

Former Hostages Describe Brutality

By The Associated Press
They told of beatings, cruel hoaxes and days, weeks — even months — in solitary confinement.

—Malcolm Kalp, who persistently tried to escape his Iranian captors, said he was beaten up and thrown into solitary confinement for 374 days.

—Jimmy Lopez was kept in a small, dingy cell — so cold that he sometimes had to break ice off his water bucket — where he was awakened by centipedes crawling on his face.

—Moorhead Kennedy and others were lined up in their underwear, guns to their backs, for a mock execution.

—Iranians told Johnny McKeel that his mother was dead, and he didn't know that she was alive until Wednesday.

The 52 Americans, liberated after 444 days as captives of Iranian militants, kept telephone lines busy Wednesday between a U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, and their hometowns in the United States.

Most of the former hostages talked mainly about family and friends — and put in requests for their favorite foods after a steady diet of rice and lamb and chicken.

But others had grisly stories to tell.

And Jimmy Carter, after an emotional meeting with the 50 men and two women Wednesday, said Iran had subjected the hostages to "abominable circumstances," "barbarism" and "savagery."

"Our Americans in Iran were mistreated much worse than previously described," he said.

As he flew back to Georgia today, Carter said that the hostages had been forced "one by one" to run a gauntlet of jeers and kicks before being permitted to board a plane for Algiers.

"Even after month after month, they (the Iranians) still took pleasure in abusing them psychologically, even physically," Carter said.

State department spokesman Jack Cannon in Wiesbaden said today that doctors examining the former hostages are "finding evidences of long periods of solitary confinement in primitive conditions, some in actual prisons — dungeons they described them as — of long periods without the scarce food."

The official, interviewed on the NBC "Today" show, added that the mistreatment "varied from person to person, area to area and group of hostages to group of hostages."

He said some of the hostages "were beaten on different occasions, forced to lie on the ground and beaten on the ground."

Ex-hostage Moorhead Kennedy told his 23-year-old son, Mark, in a phone call to Santa Monica, Calif., on Wednesday afternoon, that much of the abuse was psychological.

"It didn't sound like they were brainwashed, but they (the Iranians) did things like write in Arabic on the walls that the Ayatollah had ordered their execution," the younger Kennedy said.

William Belk, 44, told his foster mother in Sequim, Wash., that he was beaten for trying to escape and for trying to refuse to appear on a Christmas television broadcast.

"He tried to escape one night and got beat up for that," said Gertrude Kanner. "He was forced to go on television at Christmas time and I guess he got beat up for that because he didn't want to."

Kalp, 42, was "beaten very" (Please turn to Page 6)

Carter Accuses Iranians Of 'Near-Animal' Action

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Accusing Iran of "savagery against absolutely innocent hostages," Jimmy Carter today recounted tales of horror from the 52 freed Americans, including being forced through a gauntlet of jeers and kicks in the final moments of their 444 days of captivity.

"These are the acts of animals almost," Carter said after returning from his visit with the freed hostages in West Germany.

He said a report he prepared in long-hand during the flight home would be hand-delivered to President Reagan in Washington this morning.

The former president said the "solemn agreement" that won the hostages' freedom is in the best interests of the United States and should be kept because it involves the country's word of honor.

Carter made his remarks in Plains and while aboard the Air Force passenger jet that brought him and his party home after a dramatic dash to Wiesbaden, West Germany, as a special envoy representing Reagan. He arrived in Georgia about 6 a.m. EST today, less than 24 hours after he had left.

Carter said the day he turned over the White House to Reagan was the "happiest day of my life" because on the same day 14 months of effort to free the hostages had proved successful at last.

But his words were angry when he spoke of the abuses the hostages suffered.

He said one hostage told him he had been struck on the way to the airport but then added, "well, that's all in the past."

"Even when the hostages were being loaded on the plane, they carried them to a fairly distant point by bus and made them walk through a gauntlet, one-by-one, without even the protection of the whole group. Jeering and sometimes even kicking to try to debase the Americans leaving Iran," Carter said.

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie, both of whom accompanied Carter on the mission, flew on to Washington after bidding him farewell in Georgia. Mondale promptly delivered Carter's report to Reagan at the White House.

Mondale said he told Reagan some of the former hostages' accounts of their treatment, and the new president "was outraged, as all Americans are, and will be when they hear the full details"

The former vice president said he wasn't asked for his advice about whether Reagan should live up to the settlement, but "If I were ... I would point out that the agreement is very, very" (Please turn to Page 6)

Administration 'Expects' To Live Up To The Terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it expects to live up to the deal with Iran that gained freedom for the 52 American hostages but is reviewing it "very closely" before implementing the final terms.

Officials of the former Carter administration said the United States could not breach the agreement without disregarding international principles.

And Jimmy Carter himself, returning today from visiting the ex-hostages in West Germany, told reporters that the "solemn agreement" should be kept because the country's word of honor is at stake. He added, however, that the review now underway is "perfectly legitimate."

Former hostage Barry Rosen, interviewed in West Germany on the NBC-TV show "Today," said, "Personally, I think it should be reviewed." He said he had not heard of the review.

Rosen did not say why he favors the review, but added that he thought Carter had done "as much as he possibly could ... to get us out."

Minutes after Ronald Reagan took office Tuesday, the hostages left Tehran under a complex financial settlement negotiated by Carter. Basically, the agreement traded the Americans' freedom for billions of dollars in Iranian assets frozen by Carter after the hostages were taken 14½ months ago.

"The Reagan administration would not want to commit itself to following through without having a chance to go over the agreement and see just what it has to follow through on," William Dyess, the new State Department spokesman, said Wednesday. He said it would be reviewed "very closely."

To keep the U.S. end of the pact, Carter signed 10 executive orders directing that various actions be taken in regard to the Iranian money. Carter's treasury secretary, G. William Miller, said the deal called for one of history's largest and most complicated financial maneuvers.

Alexander M. Haig, talking to reporters Wednesday at the White House shortly after the Senate confirmed his nomination as Reagan's secretary of state, said he "would certainly anticipate" the new administration would live up to the Carter agreement. But he said he didn't want to take "too rigid a view."

Asked specifically if Reagan would honor the agreement, he said there was "no reason to suggest otherwise."

Before the agreement was reached, Reagan said he would not sign a "blank check" and reserved the right to review any settlement reached by Carter.

Monday night, Reagan, who was briefed by Carter about the deal, said he was satisfied with it "unless there's something we haven't seen yet."

In West Germany on Wednesday, where Carter visited the freed hostages, former White House counsel Lloyd Cutler told reporters it didn't appear Reagan was seriously thinking about renegotiating the agreement.

The accord involved Carter's 1979 directive that froze $11.2 billion in Iranian assets. About $7.9 billion was released when the hostages were freed, although Iran could only claim $2.9 billion immediately. About $5 billion went to pay various Iranian debts and the rest was withheld pending settlement of claims against the assets.

Four provisions remain to be fully implemented by the United States:

—Prohibiting the hostages or their families from suing Iran.

—Freezing assets found in the United States of the late shah and his family.

—Asking federal courts to nullify the 388 suits seeking about $3 billion from Iran.

—Turning over the rest of the frozen Iranian assets, about $4 billion. Part of the money would go to Iran and the rest to an international claims commission.

Charles B. Renfrew, a Carter appointee and acting attorney general pending William French Smith's confirmation by the Senate, said Dyess' statement about the review "comes as a surprise to me, but I can understand that it is a cautious and responsible thing for them to do."

Later Wednesday, Karna Small, a deputy White House press secretary, said there was no intention of delaying the publication. The documents would be delivered "first thing" today, she said.

Keith Phillips Honored As 'Boy Of The Year'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Rose High School junior Keith Phillips was honored as the 1980 Boy of the Year and Jerry Fulford was installed as the new president of the Boys Club of Pitt County, Inc. at the club's annual banquet held Wednesday night at the Rotary Club.

Keith, son of the Rev. James and the Rev. Mary Phillips, was cited for his seven years as an active member of the Boys Club, for his achievements in school, and as an outstanding participant in sports at Rose High.

The award was presented to Keith by Nathaniel Brown, the 1979 Boy of the Year.

The new president, Jerry Fulford, succeeds Cecil Mizell. Other officers installed at the annual meeting-banquet were Don

Members of the executive section of the Mayor's Advisory Committee left Wednesday's noon meeting with an apparent better understanding of the services provided by Pitt County that specifically reach and benefit local citizens.

The executive board of the advisory body, which is in the process of studying all levels of city services, invited officials from the county government to attend the meeting to discuss the relationship involving city and county tax use.

Attending from the county were Charles Gaskins from the Pitt Board of Commissioners, Reginald Gray, county manager, and W. W. Speight, county attorney.

Gray, who distributed prepared information addressing county services that benefit Greenville citizens, as well as data on general county services, explained that county government is the oldest form of government and over the years has become an arm of the state.

Gray said that the county, with many of its services mandated by the state, provides basic levels of services for all citizens in Pitt, under the broad definitions of health, education and welfare. The city of Greenville provides what he termed "urban" services.

Pitt services discussed by Gray that specifically touch Greenville citizens include: tax supervisory functions; elections; Register of Deeds; electrical inspector; data processing; sheriff (who Gray identified as having "total jurisdiction in all areas"); county jail; county communications center; agriculture extension services; health (Pitt Health Department); social services; mental health (Pitt Mental Health Center); ambulance service; local fund for education; Pitt Community College; solid waste disposal; Industrial Development Commission; county medical examiner; Pitt Memorial Hospital; and court facilities.

The county manager, questioned as to the role the county plays in the city school system, explained that both the city and county systems are funded on a local level by county revenues with Pitt funding each system equally per child. Operating and capital outlay revenues are provided by the county for each school (Please turn to Page 6)

GOOD SAMARITANS

Back in December I injured my finger in my car door in front of White's Department Store. I entered the store with my two sons, 18 months and four years old. The clerks immediately came to my aid and summoned one of the store managers, Ben Overton. The clerks notified a family member for me and watched my children for me until someone in my family could pick them up. In the meantime, Mr. Overton drove me to the hospital emergency room and waited over an hour while I was treated. We then returned to the store, where I picked up my car. No one could have been more helpful to a stranger than these people were and I couldn't be more appreciative. Mrs. S. W.

First Federal's Chairman James Is Stepping Down

First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County held its 44th annual meeting of members Wednesday night.

Judge Dink James, co-founder of First Federal who has served as chairman of the board since 1937, announced his retirement as chairman. James will continue to serve as chairman emeritus, director and senior advisor for the association.

Kenneth G. Hite served as acting chairman for the annual session and C. B. Tugwell, president, presented the annual report.

The president observed that high interest rates and inflation made 1980 a trying year for many Americans, but reported that First Federal completed the year "in strong condition."

Tugwell commented, "Our savers, of course, had a very good year in 1980. Thanks to the record high rates we paid during the year, First Federal's depositors earned a record $6,789,533 in savings account interest."

Savings balances now total $80,586,855 at First Federal, he said, a gain of $7,804,520 during 1980.

"Of course, the record high rates we paid to savers meant that we had to charge high rates to borrowers," Tugwell pointed out. "and the higher mortgage rates which were common throughout the country helped to slow the housing market — especially when combined with continuing high home prices."

He continued, "Even so, mortgage loans made by First Federal last year totaled $10,887,850, bringing total mortgage loans to $82,385,558 at year end."

Tugwell said as a result of growth in savings and mortgages, total assets of the (Please turn to Page 12)

Home Businesswoman Advises: 'Plunge In'

By KAREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Starting your own business — it's a dream that many people have from time to time.

Some act on it and find the dream becomes a nightmare. Others are able to convert their dreams into dollars.

Terri P. Tepper, a suburban Chicago businesswoman who operates two businesses from her home, was having difficulty juggling her roles as businesswoman, wife and mother and figured she wasn't alone in her plight. "I thought the best way to find out how other women engaged in a home business were coping was to ask them," Ms. Tepper said in an interview.

So she and her mother, Nona Dawe Tepper, who owned a toy store outside her home for many years, in 1977 began interviewing women who ran businesses from their homes.

Over three years they interviewed 98 women with a wide variety of ages and backgrounds, then selected the stories of 40 of those women for inclusion in their recently published book, "The New Entrepreneurs."

"We found the women who were the most successful were those who had to generate income. They had to make the necessary business decisions to make the business profitable," Ms. Tepper said.

"So many of the women had no other option. They were just too poor to take a job outside the home; sometimes they were too sick or were handicapped, or had children or someone else they had to care for," she said.

High transportation costs are another important reason women open businesses from their homes, Ms. Tepper said.

"So many women are engaged in part-time work and their salaries are being eaten up getting to and from work," she said.

Other women cited safety as a reason for deciding to work out of their homes.

"We found among the women we talked to every kind of diversity you can name. The personalities were different, they were from different racial and economic backgrounds. We talked to women who were barely existing on their incomes and we talked to women who were very, very wealthy. We talked to divorced, married and unmarried women."

Ms. Tepper said she had anticipated that women who were operating home businesses were doing so because they had children.

"But fully one-third of those who talked with didn't have children at home," she said. "The only generalization we could make was that a home business was a means by which people could generate an income."

Ms. Tepper does have a word of advice for anyone thinking of starting a new business.

"What you need to do is plunge in. If you have faith in your business, you need to be true to yourself and pursue it. You can grow as you're ready to grow. You'll learn the skills as you need them," she advises.

"A lot of times people aren't willing to start because they have no confidence in themselves. But the confidence — and your courage — will grow as the business grows."

Physical Violence Can Occur At Home

You may be in less danger of physical violence while walking the streets than when you are with your friends, family and neighbors at home.

Dr. Leo Hawkins, extension human development specialist, North Carolina State University, points out that one-fourth to one-third of all homicides are committed by a relative.

"Our society lets many forms of physical violence occur in the home that wouldn't be tolerated elsewhere," Dr. Hawkins says. "This violence can occur in many forms, including parent-to-child, child-to-parent, between siblings and between spouses."

Hawkins defines physical violence as anything from hitting, slapping, kicking and punching all the way up to murder.

"Research indicates that 98 percent of all American children experience physical punishment, mostly in the form of spanking," Hawkins says. "This spanking usually goes under the label of discipline. However, discipline means to teach a child what is right and wrong in a given situation. Thus, spanking is discipline only if it is coupled with an explanation. Many parents spank their children simply because it makes the parent feel better."

But the tables turn the other way as well. Almost one out of five American

Honorary Awards Are Made

The Women of the First Presbyterian Church held its annual meeting in the fellowship hall and two honorary life memberships were awarded to Mrs. Jack Wilkerson and Mrs. Robert Dayton.

The 1980 history of the church women was given by Historian Mrs. Edward Petrie including the celebration of skills and talents and the Advent workshop to make wreaths, calendars and chains to be used in the home during the Advent season and the dedication of four hand-stitched paraments given in memory of Mrs. Harding Suggs' father, the Rev. Robert Sherman Boyd, a former pastor of First Presbyterian Church. The paraments were designed and made by Mrs. Suggs. A special honor was given Mrs. J. A. Watson, who retired after serving as Women of the Church historian for 22 years and the senior appreciation day that recognized members of the church graduating from high school.

Five memorials were read and candles were lighted in memory of Mrs. Ollie Partin Sutton, Miss Lisa Sutton, Mrs. Luna Depree, Mrs. Naomi Bradshaw and Mrs. Rena Horne.

President Mrs. Ernest Hott conducted the meeting.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It's probably because it's new and I'm not used to it, but men advertising sexy products make me giggle.

They're so awkward playing the sex object role. Throughout the years, women models have sold seductiveness. They flirt with their eyes, invite with their smile, entice with every movement and top it off with a 60-day warranty.

Male models look like a poodle that has just missed the paper. Part of the problem is that advertisers haven't figured out yet what kind of a man impresses women. At the moment they're going for the Statue of David look... plush pile chest, curly hair and blacksmith arms.

I saw a man in a catalogue recently. He was propped up in bed (bare chest showing), tousled and yawning. On the tray beside him was a cup of black coffee, a glass of Alka Seltzer and on his shoulder he had the imprint of two red lips. A pillow next to him was mussed and a silk gown recklessly left behind estimated he hadn't spent the night doing biblical connect-a-dot pictures.

It took me 15 minutes to figure out what he was selling.

I saw a line that read, "Twin, $80" and was about to order the other brother when my girlfriend said, "I think he's selling satin sheets."

Somehow, he didn't impress me as someone who knew percale from corduroy.

Men are comfortable in the authoritative role. That's why for years male salesmen told women what appliances to buy to keep their houses running smoothly, what laundry soap to buy to keep their clothes their brightest, and what cold medicines to buy to assure a healthy family.

Now that sex is an appeal used to sell everything we buy, it's a whole new thing for men.

I loved the guy the other night who rustled cattle all day in his dusty jeans and capped teeth. Then he hit for the showers where he slapped his hairy chest so hard with show-no-mercy cologne I thought he'd break something. He positioned his white cowboy hat which he wore with an evensuit, climbed into his sports car and zoomed off to become a legend in his own time.

I should have felt desirous, titillated, arduous, breathless and womanly.

I felt like giggling.

Dear Abby

Mum Can Be Your Word

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Re your column on how to answer a rude question. Some dozen years ago, when I decided not to attend a social tea, six of my chums dropped by the house to ask why — a merry chiding, you might say.

A nosy neighbor, seeing the cars, came over to see who was there. ("I thought you might be having a party.") Noticing a pot of mums that obviously came from a florist, she asked, "Who sent the flowers?"

Pretending I hadn't heard, I turned to the lady beside me on the sofa and made some random remark. In a few moments, Curious Kitty asked again, "Who sent the flowers?" I studied the flowers, smiled and said, "Lovely, aren't they?"

As the following gathering was breaking up, this same lady said, "I asked you three times who sent the flowers..." I interrupted with, "And I never once answered, did I?"

Within the next few days, I had four calls from those who had taken in this tacky little cross-examination, each saying the same thing: "You taught me something. If you're asked a question you don't want to answer — don't!"

ARDMORE, OKLA.

DEAR ARDMORE: Right. Most people have about as much privacy as they demand.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are very happily married. My problem is not that serious, but I'd appreciate hearing your opinion.

My husband's family have photo albums containing pictures of him and his ex-wife. I feel very uncomfortable when these pictures are shown. We have two small children, and I really don't like them seeing wedding pictures of their daddy and somebody else. During the holidays the albums were out for show, and we had to explain how Daddy was married to another lady first, etc. They weren't married very long, had no children, and nobody in the family is in touch with her, so what's the point of keeping her pictures in the album?

It seems that out of consideration for me, they should have either removed those pictures when we were married, or kept the albums out of sight.

Does this make sense? Or do I sound petty and jealous?

SICK OF SEEING THE EX

DEAR SICK: It makes sense. But perhaps the members of his family are more thoughtless than malicious. Let them know how you feel.

DEAR FED UP: Here is a friend of mine about the problem FED UP IN FLORIDA complained about.

