DRIVE BEGINNING. . .$1 million is being raised in Pitt and Martin counties to build this new recreation-housing-classroom-office addition to the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center here. This is an artist's rendering of the new complex.

The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center's Capital Fund Drive gets underway tomorrow with the goal of raising the $1 million needed to supply recreational and housing facilities for the center which has, since 1965, served the vocational needs of the handicapped of Pitt and Martin Counties.

"This drive affords each of us an opportunity to express appreciation for our own blessings as we offer the handicapped persons of our area a secure setting in which to develop to the highest potential of each one of them — truly a chance for a new life," Drive Chairman Douglas Starr said.

Planned to be built with the addition of this million dollars is an 89,000-square-foot recreation and housing complex. The $4.87 million project is part of a U. S. Department of Vocational Rehabilitation pilot program for comprehensive training and recreation for the handicapped. It will be constructed without architectural barriers, specially equipped to accomodate handicapped and senior citizens. In addition to the recreation and housing facilities, classrooms, offices and dining facilities will be included.

Pledges already have been made by ECVC staff members to provide the money needed for the executive director's office, the lounge, and the staff dining area.

Memorial opportunities not already taken include the swimming pool, $100,000; locker rooms, $5,000 each; gymtorium, $100,000; gymnastics room, $10,000; stage, $5,000; weight room, $20,000; PSA classroom, $10,000; office suite, $4,000; three administrative offices, $3,000 each; lobby, $2,000; vault, $3,000; four bookkeeping offices, $2,000 each; conference room, $15,000; two secretary-receptionist offices, $2,000 each; 10 workroom-offices, $1,000 each; games area, $10,000; infirmary, $35,000; arts and crafts area, $10,000; two adult basic education areas, $3,000 each; concessions, $10,000; dining, $25,000; dishwashing, $10,000; serving, $20,000; storage, $4,000; refrigerator, $8,000; freezer, $8,000; two laundry areas, $4,000 each; personal hygiene, $2,000; library, $2,000; music room, $2,000; kitchen, $25,000; bowling alley, $50,000; two counselor's suites, $5,000 each; two independent living areas, $5,000 each; and 40 bedroom-baths, $1,500 each.

An individual plaque will commemorate each gift, Starr said.

He further explained that gifts may be made in the form of pledges extending over a 36-month period (through four tax years). Payments are tax deductible.

16 Years of Growth

The Vocational Center was chartered in 1965 through the cooperative efforts of Pitt and Martin County residents, with Thomas Boring as its first director. It has developed into a training and job placement program for mentally retarded, physically handicapped, emotionally disturbed, and low socio-economic-disadvantaged persons from throughout the two counties. Special services also are offered for veterans and the elderly.

At its beginning, the center operated in a small office building on N. Greene Street, serving 27 clients during its first year. There were four staff members and two boarding homes were maintained, one for men at 707 W. Fourth Street and one for women at 103 Davis Street.

Administration Opts For Tough Foreign Policy

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A few weeks ago, it was a commonly accepted view among Carter administration officials that President Reagan would conclude that the risks of unconstrained rivalry with the Soviet Union outweigh the rewards.

But after less than two weeks in office, there is every indication that the new administration has decided to opt for a confrontational policy, convinced that a constructive relationship is not possible because of Soviet behavior worldwide.

This attitude contrasts sharply with that which has prevailed under Democratic and Republican administrations over the past 20 years. These administrations have believed that competition with the Soviets must be coupled with policies that ensure peaceful coexistence.

The tone of the new administration's approach was set this past week when Secretary of State Alexander Haig and President Reagan held their first news conferences.

On Wednesday, Haig said the world has been witnessing "an unprecedented — at least in character and scope — risk-taking mode on the part of the Soviet Union" in terms of "training, funding and equipping international terrorism."

On Thursday, Reagan added a new dimension to the administration's criticism with some of the strongest anti-Soviet language heard since the Cold War era.

He said the Soviets have reserved for themselves "the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat" in order to achieve their goal of "world revolution."

The new militancy has evoked strong expressions of support from some officials who believe Moscow for too long has been trying to take advantage of unstable situations in the Middle East, Central America and Africa by providing arms and other support to rebel forces.

One official, who asked not to be identified, credited the administration with a "new realism" in addressing Soviet activities.

But a dissenting official, who also requested anonymity, said the U.S. government has been taken over by "a bunch of hard-liners who are acting like nothing has changed in the past 30 years."

Said another, "What we are seeing is the release of pent-up frustrations which have been accumulating for the past four years." He said he is hopeful that the new administration will show more restraint as time goes on.

At his news conference, Haig singled out the use of Cuban troops in Angola and Ethiopia as an issue of "utmost concern" to the administration.

The Carter administration held the view that, in time, the African nations themselves would invite the Cubans to leave and would conclude that only the Western industrialized nations are capable of assisting their pressing development needs.

But Haig takes a much more alarmist view of the Cuban presence. "It is a subject," he said, "which will be high on the priority of our national security and foreign policy agenda."

In other areas, however, the new and the old administrations hold essentially parallel views.

After receiving information that Soviet weaponry was reaching leftist rebels in El Salvador, the Carter administration resumed military aid to that country during its last week in office. Haig suggested the new administration may send additional assistance.

On Poland, the Carter administration warned the Soviets in December of severe repercussions if they invade that country, a warning repeated privately by Haig to Soviet authorities on Thursday.

The question many officials are asking is precisely how the new administration intends to back up its strong rhetoric without triggering a military conflict between two nations which have the capacity to destroy mankind. On this subject, the Reagan administration has remained silent.

The dilemma, which has faced every administration since the post-World War II era, was summed up this way several years ago by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger:

"If peace is to be pursued to the exclusion of any other goal, other values will be compromised and perhaps lost; but if uncontrolled rivalry leads to nuclear conflict, these values, along with everything else, will be destroyed in the resulting holocaust."

Trials For Thousands

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

PEKING (UPI) — China is following up the sentencing of the Gang of Four with trials of thousands of others, including Mao Tse-tung's nephew, who rose to prominence during the Cultural Revolution.

The nephew, Mao Yuanxin, a high provincial party official during the chaotic decade from 1966 until his uncle's death in 1976, is expected to be the most prominent defendant in this second round of trials and reportedly will face charges of widespread persecution and other criminal offenses.

Chinese authorities have given notice they intend to try thousands who gained power during the period of revolutionary fervor and allegedly took part in the murder and persecution of millions of Chinese.

Many former followers of the radical Gang of Four, led by Mao's widow Jiang Qing, still hold influential positions and the official media has said they will now be ruthlessly rooted out and made to pay for their crimes.

Season's First Snow Hits Local Area Friday

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer

A general state of confusion came about Friday and part of Saturday due to the unexpected snow storm that hit Eastern North Carolina Friday. The storm caused slippery road conditions, early school closings, and tied-up telephone lines.

The snow began falling early Friday morning and tapered off about 6 p.m. Friday evening. Accumulations ranged from one to three inches, averaging two inches.

With temperatures in the 40's and clear skies Saturday, the snow and ice has mostly disappeared by early evening.

The snowstorm created a bumper cars carnival. Between 11 a.m. and 11 p.m. Friday night, 25 accidents, most of them minor, were reported in this area, according to records of the Greenville Police Department.

"People don't adapt to the conditions when it snows," said Sgt. Cleary of the Greenville Police Department. "Speed is the contributing factor in these accidents. During the same hours under ideal conditions, we usually have only one accident." The Highway Patrol advised everyone to stay off the roads until the roads had cleared. Cleary said that as of Saturday evening, no fatalities had been reported.

The main streets of Greenville were overcrowded with people leaving early from work and school Friday. City schools remained open the entire day, but Greenville County Schools cleared all campuses by 2 p.m. City schools will open on schedule Monday, and Orr Alford, superintendent of Greenville County Schools said that classes would resume one hour later than normal schedule.

Greenville Utilities' officials said that they managed to survive the storm without an overabundance of calls which are usually typical during freezing temperatures and icy conditions.

Carolina Telephone, however, had its fair share of calls. A Carolina Telephone employee said that people became concerned about their family and friends during the bad weather conditions and tried to find them as soon as possible causing a tie-up of telephone lines.

Kinston Airport officials said they operated on schedule Friday with very little interruption. Runways were cleared by Saturday afternoon.

Pro And Con Forces Readying For Feb. 17 LBD Referendum

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

As the liquor-by-the-drink referendum date draws nearer, both proponents and opponents of the measure are gearing up their campaigns for and against by-the-drink liquor sales.

Greenville voters will have the opportunity, on February 17, to decide whether qualifying restaurants and social establishments in the city limits will be able to serve mixed drinks to their customers.

Frank Steinbeck, co-chairman of the anti-liquor Concerned Citizens of Pitt County, said some 3,000 bumper stickers have been distributed in the campaign against by-the-drink liquor sales. He added that, "we will use newspaper ads, and saturate the town with handbills."

But Steinbeck emphasized that the anti-liquor forces feel, "person to person is the big thing," in their drive to have the referendum defeated at the polls, adding that the anti-liquor committee has, "200 people actually working," against passage of the referendum. "A telephone committee has been working," and, "we're going eye to eye."

The Concerned Citizens' official said in his opinion the drive for by-the-drink liquor sales is, "more economics than anything else...12 restaurants are involved. I hate to see 12 restaurants run the entire city."

According to Steinbeck, "Greenville can't afford any more outlets for the number one addiction drug (alcohol)."

The North Carolina liquor law is, "the most liberal law in the country...it's a dangerous law," with, "no control whatever," Steinbeck said, adding that for every dollar in tax revenue received from the sale of alcoholic beverages last year, "it cost the taxpayers of Pitt County $12.95," including lost production, direct health care costs, fire losses, motor vehicle accidents, cost of violent crimes, law enforcement and social welfare costs.

"It's a proven fact," Steinbeck said, "the more outlets you have, the more consumption there is. The more consumption, the more problems...

"If we could cut out liquor, we could reduce taxes one-third.

"I feel confident the anti forces are going to win this thing."

Leading the campaign on, "the other side," of the liquor-by-the-drink issue is the Greenville Restaurant Association.

Bob Sauter, owner of The Pipeline in Downtown Greenville, and a director of the restaurant group, explains, "I'm the one that most people associate with the effort," to have the mixed-drink referendum approved at the polls, although, "a number of restaurants and businesses...many area businessmen and merchants support the effort."

The pro forces are using television, bumper stickers, billboards, and, "maybe spot radio ads," to get their message across to the voters.

"We're saying, 'lets throw out the brown bag. Get out and vote,'" according to Sauter.

"We're trying to run a very low key campaign," and, "our campaign, basically, is over."

It is not the intention of the pro group, "to challenge the opposition," Sauter noted. "We're not pushing alcohol. We're just asking the voters to make an effort to get to the polls and vote. We feel a large turnout will insure victory.

"Most people's minds are made up. We feel there is a small undecided factor out there. We've done our ground-work and are in the final throes of our campaign. There's a good base of support," for mixed-drink sales.

"Our stand," according to Sauter, is that by-the-drink sales of liquor, "will provide a better method of controlling alcohol on our premises, and provide additional tax revenues for the city and county."

Sauter emphasized, "we're not condoning the proliferation of corner bars. The law is very specific as to who can dispense," liquor by the drink. "We're not going to see corner bars and snack shops selling liquor."

The restaurant association sees liquor by the drink as, "a modernization of aur archaic legislation passed in 1937," which established the Alcoholic Beverage Control stores in the State.

"We feel it is a progressive move into the 1980's...a progressive movement in our community," which will have, "considerable impact," by drawing conventions, business meeting, and industrial prospects to the area, and, "increase the level of entertainment, in general, in the evening. We feel that we need to have this to remain competitive with other communities."

Since the North Carolina General Assembly approved local option LBD referendums in 1978, 914 places have been licensed to sell liquor by-the-drink in the 34 cities and counties where voters have decided they wanted liquor-by-the-drink.

Mixed drink sale of liquor was rejected in Pitt County in a referendum in June 1979, when voters county-wide defeated the proposal 6,541 to 6,350. However, voters in Greenville, cast 3,992 votes in favor of mixed drink sales and 2,512 votes against. Grifton residents also voted in favor of liquor-by-the-drink in that referendum.

The Greenville City Council called for a referendum on mixed-drink sales in the city last November, after the 1980 General Assembly approved legislation allowing municipalities to hold a separate city election on mixed beverages if: the county voted against LBD sales in the last referendum, at least one ABC store is located in the city or within a one-mile radius, and in the most recent county referendum two or more municipalities within the county voted in favor of mixed drinks.

About 15,000 persons are eligible to vote in the February 17 city referendum.

Along with legislation allowing local option referendums on mixed-drink sales, the General Assembly placed an additional $10 a gallon tax on liquor purchased for by-the-drink sales by social establishments and restaurants. Of that amount, $9 remains with the county for distribution with other ABC profits and $1 goes to the State.

Thousands Stage Anti-American Protest

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Thousands of demonstrators protesting U.S. military aid to El Salvador stormed through central Frankfurt on Saturday, smashing windows and shouting "Yankees Go Home!"

Demonstrators also attacked American-owned autos, slashing their tires or throwing plastic bags of paint at them, witnessess said.

The Munich-based El Salvador Information Bureau, organizers of the demonstration, had predicted 2,000 people would show up to protest U.S. support for El Salvador's ruling civilian-military junta, which is under attack from leftist revolutionaries as well as rightists.

But witnesses and police estimated the crowd at about 15,000. Some carried signs and banners reading "Americans out of El Salvador!" and "No Second Vietnam in Central America!"

One banner, similar to those seen during the Vietnam war years, said "USA — SA — SS," likening the United States to the Nazi stormtrooper organizations. The slogan also was painted on streetcars and subway cars.

More than 10,000 U.S. military personnel are stationed in the Frankfurt area, many of them driving cars distinguished by green license plates. Extra guards were stationed at the gates of U.S. installations.

South Korean President Seeks Support

NEW YORK (AP) — Claiming he has restored political stability to South Korea, President Chun Doo-hwan asked American business leaders Saturday to introduce advanced technology and increase their capital investments in his country.

"We heartily welcome an American business presence in Korea," Chun said. "We will encourage American businessmen even more positively than before to cooperate with their Korean counterparts and the government in developing our exports."

Chun said his government "now emphasizes the role of the private sector in economic management while de-emphasizing that of the government" in an effort to "pick up ground lost in the past year." He was referring to the political and social unrest that followed the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in October 1979 and ensuing economic difficulties in 1980.

Asks Dropping Of Tobacco Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has convinced the Reagan administration to drop a Carter administration proposal to limit foreign tobacco imports, saying he prefers action less likely to provoke foreign trade retaliation. Carter had ordered the International Trade Commission to investigate and recommend restrictions on imports of cheap tobacco that threaten American-grown leaf.

Helms doesn't want to risk trade retaliation from foreign countries, said George Dunlop, chief aide of the Helms-led Senate Agriculture Committee.

"This could be a Pandora's box that, once opened, we could have no control over," Dunlop said. "We ought to try and resolve it within the tobacco family and not make a big deal about it."

Helms wants to solve the problem by closing a loophole in U.S. tariff laws that allows most foreign tobacco to come into the country classified as "scrap."

Says Carter Blocked Intervention

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A Swiss newspaper said Saturday that Soviet forces were set to intervene in Poland the night of Dec. 7, but that the Kremlin backed down after then-President Carter telephoned a stern warning to Moscow.

The French-language Geneva newspaper La Suisse said Carter's former security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski told of the Soviet intention and Carter's counter moves in a meeting with economic and financial leaders at an international business symposium at Davos.

The story did not quote Brzezinski directly, nor did it say how it obtained the substance of his alleged remarks. Brzezinski left Davos early Saturday, and the symposium's press office said it had no knowledge of the matter.

Brzezinski could not immediately be reached for comment.

Feels Pay Cut Will Be Ratified

DETROIT (AP) — Leaders of the United Auto Workers union were optimistic Saturday that a pay cut designed to win more U.S. loan guarantees for Chrysler Corp. would be ratified by the rank-and-file.

"That does it," said UAW President Douglas A. Fraser after hearing the results of Friday's voting at some large Detroit locals. "We'll make it."

Meanwhile, Canadian government officials were reported to be considering a new proposal from Chrysler aimed at salvaging up to $170 million in guaranteed loans for the troubled automaker.

A delegation headed by M.J. "Moe" Kloss, president of Chrysler Canada Ltd., met with Industry Minister Herb Gray in Ottawa on Friday night.

Peron Release May Be Near

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's military government appears to be preparing to free Isabel Peron nearly five years after a three-man junta toppled her chaotic government and imprisoned her.

A flurry of official activity concerning Mrs. Peron's health and the four criminal corruption charges pending against her has focused attention on the wife and successor to the late Gen. Juan D. Peron.

Mrs. Peron still is titular head of the labor-backed Peronist movement established by her husband — the most powerful figure in Argentina's political history.

Home Towns Welcome Ex-Hostages

Echoes of the joyous receptions given the 52 liberated hostages in Washington and New York reached Main Street, U.S.A., on Saturday as the homefolk welcomed back the neighborhood kid who became a hero by way of captivity in Iran.

The bands played on in such places as Homer, Ill.; Culpeper, Va.; Johnstown, Pa.; San Diego, and Balch Springs, Texas, as Americans with something finally to cheer about refused to let the party end.

But a sour note was sounded as Vietnam veterans who got a cold shoulder on their return from the war marched in protest to the disparity in the way they were treated.

"I was as proud as anybody else when the hostages got off that plane in Algiers," said Greg Steele, an Air Force veteran who organized a two-mile march of about 300 ex-servicemen and their families from the Veterans Administration Hospital to the downtown War Memorial in Indianapolis. "But this all has to be put into perspective."

Steele, now a 33-year-old personnel worker, told the crowd at the War Memorial that the purpose of the march was to "honor the memory of the eight commandos who died in an aborted rescue mission in Iran," and also to "to reiterate the need for employment benefits and better medical care for Vietnam-era veterans."

In Los Angeles on Friday, while 22 of the returning hostages were being honored with a ticker-tape parade in New York City, Ron Kovic, 34, a Vietnam veteran confined to a wheelchair from wounds that cost him the use of both legs, held a news conference at the city's Patriotic Hall. He said that comments that he had heard from veterans over the past week have been "bitter and angry."

"Americans should widen their perspective from those 52 to the millions of kids who have problems today because they didn't get that kind of reception when they got home," said Kovic, a writer who also works for the Los Angeles Center for Veterans Rights.

In Johnstown, Pa., thousands of residents bundled up in 18-degree temperatures for a parade honoring 38-year-old Regis Ragan, recently weather to sergeant major, the U.S. Army's highest enlisted rank.

Anna Ragan, his 69-year-old mother, watched from her hospital room. She was hospitalized with a stress related heart ailment after her son's release.

"I am overwhelmed by the love that everybody has shown me since I've been home," said Ragan, his voice breaking with emotion as he spoke to the crowd. "I can't thank you enough. God bless you all, and I love you all from the bottom of my heart."

At the largest park in San Diego, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Mayor Peter Wilson and other dignitaries joined the homecoming fete for Richard Morefield, 51, the former U.S. consul general in Tehran, along with his wife, Dorothea, and their four children. The ceremony featured a rendition of "God Bless America" by the U.S. Marine Corps Band and the San Diego Master Chorale.

Marine Sgt. Paul Lewis, 23, was honored in his hometown of Homer, Ill., a farming community of 1,400 where he was a football star and a homecoming king. Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson was in the reviewing stand as Lewis rode in a parade on a 1939 fire truck led by an American Legion color guard, a detachment of Marines and the Homer High School Band. At the end of the ceremony, 1,000 helium-filled balloons were released into the air.

In New York City, after two days of Manhattan high life and a tumultuous ticker-tape parade witnessed by an estimated 2 million people, 22 hostages were given a buffet breakfast farewell.

Barry Rosen, a Brooklyn-born hostage, said he was "flabbergasted" by the reception in his hometown.

"I just thought we would come back and it would be a very quiet return," Rosen said, "I am very grateful to New York and all Americans."

But Carl Grimes, head of the Veterans Administration's Operation Outreach program in Newark, N.J., said that while New Yorkers were showering ticker tape on the former captives, depressed and angry Vietnam veterans were probably out getting drunk.

While the hostages were being offered free trips and tickets to sporting events, at least one-third of the Vietnam veterans in the Portland, Ore., area were out of work, said Harry Dean, a director of Project Return for ex-servicemen in Oregon.

"These hostages are having food brought in silver platters," said William Jones, another Project Return official. "We have vets coming in who haven't eaten in three days."

Financial Picture Good For Former Hostages

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 52 Americans freed by Iran will come through their ordeal in better financial shape then before — especially if Congress passes a hostage compensation act.

But State Department officials say the former hostages have made it clear they are not looking for a free ride that might "lose them the respect of the American people."

While the former captives were in Iran, Congress passed the Hostage Relief Act, designed to ensure that their families did not suffer financially during their absence. That measure provided extensive health, educational and tax benefits for the families, while protecting the hostages' property from legal claims pending their return.

Congress postponed action on measures granting compensation to the hostages themselves, however, for fear of exacerbating an already delicate situation.

Now that the former hostages are home, such legislation is expected to be taken up soon. Officials are searching for an "appropriate" formula of compensation — not too much, not too little.

One State Department official familiar suggested the former hostages be provided compensation equivalent to that granted American servicemen who were prisoners of war in Vietnam, but increased to provide for inflation.

The official asked that he not be identified by name and stressed that his proposal is by no means the department's official position.

He said the suggested formula could provide compensatory payments of $150 to $200 for each of the 444 days the hostages were held. The result would be lump-sum payments ranging from about $66,000 to $88,000.

The official said there are many factors to be considered.

But he added that in light of the hostages' reception by the American people, "I doubt if you or I would begrudge them anything."

"At the same time," he said, "it's my impression they would not want the American people to think they were riding some sort of gravy train."

During their capitivity, the former hostages continued to receive full pay and allowances. The money went to their dependents, if any.

Marine Sentenced To Die

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A military jury sentenced 20-year-old Marine Lance Cpl. Armando Rojas to death Friday for beating and strangling Marine Pfc. Raymond St. Onge to death in July.

One of the psychiatrists who testified during the trial termed Rojas "undoubtedly a 15" if rated as a "sociopath on a scale from one to 10 (least to most dangerous)."

The body of St. Onge, 27, was found bundled in a sleeping bag and stuffed into a car trunk at Camp Lejeune.

A key prosecution witness, Pfc. Jeffrey Reyers, was convicted last November as a co-conspirator. The 21-year-old Spring Lake, Mich., native was allowed to plead guilty and receive a life sentence. That sentence was later reduced to 40 years.

St. Onge was struck on the right side of the neck with a set of "nunchucks," a martial arts weapon, as St. Onge entered Rojas' room.

Two Policemen Die In Thursday Mishap

The police chief and a police officer from the town of Bailey were killed Thursday when the right front tire on the car blew and overturned in a swampy area about two miles west of Fountain on N.C. 222.

Chief Robert Luther Strickland, 37, and Patrolman William Vincent Wingo Jr., 31, were off duty when the accident occurred. North Carolina Highway Patrolman, Coy Taylor, found both men dead at the scene.

Water had filled the interior of the car, but Pitt County Medical Examiner, Dr. M.P. Heizer, said both Stickland and Wingo died of multiple internal and head injuries.

Police Sgt. George R. Tucker said that they were on their way to visit Strickland's brother when the accident occurred. Tucker has been named as acting police chief. The town of Bailey now has only two full-time officers. Auxiliary personnel will be called in to provide relief.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. Steven Cohen

Rheumatism is a painful condition of joints and muscles caused by inflamation in those areas. When joints are inflamed, they do not produce proper amounts of lubricating fluid. It is this condition that is considered to be rheumatism. It can start in the neck, knees, arms or back. It may first appear as a fleeting pain and then reoccur in a more severe form. Without treatment, rheumatism may become chronic. Before it gets to this point, it is a good idea to see your chiropractor. Chiropractic treatment may stop or reduce the symptoms of rheumatism.

The benefits of the science of chiropractic can often go far beyond immediate back pain. Through scientifically developed techniques the optimum of spinal alignment and effective body network communications can be attained. Thus pain can be reduced and eliminated and other vital functions improved. Call the FAMILY CHIROPRACTIC HEALTH & ACCIDENT SERVICE, Mill St., Winterville, today for a chiropractic exam. Hours: 9-7 Mon.-Fri. Tel. 756-8160.

CHIRO TIP:
Do not ignore small aches and pains. They often have a habit of becoming more serious.

Investment In Better Society

A $1 million capital fund drive for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center begins tomorrow.

W. Douglas Starr is the general chairman of the drive which will be conducted mainly in Pitt and Martin Counties.

The expectation is that $225,000 will be raised in Pitt, $75,000 in Martin. It is also hoped $200,000 will come in special gifts, $200,000 from foundations, $150,000 from the state and $150,000 from the Pitt and Martin County governments.

It's a lot of money from various sources, and the funds will be put with money already on hand to finance a recreation and housing complex for the center.

It can hardly be disputed that the center is worthwhile. It trains mentally and physically handicapped citizens from the two counties to become productive and employable people.

The Vocational Center has been in operation for sometime. It has a proven record of developing handicapped citizens to the point where they can be employed, thus making them productive rather than people who have to be taken care of.

It is thus clear that a contribution to this drive is an investment in improving the lot of those who train at the vocational center . . . and that is an investment in a better society.

No Military Equipment Is Due

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig has made it clear that no military equipment will be sent to Iran.

The ban applies to equipment ordered earlier and any future deals with Iran for military goods.

It is a sound policy. We assume the agreement to return Iranian assets in exchange for the release of the hostages, didn't include any commitment to providing military hardware. Without an entirely new government with a fresh attitude there is no reason for us to help that country build a war machine.

Flexible Working Hours

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The push is on in the 1981 General Assembly to open the door to added flexibility in working hours for state employees.

Among the options would be "job-sharing" arrangements in which two people would hold one position, each either working half a day, or all day long, but not all week.

A legislative study committee says investigation into such a possibility proves that such work schedules would be particularly attractive to the elderly, the handicapped, and to women who would like to earn income, advance their careers, and raise children at the same time.

Several witnesses before the committee testified that experience shows part-time employees are generally more productive, more satisfied in their work, and use less sick leave or petty leave because they are not under pressure in looking after personal matters because of time demands on the job.

The committee, chaired by State Rep. Wilma Woodard of Garner, will propose that part-time employees be allowed to participate in the state retirement plans, and become eligible for longevity pay increases. Such a change would encourage more part-time jobseekers, the committee suggests.

Other options outlined in the committee report to legislators is extension of the "flex-time" schedule by which employees may choose to come at different hours and leave after completion of a standard workday. Some should be allowed to come in earlier and even trim lunch hours so they could complete their day even earlier, the committee proposes. Such arrangements not only suit individual employee schedules, but help keep offices open to the public longer, and ease traffic jams during morning and evening peak hours, specialists contend.

The committee did not make recommendations on expansion of the four-day workweek to areas of state government other than the Department of Transportation which already uses that technique. Surveys of state employees have shown considerable interest in that flexibility.

What the state is doing in work schedules will have considerable importance to private industry across the state, since it has been demonstrated in other instances that governmental pay and fringe benefits often pressure private businesses to match them in order to compete for employees.

Hunt Indignant

Gov. Jim Hunt was indignant at the sugesstion that "strategy" is being used to force public opinion to accept a higher gasoline tax.

There has been a flurry of cutback announcements around the state by local and state highway officials, and some observers have wondered if delay of legislative action until spring might have something to do with potholes and crumbling shoulders which will appear as roads thaw.

"Absolutely not," the governor insists. Futhermore any state employee or board member who tried to push such a strategy of deliberately allowing road deterioration or timing construction announcements to influence people "should be fired."

Lifetime

State Rep. Ernest Messer of Canton has come up with an idea to avoid the problem of last year in which the elderly were confused by changing deadlines for filing of homestead property tax exemption forms, and many were cheated of that tax break.

Even while legislation granting relief to those who missed the deadline last year is in the works, Messer is also proposing that once having filed and qualified for the exemption, the forms remain on record in the local tax offices as a lifetime exemption.

Sunday Morning Notes

John Humber, whose family has given the old Humber home at Fifth and Washington Streets to the city and county, was in town recently clearing out the last of the family's belongings.

John grew up here and is now living in Chapel Hill. We don't see our boyhood friend as often as we'd like and it was good to talk with him for awhile.

He told us his children are grown now, but he recalled a story when his oldest daughter was about eight years old.

The family was out on a drive and, as kids will, his were chattering away.

John finally erupted.

"That's enough," he stormed. "I don't want to hear another word out of you until you have something intelligent to say!"

There was an absolute silence for a time.

"E = mc²," it quoted the famed Einstein equation.

Now that's intelligent.

Joe Jenkins of our advertising staff was talking to a small boy outside the newspaper building one day recently.

"You'd better play now," Joe told the youngster. "Someday you're going to grow up and have to go to w o r k . . . "

An eavesdropping friend intervened to ask Joe, "Why did you tell him that? You didn't."

And Lawton Nisbet of Interstate Securities was dropping a check in an envelope recently when a friend came by.

"That's to pay for my daughter's piano lessons," he said.

" Better pay it. You wouldn't want them repossessed," the friend quipped.

Bill Shires of the ECU News Bureau said his office had an inquiry by phone the other day.

The name of Magnolia Blossom had shown up in a weekly newspaper as being an ECU student.

The caller wanted to know if Magnolia Blossom really existed.

Shires had a search done of the student roster. There was no Magnolia Blossom listed.

"I wish there was," Shires chuckled.

Bond Vote Ahead

(Washington Daily News)

The statewide school bond issue in the amount of $600 million is just about sure to be brought up in this legislature; and from what we can see, legislative approval is just about certain.

Legislators will hesitate to oppose a school bond issue since what they will be doing is setting up the referendum machinery only whereby the people of North Carolina will have opportunity to vote on it.

When the proposal was first made, it appeared that Harlan Boyles, State Treasurer, did not feel that the time was ripe for such an issue to be put before the people. And Governor Hunt apparently had some reservations earlier about the wisdom of holding such a bond referendum.

The reluctance seems to have melted now, and we are led to believe that both the governor and the state treasurer will give their blessings to the proposition. However, if the legislature should set the division of the money on any basis unsatisfactory to the larger counties, we could have trouble. And there have been some suggestions that every county in the state be given a sum of money, say $750,000 or a million first, should the bond issue pass. That would help poorer counties, but how the more affluent counties would look upon this is open to anybody's guess. We would believe that many voters in our larger or more wealthy counties might oppose it on such grounds.

And we would be inclined to feel that legislators representing some of the larger counties might oppose the approval in the General Assembly on the very same grounds.

A school bond issue of $600 million would help us here in Beaufort County and in Hyde County, but if every county should be given $750,000 first and the balance divided according to school population, what we would get here will not be enough to bring our schools up to what they should be.

Again, if the state would approve of a bond issue whereby counties wishing to participate would get matching state funds, if the counties in question passed local school bond issue, such a proposal as this could help us immeasurably here in our part of the state.

Recognizing school needs and meeting them are very different matters, and all too often they take very different courses. Fulfilling needs must be approved by the people of the county through a bond issue.

This sounds rather brutal, educationally speaking, but a school bond issue today in North Carolina must be marketed and sold to people just as any item of goods is merchandised. If the people are not sold, educational needs remain unfilled. It is a very large concern.

Farmer Fuel Pinch

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — American farmers, beset by 20 percent interest rates and roller-coaster grain prices sparked by the Soviet grain embargo, are about to take another blow — in the gas tank.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture economist predicted Thursday that regular gasoline would be selling for $1.50 to $1.70 a gallon by the end of 1981 — a hike of 25 to 40 percent over current prices.

"The effect on net farm income is anybody's guess," said Tom Lutton of the USDA energy research group at its National Economics Division in Washington.

"All I know is that some guys are going to be put in a terrible squeeze. There could be a lot of farmers going out of business this year because they don't have the money up front."

And the harried consumer?

"In terms of actual cost of production, energy is a very small portion," Lutton said. "When you consider the cost of production through the entire food chain (from planting the crop to selling it at the supermarket), energy accounts for only 2 percent of the cost. Even if the price of gas and diesel fuel goes up 50 percent, that would mean only a 3 percent increase."

Then no big deal, right?

Wrong, Lutton said.

"The supermarket people and others through the food chain see this (fuel) increase and they automatically say, 'We've got to raise prices.' We see an awful lot of price gouging going on (in situations like this)."

But the cost of energy is a different story down on the farm.

Lutton said energy makes up 10 percent of the cost of operating a farm. He said many farmers won't feel the pinch immediately because they've stockpiled fuel for spring planting. But summer

THE INSIDE REPORT

Percy A 'Loose Cannon'?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Tension between the new Republican administration and the new Republican chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was not eased inauguration night when Sen. Charles H. Percy wandered into a Democratic fund-raising dinner in Georgetown.

Chairman Percy strolled into the elegant house of the committee's senior Democrat, Sen. Claiborne Pell, where Democratic politicians were plotting a 1982 Senate campaign war chest. That brought a shout from a senator that Percy "has seen the light and joined the Democrats." No, said Percy, he was only looking for "my boarders" (daughter Sharon and her Democratic husband, West Virginia's Gov. Jay Rockefeller, who were at the dinner).

Political banter followed during which Percy thanked liberal Democrats who backed him against a conservative Democratic challenger in 1978. One diner later reported to the Reagan inner circle that Percy had called himself more comfortable at Pell's house that night than with freshman right-wing Republican senators. Others present say they cannot recall that being said, but the incident furthered the impression at the White House that Chuck Percy constitutes one big problem.

Whether he said it out loud or not, Percy does feel more comfortable with Claiborne Pell than with the Reagan crowd. That has been made clear by Percy's attitude on arms talks with Moscow, the Iranian hostage release, strategy on the Haig confirmation and selection of a deputy secretary of state.

Ronald Reagan is not the first president with a Percy problem. During 14 years in the Senate, Percy has exasperated Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter, but especially Nixon. The difference now is that for the first time, Percy can exercise real power. He talks about wielding the gavel as he did long ago as the boy-wonder chairman of Bell & Howell, but the foreign relations post seems more truly the substitute for his frustrated presidential ambitions. As such, since the Nov. 4 election, Percy has been playing surrogate chief diplomat.

While unwilling to publicly attack Percy, Reagan's foreign policy advisers were shaken by the senator's post-election visit to Moscow. The furor over who leaked the secret cables reporting on his Kremlin talks obscured serious issues.

To this day, Percy insists he was transmitting the wishes of the new administration, as conveyed to him by national security aide Richard Allen and by Reagan himself, when he gave the impression of desire for SALT III talks to commence at once. Reagan's advisers say the wrong idea was given; only Soviet appreciation of how Washington works prevented a dangerous misunderstanding.

During the transition, Percy also seemed to be playing an activist diplomatic role, seeking release of the hostages. When Iranian Prime Minister Rajai visited the United Nations, said Percy, "I went to New York immediately to find out what was happening." When Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher was negotiating in Algiers, Percy was on the transatlantic telephone to him daily.

What has worried the Reagan camp is that the Iranians, less sophisticated than the Russians, would mistake Percy's voice for Reagan's. Percy has been extravagant in his praise of the Carter ad-

Strength For Today

ETERNAL HOPE

The most distinguishing characteristic of the Christian is hope. People who really have religion always expect the best to happen ultimately. They are not wishful thinkers. They know that trouble and misfortune, like the rain, fall on the just and the unjust alike. But hope leads them to believe with certainty that the end of the road will mark the beginning of something much finer than they have ever enjoyed on this earth.

And even in this life, those who have opened their hearts and have allowed the refreshing breezes of faith to sweep through are always sustained by the comforting hope that whatever is needed to make life satisfying and significant will eventually be theirs.

There is always purpose behind the apparently mysterious ways of God. And hope is always the stabilizing influence in a man's heart which causes him to recognize this fact and to direct his life in the light of it. — Elisha Douglass

Changes In Financial Services

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When is a bank no longer a bank, a savings and loan no longer a savings and loan, a mutual fund no longer a mutual fund, a stock brokerage firm no longer a brokerage firm?

Answer: In the not very distant future.

At least that's the picture many experts paint when they start describing a kind of undeclared revolution that is already under way in the American financial-services business.

It is taking place fitfully, in one market today and another tomorrow, so that at any given moment only parts of it may be visible to a casual observer.

You might notice randomly that a savings institution has begun offering a form of checking account that pays interest, or that a brokerage firm is taking part in a plan to offer a new type of mortgage.

Financial people say these are only bits and pieces of something much bigger — a vast overhaul of the system that is certain to continue through the mid-1980s, if only because of legislation that is already on the books.

Recent laws have, among other things, decreed changes in many of the rules under which banks and savings institutions operate — including the much-debated Regulation Q that sets limits on how much interest they can pay out. It is scheduled to be eliminated by stages over the next five years.

"The actual events of the financial world are confused with the image of what used to be," Walter Wriston, chairman of Citicorp, the New York bank holding company, pointed out in a speech the other day to a Wall Street audience.

"The image is that banks are places to deposit money and get loans; that brokerage firms are places where securities are bought, sold and distributed; that thrifts (savings institutions) are places to maintain savings and obtain mortgages.

"Yet the reality of the actual events taking place is that computers, satellites, electronics fund transfer mechanisms, micro-circuitry and high-speed optical telephone lines are eliminating the constraints of time, geography and volume in financial transactions.

"A man in Texas takes his money out of a savings and loan, calls a toll-free telephone number in Arizona, and his money ends up in a money-market fund in Boston — or anywhere else on the globe.

"The financial marketplace today is everywhere, any time. The parties to the transactions could be anyone with the ability to punch in the right numbers anywhere."

Wriston pointed out that, like most upheavals, this one has been met with much protest in the established order. The banks cry foul when Merrill Lynch, a broker, offers something called a "cash management account" that looks, sounds and acts like a checking account.

The brokers, for their part, protest to regulators that the banks, in various ways, keep trying to invade their turf.

Wriston described this kind of special pleading as "a sorry spectacle" and a "losing game for everyone." It often winds up, he said, with businessmen who claim to be advocates of free enterprise seeking to have themselves exempted from all-out competition.

"The public doesn't really care about our internecine problems," Wriston added. "What the public wants and is entitled to is a fair return on its money. If we can't serve them, they will — and should — go elsewhere."

To the editor:

I am one of the property owners and taxpayers who attended the citizens' meeting Jan. 26 about the 1981 tax revaluation of real property.

It is very important for each taxpayer to contact the W. P. Ferris Inc. revaluation firm for a review of his new evaluation. Please don't consider it a waste of time. The appraiser will go over your evaluation with you. He spent half an hour with me. The appraiser does not know your property and he may, of necessity, have made a rather superficial assessment. Remember that it is not the W. P. Ferris firm that set the baseline figures used for assessment. It is our county commissioners who set these figures.

Though the Farm Bureau has organized the citizens' meetings, all taxpayers who are concerned about the revaluation are welcome and should attend. They are for everyone. I was upset to see only three or four other people under 35 years of age there. If we young people don't make ourselves heard, we are going to have to live with these evaluations and pay high taxes for a long time.

To the editor:

The shock waves of property re-evaluation for tax purposes continue to vibrate throughout Pitt County as its residents struggle to find solutions for the potential burden they may have to bear. The law requires a re-evaluation of property values every eight (8) years, but most owners never imagined that their property could be valued as it presently is. This is another example of how our people can be caught up into a situation in which they feel helpless. This is one of the reasons why the Chicod School Advisory Committee applauds the decision of the Pitt County Board of Education for not pursuing the issue of merger. Most every study dealing with merger dramatically points out that the merging of units does not create a more economical school system in terms of cost to the taxpayer. Studies also indicate that the larger a unit gets, the smaller the influence individual parents have in helping guide and direct the educational paths their children can follow.

These factors, plus educational gains our schools have made in the past decade, lend wholehearted support to the decision by the Pitt County Board of Education for pursuing non-merger.

To the editor:

The business of Greenville's City Government is the business of the tax paying citizens of Greenville. The Mayor and City Council voluntarily sought public office and were duly elected to conduct the citizens' business.

We. . .the citizens. . .gave them our trust. . .and hope. . .for responsible government. In essence, our elected officials cried out for. . .responsibility. NOW. . .comes the hard reality of accountability. . .the time to account to those who gave them the responsibility. You cannot have one without the other.

I suggest the increase of the city license tag tax from $1.00 to $5.00 is unconscionable. THINK ON IT. . .a 500 per cent increase. On a scale of 1 to 10, this levy ranges from unreasonable to irresponsible to bureaucratic arrogance.

In the past three weeks, I have personally talked to at least 1500 Greenville citizens about the $5.00 city tag tax. Most remarks are not printable. The kindest comments heard are "you bet I'm upset about it. . .but I guess you can't fight City Hall. . ." Well, I say — Poppycock! Fighting City Hall may not be easy, but by golly, it might turn out to be enjoyable.

What is frightening is that citizen silence on this 500 per cent levy will excite the insatiable appetite of these same city officials as they levy the future tax rate on the recent property valuations.

It would be interesting to get a head count on any of our county or city elected officials who have attended any of the numerous citizens' meeting on revaluation. Oh, brave one — stand up and be counted.

It is time. . .NOW. . .for citizen action.

A Story Behind Pulitzer Prize For N.C. Paper

By NOEL YANCEY

Horace Carter admitted later he and his family were frightened when strange automobiles began parking in front of his home at Tabor City, their unknown occupants waiting silently — and omniously — in the night. The young editor's morale was not helped when Ku Klux Klan circulars began appearing in his car or when the telephone brought warnings from unknown callers who refused to give their names.

And a few miles away, in Whiteville, editor Willard Cole heeded the advice of Sheriff Hugh Nance and armed himself with a high-powered rifle and shotgun when he ventured out at night. The sheriff's advice came after unidentified callers threatened Cole's life.

At the time, in 1951, Carter was editor of the Tabor City Tribune, and Cole edited the Whiteville News-Reporter. The threats came after the two young journalists began lambasting hooded nightriders whose floggings of innocent persons had brought a reign of terror in Columbus County.

"Unwholesome, ungodly hooded hoodlums," Carter called them in the editorial campaign which he began after he attended a Klan rally in nearby Horry County, S.C., in 1950. He printed the texts of the violent speeches Klan leaders made to the hooded figures gathered around the flaming crosses. He knew his words were hitting home when KKK stickers began appearing on his parked car and place of business.

Immediately after Carter spotlighted the Klan activity in Horry County, Cole joined him in denouncing the nightriders. They played a lonesome duet at first. While many citizens objected to the Klan as it became active in Columbus county, they did not know how to make their opposition felt. The Carter-Cole broadsides helped foster the anti-Klan sentiment and to keep it alive while Nance, Solicitor Clifton Moore and the State Bureau of Investigation were probing the floggings. Then came the threats, like the one contained in a letter Cole received from nearby Nakina: "Every desent sic person is in favor of the KKK & their purpus," the letter said. "If the News-Reporter staff will stop acting the fool you wont have anything to worry about. But when you go & tip off everybody what can be done, then you can expect anything under the sun..."

Both Carter and Cole insisted to admiring reporters that their was nothing heroic in their roles and that they were simply doing the job they were supposed to do.

"Personally," said Cole, "I would pay far more tribute to the flogging victims who dared to report their experiences after being told not to than I would to either Carter or myself for flashing them into the open with streamer headlines."

Early-on, Carter interviewed Klan Grand Dragon Thomas L. Hamilton of Leesville, S.C. His account of the interview brought a letter from Hamilton in which he told Carter his mind was "warped," and in which he intimated that some advertisers in the Tribune were affiliated with the Klan. Carter answered with a front page editorial in which he challenged Hamilton to let a psychiatrist judge whose mind was warped.

"...If there are any KKK members advertising with us who would like to cease doing so, we will be happy to cancel it forthwith," Carter added. He said one advertiser did quit the Tribune because of Carter's vigorous stand, but he was heartened when his paper got new advertisers.

Carter and Cole were alike in many respects. Both came to Columbus County to serve as executive secretary of the Tabor City Merchants Association. After Carter founded the Tribune, Cole succeeded him at the Merchants Association and also helped write editorials for the Tribune. So alike did they think and write that later neither man could say who wrote

A Different Childhood With 2 Deaf Parents

By Gail Michaels

BIRMINGHAM, Al. — It almost seems a miracle that Sue Noblin can hear. Her parents are deaf; so are her maternal grandparents and all her aunts and uncles.

Now a widow in her late 30s and mother of six, Mrs. Noblin recalls a childhood far different from that of her contemporaries. "I learned hand signs before I learned to talk," she says — signs such as "mother" and "Milk bottle." Then, with the help of neighbors, she progressed to speaking.

Mother was very much aware of my needs. She tried to have speaking people around me as much as possible."

