United States And Iran Rushing Hostage Action

By The Associated Press

The United States and Iran rushed today to complete an agreement to free the 52 American hostages and both sides signaled that a breakthrough in the 14-month hostage crisis could be near.

Iran's chief hostage negotiator, Behzad Nabavi, said there is "no obstacle in resolving the issue" and informed Washington sources said the United States and Iran were nearing agreement to exchange the hostages for frozen Iranian assets.

A U.S. Air Force jet with British and American bankers on board arrived in Algeria in an attempt to work out the complicated financial arrangements with a U.S. negotiating team that has been consulting with Algerian go-betweens in Algiers.

There appeared to be about 10 to 12 people in the group. They were met by U.S. Embassy officials who said there would be no statements. The financial specialists were to meet immediately with Warren M. Christopher, head of the U.S. negotiating team.

In Washington, Vice President Walter Mondale told CBS news said, "we're trying to do things in hours that would take months otherwise." But Mondale cautioned that there was no agreement yet and said: "We've had our hearts broken before and I think we'd better keep our expectations under control."

A State Department official in Washington said, "I think we're getting down to specifics," but said that no Iranian assets had been transferred by U.S. banks. Forty officials of 12 banks were meeting at the State Department.

President Carter — who leaves office next Tuesday — had no comment on the negotiations and was meeting in the White House with his foreign policy aides.

Nabavi, outlining the Iranian position, said "only the real willingness of Washington can bring decisive results today" and the leader of Friday prayers in Tehran also indicated a breakthrough was at hand.

The Air Force jet carrying William T. Lake, deputy legal adviser for the State Department, stopped in London on the way to Algiers to pick up bankers prepared to deal with Iran's demand that $4 billion blocked in U.S. branches overseas be transferred to the Central Bank of Algeria.

The financial experts were not identified, but Christopher Ross, U.S. Embassy deputy chief of mission in Algiers, confirmed that "British and American bankers" were on the plane.

Algeria's state radio, meanwhile, gave prominence to a report — officially denied in Washington — by the French news agency, Agence France Presse, in Tehran that an agreement had been reached, and that only President Carter's approval was needed now.

Friday is the Moslem Sabbath and no official could be reached for comment in Algiers. The Algerian Central Bank was closed. But since its governor, Seghir Mostefai, is a member of the Algerian intermediary teams, that did not appear to be an obstacle.

Nabavi said there was no obstacle to resolving the crisis in a brief interview with Iran's official Pars news agency.

"As the statement by the Algerian government has already been accepted by both sides and as the methods of implementing the transfer of our frozen assets have been defined and presented by the Iranian government in a completely practical and realistic way, there are absolutely no reasons for non-acceptance by the U.S. government, provided they are really inclined to solve the matter," he said.

"Contrary to claims by certain sources, there are no complications and, in the view of the Iranian government there is no obstacle to ending this issue. Only true willingness by Washington can bring about a definite outcome to the issue during the course of today," the 440th day in captivity for the Americans.

Nabavi added that "the Iranian government has expressed its willingness to conclude the issue and from our point of view any procrastination is condemned."

School Bds. Told Time At Hand For Contract Service

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. David Bruton, chairman of the North Carolina State Board of Education, speaking in Greenville Thursday night, said he "feels it is time for the state to consider a move to contract employment for school staff people." In his opinion, "contracts should be made for a definite time limit, two, three or four years and they ought to be on an individual basis with agreed performance standards.

"All school employees, from janitors down to superintendents, should be placed on contracts," he added.

The keynote speaker at the District II N. C. School Boards Association annual meeting, held at Aycock Junior High Thursday afternoon and evening, Dr. Bruton stressed the need for quality teaching and for instilling a sense of excellence in the state's public schools.

"In past years, we devoted our time and effort to strive for equal opportunity in education. Now the time has come when we must strive for greater opportunities in excellence."

Referring to the highly controversial subject of a more rigid standard of performance criteria for evaluating a teacher's ability, Bruton said "we have got to develop a performance mechanism that has meaning, something that will not be just another paper chase.

"Nothing has more potential for improving the quality of teaching than a good staff performance mechanism. We've got to have schools, and the public, both push for excellence in our educational system."

At one point in his talk, Dr. Bruton cited the "magic moment that occurs between teacher and student" when the teacher can inspire a student to seek and to understand the basic need for excellence.

"Ultimately, what happens in the classroom is what education is all about," he commented, "and a teacher's capability to teach well makes the difference."

Noting that some educators feared a stronger teacher performance evaluation mechanism might lead to a merit system, Dr. Bruton admitted this could be one of the results of such a system. "But why should we deny ourselves the opportunities to reward quality work in the same way that is done in commercial life?" he asked. "I feel we have got to look seriously at the most productive tool I know of, that of rewarding excellence."

According to Dr. Bruton, the public's perception of the current employment and dismissal act (or the tenure act) is that it is one that somehow protects poor performance.

In addition to his comments on an employment contract system and a need for a stronger performance evaluation mechanism, Dr. Bruton touched on the "awesome responsibilities faced by members of school boards. It is the obligation, the responsiblity of school board members to protect the integrity of the decision making process," he said. He cautioned school board members against taking the easy route, of bowing to popular opinion of the moment. Decisions made without integrity, he commented, most often in the long run become "transient" ones not always serving the best interests of education.

At the same time, he encouraged school board members to "share with the public evidence that supports decisions made." He added

Legislators Given Dismal Choice In Hunt Budget Plan

By W.A. WERONKA Jr.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Members of the new General Assembly heard Gov. Jim Hunt catalog his list of legislative hopes Thursday night, and at least one lawmaker said Hunt asked for more than could be delivered in a four-year term.

"His expectations probably would take more than four years," House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Marshall, said after the long speech. "I don't think he left the impression that the state can answer all those things in four years."

But Ramsey added he thought it was "a fine speech."

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said the speech, which touched on just about every issue raised during Hunt's campaign, was "a little long."

"He covered about everything I recall that's in the budget," said Royall, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. "He had to cover the waterfront and that's the only chance he gets, when we invite him over."

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said only: "Excellent speech, excellent speech."

Hunt delivered his so-called "State of the State" address, which ran 45 minutes and was interrupted by applause 10 times, while releasing his proposed $11.9 billion biennial budget.

The budget document proposes only modest new government initiatives and includes a small amount for pay raises for teachers and state employees — enough for about a 4 percent raise. It also includes $24 million for a microelectronics center, key to what Hunt called a "high technology future" for the state.

And the budget also pres-

RADIAL KERATOTOMY

I am interested in learning more about a new eye surgery procedure for nearsightedness. Where can I get such information. E. D.

Talk to your eye doctor, write Radial Keratotomy, P. O. Box 1801, Raleigh, N. C. 27602, or do both.

The North Carolina Society of Ophthalmology Inc. has issued a statement which it defines as a warning to the public of the highly experimental nature of the new procedure, radial keratomy: "The public should be aware that this is an investigational procedure and individuals who wear glasses or contact lenses for nearsightedness would be wise to continue doing so until the safety and long-term effectiveness of the surgery have been determined. According the corneal specialists, the procedure is the latest in a series of attempts to cure myopia (nearsightedness) by surgically flattening the cornea. Earlier operations have been generally unsuccessful and some have resulted in serious deterioration of vision over a number of years.

"In the latest technique, equally space deep incisions are made in the front surface of the cornea. Pressure inside the eye then pushes the weakened cornea forward, flattening the central uncut area and thus reducing nearsightedness. The procedure can be done in an outpatient operating room under local anesthetia.

"The National Eye Advisory Council has expressed grave concern that the procedure is being adopted, even though reports indicate it may not be safe enough for general use. Studies are being planned, or are in progress, including a five-year Prospective Evaluation of Radial Keratotomy to be conducted by the National Eye Institute on 400 patients at several university centers around the country.

"Complications reported from radial keratotomy include transient unstable vision, which may require multiple pairs of glasses, glare from permanent corneal scars that may interfere with night driving, astigmatism, and possibility of other yet unknown hazards.

"By decreasing myopia, the operation may also create a need for reading glasses earlier than middle age."

Carter Leaves GOP A Red-Ink Budget

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is leaving Congress and his Republican successor an inflation-swelled budget of $739.3 billion for 1982 that proposes a big boost in military spending, modest personal tax credits and a $27.5 billion deficit.

The farewell spending proposal, which President-elect Ronald Reagan and Congress are sure to overhaul, calls for a $76.6 billion, or 12 percent, increase over this year. The projected rise actually amounts to about 1 percent when adjusted for inflation.

Reagan has promised that soon after his inauguration Tuesday he will present his own economic blueprint, which will include deep cuts in Carter's non-defense spending plan and a major tax cut to take effect this year.

Carter attributed his budget increase to added growth in defense and energy budgets and to uncontrollable items directly tied to double-digit inflation, such as automatic cost-of-living hikes in Social Security benefits and higher interest payments on the national debt.

The defense budget, which accounts for 25 cents out of every federal dollar, would go up from $158 billion in 1981 to $180 billion in fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1. Social Security spending would rise from $138 billion to $160 billion, and interest on the national debt would increase from $80 billion to $90 billion.

Carter also called for a 14 percent increase in foreign aid to reverse a two-year decline in the assistance program. And he requested more money to fill the nation's emergency petroleum reserves at a faster rate to guard against future shortages of imported oil.

The departing administration expects an inflation rate of 12.6 percent this year, about the same as last year.

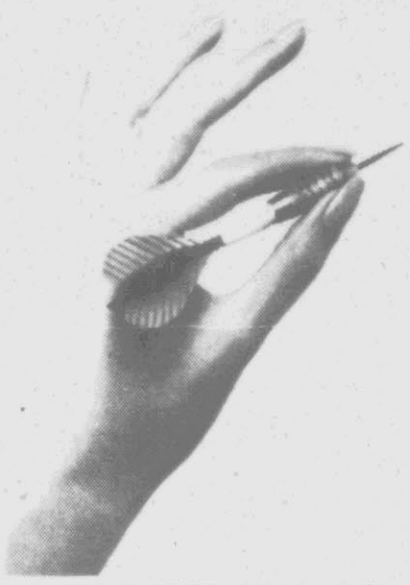

When inflation's effect is taken into account, defense spending would show "real" growth of 4.4 percent while the rest of the budget would actually decline slightly from 1981 after taking rising prices into account.

Members of Reagan's transition team said in advance of the budget's release that they feared Carter would propose unrealistically low spending levels for non-defense programs and pump up defense spending beyond military needs. This would embarrass Reagan politically by forcing him to cut defense and increase spending on other programs, they said.

The budget also estimates that inflation will push 1981 spending up to $663 billion and create a $55.2 billion deficit. The revised figures formally acknowledge Carter's failure to fulfill his 1976 campaign pledge to balance the budget within four years.

Carter requested a $22.4 billion increase in the defense budget for 1982 along with an additional $6.3 billion for the 1981 budget to cover pay increases, higher fuel costs and mounting expenses in maintaining a fleet in the HANDY TALENT — A pose such as the one at left may look easy, but being a hand model takes "nerves of steel," says Linda Rose, right, whose hands are often seen on television commercials.

Model Linda Rose Has Career In Hand

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Though she works with her hands, Linda Rose is not exactly a manual laborer.

She's a hand model. In the past 25 years, her hands have been seen in more than 2,500 television and print ads, but she has her long, slender fingers in a lot of other pies, too.

She is an actress, a TV spokeswoman, a lyricist, a singer, a hand-reader, and now an author — of a newly published book, "Hands."

"I've always been fascinated by hands," says the 44-year-old Miss Rose, whose book includes not only anecdotes about her career but also beauty tips on caring for hands and an overview of hand-reading, which she had studied and which she considers "not a parlor trick."

While attending Vassar she worked as a Powers model and got into her specialized field when she was asked to simulate Gene Tierney's writing, signing an autograph in a closeup on a TV commercial.

"TV was just becoming a medium where commercials were being done live," she recalled in an interview. "The demands of the closeup, which can't be retouched as print ads can be, are such that any imperfection is magnified on screen.

"A broken nail or enlarged pores in a tight closeup of a hand holding food, for instance, would be a turnoff. Advertisers are very fussy about the hand that touches the product. The quintessential commercial look is perfect nails and skin."

But it's not just a question of having pretty hands, Miss Rose is quick to point out. When only the model's hands are to be seen by the camera, it makes for uncomfortable poses, with hands held in difficult positions for long periods. And dexterity is needed for such feats as dropping a pearl in the exact center of a bottle of shampoo, as she was once called upon to do on camera.

Every time there's a closeup of a product on TV, there's a good chance there's a hand holding it, though the viewer may not be aware of it, she explains. "It adds the human touch to have a product held or poured with a flourish, a detergent put down with authority or a compact laid down with a sort of loving caress.

"It's a craft and it requires nerves of steel," she says of hand modeling. "If you are nervous the hands are the first place the tension shows and all the acting methods in the world can't obliterate it."

While nails are filed short for some commercials, almost all require nail polish, and models use a light shade they have come to call "TV pink." It's a custom that stems from the black-and-white days of TV when dark polish would go black.

Even on today's color shows, dark polish would be distracting, says Miss Rose, who often goes without polish off the job. "The nails would look like jewels and you don't want to compete with what you're showing."

Miss Rose, who gestures gracefully as she talks, was wearing the pink polish on her long, tapered nails, a silver geometrical ring on the little finger of her left hand, a chunky gold band on the same finger of her right hand.

She doesn't worry about washing dishes and loves indoor gardening. "Sometimes I wear gloves and sometimes I don't. Sometimes I like the feel of working the earth and it gets off a lot of tension. There's nothing wrong with dirt — just don't leave it there. What you do is wash your hands and then moisturize.

"When I had children," adds the divorced mother of two boys, 19 and 21, "I thought, I've got only one shot at being a mommy and I'm not going to live in cotton. I believe hands are like your face: they may change but age need not be deterioration."

Miss Rose lives in a Manhattan apartment and enjoys sewing and loves to cook. She writes lyrics and music and is studying acting and singing.

"I don't know what the future holds," she says. "My palm says a lot of things. Anything is possible if a first book can be published at age 44."

WHAT AN AGS JEWELER MEANS TO YOU

My membership in the American Gem Society is extremely important to both me and my customers. Let me explain why.

In order to gain the title of Reg. Jeweler—Cert. Gemologist, I was obliged to take courses in the science of gemology as well as in ethical selling and merchandising and to pass a barrage of examinations. The reason for this preparation ? So that I might best serve my customers as a knowledgeable, ethical businessperson.

It was not enough, though, for just me as an individual to pass inspection. The firm itself was investigated to make sure our reputation was a good one, that our practices of selling and dealing with the public met with AGS standards.

And that's not all. The American Gem Society won't allow its members to rest on their laurels. Each year I must study the latest developments in the industry, review the basics, and pass an examination. Only when this exam is successfully completed will the Society renew my membership for the coming year. AGS requires this to keep me on my toes and remind me of my obligations to the public.

I am happy to report that I passed my recent exam with flying colors and am ready to serve you for another year. I hope you will place your confidence in me whenever you make a jewelry purchase in 1981.

Reception Honors Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Little were honored at a surprise 25th wedding anniversary reception in the Trinity fellowship hall Saturday evening.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Little, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Norville, Mr. and Mrs. Garland Buck, Mrs. Janie Harris, Miss Becky Crawford and Robin Little.

Mrs. Little was dressed in a cranberry formal gown and wore a corsage of white gardenias.

Guests were greeted by Miss Patricia Tyner.

The building was decorated with magnolia greenery, white and silver bells. A banner served as the background for the gift table. Mrs. Peggy Tyner, Mrs. Buck and Miss Tyner assisted at the gift table.

The refreshment table was covered with a white linen and lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of mixed flowers in a silver candelabra with white burning tapers. Mrs. Brenda Harris poured punch and Mrs. Teresa Harris served the four tiered cake.

Good-byes were said to the honored couple.

Dear Abby

Wife Moves Up At Work And Down At Home

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband, through schooling, hard work, perseverance and the right moves, has reached the top of his field. He still works hard and travels occasionally for his company. I am very proud of him.

Now the tables have turned. After our youngest started to school, I went back to work, and through hard work, perseverance and the right moves, I now hold a responsible position. (I make almost as much as he does.)

I also work hard and do some traveling for my company. Is my husband proud of my success? Not on your life!

