Property Owners Assured Of Tax Relief

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"I'm sure there is some relief. I can't tell you right now what it will be. But we're trying to work for the interest of every one of you," Bruce Strickland, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners told a gathering of property owners yesterday.

The board of commissioners met yesterday with representatives of the Pitt County Tax Payers Association to hear complaints about the current revaluation of property in the county. Between 40 and 50 persons attended the session.

After hearing all those who wanted to speak during the 3½ hour session, Strickland asked the group to, "bear with us. We're on your side."

Ralph C. Tucker, chairman of the PCTPA told commissioners, "We are convened this morning with the full knowledge that the people of Pitt County have a voice in the Democratic process," and termed those present, "representative of the citizens in Pitt County who are protesting the recent property revaluation as a future basis for tax assessment.

"This group has come to say that we are against high valuation and feel that this Pitt County Board of Commissioners can control this program and...come up with more realistic valuation of the land..."

Citing specifics, Tucker said the group, "would strongly recommend that you rescend and abolish immediately the $2 per pound (value) on tobacco and 50 cents per pound (value) on peanuts (allotments)," which he termed, "an extra burden on farm family property." Citizens, Tucker suggested, "need tax relief, not extra burden."

This group, along with other citizens, "who feel this present plan of taxation is unfair, out of line and placing an undue tax burden on property owners, will continue to protest unfair taxation and taxation without representation until the Pitt County Board of County Commissioners faces up to the problems and offers some alternate means of meeting the proposed county budget.

"May I be one of the first to offer a suggestion. The present budget could have been trimmed and cut. We request that you, the commissioners...seriously consider ways to cut the budget rather than continue to raise taxes to support programs that are inposing tax burdens on property owners and future generations of property owners.

"This present trend of property taxation," Tucker continued, "will make it virtually impossible for future generations to inherit the land of their forefathers simply because they will not be financially able to pay the inheritance tax. This will help undermine our great country..."

Bernice Turnage of Farmville, told the board, "our source of relief has got to come from you. We are looking to you to get us some relief."

"My opinion is that we throw the whole thing (revaluation) out and start over...we've been butchered...," Cary Gaynor of Fountain, commented.

According to Jean Williams of Grifton, "It seems the basic problem is getting the correct market value on property. We could not sell our land for one tenth of what they've got on it.

"Our basic problem...they used the wrong schedule of values. The whole schedule is in error. They've got to use some good common sence...good judgement."

"It seems to me," Carl Pierce of Greenville, said, "all

Congress Urged To Act

Time Said Running Out

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, summoning Congress to approve without delay his drastic anti-government remedy for an economy in crisis, is finding lawmakers willing to cooperate but already promising to change a program they have yet to see.

Growing government has allowed the economy to veer out of control, Reagan told the nation Thursday night. Now, he insisted, government must "chart a different course" of swift and stern cuts in spending, taxes and regulation.

Declaring the economy is in the "worst ... mess since the Great Depression," the president implored a Congress accustomed to slow deliberation to act now.

"We've stalled the judgment day ... We're out of time," Reagan declared in his first nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office.

The speech avoided specific solutions. Details will be delivered to Congress on Feb. 18, the president promised.

Congressmen from both political parties said they were moved by Reagan's dramatic description of the economy's problems and the need for immediate and strong steps.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the Democratic whip in the Senate, said the president delivered a "clear and, indeed, eloquent statement of our economic plight" but oversimplified the causes. Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, said Reagan gave the "most direct and candid speech I ever heard a president give since I have been in public life."

Many lawmakers reserved final judgment on Reagan's program until they see more of it — "I'm still waiting for that other shoe to drop," said Rep. John F. Sieberling, D-Ohio — but others already were anticipating changes.

"Congress will have some changes they will make," said Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, which will rule on the spending cuts the president proposes.

"There will be be modifications made in the Congress," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which will examine Reagan's tax proposals.

Reagan outlined the general economic policies he advocated throughout his campaign: budget cuts in "virtually every department" of government, a 10 percent individual income tax cut each of the next three years, a rollback of federal regulations and accelerated tax depreciation allowances for business to spur investment and lift sagging productivity. He did not specify when the tax cuts should take effect.

While the president insisted all elements of his program must be approved at once, congressional leaders have expressed reservations about approving a long-term tax cut before taking the more difficult political step of pruning the budget. Their concern is that cutting taxes and not the budget would increase rather than eliminate federal deficits.

Reagan rejected that argument.

"There were always those who told us that taxes couldn't be cut until spending was reduced," he said. "Well, you know, we can lecture our children about extravagance until we run out of voice and breath. Or we can cure their extravagance by simply reducing their allowances."

Democrats also oppose the 10-percent, 3-year tax cut proposal as favoring upper-income taxpayers.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, on the ABC-TV show "Good Morning, America," said today the proposal "benefits the wealthy and doesn't benefit the poor."

For a family of four earning $15,000, he said, the proposal would, in the end, mean a tax cut of $151. But for a family of four making $100,000, the reduction would amount to $2,190. "This is redistribution of the wealth upward."

Byrd said Senate Democrats were already on record as unanimously opposed to the proposal and added that, while members of his party do want a tax cut, he feels Democrats "in the main" will continue to oppose the program Reagan advocated.

Reagan portrayed an economy at the brink of disaster and said: "We have come to a turning point. We're threatened with an economic calamity of tremendous proportions and the old business-as-usual treatment can't save us."

Warning that "we must not be timid," Reagan said reducing the government's bite on the economy "can create the incentives which take advantage of the genius of our economic system."

"Our aim is to increase our national wealth so all will have more, not just redistribute what we already have, which is just a sharing a scarcity," he said.

That buoyant view was in sharp contrast to the call for sacrifice that Jimmy Carter delivered four years ago.

But Reagan's policies will not be painless for millions of Americans who will be affected by the administration's proposed budget cuts. Dozens of social programs — including Social Security, unemployment benefits, Medicaid, farm subsidies, business loans, urban aid, food stamps and child nutrition — would be trimmed to cut up to $14 billion from the budget this year and $50 billion in 1982.

"Our spending cuts will not be at the expense of the truly needy," Reagan promised. "We will, however, seek to eliminate benefits to those who are not really qualified."

Net 561 Pints

Blood donors from the East Carolina University campus community turned out again this year in large numbers to make the AFROTC sponsored two-day Bloodmobile a success.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross said that the campus effort resulted in 561 pints of blood collected at Wright Auditorium.

Wednesday's drive saw 257 units collected with nine persons deferred, while Thursday's effort reached 304 pints of blood with 23 deferrals. She said the overall results were "real good," especially in view of the number of people who are sick this time of year.

Mrs. Taylor expressed appreciation to the effort made by AFROTC personnel, particularly Fred Padilla who served as overall chairman. She also thanked the members of Angel Flight at ECU who assisted, as well as the various campus sororities. Volunteer nurses and women of the Greenville Service League once again were generous in their help, she reported.

Citing a general positive campus attitude regarding the Bloodmobile, Mrs. Taylor thanked each person who donated or helped in some way.

The next Bloodmobile visit in the area will be on March 4 at Farmville Central High School.

Garwood Could Be Given Life Term

GARWOODS REACT — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Garwood of Adams, Ind., say they were hurt when they learned their son Robert was convicted of collaboration with the enemy. The elder Garwood said his son didn't expect complete exoneration but did not believe he would be convicted of collaboration. (AP Laserphoto)

AP Special Correspondent

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who said last summer that "an American prison is better than a Vietnamese one" today faces the possibility of life imprisonment for collaborating with the enemy during his years in a prisoner of war camp.

His lawyers will be trying to whittle down the sentence.

Garwood, 34, blinked back tears but otherwise was composed as the verdict was read Thursday afternoon. He was found innocent on a charge of maltreatment, but guilty on a lesser charge of assaulting a fellow American prisoner.

The Indiana native, whose attorneys had tried to establish mental illness, made no comment as he was led away.

The Marine was a 19-year-old jeep driver when he was captured near Da Nang in 1965. He returned to the United States in 1979 — unable to tie his shoes or speak English without a heavy accent — after slipping a note to a Finnish businessman in Hanoi.

His was the first case of collaboration by a Vietnam POW to go to a jury.

A five-man panel of Vietnam veterans spent two days deliberating before finding Garwood guilty of collaboration during two of the 14 years he was in captivity.

Collaboration carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment. The assault charge, which involved the striking of a fellow POW, carries a maximum six months.

The convictions mean he cannot receive his $147,000 in back pay.

In the military judicial system, sentence is determined in further court hearings, and defense lawyers said they would discuss today the possibility of bringing more witnesses to appear for Garwood.

The jury remains on call to decide the sentence.

Defense lawyers had argued that torture, deprivations and inhumanities drove Garwood insane, and he therefore couldn't appreciate the criminality of his acts.

But chief prosecutor Maj. Werner Hellmer, whose witnesses charged Garwood carried a gun in the camp and informed on other POWs, maintained, "You don't foresake your fellow prisoners of war to make things easier for yourself."

Garwood's family was shocked by the verdicts, and reaction in this large Marine Corps camp and the neighboring garrison town of Jacksonville was mixed.

"Nobody anticipated it would turn out this way," said Garwood's father, Jack, of Adams, Ind. "He thought it was going real good — in his favor."

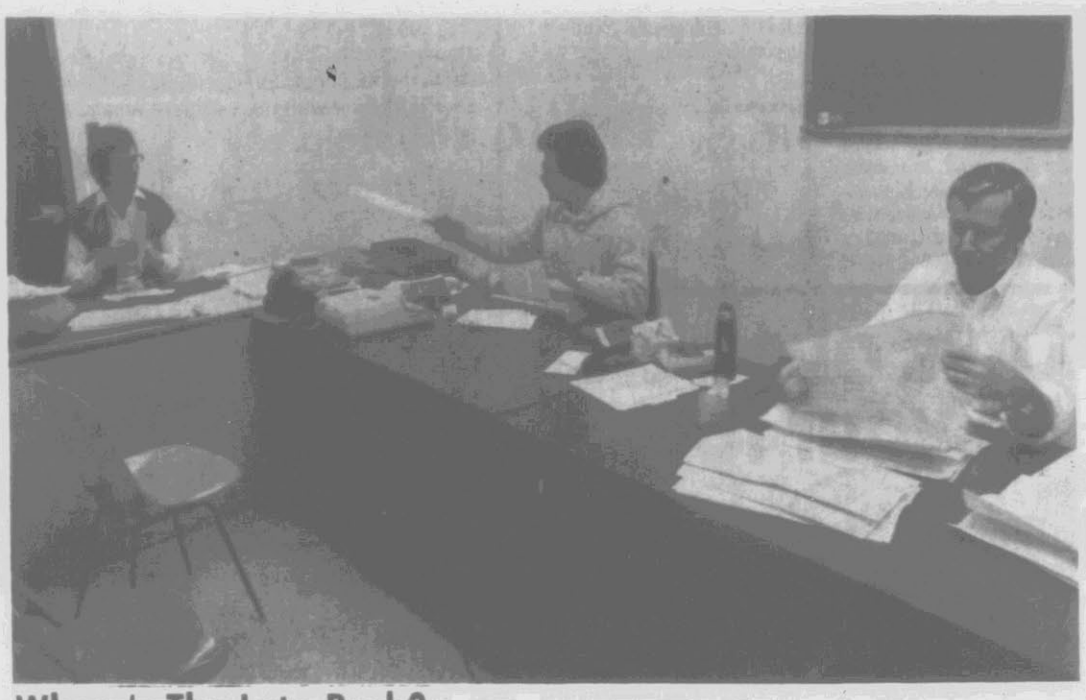

Former POW Gustav Mehrer of Colorado Springs, Colo., who testified during the 12-week court-martial that Garwood was a "white Vietnamese," said the conviction released him from a war-time promise.

"I helped bury four men (fellow POWs) in 1969, and I promised to two of those men that if I got the chance, I would tell it like it was (about Garwood)," Mehrer said.

"I can't say I'm happy, and I can't say I'm not. All I can say is, I kept that promise."

The man Garwood was convicted of assaulting, David N. Harker, said the verdicts were appropriate.

"I don't know of anybody whose actions were the same as his," said Harker.

POSITIVE EXPERIENCE

You hear so much about the negative experiences people have with getting cars fixed. I want the world to know that when the motor of my 18-month-old car burned up the result of the 79-cent bolt's falling out and causing an oil leak, Toyota East completely replaced the engine block at no cost to me. True, it was under warranty, but they could have quibbled about this or that. They didn't and I am appreciative to the company and the local dealer and everyone who works for him. L. C.

Heat Is On N.C. Oil Dealers, Service Stations

By The Associated Press

Some North Carolina service station operators and oil dealers say they're getting the heat from customers upset over the soaring prices of fuel for their homes and their vehicles.

And utilities such as Carolina Power & Light are getting their share of complaints as well..

"Some (customers) are talking right mean stuff, and I don't blame them," Wilson oil dealer Earl Taylor said Thursday. Taylor is assistant manager of Turner Oil Co., a home fuel supplier.

"The way prices are going, a lot of folks are going get might cold or mighty hungry," Taylor said.

Service stations in eastern North Carolina have increased their gasoline prices an average of 7 cents a gallon in the last nine days. One station checked Thursday reported a jump of 15 cents during the last two weeks.

Price increases by the major oil companies have come so fast that station operators and distributors are having a hard time keeping up with them.

"We had one increase last Thursday, another one Tuesday morning and another one yesterday," said Paul Simpson of Hopkins Oil Inc. in Raleigh, a Texaco distributor of home fuel. The company has boosted its rate for home fuel 7 cents in the last week, raising it to $1.18 a gallon.

"All we're doing is passing along the increases. We don't like it any better than our customers," Simpson said.

George Hedrick, operator of the Trent Bridge Exxon station in New Bern, said the higher prices are having their toll. His rates for full-service premium gasoline have climbed to $1.50 a gallon, up 15 cents in the last two weeks.

"Our business is way off," Hedrick said. "We're down 15,000-18,000 gallons already in January. The prices are scaring people away."

In Rocky Mount, Tim Taylor says he's noticed that customers are becoming more selective in shopping for gasoline.

"A lot of people drive in, look at the prices and drive off," he said.

Meanwhile, in Asheville in western North Carolina, homeowners are so unhappy over skyrocketing utility bills that a petition has been started to complain to 11th District Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C.

Tax Relief....

property tax payers are in a delima," with, "all the tax burden on property," suggesting a progressive income tax as a better method to raise funds for county and city governments.

Saying that property taxes, "are paralyzing for property owners...private property is the basis of freedom," Dr. Charles Pace suggested additional sales taxes be added to give relief from advolorem taxes.

Responding to a number of questions raised by the group, county attorney W. W. Speight explained that the W. P. Ferriss Co. was hired to revalue real property in the county - as required by law - using a schedule of values based on property sales, and adopted by the board of commissioners.

The attorney added that a value was placed on tobacco allotments as required by a ruling of the North Carolina Supreme Court. The $2 per pound figure is based on sales data, Speight explained.

Speight also said that adjustments will be made in the value placed on tobacco to reflect the recent 7.5 percent reduction in tobacco allotments.