When friends or relatives called to say they just got off the train or plane, my friend replied with great warmth and enthusiasm, "How nice to know you're in town. Don't say another word, just check your bags and come on over for dinner — or we'll pick you up. Then after you're relaxed, we will help you find a comfortable place to stay."

It worked for them!

ZELDA

DEAR ZELDA: Lovely. But what happens if they say, "But we were planning on staying with you"?

DEAR ABBY: Please set the record straight. Harry Drucker doesn't cut Ron Reagan's hair, Sam Stilo, a barber who works for him, does. Please give credit where it is due. Thank you.

MEXICAN PUNCH

Elena Zelayeta, who wrote about Mexican cooking, liked this version of sangria.

4 small or medium lemons

1 medium orange

1/2 cup sugar

3 cups (generous) dry red wine

Using a strainer-type juicer, ream the juice from the lemons and orange; there should be about 1/2 cup lemon juice and about 1-3rd cup orange juice. Add the sugar and wine; stir until sugar is dissolved. Taste and add more sugar if you like a sweet punch. Chill. Makes 1 quart (generous). Serve in wine glasses filled with ice cubes.

Kidney Transplants Soon Available In Pitt County

Summer Jobs Are Offered

Young people between the ages of 15 and 18 years old who are interested in an outdoor summer job helping to develop and preserve the natural environment are being sought by the Employment Security Office (ESC) in Greenville, according to manager James E. Haman.

ESC is recruiting youths to take part in the national Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) which provides summer jobs in national parks, national forests and other public lands and water areas. The work will involve clearing streambanks, building trails, planting trees, developing campgrounds, checking erosion and assisting in other conservation and ecology related activities.

Youths to fill these jobs are selected at random from applicants by a national computer system. Those selected are paid $3.35 an hour for 30 hours of work per week. In addition, they will receive ten hours of environmental instruction each week.

Specific work projects vary from site to site. The program, which begins June 1, lasts from six to eight weeks. About 1,500 youths will be accepted statewide for the program.

Interested youths can apply for YCC through their schools or at the ESC office at 3101 Bismarck Street. ESC contact person for this program is Sandra Zadnik. Registration for the YCC program for 1981 ends on March 15.

Janice E. Brown, director of Youth Services for ESC, points out that the YCC will offer two types of programs for 1981 — residential and non-residential.

Applicants throughout the state are eligible for residential projects. In these, the participants live at a camp near the worksite.

In non-residential projects, it is generally requested that youths live within 30 miles of the worksite as the participants live at home and commute to the worksite.

Now in its ninth year, the program is open to young people of the 15-18 age group regardless of sex, race or economic background.

Six residential camps will be operated in North Carolina and will house 200 residents. These will be in Blowing Rock, Burlington, Cherokee, Cullowhee and Jacksonville.

A non-residential campsite will be located in Greenville. Pitt County youths are to contact the local ESC office for more information and registration for either the residential or non-residential YCC program.

A new program at the East Carolina University School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital will bring the hope of a kidney transplant closer to home for citizens in Eastern North Carolina with end-stage renal disease.

Medical center officials were notified this week that approval to implement renal transplantation services has been granted by the Health Financing Administration of the Department of Health and Human Services. The program will be directed by the ECU Department of Surgery.

The medical school's Office of Health Services Research plans for a thanksgiving service for the hostages at the Pearl Harbor naval station chapel, a Navy spokesman said.

Orlando volunteered to join the services, and the Navy quickly accepted.

As the Pacific Fleet Band played "Yellow Ribbon" one more time, Orlando helped lead the ringing of the bell at the services Wednesday.

"I think the ending of this story may be the beginning of a new story for this country," Orlando told a small crowd.

"We showed the world that America takes care of its own. Now when I sing the song, it will have a whole new meaning for me," he said.

and Development estimates that 168 patients in the region will be medically eligible for a transplant in 1981. The Department of Surgery expects to perform 25 procedures during the first year of the program.

Dr. Frank Thomas, professor of surgery and director of renal transplantation, said the new service would make renal transplantation "more accessible and convenient" to many patients who now depend on dialysis to rid their bodies of harmful wastes because their kidneys have failed.

"ECU and Pitt Memorial have excellent physicians, facilities, laboratories and staff to support renal transplantation here," said Thomas. "We expect to perform our first transplant by the end of January."

Thomas said surgeons at Pitt Memorial have removed more than 30 pairs of kidneys during the last year. The kidneys have been transported to Duke Medical Center, headquarters for the Southeastern Regional Organ Procurement System that serves 18 states.

A computer connects the ECU transplantation program with the network of 136 medical centers across the nation that participate in the system. The computer is used to match a donor kidney with a compatible recipient, a process that usually takes place within 36 to 48 hours after a kidney is removed.

Potential organ donors are usually victims of strokes or severe head injuries who have irreparable brain damage.

Thomas said a patient requesting a kidney transplant will first have an educational consultation with a nephrologist and a transplant surgeon to discuss the risks and benefits of dialysis and transplantation.

The next step will be to determine if a kidney is available from a living related donor — either a brother, sister, father, mother, son or daughter. Thomas said that 90 percent of transplants from living related donors are successful and that the survival rate declines as low as 65 percent for recipients with unrelated donor grafts.

Tissue matching, drug therapy and immunological monitoring determine the recipient's chances of successfully accepting the new kidney.

Thomas said a kidney transplant usually takes about two hours. The recipient and living related donor will be in adjoining operating rooms, and once the kidney is removed from the donor, it will be rinsed with a cold solution and transplanted immediately.

A patient who is not compatible with a living related donor may spend up to two years on a waiting list before a suitable kidney is located through the organ procurement system. Organs identified through the computer network will be transported to Greenville in a special preservation machine that will protect the kidney until surgery is performed.

Before and after surgery, a patient is treated with immunosuppressive drugs to block the body's natural rejection of the new kidney. Careful monitoring allows physicians to modify drug therapy, an action which may reverse a patient's initial rejection of an organ.

Most patients remain in the hospital 30 days to test kidney function and modify drug therapy. After leaving the hospital, patients will visit the transplantation clinic for additional immunological monitoring. If a kidney is not rejected in 60 days, Thomas said there is a 90 percent chance for a successful graft.

In addition to permitting patients with end-stage renal disease to lead more normal lives, Thomas said that transplantation is also more cost effective than dialysis. According to a study in the NEW ENGLAND JOURNAL OF MEDICINE, over a 10-year period transplantation is approximately six times less expensive than dialysis performed in a medical center and nearly four times less expensive than dialysis performed at home.

Before joining the medical school in August, 1979, Thomas was a member of the renowned kidney and heart transplantation team at the Medical College in Virginia. He is a founding member of the American Society of Transplant Surgeons.

In addition to Thomas, ECU physicians Walter J. Pories, Charles Rob and Edward G. Flickinger are members of the transplantation team. The team also includes surgery residents Carl Haisch and Robert Deepe, surgical transplant coordinator Dennis Blessing, medical transplant coordinator Sandra Bullock, and nurse practitioner Diane Meelheim.

Drs. Alfred L. Ferguson, Thomas E. Burkart and Wayne Kendrick, clinical professors of medicine, will serve as nephrology consultants along with ECU physician Richard Merrill.

Drs. J. Richard Gavigan, Edward O. Janosko and Emmett J. Walsh Jr., clinical professors of surgery, will share responsibility for the removal of kidneys.

Donor testing and tissue matching will be performed by Dr. Robert Hanrahan, assistant professor of pathology and laboratory medicine.

Iran Needs Leadership

For more than a year now the representatives of the United States have had to walk on egg shells with whatever government there was in Iran.

We were doing it, not because we have any fear of this outlaw bunch, but because we have regard for human life and we respect international law.

This week the hostage situation was finally resolved, primarily because the badly mismanaged economy of Iran was in need of the assets which former President Carter had frozen when the hostages were taken prisoner.

We made certain agreements in return for the freeing of the hostages and as a civilized nation we should be bound by them.

Neither we nor any other nation in the world, however, should ever forget that the Iranian government violated all understanding of the laws for relations between nations. The Iranian government's condoning of the U. S. embassy take-over has been described as an act of war. It was more accurately a criminal act. It would have been a violation of the internal laws of any civilized nation on earth, and the perpetrators would have been sent to jail by any responsible government.

As galling as it all was, however, it is something we must put behind us now. There would be great satisfaction in sending the bombers over Terhan, but it would gain us nothing. The greatest danger to the Iranian people today is a take-over by the Soviets, given the make believe government which exists in Iran today.

We can only hope that responsible leadership comes forth in that troubled nation before it is too late.

Bigger Role For Women

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Burlington, was in law school at the University of North Carolina, she was the only female student.

Because she was unique, her career prospects weren't very bright. "That was when nobody wanted a woman lawyer anywhere," she recalls.

While some of her colleagues became judges, she raised a family and eventually won election to the General Assembly. Now, she and 12 other female legislators, the highest number ever, have been named committee chairmen, a sign of their growing seniority and power in the Legislature.

"(House Speaker Liston) Ramsey was not looking at the women as women in making committee appointments, but he tried to give them what he thought they could do," she said.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green assigned each of the three women in the Senate to lead a committee. In the House, 10 of the 19 women are committee chairmen. There are 15 Democratic women in the House.

In the last session under the leadership of Green and then House Speaker Carl Stewart, there were 10 female committee leaders. As recently as 1973, there was only one female committee chairman.

Bocce, according to the Associated Press Sports Almanac, is "the oldest bowling game in history." The name comes from the Italian word for kiss, which is what the game is all about, except that it is a very chaste kiss in keeping with the high moral standards of the mother country.

The game is played with eight large bocce balls, about the size of a grapefruit, four to a team, and a ping-pong sized target ball called "Jack" or "Pellino," which as every aficionado of gangster movies knows means "little pal." The object is to roll the bocce ball closest to the target ball, blasting opponents who may be closer out of the way.

Tournament bocce is played on a clay or dirt court measuring 78 to 92 feet by 13 to 19½ feet enclosed with boarded ends and sides. In Asbury Park, where Putt-Putt Petrillo and his cronies are organizing the takeover, it's even played on a brand of astroturf called "Dayco Turf."

When I was a kid growing up in New York's Italian neighborhoods of Long Island City and Astoria, bocce was played with great style, verve, lots of red wine, arguments, corkscrew cigars called "cheruttas" and frequent outbursts of "Som-menna-Gun" and stronger cross-lingual expletives. Your really great players were born in Italy and didn't reach their prime until their late 70s.

Tossing a bocce ball is undoubtedly one of the most deft and graceless actions engaged in by humans. The bowler does a little off charge. Nixon, for one, imposed a wage-price freeze without any warning and in opposition to his own philosophy. But Carter did it in a wholesale way.

Last year, for example, he said he had balanced the budget, but three weeks later everyone could see it was unbalanced again. He promised to cut inflation, but he condoned inflationary spending. He instituted wage-price guidelines, but after a year he relaxed the wage standard. He began a new economic program just weeks before the elections.

And the result seems to have been a loss of credibility and public confidence, rooted in the feeling that if the boss didn't believe in his programs after a few weeks then they couldn't be trusted at all.

Reagan comes into office with his economic goals clear. He hopes to cut spending, cut the size of the bureaucracy, cut taxes, cut red tape and wasteful regulations, spur investments, raise productivity.

Because he has stated his views so distinctly, the burden on him to follow through or else lose respect is now probably greater than it ever was on Carter. His performance or lack of it is measurable.

And so, even before he took the oath of office speculation arose over whether he might postpone goals that months earlier he had so strongly espoused. Everyone has heard them — that the closer he got to the big job the more realistic he was becoming, that he would back off from his tax-cut proposals, that he move slowly rather than aggressively.

His term has just begun, and there are indications the public wants to give him to suit their temperaments, their ways of doing business."

Many of the women arrived at the Legislature only after developing their political skills within the Democratic Party and in local government. Mrs. Seymour is one of those women. She was mayor pro tem of Greensboro, served four terms on the Greensboro City Council and worked on the legislative committee of the North Carolina League of Municipalities before being elected to the General Assembly.

For Rep. Betty Thomas, D-Concord, stepping into a traditionally male role literally meant filling her husband's shoes. When her husband died in 1971, Mrs. Thomas was called on to complete the remaining year of his term.

"It was not without a fight or a struggle," she recalled. "I was spared nothing. You've got to put your neck out there on the line and make it yourself."

"But I've finally achieved what I've been striving for and that is to be considered a legislator first and then I can be considered a Democrat or a woman," she said.

The women in the Legislature meet from time to time for mutual support and to discuss upcoming legislation.

"It's an easy and natural thing to do," Mrs. Thomas said.

Mrs. Woodard pointed out that since women are beginning to achieve seniority, they also are beginning to establish a political network to attract more women to the General Assembly.

"We're no longer being given the dirty jobs; we're being given responsibility," she said. "Other women see that and want to come to the General Assembly."

The other women who will be leading committees are: Sen. Rachel Gray, D-High Point, Senior Citizens Affairs; Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Raleigh, Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Human Resources; Rep. Margaret Tennille, D-Winston-Salem, Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Justice and Public Safety; Rep. Lura Tally, D-Fayetteville, Higher Education; Rep. Marie Colton, D-Asheville, Cultural Resources; Rep. Jo Foster, D-Charlotte, Education; Rep. Edith Lutz, D-Lawndale, Local Government II.

Continuity In Foreign Affairs

A good gesture on the part of the new Reagan administration was the naming of former president Jimmy Carter as special envoy to greet the released hostages.

Carter had worked his heart out to obtain the release, and it is important to the new administration that the matter is not hanging over it.

Too, the appointment demonstrates to the world that there is continuity in our conduct of foreign affairs.

A Broadening Vision

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — For those of us who grew up during a time when radio was mysterious, television was unknown, and computers were as remote as an un-walked upon moon, a "high technology future" was out of the question.

Our best hope was just to escape the cotton mill or tobacco shed. Anything else would do.

A new generation of North Carolinians can look forward to better than that if Gov. Jim Hunt's dreams come true. Despite tremendous gains, Tar Heels remain at or near the bottom in wages and in per capita income. As Hunt puts it: "We have been running just to stand still."

And just when we had gotten used to his talking about computers and microelectronics, the governor has broadened his view again, and started using some even newer terminology.

How about molecular biology? Or, photovoltaics?

"These are new and exciting fields, but they haven't developed yet. There's nothing happening right now except in research. They aren't nearly so far along as microelectronics."

Intrigued
"But Hunt is intrigued by them. He has been doing a lot of reading and thinking, and talking to people," a close aide explained.

The comments came as the governor talked informally with reporters about his budget for the coming two years, and his legislative program. He puts major emphasis on the proposed $24.4 million Microelectronics Center which would involve the major universities, Research Triangle resources, and the electronics industry in building North Carolina as a major research and production center.

Otherwise, the governor's budget and proposals are fairly old hat; so much so that some don't see him pushing for major new programs in the coming two to four years.

But Hunt says there is a strategy undergirding his proposals which builds carefully upon the framework which has already been built. His efforts in industrial growth and educational advancement provide the foundation.

"There is a strategy here that involves three things, and requires first of all that North Carolina make a commitment to a high technology future. We are tired of being (at the bottom) and we have got to do something dramatic to change that," Hunt commented.

The Microelectronics Center is the keystone to that strategy. Everything else revolves around that.

The Bocce Conspiracy

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe this is a case for the FBI, or the Interstate Commerce Commission. I'm not sure, but I've got to report a hijacking.

A state senator from Monmouth County down on the Jersey shore is trying to hijack bocce (sometimes spelled bocce) as the official State Game of New Jersey, which is like naming lasagna the national dish of Afghanistan.

Now everybody knows that bocce is a New York game, and the most popular game in New Jersey is collecting tolls or perhaps swatting mosquitoes. It used to be rolling wicker chairs along the boardwalk in Atlantic City, but now the crap shooters have moved the action indoors.

Anyhow Sen. Eugene Bedell of Keansburg, who is of Irish ancestry and probably wouldn't know a bocce ball from a Kerr's Pink Irish potato, has introduced Senate Bill 1573 to make bocce the official State Game of New Jersey. But I understand the real hotbed of the conspiracy is located in Asbury Park, which has designated Bocce Capital of New Jersey by the legislature and boasts the state's honorary bocce commissioner, Anthony "Putt-Putt" Pettilo, a city policeman who got his nickname from his motorcycle.

The smart talk around Trenton is that if the Bedell bill passes both houses, it will be signed into law by Gov. Brendan Byrne, another Irishman, which will be the greatest piracy perpetrated against neighboring New York since the hijacking of the football Giants to the Meadowlands.

Bocce was brought to America by Italian immigrants settling in New York's Greenwich Village just after the American Revolution. It may have looked suspiciously like the game Peter Stuyvesant's good burghers played on Bowling Green in their wooden shoes, back when the town was called Nieu Amsterdam, but that is just proof of an earlier hijacking.

Bocce is as old as the Roman Empire. The British adapted it for their game of "bowles" after Caesar's legions brought them civilization, then in the 16th century, in another historic ripoff, the Dutch called their version kegging. Imported by the French, it became "boules" or "petanque."

In all probability, Caesar didn't cast the die before charge. Nixon, for one, imposed a wage-price freeze without any warning and in opposition to his own philosophy. But Carter did it in a wholesale way.

Last year, for example, he said he had balanced the budget, but three weeks later everyone could see it was unbalanced again. He promised to cut inflation, but he condoned inflationary spending. "I think we have longevity now and I think that's the key to the chairmanships," Mrs. Mathis said. "There have been women here for some time now and it's beginning to tell."

It's been 61 years since Buncombe County elected the first woman to any Southern state legislature. Lillian Clement, a 26-year-old Asheville attorney, defeated two male opponents in 1920, the same year women got the right to vote.

"It has taken a little longer for women (to come to power)," Mrs. Marvin said. "It's always been more difficult for a woman to prove herself as a legislator. She has had to work harder than the average male simply because the system has been dominated by men so long. They have devised the rules

Other Editors Say Case Of Overkill

(Salisbury Evening Post)

"I know there's a need to curb crime, but there's gotta be a better way of doing it."

The Winston-Salem auctioneer was talking about the proposal of the Governor's Crime Commission to regulate dealers in second-hand goods.

Under the proposed bill, these merchants would fingerprint and photograph the people who sell them the merchandise. This would affect merchants ranging from exclusive antique shops to the weekend flea market. Extensive records would have to be kept on the transactions.

The idea, of course, is to kill the market for stolen goods. Thieves would hesitate to sell goods if they had to be fingerprinted and photographed. And if they couldn't sell, they wouldn't steal. At least that's the theory.

To a degree, the proposal would work. It is obvious that the free and easy buying and selling at flea markets make them an obvious and almost risk-free place to dispose of stolen goods.

But the proposal is like trying to kill a fly on a table with a 20-pound maul. The chances are there would be more damage to the table than to the fly.

Most, if not all, antique and second-hand goods shops are one-person operations, and very few are highly profitable. Requiring them to buy and operate fingerprinting and photographic equipment — plus the paper work — would be a burden few could bear.

