

Local Man Iran Signals Ready Potential Weigh U.S. Offers Army Sec.

MALCOLM HOWARD

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville attorney Malcolm Howard, a former White House staff member during the Nixon and Ford administrations, is one of three men being considered for secretary of the army in the Reagan administration. A Lenoir County native, Howard was assistant special counsel to President Nixon for seven months, and to President Ford for a month before entering private practice here in 1974. Howard acknowledged yesterday that he is one of three men now being considered for the army secretary post. The other two men are U. S. Rep. Robin Beard (R-Tenn.) and former congressman Jack Marsh of Virginia.

"It appears to me that Marsh has the inside track," Howard said, explaining that Marsh served four terms in Congress, was assistant secretary of defense from 1971 to 1973, headed then-vice-president Ford's staff in 1973, and served as Ford's counselor when he became president.

"Things have been up and down like a yo-yo," according to Howard, who said he expects the selection of the secretary of the army to be made within 10 days to two weeks.

"Sen. Helms nominated me," Howard said. "One of the things is having a southerner in a sub-cabinet slot."

Howard explained that the top Army posts include the secretary, an under-secretary, and four or five assistant secretaries.

If he is not named secretary of the army, Howard said, "I will not accept an assistant secretaryship. But the under secretary role could hold some interest," he acknowledged.

Howard, 41, is a 1962 U. S. Military Academy graduate. During his 10 years as a regular Army officer, he served two tours in Vietnam, where he won the Silver Star, two Bronze Stars and the Purple Heart, and studied for his law degree at Wake Forest University. He is now a lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve.

In 1970 and 1971, Howard served as school secretary for the Army's Judge Advocate General School, then served as legislative counsel to the secretary of the army until 1972, when he Iran has signaled it will consider a new U.S. proposal for ending the hostage deadlock, but reports from Tehran today indicated the crisis probably could not be resolved before President Carter leaves office on Jan. 20.

Iran's main hostage negotiator, Behzad Nabavi, said Tuesday his government would accept a U.S. counterproposal on Iran's demand for $24 billion if it "contains a kind of guarantee acceptable to the Algerian government."

The Algerian intermediaries were to leave Washington for Algiers today with the U.S. answer. One U.S. official in Washington said it could end the 424-day-old crisis for the 52 captives "if the Iranians are willing and able to do so."

However, CBS News correspondent Tom Fenton reported from Tehran that Iran's internal situation is making it increasingly difficult for its negotiators to find a compromise which would be acceptable to the United States and politically feasible for the Iranian leadership.

He said despite the apparent desire of Iran's negotiators to resolve the hostage problems as soon as possible, diplomatic observers in Tehran are not optimistic that a solution can be found before Jan. 20, when President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office.

Fenton quoted the diplomats as saying that Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, who has sent hundreds of Iranians before firing squads and is a political foe of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, has applied for a diplomatic visa for France, and that other political clergymen have made contingency plans to flee Iran.

The official Pars news agency reported today that Justice Minister Ebrahim Ahadi had resigned. The agency said that the resignation was announced by Iran's Judicial Council but did not give further details. It was not immediately known if the resignation was a result of political differences among Iranian officials.

Carole Jerome of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. reported from Tehran that "respected sources within the government believe that the Soviet Union is responsible for the crisis because the people manipulating the situation are working in the interests of Moscow."

"The sources point out that it is in Moscow's interest to ensure the relations between Iran and the United States remain broken." The reporter said the sources believe the militant students who seized the U.S. Embassy on Nov. 4, 1979 were members of Iran's pro-Moscow Communist Tudeh Party.

She said that knowledgeable Iranian authorities said whoever set the demand of $24 billion "was fully aware that it would be impossible for the United States to accept it. In other words, there was a deliberate intention to prevent resolution of the crisis."

Govm't For Sale In Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts government has been so riddled with corruption that "among those who had money and the influence to strike the bargain, the state was for sale," according to the report of a special commission investigating building contracts.

Today's Boston Herald American quoted the 30-page introduction to the state commission's final report as saying, "For a decade at least, across Republican and Democratic administrations alike, the way to get (state building) contracts was to buy them."

And the result has been a 72 percent failure rate among major construction projects in the past 10 years, the commission found.

The newspaper obtained an advance copy of the introduction to the 2,500-page report, which was being released today.

After a 2½-year investigation, the special Commission on State and County Buildings found: "It was not a matter of a few crooks, some bad apples which spoiled the lot. The pattern is too broad and pervasive for that easy excuse," the newspaper reported.

The report said the criterion for getting a state building contract was "whether one pays, not whether one can do the best job. Over time, political influence, not professional performance, comes to be taken for granted as the criterion for doing state work."

"The insidious effect, finally, is to lose sight of standards altogether and to accept shoddy performance because that is the way business is done in Massachusetts," the report said.

The Herald quoted the report as saying: "Since 1968 over a billion dollars has been wasted because of unnecessary delays in design and construction, and $50 million has been spent on plans and designs on buildings which were never built. The estimated cost to the commonwealth to repair present defects in all public buildings is more than $2 billion."

Headed by former Amherst College President John William Ward, the commission traced bribery and kickbacks in public construction projects by investigating thousands of contracts dating back to the early 1960s.

The panel was created in 1978 by then-Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and a bloc of reformers in the Legislature after a scandal involving construction on the University of Massachusetts' Boston campus.

Unemployment Rate In Pitt County Saw Only Small November Rise

The unemployment rate in Pitt County for the month of November rose half a percentage point over the October rate — from 5.7 percent in October to 6.2 percent in November.

Fran Thomas, Labor Market Analyst at the Greenville office of the Employment Commission attributes the rise in unemployment locally to two basic factors.

"One is the drop in agricultural employment with the end of the harvest season," Ms. Thomas said. "The other is that employment in tobacco processing begins to drop off this time of year, with workers being laid off in these jobs."

The 6.2 percent unemployment rate in Pitt County is slightly lower than the North Carolina rate in November of 6.5 percent (up from 6.3 percent in October), and significantly lower than the national rate of 7.1 percent.

At the state level, Employment Security Commission chairman notes "with the sharp increase in the prime interest rate, we had expected a noticeable increase in unemployment."

"However," he added, "the very small rise reflects the stability of North Carolina's normal economy. With the exception of the seasonal increase in agricultural unemployment, November's employment picture is very

Wanted Man Arrested In Columbia

Samuel Richard Harrell, wanted on forgery and fraud charges in connection with the theft of $36,000 from Planters National Bank at Pitt Plaza on December 5, was arrested yesterday afternoon in Columbia, S. C., Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

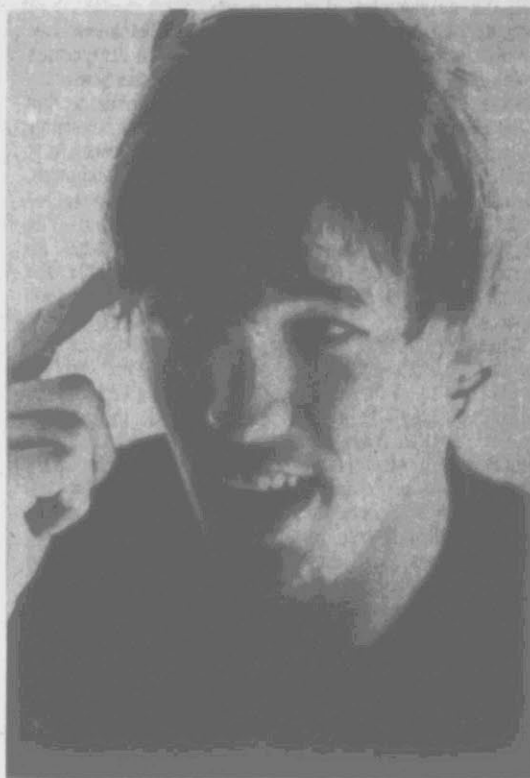

Cannon said Harrell was taken into custody on a fugitive warrant and will be returned to Greenville for trial on the charges.

Harrell, using a fictitious name, allegedly went to the bank, identified himself as Dr. Paul Bryant Richardson Jr., and opened an account, telling bank officials that he expected to receive a large check shortly for the sale of a house.

About 5:30 p.m. on December 5, Harrell allegedly returned to the bank with a check for $42,000. He deposited the check, less $36,000 in cash, which he told bank officials he needed to purchase gold for investment.

When bank officials checked a short time later, they were told that the check had been stolen and was a forgery.

Cannon said Harrell was taken into custody about 3:45 p.m. yesterday following an extensive investigation by the local department, the State Bureau of Investigation, U. S. Postal inspectors in Fayetteville, Harrell's home town, and the cooperation of South Carolina law enforcement officers.

Ex-Con Has Weird Skills

By VERN ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — James Hydrick moves pencils by pointing at them, catches deer with his bare hands and blocks punches and finds objects while blindfolded.

But there's more to the gentle 21-year-old ex-con than a bag of eye-popping parlor tricks. His mind-over-matter skills are indeed amazing, but his odyssey from discarded infant to master of martial arts is downright bizarre.

Hydrick arrived in Salt Lake last summer to set up a martial arts school based on his knowledge of Wushu Gung Fu, an ancient Chinese discipline aimed at achieving complete mental and physical self control.

Hydrick has, at various times and always in the presence of reporters, done the following:

—Turned pages of telephone books from 10 feet away and moved pens, pencils, plants and other objects by giving them hard stares.

—Blocked punches and found hidden coins or car keys while blindfolded.

—Walked blindfolded down a line of 16 people and, without touching them, known which are men and which are women.

—Sneaked up on deer at night and grabbed them around the neck.

—Demonstrated a level of martial arts judged by experts to be, well, expert.

Hydrick makes no claims to mystical or psychic powers. "I think it's an energy I put out," he says.

Hydrick appeared this week on ABC-TV's "That's Incredible!" and has been the subject of local television and newspaper stories. But until he spoke with The Associated Press recently, he chose to keep his true origins secret because "they didn't fit what I've become. It's painful as all hell to me."

To avoid dredging up his emotionally scarred past, Hydrick put out a cover story to explain his amazing skills — essentially that he had trained in Tibet at the feet of a high priest.

More than once in the AP interview, Hydrick became agitated and asked to terminate the session rather than answer questions about his youth. Finally he gave in. He supplied a sheaf of documents — mostly reports from state institutions and psychiatrists — supporting his tale.

Hydrick was born in Passaic, N.J., to a drug addict mother and bar bouncer father. Deserted by his mother, he spent his boyhood in a succession of orphanages, foster homes and state institutions in Georgia and South Carolina, where he was termed an incorrigible discipline problem.

In 1969, at age 10, Hydrick began a six-year stint at Whitten Village, an institution run by the South Carolina Department of Mental Retardation. A teacher there wrote that the boy's "interest span is short unless the subject deals with magic or outer space."

In December 1975, Hydrick was discharged to the care of Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

HELP TO QUIT SMOKING

I read a letter in your newspaper's Public Forum back in November which has meant the world to me. Mrs. Joan Boudreaux wrote that, for the price of a self-addressed stamped envelope, she would share with anyone who would contact her, the plan she used to quit smoking for good 18 years ago. It worked for me, also, and I wish Hotline would republish Mrs. Boudreaux's offer, if she's willing, so others who missed her letter to the editor might benefit, too. S. W.

Mrs. Boudreaux said the offer still stands. Anyone who's interested may send her a self-address stamped envelope — one 15-cent stamp will do fine. Her address is 1502 Greenville Boulevard. She stressed that no money be sent her, as she does not want the responsibility of having to return it. This is a labor of love for her, she said.

Public Defender Sworn

NEW PUBLIC DEFENDER — Don Hicks, with the Bible held by his wife, took the oath of office this morning as the public defender for the Third Judicial District, which includes Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico Counties. District Court Judge Horton Rountree, and Superior Court Judge David Reid, administered the oath. Rountree, as a member of the N. C. House of Representatives, introduced the bill in the General Assembly last June, which created the Third Judicial District Public Defender's Office. Reid, when associated with the law firm of Reid and Mattox, gave Hicks his first job as an attorney. The Public Defender's office will represent indigent defendants in criminal court cases in the district, and will have a staff of six attorneys and two investigators.

Tax Listing Time Is Here

Owners of real and personal property in Pitt County are required by law to list their property for tax purposes during the month of January.

The listing of property in the county will begin January 2.

Listing places in each township will be open generally from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. each weekday and from 8 a.m. until 12 noon during the month.

Persons listing their property should bring their motor vehicle registration cards and Social Security numbers with them, spokesmen in the Tax Supervisor's Office noted.

Mail abstracts — about 18,000 of them — going to property owners who last year requested to list their property by mail, will be sent out next week and be returned to the Tax Supervisor's office by the January 31 deadline.

Age and disability exemptions for persons 65 years old or totally and permanently disabled on or before January 1, and who have a disposable income of less than $9,000 a year — are available for those persons who qualify. Persons who wish to apply for age or disability exemptions should notify the listaker.

Applications for the exemptions must be made before April 15 in order to qualify.

Tax officials noted that property revaluation notices will be mailed to real property owners on Friday, informing them of the value placed on their property during the present revaluation. Answers to questions about the new property values may be had by calling 752-0993, rather than the Tax Supervisor's office.

Expect 'Gene Machine' To Speed Up Research

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Genetic research could be on the verge of an explosion with the development of a computerized machine that promises to cut out months of preliminary work in gene splicing, scientists say.

The complex work of gene splicing, in which human genes are implanted in bacteria to make such products as human insulin or interferon, a possible cancer weapon, has so far been limited to a small group of experts.

If the new machine works the way its developers say it should, thousands more scientists would be able to do genetic research, says Dr. John Baxter, a researcher at the University of California at San Francisco, one of the world's leading genetic research centers. And commercial production should also be speeded up.

"The research is moderately easy now, but there aren't that many people trained in it," said Baxter.

"If there are machines available, a lot more people will be able to do this research."

Several companies are preparing to introduce gene-splicing machines, according to BioEngineering News, an industry newsletter published in San Francisco.

One of the companies, Vega Biochemicals of Tucson, Ariz., told The Associated Press it had intended to make public the availability of its "gene machine" next week.

The task of snipping and recombining genes involves the painstaking repetition of complicated laboratory tasks, according to biochemist Howard Goodman, also of the University of California at San Francisco.

"Anything you can do by adding one thing to another over and over again is ripe for automation," Goodman said.

The machine is designed to link mononucleotides — very tiny bits of genetic material — into strings called polynucleotides, or DNA, explained Steven Evans, Vega Biochemicals' product manager.

The chunks of DNA are then combined by another process — which is not considered complex by trained scientists — into a whole gene. The gene is then inserted in the bacteria in the actual splice.

With its new genetic program, the bacteria can go on to produce to produce the desired substance, such as insulin, which is used to combat diabetes.

Tom Mysiewicz, the editor of BioEngineering News, said the development of the machines is of "major importance."

"It's going to make it possible for the smaller companies to come in and compete with the larger companies," Mysiewicz said.

The machine developed by Vega consists of a tiny computer chip with very sophisticated programming. It controls an air-tight chamber where chemicals can be automatically mixed, according to Evans.

It will sell initially for $49,500, but Evans said the company hopes to bring the cost down to "around $30,000." He said the machine has been under development for a 1½ years.

Production Of Red Meat Dips

WASHINGTON (AP) — Red meat production dropped below year-earlier levels last week, mainly because of a slump in pork output, the Agriculture Department's latest figures show.

In all, production totaled about 525.4 million pounds, down 1 percent from a year earlier, officials said Monday. Beef, at 296.5 million pounds, was up 2 percent, and calf and veal output rose 22 percent to 3.7 million pounds.

Lamb and mutton production rose 4 percent to 4.6 million pounds.

But pork production slumped during the week to 220.6 million pounds, down 5 percent from the same

Chosen Best 1980 Film

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Film Critics Circle will present "Ordinary People" its award for 1980's best film, and Robert De Niro and Sissy Spacek will be cited as the year's best actor and actress in ceremonies next month.

The winning film, directed by Robert Redford, stars Donald Sutherland and Mary Tyler Moore.

De Niro was picked as best actor for his portrayal of boxer Jake La Motta in "Raging Bull."

Miss Spacek was named for her portrayal of Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter."

The critics chose Jonathan Demme as best director and Bo Goldman for best screenplay, both for their work on "Melvin and Howard." Mary Steenburgen was selected as best supporting actress for her role in that same film.

The best-supporting-actor award went to Joe Pesci, who played La Motta's brother in "Raging Bull."

The circle of 25 critics, who released their selections

Tuesday, chose Alain Resnais' "Mon Oncle D'Amerique" as best foreign film, and Ira Wohl's "Best Boy" in the documentary category.

The award for cinematography went to Ghislain Cloquet and the late Geoffrey Unsworth for their work on "Tess."

Walker Runs

His fans and teammates at the University of Georgia are glad Herschel Walker decided not to enlist in the marines after he got out of high school. At Johnson County High in Wrightsville, Georgia, Walker ran for more than 6,000 yards and scored 86 touchdowns, 45 of them in his senior year. He also got straight A's in class and won state titles in three track and field events. Instead of the marines, Walker went to college at Georgia, where he gained more yards rushing than any other freshman in college football history. Walker closes out his freshman season tomorrow, when Georgia's undefeated football team appears in the Sugar Bowl game.

CAN'T REMEMBER — Convicted mass murderer John Wayne Gacy was quoted Tuesday as saying that he does not remember killing 33 young men and boys, and the if he did, he would commit suicide. Quoted in a telephone interview with The Daily Herald, a suburban Chicago newspaper, Gacy said he was "doing a lot of drugs" during the years his victims were slain, and was thus unaware of the slayings, saying, "If I was, I'd commit suicide." FARMVILLE — Cindy Louise Williams of Rt. 2, Farmville and Thomas Wesley Cobb of Farmville exchanged wedding vows Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Aspen Grove Free Will Baptist Church here.

Father John M. Breunig assisted by the Rev. Hubert Burress performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Ray Williams of Rt. 2, Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wesley Cobb of Farmville.