When I have to leave town on business, he puts me through the third degree, adding disparaging innuendoes about married women who use "business trips" as an excuse to get away from home.

After spending 20 years as a wife and mother, I think I'm entitled to the rewards of a career. My home responsibilities have never suffered because of my job.

Abby, what's wrong with men anyway?

G. IN JERSEY

DEAR G.: Nothing is wrong with men, but something is wrong with your husband. He's jealous, competitive, insecure and probably feels threatened because his wife has become a person in her own right — instead of an extension of him. Fortunately he is not typical of successful men whose wives have also achieved success.

DEAR ABBY: I've heard of "brag" letters sent at Christmastime, but can anyone top this?

Not only four pages of mimeographed bragging, but gobs of duplicated newspaper clippings, plus a picture of hubby's new office. It weighed so much, I had to pay 13 cents' postage on it!

How does one respond to such holiday greetings?

ORDINARY FOLK

DEAR FOLK: With faint praise. Unless one wants to be on their list next year.

DEAR ABBY: I was married for 11 years and have three children. My wife and I parted with a minimum of hostility and are now better friends than we were when we were married. I am allowed to see my children whenever I like, and there are no hard feelings on either side.

I am currently engaged to a lovely 21-year-old woman I'll call Ellen. We are very much in love, but there is a problem.

Ellen is very jealous of the relationship I have with my ex-wife. Although I have explained that we are only good friends, she feels threatened by my ties with my ex-wife. Ellen gets along very well with my children, but whenever they mention their mother, she bristles.

I don't know how to handle this. Should I say goodbye to Ellen, or hang in there hoping that she will realize that I do love her but I can't break off all contact with my children's mother just because she's jealous?

MONUMENTAL PROBLEM

DEAR MONUMENTAL: The problem is not yours, it's Ellen's inability to accept your non-threatening relationship with your ex-wife. Tell her that unless she learns how to deal with her jealousy, there is no way you can have a future together.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I were married we had a double-ring ceremony, and he promised he would never take his wedding ring off. And he never did. After a few years he gained a little weight and couldn't get the ring off. My husband was an electrician.

Well, to make a long and very tragic story short, his wedding ring wore a tiny hole through his insulated glove and a fatal contact was made. He died instantly. When his lifeless body was examined, the only sign of injury was a small burn where his wedding ring encircled his finger.

ELECTRICIAN'S WIDOW

So, Dear Wife, if your husband works around machines or electricity, tell him to leave all rings at home — if you really love him, that is.

Rings and other types of jewelry for women and men working with machinery and electricity are a major problem in industry. Sentiment is a poor excuse for wearing a ring when it can cause the loss of a finger, hand, arm or even a life.

Life As It's Lived

Thermostat War Given Push By Utilities Bill

By GAIL MICHAELS

Every year about this time Phillip and I begin our thermostat war. I don't want to insinuate that my husband's attitude toward energy conservation causes the family to suffer, but when I recently read a story to Meg about a mixed-up family whose members wore their coats inside the house, she couldn't understand why the author should consider this peculiar.

When we got the last utility bill, Phillip turned down the thermostat yet another notch.

I pulled on another pair of socks and hobbled over to confront him. "Are you trying to freeze-dry the fruit in the kitchen, or is this going to be a permanent thing?"

"Just don't get started. I only cut it back 4 degrees, and I read the other day that 60 is healthier."

"Sure it is, if you keep a seal in your bathtub. The one I'm worried about is Zachary. His nose hasn't stopped running since Labor Day."

"Neither did Meg's when she was that age, and we kept the temperature at 70."

It was obvious that the only temperature even beginning to rise was mine. "Take off your shoes and walk into the bathroom. The only way you're going to stop and listen to me is if your feet are frozen to the floor. And believe me, in that bathroom, they will be."

"Maybe I'd listen better if I could hear you over the whistle of the tea kettle," he snapped. "The heat is going all the time under that thing. Don't you know that all that tea and coffee is bad for you?"

"So is hypothermia."

"We are in the middle of an energy crunch. Why can't you understand that sacrifices must be made?"

"Because I'm the one who makes them all."

"How do you figure that?"

"It's just the same as when the cost of living started rising so rapidly, and we stopped eating out."

"Is that such a big sacrifice?"

"Yes. Cooking every night is about to kill me."

"And what do you think it's doing to me?"

A remark like that didn't deserve notice. I returned to the subject at hand. "Now you want me to give up hot drinks, hot baths..."

"You use hot water for everything from brushing your teeth to filling the ice trays. You must think we live over a geyser."

"Well, what do you expect? I have to stay here all day in this igloo, and you just pop in now and then to use the electric blanket. I've got a good mind to hide the controls."

"Okay, if that's the way you want to be. But my mind is made up. There's no way you're going to force me to capitulate. Now, what's for dinner?"

Probably cold shoulder.

Peace Activist Shot, Wounded

COOKSTOWN, Northern Ireland (AP) — Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the Northern Ireland Roman Catholic political campaigner, was shot and wounded along with her husband this morning, police said.

They were shot at their home in Cookstown, County Tyrone, about 50 miles west of Belfast, police said.

Mrs. McAliskey, 33, and her husband were rushed to a hospital after the shooting, police said. "That's all we know at the moment," a police spokesman said.

Three people were detained by police for questioning after the shooting, police said.

The former Bernadette Devlin became the youngest member of the British Parliament since William Pitt the Younger when at the age of 21 she was elected to serve as Member of Parliament for Mid Ulster. She served from 1969 to 1974.

A founding member of the Irish Republican Socialist Party, she has recently been at the forefront of a campaign by convicted guerrillas inside Northern Ireland's Maze and Armagh prisons for political prisoner status.

She led demonstrations and marches on their behalf during a 53-day hunger strike by the prisoners, which was called off on Dec. 18.

Bernadette Devlin led the Catholic civil rights movement in Northern Ireland in the late 1960s, seeking equal rights with the Protestant majority in the British province. This contributed to the outbreak of sectarian warfare which has claimed at least 2,071 lives since August 1969.

The small, crop-haired campaigner, with a fiery presence, once rapped former British Home Secretary Reginauld Mauldling on the nose in the House of Commons during an argument over Ulster.

She toured the United States several times recruiting support for minority Catholic groups in Northern Ireland.

The co-founder of her Irish Republican Socialist Party, Seamus Costello, was assassinated in Dublin five years ago.

FOCUS

Speed on Snow

This weekend some of the world's best Alpine skiers are scheduled to compete in downhill and slalom events in Kitzbuhel, Austria. The downhill, slalom and giant slalom are the three events in Alpine skiing. In the downhill, skiers often reach speeds of 60 or 70 mph, following a course 1¼ miles long down the steepest trail on a mountain. In the slalom, skiers follow a twisting course, in which they must pass through a series of gates marked with colored flags. There may be as many as 75 gates on an international slalom course. The giant slalom is a slalom event in which there are fewer gates set farther apart.

DO YOU KNOW — What form of skiing includes cross-country racing and ski jumping?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Each state has two U.S. senators.

Make Compact Districts

Among the jobs facing this year's Legislature is that of redistricting the Congressional, State House and State Senate districts.

The work has to be done to bring the districts in line with population as measured by the 1980 U.S. Census.

It's a tough job. Not only do the districts have to have comparable populations but all sorts of political considerations have to be looked at.

We can be sure that the First Congressional District will grow a little, and since the eastern boundary is the ocean, the additional counties will have to come from the west.

We hope changes won't be necessary in the eighth House district which is compact in its make-up of Pitt and Greene Counties.

There can be some improvement in the eighth Senate district which now includes Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe and Halifax Counties. The far flung district now stretches from the central part of Eastern North Carolina all the way to the Virginia border, and it was recognized as a strung-out district when it was created in the last redistricting.

We enjoy the relationship with the people of the northern part of the district. At the same time we feel that a more compact district could be created and, if the district is going to be changed this year, we hope it will be made more compact.

Not To Be Taken Lightly

President Carter, in his farewell adress, warned that the nation's three greatest challenges are nuclear survival, human rights and environment protection.

This is a warning not to be taken lightly. We are all aware of the holocaust nuclear war can bring. We should also know that a wrecked environment can make life on earth unbearable. And for freedom loving Americans, would life even be worth living without the individual freedoms our Constitution guarantees?

OUT TO PONDER HIS DECISION!

Proven Rule: Think Lousy

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan is bringing in the brains behind the Tournament of Roses to put some snap and sparkle into his inaugural parade.

Under the aegis of California building contractor Terry Chambers, who runs the Pasadena show, the Reagan parade promises to be the shortest, quickest and liveliest in recent memory. Instead of the standard 120 drum beats to the minute, bands will step off at the fast march pace used to speed college bands on and off the field during halftime at the big bowl games.

Well, in Washington at inauguration time it's always a good idea to get the show on the road as quickly as possible. The rule on the weather is to THINK LOUSY and plan accordingly. Nature has saved some of its most horrifying days for the installation of new presidents.

In 1841, William Henry Harrison disdaining hat and cloak, caught his death of cold riding a white horse in the freezing rain that fell on his inaugural parade. This didn't deter him from delivering an hour and 45 minute inaugural address, still the longest on record. He attended three inaugural balls that night, and at one presided over the cutting of an 800-pound pound cake modeled after the capital building. His funeral cortege, exactly one month later, was twice as long as his inaugural parade.

Fewer than a dozen people huddled under umbrellas, including faithful wife Sarah, heard James Polk shout his inauguration address into a torrential downpour. The balls that March night in 1845 were also a washout. There were supposed to be two of them, one at $10 a ticket for Washington high society and the other at $5 for the common folk. But someone forgot to invite the diplomatic colony. The diplomats demonstrated their pique by turning up at the $5 bash and one foreign dignitary's wife reportedly ended up dancing with her gardener. Anyhow, the music stopped as soon as the Polks entered the hall: conservative Southern folk, they didn't approve of dancing, drinking or card playing.

Although vivacious Dolley Madison, who never did learn how to dance, invented the inaugural ball by getting the Marine Band to play at Davis' Hotel for a gala celebrating James Madison's installation in 1809, dancing has not always been an accepted pastime around the nation's capital.

As late as 1913, the inaugural ball was canceled because Woodrow Wilson, son of a Presbyterian minister, and his wife Ellen, a minister's daughter, both looked upon such frivolity as out of keeping with the dignity of the office.

They say "the water flowed like champagne" at the 1877 inauguration of Rutherford B. Hayes. Lucy Hayes, forever afterwards known as "lemonade Lucy" had introduced the "chic idea" of total abstinence to the nation's capital. It never caught on. Zachary Taylor for religious reasons declined a Sunday inaugural.

Calvin Coolidge was in bed by 9:30 on the night of his inauguration. There was no celebration because the family was still in mourning for his son, Calvin, who died of blood poisoning from a blister he got from wearing tennis shoes without socks.

There was no celebrating the 1853 installation of Franklin Pierce whose 11-year-old son, Bennie, was killed in a train wreck between the election and inauguration. Jane Pierce, who with her husband had witnessed the tragedy, could not bring herself to come to Washington. The new president went upstairs after midnight and found no one had made the beds in the White House.

Abraham Lincoln rode to the White House in an open carriage on a warm sunny March day, surrounded by armed guards and with sharpshooters peering down from the rooftops. His election spelled trouble. At the inaugural ball, Mary Todd Lincoln danced the quadrille with an old beau: Stephen Douglas, adversary in the famous debates.

Andrew Jackson, on March 4, 1829, undoubtedly had history's most rip-snorting inauguration: 20,000 of his freeloading friends from the frontier climbed through the windows of the White House "scrabbling, fighting, romping" to get at the groceries. Several thousand dollars worth of china and glassware bit the dust, and it was finally necessary to carry the punch and food onto the lawn in tubs, buckets and hogsheads. Amid bloody noses and fainting ladies, the president had to flee from his friends through the kitchen.

Around Washington, a nice inauguration day is still known as "McKinley weather." Fair skies and mild temperatures greeted the Ohioan. A howling day is known as "Taft weather," because he was heard to remark as the snow and sleet fell on his inaugural: "I always said it would be a cold day when I got to be president." No president more enjoyed his successor's inaugural parade. Riding back to the White House with the Wilsons, Taft confessed: "I am glad to be leaving. It is a lonely place."

There have been many bitter cold inauguration days. One recalls Cardinal Cushing's prayer script suddenly catching fire, holy smoke, at John F. Kennedy's windswept swearing in, and Jimmy Carter, striding the length of Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol to the White House on foot.

But nature saved her worst for Ulysses S. Grant's second inaugural in 1873. The temperature hovered below zero all day. West Point cadets dropped out of the line of march with frost bite. Grant raised eyebrows by riding to the White House in the luxu-

Elusive Equality

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — In the days of the Great Depression, any number of local public schools across North Carolina were in danger of closing. The state took over financial responsibility for the schools satewide.

Members of the General Assembly, then as now, considered a line-item budget (so many dollars for every specific thing) the best way to see to it that local schools did their jobs properly. Besides, most of them could read a budget even when they couldn't understand educational programs or philosophies.

Over the years, North Carolina has remained the foremost state in the nation in central funding of local schools, and that system was supposed to guard the state's constitutional demand that every child have equal opportunity for a good education, whether he lived in a remote rural area or the big city.

Of late there has been growing alarm over that system. In time wealthy counties have stretched their taxing abilities under aggressive and innovative leadership to add more and more opportunity.

Slipping

Less wealthy counties have demonstrated an inability or an unwillingness to raise the local money to match such added quality.

Things are out of balance. As educators sought to correct imbalances, a variety of things have been tried such as classroom aides, reading programs, kindergartens, and on and on ... each fit into that line-item budget format. At the same time, special interest groups were able to pressure legislators to insert line-item budget programs to satisfy particular interests or concerns. As a legislative study group will report to this session of the General Assembly:

"These special interests are often translated into expanded or new line-items which may or may not address real educational need ... there are no standards by which to evaluate the need for an impact of these line-items in terms of a total educational program."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, a member of the State Board of Education, put the entire matter bluntly at a recent session of that policy group: "We are at a crossroads ... Yes, we have outlived this budget process."

State administrators and fellow board members agree on that, as do a number of legislators. In recent years there have been a handful of study commissions designed to explore the dilemma of equal education and equal funding. Local government officials have come up with a host of ideas of their own, ranging from a complete state takeover of all school costs to limits on how much local money can be spent in local schools, thereby forcing "equality".

Jerome H. Melton, Deputy State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has taken all of these various concerns and suggestions into account in a detailed report he delivered to the state Board of Education recently.

Not Equal

The most serious immediate need is to gain public awareness of the problem, and to understand one simple fact: equality of funding does not necessarily mean equality of education, Melton summed up.

He elaborated on a proposal which is coming from the legislative Committee on School Finance Studies chaired by State Rep. Malcolm Fulcher and State Senator Marvin Ward for consideration in the 1981 General Assembly.

Pilot projects in several local school systems will be proposed to design and and test the concept of state funding for a "basic education program" in which money will be provided to get a designated job done, and the outcome measured by achievement results and performance of the students. Line-item budget demands would be scrapped so that state and local officials together could determine how many and what kinds of personnel, supplies, materi-

A Guide For Reaganites

MEMO TO REAGAN APPOINTEES

Subject: Behavior in Washington

You have just been assigned to Washington, D.C. Your behavior in this foreign capital will reflect not only on your president but also on your political party and is an awesome responsibility. It is essential that you understand the native customs and culture in order to make a good impression and win the hearts and minds of the people who live here.

The natives may seem strange at first, but once you get to know and understand them, you will find Washingtonians friendly and accommodating, though somewhat slow on the uptake. This is not because they are dumb, but over the years they have become wary about committing themselves on any subject until they are certain the person they are talking to is not in a position to do them any harm.

First, the language. The official language of Washington is "Acronym," which looks and sounds like Hungarian. Washingtonians combine the first letter of each word of an agency or department. Example: "OSHA needs S.P. 134 report before OMB can authorize EIS (Environmental Impact Study) for DOF (disbursement of funds)."

ART BUCHWALD

Fortunately, there are many people in Washington who also speak English and will translate for you. Most of them are lawyers. So, if you have a problem making yourself understood, stop into any building in Washington and ask a lawyer to translate for you. He will be happy to oblige for $200 an hour.

Your first impression of Washington is that the people who live here are lazy and don't do anything. This is not true. They are hardworking and conscientious and will do anything you ask of them. The trouble is that nobody knows what to ask them to do.