Even before she started school, Sue was the communicating link between her parents and the business world. She helped tham at the grocery store check-out counter, aided them in straightening out bills with their creditors and verbalized their car problems to the mechanic.

"What resulted was almost a generation gap betwen me and my peers. For it's hard to talk about first grade things with your friends when at home you are talking about carburetors."

But Sue Noblin describes her early life as "a responsibility" rather than a burden. It's a responsibility which she says is lighter today for children of deaf parents, due to the fact that so many mechanical devices exist now to aid the hearing impaired.

For the past five years, Mrs. Noblin has worked with the E.H. Gentry Technical Facility, and adult rehabilitation and vocational training center for the deaf and blind. A nationally-certified interpreter, she also teaches sign language at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

Those two charges, plus her children, are enough to occupy anyone on a full time basis. But last year Mrs. Noblin began to use her skill in sign language in a revolutionary new forum — the community theatre.

Through an arrangement between the Town and Gown Theatre of the University of Alabama in Birmingham and the Magic City Civitan Club, Mrs. Noblin and a handful of other sign language experts are providing interpretations for the deaf at theatre performances. The adventure premiered with "Spoon River Anthology," and had ranged through "Old Acquaintance," the musical "Paint Your Wagon" and "That Championship Season."

The way Mrs. Noblin sees it, until deaf theatre came to Birmingham, the only public function in which the deaf could participate was church. Deaf Theatre, she believes, is part of a growing awareness in the city of the needs and rights of deaf people for creative involvement in the community.

"Anything I can go to, I'd like to have it so a deaf person can go, too."

Mrs. Noblin coordinates the roles of the other interpreters — sometimes as many as eight — deciding their places on stage, making sure that they learn their signs and figuring out accurate interpretations for music.

"To interpret in theatre," she explains, "you have to know the word, what it means, the sign for it, how it is spelled and the mood of the play at that point." The challenges for the interpreter are at least as arduous as they are for the regular actors — particulary in a musical.

"A musical is one of the most difficult, yet gratifying things to interpret," says Mrs. Noblin. "In a musical you can't afford to loose a word. If you do, chances are you've lost the whole song. When you sing a song, you become the song and it becomes you. In one of the songs from 'Paint Your Wagon,' Maria is the wind. When you sign 'They call the wind Maria,' your whole body becomes the wind. You are the wind."

Musing that she and her cohorts are "frustrated actors" to begin with, she says they have come to feel that they are actors truly involved in the play, not merely outside liasions to a special audience.

"I guess we are all a bunch of hams," Mrs. Noblin laughs, "but we love it."

Spontaneity In Speech Today Is A Big No-No

By Gail Michaels

One thing a parent loses with the arrival of the first child is all hope for spontaneity, especially in speech. Heaven forbid that I should say something without thinking about it first.

Take words like "stupid." I have tried to teach Meg not to call anyone stupid. And she is very good about not doing so.

Unfortunately, I am not. As long as I'm ambulatory, I manage to contain myself. But put me behind the wheel of a car, and I lose all control. The streets are full of stupid jerks.

Meg, of course, never loses an opportunity to call these verbal lapses to my attention — never. For instance, several weeks ago after missing my exit on the interstate, I changed direction at the next exit and sped impatiently back toward the right turn off.

Almost immediately a flashing blue light appeared in my rearview mirror. I looked down at my speedometer. It was registering a good 10 miles over the speed limit.

"How could I be so stupid?!" I groaned.

Meg was silent until the officer walked up to my open window. She gave him the once-over, then said, "Mommy, you know you aren't supposed to call anyone stupid."

Needless to say, gossiping in front of Meg is foolhardy at best. So is holding any discussion not meant specifically for her.

Until recently, Phillip and I have spelled when we felt that the conversation couldn't wait until after her bedtime. But Meg knows phonics now.

So when I spelled to Phillip that he was "barking" at her too much at dinner one night, she picked up on it immediately.

"Baa-rr-kingg. Barking. what does that mean? Daddy doesn't bark. Dogs do. So what were you talking about?"

Phillip had a rough day. "None of your business!" he snapped.

Meg looked stricken. That particular phrase is also on our list of no-nos.

"Daddy didn't mean that," I said quickly.

"No, that wasn't nice. I don't know what I was thinking about. It's a rude phrase, and I shouldn't use it, and I don't want you to use it either."

"What phrase?" Meg said. "Barking?"

"None of your business," I answered.

"You aren't supposed to say that," Meg said.

"I meant that the phrase is 'none of your business.'"

Her lower lip began to quiver. "You aren't being nice to me."

I was feeling stupid, but I wasn't going to say it or spell it. "You don't understand, dear. I wasn't telling you 'none of your business.' I was telling you what the phrase was. A phrase is a group of words, and the group of words Daddy and I were talking about is 'none of your business.'"

"Why do you keep hurting my feelings?!" she wailed.

At this point words failed me. So Phillip tried. "What Mommy means is that 'none of your business' is a phrase. It's a phrase we don't like. Do you understand?"

She nodded her head. Phillip and I looked at each other with relief. At least we were out of that one.

Meg watched us silently for a moment. "Now Daddy," she finally said. "What did Mommy mean by 'barking?'" ministration's deal with Tehran and Christopher's feat, a judgment that differs considerably from the Reagan camp's.

When Percy's first task as chairman was presiding over Alexander Haig's confirmation hearings, nervous Reagan agents immediately worked out an agreement whereby tactical leadership would devolve to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker. But even before Baker's incapacitating illness, Percy was regularly digressing from the agreed scenario offering concessions to his friend, Sen. Pell. Percy's agreement to subpoena Watergate tapes may well have won three Democratic committee votes for Haig as he claims, but it also infuriated the Reagan team.

The most recent difficulty was Percy's objection to naming California Supreme Court Justice William P. Clark as deputy secretary of state on grounds he did not meet Christopher's standard. When asked by a Reagan aide where the objections were coming from, Percy replied: "They're coming from me." He explained he was concerned by derogatory "comments" about Clark he had heard at a Washington dinner of Stanford University's Hoover Institution.

Percy insisted on a consultation with Clark, which turned out to be a long grilling of the justice. The senator seemed mollified (though still unwilling to make a flat commitment), and Clark's nomination was sent to Capitol Hill.

All this is built on a base of hostility. The president's insiders felt that Reagan's laying of arms around Percy in his 1978 re-election scare never was adequately appreciated, as reflected in the senator's $500 campaign contribution to John Anderson for president. When Reagan insiders call Percy a "loose cannon," that is one of their gentler descriptions not made public. Such biting of tongues about Percy at the White House may not last forever.

Unlike some previous years, there will be plenty of fuel available — "if you can afford it," Lutton said.

The Kansas Energy Office said 72,000 farmers in the nation's largest wheat producing state used 280 million gallons of fuel in 1980, costing about $3,900 per farm. Decontrol and price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will likely add another $1,000 to that tab this year, according to Lutton's projections.

Lyle Goltz, a spokesman for the state energy office, said the decontrol phase of the fuel bite will cost the average farmer about $160, with the remainder blamed on OPEC.

The immediate decontrol measure which President Reagan endorsed Wednesday will increase prices five to eight cents a gallon this year, Lutton said, with OPEC hikes responsible for the rest.

Thanksgiving Expressed, Change The Subject

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It may seem a churlish thing to say, but it has to be said: Now that the White House reception is over and done with, can we forget about these former hostages for a while? It's time to change the subject.

We have now been through 10 days of purple prose and yellow ribbons. The families of the prisoners have been interviewed not only ad infinitum but also ad nauseam. In one banal form or another, the penetrating question has now been asked 10,000 times: How does it feel to be home? Not since Three Mile Island has a story been so massively overblown.

The notion that the 52 are "heroes" ought to be quietly abandoned. With the exception of Jerry Plotkin, the California businessman who was seized by accident, these were professionals in the State Department and the armed services. Theirs is a high-risk profession. And the trouble with high risks, as any insurance agent will tell you, is that now and then one pays a price for taking them. The prisoners suffered an agonizing ordeal but not a novel one. Let them now go in peace.

One aspect of this wretched story cannot be yet put aside. What should President Reagan do about the agreements? My own thought is that part of the settlement should be honored. Much of it should be repudiated out of hand.

As a nation, it seems to me, we are honor bound to carry out the commitment to bring about the transfer of all remaining Iranian financial assets in the United States or in U.S. instrumentalities abroad. We are committed to creating an Iran-United States Claims Tribunal with authority to arbitrate whatever claims may be submitted to it. We owe it to the Algerians, whose good offices must be respected, to honor other provisions that go directly to official relationships between Iran and the United States.

But compliance, I submit, should stop there. The agreements contain provisions as to private individuals so blatantly unconstitutional as to shock the conscience. A charitable assumption is that Deputy Secretary Warren Christopher consented to these provisions knowing they were not worth the paper they were written on.

Consider, if you please, this brazen clause: "The United States will order all persons within U.S. jurisdiction to report to the U. S. Treasury, within 30 days, for transmission to Iran, all information known to them as of Nov. 3, 1979 ... with respect to the property and assets of the former Shah or any close relative of the former Shah. Violation of the requirement will be subject to civil and criminal penalties described by U.S. law."

It is inconceivable that Mr. Reagan should issue any such "order." If the time has come when one may be imprisoned for violation of a presidential "order" or "requirement," due process of law has lost its meaning.

By the same token, Mr. Reagan should repudiate those provisions that purport to prohibit our own courts from hearing claims filed by our own citizens. If federal courts are to be prevented from hearing certain causes of action, the prohibition will have to be imposed by act of Congress. No president has power to barter away the civil rights of the people, including the right to sue for redress of damages.

By renouncing these intolerable provisions, Mr. Reagan may salvage some shred of national self-respect. The assets of Iran are one thing; the rights of American citizens are something else entirely.

As for the rest, let us cool it. This has not been a glorious chapter in the history of our land. No amount of champagne will make it so. Let us be thankful — deeply thankful — that the prisoners survived their brutal captivity. Once that gratitude has been expressed, let the cheering stop.

By Some Viet Nam Veterans Remembering The Neglect They Suffered

Welcome Stirs Bitter Memories

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

"Oh, when will this country open its eyes

"and recognize the Vietnam veteran's cries?

"... No waving flags, no ticker tape parades.

"You use your own people for your political charades ..."

"J.L.J.," a Vietnam combat veteran now living in Michigan, wrote those bitter lines last week and mailed them to Citizen Soldier, a Vietnam veterans' organization in New York.

He was moved to write them by a jubilant nation that displayed its yellow ribbons, tossed ticker tape and waved the colors to celebrate the freedom of 52 Americans held hostage for 444 days in Iran.

J.L.J. wasn't the only Vietnam veteran made bitter, or angry, or depressed by the heroic welcome that greeted the former hostages.

Nationwide, Vietnam veterans and their counselors say that seeing the nation unroll a yellow carpet for the hostages exhumed buried, painful memories for scores of men who fought an unpopular war in Southeast Asia.

"The first indication we got was a phone call from a combat veteran on Jan. 20," the day the hostages were freed, said Peter Sharp, a team leader at a Veterans Administration Oklahoma City Center.

"He was close to tears and very emotional. His basic statement was, 'Look at the treatment they got compared to what we got.'"

Sharp said he's taken other, similar calls since.

"Most of the guys don't resent the hostages at all," he said, but the near-universal joy surrounding the hostages' return "brings back the pain of what they went through, the neglect they suffered."

VA spokesman Bill Sawchak said Friday that a check of 91 urban VA "Outreach Centers" found "nothing. There have been no specific changes in the number of callers" as a result of the national celebration over the hostages' liberation.

But the people who run those centers and the veterans who seek their help told The Associated Press another, more bitter story.

"Since the past Monday, we have had about 22 or 24 Viet vets come in and ask why the hostages are getting all the attention and they got nothing," said Dan Campbell, leader of a New Haven, Conn., VA Outreach team.

"These guys are angry. They're angry ... because they didn't get any parades or any welcome home parties," Campbell added. "There's a lot of animosity."

In Evansville, Ind., one Vietnam veteran commented: "When we came home, there was nothing — not even a thank you. It's been 10, 15 years, but a lot of us are still waiting for our welcome home."

"It would have been nice to have worn my uniform even one day after I returned and been proud," said another.

Lee D. Crump, a clinical psychologist and associate chief of the VA Outreach operation in Washington, said he's made no "systematic canvas" to measure Vietnam veterans' reactions.

But, he added, "there is a a very definite and, in some instances, a very negative reaction among Vietnam veterans.

"We've had spontaneous telephone calls from teams across the county," Crump said, "saying veterans are visibly shaken and upset by seeing a homecoming they felt they deserved and did not receive."

Crump said some veterans last week were seeking help at the centers because they are angry, or because they've become depressed, or because they're feeling a combination of both emotions.

When asked what provoked these feelings, Crump said, Vietnam veterans cite the heroes' welcome accorded the hostages.

Gary May, a social worker in an Evansville, Ind., VA clinic, said the number of Vietnam vets seeking help has increased in the past weeks.

The hostages' return, he said, "seems to be causing a lot of Vietnam vets to do a lot of thinking about their own homecomings."

A veteran at the Evansville center who asked not to be named said: "Don't get us wrong. We're glad they're back, but it's all starting to get out of hand. If the country can do all of this for 52 of them, you wonder where everyone was when we stepped off our planes."

He added: "If we'd have had a reception anything close to this, maybe so many of us wouldn't have the problems we have."

In Indianapolis, a Vietnam-era veteran was organizing a march to highlight the differences between the hostages' welcome and the plight of the veterans. An Evansville group was considering a similar protest.

Though most do not, some Vietnam veterans begrudge the hostages their reception. One is Waymon B. Wilson, a 42-year-old Oklahoma City Marine veteran who served two tours of duty in Vietnam:

"The thing that really got me was that President Reagan made a statement when they left Iran and he called them heroes. ... They were called heroes, but we had guys that were captured for four or five years. We fought a war for this d— country and we didn't get anything for it."

Wilson was also bitter over the medical teams sent to help the hostages readjust to freedom. Vietnam's survivors had no such help, he said:

"You might be in a firefight on Friday and be back in the States on Sunday, trying to figure out what was going on."

In Hartford, Conn., Cathy Greene said about 25 trou-

So, perhaps it was only fitting that Carter's and Cole's newspapers were jointly selected as the 1951 winners of the Pulitzer Prize because of their anti-Klan stand. The awards, for "meritorious public service," were the first Pulitzer Prizes ever won by North Carolina newspapers.

"I couldn't have won it with a nicer guy," said Cole, then 46, who hailed originally from Wilkes County where his father was a Methodist minister. He said much of the credit for suppressing the Klan in Columbus County belonged to Sheriff Nance and Solicitor Clifton Moore whose efforts had resulted in Hamilton and 17 other Klansmen being sentenced to prison for their parts in at least 13 floggings. The victims of these outrages told officers their floggers said they were being punished for such offenses as drinking too much or immorality.

"Certainly back when we started this crusade, we never had any idea it would gain national recognition," said Carter, then 32, an Albemarle native. "We had no idea of reward."

Possibly Cole and Carter were grateful that partly as a result of their efforts, children would no longer address their parents questions such as the one Carter's four-year-old son, Rusty, asked him at the height of the Klan's heyday in Columbus County.

Mormon Fireside Today

A fireside will be held today at 7 p.m. in room 244, Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University campus, sponsored by the Student Association of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Mormon missionaries have been maintaining an information booth on the university campus this week and the fireside will culminate their efforts and the area's Mormon Week.

A highlight of the evening will be the showing of "John Baker's Last Race," an award winning film. Nephi Jorgensen, professor emeritus, will serve as master of ceremonies for the program. Joel N. Gillespie, president of the North Carolina Raleigh Mission for the Mormon Church, will participate as both a speaker and member of the mission staff quartet which will perform.

Others on the program include William Cox and Grace Barnhill of Greenville along with disc jockey "Special K" and Rene Burdett of Raleigh.

A social hour will be held. The fireside will be the first in this area sponsored by the Latter Day Saint Student Association and is open to all residents.

Memoirs Of Judge Larkins Published

ECU News Bureau

A book detailing the personal memoirs of Judge John D. Larkins Jr. of Trenton, "Politics, Bar and Bench: A Memoir of U.S. District Judge John Davis Larkins, Jr.," has been published by the Historical Society of Eastern North Carolina.

The editors are Dr. Fred Ragan, chairman of the Department of History, East Carolina University, and Don Lennon, director of the East Carolina Manuscript Collection, ECU.

John D. Larkins, at age 26, became the youngest member ever to serve in the State Senate of North Carolina. He served nine terms as a state senator, becoming chairman of every major committee, chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission, chairman of the state Democratic Party and Democrat national committeeman. He ran for governor in 1960, but lost in the primary. Then President John F. Kennedy appointed him to the federal court bench for the Eastern District of North Carolina.

For 20 years Larkins presided over many federal cases including school integration and civil rights suits, environmental disputes and numerous criminal trials.

The hardbound volume of Larkins' memoirs is 171 pages plus appendices and index and contains 17 illustrations.

The project began six years ago as an oral history being compiled by the staff of the ECU Manuscript Collection, but in early 1978 after more than 12 hours of interviews, it was decided that the Larkins' memoirs were worthy of publication.

"Little did anyone realize at the time the difficulties inherent in transforming more than 275 pages of questions and answers into a cohesive, informative narrative," the editors said.

In A Tiny Camp Lejeune Courtroom

Last Battle Of The Viet Nam War To Be Fought This Week

EDITOR'S NOTE — Two years ago today an American soldier thrust a note to a Finnish businessman visiting Hanoi with the desperate request that he be allowed to go home. On Monday, a five-man jury of Marine officers will begin considering whether to imprison that man, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, for his activities during his 14 years in Vietnam. AP Special Correspondent Peter Arnett has been covering the court-martial, and here he sets the scene.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The last battle of the Vietnam War will be won or lost this week in a tiny courtroom echoing with tales of torture and death, and of insanity, betrayal and the survival of the fittest.

The U.S. government argues that Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, 34, who spent nearly half his life in Vietnamese captivity, deserves to spend the rest of it in an American military prison because he collaborated with the communists.

His defense lawyers contend the tall, darkly handsome Marine was driven insane in captivity. Final arguments in the court-martial will be heard Monday and the case will go to a five-man jury.

Fellow prisoners of war, both American and Vietnamese, have traveled to this Marine base in the Carolinas to testify at the only jury trial of a Vietnam POW. They have vividly recreated in testimony the cruel life of captivity in the jungle prison camps of South Vietnam where 35 percent of all American captives died.

Garwood, a Marine jeep driver, 19 years old when captured near Da Nang in 1965, was first seen by living American POWs in 1967. By then, according to Army enlisted man Gustauve A. Mehrer, Garwood was living with the Vietnamese camp guards, "squatting like them, walking like them and giggling like them — in my opinion he was a White Vietnamese."

Judge R.E. Switzer, a Vietnam veteran, has dismissed charges that Garwood deserted in time of war, solicited American troops to throw down their arms, and maltreated a fellow prisoner by verbally abusing him. But the Marine magistrate let stand the key charge of collaboration, and another that Garwood struck a fellow American POW.

One of the most effective government witnesses was Capt. Harold Floyd Kushner, an Army doctor who shared a Quang Ngai POW camp with Garwood in 1968. He testified the Marine apparently overheard a remark the doctor made comparing the Vietnamese with Japanese captors, and informed on him to the camp commander, resulting in punishment. But under cross-examination Kushner admitted another prisoner also had an opportunity to inform on him.

Throughout the trial, suggestions have surfaced of duplicity and betrayal involving others than Garwood. Published accounts of life in these camps indicate a breakdown in leadership and discipline because of cruel treatment.

But defense lawyers decided not to rake across these raw wounds, and declined to put their man on the witness stand. Faced with serious charges the moment he stepped into the Free World in 1979, Garwood has generally remained silent, confering only with the defense team and a task force of psychiatrists assigned to evaluate him.

Glimmerings of a more complex set of relationships in prison camp than those articulated by government witnesses have come through in psychiatric testimony.

Defense lawyers have conceded government charges that Garwood lived with his captors and sometimes carried a weapon. They argued, however, that Garwood, a green Marine already emotionally disabled when he joined the corps, was systematically tortured in his early years of lonely captivity.

Eventually, according to chief defense counsel John Lowe, Garwood "was driven mad by this coercive persuasion. He adapted his behavior to that demanded by his captors. It was a matter of survival. He was incapable of appreciating the criminality of his acts."

Defense psychiatrists backed up these claims with a blizzard of complex theory and definitive judgment that the government poorly rebutted. The defense is convinced it has created reasonable doubt about Garwood's state of mind.

"Coercive persuasion," or brainwashing as it was once known, has been used as a defense before — always unsuccessfully. Garwood's actions already conceded by the defense violate military law to the extent that he can be imprisoned for life.

The five-member jury of Marine Vietnam veterans must decide whether the Indiana youth who strayed into Vietcong territory betrayed the Marine code of conduct, or whether he was just another victim of a war long thought over until Garwood came home.

Airlines Bracing For Pilots Strike

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The major airlines are bracing for a threatened pilots strike over government safety policy, a protest that could leave much of the nation briefly without scheduled air service in early March.

Leaders of the 33,000-member Air Line Pilots Association are in the midst of a month-long, 15-city tour aimed at enlisting pilot and public support for a work stoppage which could last from one to three days.

While the union claims to have broad backing for the protest, industry sources said privately in interviews that some pilots are sharply divided on its merits. In addition, several prominent carriers, including American Airlines, have pilots who do not belong to association.

But if the protest attains its goals, industry sources acknowledged, air traffic could be severely interrupted and the airlines involved might lose as much as $80 million a day. Commuter and many regional lines would not be affected.

"As to impact, we'll just have to play it by ear for now," said one airline executive, asking not to be identified by name. Another said most carriers probably will be able to keep some "bread and butter" flights in service even if the protest gains wide acceptance.

The pilots' grievances are aimed not at the airlines, but at the Federal Aviation Administration, with the union demanding that President Reagan take action to redirect the agency's focus on a number of safety issues.

Kurds Side With Iraqis

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer

NOWSUD, Iraqi-Occupied Iran (AP) — Iran's ethnic Kurds have taken up arms on the side of Iraqi invaders and seized on the Persian Gulf war to press their decades-old fight for independence.

Kurds, renowned as warriors, are serving as scouts and commandos for Iraqi forces occupying sections of the the rugged Zagros mountains in northwestern Iran.

But what the fiercely independent tribesmen stand to gain, even if their allies win the war, remains to be seen.

They have received no public promises from Iraq that it would grant them more autonomy than is enjoyed by their brothers across the pre-war border in northeastern Iraq, where numerous small-scale Kurdish rebellions have been quelled over the past five years.

The Kurdish fighters wear traditional baggy trousers, sheepskin vests and turbans and cross their chests with bandoleers of ammunition for their American, Soviet or Chinese-made weapons.

Hitching up his belt strung with Iranian hand grenades, one fighter in this village held up four fingers and boasted that was the number of Iranian soldiers he had killed that week.

Kurdistan spreads across the mountainous terrain where Turkey, Iraq and Iran come together. The proud people that populate the region have, since World War I, risen up against all three governments in an unsuccessful effort to establish an independent state.

There are about 8 million Kurds throughout the area.

Both Iran and Iraq have claimed the loyalty of the rebellious tribesmen since the gulf war began in September. But a reporter's three-day visit last week to Iraqi and Iranian Kurdish regions showed the mountain warriors plainly on the side of Iraq.

Shortly after the single-car accident at 12:23 p.m. involving Elizabeth Morton on N. Memorial Dr., a car driven by Christopher Columbus Henderson, 300 N. # Rogers, Streisand, The Eagles, Billy Joel Music Award Winners

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country music star Kenny Rogers garnered four awards, including favorite male pop and country vocalist, at the eighth annual American Music Awards, with Barbra Streisand named favorite female pop singer.

Rogers and Miss Streisand topped a list of mostly absent winners in the nationally televised awards show Friday night. In addition to the individual honors, Rogers won for his country single, "Coward of the County," and, for the second year in a row, Rogers' popular LP "The Gambler" was named favorite country album.

The Eagles won favorite pop group and Billy Joel's "Glass Houses" was named favorite pop album. Earth, Wind & Fire won its fourth favorite soul group trophy and the Statler Brothers got country group honors for a third straight year.

In the favorite soul album category, Michael Jackson also scored for the second straight year with the same recording, "Off the Wall." Jackson was also named favorite male soul vocalist.

Jackson and the evening's other double-award winner, Diana Ross, were among the few performers who collected their transparent, pyramid-shaped trophies in person. Miss Ross took honors for favorite female soul vocalist and soul single, "Upside Down."

The only other winners at the ceremonies were Barbara Mandrell, who picked up her first American Music Award in the country female category, and John Deacon and Roger Taylor of the rock group Queen, whose "Another One Bites the Dust" was named favorite pop-rock single.

American Music Awards are given for favorite male and female vocalist, group, album and single in each of three major groups — pop-rock, country and soul. The winners are determined by polling some 30,000 persons chosen to reflect the tastes of the record-buying public.

Unlike most entertainment awards, eligibility for the American Music Awards is not determined by a recording's date of release. Nominees are drawn from year-end record charts on the music trade publications Cash Box and Record World. This process is why enduringly popular albums such as "The Gambler" and "Off the Wall" could win in two years.

The only other album to score twice was Stevie Wonder's "Songs in the Key of Life," which was favorite soul album in 1977 and 1978.

Veteran rocker Chuck Berry, who won a special Distinguished Merit Award given each year by the awards committee, injected a note of levity into an otherwise humdrum evening as he swiveled into his famous duckwalk and reminisced about his early days, when he and his band played $50-a-night club dates.

"I pay a lot of taxes now," he said ruefully, drawing a laugh from an audience well aware of the jail term Berry served in 1979 for income tax evasion.

Calls Iranian Captors Spoiled Mideast Babies

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Former hostage William Keough says he used his knowledge of the Iranian psyche in a battle of wits with his Iranian student captors, whom he called the "spoiled babies of the Mideast."

"The sons of Iranian families are revered — the mothers and daughters are at their beck and call," the former superintendent of the Iran American School said Friday.

"It is a very authoritarian society."

At a lengthy news conference at Logan International Airport, the 50-year-old native of Waltham, Mass., said the hostages "kept up the pressure."

"It was a process of capturing the students rather than they capturing us," he said.

Keough said at one point the students granted his demand that he be given a cake for his 50th birthday.

Keough said he was able to win his way with his captors based on a knowledge of Iranian history and the national psyche.

"My approach was, 'Big deal, you've captured a school teacher.' They were embarrassed by that."

Keough said the hostages' request that the captors bring in their sisters to clean up, in addition to demands for special foods, clean sheets and new paint for their cells kept the students off balance.

"We insisted on more bread, for more cheese," he said. "We refused potatoes and rice and vegetables and demanded plate upon plate of meat.

"Their response was 'You are a hostage, you don't deserve this attention.' But I told them we weren't hostages, we were prisoners and that sooner or later they would be held accountable for our treatment."

One of his biggest fears during captivity, Keough said, was that one of his jailers would "make a mistake."

"They were extremely dangerous," he said of his captors. "We had some gun-happy people who were extemely nervous."

New Number

The number for farmers to call to reach the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office is now 752-2934, according to County Extension Chairman Leroy James.

"We've had a lot of folks try to call us on the other number," said James, "but they should call us on the main line at 752-2934."

BOSTON (UPI) — The Opera Company of Boston will give four operas, all directed by company artistic director Sarah Caldwell, in its Feb. 20-May 31 1981 season.

Fund Drive...

In 1969, the center moved to its present site in the Greenville Industrial Park, with Howard G. Dawkins becoming in 1970 its executive director, the position Dawkins still holds. During the same year, 5,000 additional square feet of training area were added through a grant from Vocational Rehabilitation Services and six mobile units of four semi-private rooms with baths were put in place as the first on-campus residential facilities. A seventh unit was purchased to house a lounge and recrational activities program. There were approximately 100 clients being served then.

In 1975, renovation and addition of 12,000 square feet were made to update programs. With a grant from Vocational Rehab and matching community funds, the new addition included a woodworking shop, furniture refinishing area, garage area, framing and caning area, sewing classroom, and two other subcontract rooms. By this time the center employed 34 professional and institutional staff members and was serving approximately 300 clients.

Quality Programs

At the present time, the center provides two basic programs of vocational evaluation and vocational adjustment services. The evaluation department ranks at the top in the Southeastern United States, in terms of professional staff, equipment and services. In the vocational adjustment area, recognized statewide for its professional staff and quality programs, there are training area and additional classes in adult basic education, personal and social adjustment and home nursing. There has been continued expansion of the physical facilities with about 17,000 square feet of warehouse and recycling area. The center now employs 75 staff members.

Dormitory living has come to be an important component of the vocational center experience in independent living for those who have previously lived sheltered lives. Dilapidated mobile units now house 58 men and women. The proposed permanent facilities will accomodate 84.

The kitchen and dining area now in use was designed for between 50 and 60 staff members and clients and is serving more than 300. The proposed food service area will make it possible to efficiently serve three meals a day.

The recreation center is planned to provide fun and also therapy for specific disabilities.

The classrooms will be used for classes in independent living including job readiness skills, communications skills, mathematics, driver education, grooming, money management and the like.

"We have outgrown our shells. We badly need this expansion space," Director Dawkins said. "We know we provide an essential service for the handicapped of this area — indeed, their only hope for productive futures. We're so happy that the people of Pitt and Martin Counties have undertaken this drive to help us finish raising the money we need to complete the expansion task we have begun."

Ground was broken for the new complex in early August of last year. Construction is expected to take 12 to 14 months. The site is adjacent to the present vocational center on Staton Road.

Bitter Memories . . .

bled veterans had visited the Outreach Center where she works to complain that the hostages were toasted while Vietnam veterans "got snubbed.

"They feel like the hostages are being treated like heroes and, when they came home, they got spit on and called baby-killers. They got nothing but turned backs," she said.

At the VA hospital in East Orange, N.J., Dr. Anthony Luppino, assistant chief of psychology, called the hostages' welcome "a hot issue. There is a lot of hostility among the vets.

"They're hurting," Luppino added. "They feel no one has said to them, 'Welcome home,' let alone given them a ticker tape parade."

In St. Louis, Harold J. Bryant, a VA counselor, said "a lot" of Vietnam vets were angered by the hostage's wlecome.

"They're coming in here and yelling at us ... this is another boot in their chests. The hostages had all America behind them, but nobody gave a d-- about the war in Vietnam and didn't want to hear about it when they got back."

A Vietnam Navy veteran who works as a counselor at the Hartford center said such bitterness is exhumed "all the time.

"We try to turn the resentment around and make them see that it's not the hostages that's bothering them, but Vietnam," said the counselor, who declined to give his name.

"In a way," he added, "we're all still hostages in our heads, all 2½ or 3 million of us. The answer? I don't know. My magic wand is at the cleaners."

Trials . . .

mittee in northeast Liaoning Province during the latter part of the Cultural Revolution, currently is believed to be in prison.

Mao's widow was sentenced to death, suspended for two years, at the conclusion of China's trial of the century a week ago. One of her colleagues in the Gang of Four, Zhang Chunqiao, received a similar sentence and the eight other defendants, including military officials received prison terms ranging from 16 years to life.

The next trial began at the same time in the southwest provincial city of Kunming when seven people stood trial for treason.

Kunming Radio reported all seven were convicted of "plotting to overthrow the proletarian regime between 1967 and 1976" and received prison terms ranging from 3 to 15 years.

New Theater Proposed

MANTEO — The Roanoke Island Historical Association (RIHA) proposes to build a new office and 300-seat theater-building, preferably near Waterside Theater.

The proposition for the new office building-theater was presented to America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee meeting in Greenville recently.

Mrs. J. Emmett Winslow, chairman of the Board of RIHA, presented the proposal to the committee.

The Four Hundredth Committee endorsed the planning of the Roanoke Island Historical Assoication to build an office and 300-seat theater-building.

Mrs. Winslow reported to the committee that "at a meeting of the Executive and Finance committees of RIHA held on January 13, the Regional Development Institute of East Carolina University gave a preliminary environmental assessment of the sites proposed for a Roanoke Island Center for the Arts.

"It appears from this report," Mrs. Winslow noted, "that there is a potential adverse impact on the most suitable of the six proposed sites now being studied. The fragile nature of the land might not permit a building of that size, (the Center for the Arts)."

Other factors reported by Mrs. Winslow includes that of a recommendation "by the joint committees that plans for the building be redrawn to meet the needs of the association. This would provide a 300-seat theater and stage to be used by 'The Lost Colony' Professional Theater Workshop, the Children's Theater, rehearsal space for 'The Lost Colony,' and offices for the association. The building would also be available for suitable uses by the community when not in use by the RIHA."

The RIHA will also propose to the National Park Service that two houses — the Prince House and the Beehive, currently being used as Lost Colony housing, be moved to Morrison Grove and continued to be used as housing for Lost Colony players. Both are non-conforming structures according to park service regulations.

Another proposal is that the present Lost Colony activities building be turned over to the National Park Sevice for park management purposes.

The RIHA, in connection with the Institute of Outdoor Drama, is seeking an architect to design plans suitable to the needs of the association.

"I think this proposal clearly defines the intentions of the Roanoke Island Historical Association in regard to a new office-theater building," Mrs. Winslow said.

Funds for the new building will be sought from state, federal and private sources, to be determined when final plans are completed.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By HANSEY JONES

It's always good to meet old friends again — some even say old friends are the best. In any event, young readers are sure to welcome the opportunity to renew old acquaintances with some favorite friends who have recently made a reappearance in the following new junior novels.

In "Your Old Pal Al," a warm and witty sequel to "A Girl Called Al" and "I Know You, Al," Constance Green continues the story of her heroine's bumpy sojourn through adolescence. Friends of Al will remember her as a sassy, loveable, nonconformist who continually tells her friends to "have a wierd day." In this latest episode, Al's best friend invites sophisticated Polly to stay with her while Polly's parents visit Africa. Al's jealousy and her rocky reconciliation will be recognized by anyone who has had a fight with a best friend. Constance Green writes with wit and preception about the ups and downs in the hectic lives of two amusing and sensitive young people trying to grow up. She has the art of treating some heavy subjects with a light touch. Preteens will enjoy and identify with this story.

"Katie John and Heathcliff" is the latest up-date in the eventful life of Katie John, the irrepressible yet down-to-earth heroine created by Mary Alhoun. Now entering junior high Katie John, a founding member of the Boy-Haters Club, discovers that she is noticing boys — and liking it. Since reading "Wuthering Heights," Katie's criteria for judging boys has become the Dark and Brooding Heathcliff, suffering through his love for Catherine Earnshaw. In love with love, Katie searches junior high for her Heathcliff. But in pursuing her dream man, Katie discovers that love in real life is even more unpredictable than romance in novels. Despite her romantic longings, Katie John manages to maintain the basic good sense and fine feeling for family and friends that make her such an appealing character. This book has some good things to say about popularity, real friendship and being yourself — all in the context of a fast moving, enjoyable story.

"The Bagthorpes V. The World" is the fourth part of the Bagthorpe Saga, and what a saga it is — full of unbelievably funny characters and situations. This wonderfully wacky family will keep you laughing until the very last page. In this newest comedy, havoc and hilarity reach new heights. The furor begins with Mr. Bagthorpe's overreaction to a mistake in his recent bank statement (proof that "The World" is out to get him!). Fearing immediate bankruptcy, he devises a grand "Survival" strategy and forcibly enlists the rest of the family in his battle against the world. A frenzied period of Self-Sufficiency follows for the Bagthorpes — marked by the purchase of chickens and a goat and attempts at growing their own food. When an immovable object (visitor Great Aunt Lacy at war with Time) collides with the irresistable force of five-year-old Cousin Daisy, the fun becomes fast and furious. Helen Cresswell, creator of the Bagthorpes, is a noted British author who has written over 50 books for children, many of them receiving prestigious awards. The three previous novels in the Bagthorpe Saga — "Ordinary Jack," "Absolute Zero," and "Bagthorpes Unlimited" were selected as American Library Association Notable Books. This one is winner, too.

A REMINDER: Story hour for three and four year-olds is scheduled on Wednesdays at 10:30 in the Children's Room.

RALEIGH — The William H. Long House in Greenville has been nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places by John Little, Deputy State Historic Preservation Officer.

The William H. Long House, built in 1917-18 by William and Jennie M. Long, is a fine example of Neo-classical Revival style.

Long, a Greenville attorney and politician, built the house in a neighborood near the Pitt Countyi Courthouse and Greenville's central business district.

Purchased from Mr. Long's daughter in 1979, the house has been renovated and is being used as offices by HD&V Associates, a Greenville law firm.

Approval of the nomination by the Department of Interior usually takes about six months and will be announced through the state's congressional delegation

Bear Grass Students Enthusiastic About A New Art Program

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

BEAR GRASS — On a gray January morning this past week, a roomful of seventh, eighth and ninth grade students reacted enthusiastically to a showing and review of student art in a cheerful room in the Bear Grass Cultural Center.

Ms. Pam Davis, instructor in a new art program in Martin County, had the rapt attention of her students as she held up and briefly commented on examples of art by that group and also on work by younger students in the program.

"You can see," she commented after she'd held up to view several dozen works of art, "some of the things you have been interested in depicting in your art."

And indeed the subjects that capture the imagination of young artists are varied. Tobacco barns, friends and family members, rural landscapes, furniture and cars, giants and churches, tanks and television personalities — these are but a few of a long list of people and things that children in two Bear Grass area schools, the Bear Grass High School and Rogers Elementary School, draw on to express themselves.

Several had drawn pictures of the Bear Grass Disco. "No, there is no disco in Bear Grass," Ms. Davis replied when asked if such a place existed in the small town. "But many of the children are highly imaginative, and they create images of things they hear about as well as what they see."

One particularly appealing drawing was one done by a fourth grader, showing a man talking to a woman. The caption given the drawing, was "Yes, honey, move it baby."

The principal of Bear Grass High School, Dennis Mills, Ms. Davis said, was "instrumental in getting the program underway. It's funded by the North Carolina Council of Arts through Grassroots funds with assistance by the N. C. Arts Association and the Local Advisory Group."

As a first year program, it provides class time for art instruction, principally in painting and drawing, to seventh, eighth and ninth grade students at the Bear Grass Cultural Center on the grounds of Bear Grass High School, and to students in grades one through six at Rogers Elementary School.

"At Rogers, I push a cart from class to class, taking supplies and materials to classrooms to teach the classes," Ms. Davis said. "Everybody has been helpful. I feel there's tremendous interest in the program."

Since the beginning of the school year, the students have taken pride in providing art to area art shows.

"Right now we have a show of student art on view at the Arts and Crafts Center in Moratoc Park, in Williamston," Ms. Davis said. "Before Christmas, our students had an exhibit at the Robersonville Day festivities, and our students were well represented at the big Tobacco Farmer's Show in Greenville. They took six prizes there."

In April, the Bear Grass student artists will be taking part in one of the events in art planned for the multi-arts Arts Festival to be held in Greenville. "We're not sure what form our participation will take," Ms. Davis said, "but the students are already excited about having something there."

In a second session that morning, Ms. Davis moved the students to another room for a showing of color slides — ones taken of their own works of art and a group of slides of master art works from the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

Students on several occasions were able to identify work by such masters as Winslow Homer, Monet, and Cezanne. "These slides are marvelous aids to teaching students about the use of color," Ms. Davis remarked. "I wrote the Metropolitan earlier about our program and they graciously sent this fine collection free of charge. The boys and girls I feel really learn a lot from seeing them, in being able to see how these artists used color in different ways." Many of the students also readily identified work by students in Rogers Elementary Schools, as these works in many instances are ones done by younger brothers or sisters at that school.

One factor that has deeply impressed Ms. Gay is the keen observations the students make in art about their surroundings. "They see the beauty of old abandoned homes, of farms and old barns and the people of their neighborhood."

A native of Palo Alto, California, Ms. Davis studied at Stanford University's Overseas Campus in Florence, Italy, received the B.A. degree at Yale University and the master's degree from the Chicago Art Institute. A painter, her own art is oriented to representational art, "somewhat in the manner of Dr. Francis Speight."

Big Easter Seals Shoot-Out

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Like heroes of the old west, youngsters in six Pitt County schools and one Greenville City school — basketballs in place of six-shooters — are battling in the 1980-81 Basketball Shoot-Out for Easter Seals.

"First of all, the Shoot-Out is a fun way to 'do for others,'" said Easter Seals Regional Director Jeff Peyton. "Second, it gets the kids into the community, helps them develop people-to-people skills and gives the student and school recognition for their effort. Finally, the experience gained by the students will be useful to the school in future events."

Initially, students recruit sponsors willing to pledge a certain amount — from a dime to a dollar or more — for each basket the participant makes in a three minute period. After the Shoot-Out, the student returns to his sponsors with a verified form indicating the number of baskets made and collects his money.

"The responsibility for the project rests completely on the kids," explained Peyton. "It gives them experience at approaching people and following through on a committment."

In the county, participating schools were A.G. Cox, Bethel Elementary, D.H. Conley, E.B. Aycock, Farmville Middle, North Pitt, and Wellcome Middle. At Bethel Elementary, this was the second year of participation. Physical Education Instructor Charles Wall is enthusiastic about the 1980-81 Shoot-Out results.

"We had 39 students participating and the pledges totalled around $800," he said. "One girl should collect about $107 and another about $70. These were our two largest pledges."

More important than the money, Wall feels, are the benefits the kids get from participating. "For many of them it is the first time they come to grips with the reality of taking responsibility," he commented. "In addition it represents for many of them the first realization that things like disabilities, accidents, etc. exist. Many of them never thought about it before and this forces them to think about it."

Taking part in the program, says Wall, makes items like wheelchairs relevant to a student's life. "In addition I've seen it build self-confidence," added the instructor. "Going out and convincing the people in the community to sponsor them has also convinced many kids that they can do something worthwhile."

Wall feels the Shoot-Out has opened doors in the Bethel Community. "Many of these students shy away from the public eye and this has given them instruction and experience at knocking on doors," he explained.

Bethel held its Shoot-Out January 27. "It was great," said Wall. "We really feel good about it."

At E.B. Aycock Junior High, students were equally enthusiastic. "The Shoot-Out has gone very well," said Guidance Counselor Raymond Williams. "Quite a few kids did participate but we won't know the final results until the third or fourth of February."

Pitt County is part of the entire Northeast Region of Easter Seals. Other participating counties include Beaufort, Bertie, Carteret, Craven, Washington, Hertford, Lenoir, Martin, Pitt, Tyrell and Wilson counties. According to Peyton, interest and paticipation is very high in each of these areas, particularly in Beaufort County.

"Ninety-five percent of the money the students raise remains in North Carolina," said Peyton, "and 75 percent of all funds raised are spent in direct services to people in need."

Record Set

HIGH POINT — The North Carolina Shakespeare Festival set a new box office record in 1980 with over 30,000 theater-goers attending its performances.

This figure represents the highest attendance the festival has experienced since its inception and is a 30 percent increase in ticket sales over the 1979 season.

A Review

Enthusiasm Sparked Concert

When three poor young girls from Oakland, California began singing in the choir of their father's church, it was only a beginning of what would later become the Pointer Sisters.

The Pointer Sisters — Ruth, Anita, and June, opened at the Attic Nightclub Tuesday night before a limited but receptive crowd of about 650 fans. Those attending the concert had to be admirers, for ticket sales were $8.50 — a price higher than most would pay for an evening's entertainment in this area. But as one fan put it, "I'd pay it again if I had the chance."

And the nice thing about it is that they enjoyed performing as much as the audience enjoyed listening. The Pointer Sisters were exceedingly pleased with their reception at the Attic.

Singing comes so naturally to the Pointers that the energy flowing from them is infectious. They have a talent for using their voices to do virtually anything. Their music is easy and free, and yet it is obvious that they take their jobs seriously.

The Pointer Sisters have thrown away their thrift shop — "Annie Hall" wardrobes along with their musical image emulating the 1930's and 40's. They have chosen more contemporary, "punk" attire to complement their musical transition to a more pop/soul representation.

Through this change, however, they have kept their interest and skills directed toward a wide range of musical styles. This musical range includes straight rhythm and blues, ballads, rock and roll, and country and western.

"Fairy Tales," written five years ago, won the Pointers a Grammy in the Country and Western category and was later recorded by Elvis Presley. And they have not forgotten about their formative years. They incorporate a fine rendition of "Salt Peanuts," one of their all-time favorites, into their current up-tempo act.

Also playing a part in their success story are such contemporary writers as Stephen Stills, Becker & Fagan (Steely Dan), Loggins and Messina, Sly Stone, Bob Welch, Bob Seger, Ian Hunter, Allen Toussaint, Graham Parker, Carol Bayer Sager, Bill Champlin, Burt Bacharach, and Tom Snow-Cynthia Weil.