Fingerprinting and mug shots smack of police stations and criminals. Just how many people would be willing to undergo this routine to get rid of a couple of old chairs, an old refrigerator or even a valuable antique? The antiques and second-hand businesses would soon be in shambles because few people who might want to sell to them would put up with that sort of treatment and the invasion of their privacy.

Bad laws in general are worse than no laws at all. And this proposal is about as bad as any reported in recent years. If the Governor's Commission wants credibility for the rest of its recommendations it would do well to jettison this proposal first.

Strength For Today

ART OF PRAYING

Some people have tried prayer for a long time without getting what they consider satisfactory results. But in this connection it should never be forgotten that there are right ways of praying and wrong ways. Perhaps it is not the prayer but the prayerer that is at fault.

Prayer is not an instrument put into the hands of man whereby he changes God's mind or compels God to do something in man's behalf. Prayer is communion with God in such fashion that God is able to do for us certain things that He always wants to do. God is always much more eager to give than we are to receive. God gives us what we are capable of receiving and willing to take.

Of this, however, the Bible assures us — God always wants our prayers to be for great and apparently impossible things. God is grieved when we offer up cautious, qualified little prayers. We may pray for guidance in the smallest things of life, but it should be done in the context of preparing ourselves for eternal life. — Elisha Douglass

Iranians In U.S. Happy Over Hostage Release

By KEN KLEIN
Associated Press Writer
FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Freedom for the American hostages in Iran may mean liberation of another sort for Iranians who have been leading cautious lives in the United States during the crisis, says one Iranian immigrant.

"Now I can announce myself," said Hatam Hatameh, originally from Tehran. "In a way, we've been living in hiding. If anyone asked who am I, I always said I am Iranian. But I thought the fewer people who knew I was here, the better."

Other Iranian immigrants he has talked to also are pleased the hostages have been released, Hatameh said Wednesday.

"I have talked with other Iranians who are getting telephone calls from Iranians in California, Illinois — all over the country — to say congratulations that the hostages are out of Iran," he said Wednesday.

Iranians in the United States hope that freedom for the hostages will ease travel restrictions so they can visit relatives in their homeland.

Hatameh said. "I hope now that Iranians will be able to go back and see their families in Iran," he said.

Hatameh's family fled Iran Dec. 7, 1978, after open protests had begun against the government of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Originally, the family traveled to California, but found property prices too high and moved to Fort Myers.

A computer executive and textbook author in Iran, Hatameh, 43, says he is respected by co-workers at the computer center that employs him in Fort Myers.

But he was disturbed one day when his fourth-grade son came home from school and reported that other students were insulting him because of his nationality.

"The other children told my son he would have to go back to Iran or they would kill him," he said.

After he called the school about the incident, the teasing stopped, Hatameh said.

says. "The teacher explained to the other students that people come from different countries and it wasn't the Iranian boy's fault that the hostages were taken," said Tommie Halgrim, the principal at Harlem Heights Elementary School.

Hatameh was so enthralled with broadcasts of the hostage story that he says he slept little more than an hour in the wee hours Wednesday morning after he saw television coverage of the 52 former captives arriving in West Germany.

"But I'll sleep much better tonight," he said.

Hatameh said he is happy about the prospect of the hostages reuniting with their families after their 444-day ordeal.

"I'm very, very happy these people can join their families, that the hostages will be back in their own culture and their families won't have to worry about them anymore," he says.

tricity, or power industries. Molecular biology and mind-boggling applications including creation of living organisms designed to do specific jobs; learning the codes which control cell development, manufacturing synthetics which duplicate the molecular structures of any variety of foods or chemicals, and ordering changes in structures which turn one substance into another have untold promise in energy, medicine, agriculture, and industry.

Fuel substitutes, food substitutes in which cells actually trigger proper taste and smell responses, cells which gobble up oil spills, cells which eat cancer, conversion of hazardous wastes which can't be properly destroyed into usable materials (remember how mysterious radio once seemed?).

Hunt, in his strategy, sees all of this coming together with developing change in the state's educational system to provide a "truly excellent" education so that tomorrow's North Carolinians will have a far better life.

Now bocce may be big along the boardwalk in Asbury Park. It may even have its followers in Secaucus, Camden, Newark and the more recherche sections of Jersey like Linden and Bayonne, where they go to have something to do besides making gin and unloading crude. But it is a way of life in Astoria, Corona, Greenpoint, Massapequa, Buffalo, Utica and similar New York enclaves of genuine Italian-American culture where Jersey is regarded as a state you drive through to get somewhere else. The trouble with the George Washington bridge is that it doesn't really go any place, unlike the Manhattan bridge which has bocce courts under both ends.

I may have to buck this hijacking complaint up to the Unione Federazioni Italiana Bocce, founded in Turin in 1898 to settle bocce arguments, which has got to make it the busiest deliberative body either side of Glasgow night court.

Apparently getting ready to appeal his case to an even higher authority, Putt-Putt Petillo informs me that a nun from Rome named Sister Mary Charles visited the bocce action in Asbury Park last year and told about the "miracle of the bocce balls." It seems that in a game played outside Naples in 1450, a player became so enraged when his ball lodged under a tree shading a wayside shrine, he hurled his ball with many angry curses at the effigy of the Virgin. The left cheek in the portrait immediately began to shed real blood. The player was hanged after a short trial, but many miracles resulted, as new blood continued to appear on Our Lady's cheek. The site of this ancient game is now marked by an orphanage, a retirement home, a Dominican monastery and a large hotel to accommodate the thousands of pilgrims who come to the shrine of the bocce ball miracle.

In keeping with the game's edifying history, Petillo is hereby advised that it is going to take a miracle and then some to swipe the grand old game away from the Empire State.

balance stutter step and lets the ball go as if he were a waiter getting rid of a too hot pizza pan. After the ball is released, all sorts of body English (body Italian?) is brought into play to guide or pray it along the desired path.

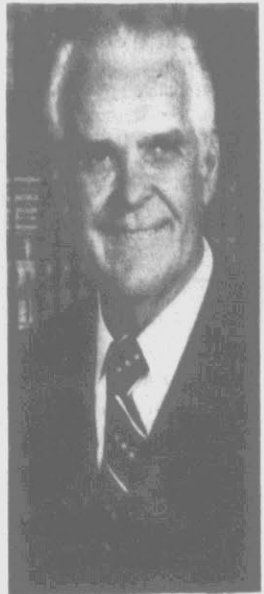

From constant bocce watching, I already knew about 600 words in Italian when I signed up for the language in Brooklyn's Cathedral High School. The first four I used got me sent to the principal's office.

STUDENT SELECTED

James Michael Foreman of Greenville has been selected for inclusion in the 1981 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." He is a student at Elizabeth City State University. Foreman is grandson of Mr. and Mrs. James Louis Foreman of Greenville.

Dr. Roberson Will Speak At Church

Dr. Lee Roberson, pastor of the Highland Park Baptist Church and founder and Chancellor of Tennessee Temple University, Chattanooga, Tenn., will be the guest speaker at the People's Baptist Temple here January 26 and 27. Services will begin at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

DR. LEE ROBERSON

Roberson's church, said to be the largest in the world (in membership), supports 483 missionaries at home and abroad and operates 71 branch churches in the tri-state area.

The university, founded in 1946, has a present enrollment of more than 5,000 people from each state in the Union and foreign countries. The university consists of a Division of Arts and Sciences, Division of Bible and Christian Ministries, Seminary, Junior-Senior High School, Elementary School, and Tennessee Temple School for the Deaf.

Students On Honors List

LOUISBURG — Area students were named to the Louisburg College honorable mention list for the fall semester. Students receiving honorable mention must have a grade point average of 3.9-3.0 while carrying a full academic load.

Dennis Paul Ross, son of Dr. and Mrs. L.E. Ross; and David Brantley Rhodes, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Malcolm Rhodes, both of Greenville, were named to the honorable mention list.

ON DEAN'S LIST

Stuart S. Bowman, son of Dr. J.F. Bowman of Greenville was included in the fall term Dean's List at Furman University. The list is comprised of full-time undergraduate students who earn a grade point average of 3.2 or better on Furman's four-point system.

Carter Accuses..... Polish Strikes Ordered As Farmer Talks Failed

Earlier, Mondale told reporters at Andrews Air Force Base that the former hostesses told of abuse "worse than we expected. It continued up to the last moment." But he declined to specify particular episodes, saying "it is up to the individuals themselves to make those points."

Mondale said the visit was "a moment that none of us will forget as long as we live. They are magnificent Americans."

Muskie said that doctors at Wiesbaden "said of the president's visit that it was as good as two days of therapy... it was the same for us."

"It was a very moving experience... a very personal one-on-one meeting. We embraced each of them. The Marine guards were standing stiffly at attention, with new haircuts and everything shipshape. But when the president embraced them, they responded the same way."

Muskie said it is only natural that Reagan wants to review the hostage settlement before fully embracing it. He said the Carter administration did its utmost to keep the incoming administration advised, "but we would not have expected them to make final judgments. We expect them to do that now."

However, he added, "these agreements are binding international agreements," and "we regard them as fair agreements." He warned that any breach might jeopardize a $1.5 billion escrow account entrusted to Algeria, which could hand the money directly to Iran without considering further U.S. claims against it.

Asked if the administration weren't guilty of negotiating with kidnapers, Muskie replied: "Let me put it this way. The ultimate in immoral acts is the waging of aggressive war, as Adolph Hitler did. We nevertheless negotiated treaties to end that war, because peace is better than war. We negotiated this settlement to release the hostages because it is better to have them free than enslaved."

Some of the stories that Carter told had been relayed before by hostages' relatives: that some hostages were held in solitary confinement for as much as 400 days, some were told falsely that their mothers were dead and some were lined up before mock execution squads.

"They tried to convince them we were the villains, that we had robbed and cheated the Iranian people for 35 years," Carter said.

"And even after month after month, they (the Iranians) still took pleasure in a abusing them psychologically, even physically."

Carter said that he told the hostages they were free to go at any time, but said he "strongly advised them" to stay together at least through Sunday so that those who are suffering most from the consequences of their captivity can receive the strength of the whole group in a period of decompression.

Asked if anything in particular was wrong with the hostages, he said that for some, isolation had left them in a state of semi-confusion. He also said some had lost weight.

Carter, asked about statements that Reagan will want to examine the agreement with Iran extremely carefully before agreeing to implement it, said a review to see if the agreement has any defects was "perfectly legitimate."

"In my judgment, the United States' position on the agreement is a very favorable one for us," Carter said. "Not just because the hostages have been released now to freedom but because the financial settlement is one of which we are very proud."

"Also, our nation's word of honor is at stake," Carter said. "I signed on behalf of our country these agreements and I think it would be a serious thing for us to violate them."

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police reinforcements today turned back columns of tractors driven by angry farmers demanding an independent union as workers shut down hundreds of factories in at least a dozen cities across Poland to press demands for a five-day work week.

The farmers tried to drive on the city of Bydgoszcz, 150 miles northwest of Warsaw, but heavy police contingents blocked all roads, sources said.

"There were no incidents," said a spokesman for Solidarity, the nation's largest independent labor union. "But police warned protesting farmers they would face punishment if they forced their way into the city."

The spokesman said the farmers, who have been pressing for their own independent union for the past three months, were planning to stage a protest rally in downtown Bydgoszcz later today.

Another group of about 200 farmers held a rally in Inowroclaw, 35 miles south of Bydgoszcz. No incidents were reported.

Similar rallies were reported in other agricultural centers.

Meanwhile, workers shut down factories and transportation links for up to four hours in a series of "warning strikes" ordered by Solidarity leaders after a six-hour meeting with Premier Jozef Pieluski failed to satisfy workers' demands for a five-day work week and full access to the media.

More than 800 plants were reported closed in the Baltic seaport of Gdansk, flashpoint of last summer's labor rebellion.

Union leaders in Warsaw said the city's bus and streetcar workers would stage their second four-hour walkout of the month Friday, and the work force at 30 to 40 plants in the area were expected to quit for several hours.

Solidarity sources said all members of the federation would be urged to stay away from work Saturday, the second such strike this month. A union spokesman predicted at least half of the federation's 10 million members would heed the call.

"We did not achieve anything," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said in a terse statement after the meeting with Pinkowski broke up Wednesday night. But Jan Rolewski, one of the 16 Solidarity delegates, said they were still in contact with the government, trying to arrange a resumption of the talks.

Warsaw Radio reported the two sides had narrowed their differences over the length of the work week to one hour, with the union willing to work 41½ hours and the government offering 42½ instead of the present 46. But it said the union was still demanding every Saturday off while the government was holding out for two working Saturdays, the present setup.

The government radio said Pinkowski proposed creation of a government-Solidarity commission to examine the economic impact of the demand for a shorter work week immediately.

Solidarity claims that the five-day, 40-hour work week and full access to the government controlled newspapers, television and radio were promised in the Gdansk agreement that ended the nationwide summer strike wave and authorized the first legal unions free of Communist Party control in the Soviet bloc.

The government so far has said nothing publicly about the demand for media access. It has offered to phase in the five-day, 40-hour week over five years. But it says it cannot put it into effect now because of the country's acute economic and financial crisis.

Warsaw Radio said the government negotiators told the Solidarity delegation January's production targets, already in danger because several million workers struck Saturday Jan. 10, could not be met if the workers stayed home this Saturday.

Walesa succeeded in getting other Solidarity leaders to agree to a no-strike pledge last fall when the fear of Soviet military intervention reached its peak.

In conversations with his brother, Richard, and sister-in-law, Linda, in Brockton, Mass., he also said he was kept in solitary confinement for 374 days.

"He told us he was beaten by them and placed in solitary confinement because of his escape attempts," Linda Kalp said.

Michael Metrinko said in a phone call to Olyphant, Pa., that he had been in solitary confinement for 8½ months and didn't even recognize some of his fellow captives when they were taken to Tehran airport, according to WCAU-TV reporter Mary Ellen Keating, who spoke with him.

In Balch Springs, Texas, Wynona McKeel said her son Johnny told her a guard had knocked out a tooth and his captors had told him, "Your mother is dead and if you want to go back for the funeral, you'll have to tell us what we want to know."

The 27-year-old Marine said he gave only his name, rank and serial number.

"I told him, 'I ain't dead,'" Mrs. McKeel said, adding angrily: "They're stupid, barbaric people. They're fanatics... They say they're religious, but they don't worship the same God I do."

Lopez, credited with holding off some militants the day of the takeover so 15 Americans could flee, told his family in Globe, Ariz., that he was defiant throughout his captivity. He stopped writing them letters after last April because he believed his captors censored the mail and he refused to be in a Christmas film that he called a propaganda program.

On the wall of his cell, he wrote, "Viva la roja, blanco y azul," knowing that the Iranians would not know the words meant, "Long live the red, white and blue."

Former hostage Joseph Hall, asked by his mother-in-law, Patricia Boggs, whether he hated his captors, said: "To remain Iranians and have to live in Iran the rest of their lives will be punishment enough."

Medal Awards Gain Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to present congressional gold medals to the former hostages held in Iran may be getting support at a record rate, its sponsor said today.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., told reporters he would officially introduce the bill today and already 201 House members have become co-sponsors. "This is probably the first time in history so many people have become co-sponsors to a bill on the day it was introduced," he said.

The Annunzio bill would provide for gold medals for each of the 52 hostages released Tuesday as well as a medal for Richard Queen, who was released earlier after 250 days of captivity.

"I have received calls from all over the country supporting the gold medal bill, and in my opinion it is the very least that we can do to honor 53 brave men and women who indeed deserve the title of heroes," he said.

"The American hostages have given to this country a new awareness of the freedom that we tend to take for granted," Annunzio said.

The bill provides that in addition to the gold medals, bronze duplicates be struck and sold to the public.

Annunzio, chairman of a House Banking subcommittee, said hearings would be held soon on the bill. He promised to consider including also medals for women and blacks released by the Iranians after several weeks of captivity.

He said he also would look into a way to remember the eight Americans who died in an unsuccessful rescue mission. "Certainly they sacrificed the most," he said of the eight.

"I visualize millions of bronze duplicates being sold. Perhaps some of that money can be placed in a trust fund to insure the education of the children of the eight men who lost their lives," he said.

Annunzio said that the design for the medals would be chosen by the U.S. Treasury and that officials had told him it would take three to six months after passage of the legislation to get the medals ready.

County money currently budgeted for the Greenville and Pitt County Schools totals some $6,567,103, the spokesman reported.

According to Gray, ad valorem taxes levied by the county provide some $11 million of a net budget figure for Pitt of approximately $11 million. Various sources of revenue make up the balance.

Greenville's 1980 tax valuation totaled $402 million, according to Ed Wyatt, city manager, with Pitt County receiving some $3.5 million to $3.6 million from city residents in the form of 1980 ad valorem taxes.

Speight offered the executive committee members background information on the county service structure.

Dr. Wallace Wooles, general chairman of the advisory board, expressed appreciation to the county officials on behalf of the committee members for their discussion of the service matters.

Wooles said that he felt the committee members better understood the role the county plays in local services as a result of the meeting and he applauded the cooperation of the visiting county spokesmen.

The chairman said that another public meeting will be scheduled soon by one of the six subcommittees studying the various levels of city services.

Carter, asked about statements that Reagan will want to examine the agreement with Iran extremely carefully before agreeing to implement it, said a review to see if the agreement has any defects was "perfectly legitimate."

Promotion For Former Hostage

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Air Force officials said today they were trying to arrange a ceremony to mark the promotion of former hostage David Roeder to colonel.

Lt. Col. Roeder, 40, of Alexandria, Va., would have been eligible for promotion during his period of captivity in Iran.

Roeder was deputy air attache in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and had arrived there only three days before it was seized Nov. 4, 1979.

Iranian militants called him a "criminal" because of his more than 100 combat missions in Vietnam.

He is married and has two children.

Judge Upholds Rules On Extensive Drug-Testing

Researcher Admits To 'Faking' Cancer Data

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Harvard medical school researcher who acknowledged faking some research data apparently also did many of his experiments on cancer cells from monkeys, although he believed they were human cells, his former colleagues say.

Seven scientists, including five former co-workers of Dr. John C. Long, published a paper Thursday in the British scientific journal Nature which raises new questions about the results of Long's scientific work.

The scientists said there was no evidence of any deliberate fraud in the case of the cell cultures. Long had developed four lines of what he believed to be human cancer cells since 1973. But re-analysis showed that three of them are cells from a strain of owl monkey, the scientists said.

Nevertheless, the incident may have slowed research into Hodgkin's disease, the human cancer which Long believed the cells represented.

Hodgkin's disease is a cancer of the lymph system which attacks 7,100 Americans and causes 1,700 deaths a year. It is among the most treatable of cancers. But scientists have sought for years to isolate the malignant cell responsible for the disease in hopes of better treatment or diagnosis.

