Future City School Needs Are Offered

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The projected student population and major facility needs relating to students in grades 10-12 for long range planning purposes was presented to members of the City Board of Education at the board's February information meeting Monday night.

The presentation was the fourth in a series covering various grade levels of the school system made by Superintendent Glenn Cox as a prelude to the board holding workshops to shape up a comprehensive long range plan.

Student population projections for the three high school grades, as for projections for other grades in the school system, predict a decline in students from now through school year 1986-87. The current enrollment for grades 10-12 of 1,274 (1,201 at Rose High and 73 at Agnes Fullilove), is expected to drop to 1,028 by 1986-87.

Major needs and possible developments cited by Cox in relation to planning for the future include:

— The question of how long Agnes Fullilove can continued to be used. Cox noted there's no way the board will be able to get approval for future use of state bond money for repair, expansion or renovation of the 1923 building. This is predicated not only on the age of the building, but on current state land space requirements for schools.

— The possible purchase of J.H. Rose High School by East Carolina University and all that that could entail.

— The question of arrangements for the Rose High auto mechanics course — will the school continue to rent, at $10,000 annually, the building now used, or will other arrangements be made?

— Athletic facilities. Cox mentioned that the expanding sports program at ECU could seriously change the picture, especially for football, at Rose High as scheduling becomes tighter. "If we have to go to a Thursday or Saturday night play time, that's going to make a difference in athletic income," Cox said.

— An auditorium. This is still considered a high priority item in order to provide a place to stage plays and concerts, and to have a gathering place for student assemblies.

— Meeting the handicapped codes. If more stringent codes are enforced, such action would result in expensive renovation or site change, particularly at Rose High, where the library is on the second floor.

— Expansion of vocational programs. Cox spoke about the change in concept of vocational programs in recent years, moving from what was previously a basic function of county schools to a status of equality for county and city school systems.

— Growth of the exceptional child programs. These programs, in past years centered on elementary grades, have with the passing of time moved up into the high school level. "This means more programs will be added, with more space requirements, at the tenth through 12th grade level," Cox commented.

Board member Dr. Jon Tinglestad referred to the existing agreement between Rose High and Pitt Community College "for utilizing PCC facilities in offering courses such as auto mechanics."

"I feel that the industrial community is very much concerned about a good vocational program that will help provide skilled trained young people, and that they might get behind and help support a strong program."

Cox said, "The framework, the agreement, is there, that we can work with. The major problem is that as vocational programs grow and broaden, there may not always be space available at Pitt Community for our needs."

Gov. Hunt Lists Crime Programs

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Calling for the state to focus on crime prevention with new programs helping juveniles, Gov. Jim Hunt asked legislators Monday night to enact measures that would ban the sale of drug-related accessories and also toughen laws against organized crime.

As he spoke to a joint session of the General Assembly outlining his anti-crime initiatives, a series of bills that would accomplish many of his proposals was filed in the House by Judiciary I Committee Chairman Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

Miller's bills, all recommended by Hunt, would establish a state anti-racketeering law, allow the state take money earned in illegal operations, and establish consecutive sentences for some repeat offenders.

In his second speech to legislators in less than three weeks, Hunt called for local juvenile-crime prevention programs to be established in every county by 1985 as well as citizen volunteers to help young people.

He also called for an attack on drug abuse by youths through a paraphernalia law.

"I believe people who purvey drug paraphernalia, trying to popularize drug use among young people, are parasites on society," Hunt said. "I ask you to pass a tough drug paraphernalia law that will put every 'head shop' in North Carolina out of business."

While most legislators widely praised Hunt's speech, several legislators — including Miller — expressed doubts about the ability to write such a paraphernalia law that was within constitutional guidelines.

"We're going to look at it very closely before we put it in," Miller said the proposal. "We must be aware of current appellate court decisions on the subject."

So-called head shops are stores that sell drug accessories, such as marijuana pipes and other smoking aides. In printed copies of his speech Hunt qualified his call for such a bill "that will pass constitutional muster," but he deleted that reference in delivering his speech.

Annual Report Ready

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Housing Authority's annual report for 1980 has been prepared for presentation to Mayor Don McGlohon and members of the City Council.

The report, read at the Authority's regular meeting last night, will be accompanied by the agency's check to the city amounting to $15,073.89, representing the payment in lieu of taxes for fiscal year 1980.

"Although the Housing Authority rental income has increased approximately six percent for the year, the cost of utility services rose 25 percent over the previous year resulting in a reduction of almost $5,000 in the overall payment in lieu of taxes," the report explained.

The annual review, signed by Authority chairman James E. Sutton, pointed out that construction of the University Towers Mid-Rise for the elderly was completed during the year and the 60 units are fully occupied.

The report noted, "The Housing Authority made great strides in the Section Eight program during the year, and is in the process of renting up 75 units of Section Eight existing and 75 units of Section Eight moderate rehabilitation housing."

It was explained, "These programs have aided many elderly and handicapped persons in their current housing through rental assistance payments to the owner of the property."

The Authority informed local officials that, including the units for the elderly, it now has 702 housing units occupied. Overall, some 47 percent of the tenants are elderly or handicapped, while another 35 percent are full time working families who receive no public assistance.

Assistant Director J. C. Lamm, reporting in the absence of the Authority's executive director, Joe Laney, said that 72 of the 75 units authorized here under the existing housing program are leased and certificates of eligibility have been approved and issued for five other units.

Some 16 units are under contract through the program of moderate rehabilitation here, Lamm reported.

The spokesman said that the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has advised the Authority to wait until HUD releases a new wage determination. (Please turn to Page 10)

Hospital Radio Review By Pitt Commissioners

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of County Commissioners yesterday said they would meet with rescue squad representatives, hospital officials, physicians, and others interested in emergency medical services before giving their approval to an EMS grant application for ultra high frequency radio communications equipment for Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The equipment is designed for use in advanced life support or paramedic programs.

Among those meeting with Pitt commissioners yesterday to discuss the proposal were Dr. Jack Allison, chief of the emergency department at Pitt Memorial Hospital and chairman of the East Carolina University medical school's Department of Emergency Medicine; Col. Dave Spivey, area coordinator for Emergency Management for the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development; and Ray Eubanks, president of the Pitt County Rescue Squad Association.

Allison told the board that, "the grant we're applying for is a regional grant...to improve emergency medical services," in 29 Eastern North Carolina counties. He added that the proposed radio equipment is only one part of the grant, which if funded, would provide $500,000 in federal funds during the next fiscal year and some $2 million over the next four-and-a-half years.

Pointing out that, "we're having difficulties with the present Pitt Memorial Hospital radio...difficulty raising Pitt County on the radio," Allison contended that the present equipment, "is not up to snuff." Allison emphasized that improved radio communications is essential, especially if area rescue squads move, "from basic to full advanced life support over the next four years."

Wilson County has already begun advanced life support or paramedic training, he noted, while Chowan and Dare County rescue squads are beginning intermediate life support programs and will move into full advanced life support.

Reagan Says U.S. Will Keep 39,000 Troops In S. Korea

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, taking a hands-off approach to South Korea's internal affairs, says the United States will keep its 39,000 combat troops on the Korean peninsula.

Reagan also is offering to sell additional U.S. weapons and defense industry technology to help South Korea confront "continuing threats to peace."

A senior State Department official said it's even possible U.S. forces there will be strengthened, although probably not with more ground troops, to offset a North Korean military advantage that "could lead to an attack at almost any time."

In a communique following talks here Monday with South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan, Reagan tried to smooth four years of rocky relations between Washington and Seoul, saying the United States will "resume immediately" a full range of consultations with South Korea.

He laid to rest his predecessor's long-stalled plan to gradually withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea, declaring, "The United States has no plans to withdraw U.S. ground combat forces from the Korean peninsula."

He also set aside the Carter administration's concerns over human rights abuses and the military coup that brought Chun to power and aborted moves to make the Korean government more democratic.

Reagan told Chun in a luncheon toast the two nations enjoy "a never-ending friendship" and "our special bond of freedom and friendship is as strong to-day" as it was 30 years ago.

The communique made no mention of human rights, but the State Department official who briefed reporters said, "It is not for this administration to go into the internal affairs of the Republic of Korea."

"We are not going to look into the past; we are looking toward the future," the official, who asked not to be identified, added. And, if any doubts remained, he said, "security is uppermost in our minds as we approach relations with South Korea."

The developments in Washington were greeted enthusiastically in South Korea. Seoul newspapers gave banner headlines to the announcement that there would be no U.S. troop withdrawal and reported that was only part of broader moves to strengthen Korean-American relations.

"The inconvenient relationship between the old administrations has now clearly come to an end and the relations between the two countries now have entered into an era of new partnership and broad understanding," the Democratic Justice Party said in a statement. The party is the dominant government political organization in South Korea.

Chun had two chief objectives on his trip here, according to another State Department official: to obtain reaffirmation of the U.S. defense commitment and to enhance his image as leader both at home and abroad. He succeeded in both.

DRAWBRIDGE MEMORIES?

I am interested in obtaining some information about the drawbridges in this area. I have already contacted several state and county officials and employees and maintenance departments getting excellent results, but could not get answers to a few of my questions. I need the following information: When was the Grimesland drawbridge constructed? Who was the man who tended it on a 24-hour basis when it first opened, and any biographical background on him (I know his last name was Richardson). Also, when did the Yankee Hall Logging Company close and why? I have heard that a special tug used to push the logs up the river for Yankee Hall. What was it called and how often did it run? S. F.

Anyone who can help is asked to call Sue after 5 p. m., 752-1500.

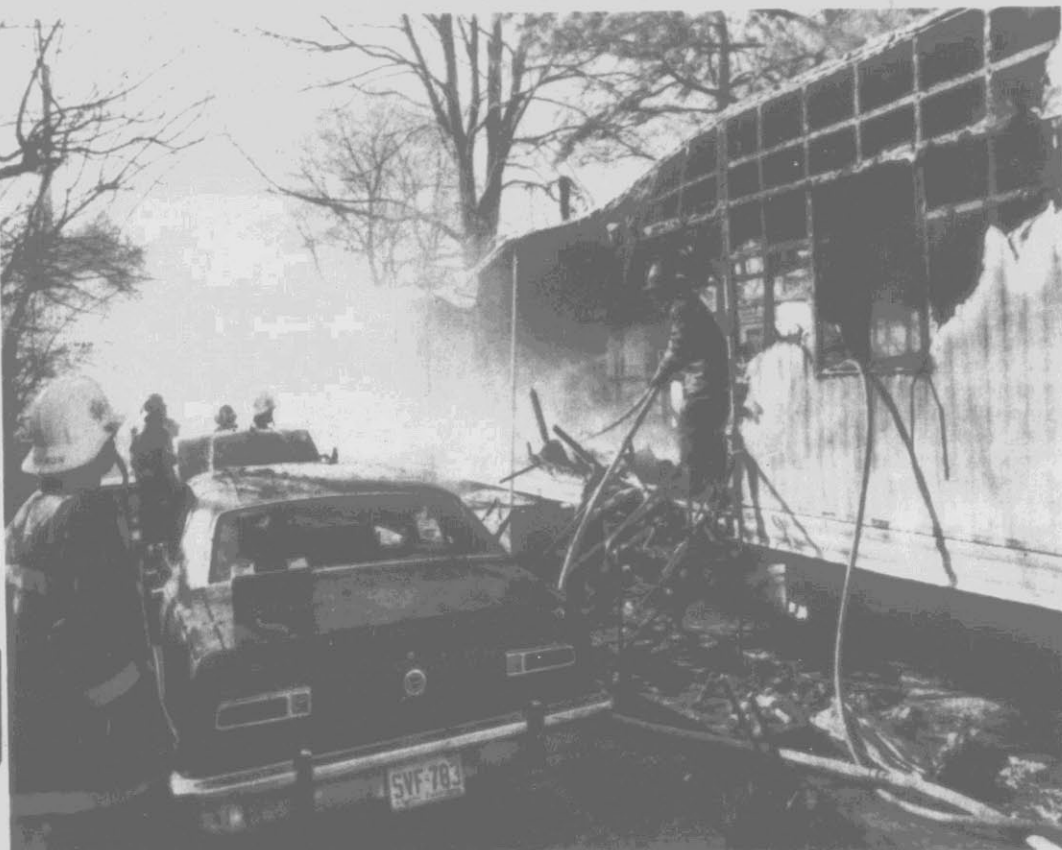

Extend Deadline

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday voted to extend the deadline for listing personal and real property for taxes until 5 p.m. Friday.

Under State law, all real and personal property must be listed for tax purposes during the month of January, unless the listing period is extended by the Board of County Commissioners.

County officials earlier had extended the deadline until today, because of last week's snow.

Yesterday, the board extended the listing period until 5 p.m. Friday because of the snow, and the high winds and rain on Monday.

FAMILY ESCAPES FIRE — Ronnie Ballinger, his wife Peggy, and their three year-old son escaped injury this morning when their mobile home caught fire in the Hillcrest Mobile Home Park on E. Tenth St. Ballinger said he and his family were asleep in the back bedroom of the mobile home, when they woke and saw flames coming down the hall. Ballinger also commented they just had enough time to get out and that no one was injured. Firemen found the middle of the mobile home completely engulfed in flames when they arrived. A car parked near the mobile home was also heavily damaged by flames leaping from the burning structure. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Two Health Educators Join Department

Two health educators have joined the staff of the Pitt County Community Health Department.

Donna Weeks, Family Planning Health Educator, graduate of the East Carolina University School and Community Health Program, came to Pitt County in October, 1980, after a period of service with the Granville-Vance District Health Department.

Weeks is responsible for the health education component of the family planning program and for programs designed to decrease the rate of teenage pregnancy in Pitt County. She provides a class on birth control methods to all patients who visit the family planning clinic for the first time and supplies educational materials to other interested persons. In addition, she supervises the Teen Health Information Center which is a display of pamphlets on various health topics available on request to city and county schools and acts as a resource person to the school system on request.

She also coordinates the activities of the Family Planning Participant Advisory Council (PAC), a group composed of consumers who provide input and evaluation of the family planning. Among the several subcommittees of the Family Planning PAC are the Media Review Committee, which reviews all educational material for use within family planning and the Parent Education Committee which is in the process of developing a class on parenting skills for interested parents in the county.

Pat Byrd has returned to Pitt County after serving 20 months as Dental Health Education Consultant with the North Carolina Division of Health Services, Dental Health Section.

Byrd is a career educator with 22 years of public school education experience. She received the master's degree in administrative services-school and community health from East Carolina University in 1978.

Byrd's primary responsibilities are to provide health education to Pitt County residents and to promote the services of the Health Department. She will assist in assessing community health education needs, develop education materials and methods to meet the needs, and provide technical assistance to all health department programs. In addition, she will supervise field training for ECU Community Health students.

Both health educators will be prepared to address community groups on a variety of health-related concerns. However, they stress that those who would like to arrange for speakers should allow at least two weeks notice. They may be contacted at the Health Department by phoning 752-4141, Monday-Friday.

Two Indicted In Bid-Rigging

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A suspended State Department of Transportation officials and a Fayetteville contractor were indicted on a Wake County grand jury Monday on charges involving the alleged paving of the official's driveway in exchange for confidential bid estimates.

James Preston Allen, 49, a former proposal and contract project engineer suspended without pay Jan. 19 by Transportation Secretary Thomas W. Bradshaw Jr. was indicted on charges of malfeasance. He had been suspended when Bradshaw received information from SBI agents investigating the possibility of state involvement in the highway bid-rigging scandal.

Also indicted on malfeasance charges were William W. Crowell and Crowell Constructors Inc.

The indictments charge that Constructors Inc. paved the driveway of Allen's Raleigh home at no cost to Allen, in return for his divulging confidential highway contract estimates before all bids had been submitted.

Court documents said the asphalt pavement was worth about $1,800.

The charges were filed under a little used state statute barring malfeasance by public employees or by private company officials, said J. Randolph Riley, Wake County district attorney.

Conviction under the malfeasance statute carries a sentence of up to 10 years in prison and a maximum fine of $20,000.

Riley said the charges were "a first step in a continuing investigation. Hopefully, they'll make things easier the rest of the way."

Marine Suing Iranian Govm't

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marine Sgt. Gregory A. Persinger, charging that his diplomatic privileges, immunities and civil rights were violated when he was taken hostage in Tehran, is seeking $120,000 in damages from the government of Iran, it was reported today.

In a suit filed Monday in U.S. District Court, Persinger said he and his family suffered when he was "threatened with execution before a firing squad" and "subjected to numerous instances of assault and battery, physical abuse and severe emotional and psychological pressures." The Washington Star reported.

Under the terms of the agreement that led to the release of Persinger and 51 other American hostages on Jan. 20, the United States said it would prohibit all future suits against Iran stemming from the hostage seizure.

Peter Neeson, one of the attorneys representing Persinger, told The Washington Star that the terms of the agreement barring suits against Iran would be challenged in court.

"I believe that our clients' rights have been violated. He (Persinger) believes that, and his parents believe that, and that's why we're taking this action," Neeson said.

Persinger, 23, of Seaford, Del., is seeking punitive, compensatory and special damages. His parents, Lawrence and Jacqueline Persinger, also are listed as plaintiffs in the suit.

BETHEL FARMER RECEIVES SEED AWARD — F. Curtis Martin, left, of Bethel, received the North Carolina seed industry's top award at the recent joint meeting in Raleigh of the N.C. Crop Improvement Association and the N.C. Foundation Seed Producers. Martin, who has produced and sold certified seed for 36 years, received the 1981 Crop Improvement Award. The Pitt County man has twice served as president of the N.C. Crop Improvement Association. The award was presented by current president Lawrence Davenport of Greenville, right. (N.C. State Photo By Ralph Mills)

Teams Patrol Ecuador And Peru's Battlefield

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Teams of foreign military attaches patrolled the border battle front between Peru and Ecuador today to supervise a cease-fire agreed to after five days of skirmishing.

