More Answers For Press From Reagan

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The ladies and gentlemen of the press were ladies and gentlemen," judged deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. Instead of standing and shouting for attention, they raised their hands and waited their turns.

Indeed, Ronald Reagan's first White House news conference Thursday was noticeably absent of the raucous braying by attention-seeking reporters screaming: "Mr. President, Mr. President."

Press secretary James S. Brady had asked the more than 100 reporters in the auditorium of the Executive Office Building next door to the White House to raise their hands and wait for the president to call on them.

And that's what they did.

It was the most polite presidential news conference in recent memory. The decorum was upset only by a Cuban-American radio reporter from San Diego who could not contain himself and called out in Spanish, "por favor" to attract Reagan's eye.

For his part, the president seemed to do his best to keep it all low key as he stood at a heavy lectern decorated with the presidential seal and pointed at reporters beckoning silently for his attention.

"Young lady, I'll take you next," Reagan said to assuage one reporter who thought she was being called on.

After taking several questions from the front rows, he shifted his attention and said, "Now, I know I've been staying down front here too much. I've got to prove I can look at the back rows there, too."

Reagan went through what may be a modern record for questions at a 30-minute presidential press conference. By keeping his answers short — one question was answered with a crisp "At this point, no" — the president had time to take 22 questions, several of them longer than the answers.

By comparison, Jimmy Carter rarely answered many more than a dozen questions, often launching into detailed responses or miniature campaign speeches.

Reagan raced through some answers by stating he had no answers:

Q: Mr. President, when and how will you seek the decontrol of natural gas prices?

A: Well, we haven't dealt with that problem yet. We thought oil would do for a starter, but I can't really answer your question. That will be a matter for discussion in future Cabinet meetings.

Q: Mr. President, during the campaign, you repeatedly talked about the unfairness of the grain embargo as you saw it. Do you have second thoughts now, or will you lift the grain embargo?

A: ... It, next week, is on the agenda for a full Cabinet meeting as to what our course will be, so I can't answer what we do about it until next week.

Asked whether he would want to continue federal aid to dairy farmers at current levels, Reagan replied: "I can't answer you because that has not yet come to the Cabinet."

Brady explained the wait-your-turn approach to reporters by saying Reagan hoped "his press conferences will serve as a helpful means of communicating to the American public."

"Working together," Brady said, "I think we can all make progress in avoiding having these important sessions fall into shouting matches which create confusion even as they detract from the importance of what we are trying to accomplish."

The reporters cooperated and all went smoothly.

But Reagan said he felt guilty.

"I go home feeling guilty for all the hands that I couldn't point to," the president said as the session ended.

"Don't feel guilty about it," shouted one reporter as Reagan was walking out the door.

"That's because you got to ask a question," Reagan replied.

Adopting 'Watch'

COMMUNITY WATCH IN WINTERVILLE — A Community Watch Program, sponsored by the Winterville Ruritan Club, is underway in the town. Signs were put up this week, according to Past Ruritan President Edward Nobles, shown above. "The signs were purchased by the Ruritans," he said, "and the town provided the posts and construction." The project was undertaken with approval of the town board and the police department. "We've had good response so far", Nobles added. "Whole blocks have signed up in places." Club President Donald Boyle said each house is being asked to participate. (Reflector Photo by Mary Schulken)

Now You See It,.....

TRACES OF SNOW — A cold front, moving across North Carolina, began dumping light snow on Greenville and other communities in Pitt County this morning. By late morning, the snow was beginning to stick to parked cars, bushes and other objects. The Highway Patrol reported that all roads in the state were open, although snow tires or chains were recommended in the Hickory area. The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported temperatures at 8 a.m. today stood at 32 degrees, while .02 inches of precipitation had been recorded since midnight last night. Yesterday's high temperature was 59 degrees, while the low was 32. Reporting .05 inch of rain during the 24-hour period ending at midnight last night, the GUC weather station said the Tar River stood at 3.1 feet at 8 a.m. yesterday. At 8 a.m. today, the river level was 3.9 feet. Greenville city and Pitt County school officials at 11 a.m. today, said no decision had been made on whether or not to dismiss school early because of the light snowfall. Reagan Appears Back Off On A Fast Tax Slash

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While still committed to his three-year plan to reduce individual income taxes, President Reagan seems to be backing away from campaign pledges that the cuts be effective from the start of 1981.

Reagan told reporters at his first presidential news conference Thursday that the economic revitalization program his administration is drafting would include major cuts in taxes and the federal budget, as he has promised.

But the president would not offer any specifics when pressed for details.

Asked when the tax cut should go into effect, he replied, "I know there's been talk about whether it should be retroactive back (to Jan. 1) or whether it should be as of that minute (when Congress might pass it later in the year).

"That isn't as important as getting the individuals the principle of a 10 percent cut for each of three years in place....I can't really answer you about what the date will be until we submit the package."

Although Reagan campaigned on the pledge to seek an immediate tax cut, his economic advisers have since raised the possibility of delaying it until later this year to prevent an already-swollen budget deficit anticipated for 1981 from growing even bigger.

Reagan also was vague when asked which federal programs he wanted to cut and how large the total spending reductions would be.

"No one is exempt from being looked at for areas in which we can make cuts in federal spending," he said. "And, yes, they (the cuts) probably are going to be bigger than anyone has ever attempted."

Details of the president's program are expected to be sent to Congress by mid-February, somewhat later than originally planned.

Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, has said the administration's proposed cuts in the 1981 and 1982 budgets will total in the tens of billions of dollars. He said the cuts are needed to help offset the planned tax reductions without letting the deficit get out of hand. Current estimates put the 1981 deficit at more than $55 billion.

According to Reagan's advisers, spending and tax cuts will spur economic growth, narrow the deficit and help lower inflation, all at the same time.

Critics, however, contend the administration will be unable to achieve significant budget cuts so long as it is determined to boost military spending sharply.

DON'T SNATCH IT BACK

One of my co-workers was involved in a head-on collision this month and died today. His wife also suffered numerous injuries and is in intensive care. So many automobile accidents, like this one, are caused by drivers who run off the road onto the shoulder and overcompensate when trying to regain control of their cars. Please ask an authority to inform your readers on the proper procedure to follow to recover from running off the pavement. L. A.

You're right, State Highway Patrolman Spencer Padgett said, in believing that overcompensation after running off pavement is a major cause of motor vehicle accidents, especially head-on ones. And often the persons involved are otherwise safe drivers, people who were not drinking while driving nor speeding nor driving recklessly.

"It's a common reaction, evidently," he said, "to snatch the steering wheel and quickly bring the car back onto the pavement when the right wheels run off. And this is the worst thing a driver can do. Drivers should school themselves to know that everyone occasionally runs off the pavement and that it's no cause for alarm. All they need to do is slow down gradually and ease the car back onto the pavement."

Many potentially destructive accidents would be prevented if this advice were followed by all drivers, he said.

And for what looked this morning to be shaping up as a snowy time, he added, "If you go into a skid, which is considerably more frightening than running off the pavement, try to keep cool, don't hit the brakes, and turn the wheel in the direction you're heading. That's the only way to recover safely from a skid."

Ecuador, Peru Battling For Border Area

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru claimed today that Peruvian troops fighting for a disputed border area had driven Ecuadorean forces from three outposts set up on Peruvian soil.

Ecuador, meanwhile, insisted the contested area was calm and invited Peru to negotiate a settlement in the two South American countries' latest border squabble.

"The armed forces of Peru have recovered the territory invaded by Ecuadorean troops and therefore there is complete control of our sovereignty in the zone," the official newspaper El Peruano quoted Foreign Minister Javier Arias Stella as reporting to congressional leaders.

Stella said Thursday that Peruvian forces had attacked to wipe out the posts it claims Ecuador established on Peruvian territory.

There were few details on the fighting, but the Peruvian Foreign Ministry has said that both sides suffered casualties.

Peruvian troops were "dislodging infiltrations produced on Peruvian territory," President Fernando Belaunde Terry told reporters after meeting with his military commanders. Peru acted because it would not permit "anyone to unduly penetrate our territory," he said.

In the Ecuadorean capital of Quito, Minister of Government Feraud Blum said bad weather in the remote mountainous border area had prevented any fresh outbreak of fighting Thursday.

"The military situation on the border with Peru is stationary ... and the outpost of Paquisha remains in Ecuadorean hands," Ecuadorean government spokesman Orlando Alcivar said.

On Wednesday, Ecuador said two of its soldiers were killed and an unspecified number of others wounded in eight Peruvian air attacks on Paquisha. It claimed two Peruvian helicopters were downed. Peru said its forces suffered casualties but did not say how many or if any were killed.

Ecuador accused Peru of trespassing on Ecuadorean territory and Peru said it was fighting to drive Ecuadorean forces from Peruvian soil. Peru claimed Ecuadorean troops crossed the border, set up three outposts on its territory and gave one of them the name — Paquisha — of a post on the Ecuadorean side of the border.

It was the first major outbreak since 1978 between the two neighbors in northwestern South America, who have been feuding for years and fought a war in 1942 over access for Ecuador to the Amazon River, the only interior shipping channel to the east coast of South America.

Close Soviet Ties Cooled

WASHINGTON (AP) — First the secretary of state accused the Soviets of fostering terrorism. Then the president denounced them as liars and cheats. Now, another blow: they've taken away the Soviet ambassador's special parking privileges.

The moves are not monumental, but they do add a sharper edge to U.S.-Soviet relations.

They might cut deeper if President Reagan carries out his hint of Thursday: to broaden, not lift, the partial Soviet grain embargo imposed by Jimmy Carter a year ago to punish the Soviets for their intervention in Afghanistan.

For now, though, the most visible evidence is Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin's experience of Thursday.

His limousine headed for the basement parking area he always uses at the State Department, but security officers told the chauffeur to park on the street.

So Dobrynin was left to use the normal diplomatic entrance, no longer afforded the privilege started during the Ford administration of coming and going through the basement without being seen.

State Department officials said the Soviet Embassy had been informed in advance that Dobrynin would lose his special access, which apparently was accorded no other foreign diplomat.

One reason, they said, apparently was because the American ambassador to Moscow has no similar privilege when he calls on the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Dobrynin said the whole matter was "no problem."

The Soviet ambassador had gone to the State Department for an appointment he had requested with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, presumably to discuss Haig's harsh remarks a day earlier that Soviet policies "foster, support and expand" international terrorism.

Haig's hard line was echoed Thursday by President Reagan at his first news conference since taking office.

He said the Soviets believe they have the "right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat" to achieve their goal — "a one-world socialist or communist state."

"I think when you do business with them, even in detente, you keep that in mind," he added. "So far, detente has been a one-way street that the Soviet Union has used to pursue its own aims."

Earlier Thursday, State Department spokesman William Dyess said Haig's charge about Soviet support of international terrorism was based on five Soviet policies:

—Financial support, training and arms for such groups as the Palestine Liberation Organization.

—Use of Cuba and Libya as "conduits for assistance of all kinds" to terrorist groups.

—Propaganda and material support for "national liberation movements," some of which engage in terrorism.

—Propaganda broadcasts to Iran that tried to justify the taking of American hostages.

—General advocacy of violence as the solution to regional problems from El Salvador to Namibia.

Joe Goodson Is Recipient Of Silver Beaver

KINSTON — Joe Goodson Sr. of Greenville was honored by the East Carolina Council here last night as the recipient of a Silver Beaver Award, the highest recognition given by the council to a scout volunteer.

Goodson, in receiving recognition for his contributions and service to scouting, was the only Silver Beaver recipient in the district for 1980. He previously received the District Award of Merit.

JOE GOODSON

The Pitt District, which encompasses scout units throughout the county, received for the first time the council's Honor District Award, presented to a district on the basis of points accumulation involving some 11 areas of judging. All ten districts in the council compete for the honor award.

Goodson, who served as commissioner of the Pitt District during 1980, accepted the honor trophy on behalf of the district.

In addition, Explorer Post 318, sponsored by Pitt Memorial Hospital, received the council's Round-Up Award, given on the basis of new member recruitment. The local post, with Sandra Harrison serving as advisor, recruited 90 new members during the year and now has a roster of some 138 Explorers.

The Pitt District received a third place award for attendance at last night's banquet, held annually to recognize achievement throughout the East Carolina Council.

During the meeting, Vernon H. Rochelle, a Kinston attorney, was installed as council president, succeeding Peter J. Long of Tarboro.

Effort To Save Hatteras Lighthouse Seen Failing

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The black and white spiral-striped tower soars 208 feet above the ocean, and for more than a century its beacon and fog horn have guided mariners safely into port from the "Graveyard of the Atlantic."

But the 110-year-old Cape Hatteras Lighthouse soon may become a victim of the sea it has watched over for so long.

Despite efforts by the National Park Service to save the lighthouse — the tallest in the nation — erosion is taking its toll on the national landmark. The sea at high tide is only 70 feet away and Outer Banks residents say a severe storm would topple it.

Park Service officials say the tower has been spared this year because the winter has been mercifully mild.

So far this winter, the Park Service has spent $60,000 to extend an asphalt jetty around the lighthouse to try to keep the sea away. But a powerful Northeaster on New Year's Day gouged a gaping hole near the new extension.

A group of Outer Banks residents has urged the public and the Park Service to devise plans to save the lighthouse. The Park Service says any measures taken will be only temporary solutions and won't save the lighthouse from eventual destruction by the sea.

Last month, the Park Service issued a list of five proposals to save the tower, the cheapest of which is moving the 3,000-ton structure 2,800 feet to another site at a cost of about $2.4 million. Other plans include a full revetment around the lighthouse that would cost a total of $5.6 million and rebuilding the beach area and constructing more groins around the lighthouse for a total of $65 million.

The Outer Banks Preservation Association, one of the strongest advocates of saving the tower, says it is against moving the lighthouse.

"It isn't a solid object that can be lifted off its foundation and moved," said Ray Couch, president of the association. "It's actually a tube inside a cone and there's a cavity between those two parts. If an effort is made to physically move it, the results will be disastrous."

The lighthouse, built in 1870, contains 1½ million bricks.

Couch is urging North Carolinians to write their congressmen asking that the federal government come up with the money to preserve the lighthouse. But he says there isn't any time to waste on the project.

"If we don't move quickly, the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse will be nothing more than a mass of rubble. That possibility is as near as the first severe storm of winter," he said.

Meanwhile, a Delaware researcher plans to test $10,000 worth of artificial seaweed to see if it can reduce by half the beach erosion around the lighthouse.

William L. Garrett of Greenville, Del., a DuPont employee, was given permission last month by the Cape Hatteras National Seashore to conduct the test. The Park Service says the tests will begin this summer.

Garrett's device, called "Seascape," consists of a sand-filled anchor tube and a series of four-foot long fronds. The fronds catch sand as waves roll in and filter the sand to the bottom of the water, building reefs, Garrett says.

Garrett will test his invention with 500 of the units planted along 2,500 feet of sand in front of the lighthouse. He said the device holds up well despite high wave energy and that he has used it to build reefs off the coast of New Jersey, near Myrtle Beach, S.C., and at Gloucester Point, Va.

But Park Service officials are skeptical.

"I just don't see how it can work here," said Cape Hatteras ranger Marcia Lyons. "Those waves just come crashing in here during a storm and there's just no way that is going to slow them down enough to help."

Not everyone interested in saving the lighthouse takes a scientific approach to the matter. An elderly Kannapolis man made the journey to the coast with four rocks from his Cabarrus County property and carefully dropped the stones into the sea at the base of the lighthouse, rangers said.

"His idea was that if everyone who visits the lighthouse each year would bring several rocks and throw them into the ocean in front of the lighthouse, soon there would be a stone wall to protect it," Ms. Lyons said. "But it was sure sad to see that man throw those rocks into the waves. I don't think he realized how wild those waves are and that those stones would wash right out to sea. I think he came back the next day to see if those rocks were anywhere in sight but he didn't catch a glimpse of them. It was a futile effort."

The lighthouse, which stands on a bluff overlooking the ocean, is owned by the Park Service and is maintained by the U.S. Coast Guard. Although its importance has been diminished by late technical navigational equipment, the tower's light still shines between dusk and dawn every day.

The light's purpose was superseded in 1967 when a modern tower was built 12 miles out to sea. But it is still a major tourist attraction for North Carolina's scenic Outer Banks — narrow, sandy barrier islands off the Atlantic Coast — drawing about 200,000 visitors a year from all over the world.

Govm't 'Buys' A Failed Development From Self

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — Soul City has been auctioned off, and the only bidder at the foreclosure of the failed "new town" project was the United States.

The sale Thursday marked another step in the demise of an expensive, unsuccessful experiment in black capitalism backed by government grants and loan guarantees.

Roy A. Gast, project manager of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's New Community Development Corp., made a $1.5 million bid for the property.

But no money actually will change hands because the federal government is in effect buying the town from itself. The government now will search for a buyer in hopes of recouping some of its losses on the federally backed project.

If no other bid is made within 10 days, the government will take possession of the 3,300-acre tract near Warrenton this spring, Gast said.

Soul City began in 1974, the only black-backed "new town" among 13 such projects originally conceived during the administration of Lyndon B. Johnson.

It was the idea of Floyd McKissick, a civil rights activist and former president of the Congress of Racial Equality, who was the major stockholder of the Soul City Co.

The new town received $29 million in federal grants and loan guarantees, and McKissick projected the community would have a population of 18,000 by now.

But the town fell far short of its population, industry and commercial goals, and when the Soul City Co. could not meet mortgage payments, HUD declared in June 1979 that the project was a failure.

Title to the project has been held in escrow since then.

When the federal government paid off $10 million in defaulted loans that had financed the project, total principal and interest payments amounted to $11.5 million, Gast said.

The $1.5 million purchase price means that the debt owed to the government by The Soul City Co., will be reduced to $10 million.