Since 1973, Long had reported isolating long-living cell cultures from four Hodgkin's disease patients although other labs were unable to get such cultures to grow for more than a few months.

Last January, Long's research was ended when he was asked to resign from Harvard and Massachusetts General Hospital after admitting that he faked portions of the data in a 1979 scientific paper based on the cells.

A subsequent re-examination using chromosome and enzyme analysis showed that three of the cell lines were malignant kidney cells from the northern Colombian brown-foot owl monkey, the scientists said in the Nature article.

"The fourth cell line is of human origin, but its relation to Hodgkin's disease has not been established," they said.

Dr. Nancy Harris, leader of the re-examination, said there was "no evidence of any kind" of fraud. She said owl monkey cells were being grown in Long's lab at the time the Hodgkin's cultures were started, and contamination by unwanted cells is a common problem.

Long said in a telephone interview that he believed the cells were valid until a March 1979 enzyme analysis suggested there might be a problem. But after learning this, he said, he concealed the potential problem from coworkers — an action he now says was "clearly a mistake."

"I had a personal commitment to the work and that, I think, obscured my ability to analyze the experiments with a cold and critical eye," he said.

Ironically, Long's work with the cell lines seemed to back up a current theory of Hodgkin's disease that the malignant cell may be a relative of the macrophage, an amoeba-like scavenger cell of the immune system.

"I don't believe that this setback at the cell culture level is a setback for presently available techniques of diagnosis or treatment," said Dr. Henry Kaplan of Stanford, who first advanced the macrophage theory. "But it might slow down the search for new and more advanced diagnostic or therapeutic techniques that could evolve from such studies."

Kaplan said recent evidence suggests that Hodgkin's disease may even be caused by a virus, but that without stable long-lived cultures of Hodgkin's disease cells this theory cannot be proved.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — In a decision that a drug company says would deprive the public of low-cost drugs, a judge has upheld the government's right to require that generic drugs be tested extensively before being sold.

U.S. District Judge Frederick B. Lacey ruled Wednesday that there may be differences between generic drugs marketed by Premo Pharmaceutical Laboratories Inc. of South Hackensack and more expensive brand-name products. In the case of one drug, the judge ruled, the difference could be serious enough to cause a fatal blood condition.

The judge barred Premo from selling untested generic drugs. Testing of drugs can take from five to 10 years.

Premo maintained it had marketed proven drugs after the brand-name manufacturers' patents expired. An attorney for Premo said the company would "almost certainly" appeal the ruling.

The marketing of generic drugs has been widely hailed by consumer groups because they often are cheaper than brand-name remedies.

New Jersey has a law requiring doctors who prescribe drugs to tell their patients whether generic versions of the drugs are available.

WOULD USE KNOW-HOW WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla., says the U.S. should put more emphasis on applying advanced technology to manufacturing rather than exporting the technology and buying goods made with it elsewhere.

Eugene Zoppo, an official with the New Jersey Federation of Senior Citizens, called the judge's decision a setback to the group's efforts.

"When we passed a bill in the state Legislature for generic drugs, we felt the bill would save $7 million," he said. "This kind of decision is upsetting."

Premo's president, Seymour Blackman, says the FDA is depriving the public of low-cost drugs.

Lacey held that varying inactive ingredients and manufacturing processes caused critical differences in the rate generic and brand-name products are absorbed by users.

This could cause overdoses, the judge said in a 130-page opinion.

Executive Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles Walsh had contended that doctors often believed erroneously that imitations were equivalent to the more expensive drugs.

The judge said Premo had failed to test the rate drugs became effective on patients, and that one remedy, triamterene, could be fatal if an overdose were taken.

The drug, used to treat hypertension, could cause hyperkalemia, or a possibly fatal over-concentration of potassium in the blood, according to the judge.

Lacey issued a preliminary injunction banning Premo from shipping or manufacturing eight drugs in interstate commerce.

An additional hearing is planned on whether Premo must recall the eight drugs and destroy its stock.

The judge said the case's 5,400-page record of expert testimony was "perhaps the most detailed one developed to date in any case considering the generic-new drug issue."

Attorneys in the case said they regarded it as the most important decision in the dispute over testing generic drugs.

Blackman said his company will have to remove about 20 of its 52 drugs from the market as a result of the decision. The company had $18 million in revenue last year, he said.

Premo has filed suit in federal court for the District of Columbia charging the FDA with delaying approval of his company's drugs beyond a 180-day deadline.

The eight drugs involved in Wednesday's decision were: triamterene, which another manufacturer, Smith, Kline & French, uses as an ingredient of Dyazide, used in treating hypertension; trifluoperazine, which Smith, Kline & French uses as an ingredient of Stelazine, for treating psychotic disorders;

Allopurinol tablets, sold as Zyloprim by Burroughs Wellcome for gout symptoms; chlorthalidone, sold as Hygroton by USV Pharmaceutical for hypertension; betamethasone valerate cream, marketed as Valisone by Schering Co. for skin disorders; doxylamine succinate, which Merrell-National Laboratories uses as an ingredient of Bendectin for morning sickness; and hydroxyzine pamoate, which Pfizer Pharmaceuticals sells as Vistaril, and hydroxyzine hydrochloride, which Pfizer sells as Atarax, for anxiety.

Vitamin Deficiency Can Be Detected

Is it possible for a doctor to tell by examination if a person has a deficiency of vitamins? I think I am missing some vitamins and I don't know how to go about finding out.

—Mr. F.N., Texas

Dear Mr. N.:

The recognition, diagnosis, and treatment for all kinds of nutritional deficiencies are extremely difficult. Yet doctors by their training and judgment can pick up evidences of malnutrition and vitamin deficiency.

When you say you "think you are missing some vitamins" you are obviously guessing and have no real basis for your anxiety about this.

There is a wide variety of symptoms that are specifically identified with certain vitamin deficiencies. In children, for example, the presence of rickets and changes in the bone indicate a vitamin D deficiency. Unexplained eye changes, dryness of the skin, and night blindness are suggestive of deficiency of vitamin A. Similarly there are specific symptoms that may suggest to the doctor deficiencies of vitamin B (in all its forms), vitamin C and E, and many of the other vitamins.

When there is the slightest suspicion of anemia, pernicious anemia, scurvy, and a host of other disorders associated with malnutrition, vitamin levels in the blood can be established by complex studies. There should be no guesswork about this.

Far too often, because of the "homemade" diagnosis of vitamin deficiency, people fall into the trap of overloading themselves with expensive vitamins and vitamin supplements that serve no function. They are taken unnecessarily and rejected by healthy bodies.

Is there really such a thing as a one-day virus? Three girls in my office and two men in an adjacent one insist that they all had it.

Miss W.K., Ohio.

I must confess that I don't know what a one-day virus is. But then, I don't know what a 48-hour virus is and I don't know what a 3-day virus is.

The fact that some symptoms last for 24 hours does not necessarily mean that the origin is viral.

It is extremely difficult and highly technical for viruses to be studied and definitely isolated. More important than what you call it or what esoteric name is applied, is the fact that sensible people recognize symptoms early and indulge themselves and pamper their bodies just a little extra during a period of any kind of infection.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Tried 4 Hours To Fill Office

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — After 229 ballots, 21 motions to table, six motions to adjourn and five executive sessions — all in one meeting — city aldermen have decided to delay the appointment of an assessor until their next session.

The 10 aldermen and the mayor tried for four hours Tuesday night to choose among five candidates for assessor. Charles Hunt — himself a former alderman — fell one vote short of the needed seven votes on every ballot.

The alderman who nominated Hunt, Louis Georgopoulos, abstained on every ballot. Georgopoulos, a property owner, said he wanted to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest.

Eye Fuel From Giant Potatoes

HERMISTON, Ore. (AP) — Chewy giant potatoes that have been duds as spuds may soon be used to feed a fuel-alcohol plant.

Northwest Pacific Energy Co. had been planning to use corn at a proposed ethanol plant here, but company officials now favor the huge potatoes — which grow to the size of small watermelons — because they are more easily grown, according to company vice president Paul Peterson.

The potatoes, developed at Washington State University, are too large and tough to be fried, baked or mashed, Peterson said Wednesday.

"You'd hate to hack on a potato for a week, and that's why there has been no market," he said.

Motorists Trust Co-Op Repair Shop's Mechanics

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
UPI Auto Writer
ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—It looks, sounds and smells like any other car repair shop. The difference is invisible—but all-important. "I don't know if the mechanics are necessarily better than other places or better trained," said Michael Ball, a photographer and leather crafter who has patronized this particular shop for about five years. "I feel that they are but I don't know if that's necessarily true. I think their attitude is different. Their approach to me as a customer is just 180 degrees opposite of what you get elsewhere." That, in a nutshell, is what Cooperative Auto, Inc., a thriving car repair co-op, offers to its 2,000 members. "The co-op has to establish that trust," said David Friedrichs, the 34-year-old president of Co-op Auto whose blend of idealism and business sense helped make it the largest of its kind in the nation.

U.S. automakers acknowledge there is a widespread public distrust of car mechanics, a problem they say they are attacking with better products, better training and improved service methods. Much of that suspicion is ill-founded. Good mechanics non-members and also receive free participation in the co-op's U-do-it service. Consumer courses in auto mechanics also are available, and the co-op also operates a towing service. U-do-it club members can bring their cars into the garage and do their own repairs, using the co-op's tools. A mechanic stands by to help the amateurs, if necessary.

Most importantly, the $100 share they buy gives members the assurance of adequate and honest service rather than the return of a dividend or profit. It is different from standard publicly owned companies in that no one owns more than one share, and no one has more than one vote in the co-op's affairs. Not that Friedrichs scores profits—they are important to plow back into the business. "We have to, of course, perform well as a business in terms of profit and loss," he said. "We have to have a reserve and generate earnings to have a future. "But our first objective is service and that's what our customers are interested in."

DAVID FRIEDRICHS is president of Co-Op Auto, a thriving car repair business that is the largest of its kind in the nation. It has 2,000 members who paid a basic membership fee of $100. (UPI Photo)

High Court Overturned Car-Stopping Standard

WASHINGTON (AP)—A ruling by the Supreme Court gives police more latitude in stopping vehicles whose occupants are believed to be involved in a crime.

In upholding convictions for transporting illegal aliens, the court ruled Wednesday that police can stop a vehicle when circumstances suggest the occupants may be involved in a crime.

The convictions came after police in 1976 stopped a camper whose early-morning movements on an Arizona road seemed to match a known pattern for smuggling illegal aliens.

In an opinion by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, a unanimous court held that "the totality of the circumstances—the whole picture—must be taken into account."

The court ruling meant that police need not satisfy a stricter standard of having "probable cause" to suspect a crime before they can stop a vehicle, the standard applied by the 9th U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals, whose decision was overturned.

The standard set by the Supreme Court dictated that "based upon that whole picture, the detaining officers must have a particularized and objective basis for suspecting the particular person stopped of criminal activity."

Among the half-dozen decisions announced by the high court Wednesday was a ruling that 73-year-old Feodor Fedorenko, a U.S. resident for the past 31 years, lose his citizenship because he lied about his past as a former Nazi concentration camp guard.

Fedorenko, born in the Ukraine, was drafted into the Russian army in 1941 and later was captured by the Germans.

He claimed the Germans made him serve as a guard in 1942 and 1943 at the Treblinka death camp in Poland, where some 800,000 prisoners were killed.

He claimed he did not mistreat any prisoners, but six Treblinka survivors testified they saw him shoot, whip or beat prisoners.

When he applied for his visa to the United States in 1949, Fedorenko claimed to be a Polish farmer pressed into factory work and failed to report his service as a concentration camp guard.

Because of those "material misrepresentations" on his visa application, the Supreme Court said, Fedorenko's U.S. citizenship was won fraudulently and should be revoked.

Fedorenko, who worked in a Waterbury, Conn., factory, retired to Miami Beach, Fla., in 1976. His case now returns to a federal judge in Florida for an order revoking his citizenship. Fedorenko then could face deportation proceedings.

In other decisions, the high court:

—Confirmed the legality of a Minnesota law banning retail sales of milk in non-returnable plastic containers.

—Applied federal anti-fraud laws to the posting of securities as loan collateral.

—Reinstated a California murder conviction because an appeals court did not explain its ruling on a photographic identification. The prison gang slaying conviction might still be overturned after reconsideration by the lower court.

—Said a Pennsylvania prisoner should be offered a pre-transfer hearing in his extradition to New Jersey. Three dissenting justices said this ruling would inject federal law into numerous agreements among the states.

Unable To Stop On The Runway

BLUEFIELD, W.Va. (AP)—The pilot of a corporate jet that crashed near Mercer County Airport, killing five people, was unable to brake while landing and skidded off a snow-covered runway, authorities said.

"It was slippery. The runway had been plowed but there was a thin layer of wet snow," said Vellow Smith, an air traffic controller with the Federal Aviation Administration.

The twin-engine Cessna 500 Citation burst into flames after plunging over a steep embankment in the Wednesday accident, authorities said. The plane was owned by Georgia Pacific Corp.

Late Opening

Due to the extremely cold weather during January and February, Pitt County schools will open one hour later on Mondays throughout the two-month period.

The late openings on Monday are planned to alleviate the difficulty in heating school facilities after the low temperatures of the weekends. The later openings will allow the sun to warm classrooms and offices before students arrive.

The modified Monday schedule will begin January 26. School administrative staff, lunchroom and custodial personnel will report at their usual time.

Teachers, aides and school secretaries will report one hour later.

Kremlin Strips Citizenship Of Two Authors

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union stripped two dissident authors of their citizenship while they were abroad, Soviet sources said today. The decrees could bar authors Lev Kopelev and Vasily Aksyonov from ever returning to the Soviet Union.

Kopelev, 68, a specialist in German literature, went to West Germany in November for what he said would be a one-year stay to work on a book with West German author Heinrich Boll. Aksyonov, 47, left for Paris last July claiming he had reached a "dead end" in his career and would be away a long time.

Both men had said they wanted to retain their Soviet citizenship.

The sources said the decree on Kopelev was passed Jan. 12 by the presidium of the Soviet Parliament. They said it also applies to Kopelev's wife, Raisa Orlova, a specialist on American literature. The Kopelevs left for West Germany on Nov. 12.

A similar decree was passed on Aksyonov Nov. 20, but apparently does not cover his wife Maya, who left the Soviet Union with him, the sources said. Both decrees will be published in forthcoming issues of the Parliament's official gazette, they said.

Kopelev, who once did time in Soviet labor camps, quit the Communist Party in the late 1960s and was expelled from the Soviet writers' union in 1977 for his outspoken criticism of the Soviet political system. His memoirs, "To Be Preserved Forever" were published in the United States in 1977.

Kopelev and his wife were active in Soviet dissident circles, and their home was a popular meeting place for dissidents. Kopelev was attacked in the Soviet press last year as "a Judas betraying his people," and his apartment was branded "a nest of ideological subversion."

Aksyonov, who is also trained as a physician, was once one of the Soviet Union's leading prose writers, with nearly 5 million copies of his books published. He left the Soviet writers' union voluntarily in December 1979 in protest of the union's expulsion of two writers who worked with him on the underground literary almanac "Metropol."

Aksyonov reported in February 1980 that he had been expelled from the official film workers' union because he signed a statement protesting the internal exile of dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov.

He is best known here as the author of the 1960 short story "Colleagues," about the life and independent thinking of three young doctors, and his 1961 novel "Ticket to the Stars," about youths who ignore traditional jobs in favor of an independent existence.

The text of the decree on Aksyonov was not immediately available. Soviet sources said the decree on Kopelevs accuses them of "systematically carrying out activity hostile to the Soviet Union" and of having damaged the prestige of the nation.

DOT Suspension Raises A Question

By W.A. WERONKA JR., Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The suspension of a state Department of Transportation employee for possible involvement in the highway bid rigging scandal raises the question of other departmental involvement, Transportation Secretary Thomas Bradshaw said Wednesday.

James Preston Allen, 49, a DOT proposal and contract project engineer, was suspended without pay by Bradshaw Wednesday pending the outcome of a state investigation into the bid rigging scandal.

Bradshaw said he met with officials of the State Bureau of Investigation and the state attorney general's office Tuesday on the matter.

"I interpreted that information to be that potentially there could be some wrongdoing as a part of bid rigging so I immediately suspended Mr. Allen pending further action by the attorney general," Bradshaw said. "But I was immediately told that I could neither confirm nor deny the information (publicly)."

"But I did take the action immediately because of the critical nature of his (Allen's) job. He is the man in charge of all contracts and proposals sections."

He added that Allen said that he was sorry for any embarrassment to the department but would neither confirm nor deny the allegations.

H. Al Cole Jr., special deputy attorney general and director of the state bid rigging investigation, said the suspension was an "offshoot of our investigation."

Bradshaw, along with Gov. Jim Hunt, has maintained for months that he knew of no involvement by DOT employees.

"The reason I was saying that was because I was asking the same question,"

Bradshaw said, adding that an investigation of DOT employees has been ongoing since June 1979. "I was assured there was no involvement. The most recent case was last week at a Board of Transportation work session."

"Mr. Cole came to the board meeting and assured us that nothing in their investigation implied that any employee was involved."

But now that picture has changed and Bradshaw said it raises the question of other department involvement.

"That's why I thought it necessary to take that action to immediately suspend him pending further developments," Bradshaw said. "But it does raise the question."

"Heretofore we had been saying, perhaps with some form of relief, that no one in the department was involved. But it does concern me that that may potentially be the case."

Bradshaw said he had "many" options in Allen's case depending on the outcome of the investigation — including reinstatement, a reprimand or firing.

He added that the investigators did not say any kickbacks were involved.

"They did not say that," Bradshaw said. "They said his associations were such that his activities were questionable. But as far as kickback to employees or sharing profits with any employee, none of that was said."

He did emphasize that Allen, who earned $31,284 a year, was not charged with anything. "My concern was enough, however, to suspend him," Bradshaw said.

The suspension of Allen brought a reaction from the General Assembly Wednesday in the form of a bill filed by Sen. Gilbert Boger, R-Mocksville. The bill, which will be introduced today, calls for a special legislative committee to investigate bid rigging on road construction projects.

Boger said he wants the committee to look into the handling of the scandal by the department.

Border Patrol Combing Camps

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Border Patrol agents have resumed sweep searches for illegal aliens in farm camps after a ban on the practice imposed to aid census-takers was lifted.

Federal officials put the ban into effect last March, saying they were afraid that illegal aliens who were deported from the United States and returned would be counted more than once.

The ban was lifted last week by the Justice Department in Washington.

Order Phones Serve The Deaf

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A requirement that California telephone companies begin providing free special services for deaf customers will mean an estimated increase of 15 cents in the monthly bills of all telephone customers, officials said.

The Public Utilities Commission ordered Wednesday that the telephone companies begin taking bids on the devices, which allow the deaf to communicate via keyboards, electronic screens that can flash messages and hard-copy printers.

