Reagans Settle In At 1600 Pennsylvania

FROM WASHINGTON, D.C. TO PITT COMMUNITY COLLEGE... Dr. Robert Maddox, a former speech writer and special assistant to the president during the Carter administration, now serves as an administrative assistant to the president of PCC, Dr. William Fulford. He will work with Dr. Fulford and

Dr. Charles Russell in the area of development, an area that Maddox refers to as "building coalitions, similar to what I was doing in Washington." Maddox, his wife and three children live in Pactolus. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

For Dr. Robert Maddox, the transition from the White House to Pitt Community College was a smooth one.

"We were not quite ready to leave yet," said the former speech writer and special assistant to Jimmy Carter, "but we are glad to be here. The move was not so much painful emotionally, but painful physically — the agony of moving itself."

Maddox, who served Carter from 1979 until the former president left office, now works as an administrative assistant to Dr. William Fulford, president of Pitt Community College. He now considers himself and his family "just plain eastern North Carolina folk."

"The time I spent in Washington was a very exciting time," commented the Baptist minister. "I came to know some extraordinary Americans and at one point I was at the hub of 60 or so spiritual leaders."

"I also had the privilege of meeting some prominent religious leaders of the nation — Catholic bishops, Billy Graham, Jerry Falwell and many others."

The highlight of his stay in Washington, said Maddox, was when he accompanied then-First Lady Rosalyn Carter to Thailand to assess the Cambodian refugee problem. "If it had not been so sad it would have been a nice trip," he explained. "As it was, it was agonizing and heart-rending to spend time in a place and situation like that."

Maddox considers himself lucky to have enjoyed what he termed "an unusually close relationship with the president and his family for the position I held." He and his family had meals at the White House, visited Camp David with the first family, and spent some nights watching television and talking with the Carters. "The president and I had some long, deep conversations," commented the former special assistant. "We discussed the world situation and life in general. He is certainly an interesting man to talk with and he epitomizes, to me, Southern gentility."

Maddox's friendship with Jimmy Carter began in the mid-1960's, when Maddox was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Vienna, Ga. Jody Powell, former White House press secretary, was a member of the congregation, and when Carter preached at the church, Powell began to work with him.

Maddox moved to Atlanta to pastor a church there and Jack Carter was in his congregation. The Baptist minister began to do some speech writing for him, and finally in 1979, President Carter and Jody Powell called Maddox and asked him to come to Washington.

"My work here is similar to what I did in Washington, but it's different also," he explained. "In Washington I was building coalitions, and here I'm basically doing the same thing working with Dr. Fulford and Dr. Russell in development. We hope to build some buildings and perhaps create an alumni association." Maddox describes the two jobs as being "different circumstances, different players, but the same thing in the end."

Maddox, now settled in Pactolus, said he is presently struggling with an outline for a book on religion and politics. He published a book one and a-half years ago entitled "A Commentary On Acts," (an interpretation of the biblical book of Acts), and reported that sales have been "fairly successful."

His wife, Linda, also authored a book called "Rosalyn Carter — Friend and First Lady." "This book is actually the story of one of Mrs. Carter's daughters-in-law, but my wife wrote it," he explained.

Maddox attended Baylor University, Southwestern Baptist Seminary, and received his doctorate degree in Theology from Emory University. In relation to his work in Washington, he feels this religious background has given him "personal sensitivity and a sense of ethical responsibility that has made my work more meaningful."

"I hope that my experience in Washington will serve as an inspiration to do better and better things," Maddox commented. "I don't think I'll look back and say this was the highest point of my life because I want to go forward."

"I feel a responsibility to preserve the experiences I had in Washington," he continued, "and to conserve them into some kind of constructive future."

Few Turn Out For Protest

MIAMI (UPI) — Only one man with a bullhorn and a couple dozen non-demonstrators showed for a march and a rally Saturday protesting convictions of three young blacks in the riot murders of three whites.

At the Dade County Justice building, where the second phase of the demonstration was scheduled, only a white New York tourist in search of a map of the city and two Latin teen-agers on bicycles turned out.

The scanty crowd appeared at Afro Square Park, a neighborhood recreation facility only a few blocks from the Liberty City site where the three whites were slain. A man with a bullhorn stood ready to address a rally, but most of the spectators appeared more interested in basking under a warm sun after days of abnormal chill.

A similar rally at the Dade County Justice building resulted May 17, 1980, in three days of rioting that killed 18 people and caused $100 million in property damage.

The demonstrations Saturday were called by a group known as the Miami Task Force, and apparently supported by at least some members of the Citizens Coalition for Racial Justice.

After Friday night's jury verdict, Leo Harris, a member of the Citizens Coalition, said, "We're going to fight back." After 45 hours of marathon deliberation, a jury of nine whites and three blacks Friday night found Samuel Lightsey Jr., 17, guilty of three counts of second degree murder. It found Lawrence Capers, 25, and his brother, Leonard, 20, guilty of three counts of third degree murder.

The jury of seven women and five men acquitted the fourth defendant, Patrick Moore, 17.

Lightsey faces possible life imprisonment. The Capers brothers may be sentenced to as long as 15 years on each count. Judge Mario Goderich ordered a pre-sentence investigation and set sentencing for March 17.

The three were found guilty in the deaths of Benny Higdon, 21, Robert Owens and Charles Barreca, both 15. The victims were dragged from their car beaten and stoned to death by a mob of about 30 persons in a supermarket parking lot.

Mrs. Betty Lightsey, a tiny woman sitting on the front row in the courtroom when the verdicts were announced, fell wailing and screaming to the floor.

Social Programs Are Target Of Budget Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Social programs would pay a heavy price and states and cities would have to shoulder more of the burden under President Reagan's plan to prevent "economic calamity" by deep cuts in the 1982 federal budget.

Reagan will unveil his economic program — a two-pronged attack aimed at chopping up to $50 billion from the budget next year and giving large tax cuts to individuals and business — on Feb. 18.

He told a national television audience Thursday the ax would fall evenly, hitting every segment of the federal budget.

Although he did not mention defense, disclosures about the plan dribbling out all last week indicate he will keep to his previously stated intention of exempting the military budget — one area everyone knows will grow substantially next year.

"Our spending cuts will not be at the expense of the truly needy," Reagan said. "We will, however, seek to eliminate benefits to those who are not truly qualified by reason of need."

But the plan formulated by the Office of Management and Budget under director David Stockman will hit food stamps and unemployment benefits, grants to cities and states for highways and Medicaid, funds for energy development, foreign aid and more.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., thinks Reagan should have been cruelly blunt and admitted that his proposals indeed would hurt.

"He missed an opportunity (to explain) we're going to have to make sharp cuts," Proxmire, the Senate's self-appointed fiscal watchdog, said. "He's trying to cut taxes by $30 billion to $40 billion. There's no way you can do that without making these very sharp cuts."

If Reagan gets the large tax cut he seeks, it will reduce revenues which pay for government spending programs and the budget will have to be slashed unmercifully to avoid a huge and politically humiliating federal deficit in 1982 — the first full fiscal year of Reagan's administration.

Monroe Named To Council

ECU News Bureau
Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, associate dean at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has been named to the National Advisory Environmental Health Science Council.

The council is composed of 15 members nationally recognized as leaders in fundamental sciences, medical sciences and public affairs. Monroe, a specialist in internal medicine, will serve a four-year term.

The council reviews applications for grants relating to the environmental health sciences and recommends approval of worthy projects to the National Institutes of Health. The council is also responsible for surveying research in environmental health and identifying incentives to stimulate additional study.

"Dr. Monroe's appointment to this national council reflects the increased awareness of the caliber of individuals associated with the faculty and administration at the ECU School of Medicine," said Dr. William E. Laupus, medical school dean. "We are delighted that he will contribute his experience and expertise to this very important committee on environmental health."

Monroe joined ECU in 1968 as the first dean of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions and director of health affairs. In 1971 he was named vice chancellor for health affairs, a position in which he guided the development of the School of Medicine as well as programs in the allied health and nursing schools.

As a leader of the university's expanding health science programs, Monroe organized the Eastern Area Health Education Center involving 16 hospitals in the region. He has served as president of the board of directors since the center was established in 1974.

Monroe currently coordinates the development of undergraduate and graduate medical education programs in Eastern North Carolina hospitals and health centers and holds a faculty appointment as professor in the Department of Medicine.

He is a fellow of the American College of Physicians and serves on the editorial board of the "North Carolina Medical Journal." He is a member of the State Health Coordinating Council and numerous committees and organizations concerned with health services delivery and health manpower education and training.

Delay Licenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission expects to delay considering final licenses for three nuclear power plants in California and North and South Carolina from this year until 1982.

The delays were outlined in a report to Congress listing scheduled licensing dates next year and the following year for 11 reactors facing possible safety problems or legal objections.

The reactors in question are at the Diablo Canyon plant near San Luis Obispo, Calif.; the William B. McGuire power station near Charlotte, N.C.; and the Virgil C. Summer station near Jenkinville, S.C.

Part of the latest delays could result from renewed moves to block the licensing following the near meltdown in March 1979 at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

In explaining the latest delays in the NRC report to Congress, chairman John F. Ahearn noted: "Since the hearing process in the past has proven to be longer in duration than we projected, the staff has re-examined the assumptions used in developing the target schedules for contested cases."

The new date for expected licensing of the McGuire plant is March 1982 and the approval date for the Summer plant is June 1982.

FATILITY — A Grifton man was killed Saturday morning when the car he was driving apparently ran off N.C. 11 North of Ayden and hit a guard rail. According to Pitt County Medical Examiner Dr. Lawrence Harris, the man was identified as Richard Allen Hamilton, Jr. of Grifton. Dr. Harris estimated the accident occurred between 3 and 4 a.m. The official said the cause of death was related to head injuries. He also said Hamilton was alive when he was found at about 6:25 a.m. and died shortly after. The car, completely demolished in the mishap, skidded down an embankment about 600 feet before coming to a rest upside down. Investigation is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

To Budget Commission

Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville was installed for the second time as a member of the State Advisory Budget Commission Friday, at the Capitol, by Secretary of State Thad Eure. The commission is composed of 12 persons who assist the governor in formalization of the budget, and "act as watch dogs of the treasury," according to Bundy.

Review of state institutions including universities, community colleges and correctional institutions, and consideration of their financial requests is one duty of the commission.

The first woman ever to be chosen for the commission, Mrs. Betty McCain of Wilson, and first black, Henry Frye of Greensboro, were appointed along with Bundy and nine other members.

Appointments to the commission are made by three persons: four by the governor, who may be chosen from anywhere in the state, four by the Lt. Governor and four by the Speaker of the House, both of whom must choose from within the General Assembly.

Waste Dumper Story Right Out Of Novel

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The story William Carracino told the federal judge seemed right out of a novel. The mob was out to kill him and state investigators wanted to jail him before he could say another damaging word to a congressional committee.

But investigators in New York say it's more than fiction. As the two states wrestled over him, the admitted one-time illegal waste dumper lay in a hospital bed Saturday, wondering whether he will be a New York informant or a New Jersey inmate.

Or dead. "We do believe his life is in danger," says John Fine, a lawyer for the Hazardous Waste Committee of the New York Senate.

"There are many people who would like to see Carracino dead," says Fine, who won't name names. "He's the linchpin in many of the cases under investigation throughout the Northeast and not only involving hazardous waste, but official corruption, misfeasance and malfeasance."

The 53-year-old Carracino said he feared for his life in an emotional — but futile — appeal for protection when he appeared in a Newark courtroom to fight a subpoena from a New Jersey grand jury.

"I'm being chased by the mob," the stocky toxic-waste disposal executive began. "Where do I go, your honor? I don't know no place to go no more."

Judge Vincent Biunno refused to grant a temporary order Wednesday barring the state Division of Criminal Justice from arresting Carracino for refusing to answer questions before the grand jury.

Carracino suffered a heart attack and was hospitalized when he was arrested by state investigators on contempt charges hours later. He was listed in fair condition at a Union hospital where he is under armed guard.