The Sisters sang some of those hits Tuesday night including "Yes We Can Can," their first hit, "He's So Shy," a catchy song from their "Special Things" album, "Happiness," their famous sing-a-long harmony, and "Fire," a smoking Bruce Springstein tune.

The Attic people have been smart to bring in a group of the caliber of the Pointer Sisters. The breaking away from the typical hard rock and roll acts so characteristic of the Attic to include a greater variety of entertainment adds to the scope of their fare.

Honors Slain

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Thousands of people jammed Revolutionary Plaza here late Friday to honor seven Nicaraguan soldiers slain by anti-government rebels near the northern border with Honduras.

The government has sent a note of protest to Honduras over the clash last Monday. Nicaragua claims the Honduran government is harboring rebels waging a guerrilla campaign to bring down the leftist Nicaraguan government that ousted the late dictator Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Honduras has not replied to the protest note.

Wood's Free Throws Nip State, 57-54

Long Reach
North Carolina's Sam Perkins (41) makes a long reach to take a rebound away for N.C. State's Kenny Matthews (34) and Dereck Whittenburg (25) during their ACC game in Raleigh's Reynolds Coliseum Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's game with 12th-ranked North Carolina Saturday was like reliving a bad dream for Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano.

North Carolina forward Al Wood hit a pair of free throws with five seconds left and the Tar Heels escaped with a 57-54 Atlantic Coast Conference victory. A few games back, North Carolina beat the Wolfpack almost exactly the same way, winning by the same three-point margin.

"Deja vu," Valvano said. "Wood on the line with five seconds this time. Last time he was there with eight seconds."

But it was the Wolfpack's shooting that led to their downfall, as they hit only 36 percent for the game. However, they managed to overcome their poor shooting for the first three-quarters of the game by dominating the offensive boards. But in the end, going more than seven minutes without scoring did them in.

"Mainly, it was our inability to shoot the ball," Valvano said. "No excuses, but we missed Artie Jones (out with an injured knee).

Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith said the victory was anything but easy.

"Well, we've trounced State twice now by three points both times," Smith said facetiously.

Smith said that at the end of the game, Wood was the man they wanted with the ball.

"We set it up to go to Wood at the end, thinking they would foul," Smith said. "We wanted Al with the ball in that situation."

In the final ten seconds of the game, Tar Heel forward James Worthy sprained his ankle but the North Carolina trainer said it appeared to be only a slight sprain.

The Tar Heels had fought back from a five point deficit to grab the lead at 52-51 with 6:52 left to play. North Carolina guard Jimmy Black hit two free throws to give the Tar Heels the lead.

North Carolina had built the lead to three before Scott Parzych pulled the Wolfpack within one with 44 seconds left on a lay-up. Parzych was fouled on the play but missed the opportunity to tie the score from the foul line. The Wolfpack had another opportunity to go ahead when North Carolina turned the ball over with nine seconds left.

But Kenneth Matthews missed a jump shot and North Carolina got the rebound. After Wood made his two foul shots, Parzych missed a jump shot at the buzzer.

N. C. State had a poor shooting night but dominated the offensive boards most of the game. In the first half, the Wolfpack shot only 36 percent, but out-rebounded the Tar Heels 21 to 12 and led at intermission 33-31.

The Wolfpack continued to dominate the offensive boards early in the second half, building a five point lead over North Carolina with 9:51 left to play. But that's when the turn-around came.

For the next seven minutes, North Carolina State went scoreless and North Carolina finally went ahead on Black's free throws.

Pirates Host Samford Monday

East Carolina's men come off a four-day layoff Monday night, as they return home to host Samford University of Birmingham, Ala., in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum.

Yet again, the Pirates will be attempting to pull back to the .500 mark in the game, holding a 9-10 record at this point. They have not been above that mark since mid-December when they fell before Detroit to drop the record at that point to 3-3.

Monday night will be "Pizza Hunt Night" at Minges Coliseum. Free color pictures of the ECU basketball team will be given to each person entering the game, with an accompanying price-reduction coupon for use at one of the restaurant's Greenville locations.

Pictures and coupons will be given out as long as they last.

Samford, prior to a Saturday night game with Houston Baptist, was 7-7 on the year, having won five of its last eight games. However, the Bulldogs had been able to win but one road game, a 67-66 victory over Georgia Southern.

"They are playing their best basketball of the season right now," East Carolina Coach Dave Odom said. "They are a highly disciplined team, reasonably strong on the boards."

Odom considers 6-8 junior center Ronald Radford and 6-7 senior forward Robbin Bumbry both able rebounders. Bumbry is averaging 6.8 a game, and Radford, 4.8. Steve Barker, a 6-4 junior guard, is the leading scorer with a 17.9 average, while Bumbry is hitting 15.9. Radford has an 8.1 average.

The other starters are likely to be 5-11 sophomore guard Martin Newton and 6-6 freshman forward Chuck Frederick.

"Their team speed is average, but that is the kind of team that seems to give us the most trouble," Odom pointed out. "They are very disciplined and don't try to blaze by you. What they do, they do well."

The coach added that the two counting games of this week give the Pirates a chance to climb back above .500. The Pirates play Campbell in the Raleigh Civic Center on Wednesday, then face the Athletes in Action on Saturday in an exhibition game.

"These two games could put us ahead for the first time in a long time," Odom noted.

But it won't be easy, he said. "Bumbry is the outside type man, so that will make it tough on whoever is on him, (David) Underwood or (Tom) Szymanski, since they'll have to go out after him. So what we make up for on offense, we may tend to lose on defense.

"We haven't played well at home and we need to," Odom said. "This is a must game for us."

Campbell, which the Pirates beat earlier in the year, 75-65, in a hard-fought game, carried a 7-9 mark into a Saturday night game with George Mason. They lost to Western Carolina, 100-65, on Thursday. Since playing East Carolina, they have won six of their last ten games.

East Carolina's scoring is led by Charles Watkins with a 13.9 average, while Mark McLaurin is at 10.3. Barry Wright is just outside the double figure range, with a 9.8 mark, while David Underwood is hitting 9.1 per game.

Hot-Shooting Northern Nash Pulls Off 65-60 Upset Of Rose

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The weather outside was frightful and it weren't too delightful inside either. Northern Nash made sure of that.

Sparked by the trio of Derrick Battle, Steve Lynch and Thomas Mabry and some hot shooting, the Knights whipped Greenville Rose, 65-60, Saturday night in a Division I basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Northern Nash rallied to edge a valiant Rose squad, 47-46.

The loss, coupled with Beddingfield's 76-71 three-overtime victory over Rocky Mount last night, left the Rampants tied with the Bruins for first in the conference. Both are 6-2 in the league and 12-4 overall.

Rocky Mount is 5-3 and plays host to Rose Wednesday night, a game which takes on added importance following Rose's loss to Northern Nash, which upped its record to 7-9 overall and 3-5 in the conference.

"This hurts. We didn't expect this, but it's one of those things," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "The week layoff hurt us. There's no doubt about that.

"They played Tuesday and Fike killed them, but at least they got a chance to play," he said. "This is the first time we've been on the court since last Friday night."

The layoff's effect was most obvious in the shooting statistics — both from the floor and from the free throw line. Rose hit 25 of 58 from the floor (42%) while Northern Nash canned 22 of 38 attempts (58%). From the foul line the Rampants were even worse, hitting just 10 of 24 chances (41.7%) compared to the Knight's 21 of 27 (77.8%).

Rose was led in scoring by Donald Johnson's 18 points and William Battle's 13. Battle, who scored 33 points earlier this season against Rose in an 82-74 loss, led the Knights with 17 points and nine rebounds while Mabry and Lynch added 15 points.

Lynch led the Knights to a 27-26 rebound edge, pulling down a game-high 12 rebounds. Rose was led on the boards by Johnson and Battle, both of whom had seven rebounds.

"The kids didn't play that bad," Brewington said. "Northern Nash just outplayed us. Give them credit, they played well. (Knight coach) Bobby Dunn had them ready."

Both teams seemed ready in the opening eight minutes. The Knights, who shot nearly 65% from the floor in the first period, tied the game at 8-8 on a follow shot by Ray Long and then scooted to a 16-10 lead on a Mabry jumper with 2:25 to go.

The Rampants countered by outscoring Northern Nash, 11-2, sparked by a three-point play by Johnson and two buckets by Brewington — his only two of the night — to take a 21-18 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Rose stretched its lead to 25-20 early in the second period but the Knights moved back on top, 31-29, and extended that to 37-33 at half on two buckets and two free throws by Lynch.

The Knights pushed their lead to 50-38 — their biggest of the night — on a power move inside by Battle, who scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half, and led at the end of the third period, 52-44.

The Rampants got no closer than seven again until two free throws by Battle with eight seconds left made it 65-60. Moments later the Rampants had lost a game originally set for Friday night but re-scheduled for Saturday because of the snow.

"There's no doubt that hurt. It always does. The kids were pumped up to play last night," Brewington said. "But we're going to have to regroup now. You're going to lose some like this here and there and you've just got regroup."

In the girls' game, the Rampettes, playing one of their better games this season, lead throughout much of the first half and rallied from as many as eight points down in the second half before losing.

Rose, now 1-12 overall and 1-7 in the league, trailed, 46-40, with three minutes left but rallied to close within one before time expired.

Jamie Teel started the surge by swishing a short jumper. Then, after a free throw by Northern Nash's Paula Evans, Alma Atkinson hit a bucket and Monica Gatlin added two long jumpers, the last coming with just four seconds left.

The Lady Knights, however, managed to run the clock out to preserve their ninth win in 16 outings. Northern Nash is 5-3 in the conference.

"I think the girls played well," Greenville Rose coach Dennis Gibson said. "We led for the better part of the first half and they never quit. They hustled all night."

Coming out in the first quarter, the Rampettes ran to a 10-6 lead on a Francis Barnhill jumper and took a 12-10 lead at the end of the first period. Barnhill scored a game-high 16 points, most on long jumpers, before being tagged with a technical and ejected for throwing an elbow with 7:42 left in the fourth quarter.

With her, however, the Rampettes surged to a six-point lead early in the second period. Barnhill hit three straight jumpers to give Rose an 18-12 lead with six minutes left in the second period.

Northern Nash quickly countered. The Lady Knights, sparked by Paula Evans' five points, cut the deficit to 20-19 two minutes later and left tied at the half, 23-23.

Northern Nash, which never led in the first half, took the lead for good in the early moments of the third period and stretched it to 36-30 at the close of the period on two buckets and a free throw by Marlyn Silvers.

The lead moved to 46-38 before the Rose rallied, only to come up a point short.

"The win last Friday helped us," said Gibson of Rose's Northeastern, 67-48, last week, the Rampettes first victory this season. "Mentally, it helped us. That's why, in part, we looked like a different team tonight.

"We're progressing. We've still got five games to go and we can still make a good showing in the tournament."

Lady Bucs Face Appalachian

East Carolina's women return to action this afternoon at 3 p.m., hosting Appalachian State in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates, after bowing to eighth-ranked Southern California on Friday night, will be attempting to protect their own 19th place ranking against the 4-12 Mountaineers.

While the Mountaineers haven't been that successful, they do bring in a strong center in 6-0 junior Murial Higginbotham, averaging 15.3 points a game, third best in the NCAIAW Division I. She's joined in double figures by one other player, 5-10 junior forward Angelita Horton, hitting 11.9 per game.

ASU comes into the game following a 75-74 win over Western Carolina, in which Higgenbotham scored 20 points and Horton got 18. Both pulled away 12 rebounds.

Lamp, Raker Spark Virginia To 68-47 Win Over Blue Devils

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Seniors Jeff Lamp and Lee Raker led two spurts that gave Virginia's top-ranked Cavaliers a 68-47 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory Saturday over Duke's Blue Devils and Coach Terry Holland said Lamp "had one of the finest all-around games he's ever played."

The 6-foot-6 senior, who became the No. 9 all-time career scorer in ACC history, fired in 18 points and grabbed six rebounds as the Cavaliers ran the nation's longest Division I win streak to 23 and set a school mark with 18 successive triumphs this season.

"I don't know if it will show up in the statistics, but on the boards — defensively as well as offensively — he did a great job," Holland said of Lamp.

Raker, Virginia's hottest shooter of late, led all scorers with 20 points, hitting nine of 10 floor shots, and the Cavaliers — leading the ACC with an 8-0 record — also got 10 points and 13 rebounds from 7-foot-4 sophomore Ralph Sampson and 10 points from freshman guard Othell Wilson, who added seven assists and three steals.

"That's the best game he's played," Holland said of Wilson.

Duke tried a deliberate offense that was spoiled by a 14-3 run over the last 11 minutes of the first half and a 13-point spree after intermission, both of which were keyed by Lamp and Raker.

"We just wanted to take our time and put on good pressure defensively, for the most part," Holland said. "We kept good pressure on without giving up the easy shots. I thought at times we did rush our shots a little because we were trying to get the tempo up, but for the most part we did a good job."

Gene Banks led Duke, 2-5 in the ACC and 11-8 overall, with 18 points and a game-high 14 rebounds but had 10 of the Blue Devils' 23 turnovers. Vince Taylor had 10 points for Duke, which brought a four-game winning streak into the regionally televised game.

"I think Virginia is playing very good basketball right now. I don't know that even if we had played a perfect game we could have beaten them today. They are playing with a lot of confidence," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski.

Raker, who has hit 19 of 23 shots in his last two games, scored the game's first four points, but Duke — playing deliberately on offense — pulled to a 10-8 lead on a 12-footer by Taylor with 11:30 left in the first half.

Then the Cavaliers closed with their 14-3 run, Lamp and Raker scoring four points each and Sampson and Wilson three apiece.

Virginia led 22-13 at intermission, but Duke twice cut the gap to five points in the second half, the last time to 36-31 with 12:55 left on an 18-footer by Kenny Dennard.

Lamp and Raker once again scored four points each, Wilson had a three-point play and Sampson a basket as Virginia ran off 13-straight points over a three-minute span to build the lead to 49-31 and end any suspense about the outcome.

Struggling Terrapins Still Down Ga. Tech

By GORDON BEARD

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — After another lackluster performance by Maryland, Coach Lefty Driesell said he was still looking for answers to the poor play of the 14th-ranked Terps in recent games.

"We're struggling, but luckily we're winning," Driesell said after Maryland defeated Georgia Tech 72-64 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday. Four days earlier, the Terps were carried into overtime before downing underdog Pittsburgh 69-66.

"It's got me buffaloed," Driesell said. "Everybody else beats Georgia Tech by 30 or 40 points, and we struggle to beat them by eight.

"We're not playing with the intensity, poise and confidence we should be," he said. "If we play this way in North Carolina, we'll get blown out."

Maryland plays two ACC games on the road next week at Wake Forest and Duke.

Senior guard Greg Manning led the Terps with 21 points, scoring 11 in the first seven minutes of the second half to help Maryland build a small cushion against the Yellow Jackets.

"It wasn't our prettiest win, but it still counts," Manning said. "Against Wake, we'll have to get our fast break going, rebound and play about 100 percent better than we did today."

The victory gave Maryland a 15-4 record and advanced them into sole possession of third place in the ACC with a 5-2 mark. Georgia Tech is 4-15, including 0-9 in league competition.

Maryland led only 34-28 after a sluggish first half in which Manning scored 10 points and Charles Pittman came off the bench to add another 10 for the Terps.

Manning's outburst gave the Terps a 47-36 lead with 13:04 remaining, and they led by at least seven points the rest of the way. Pittman finished with 17.

Georgia Tech, which has won one ACC game in its first two years of competition, was led by George Thomas with 20 points. Fred Hall had 18 Stu Lyon had 10 for the Yellow Jackets.

Pittman was given his chance in the first half after Albert King went 2-for-7 from the field and Ernie Graham was 1-for-7, and center Buck Williams charged with three personal fouls. He responded with four rebounds in addition to his ten points.

Like heroes of the old west, youngsters in six Pitt County schools and one Greenville City school — basketballs in place of six-shooters — are battling in the 1980-81 Basketball Shoot-Out for Easter Seals.

"First of all, the Shoot-Out is a fun way to 'do for others,'" said Easter Seals Regional Director Jeff Peyton. "Second, it gets the kids into the community, helps them develop people-to-people skills and gives the student and school recognition for their effort. Finally, the experience gained by the students will be useful to the school in future events."

Initially, students recruit sponsors willing to pledge a certain amount — from a dime to a dollar or more — for each basket the participant makes in a three minute period. After the Shoot-Out, the student returns to his sponsors with a verified form indicating the number of baskets made and collects his money.

"The responsibility for the project rests completely on the kids," explained Peyton. "It gives them experience at approaching people and following through on a committment."

In the county, participating schools were A.G. Cox, Bethel Elementary, D.H. Conley, E.B. Aycock, Farmville Middle, North Pitt, and Wellcome Middle. At Bethel Elementary, this was the second year of participation. Physical Education Instructor Charles Wall is enthusiastic about the 1980-81 Shoot-Out results.

"We had 39 students participating and the pledges totalled around $800," he said. "One girl should collect about $107 and another about $70. These were our two largest pledges."

More important than the money, Wall feels, are the benefits the kids get from participating. "For many of them it is the first time they come to grips with the reality of taking responsibility," he commented. "In addition it represents for many of them the first realization that things like disabilities, accidents, etc. exist. Many of them never thought about it before and this forces them to think about it."

Taking part in the program, says Wall, makes items like wheelchairs relevant to a student's life. "In addition I've seen it build self-confidence," added the instructor. "Going out and convincing the people in the community to sponsor them has also convinced many kids that they can do something worthwhile."

Wall feels the Shoot-Out has opened doors in the Bethel Community. "Many of these students shy away from the public eye and this has given them instruction and experience at knocking on doors," he explained.

Bethel held its Shoot-Out January 27. "It was great," said Wall. "We really feel good about it."

At E.B. Aycock Junior High, students were equally enthusiastic. "The Shoot-Out has gone very well," said Guidance Counselor Raymond Williams. "Quite a few kids did participate but we won't know the final results until the third or fourth of February."

Pitt County is part of the entire Northeast Region of Easter Seals. Other participating counties include Beaufort, Bertie, Carteret, Craven, Washington, Hertford, Lenoir, Martin, Pitt, Tyrell and Wilson counties. According to Peyton, interest and paticipation is very high in each of these areas, particularly in Beaufort County.

"Ninety-five percent of the money the students raise remains in North Carolina," said Peyton, "and 75 percent of all funds raised are spent in direct services to people in need."

Enthusiasm Sparked Concert

When three poor young girls from Oakland, California began singing in the choir of their father's church, it was only a beginning of what would later become the Pointer Sisters.

The Pointer Sisters — Ruth, Anita, and June, opened at the Attic Nightclub Tuesday night before a limited but receptive crowd of about 650 fans. Those attending the concert had to be admirers, for ticket sales were $8.50 — a price higher than most would pay for an evening's entertainment in this area. But as one fan put it, "I'd pay it again if I had the chance."

And the nice thing about it is that they enjoyed performing as much as the audience enjoyed listening. The Pointer Sisters were exceedingly pleased with their reception at the Attic.

Singing comes so naturally to the Pointers that the energy flowing from them is infectious. They have a talent for using their voices to do virtually anything. Their music is easy and free, and yet it is obvious that they take their jobs seriously.

The Pointer Sisters have thrown away their thrift shop — "Annie Hall" wardrobes along with their musical image emulating the 1930's and 40's. They have chosen more contemporary, "punk" attire to complement their musical transition to a more pop/soul representation.

Through this change, however, they have kept their interest and skills directed toward a wide range of musical styles. This musical range includes straight rhythm and blues, ballads, rock and roll, and country and western.

"Fairy Tales," written five years ago, won the Pointers a Grammy in the Country and Western category and was later recorded by Elvis Presley. And they have not forgotten about their formative years. They incorporate a fine rendition of "Salt Peanuts," one of their all-time favorites, into their current up-tempo act.

Also playing a part in their success story are such contemporary writers as Stephen Stills, Becker & Fagan (Steely Dan), Loggins and Messina, Sly Stone, Bob Welch, Bob Seger, Ian Hunter, Allen Toussaint, Graham Parker, Carol Bayer Sager, Bill Champlin, Burt Bacharach, and Tom Snow-Cynthia Weil.

The Sisters sang some of those hits Tuesday night including "Yes We Can Can," their first hit, "He's So Shy," a catchy song from their "Special Things" album, "Happiness," their famous sing-a-long harmony, and "Fire," a smoking Bruce Springstein tune.

The Attic people have been smart to bring in a group of the caliber of the Pointer Sisters. The breaking away from the typical hard rock and roll acts so characteristic of the Attic to include a greater variety of entertainment adds to the scope of their fare.

Honors Slain

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Thousands of people jammed Revolutionary Plaza here late Friday to honor seven Nicaraguan soldiers slain by anti-government rebels near the northern border with Honduras.

The government has sent a note of protest to Honduras over the clash last Monday. Nicaragua claims the Honduran government is harboring rebels waging a guerrilla campaign to bring down the leftist Nicaraguan government that ousted the late dictator Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Honduras has not replied to the protest note.

Wood's Free Throws Nip State, 57-54

Long Reach

North Carolina forward Al Wood hit a pair of free throws with five seconds left and the Tar Heels escaped with a 57-54 Atlantic Coast Conference victory. A few games back, North Carolina beat the Wolfpack almost exactly the same way, winning by the same three-point margin.

"Deja vu," Valvano said. "Wood on the line with five seconds this time. Last time he was there with eight seconds."

But it was the Wolfpack's shooting that led to their downfall, as they hit only 36 percent for the game. However, they managed to overcome their poor shooting for the first three-quarters of the game by dominating the offensive boards. But in the end, going more than seven minutes without scoring did them in.

"Mainly, it was our inability to shoot the ball," Valvano said. "No excuses, but we missed Artie Jones (out with an injured knee).

Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith said the victory was anything but easy.

"Well, we've trounced State twice now by three points both times," Smith said facetiously.

Smith said that at the end of the game, Wood was the man they wanted with the ball.

"We set it up to go to Wood at the end, thinking they would foul," Smith said. "We wanted Al with the ball in that situation."

In the final ten seconds of the game, Tar Heel forward James Worthy sprained his ankle but the North Carolina trainer said it appeared to be only a slight sprain.

The Tar Heels had fought back from a five point deficit to grab the lead at 52-51 with 6:52 left to play. North Carolina guard Jimmy Black hit two free throws to give the Tar Heels the lead.

North Carolina had built the lead to three before Scott Parzych pulled the Wolfpack within one with 44 seconds left on a lay-up. Parzych was fouled on the play but missed the opportunity to tie the score from the foul line. The Wolfpack had another opportunity to go ahead when North Carolina turned the ball over with nine seconds left.

But Kenneth Matthews missed a jump shot and North Carolina got the rebound. After Wood made his two foul shots, Parzych missed a jump shot at the buzzer.

N. C. State had a poor shooting night but dominated the offensive boards most of the game. In the first half, the Wolfpack shot only 36 percent, but out-rebounded the Tar Heels 21 to 12 and led at intermission 33-31.

The Wolfpack continued to dominate the offensive boards early in the second half, building a five point lead over North Carolina with 9:51 left to play. But that's when the turn-around came.

For the next seven minutes, North Carolina State went scoreless and North Carolina finally went ahead on Black's free throws.

Pirates Host Samford Monday

East Carolina's men come off a four-day layoff Monday night, as they return home to host Samford University of Birmingham, Ala., in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum.

Yet again, the Pirates will be attempting to pull back to the .500 mark in the game, holding a 9-10 record at this point. They have not been above that mark since mid-December when they fell before Detroit to drop the record at that point to 3-3.

Monday night will be "Pizza Hunt Night" at Minges Coliseum. Free color pictures of the ECU basketball team will be given to each person entering the game, with an accompanying price-reduction coupon for use at one of the restaurant's Greenville locations.

Pictures and coupons will be given out as long as they last.

Samford, prior to a Saturday night game with Houston Baptist, was 7-7 on the year, having won five of its last eight games. However, the Bulldogs had been able to win but one road game, a 67-66 victory over Georgia Southern.

"They are playing their best basketball of the season right now," East Carolina Coach Dave Odom said. "They are a highly disciplined team, reasonably strong on the boards."

Odom considers 6-8 junior center Ronald Radford and 6-7 senior forward Robbin Bumbry both able rebounders. Bumbry is averaging 6.8 a game, and Radford, 4.8. Steve Barker, a 6-4 junior guard, is the leading scorer with a 17.9 average, while Bumbry is hitting 15.9. Radford has an 8.1 average.

The other starters are likely to be 5-11 sophomore guard Martin Newton and 6-6 freshman forward Chuck Frederick.

"Their team speed is average, but that is the kind of team that seems to give us the most trouble," Odom pointed out. "They are very disciplined and don't try to blaze by you. What they do, they do well."

The coach added that the two counting games of this week give the Pirates a chance to climb back above .500. The Pirates play Campbell in the Raleigh Civic Center on Wednesday, then face the Athletes in Action on Saturday in an exhibition game.

"These two games could put us ahead for the first time in a long time," Odom noted.

But it won't be easy, he said. "Bumbry is the outside type man, so that will make it tough on whoever is on him, (David) Underwood or (Tom) Szymanski, since they'll have to go out after him. So what we make up for on offense, we may tend to lose on defense.

"We haven't played well at home and we need to," Odom said. "This is a must game for us."

Campbell, which the Pirates beat earlier in the year, 75-65, in a hard-fought game, carried a 7-9 mark into a Saturday night game with George Mason. They lost to Western Carolina, 100-65, on Thursday. Since playing East Carolina, they have won six of their last ten games.

East Carolina's scoring is led by Charles Watkins with a 13.9 average, while Mark McLaurin is at 10.3. Barry Wright is just outside the double figure range, with a 9.8 mark, while David Underwood is hitting 9.1 per game.

Lady Bucs Face Appalachian

East Carolina's women return to action this afternoon at 3 p.m., hosting Appalachian State in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates, after bowing to eighth-ranked Southern California on Friday night, will be attempting to protect their own 19th place ranking against the 4-12 Mountaineers.

While the Mountaineers haven't been that successful, they do bring in a strong center in 6-0 junior Murial Higginbotham, averaging 15.3 points a game, third best in the NCAIAW Division I. She's joined in double figures by one other player, 5-10 junior forward Angelita Horton, hitting 11.9 per game.

ASU comes into the game following a 75-74 win over Western Carolina, in which Higgenbotham scored 20 points and Horton got 18. Both pulled away 12 rebounds.

Hot-Shooting Northern Nash Pulls Off 65-60 Upset Of Rose

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The weather outside was frightful and it weren't too delightful inside either. Northern Nash made sure of that.

Sparked by the trio of Derrick Battle, Steve Lynch and Thomas Mabry and some hot shooting, the Knights whipped Greenville Rose, 65-60, Saturday night in a Division I basketball game.

The loss, coupled with Beddingfield's 76-71 three-overtime victory over Rocky Mount last night, left the Rampants tied with the Bruins for first in the conference. Both are 6-2 in the league and 12-4 overall.

Rocky Mount is 5-3 and plays host to Rose Wednesday night, a game which takes on added importance following Rose's loss to Northern Nash, which upped its record to 7-9 overall and 3-5 in the conference.

"This hurts. We didn't expect this, but it's one of those things," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "The week layoff hurt us. There's no doubt about that.

"They played Tuesday and Fike killed them, but at least they got a chance to play," he said. "This is the first time we've been on the court since last Friday night."

The layoff's effect was most obvious in the shooting statistics — both from the floor and from the free throw line. Rose hit 25 of 58 from the floor (42%) while Northern Nash canned 22 of 38 attempts (58%). From the foul line the Rampants were even worse, hitting just 10 of 24 chances (41.7%) compared to the Knight's 21 of 27 (77.8%).

Rose was led in scoring by Donald Johnson's 18 points and William Battle's 13. Battle, who scored 33 points earlier this season against Rose in an 82-74 loss, led the Knights with 17 points and nine rebounds while Mabry and Lynch added 15 points.

Lynch led the Knights to a 27-26 rebound edge, pulling down a game-high 12 rebounds. Rose was led on the boards by Johnson and Battle, both of whom had seven rebounds.

"The kids didn't play that bad," Brewington said. "Northern Nash just outplayed us. Give them credit, they played well. (Knight coach) Bobby Dunn had them ready."

Both teams seemed ready in the opening eight minutes. The Knights, who shot nearly 65% from the floor in the first period, tied the game at 8-8 on a follow shot by Ray Long and then scooted to a 16-10 lead on a Mabry jumper with 2:25 to go.

The Rampants countered by outscoring Northern Nash, 11-2, sparked by a three-point play by Johnson and two buckets by Brewington — his only two of the night — to take a 21-18 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Rose stretched its lead to 25-20 early in the second period but the Knights moved back on top, 31-29, and extended that to 37-33 at half on two buckets and two free throws by Lynch.

The Knights pushed their lead to 50-38 — their biggest of the night — on a power move inside by Battle, who scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half, and led at the end of the third period, 52-44.

The Rampants got no closer than seven again until two free throws by Battle with eight seconds left made it 65-60. Moments later the Rampants had lost a game originally set for Friday night but re-scheduled for Saturday because of the snow.

"There's no doubt that hurt. It always does. The kids were pumped up to play last night," Brewington said. "But we're going to have to regroup now. You're going to lose some like this here and there and you've just got regroup."

In the girls' game, the Rampettes, playing one of their better games this season, lead throughout much of the first half and rallied from as many as eight points down in the second half before losing.

Rose, now 1-12 overall and 1-7 in the league, trailed, 46-40, with three minutes left but rallied to close within one before time expired.

Jamie Teel started the surge by swishing a short jumper. Then, after a free throw by Northern Nash's Paula Evans, Alma Atkinson hit a bucket and Monica Gatlin added two long jumpers, the last coming with just four seconds left.

The Lady Knights, however, managed to run the clock out to preserve their ninth win in 16 outings. Northern Nash is 5-3 in the conference.

"I think the girls played well," Greenville Rose coach Dennis Gibson said. "We led for the better part of the first half and they never quit. They hustled all night."

Coming out in the first quarter, the Rampettes ran to a 10-6 lead on a Francis Barnhill jumper and took a 12-10 lead at the end of the first period. Barnhill scored a game-high 16 points, most on long jumpers, before being tagged with a technical and ejected for throwing an elbow with 7:42 left in the fourth quarter.

With her, however, the Rampettes surged to a six-point lead early in the second period. Barnhill hit three straight jumpers to give Rose an 18-12 lead with six minutes left in the second period.

Northern Nash quickly countered. The Lady Knights, sparked by Paula Evans' five points, cut the deficit to 20-19 two minutes later and left tied at the half, 23-23.

Northern Nash, which never led in the first half, took the lead for good in the early moments of the third period and stretched it to 36-30 at the close of the period on two buckets and a free throw by Marlyn Silvers.

The lead moved to 46-38 before the Rose rallied, only to come up a point short.

"The win last Friday helped us," said Gibson of Rose's Northeastern, 67-48, last week, the Rampettes first victory this season. "Mentally, it helped us. That's why, in part, we looked like a different team tonight.

"We're progressing. We've still got five games to go and we can still make a good showing in the tournament."

Lamp, Raker Spark Virginia To 68-47 Win Over Blue Devils

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Seniors Jeff Lamp and Lee Raker led two spurts that gave Virginia's top-ranked Cavaliers a 68-47 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory Saturday over Duke's Blue Devils and Coach Terry Holland said Lamp "had one of the finest all-around games he's ever played."

The 6-foot-6 senior, who became the No. 9 all-time career scorer in ACC history, fired in 18 points and grabbed six rebounds as the Cavaliers ran the nation's longest Division I win streak to 23 and set a school mark with 18 successive triumphs this season.

"I don't know if it will show up in the statistics, but on the boards — defensively as well as offensively — he did a great job," Holland said of Lamp.

Raker, Virginia's hottest shooter of late, led all scorers with 20 points, hitting nine of 10 floor shots, and the Cavaliers — leading the ACC with an 8-0 record — also got 10 points and 13 rebounds from 7-foot-4 sophomore Ralph Sampson and 10 points from freshman guard Othell Wilson, who added seven assists and three steals.

"That's the best game he's played," Holland said of Wilson.

Duke tried a deliberate offense that was spoiled by a 14-3 run over the last 11 minutes of the first half and a 13-point spree after intermission, both of which were keyed by Lamp and Raker.

"We just wanted to take our time and put on good pressure defensively, for the most part," Holland said. "We kept good pressure on without giving up the easy shots. I thought at times we did rush our shots a little because we were trying to get the tempo up, but for the most part we did a good job."

Gene Banks led Duke, 2-5 in the ACC and 11-8 overall, with 18 points and a game-high 14 rebounds but had 10 of the Blue Devils' 23 turnovers. Vince Taylor had 10 points for Duke, which brought a four-game winning streak into the regionally televised game.

"I think Virginia is playing very good basketball right now. I don't know that even if we had played a perfect game we could have beaten them today. They are playing with a lot of confidence," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski.

Raker, who has hit 19 of 23 shots in his last two games, scored the game's first four points, but Duke — playing deliberately on offense — pulled to a 10-8 lead on a 12-footer by Taylor with 11:30 left in the first half.

Then the Cavaliers closed with their 14-3 run, Lamp and Raker scoring four points each and Sampson and Wilson three apiece.

Virginia led 22-13 at intermission, but Duke twice cut the gap to five points in the second half, the last time to 36-31 with 12:55 left on an 18-footer by Kenny Dennard.

Lamp and Raker once again scored four points each. Wilson had a three-point play and Sampson a basket as Virginia ran off 13-straight points over a three-minute span to build the lead to 49-31 and end any suspense about the outcome.

Struggling Terrapins Still Down Ga. Tech

By GORDON BEARD

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — After another lackluster performance by Maryland, Coach Lefty Driesell said he was still looking for answers to the poor play of the 14th-ranked Terps in recent games.

"We're struggling, but luckily we're winning," Driesell said after Maryland defeated Georgia Tech 72-64 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday. Four days earlier, the Terps were carried into overtime before downing underdog Pittsburgh 69-66.

"It's got me buffaloed," Driesell said. "Everybody else beats Georgia Tech by 30 or 40 points, and we struggle to beat them by eight.

"We're not playing with the intensity, poise and confidence we should be," he said. "If we play this way in North Carolina, we'll get blown out."

Maryland plays two ACC games on the road next week at Wake Forest and Duke.

"It wasn't our prettiest win, but it still counts," Manning said. "Against Wake, we'll have to get our fast break going, rebound and play about 100 percent better than we did today."

The victory gave Maryland a 15-4 record and advanced them into sole possession of third place in the ACC with a 5-2 mark. Georgia Tech is 4-15, including 0-9 in league competition.

Maryland led only 34-28 after a sluggish first half in which Manning scored 10 points and Charles Pittman came off the bench to add another 10 for the Terps.

Manning's outburst gave the Terps a 47-36 lead with 13:04 remaining, and they led by at least seven points the rest of the way. Pittman finished with 17.

Georgia Tech, which has won one ACC game in its first two years of competition, was led by George Thomas with 20 points. Fred Hall had 18 Stu Lyon had 10 for the Yellow Jackets.

Pittman was given his chance in the first half after Albert King went 2-for-7 from the field and Ernie Graham was 1-for-7, and center Buck Williams charged with three personal fouls. He responded with four rebounds in addition to his ten points.

ECU Rally Falls Short Of Southern Cal

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The University of Southern California, ranked eighth in the latest Women's Poll, had to fight for its life to escape from Minges Coliseum Friday night with its once-beaten record intact.

Only Southern Cal's tall middle enabled it to get past the smaller Lady Pirates, 77-73, in a hard-fought game that left 4,500 screaming fans gasping for breath when it was over.

Down by as much as 11 points in the second half, the 19th ranked Lady Pirates fought back and pulled to within one. Twice they had the opportunity to take the lead, but had one shot blocked and suffered a turnover on the two chances. After that, Southern Cal eased back ahead by as much as five, but held only a two-point lead with just seconds to go, scoring their final basket off a rebounded free throw with just one second left to play.

"I'm very happy with the way we came back," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said of the rally that nearly pulled off the third-straight major upset by the Pirates. A win over Southern Cal would have been the third over a ranked team in a week's time. ECU topped 15th ranked Virginia on Sunday and 13th ranked N.C. State on Wednesday.

"I saw a lot of bright spots out there," Andruzzi continued. "It was the first time we ran out full-court man-to-man (defense) and we did a super job with it."

East Carolina went with that defense after falling behind in the second half, and it was a major factor in the comeback.

If there was a disappointing aspect, it had to be the offense. "Our man-to-man offense hasn't worked well in the last three games," the coach said. "It was the defense that kept us in the game."

The offense was the problem. East Carolina suffered another poor night from the floor, hitting 41.7 per cent of its shots, as compared to 49.2 for the Trojans. Mary Denkler, who continues to come on for the Lady Bucs, hit 12 of 19 shots, and aside from Marcia Girven, who was four of eight, was the only Pirate hitting 50 per cent or better. East Carolina's perimeter shooters canned only eight of 31 shots, and that was a telling factor.

And when the Pirates missed, there were two big reasons why they got few second shots: the McGee twins. The 6-3 freshmen ruled the boards, grabbing off 27 of the 42 rebounds collected by Southern Cal. Paula McGee picked off 15 and scored a game-high 27 points, while sister Pam had 12 rebounds and 20 points.

Surprisingly, however, Southern Cal only held a 42-39 rebounding edge. Girven pulled away 10 rebounds to lead East Carolina, while Lydia Rountree had eight and Denkler had seven.

Andruzzi felt the Pirates did a good job in stopping Southern Cal's fast break. "They only got a couple on us."

She also cited the McGee girls as the prime factors in the game. "If we played behind them, they shot the jumper. If we played in front, they lobbed the ball over our defender. They're awfully tough to stop."

Southern Cal coach Linda Sharp agreed that the McGees were the difference in the game. "The McGee girls are a dominate force for us. They were the big difference in this game. Paula is very poised for a freshman, and Pam did a good job in the second half.

"This was our toughest game on the road this year," she said. "It was exactly what I expected. East Carolina played extremely well. They rebounded and shot well and took the ball inside on us. Thirty-five (Denkler) played extremely well and (Kathy) Riley played well despite getting in foul trouble. I was impressed."

Shape added that she knew the Pirates came into the game on a high after beating N.C. State, but that she noted some fatigue by the team early in the second half. That, she said, was when the Lady Trojans pulled away. "But they got their second wind after that and came back at us. They are definitely a Top Twenty team.

Both coaches said that the crowd played a big role in the game. "It was a big factor," Sharp said. "They made every effort to make us lose our composure, but I thought our team handled it well. It was a good game to watch, and I would have been proud of our girls even if they had lost this one."

Sharp added that this was the largest crowd the Trojans had played before as a women's game only. Most of their games are played as doubleheaders with the men's teams.

"The crowd was tremendous tonight," Andruzzi said. "And I think everyone left with a good feeling. Southern Cal could have wiped us out, but the crowd inspired us, I'm sure. Coming out on a night like this too, is something."

And those who braved the icy streets could look back on one heck of a game.

Southern Cal led nearly all night, however. East Carolina, after seeing the Trojans score the opening basket, came back on shots by Denkler and Rountree to take a 4-2 lead. It was the only time the Lady Pirates led.

Southern Cal got baskets from Kathy Haynes and Paula McGee to take the lead, 6-4, and they were never behind again. East Carolina tied it once more, 6-6, but another McGee basket put the Trjoans up for good.

But they never got very far ahead. After zooming out to as much as a nine-point lead, 19-10, the Trojans saw the Pirates come back to close the gap to three late in the half, 31-28, as Sam Jones hit with 5:01 left. It stayed at that level for the next few minutes before Southern Cal inched away to a seven point lead once more, and settled for a 41-36 halftime advatage.

East Carolina scored the first basket of the second half, trimming it back to three, but Southern Cal then ran off three straight baskets, including two by McGee, to up the lead to nine again, 47-38. Minutes later, Kathy Hammond drilled a jumper to up the lead to 11, 51-40.

Trailing 55-44 with 14:44 left, East Carolina began to mold a comeback. Led by Riley and Denkler, the Pirates slowly eased back into the game, trimming off two points here, and another two there.

Denkler finally cut it to three, 63-60, with two free throws at the 7:52 mark. Southern Cal held off any further loss of its lead until Rountree hit a jumper from the free throw line with 5:52 left, triming it to 67-66.

After that, the Pirates had two chances to take the lead. But a blocked shot cost them one chance, and they turned the ball over on the next trip down the court.

Southern Cal refused to give the Bucs another chance, and Pam McGee hit a follow-up to her initial miss to make it 69-66, and then hit a turnaround jumper the next time down the floor for a 71-66 lead. Southern Cal eased back out by as much as eight before the Pirates, with one last effort, cut it back to two, 75-73, on a Riley drive with 15 seconds left.

East Carolina tried to foul, and sent Terri Huff to the line, where she missed, but Paula McGee was there to take the rebound and put it back for the final four-point edge.

Southern Cal, in addition to the McGees, had one other player in double figures, as Hammond hit 14.

East Carolina, in addition to Denkler, placed three others in double figures. Riley had 17, Jones, 12, and Girven, 10.

The win pushed the Southern Cal record to 14-1. Its only loss came earlier in the year to second-ranked Old Dominion, a team they were to play again on Saturday night. Prior to last night, the closest any losing opponent had come to the Lady Trojans was sixth-ranked Long Beach State, which lost 79-70 at Southern Cal.

East Carolina is now 16-4.

Mitchell's Selection Is Surprise To Cavalier

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Mike Mitchell's name is familiar to those who must guard him in the National Basketball Association, but word of his talents has not spread far beyond that elite group.

So his selection to the East squad for the 31st annnual NBA All-Star Game Sunday is all the more rewarding for the star of the unheralded Cleveland Cavaliers.

"I had kind of put it out of my head and was looking forward to watching the game from the stands," said Mitchell, the league's 10th-leading scorer at 23.7 points per game.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien on Thursday informed Mitchell by phone that he would replace Atlanta's Dan Roundfield on the East roster. Roundfield, voted to the starting unit in fan balloting, is suffering from calcium deposits in his right leg and cannot play.

"I was wondering if they were joking with me and I didn't want to get carried away about it," Mitchell said of the phone call. "Then I found out it was for real. I think I'm ready."

Mitchell, a third-year pro from Auburn, was Cleveland's No.1 pick in the 1978 draft. The 6-foot-7 forward averaged 22.2 points a game last season, also good for 10th in the league.

Many Cleveland fans felt he belonged on the All-Star team all along, and indeed his poor showing in the original fan balloting was one of several indiscretions that have led some players and coaches to question letting fans pick the starting teams.

The problem is most evident on the East unit, where apparent ballot stuffing in Atlanta and Chicago gave the Hawks and Bulls two players each among the starting five — although neither team is playing over .500 ball.

"I think if the fans thought about what this means to the players before they stuffed the ballot box, they might vote not because of loyalty but because of who deserves it," said Philadelphia's Billy Cunningham, coach of the East team for the third time in four years.

In addition to Roundfield, Atlanta is represented by guard Eddie Johnson. From the Bulls, center Artis Gilmore and guard Reggie Theus will be starting.

Philadelphia's Julius Erving, the top vote-getter among fans, rounds out the East starting team and will be appearing in his fifth straight NBA classic.

It was not known if Mitchell would replace Roundfield as a starter, although a more likely choice would be Boston's Larry Bird, one of six reserves chosen for the team in a vote by the coaches.

"He's too good a player not to be in the top five," said Milwaukee Buck Marques Johnson, another of the East's subs. "I really feel he was robbed."

Boston is the most heavily represented team in the East, with center Robert Parish and guard Nate Archibald joining Bird.

George Gervin of San Antonio, who scored 34 points to lead the East to victory in last year's game, will this season share backcourt duties for the West with Paul Westphal of Seattle.

Blanda Leads NFL Honorees

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — George Blanda, who played professional football an unprecedented 26 seasons, has been elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

Joining Blanda in the 1981 class are Morris "Red" Badgro and two members of the Green Bay Packers' dynasty of the 1960s, center Jim Ringo and defensive end Willie Davis.

Blanda is the only 1981 enshrinee who was elected immediately after the mandatory five-year waiting period following his retirement. The quarterback-placekicker's career spanned 1949-1975 with the Chicago Bears, Houston Oilers and Oakland Raiders.

Formal enshrinement ceremonies will be Saturday, Aug. 1, on the steps of the sport's shrine in Canton, Ohio, prior to the 1981 season's first exhibition between the Cleveland Browns and the Atlanta Falcons.

The four were chosen by the hall's 29-member board of selectors, made up of media representatives in each National Football League city.

Their election brings the total to 110 members in the Hall of Fame.

Blanda's career was the longest of any pro football player ever. During that time he became the NFL's all-time scoring champion. His 2,002 points, built on nine touchdowns, 943 conversions and 335 field goals, is almost 400 points more than his nearest rival.

