce said the boom is also significant because federal aid formulas are based on the population.

Closes Court In Gunrunner Case

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state's highest court has upheld a justice's decision to close a courtroom during a pre-trial hearing for two alleged gun runners, one of whom has been identified as a former CIA agent.

Without comment, the seven-judge Court of Appeals unanimously refused Wednesday to hear an appeal by the New York Daily News and the New York Times of Justice Thomas Gilligan's decision barring the press and the public from the courtroom.

At issue was a pre-trial hearing for Frank Terpil, 40, of McLean, Va., and George Korkala, 38, of Nutley, N.J.

The two were indicted in January in connection with an alleged plot to supply 10,000 machine guns for $2.5 million to federal undercover agents posing as Latin American revolutionaries.

Agents contend the deal was struck last year in a London hotel room and allege that a down payment of $56,000 was made by the bogus revolutionaries.

Terpil has been identified as a former CIA agent.

At a Sept. 4 appearance before Galligan, attorneys for Terpil and Korkala said their clients' failure to appear with them in court was "involuntary."

In hearings into that allegation, the defense asked that a portion of the hearing be closed while they interrogated three assistant U.S. attorneys. The defense argued that testimony would "touch upon the security operations" of the United States and "might jeopardize" the life of one of the defendants.

Galligan decided Oct. 7 to close that portion of the hearing. The newspapers appealed to the Appellate Division of state Supreme Court.

On Nov. 18, the middle-level appeal court upheld Galligan.

"It is apparent that (Galligan) was concerned that further disclosure at this stage might conceivably endanger the life of the defendant," the Appellate Division said.

Rezoning.....

Harvey D. Bradshaw for rezoning 2.2 acres north of Carolina Telephone property on the west side of Hooker Road, from Highway Commercial to R-6, be approved.

Bradshaw said that the rezoning involves three Highway Commercial lots. Some 4.4 acres zoned for Neighborhood Commercial use would remain, he added.

Commissioners approved the preliminary plat of Bradshaw's Fairlane Farms development on the west side of Hooker Road. The final plat of Section I of Fairlane Farms was withdrawn.

Approval was also given to the preliminary plats of Court A and Court B of Twin Oak Townhomes, located on David Drive and at the intersection of David Drive and Laura Lane, respectively. Staff Planner Skip Browder explained that the two new sections, located south of the present Twin Oaks Subdivision, each involve 16 townhouse units, with just over one acre in each section.

In a final matter, commissioners approved an amendment in the board's rules of procedure to allow the Subdivision Review Committee to act in lieu of the planning board for final approval of soil erosion and sedimentation control plans.

Blame Chute For Failure

POINT MUGU, Calif. (AP) — A parachute recovery system has been blamed by the Navy for the crash of a Tomahawk cruise missile into the ocean off San Clemente Island shortly after takeoff.

The cigar-shaped missile was fired from a submerged submarine Tuesday and was supposed to skim along above the water over the Pacific Missile Test Range off the Southern California coast, thus avoiding radar.

But instead, the parachute opened, and the drag on the missile slowed it down too much. It dove into the ocean shortly after breaking the surface, said Ray Lucasey, a spokesman for the Joint Cruise Missiles Project here.

Lucasey said the launch from the submarine "was normal in all respects." An attempt is being made to recover the missile.

The parachute recovery system is designed to allow recovery of the test missiles and is intended to be part of the operating missiles once testing is complete.

The Navy's cruise missiles can be launched from air, land or sea and are designed to carry either conventional or nuclear warheads and skim low to the ground or water to avoid radar detection.

IRS And Belk Stores Agree

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Belk department stores and the Internal Revenue Service have agreed that $27 Belk stores owe nearly $2.2 million in back taxes, according to documents filed in U.S. Tax Court.

Those settlements stem from a series of lawsuits that the 374-store chain filed after the IRS claimed it owed $17.3 million in back taxes.

Cases involving 47 stores are still unresolved. The tax dispute grew out of a difference in interpretation of tax laws on inventories and operating losses.

In about 40 percent of the settled cases, it was agreed that no additional taxes were owed. In nine cases, it was determined that stores had actually overpaid, the largest being a $19,240 overpayment in 1966 by the Belk-Beck Co. of Burlington, N.C.

The largest deficiency agreed upon was $88,659 in back taxes owed by a Belk-

Lindsey store in Bradenton, Fla.

Has Skeptical View Of N.C. Gasoline Tax Proposal

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Incoming House Speaker Lister Ramsey says legislators appear to be taking a skeptical view of proposals to levy a new percentage tax on gasoline, and he is suggesting a smaller increase that earmarks more money for city streets and secondary roads.

Ramsey, D-Marshall, was a member of Gov. Jim Hunt's Blue Ribbon Study Commission on Transportation which this week sent the governor recommendations to add either a nickel to the current 9 1/2 cents a gallon retail gas tax or to levy an additional 4 percent tax on the wholesale price of gas.

But Ramsey, who has been nominated by the majority Democrats to be speaker and is certain to be elected when the Legislature convenes next month, said in an interview Wednesday that other more modest proposals may gain greater favor among House members. "I get the impression from talking to the various members they don't like this percentage tax," Ramsey said. "But I haven't talked to a majority."

Ramsey said he was not committed to any gas tax increase, but believed the state's highway program was in deep financial trouble. And he said he expected Hunt would eventually recommend some type of gas tax hike, even though the governor sounded a strong note of caution on the subject this week.

Ramsey, who as speaker will have a profound influence over whatever highway legislation comes out of the House, said he prefers adding a flat amount to the current per gallon tax rather than creating the percentage tax, which would increase collections further as the price of gas inevitably rises. He also said he viewed the nickel proposal as too high, and said a three-cent per gallon would be high enough. "I think there's a definite need. The question is just how much, and how is the bill going to be drawn for spending it," he said.

Although he didn't propose it during the study commission meetings, Ramsey suggested a plan Wednesday that would raise the gasoline tax by three cents, to 12 1/2 cents a gallon, and earmark a portion of the new tax to go to two special road funds.

One-quarter of a cent from the added tax, under Ramsey's plan, would go to increase the so-called Powell Bill fund which is distributed to municipalities around the state to help maintain city streets. Currently 1 cent of the gas tax goes to that fund, generating $32 million this year, and Ramsey would raise that to 1 1/4 cents per gallon.

In addition, Ramsey suggesting creating a similar 1 1/4 cents-per-gallon fund expressly for use in maintaining or paving secondary highways. Currently $24 million is spent on secondary roads, although there is no legally distinct fund for secondary road projects.

"You're putting almost a penny in secondary road projects now, so why not go ahead and earmark 1 1/4 cents to the Powell fund and 1 1/4 to secondary roads," Ramsey said.

Such a move would provide as much as $10 million to $12 million for rural areas and a somewhat smaller amount to cities, at current collection rates. In addition, it could make a tax hike politically more acceptable to legislators from both those areas.

Although he has suggested the plan, Ramsey said he wasn't ruling out other ideas yet. "I'm not wedded to the idea of raising taxes on anything," he said. "This is just something I'm throwing out for someone to toy with."

Maine Sees Rare Measles Outbreak

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Health officials are urging parents in the Sanford area to have their children immunized to guard against the nation's largest current outbreak of German measles.

Some 50 cases of the illness, all of them among people 10-20 years old, have been reported by Sanford physicians, said John Dunajski, the federal immunization officer assigned to the Maine Department of Human Services Bureau of Health.

Health officials said infectious rubella — the formal name for German measles — poses the greatest danger not to children but to pregnant women and their unborn fetuses.

Dr. Wayne Greaves, a communicable disease specialist from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, arrived in Maine on Wednesday to investigate the disease's sources.

Federal officials said there are more cases in Maine now than in any other state.

Rubella is a viral disease which begins in much the same way as the common cold, with a very slight runny nose or a cough. Body temperature tends to be normal or a little high. The typical rubella rash is blotchy and may cover the entire body or most of the body, and usually lasts for about three days. It is possible to have rubella without any rash.

The high fever, abnormal sensitivity to light and five-day rash that characterize measles do not occur in a case of German measles.

Rubella is easily avoided by immunization, Dunajski said.

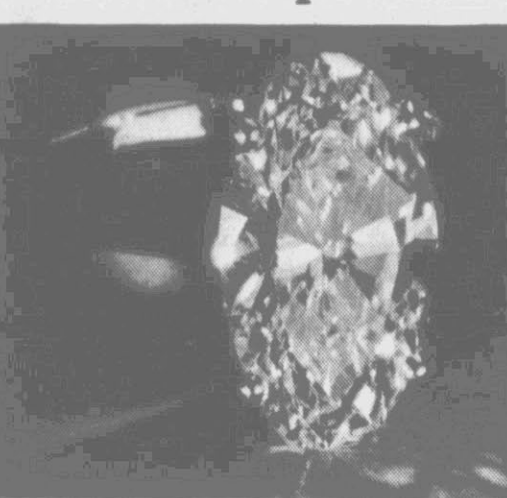

"The problem with teenagers is they may not have been immunized against the disease because there was no vaccine available to them when they were in their pre-school years," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market extended Wednesday's rally with another strong advance today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 7.93 to 936.43 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 2-1 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market got a lift from hopes that the long rise of interest rates since last summer might be nearing its peak.

Rates declined Wednesday on word that President-elect Reagan was preparing to move rapidly on economic policy decisions after he is inaugurated next month.

Several stocks sensitive to interest-rate expectations moved up in early trading today.