The official currency is the "taxpayer dollar." One million dollars is equal to an F-4 airplane. One hundred million dollars is equal to a small aircraft carrier. Ten billion dollars will buy you an MX missile system. The natives don't mind haggling with customers and rather enjoy it. For example, if someone asks for $50 million for a new dam, tell him you won't give him a cent more than $45 million and he'll be happy to take it.

Washingtonians love to let their hair down and have a good time. The most popular form of entertaining is known as "the cocktail party." If you are lucky enough to be invited to one, it's an experience you'll never forget. The natives all gather in small circles and hold glasses in their hands and scream and laugh at the top of their voices. It is safe to drink the liquor, and you will offend your host and hostess if you don't eat the gaucamole dip, as this is Washington's national dish.

Washingtonians also hold dinner parties, which are prepared by people known as "caterers." They are interesting meals and if you are asked to one, it is an honor. If you don't know how to eat the food that is served, just watch your neighbor and follow whatever he or she does.

Tipping is the most confusing thing for a foreigner in Washington. If you go to a $1,000-a-plate fund-raising dinner, the tip is included in the bill. But if an indicted congressman gets a private law through the House of Representatives for you, it is not. Add 15 percent to the bill.

As for clothes, Washington has a temperate climate. Women should bring five or six simple Adolfo suits for the daytime and a dozen Halston evening gowns for the evening. Men should pack seven or eight morning suits with gray-striped pants, and tail coats.

To the Editor

Michael Davis (Public Forum, Jan. 19) surely speaks for many when he calls opponents of draft registration unrealistic. Others, like the man who added physical comment to his words at the post office on Jan. 5 see them as lilly-livered slackers, unwilling to carry their share of the burden of protecting the freedom and prosperity of our country.

The subject is much too big for a letter to the editor. Let me simply say that the majority (at least) of people in the peace movement are well informed. No doubt we are wrong in some particulars, perhaps major ones. But it's evidence of the DANGER of the militaristic reaction to problems such as those Mr. Davis mentions in El Salvador, Iran, and Afghanistan that force us to oppose the growing militarism of the world, especially of our own country.

The Greenville Peace Committee would like to invite Mr. Davis, the author(s) of the "Daily Reflector" editorial supporting registration, Mr. Harris, and others to meet with us. We don't want to score debating points but to share information.

Please call 758-4906 or respond through the Reflector. The saftey not just of our country but of the whole planet is involved.

Strength For Today

THE TRUMPET

"Praise the Lord with the trumpet."

This commandment is found in the last psalm, which brings to an end that book which has done so much to comfort the human heart.

The significance of this commandment is that it enjoins us to be sure that our religious faith has in it the clear note of enthusiasm. There are a good many people out of whose religion has gone all semblance of a trumpet blast. They believe the things a Christian is supposed to believe, and their lives measure up more or less satisfactorily to the required standards of the gospel. But there is no enthusiasm in their religion.

Our Lord encouraged his followers to leap for joy. He spoke of himself as a bridegroom and his disciples as members of a wedding party. The word "rejoice" was often on his lips.

Our Lord longed to hear the sound of the trumpet in every man's faith. — Elisha Douglass

See Many Different Futures

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of gurus want to tell you about the stock market's future, but a big problem from your point of view is that they see hundreds of different futures.

That's the main problem, and a big one it is, but it isn't the only one. Gurus also change their minds. They don't give money-back guarantees. They don't accept responsibility for their visions. They often decline to buy the stocks they recommend. Why take the risk?

Ultimately, these seers speak their truest words when confronted with their often poor record: "After all," they are inclined to say, "Nobody's perfect. I'm only human."

Says Mark Tavel, director of research at Value Line: "If someone knew what the market was going to do he wouldn't be in the advisory business. Instead, he'd get a loan and invest and soon be very rich."

Joseph Granville is rich, but he hasn't always been right. Still, he is considered something of a savant by at least 3,000 subscribers after correctly calling a sharp reversal in the Dow Jones average last week.

Others say Granville was lucky, or at best so influential his forecast had a self-fulfilling element. Tavel claims it just isn't possible to consistently call turns in the market or predict future stock prices.

The belief hasn't prevented Value Line from becoming the biggest of all advisory services, even while limiting itself to researching the future possibilities (emphasis) for the market and specific stocks.

Having investigated most of the techniques advertised by the gurus, Tavel has found them wanting in one or another respect — the technical analysts, contrarians, indexers, fundamentalists, modern portfolio theorists, the top-downers, bottom-uppers and dozens more.

No matter. Gurus believe in themselves and others believe in them.

An ad for The Zweig Forecast recently carried the headline, "They used to call me 'smokey' because I was a bear." It described how Martin Zweig had metamorphosed from bear to bull to "lukewarm" bull.

Zweig extoled the virtues of a flexible view of the future. "I might even switch my longer-run outlook to bearish again," he wrote. "... who knows what I'll think a few weeks or months from now?"

Undoubtedly, the ad brought in business. Zweig is successful, or at least popular. So is T.J. Holt of the Holt Investment Advisory, who advertises "Now is the time to get ready for the coming deflation."

The Professional Tape Reader advertises its "critical signals which we believe comprise the key to successful investing: Volume, Relative Strength, The 'Big Move Before the Big Move.'" These telltale signs, it suggests, permit you to make your move before the market moves.

Perry Wysong believes in insiders, and his Consensus of Insiders is based on the trading activities of corporate officers and directors. He scoffs at attributing to Granville last week's decline that erased $40 billion from New York Stock Exchange stocks in one day. The market was ready to fall, he says. Buy when the Dow hits 900, he advises.

Eliot Janeway believes politics leads economics and Washington leads the stock market. "Eliot Janeway makes sense with savvy," he proclaimed in a recent ad. "Be a gains go-getter," he said, without explaining clearly what he meant. More provocative if not clearer was his question: "What good are stock tips without thinking?"

That isn't the only thing inexplicable about the gurus. Why, their critics ask, are subscribers — even at fees of more than a hundred dollars a year — so willing to forgive the misses and praise the hits?

It's a great business, human nature and the future being what they are.

THE WORK CONTINUES — Workmen make their way through snow in Washington with a load of folding chairs as kpreparations continue for Tuesday's inaugural ceremonies for President-elect Ronald Reagan. The swearing-in will be outside the west front of the Capitol, shown in background. (AP Laserphoto)

Flu Felt Over Most Of N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state health official said Thursday an outbreak of flu has spread across most of North Carolina, striking in homes, public schools and universities, work places and even in hospitals.

Dr. John N. MacCormack, head of the state's Communicable Disease Control Branch, said flu outbreaks had been reported in Jones, Beaufort, Sampson, Johnston, Durham, Stanley, Iredell, Gaston and Haywood counties in recent days.

Hospitals in Charlotte announced Thursday they were restricting visitation to patients in an effort to keep flu from spreading through their facilities. The Mecklenburg County area has been hit hard by flu-like symptoms, which caused Davidson College to close its classes Monday and Tuesday.

Classes resumed Wednesday, and college spokesman John Slater said the worst of the sickness seems to be over.

Officials at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, North Carolina Central University in Durham and East Carolina University in Greenville all reported an increase in flu or flu-like cases.

Dr. James H. McCutchan, clinical director of UNC-Chapel Hill student services, said the school's student body apparently "got the flu at home over Christmas."

McCutchan said more than 400 students had been to the university infirmary this week. "It's almost like night and day," he said.

There are no plans to close classes at the Chapel Hill campus, he said.

"I think the flu is pretty much state-wide now," MacCormack said. "I've been in contact with a number of counties and absenteeism is generally about twice normal — about 20 to 30 percent."

He said three more patients in Asheville have been confirmed to have the A-Bangkok variety of influenza.

The hospital visitation restrictions have been in effect at Southern Wake Hospital, in Fuquay-Varina, since Jan. 5. A spokesman said they were implemented after several staff members and patients were stricken with the flu.

"The one thing we don't need here is flu being passed on to patients and staff members. We think that eliminating visiting hours has helped people here from contracting influenza," hospital administrator Sue A. Brown said.

rious landeau of patent medicine king Henry Helmbold, who drove "a four-in-hand mouse colored team of horses," a scandal akin to Jimmy Carter or Ronald Reagan riding in state behind the Budweiser horses. At the ball held in the "Muslin Palace," a huge unheated temporary marquee, instruments stuck to the lips of the musicians, the coffee froze over, the food congealed and guests danced in their fur coats and gloves. One lady reportedly froze to death. Hundreds of canaries hired to provide a triumphant chorus huddled in their cages and refused to chirp. Some dropped dead from their perches.

By midnight the guests had all gone home to thaw out.

Maybe the Reagans this time can import some California weather along with the parade experts.

als, and supports would best get the stated job done.

If that approach proved workable, then the state could fund local schools for an equal "basic" education program — and that word basic includes buildings, transportation, all essential study course, etc. — and if local schools wanted to go beyond that, the extras would be "frills" and not basics.

MISSIONARY SERVICE

Frienship Holiness Church of Falkland will hold its first missionary service of the new year, Jan. 18 at 12 noon. General Mother Elizabeth Little of Greenville will speak. The pastor and members invite the public.

Other services are: holy communion at 7:30 p.m. Saturday; Pastor Hattie M. Modest Turnout At Advisory Committee Hearing

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Mayor's Advisory Committee is hopeful that general turnout and subsequent citizens participation will be greater for the next public meeting scheduled on a second area of city services now being studied by the advisory group.

Thursday night's public meeting on the "administrative services" area of local services generated a small turnout although program moderators indicated that the comments made should prove helpful in meeting the overall study objective.

Dr. Bob Deyton, who is serving as co-chairman of the administrative services subcommittee with Jean Darden, pointed out that their area is one of six involved in the advisory committee's study.

Deyton said that other subcommittee study areas include protection and safety, leisure activities and recreation, environmental protection, public transportation, and new revenue sources.

All of the subcommittees are in the process of evaluating their areas, he observed, and it is the goal of the overall advisory body to prepare a general report on city services that will serve as a meaningful planning tool for the mayor and city for years to come.

In the absence of general comments from the audience, members of the subcommittee discussed various areas that are being studied, including land use and present and future use of the city's public buildings, how to disseminate public information and answer citizen's concerns, functions and authority of city purchasing agent and central purchasing office, personnel and administrative relationships of all city employees, and insurance needs and rates for the city.

Dean Painter, a committee member, noted that an inventory of city property is being made and all buildings and property owned by the city, Greenville Utilities, the county, and other agencies are being plotted on a map. He said that while the effort may not tell the city or county anything new as to what buildings and property they hold, it should be useful in identifying growth potential.

Painter said the study might identify existing buildings the city could use to accomodate its expansion needs, in lieu of new construction.

In the area of public information, it was noted that the city appears to be doing a good job of getting information out and the mayor holds weekly press conferences to discuss items of interest.

Linda Hix commented on looking at additional ways of getting information out to the public and the need for stimulating public participation.

John Schofield, former city planner here, said that a key rests with the amount of information and the kind of information that goes out. He said the city should look at informal ways of issuing public information and he asserted that "there are a lot of people who want more...information" on various issues.

Former City Councilman John Howard observed that his experience with public hearings has shown him that "only a handful (of citizens) would show up." He said the information can be disseminated but the public usually will not respond unless the word reaches the various neighborhood councils and discussions feed out from that level.

The question of just how many neighborhood associations exist in Greenville was raised as an area of study interest.

Charlie Holliday reported that the subcommittee is looking at the area of central purchasing by the city and is reviewing a study prepared by the League of Municipalities. He said that it has been felt for some time that a need exists here for centralized purchasing.

Mayor Don McGlohon said Leavy Brock is the city's purchasing agent and is now undergoing a period of training and study. The mayor suggested that the central purchasing concept should result in "considerable savings" to the city over a period of time.

It was pointed out that the subcommittee is taking a look at the various local boards and commissions and a much more widespread interest on the part of the general public to serve was noticed.

A report on local grants is being prepared for consideration by committee members and the study of administrative services also includes the various aspects relating to the city's insurance needs.

Public meetings on the other areas of study will be scheduled this month and in February. Over 150 volunteer citizens comprise the six subcommittees.

N.C. Official Speaks To Pitt Democratic Women At Meet

Jane Patterson, deputy secretary of the Department of Administration of the State of North Carolina, spoke to the Pitt County Democratic Women at a dinner meeting held last night at the Greenville Country Club.

Claiming ancestors named Smith from Pitt County, Ms. Patterson said she was especially pleased to address the group. She spoke of the challenges coming before the General Assembly this session concerning equitable property distribution for spouses, displaced homemaker support and child care tax aid. She reiterated Gov. Hunt's commitment to education and spoke of his interest in placing North Carolina in the forefront of the new micrelectronics industry.

She noted that it took women 70 years to win the right to vote and that North Carolina has the largest number of women eligible to vote in the nation. Noting also that women were responsible for 60 percent of the funds collected in the campaigns for the November election, she urged women to follow up this accomplishment by suggesting and even demanding appointments to boards and commissions and to use their strengths to make North Carolina a better and safer place to live. While acknowledging the "all but impossible task of running a home and running in politics at the same time," she charged women, "Do not hide your light under a basket. Let it shine throughout the state."

Janice Faulkner of Greenville, the newly appointed executive director of the State Democratic Party, was recognized. It was noted that she is the first woman to hold this position.

George Saleeby, Pitt County Democratic Party chairman, thanked the Democratic Women for their dedicated work and fund-raising efforts on behalf of the party. A special word of appreciation from Gov. Hunt was delivered by Sam McLawhorn, Hunt's Pitt County campaign chairman.

Nominating committee chairman, Gladys Howell, reported the new slate of officers: Ann Evans, president; Grace Carraway, first vice president; Rebie Crandall, second vice president; Willie Mae Carney, recording secretary; Myree Hayes, corresponding secretary; Ruth Beddingfield, treasurer; Katherine Lang, program chairman; Artemis Kares, hospitality; Lala Steelman, historian, Freddie Jacobson, publicity; Betty Speir, precinct chairman; Mrs. J. B. Spilman, chaplain; and Ramona Ensley, membership chairman.

At-large members of the executive board are past presidents, Janice Faulkner, Ruth Beddingfield, Betty Speir, Lala Steelman, Katherine Lewis, Gladys Howell and Joyce Hastings.

Speir, who is vice chairman of the State Democratic Party, presented a plaque of appreciation to Joyce Hasting, outgoing president of the Pitt County Democratic Women.

Anyone interested in joining the group is invited to call 756-0488 for information.

STEP ONE

A newspaper log should burn about as long as a wood log. Roll your newspaper log as tight as possible. The tighter it is rolled the better it will burn.

STEP TWO

After you have squeezed it tightly, bind it with a coat hangar or metal wire. Soaking the rolled newspaper in water and letting it dry completely will "season" the newspaper and make it burn more efficiently.

STEP THREE

Finally, stack about six dried newspaper logs in a crisscross to provide more ventilation to the fire and light it. Enjoy.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM NOTICE

The City of Greenville has submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development a preapplication for funding under the Community Development Block Grant Small Cities Program in the amount of $3,000,000.00 over a three year period. The Small Cities Program of Greenville is designed to address the needs of one identified neighborhood strategy area. The program is primarily directed at improving the housing stock and general living environment of the residents of the area. Copies of the preapplication are available for public inspection in City Hall in the Community Development Department.