Mrs. George Thomas of Winston-Salem, aunt of the bridegroom, was organist for the ceremony.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of chiffon and beaded alencon lace. The empire bodice featured a scalloped Queen Anne neckline with full length puff sleeves. Alencon lace etched with seed pearls adorned the bodice and the sleeves. The full length pleated chiffon skirt extended into a chapel train. Scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the gown. The bride chose a waltz length mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with re-embroidered alencon lace flowing from an alencon lace caplet etched with seed pearls for her headpiece. Her bouquet consisted of white roses, pink carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Allen Corbett of Fountain, sister of the bride, served as honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Kathy Cobb of Farmville, sister of the bridegroom, and Susan Humphrey of Washington, cousin of the bride. They wore wine floor length silesta gowns. The empire sleeveless bodice featured a shirred yoke neckline. A silesta full length puffed sleeved jacket with a peplum waist topped the bodice. They carried colonial nosegays of white carnations highlighted with baby's breath and pink streamers and wore lace and silk flowers in their hair.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included John Rabl of Alexandria, Va., cousin of the bridegroom, Doug Tyson and Bobby Daniel, both of Farmville.

MRS. THOMAS WESLEY COBB

The chancel area of the church was decorated with a pair of branched candelabras which flanked a center arched candelabra adorned with ivy and white wedding bows. White poinsettias were also featured. The windows of the sanctuary were adorned by white burning tapers accented with ivy.

White bows interspersed with lily of the valley marked the honor pews.

The couple plans to reside in Farmville. The bride is presently attending East Carolina University and the bridegroom is an ECU graduate. He is employed by North American Fiberglass here.

Windows, especially large picture windows, are places where you may lose a lot of heat during cold days and nights. Draperies help reduce heat loss but there are some additional things you can do to have even more energy efficient window treatments. Draperies usually extend about three inches out from the wall. When you close the draperies if the top of the draperies aren't sealed in, warm air is drawn over the top and cools on the window glass. This cold air flows back into your room under the bottom of the window treatment.

So, you can save heat and heating dollars by closing in the top of the draperies. A closed-top decorative cornice is one possibility. Or, if you already have a valance, close the top of it with wood, plastic or non-flammable rigid insulation.

This is only one more way to make your home more energy efficient. But it's one that you might be able to do yourself at little cost — and it will help save money on your utility bill, too.

Furniture arrangement can also play a part in conserving energy. Place furniture so that it does not block heating and cooling registers. Use deflectors on registers to make sure the flow of air goes into the room — not behind the draperies or under furniture. Remember that carpeting also helps to keep your home warmer, carpets with a short but thick pile offer the most resistance to heat loss.

Space Heater Capacity
On cold days, a space heater can provide the extra heat you need to keep a room warm. Keep in mind however that a space heater can be dangerous when used improperly.

Think safety whenever you handle or use a room heater. For example, have old or seldom-used heaters checked by a professional service person before using. And, if your heater has a higher-than-usual wattage, have an electrician check the room wiring to make sure it can handle the heater.

If at all possible, space heaters should be plugged in without an extension cord. If an extension cord is a must, buy a heavy duty one from an electrical supply store.

The location of your space heater can be another key to safety. Avoid putting it in walking area or near furniture, draperies or other fabrics that might catch fire. Be very sure to warn youngsters not to touch any part of the heater.

It all adds up to this. If you do use a space heater to keep warm, do all you can to keep safe, too.

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published some New Year's resolutions. I cut that column out and taped it on my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I want you to know that it has helped me to become a better person. I am not saying that I kept every one of those resolutions every day, but I kept most of them, and they have now become habits that have made a remarkable improvement in my personality and character.

I hope you will repeat that column every New Year's Eve. I'm sure it will benefit many others as it has me.

NEVER TOO OLD

DEAR NEVER: By popular demand, my "resolutions" column has become an annual tradition, and here it is:

DEAR READER: These New Year's resolutions are based on the original credo of Alcoholics Anonymous. I have taken the liberty of using that theme with some variations of my own:

Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

Just for today I will try to be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will try to change those things that I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

Just for today I will try to improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

Just for today I will do a good deed for somebody — without letting him know it. (If he or she finds out I did it, it won't count.)

Just for today I will do something positive to improve my health. If I'm a smoker, I'll make an honest effort to cut down. If I'm overweight, I'll eat nothing I know is fattening. And I will force myself to exercise — even if it's only walking around the block, or using the stairs instead of the elevator.

Just for today I will be totally honest. If someone asks me something I don't know, I will not try to bluff; I'll simply say, "I don't know."

Just for today I'll do something I've been putting off for a long time. I'll finally write that letter, make that phone call, clean that closet, or straighten out those dresser drawers.

Just for today, before I speak I will ask myself, "Is it true?" "Is it kind?" And if the answer to either of those questions is negative, I won't say it.

Just for today I will make a conscious effort to be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously and not interrupt when someone else is talking. Just for today I'll not try to improve anybody except myself.

Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

Just for today I will have a quiet half-hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and will try to get a better perspective on my life.

Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

P.S. Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace!

LOVE, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: What is wrong with me? I love to move! We've been married for 20 years, and I'm ashamed to tell you how many times we've moved. All in the same town, too.

I'm never satisfied. Once we're moved and settled I start looking for another house. My husband is very good about it and goes along with it just to please me.

We just moved into a nice house, and I'm already looking around. All this moving is very expensive. We have three teen-aged children who were against all the moves, but we moved anyway.

My husband helps, but I do most of the packing and unpacking. I just love hard work. Sometimes I wonder if I'm not a little crazy. Everyone I know hates to move, but I love it.

Have you ever had a letter like this? And do you think I should have my head examined?

LOVES TO MOVE

DEAR LOVES: No, I've never had a letter like yours, and it wouldn't hurt to have your head examined. It may not put an end to your moving, but at least you'll know why you love it.

The average person consumes about three-quarters ton of food per year.

To stretch house furnishings budget, rotate rugs for more even wear.

Area Economy Solid

On this final day of 1980 we can look back over a turbulent year and conclude it has not been a bad one for Pitt and surrounding counties.

Like the rest of the nation we were wracked with recession and unbelievably high interest rates during the year. Both had their effects locally in slowing construction and curtailing sales of consumer goods which require financing.

All-in-all, however, we came through the year in better shape than most areas.

The farm economy was hit by the high cost of borrowing and the effects of inflation on everything the farmer uses. There were also poor growing conditions in much of the nation. Our tobacco crop, however, came through in better condition than that of many areas, thanks to rainfall at the right times. Some other crops, such as corn, suffered from dry weather.

Industrial employment held up well in the county with a few soft spots here and there.

The Pitt County Memorial-ECU health complex continued its robust growth as the hospital assumed its role as a regional medical facility and the medical school prepared to graduate its first class.

Construction held up remarkably well in Pitt County when the roller coaster interest rates of the year are considered. Many new housing units were constructed and business expansions continued.

Retail sales ended the year on an upbeat as Christmas shopping reached unexpected levels.

The national economy was one of inflation, recession, and unprecedented interest rates, all coupled with soaring energy costs. In view of all that the area economy was very solid in 1980.

Stockman's Key Mission

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — While the overblown Reagan transition bureaucracy in Washington continued its slapdash ways, Rep. David Stockman journeyed to New York Dec. 18 to begin a mission of profound consequences for the new administration and the nation's economy.

As President-elect Reagan's choice to head the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Stockman was there to get acquainted with captains of Wall Street's great financial houses. But he was also there, as head of a new, unannounced Reagan administration "policy coordinating task force," to convince the money men they ought to be bullish on America.

Stockman's is actually the task force dealing with the economic emergency, one transition group whose mission and membership have not been revealed in press releases. Its goal is visible economic improvement — including a revived bond market — within 90 days. That length of time, rather than the cliché-worn hundred days, is used to demonstrate the desperate need for action now.

"We are not selling pain and misery," said one Stockman adviser who accompanied him on his daylong journey through Wall Street's boardrooms. They were selling hope, based on radical steps to gain control of the budget, restrain the regulatory bureaucracy and slash tax rates.

At Stockman's side on the Wall Street tour in addition to his advisers was his close associate, Rep. Jack Kemp, the tireless apostle of tax reduction. Together, they described plans for those 90 days intended to restore confidence, restrain inflation and rebuild a favorable business climate. It is hoped the money men will respond with investment decisions that quickly would succor the stricken bond market. It was a tough sell. Wall Street is saturated with cynicism and pessimism that sees nothing but "pain and misery" ahead: stratospheric interest rates and a sluggish economy, topped off by hyperinflation at the 20 percent level.

There is also ignorance in abundance. Stockman's post-election memorandum ("avoiding a GOP economic Dunkirk"), which called for emergency action at a pace comparable to Franklin D. Roosevelt's fabled hundred days, was misread by businessmen who perceived in it a threat of extralegal actions — such as shutting down the banks as FDR did in 1933.

Stockman's visit to Wall Street was made partly to end such nonsensical speculation. It was also to reiterate for the twentieth time that a wage-price freeze is definitely not on Ronald Reagan's list of options for dealing with the emergency.

But after making the rounds downtown Dec. 18, Stockman ran into static when he and Kemp dined in New York that night with some leading exponents of supply-side (pro-tax cut) economics. Among those present were businessman Lewis Lehrman, politician Jeff Bell, scholar Irving Kristol, journalist Robert Bartley and business consultants Jude Wanniski and Richard Whalen. Even economist Alan Greenspan, no supply-sider but an ardent free-enterpriser, dropped by.

Some of the more doctrinaire supply-siders complained that Stockman was so intent on budget cuts that tax reduction was being sidetracked. The truth is, however, that even Kemp has dropped earlier misgivings about massive budget reduction on grounds that his tax plan cannot be credible without it.

Furthermore, Stockman and Kemp tried to disabuse the titans of Wall Street of their zeal to control the

Concessions Are Dangerous

The Carter administration has said there will be no further concessions in negotiations with Iran for the release of 52 Americans held prisoner there.

There certainly shouldn't be. The administration made far too many concessions in the offer it made. It virtually amounted to a ransom, and the kidnappers are saying in effect it wasn't enough.

Any concessions made to Iran in this case endanger American diplomats in other backward and unstable societies. In this case the cure could be worse than the disease.

Take A Card — Any Card

"Is this Mr. Ereke Gerende?"

"Speaking."

"This is Mr. Barkle of the Visa card company."

"Happy New Year."

"That is not what I'm calling about. We notice that you have $2,340 in charges and we haven't heard from you."

"I didn't know I was supposed to call."

"You weren't supposed to call. You were supposed to send us a check."

"I would have, but it would only bounce and then you people would have gotten mad at me."

"You mean you don't have $2,340?"

"Who does, except the Hunt brothers?"

"I'm not in a joking mood, Mr. Gerende. We need the $2,340."

"Well, you better call somebody else because I don't have it."

"Why did you use our Visa card if you didn't have the strapped now, what with Christmas and everything."

"What did you buy with the card?"

"A lot of stuff for the kids and two airline tickets for my parents to visit us over the holidays."

"Have they used the tickets both ways?"

"Yeh, they went home last night. They had a great time."

"Mr. Gerende, this is going to look very bad to the computer. The computer gets very angry when one of our members fails to pay his bills."

"What does it do?"

"It tells other computers all over America that you refused to pay your Visa obligations."

"That's a rotten thing to do."

"Do you know what you are now, Mr. Gerende, in the memory of every computer in this country?"

"No, what am I?"

"A deadbeat."

"Nobody's perfect."

"We want our money, Mr. Gerende, and we want it now."

"Okay, if you feel that way about it. Do you people take American Express credit cards?"

funds?"

"I didn't intend to. But every time I went into a store before Christmas, the person behind the counter said, 'We'll take either Visa, MasterCard or American Express.' I figured you people needed the business so I gave everyone my Visa card."

"We sent you that Visa card on the understanding that you would pay us back for the things you charged on it."

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, I'll send the card back to you. I don't want to do business with any company where I'm not welcome."

"You don't have to do that. We've canceled your Visa card already. If you pay us back the $2,340 we will be happy to reinstate you."

"For $2,340 I could join the Burning Tree Country Club. Look, if I had the money I'd send it to you. But I'm a little

Other Editors Say Keep 55 Mph Law

(Wilson Daily Times)

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., plans to introduce a bill to junk the nation's 55-mph speed limit when the 97th Congress convenes January 5. Pressures for repeal is coming from California and six other Western states where motorists traveling long, straight, lonely roads find the speed limit frustrating.

But the inconvenience of slower speeds is not the only issue. Under a 1978 law, at least 40 percent of a state's drivers must comply with the 55 mph limit or federal highway funds will be withheld.

The U.S. Dept. of Transportation says California, Texas, New Mexico, Montana, Wyoming, Arizona and Nevada are not observing the requirement. Unless figures for the last quarter of this year show drivers are slowing down, the seven states could lose up to 5 percent of federal highway funds earmarked for them.

Stricter compliance will be required by 1983. At least 70 percent of drivers must be observing the 55 mph limit by then. There is disagreement about the effectiveness of the 55 mph law in reducing fatalities and conserving fuel.

Highway accidents cost 54,615 lives in 1973 and 51,083 in 1979 even though the number of motor vehicles increased 22 percent during the six-year period. It should be noted that higher fuel costs resulted in fewer miles driven, which could account for some of the improved safety record.

Federal officials claim 3.4 billion gallons of fuel per year is now being saved as a result of the speed restrictions. Research has shown that gasoline consumption drops as much as 39 percent when speed is reduced from 70 mph to 55.

But Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., says keeping the speedometer in 55 can be more dangerous than speeding on a long haul. "In the huge expanses of wide open spaces, you get mesmerized" by driving a leisurely 55 mph for hours at a time on an unpopulated roadway, he contends. And, the senator is skeptical of claims that traffic safety has increased since the speed limit was lowered — at least in his home state where highway deaths have not dropped. He also claims fuel savings gained by driving 55 instead of 65 is minuscule.

We do not believe the 55 mph speed limit should be lifted. A new DOT report says 41,951 lives have been saved since the lower limit was first imposed as an emergency measure in 1974.

Strength For Today

OVERSIMPLIFIED — Some years ago a small group of scholars who claimed to have studied Biblical records thoroughly concluded that it was highly unlikely that Jesus Christ had ever lived.

To such an assertion one can only make this reply. If Jesus never lived, then the person who invented the New Testament stories and the teachings of Jesus was one of the greatest geniuses to appear on this earth.

No facts in history are so well recorded as the existence of Jesus some 2,000 years ago — the wonder of his miracles, the wisdom of his words, the beauty of his life, the significance of his death, and the glory of his resurrection. And most of us who believe this can go one step farther and believe the other things the Bible tells about Jesus — chiefly that his spirit is still in the world today.

The scholars mentioned above are naive. They oversimplify life, and thus miss its meaning. — Elisha Douglass something.

That time is now at hand. First will come that formal budget stamped OK by the governor and his commission. It will be turned over to the joint appropriations committee of the House of Representatives and the Senate where legislators will go through the actions of looking at the budget. That activity is really just to kill time until a couple of important things happen:

1. Money experts figure out how much surplus there is, and how much tax money will come in above estimates. (Typically, that is about $50 million to "play with".)

2. The power struggles have been settled, and it is clear who will be able to get some of that "extra" money.

No Leadership Is Real 'Scare'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy is burning up with interest rates of 20 percent plus, a double-digit inflation rate and a $65 billion oil import bill. It's a very bad scene, and everyone sees it.

The auto industry will lose close to $5 billion for the year, and the airline industry is ending the year with a record loss of close to $200 million. That's very bad business, and everyone knows it.

Individuals are facing some of their most trying times since the 1930s because wages are rising close to 8 percent while consumer prices rise more than 12 percent. And taxes are rising, too. They know it's bad.

So do small-business people, who are attempting the impossible in seeking profits while watching sales fall, while paying higher rents and fuel surcharges and while borrowing, when they can, at 25 percent.

And there's the uncontrollable federal budget deficits, the nearly $1 trillion federal debt, the decline in productivity, the inability of a generation of young people to buy a house, the poor morale...

Yes, says Arthur Burns, but let us not scare the people. It would be "unwise" he says, for Ronald Reagan to declare an economic emergency when he becomes president in January. The people might not understand.

Burns may have a point, but since he also was aloof and aloft as an economic adviser to President Dwight Eisenhower during several recessions and as Federal Reserve chairman you wonder if it isn't a state of mind.

Burns is not alone in suggesting that an emergency declaration would risk an unpredictable public response. To do it or not do it has become a Hamlet-like question among Reagan advisers, but Burns has stated his opinion, and so the questions are directed to him.

—Aren't these people who would be scared by a declaration of economic emergency the same people who have been scared for several years, but who have been quietly and courageously improvising to make ends meet while leadership sat on its hands, paralyzed with the size of problems?

—Aren't these people who would become so frightened that God alone knows what they might do the very people who decided that if their leaders wouldn't act they would — and did by electing a new president?

—Wasn't it the people, in effect, who brought the emergency to the attention of leadership? Isn't it true that the current president, even today, is convinced that the economy is sound? Isn't that —frightening?

—Isn't the American public today a good deal more sophisticated than it is credited with being by leaders who seem to believe that the people who put them into power can't be trusted?

Whether or not Reagan labels current economic conditions for what they are isn't really the point. The point is that some people think the truth can't be clearly labeled without scaring the wits out of people.

Leadership would be more effective if only it came down out of the viewing stand and recognized that the parade of people out there long ago declared their own economic state of emergency — and that they were becoming increasingly frightened by the denials of their elected leaders and their refusal to wise up to the fact.

That really had them scared, and if it persists, it will scare them again.

To the editor:

I would like to enlighten the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County about the functions of the Pitt County Humane Society. The PCHS is a non-profit organization. We are funded strictly by donations from kind-hearted people. The workers of the society are all volunteers. People do not realize the hours that are spent on the phone by concerned volunteers trying to place animals in good homes. Contrary to some people's belief, we do not get paid a salary. I have placed lots of animals in homes. People are really nice and grateful for our services; but, folks, it takes more than gratitude to keep the PCHS operating. We do not charge a fee to place an animal, but a donation to the PCHS is always welcome.

The next time you call the PCHS for an animal or the next time you want to find a home for an animal, please think about a donation to help the society stay in operation. No, we're not about to fold up due to a lack of funds, but a donation is always helpful and thankful. I hope this information does help people to understand the PCHS and I hope it makes more people willing to help us.

We are still in need of homes for cats and dogs. If you need any information, please call me or any of the other workers listed in the Adopt-A-Pet column in Sunday's paper.

A special "thank you" goes to "The Daily Reflector" for all of their help.

