Alexei Kosygin, 76, Is Reportedly Dead

MOSCOW (AP) — Former Premier Alexei N. Kosygin died Thursday night, unofficial Soviet sources reported today. He was 76. There was no immediate official confirmation.

The sources said Kosygin would be buried with honors, possibly at a full-dress Red Square ceremony. His body was also expected to lie in state before the funeral.

Kosygin, who succeeded Nikita S. Khrushchev as premier in 1964, stepped down from the job Oct. 23. He was replaced by Nikolai A. Tikhonov, 75, in the premier's post.

Kosygin had been reported seriously ill with heart and circulatory problems for half a year, and his retirement was officially attributed to health reasons.

Today was the 74th birthday of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who had announced Kosygin's retirement at a national parliament session. At the time, Western analysts were uncertain whether Kosygin had left his post in good political favor.

Brezhnev did not praise Kosygin at the parliament session, but later issued a statement of "warm gratitude" for his services.

Kosygin was not presented with any awards when he stepped down, but analysts said this may have been due to his poor health.

Kosygin did not attend the parliament session, and since then has been reported hospitalized at a VIP clinic outside Moscow.

Kosygin was the supreme survivor of Soviet politics, an occasional hothead who also displayed a wry sense of humor and warm human emotions.

He was 13 when the Bolsheviks swept to power in 1917. Twenty-three years later he had climbed within that government to become deputy premier under Josef Stalin and later premier.

He not only survived Stalin's purges of the late 1940s but prospered politically. By 1964 he, Brezhnev and Nikolai Podgorny had replaced Khrushchev with their three-man troika — Brezhnev as the Communist Party leader, Podgorny as president and Kosygin as premier.

Algerians Bring Another Demand In Hostage Case

By The Associated Press

The intermediaries in the U.S. hostage crisis left Tehran today with a new demand that the U.S. government deposit money or securities with the Algerian government as part of the deal to free the 52 Americans captured 412 days ago.

The intermediaries were led by Rehda Malek, the Algerian ambassador to the United States, who told a reporter in Tehran that the Iranian response already has been transmitted to officials in Washington.

There was no immediate comment from U.S. officials, or formal statement from Malek or the other two Algerian diplomats as they boarded a flight to Algiers.

But a top Iranian official told reporters at Tehran airport that Iran has demanded in part that the U.S. government deposit an unspecified amount of money or securities with the Algerian government to satisfy the demand for financial guarantees.

The official, Ahmad Azizi, spokesman for Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, said one of the guarantees includes "depositing a particular amount with the government of Algeria." He said he expected the Algerians to go to Washington from Algiers and that the next step was up to the U.S. government.

Asked to explain what Iran means by demanding financial guarantees relating to the proposed conditions for release of the hostages Azizi replied: "In general we have asked for valid guarantees for execution of the liabilities of the United States."

Pressed to state whether Iran was insisting on the deposit of money or securities as some form of escrow, he simply referred to the deposit with Algeria.

Rajai said Thursday that the United States "can release the hostages before the Christmas holidays if they can give the necessary guarantees," but he gave no hint at that time what those guarantees might be.

"Our final reply to the explanations that the United States requested has been prepared and will be sent to the United States in the near future," Rajai said.

It is believed the guarantees involve two of the four hostage demands — return of the wealth of the late shah and his family and the dropping of legal claims by U.S. firms against Iranian assets frozen in U.S. banks.

The Carter administration has said the U.S. government cannot legally return wealth that deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi or his family might have taken out of Iran, or quash pending lawsuits by those who claim they were hurt financially by the Iranian revolution that drove the shah from his throne.

The other two Iranian conditions are the return of the estimated $8 billion in frozen Iranian assets and a U.S. pledge of non-interference in Iranian affairs.

Secretary of State Edmund Muskie told reporters Thursday he was waiting for the Iranian message and "until we get the Iranian response, it's impossible to characterize developments."

Meanwhile, Israel television reported that Israel's Moslem fundamentalist government last Tuesday executed the Jewish editor of an Iranian newspaper accused of spying for the United States.

There was no confirmation from Iranian or other sources of the execution of Simon Farzami.

Home For The Holidays

HOLIDAY SEND-OFF BY THE GENERAL — A greeting from Major General Lucien E. Dolduc Jr., brings a smile to soldiers under his command at Fort Jackson who were aboard a northbound AMTRAK heading home for the holidays. The general walked through the train named the "Fort Jackson Special" greeting the 900 soldiers aboard. Approximately 10,000 soldiers left the base Thursday for upcoming holidays. About 1,100 will remain on post. (AP Laserphoto)

Final Successful Space Shuttle Rehearsal Held

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The lead team of Commander John Young and Robert Crippen manned the space shuttle Columbia's controls today in a final successful shuttle rehearsal, Kennedy Space Center officials said.

"It was a good run," Young said at the conclusion of the 59-minute test of the Orbiting Maneuvering System.

The purpose of the 2:30 a.m. exercise was to check the way each element of the shuttle works with its ground equipment. Today's check was of the Columbia's computers, which controls various types of missions.

The crew rehearsed firing the orbiting maneuvering engines, which will take the astronauts out of orbit during their return to Earth.

The Columbia is scheduled to land either at Edwards Air Force Base near Los Angeles and, in later missions, at the 15,000-foot shuttle runway at Kennedy.

Officials plan to further study the results of today's test run and then, if all goes as planned, the shuttle will be rolled out to its launchpad Dec. 29.

The two District I alternates selected are Luther Haywood Eure Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther H. Eure, Sr., Route 2, Gatesville, and Johnnie Augustus Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Lee Jr. of Route 1, Garysburg.

Finalists for the Morehead Awards were selected from 22 nominees chosen earlier by individual county committees in District I. Interviews were conducted by the District Selection Committee in Williamston on December 11.

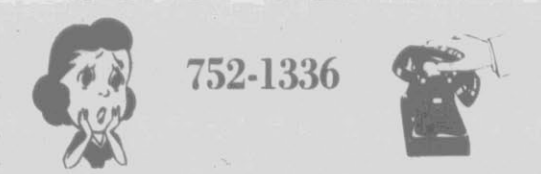

Each of the ten Morehead Districts in the state is selecting seven finalists to appear for interviews with the foundation's Central Selection Committee in Chapel Hill between February 28 and March 3. In addition, 48 nominees from independent preparatory schools throughout the eastern part of the United States will be interviewed during this period.

From this group of 118 finalists, approximately 65 students will receive Morehead Awards.

These awards provide all-expense paid undergraduate educations at UNC-CH, with a current N.C. resident rate of $14,000 for four years of study on campus, plus funding for internships available each summer.

The late John Motley Morehead, a native of Spray and an 1891 graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill, established the program in 1951. Since then, more than 1,200 Morehead Scholars have attended the University. There are currently 242 Morehead Scholars studying on campus.

QUESTIONING APPRAISAL

I have a 1980 Honda Civic that I paid $4,048 for last year. The Pitt County tax office is trying to charge me taxes on it at a value of $4,882. I don't think this is fair. I have my bill of sale. C. C.

Pitt County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee said values of used cars are based on a national market report of used car evaluation adjusted for the average retail price for this area. Your problem reflects a trend in which small economy cars have increased or held their own in value in recent years, he said.

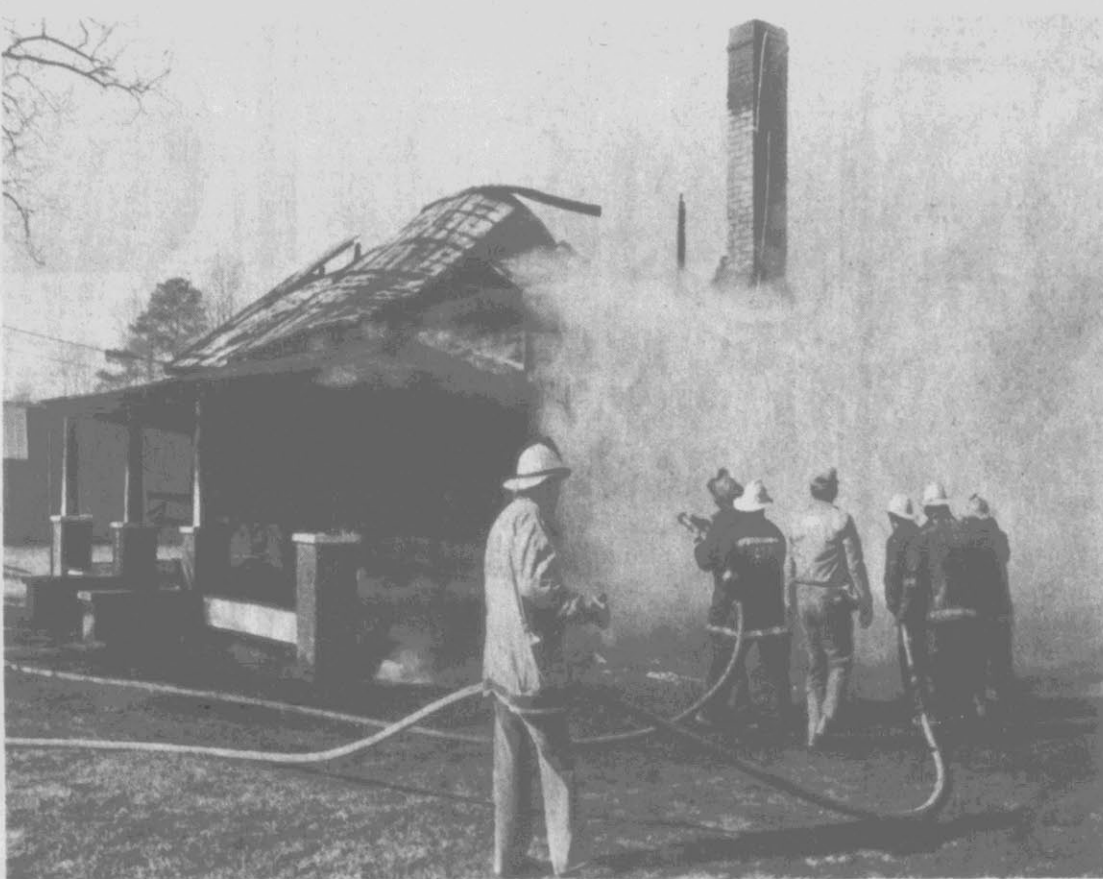

Had you wished to appear before the Board of Equalization and Review prior to this year's last meeting in May, you could have, he said, and even though you didn't, he's going to take your problem to the county commissioners himself and give you a final answer the first of next week.

PARADE PARTICIPATION CHANCES?

I understand the ECU Marching Pirates might be in the presidential inaugural parade. What are the chances? S. H.

Slim to none, according to Tom Goolsby, the band director. Senator-elect John East sent a letter of recommendation, he said, but there's been no answer yet. Anyway, it's probably too late to raise the money that would be necessary for such an undertaking.

Part of the ECU Jazz Ensemble is going to take part in Governor Jim Hunt's inauguration, according to Dr. Charles Stevens of the ECU School of Music.

Lost In Thursday Fire

FLAMES DESTROY HOME — Fire destroyed the home of Eddie Morris, of Rt. 2, Robersonville, Thursday morning. According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, the fire was reported at 11:05 a.m., and when firemen from Stokes arrived the home was fully involved. Joyner said a neighbor spotted the fire at the rear of the house which was involved extensively with fire. The official said the Morrises were not home at the time, and he suspects a wood heater as the cause of the fire. The home, which was reportedly owned by Marshal Thomas, is located in the northeast part of Pitt County in the Oakley community. Members of the Stokes and Bethel fire departments were called to the scene. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Dear Abby

Wife Now Loves Her Therapist

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you a year ago, saying that I had been married for 17 years, had a nice family and a good husband, but he and I just weren't able to communicate with each other. I had spells of depression, cried easily and didn't know what to do. You suggested that my husband and I should get counseling at our local mental health clinic. Well, he refused to go, so I went without him, and now I have another problem.

I have fallen in love with my therapist, Abby, he's the kindest, most gentle and understanding man I've ever met. He has helped me so much, I am a new woman. It's even helped my marriage. But what am I going to do about the therapist? I'm afraid if I tell him how I feel about him he'll drop me as a patient, and I don't want that. Even though there's no hope for making my dream come true (I dream about him nearly every night), I look forward to our sessions. Please help me.

CALL ME SHIRLEY

DEAR SHIRLEY: Tell your therapist how you feel about him so your feelings can be discussed and recognized for what they are. Most therapists are familiar with such situations and know how to deal with them. He is there to help you, and in order to be helped to the fullest, you must be completely open and honest with him.

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married 29-year-old woman. I recently changed jobs, and my problem is my supervisor. He's a conceited, middle-aged married man who fancies himself to be quite a fox. He keeps asking me to go out with him. I told him no from the start, but he kids me about it every day, and I go along with the kidding, pretending it's all in fun, but I know he is serious.

Abby, I don't want him for an enemy, so how can I get him to leave me alone without insulting him?

REDHEAD

DEAR REDHEAD: Tell him that you have a very tender conscience, and if you were ever to see him outside the office you would surely break down and tell your husband — and his wife. That should cool him off.

...

DEAR ABBY: We recently married off our youngest daughter at a lovely church wedding. We had a reception and sit-down dinner for 220 guests. Since this was our third wedding, we were more experienced and would like to tell you how we handled 16 guests who failed to acknowledge our R.S.V.P. invitations but showed up anyway.

First, those who failed to acknowledge our invitations were not called and asked, "Are you coming?"

We simply prepared to serve those who responded, and we assumed that those who did not were not coming.

Those who didn't respond but showed up anyway were not given the same cordial welcome as those who responded in the affirmative.

No last-minute rushing around to set more places at the table, and no hastily scribbled place cards for them. They were treated like "drop in" guests, and had to wait until they could conveniently be served.

Care to comment?