Objections to the City's Small Cities Program can be made to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's Area Office in Greensboro, North Carolina. Any objections must be based on one or more of the following:

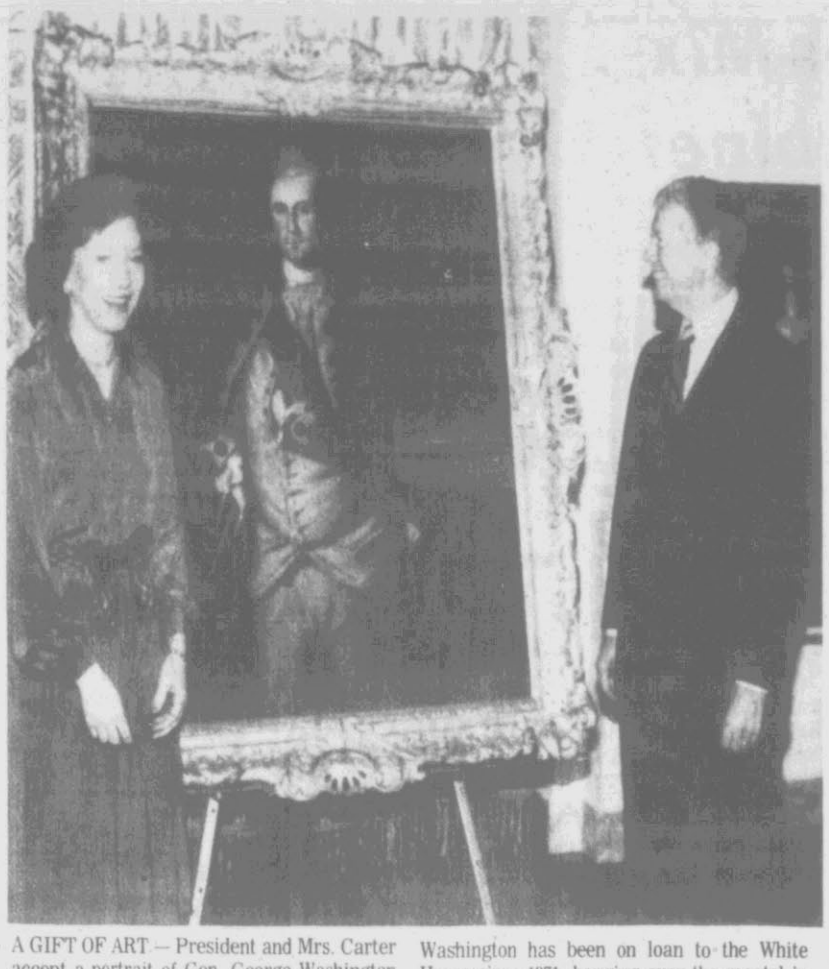

1) needs and objectives of the City are plainly inconsistent with available facts and dates;

2) plainly inappropriate activities to meet the needs and objectives by the applicant;

3) the preapplication does not comply with the requirements of the law;

4) the preapplication's proposed activities are ineligible under the law.

Any objections should be submitted to the Department of Housing and Urban Development within 30 days of the publication of this Notice.

A GIFT OF ART — President and Mrs. Carter accept a portrait of Gen. George Washington which was painted in 1776 by artist Charles Willson Peale. The painting, a gift from Mrs. Lansdell K. Christie, was one of several works accepted by the White House. The portrait of Washington has been on loan to the White House since 1971, hanging over the mantel in the president's Oval Office, where it will remain as a part of the White House collection. Sen. East Approves Of Nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first serious delay encountered by any of Ronald Reagan's Cabinet choices, the FBI is investigating fresh allegations against Labor Secretary-designate Raymond L. Donovan that sources say would destroy his hopes of Senate confirmation if proven true.

"We have new questions that have arisen that need to be resolved," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said after the panel put off a scheduled vote on Donovan on Thursday.

However, one member of Hatch's committee, freshman Sen. John East, R-N.C., said he intended to vote for Donovan's confirmation.

"I found Mr. Donovan to be a down-to-earth businessman in touch with the economic problems our country faces," East said in a statement issued by his Senate staff late Thursday. "From his responses to our questions, I think Mr. Donovan understands that restoring a productive economy is the key to fighting inflation and putting people back to work."

East did not comment specifically, in his statement, about the questions raised by Hatch.

Hatch met with FBI Director William Webster to request a swift investigation. Webster refused to discuss the case, except to tell reporters, "We're in agreement as to how to proceed."

Few details were available, but sources said the charges involved a reported series of payoffs to the Teamsters union in New Jersey by Donovan's firm, the Schiavone Construction Co.

One committee aide, who asked not to be identified, said the charges were serious enough, if true, to force withdrawal of Donovan's nomination.

But the source stressed there was no proof of the "naked allegation," and Donovan was said to have insisted in a conference with Hatch late Wednesday that he was innocent of any wrongdoing.

Hatch, asked by reporters whether Donovan's nomination was in jeopardy, said, "I think it's premature to answer that question."

He added, "I frankly think Mr Donovan's an honest man, but we've got to resolve some conflicts and problems."

Donovan was unavailable for comment, but Reagan told reporters he was not concerned about the delay.

"I know what the evidence is," the president-elect said. "He's told me this is absolutely not true and I have every confidence in him."

Hatch told reporters he did not know when the investigation would be completed. He said additional hearings might be necessary and added, "Whether or not it will be completed before Inauguration Day I don't know."

The committee chairman met privately with other Republicans on the panel to brief them on details of the case.

Ironically, the new charge against Donovan surfaced two days after the 50-year-old Cabinet nominee impressed most of the committee's members with his answers to questions about two other business transactions a decade apart.

In one case, Donovan's firm sent a $13,000 check in 1967 to a company later discovered to be a dummy corporation set up to funnel kickbacks to New Jersey politicians and mobsters.

Donovan told the committee at his confirmation hearing Monday that he thought the check was a routine business transaction to purchase the right to dump construction debris on a vacant lot.

The second incident involved a federal grand jury investigation which reportedly received information from Schiavone employees that the firm put a "ghost" Teamster on the payroll in exchange for labor peace.

Donovan told the company he knew nothing of either the investigation or the purported arrangement until he was informed by Senate investigators.

He said that in checking with his company, he learned a non-working Teamster foreman was placed on the payroll for several months beginning in late 1977. But he said the arrangement was required by a labor contract.

Donovan conceded that the worker, the chauffeur of a Teamster business agent, never showed up for work.

But he denied his company was extorted or ever made a payoff.

The North Carolina senator said he was impressed by Donovan's stands on right-to-work law, on waste and extravagance in the federally funded Comprehensive Employment and Training Act jobs program and growing problems with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"I'm hopeful he will be confirmed quickly so he, President Reagan and members of Congress can begin work immediately to confront our serious economic problems," East said.

Waste Management Meet Set

A regional public meeting of the Governor's Task Force on Waste Management will be held Tuesday, January 20, at North Pitt High School.

Doors will open at 6:30 p.m. with the program to get underway at 7 p.m. Agenda items for the meeting include a slide show by a representative of the N. C. School of Science and Mathematics, small group discussions, a wrap-up session, and a forum at 10 p.m., at which time interested persons will have an opportunity to present statements or written comments.

Facilitators for this district meeting are Edith Webber, League of Women Voters; Y. J. Lao, Environmental Health, East Carolina University; Bill Coward, Human Relations Council, Kinston; and Joe Parker, State Goals and Policy Board, Ahoskie.

The public is invited to attend and to be prepared to submit input on the subject of waste management.

Quilting Bee Will Be Held

Citizens of Pitt County and the area will be able to attend an old-fashioned quilting bee, which will take place at Carolina East Mall on January 17 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

Quilters will gather from throughout the country to demonstrate quilting on the large frames as has been done in North Carolina for centuries.

Visiting quilting groups will come to Greenville from Chapman Methodist Church, Epworth Methodist Church and Timothy Christian Church. These three groups of ladies quilt at their churches every Wednesday to raise money for the churches.

Other quilters demonstrating their craft on Saturday are members of the newly-formed Greenville Quilters Guild. They will have large quilting frames as well as smaller frames for lap quilting to demonstrate examples of quilted household items and furnishings.

Home Burglary Rate In North Carolina Growing

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While property crimes in North Carolina are increasing almost as rapidly as violent crimes, law enforcement officials say there is a growing number of citizens escaping those statistics.

The citizens are members of 6,500 community watch programs across the state. As participants, they are taught by crime control officers to live defensively, to engrave their driver's license number on valuables and to keep a close eye on their neighbors' homes.

Brad Critcher, assistant public information officer for the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said a Police Information Network study showed burglaries increased almost 13 percent during the first nine months of 1980, as compared to the same period in 1979.

The study was based on crime figures in the state's five largest cities.

All property crimes — which include burglary, larceny and auto vehicle theft — rose almost 9 percent, closely paralleling the 9 percent increase in violent crimes for the period.

But the property crime rate in two cities, Durham and Winston-Salem, dropped slightly. In Durham, an 84 percent drop was recorded while Winston-Salem saw a 46 percent decrease in property crime.

Critcher says that was a direct result of the community watch program. He says Durham had 850 watch programs and Winston-Salem had 235 such groups.

"We are contending that because of their outstanding participation, they experienced a decrease (in property crimes) in those areas," Critcher said.

"What the community watch program does is displace crime out of the community watch area into surrounding areas, such as the county or the city," he said, adding that the program is designed to prevent home burglaries and property crimes in particular.

"It is not as effective in preventing violent crimes, although it (community watch) can have some affect there too. The people trained in defensive living techniques pick up the valuable hints and techniques to prevent them from becoming the victims of violent crimes," Critcher said.

He said there has been large growth in the program, which has been highly promoted by Gov. Jim Hunt. Critcher credited the growth to the program's success stories.

For example, he said, in Buncombe County, property crimes increased 28 percent between January and September 1980, as compared to the same period in 1979. But figures from the sheriff's department show that of the 22,000 people in community watches, only six have been burglarized since June 1977, and none had been burglarized in the first nine months of 1980.

Collectors' Club Meets

The Greenville Collectors Club met Tuesday night at Paul and Marjorie Little's home.

The business session included the reading of a thank-you note from the Pitt County Dept. of Social Services concerning the club's contributions to the Foster Children's Christmas Project.

The Littles displayed late 19th century Christmas tree ornaments made in Lauscha, Germany and an Edison Home Cylinder record player for the program. Also displayed by various members of the club were books on wicker furniture, old cameras, and collectible music machines.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Dave and Debbie Pruette, Tues., Feb 10. The program will be on old cameras and equipment.

Republicans Plan Meets

Pitt County Republicans, at their monthly meeting earlier this week, scheduled the precinct and county conventions for March 7 at the county court house.

In other business, a nominating committee for officers for the coming year was appointed and a report on the registration drive was given.

Unusual Religious Mix In The Reagan Cabinet

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Although official biographies usually don't contain the information, a person-by-person check shows that religious affiliations of President-elect Ronald Reagan's Cabinet run the gamut from the biggest to tiny denominations.

There are Roman Catholics, assorted Protestants, a Jew. Some of the newly appointed officials are highly active in their religious alignments, some only peripherally so or hardly at all.

The preponderant share of them are Roman Catholics, the nation's largest denomination, and Episcopalians, the seventh-ranking church in size.

None named to the Cabinet belongs to Reagan's own denomination, the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). None is United Presbyterian, the church of his customary worship, and none is Baptist, the country's biggest Protestant body and the denomination to which President Carter belongs.

What's striking about the religious mix is the proportionately strong representation of small or relatively young, American-born churches apart from the older, mainline bodies.

Interior Secretary-designate James Watt, 42, is an active, deeply religious member of the Assemblies of God, a 1.3 million-member Pentecostal body founded in 1914, with headquarters in Springfield, Mo.

Education Secretary-design!te Terrel H. "Ted" Bell, 59, is an active Mormon, officially the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It was founded in New York State in 1830, and now has 3.5 million U.S. members and headquarters in Salt Lake City.

Two Cabinet appointees, Andrew "Drew" Lewis Jr., 49, transportation secretary-designate, and Richard S. Schweiker, 54, health and human services secretary-designate, are members of the Schwenkfelder Church.

It's a little but historic Protestant group of only five Pennsylvania congregations totaling 2,748 members. But it has roots in the 16th century Protestant Reformation when founding German nobleman Caspar Schwenckfeld von Ossig took issue with Lutheran formalism.

Both Lewis and Schweiker belong to a congregation at Worcester, Pa., and have taught Sunday school there.

Of 20 prospective Cabinet members, counting Vice President-elect George Bush, an active Episcopalian, five are expected to be Episcopalians and five are Roman Catholics.

Others include three United Methodists, a United Church of Christ member, and an unspecified "Protestant."

That is the indefinite classification given for Jeane Kirkpatrick, 54, a political science professor at Washington's Roman Catholic Georgetown University, named U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Among the Catholics is Secretary of State-designate Alexander Haig, 56, whose younger brother, the Rev. Frank Haig, is a Jesuit priest who teaches physics at Loyola College in Baltimore.

Other Catholics include Labor Secretary-designate Raymond J. Donovan, 50, a leader in church charitable work in his home state of New Jersey; William J. Casey, 67, named to head the CIA, and Richard Allen, 44, picked to head the National Security Council.

Treasury Secretary-designate Donald Regan 61, comes of Catholic background, but a spokesman says he presently is inactive.

The Episcopalians, besides Bush, are Defense Secretary-designate Caspar Weinberger, 63; Attorney General-designate William French Smith, 63; Agriculture Secretary-designate John Block, 45, and William E. Brock, 50, expected to be named special trade represenative.

Weinberger has been the treasurer of the Episcopal diocese of California. And Block's pastor, the Rev. Hobart Heistand of Christ Episopal Church in Springfield, Ill., says of him:

"Very devout. So is his whole family. They're good folks and I hate to lose them to Washington."

The three United Methodists are Samuel R. Pierce, 48, designated secretary of housing and urban development; James B. Edwards, 53, chosen for energy secretary, and David Stockman, 34, named director of budget and management.

Malcolm Baldrige, 48, commerce secretary-designate, is a member of the United Church of Christ, and Murray L. Weidenbaum, 53, of Washington University in St. Louis who is expected to be named chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, is Jewish.

Apart from the Cabinet, other newly picked White House staffers include press officer James S. Brady, 40, an Episcoplaian; deputy press officer Karma Small, a United Methodist.

Edwin Meese, one of Reagan's closest advisers and head of his transition team, is an active member of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, serving as vice president of First Lutheran Church in El Cajon, Calif., before moving to Washington.

Ask Prayer On Inaugural

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide outpouring of prayer is being urged on inauguration day next Tuesday when Ronald Reagan assumes the presidency.

Leaders of the effort say that a million prayer groups across the country are expected to be meeting that day in churches, offices, shopping centers, schools and homes.

The plan is being pushed by the National Advisory Committee for Inauguration Day Prayer, including numerous evangelists and church leaders.

"These prayers can affect the destiny of the country as much as the inauguration of the president," says the Rev. Jimmy R. Allen, a committee member and head of the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission.

Its weekly "Baptist Hour" radio program on nearly 500 stations is appealing for participation. The committee coordinating the effort was set up as an adjunct to organizing of an evangelism festival in Kansas City July 27-30.

"It is crucial that we call our people to prayer," says Allen of Fort Worth, Texas. "Not only because the Bible commands us but because the times demand it."

WEEKEND SERVICES

The Rev. James Corbett will speak Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Holy Mission, located at 905 Dickinson Ave. Other services include: Saturday, Eldress Nina Blount, P.T.T. Evangelistic, at 7:30 p.m.; prayer and praise service Sunday night at 7:30 with Pastor Shirley Atkinson as speaker. The public is invited.

DESIGNED FOR POWER

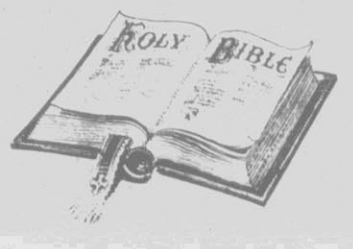

In the annals of sailing there have been few to surpass the clipper. She plied the seven seas and helped a new nation become a world power.

But what was their formula for success? God's power and man's design making fullest use of it. You don't have to count the sails or study the rigging to know that.

Is it any different when we employ steam, electricity or atomic power? These are sources of power God has provided. We design the craft and machinery to put them to use.

Try that formula for everyday living. The power comes from God, you put it to the best use. That's what religion is about!

They were wise and skilled Americans who designed the "clipper." They are wise and skilled, likewise, whose week begins with the worship of God, and whose days put his Power to Christian use.

Fireman Award Is Presented

Lyman Hardee, chief of the Eastern Pines Fire Department, was presented the Fireman of the Year Award Thursday night at the annual Pitt County Fireman's ladies' night banquet.

The award was presented by the Pitt County Independent Insurance Agents, represented by Sparky McCaskile.

LYMAN HARDEE

Hardee was selected for the award from seven applicants in the county. Last year he attended 54 out of 69 fires in the county and spent 292 hours in training. Pitt County has 650 fireman in all, and 225 of these attended the banquet.

Hardee is married and has two children. He has spent 23 years in the fire service.

Deadline Is Monday

The Pitt County Board of Elections noted that Monday, Jan. 19 at 5 p.m. is the deadline for unregistered citizens to register or for residents to make address changes in order to vote in the Feb. 17 referendum on mixed beverage sales in Greenville.