But when the government takes title to Soul City this spring, it will "forget" the debt as part of an agreement with McKissick announced last year, Gast said.

The community had about 130 residents last year, some 35 housing units, paved streets, a regional water system, recreational facilities and a health center.

Road Number Is Corrected

The article in Thursday's edition regarding acqusition activities on the proposed new US 264 corridor from Wilson to Greenville identified the projected interchange between the two cities as being located in the area of State Road 1510. The identity of the road should have read State Road 1210.

Nazi Assaulted In NBC Lobby

NEW YORK (AP) — American Nazi leader Harold Covington and his bodyguard were treated for cuts after being assaulted in the lobby of the NBC building before a scheduled taping of the "Tomorrow" show.

The two men said they were attacked Wednesday by about 20 men, according to Pete Hamilton, a network spokesman. However, an investigation by NBC's security staff indicated that four men were involved in the attack and that they fled, Hamilton said Thursday.

Covington, head of the American Socialist Party, and the bodyguard, identified only as "Pritchett," were treated for cuts by a nurse in the building. Covington, of Raleigh, N.C., was then interviewed by "Tomorrow" show host Tom Snyder.

Locker Search Action Upheld

DENVER (AP) — A school locker search that turned up a small amount of marijuana did not violate the constitutional rights of a Roswell, N.M., student, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled.

Grace Zamora filed the appeal on behalf of her son, Vidal, after his Rosewell High School locker was searched in 1977. Following an informal school hearing, Zamora was suspended and sent to a nearby vocational school for a semester. He later returned to the high school and graduated.

The decision, issued Monday, said the school district had a right to search a student's locker.

Reagan's Town Plans A Party

DIXON, Ill. (AP) — Ronald Reagan won't be here, but folks in the president's boyhood hometown plan to throw a birthday bash for their favorite son anyway.

Reagan, who was born in nearby Tampico and raised in Dixon, turns 70 on Feb. 6.

In observance of his birthday, residents will gather for a concert by the Dixon Dukes Marching Band at the high school gymnasium followed by free cake and specially made Dutch chocolate ice cream. Reagan's nickname as a boy was Dutch.

The birthday celebration here will be held Thursday night at the school because a basketball game is scheduled for the gym on Friday.

Residents in Tampico are signing a poster-sized birthday card to be mailed to the president next week.

The card has a painting of the east side of Main Street, including the building in which Reagan was born in a simple, six-room flat.

Student Is On All-A's List

Beaufort Community College President Jim Blanton announced Wednesday that Karen M. Souza of the Greenville area has been named to the All A's Honor List.

Students given this honor must have made all A's with a 4.00 grade point average.

Indicators Saw December Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — An important gauge of the nation's future economic health declined 0.8 percent in December after rising for six straight months, the government said today.

December's drop in the Index of Leading Indicators was generally in line with most economists' predictions that economic growth would slacken in the first part of 1981 after its recovery from last spring's recession.

The Commerce Department's index provides a broad look at 10 different economic conditions in a way designed to predict future activity.

Seven of the indicators declined, with a drop in the nation's money supply contributing most to the overall loss. That decline, however, should also mean less inflationary pressure.

Other indicators that dropped in December were new orders for consumer goods, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, prices for key raw materials, building permits, stock prices and liquid assets.

The average workweek and vendor activity were up in December, while the worker layoff rate was unchanged, the Commerce Department said.

The index had risen about 12 percent — including November's revised increase of 1.5 percent — since June 1 after dropping nearly 9 percent in the three previous months.

The Commerce Department also reported that the Index of Coincident Indicators, which is designed to reflect current economic activity, rose 0.6 percent in December. That was just slightly more than the revised index of 0.5 percent for November.

Tom T. Hall Is Bank Director

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — Singer-songwriter Tom T. Hall, who penned "Harper Valley PTA" and crooned "Old Dogs, Children and Watermelon Wine," is branching out into banking.

Hall, who owns a 54-acre farm outside Franklin, has been appointed a director of Harpeth National Bank in this suburban Nashville town.

Leonard Isaacs, board chairman, announced the appointment Wednesday. He described Hall as "an extremely gifted man whose creative insights will most certainly be invaluable" to the bank.

"He stays in touch with the common people not only in his songs, poetry and storytelling, but also in his personal life," added Don Mullican, president and chief executive officer. "He's a very perceptive businessman, and we're extemely pleased with the prospects of having Tom on our board."

Steamed Fig Pudding Returns

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Whatever happened to good old steamed fig pudding made with suet? When I was young we used to have it with hard sauce as a cold-weather dessert after a light supper. It certainly did stick to the ribs. Although I've searched for such a recipe in modern cookbooks, so far it's eluded me. Can you help? — OLD-TIMER.

DEAR OLD-TIMER: The recipe has eluded me, too. When I told a friend about your query, she offered to develop such a recipe based on my formula for old-fashioned plum pudding. Her recipe turns out a rich pudding; I can understand why it was served as the dessert for a light meal. — C. B.

MODANE'S STEAMED FIG PUDDING

Three 12-ounce packages dried figs, finely chopped
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
¾ pound ground beef suet (3 cups lightly packed)
1 cup milk
½ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1½ cups sifted fine dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground ginger
4 large eggs
¼ cup brandy

In a large mixing bowl toss together the figs, orange rind, lemon rind and suet until well mixed. In a medium saucepan scald milk; off heat, stir in the sugar, bread crumbs, salt and ginger; set aside to cool.

In a medium mixing bowl beat eggs until thick and ivory colored; stir in the brandy and the crumb mixture. Add to the fig-suet mixture and mix well.

Turn into 3 lightly greased 1-pound coffee cans; cover cans with foil held taut with string.

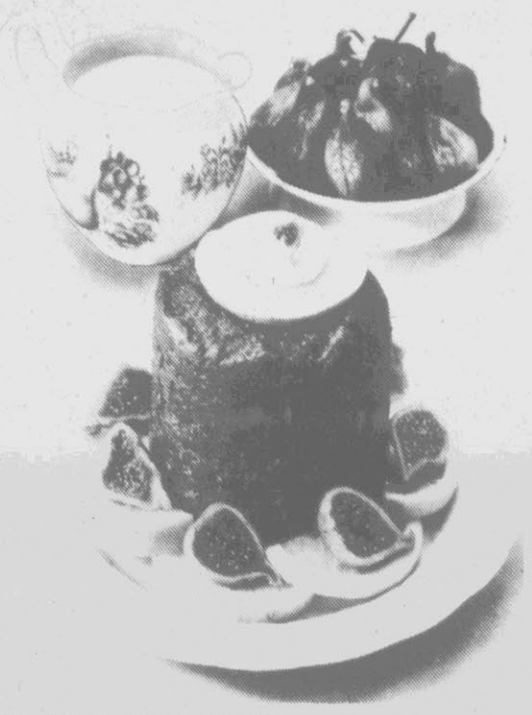

Place cans on a rack in the bottom of a large, deep saucepot that has a cover; add enough boiling water to come 2-3rds of the way up the cans. Cover saucepot and steam puddings in gently boiling water — adding water as necessary to keep it at the 2-3rds level — 4½ hours. A cake tester inserted through the foil should come out clean.

Remove foil and pour off fat on top of puddings — there will be about ¼ cup fat in each can. Loosen edges and invert cans on several thicknesses of paper toweling to drain off lingering fat.

Garnish, if you like, with lemon or orange slices. Serve hot with hard sauce, cutting pudding into wedges; do not try to slice into rounds.

Makes 3 puddings — each yields 6 wedge-shape servings.

Storing and serving extra puddings: Tightly wrap extra puddings in saran or seal in plastic bags and refrigerate. When ready to use, unwrap a pudding or remove from bag. Return pudding to the can in which it was steamed; cover with foil held taut with string; steam until hot through — about 1 hour.

GIFTS FOR YOUR VALENTINE

Youth's for an hour, beauty's a flower,
But love is the jewel that wins the world.
—Moira O'Neill, "Beauty's A Flower"

Volumes have been written on the theme of love, one of the fondest preoccupations of artists in all fields of creative expression. It plays such an important part in our lives that we set aside a special day to pamper those we love.

It seems that February 14 was the day selected to commemorate a martyr named Valentinus who lived during the reign of the Roman Emperor Claudius. Somehow this became associated with the Lovers' Festivals of the early centuries A.D. and has been handed down to us as a day in celebration of love.

When looking for a gift for your Valentine, select something that will not only be as important as your love, but something that will endure and be a constant reminder of it.

A gift of gold jewelry is lastingly appropriate. This precious metal radiates warmth just as love does. Gold jewelry set with diamonds makes a further statement. It says that your love will never end, since a "diamond is forever." If you prefer red garnets, rubies or tourmalines for your gift, you're expressing feelings of fiery passion.

The jewelry artisan is just as susceptible to the theme of love as other artists. A wide selection of heart-shaped jewelry is available; in fact, diamonds and other gems are often cut into a heart shape.

We at Lautares have been supplying loving gifts for 70 years and have established a reputation for making lovers happy. Please let us help you select your Valentine gifts.

Pocahontas Projects Outlined

Fund raising projects were outlined and comittees named at the meeting of Withla Council No. 42, Degree of Pocahontas held Tuesday.

A goal was set and each committee will select a project during a designated month including: February, Sally Vainright, Clyde Stanley and Mildred Merrill; March, Marie Stocks, Lillian Earle and Cecil Bradshaw; April, Doris and Fitz McKeel and Douglas Ross; May, Louise Cox, Bessie Nobles and Betty Nobles;

June, Lillian Randolph, Mable Register and Kathleen Smith; July, Margaret Parker, Alice Culbreth and Estelle Tucker; August, Elizabeth Moore, Marga Ross and Mary Rose Buck; September, Pauline Ross, Ada Jones and Evelyn Beasley; October, Maycie Culbreth, Thelma Vincent and Helen Kares; November, Reba Cannon, Margaret Register and Delma Culbreth.

Pocahontas Pennie Dunn draped the charter in memory of Addie Speight assisted by Wenonah Marga Ross, Ms. Vainright, Ms. Stocks, Mrs. Moore and Ms. Cox.

Ms. Vainright, Ms. Stocks and Ms. Randolph were appointed to the delinquent committee.

A tribute and special prayers was the program given by Ms. Vainright in honor of the freed American hostages and their families.

The program chairman in February will be Ms. Stocks and meeting hostesses are Ms. McKeel and Ms. Parker.

The National Membership Drive that started Jan. 1 through June, 1982, was announced with a goal for Withla Council, to bring one new member for each member on roll.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Bride-Elect Entertained

Bride-elect Cathy Callahan was honored at a shower Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Bob Ramey. Mrs. Herbert Wilkerson Jr. was assisting hostess.

The honoree was remembered with a bridal corsage.

A color scheme of green and yellow was carried out.

Miss Callahan will marry Jimmy Benton in February.

Meredith Alumnae Plan Meeting

The Pitt County Meredith College Alumnae meeting will be held Tuesday, Feb. 3, at 7 p.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant.

Planning a party for current and prospective students will be discussed.

For further information contact Katharine Hodgin or Betty Smith.

Parties Held On Saturday

Pamala Annette Smithwick was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Saturday by Jennifer Tyndall and her mother, Mrs. Leroy Tyndall, at their home in Grifton.

Pamala Smith and Anthony Ray Evans, families and close friends attended a dinner and pounding in the Grifton Presbyterian Church fellowship hall Saturday.

Hosts and hostesses included Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Robbie Brooks, Catherine Whaley and Mr. and Mrs. Robbie Howell.

Dear Abby

Mother Scoffs At Scofflaw Tag

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My brother and I need your help. Our mother has been cooking and keeping house during the day for an elderly well-to-do gentleman. He has been paying her in cash, and she has not been reporting her earnings.

Mother has decided to keep this gentleman in her home, for which he will pay her room and board. We are trying to tell Mother that if she doesn't start reporting her income, she will be in violation of the law.

She refuses to listen to us, but says, "If Dear Abby says so, I will listen to her."

Please comment, because Mother subscribes to the Ft. Lauderdale News only to read your column.

WORRIED IN FLORIDA

DEAR WORRIED: Please tell Mother that Abby says that she (and her employer) are already in violation of the law, and if she wants to continue living in Ft. Lauderdale instead of Ft. Leavenworth, she must not only start reporting her income PDQ, but pay the IRS what she owes in back taxes!

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor is driving me nuts! She is forever ringing my phone or doorbell. She does nothing but complain, and she expects me to listen. I am sick of listening to her, and I have told her so. It does no good. She can't be insulted.

Yesterday when she called, I told her I was busy and had to go, but she kept talking anyway. I finally had to hang up on her. She called me back, and I hung up on her again. Next thing I knew this dingbat was at my front door, without a coat in the freezing weather, yelling and cursing and leaning on my bell. When I saw who it was I didn't pay any attention to her, so she went around and started pounding on my back door. When I ignored her, she threw stones at my window!

How can I get this pest to leave me alone? I hate to call the police.

HARASSED

DEAR HARASSED: The woman is obviously more than a pest — she is a sick pest. If she lives alone, let her family (if she has one) know of her irrational behavior. The poor soul needs help. If you can't locate her family or close friends, please notify your local mental health association.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing an item from a recent National Guard publication. Considering the seriousness of the drunk-driver problem in the U.S., perhaps more severe penalties should be considered.

"How They Handle Drunk Drivers in Other Countries:

"Australia: The names of convicted drunk drivers are published in the local newspapers under the heading: 'Drunk and in Jail.'

"Malaya: The driver is jailed; if he's married, his wife is also jailed.

"Finland, England and Sweden: Drunk drivers are automatically jailed for approximately one year.

"South Africa: The drunk driver is given a 10-year prison sentence, a fine of $10,000 — or both.

"Turkey: Drunk drivers are taken 20 miles from town by police and forced to walk back under escort.

"Bulgaria: A second conviction of drunk driving is your last. The punishment is execution!

"San Salvador: Drunk drivers are executed by firing squads."

BILLY STEENSLID, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR BILLY: Thanks for a sobering item.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband's former wife, Velma, with whom we have remained on fairly good terms, invited us to her home for a party. She is now married to a very well-to-do man.

Velma told me it was going to be a costume party, so my husband and I dressed up like a couple of rabbits.

Imagine our surprise when the butler opened the door and ushered us into a room filled with men in tuxedos and women in stunning gowns! We felt like a couple of fools. Velma laughed and said she thought it was funny. I was very upset to have been made the butt of her joke, so I got myself a glass of punch and spilled it on her gown. Then I laughed and told her I thought it was funny. However, she didn't see anything funny about it.

My husband isn't speaking to me, and he thinks I owe Velma an apology. What should I do?

A WIFE IN NEED

DEAR WIFE: Send Velma a bunch of carrots, and tell her you're sorry.

Warning Is Doctrine

America's liberated hostages received a resounding welcome in Washington on their return home.

It was a joyful time for the capital and the nation as these 52 citizens, captured in an Iranian take-over of the U. S. embassy, capped off a long trip to Algiers, Germany and finally home.

President Reagan personally welcomed them back. It was a satisfying time for the nation.

But the president took the time to warn future terrorists that such acts are not going to be tolerated.

"Let terrorists be aware that when the rules of international behavior are violated, our policy will be one of swift and effective retribution.

"We hear it said that we live in an era of limits to our power. Well, let it also be understood, there are limits to our patience."

We don't think these were idle words by the new president of the United States. We think President Reagan is reflecting the national impatience with terrorists and tyrants who depend on our high regard for human rights to take pot shots at America.

We suspect that the presidential comments should be looked on as doctrine which will determine our future reaction to situations such as that which occurred in Iran.

Festival Is Good Idea

The Pitt County Livestock Association at its annual meeting Monday night heard about the Virginia Pork Festival which last year drew 12,000 people.

There is discussion of the PCLA holding a similar activity here, although it would be smaller than its Virginia counterpart.

Virginia agricultural extension agents discussed the festival, which is held in Emporia.

It sounds like a good idea to us. The festival could promote the production and consumption of pork, and at the same time be a lot of fun for everyone involved.

Seeking Answers

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The governor has quietly but effectively sent shivers up and down the spines of a lot of North Carolina legislators.

A budget which says the General Assembly must either come up with tremendous new sums for the Department of Transportation or face cutting up to 3,000 highway jobs stabs right to the gut of local political patronage.

Those are not cushy jobs at the planning tables in Raleigh's bureaucracy, or behind big desks in regional headquarters. Those are men in pickup truck and road-grader cabs; at the maintenance sheds; in the sign shops all over North Carolina.

The vanishing remnants of political patronage are nowhere stronger than in those jobs, as far as members of the General Assembly are concerned.

Two things are at stake:

Election Time

When it comes time to hand out campaign literature and put up posters, many veteran legislators have a readymade nucleus of an organization at home, largely because;

Department of Transportation jobs are almost the only ones which local legislators can still influence. Gov. Jim Hunt has pushed his political patronage nod all the way through state government, even down to clerical jobs in regional agency branches. Jobs in such favorite units as the courts and the Highway Patrol have slipped from legislative grasp. But it is still possible for a legislator to help a constituent land a relatively low-paying job on the roads.

Despite this threat to their precinct-level patronage, however, a sizable number of lawmakers are yet unconvinced that just slapping a higher tax on gasoline to raise some $200 million a year is the best answer.

As some are now saying: That would turn out to be the easy way out. At first it was believed that political fallout from such action would be severe. Now there is growing concern that repercussions from not taking action would be even worse.

BILL NOBLITT

But what action? As one veteran legislator grumbled at the coffee table one recent morning: "With all this bid-rigging, and people complaining about four trucks and 12 men going to patch one pothole, and cars getting smaller and people driving less ...why do we need to keep this empire of big roadbuilding?"

What IS needed, many legislators privately agree, is a completely new approach to the transportation system. Even if a higher gas tax is imposed, within a few years there will be electric cars which don't use gas. Trucks are largely responsible for the need for superhighways, and for the most of the damage to pavement requiring heavy maintenance.