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: If anything could cure one who ignored an R.S.V.P. but showed up anyway, this would. But too few hostesses have the courage to follow your example.

...

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Classy Classics In Casmhere

THE CLOTH OF KINGS in ancient times, cashmere still denotes a touch of class. Today, lovers of luxurious cashmere choose classic styles so they can enjoy their sweaters and skirts for any number of seasons. At left, a full-fashioned long sleeve cashmere sweater paired with a color coordinated pull-on pleated skirt lets the fabric spell out the outfit's understated elegance. At right, a saddle-shoulder V-neck cashmere pullover makes the luxury statement over a graceful, softly pleated garbadine skirt. (Fashions by Dalton Industries.)

Open-faced sandwiches, which the Danes call smørrebrød, may date back to ancient times when a slice of buttered bread was the "plate" for a meal.

FOCUS

Snow

"Let it snow. Let it snow. Let it snow." And whether you like it or not, that's just what it's going to be doing soon in many parts of the country. Snow is formed when the water vapor in clouds freezes into ice crystals. The crystals are always six-sided, but no two are exactly alike. If the falling crystals pass through warm air, they melt and reach the earth as raindrops. If they come in contact with very cold raindrops, the raindrops freeze over the snow flakes, forming sleet or hail. Snow contains less water than rain does. It can take up to 30 inches of dry snow to equal the water in a one-inch rainfall.

DO YOU KNOW — What word describes a large mass of snow sliding down a mountainside?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Montana borders Alberta.

THE DECEMBER GEMS
If you were born in December, your official birthstones are turquoise and zircon.

Turquoise is one of America's great resources. As a matter of fact, the American Southwest is the world's major source of this lovely stone. An even, slightly greenish-blue is the favored color. However, some people prefer more greenish stones or those that possess the interesting "spider web" matrix (dark veins of the host rock running through the stone).

You should let your taste be your guide for the most part in choosing this stone, but you need a knowledgeable jeweler's help in pointing out the most durable stones. Turquoise varies in porosity, and the denser stones are more resistant to breakage and staining and take a better polish. Turquoise was once considered a protection against injurious falls and the Evil Eye.

Zircon is available in many colors, the blue probably being the best known. Before sophisticated diamond substitutes appeared on the market, colorless zircon was a reasonable alternative. The use of zircon can be traced to buried civilizations. The ancients believed it would protect them against plagues and injuries and bring wealth and acceptance.

If you're shopping for a gift for a December birthday, you might consider a piece of jewelry set with one of these. At Lautares Jewelers we can provide you with a free pamphlet on the December birthstones to enclose with your gift. This will make it even more special.

Haig Is Controversial

President-elect Ronald Reagan made his most controversial appointment this week with the announcement that former Gen. Alexander M. Haig will be nominated for secretary of state.

There had been rumblings in the Senate amid speculation that Haig would be appointed to the cabinet and Senate leaders have promised careful scrutiny before the appointment is confirmed.

The major concern is Haig's involvement as White House chief of staff during the turmoil following the Watergate revelations.

Certainly that era of Haig's service should be carefully examined by Congress. That's what the confirmation process is all about.

At the same time it should be recognized that Haig has a brilliant record of service, both in the military and in a civilian capacity.

He points out that he joined the White House staff after the Watergate events took place. His supporters credit him with holding government together while President Nixon was embroiled in the agony of Watergate.

Haig could serve the nation well as secretary of state, but if there are any new revelations about his Nixon White House role they should be brought out in the committee hearings.

Television Rapidly Changing

The general field of communications is headed in fascinating directions these days.

We have the traditional television stations with network affiliations. There are plans for low power local stations to meet specialized needs. Then there is cable television which is sweeping the nation and bringing major stations, adless movies and other entertainment and information into the home.

Now COMSAT is asking to be able to provide satellite-to-the-home service which would provide a variety of services for a fee.

No one knows whether one system or the other will dominate, or whether we will be treated to a great variety of services from many sources.

However it develops, we will see greatly changed television viewing in the years ahead.

THIS AFTERNOON

Judging The Police

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — When the chief of police in High Point decided to stop providing a police escort for funerals, he offered perfectly rational reasons for doing so — it is expensive, it takes men away from more critical work, it's a special service which could just as well be provided privately without taxing the entire community for the cost.

Reaction from a sizable number of taxpayers demonstrates, however, that they want the police to provide such "public relations" services.

This situation demonstrates clearly a major problem facing citizens, their municipal and county officials, and police departments: just what are police supposed to be doing, and how well are they doing it?

Answering these questions is difficult if not impossible. It is especially difficult when trying to compare one police department to another in a different community. In the first place, a police department is a political unit, an arm of government operated by elected officials either directly or indirectly. As such, it must try to be responsive to what the public desire from its police department.

Self Protection

Secondly, information in the form of responses, arrests, investigations and reams of other data is collected and handed out by police themselves. Obviously, the police and governmental officials wish that information to make the department look as good as possible.

Third, a great deal of police time is spent on unglamorous work such as giving directions, helping traffic, writing wreck reports, handling domestic crises, or just keeping an eye on things. Such work doesn't capture much public attention or concern — unless it isn't being done. And, community attitudes toward the police are often determined by the way officers handle themselves in just such mundane daily chores as these — whether they are civil and pleasant, or display an arrogant disrespect for individuals.

Finally, the general public and news media have latched upon the most unfair measurement of all to periodically determine whether the local police are or are not doing a good job: crime statistics.

Gordon Whitaker, a political science professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, believes that using crime statistics from the Federal Bureau of Investigation is "very misleading," because the statistics show only those crimes reported to police; and in turn, reported to the FBI. Basically, the crimes reported are homicide, rape, assault, auto theft, robbery, larceny and burglary.

But where police spend most of their time — domestic problems and traffic — is not reported. Neither are arson, child and spouse abuse, kidnapping, embezzlement, fraud, helping sick people, hunting lost persons ...the list of public service can go on and on.

No Control But everybody zeroes in on those crime statistics, seldom realizing that nothing (Continued on page 5)

Harassment In Offices

WASHINGTON — The most prevalent office sexual harassment right now takes place at office parties during the holiday season.

Vandermere told me about a party they held at Consolidated Grommets last week.

"I never saw anything like it," he said. "Zelda Blackstone slapped Harvey Pirth in the kisser because she said he was harassing her."

"Was he?" "I think so. But Zelda was really mad because Charlie Rollerex in Sales wasn't harassing her instead."

"Then Zelda has nothing against office harassment per se?"

"No. If she doesn't like the guy, she calls it harassing. If she does like him, and he makes a pass at her, she calls it romance. The trouble is if the one guy she likes doesn't make a pass at her, then she gets sore at anyone else who the boss' secretary, on her fourth vodka. She was a different person from the one I had seen before. She said she hated harassment in the office, but she wouldn't mind if we went to her place after the party. Then she had another vodka and passed out."

"Lucky for you. She could have pressed charges with the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission."

"I thought of that. It's pretty tricky in a big company about who you harass and who you don't. George Kilbride thought he was getting signals from Lila Peabody in Research and Development. So he approached her at the party and asked her to dance, and she started screaming her head does." "So who was Charlie harassing?" "He was all over Clara Southworthy in Accounting, but I'm not sure he was harassing her. At least she didn't complain when he took off with her toward the mailroom."

"Where were you?"

"I was harassing a little blonde in the typing pool, but then Colfax joined us and she decided she'd rather be harassed by him. Colfax has a reputation for harassing anything in a skirt."

"I'm glad I don't work in a big office," I said.

"I then went over to the bar and found Miss Featherstone,

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

It appears that local law enforcement officers have become the favorite "whipping boys" in the local tv's quest for sensationalism. While it is recognized that law enforcement agencies are established to serve the people, it should be noted that law enforcement officers are people, also. Certainly drinking while on duty is a serious matter, but why not let the agency determine the outcome? Surely our Chief of Police and city officials are much better equipped to investigate and formulate a course of action than the local tv news department.

Another case of the local tv news' irresponsible and biased reporting occurred in the so-called "police brutality" incident in which a local highway patrolman was accused of assaulting an individual following a high speed chase. The individual suffered a broken tooth in that incident and a complaint was filed. Our local tv news department immediately aired a report showing the individual and his parents at the dentist's office and even allowed the individual to question the officer's reputation on the air. An investigation by the Patrol's Internal Affairs Section completely exonerated the trooper, however; the individual's parents obtained a warrant for assault against the trooper. Again, tv news leaped on the incident stating that the patrol had investigated the trooper's action with no results and the attorney for the individual was even allowed to state his opinion on the air. Not one mention was made of the patrol's version of the incident, nor was it mentioned that the investigation exonerated the trooper.

No one condones police brutality or conduct unbecoming of an officer. But let's not be so quick to judge our law enforcement officers when incidents are reported. Our area is blessed with basically competent and professional law enforcement which everyone seems to disregard. It is a shame that our officers are tried and convicted by a tv news department.

Your paper is to be commended for its accurate and proper accounts of the above incidences. Until Channel 9 news develops more competency and professionalism, I would suggest that they leave the investigative reporting to Dan Rather and the staff of "60 Minutes."

FROM A TORCH OUT OF THE TOMB

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem is built over what is presumed to be the tomb in which Christ was buried.

At dawn of Easter Day, this church is crowded with pilgrims from all parts of the world. Two priests, one Armenian and one Greek Orthodox, push their way through the crowd and enter a little enclosure thought to be the actual tomb itself. Then, as the group waits in tense silence, the priests extend through an opening in the door a lighted torch. From this torch the pilgrims light their tapers, carrying them to different shrines in the city. Thus symbolically they demonstrate how the resurrection of Christ caused a flame of hope to be lighted in all believing hearts.

This ceremony brings gladness to the Christian convictions of the participants and power to their witnessing. It should do the same for us as we visualize it. — Elisha Douglass

Tilt Toward Voucher Plan

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The American public is closely divided on a plan which, if put into effect, could have a major impact on education in the United States in the years ahead.

Under the "voucher plan," the government would allot a certain amount of money for the education of each schoolchild in the U.S. Parents could use this money to help pay the tuition costs in a public, parochial or private school of their choice.

The public votes 47 to 42 percent in favor of this plan, which is already in effect in other nations. While support is less than a majority, it is higher than in two previous surveys, conducted in the early 1970s. In 1971, 38 percent favored the plan while the figure was 43 percent in 1970.

Arguments Pro And Con

Proponents argue that the voucher plan would force schools to compete and therefore to be more responsive to the needs of parents, resulting in an overall improvement in the quality of education. In addition, its backers feel the plan would eliminate double payment by parents who support the public schools through their taxes yet send their children to non-public schools.

A key concern of those who OPPOSE the voucher plan is that it threatens the quality — even the existence — of public school education. Students with learning or disciplinary problems might be refused admittance to private schools and their choice, therefore, would be limited to public schools. These schools might then become "dumping grounds" for children with problems.

Here is the question asked:

"In some nations, the government allots a certain amount of money for each child for his education. The parents can then send the child to any public, parochial or private school they choose. This is called the 'voucher system.' Would you like to see such an idea adopted in this country?"

Here is the national trend:

Favor Voucher Plan?

	Yes	No	Don't know
1980	47%	42%	11%
1971	38	44	18
1970	43	46	11

Those in the current survey who would most like to see the voucher plan adopted are Catholics, younger adults, persons with less than a college education and residents of the nation's largest cities, as seen in the following table:

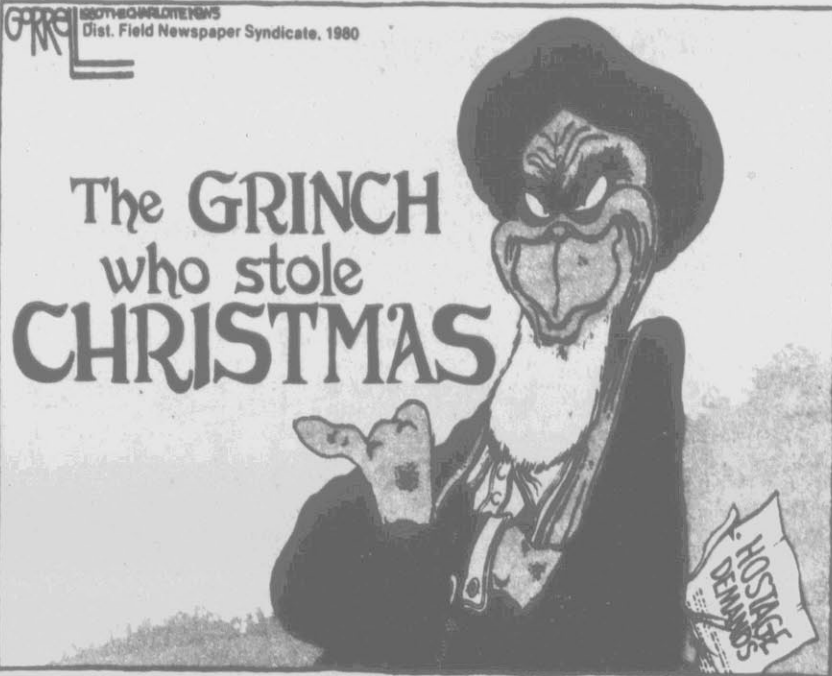

Favor Voucher Plan?

	Yes	No	Don't know
NATIONAL	47%	42%	11%
Protestants	41	47	12
Catholics	57	34	9
18-29 years old	61	30	9
30-49 years old	43	47	10
50 years old and over	39	47	14
College education	40	53	7
High school	51	38	11
Grade school	46	35	19
1 million and over	53	31	16
500,000-999,999	46	38	16
50,000-499,999	48	46	6
2,500-49,999	49	40	11
Under 2,500, rural	40	49	11

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,551 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 21-24.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Once They Knew The Answers

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When the people who used to know are asking the questions now, you have to wonder and worry about where the economy is going. Guesses count today. Is there anything better?