Ferriss, commenting on the revaluation, said, "an appraisal is an estimate of value," adding that the schedule of values used in the current revaluation, "came from sales of property in Pitt County."

The value placed on tobacco allotments, Ferriss continued, is also based on sales — "what people are willing to pay for tobacco in Pitt County."

Inflation, according to Ferriss, has affected property values. "It's frustrating for appraisers. We're trying to interpret the market. We took sales...came up with a median value. We try to use the average, and the data we received indicates we are on value," in the present revaluation.

Ferriss told the group, "I think what you are doing is good." But he said, "you need to go to the Legislature to come up with laws to provide a better means," of funding local governments.

Responding to comments about errors, Ferriss emphasized, "We're making every effort to correct mistakes," adding that if property owners are not satisfied after talking with representatives of his company, they may appear before the Board of Equalization and Review, the State Property Tax Commission, and the courts.

In areas where land being used for agricultural purposes has been valued for other use (law requires land to be valued for its best and highest use), Ferriss pointed out, owners may apply to the Tax Supervisor's office to have the property listed and taxed as farm land.

In addition to the effects of inflation on the current valuation, Ferris said, "rural land, in 1973, was appraised somewhat low...those values were somewhat less than market value."

According to commissioner Bob Martin, "We make no laws. We are an extension of the legislature. lThe basic problem...we have to raise money the legislature tells us to raise.

"We've been battling the legislature for years to give us an alternate source of revenue. We have a limited base to raise funds. We'd like to have it expanded with a sales tax or income tax," so property wouldn't have to be taxed so heavily.

In response to a question by Bruce Tyson, who said real property values have tripled since 1973, County Manager Reginald Gray pointed out that in 1973, personal property totaled $84.8 million, while in 1979, personal property totaled $389.7 million in Pitt.

"You are heavily turning the burden on people who own land if personal property has not increased as much as real property," since the last revaluation, Tyson pointed out.

"What we are seeing here this morning is the kind of stuff this country is made of...a mark of the character of this country," H. P. Streeper commented.

"The people have got to look at what's happened...bureacracy is killing us. I enjoin you...do something to make us productive, rather than taking away from us," Streeper said, adding encouragement to the commissioners to strip the county budget of everything but the essentials.

Concluding the session, Robert Little, a member of the Board of County Commissioners for eight8 years in the late 1960's and early 1970's said of the present board, "they, to me, are trying to do a good job...trying to do what is right. I feel for them."

Personnel Get Three Awards

Pitt County Memorial Hospital personnel recently received three awards at the annual meeting of the N. C. chapter of the Hospital Financial Management Association.

T. B. "Buck" Sitterson, assistant director, received the William G. Foller Merit Award which recognizes sustained efforts and contributions to the state chapter.

Warren McRoy, associate director of finance, and Bill Young, special services manager, received second-place awards in the annual cost effectiveness contest. Entries were judged on originality, ease of implementation, presence of additional benefit and cost savings attributable to the actual implementation of the idea.

No Matching Funds Said Necessary

Pitt County Commissioners this morning were told that no matching funds would be required to qualify for a $45,000 technical assistance grant from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission for a study of the feasibility of a civic-convention center here.

The board voted Wednesday to ask the Mid-East Commission to prepare an application for the grant after Reid Hooper, chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce civic center task force asked the board, "to please fund the $15,000 needed to assure the $45,000 grant."

At that time, Commissioner Charles Gaskins said, "I think we can find the $15,000 from other than advalorem tax money," but asked that a meeting be scheduled with Mid-East employees who will prepare the application. "I don't want to go into this thing so open-ended," Gaskins emphasized.

This morning, Gaskins told George Sherrill, Coastal Plains Regional Commission coordinator for North Carolina, Dan le Roux, director of the Mid-East Commission, and John Roberson, local government coordinator for Mid-East, the meeting was called, "to find out really, just what we are doing when we make application...what is expected of us.

"We are trying to find out where we are going," Gaskins said.

Le Roux explained that the grant, "will give you the money to make the study. Is there a need for a civic-convention center...how big should it be...where should it be located...how much it will cost? Should it be feasible, where will the money come from?"

The Mid-East director added, "you are the applicant. You will get the information. You will decide what to do with it."

Sherrill then told the board, "Gov. Hunt has given his blessings," to the project, and emphasized, "$15,000 is not required, from the county as matching funds." "It (the application) can be written for the $45,000," with no local match. He added, "use in-kind...administrative costs" as the local match.

The CPRC coordinator noted that in the past, grants approved by the governor have usually been funded with no problem. "It's a new situation now, with the change of administrations (in Washington). I can't guarantee it like we used to," Sherrill said, but added, "I think it will be funded."

Commissioners, officials of the City of Greenville, the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and East Carolina University administrators have been discussing a civic center for the area for about 18 months. Efforts to secure an Economic Development Administration grant for a feasibility study last year failed.

Life As It's Lived

Quality Of Elegance Is Probably Best Forgot

By GAIL MICHAELS

Elegance is one of those elusive qualities which always escapes me. For instance, I had always longed to have an elegant dinner party. But the closest I had ever come was a barbecued chicken on Royal Doulton china.

This year, however, I resolved to give it a try. The first thing I had to do, of course, was to get rid of my children.

I learned long ago that kids have the same effect on the digestive tract as food poisoning. The only way to save a meal is to lock them away somewhere, preferably in a basement, with a pan of dessert, a bottle of milk, and several rolls of paper towels.

Or the meal can be scheduled for an hour at which all children should be in bed. That's the alternative I chose.

Meg considered this a clearcut case of child neglect. "Well," she told me when she first learned that the party would be adults only, "I am sure that my stomach will let me stay up tomorrow night and eat late for one time in my life."

I continued to work on the hors d'oeuvres I was fixing.

"But your mother won't."

"That's not fair!"

My response was, as usual, sympathetic. "Tough."

She tried another tack. "What's that you're making?"

"Spinach balls."

"Spinach balls, huh? I might be able to eat spinach if it comes in a ball instead of a pile of slime."

Remarks like that are precisely why I let my guests endure her heartrending sobs as Phillip introduced her, then escorted her to bed.

I was confident that that would be the only note of discord during the evening. I had remembered to take off my bedroom shoes on the way to answer the front door. I had a menu taped to the refrigerator door so that I wouldn't have to serve the fruit salad as dessert.

I had even prepared all the food the night before. I learned to do that after my ham disaster of last year. Thirty minutes before the guests were due for that dinner I had checked to make sure the ham wasn't overdone. Unfortunately, it wasn't even cooking. I hadn't even turned on the oven.

I should be so lucky with my rolls. I invariably burn them. Phillip keeps threatening to send one to the Pentagon as a prototype for organic ammunition.

But I had taken care of that, too. Not only did I have my menu taped to the refrigerator; I had a schedule of when everything should go in and come out of the oven. I got the first serving of bread on the table without a hitch, and slipped another batch into the oven with a sigh of relief.

I didn't think about it again until the air in the dining room began to thicken. I raced for the kitchen. The oven looked volcanic.

Then the smoke alarm went off. "Beep! Beep! Beep!"

Phillip, who was sitting under it, responded with his characteristic aplomb. "Gail," he called, "are you blowing a party horn?"

So much for elegance.

Factions In Iran Fight In Streets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Up to 10,000 leftists demonstrating opposition to the Iran's clergy-led government battled with guns and knives against Islamic fundamentalists in the streets of Tehran today and 30 people were reported injured in the fighting, sources in the Iranian capital said.

Iranian police reached by telephone from Beirut said there were "many" casualties, some suffering bullet wounds, and one Tehran newspaper said 30 people were injured in the street battle that lasted more than three hours.

The leftist-Moslem fundamentalist clash came at a time of increasing political tension between secular moderates and religious leaders and pleas by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for Iranian politicians to stop "biting one another like scorpions."

After the street fight ended, there was an unconfirmed report that one person was killed and one police officer said "those who have been shot are now hospitalized."

According to police between 7,000 and 10,000 members and supporters of the Marxist Fedayeen e Khalq organization massed at Freedom Square on the western edge of Tehran in defiance of a government ban on demonstrations.

A spokesman for the paramilitary Revolutionary Guard in Tehran told The Associated Press by telephone that the leftists, "a few of them carrying guns and knives" marched on Tehran University to disrupt Friday Moslem prayers at the university.

He said the marchers were confronted by supporters of the "Hezbollahi," or "God's Party," fighting broke out "and the Fedayeen started shooting." The two groups were finally separated by Iranian security troops.

Hezbollahi is an organization of followers of hard-line Islamic clergymen who support Khomeini.

Dear Abby

Daughter Scores For Parents

DEAR ABBY: Recently you ran a letter from a reader who sent you an "inspirational piece" titled, "Winning Against the Odds." You invited additions to the list of famous people who had succeeded in spite of adversity.

May I add two of whom you have never heard?

Take away his mother when he's 10 years old and put him to work in a coal mine for most of his life. Let him work in ice-cold water to his knees, or put him on his stomach digging out coal from deep inside a mountain, working hard to feed and clothe a wife and six children, and you have my father!

Put her outside before daylight, milking a cow so her little ones could have milk. (She had read in a doctor's manual what children need for good health.) Send her to a clothesline in freezing weather to hang clothes for a family of eight. Watch her apply ointment to cracked and bleeding hands. (She had no gloves.)

Stand near her rocking chair at night and watch her as she holds a baby and a story book, reading to her little brood, and you have my mother.

Then watch this loving couple grow old too soon and die painful deaths from "black lung" and cancer.

The world will never hear about this hero and heroine, but to me, they were the greatest.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from BEEN THERE AND BACK prompts this response. BEEN THERE, who had spent two years in a mental institution and was frequently asked why, offered a terse response that always put off further questions: "Because I'm crazy."

A colleague of mine once worked in a mental hospital. While making the rounds, he would "test" the patient by asking, "Why are you here?" The response usually revealed the patient's degree of reality orientation.

One morning, the psychologist received a response that rocked him. "I'm here for the same reason you are, Doc. I couldn't make a go of it in the outside world."

Abby, it's obvious that not all who are in mental institutions are "crazy." Conversely, not all who are "crazy" are in mental institutions.

Thoroughfares Choking

Among things discussed at a meeting of city and county officials with Department of Transportation representatives was the study of Evans Street improvements from Tenth to Greenville Boulevard.

A special projects engineer has been assigned to study the need for improvements. Mayor Don McGlohon said the city hopes the project will receive a high priority.

We hope so, too. Despite the fact that considerable planning has been done on various thoroughfares in the Greenville area, there has been little in actual construction done in recent years.

In the meantime this is a rapidly growing area and streets such as Evans are carrying heavy traffic loads on roadways designed for light rural traffic.

Department of Transportation planners are simply going to have to look at our problems in a more symphathetic light. Many of these thoroughfares, built for another era, will soon be hopelessly choked if improvements are not made.

Strong Enforcement Proper

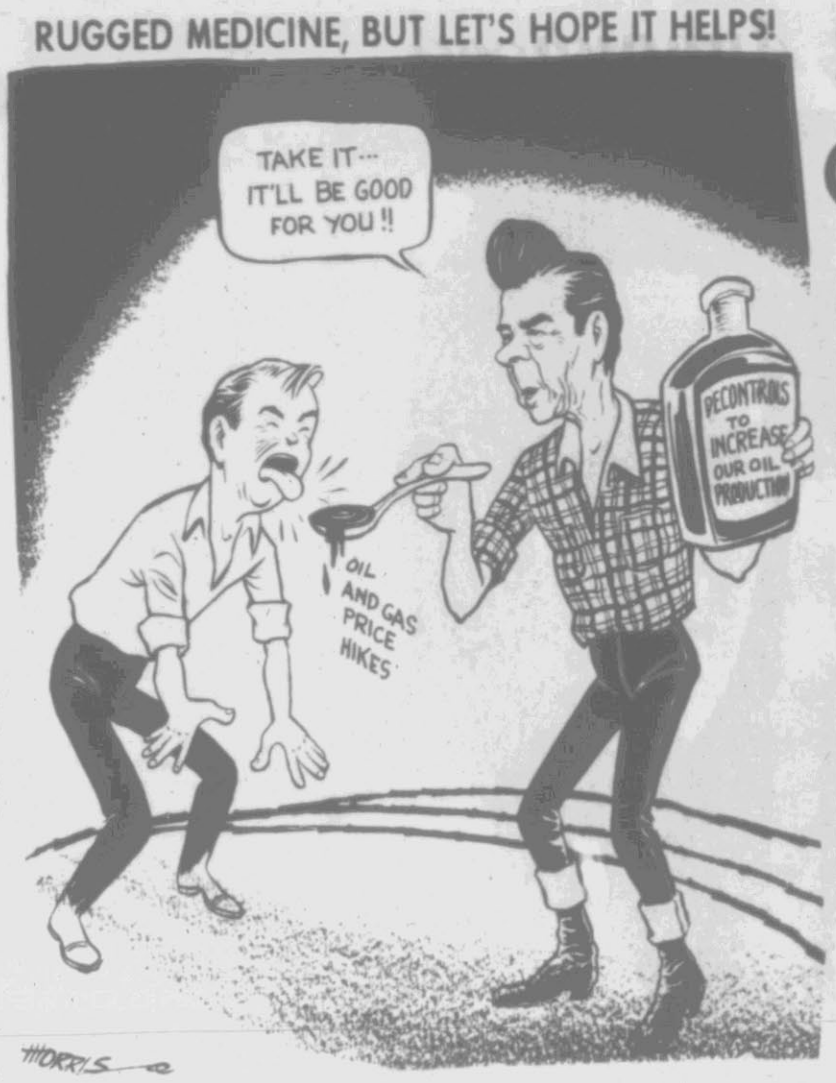

It is almost with disbief that we read of a drug undercover operation in the Cumberland County schools that brought the arrests of 130 youth on drug related charges.

The operation was carried out with undercover agents who enrolled in the schools.

That drug operations can be that widespread in the schools is disheartening.

Certainly vigorous legal efforts should be made to free our schools of those who deal in drugs.

Free Lunch Bomb

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Parents who pay for the meals their children eat at school are a rapidly shrinking minority in North Carolina; and as meal prices go up, part of that money is being used to subsidize the free or low-cost meals being eaten by others.

That condition, and other nagging problems within the school nutrition program is causing concern among legislators.

One freshman legislator is, in fact, incensed. He was recently invited — no, urged — by his local school principal to sign up for free meals for his children.

That lawmaker's income was too high even for the liberal income scale now in use, but the principal assured him that he could still get free meals simply by signing a form. "Everybody is doing it. Qualification is rarely checked, and when it is, it consists of a simple telephone call to the school principal who merely assures the inquirer that the questioned individual is indeed qualified to the best of his knowledge," that legislator related the explanation given by the local principal.

Income

The income scale used to measure qualification is liberal, even if strictly applied. For free meals and milk, family size is related to income. A family of five, for example, qualifies if income falls below $11,930. Some officials use "disposable" income for that yardstick as opposed to gross.

For reduced-price meals, a family of five with less than $18,600 annual income qualifies for price breaks.

The figures reflect what is happening. Fewer than half the students pay for lunch, with 43 percent eating free, and eight percent paying a reduced rate.

Only 16 percent of the students who eat breakfast pay for it. Fully 75 percent eat their morning meals free, while nine percent pay a reduced charge.

