Families Phoned By 52 Former Hostages

By LARRY GERBER
Associated Press Writer

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The 52 former hostages, safe in American hands at last and enjoying their first taste of freedom in 14½ months, settled into a U.S. military hospital today and made their first telephone calls to families in the United States.

"First of all there was a very heavy run on the telephones," said State Department spokesman Jack Cannon.

The Americans, 50 men and two women checked into the hospital at dawn, after their dramatic release from Iranian captivity and a freedom flight to West Germany via Algeria.

Just after noon, some of the hostages appeared on the balconies of the hospital, bantering with hospital personnel in the bright sunlight. Orderlies tossed up a copy of the military newspaper Stars and Stripes to a group of four young men, who autographed the newspaper and threw it back down.

Two other men, wearing pajamas and bathrobes, hopped over the railings separating each room's balcony, and joined the other four. They waved when they noticed photographers about 200 yards away.

Elizabeth Ann Swift, who was a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and one of the two women in the group, also came out to enjoy the sparkling, crisp day and her new freedom.

Asked how much notice they received in Iran of their impending freedom, Cannon told reporters at a briefing that he thought "some individuals had little notice, as little as 15 to 20 minutes." Others, he said, had several days, but he did not elaborate.

Cannon said he knew of no former captive who was suffering immediate medical problems. He said the returnees were free to leave the hospital if they wish, but they were advised that previous returnees found an orientation period in seclusion valuable.

He said the former hostages would remain in the hospital for "perhaps several days" for medical tests, orientation, catching up on world events through magazines, newspapers and videotapes and being debriefed by "a number of agencies of the government."

The Americans "suffered far more than they should have suffered," Cannon said. "For freedom-loving peoples everywhere this is a very happy day."

The 50 men and two women were taken to their rooms after a 12-hour, 4,550-mile flight from Tehran, with stops in Athens and Algiers.

Many were exuberant or smiling. All appeared to be in fair health or better despite their 444-day ordeal at the hands of the Iranian revolutionaries who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and its staff on Nov. 4, 1979.

Hundreds of jubilant Americans stationed in Germany gave the heroes of the 14½-month ordeal tumultuous welcomes as two Air Force hospital planes brought them to the Rhein-Main Air Base in Frankfurt and two buses ferried them 20 miles to the hospital at Wiesbaden.

The Hesse state radio said police received bomb threats against the buses shortly before the Americans left the airport. The police refused to confirm or deny the report, but the buses traveled with a large escort and there was no interruption in the trip.

Citizen Jimmy Carter On His Way To W. Germany

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Citizen Jimmy Carter, who missed by minutes being able to pronounce America's 52 hostages free while he was still president, headed to West Germany today on a bittersweet mission to hail their deliverance from 444 days of captivity in Iran.

"We are going to express the thanks of a grateful nation to the brave hostages who have been held so long," Carter said early today before boarding a helicopter that took him to Robins Air Force Base for the 8½-hour flight to West Germany.

Carter, making the trip as a special envoy representing President Reagan, said he wanted to talk to each of the hostages individually.

He said he would "bring back to the next president (Reagan) a report on the status of the hostages and give the public through the press an update on the last few days."

Carter was greeted by his former vice president, Walter Mondale, at the air base in Warner-Robins and the two boarded the airplane that was Air Force One while Carter was president. The plane then took off at 6:25 a.m. EST.

Air Force officials in West Germany said Carter would arrive at 8:30 p.m. — 2:30 p.m. EST — meet privately with the Americans and deliver a speech at Frankfurt airport before flying home at 10:45 p.m. — 4:45 p.m. EST.

In his comments in Plains, Carter said that as he watched the hostages on television Tuesday night, "My observation as they walked from the plane was a sense of gratitude that they seemed so well."

He said that when the Iranians permitted the Algerian physicians to examine the hostages in Iran, he believed they would all be in good condition. "Otherwise," he said, "the Iranians would not have released them."

Asked whether he was bitter that the Iranians held the hostages until after he left office, Carter said, "I think that on the day when we are so happy (about the hostages' release) it would be better not to comment on the behavior of the Iranians, which I think is abominable."

A close personal aide said Tuesday she had never seen Carter more despondent than when he realized he could not personally announce as president of the United States that the hostages were free at last.

As he arrived in his hometown Tuesday and received an exuberant welcome, Carter said he couldn't be happier.

"They are hostages no more, prisoners no more, and they are coming back to this land that we all love," he said.

Carter was told just moments before arriving in Georgia that the Americans had cleared Iranian airspace on the first leg of their homeward journey.

He had wanted to crown his presidency with one last trip — to greet the freed hostages at a U.S. air base in Wiesbaden, West Germany, where they are spending the next few days recuperating.

Instead, Carter is a former president acting as the new president's personal envoy.

"You can't come to any other conclusion than that they (the Iranians) deliberately held the hostages until President Carter left office — they did it on purpose."

Employee Benefits Hiked By Pitt Hospital's Board

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees approved last night a number of improvements to its employee benefit development program.

Effective Jan. 24, new policies for shift differential, holiday pay, management benefits, part-time benefits and a benefit communication program are to be instituted.

Shift differential pay will be paid for all non-exempt (hourly paid) persons working the evening and night shifts. All non-management persons required to work on holidays will receive time and one-half pay.

Department managers and head nurses will have improvements in insurance, professional membership, deferred compensation and sick and vacation pay.

Benefits will be awarded to part-time employees who are regularly scheduled to work 20 hours per week and who have been employed at least a year.

Comprehensive, detailed information on benefits will be provided on a regular basis to employees concerning current and future benefits.

A communique being released today said this action is "an effort to recruit and retain employees, give incentive to accept assignment to less desirable duties, shifts and days and induce employees to accept leadership roles."

The action is a response to "the extreme interest expressed in better benefits during the 1980 employee survey."

The added cost to the hospital during the remainder of this fiscal year is expected to be $262,865.

In other action, the board:

—authorized a search for a director of the pathology department for the next fiscal year.

—accepted the report of the audit of hospital records by Farley, Prescott Mizell and Company Inc. CPAs.

—reviewed bylaw changes to be considered at the next meeting, including a continuing education requirement for medical staff members, inclusion of a nursing staff member on the institutional

Waste Management Is Discussed At Session

At the regional public meeting of the Governor's Task Force on Waste Management held Tuesday night at North Pitt High School, area residents were given an opportunity to discuss proposed recommendations of the Governor's Task Force on Waste Management and to provide input at the conclusion of the meeting.

Following a brief orientation program touching on objectives and the agenda format, Bryant Haskins of Raleigh, a task force member, gave a summary of the hazardous wastes situation in North Carolina. This presentation also included a showing of slides by a representative of the N. C. School of Science and Mathematics.

State officials attending and taking part in the Tuesday night meeting included Tom Bradshaw, secretary of the N. C. Department of Transportation; O. W. Strickland, head of the Solid and Hazardous Waste Program in North Carolina; Captain Bill Briner, chief of the N. C. Technical Advisory Committee on Low Level Radioactive Waste; Billy Buffaloe, director of the N. C. Pesticide Program, N. C. Dept. of Agriculture; and Ms. Lucy Bode, chief assistant to Dr. Sarah Morrow, secretary of the N. C. Department of Human Resources.

Local representatives attending included Edith Webber for the Pitt-Greenville League of Women Voters and Y. J. Lao of East Carolina University, a specialist in environmental health.

Ms. Bode remarked "I was very much impressed by the interest and concern of those from the area attending the meeting.

"There were people from industry, students, farmers, a broad representation of citizens who expressed

MINIATURE FEEDBACK

A number of dollhouse miniature enthusiasts have gotten together partially as a result of the publication of a recent Hotline item and have formed the Eastern North Carolina Dollhouse Miniature Enthusiasts group.

The organizational meeting will be held Feb. 18 at 8 p. m. at 107 Martinsborough Road. For information, call Anne Mattox, 756-2210, or Nancy Jones, 752-1550.

CENTRAL DEPOT?

Is there a central depot to which used, but good small appliances can be brought for distribution to people who have been burned out or are otherwise in need of them? C. H.

Most assuredly, says Linda Whorton, secretary of the Salvation Army here. Burned out people need everything, including small appliances, and the Salvation Army is always able to channel good used items of any kind to needy people.

Mrs. Whorton asked only that appliance be in good working order, as the Army has no means of repair.

Donations to the Salvation Army are, of course, tax-deductible. The headquarters is located at 2337 W. Dickinson Avenue.

Disclose Abuse By Militants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former hostage Elizabeth Montagne, calling her treatment by Iranian captors "degrading, humiliating and dehumanizing," says the militants forced her to play Russian roulette.

"It was mental abuse," she said in an interview. "There was never a threat of physical beating with ... fists or clubs, but it was mental abuse. And, there were threats with guns."

"I don't want to go into detail about the threats with the guns," Ms. Montagne said, "but everyone called it the Russian roulette incident. That did happen to me."

Ms. Montagne was one of 13 blacks and women released within a couple of weeks after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized by Islamic militant Nov. 4, 1979. She said the mistreatment she suffered occurred during the first four days of the takeover.

Lloyd Rollins, another of the 13, told NBC News Tuesday night that the militants tied some hostages to a table, gagged others and waved guns "in our faces."

Ms. Montagne and Rollins, 40, had withheld comment on their treatment until they were sure the 52 hostages left behind until Tuesday were free.

Rollins said the militants played Russian roulette with two female secretaries to try to "get information from us."

"They put a bullet in the chamber, spun the chamber, and they clicked the trigger off on a couple of the girls," Rollins said.

State Department spokesman David Passage said government officials had kept quiet about the brutality because they did not want to endanger the hostages who were still in Iran. For the same reason, the 13 hostages released earlier were asked not to talk about abuse, he said.

Rollins said the scare tactics ended within a few days, "when they got to know us."

"The guns disappeared, the weapons disappeared, and they tried to reassure us that we weren't going to be hurt," he said.

Jewelry Reflects Textural Trend

Couple Weds In Ceremony

The wedding ceremony of Mary Ann Sutton and Tony Tod Worthington was solemnized Sunday, Jan. 11, at 3:30 p.m. Dr. David Hammond performed the double ring ceremony at the home in Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Delzora Sutton Nobles of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Hazel Worthington also of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother.

The couple plan to live in Houston, Tex., where the bridegroom is stationed in the U. S. Army.

COCOA SPONGE CAKE

A really delightful offering.

1-3rd cup sifted cake flour
3 tablespoons cocoa
3 large eggs, separated
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift together the flour and cocoa. In a medium bowl beat together the egg whites and salt until stiff straight peaks may be formed; gradually beat in the sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, until meringue is very stiff and glossy. In a small bowl, without washing beater, beat the egg yolks and vanilla until thickened and lemon color; add to whites and fold in until blended. Sift the flour-cocoa mixture, 1/4 at a time, over the egg mixture, folding it in as you do so, until blended. Turn into an 8 1/2 by 4 1/2 by 2 1/2-inch loaf pan whose bottom only has been greased. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 1 hour. Loosen edges and turn out on rack; turn right side up; cool completely. Frost as desired. Or cut into 3 lengthwise layers and fill and frost with chocolate-flavored whipped cream.

To get the most juice out of citrus, roll each piece on counter top with the palm of your hand; cut in half and squeeze. After squeezing, remove crushed pulp and membrane; scallop edges and use for serving fruit salads, relishes or frozen ices.

Dear Abby

No Thank You's Included All

By Abigail Van Buren

1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our son was married last June at a beautiful church wedding. He and his bride received many lovely wedding gifts. (There were over 300 guests.)

In September I started getting calls. ("Did Wendy ever get our wedding present?") I mentioned this to Wendy, and she said she was waiting for her monogrammed stationery. I told her I'd be glad to buy her some appropriate stationery and even help her write the notes, but she said she was "too busy" getting settled, and she'd rather wait. (This girl is a college graduate.)

Come December, my friends were asking me if Wendy ever received their wedding gifts, so I wrote a "thank-you" to everyone I knew had given them a gift. I signed Wendy's name, and mailed them off.

When I told her what I had done, Wendy was furious. Now my son isn't speaking to me. I really don't think I did such a terrible thing. Abby, what would you have done in my place?

MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: I would have apologized to those who inquired, and let Wendy suffer the consequences of her own procrastination and bad manners.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and I'm in love with my teacher. He is 30 and married, and I know there is no hope for me, but I think about him night and day. (Especially night.)

I did a couple of dumb things, like copying his picture out of the yearbook for art class, and I also told some kids in school how I felt about him. Well, it must have gotten back to him, because now he avoids me and won't even look my way. Before this, he would smile at me and say hi.

I have written him a dozen letters but I've torn all of them up. I can't help how I feel. What should I do?

MISERABLE IN MALVERN, ARIZ.

DEAR MISERABLE: Don't do anything. Apparently your actions have already caused your teacher some embarrassment. You can't help how you "feel," but you can help how you behave.

DEAR ABBY: This is for those who are upset because their wedding gifts have not been acknowledged. I think this is even worse.

Last summer my husband and I were invited to a wedding. It was several hundred miles away and the trip cost more than we really could afford, but we felt an obligation to go because the bride's parents were our good friends, so we went anyway.

We did all the right things — signed the guest book, went through the receiving line, wished the bride happiness and congratulated the groom.

Subsequently we received a very nice note from the bride, thanking us for our gift. And she ended with, "We were so sorry you couldn't attend our wedding. We missed you." Sign me . . .

INVISIBLE IN PORTLAND

CONFIDENTIAL TO A. IN ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILL.: The late Lord Mountbatten wisely said: "Whenever you are doing nothing, you are doing wrong."

DEAR ABBY: The quandary of LOVERS FOR SURE calls for a word of encouragement.

Having married my own cousin, I concluded after 27 years of domestic bliss and six perfectly normal children that cousins in fact bring a commonality of background and outlook to a marriage that contributes to an early strengthening of the conjugal bond, and remains a permanent uniting influence.

As for the genetic lottery, it's not only for relatives; everybody is in it!

UNREPENTING COUSIN

DEAR UNREPENTING: Granted, everybody is indeed in it, but the risk of hereditary diseases and tendencies toward them are greatly increased when cousins marry.

I repeat, genetic counseling is good insurance. Everyone may not be as lucky as you.

DAR Delegates Are Selected

Those elected to represent the chapter in Asheville are Mrs. Everett Ballengee, Mrs. Donald McLane Jr. and Mrs. Dennis Winstead. Alternates are Mrs. Richard Dupree, Dr. Mildred Southwick and Mrs. James Briley.

For the Washington meeting, the group selected Mrs. Ballengee with Mrs. McLane and Mrs. Dorothy Johnson as alternates.

Mrs. John P. Bullock was welcomed as a new member and Mrs. G. Roger Winbon was a guest.

Mrs. Ballengee announced the appointment of two committee chairmen, Americanism and DAR Manual for Citizenship, Mrs. Robert Daniel and DAR Good Citizen, Mrs. Clara Jordan.

DAR Service to Veteran Patient Chairman Winstead announced various items had been delivered to Durham. Members were encouraged to make articles for sale at the state junior bazaar.

Treasurer Mrs. Dupree said obligations to state and national projects have been fulfilled. American History Month will be observed in February with a program given by Dr. Walter Pories on "Death of Three Presidents" and spot announcements to schools and television.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Frank Thompson.

Corporation Is Honored For Savings

The Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corporation, which serves much of Martin County and the Belvoir-Bethel area of Pitt County, has received one of 60 Presidential Energy Efficiency Awards for outstanding achievements in the field of residential energy conservation.

At a ceremony held at the White House Monday, Jan. 12, James E. "Jet" Taylor, energy management advisor for the rural electric cooperative, accepted the award. Former President Jimmy Carter congratulated the awardees.

According to Taylor, the cooperative was presented the award for its residential conservation activities in and around its eight-county service area,including the following: conducting more than 100 residential energy audits during the first nine months of 1980; presenting energy conservation workshops to more than 140 participants; conducting an in-house energy management program that has resulted in a 27.6 prcent reduction in energy usage at its Tarboro headquarters.

Taylor was recognized by the cooperative's general manager, Rudolph Sexton, for taking "producting a program from inception to national recognition in just one year."

The Edgecombe-Martin EMC has earned the privilege of using the President's Award double-E energy efficiency emblems in its stationery, certificates and other documents, Taylor said.

Aflatoxin Level High

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Chowan County gristmill has produced corn meal that contains levels of potentially lethal aflatoxin 90 times higher than the legal standard, the state Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

"This is the most serious level of aflatoxin we have found," said Leonard F. Blanton, acting director of the department's Food and Drug Protection Division.

Blanton, whose department is checking all corn meal produced in the state, said meal from Lane and Byrum's Mill at Tyner has aflatoxin levels of 1,822 parts per billion. The maximum level allowed by the state is 20 ppb.

Aflatoxin is a byproduct of a fungus that develops on corn and peanuts in hot, dry weather. It has been identified as a cancer-causing agent in some animals.

"No one really knows the full effect this toxin might have on humans, but the threat is sufficient that I would certainly urge anyone with this product on hand not to eat it," he said.

Blanton said meal still found on store shelves in the mill's market area — Chowan, Gates and Perquimans counties — has been embargoed, but most of the product had already been distributed to consumers.

He said the meal was packaged in yellow two- and five-pound bags labeled with the mill's name. Bags containing the contaminated meal have white twine ties, Blanton said. Other Lane and Byrum products that used a metal clip as a tie are safe to eat, he said.

Speaker To Talk To Women

Mrs. Margie L. Smith will speak on behalf of church women of economic and social concerns at Christ Temple Holiness Church on Sunday at 11:30 a.m.

Her topic will be "We Are The Salt of the Earth." The women's group was organized to provide emergency and supportive services to its parishioners and area residents.

Mrs. Smith received her B.A. degree at Western Connecticut State College in Danbury. She has served as a community organizer, supportive service coordinator and project director.

Our Nation Stands Tall

No nation could be more thankful today than ours for the safe return of American hostages held prisoner in Iran for 444 days.

It was an agonizing time for our country, one that tried our patience and our resolve.

Many of us urged strong, possibly military action when the brazen kidnapping took place. It is to the credit of former president Jimmy Carter that he exercised restraint in the initial phases of the detention. It was also a wise move on his part to freeze Iranian assets under U. S. control pending resolution of the crisis. These assets later proved to be the perfect bargaining weapon for obtaining the hostages' release.

The Carter administration left office on a high note Tuesday. The incredibly complex negotiations with an unstable government were successfully concluded. We should not lose sight of the fact that Ronald Reagan conducted himself well in relation to the hostage negotiations while he waited to take the office of the presidency. He left the negotiations to his predecessor and said the right things at the right time. Nor should the role of the Algerians in bringing about the conclusion be underrated. They are perhaps the only government in the world which the Iranians trust, and without their efforts the deal could not have been made.

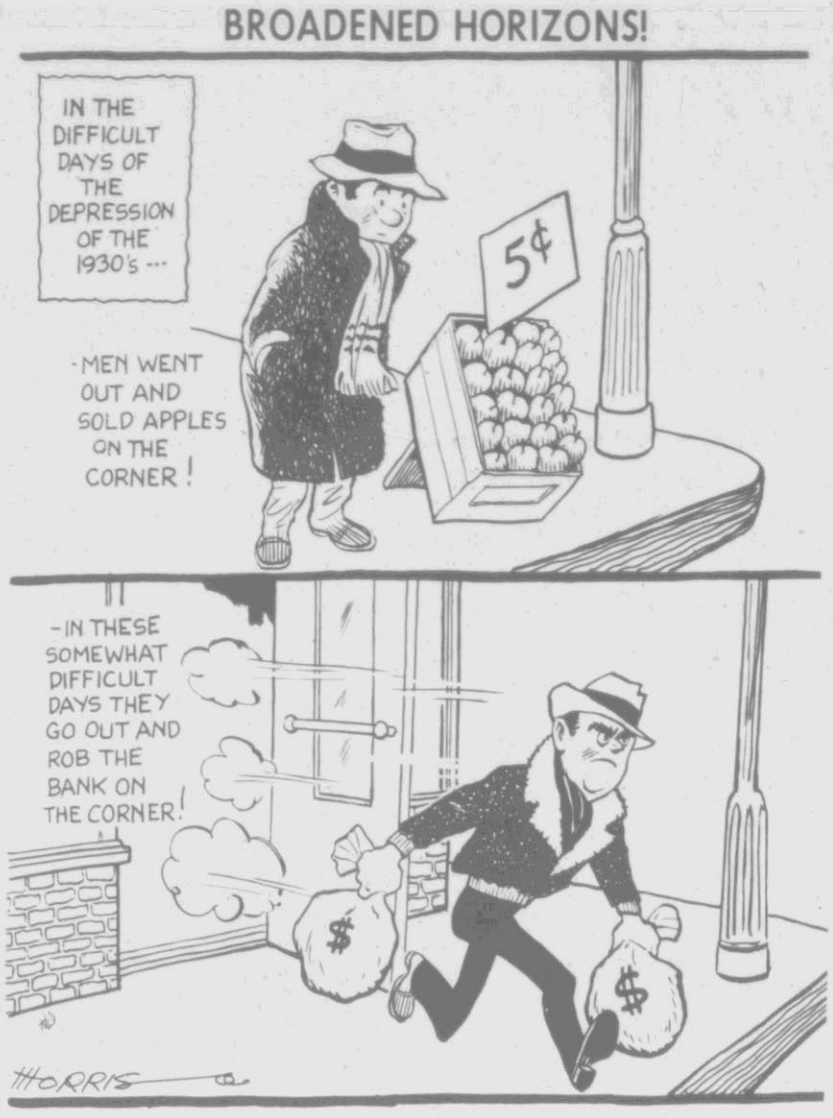
The Iranian government, or whatever passes for a government there, sees the United States as humiliated by the crisis of Iranian making. We don't see it that way. In the world of diplomacy the United States should stand tall today. In the face of this criminal act our nation showed itself to be every bit the civilized world's leader.

Our Parties Were United

If any observers outside the United States doubt that our political parties can work together in international crises, they only have to study the recently concluded U. S. hostage release.

The changing time for the presidency is one of the most difficult for our nation. Yet the Carter and Reagan groups worked splendidly on the matter.