The United States, Brazil, Chile and Argentina sent the military observers Monday from their embassies in Lima and Quito, the Peruvian and Ecuadorean capitals, to criss-cross the disputed area in the Condor mountain range by helicopter.

Their job was to make sure that neither army started fighting again at three remote outposts which Ecuador established on territory awarded to Peru in 1942 treaty guaranteed by the four foreign powers.

No fighting had been reported since Monday. Peru claimed it had captured all three posts, but Ecuador said it still held two. Each side said it inflicted heavy casualties on the other, but so far Ecuador has acknowledged only two of its soldiers killed while Peru has admitted to one.

Acceptance of the cease-fire was announced in Lima Monday by Peru's acting foreign minister, Felipe Osterling, and in Quito by Ecuador's president, Jaime Roldos.

Although Roldos said his government sought a peaceful solution to the conflict, he warned it still demands sovereignty over the 70,000 square miles of disputed territory.

"The cease-fire does not signify renunciation of Ecuadorean rights," he told a rally in Quito. "I am conscious of what a long conflict can signify. But I am also conscious that it is an elementary duty to defend Ecuador's territorial integrity."

The Rio de Janeiro Protocol of 1942 delineating the border through the Condor range was signed after a border war in which 500 Peruvians and Ecuadoreans were killed. Ecuador abrogated the treaty in 1951, asserting it had signed under duress. Fighting broke out last week after Ecuador established the three outposts on the Peruvian side of the border in January.

The Organization of American States took up the border fighting at an emergency meeting in Washington Monday. Ecuador's foreign minister, Alfonso Barrera, and Peru's foreign minister, Javier Arias Stella, each accused the other's government of aggression.

Barrera demanded Arias Stella abandon his "arrogant position," and Arias Stella accused Barrera of making "inadmissible insults."

Iraq Receives New Mirages

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq said today it had received four Mirage F-1 jet fighters from France and renewed its offer to negotiate a peaceful settlement of the war with Iran.

An Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman said the first planes of an Iraqi order of 60 French jets had arrived and that "the French decision to deliver the planes is considered a good example and Iraq must look at France differently from the sceptical look at the big powers."

Most countries have declined to ship arms to the two warring nations and the Baghdad statement contrasted the actions of France with other unnamed countries who "turned their backs on their obligations."

In war action, both Tehran and Baghdad reported inflicting heavy casualties in a series of clashes along the 300-mile front in a 48-hour period.

France announced Sunday it would begin providing the F-1 interceptors. Iraq ordered 36 of the planes in 1977, with delivery set for February, and ordered another 24 of the aircraft in 1979.

Western military analysts in the Middle East said the Mirages would help Iraq minimize the role of Iran's U.S.-made aircraft and provide better protection for Iraqi bombers raiding Iran.

The Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman said his country was "completely prepared to cease fire and reach a peaceful, just and honest settlement of the conflict" with Iran. But Iraq has demanded Iranian territorial concessions along their border and control of the Shatt al-Arab waterway.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr on Monday reiterated Iran's stand that there can be no negotiations until Iraqi forces withdraw from Iranian soil. Bani-Sadr met with visiting Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi, who headed an eight-member Islamic Conference delegation to the two countries to explore ways to end the war.

The delegation was to go on to Baghdad after meeting with Iranian officials.

Drug Arrest Is Made Here

Greenville police yesterday, assisted by agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and the Pitt County Sheriff's Department, arrested Ronald Victor Howell Jr., 33 of 129 Hollybrook Est., on charges of possession of methaqualone and trafficking in cocaine.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the arrest followed a 4:55 p.m. search of Howell's residence during which officers found 400 methaqualone tablets and 35 grams of cocaine.

Howell was placed in the Pitt County jail under $10,000 bond pending a hearing in the case.

Senate Expected Confirm Donovan

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Raymond J. Donovan, the full weight of the Senate's new Republican majority behind him, is finally on the verge of taking his place as labor secretary in President Reagan's Cabinet.

"My prediction is he'll be confirmed and confirmed by a comfortable margin," Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said today shortly before debate began on the appointment. Donovan is the only member of Reagan's Cabinet not yet confirmed.

"I think he's withstood the attack very well," Baker said of the allegations that Donovan has ties to labor racketeers.

"I think he's stronger now than when he began."

Donovan's confirmation was delayed to permit the FBI to investigate allegations, none of them proven, that he has had ties to organized crime figures.

More than two dozen FBI agents assigned to the case failed to verify any of more than a dozen allegations against Donovan, and the 50-year-old construction company executive denied any wrongdoing in testimony before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

As a result, aides said the only suspense in the confirmation vote was how many of the Senate's 47 Democrats would oppose the nomination because of their concern over the numerous unsubstantiated allegations. Five of the seven Democrats on the labor panel voted "present" rather than go on record favoring Donovan's confirmation.

While congressional Republicans were shepherding the nomination through the Senate, there were several other developments Monday.

—The FBI said it sought to discourage Donovan's chief accuser, Ralph Picardo, from granting a live interview last week on the NBC "Today" program. Picardo, who is under FBI protection in connection with other investigations, granted the interview and repeated his allegations that Donovan and his company made illegal payoffs in the 1960s in exchange for labor peace. Donovan is executive vice president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J.

—A "Today" program producer reported that Donovan's attorney, Dean

Burch, used the White House telephone switchboard to call the network in an attempt to get the Picardo's interview dropped.

—A majority of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee said "simple and compelling" justice calls for Donovan's confirmation.

A spokesman said the FBI "discouraged" Picardo from doing the "Today" interview "because by encouraging it, it might appear that we were endorsing what he said."

"But any citizen has a right to go on national television and he exercised that right," said the spokesman, Dave Divan.

Divan also acknowledged there may have been "some idle conversation" about withdrawing Picardo's protection. However, he added, "We did not withdraw our security. We kept it there."

"Today" producer Pete Hively said that after the White House operator put Burch on the line the lawyer said, "We're not going for an injunction (to block the interview) because we believe in the First Amendment."

A call being placed by a White House telephone operator could give the listener the impression the call was an official one, even though Burch has no position in the administration.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he could neither confirm nor deny that the call went through the White House switchboard. However, he said Burch was acting as Donovan's attorney, and that there had been no request from the White House for him to call the NBC official.

"It was not done at the request of the White House even though he might have gone through the switchboard," said Speakes.

Burch, former head of the Federal Communications Commission, could not be reached for comment.

Small Jewelled Pets Win Hearts

NEW YORK (AP) — Want a whimsical little gift for that special Valentine of yours? How about a fuzzy little cat that won't give her allergies — or a shaggy dog she won't have to walk? The Jewelry Industry Council points out that such little jewelled pets will be quite at home on her lapel or collar.

"Of course, there are always the little heart pendants and pins for Valentine's Day, but there's something extra charming about a little wise old owl, a colorful lovebird, a rampant rooster or a handsome gold-winged dragonfly with little diamond eyes in gold," adds Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the council.

These remembrances are practical additions to her jewelry collection and can be worn not only on lapels and collars, but on fabric handbags, hair ribbons or neck scarves to perk up a costume, she says.

"Best of all, you can start her on her own little pet collection," she says, "adding new little animals and birds for future gift occasions. Chosen in karat gold or gold-filled, they are sure to be treasured every day in the year."

Ms. McCulloch suggests starting with a generic trend — give her birds, such as an owl, parrot, bird of paradise, or bluebird. Or give her animals, such as cuddly bears, appealing dogs or pert little cats. Very popular now are the wilder sort of wearable pets — lions, tigers and elephants.

She can start her own pet parade of two or three little dogs or cats marching on a favorite suit jacket, and some of the little creatures can be used as pendants on a chain, Ms. McCulloch notes.

"What they are conveying, of course," she explains, "is that the recipient is your pet, and you treasure her."

ON VALENTINE'S DAY, you may want to give your pet Valentine a pet of her own, the Jewelry Industry Council suggests. Heart pendants and bracelets are traditional, but she may delight in some of these little creatures, including a fuzzy kitty, a shaggy dog, a perky rooster, dragonfly, lizard, lovebird, or the little gold owl the teddy bear is holding. (Karat jewelry by Court of King Arthur.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When you think about it, technology has come no appreciable distance in this country. Oh, sure, we have electronic games to amuse us and garbage compactors (a spinoff of pantyhose), but we still sit around the campfire and our children still carve on the walls.

Medical technology is even worse. The common cold is still a mystery. No one knows why hot flashes occur in the summer but never in the winter when you need them.

And not one member of the medical community has tackled the biggest mystery of all — how to stop children's feet from growing.

For years, parents have tried to anticipate the rate of growth. From the time a child is old enough to walk until his final days of college, he never has a pair of shoes that really fit.

I have seen my children's feet through an X-ray machine and have known for a fact that there are a good two sizes to go before he outgrows them. In the two short blocks from the store to the car, there is growth beyond belief and he is saying, "Mom! These shoes are pinching my toe and rubbing my heel."

You could buy 135 pairs of shoes in assorted sizes and not once during the entire year would your child fit in one of them. That's the ways kids' feet are.

There are other mysteries surrounding children's feet. I had a son who took a cab to the bathroom. He never walked anywhere. Everywhere I turned I saw his feet propped up at eye level — on coffee tables, over chairs, on top of the TV set, on the dashboard, on the walls.

I drove him to school right up to his desk. I drove him to ball practice, the library, his friends' houses, to the playground, the activities center, the gym and the drugstore. The kid had virgin feet. Believe me, a piece of lint would have caused him pain. He had his shoes three weeks when he reported there was a hole in the toe.

I figured out once if children's intellect developed at the same rate as their feet, by the time they were five they could speak 15 languages, debate Freud (and win), explain Plato, out-write Shakespeare, challenge Einstein and make parents obsolete.

You have probably wondered why more children don't run away from home. The truth is, their feet hurt. They go through life with nose tissues stuffed in the toe or their toe stuffed in the toe.

I don't know what the answer is, but until children's feet are given scientific priority, the little toddler with the flipper feet that slap with every step will always be with us.

Priorities Are Listed

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Association of Women Attorneys in its first 1981 Governing Board meeting mobilized to make enactment of legislation affecting women one of its major priorities.

A member of the Governing Board is Judy Kornegay of Greenville.

Brides-Elect Entertained

Miss Ginger Flye and Miss Jean Trevathan were honored Thursday night with a bridal shower held at the home of Miss Nancy DeMeter and Miss Kathy Carter in Greensboro.

Guests were greeted by the hostesses and honorees. Miss Flye will marry Robert Cecil Keys III of Castle Hayne and Miss Trevathan is the bride-elect of Jeffrey Bruce Caldwell of Raleigh.

Wild Blue Surrounds Man

DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who gets lost a lot, and whose husband blames it on lack of confidence. My husband can get lost driving out of our driveway. He is completely confused whenever he leaves the main streets of our city, although he was born and raised here. He simply has no sense of direction. And it's not because he lacks self-confidence, either. He's a very successful businessman. To make this disability more interesting, he was a navigator in World War II, and received the Distinguished Flying Cross and seven Air Medals for guiding several groups of squadrons in bombing raids over Italy! RAY'S WIFE IN WATERLOO, IOWA

DEAR WIFE: During World War II, Ray was flying on instruments, or he'd have met his Waterloo in Italy!

DEAR ABBY: You've printed letters from waiters and waitresses. How about printing a letter from an ex-waiter who is now a customer?

If the service is really good, I leave between 15 to 20 percent. But if they just sling the food at me, without bothering to come back to ask if I want more water, coffee or dessert, or if they stand around gabbing with other help with their backs turned toward customers who may want to catch their eye, I call that lousy service. And for lousy service I leave two pennies.

CUSHING, OKLA.

DEAR CUSHING: Instead of leaving two pennies, you'd be ahead to leave two complaints: one with the waitress, and one with the management.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago you printed a letter (enclosed) that had a powerful impact on me. I think it bears repeating.

DEAR MR. B.: So do I, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am a plastic surgeon and a very busy one, but I am not too busy to write this letter asking you to PLEASE implore parents (especially mothers) to NEVER — and I repeat, NEVER — allow their children to stand up in either the front or back of an automobile while it is in motion.

These last few weeks I have been called upon to make some heartbreaking repairs on some very beautiful little faces that had been pitifully mutilated from accidents that came about in just this way. All it takes is one abrupt stop for a youngster's face to meet a windshield, dashboard or the back of the front seat with such force as to break face bones, knock out teeth and cause disfiguring injuries.

Today I nearly wept while I worked with an eye surgeon for nearly two hours in a vain effort to save the eye of a little boy who had been standing in the back of his mother's car when she slammed on her brakes. (The child's eye was gouged out as he struck the ashtray.) If you will print this I'll be most grateful.

AN M.D. IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled when I read your delightful definition: "Old age is when you need your glasses to find your glasses; you walk into another room and forget what you went there for; people tell you you're looking good, but no one tells you you're good-looking; you pass up a romantic encounter because you're worried about your heart; and you think today's policemen look like kids."

I happen to be an octogenarian myself. Comes now another ancient, Claude Pepper, chairman of a Committee on Aging yet, rising up in majestic ruffled dignity to declaim that your whimsical comments are "unworthy of your usual thoughtful insights, etc."

Oh, come off it, Brother Pepper. Relax from the somber responsibilities of shepherding us decrepit aged and enjoy a sprightly lady columnist's light-hearted characterizations of the weight of our years without biding.

RALPH W. SNYDER, INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR RALPH: Thanks, I needed that. Read on for an opposing view from Wareham, Mass.:

DEAR ABBY: I agree with Rep. Claude Pepper. Your characterization of older people as sightless, absent-minded, ugly and sexless is unworthy of you.

Abby, I can't see anything without my glasses, I can never remember what I went into the other room for unless I keep repeating it to myself on the way there, and the only people who ever tell me I'm good-looking are my parents. My father has a heart condition that may very well be hereditary, and today's policemen look like kids because today people can reach their goal at a younger age if they want to. (I plan to have a master's degree in engineering by the time I'm 21.)

I am a 13-year-old girl, and I've never heard of anyone being ready for a rocking chair at my age.

Not only are many travelers discovering today's China, but now the China of 1,000 years ago is available for the tourist. The Sung Dynasty Village is an authentic recreation of a main street of a capital of China during the period from 970-1179 A.D. It is located on Hong Kong's Kowloon peninsula next to Lai Chi Kofe amusement park, a 20 minute ride from the Star Ferry building. Merchants, entertainers, professionals and clerks are all attired in dress typical of the period. The town's heavily fortified gate and guard room give way to a double-deck restaurant, an arch, shops and a nobleman's house.

Both tourists and business people are interested in China these days. But you cannot just plan a trip to China on your own. For the best in travel service, depend on QUIKOTE TRAVELS INC. We are the senior travel agency in Greenville with a staff of seven full time agents to service all your travel needs. See us at 319 Cotanche St. 758-3456. How about a Valentine's Day weekend away? See us to help you find the right spot.

TRAVEL TIP: The Sung Dynasty Village also boasts hawkers, herbals, an apothecary stall, jugglers and acrobats and adds up to a "time machine" ride back in time.

Soviets Judge Actions

It is clear a hard line towards the Soviets is developing under the Reagan administration.

In Washington Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin found his basement parking privileges at the State Department were ended. His limousine was directed to the regular diplomatic entrance.

There were strong words from Sec. of State Alexander Haig. But the clearest signal came from the president himself in a news conference last week.

It was his belief, Reagan said, that the Soviets feel they have the "right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat," to achieve the one-world socialist or communist state.

He said that had to be kept in mind in dealing with the Russians. "So far, detente, has been a one-way street that the Soviet Union has used to pursue its own aims."

Harsh language is nothing new in the world of diplomacy, and the presidential comments are not likely to send the Soviets scurrying back behind their borders.

They will, rather, be watching what the president does in the next Soviet created crisis, and that is how they will measure their new adversary.

Crime Watch Neighborliness

Winterville is one of those communities which is participating in the Community Watch program and signs have been erected calling attention to the fact.

It makes sense that petty thieves won't operate in a community where they believe every citizen is on the look-out for crime, and will report what they see.

In a sense it is merely a return to the good neighborliness which was characteristic of this nation in its early days. People had to help each other to survive. With the criminal element loose in our society today, we have the same situation.

THIS AFTERNOON Catalog Expertise

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Need help? In these times of exploding knowledge, advanced technology, and complexities of law and regulation, many individuals and firms need a specialist.

Finding a specialist may be a different matter; especially if you aren't looking for somebody highly paid and fulltime.

Meanwhile, all across North Carolina, a lot of highly trained specialists are ready and anxious to help. The trick is getting the two needs together. Now, there is a way.

vidual skills and knowledge that might be needed for a specific trouble-shooting assignment, or for work on a specific project with a defi-

BILL NOBLITT

Little known because the program is just getting started, the aim is to catalog available help all over North Carolina on call to tackle the kinds of problems which come up almost daily in business, government, or other enterprises.

Organized

The project was started by Duke University's Office of Continuing Education with a grant from the N.C. Board of Science and Technology.

Sallie Holden Simmons, associate director of continuing education at Duke explains that the first enrollees were obtained from graduate lists of several colleges and universities in the state, and after some professionals became interested and talked with former colleagues and friends who also joined.

A directory listing the personal backgrounds of each of the first 300 has been prepared, and is being offered to industry and government on a cost basis. The price is $50 a copy, with partial rosters available for less.

The directory may be used to contact people with indi-nite time period in mind.

Most of the scientists, engineers and others making themselves available are in retirement, although a few are still actively working, but plan to be "completely available" in the near future.

