General Assembly Hears A Parting Farewell Gov. Hunt's Wish List In His Speech Tonight

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina General Assembly, after officially opening its long 1981 session, prepared to hear Gov. Jim Hunt present his legislative wish-list tonight.

In one of its first actions the Legislature adopted a resolution inviting Hunt to deliver his state of the state address — including his budget recommendations — to a joint session of the Legislature at 7 p.m. The speech will be televised by the University of North Carolina television network.

Leaders in both the House and Senate opened the 134th session Wednesday, urging members to be frugal with state money but remain compassionate with the state's needy people. Sources close to the governor expect Hunt to express the same desires in his address, and to maintain the same themes that he brought out in his inaugural speech.

Hunt is expected to set the tone for cooperation between his administration and the Legislature by setting his objectives and policies and explaining the government's attitude toward its people. He also is expected to ask the legislative body to recognize its responsibility to be sensitive to economic problems of the people but to continue economic growth.

The two pet items on his budgetary wish-list are money to reduce class size at the public schools' elementary level, and $24 million for a microelectronics center.

But while the governor may be seeking cooperation, one of the Legislature's committees set the state for a confrontation between the legislative and executive branches even before the General Assembly formally convened. The committee accepted a controversial report that would extend to the legislative branch a new power to delay regulations imposed by departments of the executive branch.

While there are 11 new senators, there were no major leadership changes in evidence. But in the House, it was a different story. As expected Rep. Lison Ramsey, D-Marshall, officially was elected speaker of the House, a position he has long sought.

Almost immediately Ramsey began installing his own people in key committee chairmanships. He also announced appointments of the major money committees that will consider the perennial budget problems and the deepening troubles of the state's highway program. In addition, Ramsey said he was creating several new committees, including for the first time ever a standing

House committee on ethics to replace a special select committee on ethics in the last session.

But Ramsey was careful to remind the legislators to keep a close eye on the state's purse strings.

"This General Assembly should direct its efforts toward eliminating empty minds, empty stomachs and empty pockets," Ramsey said after being sworn in as speaker as an overflow crowd of family members and visitors looked on.

He emphasized the legislators have an obligation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A somber President Carter, looking ahead to life as a "fellow citizen of the world," is pledging to spend his waning days in office trying to bring the American hostages home from Iran and is vowing to support Ronald Reagan "to the very limits of conscience and conviction."

In a nationally broadcast farewell address Wednesday night, Carter said three critical tasks will outlive his presidency: preventing nuclear holocaust, promoting human rights around the world and protecting the environment.

He never mentioned the economy, one of the key issues that made him a one-term president, and spoke only briefly of the American hostages whose captivity in Iran haunted his last year in the White House.

"I will continue as I have during the past 14 months to work hard and to pray for the lives and the well-being of the American hostages in Iran," Carter said. "I can't predict yet what will happen, but I hope you will join me in my constant prayer for their freedom."

Seated in front of his desk in the Oval Office, Carter did not mention Reagan by name. But he said he understood "as few others can how formidable is the task the president-elect is about to undertake."

"To the very limits of conscience and conviction, I pledge to support him in that task," Carter said. "I wish him success and Godspeed."

Ignoring his landslide defeat last Nov. 4, Carter extended his "deepest thanks" to the American people "because you gave me this extraordinary opportunity to serve."

Then, in the only portion of the 20-minute speech that bordered on emotion, the president closed by saying: "From the bottom of my heart, I want to express to you the gratitude I feel. Thank you, fellow citizens, and farewell."

Carter himself spent a lot of time writing the speech, and most of it was devoted to three themes of his presidency: nuclear proliferation, human rights and the environment.

He said: "I want to lay aside my role as leader of one nation and speak to you as a fellow citizen of the world about three ... issues: the threat of nuclear destruction; our stewardship of the physical resources of our planet; and the preeminence of the basic rights of human beings."

In what may have been a special message to the 40th president, the 39th president warned that an "uneasy era ... is likely to endure for the rest of this century. ... a period of tensions within nations and between nations — of competition for scarce resources, social, political and economic stresses and strains."

"During this period, we may be tempted to abandon some of the time-honored principles and commitments which have been proven under the difficult times of past generations," Carter said. "We must never yield to this temptation. Our American values are not luxuries but necessities."

In the 35 years since the first atomic bomb fell, Carter said,

FAREWELL — President Carter waves goodbye to press photographers in the Oval Office of the White House Wednesday night just before giving the nation his farewell address. (AP Laserphoto)

"The risk of a nuclear conflagration has not lessened. It has not happened yet, thank God, but that can give us little comfort — for it only has to happen once."

He warned that the danger "is becoming greater. As the arsenals of the superpowers grow in size and sophistication and as other governments acquire these weapons, it may only be a matter of time before madness, desperation, greed or miscalculation lets loose this terrible force."

The president made no reference to the SALT II treaty that he supports and Reagan opposes, but he declared that "there is no disagreement on the goals or the basic approach to controlling this enormous destructive force." He said reducing the nuclear danger "has been a concern of every American president since the moment we first saw what these weapons could do."

Administration Raising Hopes Over Hostages

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, encouraged that a breakthrough may be imminent in the long hostage stalemate, says it is willing to negotiate with Iran right up to the day Ronald Reagan takes office.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said Wednesday that Friday won't be the deadline after all for Iran to reach an agreement with the outgoing administration.

"The real deadline is the 20th, not the 16th," Muskie said, referring to Jan. 20, the date Reagan will be inaugurated as president.

And President Carter, in his farewell address to the nation Wednesday night, vowed to spend his last days in office trying to bring the 52 hostages home.

"I will continue as I have during the past 14 months to work and pray for the lives and the well-being of the American hostages held in Iran," Carter said. "I can't predict yet what will happen."

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said today that there are hopeful signs. But he added:

"The hopeful signs ... have been there before. Unfortunately, always before, they've never led to anything productive."

Powell, asked on ABC-TV's Good Morning America about the possibility that Islamic hardliners in Iran could "shoot things down," replied that "there are all sorts of possibilities, most of them bad."

The State Department, after 14 months of refusing to characterize prospects for a settlement, issued a guardedly optimistic statement Wednesday for the second day in a row.

Muskie, in Augusta, Maine, when asked about the status of negotiations, said, "Oh, yes, there's been progress."

Muskie said the issue hinges on whether the amount of Iranian assets the United States can make immediately available to Iran is sufficient and "whether or not we can put in motion a procedure for clearing the remainder."

Other officials, who asked not to be identified, said the administration expects a reply shortly from Iran on the latest U.S. proposals.

U.S. negotiators had told Iran that Friday, Jan. 16, would be the last practical day to strike a deal with the Carter administration.

It is unclear what would happen if Friday passed without agreement, but Muskie's comments indicated flexibility.

Other officials have said if a breakthrough is near on Inauguration Day, they assume Reagan simply will pick up where Carter left off. Reagan has said he will review all options if he inherits the crisis.

The president-elect, asked about the hostage situation as he arrived in Washington on Wednesday to await his inauguration, said, "I think there is reason to be optimistic. I think we all are."

The latest U.S. proposals, outlining an installment plan for returning Iran's frozen assets, have been under study in Iran since Jan. 2.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher has been in Algiers for the past week answering Iranian questions about the offer.

The questions, officials said, indicate Iran believes the American terms are a reasonable basis for negotiations.

Moreover, there has been no hint thus far that hardline Iranian clerics, many of whom oppose any compromise with Washington, will attempt to scuttle the negotiations.

The major source of encouragement Wednesday was the Iranian Parliament's approval of an emergency bill authorizing a third country, probably Algeria, to arbitrate financial differences between the United States and Iran.

Christopher authorized State Department spokesman John Trattner to say the parliamentary action "seems a step in the right direction" that he hopes "will enable Iran to act on the important differences which remain."

Trattner, asked if release of the hostages was imminent, said: "We still have the same fundamental questions that remain unresolved. ... I can't talk of imminence unless and until those problems are resolved."

The parliament postponed until Sunday action on a proposal to nationalize the wealth of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his relatives, but U.S. officials said the postponement has no bearing on immediate prospects for a settlement.

Offer Of Free Use For Land Is Accepted By Commission

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Acceptance of the offer of free use of a ten-acre tract of land for recreational purposes was approved by members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission at its January meeting Monday night.

The vacant tract, located at the southwest corner of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road, is the property of W. E. (Bill) Dansey, who in offering the land for use by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission, noted he feels having this parcel available as a practice field for sports would help relieve crowded seasonal conditions at several city recreational facilities.

The terms of agreement includes provisions that Dansey or the Recreation Department can either terminate the agreement on a 30 day advance notice basis. Also, the Recreation Department agrees not to install any permanent equipment on the property, and to keep grass cut and the area clean and attractive.

Commission members approved a motion, to be effective January 22, to discontinue lighting tennis courts during evening hours. A date to begin lighting the courts again at night will be (Please turn to Page 10)

The birds, which have been roosting in the trees in the area for three years, roost only ten to 15 feet off the ground, and it is the theory of officials, that clearing the brush out and leaving the taller trees will deter the birds. Allen said it will take a few days to see if the clearing corrected the problem. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

LIGHTS ARE OUT

I live near Jaycee Park and for the last four nights, when it was so cold, the lights stayed lit on the tennis courts from about dark to 11 p.m. Nobody was on the courts and to me this seemed like such a waste of electricity, especially Monday night when everybody was affected by the overload. Why can't the Recreation and Parks Department keep them turned off when it is so cold and no one is playing? W.S.

According to Recreation and Parks Director Boyd Lee, the Recreation Commission voted in its meeting Tuesday night to turn the lights off from January 22 until February 28. "This is something we have done two out of the last three years to save energy and reduce our utility bill," he explained. "All the tennis lights will be turned off completely during this period." Lee said the lights which were off on Monday night were supposed to be off. "I don't know how it slipped by the ranger," he said, "but we are very well aware of the problem now."

Works Of Gordon Conway To Be Revived Beginning Sunday

STATESVILLE — An exhibition of the drawings, memorabilia, clothing and furniture designs of Gordon Conway, rediscovered exponent of Art Moderne will open here Sunday.

This special exhibition is being presented in addition to the major Conway Show "That Red Head Gal: Fashions and Designs of Gordon Conway, 1916-36," currently on view at the Chicago Historical Society through Sunday.

Opening at the Arts and Science Museum here, the exhibition will feature 30 works and various personal effects of the Texas-born descendant of James Madison. Both Conway exhibitions were organized by the American Institute of Architects Foundation and sponsored by Philip Morris, Inc., on behalf of Virginia Slims.

Visitors to the exhibit will become acquainted with her art and times. Her careers in advertising and fashion magazine illustration and costume and furniture design are followed in the drawings in the show. Conway herself set the standard of chic in her life as well as her art. Her personal world will be evoked for the viewer in a collection of such belongings as her cigarette holders, sketch books and several costumes which will be modeled at the preview reception Saturday.

A protege of Heyworth Campbell, art editor of Conde Nast Publications, Conway was a major voice in fashion and design of the 20s and 30s. Her illustrations appeared on the covers of "Vanity Fair," "Eve" and "Tatler." She produced hundreds of sketches, drawings and silhouettes used for many purposes, for the pages of "Vogue," "Vanity Fair" and "Harper's Bazaar."

Conway retired to the Conway ancestral home, Mount Zion in Virginia, at the height of her popularity 46 years ago.

The special exhibition will be in Statesville through Feb. 22.

Fred Lilley Is Speaker

The manager of the local Society Security Office was speaker at the meeting of the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club held recently.

Speaker Fred Lilley was introduced by Nancy Smith, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

He spoke on the soundness of the Social Security system and the problems facing it in the future. He gave three possible ways of solving the problems, reducing benefits or increasing taxes or a combination of both, any or all of which would have to be done by legislation.

The meeting was conducted by President Mary Daugherty, who welcomed Mrs. Lauretta Collina of Ohio as a guest.

Hostesses were members of the Telephone Committee, chaired by Mildred Manning.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

To bug or not to bug mom on her job.

That is one of the burning questions that face youngsters with mothers who work outside the home.

Naturally, there are no blanket rules, as emergencies do arise and Mom would insist on being called. But there are a few guidelines to follow. First, you must ask yourself: (1) Will Mom drop dead when she hears this? (2) Can she find a plumber after five? (3) Will she carry out her threat to move to another city and change her name?

If you answered yes, no, yes, you might try putting the incident in a proper perspective.

For example, if there is blood to report, consider these questions: Is it yours? Your brother's? Is there a lot? A little? On the sofa that is not Scotchguarded? From a loose baby tooth? Or the $80 one that they are still making payments on? Will the bleeding stop? Was it an accident? Can you shut up about it and pass it off as an insect bite?

Another example: When every kid in the neighborhood decides your house would be a neat place to play because there is no adult at home, ask yourself, Do I want to spend my entire puberty locked in my room with no food and no television? Do I need the friendship of a boy who throws ice cubes at the bird? Will Mom notice we made confetti in her blender?

Other situations you can be definite about:

When a group of children decide to wash the cat and put him in the dryer and want to know what setting to use, CALL.

When you and your brother are hitting and slapping over the last soft drink and you want a high-level decision on who gets it, DON'T CALL.

When a couple of men in a pickup truck tell you your Mom is having your TV slipcovered, your silverware

Dear Abby

Wind Chimes Are Annoying

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We are retired and living in a nice mobile home in Florida. We have lovely neighbors who present a problem we are reluctant to bring up.

Several in the park have hung those long steel wind chimes on their carports. There are some hanging right outside our bedroom windows. The high-pitched sound is especially annoying at night when the breeze is blowing. The constant clang, clang, clang is driving us up a wall!

Please put a few lines in your column to remind these people to be a little more considerate of their neighbors, Abby. They may see it and take the hint. Sign me

DISENCHANTED WITH CHIMES

DEAR DISENCHANTED: And what if they don't see it? Simply advise your lovely neighbors in a friendly but emphatic way that their wind chimes are annoying you.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I think I'm going crazy. I'm 33, married 12 years, have two fine children (6 and 9), a lovely home and financial security, but I'm miserable. My husband (38) gives me everything I want except an honest relationship. He lies constantly. I've caught him in so many lies, I've lost all respect for him. He's a wonderful father and provider, but he has shut me out completely. I've begged him to share his feelings with me but he says his feelings are his business — not mine.

I had an accidental pregnancy 14 months ago. He persuaded me to have an abortion, saying two children were enough. Afterward he told me that he insisted on the abortion because he "knew" the baby wasn't his! I was crushed. I have never been unfaithful nor have I given him any reason to doubt me. That accusation turned me off completely and we haven't slept together since. (He accepts this, saying it's only natural after 12 years.)

Abby, is there any hope for a marriage in which there is no trust, respect or physical intimacy? We are considering divorce, but living in the same house for the sake of the children as well as for economic reasons. Is this a feasible alternative, or are we crazy?

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You are not crazy. ("Crazy" people rarely question the feasibility of their alternatives.) Your husband's habitual lying, his unfounded accusations and his refusal to share his feelings with you are all symptoms of some deep emotional problems. He desperately needs professional help, and so do you.

If your husband refuses to get help, get into treatment without him. You need to get your head together to learn how to live with him or without him.

DEAR ABBY: Well, another Christmas has come and gone, and here I sit, counting my newly acquired "blessings." They include six boxes of candy, two tins of fancy cookies, three fruitcakes and 5 pounds of nuts!

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is very nice to me as a rule, but when he's drinking he gets very mean and abusive and picks a fight with me over some little thing. He's even gotten violent to the point of slapping me around.

Some Respite For East Coast From 'Deep Freeze'

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer
The shivering East Coast got a slight respite from icy temperatures today, but the three-day freeze that sent the mercury to new lows is driving up prices for seafood from ice-clogged fishing grounds and for orange juice and vegetables from Florida.

Three major orange juice processors announced 75-cent price increases that brought the cost of a dozen six-ounce cans to $3.35, a record high for concentrate, the Sentinel Star of Orlando, Fla., reported today. After painfully low readings that broke records in dozens of communities, temperatures rose early today into the 20s and 30s in much of the East. It was 18 degrees in Boston and 55 in Miami.

A statewide emergency call for natural gas conservation still was in effect in Massachusetts, where supplies were low and deliveries were delayed in ice-bound shipping channels.

In Canada — the source of all the cold — it was 5 below zero in Montreal early today. And the strong weather ridge from the Southwest into Canada that has been deflecting cold Arctic air down along the East Coast has not yet broken up, forecasters say.

Florida temperatures late Wednesday were back in the 40s, but single-digit readings earlier in the week caused widespread crop damage.

"Prices will go up, there's no doubt about that," said Douglas Guetzloe of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association. "But we won't have any idea how much until the damage is accurately assessed."

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., asked President Carter on Wednesday for federal disaster aid for farmers whose crops were damaged.

The industry estimates that about 20 percent of the state's projected 1981 crop of 208 million boxes of all oranges were lost, or about 49 million gallons of concentrated orange juice.

South Florida officials also said 60 percent of the winter vegetables that were in the ground — beans, tomatoes, peppers — were destroyed, though many farmers were between plantings when the cold spell hit.

The cold snap also is to blame for boosting the cost of flounder, lobster and scallops because fishing fleets are idled in many ice-encrusted ports from the Chesapeake Bay to Maine.

Other shipping traffic has found it slow going amid huge sheets of ice, especially where the ice has knocked buoys and navigational aids off their proper locations.

Ice clogged the Hudson River, and the Coast Guard said it actually was not passable to Albany. "The people upstate will have a problem if this remains the same for a while. A lot of fuel goes that way," said Chief Petty Officer Greg Creedon.

Thick, rising ice in the Connecticut River was threatening to lift an iron bridge off its pilings, and New Hampshire officials were trying to blast the ice loose. The bridge, which links Seastown, N.H., with Canaan, Vt., carries a main that supplies water to the New Hampshire community near the Canadian border.

Ice-breakers were chopping channels in Chesapeake Bay, Long Island Sound, Nantucket Harbor and the Cape Cod Canal, a New York-to-Boston shipping shortcut.

Escorted by Coast Guard cutters, a ferry of supplies and a heating oil barge reached Nantucket, Mass., encircled by eight miles of ice a foot thick.

A passenger plane also brought in groceries, but islanders were philosophical about their winter isolation. "Sure it's a terrible winter, but it's not that much out of the ordinary," said Barbara Tilton.

PCC Accepting Preliminary Applications

Pitt Community College is now accepting preliminary applications for admission to its allied health program. Prospective students will be selected on a first come, first served basis. Before students are accepted in these areas of study, they must first take a written examination on one of the following dates: February 19, March 19, April 23, May 14 and June 18.

Edgar Boyd, PCC dean of students, explained, "The demand for skilled personnel in allied health fields in eastern North Carolina continues to increase. With this growth, the career opportunities for registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, (LPN), nurses assistants, ward clerks, radiologic technologists and surgical technologists have never been better."

