N.C. Assembly Expects A Long Session

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Members of the 1981 General Assembly, with Republicans still a minority but at their greatest strength in years, convenes today for a session that most expect will last until early summer.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was to gavel the Senate to order at noon, while across the hall in the House legislators were to meet and officially elect Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Marshall, as their speaker.

With their eye toward a tough session that must grapple not only with the perennial budget problems but also a possible gasoline tax increase and the decade-beginning chore of reapportionment, the first day may be the easiest.

"It's just a ceremony. I want to get it over with as quickly as we can," Ramsey said Tuesday as pages set up extra chairs on the House floor to accommodate the influx of family members arriving to see their legislators assume the duties of office.

The election of Ramsey, who was nominated by the majority House Democrats last month, was a foregone conclusion. Also certain was the confirmation of his choice for speaker pro tem, Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Spring Hope.

While Republicans are at their greatest strength in years, they are still far outnumbered in this session. There are 24 Republicans in the 120-member House, up from 15 two years ago, and 10 in the 50-member Senate, up from five in 1979.

In both the House and Senate, members were expected to re-elect their staff officers — principal and reading clerks and sergeants-at-arms.

Green was out sick Tuesday while Senate staffers prepared the chamber, but he wasn't expected to miss the opening of his third session as presiding officer of the Senate.

One bit of business will have to be conducted Wednesday and Thursday — passage of a resolution inviting Gov. Jim Hunt to a joint session Thursday night. Hunt is planning to deliver his State of the State address at 7:30 p.m.

In both chambers, the new session is expected to bring changes in influential committee leaders. Sources close to Ramsey confirmed that he would appoint Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Kannapolis, in his 16th term, to be the new chairman of the Finance Committee.

In the Senate, Green was reported ready to replace his Finance chairman since 1977, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia, who backed Green's opponent in the Democratic primary, with Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Stoneville, a highway contractor.

The Finance committees will be the ones handling any proposals for generating new highway revenues — including higher gasoline taxes — that are expected to take up much of the coming session.

Ramsey said he would also name his Appropriations committees Wednesday. Ramsey said he plans two appropriations panels, one on the base budget and one on expanded state spending, but made up of the same members. Under each will be five subcommittees.

"That way the left hand will know what the right hand is doing," he said. "You can't have two committees going over the budget at the same time, one cutting and one adding."

Chrysler At Crossroads Meet Today

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With its survival hanging in the balance, Chrysler Corp. is caught between union complaints that the company wants too much from its workers and government hints that the firm should squeeze even more wage concessions from them.

Company officials bargained with top United Auto Workers leaders through the night in hopes of narrowing the gap enough to entice the government to guarantee an additional $400 million in loans to keep the battered automaker going at least a little longer.

At midmorning, UAW spokesman Don Stillman announced, "We made progress on a number of key issues, but a number of questions remain unresolved, both economic and non-economic."

"We are optimistic we can develop the needed momentum to present something to the loan guarantee board this afternoon."

The government's response — perhaps the final thumbs up or thumbs down signal for Chrysler — was expected later today at a meeting of the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board.

Nobody in authority is saying what happens if Chrysler, which received $800 million last year, is turned down for the additional loan guarantee.

But most analysts expect the result would be a quick trip into federal court to seek protection from creditors under the federal bankruptcy law.

"Secretary Miller was very frank and honest that they will make a decision (today)," Fraser said Tuesday after Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, chairman of the loan board, warned both sides that "unless we have the basic principle of a total plan, time is going to run out."

Part of the "total plan" Miller referred to involves the company's proposal for $673 million in wage concessions by Chrysler workers between now and September 1982.

"I don't know if we can hit the $673 million, if that's an accurate figure, but we'll come as close as we can," Fraser said. "If it doesn't meet their expectations, I suspect they will not vote to recommend the $400 million."

Fraser asked for the joint meeting with Miller — which took place in the Treasury's old Cash Room — after bargaining stalled, the union said.

Board members, according to Miller, believe Chrysler's survival plan needs an "additional financial cushion" that "does not have to come from collective bargaining." He did not elaborate.

At the same time, Miller strongly hinted that the union's 64,000 active UAW members in the United States and Canada were not being asked to yield enough.

"I explained to them my feeling the board needs to see adequate concessions," he said. "These concessions proposed in the labor area by the company seem to be the minimal necessary to accomplish the task, and that is one issue that the company and union need to address."

DRIVEWAY CHANGED

I have noticed that the city is changing the entrance to the main post office from Greene Street to an entrance and exit on Second Street. This will make it much easier to get in and out of the parking lot. Why did they finally decide to do this? M.S.

According to City Engineer Ron Sewell, the city wanted to change the driveway ever since the post office was built 15 or so years ago. They have submitted several plans to the Post Office Department in Atlanta, but none of them were accepted until six months ago. "The entrance on Greene Street was in conflict with the left turn on the street running from the north," said Sewell. "We closed the entrance on Greene Street and put an entrance and exit about midway the block on Second Street." The exit on Pitt Street will remain. Parking in the lot will be perpendicular. "This should have been about a week's job for us," added Sewell, "but the cold weather has kept us from pouring the concrete. We hope to have it completed as soon as the weather breaks."

GIVEN TWO

The Greenville Senior Citizens' Center, which appealed through Hotline last week for a tv set, has been given two — one for the game room and one for the tv room. The donors are F. D. Duncan of Greenville and Mrs. C. L. Westbrook of Ayden. Mrs. Julia Moore said.

Iran's Parliament Inches Toward Hostage Release

By The Associated Press

Iran's Parliament approved today one emergency bill aimed at clearing the way for release of the 52 American hostages and Iran's chief negotiator said, "We are going to release the hostages in the coming two or three days or try them."

But Parliament adjourned until Sunday without acting on another measure proposed by the Iranian government, which indicated it was seeking to meet a Friday deadline set by the Carter administration for reaching an agreement before President Carter leaves office.

Behzad Nabavi, Iran's chief negotiator in the 14-month hostage crisis, mentioned decisive action on the hostages in two or three days in what was seen by observers as an effort to push Parliament into action on both emergency measures.

Later in the morning, a spokesman for the Majlis (Parliament) told The Associated Press in Beirut by telephone that the government "will decide on the future of the American hostages" Thursday or Friday. He refused to amplify his remark.

Meanwhile, Swiss authorities issued an attachment order on a villa in St. Moritz owned by the family of the late Shah of Iran. The order apparently was taken at the initiative of Iran's lawyers in Switzerland, but it was not known if the action was directly connected with negotiations to free the hostages.

Tehran Radio reported in a commentary on the situation that in the waning days of his administration, Carter was "forced to deposit 70 percent of Iranian assets in U.S. banks with the Algerian national bank." The report did not elaborate and it was not clear if the commentator was outlining terms for an agreement or part of an effort to prepare Iranian public opinion for an accord.

The Majlis approved a bill authorizing appointment of a third government to act as arbitrator to settle financial and legal claims between the United States and Iran. But despite Nabavi's prodding, it shelved until Sunday — after the Carter administration's deadline for an agreement — the other bill to nationalize the wealth of the late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and his relatives.

Nabavi told the deputies their failure to act on the second bill would delay the return of the Shah's fortune to Iran. It was not known, however, whether approval of the legislation was necessary before an agreement with the United States could be reached.

It is assumed that Algeria, which is acting as intermediary in the negotiations between the two countries, would be chosen to arbitrate their rival claims.

Debate on the bills was postponed Tuesday because there were not enough members present from the 12-man Council of Guardians, which must give its assent to all legislation. A parliamentary source said there was no significance to this, that they had not been informed in time of the session.

Utilities Set Meeting On New Electric Rates

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission last night scheduled a meeting for January 27 to set new electric rates to track an increase in the wholesale cost of power by Virginia Electric and Power Co. scheduled to take effect today.

The new GUC rates, to become effective February 1, should mean an increase of about $3.50 per 1,000 kilowatt-hours, utilities director Charles Horne theorized, although the exact increase has not been established.

In other business last night, the commission adopted a resolution accepting the 201 facilities plan — required in order to receive federal grant assistance for construction of a new wastewater treatment plant — and were told that the plan should receive state and federal approval so design of the proposed facility can begin in May.

The commission also voted to declare a 30,000 gallon propane gas storage tank on Railroad Street near the 14th Street intersection, two compressors at the site, and some 250 propane bottles as surplus, to be sold.

Also approved at the meeting was an application for exemption from certain federal Public Utility Policies Act reporting requirements. The application for exemption noted that, "a severe unproductive cost burden" would be placed on the commission and the utilities' rate-payers if the reporting requirements were to be met.

A number of bids were awarded by the commission last night. They included the purchase of: 55 115KV insulators from Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $14,205, 800 suspension insulators from Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for $8,280, one 115KV switching tower from Mill Power Supply Co. for $26,504, a mobile testing trailer from James G. Biddle Co. for $7,890, a line truck from USI for $62,300, 665 wood distribution poles from Escambia Treating Co. for $66,044, 100 25KVA transformers from Hesco, Inc. for $46,300, 100 15KVA transformers from Hesco, Inc. for $38,700, 20 75KVA transformers from Hesco, Inc. for $21,760, six 150KVA transformers from Hesco, Inc. for $16,836, and three 500KVA transformers from Hesco, Inc. for $17,082.

Miss Snyder, Mr. King Speak Vows Saturday

Our Redeemer Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Kathleen Ellen Snyder and George Leslie King Saturday. The double ring ceremony was performed by Graham Nahouse.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Alberta Snyder of Newport News, Va. and Dr. Richard Snyder of Poquoson, Va. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Carolyn D. King of Greenville and the late Mr. Cecil P. King.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her honor attendant was Helen Krauss of Greenville.

The best man was Richard Heines of Ayden and ushers included Scott Snyder of Norfolk, Va. and William Snyder of Poquoson, Va.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory lustreglo silesta designed with a high neckline with a stand-up collar of schiffli embroidered lace. The empire bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke outlined in the embroidered lace from which fell a capelet edged in matching lace that extended to fingertip length in back. The sunburst accordin pleated skirt extended to an attached chapel length train in back.

She wore an imported braid bridal hat overlaid in schiffli embroidered lace beaded with pearls accented by a side turned-up brim with satin bows trimmed with beaded lace and centered with a silk ivory rose from which fell streamers of satin ribbon with a rosebud. The back of the hat featured a pouf veil with streamers also centered with a rosebud. She carried a bouquet of roses and carnations.

The honor attendant was dressed in a blue dress with a short jacket and carried a bouquet of pink and red flowers.

The couple will live in Ayden after a wedding trip to Nashville, Tenn.

The bridal couple work at Procter and Gamble.

A reception was held at the Ramada Inn after the wedding ceremony.

Consumer Strategies For 1981

On New Year's day, too many consumers found themselves in a more difficult financial situation than ever before — with increased debt and greater bills. I hope you aren't one of these, but take a minute and mentally size up your situation. If you have one or more of these symptoms, you are heading for financial trouble or even disaster:

- You have more bills than can be paid each month
- More than 15% of your monthly take-home pay goes to pay debts (excluding the home mortgage)
- You are not saving regularly for emergencies and future wants or needs
- Your cushion for emergencies is less than 6 months take-home pay

Bride-Elect Entertained

Miss Cynthia Yvonne Craft of Ayden, bride-elect of Steven Chad Asby of Henderson, was entertained Friday night at a miscellaneous bridal shower held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Whitfield of Greenville, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom-elect.

The serving table was centered with lighted tapers. Mrs. Helen McRoy of Washington, aunt of the bridegroom-elect, poured punch.

Mrs. Carolyn Williams, mother of the honoree, and Miss Sherry Williams, sister of the bride-elect, were special guests.

The couple will be married Saturday.

Dear Abby

Show Son How To Disinfect Mouthpiece

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 10-year-old son, Jimmy, is taking clarinet lessons in grade school. He told me that his music teacher, whom he likes very much, will very often take his (Jimmy's) clarinet and put it into his own mouth to teach him how to play something, then hand the clarinet back to Jimmy to use. Abby, keep in mind that the mouthpiece and reed go from Jimmy's mouth to his teacher's, then back to Jimmy's.

I'm not excessively fussy about germs, but let's face it, a simple swipe across the shirt sleeve before and after using another's mouthpiece is not very sanitary.

Jimmy will have this teacher another three years, so I don't want to spoil their good relationship, but I would like to put an end to this unsanitary practice if possible. Can you help?

JIMMY'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Show Jimmy how to disinfect the mouthpiece of his clarinet by wiping it thoroughly with a tissue that's been saturated with an appropriate germicide. Give him some to use at school with instructions to always disinfect his mouthpiece after his teacher has used it.

And in the interest of diplomacy, have Jimmy tell his teacher, "This is my mother's idea. She says, 'With so many colds and so much flu going around, it's best to take no chances.'"

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl who is wearing a NO button to let guys know that I'm a virgin and intend to stay that way. It's a sure way to cool down horny boyfriends who keep pressuring a girl to give in even after she has said, "NO!"

These NO buttons are put out by the Pro-Life Commission in Denver, and they're really catching on. I've even seen guys wearing them. They admit that they aren't ready for sex and don't want to be pressured by girls.

I hope you think enough of this idea to pass it on to your readers.

PAMELA B.

DEAR PAMELA: I'm for anything that keeps kids from becoming sexually active before they're sufficiently mature to handle it. The button could serve another purpose. If the aggressors refuse to take NO for an answer, remove the pin and stick 'em with it. They'll get the point.

P&G Contribution To Arts Council Announced

New Chairman Will Preside

The Greenville plant of the Procter & Gamble Paper Products Division has pledged a three year, $3,000 contribution to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Robert S. Griffin, manager of the Procter & Gamble Greenville facility, on Tuesday presented a check for $1,000 as the first of three annual installments of the $3,000 gift money recently approved by the Procter & Gamble Fund, the public contributions program of the corporation.

Griffin presented the check to Ed Glenn, president of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, a community based action group that serves as an umbrella to coordinate plans and programs across the entire spectrum of arts in the Pitt County, Greenville area. The Arts Council is dedicated to the concept of providing multiple avenues of artistic expression both to individuals and groups.

In presenting the first of three annual $1,000 gifts, Griffin said that in addition to the immediate assistance the money will provide for the council, he hopes "the contribution will help generate interest on the part of

Glenn noted "This is the first major contribution received by the Council, and we are most grateful to Procter & Gamble for their interest and support."

Procter & Gamble has consistently supported community activities. The corporation annually donates a substantial contribution to United Way, and has given generous support to the Pitt-Greenville Boys' Club. It was also instrumental in support to the ECU Med School drive.

Homemakers...

1. Do a thorough check-up of yourself (and your family) from the neck up. Eliminate negative thinking. Be sure attitudes are positive, that you have a will to improve your financial situation and that you are sincerely willing to do what is necessary to succeed. This is the first and most basic strategy.

2. Obtain family cooperation and commitment to improve your financial situation. Success requires everyone concerned to agree and work together on the problem. Do not try too much change at once. Select the most promising technique or strategy for your family, master it and make it a regular practice in managing your finances. Then select another one to work on, etc.

3. Reduce the need for cash income. Simplify your life. Get rid of excess wants and goods — cut out waste and trim fat. Learn to live and be happy on fewer goods, dual purpose goods, and more goods of lower quality, style, or prestige value.

4. Learn to coax more purchasing power out of your money. Learn to work smarter at using money, not harder at earning it. Choose goods wisely, based on what is really important to you, cut waste, and shop around for best buys (especially when no or little additional expense is incurred for comparison shopping). Plan ahead and save for items needed and then buy them when there is a price advantage. Buy needs first and then consider whether to buy wants, substitute something else or delay the purchase permanently. Learn and practice balancing income with spending and savings. Aim toward saving an amount equal to 6 months take-home pay for an emergency cushion (illness, unemployment, etc.). Save over this amount to provide for future goals.

5. Become do-it-yourselfers. Make the good or perform the service when it is economically profitable instead of purchasing it in the marketplace.

6. Create your own income producing jobs. Take advantage of your productive power and the earning potential in your community. But remember, don't price yourself out of possible jobs.

7. Put more family members to work — if a profit can be realized. Compare both the extra costs of another member working and the extra financial rewards that would result.

8. Create your own income producing jobs. Take advantage of your productive power and the earning potential in your community. But remember, don't price yourself out of possible jobs.

Bloodmobile Visits Successful

The Bloodmobile conducted successful visits this week at Pitt Community College and Eaton Corp., collecting some 266 pints of blood, according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said that Monday's visit at Pitt Community College resulted in the donation of 166 pints of blood by faculty, students and some members of the general public. A total of 27 potential donors were deferred for various health reasons.

"We had a real good turnout in spite of all the cold weather," she said, adding that credit for the successful drive should go to Betty Roberson, admission counselor, who coordinated the visit, and also the PCC Student Government Association, Gamma Beta Phi honor society and the college's Student Nurses Association for sponsorship.

Tuesday's visit at Eaton saw 100 pints of blood collected and four persons deferred, the Red Cross spokesman said.

She noted that blood program officials were "real pleased" with the results of the plant drive.

Mrs. Taylor offered her thanks to Melvin McLawhorn, personnel assistant at Eaton, for his coordination of the plant visit. She also thanked the volunteer nurses and the women of the Greenville Service League for their work at both blood drives.

Warming Trend Underway

A warming trend began today as temperatures crept up to 31 degrees Fahrenheit by 8 a.m., just three degrees short of the 34-degree high on Tuesday. High temperatures in the 50's are projected for Thursday.

According to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, the low for Tuesday was 6 degrees F. The high slipped above freezing to 34 degrees. The level of the Tar River was 2.9 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

"We had no weather related problems last night," reported Assistant Utilities Director Malcolm Green. "We are repairing the area in Lyndale we thought might be damaged from Monday night's outages and should be through with that by noon today."

Green reported that the loads experienced Wednesday morning were drastically lower than previous colder mornings. "We did not have any extreme peaks because it was much warmer during the time we've been hitting the peaks."

Energy Efficiency Helps

Do you think insulating your home is too expensive? The N. C. Association of CPAs says you can hardly afford not to. Making your home more energy efficient "is an investment with one of the highest returns imaginable," the association says. "In fact, considering the savings in fuel, tax credits and appreciation on the value of your house, you may realize a 300 percent profit."

It is noted that attic insulation can reduce heating and cooling bills from 30 to 50 percent. Insulating and caulking other areas can bring still further reductions. There is an energy tax credit for such work and much of the cost can also be added to the value of your house when it is sold.

Solar water heating systems are also available which take advantage of the sun's heat.

"No matter which energy conservation methods you choose, you almost can't afford not to improve your home's energy efficiency," the association says.

There are obviously direct benefits to increasing energy efficiency to the home owner. We can also remember that such improvements are helpful to the nation in that they conserve our valuable energy resources.

Electric Bills Higher

Sunday Greenville Utilities officials warned that for many householders electric bills could double the previous month when the bills are sent out this month.

The increased usage was blamed on more family activities during December, and particularly on the cold weather we have had during the period.

It's not a very hopeful outlook for the already strained family budget — and there are still a couple more cold months ahead.