Federal funds underwrite the school meals program with both dollars and with food commodities. Food given to the schools for use during the regular term and in summer feeding programs amounts to nearly $30 million in North Carolina; and another $105 million in federal dollars flow into the program. Total cost of breakfast and lunch last year was almost $158 million.

Meanwhile, the school lunchrooms are experimenting with various serving methods in an effort to cut down on waste. In some, the children must pay full price — if they are paying — but can choose not to have items which they don't like put on their plates. That doesn't seem to be running the costs up.

But the trendy "fast food" syndrome which many schools are embracing is blamed by experts as a basic reason — along with inflation — that costs are escalating rapidly. It costs much more to provide a salad bar and a variety of sandwiches available for special order than to dish up a meat and two-vegetable plate.

Manipulating

Also aggravating the financial picture are manipulations of reports from local school units on which state and federal funds are based. A study commission of the General Assembly has learned that costs are "camouflaged" ... fail to reflect the value of commodities received," and that accounting procedures can be used which cause dollars from both local and federal sources to be gained for one expenditure.

Gene Dickie, state director of the child nutrition division of the Department of Public Instruction, told the legislative group that there is "growing concern that the paying student may be squeezed out in favor of the free student, thereby creating only a welfare program. This is a political football that may create problems for the food service program in the very near future."

At this time there are already three local school units in North Carolina which have completely done away with students' paying for their meals. Hoke County provides free lunch and breakfast for all; Durham city schools has free lunch and breakfast in all but senior high schools; and Edgecombe County provides free lunch for all, but no free

Those Latest Hostages

WASHINGTON — A dissident poet and a journalist were sharing the same cell in a small totalitarian country in the "free world," when the guards threw in a beaten-up leader of the political opposition.

"Maybe that will teach you a lesson in opposing General Caesar's martial law government," the guard said.

"What is the news from the outside world?" the journalist asked.

"The United States has a new foreign policy," the opposition leader said. "Human rights will no longer have a high priority."

"No kidding!" the poet said. "What does?"

"International terrorism is going to take the place of human rights as America's first concern."

ART BUCHWALD

"I guess that leaves us out," the journalist said. "Or rather in."

The poet said, "I always suspected the United States wouldn't stick with human rights for too long. It never did play in Peoria."

The opposition leader agreed. "I was arrested two hours after Haig made his declaration about the new American policy. General Caesar would never have dared to do it if he thought human rights was still a U.S. concern."

The journalist said, "I can see putting human rights on the back burner, but why replace it with a war on international terrorism? What's he going to do — bomb Rome if the Red Brigade kidnaps a judge, or waste Belfast if the IRA blows up a department store?"

"He didn't spell it out," the opposition leader said, "but I think it has something to do with the hostage fever in the United States. He was enunciating the new 'get tough' policy of the Reagan administration. Haig probably believes protecting human rights is a sign of American weakness, and that showing you're going to be tough on terrorists proves you're a hard-liner."

"It makes sense to me," the poet said. "Besides, as long as Caesar swears fidelity to Washington, Haig feels it's nobody's business who the general throws in jail."

"I wish you would look at it from our point of view and not his. Caesar plays rough with anyone who opposes him."

"I just had a thought," the poet said. "Since we're not going to get the Reagan administration too excited about our plight as political prisoners, why don't we send out word that we're being held hostage?"

The opposition leader said, "That's not bad. Americans get very upset these days about anyone being held hostage."

"But we're not American hostages," the journalist protested. "We're hostages in our own country."

"We'll say we're Americans. This will bring all the media down here and then General Caesar will have to open his jails to prove we're not. Once the American public sees what Caesar has been doing to us, Haig may have to deal with the human rights issue here, whether he wants to or not."

The journalist said, "It's worth a try. I'll smuggle out a

To the Editor:

After reading Monday's Public Forum Column, I cannot help but speak out against one aspect of revaluation. I am an owner of farmland in the 264 by-pass west section of Greenville that is being rapidly developed. This area was taken into the city last year so we now pay county and city taxes on this land.

My objection is to the best use classification that sets these values on property. I believe it is wrong to value an acre of farmland at $4,000 per acre because of its location and also because building lots in this area happen to be selling for this amount. As a result of best use, my farmland revaluation is five times last years value.

If this policy continues there will be no farmland left near Greenville. How can a farmer absorb this added expense when already they are being forced off the land for other inflationary reasons?

No! I do not believe in calling it as it is, but I think farmers should pull together and fight this unjust taxation. The best use for prime farmland is not for building a steel and concrete jungle but rather to grow crops to feed a hungry world.

To the editor:

Today's children (some of them) are victims of an epidemic. This epidemic is drinking. Children in homes of a parent or parents who drink are abused mentally and sometimes physically. People say that one drink doesn't hurt, but it hurts that little three-year-old that calls for Mommy but Mommy doesn't hear because she has gone to get another drink. Epidemic? Yes, drinking is one of the greatest cripplers and killers in the nation. Drivers who take one or two drinks and drive are taking a chance of killing or crippling innocent children and themselves. After one or two drinks a person's judgment is impaired so they cannot think properly. Whether it comes from a brown bag or a clear glass, it is still a killer.

Strength For Today

CALM BEFORE DESTINY

In May 1780, an astronomical occurrence took place which terrified thousands of people in America and caused them to believe that the Judgment Day was at hand.

In mid-afternoon a darkness almost as black as night settled over much of the country. Nothing similar to this had ever been seen before. In the Connecticut House of Representatives some of the members, displaying great fear, moved for adjournment.

But Colonel Davenport, who was presiding, smacked the desk with his gavel and said "Either the Day of Judgment is approaching or it is not. If it is not, then there is no cause for adjournment. If it is, I choose to be found doing my duty. I ask, therefore, that candles be brought."

We really have to take our hats off to the stalwart Christians who, when their day of reckoning approaches, calmly announce that they intend to go about their usual business until compelled by a higher hand to desist. — Elisha Douglass

Sharp Split Over Busing

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The Reagan administration's position on the key domestic issue — busing to achieve racial balance in the schools — is in line with the views of the majority of white Americans. The latest Gallup survey shows opinion among whites 4-to-1 in opposition to busing.

Blacks, however, are 2-to-1 in favor of this means of achieving a better racial balance in the schools.

While the majority of whites oppose busing, factors other than racial prejudice appear to underlie much of their opposition, as determined by a series of questions on attitudes toward racially-mixed schools.

For example, even among the 45 percent of white parents who say they have NO OBJECTIONS to their children attending racially-integrated schools, eight in 10 (78 percent) are opposed to busing as a means of achieving racial balance. Clearly, much opposition can be explained in terms of objections to the distance children have to be bused and to other factors.

Since 1964, when the Supreme Court ruling went into effect, the Court has been involved in more than 500 school desegregation cases.

On Nov. 17, the Senate passed a bill that would have prohibited the Justice Department from intervening in school desegregation cases involving busing. The Senate bill — which was never approved — would not have actually outlawed busing but by requiring private parties to bring busing cases to court, it would have made it difficult and impractical for pro-busing groups to use busing as an effective anti-discrimination tool.

Following is the question asked to determine the public's attitudes toward busing:

"Do you favor or oppose busing children to achieve a better racial balance in the the schools?"

Aside from basic dichotomy in the views of whites and blacks, majority opposition toward busing is found in all key demographic groups. However, comparatively more support for busing is shown by young adults and Democrats.

Following are the findings in tabular form:

Busing For Better Racial Balance

	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
NATIONAL	22%	72%	6%
Whites	17	78	5
Blacks	60	30	10
East	23	69	8
Midwest	18	76	6
South	25	71	4
West	24	70	6
College education	21	75	4
High school	22	72	6
Grade school	27	65	8
Under 30 years	31	62	7
30-49 years	21	75	4
50 and older	18	76	6
Republicans	15	81	4
Democrats	28	64	8
Independents	18	78	4

Following are the questions asked white parents to determine their attitudes toward sending their children to integrated schools: "Would you, yourself, have any objection to sending your children to a school where a few of the children are black? Where half are black? Where more than half of the children are black?"

The results show that only 5 percent of white parents would object to sending their children to a school where only a few of their fellow students were black. The figure rises to 23 percent where one-half the students are black and to 55 percent where more than half are black. These figures are similar to those obtained in 1978, but show a dramatic increase in racial tolerance from a 1963 Gallup study. For example, six out of 10 southern white parents said they would object to sending their children to a school where only a few of the students were black. Here are the results:

Integrated Schools

	All White parents	South	Rest of U.S.
Would object to sending children to schools where:
A few children are black	5%	5%	5%
One-half are black	23	27	22
More than one-half are black	55	66	51
No objections	45	34	49

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,549 adults, 18 and older, of whom 1,381 were white and 149 were black. The interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Dec. 5-8, 1980. For results based on the full sample, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction. For results based on the white subsample, a 4 percent margin of error should be allowed, for results based on the black subsample, a 10 percent margin of error should be allowed.

Fated Win Business Headlines

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the past few months the Exxons, the IBMs, and the other giants of corporate America have had to share the business headlines with upstarts like Genentech and Apple Computer.

These companies took advantage of a booming market for new stock issues late last year to make dramatic debuts on Wall Street.

If the expectations of analysts who keep track of such things are borne out, there will be another big new-issue name in the next few weeks: Cetus Corp.

Cetus, which like Genentech is involved in the fledgling genetic engineering business, is expected to go public later this month at a price in the neighborhood of $22.50 to $26.50 a share.

With more than 5.2 million Cetus shares slated to be sold, it will be the largest initial stock offering in at least two decades — dating perhaps as far back as 1956, when Ford Motor Co., at the time already a huge enterprise, sold its first shares to the public.

Cetus, based in Berkeley, Calif., has no such long-established record of operations and profitability. It was founded in 1971, and for most of the time since has been a money-loser.

In the fiscal year ended last June 30, it logged revenues of $9.62 million and net income, derived from interest on idle cash it invested, of $68,900.

Norman Fosback, editor of a newsletter called "New Issues," figures that investors who buy the stock at the offering will be paying 25 times book value — the company's theoretical worth if it were to be liquidated — and 5,000 times earnings, in an era when many a solid, profitable company is selling at about 10 times earnings or less.

Present owners of Cetus, who include Standard Oil of Indiana, Standard Oil of California, and National Distillers & Chemical Corp., got their stock for an average price of $1.21 a share.

The question of most concern to investors, of course, is not Cetus' past or present but its future. "It is a leader in an industry whose potential is virtually unlimited," Fosback asserts.

There are visions of big markets for genetic engineering companies not only in medicine, but in agriculture, energy, chemicals, and who knows what else. Whether these visions will ever become reality remains an open question.

Says Fosback, "The stock is overpriced but nevertheless attractive on prospects that it is likely to become even more overpriced" once public trading in it begins.

Memories remain vivid of Genentech's debut last Oct. 14, when it came out at $35 a share, soared rapidly to $89, and then fell back almost as quickly. Recently it was quoted in the low $40s in the over-the-counter market.

That roller-coaster ride left many investors a bit cautious about the risks, as well as the rewards, of playing the new-issue game. Still, they eagerly snapped up shares of Apple Computer, a major producer of personal computers, in December at $22 apiece. Apple recently was quoted above $30.

Some analysts have reckoned that 1980 was the biggest year ever for new stock issues. Although the stock market has gotten off to a rocky start in 1981, the new-issue fever still seems to be strong.

As testimony to that, there is a long queue of companies, of widely varying quality and repute, poised to tap this public appetite.

Many of these, as you might expect, are in glamor businesses — computers, medical technology and energy. Fosback's current calendar of forthcoming offerings includes no less than 22 oil and gas companies.

But the menu is by no means limited to this standard fare. One firm on the list is a florist; another rents video cassettes. There's even a sports-handicapping service which plans to sell 4 million shares at 50 cents a piece — presumably just the thing for someone willing to gamble that a business catering to bettors has the potential for a big payoff.

Military Has Changed, But Conduct Code Stands

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The United States' armed services have changed in the 16 years since Robert Garwood went to Vietnam. But the collaboration verdict against him shows the military brass still holds to the high standards of the code of conduct.

Garwood, 34, was found guilty Thursday of collaborating with his Vietnamese captors before he returned to this country in 1979, the last American POW to come home.

Other American prisoners who had seen Garwood in captivity had complained of his behavior, and he was immediately slapped with serious charges of desertion, collaboration and maltreatment of fellow prisoners.

But a lot had happened in America since the then-19-year-old Marine jeep driver from Adams, Ind., disappeared in 1965 south of Da Nang. The Vietnam war had been lost, and the military draft ended. For the first time, women were enrolled in the nation's service academies.

The military code of conduct, adopted in 1955 after many Americans captured in the Korean War succumbed to sophisticated brainwashing techniques, had undergone change.

This was because many Vietnam-era POWs had similarly been broken by their captors, making anti-war broadcasts, writing statements and cooperating in other ways.

Acknowledging that some pressures are irresistible, the rewritten code has a "bounce-back" provision that in effect allows a captured American to cooperate when the pressure is overwhelming but to resist when the pressure is lifted.

But even this provision is considered too stringent by some in an age when coercive persuasion and torture have become standard operating procedures from Hanoi to Tehran. And for young people joining the military, the commitment to high patriotric principle as laid out in the code of conduct seems out of date.

The final article of the code states: "I will never forget that I am an American fighting man, responsible for my actions, and dedicated to the principles which made my country free. I will trust in my God and the United States of America."

The military decided to drop charges against Americans accused of being in a "peace committee" in the Hanoi Hilton prison during the Vietnam War. That was expected to work in Garwood's favor.

But that decision had been made during the Vietnam hangover, and the U.S. Marine Corps pressed against Garwood even though he seemed an unlikely subject for retribution.

Star-crossed since birth, Garwood was dropped on his head and injured as a baby, deserted by his mother at age 4, often at odds with his father, recruited by the Marines from a home for wayward boys, accident-prone on duty on Okinawa, captured and tortured by the Vietnamese. He currently suffers from at least two and possibly three mental diseases, according to both government and defense psychiatrists.

Three prominent forensic psychiatrists testified at his court-martial that Garwood was pushed "100 percent" into insanity by the coercive persuasion of his captors. This resulted in regressive behavior that turned him into a "pet monkey" of his captors, or as another fellow POW testified, a "white Vietnamese" who giggled, squatted on the ground and ate insects and rats.

There has been an increasing feeling in some branches of the military that the first responsibility of a POW today is to keep himself alive. But the chief prosecutor, Maj. Werner Hellmer, alluded to this behavior as being dishonorable.

The government barely contested the psychiatric evidence. Garwood was portrayed simply as a calculating, manipulating survivor who forsook his fellow prisoners to make things easier on himself.

In its decision, the five-man jury of Marine officers, all Vietnam veterans, seemed to have entirely discarded the painstakingly prepared defense case. They found no mitigating circumstances, even though in his final arguments chief defense cocounsel John C. Lowe asked that the new "bounce-back" provisions of the code of conduct cover Garwood's experiences.

