CHURCH DESTROYED IN EARLY MORNING FIRE — A Winterville fireman is silhouetted in the light from flames at the New Birth Church on N. Railroad St. in Winterville early this morning. First firemen to arrive at the scene said most of the church was fully involved with fire. Winterville firemen, assisted by firemen from Ayden and Eastern Pines, fought the blaze in subfreezing temperatures for about an hour. Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said this morning cause of the 3:03 a.m. fire had not been determined and investigation is continuing. Pitt County tax records recorded the value of the church for 1981 at $16,780. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest).

Weekend Temperatures In Teens Over Pitt County

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The weekend brought icy temperatures into the area once again, with lows Friday-Sunday nights in the teens.

According to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, the high and low temperatures for Friday were 40 degrees Fahrenheit and 17 degrees. On Saturday the high reached 36 degrees and the low dipped down to 19 degrees. Thirty-one degrees was the warmest it reached on Sunday, and Sunday night was the coldest of the weekend, with a low of 12 degrees. On Monday at 8 a.m. it was 16 degrees.

No precipitation was recorded during the three-day period, and this morning the level of the Tar River stood at 2.5 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge.

According to Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, no weather-related problems were reported during the weekend. "We did operate our load-management equipment this morning between 7-8:15 a.m.," he commented. "The demand was so great we had to do this to shave our peaks, and we figure we shaved about six megawatts off by doing this."

This winter has to date been colder than last year, according to a Greenville Utilities Commission statistical report that shows electric and gas usage. The report indicates that in 1980, the high temperature in December was 76 degrees and the low was 10 degrees. For 1979, the December high was 74 degrees and the low was 22 degrees.

The peak kilowatt demand in December 1980 was 107,100, compared with a peak kilowatt demand of 116,400 in 1979. This December Greenville Utilities purchased 51,330,000 kilowatt hours, less than the December 1979 figure 53,980,000 kilowatt hours.

Gas customers used 115,484 thousand cubic feet of gas last month, more than the December 1979 usage of 103,940. On the peak day last month, 4,837 thousand cubic feet were used, compared to the 1979 figure of 4,444.

Boiler Trouble Cools School

BELVOIR — Heating problems at Belvoir Elementary School during the past week have resulted in classes doubling up to stay warm and some children reportedly being taken home by their parents during the severest cold.

"What we have is a malfunctioning boiler," said Principal Alston W. Burke. "It will fire in the morning and get the radiators hot, and then cut off before the rooms get totally warm." Burke said the school had repairmen working on the boiler and now had an engineer observing it full time. "In all sincerity we are doing the best we can to get the thing running properly," he added.

"This morning it did the same thing, cut on and warmed the radiators, then cut off again, so the classrooms were not warm enough," he explained. By 11 a.m. he reported that the temperature in all classrooms was around 70 degrees, however.

"We have been doubling up to stay warm, since we have two boilers, one oil and one coal," said the principal. "The oil one is the one malfunctioning so we have moved some of the children into the kindergarten classrooms, heated by the coal burner, to keep them warm." Burke said that parents have been allowed to take children home to keep warm during the coldest periods of weather.

According to Pam Bacon, a parent from the Belvoir area, parents were not notified last week when temperatures reached the 40-45 degree mark inside the school. "I was there myself last Monday and Tuesday and it was cold," said Bacon. "We understand that the school has boiler problems and realize that this is a burden but we want to know why we were not notified and the children sent home instead of being allowed to sit in the classroom bundled up and cold."

The parents of the Belvoir area have a meeting scheduled with Superintendent Ott Alford Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Belvoir School.

(Please turn to Page 8)

Later Opening

Pitt County schools will open one hour later on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, due to the extreme cold.

According to Superintendent Ott Alford, buses will be delayed one hour also. Custodial maintenance, food services and the administrative staff will report at the usual time.

Asserts Roads Open To A Hostage Deal

By The Associated Press
The Speaker of Iran's Parliament said today "all roads" are open to settling the hostage problem and that he expects approval of two emergency bills aimed at solving the crisis by Friday — four days before the inauguration of Ronald Reagan, who has warned he will conduct talks with a "clean slate."

In another action that could indicate progress, the prime minister's office today advised Iranian ministries, firms and individuals with claims against the United States to submit documents to substantiate their claims to a government "claims committee" within 30 days, according to the official Pars news agency.

Parliament Speaker Hojatoleslam Hashemi Rafsani told a news conference in Tehran that "There is nothing important in these bills that would necessitate a no vote. However, it depends on the discussion and the elaborations in the Majlis tomorrow." Asked whether approval of the bills would lead to the release of the hostages by Friday, he said, "I can't predict when the hostages will be released but we have opened all roads for settling the hostage problem. They will be released if our rights are met."

Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai also hinted of a hostage release, saying in a state radio broadcast, "According to available information, the issue is making progress. We are trying to approach it logically and doing our best to maintain the main line in our relations with American imperialism.

"At any rate, as long as we consider America as an aggressor in the world, we shall not retreat from our position. Even presuming that the hostages are released in the near future, we shall not abandon our main position, which is fighting imperialism and which emanates from the heart of our ideology."

Guerrilla Battle For San Salvador Sees Casualties

By JOE FRAZIER

Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government troops claimed firm control of this Central American nation today, despite reports of scattered fighting against leftist guerrillas. Salvadorans, ignoring a leftist call for a general strike, went to their jobs, and businesses in the capital opened as usual.

Leftist guerrillas said weekend attacks, in which at least 100 people were killed, were their "final offensive" against El Salvador's moderate junta, but most of the dead apparently were guerrillas. The army acknowledged eight soldiers killed and eight wounded.

There was some shooting overnight in parts of the capital but no reports of casualties. Scattered fighting was reported in the interior, mostly to the north and east of the capital in San Vicente and Morazan provinces.

Military sources denied published reports that the towns of Santa Clara and San Esteban Catarina in San Vicente had fallen to leftist forces.

On Sunday the government imposed martial law, including a 7 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew, giving troops the right to shoot anybody on the street during the curfew who does not stop when ordered to do so.

A Sunday night broadcast on the national radio network said people who had to go out in emergencies could call the national guard and would be transported in Red Cross or Green Cross ambulances.

Constitutional guarantees have been suspended here since a state of emergency was decreed last March. It has been renewed every 30 days since then.

"You can see that the extreme leftist guerrillas did all they could do to make their final offensive and they have failed," junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte told a news conference Sunday night.

The guerrillas announced their "final offensive" in several broadcasts from weekend command centers and urged the public to support them by joining in a general strike today. But many Salvadorans ignored the call, packing public transportation in the capital on their way to work this morning.

One "Radio Liberation" broadcast said the guerrillas controlled at least 10 places around the country.

The Revolutionary Democratic Front, an umbrella organization representing most of the nation's largest leftist groups, said a provisional government and a "new army" would be established but did not say when or where.

Guerrilla spokesmen recently vowed to topple the junta before the inauguration Jan. 20 of President-elect Ronald Reagan, who the leftists believe may provide the government with additional arms and aid to fight them.

The leftists have promised "final offensives" in the past but there has been little or no difference from the day-to-day political violence that took an estimated 9,500 lives last year.

Secondary Road Funds Allocated

Some $136,548 has been allocated to Pitt County by the N.C. Board of Transportation for improvements to the county's secondary road system, the state announced.

Pitt's share is part of $10 million allocated by the Board of Transportation from funds authorized by the State Highway Bond Act of 1977 for improvements to the state's large secondary road systems.

The county shares are based on a formula established by the state legislature, whereby each county receives a percentage of the total funds available, determined by the unpaved miles of secondary roads in the county in relationship to the total mileage of unpaved secondary roads in the state.

Pitt County has 262.99 miles of unpaved roads, while the total mileage of unpaved state maintained secondary roads in North Carolina is 20,000.

The $300 million highway bond act, approved in 1977, directs that $75 million will be used to improve the state's secondary road system, while $175 million is for improvements to the primary system and $50 million is for the state's urban road system.

Neighboring county allocations include: Martin, $71,091; Beaufort, $154,747; Craven, $99,731; Greene, $40,011; Lenoir, $95,068; Edgecombe, $41,386; Nash, $74,710; Wayne, $78,443; and Wilson, $1,314.

SUGGESTS REFLECTOR VESTS

The other night I was driving down the street and saw a jogger running toward me. The reason I saw her was that she was wearing a plastic vest with a reflector strip running diagonally across the front and back. She was wearing dark clothes, but with the vest on, she was easy to see. I think it would be a good idea if all joggers who run at night would wear one of these easy-to-slip-on reflector vests. They can be found at local sporting goods stores and departments. Wearing such a vest seems to be more effective than wearing light clothes. It may save a life. D. M.

The Pitt County Humane Society has asked Hotline for information as the whereabouts of a gray tabby neutered male cat lost in the College Court area of Greenville Dec. 31.

The owners has advertised extensively to no avail. Jumper, who knows his name, is wearing a tag reflecting the former Ohio address of the owners, Penny and Ellen Benzing. They may be reached by calling 758-7428.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Bombs blew up seven to 10 Air National Guard planes in quick succession early Monday at Muniz Air Base next to San Juan's Isla Verde International Airport, police said.

No one was hurt and there was no immediate claim of responsibility, but there was speculation the attack was the work of a pro-independence group or leftists opposed to the U.S. military presence in Puerto Rico

The planes were parked 100 feet or more apart on a paved area in front of the hangars, and in addition to the main explosions there were a number of secondary blasts, apparently of fuel tanks, that set off huge fires.

The hangar area was littered with the wreckage of A7D Corsair planes with which the Air National Guard here trains, and one F104 Starfighter, an older model which was in the hangar area as a trophy.

"We are all mad as hell," said Tech. Sgt. Ronald Santiago, gazing out over the floodlit wreckage that was drenched in foam to put out the fires.

Some of the planes were broken in half. Others were just clumps of wreckage on the concrete.

The bloodiest attack ever against the military on this U.S. commonwealth island took place Dec. 3, 1979 when terrorist gunmen ambushed a U.S. Navy bus, killing two sailors and wounding 10 other servicemen and women.

The bus was en route from the Sabana Seca Navy base 10 miles west of San Juan to a transmitting tower about a mile away, when the terrorists struck.

In March 1980, terrorists opened fire on a car carrying three U.S. Army men, slightly grazing one of them. The attack was claimed by the Machete Welders, one of three independence groups that claimed the Dec. 3 attack.

Last week, letter bombs were put in slots at three post offices in the San Juan area. A small leftist group claimed responsibility, and said it was protesting registration for the draft.

Public Hearings Series Planned

The first in a series of public hearings on the various service areas currently being studied by the mayor's advisory committee will be held on Thursday, Jan. 15 at the Willis Building, corner of First and Reade Streets.

The hearing on the "administrative services" segment of the committee's overall study will be conducted from 7-9 p.m. with Dr. Robert G. Deyton Jr. and Jean Darden, subcommittee co-chairmen for that segment, serving as moderators.

For the initial hearing, comments by citizens of Greenville and Pitt County will be invited regarding land use and present and future use of Greenville's public buildings; how to disseminate public information and answer citizen's concerns; functions and authority of city purchasing agent and central purchasing office; personnel and administrative relationships of all city employees; insurance needs and rates for the city; and other related topics.

The committee is also requesting that each speaker at the hearing submit a written copy of his/her remarks for inclusion in the final report of the committee.

Future public hearings are planned on the other service areas involved in the committee's study, including protection and safety, leisure activities and recreation, environmental protection, public transportation, and new revenue sources.

The advisory committee invited area citizens to attend the hearings and express their thoughts and opinions concerning local services.

The committee, initiated by Mayor Don McGlohn, is in the process of taking an in-depth look at all city services.

71-Year-Old Kills Youth

LEVELLAND, Texas (AP) — No charges have been filed against a 71-year-old man who shot and killed a teen-ager after the youth drove a stolen pickup truck into the living room of the elderly man's home and assaulted him, authorities say.

The couple, who were not identified, were hospitalized after the incident early Sunday, said police chief Ted Holder.

Sixteen-year-old Arthur Adame of Levelland was pronounced dead at Cook Memorial Hospital following the shooting, Holder said.

The incident occurred shortly after 7 a.m. Sunday, Holder said, when a stolen pickup driven by the victim ran a stop sign, jumped a curb and crashed through a living room wall into the couple's home.

Holder said the driver got out of the pickup and began assaulting the woman when she asked him if he needed help.

When the woman's husband entered the room, Holder said, the youth began attacking him. The man shot the teen-ager once in the chest, the chief said.

Holder said Levelland Police and Hockley County deputies had pursued the pickup, stolen about three hours earlier in nearby Smye, on two occasions before the shooting but had not been able to catch it.

The woman was hospitalized for treatment of minor cuts and her husband was admitted for observation.

The case would be referred to a grand jury, Holder said.

Four Wrecks Cause Damage

An estimated $4,100 damage resulted from a series of four traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police Friday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:10 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 150 feet north of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, involving cars driven by Arnold Clifton Ogburn of Route 1, Willow Springs, and Mattie Whitehurst Green of Route 3, Greenville.

Police, who charged Ms. Green with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Ogburn car and $750 to the Green vehicle.

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to a car driven by John Noah Williams Jr. of 111 Fairlane Rd. when the vehicle ran off Hooker Road, 40 feet south of the Cambridge Drive intersection about 11:40 p.m.

Investigators charged Williams with driving under the influence and failing to report an accident in connection with the mishap.

A truck driven by Levis Earl Lane of Route 1, Greenville and a car operated by William Henry Brown of 108 St. Andrews Dr., collided about 8:05 a.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard, causing an estimated $50 damage to the Lane truck and $800 damage to the Brown car.

Cars driven by Martha Barnett Perkins of 1006 Ward St. and Floyd Hines Jr. of Farmville, collided about 10:25 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Tyson Streets, causing an estimated $400 damage to the Perkins car and $100 damage to the Hines car.

