Property Owners Concerned About Revaluation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Many owners of real property in Pitt County in the past few weeks have expressed concern over the increased value placed on their land and buildings by the county's revaluation program.

Along with the concern expressed by individuals, several groups have held or have scheduled meetings to discuss what they feel are high values.

Probably one of the most frequent comments heard is something to the effect that, "There's no way I'll be able to pay my property tax."

Pitt County, just as all counties and municipalities in North Carolina, receives the bulk of the revenue required to provide services to the people by taxing real and personal property. And the most costly programs and services — things such as social service programs and education — are mandated programs over which the Board of County Commissioners has little control.

Each year, in January, property owners are required to list their real and personal property for tax purposes. Later, commissioners look at the needs of the various county departments and agencies and formulate a budget for the coming fiscal year, which begins July 1.

Taking into account the tax base — the value of the real and personal property listed in January — and other sources of revenue the county expects during the coming year, such as sales tax, various fees, and state and federal grants, commissioners then set a "tax rate" to be applied against the value of an individual's property.

Tax bills are sent out — generally in September — and taxes are payable before January 1.

Historically, one of the biggest problems for Pitt commissioners is reconciling the difference between what the various departments and agencies of the county request and what money is available to fund county operations. Pitt board members have, in the past, been highly reluctant to raise the tax rate to bring in more revenue.

Many times, the normal growth of the county — new industry, new homes, more cars, more people — has provided sufficient revenue for the tax rate to remain steady or even decline.

However, in the past few years, the high rate of inflation has made the board's efforts to hold the tax rate down much more difficult.

Revaluation, just as other property tax matters, is governed by State law, which requires real property in each county to be revalued every eight years.

"It can be done more frequently," according to Pitt County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee, "but it's required every eight years."

And the property must be placed on the tax books at its true value — what it's worth in money if sold by a willing seller to a willing buyer.

Why revalue real property? Because inflation and other factors — development, location, potential use — generally cause the value of real property to increase, some more than others.

According to Hardee, personal property is revalued each

Former Hostages Returning Today

Joy Of Freedom Tinged By Stress, Illness

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

WIESBADEN, West Germany (UPI) — America's 52 former hostages — some exultant, some bitter, some isolating from guilt and stress — completed medical tests Saturday ready for the final journey home. One said the first thing he would do in America was "kneel down and kiss the ground."

The big moment was set for 11 a.m. EST, today, the scheduled landing time at Stewart Airport near West Point, N.Y., after a seven-hour flight from Wiesbaden aboard a special Air Force jet.

Up to the last moment, stories emerged of cruelty and brutality in Iran and one diplomat, Malcolm Kalp said he spent 374 of the 444 days' captivity in solitary confinement because he tried to escape.

"I was choked, kicked in the groin and punched," he said.

As the 50 men and two women prepared for their 4 a.m. EST departure, the joy was overshadowed by word that three of the Americans were in isolation in their hospital rooms, suffering from severe depression and other psychological scars of their ordeal in Iran.

Military sources at the Wiesbaden U.S. Air Force Hospital said the three were being kept under observation in their rooms because of their psychological condition.

State Department spokesman Jack Cannon confirmed several of the Americans were having serious problems adjusting. "There were several in worse shape than the others. Many are suffering from guilt and stress," Cannon said.

One former hostage has refused to leave his room. Another kept pacing the halls in agitation. One soldier refused to shake hands with his officers.

And after four days in freedom, Kalp appeared before reporters to prove that there are still more tales to be told of the terror endured by the Americans in Iran.

Kalp, a 43-year-old economic officer, nearly cried as he told reporters how he had been tortured and kept in solitary confinement for 374 days for trying to escape.

"I was one of the bad guys," said Kalp. They handcuffed me for seven days. They physically assaulted me on several occasions. I was choked, kicked in the groin and punched.

"There was physical pain, denegration, isolation and poor food. I had powdered milk with worms, but I could occupy my time by picking out the worms," he said.

Kalp, accused by Iranian militants of being a CIA spy, said he was moved 22 times, nearly always to dank and darkened cells.

"One had to give the best effort to get out, and if you were caught you were phisically tortured. I tried going over the walls more than once, but I guess I'm just a bad luck escapee," Kalp said.

In a last-minute change of plans, officials said all 52 former hostages would be returning to the United States, including Sgt. 1st Class Donald R. Hohman, who had planned to stay behind with his German wife Anna and their three children.

After "some discussion" with his wife, Hohman de-

Coverage By Networks

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major television networks plan special coverage of the reunion of the 52 freed hostages with their families today, but it was unclear whether cameras will record the first emotional encounter, network officials said Saturday.

Stewart Airport officials said the State Department had ordered that approximately 1,800 acres of the 10,500-acre airport, including buildings and runways, be declared off-limits.

CBS said the network will broadcast a half-hour special at 8 a.m. EST called, "Homeward Bound," showing the freed hostages leaving Germany. A second special, entitled "Home at Last," will be broadcast live from Stewart Airport. A third special, entitled "Reunion," will be broadcast later.

NBC plans a short live report from the airport right before the network's 12:30 p.m. EST program "Meet the Press." Updates will be broadcast throughout the afternoon as events warrant with a special report during halftime of the Superbowl. NBC will conclude its coverage with a half-hour special at 11:30 p.m. EST.

ABC will broadcast a half-hour special at 9 a.m. EST today and will interrupt regular programming during the afternoon for updates on the arrival of the freed hostages and their families.

To Hold Hearings On Policy Toward Terrorism

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is gearing up for exhaustive hearings on the former hostages' ordeal, U.S.-Iranian relations and future American policy toward terrorism.

While there has been criticism of former President Carter's handling of the 14½-month stalemate, "The $64 question is, what else what can we do?" asked Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla.

Fascell, chairman of the House international operations subcommittee that will conduct one of the hearings, continued:

"Do we declare war immediately and give up our own people? Do all countries pull their diplomats out (of dangerous countries) and leave chaos behind? Or is there something else?"

The House Foreign Affairs Committee and four of its subcommittees may begin hearings Feb. 10, but the Senate Foreign Relations Committee does not expect to begin its own investigations for about a month. Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee has urged the panel to wait "until the wounds heal a little."

Fascell said his subcommittee hearings also will delve into the former hostages' reports that they were terrorized by their Iranian captors with mock executions, Russian roulette, beatings and other indignities.

But he said he does not intend to compound the freed Americans' ordeal "by parading them before the committee."

"They're going to have enough trouble with the U.S. media," Fascell said. "They don't need more from a bunch of congressional committees."

He said he has asked the State Department to turn over its reports on the hostages' stories of "their treatment — or mistreatment — let's put it that way."

Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., said his Middle East subcommittee will conduct hearings on future U.S. policy aimed at preventing Iran's falling under Soviet domination, and keeping Iran's oil flowing to the West.

"It is not necessary for us to love Khomeini, but we do have to try to maintain our interests," Hamilton said.

"I don't think it's going to be easy to establish relations because of the deep feeling we all have about the treatment of the hostages," he conceded. "We're just going to have to see what they do."

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., ranking Republican on Hamilton's subcommittee, said he wants to go into the Carter administration's handling of the hostage crisis.

"We tried one rescue and that didn't work and we didn't try again," Findley said. "We didn't use threats of any kind.

He said he is concerned that Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf nations might back away from the United States because their "trust and confidence in us has been shaken."

Findley also said he believes the hearings should go into Iran's charges of U.S. manipulation of its government and claims against the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

"If we're ever going to get on a good basis with Iran we have to listen to what their claims and charges are," he said.

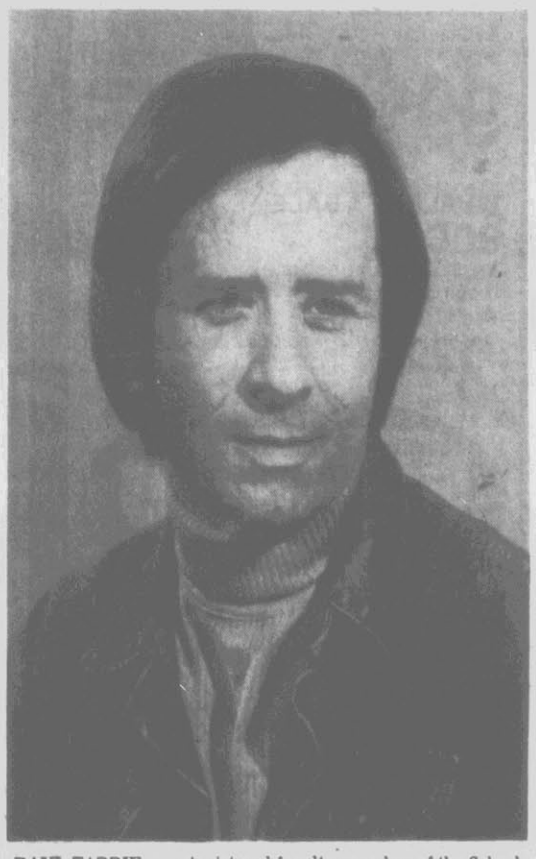
"We need to regain influence in that area," Findley said. "We don't want to see the Soviet Union take over chunks of the country and cut off our access to oil."

But a split has emerged between some Republican and Democratic leaders in the Senate on whether hearings there should go into Iran's charges.

But Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California said, "I don't see how we can avoid going into the background — into why so many Iranians are so deeply hostile to the United States."

The full House Foreign Affairs Committee tentatively plans to get testimony from some of the former hostages and from the former Carter administration officials who negotiated the agreement that brought them home.

Pianist Tardif Played At Inaugural Gala And On Tours With Tony Bennett



PAUL TARDIF . . . pianist and faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, had a busy holiday and early January schedule away from Greenville. Tardif toured as pianist with singer Tony Bennett for concerts in Miami, Manila and Hong Kong, and then on January 18 accompanied dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov in a gala inaugural event at The Kennedy Center in Washington, D. C. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines)

East Carolina University pianist and School of Music faculty member Paul Tardif has been a busy, much-in-demand performer during and after the holiday period when most Greenville residents were racing about doing their Christmas shopping or relaxing afterwards.

In an interview with Mrs. Marilyn Lucht of the ECU School of Music, Tardif related the rapid sequence of events that took him out of Greenville for two engagements with singer Tony Bennett, then, a short time later, to Washington, D. C. to play at the inaugural concert for President Reagan.

Tardif recalls, "On December 17 I received a call from an old school friend of mine, Chuck Mangione, the jazz trumpet player, telling me that singer Tony Bennett's pianist and conductor had suddenly been hospitalized.

"He asked me whether I would be interested in doing a tour with Tony over the Christmas vacation. When I told Chuck I was interested, he promised to call me back with all the details.

"The next morning, December 18, I left for New York City to rehearse that day with Tony Bennett and his bassist, John Burr. The following morning I flew back to Raleigh."

On Saturday morning, December 20, Tardif flew south to Miami, where Bennett appeared for the Palm Beach Doctors Association. "We did a show there, and after that I flew on back to Raleigh."

It was the day after Christmas that Tardiff left with Bennett bound for a tour of almost two weeks in two Asian cities, Manila and Hong Kong.

Five Manila Shows

"We played five concerts in Manila," Tardif said, "two of them, at the Manila Hotel, were for the Philippine Heart Fund." These benefits were arranged by Imelda Marcos, the First Lady of the Philippines.

Mrs. Marcos attended one of the concerts, "and she invited us to the palace to meet her husband, Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, at a New Year Eve's gala.

"The other three concerts," Paul added, "took place at the Folk Arts Theater in Manila. This is Manila's 'Cultural Center,' which seats about 8,000 people."

Tardif observed he was pleased "to learn that for these concerts, ticket prices were scaled so that the ordinary citizen could attend. Several thousand people attended each of these concerts."

And along with the concerts and the official rounds of their Philippine stay, Tardiff said "we also managed to do some sightseeing in Manila. We visited some of the local attractions, including an active volcano, and went swimming in the South China Sea."

The weather, he added, was somewhat warmer than in North Carolina at the time. "It was generally hot, seventy degrees plus, so we were able to swim and play tennis almost daily."

In Manila, Tardif conducted the show. "We had a 25-piece ensemble, including strings, harp, percussion, and a full complement of winds and brass."

On To Hong Kong

From Manila, the next destination was Hong Kong. "This was a two-day trip, and we appeared in a theater, giving two performances on one of the nights."

Tony Bennettt has been a well-known entertainer for a number of years, and Tardif noted that the hour-plus shows covered a repertoire of Bennett's own hit songs along with other favorites of

Islamic Conference Underway

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Leaders of 37 Moslem nations and the Palestine Liberation Organization converged on this resort city Saturday for their third Islamic summit. But their hopes of negotiating an end to the Iran-Iraq war were dashed by Iran's refusal to attend the talks.

Instead, the summit will focus on collective Moslem action against Israel, sources in the 42-member Islamic conference said.

Four kings, four sheiks, 21 presidents, eight representatives of heads of state and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat have accepted invitations to the summit to begin Sunday. U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim also will address the summit, his office said Saturday.

Libya is boycotting the summit to express its displeasure over the basing of U.S. radar planes in Saudi Arabia since the outbreak of the Persian Gulf war.

Afghanistan was banned from the summit because its Soviet-backed government is trying, with the help of Soviet troops, to put down Moslem rebels.

Egypt also was excluded because of its peace treaty with Israel. But Egyptian newspapers Saturday called on the summit to adopt a plan of action against alleged "Soviet infiltration in Arab and Islamic countries" from bases in Ethiopia and Libya.

A five-man delegation returned from Tehran on Saturday after an abortive 24-hour bid to persuade the Iranians to reconsider their boycott of the summit.

Conference sources said the Islamic nations had hoped to mediate the 4-month-old war on the northern part of the Persian Gulf. But Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said Friday that Iran would boycott the conference because Iraqi President Saddam Hussein would be present.

In Tehran, demonstrators marched to the Saudi Embassy there Saturday to demand Hussein's expulsion from the summit, according to Tehran Radio. They also demanded a committee be set up by the summit to investigate the "crimes of Saddam's regime."

Saudi Arabia, the gulf's largest oil exporter and the summit host, has expressed concern the war will spread to neighboring countries.

In Peking, China accused the Soviet press Saturday of trying "to discredit China and poison its relations with the Arab and Islamic countries" by "circulating the lie on the eve of the summit conference of the Islamic states" that Israel would supply China with weapons and military technology.

The summit will hold its inaugural session Sunday in the open-air courtyard of the Grand Mosque of Mecca, birthplace of Islam.

Security was extremely tight in the area, the site of bloody fighting a year ago between Saudi security forces and Moslem extremists who occupied the Grand Mosque to declare the coming of the messiah.

The work sessions will be held in this resort city 50 miles northeast of Mecca, at a $250 million convention center built especially for the occasion.

The summit agenda calls for talks on the Palestinian cause and ways of pressuring Israel to yield Arab territories occupied during the 1967 Mideast war. The Islamic nations are especially concerned by Israel's control of Arab-populated east Jerusalem, which contains Islam's third-holiest shrine, the Al Aqsa Mosque.

The conference, which represents some 800 million Moslems, has labeled the meeting the "Palestine and Jerusalem Summit" and are expected to reach a rapid consensus on an anti-Israeli program, a Saudi delegate said.

"While the aim of the summit is to put Islamic 'swords into plowshares,' resolutions on economic and political sanctions against the enemies of the Islamic nations are perfectly relevant," the Saudi said.

No indication was given of specific actions the Islamic nations would use to pressure Israel.

South Korea Ends Martial Law

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The longest period of martial law in modern Korean history came to an end today (Sunday in South Korea). President Chun Doo-hwan lifted the military decree in the second government action this week that was expected to improve relations with the United States.

"The foundation for social stability has been restored," Chun said in announcing the end of 15 months of martial law imposed after the October 1979 assassination of President Park Chung-hee.

There were few outward signs of change in this capital city, however, and diplomatic sources said they expected any future changes to be gradual.

A midnight to 4:00 a.m. curfew still was in effect and will continue, and an appointed legislative assembly already has passed several measures that will take the place of some martial law decrees.

The measures, described as "safeguards against possible recurrence of social disorder," include a new assembly and demonstration law, a basic press law and amendments to labor laws.

Formal press censorship ended with the termination of martial law, but the media will remain under close government control. Chun also will retain certain "oversight" powers.

Chun also announced presidential elections among authorized candidates for Feb. 25 and parliamentary elections to be held soon after.

Chun, who meets Feb. 2 in Washington with President Ronald Reagan, lifted martial law a day after commuting the Sept. 17 death sentence of his political arch-rival, dissident leader Kim Dae-jung.

Kim had been expected to be the leading opposition candidate in the presidential elections before his arrest May 17 and conviction on charges of sedition and attempting to overthrow the government. Kim had denied charges that he organized last May's nationwide protest against military rule that culminated in a bloody uprising in his native Kwangju, in southwest Korea.

Reagan, like former President Carter, had opposed Kim's death sentence. A State Department spokesman said the commutation "will contribute positively to the strengthening of relations between the United States and South Korea."

Government sources said Chun's actions are expected to improve his hand in talks with Reagan, whom he views as a friendlier ally than Carter.

Carter's human rights policies brought serious rifts with South Korea, which repeatedly cites a continuing threat from the communist North as the basis for maintaining stern, authoritarian rule.

The Carter administration's 1978 reductions of U.S. troops based in South Korea deeply angered the Seoul government.

Hostages Returning Today . . .

cided to go back for the official homecoming ceremonies, returning to West Germany after that, a military spokesman said.

Since arriving in Wiesbaden early Wednesday after a 14-hour flight from Iran, the former hostages have undergone a veritable decathlon of medical tests, dined on Maine lobster and German champagne, received an avalanche of gifts —from china to pizza airlifted from London — and been treated to a sample of what awaits them back home.

But for the nine Marine guards among the former hostages, the day before homecoming was probably the last time the Marine Corps will serve its men breakfast in bed.

Will Not Be Rushed By Iranian Claim

BOSTON (AP) — A federal judge, saying he wouldn't be rushed by a country that took 14 months to act on the American hostages, has declined to allow payment to an Iranian bank of its $3.4 million claim against a major U.S. defense contractor.

Judge W. Arthur Garrity on Friday let stand a previous temporary restraining order preventing the First National Bank of Boston from transferring Itek Corp. funds to Bank Melli of Iran.

"If, as it did, take Iran 14 months to decide what to do with humans that they took hostage, then the time it takes to decide what to do with money and property of Iran cannot be considered unreasonable," he said.

His decision came over the protest of a lawyer representing the Iranian bank. The attorney said executive orders issued by then President Carter on Tuesday in the deal to free the 52 American hostages in Iran prohibited court action delaying the settlement of claims with the Iranian government.

Quake Leaves At Least 150 Dead

PEKING (UPI) — A major earthquake hit the remote mountainous giant panda country of southwestern China Saturday, killing at least 150 people and levelling one major town.

The official Xinhua news agency said the pre-dawn earthquake, which measured 6.9 on the open-ended Richter scale, was centered in Dawu county in western Sichuan Province.

"Latest reports said nearly all buildings at the county seat (Dawu) had collapsed, leaving more than 150 people dead and over 300 injured," Xinhua said. "Total casualties and property losses are not yet known owing to the breakdown of telecommunications services."

An official of the Seismological Bureau said: "If the earthquake had been only a few hundred miles to the east the death toll could have been in the tens or hundreds of thousands.

Scaffold Collapses, Seven Miners Die

By CATHERINE WILSON Associated Press Writer

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A scaffold collapsed deep inside an underground shaft at a hyroelectric plant in the Sierra Nevada, sending seven miners more than 300 feet to their deaths, authorities said Saturday.

The workers were applying concrete to the walls of the 970-foot-deep shaft late Friday night when the circular construction platform fell. It had been suspended by four cables about midway down the shaft, which is designed to relieve air pressure from an underground tunnel.

Three bodies were recovered early Saturday on a ledge 300 feet below the platform and the others were found amid debris. All were flown by helicopter to Fresno, about 50 miles to the southwest, a deputy coroner said.

The dead workmen were identified by the Fresno County Coroner's Office as: James Pharris, 33, Burksville, Ky.; Gary Halcomb, 31, Marysville, Calif.; Michael Mulrennan, 32, Big Creek Calif.; Edwin Bissette, 21, Pomona, Calif.; Merle Lear, 48, Dinkey Creek, Calif.; Daniel Moreno, 23, Fresno, Calif.; and John Clark, 25, of Fresno.

An eighth worker inside a caged elevator suffered a broken leg, was treated at a Fresno hospital and released.

The accident occurred at 10:25 p.m., 90 minutes before the men would have completed their work week.

All the other night shift workers were accounted for, said W.J. Tomei, civil engineer for the project.

"Some on the shift had years and years of experience," Tomei said. "They're kind of a special breed of people."

An inspection team from the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration was sent to the site, and authorities had not determined the cause of the accident.

Chinese Verdicts Today

PEKING (UPI) — China's special court convened today to deliver the verdicts against Mao Tse-tung's widow, Jiang Qing, and nine other defendants in the country's political trial of the century, sources said.

Legal experts said all 10 accused would be found guilty and diplomatic sources said Jiang, a former Shanghai actress who rose to become China's uncrowned empress, would probably escape the firing squad and be condemned to solitary confinement and hard labor for the rest of her life.

Jiang and the other accused were taken from their individual cells where they have been housed during the hearings and marched under armed guard to the nearby courtroom.

They were lined up in individual metal and wood docks facing the special panel of 35 judges to hear the verdicts.

Some 800 representatives from all walks of life crowded into the makeshift courtroom. Many of the spectators were victims or relatives of victims of the defendants.

The court was delivering the verdicts only a few hundred yards from Mao's mausoleum in Peking's vast Tien Anmen Square.

Composer Barber Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Romantic composer Samuel Barber, whose works were introduced and played by some of the world's foremost conductors, died Friday night at his Fifth Avenue apartment following a lengthy illness. He was 70.

Barber, who won Pulitzers for his opera "Vanessa" in 1958 and for the "Piano Concerto No. 1" in 1963, died from of cancer, according a spokeswoman for G. Schirmer, Barber's music publisher.

The West Chester, Pa., native was the first American composer ever to have a symphonic work performed at the famed Salzburg Festival in Austria and was considered one of the few professional American composers who made his living entirely from his art.

Barber's most frequently performed piece, "Adagio for Strings," was introduced by Arturo Toscanini, who also introduced his "First Essay for Orchestra."

Other conductors who performed Barber's music here and abroad included Eugene Ormandy, Bruno Walter and Dimitri Metropoulos, George Szell, Charles Munch, Serge Koussevitsky, and Erich Leinsdorf.

Reviewing Needs Careful Doing

One doesn't have to be very observant to detect that there is considerable dissatisfaction within the county over the recently completed property revaluation.

Most parcels were valued far higher than in the previous valuation and the new figures sent shock waves through homeowners, land holders and those who own business property. It does little good to tell the property owners the actual tax rate can be adjusted downward to reflect the higher valuations. As taxpayers they face the property values as they receive them.

It was of concern enough so that a group of citizens meeting in Winterville asked for an entirely new revaluation. And the Pitt Farm Bureau has called a meeting of taxpayers for Monday night to discuss the revaluation.

Most property went up sharply in value, but some went up more than others and the owners often are left wondering why.

We wouldn't favor doing the job of revlauation over — not at this point. However, those responsible for listening to appeals should consider each case carefully. We want values placed on property which are fair to all — but valuations are, after all, human judgments and as such they are subject to review.

Limit White House Expenses, Too

President Reagan has ordered cut backs on equipment purchases and travel for the bureaucracy.

It is a fitting move for a new administration pledged to eliminating government waste.

An order was also issued to cabinet officers not to redecorate their offices; unfortunately the order does not apply to extensive redecorating of the White House.

The funds spent on the White House work are small, indeed, but it would be symbolic if the chief executive would limit this project, as well as others within the government.

"WHEN THE GOVERNMENT SAID AGRARIAN REFORM WOULD MEAN A PLOT OF LAND FOR EACH OF US, SOMEHOW I DIDN'T PICTURE THIS..."

Additions To State Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — When it comes to keeping up with government, it isn't knowing what is going on which is most difficult...it's understanding it.

Take state government jobs, for example. Remember when Gov. Jim Hunt took office for his first term in 1977 and announced that the bureaucracy was being trimmed back by about 800 jobs? It turned out those weren't really "jobs," but were "positions" and a large number were federally funded slots which were being eliminated anyway, and besides, they weren't real people at work in the paper positions.

With the beginning of a second term and convening of the 1981 General Assembly, the governor went public with a memo to department heads ordering a reduction of 1,002 jobs for a grand savings of $13 million.

Questioned on that, Gov. Hunt says these aren't really jobs, but vacant positions which have been vacant for some time. Indeed, they have been vacant since he ordered a hiring freeze on certain jobs a couple years ago.

It seems that over time the state's list of job vacancies at any given time has crawled upward from 2,000 to about 2,800.

Non-Jobs

Actually, Hunt responds, he is cutting out 1,002 of those non-jobs which haven't been filled for some time, so that the usual number of vacant jobs will be back down around 2,000.

"We are cutting where we can...where there is fat," the governor explains. And on the one hand there is "overbloated bureaucracy" and on the other there are critical human services...like education. To cut classroom size as proposed in the budget will require 828 new teachers in the coming two years, even while enrollment declines are eliminating some jobs. Overall, not just in the schools, the state will add 412 new jobs the first year, and 1,188 the second. And those figures don't include the reserve fund for added court personnel to implement the speedy trial and fair sentencing measures — nearly $9 million which could provide up to 270 new jobs.

So, we have somewhere around 1,870 new jobs being created while 1,002 vacant jobs are eliminated and about 285 school jobs are lost due to enrollment declines....

Anyway, by 1983, the budget provides for 181,126 state employees. In 1973, there were 136,705. Whether by cutting or by adding, the state has managed to add 44,421 jobs in 10 years.

That amounts to an increase of one third.

Property Values

Big figures usually boggle the mind, and the bigger the more boggling they are. Have you ever stopped to wonder what North Carolina is worth?

A survey of the local tax offices in the 100 counties shows that the total property tax base in the state is more than $86 billion.

Nearly two thirds of that value is in real estate, while personal property makes up 28.8 percent, and holdings of public service companies comprise nearly nine percent.

None of the listings collected for local property tax purposes reflect vast holdings by local, state, and federal governments such as parks, military bases, office buildings, roadways, universities and such; nor is church property included. Specialists say that all told there is property valued at better than $100 billion in the state.

That is just the tax listing valuation, usually considerably lower than market value by a third.

There is no strict accounting for personal property. Almost all of the counties use a percentage formula based on value of the real estate — or the rent paid — to determine that figure for tax purposes. In 14 counties you can still put down what you wish in the personal property column and it is accepted by the tax lister.

Sunday Morning Notes

Seldom has the nation been more united than in its desire to see the people captured in the American embassy in Iran brought out.

When it was finally accomplished last week there was an outpouring of joy, good will and just plain thankfulness that has seldom been seen in our nation.

Here at The Daily Reflector Monday and Tuesday were hectic days. Like other dailies we waited for the word of the plane departure to come and even made plans to re-make the front page if necessary. The word never came, however, and that left a feeling of doubt.

Tuesday was another waiting day with plans to handle the story if it came at any reasonable time.

The wire services reported around 11:30 a.m. that a guard had said the planes had taken off. That wasn't good enough. Around 12:40 the confirmation came — Iranian news agency Pars had reported the hostages plane was air borne.

The headline was stripped in place just minutes before our press run was scheduled to begin.

Somehow it all called for a celebration here, just as it did everywhere.

At 5 o'clock those of us who were left gathered in the lounge.

A bottle of champagne was provided by Renate Thompson of the production department.

There was only a swallow each for the ten or so who gathered, but it was enough. There were feeble attempts at a toast, and a jest or two, but mostly it was a quiet group — like all Americans truly grateful that innocent, captive Americans were returning to freedom.

Ronald Reagan will be pretty inaccessible to most of us, now that he is in the White House.

Four years ago, however, Vashti Forrest, wife of our photographer Tommy Forrest, got an exclusive when Reagan campaigned in Kinston.

Other Editors Say The Voters Oppose

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

Only eight out of 1,084 phone callers to the governor's office have said they would support a gasoline tax increase. That was reason enough for Gov. Jim Hunt to tell members of the General Assembly that it was their responsibility to determine how North Carolina will finance its intricate highway and bridge system. The governor's State of the State address lasted almost 45 minutes, and it handled every obstacle facing North Carolina over the next two years — that is, every obstacle except highway funding. From the tone of the callers this is most definitely a political no-no, so Gov. Hunt used three paragraphs of his speech to point out the need and urge the legislators to get on with it.

Over the past four years Jim Hunt has acted more like a political statesman than like a politician. In the instance of the deteriorating highway system, by wanting to place the monkey on the back of the General Assembly, he would appear to be reverting to a politician's image.

Perhaps Jim Hunt remembers that former Gov. Terry Sanford was never as popular after he supported the North Carolina sales tax as he was prior to that recommendation. A governor of any state can recommend almost anything in his budget so long as it does not involve a new form of taxation. An increase in highway taxes is considered a new form of taxation, and the people are going to frown on it.

Every month that we put off finding funds to keep our highways in proper order means double the cost down the road. In his budget presentation, Hunt proposed that funds for maintaining existing roads and bridges remain at about $168 million for each of the next two years. That appropriation only matches the amount set aside for highway maintenance this year, and highway officials have been saying for the past year that present funding is not enough to take care of existing highways. The money appropriated for the next two years will consist of inflated dollars, and that means that the only conclusion to be reached is that the $166 million is totally inadequate.

It is hoped that some leadership will emerge from the legislature with better vision than the phone callers to the governor's office. It would expedite matters if the governor would give the problem some leadership. A little tax pain at this time would be much better than waiting for roads to get in such poor shape that we would never be able to find enough funds to catch up.

Reagan Voiced 'Creed'

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In business suit instead of formal dress, President Reagan had given The Speech before, from a hundred and more platforms, on the path to the White House.

But as a campaigner, he often had suggested he would get quick results in his efforts to prune government, balance the budget, slow inflation.

In his inaugural address, those pledges were tempered a bit, perhaps by the magnitude of the federal bulwark before him. He said it will take more than days, weeks or months to deal with the nation's economic ills. He said progress will be measured in inches and feet, not miles, as he sets about trying to curb the powers of the federal government.

His first step as president was a step in that direction, a freeze on federal hiring to replace Jimmy Carter's order permitting government agencies to fill one of every two vacancies.

But the new administration conceded the impact of that order is not clear. "The net reduction in federal civilian employment as a result of the order cannot be predicted with confidence at this time," the White House said.

Reagan's order said there could be exemptions to the hiring freeze "in rare and unusual circumstances" for the delivery of essential services.

Government officials — even Republican government officials — tend to consider all their services essential, all their circumstances rare and unusual.

That is one of the reasons change comes slowly for

THE INSIDE REPORT

Promise Of 'Never Again'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Appalled that President Carter and his men were basking in the perceived success of their hostage-freeing operation, President Ronald Reagan and his men have been plotting a long-overdue U.S. campaign against terrorism in all its forms.

One of the new president's senior advisers put it to us this way: "The preoccupation of the Carter administration with human rights is going to be radically switched to the Reagan administration's preoccupation with international terrorism." The switch connotes a promise of "never again" in responding to the 444 days of Iranian captivity.

Behind this lies a fundamental distinction between the world views of Carter and Reagan. Privately affronted by Carter's handling of the hostage crisis from the start, the Reaganites saw no glory in the 11th-hour hostage release after endless haggling; instead, they saw national infamy in once-feared, once-strong America held at bay for nearly 15 months by a South Asian third-rate military power.

It is partly as a measure of national atonement for that infamy, but principally to prevent its repetition, that Reagan's top national security officials are moving against a global curse. They have quietly sworn to start an immediate international effort to reduce the use of terror as an international political weapon.

The atonement will make itself known soon enough. Reagan and his high command may phrase their words carefully, but what they say about the hostage affair will add up to this: Never again will the U.S. allow itself to be held hostage by seizure of American citizens.

The president's men in effect want International terrorists, whether or not cloaked in the guise of a government, to understand that Reagan is changing the rules of the game as played by Carter — whatever the cost. "We are moving into a very, very tough four-year period. Make no mistake about that," one presidential adviser told us.

Iranian perception of these changed rules may have contributed more than quiet diplomacy to the hostage release. Reagan's men are convinced Tehran finally accepted the deal because of fear of Reagan. "They were petrified, and rightly so," said one Reagan operative who had helped construct Reagan's deliberate escalation of anti-Iranian epithets from criminals to kidnappers to barbarians.

Brought into the firing sights of the new administration's anti-terrorist planning is the Soviet Union. As we reported on Jan. 2, Reagan never doubted that the Kremlin tried to the end to sidetrack Carter's hostage negotiations with Iran. Every piece of evidence presented to Reagan since his election persuaded him that Moscow's real intent was to prevent the release of the hostages and use the issue to enhance its own influence in Iran.

It is far too early to predict the precise shape of Reagan's campaign against terrorism. The president's national security officials are studying a just-published treatise called "Terrorism: Threat, Reality, Response" by two sometime Reagan advisers, Robert H. Kupperman and Darrell Trent. Another soon-to-be published work anticipated in high administration quarters is by one of Europe's best-known experts on terrorism, journalist Claire Sterling.

However the campaign progresses, one emerging theme has been fortified by anti-American Soviet propaganda in Iran: Moscow must cease its support for terrorism, which so helps the Kremlin in the U.S.-Soviet competition, or pay dire consequences.

These consequences, according to preliminary planning, will include the use of American and (if Western Europe agrees) of European sanctions against Moscow.

Strength For Today

NOW IS THE TIME

A rabbi was once asked the question, "When should a man repent?" His answer was, "Repent on the last day of your life". "But," replied the questioner, "no one knows when that day will be." The wise old rabbi responded, "Then repent right now."

Some people go through life aware that they are repeatedly doing things which are — to say the least — morally questionable. But they always expect to atone later — when they have the money, or the security, or the leisure. But very often it is later than they think, and they never get a chance to undo the evil things they have perpetrated. Moreover, as time goes on, rationalization for evil becomes easier, and in long retrospect it doesn't look so bad after all.

Actually, there is an urgency about the whole spiritual enterprise which bids us face our lives with realism and act promptly upon what we find. We do not know when the last day of life will dawn, so we should "repent right now." — Elisha Douglass

March To Beat Of Numbers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — To reduce public confusion, aid decision making and improve government, one thing the new administration can do is clarify the statistics that have become so basic to everyday life.

Statistics rule. If you doubt that just consider the turmoil in stock markets when money supply figures are released, the increases in Social Security benefits when the Consumer Price Index is applied to them, the depressing mood engendered when the savings rate falls.

Now consider that nobody really knows if the weekly money supply figures are significant or even accurate; that the CPI is known to distort reality; that some of the expenses measured by it do not apply to retirees; that last year's statistics on personal savings consistently misstated the savings rates through most of the year.

Pay scales are adjusted on the basis of cost-of-living numbers subject to revision. The sense of job security may depend on oft-revised unemployment rates. A false sense of security and pride might evolve from a Gross National Product puffed with inflation.

Presidential elections are affected by them. And though the numbers might be revised after the elections, the political results are not. Ask Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford, both of whom may have lost votes because the economic numbers at election time looked worse than those in the post-election revisions.

It isn't, so far as is known, that anyone manipulates the numbers. In fact, even critics acknowledge that U.S. statistical workers are the top of the craft.

Instead, it could be the fault of the users. Numbers are considered efficient little capsules of condensed information that save time, space and thinking. In one tiny pill they offer the whole story.

The trouble is that the weekly, monthly and quarterly statistics have none of the permanence of numbers chiseled on granite in the graveyard. They are resurrected and changed rather regularly — after the impact.

That this should be simply is the nature of economic statistics. As more data become available, researchers are able to refine results, even though the results might have mainly historical value by the time final revisions are made. Ironically, the criticism also applies to some "leading indicators" used mainly as forecasting tools.

There always will be revisions and corrections. There always will be errors in current data; it always has been so. There always will be misunderstandings about how data should be applied; it's human nature to disagree.

With such deficiencies inherent, it is a wonder the numbers have come to be used so popularly and with such tremendous impact on short-term decisions affecting so many people.

A classic situation is the indexing of Social Security benefits to the consumer price index. First, the CPI is known to distort current living expenses by assuming all families are buying houses at current prices and paying currenther measures, such as the Gross National Product deflator, are now about 2 points lower than the CPI. The CPI is the more popular and more inflationary index.

If we have to march to the beat of the numbers, why not at least get them to beat in unison?

As it is, you can pick almost whatever beat suits you best, and that's confusing in a nation of 226 million. The confusion compounds when revisions result in two steps forward and one back, or vice versa.

Why must we march to the beat of the numbers?

They're too entrenched now. Too much tradition behind them. Too many pay raises depend on them. Too many departments of government rely on them. Too many computers spray them out.

Face it: The numbers rule. Think about it.

Four In Ten 'Regulars'

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Four in 10 adults nationwide attended church or synagogue in a typical week of 1980, with those living in the Midwest and South more likely to attend regularly than were those who live in the East and far West:

Church Or Synagogue Attendance
— 1980 —

NATIONWIDE	40%
East	40
Midwest	45
South	42
West	29

Since 1958 — a peak year for church attendance — the national rate of churchgoing has dropped nine percentage points, from 49 percent to 40 percent in 1980 — the same rate of attendance observed throughout most of the 1970s.