Three Wrecks Investigated Yesterday

An estimated $1,950 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 6:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Red Banks Road and Sherwood Drive, involving cars driven by Cheryl Petcka Ghorashi of 231 Windsor Rd., and Wanda Hamilton Smith of Route 1, Kinston.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $400 to the Smith car and $600 to the Ghorashi vehicle.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to vehicles driven by Nathan Wilbur Worsley of Washington and Warren David Franke of Winterville, which were involved in a 2:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of 14th and Charles Streets.

Officers reported no damage resulted to a third vehicle involved, a car driven by Hudson Harlow Sumrell of Dover.

A school bus driven by Shelton Eugene Sutton of 405A West Roundtree Dr., and a car operated by Herbert Richard Paschal III of 1209 Rosewood Dr., collided about 1:58 p.m. on Wade Street, 20 feet south of the Dickinson Avenue intersection, causing $100 damage to the bus and $250 damage to the car.

Terrorists Slay 2 Italian Policemen

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Security forces launched a massive search today for a team of right-wing terrorists believed responsible for killing two federal policemen, the first officers slain in Italy this year.

Police captured a right-wing urban guerrilla suspect who had a gunshot wound that he apparently suffered Thursday night after a bloody shootout with the officers.

Police said the suspect, Valerio Fioravanti, 22, declared himself a "political prisoner" when he was seized about half an hour after the bodies of the two policemen were found.

Judicial sources said Fioravanti is believed to belong to the neo-fascist terror group Third Position. He has been sought in connection with the murder of a judge and the Bologna train station bombing that killed 85 people Aug. 2.

The two policemen were killed after they stopped their patrol car near a sewage canal on the edge of this northern Italian city. They reportedly were responding to a phone call, raising the possibility of a terrorist trap.

Police weren't sure how many terrorists were at the canal, but they suspected there were at least three in addition to Fioravanti.

The terrorists were apparently storing arms inside the canal. Police found a facemask and flippers used for skindiving on the banks of the canal, and divers found a waterproof bag on the canal bottom containing two hand grenades, a submachine gun, three automatic pistols and ammunition.

Fioravanti was seized when police received a call telling them an injured man could be found at a small downtown apartment.

Detroit Said Captured Between Pain, Agonies

By REGINALD THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Some 900 city employees have already been laid off, but Detroit still faces a budget deficit of up to $130 million by the end of the current fiscal year, says Mayor Coleman Young.

In his annual State of the City address Thursday, Young said the city's predicament amounts to a choice "between extreme pain and agony."

"It is ... the worst of times in City Hall, where decreasing revenue and rising personnel costs forced us to lay off another 900 employees last year, reducing our staff to its lowest level since the Great Depression," he said.

"But in spite of these layoffs and belt-tightening ... we still end the current budget year June 30 with a deficit of somewhere between $100 million and $130 million — an amount that will literally stagger us unless we find a way to reduce it.

"We cannot have another massive layoff without dismantling city government," Young said.

The mayor lay much of the blame for the city's finances on its firefighters and police officers. "Almost $80 million of our deficit is directly attributable to the last arbitration awards" won by the police and firefighters unions, he said.

About "720,000 of our residents — nearly 60 percent of our population — are currently receiving some form of government financial assistance," Young said.

He said about "129,000 Detroiters are out of work today and our unemployment rate is higher than any other large city in the country," adding that the 2-year-long plunge by the U.S. auto industry and the hard times of Detroit's biggest employer, Chrysler Corp., have had a crippling effect.

Young tried to lighten his assessment with cheer about the city's thriving convention trade, some industrial rebuilding and the city's attempts to put on a bright face about its "urban renaissance."

Among the bright spots Young noted was General Motors Corp.'s new $800 million Cadillac division assembly plant Detroit will share with its neighbor, Hamtramck.

The plant is expected to generate thousands of new jobs. But two existing plants will be closed when the new one opens, and the site of the factory, the Poletown neighborhood, has sparked bitter resistence from neighborhood residents who would lose their homes and businesses.

Budget cuts by the state government and the Reagan administration will compound the city's woes, the mayor said.

Young said he may try to cut wages or seek a wage freeze from city employees instead of borrowing money for operating expenses.

Pair Is Taken Into Custody

Law enforcement officers from Greenville, Ayden, the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and two New York detectives yesterday took two men, Thomas Smith, 25 of Ayden and Route 1, Greenville, and Thomas Barber, 33, no address, into custody as fugitives from New York.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the pair was jailed without bond after they were located at a house on N.C. 903 North of Greenville, about 8:15 p.m.

Cannon noted that earlier, officers had searched an apartment at the Olde London Inn on Memorial Drive and a house on Dickinson Avenue in an effort to find the men, wanted in connection with robberies in Suffolk County and other jurisdictions in New York.

Cannon said both men were armed at the time they were taken into custody and other weapons were found in the house.

N.C. Senate Votes Impose Rule On Randolph Co.

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Stock car driver Richard Petty has qualified for another race, but his Republican colleagues could be forced to the pits under a bill approved Thursday by the Senate.

Over the protests of GOP legislators, the Senate voted 36-10 to approve a bill that would impose district representation on the all-Republican Randolph County Board of Commissioners.

The unusual debate on the local bill came on a day when House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green named a select committee of 10 legislators to study the state Transportation Department and financial troubles of the Highway Fund.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Asheboro, state Democratic Party chairman, proposed the bill affecting the Randolph County board. Under the original proposal, four of the county's five GOP commissioners — including Petty — wouldn't be able to run for re-election over the next four years.

But the Senate adopted an amendment offered by one of the sponsors, Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Chapel Hill, who also represents Randolph County. His amendment would allow the representative from Petty's district — the Level Cross township — to run for re-election in 1982, the year Petty's term expires.

House Minority Leader Harold Brubaker, R-Asheboro, blasted the bill as a partisan move and ridiculed the Democrats for adopting the weakening amendment.

"Evidently they were getting chicken," he said. "I know a lot of senators were getting pretty scared about stopping Richard Petty."

Vickery offered the amendment by noting, "We thought it was best ... since it's created such controversy."

Walker, defending his bill on the Senate floor, said it was aimed at giving more representation to those living in the rural areas surrounding Asheboro.

Meanwhile, Ramsey and Green appointed five members each from the House and Senate to look into the operation of the Transportation Department and report back to the Legislature, which is expected to consider later this year proposals to raise the state's gasoline tax.

Another study commission already has recommended to Gov. Jim Hunt that the gasoline tax be increased as a way to aid the dwindling highway construction revenues.

Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Spring Hope, speaker pro tem of the House, and Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia, were named co-chairmen of the committee.

From the House, Ramsey named as members Reps. Martin Nesbitt, D-Asheville; Paul Pulley, D-Durham; LeRoy Spoon, R-Charlotte; and Dennis Wicker, D-Sanford.

From the Senate, Green named Sens. Craig Lawing, D-Charlotte, president pro tem of the Senate; Sam Noble, D-Lumberton; Gilbert Boger, R-Mocksville; and R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Hendersonville.

In other legislative action:

Elderly

A bill that would make it a felony to assault an elderly person continued to undergo major changes in the Senate Judiciary I Committee. A subcommittee has suggested the bill be expanded to make assault on any physically disabled person a felony.

Sen. Robert Swain, D-Asheville, head of the subcommittee, said the substitute bill would eliminate any reference to age and, instead, would affect "people in wheelchairs, people who are blind, the deaf and those who may have no hands. The average 60-year-old person may be more able to protect himself than these people."

Evidence

Rep. Ben Tison, D-Charlotte, filed a bill that would allow photographs to be used as substantive evidence in a criminal trial. Currently photographs may be admitted only as illustrative evidence, meaning the pictures may be used only to illustrate testimony of a witness. Substantive evidence stands alone for consideration by a jury.

Schools

All public school employees who work 10 months each year would be able to choose to be paid in 12 monthly installments under a bill filed by Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Mount Gilead. School teachers now have that option.

Installment Sales

The House Finance Committee recommended approval Thursday of a bill to allow taxpayers to spread out their capital gains tax payments on installment sales of property. The bill, introduced by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, makes state laws conform to federal laws that went into effect Oct. 19, 1980.

Refunds

A bill equalizing the rate of interest on tax refunds and the rate of interest on taxes owed to the state was given approval by the House Finance Committee.

"Whatever the state charges the taxpayer, the state should pay the taxpayer," said Lilley, who introduced the bill. He said currently the state pays 6 percent interest on the refunds it makes while taxpayers are charged 12 percent interest on the taxes they owe.

Tax Cuts

Two bills aimed at lowering taxes were sent to subcommittees of the House Finance Committee. Rep. J. Reid Poovey, R-Hickory, introduced the bills. One of the proposals would reduce individual income tax.

Roads

The House Transportation Committee recommended approval of a bill that would lift the ceiling on payments by the Department of Transportation to people displaced by public works projects. Currently, there is a $15,000 limit.

Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw told the committee that North Carolina and New York are the only states that have not lifted the ceiling.

Referendum

A bill that would give voters power to propose laws and constitutional amendments concerning taxes was referred to a subcommittee of the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee. The bill was proposed by Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Greensboro. It also would give voters the power to call for a referendum on the subject of tax levies.

Dealers

Dealers in secondhand goods would be affected by a bill filed by Rep. Charles Holt, D-Fayetteville. The bill expands two similar measures already filed that would regulate the resale of gold and silver. Holt's bill would require all secondhand dealers keep records of transactions and hold merchandise for 30 days after the transaction.

Redistricting

Identical bills calling for North Carolina to maintain its present 11 congressional districts were introduced in the House and Senate.

Education Board Deficit Grows

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Funding of public school programs has put the State Board of Education in the red by $7.1 million and the deficit could reach $9 million by the end of the fiscal year, a board official said Thursday.

Controller J.A. Porter Jr., who reported the deficit to the state board, said the Office of Management and Budget has been alerted to the problem. By law, the state is responsible for providing money needed to fund required public school programs.

If needed, additional money would be shifted to the state board to complete its programs, board spokesmen said.

"The deficit bothers me not one whit because the Legislature said, 'Spend that money that way.' This can be straightened out," board chairman H. David Bruton of Southern Pines said.

In the past such deficits have been remedied by shifting funds unused for specific budget items at the end of the fiscal year. However, Porter said no such funds would be available this year.

"We are estimating our expenditures much more closely than we have in years past, and I don't feel there is room in this budget to absorb these added costs," Porter said.

Marvin K. Dorman, deputy state budget officer, said a special request for additional money would be made to the Legislature if necessary.

He indicated, however, that the state board may have made some decisions, especially in implementing a new salary schedule for educators, that were not specifically authorized by the Legislature.

The deficit includes $3.5 million for educators whose salaries were to be upgraded under the new salary schedule because of their degrees and experience levels, $2.2 million for 305 extra teacher aides for kindergarten through the third grade and $1.5 million for the transportation of handicapped students.

Returned $10 65 Years Later

HARLOWTON, Mont. (AP) — It took 65 years, but a repentant depositor has returned $10 that was improperly credited to a bank account.

Continental National Bank President Dave Piper said the bank received an unsigned letter addressed to "Bank of Harlowton" that said, "if no bank, deliver to president of Chamber of Commerce."

The letter said that in 1916, "I deposited some money in my account in your bank. You gave credit for $10 more than I deposited.

"Being young and foolish, thinking banks did not need money, I failed to correct it. I have never had too much money, but this has bothered me all these years."

Enclosed was $10, but no interest.

The writer said that if the bank was not operating the money should be given to charity.

The letter was signed, "A sorry person — whom the Lord knows."

Piper said the money will be given to charity because the transaction must have been made at one of the early banks in Harlowton, and not the Continental National Bank.

Reagan Seen A Good 'Teacher'

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Business and financial leaders gave President Reagan high marks as a "teacher" for his stern nationally televised explanation of why the nation is threatened with "an economic calamity."

But despite wishing Reagan success in reviving the economy, some said the time has come for the president to deliver on his promises of reduced individual and business taxes and cuts in federal spending.

"The last thing anyone in America could benefit from would be two back-to-back unsuccessful American presidents," said Walter Hoadley, chief economist of the San Francisco-based Bank of America, the nation's largest bank.

Producing a dollar bill, and then 36 cents in change, Reagan explained Thursday how the value of the dollar has declined since 1960. He used charts to show how he hoped to balance the budget before his term expires by slowing the growth of federal spending.

"I believe this was President Reagan 'the economic teacher,'" setting the groundwork to implement his programs, said Hoadley in a telephone interview.

Reagan called for a 10 percent reduction in personal income taxes in each of the next three years and provisions for business to speed up tax benefits when adding plant and equipment to improve productivity.

"The president's message makes good sense," said Philip Caldwell, chairman of the Ford Motor Co. in a statement released in Detroit.

"The nation is in need of prudent spending cuts linked to tax cuts for individuals and to encourage capital formation. We support his efforts to get the country back on its feet," Caldwell said.

Reagan promised to detail his plans by Feb. 18, when he delivers his State of the Union address to Congress.

"By the 18th, I think he's got to come along with some very specific things, and obtain enough of an agreement with Congress that doesn't leave those of us ... in the financial markets a great deal of reason to doubt that he can do it," said Frederick Deming, senior economist of the New York-based Chemical Bank, the nation's sixth largest.

"There have been so many economic messages in the last 10 to 12 years of economic crises to be solved, and as he (Reagan) recognized, we haven't gotten very far. I'm willing to give him the benefit of the doubt to start with, but then he's got to come forward and deliver."

Wall Street economist David Jones of the investment house of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. said after the speech, "I give him (Reagan) credit for style and forcefulness. But in terms of substance, the speech fell short of expectations. ...

"I think everyone is familiar with the problems (of the economy), but the question is what the new administration will do about it. To that extent, the speech did not go beyond campaign talk," said Jones.

Mt. St. Helens Erupts Again, Not Violently

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens is erupting again, but so far the eruption has been limited to molten rock oozing from the mountain's bowels up into the crater and hardening in a growing lava dome, scientists say.

"It seems to be a repeat of the December activity," said Bob Norris, spokesman for the University of Washington geophysics center, referring to a similar eruptive phase the week after Christmas. "It appears the main part of this eruption will be dome growth."

Molten rock came to the surface Thursday amid clouds of steam that filled the crater and rose nearly two miles above the southwest Washington mountain.

Scientists had predicted an eruption after a flurry of small earthquakes Wednesday and Thursday.

Norris said small volcanic earthquakes were being detected only about once an hour early today. The quakes were apparently caused by molten rock pushing through the mountain, he said.

The type of molten material seemed to contain less gas than in December, Norris said, indicating less pressure within the volcano and the likelihood of a "quieter eruption."

Scientists who flew by helicopter into the huge crater Thursday could not estimate the size of the bulging lava dome because of the heavy steam, said Kathy Cashman, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist.

"People got in but they never got a good look at it. But it's bigger," said Ms. Cashman.

"It's higher than the part that was there," she said. "They really just had a few glimpses through the steam."

On Jan. 16, the last time the old dome was measured, it was 1,072 feet long, 660 feet wide and 274 feet tall — larger than the Seattle Kingdome stadium.

The volcano's dome-building does not rule out the chance of an explosive, skyward eruption of ash, Ms. Cashman said, but she added, "The dome will be the major phase of activity."

The mountain's last explosive eruption began on Oct. 16 and lasted for three days. During that eruption, steam and ash shot eight miles high.