Hancock's "John Hancock"

According to tradition, John Hancock signed his name on the Declaration of Independence in large letters so that King George III of England would not need his spectacles to recognize him as a "traitor." Hancock, who was a successful merchant, was one of the wealthiest men in New England at the time of the Revolution. The British considered him a dangerous revolutionary. As president of the Continental Congress, Hancock was the first person to sign the Declaration. Even today, a person's signature is often called a "John Hancock." After the war, Hancock became the first governor of Massachusetts. He was born on this day in 1737.

Rita Jenrette Said Planning A Divorce

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Friends and acquaintances of John Jenrette aren't certain if he knows yet that his wife, Rita, plans to file for divorce because none of them has seen or heard from the former 6th District congressman since last Thursday.

Rita Jenrette said Saturday that she'll seek a divorce from her husband who was convicted last October in the FBI's Abscam bribery probe.

"He isn't where he said he was going," a Myrtle Beach acquaintance said Sunday. "To my knowledge nobody has seen or heard from him since Thursday and I'm very concerned."

Efforts to reach the former Democratic congressman Sunday by The Associated Press, The State newspaper of Columbia and the Myrtle Beach Sun News were futile.

Jenrette had told his wife and friends that he was leaving on a Miami, Fla., fishing trip last Monday, but the Sun News reported that unidentified sources said Sunday he never arrived.

Asked if her husband was aware of her plans, Mrs.

Jenrette told The State, "No, I don't even know where he is. He told he would be in Miami. I called. He gave me a bogus telephone number."

Another report said Jenrette phoned his daughter by his first marriage, 18-year-old Mary Elizabeth, from Florida Tuesday night and told her he was going to the Bahamas.

RITA JENRETTE

Jenrette's attorney, Kenneth M. Robinson of Washington, said "no one seems to know where he is."

"I stuck with him as long as I can," Rita Jenrette said when she announced her divorce plans Saturday. "I've been pushed into doing it. I don't want to do it, but I've endured enough. I can't take it anymore."

Mrs. Jenrette said she will file for a "no-fault" divorce in Superior Court in the District of Columbia and will be represented by former Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D. She said that her attorney would file the action "probably by Monday or Tuesday."

A problem many pork producers encounter is the inability of sows rebreeding in order to fit into a tight production schedule. Sows normally come into heat four to five days after their litters are weaned. However, sows whose litters are weaned at an early age (two to three weeks), sows whose litters are weaned during the summer, and first-litter sows may not recycle on schedule. Factors which influence a sow's recycling include nutrition, condition of the sow, suckling intensity, housing, boar exposure and season of the year.

Increasing the amount of feed between weaning and breeding may cause sows to recycle faster. This is particularly true for first-litter sows and thin sows. Feed should be provided at the rate of six to nine pounds per day until heat occurs and then cut back to about four pounds per day. Overfeeding after breeding may have adverse effects on embryo survival. Fasting, except for the day of weaning, has not proven to be effective.

Sows that are thin or milked down at weaning may be slow to recycle. Sows with large litters or sows underfed during lactation are more likely to become thin. Extremes in litter size may be minimized by standardizing or adjusting litters.

Game Cookery Class Planned

A "Wild Game Cookery Class" will be conducted on January 20 beginning at 7 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Auditorium, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Rick Hamilton and Jim Kea will be conducting the class, which will cover field care of the animal, proper storage, handling and freezing of the catch, preparation of dove, venison and a mystery dish.

A booklet of favorite wild game recipes will be distributed, and anyone having recipes to share should mail them to Addie R. Gore, 1717 W. Fifth St., Greenville, N.C., 27834, by January 15.

The class is limited to 25 people. Call 758-1196 by January 15 to register. Fee for the class is $1 per person.

Dispatch Aid To Crippled Vessel

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard says tugs have been dispatched to assist a container ship that reported Sunday it had become disabled about 250 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the tugs, dispatched by the vessel's owner, Sealand Inc. of Fort Elizabeth, N.J., were expected to reach the ship late today.

Lt. T.D. Johns said the vessel Jacksonville radioed at 9:15 a.m. Sunday that it was "broken down and drifting in that position."

Johns said the ship's problem appeared to be a "boiler casualty."

Sows should be grouped (three to six per group) and checked for heat with a boar twice daily beginning the day after weaning. Boars produce a pheromone that stimulates heat expression in sows. The pheromone is transmitted through saliva from the boar's mouth to the sow's nose. Thus, it is necessary to have direct physical contact between boars and sows for proper stimulation.

There is a definite increase in the number of sows which fail to recycle in the late summer and early fall. It is not known if this is due to temperature or day-length. Producers should plan to have 25 to 50 percent more replacement gilts than normal during the summer and early fall to fill vacancies created by sows failing to recycle on schedule.

Accurate records are necessary for one to determine if delayed recycling after weaning is a problem and if changes in management practices reduce or eliminate such a problem. It may be advantageous to change management practices one at a time to determine if the change was beneficial and which change was most beneficial.

It is well known that tobacco smoking is linked to heart disease and lung cancer. However, although smoking is not usually thought to be associated with circulatory disease, it is. Tobacco blindness, or tobacco amblyopia, is the impairment of central vision. This is brought about as the capillaries of the eye become restricted and blood flow is impaired. Inability to read or discern detail results. Less extreme effects on the eyes of heavy smokers are blurred vision combined with numbness or tingling of the fingers. These symptoms are especially true of older people whose circulation is already affected by age.

Periodic eye exams are a crucial part of one's health program. If such an exam results in the need for corrective eyewear, then let CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 6th Physicians Quadrangle Building A, assist you. We dispense quality optical products professionally attended to meet your prescription requirements and provide a comfortable fit. In addition our staff will assist in the selection of eyewear that is fashionably attractive and pleasing. Tel. 752-1446.

Be prepared for compliments galore when you step out in this cap and scarf knitted in sculptured Aran Isle stitches. Make a set for yourself and then several more for treasured gifts.

Knitting worsted weight yarn in pure wool or synthetic is used to make the cap and scarf and directions are written without abbreviations to simplify the knitting.

To obtain directions for making the Aran Isle cap and scarf, send your request for Leaflet No. 7978 with $1.00 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-7978, containing the instruction leaflet plus sufficient yarn for making one cap and scarf set, by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. The price, including shipping and handling charges, is $8.50 for acrylic yarn or $12.50 for pure wool. Specify your choice of gold, grey heather, light or royal blue, camel or creamy white.

DEAR PAT: Many knitters and crocheters have odds and ends of yarn left over and don't know what to do with them.

Why not make lap-size afghans for use in convalescent homes? These would certainly be welcomed in any such home.

The yarns needn't even be the same weight and any combination of colors and pattern stitches can be used. A good size would be 36 by 36 inches. — Mrs. M.M., San Lorenzo, Calif.

Thanks, Mrs. M., for sending in this excellent suggestion. In addition to using up leftovers, this is an excellent means for practicing new pattern stitches or simply repeating ones you particularly enjoy doing.

If spare time is a problem for you, you might consider using double or triple strands of yarn and large needles or hooks.

When you use multiple strands with each strand a different color, you create and interesting tweedy effect.

To determine how many stitches to cast on or chain, first make a small sample swatch in the pattern stitch of your choice. Then count and see how many stitches you have for each inch of knitting or crocheting. This is your stitch gauge. Multiply your stitch gauge by the desired finished width and the resulting answer will be the number to cast on or chain.

One of many good choices for a knitted lap robe would be the double seed stitch as the edges need no finishing. If you don't want to figure your own gauge, try using double strands of knitting worsted weight yarn and size 10 or 11 needles, casting on 108 stitches.

For rows one and two, work as follows: (knit one, purl one), repeating steps within parentheses all across row. Rows three and four are the reverse of the first two rows. That is, you start with a purl stitch, follow with a knit stitch, repeating all across row.

Simply repeat these four rows over and over until the desired length is reached.

For crocheters, the "one over one" or fabric stitch is a good choice. With a double strand of the same weight yarn and a size J or K hook, make a chain of 109 stitches.

In the second chain from hook, make a single crochet and then double crochet in the next chain. (Single crochet in next chain, double crochet in following chain.) Repeat steps in parentheses all across row, ending with a double crochet. Chain one and turn.

On next row (single crochet in first stitch, double crochet in next stitch). Repeat these steps across row; at end of row, chain one and turn. You will see that you always make a single crochet on top of a double and a double crochet on top of a single. This one row is repeated over and over until desired length is reached.

Either of the above pattern stitches works well in stripes and you may find striping the most effective way to use up leftovers.

Do try to use either all wool or all synthetic when making any items from leftovers and advise the recipient of any gift which material is used so that proper washing techniques can be used.

Fire Extinguisher

To make sure that a fire extinguisher is good quality, look for the Underwriters' Laboratory symbol — that is, the capital letters U and L in a circle. And look for a minimum UL rating of 2A-10BC.

The letters ABC mean the extinguisher is an all purpose one, extension home economics specialists at North Carolina State University, point out.

The numbers two and ten stand for the extinguishing capacity. The higher the number, the stronger the extinguisher.

Dear Abby

Make Request To Management

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have subscribed to a theater guild since 1935. For the last four seasons I have had a laughing hyena seated beside me, and she spoils my theater!

Is there any way I can ask her to please tone down her annoying laugh? Those seated in front of her have given up, and no longer turn around to show their annoyance.

I've had this seat on the aisle and near the stage for 10 years, so I don't want to ask for a change of seat. What do you suggest?

IRKED IN CHICAGO

DEAR IRKED: You could ask her to please try to tone down her laughter. But because laughter is spontaneous and not easily controlled, it probably wouldn't help.

As a subscriber for 45 years, you should be entitled to change your seat to one equally desirable. Request it, and state your reason. And if the management won't move you, it may move the "hyena."

DEAR ABBY: With regard to the 15½-year-old boy who was accused of being the father of a child expected by a 30-year-old divorcee, I submit the following excerpt from the Idaho Code:

"Any person who shall willfully and lewdly commit any lewd or lascivious act or acts upon or with the body or any part or member thereof of a minor or child under the age of 16 years, with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the lust or passions or sexual desires of such person or of such minor child, shall be guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned in the state prison for a term of not more than life."

Our caseload involving children who are being molested by adults is increasing continually. Idaho law regards any person under the age of 16 years a "child." You said the boy needed a lawyer. I submit that the expectant mother is in need of a lawyer also.

SECRETARY TO A PROSECUTOR

DEAR SECRETARY: Right on. In legal matters, everyone involved needs a lawyer.

Trend Is Hopeful One

Some things got better in 1980. There were more traffic accidents in Pitt County, but there were fewer highway fatalities than in the previous year.

Troop A Commander Carl Gilchrist reported there were 461 accidents investigated on county highways during 1980 compared with 386 in 1979. At the same time there were 15 deaths in accidents for the county compared with 23 highway deaths in 1979. For the entire troop there were 171 deaths in 1979 and 114 highway deaths in 1980.

There was also an improvement in numbers of accidents in the Troop A area. There were 7,043 collisions investigated in 1980 compared to 7,954 in 1979. The reduction is 12 percent.

Gilchrist gave credit to motorists for their cooperation and support, as well as to various agencies which work with the Highway Patrol in the field of highway safety.

It is not always clear why there is a drop in highway accidents and deaths. It may be that people are driving fewer miles because of gas prices, and it could be that the public is becoming more safety conscious.

Either way we are happy to see an improvement in the highway death rate and a lowering in numbers of wrecks. We hope the trend continues.

Reagan Comments Correct

President-elect Reagan has handled the Iranian hostage situation about right in the interim period as he awaits taking office.

By his comments he has made it clear that the Iranians cannot expect easier dealings with his administration than it can get with the Carter administration. In fact, his comments have telegraphed that he may be tougher to deal with.

As anticipation of a settlement heightened last week, Reagan gave qualified approval to honor an agreement made by Carter.

It would be to Reagan's advantage to get the matter settled before he takes office, and he has given the outgoing administration full support in its efforts.

Push Bonds Again

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Once more, Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public schools, and his colleagues at the Department of Public Instruction, are seeking to fire up some enthusiasm for a statewide school bond issue.

The proposal bit the dust last summer when it became obvious that without Gov. Jim Hunt's active support, the notion of a $600 million bond issue for local school construction purposes would not get off the ground.

Hunt, then facing reelection, was only lukewarm to a bond election. Its presence on the November ballot would not be most desirable, he felt, and the case for the need would have to be strong in order to win support.

He would only say he felt, then, that the timing and the amount needed careful consideration.

With hard times pressing down upon state and local governments, with taxpayers already keeping an ever-closer watch on action, and with the 1981 General Assembly being dealt one of its toughest financial hands ever — with a gas tax hike the wild card — prospects for a bond vote are still shaky.

Promotion

State education leaders are again urging local school people to update their needs lists, and to involve local governmental officials and press representatives in that effort.

There remains considerable political trading before a distribution formula is settled upon. Hard-nosed politicians insist that unless the big, urban counties get a fair shake, the voters in those areas will not support a bond issue, so defeat is probable. On the other hand, it is well known that the less populated, less wealthy counties are the very ones which most need bond money help from the state in order to provide adequate school facilities.

All of this is complicated by the fact that school enrollment is declining at a time when spending is already soaring for higher salaries, reduced class size efforts, special remedial programs, and so on.

Efforts to drum up a public demand for state bond money has so far produced no dramatic results. One problem which insiders see is that the bond proposal is deliberately structured for remodeling, upgrading, and making more fuel efficient the existing school structures as opposed to financing major new construction projects. Such mundane building projects aren't nearly so exciting to local patrons as would be new buildings.

Above all, however, is the one question least often asked when governmental types start pushing bond votes: what's the tab?

Members of the General Assembly are already asking themselves that very question, for they are the ones who must put up the taxpayers' dollars to pay off the loan.

Big Bucks

If the bonds covered a 25-year period and were sold at six and one-half percent (still possible despite high interest rates because of the tax incentives built into governmental bonds), the combined $600 million and interest payoff would amount to $1.14 billion. Incidentally, the state still owes the interest on the last school bond election — about half-a-billion.

So the total debt on public schools would be pushed to $1.65 billion, which must be

HANDY SHIELD FOR BIG TALK!