The decline has been sharpest among Catholics. Attendance at mass fell 22 points — from 74 to 52 percent — between 1958 and 1978, and currently stands at 53 percent. Catholic churchgoing has remained fairly stable since 1973.

Attendance among Protestants has changed very little, declining only six percentage points — from 44 to 38 percent — between 1958 and 1964, and has remained at the 1964 level. The latest Protestant attendance figure is 39 percent.

The following table shows the highlights in the trend for the two major Christian groups:

Christian Church Attendance

	Protestants	Catholics
1958	44%	74%
1968	38	65
1978	40	52
1979	40	52
1980	39	53

Attendance At Synagogue

Mirroring the pattern of attendance among Protestants and Catholics, attendance at synagogue declined between the late 1950s and the early 1970s, but since then it has shown an upturn. In surveys taken between 1975 and 1980, 24 percent of Jews attended synagogue in a typical week.

The following table shows results by groups of years:

Synagogue Attendance

1961-64	22
1965-69	20
1970-74	17
1975-80	24

Sharp Differences By Age Groups

Sharp differences in church or synagogue attendance are found by age, with 31 percent of adults under 30 attending in a typical week in 1980, compared to 40 percent among persons 30 to 49 years old and 47 percent among those 50 and older.

In 1958, the proportions of attenders in each age group were similar, with about as many younger and older persons attending church or synagogue.

Churchgoing among adults under 30 is 17 percentage points lower today than it was in 1958, while it has declined by 11 points among 30-49-year-olds and by merely one point among those 50 and older.

Church Or Synagogue Attendance

	NAT'L	Under 30	30-49	50 & older
1958	49%	48%	51%	48%
1967	43	40	46	47
1977	41	29	42	48
1980	40	31	40	47

To estimate the average attendance during 1980, surveys of representative samples of the adult population were made in seven selected weeks during the year. A total of 10,982 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed in person in scientifically-selected localities across the nation. This question was asked:

"Did you, yourself, happen to attend church or synagogue in the last seven days?"

How Show Biz Lost A Most Promising Talent

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — St. Joseph came down with the flu. King Herod went off to the Nutcracker. The angel balked at wearing wings. And I'm getting out of show biz.

All right, so it was my idea to put on a Nativity Play for the class of 7-year-olds my wife is preparing for their First Communion. She warned me it wouldn't be easy.

"That's what they told Freddie Handel when he sat down to write his 'Messiah' and he had King George III on his feet cheering at the London premiere," I blithely assured her as I reworked the Gospels of St. Luke and St. Matthew into a serviceable script for second graders.

Casting was the first problem. There are only five kids in the class — three boys and two girls — and all of them wanted to be the Roman centurion or King Herod. Heavies evidently are big on the tube this year.

No one wanted to be Joseph or Mary, but Joey and Marla were persuaded to play their namesakes with the promise of doubling up in other parts, which on Broadway I believe is known as doing a George Spelvin — the program name for an actor playing two parts. Anyhow, there were more than enough parts to go around so everyone wound up doing several roles.

Marla, a pixie brunette with enormous black eyes, was our only experienced actress. She had made her debut as a butterfly in a kindergarten production and immediately complained that Mary, the star turn, didn't have enough lines. Doubling up as a courtier at King Herod's court and the promise of a halo in the big final act pageant mollified her.

Brian, who won the centurion's part on his ability to hold a shield and unroll a scroll proclaiming the emperor's census, reluctantly agreed to play Balthasar, the Wise Man, provided he didn't have to wear a beard.

"Beards," he informed us, "are icky and yeech." He never did learn how to pronounce Balthasar's name, but he was the first to memorize all his lines.

"They're only 7, it's too much to expect them to learn their parts perfectly," my wife alibied for them at every run through.

"At half their age," I told her, "Shirley Temple was a multimillionaire."

Kim, our golden-haired angel who preferred to solo without cardboard wings, proved me right in the end by not only memorizing her lines letter perfect but all the stage directions in parenthesis too. We never could deprogram her from telling the shepherd on the Bethlehem hillside, "... in yonder city there . .. POINTING ... lit by the stars, you will find a babe in a manger."

Greg, gifted with a booming voice and a regal manner, made a splendid Herod, rearing back on his throne (a dining room captain's chair upholstered in purple bath towels) like a born tyrant.

The dress rehearsal was a shambles. About an hour before, Joey's mother called up to say St. Joseph was in bed with the flu. Then the others clattered off the school bus with Marla in the lead shouting, "Mr. Herod won't be here today. His mother took him to see the Nutcracker in New York."

Kim forgot to bring her doll for the babe in the manger. The best we could substitute around our house was a male Russian peasant doll with a luxuriant gray handlebar mustache. Herod (Gregg) was supposed to bring a small lamb (at first he thought I said "a small lamp") for the shepherd to carry, so we had the ox lie down with a llama that I had acquired in Peru.

An artist neighbor, Dick Hodgins Jr., who designed the costumes for the mothers to make, consoled me with the thought that "this may be one case where the book is better than the show."

We were supposed to borrow a large friendly dog for Mary to ride as a donkey and later to double as an ox at the stable, but none of the players could come up with a family pet that combined docility and discretion. Kim volunteered her cat, but my wife penciled the animal act out of the script.

Opening night, which was actually 10:30 in the morning, restored my faith in the continuing miracle of Christmas. St. Joseph arose from his sick bed. Kim brought the babe for the manger and agreed to wear her wings. She was a glittering, golden angel, all that a cherubim should be, even if she did say "POINTING" at the predicted time.

The parents outdid themselves in devising ingenious costumes. Brian wore an aluminum foil-wrapped space helmet that was perfect for a Roman centurion. Kim, discarding her angel wings to play the reservations clerk at the Bethlehem Holiday Inn, peered out from beneath a tennis visor, doubling a a green eye shade, to announce there wasn't a room left. Balthasar, wrapped in a Bedouin cloak against the desert sands, looked as if he

Missed His Execution By Only Four Minutes

ATLANTA, Ga. — On a sunny June morning in 1956, Tommy Callahan sat on Georgia's death row waiting to be electrocuted. Having been found guilty of robbing and killing an Atlanta store clerk, Tommy still claimed that he had nothing to do with the crime. But numerous appeals had failed to reverse his death sentance. "I was prepared to meet my maker," Tommy remembers. "They had already shaved my head and legs for better contact with the electricity when the phone rang in the death chamber. I could hear the voice on the other end of the phone say, 'I'm not too late, am I?' It was Governor Herman Talmadge giving me a stay of execution."

Tommy had missed being electrocuted by only four minutes. Later, his death sentance was commuted to life in prison because new evidence had come to light proving that Tommy was innocent of the murder. Tommy was lucky; for some mistakenly accused people the evidence arrives too late to prevent an undeserved execution — an inherent weakness in the practice of capital punishment.

Tommy's death-row experience is only one chapter in a life story spent mostly behind bars — 31 of his 54 years. His accounts of his past seem almost fictional today as he relates them in the livingroom of his small, brown house in a quiet northeast Atlanta neighborhood.

Tommy's trouble with the law started when he was quite young. "My brother-in-law, an ex-con himself, came to me when I was about twelve and told me he'd buy me a bicycle if I'd help him rob some houses. I got to the point where I could go through people's homes while they were asleep without disturbing a thing. Why, I could take rings off ladies' fingers and never wake them up. I thought it was real exciting. But my brother-in-law never did get me that bicycle."

At the age of 14, Tommy was caught and sent to reform school. Only to escape and be caught again. This time he was sent to the Georgia State Prison at Reidsville, and his life became a routine of escape, crime, arrest, and extended prison terms.

In 1956, Tommy was being held at the dreaded Buford rock quarry when 40 convicts broke their own legs with sledgehammers to protest conditions. "I have never seen a more brutal prison and more brutal guards than at the Buford rock quarry," Tommy recalls. "When we went out to work in the mornings, we'd have to strip and hang our clothes inside, then run outside and get into our work clothes. Sometimes we'd have to beat the ice off those clothes to get them on."

While Tommy was at Buford, one guard was especially cruel toward him, beating him and spitting in his face. Tommy bribed another guard into letting him escape. But he still felt that he had some unfinished business at the prison. "I wanted to kill that guard at Buford who had humiliated me, so I broke back into Buford late one night with murder in my heart. I found that guard just where I expected, at his remote station, overpowered him, stripped him, and strung him up. But I just couldn't kill him. Instead, I just left him there, naked, dangling in the cold night air, for them to find the next morning. And I snuck back out of the prison."

Tommy was recaptured a few years later, but this time he managed to serve enough time with good behavior, and he was finally granted parole and released in 1971.

Now when Tommy is not working at his construction-equipment job or going fishing with his wife or the neighborhood boys, he speaks to groups about the prison system and his life there. He has also written a book ("Shadow of Death"; Val-House Publishing).

Among Tommy's present ideas for prison reform: "One thing they should do is to pay the guards more, so those guards don't have to smuggle contraband such as dope, liquor, and stuff like that into the prison to get more money. And they shouldn't be putting young boys who have committed their first crime in with those old heads. Because that's where they'll really learn about crime."

How he has stayed out of trouble this time, when he was never able to do so before? "I've found the Lord," He says emphatically. "And I don't think I've ever known anyone who was quite as determined as I am not to go back to prison."

The Old Ponytail Style Was At Least Reliable

When I had long, hair, I used to wonder on whom the "with-it" hairdressers would try out the latest hair styles.

The answer was, on me.

Do you remember the Concorde, the one that looked as if it had been cut with a compass and a slide rule? I had one of those.

And the Sassoon, otherwise known as the plucked chicken? I had one of those, too.

It's not because I asked for them. On the contrary, I was very specific about not wanting anything like them. But there is something about my hair that makes the most timid hairdresser want to flex his scissors and experiment.

Or maybe it's not my hair; maybe it's my face. The stylists seem to know I won't sue.

I try to keep the memories of these encounters fresh in my mind, but with time I inevitably begin to forget the last haircut and yearn for something more stylish than a ponytail. Besides, the few sympathetic hairdressers I have found have lulled me into a false security. The last one I had in Durham actually listened to me, and not having any experience in small towns, I just assumed that Smithfield would be full of these conservative types.

I assumed wrong. The first stylist I went to gave me a cut I christened the Alfalfa in honor of "Our Gang."

The second stylist agreed that this style didn't suit me. She promptly fashioned a little number which left one inch of the top layer of hair longer than all the rest.

The third stylist gave me a do which featured sausage curls nestled around my face. When I go out from under the shower (which I raced to as soon as I got out of her shop) I realized that this cut was merely a variation of the Alfalfa.

Finally, I gave up on Smithfield. I located a stylist in Raleigh who was recommended by several friends with reasonable hair.

The minute he saw me his face broke into a sinister grin. "I have just the cut for you. It will make you look 20 years younger."

This was not reassuring. Assuming the most complimentary meaning possible, I would look 10 when he finished. that was not the kind of 10 I was aiming for.

"Please," I begged. "I don't want it too short."

"Don't worry," he said as he lopped off 7 inches at one blow.

About the time he finished, a girl who I'm certain once played an alien on "Star Trek" walked in. "I want you to throw all caution to the wind when you cut my hair today."

He cut off the hair dryer. "That's what I just did.."

I guess he saw me flinch. "What's wrong?" he asked. "Don't you like it?"

I studied myself in the mirror. "I look like the drummer in a punk rock band."

"Well, if you don't want it this flamboyant, you can always brush it straight back," he sniffed.

The question is, how do I brush back a crewcut?

One senior Reagan adviser claims the U.S. and the West "have the assets to put into play" — food and strategic trade — if the Soviet superpower is caught red-handed aiding international terror, as it was in the agonizing hostage crisis.

But the first-line weapon against terrorism in a beefed-up worldwide intelligence system to anticipate terrorist activities. If that fails, Reagan would treat terrorists, whether posing as governmentsor not, as criminals, not bargaining partners. Failure of the Carter administration to give the Iranians such treatment or to exact any clear punishment at all has agonized Reagan's men. It also has magnified the challenge of the new administration's anti-terrorist campaign.

even the most determined of administrators.

But Reagan vowed from the steps of the Capitol that change there will be. "We must act today in order to preserve tomorrow," he said. "And let there be no misunderstanding — we are going to act beginning today."

He came close to declaring the economic emergency some of his advisers had suggested during the transition, calling the situation a crisis, an "affliction of the greatest proportions."

His cures are as promised during the campaign: tax reduction, the easing of federal regulations, a government that spends within its means.

"On these principles," he said, "there will be no compromise."

He wove in some campaign applause lines. "Government is not the solution; government is the problem," he said. He said he wants to make government work, "stand by our side, not ride on our back."

It was not an address of ringing new phrases, but a summation of the conservative Reagan creed.

Reagan focused it on problems at home, the economy prime among them. His message to the world was one of restraint, from a president the campaigning Carter had said might risk war.

He said he would negotiate, sacrifice, but never surrender for peace. "Our forbearance should ever be misunderstood," Reagan said. "Our reluctance for conflict should not be misjudged as a failure of will.

"When action is required to preserve our national security, we will act."

That was the blueprint for Reagan's "era of national renewal." The real test comes now, as his administration labors to build it according to plan.

Press personnel were assigned to a flat bed truck by secret service agents. As Reagan left, the national press crowded in front of local photographers.

Vashti had credentials but she was stopped by a secret service agent. Reagan's press secretary was standing nearby, however and invited Vashti to the ramp of the plane to photograph the candidate boarding.

As it turned out, Vashti, then a beginning photographer, was the only one at the plane at that time.

Beginners luck.

Now Just Who's Excluding Whom From What?

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — As far back as 1546, John Heywood propounded a truth for all ages. You can lead a horse to water, said the sage, but you can't make him drink. It's a homely verity that civil rights crusaders in the Department of Education have yet to learn.

That observation is prompted by the department's action a couple of weeks ago in putting a gun to the heads of four sovereign states — Alabama, South Carolina, Delaware and West Virginia. After prolonged, costly and tedious investigations, the department concluded that all four states have failed to wipe out the last inherited vestiges of racial segregation in their institutions of higher learning. Unless they get their racial quotas promptly in line, the states risk losing their federal aid.

If this dreary and unproductive zealotry affected only the four states, the matter scarcely would merit national attention. But the department's action reflects an obsession that nurtures and cultivates the very racism that civil rights programs were intended to alleviate. Here we are in 1981, more than a quarter of a century after the Supreme Court's landmark Brown decision of 1954, and we are more race conscious than ever. The government's programs keep us that way.

I tell you, it is a depressing business, this incessant counting of white noses and black noses, but in Washington it never stops. Federal agencies administer more than 130 statutes and executive orders prohibiting discrimination in education, housing, employment, voting, public accommodations and access to credit. Nearly a hundred agencies will spend $624 million this year in shuffling the papers of civil rights reports. It is still a growth industry.

The threats delivered to the four states are precisely within the pattern. This is what the law says: "No person shall, on the ground of race, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination, under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance."

That is clear enough for any child to comprehend. And this is the fascinating situation: In Alabama, South Carolina, Delaware and West Virginia, so far as their institutions of higher learning are concerned, not a single person is today being denied anything on account of his race. The government concedes this. The four states are not violating the law. They are not excluding blacks from formerly all-white institutions. On the contrary, they are knocking themselves out trying to lure blacks to enroll in them.

But this is not enough. In the cockeyed universe of the civil rights zealots, all the world's a decimal point, and the decimal points are wrong. Alabama's two predominantly black institutions have only 2.8 percent white students. Alabama's 14 predominantly white institutions have but 10.1 percent black. Generally the same picture obtains in Delaware and South Carolina. At the University of West Virginia, only 1.2 percent of the students are black.

Now why is this? Is it the result of conscious, deliberate, racial discrimination? Not at all. It is a consequence of certain ineradicable laws of human nature. Unlike attendance at elementary and secondary schools, which is compulsory, attendance at the university level is voluntary. The courts and the bureaucrats can order little children around and make their orders stick. But college students cannot be assigned like so many cattle, 80 head of Charolais and 20 head of Angus, all in the same pen. In a free society, people are free to go where they feel comfortable, where they feel at home.

It is this reality of human existence that infuriates the social engineers. Why won't people go where the decimal points decree they ought to go? Nothing stands in the way of the black students but their own disinclination. But in the unreal world of the new utopians, personal preference has no place. Human desires do not compute. How we got this way in a free country is beyond me, but here we are.

Polish Workers Stayed Off Jobs On Saturday

By RUTH E. GRUBER

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Heeding a personal appeal from independent labor leader Lech Walesa, millions of Polish workers defied the government and stayed away from their jobs for the second Saturday this month to press demands for a five-day, 40-hour work week.

The independent Solidarity labor union said 80 percent of the nation's 12 million workers stayed off the job and in some areas, as many as 98 percent did not turn up for work, crippling key industries.

The union said that in a factory in Bielska Biala, only one worker out of 1,140 turned up as employees in factories, shops and professions throughout Poland answered Friday's call by Solidarity leader Walesa to stay home.

The government, which has threatened to dock the pay of no-shows, acknowledged around 50 percent of workers stayed at home and warned the action increased tension in the country.

The Soviet Union said the dispute was not over a five-day work week, but over who really runs the nation, and it warned that it threatened to intensify the crisis in Poland.

Polish government estimates showed the response to the Solidarity call was considerably greater than the 35 percent who took part in the previous union-declared work-free Saturday, Jan. 10.

"We have to express total regret," a government spokesman said. An official statement carried by the news agency PAP said the action "sharpened social tension in the country."

It said, "the major part of factory workers did not turn up for work, especially in the big industrial centers... tradesmen, transportation and other services in many cases worked in a limited way, similar to a holiday schedule.

Solidarity headquarters said the action was "much better organized" than Jan. 10, and a spokesman said "response would have been even more successful" if Walesa's had made his extraordinary appeal earlier."

In the Baltic port of Gdansk, shipyards were idle as well as industry. Food stores, health services and essential industry functioned.

In Warsaw, factories were idle and many downtown stores were closed, bearing Solidarity signs on their doors declaring a day off. Evidence of the stay-at-home action was much more visible than on Jan. 10.

Polish radio said in the port of Gdynia local arrangements had been made so that workers took the day off but that they would have to make up the time at a later date if production levels were not met.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said work stoppages "by no means contribute to an improvement of the economic situation in the country, or to overcoming the crisis which has emerged."

Banks Fared Well In Hostage Deal

By MARY TOBIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. banks came out of the Iranian hostage deal in much better shape than anyone, including the banks themselves, thought they would.

The U.S. and foreign banks that were part of $3.7 billion in syndicated loans were paid off 100 cents on the dollar out of the almost $8 billion that was transferred to the Bank of England as a condition for release of the U.S. hostages.

This payoff, more than any other part of the settlement, is causing bitterness among hundreds of private claimants who will have to wait for an arbitration panel to decide on their claims one by one.

"The banks were as surprised as anyone when Behzad Nabavi (chief Iranian hostage negotiator) suggested that the Iranians wanted to pay the syndicated loans in full," said a New York banking source.

"The banks had been trying for several weeks to negotiate an escrow account against which the loans would be repaid," the source said. "The best they had hoped for was payments from the day of the freeze order and that a payment schedule for the rest would be worked out."

As for speculation that banks may have profited from from the end of the hostage seizure, the banking source said, "nonsense. It's not over for the banks by any means."

Individual banks had non-syndicated loans to Iran, "which are sizable and will have to be arbitrated," he said. Although $1.4 billion has been set aside in an escrow account, the banks will have to wait for this money with no guarantee that they'll get 100 cents on the dollar.

On Nov. 15, the date Nabavi made his proposal to repay the syndicates, Los Angeles-based Security Pacific Bank said in its earnings report that $15 million of the total loans it wrote off in 1980 was a charge-off of loans to Iran.

"Any bilateral agreement between a U.S. bank and Iran is negotiable and the funds were put aside in the escrow account as part of the agreement," said Paul L. Smith, vice chairman and head of the finance committee at Security. "We'll certainly put in our claim for the $15 million in non-syndicated loan to Iran."

Smith believe Iran made the repayment in order to re-establish its credibility. "Iran knows it has to show its ability to deal in financial circles.

had just parked his camel in Herod's courtyard, along with the pronunciation of his name. Mother Nature turned stage designer for my writing den, which served as the theater, by providing a big blotchy snowfall outside the picture window. The flakes silvered the panes with delicate frost webs that sparkled like the feather prints a host of angels might leave.

The kids may have blown a line here or there but they could chew the scenery like a beaver colony in a Walt Disney nature film.

I was a nervous wreck before the curtain rose and the tape recorder issued forth the opening theme music of Mario Lanza singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem." I wanted to shout "break a leg," as they do opening night on Broadway, although in this case, "Get the flu" might have been a more appropriate superstition.

But the finale, with the parents and brothers and sisters and neighbors and friends clapping and cheering and weeping here and there was like that scene in "The Music Man" where the kids begin blowing their hand instruments and the mothers think the incredible din is culture incarnatge.

Except in this case, it really was. They were great, better than good, good as gold, as kids always are on Christmas, especially when they get back to the basics of the feast, which is the miracle within the miracle.

Property Revaluation . . .

year when it is listed for taxes. The sheer magnitude of the job of revaluing real property, and the cost, prevents this from being done annually.

During a revaluation, data on the sale of various types of property — homes, lots, farm land, timber land, commercial, industrial property — is gathered; a schedule of values is established; property is inspected; and using the data base, appraisers establish what they consider is the true value of the property — what it's worth in money — for its highest and best use.

For example, the value placed on woods land during the current revaluation ranges from $100 to $600 per acre, depending on the class or quality of land and location, while farm land ranges from $1,000 to $1,600 per acre (with an amount added for tobacco allotments as required by law). The value placed on homes takes into consideration their age, condition, type of construction, and location.

In the current revaluation, according to Hardee, some property values in the county have increased, "from two to five times their old value." And as is normal during a revaluation, "some property will go down...other property remains stable."

New housing developments, location, inflation, use, and other factors combine to change the worth of property. Another factor which has caused some property values to increase substantially, according to Hardee, is the fact that, "some property was really placed on the books somewhat low in the last evaluation," eight years ago.

Marines On California Exercise With Live Ammunition

STRATEGY SESSION . . . U.S. Marines plot strategy as units from the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force fought a make-believe war in the Majave Desert in Southern California Friday. 6,000 troops moved across the desert in an effort to repel a Soviet-like invader. (AP Laserphoto)

By BRIAN R. BLAND
Associated Press Writer

TWENTYNINE PALMS, Calif. (AP) — As Marine Corps officers watched from a hillside, tanks and personnel carriers rolled across this desert base in a "live fire" exercise designed to test part of the new Rapid Deployment Force.

"This training is really excellent for a commander," Marine spokesman CWO Ron Fraizer said Friday. "The live fire makes all the difference."

The officers, on a rocky peak 2,600 feet above the desert floor, saw — and heard — real shells from mortars, real artillery and real bombs from light jet bombers exploding into the first of several objecfives to be "taken" by the combined force of tanks and personnel carriers.

Earlier, several jets zoomed from behind a distant ridge, then screamed downward, smothering tank-size targets in clouds of high explosives or sheets of blazing napalm.

Other jets later shrouded the target area in thick, white smoke designed to keep an enemy from getting a fix on the advancing troops.

All the units in the excercise are part of the 7th Marine Amphibious Brigade, formed here last May to be part of the RDF, which the administration of former President Carter mobilized to ensure a speedy military response, if needed, at crisis spots.

Heavy equipment belonging to the 7th MAB already is on seven ships stationed at the island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

After taking the first objective, the vehicles and the Marines riding them roared across the Mojave Desert in the second day of a planned four-day exercise that will take them some 150 miles on the huge Twentynine Palms base.

Live fire exercises using combined arms — troops, tanks, artillery and aircraft — are unusual, partly because of the expense. Officials estimated this exercise will cost nearly $2 million.

But coordinated fire support — the timing of attacks by the various arms — is always critical, especially for a unit like the 7th MAB.

"I'm particularly impressed with the artillery-air strike coordination," said Col. Jim McManaway of the Marine Corps Headquarters

Soviet Intention Is To Win

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senior American defense specialists warn that the Soviet Union does not believe there would be two losers in all-out nuclear war and is making plans to be the winner.

"The Soviet Union, as seen through its literature, force structure, and force employment, seems quite obviously to have a very conservative and traditionalist view of strategic military conflict," say Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, head of the National Security Council during the Ford administration and Helmut Sonnenfeldt, who served as a top aide to then-Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

"That view is that if a nuclear conflict, for whatever reason, should occur, the Soviet plan is to do their utmost to 'win' it," the analysts say.

Their comments came in a report issued Friday on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Scowcroft, 55, is said to be under consideration by the Reagan administration as a possible choice for U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, succeeding Thomas J. Watson Jr., a Carter administration appointee who resigned after the November election.

Scowcroft and Sonnenfeldt added their dissenting comments to a study prepared by a 29-member blue-ribbon panel under sponsorship of the United Nations Association.

The report, offering a variety of recommendations to the Reagan administration, urged that the United States and Soviet Union open talks soon to find a basis on which "essential elements" of the still-unratified SALT II strategic arms treaty could be preserved.

Scowcroft and Sonnenfeldt said the arms control section of the report "seems to assume the deterrent validity of the principle of mutual assured destruction" in a nuclear war, as enunciated by U.S. strategic planners.

However, they said, "The U.S.S.R. has never given the slightest indication that it accepts the assured destruction philosophy. Indeed, the situation appears to be quite the contrary."

The two specialists acknowledged that many Americans believe "'winning' ... a strategic nuclear war" is a contradiction in terms, that both sides would be losers.

"But that is irrelevant," they wrote. "What matters is what the Soviets believe, however its logic may appear to us."

Scowcroft and Sonnenfeldt stressed that such a continuing disparity of strategic views will require setting a "rigorous standard" for future improvements of U.S. strategic nuclear forces.

The overall report called on the Reagan administration to forge a "realistic and pragmatic strategy" for dealing with the challenges posed by growing Soviet power around the globe.

It said the United States and Soviet Union "cannot hope to be partners and cannot afford to be enemies. There should be no illusions about the possibilities for permanent cooperation or for cost-free victories at the other's expense."

The bipartisan panel from was headed by former U.N. Ambassador William W. Scranton.

Scranton and others from the panel discussed their findings Friday at a meeting with Chairman Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. They were to meet on Monday at the White House with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, national security adviser Richard V. Allen and other top Reagan administration officials.

The answer to OPEC.

Right now, America is growing twice as much wood as we're using.

The Buck Stove® turns that wood into heat—efficiently—with its airtight design and built-in thermostatic blower. Using less wood than a conventional fireplace, and no more electricity than a 100-watt bulb, the Buck Stove can heat an entire eight-room house from end to end.

And, according to Buck Stove owners, you can save up to 80% on your home heating bill. What's more, those savings will increase with every passing year, because oil supplies will decrease with every passing year. Add up all of those numbers. And that's our answer to OPEC.

Tardif . . .

past years — songs like "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," a medley of Duke Ellington songs including "Don't Get Around Much Anymore," as well as "What A Difference a Day Made" and "I Love You."

Tardif said the Hong Kong concerts involved a simpler back-up for Tony Bennett — himself on piano, John Burr, bass, and Joe LaBarbara, drums.

After the two cities Asian concerts, they flew back to Los Angeles, and Tardif returned home to Greenville.

Inaugural Pianist

But Tardif had not long been back home — about ten days — when he received another summons for his pianistic talents. "This was from Elliot Segal, the contractor at The Kennedy Center in Washington, D. C.," Tardif explained.

"Segal told me they needed a pianist for the inaugural concert, just two days away. They needed someone to play a piano piece for the American Ballet Theater.

"As it turned out," Tardif said, "the piece was 'Push Comes to Shove,' choreographed by Twyla Tharp, with dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov as the soloist."

This performance, Tardif added, "took place Sunday night, January 18 and was attended by then President-elect Reagan, Mrs. Reagan, Mr. and Mrs. Bush, and an inaugural audience of about three thousand."

These two recent calls for Tardif to perform on short notice are among many honors that have come his way. Only last November, he was invited to play piano with the orchestra performing at the gala in which now former President Carter honored Americans being awarded medals for outstanding contributions to American arts.

Tardif has also performed frequently in recitals and concerts on the ECU campus, and in many areas of North Carolina and other states. Several years ago he accompanied an American ensemble touring Poland under the auspices of the State Department.

Playhouse Auditions

Auditions for the East Carolina Playhouse production of Shakespeare's epic tragedy, "Julius Caesar," will be held from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday evenings, Feb. 5-6. Auditions will be in ECU's Brewster Building, Room C-103 or by appointment with Edgar Loessin, director (phone 757-6390).

"Julius Caesar" has a large cast, with numerous principal roles and many smaller parts. ECU students, faculty, staff, and community people are encouraged to take part in the auditions.

Each auditioner is asked to prepare a long speech or soliloquy from the script, which need not be memorized. Copies of the play are available in the reserve room of ECU's Joyner Library.

One of the most common kinds of injury suffered in automobile accidents, especially before the advent of shoulder straps, was whiplash. Whiplash occured when, upon impact, the driver or passenger was thrown suddenly forward and back. This action often damaged the back and caused pain and discomfort for months. Chiropractic treatment is especially effective for whiplash injury. Chiropractic specializes in spinal manipulation and adjustment of the vertebrae, just the areas that whiplash injury is most likely to affect.

The health conscious society of today has accepted the important role that the science of chiropractic plays in respect to an individual's total well-being. At the FAMILY CHIROPRACTIC HEALTH & ACCIDENT SERVICE, Mill St., Winterville, we utilize these proven methods in determining the cause of your problem in offering the natural solutions that eliminate the source of the discomfort. The science of chiropractic treats the source and not the symptom. Hours: 9-7 Mon.-Fri. Tel. 756-8160.

CHIRO TIP:
Do not discount the importance of the shoulder strap portion of the seatbelt.

Preparing For Everest Climb

SEATTLE (AP) — Taking good-natured sibling rivalry to the top of the world, Lou Whittaker plans to try to surpass his twin brother Jim's 1963 feat of climbing Mount Everest with an attempt to scale the north face.

The expedition announced Friday will start a dozen climbers from the Tibet side of the world's highest mountain. The 29,028-foot Himalayan peak has been climbed from the north face only once, a solo ascent by German Rudolph Minessne.

Permission has been received from the Mountaineering Association of the People's Republic of China for the expedition to begin in the fall of 1982, said Whittaker, 51.

Last year was the first time in almost half a century that American climbers were allowed on Chinese mountains.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH S. FOLTZ

These new books for teenagers will soon be on the shelves at Sheppard Library.

"The Pigman's Legacy," by Paul Zindel, is the sequel to the very popular 1968 book "The Pigman." In this novel, John and Lorraine are once again taking turns at telling the story. Haunting memories of their wild friendship with Mr. Pignati (the Pigman, whom some say they killed) drive them back to his house. There the two teenagers find another lonely old man. Believing Gus to be a shadow of their beloved Pigman, John and Lorraine force themselves into his life. They set up a romance for him, and he sends them off on more breath-taking adventures. What they believe to be the Pigman's legacy — another old man for them to help — turns out to be more than they expect.

"Hostage!" by James Hamilton-Paterson, is a timely novel of Middle East terrorism. Overweight and unathletic, 15-year-old Wayne Buckeley is the unlikely kidnapping victim of Arab guerillas in the fictional country of Zibala. He has been mistaken, it happens, for a diplomat's son whose life was to be bargained for the lives of five imprisoned guerillas. Despite the mistake, Wayne is not released and must endure fear, pain, and hunger for which he has never been prepared. As his ordeal continues, though, the boy comes to understand the aims and zeal of the terrorists. Wayne is no longer certain which side he should be on as the Zibalan army closes in for a final showdown.

"Twenty-five Years of Rock and Roll" is a brassy, fan-magazine look ar rock music from 1954 to 1979. Some of the short chapters cover major periods (for instance, the late 1960s) and noteworthy subtopics of the rock music phenomenon (such as women rock and rollers). Other chapters cover personalities (the Beatles, Phil Spector, Jim Morrison) and historical hotbeds of rock and roll creativity (England, Memphis, Motown). Generously illustrated with black and white photographs, the chapters describe not only the careers of rock and roll legends but also the effects of rock music and society on each other. A final section of full-page color pictures spotlights Blondie, Billy Joel, the Eagles, and other individuals and bands who dominate the current rock music scene.

N.C. Symphony Schedule

RALEIGH — Contralto Maureen Forrester will be guest performer with the North Carolina Symphony in three concerts this week. The first will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, January 28 in the High Point Theater; the second will be in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium at 8 p.m. on Thursday, January 29; and the third in Memorial Hall, UNC campus, Chapel Hill, at 8 p.m. Friday, January 30.

James Paul will conduct the N. C. Symphony in each of these three appearances.

Admission is by season ticket or by purchase of individual tickets at the door prior to the time of performance.

PEUGEOT PROGRESS NOT COMPROMISE

End Testimony In Garwood Trial — Jury To Reconvene Feb. 2

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — As lawyers in the 10-week-old court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood finished presenting evidence Friday, the "battle of the psychiatrists" in the collaboration case ended inconclusively.

Psychiatrists testifying for prosecution and defense found more to agree on than to dispute about Garwood, charged with deserting to the Vietcong, wearing their uniform, carrying their weapons, making propaganda broadcasts for them and interrogating fellow American prisoners.

Presiding judge Col. R.E. Switzer ordered the five-man jury of Marine officers to return Feb. 2 to hear closing arguments in the landmark case.

Garwood's lawyers contend he was a young soldier "coercively persuaded" by the Vietnamese to obey their will. He was a captive for 14 years.

Now 34, Garwood could be sentenced to life.

Military officials say an acquittal could have major effects on the military's attempts to enforce a code of conduct on servicemen.

Garwood, a native of Greensburg, Ind., sat impassively in the courtroom throughout the trial, never taking the stand. But his story about the years in captivity came out in the testimony of many of the psychiatrists and psychologists who interviewed him after his return to America in March 1979.

The accused Marine's lawyers admit that Garwood carried a gun for the Vietcong and performed other actions for them, as described in testimony by fellow POWs.

The defense case, much of which was presented in testimony by forensic psychiatrist Air Force Col. James F.T. Corcoran, maintained that torture and coercion drove Garwood into a form of insanity known as an atypical dissociative disorder.

"He lost his identity as an American Marine and could not understand the criminality of his actions," Corcoran argued.

The government presented witnesses this week to buttress their view that the Marine knew exactly what he was doing in Vietnam and was not sufferig from a mental disease serious enough to impair his thinking.

"He seems to have a lucid memory for the events in Vietnam and does not display any serious manifestations of anxiety or guilt, proneness to suicide or indications of a memory loss," testified Navy Capt. Michael A. Harris.

Defense lawyers concentrated on undermining the credibility of the government's witnesses in what was expected to be "a battle of the psychiatrists."

Garwood's lawyers questioned the credentials of several of the witnesses, including those of Navy Capt. Patrick F. O'Connell of Pensacola, Fla., who admitted that he failed two examinations for his forensic psychiatric credentials.

Another government witness, Lt. Cmdr. James B. Creed of Portsmouth, Va., was ruled ineligible to testify as an expert because he was not fully qualified. He interviewed Garwood for 40 hours and was expected to be the heavyweight in the government's case.

Creed was charged with drunken driving last weekend after leaving Bernie's Restaurant in Jacksonville near Camp Lejeune.

Another government witness, Lt. Cmdr. John R. Aitken, a psychologist from Pensacola, Fla., was questioned as to his commitment to the case. He admitted telling a defense lawyer that he had not interviewed Garwood because he was reluctant to leave his wife and children to get deeply involved in the case.

Defense psychiatrists insisted they were "100 percent certain" of their findings that Garwood had a serious mental illness in Vietnam.

Government witnesses said they were 50 percent to 90 percent certain that Garwood appreciated the criminality of his conduct.

Defense lawyers said they are confident they have created reasonable doubt of Garwood's mental ability.

The final decision rests with the jury of five Marine officers, and their instructions may include this view from the sample charge book of presiding judge Switzer:

"In deciding the issue of the accused's sanity at the time of the offense, you may rely on your own common sense and your general knowledge of human nature. Therefore, you may consider that the general experience of mankind is that most people are sane."

N.C. Inmates Plead Guilty To Tax Scheme

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-eight North Carolina prison inmates have pleaded guilty to filing false claims for federal income tax refunds in a statewide conspiracy.

Eighteen prisoners found they could submit handwritten W-2 forms to the federal government and get refunds — and sell other prisoners on the deal.

Court testimony shows each inmate learned how to get the refunds through John William Nance.

Nance, an inmate at the Avery County prison unit, knew the Internal Revenue Service would accept hand-written W-2 forms. So he solicited the help of fellow inmates Ernest L. Pardue and George K. Long in a tax scheme that mushroomed to involve more than 100 prisoners and $100,000 in returns.

Pardue, the artist of the group, began handprinting copies of Nance's W-2. Then, with the advice of Long, the group's mathematician, Pradue filled out the forms, listing legitimate businesses as employers and giving the return address of the Avery County unit.

Nance then convinced other inmates to buy into the scheme for collecting bogus refunds and began charging them $30 each for completed forms.

Formerly, Lange was with "The Dating Game" for 12 years. He is married to a former Miss America, Nancy Fleming, now co-hostess of "AM San Francisco." "Bullseye" is aired locally over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington weekdays at 5:30 p.m.