Thursday's steam plumes, bearing little or no ash, rose between 7,000 and 8,000 feet above the 8,400-foot mountain, she said.

There have been five major steam and ash eruptions of Mount St. Helens since the May 18 blast that left 62 people dead or missing.

Protest March Permit Issued

A permit to stage a protest march from Albemarle Avenue to North Carolina Highway Patrol Troop A Headquarters at the intersection of Fifth and Tenths Streets has been issued to the Pitt County chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The permit, according to Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon, allows the protestors to walk down Fifth Street to the Patrol Station between 2:30 and 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Cannon said, according to the application for the permit, the march is to "support Hyde County black citizens to get a state trooper removed from their county for his treatment of blacks."

Hundreds Call For 'Jane Doe'

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of people, anxious to find their missing wives or daughters or mothers, have besieged police and a state hospital with calls since a story was published about "Jane Doe," a young woman with amnesia.

One man drove from Brunswick, Ga., arriving Thursday only to be shown a photograph of Jane Doe that didn't resemble his missing niece, authorities said.

"Starting Tuesday night, we've had about 400 calls," said Jackie Dale of South Florida State Hospital, where Jane Doe is living. "Everyone's certain this is their Jane."

A story distributed nationally Tuesday by The Associated Press told how a forest ranger discovered the woman — nude, covered with dirt and so weak she couldn't call for help — at Birch State Park in Fort Lauderdale last Sept. 19.

Apparently traumatized by the events that caused her to end up in the park, the woman has no memory about who she is, where she's from or who her relatives are.

Mrs. Dale said the hospital has kept staffers working overtime to screen calls, which are coming from all over the United States. Those that seem to have a possibility of panning out are referred to Fort Lauderdale police.

"Each one is being checked out; there's been nothing yet," said police spokeswoman Dianna Morrissette.

"The response to the media articles has been very good. It should help us to get her identified," she said, adding: "It's shocking to find out how many people are missing in this country."

People who come to the area will not be allowed to see her.

"I'm not going to permit people to see her, because she doesn't want any company. I'm not going to run a circus," Mrs. Dale said.

She said some simple identifying characteristics help screen the callers.

"She doesn't have dentures, has no gold in her mouth, no surgical scars. She does have dark moles on her neck," Mrs. Dale said.

Doctrinal Response Is Upheld

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The "supreme court" of the United Presbyterian Church — its Permanent Judicial Commission — has upheld the acceptance of a minister who had been accused of not satisfactorily affirming belief in the divinity of Christ.

The church court ruled that answers given in examination of the minister, the Rev. Mansfield M. Kaseman, "were not denials" of church doctrine, which includes belief in "the full deity and full humanity of Jesus Christ."

This is a distinguishing belief of Christianity, and there has been widespread interest in the case against Kaseman, 41, of Rockville, Md., both among Presbyterians and in other denominations.

The high court held that the church's regional unit in Washinton, D.C., the Capital Union Presbytery, "acted reasonably, responsibly and deliberately" within the church constitution in approving Kaseman's ministerial standing.

The decision culminated a drawn-out succession of examinations, appeals, rulings and reviews that have gone on since March 1979, all of them decided favorably to Kaseman.

Although he previously had been ordained in the United Church of Christ, he had sought United Presbyterian ministerial credentials also in order to serve the Rockeville congregation, which is jointly aligned with both denominations.

Seven Washington area Presbyterians, including the Rev. Stewart J. Rankin, had charged that Kaseman had not adequately aaffirmed Christ's divinity in his examination by the regional unit, the presbytery.

In the original questioning of him about his theological views, he had been asked by a member, "Do you believe Jesus is God?"

Kaseman reportedly replied, "No, God is God."

Kaseman later had explained that he believes Jesus is divine, but felt he could not give an unqualified affirmative answer to the way the question was phrased. Officials conceded it was an an oddly phrased question and that none of the creeds deal with Christ's divinity in those terms.

In a re-examination of Kaseman ordered later, he was asked how he understands the relationship between "the man, the completely human Jesus of Nazareth and the second person of the Godhead," as he also is traditionally described.

Kaseman replied in part, "Now regarding the nature of Jesus who we call the Christ, I like what you read from the confession. My own language that I am comfortable with is describing Jesus as God-man. I believe that Jesus is one with God and with the Holy Spirit."

Concerning belief in Christ's resurrection from death, Kaseman said, "I believe in the resurrection, I affirm the resurrection. It is a mystery, an affirmation of faith."

Both after the original and second examination, 3-1 majorities of the regional presbytery determined that Kaseman's views were acceptable, and approved ministerial status for him.

In upholding the action, the church court said it was "a judgment the presbytery was best qualified to make.

"While answers to some questions may appear to be weak, or less than wholly adequate, we reaffirm the principle that we are not to substitute our own judgment for that of the lower judicatory, which is best able to judge."

The United Presbyterian Church "takes its doctrines seriously," the court said.

However, it added that the church constitution puts primary focus not on "conformity with theological prescriptions but rather on the candidate's willingness and commitment" to be instructed and guided by the church's confessional standards in "leading the people of God."

'Alarmed' Over Foreign Aid Cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Church World Service has expressed "its alarm" at cuts proposed in U.S. foreign aid by President Reagan's budget director — cuts also opposed by the new secretary of state, Alexander M. Haig Jr.

The agency, international relief arm of the National Council of Churches which carries on relief work in 70 countries, cited a proposed $2.6 billion cut in the $8 billion foreign aid program proposed for 1982 by the former Carter administration.

"The reductions in aid would mainly affect the poor countries of Africa and the Asian subcontinent," the agency's committee says. "The primary casualties are likely to be many of the poorest developing countries and poorest people in them."

The statement adds that even without cuts, U.S. foreign aid programs "represent an inadequate U.S. contribution" to alleviating serious human need.

Urged Broaden Hearing On Shah

NEW YORK (AP) — Clergy and Laity Concerned, a nationwide interfaith network, is urging the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee to broaden its proposed hearings on Iran's holding of the former U.S. hostages to include a review of the ex-shah's human rights violations there, and his admission to this country.

In preparation for his trip Feb. 16-26, he was reported concentrating on Japanese since in the Philippines he can get by most of the time with English and Spanish.

MAN or STATUE ?

Today we see Lincoln in heroic size. He appears almost more of a statue than a man — a great figure cast in bronze, with a furrowed brow and solemn countenance.

Yet Lincoln was a man. He walked the earth, and felt love and joy, but he knew tremendous frustration and almost insurmountable sorrow. He prayed, earnestly and effectively.

Throughout each crisis in his life, and there were many, he was sustained by faith. God seemed close to him, and he turned to Him often. He didn't pause to think about whether he'd go to church or not. He went.

Do you?

Ex-Governor Grasso Dies

GRASSO DIES — Former Connecticut Governor Ella Grasso died Thursday night at Hartford Hospital of complications due to cancer, a hospital spokesman said. (AP Laserphoto)

By LISE STONE
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Ella Grasso won national attention and the admiration of feminists when she became the first woman ever elected governor of a state in her own right, but to her it was nothing special.

"All my friends in the women's movement get angry at me for saying this, but I never thought that being a woman gave me any special political problems," she once said.

Mrs. Grasso, who resigned in December after six years in office because she was bedridden by cancer, died Thursday of cardiac arrest caused by multiple organ failure, a Hartford Hospital spokesman said.

She was 61.

Flags in Connecticut were flying at half-staff today and a full state funeral was set for noon Monday at St. Joseph's Cathedral. She will lie in state at the Capitol from 11 a.m. Sunday until 11 a.m. Monday.

Mrs. Grasso's husband, Thomas, and their children, James and Susane, were at her bedside when she was pronounced dead at 6:03 p.m. She had gone into a coma at 7 a.m. after several days in a semi-comatose state.

Mrs. Grasso's election as governor in 1974 made her the first woman to be elected a governor who was not the wife or widow of a governor.

"It was only when my friends from the foreign press, in New York, kept coming here and writing about me as a woman candidate that I began to think I was doing something unusual," she said during her first term.

One of her mentors, former President Jimmy Carter, said in a statement from Atlanta that Mrs. Grasso "represented all that is good and promising about politics and public service.

"As one of the most prominent women in this country, she had great strength, skill, and, when required, toughness," he said.

Cancer was discovered in her uterus in April. Last fall, doctors determined that the cancer had spread to her liver and intestines. She was operated on twice and received chemotherapy.

The illness restricted her activities, and she turned over much of her work to Lt. Gov. Bill O'Neill, who became governor when she resigned effective Dec. 31.

"My heart goes out to all the governor's family and friends around the state. My own personal heart is breaking," O'Neill said.

Mrs. Grasso struck a frugal image during her 1½ terms as governor. One of her first actions was to sell the state plane, and her casual, homey manner of dressing became a trademark around the Capitol.

As promised, the state did not enact an income tax during her tenure.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose for the fourth straight day today, and analysts said there was little impact on trading from President Reagan's predictions of an "economic calamity" if his tax and spending cuts are not adopted.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 4.43 points to 951.19.

Gainers held an almost 2-1 edge over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Reagan, in a nationally televised speech Thursday night, renewed appeals for slowing the growth of federal spending and reducing government regulatory pressures on business. He proposed cuts in individual taxes and speedier business tax-writeoffs for new plant and equipment, but withheld details pending his Feb. 18 report to Congress.

"The tone (of the speech) was viewed as quite favorable, but there is still the question of what he (Reagan) can do with Congress," said Newton Zinder of E.F. Hutton & Co.

In other economic news, the Labor Department said the nation's unemployment rate remained unchanged at 7.4 percent in January. Murray Weidenbaum, the president's designee to head the Council of Economic Advisers, said the figure is "further evidence our economy appears to be stuck on a plateau."

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks rose 0.26 to 74.57. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.29 at 346.47.

Big Board volume reached 17.83 million shares in the first two hours, against 19.21 million in the same period Thursday.

American Airlines, which topped the active list, was up ⅜ at 11⅝, in trading that included a block of 25,000 shares at 11¾, a block of 200,000 shares changing hands at 11½ a share, and a block of 50,000 shares also trading at 11½. UAL was down ⅞ at 22½.

Among petroleum issues, Exxon was down ⅛ at 75; Texas Oil & Gas rose ⅝ at 34¼; Atlantic Richfield gained ⅛ at 59⅞; Mobil was up ¼ at 71⅜; Standard Oil of California advanced ¼ at 89¾; and Texaco rose ⅛ at 41.

Active issues included U.S. Industries, up ⅛ at 9⅞; Schering-Plough, up ¼ at 38¼; and GK Technologies, up 1⅜ at 43. GK Technologies said Thursday it will soon hold talks about a proposed merger into Penn Central.

Graduation Program Held

Before 25 pre-released prisoners received graduation certificates during a Pre-Release and Aftercare Prison Graduation luncheon Wednesday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, they were called upon to help promote activities to help keep children from getting into trouble.

"As each of you rebuilds your life," the Rev. Gerald Peterson said, "see yourself involved in potential growth which doesn't ever have to stop. A life of growing is always a life of service. You can concentrate your efforts on improving the prison program, on becoming a part of changing its program, on finding employment and housing for released prisoners, on providing transportation for loved ones to visit prisons and on establishing an occupational program for children not doing well in school." Peterson, former St. James United Methodist Church minister, is the executive director of a newly organized local chapter of the Phoenix Organization made up of volunteers to improve juvenile and adult criminal justice. He was introduced by Pat Higgins, Pre-Release and Aftercare Center director.

The Rev. Jerry Jolley, minister of music of Jarvis, welcomed the group and gave the invocation. Mrs. Ann Bennett Maxwell, training coordinator, and Matt Brewington, assistant training coordinator, recognized the graduates and awarded them certificates.

The luncheon was sponsored by the Jarvis United Methodist Women. About 85 graduates and their families from 26 northeastern counties attended.

Mishaps On Slick Roads

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Roads patchy with ice produced a rash of traffic mishaps today in Wilmington, including a school bus which turned over.

A spokesman at New Hanover Memorial Hospital said six to eight teenagers from the bus were treated and released at the hospital's emergency room.

The spokesman quoted an emergency room nurse as saying the teenagers were "just shaken up."

Wilmington police reported an unusually high eight accidents in a 45 minute period as drivers struggled through morning rush hour traffic. One accident involved "several cars," a dispatcher said.

National Weather Service forecasters said icy rain and sleet fell across broad areas of eastern North Carolina during the morning, including the Outer Banks and the coastal waters.

The freezing rain was expected to become normal rain as temperatures rose in the Wilmington area.

However, traveler's advisories remained out for most of the state as a winter storm took aim on North Carolina.

State troopers reported bridges iced over and some patchy ice on roadways around Wilmington early today. Other North Carolina roads were listed as clear and open.

Deep Divers 'Returning'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke Medical Center scientists say three divers who reached a record simulated depth of 2,250 feet — 686 meters — are showing signs of normal depressurization as they make a simulated ascent in their test chamber.

The divers are being returned to normal surface pressure at the rate of four feet per hour, and were at a simulated level of 2,132 feet late Thursday.

They are to be released from their eight-foot steel ball chamber on Feb. 28.

Scientists monitoring the divers reported all three in good condition.

The divers are Steve V. Porter of Cortez, Colo., Leonard Whitlock of Vero Beach, Fla. and Erik Kramer of Williamsburg, Va.

The simulated dive was made at the F.G. Hall Environmental Laboratory, which also has been conducting tests on how pressure affects recovery by surgical patients and why birds can fly at high altitudes, where people would die.

In the latter experiment, a test was under way Thursday in a wind tunnel were starlings were flying in conditions simulating 100 mph winds at an altitude of 18,000 feet.

Dr. John Salzano, a Duke physiology professor, said one possible benefit from the test could be proof that there is a substance in the avian system that might have medical implications for people.

Seize Tons Of Walrus Ivory

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Federal agents have seized more than five tons of contraband walrus ivory in Alaska and four other states.

The raids, conducted Wednesday, capped an 11-month investigation of trade in raw ivory and polar bear hides, the agents said. Warrants were also served in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Washington and California, the agents said.

No charges have been filed in the case, in which $450,000 worth of ivory was seized, according to assistant U.S. attorney Milton Moss. Under the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972, no one but Alaska natives may possess unfinished ivory and only native hunters may take polar bears.

We endorse mixed beverages in the City of Greenville

As voters and citizens of the City of Greenville, we support the referendum to be held on February 17. We feel that a fairly administered and strictly enforced mixed beverage law would have numerous benefits for the city. Among those benefits, we feel, are:

1. Increased revenues in taxes.
2. Increased economy from the ability to attract conventions, etc., from outside the city.
3. A better method of controlling alcohol, in that in restaurants where mixed beverages are served, brown bagging would no longer be allowed under state law.
4. A progressive law for a progressive city.
5. A better environment for restaurants, thus, better restaurants.
6. For those who choose to drink, the freedom to drink the beverage of their choice in small doses, without having to illegally carry an opened whiskey bottle around.

In no way do we support the establishment of walk-in bars and taverns, serving mixed beverages. The referendum that the citizens of Greenville will decide will allow established, sit-down restaurants to apply for mixed beverages licenses so that their customers may choose to have a drink along with a meal.