Q. Where is the prime rate, now 21 percent, headed?

A. Current thinking is that it will reach at least 22 percent or 23 percent. However, these projections rise with every rise in the prime. Some published forecasts now go as high as 28 percent.

In listening to any forecaster today you must realize that they are as perplexed as anyone else. Some of them haven't yet finished mailing their 1981 forecasts, and yet those forecasts are already dated.

Where are prices headed?

A. The consumer price index is now at more than 12 percent, although the underlying inflation rate, which excludes volatile prices such as fuel and mortgage interest costs, is closer to 9 percent.

Higher costs for oil are expected to push up both rates. Anticipating the recent OPEC action allowing oil prices to rise by about 10 percent, one big investment firm raised its underlying rate forecast one point.

Most analyses from private sector economists project consumer prices as rising at about the same rate as they are now, which is about 1 percent a month. However, high interest rates, which in theory depress demand and lower prices, can contribute to them in the short run.

The most extreme consumer inflation forecast seems to be by Bert Dohmen-Ramirez, editor of the Wellington Letter, an investment advisory service. He tells subscribers to expect a 30 percent peak by mid-1981.

Q. Gold prices?

A. You can find forecasts of any price to $2,000 or so in 1981. The gold market involves serious, informed investors, investors who are properly concerned about the security of their assets.

But it also attracts those who, like primitive man, tend to worship gold as a piece of the sun. Speculators flock to gold. So do those with neurotic fears, revelations and the desire to make a quick buck.

In recent days gold has fallen to $575, a 15 percent loss in less than three weeks. But isn't gold supposed to rise during times of economic and political instability? That's the theory, but it hasn't been so.

One explanation for the decline is that instability seems to have offered even more security. That is, U.S. interest rates have risen so much that gold has been dumped in favor of a guaranteed interest yield.

Q. Home prices?

A. Median home prices are falling. The National Association of Realtors says existing single-family houses sold for $62,700 in October, $1,500 than in the previous month.

Did the decline result from high interest rates, as many believe, or was it merely a seasonal factor — the onset of bad weather? That question hasn't yet been resolved, but the guess is that, yes, those expensive buying terms have been at least a major cause of the decline.

Q. What about stocks?

A. It's confusing. The rule of thumb is that stocks fall as interest rates rise. True, the market has lost considerable ground in the past few weeks, but it remains higher on average than it was last January.

In addition, hundreds of individual stocks have doubled in the past year, and the reception for new issues have been good.

Where will stocks be going? You can take your pick. Some well-regarded analysts foresee the Dow Jones industrial average doubling over the next few years. Some well-regarded analyst see it falling sharply.

Perhaps the short-term consensus thinking is that those high and rising interest rates will make a dent. Wright Investors' Service of Bridgeport, Conn., recently told clients that it believes "most common stocks are now more than fully priced in relation to current interest rates and that a downward correction is more likely than not."

But when the so-called experts begin asking your opinion, and they are, you begin to appreciate that your guess may be as good as theirs.

NEW FACILITY — of North State Savings & Loan Corp. at the corner of Second and Washington Streets

A Ribbon Cutting Opens New Building

Ribbon cutting ceremonies marking the formal dedication and grand opening of North State Savings & Loan Corporation's new permanent office facility were held this morning.

Mayor Don McGlohon and officials of the corporation took part in the dedication activities for North State's new home office. The public was invited to attend grand opening festivities throughout the day.

North State, which recently moved into the new two-story, 6,700 square foot facility at the corner of Second and Washington Streets, occupied temporary quarters at First and Washington Streets prior to construction of the permanent site. J. H. Hudson Inc. of Greenville handled the general construction.

The building, featuring contemporary design, has been decorated in burgundy and gray. Interior decoration was handled by Michelle Arrowwood.

Parking is available at the rear and side of the facility, North State pointed out, and a drive-in window is available for customer convenience. Services offered at the new location include travelers cheques, mortgages, savings plans, interest checking and money orders.

North State is a stock savings and loan involving approximately 248 local stockholders. The state chartered firm is insured by North Carolina Savings Guaranty Corp.

Life As It's Lived

Halloween Spirit Lives On In Christmas Season

By GAIL MICHAELS

There may be only a few more days left till Christmas, but Meg is still going strong on Halloween. She wants a Dracula costume from Santa Claus. She doesn't want to hang a stocking; she wants to put up a trick-or-treat bag.

When we finally laid our shriveled jack-o-lantern to rest, I thought that I might dry her tears and shift the emphasis to the appropriate season by making Christmas cookies.

Meg agreed that this was a terrific idea. She was a little miffed by my refusal to use the witch cookie cutter, but she soon forgot her disappointment in the process of testing the cookie decorations for freshness.

She had plenty to say, however, about those cookie cutters I did plan to use. She vetoed the angel immediately.

"But she's so cute," I argued. "Why don't you like her?"

She was disgusted at my ignorance. "Angels are not cute. Angels are beautiful. In any case, I think making angel cookies is probably blasted-knee."

"What?"

"It's blasted-knee. You know, like the people who tried to build the tower of Babel, and God wouldn't let them do it because it might blast his knees."

"You mean blasphemy?" "Yes. But snowmen are all right, I think, because you can't blast their knees."

In order to keep peace on earth, I bowed to the wishes of the Bible scholar and put out only Santa Claus, a snowman, and a Christmas tree. Her ability to use these utensils was uncanny. No matter how I rolled the dough, she managed to make room for only three cookies. Any instructions I offered fell on deaf ears. The next time I'd roll the dough, plop, the cookie cutter would squelch down again right in the middle. Just to get the cookies on the cookie sheets required an hour and a half.

But the decorating was the activity at which Meg reached her creative zenith. I returned from a check on Zachary to find all the snowmen with ghoulish cinnamon grins. The Christmas trees were festooned with mounds of green and red sugar — mixed — and cinnamon faces. "Like in THE WIZARD OF OZ," Meg explained.

"Don't you think you're going a little heavy on the decorations?" I asked. "All that candy and sugar might give someone a tummy-ache."

She threw another handful of red sugar on a snowman.

"But I love it."

"Well, at least be a little more sparing with the cinnamon drops. They aren't as pretty when they come out of the oven."

Her jaw set. "I want them."

"But Meg, the cookies will look more like Halloween than like Christmas."

"I like it that way." I decided that the point was not important enough to argue. The cookies might not be pretty enough to serve guests, but she was having a good time, and that was what mattered.

I kept this in mind as the cookies came out of the oven with the decoration melted into greenish-reddish brown. "Oh, how nice," I gulped. "Yeah, they're great," Meg giggled, rubbing her hands together. "Would you like to have one now?" She looked at me in amazement. "You don't really expect me to eat these, do you?"

off. She said George just wanted to dance with her because she was a woman. She said he'd never treat a man in the office like that.

"He probably wouldn't. Did you calm her down?"

"I think I did. I explained to her that people lose their heads at Christmas office parties and they'll dance with anybody."

"Did she accept that?"

"Not really. She said she wanted to be promoted on her merits and not who she danced with. I told her if she danced with me, her reputation would be safe because I had nothing to do with promotions in Research and Development."

"Did anyone else get harassed?"

"Lots of people, but as the evening wore on no one was making a big deal of it, except Mary Kelly in Computers. She was crying because she had been with the company five years and she had never been harassed once. Then she started taking off her clothes."

"That must have lived up things."

"It had the opposite effect. Corngold in Personnel threw a tablecloth over her because he was afraid that when she sobered up she'd sue the company for a million dollars."

"But no one harassed her when she took off her clothes?"

"No, that's why he was afraid she'd sue the company."

"What time did the party break up?"

"They closed the bar at 9 o'clock. Gelman, the president, said that those who wanted to continue their harassment would have to go somewhere else or wait until next year."

"Did you strike out?"

"I'm afraid I did. By the time I made my move, anything worth harassing had been spoken for."

— not even the police — seems to have any major effect on the crime rate. The weather, economic conditions, population growth, migration patterns, social conditions, mental health — a wide number of variables beyond police control do affect crime statistics.

Also, the way crime statistics are reported changes from time to time, and as police get better education their reporting methods improve. And events in Chapel Hill illustrate how unfair the statistics can be. The local district attorney is promoting a campaign against rape: encouraging women to report all incidents and keeping the public spotlight on this crime. The likely result: more rapes reported in the statistics, even though law enforcement efforts actually mean fewer rapes are occurring.

Whitaker is working with a National Institute of Justice grant to try and develop a better method of evaluating local police departments.

Charged In Matricide

PORTSMOUTH, R.I. (AP)

A 65-year-old woman charged with strangling her mother may have cracked from years of caring for the 86-year-old woman, police say.

Marie Barboza was charged Wednesday with murdering her mother, Clara Child, with whom she shared a modest home on a quiet street.

"I think the burden was just too much," said Deputy Chief Madison Bailey, who described Mrs. Barboza as a "fine woman ... always ready to do anything for you."

"It's a complete surprise to me. ... She was very good to her mother," said the Rev. James Carey, pastor of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Fall River, which Mrs. Barboza attended regularly. "She's a very jolly, cheerful woman."

Mrs. Barboza appeared before Newport District Court Judge John J. Cappelli on the murder charge, and was ordered held without bail at the state mental hospital for psychological tests.

Police said they were called to the home by a neighbor who began to worry because she had seen neither woman for days.

Police responded and Mrs. Barboza answered the door. Her wrists had been cut, Bailey said. The body of Mrs. Child was found in a chair. She apparently had been strangled with a bathrobe cord still around her neck.

The victim's head also was badly bruised, police said. They refused to speculate as to how long she had been dead.

Copter Rescues Six Fishermen

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP)

Six fishermen were rescued by helicopter after spending three hours on a sheet of ice that broke off from the shore of Lake Winnebago.

Officer Seven Dinger of the Winnebago County Sheriff's department said the men were fishing Wednesday on the 5-inch-thick ice a mile offshore when it broke off in late morning. Spectators on shore called for help, but a rescue boat was unable to reach them.

The helicopter was called in from the Air National Guard station in West Bend, and made the rescue in early afternoon.

Concerned Over Lagging Allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unusually blunt speech, outgoing Defense Secretary Harold Brown has criticized West Germany for falling short of its goal for increased defense spending, while calling on Japan and South Korea to "shoulder their share of the responsibility for defending themselves."

Brown, in a speech to the Council on Foreign Relations Thursday, called West Germany's projections for future defense spending a "severe disappointment."

He spoke with somewhat unusual harshness, possibly because he is less than a month away from turning over his office to Caspar Weinberger, President-elect Ronald Reagan's prospective secretary of defense.

Brown made his remarks a day after the West German government announced defense spending plans for next year which Pentagon analysts said will yield only a 2.2 percent increase in "real defense outlays" after allowing for inflation.

West Germany, like the other members of the NATO alliance, pledged in 1978 to boost real growth in their military spending by 3 percent, and the United States under President Carter has been moving toward a rise of 4 percent to 5 percent annually.

"As I look to the future, I am apprehensive over national performances on the 3-percent aid, for the number of allies expected to meet that goal is declining, not increasing, as we pledged," Brown said told the council in New York. A text of the speech was made available here.

The defense secretary called West Germany "the military bellwether of the European members of the NATO alliance."

He cautioned that "a radically changing strategic situation makes even more essential the already urgent requirement for NATO to accelerate the achievement of its goals."

Earlier Thursday, State Department spokesman John Trantner said West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher "have assured us they will meet their commitments under NATO."

Orders Reduce Inmates In Jail

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge has ordered Dade County to reduce the number of inmates in its county jail to alleviate severe overcrowding, caused in a large part by an influx of Cuban refugees who subsequently were charged with crimes. U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings said Thursday the county should remove two inmates for every one it jails after Dec. 31 until the population is reduced to its official capacity of 848 inmates. On Thursday, 1,103 inmates were in the jail. "It's not that I want them to live in the Taj Mahal," Hastings said. "It is that I'm concerned that they should live in a habitable place."

Israel Will Compensate For Attack On Vessel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel has agreed to pay the United States government $6 million in compensation for an attack on a U.S. naval vessel that claimed the lives of 34 American seamen at the outbreak of the 1967 Middle East war.

On June 8, 1967, Israeli jet fighters and torpedo boats attacked the U.S.S. Liberty, which the Pentagon described as a "lightly armed electronics ship" cruising in international waters 15 miles north of the Sinai peninsula.

The United States had asked for $7.5 million in compensation, but in a settlement announced by the State Department Thursday, agreed to accept $1.5 million less.

The attack on the American ship in the Mediterranean occurred at the start of what came to be known as the Six Day War between the Israelis and their Arab neighbors.

Seventy-five American seamen were also wounded in the attack.

The day after the attack, the Israeli government apologized for what it said had been an accidental attack resulting in a "tragic loss of life" and offered to compensate the United States and the families of the casualties.

But there have been persistent allegations that the Israelis specifically targeted the ship because of its ability to intercept sensitive military communications. Among those making the allegations was crewman James M. Ennes, who recently published a book about the incident entitled "Assault on the Liberty."

"The department has no information to corroborate allegations that there was a deliberate attack or anything like that," said State Department spokesman John H. Trotter in announcing the settlement Thursday.

The U.S. Navy convened a court of inquiry to investigate the Liberty incident, but it concluded that there was insufficient information to make a judgment about the reasons for the Israeli action.

The compensation will be paid to the U.S. government.

in three annual cash installments of $2 million each.

The $6 million is in addition to compensation previously paid by Israel to individual crewmen of the Liberty or their families after claims were brought on their behalf.

In 1968, the Israeli government paid in full a U.S. claim for $3,323,500 on behalf of the families of those killed in the attack and in 1969, it paid in full a claim for $3,452,275 for injuries sustained by the crew.