Southern California Edison led the active list, up 1/4 at 25 1/2 in trading that included a 100,000-share block at that price. Great Western Financial rose 3/4 to 18, and Citicorp added 1/4 to 23.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 10.41 to 928.50.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 50.80 million shares, against 41.63 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.26 to 76.13.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 5.77 to 340.81.

Bloodmobile Participation Is Urged

Mayor Don McGlohon has issued a proclamation encouraging participation by city and county residents in the special holiday Bloodmobile visit scheduled for Dec. 26 at the Moose Lodge.

Saying that the "need for blood during holiday seasons is critical," McGlohon noted that the Blood Committee of the Pitt Red Cross has adopted the theme, "An After Christmas Party—Give a Gift of Life."

He said the theme has "special meaning for the donor as well as the recipient."

According to McGlohon, "there is no more appropriate way of helping another human being than to make available a pint of whole blood when such is necessary to save a life."

He added that the blood drive is scheduled for 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on the 26th.

Pirates, Detroit Clash In Duke Tourney

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sport Editor

East Carolina University will begin a quest this weekend to do what no other Pirate team, since the school joined the NCAA, has ever done — win an invitational basketball tournament.

The Pirates will play the University of Detroit in the first round of the Iron Duke Classic in Durham on Friday, with a 9 p.m. tipoff scheduled.

Hosting Duke will play Brown University in the opening game at 7 p.m., and Duke officials have announced that plenty of tickets for the tournament still remain on sale.

The Pirates go into the tournament with a 3-2 record, having beaten Ohio University, Texas Wesleyan and Berry College. The Bucs were defeated by Maine and Penn State. In the latter game, the Pirates went almost five minutes into the second half before scoring, while Penn State pulled away from a four-point halftime lead to almost a 20-point advantage near the middle of the half. East Carolina then rallied to within nine before the end. Detroit, following last night's 81-60 victory over John Carroll, brings a 2-4 record into the tournament. They previously lost to Central Michigan, 85-70, beat Western Michigan, 85-82, then lost to Iowa, 98-55, Syracuse, 93-79, and Toledo, 87-68.

Duke is 3-3 while Brown is 0-3.

"Detroit has had some problems, but they've got some good things going for them, too," East Carolina coach Dave Odom said.

"They have two experienced starters back from last year in (6-6 junior) Jerry Davis and (6-9 junior) Joe Kopicki. Any coach in the country would like to have these two players. To stop Detroit, you have to begin with them."

But, Odom warns, that's not the whole story. "They have some talent that just lacks experience that could be ready to break loose at any minute. So we have to respect the rest of their players too."

Davis and Kopicki are the leading scorers, and the only ones in double figures for the Titans. Kopicki is hitting at an 18.2 clip, while Davis is scoring 17.4.

The other probable starters include 6-3 sophomore Roy Simms, 6-5 sophomore Albert Blakey (9.6 average), and 6-7 freshman Bob Biasutto.

"They've had problems but they've played some good teams too. Both of the Michigan teams are good ones, and Iowa is a Top Ten type team, while Syracuse is Top Twenty material. So they've played a tough schedule," Odom said.

Playing a game on Wednesday before the tournament could have several effects, Odom said. "A big win has to be a confidence builder. But it wouldn't help us to have to play on Wednesday, then travel all day Thursday and play again on Friday and Saturday. So, this may or may not help us."

"However, I do see it as an advantage to be playing them at Duke. We should have the local fans behind us."

The meeting between the two schools is the third. Two years ago, prior to Odom's coming to East Carolina, the Pirates fell, 81-69, in overtime. Last year, after leading all the way, the Pirates were defeated, 69-65.

While the loss to Penn State had to be classed as a heart-breaker, despite the final margin, Odom feels that it hasn't been dwelled on by the Bucs. "We could have won it, no doubt. But our players have taken a mature approach to it. They know they belong up with the national teams. I believe that Penn State will be a Top 20 team and be in the NCAA field by season's end."

"We've had our two best back-to-back days of practice since we started the regular season the first of this week, so I have to think that we are in a good frame of mind."

Odom said he might try something new at the tournament. What that will be lies in his half-time strategy. "You know, I've noticed that my teams have a tendency to start the second half slowly. Maybe I'm keeping them in the dressing room too long and they don't get loose before the half starts. We may check this out at Duke."

While the Pirates haven't won in an invitational tournament, Odom doesn't think this will put added pressure on the players. "We'll let them know this, but we know that how we do in these tournaments could have a bearing on what happens to us in post-season if we should put together a good record this year. I'm not saying that we're post-season material yet, but if we do end up with a good record, people may look back on this tournament and the next."

The Pirate scoring is led by Barry Wright at 13.0, while Michael Gibson is hitting 11.0 points a game. Tom Szymanski is the leading rebounder with a 9.6 average.

Following the Iron Duke Classic, the Pirates are off until December 29-30, when they travel to New Haven, Conn., for the Elm City Classic.

Vikings Win Seventh In Row

VANCEBORO — D.H. Conley rolled up its seventh straight wrestling victory last night, downing West Craven High School, 61-9.

West Craven managed only two victories during the evening, one on a pin. Of the 11 Viking wins, five came on pins, four on forfeits and one on a major decision.

"This was the second time that we've wrestled West Craven, and the guys in the upper weights, from 145 up, did a much better job this time," Coach Milt Sherman said. The victory boosted the Viking record to 7-0 on the year.

Conley still has five unbeaten wrestlers. They are Reginald Moore, William Green, Raymond Small, Alexander Crandall and Curtis Bridges.

The Vikings return to action tonight, hosting North Pitt in an Eastern Carolina Conference match.

Summary:

98: Reginald Moore (C) pinned Billy Flake, 21.

105: William Green (C) won by forfeit.

112: Shannon Carson (C) won by forfeit.

119: Greg Toler (C) pinned Swanner, 3:30.

126: Andy Majette (C) pinned Canada, 4:0.

132: Raymond Small (C) won by forfeit.

138: Alexander Crandall (C) pinned Gardner, 3:10.

145: Curtis Bridges (C) pinned Freeman, 3:30.

155: William Bridgett (C) decided Baker, 10-1.

167: Lewis (WC) decided Willie Greene, 8-6.

195: Stacy McCarter (C) decided Booker, 12-4.

HWT: McCoy (WC) pinned Paul Menichelli, 3:10.

Wolfpack Rolls By Appalachian; Georgia Tech Nips Presbyterian

By The Associated Press
North Carolina State celebrated Christmas early Wednesday night with a convincing victory over Appalachian State, but the good times may have come to an end as the buzzer closed the book on a 71-47 victory.

The Wolfpack, now 5-1, starts a five-game road trip which begins this Saturday against Atlantic Coast Conference foe and ninth-ranked Maryland. From College Park, N.C. State participates in the Holiday Festival in New York's Madison Square Garden, an old stomping ground for Wolfpack head coach Jim Valvano.

Trips to Clemson and Maryland end the demanding schedule before Georgia Tech, 64-61 winners over Presbyterian on Wednesday, travels to Reynolds Coliseum on Jan. 10, 1981.

Kenny Matthews scored 16 points to lead five Wolfpack players in double figures. Valvano was happy with his senior guard's performance, but the compliments stopped there.

"A coach looks smart when you pass it around three times and hit a 20-foot jumper," Valvano said. "But if you do the same thing and miss, you look stupid. Our inside people did not have an effective game tonight."

Although forward Thurl Bailey scored 11 points from his forward spot, starting center Craig Watts connected for just two points and backup Chuck Nevitt failed to scratch.

"It wasn't very pretty. We didn't play well but we got the job done," Valvano said. "I was pleased with the effort even though the results weren't always there."

Appalachian State coach Bobby Cremins said the loss to N.C. State was a new low for his Mountaineers, now 4-2.

"This is the worst we've played at State in the six years I've been at Appalachian and the worst we've played this year, period," Cremins said.

Playing before a crowd of 815 people, center Lee Goza hit two free throws with 2:43 remaining to break a 56-56 tie and lead the Yellow Jackets to their third win in five tries.

Goza finished the night with 15 points, while Greg Wilson, whose three additional free throws clinched the victory, added 13.

Donnie Perkins left his seat on the Blue Hose bench to score 20 points. Bill Coon added 11 for Presbyterian, now 3-7.

No ACC teams are in action tonight.

Doherty Lost After Accident

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A "freak accident" has cost eighth-ranked North Carolina the services of freshman forward Matt Doherty for about six weeks, according to Tar Heel coach Dean Smith.

The 6-foot-7 reserve from East Meadow, N.Y., broke his left thumb Monday night. Smith said Doherty apparently stumbled and fell against a chair in his dorm room.

Doherty underwent surgery Wednesday. Smith said his hand will be in a cast for about four weeks, and then he will require about two weeks of rehabilitation before he can play again.

"This is a great disappointment for us," Smith said. "Matt had made great progress for a freshman in the early season. In fact, he won our defensive player of the game award just last Saturday against South Florida. It's very disappointing for him, too."

Doherty was averaging six points and three assists a game for the Tar Heels. He also was averaging about 25 minutes of playing time a game. With Doherty out of action, Smith said guard Mike Pepper will probably play more, along with reserves Jimmy Braddock and Eric Kenny.

The Tar Heels next game is Saturday against 11th-ranked Indiana in Chapel Hill.

Let your special Santa know you have your heart set on a JVC turntable.

Darling, I left this on your pillow because it makes sound sense! JVC's LA-11 is a fabulous turntable that has built-in automatic return and a shut off feature I want. And I know you'll like the 4 pole synchronous motor and front operation reject button and cue control. Not too subtle a hint, I know. But darling, the price has a good sound, too.