The organization ties in with a plan launched last year by Gov. Jim Hunt to tap the resources available across North Carolina in the form of retired individuals. Leo Jenkins, retired chancellor at East Carolina University, heads up that linking effort to help state government catalog and make use of such expertise.

Frank Jeter, Jr., a former newspaperman and now a public information specialist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service, is active in this pilot program.

Expertise

Jeter says the initial roster is loaded with expertise in manufacturing, medicine, business administration, college and university teaching, accounting, energy, geology, marine biology, agriculture, engineering and other fields.

The roster includes civil, electrical, and industrial engineering; physicians as well as dentists, psychiatrists and medical specialties, and even local government experts such as a former city manager and a chairman of a board of county commissioners.

While the state and Duke University are instrumental in organizing the program, (Please turn to Page 8)

Imposes Ruinous Drain

WASHINGTON — If a high moral tone ever is to be restored in this country, sexual promiscuity on Capitol Hill will have to stop.

At the moment, 16 federal programs are "indexed," which is to say, their benefits are linked directly to what used to be known as the Cost of Living Index and now is known as the Consumer Price Index (CPI). The system is imposing a ruinous drain upon the Treasury. It cries out for review and revision.

The device of indexing is of fairly recent vintage. Prior to 1962, as a White House report recently explained, real benefit levels in federal entitlement programs were not adjusted for inflation in any systematic manner. Then an act was passed tying civil service retirement benefits to the Cost of Living Index. The following year, military retirement benefits won the same treatment. A couple of other programs were added in the '60s, but as recently as the indexed benefits constituted only 3 percent of total budget outlays.

These programs have now gotten completely out of hand. In the current fiscal year more than $200 billion will be paid out under the CPI formula. By 1986, when the total budget is expected to exceed one trillion dollars, indexed outlays — if left unchanged — will come to an estimated $343 billion.

Six of the 14 programs are indexed semiannually. This is what the taxpayers have provided for double-dippers who have retired from military or civilian employment in the federal government. In March of 1977 they got an increase of 4.8 percent, the following October another boost of 4.3 percent. In March of 1978, the raise was 2.4 percent, in October another 4.9 percent. So it was in 1979 — an increase of 3.9 percent in March, another boost of 6.9 percent in October. Last year these retirees had increases of 6.0 percent in the spring and 7.7 percent in the fall. They are now due for another raise next month.

The effect of all this has been to keep the retired federal personnel not merely abreast of inflation but well ahead of it. Since 1963, the CPI has grown from a base of 100 to a level last fall of 263.6. Put less mathematically, the market basket that cost $10 in 1963 cost $26.36 in 1980. But for the double dippers, there has been a happier aspect: Their indexed benefits have grown to 286.8. They have stayed 23 points ahead of the game.

The largest of the indexed programs, of course, is Social Security. Automatic annual increases, tied to the CPI, became effective in July of 1975. The retired worker who was receiving monthly benefits in 1975 of $153 was receiving $179.90 last summer. In this same period the CPI had increased in roughly the same proportion.

Now, presumably everyone wants to be fair to old ladies, retired railway engineers, aging petty officers from the Coast Guard, and miners down with the black lung disease.

If the child nutrition program were not linked in some fashion to the increasing cost of food, the program would soon be in trouble. The principle is fine.

But as the White House report makes clear, a system that protects federal beneficiaries raises equity issues for everybody else. Very little private income is so protected. Moreover, because the Consumer Price Index overstates the importance of home ownership — as if everybody bought a new house every month at whatever the mortgage interest rates might be — the index provides a distorted reflection of actual living costs.

In sum, the formula for computing the government's chief index of prices ought to be revised. The six semi- (Please turn to Page 8)

Misreading The Election

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Trying to repeal the 1980 election and preserve Jimmy Carter's human rights policies, liberal Democratic congressmen are plotting to keep control of the House foreign affairs African subcommittee and retain as a symbol of the past a staffer named Steven R. Weissman.

Weissman's 1978 attack on Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) undercover work in Zaire was reprinted in the book "Dirty Work 2, the CIA in Africa." It was published in 1979 with an introduction by Philip Agee, the renegade ex-CIA official now living in exile in West Germany to avoid U.S. investigators.

Weissman was hired two years ago by Rep. Stephen J. Solarz of New York who is about to step down as chairman of the African subcommittee. Solarz then did not know Weissman had contributed to "Dirty Work 2," described in an introduction by Agee as an attempt "to expose and analyze clandestine operations" by the CIA in Africa. Weissman told us he himself was unaware that "Dirty Work 2" would include an introduction by Agee and an appendix listing the names of 385 undercover CIA operatives in Africa.

Solarz is giving up his African chairmanship for what he thinks will be the more lively Asian affairs panel. The powerplay of liberals vs. moderates in the committee's Democratic ranks revolves around Solarz' push for Rep. Howard Wolpe of Michigan, a liberal scholar on African affairs who is backed by the Congressional Black Caucus. Wolpe has given Solarz assurances that if he gets the chairmanship, he will retain the subcommittee's present staff — including Steve Weissman.

Wolpe's opponent in the caucus of committee Democrats, set for Feb. 3, is moderate Rep. Dan Mica of Florida, who has seniority to become chairman but is regarded as dangerously unsafe on the human rights issue by the liberals. Supporting Solarz and Wolpe is the committee's longtime liberal powerhouse, Rep. Jonathan Bingham, of New York, backed by many junior members (including five freshmen, two of them black and all of them liberals).

"These people are terrified," a committee staffer told us. "They think (President) Reagan and (Secretary of State Alexander) Haig are out of touch with reality, and they are trying to build a barricade around the African subcommittee to keep it safe for human rights."

In fact, it is Solarz, Bingham and Wolpe who seem "out of touch with reality." Their insistence on keeping Weissman as the Africa subcommittee's No. 2 staffer shows a quixotic attempt to repeal the election and restore politics of the '60s and '70s. The role of Weissman, so distrusted by the government of Zaire that he is regarded as an enemy by that U.S. ally, shines as a beau ideal of the post-Vietnam mood. But that time has passed.

How far it has passed was demonstrated last summer when Weissman appeared at a CIA briefing for Solarz in the congressman's office. Hours after the briefing, Adm. Stansfield Turner, director of the CIA, telephoned Solarz and admonished that the presence of Weissman had tended to tighten the tongues of the CIA briefers.

Solarz then learned for the first time from Turner that Weissman's treatise, titled "The CIA and U.S. Policy in Zaire and Angola," had been reprinted in "Dirty Work." Asking an explanation from his staffer, Solarz was told Weissman did not know that Agee and other anti-CIA extremists also would appear between the covers. Solarz transmitted that explanation to Turner and the matter was dropped, with Weissman retaining his CIA security clearances.

But Weissman's activities on behalf of the African subcommittee, which the panel's liberals are battling to continue, do not stop with "Dirty Work." In informal remarks to the African Studies Association in Philadelphia last Oct. 16, Weissman used his subcommittee position to attack Zaire in a way surpassing the latitude taken by members of Congress themselves.

"Zaire is a basket case," Weissman told his largely black audience. "It is falling apart ... a concentrated lobbying effort is what is needed in Washington to change policy." Weissman, who has no notes, told us he never said that. But an eyewitness, who took careful notes, attests to the accuracy of the quote.

Those and other Weissman comments look to the government of Zaire suspiciously like an attempt by a U.S. government official to destabilize their country. In fact, the prospect of change in U.S. policy toward Zaire desired by Weissman is zero under Reagan and Haig; any change will go the other way — firming up U.S. support for the Mobutu regime, corrupt or not, with less minute attention to human rights.

Backroom fighting over Solarz' successor reached a frenzied peak over the weekend with Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill himself helping foreign affairs committee chairman Clement Zablocki assert the rule of orderly succession, supporting Mica over Wolpe. That is one way to operate.

The other is to read the Nov. 4 election returns to the Democratic caucus. If the African affairs subcommittee truly desires to exercise influence, it must understand that the heady years of the anti-CIA cult and human rights as the shining emblem of American policy are gone. Doom Prophecies Unrealized

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — These are indisputably tough times in housing — tough for builders, tough for realtors, tough for people who would like to buy a home.

But some of the doom-and-gloom crowd's forecasts of a severe drop in home prices have yet to come true.

Mortgage rates hovering around the 15 percent level have cast a decided pall over the market. Sales of new one-family homes dropped 3.4 percent in December, the Commerce Department reported late last week, and stood 4.6 percent below their pace of a year before.

Still, prices kept rising. The median price tag on a new home stood at $67,900, compared with $61,500 in December 1979.

The story is much the same with existing homes. Since late 1978, when used homes were changing hands at an annual rate of about 4 million, activity in the market has been in a deep slump, hitting a low of less than 2.5 million for a while last year.

Even so, the chart of existing-home prices has kept on rising with barely a wriggle. At about $65,000, the median price of a used house has doubled in less than seven years.

The explanation for this gravity-defying feat, as provided by economists at Goldman, Sachs & Co.: "As rising mortgage interest rates reduce the affordability of homes, sellers are taking their houses out of the market if possible rather than selling them at 'bargain' rates. Thus prices of homes actually sold rise as activity shrinks."

In theory, this can't go on forever. At some point, the pressures on the market should presumably start to push prices downward, or at least slow their upward progress.

Some people say there are signs that this may already be happening. Edward Yardeni, economist at E.F. Hutton, points to California — the archetypical hot housing market of the 1970s.

From November 1979 to November 1980, he notes, the median price reported by the California Association of Realtors rose 11 percent. Only a few months before, the annual appreciation rate was running close to 30 percent.

"Hot tubs, roller disco ... national fads and trends often seem to start in California," Yardeni observes. "If so, then the national existing-home market is in for tougher times."

Confronted with that prospect, many participants in the housing market aren't giving up without a fight. They are constantly working up new types of financing to get around the mortgage squeeze.

It is estimated, for example, that more than half of home resales in California during November were done by assuming existing loans. This spirit of innovation testifies to the fact that the housing market, shaky though it may be, rests on a strong foundation of underlying demand.

The National Association of Home Builders figures that more than 2 million new housing units must be built each year in the 1980s to keep up with demand. Last year, less than 1.3 million units were started.

Using such data, it can be argued that if mortgage rates ever do come down by even a few percentage points, there could be a new upward explosion in housing prices.

Economic historians tell us that no market goes up forever. In the words of the old Wall Street axiom, no tree grows to the sky.

But if the U.S. housing market in recent years has been just another speculative bubble, it is proving quite a difficult one to burst.

Strength For Today

THE HUMAN HEART

Recently an operation has been perfected by which individuals near death because of blockage of coronary arteries can be restored to near normal physical condition by bringing additional arteries into the heart.

Here is another important victory in man's conquest of disease, part of the almost unbelievable progress made in recent decades by medical science. And this progress has been equalled in other fields — transportation, communication, and other areas. Such events underline the paradoxical plight of modern man. Never before has he had such possibilities for a long, healthy, comfortable life as science now offers him. And at the same time, never before has he been so bathed in the bloodshed of war and brought so close to the brink of total destruction.

Could man's spirit achieve the same advances as his brain, what a wonderful world we would live in today! — Elisha Douglass

People Of Chrysler Town Feeling A Deep Anxiety

ANXIOUS TIMES — A small sign says "Happiness is 52 freed Americans" at the base of a Civil War soldier statue on the courthouse square of New Castle, a small city in Indiana. But looks are deceiving, as anxiety builds over fate of the Chrysler Corp. upon which the town is almost wholly dependent. (AP Laserphoto)

Falwell Will Press His Suit Against Magazine

By ESTES THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell, loser in his bid for an order banning distribution of the March issue of Penthouse magazine carrying an interview with him, says "I think God will have the last laugh."

But the television evangelist said Monday after a 1½-hour hearing before U.S. District Judge James C. Turk that he will pursue his $10-million damage suit against the men's publication.

Penthouse lawyer N. Roy Grutman of New York said the magazine hadn't decided whether to countersue Falwell, who left after the hearing for a Monday night appearance in Portland, Ore.

Turk issued a temporary restraining order Friday afternoon that banned distribution of Penthouse until a hearing was held. He subsequently refused to issue a preliminary injunction to ban distribution until the suit is heard.

Falwell, 46, is founder and star of the Old Time Gospel Hour and national president of Moral Majority Inc., a conservative Christian political action group.

He also is pastor of the 17,000-member Thomas Road Baptist Church and chancellor of a web of Christian schools here, including Liberty Baptist College.

The minister, who is seen and heard by millions every week, said he granted two interviews to free-lance writers last year on condition they would not sell their interviews to Penthouse or Playboy magazines.

Penthouse sent out news releases last week announcing the interview. Falwell sought the court order and filed suit.

"Penthouse magazine is a very poor package for the gospel of Christ," said Falwell, the only witness at the hearing, after Grutman asked if the interview wouldn't serve to reach up to 10 million people.

"I've always trusted the media," Falwell added outside the courtroom. "But we've already got a form that they sign from now on that says if an interview appears where we don't want it, we'll have your hide."

Falwell, whom Grutman called a person who "craves the limelight," said he would have been satisfied if Penthouse had added a colon to its cover.

The cover says "Exclusive interview with Reverend Jerry Falwell." Falwell said he would have been satisfied if Penthouse had added a colon to its cover.

a case of prior restraint of the press and abridged the First Amendment.

While Falwell said he respected Penthouse's rights, he added he wanted to exercise his rights to prevent harm to his reputation and find-raising efforts.

Grutman said Falwell was embarrassed by the magazine cover blurb and feared Falwell followers would think he was cavorting with a magazine he has in the past called "a cesspool."

"What is crowding your courtroom is a media event contrived by Mr. Falwell," Grutman said.

In the end, Penthouse won the first round.

Turk said the public interest and possible financial damage to Penthouse, estimated by Grutman at $14 million or more, outweighed Falwell's concerns.

"We now have the mammoth job of going out and repairing the damage Penthouse has done to our ministry," Falwell said after court.

But Grutman said Falwell already had gained what he wanted — national publicity to offset the possible effects of the interview.

The Penthouse attorney also said the controversy probably would help Penthouse sales. The magazine normally sells 4.5 million to 5 million copies a month, he said.

In the interview, compiled by writers Andrew Duncan and Sasthi Brata in 1980, Falwell said the United States is so sick morally and economically that it may not recover from some problems.

Sees 'Coercion' On Iran Assets

By PAUL MOSES

Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A federal judge says the U.S. government may have been "coerced" into returning Iran's assets to get the hostages back, but that doesn't mean American businesses gave up their constitutional rights.

The judge said Behring International Inc. of Houston had a right to $503,000 it was owed under a year-old consent agreement it reached with the government of Iran to settle a civil suit.

U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin told the Treasury Department on Monday it must notify him and Behring if it planned to transfer to Iran funds in a Trenton bank earmarked for Behring.

"The Iranians coerced the United States into surrendering a number of things by their terrorist acts," U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin said. "But that does not include the waiver of rights guaranteed by our Constitution."

He turned down the company's request to immediately release the money, which has remained at Broad Street National Bank under former President Carter's Nov. 14, 1979, executive order freezing Iran's assets in the United States.

But he said it would be an "outrage" for the government to transfer the money to Iran under a Jan. 19 agreement to free the American hostages.

Iran already agreed in court to pay the money, but Iran's assets were frozen before Behring could get the funds, the judge said.

Justice Department lawyer William Black said Behring's worries that it would lose the money were speculative because President Reagan will not decide until Feb. 26 how to interpret the hostage agreement.

Sarokin granted the government's request that no action will be effective in the case until Feb. 26.

Three Wrecks Investigated By Police

An estimated $2,400 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a three-vehicle mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Fifth Street about 9:11 a.m.

Drivers involved were identified as Betsy Roberson Brown of Route 5, Greenville, Arthur Thomas Adkins Jr. of 605 Harris St., and Albert Crandell Jr. of Route 1, Winterville.

Damage was estimated at $300 each to the Brown and Adkins vehicles and $400 to the Crandell car.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 1:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street.

Drivers were identified by investigators as Thomas Henry Powell of Route 9, Goldsboro, and Sharron Robitaille Cygan of 103 Forest Acres Dr.

Vehicles driven by William Henry Collier of 225 Country Club Dr., and John Arthur Hudson of Route 2, Greenville, collided about 11:35 a.m. at the intersection of Tenth and Evans Streets, causing $500 damage to the Collier car and $300 damage to the Hudson truck, police reported.

Farm Show Set In Raleigh

RALEIGH — The 1981 Southern Farm Show, an annual agricultural event covering all of southeastern agriculture, will open February 4 at 10 a.m. on the North Carolina State Fairgrounds in Raleigh.

With more than 250 companies on hand representing three times that number of manufacturers and products, the show will give visitors a chance to see and compare agriculture machinery, equipment, supplies and services. Tractors, combines, milking machines, herbicides and pesticides, power tools, irrigation equipment, and grain storage equipment are some of the items on display.

Daily seminars, 20 in all, will be held in the Graham and Scott Buildings, led by experts from NCSU and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

Topics will include "Swine Management Update," "Aflatoxin Effects on Swine and Dairy Production," "Energy Conservation and Alternative Fuels," "Challenges In Tobacco," and "Gasohol, What are the Facts?"

FFA Youth Day will be held Friday at 1:30 p.m. in the Holshouser building. Keynote speakers for this "Youth In Agriculture" program are Commissioner Jim Graham and Dr. Brad Craig, associate director of academic affairs, school of agriculture and life sciences, NCSU.

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday; 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday.

Admission is $2 at the door. Agriculture students, 21 and older, get in free. Parking is included with all admissions.

Associated Press Writer
NEW CASTLE, Ind. (AP) — With a statue of a Civil War soldier on the courthouse square and the 1932 state basketball championship banner in the new high school gym, New Castle seems the very embodiment of middle America.