The 12th round draft choice from the University of Kentucky was nearly 49 when he retired from the Raiders just before the 1976 season, much older than any other player in the history of the game.

As a quarterback, the 6-foot-2, 215-pound native of Youngwood, Pa., threw more than 4,000 passes. He completed 1,911 for 26,920 yards and 236 touchdowns.

With the enshrinement of Ringo and Davis, the Packers 1960 teams have seven members in the Hall of Fame. Vince Lombardi, Green Bay's late coach, also is a member.

Ringo, a seventh round draft pick out of Syracuse, developed into a six-time All-NFL selection and performed in 10 Pro Bowls. The 6-2, 230-pound native of Orange, N.J., built a reputation as one of the game's finest downfield blockers and pass protectors.

However, a salary dispute with Lombardi led to Ringo's quick trade to the Philadelphia Eagles in the 1964 off-season. He performed on only the first two of Green Bay's five title teams in the 1960s. He spent his last four seasons with the Eagles.

Ringo was one of the sport's ironmen. When he retired after the 1967 season, he had played in a then-record 183 consecutive games. He missed only the final seven games of his rookie season in his 15 pro years.

The 6-3, 245-pound Davis, a 17th round draft choice of the Cleveland Browns from Grambling in 1956, was traded to Green Bay in 1960. He became a defensive pillar with the Packers, winning all-league honors five times and playing in six NFL championship games.

Davis, from Lisbon, La., had recovered 21 opponents' fumbles, just one behind the all-time record in 1969, when he retired after a decade as the Packers' regular defensive left end.

At 78, Badgro will become the oldest person ever inducted into the football shrine. The 45-year span from his final NFL game in 1936 to his 1981 election is the longest waiting period for any enshrinee.

Badgro, a University of Southern California product from Orillia, Wash., scored the first touchdown in the NFL championship series 48 years ago. He caught a 40-yard scoring pass in the New York Giants' 1933 championship loss to the Chicago Bears.

A year later, Badgro tied for the NFL pass receiving title with 16 receptions, a significant total in that defense-dominated era. He played both offense and defense with the New York Yankees in 1927, the Giants from 1930 through 1935 and the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1936.

Badgro was a standout in three sports. He attended USC on a basketball scholarship and played baseball with the St. Louis Browns for two years after the football Yankees folded following the 1927 season. He returned to the NFL in time for the 1930 season with the Giants.

Chandler Retains Share Of Title, Seeks The Rest

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jeff Chandler, a carpenter's helper who says he is better at fighting than at construction work, kept his fists in Jorge Lujan's face for 15 rounds Saturday and then turned his thoughts to Lupe Pintor.

"Pintor, Pintor — to be a world champion," said the 24-year-old Chandler after retaining his World Boxing Association bantamweight title. Pintor is recognized as 118-pound champion by the World Boxing Council.

It was Chandler's first appearance before his hometown fans — about 2,000 of them showed up at the Franklin Plaza Hotel ballroom to see the first bantamweight title fight here in nearly 40 years — and he completely dominated the action, using his hand and foot speed to frustrate the counter-punching former champion from Panama.

The one-time streetfighter from South Philadelphia who didn't take up boxing until he was 19, was satisfied with his performance in front of family and friends but said he is prepared to defend the title anywhere.

"I don't want to be a hometown champion. I want to be an active champion. I's like ti fight again three months," he said.

Judge Samuel Conde scored it 148-143, judge Luis Guzman 146-143 and referee Roberto Ramirez 146-142, all for Chandler, who did most of his fighting on the streets of South Philadelphia before taking up boxing five years ago at the age of 19.

Most ringsiders thought the fight was not as close as it was scored by the three officials from Puerto Rico. The Associated Press favored Chandler 149-137.

After the fight, Chandler, who packed only 113½ pounds on his 5-foot-7 frame, said he thought he weighed more and believed that the scales may have been tampered with to allow Lujan to make the weight.

"They were moved to help him make the weight," said Chandler.

Lujan came in at the class limit of 118.

Chandler almost didn't get a chance to exhibit his skills before a national television audience.

Mort Sharnik, boxing consultant for CBS, said the fight almost fell through because one of the co-promoters was Muhammad Ali Professional Sports, which has been linked through published reports with a possible bank embezzlement. Sharnik said the network was concerned about the fighters' purses but that concern was erased when MAPS signed the entire promotion over to J. Russell Peltz, a Philadelphia promoter.

Chandler, winning for the 25th straight time against a draw in his pro debut in 1976, set the tone of the fight from the outset, darting in to score with jabs, hooks and right hands and then darting out before Lujan could counter-punch him. As the fight wore on, Lujan had to give up attempting to counter-punch and start being aggressive.

Girven Aims At Double 1,000

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For the past three years, East Carolina center Marcia Girven has lived somewhat in the shadow of two other Lady Pirate stars. First there was Debbie Freeman, and then Rosie Thompson.

Now, in her final year wearing the Purple and Gold, Girven has come into her own and is rapidly assending toward star status of her own.

Almost unseen by most, Girven is moving toward a mark achieved by only Thompson, that of having scored 1,000 points and grabbed off 1,000 rebounds.

Going into today's game with Appalachian State, Girven is sixth among career scorers for the Lady Pirates, with 954 points, leaving her just 46 shy of the 1,000 mark. She will be the sixth to pass that goal, with teammate Kathy Riley also expected to make it, too.

In rebounding, Girven's ten against Southern California, moved her to 916 in her career, third best among Pirates. She is moving up on number two, Freeman, who had 955. With a minimum of eight games left to play, Marcia will have to average around ten a game the rest of the way, less if the Bucs continue past the first round of the state playoffs — as they should.

And scoring and rebounding is not all this versital 6-0 Woodbridge, Va., senior does.

Her other stats are impressive too. For instance, with 68 career assists, she stands tenth on the all-time list here. Her 88 steals is seventh, and in three more games, she will set a new all-time high of 114 played by a Lady Pirate.

But perhaps the most amazing record she holds is that of blocked shots.

In her four years on the Pirate squad, she has blocked an amazing 203 shots, nearly 150 ahead of her closest predecessor. Her 12 against Campbell in her freshman season is a school record, as is her 95 for that season.

Only as a sophomore, when Thompson missed a year with an injury, did Girven average in double figures prior to this year, hitting 11.6 that season.

But now it's a different story. As a senior, she's popping in double figures scores again...not to mention her rebounding, at 9.1 one of the best in the state.

She does it despite not having the height others have. "Experience has helped me a lot," she said. "In high school, I was the tallest girl, so I didn't have much of a problem. When I got here, I had to go up against taller girls. But I've gotten to know how to play against them, and I have more confidence."

For instance, against Old Dominion, which features 6-8 Anne Donovan, and against Southern Cal, which features the 6-3 McGee twins, Paula and Pam, Marcia managed ten rebounds in each game, high for the Pirates.

Playing under the shadow of Thompson and Freeman hasn't bothered her. "We all have different roles to play and we've just tried to play together and win."

Mary Denkler has come on of late, and that tends to help Girven, too. "They can't just key on me or Kathy (Riley), but they have to go after Mary, too. That way, we both try to get to the boards for follow-up shots."

As to her quest for the double 1,000, Girven said she really didn't know about it. "I had no idea that it was that way," she said when informed that only one other player had done it before. "I haven't thought about it, but it does make me feel good. All that hard work is paying off."

But the hard work is just beginning, it seems. The national ranking of the Lady Pirates was exciting for Marcia and her teammates, but "it just means that we're going to have to work harder, since teams are going to want to knock us off even more now."

Girven is making no predictions about the rest of the season, however. "We're just going to keep on working hard and taking it one game at a time. Then, whatever comes, we'll accept and go from there."

One thing that is coming is the end of basketball for Girven. "When this year is over, I think I'll have played my last game. I'll probably go back to Virginia and go into the business admistration field."

For now, however, there are at least eight more games to go, and hopefully a good deal more after that in post-season play.

And Marcia Girven, now getting the attention she deserves, is moving on, aiming for that double 1,000.

Simon Elected Prexy Of U.S. Olympic Group

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon was elected president of the U.S. Olympic Comittee on Saturday and promptly pledged his efforts to solve the sticky financial problems facing the USOC and to field the strongest American teams ever for the 1984 Winter and Summer Games.

Simon, Secretary of the Treasury during the Nixon and Ford administrations, was nominated by a USOC committee for president and was unopposed for the position.

Simon, 53, who has served as USOC treasurer for the past four years and who has been involved in the Olympic movement for the past 16 years, said in a brief acceptance speech that he was "greatly honored and immensely proud" of his selection by delegates at the USOC quadrennial meeting here.

He reminded the delegates that their "first responsibility is to the athletes," who, he said, "epitomize what America is all about — dedication, discipline, self-help and the striving for excellence."

Simon expressed optimism about the USOC's financial outlook, and said he believed the Olympic committee had "just finished its most difficult and tumultuous four years in history, which included the unfortunate boycott of the Moscow Games, but I believe we have emerged stronger because of the experience."

He said that financially USOC has "regained much of the ground we lost."

Other officers elected at Saturday's session were John B. Kelly Jr. of Philadelphia, first vice president; Dr. Evie G. Dennis, Denver, second vice president; Robert H. Helmick, Des Moines, Iowa, third vice president; Stephen B. Sobel, Rochelle Park, N.J., secretary; and Lawrence Hough, Washington, D.C., treasurer.

Earlier in the meeting, outgoing President Robert J. Kane recapped the past four years.

During his administration, Kane said, the two most critical happenings were the decision to keep American athletes home from the Summer Games in Moscow and the decision to save the 1984 Summer Games for the United States by joining in partnership with a group of private Los Angeles citizens to put on the games.

Kane called the boycott decision "a dilemma wrapped in an enigma, encased in a quandry." But he added that he was "sure we made the right decision," because it would have been "suicidal" to have participated at Moscow while President Carter, the Congress and the American public opposed such participation.

He noted that current fund-raising efforts are four times ahead of the level in 1977, but admitted the USOC still has some lingering problems, especially the "corrosive" dispute over which organization should represent wrestling on the USOC.

In other action Saturday, an official of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee reported that significant progress was being made in preparations for hosting the 1984 Summer Games.

Harry Usher, executive vice-president and general manager of the LAOOC, told the delegates that venues for all events at the Games will be scheduled by March with one possible exception. In addition, Usher said, the LAOOC already has received financial commitments beyond its $116 million budget, and has assembled a group of 11 official sponsors, including Anheuser-Busch, Canon, Coca-Cola and Atlantic Richfield.

The lingering wrestling dispute, which Kane criticized earlier in the day, was addressed by the USOC's membership committee.

The dispute involves whether the AAU Wrestling Division or the U.S. Wrestling Federation will be the official national governing body for the sport in the USOC.

The conflict began in 1978 after the USWF challenged the AAUWD as the official governing body. In accordance with the National Sports Act, the matter went to arbitration and an arbitrator ruled in favor of the wreslting federation, which would have forced the AAU to resign. But the International Federation of Wrestling (FILA) has refused to recognize anyone but the AAU as the national organization in the United States.

As a result, the AAU is still seated and the USOC finds itself in violation of its own constitution.

On Saturday the membership committee submitted a resolution, approved by the delegates, that the AAU must make make changes in its constitution, including a clause allowing for arbitration, and setting deadlines before enactment of those requirements.

In response to the vote the wrestling federation said it would continue to challenge the matter in the courts, signaling that no end is in sight in the protracted, costly legal battle.

Cook Sloshes To Crosby Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — John Cook slogged over rain-drenched fairways to a 6-under-par 66 and the lead Saturday after the twice-delayed first round of the $225,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

Cook, a 23-year-old former national amateur champion, played his round at Cypress Point, which often yields the lower scores of the three courses used for this storm-plagued event that was two days late getting started.

A series of Pacific storms dumped more than five inches of rain on the Monterey Peninsula early in the week, washed out play Thursday and Friday and forced officials to reduce this to a three-round, 54-hole event now scheduled to end Monday.

Tom Watson, golf's dominant force and Player of the Year for the past four seasons, opened his 1981 campaign with a 67, also at Cypress Point, and was a single shot off the lead.

Also at 67 were Ben Crenshaw, 20-year-old Bobby Clampett and Greg Powers, a non-winning journeyman. Crenshaw and Powers also played at Cypress Point while Clampett had the best score of the bright, sunny day at Pebble Beach.

Tom Kite had a 68 at Pebble Beach.

Jack Nicklaus, who has won this tournament three times, said he played "reasonably well but I couldn't get anything really close to the hole. I kept hitting three or four feet from the flag and pulling back 20 feet on the wet greens." He shot a 71 at Cypress Point.

His amateur partner, former President Gerald Ford, failed to help the team a single shot before what Nicklaus called "the biggest gallery I've ever seen at Cypress.

"He made some pars, but they were on holes where I made birdie, and he made some pars where he didn't get a shot," Nicklaus said.

Jerry Pate, Dr. Gil Morgan and David Graham, a winner last week in Phoenix, had 69s that represented the best scores at Spyglass Hill, the longest and probably toughest of the three courses.

"That's the one I'm worried about," said Watson, who will play that layout on the final day.

"Anybody who played Spyglass and is within two or three shots of the lead probably is the real leader of the golf tournament," said Kite.

Cook, who has yet to win in his brief pro career, didn't make a bogey in what he called "my most solid round this year."

He didn't miss a green and missed only two fairways, a critical consideration in this tournament since the still-drenched, water-logged conditions forced officials to allow players to lift, clean and place balls in the fairway.

"We couldn't have played otherwise," Kite said.

Crenshaw agreed.

"It was tough out there," he said, clumps of wet grass and soggy sand clinging to his spikes.

"But any time you let these guys get their hands on the ball, they're going to shoot good scores. When you have preferred lies, you're not going to get fliers and the greens are so soft you can go right for the flag every time."

Crenshaw, who had only 23 putts for the round, once chipped in for a birdie, scored the only "2" of his career on the famed 16th at Cypress and played the back side in 30.

Cook scored once from 25 feet, reached a par-5 in two and two-putted for a birdie, had a couple of birdie putts from the 12-15 foot range and scored two deuces from six feet or less.

Watson started his season in rather uncertain fashion, going 5-5 on the first two holes. He more than made up for it with a burst of five birdies in a six-hole stretch beginning on the seventh.

Palmer Gains Four Shot Lead

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Veteran Sandra Palmer struggled through tricky winds on the back nine Saturday, but took a 4-stroke lead after three rounds of the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $100,000 Whirlpool Championship of Deer Creek.

Palmer turned in a 1-over-par 74 for a 209 total after three rounds, 10 under par on the 6,260-yard, par-73 Deerfield Country Club Course.

Despite the scramble down the back nine, Palmer added a stroke to her lead, moving four ahead of Janet Coles, Hollis Stacey and a rallying Silvia Bertolaccini, one of the few late finishers able to contend with the swirling winds.

Bertolaccini was 3-under on the second nine holes for a 70 as the trio wound up at 213 going into Sunday's final round. Eight others, including the fading defending champion, JoAnne Carner, were at 215.

Palmer, starting her 18th LPGA season and looking for her first title since 1977, came off the course complaining of the winds.

"You go up to the ball thinking of the shot you're going to make and then realize you have to aim the ball maybe 20 feet to the left or to the right of the pin to try and compensate for the wind," she said.

As the wind took over, Palmer, then 12-under-par, bogeyed the 10th and 11th holes, hitting the sand on the 10th and three-putting the 11th as Stacey parred both to pull within two strokes of the lead.

Wake Forest Pounds Marquette, 83-60

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Coach Carl Tacy's powers of foresight proved flawless Saturday night as No. 6 Wake Forest pounded Marquette 83-60.

"We knew Marquette was probably going to come at us with a zone," Tacy said. "Zones have given us problems, but tonight we were a lot more patient. I think we attacked much better and got the ball inside, but the key was the work we did on the boards."

The Demon Deacons enjoyed a 42-32 rebounding edge over the Warriors. By getting inside, Wake Forest took advantage of Marquette fouling to rack up a big edge in free throws, 15-2.

"This game was different in that it was a lot more physical," Tacy said. "I thought we matched their physicalness without fouling."

Marquette was whistled for 26 fouls, while the Deacons only were called for 10.

Marquette coach Hank Raymonds bemoaned his team's terrible second half. The Warriors shot 45 percent in that period and finished the game shooting just 41 percent.

"Worst half we've ever played. We had great patience in the first half," Raymonds said. "We play better basketball than we played here tonight, much better."

Marquette played Wake Forest even in the first half, but in the second period Deacon guard Frank Johnson ignited a rally that put the game on ice.

Johnson, who led the Deacons with 19 points, was the catalyst in a spurt that carried Wake Forest to an 11-point lead midway through the second half. Forward Alvis Rogers, who failed to score in the first half, found his touch and finished the night with 13 points.

The Deacons led by only one at the half, 31-30. But in the second half established a 43-40 lead with 16 minutes to play. After Johnson missed a breakaway slam dunk, Wake Forest scored the next eight points to put the game out of the Warriors' reach.

Marquette's troubles began after Michael Wilson hit a jumper to pull the Warriors within one with 14:34 remaining. When Wilson connected again, five minutes had elapsed, and Marquette trailed by nine, 51-42.

Wake Forest expanded its lead to 22 on a Johnson layup with two minutes remaining, and the final margin was established on free throw as Marquette was forced to foul.

The two teams pushed each other around in the opening stages, but Marquette gained the upper hand with a 14-6 lead early on. But the Demon Deacons pushed back and took a brief lead at 19-18.

The lead switched hands three more times before Wake Forest managed to go up by one at intermission.

Wake Forest is now 16-2.

Glenn Rivers led Marquette with 14 points. Terrell Schlundt scored 12 points, all in the first half.

Cougars Down Jaguars

FARMVILLE — Alex Cobb, who finished with 12 points, hit four free throws in the last minute to lift Southwest Edgecombe to a 50-44 victory over Farmville Central in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Trailing 45-42 with a minute left, Farmville cut the deficit to 45-44 on a bucket by Andrew Edwards. Cobb, however, then canned both ends of a one-and-one with 25 seconds left and followed that with two more free throws to give the Cougars a 49-44 lead and all but seal the victory.

Southwest led after the first period, 10-8, at the half, 21-19, and at the end of the third period, 33-29, before holding off the Jaguar rally.

Farmville, led by Melvin Sutton's 12 points and Ronald Dixon's 10, falls to 1-17 overall and 1-11 in the league while SWE is now 3-16 and 2-11.

In the girls' game, Delphine Mabry scored 20 and Alphelia Jenkins added 19 to lead the Cougars to their 19th victory without a defeat. SWE is now 13-0 in the league.

Southwest led at the end of the first period, 17-6, and at the half, 38-15, before coasting home with the victory. Farmville, which is now 7-9 and 5-7, was led by Rose Lang's 13 points. Etta Gorham and Rose Edmonds each had 10 for the Lady Jaguars.

Snowed Out

Several area athletic events were postponed because of snow and icy road conditions this weekend.

Ayden-Grifton will play its basketball game at North Lenoir, and Williamston, its game at Ahoskie, on Wednesday.

No date has been set for a replay of the North Pitt-Conley basketball game.

Cancelled were Rose at Northern Nash in wrestling, and a home swim meet for Rose High School.

In the 100-meter dash in the 1952 Olympics at Helsinki, the first four finishers were timed the same, 10.4 seconds. The judges gave the gold medal to Lindy Remigino of the United States.

Clemson ..... 69
Furman ..... 67

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Clemson used 67 percent field goal shooting to overcome a 26-point performance by Furman's Mel Daniel and nip the Paladins 69-67 in a nonconference basketball game between intrastate rivals Saturday night.

Clemson's biggest lead was seven points with 6:46 remaining. Furman battled back and got as close as one point with nine seconds left on two Daniel free throws that made it 68-67.

After a Tiger timeout, the ball was inbounded to Chris Dodds, who was fouled by Hines with five seconds left. Dodds hit the first shot of a one-and-one and Hines rebounded the miss on the second shot.

The victory lifted Clemson's record to 15-6, while Furman fell to 8-10.

After hitting 14 of 24 field goal attempts in the first half the visiting Tigers hit a blazing 83 percent in the second period to edge the stubborn Paladins.

Furman outrebounded Clemson 39-33 and forced the Tigers into 19 turnovers. But the Paladins shot only 32.4 percent from the field.

Daniel, a junior guard, hit 10 of 10 on free throw attempts. Sophomore Fred Gilliam took scoring honors for Clemson with 18 points.

Other Clemson players in double figures were Larry Nance who had 12 points and 10 rebounds, and Bill Ross and Vincent Hamilton, with 10 points apiece.

Michael Hunt scored 16 for Furman, while Andre Hines had 14 points and 12 rebounds. Furman freshman George Singleton pulled down a game-high 13 rebounds.

Florida State ..... 74
Tulane ..... 68

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Florida State erased a 12-point first-half deficit and rolled to a 74-68 victory over Tulane behind the 27-point scoring of Mickey Dillard in a Metro Conference basketball game Saturday afternoon.

Florida State took the lead for good at 61-60 on a driving layup by center Elvis Rolle with 2:12 left in the game. Dillard, a 6-foot-3 senior guard, got seven of his game-high 27 points in the final two minutes of play to clinch the victory.

Rolle finished with 17 points, and forward Kris Anderson got 10 for Florida State. Anderson also led his team in rebounding, pulling down 12 — eight of those in the second half.

Tulane broke open a see-saw first half with a 12-2 scoring binge in the final five minutes of the opening period that left the Green Wave on top 40-28. Dillard came back and hit two medium-range jumpers to narrow Tulane's halftime advantage to 40-32.

Forward Paul Thompson had 21 points for Tulane, and guard Joe Holston had 20.

Florida State is now 11-6 overall and 3-3 in the Metro Conference.

Tulane is 8-9 and 1-5.

Ohio State ..... 54

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Junior guard Kevin Smith scored 22 points, including four free throws in the last minute, as Michigan State upset Ohio State 60-54 Saturday to knock the Buckeyes out of first place in the Big Ten Conference basketball race.

Ohio State fell to 5-3 in the conference and 10-7 overall. The Spartans are now 3-5 and 9-8.

Ohio State's Todd Penn hit a jumper from the corner with 1:03 left in the game to cut the Spartans' lead to 54-52. But Smith hit a pair of free throws with 57 seconds remaining, then stole the ball, was fouled, and hit another pair of free throws with 40 seconds remaining to seal the victory.

Clark Kellogg led Ohio State with 25 points, followed by Herb Williams with 10.

Jay Vincent pumped in 17 for the Spartans, who trailed 30-29 at the half.

Michigan State took the lead for good with 6:19 remaining when the Buckeyes were given a "no-action" technical foul with the score tied 47-47. Mike Brkovich sank the free throw, and Smith followed with four consecutive points.

William & Mary .... 71
Navy ..... 60

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — William & Mary hit 28 of 42 free throws in the second half to beat Navy 71-60 in a college basketball game Saturday night.

Mike Strayhorn had 18 points for William & Mary and Billy Barnes added 14, 10 of those from the foul line.

Navy, now 6-12, was led by Robert Romaine, the game's high scorer with 22 points.

Florida 75

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Rudy Macklin and Howard Carter combined for 53 points as fourth-ranked Louisiana State shook off a sluggish performance to win its 18th straight game Saturday night with a 92-75 Southeastern Conference victory over Florida.

The victory equaled the school record for consecutive wins and kept LSU's lead in the SEC at two games. The Tigers are 10-0 in the conference and 19-1 overall.

Macklin poured in 18 points — 14 in each half — and Carter dumped in 25 — including 15 in the second half to rally LSU.

LSU held a 45-40 halftime lead but the Gators, behind freshman Ronnie Wiliams, tied the game at 55-all five minutes into the second half.

Reserve Willie Sims and Carter scored four points each in an 11-0 spurt which gave LSU a commanding 75-61 lead with 5½ minutes left to play.

Ethan Martin added 18 and Sims finished with 8 as LSU won its 25th victory in its last 26 games against conference foes.

Williams led Florida with 23 and Vernon Delancy chipped in with 22 as the Gators fell to 9-9 overall and 3-7 in the conference.

Oregon State Outlasts Southern Cal

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Center Steve Johnson scored 25 points as a tough Oregon State defense pushed the co-No.1-ranked Beavers to a 55-48 Pacific 10 Conference basketball victory over Southern Cal Saturday.

The Beavers, aided by passing of Les Conner and Johnson's scoring underneath, ran off to a 26-10 lead with 6:11 to play in the first half. Johnson had the last seven points of the flurry.

But the Beavers became casual at that point, and the Trojans battled back to score the last 11 points of the period to close the margin to five at 26-21 at intermission.

But the early second half belonged to the Beavers, 9-0 in the Pac 10 and 17-0 overall. Oregon State took an 11-point lead, 48-29, when Johnson scored following a miss by Conner with 12:37 to play.

The Trojans, 5-4 in the Pac-10 and 10-8 overall, clawed back with a shot by Barry Brooks at 6:45, cutting the lead to 42-37.

Brooks led the Trojans with 14 points. Johnson, who had 12 rebounds and five assists, left the game with four fouls at 11:29 to go. He fouled out in the final minutes.

Kentucky . . . . . 71
Georgia . . . . . 68

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Freshman Jim Master put 7th-ranked Kentucky ahead to stay with a shot out of the corner early in the second overtime period and then hit two clinching free throws with 18 seconds left as the Wildcats trimmed Georgia 71-68 in a televised Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday.

Master's first basket with 3:14 left in the second extra period broke a 63-63 deadlock and Kentucky held the lead the rest of the way.

Georgia freshman Vern Fleming cut the margin to one on a free throw before Dirk Minniefield converted a steal on a bad pass into a dunk to open a three-point advantage with 36 seconds left.

Master's free throws came after a basket by Georgia's Terry Fair and the Bulldogs again cut the margin to one point with five seconds left on a tip-in by Dominque Wilkins, who had a game-high 32 points.

Chuck Verderber hit two foul shots for Kentucky with one second remaining to provide the final margin.

Kentucky, now 15-3 overall and 8-2 in the SEC, trailed by 13 points during a sloppy first half performance when the Wildcats had 11 turnovers.

Kentucky trailed 50-40 with 14:06 left in regulation before Sam Bowie led a charge that gave the Cats a 53-52 lead six minutes later. Bowie had seven points, two blocked shots and a length-of-the-court assist in the 13-2 Kentucky spurt.

Bowie led the Wildcats with 18 points and Master added 16.

Connecticut . . . . . 75
Manhattan . . . . . 58

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Dulin paced a balanced Connecticut attack with 14 points, including eight during a 12-0 spurt to open the second half, as the 20th-ranked Huskies defeated Manhattan 75-58 Saturday, handing the Jaspers their seventh straight basketball loss.

Connecticut, 15-3, held a slim 36-33 halftime lead, but took command in the early in the secoppg:lf. Dulin scored the first six points of the half, hitting a jumper from the right side, a jumper from the foul line and a layup.

Karl Hobbs added 12 points for the Huskies, who were upset by Rhode Island 78-75 Thursday night. Norman Bailey chipped in with 10 points for Connecticut, which held the Jaspers without a field goal for the opening 6:41 of the second half.

Manhattan, 5-11, gave Connecticut all it could handle in the opening half as John Leonard scored 15 of his game-high 19 points.

The Jaspers led 27-22 with 6:16 remaining in the opening session when the Huskies got back in the game. Chuck Aleksinas, who was forced the bench early with two fouls, hit consecutive baskets and Dulin canned two free throws to put Connecticut ahead 28-27. The Huskies outscored the Japsers 8-6 the remainder of the half.

Michigan . . . . . 74
Wisconsin . . . . . 67

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Mike McGee's 25 points enabled Michigan to recover from a slow start and sweep past Wisconsin for a 74-67 Big Ten basketball victory Saturday.

McGee, the conference's second highest scorer, got 17 of his points in the second half as the Wolverines surged from a 31-28 intermission deficit to grab a 39-33 advantage about three minutes later into the game.

The victory was the second straight for Michigan, which also had 16 points from John Johnson, as it improved its record to 5-3 in the Big Ten and 14-3 overall. The Wolverines' quickness was simply too much for the Badgers, who dropped to 2-6 on the conference and 8-8 overall, despite a standout performance from Claude Gregory.

Gregory, who entered the game as the Big Ten's third highest scorer, finished with 27 points to surpassed the 1,500 career scoring mark. John Bailey added 21 points for the Badgers.

Wisconsin jumped to an 18-10 lead eight minutes into the game. The Badgers outrebounded Michigan 10-5 in the first half, and outshot the visitors 63 percent to 56 percent from the field before the intermission.

Minnesota . . . . . 74
Northwestern . . . . . 63

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Trent Tucker scored 19 points and Randy Breuer and Darryl Mitchell each added 12 as 19th-ranked Minnesota took a 74-63 Big Ten basketball victory from Northwestern Saturday.

The triumph evened the Gophers' conference mark at 4-4. The Gophers are 12-5 overall. Northwestern is 1-7 and 7-10.

The Wildcats jumped to a 10-5 lead in the first four minutes and played the Gophers even until seven minutes were left in the half. Minnesota then snapped a 25-25 tie by scoring 13 of the final 19 points to take a 38-31 lead into halftime.

Minnesota scored the first two baskets in the second half for an 11-point cushion but Rod RoBerson, who led all scorers with 33 points, kept the Wildcats close with his clutch shooting.

The taller Gophers eventually wore down Northwestern, however, and built a lead as great as 17 points late in the game.

Nebraska . . . . . 57
Kansas . . . . . 54

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Ray Collins sank both ends of a one-and-one free throw with 16 seconds left as Nebraska hung on to upset No. 18 Kansas 57-54 in Big Eight Conference college basketball here Saturday.

Nebraksa, now 10-8 overall and 4-2 in the league, took an early lead in the nationally-televised game and found itself up by as many as 10 points before heading in at half with a 31-23 lead.

The heavily-favored Jayhawks, now 14-4 overall and 4-2 in Big Eight play, battled back in the second half with full-court pressure and a tenacious zone defense. Kansas pulled within one point with 12 minutes left, 41-40.

The teams traded baskets before Kenny Walton hit an eight-footer to put Nebraska ahead by three, 49-46 with 6:32 left.

But Kansas stayed right with the Huskers, pulling again within one with a minute to play. Then, as Nebraska went into a four-corner stall, Husker Andre Smith palmed the ball with 45 seconds to play.

The Jayhawks inbounded the ball down 55-54, apparently going for the game's last shot. But Jayhawk guard Boody Neal traveled and Nebraska had the ball back.

Neal then fouled Collins with 16 seconds left. Following Collins' two free throws, Kansas took the ball down for one shot, missed and Nebraska held on until the final gun.

Alabama . . . . . 62
Tennessee . . . . . 58

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dale Ellis scored six points and Gary Carter added four in the final minutes of a seesaw fight as No. 11 Tennessee surged past Alabama, 62-58, in a Southeastern Conference college basketball game Saturday night.

The two SEC rivals kept each other at bay throughout the game with Tennessee's largest lead only eight points, and that edge came in the last 35 seconds. The teams tied each other 10 times during the course of the contest.

With 4:53 left, Tennessee's Howard Wood hit a 20-footer and the host Vols turned to ball control, drawing seven personal fouls to put Ellis and Carter at the free throw line and finish Alabama. Ellis, a 6-foot-7 sophomore forward, finished the night with 17 points and Carter, a junior guard, had 13.

The host Volunteers, improving their record to 15-3 and 7-3 in the SEC, survived a tight first half for a 31-30 lead at the intermission over Alabama, which drops to 12-6 on the season, 5-5 in league play.

Forward Eddie Phillips scored a game-high 20 points and sophomore guard Mike Davis had 14 to pace Alabama's offense.

As the clock wound down to 5 seconds, Phillips and Ellis fell into a brief shoving match at midcourt after Phillips was called for pushing against the Tennessee sophomore. The pair was quickly separated and Ellis sank two free throws, giving the Vols an 8-point lead.

Alabama's Davis and Phillip Lockett each scored a field goal to end the scoring as Tennessee stood back to avoid fouls.

Louisville . . . . . 92
Virginia Tech . . . . . 70

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Junior guard Jerry Eaves scored a career-high 25 points to lead Louisville to a 92-70 Metro Conference victory over Virginia Tech Saturday afternoon in a regionally-televised game.

Scooter McCray came off the bench to add a season-high 19 points and provided a spark late in the first half that sent Louisville on its way to its seventh win in last eight games. The victory pushed to Louisville to 5-1 in the Metro Conference and 9-8 overall, the first time this season the defending NCAA champions have been above the .500 mark.

Virginia Tech (9-9 and 2-3) had pulled to within one point of Louisville, 27-26, with 3:35 left in the first half on three straight outside jumpers by Mickey Hardy.

McCray then on a three-point play, stole the ball to set up a basket by Derek Smith, and added another basket.

Stauback, Lilly Selected As New Members Of Grid Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Navy quarterback Roger Staubach and one-time Texas Christian lineman Bob Lilly were among 11 men named Saturday to the College Football Hall of Fame.

Others on the list, announced by the National Football Foundation, were Victor Bottari, a University of California halfback from 1936 through 1939; Nick Drahos, a tackle at Cornell University from 1938 through 1940; Hugh McElhenny, a halfback at the University of Washington from 1949 through 1951, and Thurman McGraw, a tackle at Colorado State University from 1946 through 1949.

Also, George Morris, a center at Georgia Tech from 1950 through 1952; Tommy Nobis, a linebacker at the University of Texas from 1962 through 1965; Hank Lauricella, a tailback at the University of Tennessee from 1948 through 1952; George Taliaferro, a halfback at the University of Indiana from 1945 through 1948, and Alvin Wistert, a tackle at Boston University and the University of Michigan from 1946 through 1949.

Staubach, who retired last season after a storied career with the Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League, was a Heisman Trophy winner for the Midshipmen in 1963.

Lilly, who played for TCU from 1958 through 1960, also played for the Cowboys in the NFL. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame last year.

Wistert is the third member of his family chosen for the Hall of Fame, joining his brothers Whitey and Albert.

The five backs and six linemen will be inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame at the foundation's 24th annual awards dinner in New York Dec. 8, and will be enshrined in the Hall of Fame at King's Island, Ohio, in August 1982.

The Hall of Fame selections were made by the foundation's 12-member Honors Court, headed by Fred Russell, vice president and sports columnist of the Nashville Banner.

Rozelle, Waiting For Final Game Worries About Inflation, Law Suit

HONOLULU (AP) — Pete Rozelle's chief worry these days is Al Davis and his lawsuit, but the National Football League commissioner is also concerned with things such as inflation.

Asked about the rising cost of attending games in most NFL cities, Rozelle said: "I think you can price yourself to the point you're going to lose interest. I'd like to see the entire economics of the spot level off.

"Everything has been skyrocketing in recent years: television revenue, player salaries."

Rozelle, in Honolulu for today's Pro Bowl game, said the 1980 season was the league's best during his 21 years as commissioner, at least on the field.

"From almost every barometer this was the league's best year," he said. "We had the highest average paid attendance, just under 60,000 per game; our television ratings were up; teams were very competitive and we had tight divisional races.

"But it's depressing to have off-field things diluting somewhat what was done on the field."

He was referring to Davis' attempt to move the Oakland Raiders to Los Angeles in contempt of the league and the rest of the club owners.

Davis, general managing partner of the Raiders, has filed an antitrust suit seeking to have ruled invalid an NFL rule requiring three-fourths of the league's 28 owners to approve any franchise move. The owners earlier voted 23-0 not to allow Davis to move the Raiders to Los Angeles. The case is scheduled to go to court Feb. 9 in Los Angeles.

On another subject, Rozelle said the site of the 1982 Pro Bowl would be announced sometime before today's game. Honolulu, which also hosted the game last year, is the obvious choice again and quite possibly could become the permanent site of the NFL All-Star contest.

Weller Is New Aide

Pine Forest High School football coach Greg Weller has earned a promotion. Weller, who led the Fayetteville school to an 11-1 record this past season, was named Friday as an assistant coach at East Carolina University.

Weller, who during his three years at Pine Forest compiled a 28-6 record, will coach the Pirate split ends.

"I've known Gary Weller for ten years as a coach in Florida and at Pine Forest," ECU head football coach Ed Emory said. "I recommended Gary for the position at Pine Forest and when I was at Georgia Tech we talked with Gary about joining us there as an assistant."

Prior to coming to North Carolina, Weller coached at Cooper City (Fla.) High School from 1974 to 1977. His teams had a combined 27-13 record and finished first in the conference in defense each season.

Weller is a 1973 graduate of Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Fl. He played football for three years at Mississippi College in Clinton, Miss., before transferring to FAU. Weller is near completion of a master's degree from FAU.

Weller is married and has two children and will be joining the Pirate staff sometime within the next two weeks. His addition completes the ECU staff for the 1981 season.

NFL Season Finally Ends

HONOLULU (AP) — A month into 1981, the National Football League officially closes out the long 1980 season Sunday with the Pro Bowl.

"It's a fun game and it's a game where pride is the motivation," said Houston running back Earl Campbell, who'll spearhead a potent AFC offense.

"It's a low-key game as far as the preparation is concerned," said Atlanta and NFC Coach Leeman Bennett. "But it's not low key after the opening kickoff."

Bennett's squad will be headed by Chicago running back Walter Payton and Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski. The NFC defensive lineup includes Tampa Bay's Lee Roy Selmon, Detroit's Al Baker, and Randy White and Bob Breunig of Dallas.

In addition to stopping league-leading rusher Campbell, the NFC defense will have to worry about the air attack provided by the NFL's top passer, Brian Sipe of Cleveland.

With Stanley Morgan of New England and San Diego's John Jefferson at wide receivers and the Chargers' Kellen Winslow at tight end, the AFC also has a formidable group of receivers.

The nationally televised game before an expected sellout crowd of 49,800 at Aloha Stadium begins at 4 p.m., EST.

Although the AFC has been dominant in recent Super Bowls, the NFC has clouded the "which conference is better?" question by winning five of the last six Pro Bowls.

"I don't understand it," said Bennett, "but I hope it continues one more time."

Both Bennett and his AFC counterpart, Sam Rutigliano of Cleveland, said they've grown a little spoiled during the week leading up to the game.

"It makes my mouth water to watch all these guys," said Bennett. "I'd love to take all of them back to Atlanta with me.

"It's very definitely a game our players want to win," he continued. "Pride is an amazing thing."

Rutigliano said he's been learning as well as coaching this past week.

"It's a great educational experience," said the Browns coach. "The players here are the pro-types of the very best at their positions in the game, so it gives you an idea of what to look for for your own team.

"I think it's good that I have six months before we start again; I'd probably expect too much of some of my players after watching these guys."

Riley Still Top Scorer

East Carolina's Kathy Riley continues to lead the North Carolina AIAW scoring race, with an 18.8 average. But Riley's edge in the lead is shrinking.

N.C. State's Trudi Lacey is coming on, and is averaging 18.5 points per game.

Sam Jones is fourth in the state with a 14.7 average, while Mary Denkler is 11th at 12.3. Marcia Girven is now 18th at 10.3, followed by Lydia Rountree at 22nd at 8.4.

Girven is fourth in the state in rebounding with a 9.1 average, while Riley is tenth at 6.2, and Denkler is 11th at 6.1.

Denkler is second in the state in field goal accuracy at 55.0, while Riley is third at 53.9

As a team, East Carolina ranks first in scoring offense, 80.1; second in defense, 67.8; second in field goal accuracy, 47.1; third in free throw accuracy, 64.6; second in rebounding, 41.9; and first in scoring margin, with a plus-12.3 average.

Ali Officer On The Run

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A Wells Fargo Bank officer with connections to Muhammad Ali dropped from sight last week at about the same time bank officials discovered $20 million missing, the Independent, Press-Telegram reported today.

Meanwhile, as part of an investigation into the purported embezzlement, FBI agents on Friday seized financial records from the office of Muhammad Ali Professional Sports Inc., a boxing promotion company in Santa Monica known as MAPS, the newspaper reported.

According to The Independent, Press-Telegram, the bank officer who disappeared is Benjamin Lewis, who also is a board member of the Ali promotion firm.

Lewis, an operations officer at the Wells Fargo branch office in Beverly Hills, has not reported to work in a week, his secretary said. "He's no longer with us," a receptionist added.

A secretary at MAPS said Lewis "hasn't been here for the past week. He used to come to the office in the afternoons after banking hours."

The paper reported Thursday that the bank was conducting an internal investigation into the disappearance of about $20 million from the branch where Lewis worked.

An aide to former boxing champion Ali said he didn't know where Lewis is. "We'd like to find him, too," the aide said.

Neither law enforcement officials nor representatives of Wells Fargo would comment on whether Lewis' whereabouts are being questioned.

MAPS promotes boxing matches and has no financial relationship to Ali except a licensing agreement for the use of his name, an attorney for the corporation said.

MAPS Chairman Harold Smith, though, is an old friend of Ali's, attorney M. Edward Franklin said. "He's permitted his name to be used because of his friendship with Smith," he said.

"The company is itself undergoing an internal investigation," Franklin said. "We're trying to find out exactly what happened here. We're just as much in the dark as anyone else."

MAPS also employs a former Wells Fargo loan officer from the same Beverly Hills branch, Sammie Marshall, as chief executive officer, the newspaper reported.

Reached at his Inglewood home, Marshall refused to comment on the case. He did say, though, he has "no earthly idea" where Lewis has gone.

MAPS has suffered severe financial difficulties lately. According to Steven English, assistant executive officer for the state Athletic Commission in Sacramento, the firm "has lost thousands of dollars over the past year."

MAPS was licensed by the state as a professional boxing promoter, but its license expired December 31, 1980 and has not been renewed, English said.

Wells Fargo has been officially tight-lipped about the case. "I can't discuss anything," said Don Lappa, assistant manager of the Beverly Hills branch.

Arafat Says He's 'Conservative'

CAUGHT IN CROSSFIRE — Civilians remove the bodies of nine people who died when they were caught in a crossfire between government forces and leftist guerrillas in El Salvador's capital, San Salvador, according to police. None of the dead was identified. (AP Laserphoto)

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat has told a group of British parliamentarians he is not a "Marxist" but is in fact a "conservative," a Beirut newspaper reported today.

The Beirut daily Al Liwa carried a partial transcript of a discussion held Friday between the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization and a 10-member team from Britain's House of Commons, which is visiting Lebanon at the invitation of the PLO.

Asked to comment on reports a future Palestinian state would be Marxist oriented, Arafat said, "Such slogans are circulated by America and Israel to influence the Europeans. We are proud of the independence of our national movement and we shall struggle to preserve this independence. We have friends in the East and the West, but our decisions are taken independently."

The newspaper said Arafat then turned to his questioner and said, "don't forget that like you I am a conservative."

The unnamed British MP retorted, "then you support the stand by the Conservative Party opposed to the Soviet presence in Afghanistan?"

Replied Arafat: "As to Afghanistan, we are not opposed to the present regime there and we call for a peaceful solution for that problem."

Asked what the objectives of the PLO were, the Palestinian guerrilla chief said, "My people need to go back to their homeland and establish their independent state on every inch which Israel may evacuate or which may be liberated."

Arafat sidestepped the question of recognizing Israel.

"This matter is one of national sovereignty," he reportedly said, "We will not accept a state with strings attached."

No Change For Norway

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — The surprise resignation of Prime Minister Odvar Nordli will not affect Norway's commitment to NATO defense increases and the stockpiling of U.S. military hardware close to the Soviet border, diplomatic sources say.

Citing ill health, Nordli, 53, a staunch proponent of NATO, unexpectedly announced his resignation Friday from the helm of the minority Labor government.

Labor Party leaders and officials will meet Tuesday to discuss his successor, who will lead the party in a crucial election Sept. 14.

Recent polls indicate that Labor, divided by wrangling over Nordli's leadership, could lose to a conservative coalition.

No matter which way the election goes, plans for a 3 percent increase in annual defense budgets to meet goals set by all members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and the stockpiling of U.S. artillery and equipment 600 miles from the Soviet border will not be changed, the sources said.

Survivor Thinks Ship Sabotaged

By ISABELLE RECKEWEG

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — The captain of an Indonesian ocean liner that caught fire and sank in the Java Sea killing more than 500 people believed the ship had been sabotaged, a survivor said today.

Syafri Kaliluddin, 38, a reporter for the state-run Antara news agency and one of the 672 survivors of Indonesia's worst maritime disaster said he asked the captain, Abdul Rivai, what had happened shortly after a fire broke out in the engine room of the Tampomas-2.

"Captain Rivai clearly answered me, 'There has been a sabotage,'" Syafri said in an exclusive interview with Antara. "I am absolutely sure he said that.

"I asked him why he thought so, but there was a terrible panic on board. Rivai declined to further answer my questions and tried to organize his much-panicked crewmen."