Margaret Register, elections supervisor, noted that only those people who are permanent residents of Greenville will be able to vote in the referendum.

She added that reregistration is not required for the Feb. 17 vote and residents who have previously registered remain eligible to vote in all elections unless they have a change in their address data.

Agency OKs Nursing Funds

The governing board of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency has approved a proposed use of federal funds by the East Carolina University School of Nursing for the third and fourth year operation of a nurse practitioner program.

In other business at this week's meeting, the governing board approved the placement of a National Health Service Corps obstetrician in Washington County.

Cars Collide At Intersection

Cars driven by Rajeah Harshadrai Vyas of 205 Fairlane Rd. and James Henry Ward of Route 5, Greenville, collided about 9:40 a.m. yesterday on Fifth Street, 50 feet west of the Cadillac Street intersection.

Damage from the mishap was set at $300 to the Vyas car and $200 to the Ward vehicle.

WEEKEND SERVICES

Services scheduled during the weekend at Rock Spring FWB Church are: Sunday, 6 p.m. the Home Mission Circle will meet; Elder Willie Joyner, the W. L. Phillips Traveling Choir and the Reserve Ushers will be in charge of services at 7:30 p.m.; No. 2 Choir will have rehearsal at 5 p.m.

Spring Record

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University has a record spring semester enrollment of 12,263 students on campus, according to Registrar J. Gilbert Moore.

The total includes 149 students in the ECU School of Medicine.

Spring semester enrollment in 1980 was 11,843. The fall semester enrollment was a record 13,165, Moore said.

The figures do not include enrollment in the university's Evening College.

Red-Ink Budget.....

Indian Ocean.

Carter said the steep boost is needed because "we face a threat to our security, as events in Afghanistan, the Middle East and Eastern Europe make clear." U.S. forces must be able "to contain Soviet aggression and continue to assure our security in the future," he said.

The "real" growth in the new defense budget is greater than the 3 percent real annual increase Carter promised NATO allies but is the minimum increase that Reagan is expected to accept.

Carter proposed an additional $2.4 billion for the MX missile system, which has attracted opposition, particularly over the deployment plan the administration has devised.

The defense budget also proposes to fortify the readiness of conventional forces through increased pay, training and purchase of spare parts; to deploy Cruise missiles on modernized B-52 bombers, and to expand the Trident submarine program.

The 1982 deficit would mark the 13th consecutive budget to wind up in the red.

Carter's estimate of the deficit assumes that Congress will pass his proposal for a reduction in business taxes and a 10-cent-a-gallon hike in the gasoline tax to encourage conservation, with both measures to take effect in 1981.

But Congress rejected the same gasoline tax proposal last year, and Reagan has said he opposes it. Without the tax, Carter's projected deficit would grow by $13 billion. A weaker than expected economy also could widen the deficit by reducing government income and triggering increased spending for programs such as unemployment insurance.

An earlier Carter proposal for personal tax credits this year to offset higher Social Security taxes would be postponed until 1982 to limit the size of the growing 1981 deficit. It was the only tax relief he offered.

Carter also took a swipe at Reagan's call for a prompt tax cut, warning that sharp reductions in personal taxes would only worsen inflation.

"I continue to believe that large inflationary individual income tax cuts are neither appropriate nor possible today, however popular they might appear in the short run," Carter said in his budget message.

Reagan has called for reductions in non-defense spending and tax cuts to revive a sluggish economy that Carter's economists predict will remain beset by high inflation and unemployment this year.

The incoming president pledged during his campaign to reduce personal tax rates by 30 percent over three years, beginning in 1981, and balance the budget by 1983, if not sooner.

Reagan said he could eliminate 2 percent, or about $13 billion, from the 1981 budget and cut even further into the 1982 spending plan. He is counting on the Republican-controlled Senate to endorse his policies.

But Carter's budget document said repeatedly that despite growing concern about the growth of federal spending, the federal budget has "become more difficult to control."

Fully 30 percent of the budget goes for social programs paying benefits that rise automatically with consumer prices, and costs also rise as the number of beneficiaries increase, according to the budget report.

Congress has been reluctant in the past to change such politically popular programs, but Reagan's economic advisers say they hope the new Congress will be willing to restrict the eligibility for some of these programs.

In that same vein, Carter proposed that Congress adopt several cost-cutting measures.

He proposed that federal programs calling for cost-of-living increases twice a year be changed to annual adjustments. Federal employee retirement plans and dairy price supports would be two of the main programs affected.

Carter also proposed that the Consumer Price Index, which now determines cost-of-living increases in federal programs, be replaced. He said this index exaggerates the inflation rate because it uses mortgage interest rates to measure housing costs.

In one of the few acknowledgements of his imminent departure, Carter said he would not seek funds for two of his most sought-after programs, welfare "reform" and national health insurance, saying that to do so would not "appear appropriate for an administration leaving office."

Carter's energy spending proposals call for a 37 percent increase to $12 billion in 1982. Most of the increase would be used to increase the strategic petroleum reserves at a rate of 230,000 barrels a day, more than double the current rate. Some of the increase also would go for development of nuclear weapons.

Other Carter spending proposals include:

— A 14 percent increase in foreign aid to $7.66 billion, including $585 million for assistance to refugees.

— A 24 percent increase in rental housing assistance for low-income people, to total $6.9 billion in 1982. The budget includes the addition of 260,000 subsidized housing units, half newly built and half rehabilitated.

— A 4.3 percent increase, after taking inflation into account, in federal funds for basic research and development. The $5.9 billion proposed in the budget is part of Carter's plan to spur productivity advancements.

— A request of $2.5 billion for the space shuttle program, as part of a $6.7 billion spending plan for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

— A 5.5 percent annual pay raise for the federal civilian workforce and a 9.1 percent raise for military personnel. However, top federal officials, including Cabinet members and members of Congress, would get about a 22 percent raise, their first salary increase since 1977.

CHORUS TO MEET

The Community Gospel Chorus of Greenville will meet Monday evening at 8 p.m. at the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church. Business of importance will be discussed.

Senior Citizens Hold Meet

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club held its monthly meeting recently at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Mrs. Sarah Ashton presided at the meeting and welcomed 85 members and three guests.

Reports were given on the gift wrapping project, which 30 members participated in.

On February 21 the club will have a booth at Carolina East Mall with the proceeds going to the March of Dimes. On March 28 the club will have a booth at the mall for the "Spring Happening."

Memorial donations will be given in memory of Mrs. Rena Horne, Mrs. Ethel Whitehurst, Mr. L.M. Roebuck and Mrs. Susanna Switzer. A moment of silence was held in their memory.

New officers for 1981 were installed by Mrs. Harriet Roseveare. They are: President Sarah Ashton; Vice President Beatrice Weilenmann; Secretary Louise Wand; Treasurer Anne Fornes; chaplains, the Rev. Adrian Brown, the Rev. Henry Lofquist.

Mr. and Mrs. Jatie Spain were welcomed as new members. Guests included Mrs. Elizabeth Richards, Mrs. Katie Modlin and Mrs. Lena Fleming.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. James Wand, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Weilenmann, Mrs. Ann Fornes and Mrs. Sarah Ashton.

The next meeting will be held January 22 at 10:15 a.m.

REQUESTS APPROVED

Police Chief E. G. Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by: the Winterville Kiwanis Club for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation from Jan. 13-31 in order to obtain goods for the club's annual auctions sale; and by the Greenville Girl Scouts for permission to conduct a door-to-door solicitation from Jan. 16 through Feb. 1 in order to raise funds for Greenville Girl Scout troops and the National Girl Scout organization.

HOLY GHOST SERVICE

A Deliverance Holy Ghost Joy Service will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Sadie Saulter Elementary School. Rev. William Carmen will be the speaker. Host for the service, Rev. Charles Covil, invites the public to attend.

PITT COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS
BY B. ALTON GARDNER, COMMISSIONER

W.W. SPEIGHT, PITT COUNTY ATTORNEY

AT KING BIRTHDAY BANQUET — Bennie Roundtree, president of the Pitt County Chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; Dudley Flood, assistant superintendent of public instruction for North Carolina; and Rev. Fred D. Taylor, director of chapters and affiliates of the National Southern Christian Leadership Conference, were among some 112 persons at a Pitt SCLC-sponsored Martin Luther King Jr. Birthday banquet here last night. Flood and Rev. Taylor were the principal speakers at the session in honor of the late Dr. King, who was killed in 1968. Rev. Taylor was introduced by Golden Frinks, national field secretary for the SCLC. The theme of the program was, "Keeping the Dream Alive." (Reflector Staff Photo).

Fire Units Go To School

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department units were called to South Greenville School about 2:04 p.m. yesterday, when a fire was discovered in a storage room behind the stage in the school auditorium.

Officers, who said the cause of the blaze is under investigation, reported the fire and damage was confined to a pile of books on the floor. They noted school personnel used fire extinguishers to put out most of the fire before fire units arrived.

Students remained in class during the incident.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market eked out a small gain today, continuing its gradual recovery of the past few sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 4.87 in the last two days, rose another .34 to 970.31 by noontime today.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-4 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market seemed to be recuperating from the jolt it took last week, when a "sell everything" recommendation by Joseph Granville, an investment adviser, helped drive the Dow Jones industrial average down almost 39 points in two days.

The rebound has come in spite of considerable uncertainties about the outlook for economic activity and interest rates.

There was concern, for example, that the Federal Reserve's weekly report late today on the money supply would show a sharp rise, reducing the odds that the Fed might loosen up on credit in the immediate future.

Oil stocks, which led Thursday's advance, continued to dominate the active list. Mobil was up ¾ at 82⅛; Standard Oil of Indiana gained ¾ to 78¼, and Gulf Oil rose ⅛ to 42⅞. But Texaco was unchanged at 46½, and Phillips Petroleum lost ¼ to 58⅜.

The NYSE's composite index added .12 to 77.11. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.47 at 346.76.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.60 million shares at noontime, against 17.37 million at the same point Thursday.

ECU Scientist Named To Post

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Peter Fricke, senior scientist in the East Carolina University Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources, has been appointed social scientist to the National Marine Fisheries Service.

His appointment, effective Jan. 1, is the result of an interagency personnel agreement between ECU and the NMFS. He expects to spend one week each month at ECU directing current research on the striped bass and recreational fisheries in North Carolina sounds, and the remainder of his time in Washington.

As the only social scientist in the NMFS, Fricke will advise on socio-economic impacts of fishery management planning and research fishery policy issues for the U.S. Office of Resource Conservation and Management.

A native of Louth, England, Fricke has been at ECU since 1977. His research interests have included oil pollution impacts related to the "Argo Merchant" and "Amoco

DR. PETER FRICKE

Cadiz" oil spills and land use management in the Croatan National Forest. He has also served as technical advisor to the United Nations' Conference on Law of the Sea since 1975.

Most recently, his ECU projects have involved studies of offshore recreational fisheries and calico scallop and bay scallop fisheries.

Fricke has degrees from New York University and the University of Durham, England, and is a former navigating officer in the British merchant navy. He previously taught at the Univerity of Wales Institute of Science and Technology and at the University of Rhode Island.

Before his appointment at ECU, Fricke was a research fellow in marine policy at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, Mass.

Elevator Fall Injured 13

CHICAGO (AP) — Thirteen financial executives were treated for leg or other injuries after a high-speed elevator in a bank building descended 56 floors "a little bit faster than usual" and jerked to a halt below the ground floor, officials said.

"We did not know it was falling until we hit," said John Howland, 38, one of the passengers treated following the mishap Thursday night. "It seemed to be normal. The next thing we knew, we hit the bottom. Everybody was scrunched down."

Howland, of Glenview, was among members of a financial executive institute attending a monthly meeting on the 56th floor of the 57-story First National Bank of Chicago building.

He said all of the 21 people in the elevator had entered the elevator at about 8:22 p.m. when the meeting ended.

"Apparently the elevator's brake failed and it came down a little faster than usual," said Police Sgt. Edward B. Savage.

Firefighters rescued the passengers through the roof of the elevator cab, he said.

An official of Westinghouse Elevator Co., the manufacturer, said the elevator could not have been free-falling or the injuries would have been more serious.

Elmer Tessner, Westinghouse's downtown Chicago maintenance superintendent, said the car came to rest 1½ stories below the ground floor after slamming against an oil-filled piston at the base of the shaft. The piston is designed to act as an emergency cushion, he said.

He said the elevator had a capacity of 4,000 pounds.

Nine passengers were treated and released from Northwestern Memorial Hospital, said Gregory Turner, evening administrator. He said two others were being held with multiple leg fractures.

One victim was treated and released at each of two other hospitals, spokesmen said.

One of those two, Robert E. Burmeister, 56, of Hinsdale said the elevator stopped with "a sudden crash and a bump" and a ceiling grating that included a light fixture fell on the heads of some of the occupants.

Burmeister, executive vice president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said the elevator seemed to be traveling at the normal rate of speed but apparently the braking mechanism failed. Burmeister, treated at Mercy Hospital, said both his feet hurt and were swollen.

School Bds....

that a good school board is one that also "finds time to devote to the issues of the society it serves."

Over 150 school board members, school comitteemen and school officials were on hand for the Annual District II School Boards Association meeting. They represented school systems in Pitt, Beaufort, Hyde, Martin, Tyrrell and Washington Counties.

Mrs. Terry Shank, member of the Greenville City Board of Education, and current president of District II of the N. C. School Boards Association, presided at the annual gathering

The meeting opened at 4:30 Thursday afternoon with a General Session. This was followed by small group discussions led by personnel from the State Department of Public Instruction. The evening session with Dr. Bruton as keynote speaker concluded the meeting.

Legislators....

ented a dismal choice for legislators — a highway program budget that must have new revenues over the next two years or see the state's road-building program cut by $342 million and the layoffs of 2,000 to 3,000 transportation workers.

Hunt proposed no answer to the highway dilemma, but said he would have a proposal in the spring.

Hunt's speech ended a day that saw introduction of the first insurance legislation and the appointment of more new committee chairmen.

Chief among the appointments was that of Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, to head the Senate Finance Committee. Duncan, a highway contractor, told reporters he strongly opposes a gasoline tax increase — but won't vote on such a bill because of his possible conflict of interest.

The thrust of Hunt's long, rambling address was to leave a "legacy of hope and progress" for North Carolina. To achieve that Hunt said a strategy was needed — one based on economic and human development.

Hunt described his budget proposals as "lean," but said they still included programs aimed at attracting high-paying industry, improving education and providing high-skill training.

He proposed a handful of small tax changes, raising the state homestead tax exemption and providing credits for home insulation and solar energy systems.

Aside from his budget, Hunt used the speech to repeat his support for the Equal Rights Amendment, a fair employment bill and legislation giving wives full legal rights to share family property.

In other legislative action:

Committees

Leadership in the Legislature underwent more changes.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia, was deposed as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, a position he has held for two terms. Green made Rauch a vice chairman while giving the top position to Duncan. The move was not unexpected since Rauch had backed former House Speaker Carl Stewart against Green in the Democratic primary last year.

The Finance Committee is one of the most powerful in the Senate because any tax measure must pass through it, which includes any gasoline tax increase this session.

Meanwhile, Ramsey named Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Statesville, to head the House panel on congressional reapportionment, which will work jointly with the Senate committee to redraw the state's 11 congressional districts in line with the 1980 census.

Sen. William Mills, D-Maysville, and Rep. Roger Bone, D-Rocky Mount, were appointed chairmen of the Banks and Thrift Institution committees in their respective chambers. Bone replaces Rep. Charles Holt, D-Fayetteville, who will be chairman of the Economy Committee.

Other appointments in the House included Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Burlington, to head the Constitutional Amendments Committee. In the Senate, Mrs. Holt's counterpart will be Sen. James Clarke, D-Fairview.

King

The House approved a resolution honoring Martin Luther King Jr. on the anniversary of his birth.

Firemen

The Senate approved a bill allowing both paid and volunteer firemen to drive a fire truck with a normal driver's license. They currently must have a chauffeur's license.

Insurance

Rep. Richard Barnes, D-Winston-Salem, introduced a bill that would eliminate surcharges on automobile liability insurance rates — above the 6 percent annual legal limit on increases — for safe drivers.

ABC

A bill was filed in the House that would rewrite parts of the Alcoholic Beverage Control law. Its bigest changes would be a transfer of control of alcohol law enforcement officers from the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety to the ABC Board.