A city of 18,884 people living amid corn and soybean fields 46 miles from Indianapolis, it is a place of unfailing courtesy and deep pride — and deep anxiety.

Here is what people in New Castle are saying, in their own words, as their major employer — Chrysler Corp. — struggles for life.

"My children are growing up the greatest people in the world because of this place."

"If they say they're going to play basketball at 10 o'clock at night in the school gym, that's where you'll find them." — Dick Gross, who was manager of Chrysler's forge and machining plant here from 1974 to Jan. 22 of this year.

"The community was comfortable with the situation before. There were seasonal, and market, ups and downs. Now it's a hungry community for the first time in decades. It will not allow itself to be kicked into the ground... Whether Chrysler fails or whether Chrysler lives, we have got to diversify." — Rick Thrasher, a business development specialist.

"No names, please. They take reprisals over there. Not Gross. The superintendent. Gross was the best manager we ever had. He shook everybody's hand every Christmas. The others just put up a notice on the bulletin board." — A worker quaffing a cold one at Brown's Hole, a tavern across the street from what people sometimes call "the Chrysler" when referring to the 74-year-old plant.

"After last week's layoffs, there are 743 people on-roll there; 2,800 used to be the magic number." — Mayor Bud Ayers, who once ran a steam hammer in "the Chrysler."

"I remember friends whose dads were laid off in the '50s. They ate potato sandwiches. There were a lot fewer benefits then." — insurance agent John Lane.

"We'd be beat if it weren't for the TRA (Trade Readjustment Act) — down the tube." — A worker in Brown's Hole. The federal TRA payments may provide up to 70 percent of a worker's pay for a year.

"In December, Chrysler workers got 3,819 weeks of TRA payments. The December unemployment rate was 17.7 percent." — Cletis Kinsler of the state's Employment Security Division office in New Castle.

"I've got three job offers in Florida, I'm single, and I may go." — a newly laid-off worker in Brown's Hole.

"I've got two houses, one paid for and one not, two kids in school, a wife and I'm supporting my mother. I can't pack up and leave, I just can't. That's why I voted for the concessions." — The first worker in Brown's, United Auto Workers Local 371 approved, by a 3-1 margin, a contract that cuts workers' pay by 13 percent.

"Any decent jobs out there, the young guys laid off early have already got them." — a worker in Brown's.

"I won't talk to you, not after that Wall Street Journal article." — Larry Lawson, night bartender in Brown's, referring to a story 17 months ago.

"The article was not offensive; it was everything that came after that. The article made us a hot topic and the TV stations descended on us. They were beating people over the head for statements. One of the stations asked a Realtor the same question seven times — what does Chrysler mean to New Castle? — and she answered it seven times and finally she said, 'I don't really know,' and what gets on the air? 'I don't really know." — ex-New Castle manager Gross, now manager of Chrysler's Kokomo plant 65 miles away.

"In 1980, we had 65 attempted suicides up to Nov. 1. In all '79 we had only 61. The average age (of the people who attempted suicide) was 56 in 1979 and 31 in 1980." — Roger Reeves, head of the police department's emergency medical service, which covers all of Henry County, with 48,000 people.

"It has not been a textbook case. We have yet to experience what we expected in behavior problems... What has happened is the adults are trying to upgrade their credentials in the job market in our General Equivalency Diploma program... and in the machine shop and welding in the vocational school, we now have to turn people away." — School Superintendent Phil Borders.

"From a marketing viewpoint, we can tell potential clients the new contract shows that they are practical people here." — Thrasher.

"It could operate as a job shop. There's a lot of forging work out there." — Local 371 president Luther Ferrell.

"The first positive thing is the people. With the productivity these people have begun to generate, ing operation is still a live option." — Gross.

"There is no intention at this time to close New Castle, but the continuing decline of demand for rear-wheel drive cars means that Chrysler cannot operate New Castle efficiently." — Chrysler President J. Paul Bergmoser, on Oct. 14.

"We are not going to pull the rug out from under them." Chrysler spokesman Wendell Larsen, last week.

Recognition Day Held By Sorority

The Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority sponsored its first Community Recognition Day Sunday at Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church. Twenty-nine Pitt County residents from all walks of life were honored from house wives to paper boys to plumbers.

Certificates in recognition of each honoree's contribution to the community, church and home were given.

Following are the names of those recognized: Tyree Anderson, Marvin Best, Rosa Bradley, Janet Bullock, Lenwei Clemons, Mildred Council, Mary Daniels, Albert Evans, Zephia Gatlin, Mary Hammond, William Hardy, Bessie Council, Willie Mae Hawkins, Sam Hemby, Calvin Henderson, Lucy Hunter, George Joyner, Emma May, Dallas Mayo, Thelma Moore, DeLores Morehead, Gloria Pearsall, Gettie Pernell, Anninai Smith, Marvin Steinhenson, Ruby Luckner, Bennie Vines, Mildred Williams and Bobby Short.

John Moore's "Voices of Calvary" and the "Delta Quintet" under the direction of Mrs. Selma Forbes provided music for the occasion.

Eliminate A Paycheck

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina officials decided Monday to move to direct deposit of employee paychecks into their bank accounts as a money-saving measure.

John A. Williams, state budget officer, said the conversion away from the paper paycheck would be phased in over the next 18 months to two years. He said the program could eventually save the state about $1 million a year in printing, processing and storage costs.

When in full use, the program will be mandatory for the state's 65,000 employees. Under the plan, the state will turn over a computer tape to the N.C. Automated Clearing House Association Inc. at the end of the month. There, the computer system will deposit paychecks into the bank accounts designated by each employee.

Officials said the employees money would be deposited by 9 a.m. on pay day.

About 600 employees in the Department of Administration and Office of Budget and Management already use direct deposit. And, employees in downtown Raleigh state office buildings will be added to the system in the next few months.

Within 18 months, Williams said, all of Central Payroll — some 40,000 employees — will be converted to the system.

nual programs should be brought back to annual adjustments. And some discretion should be vested in the president to recommend adjustments at less than the whole change in the CPI. Otherwise the upward spiral of uncontrollable federal outlays will climb out of sight.

Obviously none of this has anything to do with sexual promiscuity on Capitol Hill, but this problem of indexing is so important to any understanding of the budget that perhaps a hooked lead may be forgiven.

Family Life First To Professional Musician

JACK NORMAND assumes a grand pose at his keyboard in the Grand Hotel at Point Clear, Alabama. (AP Laserphoto)

POINT CLEAR, Ala. (AP) — No one stands more in awe of Jack Normand than his own son.

"You might have noticed," Glenn Normand said, shaking his head, "that Jack does not take a drink. He does not smoke. He has a savings account. He can get credit. He has held the same job for 31 years.

"Does that sound to you like a professional musician?"

No, especially one weaned on music, not to mention sin, in the night spots of New Orleans where Jack Normand learned to play the piano before he was grown enough to reach the pedals.

Still, it is conceivable, if remarkable, that even a musician might dislike whiskey, dislike smoke, legal or illegal, and dislike debt. And if he worked where Jack Normand has worked all those years, which is sort of like Paradise, why change?

More remarkable than the man's behavior is his family, or band, as it were.

Every one of Jack and Genevieve Normand's offspring — David, Glenn, Jeanine, Robert and Laurie — every toe-tapping one of them is a musician.

So when Jack sits down at the piano in the dining room of the Grand Hotel (an apt description, as well as a name), there is no telling, from night to night, who his accompanists might be.

Shall Glenn play the drums tonight, David the bass? Vice versa? Shall Robert bring a trumpet, Jeanine a clarinet? All play, at minimum, piano, drums and bass. They learned those instruments about the time they learned to tie their shoes.

As other siblings trade household chores, the Normands trade musical chores. They are a band of interchangeable parts. Midway through a long night, bored with the instruments they are playing, they switch.

At one such three-way shuffle, their distracted father glanced over his shoulder from the piano bench.

"Musical chairs?" he muttered.

If Jack Normand's way of going, as they say about racehorses, is not that of the caricatured gig-hopping, bloodshot nightclub musician, neither is his way of looking.

He is short, nearly bald. He is 63. He has the shape and the face of a Toby mug. He has small, thick hands, the kind you are more likely to see around here on an oyster shucker than a pianist.

But, my, what music they make.

When Jack signed on at the Grand Hotel — an elegant Old South establishment on Mobile Bay where the linen is as white as the dogwood, the living gracious and the dining formal (only "gentlemen under 12" are excused from neckties) — the management had to clear a place for a dance floor in the dining room. When Jack began to play, the diners couldn't resist the urge and kept bumping into tables.

Jack lives in a fine antebellum home on the bay with its own aura of hospitality and permanence. His married children live nearby.

Every day, about mid-morning, various Normand children, spouses, grandchildren, begin wandering over. Genevieve has the coffee on. Jack is in the garden in a flannel shirt and loafers.

They are lured to the Normand homestead by the company and the concerns and the laughter of one another, and by something else, some ancient lullaby all the Normands seem to hear in their souls.

"We're Cajuns," Jack said, shrugging. Genevieve explained:

"Music is a career. Our life is our family. Cajuns visit home every chance they get. It's a feeling deep inside. I think we still hold to something others seem to have let go. I think that says it."

Like a symphony.

Also in Wayne County, authorities said a tobacco barn was lifted off its foundation near Dudley, while a tobacco barn shelter near Mount Olive was blown away.

Meanwhile, power shortages caused by flying tree limbs left about 2,650 Raleigh and Wake County customers of Carolina Power & Light Co. without electricity early Monday. And, in Charlotte and Halifax counties, 1,300 customers of Duke Power Co. and Virginia Power and Electric Co. were without power for a few hours when a main power line there was felled by tree branches.

Conditions in the state are expected to remain cold for the rest of the week with moderation expected by the weekend. Variable cloudiness over the mountains with scattered snow flurries over the northern and central areas is expected to last through Tuesday.

PROMPT CONCLUSION
PEKING (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang returned to China on Monday from a visit to Burma and Thailand. Hours later Vietnam accused Peking of scheming to maintain tension and instability in Southeast Asia.

Fears Losing Bilingual Schools

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Hispanic civil rights leader says he fears the nation's school districts may give short shrift to children who do not speak English in the wake of the Reagan administration's decision to withdraw bilingual education rules. The rules scrapped Monday would have required that children with limited or no ability to speak English be taught in their native language. They would be taught English as a second language.

For example, a Hispanic youngster whose parents speak Spanish at home would be taught such basic courses as math, science and reading in Spanish until he or she became proficient in English.

In announcing that the rules proposed by the Carter administration were being dropped, Secretary of Education T.H. Bell called them "harsh, inflexible, burdensome, unworkable and incredibly costly." The rules were proposed last Aug. 5 but were frozen by Congress and never took effect.

"We will protect the rights of children who do not speak English well, but we will do so by permitting school districts to use any way that has proven to be successful," Bell declared. "No school administrator should misread this action as an invitation to discriminate against children who face language barriers."

Nonetheless, Raul Yzaguirre, president of the National Council of La Raza, a Hispanic advocacy group, said he was afraid the action would give school districts a free hand "to do as little as they want to."

"Bilingual education is the only really effective way to deal with linguistically different children," he said, adding that intensive English courses work with adults but not children.

The Supreme Court ruled in 1974 that public schools were obliged to provide special help to non-English speaking children, but it did not specify what form that help should take. The case, Lau vs. Nichols, involved a group of Chinese-speaking children excluded from San Francisco's schools.

The Education Department said the discarded rules would have added as much as $1 billion to the costs of the nation's public schools over five years, with an annual maintenance cost afterwards of between $72 million and $157 million.

The rules had come under widespread attack from school administrators and educators, who charged that they marked the first attempt by the federal government to tell schools how and what to teach.

The rules also stirred controversy over the role of the Education Department, which President Reagan has vowed to abolish.

Vilma Martinez, president and general counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund in Los Angeles, said immersion in English may work for children from affluent areas who already are literate in their own language, but it will not work for poor, Spanish-speaking children "who have experienced nothing but despair and poor educational opportunities in these United States."

Bell said he hopes to propose new, simplified rules by June. Meanwhile the department will fall back on less formal rules used by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued in 1975 — in response to the Supreme Court order — when Bell was U.S. commissioner of education.

Teachers Experiment With A Bonus System

SEILING, Okla. (AP) — Teachers here get more than a shiny apple and a sense of satisfaction from encouraging students to learn. They get up to $1,000.

An experimental bonus plan offers rewards to teachers whose students show above-average progress on before-and-after standardized tests.

The program was started here a year ago as an alternative to granting teachers across-the-board raises.

Superintendent Gerald Daugherty said that with the help of federal funds, the state Board of Education and consultants from the University of Oklahoma and Central State University, tests were devised as yardsticks to measure the students' progress.

The board's goal in starting the bonus program was to stop a 10-year decline in the test scores of graduating seniors, he said.

Although the school board paid out approximately $40,000 in bonuses the first year as test results of all students showed improvement, Daugherty said it is too soon to know whether the success can be attributed to the incentive program.

Making that determination difficult is the realization that some classes may have brighter students than others, and some students might deliberately do poorly on the test as revenge against an unpopular teacher, he said.

Students are tested early in the fall and again in mid-April. Their scores are fed into a computer and the results determine the reward the teachers receive.

If the average progress of all the students in an elementary school is above the norm in reading, then all teachers get a $500 bonus. Individual elementary school teachers are entitled to additional $250 bonuses for improvement in test scores by individual classes in math and reading.

Secondary school teachers are eligible for $300 bonuses for the progress students make in reading and $140 bonuses for classes in which students progress beyond the norm in other subjects.

The maximum bonus total for all teachers is $1,000.

Skill tests are given to students in courses such as agriculture, typing and art, Daugherty said.

Teachers of classes that don't progress past what is considered average aren't penalized beyond being denied a bonus.

"The question I'm asked the most is, 'Don't teachers teach for the test?'" Daugherty said. "The answer is that we don't care. The students are still learning."

"The thing is that it is meant to be a reward. It is said that you can't pay a good teacher enough, and we want to reward the good teachers."

Allow Parishes Retain Assets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three Los Angeles-area parishes that broke away from the Episcopal Church may take the church property and assets with them, the California Court of Appeal has ruled.

But the property of a fourth breakaway congregation, Church of the Holy Apostles in Glendale, belongs to the Episcopal Diocese of Los Angeles, the 2-1 decision said.

Diocesan officials said they had not yet seen the ruling and would not comment Monday.

The decision reversed an earlier ruling by the Los Angeles Superior Court that property of St. Mary of the Angels in Hollywood, Church of our Savior in Los Angeles and St. Matthias in Sun Valley belongs to the diocese and the denomination.

But in the appellate decision filed here late Friday, the majority opinion concluded that "no express trust exists" for the property of the three parishes "which would preclude the local churches from keeping church property held in their own names and require them to deliver such property to the general church."

The property dispute erupted early in 1977 when the four parishes opposed the 2.8 million-member church's 1976 stand favoring ordination of women priests and modernization of the Episcopal prayer book.

Other religious bodies have been watching the litigation since many, like the Episcopal Church, follow an ascending order of authority rather than a congregational style in which local congregations retain autonomy.

On five occasions since 1872, the U.S. Supreme Court has dealt with the general question of church property rights. The latest came in a 5-4 decision 1979, in which the high court held that civil courts are not always obligated to defer to the decision of church courts in settling local church property disputes, even in ascending, or hierarchical, denominations.

In the case of Holy Apostles Church, the appeal court found the parish is "specifically identified as a subordinate body of a national body ... and was subject to an express trust in favor of the diocese on revocation of its charter.

Further, the court noted, a church law adopted by the diocese in 1958 provides that "on dissolution of a church its property shall revert to the diocese."

Tar Heels Treated To Weather Smorgasbord

By The Associated Press
Snow, rain, high winds and wildly fluctuating temperatures battered North Carolina Monday, and conditions are not expected to improve soon.

The National Weather Service said a large low pressure area over the northeast quadrant of the nation combined with a high pressure system over the lower Mississippi River will maintain a brisk west flow across the region Tuesday.

Cold air was entrenched across the state Tuesday morning. Temperatures ranged from the single digits in the mountains, and teens across the Piedmont to 20s and low 30s near the coast.

Some beneficial rain fell across all sections of the state with some of the heavier rainfall over the east portion yesterday morning, but weather specialists said it was not enough to counteract a drought that goes back to last summer.

Except for some lingering clouds and a few light snow flurries in the higher mountains Tuesday, sunshine was expected to be plentiful. But brisk west and northwest winds could add a chill to already cold readings. Highs were expected to reach the 30s to around 40 east of the mountains while the mountains will see temperatures between 20 and 30 today.

Tuesday night should be clear and cold.

Monday's high winds resulted in a Duplin County woman being hospitalized after the roof was torn from her three-room house. A mobile home near Beaufort was overturned, and another roof was blown off a home in Wayne County.

District Judge Is Appointed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt Monday named Concord attorney Clarence E. Horton Jr. as District Court Judge for Judicial District 19-A, replacing Judge L.F. Faggard, who died recently.

Horton, 40, was one of three attorneys nominated for the post by the bar association of Cabarrus and Rowan counties.

A native of Cabarrus County, Horton received his law degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1965. In addition to his law practice, he has been a research assistant at UNC-Chapel Hill, has taught law to law enforcement personnel and has taught income tax at the college level.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices drifted in erratic trading today, as several major banks lowered their prime lending rates to 19 1/2 percent from 20 percent.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 0.17 points to 932.42 after a morning of see-saw performances. The blue-chip index gave up 15.02 points Monday and has lost more than 72 points since Jan. 6.

Losers held a slight edge over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Morgan Guaranty, Chemical Bank, Manufacturers Hanover Trust, Bankers Trust and Irving Trust today matched three other large banks which had earlier reduced their prime lending rates, and several smaller banks were quick to follow. But many of the nation's large banks kept their prime rate at 20 percent.