Suspect Chemical Fire Was Deliberately Set

CLARKTON, N.C. (AP) — A fire that destroyed an agricultural warehouse and forced the evacuation of Clarkton's 750 residents may have been set intentionally, Police Chief Steve Gunsallus said Tuesday.

Gunsallus said the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms had been asked to join the investigation into the fire Sunday night at the Clarkton Farmer's Exchange.

Town authorities ordered a total evacuation of Clarkton after it was learned deadly agricultural chemicals were stored in the warehouse. Subsequent investigation showed that the amount of potentially lethal chemicals in the warehouse was smaller than originally believed, authorities said Tuesday.

State environmental management experts also said preliminary testing of runoff water showed no danger to the town's water supply. Gunsallus said the origin of the fire had not been determined.

"We feel pretty sure it was arson, but that's all I can say at this time," Gunsallus said.

Howard Watts, major shareholder and manager of the Farmer's Exchange, said Tuesday he had no idea why someone would deliberately set fire to the $750,000 structure.

"It just doesn't seem possible for a building like we had to go like that," Watts said. "I can't imagine anyone with that kind of animosity against the company or anyone working there. It just doesn't make sense.

"If things had happened as they could have happened, there could've been a lot of people dead. It's got to be somebody real sick," Watts said.

The town was evacuated after authorities received reports of large amounts of such items as methylbromide, a poisonous gas used to fumigate tobacco beds, and parathion. State pesticide specialist Lyle Honeycutt said Tuesday 25 of the 32 methylbromide canisters actually were empty. He said the parathion had been recalled earlier by its manufacturer.

Honeycutt said none of the large canisters of methylbromide burst during the fire, but three one-pound containers had ruptured. He said they presented no danger.

"The only material that spilled was one gallon of toxiphene," Honeycutt said. Toxiphene, an insecticide, was one of two chemicals found in samples of water taken from a blocked-off drainage ditch and the concrete loading dock.

Honeycutt said the water contained roughly 1.5 parts per million of toxiphene, which is toxic, and extremely small quantities amounts in the parts per billion of diazinon, not considered harmful to humans.

Neither are sufficient to cause harm to people or plants, or to contaminate ground wells, the nearest of which are a quarter-mile away, said Dennis Ramsey, regional supervisor of the department of Natural Resources and Community Development, Division of Environmental Management.

Although the volume of chemicals was less than first believed, authorities defended the decision to evacuate the town, contending the residents had been in danger of an explosion as well as exposure to lethal fumes.

"Eighty percent of pesticides are petroleum-based," Honeycutt said. "Of course it's highly flammable and when fire gets to it, the materials rupture quickly."

budget at the expense of widows and orphans. Stockman outlined budget options preferable both politically and economically to the favorite of financiers: reducing cost-of-living allowances for Social Security recipients, thereby punishing the most helpless victims of government-fed inflation.

Stockman will have important collaborators — particularly if Lehrman (who he met for the first time Dec. 18) is named chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, as now seems possible; Lehrman would bring an understanding of monetary policy lacking in almost all politicians, including even Stockman. Treasury Secretary-designate Donald Regan will join in once he gets thoroughly briefed on the situation he faces and finishes explaining to conservatives that he didn't really mean it when he contributed all that money to Jimmy Carter and other Democrats.

Don Regan and Stockman have engaged in productive, congenial discussions (most recently with Kemp in Kemp's office). In time a Regan-Stockman-Lehrman economic troika could prove formidable. But for now, the burden is on Dave Stockman, a 34-year-old bachelor workaholic, to devise immediate battle plans for avoiding that economic Dunkirk that looms not only for the GOP but for the entire nation.

Night Minister Walks Streets Of San Francisco

By PETE JACOBS
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chuck Lewis strides along the sidewalk, hands stuffed in the pockets of a blue trenchcoat, white cleric's collar gleaming like a beacon in the cold fog. He's the Night Minister.

For hundreds of derelicts, addicts, prostitutes, run-aways and lonely people, Lewis is Father Christmas — a Lutheran priest who works for the Night Ministry, open for business from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. in the seedy Tenderloin district.

"Our basic theology is nonjudgmental," says Lewis, 48, who has walked the streets for 16 years, helping and finding help for those who can't take care of themselves.

The Night Ministry, operated by the Council of Churches, is a non-denominational emergency program for the community.

Lewis says he isn't afraid of the sometimes desperate, sometimes violent people he helps. He's never been attacked or robbed.

Once he pinpoints the problem, he often refers people to a community service program. That means listening and asking questions.

A runaway may need someone to send him back home. A drug addict or alcoholic may need a treatment program. Sometimes it's someone who's broke and needs a room for a night. At other times it may mean supplying a day's food or directing someone to a clinic.

Lewis doesn't preach or demand a religious commitment from those he helps. He simply tries to solve the immediate problem.

"I believe the entire world has already been saved," he said. "So it relieves me of a lot of frustration. I don't have to go out and play God every night. I just do the best I can."

Lewis is paid a modest salary from the Ministry's $35,000 annual budget, which also must cover emergency food and shelter. He is aided by four assistant ministers who also are paid, and volunteers who spend the night on the telephone talking to the desperate and lonely.

Volunteers like Steve Northrup, 63, spend hours on the telephone. Sometimes he handles 20 or 30 calls a night.

"Christmas is bad, and Mother's Day," says

Northrup. "They call because their children don't contact them. I listen and do what I can." Some are regulars, who call for weeks, needing a sympathetic ear until they feel capable of solving their problems on their own.

The ministry sometimes is criticized for taking a "Band-aid" approach to problems.

"We're here to help people at night, when there is no other source of help but the police and the hospital emergency room," says attorney John Wahl, president of the program's board of directors.

Two-thirds of the calls are from people who suddenly find themselves homeless. For instance, there was the case of a woman and her three children, abandoned on a street by her husband after they had been evicted from their apartment. The husband had taken them out, bought them hamburgers and said he'd be back.

Hours later, they were still there. A guard noticed them and referred them to the Night Minister. Wahl arranged for the Salvation Army to put them up for the night.

"We never heard from them again," Wahl said. "They now knew who we were and if they needed us again, they would have called on us."

On a typical night, Lewis may take 20 calls that volunteers can't handle. Sometimes he can handle it on the telephone, but other situations require him to meet the caller.

He will personally handle about 25 of the 100 suicide calls received by the volunteers during the year.

Some are potentially dangerous, like one caller Lewis recalls visiting in an apartment.

"I told him on the phone I would come see him if he put away the gun, and he said he would," Lewis said. "He lay on his bed talking to me, and then he reached under the pillow and pulled out a Luger and smashed a clip into it and started waving it around."

I quietly told him he had broken his promise. I told him I was a man who kept my promise. I put on my coat. He opened the closet and showed me more guns. I told him when he put away the gun to call me, but not tonight — to call me some other time. And he did," Lewis said.

Is it a "Band-aid" job with little value to society beyond dealing with people's immediate needs?

Wahl conceded the Night Ministry will not reform the world. But that's not its function, he said.

"People are complex and will always have problems," he said. "You're going to have people who need help in the middle of the night."

Coffee Price Going Down

The nation's largest coffee roasters say their prices are going down.

Hills Brothers Inc., the nation's third-largest roaster, said Tuesday it is lowering the wholesale price of coffee by 18 cents a pound to $2.55.

It also cut the price of "High Yield" coffee by 15 cents per 13-ounce jar and reduced the price of instant coffee by a penny an ounce.

Rosalind Reidy, a spokeswoman for the San Francisco-based company, said the reductions matched cuts by General Foods Corp. and Procter & Gamble Co., the industry leaders.

She said the cut resulted from continued reductions in the price of green coffee. In commodities market trading, the price of such coffee has fallen to $1.27 a pound.

The reduction is the first since late October and continues a trend of declines that began in July after coffee climbed to $3.23 a pound.

It usually takes about a month for changes in the wholesale price of coffee to be reflected at the retail level. But retailers often sell coffee for less than its wholesale price to attract shoppers or because of promotions offered by roasters.

Free Coffee At The Mortuary

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Motorists who stop for free coffee here after New Year's Eve parties will probably have a sobering experience. The refreshments are being served at Livermore Mortuary.

Mortuary owner Barbara Hoblitzell expects a brisk business.

"We're hoping coffee served in a mortuary will have an especially sobering effect," she said.

In addition, Livermore police officers will be available to drive home people who are in no condition to do it themselves.

Cost Of Celebrating New Year's Eve Remains High

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
Millions of Americans who ring in 1981 tonight will find the cost of celebrating New Year's Eve hasn't gone down since they bid good-bye to the 1970s.

The new year will be greeted in a variety of styles, from "moonlight bowling" in Iowa to a jetsetters' $500-a-couple bash at Regine's in Manhattan, from mountaintop fireworks in Colorado to skating with Dustin Hoffman and Linda Ronstadt at New York's Roxy Roller Rink.

With prices up, in some places by as much as 30 percent, many revelers will repair to neighborhood bars and neighbors' basements for their Auld Land Syne festivities.

For a mere $35 per couple, Merle Hays Lanes in Des Moines, Iowa, is offering "moonlight bowling" from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Beside bowling, there'll be prizes, four drinks, champagne and snacks at midnight, disco dancing and party favors. Members of a Colorado Springs, Colo., mountaineering group will pay only in sweat as they climb 14,110-foot Pike's Peak for their annual New Year's fireworks display.

But going out in style is not going out of style.

"It'll be sold out," said Bruce Behnke, a spokesman for the Las Vegas Hilton, where couples will pay $150 for the Liberace dinner show.

The Royal Canadians, the late Guy Lombardo's band, performing outside New York for the first time in 50 years, are at Boston's Colonnade Hotel where couples will pay $40 to dance.

Many night spots will feature oversized television screens showing New York's Times Square and the thousands who jam the streets to count down the old year. But in honor of the American hostages in Iran, the big ball that slides down a pole at midnight won't be lighted the whole time for the first time since 1904.

The Anchor Inn in Columbus is offering dinner, entertainment and an open bar all night for $79 a couple.

Some places offer no booze bargains. Frank Palumbo, the owner of the Philadelphia nightclub Palumbo's, said his $20-per-person price for filet mignon and dancing includes no complimentary alcohol.

"We don't encourage drinking," he said.

A few package deals, like the $40 per person at the MGM Grand in Reno, Nev., and the $160 Marriott in Philadelphia, prices are the same this year.

At other spots, like Regine's, money is no object.

The $500-a-couple price includes champagne, a gift such as a pen or address book, noisemakers, champagne and a gourmet dinner.

Packages at the New York Hilton go up to $190 a couple, up to $300 at the Riverboat Room in the Empire State Building, $130 at the Magique discotheque and $300 at "21."

In Los Angeles, the Ambassador Hotel Cocoanut Grove restaurant offers a $110 per couple package, including a steak or lobster dinner, half a bottle of champagne, party favors and dancing.

Dallas' Fairmont Hotel, for $200 per couple, has unlimited cocktails, a choice of three wines, party favors and night-long entertainment by Vaughn Monroe and Billy Daniels.

Washington's Shoreham Hotel, at $180 a couple, features an open bar, a seven-course dinner, satirist Mark Russell and a 12-piece orchestra.

The Butte, Mont., Travelodge, for $125 a couple, offers a cocktail party, prime rib dinner, dinner show, dancing, free drinks all night, a room, use of the swimming pool, sauna and whirlpool, champagne brunch in the morning, party favors and noise makers.

A few places won't be open at all. Dan Polovin, who owns Mustard's Last Stand, a hot dog stand in Boulder, Colo., says he considered an "all the hot dogs you can eat" package for New Year's.

But he decided to take the night off instead.

Say Children Procedure's Real Victims

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Children, once the targets of a now-discontinued mass sterilization program in Virginia, would still be the main victims of the procedure under a revision of the state's sterilization laws, critics of the measure have charged.

Disclosure last year of widespread sterilizations practiced in the state over a 50-year period ending in 1973 led to legislative efforts this year to revise the law.

The state has acknowledged that some 8,300 Virginians were sterilized, usually without their consent, at state mental hospitals under the once-common theory that this would help rid society of morons and "misfits."

There has been unanimous agreement that any revision of the state's sterilization law should withhold authority from the state to sterilize "for the good of society."

But critics told a public hearing on the controversial subject Tuesday that the revision doesn't go far enough in protecting those who might involuntarily lose their right to parenthood — particularly children.

The proposal in dispute would still permit sterilization of children under the age of 18 without their consent.

Permission would be necessary from their parents or guardians, however, and a judge would have to see that a series of detailed guidelines were met before authorizing sterilization.

Judy Goldberg, of the American Civil Liberties Union of Virginia, said the new proposal still permits sterilization of those mentally incapable of making an informed consent.

And she insisted this was particularly tragic in the case of young people whose mental condition might change due to medical advancements in later years.

She noted it was mainly children under the age of 18 who were subjects of the earlier mass state sterilization program.

"We should give this group special protection instead of making it easier to sterilize them," she added.

Objections were also raised over a proposed standard which would permit sterilization of those "permanently incapable of caring for and raising a child."

Ms. Goldberg said studies have shown that many mildly or moderately retarded persons are quite capable of raising children.

Members of the subcommittee studying the issue insisted, however, that the proposed revision contains all necessary safeguards.

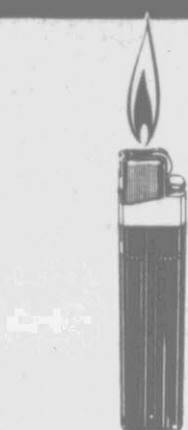

"I think these are fairly rigid guidelines and address themselves only to the helpless cases," said Del. Warren Stambaugh, D-Arlington.

Del. Samuel Glasscock, D-Suffolk, vice chairman of the subcommittee, said that despite some objections, "I still think there are some instances where sterilization must be performed for a child's own protection."

"And I think we should make the law tight enough so it is used only in those cases," Stambaugh added.

Although the state has acknowledged that the sterilization was practiced, it has declined to identify the participants of the program.

The ACLU filed a class action suit Monday asking that these people be identified and their medical or psychological needs be met by the state.

Agriculture Sec. Designate Sees No Leaf Threat

TWO SECRETARIES — N.C. Agriculture Secretary Jim Graham (right), shares a laugh with John Block, the secretary-designate for agriculture in the incoming Reagan administration. (AP Laserphoto)

Brooks Steps In Stalled Parleys

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Labor Commissioner John Brooks, accusing other state officials of dragging their feet, said Tuesday he was intervening in long-stalled negotiations for a new contract with dockworkers at North Carolina's two state-owned ports.

Brooks' comments came as members of the International Longshoremen's Union began final preparations for what could be a strike after their contract expires at midnight tonight.

The ILA acted after the Interstate Commerce Commission certified a newly established state agency, the North Carolina Ports Railway Commission, as the jurisdictional body for two small railroads at the ports in Morehead City and Wilmington.

State Department of Commerce officials said that certification removes the State Ports Authority from a legal obligation imposed by federal courts to negotiate with the union. Because of the two small railroads at the ports, the state has been required to negotiate with the dockworkers under terms of the federal National Railroad Labor Act.

State law, however, prohibits negotiations with unions. Steve Meehan, a Commerce Department spokesman, said most of the 200 or more ILA workers would now be covered only by the state law.

The ILA has sought a 25 percent increase in their average $6.50 hourly wage.

Meehan said Tuesday that, with the certification of the railroad commission, the state has offered them a 16 percent increase.

In Morehead City, the president of ILA Local 1850 said the union has asked that its request for intervention by the Federal Mediation Board be rescinded. Workers cannot legally strike while such a request is pending.

Without mediation, local president Charles McDonald said, the union would be free to "do whatever we feel necessary."

McDonald, asked when a strike might begin, said: "Everything's closed up here on the first (Thursday). I'd rather not quote a specific time. It might be the second, or the third."

Port officials said they expected the Morehead City port to be clear of barges and ships by tonight.

Negotiations between the state and ILA have been stalled since November.

Brooks said Tuesday state officials had attempted deliberately to weaken the unions.

"They've drug their feet. They haven't sat down and talked with them about a new contract," Brooks said. "They should have a new contract by now."

"I certainly can't find any evidence yet where the state has set forth specific positions on the issues," Brooks said. "That would be the first step in collective bargaining and that should have occurred back in October."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Agriculture Secretary-designate John Block said Tuesday there may be a conflict between the Reagan administration's preference for an open marketplace, with limited government involvement, and the long-running federal price-support program for tobacco.

Block said, however, that he did not necessarily see the conflict as a threat to tobacco.

"I think you're always going to have some conflicts in government, in programs."

Three Wrecks Investigated By Police

An estimated $7,300 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police, yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 7:20 p.m. collision on Greene Street, 300 feet north of the Tar River Bridge, involving vehicles driven by Charlie Seamester Jr. of Riverview Estates, Elizabeth M. Capillary of Columbia, S. C. and Leon Wilkins of Route 2, Robersonville.

Police, who charged Seamester with driving under the influence, estimated damage at $3,000 to the Seamester car, $2,000 to the Capillary vehicle and $600 to the Wilkins truck.

Cars driven by Dennis Franklin Bunting Jr. of Greenville, and Sandra McCotter Hulon of 1102 Chestnut St., collided about 5:37 p.m. on Tenth Street, 40 feet east of the Brownlea Drive intersection, causing an estimated $800 damage to the Bunting car and $200 damage to the Hulon auto.

Investigators reported cars driven by Julius Sneed of 412 Latham St. and Warren Carson Ellis Jr. of Route 4, Henderson, were involved in a 5:05 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 30 feet north of the Country Club Drive intersection.

Damage from the collision was set at $300 to the Sneed car and $400 to the Ellis vehicle.

NEW YEAR'S SERVICE
The Winterville Community Churches will hold a New Year's Eve Service at the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church tonight at 11 p.m.

The Rev. A.C. Morgan will deliver the message and laymen from various churches will close the service with a chain prayer for the new year.

The pastor, the Rev. Willis Wilson, invites the public to attend.

WATCH MEETING
Watch meeting will be held at Saint Rest Holy Church beginning tonight at 10:30 p.m.

The public is welcome to attend, according to the pastor, the Rev. W. C. Elliott.

There's no way we can be 100 percent consistent," Block said in an interview after meeting with North Carolina farm leaders.

Block also met with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Sen.-elect John East, a Republican who upset the Democratic incumbent, Sen. Robert Morgan, in the November election.

Block, an Illinois farmer, expressed general support of the tobacco support program, but took care to note that the Reagan administration's general philosophy will be one that leans toward a free marketplace in most commodities.