Questions

The state still builds and maintains a lot of highways which are strictly city streets....leftovers from old state highways through town before expressways and bypasses became the rule.

The public still has no sense of priorities about the state highway program — which is needed most: two-lane connectors, streets in developing areas, better maintenance and shoulder-widening on existing highways, reduced lane and median widths to handle the smaller cars and slower speeds..?

And what of user payments for highway work? Shouldn't truckers pay more? Would toll roads provide an answer? Could car owners be hit with sizable registration fees based on size of vehicles?

These are among the questions which can be heard rambling through the legislative halls and

Protect Our Hostages

The one pay telephone booth just outside West Point had a line of people waiting to use it. There were not only newspaper people but press agents as well — anyone who wanted just a little piece of the hostages.

The man inside the booth wae shouting so everyone could hear him, "No, J.B., I haven't found anyone yet, but I'm getting close. I talked to the brother-in-law of one of the hostages, and he thinks we can swing it.... I know what you want, J.B. You want a hostage to say on TV that the thing he missed the most in captivity was Grandma Bonny Clyde's Hamburger Helper. Right. That's all he thought about during his ordeal.... I told the brother-in-law that. If the hostage says it, we'll give him a lifetime supply of Grandma Clyde's Hamburger Helper and a trip to Las Vegas to our next sales meeting.... Listen, J.B., there's an agency here trying to get any hostage to choose between Hero sausages and our hamburger helper.... will that hurt our campaign? ..."

People were banging on the phone booth, "Come on, you've been in there long enough."

The next man to get in dialed a number and said, "Zack, I think I've got a hostage to tell his story exclusively to us for $10,000. I told him we'd write it for him, and all he'd have to do is pose for a picture with his arms tied behind a chair. He referred me to his agent.... What do you mean, how did he get an agent so fast? There are more agents up here at West Point than there are Army cadets. Hold page one open. I'll get back to you. Is Tony writing the story now?... Good. Tell him to keep going. If we don't get a hostage, we'll say we got it from an impeccable source." He hung up, and a woman went into the booth.

"Terry," she said, "it's Rhonda. Tell Arthur I talked to the aunt of one of the hostages, and she said she'd be happy if the Bickering Company put in an entire new sprinkling system for her lawn. Tell Arthur to alert the media right away. We'll hold the press conference as soon as the family gets back home. Tell George to stick American flags all over the

Glued In To Super Bowl

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "Teamwork is the glue of victory," Alonzo Stagg used to say. Or was it Knute Rockne? Maybe it was "Pine Box" Pinzanno, coach of the Astoria Undertakers, the sandlot football idols of my youth.

Anyhow, they were dead wrong.

The glue of victory is glue, as everyone knows who saw the Super Bowl Game.

The Oakland Raiders won because they used a stickier brand of stick 'em.

Jim Plunkett's passes stuck to Cliff Branch, Bob Chandler and Kenny King, as if they were glued there, which they were.

Ron Jaworski's passing game came unglued because he obviously was stuck with Brand X in the goo department, but the Polish rifle's pitches did have a certain attachment for Raider Rod Martin, who had three interceptions using the superior adhesive.

I used to think wide receivers did their thing with speed, deception and sure hands, but TV's intimate coverage of the Super Bowl and the playoffs leading up to it deprived me of my innocence and naivety. Every time the cameras swept the benches on either side of the field, tall gangly creatures in dark undereye makeup could be seen swabbing their arms and chests with a mucky, viscid, mucilaginous substance not unlike the gunk the army used to lubricate tank tracks in Vietnam.

The first time I witnessed this sideline scene, I thought the network had cut to a movie commercial for "The Beast From Fifty Fathoms." But then one of the players immersing his arms in a bucket of glob grinned a toothless grin of embarrassed guilt, and the resemblance was more to a big bear at Yellowstone Park dipping into a pot of jam from a hijacked picnic basket.

By gum, can this sticky stuff be legal? How do they manage to pry the players apart after a well glued wide receiver comes in contact with an interception-minded cornerback all swabbed down and suited up for stick-to-itiveness? Was Gus Dorias into gunk when Knute Rockne invented the forward pass?

When I trod the gridiron, back in the days of iron men and wooden cleats, we never even thought of dabbling in library paste to put together a concrete passing attack. Otheriwse I would not have earned the nickname of "Fats Fumble Fingers." I might have gone down in the records, if any were kept, as "Mucilage Mitts Mulligan." Even now after the passage of more than a quarter of a century my sleep is troubled by the memory of the day I dropped the ball in the end zone with four minutes left on the clock and the Elmhurst Owls leading 6-0. A generous dab of stick 'em would have won me local fame and the heart of Gladys Gluck, a golden-haired cheerleader with a retrousse nose who defected at the dance that night to the Elmhurst quarterback.

Suspicions raised by the Super Bowl embitter my nostalgia: was Elmhurst's victory attributable to Elmer's Glue? How long has all this been going on?

One thinks of Max McGee — up to now my all time football hero — snagging seven passes, two for touchdowns, at that first Super Bowl in 1967 after, by his own admission, spending all night out on the town and getting back to his hotel at 8 a.m. Just in time to catch the bus out to the stadium. Was it true grit or a glutinous glob that helped that hung-over hero to hang in there long

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

On Monday, January 19, 1981, I went to the Pitt County Board of Election Office to change my voter registration from Guilford County. I have been in Greenville since, August, 1977. My original move was as a student, but I have been employed in various occupations continuously since my enrollment at East Carolina University. In April, 1980, I was offered full-time employment upon completion of my education, so my parents purchased property for me to establish as my PERMANENT residence in Greenville.

The clerks in the Elections Office tried to contend that since I was a student, my interests were not in Pitt County. They did everything possible to prevent me from changing my registration, but I was able to impress upon them that Greenville is indeed NOW my home, and I intended to exercise my constitutional right to vote, as I have in every election since I first registered in March, 1977.

In my opinion, it was obvious that the clerks opposed my registration because of the upcoming liquor by the drink referendum, and were going to do anything to prevent another possible "yes" voter from registering. This is NOT the way to help decide such an emotional issue facing the residents of Pitt County. Our State constitution provides for the referendum, and I wanted to be registered.

The citizens of Pitt County, whether lifelong residents, or students who have decided to make it their permanent county of residence deserve better treatment than I was offered from our public officials while exercising my right to register to vote.

I encourage all registered voters of Pitt County to voice their opinion on February 17, 1981.

Strength For Today

WITH OR AGAINST THE CURRENT?

Live fish swim against the current; dead fish float with the current.

From the beginning of history man has been exercising his ingenuity to make life easy. For the most part he has not been successful. God gives us as much improvement in life as we are willing to work for. The stream of life is glutted with dead fish being swept along with the current. The people who really amount to something are swimming against the current.

They may be the humblest kind of folk living bravely in little out of the way places and in straitened circumstances. They may be statesmen fighting for human freedom. They may be artists, writers — or they may be "hewers of wood and drawers of water". Position means nothing where character is concerned. The man from whose birth history is dated was a village carpenter and was despised by most of his contemporaries.

No Agreement About Future

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If you want to know where interest rates are headed right now, don't look for some kind of consensus judgment from the experts.

Some say it won't be long before rates resume their decline of December, which nudged the prime rate charged by banks down from a record 21½ percent to 20.

Others warn that the widely heralded "peak" of a month or so ago may have been just a way station on the road to even higher levels.

In other words, confusion abounds.

"There are no benchmarks any more by which we can judge how high interest rates can go," said Henry Kaufman, the well-known economist at the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers, in a recent television appearance.

But whether the prime rate is headed for 15 percent or 25 percent, almost everyone agrees that rates will remain at historically high levels for some time to come.

Thus, just as individuals and businesses have had to learn to cope with persistent inflation, it is evident that they must adapt to living in a climate of high interest rates.

Some of the effects of sky-high rates are plain to see. Mortgages at 14 percent or 15 percent, or more, make housing a less appealing investment than it was for most of the 1970s.

Auto manufacturers have found that is hard to sell cars — whether they are small or large, fuel-efficient or not — when the cost of an auto loan is as high as it is right now.

Alert savers have been quick to find the best places to put their money in times of high rates. Assets of money market mutual funds, now yielding 16 percent to 19 percent, have climbed to new highs above $80 billion this month.

Less apparent perhaps, but just as important, are the subsurface economic forces, set in motion by high interest rates, that affect just about everyone.

For instance, there is the news from Pensions & Investment Age, a trade publication, that growth slowed last year in the assets of the nation's 1,000 largest pension, profit-sharing and other employee-benefit plans. The figures showed only an 11.9 percent rise last year, compared with an increase of more than 19 percent in 1979.

The apparent cause: falling prices of bonds, in which many of the funds have invested heavily. When interest rates rise, prices of bonds are forced downward to keep their yields at prevailing levels.

Thus, in a roundabout but still very real way, high interest rates have cut into the retirement investments of millions of workers.

Still another subtle but pervasive result of high rates is the so-called "slow pay" effect. Seventy percent of business credit executives polled in early January said they had problems with slow-paying customers.

Nineteen percent classified the problems as "severe," according to the National Association of Credit Management, the organization that took the survey.

When cash on hand can earn high interest, and when it costs a lot to borrow money, a business (or an individual, for that matter) has a natural tendency to hold back on paying the bills.

In response to this, more than two-thirds of the credit managers said they planned to take a stronger approach to slow payers, by such means as turning more unpaid accounts over to outside collection agencies or imposing interest or service fees on overdue payments.

Such measures, as credit managers know, carry risks — of damaging good will with customers, and possibly of helping drive a hard-pressed customer or two into bankruptcy.

Almost two-thirds of the credit managers surveyed said they in fact did expect an increase in the number of bankruptcies in their respective industries during the first half of 1981.

When experts prescribe high interest rates and similar "painful medicine" for the ills of the economy, that is the kind of pain they are talking about.

lawn where the sprinkler system is going to be. And try to get the school superintendent to give all the kids in town the day off."

I was fourth in line, waiting patiently.

The next person in the booth said, "Ted, I'm still trying to give the lifetime gold pass for the Super-Orbit Roller Coaster to a hostage, but I can't get near anyone who will take it. None of the hostages seem to be very interested in a roller coaster ride at the moment. This is my problem. Almost everyone up here is trying to give a gold pass to the hostages for something or other. The National Football League, the Baseball Association, the circus people are all pushing gold passes, and it's not much of a story. Why don't we forget the gold pass and have a National Hostage Day at the amusement park? Any member of a hostage family will be allowed on any ride free. We'll decorate the Ferris wheel with a large yellow ribbon.... I thought you'd like it. Good. I'll spread the word up here right away."

The next person who went into the booth said, "Al, NBC has just offered $250,000 for a mini-series on the hostages. CBS came back with $500,000 and ABC has offered $750,000. How high do we want to go?... You want to go to a million, but I have to sign up all 52 families! It's not easy, Al. Some of them don't want any publicity. They just want to get out of the limelight.... You'll settle for half of the hostages? OK, it's your money. I know you've got the American Embassy in Tehran set built already, but the State Department says it may not cooperate in the show.... You'll build your own State Department on the lot? All right, I'll see what I can do. Have you got the cast yet?... You've got to be kidding? You really think you can get Vanessa Redgrave to play the Ayatollah?"

It was finally my turn. I called the Internal Revenue Service and got a man on the line. "I'd like to form the Society for the Protection of American Hostages in the United States, and I want to know if it's tax-deductible."

The man on the other end said, "Is this organization necessary?"

I replied, "You better believe it."

enough to forge that famous Packer victory?

After all, it was his coach, Vince Lombardi, for whom the Super Bowl trophy is named, who authored the winningest line ever written about winning: "Winning isn't everything — it's the only thing."

Unless, of course, you count Lady Macbeth, who made a memorable locker-room speech in the castle at Inverness and apparently knew all about the victory-enhancing properties of glue:

"But screw your courage to the sticking place and we'll not fail."

Rockne couldn't have said it better, and he was the Shakespeare of the shower room.

Rudyard Kipling, a rugby player, was talking about loyalty not conerbacks when he rewrote the Old Testament in the famous ballad line: "One man in a thousand, Solomon says, will stick more close than a brother."

Despite the biblical odds, loyalty is the glue that keeps humanity from slithering back into the primordial ooze — and, week after week, fills the stadium.

Raider owner Al Davis, now that he has found the magic mucilage that affixes his team's name to the Super Bowl trophy, might even have enough left over to keep the world champs stuck fast in Oakland, so all those loyal fans don't come unglued at the thought of their heroes moving to Los Angeles.

Open House For Public Works

Open house activities will be held on Sunday, Feb. 1 from 2-4 p.m. at the Public Works Department's new facility located at 1500 Beatty Street.

Mayo Allen, Public Works director, said that not only will the facility be open, but equipment will also be on display from the department's seven operational divisions: Street Maintenance; Sanitation Services; City Garage; Traffic Signs and Paint; Transit Operations; Cemetery Maintenance; and Right-of-Way/Beautification.

He noted that employees will be posted at various points to answer questions concerning equipment or the facility.

Allen said the facility is located on an 18-acre tract that replaces a small site located off Third Street. The old site was made available to the city as a public works yard in the mid 1930s, he said, pointing out that the population of the city at that time was some 8,000-10,000.

According to the director, the garage will demonstrate the use of front-end alignment, tune-up machine, and the operation of the crane for removing engines from vehicles. The transit system will utilize its new buses in providing transportation for those unable to walk through the 18-acre site. During the tour, the public will see stockpiles of sand and stone utilized in street repairs and emergencies and piles of broken asphalt kept for washouts due to flooding, he continued.

The beautification section has stockpiles of pine straw and top soil used in daily operations, he said, adding that the division is in the process of organizing an area to start its own tree nursery on the new site. Allen said visitors will also see where firewood, taken from trees that are pruned or removed because of disease or clearing of rights-of-way, are stockpiled for sale. Money from sale of the wood is used to purchase new trees and shrubbery to use as replacements or as needed to beautify areas of Greenville.

Allen said the traffic signs and paint division will demonstrate preparing street signs and the painting of city vehicles, while the purchasing agent will show his operation which involves buying supplies for all city departments.

A progress room will be on display to let visitors see what is going on at Public Works regarding new construction, sanitation routes, bus routes, beautification, and other areas, Allen mentioned. In addition, a training room will be available to show where employee training takes place.

The assembly room, seating 350-400 persons and replacing a 15-20 seat room at the old location, will be open to the public, Allen said and visitors will see the new ten-bay garage which replaces the old three-bay structure.

The spokesman invited the general public to visit the facility during open house, but he added that visitors are welcome at Public Works at any time.

Beatty Street, named after the late Ken Beatty, a former Public Works director, is located between 14th and Howell Streets.

MAN KILLED. . .Kenneth Lee Daughtry was thrown from this car last night and died instantly, investigating officer, Spencer Padgett said. His passenger, Pamela Kay Blow, was injured. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Auto Accident Results In Death

BELL ARTHUR — A Bell Arthur man died last night as his car overturned several times near here last night at 10:10 p. m.

State Highway Patrolman Spencer Padgett said Kenneth Lee Daughtry, 21, of Rt. 1, Bell Arthur was thrown out of the vehicle he had been driving and was probably killed instantly. His passenger, identified as Pamela Kay Blow, 20, also of the Bell Arthur area, was admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Daughtry was driving at a high rate of speed on Rural Paved Road 1206 just outside of Bell Arthur when he apparently lost control of the car, ran off the road on the left and hit a newspaper box, crossed the road, hit a mailbox and a road sign and then overturned several times into an adjacent field, Trooper Padgett said.

Further investigation will be done today, he added.

Measure On Savings And Loans Is Readied

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It may be hard to tell a bank from a savings and loan institution if soon-to-be proposed legislation is passed by the General Assembly.

Rep. Charles Holt, D-Fayetteville, said he and Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Raleigh, will file a bill within two weeks based on a report from a savings-and-loan study commission.

Holt said the legislation would completely rewrite the present statutes on state-chartered savings and loans, bringing them in line with recent federal legislation that deregulated federally chartered institutions effective Jan. 1.

"The deregulation has allowed savings and loans to become banks. That's what it amounts to," Holt said.

The federal deregulation allows savings and loans to have interest-bearing checking accounts, commercial lending powers, trust authority and new investment powers.

The study commission's proposal would invest state-chartered savings and loans with the same powers, plus what Holt terms a "controversial" addition.

That addition would lift the restriction on what state-chartered savings and loans can pay on passport savings. Presently the S&Ls can pay up to 6 percent in North Carolina, while banks are restricted to 5¼ percent.

Holt said he believes that additional measure would allow S&Ls to be more competitive.

"It's the only way a small savings and loan will be able to survive unless the economy does a big turnaround," Holt said.

Holt said he was not particularly fond of what the proposal entails, but "it's something that has to be done."

"Savings and loans were created for one purpose — to provide first mortgage loan assistance for people buying homes," Holt said. "It's a great departure from what was intended. But we have no choice because the federal government has gone this deregulation route. We've got to give the state institution some advantage, or they won't be competitive."

Holt said removing the ceiling on passbook savings would help keep some small S&Ls solvent, "because they won't get much business in checking accounts. It would be just an additional expense for them. Of course for some of the larger ones, it will be an advantage."

Holt said one result of the legislation would be a lot of S&L mergers.

"The industry is in trouble now," Holt said. "About 25 percent of the state savings and loans are losing money because of the recession. You're going to see a lot of mergers. The larger institutions will set up statewide networks.

"An example would be Home Federal of Charlotte would merge with Home Federal of Greensboro and Home Federal of Fayetteville. In addition, they would pick up a lot of smaller savings and loans. It's just an efficiency move. What happens, though, is they become banks, in essence," he said.