The Tampomas-2, which sailed with 1,184 people aboard, sank Wednesday after burning for two days in the Makassar Strait. Ships that came to the rescue were able to save 672 people, but officials estimate that another 512 died in the sinking.

Syafrio said there was a shortage of life jackets on the Tampomas-2 and the crew, with the exception of the captain, sought to save themselves, leaving the passengers to their own devices.

Syafri said the captain, who was among those reported missing, managed to escape the burning ship and he last saw him clinging to a plank in the water.

A crewman also said he saw Rivai being rescued and believed he still was alive. "Captain Rivai is alive," the crew member said. "I am dead sure he is alive. I saw him rescued by a navy ship with my own eyes. I swear it."

"We have rescued 672 people, but for the past 24 hours we have not found one single survivor — not even a body," Communications Minister Rusmin Nuryadin told a news conference Friday.

Search For Classified Documents

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A box of classified documents on nuclear propulsion was accidentally thrown out at the Orlando Naval Training Center Wednesday, and three days later sailors were still picking through tons of rotting garbage to find the dirty, torn pages.

"It's our intent to find it all, as long as it takes," said Lt. Cmdr. Bill Harlow.

A two-man, overnight watch detail was stationed at the dump Friday night, and sailors were resuming the search at daybreak. About half the material had been found by nightfall Friday.

The sailors were hunting for more than 5,000 pages of text used in the Navy's nuclear training school. A cardboard box containing the material mistakenly was thrown out while sailors were cleaning out a storage area.

Navy officers quickly contacted the Orange County Sanitation Department, which collects trash on the base. The garbage truck driver pointed out where he had dumped his load, and a crew of 30 sailors rolled up their bell bottoms and went to work.

Crews of naval students, working in shifts until nightfall, waded through discarded food containers, boxes, cans, clothing and other garbage, picking out the soiled, torn pages.

Harlow said the material is marked "confidential," the lowest classification. He declined to elaborate on its contents.

The documents can be replaced, but Harlow said, "We'd just like to get them back and dispose of them properly now that they've been rendered useless."

The sailors have been putting up with some good-natured ribbing and dive-bombing seagulls scavenging for food.

"It's all part of being in the Navy," said Lt. Cmdr. Barry Burrow, who was made search supervisor.

"I can tell my kids about Vietnam and I can tell my kids about the Indian Ocean, but this is one experience I hadn't anticipated in my naval career," he said.

Bob Davis, manager of the Orange County solid waste department, said only two other trucks had emptied garbage on top of the Navy's documents.

To Stand Trial

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two high-ranking Nicaraguan air force officials are headed for a trial on charges that they tried to smuggle two helicopters out of the country, but charges against four other men accused in the case have been dropped, officials said.

U.S. Magistrate Joseph Leonard on Friday released Modesto Rojas-Berrios, the Nicaraguan air force's director general, and Sidney Muller-Schroeder, its chief procurement officer, on $100,000 bond each. The bonds were guaranteed in a letter from Nicaragua's U.S. Ambassador, Rita Delia Casco, to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Leonard ordered Rojas-Berrios and Muller-Schroeder to stay in Texas until they are tried on the federal charges.

Through an interpreter, Leonard warned the two they would be charged with bail-jumping and face an additional five years in prison and $5,000 in fines if they fled the country.

Under the Seizure of Arms Intended for Export Act, convictions carry a maximum penalty of seven years in prison and $100,000 in fines, federal officials said.

The six men had been held in Bexar County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bonds each since Jan. 18, when U.S. Customs agents arrested them at a heliport at nearby Bulverde, Texas.

Agents seized two Bell UH-1B helicopters, also known as "Hueys," and alleged the men were preparing to export the craft to Nicaragua, via Mexico, without obtaining an export license. No license has been issued since January 1970 for export of helicopters to Nicaragua because of neutrality laws.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A box of classified documents on nuclear propulsion was accidentally thrown out at the Orlando Naval Training Center Wednesday, and three days later sailors were still picking through tons of rotting garbage to find the dirty, torn pages.

"It's our intent to find it all, as long as it takes," said Lt. Cmdr. Bill Harlow.

A two-man, overnight watch detail was stationed at the dump Friday night, and sailors were resuming the search at daybreak. About half the material had been found by nightfall Friday.

The sailors were hunting for more than 5,000 pages of text used in the Navy's nuclear training school. A cardboard box containing the material mistakenly was thrown out while sailors were cleaning out a storage area.

Navy officers quickly contacted the Orange County Sanitation Department, which collects trash on the base. The garbage truck driver pointed out where he had dumped his load, and a crew of 30 sailors rolled up their bell bottoms and went to work.

Crews of naval students, working in shifts until nightfall, waded through discarded food containers, boxes, cans, clothing and other garbage, picking out the soiled, torn pages.

Harlow said the material is marked "confidential," the lowest classification. He declined to elaborate on its contents.

The documents can be replaced, but Harlow said, "We'd just like to get them back and dispose of them properly now that they've been rendered useless."

The sailors have been putting up with some good-natured ribbing and dive-bombing seagulls scavenging for food.

"It's all part of being in the Navy," said Lt. Cmdr. Barry Burrow, who was made search supervisor.

"I can tell my kids about Vietnam and I can tell my kids about the Indian Ocean, but this is one experience I hadn't anticipated in my naval career," he said.

Bob Davis, manager of the Orange County solid waste department, said only two other trucks had emptied garbage on top of the Navy's documents.

To Stand Trial

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two high-ranking Nicaraguan air force officials are headed for a trial on charges that they tried to smuggle two helicopters out of the country, but charges against four other men accused in the case have been dropped, officials said.

U.S. Magistrate Joseph Leonard on Friday released Modesto Rojas-Berrios, the Nicaraguan air force's director general, and Sidney Muller-Schroeder, its chief procurement officer, on $100,000 bond each. The bonds were guaranteed in a letter from Nicaragua's U.S. Ambassador, Rita Delia Casco, to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Leonard ordered Rojas-Berrios and Muller-Schroeder to stay in Texas until they are tried on the federal charges.

Through an interpreter, Leonard warned the two they would be charged with bail-jumping and face an additional five years in prison and $5,000 in fines if they fled the country.

Under the Seizure of Arms Intended for Export Act, convictions carry a maximum penalty of seven years in prison and $100,000 in fines, federal officials said.

The six men had been held in Bexar County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bonds each since Jan. 18, when U.S. Customs agents arrested them at a heliport at nearby Bulverde, Texas.

Agents seized two Bell UH-1B helicopters, also known as "Hueys," and alleged the men were preparing to export the craft to Nicaragua, via Mexico, without obtaining an export license. No license has been issued since January 1970 for export of helicopters to Nicaragua because of neutrality laws.

Cowboys Round Up Wild Burros In California

HEADING FOR A NEW HOME . . . Bureau of Land Management wrangler Gene Parker Carries a three-month-old burro to be transported out of the Saline Valley near Death Valley as part of a BLM project to reduce the herds which overgraze dwindling rangelands. The burros will be offered for adoption to private citizens as part of BLM's Adopt-a-Horse program. (AP Laserphoto by AP Staff Photographer Wally Fond)

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LONE PINE, Calif. (AP) — The two burros — enraged and frightened — fought the metal fences. They butted and feinted at the corral. One, forelegs flailing and nostrils flared, tried to get over the top.

Nothing worked.

Grudgingly, they accepted their fate and began probing the confines of the first enclosure they'd ever known.

"When you first get them, they're just scared to death. They've never had to do anything that they didn't want to do," said LaVern Young, 54, a weathered veteran who has spent four years chasing wild burros in California's high desert.

Moments later, three more burros raced into the shallow canyon as they tried to escape the little helicopter hot-rodding overhead and filling the air with churning brown dust.

A half-dozen government cowboys rode into the melee, herding the animals toward a Y-shaped fence that blocked one end of the canyon and led to the portable corral.

Last week's roundup in the Saline Valley west of Death Valley National Monument is part of a U.S. Bureau of Land Management program designed to reduce the herds of wild horses and burros that overgraze their dwindling rangelands. Experts contend the animals risk starvation during drought years, such as this one, and deny scarce forage to deer, bighorn sheep and other wildlife.

"The forage is pretty well gone from this valley," Young said "Unless it rains, there could be some starvation. Up at the south end, some of them are already starving."

He said the BLM hopes to take about 1,000 of the animals out of the Saline Valley, a remote chunk of brown scrublands surrounded by snowy mountains, and maintain a viable herd of 35.

Once shot by ranchers or caught and sold for dog food, wild horses and burros taken from public lands in the West are now offered to private citizens, with certain restrictions, under the BLM's Adopt-a-Horse program. Some 20,000 have been adopted into almost every state in the program's eight-year existence.

Free-roaming horses and burros are protected by a 1971 federal law that calls them "living symbols of the historic and pioneer spirit of the West."

The BLM counted 55,400 wild horses and 12,400 burros in 10 Western states last year.

While the round-up and adoption program is aimed at the burros, it also preserves another historic species: the American cowboy.

Except for the helicopters and two-way radios, round-ups haven't changed too much in 100 years or so, said Gene Nunn, 44.

"You've still got to have that man on horseback," he said.

Following an afternoon of chaotic burro-roping — which resembles nothing so much as the kickoff of a sandlot football game as burros and cowboys meet then scatter in a wild, dusty charge — Nunn climbed off his sweating, once-wild horse. "And you ask why we like it so much. It gets in your blood. I wouldn't do anything else.

"I guess you could say we sort of live in the past — staying out here and riding horses all day."

On a good day, with aid of the helicopter, he said the eight-man crew might catch up to 70 burros.

Rick Leishman, a 30-year-old pilot who honed his skills in Vietnam, spends about six hours a day skimming over the desert.

He said he gets the animals started in the right direction, then pulls back as they lope along. "This is rough country. If you tried to keep them running all the way in, you'd have dead burros all over the valley."

The BLM has been rounding up burros in California for several years. But the project got a big push from the just-adopted master plan for the sprawling California Desert.

The agency plans to remove about 10,000 desert burros and try to place them through its adoption program by 1985.

Young said the shaggy, sad-eyed animals have practical uses such as back-packing and "They gentle down real easy. We have hundreds of them in backyards as pets."

Sticks To Story

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Mexican farm laborer Manuel Garcia Loya stuck to his story of being robbed and tortured on the Hanigan brothers' ranch, though admitting under cross-examination that there have been variations in his accounts of the incident.

Loya, on the stand Friday in U.S. District Court for a third day, held firm to his main points — that Thomas Hanigan, 23, his brother, Patrick, 26, and their late father, George, tied and tortured him and two companions before shooting at them with shotgun buckshot as they ran toward the nearby Mexican border.

"I was a little confused at the time, but I always tell the truth," Loya said. At another point, Loya said inconsistencies in his estimates of elasped time during the alleged torture should not be surprising, because "every minute seemed like an eternity to me."

First Steps Taken In Deporting Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — A Haitian community leader says the resumption of exclusion hearings for Haitian refugees will be "the beginning of our troubles all over again."

The Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, director of the Haitian Refugee Center Inc., and other leaders reacted angrily to the news Friday that the Immigration and Naturalization Service had begun scheduling exclusion hearings for some 4,000 Haitians caught trying to enter the country since Oct. 10.

"No other ethnic groups are going to be taken to court," Jean-Juste said. "This is the beginning of our troubles all over again. We do hope the hearings, if they have to take place, will be fair and will allow the Haitians to obtain asylum in this country."

The hearings are the first step in deportation proceedings. An illegal alien who is caught when entering the country is subject to exclusionary proceedings; an alien who surfaces in the community later can be deported.

There are some 27,000 Haitians in the Miami area. Those who arrived here before Oct. 10 are exempt from the hearings because the State Department created a new immigration class for them and new Cuban refugees during the Cuban boatlift last year. Their final status has not yet been determined.

Officials say 12,174 Haitians have arrived in South Florida since last April.

The 4,000 are the first Haitians to face exclusionary proceedings since 1974, when U.S. District Judge James King banned such hearings pending the outcome of a civil-rights lawsuit filed by a refugee group.

After the federal government won an appeal, King issued a final ruling in the case two weeks ago, lifting the order and allowing INS to resume the hearings.

Students Shocked By Movie

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Students at Central High School got a special preview of a made-for-television movie about the famed 1957 confrontation over the admission of black students and were shocked "that some people could be so cruel."

Some 160 students on Friday saw the film "Crisis At Central High," which will be broadcast next week by KTHV, a CBS affiliate here.

"It was hard for me to watch it and think that some people could be so cruel," said Leah Filiatreau, a white senior.

"It was kind of shocking," said sophomore Lori Llewellyn, who is also white. "Skin color doesn't make any difference."

Central High, 24 years ago, was the scene of a federal-state confrontation over the court-ordered admission of nine black students. Former Gov. Orval Faubus resisted the order and called out the Arkansas National Guard in what he claimed was an effort to prevent possible violence from the Ku Klux Klan and angry whites.

BACKGROUND—Herb and Edi Hutchinson grew up in the state of Maine and they both found the Lord as little children. Herb was raised in a small country town and Edi's childhood was spent in the city of Portland, Maine. They did not know one another until a blind date made that meeting possible and about a year later they were married.

HERB—In Herb's late teens he began being involved in church youth leadership which carried over into his early twenties and marriage. In each church he attended Herb has been involved in many areas and feels that it is very important to be involved in your local body, leading, helping and assisting in any way that you can.

Before the Lord's calling, the "GREATEST" calling, Herb had held many varied and interesting positions such as—State Health Inspector—Insurance Agent—Assistant Manager in retail and radio advertising sales.

EDI—Edi's involvement in Church has mostly been in music (piano) and Sunday School areas. She has taught in many classes and together they have worked in church school. The Lord worked an exciting miracle in Edi's life. After moving to the state of Vermont in 1970 the Lord opened the door for Edi to attend the University of Vermont, and while working as a teacher's aide, plus keeping house, she graduated with HONORS and received her teaching degree.

TODAY—Herb and Edi as a family with their sons, Mark and Jeff, travel nationwide sharing the Gospel in music and word. The fact that they minister AS A FAMILY—ministers TO FAMILIES—that the Lord can keep THE FAMILY TOGETHER and bring FAMILIES BACK TOGETHER! As part of their ministry Edi has conducted "seminars" for ladies and together they have held husband and wife seminars.

Herb and Edi have appeared on Christian television in various parts of the country and have been music guests on a national program called "Celebration".

An important part of their music ministry is praise and worship and the desire of their hearts is that JESUS be lifted up and that people find the Lord as their personal Saviour. Also their ministry is to the body...to the families of God...to Christians...that they will draw closer to their Lord and truly make "Him Lord of their life!...in every area!"

Filth In Industry Exposed

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reporter Merle Wolin considered herself liberal and middle class. And, perhaps, a bit suspicious of some bosses and the working conditions they provided for their employees.

But she never dreamed how bad things could be until she disguised herself as an illegal immigrant and went to work in the garment industry.

"The exploitation is unbelievable. It went against everything I believed, everything I was taught America stood for," says the 33-year-old Latin affairs reporter for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, who spent eight months investigating the state's $3.5 billion-a-year garment industry and working in its "sweatshops."

"It was a story that needed to be told," Ms. Wolin said in a recent interview. "There have been exposes of the garment industry in the past, but no one ever really went inside — to see the workers' side."

Her 16-part story is now appearing in the Herald Examiner and in La Opinion, the nation's largest Spanish-language paper with an estimated readership of 250,000.

What she found, she says, was filth, intimidation, miserly wages — and an overriding fear of deportation, which allowed all the rest to exist. State and federal officials have estimated that as many as 90 percent of the garment industry's 175,000 workers are in the United States illegally.

But she also found a camaraderie among the workers, a willingness to help each other make the best of an undesirable situation.

"They have very little, but there is a deep sense of humanism — a desire to share what they have if it will help you," said Ms. Wolin, who posed as an illegal immigrant from Brazil with few skills who was divorced and trying to raise two children with the help of an aunt.

"Some of them even brought food for 'my children,'" she said. "They wanted to be sure that I would make it all right."

Ms. Wolin's story is a litany of violations of labor law. Of minimum wage and overtime violations by some 75 percent of the small contractors who cut and sew the bulk of the garments in the industry. Of men and women illegally sewing garments at home for pennies because they can't afford transportation to a workplace or the price of a baby sitter. Of rampant health and safety problems.

But she adds a graphic look that goes beyond the statistics.

"The smell of garbage was everywhere," she said of the second of the five shops in which she worked. "Near one corner, gnat-infested trash spilled over the sides of a large black garbage can. Dishes encrusted with day-old food were in another corner.

"In the washroom, the toilet bowl was completely brown, its seat stained with urine. And there was no toilet paper. Instead, the women used scraps of cloth."

For this, the women — who pinned and sewed and buttoned — earned 4 cents per garment for an average of about $9 for a nine-hour day.

"Indigence combined with bad working conditions and forced psychological servitude seemed to contribute to a pervasive sense of despondency and low morale," she said.

To get pictures to back up her claims, the newspaper had a photographer pose as a fire extinguisher inspector and come into one shop with a small hidden camera.

"There were times I was afraid — for myself and for others," she said. "And there is a great deal of paranoia. The people are trying to grab hold of at least a small piece of the American dream. I didn't know how they would react if they found out I had lied and might be endangering even what little they did have."

Gold Future Prices Fell On Friday's Market

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Gold futures prices slumped again Friday, capping off what one analyst called an "amazing week for metals."

Gold on the Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York fell back as much as $19 an ounce after being swept higher Thursday in a last-minute rush of buying. The contract for February delivery was $501.70, compared with $515.80 Thursday and $552.50 the previous Fri-day.

Steve Chronowitz, an analyst with Smith Barney, Harris, Up-ham & Co., said Friday's declines were a continuation of selling brought on by the stronger U.S. dollar. The higher dollar and high interest rates encourage traders to take their money out of gold and put it into foreign currencies or interest-bearing investments.

"The strength of the dollar has brought in the dumping of gold," Chronowitz said. "There have been occasional rallies, apparently politically based, but they are just not holding."

After moving downward for six consecutive days, precious metals prices turned around in one such short lived rally to close higher Thursday. Analysts had said the advances were influenced by fears of increased tensions between Po-land and the Soviet Union.

Copper prices moved independently part of the week and again Friday on what Chronowitz said was some increased demand by the copper trade. Speculators may also have been buyers, he said.

At the close Friday, gold was $14.10 to $19 lower; silver was 40 cents to 60 cents lower, February $13.25 a troy ounce; copper was .10 cent to 2.20 cents higher, February 83 cents a pound; platinum was $8.90 to $10.50 lower, February $450 a troy ounce.

Grain and soybean futures prices closed mixed on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Analysts said they had been expecting prices to open lower on selling by speculators after Thursday's sharp declines. But when selling failed to materialize and prices were somewhat higher, local traders bought to cover their commitments for delivery before prices got too high.

Grains slumped Thursday amid fear that increased tensions in Poland could result in an expanded grain embargo against the Soviet Union.

Some selling by commercial interests was noted as prices rose early Friday, but activity turned dull at midsession, sources on the trading floor said.

Prices weakened again amid continuing reports of precipitation through the Midwest. Moisture tends to be positive for crop production and therefore higher supply figures, which in turn tend to be negative for prices.

Prices rose off of the days lows on a new round of buying before the close, sources said.

At the close, soybeans were 4½ cents to 10½ cents higher, the contract for March delivery was $7.25½ a bushel; wheat was ½ cent lower to 2 cents higher, March $4.65¾ a bushel; corn was 1½ cents lower to 4 cents higher, March $3.55½ a bushel; oats were ¾ cent lower to ½ cent higher, March $2.17½ a bushel.

Chiropractors Lose Suit Against AMA

By BRENDA INGERSOLL
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association, which contends that chiropractic medicine is an "unscientific cult," says it has been vindicated by a jury's decision to reject an antitrust suit filed against it by five chiropractors.

The chiropractors had sought $673,367 in damages from the AMA, 15 other medical groups and several individuals and accused them of ostracizing chiropractors and interfering with their profession.

During the trial, the plaintiffs' lawyers argued that the AMA tried to isolate and eliminate chiropractors by telling its members that they were engaging in "unethical practices" if they associated with chiropractors on a professional basis.

But a U.S. District Court jury found the defendants innocent on Friday.

George McAndrews, a lawyer for the chiropractors, said "there will be endless appeals" of the verdict.

Max Wildman, lawyer for the AMA, said the medical association's "goals and objectives to upgrade patient care have been vindicated by ... jurors that want the best and see no reason why they shouldn't have it."

The verdict "will have a significant impact on other cases challenging the medical profession's right to speak out on public health issues," said James H. Sammons, AMA executive vice president.

The jury deliberated for almost seven hours Thursday and Friday before reaching its decision in the five-year civil antitrust suit.

At issue in the two-month trial was whether the "unscientific cult" label pinned on the nation's 18,000 chiropractors by the AMA in 1966 was an exercise in free speech and professional judgment, or a greed-inspired attempt to cripple a competing profession.

Wildman, in closing arguments, said chiropractors were an "unscientific cult" whose practitioners sometimes engage in outright quackery.

Falwell Obtains Delay

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Evangelist Jerry Falwell has obtained a court order delaying distribution of the upcoming issue of Penthouse magazine, which features an interview with him.

A federal judge in Roanoke issued a temporary restraining order Friday barring the magazine from distributing any copies of its March issue pending a hearing Monday. Distribution had been scheduled to begin Monday.

Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority and pastor of the Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, said he told his interviewers not to sell their article to any "pornographic magazine."

He says the interview will cause "irreparable harm" to his reputation and credibility and says the interview was obtained under false pretenses.

Penthouse representatives said U.S. District Court Judge James Turk's order violates First Amendment guarantees of freedom of the press. The order is "prior restraint" and "patently unconstitutional," Penthouse attorney Roy Grutman said in a telephone interview from New York.

Falwell said he told freelance reporters Andrew Duncan and Sasthi Brata in advance they couldn't sell the story "to any pornographic magazine. ... I particularly named Penthouse and Playboy."

Penthouse spokesmen said the reporters made no such promise.

Drops $21 Million Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Guitarist Gabor Szabo has dropped a $21 million suit charging the Church of Scientology with embezzling his money, kidnapping and harassing him and the church has dropped its suit charging Szabo with fraud.

In a telephone interview Friday from Tucson, Ariz., where he is appearing, Szabo said he dropped the suit a week ago because "I found it too time-consuming and I couldn't concentrate on my career." He said he stood by his original allegations.

The church filed a countersuit in March 1980 charging Szabo with fraud. As part of the settlement, that suit also was dropped.

Szabo filed suit a year ago saying the Church of Scientology had taken over his career and his life after he sought help from their drug treatment program.

He had accused the church of inducing him to sign a personal management contract with Artists International, a company that he said was an arm of the church and more concerned with using Szabo's name to win converts than managing his career.

He alleged the company had charged him 26 percent of his gross income, but failed to account for or pass on to him money he earned.

In a statement, the church said Friday that in depositions Szabo had retracted his charges that threats, physical force and restraints had been used.

"We expected Mr. Szabo to ask for a settlement soon after his admission that the earlier charges he had made were false," the Rev. Douglas Smith said in the statement. "It saddens me to see an artist fallen on hard times, but that wasn't really justification to extort money from us."

Leaves Wife Out Of Will

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. left his entire estate to his three young children and made no mention of his wife, who is accused of shooting him to death in their home.

The will, filed Friday with the Liberty County clerk, was dated May 23, 1980, eight months before Daniel was hit in the stomach with a slug from a .22-caliber rifle. Vickie Daniel's lawyer, Andrew Lannie, said she will plead innocent to a murder charge when she appears for arraignment Wednesday.

Mrs. Daniel was left in a state of hysteria by the shooting, which occurred while she was cooking dinner, her lawyer said. Mrs. Daniel has been unavailable for comment.

Daniel, 39, was shot Jan. 19, less than a month after his 33-year-old wife had filed for divorce.

Jean Daniel Murph, a sister of the former House speaker and the executrix of his estate, declined comment Friday on whether Mrs. Daniel might have known she was excluded in the will. Daniel left all his property to a trust fund for Thomas Houston Daniel, 10, Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, and Marion Price Daniel, IV, who will be 1 on Sunday.

Mrs. Daniel, who was indicted Wednesday, is free on $50,000 bond.

Expulsion In Sex Incident

BALTIMORE (AP) — A federal judge has given the Navy the legal green light to expel a Naval Academy midshipman for allegedly filming four of his male classmates having sex with a woman midshipman.

U.S. District Judge Joseph H. Young on Friday denied midshipman James H. Love, of Arnold, Md., a preliminary injunction against his dismissal.

Academy spokesman Capt. Clark Gammell said officials would continue expulsion procedures that had been suspended when Young issued a temporary restraining order two weeks ago.

Young told Love at a three-hour hearing that it would be to his advantage to leave the academy because the Navy had decided not to give him a degree or commission him as an officer.

Young had ordered Love's lawyers to show why the midshipman's lawsuit against the Navy should not be dismissed.

Questions Unanswered After Six Years

TARBORO — Unanswered questions about a human skull found near here sparked the interest of students in Mrs. Jane Barnhill's eighth grade earth science class. The full identity of the skull still remains unanswered but its story has continued for six years.

The skull was found by a student in the class and brought to school. It stayed in a school display for about a year before another class became interested in obtaining further knowledge — its race, age, cause of death, etc. "During a study of geologic time periods and a little anthropology, the class became interested and asked if it could be sent to the Smithsonian Institute for examination. Since it had been found near buried bits and pieces of Indian pottery, it seemed to indicate the skull might have been American Indian," said Mrs. Barnhill.

The students obtained the proper protective materials for mailing the skull. Included in the package were pieces of Indian pottery and note cards asking various questions and giving what information the class had been able to obtain.

"Two weeks later we received a letter from the Smithsonian asking questions about the skull which had been previously sent. The class's next six letters to the Smithsonian were returned marked 'Return to Sender.' The class was very disappointed and the project was forgotten," recalled Mrs. Barnhill.

After moving to the present Middle School three years ago, Mrs. Barnhill discarded all former correspondence.

During the first week of December, 1980, Mrs. Barnhill received a letter from the Smithsonian Institute thanking her for her "generous contribution to the Institute."

'I immediately wrote to them explaining the situation and asked that the skull be returned along with any information they might have. Returning to school after the Christmas holidays, I received a letter with their scientific findings and then about a week later, the skull was received.

"Originally the skull had been sent with its teeth intact — when it was returned, the teeth and lower jawbone had been removed," she said.

The final letter from the Smithsonian was written by J. Lawrence Angel, curator of physical anthropology, Department of Anthropology, who said ". . .the skull appears to be from a slave burial, probably before 1850. In this division we never got the sherds from the apparent Indian site. I enclose a copy of my measurements of your skull received 4/10/76 and studied a week later. It is apparently a Black male about 60-70 years old, without any peculiarity except 1. being old for a slave, 2. having no clear signs of mixture (could have come from West Africa (Ghana area?) before 1800 AD, 3. having a misdirected upper second premolar on the right. . ."

"Much interest has been shown by both current and former students. The school is having a class display case made for the skull so that it can be placed in the school library for viewing," concluded Mrs. Barnhill.

CLASS INTEREST. . .in a human skull found near Tarboro about six years still continues. Here one of Mrs. Barnhill's classes studies current information.

SCIENTIFIC FINDINGS. . .from the Smithsonian Institute are studied by Mrs. Jane Barnhill, second from right, and several students at C. D. Martin Middle School, Tarboro.

Survey Reveals Big Nursing Shortage

There is a nursing shortage nationwide and statewide and it's extremely evident in eastern North Carolina, according to a survey conducted by the North Carolina Area Health Education Center (NCAHEC) last winter.

The final draft of the survey, recently released, describes and documents the current nurse staffing situation and provides data for educational planning. Virginia Tate, associate director for nursing education of Eastern AHEC headquartered in Greenville, said during a recent interview. Recruitment and retention of qualified nurses have been subjects of considerable national concern in recent years, so Tate and her fellow North Carolina AHEC nursing educators initiated the survey during a quarterly statewide work session in July, 1980. to see just how grave the problem was in this state.

The vacancy rate for nursing positions in the institutions surveyed was 8.9 percent statewide; in the east it was 19 percent. Contacted were the directors of nursing at major nurse-employing agencies throughout the states: 163 hospitals, 91 public health departments, and 145 long-term (skilled and intermediate) care facilities having 50 or more beds.

"There seems to be a consensus that most institutions, particularly hospitals, are understaffed and that beds or units have had to be closed because of lack of professional nursing personnel. Some regions have been found critically short of nursing manpower," Dr. Thomas Bacon, associate director of N. C. AHEC and chairman of the survey project, said.

The American Hospital Association says that 90,000 to 100,000 nurses are needed now to fill current vacancies and meet current health care needs. Nurses account for 16 percent of all health care workers and 39 percent of all professionally trained health care workers. The latest U. S. Government Bureau of Labor Statistics Report predicts that the increase in registered nurses employed will be faster than the average increase for all occupations because (1) the extension of prepayment health care programs; (2) the expansion of medical care as a result of new medical techniques and therapies; (3) increased interest in preventive medicine and rehabilitation of the handicapped.

Changes in health care delivery systems and their use by the public, peer review, institutional utilization programs and cost containment efforts in many health care agencies have led, not only to changes in absolute numbers of nursing personnel, but also to changes and sometimes conflicts in the role of the registered nurse, all of which ultimately add to the gravity of the problem, the study reflected.

Ever-increasing specialization, particularly in tertiary care hospitals, is demanded of nurses. And, at the same time, hospital stays have been shortened and patients are discharged to their homes and to nursing homes more quickly, increasing the need for skilled care to be provided by community health and long-tesm care facility nurses.

Dean Evelyn Perry and Judy Kuykendall, who head the East Carolina University and Pitt Community College nursing education programs respectively, both say that, even as the need for nurses enlarges, the difficulty and expense of educating more nurses increase.

Both cited need for more and better classroom and clinical facilities before they can increase enrollments at their respective institutions much. "We have talented, dedicated nurse educators," Perry said. "But they cannot pack but so much teaching and travel time into each day and evening. We're already asking them to travel to clinical facilities throughout the east to afford as much clinical nursing experience to our students as is possible," she said.

The survey results show that 1,353 budgeted vacancies were available among the institutions when surveyed. With the total registered nursing staff being 15,168, vacancies represented nine percent of current staff. Hospitals had vacancies of 9.5 percent; long-term care facilities, seven percent; and health departments four percent.

Since hospitals had the highest vacancy rate, further analyses were done to determine if vacancy levels were related to the size of the institution. Although there appeared to be no clear linear relationships, vacancy rates were found to be lowest among the largest hospitals in the state. Those with more than 500 beds had a vacancy rate of 6.2 percent, less than half that of hospitals in the 251-500 bed category. The East has no hospitals with more than 500 beds.

Rates of budgeted vacancies ranged from six percent in the Charlotte AHEC region to nearly 20 percent in the Eastern region. The Mountain AHEC region was the next worst off with an RN vacancy rate of 13.9 percent.

The surveyors were told that there will be 5,546 RNs needed in the state by 1983 — 283 with masters; 1,760 with BSN degrees; 596 with Associate Degree program credentials; and 2,437 with any qualified backround.

Resignations in the previous year statewide numbered 3,254. Of these, 56 had master's degrees, 507 BSN degrees; 668 AD degrees; and 1,086 did not indicate what kind of degree they had.

Some hospitals eliminate budgeted vacancies when they cannot be filled, an explanation for why the total resignations and budgeted vacancies differ, Tate said.

The institutions, when asked to rank the reasons registered nurses leave their jobs, gave family relocation as the most common. When asked individually, nurses themselves interviewd in a Northwest AHEC survey said salary was the most important. "It came out at a recent nursing meeting in Winston-Salem," Bacon said, "that grocery check-out persons are ahead of most nurses on the pay scale, small wonder that nurses are unhappy in many circles."

Heavy workload and lack of administrative support were also frequently mentioned complaints in the Northwest AHEC interviews.

Tate said that many hospitals have, within the last year, become more aware of the needs of nurses. Pitt is a good example," she said.

"The pay scale and fringe benefits have been greatly improved here," Pitt Director of Nursing Betty Trought said. "And we're also working with nurses to improve general working conditions. We understand that nursing is demanding work and that most nurses are working because they have to to support themselves and their families. We do all we can to see that a nurse works in the department of his or her choice and that they can easily and quickly be transferred to another department if they wish and if there is an opening.

Flexible scheduling, differential pay for weekend and night work, shared jobs and the supplemental labor pool are innovations that Pitt sees as ways nursing opportunities have been improved.

Eastern AHEC and nursing schools throughout the east are cooperating to try to bring "opportunities in nursing" to public awareness. They're taking nursing faculty into communities with information on "new and creative approaches to nursing education for the adult learner."

They're telling would-be nurses of opportunities for registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, and patient care assistant programs. And they're letting nurses know that there is assistance available for them to continue their education into higher education levels of their chosen profession if they wish.

AHEC is working to foster hospital nurse residency programs for assisting nurses with transition of being a student to being a professional. And it's fostering the formation of and participation in area task forces on nursing, cooperative efforts of nurse employers, nursing schools and nurses themselves.

AHEC is also seeking to make the public aware of the availability of N. C. Board of Nursing-approved refresher courses for nurses who, for whatever reason, may not have practiced for a few months or many years. "Such a refresher course, would be required for reinstatement of licensure for any nurse who has not held a nursing license for five years," Tate said. "But most nurses tell us they feel that refresher is a necessity if they've been out of practice for any length of time, even if their licenses have not expired. The knowledge turnover in medicine is now down to two and a half years and they feel the need for refresher education most acutely. Besides, many hospitals are requiring and encouraging and seeking to provide refresher education before a nurse returns to active practice after any appreciable lapse.

"We want to hear from any nurse anywhere in Eastern North Carolina who would like such a refresher course," Tate said. She asked that any interested person contact her at Eastern AHEC, P. O. Box 7224 Greenville, N. C. 27834; phone, 758-5200, or contact the hospital nursing or personnel director in the area.

Elaine Stritch Adds New Facets to Career

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone might be pardoned for doing a double take at hearing that Elaine Stritch has been commissioned to write a book on diabetes. Is this THE Elaine Stritch — the actress, singer, TV performer, once of Detroit and Broadway, now of London?

Yes, it's the very same.

On a visit to New York recently, she described how she had found out about four years ago that she had diabetes. She has even found some humor in the situations caused by the necessity to take insulin as soon as you need it.

She recalls the time an attendant in a ladies' room in London's Mayfair district thought Miss Stritch was taking heroin and promptly submitted her resignation. Miss Stritch straightened things out with the management. She says she plans to stress the humor in her book.

"I accept things in life most readily," the actress, now in her 50s, said of the diabetes.

Another facet:

"I don't like to see a good movie twice. I like to live with the memory of the impact that it had on me the first time." So when New York and the Great White Way began to seem like a movie she'd seen before, she decided to "split."

She was playing in "Company" on Broadway at the time, and asked to go on the road show of the play.

She admits, too, that living alone in New York was becoming a bit scary.

She says she had wonderful days in New York in the '40s, '50s and '60s — and thinks these were New York's best years, too. Among her favorite roles were Grace in "Bus Stop," Martha in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and Melba in "Pal Joey."

But, she adds, she reached the stage when she wanted to slow down a bit. And — another facet of the Stritch philosophy: "I like doing things that I make up my mind to do, not that I'm forced to do by physical reasons."

She also says the life of a Broadway star may seem very glamorous to an outsider, but "ask an actress when she had her last exciting date and you don't always get a positive answer." She wanted to find a man she could love and commit herself to and wasn't finding anyone in New York.

Her husband is the actor John Bay, who has recently toured various U.S. and Canadian cities with a one-man show on Groucho Marx.

It's not only her marriage that has planted Miss Stritch in London, it's also the British way of life and way with the theater.

She finds the British theater considerably less competitive than Broadway, explaining: "People seem to have gone into the theater and become actors in England because it's the natural thing for a lot of people to do."

She has also been on TV in England for seven years, and became virtually a household name with the four-year run of a weekend series called "Two's Company."

And recently, she has been doing her own version of the American TV series "Maude." It's literally her own version — she did the writing, and says it was an "exciting adventure," the first time she had ever actually got her name on the manuscript of a show.

Dear Abby

Business, Dating In Percentages

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a female interior decorator in business for myself. About three months ago I made a contract to decorate a suite of offices for a very attractive unattached male. While working on this job, I started dating my client, which was against my policy, but I was strongly attracted to him and enjoyed his company immensely, so I made an exception. Now find myself in a very precarious position.

My first contract with him is completed, and he has asked me to do another decorating job for him. (His summer place.) But he wants a 40 percent discount, instead of the 15 percent discount I customarily allow repeat customers, friends, etc.

I would like to continue dating this man as well as maintain a business relationship with him. How do I separate business from pleasure without jeopardizing one or the other?

BUSINESS WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: Having already mixed business with pleasure, you're on the spot. If you don't give him the 40 percent discount, you can kiss his friendship, as well as his future business, goodbye.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24 and have been married for seven years. We have three children. My husband is a responsible, hard-working man who works the swing shift all the time. (He likes it.) He also works weekends every chance he gets. If he's not working on weekends, he looks for spare jobs, and when he's not working, he's too tired for anything else.

We have no friends and he doesn't care to go anywhere. We are well-off financially because he has no hobbies, goes nowhere and saves his money.

Abby, there must be more to life than this. I am lonely and bored. I'm not asking for an exciting or glamorous life, but I'd like to have some friends over occasionally, or go dancing once in a while. (He danced some before we were married.)

I love my family very much, but does married life have to be so dull? He used to be alive once. He's only 25. What should I do?

MISSING SOMETHING

DEAR MISSING: One of the things you're missing is communication with your husband. You must have had something in common or you wouldn't have married each other. Let him know how you feel, and begin by inviting one couple to your home or out for dinner. It's usually up to the wife to make social contacts. Instead of bemoaning the dullness of your life, do something to liven it up. It's your move.

DEAR ABBY: What does one do when he sees a fellow employee robbing the company blind and getting away with it? The person doing the stealing happens to be my supervisor.

Almost all my co-workers here are aware of what's going on, but they're too afraid of losing their jobs to do anything about it. It has been the topic of conversation among us for a long time, but frankly, Abby, we are stumped. Any suggestions from you or others who have had to handle a similar problem?

BITTER

DEAR BITTER: The thief should be confronted by a solid front of all who know that he's been "stealing the company blind." Either tell him face-to-face or write him a letter advising him that you are aware of his unethical practices, and warn him that if it isn't discontinued at once, the boss shall be informed. And if he doesn't straighten up, the boss should be informed.

(P.S. If anyone out there knows a better solution, I welcome it.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I think it's time we all stopped picking on the post office.

We've all done it. It's a cheap shot. And it's time we really addressed ourselves to the problems of the Postal Service and the options left to us. The simple fact is people are writing more letters than the post office can deliver.

The answer? We've got to stop writing like this. I have three children who not only anticipated the postal problems, but did something about it. During the years when they were in college, they limited their correspondence to three letters a year: (a) legal action by the university; (b) legal action by the bank; (c) annual begging and whimpering. We could all help by following their example and writing only when we have something startling to say.

Pride must be restored to postmen for what they are delivering. I mean it. The quality of mail has been going downhill for some time now. How do you think mailmen feel walking 50 miles a day to put a bundle of mail in your hands and having you stand there in front of them dropping "The Truss Digest" in the trash and complaining about the rest?

I firmly believe that mail addressed to "Occupant" should be kept at the post office and if people want it they have to show three ID's and certification of sanity.

Abolish postcards from vacationers. This constitutes a large chunk of mail and people who are up to their ashes in snow do not want to hear from someone in Tahiti whose tan line is beginning to fade.

Let's stop giving the post office a bad time. If the ZIP code helps them hold postal rates down, let's give it a shot. This summer business leaders will be advised to add four more digits to the five-digit ZIP code we now have.

I say let's get rid of names altogether and go for the numbers. From here on in, you can call me 555852553. I've been called worse.

Besides, having no name will solve once and for all the forms we fill out that give you 1/16 of an inch-line to fill in your name and complete address.

And finally, let's get realistic about the postal rituals. Let's do away with all those funny little stamps they bounce on ink pads and stamp on letters and packages; "Fragile, Hand Stamp, This Side Up, Handle With Care, Certified, Insured, Rush." They don't mean anything anyway. They're just for show.

And grow up, America, there is no phone at the post office. You've always known that. It's time to stop telling yourself that there is someone on another line dispensing information. It just rings to indulge you.

We play ball with the post office and who knows . . . maybe someday they'll put the drive-in mailboxes on the driver's side of the car.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 1, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: After a sudden crisis in the morning which you need to go along with sensibly in order not to have a loss, you can make long-range plans that could give you more abundance.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't make plans in the morning that would require change later. Study a new philosophy that could be helpful to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Morning is not good for pursuing some personal aims but the evening is fine for social activities. Sidestep a foe.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Seek a spot early in the day where you can gain peace of mind. Don't force any issues with family members.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A close tie could be careless in the morning but don't let this bother you. Strive for increased happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure you don't irk someone in authority or you could regret it later. Plan the new week's activities wisely and make progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Wait until the afternoon before putting across any ideas to others, but use orthodox methods for best results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your obligations well and plan how best to handle them. The afternoon is best for having a serious talk with loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Wait until later in the day before talking over a personal matter with loyal friends. Be poised at all times.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A fine day for getting out and visiting long-time friends. Follow your hunches which are accurate now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Morning plans are not very good but later they work out just fine for you. Show that you are understanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) The situation at home requires diplomacy in the morning. Make only changes now that are necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A new project you have in mind needs more study before you put it in operation. Make plans to improve your social life.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those fascinating young persons who will be most practical and precise of nature. Give a fine education along lines of business for best results. Religious training can lead to a most successful life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, FEB. 2, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to make sure you don't act in an impulsive manner. Show others you are able to turn potential difficulties into new opportunities. Be logical.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use particular care in motion today and avoid possible trouble. Be sure to keep those promises you have made.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use good sense in the handling of finances and be exact with facts and figures. Be careful of your reputation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care you don't waste valuable time over something insignificant or you could lose out where it counts the most.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You get poor advice from a trusted adviser now, so use your own good judgment for best results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid being with friends who are highly sensitive and cultivate those who are more stable. Avoid a group affair.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't jeopardize your good name in any way now and stay out of trouble. Your creative ideas need expression now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study new worthwhile ventures but don't commit yourself to anything yet. Safeguard your good credit standing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find out what could be annoying your mate and do something constructive about it. Show others you have wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Situations arise at this time in connection with associates that need right handling. Maintain a cheerful manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't neglect important work you have to do early in the day. You are able to communicate well with others now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You could be tempted to have a good time at needless high costs, so forget it. Make this a profitable day instead.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't make matters worse than they are at home by unnecessary arguments. Show others that you can be relied upon.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will understand how best to solve many problems, but will require a very good education in order to be successful in life. Teach early in life to finish whatever is once started. Sports are good in this chart.

ASK OMAR

Q.—We had an unusual occurrence in our game the other night. The contract is immaterial. Declarer played the king of clubs from dummy and I intended winning the trick with the ace. I accidentally pulled two cards from my hand—the ace and the eight. Both were face up on the table, so declarer claimed that both were penalty cards and, as such, he could select which should be played to the trick. He demanded that I play the eight. Was he within his rights?—J. Lewis, West Palm Beach, Fla.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Your opponent's sense of justice seems to be a bit awry— he wanted a double penalty for a single transgression! Fortunately, the law is quite specific on this point. Declarer did not have the right he conferred upon himself. Law 58 states:

"... if more than one card is exposed, he (the defender) must designate the card he proposes to play and each other card becomes a penalty card."

Therefore, you are entitled to designate the ace as the played card. The eight, however, becomes a penalty card and, assuming your ace wins the trick, declarer can demand that you lead the eight of clubs next, or bar a club lead. He also has other options.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, c/o this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

Hospital Stress On Solar Heat

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A solar heating system combined with a heat pump will supply about one-third of the hot water supply needs of Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, whose officials estimate it will result in a 10 percent saving of fuel costs.

A 6,500-sq. ft. array of 4x8 foot fibreglass-covered panels on the roof collect solar heats. By combining the collector system with a heat pump, the solar heat, collected at 40-95 degrees F., can be boosted in the pump's compressors to the 110 deg. F. needed for hot water and then transferred to the hot water system.

New York City 'Elevator City'

NEW YORK (AP) — With over 56,000 elevators providing an estimated 100 million daily rides, New York City is the "Elevator Capital" of the United States, according to Otis Elevator.

New York can also claim the honor of having the world's largest single-vertical transportation system, located at its World Trade Center. Eighteen service maintenance representatives are on duty around the clock to keep the Center's 253 elevators in operating condition to assure safe service for the 50,000 building tenants and some 100,000 daily visitors

Standing 'Seat' Is Attainable

NEW YORK (AP) — With approval of the board of directors, it is possible to buy a "seat" on the New York Stock Exchange to trade stock issues.