We urge your support for the referendum on February 17.

Tar Heels Nip East Carolina, 77-74

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Down as much as nine points past the midpoint of the second half, East Carolina stormed back to within one, but couldn't quite pull it out as the Lady Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina nipped them, 77-74, last night in Minges Coliseum.

A screaming crowd of 4,250 saw the Lady Pirates, who dropped their record to 17-5, get within one point once and within two on four occasions, the last with 1:54 left. After that, the Pirates had a couple of chances to tie it up, but Aprille Shaffer hit the second of two shots awarded as an intentional foul with five seconds left.

Ironically, it could have been the fervor of some of the ECU fans that cost that fateful point. A large group gathered at the UNC end of the court as Shaffer prepared to shoot. After a time out, she missed her first shot, and after a second, bounced the second off the back rim.

"It was coming off on the right side," ECU's Kathy Riley said later. "There is no way it was going in."

But, overanxious fans — in an extremely poor display of sportsmanship — shook the basket supports, and the action served to help the ball stay on the rim and finally drop in.

After that, Carolina merely made the Pirates weave through them to get to the basket for a final shot — which missed.

"I'm extremely disappointed," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "Carolina played very good. They played better and won. Both teams were sluggish, but it seemed like we were playing in reverse."

Andruzzi admitted that the Lady Pirates were tired and several were sick. "But that is no excuse. We still weren't as intense as we should have been," she said. "Yes, we have been sick (both Riley and Mary Denkler missed the two days of practice prior to the game) and we've played a lot of tough, tough, tough games. But we should have been up for this one and I don't think we were."

Andruzzi said the Lady Heels played harder. "We didn't control the boards, especially in the second half," she added. The stats actually gave East Carolina a 52-35 rebound advantage, including a six-rebound advantage in the second half. "We outrebounded them by 17? But we didn't get them off the defensive boards. They got a lot of points that way.

We can't shoot 66 per cent at the foul line and 39 per cent from the floor and expect to win," Andruzzi added.

"I hope this wakes us up. We have two tough games coming up this weekend. And we've got to learn to play under extreme pressure — like this. We have a shot at three more conference games, and I hope that they realize now that every game is important. I hope we won't forget this game."

East Carolina got the initial lead, but failed to hold it as Carolina got a three-point play from Kathy Crawford for a 7-6 lead. The Pirates tied it up three times after that, they regained the lead on a basket by Riley at 16-14 with 11:58 left. Marcia Girven and Laurie Sikes hit after that to run the lead to six, 20-14, before Carolina came back within two on several occasions.

East Carolina again led by six, 30-24, and 34-28, but Carolina put on another rally that finally pulled them ahead at 40-39 with 42 seconds left in the half on a jumper by Crawford. Tresa Brown added a basket from the baseline with 11 seconds showing for a 42-39 halftime lead.

East Carolina came back to regain the lead at 43-42, then again at 45-44. That was the last time.

Joni Berry's long-range bomb put the Heels back into the lead, 46-45 with 17:14 remaining, and East Carolina never caught up again. Behind the play of Crawford and Brown, the Tar Heels slowly built up as much as a nine-point lead, 65-56 with 8:35 remaining.

Riley then ignited a Pirate rally, scoring eight straight points to trim the lead to 65-64 with 6:25 left. But the Pirates were never able to come closer. Carolina pulled back out by six, only to see the Pirates pull it back within two four more times. And each time, they had the chance to tie it up, but a turnover or missed shot cost them the chance, the last time when a Riley pass inside slipped through Denkler's hands out of bounds.

Crawford led the Carolina effort with 26 points, while Brown added 16 and Berry had 12. Brown led the Carolina rebounding with 13, while Crawford had 10.

Riley paced East Carolina with 22, while Denkler had 16 and Girven had 12.

Girven also led the Pirate rebounding with 12.

"I expect a lot from our kids," Andruzzi said. "I want us to be the best. Seventeen and five is a good record, but it could be better. East Carolina has to be the classiest team out there. And I'm critical of anyone who doesn't play defense for us, or who won't say that they're not able to play."

The coach was asked about not calling a time out when the Pirates got nine-points behind. "We didn't need it. Our kids knew what to do. If it had gotten to be a little more (the lead), I might have. But the kids know what to do and they did it. We want to save our times out until the end. That's when they help the most."

Andruzzi also questioned a couple of moves made by the officials. "I thought they called a pretty good game, but I don't understand a couple of things."

Early in the game, the officials asked the P.A. to announce that the Minges Coliseum organ could not be played during the actual game. Then later, when a couple of fans, standing along the fringes of the court blocked the 30-second clock, the official announced that the game would not continue until "everyone is in the stands." He made no request that fans just not block the 30-second clock.

"How many games have we had at home?" Andruzzi asked.

Announce ECU Football Slate

East Carolina will face five home opponents, including the University of Miami, the Peach Bowl champions, in its 1981 football schedule. And future dates on the gridiron were announced with West Virginia and Florida State, including games in Greenville.

The schedule along with the upcoming dates were announced by Dr. Ken Karr, Director of Athletics.

Highlighting the five-game home schedule will be the appearance of Peach Bowl champion, Miami of Florida. Top road games include rivals North Carolina, N.C. State and Duke. Also, the Pirates will visit West Virginia, marking the first time the two have met since 1971.

In conjunction with the 1981 schedule announcement, Karr revealed future home dates with West Virginia and Florida State University. A four-game series has been established with West Virginia, playing in Morgantown in 1981 and 1982, and playing in ECU's Ficklen Stadium in 1987 and 1988.

The three-game series with Florida State has the Pirates visiting Tallahassee in 1982 and 1988, while the top-rated Seminoles will come to Greenville in 1987.

"We are obviously very excited about having the University of Miami coming to Greenville this year," Karr said. "Also, the addition of West Virginia is a real plus to our schedule.

"The four-game slate with West Virginia and the three-game slate with Florida State is a start towards the type scheduling we want to have for our football program. I noted when I first came to Greenville that it might take five to six years before the home schedule could reflect this type game. I do believe we have made a start in the right direction and we hope to expand upon the West Virginia and Florida State series for more excitiing schedules at home and on the road."

The five-game home schedule for 1981 includes Western Carolina to open the schedule on September 5, the University of Toledo, the Univeristy of Miami, East Tennessee State University and the College of William & Mary.

Homecoming has been set for November 7 against East Tennessee.

The six road games are with North Carolina, N.C. State, Duke University, the University of Richmond (in the Tobacco Bowl), Southwestern Louisiana and West Virginia.

Karr also announced that a new ECU policy will slate all home games after October 15 each year at 1:30 p.m. Night games will be played at home only prior to that date henceforth.

The complete schedule:

September 5, WESTERN CAROLINA (7 p.m.); 12 at North Carolina (1 p.m.); 19 at N.C. State (7 p.m.); 26 TOLEDO (7 p.m.).

October 3 at Duke (1:30 p.m.); 10 at Richmond (1:30 p.m.); 17 at Southwestern Louisiana (7:30 p.m. CDT); 24 MIAMI (1:30 p.m.); 31 at West Virginia (1:30 p.m.).

November 7 EAST TENNESSEE STATE (1:30 p.m.); 14 WILLIAM & MARY (1:30 p.m.)

Pirates Hosting AIA In Saturday Contest

East Carolina's Pirates return home on Saturday to face the Athletes in Action, with tipoff set for 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

It will be "Group Night" in Minges, and all groups of 15 or more will be admitted for $1 per person by presenting a list of those in the group at the ticket window.

The Pirates, who have just passed the .500 mark for the first time since December, bring an 11-10 record into the contest. The Athletes In Action are now 22-8, following a victory over Biola on Tuesday.

Among their victims are Marquette, 74-72, Long Beach State, 72-65, Southern California, 82-74, and Oregon, 62-46. They were beaten by #2 ranked Oregon State, one of two unbeaten teams in the country, by only 11 points, 66-55.

The two teams have faced one common opponent, Penn State. AIA lost to the Nittany Lions, 64-56, while the Pirates lost, 71-59.

"This group has been killin' people around the country, as evidenced by their record against excellent competition," ECU Coach Dave Odom said. "They offer the greatest selection of name players from the college ranks ever to appear in Minges Coliseum."

The group includes Steve Schall and Marvin Delph of Arkansas, Rich Branning of Notre Dame, Derrick Jackson of Georgetown, and Gig Sims of UCLA.

"AIA will be much like the Marathon Oil team we played to start the season, in that they will play free and easy. But, this group will be in much better shape. This is a real team and they do things that good teams do. Their record is very important to them in what they are trying to do in their total work," Odom added.

"I feel this game will be a tremendous challenge for our young kids. They will be facing a group that has great pride is what they do both on and off the court."

Schall leads the AIA team in scoring with an 11.7 average, while Delph is next at 11.5. Branning is also at double figures at 11.0, as is Jackson with a 10.3 average.

Schall is also the leading rebounder at 7.9.

The AIA have outscored their opponents, 74.1 to 68.5 over the season.

Schall starts at center, at 7-0, while Johnson, 6-9, and Tim Hall, 6-8 from Colorado State, are the forwards. The guards are Branning, 6-4, and Jackson, 6-1.

East Carolina is led by Charles Watkins at 13.9, while Mark McLaurin has a 10.3 average.

The Pirates have little rest after the game, having to bus immediately to Norfolk, Va., to catch an early Sunday morning plane for connections to Edinboro, Texas, where the Bucs face Pan American University on Monday at 8:25 EST.

The two teams met earlier, with Pan American rolling to an 82-67 victory.

Since then, however, the Broncs have fallen on some hard times. They have gone only 4-5 since then, as their record has fallen to 12-9, losing five of its last seven. In the past week, they lost twice to Southern Mississippi, 81-68 on the road, and 68-67 at home. They also beat New Orleans, 66-56.

"In the first game, our downfall was the fact that we didn't play good defense inside. Pam American's strength is on the offensive boards," Odom said. "We have to set the tempo. We can't get in a run and shoot game. We must take shots we want. We must be one tight unit that far away from home with no support except for the 20 or so in our traveling party. Out team must have self-inspiration."

Plus, it will be Homecoming for the Broncs.

One factor is still a question mark. Kenneth Green, Pan American's all-America player, has missed several recent games with injuries, and his status is unknown.

The 6-9 senior center was averaging 22.7 points and 11.4 rebounds a game for the Broncs. Three other players are in double figures, including 5-11 guard Mike Carroll, with 11.4, 6-4 guard Rueben Cole at 12.4, and 6-6 forward Curtis Glasper at 12.3.

East Carolina returns home to face Delaware State on Thursday.

Matmen Close Home Schedule

A Staff Report

East Carolina's wrestling team has its final home meet Saturday before the Pirate program is dismantled at the end of the season and the ECU swim team returns home to battle Duke.

Also this weekend, the ECU track and gymnastic teams are on the road.

The Pirate wrestlers, now 2-5, are the host team for a quad-teem meet that begins Saturday at noon. Taking the mat with the Pirates Saturday are Virginia Tech, Central Florida and Appalachian State.

The meet is the school's final home wrestling match before the wrestling program is eliminated at the end of the season.

•

In the swim meet Saturday (1 p.m.), ECU's men and women look to improve on their 2-4 and 5-2 records respectively.

"The (Duke) men should present a good meet," ECU swim coach Ray Scharf said. "Diving may again propose some trouble as Duke has some good divers. Duke has a good women's team also and is led by by Nancy Hogshead, a world class swimmer."

•

The ECU track team travels to the Wanamaker Millrose Games Friday in New York and then moves on Saturday to run in the Knights of Columbus meet in Cleveland.

"The Wanamaker Millrose is the oldest and most prestigious indoor meet in the East," ECU track coach Bill Carson said. "It's a social event, and there will be 17,800 people attending: that's a sell-out."

The Pirates take a mile relay team into the meet that is among the top eight in the nation. Last year, ECU finished fourth at the meet.

Following Friday's meet, the Pirates will fly to Cleveland for the Knights of Columbus meet.

•

In gymnastics, the Pirates travels to Farmville, Va., to face powerful Longwood College for the second time this season. VPI will also compete in the meet.

Going into the meet, ECU coach Jon Rose is optimistic his club can score 120 points, which should be enough to win. Longwood defeated ECU earlier this season, 120-112.

"We're ready to peak," Rose said. "We've got to for the upcoming state and regional championships."

Freshman Nan George, injured in the first contest with Longwood, returns to action Saturday. She will compete on the uneven bars.

The call for a feasability study on the construction of a civic center for Greenville and Pitt County will find solid support from this area. It is a project we have long felt was needed for this area.

For some time, we have backed the construction of such a facility, as it would bring much to the area that has been denied in the past.

Having such a building in which to play basketball would greatly increase the prospects of getting quality teams into Greenville to face East Carolina. Paying a guarantee that is needed takes a larger seating capacity than currently available in Minges. For this reason, an arena must seat a minimum of 10,000 people.

Both the East Carolina men and women could play some or all of their games in such a facility. Having it would also be a help in their recruiting.

Since the North Carolina High School Athletic Association has gone to regionals in basketball, it would become a natural site for one or more high school tournaments.

Such a building however, would not be for the use of sporting events alone — and it should not be built with only sporting events in mind.

What is needed is a building such as William & Mary Hall in Williamsburg, or a larger version of the center in Greenville, S.C. A civic center such as that in Raleigh would not be of sufficent size, especially for basketball.

Such a building could attract the circus, ice shows, and other road group. Concerts of more major artists could be brought in, covering areas that the wide group of people in the east would be interested in.

And a sound system should be carefully installed to provide proper atmosphere for stage plays, also.

The Tobacco Show would be a natural for an arena like this. Plus there are other things which could be placed there, such as boat shows, auto shows, etc. With the proper meeting rooms, conventions and smaller sized meetings could be handled.

No monument to architecture is needed, however. Keeping it simple, but functional, should be the main aim — and it will cost less, too.

Ranked Teams All Post Wins

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no reason Virginia should lose another game this season, says guard Jeff Lamp, "but our primary goal right now is to win the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"If we can do that and still go undefeated, it would be great," said Lamp, one of the best shooters in college basketball.

Lamp, accustomed to sharing if not giving up the limelight entirely to teammate Ralph Sampson, scored 26 points Thursday night and sparked a rally that carried top-ranked and undefeated Virginia over Wagner, 76-69.

The victory improved Virginia's record to 20-0 and extended the Cavaliers' winning streak to 25, the longest current string of victories by any Division I college basketball team.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams Thursday night, No. 14 Michigan edged Michigan State in overtime 79-77; No. 15 Iowa stopped Northwestern 76-65; 17th-ranked Indiana routed Wisconsin 89-64; No. 18 Illinois whipped Ohio State 82-63 and No. 20 South Alabama turned back South Florida 54-50.

Virginia's victory, for one, did not come without some nervous moments.

With less than two minutes gone in the second half, Wagner ran off 16 points to only two — free throws by freshmen Othell Wilson and Sampson — for Virginia. That erased a 39-28 deficit and put Wagner up by three, 44-41, with 12:42 left.

"I was concerned about it," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "We were sluggish and tired from our travel. Wagner played a great basketball game and caused us to make a lot of mistakes."