Farmville Central Has Observance

The Farmville Central Chapter of the Distributive Education Clubs of America observed a national day of Thanksgiving in honor of the freed American hostages with several activities. The day was designated by President Reagan.

DECA officers — Ronald Dixon, president; Debbie Gowan, vice president; Pat Cutler, secretary; Annie Fulton, treasurer; Leigh Hamm, parliamentarian, and Lea Hinson, historian, presented yellow ribbons to Bob Morgan, Farmville Town Administrator, and to area schools: H.B. Sugg Grammar School, Sam D. Bundy Primary School and Farmville Middle School. Russ Cotton, on behalf of Farmville Central High School, was presented a yellow ribbon and a plaque given as a tribute to the freed American hostages and to the eight who lost their lives in the rescue attempt on April 24, 1980. The Farmville Central High School student body and faculty were given yellow lapel ribbons to wear in honor of the occasion.

Nurse Students To Attend Meet

Nine Pitt Community College nursing students and their advisor, Judith W. Kuydendall, chairman of the Nursing Education Department, will attend the 1981 Student Nurses' Association State Convention to be held in Charlotte February 5-8.

Attending the meeting as delegates will be students Lou Ann Mozingo, president of the PCC Student Nurses' Association; Lynn Cleary, Virginia Braddy and Rita Holland. Also attending will be Sylvia Caraway, association treasurer, Sherry Davenport, Patricia Hudson, Kathleen Jackson and Susan McCallum. Ms. Hudson will be PCC's candidate for the Association's Student Nurse of the Year Award.

The theme of this year's convention centers around discovering what nursing practice is today and how student nurses can prepare for extended nursing roles. Student delegates will participate in the activities of the House of Delegates which includes discussion of the issues affecting nursing today.

The convention will include clinical focus sessions on nurse anesthetists, males as nurses, nursing administration, nurse midwifery, nurse practitioners, cultural nursing, emergency room nursing, oncology nursing and occupational health nursing.

There will also be a panel discussion on the Nursing Practice Act and its construction in the North Carolina General Assembly. The convention highlights include the traditional Saturday morning Student Nurse Uniform Breakfast, at which time a fashion show will be featured, and the Student Nurse of the Year Banquet which will be held on Saturday evening.

Life As It's Lived

Privacy Is A Memory Of Very Remote Past

By GAIL MICHAELS

Anyone who's ever had a preschooler can identify with a beer commercial in which the husband comes home to find the kids at Grandma's and his wife alone. His face lights up like a blowtorch.

And why not? I have come to the conclusion that Phillip and I will finally have some privacy when we send Meg to college.

If I sound pessimistic, I am. I keep waiting for the time when Meg grasps the concept of privacy, but the older she gets, the more inquisitive she gets. She thinks a conversation between two or more adults is a cue for Twenty Questions. She considers an attempt to undress as an occasion for an anatomy lesson.

She doesn't even respect bathroom privileges. She knows only that it's the one room in the house where she can count on a captive audience.

Her attitude is understandable. After all, she requires no privacy for herself either. Tell her in front of a room full of people that her pajama pants are on backwards, and she corrects the problem right there without the slightest trace of hesitation.

It's no wonder, then, that she couldn't understand the vehemence of my refusal to grant her a demonstration of the facts of life. "How do you ever expect me to learn anything?" she grumbled.

"You can take a biology class when you're in graduate school."

"Mary watches her parents." (So much for our prohibitions against discussing sex with other children.)

"I doubt that seriously."

"She told me she did."

"We've talked about this before. Mary has a tendency to make up stories."

Meg's eyes were gleaming. "Maybe she sneaked around a corner and crawled into the room when they weren't looking."

Statements like that can produce extreme anxiety in a house with no locks on the doors. Judging from the keys hung over the bathroom doors, I think the people who lived here before had had to take the doors off their hinges one too many times. As far as I'm concerned, though, a toddler locked in the bathroom for 6 to 7 hours is a small price to pay.

Phillip and I can't even hug without having Meg wriggle in between us. I remember doing this to my parents.

It's supposed to be Freudian, but I think it has more to do with normal childhood perversity.

Anyway, it was with great relief that Phillip and I found ourselves alone in the kitchen one Saturday afternoon while Meg was playing outside. I was stunned that she would actually leave us alone in the house together. "Maybe our troubles are over," I told Phillip.

He held out his arms to me. "I hope so."

I had no sooner embraced him than the cats appeared from nowhere and started winding around our ankles. Zachary crawled around the corner. "Muh!" he wailed. (That's the closest he comes to "Mama" and he uses it only in moments of crisis.) "Muh! Muh! Muh!"

Then again maybe our troubles are just beginning.

Shad Festival Planning Meet Is Set

GRIFTON — A special Shad Festival planning meeting has been called for February 2, according to Shad Festival president Keith Newby.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at the Grifton Historical Museum and all interested persons are invited.

Several new chairmen have been named to head events and several scheduling decisions must be made before the final program is readied for the souvenir brochure, Newby said. Persons wishing to have a part in the program and event decisions should attend the meeting Monday, he added, because once the brochure goes to press, no changes will be possible.

Comments and suggestions may be made by writing Grifton Shad Festival, Box 923, Grifton, 28530.

Dairy Awards Are Made

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Two Pitt County dairies received honors at the Eastern Carolina Dairy Herd Improvement Association's Annual Awards Banquet held Thursday night at Wellcome Middle School.

Charles McLawhorn of Winterville was presented one of the five trophies that were given at the banquet. McLawhorn and his son Steve received the High Cow Milk Production trophy, with a total production of 26,374 pounds.

Other trophies included the Most Improved Herd, which went to Gerald Aycock of Fremont. Baptist Childrens' Home of Kinston received the High Cow Butterfat Award with a total of 1,036 pounds of butterfat. High Herd Butterfat trophy went to William B. Bynum of Maysville, with a 632-pound herd average. The association average is 510 pounds. Bynum also received the High Herd Milk Production trophy with 16,574 pounds of milk, compared with the association average of 14,076 pounds.

Roscoe Barnhill of Barnhill's Dairy, along with Charles McLawhorn, was given a purple certificate from the Eastern Carolina Dairy Herd Improvement Association. The purple certificate indicates these dairymen had an annual butterfat production of 500-599 pounds of butterfat.

The Eastern Carolina Dairy Herd Improvement Association represents 16 dairies from seven eastern North Carolina counties. These counties include Beaufort, Hyde, Pitt, Lenoir, Wayne, Onslow, and Johnston.

These dairies are tested monthly for milk weights and samples are analyzed for butterfat content. "It is a record-keeping system," explained Pitt Extension Agent Mike Regans, "that enables the dairymen to make better management decisions."

Lawyers Disagree On Guidelines For Final Instruction To Jurors

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Prosecutors and defense lawyers disagreed over guidelines for final instructions to jurors as the court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood neared an end Thursday.

The arguments, heard during a session between lawyers for both sides and military judge Co. R.E. Switzer, centered over suggested texts for instructions to jurors.

Prosecutors urged Switzer to use an "insanity instruction" directly from one of the military guideline books, while the defense wants to include in the instructions a sentence saying, "Insanity and the lack of mental responsibility are interchangeable."

"We must have clear instructions to the jury as we couched our defense on mental responsibility," said Garwood's civilian defense counsel.

At one point Switzer noted, "We are dealing with instructions to lay people, and I am sorry that our manuals sometimes use language that even we don't understand (in the area of insanity versus mental responsibility.)"

Prosecutors and lawyers also disagreed over whether jurors should be instructed about duress Garwood may have been under during his captivity in Vietnam.

The defense argued duress was never brought up in the trial while prosecutors said that duress involving Garwood was implied throughout proceedings.

Garwood, 34, a native of Indianapolis, Ind., faces life in prison if convicted of collaborating with the enemy and mistreating a fellow American prisoner during the 14 years he spent in Vietnam.

The Marine returned to the United States in 1979 after seeking help from a Finnish businessman he met in a Hanoi hotel.

Garwood was a 19-year-old jeep driver when he was captured by the Viet Cong in September 1965 near DaNang in Vietnam.

Garwood's defense has conceded many of the actions about which other former prisoners of war testified. Instead, the defense has based its case on the testimony of psychiatrists who said the Vietnamese drove Garwood into a form of insanity, leaving the young Marine not responsible for his actions.

Garwood never testified during his court-martial. But several psychiatrists testifying for both sides repeated the stories they had been told by Garwood.

After weeks of testimony, Switzer surprised lawyers on both sides Tuesday when he dismissed three of the charges against Garwood — that he deserted, tried to persuade other American soldiers to lay down their arms and verbally abused a fellow prisoner of war.

Quarter Meet

FARMVILLE — Quarterly meeting will be observed at Mount Moriah Holy Church, 1202 S. Main Street here Sunday.

The morning service will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Otha Hayes. The 3 p. m. service will be led by the Rev. Lewis and members and choir of Antioch Holy Church, Bell Arthur, and the Rev. Few Japanese Found A Home In Christianity

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — On his visit to Japan, Pope John Paul II will find a Catholic Church that is secure, influential and admired — but which in 125 years has failed to convert more than a tiny fraction of Japan's people to its faith.

Church officials here are not dismayed by that state of affairs, and a leading Jesuit educator says it will be "very sobering" for the pontiff to "see the church in a minority in an industrialized country."

The Rev. Jose M. de Vera, a Portuguese Jesuit and dean of the prestigious international college at Tokyo's Sophia University, says the visit Feb. 23-26 will be the pope's first to a "truly non-Christian" country. Even mostly Moslem Turkey, which he visited last year, has a long Christian tradition.

Only about 1 percent of Japan's 116 million people are Christian, about two-thirds of these Protestant. Less than 400,000 are Roman Catholic, according to recent government surveys and the Catholic bishops' conference.

Available records indicate there were nearly as many Catholics or more — 300,000 to 600,000 — after the first Jesuit and Franciscan missionaries arrived in the 16th century. Even if the total was nearer the lower figure, the number today isn't growing much.

"We have reached the point of natural replacement — families of Catholics being baptized," de Vera says.

Christianity was brought to Japan by St. Francis Xavier in 1549. Within a few decades, up to 600,000 people were "converted." Modern Catholics dismiss most of those as false conversions.

"A daimyo (feudal lord) would become Christian, and everybody under him had to become Christian," notes the Rev. Campion Lally, a Franciscan missionary from South Orange, N.J.

About 1620, the new Tokugawa Shogunate (military rulers) closed Japan to the outside world, banning Christianity as a "foreign religion." All families were required to join Buddhist temples. Those who refused were killed.

Several thousand people publicly gave up their Catholicsm, but kept it in secret. Many of these "hidden Christians" emerged 250 years later, when the Tokugawas were toppled in 1856 and Japan was reopened to the world, Catholics as well as Protestants, now the most numerous.

It is expected that Protestants, too, will share in welcoming the pope, as his trips generally have ecumenical dimensions. His February trip also includes visits to the mostly Catholic Philippines Feb. 17-22, and stops in Guam Feb. 22 and in Anchorage, Alaska, Feb. 26.

Despite Japan's rapid assimilation of Western ideas under the reformist emperor Meiji, Christian missionaries who returned in the 1850s and 1860s found their task harder. Japanese could adopt Western industry and even education and remain Japanese, but not easily could they combine Western religion.

Early missionaries were often strict and dogmatic, condemning Buddhism and Shintoism, Japan's two principal religions, as paganistic, and threatening damnation for non-Christians. The other religions are more open, pointing "the way," rather than demanding that all follow.

Direct approaches such as door-to-door evangelism also clashed with Japanese culture. "Visiting homes and unilaterally engaging in evangelizing activity relating to exceedingly personal religious convictions without prior introduction, announcement or consent" is considered bad taste in Japan, one survey concluded.

Finally, there was the Western origin of the church itself — "batakusai," or smelling of butter, as the Japanese labelled those Western things or people they didn't like.

To become a Christian, a Japanese "must become in some ways a non-Japanese," said Lally.

"Religion in Japan is a common affair, like culture, something at home, not in the Japanese heart... Even non-religious Japanese say, 'I'm a Buddhist, or a Shintoist.'"

Catholic leaders say their emphasis now is not on conversion but simply to provide the church for those who want to find it on their own. "We have had to develop a new style of preaching the Gospel — not 'I'm right and you're wrong,'" said Lally.

Much of the effort is in secular education. The church has set up more than 1,000 schools ranging from Sophia University to kindergartens and grammar schools. Counting Protestant institutions, one in seven Japanese has attended some kind of missionary school.

The Catholic Church has 16 dioceses in Japan with all 20 bishops Japanese. About half the 1,916 priests are Japanese.

"We (foreign missionaries) are more Japanese than the Japanese priests and they are more Roman than we are," de Vera said wryly. He noted for example that Japanese priests and nuns insist on wearing the collar or habit while most foreign missionaries opt for non-clerical dress.

Of the pope's visit, de Vera says, "We don't have expectations of conversions," he said. "He (the pope) is not a Billy Graham." What is hoped for by de Vera, and other church leaders is a greater understanding of Japan by the pope, and perhaps greater visibility for the church in Japan.

Helping Women To Ordination

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Episcopal bishops backing ordination of women have formed an ad hoc committee to assist women seeking ordination in dioceses that put barriers in their path.

The church, in approving ordination of women in 1976, added a resolution that no bishop would be compelled to ordain women against his conscience.

Newark's Bishop John S. Spong convened the meeting which formed the new committee to help women whose progress toward ordination was reported being blocked in dioceses where bishops oppose it.

Share Many Of Their Concerns

LAKEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — The president of the Rabbinical Council of America, representing Orthodox rabbis, says that "to a large extent we share" the concerns of Moral Majority in seeking to shore up traditional sexual standards and end abortion.

"A return to classical values will strengthen the American family and restore the moral fiber of our nation," Rabbi Sol Roth told the council's Torah Convocation. But he added that "we must oppose that extremenist tendency" to exclude others as shown by some Moral Majority supporters.

Pope Planning Stop In Alaska

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pope John Paul II's plan to celebrate Mass Feb. 26 in Anchorage, Alaska, on his way back from visiting Japan gives some other Americans a chance to welcome "this dynamic spiritual leader," says the head of U.S. Catholic bishops.

Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis noted that the pope's previous visit to the United States in 1979, when he toured six cities, "was a joyous and inspiring occasion" for millions of Catholics and non-Catholics.

Bible Well Read Among Hostages

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — After visiting with former U.S. hostages on their brief hospital stay here, a U.S. Air Force chaplain says "a lot of them read the Bible and some read it several times" during their ordeal in Iran.

Chaplain Danny R. Thompson of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) says he sensed a "strong religious commitment" among the former prisoners.

There's an old saying that "blue eyes belong to leaders and brown eyes to dreamers..." We can't tell the color of this child's eyes from her picture, but they look a great deal like the eyes of rich wisdom.

Wisdom comes to most of us only after many years of struggle and growth. And even when we feel a bit wiser, we soon realize that there is always much more to learn — that, in truth, learning is a life-long process.

But whatever age and degree of wisdom we may attain, our need for a changeless source of inspiration remains the same. Within your place of worship you will find a power of truth founded on eternal love and maintained by divine wisdom. On such, character is built and wisdom enhanced.

Draw new courage and hope from the wellspring of knowledge that makes men free. Worship this week!

Banking, Schools Legislation Is Before Assembly

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) – Legislation was filed Thursday aimed at aiding banks and public schools.

Two of the bills would raise the interest rate ceiling on installment and contract loans. The other bill calls for a $600 million school construction bond referendum.

That action came on a busy legislative day that saw a number of important bills filed and a heated debate in the Senate on whether to endorse punitive actions against Iran by President Reagan.

It was decided that the chamber would condemn Iran's treatment of the hostages, but would not endorse punitive actions.

Also, committee action was stepped up. One panel recommended the elimination of the Sunset Commission.

Sen. James Garrison, D-Albemarle, filed two bills, backed by the N.C. Bankers Association, dealing with interest rate ceilings.

Garrison said one bill would raise the usury limit on small monthly loans up to $5,000 from 15 percent to 18 percent, or no more than 6 percentage points greater than the federal discount rate, now at 12 percent. In the same bill, loans up to $25,000, such as second mortgages, would have the interest ceiling pushed from 12 percent to 18 percent, or no more than 6 percentage points above the federal discount rate.

The second bill would raise the contract loan rates, which affect short-term loans. There is no ceiling on loans greater than $25,000, but on loans up to $5,000 that would be raised to 18 percent. On loans more than $5,000 but less than $25,000 the ceiling would be 16 percent. In both cases, if 6 percentage points above the federal discount rate is greater, that would be the ceiling.

Garrison said he expects support on the bills because the present ceiling "is driving banks right out of the loan business." He said the boost in rates would help the smaller banks more, since the larger banks "can move their money around more."

"This law will just bring North Carolina in line with other states," he said, adding the state is near the bottom nationally in those types of interest rates.

Five state representatives filed a bill calling for the school bond referendum that would allocate $750,000 to each county for construction, rebuilding, enlargement, improvement or repair of public school facilities and for the purchase of equipment for those schools.

The bill would allocate the remaining money on the basis of the 1979-80 average daily membership of the administrative units, meaning larger school systems would get larger alloctions.

The allocation for each county and school unit is listed in the bill, which was filed by Reps. Horace Locklear, D-Lumberton; David Diamont, D-Pilot Mountain; Richard Wright, D-Tabor City; Tom Rabon, D-Winnabow; and Lura Tally, D-Fayetteville.

If the bill is approved, the referendum would be put before North Carolina voters by Nov. 30.

"We wanted to get it in early and let the members read it," said Locklear, who headed a legislative study commission on the bond issue. "I'm sure it will stay in committee for a long time. It probably won't be reported out until mid session."

RALEIGH: "mid session."