Dearest, I left this on the kitchen table because I know you have an eye for a sound deal. You'll like the JVC LA-55 because of its semi-automatic direct drive. It also has up front cue and pitch control with a built-in strobe. I could also tell you that you'll like the wow/flutter being less than 0.015% (WRMS), or about how you'll like the high signal-to-noise ratio (more than 63 db). But instead, let me tell you this: you'll love the sound of the price.

UNC Preparing For Texas

By BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina football coach Dick Crum has never lost a bowl game. He's 3-0 going back to his days at Miami of Ohio.

He begins preparations today for his fourth bowl appearance. Following a break after the regular season, the 13th-ranked Tar Heels start their practice sessions today for a Bluebonnet Bowl encounter with unranked Texas on New Year's Eve in Houston's Astrodome.

"It's probably a quirk of fate that I've never lost a bowl game," Crum said Wednesday at a news conference. "But when you go to a bowl game, the players ought to go to enjoy themselves. I think some people lose because they go to a bowl and work their players to death. We practice early in the morning and get it out of the way so the players can enjoy themselves and not have to keep thinking about having to go to practice. We may only practice for a half hour, but it's an intense practice."

But while it may be a fun trip, "we take the game very seriously," Crum said. "We work very, very hard in practice."

North Carolina, 11-1, fell only once this season, a 41-7 loss to Oklahoma. But the Longhorns hit the skids at the end of the regular season, finishing 7-4 and taking some of the edge off the post-season meeting.

But Crum knows the Longhorns are not to be overlooked or taken lightly.

"I've looked at Texas enough on film to know they have a good football team," he said. "They had some injuries that hurt them. But they've had time to heal."

It will be "tough to get ready" for the Longhorns, Crum said, because the Tar Heels have not had to face a team like Texas this year. Texas plays a split-back veer offense, and "that's not like any specific team we've played all year. It's tough to draw any conclusions about them."

North Carolina did most of its damage this year on the ground, thanks to two 1,000-yard performers — tailbacks Amos Lawrence and Kelvin Bryant. The Tar Heels went to the air for variety and relied on its defense to save the day. But Crum said there might be a few surprises in store for Texas.

"You're always going to add a new wrinkle or two, but we'll stay with our base offense, and defense," said Crum.

And Texas may have a surprise for the Tar Heels, but Crum said his team will be ready.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see the wishbone," he said. "They're an old wishbone team, and we'll do some preparation for that."

But All-America linebacker Lawrence Taylor, the man who led the Tar Heels highly touted defense this year, said prospects of the wishbone don't bother him.

"I wouldn't mind," Taylor said of the possibility. "The wishbone is a pretty complicated offense. It's a high-risk offense, and you can't throw it together in two weeks and not expect a lot of fumbles."

Crum is a bit more concerned, considering that's the offense, led by quarterback J.C. Watts, that did the Tar Heels in against Oklahoma. But he's not overly concerned about it, though.

White Sox Hope For Quick Sale

CHICAGO (AP) — After six months, the Chicago White Sox might as well be a team without an owner, a ship in search of a harbor.

Smarting from the rejection by other American League club owners of Edward J. DeBartolo Sr.'s bid to buy the club, the cash-poor franchise's board of directors voted unanimously Wednesday to open negotiations with a purchase group headed by Chicago-area real estate developer Jerry Reinsdorf.

Andrew McKenna, acting chairman of the Sox' 12-member board, said he and two other directors who have screened offers for the club since summer hope to begin talks with Reinsdorf in the next few days.

McKenna said "we anticipate the negotiations will not take too long, perhaps two to three weeks."

If the McKenna subcommittee reaches an agreement with Reinsdorf, the deal would be subject to approval of the full board of directors, the team's stockholders and AL owners before taking effect.

The directors voted twice unanimously to sell the team to DeBartolo, a Youngstown, Ohio, shopping center magnate, for $20 million, but other clubs' owners barred the sale.

Objections to DeBartolo reportedly centered on the fact that he is not a Chicago resident and owns three race-tracks.

The 30-member group headed by Reinsdorf is made up entirely of local investors. McKenna would not say how much the Reinsdorf group has offered but said it is "very close" to the $20 million offered by DeBartolo.

The Reinsdorf group had entered the bidding for the team last summer but the directors favored DeBartolo, whose net worth reportedly totals $500 million, because they believed he would have had greater "staying power" in operating the franchise, McKenna said.

Valkyries Have Been Own Worst Enemy So Far

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's girls' basketball team has won five of their first seven games this season, but had it not been for a bad quarter in their two losses the Valkyries might be unbeaten.

The Valkyries will need to have four good quarters Friday night when they play host to Southwest Edgcombe, perhaps Conley's toughest test this season. The Cougars easily won the Eastern Carolina Conference last season and have been picked to be among the leaders again this year.

"I hope we can be in the top three this year," D.H. Conley's first-year coach Joy James said. "I'd say C.B. Aycock and Southwest will be up there, too."

"I'm looking forward to playing Southwest Friday." She is also hoping the Valkyries will give her four quarters of basketball. Against North Lenoir earlier this season, Conley did not score a point in the third quarter and wound up losing by eight.

In their next game, the Valkyries lost to Southern Nash after failing to hold a 13-point lead in the second half.

"We've had that one bad quarter and that's hurt us," James said following Tuesday's 36-33 win over North Pitt, a win that came despite the Valkyries scoring only two points in the second period. "We're taking the shots, they're just not falling."

Conley returns four starters off last year's club. Back are guards Darlene Cannon (5-4, sophomore) and Tammy Streeter (5-0, senior) and forwards Brenda Green (5-7, senior) and Cheryl Tyson (5-6, senior). The newcomer this season is center Jackie Hensley, a senior who is leading Conley in scoring with just over a 10-point average.

Top reserves this season include center Karen Barrett (5-9, freshman), forwards Helena Barnhill (5-6, junior) and Mechio Kornegay (5-6, freshman) and guard Cheryl Thompson (5-3, sophomore).

Others on the team are guards Irish Barnhill (5-4, sophomore), Cynthia Barnes (5-2, senior) and Pam Daniels (5-1, freshman).

The biggest change this season for the Valkyries is their coach. Gone is Norma Respass. In her place is James, a graduate of North Pitt and who was an assistant basketball coach at Dunn last year.

"Basically, they've done what I've asked," James said. "They're a very coachable team. I've changed some things, but they've responded well."

Marquette Rally Knocks Off Minnesota

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

It was almost like opening night jitters for Coach Hank Raymonds and his Marquette basketball team.

He had his unranked and inexperienced Warriors on the road for the first time this season, facing a highly touted Minnesota team, and the butterflies were as big as basketballs.

"I'm elated, boy, I'll tell you," Raymonds said after his Warriors rallied to beat the Gophers 92-84 at Minneapolis. "I was scared coming up here, the first time on the road with an untested team."

Trailing 65-55 with 12 minutes left in the game, Marquette finally got untracked. Guards Art Green and Mike Wilson led a nine-point surge that cut Minnesota's lead to one, and freshman Glenn Rivers, the third guard in Raymonds' fastbreak offense, hit two free throws to give the Warriors their first lead.

"They just outkicked us," Gophers Coach Jim Dutcher said. "When we had to have patience, we didn't have it. You don't give up 92 points. How are you going to win giving up 92?"

Oliver "Big O" Lee was the top scorer for Marquette, hitting a career-high 30 points. Minnesota's 7-foot-1 center, Randy Breuer, scored 21 despite foul trouble that forced Dutcher to keep him on the bench part of the second half.

The victory left Marquette with a 3-1 record, the Warriors' only loss coming to 17th-ranked Illinois last Saturday. Minnesota, meanwhile, lost for the first time in four games.

"In the middle of January, this will all be forgotten," Dutcher said. "But did we learn anything from it? That's the key."

None of college basketball's ranked teams saw action Wednesday night, but one tournament, the Nevada Wolfpack Classic at Reno got underway. Nevada-Reno and Portland University will play in tonight's championship.

Nevada-Reno got 20 points from center Greg Palm and coasted by Arkansas State 79-61 in the first game. In the late game, Portland outclassed McNeese 84-61 as Jose Singleton led the way with 19 points.

In other college action Wednesday night, Kenny Matthews scored 16 points to lead

North Carolina State past Appalachian State, 71-47. Sophomore Frank Poindexter's four free throws in the final 16 seconds gave Auburn a 79-74 victory over Florida State.

Doc Holden scored 15 points and led five starters in double figures as Cincinnati downed previously undefeated Bradley 76-64. Forward Jeff Malone, with 21 points, paced Mississippi State to an 87-62 victory over Tennessee-Martin.

Joe Faine scored the winning basket with 50 seconds to play and wound up with 26 points in Bowling Green's 79-76 victory over Mississippi. Alvin Brooks hit two free throws with 12 seconds left to give Lamar an 80-79 victory over Oklahoma.

Brigham Young Out To End Lack Of Bowl Victories In Holiday

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Four straight bowl losses have not set well with Lavell Edwards, Brigham Young's winningest football coach.

Since 1976, his Cougars have won everything in sight — 49 of 56 regular-season games and four straight Western Athletic Conference titles.

Everything but a bowl game. "I don't want it on my epitaph that I couldn't win a bowl game," Edwards said Wednesday as his 12th-ranked Cougars, 11-1, readied for Friday night's Holiday Bowl collision with Southwest Conference co-runnerup Southern Methodist, 8-3.

It's the third straight Holiday Bowl appearance for the Cougars, who hope to gain some tarnished dignity.

WAC teams have lost six of their last seven bowl appearances, including consecutive Holiday Bowl setbacks suffered by BYU. Since 1937, the WAC is 19-18-1 in bowl appearances.