The congressional staff has been probing the way New Jersey handled its own toxic waste investigations. Carracino was subpoenaed to testify before a state grand jury Jan. 20.

Claiming he already told the state all he knew, Carracino testified three times, but drew the line when, he says, New Jersey officials wanted to know what he told the congressional committee.

New Jersey only wants to know how Carracino got confidential Division of Criminal Justice documents, insists Tom Cannon, spokesman for the state Attorney General.

HS said Carracino is of no use as an informant because New Jersey already knew most of what he told them.

New York investigators had tried to protect their witness by making Carracino a New York legislative aide.

"As a legislative aide, Carracino is bound by law not to testify anywhere without permission from the committee chairman," said one New York investigator.

Carracino also said he is worried that organized crime figures are behind threatening telephone calls and the alleged takeover of Chemical Control Corp. by gunpoint four years ago. Carracino is former president of the Elizabeth firm, where a dump site was heavily damaged in a spectacular fire last April.

New Jersey authorities want to jail Carracino on his conviction for dumping dangerous wastes. The two misdemeanor charges carry a two- to three-year jail term. The state Supreme Court ruled last month that Carracino could remain free pending appeal of the conviction.

At stake are investigations spanning months and involving state and congressional committees, police and prosecutors in a dozen states, and dumping operations from Pennsylvania to New Hampshire.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Steven Cohen

Sometimes it seems harder to stay healthy than ever before. New drugs and chemicals are being introduced all the time. Chiropractic, the world's oldest, drugless healing profession, believes that good health can best be obtained and maintained by allowing the natural recuperative powers of the body to function unimpeded. In the weeks and months to come we will be discussing how chiropractic works and its role in preventive health care. Chiropractic is a natural way to good health. Join us for your body's sake.

The staff of FAMILY CHIROPRACTIC HEALTH & ACCIDENT SERVICE, Mill St., Winterville, is pleased to welcome you as a reader to this column. LOFTY PLUME ... A steam plume drifts in calm air above clouds, away from Mount St. Helens as an immense lava dome grows on the volcano's floor. (AP Laserphoto)

Lava Dome Doubles In Size

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — A "non-explosive eruption" has more than doubled the size of the steaming lava dome rising in the center of volcanic Mount St. Helens' mile-wide crater, scientists said Saturday.

Thick steam plumes shot 2,000 feet above the crater rim as the dome continued to swell, the work of the volcano's internal, infernal construction project. Low-level seismic "events" died away after 11 p.m. Friday and the mountain remained relatively quiet as the dome continued to grow with fiery hot magma rising like toothpaste from the volcano's throat, said Tom Corcoran, spokesman of the Forest Service.

The latest report from the U.S. Geological Survey said the dome had swollen both laterally and vertically — reaching a height of about 600 feet — adding roughly another 100 feet overnight. Scientists had reported Friday the lava dome grew to 500 feet in about 24 hours — twice as high and substantially wider than Seattle's Kingdome.

The Forest Service maintained its eruption alert and "red zone" closure, although seismic activity under the mountain had all but ceased. Most scientists expected the volcano to follow the pattern of its eruption in late Deember when the dome grew from 150 to 300 feet.

"This eruption appears to be following closely the eruption of late December and early January," said Kathy Cashman of the U.S. Geological Survey.

"In that case, the dome continued to grow for five or six days after seismic activity had ceased," she said, adding that the USGS would be monitoring the dome's changes closely for the next few days.

Chris Newhall, the Mount St. Helens hazards coordinator for the USGS, said the current dome-building process increased the risk close to the mountain but apparently has decreased the risk of a major blowout like the May 18 eruption which spread ash across much of the state and left 63 persons dead or missing.

"I think the mountain is still in a very active state," Newhall added.

The latest "peaceful" eruption began early Thursday, when a buildup of earthquake swarms and several blasts of steam 2,000 feet above the rim of the crater signalled the first volcanic activity of 1981 for Mount St. Helens.

Despite its new growth, the lava dome still has a long way to go before it fills the 1.2-mile-wide, half-mile-deep cavity created when the volcano blew off a cubic mile of its top May 18.

Aid Policy Viewed Selfish Or Extravagant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Selfish or extravagant — the U.S. foreign aid policy is viewed both ways. In recent years, the number of critics has been growing, while defenders are in retreat.

But probably no one has gone after foreign aid like the Reagan administration's new budget director, David Stockman, who tried to whack $2.6 billion out of the $8 billion former President Carter wanted Congress to approve for fiscal 1982.

While the final cut likely will be less, Stockman's proposal shows how far foreign aid has fallen on the nation's list of priorities.

Robert S. McNamara, the outgoing president of the World Bank, complained last year that the U.S. aid effort has been "disgraceful," and that was when Democrats controlled Congress and the White House.

U.S. foreign aid totals about one-fifth of 1 percent of the nation's gross national product, less than almost any other major non-Communist industrial nation. Congress has not approved a foreign aid bill for two years, maintaining funding close to levels of three years ago.

Former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, before leaving office, said Congress has been "short-sighted" and "stingy." He said the nation now provides less aid than 10 years ago, after discounting for inflation.

Foreign aid does have some powerful support in the Reagan administration from Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, who so far has held off Stockman's budget ax.

Haig said at a news conference he hopes others will recognize that foreign aid "is sometimes a very cost-effective vehicle for insuring that the ideals and interests of this country are carried out effectively abroad."

It is often difficult to sort out where the money goes and for what purpose.

Americans are traditionally sympathetic to the world's poor, but of the $8 billion that Carter requested for foreign aid in 1982, less than $2.5 billion would provide humanitarian aid to the poorest nations.

Most of the rest is given for political reasons, although some of that ends up helping the poor, too.

For example, Israel, not usually thought of as a poor nation, received about $2.2 billion in the fiscal 1981 budget, while Egypt received $1.3 billion. They are likely to receive at least that much again in 1982.

Aid that supports political objectives is not targeted for big cuts by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget. "The reductions in aid would mainly affect the poorer countries of Africa and the Asian subcontinent," an OMB report said.

Carter's proposed 1982 package includes both aid given through international lending institutions, such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, and aid given directly to other countries.

Israel and Egypt receive most of the direct aid, which also is channeled into the Peace Corps, the Agency for International Development and military assistance. Military aid would amount to $2.89 billion in 1982.

Most of the humanitarian aid is funneled through the World Bank and its subsidiary, the International Development Association, which provides development loans to nations so poor that private banks won't risk lending them money.

Carter last year committed the United States to IDA contributions of just over $1 billion a year for three years, or $3.2 billion, beginning in fiscal 1981. Contributions by other wealthy nations raised the total to $12 billion.

But Congress didn't approve the U.S. contribution last year and if the new Congress also balks, the IDA may collapse.

The IDA made $3.84 billion in loans last year, 90 percent of it to nations where annual per capita income is less than $360, primarily in Africa and Asia. The money is lent for specific projects, such as irrigation, road construction and electrical power projects. Loans are interest-free, although the principal is to be repaid.

Most of the aid goes to nations generally friendly to the United States or where there is a strong U.S. interest, such as India, although a $50 million loan to Communist Vietnam in 1978 aroused the wrath of many members of Congress.

The World Bank on its own makes loans to less poor nations at interest rates that are higher, but still favorable. These loans also usually go to countries friendly to the United States, such as Brazil, South Korea, Turkey, Thailand and the Philippines.

Critics of U.S. foreign aid usually focus on the IDA and World Bank money, contending that the United States doesn't have enough control over where it goes.

Governor's Award

Gov. Jim Hunt had announced that the Greenville Pitt County Board of Realtors will be presented the Governor's Award, for service to the community, Tuesday.

Tim McKay, media coordinator for the Governor's Office of Civic Affairs, will present the award to the local board at its regular meeting at noon at the Greenville Country Club. McKay will also speak to the Realtors about the work of the Civic Affairs office.

The Governor's Award is given to organizations in cases of exemplary service to a community, and contributions to a community as a whole.

The board is receiving the award in recognition for its service to Pitt County through the board's continuing "Make America Better" campaign efforts and its annual "Private Property Week" program. Both programs won awards presented by the National Association of Realtors in 1980.

Civic Center Deserves Study

The Pitt County commissioners have set in motion the paper work for having a study done on developing a civic center in the area.

The action was taken after the representatives of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce appeared before the commissioners.

If a grant can be obtained the county study can be implemented.

Reid Hooper, task force chairman, told the commissioners that what is being considered is a coliseum-type building, and the study would show what is needed and financially possible.

There are, of course, all kinds of possibilities for use of such a facility as a civic center and in conjunction with programs at East Carolina University.

We are rapidly becoming a location for state and regional meetings and such a center could be a great aid in attracting gatherings.

With taxpayers in revolt, federal funds dwindling and the state reluctant to take on new projects, it may not be easy to come up with funds for a community center. Nevertheless the project can be of such value to Pitt County that we need to study the feasibility of the project.

Living Better Than The Taxpayers

The Internal Revenue Service reports that tax collections exceeded the rate of inflation last year.

For fiscal 1980 U. S. tax revenues rose 12.8 percent compared with the cost of living increase of 12.7 and personal income rise of 10 percent.

It means the government is living better than the taxpayers who support it . . . and obviously it is time for an adjustment.

THIS MORNING

Lesson About Government

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Some weeks of a regular session of the North Carolina General Assembly are always spent helping new members learn their way around both the building and the legislative process.

State Rep. William T. Watkins tells a simple story to help his less experienced colleagues get a grasp on separations of power.

We in the General Assembly are not the engineers . . . we don't drive the train. And we aren't the firemen . . . we aren't supposed to shovel on the coal to make it go faster.

We're the brakemen. We are supposed to tell the engineer when to go and how fast to go and especially, we are here to put on the brakes, Watkins recounts.

During the recession of 1974-75 Watkins headed a new committee in the General Assembly which reviewed the "base budget" of continuing state agency expenses, and managed to trim nearly $200 million in that category. He is convinced, now, that major savings can't be made by scrutinizing minor line items in the state budget.

"We are going to have to look at big budget categories with an eye to whether entire programs are necessary. And we have to look at state jobs . . . that's where the money is," Watkins says. Nickles and Dimes

Gov. Jim Hunt's key man in the General Assembly, deputy budget officer Marvin Dorman, agrees with that assessment of the budget process this year. Already the legislators have begun the laborious task of reviewing agency requests line by line.

"There just isn't room for cutting. Anything they do this year will be just nickel and diming," says Dorman who was a lead person in preparing the budget which Gov. Hunt characterizes as "lean and progressive".

From the Top
All of which is causing some fiscal conservatives to become more convinced that the General Assembly must get its own budget experts, computers, and information so it can challenge the governor's budget.

Current thinking, however, is that the Legislature need not go through the tedious process of building a budget line by line. That gets bogged down in debate over whether it takes eight people and two cars or nine people and two and one-half cars to get a particular job done.

The big question is whether that particular job needs doing at all. As one veteran lawmaker puts it: "We ought to let the governor continue to dress the budget up . . . and we ought to undress it".

Prison Inflation
Money isn't the only thing inflated these days. It is common to hear government officials talking about projections and actualities.

Correction Secretary Jim Woodard says inflation has hit the prisons. Projections for inmate population at the beginning of 1981 called for 14,700, and building went forth apace to meet that need.

Actual current population is 15,200, Woodard says, adding that "we have more people in the system than we are able to take care of without some crowding."

Some of the population increase results from mandatory longer prison sentences for certain crimes, and some results from the fact that intensive work was done to release any inmates eligible for parole as a step to relieve overcrowding. That early release measure helped for awhile, but means that fewer paroles are currently being granted because those remaining are "harder cases".

Meanwhile, debate continues over whether implementation of the state's Fair Sentencing Act this year will cause a spurt in population. Most experts predict it will because, generally, sentences will be longer.

Sunday Morning Notes

Remember the guy who asked for 50 cents so he could purchase his asthma medicine?