Boyd said, "Pitt Community College offers specified training programs in each of these career fields and is currently accepting applications from persons desiring to pursue any one of these specialties. All of the programs are very popular and the number of individuals making application always exceeds the number of available positions. It is extremely important to act promptly by applying early and in turn following through with the various phases of the admission process. If persons are uncertain as to which fields they are best suited, they should visit or call one of the PCC admission counselors."

Judith Kuykendall, director of the nursing programs at PCC stated, "In Pitt Community College's Career Option Nursing Program, students first complete the LPN program and then have the option of continuing their education and completing the RN program.

"After completion of one year of the program, which includes both on-campus and clinical experiences, a student is eligible to write the licensing exam to become a licensed practical nurse (LPN). At the completion of the second year of the program, the graduate is eligible to write the registered nurse exam (RN). LPN's who are graduates of other nursing schools are also eligible for the second year RN program."

"Individuals who wish to learn skills in shorter length programs and immediately enter the job market may wish to consider the nursing assistant program which is offered in the spring quarter or the hospital ward clerk program which is offered in the fall and winter quarters. These programs are only three months in length and might be a starting point for a health career."

Garrie Moore, department head of the Radiologic Technology Program, explained, "Radiologic technology, a 24-month program, is accredited by the Council on Medical Education, American Medical Association. There is coordination between the didactic and the clinical educational experiences at several clinical facilities and this significantly contributes to the students obtaining a well-rounded education."

"Upon completion of the programs," added Moore, "students are eligible to write the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists Examination for certification as a radiologic technologist. (R.T.A.R.R.T.)"

Gayle Cobb, department head of the Surgical Technology Program, said this program is a one-year curriculum which begins each September. Through both instructional and clinical experiences students acquire skills which qualify them to assist surgeons, anesthesiologists and registered nurses in the care of the patient.

Employment Survey Planned

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment in this area during the work week of Jan. 19-23, according to Joseph Norwood, director of the Bureau's Charlotte regional office.

Norwood said that employment and unemployment statistics based on results of the survey, which is conducted for the U.S. Department of Labor, are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the nation. Information supplied by participants is kept strictly confidential by law, he added.

Mrs. Janet P. Conway will visit households in this area for interviews.

Providing Service Is Test

The State Legislature began its work Wednesday with that perennial problem, money, hanging over it.

It's not that things are so bad. Because of the recession there is a shortfall, but still North Carolina's economy held up rather well.

There will, however, be a lot of pressures for spending the funds that are available. Much of it will go to inflation since the state government is facing higher costs for everything, including energy.

Then there is a desire to give pay raises to state employees and teachers to compensate for inflation.

There is a need for new and improved facilities in every area from prisons to higher education.

Finally there will be efforts to reduce taxes in line with the feeling that that is what the public wants.

The highway fund is truly suffering, from higher costs and much lower revenues due to lower gas sales. It will be essential to find additional funds there if maintenance and any improvements at all are to be continued.

It will not be a year for beginning many new programs in state government, and that is just as well. The legislators, however, had a responsibility to see that basic state services are funded adequately, and that will be their biggest test this year.

Efficiency Is Essential

Greenville Utilities Commission has set a meeting to increase electric rates because of a wholesale increase instituted by Virginia Electric and Power Co.

It is anticipated that the increase will be around $3.50 per 1,000 kwh, although the exact figure has yet to be established.

The commission has no choice but to pass on increases which it receives, but it should only spur us on to develop less expensive electric supplies and to operate at peak efficiency locally.

Big Bad Machine

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — It used to be that when a young person was about to go job hunting, he depended on family, friends, and neighbors to help make basic life decisions, and help him get started.

In a three trillion dollar economy offering more than 20,000 job categories and with knowledge and technology expanding at a breathtaking pace, that simple approach is no longer the best way — if even possible.

For students at Selma-Smithfield High School in Johnston County, there's a "Big Bad Machine" which is gaining considerable notice across this state and the nation.

The user can feed in interests and aptitudes and abilities and get back a wealth of information on what kinds of jobs are now available, where they are, what they pay, what you have to do to prepare for them, what the future outlook might be, and even what kinds of jobs are currently developing and will be coming on line in the future.

Now that, the kids insist in their parlance, is one Bad machine — and they are saying it with deep respect.

Major Chore

Plugging the terminal into the computer which feeds the information has proved the easy part; and the exciting part, for Joyce Kinnison, state director of the Occupational Information Coordinating Committee.

The hard part has been trying to get into one place all of the different kinds of information available from an assortment of public and private resources involved in jobs training and placement.

Just getting all of the people to pull together has been a major accomplishment, Kinnison says, so that information can be available, and related to the real world in a useful way. In summary, the resources including the state's Job Service, the Labor Department, the Manpower Program, the Concentrated Employment and Training Agency, still other state and federal people, and a host of private sector specialists never talked the same language before; seldom talked to one another; and quite often didn't even know who to talk to if they had wanted to talk.

North Carolina has demonstrated that all of this can be overcome, and the computer terminal at Selma-Smithfield is one of several now being tested prior to implementation statewide so that high school counselors and vocational people, college job specialists, employment services, community colleges and others can all plug in.

The other day, nearly 200 job experts from 30 states met in Raleigh to begin a week long study of this state's system. Another such session will be held in San Antonio, Texas later for those from western states.

The U.S. Labor Department and the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee have taken the North Carolina system as a model to be distributed nationwide.

Vanished

John Lawrence was project director of the work done by Research Triangle Institute in assisting the state project, and preparing the program for nationwide introduction.

"Trying to make some sense out of all the currently available occupational information is a difficult task for anyone", Lawrence said. There have been so many state and federal agencies and programs that "real world" information "vanished, like a squid behind a cloud of technical black ink, acronyms, and bureaucracy."

The U.S. Congress decreed that real job training and

Other Editors Say In The Fishbowl

(Greensboro Daily News)

Ronald Reagan isn't by any means the first chief executive to get "irate" over gossip comments about his family. So his outburst the other day — over allegedly inaccurate press reports about his wife, Nancy — must be chalked up to the usual trials and tribulations of public figures.

Of course the press has a responsibility to get the facts straight; and when it doesn't its representatives deserve the darts they get. Still, it's an old game — this reporting on those in the limelight, as presidents especially know.

Going back a few years, you'll recall Harry Truman's tongue-lashing of the music critic who had the temerity to criticize daughter Margaret's voice. Mamie Eisenhower, Pat Nixon, Jackie Kennedy and Lady Bird Johnson survived the rigors of the fishbowl White House pretty well. But Betty Ford and Rosalyn Carter picked up their share of brittle commentary from time to time.

What is intriguing about the gossip involving Nancy Reagan is the large quantity of it even before she moves into the White House. By all reports she is a woman of strong opinions; and while some of the reports may be exaggerated, several sound plausible.

The suggestion that the Carters might want to move out before January 20 so the new first family could redecorate may have been distorted in emphasis; but it had a certain ring of authenticity. What happened there, apparently, was a loose-tongued factotum passed on Mrs. Reagan's comment (which didn't go quite that far in its implications) and thus got the new first lady in hot water.

No real harm done, though. It's only when the spouses get upset that a potential for trouble looms. Edward Muskie discovered that during his tearful defense of his wife in a New Hampshire primary some years ago.

President-elect Reagan, who owes the launching of his political career to television and movies, has dealt with the public long enough to know that first ladies of the nation must watch their tongues more carefully than first ladies of California or the wives of Hollywood celebrities. Since Mrs. Reagan can't avoid the fishbowl, she would do well to benefit from that knowledge before she gets there.

Strength For Today

FAITH CASTS OUT FEAR. Nothing can torment us more than fear; nothing induces fear more than does uncertainty. When the future is confused so that we cannot assume anything about it except uncertainty, then fear takes over the driver's seat. Uncertainty leads to torment.

One of the most devastating types of uncertainty is that which a Christian might feel about his faith. Under these circumstances he or she might as well face the fact that the deepest truths in Christian faith can never be

HOW IT FEELS WHEN YOUR OUT AT NIGHT!

BY JOHN J. KILPATRICK

Bugging You? Sue Them

WASHINGTON — A flurry of year-end reports and studies adds new evidence — as if new evidence were needed — that our courts are up to their earmuffs in a snowstorm of litigation. Some sensible measures of relief are urgently needed.

The problem affects both civil and criminal courts in both state and federal jurisdictions. Americans, on the record, are the most litigious people on earth. Every man a lawyer! If we wanted a new national motto, summing up the great national pastime, we could put it in two words: Sue 'em!

One of these year-end reports, appearing in the Washington Post, had to do with the case load at the Department of Justice. The figures, as the Post is so fond of saying, boggle the mind. Last year the department was involved in 97,205 cases, and more than two-thirds of them were civil cases.

More than 30,000 people sued the government in 1980, asking upward of $4.3 billion in damages of one kind and another. As recently as 1963, only 5,000 such lawsuits were filed, but every year the number grows. Catching the spirit of the times, the department is suing back. Last year, for the first time in memory, the department filed more suits than it answered.

What accounts for the blizzard? Half a million lawyers are out there; many of them are hungry; and there's a touch of class in suing the government. Of larger importance, Congress in recent years has created new causes for legal action. School desegregation, racial discrimination in employment, environmental regulation, grants-in-aid, welfare fraud — you name it, and someone is suing or being sued.

The holy name of "civil rights" is everywhere invoked. A.E. Dick Howard, professor of constitutional law at the University of Virginia, just published a monograph for the National Governors' Association on the impact of Section 1983. You never heard of Section 1983? It is a lulu.

Section 1983 dates back to 1871, when a Reconstruction Congress passed an act declaring that "every person" who violates the civil rights of another "under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, shall be liable to the party injured in any action at law..." For years the statute lay dormant on the books. Between 1871 and 1920, only 21 cases were brought under Section 1983.

But in 1961, the Supreme Court ruled that a Chicago family could sue 13 police officers for searching and ransacking their home. With that case, Monroe vs. Pape, the floodgates opened. In 1976, the most recent year for which figures are available, 17,543 suits were filed under Section 1983.

As Professor Howard observes, "Creative litigants and their lawyers have turned virtually any grievance into a constitutional claim." Federal courts have had to hear cases involving long hair in high schools, father-and-son dinners, and all-girl choirs. The situation has created a nightmare for law enforcement officers everywhere. One state prison official recently retired with $200 million Section 1983 suits piled up against him.

In his annual report of December 29 on the state of the judiciary, Chief Justice Warren Burger once again addressed some of these problems. He urged Congress to abandon the haphazard way in which new federal judgments were created, and to let the U.S. Judicial Conference take over this responsibility. He renewed old recommendations for resolving many civil grievances by mediation or arbitration. He revived the idea of a new national court of appeals, ranking just under the Supreme Court, to take some of the pressure off the high court itself.

New Reagan Headhunter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON

Members of Ronald Reagan's kitchen cabinet faced down chief headhunter E. Pendleton James at a heated meeting in Washington Dec. 31 to protest the absence of political tests for Reagan administration officials and to correct this by putting one of their own in charge.

Kitchen cabinet member William Wilson, a millionaire Los Angeles real estate developer, was put in overall charge of selecting sub-cabinet and other top officials. Wilson, a longtime friend of Reagan, will scrutinize future recommendations from James' headhunting team to make sure friends, not enemies, of the president-elect are selected.

Actually, political fitness reports on job seekers have been made regularly by Keith Bulen, a former Indiana state Republican chairman who has been a key Reagan campaign operative. But James, who heads a Los Angeles-based executive search company, has ignored Bulen's recommendations. Wilson is on hand to make sure that comes to a stop.

America's New Voice

Los Angeles millionaire Charles Wick, an intimate friend of President-elect Reagan and a member of his kitchen cabinet, is poised to embark on his first government service at age 61 as director of the International Communications Agency (ICA).

"If Wick wants it, the job is his," one well-placed transition official told us. Friends say Wick definitely wants it. A semi-retired entrepreneur (nursing homes and motion pictures, among other pursuits), Wick does not fit the pattern of a famous journalist or experienced controversialist suggested by some Reagan advisers to head ICA. The agency, which beams the nation's message to the rest of the world, is the former USIA renamed by the Carter administration.

However, Wick does not qualify as a staunch "Reaganaut" — of which so far there are surprisingly few named to high office. He and his wife, Mary Jane, are longtime friends of the Reagans and entertained them for dinner Christmas Eve. The Wicks have been in Washington running the inaugural festivities.

Reagan's Wordsmith

Ken Khachigian, a former Nixon speechwriter who became Ronald Reagan's favorite speechwriter in the fading days of the campaign, is writing the president-elect's inaugural address but has turned down a bid to run his White House speechwriting team.

Khachigian begged off the job on grounds that he must return to his public relations firm in Orange County, Calif. That has led to a wide-open search for chief speechwriter. Among the candidates are conservative columnists M. Stanton Evans and Jeffrey Hart. Reagan campaign staffer Tony Dolan, who wrote Reagan's effectively emotional election eve speech, will be on the White House speechwriting team but not as chief.

A footnote: Khachigian's first draft of the inaugural is high on inspirational rhetoric and low on details. But that has not brought brevity. It is so long that rewrite instructions call for massive cuts.

Ways And Means Games

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts and the new chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, played their version of the good cop-bad cop routine in rejecting Republican demands for more seats on the committee.

Rostenkowski has privately told Republicans he could not budge O'Neill, who insisted that the Democrats keep a 2-to-1 margin on ways and means even though their edge in the House is only 36 percent. But O'Neill's associates claim that the speaker is taking that position at Rostenkowski's request to protect him from his Republican colleagues on the committee.

Junior Republican congressmen want to disrupt the business of the House in reprisal, but party leaders do not want to risk sabotaging the Reagan tax program in the Ways and Means Committee. On the contrary, the committee's Republicans have written Rostenkowski asking for quick consideration of President-elect Reagan's tax proposals.

Full-Time Democratic Chairman

Millionaire Los Angeles lawyer-banker Charles T. Manatt has spread the word in Washington that he will be a full-time Democratic national chairman, stepping aside from his Western business interests and moving east to live in Washington the next four years.

Manatt, a former California state party chairman and currently a Democratic national committeeman, has a big lead to succeed John White as national chairman. In answer to criticism that he would be a part-time chairman, Manatt says he will let his associates run his Beverly Hills law firm and bank while he and his family move east.

Manatt's most active opponent is Kansas City insurance millionaire Charles Curry, who is a Democratic national committeeman. Curry has hired the Carl Byoir public relations firm, has pledged he will spend $500,000 of his own money if needed and has won the endorsement of Sen. Henry M. Jackson. But Curry is considered less of a threat to Manatt than former Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, who may launch an 11th-hour campaign with liberal backing.

Has Sampling Of Perquisites

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the final days before he moves into the White House, Ronald Reagan is sampling the perquisites and attentions of the presidency without the burdens. And in contrast to a bowed Jimmy Carter, Reagan seems almost unaware of the weight about to descend on him.

As he prepared to move east this week, living amidst packing boxes in rooms emptied of furniture headed for the White House family quarters, Reagan appeared jovial and relaxed. "He's been ... very relaxed, very confident about what he's doing — not intimidated by what's coming," said one aide who has been working closely with Reagan on his inaugural address.

Reagan's time, at least in public, has been spent taking care of chores and engaging in ceremonial activities. He said that while he has been briefed on the Carter administration's negotiations to free the American hostages in Iran, he has not been involved in those talks.

During his final pre-inaugural period in California, photographers had a chance to show him at a variety of activities: entering a barbershop, working at home on his inaugural address with a sheaf of handwritten pages scattered about his desk, accepting an Arabian stallion as a gift from the president of Mexico.

At the same time, Carter, if not avoiding the public eye, took no pains to step into focus during a low-key visit to Plains.

Despite the best efforts of Reagan's press aides to shield him, the president-elect stopped several times to chat with reporters who were more interested in Iran and Cabinet confirmation hearings than in haircuts and horses.

Reagan, ever the engaging actor, gives every indication that he likes to talk to reporters. Rather than ignore them where he went, he either paused to answer questions or to politely apologize that he couldn't. Going into the barbershop, he said: "If there are any questions, I'll take them on the way out. I'm late."

Before he flew to his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., Reagan asked press aide Joe Holmes whether he should talk to the reporters gathered near the Marine Corps helicopter awaiting him. No, Holmes said, "they'll understand."

When Reagan arrived in California a week ago, after a Washington visit, Holmes first sought to persuade him to ignore the reporters seeking his attention. But Holmes relented and later recalled that Reagan "beamed like I said, 'You can go out and play.'"

At the other end of the country, Carter was not playing. He was very quietly going about personal preparations for his life as a former president, checking out office space, going through his attic — getting ready, in the words of brother Billy, for the job "of living the rest of his life."

Every other presidential visit to Plains turned into a game of follow-the-leader, with tourists and reporters trailing Carter as he made his rounds: to his mother's house, to the softball field, to church, to the family's former peanut warehouse office.

But last weekend, the president was rarely seen in public. When he was, his mood seemed subdued. He left in early morning, skipping his customary church visit, and went back to the White House.

Nothing reflected Carter's mood as much as his demeanor Sunday at Warner Robins Air Force Base as he was about to begin his final presidential flight aboard Air Force One. As he climbed up the steps, his shoulders were stooped.

When he reached the top, he walked through the doorway and turned right toward his cabin. There was no customary wave to the Air Force personnel who turned out to see their commander in chief.

'May Disregard' Garwood Story

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Jurors hearing the court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood may "totally disregard" Garwood's version of his captivity in Vietnam — as relayed to the court by medical witnesses — unless the former jeep driver testifies personally, the presiding judge said Wednesday.

"The accused should offer some supporting testimony as to his conduct and circumstances" during the time Garwood's attorneys contend he spent as a prisoner of the North Vietnamese, Col. R.E. Switzer said in an interview during a recess in the court-martial.

Garwood, 34, is charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy during the 14 years after his disappearance near Da Nang in 1965. He returned to the United States in 1979, saying he had been held captive by the Viet Cong.

His attorneys said Garwood has not decided whether to take the stand.

In the event Garwood chooses not to testify, Switzer said that, "At some stage I will be advising the jury that the story he told psychiatrists about the circumstances of his capture and in the camps is not to be accepted as the truth. It should only be the basis for the formation of the psychiatric testimony." A decision was expected to be made on Garwood's testimony after the prosecution completed cross-examination of an Air Force psychiatrist, Col. James F.T. Corcoran of Brooks Air Force Base in Texas.

Corcoran was scheduled for more cross-examination today.

Medical witnesses called by the defense have testified that Garwood told them of his capture by the Viet Cong after he became lost on an authorized jeep run. They quoted Garwood extensively about his being wounded, stripped and marched through the countryside, and his repeated efforts to win freedom as the years passed by.

Four witnesses, including Corcoran, have testified that Garwood suffered a mental illness as a result of coercive persuasion, or brainwashing, by his captors.