"The tobacco program is not a big user of federal money. The tobacco program stands on its own," he said.

"I wouldn't look to see any major overhaul of the tobacco program," Block said during a meeting with directors of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation. "It's a program that's not costing the taxpayer any money."

In contrast, Block gave support to Helms' pledge to trim waste from the federal food stamp program, calling it "one of the most obvious places" the incoming administration will examine for spending cuts.

"Too much of our resources are going to non-productive programs," Block said. "That's one of the programs that's going to be faced with some restraints. I don't think there's any question about it."

Helms, the incoming chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has targeted the food stamp program as an object for cuts and has estimated as much as 40 percent of money spent on food stamps is wasted. The food stamp program is part of the Agriculture Department's budget and is considered by the agriculture committee.

Block said he didn't know if the 40 percent figure was correct, but said waste might be between 10 percent and 40 percent.

"I don't know where it is — 10 percent? 20? 30? But I think we all know there's fraud and waste in the program. It needs to be managed more effectively," he said.

Block cited figures on food stamp use, saying one out of every seven persons is qualified for the aid and that one out of every 10 is receiving it.

"I'm not so sure that's right. We need to reappraise the qualifications, somehow," he added.

Helms, appearing with Block, said he had "total confidence" in the secretary designate.

Helms later predicted the new administration quickly would resolve the dispute raging in tobacco states over the importation of foreign leaf under the low-tariff "scrap" designation.

Domestic growers have contended it is actually shredded high-quality leaf and is offsetting sales of American tobacco.

Helms said the dispute would be resolved "as quickly as I can work it out. It could have been worked out a long time ago."

He said the simplest solution would be to have U.S. Customs officials designate the imports at higher-quality grades, which carry higher tariffs.

GRINDING IN THE NIGHT

An estimated one in 20 adults and three in 20 children unconsciously grind their teeth at night. It is the sound of bruxism. While the noise may disturb spouses or children, it has a far more distressing effect on the sleeper.

Nocturnal grinding can exert thousands of pounds of pressure per square inch on the surfaces of the teeth. It can be rough not only on teeth but on the supporting bone, the gums and jaw joint.

For many years, bruxism was attributed to the release of tension from emotional stress. However, many dental authorities today believe that the causes exist in the patient's mouth. Night grinding may be an unconscious effort to correct irregularities of the chewing surfaces of the teeth. Dentists term this a malocclusion. They grind away to eliminate a spot that is too high or to find a comfortable place to fit the upper and lower teeth together.

If you have this nightly grind problem, your first stop should be your dentist's office...before you do any serious damage to your teeth.

A public service with the aim of promoting a better dental health environment. From the dentists of Pitt County.

Chrysler's Sales Rose

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has reported a 20 percent increase in mid-December auto sales compared with the same period in 1979, with "K-cars" selling at their best rate since they hit the market.

Auto sales reports for the middle 10 days of the month usually are released after the holidays, but the No. 3 automaker jumped the gun on other manufacturers because of the increase in sales.

Chrysler released its report Tuesday. General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have said they would report Jan. 5. American Motors Corp. reports only at the end of the month, like importers.

Chrysler said it delivered 19,529 U.S.-built cars to dealers from Dec. 11 to Dec. 20, compared with 16,301 cars in that period last year.

Sales of the "K-car" models, on which Chrysler has pinned most of its hopes for a return to profitability, were the best of any period since they were introduced in October, the company said, with deliveries of 7,096.

Chrysler is offering varying rebates — amounting to 7 percent of the cars' sticker prices as of Tuesday

Carter To Ask Gasoline Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter again will propose a dime-a-gallon gasoline tax designed to reduce American dependence on foreign oil, an administration source says.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday night that the tax proposal is "basically the same" as the Carter proposal Congress overwhelmingly rejected June 6. Under that plan, a tax on imported petroleum would be passed on to consumers.

The revived dime-a-gallon gas tax will be in Carter's proposed budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, 1981, the source said.

Before Congress blocked the previous tax proposal, Carter tried to use his presidential authority to impose a dime-a-gallon fee May 15. That effort was turned back in federal court.

The Carter administration said the fee would have cut oil imports by 100,000 barrels a day in its first year alone with further reductions expected after that.

The administration source said revenues from the proposed fee would be used for a variety of federal projects. The 1982 budget is expected to be made public in early January.

The source declined to predict how the proposal would fare under the incoming administration of President-elect Ronald Reagan and before the new Congress.

Reagan has said the answer to the U.S. energy problem is "to get the government off the backs" of the energy industry. And his choice to head the Office of Management and Budget, Rep. David Stockman, R-Mich., has said the details of the nation's energy "supply, demand and distribution" should be left to the marketplace.

Court Okays Plan Of Payless Holidays

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Friday will be the first of up to six payless holidays for most state workers under a furlough program designed to save the state as much as $24 million.

Ingham County Circuit Judge Jack Warren on Tuesday ruled that members of the Michigan State Employees Association would not suffer "irreparable harm" from Gov. William Milliken's days-off-without-pay program.

But Warren stressed he was not ruling on the legality of the layoff plan, only the association's request to block the first furlough scheduled for Friday.

At Milliken's request, the state Civil Service Commission on Dec. 19 approved a change in work rules enabling him to order the layoffs, which will save the state an estimated $4 million a day.

Milliken said the one-day furloughs will help prevent some permanent layoffs.

The judge said the union failed to show that the effect of payless holidays on its members outweighed the prospect of long-term layoffs that otherwise might be required for some workers.

Association lawyer Michael Cavanaugh said it would be "physically impossible" to get the order reversed in time to make Friday a work day, but vowed the union would pursue the suit and seek back pay for every layoff day Milliken orders.

Cavanaugh argued the proposed layoffs run counter to procedures in the state constitution for reducing the pay of state employees.

He said the constitution requires that any pay reduction imposed on state employees must be across-the-board, extending even to essential workers — such as state police and state hospital employees — who must be on the job Friday.

Assistant state Attorney General Jann Baugh said the plan was not a pay cut, but an adjustment to the fact that there is not enough money in the state budget.

The one-day layoff will apply to more than two-thirds of Michigan's 70,000 employees. The MSEA represents 34,000 state workers, about half of whom are covered by a contract allowing the six days off provided Milliken can justify them as needed to avert permanent furloughs elsewhere.

Historians Revising An Old Image Of Eisenhower

A REVISED IMAGE? — The image of Dwight D. Eisenhower is being rehabilitated. Historians are no longer portraying the 34th president as a grinning, uncomplicated, don't-rock-the-boat father figure according to Princeton University professor Fred Greenstein, who spoke at the American Historical Association convention in Washington, D.C. (AP Laserphoto)

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The image of Dwight D. Eisenhower is being rehabilitated. Historians are no longer portraying the 34th president as a grinning, uncomplicated, don't-rock-the-boat father figure who spent his energies on the golf course while the country drifted.

The "new" Ike is presented as a skillful leader who posed as non-political while managing behind the scenes to bend events in the way he wanted them to go.

Eisenhower revisionism has been going on for years, but it has taken on new pertinence with suggestions that Ronald Reagan's presidency may be Ike-like.

Like Eisenhower, Reagan is often seen as a chairman-of-the-board-style executive inclined to let associates fill in the details after he lays out the big policy picture.

But at an American Historical Association convention session here Tuesday, Fred I. Greenstein, professor of politics, law and society at Princeton University, said that image misrepresents Eisenhower.

None of the historians in his audience took issue with Greenstein's characterization of Eisenhower as an activist who put his own stamp on the presidency.

The historians also did not quarrel with the assertion of University of Massachusetts historian Robert Griffith that Eisenhower was a president with a vision of an American society encompassing his own principles of cooperation, self-restraint, discipline and disinterested public service.

Greenstein, a two-time voter for Eisenhower's Democratic rival, Adlai E. Stevenson, said newly opened papers of the Eisenhower administration sustain the picture of Ike as a practitioner of hard-ball politics.

"His skills were underestimated at the time," Greenstein said. "They were underestimated because it was part of his skill to see that they would be."

He cited Eisenhower's treatment of Joseph R. McCarthy, whose search for subversives — and for headlines — did not relax even after Eisenhower, a war hero and fellow Republican, took White House command.

Publicly, Eisenhower was known and criticized for a hands-off approach to McCarthy, exemplified in Ike's remark that he would not get in the gutter with the Wisconsin senator.

Behind the scenes, Greenstein said, Eisenhower conducted "a virtual day-to-day campaign via the media and congressional allies to end McCarthy's political effectiveness."

Griffith characterized the episode this way:

"He chose to combat McCarthy through indirectness: on the one hand by repeatedly emphasizing his own commitment to decency and fair play, on the other hand by encouraging others to attack the senator. He repeatedly urged Republican senators to curb the ram-bunctious McCarthy, complaining at one point that 'We need a few good hatchet men up there.'"

Greenstein said Eisenhower was on top of his job. He held stag dinners with national figures to keep himself informed, worked through a huge volume of official documents and maintained a voluminous confidential correspondence while cultivating the impression he was not involved even in events in which he played key decisions, Greenstein said.

Ike delegated authority to "competent assistants" on the grounds that — as Eisenhower put it — "the government is too big, too complex and too pervasive in its influence on all our lives for one individual to pretend to direct the details," Greenstein added.

Even Eisenhower's famous fractured syntax at news conferences was often calculated, Greenstein said, with Eisenhower giving vague, rambling answers to purposely avoid a direct answer that could cause trouble.

Once before a news conference, Eisenhower and press secretary James Hagerty discussed how to respond if the president were asked how he would react to an attack by Nationalist China on the islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

Said Eisenhower: "Don't worry, Jim, if that question comes up, I'll just confuse them."

A Review Shirley Carries Movie's Theme

Shirley MacLaine has done it again. In "A Change of Season" she has replicated the concept of mate-swapping as she did in "Loving Couples".

The difference is that now MacLaine is the tired wife of a small-town college professor rather than a woman doctor. She is tired of the 21 years of dedication to her husband's career and playing along with the "happily married couple" game.

She is also tired because she learns that her husband (Anthony Hopkins) is having a fling with one of his students (Bo Derek) and claims that he is "in love" with her, but "loves" his wife while using the "male after 40's identity crisis" as an alibi. MacLaine reacts to the situation by inviting a young carpenter (Michael Brandon) — sent by her husband to build bookshelves — to her bed.

Husband and wife are so proud that neither want to give up their affairs. To complicate matters further, MacLaine suggests that the four of them go the their mountain home during the two-week semester break. Their daughter (Mary Beth Hurt) arrives without warning only to find her parents experiencing problems far more extensive than her own. Later, Derek's father (Ed Winter) expresses concern over his daughter's actions and reputation and ends up falling for MacLaine.

Though MacLaine seems totally selfright about the mate-swapping taking place and that says that these things are happening all the time today, the film lacks good taste. The only thing that saves the movie from being porno is the lack of nude photography during the bedroom scenes. The closest thing to that is the hot tub scene which shows Derek and Hopkins frolicking about to a Mancini tune.

This film has been dubbed as a "contemporary comedy." The only noticeable comedy in the film is the surprise of seeing Anthony Hopkins in a picture of this kind. The constant blinking of his eyes throughout the film seem to indicate that he is ill at ease with the lines and with his entire role, but he manages to pull it off rather well.

The scenic photography of the small New England town and the mountain scenes in Vermont are superb. If it were not for the talents of MacLaine and Hopkins, the entire film would have been a spoof.

Rated R — at the Plaza Cinema.

Linda Lavin Is Asking Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linda Lavin, star of the CBS-TV series "Alice," has asked for a divorce from actor Ron Leibman, from whom she had been separated for five years.

In an action filed Tuesday in Superior Court, Ms. Lavin, 40, said there were irreconcilable differences between her and Leibman, to whom she has been married for 11 years.

The couple appeared together this season on Ms. Lavin's first TV special, "Linda in Wonderland."

Leibman, star of the TV series "Kaz" during the 1978-79 season, most recently was seen in the Academy Award-winning movie "Norma Rae."

The two met while performing in a play, "Cop-Out," at the Eugene O'Neill Theater in Waterford, Conn., and were married in September 1969.

It was Ms. Lavin's only marriage, said spokeswoman Susan Chavez. They have no children.

Rescue Mission Nets Pot Ship

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — A rescue mission turned into a major drug seizure when the Coast Guard found four to 20 tons of marijuana aboard the disabled fishing vessel Don Franc.

At least 250 canvas-wrapped bales of marijuana weighing 30 to 80 pounds each were counted by crew members of the cutter Cherokee who boarded the Don Franc on Tuesday during the search for a missing crewman, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

But the crew counted only the bales visible on the deck and in the hold, and the actual cargo could be as much as 20 tons, the vessel's capacity, said Petty Officer Bruce Pimental.

"When these people load the boats, they pull up the boards and stuff it in wherever they can," he said. Seven of the eight crew members of the Don Franc were in the Virginia Beach city jail Tuesday night in the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. They were expected to face arraignment today on unspecified drug charges.

The eighth crewman, a 50-year-old Colombian, was presumed drowned after the Don Franc's engines quit in 15-foot seas Monday about 60 miles southeast of Cape Henry.

The Coast Guard searched more than five hours Monday before giving up its hunt for the man, who still was not identified Tuesday pending notification of relatives.

He fell into 39-degree water after a 17-foot skiff containing the crew members overturned as it made its way from the abandoned Don Franc toward the Italian motor vessel Centauro.

Officials will be unable to determine the total weight of the cargo until the 55-foot boat is towed into the Coast Guard Support Center at Craney Island, Pimental said.

If the vessel is loaded to capacity, the seizure would be nearly as large as one Dec. 21 when the Coast Guard found 21 tons of marijuana aboard the 76-foot Panamanian trawler Silvano after it ran aground at the mouth of the York River.

Eight crew members from the Silvano were arrested and also are being held in the Virginia Beach jail pending federal grand jury action Jan. 12.

The Coast Guard was unable to say where the Don Franc is registered or who owns it.

Bess Truman In Hospital Care

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bess Truman, the 95-year-old widow of President Harry S. Truman, was in good condition at the Research Medical Center here, a hospital spokesman says.

Mrs. Truman was admitted Tuesday for a urinary tract problem and a minor skin irritation, the spokesman said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in the final session of 1980.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.96 to 963.99 in the first half hour.

In the past several sessions, the market has been closing out its busiest year ever on an uncharacteristically quiet note.

Analysts note widespread expectations of a recession in early 1981. Although interest rates have begun dropping from their recent record highs, doubts persist about how far and how fast they might decline.

Still, many brokers believe there will be renewed heavy activity in the market once President-elect Reagan is sworn in on Jan. 20 and his economic policies begin to take shape.

Today's early prices included Boeing, up 1/4 at 44; American Home Products, up 1/4 at 27 1/2; and General Motors, down 1/4 at 45 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average edged up 1.45 to 962.03.

Declines slightly outnumbered advances in the overall tally on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 39.75 million shares, against 36.06 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .14 to 77.58.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .17 at 349.54.

his father and stepmother. He left home after a final domestic blowup and, at the age of 16, found himself wandering along the Savannah River south of Augusta, Ga.

That's where he says he met Wong Chung Wu, a white-haired refugee from China who changed his life.

No documents exist to back up the next part of his story. Hydrick claims he stayed a year with the old man, purportedly a Tibetan high priest before the Communist takeover in 1949.

"He taught me to levitate, fight blindfolded. He taught me about hate, fear and love," Hydrick says in a soft drawl. "He said I reminded him of a little lost animal in a new jungle." Which, Hydrick says, is what he was.

Hydrick eventually left his mentor and while hitchhiking in California in December 1977 caught a ride in a van. Police later stopped the van and arrested its occupants, including Hydrick, on charges of kidnapping and robbing two men before dumping them along the highway.

Hydrick says the actual crime occurred before he was picked up and that he was the next intended victim, not an accomplice. But, he continues, because he had personal articles belonging to one of the kidnapping victims in his pockets, he was also charged.

Hydrick says his attorney told him he would be released with time served if he pleaded guilty. Hydrick pleaded guilty — and spent the next 2 1/2 years in the Los Angeles County Jail. He says he spent much of the time meditating in solitary confinement: "That's where a lot of my power increased."

The guards, he says, were afraid of him. "I would put out the lights and stop clocks" in order to get out of solitary, Hydrick recalls with a laugh.

Hydrick is eager to pass on his peculiar skills to others. Already, he says a 6-year-old pupican move pencils and plants. "I intend to have a monastery, a temple, to train people the way offile," says Hydrick.

"The whole world has become negative," he adds. "Think positive thoughts and you get positive results." To illustrate his point, he picks up a reporter's hand, points it at a pencil and knits his brow. The pencil moves.

became general counsel for Dixon Marketing International in Kinston. From 1973, until he joined the Nixon White House staff, Howard was assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina.

"I think there were about 400 nominated," for the Army secretary post, Howard said. "The three of us are still in, but I'd have to say that Marsh is the leading contender."

"The military," according to Howard, "is wrought with a host of problems," and "needs to be overhauled. We need to return the esprit...moral," through better pay, accommodations for families, "and pride in doing one's job. I think pride can be returned."

A candidate for the U. S. House of Representatives from North Carolina's First District in 1972, Howard has served as Pitt County Republican Party chairman and the First Congressional District chairman. He also was a Reagan delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1976 and 1980.

Howard's wife, the former Eloise McGinty, was Eastern North Carolina coordinator for Reagan in 1976 and 1980, and currently is home office administrative assistant to Senator-elect John East.

SIXTH YEAR

Dr. Harold W. Deitch will begin his sixth year Sunday at Red Oak Christian Church. Over 200 members have been added to the church and a day nursery school has been started. Church attendance is at the all time high.

One of the special features has been to have a dinner for the patients at their nursing homes during December. Dinner was prepared by church members.

Unemployed....

Data just released by the state ESC office shows there were 18,100 fewer Tar Heels employed in agriculture during November, a drop of 22 percent from October. Non-agricultural employment suffered a decline of 3,300 jobs, representing a 1.2 percent unemployment increase in this field.

In some areas of employment, however, gains in employment were reported. Manufacturing employment added 3,200 employees, and the trade sector of employment added 4,600 more people during November, primarily in preparation for holiday sales.

Other gains were experienced by government, which added 1,800 employees; durable goods manufacture, up 2,200 jobs; and non-durable goods manufacture, which added 1,000 additional positions in November.