WASHINGTON — Taped interview spots with NBC TV stars, North Carolina wine made European style, a mini-fashion show and comments on the hostage release day are among topics being aired on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" from noon until 1 p.m. today over WITN-TV, Channel 7. Brief details are:

Howard Duff and Christina Rains, stars of "Flamingo Road" seen over NBC from 10-11 on Tuesday evenings, and Michael Warren and Charles Haid of the Saturday 10-11 p.m. show, "Hill Street Blues," will be seen in taped interview spots.

North Carolina wine made in the European manner with a European propagated stock of grapes is the subject of guest David Fussell, wine maker of Duplin Wine Cellars of Pink Hill.

Another area guest, Mercedes Forney of Williamston, founder and director of CBEK (Communications, Business, Entertainment, Knowledge), conducts a mini-fashion show.

With reference to the eventful events of January 21 — the inauguration of a new president and the release of the hostages, a local minister, Rev. Gary Thompson of Washington's First Baptist Church, gives his viewpoints on the significance of these early 1981 events.

In the kitchen sequence, Kay shows a segment she taped in San Antonio, Texas at the national meeting of American Women in Television and Radio. This features Marlene Cummings of the R. T. French & Co, Rochester, N. Y., preparing meat loaf stuffed with onion caps.

A Review

A Memorable Film About American Indians

"Windwalker," showing at the Buccaneer movies, may in time become known as one of the finest films ever made about American Indians. Filmed in the Uinta Mountains of northern Utah, a remote area near the Unitah and Quray Indian Reservation, most of the scenes are shot during winter months when deep snow accentuates the awesome splendor of 12,000 feet plus peaks covered with towering stands of virgin fir forests.

Reed Smoot's photography dramatically captures, in a documentary style, the unspoiled grandeur of a basically untouched pocket of American wilderness — the scenery alone is justification for seeing this film.

But the story of this Indian movie is as clean and powerful as the setting. Based on Blaine Yorgason's novel of 18th century Cheyenne Indian family life, with a script by Ray Goldrup, "Windwalker" is directed by Kieth Merrill, well known for his earlier classic documentary "The Great American Cowboy."

The two Indian tribes in the story, Cheyenne and Crow, whether good guys or bad, are, in Merrill's terse, intelligent direction, people endowed with dignity. The conflicts based on motivations of revenge and counter revenge are totally believable.

"Windwalker" is strengthend by many points of authenticity. The most striking of these is the use of Cheyenne and Crow languages in the dialogue, with easy to read (and often poetic) English subtitles. Another is the attention given to details of Indian dress and lodgings. In this film there is no tinsel and glitter. Costumes are pieced assortments of furs designed to combat the cold. The war paint is thick, greasy, hands and faces are begrimed from living close to smoky fires, and hunger is a constant enemy.

The story of "Windwalker" is threaded on a classic Cheyenne folk tale. An aged warrior, Windwalker, on his deathbed, tells his grandchildren the story of his youth, how he wooed and won the hand of a beautiful maiden, Tashina, who bore him twin sons.

In his successful suit, however, he insulted an older suitor, who vowed revenge. One summer day (and the gold and green landscape is as exquisitely filmed as the winter scenes), Windwalker's past rival and a Crow collaborator return. They kill his beloved Tashina and steal one of the twin sons.

For long years, Windwalker searches for his lost son. Once, he finds him and attempts to spirit him away from the Crows, but the attempt is unsuccessful. Years pass. Windwalker's remaining son becomes a noted warrior, marries and provides him grandchildren for the solace of his old age.

On the day of his funeral, at a time of deep snow, a handful of Crow warriors carry out a raid on the Windwalker's family as they trudge back home from the ridge where Windwalker has been placed on a platform, wrapped in thick furs. The warrior son is seriously injured, but the women and children manage to evade the attackers and get home with the wounded man.

What seems a miracle occurs when Windwalker returns to the family lodging. Evidently in a coma when placed on the burial platform, the old man awakens. After a weary battle with wolves he struggles home, then moves the family to a cave in the mountain rocks.

There, the beleagured family cagily avoids the Crow warriors, among whom is the son kidnapped years before. Nature and the blunders of the maurading Crow conspire to decimate the small group of five warriors. The missing twin, berating his adopted Crow brothers for their stupidity, is told to leave the group. He is captured by the Cheyenne family, and becomes convinced of the truth that he is indeed the aged warrior's other son. In a final encounter, the newly found twin kills the remaining Crow warrior.

Content that his long search, his prayers to discover his missing son have been fulfilled, the aged Windwalker feels it is time to meet the Sky People. He takes his horse and goes out to die alone.

Veteran actor Trevor Howard is superb as Windwalker. Nick Ramus, in the dual role of the twins at an older age, is a gifted actor. James Remar as the young Windwalker, and Serene Hedin as his beloved Tashina are excellent in these briefer roles.

Except for Howard and one or two others, the cast is drawn from American Indians. The Indian women, with their beautifully sculpted faces, and the children, darked eyed and appealing, are ideal choices in filling the roles of members of their own people.

As an dramatic entity, and as a visualization of mountain winter landscape, "Windwalker" is a memorable realization of just how good a movie can be.

One of the most lasting impressions I will take from "Windwalker" is that of unforgettable vignettes of close-ups — the reaching out of hands and entwining of fingers when Windwalker wins the heart of Tashina, followed by a shout of pure erotic joy; Windwalker's capturing a brilliant butterfly, offering it to his bride; a drop of clear water hanging suspended at the tip of a glittering icicle framed against dark blue stone; and the radiance of the faces of the twins as children riding on the shoulders of their parents.

Finally, there's the astonishing beauty of the art of Cheyenne Indians, seen in the collection of artifacts hung on the framework of Windwalker's funeral site. The camera focuses on these objects, one by one, silhouetted against the winter sky.

For movie goers who expect to see only a limited number of films during 1981, "Windwalker" should be be placed high on the list.

Seventy-one prints in various media were chosen for the show, with $1,008 in purchase awards by the Charlotte Printmakers Society, and $2,435 in sponsors purchases. The 71 works selected were from 571 entries from artists in 22 states and the District of Columbia.

The scheduled for the lithography workshop is:

Currently Artist-in-Residence at Maitland Art Center in Florida and in charge of the stone lithographer studio there, Raidiger holds the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from Ohio State University and the Master Printer papers from Nova Scotia College of Art and Design.

He has conducted lectures and demonstrations nationally, has served as printer at Lakeside, Mighigan, as assistant printer at Nova Scotia College of Art and Design, and as head printer at Landfall Press, Chicago.

Exxon Grant To NCSA

WINSTON-SALEM — The Exxon Corporation has made a $100,000 challenge grant to the Vision in Motion campaign for the North Carolina School of the Arts, Juanita M. Kreps, national chairperson of the campaign, has announced.

An Exxon representative, Leonard Fleischer, who visited the school in Winston-Salem in October, said the award was made in the belief that "the school is indeed a national institution of the first rank, one clearly deserving the support of a national corporation . . . we hope that our own support will aid the school in its efforts to generate additional funding from other national corportions."

Exxon contributed $50,000 to the campaign immediately and has pledged another $50,000 provided the amount of $50,000 in new or increased gifts from other corporations is raised in the Vision in Motion campaign in 1981.

The Vision in Motion campaign is being conducted by the N. C. School of the Arts Foundation. The goal is $16.6 million. The money is to be used for the school's educational and community service programs and for construction of the Roger L. Stevens Center for the Performing Arts in downtown Winston-Salem.

The Exxon gift brings the total contributed and pledged in the campaign to $7.9 million.

The grant will be used by "Horn in the West" people to produce a new sound tape for the production and to assist with managerial salaries.

In announcing the grants, Governor James B. Hunt said the money was an important investment in the economic as well as cultural life of the state.

Casablanca—Dining Elegance Just North Of The Tar River

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Just north of the old downtown bridge over the Tar River a modern variation of Moorish architecture coupled with a handsome setting for dining and dancing has been added to the Greenville scene.

Casablanca, a two-fold complex that encompasses a restaurant-club wing which opened on December 17 and a large banquet hall facility due to open in early February, is the brainchild of Greenville native Leroy Cherry, a long-time builder and developer in the area.

One question often asked Cherry is about the unexpected location of his lavish establishment.

"There's two good reasons involved in my decision," Cherry responded. "The first one is that I wanted some place easily accessible with space. The second factor involved is that I already owned this land, have had it for 12 or 13 years." The site, he said, contains six acres, "and it's in what I feel is a good surrounding, just off a main road with a nice area of trees nearby."

Cherry conceived the idea of an elegant restaurant about six months ago. "I got in touch with architect Bill Friend, outlined my ideas to him, and Bill took it from there. I'm very pleased with what Bill has done."

Casablanca's solid, attractive Moorish details are, admittedly, derived via the famed 1942 film set in the Moroccan port city of Casablance starring Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman. Stark white textured plaster is contrasted with the black of wrought iron grillwork, with color notes added by the glow of stained glass. Wicker chairs with subdued patterned padding provides comfort as well as the graciousness of wicker work. The crisp black and white motif is further carried in the tuxedos for waiters and a tuxedo-derived uniform for the waitresses.

"The entrance is a replica of Rick's American Restaurant as shown in the movie, including the arches," Cherry explained.

Fichette Is Chef

New Hampshire native Earl Fitchette is Casablanca's chef. For nine years he was with the Breakers Hotel in Palm Beach, Florida, for most of that time serving as executive second chef. Later he was at Hyatt House in Orlando and was area chef for Disneyland.

Fitchette came to Greenville two years ago. Commenting on dishes he most enjoys preparing for diners, Fitchette said he "loves cooking Beef Wellington and Chateaubriand. One of the favorites here is Veal Oscar, it's an excellent dish.

"But cooking any fine dish is a pleasure," he added. "We buy the freshest meats, sea foods and vegetables available."

The menu at Casablanca ranges from aperitifs of mushrooms, smoked salmon, snails or oysters, to salads, a soup of the day, vegetables of the day on to a wide range of main dishes (entrees) such as steaks, prime ribs, veal, lobster, sea foods, capons, Carolina quail and duckling. Deserts are available in varioius parfaits or cheese cake with a choice of fruit sauces.

"Our sauces, of course, are always ones we make."

Menu prices range from a little less than a dollar for the soup of the day to $16.95 for one of the more sophisticated entrees. Tea, coffee, soft drinks and beer are served, and a wine list is also available for wine lovers.

Evening meals are served at Casablanca. These begin at 6:30 p.m. The restaurant remains open until 12:30 p.m.

Large Staff

Cherry takes pride in the large staff required to operate a restaurant the size and with the specialized services of Casablanca — which can seat up to about 300 customers. "We have about 50 or a few more on our staff," Cherry said. "This includes our chef, cooks, waiters and waitresses and other workers. Many of our waiters and waitress are students at East Carolina University."

Assisting Cherry with operations are two co-managers, his son, Joseph Cherry, and Tom Brown. Both are ECU graduates. Brown, who majored in commercial art, was formerly a manager at the Beef Barn.

Live Music

Music for dining listening begins at 7 and ends at 9 p.m. From 9:30 p.m. until up to about 1 a.m., there's music for dancing. Meals are also served until midnight. All music is live and is furnished by local area talent. Pianist Paul Tardif is one of those who provides piano music. Joe Distefano conducts a small ensemble, and other musical groups taking turns in entertaining include Jimmy Ayock, and the Swing Kings, an ECU student group.

"Most of our music is popular music based on the great songs of the 40s," Cherry commented. "We find our mixed clientele of younger and not so young people both enjoy this kind of music." And, expectedly, there's frequent requests for Herman Hupfeld's memorable song, "As Time Goes By," a 1931 Rudy Vallee hit revived for the film "Casablanca."

Cherry remarked that the second wing, the larger banquet hall facility scheduled to open soon, "will seat about 700 people. When this is completed, there will be a total area of 22,500 square feet under roof." He acknowledged that it has been an expensive undertaking, "in excess of a million dollars."

"I think the large banquet hall will provide a convenient, attractive and accessible gathering place for conventions and meetings of all types," Cherry said. "The first planned use of the facility is the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on February 20. There's other meetings and conventions tentatively planned in the near future."

In a nostalgic vein, Cherry recalled that this is his second venture into the restaurant business in Greenville. "Many old timers will remember the Airport Inn, which I operated out on Aircraft Road back in 1947 and 1948." Between that time three decades ago and today, Cherry spent 16 years in Grifton. Since his return to Greenville 12 years ago, he has been engaged in building and developing housing projects both in and near Greenville, and was involved in the renovation of the old Proctor Hotel in downtown Greenville.

It's Time — Raiders Face Philly For Title

Related stories page B-3

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The interesting thing about today's Super Bowl XV showdown between the Oakland Raiders and the Philadelphia Eagles is the lack of true interest generated in a week of monumental international news.

The Raiders, who have won one of their two previous Super Bowl appearances, and the Eagles, playing for the first time in the Super Bowl, will meet indoors in the 75,500-seat Louisiana Superdome today at 6 p.m. EST for the National Football League championship.

The buildup to the game, however, has lacked the spark of recent years. It was totally overshadowed earlier in the week by the release of the American hostages after 444 days of captivity in Iran and the inauguration of President Ronald Reagan.

Also detracting from the spark is the lack of recognizable superstar caliber players. There is no Terry Bradshaw or Franco Harris or Roger Stabuach or Tony Dorsett or Joe Greene, as in recent years. That was vividly portrayed late in the week when Greene was swarmed in a hotel lobby by the same autograph seekers who ignored more than a half dozen Raider players.

Many of the teams' stars like quarterback Ron Jaworski, running back Wilbert Montgomery and wide receiver Harold Carmichael of the Eagles and wide receiver Cliff Branch, running back Mark van Eeghen and defensive back Lester Hayes of Oakland are not instantly recognizable.

Oakland quarterback Jim Plunkett, the comeback story of recent NFL history, probably is the most recognizable of the Raiders.

The game should, however, be an interesting one. The clubs are evenly matched and they met once during the regular season, with the Eagles winning 10-7 at Philadelphia two months ago.

Oakland captured a wild card berth with an 11-5 regular season record and then defeated Houston, Cleveland and Western Division rival San Diego to win the AFC title. Philadelphia won the NFC East title at 12-4 and won the NFC championship with playoff victories over Minnesota and Dallas.

Each member of the winning team will receive $18,000 while losers receive $9,000 each.

"I think it will be an excellent game," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. "We played a very close game in Philadelphia when we beat them and we had a superb defensive effort. Playing the Eagles in Philadelphia is never easy for any team and we recorded eight sacks that day, which was probably the worst game the Oakland offensive line had all season. They just didn't have a good day and you can't count on getting eight sacks again to win a three-point game."

"We're really excited to be here and we're anxious to go," said Raider Coach Tom Flores. "We're very much alike in that we both like to play very physical, very aggressive football and I look for a good, close game. I think we'll win but I don't think it's going to be a runaway, maybe about three points or so."

Oakland's rise to the Super Bowl has been an incredible story. Before the season, they were picked by most experts to finish last. Their owner, Al Davis, had filed suit against the NFL for refusing to allow him to move the franchise to Los Angeles. They lost three of their first five games and then lost quarterback Dan Pastorini, who had been acquired in a trade with Houston for Ken Stabler, with a broken leg in the sixth game of the season.

Then came Plunkett.

The first pick in the draft in 1971 after winning the Heisman Trophy at Stanford, Plunkett was dealt to San Francisco and then dropped by the 49ers. He was considered washed up when Davis signed him two years ago and began a rehabilitation process.

Plunkett won 12 of the 14 games he started down the stretch in leading the Raiders to the Super Bowl and will be the chief concern of the Eagles' defense today.

"I coached Jim for awhile at Stanford," said Vermeil. "I was always impressed by his desire to work and his toughness. He is a classic quarterback — he has that long overhead delivery — and he's perfect for the Raider offense. They like the big bomb, the big play, and Jim has the arm to get it downfield in a hurry. He's not a high percentage passer but he can hit that big pass to set up scores. He did it to us when we played at Philadelphia, hitting Cliff Branch for a big play, and he did it to Cleveland and to San Diego in the playoffs.

"If there's a way to get the ball in the end zone, he'll find it."

NCSU Beats Pirates; ECU Women Win

Lady Pirates Capure 7th Straight

HARRISONBURG — East Carolina's Lady Pirates put five players in double figures Saturday and ran past James Madison, 98-67, for their seventh consecutive victory.

With Marcia Girven getting 18 of her game-high 21 points and 13 of her career-high 18 rebounds in the first half, the Lady Pirates pulled away to a 43-24 halftime lead. In the 9:08 of last 10 minutes of the first 20 minutes ECU held the Duchesses scoreless to take the 19-point halftime advantage.

Madison led 20-17 when the Pirates closed the door, running to a commanding 43-20 lead before Betsy Blose scored broke the JM drought with 1:45 to go in the first half.

Forward Mary Denkler, scoreless in the opening half, poured in 17 second-half points and finished with nine rebounds as Madison collapsed around Girven in the second 20 minutes.

ECU point guard Laurie Sikes dished out six assists and drilled in nine of 10 field goal attempts to finish with a season-high 19 points. Kathy Riley added 19 points also for the Pirates.

In scoring 12 points after coming off the bench, senior guard Lydia Rountree tied Sheilah Cotton for third place on the all-time scoring list with 1,152 points.

"We were really worried about James Madison," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "A lot of people in Greenville were looking past them to Virginia, but not our kids.

"They were closing off Denkler inside in the first half, so we went to Marcia and she did a great job."

Andruzzi also had praise for Sikes and Rountree. "Sikes had another outstanding game," she said. "She scored 19 points and hit all five of her shots in the first half and she really controlled the offense tonight.

"Lydia came of the bench when Sam (Jones) had trouble in the first half and really controlled the game defensively. I can't say enough about our intensity and the Second-Half Surge Dooms Men

RALEIGH — N. C. State bombed East Carolina at the start of the second half, outscoring the Pirates, 16-2, and rolled on to a 77-52 victory over the guests last night.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for the Pack, and ended a two-game winning skein for the Pirates.

East Carolina, down by just seven points at the half, failed to convert on but one of its first eight shots, while the Wolfpack hit eight of ten in the first five and a half minutes of the second half, breaking open what had been a fairly close game. Thurl Bailey contributed six of the 16 points, while Kenny Matthews hit on four.

But perhaps the real hero for the Wolfpack was Scott Parzych.

He came off the bench midway through the first half and sparked State in pulling away from East Carolina, turning a 12-11 ECU lead into a 28-21 Wolfpack lead.

Hitting on five of eight shots from the floor in the first half, he came back in the second to can four of four. Adding to four of six free throws, he finished with 22 points, high for the game.

And that was no surprise at all to ECU coach Dave Odom.

"Parzych hurt us the most," he said. "He's their best player and that's not cutting down the rest of them. He is very underrated, a very complete player."

The Wolfpack played without key guard Sidney Lowe, but Max Perry more than filled the bill. He whipped up 15 assists, a new school record. The old mark, shared by Monte Towe and Lowe, was 14.

"I was really hoping that they would play Lowe (out with a foot injury)," Odom said. "I think we would have matched up better with him in the lineup."

Odom said he felt his team followed its game plan well in

Duke Clobbers Clemson, 75-57

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. — Like many people, Vince Taylor was reluntant to change. But his new status in Duke's revamped offense, combined with the Blue Devils' 75-57 basketball victory over Clemson, has made him a firm believer.

"At first I was skeptical because I like to run," Taylor said. "But right now, I think that coach (Mike Krzyzewski) has made the right decision. We can't do what we were trying before with our size."

Taylor joined senior foward Gene Banks on a second half rampage that gave the Blue Devils their second consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference victory and their third straight win overall.

In a six-minute span, the duo combined for 11 of Duke's first 13 points in the second half. With Duke looking for the easy shot, Taylor had a lay-up and a free throw in giving Duke a 12 point cushion at 40-28.

Taylor even put on a dribbling exhibition as the Tigers chased him all over the front court. But he said he was not planning on a side-show.

"I felt good, I felt comfortable for the whole game," Taylor said. "This victory is the best for us and me individually."

Coach Krzyzewski said he was pround of his team's execution and shot selection.

"This was a continuation of Wednesday night (against North Carolina State). We seem to be building on something good and our boys are gaining confidence," Krzyzewski said.

Clemson coach Bill Foster said his Tigers missed too many high-percentage shots, and was forced to play Duke's game.

"Once they got the tempo the way they wanted, we had to play catch-up," Foster said.

Leading 27-24 at halftime, the Blue Devils scored six quick points on two Banks jump shots and another bucket by Kenny Dennard. After a Clemson basket, Banks hit two free throws to give Duke a 33-26 lead with 16:54 left in the game.

Duke extended its lead on the strength of its new slowdown offense. A back-door lay-up by Vince Taylor as a result of the slowdown gave Duke a 12-point lead at 12:30.

When Taylor missed a dunk shot, grabbed his own rebound, and put the miss in, Duke had a commanding 54-39 lead with 5:35 to play.

The final margin was established mainly at the free throw line. After Taylor's basket, the Blue Devils attempted 24 free throws and made 19. By contrast, Clemson had 14 free throws for the entire game and made 11.

Taylor led Duke with 20 points, and Banks added 19. The Blue Devils are now 10-7, 2-4 in the conference.

Freshman Vincent Hamilton scored 14 points in the second half and finished with 16 for Clemson and Gilliam had 11. The Tigers are now 3-4 in the ACC and 14-5 overall.

Deacons Rout Bulldogs, 99-68

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy was happy to have a relatvely easy non-conference basketball game with the University of North Carolina at Asheville stuck in Saturday night among the nationally ranked teams which dot the Demon Deacon January schedule.

But he wasn't overly pleased with the way his third-ranked team brushed past the visiting Bulldogs 99-68.

"The game was kind of ragged," Tacy said. "We had some good periods of play but we lacked the smoothness and good execution we usuallly have. We've got to get that back for the league games."

The Deacons, 14-1 overall, bounced back from their first loss of the season Thursday night to No. 17 North Carolina by blitzing outmanned UNC-A 14-2 in the first seven minutes of play.

Center Jim Johnstone, one of five Wake players to score in double figures, dumped in eight straight points in a 1½ minute span to help Wake Forest break away from the Bulldogs.

"We were tense and probably too tight Thursday and it seemed to carry over tonight," said Tacy. "We hope to put it all together and play better

Yellow Jacket Dunk

Tar Heels Rock Jackets, 100-60

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — After 17th-ranked North Carolina's 100-60 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Georgia Tech was complete Saturday, both Dean Smith of North Carolina and Dwane Morrison of Georgia Tech agreed the difference was that the Tar Heel just had too much for the Yellow Jackets.

"We just has too many people for them," Smith said. "We knew we had better personnel, but I didn't expect anything like this."

"North Carolina was just awesome," Morrison said. "I'd say that when the season began Virginia was the best team in the ACC. But now I have my doubts. I think North Carolina has more talent."

Smith and Morrison also agreed it was North Carolina's pressure defense that allowed the Tar Heels to control the game.

"Our defense dictated the game in the 10 minutes," Smith said. "I thought we played very well."

"They took the game away from us early with the doubling defense," Morrison said. "Our guys sort of lost their composure early and Carolina took the big lead."

The Tar Heels forced 29 Yellow Jacket turnovers and made 16 steals to help create numerous opportunities for easy lay-ups.

North Carolina got 24 points from Al Wood and 18 from Sam Perkins and never were really threatened by Georgia Tech. James Worthy added 13 for the Tar Heels.

North Carolina led by 21 at the halftime, and scored 13 of the first 15 second half points. North Carolina now is 5-1 in ACC play and 14-4 overall.

Tech was led by Stu Lyon, who scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half. Fred Hall had 13 and George Thomas had 10 for the Yellow Jackets, who now are 4-13 overall and 0-7 in the ACC.

Wood had 16 of his points in the first half as North Carolina scored the game's first four points and went on to lead 23-04 with 11:38 left in the half. That lead grew to 29-8 before Georgia Tech made its only serious rally of the game.

Tech scored 10 straight points to pull within 11 with 5:21 left. But the Tar Heels outscored the Jackets 15-6 over the next 3½ minutes.

Notre Dame Trips Maryland, 73-70

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Once Kelly Tripucka remembered to get his security towel from the correct source, there was no stopping him at the foul line.

The Notre Dame senior sank six free throws in the final 1:53, all in one-and-one situations, helping the 13th-ranked Irish hold off 10th-ranked Maryland for a 73-70 basketball victory Saturday. Tripucka converted his last one-and-one with five seconds remaining and finished with 25 points.

After Notre Dame's 63-55 lead had been trimed to 65-64, Tripucka missed the front end of a one-and-one with 2:24 remaining and Maryland gained possession.

But with a chance to take the lead, Maryland's Buck Williams missed in similar situation and eight consecutive Notre Dame free throws clinched the decision.

"When I missed the first one-and-one," Tripucka said, "I realized I didn't grab the towel from assistant coach Gary Brokaw as I usually do. I remembered to get it from him from then on, and I hit six in a row. Sometimes it's the little things that help."

Notre Dame, outscored 29-23 from the field, converted 27 of 31 free throws, including 11 of 13 by Tripucka. Maryland sank 12 of 13, but the miss by Williams with 1:57 remaining proved disastrous for the Terps.

"We were also hurt by the one-and-one when we lost to Virginia and North Carolina," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell. "It concerns me a great deal. But I don't know what to do, we took 25 extra free throws at practice yesterday because I thought it might come down to that."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said: "We did what we had to do. We made the foul shots, did a decent job against their transition game, and got the defensive rebounds at the end."

Notre Dame freshman Tom Sluby also converted his one-and-one attempt with 13 seconds left for a 71-68 Notre Dame lead. Ernest Graham followed with a basket for the Terps, now 13-4.

The Irish, 12-3, took the lead for good on a 15-4 spurt led by Orlando Woolridge in the second half.

Woolridge, limited to four minutes of action in the first half, scored five of his 10 points during the spree which gave Notre Dame a 63-55 lead. Maryland, which had shot 70 percent while taking a 41-38 halftime lead, had missed 10 of 16 second half shots until that point and had been outrebounded 14-4.

Tracy Jackson scored 16 points for Notre Dame, which had lost its last two games on the road and trailed twice by as much as five points.

Buck Williams led Maryland with 20 points, while Greg Manning and Albert King scored 18 apiece. King fouled out with 38 seconds remaining, sending Tripucka to the line for the second of his three clutch one-and-one attempts in the closing minutes.

Minnesota Upsets No. 9 Iowa, 60-48

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Center Randy Breuer scored 17 points, including nine in the second half, to lead Minnesota to a 60-48 victory over No. 9 Iowa in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

The 7-foot-2 sophomore hit on a turnaround shot with 14:19 to go to tie the score at 36-all and took a short jumper less than a minute later to give the Gophers the lead for good.

The victory gives Minnesota an 11-4 mark overall and a 3-3 league record. Iowa, which lost at home after three straight road victories fell to 12-3 and 4-2.

The Hawkeyes jumped to an early 8-2 lead, but Minnesota's Mark Hall connected on a field goal and two free throws to tie the score at 10-10 with 13:56 to go in the half. The lead changed hands four times before Mark Gannon scored on a short jumper wth 29 seconds to go and a free throw with a second remaining to give Iowa a 25-23 halftime edge.

The lead seesawed, with neither team leading by more than four points until Breuer hit his consecutive field goals with about five minutes gone.

Hall finished with 12 points for Minnesota and Trent Tucker had 10 as the Gophers shot 75 percent in the second half.

Vince Brookins led Iowa with 18 and was the only Hawkeye scorer in double figures. Iowa shot an ice-cold 35 percent in the second half.

DePaul.....69
LaSalle.....62

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mark Aguirre scored 35 points and pulled down 14 rebounds as third-ranked DePaul held off pesky LaSalle 69-62 in college basketball Saturday.

Aguirre sank 10 of 12 from the field in the second half, and the 6-foot-7 junior sealed DePaul's victory with a two-handed, behind-his-head stuff off a steal for the final margin. The 16-1 Blue Demons, ranked in a tie for third with Wake Forest, gave Coach Ray Meyer his 639th career victory.

The Blue Demons seemed stymied as the second half opened and LaSalle took the lead by a point three times.

But Aguirre followed his own miss from the foul line to open an 11-point run and a 15-2 margin over five minutes. Aguirre's bucket with 10:55 left gave DePaul its biggest lead of the game, 50-40.

Kevin Lynam, who had 13 points, then sank two buckets and Don Word, with 15 points, scored on a steal to pull LaSalle back in the game at a 50-46 deficit.

LaSalle, 10-7, kept pace in the first half as Word canned a jumper from the corner for the Explorers' first lead at 11-10.

Aguirre promptly hit a 20-foot jumper for DePaul. LaSalle again took the lead at 18-16 as 7-foot-1 center Tom Piotrowski sank three baskets from inside.

Aguirre had 12 first-half points on 6-12 shooting from the floor and pulled down seven rebounds. DePaul went to the locker room leading 29-28.

Tennessee.....63

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Howard Carter and freshman Leonard Mitchell combined for 37 points Saturday night as fifth-ranked Louisiana State won its 16th straight game, an 80-63 Southeastern Conference victory over No. 8 Tennessee.

The LSU defense caused repeated turnovers as the Tigers built their record to 17-1, pushing their conference mark to 8-0 to retain first place. It marked the 11th straight game LSU has held an opponent to less than 70 points.

Mitchell scored 12 of his 16 points in the first half and Carter had 11 of his game-high 21 in the same period as LSU jumped to a 36-27 halftime lead.

With guard Ethan Martin coming up with three quick steals, LSU built its lead to 52-33 in the first seven minutes of the second half.

Rudy Macklin added 15 points for balanced LSU and Martin chipped in with 13, plus a half-dozen steals.

Dale Ellis led Tennessee with 20 points and Gary Carter added 12 as the Vols fell to 13-3 overall and 5-3 in the SEC.

Kentucky.....78
Vanderbilt.....64

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Guards Dirk Mipniefield and Jim Master combined for 24 second-half points in leading No.6 Kentucky to a 78-64 victory over Vanderbilt in a Southeastern Conference college basketball game Saturday night.

Minniefield, who totaled 18 points to lead the Wildcats, and Master, a freshman who scored 16 points, preserved the Kentucky victory after center Sam Bowie left the game with an injury with 6:30 remaining.

Bowie, a 7-foot-1 sophomore, almost single-handedly fought off a Commodore rally at the start of the second half when Vanderbilt cut the score to 33-32.

Kentucky tallied five consecutive points, all by Bowie, in the opening minutes of the second half to storm to a 38-32 lead. Vanderbilt never was able to close the gap.

Bowie, who left the game with a hip injury after falling to the floor on a rebound attempt, scored 17 points. The Kentucky star was taken to Nashville's St. Thomas Hospital for x-rays.

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Herb Andrew and Scott Williams combined for seven last-minute free throws as 11th-ranked South Alabama hung on to beat McNeese State 64-60 in college basketball Saturday.

South Alabama jumped to a 16-9 lead in the first eight minutes and built the lead to 28-18 two minutes later en route to a 35-28 halftime advantage.

But Chris Faggi scored 12 of his 20 points in the second half as McNeese nipped away at the lead, pulling within 57-56 with 1:08 left.

Andrew, who finished with 18 points, went 4-for-4 on free throws in the final minute and Williams was 3-for-3.

Also in double figures for South Alabama (16-2) were Ed Rains with 15 points and Rory White with 12. Mac Golden added 18 points for McNeese (10-9).

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — John Bailey and Larry Petty scored 13 points apiece Saturday to lead Wisconsin to a 54-45 upset win over 15th-ranked Illinois in Big Ten basketball.

Dan Hastings hit seven free throws in the final minutes to fend off an Illinois rally and give the Badgers their second triumph in four Big Ten games. They are 7-7 over-all.

Illinois jumped out to an 11-6 lead with 11:18 left in the first half as Wisconsin went almost five minutes without scoring. But the Badgers tallied the next seven points — five by Bailey — to take a 13-11 lead with 8:23 left in the half.

After Illinois tied the score 15-15, Wisconsin took the lead for good on two free throws by Claude Gregory and led 24-18 at halftime.

In the second half, the Badgers extended their lead to 28-19 and maintained a lead of between six and eight points until Illinois reduced the margin to 35-31 with 9:38 left. Wisconsin then scored nine of the next 11 points, four each by Bailey and Greg Dandridge, to take a 44-33 lead with 3:33 to play.

Illinois' Eddie Johnson led all scorers with 16 points and Mark Smith added 12 as the Illini fell to 11-4 over-all and 3-3 in the conference. Smith is two short of Nick Weatherspoon's Illinois career scoring record of 1,481 points.

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Sophomore guard Byron Scott tallied 14 of his 21 points in the first half as seventh-ranked Arizona State opened up a 14-point lead and coasted to an 83-65 victory over the University of Arizona in a regionally televised Pacific 10 Conference basketball game Saturday.

With the triumph, Arizona State increased its season record to 14-2 and 6-1 in league play. Arizona dropped to 7-9 and 2-5, respectively.

Behind Scott's 12-point performance, the Sun Devils took a 20-8 lead in the game's early stages. Sophomore forward Paul Williams added nine points and seven rebounds as Arizona State widened its cushion over the turnover-prone Wildcats to 40-26 at halftime.

Senior Sam Williams, shifted from his familiar forward position to replace injured center Alton Lister, scored eight of his 13 points to start the second half as the Sun Devils rolled to their biggest lead of the game — 54-30 — with slightly more than 16 minutes remaining.

Arizona never got closer than 20 points of the lead from then on until the Wildcats scored the game's final basket.

Besides Scott, Paul Williams had 14 points for Arizona State. Reserve sophomore forward Walt Stone and junior guard Lafayette "Fat" Lever added 10 points apiece.

For Arizona, senior forward Robbie Dosty led all scorers with 25 points.

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Guards Bobby Dulin and Karl Hobbs combined for seven foul shots in overtime Saturday to give 20th-ranked Connecticut a 75-73 Big East Conference victory over Georgtown Saturday.

The Huskies, who squandered a 16-point halftime lead in the second half, won their 13th game in 15 starts.

Corny Thompson led the Huskies with 19 points. Chuck Aleksinas added 15 and Mike McKay hit for 13.

Georgetown's Eric Smith led all scorers with 28 points.

Dulin made four of four, and Hobbs three of five in the extra session as UConn outscored Georgetown 10-8. It was the Huskies' fourth victory in sixth conference games while the Hoyas slipped to 11-8 overall and 3-3 in league play.

The Huskies shot 61 percent the first half to lead 45-29. Thompson and Aleksinas each scored 13 in the first half.

Georgetown, however, went on a 19-6 run to close to 51-48 with 12:02 to play. Smith had eight points in the surge, and Eric Floyd had four. Georgetown took the lead with 6:23 remaining on a basket by Smith and extended it to 62-59 on a basket by Floyd with 5:21 to play.

Freshman Norman Bailey converted a three-point play to tie the score, 62-all, at 4:49. But Fred Brown had a basket to restore the Georgetown lead with 3:42 to play.

A foul shot by Thompson and two by Aleksinas lifted the Huskies to a 65-64 lead with 1:14 to play. Gene Smith hit one foul shot with 61 seconds to play to send it into overtime, tied 65-all.

Georgia.....67
Auburn.....63

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Eric Marbury and Vern Fleming each sank two key free throws in the final 65 seconds as Georgia edged Auburn 67-63 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The victory ended Georgia's 12-game losing streak against the Tigers dating back to the end of the 1975 campaign.

Marbury, who gave the Bulldogs a 65-61 lead on two free throws with 1:05 remaining, led Georgia with 21 points and Dominique Wilkins, the SEC's leading scorer with a 23.7 average, contributed 19.

The triumph lifted Georgia to 11-5 for the season and 4-4 in the conference. Auburn, losing its seventh in a row, remained in the SEC cellar at 1-7 and is 8-8 for the season.

Auburn led only three times, each by a point and the last time at 49-48 with 10:36 remaining when Bobby Cattage hit a pair of free throws. Georgia took the lead for good moments later on a driving layup by Wilkins.

Earl Banks led Auburn with 13 points.

Florida.....97
Alabama.....91

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Freshman Vernon Delancy scored 38 points and Ronnie Williams added 22 as underdog Florida knocked off Southeastern Conference foe Alabama 97-91 Saturday in a regionally televised college basketball game.

Florida had led by as much as 13 points late in the game but Alabama battled back to within four points with less than a minute to play. But Florida took advantage of free throw opportunities in the closing seconds, hitting six straight.

The Gators, who suffered the worst loss in school history at Kentucky last Wednesday, boosted their record to 9-6, 3-5 in the SEC. Alabama, which knocked off No. 6 Kentucky on Jan. 17, dropped to 11-5, 4-4 in the conference.

Florida led five different times in the first half before taking the lead for good with 4:47 left before intermission. The Gators took a six-point lead with 3:03 left, but the Crimson Tide cut Florida's lead to one before Mark Giombetti hit a jumper at the buzzer to give Florida a 40-37 lead at the half.

The second half began like the first with a Delancy dunk as Florida maintained the upper hand. The Gators outscored Alabama 13-4 in the first five minutes of the half to take command of the game.

Delancy's 38 points was his best performance of the season and Williams, Florida's leading scorer on the year, scored his 22 before fouling out with 6:06 left. Also in double figures for Florida was Mike Moses with 14.