Today the President is Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter is a private citizen. Through the very day of the change-over, however, one of our most complicated exercises is international diplomacy was concluded.



THIS AFTERNOON

State Power Play

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The notion of balanced power between the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government is cast in constitutional stone.

In reality, though, that concept is written in shifting sand.

Whenever any of the three branches in some way gets new power, the process of taking that power away and giving it to another branch begins.

That is just what is happening now in North Carolina state government as members of the General Assembly engage in a sparring contest with Governor Jim Hunt. The outcome remains uncertain.

Two fronts occupy the attention of lawmakers: the ability of governmental agencies, under the governor's direction, to interpret the laws passed by the General Assembly, and write rules and regulations enforcing those laws; and, the state budget.

History

It all started before Jim Hunt became governor. Former governor James Holshouser was a Republican and in many respects defenseless before the Democratic Legislature. Seeing that, lawmakers probed for weaknesses, and finally focused attention on the budget system in which the governor has the ultimate power to propose figures based upon a complex and closely held information system. Legislators, overwhelmed by the enormity of the budget and under-informed by design, really have little option but to rubber stamp the proposed budget.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was then speaker of the house, and was deeply involved in the so-called stripping measures being considered. His colleagues were Liston Ramsey, now speaker of the house, and such various legislators as State Senator Kenneth Royall and State

BILL NOBLITT

Rep. Billy Watkins. The mechanism was an Executive Budget Act which would provide legislators all the data available to the governor in drawing up a budget proposal, and staff effectively either to tear the governor's budget to shreds, or to write their own budget.

Hunt, then lieutenant governor, got wind of the design and stamped it out knowing the havoc it would work if and when he became governor. He did become governor, and one of his goals was to destroy the popular notion that North Carolina's governor was the weakest in the nation — no veto power, and no succession. Hunt pushed a measure allowing a governor to seek a second term, and it was obvious at the time that having given more power to the executive, the legislative would eventually seek to get some more for itself.

And that is the background to a recent minor flap over a proposal from a study commission that the Legislative Research Committee take power to veto administrative rules and regulations issued by state agencies.

Sparring

Insiders say that was only a feinting motion to see if Gov. Hunt would respond with vigor. He did, denouncing the notion as tantamount to legislative veto of executive power.

The real maneuver still involves the state budget, for Positive Approach

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

It is easy — and popular politically — to lash out at the "welfare cheats" and deride fraud in the food stamp program.

But the fact is that welfare programs are essential if we are to provide even the essentials for those who are genuinely unable to care for themselves.

What little goes to those who are deserving should not be begrudged by anyone. If to get to the truly needy we also have unintentionally allowed some of the funds to go to the "cheats", then we should blame the the structure of the program rather than those for whom aid is intended.

And our goal should be tightening the program rather than criticizing the needy.

Congressman Charlie Whitley, without any fanfare, has moved positively in that direction.

Last year he introduced an amendment that would make it more difficult for undeserving people to abuse the food stamp program.

Specifically, the amendment requires that people applying for food stamps must be identified by the Social Security numbers.

This enables the government to quickly run the numbers through computers that include Internal Revenue Service, Veterans Administration and other agency data.

This means that if a person is lying about his income, the truth is subject to be reported by the computers. Computers can do almost instantly what teams of investigators would have to spend days and weeks determining.

Congressman Whitley's amendment was passed by the Congress. He made no big announcement about it. In fact, he merely mentioned it in passing while discussing congressional matters recently with a group of Goldsboro industrial leaders.

But the congressman's characteristic modesty aside, the procedure should not only catch those who would prey on a good program, it could provide a significant deterrent to cheating.

This kind of thoughtful approach will do far more than pained posturing and political grandstanding that creates the impression that everyone on "welfare" is a cheat.

PARTNERS WITH GOD

Work as an end in itself is a curse; work as a means to certain good ends is one of life's greatest blessings. Our Lord Jesus said, "We must work ... while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." And again he said, "My Heavenly Father worketh until now, and I work."

The opening chapters of Genesis give us a picture of God as a worker. He is creating. And after this work comes rest. The Bible seems to imply that the creative power of God is still at work — not in the same way as described in the opening chapters og Genesis, but continuing, nevertheless, the process of creating. As Jesus put it, "God works until now."

It is our great privilege to be co-workers with God. We are permitted to become fellow-creators with the Most High. God has created, and continues to create in us and through us. The possibilities involved in this process are thrilling when we stop to think about them. We are partners together with God.

Where's The Colonels?

WASHINGTON — It is very perplexing for foreigners to understand how Americans change presidents. I happened to be watching the swearing-in with a military attache from a South American country who was seeing his first inaugural.

He was quite bewildered by the ceremony.

"What is President Carter doing up there on the platform?" he wanted to know.

"He's watching the new president of the United States being sworn in."

"Isn't he under house arrest?"

"No, we don't put our ex-presidents under house arrest," I told him. "It's much more cruel to make them see their successor take over the office."

"How come there are no colonels up on the platform?"

"Why should there be colonels on the platform?"

"Our colonels didn't overthrow the government. The president was elected by the people."

ART BUCHWALD

"But didn't you have the junta oversee the elections?"

"We had no junta. People just went to the polls and voted for the candidate they wanted."

"How can you do that under martial law?"

"We didn't have martial law," I said, patiently.

"But if Carter knew that Reagan was going to overthrow his government, why didn't he declare martial law and round up all the people who were supporting Reagan?"

"Our system is not that sophisticated yet. Every president takes his chances that he can win re-election. Once the voters have spoken, that's it."

"It doesn't make any sense that a man in power would not have any knowledge that the opposition was planning a coup. What happened to the generals who were supporting Carter?"

"Carter didn't have any generals supporting him in office."

"That explains it! But surely the secret police could have tortured the Reagan people and found out what was going on."

"We're way behind when it comes to torturing political opponents. We just let everyone have his say and then we select the person we want to be our president for four years."

"You mean Reagan is not going to declare himself president for life?"

"He can't. The Constitution won't permit it."

"But surely he can change the Constitution. We do it all the time."

"It's too much trouble," I said. "Besides, being president of the United States for four years can seem like a lifetime."

"When do the trials of Carter's Cabinet officers begin?"

"There are not going to be any trials. Most of them will go back to their law practices or head up large corporations."

"How can Reagan be sure they won't work clandestinely to overthrow him?"

"They will, but not until 1984."

"I don't see any tanks up here."

"We never have tanks at a presidential inauguration. They make potholes in the streets. Pay attention, you could learn something from this."

"What good would it do? When I make a report to my government, no one in the junta will believe me."

Sen. Bayh's CIA Honor

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Former Sen. Birch Bayh, the defeated ex-chairman of the Senate intelligence committee and hairshirt of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), was given the CIA's highest award in an unannounced, closed-door ceremony in Adm. Stansfield Turner's private dining room Dec. 18.

This was CIA Director Turner's reward for Bayh's role in helping make dangerous cuts in the agency's clandestine operations. Considered an enemy by professional intelligence officers, Bayh quietly backed Turner's first major move at the CIA: pruning literally hundreds of "spies" from the payroll.

Bayh also helped Turner block attacks by conservative Republican members of the intelligence committee. The reward was the National Intelligence Distinguished Service Medal, given only once before to any member of Congress. William Miller, Bayh's top committee aide and another CIA hairshirt, was honored at the same luncheon with the CIA's Seal Medallion, a lesser award.

No. 2 At State

President-elect Ronald Reagan's hope for deputy secretary of state, his old friend William Patrick Clark, has run into severe problems on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee based on one point: Clark's political conservatism.

Publicly, liberal Democrats on the committee complain that Clark, now a California Supreme Court justice, lacks experience to be No. 2 at State. But that did not hurt Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, a Los Angeles lawyer who also lacked any diplomatic experience. The real reason for liberal opposition to Clark is his well-known hard-line view on foreign policy.

If there had been no opposition to Gen. Alexander Haig as secretary of state, Clark would have been appointed by now. Reagan is not afraid of another Senate fight, but neither is he eager for both his two top State Department officials to endure brass-knuckle fights in the Senate.

Worrying About Percy

Reagan operatives became so concerned about Sen. Charles H. Percy's conduct of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's Haig hearings that a seriously ill Majority Leader Howard Baker was prevailed upon to telephone advice from his hospital bed.

Baker, second-ranking Republican to Percy on the committee, was supposed to mastermind strategy for confirmation of Gen. Alexander Haig as secretary of state under a private agreement between Percy, Baker and Reagan transition agents. When Baker was struck down by diverticulitis, Percy was on his own.

Even before Baker's illness, Reagan operatives were furious over Percy going along with Sen. Claiborne Pell, the committee's senior Democrat, in agreeing to subpoena Watergate tapes. Baker was asked to call Percy from his sickbed when the chairman placed so much stress on the "investigation" continuing even after Haig was confirmed.

Haig Scores

Behind the emotional exchanges between Secretary of State-designate Haig and liberal senators was an outpouring of mail, telegrams and telephone calls to the State Department and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee backing Haig by well over 2-to-1.

What fascinated diplomats was the high volume of messages from Europe, which gave Haig overwhelming backing. Obviously remembering Haig's years in Europe as supreme commander of NATO, Europeans sent nearly 100 wires to Haig.

Overall, message counters say that Haig was backed about 2-to-1, when letters and telegrams to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee were added. Many of these Senate messages opposing Haig came from the two states of Haig's harshest critics: Maryland (Sen. Paul Sarbanes) and Massachusetts (Sen. Paul Tsongas).

Pentagon Blues

Frustration by defense experts continued when they learned that yet another defense neophyte is a strong prospect for high Pentagon office: Nicholas Veliotes, a professional diplomat who is now ambassador to Jordan, to be assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs (ISA).

The appointment of Caspar Weinberger as secretary of defense and Frank Carlucci as deputy secretary angered the defense community not so much because of their views but because of their lack of them. That anger was softened when word was spread that Paul Nitze, a deputy secretary under Lyndon Johnson and a respected figure in defense circles, probably would be under secretary for policy.

But Carlucci then recommended Veliotes, a fellow foreign service officer, for

Closer Algeria Ties Probable

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The success of Algerian diplomats in negotiating the release of the 52 American hostages from Iran could gain their North African nation strong diplomatic and economic advantages with the United States.

Algeria won independence from France on July 3, 1962, after a bloody eight-year war of independence and is considered in the West to be a doctrinaire, ultra-leftist state. But there has been steady moderation in Algerian foreign policy since President Houari Boumedienne, the iron-willed champion of Third World causes, died two years ago and Chadli Bendjedid succeeded him.

Despite the divergence of their political philosophies, the United States is Algeria's biggest trading partner. It buys Algerian oil, was a big customer for its natural gas until a price dispute suspended deliveries last April and sells it food and industrial equipment.

Relations between the two countries are described as "pragmatic." They will undoubtedly get closer and warmer as a result of the Algerians' invaluable assistance in securing the release of the captive Americans from Iran.

There will be more pressure now on the U.S. government and the El Paso Company of Houston to give ground in the negotiations over the price to be paid for Algeria's liquefied natural gas.

The U.S. government may be more inclined to listen to Algerian arguments on behalf of the have-not nations of the Third World.

Congress could also be influenced to take a new view of the five-year-old war for independence from Morocco being waged by the Algerian-backed guerrillas of the Polisario Front in the former Spanish Sahara. So far, the United States has firmly supported Morocco.

The Algerians were reluctant at first to get involved in the hostage crisis for fear of a backlash if their efforts failed. They finally agreed to act as intermediaries largely because of their sympathy with the Islamic revolution in Iran, according to one senior official. He said his government wanted the crisis ended so Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary aims could be pursued.

The Algerian diplomats who brought about the agreement are of the generation of young revolutionaries who fought for liberation from France. In their 40s and early 50s, they took over a nation in political and economic chaos after the French left.

Foreign Minister Mohamed Benyahia, who supervised the hostage negotiations, was a member of the team that negotiated the peace agreement with France. He celebrated his 49th birthday this month.

Benyahia is known as a ferociously hard worker. No one in his ministry was surprised when, at the start of the final round of negotiations, he met with U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher until past midnight after two days of talks in neighboring Tunisia.

The importance Algeria attached to a successful resolution of the hostage crisis was evident in the naming of the country's senior diplomat to head the negotiating team. He was Rehda Malek, now ambassador to the United States and former ambassador to France and the Soviet Union, the two other most important capitals for Algeria.

Boy Charged In Tenement Fire

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A 13-year-old boy described as a "good student" who had never been in trouble before has been charged with setting a tenement fire that killed six people, including four children, police said.

The boy, who was not identified, acknowledged setting the fire, according to Detective Lt. Thomas Osborn. The boy was charged Tuesday in Juvenile Court.

Nab Man In Crime Spree

HURON, Ohio (AP) — Police who pursued and stopped a stolen car discovered a 52-year-old Michigan man in the trunk and learned that the driver was wanted in a string of abductions in Michigan, authorities say.

In the hour-long Michigan spree Tuesday, a gunman commandeered three cars — one with a sleeping baby on the seat, another with a 72-year-old woman inside — and shot a pharmacist, police said.

The driver, a 34-year-old Detroit man whose name was not released, was arrested after he crashed into a parked car here, said Sgt. Stan Puder.

In the trunk, police found a 52-year-old Clio, Mich., man who had been abducted earlier in the day, Puder said.

His name was not released.

The driver, in custody here, faces a concealed weapons charge as well as kidnapping and car theft charges in Ohio, Puder said.

In Flint, Mich., Sgt. Joe Wood said the spree began when a gunman forced a man to drive him to downtown Flint. The victim got away when the gunman forced him to stop for gasoline.

Wood said the gunman got behind the wheel and drove three blocks to police headquarters and commandeered a parked car.

He drove that car, with an infant sleeping in the back seat, to Bokor's Pharmacy on Flint's south side, where he left the car and forced his way into a third car with 72-year-old Sally Silver inside, Wood said.

David Snyder, a pharmacist at Bokor's, came outside and exchanged gunfire with the gunman and was wounded in the shoulder, according to Wood.

money is where the real power is. The General Assembly can pass any law it wishes; but without money, the law has little or no impact.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green put it succinctly in a recent comment: it accomplishes nothing to stir public support or even legislative endorsement of a particular project. You have to sell the Advisory Budget Commission, and more particularly, the Governor before anything gets done. The budget, Green points out, is cast in stone when Legislators get it. The governor always gives lawmakers a little surplus — this year it will likely be about $50 million — to play with and keep them occupied; but the big stuff is untouchable.

The real power play has yet to come. Leadership of the Geneal Assembly is carefully and slowly building staff and computer capability. The first quiet step will be an obscure little law requiring all state agencies to supply upon request of the General Assembly any and all budget information. With that tucked away in their own computers, and staff to run the process, the General Assembly within a couple of years will be able to write its own budget from top to bottom — challenging the governor's budget.

Iran Plans Step Up Arms Production For Iraq War

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said his nation plans to step up domestic arms production in the war with Iraq and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today warned against desertions, infiltration and sabotage among Iranian troops.

"The greatest result of the hostage-taking was that America severed relations with us and we tried to rely on ourselves. We have made good progress," Rajai said.

"Our factories are working actively and their production is considerable. We hope this great movement will advance and the day will come when our people will have no need of foreign countries' for arms."

Iran's official news agency Pars said Rajai spoke during an inspection of the Defense Ministry's arms and ammunition factories near Tehran on Tuesday, the day the 52 Americans were freed after 444 days in captivity.

Khomeini, in a message broadcast today by Tehran Radio, advised Iranian soldiers to "be careful not to allow counter-revolutionaries to infiltrate their trenches and the fronts and weaken our mighty fighters with their false propaganda."

The ayatollah, who led the revolution that overthrew Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi in 1979, warned Iranian troops to obey their commanders. He said deserters would be arrested, prosecuted, and face "severe chastisement in the next world."

Iran's supreme authority urged "groups inside the country, in Tehran or Kurdistan or wherever else they may be, to return to the warm embrace of Islam and of the Moslem nation, to put away their arms and be reconciled with their brothers and sisters."

"I will give them all a safe conduct so that no one will trouble them so long as they serve the country loyally."

Khomeini said "certain misled groups ... committing acts of sabotage, helping the enemy and using arms against their Moslem brothers" should reconsider before it was too late and return to the fold.

Iran accuses Iraq of arming and funding autonomy-seeking Kurds in a drive to proclaim western Azerbaijan and Kurdistan in Iran's northwest an independent state.

Khomeini also asked politicians to avoid any actions that would "dishearten the dear, self-sacrificing combatants on the front."

His speech came amid increasing signs of disunity and friction between moderate politicians led by President Abolhassan Bani-sadr and the ultra-conservative clerical majority in Parliament that effectively rules Iran.

The latest example of this friction was a denial by Bani-Sadr earlier in the day that he had been kept informed of about the complex negotiations that led to an agreement for the release of 52 American hostages held in Iran..

Bani-Sadr's denial contradicted a statement on Tuesday by Behzad Nabavi Iran's chief negotiator and government spokesman, that the president had been involved in the hostage negotiations.

Western military analysts in the Middle East said they expect the spare parts crunch that has minimized the role of Iran's U.S.-supplied air force in the 122-day-old war with Iraq to ease as a result of the hostage barter.

Iran recovered billions of dollars in unfrozen assets from the United States. Analysts said it would not be difficult for Iran to get arms and spare parts from the West now that sanctions are expected to be lifted.

But the analysts still doubt Iran would be able to try to turn the tide of the war before the snow melts in its war-conquered western highlands and the marshes dry in oil-rich Khuzistan Province in the spring.

The Iraqis claimed 46 Iranians killed at both ends of the 300-mile Iraqi invasion front Tuesday, vonceding 12 Iraqi deaths. Iran claimed 27 Iraqis killed and conceded 15 Iranians killed and 67 wounded.

Pars also said Iranian forces attacked Iraqi invasion lines and Kurdish insurgent strongholds in the northwestern provinces of Kurdistan and western Azerbaijan Monday and Tuesday, killing 160 Iraqi troops and 100 rebels.

Pars said the clashes with insurgents flared in the Piranshahr area in western Azerbaijan and the fighting with the Iraqi forces in Kurdistan's Marivan district.

Hostage Kids Avoided Press

CINCINNATI (AP) — Three children of a newly freed American hostage lived here quietly during the 14½ months of the Iranian crisis, keeping their agony to themselves to avoid publicity.

Only relatives and a few friends knew they were the children of Army Col. Leland Holland, the chief of security at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. Their mother, Mary Ann, and the family's three other children live in Laurel, Md.

"We didn't see ourselves as poor people. We didn't want to wallow in self-pity — 'Our father's a hostage, poor us.' Because if you do that, there's no end," said Barbara Holland, 26, a physical therapist.

She and her brother, Jerome, 19, live together. He is an art student at the University of Cincinnati. Brother Joseph is also a student.

Ms. Holland and Jerome Holland celebrated their father's release with dinner at a downtown restaurant Tuesday. They then went to a party with friends.

"Hopefully, we'll get a phone call in the morning," she said after cheering as she watched her father, on TV, step off the airplane in Algiers.

"That may be a six-hour phone call," said Jerome Holland.

The Holland children said they always felt their father would be able to take care of himself.

In 1977, Ms. Holland graduated from college in Boston and moved to Lebanon, Ohio. In early 1979, Holland, 53, sent the rest of the family back to the United States from Iran. Mrs. Holland and three of the children returned to their home in Laurel. Jerome Holland finished high school in Lebanon and he, Ms. Holland and Joseph Holland moved to Cincinnati later.

"We're very quiet in our moods. After it dragged on awhile, we thought there'd be less stress," said Jerome.

The Hollands said they took comfort from the support the hostages got from the American public. Yellow ribbons displayed throughout the city also provided comfort, they said.

"It was like being a fly on the wall. It would permeate conversation wherever we'd go ... to a supermarket or the symphony," said Ms. Holland.

"It was so nice. They were caring. It was nice because they showed they cared even though they didn't know we were here," she said.

Hostage Fund Fell Far Short Of Goal

CHICAGO (AP) — The 52 Americans freed from Iran can look forward to receiving about $207 each upon their return to the United States, courtesy of a fund-raising drive by a suburban Glenview public relations man.

Merton G. Silbar had set out to raise $1 million for the hostages when he launched his "Million for Captives" campaign last fall, but he said he has no regrets that the U.S. Hostage Fund in the Glenview State Bank contains just $11,000.

"We know we tried to do something," Silbar said thisIweek as it appeared the hostages' freedom was near.

"We did a little more than shake our heads," Silbar said. "I would have kicked myself forever if I was like many Americans who read the papers, watched the 10 o'clock news on TV, went to bed and did nothing."

Silbar and some friends started the fund drive on the hostages' 300th day of captivity. They set up a charitable trust, mailed letters to the nation's 5,000 largest corporations and pushed for attention in the media.

Silbar said in many ways the response was heartwarming.

"Contributions came in from as far away as Alaska, primarily amounts of $5, $10 and $20," he said. "Many senior citizens sent in $1 bills. The oldest contributor was an 85-year-old woman in a Joliet nursing home who wrote a beautiful letter and sent $1."

Silbar said the Glenview bank paid for all postage and donated $750. An accounting firm handled paper work and a printing company donated stationery.

Twelve large corporations sent donations ranging from $300 to $500, he said.

The fund drive will continue for about two weeks after the hostages are released, said Silbar.

FLUORIDE FACTS

Dental literature is repleat with facts on the effectiveness of fluoride in preventing tooth decay. How does it work? Sugars in the mouth set up a favorable environment for the growth and development of germs. These germs produce acids that cause decay and leave behind deposits that injure the gums. One of the big defenses against this process is flouride which builds up the resistance of teeth to these acids. It should be in your child's drinking water so it can be absorbed in his growing teeth; it should also be in your child's toothpaste, and applied regularly on his teeth by the family dentist.

Chicago (the first big city to fluoridate its water supply) reports that tooth decay has been cut in half among its school children, and credits fluoride for this improvement. As an added plus, Chicago parents are saving an estimated $20 million a year in dental bills.