Dave Garrison, assistant director of North Carolina's ESC Bureau of Employment Security Research, warns that "despite November's apparent stability, we expect unemployment to be up in December and again in January. With interest rates so exceptionally high, we see no immediate relief in the unemployment picture until interest returns to more normal levels."

Brown Tops Pirates For Second Time

Turning In

night's Elm City Classic basketball tournament in Fairfield, Conn. Brown defeated the Pirates, 69-59. (AP Laserphoto)

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer
FAIRFIELD, Conn. — East Carolina coach Dave Odom is looking for a breath of fresh air, but Tuesday night the air was just plain foul.

While Odom paced the sidelines the Pirates were out-busted, outplayed, out-bounded and outshot by a less-talented but more intense Brown University team.

The result was a 69-59 loss to the Bruins in the consolation game of the Elm City Classic. The defeat, the Pirates' fifth straight, left ECU at 3-6 and Odom perhaps as upset as he has ever been at his club in his two-year tenure at ECU.

"The five straight losses wouldn't bother me as long as you're hustling and playing hard," Odom said. "But we did not play hard in the first half."

"Losing teams struggle and right now we're very, very tense," Odom said. "The kids smell success but there's nobody who wants to take the shot or make the pass that we need."

"They're afraid of failure instead of desiring success. Right now we're a bad basketball team. I know that. But the kids now have got to dedicate themselves totally to basketball. You've got to want it and then once you get it it's like a breath of fresh air."

Odom won't be standing idly by awaiting the fresh air so needed by ECU. Instead, changes are in the offing before ECU's next game Saturday night against Campbell University.

"They're going to be some changes made this week," he said. "I don't know where yet. That'll be determined by practice. And they're going to be hard and long."

"I think some of the guys are relying on their reputation. But it's going to be all basketball from here on out. They're going to have to be ready to make sacrifices."

"We tried to love them; we've tried to be nice to them. But I can find 50 kids in the vicinity of Greenville who could have a 3-6 record with the schedule we play."

And perhaps play defense and shoot the ball better. ECU hit just 37% from the floor for the game (33% in the first half compared to Brown's 54% (65% in the second half.)

"Our offense is out of sync and that's probably part of the reason our defense isn't doing the job," Odom said, whose Pirates lost to Brown for the second time in less than two weeks. Brown, which has won only the two games it has played with ECU, defeated the Pirates, 80-71, in the consolation game of the Iron Duke last weekend.

Making Odom even more upset, however, was the fact the Bruins, who were led by Bill Chapman's 15 points and Jeff Samsen's 14, also out-bounded the Pirates, 15-to-6 to take a 61-49 lead with 41/2 minutes left before coasting home with the win.

"It's also ridiculous for us to be out-bounded by a team like this," Odom said. "It's absolutely asinine. But I've got to take the blame for that."

"Right now we don't have a real leader out there on the court. Maybe (Charles) Watkins comes as close as anyone we have."

Watkins, who joined the Pirates this past week after a four-year stint in the U.S. Marines, provided what little leadership there was in the first half for the Pirates, scoring eight of his 14 points in the first 20 minutes.

Junior forward David Underwood took over much of the burden in the second half as he scored 10 of his game-high 16 points, including eight-of-eight from the foul line.

"Underwood really wants to play," Odom said. "He practices hard and he plays hard. More than anyone else, he also has to fight his reputation. But I don't think anybody hurts as much as David after a loss."

"Charles doesn't really know the offense yet," Odom added. "He doesn't understand what we're trying to do."

Watkins, who started his first game as a Pirate Tuesday night, hit ECU's first two field goals of the opening half but Brown gradually took command, using a patient passing offense that had the Pirate defenders on the baseline out of position time and again.

"Leading 13-11 with 12:09 left in the first half, the Bruins outscored the Pirates 10-2 to take a 23-13 advantage with just under five minutes left."

The Pirates tied it at 23-23 with a 10-0 run, sparked by a jumper and two free throws by Watkins. But the Bruins regained the lead on a Steve Bowman jumper from the right corner and led at the half, 31-27.

In the early moments of the second half ECU again tied the score, this time at 35-35 behind six straight points by Underwood. It stayed close until the Bruins, ahead 46-43, out-scored the Pirates, 15-to-6 to take a 61-49 lead with 41/2 minutes left before coasting home with the win.

"It's tough right now," Odom said afterwards. "This (losing streak) could go on longer. We don't want that, but it could."

Coaches Trade Praises Of Bluebonnet Teams

By BILL WERONKA

Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — North Carolina coach Dick Crum and Texas coach Fred Akers traded words of praise and expressions of hope Tuesday as their football teams wrapped up preparations for tonight's 22nd annual Bluebonnet Bowl.

Game time is at 8 p.m. EST in the Astrodome.

Thirteenth-ranked North Carolina, 10-1 and the Atlantic Coast Conference champion, was rated a slight favorite. Texas finished fourth in the Southwest Conference with an overall 7-4 mark.

The Longhorns suffered through a season in which injuries knocked out a number of key players. And while Texas was still not back up to full strength, Akers said he felt better about his situation.

"We're probably as healthy as we've been since early in the season," he said.

Texas lost a number of players to various injuries, and all are back but not all are 100 percent. The key loss this season was in the backfield. The team's leading rusher, even though he played only seven games, was A.J. "Jam" Jones. He was lost because of a dislocated collarbone.

The other starting halfback was Rodney Tate, who was knocked out with an infected finger. Carl Robinson suffered through the season with a bad ankle.

But all have been given clearance to play, Akers said. "A.J. has been cleared to play," he said. "He will play but I don't know how much."

Akers said Tate and Robinson would also play but not start. Starting at halfback will be sophomore Darryl Clark and freshman Mike Luck. At quarterback, Rick McIvor will start only his second game for the Longhorns. Donnie Little, who started all but one game this year, injured his knee in the final game of the season but is expected to see action.

But playing or not, Akers said he was just glad to have Jones on the field, knowing he could play because of what he meant to the team — "about 147 yards a game."

Crum does not have the injury problems. Only one starter is questionable — wide receiver Jon Richardson, because of a sprained ankle.

North Carolina's backfield, which averaged 271 yards on the ground this season, is intact.

Tailback Amos Lawrence and backup Kelvin Bryant each went over 1,000 yards this season. Crum was not about to say Tuesday if one was better than the other. He only said they were different type runners.

Crum also said he did not see the game as a contest between the ACC and the Southwest Conference. Rather it was "just North Carolina against Texas." Nor did he see it as a way to make up for the Tar Heels' 41-7 loss to Oklahoma.

Crum said the main thing that concerned him about the Longhorns was their speed. But, he added, "their defense is the cornerstone of the team."

Lawrence, whose team plays Texas in the Bluebonnet Bowl tonight, told The Associated Press in an interview Sunday that, if he could go back in time, he would go to the California school because he felt he would have stood a better chance for the Heisman Trophy there.

A school spokesman said his girlfriend read him the story over the phone Tuesday and he was extremely upset.

"It may have come out that way, but that's not what I meant," Lawrence said Tuesday. "I've enjoyed my four years at North Carolina very much. So many people have helped me there. I didn't mean to put them down. I'd go to Carolina again in a minute if I had a chance."

"It's a great place for a running back especially. It was

ACC: Four Win, Two Lose

By The Associated Press
Third-ranked Virginia stumbled but recovered, sixth-ranked North Carolina fell all the way and couldn't bounce, eighth-ranked Wake Forest had the dickens of a time with Davidson, ninth-ranked Maryland took its own tournament with ease and unranked Clemson played it to the hilt in Honolulu.

Atlantic Coast Conference basketball had its ups and downs Tuesday night.

Unheralded James Madison pushed Virginia to the limit before falling to the Cavaliers 53-52 on Lee Raker's jumper with 66 seconds remaining. Raker's shot was all that saved Virginia center Ralph Sampson from a woeful homecoming.

Coach Dean Smith said the folks in Los Angeles have "been saying a lot of nice things about our team, and I guess our players heard that." That was Smith's explanation for North Carolina's 79-60 loss to unranked Minnesota in the finals of the Trojans' Holiday Classic.

Wake Forest's Frank Johnson says the Deacons can always expect a tough game from Davidson, and that's what they got before overpowering the Southern Conference team 83-70. The Terps took the Maryland Invitational championship in a breeze, walking past St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania 74-57.

In Honolulu, Larry Nance found the Hawaiian climate to his liking and canned 16 points as Clemson squeaked past the University of Hawaii 75-71 in overtime to win the Rainbow Classic tournament.

Virginia's game was a homecoming for Sampson, the 7-foot-4 sophomore who led Harrisonburg, Va., High School to state titles before going to Charlottesville. The contest was "my game of the season," Sampson said, but the Madison defenders held him to 11 points. He did get 14 rebounds.

"Give Madison credit," said Sampson. "They played me as tight as anyone has all season. I knew it wouldn't be easy."

Jeff Lamp led all scoring with 17 points while Madison's Linton Townes had 15 points. In Charlotte, N.C., Wake Forest shook off a pesty Davidson team to take its ninth straight game. Johnson's game-high 24 points fueled the Deacons, but the senior guard praised the Wildcats, saying tough basketball games between the two schools are becoming a habit.

Davidson tried to control the game by putting the brakes on the Deacons' running game. That strategy brought the Wildcats within seven points of Wake Forest, but then the Deacons employed their own four-corners offense, forcing Davidson to foul. The Deacons went 8-for-9 from the free throw line to ice the game in the final minutes.

At College Park, Maryland's Albert King scored 20 points and was named the most valuable player for the third successive year in the Maryland Invitational. King added 13 rebounds to the scoring effort.

Ernest Graham had 14 points for Maryland, now 9-1.

Sophomore forward Dominique Wilkins scored a career high 31 points to lead Georgia past instate rival Georgia Tech.

The Yellow Jackets outscored Georgia 46-44 from the field, but numerous fouls called under the basket put Georgia at the free throw line 28 times and the Bulldogs converted for 21 points.

Guard Stu Lyon had 16 points to lead Georgia Tech, now 3-7.

Hawaii out-rebounded the taller Clemson players in the first half to stay close despite a 30 percent shooting effort from the floor. The Rainbows' only lead came six minutes into the second half, but Clemson regained the advantage and held it until two Hawaii free throws tied the score at 63-all.

Nance scored four of his points and Vincent Hamilton got six in the overtime period to down the Rainbows, who fell to 5-3 for the season. Clemson moved its record to 10-1.

Wake Forest forward Glenn Mayers goes for two points as Davidson's Rich DiBenedetto guards him during first period action between Wake Forest and Davidson Tuesday night at the Charlotte Coliseum. Wake Forest won the game, 83-70. (AP Laserphoto)

Which Way Did He Go?

As North Carolina defenders Pete Budko (34) and Jim Braddock (24) are left facing each other, Minnesota's John Wiley (35) sneaks around them to get off a pass during first period action in the Winston Tire Classic championship game at Los Angeles Wednesday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Williamston Stops Win Streak Of Redskins

ROBERSONVILLE — Williamston took advantage of a crippled up lineup for Roanoke and handed the Redskins their first loss of the season last night, winning the Martin County Holiday Classic, 38-37.

Roanoke's girls remained unbeaten, taking their championship, 52-39, while Jamesville won the consolation boys' title, 58-52.

Roanoke, missing leading scorer Maurice Chance, out with pneumonia, couldn't seem to put things together, as Williamston broke their winning streak at eight.

The Redskins held the early lead, 6-4, and moved ahead, 19-15 at the half. Williamston cut that back to 29-26 going into the final frame. In that, Williamston fouled Mike Neal, who had missed the semifinals due to illness and still not at full strength, with ten seconds left. Neal missed his shot and with three seconds left, Tom Bennett hit for Williamston to give them the final 38-37 victory.

McKinley Williams led Williamston with 13 points, while Angelo Spruill had 12 for Roanoke.

In the girls' championship, Roanoke, now 9-0, ran out to a 14-4 lead in the first period, but Jamesville cut it back to 26-16 by the half. In the third period, the Lady Bullets continued to come back, trimming it to 32-26. But in the final quarter, Roanoke rolled away, 20-10, to win it.

Sylvia Parker led Roanoke with 25, while Terri Bell and Tammy Williams each had ten for Jamesville.

In the boys' consolation game, Bear Grass took a 12-9 lead at the end of the first period, but couldn't hold it to the half. In the third period, the Lady Bullets continued to come back, trimming it to 32-26. But in the final quarter, Roanoke rolled away, 20-10, to win it.

Jamesville's scoring was led by Kerwin Cross with 19, while Gerald Keys had 15 and Ray bell had 12. Bear Grass was led by William Roberson with 23.

Rams Win Tri-County

WHEAT SWAMP — Greene Central continued its domination of the Tri-County Holiday Tournament last night, winning the boys' championship for the third straight year and the girls' title for the second in a row.

The Rams topped North Lenoir, 51-49, in the final seconds of the game for the victory, while the girls' gained a 44-31 win over South Lenoir.

Ayden-Grifton won both of the consolation games, the girls winning 37-35, and the boys, 63-61. For the A-G girls, it was their first win of the year.

Greene Central's girls eased ahead, 6-4, after one period, then the two teams matched points in the second frame to a 20-18 halftime lead by the Lady Rams. Greene Central began to pull away in the third, 13-10, to lead 33-28, and then blitzed the South Lenoir lassies, 11-3, in the final period.

Letha Taylor, named the tourney's MVP, led the Lady Rams with 19 points. Catrina Foy led South Lenoir with 10.

In the boys' championship game, Greene Central moved ahead, 13-8, in the early going and held a 28-20 lead at intermission. North Lenoir put on a third period rally that put them into a 35-34 lead going into the final period. But the Rams fought back, and David Joyner hit a 15-foot jumper with four seconds left to give Greene Central the title again.

John Ray led the Ram scoring with 17, while Roderick

Lane, named Most Valuable Player in the tourney, had 15. North Lenoir was paced by Eugene Connor with 17, while Kevin Battle had 13 and Isaac Heath had 12.

In the boys' consolation game, Ayden-Grifton built up a 14-8 lead in the first period and extended that to 32-23 by halftime. South Lenoir cut one point off that in the third, but still trailed 51-43 going into the last frame. In that, South Lenoir rallied to take the lead for the first time with 2:16 left, but Ayden-Grifton held on.

Finally, Clarence Baker hit two free throws for a 61-60 lead, but a free throw by South Lenoir tied it once more. Ayden-Grifton then held the ball until Jesse Anderson hit with 26 seconds left for a 63-61 lead. South Lenoir suffered a turnover after that and A-G ran out the clock.

Baker led the Chargers with 16 points, while Thoomas Anderson had 14 and Timmy Edwards had 11. South Lenoir was led by Isaac Kornegay with 21, while Chris Jones had 10.

The girls' consolation game was also a nip-and-tuck affair. Ayden-Grifton moved ahead, 9-6, in the first period, and upped that to 19-15 at halftime. North Lenoir rallied in the second half, taking a 31-27 lead into the final quarter. But Ayden-Grifton came back, 10-4, with Tracy Durant hitting a field goal and a free throw in the closing minutes to wrap it up for the Chargerettes.

Durant led Ayden-Grifton with nine points while Susan Smith led North Lenoir with 10.

The wins boosted the Greene Central boys to 9-2, while the girls are now 5-6. The Ayden-Grifton boys are 4-6, while the girls are 1-9. Greene Central plays host to Conley on Tuesday, while Ayden-Grifton travels to Southern Nash.

Hokies Won't Be In Awe Of Miami Squad

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Virginia Tech Coach Bill Dooley, acknowledging that Miami of Florida has been a great team at times this season, says his unranked Hokies will not be awed when they face the 20th-ranked Hurricanes on Friday in the Peach Bowl.

Bowl officials expect a crowd of about 50,000 for the 3 p.m. EST nationally televised game at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. Both schools enter the contest with 8-3 records.

"On certain days, Miami has been a great team, but not every game," said Dooley, whose squad worked out Tuesday after arriving in Atlanta on Monday. "We aren't awed by them. We are expecting to win."

Winning is something Dooley has been associated with during his 11-year head coaching career. He guided North Carolina to six bowls and led the Hokies to their first since 1968 in only his third season at the Blacksburg, Va. school.

It is also the first post-season appearance for Miami since 1967, a feat accomplished in only two years under Coach Howard Schnellenberger.

The Hurricanes met six bowl-bound teams during the season, handing No. 2 Florida State its only loss, and beating Florida and Houston while losing to Penn State, Notre Dame and Mississippi State.

Miami's defense, which was ranked 13th nationally, had one shutout and held opponents to one touchdown in six other games. Its offense set a school record with 3,756 yards, getting 1,855 rushing and 1,901 passing.

In the 10-9 victory over powerful Florida State, Miami held the Seminoles to only 25 yards rushing. But Dooley says his ground-oriented offense can run on the Hurricanes.

"Obviously we can't just run against a team which is physically so strong. We'll have to mix it up," he said.

"I don't care who it is, I think we can run the football," Dooley quickly added.

Defensively, Tech also was among the nation's leaders, ranking fifth in total defense and seventh against the rush. The defense was led by end Robert Brown, whom Dooley says should have been an All-American.

"I cannot imagine there is a better defensive end in the country than Robert," said Dooley. "Unfortunately, he did not get any pre-season buildup because he was a transfer to our University."

Brown, who had 65 tackles, including 15 for losses totalling 105 yards, will be challenged by Miami quarterback Jim Kelly, a sophomore who threw for 1,519 yards and 11 touchdowns and a running game led by Lorenzo "Smookey" Roan, who had 669 yards.

Portland used planning, patience and a pep talk — as well as the strong throwing arm of Kermit Washington and the uncanny jumping ability of Billy Ray Bates — to hand the Philadelphia 76ers their third consecutive loss 109-108 Tuesday night.

The Trail Blazers had gone ahead 107-106 on Mychal Thompson's spinning layup with six seconds to play, but Julius Erving drove to the basket, was fouled by Thompson and sank two free throws with one second left to put the 76ers back on top by one.

Portland called a timeout to do some planning, and what Coach Jack Ramsay came up with was a job pass to Bates heading for the hoop.

"That's the only thing we could do to win the game," said Ramsay, who originally intended to have Thompson made the pass. "But in the huddle, Kermit said to me, 'Let me make the pass, I can make it.'"

"But of course there was no question who the receiver was going to be — Billy Ray."