"We were considering a $900 million bond issue, but we thought it was a little high considering the times and the mood of the country," Locklear said. State school officials have estimated the bond issue would meet only a third of the schools' needs.

J.D. Foust, director of government operations for the treasurer's office, told a legislative committee this week that the state could expect to pay about 9 percent interest on the bonds, which would be issued over six years.

Foust told the committee the total interest on the bonds, if repaid over 25 years, would amount to $717 million dollars, meaning that by the year 2007, the state would have to repay a total of $1.3 billion dollars in principle and interest.

In other legislative action:

Sunset Law

A legislative subcommittee set the stage for the sun to set on the Sunset Commission. The joint base budget subcommittee on general government recommended without objection that the Sunset Law Program be deleted from the proposed 1981-1983 operating budget. The program's elimination would cut about $460,000 from the proposed budget.

The subcommittee also recommended eliminating the Utilities Review Commission, which reviews utility rates, saying the Public Staff of the Utilities Commission performs the same function. That would cut about $120,000 from the budget.

The recommendations will now go to the full base budget committees for consideration.

Taxes

Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Greensboro, filed a bill Thursday that would allow North Carolina voters to propose laws and amendments on taxes to the state Constitution.

Voters could petition directly for a vote on a tax measure or request legislators to act on their petition. Under a referendum provision, voters also could approve or reject laws on tax levies after such measures were approved by the Legislature.

Cockerham said he got the idea for the bill from a vocal statewide group called United Taxpayers. A similar bill was proposed to the 1979 General Assembly.

If the measure passed, North Carolina would be the only state in the South, except Florida, to have such a provision. Twenty-eight states now have the law.

Sheriffs

A local bill concerning Buncombe County sheriffs was amended to have statewide impact. The bill, proposed by Sen. Robert Swain, D-Asheville, would permit the political party of the sheriff to select a successor to that position should the sheriff leave office before his term expires.

Schools

Rep. Robert Jones, D-Forest City, filed a bill that would exempt some board of education members from existing conflict of interest provisions. The bill would allow elected school board officials in small towns to continue to serve although they provide services or supplies to the schools if they are the only professional or business owner nearby who can inexpensively provide those goods.

Taxes

The House Finance committee reported favorably Thursday on eight tax-related bills proposed by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston. The major bill in the package was one to extend the homestead tax exemption deadline to April 15.

Crime

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Goldsboro, filed a bill that would make accessories before the fact in a crime punishable as principle felons. Barnes said that has been North Carolina law for 200 years despite a 1979 N.C. Supreme Court ruling that made a distinction between the two.

Banking

The House and Senate Banks and Thrift Institutions Committees met for and heard a state savings and loan official promise to present a legislative package that would completely rewrite the statutes governing savings and loan institutions. George King, deputy administrator of the state savings and loan division, said the package was the result of a legislative study commission's work.

Tunneled To Bank Basement

TUNNEL TO BANK — Macon (Ga.) police remove an oxygen tank from a tunnel that was discovered Thursday. The elaborate 200-foot tunnnel led to the basement wall of a downtown bank. (AP Laserphoto)

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Police in this Georgia city are trying to find out who dug a 200-foot tunnel beneath downtown steets from an abandoned building to an underground bank vault.

Four large tanks of oxygen and acetelene were found in the tunnel. Detective Bobby Lowe, director of the Macon Crime Laboratory, said the tanks would be fingerprinted and traced by serial number.

The tunnel, spotted by construction workers who were demolishing the abandoned building, leads from the Odom Realty and Insurance Building to The Citizens & Southern Bank.

The tunnel runs straight across the street to the bank, then follows the bank wall, around a corner, to the vault. The diggers apparently were trying to remove an extra layer of brick outside the bank wall shielding the vault when work was abandoned, police said.

Officials said they don't know how long it took to dig the tunnel or how long it had been abandoned.

"You gotta give him an "A" for effort," Thomas C. Frankum, a C&S vice president, said Thursday. "You'd like to have somebody that industrious working for you."

Priest Spoiled Hostage Easter

NEW YORK (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who visited the 52 captive Americans in Iran last year was "the worst advertisement for the Christian faith" and "spoiled Easter for all of us," says former hostage Moorhead Kennedy Jr.

"He said, 'You fellows, I'd like to spend 20 days with you or so (in captivity) to give me a chance to meditate,'" Kennedy said Thursday.

"Well, only a month or so before, we had been lined up half-naked against the wall, threatened with execution. It was a condescending remark, it was an insensitive remark," said Kennedy, 50.

He was attending a cocktail reception for 23 freed hostages and their families at the World Trade Center when he was asked about some ex-hostages' recent criticism of visiting clergymen.

Kennedy, an economic specialist who was third-ranking diplomat at the U.S. Embassy in Iran, refused to name the priest. But he said the cleric represented Amnesty International and visited the hostages on Easter Sunday.

Three clergymen conducted Easter services for the captive Americans last April: The Rev. Jack Bremer of Lawrence, Kan., and the Rev. Nelson Thompson of Kansas City, Mo., both Methodists, and a Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Darrell Rupiper of Omaha, Neb.

Jack Duggan, who answered the phone at Rupiper's house, said early today the priest is a member of Amnesty International but had not represented the group during that trip.

He said Rupiper was on vacation and not immediately available for comment.

"The reaction of the hostages to this particular clergyman was universally negative," said Kennedy. "He made a very bad impression on everybody."

Professor Byrd Guest Speaker

Professor William C. Byrd of East Carolina University was a guest speaker last week for Boone Trail Medical Services' annual meeting.

The corporation operates two medical centers in Harnett County and its administrator, Wilbur Webster, is a former faculty member of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions.

Byrd addressed the corporation's board and area citizens on the subject "Rural Health Center in the '80s". Emphasis was upon increasingly good business practices aimed at fiscal independence from governmental assistance.

Present or past faculty of the Department of Community Health at East Carolina have been directly involved in the planning or development of the majority of rural medical centers in Eastern North Carolina. Byrd was the recipient in 1980 of an "Outstanding Service Award" by the North Carolina Primary Health Care Association.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady for next week's trading. Supply moderate. Demand good. The North Carolina dock weighted average price next week is 47.13 cents per pound for small purchases of plant-grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,358,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced today amid signs that the economy may be slowing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 6.91 to 955.80 in the first two hours of trading. The blue-chip barometer climbed 6.31 points on Thursday.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 7-5 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Shortly after the market opened, the Commerce Department reported that its measure of future economic activity — the Index of Leading Indicators — fell 0.8 percent in December. That marked the index's first decline since May.

Separately, the Labor Department reported that non-farm business productivity dropped 1.1 percent in the final quarter of 1980.

And Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank, announced a reduction of one-half point in its prime lending rate, to 19.5 percent, raising speculation that a lower prime rate may become widespread in the banking industry.

The market has been sluggish in recent sessions as investors await details of President Reagan's economic plans, on which he is scheduled to address the nation next week.

Among today's early prices, Allied Chemical was up ⅞ at 51⅛. It reported sharply higher earnings Thursday. Union Carbide rose 1⅜ to 57⅞ and Du Pont climbed 1¼ to 45.

Oil stocks were mixed, with Atlantic Richfield up ⅝ to 60⅜ and Getty Oil down 1½ to 84⅞.

Big Board volume totaled 17.44 million shares, up from 15.15 million during the same period on Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .29 to 74.98.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .66 at 347.25.

Travel Advisory In Western N.C.

By The Associated Press

The National Weather Service extended the travelers advisory for North Carolina Friday to include all of the northwest Piedmont, the northeast Piedmont and the northern Coastal Plain. The advisory was expected to remain in effect through early afternoon.

Travelers advisories were also in effect for the mountains, foothills and northern Piedmont regions, where snow was expected to accumulate an additional 2 to 4 inches before tapering off to flurries around mid-day.

Snow was falling at Pamlico Sound, Rocky Mount, Raleigh-Durham Airport, Greensboro and over the mountain areas from Asheville north into Virginia and west over eastern Tennessee. Flurries were reported as far south as Wilmington.

Forecasters said warming temperatures would reduce driving hazards in all but the higher elevations by early afternoon.

The weak low pressure system that brought snow to the state grew to storm proportions and moved into Georgia from northern Mississippi. Snow from the system fell in a band from central Tennessee and Kentucky to western Virginia.

The system was expected to move into the Atlantic late Friday, taking the snow with it.

A cold front moved into the state Thursday night, and temperatures that had climbed into the mid 50s and low 60s Thursday afternoon plummeted into the 30s overnight. The mild, southwest winds shifted to the north, becoming more gusty and adding a chill to already frigid temperatures.

Snow was expected to taper off Friday morning, with accumulations of 1 to 2 inches in the northern Piedmont. Cloudiness should continue across the state, and high temperatures were expected to range from the 30s in the north and west to the 40s in the southeast.

Friday night temperatures were expected to drop into the 20s.

Fair weather is on tap in the east Saturday but increasing cloudiness is expected in the west. Rain will likely reach the state Sunday, with warmer temperatures.

An Epileptic's Plea for Acceptance

I have epilepsy. I am 22 years old. I have been graduated from college magna cum laude. I am an excellent tennis player. I have many friends and live a perfectly normal life. Fortunately, I am one of those with epilepsy who was born in an era when my condition can be controlled with drugs.

I haven't had a convulsion for almost nine years. However, a few months ago while at work I had a seizure. Sure it was most confusing to my co-workers, but I noticed a distinct change in attitude towards me since then.

I want to enlist you in bringing to the attention of the many people who read your column that I am not a freak, that I am normal, and that I should not be treated any differently than all the other people they come in contact with.

There are thousands, if not millions, of people with epilepsy who would be grateful to you for your efforts on their behalf. — Mr. R.D.O., N.J.

Dear Mr. O.:

If your letter alone were printed and read, it in itself would be a poignant portrait of personal courage coupled with an accurate description of the many diffuse misunderstandings people have about epilepsy.

I have often written that epilepsy is not a disease. It is not an infection. It is not contagious. It is not associated with mental deterioration. It is a condition in which there is a disturbance of the normal electrical activity in the brain.

Actually, all of us are basically epileptics. By that I mean that under special and unusual situations, every single person who is in good health is capable of having an epileptiform seizure. The reason that most of us do not have convulsions is because the electrical impulses in our brains do not overload the channel and have a fuse that prevents the seizures.

It is a psychological axiom that fear of the unknown produces many anxieties in those who are unacquainted with specific medical conditions. It is allowable to understand exactly what you mean when you said, "Sure it was confusing to my co-workers."

I have always had the feeling that people with epilepsy or conditions such as diabetes which can cause "spells" should alert their friends and co-workers to the possibility that a seizure might sometimes occur. By doing so, victims of epilepsy are able to enlist their friends' help rather than to terrify them. By doing so, people who witness a convulsion might even be prepared to do the simple things that are helpful physically and psychologically to support the victim. In another column I will in fact outline exactly what can be done to help the victim of epilepsy to recover from the seizure without physical harm and without shame and embarrassment.

Many walls of ignorance still surround epilepsy. These must be crumbled so that the epileptic can have the right to total integration in society.

Going For The Pin

D.H. Conley wrestler Greg Toler (top) turns West Carteret's Brett Colby during the Thursday night's match. Toler, wrestling at 121 pounds, pinned Colby at 1:21 and the Vikings defeated the Patriots, 34-28, to end the regular season unbeaten at 16-0, a school record for victories. Conley Wrestlers Pin Patriots, End Regular Season Undefeated

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley literally pinned West Carteret Thursday night. The Vikings won just five weight classes, but all five were pins and that enabled the Vikes to come away with a 34-28 victory over the Patriots in the season finale for both squads.

"Pins were definitely the deciding factor in the match," said D.H. Conley coach Milt Sherman, whose Vikings finish the regular season at 16-0, the school's best record ever. "We only won five of 13 matches and West Carteret won six but had only two pins."

The Patriots, who lost earlier this season to Conley, 41-23, could have tied the match with pins in the last two weight classes but could manage only two decisions.

"After Michael Long pinned his man West Carteret was only 12 points down and two pins could have tied the match," Sherman said. "We had a ninth grader and a 10th grader going against two seniors and if they could have pinned them it would have tied it up."

As it was, the Vikings' Stacey McCarter, a freshman, lost, 8-2, and DHC's Paul Menichelli, a sophomore, lost, 6-2.

The match started out, appropriately enough, with a 6-6 draw, the first of two draws, between Conley's Reginald Moore and the Patriots' Michael Remetio. The Vikings then took five of the next six weight classes for a 28-7 lead following Curtis Bridges' pin of Ben Lee at 140 pounds.

From there, the Patriots won five of the last six matches, but it wasn't enough as the Patriots lost only their third match this season.

The 16-0 record marked the fourth time Conley's wrestling team has gone unbeaten during the regular season. Three times the Vikings finished 14-0, which, until this season, was the most wins ever for Conley during the regular season.

D.H. Conley travels to Morehead City next Saturday for the Coastal Invitational Tournament, where, among other teams, the Vikings will again face West Carteret.

"I'd say it should be between us and West Carteret, followed by Havelock," Sherman said.

Summary:

100 — Reginald Moore (DHC) drew with Michael Remetio, 6-6.
107 — William Green (DHC) p. Willie Cowperthwait, 5:08.
114 — Roy Heverly (WC) d. Shannon Carson, 4-0.
121 — Greg Toler (DHC) p. Brett Colby, 1:19.
128 — Raymond Small (DHC) drew with Brent Conway, 3-3.
134 — Alexander Crandell (DHC) p. Rich Gentry, 3:40.
140 — Curtis Bridges (DHC) p. Ben Lee, 5:00.
147 — Scott Maxwell (WC) d. William Bridgette, 7-4.
157 — Carl Heverly (WC) p. Earnest Roach, 5:19.
169 — Harry Bare (WC) p. Willie Greene, 3:49.
187 — Michael Long (DHC) p. Richard Kanuck, 1:02.
197 — Ronnie Lewis (WC) d. Stacy McCarter, 8-2.
HWT — Bo McCain (WC) d. Paul Menichelli, 6-2.

Rams Hold Off Charger Rally

SNOW HILL — Greene Central held off an Ayden-Grifton rally last night to capture a 67-61 victory over the Chargers and move a half-game ahead of D.H. Conley in the Eastern Carolina Conference race.

Now 10-2 in the league and 14-4 overall, the Rams are one game up in the win column over the Vikings, who are now in second place, 9-3.

The Rams eased ahead of the Chargers during the first period, taking at 16-13 lead at the end of the period. Greene Central extended the lead with a 22-14 margin in the second quarter, giving the Rams a comfortable 38-27 halftime lead.

The third period saw that lead climb more, and the Rams carried a 54-39 lead into the last quarter. In that, however, Ayden-Grifton put on a rally, outscoring the Rams, 22-13, but they were too far back for the rally to be effective.

Roderick Lane led Greene Central with 18 points, while David Joyner had 12 and John Ray and Phillip Hill each had ten. Ayden-Grifton was led by Thomas Anderson with 17, while Chris Phillips had 16, Clarence Baker had 13 and Timmy Edwards had 11.

Ayden-Grifton's girls, winners in just one game this year, held a 10-8 lead over the Lady Rams after one period, but fell behind before the half and trailed 22-17 at intermission. Greene Central led, 34-27, going into the final period.

Letha Taylor led Greene Central with 25 points, while Sharon Suggs had 12. Ayden-Grifton was led by Cora Faison with 14, while Angela Griffin had 10.

Oregon State Gives UCLA Lesson On Who's The Boss

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Oregon State showed UCLA who was the boss.

"This could have been the best game we've had all season," said Oregon State basketball Coach Ralph Miller after an artistic 81-67 triumph over UCLA Thursday night. "I thought we executed well, both offensively and defensively. It would be very nice if we could remember to do that every time out."

The top-ranked Beavers, one of the country's best shooting teams, hit a season-high 69 percent from the field on 34 of 49 attempts in the big Pac-10 game. Steve Johnson led the way, hitting 12 of 17 field goal tries, grabbing 11 rebounds and scoring 27 points.

"Anytime you come in here (Corvallis, Ore.) and they shoot that well, you're in trouble," said Larry Brown, coach of the 10th-ranked Bruins. "They have Steve Johnson inside, and he's such a factor. Johnson's a great offensive player."

Miller: "It was defense and ball handling, the same old keys. To hold a team as good as they are under 70, that's good defensive work."

Elsewhere in college basketball, 13th-ranked Iowa defeated Purdue 84-67; No. 17 Michigan whipped Northwestern 77-52; Indiana downed No. 19 Minnesota 56-53 in overtime and Rhode Island upset 20th-ranked Connecticut 78-75.

The Beavers, tied with Virginia for the No.1-ranking in The Associated Press poll, never fell behind in the contest. UCLA trailed by as many as 16 points early in the second half but rallied to pull within six, 57-51, on Darren Daye's inside basket with 9:44 remaining.

But Oregon State reserve guard William Brew responded with a three-point play moments later and UCLA never got closer than seven after that.

Rod Foster paced the Bruins with 19 points, 14 in the first half.

"Oregon State plays with confidence," said Brown. "We didn't seem confident and I told the kids that. I don't want to see that again. We lost patience in the second half when we needed it."

Noted Oregon State guard Ray Blume: "We had a scare in Seattle (a 97-91 overtime victory against Washington). We came back here and went to work." (Blume hit eight of 10 field goal shots and had two steals.)

Iowa beat Purdue with the help of a 15-point streak in the first half sparked by Kevin Boyle and Steve Krafcisin. Boyle scored 21 points and Krafcisin came off the bench to net 20 as the Hawkeyes retained a share of the Big Ten lead.

"Our centers came out thinking aggressively," said Iowa Coach Lute Olsen, referring to Krafcisin and Steve Waite. "They got 15 rebounds and 28 points. That really was the difference.

"We have not been consistent inside. For us to have a chance to play for the title, we have to play consistently well inside for the times when our shots are not dropping."