THIS AFTERNOON

It Doesn't Add Up

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It seems difficult at times to make the two situations add up. Gov. Jim Hunt was talking about another year of record growth in new expanded industry for North Carolina, more jobs and more plants being built.

At the same time, the record shows North Carolina continually at or near the bottom in manufacturing wages and in per capita income.

If we're doing so well, how come we're doing so badly?

"Since 1977, almost 123,000 new manufacturing jobs have been announced. That's 43,000 more jobs than the previous four years," the governor explains.

"We are making rapid progress in diversifying the economy...In 1980, more than 25 percent of the new jobs announced will be in the categories of electronics and machinery," Hunt adds.

Both circumstances are critical to the foundation of the state's economy — full employment, and higher wages through diversification and increased technology.

higher wages, Gov. Hunt makes a significant point: economic development is a long range proposition. There may be from two to four years between the announcement of a major new or expanded industrial plant, and the time it goes on line.

After four years in office, Gov. Hunt says, "We are just now beginning to see more of the impact of earlier announcements." Those four years, he said, have seen 712 new plants built in the state building will stifle growth, or at least slow it considerably. But nobody expects present conditions to remain year after year, so the very long-range nature of economic development works in North Carolina's favor. Previously announced growth is just now coming to fruition; while those who are currently holding back will be anxious to move ahead as soon as conditions allow.

"North Carolina is going to do well in comparison with the rest of the country,"

Too Low
Yet there are those analysts who complain that unemployment remains relatively high — around the eight percent mark, while wages remain too low.

But the raw figures are deceiving. Job analysts say a close look at unemployment shows that much of the joblessness is among young people who are not regular members of the labor force, and that the state is recovering from the pockets of real depression conditions in isolated counties where firms closely linked to homebuilding and automaking (upholstery, furniture, auto parts) have suffered problems, and furthermore that the annual winter-time closing down of plants related to agriculture invariably produces a spurt in unemployment.

As for both new jobs and at a total investment of more than $8.1 billion.

The record shows that diversification is taking place. Textiles once led the field in growth, and along with furniture and tobacco literally dominated the state's economy.

In 1980, more than 25 percent of new jobs were in electronics and machinery, and for four years, investments by new companies exceeded that for existing industry in the state.

New Direction
Combined, machinery, electronics, and electrical machinery dominated the past year with investments of more than $600 million, and adding more than 6,000 jobs.

What about the recession? The experts say high interest rates and the cost of land and

Exiled To Think Tanks

WASHINGTON — What makes the United States system of government different from others is that when you're thrown out of high political office, you are not sent to a labor camp or put under house arrest. In this country, you are condemned to a tax-free think tank until your party comes back to power.

When the Republicans went into exile, they were sented to the Hoover Institute at Stanford, the Georgetown Center for Strategic Studies, and the American Enterprise Institute. Now it's the Democrats' turn to do time in Academia.

The other day two Republican transition men in trenchcoats showed up at Carter appointee Doolittle's stitute, or the John F. Kennedy School of Government in Cambridge.

"Do they give you a parking place at Brookings?" Doolittle asked.

"How do we know?" said the other trenchcoat. "We're Republicans. We've never been inside the walls."

Doolittle packed his toothbrush and an autographed picture of Carter in his briefcase. No one in the outer office dared talk to him. He was placed in a car between the two men and driven to Brookings, a forbidding building with an armed guard at the gate.

"Here's another one for you," one of the trenchcoats said to the guard as they dumped Doolittle out of the car.

The guard took him into the warden's office. The warden said, "I've been reading your record, Doolittle. You're a tough nut. You predicted a seven percent inflation rate for 1978, four percent unemployment in 1979, and said the Gross National Product would double in 1980. That makes you a three-time loser. If you don't walk the line here, we'll send you to the Lyndon B. Johnson School in Austin, Tex."

"Not Austin," Doolittle pleaded. "I couldn't do four years in Austin."

"Keep that in mind if you get any smart ideas about breaking out of this think tank."

Then the warden said, "Guard, take this man to his cell."

The guard took Doolittle down a long, dark hallway.

I speak as a "Daily Reflector" reader, and I believe this letter is long overdue. My purpose is to commend those who work behind the scenes to respond to the requests in the Hotline column. This column has aided many people in various ways.

It is obviously well-read and enjoyed because the follow-up summaries always tell of good responses. I've noticed several times, when a complex question was asked, that a lot of research was involved in finding the answer.

For example, a recent letter inquired about hostage bracelets being produced around the Los Angeles, California area. Hotline had to check several places before printing an accurate, detailed account in response to this question. This is but one example of a great service offered to us free of charge. It may truly be said: "Hotline gets things done for you."

The upcoming Reagan administration will have its hands full of problems to attempt to solve. Soaring interest rates and inflation are beginning to take their toll on this nation's faith in government.

The Iranian crisis is giving most Americans the idea that the government is afraid to act on the terrorist styles of foreign countries.

Whatever happens in the upcoming four years, we must have faith in Mr. Reagan's decisions.

I, for one, will be hoping and praying that Mr. Reagan's decisions are all the right ones that will help keep our great nation great.

Strength For Today

CONVERTED, OR CIVILIZED?
What has Christianity done for you? Has it converted you or has it simply civilized you?

There is a difference. A civilized person is not necessarily a religious person. Some of the most worldly, sophisticated people are highly civilized; but they are by no means religious. People are never religious until certain beliefs in divine realities have got under their skins and into their souls and have really started to make a change in their outlook on life, on their moods and aspirations, and on their behavior.

In the Christian religion we are told very definitely that at some point in our experience something has to happen which makes us over, morally and spiritually. No one is a Christian until the beliefs of the Christian gospel have come into his life and created a noticeable and profound difference in everything he thinks, says, does, or desires.

We should all ask ourselves, is our religion real or conventional? — Elisha Douglass

Don Regan's Own Crash

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The Jan. 7 stock market collapse, coming one day after Treasury Secretary-designate Donald T. Regan's Senate confirmation testimony, is a warning bell in the night to be pondered by Ronald Reagan's economic advisers.

Regan told the finance committee that the president-elect's campaign promise of tax cuts effective Jan. 1, 1981, was now inoperative. That reflected the consensus of Regan's economic advisers that individual tax cuts should not be made retroactive to Jan. 1 but delayed until Sept. 1 in hopes of minimizing budget deficits. It was an unwelcome chill to hopes generated since the election.

If the stock market in any rational way reflects the nation's economic outlook, its stunning decline Jan. 7 cannot be attributed to the "sell" order by a Florida tipster named Joe Granville. As a technician, Granville merely reacted to a market influenced by myriad developments — including Regan's testimony. What happened Jan. 7, therefore, was a Don Regan crash, not a Granville crash.

Rep. Jack Kemp, political godfather of the tax-cut movement, quickly intervened with his friend and colleague, budget director-designate David Stockman, to plead for retroactivity. That in itself might not change policy. But the president-elect himself landed in Los Angeles Jan. 8 saying his own preference was for tax cuts as quickly as possible.

Nevertheless, the effective date of the tax cut remains undetermined, destabilizing an economy hungering for stability. The confusion casts doubt on how firmly Regan's economic policy-makers are committed to supply-side economics as a radical prescription for the nation's ills.

Shortly after Christmas, Regan's policy-makers decided to junk the president-elect's promised Jan. 1, 1981, effective date. New York City economic consultant Alan Greenspan, representing the forces of orthodoxy on Regan's economic coordinating group, warned that aggregate borrowing — private and public — looms dangerously high for 1981.

What's more, a 10 percent tax cut retroactive to Jan. 1 but passed in mid-year would entail big taxpayer refunds in 1982, coinciding with the second 10 percent slash under the Kemp-Roth bill. That conjured up this apparition: a $100 billion deficit in 1982, triggering hyper-inflation. Even Stockman, the great hope of the supply-siders, began to feel a delay to Sept. 1, 1981, for the effective date might be necessary.

So easily is the radical initiative of supply-side economics exchanged for the sterile orthodoxy of high taxes which feed inflation but fail to balance the budget. Regan's own advisers have forgotten the purpose of cutting tax rates: to so change the economic climate that the mere discussion of the bill will generate new incentives for both investment and savings long before it is passed into law. If it works, the danger of massive budget deficits would end long before the 1981 tax refunds were allowed in 1982.

Regan's coordinating group also decided that business tax cuts would be retroactive to Jan. 1 for fear of freezing investment plans, but individual cuts would not. That revealed his advisers do not truly embrace the supply-side belief that lowered tax rates exert the same incentive for increased work as they do for increased investment.

Did Don Regan's revelation of delaying the tax cut really break the market? Combined with the gloomy forebodings instead of confident affirmations from Regan's economic team and the oppressive gloom pouring from the Federal Reserve Board, his testimony might well have been the critical factor.

A neophyte unfamiliar with the terrain or the tactics, Regan sounded as though he were making tax cuts hostage to budget cuts. That has been the familiar trap entered by the previous four administrations which have cut neither taxes nor the budget, but instead fomented huge deficits, soaring inflation and economic contraction.

That is why Kemp, who has kept a low profile on tax policy the past four months, immediately pressed hard to avoid an immediate unraveling of Regan economic policy. Stockman is by no means committed to the delayed tax cut. In testimony Jan. 8 that received far less attention than Regan's a day earlier, Stockman presented the supply-side argument that lowered tax rates offer the only opportunity for shrinking the deficit.

Martin Anderson, Regan's domestic policy chief, is no doctrinaire supply-sider but is determined to be what others call "the guardian of the sacred words" — making sure Regan's campaign commitments are followed. "Sacred words" were uttered by Regan on June 25, 1980, when he promised "a tax cut to be effective on Jan. 1, 1981."

Anderson believes that Regan's faithfulness to his promises is essential to convince the markets that this is one president who truly means what he says. Don Regan gave the markets and opposite signal Jan. 7. It remains to be seen whether the firestorm in Wall Street the next day will be heeded by the Regan administration.

Scared Of Tax Form Reforms

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If you suspect the country likes to talk rather than act about financial and other economic inequities, you will again find documentation in the annual discussion of the equitable income tax.

It has its corollary too: the "fair and simple" tax return form, which has been so simplified you sometimes can obtain a half dozen different interpretations, all from people who call themselves experts.

Both the tax and its forms are in the news again, as they are every year at this time. The same proposals, same gripes, same confusions, same inequities, same temptations, same evasions. The same every year.

Publishers rush out with their tax guides, or maybe just put a pretty jacket on the official IRS guide and double the price. Lawyers and accountants work like monks for a few months, but also earn enough to golf or sail in the summer. Taxpayers vow to acquire more deductions next year, but the vows are soft and soon forgotten.

For many, if not most taxpayers, it is an unhappy experience. "Filing taxes used to be the most personal link between the U.S. government and its citizens," says Michael Graetz of the University of Southern California. No more, he says.

"In the past decade inflation and the complexity of the tax laws have sent hordes of taxpayers scurrying to tax-preparation professional in search of deductions and credits," says the professor.

Inflation is one of the biggest complaints, for good reason. First, it lowers the buying power of the dollar. Second, it forces taxpayers into higher brackets, where greater percentages of the paycheck are taken.

Confusion about the meaning of instructions ranks high as a source of dissatisfaction. Doubts about the fairness of regulations accompanies it. A feeling that the rich do not pay their share is commonly held.

The remedy perhaps most often suggested is to simplify the tax so that everyone pays an "equitable" amount, but nobody has ever been able to arrive at a percentage or a system that seems to satisfy everyone.

A big problem with simple solutions is that the income tax is not just for raising revenue, but it is one of the most potent tools for implementing the country's socio-economic goals.

And so, risk-takers get a break because they are considered jobmakers. Those who save may get more deductions than a few years ago because capital is needed. Charity-givers earn deductions because charity is considered beneficial. Those with children obtain deductions because of need, and maybe because children are deemed important national assets.

The strongest attempt at social change comes through the progressive nature of the tax, with the rich supposedly paying more because of a national bent toward bolstering the middle and lower incomes.

Now the progressive nature of the tax has become one of the biggest sources of trouble, because rising incomes are raising the tax burden of wage-earners who already consider themselves taxed too high.

"Inflation has driven many taxpayers to consider cheating," says Graetz. "Middle income citizens try to increase their incomes to keep up with escalating prices. But when they do they enter higher brackets and a bigger tax bite is taken from each additional dollar they earn."

Now, he claims, "According to prevailing sentiment, if you don't have a legal loophole to escape taxes it's now ethically appropriate to engage in outright dishonesty."

Will anything be done about it? Probably not this year or for several more years to come. Government has got used to the money and can't kick the habit. And nobody really knows how to simplify fairly.

Ironically, the complexity of the tax is to a large extent a result of attempts to make it fairer, which suggests that whenever you tamper with the incredible income tax you only make it worse than it was.

That, it seems, is the best defense it has, and poor though it is, it seems sufficient to scare away the reformers, and promise us more of the same promises and gripes next year at this time.

Arrest By 'Firemen'

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) - Police officers who knew that two young robbery suspects were holed up in a hotel figured there was no way to evacuate other guests without alerting the juveniles.

So they went dressed as firemen. They borrowed a city fire truck and six uniforms, pulled the fire alarm and went in yelling "Fire!" police said.

"People came boiling out of their rooms in their skivvies, and I'm sorry about that," Glenwood Springs Police Chief Bob Halbert said. "But we were just trying to prevent anyone from getting hurt."

Halbert said police had been chasing a 12-year-old and a 14-year-old sought in the burglary of a house and the theft of a truck and two pistols. The suspects fled to the Rex Hotel here, police said.

After pulling the alarm, Halbert said, officers "went right up to the second floor and when the two guys bailed out of their room, the 'firemen' arrested them."

and finally unlocked the door to a cubbyhole. All that was in there was a desk, a chair, and small couch filled with straw. On the wall was a blackboard with a piece of chalk.

"Is this it?" Doolittle said. "This is your home, Buster. Now start thinking."

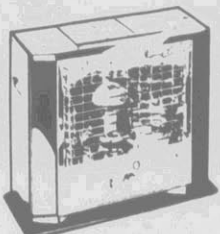

"What about?" "We don't care. You're expected to turn in a progress report once a week on what you're working on, but no one pays attention to it. Lunch is at noon. You're entitled to two visitors a week and you can write one 'Letter to the Editor' a month to the New Republic. Lights out by five o'clock."

The guard slammed the door shut and locked it. Doolittle walked over to the desk and sat down. He started writing on a yellow legal pad: "Human Rights and Their Effect on Killer Bees in Brazil." (c) 1981, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Dr. Maddox Named To PCC Post

President of Pitt Community College Dr. William E. Fulford Jr. announced today the appointment of Dr. Robert L. Maddox Jr. as an administrative assistant to the president's office.

Dr. Maddox will work with Dr. Charles E. Russell, assistant to the president.

Maddox comes to PCC from Washington, D.C., where he served as President Jimmy Carter's assistant for religious affairs. Prior to joining the White House staff 19 months ago, he was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Calhoun, Ga. for eight years. He was also assistant pastor of Druid Hills Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga., for two and one-half years.

The new PCC staff member is a native of Clarkston, Ga., where he attended public schools. He received his B.A. degree from Baylor University; his B.D. degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and his S.T.D. degree from Emory University.

Dr. Maddox will assume his duties at PCC January 15. He is married to writer and author Linda C. Maddox.

Marty Robbins Is Recovering

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Marty Robbins, recovering from a heart attack, may be able to go home by the end of the week, a St. Thomas Hospital spokesman says.

The 55-year-old Grand Ole Opry star was reported in fair condition Tuesday and won't have to undergo surgery, the hospital official said.

Meanwhile, Grand Ole Opry veteran Ernest Tubb was released from another Nashville hospital where he was treated for a mild case of pneumonia.

A Baptist Hospital spokeswoman said Tubb was released Monday. Tubb, 66, entered the hospital a week ago to rest after he had been ill with the flu several days, his agent said.

Haig Says Watergate Wrong, But Disclaims Role

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander M. Haig Jr. says Watergate was a stupid and illegal abuse of power but it is not for him to render moral judgments against Richard Nixon or Henry

Kissinger. "I must leave that to others, to history and to God," Haig told senators Tuesday during confirmation hearings on his nomination to be secretary of state. Haig denied any wrongdoing himself in Watergate and said he has no apology for the role he did play in wiretapping, covert Chilean operations and the Vietnam War bombing of Cambodia and Hanoi.

Haig made the statement after an angry exchange on Watergate during the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings.

The committee called him back for a fifth day of hearings today and scheduled a vote Thursday that almost certainly will clear Haig for confirmation by the full Senate.

Haig's voice rose in anger as Sen. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., questioned him on each of the major Watergate issues and asked if he thought they were morally wrong.

"I never willingly or consciously or unconsciously participated in an act I considered immoral or, above all, illegal," Haig exploded.

"I didn't do it then and I haven't done it in 37 years of military service, service to the country," said the retired four-star Army general and former NATO commander. "And I am somewhat surprised at your persistence on this."

But other senators took up Sarbanes' question of whether Haig thought Watergate was morally wrong and Haig finally replied: "I believe it was both illegal and stupid. I think if President Nixon were here, he would say it was stupid."

Meanwhile, two other Cabinet nominations were to be voted on today by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee: former South Carolina Gov. James B. Edwards as energy secretary and James G. Watt as interior secretary.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee plans to vote Thursday on the nominations of Terrel H. Bell as education secretary and construction executive Raymond Donovan as labor secretary.

In confirmation hearings Tuesday:

—CIA Director-designate William J. Casey said covert operations interfering in the internal affairs of other countries should be undertaken only when "it is in the highest interests of the United States."

—Housing Secretary-designate Samuel Pierce, the only black nominated to Ronald Reagan's Cabinet, said the Department of Housing and Urban Development's budget might be cut by as much as 10 percent. He also said some federal housing subsidies may be eliminated.

—Transportation Secretary-designate Drew Lewis said he would end the national 55-mph speed limit and let states set their own limits.

In the Haig hearing, the secretary of state-designate said he sought as Nixon's chief of staff to "keep the country on an even keel" and prevent any further abuses in the closing days of the Watergate coverup.

Later, Haig prepared and read to the committee a statement saying: "Were there abuses of power during Watergate? Of course there were."

He said the break-in at the Democratic National Committee's Watergate office was one abuse and the Nixon White House effort to cover it up was another.

"But I cannot bring myself to render a judgment on Richard Nixon or, for that matter, Henry Kissinger," Haig said. "It is not for me — it is not in me — to render moral judgments on them."

Haig also said in the statement that the bombing of Cambodia and Hanoi he recommended during the Indochina war were not abuses of power.

He said the Cambodia bombing was justified to destroy sanctuaries used by North Vietnamese troops who were killing American soldiers and the 1972 Hanoi bombing "was essential to concluding the peace negotiations and achieving the return of our prisoners."

Haig said the wiretapping of 17 Nixon aides and reporters, and U.S. covert operations against Marxist Chilean President Salvador Allende were legal at the time, although they would be improper under current regulations.

He asserted he played only a small role in both in 1969, carrying out his orders as an aide to Kissinger, who then was Nixon's national security adviser.

Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged Senate confirmation of Haig, saying "Haig saw his duty and tried to get Nixon to quit before he ruined the country."

But Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said the Senate should not confirm Haig.

"In the absence of their superior's adherence to the law, honorable men either speak up or get out," Weicker said.

Governor Hunt Urges Austerity On Spending

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Calling for more austerity in state spending, Gov. Jim Hunt called on department heads and the university system Tuesday to identify 1,002 jobs that can be abolished this year to trim an estimated $13.02 million from the 1981-82 budget.

Hunt's call for cutbacks presumably will involve a paper transaction as the state now has more than 3,000 listed job positions that are vacant. A freeze on non-critical hiring has been in effect since 1979.

Brent Hackney, the governor's deputy press secretary, said Hunt did not anticipate dismissals. Instead, most of the jobs to be eliminated presumably would be among those all ready vacant.

"He emphasized that," Hackney said, "but that's not what people are being called upon to do. Obviously he does not want want 1,002 people fired. But he also wants the flexibility, that if the position is filled and the department head feels the position is unnecessary, he should have the ability to tell the General Assembly, 'I don't need that position.'"

Hunt called for department heads and the university system to have their recommendations in his office by Feb. 16.

He said the cuts were necessary because the state is in the midst of an economic slowdown and "... state and national economists are not forecasting a strong or immediate upturn in our economy."

In his memo Hunt said, "The overall goal is to increase the value of state services and to decrease the cost without causing loyal and competent employees to be dismissed. Obviously there are areas in which a reduction in the number of positions cannot be implemented without hurting essential services. These services are classified as 'critical.'"

Hunt said the critical jobs are in the areas of health, public safety, and custody and care of persons for whom the state is responsible.

Even if all the cuts are made from vacant and frozen positions, Hackney said it still would represent a substantial savings to the state.

"If the General Assembly is not funding the positions, then it's a savings," he said. "If a year from now the hiring freeze ends, then the positions frozen could be filled and go back on the payroll."

Under a suggested list of eliminations, the Department of Human Resources would lose 317 jobs that otherwise would be budgeted for about $4.1 million annually. The Department of Transportation was asked to eliminate 254 jobs costing $3.3 million.

The Faces

Are Familiar

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Ron Smith and his friends join the crowd at Ronald Reagan's inaugural ceremonies Jan. 20, some cocktail-drinkers may think they're seeing double.

Ron Smith owns Ron Smith Celebrity Look Alikes and his friends, David Becker and Joanne Johnson, look "exactly like the president-elect and Mrs. Reagan," Smith says.

Smith employs two Reagan look-alikes and two Nancy look-alikes and is looking for more.

"We could use about five," Smith said. "Of course it will depend on how well he does as president."

Smith said his agency provides more than 1,000 celebrity look-alikes, mostly to advertising agencies but also for movie companies and others.

The Ron and Nancy look-alikes are going to Washington primarily to host an alternative "inaugural ball" at a Washington nightclub, Smith said.

Becker, who works as a security guard in Los Angeles, has been taking lessons speaking like Reagan. He got the job after his wife sent his photo to Smith.

"Looking like Reagan is scary sometimes," he said. "Just the other day I was walking down the street when this big guy came up, grabbed me and said, 'Where are your security guards now?'"

When the man realized his mistake he ran away, Becker said.

El Salvador Leftists Pressing 'Final Offensive'

U.S. Will Resume Arms Aid To Salvador Govm't

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is resuming military aid to El Salvador as leftist forces push a major offensive aimed at overthrowing the country's civilian-military junta, informed sources say.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the leftist offensive was the major contributing factor behind the decision to resume military aid.

The $5 million program was suspended five weeks ago following reports that Salvadoran security forces were responsible for the deaths of four American Catholic women, including three nuns.

The State Department was expected to formally announce the aid resumption today.

An estimated 500 persons have been killed over the past four days in El Salvador and leftist forces have said their goal is to create an "irreversible" situation by the time President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office next week.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte, a Christian Democrat who was installed last month as part of a major restructuring of the government, has called the offensive a failure.

The U.S. decision, which sources said was personally approved by President Carter, reportedly involves delivery of six helicopters and other military equipment. Six U.S. military advisers also will be sent to El Salvador.

The administration suspended both military aid and $20 million in economic aid Dec. 5, three days after the slaying of the four women.

The economic aid program was restored Dec. 17. Officials said the assistance was needed to maintain the Salvadoran economy and to avoid food shortages.

At the time, military aid was withheld, pending a reduction in the level of violence and progress in the investigation into the deaths of the four American women.

Although no arrests have been made, a U.S. fact-finding mission sent to El Salvador reported there was no evidence of high-level Salvadoran complicity in the slayings.

U.S. Ambassador Robert White has said privately he does not believe Salvadoran authorities are undertaking a serious investigation of the crime. The slayings touched off demands by U.S. church groups that the United States disassociate itself entirely from the Salvadoran government.

Salvadoran authorities have promised a thorough investigation of the slayings and have invited FBI experts to lend technical assistance. Two U.S. agricultural experts were shot to death in a San Salvador hotel Jan. 4 and, earlier, an American who was assisting Salvador's security forces was killed while investigating a kidnapping.

Reports received here on the new leftist offensive indicate the guerrillas have obtained substantial amounts of armaments from abroad recently. Officials say the source of the weaponry is not clear, but they believe some has been sent by Libya and other radical Arab states.

Reagan has indicated his administration will support the Salvadoran government. El Salvador has been plagued by increasing factional violence for more than a year. An estimated 9,000 persons were killed in 1980 alone.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Heavy fighting continued in El Salvador despite President Jose Duarte's claim that the leftists' "final offensive" has failed.

As the death toll topped 500 in three days, the U.S. government was reported planning to resume military aid to the junta today. Informed sources in Washington said six helicopters, several million dollars worth of other equipment and six U.S. military advisers would be rushed to El Salvador.

The junta on Tuesday acknowledged the leftists had taken over San Francisco Gotera, the capital of Morazan Province 65 miles east of San Salvador. But it said the national guard advanced into the city in the afternoon and were engaged in stiff battles.

The left said its guerrillas still controlled the city after 36 hours of fighting. Residents there reported by telephone they had seen "many" bodies.

The Democratic Revolutionary Front, a group of leftist organizations, said it would announce a provisional government this week, and there was speculation it hoped to make San Francisco Gotera its capital.

The national guard, El Salvador's army, also reported fierce fighting for the second day in Zacatecoluca, 30 miles southeast of San Salvador, but said it controlled the town. The leftists disputed this and said they were in control.

Reporters who traveled part way to Zacatecoluca said the guerrillas had blown craters in the highway with dynamite and appeared to control areas outside the town. At least five truck-trailer rigs had been destroyed on the roadway, they said.

The left appeared to be focusing its efforts in the center of the nation, but communication blackouts or downed telephone lines prevented complete information about the scope of the fighting. And an all-night curfew prevented extensive travel by reporters to check the conflicting claims.

A South African cameraman, Ian Mates, 25, died Tuesday of injuries suffered when a land mine exploded under a car he and two American photographers were riding in nine miles outside of San Salvador. The two Americans, John Hoagland, 29, of San Diego, and Susan Meiseles, 33, of New York, also were injured but were able to return to the United States on Tuesday.

She was on assignment from Time magazine while Hoagland was working for Newsweek.

The leftists began their offensive Saturday night. They called for a general strike on Friday, Monday and Tuesday, but each day the public in San Salvador ignored it.

For months the left had promised an offensive to bring down the centrist junta and replace it by a Marxist government. Meanwhile, an estimated 9,500 people were killed last year by the national guard and right-wing death squads and by leftist guerrillas. The army and the right-wing extremists are blamed for about 80 percent of the deaths.

The Carter administration suspended $5 million in military aid and $20 million in economic aid to the junta on Dec. 5 after four American Roman Catholic women working with programs aiding the peasants were assassinated outside San Salvador.

The economic aid was resumed Dec. 17. Informed sources in Washington said the beginning of the leftist offensive last weekend helped convince the Carter administration to resume military aid.

Mobile Home Industry Slumps

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — High interest rates that have knocked the life out of the housing market in North Carolina in the past year also have sent the state's mobile home industry into a nosedive.

Industry spokesmen say the bleak sales picture won't improve until interest rates fall substantially.

The current interest rate charged on a new home is about 18 percent. Interest rates on mobile homes range from 16 percent to 17.5 percent — something industry leaders hope will convince potential home buyers to look at mobile homes.

According to the North Carolina Manufactured Housing Institute in Raleigh, a trade association, mobile homes shipped to dealers around the state increased from 10,811 in December 1978 to 12,685 in December 1979. Figures for December 1980 are not in yet, but a spokesman for the institute said shipments were up slightly for the month.

However, manufacturers said the shipment figures are misleading because mobile homes simply aren't selling.

"We're hurting, that's all there is to it," said Ron Johnson, vice president of R-Anell Homes, a Denver mobile home manufacturer. "And until the interest rate comes down, we'll continue to hurt."

Johnson said the credit crunch that began last March had a severe impact on the industry, but he said by July sales had improved slightly. However, interest rates continued to climb and mobile home sales plummeted.

"December was awful," Johnson said. "All the mobile homes you see sitting on dealers' lots are inventories they're trying to get rid of but can't. They're just not selling any better than houses right now."

Johnson said his company laid off about a third of its workers recently and is operating on a limited basis. "Our dealers don't want more homes on their lots until they can sell the ones they have already. And who knows when that will be."

The story was about the same at Skyline Corp. of Mocksville, where sales manager J.C. Morgan said business has been very slow for the past few months. But Morgan said that, unlike the almost idle housing industry, the mobile home market is on the upswing.

"Look at it this way, it can't get much worse," Morgan said. "But it's getting better. If the prime rate falls back to 14 percent by March like some economists are predicting, business will be booming for us."

Skyline supplies about 90 dealers in North Carolina and another 90 in South Carolina and Virginia. Skyline's prices range from $10,000 to $20,000 for a single-wide home.

Morgan said the bright spot for the mobile home industry is that business is "definitely better" than it was three years ago when the bottom dropped out of the market. Morgan credited more stable dealers and better quality mobile homes for the improvement.

A predicted housing shortage later this year also is expected to send more customers to mobile home lots, Morgan said.

At the Conner Mobile Homes outlet in Charlotte, a spokesman said it is too early to tell what 1981 will bring for the industry. But he said December and the first two weeks of January showed improvement.

"Business has been fair, with a real good December," said salesman Grover Harrell. "And since we manufacture our own mobile homes, we don't have any inventory problems."

Harrell said the fact that mobile home interest rates are considerably lower than conventional home rates should attract buyer interest.

"I just don't see how young people particularly get into a house. It's just too costly," he said.

Conner's prices start at $11,800 and go to $23,000 with an interest rate of 16.5 percent.

"Oh, we're not worried about the market," Harrell said. "We've been through the ups and downs before, business is already picking up and we're looking for a real good year."

Find Drop In Young Smokers

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Cigarette smoking among U.S. high school seniors has declined largely because of peer pressure and potential health damage, a University of Michigan study concludes.

Of 17,000 seniors surveyed, 21 percent said they smoked cigarettes daily, compared with 29 percent in a similar survey taken in 1977. Significant drops were reported among both males and females.

dence gave legitimacy to communicating such disapproval because it expressed caring or concern for the well-being of the smoker."

Nineteen percent of the college-bound seniors said they smoked, while 36 percent of those not going to college said they had the habit.

"While we think this drop-off in smoking among our newest young adults is likely to have very favorable health consequences for the nation 30 or 40 years hence, clearly the problem has not gone away," said the report released Tuesday by three researchers at the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research.

The study, sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, followed an announcement by the U.S. Surgeon General that the proportion of smokers in the United States had dropped from 40.3 percent in 1964 to 32.5 percent.

"We are inclined to attribute this change to a long-term increase in young people's health concerns about smoking, as well as to a sharp decrease in the perceived peer pressure of smoking," said professors Lloyd Johnston, Jerald Bachman and Patrick O'Malley.

Nearly two-thirds of the 17,000 seniors surveyed said they believed there was "great risk" in smoking a pack of cigarettes a day. The percentage who said their friends would disapprove of cigarette smoking increased from 55 percent in a 1975 survey to 74 percent in the new report.

"The norms have changed regarding the legitimacy of expressing one's disapproval of other people's smoking," the researchers said. "Early on, the adverse health evi-

Order Corn Meal 'Halt'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Lenoir County gristmill was ordered by the state Tuesday to stop distributing corn meal that contained twice the amount of aflatoxin recommended for human consumption.

Leonard Blanton, acting director of the Agriculture Department's Food and Drug Division, said meal produced by the Davis Milling Co. of Deep Run checked out at 42 parts per billion aflatoxin. The level allowed by state and federal agencies is 20 ppb.

Blanton said the contaminated meal was produced in late December. The company may be ordered to recall meal already distributed if additional testing warrants such a move, he said.

The state earlier ordered gristmills in Spring Hope and Franklinville to recall its meal because of excessive levels of aflatoxin.

Aflatoxin is a poisonous substance produced by mold that grows on corn and peanuts. It has been identified by some as a cancer-causing agent.

Blanton said 16 mills have been checked in his agency's drive to keep contaminated meal off the market. The state has 50 gristmills, but five of them operate only during the spring tourist season.

Prosecutors Aiming At Testimony For Garwood

More Republicans Are In 1981 N.C. Assembly

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 1981 General Assembly has more new faces and more Republicans than the session that met two years ago.

More than one-fourth of the members taking their seats in the House weren't there last time, and most of them have never served in the Legislature.

According to figures compiled by Secretary of State Thad Eure, only 87 of the 120 House members returned from the last session. Of the new members, only six have ever served in the Legislature before.

In the Senate, turnover is only slightly less. There, 39 of the 50 members returned. Of the 11 new members, three have moved across the hall from the House, two were in previous Senate sessions and six are altogether new.

There were slightly higher numbers of returning legislators back in 1979, and definitely fewer GOP members.

Republicans will have exactly 20 percent representation in both the House and Senate this year. In the House there are 24 Republicans and 96 Democrats, compared to 15 GOP members two years ago. In the Senate there are 10 Republicans and 40 Democrats, compared to the five GOP senators elected in 1978.

There are other facts about North Carolina's 134th General Assembly session compiled by Eure's office — such as the oldest member, 78-year-old Rep. Reid Poovey, R-Hickory, and the youngest member, 26-year-old Rep. Tom Rabon, D-Winnabow.

There are 22 women in this session, three in the Senate and 19 in the House, one fewer than the 1977 record number of 23.

There are four blacks, one in the Senate and three in the House.

Legislators can be expected to handle as many as 3,700 or more bills during the session, which is expected to last until the end of June or early July. About 1,400 of them can be expected to pass, if the Legislature sticks to its average over the past 10 years.

And legislators will be well compensated for their efforts. The base pay for members of the Legislature is $6,936 per year. In addition, there is a monthly expense allowance of $172 for 12 months a year, and another "subsistence" allowance of $50 per day, seven days a week as long as the Legislature is in session.

A legislator can be expected to take in more than $25,000 during his two-year term in office — that's for attending about a five-month session this year and a brief, three- or four-week session next year. In fact, they don't have to attend the sessions to collect their pay, and legislators who live in or near Raleigh get the same expense allowance as those in the far corners of the state.

In addition, each legislator gets a weekly travel allowance during the session. It provides compensation at the rate of 25-cents a mile for one round-trip from Home to Raleigh each week.

Legislative officers — the speaker, speaker pro tem and minority leader in the House, and the president pro tem and minority leader in the Senate — earn more.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Prosecutors in the court-martial of accused turncoat Robert Garwood are taking aim at a defense based on subtleties of perception, psychological motives such as the will to survive and brainwashing.

Garwood, a 34-year-old Marine private first class, is charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam during what he contends was 14 years of captivity at the hands of the Viet Cong. The Marine Corps has charged that he remained in Vietnam voluntarily after his disappearance in 1965 and became a "white Vietnamese" who espoused the Viet Cong cause.

Defense attorneys have presented a string of medical witnesses with testimony tending to show Garwood, a native of Adams, Ind., as a victim of circumstances who was driven to the brink of insanity by physical and mental torture. The prosecution has indicated it will call at least two military psychiatrists as rebuttal witnesses.

As the defense prepared to rest its case, government lawyers opened an intensive line of questioning Tuesday of Air Force Col. James F.T. Corcoran, a senior military psychiatrist who has argued that Garwood was susceptible to brainwashing because of his troubled childhood and a mental condition aggravated by his treatment in Vietnam.

"Did not all the POWs you have evaluated have similar backgrounds in age and experience?" the psychiatrist was asked.

"Yes. But this was a special case because of the years he spent in captivity," responded Corcoran, who is chief psychiatrist at the U.S. Air Force School of Medicine at Brooks Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas.

The prosecution centered its challenge on defense protestations that Garwood was not responsible for his actions in Vietnam.

"If he was asked at the time if the acts he was charged with were criminal, would he have agreed?" prosecutor Capt. Theresa Wright asked Corcoran in cross-examination.

She referred to earlier testimony by former POWs that accused Garwood of carrying weapons, wearing a communist uniform, leading indoctrination sessions and broadcasting on behalf of the North Vietnamese.

"He would have viewed them as criminal acts but argues that he did not do them anyway, and the issue is not what he did and did not do, but his mental illness," Corcoran replied.

"Today he would agree it would have been wrong to do what he is charged with. But his perception is he did nothing wrong."

Corcoran quoted Garwood as admitting wearing black pajamas — the uniform of the Viet Cong — but he did not see it as enemy apparel. "He described it as being similar to a service station operator's overalls and did not regard it as collaboration," the psychiatrist said.

Garwood said he was required to carry a bullhorn at times but never broadcast and also admitted carrying a weapon but only when it was loaded on his backpack with other items.

"If you walked into the camp and asked him, 'Do you know it is a violation of the law to carry a weapon for the enemy?' he would say, 'Of course, I know, but I'm not carrying a weapon,'" the psychiatrist said.

Government lawyers also quoted from a 1965 psychiatric report in Garwood's file which stated that, on being informed of his assignment to Vietnam, he became intoxicated and banged his head against his locker door, saying, "Not Vietnam, not Vietnam."

Asked what he thought of that incident, Corcoran replied, "You can draw any number of inferences from it, including the fact that he didn't want to go to Vietnam."

School Debate Has Made A Best-Seller

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Aldous Huxley's 1932 novel "Brave New World" has become a best-seller in Iredell County in the wake of a three-month debate over the use of the book in public schools.

The book is a sellout at Statesville stores and county library director Flint Norwood says its popularity has now exceeded "Gone With the Wind."

"The best way to get a book circulated is to say something about it," he said. "I've been here 14 years, and I've never seen anything like it."

Public curiosity was aroused last fall when a parent complained about the use of the book in an English class taught by Mike Shinn at North Iredell High School.

The parent, Charles Campbell, called the book "anti-Christian," touching off a series of agonizing meetings for the school board — which twice banned the book before reinstating it on Jan. 5 for what purportedly will be the remainder of the school year.

Campbell's daughter, Lisa, 15, was transferred to another class.