Bates had been on the bench but was inserted into the lineup for the final play — after getting a pep talk from Washington.

"I said, 'Billy, just be patient. Good things come to he who waits,'" said Washington. "He waited and got in the game with one second and became the star."

Taking the ball at midcourt following the timeout, Washington lobbed it to Bates as the flashy backcourtman broke for the basket. Bates grabbed it and laid it in over Erving and Darryl Dawkins at the buzzer to give Portland its 13th victory in the last 14 National Basketball Association games.

Philadelphia is now 1-3 on its West Coast road swing, but still has the league's best record at 33-7.

In other NBA games, the Boston Celtics beat the Phoenix Suns 116-97, the New York Knicks edged the Dallas Mavericks 100-98, the San Antonio Spurs trimmed the Seattle SuperSonics 102-100, the Golden State Warriors nipped the Kansas City Kings 106-104, the Utah Jazz defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 110-100, the Atlanta Hawks downed the Detroit Pistons 96-89, the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Washington Bullets 115-94, the Chicago Bulls topped the New Jersey Nets 121-110, the Denver Nuggets outscored the Indiana Pacers 127-110 and the Houston Rockets defeated the San Diego Clippers 104-98.

Celtics 116, Suns 97

Boston won its 11th in a row and pulled within 2½ games of the 76ers by rallying from a 13-point halftime deficit and beating Phoenix, which had been riding a seven-game winning streak.

The Celtics outscored the Suns 67-35 in the second half. Nate Archibald scored 12 points and Robert Parish 10 in the third period to help Boston take a five-point lead, and the Celtics sealed the victory by limiting the Suns to 15 points in the fourth quarter.

Nicks 100, Mavericks 98

Dallas fought back from a 13-point halftime deficit only to lose on two free throws by Bill Cartwright with 35 seconds left. Cartwright led the Knicks with 21 points, seven of them in the final five minutes. Jim Spanarkel had 26 points and Tom LaGarde 23 for Dallas, and LaGarde grabbed a club-record 17 rebounds.

Spurs 102, Sonics 100

Forward Mark Olberding's eight-foot jumper with one second left gave San Antonio the victory over Seattle, which had led by 11 points in the third quarter. The Spurs' George Gervin led all scorers with 28 points and also made two key steals in the closing minutes.

Warriors 106, Kings 104

Reserve forward Purvis Short's 22-foot jumper with three seconds left gave Golden State the victory after Kansas City rookie Hawkeye Whitney had tied the game with a basket four seconds earlier. Bernard King led the Warriors with 32 points while Reggie King topped Kansas City with 22.

Jazz 110, Lakers 100

Adrian Dantley scored 34 points and rookie Darrell Griffith added 25 as the Jazz knocked off the defending champion Lakers, going in front late in the third quarter and then pulling away.

Hawks 96, Pistons 89

John Drew scored 10 of his 18 points in the third quarter as Atlanta opened a 19-point lead and coasted to the finish against Detroit, which lost its fifth in a row despite 29 points by Phil Hubbard.

Bucks 115, Bullets 94

Marques Johnson scored 14 of his game-high 32 points in the first quarter to give the Bucks a lead they never relinquished. He made 15 of 22 field goal attempts and also led all rebounders with 12.

Bulls 121, Nets 110

Reggie Theus scored 20 points as Chicago won its sixth in a row by outscoring New Jersey 30-20 in the final period. The Bulls' reserves combined for 57 points to hand the Nets their sixth straight loss.

Nuggets 127, Pacers 110

Denver, getting 23 points each from Dan Issel and Alex English, built a 30-point lead in the third quarter and breezed past Indiana.

Rockets 104, Clippers 98

Houston outscored San Diego 10-2 in the final three minutes to end the Clippers' six-game winning streak. Moses Malone led the Rockets with 30 points, including five in the closing burst.

No Charges

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — No charges will be filed against Missouri basketball star Steve Stipanovich for reporting he was shot by a gunman when in fact he shot himself accidentally, says Boone County Prosecutor Joe Mosely.

Stipanovich helped his cause by retracting his original story and admitting Sunday that he accidentally shot himself, Mosely said Tuesday.

"The major concern of this office in this type of case is that the individual involved not receive special consideration merely because he is a public figure," Mosely said in a statement. "At the same time, we do not feel that an individual should be treated more severely because of his status."

Dooley: This Is My Biggest Game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "There's no question this is the biggest game I've been involved in," says Coach Vince Dooley of the No. 1-ranked Georgia Bulldogs.

With those words, Dooley, who has been Georgia's head coach for 17 years, set the stage for the Bulldogs' Sugar Bowl showdown Thursday against seventh-ranked Notre Dame.

Dooley's players have taken the cue from their coach. Guard Tim Morrison showed up at a news conference Tuesday wearing a tee-shirt that read "Just One More Time." The shirts are the idea of Georgia's Mr. Motivation, who also happens to be defensive coordinator Erk Russell.

"It means we have to win one more game," Morrison said. "Just go out and give it all I have just one more time."

If Morrison and the rest of the Bulldogs can beat Notre Dame — and the No. 1-ranked team in the country, the nation's only unbeaten-untied outfit, is a disrespectful 1-point underdog — they almost surely will clinch Georgia's first-ever national college football championship. Perhaps then they will also earn some respect.

"We feel like we deserve to be No. 1," says quarterback Buck Belue, who must do more than just hand off or pitch out to freshman tailback whiz Herschel Walker if the Bulldogs are to win. "It gets you down when you hear people say that Georgia has played a bunch of pushovers. We played four traditional rivals (South Carolina, Florida, Auburn and Georgia Tech) in a row at the end of the year and they weren't patsies. We deserve more respect and I feel like we will get it if we play like I think we're going to play."

"It hasn't been hard keeping my mind on the game. We're playing for the national championship. Notre Dame's tradition is known nationwide. Georgia's got a good tradition, but mainly in the South."

On the other hand, says Dooley, "The Notre Dame name will always be something special to a lot of people. As a youngster, I listened to Notre Dame games on radio and followed all their great players. I'm not sure about our players because there are other great teams today. But Notre Dame will always have a rich tradition."

That tradition includes plenty of surprises and Notre Dame may have another one in store Thursday. Coach Dan Devine, who is bowing out after this game, is being secretive about his starting quarterback. Freshman Blair Kiel started the last eight games after senior Mike Courey got the nod in the first three.

Asked about which will start the Sugar Bowl, Devine says: "We'll just keep that to ourselves. If it's a slight advantage to us not to announce it, we'll take it."

Kiel, however, suspects the assignment may go to Courey.

"I didn't play very well against Southern Cal," he said of the 20-3 setback in the regular-season finale that dealt Notre Dame (9-1-1) its only defeat. "Mike came in in the second half and moved the team so he might have an edge."

"That's the way it's been really all year. Even when I started I never really felt I was the starter until the next game because during practice all week there was stiff competition between us."

"I don't think we'll know until the day of the game," says Courey. "They've been working us both and we're prepared."

But will Notre Dame really be prepared or did the Fighting Irish lose their incentive after losing to Southern Cal and dropping from second place to seventh in The Associated Press ratings?

James Madison Gains Respect Despite Defeat

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes college basketball coaches, like fishermen, tend to talk more about the ones that got away. Take the other night, for example, when Lou Campanelli's Dukes of James Madison almost landed Virginia.

"I think this game has got to put us on the map in regards to gaining some respect," he said. "We played perhaps the best center in the land, and we took the things he does well away from them."

Rhetoric notwithstanding, James Madison fell one point shy of beating the third-ranked Cavaliers Tuesday night, even though the Dukes held 7-foot-2 Virginia center Ralph Sampson to 11 points.

Lee Raker saved Virginia's perfect record by hitting a jumpshot with 1:06 to go, lifting the Cavaliers to a 53-52 victory and giving Sampson a happy homecoming.

It was the first time Sampson had played basketball in Harrisonburg, Va., since he led Harrisonburg High School to state titles in 1978 and 1979.

"It was special," Sampson said, "but I wish I'd played a better game."

Top-ranked DePaul also saw action Tuesday night, and the Blue Demons ran their winning streak to 11 games by defeating San Diego State 85-69 in the title game of the Cabrillo Classic at San Diego. Sixth-ranked North Carolina, meanwhile, lost its second game of the season, bowing 76-60 to Minnesota in the title game of the Trojan Classic at Los Angeles, and 11th-ranked Texas A&M and No. 15 Indiana each were defeated for the second night in a row.

Texas A&M lost 39-38 in overtime to Eastern Montana in the consolation round of the KOA tournament at Billings, Mont., and Pan American downed Indiana 66-60 in the third-place game of the Rainbow Classic at Honolulu.

In other games involving ranked teams, fifth-ranked Kentucky clobbered Maine 100-54; No. 8 Wake Forest downed Davidson 83-70; No. 9 Maryland won the Maryland Invitational by beating St. Joseph's, Pa., 74-57; 10th-ranked Louisiana State whipped St. Francis, Pa., 91-65; No. 12 Michigan defeated Detroit 85-68; No. 14 Iowa drubbed Northern Iowa 86-52, and 17th-ranked South Alabama downed Fordham 79-61 in the title game of the Senior Bowl.

Defending NCAA champion Louisville finally got back on the winning track in the consolation game of the Trojan tournament, beating Southern Cal 79-50 with 28 points from Derek Smith. Louisville has won just twice in seven outings.

Pride In Upstairs, Downstairs

By GALE TOLLIN
Associated Press Writer
BELLE PLAINE, Minn.
(AP) — Until someone privy to such lofty information flushes out a challenger, the proud folks of Belle Plaine will go on boasting about the nation's only two-story outhouse.

Robbed By Groundhogs

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — The job was so smooth, there were few clues. Warren County Coroner Ralph Young was baffled for days about who stole the electrical tape from his water pipes.

But while Young's pipes froze, the furry thieves were holed up in their burrows, enjoying their warmest winter ever.

"I guess I was providing electric blankets for groundhogs," he said.

The theft was discovered when the water pipes froze beneath Young's A-frame house. They had been wrapped in electrical tape to prevent freezing.

He summoned an electrician and the two men uncovered clues indicating that groundhogs had torn the tape from the pipes and dragged it back home to their burrows.

"The electrician couldn't get the tape out of the holes either," Young said. "I think maybe the groundhogs were holding onto it for dear life."

Several new layers of electrical tape fixed the pipes. Young cornered seven groundhogs in traps, but now wonders what's in store when summer returns. There are ducts to his air conditioning within the critters' reach.

"I just hope next summer they don't take my air conditioning ducts down into their burrows," Young said.

TERROR KILLINGS
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Eight people were killed during a blackout in the southern Philippines when a man hurled a grenade into a funeral parlor, police said.

uncommon free-standing outhouse lures tourists and helped get the 109-year-old Hooper-Bowler-Hillstrom House listed in the National Register of Historic Sites.

"It's the outhouse that attracts people to the site," says C. Edward Townsend, president of the Belle Plaine Historical Society and editor of the weekly Belle Plaine Herald.

In early days, people too genteel to speak of a "backhouse" referred to a privy as a "necessary." And certainly necessity mothered the invention of Belle Plaine's unique tourist attraction.

The Sam Bowlers, who occupied the house for 1886 to 1901, had 12 children. The Bowlers, as practical as they were prolific, designed the towering toilet so craftily that it could be used in unison by six people, three upstairs and three down.

The structure, about 5 by 8 feet, is as high as the two-story house and stands four feet from the dwelling. There are doors at each level. An upstairs house door opens to a walkway. Residents didn't have to go downstairs to reach the toilet. A couple of steps across the walkway brought them to the outhouse's upper door. Wooden latticework, a fence of sorts, gave privacy and protected against falls to the ground.

Historical Society guides sometimes describe the outhouse as one of the world's great engineering marvels. They've been known to jest that the "secret" of the design is that downstairs patrons are provided with umbrellas.

In reality, the "secret" is much more complicated. The rear interior wall of the downstairs section isn't the back of the building. The upstairs seat bench, on the other hand, is located all the way back. A chute is formed by the building's back wall and the false wall behind the first-story accommodations.

Editor Townsend tries to be objective but he can't conceal a wisp of hometown pride. "As far as we know, it's the only usable, two-story outhouse in the United States," he says.

Some retired men have taken to building birdhouse replicas of the outhouse. They're offered for sale to people touring the home. Restaurants and other business places in town display little posters picturing and advertising "the famous two-story outhouse, an engineering wonder."

In its lifespan, the dwelling was occupied successively by three families but it never acquired such conveniences as plumbing and city water. Businessman Sanford Hooper built the home in 1871. Bowler, a banker and owner of some gold mines, was the second owner. Flour miller Andrew Hillstrom followed, and his bachelor son, Fred, was the last occupant, living alone in the house for 15 years.

After the elderly Fred Hillstrom entered a nursing home in 1975, his property was offered for sale at $30,000. The price was primarily for the oak-shaded city block where the house sat. The assumption was that the old dwelling would be torn down.

Townsend, long interested in Belle Plaine history, felt the deteriorating house had historic value and should be preserved. The city council reasoned that the community of 2,700 people had more pressing needs.

To a skeptical council, Townsend offered to try to organize a local historical society which could seek federal and state funds for purchase of the house. A story in his newspaper brought membership applications and checks from as far away as California.

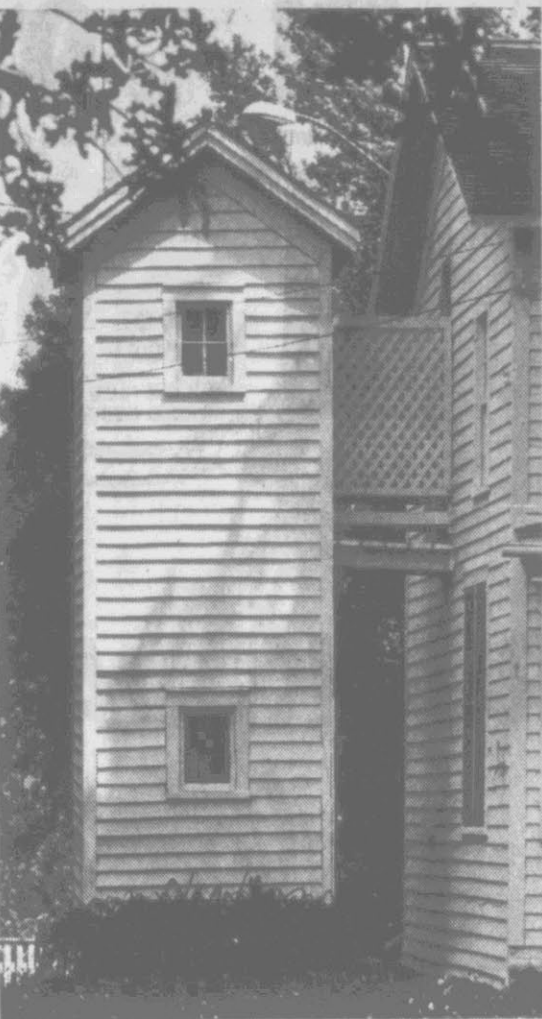

Since the land would make an attractive minipark, the federal government provided a grant. Money also came from Minnesota state bicentennial funds. The total was sufficient to buy the property and the materials needed to make some repairs.

More than 1,000 people filled bleachers for the dedication during the nation's bicentennial year of 1976, and the house was listed in 1979 as a historic site.

Rooms are furnished with items found in the house when the society took over and, chiefly, with donated relics. Some furnishings are clustered according to the years a family occupied the house. One parlor is done in the 1800s motif, for the Bowlers. The dining room, "the Hillstrom room," features mission oak furniture popular in the 1920s. The Hooper era displays, among other artifacts, the old desk used by Andrew G. Chatfield, federal judge for territorial Minnesota and the man who founded and named Belle Plaine in 1854.

DOUBLY CONVENIENT — What is believed to be the nation's only two-story outhouse helped get the Hooper-Bowler-Hillstrom House listed in the National Register of Historic Sites. The 109-year-old house, and its outhouse, are a tourist attraction in the southern Minnesota community of Belle Plaine.

Zimbabwe Is Prepared To Feed Others

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) - This young, black-governed nation is ready to become a major supplier of food to neighboring nations now dependent on white-ruled South Africa.

David Spain, president of the Commercial Farmers Union, predicts the 14,300 commercial farmers here in what was formerly the British colony of Rhodesia will this season reap the biggest crop of corn - staple diet of Africans in the region - since 1974.

Of the 1.6 million to 2.2 million metric tons of corn expected, between 800,000 and 1 million metric tons will be available for export to surrounding black countries that were bracing themselves for famine.

"It's a beautiful agricultural scene," said Spain, whose union includes the 5,300 white farmers who produce three-quarters of Zimbabwe's food and most of its annual exports worth $1.2 billion.

"They're fantastic, healthy and growing well," he said of the 790,400 acres of corn planted when the country got its formal independence from Britain last April 18 after the end of an economy-crippling guerrilla war.

"This will be the second best year for farmers in the history of the country," added Miles Johnson, who like most farmers planted corn instead of tobacco, traditionally the country's main agricultural export earner. "With guaranteed high prices from the government and markets galore we can't go wrong. Not even the weather can upset things."

White farmers, particularly, are jubilant about the prospects of a bumper harvest. They had been fearful of their future under black rule because they lived in remote, vulnerable homesteads at the front line of the seven-year war waged by guerrillas loyal to Robert Mugabe, now the prime minister, or Joshua Nomo, now home affairs minister.

"We have our problems," said Johnson, citing an increase in cattle rustling, crop theft, illegal squatting on land that blacks believe independence promised them, and harassment by some junior officials of Mugabe's governing Zimbabwe African National Union and Nkomo's Patriotic Front.

"But it's better than we can remember for years," Johnson added, noting that many of his neighbors were forced to abandon their farms during the war and that most of the 800 white civilian victims were farmers.

Unlike other African leaders who nationalized land, deported white farmers and constantly harassed others, Mugabe has repeatedly urged those in his country to stay.

Mugabe, addressing regular meetings of white farmers in country clubs, halls and hotels, has stressed the need for Zimbabwe to boost its agricultural output to avoid facing the sort of starvation that one-time food exporters like Angola, Kenya, Malawi and Zambia are today trying to avert.

Those countries - and others such as Mozambique, Tanzania and Zaire - have ordered hundreds of thousands of tons of corn and wheat from South Africa, the last white-ruled country on the continent.