For some reason, "our passing has never been as sharp in a bowl game," said Edwards, who has a 74-30 record at the Utah school.

Because of a switch by oddsmakers, Southern Methodist is now favored by one point. Until Wednesday, BYU was a 1½-point favorite.

Mustang coach Ron Meyer said Brigham Young's bowl experience "is a big concern for us."

"They've been here three years now," he said. "I'm worried about our giddishness. I'm worried about expending too much adrenalin on a Tuesday practice field."

Two years ago, in the Holiday Bowl inaugural, the favored Cougars lost to Navy 23-16. Last year, as 6½-point favorites, they dropped a 38-37 decision to Indiana, the Big Ten's fourth-place finisher.

Brigham Young enters the game as the nation's offensive leader for the second straight year, averaging almost 50 points, per game over the last five outings.

Beating Southern Methodist won't come easily, Edwards said.

He gives Southern Methodist an edge from the standpoint of a tougher schedule, rating the Southwest Conference as the nation's premier college league.

"From top to bottom it's the most balanced league. The balance of power has shifted to the Southwest Conference from the Big Eight Conference," he said.

Rams Dominate NFC's Pro Bowl Picks

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles dominates the National Conference Pro Bowl team announced today, but Steve Bartkowski, who helped Atlanta break the Rams' hold on first place in the NFC West, is the starting quarterback.

The Rams, who had won seven consecutive division titles before settling for a wild-card playoff berth behind the Falcons this year, put eight players on the 40-man unit (20 on offense; 17 on defense; 3 specialists) which will face the American Conference Feb. 1 in the National Football League's all-star game at Honolulu's Aloha Stadium.

Los Angeles' starters are guard Kent Hill, center Rich Saul, cornerback Pat Thomas and safety Nolan Cromwell. The Rams' reserves on the team are guard Dennis Harrah, defensive tackle Larry Brooks, middle linebacker Jack Reynolds and cornerback Rod Perry.

Dallas and Philadelphia, battling this Sunday for the East Division title (both already have clinched NFC wild card berths), placed four players apiece on the Pro Bowl team. The Eagles' starters are wide receiver Harold Carmichael, defensive tackle Charlie Johnson and safety Randy Logan; the Cowboys' starters are guard Herbert Scott, defensive tackle Randy

White and middle linebacker Bob Breunig. Bartkowski and reserve quarterback Ron Jaworski of Philadelphia rank second and third in NFC passing, behind Vince Ferragamo of Los Angeles, but were selected ahead of him by the conference's 14 head coaches and NFC members of the NFL Players Association.

The running backs are Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears and Otis Anderson of the St. Louis Cardinals. Payton, with 1,330 yards, leads the NFC in rushing (second in the league behind Houston's Earl Campbell) and is seeking his fifth consecutive conference rushing title. Anderson has 1,230 yards and is third in the conference, 19 yards behind rookie Billy Sims of Detroit. Sims and Atlanta's William Andrews are the reserve runners.

The AFC team was announced Wednesday.

U.S. Plans Resume Economic Aid To El Salvador

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is resuming economic aid to El Salvador after the appointment of a civilian president for that Central American nation and promises by Salvadoran authorities of a thorough investigation of the deaths of four American missionaries.

But the Carter administration will continue withholding military aid pending further developments.

On Dec. 5, the United States suspended all forms of assistance to El Salvador after reports that Salvadoran security officers may have been involved in the murder of the missionaries, who included three American nuns.

Meanwhile, authorities in San Salvador said a U.S. civilian adviser to El Salvador's national police force was shot and killed Wednesday by a wounded "subversive" in a poor neighborhood. The slain man was identified as Thomas Bracken of Las Vegas, Nev. It was not known what happened to his killer.

Press reports said Bracken was investigating Tuesday's kidnapping of the president of the National Coffee Institute, Rene Alejandro Machon Rivera, in a northern suburb.

Also Wednesday, a bomb exploded in the Bank of America office in San Salvador. The explosion caused serious damage but no injuries. It was not known whether the explosion and the shooting death were related.

In Washington, a written State Department statement Wednesday said resumption of the $20 million U.S. economic aid program was critically needed to maintain the Salvadoran economy and to avert food shortages.

The statement linked the aid resumption to the appointment of Christian Democratic leader Jose Napoleon Duarte as president last Saturday and Salvadoran promises of a "thorough, professional and expeditious investigation" of the deaths of the four women. FBI agents are lending technical assistance to El Salvador in the investigation.

A U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said an unstated reason for resuming aid was that El Salvador is broke and the government would have collapsed in a month without American help. He said the policy shift was personally approved by President Carter.

The official statement said a restoration of the $5 million military aid program would be contingent on progress in the murder investigation and on the new government's success in curbing political violence, which has claimed more than 8,500 lives this year.

According to the U.S. official, the impact of the decision not to resume military aid is diminished by the fact that the Carter administration has only five weeks left in office.

He predicted that the incoming Reagan administration will move quickly to restore military aid if Carter does not do so by Jan. 20.

El Salvador has been on the brink of civil war for some time with the country's conservative military establishment arrayed against a powerful leftist guerrilla movement armed, in part, by Libya and other radical Arab states.

Of particular concern to the Carter administration have been persistent reports of indiscriminate killings by Salvadoran security forces.

The deaths of the four American missionaries touched off a "flood of mail" to the State Department by religious and human rights groups demanding an end to U.S. military aid, one official said.

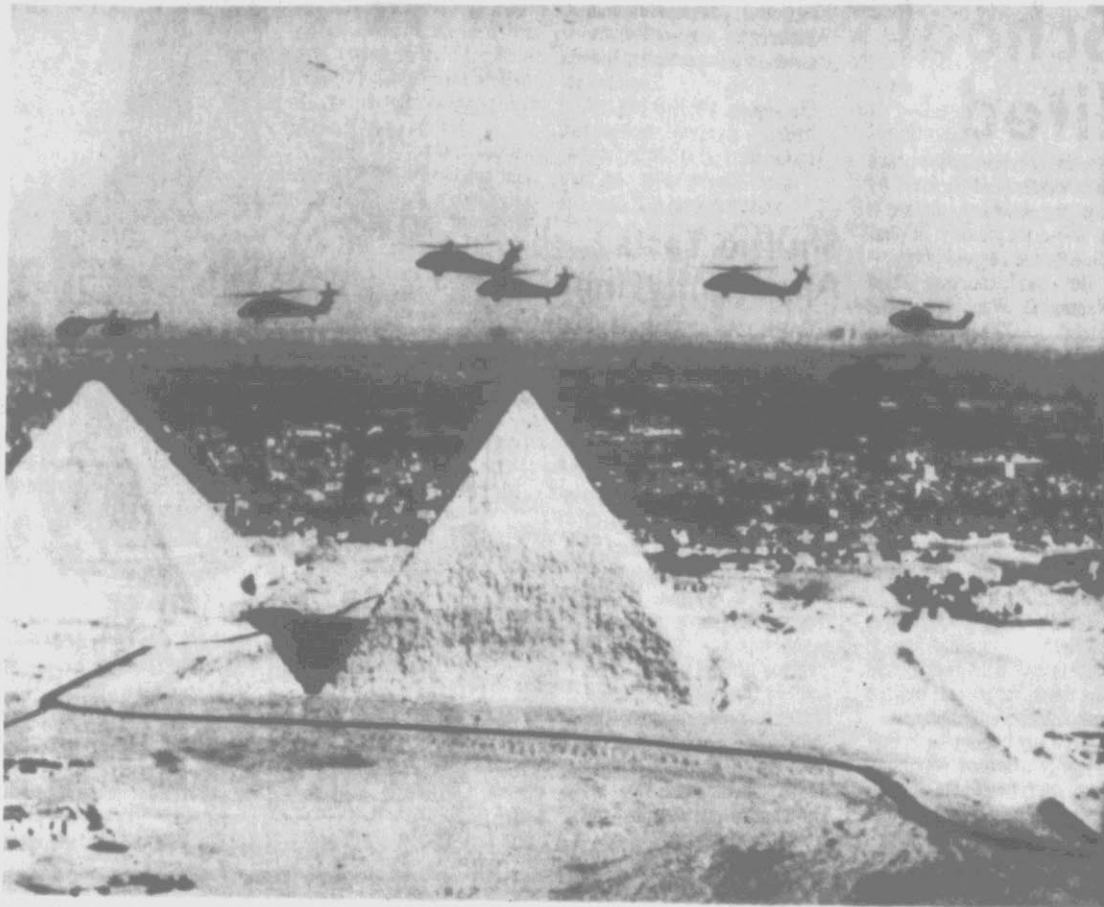

The official conceded that the administration's suspension of military aid was partially influenced by these protests.

But, he said, it would be a mistake for the United States to disassociate itself completely from El Salvador.

"If we allow the present government to collapse, what baby with the bath water would take its place? We would be throwing out the baby with the bath water. You can't have a policy based on revenge."

Kelly Abscam Case Nears End

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecution has virtually completed its Abscam case against Rep. Richard Kelly after the testimony of a convicted swindler about how the Florida Republican was led to pocket $25,000 in cash from an FBI undercover agent.

In a major surprise, U.S. attorneys decided late Wednesday to present no more witnesses after the federal jury heard from Melvin Weinberg, a paid FBI informant who openly admitted that he had been a con man "for the last 25 or 30 years," about his role in drawing Kelly and two co-defendants, both alleged middlemen, into the bribery probe.