Jane Whichard, wife of our co-publisher says he or someone like him, approached her and asked for 75 cents for asthma medicine. That's not all. Someone approached Jack Whichard on the street and asked for $2 for asthma medicine.

Which all goes to show that the cost of asthma medicine is going up every day.

And Sue Fernald, an ECU student who works with us, says on her way home to Chapel Hill, she noticed a combination business named Kar-isma. It was a car care and beauty care concern, two items we apparently put on an equal level in our society.

When you think about it, the last ten days have had about everything in the way of weather.

There was the snow a week ago Friday with the slush on the streets freezing solid that night.

Then last Sunday went from temperatures in the teens to balmy temperatures during the afternoon and evening.

The quick change brought on strong winds which did damage to some buildings on Dickinson Avenue and some farm buildings.

Then during the week it was back to temperatures in the teens again. Monday was groundhog day, when that creature predicts what the weather will be for the rest of the winter.

One observer was moved to comment, "I wish that crazy animal would just stay in his hole."

It would be nice, but the ground hog has its duty to perform.

A man was walking on Second Street with his mail tucked under his arm. An envelope fell from the bundle.

"You dropped an envelope," a helpful stranger called.

"The man picked up it and frowned. 'Why did you tell me?' he answered. 'It's a bill.'"

Then there's the man who drops all his bills in a hat and pulls out one to pay each month.

Where Eagles RALLY

By FRANK THORSBERG
REELFOOT LAKE, Tenn. (UPI) — The national symbol, the majestic bald eagle, scans the open water from a perch at the top of a lakefront cypress tree.

In a blink, the white-topped bird of prey is off with one flap of its wings. The airborne angler focuses on a glint in the lake, a tiny ripple on the surface, and goes into a dive.

It pulls up just short of the water. A small fish wriggles in its grasp as the eagle returns to its perch to gnaw on its catch.

The scene is repeated again and again each day. The eagles are back at Reelfoot Lake.

Large numbers of the wintering birds flock to the lake — an 18,000 acre expanse of shallow water ringed by stands of eerie cypress trees which stand on knobby, stilt-like roots in the water.

Many bald eagles spend the cooler months of the year at the southern lake away from the harsh northern climate.

More than 100 eagles were counted in January. They flock to Reelfoot for several reasons. The lake seldom freezes over and the cypress trees provide an excellent vantage point for catching the lake's bountiful supply of fish.

"You cannot see this type of concentration of eagles in any other spot," said Charlie Gagen, a student naturalist working at Reelfoot this winter. "That's what makes this so unique. They (eagles) are not so spread out like they are in say Alaska or someplace else."

Like the eagles, President Harry S. Truman liked to vacation at Reelfoot because of the excellent fishing.

During the winter months, commercial fisherman who work the lake take a protective attitude toward the

A Triumph In Diplomacy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan's just-concluded visit here climaxed a triumph in secret diplomacy by the Reagan administration conducted out of an obscure downtown Washington office before the newly-elected president had assumed power.

Had it not been for President Reagan's informal intervention through his national security assistant, Richard V. Allen, Chun certainly would not have been Reagan's guest at Blair House. Korean dissident Kim Dae Jung would have been executed, U.S.-Korean relations would be at an all-time low and South Korea would stand as an outlaw nation in the eyes of the world.

Instead, Gen. Chun's regime has won legitimacy, its more moderate elements strengthened enough to plant hope for democratization ahead. Reagan's mixture of determination and flexibility suggests he may not only restore tattered alliances such as the Korean link but possibly achieve more in human rights than Jimmy Carter's self-righteous approach.

When we visited Seoul last September, the situation looked bleak. Chun's most moderate advisers contended he could not bow to Carter administration public demands to spare the life of Kim Dae Jung, accused of subversion and sedition. If he did, Chun's brief presidential tenure might end abruptly. Having just formalized his previous role as strong man of the military regime, Chun was dependent on the hard-line young colonels who engineered the coup that brought him to power. They would not tolerate losing face by surrendering to Carter.

Consequently, there is agreement in Korea that Kim would be dead today had President Carter been re-elected. Actually, the supposition there immediately after Nov. 4 was that Reagan's win also doomed Kim. Jubilant colonels in Seoul toasted the Republican victory, rejoicing that troublesome Carter had been replaced by permissive Reagan who would give them a free hand on Kim Dae Jung. They misread Ronald Reagan. He authorized Allen to leak a story that the president-elect opposed Kim's execution and believed it would harm U.S.-Korean relations. A news report quoting a "senior aide" to that effect appeared in the Nov. 18 New York Times.

It did not do the trick. Koreans well placed outside the government informed us that the colonels interpreted it as political posturing to protect Reagan from being blamed for Kim's death. The Koreans told us Reagan must do more to prevent the execution before Jan. 20. But if he went public, Reagan's advice would have to be spurned, just as Carter's was, in order to save Chun's face. The recommendation by these Koreans: a confidential letter to Chun from Reagan, delivered by an American or Korean businessman. We relayed this information to the Reagan camp. A letter to Chun was quickly ruled out. So was any other direct activity by the president-elect. Nor could he work through the State Department while Carter was president; starting Nov. 4, the Chun regime would not seriously discuss Kim with U.S. diplomats. How then could a catastrophe in U.S.-Korean relations be prevented before Reagan had the power to act?

With Reagan's approval, Dick Allen started secret negotiations with Korean emissaries, most held in his private office at 16th and I Streets here. To guard against publicity that could have aborted the delicate process, nothing was said to the State Department.

Allen's first talks were held in November with Gen. Lew Byung Hyun, chairman of the Korean Joint Chiefs of Staff. Allen was blunt: Killing Kim would do irreparable damage to South Korea's relations with the world, particularly Japan and the U.S.; hopes of reviving the alliance under Reagan would disappear.

In December, Allen stepped up the pace. He conferred twice with the man sent by Chun to Washington to represent him personally; the Korean Embassy's minister, Gen. Sohn Jang Rae. Allen

Other Editors Say In Bad Company

(The Raleigh Times)
The male red-winged blackbird is a beauty. His crimson epaulets are bordered with bright yellow against glossy black plumage. The females and young ones are nondescript brownish and streaked.

But red-wings and other blackbirds have one bad habit. In winter they flock together with other birds of black feather — four million or more in one roosting spot.

Right now, Rocky Mount, Greenville, Rich Square and Burlington are favored, and this aggravation is not only noisy, it is nasty.

"Birds of the Carolinas", by Potter, Parnell and Teulings, just published in time for this Christmas, says: "Numerous control programs have been instituted, ranging from attempts to frighten the birds by making loud noises to killing them with guns or chemicals. Other than achieving very local short term success, these efforts have been ineffective."

Because the blackbirds take over the sky for an hour leaving the roost at sunrise and another hour returning, some years ago Moody Air Force Base in Georgia had to reschedule training flights so as not to run into this mass of millions of birds.

The flocks are usually made up of grackles, starlings, cowbirds and various other blackbirds including red-wings. Along about March most of them move on northward. But many red-wings stay. "Birds of the Carolinas" says "once red-winged blackbirds disperse to their nesting grounds, they become good neighbors, breeding in small colonies in marshy places and consuming great quantities of grass and weed seeds and harmful insects."

One of the surest signs of spring is hearing the red-wings gurgling, "O-ka-lee, kong-a-ree, gug-lug-gee". This creaking chorus comes after the crumb-bums they've been wintering with have all gone.

Oil Prices Didn't Heed Script

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The full decontrol of oil prices so far hasn't quite been the gentle, gradual experience some of the experts claimed it would be.

Within a week after President Reagan ordered it, all the major oil companies have posted big price increases. The largest, Exxon, has raised its wholesale prices twice, for a total of eight cents a gallon, in that time.

The barrage of price-increase announcements from around the industry has been so steady that it's become a sort of daily newspaper feature, like the comics or the stock tables.

It certainly hasn't followed the script outlined by the Reagan administration, which said prices might go up three to five cents, or by economists at one large bank, who declared just a few days ago:
"With inventories bulging and consumer conservation efforts expected to intensify, the oil producers may be reluctant to pass quickly on to the public the full price effects of oil decontrol."

Some reluctance. Now, nobody ever claimed that decontrol of oil prices would rank with, say, a pay raise or a tax refund as a pleasant experience for consumers.

The public voted for the president, Jimmy Carter, who started the decontrol process in 1979. And they voted for another, Reagan, who campaigned on the promise to speed up the decontrol timetable, and kept the promise.

The oil companies have said that price increases would have come no matter what Reagan did. And after all, they point out, his order merely moved up an event that was already scheduled to take place later this year.

Decontrol was of course supposed to have its good effects as well as its painful ones. It was supposed to spur the search for energy at home, and indeed, domestic oil and gas exploration was reported at record levels in 1980.

It was supposed to encourage conservation, and all the evidence suggests that it has done that as well.

And it was supposed to reduce American reliance on foreign oil. According to the estimate of three economists at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the decontrol process started a year and a half ago will reduce oil imports 1 million barrels a day by the end of 1981.

Unfortunately, none of that does much right now to offset the squeeze on people's pocketbooks.

Decontrol is described as a matter of facing up to the facts. For years, it is argued — and it is hard to dispute — that the American government's policy was to shield the people from those facts.
If it was a fact that our oil import bills were skyrocketing, the government pumped money into the economy to lessen the impact on consumers. This resulted in big budget deficits and inflation, however. The pill could be sugar-coated, but it still had to be swallowed.

Now, the argument goes, the sugar-coating is being removed so that the free market can operate.

The situation bears a close resemblance to the deregulation now taking place in businesses such as the airline industry. As an airline industry consultant remarked recently, this can be a tough adjustment for executives used to operating in a regulated world.

It is, he said, "like sending a domesticated animal back into the woods."

For American energy consumers, back-to-nature economics is beginning with some harsh news about how much it really costs to drive cars and heat homes in an unregulated world.

Strength For Today

MERCIFUL PROVISION
One of God's greatest mercies is that we cannot foresee much, if not most of what is going to happen to us in the future. Sometimes we grumble about this and say how much more satisfactory life would be if we had a chance to prepare for the things that are going to happen to us. But if we could look into the future and see what it holds for us, we might be very discouraged if not to say devastated.
Would we better prepared to meet what is coming? This is doubtful, because more than likely we would wear ourselves out with anxious brooding if we saw ahead of us an ordeal which must be endured. Sometimes the very suddenness of a situation coming upon us has opened reservoirs of resourcefulness and power we never knew we possessed.

When we take all contingencies into consideration, we can see that one of the Lord's more merciful provisions is that we cannot foresee the future. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:

With the high price of energy, many homeowners are looking to alternative ways of home heating. With the use of woodstoves, we have faced the problem of improper installations leading to an increased number of fires in homes.

Smoke detectors save lives! With the advance warning of a smoke detector, families are able to escape flames and deadly gases that otherwise might never have been detected. Fire extinguishers and home escape plans are also important points of fire safety. Considering the hundreds of people in North Carolina who are killed by fire each year, the need for fire protection education is ever present. Pitt County is one among many counties throughout the state offering fire safety education through the public school system.

A display pertaining to fire safety in and around the home, alternative heating systems, and safety outdoors will be presented to the public during this week at Carolina East Mall. This display is presented by the fifth grade classes of Pitt County and local volunteer fire departments. Everyone should see it.

eagles. Fishermen returning to shore often throw out trash fish, knowing the eagles will take advantage of a handout.

"The lake is overpopulated with fish. They are there for easy taking," said Joe Moore, a Tennessee Park Service ranger stationed at the lake.

In Chickasaw Indian legend, the lake was created when gods punished Reelfoot, a chieftain for kidnapping a Choctaw princess.

A series of earthquakes in 1811 and 1812 actually gave birth to Reelfoot.

Bald eagles began coming to Reelfoot soon after the lake was formed. They start to arrive in November and remain until the middle of March, Moore said.

The best eagle-watching months are January and February.

The park service conducts daily eagle tours each morning from December through March. The excursions are free to the public, but reservations are required.