The bill also would make it a misdemeanor for a person to try to use a fake driver's license or someone else's license to try to buy alcohol. If convicted, that person's license could be revoked for up to six months.

CONSISTORY NOTICE

The Roanoke Consistory No. 248 meeting scheduled for Saturday night has been postponed. The meeting will be held Saturday, Jan. 24, at 8 p.m. at Coronation Masonic Hall, Williamston. All princes and peers are urged to be present.

Angry Borg Tops Foe

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine Bjorn Borg standing quietly near the umpire's chair, so upset over a decision that he takes two penalty points against his fiercest rival before resuming play and ultimately winning.

Mr. Iceman of Tennis, unflappable, expressionless Bjorn Borg upset? How could this happen?

Borg had won the first set in the second-round match at the $400,000 Volvo Grand Prix Masters tennis championships Thursday night against archrival John McEnroe, who then battled the Swede evenly in the second set. The score was 3-3 in the tiebreaker when Borg hit a forehand to the baseline that was ruled "good" by the linesman.

But umpire Mike Lugg of England overruled the call and awarded McEnroe the point and a 4-3 lead.

"I'm 100 percent sure the ball was good," said Borg. "The linesman said it was good and the umpire said it was out. I asked him if he was sure and if he would ask the linesman, but he said 'No, it's my decision and please play.'"

Borg, the world's top-ranked player, refused to return to the court and after a warning, Lugg ordered two penalty points against the Swede in quick succession, giving McEnroe a 6-3 tiebreaker lead.

Borg said he was so "disappointed and mad" about losing a point he was sure he deserved that "I didn't think so much about the penalty points as much as the point that was taken away from me."

After the penalty, McEnroe won the last point of the tiebreaker to force a third set before Borg won the match 6-4, 6-7, 7-6 and clinched a berth in Saturday's semifinals along with Gene Mayer, Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl.

It was the first meeting of 1981 for Borg and McEnroe, who split two five-set struggles last year at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

But neither of those classics had the controversy of Thursday night's match, which Borg said he started because "there's no way the umpire can see the base line better than the linesman."

McEnroe, who was eliminated from semifinal contention because he also lost to Mayer on Wednesday, said he thought Borg's ball was out, but he was astonished at Borg's action.

"When he was getting the penalty points, I couldn't believe it was happening, especially with a guy like Bjorn," said McEnroe, the top seed and world's No.2 player. "I didn't want to take the points — it ruined the tennis for me. You can't just give up points in a tiebreaker like that. I wanted to win the match fair and square. I wish they had left it 4-3 instead of 6-3."

Known for his volatile personality and temper on the court, McEnroe said it would have been different if it had been him arguing instead of Borg.

"People would have booed me off the court if I pulled something like that," he said. "When I look at an official, I get accused of intimidating him. When Bjorn does, they think he's saying hello."

The two held serve throughout the first 12 games of the third set, in which Borg twice more approached Lugg's chair to question calls, forcing another tiebreaker and whipping the sellout crowd of 19,103 into a frenzy.

Borg jumped in front when McEnroe slammed a forehand long. McEnroe knotted the score 1-1, then Borg reeled off six of the next seven points to win the game, set and match.

Mayer, changing speeds and using his drop shot to perfection, beat Argentina's Jose-Luis Clerc 6-3, 7-5 Thursday night and was to meet Borg today in the final round of round-robin play.

Since all four semifinal berths have been clinched, today's and tonight's matches will only determine Saturday's pairings. Connors and Lendl meet tonight in another preliminary look at the semifinalists.

Connors blasted Harold Solomon 6-2, 6-4 and Lendl defeated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 7-5, 6-4 in Thursday's other matches.

Borg, Connors, Mayer and Lendl all are 2-0 in round-robin play.

Different Opinions

Bjorn Borg, the Swedish iceberg, blows his cool and get assessed two penalty points by umpire Mike Lugg, sitting in the chair, at the $400,000 Volvo Masters Tennis Tournament in New York's Madison Square Garden Thursday night. Borg protested when Lugg overruled the linesman's call in his match with John McEnroe, and was assessed the penalty points when he refused to play. Borg still won in three sets. (AP Laserphoto)

Lady Pirates Return Home, Host Indians

East Carolina University's women, who haven't seen the inside of Minges Coliseum for a long, long time, finally return home for a meeting with William & Mary Saturday night. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m.

It's the first of a three-game set before the Lady Pirates take to the road again. They host Duke on Monday and West Virginia on Wednesday, and Coach Cathy Andruzzi expects all three games to be tough ones.

The last time the Lady Pirates played in Minges was back on December 8 when they topped Campbell University, 75-66. In the month since then, East Carolina has posted a third-place finish in the Carolina Christmas Classic and a second-place finish in the Queens Holiday Invitational. They currently hold a 10-3 record and are coming off three straight wins, including an 87-75 victory over North Carolina in Chapel Hill on Tuesday night.

"We're excited about being home," Andruzzi said. "We're glad it's on Saturday night so everybody can get out and see us."

While William & Mary is a Division II school, they have a tough team, Andruzzi notes, and gave the Lady Pirates problems last year. The Lady Pirates also have to guard against looking past William & Mary toward Duke — their first NCAIAW encounter that counts in the standings.

"William & Mary has a good club," Andruzzi said. "And our girls have got to realize that everyone who comes in here against us is going to be out to beat us. They are well-coached and they've given us a hard time in the past, so if we slip up they'll come back at us."

However, Andruzzi is hopeful that her girls will be watching the Indians and not looking ahead. "We can't afford to look past anyone."

William & Mary has only a 3-8 record as compared to East Carolina 10-3 mark, but the Lady Indians romped over Virginia Wesleyan, 71-47, in their last outing.

Recently, they have been helped along by the scoring of 5-8 guard Lynn Norenburg, who has just rejoined the team after missing the pre-holiday schedule with a shoulder injury. In her three games, she's averaged 23.0 points a game. She is the only Indian starter in double figures.

Other starters are expected to be Karen Johnson, a 5-5 junior guard averaging 3.1 points; junior forward Janet McGee, 5-11, hitting 9.5; and freshman forward Sandy DeSilvio, 5-9, hitting 5.6 per game. At center will be either Elizabeth Strock, a 6-0 junior, hitting 3.5, or Kris Huntley, a 5-11 senior, averaging 8.0.

East Carolina is led by Kathy Riley, scoring close to 20 points a game, and Sam Jones, hitting just under 14.

The Lady Pirates have recently added two more players to their roster, Darlene Hedges, a 6-2 center, who has not seen action as yet, and guard Leslie Bunn, who opened the season as a manager but became a full member of the team during the Florida swing. "We're going to start getting Darlene into the games," Andruzzi said.

On Monday, Duke will offer another challenge — one of more importance. "They beat us last year in our first NCAIAW game, so it's important to us to win this year and get away to a good start." That poor start hampered the Lady Pirates last year, as it took away a lot of their momentum and caused a mid-ranked finish in the state standings.

"They have good guards, play good defense and run a good offense against both man and the zone," Andruzzi said. "They are a young, but heady team. They had a good recruiting year."

Duke is off to a 1-1 league start and a 6-7 overall mark. They are led by 5-10 senior forward Barb Krause, averaging 14.3 points and 10.0 rebounds, but they have three others in double figures also. They are 5-7 sophomore guard Marge Walsh, 13.2; 6-1 freshman center Stacy Hurd, 12.1 and 7.3 rebounds; and 5-6 sophomore Claire Rose, hitting 12.0. The other starter is 5-7 junior Kim Matthews, scoring 6.8.

And right behind Duke comes West Virginia. While they have posted a 7-10 record, the Lady Mountaineers rate as another strong opponent. Top scorers for them are 5-7 sophomore guard Cathy Parsons, hitting 22.2 points a game, and 5-8 senior guard J.D. Drummonds, averaging 21.3.

"It's great to be home," Andruzzi said. "I just hope home is good to us."

Potter Decision Seems Correct

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Barbara Potter passed up acceptance to Princeton University to play professional tennis, and off her most recent performances that decision would be hard to question.

The latest came Thursday night when the unseeded 19-year-old upset No. 3 seed Wendy Turnbull 7-6, (7-2), 6-0, to advance to the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Avon Women's Tennis Championships of Kansas City.

Potter, a Woodbury, Conn., native, and the 28-year-old Turnbull fought for each point going into the first set tie breaker, and Potter knew the importance of her opening serve in the 12-point game.

"I felt the key was the first serve of the tie-breaker. I wanted to set a tone and I think I did," she said.

In the second set, Potter seemed to improve. "I felt like my return just got a little steadier and a little more penetrating. It seemed to fall a little more into place the second set."

In the last 15 tournaments, Potter has advanced to three quarter finals and three semifinals, losing only one first-round match. She is ranked 25th in the world among women professional tennis players, while Turnbull is ranked eighth.

"I'm rounding my game out," Potter added. "I think I've developed my weaknesses into strengths. I think I'm moving well and serving well."

In other quarterfinal matches Thursday, No. 1 seed Martina Navratilova beat Serry Acker 6-4, 6-2; second seeded Andrea Jaeger defeated Joanne Russell 6-1, 6-1, and Kate Latham beat Pam Teeguarden 6-4, 6-4.

Today's contests will include three singles quarter-final matches and two doubles quarter-final matches. Semifinals will be held Saturday and finals Sunday.

Earlier Thursday, No. 4 seed Virginia Ruzici of Romania advanced to the semifinals with a 6-4, 6-3 win over seventh-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia.

Correction

The swim meet between East Carolina's women's team and William & Mary is in Williamsburg, not Greenville, as reported yesterday in a release from ECU's sports information department. The meet will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Big Reason For Success

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Indiana State-Evansville is ranked No.5 in the NCAA Division II, and a big, big reason for the Eagles' prominence is 7-foot-6½ John Hollinden, the tallest college basketball player in the nation.

Hollinden leads the Eagles in scoring at just under 17 points a game and in rebounding at nearly 10 boards a game, and he has blocked an amazing 120 shots — nearly nine per contest.

"We're getting the right blend," says ISUE Coach Wayne Boultinghouse, whose Eagles take a 12-2 record against St. Joseph's, Ind., on Saturday.

"The forwards are consistent on both ends, both the starters and guys coming off the bench. Big John is the focal point of our defense, and the guards are playing well," said Boultinghouse, in his seventh year at ISUE.

Hollinden, who led the nation with 165 blocked shots last year, explains his defensive ability:

"When you get a smaller guy coming in, he's gonna have to leave his feet and put some kind of move on me. Most of the time, I can take one good quick step and know where the ball is going to go up.

"After having people do it to me every day in practice, every summer on the playground and in every game, I know where the ball can go from where the guy is in relationship to the basket."

Boultinghouse said he was "as delighted as I can possibly be" with the No.5 ranking, highest in the school's history. "But I'll be even more delighted if we're rated No.1 in March when the tournament is over."

Three Hole Burst Puts Lietzke In Hope Lead

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A beaming Bruce Lietzke was considering the way he'd played the 11th through 13th holes at La Quinta.

"Flawlessly, I guess you'd say," Lietzke said.

"I played those eight shots probably as well as I could ever hit them."

He played that three-hole stretch Thursday eagle-birdie-eagle, a 3-2-3 burst that ripped five shots off par and propelled him to sole control of the second round lead in the $304,500 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

The big scoring burst allowed him to play the back nine in 30, finishing off a 6-under-par 66 and providing him with a two-round total of 131, 13 strokes under par in this, the longest tournament on the PGA Tour.

It was two shots back to Jerry Pate at 133. Pate, a frustrated non-winner for two years, shot a 67 at La Quinta and had a 133 total.

Jack Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles and the dominant factor in the game for two decades, shot a 67 in the warm sunshine at tough Tamarisk and was another two strokes back at 135.

He was tied with Bill Rogers and Dave Edwards. Rogers had the best round Thursday, a 65 at Indian Wells, and Edwards shot a 68 at La Quinta.

With three rounds to go in the five-day, 90-hole event, the group at 136 included Lee Trevino, Doug Sanders, Ray Floyd, Lee Elder, J.C. Snead, Ben Crenshaw, George Burns, Jay Haas and Mark Lye.

Haas had a 68, Sanders, Trevino and Elder 69 and Floyd 70 at Tamarisk, where former President Gerald Ford and most of the show business celebrities competed in the pro-am section of the unique event. Burns shot 68 and Lye 69 at La Quinta. Snead had a 70 at Indian Wells and Crenshaw 68 at Bermuda Dunes.

The format calls for the pros to play one round on each of the four courses, each day with a different three-man team of amateurs, before the field is cut for the pros-only final round at Bermuda Dunes Sunday.

Nicklaus, making his first start of the season, has probably the two toughest behind him. He's played La Quinta and Tamarisk, was at Indian Wells today and finishes up with 36 holes at Bermuda Dunes.

Gibson Lone Choice For Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — The fiery spirit that drove Bob Gibson through 17 overpowering seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals still burns inside the pitcher who today is the newest member of the baseball Hall of Fame.

"I was good," Gibson said. "That was the attitude I had."

The numbers stand as mute testimony to that declaration. The man won 251 games, had a career 2.91 earned run average and 3,117 strikeouts. In 1968, he won 22 games and posted a remarkable 1.12 earned run average, completing one of the most dominating seasons any pitcher ever enjoyed.

He set another record with seven straight World Series victories and had a 1.89 Series ERA. He is the only pitcher in history to have won seventh games of Series twice, nailing down world championships for the Cardinals in 1964 and 1967.

Gibson was one of the fiercest competitors of his era, a flame throwing right-hander who challenged hitters and won more of the confrontations than he lost. He had a gruff image that he did little to change.

"All of the writers thought I was tough and so did the players," Gibson said. "That's the way I was. I grew up fighting a lot of things."

Gibson overcame the obstacles of poverty and prejudice to become one of the premier pitchers of his time. "I was among the best," he said. "I should be among the best."

He is there today, honored as the only candidate to win the 75 percent vote required for election. With 401 votes cast by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, 301 were needed to gain election. Gibson was named on 337 ballots. No other candidate was close, with runnerup Don Drysdale getting 243 — 58 short, and Gil Hodges finishing third at 241 — 60 away.

The only other candidates to receive more than 200 votes were slugger Harmon Killebrew, who finished fourth with 239, relief ace Hoyt Wilhelm, who had 238, and pitcher Juan Marichal, who polled 233.

Killebrew, fifth on the all-time home run list with 573, and Marichal, whose career figures were comparable to Gibson's, were also first-year candidates.

Gibson was surprised that Marichal did not come closer to election.

"I don't think I was 100 votes better than him," he said. "When I came up, he was the best pitcher in baseball. I could throw harder, but he had such a variety of pitches and control."

Gibson depended on his fastball to get batters out. When it was suggested he had thrown a high, hard one, he laughed.

"It may have looked like a high hard one in the stands, but when I was winning, it was a low, hard one. If I threw a high, hard one, it wound up in the stands. I pitched from the waist down. That was high for me."

Gibson, 45, was born in Omaha, Neb. and attended Creighton University where he was the first black to play baseball and basketball for the school. He spent a year with the Harlem Globetrotters and signed with the Cardinals in 1957. By 1959, he was a major league prospect.

"They told me I would open the season in Los Angeles and I didn't," he recalled. "Then they told me I'd open in San Francisco and I didn't. Then they told me I'd open when we got home to St. Louis. When we got there, they sent me to Omaha."

Gibson was back before the season was over and, except for a six-game stretch with Rochester the next year, he remained a Cardinal until 1975. At his peak, he was one of the most dominant pitchers in baseball.

He will be inducted at Cooperstown Aug. 2 and, except for the five original members, becomes only the 11th man elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility. The others were Al Kaline, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Bob Feller, Jackie Robinson, Sandy Koufax, Ernie Banks, Willie Mays, Warren Spahn and Mickey Mantle.

After five years away from baseball, Gibson will return next season as assistant pitching coach for the New York Mets, working for his old teammate, Joe Torre. The Mets hope some of Gibson's fierce competitive spirit will run off on their young hurlers.

"If I had to coach me, I'd be in bad shape," he said. "I figured I knew enough about it."

Will Gibson help the Mets?

"I have the knowledge and the attitude," he said. "I'll make that available. But remember, I'm just the assistant. I'm not responsible. I don't have to take the blame."