Exxon Predicts Demand For Oil To Be Lower As Costs Soaring

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of oil will increase by 50 percent over the next 20 years, not counting inflation, but demand is likely to drop and petroleum should comprise a smaller part of the world's energy supply, according to an Exxon Corp. study.

New Reward For Savings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly in 1979 raised the prize money for state employees from $1,000 to $5,000 for anyone coming up with an idea that would save the state some money.

The state finally got a chance to present the award this week when a Chapel Hill woman was named the first winner of that money under the State Employee Suggestion System.

Betty C. Woods, a clerk with the Medical Faculty Practice Plan at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, received a check Thursday from Gov. Jim Hunt.

Ms. Woods recommended a new administrative procedure for handling worker compensation records. Hunt said the new system saves many hours that would be spent by secretaries, physicians and nurses in looking for and filing forms and charts.

The forecasts came Thursday in Exxon's annual publication, "World Energy Outlook," which this year included for the first time the outlook for the communist world.

Exxon said that oil's share of the total world energy supply will drop to 31 percent by 2000, compared with 47 percent last year. Coal likely will supply 28 percent of world energy needs in 2000 — up from 26 percent this year — and nuclear power's share should grow from 2 percent to 10 percent.

Synthetic fuels from coal and other substances will supply 4 percent of energy needs by 2000, up from a tiny portion now, it said.

Exxon said that, after adjusting for inflation, the price of Middle East crude oil is expected to rise about 50 percent by the end of the century. Company officials would not say how high they believe oil prices will go or what inflation rate they expect to prevail in the next two decades.

Saudi Arabia raised the price of a 42-gallon barrel of oil from $30 to $32 this week, a 140 percent increase from the January 1979 level of $13.34 and 2,270 percent up from the $1.35 price in 1970.

Exxon said that "until the early 1970s, world oil demand grew rapidly and at a rate substantially greater than that for total energy demand. But since 1973, yearly growth averaged about 2 percent."

"Over the next 20 years, oil demand is expected to increase less than 1 percent per year, well below the rate for other forms of energy," Exxon said.

Exxon said last year that oil use in the non-communist world would rise from 51 million barrels a day in 1978 to 65 million barrels daily by the end of the century.

This year, the company reduced its oil-use projection for the year 2000 to 61 million barrels a day, up 20 percent from the 51 million barrels it said will be used in 1980.

Exxon said U.S. oil use is expected to fall from 18 million to 15 million barrels a day in the period, while consumption in Europe will drop from 15 million to 13 million barrels daily.

In communist countries, oil demand is expected to rise to 16 million barrels a day from 13 million a day in 1979, Exxon said.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries now supplies more than half the oil for the industrial world, but Douglas Bryant, Exxon energy policy coordinator, said he expects "a significant decline in total exports" as cartel members need more oil for their own development.

Exxon said OPEC members and other developing countries will be using 24 million barrels of oil daily by 2000, compared with 11 million barrels a day in 1979.

In another development, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the nation's refiners delivered slightly more home heating oil and diesel fuel in November than they did a year ago, despite rising prices and an economic slump.

The industry organization said the increase — to 3.34 million barrels a day from 3.31 million a day — could have reflected increased stockpiling by wholesalers and homeowners "as a result of concerns about the impact of the Iran-Iraq war" on oil supplies.

The Energy Department says the average cost of home heating oil was 98.2 cents a gallon in September, the latest month for which figures are available. The price of home heating oil has been reported at $1.09 a gallon recently in the New York area.

Irish Guerrillas Cancel Strike

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Seven Irish guerrillas ended a 53-day hunger strike after British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher made it clear she would not give in to their demand for political prisoner status, even if they started dying.

A solidarity fast started this month by 30 other men in the Maze Prison and three women in Armagh Prison was expected to be called off today.

"We are delighted that the hunger strike is over," a government source in London said after the seven guerrillas ended their fast Thursday.

The British secretary for Northern Ireland, Humphrey Atkins, announced the end of the hunger strike by the seven and reiterated the British stand that political status will not be accorded to people convicted of violence.

But he promised a review of prison conditions, and the hunger strikers cited the pledge in a statement issued through their supporters.

Informed sources said the Catholic hierarchy, opposed to suicide as a political weapon and fearing worse violence if a hunger striker died, was responsible for ending the fast.

They said emissaries of Cardinal Tomas O Flaih, the primate of all Ireland who got a letter from Mrs. Thatcher on Wednesday reiterating there would be no concessions, had emissaries in contact with the hunger strikers and their families.

The cardinal greeted the end of the action by saying, "Thank God. The decision will be welcomed with great relief by all sections of the community."

In the Irish Republic, Prime Minister Charles Haughey said, "I now look forward to a period of reconciliation in Ireland."

The seven took salt water only and in the last days some of them could not hold even that down and were vomiting bile. The weakest of them, 26-year-old Sean McKenna, was like a "yellow skeleton," a relative said after visiting him.

A Belfast doctor who asked not to be named said the men will first be drip-fed intravenously as they would be incapable of eating.

"The trouble is that if you give them too much fluid it could cause heart damage. But if you give too little it will not revive them," he said. "McKenna, whose eyes reportedly are damaged by the fasting, could need a corneal graft to recover his eyesight."

John Yudkin, emeritus professor of nutrition at London University, said it will be several weeks before the hunger strikers are back to full strength.

"Many people have come through eight weeks of fasting with absolutely no problems at all," he said.

Yudkin said McKenna's condition was serious, but his poor eyesight was almost certainly not due to vitamin deficiency during the fast, as earlier reported, but to a general condition accentuated by the lack of food.

"Humans have enough vitamins to keep them going for months," he added.

McKenna was given three days to live before the hunger strike was called off. He is serving 25 years for attempting to kill a policeman, bombings, kidnapping and other crimes. His six comrades are serving terms ranging from 14 years to life for murder, armed robberies and other violence.

McKenna is being treated in a hospital in Musgrove Park where he "can get the best treatment we can provide in Northern Ireland," Britain's minister for Northern Ireland said.

The other six men are being treated in the hospital at the Maze, a top security prison laid out to confine terrorists on the site of a World War II American air base, 15 miles south of Belfast.

Six of the seven hunger strikers belonged to the Irish Republican Army and one to a splinter group, the Irish National Liberation Army, both mainly Roman Catholic. They want to end British rule in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland and reunite it with the Catholic majority Irish Republic. The 11-year conflict has cost 2,066 lives known to the police.

Evacuate Residents In Rest Home Blaze

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Eighty-two residents of Tri-City Haven were evacuated, some carried in chairs and others riding the arms of rescuers, by rescue workers and Red Cross volunteers Thursday as fire heavily damaged the rest home.

Operators of the home said there were no injuries among the occupants. Several firemen, however, required first-aid for minor smoke inhalation while fighting the fire.

"They did a super job getting all the people out of there," fire marshal Reed Jarvis said, singling out employees of the home for praise.

Jarvis said Forsyth County firemen and those from five volunteer units were able to concentrate their efforts on the blaze because the building had been evacuated so quickly.

"From that point, it was just an ordinary fire; get to the seat of it and put it out," he said.

Damage to the home, estimated at $150,000 by administrator A.S. Pearce, was confined to the south wing of the building. Pearce said the fire was believed to have started in a closet.

"A closet full of clothing —

PCCHOLIDAYS Christmas and New Year holidays were announced recently by Pitt Community College officials.

Holidays will begin for the students and faculty after classes December 19 and continue until January 5, when classes will reconvene. The college will observe the same holidays with the exception of December 29, 30 and 31, at which time the administrative offices will be open.

DINNER MEETING Loving Union Tent No. 464 will have its last meeting of this year along with a covered-dish supper. The meeting will be held tonight at 7:30. All members are asked to bring a prepared dish.

it was burning real forcefully when the fire alarm went off," Pearce said. An investigation was under way to determine the cause of the fire, he said.

Mildred Utt, manager of the nursing home, said she discovered the fire.

"I had been downstairs looking after a resident who was ill," she said. "As I started back to my office, the smoke was coming out of one of the rooms. I immediately went to the phone and pulled the alarm as I went."

Mrs. Utt and other employees of the center organized evacuation teams immediately, initially moving the home's residents into the hall and later outside, where they huddled in blankets to fend off a chilly December wind.

Most of the home's elderly residents were taken to a Red Cross shelter.

Auto Production, Layoffs Drop

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s shutdown through Jan. 12 of three of its six domestic assembly plants and component factories has pushed up auto industry indefinite layoffs again this week.

The five major producers said Thursday they had 188,250 workers idle without a recall date, compared with 182,525 last week. Chrysler's production cutbacks boosted the company's total from 38,800 to 44,700.

Chrysler's list of those sent home temporarily also rose, from 13,600 to 32,600.

Almost all other plants in the industry will work only Tuesday and Wednesday next week, reopening Jan. 5 after the usual holiday break.

Meanwhile, car production this week will total 130,350, a 14 percent decline from last week's 151,778 and a 13 percent increase from the 114,900 built in the same week last year, according to the trade publication Ward's Automotive Reports.

General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. both reported long-term layoffs unchanged, with 89,000 at GM and 50,000 at Ford.

GM idled 4,100 workers at the Wilmington, Del. car assembly plant earlier this week for installation of a new paint system and will send home 850 more next week for construction at the Fremont, Calif., truck line. Two other plants being retooled had 7,100 temporary furloughs.

Ford's only closed assembly operation this week and next is the car line at San Jose, Calif.

Chrysler's "K-car" assembly plants at Newark, Del., and Detroit and the subcompact plant at Belvidere, Ill., have a total 14,100 on temporary layoff. Chrysler said it would slow production at Belvidere from 1,224 Plymouth Horizon-Dodge Omni models a day to 960 when production resumes, adding 790 more workers to long-term layoff.

American Motors Corp. reported indefinite layoffs down slightly from 4,725 to 4,550 through attrition — that is, retirements, re-employment and exhaustion of eligibility for company benefits.

AMC said it would stop car production at Kenosha, Wis., after Friday to hold down inventory. The 5,900 workers will return Jan. 12.

Volkswagen of America had no layoffs.

U.S. truck production this week was slated at 41,267, 4.8 percent more than last week's 39,388 but 16 percent under the 49,198 built in the 1979 week.

With two working days left after Saturday, the year's production was put at 6,328,637 cars, a 25 percent drop from the comparable 1979 figure of 8,485,237, and 1,581,446 trucks, down 47 percent from 2,998,777.

The total of 7,910,083 vehicles — compared with 11,494,014 in the same part of 1979 — makes this the worst production year since the early 1960s. The 1980 total will fall between the 6.6 million of 1961 and the 8.2 million of 1963.

In Canada, car plants scheduled 17,018 cars this week, up 9.3 percent from last week's 15,573 and down

7.3 percent from 18,353 built in the same week last year. That would bring the year's total through Saturday to 840,337, off 15 percent from 987,910.

Canadian plants planned

13,154 trucks, up 1.7 percent from 12,929 last week and up 18 percent from the 11,150 assembled in the same week last year. Cumulative production was put at 525,042 compared to 645,039.

Nomination Of Haig Stirs Interest In Tapes

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander M. Haig's nomination as secretary of state is rekindling congressional interest in the famous Watergate tapes from Richard M. Nixon's White House.

With the Senate Foreign Relations Committee preparing to conduct Haig's confirmation hearing next year, sources at the National Archives said Thursday there have been a number of "requests from Capitol Hill" to listen to tapes of conversations between Nixon and Haig that never have been made public.

"We've been contacted by the (Foreign Relations) Committee," said one official at the Archives, where 6,000 hours of tapes from the Nixon presidency are in storage, said one official.

Apparently it was aides to Democrats on the committee who were inquiring about the tapes, since a spokesman for Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the panel's incoming chairman "hasn't asked for them and at this point doesn't intend to right now."

The tapes are in the custody of the National Archives under federal law, and it would take either a court order or permission from Nixon himself for members of Congress to gain access to them.

Haig, nominated this week by President-elect Ronald Reagan, has said he is prepared to answer any questions congressmen have about his service during the Nixon administration. Nixon himself is said to have assured Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, that there is nothing on the tapes that would damage Haig.

In addition, James A. Baker III, Reagan's chief of staff, has said Reagan would not object to having the tapes made public.

Haig was Nixon's chief of staff for the final 14 months of his administration. Democrats have made it clear they intend to use his confirmation hearing to raise questions about Haig's role in Watergate and several other controversial aspects of Nixon's presidency.

While several of Nixon's tapes were turned over to Congress and Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski during their investigation of Watergate, the bulk of the recordings have never been heard.

Presumably, there are several recordings of Nixon and Haig between early June, 1973, when Haig was named White House chief of staff, and mid-July, when Nixon's secret taping system was turned off.

At least one Republican senator is interested in hearing any tapes involving Nixon and Haig, Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut said through an aide he is ready to go to court, if necessary, to gain access to the tapes.

"I know he's definitely interested in listening to those tapes," said Marty Moore, a spokesman for Weicker. The Connecticut Republican is not a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, but did serve on the old Senate committee that investigated Watergate. He has asked two lawyers to look into Haig's role in Watergate.

'Regrets' If Feel Hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Bailey Smith says that if he had it to do again he would not have commented on the noses and prayers of Jews. But he says that does not change his "distinctive theological beliefs," including the belief that God does not hear Jews' prayers.

Smith, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, held a lengthy meeting Thursday with Jewish leaders of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith to discuss his comments that have prompted dismay among some members of the Jewish community.

In August, at a national political-religious meeting in Dallas, Smith said God did not hear the prayers of Jews. A few weeks later, he said Jews have "funny noses." He apologized for the later remark.

After Thursday's meeting, Nathan Perlmutter, league national director, said he was satisfied that Smith had "no anti-Semitic intent" when he made his remarks.