The "seat," however, is a misnomer, as all trading is done while standing. The origin of "seat" dates back nearly 200 years when the Exchange was located in a coffee house and members could be seated while transacting business.

N.C. Woman Fought As Soldier In Civil War

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — During the course of the Civil War, North Carolina provided approximately 140,000 soldiers for Confederate service. Of that number, 139,999 were in many ways unremarkable, at least in comparison with one, whose name was Malinda.

Sarah Malinda Pritchard Blalock, alias Sam, North Carolina's only known female Civil War soldier, was the wife pf William McKesson (Keith) Blalock and was living in Watauga or Caldwell counties at the outbreak of the war.

Keith, although a Union sympathizer, enlisted in Company F, 26th Regiment North Carolina Troops, on March 20, 1862, in order to avoid conscription and in hopes of escaping to the Union lines. "Sam" Blalock, actually 20 but described as "a good looking boy, aged 16," enlisted on the same date.

For the next two weeks Private Sam Blalock "did all the duties of a soldier" and was, we are told, "very adept at learning the manual and drill." The new private tented and messed with Keith, who was presumed to be a brother, and watched the other men when they went swimming near Kinston. It was observed, however, that Sam never went in.

Keith speedily grew tired of soldiering and, having endured military life for a few weeks, "went into the bushes and covered himself with poison oak," or, according to another account, poson sumac. The army surgeons, although puzzled as to the nature of his disease (the story that leprosy was diagnozed is probably aocryphal), agreed that he was unfit for service, and he was granted a discharge.

Whereupon Private Sam Blalock presented himself to an incredulous company officer and, in a manner which is lost to posterity, "disclosed the fact" that he was a woman. Private Malinda Blalock was then, according to various company and regimental records, immediately discharged and was "sent home rejoicing."

As far as is known, Malinda's disguise was never penetrated, nor her sex suspected during her brief career as a Confederate soldier. Probably she was found to be an extremely closemouthed recruit and her high voice, when she was obliged to use it, was attributed to her tender years.

Had she remained in the Army, Malinda ultimately might have been found out, but given the apparent obtuseness of her officers, this appears doubtful. As one of the latter gentlemen observed acutely, perhaps with his colleagues' guffaws still ringing in his ears, she was, after all, "dressed in men's clothes." How was he to know Malinda was a woman?

The story of Malinda — or Sam — is just one of the accounts being turned up by Weymouth T. (Hank) Jordan Jr., editor of the Civil War Roster for the Division of Archives and History.

The seventh volume, which covers the 22nd through the 26th North Carolina regiments, carries the story of Private Samuel Blalock.

Try Geothermal Heat Source

MILFORD, Utah (AP) — Geothermal energy which uses the earth's internal heat as its source will be used to generate electricity for the first time in Utah history under terms of an agreement between Utah Power & Light and Phillips.

The agreement provides for UP&L to plan and build a 20-megawatt power plant designed to use geothermal energy produced by Phillips from the Roosevelt Hot Springs near here in southwestern Utah.

This 20-megawatt power plant, to be completed by 1983 if necessary approvals can be obtained, will generate enough electricity to serve the needs of a city of 20,000 people.

Horse Borrowed By Rodeo Rider

All The News For Bookmobile

By ALLISON RELOS NORMENT
Washington Daily News

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Ruth Hodges and Gretchen Cochran share the news and the gossip, the joy and the sadness of Beaufort County — all the offerings from such places as a beauty parlor in Winsteadville to a grade school in Terra Ceia to a country store on Sea Tick Road.

"We've got the nicest friends — everybody tells us all the news, all the little things that happen" say the two women who serve as drivers and librarians for the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Bookmobile, a library on wheels.

"We visit one lady and I doubt she reads her books. She just likes to talk to us," Ms. Hodges said. "People enjoy coming to see us as much as they do the books," said Ms. Cochran.

But books are checked out of the traveling library, which accounts for about half of the total circulation of the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin library system.

Anything that can be found at a branch library can be obtained through the bookmobile, including nonfiction and fiction books for adults, juveniles and children as well as records, tapes, art, paperback books, magazines and large-print books for the visually impaired.

Many people check out items for themselves in addition to relatives and friends.

"One woman fills up a clothes basket for her children and husband not to mention her father-in-law and neighbors," Ms. Hodges said. Other patrons bring bags and boxes, which go home full.

"Another woman in Aurora has formed a 'home station,'" M,s. Hodges said. "She takes bagsful of books to her house and runs a library for the whole neighborhood."

Once a stop is made and the doors are opened, the library is in business, usually with a blast on the bookmobile's horn to announce its arrival.

"Mothers and their children are the most frequent visitors. We get some darling preschoolers," Ms. Cochran said. "a lot of them little ones want us to read to them right then and there. Itg's hard to find time but we make time."

Although borrowers are encouraged to return items at the scheduled time, there are no penalties for late returns. "We don't fine anybody on the bookmobile. We want them to get the most out of their selections," Ms. Hodges said.

Just as the bookmobile's collection varies, so do its patrons, Ms. Hodges said.

She noted that that there is "one old man in Pinetown whbo wouldn't read a book written by a woman. I kept telling him he was missing out on a lot of good books but he told me he had never seen a woman who didn't take three pages to say what a man could say in one sentence."

His visit was so well received that Father Quinn was named an "honorary convict" by the inmates.

Bird Imports Scare Poultry Industry

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — The nation's $10-billion poultry industry has a message for people who buy pet birds, especially young singles who seem to be major purchasers of parakeets, mynahs and parrots — make sure you get a healthy bird.

The poultry industry is worried about an outbreak of Exotic Newcastle Disease in the United States that could cost it billions of dollars and cause consumers to pay much higher prices for broilers and eggs.

The importation of infected pet birds poses the principal danger of an Exotic Newcastle Disease epidemic, says Harold Ford, executive director of the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Association, the largest such organization in the country.

"Imports of pet birds are increasing every year," said Ford. "This increases the possibility of birds getting into the country, around the quarantine."

Exotic Newcastle Disease, endemic in many countries, is a highly contagious, deadly virus affecting all species of birds for which there is no effective vaccine. It kills many of the birds it infects, cuts production and shortens the lives of the birds it doesn't destroy.

Once an epidemic starts, there is no way of stopping it except through the slaughter of all exposed poultry and strict enforcement of quarantine and sanitary regulations. The disease is not a hazard to humans.

An epidemic of Exotic Newcastle in southern California in 1971 led to the killing of 12 million chickens and cost the federal government $56 million in indemnities to farmers and eradication expenses.

Last year an outbreak of the ailment was traced to an importer of pet birds in Miami. Forty-two states, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Canada, the Bahamas and The Netherlands were involved in the eradication effort. More than 10,000 birds were destroyed. The cost to the government was $2.8 million in the successful eradication program, plus $500,000 paid to owners of the destroyed birds.

That epidemic triggered the formation of the National VVND Advisory Committee (Viscerotropic Velogenic Newcastle Disease) made up of poultry industry representatives, university researchers and government animal science agencies. The committee held a January meeting in Atlanta to formulate plans for tightening the federal quarantine of imported birds and helping poultry farmers prevent the disease from coming onto their farms.

The committee also wants to develop an effective vaccine and start a program to completely protect the poultry industry's valuable primary breeding stock from contracting Exotic Newcastle if there is an outbreak. The latter goal could be accomplished, Ford said, through a controlled environment where temperature and air flow of a breeder house is regulated and all exposure of the breeding stock with other animals eliminated.

Because of the growing demand for pet birds, Ford said imports from Caribbean and South American countries are increasing every year. "The prices of these birds are fantastic," he said. "The price of a parrot starts at $500.

"It's amazing how the young singles are going after birds as pets. They can't take care of a dog or cat and work at the same time, but they can take care of a bird."

He urged buyers of pet birds to make their purchases at a reputable shop and to ask for a certificate that the bird they bought is disease free.

High profits in the sale of birds has led to widespread smuggling, according to Ford. "If they can smuggle those birds into the United States, they can do it fairly cheap and make a huge profit."

Ford said the poultry industry does not want to stop the importation of pet birds. "But we do want all of them to go through the federal quarantine, where they are held for 30 days." The industry also wants to set up minimum requirements for the housing and confinement security of pet birds and peroidic inspection of premises where pet birds are imported or sold.

The quarantine must be extended, he said, to include the maximum of two pet birds that now can be brought in on tourist visas. The VVND committee also wants birds certified to be free of disease to be banded at the federal quarantine stations.

Arkansas is the nation's biggest producer of broilers, followed by Georgia. California is first in egg production and Georgia second.

HAROLD FORD says importation of infected pet birds poses the principal danger of an Exotic Newcastle Disease epidemic. (UPI Photo)

'Burn Alert' By Shriners

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Shriners fraternal organization has issued the group's annual "burn alert" to warn about the danger tens of thousands of children face of being scalded by hot tap water, especially in their bathtubs.

Dr. F.T. H'Doubler, who heads the international fraternal and philanthropical organization, said an estimated 2 million Americans suffer serious burns each year, chiefly in their own homes. Kitchens and bathrooms are the most dangerous areas — two-thirds of the serious burns children suffer are in these areas, and the bathtub is the scene of most fatal scalds.

Dr. H'Doubler warned that it takes less than three seconds to receive second or third degree burns from 145-degree tapwater — and that most home water heaters are set at 140 to 150 degrees.

Reapportionment Process Often Long, Complex

By MARY BOHLEN
United Press International

Ten years ago, Ronald Reagan vetoed California's legislative redistricting plan, calling one of the proposed districts "the worst example of deliberate gerrymandering" the state had ever seen.

Reagan won't be handling reapportionment plans this year and California voters have changed their state's constitution in an effort to prevent abuses.

But as surely as sunrise and taxes, lawmakers around the nation will be looking out for themselves, their colleagues and their party as they redraw the boundaries of congressional and legislative districts on the basis of data from the 1980 census.

Almost no one is looking forward to the task, although a lot of politicians have been planning for it for years. The job is almost never simple and usually involves the fiercest political scratching, clawing and bloodletting of any part of the political process.

"Watching reapportionment develop is sort of like watching bologna being made," said Maryland Senate Republican Leader Edward Mason. "It's very unappetizing."

The reason is simple: Political lives are at stake. Armed with voting patterns and other statistical data, the party in power can create friendly districts and dismember those which have voted for the opposition. In cases where states are losing congressional seats, the party must choose which incumbents will fall on their own swords.

"It's a very difficult task. It's like choosing between your own children," said Finis Smith, a Democratic state senator in Oklahoma.

The details of reapportionment — or remapping or redistricting — vary from state to state. Most states let the legislature have at least the first crack at the process but nine have set up boards or commissions to do the job.

Often, the process gets so complex and-or bloody that courts are forced to step in.

In some southern states, federal judges have taken a hand in redistricting to ensure minority representation. The federal courts actually called off the 1964 Connecticut legislative election after no agreement could be reached. State lawmakers there ended up getting two two-year terms for the price of one.

And in Illinois in 1964, legislative candidates ran at-large on a huge statewide "bedsheet ballot" because the political leaders could not draw a new map. Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson III and Republican Earl D. Eisenhower led their party tickets, as name recognition clearly became the dominant factor.

The process is meant to even voters' representation with "one man-one vote" the guideline. But it often is used to other ends while attempts to reform the process are generally rejected by the lawmakers.

In some states this year Democrats still in control appear certain to try to counter Republican inroads from the Reagan landslide. Republicans will no doubt try to cut away Democratic districts where they have control.

Eastern and Midwestern states which have lost population to the Sun Belt will be fighting over a diminished number of districts. Cities will try to expand districts into suburbs to retain seats they otherwise would lose because of population shifts to the suburbs.

Timetables for redistricting vary by state.

New Jersey, which holds legislative elections in 1981, is especially pressured to complete reapportionment quickly. State officials say they may have to push back the June primary. They also could use 1970 population figures or the unofficial 1980 census data for a temporary map and draw a final one later.

Kansas, which used agricultural census data to redraw its legislative boundaries in 1979, may be in the best shape, with only congressional reapportionment left on the agenda.

New York has no deadline to complete reapportionment. If Empire State lawmakers can't agree by the decade's sixth year, the previous decade's districts stand through the final four years of the 1980s.

Kentucky doesn't have a legislative session until 1982 and other states plan to postpone redistricting even though they have sessions.

In some states, politicians are trying to schedule the reapportionment fight so it will interfere with other business as little as possible.

In Illinois, where voters approved a constitutional amendment last November reducing the size of the House from 177 members to 118, many worry that little regular legislation will be considered as representatives try to protect themselves from oblivion.

Idaho Gov. John V. Evans and House Speaker Ralph Olmstead said a special session might be the best way to handle reapportionment because "that way we can handle other important issues first, without complicating them with questions of where the new districts should be."

State timetables aside, planning for reapportionment began several years ago, particularly by the Republican Party.

When Bill Brock became party chairman in 1976, he decided the GOP needed to concentrate on controlling more statehouses, partly so it would be in the best possible position for congressional and legislative reapportionment. To further that goal, the GOP pumped $3 million into last year's state legislative campaigns.

The effort was rewarded by a net gain of about 200 seats nationwide. Republicans won several key legislative chambers — including the Illinois House, the Ohio Senate, the Pennsylvania Senate and the Washington House.

Republicans now control both houses in 14 state legislatures, the Democrats in 28. Republicans outnumber Democrats by a 2-1 margin in the unicameral Nebraska Legislature and control is divided in seven states.

Also in preparation for reapportionment, many state party leaders are contracting with consulting and computer firms to provide quick analyses of the relative benefits and drawbacks of specific district proposals.

What can be expected when the actual drawing of boundaries begins? Party loyalty and in some cases the law of the jungle.

A Connecticut Democrat got to the point when asked the qualifications needed to serve on his state's reapportionment committee. He replied: "Ability, loyalty, more loyalty, a little more ability, loyalty, trustworthiness and loyalty."

Whether it's a party that's been out of power trying to get back in, or one that's already in control and trying to consolidate, it's a time for solidarity.

Even in states where a commission or board dictates the process, partisanship is plentiful. Democrats, for instance, control Ohio's five-person reapportionment board and observers say there will be no compromises as Democrats try to remap the Senate back into their hands.

As an example of what might happen, they point to an S-shaped district included in the 1971 map which winds through northeastern Ohio and two thin districts each almost 150 miles long.

Although those boundaries would appear to violate the state constitution's mandate for "compact and contiguous" districts, legal challenges have been bottled up for almost 10 years by a friendly Democratic federal judge who got his hands on a test suit.

Ohio is far from alone in efforts to gerrymander — a term taken from 1811 Massachusetts Gov. Elbridge Gerry's attempts to draw districts which his critics said resembled salamanders.

As California governor, Reagan vetoed his the Democratic-controlled legislature's redistricting plan 10 years ago. He called one of the plan's proposed districts "possibly the worst example of deliberate gerrymandering in the history of California."

The district was gleefully dubbed the "Cory-dor" for its advantage to then Orange County Assemblyman — now state controller — Ken Cory. The district wove from Santa Ana toward Los Angeles, with narrow corridors linking Democratic strongholds.

Republicans play the game, too. In Kansas in 1979 a young, liberal member of the state House watched as the GOP stripped a university area from his constituency. In that case, the Democrats cried foul.

And even in cases where gerrymandering isn't an issue, the bloodletting can be fierce. In Baltimore, for instance, intrastate population shifts are likely to cost the city two of its 11 state senators.

"It will be like 11 tigers fighting for nine bits of meat," a House of Delegates member said of the reapportionment prospects.

Although the biggest problems usually involve legislative seats, congressional redistricting also gets snarled, with lawmakers looking out for the well-being of friends, former colleagues, their party and their own political futures.

This year the task will be especially difficult in states in the Northeast and Midwest, which have lost population to the "Sun Belt" states of the South and West.

The Census Bureau determined changes in congressional representation are required in 21 states — New York losing five seats and one or two seats vanishing in Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Jersey and South Dakota.

Winners in the congressional remap sweepstakes include Florida, with four new seats, Texas with three and California with two. Gaining one seat each are Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah and Washington.

In addition, population shifts within some states mean inner city areas will lose representation to the suburbs — or to districts which cross city limits into the suburbs.

In Chicago, two newly elected black congressmen began protesting even before they took office that they were being targeted for early retirement when the Illinois delegation shrinks from 24 to 22 members.

Turn House To Museum

GEORGE WILSON in basement of the Harriet Beacher Stowe house, which 130 years ago was a stop on the "Underground Railroad". (UPI Photo)

By RICK VAN SANT

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The rafters are low in the basement of Harriet Beecher Stowe's old home.

Towering, 6-foot-8-inch George Wilson has to stoop when he peers into the basement cubbyholes where slaves scrambled to freedom 130 years ago.

He feels no inconvenience in stooping. He senses his "roots" are in the basement — and throughout the historic house.

"If this house wasn't here," he says, "maybe I wouldn't be here."

Wilson, a black and a former All-America basketball player, has helped renovate the once-deteriorating home. Now it is a "living museum," open free of charge to the public.

The big, white, two-story home enhances a hill in the old Walnut Hills section of the city. It was the pre-Civil War home of Harriet Beecher Stowe (1811-1896).

All Mrs. Stowe did, some contend, is start the Civil War.

Start it or not, there's no doubt the brilliant white woman triggered immense sentiment against slavery, a key cause of the war.

She wrote the powerful, landmark anti-slavery novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in 1851-52. The ideas for the book came while she lived in Cincinnati from 1832-50.

Her father, Rev. Lyman Beecher, was dedicated to freeing and educating slaves. He used his house as a stop on the "Underground Railroad," a system by which slaves escaped the southern U.S. to freedom in the north.

Under the cover of darkness, slaves crept through the woods then surrounding the Stowe home. They slipped through a tunnel leading into the basement and slept on straw in small hideaways until the time was right to move on north.

Although the house prompted Mrs. Stowe to help change the course of the nation, the home had fallen into disrepair in recent years.

"It was a group of students that really sparked the renovation," says Luther Church, executive director of Citizens' Committee on Youth, the local group which oversaw restoration.

"Four years ago, they went to the house to do research and found it padlocked. The home was run down. Just appalling."

After more than three years of government-assisted youth work, the home has been meticulously restored.

"This was a family of character, of ideals," says Marybell Brown, museum coordinator. "This is a house of history, of humanitarianism. This house represents the way men should live together.

"But, doing research for the museum was difficult to take sometimes. Slavery was total dehumanization. It was a very sadistic social system. Some of the slaves were treated worse than animals."

Mrs. Stowe and her husband, also a minister, moved to Brunswick, Maine, in 1850, where she wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"But," says Ms. Brown, "obviously everything she learned here went into that book."

The "humanitarianism" that sparked Mrs. Stowe in Cincinnati carried risks.

"Cincinnati was supposedly a free area, but slaves were kept just across the Ohio River in Kentucky and bounty hunters operated in this area," said Ms. Brown. "You might say Cincinnati was just lukewarm to the Underground Railroad. So, the basement tunnels were needed in this house."

Visiting the basement is an eerie sensation. To some, like Wilson, it goes beyond that.

"I get mad when I come down here," he says. "It angers me that people had to go through all this just to try to pull even with other people — to get what they always should have had."

Ice Cream's Value Noted

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A nutrition specialist for the Los Angeles public school system thinks ice cream belongs in school lunch programs.

Dietitian Pat Orman says standard vanilla ice cream in California provides significant amounts of protein, calcium and riboflavin, enough to put it in one of the four basic food groups. Ms. Orman says every half-cup serving of standard vanilla ice cream also provides more protein, calcium and riboflavin than an equal amount of plain yogurt — although it also provides more calories.

She says the additives in the frozen dessert come from natural edible sources and fully meet government standards. Guar gum, for example, is a stabilizer extracted from a plant of the same name. Carrageenan, another stabilizer, is an extract of Irish moss. Vegetable mono-and diglycerides, all emulsifiers, are derived from natural vegetable oils, she said, mostly soy oil. Cellulose gum, a thickener, comes from plant cellulose. Polysorbate-80, also an emulsifier, combs from edible fats.

LOSES CITIZENSHIP

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow has confirmed that Vasily Aksynov, one of the nation's best known authors, has been stripped of his citizenship for activity "hostile to the Soviet Union."

Molly Rush Hopes To Explain Action

MOLLY RUSH hopes to explain at her forthcoming trial the "conscientious reasons" for destroying two unarmed nose cones for missile warheads in a raid on an assembly plant. (UPI Photo)

By JOHN O'BRIEN

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Brothers Philip and the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, veterans of many "peace action" arrests, were there. But Molly Rush was new to the big time.

Until then, she had drawn only minor charges during three previous peace demonstrations and one $25 fine.

It was last Sept. 9.

Just after opening time, Ms. Rush, 45, the mother of six, another woman, the Berrigans and four other men entered the General Electric Re-entry Division plant in King of Prussia, Pa., by the back door.

Two talked with a security guard while the other six walked farther into the building. She said they quickly spotted two unarmed nose cones for nuclear missile warheads. They smashed holes in one with ordinary hammers and dented the other, destroying both.

They poured human blood over the cones and what turned out to be top secret papers that were scattered on a nearby desk, she said. Minutes later, police arrested the eight as they prayed.

They go to trial Feb. 23 on charges that have maximum sentences totaling 63 years — the worst is burglary, at 20 years. But the group is most concerned about the charge of simple assault, lodged because the guard claimed he was pinned against a wall.

"We're concerned because we want it to be so clear about our non-violence," Ms. Rush said. "No force was used on (the guard). We are opposed to any form of violence."

Ms. Rush, who is about to become a grandmother, spoke over coffee in her two-story, red-brick house where she lives with her draftsman-designer husband, William, and five of their children, ages 12 to 25. She was released, as were three others, on reduced bond Nov. 26 after she had been transferred among five county jails throughout the state.

Ms. Rush said she was no "hell raiser" while growing up as the eldest of eight children. "Sometimes I think I was too obedient."

"Basically, I think if laws are just, if they reflect fairness, I'm willing to go along with them. I see civil disobedience as a very limited kind of situation where you challenge laws for the most part to change them and you're willing to take the consequences. I think conscience has to come first."

Eighteen years ago, when sit-ins were occurring in the South, Ms. Rush heard a black priest speak on civil rights. She now is full-time director of the Thomas Merton Center in Pittsburgh, which works for peace and social justice through education, lobbying and demonstrations. The center also has set up an inner-city soup kitchen and helped institute a food bank.

The culmination of those 18 years came Sept. 9 and the big question is: Why did she do it?

"I think, first of all, for all of us who participated, it was an attempt to speak the truth about what's going on and how serious the need for a response is," she said.

She says time is running out because experts agree a nuclear war probably will occur within 20 years and the arms race has taken a "quantum leap" with highly accurate Mark 12-A warheads, which give the U.S. first-strike capability. The nose cones are assembled at the GE plant.

Ms. Rush said she also hopes the raid will help people "get out of the helplessness and hopelessness of the nuclear weapons question — by their silence they allow this arms buildup that is almost certain to lead us to mass suicide."

"I'd like to get them to look at the question in terms of their own kids' lives," she said. "What I'm saying is that I'm willing to put my life on the line because it's my kids' lives at stake."

The eight hope to explain in the trial the "conscientious reasons" for the raid and to raise issues of international law, she said. But they think the judge will try to restrict testimony to the facts of the raid.

Lawyers say she should be prepared to face five to 10 years in prison. Jail was dehumanizing and boring, she said, but her family's support and hundreds of letters from well-wishers bolstered her.

"People want some kind of guarantee that by acting they'll be successful or effective. I'm saying it's worth doing just for the sake of being honest with yourself. If I never save my kids' lives, at least I know I did what I could and I feel very good about that.

"I think people subconsciously know that every new weapon we add to our stockpile increases the likelihood of nuclear war and makes us more insecure, but they are afraid of looking at it.

"I think more than anything, that's what led me to do what I'm doing. People need an example of someone really taking some kind of action — it's taking a risk, but it's more risk-taking not to do anything."

Extent Of Prader-Willi Syndrome Not Even Known

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer

EDINA, Minn. (AP) — Richard and Marge Wett used to lock their daughter Lisa in her room every night. If they didn't, she would get up and eat anything she could get her hands on.

It was one way the Wett family found was successful in helping 15-year-old Lisa, who was born with Prader-Willi Syndrome.

The constant desire for food is one of the more obvious symptoms of Prader-Willi Syndrome, a birth defect first described in 1956.

Prader-Willi victims, 95 percent of whom show some degree of mental retardation, have very rigid personalities. Temper tantrums and stubbornness are typical behavioral problems.

Short stature, underdeveloped genitals, lack of muscle tone, strength and coordination and a diminished sense of pain also are characteristic of the syndrome.

The Wetts knew immediately that there was something wrong with Lisa when she was born. She was a floppy baby and didn't look like her five older brothers and sisters.

"We started exercising her when she was an infant," Mrs. Wett says. When Lisa was 2, the Wetts enrolled her in the nursery school at a physical rehabilitation center.

Wett, a physician, says the family did not learn what Lisa's problem was until she was 11, when they read a magazine article about Prader-Willi Syndrome.

Wett says researchers don't know how many cases of Prader-Willi Syndrome exist, largely because most cases have not been diagnosed.

Because of the lack of information, the Wetts say many families faced with rearing a Prader-Willi Syndrome child just don't know how to deal with the problem.

To help those families, the Prader-Willi Syndrome Association was founded in 1975 and now has about 600 members throughout the world.

Mrs. Wett became executive director of the association in 1979.

The association publishes a bimonthly newsletter which informs members of any new information about the syndrome and offers a forum for exchange of ideas among families learning to deal with Prader-Willi Syndrome.

Whether Prader-Willi people can ever function and support themselves depends largely on the severity of their individual handicap. The IQ of Prader-Willi people is usually in the 70s range, but can fall below 40 or be above 100.

"Prader-Willi people are educable but they have very definite education problems. Mainstreaming hasn't worked out very well," Mrs. Wett says.

Lisa was mainstreamed for a few months in junior high school, but Mrs. Wett termed the experiment "a disaster. Prader-Willi people are thinking about food, they are not in class at all. There's no way you can change that."

Lisa, who is 5 feet tall and weighs 135 pounds, now attends a special school for the handicapped where she is in a self-contained class and teachers are aware of the problems that can arise if she has any access to food. Lisa is technically a ninth grader. She reads and writes.

Parents are urged by the Prader-Willi Syndrome Association to draw their afflicted child's attention to work that goes on around them every day, such as garbage collection and deliveries, and to instill in the child a respect for workers in all kinds of jobs.

"Most of the Prader-Willi people that I know of have been employed in sheltered workshops. But that has not been extremely successful because their rigid behavior often causes problems. They are very capable of being employed, but because of their special food problems it hasn't been very successful," says Mrs. Wett.

"I think the hope lies more in research to overcome their problems because of the circumstances that now make holding jobs unsuccessful." The constant monitoring necessary to control the diet of a person with Prader-Willi Syndrome puts a major strain on families.

"Most parents have locks installed on their cupboards and refrigerators," Mrs. Wett says. "One of the hardest things to deal with is the realization that it is a lifelong problem, that you have to get used to sleeping with the potato chips under your bed."

Prader-Willi people are most interested in the quantity of food they eat and don't care much about what they are eating, Mrs. Wett says. They also don't become ill from eating too much food, she notes.

Because of the constant supervision required, the Wetts say they feel a group home designed for total food control is the best place for those with Prader-Willi Syndrome to live.

Lisa will be one of about 15 people who will move into a new home for Prader-Willi victims in Minnetonka.

"There are people who ask how we can consider placing our daughter in a home, but they don't really understand Prader-Willi," Mrs. Wett says.

"There comes a time when you burn out. ... Then you either give up or you look for alternatives."

Solar Energy Centers Set Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Regional Solar Energy Centers have been established by Congress to serve the nation's Northeast, Western, Southern and Mid-American regions for the development and public acceptance of solar energy.

The centers are acting as the focal point for solar-energy activities and information in their respective regions. This includes working with area organizations and governmental bodies, providing technical information and training assistance to private industry and educating consumers about passive solar energy and its applications.

Life Of Misery For Haitians In A Promised Land

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — In the squalor of a tiny two-room apartment just a few blocks from one of Miami's richest waterfront neighborhoods, a family of 12 passes around a bowl of white rice meal — the only food they will eat this day.

Grimy paint flakes off walls. Roaches scurry across the floor. Infants sleep in the arms of their mothers who lounge on bare wooden floorboards. There is no furniture. In the corner, there is a single hot plate, the kitchen.

These are Haitians, refugees in a city that has become a haven for the hundreds of thousands of people fleeing poverty, oppression and political instability in the Caribbean and Latin America.

The color of their skin may be their biggest problem.

While newly arrived refugees from Cuba are welcomed into the mainstream of life in the thriving Little Havana exile community and those fleeing Nicaragua, El Salvador and other unstable Latin American countries are easily absorbed by this Spanish-speaking city, the Haitians are outcasts.

More than 25,000 refugees have fled that impoverished island, believing they would find "streets of gold" in Miami where wealth and opportunity were available to all.

Instead, they learn quickly that there is only one place to flee — into a teeming ghetto called Little Haiti where they live in fear of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Macoute, the Haitian government's dreaded secret police.

It is one of the worst ghettos in the nation. The buildings are decrepit; a musty, old smell pervades the shops; young men lounge on street corners or sprawl asleep on the hoods of cars.

There are 27,000 Haitians in the Miami area, and the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, a Roman Catholic priest and a community leader who runs the Haitian Refugee Center, estimates there are 12,000 crammed into one 10-square block area. Others think there may be as many as 17,000. No one knows. No one counts.

"We suffer. We lack. Emotionally, we miss our country. Politically, we are at the very bottom," says Father Jean-Juste.

"Our dignity has been taken away and we have lost our pride. We cannot speak the language...We are frustrated, very, very frustrated."

They arrived here aboard rickety boats with sails made of rags after a treacherous, often ill-fated 800-mile journey.

For the most part, they are uneducated and unfamiliar with the customs of their new homeland; they speak Creole, a French-based tongue that is totally unknown to most Miamians; they are unwanted by a government that believes they flee to this country only for economic benefit, and they are black in a city beset by festering racial problems.

Though city fathers project a united front and portray Miami as a city working to solve the problems that sparked May's bloody race riots that took 18 lives, there is an underlying feeling of hostility among Dade County's three dominant ethnic groups.

Anglos resent Latins because Spanish rapidly is becoming this city's first language and it's difficult to find a well-paying job unless you're bilingual. Latins, on the other hand, defend their right to speak Spanish as a first language and practice their own culture.

American blacks feel left out of the economic and social mainstream of life and are increasingly resentful of the criminal justice system. They also fear that refugees may take away jobs and money that would otherwise go to the black community.

Says managing editor Garth Reeves Jr. of the The Miami Times, the self-proclaimed voice of the city's black community:

"One would think a black American would look at and understand the plight of the Haitians and look upon them as our brothers and sisters. But instead, we have found a resentment that could be based on anything from what Haitians do to the labor market in this country to the fact that these people are simply different and unlike us in minor ways."

There is little evidence of any political activity on the Haitians' behalf, despite statements of support from black leaders.

Haitians and their supporters complain that the U.S. government and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in particular, treat Cuban refugees one way and Haitians another.

"The Cubans, they have become a political society. Many thousands of them have become citizens and have political clout," says Jean-Juste. "They will speak out and some city official will listen, some congressman will listen or some senator or federal official will listen.

"But...we have been knocking on all doors trying to get legal residency. But even if they do, the Haitians refuse to become involved politically because they fear what might happen to their folks in Haiti."

The differences between the receptions given Cubans and Haitians were clear during the "Freedom Flotilla" refugee influx that brought more than 125,000 people from Cuba to this country.

When Cubans arrived in Key West, they were greeted warmly by Cuban-American volunteers who provided them meals, coffee and clothes. Almost every boatload was met with cheers.

Haitians arriving at the same time were met only by government officers wearing surgical masks, gloves and other protective clothing designed to ward off diseases supposedly transmitted by the refugees.

Once preliminary health checkups were made, the Haitians were quickly packed off to a federal prison, and when that became overcrowded, to a makeshift refugee camp on the edge of the Everglades.

The government's standard explanation has been that the Cubans are fleeing Fidel Castro's Communist regime. The Haitians, on the other hand, are fleeing here only for economic reasons, the INS contends. To back up that statement, they point to figures showing Haiti to be one of the poorest countries in the world.

Despite charges that President-for-Life Jean Claude (Baby Doc) Duvalier continues to oppress the people of Haiti, federal officials quickly point out that his government is anti-Communist and friendly toward the United States.

The Haitian issue seems certain to heat up. There are as many as 40,000 Haitians who have sought refuge in the Bahamas, and the Bahamian government, answering social and employment concerns, vows to evict them by the end of January.

Father Jean-Juste is uncertain about improved prospects for refugees under the new Reagan administration.

"We know for a fact in history that people won't be oppressed forever," Father Jean-Juste says. "Unfortunately, what usually comes next is violence. And we're trying to tell the U.S. government that the time is now to act before a worse situation comes. But no one will listen."

Meanwhile, the priest says, despite the poverty, malnutrition and poor conditions, the Haitians still will be happy in their ghetto.

"In everything here, there is good and bad, but in the balance, we are better to stay here and hope for a better future than stay in Haiti under all the heavy treads and not know if the future promises us anything at all."

Driving Tips For Winter

NEW YORK (UPI) — For people who must drive on ice-and-or snow-covered roads, the Insurance Information Institute offers these safety tips:

—Don't be a peephole driver. Before you get in the car, clear any ice and snow off the entire windshield and back window.

—Turn slowly on wet and slick areas.

—Watch for icy patches on overpasses, bridges and hills. All freeze quickly — usually before other road surfaces.

—Increase the distance between your car and others to help avoid sudden stops.

—Be especially cautious approaching intersections. Stop and go traffic there makes road surfaces very slippery.

—Be especially careful also when braking or accelerating at dusk or dawn, when streets and roads are iciest.

—If your car starts to skid, steer in the direction the car is headed. Take your foot of the accelerator and don't start braking until the car has slowed and you have regained control.

PLANNING A SUMMIT

TOKYO (AP — Two high-ranking Japanese officials will visit the U.S. in the next two months to make arrangements for a summit meeting between President Reagan and Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in early May, Tokyo newspapers say.

ICE ON THE FORWARD DECK — Bracing himself with a bare hand against a frigid aluminum mast aboard the Peril this crewman moves across a tilting deck to adjust the Spinnaker. The Peril owned by Martin and Mann, Raleigh, was on the downwind leg of the January 10 race about two miles east of New Bern.

THE NEUSE RIVER

FROST BITE SERIES

The winter water of the Neuse River, east of New Bern, is the scene of the Fairfield Harbour Winter Cup, the largest sailing race series to be held annually on the coast of the Carolinas.

Commonly called "the frost bite" it is in its third year and this year has 50 boats registered for the ten races that run during two weekends in November and December and one each in January and February.

The boats range in size from 34 feet to 21 feet with an average crew of four. The race is divided into four classes of boats. The larger with more sail area and a greater national handicap are in the A division, the slowest boats with the lowest handicap are in the D division.

Trophies are awarded to the winner in each class and because of the handicap all are deemed equal at the starting line. Theoretically, any boat from the smallest to the largest is capable of winning the fleet trophy dependent only on the skill of the skipper and his crew.

A boat must sail in six of the ten races and the boat with the highest number of points wins. The fleet and class winners are the boats that have sailed the best six.

Les Bernabi is race chairman. Bernabi sets varying courses and distances from six to 12 miles for each race, starting at a point just outside Fairfield Harbour Marina where the Neuse is two miles wide. Each race has two laps upwind, one downwind.

The course on Saturday, January 10 carried the boats northwest to where downtown New Bern was clearly visible, then three-and-a-half miles downwind and again upwind to the finish. This eight miles was sailed by the fleet leading boat, the Fever, in an hour and 35 minutes. Upwind the Fever tacked at 5½ knots, downwind running 7 to 9 knots.

The weather plays a prominent and varied role. On December 7 it was a sunny 78 degrees. But no wind. And since no boat could finish in the three hour time limit the race was canceled.

The temperature at race-time, January 10, was in the low 30s with 15 knot winds. For the last race in December as crews of 34 boats gathered at the marina, it was 22 degrees. By race time it had climbed to near freezing. Bernabi set a short six mile course and with 22 knot winds, it was a quickie.

Bernabi likes to tell about the February race the first year of the series. The crews made port with spray frozen to decks and beards and icicles hanging from lines.

Why do they do it — Is it as one of the crew aboard the Fever said, "My wife thinks I'm crazy"? Or is it as a skipper commented, "the best organized and best sailed competition in the Carolinas"? A challenge?

The final in the series of the frost bite races will be held on Saturday, February 14. The public is invited to be on hand at Fairfield Harbour to see the sailboats get underway, or to view the race from vantage points along the Neuse River.

LEADING THE FLEET — At the start were left to right: Lisa Overby, Chapel Hill in the Harem, the Contagious and Ace In The Hole, a San Juan 34 owned by Elton Matheson, Cary. The faster boats, in most cases the larger ones with more sail area and more handicap, started five minutes before the rest of the fleet.

AT THE WHEEL — Josh Mills of New Bern on his Ranger 33, Fever, steers his way toward victory. With one more date, February 14, left in the series, a January first and the Contagious in Florida, the Fever needs just a third place showing.

WINCHING THE BLOOPER — Under a canopy of all the sail she'll carry, Randy Taylor hoists the blooper aboard the Fever. Running with the spinnaker at eight knots downwind and close behind the fleet leader in points a crew member yelled "let's make it 9." Another replied "Let's go for it" and out came the blooper.

LEADER — One hour and eight minutes from the start, the Contagious, out of Wilmington, owned by Steve Robertson, Raleigh, carried the owner and his crew of five across the finish line. But at the end of December this boat was moved South for Florida races. And the best six races out of 10 count. In January Josh Mills of New Bern took a first and needs only a third place finish in February to wrestle the fleet trophy from the Contagious.

SPRAY FLIES — Beating to weather the heeling Sneaky Snatch of Scratch Faulkner, Goldsboro, shows her keel. Crossing the finish line awarded this boat a fifth place in the December fleet standings.

The Sundial

Solar Home Spotlights Sunroom

By Jerry Bishop

Soaring two stories high and visible from the master bedroom, the sunroom dominates the Sundial, an up-to-the-minute solar home.

Rooftop solar collectors are shown on the south-facing side, and the heat storage area is beneath the sunroom floor. To conserve maximum heat, an airlock type entry is shown.

Comfort and living space are emphasized as much as energy efficiency, and the Sundial furnishes such extras as sliding glass doors joining the master bedroom to a balcony overlooking a sunroom, and an exterior deck off the second bedroom.

The entry is accessible from the garage and utility room, and at the left, living room, dining room, and kitchen form a cluster of activity areas. Sliding glass doors link living room with sunroom and dining room with patio, and the U-shaped kitchen calls for a pass-through to the living room. The handy powder room is sandwiched between living room and kitchen.

The sunroom reaches two stories to offer a cozy retreat for people and plants, summer or winter.

Upstairs, three bedrooms encircle an expansive bath. The 14-ft. master bedroom is distinguished by double closets and access to the long storage area.

Tableware, Giftware On Display In Atlantic City

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

To most Americans, the image of Atlantic City summons to mind cool ocean breezes, the boardwalk and salt water taffy.

But to the manufacturers and retailers of tableware and giftware, Atlantic City means January winds and a chance to check out what's new for the table top at the industry's annual china and glass market at Convention Hall.

At the recently concluded show, thousands of buyers viewed the wares of almost 2,000 exhibitors from the U.S. and a number of foreign countries. The consensus among manufacturers was that the economic uncertainties have got both consumers and retailers in a conservative frame of mind.

As a consequence, the manufacturers concentrated on providing safe, attractive choices among traditionally popular styles. As one put it, this was not the market to be too adventurous.

In terms of design, there were several major trends, including: a continued emphasis on formal china patterns; the introduction of many charming, small-figured patterns; a large number of blue and white china combinations; and a continuation of the use of luscious, iee-cream pastels in dinnerware, table linens, giftwares and accessories.

While it may sometimes appear that the latest, most outrageous designs are all anyone ever talks about at a market, the china and glass market is often the exception to the rule.

Tableware sales are dominated by the bridal business which is said to account for at least half of all sales. "And brides are not usually in the mood to take a chance on something outrageous," noted James A. De Prez, vice president and merchandise manager of Noritake Co. Inc., a manufacturer of dinnerware.

According to De Prez, brides look for tried and true patterns they think they can live with for the rest of their lives. This conservative attitude is particularly strong today, with prices considerably higher than in the past. For many brides, the first set of china will be the only set, he added.

Although there are thousands of china patterns available at any given time, and hundreds of new ones introduced each year, only about 50 patterns account for as much as three-fifths of the sales, said De Prez.

The basic conservatism of the china market was also described by Francis J. Dallahan, vice president of marketing for Lenox china and crystal.

Dallahan noted that nowadays the natural state of affairs is even stronger than usual.

"Thera is a strong and continuing return to quality and to traditional design," he said, adding that "Lenox's best selling pattern since 1975, for example, is one introduced in 1918, and reintroduced in 1973.

"Even in casual dinnerware, Lenox's sales indicate a distinct trend toward fine china-like styles," he said.

If traditional, formal floral patterns were in the majority, there was also a strong showing of small, countrified patterns in which tiny flowers or geometric patterns were scattered all over the plate or appeared only on the rim. The small figures were sometimes in muted tones and sometimes in bright primary colors. The feeling was either that of a French country farmhouse or of a simple American country setting.

This dinnerware style is part of the larger popularity of American country furnishings. Virtually every aspect of the home-furnishings industry is now on board the country bandwagon. And an obvious offshoot of the country craze is the large number of chicken and rooster motifs seen on dinnerware, cookware and table accessories.

With tradition in ascendancy, what about modern design? At this market, it appeared to be rather left out, although several manufacturers, ever hopeful, said they could predict a brighter future for contemporary design.

Jay Block, of Block China, a firm noted for its interest in innovation, said that while it was harder to be an innovator today than it used to be, since costs had escalated and consumers had gotten more conservative, it was still possible.

Block introduced five primary-color geometric designs. There were additional isolated examples of well-thought-out modern design. A collection of cooking and serving pieces by Corning was streamlined and unusual. The cookware goes from freezer to oven, to stovetop to microwave oven and comes to the table to rest on its own specially-made heat-absorbent placemat.

A trend that appears to combine both traditional and modern was the use of pastel colors. Ice-cream pink, sea-foam green, lavender and baby blue showed up on everything from vases, glasses and barware to table linens, and plastic waste baskets.

Agricultural Extension Service Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Just what do nematodes do to plants that cause them to be harmful? (R.C., Wilmington)

A. They interrupt their pluming, figuratively speaking. Nematodes are tiny, eel-like worms that attach themselves to the roots of plants. They feed on the roots and interfere with the tissues which carry nutrients and water to the stems and branches. They also create openings in the roots which permit other disease organisms to enter the plants. Some nematodes, such as the root knot species, actually enter the roots of plants. (Harry Duncan, extension plant pathology specialist)

Q. How effective are windbreaks in reducing the amount of energy needed to heat a home? (W.P., Durham)

A. Studies show that fuel costs can be reduced from 10 to 30 percent, depending on your particular situation. Dense windbreaks can reduce wind velocity by 75 to 80 percent, and wind or air movement can account for up to one-third of the heat loss from a building. This is the loss that occurs along walls and over the roof. Strong gusts of wind can also penetrate doors, windows and the foundation. In summary, you should be able to reduce your winter heating and summer cooling by good selection and placement of ornamental trees and shrubs. And don't forget the weatherstripping around doors and windows. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

Q. I have some vegtable seed that are at least two years old. How can I tell if they are still worth planting? (C.M., Apex)

A. Count out 100 seed and place them on a moistened paper towel. Place the towel in a covered container and set it out of direct sunlight. The number of seed that sprout is the percent germination you can expect. But you should remember that a seed can germinate and still be too weak to emerge from the soil. A way to check on seed vigor is to plant a few in a cup of soil. If they come up through the soil in the cup, chances are they will come up in the garden. Most vegetable seed will germinate in four to seven days. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. Please give me instructions for caring for a jade plant. (S.C., Winston-Salem)

*A. An easily grown succulent, Jade plants prefer a cool location with minimum night temperatures of 50 to 55 degrees. Plant will tolerate lower or higher temperatures, 40 to 100 degrees. Keep soil uniformly moist, but not wet. Give jade a few hours of direct sun or bright indirect light. Fertilize every three to four months with liquid house plant fertilizer. # Don't Even Try To Install Stove

By DAVE RICHWINE

NORWOOD, Mass. (UPI) — This is a do-it-yourself story with a twist about installing your own woodstove. For safety's sake — don't.