In previous cases in which such a mental illness has been mentioned, it has been alluded to only as a contributing factor. In Garwood's defense it is the whole case because while his lawyers have admitted many of his alleged actions, they argue that his judgment was totally impaired.

Corcoran testified Wednesday that Garwood today is "60 to 70 percent medically impaired because of post traumatic stress syndrome, and I would recommend to a board that he be separated from military service."

The psychiatrist said his diagnosis of mental illness in Garwood was the first such conclusion he had reached in evaluations of more than 40 former POWs.

Corcoran acknowledged that Garwood was capable of lying. "What if he had concocted the whole thing?" prosecutor Capt. Theresa J. Wright asked.

"Then I would say there is nothing wrong with him, and that he recognized criminal conduct at the time the alleged acts were committed," the psychiatrist said.

Pressed by the government lawyer about Garwood's perception of misconduct, Corcoran acknowledged, "You can have a mental disease and still appreciate the criminality of your conduct."

Prosecutors have presented testimony by a number of POWs that Garwood wore the uniform of the North Vietnamese, carried a rifle and took up the cause of his captors. Testimony also has been presented that he struck another American POW and used a bulldozer to call on American troops to surrender.

real jobs should be the bottom line. Lawrence noted, and this has developed into the state and national effort to devise a system.

Jane Patterson, previously secretary of the state Department of Administration, translated the effort into realistic terms: New investment in North Carolina in coming years will create almost 115,000 new manufacturing jobs, and even more demands for people to serve that expanded labor force... all told, a third of a million new jobs.

A coordinated system is the only way to let people know of the jobs, to keep employers informed of trained labor available, and allow educators to provide proper training, she says.

Chrysler Skirts Bankruptcy With Loan Guarantee

THUMBS UP - The Chrysler loan board granted conditional approval of the automaker's application for more government loan guarantees at the Treasury Dept. last night. Lee Iacocca, Chrysler chairman, and UAW President Douglas Fraser give a "thumbs up" with Treasury Secretary William Miller. (AP Laserphoto)

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Chrysler Corp. is still alive with a new $400 million federal loan guarantee that company chairman Lee A. Iacocca says is the crucial step in a financial reorganization that skirts the stigma of "going under the judge's gavel" in bankruptcy.

Iacocca said such arrangements are "the wave of the future" - a broad hint that other huge corporations will be turning to the government for similar help.

Other elements of what Iacocca called "a super deal" include the United Auto Workers' forfeit of $622 million in wages and benefits and bankers' willingness to forgive about $350 million in outstanding loans to Chrysler.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser called the deal "the worst economic settlement we have ever made."

"The only thing worse is the alternative," he said.

The union chief did not have to spell it out. Although people on both sides were careful not to say it out loud, analysts were in agreement that Chrysler could not escape bankruptcy without the loan guarantees.

And the government officials charged with deciding whether to issue the guarantees had made it clear they would let the company go under unless the union made large wage concessions.

The hard-fought agreement between the UAW and Chrysler in hand - it took seven days of intense bargaining - the Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board moved quickly to vote conditional approval of the loan guarantees.

"This is the first time in history that a big corporation has been reorganized without going under a judge's gavel and him saying 'You get a dime (on the dollar) to somebody and 'You get 12 cents' to somebody else, and so forth," Iacocca said.

"It's going to be the wave of the future; just like in the old days when a man's barn burned down and his neighbors had to build him a new one out of their own resources."

The loan board scheduled another meeting Friday for Chrysler to detail how it would implement the conditions laid down by the board before it voted conditional approval of the loan guarantees.

One of the crucial elements of the Chrysler presentation will be assurances that the 125 banks being asked to forgive loans will go along.

That is not expected to be a problem, however, since most of the banks have already written the loans off as bad debts.

Assuming the banks do formally agree, and the board gives final approval for its loan guarantees, 15 days must elapse before Chrysler can actually get its hands on fresh cash.

During that time, the board could reverse itself if it believes the conditions are not met.

Also during that time, Donald Regan will become treasury secretary in the new Republican administration and thus automatically replace outgoing Treasury Secretary G. William Miller as loan board chairman.

Regan's specific views on the Chrysler situation are not known. But even if he disagreed, he could not change Wednesday's decision if the other two loan board members stood fast.

Although his Wednesday's agreement over the UAW wage freeze was the overriding element, the company and union also had to agree to negotiate a profit-sharing plan acceptable to the board.

And pay freezes must be imposed on non-UAW employees, including members of seven other unions, to yield $161 million.

The 64,000 active and 40,000 laid-off UAW Chrysler members in the United States and Canada must approve the contract changes before the agreement - and the loan guarantees - can be implemented. The union's Chrysler Council, consisting of officers of local unions, meets Monday in Detroit to consider its recommendation.

The 125 banks involved in the plan are being asked to accept 30 cents on the dollar on $500 million in outstanding loans, with the money to be paid in installments over the coming years. They also are being asked to convert an additional $568 million in loans to preferred stock carrying no dividend until guaranteed loans have been repaid.

Another element of the overall arrangement requires Chrysler to show the federal loan board that suppliers have yielded $36 million in concessions and pledge to try to get at least as much again by Dec. 31. This represents a reduction from the $90 million freeze Chrysler sought. Iacocca says "a big chunk" of the $400 million will go to suppliers for overdue bills, non-payment of which already is forcing one assembly plant to stay closed because vendors refuse to ship parts.

The company also must pledge itself to seek a merger, something it would dearly love to accomplish. Noting that Japanese partner Mitsubishi Motors Corp. had been trying to get out of its affiliation with Chrysler, Iacocca said, "Mitsubishi will be a lot friendlier when they see $1 billion in debt wiped off the balance sheet. We have no big-volume small pickup in our forward planning; Mitsubishi has a helluva truck; and we have a (closed) plant in St. Louis that could assemble it. If we can't do a joint venture there aren't good deals made in heaven."

Cost-Saving Measures Being Left To Reagan

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration is leaving behind two cost-saving proposals that could give President-elect Ronald Reagan a head start on showing how government waste can be cut.

Rowland G. Freeman III, the outgoing head of the General Services Administration, has decided not to sign two government directives that supporters say could save taxpayers billions of dollars by fostering competition within the bureaucracy.

Freeman, whose resignation is effective today, told aides he will leave the two orders for his successor in the Reagan administration despite last-minute White House urgings that he sign them.

Paul Newton, a spokesman for Freeman, said the outgoing administrator still had doubts about the two orders and did not want to tie the hands of his successor on major policy questions.

The directives would require the government's building and supply agency to contract out activities that could be done more cheaply by private industry, and force the GSA to consider less expensive alternatives to many of its building and procurement projects.

During the campaign, Reagan argued that the federal budget could be cut 2 percent by eliminating waste and fraud. Although his position on the two directives is unclear, the president-elect plans to sign an order on his first day in office, Jan. 20, instructing his department heads to locate areas of waste to be eliminated.

Bertrand G. Berube, GSA director of acquisition policy, said turning many GSA activities - from car pools to food services - over to private industry could save the government about $600 million, based on the experience of the Defense Department.

The Pentagon, which already has adopted the practice, has achieved savings averaging about 30 percent, Berube said.

Berube said opposition to the change at GSA comes from bureaucrats concerned that it will force them either to cut their staffs to compete with private industry or face the prospect of having large sections of the agency phased out of existence.

"The bureaucracy is resisting this with a passion," said Berube, noting the directive could affect 17,000 of GSA's 33,000 jobs.

Newton said Freeman was concerned that the GSA did not have enough people to perform the cost analysis required by the directive. The Carter administration budget office, however, told Freeman earlier this month he could reallocate personnel whose positions would be eliminated by the change.

The second directive would force GSA officials to consider broader options when deciding how to provide space or services for the bureaucracy.

Berube said the proposed change would hit at the "pork-barrel" nature of much federal building, making it more difficult for influential members of Congress to secure buildings for their states and districts.

He said savings from such cost comparisons could also save hundreds of millions of dollars.

Newton said the second directive might make it impossible to continue programs of setting aside construction contracts for minority firms.

White Honored By Association

Sen. Vernon White has been honored by the North Carolina Association of Sheltered Workshops with an award for "Distinguished Service."

The award presented to White was the second such award given by the association in its 12-year history.

White, while a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, was instrumental in the founding and organization of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center. Since being elected to the Senate 16 years ago, he has been one of the strongest supporters for handicapped and low socio-economic persons.

Tom Gilmore, deputy secretary of the Department of Human Resources said such programs as vocational rehabilitation and sheltered workshops, "would not be possible today without the constant and persistent efforts of persons such as Sen. White."

In honoring White, Gilmore continued, "you have truly selected one who believes in, and promotes, the concept of assisting persons reach their maximum physical and intellectual potential. You have, indeed, honored a great legislator and advocate for underprivileged and handicapped citizens."

Gilmore continued, "we must strive to give increasing emphasis to making lives lived by disabled people more than just an existence. We must give them an incentive and reason to participate and contribute. This emphasis fits right in with the major concern of taxpayers today - our economy."

Handicapped people, Gilmore noted, "are a tremendous resource to our state...a resource which we can ill afford to waste. And there are many jobs which, while mentally demanding, do not require athletic ability - jobs which could be filled by physically disabled individuals, such as those in wheelchairs." Other jobs, he said, "do not require an IQ of 120," which can be filled by handicapped persons with some manual dexterity, "and a large amount of patience."

Back To The Bell-Bottom

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) - After nearly a decade of being seldom seen, bell-bottom uniforms and white sailor hats are becoming a more common sight on Tidewater streets again.

Sailors attending the Navy's radar school here have been ordered to send home their civilian clothes, leaving them with only their blue uniform and white hat for both duty dress and liberty wear.

The traditional bell-bottom uniforms were once a common sight in all parts of this military area, but that was when sailors had to wear their uniforms on and off duty. In recent years they nearly always left their uniforms aboard ship or at their duty stations when they went to town.

But no more. Navy education and training officials say they want to strengthen the attitudes of junior enlisted servicemen about military life.

The Dec. 18 order applies to the 600 men and women attending Operations Specialist apprentice school at Dam Neck, officials said.

The sailors spend eight weeks here after completing seven weeks of boot camp, and for most it is their first opportunity at liberty.

A Navy spokesman said because boot camp has been cut from 10 weeks to seven, training officials want the recruit training atmosphere to be extended to training schools.

As a result, students are being marched to and from class at Dam Neck, military appearance has been stressed, and civilian clothes have been banned on base.

Before 1970, all non-rated sailors here were required to wear the traditional blue Navy uniforms in town in winter and the white jumpers in summer. But in the early 1970s, then Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt liberalized dress codes and allowed sailors to wear civilian attire ashore.

Lifesaving Course Set

An advanced lifesaving course will begin Monday, Jan. 19 at 7 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium at East Carolina University, Room 104, with Mike Johnson serving as instructor.

Participants must be at least 15 years old and must pass a test that will be administered by Johnson. A bathing suit and towel should be brought to class for use on the first night.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross said that the winter course offers a good opportunity for people who plan to seek a lifesaving job this summer to receive the required lifesaving certificate. Persons needing further information should contact her at 752-4222.

Launching Offensive For UNC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms said Wednesday he was launching an offensive against federal intervention in the administration of the University of North Carolina, saying the time was ripe for action.

"Suffice to say I'm going to do everything I can to get the federal government off the back of the University of North Carolina ... (and) now is the time to do it," Helms said after meeting with UNC President William Friday in his Senate office.

Helms' time reference was to confirmation hearings being held by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee for Terrel H. Bell, secretary of education-designate.

Helms is not a member of the committee, but he said he had passed on some suggested questions to Sen. John East, also a North Carolina Republican and a member of the committee.

"Dr. Bell has to be confirmed, and he is going to be asked some forthright questions, and we expect some forthright answers," Helms said.

The federal government and UNC have been at odds for several years over desegregation of the university's 16 campuses. An administrative law hearing began in Washington last fall on a move by the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare to cut off about $90 million in federal education funds to the university.

That hearing is scheduled to resume in February, with the university presenting its defense against the government allegations, which now are handled through the Department of Education.

"My own view is that we need some common sense restored to this matter," Helms said Wednesday.

"Look at the time and resources (the university) has wasted in trying to defend itself against the federal masters. It is time to let Bill Friday go back to the job of running the university."

Friday said he and Raymond Dawson, the university's senior vice president, had reviewed with Helms the developments that led to the administrative hearing in Washington as well as the university's efforts to upgrade its five traditionally black campuses.

"I have not the slightest doubt that (Helms) is totally supportive of the position of the Board of Governors and the general administration" of the university, Friday said.

AMC Cuts Auto Prices To Spur Lagging Sales

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK Associated Press Writer DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp., eyeing the sales boost enjoyed by Chrysler Corp. as a result of rebates to buyers, is slashing 10 percent from the sticker prices of its cars today to spur lagging sales.

"It'll be interesting to see what happens now," said an unidentified spokesman for General Motors Corp., which is staying out of the incentive game, at least for the time being.

Chrysler's rebate program apparently has helped the No. 3 automaker withstand a general decline in auto sales for the start of the year, compared to the same period a year ago.

The first 1981 sales report for the five major U.S. carmakers, released Wednesday, showed sales tumbling 19.8 percent from the same 10-day period in 1980. Only Chrysler improved on its 1980 performance.

Chrysler's current incentive program, which keys rebates to the prime interest rate, helped the automaker take 12.6 percent of the domestic market in the latest sales period. Chrysler has said it needs a 10 percent share to remain solvent.

Its new "K-car" compacts, Dodge Aries and Plymouth Reliant, accounted for 52 percent of all Chrysler sales for the period compared with the 33 percent share the cars have taken so far this model year.

AMC's price cuts, to last five weeks, are aimed at trimming the company's 108-day inventory, the worst REQUEST APPROVED Greenville Police Chief E. G. Cannon announced the approval of a request by the Agnes Fullilove Community School for permission to conduct a telephone and door-to-door solicitation from Jan. 12 through Feb. 28 in order to raise funds for a talent show at the school.

Cannon said the request was submitted by Michael S. Hamer of Rt. 6, Greenville.

in the industry. A 60-day supply is considered ideal although Ward's Automotive Reports, an industry newsletter, put the domestic makers' average at 80 days as of Jan. 1.

John McCandless, an AMC spokesman, said the price reductions — ranging from $497 to $879 across three model lines — are "simple, straightforward and less gimmicky" than rebates.

Just last week, GM boosted prices on most cars an average 1.5 percent, or $149 per car, while Ford increased prices on most models about $85, or 1 percent.

Chrysler did not go along with the price increases and instead has extended its rebate program, which was to end Jan. 20.

Deliveries were an estimated 128,041 cars, compared with 159,628 in the Jan. 1-10 period a year ago. The daily sales rate, 16,005, was the worst since 1975, when it plunged to 11,515.

Chrysler, which received conditional approval Wednesday from the federal government for $400 million in additional loan guarantees to help keep it afloat, reported sales up 4.6 percent, from 15,458 to 16,179.

However, GM sales of 81,845 were down 17.2 percent from 98,883; Ford Motor Co. was off 33.1 percent from 37,271 to 24,930; Volkswagen of America plummeted 43.3 percent from 4,388 to 2,487; and AMC fell an estimated 28.3 percent, from 3,628 to 2,600.

AMC, like foreign importers, reports sales only monthly. Its estimate was provided by industry analysts.

"Most analysts assume that last month we passed the low point of the current decline caused by the high interest rates," said one who requested anonymity.

The annual sales rate, the estimate of sales for the entire year at the current pace, was 6.1 million last month. The early January period was 7.2 million. In January 1980, the best month of the year for the U.S. industry, it was 9 million.

Analysts said January sales a year ago were inflated by incentives and rebates. "The market was overstimulated," one analyst said.

Private Facility A Necessity To Green

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says a necessity is a necessity, and he believes a private toilet for his new office is a necessity. The state has agreed, and Green's office in the new legislative annex building will have a private facility costing $3,500.

Green went to work last fall when he learned that the state had eliminated private bathrooms from plans for State Office Building No. 3, a building under construction near the Statehouse.

The lieutenant governor's formal office will be in that building.

"I can't tell you why they cut it out," Green said Wednesday in confirming he had appealed the decision to make all toilets public.

"But I happen to be a full-blooded human being, and when you've got an office full of people waiting to see you, you sometimes have to use the toilet."

Jane Patterson, who at the time was serving as acting secretary of administration, said she had ordered Green's toilet reinstated.

"I think it's justified," she said, "because the governor and the lieutenant governor have the most visitors of anyone in state government, and it's just difficult for them to get out of their office to walk down the hall to a public facility."

Gov. Jim Hunt has a private facility in his Capitol office, and Green and the speaker of the House have one in their Statehouse offices. And plans for the new building originally called for private toilets for the lieutenant governor, state auditor and secretary of state.

But all of those were scrapped until Green appealed and won.

"Generally, the state's policy is that we don't build private toilets," said Charles E. Gordon, director of the construction office in the Department of Administration.

"It's a precedent thing. If you do it for one, everybody wants one. It's a question of where you draw the line."

Severe Water Shortages In Northeast States Shaping Up

By The Associated Press
While New Yorkers were warned to prepare for a "drought emergency" that could include mandated cuts in water use, residents of Greenwich, Conn., a wealthy suburb, were facing the possibility that their water reserve could be dry in 20 days. In Pennsylvania, state officials said 69 water companies were facing "severe shortages," and in Memphis, Tenn., the Coast Guard was keeping a close eye on the shipping channel of the Mississippi River, drained to dangerously low levels by a drought.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey urged New York City residents to conserve water voluntarily.

"Take a quick shower, not a long tub," he advised.

New York Mayor Edward Koch said he would declare a drought emergency some time next week. Environmental officials said that both voluntary and mandatory water conservation provisions would be put into effect. The mandatory measures are likely to include bans on street-flushing and on car-washing, except in establishments that recycle water.

The Delaware River Basin Commission was meeting today in Trenton, N.J., and was expected to consider declaring a regional drought emergency. The commission regulates water use for a 13,000 square-mile area encompassing parts of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

The commission was said to be considering a ban on washing cars and limiting residential water use. The group was also said to be examining more cutbacks on Delaware River water allotments for New York City and New Jersey. The allotments have already been reduced by a third.

As the flow in the Delaware has declined, salt water from the Atlantic Ocean has seeped up into the Delaware Bay and river. The "salt line," usually near Wilmington, is now approaching Philadelphia.

Officials say the salt water could leak into underground drinking water supplies, and they fear increased salinity in Delaware Bay could cause diseases in oysters, crabs and other shellfish, hurting the shellfish industry.

In Greenwich, a town of 58,000 people, officials were asking residents to voluntarily reduce their water consumption by 50 percent. Town selectmen are to vote Monday on an ordinance that would ban some water uses.

In Pennsylvania, Stephen Runkle, a hydraulic engineer with the state Department of Environmental Resources, said some water companies were down to a 30-day supply.