That kind of dependence on South Africa undermines their oft-proclaimed support for black nationalist guerrillas hoping one day to oust South Africa's white government.

To make Zimbabwe the granary of central-southern Africa thousands of acres of unused or abandoned land are being given to peasant farmers who now number 700,000 and who produce 12 percent of the total agricultural sales.

Statistics reveal a dismal food production record for Africa as a whole. Up to 1939, according to the United Nations World Health Organization, the continent fed itself. In the last decade Africa suffered a decline of 1 percent a year in food output, forcing its countries to double grain imports to $1.8 billion and nudging 21 of 50 independent states to the brink of famine, the U.N. organization says.

Radicals In Japan See

Ranks Fade

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — For two decades Japan's anti-Establishment, leftist radicals could muster thousands of chanting followers for military-style demonstrations and confrontations with police. But their organizations have dwindled in recent years to a few hundred who now are fighting among themselves.

The leftists, whose ranks swelled with student followers in the 1968-72 era, lost a rallying point with the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, and have alienated many potential supporters through a series of violent incidents.

In recent years they have concentrated much activity against Tokyo's Narita International Airport, delaying the opening for seven years. Six people have died in anti-Narita violence launched by the left in an unlikely coalition with local farmers who objected to sacrificing their rice paddies for the 2,600-acre facility which finally opened in 1978.

However, the two major surviving factions of the once powerful Zengakuren student movement have devoted more energy to a blood feud which has claimed eight lives this year and 80 since 1969.

The Chukaku, a middle-core faction, struck most recently, beating to death five members of the rival Kakumaru, or Revolutionary Marxist faction, in broad daylight on a Tokyo street on Oct. 30.

There were several witnesses to the attack, but those who tried to call police found their telephone lines cut. The assailants, armed with steel pipes and hammers, disappeared before police arrived and a few hours later a spokesman claimed responsibility for the slayings.

Chukaku leader Makoto Matsuo, in a rare interview, recently explained his organization's motives: "The recent killings are basic to the concept of our movement. The Kakumaru oppose our concept of revolution. The killings are part of a process that will lead to an overall violent worldwide revolution."

The ambush was carried out, he added, by an underground military branch of the Chukaku formed "to conduct guerrilla activities against the Establishment and rival organizations. They are responsible for the October incident."

Asked who ordered the Oct. 30 slayings, he said: "The decision was made by the Politburo, a committee of 6 to 12 persons who run the Chukaku. Matsuo declined to say whether he was a Politburo member, but veteran observers remember him as a leading ideologist in the parent Zengakuren movement.

Police have raided Chukaku offices several times since the killings, but have not publicly identified any suspects. A review of the record shows that there has been only one arrest in connection with the 80 killings over the 11-year period.

Police, in fact, refuse to discuss the radicals, saying only that their investigations are "confidential." However, diplomats in contact with police said authorities believe that radical rightists, who occasionally attempt to assassinate politicians, are more dangerous to society now than the left, which is embroiled in internecine violence.

"Now people reject the radical left, but a decade ago it drew support from students, parents, housewives, even businessmen," said a former student radical.

He said student membership in leftist groups dropped off sharply in 1972 after the Japanese Red Army's attack at Israel's Lod Airport in which 28 people died and 79 were wounded.

The diplomatic observer, asked to account for the decline of the left, said, "The movement began to drop off in 1972 or so. They began to do things that scared the Japanese." He cited the Lod Airport massacre which, he said, "produced a profound sense of shame, as can only happen in Japan."

Snowmobile Becomes A Family Sport

SNOWMOBILE TRAILS — A group of snowmobilers departs Wausau, Wis. for a ride last winter on a public trail. The industry reports there are some 190,000 miles of public and private trails now open to snowmobiles in this country. (UPI Photo)

By RON KOEHLER
United Press International

The snowmobile. It's a machine many people once loved to hate.

The early models were noisy. Many were dangerous.

With few public trails set aside for snowmobile use, early enthusiasts blazed paths in the wilderness, scattering wildlife, trampling whatever got in their way.

Legislation was introduced in a number of states to limit or outlaw snowmobiles. Snowmobiles were barred from most state or national parks. Among landowners, snowmobiles were as popular as motorcycle gangs.

But the snowmobile has refused to go away.

Although annual sales now average 200,000 units per year — less than half of the industry peak of 500,000 in the early '70s. The industry says more people try snowmobiling each year.

Snowmobile resorts have cropped up throughout the snowbelt. They have helped rejuvenate the winter economy of small towns from the Rockies to the Great Lakes.

The transformation of the snowmobile from outlaw vehicle to family sport machine is the result of an industry drive to improve both its product and its tarnished image.

Funds invested in research and development made the machines safer and quieter. The industry lobbied for favorable legislation and public trails for riders. Grassroots organization brought enthusiasts into clubs that combined fellowship with discipline.

But snowmobiling still has detractors.

The Sierra Club and many private landowners still seek to curb snowmobile use. Although the industry has changed the minds of many lawmakers, a large portion of the public still perceives the snowmobile as an expensive toy for Polar Bear Club types.

"It has still got the same problems," says Russ Shay, a Washington-based lobbyist for the Sierra Club. "The snowmobile makes every acre of land into a highway system."

Joe Alexander, director of the Minnesota's Division of Natural Resources, is typical of those who shared Shay's views in the early '70s, only to become a convert.

"I'd have been the first one to vote to abolish snowmobiles if a referendum would have been placed on the ballot," Alexander said. "But the snowmobile industry saved itself... the clubs and the industry saved it."

Douglas Eoute of New Hampshire's Bureau of Off Highway Vehicles: "Seven or eight years ago we had some real problems, but now they are welcome."

New Hampshire, like most states with large numbers of snowmobilers, requires snowmobile registration and bans the machines from roads. Also typical of most states is New Hampshire's policy of allowing snowmobile use on public lands.

A key to the turnaround has been the snowmobile club. The International Snowmobile Industry Association estimates there are 10,000 clubs in the United States and Canada.

One is VAST — the Vermont Association of Snow Travelers.

"Back in 1970 we were running anywhere it was white," said Corinne

Lawson, a housewife and secretary of the organization. "A lot of the landowners got very upset. It was like the cowboys and Indians."

When landowners began seeking legislation to ban snowmobilers from the state, snowmobilers organized and worked out a compromise. Their group negotiates for permission to cross a person's property. In return, it promises to maintain a snowmobile trail and stay off unmarked areas.

"We don't get as many complaints as before," Mrs. Lawson said. "Most clubs do their own policing because they don't want to lose permission to use the land."

The arrangement has worked well, for both snowmobilers and landowners.

"If I lived on this land, I'd ban snowmobiles because they are noisy, smelly and obnoxious," said one Vermont landowner. "But snowmobile clubs bend over backwards to keep landowners happy... (and) since we live 20 miles away and can't patrol the land ourselves, it's better to cooperate with a snowmobile group and at least get some degree of control."

Close-knit snowmobile clubs and well defined trails also cut down the number of injuries.

In Wisconsin, more than 1,000 persons were injured on snowmobiles in the winter of 1974-75. That number was whittled to 388 in 1978-79. Alexander says the number of fatal snowmobile accidents in Minnesota has dropped by more than a third.

Derrick Crandall, vice president of the snowmobile association, marks the recession and oil embargo of the mid-1970s as a turning point.

Before the oil shortage, 129 manufacturers — including many fly-by-night operations — competed with machines of widely disparate quality.

But in the fuel shortage and resulting economic crunch sales dropped from 450,000 machines in 1973 to 195,000 in 1977. All but seven companies abandoned the business.

The remaining manufacturers formed the ISIA, which did research and development, set safety standards and lobbied for legislation.

Crandall is proud of a letter of commendation by the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission.

The commission had considered action to police the industry. But it reviewed the self-instituted changes — improved noise muffling systems, safer seats and rider training programs — and recommended no federal intervention.

The latest safety commission survey ranks snowmobile-related injuries 54th among leisure activities.

groups in the country."

"A lot of natural places that remain in the country remain that way because they're hard to get to," Shay said. "Even if 98 percent of the snowmobilers are responsible, there should be areas that are not open to snowmobiles. Some places are important enough that they ought to be preserved in a natural state."

Edgar Hetteen, an industry pioneer, built his first snowmobile in 1954. Hetteen, vice president of Arctic Enterprises Inc., embarked in 1960 on a 1,100-mile trek across Alaska to publicize the snowmobile. He says one of the great advantages of the machine is that it opens a new frontier to people who never before ventured into the winter wilderness.

Ironically, the economic crunch that set the industry back created a built-in market for the snowmobile.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 1, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Begin the new year constructively. Make concrete plans to attain your objects in 1981. Don't force any issues with family members at this time. Enjoy a Happy New Year.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your home well and get rid of whatever has become obsolete and not functional. Plan how to gain your aims.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Making changes in routines now can bring increased efficiency and produce more. Take no risks with your reputation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your financial status and know how to improve it ethically right now, so you can be more affluent in the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't tolerate persons you know who are detrimental to your best interests. Show that you have spunk.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You need to be more introverted today so that you know where you are headed and can make fine plans for the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look to a close tie for ideas on how to gain a cherished wish. Attend a group affair in the evening and show you have poise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Follow your inclinations where worldly matters are concerned and get excellent results. Make plans to have more abundance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You get good ideas from a practical and imaginative friend which you should put in operation as soon as possible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can easily fulfill those promises you have made if you get an early start. Curb your temper at all times today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find the best ways of pleasing your associates for mutual benefits. This can be a particularly fine day for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have much work ahead of you, and if you are not sure about some of it, confer with experts. Be logical.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talking over long-range goals with associates could prove beneficial in the future. Show kindness to loved one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will know how to maintain harmony in the home, even at a young age, and the education should be directed along the lines of law and social service to make the most of this fine talent. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:

Opening lead: Jack of ♦.

We do not usually publish freak distributions, but this hand was given to us by an expert and we are willing to vouch for his honesty, even though he insists it was dealt, bid and played as described below in a rubber bridge game in which he took part.

North had difficulty persuading himself that he didn't have an opening bid, but he more than made up for that lapse at his second turn. South was delighted by the turn of events—until dummy came down with that doubleton club.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead, drew two rounds of trumps ending in dummy, and ruffed a diamond as East discarded a club. Putting two and two together, West surely had a lot of red cards, and declarer decided that West had led the lowest of his sequence of diamond honors in an attempt to get his partner to ruff. There could be only one explanation for that—West had to be void in clubs.

West's hand, therefore, consisted of nine diamonds and four hearts, and declarer began to see a ray of light. Since West started with more hearts than did East, he was more likely to hold the jack of hearts. So declarer cashed the ace of hearts and led a heart to dummy's ten. When that held, prospects really brightened.

Declarer cashed the king and queen of hearts, discarding clubs from his hand, then led dummy's last diamond. But instead of ruffing, declarer discarded another club from his hand, presenting West with a diamond trick and the lead.

This was a situation that West did not relish. He was forced to lead a diamond. Declarer ruffed in dummy and discarded his last club, and the slam was made.

Knowing the prowess of our readers, we are sure that all of you realized immediately that the only trick declarer would lose would be a diamond!

Longest Running Act In Rock 'n' Roll

By DICK BRAUDE
Associated Press Writer
MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Arnie Ginsberg was in the right place at the right time to become perhaps the longest running act in rock 'n' roll.

It will be 25 years next month since "Woo Woo" took to the airwaves as a "joke" on a tiny Boston station.

Some joke. Ginsberg, who never went to college, never married and never stopped playing oldies, is 54 and going strong.

Wacky "Woo Woo," now station manager at WKKS-AM-FM, still has a rock 'n' roll oldies show — Sunday nights — and still has a heavy booking for record hops favored by his original fans, now members of the local Elks, PTA and Jaycees. Arnie Ginsberg also manages music as an executive at WKKS — rock-disco music on FM and "hit parade" favorites from the 1940s and '50s on AM.

"My success is that I am an Ed Sullivan," he says, referring to the late television personality. "I was never polished. I don't have an announcer's voice. I made no pretenses. I didn't try to copy anyone's style. My voice still is uniquely identifiable. And my name certainly is memorable."

Sedate in person, "Woo Woo" got his nickname from his original "Night Train" radio theme song with its whistle toots.

He eventually added such special effects as honking horns and bells and packaged the lot with his high-pitched, rapid-fire delivery of an ad for the now-defunct Adventure Car Hop in Saugus.

He first went on the air at WBOS in 1956 and became so popular at WMEX in the early '60s that tapes of his shows were mailed to Europe.

"Parents recorded my shows and sent them to their kids in the service," he says. "Then the tapes were bicycled all over the world."

Ginsberg started out as a radio engineer. The station manager of WBOS wanted him to do a morning "Get Up With Ginsberg" show.

"I started truly as a joke," he says. "The same month I went on the air I heard about someone named Elvis Presley. There was something big happening and I was in on it. I was the first disc jockey to play Elvis in New England."

In the summer of 1963, "Woo Woo" got wind of the Beatles — then virtually unknown in America — and played their early records on the air for two weeks.

"No reaction," he says. "None at all."

Today, he credits the Beatles with "making rock music attractive to talented musicians who otherwise would have gone into classical or jazz."

He still talks on the phone to his fans, saying, "The important thing about being a personality is people feel you're friendly."

Greenberg's own taste in music is "whatever is popular." He has a collection of hundreds of 45s.

"But I don't listen to records," says "Woo Woo." "I listen to radio."

Leaders At Box Office

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Three film comedies peopled with such characters as disgruntled office workers, zany convicts and a man and his chimpanzee are providing a holiday bonanza for the movie industry in what has been a lackluster box office year.

The three big winners in the end-of-the-year film releases have been the Gene Wilder-Richard Pryor prison yarn, "Stir Crazy," which raked in $32.5 million at up to 907 theaters in its first 17 days; "Nine to Five," with Lily Tomlin, Jane Fonda and Dolly Parton taking aim at male chauvinism to the tune of $13.7 million in 912 theaters in 10 days; and Clint Eastwood's "Any Which Way You Can," which has gobbled up $24.2 million of the box office pie in 1,572 theaters in 12 days.

A follow-up to Eastwood's successful 1978 film "Every Which Way But Loose," "Any Which Way You Can" set a one-day box office record of $3,861,561 last Saturday for distributor Warner Bros., according to WB General Sales Manager Barry Reardon.

Neil Simon continues to prove his movie magic, this time with "Seems Like Old Times," which has grossed $9.8 million in 10 days on up to 949 screens, and "Popeye" came out swinging with $18.7 million at up to 910 theaters in 17 days.

A Walt Disney reissue, "The Aristocrats," is doing better than many first-run movies, taking in $4.6 million in 10 days at about 700 theaters.

On the downside of the box office ledger are such films as "Flash Gordon," "A Change of Seasons," "The Jazz Singer" and the star-glutted "The Mirror Crack'd" and "The Formula."

'Jazz Alive!' Again Greets A New Year

NEW YORK (AP) — For the fourth consecutive year, National Public Radio's "Jazz Alive!" program will greet the New Year with a lengthy and lively celebration.

This year's special, broadcast live and in stereo by satellite, will begin in New York, stop over in Detroit and Chicago and wind up in San Francisco, as it has for the last three years. The annual special began in 1977 with live pickups from two New York jazz clubs, and has kept expanding.

"We've pulled out all the stops this New Year's Eve to throw the best jazz broadcast ever," said producer Tim Owens. The program opens at 9:30 p.m. and ends at 5 a.m. EST. Check local public radio listings for details.

The evening promises to be a memorable occasion. The performing artists include saxophonist Mike Brecker and trumpeter Randy Brecker, playing at New York's Seventh Avenue South; tenor saxophonist Houston Person and singer Etta Jones at Detroit's Dumbo George's; baritone Johnny Hartman and trumpeter Clark Terry at Chicago's Rick's Cafe American.

The San Francisco segment, representing the last three hours of the Keystone Korner's annual Holiday Jazz Festival, will feature saxophonist Sonny Stitt, guitarist Kenny Burrell, pianist Red Garland and saxophonist Dexter Gordon. Trumpeter Woody Shaw will be a special guest.

In addition to the talented performers, the New Year's Eve bash will have some distinguished hosts: musician-composer-author Ben Sidran in New York and Al Pryor, musical director of WBGO-FM in Newark, N.J., in Detroit.

Pianist-composer Billy Taylor, the host of the popular weekly "Jazz Alive!" series, will be host for the Chicago segment. And educator-composer-trumpeter Gerald Wilson and jazz critic Leonard Feather will sit in on the San Francisco festivities.

Social Change In Greece Has Slow-Going

By GILLIAN WHITTAKER
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A few signs of social change are creeping into Greece with nude bathing on the beaches, sexually explicit plays in a few theaters and girlie magazines on the streets — unthinkable 10 years ago.

But old traditions die hard. The powerful Greek Orthodox Church is striking back against what it sees as permissiveness in Greek society, and conservative attitudes about the role of women, premarital sex, abortion and adultery are still pervasive.

"I think nudity is fine, but if it were my wife or daughter I'd kill her," said one man in an Athens bar, reflecting the attitude of many Greek men toward social change and women's role.

Nude bathing is popular on a few beaches, especially among foreign tourists, but police have cracked down and arrested many nudists.

Earlier this year, a Greek Orthodox bishop and supporters besieged a hotel which catered to nudists, mostly German tourists. A few threw rocks at the nudists and the group gave them a 24-hour ultimatum to get dressed or get out.

A Greek actress who appeared naked on stage in a production criticizing the morals of a bishop was arrested and given a five-month sentence, after the Greek Orthodox Church complained about the play.

Sexually explicit magazines were completely banned in Greece until the mid-1970s. Then they were allowed to be sold on the streets, but only if private parts were covered by black stars. Now the black stars are no longer required.

Few people used drugs in Greece until 10 years ago. Now, partly because of the influx of foreigners and tourists, drug use is becoming more common.

The penalties for drugs are extremely severe and no distinction is made between hard and soft drugs. Trading in drugs can bring a prison sentence of up to 20 years.

Drug addicts are by no means as common in Athens as in other Western cities, but young people are becoming more adventurous in trying soft drugs, imitating their foreign contemporaries.

Although abortion and adultery are illegal and condemned by the Church, thousands of abortions are performed clandestinely each year, and a new women's group, the Union for Women's Rights, is lobbying to make adultery merely grounds for divorce — not a crime.