Mike McGee scored 21 points and Johnny Johnson added 18 to lead Michigan past Northwestern. Michigan held an 11-point lead in the first half, only to have Northwestern rally in the second half and cut the margin to 52-47 with 9:19 left. But the Wolverines then scored 14 straight points to open a 66-47 advantage.

"We cautioned the players about Northwestern," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. "Last year we came here (Evanston, Ill.) and lost in a triple overtime. We lost to both Northwestern and Michigan State, who were ninth and tenth in the league, and we didn't want it to happen again.

"This league has such balance that there isn't a team that can't beat you," added Frieder. "We treated this game with special importance, and we'll do the same thing when we go to Wisconsin Saturday."

Randy Wittman scored all 14 of his points in the second half and Indiana overcame an 18-point first-half deficit to down Minnesota. The Hoosiers trailed 26-18 at intermission but outscored the Gophers 21-10 to grab a 39-36 lead midway through the second half that started them toward their victory.

Horace Owens scored 27 points, including seven free throws in the final minute, as Rhode Island upset Connecticut. Owens led four Rhode Island players in double figures as the Rams won their seventh straight game and improved their record to 14-3, the same as Connecticut's.

"We won it at the foul line," said Rhode Island Coach Claude English. "There's no doubt about it."

Rhode Island made 14 of 19 foul shots in the second half with Owens connecting on seven of eight foul shots in the final minute.

"UConn is a super team," English said. "But this has to be our biggest win of the year."

In other action, Danny Kottak and Kenny Stancell combined for 28 points to lead Virginia Commonwealth to a 62-42 victory over Jacksonville; Dale Solomon's 16 points paced Virginia Tech over Liberty Baptist 91-67; Georgia Southern whipped Houston Baptist 59-55 behind Reggie Cofer's 16 points; Mark Smith's jump shot with 39 seconds remaining lifted Illinois over Michigan State 71-70 and Clark Kellogg scored 25 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to pace Ohio State past Wisconsin 71-67.

Also, Oliver Lee's 19 points triggered Marquette past Cleveland State 58-54; Louisville stopped St. Louis University behind Rodney McRay's 14 points and Paul Spradling's 20 points powered Tulsa past Southern Illinois-Carbondale 68-60.

Lady Pirates Host Trojans

East Carolina's 19th ranked Lady Pirates play host to #8 Southern California tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates come into the game following their 78-77 overtime victory over #13 N.C. State on Wednesday night. Southern California was 14-1 prior to games this week.

The lone Southern Cal loss came at the hands of #2 Old Dominion, and they recently topped #4 Long Beach State, 79-70. The Lady Trojans are led by Pam and Paula McGee, freshman twins who stretch 6-3. Paula is averaging 22.5 points and 10.6 rebounds a game, while Pam is hitting 16.0 points and 9.5 rebounds. Senior forward Kathy Hammond, 6-0, rounds out the tall front line, averageing 13.3 points a game. Guards Kathy Doyle, 5-11, and Kathy Haynes, 5-9, round out the team, one of the tallest in the country overall.

East Carolina's senior center Marcia Girven continues on her quest for 1,000 points and rebounds. She currently has 943 points and 906 rebounds. She can become only the second Lady Pirate to reach the double-1,000 mark if she does.

East Carolina will host Appalachian State on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Bulls Rout Celtics, End Their Streak

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics finally got bounced after 14 games. And they weren't let down easily by the Chicago Bulls, either.

"To say I was disappointed is the understatement of the year," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch after a 108-85 rout by the Bulls Thursday night that stopped a 13-game National Basketball Association winning streak.

"I can't use the words I would like to use for family newspapers. It's too bad we don't have another practice before the All-Star Game because I'd probably make them work without a ball."

The Celtics, who had won 25 of their last 26 contests, suffered their worst loss of the season while the Bulls won their sixth straight game to reach the .500 mark, at 27-27, right before this weekend's All-Star Game in Richfield, Ohio.

"I remember when we beat Boston by 21 points in March of 1970 (134-113) but this was our biggest margin," said Chicago Coach Jerry Sloan, a former Bulls player. "Reaching the .500 mark this way really makes me happy at the All-Star break."

In other NBA action, it was Golden State 117, Detroit 112; Cleveland 115, Phoenix 111; New York 114, Atlanta 111; San Antonio 122, New Jersey 108; Utah 99, Houston 97; Denver 131, Milwaukee 118; Portland 108, San Diego 106 and Los Angeles 118, Kansas City 104.

Fitch all but conceded the game with 8:45 remaining when he sent in reserve Eric Fernsten while Larry Bird, Chris Ford and Robert Parish sat on the bench.

Bird, who suffered a hip injury in Wednesday night's victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in Boston, left the game with 6:38 remaining in the third quarter and never returned. He wound up with 10 points.

Reggie Theus led the Bulls with 22 points.

"I took myself out of the game because my thigh was killing me," Bird said. "I really learned a lesson against Philadelphia when I ran into Darryl Dawkins. I'm never going to do that again."

Bird offered no excuses for the Celtics' performance against Chicago.

"We beat the Bulls badly one night when they had a couple of guys hurt so they returned the favor tonight," Bird said. The 6-9 forward added: "When we meet up with them again we'll give them something to remember us by. But we beat them five out of six this year, so I guess they can gloat a little."

Warriors 117, Pistons 112

Bernard King, Lloyd Free and Joe Barry Carroll accounted for 88 points as Golden State rebounded from an 18-point deficit to beat Detroit.

King and Free both wound up with 30 points while Carroll had 28 to enable the Warriors to snap a two-game losing streak and send the floundering Pistons down to their 42nd defeat in 55 starts this season.

Cavaliers 115, Suns 111

Mike Mitchell and Roger Phegley each scored 27 points and Kenny Carr collected 26 points and 18 rebounds to lead Cleveland over Phoenix.

The Cavaliers led 86-74 at the end of three quarters and expanded their lead to 91-74 early in the final period. Walter Davis then led a Phoenix charge which cut the Cleveland margin to 101-100 with two minutes remaining. But Carr scored eight points and Mitchell added four in the final 1:40 to hold off the Phoenix rally.

Knicks 114, Hawks 111

Ray Williams scored 15 points during a 40-point New York first quarter and the Knicks went on to a tight victory over Atlanta.

Williams finished with a team-high 24 points as the Knicks broke a three-game losing streak and posted their first victory in Atlanta since December 1977. The loss was the 13th in 14 games for the Hawks, whose losing streak on their home court reached seven games.

Spurs 122, Nets 108

George Gervin scored 26 points, James Silas added 24 and Mark Olberding chipped in with 21 as San Antonio defeated New Jersey.

The victory ran San Antonio's home winning streak to 12 games, tying a club mark dating back to 1968 in Dallas and breaking a three-game Spurs losing streak, the longest victory drought the team had suffered this season.

Jazz 99, Rockets 97

Adrian Dantley scored 37 points and teammates Ben Poquette and Rickey Green sparked a fourth-quarter comeback to help Utah beat Houston.

Moses Malone led the Rockets with 28 points and Major Jones, Mike Dunleavy and Calvin Murphy finished with 12 points each.

Nuggets 131, Bucks 118

Reserves Kiki Vandeweghe, Dave Robisch and Billy McKinney combined for 50 points as Denver whipped Milwaukee.

The victory marked the second time this season that the Nuggets have strung together three victories. The last such string was in early November, when the Nuggets beat Seattle twice and Los Angeles.

Trail Blazers 108, Clippers 106

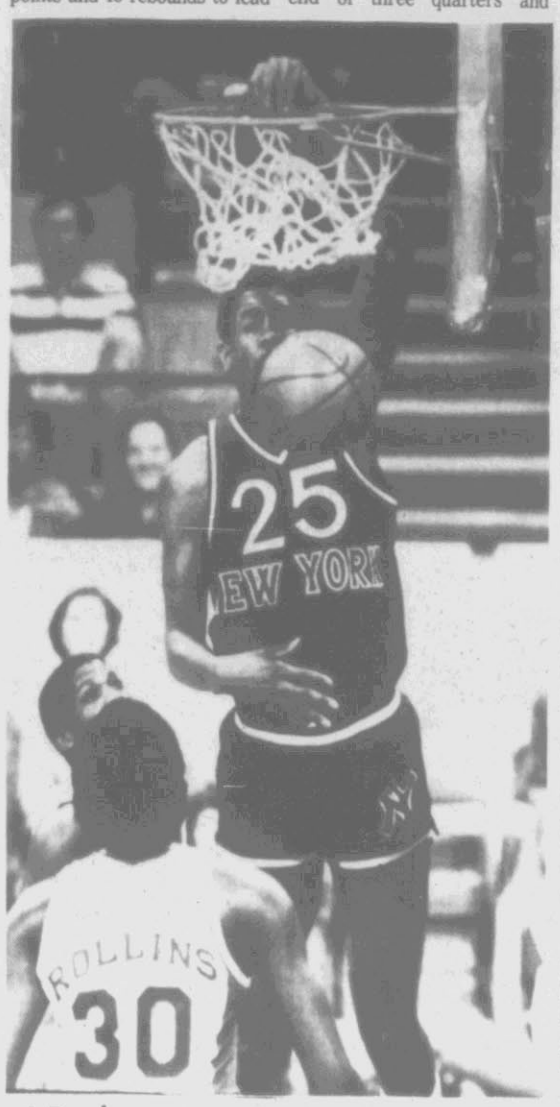

Kelvin Ransey's 10-foot jump shot with one second to play lifted Portland over San Diego. Ransey, a rookie guard from Ohio State, took an inbounds pass from guard Jim Paxson with 11 seconds remaining and dribbled the ball for nearly 10 seconds before shooting.

A jump shot by Ransey with 58 seconds remaining had earlier given Portland a 106-102 lead.

Lakers 118, Kings 104

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 35 points and moved into second place on the all-time NBA field goal list as Los Angeles beat Kansas City.

Abdul-Jabbar passed former Boston Celtics star John Havlicek with 2:47 left in the third quarter when he made one of his patented sky hooks. It was the 10,514th field goal of his career, leaving him behind only Wilt Chamberlain in that department.

Raider Move Attempt May Be Over For Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An attorney for the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission believes the Oakland Raiders' anti-trust suit against the National Football League will probably be postponed and if that's the case, it will probably prevent the Raiders from moving to Los Angeles this year.

Maxwell Blecher expressed that opinion after a federal judge, still hoping for a last-minute settlement of the suit, held closed-door meetings Thursday with a half dozen attorneys in the case.

The all-day meetings broke up at 5:15 p.m. (PST) without a settlement being reached. U. S. District Judge Harry Pregerson ordered attorneys for the parties to return next Wednesday for further discussions.

Blecher said that Pregerson "has given an indication that the trial date (of Feb. 9) may not be definite."

"I expect the trial will not be held until late February or early March," said Blecher. "I don't anticipate a decision until sometime in mid-June, maybe later."

Bill Robertson, negotiator for the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, was the only principal figure in the case who was present Thursday as the judge tried to find a compromise in the bitter legal battle which stems from the Super Bowl champion Raiders' efforts to move to Los Angeles.

Robertson said only that Pregerson had asked that he attend the pretrial conference.

"If the NFL was going to make a proposal I guess they would want me to be there," he speculated.

Blecher said that Thursday's talks "were just an endless series of discussions of possible settlements. The talk was very animated, but not very productive. Each possibility discussed was unacceptable to one or more of the parties involved."

Blecher said Pregerson encouraged the parties to reach a settlement, if possible.

The Coliseum is seeking a replacement team following the Los Angeles Rams' move to Anaheim, and the Raiders are suing the NFL for alleged anti-trust violations. At issue is an NFL rule that three-quarters of all the league's team owners must approve any franchise shift.

The league voted 22-0 last March against the Raiders' proposed move. It would take 21 affirmative votes to approve a move.

The battery of lawyers who crowded into Pregerson's chambers Thursday included representatives of the Raiders, the Coliseum Commission, the NFL, the Rams and the Oakland Coliseum, which was granted permission to join the suit as an intervenor last week.

The attorneys were generally tight-lipped about the secret meetings. After a talk with the entire group, Pregerson met separately with the attorneys for each party.

At one point former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who, along with attorney Moses Lasky, represents the Raiders and its managing general partner Al Davis, emerged from their private session with the judge and gave an elaborate shrug but refused to say much.

There is a good possibility that beginning with the 1981 football season, the teams that have been left behind in the championship action will get a second chance.

The North Carolina High School Athletic Association will be shortly sending ballots to its membership on a proposal to have what is known as a "Division II playoff."

Currently, for the most part, only the champions of each conference go to the NCHSAA playoffs. A couple of years ago, Farmville Central went 10-0 and Southern Nash went 9-1, losing only to Farmville in a close contest. Farmville went on to the playoffs and Southern Nash was left at home. That turned out to be one of the key reasons for the proposal.

In 4-A, there are currently 10 conferences, and six of these are given second berths, on a rotating basis, to fill in the 16-team field for the playoffs. This plan will continue. But the remaining four runners-up, under the proposal, would form the 4-A Division II and play for that championship.

In the rest of the classes, the runners-up will hold their own Division II championship. Where there are rotating vacancies that pull runners-up into the Division I championships, no other teams from that conference would advance, and the Division II field would be reduced accordingly.

The proposal will go before the NCHSAA's Board of Directors, and officials feel that it will be passed.

This should improve the races, too, since second place becomes almost as important as first.

There have been several rules chances by the National High School Federation, to take effect during the coming football season, and a couple of them could cause some controversy.

First, in an effort to cut knee injuries, there will be no blocking below the waist outside the "neutral zone," the area that surrounds the line of scrimmage. This cuts out the so-called rolling blocks, except for someone trying to bring down the ball-carrier.

Some feel that it will cause problems in officials seeing the tail-end of a legal block and thinking it is and illegial one. Also, illegial use of the hands is likely to see an increase for a while. Charles Adams of the NCHSAA said that officials have been told that unless they see the whole play, they are not to call illegial blocking, however.

This has been the accepted standard for clipping calls for several years, but many times, officials have been tricked into calling fouls when they haven't seen the whole play. So added emphasis on this needs to be made by the NCHSAA to the officials.

The other major rules change does away with the chop block, in which one lineman stands up another, and another hits the man from behind low, in the neutral zone. This is another rule expected to cut injuries.

One of the harder to call, however, may be one in which the ball-carrier can not be flagged for spearing. Adams notes that players usually go into a tackler head first, mainly for protection. It will now be a judgement call by the officials whether the ball-carrier is protecting himself or trying to spear his opponent.

Two other changes were made. One does not allow the kicker to be blocked before he has gone five yards from the spot of the kickoff. The other allows the home team to have a 20-minute half-time, with prior consent of the visiting team.

It will be interesting to see how these rules changes affect the game. Adams thinks the changes will be minimal. "The teams will have to change their blocking schemes," he noted on the downfield rule, "but so far, I've only had two negative calls about it."

Jaworski Can End A Winner

HONOLULU (AP) — Although his team lost the Super Bowl, Philadalphia quarterback Ron Jaworski still has an opportunity to close out the season with a bowl victory.

"I get a final chance to go out a winner," said Jaworski, who wll share the National Football Conference signal-calling duties with Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski against the American Conference in Sunday's Pro Bowl.

"It wouldn't make up for not winning the Super Bowl, but it would still be nice to end up the season with a win," he said after Thursday's practice session at Aloha Stadium.

Jaworski threw three interceptions and his face was a study in frustration in the waning moments of last Sunday's 27-10 Super Bowl loss to Oakland. But now he's accepted the defeat.

"It was 'a huge disappointment, but there's Nothing that can be done about it now," he said "It was a big thrill for me just to be in the game, and I think...I know we'll be back there again.

"We scrapped and we battled in that gama, but we just couldn't get anything going. Everytime we seemed to get started, we'd get a penalty or something."

The one play that haunts him a little, Jaworski said, was an interception he threw early in the game that led to Oakland's first score and put the Raiders ahead for keeps.

"That one bothered me because that's exactly what I didn't want to do, make a mistake that let them take the lead early," he said "I knew if that happened, I'd be facing their nickel defense and have Ted Hendricks (Oakland linebackar) and the rest of them coming after ma all day.

"It's impossible to explain but it was just one of those days when nothing worked right for us"

Jaworski, 29, was the NFC's leading passer this season with a 90.9 rating. An outstanding, though generally overlooked collegiate quarterback at Youngstown State, he has started the past four years for the Eagles after serving as a Los Angeles Rams' babkup for three years.

The Pro Bowl appearance will be his first, and Jaworski said: "It's really fun to be here with all these great players and, considering all the talent, it's gotta be an exciting game Sunday".

Palmer In LPGA Lead

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sandra Palmer says the wind helped her card an eagle on the 18th hole to go 7-under-par after the first round of the $100,000 Whirlpool Championship of Deer Creek.

Palmer, now in her 18th year on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, hasn't won a tournament since 1977. She was one of six women who had eagles Thursday on the 18th, a 445-yard hole that used to be a par-4 but was reclassified a par-5.

"It's still a good hole," the first-round leader said when asked if she thought the 18th too easy. "If they played with the tees back, it's hard to get across the creek if you don't have a good lie. The fairway is thin in that area."

Having a slight breeze behind her, instead of the usual crosswind, also was a help, Palmer said.

In addition to the eagle, she had five birdies over the 6,260-yard Deer Creek Country Club Course, equalling her best round ever in the LPGA.

AL Owners Approve Sales

CHICAGO (AP) — The new owners of the Chicago White Sox and the Seattle Mariners say they are committed to developing their clubs' farm systems.

Sale of the White Sox to a group headed by a suburban real estate developer and a network television executive and of the Mariners to a California millionaire won the unanimous approval of American League owners Thursday.

The new owners were approved by a pair of unanimous 14-0 votes at a meeting that lasted less than an hour.