Alabama was paced by 6-7 forward Ken Johnson who poured in 28 points. Guard Eddie Adams added 24 and forward Eddie Phillips contributed 19 for the Crimson Tide.

W. Virginia.....85
St. Bonaventure...69

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — Behind Greg Jones' 31 points, West Virginia defeated St. Bonaventure 85-69 in an Eastern Eight college basketball game Saturday.

The Mountaineers raced to a 40-29 halftime lead as Jones was seven for 10 in the first half.

After West Virginia had increased its lead to 18 points midway in the second half, the Bonnies came back to within nine with four minutes to go.

High scorer for St. Bonaventure with 30 points was Earl Belcher, who also grabbed 12 rebounds. Russel Todd chipped in 20 points for West Virginia.

The Mountaineers now 13-3 for the season with a 6-0 recorrd in Eastern Eight conference play. The Bonnies fell to 9-5 overall and a conference record of 4-5.

The Requirements For A Perfect Form Of Exercise!

There is absolutely nothing "random" about the design of a Nautilus machine..."function dictates design," and the functions demanded by a perfect form of exercise dictate the design of Nautilus machines.

Over a period of more than twenty years we gradually became clearly aware of all of the requirements for a perfect form of exercise...these requirements are...

1—Rotary movement
2—Direct resistance
3—Automatically-variable resistance
4—Balanced resistance
5—Positive work
6—Negative work
7—Stretching
8—Pre-stretching
9—Resistance in position of full muscular contraction
10—Unlimited speed of movement

COMBINATION PULLOVER/TORSO ARM MACHINE

Of these ten requirements, automatic-variable resistance is the main difference between Nautilus and the more conventional resistance training machine.

The Nautilus cam regulates the resistance automaticaiiy, instantly, exactly...providing resistance that meets your requirements in all positions.

In a typical situation...at the start of the movement your available strength is at its lowest level, so the radius of the cam is small and the resistance is low. But as you move into another position your strength increases, so the radius of the cam becomes larger in proportion—and thus the resistance is increased to match your higher strength level.

When you reach your strongest position, the radius of the cam is also at its maximum—and thus the resistance is maximum.

Then, as you pass the point of greatest available strength and start moving into a weaker area of movement...the radius of the cam automatically and instantly reduces itself in exact proportion, thus reducing the resistance in proportion to your declining strength.

The actual resistance is thus changing constantly throughout the movement...but it doesn't "feel" like it is changing. Instead, it feels the same in every position. It feels the same because it is always in proportion to your available strength.

If the resistance was actually the same in every position, as it would be if the cam was perfectly round...then it would feel like it was changing. But in such a case it wouldn't be the resistance that was changing...instead, it would be your strength that was changing.

You may understand that such a requirement for variable resistance exists...but it is very unlikely that you will fully appreciate the enormous IMPORTANCE of such variable resistance; until you experience a full-range, direct exercise that does not have variable resistance.

SUPER BOWL XV - PHILADELPHIA vs. OAKLAND

Rick Scoppe

Super Bowl tickets are large items. Literally. The tickets themselves are about two and a half inches wide and six inches long and carry a $40 face value.

In the minds of many a football fan, however, a Super Bowl ticket takes on even larger proportions. The Super Bowl is to a football fan what Mecca is to a Moslem. It's a journey many dream of, but most never make, the road being too costly for all but a few.

Ken Hutcherson

Ken Hutcherson decided to do something about it. Hutcherson, an ex-East Carolina assistant coach, received four Super Bowl tickets — from former ECU halfback Sam Harrell — with the intention of giving his friends a chance to go to the NFL's season finale in New Orleans today.

His friends, however, turned him down. One by one they said thanks but no thanks.

"The whole idea originally was to give my friends a chance to go to the game," Hutcherson said. "We'd be sitting around the lunch table talking and someone would say, 'Golly, I'd really like have some Super Bowl tickets. So I got them and called my friends but none of them wanted them."

Hutcherson even tried to give a pair of tickets away.

"I offered tickets to a man in town for nothing but he was going to be out of town this weekend," Hutcherson said. "The reason I did that was he has done a lot for the (ECU) athletic department and I thought it'd be nice to give him a chance to go to the Super Bowl."

Disappointed by the responses of his friends, Hutcherson decided to advertise in both The Reflector and The News & Observer. Not long after the tickets were bought by two people in Raleigh.

"I got about 15 calls, some of them pranks, of course," Hutcherson said. "But I thought I'd get more calls because they are a pretty marketable item."

From Hutcherson's experience the market in North Carolina for Super Bowl tickets is not that lucrative. Not like ACC tournament tickets. Many of the people who called balked at the $40 face value of the tickets. Then they choked when Hutcherson told them most tickets were scalped for between $150 to $500, depending where the seat is located.

"People don't understand how expensive it is for this game," Hutcherson said. "They said I was crazy, that tickets couldn't be selling for that. But Super Bowl tickets are very hard to come by."

Tickets are even harder to find this year. Last season the Super Bowl was held in the Rose Bowl, which seats 104,000. The Superdome holds 75,000. Last year each team was allotted about 1,200 tickets. This year each team was given about 800 tickets, with more going to the two teams participating in the game.

Usually, each player receives two tickets and the rest are divided among season-ticket holders, staff members and business firms.

Many players do not go to the game. Instead, they sell their tickets to a fellow teammate — a ticket broker — who offers them double or triple the face value and then resells them for even more.

"What happens is some veteran will go around and offer, say, $150 for the pair," Hutcherson said. "He in turn sells them to fans or a travel agency for $200 or more."

Some clubs, however, no longer permit this.

The Baltimore Colts tried to stipulate that players buying tickets must pick them up in New Orleans. But a grievance filed through the NFL Players Association rescinded that decision.

Dallas Cowboy General Manager Tex Schramm ordered his players and team executives who bought tickets to sign statements saying they will not scalp the tickets.

Hutcherson, an offensive back coach under Pat Dye, now works as a broker with E.F. Hutton and is an agent for a number of NFL players. Among those he represents are former ECU stars Mike Brewington, Eddie Hicks and Harrell.

It was Harrell, now with Minnesota, who gave Hutcherson the tickets to sell. "I don't make anything personally off them and I probably could have made a lot more if I had wanted to," Hutcherson said. "But I get very squimish when I hear people selling them for $150, $200."

In fact, he still has one ticket left. But Hutcherson, who has never been to a Super Bowl, will neither sell the ticket nor use it. Instead, he will frame it — a memory of the NFL's grandest and costliest of games that went unused.

Where Should Super Bowl Be Played?

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — When Philadelphia and Oakland collide Sunday in Super Bowl XV, the playing conditions will be perfect.

The temperature in the Louisiana Superdome was forecast at 72 degrees, with a pleasant 1-mph wind gently circulating. There will be no icicles forming on Tony Franklin's bare foot when he kicks for the Eagles and nobody throwing snowballs at Jim Plunkett when he passes.

Thank you, Pete Rozelle.

It is merely good sense to play the season's ultimate football game under optimum conditions. There can be no complaints when it's over that your team got beat by wind or rain or snow or anything except those 45 guys on the other side of the field.

The better team will win Sunday, and the losers will have nobody to blame but themselves. That's because the National Football League leaves nothing to chance, not even the weather.

Some questions:

—Do you think it was a true test of the Raiders and Cleveland Browns to play their American Conference semifinal game in sub-zero temperatures with a minus-40 wind chill?

—Do you think that usually sure-footed Don Cockcroft misses all those place kicks if there's no wind threatening to blow him and his holder into Lake Erie?

—Do you think Brian Sipe throws that ill-fated final pass, risking a season-ending interception, if there's a gentle breeze instead of a full-fledged gale huffing and puffing in the faces of the Browns?

No way.

The Browns did not lose a football game that day. They lost a survival test. They happened to be driving in the wrong direction at the wrong time and it was fatal.

There's no excuse for letting a game as important as that one be decided by the caprice of Mother Nature. Not when it can be avoided.

The NFL takes a lot of static for its timing and staging of the Super Bowl. The league leaves a two-week gap between the conference championship games and the season's finale, and there are two reasons for that timing.

One is that absence makes the heart grow fonder. Two weeks between games leaves fans salivating, and by the time kickoff comes, the anticipation has reached fever pitch. There is no denying that the NFL enjoys that condition.

But there is another factor here. The extra week between games gives the competing teams more time to heal injuries. If you're playing the ultimate game, you want the competing clubs at ultimate operating efficiency.

Suppose Ron Jaworski had been banged up in the NFC title game against Dallas. Suppose he was limping around on a lame ankle and had six days to heal instead of 13. Suppose Joe Pisarcik had to start at quarterback for the Eagles. Would that be a fair test of Philadelphia's abilities?

Of course not.

So the NFL takes out an insurance policy, giving its teams an extra week to put the pieces back together. With the extra time, the Eagles might regain wide receiver Charles Smith, who suffered a broken jaw in the last game of the regular season.

If Smith plays, it increases the Eagles' efficiency, and perhaps produces a better game for the fans.

Is that so very bad?

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Imagine. New Orleans calling itself the Super Bowl city.

When the Saints go 15-1 and win a conference championship, then let New Orleans throw the big party for itself.

Oakland or Philadelphia deserves to have the game this year.

The only reason it's here is because the National Football League decreed it. But that doesn't make it good or right.

Ask a few million people in Philadelphia and Oakland where to put the Super Bowl, and they'll tell you.

Pete Rozelle, who rules the NFL from his tennis court-sized office overlooking Park Avenue, insists that the integrity of this ultimate game is upheld by playing it each year in a warm-weather city or indoors.

That's nonsense. Why should this game be treated differently from those which precede it?

The NFL may be able to extract millions upon millions of dollars from three national television networks. And the networks may be able to extract millions more from sponsors panting for precious minutes of air time. But this game isn't supposed to belong to them.

It doesn't mean thousands of corporate types and other high rollers who can afford to pay exorbitant prices for the privilege of impressing their clients or inflating their egos.

It's supposed to belong to the fans. The hometown fans. The fans who shell out $10 or $12 a game up to eight times each autumn for regular-season games, plus any home exhibitions games which are usually part of season-ticket packages.

This year, that means Oakland fans or Philadelphia fans.

Baseball splits up the vast majority of its World Series tickets between the two competing teams, with a few thousand going to the National and American League offices to be distributed as they see fit. So the people who pay the freight during the season, the season ticket holders and other fans, get a decent shot at a couple of seats for the big games.

In the NFL, though, less than half of the Super Bowl seats go to the teams involved. Thousands of others go to the 26 teams which don't make it this far, and thousands more are parceled out by the league itself. The sucker who supported the team all season has about as much a chance of buying a ticket to the game as he has of playing in it.

Which brings up another matter — this business of a two-week spread between the conference championships and the Super Bowl.

Who needs it?

Certainly not the teams. More than one coach has complained about the disruptions in routine caused by the delay. So it must be the league. The NFL thinks this game has to be hyped to the hilt. But the coaches and players hate the disruptions, too, and how many of us are fed up with Super Bowl excesses long before the kickoff?

So what have we got here?

We've got a media event, one about as far removed from the hometown fans as you can get.

It could just as well be staged at NBC's studios in Burbank. We wouldn't be entirely surprised if, some day, the NFL builds its own 150,000-seat domed stadium.

Some might call this a show. It's not. It's a game — and it's time to give it back to the people.

Hayes: Record Talks For Him

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lester Hayes has a record which speaks for itself: 18 interceptions so far in the Oakland Raiders' Super Bowl season.

Off the field, the All-Pro cornerback struggles with a speech problem. He stammers, sometimes severely.

"But I don't want to be known for any problem, just for what I do in football," Hayes said during the interview-filled week leading up to Sunday's climax of the National Football League season.

Hayes does not shy away from interviews and, as readers of newspaper sports pages know, he has been one of the week's most quoted Super Bowl players.

His work against the Philadelphia Eagles' wide receivers, especially Harold Carmichael, figures to be vital to the Raiders' defensive efforts, and Hayes said, "If Carmichael wants to catch any passes, he'd better go over to the other side of the field."

Words don't come easily to the 25-year-old Texan, but they are worth waiting for. He always seems to have something interesting to say.

Radio and television reporters who interview him sometimes fail to get usable tape.

Former Raiders Coach John Madden, doing television work here, interviewed Hayes.

"I told the producers that to do Super Bowl player interviews and not talk to Lester Hayes would be ridiculous, so I wanted to try it," said Madden, who had a good, though short, on-camera exchange with the player.

The speech impediment is something Hayes didn't want to discuss this week. But early in his NFL career Hayes said: "I've stuttered since I hung around with my best friend in the third grade and he stuttered. I do know it has nothing to do with how I play football."

There remains, however, somewhat of a mystery about the 1977 NFL draft and why Hayes was not chosen until the fifth round.

"Maybe when some teams sent scouts around, Lester wouldn't talk and they thought he wasn't smart," Raiders owner Al Davis said. He added that the team hopes to arrange speech therapy for Hayes "and we think we can help him."

An NFL scout, who requested anonymity, recalled that, "I saw Hayes play in the Hula Bowl and he was very impressive. I thought he should have been the Most Valuable Player.

"But, the way I heard it, some of his coaches at Texas A&M rapped him, said he was dumb. When Oakland picked him, we were glad to see it."

Rampettes Win First; Boys In Romp

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The long drought finally ended for the Rose High School girls' basketball team Friday night, and the Rampant boys continued on their march through Division I competition.

The Rampettes won their first game of the season, downing Elizabeth City Northeastern, 45-43, rallying from as much as 13 points down. The Rampants, leaders in Division I, chalked up their sixth win in the league, rolling to a 67-48 win.

The victory for the Rampants, their 12th in 15 overall starts, brought their league record to 6-1 at the midpoint of the conference season. "I never really expected to do this well," Coach Jim Brewington said after the win. "We're young and I didn't expect us to come along this quickly."

The coach expressed pleasure in the way his team is playing, however. "While we didn't play that well tonight, we are winning the games we are supposed to win, and we didn't do that last year and it eventually hurt us."

The game was not much of a contest. Northeastern's Eagles, who have won but three of 14 games — and none in seven league starts — led just once, at 4-3. Only once in each of the first three periods were they able to put as many as three points together, and only twice could they score as many as four in a row.

James Brewington got the ball rolling with a three-point play just eight seconds into the game. But baskets by Anthony Johnson and Clemmie Mercer put Northeastern into its lone lead, 4-3, with 7:11 left.

Rose then pushed through the next six points as William Battle hit two jumpers around a steal that led to a Donald Johnson dunk. That ran the Rose lead to 9-4 with 6:06 showing.

During the remainder of the period, Rose extended its lead, building up as much as a nine point lead at the end, 19-10.

Three straight baskets at the start of the second period ran the lead to 15, 25-10, and after Robert Burnham scored (the only basket for the Eagles in the quarter), Rose hit seven straight points. Battle made two free throws, followed by two by Ronnie Worsley. Brewington finished it up with a three-point play, and Rose led by 20, 32-12.

The Rampants held a 34-15 lead as the period ended.

Rose built its lead to as much as 24 in the third period, 43-19, and held that margin at the end, 49-25. In the final period, much of it against the reserves, Northeastern managed a 23-18 comeback.

The contest was sloppy after the first quarter on the part of both teams. Rose, after getting a big lead, substituted frequently. By the time it was over, Northeastern had committed 32 turnovers to Rose's 26.

Rose didn't shoot as well as it had in the past — but it didn't need to. The Rampants hit on 29 of 63 shots, 46.0 per cent. Northeastern made just 21 of 55, for a colder 38.2.

Except for the final period, Rose controlled the boards.

"It was the kind of game where we can play everyone," Brewington said. "I certainly didn't expect it to be this sloppy. I thought it would be a tougher fight.

"But after the first period, we could tell what type of game it was going to be, and we started subbing a lot," he said.

"I thought we played good defense most of the first half. But every win counts, even if it was sloppy. We could have played more conservatively and scored more, but I guess it was as good a time as any to have a sloppy game."

Johnson led the Rose scoring with 18 points, 16 of them in the second half. Battle added 12, while Brewington had 10.

Northeastern was led by Mercer with 14, while Burnham had 11.

In the girls' game, Northeastern took the initial lead, 4-0, and steadily pulled away from the Rampants, taking a 16-3 lead with 2:15 left in the period.

But Rose began to come alive after that, and pulled back to a 17-9 deficit at the end of the period. In the second frame, Rose closed to within seven several times and trailed 27-20 at intermission.

After spotting the first basket to Northeastern, Rose, behind the play of Frances Barnhill, ran off 11 straight points to take a 31-29 lead with 2:45 left.

Northeastern tied it up and regained the lead, holding a 35-33 margin at the end of the period.

In the fourth period, after both teams had the chance to pull away, Northeastern finally managed a 43-39 lead with 3:39 left. But Barnhill hit to close it to two with 3:24 left, and after Rose missed on four free throw attempts, Barnhill hit again to tie it, 43-43.

Jamie Teel hit a free throw with 30 seconds left to put Rose up, and Barnhill added another with 18 for a two-point edge, and Northeastern's last efforts failed to tie it up.

Barnhill led the scoring with 17 points for Rose. Cecile Griffin had 14 to pace Northeastern.

"It's a good feeling," Coach Dennis Gibson said of the victory. "It kind of worried me when we got so far down in the first period, but the girls didn't give up and hustled. We got some offensive rebounds and that helped, although we tried to give it away at the foul line there at the end."

Gibson praised the play of Barnhill. "Her clutch baskets really brought us through," he said.

Gibson also credited a change in defense at the half with the turnaround. "We had opened in a 1-3-1 trap, and they were getting inside on us. In the second half, we went with a 1-2-2, since they only have one good outside shooter, and that kept them out of the middle.

"Too, we didn't change defenses a lot, staying with just two or three, and I think that helped the girls from getting confused."

The win boosted the Rose record to 1-11, and 1-6 in the league, lifting them out of the celler. Northeastern falls to 2-11 overall and 0-7 in the conference.

Rose is idle until next Friday, when the Rampants start the second round of Division I play, hosting Northern Nash.

Ayden-Grifton Bounces Back, Dumps Farmville

Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey hated to see his Chargers' four-game winning streak come to an end last Saturday night but it may have been a blessing after all.

The Chargers, playing what Murphrey called perhaps their best overall game of the season, shot down Farmville Central, 64-53, behind Thomas Anderson's 24 points.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Farmville Central nipped Ayden-Grifton, 40-36.

"I hated to see us lose last week to Roanoke (48-46), but it seemed to fire up the guys tonight," Murphrey said. "This was one of our better all-around efforts.

"We played exceptionally well both on the boards and on defense. We came out ready to play."

The Chargers, now 8-7 overall and 6-3 in the league, led by only one at the end of the first period, 14-13, but a 17-6 second period gave them a 31-19 halftime lead.

In the second half A-G continued to mount its advantage, outscoring the Jaguars 24-15 in the third period to take a 55-34 lead into the final period before coasting home with the 16-point win.

Joining Anderson in double figures for Ayden-Grifton were Clarence Baker with 11 and Chris Phillips with 10. Phillips also pulled down a team-high 10 rebounds.

Farmville, now 1-16 and 1-10, was led by Andrew Edwards' 13 points.

In the girls' game, Farmville broke away in the third period and held on to defeat the Chargers as Karen Dunn scored 11 and Dana Streeter added 10.

Farmville, now 7-8 and 5-6, and Ayden-Grifton were tied after the first period, 10-10, but the Jaguars managed a one-point (20-19) lead at intermission.

Farmville then outscored A-G, 12-7, in the third period to take a 32-26 lead into the final period before holding off the Chargers.

Ayden-Grifton, now 1-14, 0-9, wa led by Sarah Cannon's nine points.

Vikings To Be In Coastal Tournament After All

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Much of this season the main concern of D.H. Conley wrestling coach Milt Sherman has been whether his Vikings would enter the Sectional Tournament without having wrestled for two weeks.

Late this week that concern was eased when the Coastal Conference voted to change the league tournament to an invitational and thus allow the Vikings to compete for the tournament title.

League members voted Thursday at West Craven to name the regular season champ — West Carteret — as the conference champ and to rename the Coastal Conference Tournament to the Coastal Invitational Tournament.

Had the league maintained the same format as in years past, when the league title was decided in the tournament, the Vikings would not have been eligible to compete because of a ruling by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

Last May the CC voted to allow the Vikings to wrestle each of the five conference schools twice during the regular season and then compete for the league crown in the tournament.

Then, during the early part of the season one of the league's schools asked for a ruling on whether the Vikings could compete for two conference titles in the same sport.

Conley was already on its way to the Eastern Carolina Conference crown at the time of the request and thus, had the Vikings won the CC tournament they would have captured two league titles.

"We wanted to avoid confusion so we asked the state for a ruling," West Craven principal and CC president Robert E. Jolly said. "We received a written rely from Charlie Adams (assistant director of the NCHSAA) stating that D.H. Conley would not be able to participate in the league tournament because it still belonged to the Eastern Carolina Conference."

It stayed that way until this past week when the league voted unanimously to readmit the Vikings to the tournament.

"We voted to have six schools participate in the league tournament, one of which was D.H. Conley," Jolly said. "We did this because we knew they wanted to particpate in the tournament because they did not want to go into the (sectionals) rusty."

Conley now joins West Carteret, East Carteret, West Craven, Havelock and White Oak in the invitational tournament, to be held Feb. 7 at West Carteret.

Obviously, Conley officials are happy with the repreive. Said DHC Principal Bob Carraway, "I'm tickled to death."

"Very much so," said D.H. Conley coach Milt Sherman when asked if he was happy with the decision. "This is more than we expected under the circumstances.

"Being in a tournament will help us in our preparation for the sectionals."

The Vikings, who have not lost to a CC foe this season, will be among the favorites to take the tournament crown.

"A tournament's a lot different than dual meets," Sherman said. "I think that West Carteret and Conley will be prime contenders for the team championship but I think every school has potential (individual) winners."

Rams Survive Scare By Falcons

SNOW HILL — Charles B. Aycock, next to the bottom in the Eastern Carolina Conference, threw a scare into league leading Greene Central Friday night, but the Rams escaped with a 49-44 decision.

Aycock's second place girls rolled to a 51-33 win over the Lady Rams in their game.

Aycock came out red hot, firing through 11 of 14 shots from the floor to take a 24-11 lead over the stunned Rams. But in the second period, Greene Central took command, and held the Falcons to just one of 15 shots from the floor, as they scored just three points. Greene Central, meanwhile, scored 21 points and took a 32-27 halftime lead.

In the third period, Aycock cut it back to 44-41, but could never quite catch up. Both teams ran out of gas in the final period, in which the Rams scored five and the Falcons, three.

Phillip Hill and David Joyner each had 12 points to lead Greene Central, while John Ray had 11 and Roderick Lane had 10. Hill pulled off 19 rebounds and Lane added 11 in the game. Aycock was led by Paul Thomas with 16.

Aycock was led by Paul Thomas with 16, 12 of them in the first quarter.

Aycock's girls rolled up a 14-4 lead in the first period and had little trouble after that. The Falconettes increased the margin to 26-11 by the end of the half, and were up, 41-23, as the final quarter started. Both teams scored ten each in the final stanza.

Fina Jones led Aycock with 22 points, while J. Dunn and Sherri Thomas each added 10. Letha Taylor had 10 to lead Greene Central.

The Rams upped their record to 9-1 in Eastern Carolina play, and 13-3 overall. The girls are now 3-7, 6-10. Aycock's boys go to 1-9, 1-14, while the girls are 9-1, 11-3.

Redskins Ease By Aces In Northeastern Action

ROBERSONVILLE — Maurice Chance pumped in 17 points and Michael Neal added 14 to lead Roanoke to a 53-51 victory over Edenton Friday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Roanoke, behind Sylvia Parker's 26 points, stopped its one-game losing streak by whipping Edenton, 51-38.

In the boys' game, Roanoke, after trailing early, took a 10-9 lead after the first period and then led at the break, 26-22.

The Redskins were unable to shake the Aces in the second half but never saw their lead shrink below two. Roanoke led at the end of the third quarter, 40-35, before seeing Edenton close the gap within two late.

The win leaves Roanoke at 14-2 overall and 7-1 in the league. Edenton, which was led by Lee Dail Leary's 16 points, Everett Wilder's 14 and Steve Holley's 13, drops to 7-5 and 3-5.

In the girls' game, the Redskins, who lost their first game last week to Plymouth, surged past the Aces in the second half to capture their 15th win in 16 games. Roanoke is 7-1 in the league.

The Redskins led at the end of the first period, 11-8, but fell behind at the half, 20-19. A 16-10 third period and a 16-8 fourth period, however, pushed the Redskins to a comfortable cushion and the 13-point victory.

Edenton, now 7-4 and 5-3, was led by Kathy Blount's 18 points.

The Redskins play host to Ahoskie Tuesday night.

Graham's 69 Has Him Atop Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — David Graham, a tour-tested Australian veteran who has been there many times before, put together a solid, 2-under-par 69 and took sole control of the top spot Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

But the combination of his vast experience, compiled in a globe-trotting career that has produced victories all over the world, and the non-winning status of his closest challengers isn't necessarily a big advantage going into Sunday's final round, Graham said.

"There are so many tournaments now, and we're playing for so much money that younger, less experienced players don't fear playing badly so uch as before," Graham said after posting his 202 total, 11 shots under par for 54 holes over the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

"It's not a life or death situation. The young players know there's always next week. If they can get in position to win, they can go ahead and take advantage of the situation rather than fear it.

"I've got to go out tomorrow with the idea that there are 6, 8, 10, 12, 15 men who can win the golf tournament. I'm going to have to shoot 66 or 67 to w it," said Graham, winner of five American titles including the 1979 PGA national championship.

A single stroke back at 203 were Tommy Valentine, Mike Reid and Jim Nelford, a Canadian now living in the United States. All are non-winners on the American tour. Valentine used his great length off the tee to shoot a 3-under-par 66. Reid keyed his 67 around excellent play on the short holes and Nelford had to work hard for a 70.

Second-round leader Mark Lye struggled to a 72, 1 over par on a flat little course that often yields some of the lowest scores on the entire Tour. He dropped back into a tie at 204, two shots off the pace, with Calvin Peete, George Cadle and Jerry Pate.

Peete, who started the day's play from the 10th tee, scored consecutive eagle-3s on the 18th and first holes. Cadle and Pate had 68s.

Bruce Lietzke, a winner last week in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, was another shot back at 205 after a 68 in the warm, sunny weather. Arnold Palmer took a 74 and was far behind at 215.

Graham noted that Nelford and Lye had failed to take advantage of their leading positions after 36 holes and had let the field catch them.

"It just goes to show the difference in the way the players play when they're in contention, when they have a chance to win," he said.

the first half, and in the second half, was not that far off. "The ball just quit dropping for us."

He pointed out that there were three critical periods in the game. "The first five minutes are very important, and I thought we did well there. The final two minutes of the first half are important and I thought we handled that well too.

"Then, the first five minutes of the second half are important, and in this case, they blew us out.

"Why? We hit our first shot against their zone, which didn't surprise me, but then we missed the next four or five — and we were getting good shots most of the time — and that became frustrating for us."

Odom added that the overall first half performance was very good. "We had a couple of cracking points, when they got up by nine, but I think we handled ourselves well then."

That came during Parzych's streak of the first half, when Bailey had finished off a streak with a dunk, 30-21. But the Pirates hung in there the rest of the way and trailed by seven at the half.

State went out to a 6-1 lead in the early going, but the Pirates tied it at 7-7, then gained a 12-11 lead. They had two chances after that to extend the lead, but failed to convert.

State regained the lead, then lost it once more, 16-15 on a jumper by Morris Hargrove with 9:29 left.

But Parzych got things going with three straight baskets after that, and State shot out to its nine-point lead after that.

In the early minutes of the second half, State's 8-for-10 streak put the game on ice. The Pirates never closed the gap, and both teams went to their bench freely after that.

State shot 75 per cent in the second half and 66.7 per cent for the game, while the cold-shooting Pirates made just 37.1 per cent for the game.

Amazingly, the rebound difference was only two, 30-28, but much of the Pirate rebounding came after the issue was decided. While the game was in doubt, State held command of the boards, led by — guess who — Parzych's seven grabs.

Bailey added 14 points to the State total, while Matthews hit 10. East Carolina was led by Charles Watkins with 12 points, while Hargrove added 10.

Despite all, Odom is looking forward to the future, and next year's meeting with the Wolfpack.

"Our job is to make our players believe that they belong. A year from now we'll be older. Most of these kids will be shaving regularily and that will be good for us."

And Odom picked up a small thing — his words — as a closing note. "We got out late (for the final warmup period before the game) and they got ready to play the National Anthem. When I first came here, the kids would just stand around when they played it. But tonight, they all lined up on the baseline. I was proud of them. Maybe they are getting a little respect in themselves. It's little things like that that usually go unnoticed, but they mean a lot."

East Carolina returns to Minges on Monday night to face Baptist College of Charleston in a 7:30 p.m. game. The Pirates are now 8-9, while State is 9-7.

Lifegate Wins Easily

Terry Duncan erupted for 39 points and Darryle Wells added 20 as Lifegate rolled past Immanuel, 85-42, Friday night in a high school basketball game.

Lifegate, now 2-0 in the conference and 7-3 overall, surged to a 23-6 lead after the first period and was never threatened.

Joining Duncan and Wells in double figures for Lifegate was Greg Jones with 12 points. Tim Brabble led Immanuel with 29 points.

DHC Whips Firebirds Behind Burney, Gatlin

HOLLYWOOD — Anthony Burney poured in 17 points and Keith Gatlin added 16 to lead D.H. Conley to a 60-50 win over Southern Nash Saturday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Darlene Cannon's 26 points propelled the Valkyries past Southern Nash, 60-57.

The win for DHC's boys left them at 12-4 overall and 8-2 in the league, one game behind league-leading Greene Central. Southern Nash drops to 9-7 and 6-4.

The Vikings jumped out to an 18-10 first-period lead and led at the break, 31-24. An 18-10 third period pushed the Viking lead to 49-34 and Conley then held on to take the victory, the Vikes' third straight.

Joining Burney and Gatlin in double figures for DHC was Sammy Tyson with 10 points. Southern Nash was led by McCullen Wiggins' 18 points.

In the girls' game, Conley moved to a 16-12 lead after the first period and then led at the half, 30-24. At the end of the third period the Conley lead had shrunk further, to 44-40, but the Valkyries managed to hold on for the victory.

The Valkyries, now 8-6 overall and 4-6 in the ECC, got 15 points from Jackie Hansley. Soiuthern Nash, now 7-9 and 4-6, got 18 points from both Dora Harrison and Melissa Morgan.

Conley travels to Ayden-Grifton Tuesday night.

Do it yourself— try the "Great American Beer Switch" test

This test requires two identical mugs, a Schlitz and your regular beer, at equal temperatures. The taster must not know which beer is which. Label the mugs "1" and "2", then out of the taster's sight, pour the beers to equal heads.

To ensure that the choice is made on taste alone, serve the beer in non-transparent mugs or have the taster close his eyes and then sample both and choose the beer that tastes better. Did you pick today's Schlitz?

Rose Boys Sweep Tri-Meet

RALEIGH — Greenville Rose's boys swim team swept a tri-meet while the girls' team finished second Saturday afternoon. The boys defeated Jordan, 45-41, and Ravenscroft, 72-7, while the girls fell to Jordan, 56-22, but defeated Ravenscroft, 46-10.

Rose' boys are now 5-2 and the girls are 1-4. The boys' win was particularly impressive given that Jordan finished second in the state last year. The Jordan girls were third last season and were preseason favorites to win the state title this year.

For the boys, Kevin O'Neal set a school record in the 500 freestyle with a time of 22.94. O'Neal also won the 100 freestyle (50.55).

Other first place finishers in both meets included captain Jim Piethoff, who won both the 200 freestyle (1:52.7) and the 500 freestyle (5:05.1).

Others who finished first in both meets were Will Monroe in the 100 breaststroke (1:07.59) and Mark Schmidt in the 100 backstroke (1:00.59).

The girls did not have anyone take a first in both meets.

The boys' team also won the 200 medley relay and the 400 freestyle relay. In the 200, Greg Churchill, Monroe, Schmidt and O'Neal finished with atime of 1:47.68 to win. In the 400, Jim Hamilton, Danny Scharf, Churchill and Piethoff came in with a clocking of 3:53.3 to capture first.

The Rampant swimmers return home Saturday for a quad-meet with Chapel Hill, Kinston and Cary. Chapel Hill defeated the Rose boys earlier in the season.

than we have all season. We have to look to the future. That's the only approach we can take."

Guard Mike Helms led Wake Forest with 14 points while Johnstone scored 12.

UNC-A coach Jerry Green said his team's problems started when it took the court.

"This is probably the best team they've had in five years," Green said. "When they were ranked about three years ago, fourth or fifth in the nation and had (Rod) Griffin and Skip (Brown) and those guys. But they were a lot better team than that tonight. It's very hard to line up our players against theirs. They are a class team. They are just too awesome."

Besides the scoring of Helms and Johnstone, Wake Forest got 13 points from reserve center Chuck Dahms, 12 from guard Frank Johnson and 11 from forward Guy Morgan, who scored all of his points before intermission.

Guard Eddie Latta had a game-high 23 points for UNC-A, now 9-9. Paul Allen added 14 points for thw Bulldogs.

Wake Forest shot 51 percent from the field and forced the Bulldogs into a 39 percent performance. UNC-A hit only 24 of 62. Wake Forest also held an edge at the free throw line, sinking 25 of 36 shgots to 20 of 23 for the Bulldogs.

The rebounding edge also went to Wake Forest, 46-33.

Ohio State Holds Off No. 16 Michigan

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State coupled Herb Williams' 23 points with a tough man-to-man defense Saturday night to beat 16th-ranked Michigan 69-63 and move into a share of the Big Ten basketball lead.

The Buckeyes, 4-2 in the league and 9-5 over-all, held the Wolverines without a field goal for more than seven minutes late in the game.

The Buckeyes took advantage of the Wolverines' cold spell to score 12 straight points, overturning a 54-50 deficit with 9:17 to play. The Buckeyes streak gave them a 62-54 lead with 5:02 left.

Michigan, 3-3 in the Big Ten and 12-3 over-all, never moved closer than six points in the last five minutes. The Wolverines went from 9:17 to 1:49 without a basket.

Mike McGee scored 21 points to lead Michigan, which led by as many as five points in the second half and by four several times in the second half before Ohio State rallied behind Williams.

The victory upped South Florida's record to 14-4 and 4-1 in the conference, while Georgia State fell to 3-12 and 0-6 in conference play.

South Florida shot 60.3 percent from the field, with Willie Redden scoring 19 points and Vince Reynolds scoring 17.

Redden added 13 rebounds for the Bulls, who outrebounded the Panthers 43-38.

Don Ross scored 22 points for Georgia State, which shot 34.9 percent from the field.

Only 235 people attended the game, played in the massive 15,000 seat Omni instead of Georgia State's smaller Decatur Street gym.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Furman's Mel Daniel scored 30 points, including a 25-foot 3 point field goal that pushed the game into overtime, to lead his team to a 96-90 victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga Saturday.

Daniel's score with 3 seconds left to play in regulation time tied the score at 82-all. The junior guard went on to score 6 more points in the overtime period.

The win knocked the Moccasins out of first place in the Southern Conference. Tennessee-Chattanooga fell to 6-2 in conference action and 12-5 overall. The win gave the Paladins a 7-9 season record and a 5-6 mark in conference play.

Daniel shared game high scoring honors with Moccasin forward James Jones, who also posted 30 points.

With center Deana Meadows hitting from the lane, the Duchesses muscled t a 20-17 lead early in the first half. Meadows, who finished with 20 points, poured in 10 points in the spurt, capped by Kathy Railey's eight-foot jumper with 10:53 left.

Defense There, Offense Missing

By The Associated Press

The theory is simple: keep the Brigham Young Cougars under 70 points and you should beat them.

Colorado State's defense did precisely that Friday, but the Rams forgot to bring along their offense and were blown away by 18th-ranked BYU 66-46 in a Western Athletic Conference game.

The Cougars, who are ninth in the nation in scoring, got 22 points from Danny Ainge to up their record to 14-3 and 5-1 in the WAC.

"Our defense was exceptional," said BYU Coach Frank Arnold. "I'm not so concerned with scoring almost 20 points below our game average as I am with the 20-point margin of victory. That's the important statistic. In the first half we had something like 15 minutes of good defense, but only about five minutes of offense."

Those five minutes were enough to establish a 31-20 halftime lead.

Ainge finished the game three points shy of the WAC career scoring record of Bob Elliott of Arizona. It was the 97th consecutive game in double figures for the classy guard, just four short of another mark.

Only two other ranked teams were in action Friday night, No. 12 UCLA mauling Stanford 85-58 and No. 14 Utah edging Wyoming 55-53.

Rod Foster scored 15 points and reserve forward Tony Anderson added a career-high 14 for UCLA, 10-3. The Bruins led all the way, clinching the game with a 24-8 spree in the second half.

"We came ready to play tonight and played unselfishly," said UCLA Coach Larry Brown. "We made it tough for them to score, played great man-to-man defense, stole the ball and were unselfish on offense."

Stanford has never won in Pauley Pavilion in 16 tries and now has lost 27 of the last 29 games against UCLA.

"UCLA is by far the quickest team we've seen all year," added Stanford Coach Dick DiBiaso. "We lost our poise and never found it ...that was the key."