Estimates of the cost of each phone device range from $375 to as much as $600, according to one bid already received by Pacific Telephone Co. Preliminary estimates are that 90,000 customers will be provided with the devices by the end of 1983.

Restoration Fund Drive Is Planned

The Greenville Area Preservation Association has appointed a special committee to work with the City of Greenville to raise money for the restoration of the Robert Lee Humber house at the corner of W. Fifth and Washington streets.

The house soon will be used by the N. C. Division of Archives and History as its eastern branch.

This action was taken during the preservation association's monthly meeting held Tuesday night at the downtown Planter's National Bank building.

Bylaws suggested by the board of directors were adopted. Members voted to create a speaker's bureau as a means of fostering public awareness of preservation-related issues.

New officers and directors were elected to replace the acting officials who guided the association during the summer and fall of 1980. Serving for two years will be Bob Swinson as president; Patricia Rice as vice president; Walter Faulkner as treasurer; Maury York as secretary; and Charles Vincent, Helen Parks, Robbie Tugwell and Elizabeth Ross as directors. Directors elected for one-year terms are Nancy Meyer, Lawrence Brewster, Lee Goetz, and Edith Walker.

The association has 50 active members. Persons interested in joining may write to Box 673, Greenville, or attend the Feb. 17 meeting.

Award $8,500 For Pushups

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — A seventh-grader has been awarded $8,500 in damages after being ordered by a teacher to do 200 push-ups as punishment for failing to complete an assignment.

The damages were determined in an out-of-court settlement of a suit filed against the school district by Robert Lassiter of Oxford, father of Danny Lassiter, said Richard Zimmerman, Lassiter's attorney.

Lassiter contended that social studies teacher Kurt Maas ordered Danny to do the push-ups last April 13, and that Danny collapsed after 191, which causing him severe pain and injury, Zimmerman said Tuesday.

World Isn't Ready For Chickens' Contact Lenses

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) - Contact lenses for chickens - a Virginia Tech

poultry researcher's idea for taking some of the peck out of henhouse pecking orders

- are not quite ready to go to market. "We have had quite a bit of interest generated, but we don't feel we're actually ready to move into the business of manufacturing" the lenses, said Dr. A.T. Leighton.

Leighton is designing the red-tinted lenses that he thinks "may improve egg production and make the birds less cannibalistic." But he said his research still needs to extend the length of time that hens can wear a lens without eye irritation.

Leighton has studied the effects of light on poultry and believes the lenses can make the birds more docile by controlling their exposure to certain wavelengths of light.

In a chicken coop, "it's strictly survival of the fittest," he said. The social order among hens, he said, means that a weak bird almost always becomes a target of the others.

Once a smaller hen is attacked, the others are "attracted by the sight of blood and they'll go after it," Leighton said. But with the tinted light, the chickens are looking through a red haze and blood is no longer noticeable.

"The red filter on chickens and turkeys is effective," he said. "It alters behavior and I think it does a fine job of minimizing the pecking." Leighton was asked in 1979 by a Massachusetts company, Animal Optics Inc., to develop a lens that wouldn't be irritating to chickens. He had been working with the physiological development of turkeys, including optical reactions to light, since 1962.

The idea of using contact lenses instead of filtered light in the henhouse stemmed from the need to protect poultry farm employees. People, unlike chickens, find red light irritating, he said.

Leighton's lenses, similar to the hard lenses worn by humans, could benefit chicken farmers who have found hens viciously pecked to death by their coop-mates. Poultry farms can lose up to 25 percent of their flock to such attacks.

In addition, longer wavelengths of light passing through the red, plastic discs stimulate the release of hormones and trigger the hens' reproductive systems, meaning that less time spent pecking could mean more time laying eggs.

"Chickens are very excitable and hyperactive animals. If the lens can make the birds less excitable then it may be possible to improve egg production," Leighton said.

"We know the lenses alter the behavior of birds. They may be a way to substitute the current practice of de-beaking.

"Animal welfare groups are concerned about de-beaking and would like to see an alternative to the practice.

"The lens, if for no other reason, will be useful if the birds quit pecking and killing each other."

However, Leighton noted that research on the docility of lens-fitted birds is tentative.

"We only have data for a couple of months. It may be that after the birds become adjusted to the lenses their behavior will revert to normal," he said.

Also, he added, current lenses can't be used on birds for more than 6 to 10 weeks without eye irritation. He said the goal is to develop a lens that hens can wear continuously for their entire productive life, or 10 to 12 months.

"I anticipate that we'll get these what I consider minor problems straightened out soon," he said.

If the research pays off, Leighton said the market for such lenses is "definitely out there. With almost 300 million laying chickens in the United States, the market potential is tremendous."

He would not speculate on the possible cost of the lenses since "everything is still in the experimental stage." But Randy Wise, president of Animal Optics, said the price could be 20 cents a pair or less if demand is high enough. Leighton said his research has received mixed reactions from poultry farmers. "But farmers are like most of us, I guess," he said. "They want to be shown that they work."

Five-Year-Old In Ride Within A Runaway Car

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Don Moore reached for his pistol when he heard shouting. Shirley Gussman could only watch in horror. Evelyn Mullen screamed as a runaway car ran over her foot, and dozens of spectators stared in silence.

Inside the vehicle, the driver's door open, was 5-year-old Suzanne Martinetti, screaming and clutching the front seat.

Then, 25-year-old secretary Angie Butts rushed to the rescue. She chased after the runaway sedan circling wildly in the middle of U.S. 1. "Never in my life have I seen anything like it," said Susan Moore, manager of the nearby North Miami Beach Greyhound bus station. "This little girl was in the car screaming and this lady was chasing the car, trying to get in, as it went around and around."

Moore, her husband, said, "By the time I got out there, one woman was lying on the ground. This Ford Torino was doing circles, you know, doing doughnuts in the middle of U.S. 1, and this woman was hanging onto the steering wheel."

"She was half out of the car, being dragged along."

Minutes earlier, Mrs. Gussman had driven up to the station, put her car in park and started unloading suitcases as her granddaughter sat in the front seat.

Evelyn Mullen, the child's great-grandmother, climbed out of the car. Then it jumped into reverse, the women said, and rolled into the street.

"It happened so fast," said Mrs. Gussman, 53, of Miami Shores. "The car just backed away, ran over my mother and went out into the street."

The car, traveling backwards at speeds up to 20 mph, bounced over the median strip several times.

Ms. Butts drove up, nearly striking the runaway vehicle.

"I don't know how fast the car was going," she said. "But it wasn't going slow because I couldn't catch up with it."

So she kicked off her clogs and finally grabbed the steering wheel. "It was jammed," she said. "I couldn't turn it. So I just stepped on the brakes and the car stopped."

By the time police, a fire engine and an ambulance arrived, Ms. Butts was in the driver's seat, the child was in her grandmother's arms and the great-grandmother was being comforted on the pavement.

Rescue workers took them all to North Miami General Hospital, where Ms. Butts was found to have a bruised knee and Mrs. Mullen a broken foot. The child, unhurt, was given a soda.

Ford Motor Co. has agreed to mail warnings to the owners of 20 million cars and trucks built since the 1973 model year that their automatic transmissions could slip into reverse. North Miami Beach police, however, said Mrs. Gussman's car was a 1972 Ford.

The automaker has considered the problem is due to drivers who do not shift all the way into park.

Last June, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said the slips had caused some 6,000 accidents, 1,710 injuries and 98 deaths.

Hints Garwood Blocked Tests

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) - A second Navy psychiatrist has raised the possibility that Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood intentionally blocked psychological tests in an effort to be found mentally ill.

Navy Capt. Michael A. Harris testified at Garwood's court-martial Wednesday that the level of "falsification" was so high on tests given Garwood last year that they had to be discounted.

Harris told a jury of five Marine officers that Garwood "had substantial capacity to appreciate the criminality of his conduct" as a prisoner of war in Vietnam.

Similar testimony was offered Tuesday by Navy psychiatrist Patrick F. O'Connell, who with Harris was called by the government as a rebuttal witness at Garwood's court-martial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

Garwood's attorneys earlier presented a series of medical witnesses who testified he suffered from mental illness, aggravated by physical and mental torture in Vietnam, that made him incapable of knowing the right or wrong of what he was doing.

Garwood, 34, disappeared in Vietnam in 1965 and reappeared in Hanoi in 1979, saying he had been held captive by the Viet Cong. The government contends he remained in Vietnam voluntarily after becoming a turncoat.

The defense has not denied accusations by several former POWs that Garwood wore the uniform of the North Vietnamese, carried a rifle and interrogated other POWs.

Harris, from the Naval Aerospace Medical Institute, Pensacola, Fla., said he spent nine hours with Garwood during his participation on a board that decided the Marine was competent to stand trial.

Under questioning by defense attorneys, Harris said Garwood did suffer from a mental disease known as dysthymic disorder at the time of his alleged offenses, but Harris argued that it was not enough to substantially impair Garwood's judgment. The disorder is a mild to moderate depression.

The defense also had Harris admit that Garwood "suffered some dissociative episodes during parts of his captivity," but again, not enough to affect his judgment.

Harris agreed with defense contentions that Garwood was "more pliable and easily molded" by problems of background and family.

"His vulnerability made him more susceptible to coercion," the witness said.

Oppose Keeping Boy In A 'Box'

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - The parents of a wheelchair-bound 7-year-old whose body cannot deal with high temperatures say they will appeal a state ruling that allows his school to confine him in an air-conditioned plexiglass box.

Raul and Ana Espino said Wednesday they want the Brownsville Independent School District to air-condition a classroom at Egly Elementary School for their son, Raul.

James Williams Jr., a hearing officer for the Texas Education Agency, ruled Monday that the box was an appropriate way to handle the boy's disability.

Loads Of Carter Papers Shipped

ATLANTA (AP) - Nineteen tractor-trailer loads of papers from the Carter presidency have been shipped from Washington to Fort McPherson here for temporary storage.

The 18-wheel trucks left Washington about 8 a.m. Tuesday, four hours before Carter left office, according to Russ Wieskircher, a civilian worker at the Army base.

Four of the trucks were later taken to the Richard B. Russell federal office building in Atlanta, where Carter will have office space.

Great Basin Fate Feared

By LEON DANIEL
UPI National Reporter
MOAPA INDIAN RESERVATION, Nev. (UPI) — "What's MX?" asked Larry Brown, an 18-year-old Indian. "That some kind of bomb or something? I don't know nothing about it."

Larry was hanging out at the reservation store with a pal.

"You want to buy us some beer?" asked Larry.

Larry may — or may not — have been putting the visitor on. But if the U.S. Air Force goes ahead with its plan to deploy the MX missile system in the Great Basin of Nevada and Utah, life on the reservation will never again be the same.

Take Tribal Chairman Preston Tom's word for it.

Tom knows Air Force drillers have found on the desert some of the water vital to deployment of the missile system and the construction of a big base at nearby Coyote Spring.

What worries him is that the drillers may have tapped the same underground source that feeds Muddy River, which provides water for the reservation's cattle and irrigates its grain fields and tomato crop.

"Without water our fields would turn to dust," said the leader of the 300 or so Paiutes who live on the reservation, which is only an hour's drive from the glittering strip of casinos in Las Vegas.

Philbert Swain, 38, the reservation's Indian business manager, knows all about the MX.

A U.S. Army veteran, Swain worries more about what may happen to the reservation's water than he does about the prospect of living in a target area for Russian rockets.

"They give us no guarantees that the water will continue to flow," he said.

Swain believes absolutely that the life he, his wife and two children live on the reservation is a good one. He does not want it to change.

As reservations go, Moapa is relatively affluent.

Swain and his neighbors live in neat new bungalows.

Paiutes are returning to the reservation. More houses are under construction.

"Look at it," Swain said softly, gesturing at the desert expanse broken in the distance by stark brown mountains jutting into the clear blue sky. "Isn't it beautiful?"

There is the world's largest herd of Mountain Bighorns — more than 1,200 of them — roaming somewhere in those hills.

Swain does not need a federal wildlife agent to tell him that those handsome sheep cannot survive the encroachment of a nearby U.S. Air Force base.

"I don't think the Air Force is listening to our concerns," said Swain, who lived and worked in a lot of places he found less hospitable than the Great Basin before returning to the reservation.

"The government just says there's enough water for everybody," Swain said.

Swain's ancestors, who once owned all of the land in the vicinity, knew a lot about the importance of water on the desert.

The site of the reservation once was a hunting and food gathering area for them.

Swain speaks of Muddy River, which to an Easterner looks more like a stream, with something close to reverence.

"It's beautiful," he said. "It just springs right out of that mountain over there."

When Swain was growing up on the reservation, he occasionally could see from his house the huge mushroom clouds that welled skyward from the Atomic Test Site out in the desert.

Those explosions did not frighten him.

"Oh, they were really something," he said.

Swain and his ancestors have seen the reservation shrink from a huge land mass that spread to what is now the suburbs of Las Vegas to its present modest size.

"The government herded us into this area here," he said, "but with the river running right through it, it's a real good spot."

What Swain sees as a threat to Muddy River is the reason he opposes the deployment of a system of intercontinental ballistic missiles the U.S. Air Force considers vital to deter Russian rockets of increasing power and accuracy.

"We're concerned but there's nothing we can do about it," Swain said. "If the government wants to put it in, they will. Why worry about something you can't stop?"

Cut Radiation Exposure Risk

HIGHLAND HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — A maker of diagnostic imaging equipment has teamed with a Canadian teaching hospital to produce a medical technology advance that reduces radiation exposure to patients undergoing X-rays.

The new system, developed by Picker Corp. here in collaboration with Toronto University's Sunnybrook Medical Center, cuts the risk of radiation exposure in chest X-rays by up to 80 percent.

Chest radiography is the most common type of X-ray, accounting for more than 40 percent of the total taken in this country. It is one of the most important techniques for initial and follow-up diagnosis of patients with diseases of the lung or heart. On the average, there are nearly 50 million chest radiographs taken a year.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged lower today, continuing a three-day slide.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had fallen 27.04 points the first three days of the week, dropped another 7.68 points in the first two hours today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 7-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market has been sliding amid investor concern about the high level of interest rates and uncertainty over how quickly the Reagan administration will make a mark on the economy.

The market's recent selling pressure was not eased by encouraging economic news reported Wednesday by the Commerce Department, showing the Gross National Product rose at an inflation-adjusted pace of 5 percent in the fourth quarter, compared with a 2.4 percent gain in the third quarter.

Among today's early prices, American Airlines was up 1/8 to 94. The company said Wednesday it had ordered 15 Boeing 757 aircraft for $25 million each and took an option for an additional 15 planes. Delta Air Lines Inc. was up 3/8 to 61 3/8.

General Electric, which reported that its earnings in the final quarter of 1980 rose about 7 percent, showed a gain of 1/8 to 59 1/8.

The major oil stocks were mostly lower.

Volume on the Big Board was 17.38 million shares over the first two hours.

The NYSE's composite index of common stocks gave up 0.60 to 74.79.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.00 to 342.53.

Queen Noor Is Again Expecting

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — American-born Queen Noor is pregnant and her second child from King Hussein is expected in June, the royal palace said today. The 45-year-old Hashemite monarch wedded the former Lisa Najeeb Halaby, 29, a Princeton graduate, in June 1978. It was her first marriage, and their first child, Prince Hamzah, was born last spring. Hussein has eight other children, seven from his three previous marriages and one by adoption.

Boys Club....

Parrott, vice-president; Les Meekins, secretary; and Thurston Wynne, treasurer. Summing up achievements of 1980, outgoing president Mizell said "1980 was a year of transition for the Boys Club. We started out with raw land on Arlington Boulevard, with pledges in hand for money to build, and an intense desire to complete the building as soon as possible."

Noting that construction is well under way, Mizell said the process of transition will still go on, as "our young men in a new facility mean we will have new programs, and new programs require new personnel, and personnel requires more money."

These requirements, Mizell said, have led to a decision to seek to establish a foundation to raise funds for long range plans. "The time has come when we must make the transition from operating on a year-to-year basis and look ahead to longer range goals."

Ted Gartman presided at the meeting. Instead of a keynote speaker for the annual meeting, four local singers, members of Parados, a Barbershop Quartet, performed in a program of old favorites including "My Wild Irish Rose," "Ain't She Sweet," and "Wait 'Til The Sun Shines, Nellie." Doctors comprising the quartet are Robert Hanrahan, Alphonse Ingenito, Billy Jones and Norman Pierce.

A special award of appreciation was presented to Don Yeager, store manager of J. C. Penney. Boys Club Executive Director Chet Emerson, in presenting the award, praised Yeager "for continued, enthusiastic, often behind the scenes service to the Boys Club." Yeager, who will soon leave Greenville for a new position in Atlanta, commented "Greenville and Pitt County have become a real home for me and my family. The decision to leave Greenville has been a hard one to make."

Three new board members have been named with terms to expire in 1983 — Tommy Edwards, Jimmy Bond, and Rob Powell. Also, three new members appointed to the board at mid-year 1980 are Judson Croom, Bill Grant and Charles McLawhorn.

Among those recognized at Wednesday's meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Ward Parker (Parker is administrative assistant for Pitt County); Lou Folger, executive director, Pitt County United Way; and the staff of the Boys Club.

The current staff includes Leonard Moretz, program director; John Quinn, arts and crafts director; Bob Stringfield, physical director; Carolyn Moss, learning center director; and Bill Crew, gamesroom director. Emerson said that Quinn is soon leaving the staff to take a position with the Raleigh Boys Club.

Services Of Thanksgiving

A candlelight Mass of thanksgiving for the release of American hostages in Iran was held Wednesday night at St. Peter's Catholic Church in Greenville. The pastor, Rev. J. Paul Byron, was the celebrant. Earlier in the day a similar thanksgiving service was conducted by the children of St. Peter's School.

Gas Refund Is Ordered

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Utilities Commission has ordered North Carolina's three largest natural gas companies to pass on to their customers $1.33 million they received in refunds in 1978 from their supplier.

The money involved in the refunds was returned to the companies by Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Co. as wholesale rate settlements ordered by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Companies and the amount involved in the state commission's order Wednesday were Public Service Co. of Gastonia, $527,300; Piedmont Natural Gas Co. of Charlotte, $556,200, and North Carolina Natural Gas of Fayetteville, $246,700.

The amounts will be boosted by interest accrued since 1978.

There was no immediate indication as to how much a typical customer would receive, but the money is to be divided among each company's current customers. That would make the refunds small, as Public Service, for example, has about 135,000 customers.

Representatives of the companies had argued before the commission that their stockholders, not customers, should benefit from the Transco money.

"Sometimes e'd have additional costs. We didn't flow through these additional costs to our customers. If we got a refund, we should be allowed to keep those funds," Piedmont spokesman Stephen D. Conner said Wednesday.

The commission's Public Staff, however, had called for the refunds to customers. "We felt these were monies that unquestionably ought to be refunded to the North Carolina gas companies," said G. Clark Crampton, a Public Staff attorney.