Eagle-watchers can stay at the modern 20-unit motel maintained by the park service at the north end of the lake or at several motels and cabins which serve the Reelfoot Lake area. A 3,500-foot lighted private airstrip is adjacent to park headquarters.

Moore said he can "almost guarantee" visitors they'll see eagles on the tours.

Bald eagles have been protected by federal law since 1941. Shooting a baldy is punishable by a year in prison and a stiff fine. Harassing an eagle carries the same penalty.

Although there are still a few nests at the lake, bald eagles quit raising their young there in 1962. Wildlife specialists speculate there isn't adequate wilderness country nearby for the eagles to feel secure enough to breed.

The bald eagle's head is not bald at all. It is colored by white feathers that fully develop at age five. Immature eagles are completely brown until age three when their body feathers begin to darken and the first streaks of white appear.

Mature eagles average about three feet in height and weigh 15 pounds.

That at least bought time. Having accepted the invitation, Chun could not permit Kim's execution before Jan. 20. Even if the death sentence were not commuted, Reagan could deal with the problem once he had taken office. But there was realistic hope Seoul would grant clemency before Chun's trip, if only to avoid full-blown demonstrations in front of the White House against the Korean president (in contrast to the actual token protests).

Not until Jan. 20 did Reagan learn of Chun's decision to commute Kim's sentence to life imprisonment, quickly followed by his lifting of martial law. South Korea had opted for respectability. The regime's moderate elements were strengthened, and the hard-line colonels dealt a severe blow. It was Ronald Reagan's triumph, accomplished without oozing precepts of paternalistic America that for four years have managed to undermine U.S. alliances while failing to improve human rights.

As I Recall It

Those Final Months Of Gov. Wm. B. Umstead

By NOEL YANCEY

William B. Umstead was a warrior, a stickler for details who agonized over matters other men would ignore. He worried over lights left burning at night in government buildings. As governor, he had the task of appointing many persons to state jobs. And he studied each one long and hard — too long and hard, his friends said.

Those who attended his inauguration early in January of 1952 noticed he was hoarse. Two days later he suffered a heart attack. Although his doctor described the seizure as mild, he spent most of the first four months of his term in bed. Twenty-two months after the inauguration he died of what Dr. Ralph Fleming described as congestive heart failure aggravated by pneumonia.

His long illness presented his friends and associates with a problem: how to help him run state government. How to take from his shoulders as many of the burdens of office as possible.

But Ed Rankin, his private secretary, said it was quite difficult to persuade Umstead to reduce his work schedule.

"He was a very serious minded person who took his responsibilities seriously," recalled Rankin, now a Cannon Mills executive, in a telephone interview.

The problem was complicated because the General Assembly was in session, and it was necessary to get the governor's legislative program enacted. So during those first few weeks, Rankin, or the governor's legislator brother, John Umstead, or Frank Taylor, a former House speaker who served as Umstead's legislative liaison, kept the governor informed and relayed his wishes to the lawmakers.

"He had a very large number of friends who pitched in," said Rankin. "I was amazed at the number of legislators who came by and said, 'Don't worry.'"

Rankin recalled that when one of Umstead's bills would come up in the House, Speaker E.T. Bost of Concord would give the signal.

"Sail on," he would say. "And it would sail on" to quick approval, Rankin said.

On February 4, 1953, Rankin notified the Associated Press, United Press International, the Durham Herald and the Durham Sun that each would be permitted to send a reporter to interview Umstead in his room at Watts Hospital in Durham. I was there as the AP representative.

We found Umstead, a pale, thin little man, dressed in Navy blue pajamas, sitting up in bed. The head of the bed was cranked up and he leaned back in a half sitting position.

I recall that he looked surprisingly well, better than at the inauguration a month before. His voice was clear and firm, and he appeared alert.

He told us he felt "fine," and "the doctors say I'm doing all right."

There were no hard questions put to the ailing governor, of course, but he told us he felt the General Assembly was making about normal progress despite his absence from the Capital.

I recall that Umstead was smoking a filter-type cigarette. He said his doctor had placed no restriction on his smoking, but he assured us he did not smoke excessively.

After Ed Cornish, the UPI man, and I returned to Raleigh, we were interviewed by reporters who had not been invited to the news conference. It was a new experience (Continued on Page A-6)

Taught 'Dissemination Of Education' To Youth

NEW ORLEANS, LA. — "Remember to let your aims, your labour, among your brethren and particularly the youth, be the dissemination of education," advised black activist David Walker, in 1829. Little education — of any sort — was available to African-Americans at that time, but Walker was angered by the condescension and the ignorance of African culture which even well-meaning whites who undertook to instruct blacks often displayed. Rather than seek out white teachers, Walker recommended that black people educate one another. Thus, he believed, they could transmit not only basic academic skills, but also a knowledge of, and pride in, their own history and traditions.

Today, David Walker's prophetic words are being acted on by an increasing number of African-American educators and parents. The revival of this critical and independent thrust during the last 15 years has resulted in new definitions of educational goals and basic skills for black youth. Many concerned people felt that a course of study for black children of any age should include much more than the traditional learning skills; it should also direct the children towards questions about their own lives as African-Americans: questions such as, where did we come from? how can we change our condition? who am I? and what is my goal?

With these purposes in mind, many black community leaders, educators and parents are working towards community control of existing day care centers and schools. They are also setting up independent schools to educate their children about their own history, current struggles and future ambitions.

Most African Free Schools (as independent black schools are often called) are located in the North and West, but several also exist in major Southern cities. These include the Learnings House in Atlanta, the Black and Proud School in Jackson, Mississippi, and the Ahidiana Work/Study Center in New Orleans.

"When we started our program eight years ago," remembers Tayari Salaam, former head teacher at Ahidiana, "we began with five students, and the next year we had a grand total of 10!"

Today, Ahidiana has 24 students, ages three to seven. Like most of the African Free Schools, Ahidiana receives no outside financial aid; the school depends heavily on strong parent involvement in order to maintain both high staff-child ratios and relatively low tuition ($75 a month). Parents often teach on a full-time, part-time or substitute basis, and volunteer to do other work at the center. They believe that parents who educate their own children will witness a new clarity in their own perception and planning.

"Academically," says Ms. Salaam, "we allow students to move at their own pace and do not designate concepts according to grade level. Our pre-school program basically covers reading-readiness skills while our primary program teaches basic reading, comprehension, thinking and math skills."

Ahidiana's teachers also emphasize developing cooperation among the children and strengthening their sense of history and purpose. The familiar nursery rhymes give way to songs designed to help young children think about their identity: "Are we backwards? No! Are we negroes? No! Are we African? Yebo!" (Kiswahili for "yes").

"We also study our own history," says Ms. Salaam. "It is vital that our children realize that there are many great black people who have made a history of struggle and resistance that we must follow."

The teachers create many of their own text materials. Ahidiana currently prints and publishes two books: "Who Will Speak For Us?/New Afrika Folk Tales and Herufi: An Alphabet Reader. The teachers have written a teaching manual which they also plan to publish, and they are planning a film about the school.

"Our deepest hope at Ahidiana is that we will inspire others to start independent black schools," asserts Tayari Salaam. "We believe our children need an education controlled by us."

POOR BAIT FOR A NEAR-VANISHING SPECIES!

By Gail Michaels

A Lazy Baby's A Nice Change Around A House

There's nothing like a lazy baby to bring about a confrontation between parents. Phillip blames me for Zachary's lack of initiative. I'd like to defend myself, but I can't find the words.

Since Zachary's birth, I have become increasingly inarticulate. I've never been renowned for my conversational ability, but most of the people I've met in Smithfield think I'm operating in another dimension.

Part of the problem is the successful completion of two pregnancies. I am of the firm opinion that at some point during the second birth, the brain waves are permanently altered. The only way to rebound even partially is to send at least one of the children to camp until he's 21.

The other reason I'm stuck in 2/4 time is that I haven't had a night of uninterrupted sleep in eight months. Just when Zachary showed signs that he could maintain his strength on a more reasonable feeding schedule than every two hours, he started cutting teeth. Each time he cuts a tooth, he gets congested. Each time he gets congested, I have to suction his nasal passages at least twice between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. He has been working on the same tooth for two months.

Although Phillip is sympathetic, he still thinks I should make more of an effort to stimulate Zachary. "If he got a little more exercise he might be ready to walk."

Now I'll be the first to admit that Zachary isn't performing up to his potential. If he spies something attractive, like a cat, he can take off like Bruce Jenner. Otherwise, his performance is more like that of the little tin soldier. When he's put on the floor, his arms fly up and he screams, "Muh!"

I like it that way. After raising one whirling dervish, I find it nice to have one who is relaxed.

"You'll be sorry later," Phillip told me. "You may not mind 20 pounds extra glued to your hip, but 45 is another story. And what about his language skills?"

"What about them?"

"He knows three words: dada, bye-bye, and hi."

"Don't forget 'Muh.'"

He rolled his eyes. "Meg could carry on a conversation at his age."

"Another good argument in my defense."

"Just try coming out of the fog long enough to talk to him more, like when you're changing him. You'll see — it will be mutually rewarding. You'll talk to him. He'll talk to you. You'll want to answer him. Before you know it, you'll even forget about being tired."

I was skeptical, but I tried. The next time I had Zachary on the changing table, I started a conversation. I found all sorts of things to talk about, like, "Hi there. My, you've grown. I feel like a fool."

"Well, I did it," I told Phillip afterwards. "And he did respond."

Phillip was excited. "I told you! Mutual stimulation, that's all it takes. What did he say?"

"He gave me the raspberry."

Giving blood is easy.

Needing it is hard.

We're counting on you.

Press And People Win A Nice Little Victory

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The press, the people, and our nation's political principles won a nice little victory last week in the U.S. Supreme Court. By a vote of 8-0, with Justice Stevens sitting out, the court found nothing unconstitutional in Florida's experiment with televised trials.

The outcome had been anxiously awaited by TV broadcasters, who remain the red-headed stepchildren of the First Amendment. They were understandably gratified at the ruling. But in a larger sense, the decision was a victory for the entire taxpaying public. After all, the state courts are public courts, and TV can give the people some further understanding of what occurs in them.

Most significantly, the high court's action reaffirms the 200-year-old principle of federalism, by which the states respectively retain power to undertake political experiments. As of last October, when the Florida case was argued, 19 states permitted TV coverage of both trial and appellate courts, three others permitted coverage of trial courts only, and 12 were studying the idea. This is exactly how federalism is supposed to work.

The facts of the Florida case were not in dispute. Two Miami Beach policemen, Noel Chandler and Robert Granger, were charged with grand larceny and with conspiracy to burglarize a restaurant. A jury found them guilty on all counts. They appealed on the sole contention that TV coverage of their trial was inherently prejudicial — that is, that they could not possibly have received a fair trial with cameras in the courtroom. The effect of the Supreme Court opinion was to uphold their convictions.

The tone of the opinion was regrettably cool and almost grudging, as if Chief Justice Burger were suffering acid indigestion of the intellect. The chief and the TV boys do not get along. In order to approve Florida's experiment, the court had to overrule the leading case of Estes vs. Texas, decided back in 1964, and for some inexplicable reason six members of the court were unwilling to do this openly. Nevertheless, like Byron's maiden, saying they would ne'er overrule, they overruled. The Estes case no longer controls.

And a good thing, too. In the nearly 20 years that have passed since Billie Sol Estes was tried for swindling, the technology of television has greatly improved. Public awareness of TV cameras — and public indifference to them — has become a fact of urban life. Under the Florida rules, only one camera and one cameraman are allowed in court; no special lighting is permitted. The TV reporter, under these circumstances, is no more "intrusive" than the print reporter with pad and pencil.

Plainly, Chief Justice Burger and some of his colleagues find the whole idea of TV coverage distasteful. To their credit, they declined to elevate their personal prejudice to the level of a constitutional principle. Dangers lurk in TV's presence, said Burger, "but unless we are to conclude that television coverage under all conditions is prohibited by the Constitution, the states must be free to experiment." Excellent!