Over the next 5½ minutes, however, Virginia outscored Wagner 18-6. Lamp scored six points in that string, and Lee Raker capped it with an 18-foot jump shot that gave Virginia a 50-50 lead.

Then it was time for Sampson, a 7-foot-4 sophomore center, to go to work. He hit a one-handed stuff shot that capped a six-point run, putting the Cavaliers up by 13 at 65-52. Later, he hit a five-foot turnaround jumper, a high-flying hook shot and a free throw, giving him 12 of his 19 points in the second half. Sampson also grabbed 18 rebounds and added a pair of blocked shots.

"The team showed a lot of poise," Sampson said. "We didn't get our heads down. We fought back, and we knew it would open up inside sooner or later, as soon as Jeff started hitting some jumpers."

The high scorer for Wagner was Mike Nelson with 14 points, including eight in a span of 5:41 during which the Seahawks, 11-7, outscored Virginia 16-2 to take a 44-41 lead.

"It was a combination of Virginia playing well and us doing some things we didn't want to do," Wagner Coach P.J. Carlesimo said, "like making some not-so-intelligent fouls. We didn't keep our composure and poise when we fell behind."

Marty Bodnar hit on a driving layup in the final seconds of overtime to lead Michigan over Michigan State. In the overtime, Michigan forward Mike McGee hit a pair of free throws and converted a steal into an easy layup basket to give the Wolverines a four-point cushion. But Michigan State countered with a pair of free throws by Vincent and a Kevin Smith jump shot to tie the game 77-77. Bodnar's final basket followed a Michigan stall that lasted about a minute.

"We're not as talented as other Big Ten teams," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. "But we did a good job in the second half of taking advantage of their mistakes to build a lead," which at one time was as high as eight points.

Vince Brookins scored 27 points to equal his career high and Kevin Boyle added 16 to lead Iowa over Northwestern. The Hawkeyes never trailed in the game and moved to a 20-point lead in the second half with about eight minutes left when Coach Lute Olson cleared his bench.

"That was one of the best games Brookins has had in a long time," said Olson. "He not only shot well but he did a great job defending and rebounding."

Olson was so pleased with the zone defense the Hawkeyes started with that he went with it the entire game.

"The zone was effective so we stuck with it," said Olson. "I think we confused them with the zone and it came to where they had to foul. By the time they made their adjustments we had too big a lead."

Sophomore Tony Brown made his first five shots and scored 12 of his career-high 18 points in the first half to spark Indiana over Wisconsin. The Hoosiers went ahead 8-6 on Ted Kitchel's layup with 16:35 left in the first half and were never caught.

Brown, a 6-foot-2 guard from Chicago, hit six of his first nine shots in the first half, which ended with the Hoosiers enjoying a 41-23 advantage.

Reserve guard Craig Tucker scored 20 points, 15 in the second half, in leading Illinois over Ohio State. Tucker and Derek Harper led an 18-7 surge midway through the second half that broke the game open for Illinois, which then coasted to its 14th victory of the season against four defeats.

Ed Rains scored a game-high 19 points and Scott Williams and Herb Andrew each scored 10 each to lead South Alabama over South Florida. South Florida leaped out to an early lead, but South Alabama took over 12 minutes into the first half. Rains sank a 15-footer to boost the Jaguars to a 27-26 advantage at the half.

Lamp, Sampson Spark Virginia Past Wagner

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeff Lamp and Ralph Sampson led a rally that erased a three-point deficit midway in the second half and gave top-ranked Virginia a 76-69 college basketball victory over inspired Wagner Thursday night in the second game of a Madison Square Garden doubleheader.

With 12:42 to play, the Cavaliers trailed 44-41, but Virginia outscored the Seahawks 18-6 over the next 5½ minutes to lead 59-50 with 7:07 to play. Lamp had six points in that run.

Then, the outcome was left in the large hands of Sampson, a 7-foot-4 sophomore center. Sampson hit a one-handed stuff shot with 4:31 remaining, capping a six-point run, and Virginia led 65-52. In the final 2:15, Sampson scored five straight points, on a five-foot turnaround jumper, a sky hook and a free throw that put the Cavaliers up 74-67 with 1:01 left.

The victory gave Virginia a 20-0 record this season and extended the nation's longest major college winning streak to 25 games.

Lamp led the Cavaliers with 26 points and Sampson added 19, 12 of those in the second half.

Reserve forward Mike Nelson paced Wagner, 11-7, with 14 points and Daymon Yizar added 12.

Virginia led 36-28 at the half, and the Cavaliers scored the first three points of the second half to lead by 11, 39-28, before the Seahawks went on a 16-2 run that caught Virginia flat. The Cavs were unable to hit from the field and unable to hold onto the ball.

Nelson scored eight points in that run, including a driving layup after Sampson lost the ball in a flurry of hands under his own basket. That layup gave Wagner its first lead of the game, 42-41, with 13:34 to play, and Nelson added another jump shot before Virginia's offense went into gear.

In the first game of the doubleheader, Fordham defeated St. Peter's of New Jersey 58-47.

UNC, State In Doubleheader

By The Associated Press

Eleventh-ranked North Carolina and North Carolina State take a break from Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action tonight for the first round of play in the annual North-South Doubleheader at Charlotte, N.C.

The Tar Heels, coming off a one-point overtime loss to top-ranked Virginia, meet a strong St. Joseph's team that has run up a 14-3 record. N.C. State takes on Furman, a Southern Conference team in the midst of a rebuilding program.

All other ACC teams are idle tonight.

In the only game involving a conference team Thursday night, Virginia found little Wagner tougher than expected in a game in New York. The Cavaliers, rallying behind a 26-point performance by Jeff Lamp, finally won out 76-69.

"I was concerned about it," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "We were sluggish and tired from our travel. Wagner played a great basketball game and caused us to make a lot of mistakes."

Ralph Sampson scored 19 points, 12 of them in the second half, and hauled in 18 rebounds for the Cavaliers.

The victory improved Virginia's record to 20-0 and extended the Cavaliers' winning streak to 25, the longest current string of victories by any Division I college basketball team.

"No one complained about the organ before. That's really petty. I don't even notice it myself. But (Jennifer) Alley (Carolina coach) has to complain about it. First it was the cow bells (silenced by N.C. State coach Kay Yow), now the organ. That's the ACC mentality. Just picky little stuff that really doesn't mean a thing.

The Pirates take to the road to start a three-game swing that takes them from eastern Tennessee to eastern North Carolina. First, they face East Tennessee State University on Saturday at 6 p.m., then meet Appalachian State in Boone at 3 p.m. on Sunday. Tuesday, they travel to UNC-Wilmington.

Davis Signs Long-Term Pact

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Calling it a reward "on the one hand, and an investment in our future on the other," the Phoenix Suns announced Thursday the signing of All-Star Walter Davis to a multi-year contract.

Terms were not disclosed, although The Phoenix Gazette said the pact is expected to run through the 1985-86 season and provide Davis in excess of $3.2 million.

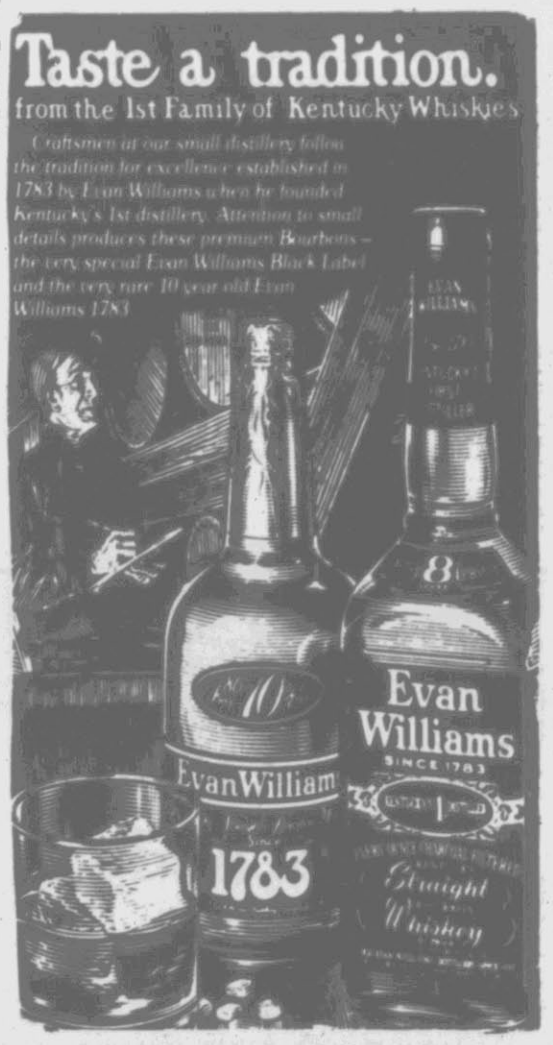

"Walter certainly earned a reward," said Jerry Colangelo, the Suns general manager. "He's in his fourth year in the league and has played in four All-Star games. And he is regarded as one of the premier players in the game."

Davis, 26, still had one year to go on his previous contract, but Colangelo said the club initiated discussions on a new deal over a year ago.

"We just felt it was in our best interests," said Colangelo. "Stability is one of the keys to success in professional basketball, and, as we enter a new phase of free agency, it is important to have our house in order."

Davis expressed satisfaction with the new contract.

Elmore Helps Milwaukee Stop Boston, 113-103

MILWAUKEE (AP) — For Len Elmore, the National Basketball Association season has been one of mostly predictable cycles, all spiraling downward.

Third-string center and 11th man for the talent-loaded Milwaukee Bucks, Elmore had played little of late. When he had played, more often than not it had been poorly. And as his play declined, so did his minutes.

But Elmore played 24 minutes Thursday night, the most for him since Oct. 18, and his statistics don't begin to reflect his contributions to the Bucks' 113-103 victory over the powerful Boston Celtics.

Elmore had seven points and five rebounds. More important, he blocked four shots and neutralized Boston's 7-foot center Robert Parish.

That took away much of Boston's strength — its inside game — and sparked the Bucks after the Celtics had scored the game's first 12 points.

"When we needed him, Lenny Elmore came through — almost every time I needed him," Bucks' Coach Don Nelson said. "He knocked down a couple of shots and his defense was tremendous. And he got a lot of nice boards in heavy traffic."

The Bucks needed Elmore because their regular center, Bob Lanier, missed a second consecutve game because of a knee injury and because Lanier's backup, Harvey Catchings, sat out the last 17:10 of the first half because of three fouls.

Parish scored six points against Catchings during Boston's 12-0 spurt, but managed only 12 after that. Parish committed his third foul with 11:02 left in the second quarter and was benched for the rest of the half.

The Bucks trailed 34-26 at that point, then rallied by using various combinations of small lineups to counter the Celtics' size with speed.

At times they used Elmore or forward Mickey Johnson at center, and over one span used a lineup including forwards Pat Cummings and Marques Johnson and guards Brian Winters, Junior Bridgeman and Sidney Moncrief.

"I thought if we could hold our own on the boards, we could win," Nelson said. "I don't think we did, but we won.

"Several combinations helped us," he said. "There was Brian and Sidney. We were able to establish an outside game with Brian and an inside game with Sidney. We got a nice game from Pat Cummings. With Len at center, we could take advantage of Cummings' outside game."

Coach Bill Fitch, whose Celtics lost a third successive game, said that after Parish went to the bench, "too many guys wanted to take it all on themselves instead of getting into the flow of it."

"When he got back in, it was contagious," Fitch said. "Everybody started throwing it in the ocean. We played hard, bad basketball. We're a fast-breaking team and we made silly mistakes on the break."

The Bucks, sparked by six points by Moncrief, outscored the Celtics 15-6 in the last few minutes of the first half to lead 58-55. They poured in the first eight points of the second half to lead 66-55, then widened the spread to 72-60.

Duo Tied For San Diego Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ron Streck completely dominated the par-5 holes for a share of the first round lead in the $250,000 Wickes-Andy Williams San Diego Open Golf Tournament but was far from confident he'd be able to retain that lofty position in today's second round.

He has to change from the very easy North course at Torrey Pines to the more difficult South.

"The South is much, much harder," Streck said after posting a 7-under-par 65 that tied him for the lead with Tom Jenkins.

"The difference is in the par-5's," Streck said.

And it was on those long holes at the North course that he made most of his round. He chipped in for an eagle on one of them, reached the others using a 2-iron for his second shots, and birdied them with two putts.

"They're a lot tougher on the South," Streck said.

The scoreboard supported his analysis. The first 17 scorers in Thursday's first round all played the 6,667-yard North course. Of the first 59 scorers, only seven played at the South, a 7,002-yard layout stretching along ravines and gullies and bluffs overlooking the Pacific.

The players switch courses today and, after the field is cut at the end of 36 holes, will play the last two rounds at the South.

A single stroke off the first round pace at 66 were Bill Britton, Wayne Levi and Keith Fergus. Tied at 67 were Johnny Miller, who won the Tucson Open earlier this year, Cesar Sanudo and Gary Hallberg.

Bruce Lietzke, winner of the Bob Hope Desert Classic, shot a 68 and stretched his string of consecutive subpar rounds to 12.

The best scores on the South were 69s by veteran Gene Littler, George Burns and Jim Simons.

Tom Watson, the 1980 San Diego champion and the outstanding player in the game over the past four seasons, managed a 71 on the tough South course but takes his title defense to the more yielding North course where, according to Miller "it didn't take a whole big bunch to shoot 5 under."

Streck got that much just on the long holes.

And Jenkins, a 10-year journeyman with one victory to his credit, got his share of the top spot with a fast finish, then produced an even faster getaway.

He birdied his last four holes, two with long putts and two with relatively short ones, then declined to be interviewed and hurried away.

"I broke a club out there and I've got to get it fixed," he said.

Garden Gives Promoters Week To Save Ring Card

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of boxing for Madison Square Garden says the promoters of the all but officially dead Feb. 23 fight card ave about one week to save it. Indications are that the four-bout extravaganza is beyond help, but efforts apparently are being made to salvage part of it.

The Garden presented a default notice Thursday to Muhammad Ali Professional Sports, Inc., and Tiffany Promotions, Inc., in the wake of a civil suit filed earlier this week by Wells Fargo National Bank of California charging it was defrauded by MAPS of $21.3 million. The suit names three MAPS officials as defendants.

Sam Glass, president of Tiffany, scheduled a news conference for today at 11 a.m. EST, and one report says that he will bring three big fights to the Garden in March.

"MAPS and Tiffany have until the close of business Thursday, Feb. 12, 1981, to cure that event of default by tendering the required payment to the Garden," John F.X. Condon, the Garden's boxing head, said in a statement. "In the event that such payment should not be made, the Garden will have no alternative but to cancel the Feb. 23, 1981, program."

If that happens, Condon said the Garden, which is only the landlord for the card and not the promoter, would make full refunds. He said it would try to make earlier refunds if the promoters cancel the card before Feb. 12.

That appears likely since Bilal Muhammad, manager of World Boxing Council light-heavyweight champion Matthew Saad Muhammad, said Thursday his fighter would defend against Vonzell Johnson Feb. 28 in either Atlantic City, N.J., or Las Vegas, Nev. Saad Muhammad was to have fought Eddie Mustafa Muhammad, the WBA champion, Feb. 23.