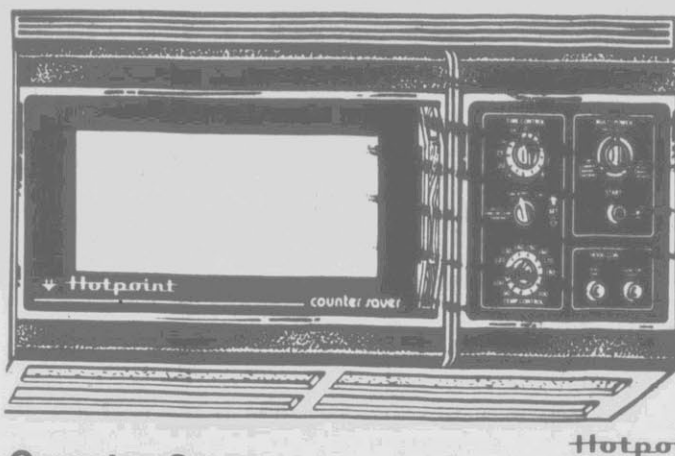

He added that he did not agree with Smith's religious beliefs, saying, "That's why he's a Baptist and I'm a Jew."

In a joint statement issued after the meeting, Smith, who is also pastor of First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., said he "expressed deep regret for any hurt to the Jewish community and stands with them for an American pluralistic society and against anti-Semitism."

But he said he had "distinctive theological beliefs that he cannot compromise."

Preparing Cross-Examine Garwood's Psychiatrist

By BILL WERONKA
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Prosecutors in the court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood took time out Thursday to prepare for their cross-examination to-day of the first defense witness in the case.

Garwood, 34, is accused of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

The government was to question Dr. Emmanuel Tanay, a psychiatrist from Grosse Point, Mich., Thursday. But when court reconvened Thursday morning, prosecutors successfully argued that they should be allowed to view video tapes of two interviews that Tanay conducted with Garwood last May.

Military judge Col. R.E. Switzer granted the request, noting that Tanay based part of his testimony on the interviews.

Switzer said later he granted the request because the rules of evidence under military law require that if psychiatrists, in an opinion, rely on a statement, the the government has a right to see that statement. Switzer said most psychiatrists put the statements, dealing with interviews, in written form, but Tanay used video tapes.

"He then talked about them and that entitles the government to look at them," Switzer said.

The court recessed about 9 a.m. Thursday and was supposed to reconvene in the afternoon. But Switzer said the machine prosecutors were viewing the tapes on broke down and had to be replaced by one borrowed from a local furniture store. Because of the delay, court was recessed until this morning.

But there was even some question about that, and Switzer had considered recessing court until Jan. 3 because Tanay was scheduled to deliver a lecture in Detroit today and chief defense attorney John Lowe wanted to return to Charlottesville, Va., where his wife is undergoing minor surgery. But both were told to postpone their plans.

Tanay's testimony Wednesday brought into focus the defense Garwood's lawyers are building.

Tanay testified that from the "moment of his capture" in Vietnam, Garwood suffered from a "post-traumatic stress disorder," a condition that can transform a person into a child-like state. The disorder also is known as the KZ or Concentration Camp Syndrome.

"He (Garwood) suffered an absolute psychic trauma — the kind of experience no human being, no matter how resistant or strong, could survive without suffering traumatic neurosis," said Tanay, who was a himself a POW in a German concentration camp during World War II.

Tanay, who has studied mental problems of survivors of World War II concentration camps and Vietnam prisons, said, "The mind is designed to handle experiences. When the experiences are too intense for that particular person, we have mental injury."

"Mr. Garwood regressed to the level of functioning as a child; that is, the only important thing was to get food and survive. It was a psychiatric protective device to be Vietnamese," Tanay said, referring to testimony that Garwood acted as a guard, interrogator and interpreter for the Vietnamese and bragged about being an officer in the North Vietnamese army.

"That accounts for the fact that he even now, when under stress, adopts a Vietnamese accent. They (his actions in Vietnam) did help him to survive. It's quite possible that without them he would be dead," Tanay said.

Tanay also testified that Garwood's personal background made him more susceptible to the disorder. The Adams, Ind., native was an emotionally troubled youth, Tanay said, who came from a broken home. His mother abandoned him at an early age and he was pushed into the Marine Corps by a punitive father, Tanay said.

"Emotionally, he was run over by a truck," Tanay said. "Then the truck backed up a few times."

The psychiatrist said Garwood was emotionally immature when he joined the Marine Corps and his capture in an alien country only worsened his problems.

Tanay also testified that, in a recent interview, Garwood was "suicidally depressed" and in a "state of siege" because of the legal proceedings.

"He felt killing himself wouldn't mean death but meant he would be at peace," Tanay said.

Switzer said during the recess Thursday that Tanay's testimony was not unexpected, but the fact that the psychiatrist linked the post-traumatic stress disorder to Garwood so early in his capture was a bit of a surprise.

Switzer said the defense was not new and had been used successfully in a recent case where a Vietnam veteran was acquitted of a shooting incident because he flashed back to stressful experience in Vietnam. Switzer said the disorder has been linked to former POWs and veterans at a later period, usually years after the incident. But linking the disorder to Garwood from the moment of his capture is something new.

Tanay said during his interviews with the defendant,

Garwood described his capture in detail. Garwood, a jeep driver in Vietnam before his capture, said he was surrounded by Viet Cong before he was aware of their presence. Tanay said Garwood had a preconceived notion of how the Viet Cong treated prisoners and prayed he would be killed. Tanay said Garwood told him he was shot in the forearm as he dived under the jeep and tried to dig into the sand.

After he was captured, he was bound and marched to a Vietnamese camp. Along the way he was humiliated by peasants who beat him with sticks. After arriving at his first prison camp, he was put in a hole by himself.

"I don't think anyone could dream up in fiction anything more traumatic than what I have described here," Tanay said.

And when asked by defense attorneys if he believed Garwood, Tanay said, "Yes. He was describing the incident with great feeling. I don't think he has the intellect or the talent to make it up."

Defense attorneys argued unsuccessfully Wednesday to have the video tapes shown in court.

Writings Of Adventist Founder Stirs Friction

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The spirit is not given, nor can ever be bestowed to supersede the Bible."
So wrote the late Ellen G. White, a founder of the Seventh-day Adventist Church and regarded as conveying in her writings the spirit of prophecy. But two penalized ministers say her authority gradually has been elevated to a level with Scripture.

Conflict about it, surging in several independent Adventist journals, has shot tremors through the academic-ministerial ranks of the generally calm denomination, with its far-flung missions and medical work and emphasis on the early return of Christ.

"It's a traumatic experience," says the Rev. Raymond Cottrell of Calimesa, Calif., one of the church's leading Bible scholars. "There's been nothing in the past 75 years to match it."

In some ways, the friction over it resembles that of the Protestant Reformation which nearly five centuries ago declared its adherence to "Scripture alone" in defiance of Rome's insistence also on church tradition.

Officially, like the rest of Protestantism, Adventism regards the Bible as "the only rule of faith and practice." But Cottrell says most church scholars recognize that the sway of Mrs. White's writings has become enlarged since her death in 1915.

"But she herself definitely repudiated any such tendency," he says.

The issue came to a head in the withdrawal of the ministerial credentials of an influential church theologian, Desmond Ford of New Castle, Calif., and long-time minister Walter Rea of Arcadia, Calif.

"As loyal Adventists, we are to believe the Bible and the Bible alone," says Ford, defrocked for challenging some of Mrs. White's concepts. "But the church has gotten away from that and that's tragic."

The Australian-born Ford, 51, with doctorates from universities in this country and England, says Mrs. White's writing is being "almost substituted for the Bible."

"This is not the official position, but it has become the practical position and the impression in the congregations," he says. "Her teachings are being wrongly used as a basis of doctrine, as if she was infallible. She never claimed either, and opposed both."

Rea, 58, previously minister of a Long Beach, Calif., congregation and a noted researcher into Mrs. White's writing, was defrocked for publicly reporting that much of her work was copied from others.

The extent of the copying, including material "at the heart of her theology," has been played down and "kept away from the laity," he says. Also, he says, her authority in effect has been made "equal to the Bible."

"What she says must now be accepted even if it's not in the Bible," he adds. "This has never happened before. Many ministers are frightened and some talk of 'going underground'."

We want to put Christ back in the center, but Mrs. White has now been made the center." Church officials deny this and acknowledge that Mrs. White, a voluminous writer, used some "words and phrases" from others but that this "does not negate her inspiration."

Yes. We have a Christmas Angel living at our house. And most of the excitement of this joyous season revolves around her.

Of course, she is not an angel most of the time. She is a very special little girl — very special because we love her.

At church this Christmas she'll be one of the "angels" singing to the shepherds the joyous news of Jesus' birth.

We are glad the church has become an important part of her life. That's where she has learned that she is very special to God.

So are we all!

The joy of Christmas at our house . . . and in God's House . . . begins with the realization that Jesus was born because God so loved the world.

Services Planned At Jarvis

A traditional love feast and candlelight service will be held at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Moravian buns will be passed to the congregation and are being home cooked by the Jarvis Church members, using the traditional Moravian recipe.

The love feast originated in the Moravian Church, based in Winston-Salem of which many elements of the Sunday service have been borrowed. The service will open with a program of carols and scripture readings. A highlight will be Handel's Messiah "Glory to God" sung by the Jarvis Memorial Chancel Choir.

A candlelight service will follow in which a light is taken from the Christ Candle, representing Jesus Christ, the Light of the World. Each person is given a candle which is lighted, in turn, signifying the participation in spreading and reflecting that light.

A nursery will be provided. The public is invited to attend.

Prior to the service, at 7 p.m., the youth of Jarvis Memorial Church will present a live Nativity Scene in the church parking lot. Live animals are included in the tableau and a musical score will narrate the story of Christmas. The scene recalls the stable in which Jesus was born and laid in a manger.

Adventist.....

(Continued from Page 14) but that she is widely considered an arbiter for interpreting the Bible. Ford had challenged a teaching of Mrs. White, drawn from an interpretation of Daniel 8:14.

The doctrine holds that Christ, instead of returning in 1844 as the church's antecedent believers had expected, had at that time entered a heavenly sanctuary to begin "investigative judgment" of individual lives prior to his return.

That belief is a main theological distinction between Adventism and the rest of Protestantism.

"It's not Biblically supported, and this is well known among Adventist scholars, but talk about it is kept mostly in the safety of privacy," he says. "The truth about it is going to get out more and more. Ministers around the world are ready to pull out if it's demanded that they teach things they no longer believe."

"I have great respect for Mrs. White, but object to misuse of her as a source of doctrine... She was a very open woman, quite a rebel in her own way. She was a loving and lovable Christian who refused to decide doctrine. She said don't depend on my writings, go to the Bible."

Basically, some church scholars see the dispute as stemming from a 1966 decision of the church general conference, implemented in 1969, by which administrators would determine theology, not Bible scholars.

Under this "paternalistic policy," says Cottrell, "Bible scholars have not been able to work together effectively to provide the church with a consensus on the basis of which the administration can make decisions."

Issues raised by Rea and Ford have been known to scholars for several years, he says, and "need careful consideration," but most scholars don't agree with the tactic of arguing the issues publicly.

"They believe in working behind the scenes in accomplishing what needs to be done, without splitting the church and confronting people with problems not yet sufficiently discussed."

Association Has Awards Banquet

KINSTON — The third annual Eastern Hunter Association awards banquet was held recently at Walnut Creek Country Club.

The association is a horse show circuit made up of members from all over eastern North Carolina. Participating Greenville stables include Ramhorn Stables, Hobby Hill, Hayfield Farm and various individual members.

The EHA circuit has ten shows yearly in which riders receive ribbons and points. The year end awards are based on the total points accumulated during the entire year.

Champion and reserve champion awards are given in each division. Area winners are as follows:

Small and Medium Pony Division: Grand Champion, "Famley Collop," ridden by Missy Daughtry; Hayfield Farm, Ayden.

Short Stirrup Division: Reserve Grand Champion, Allyson Maloney riding "Little Miss Fancy"; Hobby Hill Stable, Greenville.

The Eastern Hunter Association invites participation during the 1981 show circuit year. Inquiries may be made through the secretary Mrs. Donna Daughtry, Rt. 2, Box 665, Ayden, N.C. The circuit will begin its 1981 season in March.

a large extent for the past 10 years, which has tended to polarize the administration from the Adventist academic community. But we hope the situation will be temporary.

"Biblical studies have advanced to a place of highly specialized skills. Basically, what we have now is the old 'town versus gown' problem. When people without specialized training try to do theology, it's about the same as if people who don't know electronics were put in charge of NASA."

Daily Blackouts Cause Real Chaos For Bogota

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer
BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)

— Rush hour traffic is chaotic and burglaries and street muggings are on the rise in Bogota because of daily 3½-hour blackouts imposed by the city's power company.

The rotating blackouts began this month and will last at least through April 1982, Colombia's minister of mines and energy, Humberto Avila, said in a speech. Unofficially, sources within the Electric Power Co. of Bogota the blackouts could continue until the end of 1983.

About five years ago, when Colombia had a severe shortage of both natural and propane, the government encouraged everyone to switch to electric power.

In addition, the population of this capital city has grown from about 3 million people in 1968 to about 5 million today, much faster than anyone had expected, and power needs have escalated accordingly.

The power company has been unable to handle rising demand. Aggravating the problem are several big hydroelectric projects running far behind schedule, Avila said.

The Soviet Union has offered to finance Urrea, one of the hydroelectric projects, which is expected to cost about $400 million. The Colombian government has not commented publicly on the offer. But even if Urrea were finished, the power crunch would remain severe.

So the city is now left without power during periods of highest normal use — two hours every morning between 7 a.m. and noon, 90 minutes in the evening between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. No power is cut on Sundays.

The enforced outages are saving 25 megawatts of power, Avila said, which is a reduction of about 3 percent in metropolitan power use.