Where do we go from here? Last week's decision applied only to state courts. It would be pleasant to see Congress move toward similar experiments in federal courts also. The people have an equal interest in observing the competence and demeanor of federal judges and federal prosecutors. If there is no constitutional inhibition against TV cameras in state courtrooms, there can be none in federal courtrooms either.

In time we may hope to see the privilege extended to the Supreme Court itself, where cases of truly national importance are argued. So long as Burger is chief justice, this will happen only over his dead body, but somewhere down the road TV should be permitted. To students of the law, and to lovers of history, a library of TV tapes would be at once exciting and instructional. Suppose, to be supposing, that we could again hear Thurgood Marshall's oral argument in the school segregation case, or William Bell's eloquent defense of the rights of Amish parents to their own schools. Such landmark cases will recur. We ought to preserve them — and TV can do just that.

As Yancey Recalls . . .

Umstead left the hospital a day or so later and returned to the Executive Mansion where he remained in bed most of the time for several weeks longer, gradually increasing his activities. Some legislators and state officials were added to the group that was permitted to see the governor. Finally, on May 21, 1954, Umstead went to his office in the Capitol for the first time since the day after the inaugural ceremonies. But he stayed only half a day at first.

During the months and weeks that followed, Umstead gradually regained his strength. But he remained a worrier who agonized over every decision. Those he appointed to office included Sam J. Ervin Jr., then a state Supreme Court justice, to the U.S. Senate. W.H. Bobbitt and Carlisle Higgins as Supreme Court justices, and Associate Justice M.V. Barnhill as chief justice. Edwin Gill as state treasurer, Charles Gold as insurance commissioner, Frank Crane as labor commissioner, and a host of others, including approving the appointment of Charles F. Carroll as state school superintendent. He suffered disappointment when former Gov. W. Kerr Scott defeated Alton Lennon whom Umstead has also appointed to the U.S. Senate. Scott was an old political foe who had fought tooth and toenail for Hubert E. Olive when Umstead, a former congressman and U.S. senator himself ran successfully for governor.

During the summer of 1954, Umstead began to weaken, but he resisted suggestions that he curtail his work schedule. He insisted on attending sessions of the Advisory Budget Commission as it heard budget requests in preparation for making spending recommendations to the 1955 legislature. Governors customarily had not attended these meetings. In October, he was readmitted to Watts Hospital for a "rest." He remained three weeks. He returned to his office, but cut his schedule to half a day. When a reporter asked if he were able to carry on in view of the grave problems that confronted the legislature — including the school desegregation issue, he replied with a firm, "Yes, sir."

But at a meeting of the Advisory Budget Commission in early November, his voice was noticeably hoarse, and his words had a tendency to trail off. Late that afternoon, his doctors ordered him back to the hospital. As he rode to Durham in the big No. 1 limousine, Umstead told Patrol Sgt. Harold Minges, his driver and friend, "General, I'm going to be all right." Minges nodded his head.

But three days later, Fleming summoned Mrs. Umstead and the Umstead's 12-year-old daughter, Merle Bradley, to the hospital. They reported he appeared much better when they first arrived. But as they were talking several minutes later, he suddenly stopped breathing.

Trinity Methodist Church at Durham was packed at the funeral two days later, and more than 1,000 persons remained outside. Those in attendance included Lt. Gov. Luther Hodges who succeeded Umstead, Virginia Gov. Thomas Stanley, members of the Council of State, the seven justices of the state Supreme Court, Lennon, Ervin, Scott, most of the state's congressmen and former U.S. Sen Frank P. Graham.

The friends who knew the outwardly shy and timid man as a warm and human friend must have been pleased when they heard Dr. D.D. Holt of Greensboro, eulogize the fallen governor as a man "who refused to stoop in order to win or get ahead — who would not counsel any compromise of the right — who pressed his frail body beyond its physical limits in fighting for the things he thought were good."

They also would have been pleased with the comment that W.A. Brame of Wendell, a longtime friend, made to a reporter: "He was a good man. He never did a thing in his life that he didn't think was right."

Firm Guilty Of Highway Bid Rigging

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A federal court jury convicted Crowder Asphalt Co. of Charlotte and two top executives Friday of fixing bids on state highway paving contracts.

After deliberating for 50 minutes, the jury convicted president Henry Grathwohl and vice president Grady Thomas on one count each of violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by scheming to rig bids and eliminate competition on road-paving projects.

The men face possible sentences of three years in prison and maximum fines of $100,000. The company could be fined up to $1 million.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow W. Jones delayed sentencing until two other bid-rigging trials scheduled for next week are over and to give defense lawyers time to present more personal and business information on Grathwohl and Thomas.

Contending that bid-rigging is common in North Carolina, the two men said the larger and more powerful Rea Construction Co. of Charlotte forced them to take part in the practice. Rea and several of its executives earlier pleaded guilty to federal bid-rigging charges.

U.S. Attorney Arthur Feiveson, director of a lengthy bid-rigging investigation in North Carolina, said he did not know what effect the trial would have on other cases.

Defense attorneys said they don't know if they will appeal the verdict.

Crowder Asphalt and the two executives were the first defendants to come to trial in North Carolina following a federal crackdown on bid rigging in the Southeast. Several other companies and their executives have been fined or sent to prison after pleading guilty to federal charges.

L.A. Reynolds Co. of Winston-Salem and company president John R. Reynolds are scheduled to go on trial in federal court in Charlotte at 9:30 a.m. Monday. Former Rea executive Charles B. Wuertenberger of Hilton Head Island, S.C., will go on trial next.

Trials are scheduled later this month in Statesville for Carl A. Boggs of the Dickerson Group of Monroe, the Superior Paving Co. of Statesville and Superior executive Allen C. Johnson.

Before the case went to the jury Friday, Grathwohl and Thomas took the witness stand to deny the charges.

Grathwohl testified that Rea Construction Co. divided up road projects in the Mecklenburg County area, taking 50 percent for itself, giving 35 percent to Blythe Industries Inc. and 15 percent to Crowder.

He testified that Rea Construction threatened Crowder when the smaller company submitted a bid on a Lincoln County road project in 1978.

"It was pretty nasty. They threatened us and said they would put us out of business," Grathwohl said. "Apparently we invaded their territory."

Grathwohl said that Crowder ignored Rea's threats, submitted a bid on the project anyway and won.

The Crowder president also testified that he attended a meeting in 1977 during which Rea divided paving projects in the Mecklenburg County area. Grathwohl said he protested, but Rea executives said, "That's the way it will be."

"I was speechless. I asked them to tell me how they arrived at the figures, and Rea said they got the biggest share of the projects because they were the biggest company."

Grathwohl defended Crowder's submitting complementary bids — a high bid made by one company that intentionally lets another firm win the contract.

He said the company submitted complementary bids because he thought the state required three bids for a contract to be awarded.

Grathwohl said Crowder's complementary bids were always within reason but were high enough to insure that they would not be awarded the job.

"This is a common practice among paving companies and has been done ever since I can remember," he said.

Thomas also testified, echoing Grathwohl that Crowder's complementary bids were always within reason. He said Crowder never submitted a bid on a paving job that the company couldn't handle if the contract went to them.

F.J. Blythe Jr., president of Blythe Industries, testified for the prosecution earlier that before Crowder built a plant in Mecklenburg County, Blythe and Rea had equally shared state contracts.

After Crowder moved in, the contracts were split 50 percent to Rea, 35 percent to Blythe and 15 percent to Crowder, he said.

Rea Construction, Blythe Industries and Crowder Construction along with the C.G. Tate Construction Co. of Concord and several executives of the companies are named as co-conspirators in the case.

All but Crowder Construction pleaded guilty to charges similar to those now facing Crowder.

Thomas was a long-time employee of Blythe Industries before going to work at Crowder.

Policeman Shot

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte police officer was in stable condition yesterday after he was shot twice while on duty after stopping a car for a routine traffic violation Friday night.

Patrolman B.E. Somerville was shot in the chest and arm by a single assailant who police believe was involved in an armed robbery shortly before the shooting, said Charlotte police Capt. Ellison Laney.

Police are still looking for the suspect, described as a white male, 5-foot-10 and about 170 pounds, between the ages of 20 and 25.

Laney said police were not releasing the name of the assailant because "we're not absolutely positively sure he's the suspect."

Laney said Terry Lee Knox, 24, of Clover, S.C., had picked up the assailant at a Charlotte shopping center as a hitchhiker. The suspect stole Knox's wallet and gun and commandeered his car, he said.

Somerville pulled the car over because it had its high beam headlights on, Laney said.

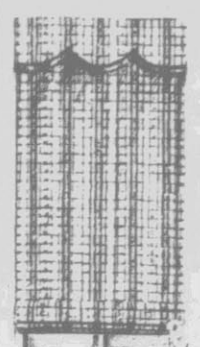

After shooting Somerville about 9 p.m. Friday, the assailant fled in the car. A 1962 Buick matching the description of the get-away car was later recovered, Laney said.

A manhunt was organized by Charlotte police in the east side of the city shortly before the shooting, police said.

Prosecutors Have Sympathy For Garwood

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — Convicted Marine turncoat Robert Garwood will have the sympathy of his prosecutors when he stands before a military court next week to hear his sentence for aiding the enemy in Vietnam.

The two Marine Corps lawyers who presented the case against him, his former fellow POWs who testified against him, the judge, and the rank and file of the legal staff at Camp Lejeune all have expressed compassion for Garwood at one time or another during the months of trial.

Garwood, who spent nearly 14 years behind enemy lines, was convicted Thursday of collaborating with the enemy by carrying arms and accepting a position in the Viet Cong army.

Next week, during a sentencing phase, the jury of five Marine Vietnam veterans will decide what price Garwood must pay for the misdeeds of the man known to the Viet Cong as Dau.

meaning "Fighter." He could be sentenced to life in prison and forfeiture of $147,000 in back pay.

Garwood, now 34 years old, was a teen-ager when captured by the Viet Cong during the early phases of the Vietnam war.

"When you take a 19-year-old kid and put him in a position like that, who knows what he will do? Who knows what any of us would do?" said the judge, Col. R.E. Switzer, who both publicly and privately expressed his sympathy for Garwood.

"I just have a lot of mixed emotions about the whole thing," said a court reporter who sat through portions of the trial, and who embraced Garwood as he went to face the jury last week. Even the assistant prosecutor, Capt. Teresa Wright, wished the small town Indiana Marine good luck as his jury retired earlier in the week.

"To me, it's another tragedy of a very tragic war," said David Harker, a former POW who was struck by Garwood in an incident involving the killing of a camp cat for food. Garwood was convicted of assault for the incident.

Garwood's story of life and death in captivity, of torture and betrayal in an unpopular war left many observers wondering why Garwood was prosecuted in the first place, when charges were dropped against other Vietnam-era POWs accused of similar offenses.

One trial participant said the court-martial was pursued because of what he called the Marine Corps' "abstract notion that all Marines are prosecuted for violating the law."

Forum Planned

The Vocational Education Department of J.H. Rose High School will observe National Vocational Education week February 9-14 by sponsoring a forum on vocational education.

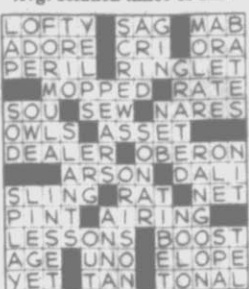

Included in the program will be a film on the history of vocational education in North Carolina, a description of local involvement and a guided tour of facilities.

The forum will meet in the library at Rose High School at 9:30 a.m. or 1:30 p.m. February 12. Persons planning to attend either of the two sessions should call 752-3169 and leave their names and phone numbers, as well as which session they are planning to attend.

Tapping System Saved City Councilman's Life

ST. CLAIR SHORES, Mich. (AP) — A policeman who answered a telephone call from a man who had suffered a stroke and lost his voice saved the city councilman's life by devising a simple tapping system to find out where he lived.