At least 166 water companies have placed voluntary restrictions on water use and 29 are rationing water, the department said. The Mississippi River was open to shipping at Memphis on Wednesday after being closed earlier in the week because of too-shallow water levels.

Coast Guard spokesman John Cornett said temporary blockages, which would have to be dredged, could be expected from time to time until rain increases the channel depth.

Haig Expected Win Committee Confirmation Vote

ALL DONE — Secretary of State-designate Alexander Haig gives a big smile as his confirmation hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee ended Wednesday afternoon in Washington. (AP Laserphoto)

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander M. Haig, survivor of five days of grilling during which he promised "steely eyed" toughness with the Soviets and no vestige of Watergate abuses, now awaits only the formalities of Senate confirmation as secretary of state.

The first was due today, with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's vote.

After the longest confirmation hearings for a secretary of state-designate in modern times, Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston predicted no filibuster or other delay to prevent full Senate confirmation next Wednesday or Thursday of Haig's nomination by President-elect Ronald Reagan.

Cranston announced Wednesday he was inclined to vote against Haig when the hearings started last Friday but "I am now leaning toward a 'yes' vote."

On the final day of hearings, Cranston told Haig he still had only two concerns: Haig's refusal to denounce Watergate as immoral until committee Democrats pressed him to do so, and whether Haig will respect Congress' constitutional right to help formulate foreign policy. Several other Democrats joined Cranston in the latter concern.

Two Reagan Cabinet nominees already have cleared the first step to confirmation. The Senate Energy Committee on Wednesday recommended approval of Denver lawyer James G. Watt as interior secretary and former South Carolina Gov. James B. Edwards as energy secretary.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee had planned to vote today on Reagan's nomination of Raymond L. Donovan as labor secretary, but the vote was postponed, apparently so investigators could look further into dealings of Donovan's New Jersey construction company. No new date for the vote was scheduled.

Hearings were scheduled today on the appointments of Attorney General-designate William French Smith, a lawyer who was expected to face questions about his membership in two all-male private clubs, and Education Secretary-designate Terrel Bell, who is currently Utah education commissioner.

Haig's stand on Watergate produced the only angry confrontation of the hearings on his nomination.

Sen. Paul S. Sarbanes, D-Md., pressed Haig again and again on whether he thought Watergate abuses were wrong and each time Haig replied — in the end angrily — that he had done nothing wrong himself.

Other senators began taking up the question of whether he considered Watergate immoral and finally Haig declared: "I believe it was both illegal and stupid."

Later, he read the committee a prepared statement saying: "Were there abuses of power during Watergate? Of course there were. They were an affront to the fundamental values I cherish and we all share."

On cooperation in foreign policy, Haig promised repeatedly to consult Congress to obtain united support for U.S. foreign policy.

He said Congress must share the responsibility, particularly if the United States must again decide whether to go to war.

"We cannot again expend American blood without a measure of popular support, and the legislative branch provides the best measure," Haig said.

Throughout the hearings, Haig promised tougher dealings with the Soviets.

"We must take a somewhat more steely-eyed view of breaches of international law and the standards and mores of western civilization," he told the senators Wednesday.

He said "illegal Soviet military action" must be viewed "with greater gravity than we have heretofore."

"Soviet training and funding of so-called forces of liberation and terrorist organizations around the world," Haig said, are not acceptable.

And he said the Soviet Union is "in an expansionist, imperial phase" that must be curbed with tough, clear Western policies.

"They are never influenced by Western rhetoric," Haig said. "They are influenced by Western deeds."

Haig said in his opening statement Friday that his major challenge will be to "forge consensus" among Western allies to, among other things, counter Soviet power.

Discharge For Young Kennedy

UPPER PITTSBORO TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy Jr., 19-year-old son of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, has been granted a conditional discharge on charges of possession of less than 25 grams of marijuana.

Kennedy and Steven J. Okun, 20, were charged Dec. 18 with the misdemeanor after a New Jersey State Police Trooper stopped their vehicle for speeding.

Pole Tavern Municipal Court Judge Andrew Rhea on Wednesday granted both conditional discharges, which are routinely granted to first offenders in minor cases and are subject to a six-month period of good behavior. No plea is required.

The offense carried a maximum penalty of six months in prison and a $1,000 fine.

State Police Trooper Mark Celio had stopped Kennedy's 1979 Jeep as it traveled 64 mph in a 50 mph zone on U.S. Route 40, police said.

Celio said he spotted the marijuana in a small open wooden box next to the door and arrested both Kennedy, son of the Democratic senator from Massachusetts, and Okun, son of the late Arthur M. Okun, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Johnson.

In court, Rhea asked

Kennedy, who was dressed in a dark gray pin-striped suit, if he had any past drug convictions or had any reliance on drugs. Kennedy answered no.

Rhea then asked Kennedy what he was doing in the township when he was stopped. Kennedy replied he had stopped in Pleasantville to pick up some belongings at the home of a friend and had stayed overnight.

Kennedy said he was traveling from Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., where he and Okun are students, to the Washington, D.C., area, to go home for the Christmas holiday.

Neither Kennedy nor Okun, who will return to Wesleyan next week, will be required to have supervisory treatment during the six months.

"This proceeding is no different from what we undertake for other persons charged with this offense," Rhea said.

The judge told Kennedy, "I have considered you as an individual and this is just another case."

However, Rhea cautioned both defendants not to get involved with him again under such circumstances, or they could face a penal remedy.

Kennedy pleaded guilty to the speeding charge and was fined $15 plus $15 in court costs.

Firemen Suffer In Winter Fires

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ice cakes their ladders and their hoses freeze to the ground. Hydrants freeze shut, sweat freezes on clothing and the ground becomes a sea of treacherous ice as the firefighters of the Ninth Battalion try to work in frigid temperatures.

"There's nothing the men dread more than a winter fire," said Battalion Chief Joseph W. Rooney, warming himself in his mid-Manhattan office between runs in sub-freezing cold.

New York City averages 350 fires a day, and even when the temperature dips to zero, the fire alarm must be met. But firefighters pay a price.

In winter, the time required to bring an apartment house blaze under control triples and the number of injuries to firefighters and civilians doubles, fire officials said.

"It gets so cold at some of those fires that everybody actually tries to get inside the building instead of staying on the outside," said Capt. Edwin Paynter of the battalion's Engine Co. 54.

Sitting in the warmth of the kitchen in their firehouse at West 48th Street and Eighth Avenue, several firefighters talked of what it is like to battle the elements while battling deadly flames.

"You try to prepare for the cold by wearing layer upon layer of extra clothes, but nothing helps," said Tom Carroll. "The spray always gets you. The water drips down your neck, up your sleeves, into your boots and freezes."

Rooney, who spent 26 years as a ladder man before becoming a chief in 1972, said it's futile to try to protect yourself from the cold.

"When you're in the middle of a raging fire your adrenalin is pumping, you're lugging heavy equipment and because of the extra clothes you start to sweat," he said. "As the pace slows, the sweat freezes and you find yourself frozen inside and out."

Because firefighters are so busy, there are relatively few frostbite cases, the men said. But colds and flu are commonplace. "Most of the men are sick the whole winter, but they still come in and they still have to go out in the cold," Rooney said.

If a hydrant is frozen when the firefighters arrive, "We just look for another one," Paynter said, "and keep looking 'til we find a good one, which we always do."

The city has thawing machines — vans equipped with steam generators — but they're primarily kept in residential areas where there is greater danger someone will die in a fire.

So when lines freeze on the ground, axes and ice picks are used to chip away the ice. One man in five is hurt during the winter — suffering sprains and even fractures.

The men of the Ninth Battalion say there is one winter fire that tops all others — a six-alarm warehouse blaze in January 1977 that engulfed an entire row of buildings between West 29th and 30th streets.

The entire block was encased in solid ice and the fire smoldered for three weeks, Rooney recalled.

"Cold? You want to know how cold it was?" Paynter asked. "I took my cigar out of my mouth for less than 30 seconds to answer a question and when I put it back in the tip was covered with ice."

Doomsday Clock Hands Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of scientists, saying "hardliners" have taken control in both the East and the West, has moved the hands of its nuclear doomsday clock to four minutes before midnight.

The clock has appeared on the cover of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists since 1947. It represents the magazine's estimate of how close the world is to nuclear war.

Editors and advisers of the magazine said Wednesday they moved the hands of their famous clock ahead three minutes because international tensions are pushing the world closer to nuclear disaster.

to help the 880,000 state residents living below the poverty level, the 180,000 who are without jobs and the nearly 700,000 aged and infirmed.

"We will show them. We will show them that here is one government designed to serve people and not bleed them," Ramsey said.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green began his third term as presiding officer of the Senate, and unlike Ramsey, he stuck to chairmen he had appointed in past sessions — at least in the few appointments he made on opening day.

Green also mentioned the state purse strings.

"The biggest challenge will be to continue to provide the goods and service that North Carolina needs and deserves without burdening with excessive taxes those very citizens we are trying to help," Green said. "That does not mean that this General Assembly will be devoid of compassion. Not at all. I think the money will be there for the important programs so necessary to our less fortunate North Carolinians. But we will have to examine those programs — both old and new — for duplication, possible waste or top-heavy administration."

Both the House and Senate unanimously elected all officers that had been chosen by Democrats in a caucus last December. Among them were Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Spring Hope, speaker pro tem of the House, and Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Charlotte, president pro tem of the Senate.

Three legislators close to Ramsey were granted the top committee assignments — Reps. Al Adams, D-Raleigh; Billy Watkins, D-Oxford, and Dwight Quinn, D-Kannapolis.

Quinn, who is beginning his 16th term and has served in the Legislature longer than anyone else, will head the House Finance Committee that will consider all tax bills — including any proposal to increase the gasoline tax. Quinn headed the committee in 1971.

"We're really entering a crisis with our highway program — maintenance more than anything," Quinn said in an interview. "And it's only going to get worse." Adams will chair the Appropriations Committee on the Base Budget, which will look for cuts in existing spending. Watkins will head the Appropriations Committee on the Expansion Budget, which is composed of the same members as Adams' panel and will review new spending requests.

In the Senate, Appropriations Chairman Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run, was reappointed to an unprecedented third straight term.

Serious work for the legislators is not expected to begin until next week but a few bills have already been filed for introduction.

One bill filed in both chambers would raise the state's homestead tax exemption.

Adams filed the first House bill, which calls for a repeal of the law allowing mixed drink votes in townships. It is a measure aimed at Pinehurst, which has passed liquor-by-the-drink under that 1979 law.

Diplomat Ends Moscow Stint

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Thomas J. Watson Jr. left Moscow today at the end of his assignment to the Soviet Union, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Watson, a former president of the International Business Machines Corp., was appointed by President Carter and took over the embassy in October 1979. President-elect Ronald Reagan will select Watson's successor.

Jack F. Matlock, the former No. 2 man at the Moscow embassy, will run it until Watson's successor takes over, the embassy spokesman said. Matlock was designated by the Carter administration to be ambassador to Czechoslovakia, but his appointment has been delayed by the change in U.S. administrations.

Watson flew to West Germany today and was to continue on to the United States next week aboard his personal aircraft, the embassy said.

SOIL AND CONSERVATION FARM FAMILY OF THE YEAR — James T. Lang, right, of Farmville, receives the Farm Family of the Year Award for 1980 from Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District Chairman Robert Little. The plaque was presented during the district's monthly meeting Tuesday. According to soil conservationist Albert Coffey, this award is presented each year to the farmer who has completed a comprehensive soil and water conservation plan for his farm. "Lang has been under his plan for many years, and has completed it," explained Coffey. "We feel he has done an outstanding job." Lang represents Pitt County for the state. decided on and announced prior to the onset of warmer weather. This action, director Boyd Lee noted, can save about $200 on utilities in a month's period.

Following presentation of a report by Jim Parker on the 1980 operations of the swimming pool, commission members tabled until the February meeting consideration of changes in pool fees for the coming summer season.

While expressing hope to do everything possible to increase the revenues of the pool operation, commission members at the same time voiced concern about being certain any increase in fees would be within the reach of those habitually using the facility.

Parker noted that since the pool opened in 1975, operating expenditures had doubled — from $9,900 in 1975 to $18,804 in 1980 — while revenues each year remained basically unchanged at about $5,500. He added that the increased cost of utilities was the basic factor of increased operational costs. Salary costs remain fairly constant as the staff members are seasonal workers for the most part paid minimum wage or a little above that amount.

In tabling a decision on fees for the 1981 season, commissioners agreed they wanted to study more closely what effect an increase in fees would have on attendance, and to look into the possibility of additional sources of revenue, such as fees for group use of the pool.

Lee reported to commissioners that the overall fees policy for the department, approved earlier by commissioners for presentation to the City Council, has not been acted on by the Council. Lee said there are questions on the part of the council about the interpretation of certain phrases dealing with expansion of programs. The Recreation and Parks Commissioners will review the fees policy in an effort to clarify the phrases in question so that the document can be reconsidered by the City Council.

Lee announced that the third floor space of the Community Building at the corner of Greene and Fourth Streets is utilized by personnel from City Hall, with the first and second floors to remain in recreational use.

Taken To Task In Abscam Leaks Probe

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After interviewing 1,253 people over six months at a cost of $500,000, the Justice Department still does not know who first leaked the Abscam story to the press.

In a report on its investigation Wednesday, the department said it had disciplined U.S. Attorney Peter F. Vaira Jr. of Philadelphia, his top assistant and an FBI agent for unauthorized Abscam disclosures.

They were taken to task, however, because of the way they responded to inquiries they received after the story of the FBI undercover investigation had broken into the open.

"I am not at all certain who the first leakers were," Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti told reporters. He said the investigators, led by U.S. Attorney Richard Blumenthal of Connecticut, "felt that they had at least some evidence indicating one or more persons who may have been among the first leakers."

But he also said FBI Director William Webster and Deputy Attorney General Charles B. Renfrew, the two officials who decided who should be penalized, "did not find evidence sufficient to establish" the sources of the original leaks.

Both Civiletti and Blumenthal declined to identify the individuals who came under suspicion.

Abscam was an undercover investigation in which FBI agents posed as representatives of an Arab sheik seeking legislative favors. Five present or former members of Congress have been convicted as a result of it.

Vaira, described by Civiletti as "a great prosecutor," received a letter of censure from Renfrew for giving information about the undercover probe to a Philadelphia inquirer reporter after learning that The New York Times had the story.

Civiletti said censure is the mildest form of discipline the department can administer.

Vaira's first assistant, John F. Penrose, is also receiving a letter of censure for similar conversations with Philadelphia reporters, the report said. Civiletti said he had received an appeal from Penrose, reviewed it and "essentially" upheld the disciplinary action.

Quentin G. Ertel Jr., media representative in the New York FBI office, has been suspended without pay for 30 days and placed on probation. Civiletti said such action means that an employee might face discharge or a lengthy suspension for any future infractions. Ertel's involvement in leaks was not spelled out.

The investigation of leaks also covered two other FBI undercover inquiries — Brilab, which dealt with insurance rackets, and Pendorf, dealing with organized crime.

Because of Brilab leaks, Oliver B. Revell, assistant director of the FBI, and Robert John Barron, a Los Angeles FBI agent since retired, received letters of censure from Webster. Agent Jack D. Blair of the San Diego office was given a demotion and placed on probation.

Agent Cluster Hall Jr., who was in the Las Vegas FBI office at the time of the Pendorf investigation but has since been transferred to New Orleans, was also demoted and placed on probation.

"We did not find every leaker," said Civiletti. "Still, I think it is fair to say we have reiterated the message that the Department of Justice cannot tolerate leakers whose disclosures threaten criminal investigations or trample on the rights of the accused."

The report said that many involved in the investigation believed "lax security" made the leaks more likely.

"The response 'no comment' should be standard operating procedure in connection with inquiry concerning a pending investigation or case," the report said.

It said "off the record" conversations should be avoided because there too often is a misunderstanding about whether such material can be used with certain restrictions or may not be published at all.

Observance Held By Troop

Scout Troop 30, sponsored by Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, celebrated its 50th anniversary of scouting activities last night with a dinner and recognition program.

Joe Goodson Sr., a past troop scout master who served as master of ceremonies for the meeting, pointed out that in reality, Troop 30 has over 63 years of service, having organized in June of 1917. Goodson explained, however, that scouting anniversaries are recognized in 25-year increments.

A highlight of the meeting was the introduction and recognition of the five living members of the 1917 charter troop. Receiving special commendations from the East Carolina Council for being faithful charter members of Troop 30 were James L. Fleming, J. H. Moye, Joe Moye Sr., Wyatt Brown, and Joe Taft Sr.

On hand for the meeting and recognized by Goodson were several past scout masters of the troop, including Taft, B. B. Drum, Billy Goodson, Tommy Tice Sr., George Williams, and Bill Fuqua, the present scout master. Small statues depicting a scout master will be presented to each of the troop leaders.

Pete Long, president of the East Carolina Council, spoke to the gathering and commended the troop for its years of scouting prominence. Williams presented a slide presentation involving past and present troop activities, dealing mainly with national and world jamborees as well as international trips taken with members of the troop.

Goodson offered a look at the history of Troop 30, observing that James E. West, the first chief scout executive of the National Scout Council, came to Greenville for the June of 1917 organizational activities. Dues in the early years were $1 per year and five cents per week, he said.

According to Goodson, troop members J. H. Moye and Richard Williams attended the first national jamboree, known then as Dan Beard's Camp, held in 1920 in Pennsylvania. In 1934, Troop 30 became a part of the Pitt District.

Goodson said that the troop's first Eagle Scout was Jake Skinner, who received the award in 1926, while Goodson's son, Joe Jr., became the troop's first Silver Palm recipient last May. The first Silver Beavers in the troop were Bill Drum, Knott Proctor and Wyatt Brown.

A 50th anniversary patch, designed by present member Brad Griffin, was revealed and will be worn by all members of the troop.

Jane Wichard and Martha Coffman were recognized for their work in organizing last night's activities.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market was mixed today as traders awaited more evidence of the future course of the economy and interest rates.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 4-3 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial was off .94 at 965.53.

Earlier in the week, the government reported that retail sales dropped 1.3 percent in December.

That was taken as a signal that the economy was starting to slow, increasing prospects for a decline in interest rates.

Traders were looking to today's scheduled report on December industrial production for a possible further sign that the economy was headed in that direction.

Dow Chemical rose 3/8 to 34 1/2 in active trading. The company said it will buy 1.9 million of its shares in the open market for use in its employee stock option and stock purchase plans.

Penn Central preferred B led the active list, unchanged at 19 1/2. A 595,500-share block traded at 19 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index rose .13 to 76.68. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .54 at 340.92.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 17.37 million shares at noon, against 18.60 million at the same point Wednesday.

Support Group Organizing

A support group for persons who have had cancer will be organized tonight at Holy Trinity United Methodist Church, located at 1400 Red Banks Rd.

Persons interested in participating may either be at the meeting tonight or call Ms. Lang, 757-4635 PCMH, or Dr. Holm, 758-3326, for further information.