Residents in high-rise apartment buildings suffer the most. Most buildings have emergency power to operate their elevators, but few have independent generators to pump water. Because water pressure is not sufficient to supply the high-rises directly from the streets, residents go without water during the blackouts.

Dinner schedules have to be pushed up or moved back, and chores requiring electrical equipment have to be finished before 6 p.m. in homes with an electric kitchen.

Even before the mandated power outages began, residents of Bogota had coped with two months of rolling, 45-minute blackouts every evening.

Bogota's rush-hour traffic, which had already bordered on pandemonium with motorists driving down sidewalks to bypass clogged streets, running red lights and frequently turning across two or three lanes of one-way traffic, has become a nightmare with the blackouts.

Traffic accidents have increased 38 percent during blackout hours when traffic lights stand dark, the director of statistics for Bogota's traffic department, Juan Carlos Murcia, told The Associated Press.

Frustrated drivers are seen throwing punches and, on occasion, waving pistols. Thousands of people connected with Colombia's multi-billion dollar illegal drug business live here, and a popular saying is that such Colombians feel more naked without their guns than they would without pants.

Pickpockets, stickup men and burglars are keying on blackout areas, but it is too early to say just how much of an increase in crime there has been, said one police official, who requested anonymity.

Companies that sell burglar alarms, lanterns and the Spanish-style wrought iron grills that fit over windows say they have been doing brisk business since the blackouts began.

Movie theater owners complain they are losing thousands of dollars because the blackouts come in prime movie-going time.

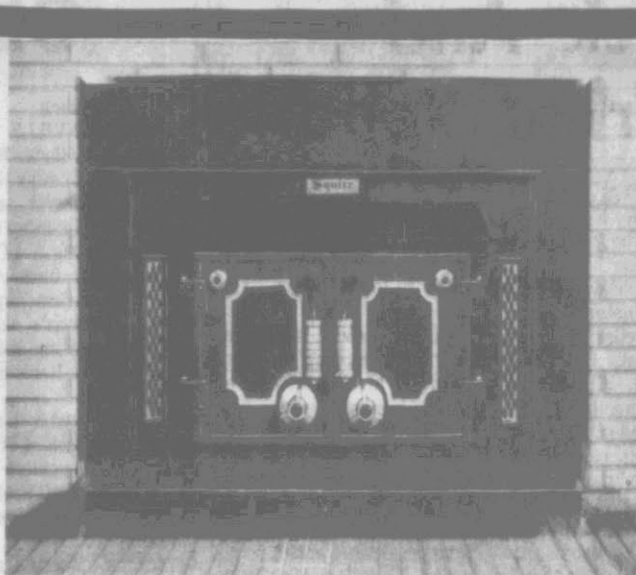

The blackouts do not include the southern industrial sector of the city, but Avila said those areas may have to be included, too, if energy savings are not sufficient in the rest of Bogota.

Keep Things Simple Advised

Dr. Robert R. Ratcliffe, medical director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, will be guest Sunday at 10:12 a. m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCT radio. He will talk with program interviewer, Nancy M. Middleton, about how to make the holiday season a positive time.

According to Ratcliffe, people are no more depressed at Christmas than at other times. "Christmas blues" may occur, he said, but clinical depression is actually no more acute at holiday time. One should consider his normal happiness and not try too hard to be happier at Christmas.

Normal stresses of the holiday season such as shopping, going to parties, and entertaining may cause anxiety, so he suggests that we keep things simple, be able to say no, and be realistic in our expectations for both ourselves and others. We cannot program happiness for others, and we should approach the season by doing what we really want to do and not let others program our expectations and happiness, he suggests.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, leveling off after the rally of the past couple of sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 18.60 points in the last three trading days, rose another 1.71 to 931.91 in the first half hour today.

Losers held a slight edge on gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The recent upswing in the market has been attributed largely to hopes that interest rates might soon peak. Those hopes were still alive today, analysts said, but they were moderated by a couple of developments.

Donald Regan, the Treasury secretary, designate for the Reagan administration, told reporters he believed the rise of rates "hasn't topped yet."

As if to underscore that message, New York's Citibank raised its prime lending rate this morning from 21 to 21½ percent, a record high.

Today's early prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, off ¼ at 48½; General Motors, up ¼ at 41¼, and Standard Oil of Indiana, down ¼ at 85¼.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.70 to 930.20.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 69.57 million shares, the fifth largest total in exchange history.

The NYSE's composite index added .27 to 76.40.

Let's Talk Real Estate

by Connally Branch

When selling your house, you certainly do not want to be plagued by people who are not really interested. There are people who entertain themselves by looking at houses that are for sale. There are also people who are just looking with little idea of what they really want. If your home is on the market, time should be spent entertaining only those people who are seriously interested in buying a house. They should also be seriously interested in homes similar to the one you have for sale. Insure yourself at getting qualified prospective buyers by working through a broker who will pre-screen buyers before making an appointment.

ECU Nips Indiana

From Staff & Wire Reports

CHAPEL HILL — With six seconds left reserve center Mary Denkler hit a follow shot to give East Carolina a 59-58 win over Indiana in the opening round of the Carolina Christmas Classic.

The win advanced the Lady Pirates, now 5-1, to the semifinal round (7 p.m.) against the Polish National Team, a 64-51 victor over Pittsburgh yesterday. Denkler, who led all scorers with 17 points, netted the Lady Pirates' final seven points as they rallied from a 47-41 deficit in the closing minutes.

Last Second Bucket Puts Pirates In Semifinals

The rally was also aided by all-america candidate Kathy Riley. After going scoreless in the first half, Riley poured in 12 second-half points.

After ECU led, 29-25, at half, Indiana's Kim Land got hot and led the Hoosiers to a 47-41 lead with seven minutes left in the game.

East Carolina chipped away at the lead and caught Indiana at 50-50 on a Sam Jones' free throw with 3½ minutes to go.

Indiana, however, regained the lead and maintained it until Denkler's follow shot. With time running out Riley rebounded a missed Laurie Sikes' shot but threw up a miss herself. Denkle then grabbed the rebound and put it back in for the winner.

The game started off with both teams ice cold. Five and a half minutes into the game the score was tied at 2-2. There were a total of 51 turnovers in the game, 27 for the Hoosiers and 24 for the Lady Pirates.

Down the stretch the Pirates worked the ball inside to Denkler and center Marcia Givren to get the Hoosiers in foul trouble. In the final three minutes 6-4 center Sue Hodges and 6-1 Julie Jackson fouled out of the contest.

Indiana is 6-4 now and will play Pittsburgh in the losers bracket today.

ECU Signs 2 More Players

East Carolina University head football coach Ed Emory announced the signing of two Goldsboro High School players to grants-in-aid yesterday afternoon.

James Bunn, a 5-11, 180-pound running back, and Craig Brown, a 6-2, 185-pound quarterback, mark the 11th and 12th players signed thus far by Emory.

Bunn and Brown led Goldsboro High to a tie for the conference championship this year with an 11-2 record. Goldsboro tied with Jacksonville for the league title. In 1979, Bunn and Brown started on a team that finished 8-2.

For three years, Bunn started at Goldsboro, making all-conference as a junior and senior and second team all-East this year. Bunn is the all-time leading rusher for Goldsboro High.

In addition to football, Bunn is a division, conference and sectional champion in wrestling as well as a state qualifier in the 440 and several relay teams in track.

Brown moved from safety as a junior to quarterback this year and won all-conference and all-East honors in the new position. He threw for over 1,000 yards and had 13 touchdowns via the air. As a safety in 1979, Brown was

No. 10 LSU Bombs New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Senior forward Durand Macklin sat out most of the first half because of foul trouble, but he exploded for 15 second-half points to lead 10th-ranked Louisiana State University to a runaway 96-66 victory over the University of New Orleans in a college basketball game Thursday night.

Macklin scored LSU's first three points of the game, then almost immediately went to the sideline with his third personal foul. "Dumb fouls," LSU Coach Dale Brown said after the game. Macklin agreed.

LSU led 42-30 at halftime but blew the game open in the first four minutes of the second half.

New Orleans came down the court six times without getting a shot off immediately after intermission. The Privateers turned the ball over three times on bad passes, twice on traveling calls and once on a 5-second violation.

When New Orleans finally got a shot at the basket, it was slapped back by LSU's 6-foot-10 center Greg Cook.

With four minutes elapsed in the second half, Oscar Taylor finally bounced a tip off LSU's John Tudor for his team's first points after the break. Taylor finished the game with 27 points to lead all scorers.

LSU is now 5-1 for the season while New Orleans is 1-1.

New Orleans used to be a satellite campus of the LSU system, but attained its independence six seasons ago. The two schools are not scheduled to play again.

Brown said he's pleased to be nationally ranked for the third straight year.

"But I'd really like to be ranked first on April 1," he said.

"In the past, it was much more important for us, because of recruiting and things like that. It's still fun, but I don't get as excited about it as I used to."

He said that he has had to change the strategy for motivating his team to play less widely acclaimed schools, since he is getting into the Top 10.

"I used to be on the other side of the ledger," he said.

"I used to tell the team that David and Goliath wasn't just a myth."

DECK YOUR HALLS.

If your holiday plans include adding a new deck to your system, consider the JVC KD-A33. It's got everything you need, for less than you'd expect to pay.

Cassette recordings sound better on JVC's metal compatible decks. SA (Sendust alloy) heads are perfect for recording and erasing metal tapes, and Super ANRS combines noise reduction and headroom extension, for incredible sound.

But there's lots more. Solenoid controls, activated by a light touch eliminate stiff, mechanical switches. And with such extra features as Record Mute, Timer Standby, and dual VU meters, the KD-A33 is loaded. It's even ready for the remote control option.

This holiday season, why not deck your halls (and the rest of your home) with sound that's priceless. At a price that's sound.

BYU To Test #17 Illinois In Volunteer Classic Tonight

By The Associated Press
Lou Henson doesn't know if his Illinois basketball team measures up to its No. 17 ranking, but he'll get some indication tonight when the Illini meets another Top Twenty club in the Volunteer Classic in Knoxville, Tenn.

Henson's Big Ten power faces 18th-ranked Brigham

Young in the tournament opener before host Tennessee plays Iowa.

"Brigham Young is a super team," says Henson. "I'd rate them above Missouri and Marquette. They're huge."

As for his team's Top Twenty stature:

"It's nice to be ranked but I don't think it's good for your ranking to get ahead of your team. I feel like we are a pretty good ballclub but we can do a lot better. We need to come along and improve defensively and offensively and take care of the ball a little better."

The Illini is undefeated in four games while BYU, of the Western Athletic Conference, has a 5-1 record.

The Volunteer Classic is one of many holiday tourneys across the country starting tonight.

Among others, top-ranked DePaul will play in the Chicagoand Classic; No. 2 Wake Forest will see action in the Cable Car Classic and No. 13 Texas A&M will compete in the Virginia Tech Invitational.

BYU Hopes Holiday Puts End To Streak

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pass-happy Brigham Young, stinging from four straight bowl defeats, throws uncanny quarterback Jim McMahon at Southern Methodist tonight in a Holiday Bowl battle of wild and woolly offenses.

The game, rated close to a tossup, will be televised regionally on a delayed basis. A near-sellout is expected at the 52,000-seat San Diego Stadium for the 6 p.m. PST match pitting the Western Athletic Conference champions against the the Southwest Conference co-runnerup.

Only a junior, the 6-foot-1 McMahon will be concluding the greatest single season ever by a college quarterback. By completing 64 percent of his passes, he broke 26 NCAA offensive records, including 4,571 passing yards and 47 touchdown throws.

SMU Coach Ron Meyer says flatly that McMahon is the closest quarterback he's seen to Bob Griese, the former Purdue great.

"You don't stop Jim McMahon," said Meyer. "We're just trying to hold him to 200 or 300 yards maybe."

McMahon averaged 444 yards passing in Brigham Young's last 11 games — all victories — with a season high of 545 in a 70-46 rout of Utah State.

"We're hoping if we mix up our coverages enough and get some heat on him, we might confuse him once or twice and intercept a few," said Meyer.

For McMahon, it's the chance he's been waiting for.

Two years ago, after guiding Brigham Young to another WAC title, he brooded on the bench when Marc Wilson started against Navy in the first Holiday Bowl.

"I was disappointed, I thought I should have been the one," said McMahon.

Cougar Coach LaVell Anderson leaves no doubt about BYU's strategy.

"We might run it a time or two so we can say we established our ground game but I have a hunch we'll have the ball in the air most of the time," he said.

Southern Methodist counters with one of the nation's deepest sophomore-dominated squads.

Sophomore tailbacks Craig James and Eric Dickerson, who both gained nearly 1,000 yards while alternating at the position, scored 11 of the Mustangs' 18 rushing touchdowns. Freshman quarterback Lance McIlhenny directed SMU to four victories in its last five games.

On defense, Southern Methodist starts six sophomores and a junior on a unit that forced 19 interceptions, blocked six kicks and recovered 18 fumbles.

Ali To Return — Again?

NEW YORK (AP) — Not wanting to retire and leave boxing fans with the memory of Larry Holmes, Muhammad Ali says he is going back in the ring to fight European heavyweight champion John L. Gardner.

Ali, who has held the world heavyweight title an unprecedented three times, said Thursday in London: "If you judged all fighters on one performance, you would have to stop a whole lot of them from fighting." He was referring to his loss to World Boxing Council champion Holmes on Oct. 2, a bout in which Ali lost every round and did not answer the bell for the 11th.

Harold Smith, president of Muhammad Ali Professional Sports, Inc., told The Associated Press by telephone from Los Angeles that Ali "has asked me to make the fight."

"This is Ali's fight," he added. "If the fight is made, it will take place the first week in March ... in one of three places — Kingston, Jamaica; the Bahamas, or Puerto Rico. It definitely won't be in the United States, mainly because the media in the United States would be hard on Ali."

There has been a general consensus in the United States that Ali should retire.