The White Sox were bought for $20 million by a group headed by Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn while George Argyros purchased 80 percent the Mariners for $10.4 million.

Reinsdorf, 44, is a Highland Park real estate developer. Einhorn, 45, is a Paterson, N.J., television executive who plans to resign his position with CBS next month.

Argyros, 43, is a self-made millionaire land developer from Newport Beach, Calif., who only 20 years ago was the manager of a supermarket.

With the White Sox, Reinsdorf will run the baseball end of the operation and Einhorn the business end. They will be equal and general partners but are taking on numerous limited partners.

They bought the club from a group headed by Bill Veeck after the American League owners twice turned down sale of the team to Edward J. DeBartolo Sr., a Youngstown, Ohio, developer.

DeBartolo was turned down partly because the league opposes absentee ownership, and American League president Lee MacPhail was asked why the league allowed Argyros to buy the Mariners.

"Because there was a local bid for the White Sox," said MacPhail. "Such was not the case with Seattle. There was nobody around willing the purchase the club locally."

Seattle will retain some flavor of local ownership. Four former owners will each retain 5 percent of the club. They are entertainer Danny Kaye, Stan Golub, Lester Smith and Walter Schoenfeld.

"Danny O'Brien will remain president of the club and I will be active only as an owner," said Argyros. "Our goal is to make the team a contender but it's too early to talk about changes.

"It's our obligation to make the team exciting for the fans," said Argyros. "We have a manager in Maury Wills who was an exciting player, but he came on the scene in the last half of the season."

Argyros added he would "take one step at a time and look at the whole marketplace. I believe in a strong farm system."

Reinsdorf echoed that.

"Our goal is to win and to remain competitive. You have to build a farm system," he said. "Free agents offer a shot in the dark and if you have one or two holes to fill we'll do it. The Sox do have a farm system but it needs to be expanded. It is not deep enough."

Veeck apparently will be offered a position with the new organization but might decline. "I haven't had a vacation in a long time," Veeck said.

Rosettes Host Sectional Meet

Rose's Gymnastic Training Center will host the Eastern Sectional Gymnastics Meet on Saturday.

Fifteen team from the eastern part of the state will be competing in Class III and Class IV level competition. This is a USGF sanctioned age group meet for qualification to State level competition. The N.C. State meet will be held in Charlotte, Feb. 21-22.

Over 135 competitors are expected in three age groups, 9-11, 12-14 and 15 & over, in the two class levels. Competitors had to attain a qualifying score of 26.00 in the all-around to take part in the meet.

Several members of the Rosettes have qualified for the competition. In Class IV they include Allyson Maloney, Susan Grimsley, Anna Harrington, Suzanne Hinson and Frankie Lynn Hardee. Class III qualifiers include Kristi Jennings, SuEllen Nashner, Kerri Moreno, Kim Moreno and Nancy Johnson. Two other members of the team qualified, Jennifer Newton and Caroline Lee, but will miss the meet due to injuries.

There will be three sessions of competition on Saturday. The first, featuring both Class III and IV competition, starts at 9:30 a.m. The second, for Class IV only, begins at 2 p.m., and the third, Class III and optionals, begins at 7 p.m.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children 12 and under.

The meet will be held at the Carolina Country Day School gymnasium.

Former ASU Player Gives Demo Of Alleged Slap By Kush

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Arizona State University football player Kevin Rutledge said in a 1979 court deposition his football helmet was fastened when former coach Frank Kush allegedly punched him, but said in later court documents it was unfastened.

Rutledge testified for the third day Thursday in his $2.2 million lawsuit against Kush and others. Rutledge has accused the coach of punching him as he left the field during a 1978 football game in Washington.

The trial was recessed until Monday when Rutledge is scheduled to resume his testimony.

Rutledge testified a 1979 deposition said his football helmet was strapped to his chin when Kush allegedly punched him in the lip. But Rutledge has testified in the past three days his helmet wasn't strapped at the time.

Kush's attorney, Warren Platt, has been trying to show it would have been impossible for Kush to strike Rutledge and split his lip if his helmet strap was buckled.

Platt donned a helmet Thursday and challenged Rutledge to slap his head as hard as he claims Kush did.

"I would really appreciate it if you didn't tear my head off," said Platt.

Rutledge used his open right hand to land a wallop that sent a loud crack through the courtroom.

At Platt's direction, Rutledge grabbed the face mask and shook it vigorously back and forth and up and down, once with the strap buckled and once without.

When Rutledge finished the second demonstration, Platt had a mark on the bridge of his nose.

"It makes a difference if the strap is one or off, doesn't it?" Platt asked. "The face mask hit me in the forehead that time, didn't it?"

Rutledge said such slapping "was part of his (Kush's) daily routine" and was "something he did every day to a number of players including myself. I didn't particularly feel it was unfair treatment because it did, as I said, happen to numerous players all the time."

Rutledge said the slapping didn't injure him permanently, but "it rings your head, as you can imagine."

Rutledge also admitted inconsistencies in deposition and courtroom testimony concerning his attendance at a 1979 summer school.

Wednesday, Rutledge also acknowledged that he failed to mention in past depositions two separate incidents of alleged verbal abuse involving Kush that Rutledge has testified about in the trial.

Over the vigorous objections of Rutledge's attorney Robert Hing, Judge Thomas Kleinschmidt allowed into evidence a form letter to Kush allegedly signed by Rutledge in 1977 that states, "I understand that I will be considered a 'walk-on' player."

Such players had not been promised scholarships, said Michael Gallagher, attorney for the Arizona Board of Regents. The letter was pulled from Rutledge's Arizona State athletic department file, he said.

Rutledge testified that during the punching incident and during a confrontation with Kush in a 1978 preseason practice session, Kush swore at him. He said he could not say specifically if anyone had seen or heard either incident.

Platt also asked Rutledge if he talked to his father, Gordon, in 1978 about filing a lawsuit.

Rutledge said he did not talk to his father about the possibility of a lawsuit until the summer of 1979.

Platt, in his opening statement, said Rutledge is a "pawn" in the lawsuit for his embittered father. The attorney said Gordon Rutledge wouldn't accept that his son wasn't good enough to play in the Arizona State University defensive backfield and developed a vendetta against Kush.

Who Gets The Most Attention At The Crosby? The Weatherman

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson's here. So is Jack Nicklaus. And former President Gerald Ford.

And there's a horde of show business celebrities — Bob Hope, Clint Eastwood, Jack Lemmon, George C. Scott.

None, however, get quite the attention accorded the person who so often rules the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament — the weatherman.

Another in a series of winter storms forced a postponement of Thursday's first round in the famed tournament and set back the schedule by a full day. It now has a Friday-through-Monday run.

Even that delayed schedule is very much subject to the weather. Tournament officials, with one eye on the gloomy clouds rolling in off Carmel Bay, were extremely cautious and non-commital in making long-range plans.

"Perhaps," said Clyde Mangum in assessing the possibility of playing the first round Friday.

"Hopefully, we will be able to complete the tournament on Monday."

Pressed for contingency plans in the case of more rain or other delays, Mangum said only: "We wouldn't want to go beyond what we have announced."

Mangum, deputy commissioner for the PGA Tour, announced the one-day postponement Thursday after more than three inches of rain and some hail fell on the three Monterey Peninsula courses.

Pumps were used in an attempt to empty the flooded sand traps, but they couldn't keep up with the squalls. Fairways were also flooded. Shallow pools formed on greens and tees.

The forecast called for showers through today with clearing on the weekend.

The format for this unique event makes it impractical for double rounds to be played as in some tournaments. The 168 pros, each with an amateur partner, play one round on each of three courses before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach. It would be inequitable to cut the field before all players have played all courses.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — PRESS CLUB BUDGET COMMITTEE STRESSED MOUNTING SURPLUS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Time And Money Failed Whale Movie

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six years and a record amount of money went into turning Farley Mowat's "A Whale for the Killing" into a three-hour movie for ABC. Why isn't it better than it is?

Mowat's impassioned account of a great fin whale's entrapment in a Newfoundland lagoon somehow became a trite, often clumsy action-adventure yarn, with a little romance thrown in. The filmmakers' good intentions' shine through, but it's not enough to save this movie.

That's a shame, too, for "A Whale for the Killing" is one of those rare TV projects meant to inspire and uplift, even to give cause for ponder; and it had a fascinating basis in Mowat's book.

But compromises are made when dealing with networks; it appears that the vitality of Mowat's story was compromised right out of this movie.

Mowat is a Canadian writer who lived for five years in a Newfoundland outpost called Burgeo. A writer inclined to tales of survival, he was understandably inspired by the appearance one winter day in 1967 of a fin whale in a nearby pond.

The trapped animal became the object of profound acts of human cruelty and heroism, which became the stuff of Mowat's treatise on the sanctity of life in the face of man's rapacity.

"A Whale for the Killing" came to the attention of Robert Lovenheim and Edward Rissien, two filmmakers on staff at Playboy Productions. "We knew this wasn't going to be an easy project," says Rissien.

"First, there was the matter of economics, finding a way to resolve the problem of production costs, which would be as high or higher than any other made-for-TV movie. I don't mean to knock TV movies, but this isn't a lot of car chases and it isn't some kid dying of leukemia. We had to haul a damned scale model of a whale from Van Nuys to Newfoundland.

"The whale had to do tricks, it had to dive, it had to surface and undulate and do all the things that whales do."

Then there was the matter of dealing with ABC.

"The network has a series of approvals — they have script approval, star approval, director aproval, location approval. We wanted Jon Voight. They said he was a 'movie star,' not a television star. So, Peter Strauss was decided upon, and that was fine. But a lot of it (the difficulties) involved getting a script.

"The compromise was to use the novel (only) as a basis — the movie is literally an adaptation."

Yes, to say the least. Instead of telling the story from the point of viewer of an impassioned writer who happened to be at the scene, as was the case in real life, ABC decided it needed something with more universal appeal.

What was decided upon was pure hokum. Peter Strauss plays a disaffected American architect who sails off with his family, trying to find himself. Their yacht breaks down in a storm and they are washed ashore in the little Newfoundland village where the drama takes place.

This should give you an idea of the way ABC perceived this story:

While drifting aimlessly in the storm, a killer ship (which turns out to be a pirate whaler) narrowly misses the helpless yacht. In one ABC-inspired version — fortunately not the one that makes it to air — the little boat is saved by a friendly whale who bumps the boat out of harm's way.

Credulity won that particular battle, but lost the war. Strauss and his family have to stay in the little village for a week while their boat is repaired, and in that time he dives headlong into battle with the local baddies. He falls in love with the whale, for no apparent reason; he does and says a lot of things, in fact, that don't emanate naturally from his character. His struggle to save its life becomes an awkward metaphor for the conflict of alienated modern man.

That's fine, I suppose, but it has little to do with moral conflict at the heart of the story, which is man's inclination to kill things, even benign things of beauty and rarity. That stuff wouldn't sell, apparently.

Neither, I'm afraid, will this compromise.

Actor Has Chest Pains

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Forrest Tucker has been hospitalized with chest pains, but an associate says the 62-year-old actor did not suffer a heart attack, as originally feared.

Tucker, famous for his role as Sgt. O'Rourke on the TV series "F Troop," was in serious condition after entering University Community Hospital on Thursday.

The actor, here for the filming of a new movie, apparently was suffering from exhaustion, a prolonged case of the flu and congested lungs, said Chuck Ison, producer of the movie.

Hospital officials suspected at first that Tucker may have suffered a heart attack and put him in a coronary care unit. Ison said later that it was not a heart attack.

"They think it's congestion of the lungs and throat," Ison said. He said he didn't know how long Tucker would be hospitalized, but movie personnel were scrambling to find a stand-in in case one is needed.

Cozy Cole Dies At 72

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — William "Cozy" Cole, a jazz drummer who was the first black member of the CBS staff orchestra in New York City, died Thursday of cancer at the age of 72.

Cole, born in East Orange, N.J., had been hospitalized at Ohio State University Hospital for about two weeks, said Bob Breithaupt, a music instructor at Capital University in Columbus.

Cole was a student lecturer at the school and had been awarded an honorary Doctorate of Musical Arts in 1978.

The drummer moved to Columbus from New York about five years ago and performed part-time until shortly before his death. He lived in New York from 1930 to 1975.

He made his recording debut with "Jelly Roll" Morton in the late 20s, was later with the Cab Calloway band and had such hits in the 1940s as "Crescendo in Drums" and "Paradiddle." He joined the CBS orchestra in the 1940s.

He is survived by his wife, Evelyn, a brother and sister.

HAS NEW PLAY — Actress Lauren Bacall laughs during a Boston news conference at the Colonial Theatre, where she is starring in the new musical play "Woman of the Year". Succeeding as a woman today is "a very individual thing", says Bacall. "I think if you stay alive, you're one step ahead of the game." (AP Laserphoto)

Geo. Raft Left An Insurance Policy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor George Raft, who made millions during his career as a movie tough guy, left only a $10,000 insurance policy and some furniture when he died, a public administrator says.

Raft, who died Nov. 24 at age 85 of a blood condition described as "pre-leukemia" by his physician, left no will.

He spent the last years of his life living on a fixed income of $800 a month, a combination of payments from Social Security and Screen Actor's Guild pension fund, William Bridges, division chief of the county Public Administrator's office, said Thursday.

Raft also supplemented his income by making occasional cameo appearances in movies and television commercials.

Bridges' office recently filed a court petition to take over the remainder of Raft's estate for administrative purposes. Raft left no known relatives, and if no claims are forthcoming, the estate will be assumed by the state of California, Bridges said.

"Here's a man who made millions of dollars during his lifetime, and as I believe he said it ... 'I spent it on wine, women and other frivolous things,'" Bridges said.

Bridges said Raft, beset by ill health and legal problems and pursued by federal legal claims for unpaid taxes, moved into an apartment after selling a canyon home overlooking Los Angeles.

"After he lived on the money from the house, he sold some memorabilia," Bridges said.

Raft, a product of New York's Hell's Kitchen, got his first major break in the 1932 gangster movie "Scarface," where he cooly flipped a 50-cent piece as he was gunned down.

A dancer and former boxer, he made 70 movies during his career, and was linked romantically to many of Hollywood's leading women of the day.

"I should have done at least one thing," he said in one of his final interviews. "That silver half-dollar I used in 'Scarface' — I should have kept it at least. But I didn't. I let it all get away from me. And now it's gone."

Festival Adopts A Large Budget

ASHLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The Oregon Shakespearean Festival has an operating budget of $2,847,000 for its 10-play 1981 season, running Feb. 24-Oct. 31. An estimated deficit of $552,800 must be raised in gifts, grants and special membership fees.

Last year the Festival gave 579 performances in its three theaters, playing to audiences totaling 264,545 or 88.1 percent of capacity.

U.S. Now Considering Withdrawal From UNESCO

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should consider pulling out of UNESCO even if that might lead to sanctions by the World Court over refusal to pay U.N. assessments, says a report by Reagan administration budget officials.

The report from the Office of Management and Budget proposed massive cuts in U.S. foreign aid and support for international organizations.

The proposals drew harsh criticism Thursday from Democratic congressmen who traditionally have championed economic assistance to underdeveloped nations. And officials who distribute such aid noted that the United States also benefits from research and trade generated by the programs.

The OMB report urged cutting the Carter administration's proposed foreign aid budget for fiscal year 1982 from $8 billion down to $5.47 billion, with even larger reductions during the next three fiscal years.

Among the budget-cutting options it suggested was to refuse to pay any substantial increases in assessments and to "eliminate or very sharply cut back voluntary contributions" to the United Nations, its member agencies and other international organizations.

As a policy alternative, the OMB report said the impact of cutbacks on voluntary programs could be cushioned somewhat by announcing immediate U.S. withdrawal from UNESCO (the U.N. Economic, Social and Cultural Organization) "because of UNESCO's pro-PLO policies and its support for measures limiting the free flow of information."

In recent years, UNESCO has adopted statements favoring the Palestinian cause against Israel and also has endorsed moves to curb the activities of Western news agencies in the Third World.

A U.S. pullout could save $25 million in payments this fiscal year and $62 million in fiscal 1982 "if the United States refused to pay its legally binding assessments for those years," the document said, adding that "savings would not occur until 1983 if legal withdrawal procedures were followed."

The report noted, however, that "withdrawal from UNESCO and not paying 1981 and 1982 assessments might result in legal action in the World Court."

The OMB proposal said that to shape a foreign aid program "more in line with the domestic budget-cutting effort," every major program should be trimmed to some extent — with priority to be given to bilateral rather than multilateral aid, and to military assistance more than economic development.

It urged revoking a recent pledge to contribute $3.24 billion during 1981-83 to the International Development Association, a unit of the World Bank which makes low-interest loans to developing countries. The United States should then reopen negotiations aimed at cutting its contribution in half, the report said.

Other proposed cutbacks would involve the U.S. Agency for International Development, Food for Peace loan programs and the Peace Corps, where OMB suggested reducing by 25 percent the number of volunteers working abroad.

Meanwhile, officials who distribute foreign aid say using the term "giveaway" for the assistance is misleading because the United States gets some of the biggest benefits.

Dr. Clifford Pease of the U.S. Agency for International Development notes that elimination of smallpox resulted in part from a $27 million contribution by the U.S. taxpayers to an international campaign.

The last case of smallpox was found in Somalia in 1977. The last case in the United States had been found long before, but now American taxpayers saves $155 million a year because vaccinations and public health work are no longer needed to prevent smallpox coming in from abroad, Pease said.

AID spokesmen also said that:

—Work that AID supported in Bangladesh on children's diarrheal diseases developed a treatment gaining increased use in the United States. It provides mothers with a cheap and simple medicine that can be given by mouth instead of injections.

—Nobel prize-winning research on wheat in Mexico, financed in part with U.S. government money, has resulted in wheat varieties that were grown on 4.15 million acres of American farm land in 1979.