The satirical book, the best-known work of the British author, is set in a society 600 years in the future. Huxley used the setting to write about the evils of totalitarian government. The book has been in the Iredell school system since 1963.

The school board has scheduled a review of its policy for selecting texts, and handling parental challenges, at a meeting next month. Several members of the religious group Moral Majority have said they will attend the Feb. 9 meeting to oppose planned revisions.

The policy currently states that if a parent or student objects to a book and files a formal complaint, the book automatically will be withdrawn from classes until the school board can make a ruling.

Critter Names Dot N.C. Maps

By The Associated Press

Across the Carolinas, there are more than 20 communities — large enough to appear on state road maps — that have names of animals or insects, names like Lizard Lick or Swan Quarter, Frogmore or Buffalo. In some cases, the critters that lent their names to the localities never lived there.

There are exceptions. In Lizard Lick, N.C., the quick-moving reptiles can still be found. "In the summertime, we have lizards — just little old yard lizards," said Burbon Richardson, 63, who lives near the unincorporated community about 15 miles east of Raleigh.

The area got its name years ago when someone noticed lizards crawling on a fence there, said Richardson. And in Bat Cave, a rural community in Henderson County, N.C., bats occupy a cave high up on nearby Blue Rock Mountain. But in Goose Creek, S.C., a bedroom town of some 17,000 people about 20 miles north of Charleston, there are no geese at all.

"There are ducks, but no geese," chuckled Goose Creek Mayor Michael Heitzler, an elementary school principal who has written an unpublished town history.

"I've never seen a buffalo around here myself, but all the older folks say there was," said Archie Inabinett, 65, a part-time barber who lives in Buffalo, S.C., a textile mill village of about 2,000 people in Union County, about 60 miles southwest of Charlotte.

One town whose name has no special significance is Frogmore, S.C.

"There are a few frogs here, but not a whole lot more than anywhere else," said John Caldwell, 66, a postal worker who lives in Frogmore, a Beaufort County community about 50 miles southwest of Charleston.

Frogmore Manor."

There's also a North Carolina community called Frogboro, about 50 miles northwest of Durham.

Not everyone likes to live in a place named after frogs.

In 1873, residents of a Newberry County, S.C., community called Frog Level decided to change their name to Prosperity, which now has about 800 residents.

"The people probably wanted a little more dignified name," said Claude Neuffer, 69, professor emeritus of English at the University of South Carolina and editor of an annual publication called "Names in South Carolina."

Other towns have names that suggest the animal or insect world. But on closer examination, the names have a human origin.

McBee, S.C., doesn't have anything to do with bees. Instead, McBee is named after a civil engineer who helped make the Chesterfield County town a railroad center in the 19th century, said McBee historian Jeff Gardner, 69.

Nor is the small rural community of Birdtown, N.C., in Swain County, named after birds — at least not directly.

The name comes from the Bird clan of Cherokee Indians, who live in that area, said Sandy Saunooke, an assistant teacher in the Birdtown Head Start Center.

Other animal-related names are well known.

Cowpens, S.C., is remembered as the site of a Revolutionary War battle. Nags Head, N.C., is a resort on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

But probably not too many people have heard of Bughill, N.C., a rural community about 50 miles west of Wilmington.

Bughill got its name in the 1800s when a farmer's corn was attacked by swarms of insects. The name of the farmer and the type of insects have been forgotten.

But Bughill is still Bughill. "The name has remained, although it is said that the land now produces as well as any around, probably because of the development of insecticides," according to an article filed at the Columbus County library in Whiteville.

Will Display Manuscript

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rare Leonardo da Vinci manuscript, which sold for a record $5.1 million at a London auction last month, will be displayed at the Corcoran Gallery of Art during the week of President-elect Ronald Reagan's inauguration.

The Codex Leicester, in which da Vinci advances theories about water and particularly about the future possibilities of steam power and submarines, was written and illustrated between 1508 and 1510. The 72-page manuscript is the only one of da Vinci's remaining in private hands.

The document had been in the family of the Earls of Leicester since 1717, and was bought at Christie's auction house in London Dec. 12 by Armand Hammer, an art collector and chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., who paid a record auction price for a manuscript.

The manuscript has been shown publicly only once before, in London during the early 1950s, according to the Fine Arts Committee for the Presidential Inaugural, 1981. Hammer is a member of the committee.

Da Vinci's manuscript, disassembled and mounted in 19 specially designed, double-sided modules, will be displayed at the Corcoran from Jan. 18 through Jan. 25.

Advised Assure Zinc In Diets

CHICAGO (UPI) — Vegetarians should be careful to get enough zinc in their diets, because their liberal fiber intake may interfere with absorption of that trace element.

A zinc shortage has been linked to decreased appetite, growth failure, skin changes, slow healing of wounds, decreased sense of taste and possible birth defects, say three authors in an article in the Journal of The American Dietetic Association.

Women vegetarians may be most at risk, the authors say, because of their low calorie intake and poor food choices. The author-researchers are registered dietitians Margaret A. Eppright and Jeanne H. Freeland-Graves, both of Austin, Texas, and Pamela W. Boddy, of Houston, Texas.

At MIU They Say TM Boosts Learning Ability

By LIDIA WASOWICZ
 FAIRFIELD, Iowa (UPI) — At the only accredited university of its kind in the United States, students are required to close their eyes and relax while doing the major part of their schoolwork.

Transcendental meditation forms such an integral part of the curriculum at Maharishi International University that students receive, in addition to regular academic grades, a separate "neurophysiological" report card.

Along with final exams in such traditional courses as biology, business, psychology, education, philosophy, math, literature and physics, students also take a battery of physiological and psychological tests to measure their progress in achieving what TM practitioners call "pure consciousness."

These include tests in intelligence, moral reasoning and development, stress and aging. Visiting scientists from China, Switzerland, Thailand and Austria have participated in the research.

MIU officials say the results, corroborated by tests at several American and European educational institutions, tend to indicate that meditation can increase intelligence, creativity, moral awareness and even youthfulness.

The longer one meditates, TM practitioners claim, the longer one postpones such symptoms of aging as loss of vision, hearing and memory.

Since meditation — which, its proponents say, works these wonders by greatly reducing tension — underlies every MIU activity. They say students study it as seriously as the toughest of their academic subjects.

For an hour each morning and an hour in the evening, 800 students and 55 faculty members gather in a golden-roofed dome at the center of the 182-acre campus on the outskirts of Fairfield to practice the "science of creative intelligence."

These studies are conducted on floor pads in the 22,000-square-foot building, where meditators claim they levitate off the ground.

Pointing to results from such tests as IQ, Galvanic Skin Response and EEG, Bob Rabinoff, head of the Physics Department, said the TM program "increases brain wave coherence, intelligence, creativity, learning ability and self-actualization and decreases anxiety."

"Stress and strain block a person's ability to attain full potential. Once they are removed, there are no limits."

"The change since I started meditating is really incredible," said junior Bruce Wilson, 26. "I used to freak out about algebra. Now I'm taking quantum mechanics with no trouble."

"Where in other schools you cram knowledge to get high scores on tests, here you concentrate on relieving the stress. Knowledge, memory then all flow naturally," said Shizuo Suzuki, 26, a sophomore from Japan.

Although MIU has an open admissions policy — accepting any student, regardless of his prior academic record — its seniors have consistently scored above the national average on the Graduate Record Examination and the UP Field Tests, said Ellen Akst, assistant professor of law and government.

Some 44 percent of MIU graduates choose to continue their studies, and do well in post-graduate work at other schools, said Ms. Akst, who arrived at MIU one year ago from Washington where she worked as associate counsel for several U.S. Senate committees.

"MIU is the only university in the world today where the field of pure knowledge is the basis of education," said MIU founder Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, whose arrival from India 22 years ago marked the beginning of the TM movement in the United States. The guru rarely visits the university but his pictures and teachings are prominently displayed throughout the campus.

The university has come a long way since its meager beginnings a decade ago in a rented apartment complex in Santa Barbara, Calif., where a handful of TM practitioners — mostly college professors — struggled to keep it alive.

In 1974, the school — buoyed by a growing student body — moved to the campus in the southeast corner of Iowa being vacated by bankrupt Parsons College, which had occupied the premises since 1854.

When MIU students and faculty began arriving, they were met with skepticism and suspicion from residents of the small farming community.

"The farmers were not sure about having any crazy college kids around and as for meditating college students, they really had doubts," said Michael Dillbeck, assistant professor of psychology.

"They thought we were going to come in white robes, with shaved heads, chanting. The first thing we did was to hold a big barbecue. Now, we even have the mayor coming to the campus to give speeches."

Hesburgh Tackles World Problems On Fast Track

By KENT McDILL
SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Few people are willing to accept the weight of concern for all the world's problems.

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University, picks up that weight, throws it over his shoulder and carries it with him around the globe.

Hesburgh is in his 29th year as president at Notre Dame — the dean of college presidents. In a poll of influential Americans, he finished second in the field of education.

His full-time Notre Dame post is only the tip of the Hesburgh iceberg. He held six different appointed chairmanships in 1980, including the Overseas Development Council and the Rockefeller Foundation.

The 63-year-old priest says there was a time recently when he actually was in a position to relax a bit, but a phone call asking him to chair the Select Commission on Refugee and Immigration Policy put an end to that.

"I just finished another assignment, the Commission on the Holocaust, and I said, 'for the first time in years I'm free of the U.S. Government and now I can relax and get my homework done,'" Hesburgh said in an interview.

"Fritz (Vice President Walter) Mondale calls the next day and he said, 'We've got to get a chairman for this. We can't put anybody in because the secretary of state, attorney general, secretary of labor, and secretary of health and human resources are on it.' He says it's a pretty high powered commission."

Hesburgh accepted the chairmanship and the concern over illegal aliens.

Besides his chairmanships, Hesburgh said, he holds 10 or 15 other jobs on councils and committees and advisory boards. He is well-traveled, to say the least.

"I was down in South America last week, with the Chase board, which I'm also getting off this year," Hesburgh said.

"To show you how fast the track is, I get out of Rio at 10:30 at night and by 1 the next afternoon I was in a meeting in Chicago, and then I drove back here and worked until 3 the next morning. I figured when I went to bed I hadn't had my shoes off for two days.

"I went east yesterday, did three jobs in New York, was out of there at 6:30 in the morning, and back here on the job," he said. "A lot of people wouldn't rush that much, they'd go see a show. I haven't seen a play in New York, or even a movie, in years.

"I think you can get a lot done, but you've got to keep at it. You can't play around, and I haven't had much chance to play around."

All the work Hesburgh performs for refugees, nuclear energy, human rights and science are secondary to his life's main work, education. Despite his huge itinerary of travel, his home and his office are in South Bend.

"I spend better than 50 percent of my time here," he said. "When I'm here I work double shifts so they get better than 50 percent of my time. But if you were just on this kind of job for as long as I've been on it, you'd get pretty stale. It's the outside thing that gives you new ideas you can bring in here.

"I teach about seven or eight classes a year in one shot. Last year I taught a class on population in the freshman biology class, on the whole question of world population.

"I taught a course in American history on the civil rights movement of the 1960s," said Hesburgh, who was appointed to the Commission on Civil Rights by President Eisenhower in 1957 and served as chairman for four years. "And I taught a course on science and technology for development."

He said his outside work does not detract from his work as president of Notre Dame, but rather puts him in a better position to help the school.

"I know all of these people and if I ask them to come in they'll come in. If I were sitting around here all the time I wouldn't know any of these people, but I know them all and I can get the best of them to come in because I do things for them."

Hesburgh's work has been in higher education, but he is concerned about what is — and is not — being done in primary and secondary education.

"What irks me is that people who need education most for social mobility, people who grow up in inner cities, get the worst education of all," he said.

"We're turning out probably half a million youngsters every year who are not only going to be unemployed but are unemployable, except for menial jobs. People who can't write well, can't speak well, and don't know any science. With that kind of combination, you can be 18 years old and full of frustration because you're not going anywhere.

"There has to be a massive reform of education for ghetto children, and I have an answer, one of several.

"You take several hundred acres of land in a city, and build the best school in the state. You build a beautiful campus, you have everything there, like health services, voluntary groups that work with kids, and you create the environment in which people are uplifted."

"You could take care of 60,000 kids in one institution. Even people who are pretty well off would want their kids to go there because of the quality of education opportunity. We've done it in higher education, and I don't see why we don't do it in secondary education."

"Every so often the whole educational system has to be looked at very closely and probably reformed from time to time, but that is part of human organization," Hesburgh said.

The Notre Dame president also wants to change the approach to illegal immigration.

"We have probably three to six million illegals in the country right now," Hesburgh said. "Somehow the law just isn't working. It's probably the worst law we have after the tax law."

He said the commission, which must make its presentation to the president in March 1981, has come up with a list of priorities for acceptance of immigrants.

"One will be family reunification — living spouse, parents, unmarried children. Second category will be for socio-economic benefit of Americans — what we call seed immigrants — people coming because they want a better life and opportunity. Third is the refugees, and that will be a floating preference in terms of numbers accepted."

Hesburgh said the greatest problem in immigration laws is that there is no easy means of identifying properly authorized immigrants.

"Some people talk Social Security (card), but others don't like the idea because they think it's heading toward a national identity card. Well, I think it almost in fact is."

"We dug up an old executive order from FDR (President Franklin Roosevelt) in which he says, 'If this card (the Social Security card) which we are instituting ever needs to be used for other purposes of identification, so be it.' That's an executive order."

Hesburgh is an impressive man, and he has built himself an impressive set of personal credentials.

He was asked to run as George McGovern's running mate and to serve as the head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at its inception.

Hesburgh agrees with the view of many Americans that there needs to be a man to stand up and lead this country.

He is that kind of man. He is a doer who is admired in many fields. He is an electable man, but he doesn't plan to be elected.

"I've been offered some fairly high level posts, I mean I've been offered to run as senator and vice president on occasion, but I've taken as a matter of principle I will only take appointed jobs, not full-time jobs because I have a full-time job here. I will never run for office."

Hesburgh was born in Syracuse, N.Y., May 25, 1917, the son of Anne and Theodore Hesburgh. His father was an executive of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. His brother, James, graduated from Notre Dame in 1955, received his MBA from Harvard in 1960 and now is president of Intercole Automation in Los Angeles. He had three sisters, one of whom died in 1957.

Hesburgh was educated at Notre Dame and the Gregorian University in Rome, from which he received a Bachelor of Philosophy degree in 1940. He was ordained a priest of the Congregation of Holy Cross in Sacred Heart Church on the Notre Dame campus June 24, 1943. Following his ordination, Hesburgh continued his study of sacred theology at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., receiving his doctorate in 1945.

He joined the Notre Dame faculty the same year, and served as chaplain to World War II veterans on campus in addition to his duties in the theology department. He was appointed head of the department in 1948, and the following year was named executive vice-president to Rev. John J. Cavanaugh.

In June, 1952, at the age of 35, Hesburgh was appointed the president of Notre Dame.

Found Few Exercising

NEW YORK (AP) — Exercise — many Americans talk about it, brag about it, read about it, yet how many actually do it?

A recent national research study to compare the lifestyles and personal health-care practices of six occupational groups found that although 86 percent of the respondents recognize that exercise is important to good health, very few actually exercise on a regular basis.

In fact, of the six groups — farmers, secretaries, family physicians, garment workers, teachers and business executives — only a significant number of executives and physicians claim to exercise two or more times a week.

According to the study, which was sponsored by the American Academy of Family Physicians and conducted by Research & Forecasts Inc., those same business executives who claim to exercise two or more times a week are also the heaviest drinkers and smokers of those surveyed. The average executive polled imbibed seven or more drinks a week and smoked more than a pack of cigarettes a day.

Suffer 'Shock' From Liberation

NEW YORK (UPI) — A psychologist says many husbands of working wives suffer from liberation shock. They are confused and angry about what their wives really want from them, says Dr. Robert Bannon.

In a magazine article, Bannon says, "Men have great difficulty understanding women's needs for independence." When a woman says she wants to be self-sufficient for her personal fulfillment, not economics, many men are at a loss, he writes in the January issue of Ladies' Home Journal magazine. Bannon's specialty is studying sex roles.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today as traders' on-again-off-again hopes for lower interest rates revived.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.67 to 968.77 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 4-3 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Tuesday the government reported that retail sales declined 1.3 percent in December.

The news was taken as a strong signal that the economy was slowing, increasing the odds of a decline in interest rates.

Prices in the bond market, which move inversely with interest rates, rallied in the final minutes of trading Tuesday after the retail-sales report was issued.

Actively traded stocks in the early going today included Mobil, up $\frac{1}{8}$ at 80; LTV, unchanged at 18 $\frac{1}{2}$; Damon, off $\frac{1}{8}$ at 10 $\frac{1}{2}$; and Eastman Kodak, up $\frac{1}{8}$ at 72.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrials dropped 3.67 to 965.10.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 5-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 40.89 million shares, against 48.76 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .17 to 76.35.

At the American Stock

Exchange, the market value index was off 1.31 at 338.86.

Banquet To Honor Dr. King

The Pitt County chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference will host a banquet honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, with the theme of, "Keeping the Dream Alive," tomorrow night.

The banquet will be at 7 p.m. at the Western Sizzling Steak House on East Tenth St. The SCLC is seeking donations of $13 for a single and $25 per couple.

Speakers for the session will include Dr. Dudley Flood, assistant superintendent of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, the Rev. Fred D. Taylor, director of chapters and affiliates of the national Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and D. D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Rev. Aiken Gets Award

FAYETTEVILLE — The Rev. Mike Aiken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Aiken of Greenville, was named Outstanding Citizen of the Year by the Cumberland County Human Relations Advisory Commission recently.

The Rev. Aiken is director of the Fayetteville Urban Ministry, which is affiliated with approximately 65 churches. He is also president of the Ministerial Association of Cumberland County.

The honoree is a 1967 graduate of Rose High School and also received his degree from Wake Forest University in 1967. He graduated from Duke University in 1974.

The award was presented to the Rev. Aiken by Past President of the Cumberland County Human Relations Advisory Commission Sulo Heikkinen.

Public Meet To Be Held

Dr. Wallace Wooles, general chairman of the Mayor's Advisory Committee, reminded area citizens that a public meeting on the administrative services segment of the committee's study of city services is scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 15 at the Willis Building on First and Reade Streets.

Wooles invited the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County to attend the meeting, to be held from 7-9 p.m.

Obituary Column

Baker
Mr. Douglas Randolph Baker, 45, died Tuesday night at his home in the Bell Arthur Community.

The funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Wilkerson Funeral Home Chapel by his pastor, the Rev. Randy L. Wall, and the Rev. Hank Hummings, pastor of the Pikeville United Methodist Church. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Baker, a native of Pitt County, spent all his life in the Bell Arthur Community and was a tobacco buyer for Export Leaf Tobacco Company. He was a member of the Bell Arthur United Methodist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Betty Lou Nobles Baker; a son, Tony Baker of the home; his parents; Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey E. Baker of Bell Arthur; two sisters; Mrs. Margaret B. Moss, Mrs. Hazel B. Guthrie, both of Greenville; and two brothers: Sidney C. Baker of Roanoke Rapids, D. Rodger Baker of Bell Arthur.