The government, relying heavily on both video and audio recordings, earlier presented only one other major witness, undercover agent Anthony Amoroso. Several other agents had been expected to testify, as well as William Rosenberg, a third purported middleman who pleaded guilty earlier in the case and who had agreed to appear for the prosecution.

Though some procedural matters remained for the government to conclude today, the defense appeared caught off guard when Judge William Bryant was notified the prosecution would call no more witnesses.

The defense likely will be called upon to open its case today, despite the complaint by Kelly's attorney, Michael Battaglia, that he barely had time to bring in his own witnesses. "Of my first five," he told Bryant, "all are from out of town except one."

That remark prompted speculation that Kelly himself might take the stand in his own behalf, perhaps late today. Neither man would say, but Battaglia and Kelly huddled in long discussion outside the courtroom late Wednesday.

While Weinberg was on the stand, the jury heard an audio recording in which co-defendant Eugene Robert Ciuzio balked at the idea of a direct payment to Kelly, but later agreed it could be done

"one-on-one ... because there's no corroboration."

The telephone discussion occurred between Weinberg, who recorded the call, and Ciuzio on Dec. 21, 1979, days before Kelly stuffed $25,000 into his pockets as it was handed him by a man who claimed to represent wealthy Arabs seeking special immigration legislation.

Weinberg and Ciuzio, a Lakewood, Fla., businessman, agreed that the congressman would appear in a Washington townhouse on Jan. 8, and, in Weinberg's words, "the guy will walk away with 25 big ones ... and he'll be told there's 75 more in for him."

But Weinberg insisted that the lawmaker meet with "Tony," the supposed operative for the Arabs, and take the money directly.

In the Dec. 21 discussion, Ciuzio told Weinberg that one of the other middlemen, co-defendant Stanley Weisz, "doesn't go along with Tony at all meeting the congressman that way, ah, in the sense to, be that, ah, let's say open, to hand the guy money."

"That's the only way we'll do it," Weinberg shot back loudly. He went on to declare that he and the Arab interests wanted to make sure "he don't turn around and say I never got no money."

Finally Ciuzio said, "Okay ... if Tony wants to go inside one-on-one, I don't really care. It's fine, because there's no corroboration."

Kelly was the man he would bring into the deal.

The defense had indicated it planned to cross-examine Weinberg for days, but it cut that questioning off after several hours in which his memory and life of crime were attacked repeatedly.

Attorneys for all three co-defendants have argued all along that the FBI's employment of Weinberg reflected excessive zeal in its effort to rope public officials and others into criminal acts. Moreover, Kelly himself has claimed he got involved only because he was conducting his own investigation of the bribery perpetrators.

Nursing School Is Accredited

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina A&T University's nursing school has won national accreditation although it remains under a state mandate to improve or close up.

Univerity officials were notified this week that the National League for Nursing has approved the school, but the notification included a warning that some areas need improvement.

Such a warning usually means another survey of the school will be made in two or three years. Accreditation by the league helps a school qualify for federal funds.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors issued an order in 1977 directing the A&T, North Carolina Central and Winston-Salem State schools of nursing to improve or close their doors.

Under that order, two-thirds of each school's graduates must pass the state licensure exam on the first try next year. By 1983, three-fourths of the graduates must pass.

In July, six of 31 A&T graduates — 19 percent — passed the exam on the first time. North Carolina Central graduates passed at the rate of 18 percent and Winston-Salem State graduates at 39 percent.

However, North Carolina A&T holds only conditional accreditation from the North Carolina Board of Nursing.

Shuttle Tests Apparently Fine

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An astronaut rehearsal of an aborted mission aboard the space shuttle Columbia appears to have gone well, space officials say.

After a simulated takeoff Wednesday at Kennedy Space Center, the backup team of astronauts practiced aborting a mission. It was the second in a series of rehearsals.

Space officials say the results of the tests will probably determine whether the shuttle can be rolled out of the Vehicle Assembly Building as scheduled on Dec. 29. The shuttle is scheduled for launch on March 14.

Monroe Paper On Cable TV

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — The Monroe Enquirer-Journal has become the first newspaper in North Carolina or South Carolina to broadcast local news, community information and advertising on cable television.

John B. Ashcraft Jr., general manager of The Enquirer Publishing Co., said the company is leasing two channels on the Monroe cable network to "extend communication capacity" for the newspaper, which publishes Monday through Friday and has a circulation of more than 12,000.

Ashcraft said cable Channel 7 will be used to broadcast news, including local items produced by the newspaper's staff and dispatches from The Associated Press with music on the audio portion of the channel.

He said Channel 11, which is still in the planning stages, is expected to be used for a community bulletin board featuring notices of news and events and classified advertisements.

It also will carry weather information.

Both channels are expected to be in full operation by Jan. 1, Ashcraft said. He said his brother, Mark, will direct the new channels.

Ashcraft said the broadcasts "serve as an adjunct to newspapers. They're an additional service, but they're not a complete news medium. There's no way for the public to gather particulars through the broadcasts."

Louisiana Judge Okays Public School Prayers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Proponents of prayer in the public schools are elated over a federal court victory involving a new state law, but praying can't begin just yet.

U.S. District Judge Adrain Duplantier ruled Wednesday that it was legal for Jefferson Parish schools to hold one-minute prayer sessions under a law passed by the Legislature this year. However, he delayed enforcement of his decision until the American Civil Liberties Union could appeal.

The ACLU contended the law violated the constitutionally mandated separation of church and state. But Duplantier disagreed.

"The Constitution guarantees freedom of religion and that should not be construed to be freedom from religion," he said.

A spokesman for the state attorney general's office said the judge told him the ruling applied only to the Jefferson Parish prayer program. Duplantier was not available for comment immediately.

Lawyers for the ACLU said Duplantier's decision would be taken to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"We were sort of surprised," said ACLU lawyer Carol Shauffer.

Terry Verigan, the leading proponent of school prayer on the Jefferson Parish School Board, said he was sure the law would stand up to further legal tests.

"With this first hurdle overcome, I feel very strongly that we'll be able to carry it all the way, even to the U.S. Supreme Court," he said.

"I was just delighted with the ruling," Verigan said. "Our own attorney said he was surprised, but I think the strength of our argument was there."

Verigan said the people of Jefferson Parish want prayer in the public schools, and he said it will make students into better citizens.

"We're turning out young people who just don't care about others," he said. "This prayer process is an attempt to fill that gap."

"The function of the public schools is to make the people able to self-govern. One of the problems I've seen is that we continue to turn out young people who are literate but do not have the values that make them willing to self-govern."

Jefferson Parish, a major New Orleans suburb, was the first in the state to take advantage of the new law and was to begin its prayer program Thursday.

Earthquake In Pacific Ocean

SEATTLE (AP) — An earthquake centered in the Pacific Ocean 250 miles west of Vancouver, British Columbia, registered 6.7 on the Richter Scale, but apparently caused no damage, authorities said.

The earthquake was recorded at 8:22 a.m. PST Wednesday, according to Russell Needham, a geophysicist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Boulder, Colo. The International Tsunami Information Center in Honolulu said there were no reports of unusual waves or tides caused by the quake.

In a populated area, an earthquake registering 6 on the open-ended Richter scale can cause severe damage.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Thursday, December 18, 1980 — 37

for classroom prayer were approved at a public meeting of the school board on Dec. 3.

Principals may decree that classes begin each morning with one minute of prayer and one minute of silent meditation. Those who pray would stand by their desk to do it. Other children would remain seated or be excused from the classroom.

Silent meditation, also limited to a minute, would be next — apparently with no one excused. The suit did not object to meditation.

The ACLU contended

many children "will be required either to participate in a religious exercise that is offensive to them or to subject themselves to possible social ostracism, ridicule, and embarrassment by publicly excusing themselves from school."

Garwood's Psychiatrist Reports Psychic Trauma

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood suffered an "absolute psychic trauma" because of physical injuries, torture and deprivation in Vietnamese prison camps that still leads to suicidal tendencies, a psychiatrist says.

Dr. Emmanuel Tanay, who was a POW in Germany during World War II, was the first witness called by the defense Wednesday in Garwood's court-martial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam. Tanay was scheduled to undergo cross-examination today.

Tanay said his examination of Garwood and a review of records relating to his case convinced him that the 34-year-old Marine "suffered an absolute psychic trauma — the kind of experience no human being, no matter how resistant or strong, could survive without suffering traumatic neurosis."

He said that, because of the illness, Garwood was unable to appreciate the "criminality of his conduct" in Vietnam and regressed to a childlike state governed by the needs of survival. "Because of the illness and regression, he could not make choices" and, instead, adopted the lifestyle of his captors to survive, Tanay said.

Tanay explained: "He had complied and identified completely with his captors because he had regressed and it was a protective device he adopted."

Tanay said Garwood appeared to be in a "state of seige" during an interview a few weeks ago and displayed suicidal tendencies due to the pressure of the court-martial.

"He felt killing himself wouldn't mean death, but meant he would be at peace," Tanay said.

Tanay holds psychiatric licenses in Michigan, Ohio and Florida. He was the first of several medical experts expected to be called by the defense to support a contention that Garwood should not be held criminally liable for his conduct in a series of Viet Cong POW camps.

Garwood, a native of Indiana, disappeared in 1965 while serving as a 19-year-old jeep driver near Da Nang. He returned to the United States in 1979 after passing a note to a Finnish traveler in a Hanoi restaurant, asking that U.S. authorities be notified of his presence.

The government contends Garwood deserted and remained with the Vietnamese voluntarily. If convicted, Garwood could be sentenced to life in prison.

Tanay, for the first time in the court-martial, gave details of Garwood's version of his capture in 1965.