"Hopefully this will be only the beginning of support groups for cancer patients. Plans are being made for a support group for the terminally ill," Dr. Holm concluded.

Fired Policeman Files Complaint; Asks $100,000

A former Greenville Police Department lieutenant, Edward E. Laughinghouse, has filed a complaint in U.S. District Court against Chief Glenn Cannon, Mayor Don McGlohon and City Manager Edward A. Wyatt, seeking reinstatement in his former job and $100,000 in actual and punitive damages.

Laughinghouse, a member of the department for 17 years, was dismissed in December for violating the department's Standard Operating Procedure and the city's personnel policy. Cannon said he could not comment further on the dismissal, but informed sources said Laughinghouse had allegedly been under the effect of alcohol while on duty.

He had been suspended for five days in May, allegedly on a similar on a charge. The complaint, filed yesterday, charges that he was, "summarily dismissed," that he had not been drinking on duty, and, "that the true reason for his dismissal is that as Lieutenant, he is officer in charge of one of the police divisions and most of the persons under his command are white officers;" that, "Greenville has a history of discrimination against Black police officers," and that, "the motive for firing plaintiff Laughinghouse is to make his slot available for a member of the white race."

The complaint also charges that the officer's dismissal, "was a product of a conspiracy between unknown members of the WNCT TV News Staff and unknown members of the Greenville Police Department," and, "constitutes discrimination on account of race."

In addition to the actual and punitive damages and his reinstatement, the papers filed yesterday seek a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction against the defendants which would prevent the defendants from, "refusing to reinstate the plaintiff to his former position."

Ground Lost In Iran's Offensive

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - Iran's counter-offensive caused the heaviest fighting of the Persian Gulf war but the Iranians lost ground on at least one of the two fronts, Western reporters visiting the battlefield found.

On a two-day tour of the Susangerd front, 80 miles north of Abadan, the reporters found Iraqi infantry, armored and engineering units moving deeper into Iran, while the Iranians were reported to have retreated to the north of Susangerd.

In Tehran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini defended President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's conduct of the war and admonished Iranians to stop criticizing the president.

The revolutionary leader, in a Tehran Radio broadcast monitored in Beirut, said Iranians "must remember that ordinary people do not understand the affairs of war. You must not say things which upset the leaders of the army, the president or the government."

In addition to appealing for unity at home in time of war, Khomeini's speech was also seen as a show of support for Bani-Sadr, a secular moderate who has been involved in a power struggle with hard-line Islamic fundamentalists who have criticized the president's handling of the war.

Khomeini, in what may have been a reference to Iran's counter-offensive that appears to be stalled, said: "If one day the army advances and another day retreats, you must not mention this in the Majlis (Parliament), bazaar or in speeches. A war means one day advancing and another day withdrawing."

Bucs Blitz AC In Second Half

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina University's Pirates went into the dressing room at halftime last night with only a 35-34 lead over Atlantic Christian.

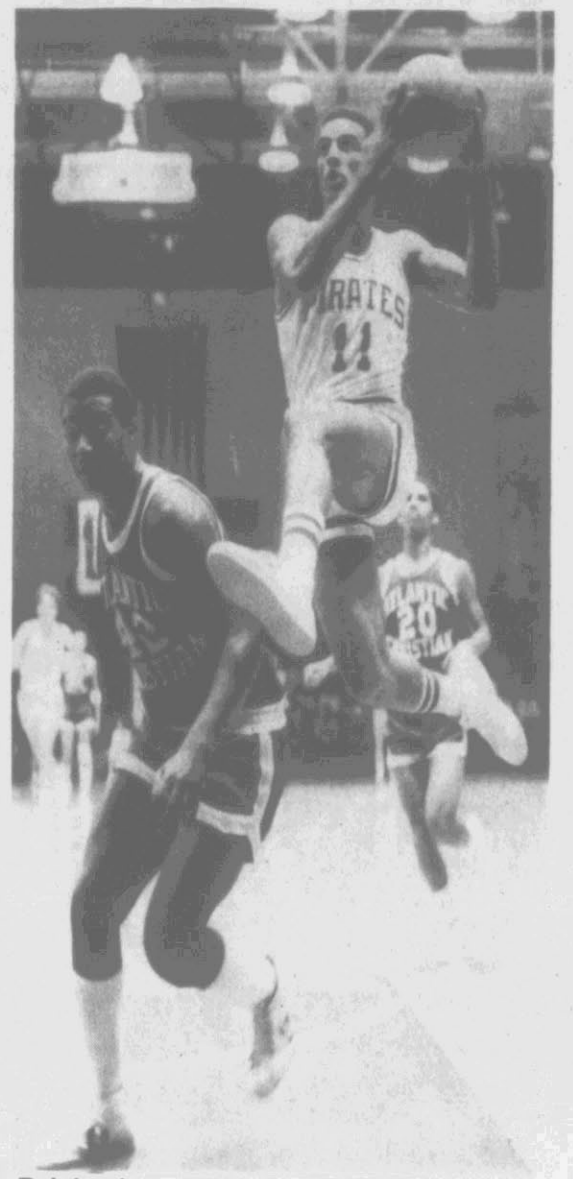

David Underwood and Michael Gibson each scored four points during the stretch. That streak put the game out of reach for the Bulldogs, and snapped a two-game losing skein for the Pirates, who are now 7-8 on the year. During the second half, the Pirates held Atlantic Christian, now 5-9, to just six field goals in 30 tries (an icy 30.2 per cent), while pouring in 21 of 39 on their own.

"It was obviously our best half of basketball," Coach Dave Odom said. "We were looking pretty good, and everyone contributed." But, he didn't want to talk much about the first half. In that, the Pirates were sluggish and seemed to be unable to do much with their pesky neighbor from Wilson. During the half, the game was tied on eight occasions, and saw seven lead changes. Atlantic Christian led by as much as four, 22-18, while the Pirates got no further out than three, the last time at 31-28.

But in the second half, it was an entirely different story. "We were ignited by a good defense, steals, good passing and good board work," Odom said. "That, and we shut them out in the first four minutes of the second half. That gave us the chance to run it up like we did." While Odom noted that it was a game the Pirates should have won, he was happy to get everyone into the action — and everyone scored at least one point.

"I think too, for the first time, the crowd enjoyed the game. There seems to be a spirit there that hasn't been there before. And we need to thank whoever is responsible. The cheerleaders need credit for what they are doing now too." The first half saw East Carolina hit only 46.4 per cent of its shots, while ACC made just 39.4 per cent. Both made the same number of field goals, 13, and the Pirates held a one-shot edge at the line. What helped the Bulldogs stay in the game was an 11-6 edge in turnovers against the Pirates.

In the second half, however, it was a turnaround in turnovers. East Carolina forced the Bulldogs into 13, while committing only seven of their own, and that helped the Pirates take nine more shots. Many of them were layups off fast breaks or drives to the basket, resulting in high percentage shots. Barry Wright started the second half drive after almost 30 seconds and Gibson followed 30 seconds later, then scored again on a jumper from the

"I think we can still be a good basketball team. But I feel we need more film work. A lot of times our young kids think that they are playing well, but when you can show them their mistakes on film, it has a greater impact." "Now, too, we've got to look to UNC-Charlotte. I want that game badly." That comes up on Tuesday, in the Charlotte Coliseum. The Pirates, with their most balanced attack of the year, had only three players in

Robinson Gets Second Chance

By DAVID EINSTEN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After the Cleveland Indians fired him in 1977, Frank Robinson — major league baseball's first black manager — thought he'd never get another chance. Now that he has, he intends to make the most of it. "I hope and feel like I can justify the faith the Giants organization has shown in me," Robinson said Wednesday after being named San Francisco manager. "I feel like I can bring leadership to this ball club." The 45-year-old former star outfielder said at a news conference at Candlestick Park that he had sought another chance to manage in the major leagues since the Indians let him go after 2½ seasons. But he said that until Giants' owner Bob Lurie contacted him, no other team had offered him even a nibble. For the last two seasons he has been first-base coach with the Baltimore Orioles. "I felt that I'd never get another chance," said Robinson. "A lot of people asked me why and I said for the simple reason that from the time I left Cleveland until a week ago, no one from any other organization ever contacted me." "I just felt like evidently I did something wrong or someone had said something against me and had spread it around baseball, and it was like hands-off." "The more openings that became available and the more I was passed over, the more I felt that I was right," he said. Robinson was accused of a lack of communication with his players at Cleveland, but he denied that, saying, "I didn't have communication problems. Some of the players there that I had problems with just didn't like what I had to say." He promised an "open-door" policy with the Giants, adding that "the door swings both ways. I can go out into the locker room and get them and bring them into my office, and they can walk through the door to my office and feel right at home." Lurie was lavish in his praise of Robinson, who he said had agreed to a multi-year contract. Details were not disclosed.

"I think he knows how to manage, he knows how to win and he knows how to communicate," said Lurie. "I think Frank will have the ability to earn the respect of the players and fans in a very short time. And I think he can bring back a winning tradition to the Giants that is desperately needed." Lurie had searched for a new manager since firing Dave Bristol last month at baseball's winter meetings. Under Bristol, the Giants finished fifth last season in the National League West. Robinson said he hoped to take the Giants back to the top, but cautioned that "I don't look for that to happen overnight and I don't think anyone in the organization expects it to happen overnight." "But I think in time it will happen," he added. Robinson managed Baltimore's Class AAA Rochester, N.Y., team for part of the 1978 season before joining the coaching staff of the Orioles. Robinson left an impressive record in a 21-year big league playing career which started in 1956 with the Cincinnati Reds and ended in 1976 as player-manager for the Indians. Eleven times he was named to the All-Star Game, and his 586 home runs place him fourth on the all-time list. He was the only man ever to be named Most Valuable Player in both the National and American leagues, winning the award in 1961 with Cincinnati and 1966 with Baltimore.

Pitt Captures Sixth Straight Loop Victory

JACKSONVILLE — Pitt Community College continued to roll along in conference play last night, romping past Coastal Carolina Community College, 104-75. The victory was the ninth in 11 games for the Paladins, and brought their conference record to 6-0 on the year. After the two teams exchanged the lead over the first five minutes of the first half, Pitt went to its press and forced numerous turnovers for easy baskets, and the Paladins roared out to a 44-31 lead by intermission. In the second half, they outit Coastal, 60-44, to win handily. "They couldn't handle our press in the first half," Coach Linwood Woodard said. "We got good play from our guards, who made a lot of steals." While the press was not as effective in the second half, the Paladins were almost as successful with their man-to-man defense. "They used a zone, and refused to come out of it, so we attacked it and were able to get the ball inside against them," Woodard added. That was attested by 26 points from center Jeff Tyson, who led the Paladin scoring. Other Pitt players in double figures included Dennis Batts with 15, Mike Baker with 11, Mike Horne with 18, Dennis Pitt with 13 and Frankie Dail with 13. Coastal Carolina was led by Robert Eaves and Fred Peterson, each with 15, while Calvin Butler had 12. "We're still committing too many fouls," Woodard said, "and we've got to work on that." Pitt returns to action on Tuesday, hosting the Methodist College junior varsity at North Pitt.

Deacs, Heels, Cavs Take ACC Victories

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
In Winston-Salem, they call Wake Forest freshman forward Danny Young "Cool Breeze," and on Wednesday night he provided his teammates with a breath of fresh air at just the right time. Young stepped up to the free throw line with eight seconds left in the game and sank two free throws to lead the No. 5 Demon Deacons to a 76-73 victory over Duke. In other Atlantic Coast Conference games, North Carolina's Al Wood sank two free throws with nine seconds left as the 17th-ranked Tar Heels captured a narrow 73-70 victory over North Carolina State. At College Park, Md., Jeff Lamp sank a jump shot with six seconds left to lead No. 2 Virginia to a 66-64 victory over 10th-ranked Maryland.

Clemson managed to find enough healthy players to field a team against The Citadel and take an 82-58 decision.

Young's free throws overshadowed an 18-point second half performance by Duke's Gene Banks, who finished the game with 20 points. The free throws themselves capped an eight-for-10 showing by the Demon Deacons in the last two minutes of play.

Duke had fallen behind by as many as 13 points in the period, but rallied on the strength of Banks' inside shooting. The Blue Devils came to within one point twice inside two minutes, but could not find the crucial basket. Meanwhile, Young ignored a noisy Cameron Indoor Stadium crowd and salvaged Wake Forest's 13th victory of the year without a loss.

"They (the fans) didn't bother me," Young said. "They aren't as high as the basket and that's what I'm concentrating on." Five Demon Deacons finished in double figures, including Frank Johnson's 19 points, and 12 points each from Alvis Rogers, Jim Johnstone and Mike Helms. However, the best point of the night may have come from reserve center Chuck Dahms.

"Now you know why we call him 'Cool Breeze.' You won't find a smoother freshman," Dahms said.

Wood suffered a shoulder injury in the first half of North Carolina's matchup with arch rival N.C. State. But he convinced coach Dean Smith to let him finish the game.

"The trainer told me at half that Al probably wouldn't be able to play the second half," Smith said. "But Al talked to me, so we let him go."

James Worthy scored 22 points for the Tar Heels, many coming on clutch baskets in the second half when the Tar Heels were trying to protect a lead they momentarily lost in the final minutes.

"Our kids did a helluva job coming back in the second half," said Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano. "I couldn't ask anything more out of our kids than they have given."

Lamp scored four points in the final nine seconds of play, including the 18-foot jumper that preserved Virginia's 17-game winning streak — the nation's longest by a college basketball team. However, coach Terry Holland described Lamp's performance as a decoy.

He said he would like to have used center Ralph Sampson for high-percentage shots, "but let's face it, they play us inside so it's just a good thing we can go to Jeff."

Holland said the winning basket was not a set play, but added that Sampson has to serve as a decoy.

"We know we can get the ball to Lamp, and sometimes we just can't get it to Sampson. Jeff can take the shot because he knows if he doesn't make it Ralph can get the rebound," Holland said.

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said his team did not track team has altered its schedule for the weekend.

Instead of participating in the Florida Invitational, the Pirates will run in a tri-meet in Chapel Hill against both South Carolina and North Carolina.

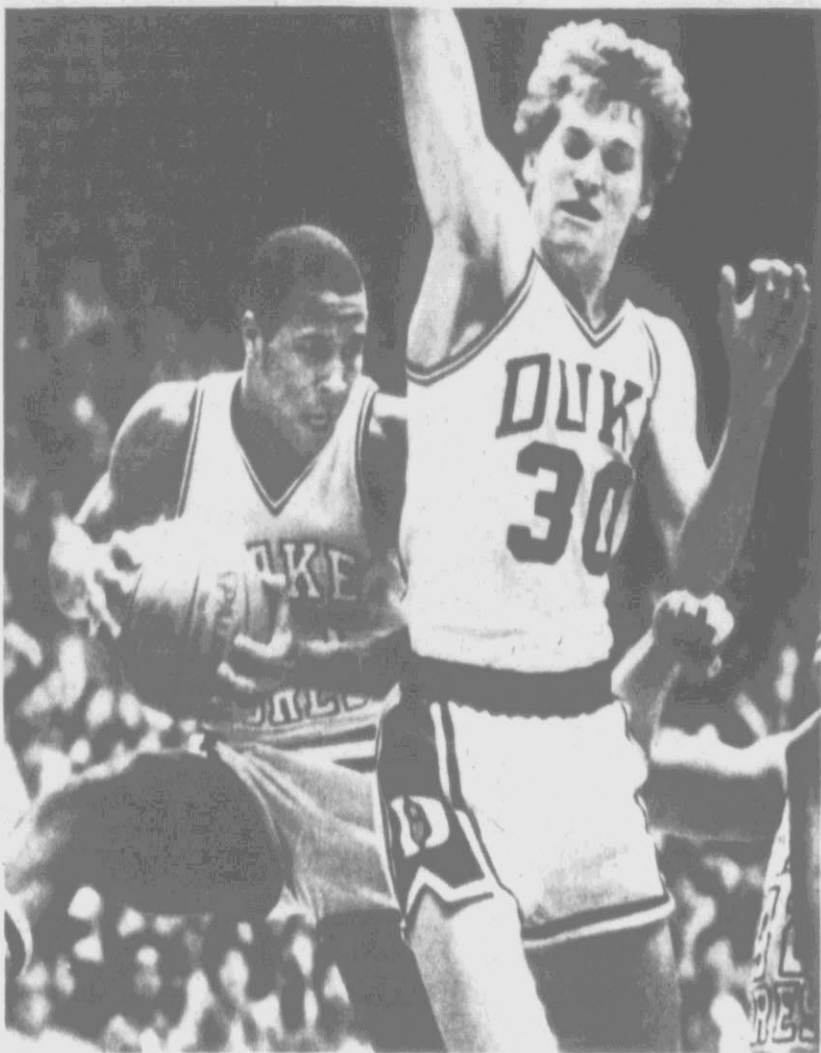

East Carolina will enter only three events: the quarter mile, the 600 and the mile relay.

Another previously scheduled meet, the Vitalis Olympic Invitational in New York, has been cancelled.

Bulldogs. He found one in forward Fred Gilliam, whose performances had been sickly in recent weeks.

Gilliam scored 20 points on nine of 16 from the floor, with Larry Nance chipping in 14. Foster was quite happy with the results of the victory, Clemson's 13th in 15 games, for more than obvious reasons.

"First, it's against an in-state foe, and those help you feel better about yourself," he said. "Secondly, I really like the intensity we showed in the game. Our guys got out there after them the whole game."

McEnroe, Borg Meeting In Masters Net Event

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There is something special about John McEnroe-Bjorn Borg tennis matches. The crowds buy all the tickets, the media point to them and the history books reserve a page for them.

The two giants of the game, who split two five-set struggles last year at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, meet again tonight in the $400,000 Volvo Grand Prix Masters Tennis championships. This time, however, there is somewhat of a black mark to spoil the buildup.

In Wednesday night's first round of the eight-man, round-robin format, McEnroe was ambushed by Gene Mayer, a virtual unknown (although he is ranked fourth in the world) who never has won a major tournament.

Mayer, fifth in points on the 1980 Grand Prix circuit, took advantage of McEnroe's five double faults that enabled Mayer to break the No. 1 seed's service twice in the third set en route to a 3-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory. It was his first tournament triumph over one of tennis' Big Three — Borg, McEnroe or Jimmy Connors. In other first-day matches, Borg dispatched Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina 6-3, 6-4; Connors outlasted Argentina's Guillermo Vilas 6-2, 4-6, 6-0; and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia pounded Harold Solomon 6-3, 6-1.

"I never really worried about not having beaten one of the big names because until last year I was never in their class in the world rankings," Mayer said. "You don't even think about beating them when you're ranked 60th."

Despite McEnroe's crucial double faults in the third set, his service was devastating for most of the match. He had 17 aces and never lost a service game until the third set.