The family suggests that those desiring to make a memorial contribution may consider the Bell Arthur United Methodist Church Memorial Fund.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Wednesday.

Carney

Mrs. Annie Adams Carney died Tuesday in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Hardee's Funeral Home.

East

Mrs. Virginia P. East, 82, died Tuesday night. A memorial service will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church by the Rev. Jim Bailey.

Mrs. East was a native of Olney, Ill. and was a graduate of McKendree College. She lived for a number of years in Springfield and later in Norman, Ill. She was married to Lawrence J. East, who died in 1973. During their retirement years, they lived in Holmes Beach, Fla. and Saugatuck, Mich. She was a member of the Community Church of Saugatuck and in 1975, had made her home in Greenville.

She is survived by a son, Senator John P. East; six grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Privette Is Speaker At Meeting

Rev. Coy Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League of North Carolina was guest speaker at an anti-liquor meeting here Tuesday night sponsored by the Concerned Citizens of Pitt County.

The estimated 100 persons attending the session heard Privette say the North Carolina liquor-by-the-drink law is the most liberal liquor law in the nation.

He urged voters to vote against liquor by the drink in the February 17 Greenville referendum, saying for every $1 in revenue liquor sales produce, it costs county residents $10.95 for rehabilitation, enforcement and other expenses.

In addition to the talk, a 15 minute film dealing with alcohol was presented.

Frank Steinbeck, co-chairman of the Concerned Citizens of Pitt County presided at the session.

Steinbeck noted that Privette will appear at several local churches on Sunday, and is scheduled to hold a news conference at 10 a.m. Monday at Trinity Free Will Baptist Church on Greenville Boulevard.

DePaul Back On 'W' Track Fighting Irish Fall To San Fran

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Derailed over the weekend, DePaul is back on the track now.

"We learned more from the loss to Old Dominion than from any other game in the last two years," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer Tuesday night after a 93-67 decision over St. Louis University. "While we were No. 1, we played not to lose. Now that we are fourth, we have something to shoot at."

The Blue Demons were ranked No. 1 most of the college basketball season until Saturday night, when they were upset at home 63-62 by an unheralded Old Dominion team. As a result of that shocker, they were dropped to No. 4 in the national polls.

But it didn't necessarily bother Meyer's players.

"Being on top is only important at the end of the season," said DePaul forward Mark Aguirre. "At this point, it doesn't mean a thing. Tonight, we were able to do almost anything we wanted. And when we come to play, we know we can do our thing."

Aguirre did his "thing", for one, scoring 36 points as the Blue Demons outclassed the Billikens.

"There is no way we could compete with them on a man-for-man basis," said St. Louis Coach Ron Ekker. "I don't think our kids were in awe of them, but we were up against the best."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 13 South Alabama defeated North Carolina-Charlotte 80-63 and San Francisco upset No. 7 Notre Dame 66-63 in overtime.

DePaul, 14-1, grabbed a 46-29 halftime lead as Aguirre scored 19 points and reserve Bernard Randolph added 10. During one stretch, the Blue Demons scored 20 straight points, and in a seven-minute flurry outscored the Billikens 30-5.

Aguirre has now amassed 1,877 points and is within 19 of the all-time record held by former DePaul center Dave Corzine. Only a junior, he has long surpassed one of the greatest players in DePaul history in George Mikas.

St. Louis was led by freshman Willie Becton's 24 points.

South Alabama's Ed Rains scored 31 points to lead the Jaguars over North Carolina-Charlotte, their 13th consecutive victory. Rains hit 14 of 19 field goal shots and three of five from the foul line as South Alabama improved its record to 14-1.

Phil Ward had 16 points and Tyrone Stephens 10 for UNCC.

Junior guard Ken McAlister made two free throws with 14 seconds remaining in overtime, lifting San Francisco over Notre Dame. The victory improved the Dons' record to 12-2, while the Irish lost their second straight game for the

Lady Pirates Bomb UNC

Riley, Jones Lead ECU

Special To The Reflector
CHAPEL HILL — The East Carolina Lady Pirates followed the hot shooting of forwards Kathy Riley and Sam Jones Tuesday night to down in-state rival North Carolina, 87-75.

Riley, who scored a game-high 27 points, tallied 17 in the first half as ECU ran out to a 31-10 lead. Jones, who added 24, hit a dozen in each half as the Pirates matched the 21-point margin five times during the game.

ECU led from start to finish and the final 12-point margin was as close as the Tar Heels got after the opening minutes.

"We really played well tonight. This was probably our best game of the season," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "In the first half we shot 64 percent, we handled their 2-3 zone very well, and our press gave us several key baskets."

ECU, 10-3, hit on 59.1 percent of its shots from the floor, led by Mary Denkler, who hit all seven field goal attempts for 14 points. Point guard Laurie Sikes added 10 points and five assists.

North Carolina guard Aprilie Schaffer led Carolina with 19 points. She got scoring help from Kathy Crawford with 18. North Carolina is now 7-9, despite coming off an upset of nationally ranked Texas.

The game is the first of two between the games. The second one in Greenville will count in the NCAIAW standings.

It was the ECU press, led by Jones and Riley, that broke open the game midway through the first half. ECU scored several fast break baskets and stretched the lead to 21 with 7:09 remaining on a Jones jumper with a Riley assist.

In the second half the Pirates came out and were able to maintain their lead at around 20 until late in the contest when the reserves came in.

"The kids really did a super job," Andruzzi said. "I figured we'd lose some of our lead coming out in the second half but the kids just came out and really did the job."

"This is a big win. Carolina's beat Penn State, which was nationally ranked, and UVA and Texas, another team that was nationally ranked, and also lost by only one to N.C. State," Andruzzi said. "And winning it at Carolina makes it big, too."

Rampants Hit Over 56% From Field

Rose Shoots Down Bertie, 66-48

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WINDSOR — Rose High School combined hot shooting with some fairly cool ball handling last night and put together a 66-48 Division I basketball victory over Bertie High School.

Earlier, the Bertie girls blizzed Rose in the second period and rolled to a 56-26 win over the hapless Rampettes. Bertie also gained a double-overtime win over the Rose junior varsity, 52-50.

The Rampants drilled through a hot 56.3 per cent of their shots on the way to the varsity win, their third in four Division I outings. Bertie, meanwhile, having some troubles with the Rose defense, got only 44.4 per cent of its shots, as its league record fell to 1-3.

And Coach Jim Brewington might just be thinking of staying away from the Rose gym.

"You know, we haven't lost on the road yet," he pointed out. "I'm really sort of hating to go home. We've been playing super on the road."

Brewington was also impressed with the way his team worked together. "This is the best team ball we've played, too," he said.

Rose scored first, but Bertie came back to tie it up and then take the lead on a basket by Ronnie L. Lee and a free throw by Michael Watford. Lee came back with another basket for a 5-2 Falcon lead, their largest.

Rose pulled back within one, but trailed the rest of the first period, never quite able to take the lead. The frame ended with Bertie ahead, 13-11.

Rose came up with the first two baskets of the second quarter, however, to take a 15-13 lead. Donald Johnson tied it up and James Perkins then put Rose ahead. And it was for good. Johnson hit the second of a two-shot charity chance upping the lead to 16-13, and Rose steadily pulled away the rest of the quarter. Perkins hit from the lane to make it 20-16, and Johnson tossed back a missed shot for a 22-16 lead. After a Falcon free throw, Barry Smith made two free throws for a 24-17 lead, and Johnson closed out the quarter with two more at the line for a 28-20 lead that held at halftime.

Late in the period, Rose went to a spread offense, running out the clock on the half.

Rose returned to the offense in the second half, moving the ball around and getting easy layups off it. That helped the Rampants move the lead out to 14 points, 38-24 during the first four and a half minutes of the third period. In that stretch, James Brewington hit six points, all of them on back-door layups. But after hitting all six of their first shots of the half, and gaining the big lead, the Rampants got a little sloppy, and it allowed Bertie to make a comeback. They scored the final eight points of the quarter, pulling back to within six, 40-34.

The comeback continued into the early minutes of the final period, as the gap narrowed to just four, 42-38 before Perkins sparked a pull-away with two straight jumpers that opened up an 11-point lead, 49-38, with 4:24 left.

From there on out, Rose steadily pulled away, gaining its biggest lead at the horn on Tim Harris' dunk with one second left, 66-48.

Johnson led the Rose scoring with 18 points, while Brewington had 12 and Perkins had 10. Bertie was led by Lee with 14, while Gwayne Gilliam

Pitchers Head Draft List

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball people are fond of saying you can never have too much pitching and they followed that formula in the 16th annual winter free agent draft of amateur players.

Pitchers were the top priority in the both the regular and secondary phases of Tuesday's draft and half of the 52 first round selections in the two sections were hurlers.

Included in that group was the No. 1 regular phase pick, left-hander Jim Rooney of Stony Point, N.Y., who was selected by the Chicago Cubs. Rooney, who was 20 on New Year's Day, will graduate in June from Morris Community College in Dover, N.J.

St. Louis, with the top choice in the secondary phase for players previously drafted but unsigned, picked catcher Harry McCulla, another 20-year-old, from Houma, La. and Delgado Junior College in New Orleans. Within minutes after they had picked him, the Cards announced the signing of McCulla, who had been drafted by Atlanta last June.

Eleven pitchers were picked in the first round of the regular draft and 15 more went in the opening round of the secondary draft with Californians dominating the selection process. After Rooney was drafted No. 1, the next 10 players taken in the regular first round were all from California.

Midway through the first round of the regular phase, a pair of batterymates were selected from Long Beach City College. They are catcher Terry Cormack, chosen by Atlanta, and right-handed pitcher Brian Reams, taken by Pittsburgh. Those two picks were separated only by Minnesota's selection of right-handed pitcher Peter Kutsukos of Seminole Junior College in Sanford, Fla.

Mesa, Ariz. Community College supplied a pair of outfielders for the first round of the regular phase with the New York Mets picking Randy Milligan and Kansas City taking teammate Richard Rizzo.

Kevin Price and Kevin White, a pair of right-handed pitchers, were picked from Cosumnes River College in Sacramento, Calif. California took Price, making him the fourth choice in the regular phase, and Los Angeles selected White.

Fullerton Junior College produced three choices, right-handed pitchers Mel White and Thor Edgell, and shortstop Steve Kiefer. White was picked by San Francisco and Oakland went for Kiefer in the regular phase. In the secondary phase, Seattle selected Edgell.

The draft continues today but no more names will be made public. Players selected must be contacted by the teams within 15 days to begin negotiations.

Rooney said he would represent himself in talks with the Cubs.

"It's pretty prestigious to consider that you're the first guy picked in the entire nation," the pitcher said.

UM's Williams Anxious To Face Sampson

Terps Battle Cavs Tonight

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland's Buck Williams relishes the opportunity to work against a player like Virginia's Ralph Sampson, but he knows he'll need help to neutralize the man many consider the best center in college basketball.

"When I get a chance to play against a Sampson or a (Mike) Gminski, a quality player like that, I look forward to that day," says Williams, a junior from Rocky Mount, N.C.

At 6-foot-8, Williams will be giving away more than a half foot in height to the 7-4 Sampson when the two teams meet tonight at Cole Field House. Williams will have to rely on strength, quickness and a lot of help from his teammates to neutralize the Virginia center, who is averaging 20.3 points per game.

Virginia's Ralph Sampson

Ralph Sampson 7-4 Soph Having More Fun This Year With Unbeaten, No. 2-Ranked Cavs

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — After a freshman season in which he led Virginia's Cavaliers to the National Invitation Tournament title and passed up a shot at the pros, Ralph Sampson says he's enjoying college basketball even more.

"It was fun playing last year," says the 7-foot-4 sophomore who has led Virginia to 11 straight victories and a No. 2 national ranking this season. "It's a lot more fun now. We're winning and we're a better team."

Sampson, who was wooed by the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association last spring but decided against declaring himself a hardship case, won't talk about the pros right now. All he wants is a national championship.

"We thought about the national title at the first of the year. We're still thinking about it, but it's in the back of our minds. Right now, we're taking one game at a time," he says.

Sampson was voted the most valuable player in the NIT last year after a season in which he averaged 14.9 points, 11.2 rebounds and 4.6 blocked shots per game.

In 11 games this season, he's averaging 20.3 points, 12.2 rebounds and 4 blocked shots per game. His 60.7 percent shooting is third best on the team, he is second only to point guard Jeff Jones with 27 assists and he has 11 steals, the third highest total.

But Sampson also has 44 turnovers, more than double the number of the next player, and he's hitting only 59.4 percent of his free throws compared to 70.2 percent last year.

"I've got to work on the turnovers and the free throws," Sampson says. After a bad game against N.C. State as far as losing the ball, he says "I tried to concentrate on holding the ball" last Saturday in a 63-57 victory over North Carolina. The result: no turnovers.

The Cavaliers are working on a 16-game winning streak, longest of any Division I team in the nation, as a result of their five NIT victories, and Sampson says that tournament may be the reason.

"We played well up there in New York. You have to like it — winning — but I like the way we're playing now even more."

Because of a case of the flu just at the start of the season, Sampson weighs just 210 pounds compared to the 225 he'd like to weigh, and a lot of people think he's not tough enough.

"I may not look strong, but I'm definitely stronger than last year and I'm gonna get stronger during the year," he says.

Sampson feels he's improved this year in every phase of his game, but he says the improvement may be because "I know the players and the coaches better. I know what they can do and they know what I can do."

On his statistics, Sampson says "I'm not worried about stats. I just go to play and win the game. I'm not worried about who makes the most points, just who wins."

As a matter of fact, he says some of his best games have been on defense with no statistics to evaluate his performance.

Sampson fouled out of five games last year but so far has avoided disqualification this season.

"You've got to watch yourself. You can't block every shot. Once you get two or three fouls, you have to watch yourself a little more, be a little less aggressive."

Sampson says the Cavaliers' high national ranking "is hard to ignore. If we were No. 1, we'd be very happy, but we'd be worried about the next game."

"It's important to the fans, but the rankings don't mean that much to us right now. It's not really important to us until the end of March."

Sampson had a tendency to lose his cool on occasion last season and he still does, though not as much.

His one outburst came when a foul was called on him in a 53-52 squeeze past James Madison on his first return to his home town of Harrisonburg as a collegian.

Does he now regret he drew a technical foul when he slammed the ball on the floor so hard it almost hit the ceiling.

"No, I don't," he says after a moment's hesitation.

DHC Nips Jaguars, 45-43

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Farmville Central, struggling to win, wanted it more, a lot more. D.H. Conley, struggling not to lose, appeared not to care much one way or the other.

Still, the Vikings, thanks to six-of-seven free throws late in the game, managed to hold off the improving Jaguars, 45-43, Tuesday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference battle.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Farmville Central whipped D.H. Conley, 58-42.

"At this point we're struggling," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "We aren't concentrating. It's not a physical thing. We're just not concentrating."

"Right now we're a very inconsistent team. We're gonna play some good games. Where and when, though, you never know."

One of those good games surely wasn't Tuesday night. The Vikings, easily one of the most talented teams in the league, were denied access to the middle most of the game by a 3-2 zone and were outshouted most of the way by a Jaguar team that is now 1-13 overall and 1-7 in the league.

"This is our most complete game this season," Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said. "The kids played their hearts out. They gave it all they had."

able to go with it the whole game, but we did and it worked."

Too good, as far as Conley is concerned. The Vikings led after the first period, 12-10, only because of Rountree's 25-foot jumper at the buzzer.

The Jaguars, moving the ball inside and hitting from the outside, scored the first nine points of the second period to take a 19-12 lead. Conley, however, managed to cut the lead to three at the half and then scored the first four points of the third period to regain the lead.

The lead went back and forth until, with the score tied at 29-29, the Vikings scored six straight points on two buckets by Tyson and a jumper by Tucker. Conley led at the end of the third period, 38-30, and never trailed again, although the Vikings did cut the deficit to one midway through the final quarter.

Despite the victory, which, coupled with Greene Central's loss to North Lenoir Tuesday night, left Conley one game out of first, Marsh was anything but happy with his team.

"We are not moving the ball and we are not getting any easy shots," he said. "We're not penetrating at all, and that's not taking anything away from Farmville. Shelley Marsh is just not pleased with his team right now."

In the girls' game, Farmville Central's Etta Gorham, Rose Lang and Dana Streeter combined for 40 points as the Jaguars defeated D.H. Conley.

Gorham led the Jaguars with 14 points, 12 of which came in the first half when Farmville rebounded from a 9-8 first period deficit to take a 28-25 lead at intermission. Lang and Streeter both had 13 for Farmville, now 5-7 overall and 3-5 in the league.

The Valkyries, now 7-4 overall and 4-4 in the ECC, were led by Jackie Hansley's 11 points.

"I thought we played real well tonight," Farmville Central coach Hilda Worthington said. "We looked more like a team. Before the holidays we never did have everybody at practice. They were sick or away and we just couldn't all get together."

"But we're beginning to come around now. It's coming."

Leading by three at the half, the Jaguars pushed their advantage to five at the end of the third period, 43-38, thanks to Rose Edmonds' inside play.

Edmonds scored six of her nine points in the quarter.

The Jaguars then blew the game open in the final eight minutes, outscoring Conley, 15-4, to win easily.

"It's just a slow process for this team but it's coming around," Worthington said. "I think we're going to be pretty good before the season's over."

Farmville plays host to Southern Nash while Conley travels to North Lenoir on Friday.

Phillips' Follow Shot Gives Chargers 4th Straight A-G Wins On Last Second Shot

LITTLEFIELD — It wasn't pretty but it was a win. And Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey will take it.

The Chargers, down by four with 1:30 left, rallied to defeat Charles B. Aycock, 53-51, on the strength of Chris Phillips' follow shot at the buzzer. It was the Chargers fourth straight win and left them at 7-6 overall and 5-3 in the league.

Earlier, in the girls' game, C.B. Aycock bombed Ayden-Grifton, 60-31.

"We got off to a real good start but we just have trouble playing with a lead," Murphrey said. "We went flat. It wasn't because we weren't trying, but the harder we tried...well, it just didn't seem to want to go in."

In the end, the baskets did come — and none too soon for A-G. Trailing 51-47 with 1:30 left, Thomas Anderson hit a jumper for two of his team-high 14 points and Timmy Edwards, who had 13 on the evening, tied it up with 58 seconds left on a short jumper.

Moments later the Falcons, now 1-11 and 1-7, were called for traveling. The Chargers then went to their stall and called time out with five seconds left. "I had wanted to get the clock to about 10 seconds and then call time," Murphrey said. "But we let it go a little too far."

Following the time out, the Chargers got the ball to Alan Haseley who missed a jumper but Phillips' follow at the buzzer gave the Ayden-Grifton the win.

"We were fortunate to win," Murphrey said. "We didn't play all that well, but I'll take it (the win)."

The Chargers did play well in the early going, moving out to a 16-4 lead before settling for an 18-9 lead at the end of the first period. Aycock, who was led by Steve Lewis' 20 points, cut it to 24-19 at the half and then took the lead at the end of the third period, 37-35, before seeing the Chargers rally for the win.