Tanay said Garwood told him he was sent to pick up a reconnaissance officer near Marble Mountain but that Garwood could not find the officer.

Eventually, Garwood drove on to a beach and was surrounded by enemy soldiers before he knew what was happening, Tanay said. Garwood told the psychiatrist he was shot in the right forearm as he dived under his jeep.

Garwood told Tanay he prayed under the jeep that the North Vietnamese would not torture him to death. Garwood was dragged from under the jeep, tied up and forced to walk over a period of several weeks before coming to the first prisoner of war camp, Tanay quoted Garwood as saying.

Tanay told the five-officer jury he believed Garwood was telling the truth about his capture.

The psychiatrist said Garwood told him that, after being captured, he was separated from other Americans until he met another POW, Capt. W.S. Eisenbraun, an Army Special Forces officer.

Garwood pictured Eisenbraun as a special hero, a leader, a father figure, Tanay said, and rekindled Garwood's will to adapt and survive.

When Eisenbraun eventually died in captivity, it was extremely significant to Garwood, Tanay said.

Searcher Of Early Americana May Have Big Find

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
MICCO, Fla. (AP) — Amateur archaeologist Homer Cato believes he's come across an important find: the remains of what may be the first European-Indian settlement in the New World.

He says that close by, in a sub-tropical hammock just off U.S. Highway 1, European survivors of offshore shipwrecks lived with a normally hostile Indian tribe, married and bred children years before the Spaniards established St. Augustine, America's oldest city, in 1565.

But unless money can be raised at the eleventh hour to continue professional digging, the site near the Indian River in central Florida's Brevard County may be turned into a more contemporary nomadic village: an asphalt park for recreational vehicles.

Owners of the land containing a sprawling Ayz Indian village and burial mound — which may date back to 1200 A.D. — plan to bulldoze and excavate the site for commercial purposes.

The Ayz (pronounced "eyes") lived on the site which has yielded skeletons, pottery, jewelry, early Indian and Spanish artifacts and — most unusual of all — crucifixion symbols hinting at Christian interment.

"I didn't discover this site," says Cato, a Micco land developer with a life-long obsession for the past and its people. "All I did was to interpret it."

He says he located the burial mound in 1966 on an outdated 19th century topographical map drawn by the U.S. Geodetic Survey. Obscure anthropological publications previously had referred to a possible village site in the area, but the presence of the mound and the European connection had been missed.

Though an amateur, Cato is an experienced, hard-working archaeologist who has spent years researching Spanish archives and historical accounts of Indians in Florida.

The presence of European artifacts in the burial mound was an indication to Cato that the Ayz, who practiced ceremonial headhunting, also became the first treasure salvors in the New World. They recovered silver coins, semi-precious gems, medallions and other artifacts from wayward European galleons shipwrecked on the Atlantic beaches near their village.

But when Cato discovered a 12-foot-wide, 16-foot-long cross of conch shells across a segment of the mound, the site took on far greater implications.

His research in the Seville archives and old Spanish books turned up an account by Frechman Rene Laudoniere, whose party rescued two Europeans from an Ayz tribe in 1564 — a year before the founding of St. Augustine.

When the men were found, they were unclothed and had long hair and beards, indicating they had been with the tribe for some time.

The connotation was obvious, Cato believes: the normally fierce Ayz would sometimes collect shipwreck survivors as well as their treasures, and take them into their lives. When they died, they were accorded a "Christian" burial with a cross.

Cato says this and findings of pottery and other artifacts made in Europe seemed to add up to one conclusion: this was the village mentioned in old Spanish records in which shipwrecked Europeans and Indians had lived, and died, together.

Earlier this year, Cato convinced the owners of the land to make an archaeological survey of the site. They brought in Cultural Resource Management, a private archaeological firm.

Archaeologist Dave Swindell, who works for the firm, doesn't support or discount Cato's theory. It will take months to properly analyze what they are now uncovering, he says. But he also says he believes that this six-acre site contains the most important Indian village and mound material yet found along the entire Atlantic Coast of Florida.

Archaeologist Calvin Jones of Florida's Department of History and Archives describes the area as a "top-grade site that can tell us much about a region. It's of National (Historic) Registry quality."

Cato and the other researchers now are faced with a dilemma.

The painstaking professional work that began in early September is about to be halted because the $5,000 fee paid by the landowners has run out.

"We've been working seven days a week, until sundown every day that we've been here, and we're really just started," Swindell says. "It would take about six months to properly evaluate this area."

Dispute 'Bulge' On A Faultline

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Earthquake researchers, after a year of examining survey data, still are disputing the existence of the Palmdale Bulge, a groundswell said to spread over thousands of square miles along the San Andreas Fault.

Some say the phenomenon is indeed an uplift that could be an earthquake indicator, while others say it's a phantom created by surveying mistakes.

David D. Jackson, a geophysicist at the University of California at Los Angeles, said Friday that he still stands by his earlier conclusion: the Palmdale Bulge seems to be nothing more than a surveying error.

But other scientists at a meeting in San Francisco of the American Geophysical Union challenged him.

Barry Raleigh, an earthquake prediction coordinator for the U.S. Geological Survey, said that while some survey errors were made, they weren't nearly big enough to discount the bulge.

"I don't think anybody who has really looked very closely at the data would argue with that — with the exception of Jackson," he said.

Evidence for the confusing and intensely studied bulge was discovered in old survey records several years ago by USGS scientists. It was described as a huge bubble spread over thousands of square miles straddling the San Andreas Fault. Invisible except in survey figures, the maximum uplift was about 14 inches.

Named for the desert town it surrounds, the Palmdale Bulge initially was thought to somehow signal a giant earthquake in the making. That now seems less likely, but scientists say they still have no good explanation for the uplift.

And even if it doesn't directly signal a quake, scientists trying to explain geologic activity in earthquake-prone Southern California must decide whether to take the mysterious bulge into account or ignore it as a statistical phantom.

The debate seems unlikely to go away anytime soon.

Jackson opened the dispute at last year's union meeting by announcing his "discovery that the Palmdale uplift did not occur."

Asked this week whether he felt his was a minority view, Jackson said, "No, I don't think so. But last year at this time, I was certainly in a minority."

"I don't think there's ever going to be complete agreement," Jackson said.

Victory In Chad Fans Ambitions Of Libyan Chief

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — The triumph of Libyan-backed forces in Chad's civil war has boosted the long-frustrated African ambitions of Moslem radical Col. Moammar Khadafy, and raised concern among African moderates of a new campaign by Libyan forces against the pro-Western regimes in Africa.

French military analysts said the Chad victory gave Khadafy a new base in the heart of Africa for infiltrating, subverting and destabilizing moderate African countries.

The French newspaper Le Monde called it a grave defeat for France's African policies and said it brought Khadafy's dream of an anti-Western Islamic Federation under Libyan control an important step closer to reality.

In Washington, State Department spokesman John H. Trattner said Wednesday the United States was "pleased to the extent that the fighting has stopped." But he expressed grave concern about the Libyan intervention, calling it "very displeasing and dispiriting from our point of view." U.S. officials said the Libyans showed no signs of leaving.

The latest nine-month-old rebellion led by Chad's former Defense Minister, Hissene Habre, collapsed with unexpected suddenness when interim President Goukouni Oueddei's government forces — backed by Libyan armor, heavy artillery, mechanized infantry and MIG-23 jet fighters — mounted a new offensive against Habre's guerrillas.

The battered survivors of Habre's forces hurriedly pulled out of N'Djamena on Monday and headed for the main rebel base at Abeche, 400 miles to the east, which was itself reported surrounded by Oueddei's troops and his Libyan allies.

French officials said the civil war virtually came to a halt following Habre's defeat.

The war was an offshoot of the rivalry between the impoverished Central African nation's Sudanese Moslem population in the north and the Christians and blacks who follow tribal religions in the south. The Moslems have been fighting for years to end domination by the Christian and tribal southerners. Oueddei and Habre, both Moslems, gained control in 1978, but Habre and his supporters tried to take over in a coup in early 1979 and continued the fight until the Libyans stepped in.

It was the first-ever victory for Libya's 40,000-strong Soviet-equipped armed forces which have tried to intervene in Egypt, Sudan, Chad, Niger, Uganda, Tunisia, Malta, the Central African Republic and the Western Sahara since Khadafy seized power in Libya 11 years ago.

Wherever Khadafy's army went into action in the past, notably in Egypt, Uganda and the Central African Republic, it suffered ignominious defeat.

Khadafy's efforts to merge his oil-rich but sparsely populated desert nation with neighboring African countries such as Egypt, Tunisia and Algeria also ended in failure. But last September, the Libyan leader persuaded Syria, which has no common border with Libya, to join in a merger.

Khadafy recently called on all the countries in the 5-million-square-mile Sahara region, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Red Sea, to unite and drive out "imperialist and neocolonialist influences."

Many of the countries in that region — including Senegal, Mali, Niger and Chad — are former French colonies which maintain close ties with Paris.

The French analysts said Khadafy committed a total of 5,000 men — one-eighth his entire armed forces — to the victorious battle for the Chad capital, N'Djamena. Other Libyan forces are deployed in the northern part of the country, including the mineral rich 100,000-square-mile Aouzou strip of Chad territory which Libya has annexed outright with Oueddei's blessing.

Oueddei said he accepted Libyan aid because only Khadafy was willing to support him actively against Habre. French experts say they believe Khadafy "imposed" his help on Goukouni.