In addition, Emanuel Steward, manager of World Boxing Association welterweight king Thomas Hearns, said Hearns would not accept a reduction in his $1.25 million purse to defend against Wilfred Benitez. The match reportedly is headed elsewhere, possibly New Orleans or Pontiac, Mich.

The third title fight — Wilfredo Gomez's defense of the WBC junior featherweight crown against Mike Ayala — probably won't take place. Gomez, who has had trouble making the 122-pound limit, is expected to challenge WBC featherweight champion Salvador Sanchez.

That leaves only the heavyweight bout between No.1-ranked Gerry Cooney and Ken Norton.

Junior High Basketball

AYDEN — James Anderson poured in 25 points to lead Ayden Middle School to an easy 45-29 decision over G.R. Whitfield Thursday afternoon in a junior high basketball game.

Cox's girls, who finish the season at 8-0, were led by Angella Smith's 10 points. Farmville, now 5-1, did not have anyone in double figures.

In the boys' game, James Carmon had 16 points for A.G. Cox, now 2-5. Farmville's boys are 6-1.

St. Peter's Loses Three

St. Peter's School lost three games to St. Paul's of New Bern on Wednesday.

In the jv boys game, St. Paul gained a 25-14 win. M. Clark scored six points to lead the losers.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — AGILE CIRCUS CLOWN INTRIGUES TAME TOWNSMEN.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Exclusive Deal For Letterman

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian David Letterman, whose morning talk show on NBC foundered last year, has been given an exclusive contract with the network, NBC officials say.

"We have always been determined to keep David with NBC," network senior vice president Irv Wilson said Thursday. "Viewers should not be deprived of a major talent like David Letterman."

"The David Letterman Show," though praised by some critics, was dropped by the network after four months. However, Wilson said the network was impressed by Letterman.

"Specific plans on how we will use him are not yet complete," Wilson said.

Letterman also has appeared 36 times on the "Tonight" show, 29 times as a guest host.

Set Aside Rock Band's Award

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court has set aside a union arbitration board ruling that awarded $53,290 to Leon Russell and other rock musicians in a contract dispute with their promoter.

The court said Thursday that the contract between promoter Bill Graham and Russell's Scissor-Tail Inc. marketing company did not justify arbitration in the case by a board of the American Federation of Musicians.

The dispute stemmed from a disagreement over profits from a Russell concert.

Julie Andrews Has Dual Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Julie Andrews will play a dual role in "Victor, Victoria," which requires her to play both Victor and Victoria in the MGM comedy to be directed by her husband, Blake Edwards.

Co-starring with Andrews will be Robert Preston, lured out of retirement last year to star in the soon-to-be-released "S.O.B."

"Victor, Victoria," set against the background of Paris in the 1930s, will be filmed entirely at Pinewood Studios near London this March.

Miniseries Is Seymour's Show

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Steinbeck's "East of Eden," with its panoramic view and its parade of lusty characters, begged to be transmuted into a TV miniseries. Why, wasn't Steinbeck thinking miniseries when he penned this epic, with its Abel-Cain and Jezebelian themes?

Of course not, but ABC knows a steamy sex-and-violence yarn when it sees one, and "East of Eden" fits the bill perfectly. Witness ABC's insinuating advertisements for the miniseries in next week's TV pages: Fetching Jane Seymour is pictured in come-hither pose, fingering the lace of her corset. "She would break every law of man and God," teases the ad.

Come to think of it, that approach might work. And even though this seven-hour, three-night rendition (beginning Sunday, playing on Monday and Wednesday) is unevenly acted, it is remarkably true to the text (if not always the spirit) of Steinbeck's work.

Miss Seymour hungrily attacks the large chore of portraying evil Catherine Ames, the demonic seductress who is the centerpiece of this expansive story. This character alone will lure viewers to "East of Eden" next week, so compellingly is it played.

Indeed, Miss Seymour is to this version of Steinbeck's epic what James Dean was to the 1955 Warner Bros.' abridged version, which concerned itself with only the last third of the book.

The rest of the miniseries is rather ordinary TV, flawed by an eccentric performance by Timothy Bottoms in the key role of Adam Trask and a sluggishness, at least in the first five hours, when Miss Seymour is absent from the screen.

By beginning at the beginning, this "East of Eden" takes up the story of the Trask family at the Civil War, where we meet the peg-legged martinet and grand liar, Cyrus Trask, (engagingly played by Warren Oates) who started it all. Cyrus, a disabled Union private who fashions and cashes in on his own apocryphal legend, fathers two singularly dissimilar boys, the sensitive Adam and the rowdy Charles (Bruce Boxleitner).

Charles, jealous of his father's love, picks on Adam, nearly killing him at one point, until Adam is forced by his father to enlist in the Army. There, Adam picks up enough stoutness to carry him through the travails awaiting him in the rest of the long, long story.

And the travails are many. But for the most part, they concern Adam's falling in love and marrying Cathy, then moving to California, where his life becomes, uhm, problematic. His wife dumps him to open up a house of prostitution, his kids (one of whom, Caleb, was the part James Dean played) are weird and his strange relationship with his brother continues.

Timothy Bottoms lends the role a sort of loony air, but not an impassioned craziness; rather, he seems to be always on the verge of breaking into laughter, as if privy to a view of himself playing this part.

Not that it matters much. Bottoms and the others are here mainly to give Jane Seymour someone to say her lines to; it's her show.

Given the imperatives of television miniseries — the inclusion of plenty of sex, violence and sweeping pageantry — "East of Eden" figures just right as a miniseries. Wasn't that obliging of Mr. Steinbeck?

YOUNGER VERSIONS — Miguel Ferrer, top left, and Anne Lockhart, top right, play earlier roles of their real life parents, Jose Ferrer and June Lockhard, bottom, during an episode in which the four appear. The younger set says being the child of a star does not always work to one's advantage in the entertainment world. (AP Laserphoto)

Another Honor For Olivier

LONDON (AP) — Actor Laurence Olivier has been selected by Queen Elizabeth II for membership in the exclusive Order of Merit, Buckingham Palace has announced.

The order has only 24 members and is one of four orders over which the queen has complete control.

Olivier, perhaps best known for his interpretations of Shakespeare, is considered one of the world's greatest living actors.

Others named Thursday to the order were Sir Peter Medawar, a Nobel-prize-winning cancer researcher, and Leonard Cheshire, a World War II bomber ace and founder of the worldwide Cheshire homes for the disabled.

The three replace members of the order who have died: Earl Mountbatten, who was assassinated by Irish Republican Army guerrillas in 1979, artist Graham Sutherland and diplomat Malcolm MacDonald.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Mild weather is expected until Saturday morning from southern California to Texas. Cold weather from Minnesota to the Northeast is indicated and cool weather is forecast elsewhere. Snow flurries are due in the Great Plans and snow for the upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Travelers' advisories were posted for two-thirds of North Carolina today with snow accumulations of one to four inches predicted across the southern and mountain sections.

Rain or sleet was expected in the remainder of the state before the precipitation cleared away tonight, but the National Weather Service said snow was likely again Saturday in the mountain areas.

Forecasters said rain, or rain mixed with snow in the mountains, was likely throughout Saturday night and Sunday.

Temperatures tonight will drop again into the 20s and low 30s. Highs Saturday will be mostly in the 40s.

Forecasters said the precipitation, however, probably would not be sufficient to break a prolonged drought that could become critical for North Carolina agriculture unless more rain occurs.

Agriculturalists at the Raleigh-Durham weather bureau said Thursday that, with the exception of the Sandhills, the entire state is running below normal in rainfall. The central mountain region and northern sections from the Piedmont eastward have been the hardest hit, with Marshall — about 20 miles northwest of Asheville — more than 11 inches below normal. Precipitation in Greensboro is more than 6 inches below normal.

Dry conditions last summer resulted in reduced yields of several crops. Corn yield was down 19 percent, soybeans were down 22 percent and peanuts were down 24 percent as no part of the state received more than 90 percent of its normal rainfall.

December and January were fairly dry months as well, except in the central and southern coastal areas, but below-normal temperatures are expected to take a toll even on the dormant crops.

Refunds On Malpractice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Travelers Insurance Co. has agreed to pay an estimated $46 million in malpractice insurance refunds to 5,500 Southern California doctors over the next 10 years, officials say.

As part of the agreement, announced Thursday by Dr. Jack E. McLeary, president of the Southern California Physicians Council, Travelers turned over an initial refund payment of $18.6 million to the medical group.

The council filed suit against the company, based in Hartford, Conn., to get the refunds, charging the firm grossly overcharged doctors when it boosted malpratice premiums 327 percent in 1976.

The money will be distributed among doctors in Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino, Ventura, San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties who were insured by Travelers from 1976 to 1978.

McLeary said some specialists, such as anesthesiologists, obstetricians, gynecologists and orthopedic surgeons, were paying more than $30,000 a year for malpractice insurance during those years.

Dr. Edward Zalta, president of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, said the high insurance rates came after Travelers lost money on its malpractice insurance program in 1974 and 1975, and as a result raised its premiums.

Zalta said that because of the higher rates, Travelers collected $90 million in premiums between 1976 and 1979.

But Travelers' legal counsel, George McKeon, responded: "At the time the rates were make, based on experience and underwriting projections of that time, it looked like the medical malpractice problem was going to be very serious. Then it plateaued, though now it's on the rise again.

The council negotiated unsuccessfully with Travelers for three years to have the excess premiums refunded, then in 1979 filed suit against the insurance company in state and federal courts.

The settlement was reached out of court.

Dwyer Says Wife 'Entrapped'

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Tehran newspaper reports that Cynthia Dwyer was entrapped in a bogus plot to rescue some of the American hostages and claimed she was trying to prevent another U.S. military raid to free them.

The newspaper Ettelat said Thursday that the prosecutor indicated at Mrs. Dwyer's trial Wednesday that the 49-year-old freelance journalist from Amherst, N.Y., had been set up by two Revolutionary Guards.

According to the newspaper, the guardsmen told Mrs. Dwyer a group of students wanted to free some of the hostages who had been moved from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran after the U.S. rescue attempt failed last April.

The prosecutor said the woman agreed to try to obtain guns and radio equipment from America for the plotters, Ettelat reported.

Mrs. Dwyer, who went to Tehran to report on the Iranian revolution, was arrested May 5. The Swiss Embassy, which represents U.S. interests in Iran, said she was tried on espionage charges at a one-day session of a Revolutionary Court Wednesday and that a verdict is expected Monday.

Ettelat published a transcript of some of the testimony at Mrs. Dwyer's trial in which she denied she was a spy and said she was in sympathy with the Iranian revolution.

Under questioning by a judge, she said she met a man named Massoud Mohgadda Zadeh in Tehran but did not know he was a Revolutionary Guard.

"He came to me and said he knew some students who wanted to solve the hostage issue peacefully," the transcript said.

The judge asked her if the students were in favor of solving the issue peacefully, why did they demand guns and radio equipment capable of reaching the United States?

"Massoud spoke very slowly, in such a way that I lost many of his words," she replied. "But I understood he wanted radio equipment for contacting the United States...to say a military raid would not solve the hostage problem and that the issue could be solved peacefully."

Her husband, Dr. John F. Dwyer, said his wife was the victim of a "clear-cut case of entrapment" whose "humanitarianism maybe crossed over her journalistic sense."

Dwyer told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from their home in upstate New York that the government agents who later arrested his wife contacted her and told her she could help five hostages who had been sent to the Mashhad area of northeastern Iran after the rescue attempt.

"There were some dissidents — she was told — who were going to try and free them and they wanted her simply to tell somebody about it," he said. "They wanted the 'spy' to contact her government."

Dwyer, who is on the faculty of Buffalo State College, said his wife was told the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz, from which the helicopters used in the unsuccessful rescue attempt took off, was ready to send another helicopter for the second attempt. He said she was asked to help set up the arrangements and timing.

Two days before her arrest, Mrs. Dwyer telephoned Max McCarthy of the Buffalo, N.Y., Evening News and described the purported plot to free the five hostages, her husband reported. He said he believed her telephone was tapped, and her conversation furnished the pretext for her arrest.

State Department spokesman William Dyess said in Washington he was hopeful Mrs. Dwyer would be released Monday. But he said he had no concrete information to support that hope.

Ettelat also reported that Mohi Sobhani, a press officer for the Iranian Foreign Ministry, and Mrs. Dwyer's interpreter were tried with her. But it did not make clear whether Sobhani was an Iranian-born naturalized American of that name whose brother in the United States reported he was freed Wednesday after five months in jail.

The Sobhani family in the United States said their relative was a computer specialist who had lived in Iran since 1974. They said he was freed on $1 million bond arranged by them.

There was still no information available on a third American held by the Iranians, Zia Nassry, a native of Afghanistan and a travel agent in New York City who went to Tehran in March to try to open a clinic for Afghan refugees and was arrested shortly after his arrival.

Meanwhile, Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told an interviewer from the Times of London that four Britons held in Iran since last August will definitely be freed, but he gave no release date.

No charges have been made against the four, and documents which had been thought to indicate they were spies have proved false, he was quoted as saying.

The four Britons are Dr. John Coleman and his wife and Jean Waddell, all three missionaries, and businessman Andrew Pyke. They were arrested during a period of anti-British last summer.

President Reagan's Birthday

President Ronald Reagan celebrates his 70th birthday today, 17 days after taking the oath of office. He is the oldest United States President ever to be inaugurated. The United States Constitution requires a President to be a natural born U.S. citizen at least 35 years old. However, because the Constitution sets no maximum age, no one is too old to become President. Prior to President Reagan, William Henry Harrison, who was 68 when he became President, was the oldest person to be inaugurated. When President William McKinley was assassinated, Vice President Theodore Roosevelt, who was then 42, became the youngest man ever to take the presidential oath.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the youngest man ever elected President of the U.S.?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Quebec is Canada's largest province.

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

Before playing from dummy to the first trick, pause to consider your line of play. You don't get a bonus for finishing the hand quickly.

South was almost too strong for a one no trump opening bid. However, there was no arguing with the final contract, which probably would have been reached no matter what the opening bid had been.

West led a low heart, and declarer, seeing the possibility of scoring three tricks in the suit, immediately played low from dummy. East won the king and paused to take stock. Unless West held both the queen and jack of hearts—unlikely in view of the opening bid—that suit offered few prospects. The diamond suit looked much more inviting, so at trick two East shifted to the jack of diamonds.

South finessed the queen of diamonds, West won the king and returned the suit, forcing out South's stopper. Declarer was unable to come to nine tricks without setting up the club suit. West took the ace of clubs on the first lead of the suit and returned a diamond, and East reeled off three tricks in the suit for a two trick set.

There are those who would commiserate with declarer because both red-suit finesses lost. Others would blame him for a thoughtless play at the first trick!

South could have assured his contract against even a tidal wave of distributional quirks by winning the ace of hearts at trick one. The heart finesse was not an essential ingredient of a winning campaign; establishing four clubs was.

Once the club suit is set up, declarer has at least nine tricks—three spades, one heart, one diamond and four clubs. The play of the ace of hearts might cost a trick or two if West has the king, but it provides absolute assurance against East gaining the lead for a shot through the queen of diamonds before the ace of clubs is driven out.