Energy-conscious suburbanites shouldn't try to put in their own unless they know a lot about everything from masonry to firefighting.

The woodstove has gotten a lot of good publicity in the last few years, as more and more people in Northern states search for alternative energy sources.

There are literally hundreds of stoves on the market. The most common are cast iron or steel airtight jobs that often promise to heat an entire house on "just a few logs."

Before you believe the ads and begin comparing cubic square feet the stoves supposedly heat, a word of advice: Don't dismantle your oil or gas heat unit just yet. You'll need it often as a backup on the chilliest nights.

It takes long hours before you master the art of stretching a few well-seasoned oak logs for every BTU of heat you can.

When my wife, Annette, and I bought an older home in an older section of town last summer, we also began dreaming of life the old-style way. This included a huge vegetable and herb garden, kerosene lamps, and cords and cords of wood heat.

The home had a quaint but inefficient Franklin stove when we moved in, which was promptly yanked when we found it didn't meet any existing fire codes. The codes are quite rigid in many states, undoubtedly due to more and more novices like us becoming first-time woodburners.

The modern-day installations now require asbestos floorboards or some other type of fireproofing material, which keep the red-hot stove well away from combustible surfaces. The protective materials are expensive, but it's not worth cutting corners and risking an inferno.

The type of stove you choose is often the most fun — looking at styles and comparing all the complex baffles, nooks and crannies claiming to make them more efficient.

Annette wanted to "see" the fire. I did too, but it's not always worth the extra money or heat you might lose with a fancy window. Besides, a steady well-stoked woodstove fire is far from a fireplace flamer.

My advice, after weeks of searching, is to avoid the ornate and go for a practical, unassuming steel model with a good 20-year limited warranty covering structural defects.

Don't buy too big a stove for your home — you'll end up roasting yourself out of a couple of rooms. And expect to pay about twice as much for a chimney, if you need one, than for the stove itself.

We had dreams of building our own block and tile chimney until we realized all it involves — only a qualified mason should do the job. These sturdy chimneys cost more per foot than the double-walled pipe more commonly used, but they can last a lot longer.

We opted for cheaper pipe. A look at the experienced installers struggling outside our home for two days — one dangling precariously from our 30-foot rooftop — convinced me it just isn't a do-it-yourself job.

Even if I had tried it myself, I would have always worried about the danger of fire from faulty workmanship. Making a picnic table in the workshop isn't quite as deadly if you goof it up.

Our town building inspector quickly flunked our stove because we came up an inch or two short on the code specifications. With a few minor revisions, it passed.

Basis To Learn In Allowances

Q. — One of our children marked up the wallpaper in our dining room with a pen. Can the ink marks be removed with an ink eradicator?

A. — Not if the marks were made with a ball point pen. If it is some other kind of ink, there is some possibility that the ink eradicator will do the job, but you risk also taking the color out of the wallpaper. Sometimes the best way to handle a problem of this sort is to attempt to disguise the marks rather than remove them. A paint of the same color will often work.

Q. — Is there some kind of special adhesive for cementing together two large pieces of foam rubber?

A. — Use regular rubber cement of the type sold in artist's materials stores.

Q. — I expect to put down a resilent tile on the floor of our basement, which is concrete. I have been told that the floor must be made smooth first. Our floor is extremely rough and I am afraid that it would take days and perhaps weeks to get it smooth. What do you suggest?

A. — There is mastic type of underlayment that can be spread on the floor to get it smooth enough for the installation of plywood or hardboard underlayment floor.

Q. — I put several coats of varnish on a table a few weeks ago, following all the directions I had read about the application, but the result is a surface that feels something like sandpaper when you run the tips of your fingers over it. What causes this? I already have had one opinion — that the varnish may have spoiled because it was kept for about a year in a cold basement. Could this have caused the trouble?

A. — Most likely. Cold varnish is the most usual cause of that type of finish. There is also a possibility that you used a brush which had previously been used for paint and that it was not cleaned properly.

Q. — Every time I use varnish, bubbles form on the surface of the wood. I cannot understand this, since I mix the varnish throughly. What's the trouble?

A. — The trouble is that you mix the varnish throughly. This causes the varnish to develop bubbles that show up on the surface of the wood. If varnish must be stirred, it must be done very gently and then not used immediately.

Advisory Council On Education Carries Prestige

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 20 citizens who make up the new Intergovernmental Advisory Council on Education are not — repeat, not — a national school board.

But they do sit on the bluest of blue-ribbon panels, a high-powered group with a mandate from Congress to advise the president and the secretary of education and to provide a national forum where politicians, pedagogues, parents and pupils can discuss the education issues that often divide them.

Advisory groups are a dime a dozen in the nation's capital, but this one has the unusual distinction of being created by the same law that gave birth to the Department of Education last year.

Never before in creating a new department had Congress seen fit, or felt the need, to unleash a watchdog as well. The council was intended to allay lawmakers' fears that the federal agency might usurp state and local control of the nation's schools.

"It is not too much to say the Department of Education would not exist without the council," one departmental report concluded.

The fears of an expanded federal role in education were reflected in President Reagan's platform pledge to kick education out of its newly won Cabinet seat. Congress would have to pass new legislation both to downgrade the department and to eliminate the council.

But congressional aides who took part in the lengthy effort to create the department believe that, regardless of the agency's fate, the council will endure as a vehicle for dealing with educators' concerns about the voluminous red tape in federal school programs.

The first secretary of education, Shirley M. Hufstedler, told the council members at their first meeting last fall: "We need to have people talk to each other across jurisdictional lines. We have perhaps more freedoms per square inch in education than any other structure of which I am aware."

She also reminded council members that they "are not a national school board any more than I am a minister of education."

The pedigrees of the participants may have prompted that disclaimer. The council includes a governor, a mayor, several state legislators and two college presidents. With a projected $500,000 budget and a full-time staff, the council should have the wherewithal to be "an independent observer of education in America," as its chairman, Florida Gov. Robert Graham, forecast.

The council will meet several times a year (with members paid $100 per day) and issue periodic reports.

When the government issued a call last winter for nominations to the council, it was flooded with more than 1,000 names submitted by educators, politicians and interest groups, plus several thousand more letters of support. Congress had specified that six members be elected officials, five from elementary and secondary education, five from post-secondary education and four from the public at large.

Congress also stipulated that the 20 must "represent a diversity of geographic areas and demographic characteristics."

It took headhunters in the Education Department and the White House six months to sift through the names.

Groups scrambled to get their favorite sons or daughters on the council. Four governors were nominated; only Graham was chosen.

His colleagues include a rabbi, a state school superintendent, a deaf fighter for handicapped rights, an eminent historian and the man who brought National League baseball back to New York City.

The headhunters met their goal of 40 percent minorities (four members are black, two Hispanic, one Asian-American and one American Indian) but were far short of their target of 50 percent women (only six, or 30 percent, are female).

Just how those on the council got their seats in this high echelon is a study in microcosm of how government panels take shape.

Some lobbied or called in political chits to secure their appointment. For others, it came out of the blue.

"I wasn't sponsored by anyone," says J. Glenn Schneider, a Naperville, Ill., history teacher and Illinois state representative. "I just went after it."

Schneider, a Carter delegate to the Democratic National Convention, used his connections with Carter campaign officials as well as the state chapter of his union, the NEA.

"I would have been surprised if I hadn't got it," he says. "It was probably the first significant request I ever made."

Historian Henry Steele Commager has no idea how he came to be nominated.

"I haven't the foggiest notion," he says. "Heavens, I've never asked for a job in my life."

Two council members, Maryland Assemblywoman Lucille Maurer and North Carolina Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips, had testified before Congress on the need for the council.

Mrs. Maurer was endorsed by the National Conference of State Legislatures. She also lined up 50 letters of support from her governor, senators, women's groups, labor, business and others.

William Shea, a prominent New York attorney and Democrat after whom Shea Stadium is named, said party officials approached him about the council, and at first he was not interested.

But Shea, who is national president of the Little League, decided it offered a good vantage to help youths. The garrulous 73-year-old lawyer joked that he is probably the council's "least educated" member, but "I'll hold my own with them."

Jose Serrano, a New York assemblyman from the Bronx, says that with "people begging and cajoling and threatening and doing whatever they could to get on this panel ... I'm kind of confused as to how I got on."

Serrano made no overtures. He was contacted about the council by the office of New York Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo, by White House Hispanic affairs adviser Gil Colon and by his congressman, Robert Garcia.

Robert Hardesty, a former aide to President Lyndon B. Johnson and editor of his memoirs, got letters of support from Lady Bird Johnson and White House domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat to help secure his seat on the council. Hardesty is vice chancellor for administration of the University of Texas Systems.

The state's public universities are under investigation by the Education Department's Office for Civil Rights to determine whether they still show vestiges of segregation. Hardesty said the council affords him "a great opportunity for communication" as well as "a great opportunity for some conflict of interest, which I would assiduously avoid."

The lone private school member of the council is Rabbi Abraham Shemtov, director of the American Friends of Lubavitch in Philadelphia. The Lubavitch movement is a Hassidic sect headquartered in Brooklyn, N.Y., with educational centers in 30 states.

"Recently we have been in the forefront of the movement to improve education in general, transcending any religious lines," he says.

The appointment of Rabbi Shemtov did not sit well with one Catholic educator.

Msgr. John F. Meyers, president of the National Catholic Educational Association, sent Carter a letter and issued a press release expressing "deep disappointment that no true representative of either private or parochial schools was named."

Catholic school groups had lobbied against creating the Education Department, while the Lubavitch group endorsed it.

For all its diversity, the panel is noticeably short of Republicans. Most are registered Democrats. A handful said they were independents. Rabbi Shemtov declined to divulge his political affiliation but said he is certain the panel includes Republicans.

Rabies Fought By Hong Kong

By KHARK SINGH
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — Police marksmen roam the hillsides shooting stray dogs and dog catchers are busier than they've been in years as Hong Kong battles an outbreak of rabies.

Since the outbreak three months ago, about 40,500 dogs have been destroyed and more than 73,000 others inoculated, according to government count.

The disease itself has claimed the lives of two people, 11 dogs, a cat and a puppy.

A large part of the New Territories, an area of Hong Kong bordering China, where the epidemic is concentrated, has been declared a restricted zone for the movement of dogs.

Warnings on television and radio remind residents to get their dogs inoculated or face a fine of $200 or six months in jail.

The case of the rabid cat has forced dog catchers to add cats to their prey.

Veterinarians have been busy answering phone calls from worried cat owners about information on the proper way to inoculate their pets.

But the death of a five-week-old puppy has mystified medical experts. The puppy was found outside the infected area.

An anti-rabies expert said it "was most unusual for a puppy to catch the disease."

"We are not certain about the origin of the infection," he added.

Parts of China's Guandgong Province are also reported to be plagued by rabies.

In November, the director of the Hong Kong Medical and Health Services, Dr. K. L. Thong, and the director of the Agriculture and Fisheries Department, J. Riddel-Swan, flew to Canton for talks with Chinese officials about the problem.

The Chinese announced steps to exterminate all dogs in the Shumzhen area bordering Hong Kong and to enforce other stringent measures to eradicate the disease.

But not all people there are willing to part with their pets. Dog catchers who entered one village are reported to have been pelted with stones and bottles.

The outbreak of the disease is the first in Hong Kong since 1949. In that year 20 people perished in the worst epedmic in this British colony's history.

A government spokesman said the World Health Organization has been notified of the latest outbreak of the disease. But he added that rabies is not a quarantinable disease and therefore there is no need for Hong Kong to be declared an infected area.

Got Cocaine In Mail Mix

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A hollowed-out encyclopedia with $50,000 worth of cocaine stuffed inside was delivered to the home of an unsuspecting Springfield Township couple after a drug dealer put their return address on a parcel, authorities say.

The scheme came unraveled Jan. 19 when a mail carrier went to the home of Dave and Olga Kinsey and told them they owed $4.84 in postal handling fees for a package that was returned from Miami.

The package had been sent to someone at a Miami hotel, but the person was not there and the parcel was returned to the post office.

"We said we didn't send a package to Florida, but the mailman said it had our return address on it and as far as he was concerned, it was ours," Mrs. Kinsey said Wednesday.

She said she found a 15-volume encyclopedia in the package, with a big surprise in volume 15 — five bags containing white powder.

Township patrolman John Loggins said he tested the powder, determined it was cocaine and estimated its value at $50,000. Police said the Kinseys were cleared of involvement in the drug scheme.

The Kinseys kept the other 14 volumes of the encyclopedia. "We have grandchildren and we thought the books were a nice surprise," Mrs. Kinsey said.

THREATS IGNORED

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The Dutch are going ahead with plans to help the Nationalist Chinese government enlarge its submarine fleet despite retaliation from the mainland Chinese government, informed sources say.

DID IT QUICK — Quang Nguyen, 21, stands on University of California campus in San Diego where it is taking him only two years to earn degree in economics. The former Vietnam refugee is the first of 80,000 students in the school's 17-year history to set that scholastic pace. (AP Laserphoto)

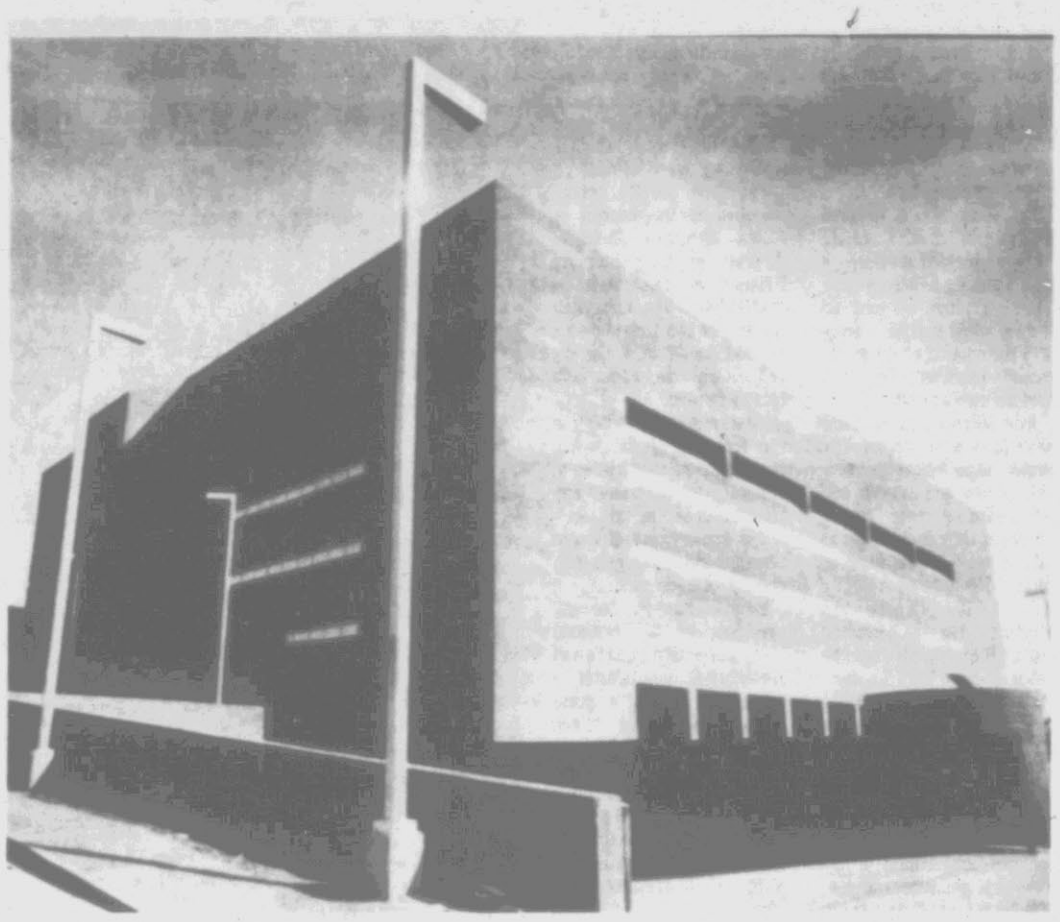
'Cadillac Jail' Is Headache To County; Costs Too Much



GLAMOR SLAMMER — The $48 million Shelby County Criminal Julstice Complex in Memphis, Tenn. is scheduled to open in September. To county officials it's a headache. Estimates of running the complex are running as high as $15 million for the first year, leading some critics to call it the "Glamor Slammer". (AP Laserphoto)

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The $48 million Shelby County Criminal Justice Complex, dubbed the "Glamor Slammer," is called a jail of the future. To county officials, however, it's a headache of the present.

"We've built a Cadillac when we should have a Mazda, and we don't even have enough space for the Saturday night drunks," said Bill Reid, former county chief administrative officer.

"We built for 20 years hence," said Arnold Shappley, senior architect and president of the firm that designed the 830,000-square-foot complex, which includes six miles of hallways and takes 4 to 5 hours to tour.

When it opens in September, the 12-story facility will contain the city and county jails, the police and sheriff's departments, city and county courts and adjunct legal administrative offices.

Unquestionably, the complex lives up to projected needs of the year 2000. But county officials are suffering budget pangs in 1981.

Estimates of operating the center its first year range up to $15 million. That could boost by $44 the taxes paid on a $40,000 home.

County officials expect taxpayers to balk at having to pay $24,000 for special soft-soled shoes for inmates — to protect the jail's terrazzo floors — and $65,000 for clothing color-coded to the floor on which an inmate is confined.

Opponents say there are glaring deficiencies, such as inadequate space to handle arrests for weekend drunkenness, in the four-story jail with 1.23 acres on each floor.

Sheriff Gene Barksdale, a defender of the facility, says he's willing to work with the County Commission to cut costs.

Sheriff's department officials say the complex was built to specifications contained in an order issued by U.S. District Judge Robert McRae Jr. about 13 years ago. County officials argue the complex goes far beyond anything McRae ordered.

"I've read that court order and re-read it and it speaks of such things as square footage that a person in jail must be allocated ... it talks about treating people humanely and providing them with medical care and basic necessities," said Reid. "It doesn't say anything about building them a mini-hospital."

The jail's hospital includes an operating room, dental facilities and beds for 12. The equipment cost more than $100,000.

Reid says planning for the complex got out of hand because it was turned over to committees "whose membership changed every year."

"Each new member incorporated into the planning every fine new idea on prison care that ever existed," Reid said. "There's no doubt that it will be nicer than many of the homes from which its inmates come. ... In winter, the place will have a waiting list, I predict."

How can you use a classified ad to help with the family budget?

1. Sell that tuba that hasn't sounded a note the last three years. Any musical instrument will do if you don't have a tuba.

2. Take a good look in your garage. If there's a bike, moped, or motorcycle that hasn't had a rider in a long time, now's the time to exchange it for cash.

3. Grown-ups also let still-good items go unused! Got a sewing machine, typewriter or knitting machine you haven't mastered? Find a cash buyer for it.

4. Don't forget sound equipment . . . radio, TV, stereo, tape recorder, CB, walkie-talkie . . . people are always looking for things to listen to.

5. And the workshop . . . wherever it is . . . is the place to spot tools which still have a lot of good use in them. Let someone else put them to work while you fatten your budget.

That's how!

Just take inventory of the many good items in your home some family would like to have. Then give us a call to place your ad. Classified ads have been helping families stretch their budgets for years . . . and they can help you, too

Some Things Dwell In Memory And Refuse To Die

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Did you ever wonder whatever happened to that guy who used to come around your neighborhood with the pony, invariably a pinto, and take pictures of the kids? What do you suppose he's doing now?

Or, where do you suppose they have stored all of those shiny silver balls that used to be perched atop a pedestal on the front lawn? Perhaps they're next to that other missing lawn ornament — the flamingo.

And how many husbands today would understand the oft-heard cry on the radio: "Quick, Henry, the Flit." Hint: that was from the pre-Roach Motel era.

The horse and carriage, the Brooklyn Dodgers, the five-cent beer were all properly mourned as they left the American scene. But what of the other fixtures and institutions that just quietly disappeared without so much as a so-long, a small obit in the newspaper or a proper burial.

Nobody said goodbye to trolley cars, all those panther lights on top of the television set, white bucks or the milkman.

And some people still don't need to say goodbye to the milkman. An estimated 3,000 to 4,000 milkmen are left, still reading the notes stuck in the top of the bottle. Back in the late '40s and early '50s, however, there was a lot more note-reading — an estimated 40,000 to 50,000 milkmen, according to industry sources.

Somewhere, there must be a giant warehouse. Inside, there is an absolute mountain of green desk blotters, the kind with the leather triangles on all four corners. Nearby, one would find a huge silo of fountain pens, ink wells and ink eradicator. Sylvania "halo light" televisions are off to the left, washing machines with wringers on the top off to the right and treadle sewing machines are in the middle. The Burma Shave road signs are stacked in order and lining the walls are row upon row of Ipana toothpaste, Fitch shampoo and Rinso detergent. The night watchman might well be "Peter Pain."

Most of the items in this "warehouse" were replaced with something presumed better, cheaper or easier to use, such as the aerosol bug spray that replaced the old hand pump into which one poured — you guessed it — Flit.

But some of the things that disappeared are absolutely bewildering. Everybody, of course, knows why things like fins and rumble seats and running boards disappeared, don't we? But why did Detroit get rid of curb feelers? Those were the little wires that went "ping" when they touched the curb. Was their sole function to protect the whitewalls? Remember them, and later, the fake ones? Or is there a secret report that Americans have become better parallel parkers and don't need them?

Another mystery:

Why was the vent in the front window taken out, the one you could open sideways to keep the wind from gusting your hairdo to shambles? We know where it is, however. It's in the back now, right next to the window that doesn't roll down at all.

The clothespin deserves its own category. Sure, you can find them, but are there enough to go around? Girl Scout leaders used them by the hundredfold. What with a little piece of gingham — undoubtedly a piece mother didn't want for the quilt — and a little paint and cotton for the hair, that clothespin became Martha Washington at one afternoon meeting. Or, just with paint, a revolutionary soldier to be marched around the hoop rug later that night.

The evenings in those days were special, too. People sat on their front porches in double swings, rockers and visited with neighbors. At least until 8 p.m. on Tuesday. Then it was Uncle Miltie time on television, coupled with another replica — live singing commercials.

A similar phenomenon occurred on Monday nights. That was "I Love Lucy" time. Jeff Greenfield, author of "Television: The First Fifty Years," noted that many a small town noted a sharp decrease in water pressure at precisely 9:30 p.m. on Monday.

"That was when Lucy was over. It may have been the first rating system," observes Greenfield.

The Lucy show has been constantly rerun over the years, so it is not really forgotten. But what of "Captain Video," who asked no quarter and gave no quarter, or "My Little Margie," or "Howdy Doody?"

Make your own list of things that faded away ever so quietly but don't forget monaural records on the Victrola, steamer trunks obligatory white gloves and pillbox hats for interviews, fly peper, a singing cowboy, a high-topped black sneaker, a beer or soft drink can that required a "church key," ball-bearing wheels, 3-D movies, kerosene smudge pots at construction sites, semis dangling chains, garter belts, double features, upright radios that were actually a piece of furniture, charm bracelets, a drug store with a counter where you could buy a cherry or lemon Coke, manglers, crinolines and hoop skirts, not to be confused with the Hula-Hoop, matching sweater sets, Trigger, necker's knobs on the steering wheel...

Some people put things on the list that don't belong there, like drive-in movies. There are still more than 3,000, a rather consistent figure for the last 15 years.

Other erroneous nominees included the Fuller Brush man and the Avon lady. Both still going strong, although the Fuller Brush man has tended to become the Fuller Brush woman.

But along with the photographer with the pony and the milkman, many an occupation has virtually disappeared. The ice man, the umbrella fixer, the knife sharpener, the man who could plug up pots where they had worn through. All came around to neighborhoods before we became a throwaway society.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics says there are still 11,000 blacksmiths left, far beneath the time when every hamlet across the land had at least one.

You Can't Help But Like Fallon!

"Dallas" has 'J.R.,' Abby is the one who's creating havoc on "Knots Landing," and Fallon is emerging as the 'curse' of "Dynasty." In fact, if the beauteous brunette continues down the path she's now pursuing, every other 'resident bitch' in the annals of primetime TV will pale in comparison!

And yet...let's face it...you can't help but like her! And who wouldn't trade places with her? All that money, closets filled with designer jeans, servants waiting on her hand and foot, and men everywhere. We should be so lucky.

Pamela Sue Martin, who is so effectively portraying the spoiled, arrogant character, doesn't condone Fallon's actions. But she says she does understand her.

"Fallon is going through an identity crisis," says Pamela, with tongue-in-cheek. "Although she is a bit promiscuous, she's not completely drawn to any other man, with the exception of Cecil Colby, who happens to be a powerful and handsome man like her father. She's also rich, and that in itself is an isolating factor in establishing intimate human relationships."

But Pamela's quick to 'defend' the vixen. "Fallon has always fancied herself the mistress of the house, its leading female character and the only person with any authority in it," she explains. "Then her father marries his secretary, someone she feels is beneath her and everybody else in her world, and she becomes terribly resentful because both her place in the house and her place in her father's affections have been usurped by this socially inferior outsider."

This, of course, is a warning to Blake Carrington's poor bride, Krystle. But, come to think about it, she's a pretty smart cookie, and one gets the strong feeling that Krystle will protect her 'interests.'

Off-camera, there's no similarity to Pamela Sue Martin and Fallon Carrington. Pamela's an avid environmentalist and recently joined Greenpeace in an expedition to Newfoundland to protest the killing of baby seals. Now that's one pasttime you'll probably never see Fallon devoting any time to!

While Fallon constantly looks for the father figure in every man she meets, Pamela doesn't even try. "The men in my life have all been entirely different," she says.

LOVELY PAMELA SUE MARTIN stars as Fallon Carrington, a young jet-setter who is an exploiter of men in the hour-long serialized drama "Dynasty," which airs Mondays (9-10 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

PETER STRAUSS stars as a man who fights desperately to save the life of a trapped whale in "A Whale for the Killing," a drama making its world premiere on Sunday, Feb. 1 (8-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Family Fights To Save Whale

An American architect, stranded with his family on the barren coast of Newfoundland, is caught up in an incredible adventure when he fights an entire community to prevent the slaughter of a trapped whale in "A Whale for the Killing." This powerful drama about one man's attempt to measure the value of his own life will air as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Feb. 1 (8-11 p.m.).

Peter Strauss, Richard Widmark, Dee Wallace, Kathryn Walker and Bruce McGill star as participants in the struggle that soon finds the destinies of the impassioned 'mainlander' and his family tied to the fate of the marooned whale and the fishing village's economic realities.

Architect Charles Landon (Strauss) is a man devoted to building for the future while preserving the best of his past. But his life and his marriage seem to be crumbling, with no firm future and clouds over the past.

He and his family embark on a sailing vacation along the coast of Newfoundland, and Landon's hopeful that this will bring him closer to his wife and sons. But they are caught in a storm that cripples their boat and forces them to put up for repairs at a once-proud fishing village that has fallen on hard times.

The storm has also marooned a 40-foot humpback whale which seems doomed to die in the shallow water. Local toughs begin cynically using the helpless creature for target practice, and the town's elders are eager to sell it to a 'pirate' whaler that is waiting offshore.

Landon, who has been feeling isolated from the world and from life, finds himself compelled to take a stand. The whale must be saved, even though the villagers, threatened with the death of their community since the fishing has dried up in their waters, feel equally compelled to take the immediate profit offered by the illegal foreign whaling vessel.

With the support of his wife (Wallace), and an old man with the vision to see beyond the immediate need (Widmark), Landon takes up the battle. For him, there is more at stake than the life of a probably doomed whale. More importantly, the question posed is the value of life itself.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: Are Jim Stafford and Bobbie Gentry married? I heard that they were. J. ARNEY, MORGANTON, N.C.

A: Jim and Bobbie were married a few years ago, but the merger was terminated a short while later, due to what both claimed were "creative differences."

Q: I'm writing about the new series, "But I'm a Big Girl Now"; why don't they feature the little girl more, especially since the title sounds like she should be the star?

A: The star is actually Diana Canova, whose character wants her dad (played by Danny Thomas) to realize she's a grown woman with a young child. Rori King, who plays Rebecca, is a 'big girl' when it comes to on-camera experience — in several other shows, including "Angie," "Out of the Blue" and "Eight Is Enough."

Q: I recently saw Michael Jackson's younger sister on "Diff'rent Strokes." What is her name and how old is she? L. BAKER, ROWLAND, N.C.

A: She's Janet Jackson, now 14, who was first introduced to TV viewers via "The Jacksons," a musical/variety show that aired 1976-77. She then became a 'regular' on "Good Times" the following season.

Q: I'm writing about Moosie Drier, who co-starred in "Homeward Bound" — what other shows has he been in? T. GROMLOVITS, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Moosie's other recent TV credits include key roles in two 'Afterschool Specials' — "Hewitt's Just Different" and "If I'm Lost, How Come I Found You?" — and a number of films, including "Hunters of the Reef" and "It Happened at Lakewood Manor." He also had a recurring role in the short-lived series, "Doc," and played John Denver's son in "Oh, God!"

Q: Wasn't Tony Geary, who's on "General Hospital," on "The Partridge Family" also? J. MERRITT, LAURINBURG, N.C.

A: Prior to joining 'GH,' Tony guested on over 50 TV shows, including "The Partridge Family." He also appeared in about 40 stage productions and two other 'soaps' — "Bright Promise" and "The Young and the Restless."

Journal Comes To Life

When Elizabeth Huckaby, a teacher at Central High School in Little Rock, Ark., started keeping a journal back in the 1950s, she had no idea it would be the basis for a telefilm, "Crisis at Central High," airing Wednesday, Feb. 4 (8:30-11 p.m.).

Joanne Woodward portrays Ms. Huckaby in the drama based on the historic events of 1957, when nine black students attempted to integrate the all-white school. Charles Durning co-stars.

"I had kept a journal for a few years prior to this just as a hobby," Ms. Huckaby recalled. "But during the school year of 1957, when the integration issue became a confrontation between the state government and the Federal government, it became clear to me that it would develop into something momentous. So I decided to keep my own record of the events as they happened."

Looking back on the situation, Ms. Huckaby believes that the only thing that might have avoided the crisis would have been the use of national leadership at the very beginning. "No one stood out in front, nationally, and said anything," she explained. "There was reluctance, nationally, I would say, within the national administration. And, of course, I don't know if more local organizations of 'moderates' would have helped or not. Sometimes, even a small group of 'immoderates' has great power over a community because they will use methods that intimidate, and people are always intimidated by threats to their children."

The educator recalls that this threat was constantly in the minds of parents, and they hesitated to say or do anything for fear of retaliation against their children. "There were lots of things that were difficult because in general the attitude of the people in Little Rock had been acceptance. But there were vocal people on the other side whose aim it was to intimidate the general public."

Double Wedding Bells Ring

"The Brady Bunch," now grown up, return as two of the sisters, Marcia and Jan, decide to get married and share a rambling old house with their new husbands, in "The Brady Girls Get Married." The romantic comedy, which is also a pilot for a possible series, will be telecast on NBC Friday at the Movies, Feb. 6 (8-10 p.m.).

The entire cast of the popular show, which ran from 1969 to 1974, is featured.

With Cindy (Susan Olsen) — the last of their brood — going off to college, Mike and Carol Brady (Robert Reed and Florence Henderson) look forward to some quiet and peace around the house. Their expectations are shattered when they learn to their chagrin that young Marcia and Jan (Maureen McCormick and Eve Plumb) are both planning to get married.

The double wedding plans hit a snag, however, when Marcia and fiance Wally (Jerry Houser) decide on a more contemporary ceremony while Jan and her intended, Philip (Ron Kuhlman), plan a more traditional wedding. After much discussion, the two sides settle their differences and agree on an unusual ceremony.

FLORENCE HENDERSON, who starred as Carol Brady (the mother), in the long-running series "The Brady Bunch," will return with the entire cast for "The Brady Girls Get Married," on Friday Feb. 6 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

No Type-Casting

George Gobel certainly wasn't type cast as a thrice-married man in a recent episode of "The Love Boat."

In real life, Gobel has been happily married to his wife, Alice, for more than 41 years. In fact, he never dated anyone else but Alice, and they were married at age 18. The Gobels have three children, Greg, George and Leslie.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — NBC's decision to cancel "DISNEY'S WONDERFUL WORLD" has stirred up a hornet's nest among the show's loyal fans. In spite of the 'axing,' however, RON MILLER, Disney's president, says "we have contracted to produce five major specials for the 1981-82 season, and have a dozen pilot projects in development."

'Enough is enough' must be the by-word for two stars of "EIGHT IS ENOUGH." First comes word that SUSAN RICHARDSON was fed-up with marriage and had embarked on the world of the singles. Now JOAN PRATHER has decided four years of togetherness with hubby JAMES FIDUCIA is enough, and she's filing for divorce, too!

MICKEY ROONEY, presently starring in Broadway's "SUGAR BABIES," has decided to return to episodic TV, and NBC's the lucky network. The project, tentatively titled "JACKSON," is already in production at various locations in New York City.

"I'm tired, real tired," laments ROBERT HAYS. "I think I've had only five consecutive days off in two years." Bob went directly from the "ANGIE" series into "AIRPLANE!" then immediately into leads in two telefilms, "THE GIRL, THE GOLD WATCH & EVERYTHING" and "THE DAY THE BUBBLE BURST." These were followed by two on-location movies, "TAKE THIS JOB AND SHOVE IT" and "UTILITIES."

CBS thought they'd convinced MARY TYLER MOORE to give TV one more 'try' — a movie titled "ALL I NEED IS TIME." But Mary demanded half-a-million $$$$, and now the web is searching for another star.

FOR DANIEL J. BOORSTIN, Librarian of Congress

To make room for new items, do you discard old ones? How do you decide what goes, and do the discards get sent to other institutions? — B.R.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● The Library of Congress added to its collections in the year ending Sept. 30, 1979, 1,418,538 items and withdrew 121,057; the collections are inevitably growing, and we cannot withdraw a number of items equal to those accessioned, given the needs of the Congress and the scholarly public. Withdrawn in 1979 were 14,000 books, chiefly duplicates of titles once needed in multiple copies; 3,000 maps and 229 posters, which, with other items, were offered to other libraries in exchange and to libraries, schools and other institutions in accordance with the law governing surplus Federal property.

White House

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What happened to the car that was said to have inspired some of The Beatles's music? — K.V. Greeley, Colo.

The Beatles: great rock, big Rolls — the Lennon touch.

● Brought to the U.S. in 1970, and hardly used thereafter, it is currently garaged in one of the Smithsonian Institution's storage buildings. The 1965 Rolls-Royce Phantom V touring limousine was purchased by The Beatles in 1966. The body was painted by a friend of the late John Lennon — white hood, red and blue fender accents. The interior, designed by Lennon, is in black cloth with the original walnut trim. There's an entertainment console with TV, record player, 8-track tape deck, phone, outside p.a. system. The Beatles used the car from 1966 to 1969. Then they loaned it to the Rolling Stones, the Moody Blues and to Bob Dylan.

FOR LILA KEDROVA, star of Tell Me A Riddle

I remember seeing you in Zorba the Greek and wondering whether your friendship with Anthony Quinn is still as strong — D.B., Panama City, Fla.

● Actors are a funny breed. When we work together, we get on famously, adore each other. When the film is over, we tell each other we will meet soon again. But most of the time we don't see one another for years. When we do, it's as though we were never apart. That's the way it is with Quinn and me.

FOR ROBERT REED, star of Broadway's Deathtrap

As you're in a scary play, I'm wondering what frightens you? — R.J., Waterbury, Conn.

● First, there is a difference between "scare" and "frighten." We scare audiences in that we startle or shock them, and in that sense, the same things that startle them would probably startle me — someone coming out of the dark toward me; a sudden fire. My fears, on the other hand, are interwoven in my character and are unique to me.

FOR BARRY MANILOW, singer-composer

● One is on a musical quiz TV show; another is taking acting lessons; the third is doing back-up vocals on commercials and for other singers. We're still friends and have been since we split up over 18 months ago. In fact, the one who wants to be an actress introduced me to an acting class. Why? Because I want to be in a great film and win an Academy Award.

FOR SHARON BARBANO, fitness consultant and national class distance runner

Why are more women taking up running in competitions? — C.M., Racine, Wis.

● Women have been deprived of many of the physical outlets available to men, such as basketball and football. Their first aim is to lose weight and tighten up. But other factors play an important role: the discovery of the physical expression of their bodies and self-esteem from attaining goals.

FOR ANDREA BEJAR, beauty adviser and cosmetologist

Is it wrong to blot one's lips after applying color? — E.G. Rock Springs, Wyo.

● Today's lipsticks are creamy and apply evenly, not like the dry products of yesteryear. A smudgy look may be all right and chic in eye makeup, but the lipline should always be clearly defined. Rubbing lips together or blotting will smudge and smear. If one must blot, do it with a facial tissue held taut at the outer edges.

FOR ITZHAK PERLMAN, violinist

I saw you on a recent episode of Sesame Street and wondered why an artist of your caliber would appear on a kids' show? — O.L., Terre Haute, Ind.

● For two very important reasons: Firstly, it is highly necessary for children to be confronted with disabilities early on, in a face-to-face situation, and to know that disabilities such as my polio are part of life, and not the end of life. Secondly, I have always admired Oscar the Grouch's deep concern for music.

PRO AND CON

Should the Minimum Wage Be Lowered For Teen-Agers?

PRO Senator Orrin Hatch (R.-Utah)

Every time the minimum wage goes up people — mostly young persons — are thrown out of work, and that impacts especially hard on those with fewer skills, and on minorities. We ought to allow businessmen to pay a young person somewhat less than the legal minimum while that employee learns the ropes. Then we'd have kids with skills, job experience and jobs, at a price businessmen won't find too high — youngsters who won't be priced out of the market when the minimum wage goes up.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Ray Denison, director, Department of Legislation, AFL-CIO

No! The AFL-CIO opposes a lower minimum wage for teen-agers because it is discriminatory, because it does not increase employment and because it would replace older workers with younger. The U.S. Department of Labor, and noted academics, all agree on this. A lower wage for blacks or females would not be fair; why should we tell our youth they deserve less pay for the same work? A far better goal would be to improve general business conditions and reduce unemployment over all for blacks, for teen-agers and for all Americans.

COVER STORY

Mothers on Their Own Making It After All

Nearly three million American women must be both mother and father to their children. At last they may be getting some help.

Valerie Bertinelli and Bonnie Franklin cope with the problems of a single parent household in One Day at a Time.

Real-life divorcée Marjorie Marks — a research assistant — with sons Zachary and Leon.

By Marilyn Murray Willison

"My ex-husband has a huge salary compared with mine. After all, he's a doctor — in part, because I worked him through medical school. Not only is my salary low, but so are the child-support payments I receive. While it hurts me, it hurts my son a lot more. He's too young to fully understand why Daddy's so rich and Mommy's so poor." Joanne, a 34-year-old stenographer, divorcée and mother.

In recent movies like An Unmarried Woman and Kramer vs. Kramer, we saw the emotional side effects of divorce. But few movies and books have accurately depicted an equally devastating consequence of divorce. In millions of homes across the country, there are women who find themselves under economic hardships because they are forced to bring home the bacon while they simultaneously bring up baby.

This gloomy new sub-genre of the economic charts is composed of 2.9 million mothers who, in large part because of the divorce rate, are now the heads of households (with children under 18) and the major or sole breadwinners for their families. Where these women were once regarded as rarities, they now head close to 15 percent of American families. Single-parent families increased 79 percent since the 1970 Census, and there is every indication the growth will continue. Though there are, of course, single-parent households headed by men, a staggering 90 percent of them are headed by women.

But what is difficult for these women is not just the enormous responsibility they face as heads of their families. It's the economic hardship they must contend with. According to figures released this year by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, women who support their families earn less than half (46.9 percent) the amount earned by male heads of household. There are several factors that exert an adverse influence on working single mothers: the emergence of a two-paycheck society, women's poor earning power, the rising expense of raising children and the ineffectual enforcement of child-support payment.

The two-paycheck family has had a significant effect on consumer market demographics. Today's advertising campaigns are being geared toward upwardly mobile couples — with two cars, two career wardrobes and plenty of disposable income for goodies like microwave ovens and vacations in the sun — and the struggling single mother realizes all too soon that she has been squeezed out of America's economic mainstream. Today there are actually more families with two wage earners than there are with only a single worker. Census Bureau data indicate that two-paycheck families have an average income of $20,900 per year — while the average income for a working female head-of-household is only $8,500.

Gracie, a 43-year-old former actress, who is divorced from her attorney husband, explains, "I'm supporting my three kids on a budget of $5 per day per child. Parents who each have a paycheck can give their children luxuries like summer camp and music lessons. But they're beyond my standard of living. I think my kids are painfully aware of the difference between their friends' status and theirs, but there's nothing I can do about it. Nothing at all."

A particularly disturbing contributor to the financial woes of single working mothers is the surprising lack of advancement in pay levels for working women — whether married or single. Women, as a group, are still finding it difficult to escape the stigma of sexually stereotyped dead-end jobs. Of the women in the work force as recently as 1979, about 75 percent were in clerical, sales, service, factory or plant jobs.

In spite of the overall belief that women are enjoying much better economic status these days than ever before, today's 40 million plus working women still earn only 62 cents to every dollar earned by men.

Barbara, a 29-year-old secretary who is raising two young daughters, remarks, "I know every year prices will rise and my expenses will go up. If I'm barely making ends meet now on my secretary's salary, how will I manage to support our family five years from now?"

The ineffectual child-support system that exists in most states is another financial whammy for divorced mothers. Several national surveys conducted during the 70's highlighted the disturbing plight of women who were awarded child support at the time of their divorce but who rarely see the money earmarked for their children's well-being. According to current estimates, it costs over $80,000 to raise a child to age 18, and divorced mothers who can't collect child-support payments are under a heavy financial burden.

Fortunately, this trend may be decelerating, thanks to a Government-sponsored program designed to assist divorcées whose ex-husbands refuse to help them financially. (Husbands often declare bogus bankruptcy or "forget" to send checks, or "disappear.") An emergency-assistance program called "Child Support Enforcement Program," which was started in 1975 and is run by the Federal Government, now uses local agencies to track down "runaway" parents who shirk their financial obligations. Internal Revenue Service records and other Federal files are made available to the agencies, according to Louis Hays, deputy director of the Office of Child Support Enforcement. As of 1978, $1.6 billion had been collected from close to a million parents who had tried to escape making payments.

Another bright spot: In California, the State Legislature recently passed a bill designed to authorize mandatory deduction of child-support payments from the paychecks of fathers who miss two child-support payment periods. Making child support an automatic deduction (like taxes or Social Security) may be the answer to many mothers' money worries.

The picture isn't rosy. Betty Friedan, feminist and author of the upcoming book, The Second Stage (which discusses the problems of working mothers), says that things will get worse before they get better. But she does believe that relief could come if women begin to mobilize on a local level — the legislation mentioned above is a good example of what can be done.

Until then, single working mothers try to make it work. Says, a 58-year-old working mother who raised four children single-handedly. "It's very tough. But you do your best — because you care about your kids and you care about yourself." FW

Multi-Millionaire Ted Bartmann Reveals the Secret of His Success

You and I don't know each other. But I'd like to share something with you that has changed my life. Totally. And I believe it could change yours, too.

First, let's set the record straight. I'm not an advertising writer. I'm a 35 year old business man living in Dubuque, Iowa. And, I'm not a genius. In fact, I'm a 9th grade dropout.

But I am a self-made multimillionaire. And, surprisingly, I've made most of it during the current "hard times."

Another thing. What I'm going to show you isn't some kind of "get-rich-quick" scheme. I didn't make my money by putting ads in magazines or giving people financial advice. No way.

I can just about read your mind right now . . . "Okay, if he's so well heeled why should he share his secrets with me?"

My response is, "Why not?"

First of all, I've already made enough money to retire for the rest of my life.

Secondly, my method is so unique and "local" in nature that I won't be competing with you . . . nor you with me.

Thirdly, I'm growing weary of reading advertisements telling me "how to get rich" written by people who . . .

So, what would you do if you were in my shoes? Chances are, you'd probably do just what I'm doing. Wait until you had complete financial security—then share your method with others. That's why I've printed this message here and in other magazines.

To demonstrate how my method works, I'm going to give you some very embarrassing facts about my background. It's important that you have them.

When I was eight years old my father became ill and could not work. We were living in Dubuque on government surplus food. By the time I entered 9th grade I was going to school during the day and working nights. One afternoon I fell asleep during class. The teacher demanded that I copy the Declaration of Independence 100 times. I felt the punishment unfair so I refused. I was expelled from school in the ninth grade.

I found work as an apprentice in a local furniture factory at $1.86 per hour. Within the next few years I was married, divorced, depressed, and flat broke. That was the fall of 1973. But during the next 18 months—with the help of my brother, Bill, and another friend—my life was changed. Utterly.