Mayer won the second-set tiebreaker 7-5 to turn the match around.

"I hung in well when he was serving well," Mayer said. "Then I started serving well and his serve dropped off. The tiebreaker really changed the momentum."

McEnroe collapsed in the third set after the tiebreaker. On the first point, he put a forehead volley into the net and double-faulted the next three points to lose his serve for the first time.

Mayer also broke McEnroe's serve in the fifth game when McEnroe double-faulted twice more.

Mayer said McEnroe, who refused to appear for post-match interviews, was "noticeably bothered by some linesmen's calls. But I don't know if they affected his play. In the past, he sometimes played better after a bad call."

Borg was in control the whole match against Clerc, but Vilas seemed capable of a comeback victory after winning the second set over Connors. Then the Belleville, Ill., native crushed the Argentinian in the final set.

Lendl, who last month led Czechoslovakia to its first Davis Cup championship, simply overpowered Solomon, who lost to Lendl 6-1, 6-0, 6-0 in the U.S. Open last year.

A victory by McEnroe in tonight's sold-out match with Borg would keep him in the running for a semifinal berth on Saturday and a loss by Borg would not be fatal to his chances. Sunday's final, with $100,000 for the winner, is scheduled for Sunday.

Name Two As Coaches

East Carolina University has named Tim Ricks and Caroline Brown as its new tennis coaches, it was announced today.

Ricks, who served as the tennis coach at Rose High School, is a 1979 graduate of East Carolina. He is 24. In addition to serving as the Rose coach last spring, he also served as a part-time tennis pro with the Greenville Country Club.

A native of Godfords, Ricks is completing work on a masters degree in education at East Carolina.

Brown, 31, is a Belton, S.C., native, who graduated from Furman, where she coached field hockey from 1971-75. From 1975-77, she toured with the Avon Futures Women's Professional Tennis Circuit. After leaving the pro tour, she coached field hockey at Wake Forest.

Gymnasts Host Two

William & Mary and Radford will be visiting East Carolina Friday night for a gymnastics meet against the Lady Pirates. The meet, in Minges Coliseum, gets underway at 7 p.m.

East Carolina will be out to top the Lady Indians, who topped them twice by large margins last year. East Carolina and Radford met once last year on a dual meet basis, with the Lady Pirates winning, 115.2 to 113.2. The Highlanders, however, beat the Lady Bucs in the regionals, 122.0 to 119.8.

Following that meet, the Pirates will be playing host to Montgomery College and James Madison in a tri-meet Saturday in Minges. That meet is set to get underway at 1 p.m.

East Carolina will be boosted by the return of Nan George, following knee surgery, but she will be limited to uneven bar competition. Elizabeth Jackson will be the only all-around competitor, as Kathy McNeerney is restricted to the beam and bars due to a chipped ankle bone.

Lisa Tamarru and Joanie Ford will compete on the beam, bars and floor exercises, and the beam, vault and floor exercises, respectively. Claudia Hauck will participate in the vault, bars and floor exercises.

To Host Golf Event

East Carolina will play host to its first invitational golf tournament even in March, with an 11-team field.

The East Carolina University Invitational will be played March 9-11 at Brook Valley Country Club in Greenville.

Teams scheduled to compete are North Carolina, N.C. State, UNC Charlotte, UNC-Wilmington, Campbell, Old Dominion, Temple, William & Mary, Appalachian State and Duke.

"We are extremely pleased to bring these fine teams to Greenville for what we hope is the beginning of a very big spring tournament each year," Bob Helmick, ECU golf coach, said.

"If this tournament does as well as we expect, then we hope to host a fall tournament in the future," he added. "We have a strong field for this first time, and I think with more advance notice in the future, that we will have even more top golf teams come to Greenville and play."

The Pirate golf team will be in its spring schedule February 26 through March 1, playing in the Seminole Classic at Florida State University in Tallahassee.

Rose Faces Two Tough League Tests

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School may have learned an important lesson last week when it played Rocky Mount — or rather was on the court when Rocky Mount handed the Rampants an 80-44 licking.

Since then, the Rampants have recorded a 67-65 overtime victory over pre-season favorite Beddingfield, a 61-57 revenge win over D.H. Conley, and a 66-48 romp over Bertie.

In all three of the games, the Rampants have burned the nets, shooting over 55 per cent from the field, and that has been one of the key factors in the three victories.

The two Division I win, coupled with an earlier win over Northern Nash, have propelled Rose into an early season tie for second place with Wilson Fike. Both teams are 3-1 in conference games, trailing front-runner Wilson Hunt by one game. Hunt is 4-0.

Now, with their next two games, the Rampants have a chance, by winning both, to move into no worse than a tie for first place — and with a little help Friday night, sole possession of first place.

Friday night, Rose comes home after two straight road games, to host Fike in a key game, with second place definitely up for grabs. Then, on Tuesday, Rose travels to Hunt, and by then, it could be a battle for first place.

"These next two are very important for us," Coach Jim Brewington said. "If we win these next two we could be in very good shape as the first round of play comes to an end." After these two, Rose has only one more first round game left, with winless Northeastern.

"Of course, if we were to lose both of them, we'd be in bad shape. It's like it was last year in this league, every win is very, very important," Brewington said.

While Beddingfield was one of the early season picks, neither Fike and Hunt were placed out of the championship picture. And both appear to be living up to their reputations.

"Fike is not that big," Brewington said, "but they are quick. They move the ball up and down the court in a hurry. They score a lot of points, but they give up a lot too. They don't play that much defense."

Hunt, picked by many as the dark-horse candidate for the championship, returned two fine guards to its team, and they have been the leaders for the Warriors so far. "They are averaging about 35 to 40 points a game between them," Brewington noted. "One of their guards, Jerry Strayhorn, is probably the best guard in the conference."

Brewington credits the hot-shooting of recent games to better shot selection by the Rampants. "We've stopped forcing our shots," he said. "I think maybe we're getting a little older. We made right many layups in the Bertie game. We lost to Rocky Mount because we took too many shots we shouldn't have."

Rebounding, at least early in the game, has been a problem for the Rampants too, and that worries Brewington some. In both the Beddingfield and Bertie games, Rose lost the battle of the boards in the first half, but came back to dominate them in the second half. In a close game, that could prove fateful.

Too, against Bertie, Rose suffered from turnovers late in the game. "We got to rushing things against their press. When we took our time, we got the ball in for easy shots. And, I think we got a little tired toward the end of the game."

The Rampants are almost certain to see the press on Friday, a play which Fike enjoys using. "I think we can handle it, however," Brewington said.

Brewington also feels he may be using Donald Johnson a little more than he should be. "I'd like to rest him more, but he's such a good leader and he handles the ball well when we're pressed. It's just tough to take him out."

the two are among the leaders in the league, so it will not get any easier for the Rampettes.

On the wrestling front, the Rampant matmen will be trying to improve on their record, which has seen them win but two matches all year. They travel to Fike on Friday, and entertain Hunt on Tuesday.

The Rampant swimmers are off during the coming seven days, returning to action on Saturday, January 24 at Ravenscroft.

Rampants Top Northern Nash

Rose High School's wrestlers picked up their second victory of the season last night, downing Northern Nash, 56-18.

The Rampants won all but three of the 13 weights, including six on forfeits. Two of the three Northern Nash wins came on forfeits. Of the five wrestled matches, Rose won four, and all five were decided by pins.

The win brought Rose to 2-7 on the year. The Rampants travel to Fike on Friday for their next action.

Summary:

100: Ken Davis (R) won by forfeit.

107: Milton Phillips (NN) won by forfeit.

114: Dennis Kilcoyne (R) won by forfeit.

121: Vincent Murphy (R) won by forfeit.

128: Jay Holley (R) pinned Richard Griffin, 1:32.

187: Robert Brown (R) won by forfeit.

197: Stuart Ward (R) won by forfeit.

HWT: John Cloyd (NN) won by forfeit.

Kiss And A Hug Bring Historic NCAA Convention To A Close

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Ed Malan walked up to Donna Lopiano and put his arms around the woman he had been fighting for five days.

"We've got a lot of work to do, Donna," he said. "I think you fought a good fight and I sure hope we can work together."

Malan, the faculty representative from Pomona-Pitzer College in California and a member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association council was putting his best and most conciliatory foot forward at the end of an often bitter and divisive convention that saw the NCAA assimilate the women's athletic movement.

Lopiano, president of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, had led the fight against the NCAA's entry into female athletics. But she and her colleagues suffered close, stinging defeats as the record number of 1,220 delegates adopted by a razor-thin margin plans to put women in the association's governing structure and for Division I schools to sponsor women's championships.

The victors went to great lengths when the convention adjourned Wednesday to show they are not trying to run up the score.

"I would like to compliment the AIAW women," Bill Flynn of Boston College said in his final remarks from the podium. "They are true professionals. They took their defeats like champions. We respect you a great deal."

Then Flynn handed the gavel

The controversial moves adopted will break 75 years of male domination of the NCAA.

It was made historic by Laverne Sweat of Hampton Institute, Va.; Judie Holland, UCLA; Gwen Norell, Michigan State and Betty Kruczek, Fitchburg State, Miss., who were all elected to the powerful NCAA Council, the first women ever to hold seats on that body.

It was also historic, said NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers, "in the sense that the leading institutions of higher education surrendered to a national organization certain prerogatives in academic areas they never did in the past."

Byers was referring to a new rule mandating that an athlete must complete one-fifth of a degree program each year to remain eligible.

An expected maneuvering to reverse the vote on women's programs of Tuesday never materialized. Instead, immediate past AIAW president Christine Grant of Iowa, made an eloquent, moving speech of protest.

"I rise in symbolic opposition," she said. "It is difficult to describe the actions taken in the last three days. I, and many other women, came here convinced that a desire for mutual accommodation between AIAW and NCAA would far outweigh any thirst for precipitous action. Obviously I was in error."

The bidding:

Pass 4 ♦ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

The play of the cards is an art, not a science. Therefore, no amount of coaching will make the average player become an expert. But there are many facets of technique that can be learned with a minimum of study. The counting of a hand is an example.

South's overall of East's opening no trump bid needs no sanction from this department. Despite the fact that he had no distributional values, North felt that his high cards merited a raise, and South boldly pushed on to game.

West led the jack of hearts, and declarer could see three sure losers in the red suits. (East had to have the heart ace for his no trump opener). Therefore, it seemed that the fate of the contract hinged on successful spade and club finesses. There was a slight additional chance that East held only a doubleton ace-queen of hearts. That possibility vanished quickly when East followed to the first trick with the seven, and the defense continued with two more rounds of hearts.

Declarer ruffed the third round, crossed to the ace of diamonds and successfully passed the ten of spades. When this won, declarer continued with the nine, running it again as East played low and West stuffed a heart.

Before making the "automatic" play of drawing the last trump, declarer paused to review what he knew about the hands. He had seen 23 high-card points in his hand and dummy, and West had shown up with 1 point—the jack of hearts. Therefore, East had to have every one of the missing points to give him the 16 points he needed for his one no trump opening bid. That meant that the finesse for the queen of clubs was doomed to fail!

There is nothing in the Laws of Bridge that says that declarer is honor bound to make a play that must lose. Indeed, declarer found a way to give himself a 50 percent chance of bringing home his contract.

Instead of drawing the last trump, declarer led the jack of clubs from dummy. East covered and declarer won the ace. Now he drew the last trump, then led a club to dummy's nine. This maneuver, known as a "backward finesse," succeeded and the contract rolled home.

Jenrette Lawyer 'Not Worried' Over Money

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — An attorney for former Rep. John Jenrette says he's not worried by reports that $1,300 of the $25,000 found in Jenrette's closet may have been Abscam payoff money.

"Now, if they had found $5,000 or $8,000, it would have bothered me," Kenneth Robinson told The State. "Of course, I would have preferred that none of it had been found. But I think it is explainable."

Jenrette, who said during his trial that he had taken no money, was convicted Oct. 13 of taking $50,000 from undercover agents in the FBI's Abscam operation. The money was not recovered.

His conviction is under appeal and he has not been sentenced. Rita Jenrette, who plans to divorce her husband, said she found the $25,000 in a brown suede shoe while packing his clothes and believed it was Abscam money.

Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti said Wednesday an aide had reported that serial numbers on some of the bills were traced to an Abscam payoff to Jenrette and his co-defendant, businessman John R. Stowe.

He spoke at a news conference on Abscam leaks, and when questioned about the serial numbers, Civiletti said:

"It was reported to me to be accurate. It was not a formal report and I don't want to jeopardize Mr. Jenrette's rights. I don't know if that is absolutely true. It may not be so. It may be that the money was not so identified," he said.

Robinson said he doesn't believe Jenrette committed perjury. But he vowed that if perjury charges were lodged against his client, "It will be a real dogfight. We will be trying Rita."

When news of the cash find was announced, Jenrette said, "I'll walk into jail right now if the money was found to be part of an Abscam bribe."

He said the $25,000 came from a variety of sources, including his dead mother. Reached at his Washington townhouse Wednesday, Jenrette said he knew nothing about Civiletti's statement.

The State said it was "highly unlikely" the government would prosecute the convicted politician on perjury charges.

"We are not inclined to go for perjury when we've got a stiffer conviction," a source told The State.

A videotape played at Jenrette's trial showed Stowe accepting a $50,000 payoff from undercover agents. Jenrette said he took a $10,000 loan from Stowe that he later assumed was part of the Abscam payoff.

Stowe maintained he kept $10,000 and gave $40,000 to Jenrette.

The former congressman testified he gave $10,000 to his wife's parents to pay off a debt. Robinson suggested Mrs. Jenrette may have mixed some of that money with the Jenrette's own funds when she took it to her parents in Austin, Texas.

Mrs. Jenrette was reported to be staying with Rudy and Kathleen Maxa. Maxa is a gossip columnist for the Washington Post. Mrs. Maxa has co-authored an article with Mrs. Jenrette for the April issue of Playboy.

Mrs. Maxa and Mrs. Jenrette also co-authored an article titled "Diary of a Mad Congresswife" which detailed Jenrette's alcoholism and adultery and accused his Sixth District cronies of sexual excesses and corruption.

In The Mail

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Checks totaling nearly $11 million are being mailed this week to 106,900 North Carolina families and individuals eligible for financial assistance in meeting their winter heating bills.

Kay Fields, chief of the state's assistance program, said the payments average $109, with a range of $39 to $237. Ms. Fields said additional money may be sent to some of the recipients later.

The payments are coming from an allocation of $33.2 million by the federal government for assistance in North Carolina this winter. The program is being funded by the windfall profits tax levied on crude oil producers.

Ms. Fields said the first batch of checks were going to those who applied before Jan. 6. Other applicants will receive the money in February or March, depending on when they were determined eligible.

"Latest estimates indicate that between 210,000 to 220,000 households across the state will be determined eligible for this winter's Low-Income Energy Assistance program," she said.

The amount paid to each applicant is based on household income, type of heating fuel used, and the expected temperature in the part of the state where the recipients live.

Ms. Fields said the deadline for filing applicants has been extended until next Thursday. The applications are made at local county social services departments.

She said the state has asked federal authorities to raise payment levels to North Carolina recipients.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Workaholic Must Learn to Use Leisure

My husband works constantly. Even when he comes home after a heavy day's work he brings his papers with him. Sometimes he is so tired that he never even opens his briefcase. He seems to feel that if he brings the papers home, at least he's thinking about work even if he can't do it.

When I talk to him about resting and taking time off he says that he'll have enough time after he retires. This doesn't make sense to me. I just don't know how to tackle this problem.

Mrs. S.R., Ind.
Dear Mrs. R.:

Your husband is not alone in his compulsive drive to work. Thousands of people like him believe that when they are finally retired from their jobs they then will develop hobbies and learn how to use their leisure time.

Unfortunately they come to a rude awakening when, after retirement, they find that their greatest burden is the leisure they had looked forward to.

Leisure is a very difficult commodity to handle unless you prepare for it many years in advance of retirement.

I recall a very significant statement made by a patient of mine who had been retired prematurely after a lifetime of hard factory work. I am sure that he was given, along with others, the routine luncheon and inscribed watch and told, "Now you are free to find a hobby." He didn't.

I asked him one day what he missed most now that he was retired. His answer poignantly emphasized the key to his problem. He said, "The thing I miss most are my vacations."

Here he was, with a lifetime of "vacations." That which he didn't have was the capability of utilizing time and leisure.

New York psychiatrist Dr. Jay B. Rohrlich in his book "Work And Love, The Crucial Balance," attacks this problem with clarity, insight, and wisdom. In the book, published by Summit Books, Dr. Rohrlich traces the effect of incessant work on the worker himself and on his family. He points out that it is imperative that people extricate themselves from the stresses and pressures of work and learn early to establish a sane balance between work, family and leisure.

The psychological implications of addiction to work may give many people like yourselves a greater comprehension of the forces at play that effect individual and family happiness. The book has many concrete suggestions of how to free oneself from patterns of living that seem fixed and irreversible.

A discussion with your own doctor, with a psychologist, psychiatrist, or social worker may more clearly define the pathways that will lead you both to greater personal happiness.

Denies Slavery Tacitly Backed

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A Lutheran historian says that "no one may take the position on slavery that the New Testament does and call it Christian."

The Rev. Jaroslav Pelikan of Yale University said in a lecture at Assumption College that a change in Christian thought about slavery had brought the reforms against it in the 19th century.

He suggested to his mainly Catholic audience that a parallel issue in this century may involve the role of women, including their ordination, even though that tradition may not be reflected in the New Testament.

Another Record Grape Crush

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The 1980 grape crush for California wine set an all-time record of 2.852 million tons, an 11 percent increase over last year, says John De Luca, president of the Wine Institute. De Luca says the range of grape quality is reported very good to outstanding. The institute is the trade association of California's vintners and wine growers.

Associated Press Writer
MORANBAH, Australia (AP) — Coal is king in this sweltering Queensland outback town — the forefront of the minerals boom sweeping Australia.

Foreign investors lining up to invest in Australian mining developments have sent stock exchanges into a frenzy of trading unseen since the last great mining boom of the 1960s. A billion dollars worth of foreign investment poured into Australia in October alone, much of it into mining stocks.

Moranbah typifies the investors dream of striking it rich in Australia.

A decade ago the sparsely timbered country was inhabited by cattle, kangaroos and emus.

Today it is a thriving town of 6,000 people, with neatly trimmed lawns, tropical gardens, swimming pools, sports fields and the Black Nugget Motel.

The workers at the open cut mines in the area are among the highest paid in Australia, averaging the equivalent in Australian dollars of 29,000 U.S. dollars a year.

Last year the company, called Utah, recorded a net profit of $161.39 million.

But the success of Utah, which has a minority of 10.8 percent Australian ownership, has raised questions in Australia about ownership of the nation's vast resources.

The federal government has set a minimum of 50 percent as the desirable Australian equity in future projects with the exception of uranium where the guidelines call for 75 percent Australian ownership.