Karl Bankowski hit two free throws with just over a minute left and Utah's defense held Wyoming scoreless for the final minute. The Utes, 16-1, stand alone atop the WAC at 6-0. Utah received balanced scoring, led by Danny Vranes with 14, Scott Martin with 12, Bankowski with 11 and Scott Chambers with 10. Charles Bradley led Wyoming with 18 points.

Elsewhere, Evansville, 13-4, spurted from a 39-34 lead early in the second half to a 57-42 advantage and coasted to a 73-58 win over Butler as LeRoy Mitchell scored 19 points.

Only three points were scored in the final 5:24 of the Columbia-Cornell game, with Lions guard Richie Gordon's running one-hander providing a 46-45 Columbia victory. Jamie Ciampaglio hit for 20 points to pace Wagner over BU 74-70 as the Seahawks shot 65 percent from the field.

Santa Clara upset San Francisco 70-63 as senior guard Gary Mendenhall scored 21 points. The Dons, 14-4, moved to within two at 63-61 with 1:46 to play, but Santa Clara ran off the next five points to ice it.

No Records In First Major Meet

By BRUCE DALLAS
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Renaldo Nehemiah said his hurdles victory in the Philadelphia Track Classic wasn't pretty, but it was "thrilling in a sense."

That was the feeling of several winners Friday after unlimbering their bodies in the first major indoor track meet of the East this year. No records were set and few races were close, but only a few athletes said they were disappointed.

"I'm not in shape to run a 7-flat (seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles)," said Nehemiah, who ran a 7.01 anyway and was named the meet's outstanding performer. The Maryland senior, competing for the Reading Athletic Attic, missed nearly all of the indoor season last year with an ankle injury.

Recently, Nehemiah said, he's been involved in the Superstars competition and lifting weights. "Up top, I'm real heavy. But when I get in shape, I'll drop the weight.

"Technique and grace were terrible but strength and speed were good," said Nehemiah, who holds both the indoor and outdoor world marks in the highs.

"I was just running to see how well I could run," said Houston sophomore Carl Lewis, NCAA indoor and outdoor long jump champion last year, after winning the 60-yard dash in 6.17 seconds. IC4A champion Raymond James of Connecticut was second, 6.21 seconds, and Olympian Mel Lattany of Georgia third, 6.24.

"I came in here very skeptical," said Don Paige, winner of the 1,000 in 2:07.51.

"I knew I was in shape for distance but not necessarily the 1,000," added the Villanova graduate student, ranked the world's top half miler in 1980.

Paige, who last week ran a 5,000-meter race, was in fourth until he moved up behind Kenyan Henry Kimalel of the University of Richmond with two laps to go. Just before the gun lap, Paige burst past Kimalel, extending his lead to nearly 30 yards at the tape.

"I didn't feel I had anything to lose," said Villanova senior Anthony Tufariello, who broke outside on the first curve of the gun lap in the 600 and motored to victory in 1.11.60, nearly a second ahead of Maryland's Chris Person.

"I felt really strong and figured nobody expect me to go so early," said Tufariello. The NCAA 600 champion as a sophomore, Tufariello had bone spurs removed from his ankle last July after a disappointing junior year. "I don't take too much for granted anymore," he said.

Cavs Whip Slumping Hawks

By The Associated Press

"We're going to continue to get better because these guys are willing to play unselfish basketball."

Last year, that could have been Atlanta Hawks Coach Hubie Brown speaking. Friday night, however, it was Cleveland's Bill Musselman after the Cavaliers whipped the slumping Hawks 106-98 in Atlanta and climbed past them into fourth place in the National Basketball Association's Central Division.

Mike Mitchell pumped in 31 points, including 18 in a row for Cleveland in the first period, to lead the Cavaliers to their fourth consecutive victory. It was Atlanta's 10th loss in 11 games.

Elsewhere, the Phoenix Suns defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 131-122, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Denver Nuggets 110-105, the Boston Celtics nipped the Indiana Pacers 104-103, the Washington Bullets trimmed the Seattle SuperSonics 103-91, the Portland Trail Blazers crushed the New York Knicks 117-90, the Kansas City Kings downed the Houston Rockets 113-107, the Golden State Warriors shaded the Utah Jazz 103-101 and the Chicago Bulls turned back the Dallas Mavericks 106-98.

Mitchell scored 18 consecutive points for the Cavaliers over a six-minute span in the first quarter, lifting Cleveland from a 6-4 deficit to a 22-17 lead.

"They (Atlanta) have had injuries and their players aren't up to par," said Mitchell. "We try to take advantage of that. We know when they're down, to jump on top of them right quick, like we did tonight, so we could keep them down a little bit."

Brown said the turning point "was the beginning of the third quarter where we got outscored 12-1 and 18-5. This is the point where they take the lead from six to 19 points. It's a combination of us not being able to put the ball in the basket and that we missed 13 foul shots. For the third best foul shooting team in the league, that is unnatural for us to do."

Musselman said his club "has improved and we have eight guys under 25. We're improving with young people, so our best games are ahead of us. We're moving the ball better, we're playing better as a team, we're looking for each other, we're playing team defense."

Suns 131, Bucks 122

Walter Davis poured in 26 points and three other Phoenix starters combined for 58 more in pacing Phoenix to its 23rd home-court triumph in 26 games. The victory raised their Pacific Division-leading record to 40-13 while Milwaukee, the Central Division pacesetter, dropped to 37-13.

The Bucks hurt themselves with four technical fouls — three in the second half — and two called on Coach Don Nelson resulted in his ejection with 8:13 to go.

Lakers 110, Nuggets 105

Jamaal Wilkes scored five of his 30 points in the final 1:40 to lead Los Angeles. Denver led 105-103 with 2:17 remaining but the Lakers then scored the final seven points. A layup by Wilkes with 1:40 to go tied the score and another layup by the Los Angeles forward with 58 seconds left gave the Lakers the lead for good. Wilkes also was fouled on the play and made the free throw for a 108-105 lead. It was the 10th time this season Wilkes has scored 30 or more points and the Lakers are 10-0 in those games.

Celtics 104, Pacers 103

Boston let two 18-point leads slip away but held on to edge Indiana behind Larry Bird's 32 points and record its 11th victory in a row. The Pacers had a chance to tie the game after time ran out when Bird fouled Dudley Bradley but Bradley missed his first two free throws before making the third one.

Bullets 103, SuperSonics 91

Greg Ballard hit four jumpers down the stretch to thwart a Seattle rally. Ballard scored 26 points as the Bullets won for the seventh time in their last nine games. Washington outscored Seattle 25-0 on fastbreak points in the first half, with Kevin Porter contributing 10 assists.

Trail Blazers 117, Knicks 90

Billy Ray Bates and Jim Paxson combined for 50 points. Bates, with 10 first-quarter points, and Paxson, who scored 13 in the third period, helped the Blazers end a three-game New York winning streak. Bates had 27 points and Paxson 23 for the game. In addition, the Portland guards held New York's usually high-scoring guards to 32.

Kings 113, Rockets 107

Phil Ford scored a career-high 38 points to power Kansas City. Ford, who has poured in 94 points in the last three games, sank 23 in the first half. By winning, the Kings took sole possession of second place in the Midwest Division, dropping the Rockets to third.

Warriors 103, Jazz 101

Bernard King's baseline jump shot with three seconds remaining gave Golden State the victory. The Warriors scored eight points in the last 1:36 to overcome a 101-95 Utah lead. The Jazz played without the services of NBA scoring leader Adrian Dantley, who has the flu.

Bulls 106, Mavericks 98

Ricky Sobers and Reggie Theus combined for 18 points in the fourth quarter as Chicago handed Dallas its 25th loss in 27 road games. The Mavericks were in contention until the final six minutes, when Sobers scored 10 of his 16 points and Theus collected eight of his 18.

Kush Got Extension

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Arizona State football coach Frank Kush did not file federal and state income tax returns for 1979, his attorney said Friday.

S.A. Nathan, Jr., Kush's accountant, said Friday Kush was granted an extension on filing 1979 returns because the Internal Revenue Service was auditing his returns from previous years.

A Maricopa County Superior Court trial on a $2.2 million lawsuit against Kush is scheduled to begin Monday.

"He was being examined from prior years and we needed to wait for any changes that might affect his '79 returns," Nathan said.

Nathan said that he did not meet the Dec. 15, 1980 deadline extended by the IRS, but that Kush's 1979 returns are being prepared and will be filed soon.

The disclosure that Kush had not filed his 1979 income tax returns was made by attorney Warren Platt in court.

Kush and others are being sued by former ASU football player Kevin Rutledge.

Rutledge's attorney, Robert Hing, told Judge Thomas Kleinschmidt that he had subpoenaed 1979 tax returns of Kush, his wife Fran and Frank Kush, Inc., but had not received them.

Kleinschmidt ordered Kush to produce the records. Platt said Kush had told him he has not filed 1979 returns.

Kush, who was hired last month as head coach of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League, was unavailable for comment.

Hing argued in court last week that Rutledge is entitled to Kush's tax returns because Rutledge is seeking monetary damages and must ascertain Kush's net worth.

Rutledge filed the suit in October 1979. He alleges that he was punched by Kush during a 1978 football game and that Kush and some ASU assistant coaches made a concerted effort to harass and ridicule him into quitting the team and forfeiting his scholarship.

Lynn Dealt By Sox To Angels

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, defying major league baseball's free agency market with General Manager Haywood Sullivan's cryptic "rent-a-player-for-a-year" attitude, were ready to take the risk of losing catcher Carlton Fisk today after trading all-star center fielder Fred Lynn to the California Angels.

Sullivan, with complete backing from co-owners Buddy LeRoux and Jean Yawkey, shocked the baseball world Friday by dealing Lynn, a 28-year-old superstar, and veteran right-hander Steve Renko to the Angels.

Faced with the possibility of losing Lynn, along with Fisk, the Red Sox went into action as arbitration hearings opened in New York in the players' action to become free agents rather than play out an option year this season on contracts signed in 1976.

With Lynn's approval, he and Renko were traded to the Angels for veteran southpaw Frank Tanana, outfielder Joe Rudi and right-handed pitcher Jim Dorsey. Lynn reportedly agreed to a four-year contract, making him an instant millionaire.

Lynn, who led the Red Sox to the pennant as the American League's Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year in 1975, wiped out a trade to the Los Angeles Dodgers a few weeks ago, refusing to sign beyond the 1981 season. The Red Sox then entered trade talks with the New York Yankees.

In November, the Red Sox settled one headache by trading shortstop Rick Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson to the Angels for third baseman Carney Lansford, outfielder Rick Miller and relief pitcher Mark Clear. Burleson, like Lynn and Fisk entering a supposed option year, elected to return to his native area in southern California.

However, the Red Sox deliberately mailed contracts two days after the Dec. 20 deadline to Lynn and Fisk. If the club had met the deadline, both players could have gone to arbitration for whopping salary boosts while playing a final season in Boston.

Lynn and Fisk, both represented by agent Jerry Kapstein, filed for free agency because of the missed contract deadline through Marvin Miller of the Players Association. However, Sullivan beat that with Lynn's deal to California.

After that, Sullivan went into an arbitration hearing over Fisk. The matter, to be decided by arbitrator Raymond Goetz, was adjourned after three hours until today.

Lynn received a reported $275,000 from the Red Sox in 1980, which he finished on the bench with a broken foot. Fisk was paid a reported $225,000.

Sullivan declared while trade talks were stymied a few weeks ago that baseball had reached a stage "where you rent a player for a year."

That's what he's doing in getting Tanana and Rudi, who have only one year left on their contracts. However, in trading Lynn, he's at least getting something in return, even if only for one season.

"I've got a contract in front of me with his name on it and that of American League President Lee MacPhail," California Vice President E.J. "Buzzie" Bavasi said. "He's ours free and clear ...except now we have to pay him."

Sullivan went into hiding in New York because of continued negotiations in the Fisk matter. However, his co-owner, LeRoux, said in Boston that only Fisk, not Lynn, had sought free agency because of the late contract mailing. The Red Sox contend a covenant in the contracts signed in 1976 bind the players for an option year in 1981. The Players Association claims a new agreement with club owners supercedes the covenant.

"Considering the circumstances, I think it's a helluva trade," said Manager Ralph Houk, lured out of retirement by the Red Sox to replace fired Don Zimmer last October. "After all, there was a a chance we wouldn't have got anything for Lynn.

"I really feel much better about our starting pitching. Everyone tells me Tanana is throwing 100 percent better. We know he doesn't have the zip he once had. However, he knows how to move the ball around and has control. And the No. 1 factor is that all his life he has been a winner."

Lynn is a proven hitter, one of the best in baseball, and can play centerfield with the best in the business.

Chrysler Sales Up, Ford Sales Down

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. reported Friday that its mid-January U.S. car sales rose 13 percent, while Ford Motor Co. said it had a 14 percent drop in sales for the same period.

From Jan. 11 through Jan. 20, Chrysler dealers delivered 16,398 cars compared with 14,470 in the same period of 1980.

Ford sales were 30,308 against 35,157.

On Thursday, Volkswagen of America reported sales of 4,142 Pennsylvania-built Rabbits in the period, a 6.7 percent increase from 3,882 in mid-January of 1980.

Record drops

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Last year may have set a record for the number of television series canceled in a 12-month period — a grand total of 38 fallen from by the wayside at the three networks.

NBC was tops with 14 cancellations, followed by ABC with 13 and CBS with 11.

Fear Of Rising Interest Rates Hits Commodities

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

A general lack of buying interest pushed prices of commodities lower Friday, analysts said, following Thursday's hefty declines inspired by fear of rising interest rates.

Analysts said grain and soybean future prices on the Chicago Board of Trade fell sharply in a carryover of substantial selling from the previous session and amid lack of interest by commercial buyers.

"The market stinks," said Alan London analyst with Con-tiCommodity Services Inc. "Those people who needed wheat, corn or beans, got their needs covered (in the last couple of months) and there's no reason for them to step up to the pipe and take it now."

Traders noted tension between the Soviet Union and Poland because of the Polish workers' strike, a development which tends to renew fears of an expanded trade embargo against the Soviet Union. They also said prices were pressured by forecasts for improved crop weather.

As on Thursday, the higher U.S. dollar overseas Friday was said to be making grain more expensive to foreign buyers and discouraging European demand.

Even in the corn pit, where there has been buying support because of projected long-term demand, a 10-cent loss was posted in one contract month Friday. Ten cents is as much as corn is allowed to decline in a day's trading, under exchange rules.

One corn trader said there was heavy selling by people who had been holding long contract positions in hopes prices would rise. Others also noted a lack of agressive selling recently by producers, who also are said to be holding back for higher prices.

"I think we are at the point where some of the farmers and grain elevator people who have been holding back, will be starting to sell," said one veteran trader in the soybean pit.

At the close, soybeans were 11½ cents to 22 cents lower, the contract for March delivery was $7.24 a bushel; wheat was 8 cents to 11¼ cents lower, March $4.70¾ a bushel; corn was 8 cents to 10 cents lower, March $3.60 a bushel; oats were 4 cents to 6 cents lower, March $2.13¾ a bushel.

The decline in the prices of grains, which are used for animal feed, contributed to the weakening of hog and live cattle prices, analysts said. High slaughter figures added to the selling pressure in hogs and lower cash market prices reported at noon weighed on cattle, analysts said.

At the close on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, live cattle were .75 cent to 1.20 cents lower, February 63.10 cents a pound; feeders were .85 cent to 1.22 cents lower, March 73.65 cents a pound; hogs were .87 cent lower to .10 cent higher, February 46.30 cents a pound; pork bellies were .05 cent to .37 cent lower, February 54.45 cents pound.

Cotton prices were unchanged to 1.72 cents lower, with the contract for March delivery at 88.90 cents a pound.

Job Hunters Descend On Lincoln, Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Spurred by nationally publicized reports that the city had one of the lowest unemployment rates in the nation, job hunters from 18 states have trekked to Lincoln expecting to find work, officials say.

Most went away disappointed.

It's true that Lincoln's unemployment rate of 3.3 percent was well below the national average of about 7.5 percent.

But people mistakenly assumed that low unemployment meant plenty of jobs.

And that's not true, said Gene Landkamer, manager of the Lincoln Job Service office.

Landkamer said the influx was so noticeable that his staff surveyed seekers during the last three days of 1980 and discovered applicants from as far away as California, Georgia, Canada and New York.

Most had come simply because they had heard Lincoln had a low unemployment rate, Landkamer said. The job seekers ranged from single men to entire families who had packed their belongings and headed for Lincoln, he said.

Lincoln's reputation began with an October New York Times story that was quickly followed by a "Today" show interview with Don Pursell, director of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research.

"We are seeing a lot more people than we have job opportunities," Landkamer said. "It's not a crisis, but it's an unfortunate thing that people have to spend money to come here and be disappointed."

Films Being Made In N.C.

RALEIGH — North Carolina, a latecomer in the competition among states seeking motion picture production, will have 11 films shot on Tar Heel soil before the summer ends. The state has already been the location for 30 national TV commercials this year.

This activity, according to the state's Department of Commerce, will generate an estimated $36 million to North Carolina's economy.

Bill Arnold, special assistant to the Secretary of Commerce for Motion Pictures and Television, notes that six of the 11 films committed for production in North Caolina are Hollywood or New York-based. One will be a PBS documentary starring Red Skelton, produced by the Smithsonian Institute, to be filmed in Bailey. The other four will be films by Earl Owenby, the North Carolina filmmaker whose Shelby studios comprise the largest independent film operation outside California.

Arnold said two major Hollywood Studio films are scheduled to begin production here in the next ten weeks, but he would not comment on details until production begins.

Religious Preferences Cited

ECU News Bureau

One in five of East Carolina University's 13,000 students does not claim a preference for a particular religious denomination, according to figures released from the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Life.

Data on religious affiliation or preference is obtained from a general survey of freshmen each fall semester.

According to Rev. Daniel Earnhardt, Methodist chaplain at ECU, the high "no preference" figure should not be taken literally to mean that such a large proportion of students have no formal religious ties.

"Some students simply choose not to reveal this information," he explained.

The 20 per cent who did not claim church membership is up one per cent from last year, and sharply up from campus religious tallies in previous years.

In 1972, the "no preference" percentage was 10 per cent, and in 1963, only 3.8 per cent.

Of those students who do declare denominational preference, the largest number claim affiliation with the nation's largest Protestant denominations — Baptist and Methodist. Baptist students at ECU total 4,021 this year, and Methodists, 2,110.

The third most numerous religious group among ECU students are Roman Catholics, who total 1,234. Fourth are Presbyterians, at 867.

Mainline Protestant denominations follow: Christian (639), Episcopal (519) and Lutheran (307). Jewish students at ECU total 73.

Earnhardt said ECU plans to use a more detailed data gathering device in future, listing a larger number of religious faiths, which though small in the southeast, have included East Carolina students in previous years.

Among these are Christian Science, Free Will Baptist, Latter-Day Saints (Mormon), Friends (Quaker), Unitarian, Pentecostal Holiness and Moravian.

Data received on religious choice is furnished to campus chaplains at ECU for use in planning religious programs for university students.

Hospitals Taking Part In Cost Containment Program

The N. C. Hospital Association has announced that, as of Jan. 22, 68 of the state's hospital are taking active part in the North Carolina Voluntary Effort to curb health costs.

Fifty-six institutions within this group have been fully certified as Cost Containment Hospitals under the program, having met the VE expenditure increase limitation of approximately 12 percent for 1981.

Certified hospitals must maintain active cost containment committees, post charges where doctors may review them, and present each doctor with a copy of one of his patients' hospital bills at least once a month.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital has submitted an exception request that is pending before the VE External Review committee. Exceptions may be sought by hospitals, like Pitt, which have had major building or renovation projects previously approved by the state planning authorities.

Voluntary Effort is working with the N. C. Society of Hospital Pharmacists and the N. C. Association of Hospital Purchasing and Materials Managers to begin VE programs of their own.

Adopt-A-Pet

The Adopt-a-Pet of the week is a year-and-a-half-old male English setter, full-blooded, but not registered. Slightly gun-shy, but may be trained as a hunter by someone who has plenty of time; otherwise, will make wonderful pet. 756-0594.

Also being sought homes by the Pitt County Humane Society are the following:

—A black and white male cat and a gray female cat. Both healthy and well-cared for, strictly house pets. Owner moving to no-pets-allowed residence. 758-4406.

—A tan male one-year-old part-boxer bulldog and a black and white five-month-old cat. May be seen at the Greenville Animal Shelter.

—A black male German shepherd that would make excellent watchdog. Must be kept in a home where there are no children. May be seen at Bateman's Animal Hospital.

This column is published free of charge each Sunday as a public service. To place an animal for adoption, call Elizabeth Savage, 756-4867; Barbara Haddock, 752-9922; Carol Tyer or Mary Schulken, 752-6166.

Mathises' Home Is Passively Sun-heated

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"Glass plus mass — That's the formula for passive solar success," J. L. (Jeff) Mathis says.

And, in home building, it's the key to providing comfort and savings and a large measure of self-sufficiency for oneself in the years ahead. Mathis has all but completed building for his parents, Dr. and Mrs. James L. Mathis, near Grimesland, a house which is a showcase for energy saving and comfortable, unpretentious living.

For those who wish to heat their homes directly from the sun, passive is the best way to go, Mathis feels, especially in the relatively temperate climate of eastern North Carolina.

"What the homeowner of this area needs to worry about, just as much as heating in winter, is cooling in summer. Passively heated buildings are, because of the same qualities and components, also passively cooled buildings," he said. "The building itself is the collector and the heat storage facility."

Ideally, a passive building has large amounts of glass on the southern exposure, no openings on the north, and few on the east and west.

The Mathis house fits the bill with good southern exposure, including a south-facing attached greenhouse that is its major collector. But its north side has three windows, too, a fact that even the most adamant solar enthusiast can forgive when he sees the view to the north — lovely Chicod Creek. "I just had to have a couple of north-facing windows," Mrs. Mathis said.

Her son quickly adds, "At least they're double-glazed."

In this area, summer western sun is almost as much of a cooling liability as is the southern sun. The Mathises thus have a screened-in porch to shade the western downstairs windows and glazed door. The only west-facing upstairs window is one in a bathroom, which, like the north windows, affords a lovely view of the creek which attracted the Mathises to their beautifully secluded home site. "I'll put some kind of fiber shade over this window and the southern ones this summer," Mrs. Mathis said, "but, for now, I love the view. You should see the moon come up over that creek!"

The greenhouse has double glass doors opening into both the kitchen, which is the center of the house, and into a study on the east end. Heat built up in the greenhouse is absorbed by a masonry wall painted dark brown and radiated into the living space. The greenhouse floor is partially bricked too and the entire lower floor of the house proper is brick laid in an attractive herringbone pattern over a concrete slab. The floor thus acts as a heat sink using the earth itself as a returner of every B. T. U. stored. Good perimeter insulation of the slab makes this possible.

The kitchen is open to the roof and has a fan there to draw out excess heat in summer. The natural tendency of heated air to rise and large south-facing windows keep the upstairs rooms warm in winter. The floor of the upstairs is also the downstairs ceiling. It's made of beautifully finished pine boards not so tightly fitted that heat cannot get through. The openness of the house (kitchen to the ceiling with upper hall a balcony overlooking the kitchen) provides good air movement winter and summer, of course. A paddle fan makes for additional distribution.

There is no backup heating system other than one seldom-used wood heater in the west-side living-dining room combination and no air conditioning system.

A gourmet cook's dream kitchen opens out onto an attached greenhouse where Mrs. Mathis plans to grow salad vegetables year-round and start plants for her husband's outdoor garden.

Lard stands painted flat black and filled with water provided additional heat storage in the greenhouse and make attractive pedestals for plants.

The living-dining room has south and west-facing windows and is the room in which the only supplemental heat source of the house, a wood heater, is situated.

Today is the second and final day of a public open house at four passive and active solar homes in Greenville. See advertisement in D section of this issue.

Sunlight heats the Mathis house, thanks to a greenhouse and abundant windows on the south side.

Engagements Announced

TERRIE ANN MCDANIEL. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McDaniel Jr. of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Jeffery Brent Weisner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben E. Weisner of Statesville. The wedding will take place April 4.

CYNTHIA JANE ANDERSON. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynden Elwyn Anderson of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Kenneth Stuart Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lloyd Lee of Smithfield. A May 23 wedding is being planned.

House Passively

Sam Arnett, Pitt Community College Architectural Drafting Department Chairman, who refined the plans for the house designed by Mrs. Mathis and who acted as solar consultant, said, "This house is a fine illustration of the fact that a well-designed passive solar structure does not require mechanical heating and cooling systems. Our lending institutions would do well to take this fact into account and begin to make loans to those who want to save energy dollars, not only on maintenance, but also in the building stage."

The builder maintains the sub-freezing temperatures during several days of early January proved the energy efficiency of the house. His parents were comfortable with the one wood heater. He asserts in fact, that the temperature in the house, which is insulated to a level exceeding the E-300 standards set by Greenville Utilities Commission, is stabilizing and should never drop below 50 degrees, even in the coldest weather without any heating other than solar.

The Mathises like antique furnishings and collectibles, but have every modern convenience, including dishwasher, washing machine, clothes dryer, water pump, two refrigerators, and two freezers. (Mrs. Mathis is an avid cook and preserver of food.) They also have a area yard light and extensive attractively arranged interior track and eyeball lighting. Yet their electric bill has never run higher than $30 a month. Hot water is actively solar-heated with two panels on the roof, with gas as a backup. They cook with gas. Since they cut wood on their own property, their energy costs are minimal.

"We garden and raise our own chickens and ducks for eggs and meat," Mrs. Mathis said. "We love the measure of self-sufficiency we have and think the house Jeff has built us fits right in.

"We've lived in a number of houses during the many years of Jim's career (Dr. Mathis is chairman of the East Carolina University School of Medicine Department of Psychiatry) and rearing our five children. We've built houses before and we've renovated old farmhouses, but we've never lived in a house I like as well as this one. It's a combination, I think, of modern convenience and farmhouse livability, with good use of natural, easy-to-keep materials and features. I know it's so informal it wouldn't suit everybody, but for us, it's perfect. I just couldn't be more pleased."

Program Held On Karate

The Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its meeting at the home of Sandra Everett with Tana Hill serving as co-hostess.

A program was presented by Bill McDonald on karate as a woman's self-defense.

Plans were discussed for the chapter's annual casino night to be held Feb. 21.

Rituals were conducted for members of the sorority. A transferee ritual was held for Nora McLean and Tana Hill. The ritual of jewels ceremony was performed for Jeanne Turcotte and Georgia Potter. Ann Pfiefer participated in the pledge ritual.

Dear Abby

Tipsy Mother Threatens To Upset Wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am planning to be married next month, and what should be the happiest time in my life has turned into one of my biggest problems. The reason is my mother — or more specifically, her drinking. She has ruined every affair she's attended.

Last year at my sister's wedding, Mother:

1. Propositioned the judge who performed the ceremony.
2. Started a screaming argument with my sister.
3. Punched me out.
4. Went on a crying jag.
5. Fell on the dance floor.
6. Got mad at the people who were trying to help her, and locked herself in the coat closet.

Mother is a darling person when she's sober, but when she drinks, she's impossible! Afterward, when we tell her how she behaved, she doesn't believe us.

I'm planning my wedding half-heartedly, knowing my mother will ruin it. I love my mother, Abby, and can't have a wedding and not invite her. We are considering eloping, but if we do, we will want a reception afterward to celebrate our marriage, and if Mother comes, she will turn it into a disaster.

What should we do? We're not kids. I'm 42, the groom is 52 and Mother is 63.

SOMETHING BLUE

DEAR BLUE: Talk candidly to your mother. And tell her that only if she agrees to refrain from drinking on your wedding day will you have a wedding. If she agrees, enlist the cooperation of a few close friends and/or relatives to make sure she either keeps her promise or is removed. It's not fair that you should have to elope or forgo a wedding because your mother can't tolerate alcohol.

I recommend Al-Anon. It teaches friends and families of alcoholics how to deal with the problem. And if you really love your mother, you will view her problem as an illness and do all you can to help her.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 66-year-old widow. I've dated a number of eligible men and have had many proposals, but there is one I would really like to marry.

He is 72, but looks much younger because he keeps in shape and has a young and healthy outlook on life. He says he "loves" me, but he will not propose marriage because he had surgery 10 years ago that terminated his sex life.

I told him it didn't matter to me because I never placed very much importance on sex anyway, which is the truth.

He insists that I was only being "kind," and eventually I would feel cheated. I swore to him on a stack of Bibles that I meant what I said. How can I convince this wonderful man that I want to marry him — regardless?

AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR AUSTIN: Get a higher stack of Bibles.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My experience may help women who don't know how to handle obscene phone calls. Many years ago, when I was an attractive young woman, my telephone rang, and when I answered it, I heard a male voice speaking all this filthy language. I had never heard such dirty talk in my life! Then it occurred to me that the caller would get no thrill out of talking to a deaf old lady, so that's what I pretended to be.

I said in a very weak and shaky voice, "What did you say?"

The man then repeated his obscene message — only louder.

In the same croaking, shaky voice, I again said, "What did you say? I can't hear you."

The caller started to shout his filthy spiel again when I heard another male voice in the background say, "Hang up, you fool!"

The fool hung up and never called back.

Planning Helps Prevent Stress On Business Trips

DENVER (AP) — Less than a decade ago, few women took business trips. Today, however, women are traveling on business with increasing frequency.

The key to traveling alone without stress is good planning, suggests the Samsonite Traveler Advisory Service, which offers these tips:

—Traveling with heavy luggage can be stressful, so take only what you can handle by yourself. For short trips pack lightweight, softside luggage that permits you to carry everything you need onto a plane, train or bus. Choose a hanging garment bag for suits and dresses and a matching tote for accessories.

—For longer trips select a single, large, sturdy piece of luggage that will hold everything you'll need on your trip, and make sure it has wheels for easy maneuverability.

—Surrounding yourself with familiar, homey items can make any trip easier on you. One of the surest ways to reduce stress is to try to duplicate your techniques for coping during your everyday life.

For example, do you normally unwind after a long day by sipping a cup of warm herbal tea, while munching on chocolate cookies? If so, pack these items for late-night relaxing in your hotel room. If you like to fall asleep to soft music, slip a small radio into your suitcase. If you need your old furry robe to feel warm and cozy, it's worth the extra space it occupies.

Other special things you may wish to pack include a good book, needlework and a favorite photo.

—Take any medications you may need on your trip. This includes both prescription drugs and "over-the-counter" remedies that may not be on every counter, especially in foreign countries. Tucking in an extra pair of eyeglasses is also a good idea.

—Print only your name on your outside baggage tags or, if necessary, use your business address. You don't want someone reading your home address and going there in your absence.

—For security, choose a hotel near where you'll be doing business, and ask for escort service from the lobby to your room if it's late at night.

—Never put out the "Make up the room" sign — it's a sure tipoff to a would-be burglar that no one is in. And when you attend a convention, don't wear your badge outside of the meeting rooms — it's easy for someone to read your name and then tell the front desk that he is an expected guest of yours.

—If you need that morning cup of coffee to get going, call room service the night before and arrange for your breakfast to arrive at a designated time.

—Getting to your destination can be stressful in itself, with waits in airports for delayed flights often inevitable. If you make frequent trips, consider membership in one or more airport-based clubs where you can relax.

—For extra-long flights, consider an airline offering new sleeper seats that recline to an almost horizontal position. Also, many airline companies now have a special class catering to the business traveler.

—If you are traveling to a foreign country, call your local health department for immunization requirements and other health information.

—If you'll be handling foreign currency, a small pocket calculator can take the trouble out of annoying conversions.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Some people get very depressed about their age.

I cannot understand this. You are only as old as you feel. Everyone knows at.

Someone pointed out to me the other day that Shirley Temple became a grandmother. They are obviously talking about another Shirley Temple and not the same one I know. The one I remember who sang and danced to "On tne Good Ship Lollipop" would only be about nine or ten years old now.

Then someone said they read in the paper where the government made a mistake and sent a draft notice to Mickey Mouse at Disneyland. A spokesman said they were going to notify the government of the error and that Mickey was 52 years old now and served in World War II. It should be obvious to everyone as it is to me that they are talking about two different Mickey Mouses (Meeces? Mices?). The one I remember is a rodent and the government would have remembered if they had made a uniform for him during World War II.

People just don't stop to figure things out. My mother called the other day and said, "Quick! Look at Lucille Ball's daughter on television. She's in a new movie." I turned it on and there was this tall, beautiful woman mother thought belonged to "I Love." I told her not only was it a biological impossibility, but Lucy has red hair and this girl was a brunette.

There's a group of people out there who just can't stand it when you remain young at heart. There's always someone who will butt into a conversation and say, "Did you know Eddie Haskell, that rotten kid on 'Leave It to Beaver'? He's a policeman now."

Or someone in a beauty shop will try to frost your hair naturally with a smart remark like, "Sandra Dee is 39 years old now. I heard it from an unimpeachable source."

Don't get the wrong idea. I don't expect the world to stand perfectly still year after year. I know that your old theatres give way to parking lots and old boyfriends have faces that extend all the way back to their coat collars, but you have to keep it in perspective.

Last night my husband turned a page of the paper and said, "The Atlanta airport is finished."

"Which Atlanta?" I asked defensively.

"The one in Georgia."

"You're lying!" I said. "The Atlanta airport has been under construction for 35 years. It was all something we took for granted."

"Well, it's finished!"

People just can't stand to see me happy and well-adjusted. Next thing you know, someone will tell me Little Orphan Annie has grown eyes and sings on the New York stage!

Call These Rolls Early American

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

When early New England cooks first made their famous Boston brown bread they used cornmeal plus flour made from two grains — wheat and rye — in it. This brown bread was steamed and called for leavening other than yeast.

Later on adventurous cooks tried this combination of cornmeal plus the two kinds of flour in oven-baked bread made with yeast. Here, for example, is a recipe for yeast rolls that uses this early American combination.

INDIAN ROLLS

- 2½ to 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 envelopes dry yeast
- 2 tablespoons firmly packed light or dark brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon caraway seed
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup buttermilk
- ¾ cup water
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1¼ cups rye flour
- ¾ cup yellow cornmeal
- 1 egg, slightly beaten

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, stir together 2 cups of the all-purpose flour, the yeast, sugar, caraway, salt and soda.

In a small saucepan heat together the buttermilk, water and butter until very warm (115 to 120 degrees); add to yeast mixture; at medium speed beat for 3 minutes, scraping bowl often.

Stir together the rye flour and the cornmeal; with a wooden spoon, stir the mixture into the yeast mixture. Stir in enough additional all-purpose flour to make a moderately stiff dough. Knead on a lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic — about 10 minutes. Place in greased large bowl, turning once to coat surface of dough. Cover bowl with saran; let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until double in size — about 1½ hours. Punch down dough. Cover; let rest for 10 minutes.

Divide dough into 24 equal pieces; shape each into a 2-inch round ball; place well apart on greased cookie sheets. Cover; let rise as previously until nearly double in size — about 1 hour. Brush rolls with the beaten egg; if desired, sprinkle with extra caraway seed.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a light golden brown and a cake tester inserted in the center of a roll comes out clean — 20 to 25 minutes. Remove to wire racks to cool.

Makes 24 rolls.

SHORT TRIPS

Trips of five miles or less make up 15 percent of all the miles driven by Americans each year, according to the UNC Institute for Transportation Research and Education.

These 15 percent of all miles driven consume 30 percent of all the gasolines used by automobiles each year. Consolidate and limit your short trips, advises the Institute.

Sociologists Study Dating Behavior

ECU News Bureau

Dating behavior of university students is the subject of a new study by East Carolina University sociologists David Knox and Kenneth Wilson.

Using a random sample of 334 ECU students and a 21-question survey, the researchers discovered several interesting facts, some of which may be news to parents of college-aged students:

—Most students said they usually met potential dating partners through friends, rather than at parties or in class.

—Going out to eat, to a special event (such as a football game), to a party and then back to one of the partner's rooms is the typical dating evening.

—"Our relationship" is the most popular topic of conversation, followed by talk about studies and mutual friends. Sex was discussed less than five percent of the time.

—Half of the women surveyed and 70 percent of the men believed that first-date kisses are appropriate. By the fourth date, all but three percent of the women felt that kissing should take place.

—Almost half of the men indicated a belief that sexual intercourse is appropriate by the fifth date and 25 percent of the women agreed.

—While most students believe six or more dates should precede the partner's engaging in sex, eight percent of each sex said intercourse could "appropriately" take place with no previous dates.

The Knox-Wilson report also examined the role of alcohol and marijuana in dating behavior.

"Over half of the students said they drank alcohol on their last date with fewer reporting use of marijuana," said Knox. "One quarter of the men and 20 percent of the women said they smoked marijuana on their last date."

The study also concerned students' feelings about parental involvement in their dating-mating behavior.

"Women were more likely than men to report that their parents tried to influence those they dated," Wilson said.

"And, when asked, 'To what degree have your parents interfered with your dating relationships?' the same pattern held — women were significantly more likely to say that their parents interfered."

Although 25 percent of the students responding said they felt "negative" or "very negative" about their parents' attempts to influence or interfere in their date/mate selection, most students "regard their parents' involvement in positive terms," the report said.

Drs. Knox and Wilson plan to present the results of their campus dating study at a meeting of the Southern Sociological Society in Louisville, Ky. in March.