"All I could think while it was going on was that if I couldn't get the information from him, the guy was just going to lie there and die," recalled Officer James Zerilli.

He told the caller to tap once for yes and twice for no, then began asking what part of the city the man lived in.

said Sgt. James Bell, who listened in on the call Thursday.

Did he live in the southern part of the city? Tap.

OK. Did he live on Colony Street? Tap tap. How about California Street? Tap.

"We just lucked out. He lived on one of the main streets. If he had lived on an odd-ball one," Bell said, "we could have been there forever."

Next, Bell said, Zerilli turned to blocks. Did the caller live in the 20,000 block? Tap tap. The 19,000 block? Tap.

Nine questions later, Zerilli learned the caller lived in the 19,900 block. After narrowing it down to the 19,910 block, Zerilli told the man to tap the last number.

"Six taps.

Using a house-by-house index of the suburban Detroit town of 88,000, Zerilli and Bell found that 55-year-old Councilman Casper Frederick lived at 19,916 California Street.

"Is that you Cas?" Zerilli asked. Tap. "Well, you just hang on, we've got an ambulance and a police car dispatched."

It had taken 24 minutes to figure out.

Results May Be Hostage Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Senate and the Reagan administration are searching for a way to translate international concern over the Iranian hostage crisis into a pact that would punish any country taking foreign nationals captive in the future.

"It's important to trigger the action now when everyone could be vulnerable," said Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which will hold hearings later this month on the hostage situation.

"What happened to us, everyone else realizes could happen to them," he said in a recent interview.

Because of that, the United States should move now to try to get an agreement among nations to impose automatically a trade and diplomatic embargo against any country that takes hostages in the future, he said.

The State Department is laying groundwork for a similar proposal but has not settled on any details, according to an official who asked not to be named.

"It's still on the drawing board," he said. "We are in the process of negotiating and discussing with other countries to find out what they think about it."

Secretary of State Alexander Haig has said that getting international cooperation against terrorism will be one of his highest priorities.

A researcher on international terrorism also thinks the time is ripe for limited international sanctions against countries that take hostages.

Brian Michael Jenkins, director of research on terrorism at the Rand Corporation, agrees with Percy that the seizure of Americans in Tehran — plus Libyan assassination team shootings and other incidents — has dozens of countries ready to act against terrorism.

Truck Fire Burns Man

FARMVILLE — A Hope Mills man was burned Friday afternoon when the truck he was riding caught fire near Farmville.

According to Trooper John Brinkley, a tractor-trailer type truck was pulling a mobile home headed west on U.S. 264 when it developed engine trouble.

Brinkley said the driver of the truck, Joe H. Morris of Hope Mills, pulled to the shoulder of the road, and discovered the truck was on fire.

A passenger in the truck, identified as Lee Clodfelter, was burned and was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital by members of the Farmville Rescue squad. Brinkley said he was burned on his hands and face.

The fire made its way to the truck's fuel tank, which ruptured, causing the mobile home to catch fire, causing extensive damage to the mobile dwelling before members of the Farmville Fire Department extinguished the blaze.

Damage to the mobile home and truck was placed at $7000.

Clay Kirkman
Belk Tyler Horticulturalist
Clay Kirkman Says

February is the month to start your spring gardening chores and now is a good time to start thinking about roses.

This is the best time to prune all roses (except climbers), just before the rosebush breaks dormancy. There are many reasons for pruning a rosebush, not the least of which is to limit the size of the bush, as an unpruned rosebush can produce small or inferior blooms. Flower quality is much improved by pruning. Roses are also pruned to remove dead and diseased canes, as this dead wood is unproductive and will never produce a bloom. Diseases and insect pests will find shelter in this dead wood.

You will need the proper tools for pruning, such as pruning shears and long handled lopping shears. You will want to make cuts at sharp angles, 45° — 65°. Be sure not to leave any stubs which are susceptible to disease. Make cuts at an outside bud. Try to prune out buds that will grow toward the inside of the bush. Inside buds that send canes into the center of the bush will cause it to be more disease prone. Make your cuts about 1/4" above the bud. To moderately prune roses, cut the canes back from 18" to 20" above the ground. Remove all but 5 to 8 healthy canes. On more vigorous plants, prune them to 12" to 15" above the ground and remove all but 3 to 5 of the healthiest canes.

This is also a good time to plant packaged roses. Be sure to plant them before the new growth comes out. Come by Belk Tyler Garden Shops for all your gardening needs. We have everything from rosebushes to pruning equipment.

Klan Trial Aftermath

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan leader says most of the six Klan-Nazi ex-defendants are still active in the Klan — but some are suffering financially two and a half months after they were acquitted of murdering five anti-Klan demonstrators in late 1979.

"They lost their jobs. They've had trouble finding jobs and some of them still haven't gotten jobs," said Joe Grady, the Imperial Wizard of the Winston-Salem-based White Knights of Liberty.

Two of the Klansmen are writing a book on the Nov. 3, 1979 shooting of five Communist Workers Party members and the subsequent trial.

Jerry Paul Smith said Friday that he and Coleman Blair Pridmore are putting the finishing touches on a book about the communists' "Death to the Klan" rally that backfired on the communists.

"We've titled it 'Ku Klux Klan versus Communists, 88 Seconds which Shook the Nation,'" Smith said. He said the book will have more than 200 pages and will be published by a "rightwing organization."

But Smith said he and Pridmore cut and sell firewood to support themselves and their families. Pridmore, the father of two teen-agers and a baby on the way, lost his job as a foreman in a Lincolnton textile plant after his arrest and has been unable to get other work.

Former defendant David Wayne Matthews, whose wife recently had a baby, has found a job, Smith said. But Smith declined to say where Matthews works or what type of work he does.

Smith said that he, Pridmore and Matthews have remained active in the Klan since the trial. Pridmore has been elected a Grand Dragon of the Klan group headed by Grady, and Smith and Matthews are members of the state board of the same organization.

Lawrence Gene Morgan, the fourth Klansman in the trial, is no longer active in the organization and is working at a furniture factory in western North Carolina, Smith said.

Smith, noting that Morgan got married shortly after the trial, said Morgan recently telephoned him and said he still believes in the Klan but cannot be active.

Grady called the financial state of Smith, Pridmore and Matthews "pathetic. We (the Klan) help them out all we can" by donating money.

Adopt-A-Pet

The Adopt-a-Pet of the Week is this honey and white part-collie male dog. He's in the Greenville Animal Shelter and will have to be put to sleep if someone doesn't give him a home. He's good-natured and will make someone a wonderful pet. He may be seen at the Greenville Animal Shelter, which is open every day, including Saturday and Sunday, from 8 to 9 a.m., from noon to 1 p.m. and from 4 to 5 p.m. Inquiry may be made by calling the animal shelter, 752-3342, during the above-mentioned hours or by calling 756-9624 after 5 p.m.

Also being sought homes by the Pitt County Humane Society are the following:

— A black female cat that's house-trained. 752-1928.

— A black and white male 12-week-old kitten. May be seen at the Greenville Animal Shelter, 752-3342 (See first paragraph for hours).

— Four mixed-breed puppies eight weeks old. One tan female; two white and black females, and one brown and black male. 756-8061.

— A black female medium-sized part-cocker spaniel dog that's housebroken. 758-3702.

— A black and white male housecat less than a year old. 758-4406.

— A black and white 10-week-old kitten 756-4069.

A three-and-one-half-month-old part-collie puppy that will be medium-sized dog. Had all shots. Owner prefers that he go to a home with a fenced-in yard. 757-3564.

Freeway Killer Case Snaking Way In Courts

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern Californians, inured to the horror of mass murder by the likes of Charles Manson, have been shocked anew by a grisly case now snaking its tangled way through the courts.

It is called "the Freeway Killer case," and the gruesome details unfolding daily involve homosexuality, black magic and demonic tortures of perhaps 44 victims.

The dead were young men and boys, mostly in their teens, whose mutilated bodies were dumped along or near the maze of high-speed freeways that criss-cross this vast urban sprawl.

The prime suspect, charged with 14 of the slayings, is a 34-year-old truckdriver and Vietnam veteran named William Bonin, a twice paroled sex offender whose sexual problems reportedly date back to the age of 10.

He has been described by a prosecutor as "the most arch-evil person who ever existed."

An informant told police that Bonin once said he liked to strangle teen-age boys on Friday and Saturday nights so he could have Sundays free to take his girlfriend roller skating.

Three young men, one of them said to be possibly retarded, have been charged as Bonin's accomplices in murder.

A fifth defendant, Vernon Butts, 23, who confessed his role in some of the killings, was found dead in his jail cell last month, an apparent suicide.

Butts had dabbled in the occult and kept two coffins in his home. In a detailed confession he called the murder spree "a good little nightmare."

The boyish Butts, who was said to have become despondent when his confession was made public, claimed he never killed any victims but rather meld down the screaming youths while Bonin tortured and strangled them.

Butts gave a chilling account of Bonin's search for victims as he cruised Southern California in a green van, picking up hitchhikers or offering rides to youngsters waiting for buses.

One 12-year-old victim disappeared while waiting for a bus to Disneyland.

Butts told of Bonin's grotesque torture methods — using an ice pick and a coat hanger before he strangled the young men with their own T-shirts.

In one case, Butts recalled how he and Bonin left a movie and picked up a hitchhiker "somewhere in the middle of the city."

"We picked up the boy, took him out to the middle of nowhere and had sex with him and then he (Bonin) killed him," Butts said. "Bill (Bonin) said he loved those sounds of screams."

Of his own role in the killings, Butts said, "After the first one I couldn't do anything about it."

Bonin, he explained, had "a hypnotic way" about him that led the younger man to follow.

Others are said to have followed, too. Three men charged in the case are James Munro, 19, who once worked with Bonin; Gregory Miley, 19, whose family says he is retarded, and William Ray Pugh, 18, a sandy-haired man with braces on his teeth.

Pugh first led the police to Bonin.

"We know that Bonin had his group and they did not act independently of him," said one law enforcement official, who asked not to be identified.

"In the cases of Butts, Munro and Miley, all came from broken homes with no strong father identification. Bonin became the father. He gave them love," the official said.

Authorities have also speculated that some young men helped Bonin because they feared they might be his next victims if they objected.

Before he died, Butts linked Bonin to 21 of the freeway killings — a series of similar murders which began in 1972.

Bodies have been found on or near freeways in Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange, San Bernardino and Kern counties, but investigators say all 44 deaths may not be part of the same case. Bonin was in custody during the earlier killings. He was released in October 1978. The 14 murders with which he is charged date from May 1979 to May 1980.

Recent disclosures in the case indicate Bonin and at least two co-defendants have made admissions to authorities and Bonin is scheduled for trial May 4. His prosecutor will be veteran Deputy District Attorney Aaron Stovitz, who participated in the prosecution of Manson in the Tate-LaBianca murders of 1969.

Stovitz, who says he once thought the murders of Sharon Tate and six others was "the most horrible thing we would ever see," shakes his head in contemplating the increase in multiple murders.

"Is there a lesson to be learned from this case? Yes," he said. "I would tell kids: 'Don't accept rides from strangers, either hitchhiking or gratuitous offers — be they from girls, boys or in between."

"And I would tell parents: 'Let your sons and daughters see the pictures of these murdered children.'"

Slaying Similar To Some Others

ATLANTA (AP) — An examination of the body of 14-year-old Lubie Geter provided a clue that may "tie together more" some of the mysterious deaths of black children in Atlanta over the last year and a half, a medical examiner says.

Whoever killed Lubie left no marks on his neck, said Dr. Robert Stivers, a Fulton County medical examiner.

"We've had a couple like that," Stivers said Friday. "It looks like a choke hold — someone coming up from behind and catching the child in the crook of their elbow. It would only take a few seconds" to kill someone that way, he said.

"Some of these are beginning to tie together more. It's beginning to make a believer out of me," he said.

Geter, whose body was found Thursday, is the 15th black child between the ages of 7 and 15 to be found dead in the Atlanta area since July 1979. Seven, including Geter, were strangled or suffocated.