BY ART BUCHWALD

An Answer To Jogging

WASHINGTON — The jogging fad peaked in early 1980, and running analysts predict it will be all downhill for 1981. This does not mean that the hard-line jogger, who cannot be rehabilitated, will give up the sport. But the person who tried it for kicks and because everyone else was doing it has finally come in from the cold and has gone back to doing pushups in his bedroom.

No one knows why jogging fell off. Some believe when President Carter stumbled in a race last year, it was the beginning of the end for amateur runners. Others theorize that many people discovered you never got to talk to anyone when you were jogging after work, and you could meet a much better class of people in a warm singles bar.

I date the beginning of the end for jogging to last summer when I went to see Guggenheim and found him in his garage.

"How about a five-mile run to the Pentagon this morning?" I asked.

"I can't," he said. "I'm working on something that could make me rich."

"What is it?"

He showed me a round piece of wood. "I call it a wheel."

"What good is it?"

"It's no good by itself. But when I attach it to another wheel with this crossbar, and connect it to these other two wheels in the back and put this seat on top and an engine here to turn the wheels, a person won't have to jog any more."

"You're a dreamer, Guggenheim. Who would want to ride when he could run instead?"

"Don't you see, man? This invention will free millions of joggers from having to use their own legs. They can cover twice as much territory in half the time. They won't have to worry any more about aches and pains in their bodies — they won't even have to breathe heavily. They can just sit there and enjoy the view. The wheel will take the pain out of jogging."

"But I thought pain was part of jogging. I was under the impression people jogged because it hurt all over."

"Some do, but there are millions of people out there who have low pain thresholds. That's the market I'm going for."

"It sounds great on paper," I admitted. "But if you don't use your own legs how can you call it jogging?"

"You can still wear your sweat suit and running shoes. You can do everything a jogger does, except move under your own power. The thing that's going to sell this is that you don't perspire. You can do 26 miles and not have to take a shower."

"I forgot about that. Are you looking for investors?"

"I might be when I go into mass production. But at the moment, I'd like to stand on my own two feet."

I took one more look at Guggenheim's crude machine and realized I was gazing into the future. I always knew that someday man's genius would lick the jogging problem once and for all. But I never thought it would come so soon.

Other Editors Say Penalizing Thrift

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

The federal and state governments, during the energy crunch of the past few years, urged Americans to conserve energy as our dependence upon foreign oil grew.

Americans heeded the call. Now they face the consequences. It isn't that they didn't conserve. The problem is that they conserved too much to suit officialdom.

Americans are doing such a good job at conserving gasoline that they soon may be paying more per gallon in federal gasoline taxes to keep the highway trust fund solvent.

In North Carolina, Gov. Jim Hunt is pondering raising the taxes on gasoline by as much as five cents a gallon. Needless to say, that doesn't sit well with Tar Heel motorists.

In several areas, motorists are already paying higher state motor fuel taxes because of problems in financing highway construction and repair.

The whole thing is ironic. Funds for highway upkeep come, as a rule, from gasoline taxes in most states. By conserving fuel, motorists have unwittingly cut off the flow of such funds into the state highway kitty.

That means that in order to maintain roads and build new ones, gas taxes will have to be increased or other sources of revenue will have to be found.

The Transportation Department has announced that for a second year in a row, federal, state and local officials will spend millions of dollars more on highways in 1981 than they collect through gasoline taxes.

The shortfall is made up by dipping into highway trust funds. But officials say that if the trend continues those funds eventually will be exhausted.

A transportation task force advising President-elect Ronald Reagan recently urged that while the concept of using a highway trust fund remains sound, the taxes which feed the fund should be increased.

The Federal Highway Administration has noted the 4-cent-a-gallon levy has not changed since 1959 while construction costs have risen dramatically.

Through 1979, the federal highway trust fund, relying primarily on gasoline taxes, grew steadily as the number of motorists increased. Last year soaring gasoline prices and increased use of fuel-efficient cars caused a reversal.

"We're worried about the trend, and it's very serious," said Beverly Silverberg of the Transportation Department. Everybody will agree with that.

PREACHING AND PREACHERS

St. Paul speaks of "the foolishness of preaching" (1 Cor. 1:21). Many people since Paul's day have thought that preaching was foolishness. Many have said that the best sermon is a well-lived life — which in many respects is true — and others have complained about the length of some sermons.

But when Paul spoke of the foolishness of preaching he was speaking satirically. He was comparing it with the pagan philosophies and isms of his day. None of these had worked, so God was going to save the world by something which these erudite people called foolishness, namely by preaching.

The passing centuries have vindicated Paul's conviction that preaching is an indispensable function in a Christian community. Preachers are among the most valuable members of our communities. We should encourage them by our prayers and support. The world awaits healing by the simple message of God and from God. — Elisha Douglass

N.C. Begins 'Recycling'

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Moving to save both money and energy, the state of North Carolina has begun operation of a unique $2 million plant to recycle oil used by about 18,000 state-owned cars and trucks.

After drawing criticism from several quarters and encountering opposition from residents of the area where it was built, the plant recycled its first batch of used oil recently. It has a capacity of 2 million gallons of oil a year and initially will handle about 428,000 gallons annually.

"There's no difference between new oil and reused oil," said manager Gil Holland. "All you do is clean it up."

The General Assembly in 1977 authorized construction of the plant, which utilizes a four-step process to remove impurities from the oil.

Oil is collected from city, county and state storage areas and hauled to the plant, located in the Raleigh suburb of Garner. After removal of foreign material, the oil is placed in a slurry tank to eliminate fine particles. It then goes into a hydro-treater, which removes sulfur and other contaminants, before additives are restored to improve its performance.

The plant, built by Phillips Petroleum Co. is one of several that have been proposed for various locations around the United States. Some of the facilities would have an annual capacity of 5 million gallons of oil.

After reviewing initial plans for the recycling plant, state auditors criticized the Department of Administration and General Assembly for acting too hastily in moving on the proposal.

However, the audit report called it "a rather innovative idea which has the potential for conserving energy, saving tax dollars and providing valuable experience for the state and the nation in using recycled oil."

Most of the criticism by the auditors centered on the way officials of the state Department of Administration handled the initial stages of the project. They were critical of a $42,500 expenditure for preparation of a site in southeastern Raleigh, which was abandoned after protests from area residents.

Before the auditors' report, a private research group also criticized the state for agreeing to buy the plant before knowing for certain whether it would work.

The North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research said in its "N.C. Insight" that the state signed a contract with Phillips to buy the plant and use a secret recycling process even though the process had never been tested by anyone outside Phillips.

But then assistant Secretary of Administration John Talton said the state's contract allowed for independent testing of the process before the state could accept construction of the plant. He said that if the recycled oil was not of "virgin quality," the state could back out of the deal and keep its $1.4 million.

"We didn't just jump into this thing half-cocked," Talton said.

Once the plant went into operation last month, it literally raised another stink.

Residents of the community around the facility complained of a foul smell that made some people ill and kept others inside their homes. Plant officials blamed a faulty valve that released fumes from a chemical with the smell of rotten eggs into the air, and it took several days to eliminate the odor.

"We do have problems, but I don't think you open up this type of plant without some problems," Holland said.

Holland has kept a close eye on the progress of the plant, the only state-owned and operated facility of its kind in the nation. Interest has also been shown by several other states and foreign countries.

"We just had a national organization calling from Washington, D.C. They're coming down here to look at it," Holland said. He added that calls have also come from Madrid, London and Tokyo.

The National Association of Oil Recoverers and the Council of State Governments have visited the plant site, and each group plans to hold meetings and seminars within the next three months.

Holland said the plant has just begun to crank out its first batches of re-refined oil, and within 5½ years, will pay for itself. But he added that the savings to the state depends on how much the price of oil increases during the plant's life.

None of the oil goes for commercial use, although if a private firm has difficulties

Only A Near - Miracle Needed

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The challenge to the President-elect is to supply more with less, which isn't impossible, according to the bible and a few business people, but which has generally been classified under miracles.

He must lower the budget deficit, a self-imposed challenge, while (1) watching inflation raise government expenses, (2) dealing with a federal bureaucracy that knows only how to grow and (3) cutting taxes.

While doing this he must deal with a federal debt that is certain to exceed $1 trillion during the next year or two, if only because the government must raise more debt just to pay interest on old debts.

In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, that interest expense amounted to nearly $75 billion, which gives you some idea of the size of the problem. And if rates don't drop soon, the problem will grow worse.

Meanwhile, spokesmen for every constituency in America have been applying pressure to keep their favorite spending program alive, even if the goal of their spending and efforts has ceased to have meaning.

This is a large order for any president to deal with, but Ronald Reagan has assured the public he will cut their taxes at the same time. In fact, David Stockman, slated to be his director of the Office of Management and Budget, says a tax cut is essential to budget balance.

What this amounts to, therefore, is the quintessential "shrink" challenge, a term that many businessmen understand. It means the challenge of running an operation profitably while shrinking the size of the operation and otherwise dealing with an adverse set of factors.

It is a challenge before which otherwise able business chieftains have failed, especially in the past few years of almost chronic recession threats. Executives who can expand a company are common; those who can shrink them are rare. Those skills aren't taught in business schools.

Nor in the school of politics either. In fact, politics has been a success for many elected officials precisely because they promised expansion, and delivered it in the form of government services.

For the Reagan forces to achieve their goal of budget balance will obviously take a lot of faith and guts. It means angry constituents, and probably even worse inflation before the goal is reached.

Most likely it will also mean, of all things, more budget deficits — for fiscal 1981 and fiscal 1982, which begins next October. Stockman estimates the 1981 deficit at $60 billion. Wharton Forecasting believes the 1982 deficit will be about $80 billion, which would be a record.

Sometime after that, the shaving of spending, the lowering of inflation, and the spurring of the economy through tax cuts will have more impact. Revenues will rise in relation to expenditures.

Or so the script says.

If not a miracle, it will be deemed one of the major turning points in U.S. economic history — if it comes to be. But it probably won't come about if it fails to catch the fancy and support of the people.

Nobody can say yet whether the people will accept a reduction in services, especially in regard to income aid and Social Security, or if business will re-equip and establish higher goals because of tax cuts.

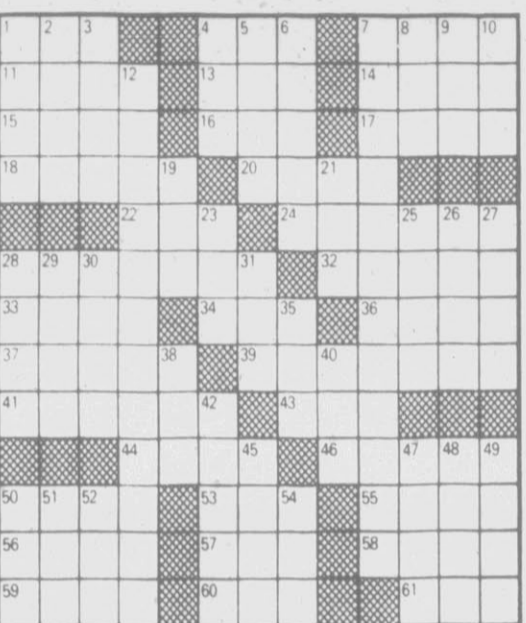

But if they do, and if the script otherwise evolves in the manner foreseen, then what can it be called but a miracle?

Dog Walked 800 Miles For Reunion

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — A 16-month-old dog who couldn't wait for his teen-age owner to send for him spent six months covering 800 miles for an unexpected reunion.
 Curtis Murphy, 18, obtained Rocky from the Allen County Humane Society in March. A month later, Murphy took the mixed-breed dog with him when he moved to Ozark, Ark., to work on a ranch.
 Rocky "took to me and went everywhere I went," he said.
 In July, Murphy returned to his Lima area home by bus, leaving Rocky with friends.
 "I was intending to send money down to get him and have him sent back," Murphy said, adding that he has since learned that Rocky "left right after I left."
 Their reunion took place Friday at the home of 13-year-old Kevin Gallimore of Wapakoneta.
 Gallimore had befriended Rocky after finding him in mid-December roaming the trailer park where Gallimore lived. The boy said he took an instant liking to Rocky and decided to call the dog "Sooner."
 After Gallimore and his mother, Diane Behm, noticed the dog wore an Allen County tag around his neck, they began trying to trace the owner.
 They checked the registration through the Auglaize County sheriff's department and learned the dog belonged to a Curtis Murphy of Ada, just outside of Lima.
 "I called about every Murphy in Ada," Gallimore said.
 But their efforts failed and they were unable to locate Rocky's owner.
 Ultimately, it was the Ada Police who notified Murphy that Rocky had come home.

PERCY SIGNS SUBPOENA — Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., signs a subpoena in his Capitol Hill office Sunday night. The subpoena orders the National Archives to produce logs of 100 hours of tapes of conversations between President Richard M. Nixon and Alexander Haig. The committee is considering Haig's nomination to be Secretary of State. At right is Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., ranking Democrat on the committee. (AP Laserphoto)

When asked why he took the time and trouble to find Rocky's owner, Gallimore said, "I love dogs to begin with and I wouldn't want that dog taken to the dog catcher."

Murphy marveled that Rocky nearly managed to complete the nearly 824 mile journey from Ozark to Allen County.
 "I'd rather have paid than have him walk that far," said the happy owner. "I can't believe it. I thought I'd never see him again."

BUG BOMB

WASHINGTON (AP) — The predecessor to the modern aerosol can that is used to package household, automotive, cosmetic and other products, was the "bug bomb" used in World War II.
 It killed mosquitoes and provided relief for soldiers fighting in insect-infested jungles.
 Modern versions of bug bombs will take care of everything from fleas and ticks on pets to cockroaches hiding behind walls and in cracks.