The April issue of the journal "Family Relations" will carry an article based on the research.

Knox is the author of several books on family life and numerous articles in magazines and professional journals. Wilson is developing a book "Sexual Harassment" with colleague Linda Kraus. He has collaborated with his wife, Christa!Reisner, also of the ECU sociology faculty on previous research projects.

Giant Prawns Grow In Nevada

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Flip on a light switch in northern Nevada and help a giant prawn grow.

It sounds like the plot of a 1950s B-movie. But ever since 1977, Dr. Robert Taylor, a veterinarian at the University of Nevada-Reno, has been experimentally growing fresh-water Malaysian prawns in water taken from cooling ponds at the Fort Churchill power plant of the Sierra Pacific Power Co.

Taylor's experiments have been successful enough for his prawns — officially named Macrobrachium rosenbergii — to be sold commercially at an Asian foods market in Reno.

The prawns can reach lengths of three feet, about two-thirds of which is claw, and are reportedly more tender, if blander, than their salt-water relations.

But Taylor isn't overly optimistic about the future of prawns in Nevada.

"I'd like to say, 'Yeah, it's going to be tremendous,' but I think it's really going to be limited," he said.

It turns out there are problems with growing the tropical crustaceans in Nevada's high desert.

For one thing, Taylor said, hot water from the power plant 40 miles southeast of Reno just isn't hot enough to keep the prawns at their favorite temperatures of 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit in an area where the thermometer drops below zero on winter nights.

For another, the prawns are a favorite snack item for ducks and fish at their power-plant ponds.

And, finally, the prawns have a disconcerting habit of eating each other.

Taylor said he'd solved the problem of predators by isolating the prawns in nets. And he can avoid cannibalism if he gives them plenty of room, raising no more than 4,000 pounds of prawns per acre each year.

The problem of warmth is more difficult.

Taylor says the prawns cannot live at temperatures below 59 degrees Fahrenheit, and the power plant effluent on which he relies for heat can't keep the ponds warm enough in the winter.

But Taylor says he hasn't given up. He thinks the answer to his problems may live in Nevada's substantial underground geothermal reserves.

Taylor hopes to be able to strike a deal with one of several Nevada companies utilizing geothermal springs in manufacturing. He figures if he can just tap into some low-cost, warm geothermal water, it might be just the thing for the prawns.

Capacity For Change Is Key

By JOHN M. LEIGHTY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — James Maas was scared to death of aging until he talked to 15 persons over 70 who are still enjoying life.

Maas, 62, an anthropologist who presently works with the San Francisco Police Department, now believes that people who age successfully are in the majority.

Among those he talked with to help him understand his own journey toward old age were an 89-year-old grandmother who works as a bookkeeper, an 85-year-old dentist who still maintains an active practice and a 72-year-old woman with an enlarged spleen who had made peace with pain and told him, "I'm not afraid to die."

"The capacity for change is important," says Maas, who is married with two children and has masters degrees in anthropology and public health and a doctorate in social gerontology.

"The people who age most successfully have a tremendous amount of flexibility."

Maas, who said he became especially fearful of dying at 57 when a close friend and teacher suffered a pain-filled death, said that he learned from letting the people he interviewed tell their own stories.

"I used to be very afraid of old age and dying. Now it's not so much fear as sadness."

Maas said he purposely chose people who had aged successfully as interview subjects. He said one thread that emerged was their zest for life, regardless of economic conditions or even health.

Many of the people he interviewed feared growing old when they reached their 30s and 40s, but then learned to accept their age and be comfortable with it.

One San Francisco attorney, age 85, still practices part-time and plays 18 holes of golf twice a week. He said he was happier now than when he was half that age. He recalled having a heart attack at age 83 and lying on the floor thinking: "My time is up. It's reasonable. I've had my life."

Maas, who lectures in anthropolgy at night at the University of San Francisco, says he found from talking to the subjects that "the way you are at 20 has a lot to do with the way you are at 80."

His experience in interviewing elderly persons resulted in a book, "Fifteen Past Seventy — Counsel From My Elders," ($3.95, Shameless Hussy Press, P.O. Box 3092, Berkeley, Calif. 94703).

Few Heed A Bible Belt Atheist

By NANCY SHULINS
Associated Press Writer

PETERSBURG, Ind. (AP) — When Lloyd Thoren talks, few listen.

Not the man with the backhoe who won't set foot on Thoren's property for any amount of money. Not the repairman who wants nothing to do with Thoren's broken refrigerator. Not the printer who refuses to do a job for Thoren because "Jesus has been too good to me."

Those who do come to the small cabin tucked into a southwest Indiana hillside often park out back, away from the watchful eyes of those neighbors and townspeople who make it a point, Thoren says, to keep an eye on the cars going in and out of his driveway.

"I really believe I'd be far better accepted if I were a leper or a murderer," says Thoren, who is neither. What he is, is an anomaly — a devout atheist living, studying and occasionally dodging bullets deep in the heart of the Bible Belt.

The weathered cabin infuriates some and embarrasses others. It houses the American Atheist Museum, believed to be the only one in the Western Hemisphere.

"It all started with a doubt," says Thoren, 55, a balding, brown-eyed, self-styled philosopher who was born in Chicago and who holds an economics degree from Northwestern University. He came here from Elmira, N.Y., as a reluctant Presbyterian in 1958.

"Way back in World War II when I was in the Navy, I would look up at the night sky and see the stars. I would think to myself, now would be a really neat time for God to manifest Himself. Nothing."

He spent some years as an agnostic but felt uncomfortable standing on middle ground. "I knew I had to be either a preacher or an atheist."

With his wife, Pamela, a former church member who grew up in nearby Washington, Ind., Thoren counsels other non-believers who make pilgrimages to the hillside to meditate in the museum's Atheorium and to weigh the price of a Godless life.

For the Thorens, the price seems high. Three years ago when the museum opened, the cabin was sprayed with bullets, and a cross was burned on the lawn. The phone rang at all hours, and abusive letters poured in. "They attacked suddenly, like timid dogs, then ran away," Thoren says. "It's hard to defend yourself against that."

Thoren doesn't advertise, and he says maybe 2,500 persons visit his museum in a year, some of them members of an atheist organization. He doesn't charge for admission.

In the fading light of a December afternoon, Thoren sweeps through the Atheorium with the grandiose air of a newly hired Metropolitan Museum tour guide showing off the works of Monet and Van Gogh.

Accompanied by an audience of one, Thoren points to time-worn paperbacks by Charles Darwin, Margaret Mead, Desmond Morris and Robert Ingersol. There are Buddhas, menorahs and homilies galore.

In one corner of the chapel-like room hangs a time chart of religions. Along a side wall, a lighted glass case follows the chart with symbols of totemism, sorcery, voodoo, Hinduism, atheism, Judaism, Buddhism, Christianity, Islam and cultism.

From 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thoren waits for visitors at the museum. His evenings are spent with his wife, their 1-year-old daughter Jenny, and the few people in the area they still consider friends.

The former owner of two private telephone companies that served four Indiana and Illinois counties, Thoren now derives his income from investments. He sold the phone companies after it became apparent his business would suffer as a result of his beliefs.

Thoren operates in a region strong on religion, but he figures that he wouldn't fare much better elsewhere.

Pike County, which has a population of about 13,000, supports 76 churches, according to a local minister's survey. Given that, Thoren believes, it should be able to support one atheist museum.

Mrs. Thoren already considered herself an atheist when the couple married five years ago. It was Lloyd Thoren's second marriage; his decision to lead a Godless life cost him his first wife and three children, he says.

After the shooting and cross-burning episodes, the Thorens tightened security. A pair of wires buried under the driveway sets off an alarm when a car pulls in. A strategically placed mirror enables them to see who's coming. And a small, electronic device that hangs by the door summons the sheriff at the touch of a button.

Despite the precautions, Mrs. Thoren worries about her daughter, who will be brought up, she says, "to think for herself."

"The thought of her going to school really worries me," she says. "I hope people are a little more tolerant by then."

If not, say the Thorens, so be it. Jenny will attend private school. They will pay the price — willingly and without regrets.

"I am, after all, a very happy man," says Thoren. "I have a contented heart."

A Second Look At Antarctica Wealth

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

McMURDO STATION, Antarctica (AP) — It is the most desolate, coldest, driest, windiest, most inaccessible end of the earth. It was the one place, everyone agreed, that all the nations could share.

But now, as man consumes more and more of the resources of his globe, he is turning new eyes to this ancient continent.

The land of penguins, seals, whales and ice is seen as a potential land of oil, coal and iron.

The haven for scientific studies and international cooperation is envisioned as a possible powderkeg of nationalistic confrontation.

Here at the main U.S. Antarctic base, scientists and officials talk of decades of tranquil research and sharing among nations. They speak of people — bound by the hostile environment, an explorer spirit and a love for science — working together through cold and hot wars.

Next to the McMurdo headquarters of the National Science Foundation, which runs U.S. Antarctica activities, is a small, flag-encircled park dedicated to Adm. Richard Evelyn Byrd and his idealistic dream.

Under a bust of Byrd, who led five Antarctic expeditions and was the first to fly over the South Pole, are his charge to the future:

"I am hopeful that Antarctica in its symbolic robe of white will shine forth as a continent of peace as nations working together there in the cause of science set an example of international cooperation."

The sentiments are noble, but can they survive in a world starved for energy and minerals?

"No one knows what the mineral potential of Antarctica is," says R. Tucker Scully, director of the U.S. State Department's Office of Oceans and Polar Affairs.

"But there certainly is more interest," Scully continues. "It's not just a scientific and geological issue anymore. It's now a political issue."

Beneath thousands of feet of ice covering 98 percent of the land, along the mountain ranges that cut the continent and offshore in the icy seas, are believed to be vast deposits of minerals and oil.

Areas in and around Antarctica geologically resemble parts of other continents where oil, gas and minerals exist in abundance. Small-scale scientific core drilling by the United States hints at possible hydrocarbon deposits offshore.

Large deposits of coal and iron have been discovered on land, as well as concentrations of chromium, nickel, cobalt, copper, gold, titanium, lead, tin, uranium and other metallic minerals.

Until recently, the harsh environment of Antarctica made exploitation economically unthinkable. This is changing with rising prices and new technology. And environmentalists and Antarctic scientists are worried.

"Many scientists are very uneasy about the minerals question," says Dr. Frank Williamson, chief scientist for the NSF's Division of Polar Programs. "Antarctica is a unique scientific resource and they don't want to have anything messing it up."

Worldwide environmental groups also are suspicious about mineral exploitation, saying that Antarctica is one of the last virtually untouched, unpolluted sanctuaries on Earth.

Groups such as the Sierra Club and the International Institute for Environment and Development, in London, see inevitable conflict between environmental and commercial interests.

They point out that there must be some exploration and studies to see what resources are in Antarctica and to assess the environmental impact of exploiting them. But they fear the results of fact-finding ultimately could encourage development.

Oil development causes the most concern because of fears about spills. Most Antarctic life, such as birds and seals, clusters along the coasts and could be greatly affected. There is evidence oil does not break up or degrade as fast in cold climates as in warmer ones, environmentalists say, and a spill could prove more damaging in Antarctica than elsewhere.

Most of what goes on in, and about, Antarctica is tied to a landmark 1959 treaty that set the continent aside as a scientific preserve.

The 12 original signatory nations, who were later joined by Poland, administer the continent jointly and have closed it off to military activity, nuclear weapons testing and radioactive waste disposal.

The treaty also sidesteps land claims, some of which overlap. Argentina, Australia, Chile, France, New Zealand, Norway, Great Britain claim territory. The other overseeing countries — Belgium, South Africa, Japan, Poland, the Soviet Union and the United States — neither make nor recognize such claims.

In the summer of 1981, these countries will meet in Buenos Aires, Argentina, and will decide whether to earnestly negotiate a minerals accord.

Scully of the U.S. State Department and others, think a pact is possible and look to the recently signed convention on protecting marine life in the Antarctic as a possible blueprint.

This accord, signed by 15 nations last September and yet to be ratified by all, allows for setting up seafood harvesting quotas and policing them by a commission representing all signers.

When the convention goes into force, a main concern will be developing a policy for harvesting krill, a shrimp-like crustacean that is the major food source for much of the life in Antarctic waters, including baleen whales.

Several nations are fishing krill as a source of human protein, and it is estimated that a sustainable take of krill could be up to 150 million tons a year, double the world fish catch today.

"The issues of sea life and minerals are substantially different because minerals are not renewable and don't move around," Scully says. "But I think the parties being able to deal with one resource issue is a good precedent for another resource issue."

Scully says there is incentive to deal with the issue before larger scale mineral exploration starts since test drilling and mining raises the same environmental and proprietary questions as actual development does.

Scully says mineral development isn't likely in the near future for various reasons, and that buys a little time. Aside from the fact that no one knows what's in and under Antarctica, the technology does not exist to get it out yet.

Industry may also determine that it's easier and cheaper to go after oil and minerals in other parts of the world that previously weren't worth the investment.

Dr. Edward Todd, director of the NSF's Polar Programs Division, says: "The economics are such that as prices rise, lower grade resources will be exploited first in other countries. This will act as a buffer for Antarctica."

Another disincentive to industry is the political uncertainty surrounding Antarctica. Todd says business is unlikely to invest large amounts of capital into wells and mines if territorial claims are uncertain.

Other experts say that even private exploration may be hampered somewhat because of the Antarctic Treaty, which requires that all research results be made public. Corporations may be reluctant to spend millions to gather information that competitors then can get free.

However, Todd and others caution that concerns about Antarctic exploitation are appropriate, if not urgent.

New testing and drilling methods are being developed rapidly, and breakthroughs quickly could change the economic picture — particularly if large deposits of oil and gas are confirmed.

"There is a long-range interest now in Antarctic resources, but things can change very rapidly these days," Todd says.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: L equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Students are given individualized instruction based on a battery of tests administered at the beginning of the clinic. The teachers are education majors working toward reading certification. Dr. Dorothy Muller and Patricia Terrell will direct the spring afternoon reading clinic.

Tuition for the reading clinic is free. Enrollment is limited to approximately fifty children with additional applications kept on file for future programs.

For more information about the reading clinic, contact the Department of Elementary Education, ECU, or call 757-6863. Applications should be made by January 30.

Custer's Kin Has Own Career

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Walter Custer makes little of the fact that he is a relative of Gen. George Armstrong Custer.

The 54-year-old Army sergeant carries the family name proudly, but isn't one to claim kinship to the famous Army general for self-fulfillment. This Custer can stand alone.

"They say I'm his 32nd cousin," said Custer, brushing his close-cropped graying dark hair with a leathery hand.

"My brother looked up our family tree and that's what he found. I'm sure he's right, but I'm just going on hearsay."

George Armstrong Custer was an 1861 graduate of West Point who distinguished himself as an Indian fighter in the Southwest and in the Dakota and Montana territories.

He made his famous "Last Stand" when about 200 members of his Seventh Cavalry were killed by Sioux Indians at the Little Big Horn River in Montana.

To Walter Custer, a soft-spoken sergeant first class stationed at the Rock Island Arsenal, the exploits of his famous cousin are exciting. But in almost 33 years as a soldier, this Custer has his own battle biographies in World War II and Vietnam.

After being drafted in October 1942 in his native Chambersburg, Pa., Custer was assigned as a gunner to the 139th Glider Infantry, a unit of the 17th Airborne Division.

He fought in the Battle of the Bulge and helped in the Rhine River crossing. His unit was also part of the drive into Luxembourg, which was the largest airborne operation ever attempted.

Custer left the Army in 1945 but returned three years later when he was laid off his railroad job in Chambersburg. He served first as a marksmanship instructor for trainees at Fort Dix, N.J., and later as a machine-gun squad leader with the First Infantry Division in Germany.

Custer was discharged again in 1953, but remained in a reserve unit while he worked as an artillery repairman at Letterkenny Army Depot in his hometown. At the same time he enrolled in a Red Cross advanced first-aid course, which proved valuable later in his career.

His reserve unit was called to active duty in May 1968 to provide aviation maintenance support in Vietnam. After taking jungle survival training at Fort Benning, Ga., Custer was sent to Bien Hoa Air Base with his unit's equipment.

As an aircraft armament sergeant, his first task was to scrounge for building materials and set up a shop to repair downed airplanes and helicopters. Once the facility was built, Custer's crew of 14 soldiers and three civilians worked night and day to keep the aircraft flying.

During that same time, Custer was ordered to set up the unit's medical evacuation team, a task he finished after teaching first-aid classes for three days.

On June 6, 1969, his teaching paid off when the Viet Cong hit the 200-man camp.

"Charley hit us with mortars and rockets, knocking down more than half of the 32 squad tents," said Custer. "They blew up the runway, a large tanker aircraft and a supply of JP-4 (aircraft fuel). Two men were killed and 18 were injured."

With shrapnel in his knee, Custer and his five-man medical team worked to save the injured.

Custer was awarded his second Bronze Star, this one with a combat "V." He also has three Army Commendation Medals and the Air Medal.

Custer returned to Vietnam two years later, but was sent home when he was found to have diabetes. After stints at Fort Carson, Colo., Fort Benning and Germany, he came to the Rock Island Arsenal as a weapons armament supervisor and instructor in the maintenance directorate.

After nearly 33 years of federal service, Custer, who lives with his wife, Dorothy, in Davenport, said he still loved the Army.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Sigmoid Exam Doesn't Mean Cancer

My doctor told me that I might need a sigmoid examination the next time I come to see him. Does this mean that he is looking for a cancer of the intestine? I have been so frightened by this that I haven't gone back to see him for six months. — Mr. P.D. Colo.

Dear Mr. D.:

I read and reread your letter and can hardly believe that a mature adult could behave as you are. I am sorry that I am chastising you. I hope by so doing I can get you and other readers to come face to face with reality rather than overwhelm yourselves with unnecessary fears and anxieties.

The fact that your doctor suggested a sigmoidoscopy simply means that he wants to rule out trouble from the lower intestinal tract. It certainly does not mean that you have a cancer.

In fact, if your doctor was at all concerned, he would have insisted that you have the sigmoid examination immediately rather than at a future date.

The sigmoid is a portion of the large intestine leading to the rectal opening. Every complete examination must include a rectal examination, expecially in patients above the age of 30.

Sometimes a special type of examination of this part of the large bowel is done with a sigmoidoscope. Through this tube the inner lining of the large bowel can be immediately examined. Smears and cultures can be made, and when necessary, small bits of tissue can be removed for biopsy or microscopic study.

I am certain that you have not done yourself any injustice by waiting as long as you have to return to your doctor. If trouble did indeed exist, there would have been some symptoms.

The real injustice you did to yourself was to surround yourself by an aura of fear about a nonexistant condition.

When patients learn to speak to their doctors they can spare themselves periods of desperation. Doctors are willing to listen and will assuage the patient's fears if they are not kept in darkness about their emotional problems.

I am inexcellent health but am plagued by a postnasal drip. Name the medicine and I've tried it. Is there any suggestion you can make? — Mr. D. R. W., La.

Dear Mr. W.:

Random use of drugs, over the counter preparations and nose drops are not the answer as you have already found out. The approach to your problem is to try to track down the basic cause. Climate, humidity, smog, pollution, exposure to fumes, tobacco and alcohol are only some of the possibilities.

Allergies and sinus infections singly or together are the most frequent causes. Milk and milk products can also be responsible.

There are now many highly sophisticated immunological studies for allergies that can help pinpoint the offending substance that might be responsible for the cause of the postnasal drip. It takes diligence but it's worth the effort.

Sheep 'Model' On Computer

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — An electronic computer model of a sheep has been set up to help Australia's $1 billion-a-year wool industry.

According to MIS week, a management information publication, researchers programmed a computer to predict a sheep's reaction to certain diets and environment, thus giving the equivalent of years of farming experience in a matter of seconds. The computer predicts for a particular type of animal and dietary condition how much protein and energy goes into meat, wool, fetus, and milk and which nutrients are most likely to stimulate performance.

Long History Of Pains Due Gout

ATLANTA (AP) — Gout was the disease that drove a Roman general to suicide, forced Henry VI to change the date of his wedding and was responsible for Martin Luther's bad temper.

It also plagued Michelangelo, Galileo, Charles Darwin, Sitting Bull and Theodore Roosevelt.

According to Dr. Frederick C. McDuffie of the Arthritis Foundation, the pain of gout is caused by a defect in body chemistry which leads to an overabundance of uric acid in the blood. Needlelike crystals of uric acid salts form in one or more joints, causing inflammation and severe pain.

Once called "the physician's shame" because so little could be done to halt its pain, gout is now controllable with proper medication. Although there is no single therapy that will permanently cure gout, modern drugs can correct abnormal body chemistry and prevent attacks.

FOR THE BIRDS

LONDON (AP) — The North Sea is "home" to more than 25 species of seabirds.

A surrounding coastline full of isolated cliffs, islands and estuaries for birds to breed and spend winters contributes to the wide selection, says the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

Winter On The Water Is A Time Of Reflection

Winter on the water is a time of reflection. Quiet and cold, time seems as immobile as the ice on the shore. The sand and trees become the domain of ducks, deer, and other wildlife too shy to appear during the warmer seasons.

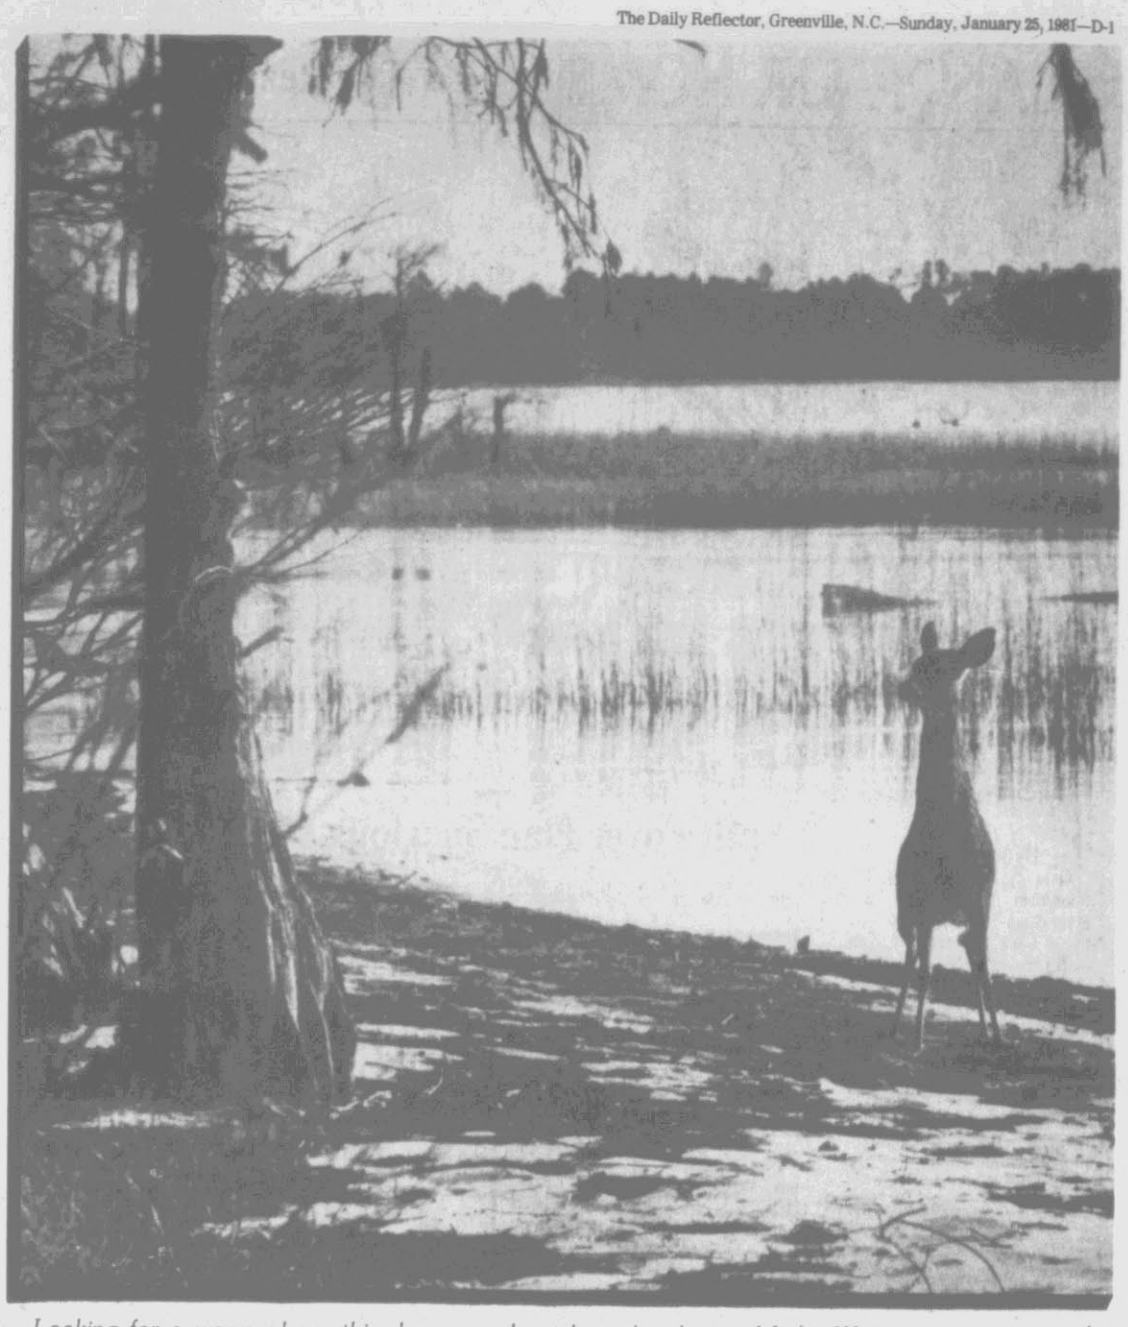
The human visitor seems like an intruder. His footsteps echo loudly in comparison to the softer-padded inhabitants of the community. As twigs snap, birds flutter further into the brush and squirrels scurry away, eyeing the walker cautiously.

The water itself curls curiously up to the bank or ripples possessively around an intruding boat. Otherwise it is still, protecting the winter life beneath. Below the surface, an aquatic world swirls on.

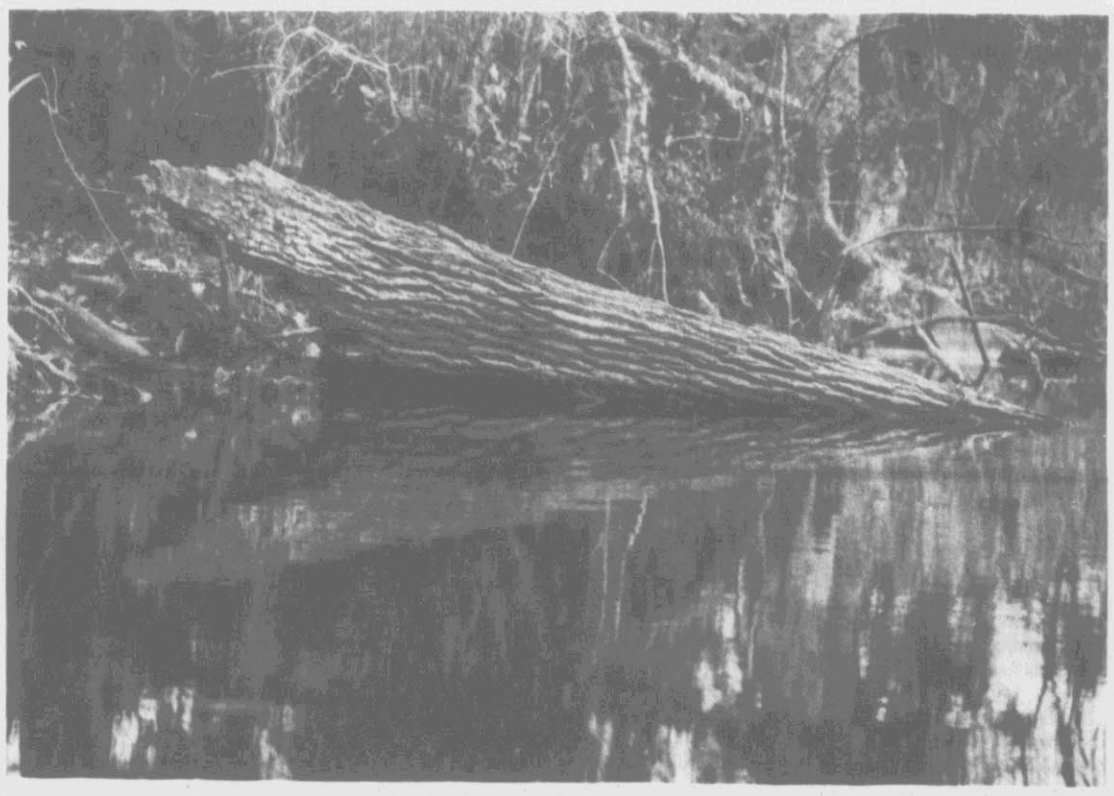
Deep in the swamps that feed the lakes and rivers of eastern North Carolina, species of wildlife threatened by man's encroachment make tentative appearances. Like a giant ghost of the swamp, the piliated woodpecker flees from cypress to cypress, voicing the scream that earned him the nickname "wet hen."

Occasionally, a well-disguised bobcat slips into view, padding silently on cold feet. He blends, spots and all, soundlessly into the scenery.

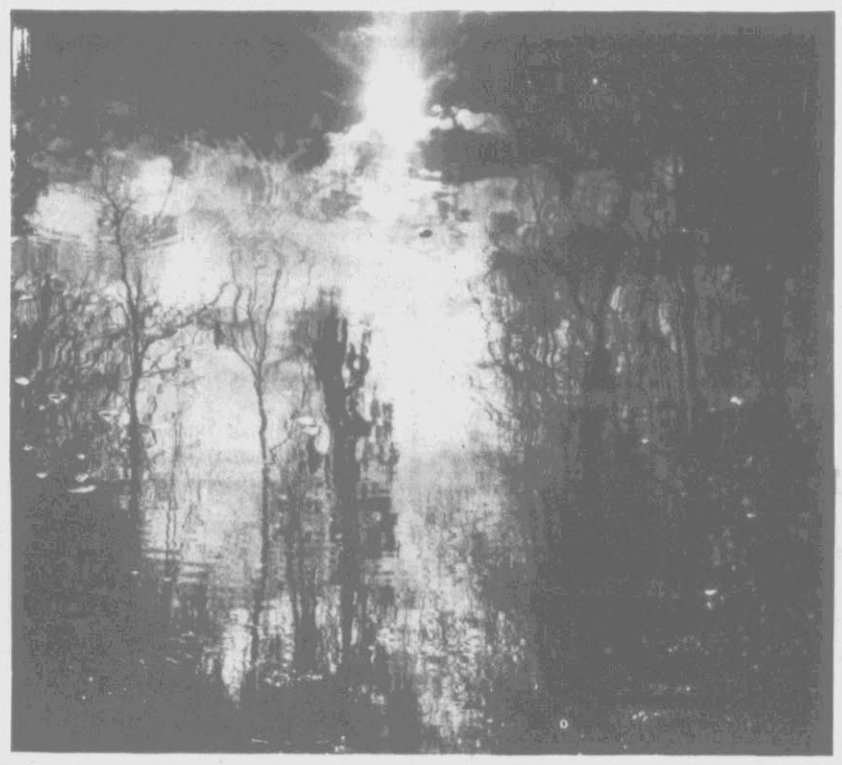
Winter on the water is a time to think, to find a shred of sunlight, right a chair overturned by the wind, and absorb the abandon of a crumbling boathouse. Time, passing slowly, provides ample opportunity to be soothed by the quiet, the brisk cold, and a glowing sunset. Slip into the winter world of water...



Looking for a warm place, this doe meanders along the shore of Lake Waccamaw, enjoying the freedom the winter solitude provides her. The cold months are good ones for glimpsing elusive wildlife.



An old cypress log casts its reflection into the creek below. Winter is a time of stillness on the water.



Deep in the swamps that feed the lakes and rivers of eastern North Carolina, distorted images reflect the passing of time. Ice cracks under the nudging of a boat bow, leaving a cold, broken trail.

A deserted boathouse adds to the feeling of winter isolation. The wood, tempered by years of harse weather, boldly boasts grain and knotholes. The swing and the chair provide spots for quiet contemplation while watching a frosty sunset.

PLAN YOUR HOME

Split Foyer Plan Spacious, Well-Zoned

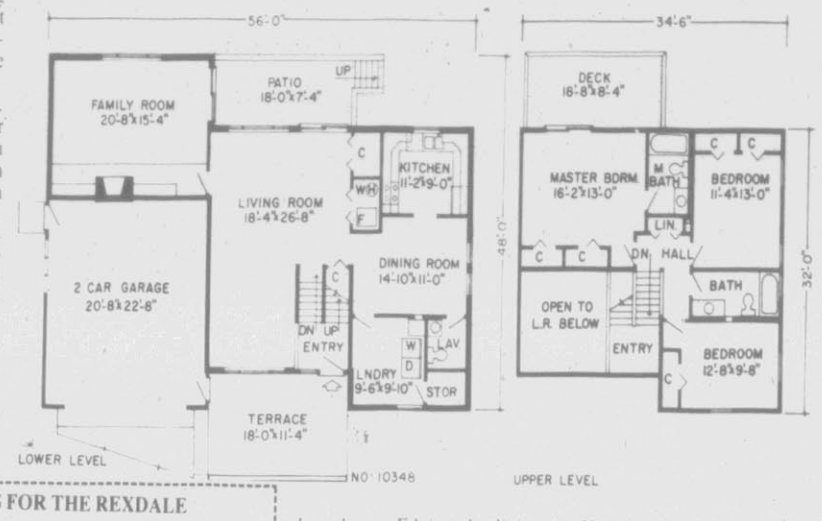
By Jerry Bishop

Using a space-maximizing floor plan, the Rexdale, a split foyer deisgn, creates areas of activity, work, and quiet that are marks of a well-zoned home.

Included are an expansive, out-of-the-way family room for informal, even noisy activity, an impressive two story living room that overlooks the patio, and an upper level devoted to bedrooms.

The exterior is unique and contemporary, fronted by a partially roofed terrace that allows access to the foyer or to the two-car garage.

Down from the foyer is the main activity level of the home. This area is dominated by the 26-ft. two-story living room which spans the width of the home and opens to the patio via sliding glass doors. Edging the living area are closets for coats, utilities, and storage.



The adjacent family room, also favored with sliding glass doors to the patio, is set to the rear of the garage and zoned for informality. Its location, size, and woodburning fireplace make it ideal for parties and everyday use alike.

Completing the lower level is the kitchen/dining complex at right of the living room. This area is functional and takes in the U-shaped kitchen, central dining room, laundry, storage, and half bath.

Upstairs, the plan groups three large bedrooms, hall linen closet, and two full baths. Notable is the 16-ft. master bedroom, furnished with two closets and full bath. Sliding glass doors connect the room to the outdoor deck, providing parents with a private spot for conversation or star-gazing.

The double garage is accessible from three sides for convenience.

Something Is New Every Year For The Tabletop

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

To most Americans, the image of Atlantic City summons to mind cool ocean breezes, the boardwalk and salt water taffy.

But to the manufacturers and retailers of tableware and giftware, Atlantic City means January winds and a chance to check out what's new for the table top at the industry's annual china and glass market at Convention Hall.

At the recently concluded show, thousands of buyers viewed the wares of almost 2,000 exhibitors from the U.S. and a number of foreign countries. The consensus among manufacturers was that the economic uncertainties have got both consumers and retailers in a conservative frame of mind.

As a consequence, the manufacturers concentrated on providing safe, attractive choices among traditionally popular styles. As one put it, this was not the market to be too adventurous.

In terms of design, there were several major trends, including: a continued emphasis on formal china patterns; the introduction of many charming, small-figured patterns; a large number of blue and white china combinations; and a continuation of the use of luscious, ice-cream pastels in dinnerware, table linens, giftwares and accessories.

While it may sometimes appear that the latest, most outrageous designs are all anyone ever talks about at a market, the china and glass market is often the exception to the rule.

Tableware sales are dominated by the bridal business which is said to account for at least half of all sales. "And brides are not usually in the mood to take a chance on something outrageous," noted James A. De Prez, vice president and merchandise manager of Noritake Co. Inc., a manufacturer of dinnerware.

According to De Prez, brides look for tried and true patterns they think they can live with for the rest of their lives. This conservative attitude is particularly strong today, with prices considerably higher than in the past. For many brides, the first set of china will be the only set, he added.

Although there are thousands of china patterns available at any given time, and hundreds of new ones introduced each year, only about 50 patterns account for as much as three-fifths of the sales, said De Prez.

The basic conservatism of the china market was also described by Francis J. Dallahan, vice president of marketing for Lenox china and crystal.

Dallahan noted that nowadays the natural state of affairs is even stronger than usual.

"There is a strong and continuing return to quality and to traditional design," he said, adding that "Lenox's best selling pattern since 1975, for example, is one introduced in 1918, and reintroduced in 1973.

"Even in casual dinnerware, Lenox's sales indicate a distinct trend toward fine china-like styles," he said.

If traditional, formal floral patterns were in the majority, there was also a strong showing of small, countrified patterns in which tiny flowers or geometric patterns were scattered all over the plate or appeared only on the rim. The small figures were sometimes in muted tones and sometimes in bright primary colors. The feeling was either that of a French country farmhouse or of a simple American country setting.