Aliki Marangopoulou, a sociologist and president of the Union for Women's Rights, said that, despite the group's efforts, women in Greece still accepted their passive, secondary role.

"Although professionally, Greek women are among the most adventurous, when it comes to the family situation they continue to accept being a second-class citizen," Mrs. Marangopoulou said.

Although there is no difference in the law on adultery between men and women, Mrs. Marangopoulou said that in practice women were accused and found guilty more than men.

In another sign of a double standard, boys are encouraged from their early teens to go out with girls and to gain sexual experience, while girls are closely guarded and every effort is made to marry them off "before the worst happens," as one mother put it.

Women in Greece do not have the right to name their children or work without their husbands' permission, under the family law which women's groups are trying to change.

SHUTDOWN SAID NEAR LONDON (AP) —

The giant state-owned British Leyland car manufacturer will be shut down "in days rather than weeks" by a factory strike crippling output of its fuel-efficient Mini Metro, a company executive says.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

X I U M W K L R M B M K L L B P U I B P U
M G Q H W M R B K L G R M G Q H W X K B

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — PRIVATE EYE PRIVATELY QUIZZED QUIET LADY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals B

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

1. Sell that tuba that hasn't sounded a note the last three years. Any musical instrument will do if you don't have a tuba.
2. Take a good look in your garage. If there's a bike, moped, or motorcycle that hasn't had a rider in a long time, now's the time to exchange it for cash.
3. Grown-ups also let still-good items go unused! Got a sewing machine, typewriter or knitting machine you haven't mastered? Find a cash buyer for it.
4. Don't forget sound equipment . . . radio, TV, stereo, tape recorder, CB, walkie-talkie . . . people are always looking for things to listen to.
5. And the workshop . . . wherever it is . . . is the place to spot tools which still have a lot of good use in them. Let someone else put them to work while you fatten your budget.

Disavow Links To Subversion

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Patrice Lumumba University, an institute here for students from developing countries, isn't happy about being linked by Westerners to international terrorism and Third World subversion, its Soviet administrators say.

They claim the Westerners often note that the notorious Venezuelan terrorist Carlos Ramirez — known simply as "Carlos" — was a student at Lumumba. The administrators note, however, that he was expelled in the early 1970s on grounds of poor grades and bad behavior.

The university's Soviet administration prides itself in training civil servants, scientists, teachers and other professionals for Africa, Asia and Latin America.

In its 20 years of existence, more than 9,000 Lumumba graduates have taken their skills back home to 110 mostly emerging nations.

Apart from Carlos, only a handful of former Lumumba students — some reportedly from Mexico and Sri Lanka — have been implicated in revolutionary activities in their homelands. The Soviets complain that Western publicity given these cases has created the impression that the university exports subversion.

"Some unobjective organs of the press claim that we are a school for spies, saboteurs, the best hijackers, and so on," said Assistant Rector Leonid Kharyukov, displaying an English paperback book about Carlos.

"He was enrolled here only 18 months or two years, but some people concluded that he was thoroughly trained by us," Kharyukov said. "We had nothing to do with his actions."

Carlos is accused of masterminding the kidnapping of OPEC oil ministers in Vienna, Austria, in 1975; the killing of two French security agents in Paris, and bombings in the French capital during the mid-1970s.

Some Western investigators suspect he may have received Soviet military instruction after his student days at Lumumba, but the Soviets have never acknowledged this.

Carlos has dropped out of sight, but his notoriety has had repercussions at Lumumba University.

Military training — a normal part of the curriculum in Soviet higher education — is banned at Lumumba for foreigners and Soviets alike, Kharyukov said.

"To head off any attempts to slander the school, we don't even permit rifle target shooting or archery for recreation," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Soviet political slogans and portraits of graduates decorate the hallways of the university in a seven-story building that once served as a military college three miles south of the Kremlin.

Officially called Patrice Lumumba Peoples' Friendship University, it is named for the Congolese leader slain in Katanga Province in 1961.

In five- or six-year courses at Lumumba, foreign students get not only training in their specialties but full exposure to Soviet society.

Attendance is mandatory at lectures by the all-Soviet faculty on Soviet politics and social philosophy, and foreigners must maintain passing marks in all their work to remain at the school, Kharyukov said.

Campus life is tightly controlled. Soviet students, who make up about a quarter of the 6,700 undergraduate and graduate students, help monitor the foreigners, 900 of whom are women.

It is unknown, however, what percentage of Lumumba students leave Moscow convinced that the Soviet model is right for their own countries. Some students say privately that Soviet economic shortages and bureaucracy are obvious to any student, and that some of them leave in a far from pro-Soviet state of mind.

Kharyukov said there is intense competition among foreigners for the 600 places in the annual freshman class.

Three hundred Soviet students also are admitted each year.

Kharyukov said India is allotted one of the largest blocks of scholarships — 40 per year. "Smaller countries, such as the Maldives Republic or Gabon, get two or three a year."

The foreigners begin with intensive Russian-language training — six hours daily for six months — to enable them to understand the lectures.

"I didn't speak a word of Russian when I arrived in Moscow. But now I get along quite well in the language," said Akhil Gupta, 21, a mechanical engineering student from India. "As for adjusting to life here, it depends on the person."

Lumumba students have free tuition and dormitory space, plus travel and clothing allowances and a monthly stipend of 90 rubles ($135), considerably more than state payment to Soviet students.

Kharyukov said the drop-out rate is about 15 percent to 16 percent. Some 80,000 foreigners from 139 countries in all are enrolled in 300 Soviet institutions.

The school has six faculties — economics and law, history and philology, agriculture, medicine, natural science and engineering.

Associates put on practical training so that graduates can go right to work when they return home.

"Our guiding principles are internationalism and patriotism," Kharyukov said. "We encourage students to return home to help their countries. If they don't, our work has been defective."

Betrayed By Rare Friend

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — "Edgar Allen Crow" has been betrayed by the hand that fed him.

The feathery fugitive who frustrated Wheeling officials for months and frightened some residents by swooping down and perching on their heads has been apprehended. The large black bird is now safely housed in the Wheeling-Ohio County Animal Shelter.

His captor, Mrs. Glen Shook, said she still has "mixed feelings" about turning in the bird.

"His friendliness cost him his freedom, but his freedom, I was afraid, would cost him his life," she said.

Before the crow became a jailbird, he even numbered Wheeling animal control officer William Custer among his victims.

"My wife and I were out jogging a couple of months ago when I heard her scream," Custer recalled. "I turned around and saw that he had landed on her head. And, the next thing I knew, he was on my head."

Custer said the name Edgar Allen Crow came from area children who met up with the bird on their way to and from school.

Mrs. Shook said she could tell from the start that Edgar — or Herman, as she called him — had once been someone's pet.

"You can tell he's been trained, and he likes people too much," she said. "I started petting him and feeding him hamburger, and then he got a lot of confidence in me."

Complaints about the bird's antics prompted her to turn it in. Parents were outraged the bird would accost their children, but Custer says Edgar is smart — and he says he might adopt the bird himself.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes during the lame-duck session that ended on Dec. 16.

HOUSE
MEDICAL RECORDS — The House defeated, 97 for and 259 against, a bill (HR 5935) to enhance the privacy and accuracy of medical records kept by institutions. The bill did not apply to doctors' offices. In part, it limited government investigators and other outsiders in their access to records, and gave patients the right to inspect their records and seek the correction of wrong information. Supporter Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., said the measure strikes a balance "between the patient's right of privacy and the legitimate needs of others for medical information." Opponents said the bill would work a hardship on government investigators dealing with national security and that it was an intrusion into states' rights. "This is a bad bill and I hope it will be defeated," said Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio. Members voting "yea" favored enactment of the bill. Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Richardson Preyer, D-6, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea." Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, and James Martin, R-9, voted "nay." Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, W.C. Hefner, D-8, and James

Broyhill, R-10, did not vote. NUCLEAR WASTE — The House defeated, 161 for and 218 against, an amendment strengthening a state's veto of any federal decision to store nuclear wastes in the state. Under the amendment, the veto would stand unless both houses of Congress voted to void it. Left intact by this vote was language rendering a state's veto meaningless unless one house of Congress voted to let it stand. The vote occurred during debate on a bill (HR 8378) to establish a federal plan for permanently storing radioactive wastes — primarily from nuclear power plants — in geologic formations. The bill died when the 96th Congress adjourned. Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., sponsor of the amendment, said "it should be the federal government's burden...to convince these states to locate these nuclear waste sites within their borders." Opponent Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said that if weighted down with the Kostmayer amendment the bill had no chance of gaining Senate approval. Members voting "yea" wanted to make it easier for a state to resist federal designation as a site for permanent storage of nuclear wastes. Jones, Fountain and Andrews voted "yea." Whitley, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay." Neal did not vote. SENATE

SENATORS' EXPENSES

— Senators voted, 64 for and 19 against, to permit themselves to transfer unspent staff payroll allotments into their official expense accounts. Allotments found to be surplus at the end of the fiscal year could be used for travel and other official purposes. Depending on the population of his state, a senator has an annual staff payroll of from several hundred thousand dollars to more than $1 million. Although attached to HJ Res 637, the transfer plan later died in the face of House opposition. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the sponsor, said that without the transfer the Senate next year will have to increase official expense accounts. He said "we cannot continue to absorb these fantastic increases in travel costs." Opponent Harry Byrd, I-Va., said "this is another example of a bad precedent that is being set...." Senators voting "yea" favored the plan to enlarge their official expense accounts. Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay." Sen. Robert Morgan, D, did not vote. HOSTAGES — By a vote of 44 for and 35 against, the Senate killed a proposal to pay each American hostage in Iran $100 for each day of captivity. The payments would have been in addition to the hostages' regular government salaries and other benefits Congress has already provided them. The proposal was offered to an appropriations measure (HJ Res 637), later signed into law. Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., who supported killing the proposal, asked about other Americans held hostage and said: "This sets the kind of precedent we ought to be quite careful about."

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., an opponent, said: "The only way we are ever going to get this spending under control is by taking what some have characterized as a meat cleaver approach...." Senators voting "yea" opposed the budget cut proposal. Morgan voted "yea." Helms voted "nay."

There's Another Ronald Reagan

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — "May I have your name?" asks the man taking a pizza order. "Ronald Reagan," comes the reply. "Oh, yeah? I'm Jack Benny." But it really was Ronald Reagan, though not the president-elect, ordering pizza in Walnut Creek. This Reagan is a 40-year-old inventor and accountant for the Central Contra Costa County Sanitary District. Having the same name as the GOP politician has produced some "comical" situations, he says. In the late 1960s, Reagan lived in Sacramento when the governor was a man named Reagan. And Reagan, CPA, kept getting the governor's mail. "It was addressed three ways — either Gov. Ronald Reagan, the Honorable Ronald Reagan or Ronald Reagan. If it came to me the last two ways, I opened it," he said.

Services Set For Wednesday

The traditional Watch Night Services, sponsored by the Black Ministerial Alliance of Pitt County, will be observed at Mt. Calvary Baptist Church Wednesday night at ten o'clock. The Rev. W.H. Joyner will deliver the sermon while the choirs of various churches will sing. The public is invited to attend.

JOHN LENNON'S CAR FOR SALE — The 1966 Bentley S-1, once owned by slain rock star John Lennon, is shown by auctioneer Rick Cole, who predicts that it will bring between $50,000 and $100,000 when auctioned next month. Cole, who said the car was placed on consignment Nov. 5, one month before the former Beatle was murdered, says he will donate his commission to Lennon's Spirit Foundation. "I don't want to be accused of exploiting the tragedy," he said. "I'm 26, and I grew up with the Beatles. (AP Laserphoto)

Tank McNamara takes an inside look into the arena of sports-crazed Americans.

Tank is the cure for America's obsession with organized sports, characterized by blurred eyes on the week-ends, exposure to Joe Namath's legs on panty hose commercials, and being bored to death listening to acquaintances recite statistics covering the last two decades of play.

Tank is an ex-jock turned sports broadcaster who is joined by a team of characters who would drive Howard Cosell crazy. There is SWEATBOX—he can't be pried away from the t.v. whether it be the Super Bowl or the First Annual Junction City Elementary School Pie Throwing Contest; JACQUES BROUSSARD—a hockey player who spends his time advertising everything from toothpaste to hair transplants; NORMAN—the ad agency psychologists' dream; the perfect consumer: if a jock endorses it on the tube, Norman will buy it; BUCK BAKER—the newest American godling, a pro football quarterback no different from any other average American guy who makes about $100,000 a year playing children's games.

A Dollhouse Of Love And Loveliness

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer
PORT COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Muriel Whitmore remembers the first and only doll of her childhood. It was a 10-inch, 10-cent model in a black-and-white checked dress, a pink ribbon in its blond hair.

That was, let's say, at least 60 years ago. Muriel, as she's known in this town of 300 about 40 miles northeast of San Francisco, doesn't want her age printed. And she probably wouldn't call a doll an "it."

For, in "Muriel's Doll Museum" the tiny woman makes more than 3,000 exquisite dolls come alive.

She enjoyed her childhood doll for only a few months. "Santa himself handed it to me for Christmas, and by spring it was gone," burned in a fire in her Ohio home, she says.

Now, a similar doll rests in a showcase, one of many elaborate displays in what should be Muriel's living room. Next to it is a photograph of Muriel at 5. She looks a lot like the doll.

The resemblance makes for just one of many delightful anecdotes Muriel tells in her home tucked along the hillside that overlooks the Carquinez Strait.

The waterway once led to one of the world's largest grain ports. Now, most travelers whiz by the Interstate 80 exit unaware that a few miles of winding road, a breeze through Crockett, a left at the "Y" and a glance from the Port Costa barbershop can bring them to the miniature world of Muriel.

Step inside and you face the most obvious object of Muriel's pride and joy. It's a 200-pound, white, gabled dollhouse, built of redwood.

"The most gorgeous house in the world," Muriel says, took friend Dennis Kaysing 14 months to build. As dainty and detailed as a wedding cake, it was modeled after her childhood farm.

Muriel's eyes brighten as she gives a "tour." Enchanted visitors have added many of its delicate furnishings, like a Christmas tree with tiny hand-made candles. Indeed, Muriel has many loyal friends, judging by the many dolls, some of them childhood favorites, given to the museum.

"There's nothing but sharing and loving here," Muriel says, explaining why she spends time and money to fill her home with dolls. "Just all the happiness that dolls bring to us."

With a tiny doll stenciled onto her glasses and a cap of roses made from grosgrain, Muriel often delights more than the dolls.

A former postal worker, she draws on 14 years spent as the director of a children's theater. She's at her finest when showing off her "classroom," a dining area now a crowded collection of a piano she can make sound like a merry-go-round, a bench she took from a old red schoolhouse that later became her home and, of course, the "pupils."

She carefully makes her way through the cramped space ("Please don't call it cluttered. That sounds messy," she says). She adjusts a gaily wrapped gift in one toddler's hand, poised to present it to the schoolmarm, a 44-year-old wax mannequin. And, in a favorite line, she points out the little girl, hand raised, "who's been wanting to go to the bathroom for 11 years."

Dolls are big business. The world auction record for a doll is $18,000, paid in Switzerland.

Muriel has many prized beauties, of wood, wax, bisque, even figures of an old couple made of breadcrumbs, but she won't estimate the value of her collection. Her most expensive item is a goggle-eyed doll which cost her $4,500.

But it's the joy that the dolls bring to visitors that is most important, she says, recalling a blind woman from Sweden who spent hours in the museum.

"She must have been in her 90s. She was so happy. I took a clothespin doll and put it in her apron pocket."

"There's no greed or jealousy here," she says. "Only love."

Noise Hurts Mentally, Physically

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Sirens whine. Trucks rumble and roar. Rock music blares. These and other loud sounds of modern day life are hurting people both physically and mentally. That's the opinion of Dr. T. Walter Carlin, director of the Speech and Hearing Institute at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston.

"Our society is driving itself nuts with noise," Carlin said in a recent interview. He said noise pollution is not only a cause for the loss of hearing but triggers other physical ailments, stress in marriages, a lack of productivity by workers and "all in all makes our life miserable."

Carlin said a walk through downtown Houston, or any other metropolitan area, proves his point. There is the roar of traffic and jackhammers pounding away on construction sites and brakes screaming at busy intersections and horns honking.

"Take all of that noise and let it bounce off one building to another building and down to the pavement where you are walking," Carlin said. "There is no wonder you are exhausted after a day of shopping. No wonder you feel as if you can't finish the day on the job. You are beaten down, you are irritable, your mental and physical health suffers."

A person is not even safe from noise pollution in his own home, Carlin said, especially when the kitchen is in full operation. "Turn on the dishwasher, the blender, the electric can opener, and you can be in pain. Then the wife comes in to talk and you can't hear her, and she thinks you are not paying attention or giving her the cold shoulder."

This, he said, can cause marital stress and, Carlin said, "there is enough built-in stress in a marriage without noise contributing." If you are watching the Sunday football game, the physician said, and the dishwasher goes on, you turn up the sound, and then the blender begins to whirl, and you turn up the sound, and then you have moved beyond the safe decibel count.

Decibels are used to measure sound pressure and levels of 85 to 90 can cause hearing damage as well as other health problems.

Youths who walk around with earphones listening to loud music "are crazy. They don't believe it and they don't think about it, but they are damaging their hearing," the doctor said.

Research has shown, he said, that the loss of hearing occurs when tiny ear hair cells are destroyed by excessive noise over a long period of time. Like brain cells, these hair cells do not grow back, and the damage is permanent.

Another condition called tinnitus, a constant ringing in the ears, also can be caused by prolonged exposure to loud noise.

Carlin said: "Once this happens, there is no way to correct it. That ringing is there day and night, night and day."

Carlin said he once went to a disco with two friends, both deaf, and "I was going to tell them I had to leave because the noise was hurting. They left first because the decibel count was so high they felt pain in major organs of their body although they could not hear."

"The decibel count in a typical disco is 130. A jet airplane has a decibel of only 120."

"And remember, sound was used for centuries as a method of torture. Place a bell over a person's head and ring it and eventually the person would go crazy."

Is there any escape from noise? Carlin suggests that every person exposed to noise use earplugs.

"This cuts down on the extent of noise pollution, but you still can hear the honk of a horn if you are driving or conversations in a crowded room. It simply eases the level of noise pressure and makes you a healthier person."

The scientist said he uses earplugs when mowing the lawn or using a chain saw.