Today—eight years later—I have total assets in excess of six million dollars. And a personal net worth of over two million dollars.

I have the usual trappings—a beautiful estate, cars, property . . . and time. Lots of time. I love to go to my office on Monday, wrap things up by Monday evening and then hop the commuter flight to O'Hare on Tuesday morning. From there I sometimes fly to the Bahamas or Acapulco or any one of a dozen places for the rest of the week.

My method is perfectly legal and moral. It's not complicated.

But most importantly, it actually works. It's brought me as much as $100,000.00 in one day. My bank or accountant will verify this.

My unique method has even amazed the press. The Muskogee Sunday Phoenix and Times-Democrat said, "It's crazy that a high school dropout would make this much money!"

The Des Moines Sunday Register said, "His story is remarkable...he's worth two million in cash and his income approaches $200,000.00 annually."

Consider these facts:

- You don't have to work long hours to succeed. I rarely spend over 15 hours a week at my office.
- You don't need "money" to begin. Remember, I started when I was dead broke.
- My method doesn't require "good times." I made the bulk of my income during the current shaky economic conditions.
- It doesn't require living in a large city such as New York or Chicago. I still live in Dubuque, Iowa.
- You don't need a formal education or special training. I left school in the 9th grade. And I never went back.
- You don't need to be old or experienced. I started when I was 27.

Perhaps you think your current debts or low salary will hold you back. Not at all. I can show you how to overcome that problem, too.

What I'll send you isn't textbook theory. I'm going to send you a step-by-step plan. Facts and methods you can use. I'll show you precisely how to begin. I guarantee it.

Here are some actual notarized statements from some of the friends and neighbors that I've already helped. Please remember, these are sworn affidavits in my attorney's office . . . not theory, but fact.

". . . I've used Ted's methods. And I increased my net worth by $45,000 in four months."

Ralph Rolling, Manchester, Iowa

"Ted netted $100,000.00 for him and me in just one day."

Gene Sullivan, Muskogee, Oklahoma

"With Ted's advice we purchased $200,000 in real estate in three years without using one dime of my own money. Also, thanks to Ted I've been able to avoid (legally) paying any income tax for the last three years."

Rick Glanz, Dubuque, Iowa

To prove that I'm right, I'm not even asking you to send me money. Instead, postdate a check 45 days in advance—a full month and a half. Obviously, it's not money because it's not negotiable. You can easily stop payment on it any time in the next month and a half. But it is a token of your sincerity. An act of faith, not in me—but in yourself . . . and in your future.

I'll send you all of my starting materials immediately. Keep them for 30 days. If you decide to return my materials, I'll send you back your check . . . your original uncashed check. And I'll send it within three working days . . . no conditions . . . no delays . . . no hassles. I guarantee it. My bank and business references are listed on this page.

Here's just a sample of what you'll learn.

- How to eliminate completely your Federal and State income tax liability.
- How to purchase income producing properties with absolutely NO DOWN PAYMENT.
- How to buy duplexes and triplexes without any cash—not a cent.
- How to buy properties and have the previous owner pay you for them.
- How to find properties you can purchase—again with no cash—for only one-third their normal market value.
- And much more.

Again I promise and guarantee not to deposit your check for 45 days. This gives you plenty of time to examine my program AT NO RISK TO YOU.

To order, simply send your name, address and postdated check for ten dollars to me, Ted Bartmann, at the printing/publishing house handling my materials: Green Tree Press, Inc., 10577 Temple Road, Dept. 349 Dunkirk, New York 14048.

Observations

Shadowing the woodchuck. Tomorrow is Groundhog Day. Two hundred members of the Slumbering Groundhog Lodge of Quarryville, Pa., decked out in nightshirts and top hats and banging on toilet seats and plumbing pipes, will assemble to watch a groundhog (woodchuck) emerge from his winter hibernation burrow. Will he see his shadow and run back into his hole, signaling another six weeks of winter weather? The lodge's Hibernating Governor will let us know. Which is about as scientific as oil exploration once was – but no longer is. With soundwave probing becoming ever more precise, horizons for finding important new oil reserves are brightening, yesterday's doomsayers notwithstanding.

The hole truth. "We have barely scratched the surface of our nation's potential" for oil, says The Heritage Foundation, a leading Washington think tank. Its new report, Domestic Oil: The Hidden Solution, suggests Uncle Sam can't tell our energy assets from a hole in the ground – a woodchuck's or otherwise – due to so much "bureaucratic bungling and environmental obstructionism" and "a morass of red tape, restrictive policies, and financial disincentives." "Groundhogs" afraid of their shadow – that's what so many of our energy planners have been in recent years.

"Say, you are an old-timer! There's energy in them thar hills!"

Hogging the land. How much ground would one of these "groundhogs" hog if a groundhog could hog land? Plenty, if you mean the two-legged environmental extremist who would shut all wild terrain from productive use. Consider huge Alaska, which the foundation says has "unprecedented" natural resource potential that "strains the imagination." Canadian and Soviet oil discoveries to the east and west suggest "that the Arctic Basin is perhaps the most promising petroleum province remaining to be explored" (with reserves – says the report – equal to as much as two decades of U.S. oil consumption at present usage rates). But this potential may never be tested because so much Alaskan land is off limits to energy exploration, and "any effort to develop the potential ... seems to run up against some federally-constructed barrier which stops it cold." Brrr.

True heritage. What about Alaska's beauty? "It is possible to allow access to environmentally sensitive areas without imposing unacceptable levels of environmental disruption," the foundation points out. But overzealous interpretations of environmental rules "have become the tools of activists bent on implementing a radical restructuring of our economic, political, and social institutions" (even thwarting production from some oil fields already discovered). That's "foolish," says Alaska's Sen. Ted Stevens in the report's foreword: "It is ludicrous to speak of preserving our children's heritage if we do not include their economic well-being in that legacy." To put it another way: Groundhogs hibernate, but we can't afford to.

It's a fact: Of the 775 million acres of America's land owned by the government, only 13.5 percent was under oil-gas lease last year.

COUPLES

Greg Mullavey and Meredith MacRae

The Anatomy of A Reconciliation

By Isobel Silden

Hollywood may be a town famous for "storybook" marriages, but it is not known as a place for marriages that last. The 10-year union between stars Meredith MacRae and Greg Mullavey has certainly had its share of rough spots, but now, after a year's trial separation things are looking smooth again.

Just over a year ago, Greg, 35, who became a household word playing Tom on Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, moved out of their Los Angeles home, and headed for New York to appear in the Broadway play, Romantic Comedy. Meredith, 30, who has starred in two TV series, My Three Sons and Petticoat Junction, and now co-hosts the talk show, Mid Morning L.A., remained in Los Angeles with the couple's 6-year-old daughter, Allison.

It was just a few months ago that Greg returned to California and to Meredith. The two are confident that the year's separation helped solve problems in their marriage.

The couple's problems really began during Greg's TV series. He worked long hours, and Meredith had difficulties adjusting to his absences and then coping with his adjustment problems when the show ended. Explains Meredith: "The problem was taking each other for granted. Greg had a great deal of success in Mary Hartman, and he hoped major stardom would result. There were a few months, though, when he wasn't working, and I think this bothered him a lot. Greg feels guilty when he's not working, not earning any money."

Greg agrees that he was troubled about not being a breadwinner for awhile: "Although we live in a cooperative world, I feel that I should bring home the bacon. The first step in my growth and change was recognizing that I have those feelings."

The two also agree that any couple who see danger points in a marriage should seek advice.

"We went to a marriage counselor, and it was very helpful," says Meredith. "People shouldn't be too proud to get help, and they shouldn't wait too long."

The counseling Meredith and Greg received opened their eyes to many things. Reports Meredith: "I think it's essential in a good marriage for the couple to keep their lines of communication open, be honest. One of the worst things about marriage is that sometimes people hold things back."

During the year that Greg was in New York, the couple talked on the telephone several times a day. Both agree this was the main factor in their reconciliation. Their marriage counselor, whom they continue to see, agrees, pointing out that when people talk on the phone, only one can speak, the other must listen. They are communicating.

Six months after Greg left for New York, he made two trips back to L.A. Then Meredith and Allison started flying into New York for long weekends.

"We realized we've always loved each other," says Meredith, "and that we probably always will. I see things I did wrong, which I couldn't see at the time. I've changed things in me."

"At times, I had my doubts that we'd get back together," Greg admits, "but attachments are difficult to overcome. I have changed in terms of valuing both Meredith, and our relationship more. I'm also listening a lot better, and we're both much more direct now."

Right now, the couple are forging ahead in their careers. Meredith (the daughter of musical stars Sheila and Gordon MacRae) acts in movies, TV films and theater in addition to her talk show. Though Greg's new TV show, Number 96 was recently canceled, he's scouting around for new projects.

Remarks Greg: "We're not perfect by a long shot. But we are committed to making our marriage work."

INFLATION-FIGHTER DECORATING GUIDE

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Does your home have to succumb to a case of the "shabbies" just because money is tight? Absolutely not. We've gone to the source, culled ideas from top professional interior designers in order to show you how to redo, remodel or simply put a little pizazz into your rooms. Even if you've never wielded a paintbrush or turned a screwdriver, you'll be inspired by some of the quick, unusually easy, projects that will add a shiny new touch to your home. If your furniture needs replacing, check our experts' advice first before you set out to buy. You'll get their predictions of future home-furnishing trends and advice on the kinds of furniture pieces to buy — that will save you time and money. Let us help you fight the decorating inflation blues with this special section.

Restore a Drawer Chest
Whether it's a thrift-shop find or an inherited piece, you can do a lot to restore a chest of drawers. You can strip it down and stain it or buy a readily available antiquing kit and restore it in a rich hue.

Create a Headboard
A handsome modern headboard can be made out of garden-variety lattice-wood strips. Make a wood frame the height and width desired, then nail strips first in one direction, then the other. It can be attached to the bed frame or directly to the wall.

Dual-Use Coffee Table
Recycle an old camper's trunk to serve as a table and double as storage space for party or guest linens. Simply have your local glass-supply store cut an appropriately sized plate-glass top, preferably in three-quarter-inch thickness.

Great Inflation-Fighter Decorating Tips

Has inflation dampened your delight in decorating? Here are some quick-and-easy tips from top professional decorators on how to spruce up your home on a shoestring budget.

• The quickest and least-expensive way to totally transform a space is with paint. It rarely costs more to paint a room a beautiful color than to paint it just plain white or off-white. Instead of white, try magnolia, a creamy, peachy ivory, or the color of face powder with a touch of apricot. It's important to remember that the more demanding the color, the more demands it will put on the furniture. Going to a more exciting neutral probably won't force you to change your upholstery — going scarlet probably will! One tip is to always select a color one or two tones paler on the chart than the one you first respond to. Color tends to intensify on the walls, and what looks livable on the chart may turn into a technicolor nightmare in your room.

• If you've never sewn before, maybe now is the time. Sewing is a great way to cut down on expenses, and, actually, making pillow covers or a table skirt is easier than sewing clothes. Pattern companies now offer tissue patterns for these that make the job hazard-free. Here are some tips before you try: Always select a fabric you can really afford in quantity. It's better to use good old gingham and make things full and wonderful than to use a decorator fabric and skimp. If you find the decorator fabrics too costly, look for your fabrics in the dress-goods department. Some fabrics to look for are ginghams, canvas and duck, decorator-color khaki and chino, pique and sateens. Choose quiet patterns for large areas and save the special and/or expensive ones for the little touches.

• And don't forget about trimmings. For example, rickrack trim or ribbon can be applied to pillows, table accessories, bedspreads, nearly anything you can think of to turn a plain room into something special.

• Try decorating with dime-store items and recycled antiques. Beautifully colored porcelain hooks make a spectacular kitchen wall and they cost about $2 each. Pots and pans can turn your kitchen into a gourmet delight when they're carefully selected for color and shape and hung on a wall grid. Wooden spoons are some of the simplest and best-looking natural woods around, and Chinese noodle drainers look better than some poster art on the walls. The best-looking kitchen wallpaper money can buy costs under $2.00 a yard at variety and hardware stores! It looks convincingly like Delft tile and is plastic and self-adhesive (from DC Fix).

• If you have a collection of favorite objects, why not display them dramatically. If you don't have a collection, consider creating one. Take items from every corner of the house and lay them all out on the floor in the living room, looking hard for a "collection" that seems naturally to fall under a single theme and will make

• Textured or fabric-laminated shades at the windows, with the window frame painted a darker shade than the wall or a contrasting shade, is a simple, inexpensive way to get a smart window treatment. And the upkeep is easier than draperies.

• Colorful accessories can really give a room a lift. For example, a pair of large pillows for the sofa — in a luxurious fabric. Or, for the wall of a child's room, a row of round, colorful enamel-framed mirrors, purchased at a variety store and lined up like portholes on a ship.

• If a room's color scheme could use a change, but the existing carpet is still in good shape, the carpet's color can be played down. For example, there is an olive green carpet in a little girl's room. She adores pink. The solution? Tint the walls the color of bleached wood to blend with her light furniture. Then add a pale pink comforter. Above the bed: a picture of a tranquil lily pond which picks up the green, pink and soft colors of nature.

3 Interior designer Bebe Winkler believes one of the most overlooked elements in a room is fragrance. Yes, it can be used as a decorating vehicle.

• Potpourri, usually a mixture of dried flowers, can be displayed in an inexpensive large fish bowl or favorite china dish and will offer color and texture on a console, dining or coffee table. The fragrance lasts a long time, but if it fades, it can be restored with a drop or two of scented oil.

• Scented candles grouped in a handsome mix of sizes is a refreshing change of pace. Especially festive and welcoming are votive candles in their glass holders. And, if you use candles, you can save on your electricity.

• Buy plain wrapping Kraft paper or use brown paper bags you've collected at home to laminate a wall. The results are surprisingly elegant! First prime your wall with a water-based primer. Then cut paper randomly in squares, rectangles or any shape desired. Afterward, wet-sponge the paper, apply wallpaper paste, hang paper and let dry. You can lay pieces side by side, layer or overlap for a dimensional effect.

• To add architectural interest at ceiling-height and base of walls, buy remnants of clear acrylic mirror strips three inches high by quarter-inch-thick lengths appropriate for the particular room. Then freehand design or stencil, using latex paint in a compatible contrasting shade or in a darker shade than your wall paint. To save time, tape a succession of the same stencil patterns on the strips and get a family member to help paint the design. Adhere to top and base of wall with a strong epoxy-type glue.

• Create another kind of wall design with a paint roller. Use a stencil or draw a design on the roller. Then simply snip the nap away with a cuticle scissors, leaving the pattern. You now have a roller that will help you achieve a custom-designed wall.

• For smart, inexpensive wall-to-wall floor covering, buy straw matting, sold by the square yard. Adhere it to the floor with water-soluble cement. You can leave it in its natural color or custom paint it with a roller or thick brush. You can form your own design by wide striping, a splatter pattern or block printing.

5 Easy Pieces:
Furniture That Can Transform a Room

"A smart, economical way to remodel a room," suggest interior designers Joanne Adelberg and Vivian Krawitz, who work out of Baltimore, "is to make just one change for a big effect."

In their opinion, there are five basic pieces that you can count on to add impact, which have stood the test of time in terms of contributing substantially to a home's decor. They are:

1. A Wall Unit. Since the advent of modular furniture, which allows pieces to be stacked or bunched, the wall unit has become a boon for many families. Simply by adding units, a wall system can be changed to be as wide or high as desired. It can display books, magazines, objects, have open or closed storage, come in beautiful wood, painted or metal styles and is available in every price range.

2. An Armoire. The French name for a wardrobe, this piece is traditionally used to store clothes — even though it is believed to have been developed originally for storing arms or armor. This furniture piece has great versatility and can be a dramatic focal point in the bedroom, living room or foyer. It can be used to store linens, clothing, and today's models may even serve as a place for the TV, stereo or bar.

3. A Sofa. This basic seating unit is the elegant workhorse of the home. Today sofas are being turned out in every possible style and period — from formal to country versions, from clean-lined to heavily detailed. Many come in sturdy, easy-care fabrics, with prices for every budget.

4. An Etagere. Frequently used to display "whatnots," today's etageres come in wood, bamboo, chrome and glass, brass and wrought iron. Etageres are excellent for open-shelf storage to show off your favorite objects and books. They will fit into any room plan, coming in widths of 30, 36 and 42 inches. Several etageres can be grouped to form a storage wall, or a pair can be used on either side of a sofa or a fireplace.

5. A Desk. From Louis XV to rolltop models, desks throughout history have been used in the home for their practical as well as decorative virtues. But Americans have lately adapted the desk for modern times and limited budgets: A desk can be a bright lacquered Parsons table or a sawhorse base with either a wood or glass top. Whatever kind of desk you choose, where you place it will make the exciting difference. It can be set at a right angle to a sofa, so that it strikes the eye when one enters the room or it can sit smartly in front of a window.

What do top furniture manufacturers see as important trends in these and other pieces you may be choosing for your home?

"In the last six months," says Tom Himes, marketing director of Kroehler Manufacturing Company, "it's become clear that no matter what region of the country people come from, they want more highly styled furniture." The company's introductions for 1981 reflect that consumer demand, especially in upholstered goods. The new sofas feature softened and rounded lines that are more generously padded, many with dressmaker detailing, such as contrasting welting and custom quilting, all adding details of quality.

"The new sofas make a definite design statement this year," continues Himes, "and you can build a room's entire look around one, whether you're starting from scratch or want to change the look of a room. These sofas do not need lots of expensive accessories to give a room character. They set the character of the room." Experts agree that the trend of buying a "safe," innocuously styled sofa is not only dull, it means that more money has to be spent for accessories to give the room some excitement.

"Looking ahead," declares Himes, "we see a relaxing of the lines that separate traditional and contemporary in total room design, and towards a dressed-up country look. Traditional furniture is as likely to be used with rustic goods as it is with more formal pieces. We also see a continuance of the demand for quality in design, in detailing and materials."

As Gerald C. Caugh, vice-president-designer for Stanley Furniture Company sees it, furniture styles have not changed rapidly. "Traditional still is most popular, with contemporary continuing to grow on an evolutionary basis. The emphasis today is toward proper design and scaling for furniture that fits our lifestyle in the 1980's."

An armoire of distinction has full-length and sliding mirrors, ample drawer space, adjustable shelves. From Stanley Furniture.

The fact that homes are getting smaller doesn't mean that the consumer wants to give up quality or design excellence. Stanley learned through research and their own experience that the dining area of the home is one that is quickly decreasing in size. Therefore, they've addressed themselves to designing small-scale dining furniture with full-scale elegance. Since wall space is not the problem, but floor space is, tables in the 80's will be sensibly scaled to allow plenty of room on the surface for place mats, china and a serving piece, but still allow space for movement about the table when it's not in use.

To expand visual space and create the illusion of depth, the company will also be using mirrored backs in many of their lighted hutches. "Mirrors work equally well in the bedroom. By flanking a bed or dresser with pier cabinets, a light bridge overhead and a large mirror between, you can make a small room appear larger," Caugh says, "and, add three times the storage space with the cabinets, than by using the typical night tables.

"A particular furniture item that is regaining importance is the armoire," stresses Caugh, "since they go up the wall, instead of across it or out into the room. One armoire can hold as much as a large dresser, but use only half the floor space. Put two together and you fill the floor space for one dresser, but supply the storage needs of two."

According to Charles Bassett, director of merchandising and design for Bassett Furniture Industries, "Today a furniture piece not only has to be multifunctional, but if it utilizes more vertical space and less floor area, the consumer tends to buy it."

Modular wall units continue in popularity. Depending on the unit number, one can almost achieve a custom-built look, with more storage in less square footage, says Bassett.

For the future, with the rising cost of construction, he foresees homes, not only with fewer windows for energy conservation but possibly the elimination of closets altogether — which affects design thinking.

The company has a head start, with the introduction of a dressing chest which has, behind its doors, a mirror and a number of drawers. In response to increased sales in the category of the versatile buffet server, which can be moved to any room, the company has come up with models that now offer a place for wine storage, longer flip-top counters for more serving space, doors and drawers.

And a recent introduction is the ultimate "entertainment center"; multifunctional, it can hold the stereo and TV, provide beverage service and offer hidden storage. FW

An Amazing New Diet Idea!

MEDICAL DOCTOR'S NEW PROGRAM BURNS AWAY MORE FAT AND FLUID THAN IF YOU RAN 98 MILES PER WEEK!

". . . The amazing thing of course, is the speed at which this system works. It is rather remarkable to read letters from people who have thrown off as much as 6 pounds of fat and fluid in the very first weekend . . ."

Dear Friend,

My name is Don Schwerdtfeger. I am an M.D. and have been practicing medicine here in San Diego for 14 years.

I am reproducing my business card at the bottom of this page and I am writing to ask you a personal favor.

If you will do this favor for me you will be helping me with my program and I will gladly pay you for your help.

Here is what it is all about: I am a psychiatrist and in addition to my other patients I have been helping people with alcohol and drug addictions. So far, I have treated more than 2500 various types of drug addicts.

But strangely enough, over the years, my practice has taught me that over eating is even more difficult to deal with than many hard-core drug addictions.

Some time ago I began to realize that any person who is overweight needs much more than just a diet. I now know that every overweight person needs an all-out fat-fighting weapon that is both safe and very powerful!

Finally, after years of research, I feel I have developed just such a weapon. What it consists of is a diet product that I call diet bullets and a system that actually burns off body fat, hour-by-hour!

Believe it or not, my new diet system burns away more fat and fluid than if you ran 98 miles per week.

Many of the people who have tested my program have lost as much as 1¾ pounds of fat and fluid every day for the first week. Actually, many people have reported a 6 pound weight loss in just the first 48 hours! After the first week, many people continue to lose as much as 8 pounds every two weeks thereafter. Depending of course on the amount of weight they had to lose, some people (who were very obese) have used my method to lose 50, 60 and even 100 pounds and more. Of course I cannot guarantee that you will lose weight as fast as these people have, and I only cite these figures to tell you what other people have reported to me. To be quite honest, some people have reported less and some people have even reported losing more.

When you begin to use this program, you can expect to be able to measure the difference in your waistline in just 24 to 48 hours. You will probably lose more inches each week than even if you faithfully did hundreds of situps every day. You may very well lose as much as 3 to 5 inches off your waistline in the first month. If you are a woman you can lose as much as a full dress size in only 7 days.

Apparently what happens is that my diet system allows your body to break down your excess body fat and flush it out of your system forever.

The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this system works. It is rather remarkable to read letters from people who have thrown off as much as 6 pounds of fat and fluid in the very first weekend. Just imagine how it must feel to drop up to 1¾ pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week.

Please understand, I am not trying to give you the impression that my program is a scientific breakthrough, new discovery, or some magical, mystical hocus pocus concoction. My program is based on very real biological, psychological and physical facts known to be true in the medical community as to why people gain weight.

My first concern when I developed this program was safety. Therefore, diet bullets are of 100% natural ingredients. I first tested them and my system on myself and I now use them religiously every day. I have found that my program can even help people from those that need to only lose a few pounds up to those who have been hopelessly overweight all their lives, including those who need to lose 20 to 30 or 70 pounds or more.

My diet program does not produce a specific spot reduction, but if you are considerably overweight a significant overall loss of excess pounds could easily mean that you could lose:

- 6 inches off waistline
- 4 inches off stomach
- 4 inches off buttocks
- 3 inches off thighs
- 5 inches off hips

Remember — you don't have to wait weeks for results with my system. It starts instantly! You can actually see the results in just a few days.

Obviously, this or any diet program for that matter, requires a certain amount of will power and self-control to do justice to it; even if it's only enough to start and stay on it.

The way you use diet bullets is simple. All you do is mix it with a glass of your favorite beverage and drink it every day the first thing in the morning.

Then, during the rest of the day, you eat a wide selection of tasty foods which are scientifically programmed to maintain a high level of fat burn-off.

That's all there is to it. This may be the most effective fat-burning method ever developed. It is not a drug. It is not a gimmick. It is a formula and a system that, when used together, make up the program that I was only able to develop after years of research and, as I said before, I use it myself.

It works. And now I want to spread the word to other doctors so they can use my diet system to help all of their overweight patients. To make a long story short, what I want to do is write an article and have it published in the various medical journals as I sincerely felt this is the best way to convince other doctors of the value of my system.

But I need a lot of proof in order to get my article published and this is where you can help me. And, as I said before, I will be more than happy to repay you for your help.

So therefore, here is what I would like for you to do! If you or any member of your family is overweight I would like for you to go ahead and order a supply of my crash-loss system and test it yourself. It is sold by Millburn Products, Inc. As soon as you receive this fantastic diet system — start the program and see if it works for you. Frankly, this or any other diet program will not work for everyone because a very small percentage of people have unusual problems. (By the way, naturally you should check with your doctor before you use this or any other diet plan.) However, Millburn Products is so positive about this diet program that they are making the following guarantee:

IF YOU HAVE NOT LOST UP TO 6 POUNDS IN THE FIRST 48 HOURS AND UP TO 12 POUNDS IN THE FIRST WEEK, OR, IF FOR ANY REASON YOU ARE NOT 100% SATISFIED — THEN SEND BACK THE EMPTY PRODUCT CONTAINER AND THE COMPANY WILL RETURN YOUR ENTIRE PAYMENT TO YOU QUIETLY AND WITHOUT QUESTION.

". . . Imagine how it must feel to drop up to 1¾ pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week . . ."

The price is just $16.95 for a full 20-day supply with complete instructions. A 30-day supply is $18.95 which is a 25% discount, a 60-day supply is $35.61 which is a 30% discount. Whatever quantity you order you will of course receive my entire program.

It is easy to order. Simply write your name and address and the words "Doctors program" on a piece of paper and send it with your payment to:

Millburn Products, Dept. 18
Box 219
St. Davids, PA 19087

Checks and money orders should be made payable to Millburn Products. (By the way, if you wish, the company will even allow you to post-date your check by 30 days.)

ABOUT DOCTOR SCHWERDTFEGER

Don Schwerdtfeger, M.D. has been practicing medicine in San Diego for 14 years. During that time he has treated more than 2500 heroin addicts. However, he now believes that over eating is even more difficult to deal with than many hard-core drug addictions. That's why he has developed the super fast diet system he is writing about on this page. He has also just completed a new book titled "The Secret Truth About Fat People," that is now available at your local book store, or you may order a copy by sending $11.95 to Millburn Products, or by calling the toll free numbers in this ad. Dr. Schwerdtfeger is available on a limited basis for interviews concerning his new book and the contents of this advertisement and he can be contacted at the address on his business card which is reproduced below.

VITAL NOTE!
PLEASE FOLLOW THE INSTRUCTIONS BELOW TO RECEIVE YOUR FREE SUPPLY OF THIS AMAZING DIET SYSTEM.

Or if you prefer, you can order without sending any money. All you have to do is pick up your phone and dial 1-800-523-7635. If you live in Pennsylvania, please call 1-800-662-5180. (These are toll free numbers and it won't cost you a penny.) When the girl answers tell her you want to order from Dept. 18. Then give her your name and address and tell her how much you want to order. Then give her the number of either your Mastercharge or Visa credit card and expiration date.

That's all there is to it. Your order will be sent out to you quite promptly. After that, you are the judge. If you are not 100% satisfied (for any reason at all) simply send back the empty product container to Millburn Products and they will send you a complete refund with no questions asked.

However, I am pretty sure you are going to be more than satisfied. Actually, I think you're going to be amazed. In fact, I think you are going to lose your excess weight faster and easier than you ever thought possible.

Anyway, if I am right I want you to write me a letter. Don't send the letter to Millburn Products. Send it to me at the address on my business card. In the letter tell me how much weight you have lost and how you feel about my program.

In return for this favor (as soon as I get your letter) I will immediately send you another supply of my diet bullets and I will send it to you absolutely free.

The amount that I will send you will be the same amount that you order now from Millburn Products. In your letter to me just tell me how much you originally ordered. This will be my way of thanking you for helping me with my program. Also, in the long run, I honestly feel that with your help and the help of other nice people like yourself that I can do a lot to help people who have been struggling for years with a weight problem.

Sincerely,

Don Schwerdtfeger, M.D.

Apparently the Post Office has certain rules that anyone advertising a diet program cannot represent that it "does not require the obese subject to endure fasting or the symptoms of hunger", or "does not require the obese subject to experience any discomfort or the unpleasant sensation normally associated with dieting." Now he has come forth with one of the most delightful, entertaining and witty guides to food imaginable: Food (Simon & Schuster), an authoritative and visual history and dictionary of the foods of the world. Here are a few recipes from his interesting book.

COCK-A-LEEKIE SOUP
(Ancient Egypt)

1 stewing hen, (4 to 5 lbs.)
4 lbs. shin beef, sliced
2 bunches leeks, about 12
3 qts. cold water
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

1. Rinse the hen in cold water. Place the hen and beef into a large kettle.
2. Cut off tough green ends of leeks and discard. Wash leeks under cold running water, using point of knife to cut through leaf layers. Carefully rinse away sand.
3. Cut leeks crosswise into ½-inch slices. Add to the kettle, along with water, salt and pepper. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 2½ to 3 hours or until chicken and beef are very tender.
4. Remove chicken and beef from broth. Bone chicken, discarding bone, gristle and skin. Cut chicken meat into small pieces; return to broth. Remove bone and fat from beef; discard. Cut beef into small pieces; return to broth.
5. Add ready-to-eat prunes; heat soup to boiling. Taste. Add additional salt and pepper if desired. Serve in large soup bowls accompanied by a crusty loaf and a jar of prepared white horseradish. You'll find that the prunes add a delicious flavor to the broth. Makes about 4 quarts

PINEAPPLE CHEESE BARS
(Old Spain)

2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

1 can (8 ozs.) crushed pineapple
1 pkg. (8 ozs.) cream cheese, softened
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 egg, separated
½ cup almonds, ground
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon

1. Combine flour, sugar, baking powder and salt into bowl. With pastry blender, cut in butter until particles are size of small peas.
2. Press ¾ of the mixture into ungreased 9 × 13 × 2-inch pan. Bake in preheated (375°F.) oven 10 minutes. Reserve remaining crumb mixture for topping.
3. Turn pineapple into strainer and drain.
4. Blend cream cheese with confectioners' sugar. Stir in drained pineapple, egg white, almonds and cinnamon. Spread in even layer over partially baked crust.
5. Blend remaining crumb mixture with egg yolk and press together. Roll out on floured board to a 10 × 6-inch rectangle and cut into ½ inch wide strips. Arrange strips over filling, crisscross fashion. Return to oven and bake 20 to 25 minutes longer. Cut into squares or bars while warm. Makes 20 to 24 bars

SPORTS

The Special Grace of Marvelous Marques Johnson

By Mark Goodman

UPI

When Marques Johnson arrived in Milwaukee in 1977 to assume his place on the court of the NBA's faltering Bucks, radio announcer Eddie Doucette took one look at his soaring dunks and labeled him, "The Grand Slam." Doucette went on to enthuse that Marques was "affable, articulate, visible, charismatic, has savoir faire and is the next O.J. Simpson."

These have turned out to be well-deserved kudos, but they hold a glum geographical snag: It is as difficult for Marques to be "visible" (and therefore "charismatic") in Milwaukee as it was for O.J. in Buffalo. Anyway, the games are different. It is Dr. J — Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, to the uninitiated — not O.J., whom Marques will someday supplant as the reigning superstar of the National Basketball Association.

It takes nothing away from the good Doctor's superlative game to observe that that day is just a leap and a bound away. Erving, brilliant as he is, is almost 31 and playing on fragile knees. Johnson, at 6 feet 6½ inches, 218 pounds, is built like a pro football tight end, and, a week before his 25th birthday, is already a better rebounder and defender than Dr. J. Still, Julius has fully earned his myth, while Johnson, in his fourth pro season, is just building his.

(You'll be able to compare the two for yourself in Sunday's NBA all-star game, when Erving and Johnson team up at forward on the Eastern Conference squad.)

Curiously enough, this low-key image suits Marques just fine. A collegiate Player-of-the-Year (1977) from UCLA, where the sun always shines and the cameras are ever on, is not apt to take kindly to the frigid reaches of wintertime Wisconsin. But when Marques was drafted by the Bucks, he immediately become a candidate for the "Professional Athletes Diplomatic Corps" by saying that Milwaukee would "give me a chance to broaden my horizons." And he parried superstar talk nicely. "I'm not a superstar," he said matter-of-factly. "David Thompson's a superstar, Rick Barry's a superstar. Julius Erving might be the superstar. That's why I love to watch him play."

A serious student of the game, Marques is sincere in his appreciation of his elders and his peers. He will admit, with a laugh, that he also enjoys watching Boston's Larry Bird play — even when he's up against him and giving away nearly three inches. Johnson isn't kidding about Milwaukee either. "For me," he says, "it's a good complement to where I'm from. The pace is slower, more conservative, than in Los Angeles. It's a good family atmosphere. Sure, I like the bright lights and the big city. But there's something to be said for a town of hard-working people without much leisure time."

Indeed, Marques says, the change was good for him in several ways; he is one of the rare players who will concede that the pressure was harder on him in college than in the pros. "I can't say the decline in celebrity bothered me. Milwaukee is different than UCLA, where we were on national TV all the time. Besides, at UCLA, I wasn't completely comfortable having to take 20-25 shots a game. I like to score like everyone else, but I just wasn't as good an all-around player as I should have been."

Marques Johnson

All that changed at Milwaukee, where Coach Don Nelson, a dedicated team man from his playing days with the Boston Celtics, introduced Marques to a team-oriented philosophy. Says Nelson: "We ask Marques to get points and rebounds, to get out on the break, to defend against the heavy hitters, to take the physical punishment. I haven't seen a guy so willing to learn and play the nonglory aspects of the game since Dave Cowens."

And if fans don't always recognize those nonglorious aspects of the game, basketball people certainly do. In his second season (1978-79) Johnson was the top vote-getting forward in the selection for the NBA all-star team. The runner-up? Julius Erving. (Marques was only second team last year. Bird beat him out for the first-team spot opposite Julius.)

Last season Marques averaged 21.7 points and 7½ rebounds a game; more than anything, he impressed coaches and rivals with his rugged, high-flying game up around the rim. Says Johnson: "I've been wrapped up in going to the basket all my life."

That began in Natchitoches, La., where his father was a high-school basketball coach. At age 5 Marques was joining his father on the bench, then delighting the crowd at halftime by dribbling up and down the court. By the time he was 7 his family (including four sisters) had moved to Los Angeles, where Marques began burning up the park leagues.

He went on to star at Crenshaw High School, one of the toughest and most notorious institutions of learning in Los Angeles. Yet his home life was one of solid middle-class respectability. "My family is very close," he says, "and they had a tremendous influence on me. A lot of guys I hung around with in high school went in a different direction — a bad direction, in some cases. I know my parents were the ones who kept me in a straight line. Even now, when I go home and I've had a good game, it isn't as if everybody gets all excited. My father usually has some constructive criticism, and it keeps me from thinking I'm the greatest."

Johnson carries this realistic attitude over to all aspects of the oft-crazy pro game. For instance, the UCLA communications major has learned the rules for communicating in the NBA. "If there's a difference between pro and college basketball," he says, "it's the approach taken toward officials. You have to be an actor to play in the NBA. I would go up for shots, get hit by opponents — and the ref would tell me that was part of the game. When I learned to fall on the floor and grab my wrist, the official called a foul."

Johnson is also sensible enough about the game to know that it can't be taken too seriously all the time. "I learned early," he says with a laugh, "that with some of the characters we have in this league, no matter how psyched up you get before a game, there's no way you can be serious for 48 minutes every night."

An autograph hunter's delight, Marques spends hours slapping hands and signing programs for the youngsters. Off-season, he and a former coach run a free basketball clinic for kids in Los Angeles, and this summer they hope to establish it on a citywide basis. But he's perfectly happy to return to Milwaukee each fall. He still wants to get into television when his days on the court are done, but for now he's content to take things a stride at a time.

"When I was a senior at UCLA," he says, "I was getting a lot of publicity and a lot of advice. I wanted to hustle up as much as possible. I wanted to do as many commercials as I could." He shrugs. "Now I don't feel that way anymore. A lot of people are still interested in using me, but I'm not in a hurry. Those things will come in time."

Then he smiles. "That's not very Hollywood, is it? Well, that's what living in Milwaukee will do for you." FW

PRACTICING WHAT HE TEACHES

To get his students' attention and to prove a scientific point, a Montana State University professor is lying down on the job — on a bed of nails. Before his first lecture of the semester, physics professor Larry Kirkpatrick lowers his bare back, very gingerly, onto a bed of 3,729 inch-long nails. Then he asks a 200-pound student to sit on his chest.

In 13 years of teaching, Kirkpatrick has braved many such acts. For instance, he stuck his moistened hand in -300° liquid nitrogen to show that moisture forms a vapor barrier protecting the skin. To prove this further, Kirkpatrick may walk barefoot across burning coals. He'll soak his feet and then run with plastic bags over them to work up enough sweat for a successful barrier.

"I've been mulling this over," he confesses, "but after talking to a few people, I'm not so sure anymore."

A CLASSIC VINE

The kudzu vine is virtually indestructible. Pesticides don't work on it; the only way to stop it is to burn it out. Kudzu can choke off a tree's air and light, killing it. But this malevolent foliage may be a human lifesaver.

University of Alabama chemistry professor William Paudler says a chemical in the plant may help control high blood pressure, adding that he has already used the kudzu compound to successfully regulate high blood pressure in animals. Although he doesn't know how the plant works, he notes that the Japanese and Chinese have used kudzu for centuries, for everything from birth control to fertility.

DRUGS IN THE NBA: THE BLACK & WHITE OF IT

Reports have come out in the past few months saying that 75 percent of professional basketball players are using cocaine. However, former NBA great Bill Russell charges that there are racial undertones to such reports.

"One of the reasons for the uproar is the high visibility of black players," said Russell, in New York recently to promote his autobiography, Second Wind. "Look, in general, basketball players are the highest-paid athletes. Your average writer is not the highest-paid guy. And he spent a lot of years going to school. He sees these young punks from the slums making 10 or 100 times more than he's making, and they don't seem to be appreciative enough for him. So he sticks it to them, gives them a good shot."

COLD FACTS

The common cold is more than just a nuisance: It's a burden on the nation's economy. More than 90 percent of us get between two and three colds a year, costing our economy an estimated $6 billion in lost workdays and work we botch due to the illness.

Edgar Blakeney

DREAM YOUR CARES AWAY

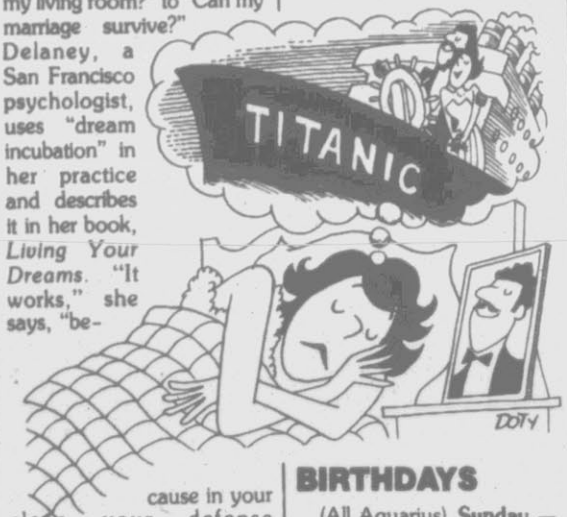
Is it possible to solve life's problems in your sleep?

Yes, believes Dr. Gayle Delaney. She says you can train yourself to dream up answers to questions ranging from "How should I decorate my living room?" to "Can my marriage survive?" Delaney, a San Francisco psychologist, uses "dream incubation" in her practice and describes it in her book, Living Your Dreams. "It works," she says, "because in your sleep your defense mechanisms are broken down, allowing you to be more creative in your approach. You see yourself more objectively, plus your mind has access to all your memories."



Here's how to try dream incubation yourself: Before you go to bed, write down the problem you want to focus on. Then come up with a one-line question describing it. Get in bed and repeat the question over and over to yourself. The repetition will take your mind off the problem and lull you to sleep. Then when you wake up the next day, says Delaney, "immediately write down what you remember, even if it's only a fragment of a dream or a line from a song. Then begin to analyze what the dream might mean."

Delaney says that often the dream will be self-explanatory but that it may deal in metaphors and symbols. She describes one woman who was having doubts about where her relationship was headed. The woman tried dream incubation and dreamed she was on a ship with her boyfriend at the helm. Suddenly the name of the ship flashed in her mind — the Titanic.

HOW THE SPROUTER WORKS

There are only 2 easy steps—Nature does the rest. You just put a spoonful of seeds in the sprouter and fill with water. Snap on the perforated cover and invert sprouter to drain off excess water. Repeat morning and evening and in 2 to 5 days the jar will be filled with delicious crisp sprouts.

Check the box in the order blank and return it with an order for any of the items in this ad and we will include without charge a SEED SPROUTER and packet of seeds. Growing sprouts is fun!

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Lampshade is different. 2. Mug is missing. 3. Paper towel bar is missing. 4. Tail is different. 5. Window is missing. 6. Arm is moved.

● HOG WILD! Age 10 or more? Jot down your age, double it, add five, multiply by 50, subtract 365. Now, add the number of fleas on an emerging groundhog (take a guess, up to 99), and add 115. Resulting first two digits will give your age and last two the number of fleas.

● Money Talks! One word has gone astray in each of these three old sayings about money: 1. Money squawks. 2. Crime is money. 3. A fool and his money are soon larded. Can you set them straight? paired

1. Money talks. 2. Time is money. 3. A fool and his money are soon parted

● Block Buster! "There's my name on the cornerstone of that building," said tourist MC CLIX. In what year was the building built? 1759 SNY

● Tongue Teasers! Say fast: Gentle breezes bent the blades of the big, brown, broad-leaf broomgrass. Gwen and Ben are bride and groom.

Bluffo, the magician, ties a single overhand knot in a piece of cord. He then ties the ends of the cord with several similar knots.

Bluffo states that he will cause the knot at the center of the loop to disappear without untying the ends. He turns his back for a moment, turns around, and ala-kazam, the knot is gone. How's it done?

This is how: When he turns around, Bluffo loosens the knot and slides it up to the top of the loop where it merges with the other knots.

ON THE RUN! Simply add these colors neatly to enhance this winter scene: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Lt. purple. 6—Dk. green. 7—Maroon. 8—Dk. blue. 9—Black.

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

LEGATION

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Prince Valiant

THE EARLY DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

Our Story: VAL'S PRIDE HAS BROUGHT GREAT WOES TO CAMELOT. AS ATONEMENT, 'THE WANDERER' BIDS HIM SEEK HUMILITY FROM A FARAWAY HERMIT. AFTER A LONELY VIGIL HE DEPARTS.

HOW PRINCE VALIANT SPENT THE NEXT TWO WEEKS IS NOT RECORDED, FOR MANY DOCUMENTS WERE LATER DESTROYED DURING THE TERRIBLE SACK OF CAMELOT. WE KNOW THAT SOMETIME IN FEBRUARY HE ARRIVES AT AN INN, TIRED AND FROSTBITTEN, IN THE BURGUNDIAN CAPITAL OF GENEVA.

HE INQUIRES ABOUT THE HERMIT ON THE MOUNTAIN. "WHAT AILS YOU?" THE INNKEEPER REPLIES WISELY. "IS IT AVARICE? LUST? HAVE YOU LOST AT LOVE?" VAL SILENCES THE LOUT WITH AN ICY STARE, BUT THE INNKEEPER MERELY SMILES. "OH, I SEE. PRIDE."

"LISTEN," HE CONTINUES. "FIFTY YEARS AGO I CLIMBED YONDER MOUNTAIN MYSELF. I WAS AN ORPHAN AND WISHED TO LEARN OF MY PARENTS. THE OLD MAN WELCOMED ME. 'BEHIND ONE DOOR LIES YOUR PAST,' HE SAID. 'BEHIND THE OTHER YOUR FUTURE. YOU MAY OPEN ONE OF THEM.'"

"BUT WHICH WAS WHICH? MY HAND TREMBLED AS I UNLOCKED THE FIRST DOOR. BUT I DID NOT LOOK IN. I FLED, AFRAID OF WHAT I DID NOT KNOW."

"WHERE DO I FIND HIM?" VAL ASKS. "JUST CLIMB THE MOUNTAIN," THE INNKEEPER SAYS. "IF HE WANTS TO BE FOUND YOU WILL FIND HIM." BY DAYBREAK PRINCE VALIANT HAS LONG BEEN UNDER WAY, AND HE SEES THAT MANY HAVE COME BEFORE HIM, THEIR TROUBLED SOULS SOOTHED FOREVER BY THE MOUNTAIN'S CHILL EMBRACE.