Angry Citizens Attend Meeting

WINTERVILLE — Over 600 taxpayers gathered at the Fire Department Thursday night to voice their concern over Pitt County's tax revaluation and to pass a resolution asking the county to do away with this revaluation.

According to Winterville Mayor Walter Dail, organizer of the meeting, a committee of 25 people was formed, representing all areas of Pitt County. This committee, chaired by Ralph Tucker, plans to present the resolution to the county commissioners at their next meeting, scheduled for February 2.

"This resolution simply asks the county to discard their present property tax evaluation standards and make new appraisals of property," explained Dail. "We are hoping to accomplish what New Hanover and other counties in the state have done; that is, make the county declare the evaluation unfair and redo it."

Dail added that the group plans to attend the Farm Bureau meeting on the tax revaluation scheduled for January 26 in the Pitt County Court House. "We've got to have every taxpayer's moral support," he said, "and judging from the crowd that appeared last night I feel like we have it."

"If we just sit back and take this, we will be in terrible shape," he continued. "Where will we be two years from now if we let this stand?"

According to several persons attending the meeting, the crowd was "angry." "It was an informal meeting of Pitt County taxpayers," said one observer. "But there was firm conviction that they would get the county to do something about the hardship the tax burden places on them."

The president told members that in spite of a slow beginning, the 1980s look promising for home lending institutions, with population trends indicating a record housing demand. He said, "We expect that our local housing markets will be strong too."

Officers elected to serve during 1981 included: James, chairman emeritus and senior advisor; Hite, chairman of the board; Twigg, president; King, senior vice president; Ryon, senior vice president; Robert S. Messner, secretary-treasurer; Lester Brown, vice president; William Earl Stocks, Durwood Little, Inda W. Wingate, and Sue Creech, assistant vice presidents; Martha Davis, assistant secretary treasurer; Jonathan M. Pratt, controller; Hite, general counsel; and Lewis, special counsel.

Directors elected for 1981 included Kelly Barnhill, Alton R. Barrett, Dr. J. Edwin Clement, George Coffman, Rep. Walter B. Jones, Roscoe L. King, John B. Lewis, John F. Minges, Thomas S. Ryon, Donald Wilkerson, Tugwell, James, and Hite.

The two were identified as James Tucker, 27, of Port Elizabeth, South Africa, and Philip Robertson, 31, of Bradford, England.

The BNOC spokesman said the two were "100 percent" fit but would have to spend four days in a decompression chamber aboard a rescue ship.

Divers Rescued From North Sea

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP) — Rescue workers pulled two oilfield divers safely out of a damaged diving bell 400 feet under the North Sea where they were trapped for 11 hours Wednesday.

The divers were trapped after the life line to their mother ship snapped, officials of the British National Oil Corp. reported.

The two were identified as James Tucker, 27, of Port Elizabeth, South Africa, and Philip Robertson, 31, of Bradford, England.

The BNOC spokesman said the two were "100 percent" fit but would have to spend four days in a decompression chamber aboard a rescue ship.

Rampants Host Eagles; Guard Against Upset

Rose High School closes out the first half of its Division I schedule on Friday night...

And it is just that type of game that has Coach Jim Brewington worried.

The Rampants are coming off four straight conference wins, after splitting their first two.

Except for their game Tuesday night against Wilson Hunt, the Rampants shot over 55 per cent from the floor...

"I felt good about the game," Brewington said of the venture against Hunt.

Brewington praised the play of Donald Johnson, pointing out that he played all of the fourth quarter with four fouls. He also singled out Barry Smith for his ball-handling and his guard work against Jerry Strayhorne...

He also praised William Battle. "He's really come on and become a starter for us."

Brewington also felt that the Rose defense against Hunt was a key factor, along with the team's stamina.

The coach also praised his bench for their play after several Rampant starters got into foul trouble.

Brewington seems to feel that the loss to Rocky Mount may have been a good thing.

"They have a lot to prove. They haven't been ranked, and they feel like they should be."

Maybe the rankings haven't come yet, but if the Rampants continue to roll along in first place in the league, they probably will. The Northeastern game is the only one over the next seven days, as Rose takes time off for exams.

"I think the time off will help us. It will take some of the pressure off us. But we're going to be working every day."

The Rose girls, still looking for their first win, will also be meeting Northeastern in their only game of the week Friday.

The Rose wrestlers travel to Northeastern on Friday, and host Fike on Tuesday.

ECU Takes 106-76 Victory Lady Pirates In Sixth Straight

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor East Carolina's Lady Pirates, after a lethargic first half, came to life in the second half and rolled to a 106-76 victory over West Virginia last night in Minges Coliseum.

It was the sixth straight win for the Lady Pirates, and their third 100-point game in the past six.

Coach Cathy Andruzzi "I was upset at the half," she related. "I was so concerned over West Virginia. I knew they were good, and I knew (J.D.) Drummonds and (Cathy) Parson were good."

The game was nip and tuck throughout most of the first half. West Virginia led several times, the last at 12-8 with 15:11 remaining.

But at halftime, East Carolina came out and went to work. Riley scored the first five points of the half, getting a basket off the tap, then adding a three-point play next time down the court.

After twice matching Pirate baskets, West Virginia saw East Carolina streak away again, running the lead to 18 at 6:43 with 14:21 left. After that, it was a coast to the victory, with the Pirates leading by as much as 35 points, 101-66 with 2:30 left.

then challenge nationally-ranked Virginia on Saturday. They follow those games up with two more national powers, both in Greenville, meeting N.C. State and Southern California in home games next week.

Prospective League Members Talk To Group

East Carolina and four other schools, all in Virginia, took another step toward the formation of another conference yesterday, holding a meeting in Richmond, Va.

Several other schools attended the meeting, having been invited as potential sixth members of the new league, which would be for basketball and five other sports, but not including football.

Joining East Carolina were Old Dominion, William & Mary, Richmond and James Madison. It was not known what other schools were on attendance, but there have been rumors that they could have included UNC-Wilmington, Furman, Davidson, VMI or Virginia Commonwealth.

"We reviewed our objectives," East Carolina Athletic Director Ken Karr said of the meeting, "and had exploratory talks with four or five others. We are still continuing to explore the possibilities of a sixth school."

It was reported that the invited schools returned to confer with their boards of trustees as to whether they wished to seek admission to the new league.

Karr said that the five had not reached a consensus on whom they wished the sixth member to be. "We will probably wait to see what schools declare themselves available and then move from there," he said.

Asked if more than six schools might be taken in from the start, Karr said he did not know, but had a personal opinion that the league should start with six and study further expansion later on.

Karr said he felt the group had to come to some sort of decision soon if they are to get the league off the ground for the 1981-82 seasons.

He added that he did not feel that the five schools committed to forming a new league wanted that alternative.

A five-hour meeting was held by the group, but no future meeting date has been set as yet. It appears that the five are waiting to hear from the others as to whether they are interested in joining the league before scheduling another meeting.

British Golfers Join In Phoenix Tourney

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Great Britain's two brightest young stars, Sandy Lyle and Nick Faldo, are taking advantage of a change in the PGA Tour rules and this week begin a lengthy swing around the American pro golf circuit.

"There are several things involved, actually," said Faldo, before teeing off today in the first round of the $300,000 Phoenix Open.

"There's the change in the American rules that gives us the opportunity to play a longer schedule.

"Then, too, our (European) Tour doesn't start until May. "And there's the fact that we'd just like to find out how we fare against the American competition."

Both have gaudy credentials. Faldo, 23, and Lyle, 22, both are members of the British Ryder Cup team. Last year Lyle led the British Order of Merit, somewhat comparable to the American money-winning list. In 1980, Faldo won his second British PGA championship.

Both are larger, stronger, longer hitters than most European players. Both have played in the United States before.

Both plan to play the American tour until about the first of May, taking advantage of a recent rules change which raised from three to 10 the number of U.S. PGA Tour events non-Tour members may play. As Ryder Cup members, they are allowed three exemptions from qualifying rounds.

Each exercised one of those exemptions to gain a spot in the 144-man field chasing a $54,000 first prize in this week's 72-hole event being played on the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

Although Tom Watson has not yet started his season and Lee Trevino and Jack Nicklaus are taking an early-season break, the Britons face an extremely strong field of American tourists.

Chief among them are Bruce Lietzke and Johnny Miller, winners of the first two tournaments of the season, and Jerry Pate, a former winner here and a runner-up last week.

Other standouts include former U.S. Open champions Hale Irwin and Hubert Green, Lanny Wadkins, Andy Bean, Ray Floyd, Ben Crenshaw, Bill Rogers, Curtis Strange, Tom Weiskopf, Australian David Graham, defending champion Jeff Mitchell and Arnold Palmer, who made a last-minute entry.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Aycock In First Wins

E.B. Aycock Junior High School broke its losing streaks with a pair of wins yesterday over Wilson Fike.

The Jaguar girls beat Fike, 37-14. Doris Richardson led the scoring with 31 points. In the boys' game, Aycock gained a 67-63 win. Mack Walston led Aycock with 31, while William Powell scored 12. Willingham led Fike with 14, while Hillard and Locust each had 12.

The girls are now 1-4, while the boys are 1-5.

Duke In Slow Win Over State

Associated Press Writer

Duke is taking things slowly these days and the Blue Devils are smelling the roses of victory again. Blue Devil coach Mike Krzyzewski decided to tinker with his offense this week. What he found out was that slower is better and a victory, in this case a 56-47 triumph over North Carolina State, is much better than a four-game losing streak. In other games involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams, No. 2 Virginia smashed George Washington 86-56 while No. 19 Clemson defeated Georgia Tech 72-48. In the new scheme of things at Durham, the Blue Devils are spreading their attack all over the frontcourt, giving each player a one-on-one opportunity. Gene Banks took advantage of that situation several times in the second half and scored 23 points to lead the Blue Devils to their first conference victory of the year.

At the other end of the floor against the Wolfpack, Duke employed a man-to-man defense and bottled up N.C. State's offense, even with the return of Sidney Lowe.

"I thought we played very good defense and showed excellent patience with the basketball," Krzyzewski said, adding that Duke's offense was designed to circumvent N.C. State's height advantage.

"That's one reason that we got away from the basket and gave Gene a little bit more room to maneuver," the coach added.

Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano obviously had a much different appraisal of the outcome.

"From my viewpoint, it was the worst performance since I've been here," Valvano said. "We'll start from scratch tomorrow."

N.C. State is now 1-6 in the ACC and 8-7 overall. Duke's overall mark is 9-7.

The Colonials attempted to put their game with Virginia in the deep freeze. Missing seven of their first nine shots didn't help and the Cavaliers raced to an early 15-4 lead. Virginia eventually established a 43-18 halftime advantage.

Ralph Sampson and Jeff Lamp scored 16 points apiece while Lee Raker added 15. Virginia is now 15-0.

George Washington's Wilbert Skipper led all scorers with 23 points, including 20 in the second half.

The Yellow Jackets appeared on the verge of handing the Tigers their second consecutive conference defeat at home after trailing by only four at halftime.

But Horace Wyatt put on a second-half shooting exhibition to wind up with 16 points and 7 rebounds.

For Georgia Tech, now 4-12 overall and 0-6 in the conference, Lee Goza had 17 points, most of them inside, and Fred Hall had 10 to lead the losing effort.

In tonight's action, No. 3 Wake Forest hosts No. 17 North Carolina in a regionally televised contest.

Wildcats May Be Over Their Problems

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Kentucky finally is back on the winning track, and Coach Joe B. Hall thinks his sixth-ranked Wildcats may be over their emotional problems.

"We showed more emotion than we had since very early in the season," Hall said after Kentucky trounced Florida 102-48 in a Southeastern Conference game Wednesday night.

"We just need that so much, and we have talked about it," the coach said. "It's been tough on us. There's been a lot of pressure. Certainly, no one likes to lose, and everyone talked about how we were going to have a really good game."

Kentucky, ranked third in the nation at the time, began its slide with a 59-55 loss Saturday at Alabama, then lost again on the road Monday to Louisiana State, 81-67. However, the Wildcats returned home Wednesday night to record their widest scoring margin ever in Rupp Arena.

The 54-point loss also was the most lopsided in the basketball history of Florida, whose worst previous defeat had been by 48 points, 85-37, to Kentucky 31 years ago.

"They got off to a fast, freewheeling start," said Florida Coach Norm Sloan, former coach at North Carolina State. "They were shooting relaxed from all over the floor. Kentucky has great personnel. They just didn't have any respect for us at all."

Sam Bowie led all scorers with 29 points for Kentucky, and Dirk Minniefield and Mel Turpin added 17 apiece.

Kentucky led by 28 points at the half, 52-26, and the Wildcats' advantage ballooned to as many as 56 points, 102-46, with 27 seconds to play on a tipin by Charles Hurt.

In other games involving ranked teams, second-rated

Virginia whipped George Washington 86-56, fifth-ranked LSU topped Auburn 74-64, No. 8 Tennessee downed Mississippi State 81-57, 13th-ranked Notre Dame stopped San Francisco 80-75, 19th-ranked Clemson defeated Georgia Tech 72-48 and Villanova upended No. 20 Connecticut 63-59.

Ralph Sampson and Jeff Lamp paced Virginia with 17 points apiece, and Lee Raker added 15 as the Cavaliers extended the nation's longest winning streak to 20 games. Now 15-0 on the season, Virginia led by as many as 34 points.

George Washington's Wilbert Skipper led all scorers with 23. Louisiana State won its 15th game in a row, getting a career-high 33 points from Howard Carter. The Tigers, now 16-1 with their only loss coming to Arkansas in the second game of the season, led 36-31 at the half and moved out to leads of as many as 12 points on two occasions in the SEC matchup.

Auburn was led by Earl Banks and Darrell Lockhart with 16 points each.

Dale Ellis hit two free throws and one field goal in a 10-point streak that gave Tennessee a nine-point lead over Mississippi State late in the first half, and the Volunteers breezed to an easy SEC victory.

Tennessee opened the second half with a 12-3 spurt over a six-minute span to put the game out of reach.

Jess Malone, a sophomore guard, led all scorers with 24 points for Mississippi State.

Notre Dame's victory at home avenged a 66-63 overtime loss at San Francisco last week. Guard John Paxson erased a 75-74 Dons lead when he hit a 20-foot jumper with seven seconds to go. San Francisco then called for time, but was charged a two-shot technical because it had no timeouts remaining. Paxson hit both those shots, and when Notre Dame retained possession, Stan Wilcox's shot at the buzzer made the margin of victory five points.

"During our last timeout

(the legal one), we made it very specific to everyone that we had no timeouts remaining," San Francisco Coach Pete Barry said. "Kenny McAlister just made a mistake. He knows he made it, and he probably won't make that mistake again."

Paxson finished with a career-high 22 points, Orlando Woolridge had 22 and Kelly Tripucka added 20 for the Fighting Irish.

Horace Wyatt, a 6-10 junior forward, came off the bench to score 16 points, 12 in the second half, to pace Clemson over Georgia Tech in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Clemson's victory snapped a two-game home losing streak.

Stewart Granger scored four points in a five-point burst late in the game and help Villanova hand Connecticut its second loss of the season, both coming in the Big East Conference. Mike McKay hit two foul shots to pull Connecticut within three, at 54-51, with 4:49 to go, but Granger then went to work for Villanova.

Tom Sienkiewicz led Villanova with 16 points. McKay had 16 for Connecticut, and Chuck Aleksinas added 14.

In a pair of other important conference games, Mike Davis scored 20 points to lead Alabama to an 83-71 victory over Georgia in the SEC, and Gene Banks hit 23 points to pace Duke over North Carolina State 56-47 in the ACC.

Brains Tag Along To Super Bowl

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — You'd expect the Super Bowl to have its quota of players from Ohio State, Oklahoma, Southern California, Notre Dame and the rest of the nation's big-time football schools and this one doesn't disappoint.

The Philadelphia Eagles and Oakland Raiders, who play Sunday for the championship of professional football, are suitably equipped with their share of blockers and tacklers carrying proper collegiate football credentials.

But also tagging along are two representatives of schools less noted for their football record, a pair of classroom heavyweights who could play in the Brain Bowl instead.

Oakland running back Mark van Eeghen owns a degree in economics from Colgate University. Philadelphia tight end John Spagnola, a political science major, learned his X's and O's in the hallowed Ivy-lined walls of Yale.

There were no scholarships, no Top 20 rankings, no bowl games in their football heritages. There was, instead, academics.

"Football was kept in its proper place at Colgate," said van Eeghen. "We didn't have spring practice or winter workouts. You showed up two weeks before the first game in the fall, played for 10 weeks, and then went back to the college life. It was great."

The only trouble van Eeghen had at Colgate was playing on Saturday and missing the biggies. "I found myself wishing I could watch Oklahoma-Nebraska instead of playing Leigh or Bucknell."

"I idolized the bigger schools. But I'd have gotten lost in the shuffle at Michigan or Ohio State or Southern Cal. I played at the level I wanted to play at, in a small school, where football was secondary and where I could get a good education. I had a truly great college experience."

He could have gotten the same kind of experience at Yale. Spagnola testifies to that.

"Football there is the way I think it should be everywhere — low key," he said. "If you have a class or a lab, well then you're excused from practice. There are priorities. After all, why do you go to college, to play football or to gain some knowledge at a university?"

They are members of exceedingly small alumni associations.

Colgate has sent only two other players to the NFL — strong safety Mark Murphy, who played for a while at Washington, and fullback Marv Hubbard who, ironically, preceded van Eeghen as Oakland's heavy-duty ball-carrier.

Yale's NFL alumni include running backs Calvin Hill and Chuck Mercein, center Mike Pyle, defensive backs Dick Jauron and Gary Fencik and precious few others.

Spagnola thinks about players who fail to complete their education. "What happens to them after football?" he wondered. "No degree, no real education or skill. Where do they go?"

For Spagnola and van Eeghen, that's no real problem.

Spagnola worked on the successful senatorial campaign of ex-basketball star Bill Bradley in 1978. He thinks about a career in politics.

Van Eeghen will work this summer in an executive training program at a bank in his native Rhode Island, laying the groundwork for an eventual move into the world of finance.

They have bright futures. For now, however, both are concentrating on their presents — primarily, Super Bowl Sunday.

Van Eeghen led the Raiders in rushing for the fifth consecutive year with 838 yards and is the team's all-time rushing leader with 5,757 career yards.

Spagnola, often used in double tight-end formations with regular Keith Kreple, contributed 18 catches for 193 yards and was a vital cog in the Eagle offense.

Is their life after football? Van Eeghen, at 28 considerably closer to retirement than the 23-year-old Spagnola, thinks about that a lot.

"Part of me will miss football," he said. "Getting the ball on fourth-and-one...I'll miss that tremendously."

Van Eeghen has been playing football since he was 10. "Every September since then, I've played football," he said. "It used to be, when I was a kid, I'd associate the smell of popcorn with football."

And now?

"Now it's the smell of stickum."

Saints...

Mecom Jr. to fire him today.