East Carolina's Lady Pirates bring a 10-3 record into a three-game home stand which starts Saturday night in Minges Coliseum. They will be hosting William & Mary in a 7:30 p.m. game. That is followed by a game with Duke on Monday and West Virginia comes in on Wednesday.

While the 10-3 record is a good one, Coach Cathy Andruzzi and her players realize that it could be better. One game, for sure, should have been won. That was a 74-67 loss at the hands of Florida in the first game following the holiday break.

"Florida played well and we were flat," Andruzzi said. "We probably should have won that game, though."

Another game that also might possibly have gone on the other side of the ledger was a 58-52 loss to Virginia in the finals of the Queens Holiday Tournament. "Virginia played a great game too. I guess I can't complain that much about this one, but the Florida loss shouldn't have been."

The loss to Virginia may have been a critical one as far as breaking into the national rankings is concerned. Several coaches who vote on the national panel were in attendance at the game, and a victory over the Lady Cavaliers, combined with a possible 12-1 mark might have brought the Pirates onto the poll.

Still, getting ranked is not a concern of Andruzzi.

"Oh, it would be nice," she said. "But I've got more important things on my mind.

"Any time a team gets ranked, it's a boost in prestige, both for the team and for the school. It's a help in getting into the regionals," the coach added.

"But not being ranked just means you have to work harder, give your best effort and win as many games as you can."

It has been said that the voters on the women's poll are probably not as well informed as those on the men's. Much of this is due to media exposure. Women's basketball still doesn't get the same nationwide exposure in the press. Scores from one area of the country are not run on the wire services for other areas to keep up with. For this reason, some feel, the voters tend to vote for the same teams week after week.

"There's a lot of politics involved," Andruzzi said. "I guess I could get on the telephone and call around and maybe we could get ranked. But I have a lot more to do than sit at the phone. I'm not going to put the energy into something like that. I just have to hope that the people on the committee will be wise enough to evaluate us properly."

Breaking into the national rankings wouldn't hurt the Pirates at all. It would be a boost for recruiting as well as stir up fan interest.

Still, as Andruzzi and other coaches always point out, the rankings are unimportant. It's the playoffs that count.

And there is a hard month and a half of basketball to play before those roll around.

N. Iowa Tops ECU

Northern Iowa brought a quick end to East Carolina University's wrestling win streak yesterday afternoon, topping the Pirates, 24-17.

The defeat dropped the Pirates to 1-3 in dual matches, while Northern Iowa climbs to 7-2.

East Carolina won four of the six weights, with Tony Mitchell (134), Gary Webb (142), James Ellison (177), and nationally ranked Butch Revils (190), taking the victories.

East Carolina's next dual meet competition will be on Saturday, January 24, when the Pirates host North Carolina.

Japan Bowl Is Sunday

TOKYO (AP) — Hoopla and moola will be made with typical Japanese energy when 65 U.S. college football stars and semi-stars knock heads in the sixth annual Japan Bowl on Sunday.

Never mind that most of the people who will cram the Yokohama Whales baseball stadium probably don't know a pass from a punt or Mark Herrmann from Woody Allen — "Ame-futo" (American football) has struck a chord among pageantry-loving Japanese, and enterprising businessmen have been quick to cash in on it.

Football was introduced in Japan 45 years ago but has always been kicked around by the nation's favorite sport, baseball. The 20,000 to 300,000 high school, college and company football players in the country are for the most part undersized, underskilled and ignored by sports fans.

Yet the annual Mirage Bowl, an NCAA regular season game which last month pitted UCLA against Oregon State, and the Japan Bowl fill stadiums with fans paying up to 6,000 yen ($30) to see American behemoths trampling each other.

Jr. High Results

FARMVILLE — Farmville Middle School swept of basketball games from Ayden Junior High School yesterday.

In the girls' game, Farmville gained a 39-20 victory. Rhoda Harris and Kim Smith each had ten points to lead Farmville, while Cynthia Hicks had eight to lead Ayden.

The Farmville boys took a 47-40 decision in their game. Toronto Moye and Ronnie Barnes led Farmville with 12 each. Leavy Thompson had 20 for Ayden.

GRIFTON — Grifton and Wellcome split a pair of junior high school games yesterday.

Grifton won the girls' game, 11-10. Belinda Dixon led Grifton with four, while Rhonda Wallace had three to lead Wellcome.

Wellcome won the boys' game, 26-23. Wellcome was led by Gentry Sneed with 10, while Terry Garrett led Grifton with 10.

In Hall Of Fame

Former St. Louis Cardinal pitcher Bob Gibson goes into his wind-up during a 1971 game in which he pitched a no-hitter against Pittsburgh. Gibson, five times a 20-game winner before retiring in 1975, was voted into the Hall of Fame Thursday by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Moncrief Sparks Bucks To Victory Over 76ers

By The Associated Press

Marques Johnson said it may have been the Milwaukee Bucks' most important victory of the season, and they achieved it because a likely superstar of the future had upstaged one of the present.

Johnson poured in 24 points, but it was Sidney Moncrief who ignited the Bucks by scoring all but four of his 22 points in the second half. Moncrief also shackled Philadelphia's brilliant Julius Erving in the closing minutes as the Bucks held on for a 113-110 victory.

The 76ers, with the best record in the National Basketball Association, had a six-game winning streak broken despite a milestone 28-point effort by Erving, who has 20,014 points in nine professional seasons.

In the only other NBA game Thursday night, Washington whipped Detroit 106-89

Erving, who received a standing ovation from the capacity crowd of 11,052 when his feat was announced, became the 13th player in pro basketball history to score 20,000 points. Wilt Chamberlain leads with 31,419.

Erving said he was happy to have surpassed 20,000 points, but would have preferred to do it at home and in a winning effort.

"I feel very fortunate to be one of the players with the talent and skills to accomplish that feat," he said. "But if we achieve what we can as a team, everybody will attain his own individual greatness.

"Tonight we didn't play well as a team," he said. "We gave Milwaukee too many easy baskets off the transition game and let them push the ball upcourt too quickly. Sidney Moncrief had a great game for them. He's a bona-fide star who could start for almost any other team."

The Bucks have won two of three games with the 76ers this season, and atoned for a 136-121 thrashing in the teams' last meeting here Nov. 9. The 136 points were the most allowed by the Bucks in a game this season.

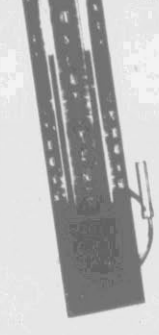

"It's great to beat Philly because they really took it to us and embarrassed us last time," Johnson said.

"I had a lot of people play absolutely sensational," Bucks' Coach Don Nelson said. "And I've got to single out Sidney Moncrief, which I don't normally do. He was so strong on both ends.

"I put him on a guy I wanted to shut down (Andrew Toney), and I finally put him on Doc (Erving) and got two steals out of it," Nelson said. "The great thing about Moncrief is he can have an off-night offensively, but you know he'll always be there at the end. Tonight he was there all the time."

Bullets 106, Pistons 89

Elvin Hayes scored 22 of his 28 points in the second half and Kevin Porter had 16 of 25 in the final two periods to pace the Bullets, who won despite the absence of four players, including starters Wes Unseld and Bob Dandridge. It was Detroit's seventh straight loss.

Michigan Slips Past Indiana In Tight 55-52 Overtime Contest

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Oh, brother, what a game!

"It's a shame somebody had to lose a game like this," said Michigan basketball Coach Bill Frieder after his ninth-ranked Wolverines defeated Indiana 55-52 in overtime Thursday night. "Both teams played extremely well."

It actually took a brother team for the Wolverines to do it.

Marty Bodnar sank two free throws and brother Mark added three more in the final seconds of overtime to give Michigan the victory.

"We had four straight overtime games last year and we lost three of them and we've already had two straight this year and we won them both," said Frieder, who replaced Johnny Orr this year as the Michigan coach. "In this respect it was a typical Big Ten game.

"They had the ball with a two-point lead near the end of the game and we didn't fold. Our kids played tough and steady, and we came out on top."

It was literally a game of inches, pointed out Indiana Coach Bobby Knight:

"We had the momentum early in the game but our execution fell off and we let them back into the game. Ray (Tolbert) missed two free throws and we missed a few other shots. That's eight possible points and if we could have got six of them we would have been in good shape."

In other college basketball action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 14 Iowa defeated Wisconsin 76-66; No. 15 Brigham Young beat New Mexico 92-87; 16th-ranked Utah turned back Texas-El Paso 69-64; 18th-rated Illinois stopped Purdue 87-65 and No. 20 Minnesota trimmed Michigan State 86-77.

The Hoosiers had taken a 48-46 lead when Phil Isenberger hit one of two free throws with two minutes remaining in regulation time, but Thad Garner connected on both ends of a one-and-one situation to tie the game for Michigan at 48 with 1:24 left to play.

Following an Indiana turnover, Mike McGee's shot at the buzzer fell short, sending the game into overtime. Indana scored first in the overtime period on an Isiah Thomas jumper, but McGee responded with a game-tying layup. The Bodnar brothers then sank their game-winning free throws.

Kenny Arnold's 16 points led a balanced attack as Iowa beat Wisconsin. The Hawkeyes pulled ahead to stay with about six minutes left in the first half when center Steve Krafcisin hit two free throws to make it 22-21. They took advantage of Wisconsin fouls to expand the lead to 41-30 at the half, and they led by 19 points, 68-49, with six minutes left in the game.

Danny Ainge and Fred Roberts combined for 49 points to offset a brilliant 44-point effort by New Mexico's Kenny Page as BYU downed the Lobos 92-87.

Tom Chambers scored eight key points early in the second half to break open a close game and lead Utah over Texas-El Paso. Chambers had 23 points for the night as the Utes improved their record to 14-1 overall and 4-0 in the Western Athletic Conference.

"Once a guy gets it going we're going to try to get the ball to him and let him shoot," said Utah Coach Jerry Pimm, referring to Chambers. "To get us going, to get us started, I thought he did a good job. But it was two completely different halves. In the first half our defense kept us in the game and in the second half our offense won it for us."

Eddie Johnson scored a game-high 26 points, 18 in the second half, to pace Illinois to an easy victory over Purdue.

"We have the quickest team in the Big Ten," said Johnson. "We couldn't run at Indiana (in a 78-61 loss over last weekend), but we prefer to. And we had to prove ourselves tonight."

Mark Hall scored 21 points and Gary Holmes had 18 to lead Minnesota past Michigan State. After leading just 39-36 at halftime, the Gophers outscored the Spartans 10-4 in the first two minutes of the second half to go up 48-40, a lead they never relinquished.

Elsewhere in college basketball, Clark Kellogg scored a career-high 42 points and collected 14 rebounds to lead Ohio State past Northwestern 81-69; Marquette stopped Creighton 76-66 behind Oliver Lee's 24 points and LaTodd Johnson's 18 points paced St. Louis University past Dayton 78-66.

Erving, Jabbar Pace All-Stars

CLEVELAND (AP) — Perennial All-Star forward Julius Erving will lead the East squad against Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's West team in the National Basketball Association All-Star Game at the Coliseum in Richfield on Feb. 1.

Erving, a starter in the contest annually since coming to the NBA from the defunct American Basketball Association five years ago, was the top vote-getter in fan balloting for the 1981 team, the league announced Thursday.

The Philadelphia forward, named the Most Valuable Player in the 1977 All-Star Game, received mention on 304,600 of approximately 2 million votes cast, according to Ed Falk, NBA director of communications.

Jabbar, the Los Angeles center who has won the league's MVP award a record six times, was second in the overall balloting and first in the West with 265,200 votes.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — God knows Larry Hagman has a more felicitous and loving family life than his alter ego, the beleaguered and belligerent J.R. Ewing of the "Dallas" series.

At least none of his family has taken a shot at Larry — yet.

And should any of his kin decide to use actor Hagman for the backing, it would be his daughter, Heidi, who absolutely adores her father. The affection is mutual.

Thanks largely to papa, Heidi is following the family tradition straight into greasepaint. Her grandmother, to be sure, is Mary Martin, making Heidi a third generation performer.

Nepotism is an acceptable and common practice in Hollywood, as it is elsewhere. Therefore, it came as no surprise when Heidi landed a small role in an episode of "Dallas," requiring her as a restaurant cashier to exchange a few lines of dialogue with her old man.

It was sufficient to earn Heidi a Screen Actors Guild card, no easy item to come by for tyro actors with little experience and no strings to pull.

But Heidi's performance failed to bowl over any producers or directors to any noticeable degree. Nor did she find agents beating on her door.

As it has turned out, Heidi didn't need an agent.

As a member of the Hagman family, Heidi grew up as a child in New York City where her father scratched out a perilous living in the theater and TV. A friend of his named Carroll O'Connor was struggling, too.

"I've known Carroll since I was six months old," Heidi said the other day. "And he came to my 21st birthday party last year to help us celebrate.

"Carroll took me to one side and whispered in my ear, 'Polish up on your Bronx accent because there's going to be a part coming up in 'Archie Bunker's Place' that calls for a New York girl.'

"I was absolutely thrilled. But weeks went by and I didn't hear another word from Carroll. I got worried and kept calling the network about when they were going to cast the new character.

"I didn't want to take advantage of our friendship by bothering Carroll."

Heidi, a blonde who only faintly resembles her famous father, flew to New York to tune in on local accents.

On her way to Manhattan from the airport she told a cab driver, with a rich Bronx patois, of her mission. The cabbie shut off the meter and drove around for a couple of hours talking his head off.

"By the time I got out of that cab I didn't need any more instruction on Bronxese," Heidi said, falling into an ear-searing New York accent.

"Six months after Carroll told me about the part I finally was called by CBS to come in for an interview. The second time I was called in I read with Carroll, using my accent all the way, and I was hired.

"Now I play one of Archie's waitresses, Linda, who also babysits sometimes for Stephanie (Danielle Brisebois) in the series. It's a recurring role and the best kind of experience and exposure for me.

"Sure, there was a degree of nepotism involved. But I believe in that. Why not? Second and third generation performers are common these days in Hollywood. And most of them got some kind of start through their families."

Heidi, despite the nepotism, doesn't want anyone to think she is a dilettante when it comes to acting.

She left home almost five years ago to study pre-med at a San Francisco university. But she spent her first vacation in summer stock and she forgot about everything but acting. Heidi entered San Francisco's American Conservatory Theater and has been pursuing a theatrical career ever since.

"People really don't associate me with my father at first," she said. "Eventually, they get around to asking if we're related.

"It's not an easy thing professionally to be the daughter of Larry Hagman and the granddaughter of Mary Martin. They set very high standards and I won't be content with anything less.

"Dad is old-fashioned. At first he wanted me to get married, have children and be happy. Then he saw me on stage in 'The Sound of Music' and told me he thought I had talent and should go ahead with an acting career.

"My grandmother and Dad are quite critical of my work and make honest comments on my performances.

"I've seen enough of what acting life is like and I'm not intimidated by it. When Dad worked in New York or Hollywood, we all went along. We've crossed the country in an automobile together 14 times.

"This thing about who shot J.R. Ewing has been a lot of fun. It's meant a lot of publicity for the family which we weren't used to. But it has been wonderful for Dad, and it's been good for me, too.

"Now I have to prove myself on my own — and I've even got an agent."

A Laugh Track Really Needed

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Plot for a television series:

A liberated widow moves to a small town, where she wiggles and giggles her way into the emnity of the town's stuffy dowager. They cause one another problems, the divorcee usually triumphs.

Sold.

And so, another TV series crawls out of that miasmic stew where lifeless characters and dimwit situations simmer until they take form on your screen. No wit, no point of view, just an actress who is pleasant and pleasant to look at. But very, very little more.

"Harper Valley PTA," beginning tonight on NBC, is "Dukes of Hazzard" with Barbara Eden's body instead of car chases. It's what's passed off as "fun television," which is to say, the network guys know there's nothing there, but people watch anyway, so why not?

And NBC can be reasonably sure people will watch. The TV-movie versions of "Harper Valley" was NBC's top-rated entertainment show as a repeat two weeks ago.

In tonight's premiere, Stella Johnson (Miss Eden) rushes out of her house in a pair of oh-so-naughty babydolls to get the paper, but she locks herself out. The town drunk, who also happens to be the mayor (George Gobel), happens by and gives Stella a boost through the window. Get the picture?

The good folk of Harper Valley do. Someone takes a snapshot of the suggestive scene, and Stella has troubles aplenty.