In Chicago, Herbert

Muhammad, Ali's manager, said there have been negotiations for a fight with Gardner but "Ali has not signed and I have not signed, and I have exclusive rights."

British promoter Mickey Duff said from Las Vegas, Nev., that he is Gardner's manager and that Gardner had not signed a contract but had signed a letter of intent with Smith to fight Ali.

Ali, in London to promote his film "Freedom Road," which already has been shown on American television, explained that he wanted to set even more records in the ring.

"I want to go on because I'm the only man in the history of the sport with the chance of winning the heavyweight title for a fourth time," Ali said. "I had one bad fight against Holmes because I had taken the wrong pills for a thyroid condition. Let me fight Gardner, and I say that if I lose or look bad beating him, I will get out of boxing."

Ali also denied he was having a speech problem after the British Broadcasting Corp. decided not to broadcast a taped interview the 36-year-old Ali made with veteran interviewer Roy Plomley.

Playoffs Berths To Be Decided

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

After 15 weeks of bumping heads, the American Football Conference finally decides who will go to the National Football League playoffs.

While all five National Conference playoff berths have been clinched, seven AFC teams are in the running for its five playoff positions.

The final weekend of the regular season gets under way Saturday with four teams who can't make the playoffs, including a unique announcer-less contest in Miami's Orange Bowl between the Dolphins and the New York Jets. The other contest pits the Chicago Bears against Tampa Bay.

Sunday, Cleveland is at Cincinnati, Denver travels to Seattle, Baltimore hosts Kansas City, Atlanta is at Los Angeles, Green Bay goes to Detroit, Philadelphia is at Dallas, Washington travels to St. Louis, Buffalo is at San Francisco, Minnesota is at Houston, New England travels to New Orleans and the New York Giants host Oakland.

The regular season ends Monday night with Pittsburgh at San Diego.

The Jets, 3-12, are going after their sixth straight victory over Miami, 8-7. And the game will be a first in television history as NBC will have neither a play-by-play announcer or a "color man" there.

Chicago running back Walter

Payton will be after his fifth consecutive NFC rushing title when the Bears, 6-9, meet the Bucs, 5-9-1. Payton leads the NFC with 1,330 yards on 288 carries.

On Sunday, the fun begins for the AFC playoff picture.

If Buffalo, 10-5, beats San Francisco, 6-9, or if both Buffalo and New England lose, the Bills win the AFC East. If New England, 9-6, topples the Saints, 1-14, and Buffalo loses, then the Patriots are the division champions because of a better division record.

Now come the complications.

If Buffalo does not win the AFC East, it can get a wild card berth if either Cleveland, Houston, San Diego or Oakland lose. New England can be a wild card if it wins and either San Diego or Cleveland loses.

In the AFC Central, if Cleveland, 10-5, downs Cincinnati, 6-9, the Browns win the title. If Cleveland loses, Houston wins, regardless of how the Oilers fare against Minnesota.

Houston, 10-5, can clinch a wild card by beating Minnesota, 9-6. Cleveland and Houston are assured of at least a wild card if New England loses.

Pittsburgh can be a wild card if New England loses, Cleveland and Houston win and the Steelers, 9-6, beat San Diego, 10-5.

ECU Signs Two...

"I feel that Craig Brown is just an outstanding athlete," said Emory. "He has outstanding speed and has been a real fine leader for Goldsboro."

"James Bunn is one of the premier backs in the state. Being the all-time rusher at Goldsboro High speaks for itself. He's a winner and we're tickled to death to have James and Craig join us at East Carolina."

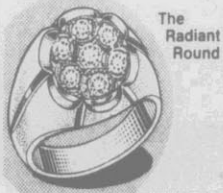

PERKINS REMEMBERS

DALLAS (AP) — Don Perkins, now the director of the work-incentive program for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in New Mexico, was reminiscing about the early days of the Dallas Cowboys when, as an expansion team, they got rough treatment.

"What I am saying," Perkins recalled, "is that I was there when we were really getting whopped. We were cannon fodder for the other teams and nobody was more aware of it than we running backs. I remember occasions when the quarterback used to call for volunteers to carry the ball."

Going into last Tuesday night's game against Nash-Edgecombe-Wilson Academy, Greenville Christian Academy's girls' coach, Connie Fryman wasn't quite sure how things would go.

The Lady Knights had played only one game all season long, against Bethel Academy, and they had lost that one 33-32. The lack of playing time had Fryman worried, and her fears were answered when NEW rolled to a 46-18 victory over her girls.

"I was real pleased with the way we played in our first game," Fryman said. "They did all they were supposed to do, but the ball wouldn't fall for us." For that reason, the coach had been looking forward to the next game, but not for what happened.

Eight members of last year's team returned this season, including four starters. Of those four, however, only three are currently starting.

Those three include 5-8 senior center Lori Brown, 5-5 freshman guard Kathy Vernelson, and 5-3 senior guard Melinda Peaden.

Joining them in the starting lineup are 5-9 senior forward Brenda Mills and 5-9 sophomore forward Beverly Hurst. "Both of them played last year, but not in starting roles," the coach pointed out.

The other starter from last year, Tammy Wooten, a 5-8 sophomore, is currently sidelined following an operation and isn't expected to be back until sometime in January. "She is a good bet to move back into the starting lineup once she gets in shape," Fryman said.

Stephanie Brown, a 5-8 sophomore, also could work her way into the starting lineup, as could the other veteran, 5-6 junior Valerie Laney.

The three newcomers to the team include Angie and Sheila Powell, a sophomore and junior, respectively, and senior Laurie O'Shea. O'Shea was a member of the team as a sophomore, but did not play last year.

"We have pretty good height, and I hope that will be to our advantage," Fryman said. "We've been able to rebound pretty well so far. We hope to be able to use our height to our advantage as the season goes

Greenville Christian could work its way into a district tournament berth by season's end. "It's really up to the players. They have the ability, they just have to want it enough to go out there and get it."

The schedule:
Home Games in italics
Dec. 5 at Bethel (L 33-32), Dec. 16 NEW (L 46-18).
Jan. 2 at Bethel, 6 at Calvary, 13 at NEW, 22 at Falls Road.
Feb. 3 Wake Christian, 13 Calvary, 17 Falls Road, 24 at Wake Christian.

Vikings Pin Panthers

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley picked up its second Eastern Carolina Conference victory, and its eighth on the season last night as it overpowered North Pitt, 66-12.

Conley won 11 of the 13 weights, taking five by pins, and six by forfeit. North Pitt's two wins both came on pins.

The Panthers, with only six wrestlers, were hurt by inexperience, Conley coach Milt Sherman noted. "They seem to have the makings of some good wrestlers if they stick with it," he added.

The win brought the Viking record to 8-0 on the year. They return to action in the Bull Durham Tournament at Jordan High School in Durham, Monday and Tuesday.

Summary:
98: Reginald Moore (C) pinned Clifton Station, 37.
105: William Green (C) won by forfeit.
112: Garrett Jones (C) won by forfeit.

126: Shannon Carson (C) pinned Tony Ward, 1:39.
132: Andy Majette (C) pinned Gene Ward, 2:29.

Joe Paterno, football coach at Penn State, was the quarterback of the Brown eleven in 1948 and 1949 and also played varsity basketball at that school.

138: Eddie Nelson (NP) pinned Pierson Shaw, 2:44.
145: Elijah Roach (NP) pinned Ernest Roach, 3:44.

Jenkins' Verdict Not End For Commissioner

BRAMPTON, Ontario (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins of the Texas Rangers is legally free to continue his quest for 300 major league victories, but baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says his investigation is continuing.

Ferguson, 38, was given an absolute discharge Thursday on a charge of possession of cocaine. The verdict means he has no criminal record, although an indeterminate finding of guilt was registered. Two other charges of possession of marijuana and hashish were withdrawn.

After the day-long provincial court trial, Ed Greenspan, Jenkins' lawyer, said he hoped Kuhn would reach the same decision as Judge Gerald Young. But a spokesman for Kuhn Thursday night said the commissioner's only statement on the verdict was that his own investigation was continuing.

Suspects Prosecution Is Not Yet Over

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has ended its prosecution of the Wilmington 10 but spokesmen for the nine black men and one white woman say the litigation may not be over.

"You don't persecute 10 people for almost a decade and drop it," the Rev. Ben Chavis said Thursday after Attorney General Rufus Edmisten announced the state would not pursue new prosecution.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Dec. 4 set aside the group's 1972 conviction on charges related to the firebombing of a white-owned grocery store in Wilmington during racial disturbances in 1971. The court left the way clear for the state to seek a new trial, but Edmisten said Thursday such a course "would serve no useful purpose for the citizens of our state."

Chavis, reached in New York, and Charlotte attorney James E. Ferguson II, who represented the defendants, said civil action was being considered against the state.

"If the state had apologized, we would not even seriously consider taking civil action. But the arrogant attitude encourages us to take action against the state," said Chavis, who originally was sentenced to prison for 25 to 29 years.

"The fact that the state did not appeal (to the U.S. Supreme Court) does not compensate in any way the 10 people whose lives have been shattered in some instances and disrupted in every instance," Ferguson said. "The taint of the case is still with us, and we are looking carefully at what we can do to seek compensation for the 10."

The state's decision to drop prosecution was announced in separate statements by Edmisten and District Attorney Allen Cobb of Wilmington, whose district was responsible for the case.

"I do not want my action today to imply that I agree with the federal appeals court," Edmisten said in a prepared statement. "This case has been reviewed by numerous federal and state courts which concluded that these defendants received a fair trial."

"However, to pursue the matter further would serve no useful purpose for the citizens of our state."

Edmisten emphasized that the appeals court did not rule on the guilt or innocence of the defendants, saying the conviction was overturned solely on procedural grounds.

"The major reason for my conclusion not to pursue this matter further is that these defendants have all served active prison sentences and have long been released on parole," Edmisten said.

In Wilmington, Cobb said he agreed with Edmisten's decision.

"The last minute motions were meant to try to save face for North Carolina. I'm glad he made it (the decision), but in the first place we knew we were innocent and, secondly, the state never had an authentic case against us," Chavis said. "It is a tremendous people's victory."

Dr. Chiles E. Cobb, executive director of the Commission for Racial Justice, said in New York that he believed the initial prosecution was motivated politically.

"North Carolina had judges to whom they (the politicians) could dictate decisions," Cobb said, adding: "I think the politicians dominate the judicial system in the state."

During the period between their conviction and the reversal by the appellate court, backers of the 10 had contended the defendants were political prisoners and victims of racial justice.

Amnesty International, the London-based group that won a Nobel Peace Prize, once cited the Wilmington 10 as political prisoners and the Soviet Union pointed to the group as examples of human rights violations in the United States.

Hunt Stirs A Hornet's Nest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt touched off a minor hornet's nest Thursday by suggesting that North Carolina pay its math and science teachers more than it does other public school teachers.

His comments drew prompt retorts from officials of the North Carolina Association of Educators who said the plan just would not work.

"They would get into a great deal of difficulty if they say one position is more important than others," said Loretta Martin of Thomsville, president of the NCAE.

"Math teachers are not working any harder than, say, English teachers," was the opinion of Chuck Mooney, an NCAE press spokesman.

Hunt, speaking at his weekly news conference, said he was not formally proposing a pay differential but he did raise the possibility as one means of attracting and keeping qualified math teachers in the public schools. He mentioned only math teachers at the news conference, but his office later said science teachers were included.

"We've got to have more qualified math teachers and compete in the market place for them," Hunt said.

"I think a salary differential is one possibility that we ought to seriously look at. By one means or another, we've got to do this job."

Hunt, who is waging an active recruiting drive for more and different types of industry, said the "economic future of this state is riding in part on how many good math teachers we turn out and get into our public schools."

"Enough good math teachers is absolutely essential if we're going to move into the microelectronics industry, among other fields."

Mrs. Martin said the NCAE would oppose any plan that would establish a differential among teachers.

She said math and science teachers with the same training and responsibilities as other teachers should not get additional pay.

"We worked hard to get a salary schedule that differentiates those whose responsibilities are different," she said.

Learned Crime Watching TV

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl told police after her arrest that she learned how to shoplift by watching a television show, officers say. But a TV station official says the teen-ager missed the point.

Police arrested the girl Wednesday shortly after the syndicated program aired on WSAF-TV.

Sgt. V.H. Vicks said officers charged the girl with three counts of theft of property. She was accused of stealing a record album, an eight-track tape and designer jeans, each from a different store in a shopping mall.

Under questioning, the girl told police she decided to try to take the items after hearing a guest on the "Toni Tennille Show" describe his shoplifting techniques. The guest, ex-convict Frank Abignale, is a consultant on shoplifting prevention.

After questioning, police released the girl to the custody of her parents.

"I didn't see the program, but it would seem to me it would be more helpful for television stations to air programs on crime prevention rather than how to commit a crime, especially this time of year," Hicks said.

"If she saw the same program I saw, she missed the point," Carl Stephens, the station's program director, said.

Stephens said the purpose of the program was to explain the consequences of shoplifting to the individual and the cost to society.

"It would seem the cost would have been obvious since the man being interviewed had spent years in prison for his crimes," Stephens said.

A spokeswoman for the program's producers, the Hill-Eubanks Group, said Abignale was booked on the show "because he was interesting."

"We are not responsible for what Frank says," the spokeswoman said.

Miss Tennille, half of the performing duo Captain and Tennille, grew up in Montgomery. MCA Television, the program's syndicator, says production will stop in February because of low ratings.

Leadership Shaping Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Veteran state Rep. Allen C. Barbee, D-Spring Hope, is the choice of the new House speaker to serve as speaker pro tem in the upcoming general assembly session.

Incoming House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Marshall, recommended Barbee be elected to the position in letters mailed this week to Democrats in the state house, who will continue to form an overwhelming majority in the 1981 session.