This dinnerware style is part of the larger popularity of American country furnishings. Virtually every aspect of the home-furnishings industry is now on board the country bandwagon. And an obvious offshoot of the country craze is the large number of chicken and rooster motifs seen on dinnerware, cookware and table accessories.

With tradition in ascendancy, what about modern design? At this market, it appeared to be rather left out, although several manufacturers, ever hopeful, said they could predict a brighter future for contemporary design.

Jay Block, of Block China, a firm noted for its interest in innovation, said that while it was harder to be an innovator today than it used to be, since costs had escalated and consumers had gotten more conservative, it was still possible.

Block introduced five primary-color geometric designs. There were additional isolated examples of well-thought-out modern design. A collection of cooking and serving pieces by Corning was streamlined and unusual. The cookware goes from freezer to oven, to stovetop to microwave oven and comes to the table to rest on its own specially-made heat-absorbent placemat.

A trend that appears to combine both traditional and modern was the use of pastel colors. Ice-cream pink, sea-foam green, lavender and baby blue showed up on everything from vases, glasses and barware to table linens, and plastic waste baskets.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — In the spring, we expect to paint the outside of our house. Most of the exterior is very old brick that has become discolored and otherwise seedy in appearance. We want to paint the brick and would like to use a latex paint. Will this be all right or should we use an oil-based paint?

A. — The latex paint — be sure it is meant for exterior masonry use — is preferable because the alkali in the mortar often attacks oil paint. You will need at least two coats.

Q. — We have read that trim paint is best for painting the ornamented trim around outside doors and windows. However, we intend to paint the trim the same color as the body of the house. Won't ordinary house paint "take" on the trim?

A. — Go ahead and use the house paint. It might make a little difference, but not that much. Also, it will be a lot easier.

Q. — We will be making a redwood deck at the back of our house in a few months. We intend to coat it with a clear water repellent. Does it need more than one coat?

A. — Two coats will do a better job and last longer. If you want to handle the project in a professional manner, apply one coat to the wood before it is assembled and one coat to whatever parts can be reached after the deck is completed. That will give extra protection to the wood most exposed to the elements.

Q. — About a year ago, I painted the outside of our house with an oil paint. While the paint has not worn off, it has a kind of leathery look, as though the paint is a little wrinkled. What causes this?

A. — The usual cause is too heavy an application of paint. Did you put on one extra-heavy coat of paint rather than two lighter coats?

Q. — Some years ago I finished our attic with a type of wall called insulation board. It has never been painted and now we want to do so. Can we use latex paint?

A. — Yes, but since what was called insulation board is made of a material that is porous, be sure to apply a primer-sealer first. This will serve as a good base for the decorative top coat of latex paint. When you buy the paint, tell the dealer to give you the correct primer-sealer for that kind of paint.

Extension Service Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. I did not take a soil sample from my vegetable garden when the soil was dry enough to plow last fall. Is there any way I can take a soil sample before the soil dries enough to plow in the spring? (D.P., Fayetteville)

A. Collect the soil sample as you normally would and put it on a porch or similar place that will allow it to dry naturally. When the soil crumbles easily after being pressed into a ball in the palm of your hand, it is dry enough to mail to the soil testing lab. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. How far from the house should shrubs be planted? (G.C., Elm City)

A. Study the ultimate size of your shrubs — their size at maturity; or the size to which you will keep them pruned. A general rule for most shrubs is to space them at least six feet from the wall. This would include boxwoods, hollies, and arborvitae. Smaller-growing shrubs, such as dwarf Chinese holly, may be placed as close as three to four feet from the house. In some contemporary landscape designs, larger-growing shrubs are placed as near as two feet, but are kept sheared for a special effect. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

Q. I would like to plant a garden this spring in an area that is infested with bermudagrass. Is there anything I can do to get rid of the bermudagrass? (R.W., Tarboro)

A. No, not in time to plant a garden this spring. Forget about planting a garden in this location in 1981 and concentrate on killing the bermudagrass. You can do this by spraying the bermudagrass about Aug. 1 with a herbicide called Roundup. Your site should be ready for planting vegetables in 1982. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. What is the best way to protect a gardenia from cold weather? (R.D., Hickory)

A. The gardenia is very sensitive to cold weather and it is not recommended for the Hickory area. You might grow a gardenia as a container plant in spring and summer and move it inside when the temperature drops. You can help a gardenia survive outside by locating it next to other shrubs or the house for protection and keeping it well watered. High winds and warm winter sun on cold days cause a high rate of water transpiration. If the ground is frozen, the roots cannot take up water. The plant then pulls water out of living cells and the results are leaves which turn brown and fall off. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

Ownership 'Emotional'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Both the desire for home ownership and the emotional values of the home remain very strong among married women aged 18 to 29, although ever increasing numbers of them are taking on outside jobs.

Recent research shows 90 percent of married women in that age group say the home plays as big — or a bigger — part in their lives as it did in their mothers. That figure represents a 2 percent increase over seven years ago.

The high cost of home ownership is spurring rapid growth in do-it-yourself activities, according to a presentation at the 70th annual meeting of the National Retail Merchants Association.

The presentation by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc., indicated Americans will spend an estimated $19 billion on do-it-yourself tools and supplies this year, for 139 million home improvement projects ranging from fixing a leaky faucet to adding a room.

Clothing Costs Run $23 Higher

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Americans spent an estimated $473 per person on clothing and shoes last year, up $23 from 1979.

Ninety-four percent of that increase was due to higher clothing prices, not increased consumer buying, says Kathy Prochaska Cue, a family economics specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The figures were released during the annual 1981 Agricultural Outlook Conference in Washington, D.C., Mrs. Prochaska Cue said. She said the largest increase, 17.4 percent, was for sewing materials, notions, jewelry and luggage. Infants' and toddlers' wear and men's shorts increased 9.6 percent each, she said, and footwear, 8.2 percent.

The trend toward one-person households and other non-traditional family groupings creates new needs for furnishings, appliances and other equipment. More women in the work force is increasing the demand for labor saving appliances and products — everything from self-cleaning ovens to no-iron shirts.

Passive Solar Fact Sheet

Q. What is a Passive solar home?
A. A home that generates most of its heating and cooling needs from its design and construction.

Q. Does that mean a lot of gadgets, collectors, pumps & motors?
A. No, passive means basically no machinery, no moving parts, no warranty, no service calls.

Q. How do you generate energy with no machinery?
A. Site orientation-setting a house in a manner that allows the sun to penetrate south facing glass in a selected manner in the winter for heat.

Q. What about the summer?
A. Incorporate specific design characteristics to shade or shield the same area from the sun's rays.

Q. How do you store the energy?
A. In mass. Mass is interior building material or added objects that can store heat in winter and cool in summer. The most common being brick, concrete, block or containers of water.

Q. This adds up to a lot of expense, doesn't it?
A. Passive homes need not cost any more than conventional homes.

Q. What about resale value?
A. A house with almost no heat bills? What do you think?

Pets Prove Luxury Item

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

It's not the initial cost, but the upkeep, that can make a pet expensive.

The monthly food bill for a 38-pound dog averages $8.25 to $20, depending on the type of food. The dog itself may be an $8-$40 canine from an animal shelter or an American Kennel Club pure-bred costing an average of $150-$400.

A 12-pound cat, $7-$25 at a shelter or $150-$250 for a Cat Fanciers Association pure-bred, eats $2.50 to $8.25 per month, the price again depending on type of food.

The feeding figures were supplied by pet food manufacturers for the Pet Information Bureau, which is funded by the American Pet Products Manufacturers Association.

For people considering acquiring a pet, the bureau has obtained comparative cost and upkeep figures from pet food manufacturers, the American Veterinary Medical Association, retail pet stores nationwide and ASPCA and Bide-A-Wee animal shelters. All prices are national averages as of December, 1980. The medical costs are approximate and include only regular check-ups and shots, not emergency care.

Here are the costs the bureau lists:

—For dogs, in addition to food previously mentioned: A license, about $8, but this cost varies from state to state; other basic equipment such as collar, leash, brush, flea collar, food bowl, chew toy and vitamins, $25, plus $25 a year for regular medical care, as previously noted.

—Cats: $10 for litterbox and flea collar; about $3.60 a month for litter; $3 for an identification tag for outdoor cats; $25 a year for regular medical care and shots.

—Birds: $8 and up for parakeets, $60-$100 for small parrots. A cage runs $20-$40; the initial purchase of gravel, seed, and water containers and a toy, $4, plus about one box a month of gravel, about 89 cents; food per month, less than $1.75; regular medical costs, zero.

—Fish: the cheapest to buy and maintain are freshwater species. Saltwater are the most expensive and tropicals in between. Electricity to run an aquarium pump is about the same for all three: $2.19 per year in most areas of the country, but about $4.38 in New York City, whose kilowatt hour rate is about double that of other areas.

Prices for freshwater fish range from about 25 cents for goldfish to $1.25 for bettas. A complete aquarium setup for freshwater specis is $25-$30. One or two goldfish can survive for a while in an inexpensive glass bowl, but their health and beauty will be improved in an aquarium, the bureau says. Monthly food costs, less than 17 cents per fish; $10 annually for water and filter maintenance supplies.

Tropicals: 40-80 cents per fish for the average; $20-$30 for a complete aquarium set-up, including a 10-gallon tank, pump, filter, gravel and heater. Food, $1.75 per month for 10 fish.

Saltwater fish: $4-$6 per fish, but as high as $10 for some; aquarium set-up, including 20-gallon tank, pump, filter, gravel, heater and water-testing kit, $60-$100; monthly food costs, $1.75 for 10 fish; $20-$30 a year for water and filter maintenance supplies.

—Compared with other pets, reptiles and rodents are fairly cheap in both purchase price and maintenance. With one exception: a boa will set you back about $40, the bureau found. But no regular medical costs.

Other reptile prices range from $4 for a garter snake to $10 for a lizard. An aquarium tank, $5-$20. Gravel, tree branches, a water dish and a rough-surfaced large rock, another $10. Food per month, $1.75-$3.75 for snakes, $4.25 for lizards.

As for rodents, figure on $5 for a hamster to $10-$14 per guinea pig. Aquarium tank or cage, $5-$15; about $3.50 for a gravity-flow water bottle and a food dish, $5 for an exercise wheel for hamsters and about $26 a year for cedar shavings. Monthly food bills, less than $3 per rodent.

Despite the maintenance costs, a recent market study shows ownership of dogs and cats is up, while that of birds and fish is down, although the latter pets usually are cheaper to buy and maintain.

The research by a Cleveland-based business information and market research firm showed bird and fish ownership declining because those pets are thought of as luxuries or discretionary hobbies, while dogs and cats are more like members of the family.

The study by Predicasts, Inc. indicated the shift away from urban areas to roomier homes in suburban and rural areas was making dog and cat ownership more attractive, says Debra K. Potts, the research organization's communications director.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We nearly came to blows the other night as a result of this auction:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠	3 ♡	Dble.
Rdble.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The carnage was frightful—we were vulnerable. My partner, a Life Master, contended that the redouble was for takeout. He called it a "SOS rescue" bid requiring me to bid the better of the two unbid suits. I had never heard of this. Do I owe him an apology, or should I ask him to pay my losses?
—L. Allen, West Palm Beach, Fla.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize)

A.—Many years ago some experts introduced the "SOS Redouble" into the game, and unwary partners have been paying for it ever since! It has been accepted and is quite valuable in certain cases, but I have never heard of it being used after partner has made a preemptive bid.

I find it hard to construct a hand where North would pass in first seat and then be prepared to play at a high level in a suit where partner might hold no more than a singleton! If West's action was for penalties, there seems to be no logical meaning for the redouble. To satisfy myself, I polled six experts on the meaning of a redouble in the sequence you described. The vote was: Doesn't exist -4; Misheard the bidding -1; Don't ask me -1.

Let's analyze why we don't think the redouble can be for takeout. If North has twelve cards in the unbid suits, he must assume that his partner has some club length—West's double suggests shortness in the suit bid by his partner. Therefore, North should play his partner for ten or eleven cards in hearts and clubs. Thus, there is no reason to suppose that either of North's suits will provide a safer haven than hearts, a suit in which South is known to hold seven cards, and when the level might be higher.

Above all, your tragedy highlights something I have always stressed; Don't introduce a conventional bid into the auction unless you have fully discussed it with your partner. If you do, the catastrophe you will inevitably suffer will be on your head.

Q. In a game of bridge the other night, we had an argument. I claimed my bid was "Goren," and my partner retorted that no one plays Goren anymore—everyone plays Standard American. Are you a figment of our imagination?—R. Chorlton, Stamford, Conn.

A.—Not at all. To say the least, I am quite substantial.

I never claimed to have invented a "System." I merely described methods that proved successful with millions of players. I have found that, no matter where I go, I can always fit into a game because everywhere there are players who play the way I do. The methods I described in my books are sometimes referred to as "Goren."

"Standard American" is a very nebulous term. Did your partner mean "Eastern Standard," "Western Standard," "Bridge World Standard," "Standard International" or what? There are almost as many versions of "standard" Americans as there are cards in the pack!

Technology Is Changing In Libraries

CHICAGO (AP) — David O'Keefe is a librarian in Rome, Ga. What does he have in common with Hollywood's movie moguls? They're both into television — in a big way.

O'Keefe heads a staff of 10 in Rome's tri-county library video department and together they produce 60 hours of programming a week for two independently owned local cable-television stations. The library group does everything from talk to fitness shows, TV series to individual interviews. They tape children's story hours and do weekly segments on business and finance.

"The library is the point through which all or any information should pass," says O'Keefe. "Television is a natural conduit for retrieving and disseminating information to a vast audience."

O'Keefe's operation is just one example of how libraries are using new technology to give greater numbers of Americans easy access to information.

Libraries across the country are on top of the video revolution. For instance, 143 suburban libraries in Chicago support a clearinghouse for lending videocassettes to patrons. More than 2,300 cassettes were borrowed last year and the waiting list for "Saturday Night Fever" is four years long.

"The move to high-tech is the library professional's response to the growing problem of information storage and retrieval," explains Robert Wedgeworth, executive director of the American Library Association.

"When we can store 54,000 pages on one side of a slender videodisc, then we're able to give the public countless times more information because we have the room to store it," says Wedgeworth.

Computers play an important role in this library technology package as well, according to Wedgeworth. Many libraries have not only added computers to their information services, but have also placed their own accounting, circulation and acquisition processes on computer. Whether callers want to know about grocery prices or librarians want to order three dozen new titles, computers can handle the job.

At the Menlo Park, Calif., library, adults and children learn to program microcomputers similar to those many people are expected to install at home during the '80s. For those who have home computers, this programming instruction enables them to balance their checkbooks, plan vacations and help children improve their grammar.

With these developments just around the corner, Wedgeworth says that computer literacy has become a goal for many libraries, particularly school media centers.

In Park Ridge, Ill., junior-high students write game programs for microcomputers and give them to elementary kids to play on library machines. Some media-center specialists say that computer literacy will equal reading ability in importance, Wedgeworth notes.

"I like to think of the new technology as having the same relationship to information that the jet plane has to travel," says Wedgeworth.

Eagles & Raiders Vie For Super Bowl Crown

SUPER BOWL XV

Even with all its festival trappings and media hype, the Super Bowl is still basically a football game. But this year's edition of the annual event could turn out to be one of the best games in the history of the championship clash. The reason for this is that neither participating team was expected to wind up in the New Orleans Superdome, Sunday, Jan. 25. (NBC will telecast Super Bowl XV, beginning at 5:55 p.m.).

Philadelphia has never played in a Super Bowl, and the last time they won a championship game was in 1960, when they defeated the Green Bay Packers.

Although Oakland may be more experienced when it comes to playing in the Super Bowl, the past season defies explanation, as far as they are concerned. They traded one of the all-time great quarterbacks of the 1970s, Ken Stabler, to the Houston Oilers, as well as All-Pro tight end Dave Casper. They got Dan Pastorini and Kenny King in the deal, then everyone from fans to general manager griped about the 'bad trade.'

Things went from bad to worse when Pastorini broke his leg early in the season, and the Raiders were forced to bank on a 'has-been' named Jim Plunkett. But Plunkett brought fans to their feet as he led the team to victory in 12 of the next 13 games, and they wound up the winners of the AFC West Division.

Philadelphia started the year as one of the NFC East favorities. They went through the first 13 games of the season with only one loss, then fell on hard times when they lost two out of the next four. But they still wound up in the NFC championship game and are now Super Bowl-bound.

Who do the Eagles have to thank for their trip to the Crescent City? Only themselves. There were no easy games along the way, and their QB, Ron Jaworski, admits he's still learning. Yet he consistently directed a brilliant offense that featured a tight end passing attack.

To go along with this passing attack are two fine runners, Wilbert Montgomery and Leroy Harris. There's also small, but determined, Louis Giammona.

Both teams are outstanding, but somebody's got to lose in the Super Bowl. That's the name of the game. Just to know that they've won the right to play in America's most publicized game should be a great consolation, however.

THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL Conference Champion Philadelphia Eagles will meet the American Football Conference Champion Oakland Raiders in Super Bowl XV. This climax to the National Football League season will be televised Sunday, Jan. 25 at 5:55 p.m. live from the Superdome in New Orleans on NBC-TV.

Christie's classic tale airs on ABC

The film version of Agatha Christie's classic murder mystery, "Murder on the Orient Express," returns to TV as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Jan. 25 (9 p.m.). The smash hit, released in 1974, received six Academy Award nominations and won an Oscar for Ingrid Bergman as Best Supporting Actress.

Others playing key roles in the dazzling detective thriller include Albert Finney as the indomitable, if eccentric sleuth, Hercule Poirot; Lauren Bacall as a tough American divorcee; Wendy Hiller was a wizened Russian countess traveling with her dour German maid, Rachel Roberts; Sean Connery and Vanessa Redgrave as a bristly British officer and his companion; Michael York and Jacqueline Bisset as handsome Hungarian aristocrats, and Richard Widmark as a crusty American businessman attended by valet John Gielgud and secretary Anthony Perkins. Bergman portrays a repressed missionary.

Robinson Directs

Chris Robinson, who had already been signed to star in "The Captives," has now agreed to direct the movie, which will be filmed next fall in New York City and Quebec.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Who were the main characters on "Sky King," and when was the series on the air? C. HUGHSON, FT. BRAGG, N.C.

A: Kirby Grant starred in the title role, Gloria Winters was cast as his niece, Penny, and Ron Haggerty played her brother, Clipper. Ewing Mitchell appeared now and then as the sheriff. The only one who'd had previous experience with a series was Gloria, who was Babs on "The Life of Riley." "Sky King" aired from 1952 to 1966, then went into syndication.

Q: What has happened to David Hubbard? I haven't seen him on any show since "James at 15/16." L. CREWS, HENDERSON, N.C.

A: David's guested on several series since 'James' was cancelled. He's also made a number of telefilms — the most recent one was "Coach of the Year," that starred Bob Conrad. I hope you didn't miss it!

Q: Where and when was Sophia Loren born? S.B., LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: The beautiful actress was born Sofia Villani Scicolone, Sept. 20, 1932, in Naples, Italy. For more information, I suggest that you read her biography by Donald Zee, simply titled "Sophia."

Q: Who's playing Kelly Nelson on "The Guiding Light"? S. TYSON, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: He's John Wesley Shipp, who has a hot 'n' heavy off-camera romance sizzling with castmate Marsha Clark (she plays Hilary Bauer). "My scenes with Marsha are better than with anyone else, and people notice the chemistry," says John. Don't be surprise if the two wind up making that all-important trek down the aisle!

Q: Was Lucille Ball married to Desi Arnaz when "I Love Lucy" was being filmed? R. WRIGHT, MAIDEN, N.C.

A: "I Love Lucy" premiered on CBS in 1951, and the weekly series stopped production in 1957, despite the fact that it was still the number two show in all of television. Lucille and Desi officially ended their marriage in 1960, but had been waging 'open warfare' for several years prior to the final break.

Q: Could you tell me something about John Mengatti, who plays Nick on "The White Shadow"? R. BERRIER, MT. AIRY, N.C.

A: John was a streetwise gang member while attending junior high in New York's West Harlem. But the death of his gang leader, along with some sound advice from his mom, caused him to press for a higher education. He then became an outstanding gymnast, won a full scholarship to NYU and graduated in 1977. John fits right in the series' cast, but admits he's never played basketball. He's single and lives in Los Angeles.

Gal Has Spunk!

Isabel Sanford, who plays Louise on "The Jeffersons," suffered from high blood pressure while filming a segment of the show recently, and a doctor was quickly summoned to the set. But the determined actress insisted on going on with a taping that evening.

Use Of LSD Is Probed

"Thornwell," a telefilm focusing on the United States Army's use of the hallucinogen, LSD, on an enlisted man and his subsequent years of mental anguish, will air on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Jan. 28 (9-11 p.m.).

Glenn Turman stars as the G.I., James Thornwell, and Vincent Gardenia portrays Traeger, a special agent sent in by the Army to convince Thornwell to admit to the theft of pertinent documents.

This film, documented by nearly 1,000 pages of Army records obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, was inspired by a segment of "60 Minutes," which first brought the real James Thornwell's story to national attention.

The executive producer and director of "Thornwell," Harry Moses, also produced the original "60 Minutes" segment.

Last month, Congress voted to compensate Thornwell for damages inflicted by the Army. Thornwell will be awarded $625,000, the largest amount of money Congress has ever awarded a single individual.

Serving in the Army communications center in Orleans, France, in 1961, James Thornwell was singled out for the controversial treatment when he was accused — without evidence — of stealing highly secret documents from the Army files.

Thornwell initially resisted all efforts to force him to confess to the crime. After signing a series of bogus confessions, under extreme duress, he nonetheless continued to be interrogated, enduring six weeks of solitary confinement in a great tower and a staged threat to his life.

Glynn Turman met the real James Thornwell during the filming of the movie and was very impressed with the man. "I was delighted when I discovered he was enthusiastic about the script, too," says the actor.

We don't question their actions, and yet this is the only country where we are taught and actually encouraged to do just that. I would hope this film encourages the public to question all facets of our government. It's our right, and we're negligent if we don't exercise it!"

The Muddy Land

While filming a recent segment of "The Love Boat," Lillian Gish, legendary lady of the silent screen, enthralled the cast and crew with her tales of Hollywood as she knew it in the early 1900s. Especially interesting were her comments on how Los Angeles and Hollywood have changed over the years.

Gish, who has a finely developed sense of humor, related the following:

"One day my mother, my sister, Dorothy, and I were driving around Los Angeles. Mother wanted me to see a piece of land that was for sale for $500. I looked at it in horror, as it was so muddy. I told my mother, 'Look at all that mud. I work hard for my money and I'm not going to buy mud.' That muddy land for sale for $500 is now known as the Sunset Strip."

Is In Production

Sword and sorcery will come to NBC-TV via "The Archer," a two-hour fantasy-adventure drama now in production. Lane Caudell and George Kennedy topline the cast, which features wandering warriors, beautiful women in distress, wizardry, and bizarre and fantastic creatures.

Caudell plays the central character, Toran of Malveel, a young romantic hero forced to flee his home after the assassination of his father, Brakus, King of Malveel.

Others appearing in the film are Victor Campos as Slant, the Drushian; Kabir Bedi as Gar, the Draikian; and Belinda Bauer as Estra, the beautiful Earth goddess.

HOLLYWOOD — Friends of LYNN and MICHAEL LANDON are beaming over the couple's reconciliation and are hoping they'll be able to work out their problems. Apparently Mike has called it 'quits' with CINDY CLERICO, the blonde make-up artist he found so irresistible last summer.

Among the first friends to contact LIZA MINNELLI following her recent miscarriage were SOPHIA LOREN and AUDREY HEPBURN, who've been through the same sad ordeal several times themselves.

There's a flock of celebrities planning to fly to Hawaii to guest in segments of CBS-TV's new hit show, "MAGNUM, P.I." Already basking in the sun between takes is SCATMAN CROTHERS.

Next on the list are JOSE FERRER and JUNE LOCKHART, and both will be taking off-spring with them. Jose will play a 1981 Supreme Court nominee and his son, MIGUEL, is to appear as the same character in a 1941 flashback. June, who's also in the segment as a governor's wife, will be portrayed in the flashback by her daughter, ANNE.

JAMIE FARR'S busy making plans — just in case this is the last season for "M*A*S*H." "I'm seriously thinking about working up a nightclub act," says Jamie, "and I'd also like to do a show on Broadway in which I play Durante."

Another star who's thinking about taking a shot at a singing career is TV's most celebrated 'gunmoll' — MARY 'KRISTIN' CROSBY — who pulled the trigger on 'J.R.' She's taking singing lessons and has been huddling with record company execs as well as several producers of musical comedies.

BOB GINTY and FRANCINE TUCKER met when they were both appearing on "THE PAPER CHASE." It wasn't long before their on-camera love scenes became the real thing, and they were married about a year ago. Now they're the proud parents of a little boy.

There's going to be a new addition in the McNICHOL household, too, and KRISTY and JIMMY are delighted! Their mom, CAROLLYNE, is planning to adopt a five-month-old infant named GINGER.

Even though RALPH WAITE vows that he'll not return to his role as 'Pa' in "THE WALTONS," the series' writers have cleverly left the door open, just in case he changes his mind!

In spite of what they say, ALI McGRAW and BILL HUDSON (GOLDIE HAWN'S 'ex') only have eyes for each other.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

A touch of home for the military.

FOR JAMES BARRETT, president, United Service Organizations (U.S.O.)

Why is the U.S.O. still in operation; what are its goals? Who runs the organization? — L.M., Hobart, Ind.

● There are still over two million young servicemen and women and their three million dependents away from home in need of U.S.O. services. U.S.O., celebrating its 40th anniversary, is there in over 125 locations worldwide to help as the problem solver. In the 80's, it will continue to expand its many varied family programs, helping young men and women adjust to new communities and cultures and to handle personal and financial problems. Our greatest accomplishment in the 70's was updating it by adding programs that better meet the needs of the service family. U.S.O. is a Congressionally chartered, civilian, volunteer organization.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is it true that Prince Charles is in his mom's bad books? If so, what did he do? — I.B., Anniston, Ala.

● It has nothing to do with the fact that the Queen wants him to "settle down" already (it's no secret she can't wait to have a daughter-in-law), but what really made her see a royal shade of red was finding out that the future King of England has been addressing Buckingham Palace staffers by their first names. It just isn't done, y'know. It's in direct conflict with age-old tradition that calls for the Royal Family to refer to their servants and aides by their last names. It was bad enough when Prince Charles was un-royally casual behind closed doors, but when he started being so in public, the Queen hauled him on the royal carpet and gave him a royal dressing down.

Bonnie friend Prince Charlie.

FOR JOYCE DE WITT, star of TV's Three's Company

Do you really attribute your role in the series to going in for a new style of makeup, which changed your face? — R.E., Walla Walla, Wash.

● Changing my face was not responsible — it was changing my hair. I cut it from its smooth, hip-length style to a shorter, more versatile, coif. It was a good move because it took me out of the category of the long-haired girl, into that of the more contemporary-looking woman, which they wanted.

FOR MAX VON SYDOW, Swedish star of Flash Gordon

I was recently in Sweden and got very upset at the way everyone knocked America there. Why is that? — N.M., Las Vegas, Nev.

● Because America is more competent and important than we are. Also much richer. So we're a bit jealous. When people come to my house, there's no way of knowing what country they're in. We speak English, use many American food products and listen to your music.

FOR ALVIN AILEY, choreographer-dancer

From all your trips overseas, which one stands out most in your memory? — M.G., Pueblo, Colo.

● Probably the oddest was our recent trip to Egypt. We visited a village, and would you believe that the craftspeople there were working away on products ear-marked for Bloomingdale's — beads, rugs, clay figures, small items of clothing. There was something incongruous about seeing how those exotic gift wares in fine department stores start out.

FOR EILEEN FORD, co-owner of Ford Models, Inc.

The high salaries models earn are outrageous and obscene. How do you explain it? — A.S., Albany, N.Y.

● Model fees may seem outrageous or obscene to you, but models are a very rare commodity. They are like athletes and have relatively short careers, no pension or profit-sharing plans. So they must make their money quickly. They are recognized as the best saleswomen available for beauty and fashion-related products, and advertisers feel they are worth it.

FOR BARBARA BURN, author of The Morris Approach: An Insider's Guide to Cat Care

Why the sudden vogue in cats — books, ornaments, posters, ceramics, et al? — M.T., Little Rock, Ark.

● One reason is that more women are working now, which means they have less time to walk dogs. Older people find it hard to take care of a dog. Another factor could be that it's not true that only little old ladies keep cats. At one time, a man would not be man enough to admit he had a cat; now it's chic.

FOR TONI TENILLE, recording star and talk show host

What is the buying habit you find very hard to control? — R.I., Lorain, Ohio

● Silk blouses. I collect them — both from local stores and new shops that I come across in my travels. I tell myself I have enough, but that doesn't stop me from getting more. Pure silk blouses make me go weak at the knees. I'm too scared to count how many I have. My favorites are those in soft shades, preferably eggshell colors.

PRO AND CON

Does the Parole System Deter Further Crime?

PRO Edward R. Hammock, chairman, N.Y. State Board of Parole

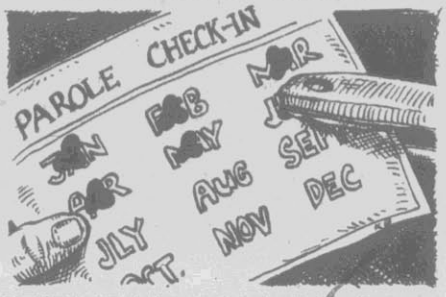
Parole is the single-most effective and economical form of community protection in today's criminal-justice system. The parole board provides a mechanism for screening offenders before they come back to society. Without screening, they would return, ready or not. Once paroled inmates are in the community, armed parole officers provide a deterrent force by monitoring their activities. Better than 90 percent of parolees lead crime-free and law-abiding lives.



Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON David Fogel, professor, criminal justice, University of Illinois, Chicago Circle

The parole system hasn't decided what it wants to be when it grows up. The internal conflict is between being a cop and a social worker at the same time. Parole officers go to their daily appointed rounds with Freud in one hand and a .38 in the other. Their work is dangerous. They're hopelessly overloaded. If they can get their act together based upon surveillance, they might deter parolees from crime, but at present they are more like truant officers than agents of public safety.

Yellowstone Art Center

Prisoner of art: An old jailhouse in Billings, Mont., was converted into the Yellowstone Art Center.

The Museum Boom: America's Hunger for Culture

According to one study, more Americans went to museums last year than to sports events. From Billings, Mont., to Daytona Beach, Fla., people of all ages are discovering that art can be exciting, beautiful — and even downright fun.

By Luisa Kreisberg

The line stretched eight blocks long, and almost all tickets to the general public were sold out shortly after the doors opened. No, those who waited so patiently last summer weren't hoping for seats to the World Series or The Empire Strikes Back. Rather they were queuing up in front of New York City's Museum of Modern Art to see "Pablo Piscasso: A Retrospective," one of the most formidable and impressive art exhibitions ever presented. During the 19 weeks it was on display, well over a million people came to see it.

Picasso's art, it seems, held as much fascination for Americans as "The Treasures of Tutankhamun," which began a two-year, seven city tour in 1976. The exhibition, consisting of 55 sumptuous objects discovered in a tomb underneath the sands of Egypt's Valley of the Kings 3,000 years after King Tut's death, broke museum attendance records everywhere. At Chicago's Field Museum, more than 1.3 million people examined the treasures; in New Orleans, 870,000; in Los Angeles, 1.2 million. Similar records were set in Seattle, San Francisco and New York. All told, more than eight million persons saw the exhibition in this country.

Such museum shows have been nicknamed "blockbusters." The word comes from a World War II bomb with very powerful effects, and the impact of these exhibitions has likewise been powerful. Whole cities were swept with "Tutmania" and "Picasso fever." Almost as magnetic were the national tours of "Pompeii A.D. '79" and "The Splendors of Dresden." Attendance figures for "The Great Bronze Age of China" — now in Fort Worth — and "The Search for Alexander" — now in Washington, D.C. — may not surpass those of King Tut, but these exhibitions are also expected to pack them in before they are packed up and returned to their home governments some time next year.

Blockbusters, however, are only part of the picture. Museum attendance in general is booming. During the decade of the 70's millions of people of all ages, tastes and interests trekked to American museums. Last year, the Metropolitan Museum in New York received more than four million visitors — a million more than the Grand Canyon!

"In the last decade, museums have made a far greater effort to attract larger audiences," says Richard Oldenburg, director of the Museum of Modern Art. "They've done so not only through special exhibitions, like Tut and Picasso, but through a variety of educational programs: lectures, museum tours, museum restaurants and bookstores."

People, Oldenburg explains, have responded eagerly: "There's a higher level of sophistication among the public. People are more aware of what is going on because of media coverage and expanded educational programs, and there is a lot more leisure time."

The boom in attendance has changed museums from genteel, somewhat staid, storehouses of treasures to bustling centers of activity. Throughout most of the 19th century, art was collected almost entirely by private patrons. The Boston Athenaeum, founded in 1807, was the first public institution to collect and show art. But the great ground swell of museum building did not occur until the 1870's, when the collecting of art began to move outside a limited circle of artists and patrons. In that decade, New York's Metropolitan Museum, Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, Philadelphia's Museum of Art and the Art Institute of Chicago opened their doors.

A century later, museums have mushroomed across the country. A recent (1980) poll by the National Research Center of the Arts indicated that 68 percent of Americans go to museums — up from 62 percent in 1975 and three percentage points higher than the number who go to sports events.

There are now more than 1,000 museums in this country, exhibiting works of art ranging from the Old Masters to the avant-garde. There are the cool aristocratic study museums, such as Harvard's Fogg Museum in Boston; encyclopedic museums, such as the National Gallery in Washington D.C.; small city museums, such as the Sterling and Francis Clark Art Institute in Williamstown, Mass. and the Hudson River Museum in Yonkers, N.Y.; modern and avant-garde museums, such as the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, Minn.

There are teaching museums, ethnic museums, university collections, children's museums, national, state and local museums, neighborhood, branch and even mini-museums. The attractions they offer vary widely — from the permanent collection of contemporary sculpture and paintings at the Hirshhorn Museum in Washington D.C., to the recently acquired collection of 18th- and 19th-century African art and artifacts at the Museum of Arts and Sciences in Daytona Beach, Fla.

In some places, people come as much to see museum buildings as they do to see the works of art. New York's Guggenheim Museum, a circular structure designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, is one of the most obvious, as is the new ultra-modern East Wing of the National Gallery in Washington D.C. But even in smaller cities, many museums occupy exciting spaces which have become tourist attractions in their own right.

The Yellowstone Art Center in downtown Billings, Mont., for example, occupies a converted county jail, complete with barred windows. The Tacoma Museum in the state of Washington is permanently housed in a 1920 neoclassical bank building with 29 steel-encased bank vaults for storage. The San Antonio Museum is located in the former Lone Star Brewery, a modified Italian Romanesque-style double-towered brick structure, which opens to the sun, with views of the adjacent river and the city beyond.

Museum Boom

But the greatest attraction for this new museum-going public appears to be temporary exhibitions. These shows are generally organized around a theme; for example, an epoch, as in "The Vikings," a collection of more than 500 objects dating from A.D. 800 to 1150; a survey, such as "The Romantics to Rodin: French 19th-century Sculpture from North American Collection"; a particular style, such as the Russian Avant-garde or Post-Impressionism; or the works of a single artist, such as Cézanne or Picasso.

"So accustomed has the public become to special exhibitions, that museum attendance tends to rise or fall on the basis of whether or not there is an exhibition to be seen that is not from the museum's own holdings," states Joshua C. Taylor, director of the National Collection of Fine Arts of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. "Through special exhibitions, art becomes news and, being newsworthy gradually becomes a necessary ingredient of the museum's program. In many ways the art museum over the past two decades has entered the realm of show business."

San Antonio Museum

High culture San Antonio style: 68 percent of all Americans visited museums last year.

Children in Oklahoma Art Center: Museums are reaching people they never reached before.

While it is questionable that museums are now in show business, it certainly is true that art has become newsworthy. The opening of the Picasso exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art, for example, was covered as a national news event by every major network. A 90-minute documentary on the life of Picasso, produced and directed by Emmy-award-winning Perry Miller Adato, was broadcast nationwide on public TV stations. Newspapers from almost every country published extensive reports about the show. One critic of blockbusters stated recently that the showmanship may be devaluing the experience of art.

Robert Hughes, art critic for Time magazine and host of the eight-part PBS series on modern art called The Shock of the New (which began this month on public television stations), sums up the trends: "The museum now tends to be culture's salesman, not its warehouse. It's a delicate balance that isn't easy to maintain."