Joining Edwards and Anderson in double figures for Ayden-Grifton was Clarence Baker with 13 points.

In the girls' game, Aycock moved ahead, 15-10, after the first period, and led at the half, 29-16. The Lady Falcons continued to add to their lead in the second half before winning by 29.

Cal AD Says No To UVa Position

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Dave Maggard, athletic director at the University of California, has told University of Virginia officials he will remain on the West Coast instead of taking the same post here, a university spokesman said Tuesday.

Maggard was considered the leading candidate for the post of athletic director at Virginia relinquished by Gene Corrigan, now the athletic director at Notre Dame.

Women Break Male Dominance, Now In NCAA

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Women are now a part of the NCAA, breaking 75 years of male domination, but they may never play any athletic contest to surpass the drama and tenseness that surrounded their entry at the association's convention.

Bob Steidel, who committed what turned out to be a fatal strategic error at the moment of the anti-women's programs moment of triumph, will occupy a curious place in the history of the women's movement.

After bitter, emotional debate, and much parliamentary maneuvering, convention delegates Tuesday passed a controversial package of proposals that bring women into the NCAA's governing structure and will give Division I schools the option of sponsoring women's championships.

Women are now guaranteed representation on the NCAA's highest levels. The Council, Executive Committee and steering committees. In addition, their presence will be felt on the committees that negotiate football television contracts, put schools on probation and decide which cities are awarded such financial plums as the basketball championship finals.

Opponents of the NCAA's entry into women's athletics were generally from two camps — the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women and big-time football and basketball schools that are afraid they will end up paying the bill.

After the morning session, the first battle was waged over Proposal 51, dealing with the administrative structure, which needed a two-thirds majority and squeezed past on a 383-168 vote. Then Proposal 53, assuring female representation on committees, was passed.

But the real showdown came on number 72, women's championships in Division I.

Frank Broyles, Arkansas athletic director and former football coach, spoke forcefully against adoption.

"Let me make one thing clear once and for all, we will have no choice in the national championships," he said, noting that AIAW rules prohibit off-campus recruiting. Broyles said thunderously, "Any coach knows he's going to have to meet the competition. If I choose to stay in AIAW, I can't recruit off-campus and I won't have the best players."

"There is no option for any athletic director in this room, believe me, there is no option. You're asking women to join a method of recruiting that has driven men out of coaching. And maybe double the enforcement staff."

Finally, the vote was taken and it wound up a 124-124 tie. A second vote defeated the plan 128-127 and Broyles cut loose with a loud cheer, joined by many others.

Donna Lopiano, AIAW president and women's athletic director at Texas, was outside the ballroom a short time later explaining how Broyles had saved the day when Steidel, one of the leaders against the governance and division proposals, moved for a reconsideration of number 72.

He later explained it was a parliamentary stratagem aimed at putting another bullet in the corpse.

"I just wanted to lock it up," he said. "I've been through these things before when you come in the next day and they vote to change everything."

But in the meantime, Division II and III schools had voted overwhelmingly against rescinding the five women's championships they voted a year ago to sponsor and the entire body had voted for all divisions to sponsor women's championships in fencing, golf and lacrosse.

This meant Division I schools that did have women's teams in those sports would have sent them to Division II or III championships. And while Lopiano and Broyles sat helplessly, the convention voted 137-117 to adopt Division I championships.

"It's going to cost the major football powers," Broyles said. "The money will come from men's football and basketball."

"It's reprehensible," said Lopiano. "They're putting women in the same basket with men."

The Division I championships as well as implementation of the governance plan will begin almost immediately. Judie Holland of UCLA and Linda Estes of New Mexico, two of the handful of beleaguered women who had urged the adoption of women's programs, said they were "delighted."

"I have a lot of respect for the women who fought on the other side," said Holland. "They were very worthy opponents. This is just the first step. We've got a lot of work to do and let's get to it."

Steidel said he was not embarrassed at the turn of events.

"After all, it was democracy, the will of the majority. And we're used to that at Berkeley," he said.

The convention was scheduled to conclude today.

Others garnering votes included golfers Amy Alcott, Joanne Carner, Nancy Lopez-Melton and Donna Caponi, tennis pros Martina Navratilova and Billie Jean King; basketball players Lynette Woodard, Janet Karvonen and Bonnie Buchanan; swimmers Tracy Caulkins, Mary Meagher and Kim Lineham; ice skaters Tai Bablonia and Linda Fratianne; drag racer Shirley Muldowney, skier Anne-Marie Moser-Proell, gymnast Nadia Comaneci and runners Patti Lyons and Julie Shea.

Lloyd began 1980 by losing in the finals of her first two tournaments — to Austin and Navratilova — and was forced to withdraw from the third because of illness.

Then she took a three-month vacation.

"My tennis was fine but my desire for the game was gone," she said. "I felt burnt out. When I took off for those three months, I had lost it."

But when she returned, she came back strong. She won 42 of 43 matches, capturing the Italian, French, Canadian and U.S. Opens. Her only loss was to Goolagong in the finals at Wimbledon.

"This past year has been my best year in tennis," she said. "I guess I was very consistent. And I had to lift my level of tennis. It's harder now to win a tournament than it used to be. The quality is getting better and there are more good players coming up every year. I can't get away with things like I could five years ago."

Chris believes her layoff helped not only her game but her to be named AP Female Athlete of the Year.

Rams Lose First Conference Game

WHEAT SWAMP — The Eastern Carolina Conference race tightened up Tuesday night. Until last night, Greene Central was the league's only team without a loss. In fact, no team had less than two losses in the ECC.

Not anymore. North Lenoir, led by Eugene Conner's 18 points and Isaac Heath's 14, held off a late rally by Greene Central to defeat the Rams, 49-46.

The loss left Greene Central at 11-3 overall and 7-1 in the league. Two other teams are only a game back, D.H. Conley and Southern Nash, both at 6-2. North Lenoir is now 9-5 overall and 5-3 in the league.

"We played well until the fourth quarter," said Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin, whose Rams had several chances in the last minute to regain the lead only to fail. "We got standing around on offense. Everybody was looking at each other and waiting for someone to do something."

The first period ended in a 14-14 tie but the Rams then moved ahead by 10 midway through the period only to go at the half up by two, 28-26. The Rams' lead was still two at the end of the third period (40-38) before the Hawks took the lead in the final eight minutes of play.

Down 47-46 with 23 seconds left, John Ray missed two free throws and then moments later the Rams came up with a steal only to lose it out of bounds.

"We had our chances, we just couldn't come up with it," Godwin said. "That turnover hurt us. Other than the fourth quarter, though, I was pleased with the way we played."

Greene Central was led by Roderick Lane's 14 points and David Joyner's 10.

In the girls' game, North Lenoir, led by Freda Philbeck's 14 points and Sharon Gillette's 13, defeated Greene Central, 44-38. The win left the Lady Hawks at 7-7 overall and 5-3 in the league. The Rams are now 6-8 overall and 3-5 in the ECC.

Lloyd Gets AP Award

Tennis Star Named Women Athlete Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — "I think I taught people a lesson," said Chris Evert Lloyd. "You never can be counted out. If you hang in there and try hard enough, you can still achieve your goals."

One of Lloyd's goals was to be the world's No. 1 tennis player again.

She reached that goal when the Women's Tennis Association computer showed her in the No. 1 spot at the end of 1980. Tuesday, she received another honor. She was named The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year.

"I honestly couldn't believe it," Chris said when told of her selection by the nation's sports writers and broadcasters. "I was really thrilled."

"I knew it would be hard to regain my No. 1 ranking but to be pretty much the No. 1 athlete of all sports. I just never thought it would happen this year because I just think that there are a lot of great women athletes who accomplished something this year."

It was the fourth time the 26-year-old tennis pro has been selected the Female Athlete of the Year. She won the annual award in 1974, 1975 and 1977.

Last year's winner, tennis star Tracy Austin, finished only two votes behind Lloyd, 102-100. Tracy, 18, also finished second to Chris on the WTA computer.

Third with 39 points was Genuine Risk, the first filly to win the Kentucky Derby since Regret did it in 1915. Risk also was the first filly ever to run in all three Triple Crown events, finishing second in both the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, and was the only 3-year-old, regardless of sex, to race in all three last years.

Fourth was basketball star Nancy Lieberman of Old Dominion with 38 votes, followed by distance runner Grete Waitz of Norway, 18; tennis pro Evonne Goolagong of Australia, 13; golfer Beth Daniel, 12; runner Mary Decker, 9; speed skater Beth Heiden, 8; tennis star Andrea Jaeger, 7, and skier Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein, 5.

Others garnering votes included golfers Amy Alcott, Joanne Carner, Nancy Lopez-Melton and Donna Caponi, tennis pros Martina Navratilova and Billie Jean King; basketball players Lynette Woodard, Janet Karvonen and Bonnie Buchanan; swimmers Tracy Caulkins, Mary Meagher and Kim Lineham; ice skaters Tai Bablonia and Linda Fratianne; drag racer Shirley Muldowney, skier Anne-Marie Moser-Proell, gymnast Nadia Comaneci and runners Patti Lyons and Julie Shea.

Panthers Beat S. Nash, 56-49

BETHEL — North Pitt High School swept a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference games from Southern Nash last night, the boys winning, 56-49, and the girls taking a 61-54 decision.

The wins boosted the Panther record to 5-3 in the league and 6-8 overall. The Panthers are now 4-4 in conference play and 7-7 overall.

North Pitt eased out into a 17-14 lead during a hot first period for both teams. The action slowed in the second frame, with the Firebirds managing to cut into the lead slightly, trailing 26-24 at halftime.

North Pitt added one to its lead in the third period, moving ahead, 42-39. Then, in the final quarter, the Panthers outshot the Firebirds, 14-10, to post the win.

Dennis Bradley led North Pitt with 14 points, while Greg Hines added 13 and Gordon Dunn hit 12. Southern Nash was led by Tony Tabron with 15 points.

In the girls' game, Southern Nash gained an 11-8 lead after one period, but North Pitt came back to make it very close at halftime, with the Lady Firebirds still ahead, 29-28. In the third period, however, North Pitt pushed ahead, with a 14-9 margin. That made it 42-38. The Panthers again outshot Southern, 19-16, to hold on for the win.

Jeanette Brown led the Pant-HERS with 20 points, while Patricia Daniels added 12. Dora Harrison paced Southern with 17, with Melissa Morgan adding 15, Betsy Alston hitting 12 and Cynthia Brown, 10.

Southern is now 8-6 overall and 5-3 in the conference (boys) and 6-8, 3-5 (girls).

North Pitt plays host to C.B. Aycock on Friday.

Walton: Foot Not Improving

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Injured San Diego Clipper center Bill Walton says the oft-fractured foot which has sidelined him most of the last three seasons is keeping him in "constant pain" and is showing no signs of improvement.

Yet the former Portland Trail Blazer and UCLA All-American says he hopes to play again for the struggling Clippers without resorting to surgery to repair the crack in the tarsal navicular bone of his left foot.

"I feel terrible. There's lots of pain," Walton said Tuesday. "I try not to think about it. I still hope to play again, but I'm not a whole lot better at all. I can't move around that well."

The 6-foot-11, 225-pound center who led Portland to the National Basketball Association championship in 1976-77 and was the league's most valuable player the following season, said he hasn't played basketball at all lately.

"I can play a little tennis as long as it's a baseline lob type game," Walton said. "I ride my bike a little. I used to be a real active guy. My lifestyle has greatly altered over the last three years."

After signing a guaranteed $3.5 million contract with San Diego in 1979, the highest in NBA history at the time, Walton has sat out all but 14 regular-season games the last two seasons. He is now doing color commentary for UCLA and Dallas Mavericks telecasts.

Walton says his "thinking hasn't changed" on choosing surgery, which some doctors say is Walton's only chance of returning to play for the Clippers who are mired in last place in the Pacific Division with a 19-26 record.

Knights Bomb Grace, 87-31

Ben Haddock and David Hollingsworth both pumped in 26 points to lead Greenville Christian to an easy 87-31 victory over Grace Christian Tuesday night.

The Knights jumped out to a 17-6 lead after the first period and extended that to 35-14 at intermission before coasting home with the victory, their sixth in 12 starts.

Bill Hurst had 14 points for Greenville while John Parnell added 11. Grace was led by Ricky Mills' 16 points.

"The competition wasn't as keen as usual," Greenville coach Dale Thatcher said. "They were pretty good shooters but we out-sized them and took advantage of that inside."

"It's nice to have a win like this, even though it wasn't as close as some of the games we've played this year."

Plunkett: I Thought Of Retiring In '79

OAKLAND (AP) — Jim Plunkett thought about retiring from football in 1979, and he knew his mother would like the idea.

"Four or five years ago she reached the point where she wanted me to stop playing. She was getting tired of visiting me in hospitals," Plunkett said Tuesday, discussing his career and the coming trip to the Super Bowl as starting quarterback for the Oakland Raiders.

"She doesn't ask me about football much, just about whether I got hurt," Plunkett added. "I've had eight operations — three knees, three shoulders and two necks. Some good doctors put me back together."

His mother, Carmen Plunkett, 66, is a widow and lives with one of his sisters, Mary Ann, in nearby San Jose. She is blind, so has followed his career mostly through the words of radio play-by-play announcers Don Klein, Lon Simmons and Bill King.

Klein does the broadcasts for Stanford, where Plunkett ended his college career in 1970 as a Heisman Trophy winner and Rose Bowl hero. Simmons described Plunkett's playing with the San Francisco 49ers. King handles the Raiders' games.

From 1971 to 1975 Plunkett played for the New England Patriots, so his mother heard his play described only occasionally.

"She paces up and down a lot when she's listening to games," says Geneva Grijalva, another of the quarterback's sisters.

Mrs. Plunkett, a widow, hasn't been to one of Jim's games in a few years. Grijalva said a trip to New Orleans and Super Bowl XV is being considered but that a doctor's permission may be necessary since her mother has high blood pressure.

An injury to another quarterback, Dan Pastorini, thrust Plunkett into the role of Oakland's starting quarterback early this season. He had not started a regular season game since 1977, his last year with the 49ers.

"I think it's one of the great stories in pro football," says Coach Tom Flores. "You couldn't put more pressure on a quarterback, asking him to step in when he hadn't started in three years, to face the San Diego Chargers first, then the Pittsburgh Steelers."

"He's taken us to this point, which is a great tribute to a fine gentleman and a great athlete."

The 49ers released Plunkett before the 1978 season began and he signed with the Raiders after considering offers from other teams, including the Green Bay Packers and New York Giants.

Kiffin: House Needs Painting

Wife Bought Carolina Blue Home

By WOODY PEELE
 Reflector Sports Editor

Monte Kiffin admits that he made only one mistake when he came from Arkansas to become the head coach at N.C. State — he let his wife buy their new home.

Kiffin, speaking to the Greenville Sports Club yesterday, said his wife, without any knowledge of what she was doing, went out into a Raleigh suburb and bought a beautiful house — painted Carolina blue.

"Next fall, when we beat Carolina at Raleigh, I'm inviting everyone over for a painting party," he said. "I just hope it's still not Carolina blue 20 years from now."

"One thing's for sure," he added. "If it's still blue 20 years from now, I won't be around to paint it."

Kiffin said that he feels that the Wolfpack came together late in the year during his first season. "After the Penn State game, our seniors really came together as a unit. They set us up to win the last two games. A lot of good things happened to us this year."

But, Kiffin feels, the best is yet to come. "I'm not saying we're going to be 11-0, but we are definitely a team of the future. We have Tol Avery (quarterback) back for two more years, and I think we have a chance to be pretty good next year."

Kiffin outlined a five-point philosophy he carries with him. "I start with discipline. You can't have a program without discipline. You have to have rules. We don't have many, but you better obey them. That means coaches and players. If I call a meeting at 3 p.m., I don't mean 3:01. This is important. You can't have disension if you treat everyone the same."

Kiffin also said he believes in academics. "If you don't care whether a player graduates, you are using and abusing him. I have an obligation to him and his parents to do all I can to see that he graduates."

Another important factor is enthusiasm — something Kiffin seems to have an overabundance of. "Most of my stunts are cleared with the chancellor," he admitted. "You have to have an 'I love it' feeling about football to be successful. I don't want to take the fun out of the game, and enthusiasm will win a couple of games for you every year."

Being positive is another point. "You have to believe in yourself. You can't beat anyone if you don't think you can."

Finally, Kiffin cited unity, love and respect. "You have to have this. Our kids go their own way, of course, but they don't label each other. We're not going to have black militants or white bigots on the team."

Kiffin added he feels that the ACC is a better overall conference than the Big Eight, where he coached at Nebraska. "Of course, there are no Oklahomas or Nebraskas, but UNC looks like it might be headed that way. I certainly hope they're not. Overall, I think the Southwestern is the best conference."

He also said that there are more college football players in high schools in North Carolina than in many other states. "There are 40-50 major college players in the state this year, many of them still uncommitted. Last year, there were only seven or eight in the whole state of Nebraska."

The speaker for the next meeting, on January 27, is Virginia Tech head football coach and athletic director Bill Dooley.

Sipe Named Top Player

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Brian Sipe of the Cleveland Browns was named the National Football League's Most Valuable Player Tuesday by the Pro Football Writers of America.

Sipe, who had the top quarterback ranking in the NFL this season and tossed for more than 300 yards in six games, received the Schick Trophy at a luncheon.

Behind Sipe, the Browns won the American Football Conference Central Division title with a 11-5 record.

Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers won the award the past two years.

Roanoke Girls Capture 12th Straight Victory

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Roanoke High School continued to roll along in the Northeastern Conference last night, taking a pair of games from Roanoke Rapids. The Redskins took their game, 46-40, in a final quarter rally, while the Squaws continued unbeaten, 57-47.

The Roanoke girls, now 12-0 overall and 5-0 in league play, jumped out to a 15-6 lead in the first period and were never headed. Roanoke Rapids did manage a comeback in the second quarter, 16-12, but still trailed, 27-22, at intermission.

Roanoke pulled away again, 15-8, in the third period, building its lead to 42-30. The Yellow Jackets rallied, 17-15, in the final period to no avail.

Sylvia Parker led Roanoke with 17 points, while Wanda Roberson had 15. Roanoke Rapids was led by Sue McClenny, Tina Gay and Audrey Hockaday, each with 10.

Pantego Runs Past Bears

BEAR GRASS — Bruce Peartree tallied 23 points and Greg Sprull added 16 to lead Pantego to an easy 84-47 win over Bear Grass Tuesday night.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Pantego's Sherry Reddick scored 26 points.

Pantego's boys jumped out to 15-11 lead after the first period and then outscored the Bears, 29-6, in the second period to take a 44-15 advantage. From there, the visitors coasted home with the win.

Phil Bunch added 13 for Pantego while Clay Gardner led the Bears with 11 points while William Roberson added 10. Bear Grass is now 4-7 in the league and 6-11 overall.

In the girls' game, Pantego took a 15-6 first-period lead only to see the Lady Bears fight back to trail 24-17 at the break. A 15-8 third period extended Pantego's lead to 39-25 before the visitors went on to win by 13.