Much of the investment is coming from the United States.

The scale of the mining boom has stretched Australian resources to the limit, leaving foreign investment as the only alternative source of funding.

Government officials have estimated that projects worth $35 billion to $46 billion are under way or planned for the next decade.

As the total deposits in Australian savings banks amount to about $45 billion even the most fervent nationalists concede that foreign investment is needed if the projects are to go ahead.

On the drawing boards are:

—Coal: Australia is already the world's third largest coal exporter. The government expects to equal or overtake the United States by 1990. Australia has 2 percent of the world's coal, much of it obtainable by open cut methods.

—Uranium: Australia has 18 percent of the world's low cost uranium reserves and the government is committed to mining and exporting to countries which accept Australia's requirements for safeguarding waste material from reactors. Uranium enrichment is also being studied.

—Bauxite: Australia has 18 percent of the world's bauxite, from which aluminum is obtained. This resource has been developed mainly by U.S. companies. The availability of cheap electric power generated from new power stations on the eastern seaboard coal fields had led to plans for seven aluminum smelters which will lift Australian exports from 250,000 to 1.2 million tons by 1985.

—Natural gas: Development of huge offshore gas reserves on the northwest shelf in the Indian Ocean is under way in what will be the country's biggest-ever resource development to date. The consortium developing the northwest shelf expects to export six million tons of liquefied natural gas a year. California Asiatic Oil, Texaco and Shell are partners with Australian companies in the venture.

—Oil Shale: Australia has several large deposits of easily accessible oil shale. Initial work is expected to begin in 1981 on a pilot plant at the Rundle Deposit in Queensland. The project will eventually cost $12 billion to develop production of 200,000 barrels of oil a day. The U.S. oil giant Exxon is one of the partners in the development.

Australia is already the world's largest exporter of iron ore, lead and mineral sands. It is one of the largest exporters of manganese, nickel, zinc, tungsten, silver, coal, bauxite and copper.

It also produces 60 percent of its own oil.

There are problems, however, and one of them is the lack of skilled manpower.

The profits generated by companies like Utah has led to some resentment by Australians and to tough demands by unionists for high wage scales and fringe benefits.

At Moranbah, the miners live in houses built by the company. The rent is $5 a week. They get five weeks' vacation a year and are asking for six weeks.

Despite the high wages, Utah is plagued by strikes and union unrest.

To counteract charges that it is ripping off the country, Utah commissioned a survey by a leading accountant which found taxes and other government charges in Australia were higher than in any of the other five major coal-producing nations — West Germany, Canada, Indonesia, South Africa and the United States.

The government's share of income after production costs was 65.7 percent compared with 54.6 percent in the other countries.

This cut little ice with unionists who have been picketing Utah's offices in Brisbane for two years demanding the company use Australian crews on its ships.

Doubt Cutting Budget Likely

NEW YORK (AP) — Unless President-elect Ronald Reagan makes unprecedented spending cuts, the current federal budget deficit, projected at about $60 billion, will not be substantially reduced, according to an analysis by the Conference Board.

An "all out effort" by the Reagan administration might result in $5 billion in cuts from 1981 outlays, said Michael E. Levy, director of economic policy research for the business-supported research organization. But a tax cut could enlarge the deficit by $10 billion to $15 billion, Levy said.

STAGE SHOWS — Carowinds representatives will be here, looking for musicians, technicians, singers and dancers for the park's live shows which include a Broadway musical and a country music presentation. Above are some of the cast members of "Hooray For Hollywood" chosen in last year's auditions.

Wide Variety Of Talents Sought In Carowinds' Auditions Sunday

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer

If you are interested in gaining stage experience in dancing, singing, or in playing a musical instrument, now is your chance. This Sunday from 4-7 p.m. at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina campus, representatives from Carowinds theme park will hold auditions in search for talent to perform in the 1981 live shows at Carowinds. Technicians are also needed.

The two largest shows scheduled for the '81 season are "Hurray for Hollywood," a complete Broadway review, and "I Believe In Country." You need not make an appointment — just show up. Musical groups, however, are asked to contact the Carowinds live shows department prior to auditioning. Players of the trumpet, trombone, tuba, sax, blue grass fiddle, and rhythm section are needed.

"The only stipulation we have for auditioning," said John Downie, director of operations for the Entertainment Department of Kings Productions, "is that you must be at least 16 years of age, be in good health, and be able to relocate." He said that it would be nice for those auditioning to have some stage experience, but that it is not mandatory. "It's the talent that we are looking for," Downie said. Auditions are strictly first come first serve.

Downie, a 1979 ECU graduate from the Music Education Department, has been working for theme parks since 1976. During his summer breaks from ECU, he played in bands at Kings Dominion and Busch Gardens. After graduation, he returned to Kings Island and since that time has been working as director of operations for the Entertainment Department of Kings Productions.

Downie, 24, is from Roanoke, Virginia. As a former member of the Student Union Artists Series, a Presser Scholar in the School of Music, and a Who's Who, he is now making his way by "helping others make their way." Downie said that his involvement in extracurricular activities while at ECU was the strongest factor of his educational background that qualified him for a position of this nature. Monday was the first time he has been back to his alma mater since graduation.

Downie will be among the three panel members judging the auditions Sunday afternoon. Downie said he advises those who would like to audition to be prepared. Singers should prepare an uptempo song and a ballad. Dancers will be asked to perform two minutes of their best routine. Musicians should demonstrate their ability by presenting something of a technical nature. Technicians should come to Carowinds Sunday, January 25 from 1-6 p.m. and are asked to bring resumes.

"If you make the first auditions," said Downie, "you will be asked to come to Carowinds for a call-back audition." Rehearsals begin on February 21, and the shows will open March 21. An interesting part of the call-back auditions is that singers will be asked to dance, dancers will be asked to sing, and musicians will be asked to sightread.

"For indoor shows, we use support tapes. So you don't have to have a fully developed voice or have had voice lessons," said Downie, "just be able to carry a tune — the tapes will do the rest." The live outdoor shows, on the other hand, are "the real thing."

According to Downie, performers salaries range from $190 to $236 per week. Travel allowances will be paid to those students commuting over 100 miles to the park in addition to the flat salary rate during the weekend rehearsals.

Carowinds is a small theme park located on the North Carolina-South Carolina border in Charlotte. Performers will be provided with housing packets prior to their arrival in Charlotte. "We do not provide the housing," he said. "Our crews have never had any trouble finding places to live, and we feel that it is important that they act independently and treat this like a real job."

Downie said they are placing their emphasis this year on "atmosphere entertainment." "King's Productions is returning to this concept because it gives theme park goers a sense of excitement and spontaneity," said Downie. "We are looking for mimes, magicians, Dixie Land Bands, barber shop quartets, and strolling musicians in addition to the dancers, singers, and technicians."

Downie and other representatives from Kings Productions will be auditioning in over 35 cities during the next several weeks with over 4500 performers participating. "This is how I got started," smiled Downie. "I find it very fascinating as well as rewarding to help and see people get started. It is unlike working anywhere."

Doctorate' For Burt Reynolds

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds, a college dropout, was dubbed Florida State University's "most illustrious" former student when school officials presented him with an honorary doctorate.

Reynolds, 44, was a halfback on FSU's 1953-54 football team. But after an injury sidelined him, Reynolds left school to become an actor.

Reynolds never forgot his alma mater, however. He has set up an intern program for FSU theater students at the Burt Reynolds Dinner Theater in Jupiter and gave $600,000 to the school to endow a professorship in theater arts.

Reynolds received the doctorate in humane letters on Wednesday. FSU President Bernie Sliger drew a cream-and-cranberry hood over Reynolds' head and called him the school's "most illustrious" former student.

"I'm so touched to have this honor," Reynolds said. "I'm noted for being irreverent about these kinds of things, but I'm not irreverent about this."

Downie said they are placing their emphasis this year on "atmosphere entertainment." ### Pennsylvanian No Questions On Bankruptcy

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis laid himself open to questions from creditors when he took the witness stand in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, but there were no takers.

Lewis, who in October filed with the court for reorganization of his debts, appeared Wednesday to give creditors a chance to question him about his debts and assets.

Under his reorganization plan, Lewis proposes to pay $26,000 of his $50,000 monthly take-home pay to creditors. His estranged wife, Patty, will receive $9,000 a month according to the plan.

Spirit Of Detente Faces Big Strain At Rona & Tom Reunion

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC insists it is only coincidental that Burbank's Studio 5, in which Rona Barrett tapes her portion of "Tomorrow Coast to Coast," is known as the "Fight Back" studio. That's where consumer reporter David Horowitz tapes his syndicated show, "Fight Back."

Of course, But Miss Rona, making her reunion appearance with Tom Snyder in a slightly revised "Tomorrow" this week, might well be in a fighting mood if things continue as they began Monday night.

This was supposed to be the kissed-and-made-up edition of Tom & Rona, Tom & Pona of the Great Understanding. Egos neatly tucked away, they were to forget the unhappy differences of last fall and begin life anew.

Why, just last week Tom Snyder told a captive audience at the Hollywood Radio and Television Society luncheon that "Rona and I had dinner last week — we're friends, we're colleagues." Didn't he?

It will be remembered that the original edition of "Tom & Rona" suffered from a loose format. That is, Tom did the show in New York with Rona in Burbank, but the structure didn't mandate a certain amount of time to be shared between the two stars. This allowed Tom to ... uh, sort of "forget" to cut to Rona a time or two, leaving her in a dead Burbank studio and leaving himself with the entire show.

Rona accused Tom of not wanting to share. Tom's agent said "It's his show." They fussed and fussed until you thought there would be no "Tomorrow." In fact, there wasn't, for a couple of weeks.

Then NBC worked a truce between its two stars, brought in a new producer, a new set for Rona, and renamed the show "Tomorrow Coast to Coast." As it is now, Snyder tapes his show in New York, leaving a hole in it to be filled by Rona in Burbank.

It can be reported that Miss Rona arrived for her portion of the new "Tomorrow Coast to Coast" Monday night in the spirit of detente. She went through her taped segment a few times, retaking until it was perfect, then joked a bit and wished for the best.

Oh, she did suggest "there might be a problem" with the way it's now set up; that is, the fact that she has to squeeze her portion of the show into the time slot that Snyder and his New York crew leave her. But she said, "I'm here to try it and we'll have to hope it works. We'll see tonight."

I hope Rona didn't see Snyder was playing the bad little boy on Monday, giving Miss Rona the rib all the way from New York. One of his guests was Mr. Blackwell, the designer famous for his "10 Worst Dressed" lists.

Mr. Blackwell thought fit to mention that Miss Rona was on his all-time best dressed list.

Then he slugged her with faint praise, going on about how much she's done to improve herself. Then he kicked her a bit, saying, "With all the physical problems that she has gone through, I think she's come through magnificently."

Led by Tom and Mr. Blackwell, the audience applauded Rona's magnificent triumph over her shortcomings. Tom even exaggerated his applause in front of a camera, saying, "See? See? I'm applauding! Uh Ha Ha Ha Ha!"

Ouch. Meanwhile, back in the "Fight Back" studio, Rona was unaware of her Tom's antics. She innocently taped her piece, and left the studio.

Asked Tuesday whether she thought the present setup might continue as it is for a bit, she said, "I'd say for a little bit is the correct terminology."

Maybe it's time for another dinner with her friend and colleague.

Jail Man In Dolphin Case

TOKYO (AP) — Police today arrested and jailed a Canadian conservationist who has admitted freeing 150 dolphins from slaughter pens in the harbor of Shizuoka, a city in central Japan.

Patrick C. Wall, 35, of Stephenville, Newfoundland, was held on suspicion of damaging property and forcible obstruction of business, said a spokesman for the Shizuoka public prosecutor's office. If he is charged, tried and convicted, he could be sentenced to three years in prison.

Wall, a member of the Greenpeace conservation group who arrived in Japan in November, admitted he released the dolphins last month from pens where they awaited slaughter for local consumption.

"I am ready to go to jail if I have to," he told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

He said he opposed the "senseless slaughter" of the mammals and wanted to spotlight what he said was the threat posed by dangerously high concentrations of mercury in dolphin meat.

Authorities said Wall will remain in jail without bail for the next 10 days while officials decide whether to bring charges against him. A police spokesman would not rule out the possibility that Wall, whose visa expires Feb. 13, might be deported.

The fishermen of Shizuoka round up thousands of dolphins each year for local tables.

Other Japanese fishermen on the southern island of Iki kill thousands of the sea mammals each year and sell them primarily for fertilizer. The Iki fishermen, whose actions have drawn international protests, claim the dolphin are "gangsters of the sea" that devour the fish upon which they depend for their livelihood.

Third Son Born To Musician

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lynda Gibb, wife of Bee Gees' musician Barry Gibb, has given birth to their third son.

Mrs. Gibb gave birth to 4-pound, 5-ounce Travis Ryan on Saturday at a hospital in Miami Beach, Carla Schalmann, a Los Angeles publicist, said Wednesday.

Mrs. Gibb, a former Miss Scotland, and the child were expected to return to the couple's Miami Beach home later this week.

The Gibbs' two other sons are Stephen, 7, and Ashley, 3. The internationally known Bee Gees are composed of Gibb and his younger twin brothers, Robin and Maurice.

Barry Gibb also co-produced Barbra Streisand's hit album, "Guilty," which on Tuesday was nominated for five Grammy awards including record, album and song of the year.

The album's title cut, a duet by Gibb and Miss Streisand, earned the pair a nomination for best pop vocal performance by a duo or group.

The Census and Congress

Because of the 1980 census, California voters will elect two more representatives to Congress in 1982 than they elected in 1980. Pennsylvania will lose two representatives. While the total number of lawmakers in the House of Representatives remains the same at 435, the number of representatives from each state may change with changes in population. According to the count the Census Bureau took last April, the population in some northern and eastern states has grown much more slowly than in the South and West. This means that some states will lose seats in the next Congress, while other states will gain seats. This distribution of representatives according to population is called "apportionment."

Simulated Drought On 'Computer Crop'

By JIM KOFSKI
Associated Press Writer
BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — As North Dakota farmers watched their 1980 winter wheat crop shrivel under cloudless skies, a simulated drought devastated a "computer crop" of winter wheat in Fort Collins, Colo.

The computer model can also predict crop yields, as well as anticipate disease, insect pests or weather conditions that might reduce production.

"Results have been widely variable, but we have had some excellent success" with simulated computer crops, says Wayne Willis of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Science and Education Administration in Fort Collins.

The research ties in with a program of satellite observation and earth technology called Agristars — Agriculture and Resource Inventory Surveys Through Aerospace Remote Sensing.

While winter wheat accounts for only 2 percent of North Dakota's total wheat production, the state contributes to the new computer crop technology through the Northern Great Plains Research Center in Mandan.

Galen Hart of the USDA's Economics and Statistics Service in Washington, D.C., said the program has been "concentrating on winter wheat. But we feel if we're successful in this research, an extension to spring wheat wouldn't be a very large extension."

Al Black of the Mandan research center says scientists are feeding detailed information on local crop conditions into the computer in Fort Collins.

"We're measuring all the environmental parameters that affect the crop — precipitation, wind, incoming radiation, net radiation, humidity, soil temperature and air temperature and soil water," he says.

"We're looking for early warnings of losses from insects, disease or adverse weather," Black says. "What is the satellite seeing that might indicate adverse conditions coming on for crop production? The satellite can see almost before we see on the ground potential causes of crop losses due to insects or diseases, because the crop will show up a slightly different color in some areas."

Christmas Tree Meets Are Planned

The North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and the North Carolina Christmas Tree Association are sponsoring a series of meetings for people interested in Christmas tree production.

The meeting dates and locations are as follows: January 15, Johnston County Agricultural Building, Eighth and North Streets, Smithfield; January 21, Iredell County Agricultural Center, Statesville; February 18, Friendship Baptist Church, Ashe County; February 19, Avery County High School, Avery County; February 26, Lake Junaluska, Haywood County.

In eastern North Carolina, Christmas trees are mainly Virginia pine and redcedar. There is increasing interest in Christmas tree growing in the coastal plains. For more information contact Sam Uzzell, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service at 758-1196, 1197 or 6444.

Presented His Bracelet

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Seven years ago, Noni Arey watched on television as a Navy captain returned home from a prisoner-of-war camp in Vietnam. His name was etched on a silver bracelet she had worn for two years.

She saw him on television again last month, this time as a rear admiral returning home from deployment in the Indian Ocean. Her search for R. Byron Fuller had ended, and Wednesday she gave him his POW bracelet at a small and quiet ceremony aboard the USS Eisenhower.

"I sure thought about you a lot over the years. I wondered where you were," said Mrs. Arey, 28, an education specialist at Fort Eustis in Newport News.

She was a college junior in Mobile, Ala., when she asked a friend to get her one of the POW bracelets in September 1971.

"I was very concerned about the POWs. I thought that was one way to show it," she said.

By that time Fuller had been a prisoner of war for four years. He was shot down on July 14, 1967, while leading his attack squadron on a bombing raid near Hanoi.

She finally removed the bracelet in 1973 when she heard that Fuller had been released and she watched his return.

Mrs. Arey remembered even now he was the last one off the homecoming plane. "I was so worried you hadn't come back," she said.

She carried the bracelet around with her for the next seven years, periodically trying to find Fuller. She even thought of going to Florida, where she knew he was from and thought he might be based.

But it wasn't until the Dec. 22 news reports of the Indian Ocean battle group that she found him.

"I was so shocked," she said. "I called my husband to make sure the spelling was the same. I'd just been talking about it a couple of days before."

The admiral gave Mrs. Arey a picture of a plane now on exhibit in the Air and Space Museum in Washington that bears the same name her bracelet did — R. B. Fuller.

By The Associated Press
With fuel prices up and temperatures down, Americans are being forced to dip into savings or swallow their pride and turn to the government for help with heating bills.

In Lansing, Mich., where the temperature has been below zero eight of the last 11 days, Billie Lillie Harrison's family turns the thermostat down to 50 degrees at night to save.

In Boston, a social worker tells of a woman who redeemed her life insurance policy to pay for an oil delivery.

In Montgomery County, Pa., the emergency fuel program is receiving 25-30 calls a day. "We've seen cases where a man who was waiting for open-heart surgery had run out of fuel," said spokesman Ricardo Whittington.

And in Philadelphia, the major utility, Philadelphia Electric, says customers are deferring payments on electric bills from the summer heat wave to pay fuel oil and natural gas bills.

The city has received 5,000 calls for help, some for firewood.

"My heart goes out to these people," said service analyst Yvonne Reed. "So many are into a prideful thing, and that's why they wait so long to call. I say, 'Swallow your pride and keep warm.'"

Temperatures across the Northeast are 25 percent colder than normal so far this winter, according to the American Gas Association in Washington, forcing homeowners to use record amounts of fuel.

But the fuel also costs more, and the increases are staggering.

"It's killing me," said widow Doris Doyle, who owns a small three-bedroom home in the Boston suburb of Weymouth.