"I was talking to (former Los Angeles Rams All-Pro) Merlin Olsen, and he said, 'They're really shaking things up.' I told him, 'It's just another average day with the Saints.'" Manning said.

"I've learned to roll with it over the years."

It is frustrating, having to adapt to a new system every other year?

"Sometimes, when I reflect on it," he said.

"I just talked to Roger Staubach. He said he doesn't know how I did it."

"He played 11 years in the same system at Dallas. He said that when he went to the Pro Bowl, it was hard to adapt to just the little bit there."

"But come to think about it, I've learned a lot of different systems and a lot of different philosophies. If I ever decided to be a coach, I ought to be ready."

"But getting to know coaches and what they go through, I'm not sure I'd ever want to be a coach."

He said he knows and likes Phillips, though he's never played for him.

Defensive tackle Derland Moore, an eight-year veteran, was more effusive in his praise of Phillips.

"If he wanted me to play javelin catcher, I'd do it," he said.

Edw. Kennedy, Joan To Divorce

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward and Joan Kennedy's marriage endured a plane crash that almost killed him, the assassinations of his two brothers, Chappaquiddick, a young son losing a leg to cancer, her drinking problems, reports of his liaisons with other women and five political campaigns.

Now, after Kennedy's quest for the presidency threw them back together for a time, they are ending their 22-year union. Although they have lived apart for the past three years, the two vacationed together in Colorado over the Christmas holidays in an apparent last-ditch attempt at patching up their marriage. And some of their friends said the couple seemed to draw closer together during last fall's campaign.

Nonetheless, Wednesday's brief, written announcement of impending divorce came as no surprise.

"Appropriate legal proceedings will be commenced in due course," the statement said.

Mrs. Kennedy, a self-described "recovering alcoholic," has been living in Boston since 1978 attending college. Kennedy lived at their home in suburban Virginia with their children.

After the divorce announcement, Kennedy's office reaffirmed the 48-year-old Democratic senator's intention to seek re-election from Massachusetts in 1982. He has been elected four times in the heavily Catholic state.

The political impact of the impending divorce remained uncertain for the senator, who close aides say has his eye on another try for the presidency in addition to his Senate race.

Coincidentally, the Kennedy divorce announcement came one day after the inauguration of President Reagan, the first divorced man to become president.

Mrs. Kennedy campaigned extensively for her husband last year during his unsuccessful presidential campaign. Aides hoped her presence would help quell rumors of the couple's marital difficulties.

She handled the frequent questions about their personal relationship with courtesy, defending her husband and saying repeatedly she would move into the White House if he were elected.

To many observers, they appeared ill at ease with each other, rarely touching or holding hands. But several sources insisted the long, arduous campaign brought them closer together, a view also expressed by Mrs. Kennedy.

In the months following the campaign, sources said, they were together more than they had been in some time as they tried to see whether they could save their marriage.

"They are good friends," one source said.

"With regret, yet with respect and consideration for each other, we have agreed to terminate our marriage," the couple said in their statement.

"We have reached this decision together, with the understanding of our children, and after pastoral counseling."

In their statement, the couple announced that Mrs. Kennedy, 44, would remain in Boston to complete work on a master's degree in education at Lesley College.

"Thereafter, she intends to work full time in the field of music education of children," the statement said.

Kennedy will live at their home in McLean with son Patrick, 13. The couple's other two children, Kara, 20, and Edward M. Jr., 19, who lost a leg to cancer, are away at college.

The Kennedys, both Catholic, were married in 1958. On their fifth anniversary, President John F. Kennedy was shot to death in Dallas. A little less than five years later, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was shot to death in Los Angeles.

In between, Edward Kennedy himself almost died in the crash of a small airplane during his 1964 senatorial campaign. That left his wife to carry on as they main campaigner while he was hospitalized with a broken back.

Another senatorial campaign, in 1970, was conducted in the shadow of Chappaquiddick, the 1969 incident in which a young woman drowned when the car Kennedy was driving plunged off a bridge into a pond.

In the most recent one, last year's presidential campaign, the questions of their marriage and Chappaquiddick were everywhere. But Joan was with her husband when he announced his candidacy and again when it ended in defeat and many times in between. He called her "the best campaigner in the family."

She was also with him at the Democratic National Convention last summer when he delivered an electrifying speech that set off an emotional demonstration beamed across the United States by television.

In the drama of the moment she spontaneously threw her arm around him and he hugged her.

That was the last time America saw them together on national television.

Last May, McCall's magazine quoted Mrs. Kennedy as saying her husband's presidential campaign had helped their marriage and had been "wonderful for me, the best thing in the world, next to getting sober."

In a 1978 interview with McCall's, she said she became an alcoholic because she could no longer cope with rumors of her husband's relationships with other women. "Rather than get mad, or ask questions concerning the rumors about Ted and his girlfriends, or really stand up for myself at all, it was easier for me to just go and have a few drinks and calm myself down as if I weren't hurt or angry," she said in the interview. She was treated several years ago for alcoholism and has been active in Alcoholics Anonymous in Boston.

Langston Is Honored By Group

An honorary life membership was presented to Guy C. Langston of Greenville by the North Carolina Association of Police Chiefs during the annual meeting held in Southern Pines recently.

The citation read, "For outstanding service to law enforcement training during the past 17 years."

Based in Greenville at Pitt Community College, Langston has served 13 community colleges and technical institutes over an area of 26 counties. He is a law enforcement training specialist for these educational institutions.

Along with five other eastern North Carolina police chiefs, he helped to create the Coastal Plains Law Enforcement Academy in Wilson. He has been active with this group since its inception, serving two terms as president.

A retired colonel with the North Carolina National Guard, he saw 33 years of duty with the military. In 1970 he was awarded the North Carolina Distinguished Service Award by Governor Robert Scott.

Langston is slated for retirement February 1.

This test requires two identical mugs, a Schlitz and your regular beer, at equal temperatures. The taster must not know which beer is which. Label the mugs "1" and "2", then out of the taster's sight, pour the beers to equal heads.

To ensure that the choice is made on taste alone, serve the beer in non-transparent mugs or have the taster close his eyes and then sample both and choose the beer that tastes better. Did you pick today's Schlitz?

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anatomy of a prime time obsession...

It began on the Sunday night of December 19, 1971 and, as things stand, it will end on a Thursday night in May this year. As obsessions go, I guess you'd call this one rather benign.

But I tell you, a grown man doesn't lightly bear such a passion. Much more wicked inclinations are daily indulged with more compassion. I am, and have been for nine years, addicted to "The Waltons."

There was a sharp chill out that Sunday night, I remember, and Shiloh the Wunder Dachshund stretched and stirred before the fire. Chicken stew simmered on the stove. I didn't know it, but this homey little scene was working at my subconscious, smoothing the way for what was to come.

On TV, the final strains of some forgotten NFL game were played out. Supper. Then, it came — "The Homecoming," a made-for-TV movie with Patricia Neal and Andrew Duggan. It was a schmaltzy holiday story, set in Virginia's Blue Ridge during the Depression.

Patricia Neal was the Mama, and there were a bunch of kids decorating the tree and carrying on and waiting for their Daddy to come home. It was storming out. One of the kids, John-Boy, wanted to be a writer. He exaggerated a Southern accent (not pure Virginia, I noted) and hid his diary under his bed. Daddy was very late. After an hour or so of fretting and tension-mounting, Daddy finally arrived, bowed with gifts. It was a touching moment, if you're touched by such as this, when Daddy — knowing — handed John-Boy his very own Big Chief writing tablet.

Shiloh wept. I was hooked right then, although I didn't realize it until a year later when "The Homecoming" showed up as a regular CBS series, "The Waltons," and I found myself clearing away Tuesdays (it was on Tuesdays, then) to watch this TV show. Ralph Waite had become Daddy, Michael Learned was Mama. Will Geer and Ellen Corby were Granddaddy and Grandma Walton.

Richard Thomas began to smooth over his accent.

The little kids were an amorphous blur of giggles and whines back then, but soon they developed into Jim-Bob, Mary-ellen, Erin, Jason, Ben and little Elizabeth. "The Waltons" moved to Thursday, and kept coming back. So did I.

The fictional Walton's mountain, its air thick with moralistic homilies, beckoned each new season. John-Boy, encouraged by the gentle and literary schoolmarm, Miss Hunter, began serious pursuit of the letters. He went to Boatwright College, where he read Thomas Wolfe.

John-Boy came back to Walton's Mountain to publish his own paper, The Blue Ridge Chronicle, until finally, in 1977, he went off to New York, where his first novel was being published. The next year, Richard Thomas's John-Boy joined the AP in New York, and was only seen once thereafter. (A new John-Boy, uninspired and singularly unnoteworthy, is hardly worth note.)

Meanwhile, back on the mountain, Mary Ellen grew up, got married, had a baby and became a widow. Ike Godsey took on a wife — Corabeth, a woman of airs. Zesty old Zeb Walton died. Grandma suffered a stroke. Mama endured a polio attack, but was struck down by consumption. The Baldwin sisters, those archetypal Virginia gentlewomen, brewed their Daddy's "recipe," and mellowed into sweet old age.

And still I watched, abiding my peculiar obsession with vigilance and, I'll add, a certain chariness that came from years of ribbing, ostensibly good-natured. "Hey P.J., goin' to the game Thursday night?" "No, there's a TV show I want to watch." "Yeah, what?" "Uhm, 'The Waltons.'" "The WALTONS?!? Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha!"

It was tough, sometimes. For example, did you know that not one TV set in any bar anywhere in this country has ever been tuned in to "The Waltons?"

And there was the matter of love and marriage. At what point in serious courtship does one confess fanatic fondness for such patent wholesomeness? My wife, a liberal-minded and tolerant woman, indulged my passion. Indeed, she shared in it.

Now, after nine years, "The Waltons" is ending. Ralph Waite made his last appearance last week, leaving only the Baldwin sisters, Ike Godsey and five of the kids from the original show. At the end of this ses it has no plans to broadcast any more original episodes.

And I will regain possession of Thursday nights. Maybe I'll spend them drinking or shooting pool, or perhaps just hanging out on street corners. Maybe I'll write a novel on Thursdays, or even read one.

Or maybe, if "Magnum P.I." gets just a little bit better...

Actress Jean Muir Is Busy In Second Career

By TIM BRYANT
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A former Hollywood star and Broadway actress, she was banned from television during the Red-hunting '50s. An alcoholic divorced from her wealthy husband, she became a dramatics teacher and was forced into retirement.

But all that is behind Jean Muir.

"The only thing that seems important is now, this moment," the white-haired woman said, stabbing the air with her ever-present cigarette.

Teaching is again her vocation, one she takes very seriously. She recently pulled out of a production at a local dinner theater during the final week of rehearsal to devote more time to her students at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

"It's a second career and I've been very lucky," the 69-year-old actress said of her teaching.

Her acting career came to a sudden halt in August 1950 when Miss Muir was named a communist by the "Red Channels," which was terrorizing the entertainment industry with its search for alleged communists.

The occasion was a rehearsal for "The Aldrich Family" television series. When the Red-hunters tabbed Miss Muir as a communist, an assistant producer panicked and canceled the show on the spot. Miss Muir was fired.

Thirty years later, the memory of McCarthyism causes her to wrinkle her face with disgust.

"It was one of the most shameful periods in American history," she said.

She claims no authority to speak out about individual politicians but says conservative extremists are a danger to the country. "We Americans evidently don't have the faith in ourselves to laugh them out of office."

During the mid-1930s, Miss Muir was making about six films a year for Warner Bros. Her unwillingness to fall in step with the ideas of how studio moguls thought stars should behave gave her a reputation as a troublemaker.

She was taking classes at the University of Southern California and helping the fledgling Screen Actors Guild get on its feet. As a result, she said Warners did not renew her contract for 1938.

Two years after returning to New York City, where she had appeared on Broadway before making movies, Miss Muir married the prominent and wealthy attorney Henry Jaffe. By the time she had had three children, World War II had passed.

She still had a longing to perform and began working in the new medium of television. She had worked her way up to the leading role in the "Aldrich" series when her acting career was ended by the "Red Channels" accusations.

It appeared her "crimes" were her outspokenness, past guild activities and that she had taken college courses dealing with communism.

By 1954 she was an alcoholic. Her marriage had fallen apart. On a train to Reno for a quickie divorce in 1959, she says she turned down a porter offering her a drink. She says she has not had alcohol since.

Since that time she has devoted herself to teaching. But even in academia she has had trouble with established authority.

After teaching creative dramatics at the Bronx River Community Center and Goddard Riverside Center and directing community theater projects in the New York area, Miss Muir landed a job at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo.

In 1968, after setting up a theater program, Stephens retired an indignant Miss Muir because she had reached age 65.

She considered picketing the school's commencement exercises but instead went back to class. Forty-seven years after attending the Sorbonne in Paris, Miss Muir received her degree from Stephens in 1977.

Now on a one-year appointment at UMKC, Miss Muir said she is a better actress because of her teaching.

FOCUS Meeting in Mecca

An Islamic summit conference involving representatives from 42 countries is scheduled to take place this Saturday in Mecca, the chief holy city of Islam. Mecca was a religious and trade center known as Macoraba long before Islam became established. Mohammed, who founded the Islamic religion, was born in Mecca about 570 A.D. Another Moslem name for Mecca is Umm-al-kora, meaning "mother of cities." Moslems turn toward Mecca when they pray, and every Moslem tries to make a pilgrimage to Mecca at least once during his life. Most of Mecca's inhabitants make their living by taking care of these pilgrims. Only followers of Islam are allowed to enter the city.

DO YOU KNOW — In what country is Mecca located?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The Gang of Four was tried recently in China.

Big 'Card' For Marty Robbins

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Marty Robbins, best known for his hit "El Paso," has received a 4-by-8-foot get-well card signed by thousands of residents of El Paso, Texas.

Robbins, who was admitted to a hospital Saturday after suffering a mild heart attack, went home Saturday.

"I have no idea how many signatures are on the card — just thousands," said Bill VornDiek, a spokesman for Robbins. "Marty just said that he was very excited about it," VornDiek said. "He just thought it was neat."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It was not a busy day for the General Assembly Wednesday but one bit of new legislation did stir some interest.

Sen. Gilbert Boger, R-Mocksville, filed a bill calling for a special legislative committee to investigate bid-rigging on road construction projects. Boger filed the legislation on the heels of a state announcement that a Department of Transportation employee had been suspended in connection with the scandal.

That move came on a slow legislative day that saw both the House and the Senate meet for less than 20 minutes. In the House, Rep. Jim Morgan, D-High Point, promised to file a bill that would give property rebates ranging from $200 to $500 to low- and fixed-income families.

Also Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Stoneville, said he would seek an opinion from the attorney general on whether his business as a highway contractor represents a conflict of interest since he is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which will consider raising the gas tax to aid the ailing highway program.

Transportation officials said that James Preston Allen, 49, DOT proposal and contract project engineer, was suspended without pay pending completion of a state investigation into the bid-rigging scandal.

Boger joked that "I'll probably get killed before morning," after filing the measure that asks a committee to look into the handling of the bid-rigging scandal by DOT officials to determine why it took so long for the matter to be uncovered.

Allen, who earned $31,284 a year and was involved in making highway contract estimates, was informed of his suspension by Transportation Secretary Thomas Bradshaw. Bradshaw said he reached his decision after meeting with officials of the attorney general's office.

H. Al Cole Jr., special deputy attorney general and director of the state's bid-rigging investigation, said the suspension was an "off-shoot of our investigation."

Boger said his decision also was based on the fact that the Legislature will be called on to consider increasing the gas tax to finance the state highway program.

Under his measure, a Joint Investigative Committee would be established to conduct the probe. It would consist of 10 legislators, two of whom would be Republicans. Boger said he wanted the panel to call department officials to testify.

North Carolina is one of several Southern states involved in the bid-rigging scandal. So far, 15 paving companies and 23 executives have been indicted or pleaded guilty or no contest to charges of violating the federal Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

About 30 elderly members of Carolina Action, a consumer group of low-income North Carolinians, were in the gallery to show their support for Morgan's bill, which has yet to be filed.

But Morgan admitted the bill faces a major obstacle in its cost to the state, which he estimated could run as high as $60 million.

Under the bill, Morgan said families earning up to $25,000 a year would be eligible for as much as a $200 rebate on their property taxes. Farmers, he said, would be eligible for a property tax rebate of as much as $500.

The rebates are based on a scale that determines a fair tax level for low-income families. For example, the scale shows that a family with an income of $5,000 a year or less would be expected to pay only .5 percent of their income in property taxes. Any taxes above that amount would be refunded.

In other legislative action: Tax Bills

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, filed a tax proposal that would make residents of other states filing North Carolina income tax returns eligible to divide personal deductions between North Carolina and the state in which they live. The deductions would be divided in proportion to the extent the other state allows such deductions for North Carolinians.

Previously outsiders were allowed to claim only those deductions related to business in North Carolina or contributions to North Carolina organizations.

The bill is directed at people who live in South Carolina and work in North Carolina. It would match a bill approved by the South Carolina General Assembly in 1979.

Lilley estimated the bill would cut general tax fund revenues by $1.1 million for fiscal year 1981-82.

Senate

There wasn't much business to discuss when the state Senate met, and lawmakers spent only 15 minutes in session. After a list of bills were referred to committee, the only business was a social announcement by Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia — that a reception for legislators by an association of plumbing and heating contractors had been postponed.

Tax Cut
Rep. J. Reid Poovey, R-Hickory, filed a bill that would reduce income taxes. One tax-cut bill already has been introduced this session by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston. Poovey's bill would provide for a larger tax cut than Lilley's bill.

Under the proposal filed by Poovey, the level of income in each of the state's tax brackets would be raised. It would raise the minimum income level for the top 7 percent tax bracket from the current $10,000 a year to $16,000.

Budget
Two bills representing Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed 1981-83 state budget were filed in the Senate by Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run. The bills will be sent to the Senate Appropriations Committee, where legislators already have been going over the $11.9-billion spending package.

Senate Confirms Haig As New Secretary Of State By 93-6

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander M. Haig has won overwhelming confirmation as secretary of state from a Senate impressed by his pledge to conduct a tough foreign policy.

The Senate confirmed Haig 93-6 Wednesday with Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and several other opponents expressing concern over whether Haig might be susceptible to pressures that might cause him to abuse his power.

"And that in the final analysis was what Watergate and wiretaps were all about," Byrd said.

But Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., said "those who associate Alexander Haig with Watergate are talking through an empty hat — and I might even go lower."

Goldwater said Haig's role in Watergate as former President Richard M. Nixon's chief of staff was to spare the country impeachment action by getting Nixon to resign.

And Goldwater said that under Haig "the world, whether they like it or not, is going to start treating America as the power it should be."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, said Haig, a retired Army general and former NATO commander, recognizes "that the purpose of power is to preserve the peace. The best way to preserve peace is through strength."

Byrd said he agrees with Haig's policy toward the Soviet Union, apparently referring to Haig's statement that he will get tough with the Soviets.