In areas where the water is not fluoridated, children's teeth can be substantially protected against cavities by fluoride in drop or tablet form.

Chilled By N.C. Income Tax Cut

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Taxpayers would get a 10 percent to 20 percent reduction in their state personal income taxes this year under legislation filed in the House Tuesday.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, saying "we need to consider the burden on taxpayers," filed the proposal that would cut taxes by more than $300 million over the span of the next two-year budget.

"I think it's high time that we take into account that the taxpayers are entitled to some consideration," Lilley said. "I think it has a chance. I think you're going to find a considerable amount of support for it."

Lilley's proposal was not greeted with enthusiasm by Gov. Jim Hunt, however, and was not given a large chance of passing. Some legislative leaders said the bill could open a hole in the $11.9 billion biennial state budget proposal drawn up by Hunt, though Lilley said that shouldn't block the bill.

"I don't think this is going to work," said Zeb Alley, legislative lobbyist for Hunt.

Lilley's proposal would raise the income levels on tax brackets by $2,000.

For a typical taxpayer, that would have the effect of a 10 percent to 20 percent cut, said David Crotts, analyst for the Legislature's fiscal research office.

He cited three hypothetical examples, each involving a family of four with two dependent children and a normal amount of deductions.

— With one worker earning $20,000, the tax bill would be reduced from $746 to $666, an 11 percent cut.

— With two workers, one earning $12,000 and the second earning $8,000, the tax liability would drop 17 percent, from $588 to $490.

— With two workers, one earning $20,000 and the second earning $10,000, the liability would drop $1,121 to $981, or 12½ percent.

"The decrease would be a greater percentage for low and middle income taxpayers, but not a whole lot more," Crotts said.

The bill would raise the threshold of net income for the state's top tax bracket — the 7 percent bracket — from $10,000 annually to $12,000 annually.

Other tax brackets would be increased as follows:

— The 3 percent tax bracket, the state's lowest, would apply on all income from $1 to $4,000. It is now on income up to $2,000.

— The 4 percent bracket would apply for income from $4,001 to $6,000. It is now for $2,000 to $4,000.

— The 5 percent bracket would be from $6,001 to $8,000. It is now $4,000 to $6,000.

— The 6 percent bracket would be from $8,001 to $12,000. It is now $6,000 to $10,000.

— The 7 percent bracket would be on all income from $12,001 up. It now applies to income of $10,000 and up.

According to the state Department of Revenue, the proposal would reduce state revenues by $162 million in 1981-82, and a smaller amount, $143 million, in 1982-83.

In the first year, that would have the effect of an 11 percent reduction in personal income tax collections by the state.

Lilley said he was not attempting by filing the bill early to grab a tax-cut initiative from Republicans, who have said they plan their own tax-cutting measures.

"I don't think it's got anything to do with party. Just listen to the constitutents in my district," he said.

Shuttle Test

The 54-hour simulation, next to the last before Columbia's scheduled March 17 launch, began Tuesday.

The simulation was designed to follow the same flight plan as the shuttle's first orbital mission. Malfunctions are introduced into the nominal flight plan to give astronauts and flight controllers practice in solving the problems.

Late Tuesday, officials said the simulation, piloted by astronauts John W. Young and Capt. Robert L. Crippen, was going more smoothly than previous practice flights.

Officials said the programmed problems included a malfunction in one set of orbital maneuvering thrusters and failure of three inertial measuring units. The official said the crew and controllers solved the problems and pressed on with the simulation.

Stocks Dropped After New President Sworn

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan may have a lot of friends on Wall Street, but they weren't very evident the day he was sworn in as president.

In a flurry of selling that started shortly before Reagan was sworn in as the nation's 40th president, stock prices were driven down and the market wound up Tuesday with a deep loss.

The U.S. dollar also suffered in the aftermath of Reagan's inauguration and the release of the 52 Americans from Iran, but that drop was seen as a reaction to declining interest rates on money markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up .85 at noon, as Reagan stood on the Capitol steps and told the nation it will take years to solve the country's economic problems.

By the end of the day, the widely-watched average was down 20.31 points, to 950.68, as declining stocks outnumbered those advancing by a margin of more than 3-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Reagan is generally popular in the investment community — his election set off a wave of buying. But prices fell back the next day and have gyrated since then.

In his inaugural address, Reagan pledged to "reawaken this industrial giant" and to "lighten our punitive tax burden," but he added that the problems facing the economy took decades to develop.

"They will not go away in days, weeks or months, but they will go away," he said.

Some analysts said they thought that warning may have been disappointing, while others said there was a reaction to the failure of buy orders to develop after the hostages were reported freed. Some said they were puzzled.

"Now that the hostages are out, and the inauguration is over, there's not much the market can hang its hat on," said Charles Jensen, an analyst with MKI Securities. "What is left are the problems of high interest rates and inflation."

The Federal Reserve did not intervene in the money markets Tuesday, although a key interest rate, the federal funds rate charged on loans between banks, fell below 17 percent from above 19.5 percent. It was too soon to say whether that represented a decision to ease monetary policy, but the dollar dropped in foreign exchange trading.

A declining stock market on inauguration day is something of a tradition, although Tuesday's drop was deeper than any recent one.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.98 to 634.37 on Jan. 20, 1961, when John F. Kennedy became president, but since then the market has declined on every inauguration day.

Four years ago, when Jimmy Carter began his term, the Dow average fell 9.64 to 959.03 on Jan. 20.

Despite the fact that much of the investment community was critical of Carter for failing to bring inflation under control, the stock market performed relatively well during his term.

The Dow average stood at 967.09 at noon on Jan. 20, 1977, when Carter became president, and had risen 0.49 percent to 971.84 by noon Tuesday, when Reagan took the oath.

Other averages showed much more impressive gains. The NYSE composite average, at 56.35 four years earlier, had risen 37.1 percent to 77.25 by noon Tuesday, and the American Stock Exchange market value index, at 111.94 when Carter took office, had gained 212.5 percent to 349.78 when his successor was sworn in.

Workshop On Children Is Planned

"Administering Programs for Young Children" will be the topic for a cooperative workshop to be held January 22 at the Willis Building.

Participating will be day care and head start personnel from throughout eastern North Carolina. The program, which will begin at 8:30 a.m., is sponsored by the Day Care Section of the Department of Human Resources, the State Headstart Training Office, Pitt Community College, Beaufort Community College, East Carolina University, Pamlico Technical College and Edgecombe Technical College.

Workshop topics will include "Operating the Program," "Recruitment and Selection of Staff," "Supervision and Evaluation of Staff," and "Community Resources and Public Awareness."

Anyone interested in the Day Care Program is invited to attend. There will be no fee for the workshop unless one wishes to receive continuing education units. This fee is $5 per person.

The workshop will end at 3:15 p.m.

Two Requests Are Approved

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted: Eta Delta Sorority of Beta Sigma Phi for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation from Jan. 27 through Feb. 21 in order to obtain gift certificates for fund-raising events; and by Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of Eastern Star, for permission to conduct a door-to-door, sidewalk, merchant, and general solicitation from Jan. 20 through Feb. 28 in order to sell tickets for a dinner to raise funds for the Masonic and Eastern Star Home.

Tobacco Courses Set

Pitt Community College is again offering courses in Tobacco Auctioneering and Tobacco Ticket Marking.

Each of these course are 80 hours in length and will be conducted concurrently in a local warehouse in the Greenville area.

Each course will meet Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until 12 noon for four weeks beginning Februry 9 and running through March 6.

There will be a $5 registration fee payable at the first class meeting, which will be at 8 p.m. February 9 in room 113 of the Humber Building at PCC.

Holidays

Thursday and Friday will be student holidays for Pitt County School. All offices of the board will operate as usual, including teachers, maintenance and cafeteria personnel.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Achievements Highlight Life Of Her Retarded Son

By TOM SIEG
Winston-Salem Sentinel

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — James Gilmer smiled proudly and swung his lunch box in circles as he walked toward his mother at the bus stop. He stuck out his hand to her.

"Congratulations, Mom," he said. "I rode the bus all by myself today, and I didn't get lost."

In a very real sense, the congratulations were for both of them: James, who is 24 and mentally retarded and wanting badly to "make his way" in the world; and his mother, Nell, who delights in his every new achievement.

Nell Gilmer had already lost a child to crib death and her husband was off on Army maneuvers when the time approached to have another child in 1956.

She went home to Opp, Ala., to give birth to her son, then rejoined her husband, Jim, at Fort Riley, Kan. It soon was apparent to both that something was wrong.

"The doctors at that time didn't know how to tell you," Mrs. Gilmer said. "He was 18 months old before we found out that he was retarded, but we knew it already.

"I knew something was really bad wrong. He couldn't swallow. He couldn't nurse; I had to feed him with a spoon. He had a wrinkled, old-man expression, and his body was rigid and tense. He couldn't sit or crawl."

After Fort Riley, there were to be moves to four different areas with four different levels of capability to provide private or public services for, first, a retarded baby and, finally, a retarded adult.

First there was Atlanta, where her husband went to college.

"The doctors asked me if I'd like to take him (James) to the cerebral palsy clinic for therapy so perhaps they could help him with his mobility," Mrs. Gilmer said.

"So he started therapy and began to crawl, to feed himself and by age 5 he was walking. And it was then that they told me that we would have to find another school, that he no longer could use their services because he could walk. They had given him all the therapy they could."

But then, for a time, there was nothing. James did attend a private nursery "just to be with other children."

"And then he was in the first trainable mentally retarded class in the DeKalb County public schools at age 7. He remained there until the family moved to Texas in 1967," the mother said.

The move to Paris, Texas, came when Gilmer obtained a job with a knitwear company that eventually sent him on to Minneapolis, a city known for its resources for the mentally retarded.

Where there was little in Paris, there was plenty in Minneapolis.

James "was busy every minute," Mrs. Gilmer said. "There were so many organized activities. He had plenty of things to do."

But another move occurred when Gilmer was offered an executive position with Bali, a Hanes Corp. division, in his native North Carolina. The family moved to Winston-Salem.

And most of the activites James had available in Minneapolis no longer were there, especially those to help his social development.

"That's the big problem now," Mrs. Gilmer said. "He feels he's too old (for a sitter). He's an adult, and he would prefer adult company, or doing adult things. He's put away childish things to an extent."

James is a member of a special choir, which Mrs. Gilmer thinks has helped him and others, and he's gone to work with Forsyth Industrial Systems. That has led to his being able to ride the bus with a friend and a co-worker.

It has helped in another large way.

"We notice changes in his personality as he achieves independence," the mother said. "He now wants to do more things for himself. One great step in helping him achieve self-esteem has been receiving a paycheck for his achievements at work.

"This paycheck is a great adult symbol and reward ... He is in a 'money class' at the workshop and interested in learning how to make change and count money. He and his friend want to learn to use the telephone so they can call each other."

But James' life is far from being complete.

"What I would like most of all would be a place where he could go, be with his friends, maybe cook some meals, listen to records, play games, organize, exercise — with his peers, and not his mother and daddy. It's so much easier for him to learn from someone besides his mother," Mrs. Gilmer said.

As for James, all he really wanted during the interview was to get back to the workshop.

"I don't want to talk about it now," he said. "I want to talk about going where I want to be, where I can talk to everybody."

James always has been a member of the family, to be accepted or rejected within the family. He has not been closeted.

The reason is simple, his mother said: "He's my child and I want him to develop to his potential. He has never stopped learning, so I don't know what he can do."

Thad Eure Conducts A School For Legislators

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — More than a half-century ago, Thad Eure arrived at the General Assembly as a 30-year-old freshman lawmaker. He was paid $4 a day for his work and the session lasted about 60 days.

Last week, 27 freshmen legislators arrived with about five months of work ahead of them. During their two-year term, they will be paid a comparatively handsome sum of more than $25,000.

But the freshmen of 1980 share something with the freshmen of 1929 — a lack of experience in writing legislation and getting it passed.

To remedy that, Eure — now secretary of state — has taken it upon himself to tutor new legislators in six daily half-hour sessions. The sessions begin soon after the Legislature convenes and Tuesday marked the start of another school session.

The 81-year-old Eure, wearing the red bow tie that has become his trademark, welcomed a majority of the new House members and some of Gov. Jim Hunt's legislative aides to his class. He reminisced that, in 1929, "the session was half over before I knew the hows, the whats and the whys" of the General Assembly.

"I had to move in the best way I could," Eure said. "I vowed to do all in my power to eliminate your being in the position I was in when I was a member."

Eure said he got the idea for the school from William Tyler Page, the chief clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives, many years ago.

"At first the members were a little skiddish (about attending the legislative school)," Eure said. "They didn't want their constituents to know they were up here attending a school. But now I don't know many members in the Legislature who haven't at one time sat in on a session."

Much of the class time is spent discussing parliamentary procedure and the state constitution, which Eure delights in reciting.

Eure advises his students to "pick out one or two or more veteran members, those whom you respect, and keep an eye on how, what, when they do things. Watch their decorum during debate. You would be wise if you would follow that leadership.

After the introductory session, many of the legislators appeared eager to get their own copies of parliamentary rules and begin taking action during House sessions.

"All of us have a lot to learn," said Rep. Marvin D. Musselwhite, D-Raleigh. "The pressure really will be on in about a week."

System Observing Anniversary

The Citizen Concern System, which was established and implemented by the City Council last year, is observing its first anniversary this month.

The city said the system was established after the council became aware of the fact that more citizens are becoming involved and interested in city government and that the city needed to have an on-going program whereby inquiries, concerns, and problems of local citizens can be acted upon promptly.

Gail Meeks, ombudsman for the new system, said some of the most frequent requests and concerns received during the year involved such areas as street lighting, drainage, cable television, animal control, refuse and litter, zoning, housing conditions, vacant lots, permits, abandoned and junked vehicles, noise disturbances, and public nuisances.

One of the most recent problems being dealt with, she noted, involves the attempted removal of blackbirds in the Lynndale area.

Mrs. Meeks said the system has helped to accomplish the council's goal of improving city government credibility, by providing citizens with more information and decreasing the response time in answering calls and complaints.

Body Is Found In Car's Trunk

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The Highway Patrol said Tuesday the body of a North Carolina man was found in the trunk of a car parked on an Interstate 10 ramp near Biloxi.

The dead man was identified as James Arrowood, 35, of Chapel Hill. Authorities said he had been killed by "blunt instrument force" and had dead for several hours, although a smoldering cigarette was found in the locked car.

The Highway Patrol said the car was registered to Arrowood's wife, identified as Marjorie Madden, also of Chapel Hill.

Association To Have Meet

The Pitt County Livestock Development Association Annual Awards Banquet will be held Monday, January 26 in the cafereria of Wellcome Middle School.

The banquet will begin at 7 p.m. The guest speakers for the annual banquet will be Swanson Jennings and Bobby Flippen, representing the Virginia Pork Festival. Also on the program will be presentation of annual service awards and election of 1981 officers and directors.

For further information contact Mike Regans at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 758-1196.

Withdrawn As A Disposal Site

By The Associated Press

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Mount Gilead, said Tueday he has withdrawn from the market a tract of land that was under consideration as the site of a proposed hazardous waste disposal site.

The tract along the border of Chatham, Lee and Moore counties was one of several being examined by Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Long Beach, Calif., as a potential dump site.

Jordan said he decided to call off negotiations for the sale because of public objections to the proposed dump.

Texan Died In Harrier Crash

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — The Marine Corps said Tuesday that Col. John Ditto, 44, of Tyler, Texas, was killed in the crash Monday of an AV-8A Harrier jet at Cherry Point.

An investigation was being conducted to determine the cause of the crash, which occurred during a training mission at the base.

Legislators Are Told Higher Gas Tax Not Helpful

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While most legislative action took a backseat to the release of the American hostages Tuesday, members of the General Assembly reacted with caution and surprise as a legislative budget expert offered a different slant on solving the money needs of the state highway program.

The expert's comments even led one legislator to surmise that reducing highway department spending to fit the money available might be the answer.

Members of the Finance committees of the House and Senate, meeting for the first time in the 1981 session, heard Frank Justice, director of the Legislature's Fiscal Research Division, tell them that a higher gasoline tax would not remedy the problem. Rather, he said, it might further discourage gasoline consumption and lower gasoline tax revenues.

Justice said general tax revenues would be needed to to finance the state's highway needs.

In Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed 1982-83 biennial budget, a massive shortage of highway money is projected — $342 million less in the next two years than was spend in the two years ending June 30.

A governor's study commission has recommended solving the problem by either adding 5 cents to the present 9¼ cents per gallon sales tax on gasoline or by adding 4 percent to the wholesale price of gasoline. Both would add about a nickel to the price of gasoline at the pump under current prices.

Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Stoneville, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Justice's comments would be a blow to the supporters of the tax hike. Then he took Justice's comments a step further.

"I think we will have to reduce the highway department (spending on) construction and maintenance, to fit whatever money we've got," said Duncan, who said he hopes to avoid a tax hike.

But he added that he expected legislators might be reluctant to contribute large amounts of general tax money to the highway program.

"I wouldn't mind looking at it but I'd have to know it wasn't going to cut out some programs," Duncan said.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh, chairman of the House Base Budget Committee, said, "it was a rather drastic thing to suggest, taking general fund revenue." He added that it "complicates things" because of the study commission's recommendated tax hike.

"Most legislators came to this meeting and said, 'We are going to decide whether to increase the gas tax or not,'" Sen. Robert Wynne, D-Raleigh, said. "But they found out it was not that clear cut. It appear to be much more complicated."

Wynne said the answer may be a percentage increase in the tax and help from the general fund, which could include bringing in revenues from luxury taxes.

Both the House and Senate met only briefly, since most of the lawmakers had President Reagan's inaugural and the hostages' release uppermost in their minds.

Both chambers unanimously passed resolutions encouraging members to attend an ecumenical "service of gratitude and hope" for the hostages at the Duke University Chapel in Durham today. Both chambers offered special prayers for the hostages during their brief sessions.

Most legislators spent much of the day watching the two big events unfold on television sets.

But in the House, tax-cut legislation was filed that would increase the minimum level of earning from $10,000 to $12,000 in the state's top income tax bracket.

In the Senate, lawmakers recessed after a moment of silence for both the hostages and Reagan.

The Senate agreed to delay its session today for an hour and a half, until 1:30 p.m., to allow legislators to attend the Duke Chapel service..

In other legislative action:

Inaugural

With Democrats firmly in control of the state Legislature, there weren't many lawmakers attending President Reagan's inaugural. At least three GOP representatives were in Washington, however, including Sen. Cass Ballenger, D-Hickory, who was co-chairman of the state Reagan campaign. Others attending were Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Greensboro, and Rep. Mary Pegg, R-Winston-Salem.

Others watched the events on television, but some Democrats expressed disinterest.

"Do you remember where we were four years ago? Do you remember how cold it was," House reading clerk Sam J. Burrow Jr., a Democrat, said to state Sen. Russell Walker of Asheboro, the state Democratic Party chairman.

Walker did. "I'm sure glad I'm not up there now, for a lot of reasons," he said.

Budget

House and Senate Appropriations committees got their first look at the $11.9-billion state biennial budget proposal. Marvin Dorman, deputy state budget officer, said the projections for state revenue over the next two years were about average, neither optimistic nor pessimistic.

Baker

Both the House and Senate adjourned after members expressed regret at the death of former Rep. Tommy Baker of Wallace. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said some legislators would attend his funeral in Wallace Wednesday.

Tax Bills

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, filed the major tax-cut bill, as well as a dozen other bills making minor tax changes.

The minor changes were recommended by a revenue study commission he headed. Among the changes are repeals of the privilege license tax exemption on confederate and Spanish-American War Veterans.

New Bills

Other new legislation included a bill filed by Sen. Sam Noble, D-Lumberton, setting a 45 mph speed limit for private school buses.

No Evidence Of 'Mental Illness'

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A Navy psychiatrist testifying for the government as a rebuttal witness says Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood showed no "symptoms of a disease in a psychiatric sense" and was aware of any criminality involved in his conduct during a 14-year period in Vietnam.

Garwood, 34, is on trial on charges of desertion and collaboration in Vietnam. His attorneys have presented a defense based on testimony from psychiatrists who say Garwood suffered from a severe mental illness aggravated by torture and the stress of prison camp life.

Navy Capt. Patrick F. O'Connell, the first of at least two rebuttal witnesses scheduled by the prosecution, said Tuesday that he interviewed Pfc. Robert Garwood for nine hours, "and he gave a good, clear account of his conduct which did not include symptoms of a disease in a psychiatric sense."

Another psychiatrist, Navy Capt. Michael A. Harris, was to testify today.

O'Connell said he discounted defense contentions that Garwood, in effect, lost his identity while in captivity "because in his story to me there was no evidence of amnesia or confusion."

O'Connell headed a three-man military board that determined that Garwood was competent and responsible to stand trial.

"We found that he possesses sufficient mental capacity to conduct his defense and that he did not have a mental disease or defect at the time of the incident," O'Connell testified.

The psychiatrist also said that tests taken during the examination were discounted because the board concluded that "Garwood was trying to appear ill, was feigning illness."

O'Connell said Garwood did suffer "mild to moderate depression from time to time" and also experienced an avoidant personality disorder, which makes him uncomfortable with other people even though he wished to be with them.

HOSTAGES FREE, TREE, LIT — The lights of the national Christmas tree on the Ellipse near the White House shine for the first time Tuesday when word was received that the Americans held hostages by Iran were free. Former President Jimmy Carter had ordered that only the star at the top would be lit until the hostages were freed. The burst of fireworks is part of the activity for the inauguration of President Ronald Reagan. (AP Laserphoto)

Looking Back: Iran Of 1950s Is Similar To Today

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At issue: developments in Iran. Speaking: State Department specialists on the Middle East.

"Certainly someone must move in and fill the vacuum that exists today in the government in Iran. There is not too much we can do. Actually, any outward evidence of foreign intervention would incur reaction in Iran."

"I think it is safe to say Iran is the weak spot on the entire periphery of Russia. ... Politically, if this place goes bad, it is disastrous for the whole West. ... We are skating on very thin ice."

"The question was decided on the basis of the extreme emotion and the nationalist feeling of the (Iranian) people, and anyone who urged moderation or compromise ... certainly endangered his life."