House members must vote on both a speaker and a speaker pro tem when the session begins Jan. 14. But Ramsey already has been nominated as speaker by the 96th House Democrats and is certain of victory.

House members traditionally go along with the speaker's choice for speaker pro tem, who fills in as presiding officer when needed by the speaker.

Ramsey said in an interview his letter also announces his first appointment of a committee chairmanship. He said he has appointed Rep. John J. "Jack" Hunt, D-Lattimore, as head of the powerful House Rules Committee.

The initial leadership selections by Ramsey indicate he is rewarding longtime House allies who were among his earliest supporters in his bid to succeed Carl Stewart as speaker.

They also show Ramsey is establishing some geographical balance in the top House positions, though his selections have a heavy rural emphasis.

Tiny Handful Of Confederate Widows Still Around

By TERRY GOGGIN
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Abraham Lincoln was president when Josh Steele marched off to war from his Mississippi farm to defend the Confederate States of America.

The Civil War ended 115 years ago with Robert E. Lee's surrender at Appomattox, but Josh Steele's second wife, Doshia, and a scattering of other elderly widows still survive, fading links to the antebellum South.

Most of the women were the second wives of widowed soldiers; many provided the elderly veterans with second families.

"I was just a little girl when I first saw my husband," said Mrs. Steele, 96, who lives with her 76-year-old daughter near Fulton, Miss. "I married him when I was 15 and he was 60."

About two dozen Confederate widows are known to survive throughout the South. Grateful states and at least one private fund have granted them pensions ranging from $100 a month to Mississippi's four widows to $355 to Alabama's lone survivor.

Mrs. Steele's past connects with the 20th century in a way her Confederate husband never dreamed about — the world of rock 'n' roll music, as introduced by her great-nephew, Elvis Presley.

"Elvis was a good ol' singing boy," recalled Mrs. Steele's daughter, Lillian Robinson. "He wasn't singing that rowdy stuff then. He was singing in church. ... He would still come (to visit) once he started singing on the radio, but it got so he just couldn't come, the way people would follow after him."

Steele's military records show he enlisted in Company G of the 43rd Mississippi Infantry in 1862. He came home in May of that year on furlough but was arrested because an officer thought he was absent without leave.

But Steele received an honorable discharge, and when he died in the early 1900s, he left his widow 80 of his 600 acres, his gray horse, his hogs, his cows and his mule.

"It was hard for a while after his death," said Mrs. Steele. "I was used to being waited on. ... We had to work in the fields."

Mississippi's other surviving widows, each of them getting her husband's monthly $100 pension check, are Bessie Winstead, 92, of Yazoo City; Lula Mae Hosey, 92, of Stringer; and Katie Nelms of Corinth. All were born in the 1800s.

Daisy Cave, 92, of Sumter, S.C., admitted that her marriage to Henry Benjamin Cave in 1919 was one of convenience, but said love blossomed anyway.

"I needed a home and he needed a cook, but if I'd known him for 10 years I couldn't have got a better man," said Mrs. Cave, who still gets a Confederate widow's pension of $2,400 a year from South Carolina.

Cave was a prosperous planter when he married. But hard times came and he left his wife and their son, Ben, only a small pension when he died at age 87 in 1929.

Mrs. Cave, the only sur-living Confederate widow in the state, never remarried.

"I got such a good man the first time, I was scared to try again," she said.

Mrs. Cave told her husband she never wanted to hear about the war. But Ben listened to his father, and remembered. Today he tells how his father was 17 when he ran away to join the Confederate Army. He spent much of his three-year hitch stationed near Charleston.

Officials in Arkansas, Texas and Virginia say no more war widows survive there, but the five known to live in Florida receive $234.43 each month. Enrollment in the pension program ended in 1917 "because a lot of young women were marrying old soldiers," said Lew Dennard of the state Department of Administration. The number of recipients peaked at 5,134 in 1915.

When Florida's pension program began in 1885, monthly benefits of $8 were paid quarterly to 61 Civil War veterans. Later, veterans' widows were included in the plan. The widows who signed up for pensions had to prove eight consecutive years of Florida residency.

Georgia officials know of only one widow, Bertha R. Robert, who lives in a nursing home in rural Paulding County. She receives a $110 monthly stipend from Veterans Affairs.

The Tennessee Department of Human Services says it has a $9,000 pension fund for the three remaining widows in that state.

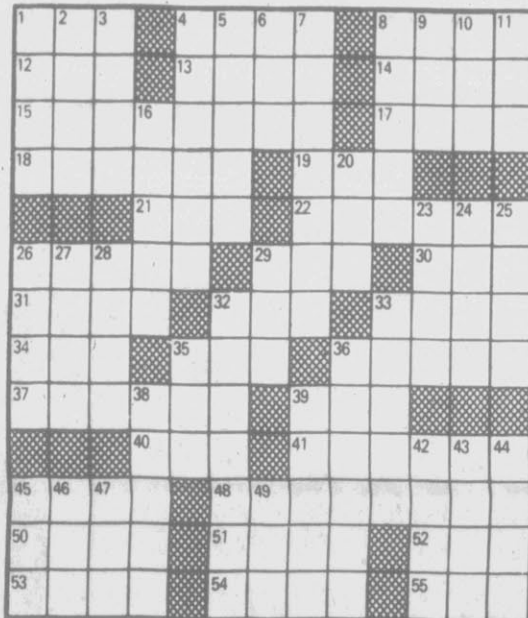

Officials of the Alabama Archives and Pensions Office say the last surviving widow is Bertha McCool, 99, of Jefferson County. She is the widow of Francis Marion McCool, was a private in Company B of the 41st Alabama Infantry.

Packing Those Presidential Papers For Plains, Ga.

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A week or two before President Carter leaves office, the first of 15 to 20 big moving vans will pull up to the White House to begin carting away the presidential papers of Jimmy Carter.

The trucks will be locked and sealed under military guard on a base near Washington and, after Ronald Reagan's Jan. 20 inauguration, will leave by convoy for Atlanta, Ga.

There, government archivists working in the basement of an old Post Office building will begin the long process of sorting and indexing the papers, first for Carter's and his aides' exclusive use in writing books or memoirs and later for unvetting to scholars.

In the meantime, aides throughout the White House and Executive Office Building are sorting through their files, making copies of documents they hope Carter will let them keep.

Carter has told his staff they may not take any presidential papers out of the White House unless they first get permission and sign an agreement not to quote from any document without Carter's approval. If they sign, he has promised them access to any papers they received or wrote.

Aides say Carter, the last president to own the vast store of paper created during a presidential term, offered the deal to guard against premature disclosure of potentially embarrassing materials that he thinks could make future aides reluctant to give a president frank but unpopular advice.

Deputy White House counsel Michael H. Cardozo denied that the unprecedented clearance procedures are designed to give Carter continuing control over what his aides may say or write about him. And guidelines sent all staff members by chief of staff Jack H. Watson Jr. and counsel Lloyd N. Cutler make the same point.

"These obligations are not intended to inhibit in any way your freedom to write or talk about this administration's policies or practices," the memo says. "The president's approval will be confined to the publication or disclosure of presidential papers and will not be conditioned on prior review or approval of any comment the staff member desires to make."

Still, the procedures give Carter continuing control an estimated 12,000 cubic feet of documents. Even aides' private notes, memos they wrote to themselves and invitations to White House parties belong to Carter under the president's interpretation of his ownership rights.

The 1978 Presidential Records Act, which takes effect when Carter leaves office, will make the papers of Ronald Reagan and future presidents the property of the government. They will be subject to public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act after 12 years under control of the president whose White House created them.

Carter defines presidential papers as any records "created in the transaction of governmental operations" or that originated or were received at the White House — whether they are originals or copies. That includes "practically every scrap of paper around here," said one aide who asked not to be identified. The aide was one of several contacted Wednesday who was going through files trying to decide what to request copies of.

Cardozo said a special office will be set up in the next few days to review staff members' requests.

That may prove to be a huge task. For example, Domestic affairs adviser Stuart Eizenstat is known to have kept copious notes from all staff meetings and the voluminous files. Several aides have cited the scholarly senior staffer as one who wants to keep materials for use in future writing projects.

Others expected to write books or articles about their White House years, in addition to Carter, include former chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, press secretary Jody Powell and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The guidelines say Carter could seek to collect damages from violators of the guidelines, but aides said the more practical sanction is implied: that Carter could deny access to his papers while they are in storage and even for many years after they are moved into the future Carter library.

The Reagan White House also may want to see some Carter administration documents, and Cardozo predicted such access would be granted as a courtesy.

During his successful effort to have his own papers exempted from the new presidential records law, Carter promised to give his papers to the government before he leaves office, but he hasn't yet done so. Cardozo said the deed, which will reserve Carter's access to the papers and empower him to decide who may see them, is in preparation but may not be completed before Carter's term expires.

Then declarer wins the ace, ruffs a club and exits with his last diamond. Now the same end play exists, only with spades as the key suit rather than diamonds.

There is a saying in the Old Country: "If you drink the water you die, and if you don't drink the water you die!" Declarer presented the defenders with a choice of ways to meet their doom on this hand.

Despite his minimum and the fact that his hand was balanced, North felt that his excellent trump support merited a free raise. South needed no more encouragement to go to game.

West led the king of diamonds, and it seemed that declarer must lose a spade trick, two diamonds and a club. But at the helm was an old friend of ours, Jean-Michel Boulenger, a many-time French internationalist and currently a partner in a French casino with one of the writers of this column.

Boulenger allowed the king of diamonds to win the first trick. Since continuing a diamond would give declarer a second trick in the suit, West found the best shift — to a club. Declarer won the ace of clubs, drew trumps in three rounds and led a club. West's nine won, and he avoided the end play for the moment by exiting with his club. Declarer ruffed, cashed the ace and king of spades to see if the queen dropped, then led a spade to the jack. West won the queen, but was faced with a choice of unpleasant options. Either he could lead a diamond, letting declarer score two diamond tricks, or exit with a spade, giving declarer a ruff-and-suff. In either case, the contract was secure.

"Ah," you say, "what if East wins the second club and returns a diamond?"

MAKING SURE
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Henry Fonda will be released from a hospital here after doctors are sure his heart medication is working.

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Curious thing about local TV news: The more there is of it, the less there is.

Ever since news became a demand item, ranking right there in ratings pull with game shows and other entertainment, local TV stations have sought to produce more of the money-making stuff. The ABC-owned station in Los Angeles, KABC, recently increased its evening news broadcast to three hours. The CBS station here broadcasts 2½ hours of news, and NBC's station has a two-hour local newscast.

Paralleling (or perhaps, prompting) the emergence of news as a big seller has been a general softening of the news. "People" stories abound. The rich stations have health reporters, entertainment reporters and psychiatrists on staff to file reports on jogging, holiday depression, teen-age homosexuals and the like.

For the most part, the news itself — that is, hard, breaking news — hasn't benefitted from its own glory; it's just there to anchor down the rest. KABC's Eyewitness News resembles nothing so much as "That's Incredible!" with a few headlines thrown in.

To the big stations, the best aspect of the greening of TV news was its price — it's much cheaper to produce an extra two hours of news than to buy rights to expensive movies, for example.

For most local stations, though, especially independents, the "new" news was still too expensive. The stations in medium and small markets couldn't afford to produce the time-eating and highly promotable multi-part series that have become the staple of big-station local news.

Thus was born the News Information Weekly Service, a subscription service meant to enable small-market stations to emulate the big boys. NIWS is, in essence, a big-city Eyewitness Newscast with the news — that is, the perishable, breaking stories that used to be called news — taken out.

The service offers its 36 member stations 15 stories a week. Three to five of the stories have to do with health, reflecting research that shows viewers are most interested in health-fitness subjects. There is one entertainment story, one money story, one environment story, a newsreel and a feature filled each week.

It should be noted that NIWS supplies a "Newsmaker" segment, which actually probes behind news developments; and it offers its stations much-coveted multi-part series (on subjects ranging from the Ku Klux Klan to transsexuals) just like the ones they have on KABC.

"In order to compete in a market like this, we have to have a service (like NIWS)," says Gerry Ruben, news executive at KTLA in Los Angeles, an NIWS subscriber.

"It gives us another dimension. It fills a void." Yes, but couldn't that void have been filled with ... well, news?

"But what is news? Maybe news isn't what I was brought up to believe it to be, maybe it isn't hard, breaking stories. "60 Minutes" and Eyewitness News changed all that. The people are interested in things that involve them crucially. There's some reason why KABC is commanding the market with their act.

"There are going to be more and more of these services cropping up as news becomes more of a viable product. News is taking on new heights."

New heights. And now, your very own local news station can scale those heights, just like Eyewitness News.

The story of Mother Elizabeth Seton, the first American Catholic saint, is a warm, moving testimony to the indomitable human spirit. ABC's version of the story of Mother Elizabeth Seton is a tedious, plodding bore.

Kate Mulgrew portrays Mother Seton in Sunday's "A Time for Miracles," but Miss Mulgrew was never given a chance. The flat script fails to draw upon what must have been an extraordinary life, rendering instead a sort of "Little Schoolhouse on the Prairie."

A shame.

And, the best for last. Saturday is sports-fan liberation day, the day NBC televises a football game without announcers.

The Jets-Dolphins game will have extra cameras and microphones, but no play-by-play or "color" chat. It's a gimmick sure to attract more viewers than a Jets-Dolphins game deserves, a bone tossed to the long-suffering TV sports fan weary from a season of clichés and gratuitous chatter.

It is the experiment that ABC's Howard Cosell insists is not being tried for the edification of fans, but to please sportswriters. In that case, thank you, sportswriters everywhere.

CARSON PLAYED CUPID — Actor McLean Stevenson hugs his bride, Tonight Show talent coordinator, Ginny Fodick in Burbank, Calif. Tonight Show host Johnny Carson introduced the two three years ago when he was a guest on the show. A week ago Monday the two were married in Florida. (AP Laserphoto)