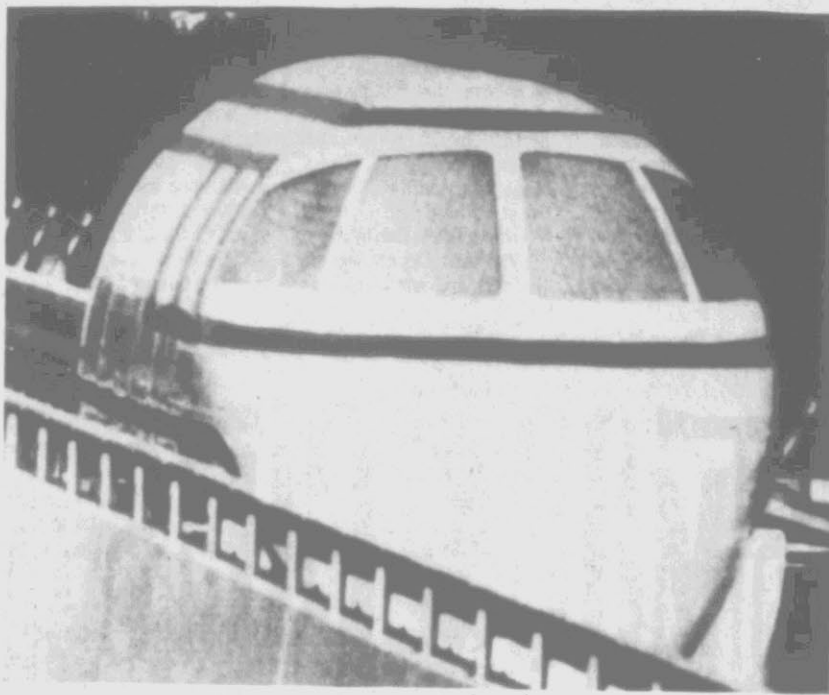

Last week, with Habre on the verge of defeat, the French government of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing told its African friends French paratroopers were ready to fly into Chad to help end the civil war and ease out the Libyans — if the Africans requested it. Sources said the offer tempted many moderate African governments, but it came too late.

Habre, who was backed by Egypt and other pro-Western African governments, fled to the neighboring West African nation of Cameroon, where he belatedly signed a ceasefire agreement drafted last October by the Organization of African Unity.

Nigeria's civilian government — one of the moderate African regimes deeply concerned over Libyan infiltration south of the Sahara — convened a "peace conference" of the rival Chad factions in the Nigerian capital, Lagos, for Dec. 23. But French officials said it was difficult to see what Oueddei and his Libyan allies might offer following the collapse of Habre's rebellion.

Lack Of U.S. Subsidy Strapping Many Exporters

By MARIANNA OHE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — American businessmen trying to tap the potentially vast China market are strapped by Washington's reluctance to subsidize U.S. exports.

The government's principle of non-subsidy means the United States trails Japan and Europe in financing trade with China at competitive rates.

This handicap could cut the volume of U.S.-China trade in situations where all factors except financing are equal between the United States and another nation competing to sell to the People's Republic.

"Why should we use credit at a rate higher than that provided by other countries?" Chung Xueyao, representative of the Bank of China in the United States, told United Press International.

"Japan, Great Britain and West Germany all have much lower rates than the 8.75 percent charged by the U.S. Eximbank," Chung said. "Their Eximbank rates are below 7 percent."

China pays cash for more than 90 percent of the goods it buys abroad, leaving only a tiny portion of financing for its trading partners.

Of some $26 billion in foreign credits Peking has been guaranteed by industrialized countries, it has drawn down only $2 billion during the country's current reassessment of its industrial development priorities.

The U.S. share of the financing pie is likely to be slim, although two-way trade between Washington and Peking is expected to total $4 billion in 1980, up from $2.3 billion in 1979.

Still, U.S. commercial banks, as well as the U.S. Eximbank, have made small inroads into the China trade financing market despite their high lending rates.

The Bank of Chicago's establishment of a Peking branch last month, the first such branch opened by a U.S. bank, represented one step forward by private American financing interests in China.

Chung says it is only a matter of time and available office space until other U.S. banks receive approval to set up branches, "one by one."

Now Wean United Inc., a Pittsburgh steel-making equipment firm, is making history because of its role in the first financing of China trade through the U.S. Export-Import Bank since 1946.

The Eximbank has issued a preliminary commitment for a $65 million credit to help finance building of a $500 million cold rolling mill at China's huge Baoshan steel complex near Shanghai.

Wean will supply an additional $16 million in credit at a rate that will keep the combined U.S. financing cost at 8.5 percent.

But such Eximbank financing is expected to be the exception rather than the rule for the foreseeable future, since the Chinese made clear during the recent meeting of the U.S.-China

Joint Economic Committee in Washington that the bank's rate is too high.

"Generally speaking, our terms are not competitive with those of our counterparts," said an Eximbank official, who asked not to be identified.

"Unlike the export-import banks of Japan and Europe, the U.S. Eximbank is self-sustaining. We don't operate with appropriated funds. Sometimes, if we really want a deal badly, we can lower our rates to try to meet the competition, but this is expensive for us."

"So far we've made enough money," the official added. "But as interest rates go up, the cost of money goes up and our profit margin narrows. At some point in the 1980's, Eximbank will have to be subsidized."

"The reason we were able to get the China deal with Eximbank financing was partly timing," said R. John Wean, Jr., chairman and president of Wean United.

"At the time the present administration formalized relations with Peking, there was a large steel-expansion project underway. The Chinese felt it might be an opportunity to combine U.S., Japanese and West German participation if American financing was available."

"We had to get administration approval for the financing."

Wean said price, supply, technology and service all figure into China's decision in choosing financing.

"But," he said, "we would be concerned in a truly competitive financing situation, where all other factors are equal, that Eximbank would have problems meeting foreign competition."

Washington appears unwilling at present to change its stance despite the competitive disadvantage high interest rates create for American exporters.

"We think that interest rates are not the only thing you should consider," said David Denny of the Commerce Department. "We think the Chinese, for irrational reasons, maybe bureaucratic or internal reasons, have focused excessively on the interest rate factor."

"Legally, Eximbank has to borrow money at certain rates," he said. "And Congress has decided it must not subsidize U.S. exports at the expense of other segments of the economy."

One China trade expert suggested Peking's strong statements about the high rates may be "posturing to get our interest rates lower. When they can get rates at 2 to 3 percent from Japan and the Belgians, they think the U.S. can do the same thing. But this won't happen."

Japan's Eximbank offers China 420 billion yen (about $2 billion) in financing at 6.25 percent. The low interest rate skirts a "gentlemen's agreement" of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. That is for a 7.25 to 7.5 percent interest for import subsidy loans. The Japanese get around it by calling it a loan for natural resource development.

Japan also has extended a long-term government loan for 50 billion yen (about $200 million) at around 3 percent interest, similar to the ones it extends to developing nations.

"You can imagine how this impacts on our business with China," said an official of Chase Manhattan Bank. "It gives the Chinese a skewed or unrealistic view of what they can get from U.S. banks."

However, the Commerce Department's Daniel Stein says a yen loan at 7 percent is not necessarily more desirable than a dollar loan at 8.5 percent, given the recent steep appreciation of the Japanese currency against the dollar.

Presently China uses almost no commercial loans. "Several U.S. banks have done some short-term commercial loans for China, but the amount is insignificant when compared to the business we do with countries like Japan and South Korea," said Richard

Fent of Chase Manhattan Bank. "It doesn't go into the hundreds of million of dollars."

But Fent says the bank is actively involved in other kinds of financing, including handling letters of credit and financing the collection period between when U.S. goods are shipped and when the Chinese pay.

Fent admits Japanese banks will have an edge when and if China begins using commercial loans because of their close affiliation with Japanese companies doing business with Peking. As a result of the close ties, the banks can look for their profits in the deal itself rather than in interest rates. However American bankers believe China will reserve a significant share of its financing market for U.S. banks.

Unemployed Like Libraries

The Youngstown, Ohio, library system is not alone in its increased use by people seeking jobs. Other public libraries report high interest by the unemployed for help-wanted ads in out-of-town newspapers and job resume books.

"We've always had the largest collection of newspapers in the Midwest, ever since the unemployment problem first hit," said Jeffrey Tong of the Detroit Public Library system. "Lately, they're asking for the Dallas, Houston, Tucson, San Diego newspapers — all these and from the Northwest, too, but especially from Houston."

"We actually had two people get in a fist fight over the Houston paper's want ads. They both wanted them. If we had 10 copies of the Houston paper we could use them all. Some people tell us they've even gone down there looking for jobs instead of waiting."

Claudia Schmitt, head of the Atlanta Public Library's business department, said, "An awful lot of people are looking for jobs, and they are using the library. The resume books have gotten to the point where we cannot keep enough circulating copies."

Shirley Haas of the Chicago Public Library said there is an increase in people calling and asking if help-wanted ads are in various newspapers. She said the newspapers in demand are from New York City, Los Angeles, Houston, Boston, Washington, D.C., Milwaukee and San Francisco.

She said the library held 49 career workshops this year and "there were always people on the waiting list."

Judith Pellnat, library assistant at the Albany, N.Y., Public Library, who is in charge of the library's Job Information Center, said, "We get about 150 people in here a week. Our volume has doubled in the last year."

She said the library recently increased the number of out-of-town newspapers, and "they're really used a lot. They're hand-worn by the end of the week."

David Macksam, assistant director of the Little Rock, Ark., Library, said more people are coming in and using newspapers to look for jobs.

He said the "most heavily demanded" item is a book entitled "Resumes That Get Jobs" and that the library has 30 to 40 copies of it and they always are out.