Date: early 1950s.

Despite the familiar ring, these comments weren't prompted by the Iran of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Islamic revolution. They all date back nearly three decades — before half of all Americans alive today had been born.

The vintage material on Iranian unrest during the early 1950s was disclosed in previously unpublished transcripts of closed-door hearings held by the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The committee released eight volumes of the once-confidential records on Saturday.

Along with Iran, the executive sessions dealt with a wide range of foreign policy issues including the U.S. Mutual Security Program, East-West tensions and the Arab-Israeli problem.

The cautious, sometimes unusually candid assessments voiced by State Department officials during several closed hearings in 1951-53 offer a haunting historical footnote to America's long involvement in Iran, culminating in the hostages crisis.

On July 17, 1953 — only a month before a CIA-supported coup overthrew the Iranian government of nationalist leader Mohammad Mossadegh — one U.S. specialist expressed serious misgivings about Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who began consolidating his power after the coup.

"Unfortunately, the present shah has not improved matters a great deal," said Arthur L. Richards, then director of the State Department's office of Greek, Turkish and Iranian affairs. "He is tremendously suspicious, afraid all the time, thinks everyone is intriguing against him."

At that time the United States was concerned over Mossadegh's drive to nationalize Iran's rich oil fields, which had been largely developed and controlled by the British. Iranian oil exports stopped for two years, but resumed following the 1953 coup.

"The British failed completely to realize the psychology of the Persians," Richards testified before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee. "They thought they could approach this thing on a practical basis, a dollars-and-cents basis, and the Iranians were not interested at all. They were only interested in the emotional approach."

Describing the overall outlook, he said: "We sometimes feel we are just sitting on a time bomb and the world does not realize how serious it is."

Richards noted that "Russia, of course, is the sinister figure in the background. ... The Russians, since the time of Peter the Great, have been talking about going south through Persia, getting a warm water port in the Indian Ocean. ... They are undoubtedly enthusiastic about the way things are going. It is, I think, however, an exaggeration to say that they are doing a great deal to encourage it."

Under questioning, Richards discounted fears that Mossadegh would be more inclined to make an oil deal with the Soviet Union. "I do not think that Mossadegh will sell out to the Russians," he said.

Richards also called Mossadegh "the most astute politician in Iran."

The next month, on Aug. 18-19, 1953, pro-shah troops deposed the nationalist government and arrested Mossadegh.

In nearly prophetic tones, another State Department official, Arthur Z. Gardiner described the lure and dangers posed by Mideast oil, which then cost only about 25 to 50 cents per barrel — compared to today's OPEC prices of more than $30. The United States at that time was still a net oil exporter.

"You have an extraordinary situation with a product that costs 50 cents, let us say, in the Near East, and costs $2.50 here (for U.S. domestically produced oil). On both prices you get a profit. Now what happens to that $2? The Iranians will say that they have been swindled ... They should have had that $2. ... All this money has come out of their pockets.

"The British public or the American public might say, 'What's going on anyway? We have been paying $2.50 and $3 for 50-cent oil,' " Gardiner said, also noting that cheap Mideast oil could cause a "terrific ruckus" by putting domestic coal mines out of business.

One member of the subcommittee, Rep. Lawrence H. Smith, R-Wis., remarked: "I wonder what the reaction of the people in the United States would be if they knew."

Legion Post Anniversary

The Pasico Norfleet, Jr. Post 160 of the American Legion in Greenville will be celebrating its second anniversary beginning at 7:30 p.m. Friday, January 23. The program will take place at the Bachelor Benedict Club, 707 Wyatt Street.

North Carolina Department officers as well as division and district officers will be in attendance.

Keynote speaker will be Hon. Leander Morgan, mayor of New Bern.

People interested in more information are to contact the program chairman, Ben Braswell at 752-1383 or post commander Ernest Brown, 756-0982.

The public is invited to attend.

Poster Contest On Food Safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is using a national poster contest to teach schoolchildren about food safety.

By mid-January, contest kits will be sent to every elementary school in the country, except where forbidden by law. The contest closes March 15.

One winner in each of two categories will receive a $100 U.S. Savings Bond and a trip to Washington, D.C., to attend an awards ceremony.

Additional prizes will also be given, says Donald L. Houston, administrator of the USDA Food Safety and Quality Service.

The contest is part of the USDA's 75th anniversary celebration of the Federal Meat Inspection Act, Houston says.

Urge Expulsion Be Cancelled

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of major Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations have urged the goverment of the Bahamas to cancel an order to expel an estimated 25,000 Haitians, saying it might subject some of them to persecution.

The religious leaders urged Bahamian Prime Minister Lyndon Pindling to at least defer the Jan. 18 effective date of the order to permit time to screen the Haitians "so as to insure that those who have a well-founded fear of persecution are not returned to Haiti."

You Shouldn't Have To Drain Your Savings Account Just To Afford Interest Checking.

At most banks and savings and loans, there's only one way around an interest checking service charge. You have to keep up a high minimum balance.

And to most people, maintaining that balance can mean exhausting a savings account.

We think that's wrong.

Planters has an easier way to help you avoid service charges. With just $500 in savings, you won't have to pay a penny for Planters Interest Checking.

If, by chance, meeting a minimum isn't a problem to you, Planters Interest Checking is also free of service charges when you keep a $1000 minimum in your Interest Checking account. The choice is yours.

WE'D RATHER GIVE YOU SERVICE. NOT A SERVICE CHARGE.

In addition to 5¼% interest, Planters Interest Checking comes with free travelers checks and a free subscription to the monthly financial newsletter, Consumer Views. You may even qualify for a line of credit to use with your Planters Interest Checking account.

PLANTERS INTEREST CHECKING. IT'S REALLY A SIMPLE CHOICE.

Sign up now for your Planters Interest Checking account. It's easy to start. And if you already have a checking account with us, it's even easier. All you have to do is tell us you want Interest Checking.

Interest on checking. You're going to be hearing a whole lot about it from a whole lot of places. But we think all you really need to hear is one very simple thing.

At Planters, you don't have to sacrifice your savings to afford it.

Offer Training To Engineers

NEW YORK (AP) — To acquaint engineers with the possibility of generating electric power from thermal energy — superheated steam from the depths of the earth — the United Nations has established training courses in four countries.

Courses have been established at the University of Auckland, New Zealand, at Kyusu University in Japan, at the International Institute for Geothermal Research in Pisa, Italy, and at the National Energy Authority of Iceland.

Train Game Has Lasted 71 Years

BOSTON (AP) — At one-tenth of a cent per point, it may not be your biggest moving bridge game around. But it could be the oldest.

Begun in 1909 by investment broker Pliny Jewell, Harvard 1899, the bridge game has continued for 71 years on the Concord-to-Boston commuter train run with four regulars, a number of apprentices, fill-ins and vacation reliefers.

"Of course we play for money," said senior partner George Goodspeed, 77, owner of Goodspeed's Book Shop on Boston's Beacon Hill, "but the stakes ... haven't changed since I began. We never did adjust for inflation. If we didn't play for money, then some people might get careless. There's got to be some incentive.

"I'm a little amused that two of the three boys I play with now were born after I got into the game," said Goodspeed, who was initiated in 1938.

"The only thing about the game that is a bit unusual is that it has operated in sort of apostolic succession. As far as I know, there has never been a break in its continuity."

The four senior starters meet on the railroad platform each weekday morning. The junior member, currently Richard Seamans, 35, an investment counselor who has played in various capacities for the past 10 years, is sent onto the train first to get the best seats, usually in the center of the car where there is less motion.

A folded newspaper then is laid across two sets of opposing knees, and the ritual begins while the conductor works the aisles, collecting fares from other inbound commuters.

"If you only play for half an hour going into town, you can't really take enough time to think out the hand," said Goodspeed, "so you have to develop the facility to make quick decisions, right or wrong."

Another regular, stockbroker William K. Bovey, 51, played from 1951 to 1956, then moved from Concord to Boston. He moved back to Concord in 1970, and has been playing ever since. He says he enjoys the "congeniality" of the game, and it also helps keep him awake en route to his State Street office.

Investment counselor Gordon Smith has been playing for 36 years, but, by choice, still is a "fill-in player. I started playing on April 1, 1944, but I don't play in the morning unless I have to. I read my Wall Street Journal and would rather play on the way home."

Any chance the septuagenerian Goodspeed would retire his seat to a young up-and-comer?

"I'm having too much fun to retire," he said, "and I won't until galloping senility overcomes me."

Bird Trip Saturday

BEAUFORT — Hampton Mariners Museum is sponsoring an annual trek to Lake Mattamuskeet in Hyde County to view thousands of waterfowl wintering there.

People in this area who would like to join the trek can meet the group coming up from Beaufort at the Lake headquarters in New Holland at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, January 24.

Fee for those going on their own to join the group is $2. The tour will last until about 1:30 p.m. People taking part are advised to wear layers of warm clothing, and to bring binoculars.

New Weapon In War On Crime

NEW YORK (AP) — Electronics will soon provide another weapon in the war on crime.

The publication MIS Week reports the development of a mobile wireless facsimile machine that can be hooked up to a patrol car's transmitter. It will enable policemen to send and receive identifying pictures while pursuing suspects.

Plain People Are Stealing 'Billions'

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The bartender who "forgets" to ring up every sixth drink, the clerk who wraps four dresses and coarges a friend for one, the waiter who neglects to list items on a diner's check — besides being crooks, these people have something else in common.

They're mostly ordinary Americans, plain folks who have families and homes, who watch television and go to work — where they steal an estimated $15 billion a year from their employers.

A man dedicated to reversing the sting of these thieves is Steve Long, president of Triad Consultants Ltd.

"I'll bet you that any 10 people you see on the street — nine of them stole something once," says the salty, Bronx-born private eye.

Long calls himself a "crook-catcher" and reckons he and his 21 operatives, aided by lie-detectors, recovered nearly $500,000 of $3 million in employee thefts they investigated last year.

"I'm convinced that people never steal out of necessity," he said. "I never met a man who stole a loaf of bread because he was hungry. A lot of theft is spontaneous. People steal because it's there."

Long estimates "80 percent of all shrinkage in retail businesses is attributable to internal factors — not shoplifters."

He said bars are a favorite target of crooked employees, and much of his business comes from owners who can pay in the neighborhood of $450 for eight hours of surveillance and polygraph tests.

"I remember a club, no longer in operation, and a bartender there who once commented that the boss wanted good 'pour-costs.'

"That means a short-pour of a drink," Long translated. He quoted the bartender as admitting, "'...If I take (steal) every fourth drink, it's still going to make my pour-costs look good....I'm just going to cheat the customer a little bit more.'"

Long chortled over the restaurant worker who was finally caught after stealing hundreds of eggs.

"The amount was enormous. He stole every day. It turned out his wife had this religious ritual. She bathed in eggs."

He once caught a restaurant official who didn't think he was stealing, although he cost his boss $20,000 in 10 months.

"What he did was buy drinks (for customers), and he continued buying them drinks and buying them drinks and make them feel guilty, and they would give him a very big tip."

Employees, Long said, "will steal anything....If I want to get rid of my garbage all I have to do is put it in a neat paper bag with a staple on top of it, and put it in front of my door. And the garbage will be stolen."

Movie theaters are regular targets of employee theft, Long said, explaining that the ticket-seller often works with the ticket-taker, who hands you old stubs, palms your tickets and delivers them to the ticket booth for resale.

"We've found people in chains all over the country making $900, $1,000 a night selling tickets over and over," Long said.

Jim Hill, security manager at Macy's on Union Square, estimated that 40 percent of theft from the store last year could be blamed on employees.

Hill said a male worker was caught after it was discovered that $115 was missing from his register on the same day each month.

"What was happening was that he was making his car payments and they were due the next day. He wanted Macy's to pay for his car."

Long, president of the California Academy of Polygraph Sciences, said the lie detector is the heart of his operation. Often the device is so intimidating that the thief confesses before the test can be given.

"I tell people taking tests, 'If you don't want to tell me the truth, leave the room. If you want to tell me the truth and straighten this out, fine.'"

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was lower today in the wake of its biggest Inaugural Day decline in decades.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrial stocks fell 3.75 points in the early going, with losers outnumbering gainers by a greater than 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts attributed the market's negative reaction to the new Reagan administration to, among other things, some disappointment over Reagan's inaugural speech Tuesday.

With gold prices moving higher today in Europe — as much as $14.50 an ounce in London — some mining stocks were rising. Homestake Mining, for example, had gained 1⅝ to 62¼.

Tuesday's decline of 20.31 in the Dow Jones industrial average was its largest drop since Jan. 7, when it fell 23.80.

"WE JUST WANTED THEM TO KNOW WE CARE" — Residents of Greenville Villa Nursing Home hung a yellow ribbon around one of four oak trees in the front yard Tuesday to "let the hostages and their families know we care," explained Activities Director Terry Fuller. "Most people think senior citizens don't know what's going on in the world, but we were talking at breakfast yesterday and several residents expressed a desire to do something to show they were concerned." The residents came up with the idea of the ribbon, and they plan to leave it on the tree "until all 52 are back on American soil." Priscilla Tyson, left, holds the bow while Terry Fuller, activities director, center, and Mrs. Leona Hudson, right, secure the ribbon around the tree. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken) serious concern about the problem of hazardous waste. In general there was a concensus of agreement with suggestions and recommendations offered by the task force members.

Waste Meeting.....

"Many of those present asked about incentives and options available for local industries in taking the initiative in on-site treating of waste.

"Others," she added, "wanted to know about the possibility of setting up a local pickup point for pesticide containers."

Ms. Bode said that the approximately 100 people attending the meeting at North Pitt High School constituted a "very succesful turn out." Several other meetings of the Governor's Task Force on Waste Management are being held in key North Carolina cities.

In an executive summary prepared by task force members outlining facts and recommendations relative to the hazardous waste situation in North Carolina, it is noted that "each year approximately 120 million gallons of hazardous waste and 200,000 cubic feet of low-level radioactive waste is generated in the process of meetings demands for modern day goods and services.

"This volume ranks North Carolina as the 11th largest generator of hazardous waste and the fourth largest generator of low-level radioactive waste in the nation."

Other relevant factors touched on include that in the past, North Carolina generators have relied on facilities "in other states to treat and dispose of" North Carolina's waste materials, but since these states are reducing the amount of material they will accept from out-of-state, "North Carolina must now take responsibility for managing its own waste."

This situation results in an immediate need for the state to "seek an acceptable solution for this problem," at the same time "promoting economic development without jeopardizing the health or environment of its citizens."

Among several recommendations included in the task force executive summary are:

— A comprehensive waste management system to be developed, one emphasizing prevention, resource conservation and recovery, and minimizing the volume of waste placed on or buried in the land.

— The creation of a Governor's Waste Management Board composed of a representative group of people and chaired by the Secretary of the Department of Human Resources to advise the governor on policy issues on waste management.

— Granting of clear authority to to condemn land if necessary to acquire suitable sites, and;

— Giving local governments authority to establish a fee, surcharge, or tax based on actual costs and lost revenues associated with a waste management facility.

Indict Man For Threatening

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A 34-year-old Jacksonville man convicted of threatening the life of former President Gerald Ford has been indicted on charges of threatening the life of President Reagan, officials said.

Norman Lee Slone was indicted by a federal grand jury on Tuesday. U.S. Attorney Gary L. Betz alleged Slone told the Secret Service that he would use a high-powered rifle to carry out his threat.

Slone spent time in prison after being convicted of threatening Ford. He was sentenced in that case to two years in prison.

Self-Proclaimed Shah 'Pleased'

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The self-proclaimed Reza Shah II today welcomed the release of the 52 Americans from Iranian captivity and reiterated his hope for the overthrow of the regime of "darkness and tyranny" under which they were held.

"The ordeal they suffered was sadly perpetrated in the name of the Iranian people, yet no act was more alien to the faith and traditions of the people of Iran," Reza Pahlavi, son of the late shah said. His comments were telexed to news organizations here.

He said he was "confident" that through the efforts of patriotic Iranians the "anguish and suffering" of his countrymen "will end soon." Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi fled Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution in January 1979 and died in exile here last July.

FUTURE FLIGHT

NEW YORK (AP) — Passengers on suborbital supersonic flights someday will arrive anywhere in the world in 30 or 40 minutes, providing they are willing to withstand the absence of gravity, according to one of the inventors of the jet engine, England's Sir Frank Whittle.

At a recent Wings Club meeting here, Whitle said, "Everyday supersonic flight is simply a matter of when government and industry are willing to spend the money."

NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES
PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE STATE PLAN FOR THE LOW INCOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The State of North Carolina proposes to amend the State Plan for the Low Income Energy Assistance Program in the following manner:

A. Payments to Building Operators (Section O)

1. Rather than basing payments to operators on costs incurred for heating during January and February, we propose to use only January's costs in order to get payments to operators more quickly.
2. Building operators will be eligible if 85% or more of their fuel costs have not been compensated by rent increases or operating subsidies.
3. Estimates of eligible tenants were revised, thus reducing the set-aside for operators from $3,212,737 to $160,611.

B. Household Benefit Levels and Payment Schedule

1. Due to the reduced set-aside for building operators and revised estimates of eligible households based upon a sample of applications received for the program (projected through the entire application period), the benefit levels will be raised. The former range was from $39 to $237. The amended benefits will range from $61 to $374. The purpose of raising benefits is to come as close as possible to spending the State's entire Federal allotment.
2. All households receiving payments between January 16 and approval of the amended benefit levels will receive a supplemental check to raise their full benefit amount to the amended level.

The amendments may be reviewed at any county department of social services January 20 through February 9.

Written comments will be taken and should be sent to: North Carolina Division of Social Services, Planning Office, Room 800, 325 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611.

Comments received may be inspected Monday through Friday at the same location beginning January 20 between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Miss Gizzard Shad Named At Grifton

GRIFTON — "Gormina Alce Snodgrass" was named Miss Gizzard Shad of 1981 last Saturday in the second annual womanless beauty pageant, sponsored by the Grifton Jaycees.

First runner-up was "Rhonda Red Dee" and second runner-up was "Cottonella Can Do." "Trixie Trueblood" was selected as Miss Congeniality.

The Gizzard Shad Pageant is a take-off on the Grifton Shad Festival Shad Queen Pageant. The gizzard shad is considered a "trash" fish, not fit for consumption or bait.

According to Shad Festival Publicity Chairman Janet Haseley, the winner "measured 54-44-40 and wore a two-inch five o'clock shadow." Snodgrass outweighed the six other contestants at 220 pounds.

Proceeds from the pageant will be donated to the Grifton Little League and the Babe Ruth organization. Before pageant winners were announced, Jaycee President Mitchell Whaley and Treasurer Fred Johnson presented a $100 check to the Grifton Rescue Squad. The money was raised by the Jaycees at their Halloween Haunted House.

Bundy, Warren Are Assigned

Sam Bundy and Ed Warren, who were elected last November to represent Pitt and Greene Counties in the N.C. House of Representatives, have received their committee assignments.

Bundy, who has served in the General Assembly since 1971, was assigned to seven committees for his new term, including Finance; Education, where he will serve as vice chairman; State Personnel, with a vice chairmanship; Legislative Redistricting, also as vice chairman; Constitutional Amendments; Human Resources; and Retirement.

The Farmville Democrat was also appointed by new House Speaker Liston Ramsey to serve on the Advisory Budget Commission and on the State Board of Awards.

Warren, beginning his first term in the House of Representatives, received a variety of committee assignments, including: Agriculture; Appropriations Base Budget, Natural and Economic Resources; Appropriations Expansion Budget, Natural and Economic Resources; Education; Local Government I; Rules and Operations of the House; and Wildlife Resources.

Piranhas Attack A 'Daredevil'

SEATTLE (AP) — A school of man-eating piranhas attacked a daredevil who dived into their pool and hit his head on the side, according to a spokesman for two area radio stations.

Capt. Alan "America" Jones received stitches for at least eight bites at a hospital Monday night, but said he wanted to try the stunt again Thursday, according to a spokesman for radio stations KYYX and KXA, who sponsored the event at the Seattle Boat Show.

SERVICES

An appreciation service will be held at Moye's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church on U.S. 264 East of Farmville, for Joseph Harvey, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Elder Willie H. Joyner, pastor, said the public is invited to the program.

Knight: ACC Is Toughest

CHICAGO (AP) — Is the Big Ten Conference the toughest college basketball league in the country? Coaches Bobby Knight of Indiana and Lute Olson of Iowa disagree.

"I don't think the Big Ten is the toughest conference in the country," Knight told the Chicago Basketball Writers in a telephone interview Tuesday. "I think the Atlantic Coast Conference is tougher.

"The Big Ten is tough internally, but I think the Atlantic Coast is a better conference," added Knight. "We have good teams in our league but not great teams."

Olson disagreed.

"A year ago Bobby said there weren't too many good teams in the Big Ten," he said. "But the Big Ten placed two teams in the final four of the NCAA and two more teams in the final four of the NIT.

"We have a tendency to underestimate ourselves," Olson added. "I wouldn't be afraid to put Big Ten teams up against anybody."

Indiana and Iowa face each other at Bloomington on Thursday night. Iowa will be going for an unheard-of three-game road sweep in the Big Ten when Olson takes his Hawkeye gang to Indiana.

So far this season Big Ten teams have won eight of 20 games on the road, a surprisingly high percentage.

"It depends on whom you've played and where," said Olson, whose Hawkeyes defeated Wisconsin and Michigan on the road last week. "It won't be anywhere near that percentage by the time the season is over. The most important ingredient of winning on the road is having good, experienced people.

"If you have good players with no experience, you can't win on the road," said Olson. "And you can't win if you have experienced players who are not good. As for ourselves, we'll have to wait and see. We haven't played in the most difficult places."

Knight said he wasn't especially surprised about the victories on the road, which included an important Indiana triumph at Ohio State last Sunday in a nationally-televised game.

"The difference in playing at home and on the road is more mental than physical," said Knight. "The physical aspect remains the same. The baskets all are 10 feet high. If you go at it from the aspect of the home crowds, how do you react when you don't have the home crowd in your favor?"