Bear Grass, now 2-9 in the conference and 4-13 overall, was led by Angie Mizelle's 20 points.

Tarboro Tops Williamston

TARBORO — Tarboro rolled over Williamston in a pair of Northeastern Conference basketball games last night. The Vikings won the boys game, 79-54, and the Valkyries captured a 41-35 decision in their contest.

In the girls' game, Tarboro moved ahead in the first period, 11-7, and held off a Williamston rally in the second period to hold to a 20-18 halftime lead. In the third period, Tarboro put the game away with a 13-4 margin. That ballooned the lead out to 33-22. Williamston tried to rally, 13-8, but fell short.

Julia Hinton led Tarboro with 13 and was the game's only scorer in double figures.

The loss dropped Williamston to 7-3 overall and 2-2 in league play.

The Tarboro boys shot away to an 18-8 lead in the opening period of their game. Things got no better for the Tigers in the second quarter as the Vikings outthit them, 22-12. That made it 40-20 at the half.

The third period saw Williamston break even, 18-18, to trail 58-38, and Tarboro outthit them again, 21-16, in the final period.

Tony Hyman led Tarboro with 23 points, while Arthur Williams added 20 and Greg Steele had 10. Williamston was led by Chris Peel with 19 and Vincent Washington with 11.

The loss dropped the Tigers to 5-5 overall and 1-3 in the conference.

Rampants Win...

Holley led Bertie with 21 points, while Janet Swain had 12. No one scored in double figures for Rose.

"That second quarter did us in," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "That, and playing away from home." Rose shot only four free throws, while Bertie had 26.

"I had hoped that we could play them even in the second half, but we fell apart again after getting on track briefly in the third period."

Bertie, with only six players dressed, had no foul problems, while Rose had a large number called on it. "I was hoping that we could get them in foul trouble, but it turned out they got us in foul trouble, instead."

The Rampants are now 9-3 overall, with the girls holding down an 0-8 mark. The Rampettes are 0-4 against league competition.

DePaul Back On Track...

Terry Teagle had 24 points and Baylor broke away from Rice's rugged man-to-man defense for a 72-61 decision over the Owls.

Bob Brown scored 19 of his game-high 29 points in the second half to lead Army over Yale 77-62; John Carrabino and Don Fleming scored 12 points apiece to help Harvard beat St. Anselm's 69-49 and Terrell Schlundt scored 18 points and grabbed 11 rebounds while freshman Glenn Rivers scored all his 15 points in the second half to lead Marquette to an 86-67 victory over Memphis State.

Also, Dwayne Tyus drilled in 10 points in the final 90 seconds as Illinois State held off Loyola of Chicago 81-73; Pete Taylor hit 27 points to lead Florida A&M to an 86-73 victory over Jackson State.

Elsewhere in college basketball, Gary Springer scored 35 points, including a jump shot at the final buzzer over overtime, to lead Iona to an 82-80 victory over Wagner;

NCAA Restricts In-Person Recruiting

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — It is not a miracle cure and there will still be violations, but the National Collegiate Athletic Association seems to have made a major move toward reducing wholesale cheating in college football recruiting.

In a significant development at the annual NCAA convention Tuesday, the delegates voted to restrict in-person football recruiting off the college campus to the months of December, January and February, plus additional off-campus evaluation of prospects — but no contact — in May and from Aug. 1-Dec. 1.

College coaching staffs will still fan out to high school games on Friday night, but they can only look, not touch.

In addition, the delegates rejected by a surprisingly wide margin yet another attempt to award athletic scholarships on the basis of financial need, doubled from three to six the number of times a coach may visit a prospect and adopted a "satisfactory prospect" rule to remaining eligible for competition.

The only unhappy people, besides supporters of the "need" legislation, were the Southeastern and Atlantic Coast Conferences and Southern independents who lost their traditional advantageous December date for signing recruits and must conform to the national February date.

The three new visits to a football prospect must take place at his high school with its permission. The legislation is designed to cut down on violations of the so-called accidental "bump" rule which has proved to be unenforceable.

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno called that legislation, as well as the Dec. 1-March 1 recruiting calendar a "big step forward, a good beginning" toward eliminating widespread cheating.

"It's probably one we can live with," he said. "There will still be some violations because a staff probably wants to see a kid once a week. And if your opponent is seeing him once a week, you'll find a way to see him once a week."

Steve Morgan of the NCAA's enforcement staff said a school recruiting a prospect on any of the three new visits would be responsible for having documented permission from the high school.

The nation's major football schools had been afraid that the need issue would finally pass as a cost-cutting measure. Instead, it was rebuffed 148-101 by Division I and 72-47 by Division II. Division III adopted need several years ago.

Under the "progress" rule, an athlete must average at least 12 semester or quarter hours during each previous term in which he was enrolled to maintain his eligibility. The grade point requirement will be determined by the individual institution.

In an effort to eliminate last year's widespread fraudulent-credit scandals, the delegates voted to restrict the use of extension courses at other institutions to establish eligibility.

With their long-time conference signing date on the second Saturday in December a thing of the past, Southern schools will have to get used to signing recruits to both conference and-or national letters of intent on the third Wednesday in February like everyone else.

While the South loses its early signing advantage, it will benefit to some extent in that schools from other parts of the country will not have early access to lists of Southern recruits already signed. However, some top-notch prospects generally wait beyond even the national signing date. Last year, Herschel Walker did not sign with Georgia until April.

Georgia Coach Vince Dooley called the new signing rule "kind of an infringement on our self-determination." And Sam Bailey, Alabama's assistant athletic director, complained that it "extends our recruiting for the year and we don't want the added expense of recruiting for two more months."

"If I were in the SEC or the ACC, I'd be disappointed," Paterno said. "But with the new recruiting calendar, you can't do much before Dec. 1, anyway."

At the same time, off-campus basketball recruiting was limited to the periods from Aug. 1-Oct. 1 and March 1-May 15, with additional no-contact evaluation permitted from June 15-Aug. 1 and Dec. 1-March 1.

The most important piece of football-related legislation due to be considered today before the convention winds up would raise the number to fulltime assistant coaches from eight to nine. The delegates also were to vote on whether to institute a tie-breaker in bowl games.

Jabbar Leads Lakers Past Cavs

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes the Los Angeles Lakers need a little extra incentive. Falling behind by 11 points is just the ticket.

"As a team we play a little better when we know we're in the most crucial part of a game," said Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored four clutch baskets in the fourth quarter as Los Angeles rallied to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-104 Tuesday night. "Maybe we just gear up a little bit extra."

The Lakers trailed 69-58 midway through the third quarter before guard Norm Nixon got them untracked, scoring 15 points in a 4½-minute span as Los Angeles pulled in front by as many as 10 points. Then Abdul-Jabbar took over, hitting four shots in the last four minutes to turn back a Cleveland comeback.

"Nixon played a spectacular game," said Paul Westhead, coach of the Lakers, the defending National Basketball Association champions. "He was literally unstoppable. But ultimately, it was the man (Abdul-Jabbar) who decided the game with his big, late baskets."

Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 29 points and Nixon scored 25. Nixon, who sprained his right ankle Sunday in Detroit, didn't test it until the pregame warmup.

"It took me time to realize I could play on it," he said. "During the second half, I found I could jump on it. So in the third quarter I started going after the shots."

Mavericks 112, Bulls 106

Reserve forward Abdul-Jabbar scored eight points in the first 3:20 of the fourth quarter to help the expansion Mavericks to only their seventh victory of the season.

Bill Robinson scored a season-high 26 points and Tom LaGarde 24 for Dallas, but Jeelani's 16 in the fourth quarter made the difference. The Mavs led by just two points going into the final period, but Jeelani's scoring kept them on top.

Suns 104, Sonics 99

Guard Walter Davis hit two jump shots in the final minute as Phoenix held off Seattle. The Sonics had wiped out a nine-point deficit to draw even with 2:35 to play but were outscored 7-2 after that.

"We got a solid effort at each end of the court," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "Our intensity was as good as it has been in some time."

Len Robinson scored 22 points for Phoenix and ex-Sonic Dennis Johnson added 18. Paul Westphal, who was dealt to Seattle last summer in exchange for Johnson, led the Sonics with 19 points.

Celtics 93, Knicks 89

Boston held New York without a field goal for the final 4:17 and outscored the Knicks 8-3 down the stretch to post its fifth consecutive victory. Larry Bird topped the Celtics with 21 points and also had 11 rebounds and eight assists.

Bucks 119, Pistons 96

Milwaukee outscored Detroit 41-19 in the third period to wipe out an eight-point halftime deficit and hand the Pistons their fifth straight loss. Marques Johnson led Milwaukee with 34 points, including seven late in the third period when the Bucks reeled off 14 in row.

Nuggets 135, Hawks 132

Two free throws apiece by David Thompson and Kiki Vandeweghe in the last 25 seconds gave Denver the victory over Atlanta. Alex English topped the Nuggets with 36 points while John Drew scored 33 for Atlanta.

Use Us To Help Save Energy

STEP ONE

A newspaper log should burn about as long as a wood log. Roll your newspaper log as tight as possible. The tighter it is rolled the better it will burn.

STEP TWO

After you have squeezed it tightly, bind it with a coat hanger or metal wire. Soaking the rolled newspaper in water and letting it dry completely will "season" the newspaper and make it burn more efficiently.

STEP THREE

Finally, stack about six dried newspaper logs in a crisscross to provide more ventilation to the fire and light it. Enjoy.

GED Grads Continue Education

A large percentage of the students who graduated in the GED program at Pitt Community College are continuing their education in curriculum programs. A recent study shows that 202 GED graduates were enrolled in 38 different PCC programs during the fall quarter, 1980. The areas of study most often chosen were electronic data processing, with 28 students, and college transfer with 17.

The GED program at the college is administered by the Learning Center and Joy Sasser is the coordinator.

Ms. Sasser explained that PCC's open door policy is the basic philosophy for providing educational services to the adults of Pitt and surrounding counties. A vital part of these services is the PCC Learning Center, which offers individualized counseling, programming, tutoring and testing. The staff has assisted many prospective PCC students in achieving the academic level necessary to enroll in their selected curriculums.

Sasser added, "The most frequent user of the Learning Center is the high school drop-out who wishes to become a high school graduate. With a specifically designed program, the student prepares for the General Educational Development Test (GED). Upon successful completion of the tests, the student becomes a high school graduate."

Prospective students may enroll in the PCC-GED program at any time.

Area Students On Dean's List

Several area students were named to the dean's list at Atlantic Christian College for the fall semester. To make the dean's list, a student must maintain a 3.2 grade point on a minimum of 12 semester hours.

Those making the dean's list from Greene County include: Stantonsburg, Dalton Blizard, James Cox, Shelia Shingleton, Dorothy Turnage; Snow Hill, Annie Cale, Sarah Taylor; Walstonburg, Cindy Cunningham, Mary Tinea.

Martin County: Robersonville, Pamela Mason; Williamston, Patricia Taylor; Jamesville, Pamela Williams; Pitt County: Ayden, Wesley Beddard; Fountain, Cara Burnette; Farmville, Alan Joyner, David Winborn.

Denomination Not To Be Sued

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — A Montana district court judge has ruled that the United Methodist Church cannot be sued as a denomination in litigation involving the church's Yellowstone conference and the Bozeman Deaconess Foundation.

The church is a "spiritual connection of millions of individual persons" and many organizational units which are "collectively incapable of being sued as a jural entity," said Judge Peter G. Meloy in dismissing the denomination from the suit.

The ruling paralleled the church's contention in a major case on the Pacific Coast involving retirement homes, but that suit was settled out of court last month without a decision on whether the whole denomination could be sued.

In Chicago, Samuel W. Witwer Sr., the church's chief counsel, says the new ruling is of great importance because the California settlement had left the issue in doubt and the church vulnerable to an array of lawsuits.

DEAN'S LIST
BOONE — Terri Lynn Wade of Snow Hill and David Kent Holley of Greenville were among 1,227 students who made the dean's list at Appalachian State University for the fall semester.

Wade resides at Rt. 3, Snow Hill and is a special education major. Holley resides at 2912 Rose St. and is a freshman at ASU.

N.C. Votes On Record In Congress

Roll Call Report Service WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes at the opening of the 97th Congress. There were no Senate votes.

COMMITTEE RATIOS — By a vote of 180 for and 220 against, the House turned back a GOP effort to put more Republicans on such key committees as Ways and Means, the tax-writing panel, and Rules, the committee with life-or-death control over pending bills. Overall, Republicans wanted ratios on all committees to better reflect the increased GOP strength in the House. The Democrat-to-Republican ratio in the 97th Congress is 56-44, down from 63-37 in the 96th. The vote came during debate on a measure (H Res 5) laying down House rules for the 97th Congress.

Supporter Henson Moore, R-La., said "the Ways and Means Committee is being stacked...by a philosophical minority in this house...the very same people who were repudiated by the American people on Nov. 4..."

Opponent Jim Wright, D-Tex., said: "Just as the American people choose to select a Republican to sit in the White House, just so have the American people chosen a Democratic majority to exercise leadership in the House." Members voting "yea" wanted more Republicans on key committees.

Reps. James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.C. Hefner, D-8, voted "nay."

Rep. Ike Andrews, D-4, and Eugene Johnston, R-6, did not vote.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING — The House voted 216 for and 179 against to block consideration of additional House rules for the 97th Congress. Turned aside by the vote were proposals to limit federal outlays to a percentage of the Gross National Product (22.5 percent of GNP in fiscal 1982, for example), and to give the Budget Committee rather than the Rules Committee jurisdiction to police the congressional budget process; supporters said the Budget Committee would be more tightfisted. The vote came during debate on H Res 5 (see preceding vote).

Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., who was in favor of blocking consideration, said it was "premature" for the House to take up the measure limiting spending to a percentage of GNP. He promised a House vote on the proposal later in the year.

Opponent Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the House should "demonstrate to the American people at the outset of this new Congress that we are deadly serious about righting the devastated economy and assisting our new president in bringing government spending under control."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to the additions to House rules.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Neal, Rose and Hefner voted "yea."

Johnston, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay." Andrews did not vote.

Eastern Moose To Meet Here

The Greenville Moose Lodge will host the Winter Ceremonial of Enoca Legion No. 60, Legion of the Moose on Saturday and Sunday.

The ceremonial will honor Deputy Grand Moose of N.C. John Swann, of Spruce Pine. Swann has held lodge, district, and state offices as well as recipient of the fraternity's highest award. Legion members from most of the lodges east of Raleigh are expected to be on hand for the ceremonial.

VICE CHAIRMAN? PEKING (AP) — Chinese Chairman Hua Guofeng is likely to be named a vice chairman after he is forced to resign the top job at the next Central Committee meeting, diplomatic sources say.

U.S. Airlines Undercut With Deregulation

By TED CHAN
HONG KONG (UPI) — The All-American features of George Doubleday grow taut and flustered when he talks of his Asian airline competitors.

"We have a special two-for-one ticket promotion campaign and they accuse us of upsetting the price market," growls Doubleday, the Pan American World Airways district manager.

"I agree with them," he says throwing up his hands in surrender. "But we have to do something to stay competitive. We can't just give up."

Bowing out entirely or partially is exactly what the American airlines have been forced to do in a burgeoning trans-Pacific air war with Asia's national flag carriers.

Continental Airlines made an initial thrust, but then decided to completely scrap its efforts toward the Far East by the end of 1979. Braniff International also pulled out of the market in 1980, while well-established Pan Am terminated its Osaka, Japan, to Los Angeles route.

Rising fuel and operating costs partly were to blame, but the intensive competition with Asian carriers wagging cheap tickets caused low passenger turnouts that hurt the U.S. carriers.

President Carter and Congress lit the fuse in 1977 when they deregulated government controls over airline operations within, and to and from, the United States.

Since then, Singapore Airlines and Thai Airways International have joined the trans-Pacific pack. It already included flag carriers from South Korea, Japan, Taiwan and the Philippines for a weekly total of more than 100 flights.

Even China's infant airline, CAAC, is poised to fly to the United States in 1981. Hong Kong's Cathay Pacific Airways is expected to make a bid for a destination on either the Canadian or American West Coast. Industry observers say it is only a matter of time before Malaysia and Indonesia consider sending their flagships into the fray.

Undeterred by deficits or modest profits, the Asian airlines are plunging toward the United States determined to take advantage of Carter's "Open Skies" policy.

But even the Asian carriers recognize the danger of overcapacity, of flights exceeding demand.

"It's a buyer's market," said Doubleday. "The seat sales are like a bargain basement. The Pacific traditionally was profit-making, but with competition, overcapacity, and decrease in market it has become non-profitable. Pacific ticket rates are about a year behind, but there's too much competition to raise prices."

China Airlines of Taiwan is one example. It costs $350,000 for the airline to send one of its red, white and blue 747s round trip to the U.S. West Coast. That means a 90 percent passenger occupancy rate with economy class passengers paying the full rate of $1,200.

But to be competitive, tickets are sold at $800 to $900. Despite the loss, China Airlines says it will maintain service to the United States because the route is its most important.

That brings up another factor cited by air industry observers: nationalism.

For developing nations, one travel agent said, "showing their flag on the tail of a national carrier is very important. That means instant international recognition and some prestige. Why else would small or poor nations have fleets of 747s and DC10s they don't need themselves?"

Connections with the government also is mentioned when U.S. and Asian airlines are compared. The Singapore and Thai airlines are owned entirely by their governments while the Philippine government has a 95 percent ownership in Philippine Air Lines.

Japan Air Lines, by far the largest Asian carrier, is 40 percent government owned; China Airlines is tied closely with the nation's military, as is Indonesia's Garuda Airways.

"Their ties with the government let them take business risks and reduce operating costs," says Doubleday. "We put 12 stewardesses on a 747, but they can kill us with service because they have 20. And the expense may still be lower because they don't have union wages like ours."

The Asian airlines dismiss or downgrade any advantage acquired through government connections and emphasize they are still private companies looking at a potentially sound American market.

Overseas visitors to the United States probably will outnumber Americans traveling abroad in 1980, according to projections by travel associations.

Hoping that the trend will continue in the 1980s, the Asian flagships are seeking even greater penetration into the United States.

There is a recognized saturation of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, which prompted Thai Airways International to open a route to Dallas.

The Thai airline says it is losing money, but feels confident it has pioneered an untapped destination point for travelers from Asia.

Philippine Air Lines, which makes a healthy profit flying the central Pacific route through Honolulu instead of going through Tokyo as do most airlines, has increased its flights to Los Angeles.

Pan Am retailed with more flights of its own, even though it said it already was losing money on the route. Northwest Orient may fall in line for competition's sake.

Trans World Airlines, having pulled out of Asian service in 1972, began a Frankfurt to Bombay, India, flight in December. It is seen as the first step in resuming Far East service.

Japanese officials, reeling at the number of airlines already pouring through Tokyo, are resisting plans by United Airlines to begin a Seattle-Tokyo flight. Japan first wants to renegotiate its 1952 air agreement with Washington.

The glut of airlines does not bother the upstarts. "We like to get into the melee, we like to tumble with the giants and believe in free competition," said a Singapore Airlines spokesman.