Her antagonist, Anne Francine, offers the photograph to the members of the PTA as evidence that Stella Johnson is "throwing herself at every available man in town — she is parading around practically N-A-K-E-D (spelling the wicked word)." And, "Once again, Stella Johnson is lowering standards and raising temperatures."

The laugh-track goes goofy.

Y E E O Y H O M Y H O A Y H M S H S Y A H M S

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — ONE PLUSH PEASANT SUPS ON LUSH PHEASANT.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Nightmare Of A Sinking Ship Return A Year After Mishap

RONDAL LITTERELL still has nightmares of the day his sinking ship almost sucked him beneath the murky waters of Tampa Bay. (AP Laserphoto)

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Sometimes, in the quiet of a night, the nightmares return and Ron Litterell relives another night, a moonlit evening almost a year ago when his sinking ship almost sucked him beneath the murky waters of Tampa Bay.

He recalls the sickening crash as an oil tanker's anchor gouged a great hole in the side of the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn. He remembers the ship shuddering, then tilting as it rolled over and sank, so fast that most of the crew never had a chance to get to the life rafts.

The 31-year-old chief machinery technician was lucky. Along with 27 crewmates, he survived the worst peacetime disaster in the 190-year history of the U.S. Coast Guard. But it's the memory of the 23 men who died last Jan. 28 that haunts Litterell.

On Tuesday, a Coast Guard Marine Board of Inquiry issued a ruling that said both the SS Capricorn and the aging buoy tender were at fault for the collision, having failed to exchange proper whistle signals and each straying too close to the center of the channel.

Litterell was resting on his bunk deep inside the aging Blackthorn at 8:21 EST when it was rammed, almost head-on, in the Tampa Bay smipping channel by the 605-foot oil tanker. The Blackthorn — on its way home to Galveston, Texas, after undergoing repairs — flipped over when the Capricorn's anchor hooked its side. It sank within minutes.

Litterell remembers scrambling above decks and leaping overboard into an oil slick that burned his eyes and skin, then helping other crewmates before scrambling to safety aboard a rescue boat.

After recovering from his physical injuries, Litterell was examined by the Coast Guard and ruled ineligible for sea duty, largely due to his uncertain mental state. He will be re-examined in two years. "At that time, hopefully, everything will be OK," he said.

In a telephone interview from his Texas City, Texas, home, Litterell said he had just made a "long, hard decision" and extended his enlistment for two more years.

"It has been an up and down year, the Coast Guard trying to decide what I could do. You see, I couldn't reenlist (for a four-to six-year stretch) because of physical reasons. Though I'm getting better physically, I think it's better that I don't go back to sea right now," he said.

"To be in the position of a chief right now, I could probably go on a ship. But if an emergency would occur, could I compose myself from the memories I would have? I don't think it would be fair to the men looking to me for leadership to be wondering if I could compose myself.

"There's still a part of me that asks: 'Are you OK? What's going to happen to me in a similar situation?' Until I come to grips with that, I can't put others into that kind of situation," he said.

Litterell, who is awaiting assignment to active land duty, said he still longs to return to the sea.

"Part of me, being a family man ... naturally I don't like to serve away," he said. "But I think you tend to be more comfortable at sea. You feel a closeness to your shipmates. There is a closeness in sea duty that you don't develop ashore.

"My hopes are that I will be able to handle the situation and the problems and that I'll be able to go back," Litterell said.

Since the accident, many of the enlisted men who survived have left the Coast Guard, Litterell said.

"Most of the ones I've kept in touch with have gotten out or are getting out," Litterell said. "This has affected different people in different ways."

Before the accident, Litterell said, he had planned to make the Coast Guard his career. Now he is not so sure how long he will wear the Coast Guard blue.

"As far as myself, as long as I remain in the Coast Guard, I can see the accident having an influence on me as far as my whole attitude towards a lot of things.

"It was beneficial in a lot of ways — I now have an understanding of the importance of a lot of things I didn't have before it happened." He mentioned having a greater appreciation of life and feeling more able to cope with emergencies.

Litterell doesn't know what will happen at the end of his two-year extension. But he knows he can never forget the terror of that night on Tampa Bay.

"I think," he said sadly, "that it will be with me as long as I'm in the Coast Guard. It will probably be with me my whole life."

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

To a prestidigitator, it is necessary for the hand to be faster than the eye. Bridge players receive no bonus for speed. On the contrary, fast play can cost if you fail to consider all possible developments.

South's hand was not quite strong enough for an opening bid of one no trump. Even though the five-card suit and two tens make the hand worth more than its 15 points in face cards, the weak spade doubleton is a serious flaw. However, once North could make an invitational raise after first responding in South's weak suit, South was delighted to contract for game.

West led his fourth-best heart, and dummy had hardly hit the table before South called for the ten of hearts from the board and played low from his hand. A diamond to the ten lost to the queen and West made the excellent shift to a spade. Declarer won in dummy and a diamond to the king forced the ace. West persevered with spades and declarer suddenly realized that he was in dummy for the last time. He cashed the remaining spade honor but that left him with only eight tricks and no way to develop a ninth. The high diamond withered in dummy.

Had South bothered to count his tricks before playing to the first trick, he might have realized that he could lose two tricks in diamonds and still come to nine if he did not mess up his entries. The diamond finesse was unnecessary; what was important were entries to the table.

Therefore, declarer should win the first trick in his hand and lead the king of diamonds. West can take the ace and attack dummy's entries by leading a spade but that will now prove futile. Declarer wins in dummy and knocks out the remaining diamond stopper. West continues with a spade and dummy wins once more.

Now, a diamond to the ten frees the nine of diamonds for the game-going trick. The queen of hearts, carefully preserved as an entry from the start, is the means of getting back to dummy to cash the high spade and diamond.

The Rev. Allandus Wright from Rocksburg will render the service at Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. The church invites the public to attend.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JAN. 17, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day could bring arguments unless you are careful and avoid them. Look over your surroundings and plan to make improvements. Make this a worthwhile day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Keeping busy at regular routines is your best bet today. Make sure you don't lose your temper with anyone.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study your financial position and then make plans to improve it. Plan how to gain your most cherished aims.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Show more devotion to family members and establish more harmony at home. Avoid one who gossips too much.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good day for handling communications. Use particular care in motion and avoid possible accident.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Discuss your views with close ties and gain more mutual understanding. Make long-range plans for the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to use patience and be tactful if you want to gain a particular goal. Avoid tendency to spend too much money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Have a private talk with a family member and get good results. Take no risks with your health at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more thoughtful of friends and allies and you gain their full cooperation. Don't neglect routine chores.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Support family members who need your assistance at this time. Be sure to keep promises made to others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) New situations arise that are fine for you, but handle them wisely and don't appear too excited over them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to get all your bills paid up so that you can get ahead faster. Reconcile any differences with loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use that talent you have and make a fine impression on others. Handle duties more efficiently and they become easier.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those reasonable young persons who can organize a plan and then carry through with it to the minutest detail. One who needs religious training and the benefit of healthy sports.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Rules Law Doesn't Protect The Aged

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A 74-year-old state employee can be forced to resign because the U.S. Constitution doesn't give job protection to the elderly, a judge has ruled.

In an order released Thursday, U.S. District Judge Truman Hobbs dismissed a class-action suit filed by Eulene Hawkins on behalf of all state employees forced to resign because they are age 70 or older.

State regulations permit a person over 70 to retain a state job if the person presents evidence of good health to the state Personnel Board for approval.

Mrs. Hawkins, who worked for the Department of Pensions and Security, was granted two employment extensions after her 70th birthday, but she was denied a third on Sept. 30, 1979. Her suit says she was forced to resign after Gov. Fob James issued a memo saying that department heads were not to request a waiver of mandatory retirement without the state finance director's approval.

Mrs. Hawkins said the governor's letter infringed upon her constitutional rights, but Hobbs said the governor's order was "rationally related to the state's interest in efficiency and economy.

"The world has been blessed by the service of many over the age of 70 who have made magnificent contributions, but this court cannot deny that physical and mental vigor frequently decline in persons over the age of 70," Hobbs said.

The Constitution and federal law do not secure the right to employment by the state, the judge said.

Economic and psychological hardships placed on the elderly by mandatory retirement may require an altered view, Hobbs said, "but this is the type of decision with competing social interests and objectives that should be resolved by legislatures."

Living With Proposition 13 Is Not All That Easy

GOVERNOR'S BUDGET — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. discusses allocations and cuts of his proposed $24.6 billion budget at a special press briefing. In the wake of Proposition 13, Brown said "We are now embarking on a pioneering effort of no growth in government." (AP Laserphoto)

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Almost three years after Californians cut their property taxes in half with Proposition 13, neither the promise of a taxpayers' heaven nor the predictions of shuttered schools and bankrupt city halls has come true.

Californians have indeed saved on taxes — $20 billion since 1978 — but government spending is still growing, the annual $5 billion budget surplus has vanished and the pinch on local agencies is just beginning to be felt.

Proposition 13, a June 1978 ballot initiative which sparked similar measures across the nation, slashed property taxes for California homeowners and businesses an average 57 percent.

A typical homeowner's annual property taxes dropped from $900 to about $400, but the measure's property tax ceiling of 1 percent of market value cut local revenues for cities, counties and schools by $7 billion annually.

The state has eased the immediate impact with $5 billion a year from a treasury swollen with inflation-fed income and sales tax revenues. Skyrocketing property values, prompting greater than anticipated revenue increases under the new limits, have softened the long-term impact of the tax ceiling.

Howard Jarvis, the crusty 77-year-old tax critic who co-authored Proposition 13, says he is disgusted with the way the state has eased the pinch on local governments.

Complaining that Proposition 13 "hasn't done a damn thing" to cut spending because of the surplus, he spearheaded another voter initiative last year to cut the state income tax in half.

Voters rejected the measure as too drastic, but Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. seized on the tax revolt and backed a series of cuts in the state income and business inventory taxes. He also supported new or bigger tax credits for the elderly and for energy conservation and solar energy conversion projects.

Brown claims those additional tax cuts have pared the total tax bill of Californians another $20 billion beyond that saved since 1978. Independent analysts dispute that figure, but it is clearly in excess of $10 billion.

A few cuts in services — shorter library hours, curtailed summer school programs, reduced bus schedules and the like — have been imposed because of Proposition 13 and the other tax cuts.

But instead of forcing cuts in state or local government spending, Proposition 13 has only slowed the rate of increase.

During the 1970s, local government spending increased an average of 10.5 percent a year. In the first year under Proposition 13, local budgets went up an average of just 1.1 percent, but annual increases since have been 13.3 percent, 11.7 percent and, in the coming year, a projected 5.6 percent.

Most government economists say the full impact of Proposition 13 hasn't been felt yet because of the state's budget surplus, which runs out in June, and because of the rapid turnover of real estate in California's mobile society.

To guarantee property taxes stay low, Proposition 13 cut taxes in galf then limited increases in assessed valuation to 2 percent annually, so long as the property is not sold.

But upon sale, a new tax rate is set based on the sale price. Since the average California home is re-sold every 5 to 5½ years, property tax revenues have been increasing by nearly 13 percent annually.

But the state surplus is now exhausted. It had ballooned to more than $5 billion three years ago as California's computer, aerospace and agricultural industries enjoyed boom times.

In the three fiscal years since enactment of Proposition 13, the state has been spending $1.5 billion to $2 billion a year more than it has been taking in, to help bail out local governments.

Local schools, for example, got 50 percent of their funds from the state before Proposition 13. This school year, almost 80 percent of the $11.2 billion spent by California's 1,040 local school districts came from the state.

Now, even with state revenues still growing at a 10 to 12 percent annual rate, the end of the surplus has forced at least a one-time cut in the annual growth rate. State expenditures in the coming year are limited to an increase of an estimated 1.7 percent, rising from this fiscal year's $24.3 billion to Brown's proposed spending level of $24.6 billion for the year beginning July 1.

To do this, Brown has proposed that state aid to local governments — which accounts for 75 percent of all state spending — be cut by $258 million, about 1.4 percent of the $17.9 billion the state gave local governments this year.

At both the state and local levels, that pinch is being met by trying to trim program budgets, rather than laying off more workers or cutting programs back any further.

Facing an expected 11 percent inflation rate, Brown has proposed 4.75 percent increases in welfare grants and 5 percent increases in per-pupil state school aid. State employee salaries are yet to be negotiated in collective bargaining, but Brown has set aside enough funds for raises around 5 percent. And state employees appear ready to accept that.

"For the first time, the state isn't really crying wolf when it says there is a shortage of money," Chuck Valdes, president of the 100,000-member California State Employees Association said this week. "The money just isn't there. State workers will be hurt."

Lady Diana Was Guest

LONDON (AP) — The mystery of just what is going on between Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer has deepened further with reports that she made a quick visit to the royal family at their 20,000-acre country estate.

Sources in Buckingham Palace confirmed that Lady Diana, 19, arrived Wednesday at the Norfolk county estate, 100 miles northeast of London. But on Thursday, Prince Charles told waiting news photographers that she had left.

"What on earth are you all doing here day after day?" the prince asked the photographers. "I promise you there is no one here, so do go away. The queen would be so glad if you did."

Queen Elizabeth II has expressed irritation about the persistence of reporters and photographers trying to garner scraps of information about the love life of her 32-year-old son.

There has been growing speculation since fall that Lady Diana, a kindergarten teacher and daughter of an earl, would marry Prince Charles.

North Carolinians Join Marking King Birthday

By The Associated Press

North Carolinians joined those who remembered across the nation Thursday in observing what would have been the 52nd birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

The observance will continue tonight with a memorial banquet at Raleigh's Civic Center by an estimated 1,000 Baptists. C.C. Craig, executive secretary of the General Baptist State Convention, said the banquet was designed to keep alive the ideals expressed by King in his "I have a dream" speech.

King was killed in Memphis in 1968.

Observances Thursday ranged from small meetings to mass demonstrations in downtown Winston-Salem and Raleigh, from church sessions to the Legislature.

The state House approved by a 111-1 vote a resolution honoring King's memory. The sole opponent was Rep. Bradford Ligon, R-Rowan.

"During the days King was active, I thought some of his activities were unethical," Ligon said in explaining his vote. "(The changes King wanted) should have been brought through political channels."

A group of about 200 people met in downtown Winston-Salem, and turned their ceremony into a hand-clapping and emotional celebration when the program's organizers played tape recordings of King's most famous speeches, as well as a rock version of a birthday song by Stevie Wonder.

The Rev. Warner Durnell, pastor of the Dellabrook Presbyterian Church, described King in a speech as a warrior for justice, a fighter for freedom and a soldier in the battle for justice. He said King's dream would not be fulfilled as long as "poor people are held hostage by poverty, black and brown held hostage by racism.

In Raleigh more than 300 people crowded into the auditorium of the State Archives and History Building which included a recording of King's "I Have A Dream" speech.

At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, more than 200 people attended a midday vigil on the main campus.

"This nation was founded on the maxim of individual rights and equality for all mankind," said Mark Canady, president of UNC's Black Student Movement. "Doctor King gave his life for those ideals."

Observance Will Be Held

In recognition of World Religion Day, the Greenville Baha'i Community will have a unity observance at 7:30 Sunday, Jan. 18 at 1728 West Fifth St. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the Baha'i belief that all major world religions are basically the same and all people were created for the same purpose, worship of God, according to a group spokesperson. After readings and discussion refreshments will be served. For further information call 752-4483. The public is invited.

Pitt Board To Meet On Monday

The Board of County Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. in the Pitt County Office Building at 1717 West Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is a review of bids for fire equipment, a request by the Grifton Rescue Squad for a radio, consideration of the final plat of Section 2, Greenwood Forest Subdivision in Arthur Township, and a progress report on the county computer study.

Other items on the agenda include a slide presentation by Division Highway Engineer C. W. Snell on the Blue Ribbon Study Commission report at 10:15 a.m. and receiving bids for the rental of county-owned farm land and crop allotments at 2 p.m.

WHY YOU CAN FIND THE CLOTHES ON THE RIGHT FOR LESS THAN THE CLOTHES ON THE LEFT.

The merchandise on the left can be bought in Raleigh. The clothes cost $200.00, plus the gas money it takes to drive there and back. The merchandise on the right can be bought locally. The clothes still cost $200.00, but the money spent on transportation will be a lot less.

You'll find what you want nearby—and you can use that left over gas money for something extra.