Eldon Grimm at Birr, Wilson & Co., said the market's recent slide has stalled, in part, because of the banks' actions, but added, "there's no celebration yet."

Grimm said there was only subdued buying while investors await President Reagan's address on the economy, scheduled for Thursday night. In a White House interview Monday, published today, the president said that while he still aims at balancing the federal budget by 1983, he is no longer as optimistic about chances for success before then.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks fell 0.7 to 72.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.12 at 332.91.

Volume on the Big Board reached 19.04 million shares over the first two hours, up from 17.67 million in the comparable period Monday.

Several oil and precious metal issues, which had sharp declines in recent weeks, improved today, as some bargain-hunters entered the market, Grimm said.

Middle South Utilities topped the active list, down 1/4 at 11 1/2, including a block of 251,000 shares crossing hands at 11 1/2.

Other actively traded issues included, Citicorp, down 1/4 at 22 1/2, with a block of 26,700 shares trading at 22 1/2; Baker International, down 1/4 at 40 1/2, including a block of 178,000 shares at 40; Mobil, up 1/4 at 70 1/2; and LTV, up 1/4 at 19 1/2, with a block of 55,000 shares trading at 19 1/2.

Dow Chemical, which today reported improved earnings for the fourth quarter and full year, fell 1/4 to 33 1/2, including a block of 120,000 shares at 33 1/2.

On the American Exchange, Dome Petroleum gained 1 1/4 to 66 1/4 after dropping 4 points Monday. Dome said it has arranged a $200 million, 10-year bank loan.

NEW YORK (AP) - Midday stock prices were mixed as investors reacted to reports that the Federal Reserve might raise interest rates. The Dow Jones industrial average was up 0.17 points to 932.42. The New York Stock Exchange volume was 19.04 million shares. The market was characterized by a mix of gains and losses. Notable gains were seen in Middle South Utilities, Mobil, and LTV. Notable losses were seen in Citicorp, Baker International, and Dow Chemical.

Polish Govm't Sharply Attacks Union

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) - In one of the sharpest attacks to date on the independent trade union Solidarity, Polish Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania accused the labor movement of having violated its statutes. It was the party's second attack on the free labor movement in less than 24 hours.

In a speech carried in part by Polish radio today, Kania told the commission preparing the forthcoming party congress:

"We have come to face manifestations of anarchy, with instances of diarchy (dual rule), with the transformation of an organization that proclaimed itself to be a trade union, into one far removed from what is laid down in its statutes." Kania also made it clear that party members would be requested to refrain from joining strike action. "The time has come to adopt a stand on the participation of party members in strikes," he said. "While we recognize the workers' right to such a protest, a strike is a weapon of last resort ... Many of our strikes are clearly political in character."

"Should party members take part in such strikes? Should party discipline be seen to operate there? Such strikes deal a blow to the interests of socialist Poland and of the workers."

Solidarity's leader, Lech Walesa, arrived today in Bielsko Biala to join talks between the government and local union leaders to end a general strike that went into its eighth day.

Walesa earlier attended negotiations between representatives of striking farmers and workers in Rzeszow in southeastern Poland, and a spokesman for the strike committee said that some progress was achieved on a few of the nearly 70 points at issue.

But the foremost problem - the strikers' demand for registration of a private farmers' union - was to be discussed on Wednesday when members of the government delegation, led by Deputy Agriculture Minister Andrzej Kacala, return from Ustrzyki Doine.

The minister, after talks with strikers occupying the former trade union building in Rzeszow, went to Ustrzyki

Doine to talk to some 20 protesters holed up in the local office of Solidarity.

A Solidarity spokesman said Kacala was expected to be confronted with complaints about agricultural problems in the mountainous Bieszczady region where most of the protesters are tenant farmers.

The farmers issue appears to be the big remaining obstacle to labor peace in Poland.

Solidarity, the first union free of Communist Party control in the Soviet bloc, and the Polish government reached tentative agreement Saturday on two other roadblocks - the five-day week and greater union access to the media.

Sending One To Convention

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
In the single action by the Greenville board of education last night a decision was made - with Donovan Phillips casting the single dissenting vote - to send only one delegate to the National School Board Convention in Dallas, Texas, which is being held April 10 through April 14.

Board member Ernest Brown will be the board's delegate this year.

The tight fund situation was cited by board members in their decision to limit paid for attendance to one member. Phillips, supporting his dissent, said "board members should be educated as much as possible, and there are not many opportunities. We should take advantage of every opportunity to broaden our knowledge." Mrs. Terry Shank said it is her feeling that the annual state board meeting "is actually more valuable than the national meeting."

Mrs. Ann Harrison made remarks on the annual kindergarten learning abilities screening program. This year it will again be held at the Moose Lodge and will take place on Thursday and Friday, Feb. 19 and 20, and on Monday through Wednesday, Feb. 23-25.

Members of the Kiwanis Club, Mrs. Harrison said, will once more be assisting.

All kindergarten children in the city schools, as well as those in private schools whose parents desire this service, will undergo the screening.

This annual program is designed to make early detection of possible visual, speech or hearing deficiencies of kindergarten students.

Subjects discussed at Monday night's information meeting to be on the agenda of the action meeting on Monday, February 16, are:

— Bank bids for the school system funds.

— Policy on early granting of a high school diploma to students who wish to attend a college or university prior to meeting high school graduation requirements, and — A possible course credit for woodwind students putting in extra time to play with the school orchestra.

CETA Contract Being Studied

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
County Commissioners yesterday discussed briefly the possibility of not renewing the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) contract when it expires September 30.

Since 1975, the county has administered the CETA program which provides jobs and training for eligible participants, with federal funds.

At present, there are only 35 CETA workers in the county under the $310,000 1980-1981 contract that expires September 30.

There were 159 CETA workers throughout the county at the height of the program in April 1979.

CETA workers hold jobs with various county departments and agencies, municipalities in the county, and other agencies such as the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center.

In other business yesterday, commissioners scheduled a workshop meeting for 10 a.m. Wednesday and another meeting for 10 a.m. Thursday; denied a request by the Grifton Rescue Squad for purchase of a radio for a third rescue vehicle; and approved enlarging the Falkland Fire District to include about 50 additional homes.

Commissioners also designated the week of February 8-14 as Fire Education Awareness Week in Pitt County; amended the county's personnel policy to provide guidelines in the event a reduction in force of permanent employees is needed; and named Joan Hooks, Mrs. Mamie Smith, Marvin Baldree Jr., Leroy James, Dr. Frank Longino, G. Henry Leslie and Dr. W. Jeffers Senter (Raleigh), to the Board of Trustees of Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Pitt Memorial Hospital, he pointed out, "is the medical center for advanced life support," in Eastern North Carolina, where patients will be brought. "Now, radio communication is marginal at best for basic life support. As we go from basic life to advanced life support," Allison continued, "we have to have adequate medical control." Physicians, he explained, use radio communications to guide EMS personnel in the field. "Physicians take the ultimate responsibility."

Spivey, explaining the new radio system itself, said a system of 15 repeaters throughout Eastern North Carolina will allow rescue vehicles to communicate with hospitals in the 29-county area. He added that the system, in addition to providing two-way conversation between emergency medical technicians in the field and physicians in the hospital also permits the transmission of electrocardiograms (tracings used to determine abnormalities in the heart muscle) to doctors in the hospital.

"We're talking about more than a year before any money is needed if we are successful," in receiving the grant, Spivey explained.

As proposed, according to Spivey, the first phase of the project would include the purchase of radio equipment for Pitt Memorial Hospital (estimated at $21,000), the Pitt County Communication Center ($17,500), and two mobile units for the Winterville Rescue Squad ($34,000). The local 50 percent matching cost would be $36,285.

The second phase of the project, he noted, projected for the 1982-1983 fiscal year, would include $34,000 for two mobile radios for the Grifton Rescue Squad and three for the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department at a cost of $51,000 ($42,500 local match).

"Winterville is in the IV (intermediate life support) program at this time," Spivey said, while pointing out that Grifton rescue volunteers will begin intermediate life support training in the next few months.

"Greenville was the first one to be intermediate," Eubanks, a member of the Grifton Rescue Squad, pointed out. "They have had their problems. They are not practicing (providing intermediate life support services)," although some Greenville men are, "working with Winterville to keep their certification," he said.

Even though, "Greenville hasn't gotten its act together ... can't get people to follow through," according to Allison, "Pitt County is the hub. We need to see what the needs are."

Although Spivey noted that, "350 hours (of training) are required for paramedic training...a major undertaking for volunteers," which, "eventually...will mean more paid people," Allison said, "it would never do away with volunteer rescue squads...that's never been considered."

Allison noted that the EMS grant application, scheduled to be completed and submitted in the near future, is, "the first EMS grant application effort (in the state) to have the endorsement of the North Carolina Medical Society."

Returning To Arabian Sea

WASHINGTON (AP) - The aircraft carrier Independence and two other warships will return to the Arabian Sea after a port call at Fremantle, Australia, Navy sources say. The port call does not represent the beginning of a scaling-down of U.S. naval presence in the area of the Indian Ocean, Persian Gulf and Arabian Sea, said Pentagon and Navy officials, who asked not to be identified.

Two U.S. carrier battle groups have been stationed in the Indian Ocean area since late 1979 because of the taking of American hostages in Iran and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

East Carolina Rips Samford By 75-50

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina ran off 11 straight points in the first half and followed that up with ten in a row in the second to romp to a 75-50 victory over Samford University in Minges Coliseum last night.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 10-10 on the year as the Pirates again try to climb above .500 for the first time since late December. Samford fell to 7-9 on the year, having lost two in a row now.

"I don't think it's out of line for me to say it, but I think this was the best game we've played this year," ECU coach Dave Odom said. "In practically every phase of the game, we did well. Oh, there were some areas inside areas that weren't perfect, but overall in offense, defense, rebounding, and hustle we did a nice job against a very good team."

Samford, however, coming off a tough one-point loss to strong Houston Baptist on its own home court on a buzzer shot, didn't show its true wares, according to Odom.

"I saw them play against Houston Baptist, and it scared me," he said. "The people here didn't see the same team I saw. They can play much better. Houston Baptist is a strong, strong team and they just did get by them." Odom added that Houston Baptist, long a power in the Southwest, suffers an identity problem, just as East Carolina would if talked about in Texas.

Samford, a much slower team than the Pirates, shot only 40.4 per cent for the game, including 37 per cent in the first half. East Carolina rebounded from a 44.4 first half to end up with a 51.7 percentage for the game, hitting 57.6 in the second half.

The Pirates also controlled the boards, 37-30, after being down at the half, 17-16 in that department.

"Our defense was superb," Odom said. "(Steve) Barker is a fine player and we did a nice job on him and on (Robbin) Bumbury." Barker, hitting only two of 12 shots, finished the game with just four points, while Bumbury, hitting six of 11, made 14 points, high for the Bulldogs.

"On offense, the only thing I saw that I didn't like was that some of our shot selection wasn't that good," the coach added. Much of that, apparently, came in the first half.

The game was slow getting started, as both teams had trouble finding the basket. Samford never led, although it tied the score at every two point mark between 2-2 and 16-16 except for 4-4.

With 7:08 left in the half, however, the Pirates went on a tare and ripped through 11 straight points to go from a 16-16 tie to a 27-16 lead. Samford never came closer than nine points after that.

Mark McLaurin started the streak, hitting off a rebound, and added another basket, leading the charge with four points.

Before the half finally ended, the Pirates led by 13, and held a 33-22 margin at intermission.

East Carolina finally inched up to a 37-29 lead at 57:39 with 5:36 left. Then, after Samford scored one more basket, the Pirates rolled again, scoring ten in a row to run the lead out to 26, 67-39. Five different Pirates scored during that string, which established the largest Pirate lead.

"I was very pleased with everybody," Odom said. "I could name names, but everyone played well."

He then went on to name names. "(Bill) McNair kind of found himself tonight. The task he has is to put some games back to back." McNair scored 13 points on six of seven field goals and one of two free throws. He also had six rebounds, second for the Pirates the game, high for ECU). (Charles) Watkins played his best game in the weeks. (Barry) Wright did a great defensive job on Barker. (Herb) Gilchrist played well, and (Michael) Gibson rebounded well and played good defense."

Everyone played for the Pirates except Mike Fox, coming off an illness.

"This was an outstanding team win for us, and we finally looked like a good team in Greenville," Odom said. "Now we have a chance to go over .500 for the first time since I can't remember when. That's enough incentive for me, and I hope it's enough for the guys."

Odom said that while Samford lacked a great deal of team speed, it is that type of team that has given the Pirates the most trouble this year. "They are kind of a cross between Brown and Richmond," he said. "They are slow like Brown, and shoot like Richmond. I was impressed with their know-how and their strength when I saw them on Saturday."

While Bumbury had 14 for Samford, Ronald Radford added 11.

East Carolina was paced by Underwood by 14, while McNair had 13, Watkins had 11 and Wright, 10.

East Carolina travels to Raleigh on Wednesday to face Campbell University in a 7:30 p.m. game at the Civic Center. They return home on Saturday for a 7 p.m. exhibition game against the Athletics in Action.

Three-Game Week Could Tell Tale For Conley Title Chances

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

It is, to say the least, a big week for D.H. Conley. The Vikings play three Eastern Carolina Conference basketball games in four days and with just two weeks left in the regular season the results will have a lot to do with who wins the league crown.

"This is a big week for us," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "As far as we're concerned, it's going to go a long way in deciding who wins the championship."

"We play the league leader and the third place club all in one week and something should be decided this week. I really thing that by the end of the week we'll know who's going to win the championship."

The Vikings, 13-4 overall, go into this week's action with a 9-2 conference mark, one-half game back of Greene Central. The Vikings play host to the Rams Friday night in a game that could decide the league title.

First, however, Conley must get by Southwest Edgecombe (3-16, 2-11) Tuesday night in Pinetops and then North Pitt (10-8, 9-3) at home Wednesday night, a game rescheduled from last Friday because of the snow.

The Vikings should defeat the Cougars, a team they beat 54-34 earlier this season. A win over North Pitt, which closes out the season with two road games, would all but eliminate the Panthers from the league title chase.

A loss to the Panthers, however, would not be as harmful to the Vikings. Conley must still have to face Greene Central and a win could produce a three-way battle for the crown going into the final week of the season.

While the Vikings are playing SW Edgecombe Tuesday night, the Rams face Southern Nash (12-7, 9-4) without leading scorer David Joyner. Joyner, who is academically ineligible for the rest of the season, was averaging just over 14 points and 4.5 assists a game while also being the league's top percentage free throw shooter.

"I don't think that it'll affect them that much," Marsh said. "He's a good ballplayer but Greene Central has good depth."

After struggling in the early going, the Vikings have won five out of their last six and appear to be coming together as the season nears its close.

"Yes, we're looking good at the right time," Marsh said. "The last three games we've really been playing rather well and I think we're beginning to jell as a team."

In other games Tuesday night, Ayden-Grifton (8-9, 6-5) travels to North Pitt, C.B. Aycock (1-16, 1-11) travels to Farmville Central (1-17, 1-11), Roanoke Rapids at Roanoke (15-3, 8-2), Bath at Jamesville, Wake Christian at Greenville Christian, Tarboro at Williamston (2-7, 6-9) and Bear Grass at Creswell.

Wednesday night Ayden-

Grifton travels to North Lenoir for a game reset from Friday night and Williamston travels to Ahoskie.

In games Friday evening, Southern Nash is at Ayden-Grifton, Farmville is at North Lenoir, Roanoke travels to Washington, Jacksonville goes to Jamesville, Greenville Christian journeys to Goldsboro, Plymouth is at Williamston and Bear Grass is at Mattamuskeet.

In wrestling this week, Farmville Central is at Southern Nash Thursday while D.H. Conley travels to Morehead City Saturday for the Coastal Invitational Tournament.

Poker-Faced Cook Survives His Nerves; Wins Playoff For Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — His expressionless face never betrayed it, but young John Cook admitted "I was choking a little on those last few holes, trying to get in the playoff" for the title in one of golf's more confused, confusing but nevertheless spectacular events.

First he watched poker-faced while his amateur partner actor Jim Garner engaged in a shoving match with a overboisterous spectator. Then such names as Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson shot themselves out of it, gritty Ben Crenshaw blew sole control of the lead and two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin failed on a short, playoff putt that would have won it.

After all that the 23-year-old Cook emerged as the winner of the first five-man sudden-death playoff in modern golf history and the Bing Crosby Pro-Am golf championship.

Despite the interruption of the Garner incident late on a sunny afternoon, despite his attack of nerves over the final holes of regulation, the 23-year-old Cook regained his composure when the five men trooped to the first tee at Pebble Beach.

"I felt very comfortable in the playoff," Cook said. "I relax by hitting balls. So after I'd finished at Spyglass, I just hit some balls and I felt fine in the playoff."

The key was the drive (down the middle) on the first playoff hole. After that I was fine."

Barney Thompson, Bob Clampett and Crenshaw dropped out on that first extra hole when Cook birdied from 10 feet and Irwin scored from four.

Both parred the par-5 second, with Irwin missing a 4-footer than would have won it.

"I got in my own way," the veteran said.

"Cook deserved to win it."

And win it he did on the next hole. Irwin missed the green and bogeyed. Cook had it four feet from the flag for a birdie, but missed. He had about an 18-inch putt to win it and calmly dropped the ball in the cup for a $40,500 first prize and the first victory of his two-year pro career.

It was a dramatic windup to a much-troubled event that was rained out for two days, eventually was cut from 72 holes to 34 and finished a day late on six holes spread over three courses spaced along about five miles of picturesque beauty on the Monterey Peninsula coast.

The logistics were such that CBS decided it was too difficult to provide national television coverage of the final round. The network did televise the first two rounds.