One New Name In Grammy List

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand and newcomer Christopher Cross led the way as the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences announced a fairly middle-of-the-road list of major Grammy nominees today.

Sinatra's "Trilogy: Past, Present & Future" won album of the year and best album nominations, with the single, "Theme from New York, New York," gathering record of the year, song of the year, best male pop vocal and best arrangement accompanying vocalist nominations.

Miss Streisand's "Guilty," produced by Bee Gee Barry Gibb and fellow Bee Gee producers Alby Galuten and Karl Richardson, was nominated for album of the year, and its "Woman in Love" single was nominated for record of the year, song of the year and best female pop vocal performance.

Miss Streisand's duet with Barry Gibb, "Guilty," also was nominated for best pop vocal performance by a duo or group.

Christopher Cross, a previously unknown Texan whose debut album, "Christopher Cross," has spawned several hit songs, earned nominations for album of the year, best male pop vocal performance and best engineered recording.

His dreamy single, "Sailing," was nominated for record of the year, song of the year and best arrangement accompanying a vocalist, and Cross himself was nominated as best new artist.

Cross' producer, Michael Omartian, also was nominated as producer of the year.

Other nominees in major categories included: Bette Midler, whose "The Rose" earned record of the year, song of the year and best female pop vocal performance nominations; Kenny Rogers, whose "Lady" received nominations for record of the year, song of the year, best male pop vocal performance and — with Kim Carnes on "Don't Fall in Love with a Dreamer" — best pop vocal performance by a duo or group.

Billy Joel, who has won four Grammys in the last two years — including last year's prestigious album of the year award — was nominated for album of the year and best rock vocal performance for "Glass Houses," and Joel's long-time producer Phil Ramone was nominated as producer of the year.

The only rock ensemble to be represented in a major category was Pink Floyd, whose "The Wall" was nominated as album of the year, best vocal rock performance and best engineered recording.

The soundtrack album to the film "Fame," which was nominated as best album written for a motion picture or television special, also yielded up a song of the year nomination for its title single and a best new artist nomination for Irene Cara, who was also nominated for best female pop vocal performance.

Other best new artist nominees were: Robbie Dupree, Amy Holland and the Pretenders, a new-wave rock band.

Even in rock categories the nominations for the most part were fairly conservative, with few new faces among the nominees.

An exception was the Pretenders, who in addition to their best new artist nomination also earned mention for best vocal performance for "Brass in Pocket" and best instrumental for "Space Invader."

The best female rock vocal nominees were Marianne Faithfull, Pat Benatar, Grace Slick, Joan Armatrading and Linda Ronstadt. Their male counterparts were Jackson Browne, Paul McCartney, Bruce Springsteen, Billy Joel and Kenny Loggins.

The best group vocal nominees were Bob Seger & The Silver Bullet Band, Queen, the Pretenders, Blondie and Pink Floyd.

John Williams, whose soundtracks for "Star Wars," "Close Encounters of the Same Kind" and "Superman" have been Grammy winners in years past, earned another slew of nominations for "The Empire Strikes Back," the popular "Star Wars" sequel.

In addition to best film soundtrack album, Williams won three best instrumental

'Dallas' And CBS Out Front In Nielsen Race

NEW YORK (AP) — With "Dallas" on top for the eighth time in 10 weeks, CBS was a clear-cut winner in the networks' prime-time ratings competition, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

CBS' margin of victory in the week ending Jan. 11 was slightly better than two points, 20.5 to 18.4 for runner-up NBC and 18.3 for ABC. A huge audience for "Dallas" contributed to the gap.

The networks say CBS' rating means that in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20.5 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to the No. 1 network.

CBS now has been first or tied for first six weeks in a row, while NBC's No. 2 finish was the network's second straight after nine consecutive weeks in the ratings cellar.

The rating for "Dallas," which until three weeks ago had spent seven weeks as the No. 1 program, was 33.9, nearly four points higher than the score for the runner-up show, the American Football Conference championship between Oakland and San Diego on NBC.

Nielsen says the rating means of all the TV-equipped homes in the country, 33.9 percent saw at least part of "Dallas."

The highest-rated of the season's new series was "Too Close for Comfort" on ABC, in 17th place, with CBS' "Magnum, P.I." 23rd and "Flamingo Road" from NBC 24th.

Of the week's five lowest-rated programs, four were from new series and one was a special. ABC's "Breaking Away" was 64th, followed by "Freebie and the Bean" on CBS, a movie, "Momma the Detective" on NBC, CBS' "Secrets of Midland Heights" and "NBC Magazine with David Brinkley."

CBS and ABC maintain the 1980-81 season began Oct. 27, and CBS' average rating for the period is 20 to 18.3 for ABC and 16.6 for NBC. NBC argues the season started Sept. 15, despite the actors' strike, and by that standard, it's CBS 18.7, NBC 18, ABC 17.9.

PIRACY RAMPANT
KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Fifty percent of all refugee boats leaving Vietnam are attacked by pirates, and governments in the region must take measures to protect the refugees, a representative of the International Committee of the Red Cross says.

Karen Valentine Returns To TV

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Karen Valentine, the Emmy Award winner from "Room 222," returns to television to star in "Skeezzer" for Marble Arch Productions.

"Skeezzer" is the true story of a mongrel dog who became a "canine co-therapist" helping emotionally disturbed children to learn to love and relate to others.

Karen will portray Skeezzer's owner, a nurse-therapist in the two-hour movie which is based on Elizabeth Yates' nonfiction book, "Skeezzer: Dog With a Mission."

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — POE'S POETRY AND PROSE STAND ANY TEST.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: M equals L.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Frostbite Is Preventable

There is a tendency to minimize the importance of frostbite. Yet this unhappy result of overexposure to freezing temperatures can produce serious injury.

The use of simple precautions and the recognition of early symptoms of frostbite can prevent long and painful periods of unnecessary illness and incapacitation.

The first sign of frostbite is usually a persistent "pins and needles" sensation of the tips of the fingers, the toes, the earlobes or the nose. Numbness and skin pallor next become noticeable. Strangely, the pale, blanched skin later turns a bluish-red.

Frostbite is preventable. Warm clothing (preferably worn in several layers), warm, dry, insulated socks and gloves and waterproof shoes must be worn by anyone who is subjected to severely cold temperatures. Clothing and shoes should not be so tight that they restrict blood circulation.

An excellent suggestion for motorists is to carry an extra supply of heavy clothing and warm overshoes in their automobiles in case "hiking" to a garage for assistance should become necessary.

If you suspect that someone has frostbite, bring him indoors to a warm room. Do not rub or massage the frozen part of the body too vigorously. Gentle thawing is recommended. This can be done by immersing the frostbitten area in tepid or cool water.

Ice or snow should not be applied to a frozen arm or leg.

This further interferes with the important thawing-out process. Remember, too, that a frostbitten leg or arm is less sensitive than a normal one. Bathing in hot water can cause severe burns.

Prompt medical attention with antibiotics, anticoagulants, and other drugs — under the supervision of a doctor or paramedic — can prevent infection, which is a frequent complication of frostbite.

Preparation for cold weather — and the prevention of frostbite — does not take exacting judgment. It merely requires sensible anticipation of temperature changes that can spell the difference between comfort and possible danger to life and limbs.

Time may change the "infinite variety" of superstitions and myths about medicine, but some emerge unscathed.

"Catarrh, biliousness, acid indigestion, thin blood, and dyspepsia" have withstood the onslaught of modern knowledge. They still remain fixed as definite descriptions of indefinite symptoms.

As long as these imprecise titles survive, the underlying disease may continue to flourish without any diagnosis, treatment or cure. Such obscure terms for obscure symptoms hide the underlying causes and interfere with the return of complete health.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

the suit broke evenly, the long diamond could be established for a spade discard. To take advantage of that, the ten of hearts would have to be retained in dummy.

After ruffing the club, declarer drew only one round of trumps before leading the ace of diamonds and another. East won and returned a trump in an effort to cut declarer off from the table. Declarer won in hand and led his last diamond. When the suit split evenly, dummy's long diamond was established and the ten of hearts was still there as a means of reaching it for a discard.

An even split in diamonds is considerably against the odds but declarer gave up nothing by trying for it. Had the suit not behaved in a friendly fashion, declarer always could have fallen back on the spade finesse.

There is a similarity between bridge and prospecting. You never know what wealth can be concealed beneath the bleakest exteriors.

South's jump to four hearts at his second turn is fully in keeping with modern theory. Though opening two-bids in a suit are forcing, the bidding can stop short of game if, after a negative response of two no trump, opener does no more than simply rebid his suit at the three-level. Responder then has the right to pass if his hand is completely trickless. Here, South needed so little to make game that he was not prepared to risk his partner passing three hearts.

West attacked with the king and ace of clubs. Declarer ruffed the second round, and a cursory analysis of his prospects suggested that the fate of the contract hinged on the spade finesse. Dummy's ten of hearts would provide the entry for the finesse. As you can see, that line was doomed to failure.

A deeper study revealed that there was a hidden asset on the table that would give declarer an extra chance—dummy's fourth diamond. If

WILSON ACRES

Passive Solar Design "The Most Apartment For Your Rental Dollar"

The "true" cost of your apartment each month includes not only rent but also your monthly utilities. Wilson Acres Apartments are Greenville's newest. Because of energy saving design features such as heat pumps, thermal pane glass, insulated doors and extra insulation throughout, your monthly utility bill will be considerably less than most apartments in Greenville.

Add your monthly rent at Wilson Acres to your greatly reduced monthly utility bill at Wilson Acres and we think it's the most apartment for your rental dollar.

New 2 bedroom apartments. ENERGY EFFICIENT with washer/dryer hook-ups, dishwasher, frost-free refrigerator, self-cleaning oven, Cable TV hook-ups, heat pumps, tennis, pool, saunas, laundry and club house facilities, ample parking, 3 blocks from ECU, $295 per month.

When you're looking for living affordably, can you afford not to look at the energy efficient townhouses at Wilson Acres? 752-0277 evenings 6-10 p.m. and weekends call 756-2766.

Insurance Overpayment Recovered

RALEIGH — The N. C. Employment Security Commission recovered $149,261.64 in unemployment insurance overpayments during the month of December, 1980, according to figures in a report released by the commission's anti-fraud unit.

The unit investigated 161 persons who have claimed or currently are claiming unemployment insurance benefits.

Of that number, 98, or 61 percent, were found to have been overpaid $34,179. The commission classified 65 of those cases, representing $10,819, as non-fraud and 33, representing $23,360, as fraud.

During December, 22 persons were tried in state courts for unemployment insurance fraud and 21, or 95 percent, of them were convicted.

Of the overpayments recovered, $33,105.54 was recovered through refunds to the commission and $116,156.10 was recovered by withholding new benefits to claimants who had been overpaid.

In Pitt County, one case of fraud in the amount of $946.00 was tried, with the person convicted. Henry Byrne is the fraud investigator of the Greenville Employment Security Commission office.

Society To Have Meet

The Eastern North Carolina Section of the American Chemical Society will hold its regular dinner meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 21 at the Three Steers Restaurant here.

Speaker for the meeting will be Dr. Frank Etzler, who recently joined the Chemistry Department faculty at East Carolina University. Etzler will speak on "A Possible Role for Vicinal Water in Biology."

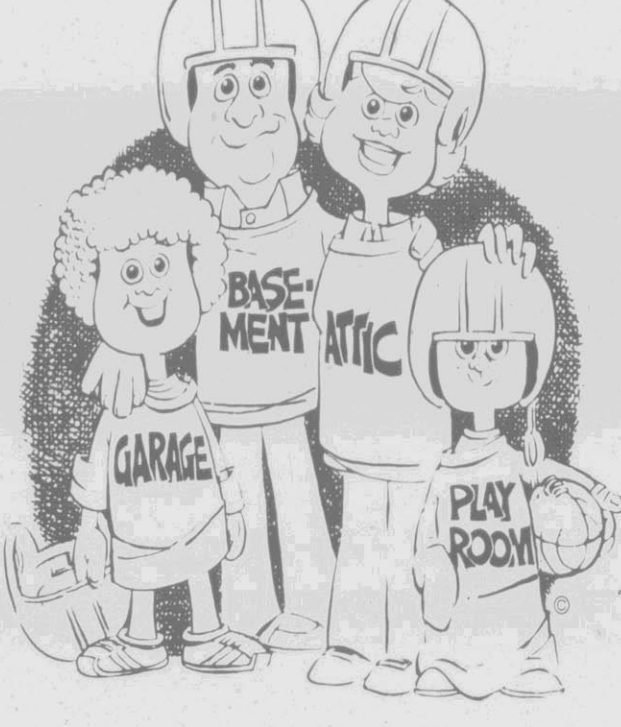

A social hour will begin at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m. and the business meeting at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

TIGERS ACTIVE
JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Tigers displaced by a jungle-clearing project have killed 14 people and seriously injured two in West Sumatra in the past few months, officials say.

RIVER FROZEN — The record-breaking cold temperatures that have hit Connecticut this winter has frozen the Connecticut River. The U.S. Coast Guard says they have sent a tug up the river several times to break a channel through the ice. This is the view in Middletown, Conn. (AP Laserphoto)

Drought Is Taking Toll In Colorado

By JOE WHEELAN
Associated Press Writer
BRIGHTON, Colo. (AP)—
John Ehler rubbed his cheek and sighed as he bent over the green stubble growing in his furrowed wheat field.

"If we get some wind, we could lose the whole country," he said as he fingered a clod of dirt that refused to break.

Ehler, 49, a third-generation farmer on the eastern Colorado plains, was surveying what would have been a carpet of 4-inch-high winter wheat in a normal year. In a strange Colorado winter of shirt-sleeve weather days, however, it takes a close look to spot the beginnings of wheat in Ehler's dun-colored fields.

It is not a disaster yet, but danger is mounting for ski resort operators, farmers and possibly even cities like Denver, which is breaking winter water-use records as homeowners try to keep trees and shrubs healthy.

Nolan Doesken, assistant state climatologist at Colorado State University, said 5.12 inches of rain and snow fell in Colorado's central mountains between October and December, down from the average of 8.82 inches. Runoff from the high country snowpack provides most of Colorado's water.

Considering that 26.24 inches of precipitation usually falls between October and May in the mountains, the 3.7-inch shortfall at the end of December does not seem like much, Doesken said, but added, "If the mountains go another month, then it will get tough making up deficits."

Colorado resort operators are now worried a major snow drought may be in the offing. Most of the mountain resorts are surviving on man-made snow and long-made reservations, but the year-end holidays were a near disaster. Two Colorado ski areas have closed for lack of snow, and many are trying to stay open with 18 to 24 inches of snow instead of the 3 to 4 feet they normally have in January.

On the plains, farmers are taking advantage of the warm, dry weather to work on equipment, but many say they're feeling a bit panicky because there may not be enough water for spring and summer crops. Winter wheat farmers, who plant in the late summer or early fall and harvest in the next summer, need rain or snow soon to thwart the crisis taking shape.

On Ehler's farm, where the Rockies' shadowy peaks are visible through a smoky-blue haze, only 60 percent of the winter wheat crop of 1,500 acres has sprouted, for example. Ehler expects he will have to replant 450 acres this spring — if it rains. The last time it rained here was May 18 of last year, Ehler said. "I don't think 1976 was as bad as this," he added.

In the winter of 1976-1977, the situation was much the same as it is this year in Colorado — farmers waiting for rain and ski resort operators praying for snow to cover their patchy slopes.

The snow did not come that winter. Business on Colorado ski slopes dropped 38 percent, and resort areas and businesses wholly dependent on skiing reported losses of $78 million.

Agriculture losses were put at $120 million, and some 3 million acres of parched plains suffered serious wind erosion.

This year, there is still time for farmers to salvage their winter wheat — eastern Colorado's big cash crop — and for resort operators to have a good year. The hope of both is for a lot of moisture, and soon.

But the National Weather Service does not hold out much hope. A high pressure ridge parked over Utah and Idaho is pushing storms north of the Rocky Mountain region, said forecaster Dug Baugh. He said the ridge shows no sign of breaking up, which could signal major troubles for farmers who irrigate in the spring and summer.

Like many Colorado farmers, Ehler said his reservoirs are in good shape now, "but the subsoil being so dry, it won't go far." He said that if conditions do not improve, he will have to plant some grain crop other than his usual spring crop of corn, which requires a relatively high amount of water.

Soviet Airs Concern On

Birth Decline

By VERONIKA MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — In a new attempt to reverse the Soviet Union's falling birthrate, women are being told that unwed motherhood "may bring greater joy than marriage" and that they should not "abuse" their right to abortions.

Boris Uralis, a leading Soviet demographer, expressed concern this month over the country's high abortion rate in the popular newspaper, Nedelya. He claimed that only a family with three children has reached "the normal size."

In the Soviet Union, abortions are available on demand to any woman over 18. Neither Uralis nor any official Soviet statistics have specified the abortion rate, but according to an estimate made in 1976 by the United Nations Population Council, the Soviet Union has the highest abortion rate in the world.

The U.N. council estimated that 10 million abortions are performed each year in the Soviet Union, a rate of 180 per 1,000 women aged 15 to 44.

By comparison, the rate of abortions for American women in the same age group is 22.2 per 1,000, according to 1977 figures from the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Uralis did not directly challenge women's legal right to abortions, but he stressed that women should not "abuse" this right because they might regret it later. The demographer said that abortions may not only harm women's health but are also a "blow to the economy, to future labor resources."

Referring to single women, Uralis stopped short of openly urging them to have babies out of wedlock. But he said lowering the rate of abortions in this group "is very important" because in this way a woman "might find personal happiness and the demographic situation in our country might improve."

Three years ago another Soviet demographer, Leonid Zhukhovitsky, recommended that single women who had "lost hope of obtaining a husband" should make a deliberate decision to have babies out of wedlock to promote their own happiness and the country's birthrate.

This proposal in the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta caused a heated discussion at the time. One female critic denounced the idea, saying, "Neither the women nor their children can be happy in such a situation."

Uralis stressed that he was not advocating an increase in single parent families. Unmarried mothers should, however, get maximum attention and financial support, he said, because "they do something great. They foster citizens."

Mainly due to the ravages of World War II and a higher death rate among men, there is a large number of single women in the Soviet Union, Uralis noted. The 1980 Soviet census shows 17.6 million more women than men in the country, whose total population is 262 million.

Single women, Uralis said, should know that "motherhood sometimes brings greater joy than marriage, especially if a marriage is not based on love and respect."

Uralis also noted the "necessity of helping couples avoid an unwanted pregnancy."

"More effective (birth control) devices are needed," he said.

Referring to France, where "90 percent of married couples calmly plan their number of children, thanks to contraceptives," Uralis said that in this respect "there remains a lot to be done" in the Soviet Union.

Contraceptive devices are still in short supply in the Soviet Union, and many women tend to be suspicious of them.

The falling Soviet birthrate has caused growing concern in the past few years. In 1979, ethnic Russians comprised 52.4 percent of the Soviet Union's populace, down from 54.6 percent in a 1959 census.

While birthrates have been falling in the Russian Republic, the number of births is increasing in the predominantly Moslem republic of Soviet Central Asia.