Eleven Unattended Kids Die In Nighttime Fire

By CRAIG HORST
 Associated Press Writer
 EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — The mother of 11 children who died in a house fire as they slept unattended had often left her children alone and said they were "too bad for anyone else to watch," a neighbor says.
 Virginia Williams, 28, was held in the city jail while police investigated the blaze, which broke out early Sunday morning and roared through the brick house. No charges were filed.
 Lt. Norman Stevens of the fire department said a space heater in a downstairs living room was to blame for the fire.
 One officer with responsibility for juvenile affairs, Gregory Cox, said authorities had spoken with Ms. Williams several times in the past about leaving her 12 children unattended.
 "She told me that her 11-year-old girl kept an eye on the other kids all the time," neighbor Ethel Bobo said of Ms. Williams, who was pregnant at the time of the fire.
 "I told her I'd keep an eye on the kids, but she told me they were too bad for anyone else to watch. But they were nice kids, real nice kids," she said.
 Ms. Bobo said she had taken groceries to the house several times and frequently fed the children.
 "Those kids were always hungry," she said. "They were over here all the time getting something to eat. And they didn't have any clothes."
 Eleven of Ms. Williams' children, aged 10 months to 11 years, were home when the fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m., authorities said. A 12th child was believed to have been staying with friends or relatives.
 "I kicked that back door open and called to them," said Lonzo Blain, who lives across the street. "I could hear their little feet hitting the stairs. But the smoke got them — they never made it."

 "They stood there a long time," he said, "and they never made it."

An East St. Louis police officer said Ms. Williams told authorities she had been riding around at the time of the fire. When she arrived at the scene, "She just turned away screaming, 'Lordy, Lordy, Lordy. Why my children, Lord?'" said neighbor Joyce Brown.

The fire brought charges from firefighters that city officials "played Russian roulette with citizens" by laying off 15 firemen recently.

Mayor Carl Officer, whose 1981 budget forced the layoff of 90 city employees, said more firemen would have made no difference.

"It was the professional judgment of my fire department that nothing could be done to save those children," Officer said. "That house was a matchbox."

Deputy Coroner Albert Ransom said the victims died of smoke inhalation. He said nine of the bodies were found in an upstairs front bedroom, where the children were sleeping on foam rubber because there was no bed, and another was found in a back bedroom. The 11th was found on the stairwell.

Fire units responding to the blaze were undermanned because of cutbacks, forced by the city's fiscal crisis, said Verge Riley, president of the firefighters' union.

"We had nine men on the scene," Riley said. "There was more people that got burned to death than we had firemen on the scene."

Officials say the 45 percent unemployment rate in East St. Louis and the surrounding area makes it one of the most economically deprived sections of the country. The city, the largest in southern Illinois, is plagued by deteriorating housing stock, inefficient sewer and trash collection services and roads filled with potholes.

 paid off in yearly installments.
 The peak payment would fall due in 1988 when the bill would be $73.4 million.
 Question Number Two then, becomes: where does the cash come from? Legislators who already are approving $100 million here and another $100 million there for education are being told bluntly by their financial advisors that the big dollars which will be needed to pay off the school bonds must come either from other areas of state spending, or from the schools budget itself.
 And that means, the experts are saying, that something else will have to suffer if the money is committed to paying off bonds for 25 years.

New Offerings By NBC-TV Set; Silverman Will Stay On

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, which has unveiled its new offerings for the TV season, plans to retain president and programming wizard Fred Silverman despite low ratings, officials say.

NBC has "no intention of getting rid of Fred Silverman," said Robert Mulholland, president of NBC's NBC-TV division. He said the network had finally pushed its way into second place in the threeway ratings race, although the other commercial networks disputed the claim.

NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff, Silverman's 31-year-old protegee, who took control of NBC programming last season, said NBC will premiere seven of its 1980-81 series in January, including restructured versions of "Buck Rogers," "B.J. and the Bear" and "Lobo."

He said the network places great stock in the new "Hill Blues" police series, to debut Jan. 15, and a "Walking Tall" series starring Bo Svenson. Another big NBC hope is the multi-part "The Gangster Chronicles."

As for remakes of old TV shows such as a new "Maverick," with James Garner reprising the starring role, and "The Brady Girls Get Married," Tartikoff quipped: "I'm only 31 years old so I never saw them the first time."

Other upcoming shows include: "The Angie Dickinson Show," with Miss Dickinson as a divorced woman; "The Stockers," a pilot starring Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw and country singer Mel Tillis as stock car drivers; "Nero Wolfe," with William Conrad as the noted fictional detective; and the "Project Peacock" prime time children's series that kicks off Feb. 8 with "The Big Stuffed Dog," featuring Snoopy.

Mulholland's claim that the network is in second place in the ratings is based on NBC's assertion that the 1980-81 season began the week of Sept. 15, when NBC rocketed out of the starting gate with "Shogun" and the World Series baseball telecasts.

CBS began counting the new season, which was delayed by the 10-week actors strike, the week ending Nov. 2, when many of its hit comedy series returned with new episodes. According to CBS, that network maintains a commanding lead over its rivals, with ABC ranking second and NBC a poor third.

Actress Beulah Bondi Is Dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Beulah Bondi, who started playing mother roles when in her 30s and quickly graduated to a host of grandmother parts, has died at the age of 92.

Miss Bondi died of pulmonary complications Sunday at the Motion Picture and Television Country House and Hospital. She had been admitted Jan. 2 after breaking ribs in a fall, a hospital spokesman said.

Among Miss Bondi's roles in her 50-year career were two appearances as Jimmy Stewart's mother, in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and in "It's A Wonderful Life."

Though still in early middle age, the Emmy Award-winning actress began appearing in the roles of elderly women in 1931, in "Street Scene," followed that same year by similar roles in "Arrowsmith" and "Rain."

BEULAH BONDI

"Oh, I had a few ingenue leads when I was very young," Miss Bondi recalled in an interview. "And in my Broadway debut with 'Wild Birds' I originally tried out for the role of a younger woman."

"But even by then — I was just in my thirties — I had this face that somehow seemed older. And with the right hairdo, well, you know, I was just right for the mother's roles. And in a year or two, still before I was 40, I was playing grandmothers."

Miss Bondi appeared in "On Borrowed Time," "Our Town," "Shepherd of the Hills," "One Foot in Heaven," "The Southerner," and "Track of the Cat."

Her television appearances included "Goodyear Playhouse," "G.E. Theatre," "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" and "Climax," culminating in an Emmy Award for her performance in a 1977 segment of "The Waltons."

Miss Bondi, who never married, is survived by a niece.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Opines Garbo Most Beautiful Woman

MOST BEAUTIFUL — Greta Garbo is the most beautiful woman who ever lived, says art historian Kenneth Clark, long fascinated by feminine beauty. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Feminine beauty has long fascinated renowned art historian Kenneth Clark, who confesses: "I love cover girls. I see more and more beautiful ones. I tear them off and keep them tucked under my bed."

Clark, 77, the author of "Feminine Beauty," said in an interview in this week's People magazine that he thinks Swedish-born actress Greta Garbo is the most beautiful woman who ever lived, but adds, "She's not very interesting, you know. Very quiet."

As for some other contemporary beauties, Clark says Mae West "was heavenly. Shamelessness — that's what was divine in her. She would have gone down as a beauty in any period."

Of actress Bo Derek, the worldly Briton noted: "Compared with beauties of the past, she's more masculine. There's a real strength in her face and that's what America wants."

Placements Are Made By Service

The Greenville Job Service Office has placed 665 individuals in jobs during the previous three months (October to December 1980).

"There were 3048 people placing new applications with us, or renewing old applications," said James E. Hannan, manager of the local office. The Greenville office has also administered 414 tests; and conducted 275 employment counseling cases.

Employers listed 950 job openings with the office between October and December. Of these openings, the Job Service staff filed 80.3 percent of the jobs. "I attribute this to the good relationship our office has with the local employers, and the desire of our staff to professionally screen applicants and refer qualified people to our employers," added Hannan.

Kendrick Taylor, the office veterans employment representative, reports 145 of the placements made were veterans. He added that there were 342 veterans placing applications with the office during that time. "We were successful in placing 42 percent of our registered veterans," Taylor said.

All employers interested in having Job Service assist them in filling job openings are encouraged to call 756-2686.

By ANDREW O'CONNELL, Associated Press Writer

It was cold enough to jam the Cape Cod Canal with ice floes, cold enough to freeze parts of Chesapeake Bay, cold enough to threaten citrus crops in Florida and cold enough to drive hundreds of New Yorkers out of their heatless apartments into temporary shelters.

But in New Hampshire on Sunday, there was a celebration.

The local historical society in New London, N.H., had a day-long ice-cutting revival on Little Lake Sunapee in 5-degree weather, and among the 250 people attending was 72-year-old Chet Bowers, who knew how to cut ice because he'd done it since he was a kid.

"Hell," he said, "there was nothing else to do in the winter."

The cold enveloped much of the eastern part of the United States as arctic air extended south to the Gulf Coast and northern Florida. In parts of the nation where the cold is an unexpected visitor, dipping temperatures brought tragedy and alarm.

In New Orleans, authorities said a man believed to be homeless and trying to escape temperatures in the low 30s was killed Sunday when fire broke out in a vacant building in the city's warehouse district.

In the Chicago suburb of Robbins, officials blamed 14-degree cold for the death of an unidentified man who was found frozen in the middle of a road.

In Bourne, Mass., the Cape Cod Canal, clogged with ice floes, was closed for the fourth day today to barges carrying heating oil and gasoline to Boston and northern New England, officials said.

"Nothing you can do about it until the weather warms up," said Gary Maloney of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineer traffic office in Bourne.

The canal permits vessels to cut through the cape, shortening the trip from New York to Boston by 150 miles. Ships larger than barges were allowed in the canal.

Meanwhile, schools and factories in Lowell, Mass., and on Cape Cod were closing today in an effort to prevent natural gas from running out before emergency supplies arrive. Commercial and residential users of natural gas throughout the state were being asked to lower thermostats five to 10 degrees.

State and gas company officials say the shortage came about because extreme cold increased demand for gas and proved too much for the pipeline systems that deliver the fuel.

Central Florida growers kept watch over their groves early today as forecasters warned that temperatures could linger below freezing long enough to damage fruit in parts of the "Citrus Belt."

Oysterman Robert Meredith of Grasonville, Md., was trapped for more than 10 hours on the icy Chesapeake Bay aboard his 41-foot boat Saturday night before being picked up by a state police helicopter.

He said he had followed a trail of broken ice left by another boat Saturday morning. "Once the tide changed, it closed the trail and I got on top of the ice and I couldn't move," Meredith said.

"The only time I got scared was when I got on that helicopter, and they told me I wouldn't have lasted till morning in the cold," Meredith said Sunday.

In New York, where temperatures reached a high of 19 on Sunday, a tenant group angered by widespread reports of apartments without heat or hot water called for a citywide rent strike next month. Bruce Bailey, chairman of the Columbia Tenants Union, one of seven tenants' groups calling for the rent strike, urged all tenants to withhold February rents, whether or not they have heat.

Killer Suspect Is Found Dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Private letters and legal papers, but "nothing like a suicide note," were strewn in the jail cell where a man accused in six "Freeway Killer" slayings was found hanged, officials said.

The body of 23-year-old Vernon Butts, who also was a potential witness against another defendant in the series of Southern California slayings, was found Sunday in his high-security cell in the Men's Central Jail near downtown Los Angeles.

He was hanging from a towel wrapped around his neck and attached to a towel rack.

"We're certain" it was a suicide, said Lt. Jerry Minnis.

"There were no inmates in the area at that time of night," he said. "All of the inmates are locked down. Only three people have keys to that room."

The prisoner was not known to be suicidal, sheriff's Deputy Ralph Martin said.

Minnis said one letter found in Butts' cell indicated he was upset about the release last week of preliminary hearing transcripts detailing his confession to police of his part in the slayings.

Butts was checked by a deputy 40 minutes before he was discovered. Minnis said it appeared Butts had placed the towel over the towel bar, tied the ends together, "then lowered himself into the noose by getting into a kneeling position."

Jailers and a doctor were unable to revive Butts.

According to the hearing transcripts, Butts had referred to the slayings as a "good little nightmare" and implicated the chief defendant in the case, 33-year-old William Bonin, who is accused of 14 of the 44 killings which have occurred since 1972.

Butts, an aspiring magician, had not agreed to be a prosecution witness, and prosecutors have said his testimony was not crucial.

The "Freeway Killings" were so named because the bodies of young men or boys were dumped along freeways in five counties. Investigators have stressed that not all the killings are necessarily related.

Survived Cold Beside Dead Parents, Slayer

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — A 2-year-old child spent more than 12 hours in subfreezing temperatures in a deserted rural churchyard, apparently huddled beside the bodies of his parents and that of their slayer, authorities said today.

Sheriff's Deputy Jack Shields said the child, Shane Woodard, was checked by a doctor who pronounced him in good health.

"He had no frostbite," Shields said, noting the boy "had a good heavy coat" that apparently protected him from the 23-degree weather that chilled Jackson County Friday night and Saturday morning.

Shields, one of the first officers to reach the churchyard after the slayings were discovered Saturday afternoon, said the boy "was laying up beside its father, apparently asleep."

Sheriff Fred Holcombe said Shane's parents, the Rev. Dwane Woodard, 34, and his wife, Diane, 27, apparently were stabbed to death by a lay minister who then took his own life with a gunshot.

Woodard was pastor and founder of The Victory Baptist Church on U.S. 41 about six miles from Sylva.

Holcombe identified the assailant as Herman Franks, 30, who sometimes served as a lay minister at Woodard's church.

Holcombe said the bodies were found in the yard of the cinder-block church, which is located in an unpopulated area. He said they apparently had been there since late Friday, unnoticed by any passersby on the highway.

Holcombe said the Woodards apparently left their two oldest children with Mrs. Woodard's parents, who lived just several hundred yards away from their mobile home. Holcombe said the couple then took their 2-year-old son Shane with them to go grocery shopping Friday evening.

Holcombe said that when the couple returned, Franks apparently came up behind them and used his car to push the Woodard's Volkswagen into a ditch in front of the church. When the couple got out of the car, Holcombe said Franks met them on the church lawn and stabbed both Woodards to death before shooting himself in the head.

Sheriff's deputies recovered a .22 caliber pistol in Franks' car and a hunting knife and hammer on the ground outside his car.

Holcombe said no motive for the deaths had been established.