And they missed a beauty on Monday.

It had all the ingredients. There were Nicklaus and Watson, each in position to win it alone. There was Crenshaw, who only needed to par the last three holes to win it. There was the drama of the first five-man sudden death playoff in memory.

And there was Garner's little problem with a spectator. "This one guy had had too much to drink, and he'd been riding me all day," said television's Rockford, who was Cook's amateur partner.

Garner said late in the round that he'd talked with the man "and I looked at his hands. I've been sucker-punched before and so I shoved him. That's all that happened. There wasn't much to it."

But Cook, trying to win his first title, was a witness. It didn't upset him. He got the pars he needed on the last two holes, finishing off a round of par 72 at Spyglass, the toughest of the three courses used.

That gave him a 7-under-par total of 209. But when he finished, Crenshaw and Brad Bryant were at eight under. Bryant promptly made double bogey on his 17th hole and Ben three-putted his 16th.

That set up the five-man shootout. Crenshaw shot a 70 at Spyglass Hill. Clampett had a closing 71 at Cypress Point, Thompson 67 at Cypress Point and Irwin a rallying 70 at Spyglass. None of them really knew how they stood in relation to the rest of the field most of the day.

"There aren't all that many leader boards out there and most of the time you just don't have any idea what's going on," Irwin said.

Watson, golf's leading performer over the past four years, led much of the last day and once had a three-shot margin. But Watson, making his first start of the season, three-putted three times and hit one in the water over his last nine holes, which he played in 40 at Spyglass Hill.

"A disappointing finish," Watson said after the 74 that put him at 210, one shot out of the playoff. He was tied with Bryant, who had a 74 also at Spyglass, Pate with a 73 at Pebble Beach, Andy Bean with 71 at Cypress Point and Mike Reid with 68 at Pebble Beach. Nicklaus twice had it eight under par, good enough to win, but played his back side at Spyglass in 38 and finished with a 72 and 211, two shots back.

Wins In Sudden Death

Garner Takes Heckler's Dare

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Actor James Garner allegedly punched a Laguna Beach man who witnesses say had been heckling him during the last round Monday of the Bing Crosby Pro-Am golf tournament.

Garner, star of "The Rockford Files" television program, said, however, that he only pushed the man after he thought the man was going to hit him.

According to a report filed with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department by William Stewart, 33, Garner came up to him and hit him in the right cheek with a right cross.

"It knocked me out," he told reporters. No charges had been filed.

Spectators said Stewart had been heckling Garner during the round and Garner went up to the crowd after the round.

"Who's the drunk with the big mouth?" Garner asked, according to Jeff Whitmer, 14, a leaderboard carrier.

Whitmer said after a brief exchange, Stewart asked, "Why don't you pop (hit) me?"

Garner replied, "Do you want me to?" said Whitmer, and when Stewart said yes, Garner did.

Bruins Nip Jaguar Matmen

FARMVILLE — Bouyed by three forfeits and strong performances in the middle weight classes, Wilson Beddingfield edged Farmville Central, 34-33, Monday night in a nonconference wrestling match.

Forfeits in the first two weight classes by Farmville gave the Bruins a 12-0 lead. The Jaguars, however, rallied to take the lead (13-12) when at 129 pounds Farmville's Greg Smith pinned Greg Bridges.

It was a lead short-lived. The Bruins came back to win three out of the next four weight classes (the other was a double forfeit), highlighted by John Bynum's narrow 8-7 victory over Farmville's Roger Joyner. Both wrestlers were unbeaten going into the match.

Farmville won three of the last four matches — including two by pins — but it wasn't enough as the Jaguars dropped their fourth match in 12 outings.

Farmville travels to Southern Nash Thursday.

Summary:

101 — Jay Hill (B) won by forfeit.

108 — Earnest Davis (B) won by forfeit.

115 — Joel Shackelford (FC) d. Dennis Strickland, 9-0.

122 — Jerry Foreman (FC) d. Carl Williams, 2-1.

129 — Greg Smith (FC) p. Curtis Bridges, 3-52.

135 — Paul Smith (B) d. Jay Tyson, 25-0.

Irish Warm Up For Battle With UCLA

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Devotees of Notre Dame basketball can attest to it. There's nothing like UCLA to get the juices flowing.

"It's a matter of revenge against UCLA," 6-foot-4 Notre Dame forward Kelly Tripucka said of the Fighting Irish's nationally televised rematch at home against the Bruins this Saturday.

Tripucka, his teammates and Coach Digger Phelps have bitter memories of their season-opening loss at UCLA, a 94-81 drubbing that Tripucka says is no longer indicative of the teams' relative talents.

"We're a completely different team now," says Tripucka, who scored a game-high 20 points Monday night in leading the ninth-ranked Irish over St. Mary's, Calif., 94-63.

"Our execution is totally better. We know ourselves now," Tripucka said.

Tripucka scored his points in only 25 minutes of play against the outmanned Gaels as Phelps used every player on his roster, including 5-10 guard Marc Kelly, who played the last minute.

"While we were trying to get a lot of mileage out of our bench, we're also trying to rest some others, like Tripucka, (Orlando) Woolridge. (Tracy) Jackson and (John) Paxson," Phelps said. "Woolridge is still fighting a cold."

Woolridge, a 6-foot-9 senior forward, scored 12 points in 23 minutes of play, while Jackson and reserve Bill Varner had 10 points each to help Notre Dame raise its record to 15-3.

Jackson, Phelps' shooting guard, was asked about the UCLA rivalry, and he reminded reporters that the Irish still had a game Wednesday with La Salle, which lost a close one, 69-62, to third-ranked DePaul last week at Philadelphia.

"We want to beat UCLA, but we've also got to beat La Salle," Jackson said. "This time, we'll have our student body. If we play like we have all year, execute, work the ball, we should be OK."

Notre Dame led St. Mary's by 10 at halftime, 44-34. The Irish stretched that lead to 22 by outscoring the Gaels 16-2 over a three-minute span, a burst capped by Tripucka's two foul shots that gave Notre Dame a 64-42 lead with 12:57 left.

Using primarily substitutes, Notre Dame built its lead to as many as 33 points several times in the final 31-3 minutes.

David Vann, a junior guard, was the leading scorer for St. Mary's, now 7-12, with 14 points, including six in an 8-4 uprising that gave the Gaels their final lead of the game, 18-16, with 10:58 remaining in the first half.

"We were a little tired, especially in the second half," St. Mary's Coach Bill Oates said. "But that's no excuse. I'd have to say that that was the poorest defense we played all year. I can't explain why we played so badly, but I have to give Notre Dame credit — they played a good game."

In the only other game involving a Top Twenty team, Fat Lever tied the game with an 18-foot jumper as the first overtime ended, then scored four points in the second overtime to lead No. 5 Arizona State over California 84-81.

The Sun Devils, now 8-1 in the conference and 16-3 overall, tied the score at 66-66 in the eighth minutes of regulation time.

Elsewhere, forward Jaime Pena scored 22 points, including 12 in the second half, to lead New Mexico State to a 67-60 victory over Indiana State. A 6-foot-7 junior, Pena was the only Aggie player in double figures.

Detroit's Joe Kapicki scored 21 points and grabbed 18 rebounds as the Titans topped St. Bonaventure 71-63.

John Goode's basket and two free throws in the final minute gave Virginia Military a 66-62 Southern Conference victory over The Citadel and snapped a seven-game Keydets losing streak.

Melvin Wilkins' only two points of the game came with three seconds showing on the clock and lifted Southern University past the University of New Orleans 73-72. Lewis Lloyd hit a 15-foot jumper from the baseline with one second left to boost Drake past Bradley 77-75, and John Young sank two free throws with two seconds left to give Rutgers-Camden the lead for the first time and a 71-70 victory over Stockton State.

Virginia's Terry Holland says the difference between being No. 1 and No. 2 is the sausage. Oregon State's Ralph Miller would rather call it disappointment.

Virginia grabbed sole possession of the No. 1 position in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday, edging Oregon State by mere 10 points to end a one-week tie between the two teams for the top slot in the nation.

"The good thing about being No. 1 is Jimmy Graves' home-made sausage," said Holland, referring to a gift he received from a local motel owner after being named No. 1. "I doubt I would have gotten them if we were No. 2."

Virginia, 18-0, collected 35 first-place votes and 1,212 of a possible 1,240 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Oregon State, 17-0, was tabbed No. 1 on 26 ballots and received 1,202 points.

"It may hurt their (the players) feelings a little bit, but as far as affecting their lot in life and what they have to do, it makes no difference," said Miller after learning his team fell from the nation's No. 1 position after a three-week stay.

Last week, Virginia and Oregon State each garnered 29 first-place votes and 1,147 points. Three poll members did not cast ballots last week. All 62 poll members voted this week.

Virginia downed then-No. 6 Wake Forest 83-73 and whipped Duke 68-47 last week, while the Beavers defeated then-No. 10 UCLA 81-67 and nipped Southern Cal 55-48 in games last week.

DePaul, Louisiana State and Arizona State retained the No. 3 through five positions, respectively. The Blue Demons, 18-1, collected 1,095 points after eeking out a 54-50 victory over Illinois State and bombarding Syracuse 91-69. The Tigers got the final first-place vote and 1,076 points, while the Sun Devils received 944 points.

Kentucky, Utah and Wake Forest waged a close fight to the next three positions. The Wildcats moved up a notch into the No. 6 slot with 830 points, while the Utes jumped two spots and are seventh this week with 812 points — six more than Wake Forest.

Notre Dame and Tennessee rounded out the Top 10. The Irish, who slipped a notch despite wins over Cornell and South Carolina, got 770 points. The Volunteers, victors over Georgia and Alabama, had 657.

North Carolina headed the Second 10. UCLA was 12th followed by Maryland, Michigan, Iowa, Brigham Young, Indiana, Illinois, Wichita State and South Alabama.

Last week the Second 10 was Tennessee, North Carolina, Iowa, Maryland, Brigham Young, South Alabama, Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota and Connecticut.

Indiana and Illinois returned to the Top 20 this week, while Wichita State is making its first appearance. Kansas, Minnesota and Connecticut, the

Nos. 18, 19 and 20 teams last week, all fell from the elite 20 following upsets.

KERO-SUN HEATERS KEEP YOU WARM...

EVEN WHEN THE POWER FAILS!

Kero-Sun portable kerosene heaters are dependable, efficient, safe, economical, and they require no outside power! But don't wait for an emergency — a Kero-Sun heater is perfect any time for those nasty cold spots in all kinds of places: basement, workshop, garage, barn, greenhouse, store, office, new construction.

Kero-Sun heaters have no smoke, no odor, need no chimney venting, feature automatic shutoff in event of tilt-over (except Model K), and you can use them in places where electricity is only a fond memory. Push the automatic igniter and enjoy up to 30 hours of warmth on less than 2 gallons of fuel.

Get a Kero-Sun heater today — when the power goes off, it's a friend indeed!

50% of Michelob fans pull the switch for Schlitz

48% of 200 loyal Budweiser drinkers also prefer Schlitz

Schlitz' impressive showing against Michelob wasn't the first time loyal beer drinkers picked Schlitz over their brand. Results were similar in earlier tests against number one selling Budweiser.

In a live TV taste test conducted just before the second half of the Oakland/Houston playoff game, 46 out of 100 loyal Bud drinkers preferred Schlitz over their own beer. A week later, 100 more Bud drinkers were tested. This time 50%—exactly half—pulled the switch for Schlitz.

All in all, 48% of the loyal Bud drinkers tested liked Schlitz better. Prior to the test, the panelists had signed affidavits affirming that Budweiser was their beer. Most of them seemed confident that Bud would be their choice in the test. At least 48% left with a new outlook—and some, perhaps, with a new beer.

"I was confident" states Schlitz Chief Frank Sellinger

The results of the taste tests were not unexpected for Schlitz Chief Executive, Frank Sellinger.

"Some people thought it was risky to do live TV taste tests in front of millions of people," says Sellinger, "but it didn't take nerve, it just took confidence."

Sellinger, a master brewer for 40 years, has helped brew some of the world's finest beers. Since joining the company three years ago, he has concentrated on making Schlitz the best premium beer on the market.

"They brought me here to brew the best," says Sellinger. "And this Schlitz is it."

It seems quite a few of the Bud, Miller and Michelob drinkers tested agree.

It was Schlitz vs. Michelob Beer—and former NFL Referee Tommy Bell called the score for Schlitz in the live TV taste test.

50 out of 100 Michelob drinkers pick Schlitz on live Super Bowl TV

100 million fans watched as Schlitz took on Michelob in the finale of "The Great American Beer Switch." The dramatic test was conducted live during half-time of the Super Bowl game.

The huge audience witnessed 100 loyal Michelob drinkers choose between two unlabelled beers—their own Michelob and today's Schlitz. The outcome proved a surprise to many Michelob drinkers who found themselves preferring the taste of Schlitz over the taste of Michelob.

Each of the 100 loyal Michelob drinkers was served two beers, one Schlitz and one Michelob, in unlabelled ceramic mugs. Tasters were told to indicate a tie, or make a choice by pulling an electronic switch left or right in the direction of the beer they preferred. To insure fairness, the testing was conducted by a leading independent consumer research firm. The results were validated by another top statistical research company, Elrick and Lavidge, Inc.

Before the test, the Michelob drinkers probably thought they would pick their own brand. A lot of them seemed surprised as they watched the number of Michelob drinkers who preferred Schlitz flash up for national TV.

200 Miller drinkers tested: Schlitz is preferred by 37%

In the weeks following the impressive showing against #1 Budweiser, Schlitz went head to head against another leading beer—Miller.

In two taste tests appearing on live television, a total of 200 loyal Miller drinkers were asked to choose between their beer and Schlitz. Again, a significant number of Miller drinkers decided their beer was second best and pulled the switch for Schlitz.

Beer fans surprised at choice of Schlitz

Panelists who decided their beer was second best and chose Schlitz expressed surprise. Similar reactions have been registered in other taste tests across the country.

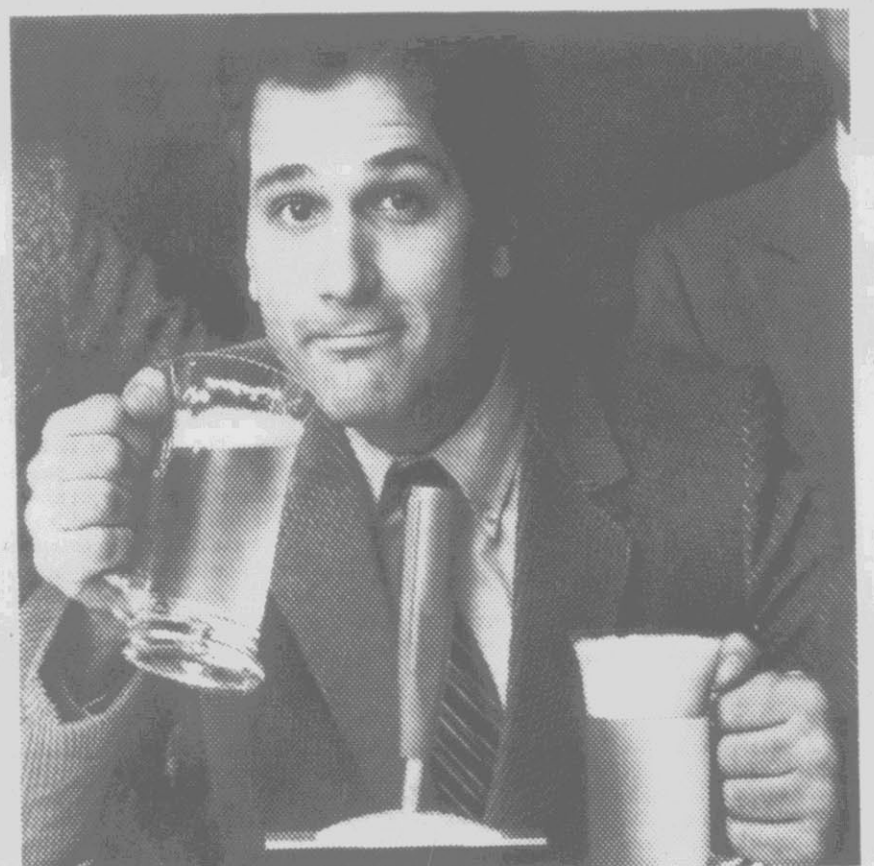

"I honestly selected the beer I preferred and it wasn't Miller," admitted Miller drinker, Albert Gualano.

"I'm genuinely surprised," exclaimed Guy D'Anne, "I thought Bud was better but I've been proved wrong." "Schlitz has much better flavor than Miller, and it goes down easier," attested Bill Weber, "I could drink it all night."

Panelist Bernie Felsbit summed up the reaction of many of the Bud, Miller and Michelob drinkers when he said, "There may be a new beer in my future."

Loyal Michelob drinkers chose between unlabelled mugs of their Michelob and today's Schlitz.

Do it yourself—try the "Great American Beer Switch" test

This test requires two identical mugs, a Schlitz and your regular beer, at equal temperature. Label the mugs "1" and "2" so the taster won't know which beer is which. Pour the beers to equal heads out of the taster's sight.

To ensure that the choice is made on taste alone, serve the beer in non-transparent mugs or have the taster close his eyes. Now let the taster sample both of the beers and choose the one that tastes better. Now you taste both beers yourself. Did you pick your regular brand? Or today's Schlitz?

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — A MISER MAY SEE MISERY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The International Bridge Press Association's Charles Goren Award for "Bridge Personality of the Year" has been awarded to Amalya Kearse of New York for her contributions to bridge over the past dozen years. In 1979, Miss Kearse gave up a partnership in a well-known Wall Street law firm to accept a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit—the first woman to sit on the federal appeals court in Manhattan. She is the author of several bridge books, edited the third edition of the "Encyclopedia of Bridge," and is the winner of two national championships.