All but two of the victims have been boys. Two other boys have disappeared and are feared dead.

Dr. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, appealed Friday to Vice President George Bush for a declaration that would make Atlanta eligible for federal disaster funds because of the tragedies.

There was no immediate response from the vice president, who was assigned by President Reagan to see what the federal government could do to help.

Geter was reported missing Jan. 4, the day after he disappeared from a local shopping center where he was selling car deodorizers. His body was discovered in a pine thicket in unincorporated Fulton County southwest of Atlanta.

Stivers said it was possible Geter was killed the day he disappeared, but it was difficult to tell because the body was "essentially frozen."

Although there were no marks on Geter's body, Stivers said there was evidence that pressure had been applied to the boy's throat.

Stivers said he was puzzled by the lack of apparent physical resistance from Geter, who measured 5-foot-7 and weighed 130 pounds.

"If this choke hold thing is true, it's almost as if you'd have to have someone in the back seat of a car to do it," he said.

Stivers said there were no signs of sexual assault in Geter's case.

The medical examiner also reported that many of the "same signs" in Geter's death were present in the death of 10-year-old Aaron Wyche of south DeKalb County, who was found with a fractured skull in June 1980 beneath a railroad trestle near his home. There were "signs of minimal injury" in both cases, Stivers said.

The 35-man Atlanta police task force investigating the slayings and disappearances has declined to include the Wyche case in its probe.

DeKalb County police Lt. J.M. Shockley said Friday: "All indications are that (Wyche) fell. There's nothing to indicate otherwise."

Stivers said he believed the investigation should include Wyche's case and the deaths of two other children, a 15-year-old boy whose body was recovered from the Chattahoochee River in December 1980 and a 14-year-old girl found strangled in an Atlanta hotel in November.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JUNE PARKER

Among the new fiction at Sheppard Memorial Library are two books which are both entertaining and thought-provoking. The first, "The Collected Stories by Eudora Welty," gathers together all her published stories along with two stories previously uncollected. Miss Welty, born in Jackson, Mississippi where she has lived all of her life; has a distinctive southern sensibility together with a long familiarity with the thoughts and feelings of ordinary people. In the commonplace, she sees what is unique. Her stories vary in time and place. Some of them go back into the last century. Others reflect the depression years and two come from the explosive 1960s. The stories evoke a feeling and memory as she captures the essence of persons and events — of the piano teacher, salesman, store clerk, weddings, funerals, and family relationships. One group of stories previously collected in "The Golden Apples" in 1949 particularly stand out as they trace the subtle shades of character and happenings in the fictional town of Morgana, Mississippi and the family of King MacLain. In her preface, Miss Welty explains that in the writing of any character she tries to enter into the mind, heart and skin of human being. In making this jump is the act of a writer's imagination that she sets most high.

"The Clan of the Cave" by Jean M. Auel is the story of the meeting of two civilizations — the Cro-Magnon and the Neanderthal — 35,000 years ago and of Ayla, the girl that the Clan found and raised who was different. Here, the ways and customs of the Clan in birth, rites of passage, marriage, death, women's work, men's work, cooking, hunting, healing, love, family units, and tribal units are set forth. The Clan is bound by heredity and instinct to certain patterns of thinking and behavior and cannot change. Ayla who is fair-haired, more intelligent, laughs, and cries is ugly to the Clan who eventually adopts the young girl. As she tries to be true to herself and her more advanced intelligence, she is curious about the world around her which challenges the Clan's beliefs and the very foundation of their being. Because she threatens everything the Clan stands for, there is always a part of the group who would cast her out. The conflict can never be resolved because this newer breed is destined to alter the face of the earth. Ayla dares to adventure where no woman has ever dared. Driven by her intelligence and destiny, she breaks the forbidden taboo in this drama of mystery, magic, and human survival.

Tardif Performing Program Of Scriabine, Rachmaninoff Music

ECU News Bureau
A program of music by Russian composers Alexander Scriabine and Sergei Rachmaninoff will be performed by pianist Paul Tardif of the East Carolina University School of Music faculty Monday, Feb. 9, at 8:15 p.m.

The recital, set for Hendrix Theatre in ECU's Mendenhall Student Center, is free and open to the public.

Tardif will perform Scriabine's Four Preludes, Opus 22; Five Preludes, Opus 74 and five selected etudes, composed between 1887 and 1912, on the first half of his program.

The second half, featuring Rachmaninoff works, will include the Three Preludes, Opus 23, Variations on a Theme of Corelli, Opus 42 and two of Rachmaninoff's "Etudes Tableaux," Opus 33, No. 8 in G Minor and Opus 39, No. 9 in D Major.

One of the most active recitalists on ECU's music faculty, Tardif recently performed for two events in Washington, D.C., the Kennedy Center Gala and the President's inaugural concert, also at Kennedy Center.

Presenting Award-Winning Drama

ECU News Bureau
"Getting Out," voted the best new play of 1978 by the American Theatre Critics Association, will be presented by the East Carolina University Playhouse Feb. 18-21 and

23-25 in the Studio Theatre. The award-winning drama by Marsha Norman focuses on a once-violent woman named Arlene and her first 24 hours out of prison. It uses two actresses to portray the main character and an elaborate set to communicate the message of inner struggle to evolve into a new personality.

Arlene, played by Allison

Thompson of Chapel Hill, is the older, shakily-rehabilitated parolee. Arlie, played by Paige Weaver of Wilmington, is the original Arlene, the teenager who commits murder and is sent to prison.

The plot is that while Arlene tries to cope with her new life, Arlie is exploding inside her, or — from the audience's point of view — all around her on stage.

The concept of space within space is used by set designer Gregory Buch to create Arlene's dingy apartment surrounded by the prison cell that she occupied in her past as Arlie. A catwalk used by prison guards surrounds both the cell and the apartment.

Other major characters in "Getting Out" include Bennie, a prison guard played by Dwight Eastwood of Kinston; Arlene's violent, selfish mother, played by Rhonda Spivey Webb of New Bern; Arlene's former pimp, Carl, played by Robert John Willie of Northport, N.Y.; and Ruby, a neighbor who has also been in prison and is making the readjustment to outside life, played by Karen Gupther of Raleigh.

Tickets for season ticket holders will be available in the box office beginning Wednesday, Feb. 4. General admission and ECU student tickets go on sale Feb. 11. Ad-

JAZZING UP

DETROIT (AP) — The Montreux-Detroit International Jazz Festival, which attracted over 500,000 jazz buffs when it was first held here late last summer, will be repeated this year, Sept. 2-7.

The festival concerts, to be performed at various downtown Detroit sites, will be extended from five to six days for the 1981 event, "reflecting the popularity of this jazz spectacular," according to Robert E. McCabe, president of the sponsoring Detroit Renaissance Foundation.

Attractions of the festival, which last year featured a total of 59 concerts, will include: Detroit's top jazz bands participating in free and ticketed events; nightly dancing to Big Band music and a free jazz marathon lasting four days and featuring over 25 musical groups.

Workshops Are Planned

ATLANTIC BEACH — A series of workshops on the techniques of creative stained glass work will begin Thursday, February 12 at the N. C. Marine Resources Center, Pine Knoll Shores.

The evening workshops, from 7-9 p.m., will be taught by Johanna Aucremanne. The class will meet on Thursdays for four weeks, ending on March 5.

Registration is $25 per person and pre-registration is required.

Tall Leading Men A Rarity Among Better Actors

THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA... is one of the more familiar sites in "China After Mao," a travel-adventure film by Jens Bjerre. The film is being shown at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 12 in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center. Tickets, available at the door, are priced at $2.50.

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Christine Lahti is an actress leading men can look up to. Christine is 5-foot-10 and with 2-inch heels towers over most of the actors she plays opposite.

Christine is co-starring with Richard Dreyfuss in "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" adapted from the New York play in which Mary Tyler Moore starred last year.

Dreyfuss, who won the 1977 best actor Oscar for his performance in "The Goodbye Girl," stands a modest 5-foot-7 or so, according to Christine.

The actor, however, needn't fret about Christine soaring above him during the course of the MGM movie. He plays the entire film lying flat on his back in a hospital bed.

Christine is accustomed to working with shorter men.

She made her film debut with Al Pacino in "And Justice For All." Pacino, if anything, is not as tall as Dreyfuss.

She starred in the TV movie "The Henderson Monster" with Jason Miller, also inches shorter than she is. Tony LoBianco, her co-star in "The Last Tenant," was another one who had to look up to Christine.

Traditionally, tall leading ladies have been in short supply, so to speak.

Beginning with Mary Pickford, diminutive leading ladies have been highly prized as ultra-feminine and as a godsend to short leading men and even those of average height.

Occasionally, a tall leading lady's talent or good looks were sufficiently outstanding to overcome ancient prejudices — Greta Garbo, Rosalind Russell, Katharine Hepburn, Ingrid Bergman and Alexis Smith, to name a few.

Even so, ladies taller than 5-foot-6 generally had to settle for character roles or the leading lady's best friend. And never opposite Alan Ladd.

It was a poorly kept secret in the old days that many a leading man stood on a peach crate or the leading lady was made to stand in a shallow trench when a two-shot required the couple to face one another in a standing position.

Her height, perhaps, was one reason why Garbo played most of her romantic scenes in a horizontal position.

Height, of course, offered no problems to the likes of Gary Cooper, John Wayne, Clark Gable, James Stewart, Laurence Olivier, Gregory Peck and Cary Grant, all taller than the magical six feet.

Most of today's stars, however, are considerably shorter. In addition to Pacino and Dreyfuss, there are such other short to medium-height leading men as Burt Reynolds, Robert Redford, Paul Newman, Robert DeNiro, Dustin Hoffman, Woody Allen, Sylvester Stallone, Jack Lemmon and Jack Nicholson.

There are a few tall superstars around, but not many — Clint Eastwood, Warren Beatty, Jon Voight and Gene Hackman.

Today's male stars apparently are less insecure about their macho image, unafraid of appearing on screen with such taller actresses as Christine, Faye Dunaway, Diane Keaton, Meryl Streep and Vanessa Redgrave.

"Dreyfuss and Pacino aren't intimidated by my height," Christine said. "And certainly Dustin Hoffman wasn't afraid even of a dance scene with Redgrave who towered over him in 'Agatha.'"

"I guess there haven't been too many tall female stars in the past, but the leading ladies of the 1940s all came average tall."

Christine had in mind the likes of Lana Turner, Rita Hayworth, Betty Grable, Ginger Rogers, Doris Day, Greer Garson, Barbara Stanwyck and Susan Hayward.

Most of them were only somewhat taller than average height for American women — 5-foot-3 to 5-foot-6.

"Just as most of the actors I've worked with, I'm not intimidated or self-conscious about playing opposite shorter men," said Christine, a native of Detroit and a University of Michigan graduate who makes her home in New York.

"I like to work with good actors no matter how tall they are. No one has ever told me I couldn't have a part because of my height.

"But I imagine I've lost some roles for that reason. There are some leading men who'd be bothered by the difference in heights."

"I think that equality between men and women in all fields is gaining more ground every day. Just because a man is short doesn't mean he is any less a man. And if a woman is tall, it doesn't make her less feminine."

"However, it's a good thing leading ladies don't insist on working with taller leading men because there aren't that many major male stars who are over six feet these days."

"I guess somebody like Robert DeNiro is about my height. But I would be much taller than he is if I wore 3-inch heels, which I like to do."

"I'm proud of my height. I don't try to conceal it by wearing flat shoes or bowing my head or slouching. It was a little tough in junior high school when I was the tallest girl in the class. But not now."

"I've worked with some fine actors who aren't as tall as I am and I expect to continue working with them in the future."

Film Planned At Mendenhall

"China After Mao" is the Jens Bjerre film next on the bill of the Mendenhall Travel-Adventure Film Series. The film on China will be shown at 8 p.m. on Thursday, February 12 in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center. Admission is $2.50, with tickets available at the door prior to 8 p.m.