Woodard founded Victory Baptist, an independent church with about 50 or 60 members, in the late 1960s with some of the members of Zion Hill Baptist Church, a Southern Baptist congregation.

Woodard also was principal of the Victory School, which operated out of the church building. There were about 25 students from kindergarten through the sixth grade at the school.

Cash-Flow Road Plan Fell Short

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's new "cash-flow" plan for financing highway construction has produced less than half the $57 million originally anticipated, but Gov. Jim Hunt says that does not make the system a failure.

"I take strong exception to the suggestion that the cash flow method of financing highway construction projects is a failure," Hunt said in a weekend statement. "Such a suggestion is unfair, inaccurate and misleading to the public."

Transportation Department officials said Saturday the cash-flow system, which allows the state to pay for roads as they are built rather than waiting until all the money needed is available, will produce about $25 million during the fiscal year.

Hunt, who backed the proposal and pushed it through the 1980 Legislature, had estimated the system would allow the state to include $57 million in new work as well as balance the Transportation Department's $586 million budget.

In defending the system, Hunt said it was "true that the cash-flow system has raised less in revenue than was estimated last year. But it generated $25 million in additional highway funds that would not otherwise have been available."

With the cash-flow shortfall, department officials say they now face a projected $45 million reduction from revenue estimates prepared last summer. The additional cutback was blamed on shrinking gasoline tax and other revenue.

Such a shortfall would be the largest in the department's history, the officials said. They added it would require delays in some highway projects and cuts in departmental operations.

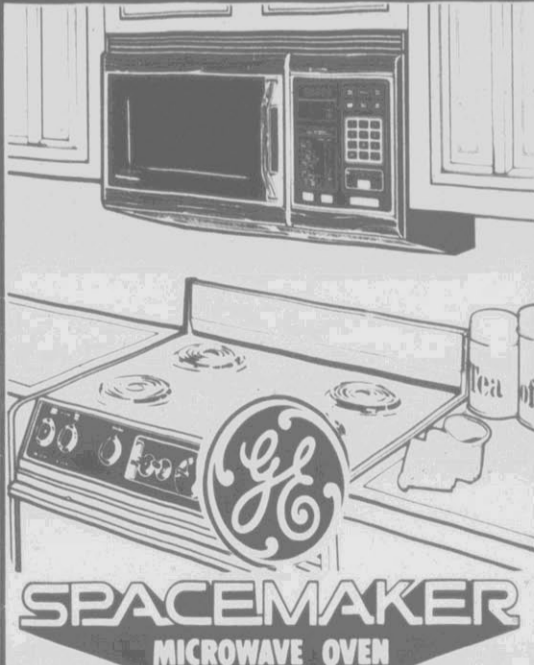

Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincolnton, chairman of the House Finance Committee and the strongest opponent of the cash-flow method in the Legislature, said some legislators accepted the system only as a means of balancing the transportation budget.

"I think we could have beaten it" if legislators had known the method would produce only $25 million, Gamble said.

Highway Administrator Billy Rose said more than $30 million in highway construction scheduled to begin this year will be delayed as a result of the shortfall. He said the specific projects have not been identified.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly in active trading today, responding to hopes for a further decline in interest rates.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 4.94 at 973.63.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 3-1 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The catalyst for the upswing was the Federal Reserve's report late Friday of a $2 billion-plus decline in both basic measures of the money supply.

The figures were taken as another in a series of recent signs that the Fed was succeeding in its effort to curb the growth of the money supply.

Many economists consider restraining monetary growth to be a necessary step toward bringing down the inflation rate. In addition, the apparent success of the Fed's credit-tightening is thought to mean less likelihood of additional tightening in the weeks ahead, which would reduce upward pressure on interest rates.

With today's rise, the market continued its volatile behavior since the start of 1981. The Dow Jones industrials rose more than 40 points in the year's first three sessions, then fell about 39 in the next two days on a sell recommendation by Joseph Granville, an investment adviser.

Oil stocks led the advance. Texaco gained 1/4 to 46 1/2 in trading that included a 200,000-share block at 47. Exxon was up 1/4 to 78 1/4, and Phillips Petroleum, which raised its dividend, picked up 1/4 to 53 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index rose 50 to 76.94. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.10 to 341.03.

Volume on the Big Board reached 25.94 million shares at noontime, up from 23.78 million at the same point Friday.

Chamber Annual Meet On Car Stickers Is Planned

The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce annual meeting will be held February 20 at 7 p.m. according to Anne Duffus, chairman of the annual meeting committee.

Ms Duffus said that the event, which had previously been scheduled for January 16, will be held in the new banquet facility at Casa Blanca Restaurant.

The program for the meeting will include the presentation of the 1980 annual report by past chairman Tommy Edwards, recognition of 1980 chamber leaders and the presentation of the "Citizen of the Year" award. Robert Griffin, 1981 chairman of the board, will also introduce chamber leaders for 1981.

Invitations for the annual meeting are being mailed to chamber members and committee volunteers this week, according to Ms. Duffus. All chamber of commerce members, committee members and their guests are invited to attend. For further information about the meeting, contact the chamber office at 752-4101.

Snowmobile

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — A three-man British exploration team was resting today at Scott Base today after crossing the Antarctic in snowmobiles.

They had covered 2,600 miles in 66 days, reporting the snowmobiles fell down crevasses and there had been a lot of mechanical difficulties, but no major problems. They said they were about six weeks ahead of schedule.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — It would be considered quite wise if North Carolina drivers did not throw away their blue-printed folder which accompanies their 1981 license plate renewal applications. Otherwise, they may not know where to stick their stickers.

Drivers will have the responsibility this year of handling two stickers since the state is finally getting around to staggered vehicle registration — which is not as unruly as it sounds and is also the name of the folder.

Drivers with last names beginning with A or B will start the staggering in August. Names ending in U through Z will complete it in July 1982. The renewal month assigned will be your month ever after, unless you change your name or have special license plates — which still get renewed from Jan. 1 to Feb. 15.

To simplify, if your license plate has "North Carolina" at the bottom, the stickers go on the top corners; renewal month goes on the left, the year on the right. If the plate has "North Carolina" printed across the top, then the stickers are placed on the bottom corners, month on the left and the year on the right.

If the license is for a motorcycle, the stickers go in the top corners. For a commercial farm plate, the sticker is placed in the middle at the bottom. A lot of work went into the blue-printed folder, according to Cy Lynn of the state Department of Transportation. He said the department went to great lengths to explain the new system and the varying fees.

But who would have imagined that so many people would throw their folders out before they purchased their stickers. "It's the little things like that," Lynn sighed, "that can really drive you bananas."

Obituary Column

Davis
 Funeral services for Mrs. Ruth Spell Davis, who died Saturday in Pitt Memorial Hospital, will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. at Redice Primitive Baptist Church by Elder Lucas. Burial will be in the Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Davis was a native of Pitt County and spent her life in the Greenville Community. She was a member of Redice Primitive Baptist Church where she served on the Mother Board and as the church clerk.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Estella Jordan of South Ozone Park, N.Y.; one son, Augustus Joyner of Brooklyn, N.Y.; three step-daughters: Mrs. Clarita Edwards of Rocky Mount, Mrs. Lillian Artis of Wilson, Mrs. Ida Bright of Willingsboro, N.J.; two step-sons: Robert Joyner of Tarboro, Jeffery Joyner of Norfolk, Va.; six grandchildren and 34 step-grandchildren.

The court, without comment, refused to hear arguments that Amerada Hess, Kayo Oil, Meadville Corp. and the Petroleum Marketing Corp. were denied a fair trial.

Prosecutors said the conspiracy illegally fixed retail prices of gasoline between 1967 and 1974 in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the nation's capital.

Each of the defendants was fined $50,000. Their appeals argued that their trial was prejudiced because the government delayed in seeking an indictment.

The appeals also contended that the trial was tainted by adversed publicity and by prosecutors' failure to inform the defendants about all the specific antitrust violations to be raised at trial.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected those arguments when it upheld the convictions last June 24.

It's Eagles, Raiders In Super Bowl XV

Philadelphia Bruises Dallas, 20-7

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There is no logical explanation for it, but the Philadelphia Eagles are on their way to the Super Bowl.

Thank you, Wilbert Montgomery.

In a season pockmarked with disabling injuries that sat him down for all or part of seven games, Montgomery erased the memories of all the aches and pains Sunday.

He slashed his way to 194 yards and led the Eagles to a 20-7 National Football Conference championship victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Here were the Eagles, bruised and battered, playing for the championship for the first time against the playoff-toughened Dallas Cowboys. Philadelphia had looked ragged a week ago against weak-sister Minnesota. Dallas looked brilliant against tough Atlanta.

The Cowboys were favored and it seemed no one believed in the Eagles — except themselves.

All week long, Coach Dick Vermeil expressed concern about the mental condition of his team. He said he could not read it. But on Saturday, he thought he saw a breakthrough.

"I thought last night you could sense an air of confidence that we could win," said Vermeil. "Today, I felt that the squad just knew it could win. And when you have that kind of confidence and belief..."

The confidence got a big boost early. On Philadelphia's second play from scrimmage, Montgomery slashed his way 42 yards to a touchdown.

"The play was designed to go through left guard and tackle," he said. "I cut it back to the right and I had a great hole. It's the kind of play you read on the run. The quarterback gives you the ball deep enough to make your move. My first thought was to cut it back."

Tackle Stan Walters knew right then and there that Montgomery was headed for a special day.

"He made a 90-degree cut back," said Walters. "not 45 the way he had been. With his knee injury and his leg not stable, he couldn't make his full cut. Today, he did."

Walters recalled a play last week against the Vikings. "I was blocking for Wilbert. He cut behind me, but he only cut 45. He ran right into me and the man I was blocking and we all went down. That didn't happen today."

Montgomery, who later ripped off 55 yards with an almost identical play, said his runs Sunday were a throwback to his college days at Abilene Christian.

"That's the kind of cutting, slashing runner I was in college," he said. "That was my style of running in college. I was more of a cutting, slashing runner there. But my first year in the NFL, I was so scared of Dick Vermeil because he was so demanding and he didn't believe in my kind of fancy running."

"And, I'm a lot stronger runner now."

Dallas came back to tie the score with a 68-yard 10-play drive in the second quarter. It was the only time all day the Cowboy offense was able to move the Eagle defenders.

Before halftime, Philadelphia had an apparent touchdown nullified by a penalty and two field goal attempts misfire. The score was still 7-7 but the Eagles had lost so many opportunities that it only seemed a matter of time before Dallas would catch up with them.

The Cowboys, however, never did.

"We had a good chance to win the game at halftime," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, "and going into the third quarter, I thought we would win. We just had to play well and avoid turnovers, but we didn't."

Halfway through the period, Dallas quarterback Danny White was sacked by Carl Hairston and coughed up the football. Dennis Harrison recovered at the Dallas 11 and

Early Outburst Buries San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It was, for the most part, the defense which got Jim Plunkett and the rest of the Oakland Raiders as far as the American Conference championship game.

So perhaps it was fitting that Plunkett took the opportunity early Sunday to say to the defense: "Thanks, guys. Take a break."

For a moment, it seemed as though they were taking Plunkett at his word, relaxing a bit too much. For a moment, it seemed that for every bolt of lightning thrown at San Diego, the Chargers would throw one back.

But if the Oakland defense bends a lot, it rarely breaks. And after an instant of agonizing miscalculation, it settled down, bent here and there, gave up points here and there — and held together.

"Our offense did the job in the first half and gave us a nice cushion," linebacker Ted Hendricks said after the Raiders blew out to a 28-7 lead. "I thought, 'If this is any indication for the day, here we go.'"

For the most part, it was Plunkett who gave them that cushion. The Raiders' 21-point burst tied the record for the most points scored in a quarter by one team in an AFC title game (actually it matched what San Diego did to Boston in the 1963 American Football League championship). Plunkett threw touchdown passes covering 65 yards to Raymond Chester on a deflection and 21 yards to Kenny King and, in between, ran 5 yards for another score when the Chargers covered his receivers.

The first pass of the game went to King. It traveled 5 yards to the Oakland 40, ricocheted off his hands for 10 yards to Chester at midfield and was carried the rest of the way to the end zone by the surprised Oakland tight end.

"I couldn't see the ball when it got to Kenny, but it caromed up and into my hands," said Chester. "Let's face it; a catch like that is just luck."

Luck or not, Plunkett went to the sideline shaking his head. "I thought, 'If this is any indication for the day, here we go.'"

Dan Fouts' first pass on San Diego's first play was no less electrifying — 55 yards to Ron Smith to the Oakland 28. Four plays later the ball was on the 14. Then Lester Hayes, who had intercepted 13 regular-season passes and four more in the previous two playoff games, got No. 5.

End of Chargers' threat No. 1.

No. 2 took just two plays to materialize — Fouts' 12-yard pass to Charlie Joiner to the Oakland 48 and the bomb to Joiner in the end zone.

If Fouts could throw for 48 yards, so could Plunkett. He did, to Cliff Branch on a third-and-19 at the Oakland 15. Four plays and two penalties later (including a pass interference call against cornerback Ray Preston worth 21 yards) Plunkett was in the end zone with a hook slide.

And barely two minutes later, with 1:35 to go in the opening quarter, the Raiders were in the end zone again on Plunkett's rocket to King, who had beaten Preston easily.

It went to 28-7 when, seven plays after Hendricks recovered Mike Thomas' fumble, Mark vanEggen picked up three of his game-high 85 yards on a touchdown run through a cavernous hole on the right (Please turn to page 10)

Montgomery: Went Wrong Way On Score

Eagle HB Rips Dallas For 194 Yards In Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wilbert Montgomery said he scored his first period 42-yard touchdown on a play that went the "wrong" way.

Montgomery spoke in his normally slow, subdued, almost inaudible tone after triggering the Philadelphia Eagles to a 20-7 victory over the Dallas Cowboys Sunday and into Jan. 25 Super Bowl XV against the Oakland Raiders.

Montgomery gained 194 yards on 26 carries, just 2 yards short of the National Football League's playoff ground-gaining record of 196 set in 1949 by the Eagles' Steve VanBuren against the Los Angeles Rams.