To list all of Miss Kearse's accomplishments would take more space than we are allotted in this column. But we can cite an example of her skill at the bridge table. This hand is from the 1972 Life Master Women's Pairs, which she won playing with Rhoda Walsh of Beverly Hills.

After East opened the bidding with one spade, South became declarer at a slightly ambitious contract of three no trump. Sitting West, Miss Kearse dutifully led her partner's suit. East played low and declarer won the jack.

Declarer had some work to do to set up nine tricks, and at trick two she led the king of diamonds. Had Miss Kearse won this trick, declarer would have been in command. But West played low, and declarer continued with the queen of diamonds. Now West took the ace of diamonds and continued with the ten, and declarer could no longer come to more than eight tricks. The defenders were destined to come to two diamond tricks, two hearts and a spade.

Observe what happens if West wins the ace of diamonds on the first lead of the suit. She cannot return a diamond, because North will end up with the J-8 tenace over West's 10-5. If she continues a spade, she gives declarer two spade tricks, two diamonds and five clubs. And a heart shift simply sets up declarer's game-going trick in that suit.

Public Service Groups Await Ax

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the Federal Communications Commission recently freed radio stations from the obligation to broadcast public service programs, it placed all manner of radio programs — from quick little government-sponsored messages to religious programs — on the chopping block.

Whether an ax will actually fall remains to be seen. Some public service groups — most notably, the United Church of Christ, which has appealed the FCC ruling — insist that radio stations will dump public information programming if not specifically required to carry it.

But at least one public service program supplier is unworried by the development. The Salvation Army is convinced that its public service radio program will play on. FCC requirements be, uh, darned.

Indeed, the Salvation Army is convinced that its radio show is so well-

ON BROADWAY — The comedy team of Robert Shields (bottom) and Lorene Yarnell are rehearsing in New York with an international cast of entertainers for the vaudeville musical "Broadway Follies", which opens in March at New York's Nederlander Theatre. Producer Edgar Lansbury amassed the improbable cast by bearing one goal in mind: "I wanted to find people who enjoy doing immensely difficult things just for the sake of doing them. That, after all, is what vaudeville is all about." (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4, 1981

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The benefits that come today are only those which are unexpected since there is much confusion in normal outlets. Figure out what obstacles must be overcome.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Although you may want to start on a new project, something else turns up that requires your immediate attention.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A silent associate suddenly gives the support you need. The planets are most favorable for getting ahead now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you persevere with the work ahead of you, many fine benefits come your way. Be more encouraging to loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make plans to have increased income in the days ahead. Show your creativity to influential persons.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can gain many benefits now by applying yourself more in career matters. Sidestep one who has an eye on your assets.

STARTS FRIDAY! CINEMA 2 ROBERT REDFORD IS "BRUBAKER" produced, so entertaining, that it actually attracts audience to stations that use it. The source of the Army's enthusiasm is "Heartbeat Theater," the longest-running radio drama series in existence.

"Heartbeat Theater" plays on 500 stations every week, its dramas offered for free. The Salvation Army pays for production of the plays and insists only that each drama include one mention of the Army; that's the only proviso.

Stations have been most willing to use "Heartbeat" because it offered first-rate entertainment while satisfying the public service requirements.

"We're hoping the ruling will not affect us at all," says George Gilbreath, "Heartbeat" producer. "We've never pitched it on the basis of fulfilling an FCC requirement; we've always sold it on the basis of being quality entertainment with top-notch talent, a program that will enhance the image of a station and even attract an audience for it."

Indeed, radio drama does seem to be in renaissance after being driven from public favor three decades ago by television. "There's a sizable market forming out there," says Gilbreath, "twenty million people or so. And the thing is, it's young people, people who don't remember radio drama. It's really catching on."

"Heartbeat Theater" was begun 25 years ago by C.P. MacGregor as a means of reflecting the social and moral climate, perhaps commenting on it, through entertainment. The form's appeal waned through the '50's and "Heartbeat" nearly stopped when MacGregor died in the early '60s.

The widow MacGregor kept it going until she died five years ago. Gilbreath, a local radio producer and station-owner, stepped in and revitalized the institution.

"I thought it would be a shame for it to go under," he says, "so I re-designed it. I took it out of the 1940s — with the long, stilted scenes — and put it in 1976. And we brought in some marvelous young writers, 34 of them."

That last wasn't easy at first. "We had to train them ourselves because all the script writers here are writing for the visual medium, not for the ear. We had to start our own workshop and train them."

One of their writers is Joyce Perry, who won an Emmy a couple of seasons ago for her writing on the TV soap, "Days of Our Lives."

Gilbreath says it's necessary to keep such a large stable of writers because some of them are always off on another writing project, for TV or the movies. But they usually return, with enthusiasm.

Indeed, actors, too, are eager to work for "Heartbeat."

"It's not difficult to attract actors because they love radio drama," Gilbreath says. "It's rare that we get a turnout. In the last year we've had Greer Garson, Barry Sullivan, Jesse White, Joe Campanella, Ross Martin... they love it."

The effect of the FCC's decision upon public service programming won't be felt for at least several weeks. There are indications that "Heartbeat" won't fall victim to radio's emancipation. Don Langford, program director for KLAC here, says he intends to run "Heartbeat" on Sunday night whether he has to or not.

"I think this station's commitment to assist those who want to get a worthy message across is very important... besides, it's a good show."

Diane Ladd
Quits Alice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Diane Ladd, who just last week won a Golden Globe Award for her role in the CBS comedy, "Alice," has quit the popular TV series, the network has announced.

Miss Ladd said her role as Belle, the hip-swinging waitress from Mississippi, "just hasn't developed the way we hoped it would in the beginning."

The network quoted Miss Ladd on Monday as saying that she and CBS "have mutually and amicably decided we shouldn't continue."

Miss Ladd didn't join the cast of "Alice" until last year, when she replaced Polly Holliday, who had been portraying another waitress, Flo. Miss Holliday got her own series on CBS.

Miss Ladd had been nominated for an Oscar in the movie from which "Alice" was derived, "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore."

A replacement for Miss Ladd, who will tape her last segment on Feb. 10, has not been selected.

Oscar Nominee
Balloting Ends

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nominating ballots are in for the Academy Awards and the familiar phrase, "the envelope please," will be heard again at the 53rd annual Oscar ceremony on March 30.

Ballots were due at 5 p.m. Monday at the Price Waterhouse accounting firm in downtown Los Angeles.

Heifetz Has A
Quiet Birthday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jascha Heifetz, the violin master, spent his 80th birthday in seclusion, but the nation's public radio and television stations celebrated for him with special broadcasts of his works.

Heifetz, who turned 80 on Monday, has made only sporadic public appearances since his retirement in 1974.

He has said the last time he really celebrated a birthday was on his 50th. The celebration "started in the early morning and lasted until quite late in the evening."

"I said then that was it, and I think I have kept my word," he said.

The virtuoso, who made his debut at New York's Carnegie Hall in 1917, was unavailable for comment on Monday.

Cronkite Bows
Out March 6

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS newsmen Walter Cronkite will make his farewell appearance as anchorman on the network's evening news show on Friday, March 6, the network has announced.

Stepping into Cronkite's shoes, beginning Monday, March 9, will be Dan Rather, CBS News President William Leonard said Monday.

Cronkite, who has been managing editor and anchorman at CBS since April 16, 1962, will continue work with the network.

Rather, a CBS newsmen since 1962, most recently has been working on "60 Minutes."

Little Acting In TV Debut

NEW YORK (AP) — Halston, the fashion designer, won't have to do much acting in a guest appearance on ABC-TV's "Love Boat" series.

"I play myself coming on board with five of my models, going to Acapulco for a big international fashion show," Halston said.

Sunday in an interview with the New York Daily News. "I've designed special clothes, and I'll do the commentary for the showing."

The episode airs in May and Halston is donating his fee to the Martha Graham Dance Company.

"My friend Liza Minnelli gave me some advice," Halston said. "Endear yourself to the audience, be happy and be yourself."

Cold And Fuel Prices Hit Old, Poor In New England

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Winter in New England: bulging wood piles, pungent wood smoke, thrifty Yankees snug by glowing wood fires. The stuff of a Norman Rockwell painting.

But in the cities — in tiny apartments and drafty old houses — old and poor Yankees are known to coax heat off kitchen stoves and ovens after fuel oil tanks in the basement run dry.

Record-breaking temperatures and the $1.20-a-gallon cost of fuel oil have made real what was only feared a few years ago — thousands of people cannot afford to stay warm.

"It looks very bad this year. We have more people eligible for government help and more people signing up," Sister Betty Murtagh, a Catholic nun working for the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans, said with a sigh.

"We worry about elderly people dying of hypothermia. We have people leaving stoves and ovens on. We've had fires because of it," she said.

In some New England states, including Massachusetts and Rhode Island, natural gas and electric companies are prohibited by law from turning off the heat during winter months if users can't afford to pay. But fuel oil suppliers, whose product heats most New England homes, face no such restrictions.

"I expect I'll have my gas stove going for the rest of the winter," said Julia Thomas of Providence as she walked through the snow one morning to apply for government assistance.

Mrs. Thomas, 53, a single parent of two children, said her oil tank had been empty for a week. She stood in a crowd of people with similar stories to seek government help. "I keep the temperature at 60 degrees, but it's hard 'cause it's so cold."

Congress voted to spend $1.756 billion this year in the Low Income Energy Assistance Program, authorized by the Crude Oil Windfall Profits Act.

But in a winter like this one, the coldest since 1885, the money isn't enough, government workers say.

From mid-December to mid-January, temperatures seldom reached the normal level of 30 degrees. On many days, the mercury didn't top 20 degrees, and nighttime temperatures often plunged below zero. More bitter cold is forecast.

Rhode Island received $11.3 million in heating aid to serve an estimated 18,000 families. In Massachusetts, the fuel assistance program has $76 million to spend on as many as 441,000 eligible people. In Maine, the figure is $23.8 million for an estimated 60,000 people.

In Maine, the poorest family qualifies for up to $500 to buy fuel oil. In Rhode Island the maximum for the most needy is $450.

"A number of people I know about have already exhausted their allotments, and the winter isn't even half over," Dick Rowland of the Association of Older Americans in Massachusetts said.

"Rhode Island's assistance program would shut down today if we were to give people the kind of money they really need to keep warm," said Liza Readyhough, head of Rhode Island's program.

"Because of the cold winter, the average six-room house has already consumed over 900 gallons of fuel. Even the neediest person can get only 375 gallons under our program," she said.

"President Reagan's decision to decontrol oil will raise the price even more and mean that much less heat for poor people," Mrs. Readyhough said.

Rhode Island energy officials expect decontrol to raise the price of heating oil by about a nickel a gallon.

Jadine O'Brien, director of Maine's program, said the state has already spent about $18 million of the $23.8 million allocated.

"If it stays this cold for the rest of the winter, there'll be problems," she said.

Mrs. O'Brien worries most about "a heck of a lot of elderly people — very proud New England Yankees — who wouldn't come in from the cold for help."

The plight of the elderly seems especially acute.

Gerontology students at the University of Massachusetts in Boston conducted a survey of low-income elderly and found that rising fuel costs have "profoundly altered" the lifestyles of thousands of retired people in the state.

In dealing with the problem of keeping warm, "everyone seems to begin by regulating their thermostats," the survey found.

"Second, there are those who have to dip into their retirement savings, unable to fulfill their dreams and barely able to pay their bills. Third, there are those who are forced to give up significant possessions, such as cars, or meaningful routines, such as entertaining friends.

"Fourth, many have no choice but to reduce the size of their living area. And last, there are those who have had to severely limit food."

Sister Murtagh called the elderly the "new poor, some of whom have saved all their live only to watch their hard work confiscated by high energy cost."

Biking By Bureaucrats Is Encouraged By GAO

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bureaucracy would roll to work on two wheels instead of four if the General Accounting Office were in charge of getting government workers from place to place.

In a 39-page report to Congress, the GAO said the government should encourage its employees to use bicycles and mopeds in lieu of automobiles and compensate them for the travel — 4 cents a mile for bike riders and 8 cents a mile for moped users.

But obstacles — real and "attitudinal" — stand in the way of a bicycling bureaucracy, said the GAO, an investigative arm of Congress. It recommended the government change its ways.

For example, government agencies should provide more parking spaces for bicycles and more showering facilities for the bicyclists, the report said.

The GAO saluted the Post Office in Phoenix, Ariz., which has embraced the bicycle in response to a "demotorizing" directive from Washington. In Phoenix, the GAO noted, postmen cover 10 percent of the city's routes on 100 bicycles and have asked for 165 more of them.

Bicycles are especially appropriate for government workers whose jobs require them to move around big facilities like military bases and national parks, the agency said.

The GAO's ideas drew fire from the General Services Administration, however. The GSA is in charge of computing how much to pay government workers who travel on government business, and it opposes proposals that it investigate how much cyclists and moped operators should be paid.

"These investigations," the GSA said, "would put an administrative burden on GSA with no foreseeable benefit to GSA, the employee or the government as a whole."

The GSA also said switching government workers to bicycles would not be efficient because it would take them more time to get from place to place.

The GAO demurred, in part. Sometimes, it said, "in addition to conserving energy and protecting the environment, bicycle riders can save time in situations such as congested downtown areas, where bicycle travel is faster than car travel."

As for how much it actually costs to operate a bicycle, the GAO pointed to four studies, which put the range from 2.977 to 4.9 cents per mile.

The 2.977 estimate came from cyclist William Bliss of San Jose, Calif., legislative director of the League of American Wheelmen. He calculated everything — the cost of the bicycle, chains, handlebar tape, toe clips and straps, brake shoes, even the cost of patches for fixing blown tires.

Critical Of Tie To U.S.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda today criticized Canada's external affairs minister, Mark MacGuigan, for expressing solidarity with the new Reagan administration.

In a commentary on MacGuigan's trip to Washington, pravda said "the misgivings of those Canadian circles which expressed concern that their country may become one of the first victims of Washington's pressure have come true."

Pravda quoted MacGuigan as saying he expressed solidarity "with the Reagan-Haig course."

"MacGuigan stated he did not object to (Secretary of State Alexander) Haigs and Reagan's tough language used with regard to the Soviet Union," the commentary said.

MacGuigan's additional remark that he does not consider it necessary to use such language "hardly changes anything in essence since according to his own words there is no difference in the Canadian and U.S. points of view," the paper said.

According to Pravda, "political observers" wonder whether this was MacGuigan's personal point of view after "capitulating before the senior partner's pressure or a change of Ottawa's course to meet the interests of those who try to squeeze the country in a friendly embrace."

Two Facing Abuse Count

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Murder and manslaughter charges have been filed against an Oklahoma City couple in the starvation death of the man's mother last month, officials say.

Clyde A. Gibbs, 40, and his wife, Loreta E. Gibbs, 46, were each charged Monday with second-degree murder and a second-degree manslaughter in the alleged parent abuse, said David Hardwicke, Oklahoma County assistant district attorney.

Hardwicke says the law was unclear on how to charge the couple, so the dual charges were filed and a determination will be made later on which charge is more appropriate.

The couple had been caring for Gibbs' 73-year-old mother, Margaret Gibbs, since her release last June from a nursing home.

Mrs. Gibbs died on Jan. 23, one day after she was admitted to a hospital suffering severe neglect, Hardwicke said.

FOCUS

Wind Chill Factor

On a cold winter day, just knowing the temperature may not be enough! If the wind is blowing, the wind chill factor may be the most important measurement of the day. The faster the wind blows, the faster the body loses heat. People feel colder as wind speeds increase. Wind chill measurements, developed from experiments in Antarctica, combine the effects of wind speed, measured in miles per hour (mph), and temperatures in degrees Fahrenheit. For example, if the temperature is 30 degrees Fahrenheit and the wind is blowing at 10 mph, people feel as cold as they do when the temperature is 16 degrees and the wind is calm. Wind speeds of over 45 mph have little additional cooling effect.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the instrument that measures wind speed?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — In mixed doubles tennis, a man and a woman play on each team.

Embargo Gummmed Up Soviet Economy

By R. GREGORY
NOKES

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Food proved to be an effective weapon in the confrontation with the Soviet Union, according to U.S. officials who supervise the embargo of grain shipments. The embargo, they say, achieved its limited objective: gumming up — slightly — the Soviet economy.

One official, in typical Washingtonese, described part of the impact as "a discomobulation of the livestock sector" in Russia.

This week, President Reagan is heading a Cabinet-level review of the embargo. At his news conference last Thursday, Reagan suggested for the first time that the embargo could be expanded. "You have two choices. You either lift it, or you broaden it, and we have not made a decision."

The Cabinet debate may go along these lines:

—End the embargo: Reagan pledged during his election campaign to lift the embargo to woo the farm vote and there is pressure on him to deliver on his promise. Moreover, the same U.S. officials who believe the embargo had a useful impact in 1980 say it may not make much of a dent in 1981 because the Soviets have found other sources of supply, especially from Argentina.

—Expand or retain the embargo: Despite the embarrassing political reversal, some advisers are telling Reagan that with Soviet troops massed on the Polish border, this is hardly the time to lift the sanctions imposed after the Red Army moved into Afghanistan. At the least, these advisers insist, Reagan should insist on getting something in return from the Soviets.

Not only that, but lifting the embargo would deplete U.S. grain reserves and prompt an increase in consumer food prices, they add.

The embargo was imposed by former President Carter on Jan. 4, 1980, following the Soviet thrust into Afghanistan. Carter extended it into a second year shortly before he left office.

While the embargo has been criticized as ineffective, a State Department official said the criticism seems to come from people who thought its purpose was to force the Soviets to withdraw from Afghanistan.