Bucs Suspend Time, Nip UNCC

CHARLOTTE — Two seconds. It's not much: a hardly significant period of time — most of the time.

But last night in the Charlotte Coliseum, it was a time that seemed suspended. An arching ball headed for the nets in that short time span, seemed to take agonizingly long to get there.

But that ball went through, and it allowed East Carolina to capture a 65-64 overtime victory over UNC Charlotte, the third straight victory for the Pirates, who evened their record at 8-8.

Those two seconds became the bone of contention just a few seconds earlier. With the score tied, Charlotte had the ball at its own end of the court as reserve Matt Houpt, who had been the 49er hero to that point, drove to the basket. He was fouled and the whistle blew.

"I was headed up toward that end of the court to give instructions to the players," East Carolina coach Dave Odom said, "and I happened to glance at the clock just as the whistle blew. There were 11 seconds left."

But, Odom related, when he turned back to the bench and looked up again, only nine seconds remained. Odom called the officials over and asked for the return of the time.

The officials asked the clock operator if the time was correct, and Odom related that the time keeper admitted two seconds had run off before he could stop the clock. The time was returned.

"You won't go in many places and find an official who will admit his mistake," Odom said. "I'd like to shake his hand. It gave us a chance, and his honesty is a shot in the arm for college basketball."

UNCC coach Mike Pratt saw it another way. "Did you see two seconds go off the clock?" he asked the press. "I didn't and I don't think anyone else did except (Odom)."

Nevertheless, those two seconds proved the difference.

Houpt, at the line after the time was straightened out, saw the Pirates call time out to allow him to think about it. Then, when time was back in, he missed the first of two shots. East Carolina again called time — its last — for more psychological work.

Haupt hit this time, giving the 49ers the lead, 64-63. That too may have been a blessing in disguise, since it allowed the Pirates to take the ball out of bounds without the clock starting rather than having to start off a rebound.

The Pirates quickly got it down court, where Morris Hargrove dumped the ball off to Charles Watkins in the lane. His shot, however, bounced off the front of the rim, into the hands of Michael Gibson, who put it back up. That shot was just too long, bouncing off again, this time to Barry Wright on the right baseline about 15 feet out.

His shot, which was at the height of its arch when the horn went off, swished through the nets, and the Pirates had won it.

"I really thought time had

Lady Pirates Home Tonight

East Carolina's Lady Pirates return to action tonight, playing host to West Virginia in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates, who defeated Duke, 79-69, on Monday in their first NCAIAW game, will be seeking their sixth straight win. East Carolina is 12-3 on the year.

Rampants Defeat Hunt

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILSON — Greenville Rose is #1 — for the moment.

Sparked by Donald Johnson's 19 points, 13 of which came in the second half, and a four-corner attack that Wilson Hunt still hasn't solved, the Rampants defeated the Warriors, 57-51, Tuesday night to take undisputed possession of first place in the Division I Conference.

The Rampants are now 11-3 overall and 5-1 in the league while Hunt, which was tied for the lead with Rose going into the game, drops to 8-6 and 4-2.

"Super, super, super," Greenville Rose coach Jim Brewington said as he walked out of his team's lockerroom following the victory. "The kids played like they wanted to be number one."

No one played more like he wanted to be number one than Johnson, although he got plenty of assistance from James Brewington and guards James Perkins and Barry Smith.

First, the guards. From the 2:40 mark of the second period the Rampants stayed almost exclusively with a four-corner attack that had Perkins and Smith controlling the ball out front. How well did the four-corner offense work? Well, the Rampants committed only four turnovers in the spread, thanks mainly to ballhandling of Perkins and Small.

"I thought our two little guards (Perkins and Smith) played well," Brewington said. "They controlled the tempo of the game in the four corners. With the 6-7 kids they have we needed to spread out some and get some room to operate. And being in foul trouble was also part of it."

Brewington, meanwhile, contributed 14 points and also controlled the boards for Rose, pulling down nine rebounds as the Rampants outrebounded a Warrior team that boasts a 6-7 center and two forwards at 6-6 and 6-4, 36-33. Hunt's Anthony Brown led all rebounders with 13.

Then there was Johnson. In foul trouble early and able to score only six points in the first half, Johnson came back in the second half — particularly the fourth quarter — to spark the Rampants.

Less than 30 seconds into the third period Johnson picked up his fourth foul. But before Brewington could get his star forward out Johnson was able to hit two quick buckets to give Rose a 26-22 lead.

Despite playing without Johnson the remainder of the third period, the Rampants clung to the lead. Rose worked its margin to five, 35-30, on two free throws by Brewington with late in the period and led at the end of the period, 39-34.

After stretching its lead to seven, 41-34, early in the final period, Rose saw the Warriors rally to cut the deficit to 43-40 on a jumper by Jerry Strayhorn, who finished with a team-high 16 points.

Perkins, however, drove the middle and lofted a short jumper toward the goal that appeared short. However, Tracy Miles, who had 12 points for the Warriors and nine rebounds, was called for goaltending to give Rose a 45-40 lead with 4:15 left.

The Warriors never got closer then four the rest of the game, thanks to Johnson, who scored nine of his team's last 12 points on two jumpers, two follow shots and one free throw.

"Our big man (Johnson) got in foul trouble early and that hurt us," Brewington said. "But he played superb in the fourth quarter."

It was Wilson Hunt, however, that did most of the playing in the first quarter. The Warriors led after the first eight minutes, 14-4, in a quarter that saw them shoot 50 percent (6 of 12) while Rose hit only seven

Listless Maryland Wins, Faces Irish Saturday

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Buck Williams admitted to being bored at times, but the feeling didn't last long.

The 6-foot-8 Maryland center scored 24 points and grabbed 15 rebounds, sparking the listless 10th-ranked Terps to an 81-65 victory over Maryland Eastern Shore in a non-conference basketball game Tuesday night.

Maryland was the only Atlantic Coast Conference team that saw action Tuesday.

"It's hard to get up for a game like this," Williams said of the contest against the outmanned branch of the university. "But they kind of opened our eyes."

The losing Hawks, after falling behind 25-10, cut the deficit to 41-36 at halftime and had Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell squirming in his seat.

"I'd rather not say what I said at halftime," Driesell replied in answer to a question. But he left no doubt that it concerned a Maryland defense which allowed the Hawks to shoot 53 percent from the floor in the opening 20 minutes.

"You can't play defense on your reputation," Driesell complained after the Terps ran their record to 13-3. "They were standing around like they were big shots or something. The defense was horrible."

Mario Barkley hit eight of 11 shots in the first half for Maryland Eastern Shore, but then went 3-for-9 as the Hawks slumped to 27 percent under a revived Maryland defense in the second half.

"The first half was the best we've shot from the floor all year," said Coach Kirkland Hall of the Hawks. "But I think we got a little tired. Williams was the difference in the game. When they needed a basket, they went straight to him."

"In a way, we were focusing on Saturday's game against Notre Dame," said Williams. "We were not playing as hard in the first half as we could, and we weren't getting the ball inside."

"It's said to say," added Albert King, "but we were looking ahead and we had just come off a big win."

Pistons Streak Ends As 76ers Fall Apart

By The Associated Press

With 3½ minutes to go in Pontiac, Mich., everything was going according to form. The Philadelphia 76ers, the winningest team in the National Basketball Association, held a 75-71 lead over the Detroit Pistons, who had lost their last nine games.

And then, suddenly, the Sixers fell apart. They were held scoreless for the remainder of the game as the Pistons reeled off the final 12 points and walked away with a stunning 83-75 victory.

The 75 points tied the lowest output ever for Philadelphia, which also was held to 75 in games against Cleveland in 1973 and Washington in 1974.

"This was by far the worst game we've played all year," said Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham, who was ejected in the second period and watched the second half from high in the Silverdome stands.

"I don't know what offense we were running," said Cunningham. "It wasn't anything we taught the guys. We were just bouncing the ball around out there with all those turnovers (27). We have to get ourselves going in the right direction. We can't just be thinking about Boston."

The loss trimmed Philadelphia's lead over the second-place Celtics in the Atlantic Division to just one game.

Detroit Coach Scotty Robertson said his club played its "best game of the year" in upsetting Philadelphia. It was only the third victory in the last 24 starts for the Pistons, whose 12-38 record is the second-worst in the league.

"Defense is going to win games for us because our big scorers are still out," said Robertson, referring to injuries to Bob McAdoo and John Long. "But I never thought we'd hold Philadelphia to 75 points."

After the 76ers led 75-71, Detroit drew even on a jumper by Keith Herron and two free throws by Kent Benson tied the game. A jumper by Terry Tyler with 1:36 left put the Pistons on top 77-75, then Herron followed with another basket, Phil Hubbard hit two free throws and Ron Lee added a basket to wrap up the victory.

Spurs 119, Suns 112, OT

Mark Olberding, who scored just four points in the first three quarters, got 14 the fourth quarter and overtime to lead Midwest Division leader San Antonio over Pacific Division leader Phoenix.

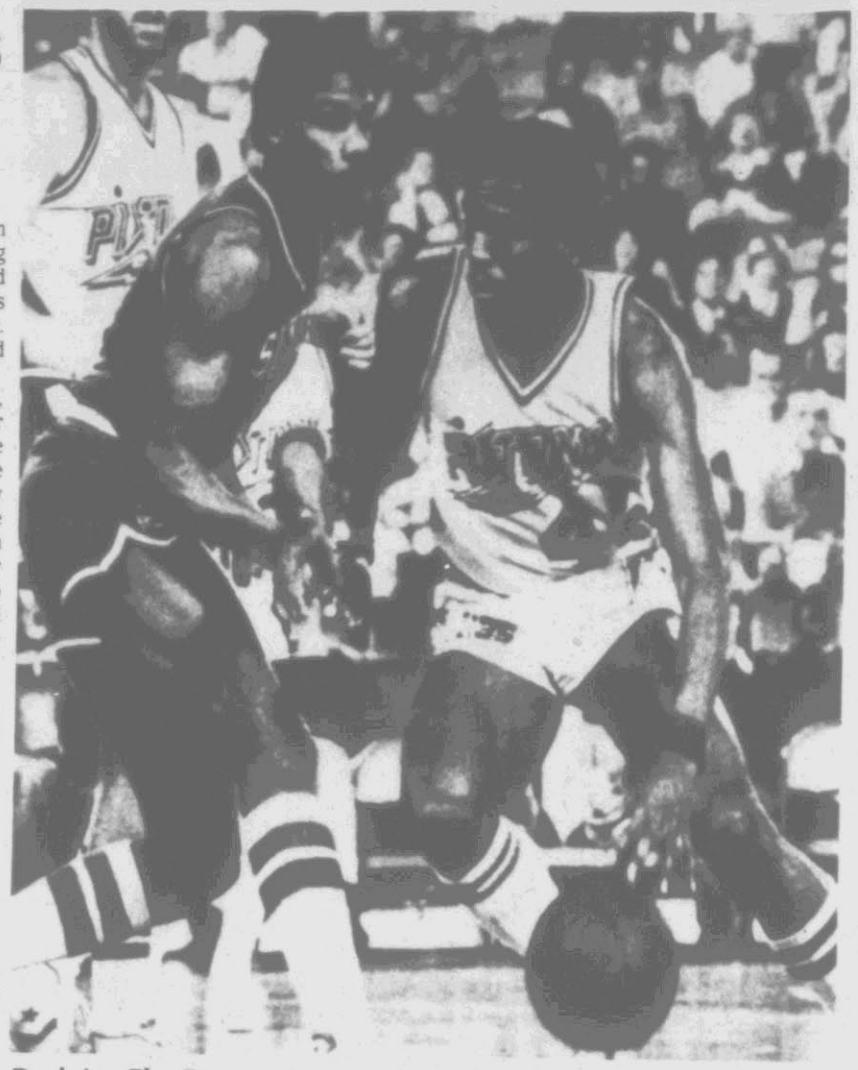
San Antonio outscored Phoenix 19-10 in the five-minute overtime, with Olberding's jumper with 1:27 to go putting the Spurs ahead to stay.

Bullets 121, Jazz 113

Kevin Grevey scored 12 of his season-high 30 points in the third quarter, when the Bullets outscored the Jazz 30-17 to pull away. Greg Ballard added 28 points and Elvin Hayes had 25 as Washington handed Utah its fifth straight loss.

Bulls 121, Pacers 105

Chicago's two All-Stars paced its victory over Indiana. Guard Reggie Theus scored 31 points and handed out 15 assists and center Artis Gilmore added 25 points and grabbed 20 rebounds.



Dodging The Doctor

Kings 104, Mavericks 91

Kansas City jumped to a 34-17 first-quarter lead and was never caught in snapping its four-game losing streak. The Kings led by as many as 29 points in the second quarter and by 30 early in the final period.

Cavaliers 99, Blazers 94

Portland led 30-14 at the quarter and 49-39 at the half, but Cleveland came up with 60 points in the second half to win.

Knicks 98, Sonics 97

A Tale Of 2 Knees

Jagged Scars Souvenirs Of NFL For Eagle Linebackers Bergey, Bunting

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There is a link between Philadelphia linebackers Bill Bergey and John Bunting that goes much deeper than the full beards they wear or the fact that they play side-by-side in the Eagles' 3-4 defense.

It is the jagged scars that run along their left knees, the souvenirs of injuries that very nearly ended their football careers.

On Sunday, Bergey and Bunting will face the Oakland Raiders in Super Bowl XV. It is the game that pro football players wait a lifetime to play but for these two Eagle linebackers, it means so much more.

Bunting tore up his knee at New England in October, 1978. He spent the next year rehabilitating it and by sheer determination, he battled his way back into the starting lineup by the beginning of the 1979 season.

Bunting was just getting accustomed to playing again when lightning struck the Eagles' linebacking corps again.

In the third game of the 1979 season, Philadelphia was playing New Orleans in the Louisiana Superdome, where the Super Bowl game will be played Sunday. Bergey will never forget the game or what happened.

"It was down at that end of the field," he said, motioning toward an end zone. "It was a sweep, second play of the game. Chuck Muncie was carrying the ball. We were in a 3-4 defense (with three rushing linemen and four linebackers) and I started outside.

"My foot caught in the seam of the turf and just then Conrad Dobler hit me. I couldn't get my leg out of the turf. I heard a pop, three times, the kind you hear when you crack the knuckles in your hand"

Bergey went down and on the ground he watched the tackle being made.

"Bunting made the stop and it's ironic. We had the same injury, stitch for stitch. On the play when I went down, making the tackle gave him the confidence he needed to know he could play again."

Bergey limped to the sidelines with ligament and cartilage damage. That night he underwent extensive surgery. At age 34, his career seemed in very real jeopardy.

"Never once did I think of not coming back," he said. "When I was on the operating table and I realized I had the same injury as John, I thought to myself 'Oh no.' I knew what he had gone through. And then I thought, 'But he came back from his knee and he's playing.' Bunting was my guiding light."

Bergey said he had to learn to play football all over again. "Sometimes I'd fall down, like a child just learning to walk."

There was plenty of pain and anguish on the road to recovery but Bergey doesn't regret his sacrifice one bit.

"I have cherished every moment since I've been back," he said. "You get a whole new perspective once you've had to sit out for awhile."

Johnson's role is the most interesting.

"My responsibility is to play the run," he said. "I'm the running specialist. That's what they tell me. If I do my job successfully, I come out of the lineup, because we force them to pass and they'll bring in Ken Clarke or Claude Humphrey for those downs."

Hairston will play the run in the 3-4 alignment and then rush the passer when the Eagles switch to the conventional four-man front. Harrison plays out on the tackle, protecting that side of the line.

Behind those three are the linebackers, including the gimpy-kneed partners on the left side, Bergey and Bunting.

Someone asked Bergey when he knew his knee was stable again and he repeated some advice offered to him by Marion Campbell, the Eagles' defensive coordinator.

"Campbell said the first time there's a big pileup, you stick your leg in and twist it around a little," Bergey said. "Then you pull it out and if it's intact, then you can play football."

Pitt Whips Methodist

LITTLEFIELD — Frankie Dail pumped in 21 points and Dennis Batts added 17 to lead Pitt Community College to a 93-87 win over the Methodist College junior varsity team Tuesday night.

The Paladians, now 10-2, took several bigs leads in the first half only to lose them to Methodist. Pitt led at the half, 50-43, but was then outscored in the second half, 44-43, as Methodist refused to buckle under the Pitt speed and pressure defense.

"At times we played rather well but we weren't able to hold several big leads," Pitt C.C. coach Linwood Woodard said. "We worked the ball inside well at times but I think we thought we had the victory too soon.

"At times we played good defense, but the officials called it tight and we had three players with four fouls on the floor at times in the second half and it's very hard to play as well as we could because of that."

Joining Dail and Batts in double figures for Pitt were Dennis Pitt with 14, Jeff Tyson with 13 and Mike Baker with 11. Methodist was led by Eric Bell's game-high 22 points. Billy Thomas added 18 for the visitors while Curtis Scarborough added 15, Dino Tyson 14 and Bernard Crump 12.

Pitt plays in the Apprentice School Tournament in Newport News, Va., Friday and Saturday.

Methodist (87) — Crump 5 2-2 12, Scarborough 5 5-8 15, Tyson 6 2-2 14, McAlister 0 0-0 0, Thomas 9 0-0 18, Huebner 0 2-2 2, Doughty 2 0-1 4, Bell 9 4-7 22. Totals 36 15-22 87.

Pitt C.C. (93) — Batts 7 3-9 17, C. Horne 4 0-2 8, Tyson 6 1-3 13, Baker 5 1-3 11, Bail 8 5-5 21, Pitt 6 2-2 14, M. Horne 3 3-6 9. Totals 39 15-29 93.

Navratilova Wins Opener

CINCINNATI (AP) — Martina Navratilova, the world's third-ranked women's tennis player, remembered how she played and felt when she was 16 after beating a 17-year-old local hopeful in the $150,000 Avon Women's Tennis Championship of Cincinnati.

The top-seeded Navratilova beat young Beth Herr of Centerville, the Ohio high school girls champion, 6-1, 6-3 in the first round Tuesday night.

"Beth said she was nervous playing one of the best players in the world, but I played Evonne Goolagong when I was 16 and I was so excited I played my best game. I lost 6-4, 6-4, and that was just one service break in each set," she said.

"I tried to think about the match instead of the stadium and the crowd."

D.H. Conley To Battle Southern Nash Saturday

ECC PREVIEW

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

D.H. Conley passed its latest Eastern Carolina Conference test and the team that has as much if not more talent than any in the league could be ready to use that talent to its utmost the remainder of the season.

Ironically, just when the Vikings are beginning to play up to their potential they must take a week's break from the court.

Conley, coming off a 62-49 win at North Lenoir last Friday, does not play again until Saturday night when the Vikings play host to Southern Nash, a team that Conley lost to the fourth game of the season, 55-53.

D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh does not believe the layoff will hurt. Still, if he had a choice his club wouldn't have to wait until Saturday to play its next game.

"I'd rather be playing two games this week," Marsh said. "But I don't think it will affect us. It may take a little bit of the edge off, but not that much."

It's that edge, which has been both sharp and dull this season, that worries Marsh.

"We're coming off probably our best game of the season Friday night and you want to try and keep that going if you can," said Marsh, who was anything but pleased following his team's 45-43 win Tuesday night over Farmville Central.

"Last week I said we ought to snap out of the way we had been playing, I just didn't know when," Marsh said. "We did that Friday night. Now I think the kids are ready for the rest of the season. I see them walking up and down the hall and they seem to be in a real good frame of mind."

Whether the Vikings can maintain that frame mind the remainder of the season will have a lot to do with their conference finish. Presently, Conley is 11-4 overall and 7-2 in the league, a mere game behind league-leading Greene Central, the only team besides Southern Nash to defeat Conley in conference play.

Going into Saturday's game with the Firebirds, the Vikings are the #1 team in the league in scoring defense, allowing just 46.6 points a game and are also tops in victory margin, at 9.3.

Southern Nash, which is 9-6 overall and 6-3 in the league, on the other hand, is the league's top offensive team, averaging 65.6 points a game. The Firebirds, led by Anthony Crummel's average of 10.4 rebounds, are also the ECC's top rebounding team, pulling down just over 39 rebounds a game. The Vikings, one of the tallest teams in the league, are last in rebounding, averaging 26.3 rebounds per contest.

"Southern Nash matches up sizewise with us. They've got a lot of guys in the 6-4, 6-5 range and they're strong, a lot stronger than we are," Marsh said. "They're also more experienced than we are and it should really be an interesting game. They really play hard for the offensive rebound and we'll have to do well on the boards to win the ballgame."

In their first meeting, guard McCullen Wiggins scored 18 points and Crummel 10 to lead the Firebirds. "Wiggins hurt us from outside and Crummel did the job inside," Marsh said. "I think we'll try to put a man and a half on Crummel. They're point guard — Curtis Thompson — isn't a prolific scorer and we think we can force him to shoot some." Thompson is, however, the league's top assist man, averaging nearly seven a game.

Although Marsh is not ready to call a win Saturday crucial, he does admit his club needs to win if they hope to take the conference crown.

"At this point, only one game behind, this is a really important game," Marsh said. "A loss wouldn't put us out of it, but to have a chance to win the title outright it would hurt us a lot."

In other games this week, Ayden-Grifton (7-7, 5-3), which had its four-game winning streak halted Saturday night in a 48-46 loss to Roanoke, plays host to Farmville Central (1-14, 1-8) Friday night, one night after the Jaguars play host to North Pitt (7-8, 6-3). The Panthers travel to Southwest Edgecombe (2-13, 1-8) Friday night.

Greene Central (12-3, 8-1), meanwhile, tries to protect its one-game lead when it plays hot to C.B. Aycock (1-12, 1-8).

In other games this, Greenville Christian travels to Falls Road Thursday night in a meeting of two of the conference's unbeaten teams. Both are 3-0 in the league.

On Friday, Bear Grass travels to Chocowinity, Edenton travels to Roanoke and Jamesville journeys to Belhaven.

In wrestling this week, Williamston goes to North Pitt and Conley plays host to Havelock Thursday. Friday, North Pitt travels to Farmville Central before playing host to Conley Saturday.