The play, on which he ran for a TD that sent the Eagles ahead 7-0 just 2 minutes and 11 seconds into the game, was designed to go off left guard, Montgomery said.

"But I cut it back to the right, because I had a great hole," Montgomery explained. "It's the kind of play you read on the run. The quarterback gives you the ball deep enough so you can make you're move."

Montgomery hurt a knee last week during a practice session and was uncertain how long he could play.

"The knee was very weak going into today's game, but it didn't bother me because I had a lot of heat and rubdowns before the game. Now it's just throbbing a little bit. The knee gave out on my second long run (54 yards). I believe I could have gone all the way for a touchdown if it hadn't happened," Montgomery said.

helped the defense hold Dorsett to 41 yards on 13 carries and the Dallas running attack to a total 86 yards, hugged his 5-year-old son, Josh.

"You told me it would be 24-14," Bergery admonished the smiling youngster. "But you're right more than you're wrong."

John Bunting, another linebacker, said he was "dumbfounded. It will take two or three sixpacks to bring me back to earth. It's going to take a while for me to feel the real meaning of this."

Defensive end Dennis Harrison, who recovered a fumble while Montgomery was answering reporters' questions, the player whose record he came within 2 yards of smashing pushed through the crowd.

"Wilbert, I always told you that you and Earl Campbell (of the Houston Oilers) were the greatest runners," said VanBuren.

Montgomery's running enabled the Eagles to surprise the Cowboys, who thought Philadelphia would have to beat them with a passing game. But the Eagles had two wide receivers unable to play, and Vermeil's plan emphasized the ground game.

Spiders 5-6; Pirates 6-7 ECU-Richmond Tonight

A Staff Report East Carolina seeks to return to the winning side of the ledger tonight as the Pirates play host to the University of Richmond. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Spiders bring a 5-6 record into the contest, having lost four straight games to in-state Virginia rivals. They were beaten by Old Dominion, 71-64; Virginia Tech, 83-79; Old Dominion, 89-76; and James Madison, 92-73 in games over the last two weeks. Prior to that streak, the Spiders were off to their best start ever, having won five of their first seven.

The Spiders, who are the number three team in the country in field goal percentage, hitting 56.5 per cent, are paced by all-America candidate Mike Perry, a 6-3 senior, who is the country's fifth leading scorer with a 26.1 average.

He scored 37 in the loss to Virginia Tech, high for the year. Backing him up is 6-6 junior John Schweitz, hitting 20.1 points a game.

East Carolina, coming off an 82-67 loss to strong Pan American, is now 6-7, seeking to pull even again.

After the Richmond game, the Pirates wind up their current home stand on Wednesday, hosting Atlantic Christian.

TOBACCO SEED... Choice of the HarvestMasters

Make your pounds with Coker in 1981!

A lot of flue-cured growers came up short this past season. Many had only half their normal crops, and quality suffered. Dollar losses were heavy.

How about you? If making your 1980 poundage was a problem, why not let stress-tolerant Coker tobaccos make up your shortage in '81?

Plant one or more of our best-sellers, Coker 48, Coker 347 and Coker 319. Growers prefer these because they consistently deliver the pounds when the going is tough, compared to less drought-tolerant tobaccos. They make the most of more favorable seasons, too.

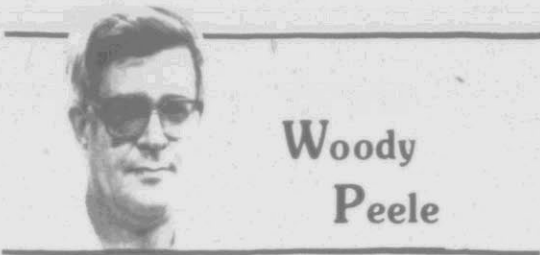

You'll like our new mosaic-resistant release too—Coker 51. It yields with Coker 48 and makes the best quality leaf of any mosaic-resistant variety yet introduced.

Join the HarvestMasters! Tell your seed dealer you want Coker's.

We take your crop program to heart!

Quotes are many times the name of the game in the news world. What someone says is, often, more important than what he does.

Take for instance, the quote now being told around concerning Lefty Driesell of Maryland. "A lot of people think I'm stupid. I'm not stupid, I just talk stupid." Driesell is credited with saying. Sometimes other quotes are just as good.

The NCAA, in its weekly releases, usually comes across with some good stories and quotes, and we quote a few of them here, most of them from former or future ECU basketball opponents.

• • •

North Carolina State's Chuck Nevitt is known by everyone for his size. The 7-5 junior cannot be missed — unless he turns sideways — when he's on the court. Recently, he admitted to being nervous. "My sister is expecting a baby," he said, "and I'm waiting to find out whether I'm going to be an uncle or an aunt."

• • •

Iowa State coach Johnny Ore says his team members are good listeners. "They're like the E.F. Hutton commercial. When I say something, everybody stops to listen. The biggest problem is that I usually don't have anything to tell 'em."

• • •

Detroit coach Willie McCarter told of going up against Michigan. "We'll be the underdog," he said. "But we're used to that. In fact, we've been the underdog so often, we're serving Alpo at our pre-game meals."

• • •

A non-ECU foe, at least in basketball, Southwestern Louisiana has a 6-7, 165-pound freshman forward. Coach Bobby Paschal decided to put him on a weight lifting program to beef him up. After two weeks, however, the player was down to 159 pounds. "We had to take him off (the weights) or he might have disappeared."

• • •

St. Francis (Pa.) is a team the Pirates used to play several years back. Its coach, David Magarity, commented on his team's quickness. "We're so slow, we go to the zoo to watch the turtles zip by."

• • •

And finally, upcoming foe Illinois State center Mark Herron was asked to comment on the bitter midwestern weather. "It's so cold," he said, "you'd have to jump-start a reindeer."

• • •

The NCAA also doubts that any college has a player with a longer name than Bucknell. Try this one: Ajouritsdebi Oreghoyeyere Memaridieyin Okorodudu.

Right now, Jim Woods, the voice of the Pirates, is probably thanking his lucky stars that the Pirates don't play Bucknell this year.

Raiders In Super Bowl...

side. "You can't spot a team like Oakland that many points," said Glen Edwards. San Diego's free safety. "You can't fall that far behind and expect to catch up all that easily."

But they nearly did. Fouts found Joiner again on an 8-yard TD pass just before halftime, then Rolf Benirschke kicked a 26-yard field goal and Chuck Muncie swept 6 yards for a touchdown in the third period and suddenly Oakland's lead was down to 28-24.

"I had a good feeling then," said Don Coryell, the Chargers' coach. "When we came back like that, it meant just one more good play, one more turnover, and a touchdown would put us in the lead."

It never happened. Chris Bahr kicked a 27-yard field goal as the third quarter drew to a close and a 33-yarder early in the fourth period.

When Benirschke kicked a 27-yarder of his own with 6:52 to play, the spread was seven points again. One more shot and Fouts' howitzer arm could tie it.

He never got it. With 6:43 to play, the Raiders started on their own 25. "We knew what we had to do, just get a few first downs at least, so Ray Guy could pin them in a hole," said vanEeghen. Guy, whose 71-yard punt earlier in the game had broken Tom Yewic's record of 68 yards in an AFC title game (that 1963 AFL game, again), wasn't needed. With vanEeghen chewing up 31 yards on that final drive, the Raiders crunched their way to the San Diego 22 when the clock read 0:00.

From that 65-yard deflection bomb to the little 6-yard flip to Arthur Whittington which kept that final, clinching drive alive, Plunkett almost was perfect. Fouts had 336 yards, but it took him 45 attempts (22 completions) to get them. And Plunkett was a precise 14 for 18 passing for 261 yards. More important, the quarterback with the silver No. 16 on his chest exploited the Chargers all game long.

"They said Jim was washed up," said Branch. "But he was stuck with teams that didn't have talent. He brought us leadership."

Women's Athletics Atop List At NCAA Convention

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Women's athletics and a host of recruiting proposals were certain to dominate meetings and discussions today as the NCAA officially opened its 75th convention.

Buttons popped up throughout the Fontainebleau Hilton Hotel on Sunday amid heated debate over the most divisive issue facing the assembly, the National Collegiate Athletic Association's entry into women's sports.

"NCAA — make love, not war — AIAW," said buttons worn by officials of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, who are staunchly opposed to what would be a revolutionary change in the governing structure of the NCAA.

"NCAA is for women," countered proponents of the plan.

A complex package of proposals to be voted on Tuesday would bring women into the governing structure and another related amendment would have Division I schools voting whether to sponsor championships in 19 women's sports.

Also being considered and hotly debated are proposals to set recruiting seasons in football and basketball, create a uniform signing date for letters of intent and restrict freshman eligibility.

One area in which the women's programs have been challenged is financing. But Jim Frank, secretary-treasurer, Sunday said the funds were available.

Donna Lopiano of the University of Texas and AIAW president, charged that under the plan, "massive duplication" of women's championships would result in scheduling chaos and a severe drain on resources already hit hard by inflation.

Ruth Berkey, director of women's championships for the NCAA, and two other women's athletic directors took issue with Lopiano.

"What we're asking for now is simply a choice," said Judie Holland of UCLA.

It's Miller Time

Johnny Miller reacts to a putt during final round Sunday in the Tucson Open. Miller won the tournament with a 15-under-par 265, two strokes ahead of Lon Hinkler. Miller took home $54,000 first-place prize money. (AP Laserphoto)

Johnny's Back — But Just How Far?

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Johnny's back.

But Johnny Miller, according to Johnny Miller, probably never will be all the way back.

"I don't think I'll ever play enough to be the best again," Miller said after scoring a 2-stroke victory Sunday in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open Golf Tournament, the opening event on the 1981 PGA Tour schedule.

And, in support of that argument, Miller is skipping the Bob Hope Desert Classic this week. He's coming off a welcome, important triumph, and looking at one of the three events that served as the cornerstone to his glory years as golf's Golden Boy, and he is skipping it.

"I'm planning on playing about every other week," Miller said. "That'll give me something like nine days at home, five at the tournament and I can handle a schedule like that."

"Oh, I'm going to cheat a little, play a couple of consecutive events out here in the west, but mostly that will be my schedule, one on and one off," Miller said.

He'll be off this week. But last week he definitely was on.

He was 15 under par for the week, claiming his fourth Tucson title with a 265 total on the 6,762 yard Randolph Park Municipal course. He came from two strokes off the pace with a final-round, no-bogey, 5-under-par 65 despite cold winds and a chilly rain that fell most of the day.

Miller broke a tie for the top with a beautiful approach that left him a 5-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole and stretched the advantage to two when Lon Hinkle 3-putted for bogey on the last hole.

Hinkle, named by Miller as a challenger to Tom Watson as golf's outstanding performer, finished with a 66 and second at 267.

Canadian Dan Halldorson, the third round leader, slipped to a 71 and was third at 269. John Mahaffey, with a closing 68, and Dan Pohl, with a 71, were next at 271. Pre-tourney favorite Lee Trevino tied for 10th at 68-275.

"All of a sudden, I'm putting like I did four, five, six years ago," Miller said. "You can't imagine how good that feels. I think it's as important to me to win this one as it did to win the Gleason."

Following ODU's Upset Of DePaul

Beaver Fans Want No. 1 Ranking

By The Associated Press
Oregon State University basketball fans are hoping for the Beavers' first No. 1 ranking in history, but not Coach Ralph Miller.

Old Dominion's upset of top-ranked DePaul over the weekend left the door open for undefeated Oregon State, ranked No. 2 in the nation by The Associated Press, and Miller sees his team on the threshold of trouble.

"The polls don't mean much to me," Miller said after his Beavers trounced California 80-53 Saturday night. "If we're No. 1, it will be the first time for me, but it just means more work for us. Now, you've got to try to stay up there, and that's difficult."

The Beavers still were in the process of beating California at Gill Coliseum in Corvallis, Ore., when the DePaul score was announced — Monarchs 63, Blue Demons 62 — and it nearly brought the house down.

Fans erupted into cheers of "We're No. 1! We're No. 1!" and the clamor continued for five minutes.

"It will just make things that much tougher for us," Oregon State guard Ray Blume said. "Who knows which team really is No. 1 at this point? All you have to do is get beat, like DePaul did, and it's gone."

The undefeated and third-ranked Virginia Cavaliers also are likely to draw support from the pollsters after dispensing with 16th-ranked North Carolina, 63-57, in the Atlantic Coast Conference Saturday.

Oregon State, 12-0, Virginia, 11-0, and sixth-ranked Wake Forest, 10-0, were the only undefeated and ranked teams after Saturday. The AP poll will be released at 6:30 a.m. EST Tuesday.

Joining DePaul as upset victims were fifth-ranked Notre Dame, No. 7 UCLA and 12th-rated Illinois. Marquette upended Notre Dame in Milwaukee, 54-52; Southern Cal edged UCLA 68-66 at Pauley Pavilion, and Illinois dropped a 78-61 decision at Indiana.

Mark Radford scored Oregon State's first 10 points, and the Beavers outscored California 26-4 in a 13½-minute stretch of the first half to rout the Golden Bears. Radford wound up with 22 points, and Blume added 16 to compensate for the off-night of center Steve Johnson. Johnson, who averages nearly 20 points a game, hit just one of four field goal attempts and wound up with three points and six rebounds.

DePaul absorbed its first defeat in 14 games when Old Dominion's Billy Mann stole an inbound pass from Terry Cummings of DePaul under the Monarchs' basket and hit a layup with seven seconds left. A 25-footer by Clyde Bradshaw of DePaul missed at the buzzer.

Ronnie McAdoo led the Monarchs with 21 points and did an fine defensive job on Mark Aguirre of DePaul, the college player of the year in 1980, who hit just one field goal in the first half. Aguirre wound up with 15 points.

"The way we have been lazy," Aguirre said, "this can be a real wakeup for the players."

Lee Raker broke out of a shooting slump with 18 points, and he and freshman Othell Wilson led a 19-4 Virginia run in the second half that erased an 11-point deficit and kept alive the Cavaliers' winning streak.