Right now, the millions of Americans who journey to museums each year seem to have few complaints. Explains one Massachusetts businessman, "Once I stopped in at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts just on a lark. I was driving by, and I felt like breaking out of the rat race for half an hour. So I pulled over — almost got in an accident because I did it so suddenly — and I walked in and I just moved along, from picture to picture. It was like being in another world. I couldn't believe it. All my worries left me. I felt like I was becoming — well, you know, a philosopher. I got some distance on my life." FW

The Latest Chapter for Erica Jong – Motherhood

By Emily Newhall

"I'd ideally like a tree house to work in," muses Erica Jong, gazing out the immense glass windows which frame the treetops outside. "Maybe an octagon on poles with a breezeway to connect me to the rest of the house." The small figure in tight jeans and funky black shirt is suddenly jarred by the hubbub of weekend guests, babies and excited dogs all entering downstairs. Jong turns back to her spacious but book-and-picture-cluttered study on the top floor and gives a sigh of ambivalent feeling. "It's just not so isolated and private here anymore."

In this soft-spoken woman who has recently published her third novel (Fanny, Being the True History of the Adventures of Fanny Hackabout-Jones), it's hard to recognize the controversial author who was called everything from passionate pornographer to imaginative trend setter. Since 1973, when Jong burst on the public scene with Fear of Flying (a top-10 seller of the decade), her sexually explicit writing about the "modern woman" has created a sensation.

To 38-year-old Jong, the controversy is an inevitable result of being a pioneer. "The female consciousness has not been the subject of much literature written by women," she asserts emphatically, pushing ring-covered fingers through her thick blond hair. "What is most important to me is to convey the sense that women can be independent — and independent sexually....I want to show that women can not only survive — but also be heroines."

In the best-selling Fanny, the author feels she has depicted a true heroine. The picaresque epic about a "female Tom Jones" is written in the 18th-century style of Henry Fielding (Jong studied the period as a graduate student at Columbia University) and details Fanny's adventures, first as innocent orphan and then as ravaged wanderer, witch, highwaywoman, harlot, pirate, mother and writer. (It is scheduled to be made into a film, with Jong as co-producer.)

Despite the authentic "olde English" she speaks, Fanny's voice has an unmistakably contemporary, up-with-women tone. Jong tells us that Fanny is a heroine for the 80's because "she not only survives successfully on her own but integrates work and motherhood without terrible injustice to either."

Forever Jong: Erica with husband Jonathan Fast and baby Molly.

Jong has also happily combined the two and calls herself "ridiculously content." She and 32-year-old novelist-husband Jonathan Fast both work during the day in separate ends of their rambling house in rural Connecticut. While writing Fanny, Jong gave birth to red-haired Molly. Although Molly, now 2, takes hours from Jong's writing, "It's been only good," says the new mother. "She's never taken anything away from me."

Fast has been a supportive husband and father. When competitive feelings flare up between him and Erica over their careers, the two talk it out together with a psychiatrist. "We enjoy each other's company immensely," says Jong of her third husband. "The bedrock of it is that we've always gotten along better — and had more fun — with each other than anyone else."

Jong wants for her daughter what she herself has found — "Work that I feel passionate about and am successful at and a personal fulfillment of having people around whom I love." She thinks that most women don't have both. "They feel they have to sacrifice work for a personal life or vice versa."

Jong, who has also published four volumes of poetry, actually thinks of herself as a poet before all else. "Everything I write is out of the passions of someone who's besotted with words." From that passion will come more novels, more poetry, and soon, an illustrated book on witchcraft. She thinks even a mystery may be in the future. "I've always liked taking a genre and standing it on its head." FW

Now In America! From A World's Leading Medical Authority On Obesity:

London University 14-Day Wonder Diet

BURNS AWAY FAT up to 22 TIMES FASTER THAN EXERCISE!

SHRINKS DOWN YOUR WAISTLINE as much as A FULL SIZE SMALLER IN JUST 24 HOURS ...4 SIZES SMALLER IN JUST 14 DAYS!

From London, England—from the world's leading medical authority on obesity—comes this "bombshell announcement" of how for over 10 years at one of the world's foremost research centers, scores of hopelessly overweight people were ushered through a plain, unmarked door . . . then once inside . . . were told of special combinations of plain, everyday foods, (many of which you probably have in your refrigerator today), which caused a wondrous bio-chemical change to take place in their system that forced their body to grow slimmer after every time they ate! Yes, burns away fat so fast . . . that of all medically sound reducing programs, ONLY TOTAL STARVATION WORKS FASTER.

Yes, actually STOP their system from producing a SINGLE OUNCE OF EXCESS FAT anywhere on their body . . . by preventing all excess fat-builder calories from entering their system! Meaning: they burn away fat and excess fluid SO FAST, just in the very first 48 hours they immediately start to lose as much as A FULL POUND EVERY 8 to 12 HOURS—as much as 1½ to 2 POUNDS EACH DAY—and, depending on how overweight they are, burn away bulging pockets of body fat with such hour-to-hour speed that:

IN JUST ONE SINGLE DAY they shrink down their waistlines as much as A FULL SIZE SMALLER—and 2 to 4 SIZES SMALLER IN JUST 14 DAYS!

IN THE VERY FIRST 72 HOURS ALONE they lose anywhere from 3 to 7 pounds of both excess fluid and fat—and up to 7 pounds more the next 14 days!

IN JUST ONE SINGLE WEEKEND, shrink down their waist, tummy —unwanted bulges, with over 20 times the speed of exercise!

Medical Science Proves You Can Actually Force Your Body To 'Feed Away Fat'! Grow Slimmer and Slimmer From Meal to Meal!

What is this amazing 14-day fat-destroyer wonder diet that helps you burn fat by the hour? Briefly stated . . . a remarkably simple way to take special combinations of high-burn foods and create what doctors call a 'hypocaloric effect' to take place inside their bodies . . . that turns their system into a GIANT FAT-BURNING MACHINE! Yes, actually reverse your body's fat build-up process as you COMPLETELY STOP EXCESS fat-builder calories from entering your system . . . or being absorbed by your body and turned into fat like in the past! So obviously, down go the calories, up goes the rate of fat-burn-off and off come the pounds and inches at a rate that absolutely staggers the imagination! Just Look:

Gov't Official Loses 10 lbs. in Just 72 Hours!

When doctors at this leading London research center wanted to prove how fast this 'crash-burn' concept worked—not on ordinary overweight people but on extreme cases of obesity . . . they tested it on a Govt. official, whose entire life had been a nightmare struggle against fat. The startling result! 10 pounds of excess fluid and fat came plummeting off after just the first 3 days alone! And that was only the beginning!

Melts Away As Much as 50% of All Excess Weight in Just 14 Days!

When average overweight people who for years lugged around a 'spare tire' bulge of 10, 15 or even 20 extra sagging pounds . . . when these people finally determined to free themselves from that prison of fat and test this London University crash-loss diet . . . it seemed like a dream come true, as they MELTED AWAY AS MUCH AS 50% OF ALL EXCESS WEIGHT . . . IN JUST 14 DAYS!

IF YOU READ NOTHING ELSE, READ THIS!

This program involves a high-speed crash-loss diet that lowers caloric intake, essential to the reduction of body weight. Such results cannot be achieved solely through the use of the capsules. The more overweight you are, the higher caloric requirements, the more you should lose the faster you should lose it. HEALTH

For Staying in Shape All Year Round:

The Family Fitness Guide

Research shows that as little as two weeks of inactivity will sap 30 percent of your muscle strength. So don't let winter make you sluggish. Here's a special Family Weekly report on how your whole family can stay fit and trim throughout the year.

By Kathleen Beckett

Ewing Galloway

Running or jogging is a great way for the family to get a workout. You don't have to stop in the winter — just wear warmer clothes.

We know that bears hibernate in winter and sometimes — particularly on cold, gloomy days — that idea may even seem appealing to us. But lying dormant for the winter months is not such a good idea for humans. If you and your family want to stay fit and trim, you'll need regular exercise and activity throughout the year.

In fact, if you're inactive for as little as two weeks, you stand to lose up to 30 percent of the strength and endurance you have built up in your muscles, according to Dr. Steve Fleck, head of the Sports Medicine Laboratory at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs. Not only do your muscles become flabby, but your body becomes stiff, your exertion level plummets and unwanted weight and inches creep on. And once milder weather arrives and you resume active sports again, you increase your chances of injury by playing such sports with muscles that are out of shape and unprepared for activity.

It's not as difficult as you might think for you and your family to maintain in-shape, in-tone, strong, healthy bodies throughout the winter — even if you live in an area where the weather conditions make it tough to play outdoors. A simple, three-step approach to exercising, done a minimum of three times a week, will do the trick. You should, according to the experts, combine exercises for flexibility, exercises for spot toning and sport workouts for cardiovascular fitness (and to help you burn up calories so you shed excess pounds).

The Way to Cardiovascular Strength

Many people play sports for the fun, for the competition, skill and socializing involved. If you play them vigorously, you can also build strength in your heart, lungs and blood vessels — known as your cardiovascular system.

When you are in good shape, simply doing a sport to the point where you begin to feel fatigued will help build cardiovascular endurance, says Dr. Barton Nisonson, a consultant to the Institute of Sports Medicine and Athletic Trauma at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York City. If you are just starting to exercise, however, Dr. Nisonson feels that you should take your pulse to find out if you are working your heart hard enough to do it any good.

You should get your pulse up to about 70 percent of your maximum heart rate. A good estimate of your maximum heart rate is your age in years subtracted from the number 220. If you are 20 years old, for instance, you should work your pulse up to 70 percent of 200 — or 140 beats per minute. Once your pulse is up to where it should be, most authorities recommend keeping it there for 15 minutes. (You can get your pulse rate per minute by taking your pulse for six seconds and multiplying it by 10.)

Beware of overstressing yourself, though. If you can't work up to the rate, or can't hold it there for a full 15 minutes, slow down and start again — perhaps on another day. If you have a lot of sore muscles the next day, you're working too hard. Perhaps you might want to follow what Dr. Fleck calls a "hard day/recovery day regime." Alternate a hard day (when you run, say, two miles in 20 minutes) with a recovery day (when you either cut back on your distance and run only one mile, or stick with two miles but give yourself more time to run them).

If you run or jog, you're giving your heart one of the best workouts it can get. And cold weather shouldn't put a stop to your running — just make sure you dress warmly. Wear gloves or mittens, layer two pairs of socks and cover your head with a hat (you lose 40 percent of your body heat through the head). If it is particularly cold, wear a ski mask or scarf over your face to warm the air you take in and make breathing easier. (An hour of jogging, by the way, can burn off up to 1,000 calories.)

One of the best sports for cardiovascular endurance happens to be a winter sport that your family may be able to enjoy right now: cross-country skiing. Downhill skiing will give your heart a beneficial workout, too.

If your town has an indoor pool, swimming is excellent for the heart — plus it exercises all muscle groups. Racquetball and handball are becoming more and more popular and are great for increasing your cardiovascular endurance — better than playing doubles tennis, most authorities believe.

Ice-skating and the latest craze, roller-skating, are not, doctors believe, that beneficial for cardiovascular endurance — unless you're a real pro and do three to six miles of vigorous skating at a clip.

You don't have to be a real sports enthusiast to keep your cardiovascular system in tip-top shape. Shoveling snow — that unwelcome wintertime task — can provide an excellent workout, according to Charles Kuntzleman, National Program Director of the YMCA Fitness Finders Program. "When you first go out," he says, "just skim two or three inches off the top of the snow until you work down to the pavement. Do that for the first five minutes. Work up to bigger scoops, and always lift with the legs, not the arms."

Kuntzleman believes there are a host of other relatively easy ways to get and stay fit that can be part of your daily schedule. Brisk walking is one example, whether you walk to work or to the market to buy groceries. Housework — mopping, scrubbing and vacuuming — can give your heart a good workout if you do it

Do you know what your body knows about vitamin C?

Cut your arm. Burn your hand. Break a leg.
None of these will heal properly without adequate vitamin C along with other essential nutrients. Nor will severe bruises or wounds heal properly.

Sore throat. Earache. High fever.
All can begin with an infection that overwhelms your body's natural defenses. Vitamin C, along with other essential nutrients, optimizes your body's natural capacity to resist illness and helps keep your tissues healthy.

Up tight or up in smoke.
With both acute stress and heavy cigarette smoking, the plasma levels of vitamin C in your blood may be lowered. So, you could be robbing your body of this essential vitamin without even knowing it.

Up your iron.
Vitamin C increases your body's ability to absorb iron from food when they are taken together. Iron is the most common deficiency in the diet, and may be related to a loss of energy.

There are many reasons why your body needs an adequate intake of vitamin C. Yet your body doesn't make it. Vitamin C must come from food or vitamin supplements. So, eat a balanced diet. You can also look for fortified foods when you shop or take a supplement containing vitamin C every day just to be sure.

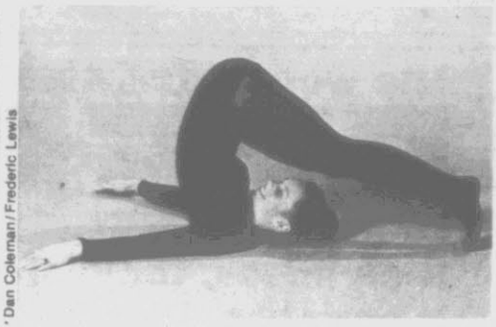
Hurdler's Stretch

H. Armstrong Roberts



Dan Coleman/Frederic Lewis

Don't bounce when you touch toes — that could cause muscle damage. With practice, you can work up to this more demanding stretch.

vigorously. Kuntzleman suggests playing a disco record to get you working at a fast tempo.

Jumping rope is another easy exercise you can add to your daily schedule. You and your family can jump in the evening — even while you watch television — or you can jump in a hotel room if you're on a trip, or jump behind a closed office door during your coffee break.

(If you are over 35 and have never exercised regularly, if you have a family history of heart disease, or if you get any kind of chest pain when you work out, consult with your doctor about the best exercise regimen for you.)

Whatever sport you choose, give yourself a cooling-down period when you're done. Don't just drop or flop — especially if you are outside in the cold. Get inside, walk around a bit to keep moving and then enjoy a warm shower, if you can, to maintain the elasticity of the muscles and keep them from contracting.

The Way to Flexibility

Stretching will give you a body that's coordinated, graceful, erect. These exercises do double-duty, too — try them before sports in order to warm up muscles.

Warm-ups are especially important in the winter, says Dr Nisonson. "You have to be sure that you stretch out and warm up before you do any activity," he explains. "This is even more important in cold weather, which causes muscles to contract. If you haven't warmed up the muscles and you go out into the cold and do some strenuous motions, before you know it you have ruptured or torn a muscle."

Touching your toes is a classic stretching exercise — and a good warm-up for any sport. What's not classic is the way you should do them — without bouncing. When you bounce, explains Dr. Fleck, you're doing a dynamic stretch, which could cause muscle damage. You should do static stretches instead. "Let's say you're doing toe touches," he continues. "With static stretching, you bend down slowly, touch your toes and hold the position for 10 to 30 seconds at the point where you can feel the stretch. You have nerve endings that protect the body from hurting itself. In a dynamic stretch, you could bounce very quickly and tear a muscle before that protective mechanism could tell you to stop. With a static stretch, you bend over just to the point of feeling pain, before you do any damage."

Be sure you stretch out and warm up before you exercise.

You might also try the classic jogger's exercise — even if you don't run, it stretches out the calf muscles and is a good warm-up for any sport. Stand 1½ feet from a wall and lean against it with your arms, keeping the body and legs straight and feet on the floor. You'll feel a stretch in the calf muscles — if you don't, step back a little further until you do.

The hurdler's stretch is a good exercise for thighs. Sit with one leg straight out forward, the other to the side and bent at the knee. Lean over and try to touch your head to the knee of the straight leg. Reverse sides and repeat.

Now! Guaranteed Relief From Rectal/Vaginal Pain!

Sitting Was Agony—Then I Created the "Miracle Cushion" A True Story...

If you suffer from pain in the rectal or vaginal area caused by the pressure of sitting, relief is available at last! If you're recovering from surgery, suffer from chronic anal discomfort or just feel sore from prolonged sitting or driving, I GUARANTEE RELIEF OR YOU PAY NOTHING!

IT ALL STARTED WITH HEMORRHOIDS

I recently suffered from hemorrhoids. Driving back and forth to and from work was torture. The "donut" cushion I bought at the drug store was useless. I was surprised to find there was nothing else available to give me relief.

THOSE "DONUT" CUSHIONS INCREASE THE SWELLING

I complained to my doctor who is a prominent colon rectal surgeon. He explained how the "donut" aggravates the condition because it increases swelling. The idea is to reduce the pressure by proper weight displacement. He said: "It would be great if you could sit on a waterbed, like the hospitals use for patients with bed sores and arthritis." The idea hit me: why not a water-CUSHION!

SUCCESS WITH POST-OPERATIVE PATIENTS

Luckily, I happen to be a successful manufacturer of inflatable and foam rubber products, you have seen them advertised by various companies. Working with my designers, engineers and doctor, we created several water-cushions in a few days, incorporating the latest waterbed technology. The surgeon gave them to his post-surgical patients to test, including myself. The results were unanimous: total success in every case! The outcome was so encouraging, the "cushion" is being presented to a medical convention. Just think, if it works for post-operative patients, what it will do for you! I keep one in the car, now I "float" to work.

NOT AVAILABLE IN STORES

As one of the test patients said: "It's a miracle!" So that's what I call it. The "MIRACLE-CUSHION" is not available in stores. It's made of rugged water-bed material, strong enough to support the burliest heavyweight. Just fill it with water, lock it, and forget it. The top side contains a layer of foam for added comfort. The 16" x 17" cushion can be emptied and folded to fit in a pocket, purse or suitcase. It's light enough to be portable when filled, and it fits on the top of any chair, bench or car seat. So if you make your living sitting down, if you're a trucker or a typist, drive a taxi or tractor, "Miracle-Cushion" is for you. It makes a great gift, and your long suffering friends and relatives will thank you forever.

WHY SIT WHEN YOU CAN "FLOAT"?

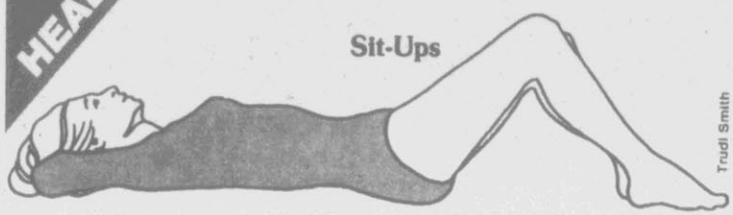
HEALTH



Side bends stretch the muscles along the waist and rib cage. With arms over your head, bend as far as you can to the side and hold the position at the point of feeling pain.

Harold M. Lambert

Stretching is important to warm up tight muscles.

For the shoulder area, try to clap your hands behind your back. As you become more flexible, try to raise your arms until you're clapping at shoulder level, rather than down by the waist.

The Way to Trimness

While sports can burn up calories in a big way and help you lose weight and inches from all over your body, you may need "spot" exercises to trim and tighten specific areas.

If you're not sure if your problem — a protruding stomach, for instance — is the result of too much fat or just flabby muscles, try Kuntzleman's "pinch-poke test." Tighten your stomach muscles and poke your stomach with your finger. If you can't feel any musculature, your problem is weak tummy muscles. Relax and then pinch your stomach. If you can pinch an inch or so of fat, then you need to take action. The high-calorie burning, cardiovascular sports will help you lose the fat. A regular session of sit-ups will help tighten soft muscles.

Sit-ups are still one of the best ways to tighten stomach muscles — provided you do them with your legs bent, not straight. As Dr. Fleck explains, "The more you flex your knees, the harder the sit-ups are going to be. When you have your legs out straight, the muscles you use to sit up are the hip flexors and, in effect, you are just bending over at the waist. Those muscles are used every time you take a step, and are usually in good shape anyway. When you bend your knees to do a sit-up, you're using the stomach muscles to pull yourself up."

There are plenty of books around with toning exercises for every part of the body.

So, though hibernation may seem like an appealing idea from time to time this winter, you and your family will feel best if exercise and sports are part of your weekly schedule. FW

Surprise Ways to Shed Pounds

You can rid yourself of excess calories in ways you may not have thought of before. If you make a point of climbing stairs, for instance — in your home as well as in stores and office buildings — you can burn off 200 calories for every hour you climb. Here are some examples of other ways you can use up calories by making just a little extra effort from Activetics by Charles Kuntzleman (Wyden).

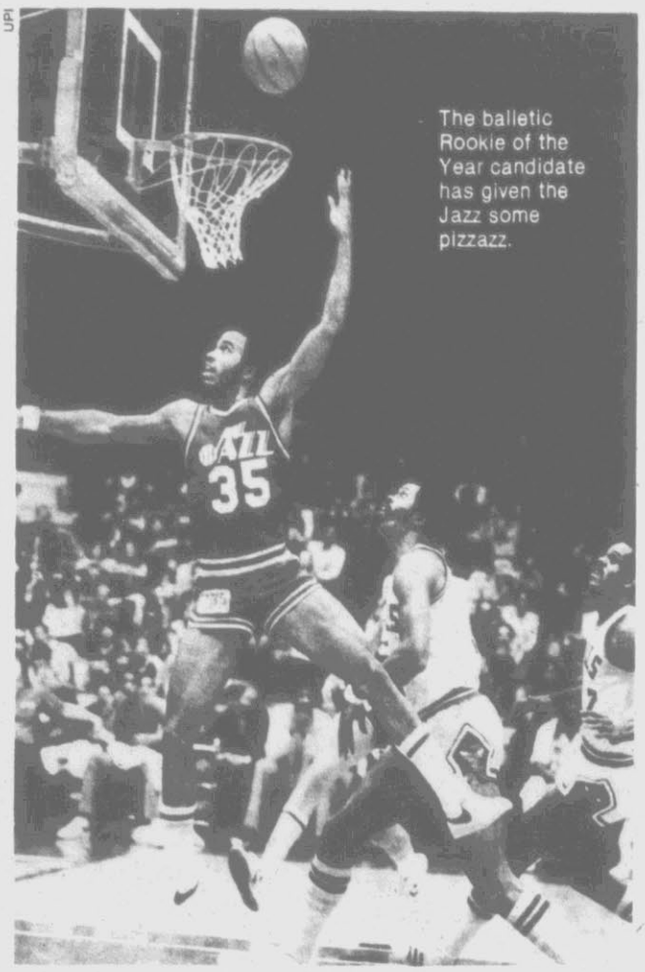
Super Rookie Darrell Griffith: The Coolest Jazz



By Tony Scherman

Many a soaring basketball star can jump high enough to pick a quarter off the top of the backboard. Only Darrell Griffith — with a vertical leap of four feet — can leave change. "I've guarded other guys who could leap," said one of Griffith's college opponents. "But all of them came down."

Darrell came down long enough to be drafted last June by the Utah Jazz, one of the NBA's worst teams. The 6-foot-4-inch Griffith was clearly the best college basketball player in the land last year, his outside shooting and creative slam-dunking leading the University of Louisville to the national title. Befitting his status, Griffith expected megabucks from the Jazz, and after lengthy contract negotiations, he finally signed after the exhibition season had already begun — for a reported $1.4 million over five years.

His late start did worry him a little. "You're not getting grades, you're getting paid," he says of the transition from college to the pros. "I'm in the real world now, and a college reputation doesn't mean that much up here. Everybody's got his scrapbook.... Everybody else was running through their plays, and I was out there just trying to figure out what was going on."

He figured out quickly enough, though. In his first preseason game, Griffith led the Jazz with 23 points. And his hot hand has refused to cool off. He leads the league's rookies in scoring with well over 20 points a game, and along with unstoppable inside scoring machine Adrian Dantley, Griffith has helped the once lowly Jazz play a brand-new tune.

One of six children born to a steelworker and his wife, Griffith grew up in Louisville. He took to basketball at an early age — 8 — and decided shortly thereafter that he wanted to be a pro. (It's said that Darrell began dunking at the age of 10 by launching himself off the wall of the Griffith garage.) At 13, he was already 6-2 and playing sandlot basketball with a number of pros, including Artis Gilmore and Don Issel, and realized then "that I could mix it up with the best." Passing up millions of dollars to skip college and go to the pros, he enrolled at the University of Louisville, promising to bring the school its first national title.

On the way to redeeming his pledge he set numerous school scoring records, jumped into the national eye and earned two famous nicknames: "Louisville's Living Legend" and "Dr. Dunkenstein" (the latter prompting jokesters across the country to refer to "that Jewish guy playing for Louisville").

Life for the hometown hero was free and easy: maintaining a B average as a communications major, Darrell coasted through college surrounded by friends and fans. But, despite his natural abilities, Griffith had to work hard at improving his skills. In his junior year at Louisville, he underwent hypnosis to improve his defense. To shape up his ball handling, he spent months before his senior year dribbling around chairs. And then he put in long hours perfecting his jump shot, now deadly, but up to that point considered a relatively weak aspect of his game.

Life in the pros requires even more dedication. For one thing, there's that killer schedule. "I'm playing three college seasons in one," Darrell notes. "You've got to make an effort to get your rest, or you're useless. The time creeps up on you — practice in the morning, home to rest, back to the Salt Palace at six. Salt Lake City one night, San Antonio the next, back to Salt Lake, out to L.A. — it's rough."

Then there's the competition: "In college there were some nights when you played a team to whom you could do just about anything you wanted. Up here, no way. Goin' against the best players, night after night after night. George Gervin, Dr. J., Paul Westphal. The first time I guarded Gervin he only scored 10 points. I was pretty proud, but I can't expect to do that every night." (Griffith also threw down one dunk over Gervin that was so ferocious — a screaming, yo' mama special beginning around Darrell's ankles — flabbergasted Jazz guard Billy McKinney asked for stomach medication after the game.)

The social atmosphere is different, too. "I miss Louisville," says the rookie, "the fellas, the people in the neighborhood, the social life. Plus you've got an unusual population structure out here in Utah: not too many blacks. That's weird for me in a way, but the people here have been really nice."

Darrell lives in a Salt Lake City condominium and gets around town in a symbol of his sudden affluence — a 1980 Cadillac. "Now I can buy some of the things I always wanted," he says. "The point is not to go overboard. You've go to be, well, alert in your spending tendencies." One expenditure he's allowing himself is a house in the Louisville area for his parents: "Oh yeah, you've got to do that. It's obligatory. It was the first thing that occurred to me when I went pro: 'Get Moms'n the rest a crib!'"

Pro basketball's top rookie is obviously proud, but unawed, to be included in the pro fraternity. "Of course it's a thrill to come into contact with people I've watched for so long on television, guys in the national limelight." Then he adds with a smile, "But I don't exactly go around introducing myself. They know who I am." FW

BETTER THAN BAYER.* BETTER THAN ANACIN.* BETTER THAN TYLENOL. BETTER THAN EXTRA-STRENGTH TYLENOL.

Of all leading brands, only Bufferin® and Arthritis Strength Bufferin can give you all these advantages:

*Faster going to the pain when your arthritis first flares up. In the early minutes, Bufferin sends more pain reliever to the pain than Bayer,® twice as much primary pain reliever as Extra Ingredient Anacin.®

Inflammation Relief. Inflammation can be a principal cause of pain for many arthritics. Neither Tylenol® nor Extra-Strength Tylenol can relieve that inflammation.

Make Inexpensive So-Easy Soft Sculpture

With a stocking and some cloth you can make a 3-D picture...

A silly little gnome...

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Making soft sculpture is like eating peanuts. Once you start it's not easy to stop. That's what you'll discover once you begin making things with old nylons or pantyhose. There are soft-sculpture pins and refrigerator note holders. There are 3-D pictures and family portraits, plus bouncing balls and hand exercisers and silly little gnomes guaranteed to make you smile. You can even use the cut-up nylon to give a doll an "Annie" hairdo.

For a delightful addition to the family gallery, make face sculptures on a velvet background, add a lace collar or silk ascot and an important-looking frame. You'll have a humorous portrait of a favorite relative.

Similar, but different, are full-bodied little gnomes which can be made to sit on a counter, a shelf, in a basket or on the windowsill.

A far cry from the soft-sculptured folks are the bouncing balls also made from pantyhose. They can be used as toys (they really do bounce) or put to practical use as squeeze balls for hand therapy. Folks troubled with arthritis find them to be excellent hand exercisers. And small pieces of nylon pantyhose can be used to turn the balls into little doll faces.

So, the next time you discover a run in your hosiery, don't despair. You've just created material for a new project!

Complete instructions along with photographs and step-by-step illustrations of all the projects mentioned are included in a booklet.

FOOD

Here's to You, And Here's to Health

Been to the supermarket this weekend? I'm sure you found great golden piles of grapefruit, heaps of shiny lemons and limes and tumbles of radiant oranges and zipper-skinned tangerines. These citrus beauties, in peak supply now, are favorably priced to enjoy out-of-hand or simply to squeeze for a tart, inimitable lift to winter dining. Look at our recipe trove for fresh high-nutrition ideas for your family.

TURKEY AND BROCCOLI STIR-FRY

6 tablespoons soy sauce
¼ cup water
4 teaspoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons grated fresh ginger or ½ teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon minced garlic
4 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
1 bunch fresh broccoli, tough stalks discarded and tops broken into small flowerets (4 cups)
1¼ cups sliced mushrooms
⅓ cup sliced green onions or scallions

WHAT IN THE WORLD

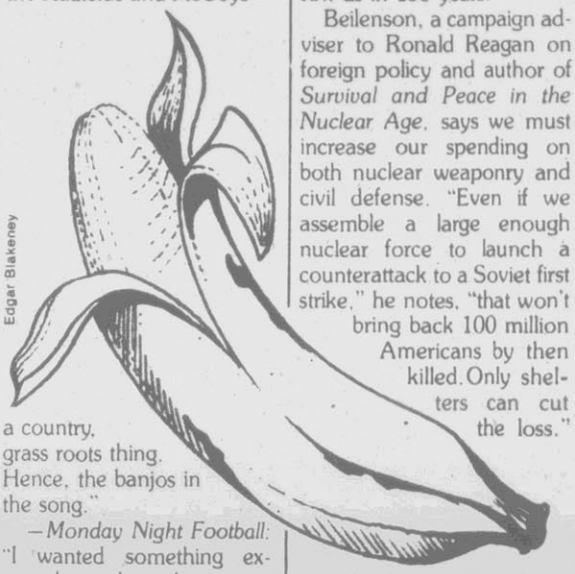
HE WRITES THE SONGS

You've been listening to Bob Israel's music for years and never even knew it. In 17 years, Israel has written the catchy themes for some 120 TV shows, including Match Game, Get Smart, Wide World of Sports and Another World. It's estimated that his tunes can be heard on 55 TV episodes a week.

A graduate of Juilliard, Israel, 48, is president of the multimillion-dollar Score Productions, Inc. He gets royalties every time a theme is played, his total take depending on how many stations carry the show. His biggest moneymaker: ABC's World News Tonight theme, which brings him over $100,000 a year.

"Writing a good theme is a subliminal thing," says Israel. "The audience may not be aware of how it's reaching them." Below, Israel reveals what he tried to do in some of his best-known themes:

—Family Feud: "When I saw the show, I thought of the Hatfields and McCoys — a country, grass roots thing. Hence, the banjos in the song."



Edgar Blakeney

—Monday Night Football: "I wanted something extremely macho, whereas my pro basketball theme is more like the sport itself, more fluid, less percussive."

—World News Tonight: "I needed something very simple, yet memorable. Something strong, with a sense that an event is about to happen."

—The Price Is Right: "I put myself in the winner's place, thinking what it's like to get a gift, the shimmering happiness it can bring."

Edgar Blakeney

A MUSHROOMING CONCERN

"If you look at history," says Laurence Beilenson, "man has used every weapon he ever devised....And people haven't suddenly become more humane." Thus, he concludes, a nuclear war is likely, somewhere, sometime. And he says, "It's just as likely to come tomorrow as in 100 years."

Beilenson, a campaign adviser to Ronald Reagan on foreign policy and author of Survival and Peace in the Nuclear Age, says we must increase our spending on both nuclear weaponry and civil defense. "Even if we assemble a large enough nuclear force to launch a counterattack to a Soviet first strike," he notes, "that won't bring back 100 million Americans by then killed. Only shelters can cut the loss."

MASS AP—PEEL

America's favorite fruit? The banana. In 1978 Americans ate 13.5 billion of them — over 20 pounds per person. But if you think we're bananas about bananas, consider the people of Uganda. In one province there, the typical resident consumes about nine pounds of bananas each day.

SEX + MATH = ?

Why do boys traditionally do better than girls in math? Many say it's because boys are encouraged to pursue the subject more. A controversial new study, though, concludes that boys are born with greater math ability.

Over seven years, psychologists Camilla Benbow and Julian Stanley of Johns Hopkins University studied some 10,000 mathematically gifted seventh-graders — boys and girls who, as well, were equally interested in math. And while some academics argue that boys do better because they take more math courses, up to the seventh grade, course requirements are roughly the same for everybody. Yet, on the test used in the study, boys scored significantly higher.

Benbow says she doesn't really know what causes boys' superior math ability, but theorizes that it could be genetic hormonal or brain differences.

"We're not saying girls can't do well at math," Benbow notes. "But we believe there are fewer girls who can mathematically reason at a very high level....Before now, the differences have been swept under the rug. But that can't continue if we expect to solve the problem."

WORKADAY ADVICE

Here's a tip on reducing lethargy at the office from a recent American Optometric Association report: Make sure your work area faces an open space, not a wall. Facing an open space allows you to look up and focus your eyes at a distance different from your working distance. And continually changing the focus of your eyes reduces tension and fatigue.

The report notes the average adult has a concentration span of 45 to 50 minutes. It thus suggests a ratio of six work hours to two hours in total breaks for a typical eight-hour work day.

I NOW PRONOUNCE YOU MAN & NAÏF

Harry Zain has a mission. One of several unofficial Washington "lobbyists," Zain, a fundamentalist Christian from Charleston, W. Va., has been grabbing various Congressmen for the past four years to plead his case. His goal: to lower the marrying age to 16 for boys and 12 for girls.

D. Gorton/New York Times

"This would put a lot of good where now there is a lot of bad," Zain, 26, told the New York Times recently. "It would end promiscuity. It would make the young happy and the old happy."

True to his philosophy, Zain wants to marry a 13-year-old girl. However, her parents won't let her see him. According to Zain, "They do not understand."

● TIGHT SPOT! Asked by his teacher to make up a sentence using the word "fascinate," Johnny wrote "MYFAT HERHA SAVES TWITH TENBU TTONS, BUTHE CANON LYFAS CINATE." Rearrange spacing for sense. Answer quickly.

● Some No.! From a number that's odd, cut off the head; it then will even be. Next, we say, cut off its tail; a time of day you'll see. What number?

Seven (even, eve)

● See Here! Is it possible to place two mirrors before you so that you can read the type on this page? It is. Place mirrors above the type at a slight angle to each other and observe the place where they join.

● Body Talk! Why are bees gossips? They're buzzy-bodies. Why are bankers VIPs? They're sum-bodies. Why can't ghosts be VIPs? They're no-bodies.

PUZZLE OUT THIS ENIGMATIC VERSE

Read over the words of this perplexing verse-riddle carefully, and then see if you can arrive at an answer:

but never in fair.
My second's in horse, and also in mare.
My third is in ever,
but not in now.
My fourth is in calf,
but not in cow.
My fifth comes both in main and might.
My all comes often in the night.

What am I? P.S.: Illustration above may clue you in. No fair peeking below.

Answer: I am a dream

FLAT-FOOTED! Draw lines, cut out and fold ensuing outline, and stand resulting subject on its feet. What is it?

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: TO THE WILD BOY'S FUNERAL COMES 'THE WANDERER,' FEARED AND FRIENDLESS FOR SHE CAN SPEAK ONLY THE TRUTH. "IT WAS YOUR PRIDE THAT BROUGHT THIS TO PASS," SHE ACCUSES. "YOU, ARTHUR, WITH YOUR CRUDE DIPLOMACY-BY-MARRIAGE. YOU, VALIANT, WITH THE CLEVER STRATAGEM THAT COST THE BOY HIS LIFE."

A HUSH SEIZES THE CHAMBER AS 'THE WANDERER' RAISES HER GNARLED HANDS. "FATE," SHE COMMANDS, "TAKE YOUR VENGEANCE!"

NOW AN EXHAUSTED MESSENGER PARTS THE THRONG AND FALLS AT ARTHUR'S FEET. "SIRE," HE GASPS. "A SUDDEN GALE CAUGHT THE NORTH FLEET OUT OF HARBOR AND SWEPT IT TO SEA. FOR A DAY WE HAVE SEARCHED BUT CAN FIND NO TRACE OF IT."

A SECOND MESSENGER FOLLOWS: "MY LORD, A GREAT FAMINE HAS STRUCK THE GOTHS. LIKE LOCUSTS THEY SWARM TO THE WEST, DEVOURING ALL IN THEIR PATH." A THIRD MAN IS CARRIED IN, TOO ILL TO STAND. "PLAGUE," HE COUGHS. "IN LONDINIUM."

'THE WANDERER'S' WRINKLED FEATURES ALIGN INTO A SMILE. "HOW FEEBLE YOUR POWERS SEEM NOW. BUT THE DAMAGE CAN BE UNDONE. LOOK INTO THE FONT, PRINCE VALIANT. HIGH IN THE ALPS LIVES AN OLD MAN. THERE YOU WILL FIND HUMILITY. WHEN YOU HAVE FOUND IT, BRING IT BACK TO ME."

©1981 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved

"BUT HOW WILL I FIND YOU?" VAL ASKS. "YOU WILL FIND ME," SHE REPLIES OVER HER SHOULDER. "LIKE THE TRUTH, I AM UNDER THE SURFACE OF EVERYTHING."