He said Charles Griffin, librarian at the Hartford, Conn., Public Library, said there is an increased use of classified sections for newspapers from Miami, Houston, Los Angeles, Chicago, New York, Boston and Atlanta.

Wally Keasler, of the Chattanooga-Hamilton County Bicentennial Library in Chattanooga, Tenn., said his library also has seen an increase of people asking to see job ads and books on how to prepare resumes in the past two years.

And Betty Gay of the Los Angeles City Library said a check of branch libraries showed a big increase in lower income areas for guides to resume writing, armed forces tests, civil service tests and material for getting a high school equivalency degree.

Railroad Has Gone To War With Drivers

By PAUL JENKINS
Associated Press Writer
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — In a black-bordered box buried on an inside newspaper page, Alaska's only railroad declared war against motorists. The object in dispute is a bridge spanning the Nenana River in the rugged Alaska Range.

The Alaska Railroad wants the 482-foot railroad bridge at Ferry all to itself. It doesn't want its rails used as a road anymore.

To make its point, the railroad warned earlier this month in an advertisement that it is putting spikes on the bridge to discourage those who drive across it to get from the Parks Highway to the road on the other side.

"People drive their cars or snowmachines across the bridge ... with no reference to the schedule of the trains," said the railroad's chief counsel, David Roderick. "We've had eight near-misses there in the past three to five years. If we hit somebody there ... there goes the bridge."

The Parks Highway links Anchorage and Fairbanks. To the east is the river and then, on the other side, is the 13-mile Old Jackson Road, a mining route built in the 1920s.

There is a road from the Parks Highway to the bridge. And Roderick said the bridge, 75 miles southwest of Fairbanks, is the only way to reach the Old Jackson Road — and the mining and hunting land on that other side of the river.

One state official who asked not to be identified said he has used the bridge himself and has seen three near-misses.

Roderick said engineers need one-quarter to one-half mile to stop trains. Meeting a car or truck on the bridge "would be disastrous."

The federally owned railroad — Roderick calls it "the only one in captivity where you can flag down a train" — has asked the state for an automobile bridge over the river and plans to ask again, he said.

Henry Springer, the state Department of Transportation's director of planning and programming for interior Alaska, said Tuesday, "There's no question, it's an unsafe thing. It's been used illegally for a long time."

But he said "money-benefit ratios" make an auto bridge impossible in the foreseeable future.

He described the region as desolate, with few year-round residents.

There are active mines at the eastern end of the Old Jackson Road during the summer, but little or no activity during the winter, Springer said.

The railroad carries both freight and passengers, but there is no regular stop near the bridge. Those who get off there usually are miners and hunters, officials say.

"I don't blame the railroad," Springer said. "But the people who live and work back in there need some way of getting in and out."

"It's a question of money. The river is wicked right there. It would be an expensive bridge," he said. "It's just a question of money-benefit ratio."

Roderick is not so sure spikes will keep motorist vehicles off the railroad bridge.

"It'll give people pause, but as sure as we're sitting here, they'll figure a way to put planks across, just as high as the spikes for 500 feet."

By DOLORES A. BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Before the tears had dried, before the prayers were said, before the cobwebs of confusion had been brushed aside, the T-shirts arrived.

Before most of the world knew John Lennon had died, the buttons came.

Even in death, the slain ex-Beatle, like Elvis Presley and John Kennedy before him, could not escape the demands of his public. And even at Sunday's 10-minute silent prayer vigil, vendors hawked Lennon paraphernalia.

New Yorkers bought buttons, balloons and T-shirts before the silence began with an announced request: "Please turn off all radios. Please stop any sale or vending of any merchandise."

The merchants and manufacturers of celebrity souvenirs were quick to put their wares on the rack last week. Mourning fans snapped up the trinkets, many reluctantly. And everyone was just a little bit embarrassed to admit that a memory was being bought.

One Century City, Calif., store boosted the pricetag on a "Hard Day's Night" poster from the $35 it charged before Lennon's death to $235. The owner of a junk store on the fringes of New York's Times Square lined up smudged and dusty Beatle picture postcards in his display case, hoping to fetch $5 a picture. Two days earlier, he had thought of throwing them away.

"The whole thing is rather tacky," said Linda Sundheim, assistant manager of a Brentano's bookstore in the Westwood section of Los Angeles. Of 10 hardcover and paperback books on the Beatles, Brentano's only had a few of each title left by Wednesday night.

"There's a need to hold on to something tangible. I want to hold a memory in my hands," said Dana Levy, a 24-year-old Lennon fan from Philadelphia, as she scoured New York's Broadway looking for souvenir buttons and T-shirts. She found a large red, white and black button for $1. "In Memory of a Superstar," it read above a smiling photo of Lennon.

"I just really felt close to him," a 22-year-old woman said in Los Angeles, as she purchased the slain ex-Beatle's last album, "Double Fantasy."

"But to tell you the truth, I probably would not have bought it" if Lennon had not been killed, she said. "I felt sick to go in there and sick to buy the album."

Lennon and old Beatle albums are being gobbled up in most parts of the country, but not, say many record store owners, to the degree Presley records were following his death three years ago.

"It isn't what it was with Elvis Presley," said Kim Kittle, floor manager at Camelot Music in one of northeastern Ohio's largest shopping centers. "Then we had people crying in the stores. People were calling in to reserve hundreds of dollars of records and driving more than 100 miles to get them."

"Elvis had a little bit broader consumer base than the Beatles or Lennon," Kittle said. "His career spanned a little longer time and included people in the 40- to 45-year range and down. Mostly 35-year-olds or younger are buying Lennon."

Warner Communications has pulled all advertising and promotion for "Double Fantasy," a spokeswoman said, so Lennon wouldn't be exploited. The record, released Nov. 17, has sold more than 600,000 copies, making it a "gold record," and it was on its way to becoming a "platinum record" with sales of 1 million.

The Colony, one of New York's busiest record stores, sold more than 100 Beatle albums in one day. In 30 minutes, the entire stock of "Double Fantasy" was sold at the Record Town Store in Latham, N.Y.

When President Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. were slain, memorial coins and plates found their way into many American homes.

When Presley died, his name or face was emblazoned on every conceivable surface: candles, playing cards, fingernail clippers, belt buckles, key chains, swizzle sticks, spoons. Lennon fans don't think the same will happen with their hero's memory.

"I think the John Lennon crowd is more enlightened than the Elvis crowd," Ms. Sundheim said.

Alan Slater of N.G. Slater Corp., one of the nation's largest manufacturers of buttons, banners and other souvenirs, said he didn't think the firm would be making Lennon items.

"This is a downer," he said. "Presley was a glamor show. Lennon stood for peace and quiet. To capitalize and make money on that puts a damper on it."

Morton Ohren, president of the Chicago-based Creative Fashions, said Lennon T-shirts — one a four-color photograph of Lennon, the other a group picture of all four Beatles — were not selling well. "We sold five times as much with Presley," he said.

New American Library plans to reissue 1 million copies of "In His Own Write" and "A Spaniard in the Works," whimsical short story collections by Lennon that have been out of print for years.

Weingeroff Enterprises, a costume jewelry manufacturer in Providence, R.I., is ready to ship $25,000 worth of John Lennon pendants, key chains, stick pins and rings. The items range in price from $3 to $5.

According to Gregg Weingeroff, vice president of the firm, there is no legal problem using Lennon's name or likeness com-mercially. He said his lawyers told him that since he is dead, John Lennon is in the public domain.

"I think you can't totally erase the feeling that this may be profiting from Lennon's tragedy," Weingeroff said. "But people loved John Lennon, and we're making something they can collect to remember him. We don't look at it as morbid."

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

South had a difficult rebid to make. Although he had only 14 high-card points, they did include three aces in a hand of great trick-taking potential. Still, we slightly prefer the mild underbid of two hearts, which would probably still have led to game.

West chose the routine lead of the jack of spades. Study the North-South holding and see how you would plan the play to avoid losing two club tricks in addition to two trumps.

One line is to lead a club from dummy and finesse the jack. That will succeed whenever East started with a doubleton club honor, since one of declarer's club losers can go off on a spade. Another line, if trumps are 2-2, is to draw trumps, eliminate spades, cash the ace of diamonds and then play ace of clubs and another — that wins if either defender started with a doubleton club honor and the king of diamonds. A third alternative, which also requires 2-2 trumps, is to play the doubler for all the high cards: after extracting trumps, eliminating spades and cashing the ace of diamonds, lead a club to dummy's ten. If West holds both honors, he is end played. He must either concede a ruff-and-suff, lead into declarer's club tenace or lead away from the king of diamonds, setting up a diamond trick in dummy.

However, as the cards lie, none of these lines will succeed if the defense is accurate. But there is another chance. Declarer should immediately cash three spades and the ace of diamonds, then lead a trump. This line works in all the above cases and one more — if West started with either a singleton trump honor, or both. After West wins his trumps, he has no safe exit and must concede the fulfilling trick to declarer.

BBC Discards Ali Recording

LONDON (AP) — A recorded program with boxing great Muhammad Ali was scrapped because his speech was slurred and incoherent, the British Broadcasting Corp. says.

The Daily Mail reported Thursday that a BBC man who was present at the recording session Friday said Ali probably was suffering from jet lag when he did the interview. He had arrived in London the day before to publicize a film.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Thursday, December 18, 1980

All, 38, was knocked about by Larry Holmes in a recent bout in Las Vegas and there has been speculation in the United States that his speech was affected.

The BBC said it was hoped to re-record the program Tuesday but Ali's schedule did not allow it.

Ali did not comment. He did an interview for another BBC outfit Wednesday and his speech was normal. He was greeted by enthusiastic crowds outside the building.