Virginia now has won 16 in a row over two seasons, the longest string in the nation by an NCAA Division I school.

Virginia center Ralph Sampson finished with a sub-par 14 points, but he hit two straight baskets and a pair of foul shots to give the Cavaliers a 56-51 lead with 1:34 to go.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 4 Kentucky held off 13th-ranked Tennessee 48-47. Wake Forest edged 20th-ranked Clemson 73-71. No. 8 Maryland whipped Duke 94-79, ninth-ranked Louisiana State trimmed Mississippi State 81-69 and 10th-ranked Michigan got by No. 19 Minnesota 68-67 in double overtime.

Freshman Glenn Rivers hit a 30-footer in desperation with no time left to boost Marquette over Notre Dame. The Fighting Irish, now 8-2, were in position to take the final shot, but Rivers tied up Notre Dame guard Tracy Jackson with four seconds left. Irish center Orlando Woolridge lost the tip out of bounds, returning the ball to Marquette with one second left.

Rivers took the inbound pass in Marquette's deep backcourt and heaved it toward the basket. It glanced off the glass backboard and went through the basket for the winning points.

Dean Marquardt led Marquette with 15 points.

Winters Leads Bucks Past Suns

By The Associated Press
Brian Winters has been on a slow road to recovery, but the Milwaukee Bucks guard feels he finally may be getting out of his log.

Winters scored 16 points, 14 in the fourth quarter, to help Milwaukee defeat Phoenix 123-102 Sunday night in the National Basketball Association.

He scored 20 points in a 106-102 loss at Indiana Saturday, and this weekend marked the first time he has put together two decent performances since he sustained injuries to the nerves in his neck and shoulder in a fall on Nov. 23.

"It's only one or two nights," Winters said. "It's got to be night in and night out, but I'd like to think I'm back. I feel a lot better."

Winters sank eight of his 13 shots to supplement the scoring of Marques Johnson (28) and Junior Bridgeman (21) in Milwaukee's 13th consecutive home victory.

Winters said the injury started a succession of problems, both physical and mental.

"Initially, I couldn't raise my arm straight up. I lost my rhythm, and then I got out of shape from not playing," he said. "Then it was a matter of getting my confidence back."

"When I was getting in games, I was pressing, trying to do everything in five minutes," he said. "I was throwing the ball all over the place. I've been trying to think of just relaxing. I know I'm getting my confidence back." Bridgeman hit four straight buckets early in the fourth quarter as the Bucks marched from a 91-81 lead to a 103-88 advantage with 8:40 left in the game.

Truck Robinson topped Phoenix with 24 points and 12 rebounds, going over 5,000 career NBA rebounds.

Clippers 115, Kings 105
Guard Phil Smith led a balanced San Diego attack with 29 points, and the Clippers snapped a six-game losing streak. Swen Nater scored 20 points, and Freeman Williams had 16 in a reserve roll for the Clippers.

San Diego broke open a close game by outscoring Kansas City 18-6 to lead by 14 points with four minutes left in the game.

Otis Birdsong had 21 points to lead Kansas City, which saw a four-game winning streak snapped.

Spurs 137, Bullets 106
George Gervin scored 24 of his game-high 33 points in the first half to help San Antonio moved to a 68-49 halftime lead and win its ninth straight game at home.

Johnny Moore, playing in place of ailing guard James Silas, handed off a team-record 19 assists and scored 17 points. Silas had muscle spasms in his neck.

Elvin Hayes scored 26 points to lead the Bullets, who have lost six of the last seven games.

Lakers 117, Pistons 108
Jamaal Wilkes scored 33 points for Los Angeles and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 22 before he fouled out with five minutes left.

Detroit erased all but one point of a 17-point Los Angeles lead to trail 85-84 with 9:43 left in the game. Wilkes scored two baskets and Abdul-Jabbar had a basket and a foul shot in a run of eight straight Los Angeles points in 1½ minutes to put the game away.

Pistons center Kent Benson scored 21 points.

Warriors 106, Sonics 98
Joe Barry Carroll scored 14 of his 30 points and hauled in five rebounds in the third quarter to help Golden State rebound from a 12-point deficit at halftime.

Bernard King, John Lucas and Lloyd Free had 20 points apiece for the Warriors, who held off a brief Seattle flurry early in the fourth quarter.

Paul Wespahl led Seattle with 24 points.

Allison Wins Western 500

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Allison didn't let anything bother him.
The rain was a nuisance and starting at the back of the pack because of a last-minute mechanical problem was unnerving, but the veteran stock car racer just went after the car in front of him.

Eventually, there was nobody else to pick off, and Allison had a victory in the Winston Western 500 Grand National race Sunday at Riverside International Raceway.
"It's unpleasant and uncomfortable to be in the situation of starting at the back, especially when you have a lot of car under you," explained the 43-year-old from Hueytown, Ala. "But it's not disastrous."

"I've been there before. I started 33rd at Daytona (last July) and won. It's not the ideal situation, but you just live with it."

Morning rains delayed the start of the race for 1 hour and 28 minutes. In fact, the cars ran 16 uncounted laps under a caution flag in an effort to dry out the soaked 2.62-mile course.

Allison, who qualified his 1977 Chevrolet Monte Carlo second for the race, was forced to the rear of the field when he discovered a handling problem during the pre-race period.

He was among a handful of drivers who ducked into the pits for adjustments or more fuel before the green flag started.

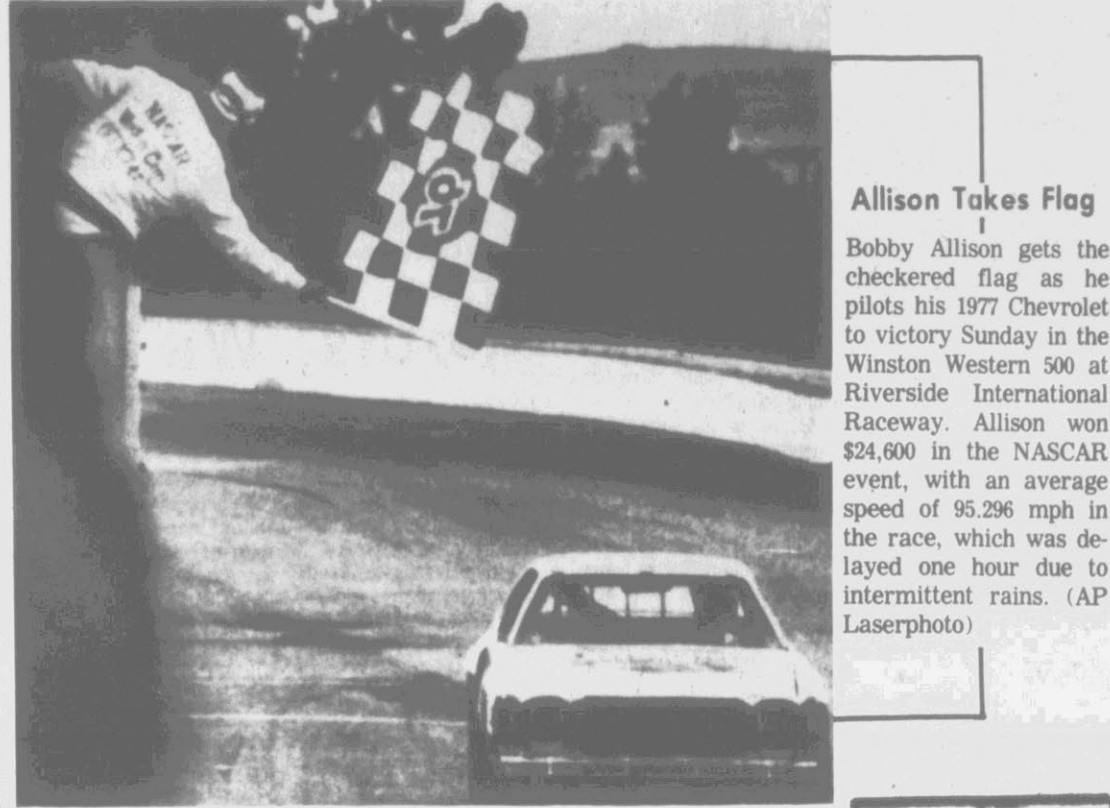

"I just had a little mechanical problem and I had to have the guys take care of it," Allison explained. "It was a situation where we made a change after practice ended and didn't have a chance to try it out until just before the race started."

"We were probably lucky we had to chance to do it the way we did. But I had to play catch-up, catch-up, catch-up early in the race."

Allison, who now has won 59 NASCAR races, made his way steadily through the stretched-out field, moving into first place on the 52nd lap.

He then battled a pair of 24-year-old youngsters, first Ricky Rudd, then Terry Labonte, for the lead most of the way.

Rudd, who never has won a NASCAR race, fell by the wayside on lap 98 when he blew an engine, bringing out the last of six caution flags in the race.

Labonte, winner of one race, took the lead during the caution period, but watched helplessly as Allison sped by when the green fell with 15 laps to go.
Allison, who picked up $24,350 for the victory, crossed the finish line 1.73 seconds ahead of Labonte's '77 Monte Carlo. He averaged 95.296 mph.

Dale Earnhardt, driving a Pontiac Grand Prix, one of the new downsized 1981 cars that will be mandatory from now on, finished a distant third, followed by Richard Childress and Richard Petty, both in now-retired '77 Chevrolets.
"We thought about bringing our new car here, but we had the Monte Carlo all ready way back in November, so we just decided to go ahead and run it," Allison said. "I figure everybody will get the new cars sorted out soon enough."

"I don't think anybody had any kind of big advantage (using either the new or old cars)," he added.
Six of the new cars started and three were among the 18 cars still running when Allison took the checkered flag.

Jaeger, Austin In Cogate Net Finals

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The two youngest players in the tournament, Andrea Jaeger and Tracy Austin, face each other tonight in the final match of the $250,000 Colgate Series Championships at the Capital Center.

"I'm just going to go out there and play my own game," Jaeger said. "I'm not going to change anything since I'm playing a baseliner."

The two teen-agers gained berths in the $75,000 final round by defeating their opponents, Wendy Turnbull and defending champion Martina Navratilova, in Saturday's semifinal matches.

Austin, 18, who advanced to the tournament final for the second year in a row, has defeated Jaeger, 15, in four of their last five encounters.

Austin defeated Turnbull 6-2, 6-1 while Jaeger took Navratilova 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

America's Team Blue After Loss

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys were feeling blue, and not because they wore their blue jerseys or played the Philadelphia Eagles in 16-degree temperatures.

"We've worked since last April and we got one game away from it," Cowboy quarterback Danny White said after the Philadelphia Eagles captured the National Football Conference championship Sunday with a 20-7 victory for a berth in Super Bowl XV Jan. 25.

The Cowboys prefer white jerseys, but were forced to wear blue, in which they are 10-11, when the host Eagles chose white themselves in a psychological ploy.

"The best thing I can say is we didn't beat ourselves," said White, discounting the weather or the apparel. "I honestly feel the Eagles deserved to win."

"When you get that close (to the Super Bowl), so close you can almost taste it, it's very, very disheartening," said White, whose role as Roger Staubach's successor was one of several Cowboy question marks in what was billed as a rebuilding year. Instead, White led the Cowboys to a 12-4 regular season record and playoff victories over Los Angeles and Atlanta.

"I like to think we have the capabilities of going all the way, but we didn't do it on the right day," said linebacker Bob Breunig in a somber Cowboy dressing room. "We had a good surge at the end of the year... coming all the way from training camp when we supposedly didn't have anything going for us."

Eagle running back Wilbert Montgomery rushed for 194 yards, the first time in 29 playoff games that any back has gained over 100 yards against the Cowboys, and fullback Leroy Harris banged for 60 as Dallas went home from their 10th NFC championship short of their goal of making the Super Bowl for a sixth time.

"It's just a question of him (Montgomery) being a great running back and us being able to make the play, swarm as a defense," said Breunig.

"The big plays against us have plagued us all year," said Coach Tom Landry. "The defense fought well inside our own 20, but we killed ourselves with turnovers and field position."

Linebacker Frank LeMaster can't wait.

"My ring finger's itchy," said LeMaster. "I want that big rock."

He and the rest of the Eagles get their shot at it Jan. 25 in New Orleans.

Snapped Back

Fouts: We'll Be Back

SAN DIEGO (AP) — They've been ambushed by an underdog two years in a row in the National Football League playoffs, but the San Diego Chargers remain convinced their time is coming.

"We'll be back. I guarantee it," vowed quarterback Dan Fouts after a 34-27 loss to the Oakland Raiders in Sunday's American Football Conference title game.

The same pledge was echoed by Fouts' teammates after the wild-card Raiders earned their third Super Bowl berth and canceled San Diego's reservations.

"Next year we'll take it all the way," said Kellen Winslow, the second-year tight end who led the NFL in receptions.

"We showed our character," said running back Mike Thomas. "We're over the hump." "This club's future is straight up," said free safety Glen Edwards.

Rallying from a 28-7 second quarter deficit, the Chargers roared back to close the margin to 28-24 midway through the third quarter.

But Oakland regained its composure, padded its lead with Chris Bahr field goals of 27 and 33 yards, then snuffed San Diego's comeback hopes by controlling the ball for the last eight minutes of the game.

"I'm proud of this team, coming back like we did," said Fouts, who completed 22 of 45 passes for 336 yards.

For a while, it looked like the Chargers wouldn't recover from the Raiders' fast start. A bizarre 65-yard touchdown on the third play of the game ignited the 28-point first-half eruption. Raiders tight end Raymond Chester caught the ball after it skipped off the hands of running back Kenny King.

"They got going with a lucky play and couldn't stop them when we had to," said Willie Buchanan, San Diego's veteran cornerback.

"That play gave them an awfully easy seven points. It was a shock," said Chargers head Coach Don Coryell.

Once Oakland assumed the big lead, San Diego was forced to abandon its game plan and play catchup.

Two San Diego drives inside Oakland's 20-yard line ended in first-half interceptions and a Thomas fumble at the Chargers' 28 set up one Oakland score.