But Byrd said Haig's confirmation hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee left "unanswered questions — some of which were perhaps never asked — regarding the abuse of power."

He indicated the questions included "how Gen. Haig would interpret and utilize his own power, how he perceives the sometimes thin distinctions between what is right, and what is merely expedient."

Sens. Paul S. Sarbanes,

D-Md., and Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., the two senators who voted against Haig in committee, joined Byrd in saying they have reservations on Haig's potential for abusing power.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., went further and said, "Mr. Haig has consistently chosen the lowest road" when faced with moral decisions.

He urged the Senate to reject Haig because "this man has failed so many tests of character in the past."

Also voting against Haig were Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, Michigan Democrats.

The five days Haig spent before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was the longest confirmation hearing for a secretary of state nominee in recent years.

Meanwhile, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko today congratulated Haig on the confirmation, according to the Soviets' official Tass news agency.

Tass quoted Gromyko as saying in a cable, "I would like to express the hope that your work in this responsible post will facilitate the development of relations between the U.S.S.R. and the United States on a path that responds to the interests of both countries and the interests of strengthening peace."

An almost identical message was sent to Edmund Muskie when he was sworn in as secretary of state last May.

Water Cutback By Pennsylvania

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Officials have approved seven more mandatory rationing plans and brought to 103 the number of Pennsylvania municipalities forced to cut back on water consumption.

Some 35,000 residents of State College, in Centre County, came under one of the new conservation plans approved Wednesday by the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Council.

The new plans call for a 25 percent cut in water consumption to help municipal and private water suppliers cope with dwindling supplies caused by a shortage of rainfall since last summer.

Customers using more water than permitted will be hit with steep "excess usage" charges.

If overuse persists, water suppliers may install devices restricting water flow or even to cut off water service to errant customers for up to 48 hours.

The governor has empowered PEMC to review and approve all rationing plans, giving the formulas the force of state law.

With Wednesday's additions, a total of 18 mandatory water rationing plans have been implemented in Pennsylvania, representing 35 water suppliers.

In addition, residents in 13 eastern Pennsylvania counties were banned from non-essential water use last week under an order by the Delaware River Basin Commission.

Here are the water suppliers whose plans were approved Wednesday:

Walnutport Authority serving Walnutport Borough and Lehigh Township in Northampton County; State College Borough Water Authority serving State College, and parts of College, Ferguson, Harris and Patton townships; Howard Borough Water Department in Centre County.

Also approved: Washington Township Municipal Authority in Franklin County; Middleburg Borough Water System in Middleburg and part of Franklin Township in Snyder County; Port Royal Borough Water System in Port Royal and parts of Turbett and Milford townships, Juniata County; and Walker Township Water Association in Centre County.

Local Student Is Appointed

Don F. White Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Don F. White of Greenville, has been named to the student counselor body at Virginia Episcopal School in Lynchburg, Va. White was appointed to the position by the school headmaster on the basis of student-faculty nominations.

White has been a member of both the varsity golf and varsity basketball teams for three years. In 1979 he was honorable mention all-prep in golf and in 1980 was selected to the Virginia all-prep golf team. Currently he is the leading scorer on the basketball team. He will graduate in June, 1981.

Two Vehicles In Collision

Vehicles driven by Ollie Faye Mewborn of Route 2, Farmville, and Richard Wayne Embrey Jr., of Route 3, Raleigh, collided about 7:35 p.m. yesterday at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard.

Police Department investigators estimated damage at $1,000 to the Mewborn car and $900 to the Embrey truck.

Seek Party Leadership

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four men who want to lead the Democrats on a comeback from their 1980 electoral disaster are taking their cases before influential party groups.

The aspirants to succeed Democratic National Chairman John C. White were meeting today with Senate Democrats whose majority was swept out in Ronald Reagan's conservative tide last November.

Democratic senators are looking for a chairman who can rebuild the party organization and provide a base for staving off the GOP challenge to control of the House as well as reverse the 1980 Republican gains.

White was widely criticized for devoting too much of the party's resources to Jimmy Carter's re-election campaign and neglecting grass-roots organization.

The frontrunner for the chairmanship is Charles T. Manatt, a Los Angeles lawyer who is a leading Democratic fund-raiser.

Also campaigning for the job are Charles Curry of Kansas City, Mo., Joseph Crangle of Buffalo, N.Y., and Patrick Cunningham of New York City.

Another potential candidate for the post, former Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, decided against running and endorsed Manatt.

Democratic state chairmen meet with the candidates Friday in Washington, and similar sessions are scheduled next week with governors and members of the House.

The new chairman will be chosen Feb. 27 by the Democratic National Committee.

Urge Spending On Chronic Illnesses

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Billions of federal dollars spent on medical treatments for the needy would be better spent on health-maintenance programs to help close the "health gap" between America's rich and poor, University of California researchers say.

Lewis Butler, co-director of the Health Policy Program at UC-San Francisco, said his recent study entitled "Illness And Income," indicated that massive federal spending since 1964 has done little to improve the health of the nation's poor.

"We direct that spending at acute rather than chronic illness. We reward hospitalizing people rather than maintaining their health," Butler said.

The percentage of poor who say their days were restricted — spent in bed or away from normal daily activities — because of chronic illness is 2½ times higher than the percentage of non-poor, the researchers found.

For every 1,000 people of all incomes and ages, 17.6 percent are limited in their activities because of heart disease, compared with 36.9 percent per 1,000 people earning less than $6,000 annually. Fortarthritis and rheumatism, it was 16.3 percent for all incomes to 38.8 percent for the poor.

Poor people suffered twice as often from emphysema.

"The ultimate absurdity is to treat somebody at a county hospital emergency room for a chronic illness of 10 years," Butler said, adding that an alternative would be to treat the "whole person," including social and psychological conditions.

"We promote increased medical spending at the expense of other social programs," he said. "The problem is not one of fine-tuning policy but rather of reshaping it."

Don't regard those players to your right and left as your enemies. On occasion, you might have to call on them for assistance and it is surprising how often they will be forced to oblige! Consider this hand.

We do not like North's decision to make a positive response to his partner's demand opening bid. Even though he had the required 7 points and one quick trick, his suit was shabby and his singleton in partner's suit was reason for caution. South, too, might have taken a quieter approach by bidding only five spades at his third turn but it is difficult to fault him once he had received a positive response.

West led the king of hearts and dummy was somewhat of a disappointment. Declarer had at least one spade loser. Therefore, it seemed that he would have to rely on the club finesse to make his slam. One glance at the layout reveals that this would have failed and the slam would have been defeated.

Champion Turkey-Caller Helps Save A Native Bird

By FRED FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — You've heard a turkey gobble, but ever hear a wild turkey "putt" or "kee kee" and whine?

Then there are the cluck, the cackle and the yelp. No use trying to describe these sounds. Leave it that they're clearly from out of the wild. We heard them all in our Manhattan office. People kept peeping in to see who'd gone bananas.

It was Rod Keck doing his thing.

Keck, 30, is six-foot, bearded, muscular. He dresses like the outdoorsman he is — in cowboy boots, chinos, bone necklace and sweater.

Keck is a turkey caller. He holds 30 turkey calling and owl hooting titles.

Puns aside, since we were talking turkey, he didn't once give a hoot for an owl.

He's a dedicated worker for the National Wild Turkey Federation, which wants to preserve the nation's native big game bird.

As a wild turkey hunter, he's in interesting company. Aficionados include country singer Hank Williams, golf pro Sam Snead, former astronaut Wally Schirra and, oh yes, Bert Lance. There are maybe another 2 million of them in the United States.

Hunters will kill off more than 200,000 of these gorgeous birds this year. Slaughter, some say. Depletion of a natural resource, they say.

They don't know what they are talking about, says Keck.

"A lot of people have trouble discerning the difference between conservation and preservation," he says. "Hunting is part of conservation. It is utilizing a resource; harvesting the surplus, but insuring against over harvest. It is keeping an equitable balance with the available habitat."

Keck says the average life of the gobbler is 18 months, the hen slightly longer. "They will die anyway. Why not make wise consumptive use of them?"

While hunters do shoot big toms for trophies, Keck says, "I take them for eating." He fries them, in fact, for "some of the finest eating there ever was."

If it were not for the turkey hunters and their federation, he says, there would be few if any wild turkeys to hunt.

Keck says wild turkeys once existed in the millions in the eastern two thirds of the U.S. Even then, their ancestral range touched only 39 states. There's a good question as to whether the Pilgrims had wild turkeys for their first Thanksgiving dinner but the birds abounded at the time.

By 1942, they faced extinction. They could be found in fast diminishing numbers in only 21 states. Now they have made a comeback. Very much because of the federation, there are an estimated 1.8 million wild turkeys in 49 states today and their number is growing. Their range has been extended into every state except Alaska.

Robert L. Herbst, the Interior Department's assistant secretary for fish, wildlife and parks, gives the turkey hunters a lot of credit.

"You have added a fascinating dimension to the history of game management in the United States," he told their annual meeting. "You have taken the bird, which might have been our national bird, but which began to die out early in the 19th century and turned around its life history."

Part of Keck's story is conservation. The federation has built a wild turkey research center in Edgefield, S.C. Its 100 chapters participate in a variety of game management and education programs. They work with state conservation agencies to transfer wild turkeys, extending their habitat. They plant berry bushes and grain for the birds and lobby for wilderness areas. In the Southwest, they dig water holes for the turkeys.

Thirty-four of the 37 state chapters offer rewards for information leading to apprehension of hunters guilty of illegal taking.

"Pressure by peer groups is sometimes more effective than coming down hard with the law," Keck says.

As much as talking about game management, Keck enjoys telling about the hunt.

"The wild turkey, to me, is the most challenging, the most formidable of game birds. It has amazing eyesight, excellent hearing. It is fleet of foot."

That doesn't jibe with the people who call other people turkeys.

"I'm not talking about the dumb domestic counterpart," says Keck. "The wild bird is streamlined because it has to fend for itself."

Keck comes from Ickesburg, Pa., in the Tuscarora Mountains which, when he was a boy, was "one of the last strongholds of the wild turkey." It was the end of the timber era when clear cutting was the vogue, reforestation almost never done. Removal of the turkey's natural cover caused its depletion much as urban sprawl threatens to do today.

Back home by age 4, Keck was able to trail his father and grandfather through the woods on hunting expeditions. He's been learning about turkey hunting ever since.

Most people think of it as a sport for the fall. Most turkey hunting is done then. Forty-three states now have fall seasons.

Truly dedicated hunters, Keck among them, prefer the spring.

Spring is mating season. Not all states have spring seasons but the number is up from 8 to 14 with two more, New Jersey and Connecticut, joining this year because of the bird's resurgence.

Only bearded turkeys may be taken in spring while in fall either sex may be hunted.

"Spring hunting is the greatest challenge," Keck says. The more mature tom turkeys are likely to be taken then but the taking is trickier.

It also is when turkey calling plays a greater part.

"You go out in the morning and listen for the male's gobble. Hear that and you move as close as you can, making soft mating calls. If he's still in a tree, use a tree call. Or try a series of fast, excited hen cackles."

He uses a variety of devices for calling. Some are store bought, some homemade. The friction kind includes a rough-surfaced, wooden open box and paddle; a piece of slate and a striker like the Indians used; and a corn cob to be stroked with the rib bone of a white tailed deer. There are mouth "yelpers" — a snuff can or a tube, Keck says, "or you can use a leaf like a diaphragm. Some people still use a turkey wingbone, others the quill of a feather."

Keck believes the wild turkey population now is "close to what was originally there." There's room for further growth, thanks to the additional habitat provided by extending the birds' range.

"The thing that is going to limit this growth," he says, "is not hunting, but urban sprawl, dams and roads, industrialization."

Tax Deductions In Odd Places

By AMANDA ATKINS
United Press International
As tax returns arrive in the mail, the annual scramble for records and allowable deductions is on.

Taxpayers will find deductions in strange places this year — the union hall, the property tax bill, the classroom and even the race track.

As the countdown to April begins, the Internal Revenue Service offers one valuable New Year's resolution for every working person — keep accurate, complete financial records. The chore can be surprisingly simple.

"Record-keeping doesn't have to be a big deal, says Eve Miller, public affairs officer for the Internal Revenue Service in Nashville, Tenn. "A set of envelopes will do nicely."

Divide them into categories. Stuff them with receipts for medical care, state and local taxes (they are deductible), and any other deductible items.

"Cancelled checks are adequate documentation," she said.

Other documents that should be saved are receipts or cancelled checks for medicine from pharmacies, and contributions to churches or qualified religious organizations.

The IRS has 140 publications providing specific answers to detailed questions. A 176-page handbook called "Your Federal Income Tax" — Publication 17 to IRS employees — outlines general information and provides the publication numbers for other pamphlets.

"There is a publication on record-keeping," Ms. Miller said. "One of the little tricks about keeping records, generally speaking, is to keep them three or four years. But certain records you should keep as long as you retain the asset."

"If you kept track of the amount of money you put into a house over the years, you won't have to pay taxes on it (upkeep costs)."

"If you bought a house 40 years ago for $10,000, and sold it today for $150,000, the amount of increase is not deductible, but it can affect the capital gain — which you do pay taxes on."

Publication 552 on record-keeping must be specially ordered this year. IRS officials, feeling the pinch of inflation, will not automatically ship pamphlets on specific subjects to IRS offices. Instead, a toll-free number is provided to taxpayers who need to order more specific information that is provided by the general outline. Publication 17.

This catchall pamphlet contains tidbits for the taxpayer such as some of the records he or she will scrounge for when April rolls around.

The list varies for each person, but some little-known deductibles are often overlooked, Ms. Miller said.

Some often overlooked deductible items:

— The cost of having a tax return prepared the previous year.

— Dues to professional societies and subscriptions to professional journals.

— Malpractice insurance premiums.

— Medical insurance premiums.

— Union dues and expenses.

— Liquidated damages to a former employer.

— And gambling losses. However, winnings are taxable.

"If you bet at the race track ... (you must) save all the little tickets and substantiate what you lost," she said. "You also have to keep track of what you won."

Liquidated damages to a former employer applies to penalties paid by a person who, for example, broke a contract.

paid to a former employer for a breach of employment contract," Ms. Miller said.

"If you broke a contract and had to pay a settlement, it (the settlement) would be deductible."

Contributions are a hazy area, and sometimes the charities a taxpayer tries to deduct won't qualify.

Contributions to a "domestic fraternal society operating under the lodge system" are deductible — but not if the contribution was used to pay sickness or burial expenses of members.

Money given to a nonprofit cemetery is deductible, but only if it is used for the care of a whole cemetery, not a particular lot or mausoleum crypt.

A deductible item the IRS keeps close tabs on is the deduction allowed for operating a business in a home, Ms. Miller said.

"The IRS is not easy on this point. It was abused for some time. A teacher who grades papers at home cannot use (her home as a deductible item)."

Uniforms are deductible. Clothes that can be worn on the street are not.

"A TV anchorperson has to have spiffy clothes and may want to deduct his entire wardrobe," she said. "But if it can be used for street wear, it's not deductible."

Funeral and burial expenses are not deductible. Neither are fees and licenses of any kind — whether for dogs, cars or marriages.

There is a new way to figure the total taxes you pay based on earned credit.

"Tax credits are another whole ball game," Ms. Miller said. "While a deduction reduces the amount of income on which your tax is based, a tax credit is a dollar for dollar reduction on the amount you owe."

"Figure out what you owe, then lop (the tax credit) off." The most common credits are the energy tax credit, earned income credit, credit for political contributions and credit for the care of a child or other dependent.

It isn't necessary to itemize to get tax credits, but the long form — 1040 — must be used to receive child care or energy tax credits.

One tax credit is designed to ease the crunch on low income families.

"Earned income credit is for low income workers with less than $10,000 a year," she said. "There must be a child in the family under age 15 living at home. There's up to a $500 refundable credit."

"That means if you owe no taxes, you could get up to $500."

To help even more, earned income credit can be collected in advance. "An employer can give a portion with each paycheck instead of waiting a year," Ms. Miller said.

The energy tax credit is available to both homeowners and renters who make improvements to residences that increase energy efficiency.

"Even a renter can qualify for a credit of up to $300," Ms. Miller said.

People constructing houses can qualify by building in equipment to utilize solar, geo-thermal or wind power.

Credit for political contributions is slim compared to the other available credits.

"There is credit of up to $50 for half the political contributions you made during the year," she said. "If you contributed $25, you can credit $12.50. But if you contributed $200, you can only take a maximum of $50."

Credit for the care of a child or disabled dependent is available if money spent on the care frees the taxpayer to work or look for work.

"You must have income from work during the year and you must pay someone other than your child under 19 or a person you claim as a dependent (for the care)," Ms. Miller said.

"The amount of credit is 20 percent of the amount you paid during the year for care up to a maximum of $2,000 for one (dependent), $4,000 for two or more," she said. "So (child care) credit would be a maximum of $400 for one (dependent), $800 for two (or more dependents)."

Life Is Tough For A Winner

COLUMBUS, OHIO (AP) — Life's tough. Just ask anyone who's won $1 million in the Ohio Lottery.

There's no guarantee of success.

Omar Watts, Ohio's first $1 million winner, became owner of a lawnmower and small-machinery store and repair shop in April 1975, about a year after the drawing. But the company closed in 1979 because of tax troubles.

Watts now lives in Cherokee, N.C., according to the lottery commission. His telephone number? Unpublished, the agency said.

"I don't take any pleasure in having anyone know I won the lottery," said Kenneth Kent, formerly of Sylvania and who won the lottery's grand prize two years ago. "In fact, the reverse is true."

"It's not that great," said Katie Shank of Defiance, the last to win $1 million in the state lottery. That drawing, held Dec. 13, 1979, was the last planned by the Ohio Lottery Commission, which is trying to spread winnings among more people.

Many of the 18 people who have won $1 million in the Ohio Lottery — like Richard Osborn, a former teacher in Toledo — said they were unprepared for the change that Lady Luck dealt to their lives.

"It pulls the rug of life out from under you," Osborn said. "You go from one world into another. I left one that was very comfortable and went into one I didn't understand."

After winning the lottery four years ago, Osborn quit his teaching job at the end of the fall semester after pressure from his colleagues and students became too much.

"Teachers are poor people ... then suddenly I had a lot of money ... and it caused problems," he said.

Osborn moved to another Ohio city, where he tried to hide his identity. Within a year, he was forced to move to Seminole, Fla., where he now works as a free-lance writer.

Spruill Elected Coordinator

FALKLAND — J. E. Spruill has been elected Sunday School coordinator for the Middle District Union of the Old Eastern Missionary Baptist Association.

The mid-year session of the Sunday School and BTU Convention was held Saturday at the St. John Baptist Church here.

The Middle District Union includes 26 Sunday School which Spruill will have to contact and report on to the convention during its annual sessions.

Spruill is a member of the Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church and superintendent of the Sunday School and serves on other committees. He is a former principal of Sadie Sautler School and spent many years as an educator.