EBA Drops Two

BERTIE — LaVerne Rogan scored 19 points and Dail Sand and Chris Lang added 10 to lead Bertie to a 65-63 win over E.B. Aycock Tuesday night in a junior high basketball game.

Aycock now 0-5, was led by Mack Walston's 18 points. Tray Fuqua added 13 and William Powell 10 for Aycock.

In the girls' game, Bertie defeated E.B. Aycock, 42-24. Andrea Gillam had 10 for the winners while Aycock was led by Doris Richardson's 15 points.

EBA plays host to Wilson Fike today.

Sadler Jumper Lifts Tigers Past Aces

Earlier, Edenton grabbed off the girls' game, 39-36.

In the boys' game, Edenton and Williamston fought even most of the way. It was 14-14 at the end of the fist period, with the Aces inching in front, 28-27, at intermission. In the third period, Williamston came back, 15-12, and the Tigers gained a 42-40 lead at the end of the quarter. Both pushed through 17 points in the final quarter, with Sadler providing the key shot.

Tom Bennett led the Williamston scoring with 17, while Vincent Washington and Chrish Peel each hitting 15. Sadler added ten. For Edenton, Lee Lilley had 19 and Elbert Wilder had 14.

In the girls' game, Williamston took an 11-6 lead in the first period and built that to 21-15 at halftime. But in the third quarter, the Aces rallied, 12-4, and moved into a 27-25 lead. They outshot the Tigerettes, 12-11, in the final quarter.

Kathy Blount led Edenton with 30 points, while Gail Smith and Ginger Edwards each had ten for Williamston.

The Tigers travel to Roanoke Rapids on Friday.

last Saturday, play host to 13th ranked Notre Dame Saturday in a nationally televised contest.

King went to the bench with an injured right shoulder, after being hit by a Williams' elbow while battling for a rebound, and didn't play the last 16 minutes. He scored only seven points, snapping a streak of 48 consecutive games in which he had scored in double figures.

"I didn't know about the streak until after the game," said King. "I could have played, but why come back in and take a chance of getting hurt worse with a big game coming up."

Ernest Graham had 21 points and five assists for the Terps, while starting guards Greg Manning and Reggie Jackson each contributed four assists. Barkley finished with 22 points for the Hawks, now 8-7, and Alan Faulks had 17.

"This was a good experience for our players," said Hall. "It gave them a chance to play against a top-rated club. If they invite us, we'll be glad to play them again next year. We already have a contract to play Clemson next year. We're going to scare some people."

Looking For Help

run out," Wright said. "But I shot it anyway."

It marked the second time this year that the Pirates had gone into an overtime. And they won both games. For Odom, it marks a five-for-five skein in overtimes at East Carolina.

And just as in the earlier overtime, against UNC-Asheville, the Pirates got the tieing bucket on a shot by Mark McLaurin. That came with two seconds left in regulation play, after the Pirates had suffered through a horrible final ten minutes.

Up 55-47 with 9:53 left, the Pirates scored only two more points before McLaurin's final shot, going six and a half minutes without any points as UNCC charged back behind two baskets each by Houpt and Donnie Koonce.

Koonce hit with 55 seconds left to put the 49ers back into the lead, but the Pirates effectively controlled it until eight seconds were left, then called time out.

"This and the UNC—Wilmington game are two games I feel our team has been together offensive and defensively," Odom said, adding that he was referring to the mechanical end of the game, not the mental. "I think maybe we're beginning to find ourselves.

"The most important thing was our willingness to compete under adverse conditions. This is no reflection on the officiating, but I don't think we got a marginal call in the second half. I only bring it up because it shows our young players are learning to face adversity and still succeed."

The coach admitted that the return of the two seconds was the key to the game. "I think we got the ball up court in plenty of time, but we had no set person to take the shot. I think McLaurin wanted to get the ball for the shot, but we ended up going to the other side, away from him."

Odom then laughed. "Wright's basket," he said, "was our third option off the play."

It wasn't a pretty game. East Carolina shot only 35.3 per cent, including just 26.8 in the first half. Charlotte hit on 46.4 per cent of their shots, including 52 per cent in the second half.

The Pirates went to the boards well, especially on the offensive end, and that helped them keep in the game in the first half and hold the lead most of the second. East Carolina held a 43-38 overall rebounding edge.

But the Pirates, after getting several outlet passes on defensive rebounds, had trouble getting their fast break going. On six different occasions, they were open for layups — missing each of them. That could have turned a close game into a rout. Two of those misses came during the final six minutes when the Bucs were begging for a basket.

In rebounding, East Carolina had three different players snag ten each, Gibson, Tom Szymanski and Hargrove.

After taking the initial lead, the Pirates fell behind as Melvin Johnson sparked UNCC to eight straight points and a 12-6 lead with 14:44 left in the first half. East Carolina caught up at 14-14, but again fell behind as Charlotte outscored it, 11-3 over the next five minutes.

Late in the half, the Pirates pulled within one at 1:09, then took the lead on two free throws by Bill McNair, 33-32, with 48 seconds left. Wright added two more free throws and David Underwood got one in the remaining time for a 36-32 lead, but Koonce hit at the horn to cut the ECU lead to 36-34 at the horn.

East Carolina scored the first two baskets of the second half to go up by six, 40-34, and eased that out to 55-47 with 9:53 left.

After that, the Pirates, in a stiff zone defense, saw a lot of time go off the clock, but it seemed to cool the Bucs too, and Houpt's two long bombs provided the spark that allowed Charlotte to come back.

"Our zone did a good job against them when they only had two good perimeter shooters in there," Odom said. "But when they came in with Houpt, too, that gave them three, and we had to go back to man-to-man."

Houpt got the opening basket in the overtime, giving UNCC the initial lead. East Carolina tied it on a jumper in the lane by Gibson, then moved ahead when Watkins made two free throws. Roland VanDenBergh hit from underneath to tie it up with 3:02 left, and after both teams missed chances, UNCC controlled the ball for over two minutes before Houpt drove under and was fouled with 9 — make that 11 — seconds left.

East Carolina placed four players in double figures. Watkins led with 14, while Gibson had 13, Wright had 12 and Szymanski had 10. Koonce led UNCC with 14, while Johnson had 10.

Charlotte, in the midst of a six-game losing streak, fell to 6-9.

Rice Latest To Beat Aggies

By The Associated Press

At the start of the college basketball season, Texas A&M was supposed to be the team to beat in the Southwest Conference.

And that's exactly what's been happening so far.

Just about everybody in the SWC is beating the Aggies these days, including Rice Tuesday night by a 54-50 score.

"This was a tremendous win for Rice University," said Coach Mike Schuler. "Over the year, I have felt we would be a good team and do well. And tonight was a big one for us. We haven't beaten A&M since I have been the coach but tonight we didn't back off."

The loss was the fourth in five SWC games for Texas A&M. And the Owls beat the Aggies' great front line to the punch, holding superstars Vernon Smith and Rynn Wright to a mere total of 11 points.

"I thought our guards really battled," noted Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf. "We just didn't get what we needed out of our front line. I don't believe we'll win a game that Rynn and Vernon get 11 points combined. We just depend on them too much."

Only one ranked team was in action Tuesday night in a relatively light schedule. In that game, No. 10 Maryland beat Maryland-Eastern Shore 81-65.

Kenny Austin scored 20 points for Rice and a sagging, aggressive zone defense did the rest for the Owls. It was the first time that Rice has beaten Texas A&M in 15 games, dating back to 1973.

The Owls led by as much as 11 points early in the second half, but had to blunt a furious Aggie rally late in the game. Reggie Roberts led the Aggie scoring with 14 points, 10 of them in the second-half rally.

"Kenny Austin was they key to this win but all of them deserve credit because that was a very good basketball team we beat tonight," said Schuler. "It was a credit to our kids that they withstood the charge by the Aggies in the second half. I was concerned, but did not feel that the Aggies could continue hitting as well as they did in that stretch."

Metcalf: "Kenny Austin is their worst foul shooter, but when we fouled him he stepped up there and knocked them in. Rice played well. Austin has really improved. I didn't realize he was so quick. He was the difference in the ballgame."

Gymnasts Face Duke, Terps

East Carolina's gymnastics team hits the road this week for two meets with Atlantic Coast Conference squads.

Wednesday night the Pirates travel to Durham to face Duke, a team that finished second in the state last year to UNC-Chapel Hill. The Pirates follow that with a Friday night battle with Maryland in College Park.

"We're looking to score 118 points up at Duke," ECU gymnastics coach Jon Rose said. "We're expecting some strong competition up there. Duke was second to Chapel Hill in the state last year by less than a point.

As for Maryland, Rose said, "This should be another tough battle. Hopefully, we looking forward to the return of Nan George after knee surgery."

ECU is 2-4 this season.

Roanoke Girls Lose First

Redskins Whip Roanoke, 63-47

PLYMOUTH — Maurice Chance poured in 20 points and Angelo Spruill added 14 to lead Roanoke to an easy 63-47 win over Plymouth Tuesday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Roanoke's 14-game unbeaten streak came to an end when Plymouth nipped the Lady Redskins, 46-45.

In the boys' game, Roanoke, now 13-2 overall and 6-1 in the league, edged out to a 13-10 lead after the first period and led at the half, 25-20. A 16-7 third period gave the Redskins a 41-27 lead which they maintained the rest of the contest.

Joining Chance and Spruill in double figures for Roanoke was Michael Wilson with 13 points. Plymouth, now 8-4 and 4-3, did not have anyone in double figures.

In the girls' game, Roanoke led in the early going only to see Plymouth take the lead in the third period and hold off a Redskin rally.

Trailing 46-44 with 12 seconds left, Wanda Roberson connected on the second of a two free throws to cut the gap to 46-45.

The Redskins then stole the inbounds pass but Roberson was called for traveling. Plymouth then ran out the clock to hand Roanoke its first loss of the season. Roanoke is now 6-1 in the league while Plymouth improves to 8-4 overall and 5-2 in the conference.

Roanoke, which was led by Sylvia Parker's 20 points, led after the first period, 15-10, only to see Plymouth knot the score at 24-24 at intermission. The winners then took a five point (39-34) lead at the close of the third quarter before holding off the Redskins.

Saint GM Resigns; Phillips' Hiring Appears Near

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With the resignation of General Manager Steve Rosenbloom, it appears likely that former Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips will be named head coach of the New Orleans Saints before the Super Bowl on Sunday.

Chances of an early announcement had dimmed over Senior Bowl week as Phillips, Rosenbloom and Saints owner John Mecom Jr. said there were still several details to be ironed out before an agreement could be reached.

Although all three repeatedly brushed it off as an easily resolved detail earlier, the issue of who would control team personnel apparently became an impassable barrier.

As coach and general manager at Houston, Phillips had total control of drafts and trades. Rosenbloom said he had that authority with the Saints, working through Dick Steinberg, his hand-picked vice president for personnel.

"I already have a general manager," Mecom said earlier, when he was asked if the issue of player personnel could be a stumbling block to hiring Phillips.

Mecom, Rosenberg and Steinberg met Tuesday. When Rosenbloom could not get a commitment to building through the draft, with him and Steinberg continuing to make personnel decisions, they both quit, the AP learned.

Their brief statement made no mention of the struggle. None of those involved could be reached for followup comment.

The resignation statement said:

"We came to the Saints with a mutual understanding and agreement in philosophy with the ownership on how to construct a stable winning organization.

"It has been apparent for some time that there exists a difference of opinion regarding how these goals should be approached. Under these circumstances, we feel that this decision is the best for all concerned.

"We do not feel that further comment on the situation is necessary."

Last Saturday, Mecom gave the first hints that he was becoming disenchanted with Rosenbloom. He said he didn't like Rosenbloom's describing the Saints' 8-8 record in 1979 as "cosmetic," among other things.

Rosenbloom joined the Saints after that 1979 season, the team's best ever, and before this year's skid to 1-15. He said his job was never in jeopardy but joined with Mecom in firing Coach Dick Nolan with four games left in the season.

Mecom has not announced that he is going to hire Phillips, but he said Monday that Phillips was 99 percent sure to be the next New Orleans coach.

No news conference has been scheduled to announce the new coach.

Rosenbloom grew up in the NFL, son of the late Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Baltimore Colts and later the Los Angeles Rams.

After his father's death, the control of the Rams passed to Rosenbloom's stepmother. They had personal differences and Rosenbloom left Los Angeles and joined the Saints.

The Houston Chronicle quoted Mecom as saying Monday he had "decided on Bum" and an official announcement will be made as soon as he confers with Pete Rozelle, National Football League commissioner.

Mecom said he had been unable to reach Rozelle, who reportedly was in Washington for President Reagan's inauguration.

Phillips said he was looking forward to tackling his second rebuilding job.

"Anybody can do good in one place," he said. "I'm looking forward to the opportunity to do good in two places. I've said it a million times, but that's what Don Shula did in Baltimore and Miami. Now John Mecom has given me the opportunity to do it."

Phillips was fired after the Oilers lost to the Oakland Raiders 27-7 in the wild card game of the American Football Conference championship playoffs.

The announced reason for the firing was a difference of opinion over whether he should have an offensive coordinator. Phillips had a career record of 59-38 with the Oilers.

Rose did l... ter from the field in t... d period (the Rampant... nine of 34 at the break), ... the Warriors managed to look as bad in the second quarter as Rose did in the first and quickly lost the lead.

Rose outscored Hunt, 16-2, the first five minutes of the second period to take a 20-16 lead which they held until Hunt scored two buckets in the last 20 seconds to tie the game at 22-22 at halftime.

The Rampants, who shot 58.3% in the second half and 33.8% (23 of 68) for the game, then broke away early in the third quarter to take a lead they maintained the rest of the game.

For now, the Rampants are just that.

In the girls' game, Wilson Hunt, paced by Ann Ellen's game-high 16 points, surged to an 11-4 lead after the first period and then extended its lead to 10 at intermission en route to the 24-point victory.

The Lady Warriors, who also got 10 points each from Bridgette Davis, led by as many as 26 in the second half in recording their sixth win of the season in 14 outings.

Rose, which never got closer than 10 after halftime, was led by Frances Barnhill's 14 points and Jamie Teel's 11. Rose drops to 0-11 overall and 0-6 in the league.

"When you shoot 20% like we did you can't even beat yourself," Rose coach Dennis Gibson said. "They're (Hunt) not that good but I think we've just hit bottom right now and we need to start climbing back up.

"We've got to start going to the boards and get better percentage shots," Gibson said. "We're also making too many mental mistakes and it's too old in the season for that."

Greenville plays host to Northeastern Friday night.

Hostage Negotiator Has Reputation As Persuader

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Warren Christopher, chief U.S. negotiator for the release of the Americans held hostages in Iran, was always successful when he had to persuade someone to do something.

"When I saw he was handling the negotiations I knew the Algerians would be charmed by his personality and impressed by his intelligence," said Brown, who employed Christopher in a variety of ticklish tasks during the first six years of his governorship.

"He had to negotiate with the Legislature and everybody was impressed by his thoroughness and clarity of mind," Brown said.

Christopher, 55, a native of Scranton, N.D., emigrated to California as a teen-ager. He served in the the Pacific during World War II and left the Navy as a lieutenant, j.g., then graduated magna cum laude from the University of Southern California and attended Stanford Law School.

He was a law clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Douglas and joined the Los Angeles law firm of O'Melveny and Myers.

One member of the firm, Donn Miller, had no comment Tuesday on whether Christopher would become a partner again now that his service in the Carter administration has ended.

But Miller extolled the numerous cases Christopher handled free of charge, his public service work in legal organizaions and his work on some of the firm's most intricate cases.

As president of the Los Angeles County Bar Association Christopher was lauded by some as the man responsible for turning what was a social club into a bar association with a social conscience.

From 1974 to 1975, Christopher appointed a committee to study deportation and removal of illegal aliens, which led to the filing of a court brief challenging the legality of roadside immigrant checkpoints; prompted the association to ban meetings at any club or hall which engaged in racial or sexual discrimination; and set up a committee to make a report on impeachment law just before the resignation of President Richard Nixon.

Brown, father of Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., credited Christopher for doing the first studies on smog and with setting up the air quality board in Southern California. He said Christopher was also instumental in setting up standards for the university, state college and community college systems.

In 1967, Christopher went off to Washington as a deputy attorney general. Assignments to help calm the riots in Detroit and Washington brought him into close contact with then-President Lyndon Johnson's personal envoy, Cyrus Vance.

When Vance became secretary of state under Carter in 1977, he lured Christopher back to Washington as his top deputy.

His new assignments included rallying Senate support for the Panama Canal treaties and the sale of advanced jet fighters to Saudi Arabia and lifting the arms embargo on Turkey. He also was the man sent to Europe to explain Carter's reasons for boycotting the Olympics and for not deploying the neutron bomb.

"He is a hero," said Brown. "As a governor, you come to know a lot of people, and I may know people who would equal him in stature, but I don't know anyone whom I would regard as a better human being and public official."

Brown said he was confident Christopher would be able to bring off the hostage release because "he never loses his temper, he's calm and he's patient."

Played Golf On Inaugural Day

MIAMI (AP) — Though he spent three months helping Ronald Reagan get elected, former President Gerald Ford spent inauguration day on a golf course here while his wife, Betty, stayed at home in California.

There's no ill feeling between the two Republicans, but "there's nothing I can do now but get in the way," Ford explained Tuesday.

"I've been to eight inaugurals before — this is Ronald Reagan's day," Ford said before teeing off at Doral Country Club. "My wife, Betty, and I worked very hard to campaign for Reagan's election, and now that it's over, we thought it would be better to step into the background."

Reagan challenged Ford for the Republican nomination in 1976, Ford won but was defeated by Jimmy Carter. The two Republicans patched up their differences in time for the 1980 campaign.

French Winemaker Is Pushing The Biltmore Label

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — In the shadow of the stately Biltmore House, high in the Blue Ridge Mountains, a French winemaker is working to put the name Chateaux Biltmore on the lips of wine connoisseurs all over the world.

Wine is already flowing on the 12,00-acre Biltmore Estate. From last fall's harvest, 10,000 bottles of red and white wines bearing the labels Biltmore and Biltmore Estate are now being aged.

But winemaker Phillippe Jourdain, who nutures and prunes the estate's 75-acre vineyard and sips and tests the aging wines, is still working on the production of the premium Chateaux Biltmore wine.

Jourdain, who jokes that he was born in a wine barrel, and Biltmore owner William Cecil, grandson of Biltmore founder George Vanderbilt, won't settle for anything less than the best wine for the prized Chateaux Biltmore label.

"It would have to be the very best we can produce," said Cecil. "The lady on the hill (the Biltmore House) would demand that."

The idea of a vineyard on the Biltmore Estate was conceived in 1970. A year later, Cecil planted a three-acre experimental vineyard, which has been growing steadily ever since, creeping over the rolling hills above the French Broad River.

The vineyard is part of a long-range plan to make the estate self-sufficient. Currently, George Cecil, William's brother, operates the dairy while William makes the house and gardens a tourist showplace.

According to Cecil, vineyards aren't new to the western North Carolina area. Before Prohibition in the 1920, Valdese in the foothills had vineyards and a winery. Small vineyards also were grown in other parts of the mountains.

But one reason Cecil and Jourdain are so excited about the Biltmore vineyards is the type of grape being cultivated there. The Biltmore grapes are a variety called the Zinifera, a delicate French grape. Recently, the French vine has been successfully grafted onto hardy American vines.

Biltmore's experiments with Zinifera grapes have shown that they thrive in the area's moderate climate — warm days and cool nights.

"That's one of the biggest advantages of this area — the difference in day and night tempertures," Cecil said.

Meanwhile, the Biltmore winery is nowhere near making a proifit. The winemaking business is risky and expensive and it takes years to see a return from an investment — sometimes there is never a profits.

"Winemaking isn't for those who are impatience or anxious to see a return on their dollar," Cecil said. "Winemaking is a very slow process and it's always a very expensive one."

Cecil is not discouraged by his vineyard's slow progress. He hopes to eventually plant about 200-acres of grapes, which will produce about 150 gallons of wine per acre.

However, quanity is not the goal of Cecil or Jourdain. "What we want is a premium wine. We are testing and testing and we know we will eventually get it," Cecil said.

Wine connoisseurs from across the nation who sampled the Biltmore wine gave it a mixed but generally favorable review.

Right now, the Biltmore House has no wine to sell. Early vintages that came of age were sold in the estate's Deerpark Restaurant and to tourists for about $5 a bottle. So far, Cecil has not advertised his wine.

Barrels of red, wine and champagnes are now aging in the estate's small winery and will be for sell this spring.

CWP Suit Is Ridiculed

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — City attorneys have asked a U.S. District Court to dismiss a multimillion-dollar suit filed by the Communist Workers Party that alleges Greensboro, state and federal officials were involved in a conspiracy to have five CWP demonstrators killed in November 1979.

A brief filed by the city contended the CWP suit, which seeks $37 million in alleged damages, "borders on paranoid" and is frivolous in nature.

Besides the city, the suit lists Gov. Jim Hunt, U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and various federal law enforcement agencies.

The plaintiffs in the suit are the spouses of the five slain demonstrators, seven CWP demonstrators who were wounded and four people who were arrested as a result of the shooting incident that broke out when a motorcade of Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis interrupted the CWP demonstration..

The suit charges that the defendants violated their constitutional and civil rights. It said the basis for the conspiracy was the city's "express racist, anti-black motive."

It also accused the city and the co-defendants of illegal surveillance.

Don Hewitt Asserts Success Of '60 Minutes' Is Bench Strength

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — What makes "60 Minutes" tick?

"A creative environment," said Dan Rather.

"We're our own bosses," said Morley Safer.

"The public's thirst for non-fiction," said Mike Wallace.

"Bench strength," crowed Hewitt, the "strange genius" who speaks fluent Sportsese, attacks problems with the joy of a gourmand attacking a seven-course dinner, and who, 13 years ago, created the most successful news magazine ever committed to the television tube.

"There isn't another network that could afford to assign four top reporters to a show like this and keep them there full time," he said. "CBS can."