Chemistry Decides NFC Title

Eagle Emotion Drowns Cowboy Schemes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fire melts ice. Rocks can destroy the most sophisticated computer. Emotion, when it reaches a swell, can drown the loftiest schemes and executions of man.

So it was that chemistry decided the National Football League's NFC championship here Sunday and sent the Philadelphia Eagles into their first Super Bowl.

The white and green clad Eagles were so inflated with burning desire that if you stuck them with a pin they could have exploded into smithereens. Or, loosed from their moorings, they were bound to soar off to the moon.

They took the celestial trip. They beat the over-confident Dallas Cowboys 20-7. The score does not accurately connote the fullness of the rout of the proud Cowboys, looking toward their sixth Super Bowl appearance and possibly their third title.

The result almost became obvious when the two teams came onto the field — the Eagles leaping and yelling as if ready to jump out of their skin, the Cowboys reserved and businesslike, similar to executives waiting for the 8:05 into the city.

The difference in the two teams was reflected also in a study of the rival coaches, striding in front of their benches, sheaths of paper in their hands and in electronic contact with operatives spying from high stadium perches.

There was Tom Landry, who might change his name to Tom Legend, completing his 21st year as head coach of the Dallas franchise, austere, implacable, bundled in a fur-collared brown coat and fur hat with muffs over his ears as protection against the near-zero weather.

Hardly anyone has ever seen Landry on the sidelines without a jacket and tie. He goes formal. They've never seen him throw a fit of anger or bark angrily at one of his players. He is lean, graying stick of ice.

Across the field was his coaching rival, Dick Vermeil, bare-headed, wearing a short green jacket and white shoes, fresh and boyish looking for 45 years. Pulled out of college coaching ranks (UCLA) to take over the floundering Philadelphia team five years ago, he hasn't let the systemized pros dull his rah-rah, go-get-'em spirit.

So he moves up and down the sidelines, giving orders, yelling encouragement and sometimes leading cheers.

When it was over, Vermeil cried.

"He used to cry a lot," said Keith Kreple, a 6-foot-3, 230-pound tight end, "but he's getting more control on his emotions."

Down the hall, in the somber Dallas dressing room, Landry stood erect and kept a stiff upper lip. His reaction never changes whether he wins or loses — and he wins more than he loses. With 185 victories, he trails only George Halas and Curly Lambeau in NFL victories.

"They simply beat us," Landry said in a low voice, not flicking an eyelash. Back to the blackboard.

Vermeil couldn't do much flicking because his eyelashes were wet. His voice cracked when he explained the Eagles' victory.

"I told the boys that each one on the team had won a team ball at one time or another," he said. "I told them that against Dallas every man had to play as if he wanted to win the team ball."

"They did. We weren't perfect, but as units — the offensive line, the defense, the offense, the specialty teams — they played to their optimum."

Then he added: "We are an emotional team. Sometimes we get uptight and make mistakes."

There was glory enough for all. Wilbert Montgomery, the 195-pound berserk bowling ball from Abilene Christian, slashed and wiggled to 194 yards. Fullback Leroy Harris shed would-be Cowboy tacklers as if they were rose petals in bulling 60 yards on 10 carries. Quarterback Ron Jaworski completed only enough passes, 9 of 29, to keep Dallas honest but handled the ball like Houdini.

Meanwhile, Eagles defenders, principally 260-pound Carl Hairston and 280-pound Dennis Harrison, took up residence in the Dallas backfield, harassed Danny White and limited the great Tony Dorsett to 41 yards.

"We were intent on whipping Dallas," said Montgomery. "They looked down on us, thought we were nothing."

Reporters surrounded Hairston's locker.

"Excuse me, fellows," he said. "I will catch you later. I still see Danny White. I got to get away a few minutes."

As for the Cowboys, what was interpreted as tremendous calm and cool was nothing more than lack of fire and spirit on a chilly afternoon in Philadelphia.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A2 ♥Q987542 ♦7 ♣953
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Possession of a seven-card major is not, in itself, a license to bid at any level. Had North shown a minor suit in response to your one no trump, you would have introduced your suit at the two-level. Now that North has shown, at minimum, a six-card suit, we suggest you pass while you are still at a safe level. You have respectable support for partner's suit, but he might be void in your suit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♥J4 ♦AJ10872 ♣KQ98
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 4 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's rebid of four hearts is not a "drop dead" bid. With that sort of hand, he would have simply responded four hearts over your one diamond opening. Partner's actual sequence hints at slam, and you have a most suitable holding. You have first- or second-round control in all side suits, a ruffing value and decent trump support. Rather than tip off your holding by cue-bidding, we suggest a bold leap to six hearts. There are no guarantees, but it's difficult to imagine a hand partner might have that will not offer a play for slam. Checking for aces en route is also acceptable.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q84 ♥K103 ♠AQ65 ♣AQ8
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—We know that some scientists will come up with a convoluted method for describing this hand precisely. However, there is a much simpler bid available—three no trump. It says you have a hand with 4-3-3-3 pattern and 16-18 points. When a bid describes your hand so exactly, why not use it? Partner will know you have three-card spade support, and can judge whether to move or not.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10762 ♥AK964 ♦K7 ♣J3
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—Without the bid to your right, you would have opened the bidding with one heart. However, that does not give you the right now to overcall with two hearts. At that level you have no margin of safety because your suit isn't strong enough. Pass and await developments; you may be able to back into the auction later.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ1065 ♥AJ83 ♦AK92
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
3 ♣ 4 ♣ 6 ♣ 6 ♥

What action do you take?
A.—The enemy preemption has succeeded in turning this hand into a guessing game. Obviously, you have chances for a grand slam, but it's just as possible that you might have an unavoidable loser somewhere. Rather than choose yourself, pass and leave the decision to partner. The pass is forcing and tells your partner you are prepared to play a grand slam if he so desires. Therefore, it carries the implication that you do not have a club loser.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠93 ♥954 ♦K762 ♣A852

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?

A.—With only two face cards and no five-card suit, we doubt that your combined holding will stretch to nine tricks even if partner has a maximum 18 points. Therefore, there is no point in endangering the contract. Pass, and be content with a valuable partscore.

Timber Report Available

The Pitt County Extension Office is now receiving "Timber-Mart South," a new report that contains timber prices in North Carolina and a summary of prices in the other southern states.

The North Carolina prices are given by regions: mountain, piedmont and coastal. Pitt County is in the coastal region.

The report is copyrighted and cannot be reproduced for further distribution but a copy of each report will be available in the Pitt County Agricultural Extension office to anyone wishing to see it.

According to Leon Harkins, extension forester, "Timber-Mart South" is a monthly report of standing timber stumpage and delivered product prices.

Persons who are not able to visit the extension office may receive the report by dialing the toll-free extension teletip number 1-800-662-7301. To receive the Pitt County information, ask for the coastal report.

The following teletip number should also be helpful to anyone selling timber: 2629 — obtaining assistance from consultant foresters; 2631 — cost-share forestry assistance; 2642 — measuring timber; 2644 — selling timber

KIROV'S ARMAMENTS — This view of the deck of the Soviet Navy's battle cruiser Kirov was made from a tiny Lynx helicopter flying from the Royal Navy destroyer HMS Newcastle in the Baltic Sea recently, and issued by the Ministry of Defence in London. Among the armaments and equipment on show are multi-barrelled gatling-type air defence weapons, on left and right of the deck; hatches concealing 20 surface-to-surface missiles, centre; hatches for 12 vertical launch air defence missiles, right; and a railway system (at right and left of deck), for ferrying armaments to weapons launchers. The Kirov is the biggest warship built by any country — excepting aircraft carriers — in the past 30 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Store Opening Ban Defied By Throngs

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — More than 60,000 shoppers thronged streets as merchants in the Gastown area of Vancouver opened stores and slashed prices to protest a new ban on most Sunday store openings.

Prices were cut 25 percent at boutiques, restaurants and speciality shops in the redeveloped area to represent the 25 percent drop in sales which merchants say will result from Sunday closures.

The Gastown Merchants Association had hoped between 30,000 and 40,000 supporters would pour into the area for the widely advertised sale.

British Columbia's Holiday Shopping Act, which went into effect last Sunday, prohibits Sunday openings unless residents of a municipality approve it in a referendum. The exceptions include small grocery stores, plant nurseries and drugstores.

Sunday closures used to be determined on a municipal level, and the law was an attempt to gain some uniformity.

Several thousand people signed a 65-foot Gastown protest scroll which the association plans to wrap around Social Credit party headquarters.

"We just can't believe the citizens of Vancouver," said Peter Erwin, president of the association. "They've come down and it's just incredible support."

Police were patrolling both Gastown and nearby Chinatown, noting which stores were open.

Inheated Apartment Dwellers Coping With Cold

COLLISION — Two paratroopers from the 19th Special Forces Service Company, Utah National Guard, try to avoid a mid-air collision after jumping from a C-130 at a height of 1,250 feet over Park City West during Sunday's practice jumps. Warrant Officer Rodney Fakstov released some equipment on a 24-foot line which fell across the chute opened by Capt. Dan Vaughn, lower left, when they became entangled and fell 20 feet. Both paratroopers were reported in satisfactory condition in Veterans Hospital in Salt Lake City. (AP Laserphoto)

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dorothy Wright's children put a pot on the kitchen table in her Brooklyn apartment, filled it with paper and set a match to it — just to keep warm. They haven't had heat since winter began.

"We were wearing four pairs of pants, two sweaters, lying under eight quilts and we still were cold," Ms. Wright recalled Sunday as she sat in a New York City shelter where more than 270 people have sought refuge from dwellings without heat, gas or water.

The Northeast's cold snap has taken a human toll in New York City. Hundreds of thousands of the city's poor live in dilapidated apartments where bone-chilling winds whip through broken windows, rusty boilers provide little, if any, heat and gas leaks are a way of life.

In Ms. Wright's apartment, water has been frozen in the toilet since December, the gas was shut off after someone stole a gas pipe and her cat froze to death one recent night. Sunday's high was 19 and no relief from the biting, bitter cold was on the way today.

"We spent some of our savings on a hotel, just to get to someplace warm," said Ms. Wright, 30, who draws $83 a month in state aid to feed and clothe her two sons, ages 8 and 11. "Now we're here. I pray the city relocates us. But I pray so much I'm tired. I'm beginning to think he doesn't even hear anymore."

New York's Human Resources Administration and the Red Cross have opened a shelter at a red-brick National Guard armory on upper Fifth Avenue, overlooking the windswept Harlem River — far from the avenue's fashionable shops.

Transients joined families on welfare and a few homeowners in the moist warmth of the cavernous brick building.

For every person in the shelter, there are a hundred who refuse to leave their apartments, fearing burglars will take what little they have. The fortunate ones — those with gas service — are using their ovens and stoves for warmth, despite the dangers of fire and asphyxiation. They'll worry later about the gas bills they can't afford to pay.

Several people have died as a result of the cold since bitter temperatures arrived Christmas Day. City officials say nearly 400,000 residents have complained of heatless buildings, and one landlord was arrested last week after a housing court judge had tried for a month to get him to supply heat to his six-story apartment building.

The city also has spent $5 million repairing boilers, delivering fuel and setting up shelters.

In the Harlem armory, refugees from the cold relaxed on flimsy cots covered with green government-issue blankets, eating chicken sandwiches and hot vegetable soup and thankful they wouldn't have to spend another night sleeping in their coats under piles of blankets.

"We would boil water, open the oven door for warmth, and then wash up in the kitchen sink," said Mildred Harris, 24, who with her 6-year-old son moved into the shelter on Tuesday.

The boiling water created a sheet of ice on the windows and "when everybody in the building would put on their ovens, you could hear the plaster cracking," Ms. Harris said.

"We couldn't afford to pay our gas bill, so (the utility) cut off our electricity," she added. "They can't cut off your gas."

But her son was having trouble breathing and had to be taken to a hospital. That's when she decided to seek help.

Jose and Nancy Mojica decided to move out of their fourth-floor apartment in The Bronx when "it got colder inside than outside," said Mojica.

Mojica, 19, quit his job as a cashier two weeks ago to take care of his wife and 2-year-old son. When his son developed a high fever and bronchitis, he sent them to a relative's house and camped out in the apartment himself.

"We'd already been burglarized once. I had to watch our things," he said.

Learned To Escape Jail During Life Of Crime

CRESWELL, N.C. (AP) — Mild-mannered and pudgy at 48, Johnnie A. Myers says his life as a criminal has taught him one thing: how to escape from jail.

"Escape is the simplest thing in the world for me. It's just like ... eating, it's that simple. I've just got a knack for all this stuff. I stay until I want to leave," he said in a recent interview in the Washington County prison unit.

That's the same Washington County prison unit that Myers escaped from in 1973 and, 45 days later, broke back in, stole a gun and escaped again without being detected.

"I needed a gun," he explained later.

Myers, a native of Greenville, acknowledges that he is a professional criminal. But although he has been sentenced to a total of 250 years in prison, he has spent just 20 years behind bars.

An example, he used the gun stolen from the prison camp in two bank robberies in Edenton and Hertford. He was caught on the second robbery and was sentenced to 45 years in federal prison, but was paroled after serving less than seven years.

For now, he is serving time for a 1973 breaking and entering conviction in Wake County and also is awaiting trial for breaking into the prison, that same year.

Myers, who says he has escaped from jails or prisons at least a dozen times, has spent most of his life trying to outfox the law. He looks upon his relationship with law enforcement officers as friendly and competitive.

"I get along with them, they get along with me. I try to slick them, they try to slick me," he said.

"He's just a con artist," said Perquimans County Sheriff Julian H. Broughton. "He's got the hang of it. He's always been cordial when you get him. He's never tried to hurt anybody. He dresses high class when he's out."

"He's a little different from most criminals," according to J. Wallace Perry, chief deputy in Bertie County. "He doesn't like for you to tell him he's done sloppy work in a break-in."

Myers moved to Hertford as a child. But at age 13, he was convicted of breaking and entering and was sent to a training school. He said that catapulted him into a life of crime.

"That's when I sure enough got started," he said. "You learn things there you won't ever learn nowhere else."

"If they'd took me out of there after two or three weeks, they'd never had trouble from me," he said.