The United States also benefits as a prime source for equipment and know-now when the poor countries being helped build roads and schools and buy tractors and irrigation systems for their farmers and machinery for businessmen. And if the poor countries prosper, they can become independent customers of the United States — as western Europe and Japan did after World War II.

Gov. Hunt Wants Aggressive Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt told North Carolina's newspaper editors and reporters Thursday that they should strive "to ask more questions and be more aggressive."

Hunt, speaking at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Newspaper Institute, said he often wishes, after reading newspaper stories involving his administration, that reporters and editors had looked deeper into their subjects.

"Almost every day I see a story or read an editorial and I say to myself, 'I wish that reporter had looked a little harder, made a couple of more phone calls, called us and asked those questions, instead of just depending on yesterday's story.'"

Hunt said he was issuing a "challenge" to newspapers to be more aggressive and more questioning.

"That's where the problem lies. That's where the danger lies — not being tough enough; not being thorough enough," Hunt said. "You can't learn too much. And you can't get too much information."

The governor, making his fifth yearly appearance before the group, extended his call for deeper coverage to include editorials.

"You have as much responsibility to do good reporting as your reporters do," he said, referring to editorial writers.

Hunt said he always enjoys meeting one day a year with the same newspaper people "who spend the rest of the year making my life miserable."

Adrian Dantley, All-Star

Before Adrian Dantley started playing professional basketball, some people thought that at 6'5" he was too small to make it in the National Basketball Association. This season, Dantley has been busy proving those people wrong. For most of the current season, he has led the NBA in scoring. Earlier this month, fans elected him to be one of the starting forwards in this Sunday's All-Star Game. Dantley, 24, grew up in Washington, D.C. He played college basketball at Notre Dame, and played on three other NBA teams before signing with the Utah Jazz last winter. For now, the all-star forward says, "I'm just delighted to be in the NBA."

DO YOU KNOW — Who led the NBA in scoring the past three years?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Vernon Jordan is the current leader of the National Urban League.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

There are few things at the bridge table that disturb us more than a partner who lays down an ace on opening lead and remarks: "Just to take a look at dummy, partner!" As a rule that lead costs at least one trick, which is a heavy price to pay to satisfy one's curiosity. But there are times when it is right to lead an unsupported ace.

South's opening bid of three no trump was the old-fashioned version of the "gambling three no trump" convention. It showed a hand containing a long, solid minor suit with two of the three outside suits stopped. The theory is that it is easier to take nine tricks in no trump than eleven in the minor.

The correct way to defend against this gadget is to try to take your defensive tricks quickly because you might not get a second chance. If you lead a normal fourth-best of your long suit, the odds are that you will hit one of declarer's stoppers, and then you will have to find a lot of discards as declarer runs his long suit. Therefore, the lead of an ace is sound procedure — this is a case where you want to study dummy to see if you can find a chink in declarer's armor.

West led the ace of spades, East followed with the ten and declarer made a silly falsecard — he dropped the king. That did not fool West for a moment — he knew that his partner would have played the queen from a holding of Q-J-10. Therefore, declarer was marked with a spade stopper. If declarer also had a heart stopper, there was no hope for the defense. Hearts was the only suit where the defenders could get four quick tricks.

Having worked that out, West still had to find the right play. If his partner had the ace-jack fourth of hearts, no play made any difference. But if declarer had the jack, the defense could prevail only if it was a singleton. So at trick two West laid down the king of hearts! When this collected declarer's jack, the ten of hearts continuation enabled the defenders to harvest four heart tricks in addition to the ace of spades.

Real Sale!

on Hondas, Volvos, and AMC/Jeep/Renault.

This Month Only!

Right now at Bob Barbour Honda-Volvo, we're offering our lowest prices ever on Honda, Volvo, AMC, Jeep and Renault automobiles. So, if you're looking for a new car, you owe it to yourself to take a look at our cars and prices.

Civics from $4998.

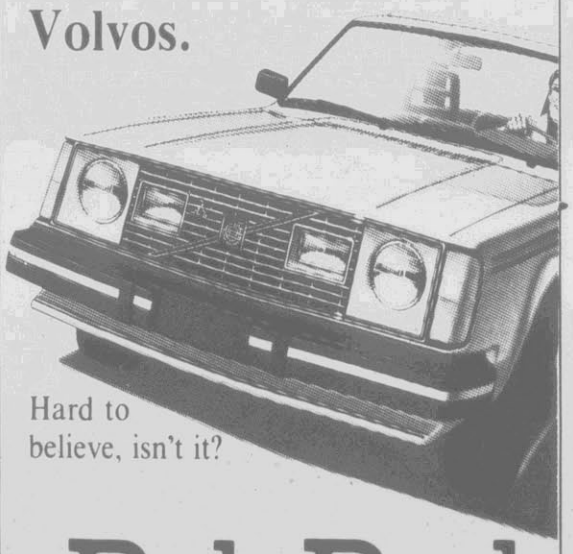

Save money now on Honda cars, save more later at the gas pump. Honda cars are designed and engineered to provide you with a roomy, efficient automobile that's simple to own, simple to drive and simple to maintain.

10% Factory Discount from AMC.

To introduce you to the fine cars from American Motors, AMC is giving you a 10% factory discount. If you're not familiar with these cars, you really ought to look at them. Luxury, comfort and durability in small cars that don't take a back seat to anyone.

Low Prices Even On Volvos.

Hard to believe, isn't it?

Come Test Drive a Jeep.

The legend endures because they're built so tough! On or off the road, Jeep has built a reputation for building 4-wheel drive vehicles unequaled in this country or anywhere else.

'The System' Failed Child In Murder By Beating

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

QUINCY, Ill. (AP) — Alan Madden was pummeled for perhaps four hours before he died, at times with fists, at times with a wooden club wrapped with gauze and labeled "The Big Stick." He was 5 years old.

Police found his frail body on the living room floor, his blond hair red with blood, his hands bruised from trying to deflect the blows.

"Probably he did something an average little kid does, write on the wall or something. That's all it takes," said a former social worker who had urged that the shy kindergartener not be returned home because she feared "there's going to be a dead kid."

Alan died Jan. 10. His mother and a boyfriend are charged with murder. But since his death, talk has centered not so much on those who may have killed him, but on those who did not.

—On the uncle, who now says he would have told anybody about the bruises he saw — but nobody asked.

—On the school principal, who went through all the proper channels when Alan came to kindergarten with blackened eyes.

—On the assistant state's attorney 100 miles away, confident that when investigators lay the blame they'll find "everybody did their job" by the rules in his county.

—On neighbors who say they never heard the screaming.

—On the judge, who says he was shown no evidence of child abuse before he ordered Alan returned to his mother last August.

"The whole system shoud be torn apart to find out what went wrong," said state Rep. Mike McClain, who's called for an investigation of the Department Of Children and Family Services, the state agency responsible for abuse cases.

Alan, described by a grandfather as "a sweet kid," got lost in the bureaucracy, falling victim to a tragic series of reports never forwarded, questions never asked, evidence never given.

His mother, Pam Berg, 24, quit high school, married a sometime factory worker named Gerald Madden and was still in her teens when daughter Tina was born seven years ago. She was dark-haired and attractive, and reportedly had a fiery temper and a habit of holding lighted cigarettes out for Tina to touch.

"When I asked her why she did that, she said it was to teach her not to grab for lighted things," recalled former Knox County Deputy John Mackey, who investigated bruises on Tina's back and buttocks in 1975.

The Madden marriage ended shortly after Alan was born, each parent accusing the other in court of beating the children. In truth, "They took turns beating on those kids," said the former social worker, who asked that her name not be used.

"I remember little Tina waking up with nightmares screaming 'Don't, Mommy, don't!' I saw bruises that were suspicious on those kids and was very much against either parent getting the kids," said uncle Charles Kruger, who kept Alan and Tina for several months in 1976 while their mother served a prison sentence for forging a check.

After her release, Mrs. Madden returned to Galesburg for a while, then headed for Colorado. Madden vanished. Efforts to have Alan and Tina adopted got waylaid.

"For whatever reason, I couldn't get this case in court," said the ex-social worker. She said she wrote three times to the state's attorney and finally caught Circuit Judge William Richardson in the hall and asked that he docket the case.

"He said, 'Yes, yes, contact the state's attorney.'"

It was the mother who finally got it on the docket. She returned from Colorado a couple years ago with a new boyfriend, a new daughter named Nichole and, she said, a new interest in her two older children.

Hearings were held. The former deputy wasn't called to tell what he knew. The uncle wasn't asked about abuse. Problems in the past were either blamed on the father or not discussed at all.

"She was very neat looking. She said she was going to school," said Richardson, whose hearings dealt only with the mother's interest in the children, where she would live and how she would pay for food and clothes.

"The definition of a parent in our society is someone who owns a home, needs to have some education and has some interest in their children. And she met the qualifications," said the former social worker.

Last August, Alan and Tina were returned to their mother, who was living with James Crain, 26. In October, on the day of the kindergarten class photograph, Alan came to school with his face so bruised he couldn't be in the picture. Principal Rick Baldwin alerted the local DCFS office.

"He was such a shy, quiet little kid," Baldwin said. "I couldn't see any reason to be mad at him, much less beat him."

Baldwin later called the DCFS again. A neighbor, hearing screams, called police, but everything was kept confidential, filed away. "Keeping the family together is our primary goal," said Tim Morrell, local DCFS supervisor.

In December, just three weeks before Alan was killed, the Quincy office mailed a routine report to Richardson. It said the family was doing fine.

This Tuesday, following an internal investigation of the "almost incomprehensible" case, Morrell and a superior were "suspended pending dismissal" and a second superior was demoted, according to Gregory Coler, state DCFS director. Six other social workers will be disciplined, he said.

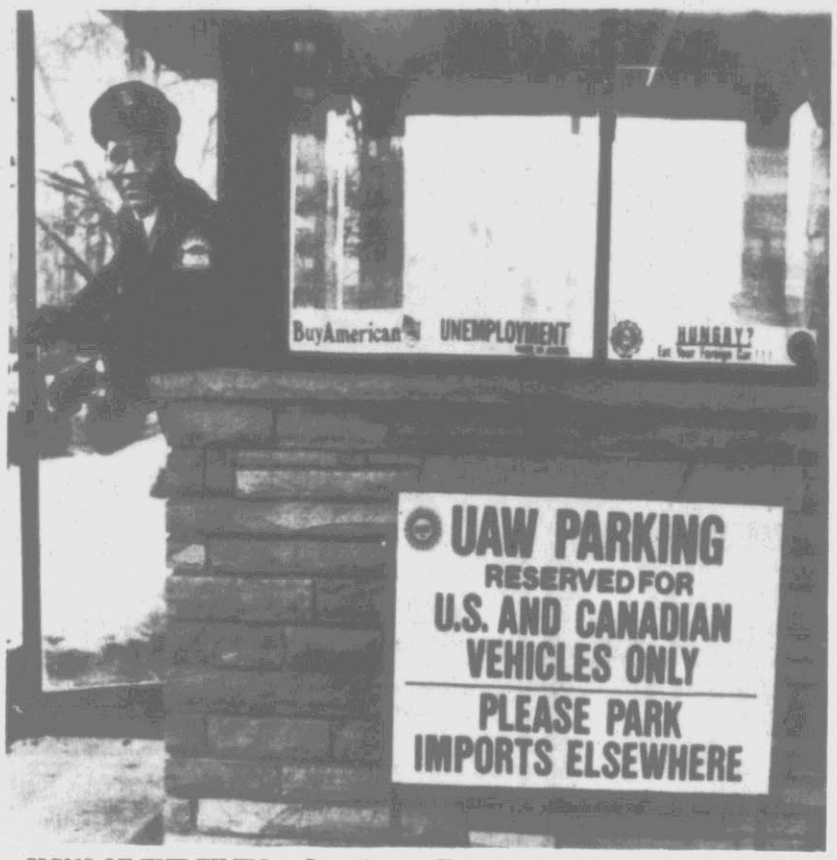

Coler admitted his agency had ignored to failed to respond to warnings from a clergyman, school officials, a teacher and police.

Hundreds came to the funeral, strangers mostly. His mother was in jail, his father somewhere in California. Tina, who investigators say was told to watch TV while her brother lay dying on the floor, was back in a foster home, as was Nichole.

Relatives didn't claim the body, which would have required they pay for the funeral, so the town donated a new set of clothes and a plot beneath a stand of evergreen trees in Graceland Cemetery.

Alan was buried with his teddy bear in a small blue coffin donated by strangers.

United Auto Workers Push U.S.-Made Cars

DETROIT (AP) — When people ask Lillian Edwards why she drives a Triumph TR7 to her job at the Ford Motor Co.'s Rouge plant in Detroit, she tells them to mind their own business.

"You work for the money, you can get what you want. I always wanted a sports car," she said. "I believe in it (buying Ford) for people whose lives are the Ford Motor Co. But I'm not interested in working for Henry Ford all my life."

Diane Koch, on the other hand, bought her Datsun B210 before she started working at a General Motors Corp. Fisher Body plant — "It was the cheapest car around," she explained.

But the next time she's in the market, Ms. Koch said, "I'd like to get a GM car, just so I could stay in my job." She won't be fired for being disloyal, but she wants to do everything she can to boost flagging auto sales.

That kind of logic is common these days around Detroit, where tens of thousands of autoworkers are out of work, at least partly because of competition from foreign cars.

Some United Auto Workers locals here have banned foreign cars from their parking lots. Others leave only one or two spaces in the far corners of their lots for foreign autos.

And billboards asking Michigan residents to "Buy The Cars Your Neighbors Help to Build," signed by GM's Pontiac division and UAW Local 653, are posted around the state, the first time an automaker and the union have joined in a public advertisement.

Stan Chilbecki, a GM employee for 20 years, said he always drives GM cars. "I buy them because I think they're good cars and I work for the company. I think that's only fair," he said.

Said Irving Howard, who works for Ford and drives a 1977 Mercury Cougar: "I put my money where I get it from."

It's an attitude the auto companies and the United Auto Workers union like to see. What they don't like, and are trying to overcome, are the attitudes of people like Ms. Edwards — and Sue Murdzia.

Ms. Murdzia works for GM but says she hates her 1978 Pontiac Firebird.

"That's rotten to say about my company, but I've had nothing but trouble with that car. It's falling apart," she said. "I really want a foreign car, but they would probably stone me when I drove it into the parking lot."

The auto industry in general encourages workers to buy what they build. All the companies instituted policies about five years ago to give employees refunds of up to several hundred dollars if they buy new cars made by their companies. At GM alone, some 70,000 workers take advantage of the refunds every year, officials say.

Jim Flower, general superintendent of manufacturing engineering at the Bay City Chevrolet plant, is quoted in the July-August 1980 issue of GM Today, a monthly magazine for GM employees:

"Chevrolet spends millions of dollars on advertising to sell our products. When someone who works at this plant drives a non-GM vehicle, domestic or foreign-made, they are also advertising — but in a very negative and detrimental way.

"I don't know how many sales we lose because of this negative advertising, but I'd guess it is plenty."

One "Buy GM" program seems to have worked at GM plants in Saginaw and Pontiac; Danville, Ill.; Bedford, Ind.; Defiance, Ohio, and Massena, N.Y. The number of GM vehicles in employee parking lots has increased from 66.3 percent to 79.9 percent, according to another GM Today article.

Still, even with the publicity and the cash incentives, many autoworkers drive cars made by competitors' companies.

Eighty-eight of 353 cars parked outside one GM plant in Detroit, about 25 percent, were made by companies other than GM, although fewer than 10 of those were foreign-made.

At a Ford plant, 42 of 127 cars, or 33 percent, were made by companies other than Ford. In a Chrysler parking lot, 66 of 167 cars, or 40 percent, were made by competitors.

However, in a Chrysler parking lot reserved for "management and salary" employees, only 1 of the 208 cars was made by a company other than Chrysler.

Betts' Museum Holds Treasure

By JERRY GRAY
Associated Press Writer

KENTON, Tenn. (AP) — Tucked away in a building that has housed the town's bank, post office and city hall is a treasure-trove that would make a pirate drool.

Others may boast of greater wealth, but few can match Billy Betts' collection of "one-of-a-kind" items.

"It's not a Smithsonian Institution, it's just a private musuem," said Betts, proprietor of the Betts Old Clock Shop & Museum. "But what I've got here, if it were scattered out, would be one of the biggest collections anywhere."

Betts' collection, crammed into display cases, includes more than 200 antique pocket watches, scores of antique desk clocks, Indian artifacts, early American items, a Japanese Samurai saddle and dozens of old firearms. Most of those items were collected by his father, the late Grover Betts.

"When my father died in 1965, he left his collection to me because he knew how I loved it," Betts said.

The rest of the collection — items Betts picked up while stationed in Turkey with the Air Force in the early 1960s — includes a gold leaf.

"When a Roman emperor died they used to put a gold leaf over each eye," he said.

Betts, who bought his gold leaf from a villager, said he had seen a similar gold leaf in a museum in Turkey. Much of his collection, he said, came from digs he made in Turkish ruins and from villagers who used to comb the ruins.

He bought a velour robe with gold thread in Turkey 17 years ago, but said he doesn't know the history of the garment although it is reputed to be 1,300 years old.

Betts, 45, retired from the Air Force in 1974 and settled in his wife's hometown, about 100 miles northeast of Memphis.

Four years ago, the couple bought an old building — which originally housed Kenton's first bank — including a massive safe. Betts uses half of the building for his clock shop and antique business and the other half for his museum items.

The museum is open every day except Wednesday and Sunday, and there is no charge for admission. Still, few people from outside Kenton ever visit.

"I don't advertise," Betts said.

Betts, whose collection includes about 300 gold and silver Roman coins, said he has never calculated the value of his holdings.