Whatever the reason, the big stopwatch keeps ticking every Sunday night on CBS, and week after week it ticks amid the A.C. Nielsen Company's vaunted top 10. A time slot opposite children's programing on competing networks does it no damage, but in any matrix, "60 Minutes" would appear unassailable.

It wasn't always so.

In the early days, "60 Minutes" was eminently pre-emptible and it bounced at random from time slot to time slot seeking a home, but the network stayed with it.

"It took patience on the part of CBS management and patience is hard to come by in television," said Rather, who leaves his post to newcomer Ed Bradley when he takes over Walter Cronkite's anchorman post sometime in March. "From 1968 to 1974, it was in the formative stage, but in the fall of '75, it took off like a big proverbial rocket."

"Never in our wildest dreams did we imagine that the name, '60 Minutes,' would become a household word in America," said Hewitt. "That was my dream. I think I stole the idea for '60 Minutes' lock, stock and barrel from Life Magazine."

But the soul of the program was Hewitt's aversion to the "television documentary."

"The word 'documentary' is a terrible word," he said. "How many people do you know who want to read documents? I always compared the documentary to the editorials in newspapers that nobody reads. If you say the same thing and you put a name to it, it's read. You run it as the voice of the newspaper and it's not read. Nobody identifies with anybody. It's a corporation talking to you.

"The documentry always dealt with issues," he said. "We deal with subjects. We tell stories. The best way to impart information to the public is to tell them stories — even the Bible knew that. I mean — the issue was flood control, the story was Noah."

But in the ebullient mutual admiration society of the "60 Minutes" offices, Hewitt returned to his team.

"I think the success of our broadcast stems from the sort of personality we've given it — which is the personal touch of those four guys."

The "four guys" — as familiar now as the family in most American living rooms — took brief breaks in the murderous schedules they work to talk about the vehicle they've ridden to the sort of stardom seldom accorded a journalist.

Safer was interrupted by a tap on the window of his ninth-floor office. He looked up to find a window-washer on a scaffold looking in.

Safer grinned and waved back.

"That's rare in New York," he said. "Everywhere else we go, there's recognition, but if somebody comes up to you in New York, they're from out of town.

"I think what makes this thing tick is the fact that the four of us are our own bosses," he said, returning to the subject at hand. "I've never been assigned a story. I get suggestions and I can take them or reject them."

Since fully one-fifth of all the diverse story suggestions "60 Minutes" considers come from the public — in an average of 20,000 letters a year, he has much from which to choose.

Like his colleagues, Rather credited Hewitt for success of the show.

"He's a genius at keeping the proper mix of old and young talent and a mix of pieces on the air," he said. "As Julia Child keeps tasting what she's cooking, he keeps tasting program content."

Wallace lauded Bradley.

"He's a first-rate replacement for Dan," he said. "He has an identifiable style. He's a good reporter with a remarkable background, quite similar to Dan's."

"I just hope he doesn't think he's going to get weekends off," said Safer.

For Reasoner, the job is a love affair.

"There are times when you feel a little bit frantic," he said. "But I'm the only Richard Harding Davis left in the world — Hoboken to Afghanistan, 140 days a year. This is the only job on earth where you can do that. What more does a journalist want?"

What Hewitt wants, and obviously feels he has, is what he calls the rarest combination in the business.

"A good journalist must be able to do two things — find out and communicate," he said. "Now I know a lot of good finder-outers and I know a lot of good communicators, but when you get a man who can do both, you know you've got a gem.

"Bench strength," he reiterated with a grin. "It's easier to manage the Pittsburgh Steelers than the New Orleans Saints."

Ray Bradbury To Write A Sequel

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ray Bradbury will write a contemporary sequel to 20th Century-Fox's 1951 box-office hit "The Day the Earth Stood Still."

Bradbury will write several story lines, one of which will be selected for completion as a screenplay by another writer.

Marilyn Horne Avoiding Flu

NEW YORK (AP) — No parties, no movies, no walking, no talking. That's diva Marilyn Horne's advice for steering clear of the flu.

The 47-year-old mezzo-soprano has been rehearsing for a Carnegie Hall recital, one that has been postponed twice because of her bout with influenza.

"The original date was Dec. 16, but that had to be put off because of a flu virus I picked up in Dallas in November, until Jan. 11," she said in today's New York Times.

She went to Florida to recuperate, picked up another bug and postponed the recital again.

Her prescription for avoiding the flu: "I don't walk anywhere in this cold weather. I lead a zero social life."

Maltreat 'Hill Street Blues'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Consider, if you will, the curious case of "Hill Street Blues," an original, substantial piece of television that manages to be both broad and relatively deep, a cop show that considers the grit and folly of police work in a decaying urban precinct with warmth and humor.

At NBC, "Hill Street Blues" has been treated to one of network president Fred Silverman's patented sleight-of-hand scheduling routines, which is usually followed by a disappearing act. Remember "United States?"

The curious thing is, NBC seems to really like "Hill Street Blues." It was the hit of last summer's press tour, where Silverman lieutenant Brandon Tartikoff fairly fell over himself in praise of the thing. And in a show of confidence, NBC has ordered nine more episodes.

But when it came to putting the show before viewers, NBC tripped over Silverman's magic wand. Instead of just putting the show on the air in a reasonably safe time slot and offering it the promotion aid given to any of a number of NBC lessers, "Lobo," for instance, NBC did this:

"Hill Street Blues" was given television's "coffin corner," Saturday night from 10 to 11 p.m. Saturday night is television's least-watched evening, and the viewers who do show up on Saturday are practically under contract to ABC ("Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island"). To give you an idea of how rough Saturday night is, CBS Entertainment president Bud Grant is hoping for a 25 percent share of the audience for his network's "Flo" and "Ladies' Man" on Saturday. A 25-share show is canceled anywhere else on the schedule. Last year, "Flo" gathered a 38 share on Monday nights.

Consigned to that hellish region, "Hill Street Blues" could have at least hoped for a heavy-duty promo campaign and assurance that an audience could, if it wanted to, find the show in its regular slot. But no. Silverman & Co. thought they would "help" the show with some stunts (for which Silverman is most famous). The premiere episode of "Hill Street Blues," which ends with two of the show's regulars clinging to life, was broadcast last Thursday.

The second episode, when you learn what happened to wounded pair, was broadcast on Saturday. The third show comes on Thursday. The fourth show comes on Saturday. The fifth show is supposed to be broadcast on Saturday, Jan. 31. But, NBC cautions, there's a chance the show will have been moved to "a better slot" by then.

In the meantime, a fine television show suffers. Overnight ratings showed that "Hill Street" performed admirably on its first night, attracting about 27 percent of the audience. That portion shrunk to about 22 percent after the first Thursday-to-Saturday handoff.

CBS Continues Lead Nielsens

NEW YORK (AP) — As it has every week for six weeks straight, CBS got a big boost from "Dallas" and came out on top of the weekly prime-time ratings competition, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The hit series about the devious doings of a Texas oil family now has been the No. 1 program in nine of the past 11 weeks.

Six of the top 10 programs in the week ending Jan. 18 were on CBS, and that contributed to a rating for the winning network of 20, compared to 18.6 for ABC and 18.3 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

NBC, meanwhile, fell to third place after two weeks as runner-up to CBS and despite a strong showing for the "Bob Hope Anniversary Special," No. 7 for the week.

The rating for "Dallas" in the most recent survey was 33.4. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with TV, just over a third saw the latest installment in the CBS series.

"Dallas" began its streak as the top show of the season in November with a buildup to the long-awaited x"who shot J.R.?" episode. The run might have been 11 weeks in a row, but for a pre-emption and an "NFL Monday Night Football" game on ABC that finished No. 1 in the week ending Dec. 28.

CBS' lead for the season that began Oct. 27 now is a point and a half over No. 2 ABC. NBC maintains 1980-81 programming started Sept. 15, despite an actors' strike, and by that standard is second to CBS in the season's standings.

"Magnum, P.I.," a new series from CBS, was 10th in the ratings for the week, with a pilot film for a new ABC series, "Dynasty," tied for 11th with a CBS movie, "Terror Among Us."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CONGREGATION CONSTRUCTS TINY CHURCH IN LEVEL VALLEY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Double dummy problems have been entertaining and puzzling bridge players for almost as long as the game has been played. There are those who believe that pitting their wits against the composer of the problem can be as challenging as dueling over the table in actual play.

For those who enjoy problem solving, there is a new book that should appeal to them: "With Open Cards: 110 Double Dummy Problems" (collected by Eric Jannersten; translation: Hugh Kelsey. Published by Bibliagora; 280 pp; hard cover, $14.50. Available in the United States from Bridge World Magazine, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025). In keeping with most British imports, the price is high, and some careless proofreading mars some of the problems. But the book can deliver many hours of interesting and entertaining mental exercise.

Eric Jannersten has been active in bridge jounalism for almost half a century and he has dug into his files to collect a fascinating group of problems. They vary in complexity from relatively simple to mind-boggling. The problem shown is among the former.

Declarer is in seven hearts with only six trumps in the combined hands, and West leads a spade. To make the contract, declarer must win with the ten in dummy, cash the ace of diamonds and run the ten of clubs. When this wins, he enters his hand with the king of spades and cashes his three high clubs, discarding all of dummy's diamonds.

Now declarer leads the nine of diamonds, which is high. If West ruffs, declarer overruffs and leads a high spade. If cannot help East to discard on this trick, so he must ruff. Again declarer overruffs and leads the eight of diamonds.

Assuming that West ruffs again, declarer overruffs and leads another spade from dummy. Even if East ruffs again, declarer is in command. He overruffs and can now ruff his remaining diamond with dummy's last trump.

Notice that it makes no difference whether West ruffs the first two diamonds high or low — dummy's trumps are just strong enough to allow declarer to ruff all three of his diamond losers. As with all double dummy problems, there are alternate solutions, depending on the course of the defense. The reader might like to try for himself to see what happens if, for instance, West discards spades instead of ruffing when declarer leads diamonds.

Tastes Revert To Larger Cars

In a Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc., study of economic expectations and car buying plans made right after the November 1980 elections, car buyers indicated they were more likely to choose a bigger car and a domestic make than they were at the beginning of the year. But they also indicated they were wary about planning major purchases — even though a majority expected economic conditions to improve.

A similar study made in January 1980 revealed a strong preference for smaller cars.

The bureau's report of results noted that the swing to mid-size cars is not surprising, for three reasons: more stable gasoline prices, less price differential between smaller and mid-size cars and increased fuel efficiency of larger cars.

District Court Report

Judge Napoleon Barefoot disposed of the following cases during the December 4 term of Pitt County Superior Court.

Jerry Avent, Route 2, Farmville, damage to property, 11 days jail.

Douglas S. Bell, Rockville, Md., possession of marijuana, 18 to 24 months jail suspended on payment of fine and costs.

Better Meal In Brown-Bagging

NEW YORK (AP) — For a nutritious meal that also saves time and money, take your own lunch to work, advises Dr. Susan Smith Jones, nutritionist at UCLA.

"Basic fillings like chicken, egg and tuna salad can be made especially nutritious by adding fresh vegetables like sliced tomato, mushrooms, asparagus tips, chopped raw spinach," she suggests in a Forum magazine article. Milk or buttermilk, blended with fresh fruits and kept cool in a vacuum bottle, makes a healthful drink, she adds.

Restoring The Cathedral Bells

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — Most pilgrims to the ancient Canterbury Cathedral in 1981 won't hear the bells of the town's historic Church of England Cathedral.

After the bells were rung to usher in the New Year, they were silenced until next fall for a complete restoration program at an estimated cost of $200,000. Thereafter, a spokesman says, the cathedral will have a "better toned and finer ring of bells than ever before in history."

Third-Largest Telephone-User

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church is the third largest user of telephones in the United States, exceeded only by the federal government and General Motors.

So reported the Rev. Michael J. Dempsey, a Brooklyn television expert, in outlining to U.S. bishops plans for setting up a multimilllion-dollar communications network to link the 170 U.S. Catholic dioceses via satellite. He says the church spends $110 million a year just talking on the telephone.

Back in Power

During the "Cultural Revolution" in China from 1966 to 1976, many Chinese government officials were "purged," or removed from their government jobs, because they disagreed with the ideas of some of China's top leaders. One of those officials was Hu Yaobang. After being purged, Hu was kept out of the government for 10 years. He was "rehabilitated," or brought back into the government, in 1975. In recent weeks, Hu has taken over the duties China's Communist Party chairman usually performs. Since 1976, many officials like Hu, who were purged during the Cultural Revolution, have again moved into important positions in China's government.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the group of former government officials who were recently on trial in China?

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 22, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have new plans you want to put in motion, but postpone until another day to gain maximum benefits. A time to make sure you don't act in an impulsive manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may want to quickly make some radical changes now, but haste could make waste instead, so take it easy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't discuss a personal problem with an adviser until you understand every angle of it. Take more time for study.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Allies could disappoint you at this time so handle business by yourself and get good results. Avoid arguments with anyone.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you are not tactful with some credit affair, you could get into more trouble than you bargained for.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) There are new projects that are appealing to you, but don't commit yourself to any of them until they are further studied.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy and handle responsibilittes you have assumed and get ready for bigger enterprises ahead. Maintain poise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't do what a hasty-acting associate wants you to do at this time and be ahead of the game. Be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have much work ahead of you, so don't waste any time. Complete the work and gain the benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take extra time to put your business affairs in better order. Personal goals can be easily attained at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan time for improving conditions at home and have more harmony there. Be of a more conciliatory frame of mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to exercise more care in motion to avoid possible accident today. Show that you are precise in all things.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't think you can buy your way in or out of things, which would be expensive and not satisfactory at this time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be good at getting out of confusing situations and will do something constructive about promises that are broken, so be sure to give as fine an education as possible and a happy life will follow.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Seven Hurt In Elevator Fall

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Seven persons were treated for cuts and bruises after the elevator they were riding in the Eugene Talmadge Memorial Hospital fell 2½ floors Tuesday, a spokesman said.

A safety system kept the car from falling several more floors, according to Alex Vaughn, associate director for institutional relations at the Medical College of Georgia.

The rapid stop shattered the false ceiling in the car, showering the passengers with splinters, he said.

Passengers got on the elevator at the fifth floor. The car was stopped between the second and third floors and a passenger pressed a button which lowered it to the second floor, Vaughn said.

The elevator was installed about three years ago, Vaughn said.

For the first 90 days of 1981 Tommie Little Builders will make it easier than ever for you to move into one of their 9 remaining custom-built, prestigious homes

Here's how:

1. Trade-In
We'll give you fair market value for your existing home as a trade-in on any one of the homes featured. You'll be able to enjoy the good life without the worry of how to sell your old home. You may even get money back!

2. 12⅜% financing on these homes
We've purchased a limited amount of first mortgage money at 12⅜% per annum. Qualified buyers may finance up to 90% on homes to $100,000 and 80% from $100,000 to $200,000.

3. 12⅜% financing on the sale of your existing
If you must sell your home anywhere in North Carolina before you can buy, we can extend our 12⅜% funds to help sell it faster.

Additionally:
During this period we will also extend these terms to any custom home we might build for you on one of our inventory of lots in Lynndale, Club Pines, Westhaven, Baytree, or on your lot.

Soviets Feel Criticism Of Math Study

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Education Ministry has promised to improve the teaching of high school mathematics following a barrage of criticism by mathematicians, teachers and pupils.

The criticism is similar to that often aimed at Western mathematics programs: too much abstract theorizing, and not enough emphasis on basic arithmetic and algebra.

The critics here claim the Soviet math curriculum is getting so complicated that even well-educated parents are having trouble understanding their children's school work.

After the 1957 Soviet launching of "sputnik" — the world's first artificial earth satellite — mathematics training in Soviet schools was singled out as a model for the West.

In recent years, however, mathematics teaching in ordinary schools has come in for increasing criticism in the Soviet Union itself. Ironically, experts place part of the blame for this on the import of Western teaching methods, some of which were developed in an effort to help close an alleged "math gap" with the Soviet Union.

Soviet official concern reached a peak last September — and has snowballed since then — with the publication of a lengthy article on the subject in Kommunist, the Soviet Communist Party's leading theoretical journal.

In the article, Lev Pontryagin, a respected mathematician, said a math-teaching reform 10 years ago had led to a "strange situation" in Soviet schools.

Pontryagin acknowledged that the modern world calls for more advanced math teaching, but said some of the latest Soviet textbooks have "a high level of abstraction and call for a certain level of math sophistication that a school pupil does not and cannot have."

He charged that "on one hand, pupils are overwhelmed with formalistic, hard-to-understand material — most of it unnecessary — while at the same time they don't receive necessary training in elementary arithmetic operations and algebraic transformations, and in solving the simplest equations and inequalities..."

Kommunist added in a footnote that admission tests to higher-education institutions show that "in recent years, the level of mathematical preparation in high schools has fallen sharply" with "serious gaps" in pupils' knowledge that rarely occurred before.

"It is essential to work out a concrete plan to substantially improve the situation in the shortest possible time," Kommunist said.

The September article and Kommunist's own commentary set off a blizzard of new criticism of mathematics teaching that even reached the October session of Parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

Anatoly Logunov, rector of Moscow State University, accused the Soviet Education Ministry at the Parliament session of making a "sharp turn in the teaching of mathematics several years ago without a sufficiently deep and wide-ranging study of the crux of the matter."

In the original article, Kommunist also attacked the "uncritical import of foreign accomplishments" in mathematics teaching. Pontryagin said Education Ministry officials had sought to justify borrowing West European methods by claiming a need to keep up with "the latest developments."

But even foreign specialists, he added, are now expressing disappointment with ultra-modern ways of teaching math.

Racism Grows In Europe; A Ticking Time Bomb

By BARRY JAMES
UPI Senior Editor

LONDON (UPI) — The blight of racism is breaking out in many parts of Western Europe as economic times get tougher.

The symptoms include such outrages as anti-Semitic attacks in France and, in England, isolated cases of "Paki-bashing" — the random beating up of Pakistanis and other brown-skinned people — by white toughs.

The immigrants came from many parts of the world to man European hospitals and transportation systems, do the dirty jobs and contribute to years of growing prosperity. They are among the first to suffer as economies turn down.

They figure disproportionately among the unemployed, the marginally employed and the exploited, yet get blamed for taking away jobs from the natives. In city after city, many whites hold them responsible for urban decay, rising crime and falling educational standards.

None of this is new to Americans, of course, but the European race problem is relatively recent, largely unrecognized and ticking away like a time bomb.

Europeans still speak of immigrants, as though the millions of foreigners in their midst were not here to stay.

Some white Britons use the term "second generation immigrants" to describe blacks born in Britain who are as much the Queen's subjects as they are. Extremists, and even a few politicians, talk of sending the "immigrants" back "home" — an absurdity because whether by birth or long residence, most of them already are home, if not entirely.

An estimated 15 million migrants have changed the face, affected the habits and sometimes stretched the tolerance of Western Europe since World War II. They include Turks to Germany, Italians to Switzerland, Finns to Sweden, Algerians to France, Surinamese to the Netherlands, Moroccans to Belgium, West Indians, Pakistanis and Indians to Britain.

Some of these migrations have been relatively trouble free. Britain has absorbed as many Irish as all its black and Asian immigrants put together, yet this has caused few social strains.

The Minority Rights Group says mass migration furnished Europe with "a plentiful supply of relatively undemanding labor, young and hardworking" and thereby "favored a degree of economic development that would not have been possible without it."

Britain's Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) points out that most immigrants arrived during the 1950s and 1960s for economic reasons — "our economic reasons as well as theirs."

London Transport and other employers once recruited West Indians and Asians in their countries of origin to plug gaps in the labor supply. The same is true of other European countries.

But while grudgingly accepted as low-grade, low-paid workers, migrants more often than not have found difficulty in finding a welcome as neighbors.

"Not all Germans like the smell of garlic in their hallways," West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt commented during his 1980 election campaign. "We are not the labor exchange of the world," he said on another occasion.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher touched a chord just before her election in 1979 when she said the British felt their whole way of life had been changed by immigration.

"Small minorities can be absorbed," she said. "They can be assets to the majority community. But once a minority in a neighborhood gets very large, people do feel swamped."

Britons understood that, by minorities, Mrs. Thatcher was referring not to the three quarters of a million Irish or the hundreds of thousands of other white migrants who have successfully integrated into British life, but specifically to Asians and blacks.

"It was a disgusting, cheap shot in a calculated attempt to win the votes of the prejudiced," said one official at the CRE.

In France, the Communist Party has been campaigning for an end to immigration and a more even distribution of immigrants already in the country. The party accuses the government of deliberately creating immigrant ghettos in towns administered by the Left — exploiting them by day and keeping them hidden way in Communist-run districts at night.

In the Paris suburb of Vitry, the communist mayor led a crowd which sacked an immigrants' hostel in an unsuccessful attempt to thwart the transfer there from another district of 320 blacks from Mali.

This racist episode on the eve of Christmas followed the bombing of a Paris synagogue last October in which four persons were killed. The bombing was the culmination of a spate of neo-Nazi outrages against France's 700,000-strong Jewish community.

The mayor of Brussels, Pierre Van Halteren, has pleaded for restraint on immigration to preserve some Belgian character to the inner core of the capital, which has been largely taken over by North Africans and Southern Europeans, and where half the births are to foreigners.

In the Brussels district of Schaerbeek, which also houses many immigrants, Mayor Roger Nols sent a letter to all inhabitants telling them to behave like law-abiding Belgians.

An estimated 7,000 North Africans and Turks demonstrated in Brussels Dec.15 to protest the shooting of a Moroccan by a member of an extreme right-wing youth organization.

West Germans for historic reasons are acutely conscious of the dangers of racism, but even there the welcome is wearing thin for the "guest workers" who have lent so much muscle to the German economic miracle.

Foreigners number 4.45 million, or 7 percent of the population, and more than half of them have been in the country for more than 10 years. In Frankfurt, one person in four is non-German. East and West Berlin are divided not only by the Wall, but by a buffer zone of Turkish immigrants.

The guest workers clearly have arrived to stay, yet problems of alienation are piling up from one generation to another.