"The reason for imposing it was to have a demonstrable impact on the Soviet economy, to show the seriousness of our feelings," he said. He claimed it has done this.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said Soviet grain imports were 8 million to 9 million tons less than they would have been. Total imports are put by the State Department at 28 million tons for the year ending Sept. 30, although others think it was higher than that.

Combined with two consecutive bad grain harvests in the Soviet Union, the drop in exports led to "a discomobulation of the livestock sector" and a 3 percent decline in meat production at a time when the Soviets were aiming to increase meat output, the official said.

"Meat consumption was at 1975 levels. It was the lowest of all European countries and considerably behind Eastern Europe. And this was at a time when the Soviets were giving highest priority to consumer welfare," the official added in a background interview.

In addition, he said the Soviets had to pay one-third more for grain they did import.

The U.S. embargo barred the Soviets from purchasing 17 million tons of corn and other grain they had planned to purchase, largely for livestock feed. The embargo didn't bar shipment of 8 million tons provided in a bilateral trade agreement with the Soviets.

While the embargo might have little impact on the Soviets in the coming year, Reagan may want to continue it anyway for other reasons, the official said. Domestic stocks of U.S. feed grains are low, he said, and a resumption of normal trade with the Soviets would draw them even lower. This could drive up prices to American consumers and add to domestic inflation, the official added.

State Department experts are less sympathetic than Reagan to complaints of American farmers that they suffered because of the embargo. Total U.S. grain exports were at record levels and prices held up well, officials say.

But another complaint of farmers that normal global trade relationships may be permanently distorted may have greater validity.

About half the 17 million tons of grain denied by the United States was provided by other nations, especially Argentina, the world's second-largest feed grain exporter, which chose to divert sales from other countries to sell to the Soviets.

Writing in Foreign Affairs Magazine, Robert L. Paarlberg said even a poor harvest "did not prevent Argentina from expanding its grain exports to the Soviet Union, openly profiteering at the expense of the U.S. embargo."

The Argentines recently signed a five-year agreement with the Soviets to provide 20 million tons of grain. "These vastly expanded grain and feed sales are to become the centerpiece of what is suddenly a booming Soviet-Argentine commercial relationship," Paarlberg said.

Likely To Lose Vehicles On Ice

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Ice fishermen who last saw their cars, trucks and snowmobiles drifting out into Lake Erie on an ice floe probably won't get them back intact, a Coast Guard spokesman says.

"My guess is, they (the vehicles) will end up on the bottom of the lake," Frank Henderson of the Coast Guard's Toledo station said Monday.

About a dozen vehicles were left behind Sunday afternoon as rescue workers plucked 80 fishermen from the ice floe. The hunk, measuring about five miles by two miles, broke off and drifted into the lake as temperatures grew warm and winds shifted.

Henderson said there were possibilities for recovering the vehicles.

"If the owners want, they can pay a commercial salvage operation to get the cars off," he said. "They can try getting the cars themselves, but that's pretty dangerous."

"There's a slim possibility they'll continue to float and maybe be blown to shore. But I doubt it."

Henderson said he'd heard reports of some vehicle owners contacting a commercial salvage company in Detroit which utilizes helicopters.

"(But) it seems to me the expense (of such a salvage operation) would outweigh the value of the vehicle," he said.

The incident was the first this year on so large a scale. About 135 fishermen had to be rescued during February and March last year, authorities said.

Meanwhile, some of the vehicles' owners are wondering whether their insurance will cover their losses. Thomas Lynch, an East Toledo insurance agent, said comprehensive auto insurance policies probably would cover at least part of the loss. But other insurance officials have doubts, he said.

Anniversary

The Deacons of New Deliverance F.W.B. Church will celebrate their first anniversary this weekend.

On Friday at 8 p.m. Elder Charlie Parker and the congregation from Cherry Lane F.W.B. Church will render the service. Sunday at 3 p.m. Elder Curtis Wilkins, associate minister of Grifton Chapel F.W.B. Church will preach.

The public is invited to attend, according to Elder J.L. Wilson, pastor.

said. "I would anticipate coverage, but there are people in the industry here who would love to debate me," Lynch said. "I think you could say there's some confusion on this issue."

Henderson said the Coast Guard is offering one word of advice for fishermen considering a trip onto the ice in coming weeks — "don't."

Still, many refuse to listen, he said. "One guy called us and asked if it was safe," he said. "We told him no. He said, 'The heck with you, I'm going anyway.'"

"So why did he bother to call us?"

Sue Agency Over Probe

NEW YORK (AP) — Reader's Digest magazine has sued the Federal Election Commission, asserting that the agency overstepped its bounds by probing the magazine's distribution of videotapes concerning Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's 1969 auto accident at Chappaquiddick Island.

Reader's Digest Association, the magazine's parent, filed the suit in U.S. District Court last week in an attempt to block the commission's investigation on grounds it violates the First Amendment.

Reader's Digest provided major television stations with videotapes illustrating a reconstruction of events that led to the notorious accident and the drowning of Kennedy campaign aide Mary Jo Kopechne.

The reconstruction was commissioned by the magazine for an article it published a year ago on the Chappaquiddick incident.

The commission's investigation began with a complaint by a Vale, Ore., resident that Reader's Digest violated campaign spending laws when it picked up the cost of providing the videotapes to broadcasters.

The magazine asked the federal court to rule that the commission exceeded its authority by requiring the magazine to answer certain questions and produce documents.

Don't Fall for Fortune Teller

I was almost frightened to death by a palm reader who told my fortune at a party. Is it really possible to tell how long a person will live by the lines on a person's fingers, hands and palms? — Miss T.U., Iowa.

Dear Miss U.:

The science of dermatoglyphics is a highly complex one. For each human being has his own set of fingerprints with ridges and furrows that exist at birth and last throughout life.

Although some physical conditions show characteristic creases in the skin of the hands, none of these furrows can be used to tell fortunes, life expectancy or the pursuit of vocations.

It is said that you have been caused so much misery by one who unscientifically takes the responsibility of guessing your future. I know that I will be bombarded by believers in palm reading, tarot cards, tea leaves and other mystical "sciences." They will send me limitless anecdotal case reports of a great diagnosis of disease, a cure of cancer, speculation about the fate of the world, a person's longevity, and the exact time of the day or month to make crucial decisions.

Put me down as a non-believer who accuses all of these mystical specialists of scientific fraud and financial exploitation.

Whether or not you paid for that advice in money is not important. You did pay a heavy price in emotional distress and that is far more expensive than an outlay of cash.

You are not alone. Hundreds of thousands of people like you will continue to place themselves in a vulnerable position by allowing themselves to be victimized by the fraudulent claims of palm readers.

Very often the glands of my neck become swollen. This happens especially after I have a cold. I have been told that this is not serious, but I wonder if enlarged glands can become cancerous. — Mr. L.Y., Ore.

Dear Mr. Y.:

Everyone has lymph glands in the neck and almost everywhere else in the body. These are normal. Glands play an important role in protecting the body from infection. It is only when they become swollen and markedly enlarged that they become more visible.

The chance that your enlarged glands mean eventual cancer is absolutely insignificant. But not until you have a complete examination will you again have the sense of relief that you deserve.

You mentioned in your letter that you are a 16-year-old. Most people do not appreciate the fact that even young people like yourself are worried about cancer. Even at your age you need as much assurance as do people in older age groups.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

How can you use a classified ad to help with the family budget?

1. Sell that tuba that hasn't sounded a note the last three years. Any musical instrument will do if you don't have a tuba.
2. Take a good look in your garage. If there's a bike, moped, or motorcycle that hasn't had a rider in a long time, now's the time to exchange it for cash.
3. Grown-ups also let still-good items go unused! Got a sewing machine, typewriter or knitting machine you haven't mastered? Find a cash buyer for it.
4. Don't forget sound equipment . . . radio, TV, stereo, tape recorder, CB, walkie-talkie . . . people are always looking for things to listen to.
5. And the workshop . . . wherever it is . . . is the place to spot tools which still have a lot of good use in them. Let someone else put them to work while you fatten your budget.

That's how!

Just take inventory of the many good items in your home some family would like to have. Then give us a call to place your ad. Classified ads have been helping families stretch their budgets for years . . . and they can help you, too.

J.D. PAYTON

GEORGE PRAYER, JR. AND WIFE, FANNIE PRAYER
Under and by virtue of an execution directed to the undersigned Sheriff from the Superior Court of Pitt County, in the above entitled action, I will on the 2nd day of March, 1981, at 12:00 o'clock, Noon, at the door of the Pitt County Jail, located Third Street, in Greenville, North Carolina, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, to satisfy said execution, all right, title, and interest which the defendants, George Prayer, Jr. and wife, Fannie D. Prayer, now have or at any time at or after the docketing of the judgment in said action had in and to the following described real estate, to-wit:

Lying and being in Ayden Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, on the west side of N.C. Highway 903, and beginning at an existing iron pipe on the western right-of-way line of N.C. 903, a common corner with the property of Mary Elizabeth Speer Stroud, running thence S. 9° W. 100.25 feet to an existing iron pipe, a corner with the property of Eleanor R. Collins, running thence N. 88° 18' 30" W. along the Collins line, 300.40 feet to an existing iron pipe, a corner, thence N. 9° 30' E. 100.12 feet to an existing pump pipe, a corner with the Stroud property, thence S. 88° 21' 12" E. along the Stroud line, 208.20 feet to an existing iron pipe on the west side of N.C. 903, the point of beginning, and being Tract 1 containing .183 of an acre and Tract 2 containing .274 of an acre as shown on a map of the property of George Prayer and wife, Fannie Dixon Prayer, dated January 3, 1981, the property conveyed by Eleanor Rogers Collins to George Prayer, Jr. and wife, Fannie D. Prayer, by deed dated November 3, 1976, of record in Book O-29, page 436, Pitt County Register's Office.

The land above described is subject to the portion thereof duly allotted as homestead to George Prayer, Jr. and wife, Fannie D. Prayer, by the Sheriff of Pitt County, the homestead portion being identified as Tract 1 on the aforesaid map, containing .183 of an acre as shown on the above described map and described as follows:

Beginning at an existing iron pipe on the western right-of-way line of N.C. 903 at the common corner with the property of Mary Elizabeth Speer Stroud, running thence S. 9° W. 100.25 feet to an existing iron pipe, a corner of the property of Eleanor R. Collins, being on the Collins line, N. 88° 18' 30" W. 80 feet to an iron pipe, thence N. 9° 07' 12" E. 100.12 feet to an iron pipe on the Stroud line, thence S. 88° 21' 12" E. 80 feet to an existing iron pipe, the point of beginning.

The property above described is subject to an easement for the common benefit of Tracts 1 and 2 for access and ingress and egress to the public road, the said easement portion being described as follows: Beginning at an iron pipe on the western line of N.C. 903 at the common corner of the property of George Prayer and wife, Fannie D. Prayer, and the property of Eleanor R. Collins, being on the southeastern corner of Tract 1; thence N. 88° 18' 30" W. 80 feet to an iron stake, thence S. 9° 07' 12" E. 100 feet to a point of beginning, being a point on the western right-of-way line of N.C. 903, thence S. 9° 07' 12" E. 100 feet to the point of beginning, being a point on the southernmost portion of Tract 1 hereinafter described.

This 15th day of January, 1981.

Sub-Zero Cold And Snow Sweeps Into Great Lakes

By The Associated Press
Sub-zero temperatures and snow hit the Great Lakes early today as nearly 20 inches of snow piled up along wind-whipped Lake Erie, clogging roads with huge drifts and closing schools in Erie, Pa.

The remains of a weekend Midwest storm made for a rainy Monday along the Atlantic Coast, but the Baltimore-to-Boston area still was far short of the rainfall needed to replenish dwindling reservoirs.

And in Florida's central Gulf Coast area, forecasters said January had been the coldest month in 150 years. Power companies there were being besieged by irate consumers whose bills had doubled or tripled.

In Erie, Pa., four brothers walked off ice-covered Lake Erie this morning after being stranded overnight in a winter storm.

Dennis, David, Donald and Mark Parsons were the object of a Coast Guard search after they failed to return from an ice fishing trip. They made their way to shore at Presque Isle Bay after spotting flares fired into the air by a Coast Guard search party.

The men stayed in their ice fishing shack and kept warm by burning everything at hand, including their fishing rods, authorities said.

In the central Gulf Coast area, January 1981 was the coldest month in 150 years, the National Weather Service said.

"More cold air is predicted for the rest of the winter, so it looks like we might have one of the coldest winters in recent history," said a weather service spokesman.

The average temperature last month at the Tampa International Airport was 50.4 degrees, 10 degrees below normal.

Cool temperatures have caused some utility bills to double or even triple, power company officials say. "People think that all their meters have gone bad," said spokesman Bob South at Florida Power Corp., based in St. Petersburg.

"The reason (for higher bills) has not been any kind of price rise in the last month. They're just using more."

A rainstorm Monday brought as much as 2½ inches to the Adirondacks in New York, but only a trace of rain parts to drought-stricken Connecticut.

Snow showers were scattered early today over upper Michigan to the central Appalachians. Freezing temperatures were scattered from eastern Texas to southern Georgia, and readings were well below freezing over the Northeast and the northern Plains.

Light snow was expected to end later today over the northern Plains, but scattered snow showers were predicted for the Great Lakes and the Appalachians.

Parts of the Pacific Northwest were expected to have fog, while sunny skies were predicted over most other areas.

High temperatures were expected to remain below freezing from the northern Plains through the Ohio Valley and the Great Lakes to the Northeast.

Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 23 below zero in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 62 degrees in Key West, Fla.

Search Continues For Effect Of Aflatoxin On Human Being

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Aflatoxin, a substance found to be 1,000 times more carcinogenic than DDT or PCB, emerged in North Carolina's corn and peanut crops last year at levels among the worst in the state's history.

And scientists are only beginning to understand the implications of the ingestion of the chemical on humans.

Cornmeal with an aflatoxin level of 1,800 parts per billion was found on a North Carolina grocery store shelf earlier this month. That level was higher than the level found in corn grown by villagers in India in 1974, when 103 of them died after eating contaminated cornmeal for three months.

searcher at North Carolina State University.

Epidemiological surveys involve determining the amount of aflatoxin a given population consumes, recording the diseases the population suffers and deducing the substance's effects.

Through such work in primitive countries where liver cancer is frequent, the federal Food and Drug Administration in 1978 found "a significant relationship between liver cancer incidence and estimated levels of aflatoxin intake."

Aflatoxin's effect on humans "seems to fit with the animal data," said Dr. Roger D. Wyatt, a mycotoxin specialist with the University of Georgia.

But Wyatt said scientists "can't be 100 percent sure" because only data attained is accepted as gospel by the scientific community. Scientists cannot single out aflatoxin as the only sure culprit because all the elements in epidemiological studies cannot be controlled.

Nonetheless, evidence is strong enough for the government to classify aflatoxin as a carcinogen and require that its presence in human food be monitored strictly. Rather than establishing a "tolerance level" for aflatoxin in human food, implying that a certain amount can be tolerated, the FDA created an "action level," representing the smallest amount that laboratory tests can detect.

Now, however, agriculture officials have proclaimed a crisis. They worried that the aflatoxin was reaching human food, and two weeks ago, the N.C. Department of Human Resources issued the warning concerning cornmeal.

Leonard F. Blanton, acting director of the state Department of Agriculture's Food and Drug Protection

Division, said the resources of his entire division were directed toward the sweep of cornmeal, bringing other regulatory programs to a standstill.

In an effort to ensure that humans do not eat dangerous amounts of aflatoxin, the division is seeking approval to hire additional inspectors. It is left to scientists to ponder the question of whether consumption of tainted cornmeal in North Carolina could lead to the same results as in the Indian village.

Local Residents At Reception

A number of Greenville residents attended a recent reception at the Governor's Mansion to thank the more than 115 Mother's March chairmen and key March of Dimes leaders from across the state.

Mrs. James B. Hunt Jr. hosted the event. The guest speaker was Mrs. JoAnn Benson, director of staff development of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation in White Plains, N. Y. She urged the volunteers to share the importance of early prenatal care, genetic counseling, good nutrition and avoidance of abuse of drugs during pregnancy, and prevention of adolescent pregnancies.

Mrs. Hunt reminded them that Gov. Hunt has placed voluntarism as a priority issue in his new administration. Attending from Greenville were Perri Morgan, Linda Gambill, Rosalyn Locklear, and Mary Jane Sisk.

to bring you every edition of

The Daily Reflector

$4.00
ONLY PER MONTH FOR HOME DELIVERY

Here's just a few reasons why YOU need home delivery of 'The Daily Reflector':

- 1) home delivery of 'The Daily Reflector' is a sure bet for up-to-the minute coverage of local, state, national and international news and sports, advertising messages from local and national retailers, insightful commentaries and so much more.
- 2) home delivery eliminates the need to make a trip to 'The Daily Reflector' newspaper rack each evening, saving you gas, money and time. Buying the paper regularly from a rack costs you almost $8 per month. For only $4.00 a month you can have it delivered to your front door.
- 3) the Sunday morning edition of 'The Daily Reflector' features a weekly television guide with cable listings, color comics, 'Family Weekly' magazine and an expanded sports section. Not to mention a variety of interesting features about people and places both near and far.

- 4) a subscription to 'The Daily Reflector' can save you money on your ever increasing grocery bill. The weekly coupon savings can add up to dollars in your pocket, not someone else's. The cost of the subscription is more than offset by the savings you'll realize.

Don't Miss Out On A Single Issue!

Call 752-6166 to start using and enjoying 'The Daily Reflector' at once. Or use the handy coupon below. Just fill it out and mail to 'The Daily Reflector', Circulation Sales, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

YES, I would like to have THE DAILY REFLECTOR delivered to my home.