"It's cost me about $600 since Nov. 11 to heat my home. I spent $350 for oil by the same time last year," she said.

"For a homeowner buying No. 2 heating oil, the cold weather and higher prices have meant approximately a $110 increase in their December home heating costs" over December 1979, New York City Consumer Affairs Commissioner Bruce Ratner reported Wednesday.

Even with normal weather, prices would be up.

Natural gas, which supplies more than half the nation's home heating needs, went from $3.41 per thousand cubic feet in September 1979 to $4.17 per cubic feet a year later, according to the latest Energy Department data available.

Heating oil, which supplies 20 percent of the nation's homes, went from 89.37 cents a gallon retail in New York City during December 1979 to $1.154 a gallon last month, according to the city's Department of Consumer Af-airs. And electricity, which also supplies about 20 percent of U.S. heating needs, went from 4.96 cents per thousand kilowatt-hours in September 1979 to 5.71 cents per kilowatt-hour in that month during 1980, the latest Energy Department figures available showed.

"A lot of us in the industry are concerned" about the impact of price increases on the poor and those on fixed incomes, said Tom Peake, manager of the economics department of Standard Oil Co. of California.

"The fact is that (oil) is expensive and it is going to get more expensive. It's just a fact of life."

To help the poor cope with bills, Congress, in passing the windfall tax on rising oil revenues resulting from elimination of price controls, set aside $3.1 billion for fuel assistance programs.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., where people have suffered a double whammy from the weather — the summer heat wave and now the cold wave — the Human Service Department this week began taking applications from the poor, elderly and handicapped. Some 1,500 were expected to apply over two days for the $1.2 million available there.

But the cold caused no rush in Florida, where an estimated 500,000 households were expected to qualify for $19.7 million in aid, Florida's Low Income Energy Assistance Office said.

Meanwhile, in Memphis, Tenn., where heat killed scores of elderly people last summer, the city-owned power company developed a plan to defer bills for the elderly and handicapped. But only 700 people have qualified.

"A few local churches have pooled some money to help," said Bill Elnore, coordinator of the Shelby County Office on Aging. "But it would not make a dent in this situation."

What is your best investment?

You could be living in it!

Today's home could be the best investment of your lifetime. Compare other investments with the increasing value of a home of your own.

Suppose you put $35,000 in the stock market in 1975. How much is it worth today?

Compare the median price ($35,300) for existing homes in 1975 with the median price of $55,700 in 1979. That's a 58% increase.

If you had put 20% down ($7060) you would now have a $20,400 profit. Just about tripled your money.

Of course, there are more advantages to home ownership than merely making a profit. There is security, contentment, privacy, pride-of-ownership, as well as increasing equity and important tax advantages.

With the prices of homes continuing to increase, now is the time to buy the home you've always wanted.

Public Notice

PUBLIC NOTICE
Public Notice is hereby given that the Greenville City Council in regular session on January 8, 1981 conducted a public hearing and afterwards adopted the following ordinance establishing Residential Permit Parking in Two Hour Parking Zones with a map designating the Controlled Residential Parking Areas in the City of Greenville to become effective July 1, 1981.

ORDINANCE NO. 1045 ESTABLISHING RESIDENTIAL PERMIT PARKING IN TWO HOUR PARKING ZONES

WHEREAS, the United States Supreme Court in County Board of Arlington County, Virginia v. Richards, 54 L. 3d 2d 4 (1977) has upheld the constitutional validity of controlled parking in residential areas; and

WHEREAS, N.C.G.C. 160A-301 (a) authorizes the City of Greenville to regulate and restrict the parking of vehicles on public streets within the City; and

WHEREAS, the safety, health, and welfare of the residents of Greenville can be greatly enhanced by maintenance of the attractiveness and livability of its neighborhoods and other residential areas; and

WHEREAS, urban blight is caused, in part, by the decline of attractive and comfortable residential areas; and

WHEREAS, it is a fact of modern living that a large portion of Greenville residents possess automobiles and as a result are daily faced with the need to store these automobiles in or near residences; and

WHEREAS, certain neighborhoods and areas of the City of Greenville do not have sufficient on or off-street space to accommodate the convenient parking of motor vehicles by residents thereof in the vicinity of their homes; and

WHEREAS, such areas as described above are often further burdened by influxes of motor vehicles owned by non-residents which compete for the inadequate available on-street parking spaces; and

WHEREAS, there further exist in Greenville certain parking "attractors" such as hospital and university complexes, and locations convenient for commuter parking, which further increases residential parking problems; and

WHEREAS, the City Council finds the excessive and burdensome practice of non-resident parking their motor vehicles an extended period of time creates unnecessary vehicle piles, noise, pollution, trash and refuse, and strains on inter-personal relationships and that these conditions work unacceptable hardships on residents of these neighborhoods and other residential areas by causing the deterioration of air quality, safety, property values, tranquility and other values available in an urban residential environment; and

WHEREAS, allowed to continue unchecked, these adverse effects on the residents of the City will contribute to a further decline of the living conditions therein, a reduction in the attractiveness of residing therein, and consequent injury to the general public welfare; and

WHEREAS, a system of residential parking as enacted in this ordinance will serve to promote the safety, health, and welfare of all the residents of the City by reducing unnecessary personal motor vehicle travel, noise and pollution, and by promoting improvements in air quality, the convenience and attractiveness of urban residential living, and the increased use of public mass transit facilities available now and in the future. The public welfare will also be served by ensuring a more stable and valuable property tax base in order to generate the revenues necessary to provide essential public services;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA THAT:

Section 1. A new section, Title 10, Article 1, Section 10-223 of the Greenville City Code be enacted, said section to follow Article 5, Section 10-223 and it shall read as follows:

Section 10-223. Controlled Residential Parking Area. (a) The City Council may designate controlled residential parking areas based on the following minimum criteria as determined in a study by the Engineering Department:

(1) The majority of the street frontage measured at the right of way line must be in a residential zoning district.

(2) The property must be used in a residential manner in order to qualify for a residential parking permit.

(3) This procedure shall be applicable on a minimum per block basis. This procedure may apply to one or both sides of the block.

(4) A petition identifying the boundaries of the streets within the proposed controlled residential parking area must be presented to the Traffic Commission and signed by adult residents of at least 51% of the living units contained in each block face of the proposed controlled residential parking area.

(5) A parking study must be completed, conducted between the hours of 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. on a weekday with one observation made each two hours. The study must reveal that at least 70% of the parking capacity of the proposed controlled residential parking area is occupied.

(6) A minimum of 23% of the parked vehicles must be registered to addresses outside the proposed controlled residential parking area.

(b) Definitions: (1) Controlled residential parking area shall mean an area designated herein and on a map entitled "Controlled Residential Parking Areas" and hereby adopted by reference for restricted residential parking pursuant to criteria established in subsection (a) hereof.

(2) Residential parking permit decal shall mean a special permit issued hereunder by the Revenue Collector and authorizing the vehicle bearing such permit to be parked for a period in excess of two hours in a controlled residential parking area.

(c) Permit Decal Display: The residential parking permit decal shall be attached to the left rear bumper or the left rear window of the vehicle for which issued as specified on the sticker and shall contain the vehicle license number, year of issue, and the identification number of the controlled residential parking area for which issued.

(d) Eligibility For Permit Decal: A resident of a controlled residential parking area is eligible to receive one (1) residential parking permit decal for each vehicle which is principally operated by the resident. The Revenue Collector of the City of Greenville shall verify the residence address of persons obtaining such decals and shall record on the face of the decal the license number of the vehicle and the letter designation of the controlled residential parking area for which issued. As proof of residency, the Revenue Collector may require utility bills, notarized affidavits of the landlord, auto registration cards, and other documentation deemed necessary naming the permittee and showing an address within the controlled residential parking area. Residential parking permit decals issued for vehicles used by non-residents of the controlled residential parking area or used for purposes of daily commuting to the area or for purposes of storage of non-residential vehicles are void.

(e) Permit Issuance Fee: The Revenue Collector of the City of Greenville shall issue residential parking permit decals for an administrative charge of $5.00 per decal per year. The charge shall not be prorated for partial years. The charge for duplicate permit decals shall be $5.00 and such permit decals shall not be transferable to another vehicle. Residential parking permit decals shall be issued on a calendar year basis, and shall expire at midnight on the thirty-first day of December of each year. Furthermore, it shall be lawful to continue to park an authorized vehicle in a controlled residential parking area during the period between the thirty-first day of December and the fourteenth day of February inclusive, if a residential parking permit decal for the vehicle was issued for the previous immediate calendar year.

(f) Restrictions: (1) No person shall display a residential parking permit decal on a vehicle unless such vehicle displays the same vehicle license number as shown on the residential parking permit decal, and any such use or display except as authorized herein shall constitute a violation of this code by the permittee and by the person who so used or displayed the residential parking permit decal.

(2) It shall constitute a violation of this code for any person to falsely represent himself as eligible for a residential parking permit decal or to furnish any false information in an application to the Revenue Collector in order to obtain a residential parking permit decal. Any person who shall willfully make any false statement in an application for a residential parking permit decal shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction, shall be fined any amount or imprisoned as provided by law.

(3) The Revenue Collector is authorized to revoke the residential parking permit of any permittee found to be in violation of this ordinance and upon written notification thereof, the permittee shall surrender such permit to the Revenue Collector. Failure, when so requested to surrender a residential parking permit, so revoked shall constitute a violation of this code.

(g) When signs are erected adjacent to streets in the controlled residential parking area listed in this section, no person shall park a vehicle for longer than two hours between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, unless such vehicle has a properly displayed residential parking permit decal for the area in which parked.

A residential parking permit shall not guarantee or reserve the designated parking space within a designated controlled residential parking area.

Section 2. All laws and portion of laws in conflict therewith are hereby repealed to the extent of the conflict.

Section 3. If this ordinance or application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or application of the ordinance which can be given separate effect and to this end the provisions of this ordinance are declared to be severable.

Section 4. This ordinance shall become effective July 1, 1981, following its adoption and publication as provided by law.

ADOPTED this 8th day of January, 1981.

Siamese Twins Lived Long And Useful Lives

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Children born with their bodies attached to each other often are called Siamese twins.

The reference goes back to Chang and Eng, who took the surname Bunker and became respected citizens of Surry County before dying there 107 years ago this week.

Born in 1811 of Chinese parents in Siam, Chang and Eng were twin boys physically joined at the breastbone by an attachment of cartilage and ligaments.

Though no doubt there had been other physically joined twins, it was with Chang and Eng that the term "Siamese twins" came into general use to describe that condition.

While in their mid-teens, the boys were discovered in Siam by Robert Hunter, a Scottish merchant, who recognized the potential for profit in taking them on tour for public exhibition in Europe and America.

In partnership with Abel Coffin, a Massachusetts sea captain, Hunter made a substantial financial arrangement with the boys' parents and also received a release from the king of Siam to remove them from the country. The agreement is sometimes referred to as a "purchase," and indications are that the boys did exist in near slavery conditions in the years during which they were associated with Hunter and Coffin.

They first arrived in the United States at Boston in August of 1829, having been insured for $10,000 during the trip. Under various managers, at first Abel Coffin and later others, they set out on tours that usually followed the pattern of renting a room and advertising that they would "receive the public."

There often was no admission charge, though pamphlets and lithographs were offered for sale. In addition to touring the United States, they traveled to Europe for extensive tours on three separate occasions. Both in this country and in Europe the curious came en masse with their money.

For a time in the mid-1830s the twins worked under the direction of the great showman P.T. Barnum — not as part of his circus but as separate "curiosities" exhibited in halls and theaters.

Though their relationship with Barnum was not a happy one, the twins came out of retirement from "show business" following the Civil War and again toured under his banner in an attempt to regain some of their lost fortune.

Their residence in North Carolina resulted from an 1837 tour stop in Wilkes County. By that time they already were weary of having people stare at them as freaks, and they wanted to establish a more normal life. Here they found a place they liked and a place where they felt accepted as human beings.

Applying for citizenship in 1839, they adopted the last name "Bunker" and opened a "frontier store" in their new Wilkes County home near Traphill. As a means of livelihood the store soon was abandoned in favor of a farm which they operated with considerable success.

Most remarkable is that in 1843 the twins married sisters, Sarah and Adelaide Yates, and moved to Surry County. There they built two houses a short distance apart — one for each wife.

An arrangement was worked out whereby the twins would spend three days at one house and then three days at the other. The plan is said to have worked out quite well and, in all, 22 children were born into their family — 12 by Eng's wife and 10 by Chang's wife.

The twins apparently were well accepted by their western North Carolina neighbors, who respected their intelligence and industriousness. Their letters — in which they sometimes refer to themselves as "we" and other times as "I" — indicate that their years in North Carolina were by far the happiest of their lives.

Chang, who previously had suffered a stroke, died in his sleep on Jan. 17, 1874. Eng awoke with a terrible fright and, if a doctor could have arrived in time, no doubt a separation would have been attempted.

But within hours Eng, too, was dead, possibly from fright. An autopsy indicated that an operation to separate the bodies probably would have been unsuccessful.

As they had lived for nearly 63 years, the twins were buried as one on the farm. Their bodies later were moved to White Plains Baptist Church.

Their descendants now live throughout the United States.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Until F.A. Wittern came along, people who bought cigarettes from vending machines used to find their change stuffed under the cellophane of the cigarette packet.

It was Wittern who first found a way to make a vending machine give back correct change. He built the first one, by hand, in 1946.

"It wasn't a matter of how many could I sell, but how many could I make," Wittern, 80, said as he showed off his original machine, now standing in a corner of his office.

His invention put an end to the tedious practice of slitting open the cigarette packets to place coins inside the cellophane before the packs were loaded into the vending machine.

Wittern's ventures into vending began in 1931, when the business was still in its infancy. He invested his last $12.50 in used tools and founded a vending machine firm in a garage behind his home in east Des Moines.

Fifty years later, the firm, Fawn Engineering, turns out 20,000 vending machines a year for dispensing everything from soup to nuts.

Wittern is still chairman of the board of the Des Moines-based firm, which employs 500 people, sells vending machines in all 50 states and exports about 15 percent of its machines. The president is his son, F.A. Wittern Jr.

Wittern, who had no formal engineering training, began tinkering as a youngster. One winter, he and his father took apart their new Ford automobile and put it back together — very carefully.

"My mother thought we were all bananas," Wittern said. "But after we put it all back together, my father said, 'Now if the darn thing breaks down, I know where to look.'"

Wittern told how one of his ideas attracted presidential attention.

During World War I, he wrote to President Woodrow Wilson to suggest an underwater magnetic mine for use against German submarines. The Defense Department responded by offering Wittern a job, not realizing they were writing to a 16-year-old boy.

Wittern said his favorite invention is a peanut machine that rang a bell and dispensed a free portion of peanuts to every ninth person.

Wittern recalls carrying the peanut machines under his arm and walking into bars trying to peddle them to bar owners. He promised he'd buy back the machines if they didn't sell more peanuts than the bar's old machines.

"I never had to pick up one," said Wittern, whose firm made half a million of the machines. "It was like Russian roulette. ... It added a uniqueness to it that the other (peanut machines) didn't have. People liked to gamble on hitting the bell. They would empty a machine in one evening."

In those days, Fawn, or Hawkeye Novelty as it was known until 1947, was totally a family business.

"I worked night and day and Saturdays until we got started," Wittern said. After their son was born, Viola Wittern brought him to the factory in a basket while she ran a punch press or sat on a nail keg and did typing.

Wittern boasts that his firm had only one losing year, but making ends meet wasn't always easy. Sometimes, he had to hock his wife's wedding rings to make the payroll.

"It wasn't a thrill," Wittern said.

Wittern also pioneered the practice of selling machines to individual businesses. Most vending machines are still owned by firms that lease space in restaurants, bars and other establishments and give the firms a small cut of the profits.

Wittern came up with the idea of selling the machines directly to the businesses, which then keep all the profits. A Fawn subsidiary offers a finance program to make it easier for businesses to buy the $3,000 machines.

"We cut out the middleman," the younger Wittern said, adding the machines can often pay for themselves within a year. Firms can make nearly 20 cents on a cup of coffee that sells for 25 cents, he said.

The profits can be substantial. St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis, Ill., makes $50,000 a year in profits from its six Fawn machines and uses the money for building improvements.

A gas station owner in Camrillo, Calif., wrote Fawn that he made a down payment on a new Porsche with the profits from his vending machine.

The younger Wittern said he expects electronics will vastly change the industry, making it possible to use credit cards in vending machines, for example.

"The technology in electronics is going to revolutionize the industry in the years ahead," he said. "One of the problems with vending is having a dollar or $1.50 in change in your pockets."

F.A. WITTERN, 80, founded a vending machine company 50 years ago on a $12.50 investment. Shown with one of his favorite inventions, a peanut machine that rang a bell and gave free peanuts to every ninth customer. Wittern's company now turns out 20,000 vending machines a year. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Will Train Angels

NEW YORK (AP) — The Guardian Angels, a controversial volunteer group that patrols city subways in red berets and white T-shirts, will get special police training and ID cards under a proposal by Police Commissioner Robert McGuire.

McGuire said Wednesday he had approved a plan for registering and training members of the anti-crime group, which has conducted patrols for the past two years. He said members will ride subways for free while on duty.

Curtis Sliwa, a founder and head of the group, said he had not seen the plan but approved the idea of it.

Mayor Edward Koch, who has called the Angels a "paramilitary group" and has refused to meet with Sliwa, said the plan was "fine with me."

"We will remain independent," said Sliwa. "City officials should have the right to know where we are, when we are patrolling and who we are. They do not have the right to tell us when and where to do it."

Under the plan, members will be screened for criminal records before receiving patrol training and ID cards. They would not be armed.

The plan is similar to one rejected by Sliwa during negotiations with Police Chief James Meehan last October. At the time, Sliwa said he wanted to keep his force independent of government interference. Now Sliwa says the patrol has grown and must be monitored.

Special Interest Spending High

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special interest groups spent more than $120 million in last year's political campaigns and lpmished with $20.8 million left in the bank, the Federal Election Commission reports.

Political action committees sponsored by the special interest groups raised $127.3 million and spent $121.9 million in the period including all of 1979 and 1980 through November, the commission said Wednesday. The committees had $14.8 million cash on hand at the start of the period.

Casinos Report Big Earnings

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Winnings by Atlantic City's six casinos totaled $625 million in 1980, the state Casino Control Commission has reported.

The commission also said Tuesday that the casinos won $47.9 million during December. That was off 19.3 percent from November.

Industry executives said the casino hotels had their first losing month in December. The figures on winnings do not include operating expenses for the facilities.

Inventories And Sales 'Stable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department reports that business inventories and sales remained relatively stable in November.

Inventories of unsold goods rose 0.4 percent to $458.2 billion in November, but that "may signify some decline" in the real value of inventories if inflation is taken into account, said William Cox, the department's deputy chief economist.