Enrollment of immigrants' children at some inner city schools is as high as 70 percent. Two thirds of these children leave school without any qualifications and with poor prospects of finding a job, yet with less meekness than their parents about accepting life on the lowest rungs on the economic ladder.

Although Germany stopped recruiting for labor outside the European Economic Community in 1973, many immigrants have continued to arrive from Africa, Asia and Turkey under a liberal political asylum law. Assailants recently threw a firebomb at a lodging house in Hamburg used by Vietnamese refugees.

Countries that have tried conscientiously to integrate immigrants into society have not been immune from race problems. In The Netherlands, Moluccan gunmen have hijacked trains and seized the Indonesian consulate. Sweden offers free language training to immigrants, but most live in sterile ghettos, and a shadowy group called "Keep Sweden Swedish" has emerged. Norway, which prides itself on its foreign aid record, has seen fighting between its own citizens and Vietnamese immigrants.

Even that self-styled bulwark of internationalism, the Soviet Union, is tarnished by racist attitudes, although it has never had any mass immigration, and tight residence requirements discourage population movements to the big cities.

Russians look down on Central Asians, Georgians and Armenians, oblige Mongolians to travel second class, and discriminate against black students. Jewish dissidents also allege widespread anti-Semitism.

With her talk about "swamping," Mrs. Thatcher was wittingly or not reinforcing the popular stereotype that Britain is being overwhelmed by a "colored" tide.

In fact, immigration of blacks and Asians has been stemmed to a trickle in recent years. It is confined mostly to people closely related or betrothed to residents, and even they do not get in easily.

Until recently, British immigration officials subjected Indian fiancees to humiliating virginity tests and gave children potentially harmful bone x-rays to check how old they were.

Visitors from Asia, Africa and the Caribbean run the risk of landing in the Immigration Service's detention center near London's Heathrow airport, leading the Indian government to complain about the treatment meted out to its nationals.

Mrs. Thatcher's government is proposing a change in British nationality law to bring it into line with immigration practice and restrict entry to those who have a close link with the country through birth, ancestry or long residence.

"Dependents do not 'flood' into the country, as the popular headlines have it," the CRE says, "and the long waiting times before entry is approved are in themselves restrictive."

"How would Britons who had emigrated to Australia feel, for example, if they were only allowed to marry an Australian, or if married emigrants were told they must leave their children behind?"

About 2 million black and brown people live in Britain, out of a total population of 56 million. Half were born in the country. Of the rest, the vast majority have spent most of their adult lives in Britain.

"There is no point in complaining about the number of immigrants we have," London's Daily Telegraph said. "They are now here to stay and we must do our best to promote racial equality."

Although there is no institutionalized pattern of discrimination, the race problem in Britain is beginning to acquire American-style overtones. A London headmaster wants to limit the number of non-English speakers at his school, and is advocating busing as a solution.

The port of Bristol exploded in a race riot last spring when police raided a bar frequented by West Indians. Relations between young blacks and the police have become strained. Shaven-headed youths linked with the ultra-right National Front daub swastikas and racist slogans in black and Asian areas.

Unqualified youngsters from immigrant families and deficient schools fail to find jobs in a shrinking labor force, and the disproportionate number of blacks among the unemployed appears to be laying more problems for the future.

State Lawmakers Face Hard Money Choices In '81

By GEORGE BOOSEY
United Press International

Stagflation is stalking the Statehouses.

Legislatures across the nation convened their 1981 sessions faced with money problems that could mean cuts in welfare payments, hikes in tuition for university students, strikes over teacher pay and even higher taxes.

Declining revenues due to the recession combined with higher costs prompted by inflation means legislators who prefer to spend money on new services and programs for their constituents may have to consider spending cuts.

It is not going to be easy.

"Every dollar has its own constituency," said Minnesota Senate Minority Leader Robert Ashbach, an Independent-Republican.

Lawmakers in some states may have to consider tax increases, a difficult vote to cast when their constituents are cutting back on their own spending.

The Ohio legislature has already passed a group of tax increases. There is talk of passing them in Florida. Minnesota Gov. Albert H. Quie, who said he would not consider any tax increases except for highway improvements, had to back off, saying "all options are open."

A survey by United Press International shows tight budget situations facing legislators in 30 states, with political question marks hanging over such major states as New York and Massachusetts.

Governors, either by themselves or with legislative help, already have cut spending in 16 states in hopes of balancing budgets for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30 for most of them.

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray cut $100 million in welfare expenditures in Washington state. Mrs. Ray, who was defeated for re-election last year, drastically reduced programs for recipients on non-continuing general assistance.

Some school athletic activities were canceled in Minnesota because of $195 million in budget cuts and Education Commissioner Howard Casmey is warning of up to 150 teacher strikes caused by a continuing revenue decline.

The slump in auto sales has sent unemployment to around 12 percent in Michigan, where the welfare case load has doubled. Spending cuts recommended by Gov. William Milliken total $1 billion.

"We have long passed the point of making easy cuts," he said. "When we begin laying off State Police troopers or cutting back on some inspection programs or reducing the number of personnel in our mental health facilities, we are beyond fat and into bone."

Roy Nicks, chancellor of the state Board of Regents in Tennessee, is talking of tuition increases ranging from 16 percent to more than 50 percent.

In Wisconsin, municipal officials took Gov. Lee Dreyfus to court over cuts in funds for local governments and won. Dreyfus had ordered a 4.4 percent cut in spending to meet a projected $143 million deficit.

Gov. Bill Clinton's decision to cut the pay increases expected by teachers in Arkansas hastened the surprise retirement of that young politician, who had been considered a rising star in the Democratic Party.

Spending downholders

Other governors who have been forced to hold down spending include Fob James of Alabama, who cut education spending by 7 percent; John Evans of Idaho, who ordered 3.85 percent cutbacks; Otis Bowen, who put a freeze on hiring in Indiana; Robert Ray of Iowa, who ordered a 4.6 percent cut; and Harry Hughes, who cut spending 3 percent in Maryland.

James Rhodes of Ohio slashed agency appropriations, education and welfare spending by 6 percent, proposing $101 million specific cuts. Then, facing a $496 million budget shortfall by June, Republican Rhodes asked the Democratic-controlled legislature for $395 million in tax hikes. In 48 hours, the legislature came through with a one percent sales tax increase and temporary increases in a variety of other taxes.

Vic Atiyeh called a special legislative session in Oregon to reduce spending by $204 million; Bill Janklow sliced funds in South Dakota by 5 percent.

Scott Matheson made two cuts himself and then called a special legislative session for even more reductions in Utah; Richard Snelling cut agency spending in Vermont by 3 percent.

Tight budget states

Legislatures in those states are facing tight budgets again in the next fiscal year, as are lawmakers meeting in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Rhode Island and West Virginia.

"California will be faced with a challenge that we have not encountered in more than 10 years," warned Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, Democratic chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. "Our projected revenues will not support our current levels of government programs."

But not all states have economic problems.

Increased revenues from oil, gas and coal production have boosted the economies of Alaska, Louisiana, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Wyoming.

Revenue surpluses or less-than-tight budgets were reported in such states as Colorado, Delaware, Hawaii, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico and Virginia.

New York may or may not have budget problems. Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey says the state is facing a $27 million deficit — but Republicans say he has $300 million buried in the budget for an election-year tax cut in 1982.

Officials in Massachusetts are still trying to assess the potential impact of Proposition 2½. The referendum, which passed Nov. 4, limits state and local property taxes to 2.5 percent of fair market value.

The long-awaited recession started taking its toll on state revenue collections last spring. The plunge was faster and deeper than many economists had projected.

Several states, where lawmakers had enacted tax cuts to do away with politically unpopular surpluses, were hit hard because they had only small reserves.

Republicans Dreyfus of Wisconsin and Quie of Minnesota led efforts to give back the surpluses that had accumulated in their states, only to see deficit projections before the halfway mark of their first terms.

Both ordered cuts in state agency spending and in state aid to schools and local governments. In addition, Minnesota had to borrow $100 million to make it over a cash flow shortage in November and December.

Quie said he had to make "tough decisions" in cutting aid to schools and local governments but "I am also mindful that these hard choices come about because our people are suffering hard times."

Gubernatorial budget cutting was not enough in Utah. Democrat Matheson ordered a 2.5 percent cut in spending early this year and then slashed another 7 percent for the four agencies dependent on the fuel tax. When that failed, he called a special legislative session in December.

The Oregon Legislature met in special session in August to consider that state's projected $204 million deficit. The lawmakers approved across-the-board cuts in appropriations for all state agencies — a move that hit hard at human resources and education programs.

Cut college aid

Education — especially higher education — may take the brunt of the budget cutting in several states.

In Tennessee, for example, Chancellor Roy Nicks of the Board of Regents said previously recommended tuition hikes of 8 to 25 percent now seem inadequate.

He said unless more money is provided, tuition for undergraduate resident students may have to be increased 16-20 percent while graduate students, law students and non-resident undergraduates pay 25-30 percent more. Medical students may see tuition hikes of 50 percent or more, he said.

James Martin, president of the University of Arkansas, complains budget cutting recommendations made by new Gov. Frank White may force the university to limit its open enrollment and raise tuition.

In Idaho, some legislators are talking about closing Lewis-Clark State College and Idaho State University.

Some governors ordered hiring freezes and layoffs to deal with their budget crunch and others allowed each agency to decide whether it should cut back on personnel.

An order by the Budget and Control Board for all agencies in South Carolina to reduce personnel by 7 percent has angered some agency heads. They say the across-the-board cut penalizes agencies that had economized.

The latest plan by Milliken to cut $288.5 million from Michigan's $4.5 billion budget is expected to cost 1,100 civil servants their jobs. In addition, Milliken has announced plans for six one-day temporary layoffs in 1981.

Prior planning works

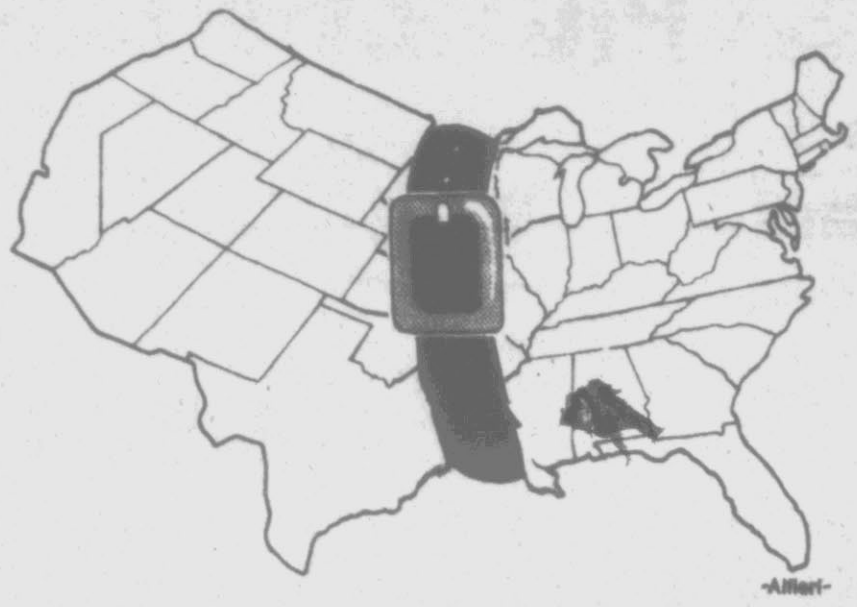
Most of these methods are intended to take care of the short-term problem. State Economist Edward Miller of Maine says it is time for state officials to plan for long-term economic recovery, too.

"Every economist agrees the nation must reindustrialize to pull itself out of an economic slump," he said. "Businesses and legislatures will have to look at how their programs and policies affect the long run of the next two to five years, rather than the next six months or so."

States that have been looking ahead and managed to weather the last recession better than others include Delaware, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Officials in Virginia like to boast their state is among the most fiscally responsible in the nation and they have a $64 million surplus to support it.

"We think the Virginia economy is fairly strong and will stay that way through 1981," said Stuart Connock, director of planning and budget. "The unemployment is not that high in Virginia, so we don't have the adverse impacts of that as do many other states."



-Alfieri-

LEGISLATURES across the nation are faced with money problems. Tight budgets could mean cuts in welfare payments, hikes in tuition for university students, strikes over teacher pay and even higher taxes. (UPI Photomap)

Revenues are tight in Pennsylvania "but no tighter than anticipated," said Dr. Robert Wilburn, secretary for budget and administration. He said Gov. Dick Thornburgh's administration was prepared for the recession and built it into the state's budget projections.

"We're going to see the continuation of very tight budgets," Wilburn said. "We're planning on that assumption, although each year gets more difficult."

Delaware Secretary of Finance Weston E. Nellius said his state would have faced a disaster had it not been for changes made in the state's budgeting system by Gov. Pierre S. Du Pont IV.

Du Pont called in outside financial consultants and one of the resulting changes was a constitutional amendment limiting state spending to 98 percent of official revenue estimates.

"For one thing, you don't have it (the revenue) yet," explained Nellius, "it's only an estimate. And secondly, the prudent man wouldn't spend it anyway; it's a rainy day fund."

High energy payoff

Among the states that appear to be in the best shape are the energy-producing states, which have been able to profit from high energy prices and severance taxes.

In North Dakota, for example, Budget Director Darrell Ohlhauser said the oil and gas production tax is expected to bring in $169 million during the next two-year budget period compared to $67 million in the last biennium.

In addition, he said, the newly adopted 6½ percent oil and gas severance tax will bring in $284.4 million, and $128 million of that will allow the state to pay 70 percent of the cost of running the elementary and secondary schools.

The highest coal severance tax in the nation — 30 percent — has allowed Montana to build up huge treasury surpluses. The Republican legislative leadership promises to cut taxes $118 million while increasing spending 10 percent in fiscal 1982 and 12 percent in fiscal 1983.

Petroleum-rich Louisiana built up a $1 billion surplus last year and appears ready to break that record this year, thanks to oil and gas taxes. "Louisiana is virtually recession-proof," bragged former Gov. Edwin Edwards.

Lid on spending

Texas and Alaska, states that are synonymous with oil production, look forward to increased revenues this year. But Republican Govs. Jay Hammond of Alaska and Bill Clements of Texas want to hold down spending.

Hammond said he wants to put a limit on how much the Legislature can spend on operating budgets as well as capital expenditures, while the Alaska Chamber of Commerce said it wants the lid to apply only to operating budgets.

Clements said he plans to pursue his goal of reducing the number of state employees in Texas despite that state's $500 million surplus. The governor also said he can come up with a tighter budget than the one drafted by the Legislative Budget Board.

Revenues continue to exceed appropriations in Oklahoma — but there is a question over how much additional money the Legislature will have to spend next year.

The state Equalization Board says the lawmakers will have an additional $112 million for fiscal 1982 while some legislative observers expect the figure to exceed $250 million.

Democratic Gov. George Nigh says the state should use $40 million for a tax cut. "We have more money than we need," he said. "We can afford it."

Newborn Must Build Up Immunity

I am expecting to give birth to my first child in four months. With a large family, I expect to be deluged with visitors. How soon after a newborn is brought home from the hospital can relatives come to visit? — Mrs. H. W., Wyo.

Dear Mrs. W.:

Unfortunately, many relatives who love and adore newborn infants are already at home and waiting in the baby's nursery when the child first gets there.

The love and adulation of grandparents and other relatives is completely understandable. Not so from the infant's point of view.

If the newborn babies were able to say it, they would beg to be left alone instead of being cooed at by a large group of people carrying germs they have not yet acquired any immunity against.

These newborn tender infants are unnecessarily exposed to infections. For it is almost impossible not to talk directly to a child without sending droplets in its direction.

In the hospital the child has been carefully protected with every kind of sterile precaution. Too sudden a transition to the "world of people" may be somewhat hazardous.

In a short while children actually adjust themselves to the new germs within the home. That's how they build up immunity. But it does not happen overnight.

The newborn infant deserves the extra precaution of a few weeks of slowly adjusting to the "bacterial threat" of too many visitors.

Sometimes when I eat solid dry food it seems to get stuck. I can wash it down with water, but it leaves me with a heavy feeling in my chest. Have you ever heard of this? — Mr. E.L.R., Nev.

Dear Mr. R.:

Yes, I have heard this story often. Sometimes it may be a simple spasm. Other times more complicated reasons for this symptom exists.

All food passes from the mouth into the esophagus, the delicate tube that leads to the stomach. Sometimes insufficient saliva makes it difficult to swallow dry food. Incidentally, saliva is the very first substance that starts the digestion of food.

Occasionally a small pouch, or diverticulum, of the esophagus may be responsible for the sensation that food does not readily pass into the stomach.

It is very easy to determine this by X-ray using special dyes to outline the entire esophagus. If your symptoms persist, certainly you should have this done if only to relieve you of the anxiety about it.

Computer Tests Urban Planning Without 'Havoc'

By TERRANCE W. McGARRY

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Apex would be an endlessly entertaining and terrifyingly educational city to visit if you could find it — a fourth dimension alternative to Lansing, Mich., somewhere down the yellow silicon chip road.

It has every problem known to modern urban life, from water pollution to crime. The government — in fact the whole power structure, from newspaper editors to pressure groups — changes several times a year, bringing sweeping new solutions, sometimes disastrous.

The greal seal of the city shows a great seal, the kind that balances a ball on its nose.

Luckily for its hypothetical inhabitants, Apex exists only in a computer. So do its surrounding suburbs and unincorporated county land, rivers, factories, zoning squabbles, no-growth advocates, Chamber of Commerce, outraged taxpayers and overworked police.

Only a computer city could be flexible enough to tolerate the ping-pong of conflicting policies visited on Apex by generations of its temporary ruling class.

That class currently is a real college class — "Theory and Practice of Policy making in Urban Systems" in the University of Southern California's School of Public Administration.

But sometimes those who wield real power, local and federal officials and bureaucrats, run a "what if?" plan on Apex. If the idea that seemed so brilliant brings chaos and destruction, the Apexians are safely off in their circuits, locked away from the real world ballot boxes.

Apex is a computer program filled with data that creates a hypothetical city. It tries to create all the complicated interlocking relationships, and the unforeseen consequences of well meant acts, that are the bane of those who try to solve urban problems.

The computer works through the consequences far more swiftly than in the real world. If a land use ruling combined with a factory closing caused by environmental regulations cuts property tax revenues so deeply that the police budget is slashed, the computer will unleash a crime wave in the streets at the next session.

Students (or "players" or "users") take the roles of elected officials of the city and its suburbs, environmental planners, business leaders, land developers and pressure groups from the Sierra Club to the Taxpayers Association.

In meetings and caucuses in the room, and through decisions fed into the computer, they must play their roles to win.

The industrialists must make a profit somehow or go broke and drop out. The politicians lose if the computer decides they have alienated so many voters they have blown the next election — or if the other players revolt. The developers and the environmentalists battle for the land.

Once upon a time, Apex looked a lot like Lansing, Mich., because it was. The original program used Lansing as a base to work on air pollution problems for the federal government.

Over the years Apex acquired the water pollution problems of a place something like Houston, the water scarcity problems it would face in Arizona, and representative municipal ills from throughout the nation, from transportation to the impact of a military base, until it became nowhere city and every town.

"This is the most sophisticated simulation game around," said Richard McGinty, director of the Center for Multidisciplinary Educational Exercises, which runs the program.

"We worked on the air pollution control model for three or four years and the government was sufficiently impressed that we got a grant to disseminate it to other universities throughout the country.

"We trained about 120. Sixty to 80 are probably still using it regularly.

"Some schools reverse roles and make students face the other guy's problems. At Princeton the engineering students played the social science roles and the social science students faced the engineering problems.

"At Illinois, the law students changed roles with the engineering students. They found so many loopholes in the state air pollution laws they tied the hands of the environmentalist players, then wrote a paper on what was wrong with the laws."

"They do the same things the media does in real life," McGinty said.

"The players start with strong points of view, but they tend to focus on the issues the (game's) newspaper stresses repeatedly.

"If someone picks up an issue he thinks is important to his group, and it's totally ignored by the press, the rest of the people in the room run off with the issues that seem to be popular. Ultimately, unless he's a very strong person, he will drop his personal issue. The concensus issues are those that stay in the media limelight."

Students say the realism of the game affects their lives.

"I see how the news media changes the meaning of things," said journalism student Richard Thomas, 20, of Middleburg, Va., who plays a city councilman.

"Not that they changed what I said, but the context they put it in. I think I'll understand that more. I'll also understand 'off the record' better...

"You mutter something under your breath and it winds up in a headline."

Players must interview two real-life counterparts for advice, and are sometimes surprised at just how close to the mark the game is.

A Los Angeles city councilman warned him that the real headaches were not the glamorous policy issues, but mundane problems "like the sewer pipes collapsing," Thomas said.

"He was right, too. The game is so realistic, problems like that keep coming up, just the way he said they do."

Said Robert Guthrie, 20, a junior business major from Walnut Creek, Calif., who played a developer in the game and intends to become one after graduation:

"The land developers I talked to warned me to beware the long delays the bureacracy would impose, and not to bother trying to rezone land for housing developments because the government would make it too expensive.

"The government players are acting just like they warned me the real government does — they just go on and on."

"Before the game I wanted to develop residential property but this taught me that there's much more money in commercial and business property. It changed all my plans for what to do when I get out of school."

One incident had repercussions far outside the game, McGinty said.

"Someone who was an urban planner in Arizona in real life was in the game and ran for office. He won, but he made some unpopular decisions, and when he went to the bathroom, someone started a recall movement. By the time he got back, he had been thrown out of office.

"He protested. There happened to be a real life judge in the room, so we set up a trial and the judge ruled that the recall was valid.

"Tears came to the guy's eyes, and he gave a speech about what's wrong with government and the legal system.

"About a year later I was in Arizona, ran into the judge, and asked him if he knew what happened to that guy.

"The judge said, 'Well, three weeks after the game he quit his job and managed the political campaign of a guy who was running for state senator, using the same issues and campaign tactics he used in the game. He got him elected and then, using the same approach, got himself elected to the city council in his home town'."

"So he's still reliving the incident and we're sure there are others.

"There are Apex junkies who come back repeatedly, because they've grown, or changed or they have new ideas they want to try out."