Internationally famed travel-film maker Bjerre has been roaming the world for more than 30 years. He has made numerous visits to China, has written several books, four of which have been translated into 15 languages, and has produced several award-winning documentary films.

A fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, Bjerre is also noted as a lecturer.

In "China After Mao," Bjerre explores and explains drastic changes which have taken place since Mao Tse Tung's death — changes which have affected individuals as well as the fields of education, science and art in the world's most populous nation.

Jimmy Buffet Here Feb. 21

Jimmy Buffett, whose first hit was "A White Sport Coat and a Pink Stracciatella," will be in concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, February 21, in Minges Coliseum.

Tickets for the concert are priced at $8.50, and are now on sale at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, and are also to be sold in three local outlets. Tickets will also be sold at the door prior to the hour of performances if any are available at that time.

The Buffett concert is one of the major concert attractions being brought to campus by the ECU Student Union Major Attractions and Special Concerts Committee.

Critics have tried to classify Jimmy Buffett, but without any general agreement on where he fits into the American entertainment scene. He calls himself a "professional misfit," a professionally trained journalist (Auburn and the University of Southern Mississippi) who says he tries "not to let my education get in the way of my writing."

JIMMY BUFFETT

During his growing up years in Mobile, Alabama, Buffett turned out any number of country and western music songs. His first album, cut in Nashville, became misplaced, ending his initial try as a performer.

It was while traveling to Florida and getting together with a fellow drifter, Jerry Jeff Walker, that Buffett became inspired to make another try — and that time, thanks to Walker and Florida, things began to click. "White Sport Coat" and his next album, "Livin' and Dyin' In 3/4 Time" became successful.

After these initial successes, other hits that have followed include "Come Monday," "Cheeseburger in Paradise," and "A Pirate Look at 40."

Buffett's newest album, "Coconut Telegraph," is being promoted on Buffett's current tour.

Contest Announced For Logo

NEW BERN — The New Bern Preservation Foundation, Inc., announces a contest for the design of a logo to represent the organization's goals and activities.

The name of the organization was recently changed from Historic New Bern Foundation, Inc., to New Bern Preservation Foundation, Inc. to more accurately reflect its purpose.

The contest is open to anyone. Entries can be made in black and white or in two colors. The deadline for submission is February 14.

People interested in the contest are to write for background information and for a set of rules. Send request to: New Bern Preservation Foundation, Inc., P. O. Box 207, New Bern, N. C. 28560, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Announcement of winners will be made on or before March 15. Prizes will be awarded first and second place winners.

Groups Have Guest Night

The Greenville and Goldsboro chapters of the men's Society For The Preservation And Encouragement Of Barbershop Quartet Singing In America and the Greenville Chapter of the ladies' Sweet Adeline barbershop harmony organization are having a joint meeting and open house February 16th.

The joint meet will begin at 7:30 P.M. at the Greenville Parks and Recreation building at Jaycee Park. Admission is free and no prior musical training is required for guest participation.

The evening of song, fellowship and refreshments will feature instruction in the old American art form of four-part harmony. Guests will be offered the opportunity to participate in both chorus and quartet singing. Male and female quartets as well as the Goldsboro and Greenville choruses will perform as part of the evening's entertainment.

Story-Teller To Be Heard On Program

An Onslow County Woman noted for her story-telling and poetry will again be the featured entertainer in a program commemorating February as Black History Month February 15 at 5 p.m. at the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

The Echoes of Calvary and gospel singer Barbara Rodgers will join Louise Anderson, author of "Sammy Racer," a children's book published in the spring of 1979.

"It Is Time To Tell the Children." This depicts a journey through the black experience using drama, song, comedy and dance.

AILMENT'S BRUSH WITH HISTORY — Detail of St. Anne's hand, right, shows swollen joints and wrist which has led medical experts to speculate that subjects of Peter Paul Rubens, and perhaps the Flemish master himself, suffered from rheumatoid arthritis long before the disease was known to exist. "The Holy Family with St. Anne", now hanging in the North Carolina Museum of Art at Raleigh, was painted by Rubens between 1633 and 1635. (AP Laserphoto)

'Mr. Lincoln' To Be Presented

The Ayden Theatre Workshop will present "Mr. Lincoln" February 12 at 8 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School. Admission is $2 at the door.

The play, adapted from the life and words of our 16th president, through narration portrays the human side of Lincoln, his effect upon, and how he was affected by the events of his time. Some highlights of the play include excerpts from his speeches, anecdotes told by and about him, and a chorus that helps to tell his story in the fashion of Greek drama.

The cast includes Joel McLawhorn, Myriam Harris, Al Boswell, Kim Dale, Betty Dixon, Kathryn Dixon, Mary Dixon, Stacey House, Sam King, Ron Payne, Chris Phillips, Barbara Plummer, Joey Pollock, Molly Small, Elva Smith and Anton Wesley. Myriam Harris, music supervisor for Pitt County Schools, directs the chorus along with four other area music teachers.

On Display

Paintings and watercolors by painter Gregory Moll will be on view in the upper cases and gallery at Mendenhall Student Center today. The 30-piece show will run through Feb. 14.

Most of the paintings in Moll's showing are portraits of young women. The Mendenhall show is dedicated to one of his models, Annie Loeschke, an ECU student dancer and gymnast. Several other portraits are of a five-time national gold medal winner in ice dancing, Judy Sladky, who currently performs with Holiday on Ice. Moll met Sladky on a trip out west several years ago. He said that he had met several of his models only one time.

Moll, a 1978 graduate from the East Carolina University School of Art, said he tries to capture "the presence" of his models or that basic inner soul in people which never really changes. He said that photographs are his starting place, but it is only after a careful and honest observation of a person that he can bring out the energy and characteristics making them different from everyone else.

Cinema Society Offers Film

The Cinema Society of Greenville will be showing "Jules and Jim" today at 2 p.m. in the Hendrix Theatre at Mendenhall Student Center of the ECU campus.

"Jules and Jim" is a French new wave film directed by Francois Truffaut who starred in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." The film is about a comic love triangle that ends in death consisting of two male friends and an unpredictable woman.

Tickets for the remaining five shows of the Cinema Society may be purchased for $9 at Hendrix Theatre on Sunday. The remaining shows are "The Lady Killers" (March 1), starring Peter Sellers and Alec Guinness, "Orpheus" (March 22), directed by Jean Cocteau, "Get Out Your Handkerchiefs" (April 26), winner of the Academy Award for Best Foreign Film, and "The Last Wave" (May 3), directed by Peter Weir, who directed the other critically acclaimed thriller, "Picnic at Hanging Rock."

"The luck of having talent isn't enough; you must also have a talent for luck." — Hector Berlioz

Exhibit Planned

The East Carolina University Museum of Art/Gray Art Gallery, will install an important exhibition of paintings by nationally prominent artists.

The exhibition which is on loan from the permanent collection of the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte, will open February 15 at 1:00 P.M. and close on March 15 at 4:00 P.M.

Most of the paintings are large in size (4 by 6 feet) and include works dating from the last 25 years by such noted painters as Robert Natkin, Frank Faulkner, Stanley Boxer, Doris Leeper, Ben Schoenzeit, Carmen Cicero, and many others.

An opening reception will be held in the Gallery from 2:00-4:00 P.M. on Sunday, February 15. Refreshments will be served and the public is invited to attend.

Quiz Bowl Set

The 1981 Quiz Bowl, sponsored by Sheppard Memorial Library, is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 14 at 1 p.m. The Bowl will be held in the auditorium of the Library-Recreation Building, 200 Cedar Lane.

The Quiz Bowl is an academic competition for four-member teams of high school students. Participating in the bowl are Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, North Pitt and defending state Quiz Bowl champions J.H. Rose.

This year the four members of the winning team will receive savings bonds. These awards have been made possible by contributions from Burroughs-Wellcome, The Daily Reflector, Procter and Gamble, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., North Carolina National Bank and Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co.

Recitals Rescheduled

Student recitals scheduled for January 30 were cancelled because of snow. They have been rescheduled as follows: Catherine Styron, piano, 7:30 p.m., Thursday, February 12. Vanessa Malloy, voice, and Ira Jacobs, voice, senior recitals, 3:15 p.m., Sunday, February 8.

Both recitals will be held in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

'Great Decisions' Program

ECU News Bureau

"Great Decisions '81," a nationwide program of directed readings and discussions on major issues in world affairs, will be coordinated locally by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

Any citizen's group, or civic, church or social club may participate in "Great Decisions," an annual program sponsored by the non-partisan Foreign Policy Association.

Purpose of the "Great Decisions" program is to create a more informed public opinion on major world affairs issues, political, social and economic.

This year's topics are:

- "The U.S. and the Soviet Union: Dilemmas of Power and Peace,"
- "From Cairo to Kabul: Oil, Islam, Israel — and Instability,"
- "China after Normalization: How Good a Friend for the U.S.?"
- "South Africa: Can Race War Be Avoided?"
- "Central America and the Caribbean: New Political Earthquake Zone,"
- "Food: Humanity's Need, America's Interest,"
- "Made in U.S.A.: Is U.S. Competitiveness Slipping?"
- and
- "The World in 1981."

Each "Great Decisions" discussion group meets for a weekly discussion of a topic, using as background material the information in the 96-page "Great Decisions" booklet as well as material presented by invited speakers who are expert on various topics. After the series is concluded, each group participant will be given an opportunity to record his or her views on opinion ballots to be tabulated by public opinion experts at Columbia University.

Results of the poll are presented to members of Congress, the executive branch and the national media.

ECU, in cooperation with the Greenville "Daily Reflector," is sponsoring a series of open lectures on Thursday-evenings in ECU's Carol Beik Building, beginning Feb. 26.

Speakers include the following members of the ECU faculty who are specialists in "Great Decisions '81" topic areas:

Drs. Lawrence Hough and Sandra Wurth-Hough (Political Science), Drs. Robert Burger, Paul Tschetter and James Mitchell (Sociology and Anthropology), Dr. Robert Gowen (History) and Dr. Edward Leahy (Geography and Planning).

Further information about "Great Decisions" and the local program series is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, Greenville, N.C., telephone 757-6143.

Cost of Loving Is Up, Too

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Be advised young lovers: the cost of courtship may drive you to the poorhouse before you reach the altar.

A New York City economist says the cost of loving is up 419 percent since the early 1950s, while the cost of living has soared 158 percent.

Take a dozen roses: in the past 30 years their cost has jumped from $5 to $48.

A bottle of fine champagne that once cost $12 is now up to $50, and a marriage license that went for $2 in 1954 would cost a couple $22 today in San Diego.

Raymond DeVoe Jr., a market strategist for Bruns, Nordeman Rea & Co., a brokerage house, told The Evening Tribune Friday that he was trying to prove that Consumer Price Index figures are misleading and that inflation affects different people in different ways.

To illustrate this, he compiled a cost-of-loving index, comparing dating costs today with what he had to spend in the early 1950s in New York City.

Beginning with the cost of a first date over Cokes, DeVoe created a statistical representation of courtship based on 87 items, ending with the diamond engagement ring and honeymoon.

Other common items of courtship on the list include: $22 theater tickets, which 30 years ago cost $4; hockey tickets ranging from $7 to $9, which used to cost from 70 cents to $4.50; and a $5 movie ticket, which once set a bachelor back only $1.

In addition, census figures show that there are more single people dating nowadays than in the '50s. So the number of people for whom others want to buy luxuries is raising the cost of loving.

The median age for a woman's first marriage was 20.8 years in 1970, according to census figures. In 1979, it was 22.1 years.

And if the costly rituals involved in courtship aren't taxing enough, there's the honeymoon. DeVoe says, Seven days and six nights at a Bermuda island hotel today costs $950. In 1954, he says, it was $285.

General Assembly Roundup

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In the face of the Department of Transportation's growing problems with the bid-rigging scandal, House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green joined forces Friday and named a select legislative committee to look into the state's highway program.

The 10-member panel was ordered by the House and Senate leaders to look into the operation of the Transportation Department and examine its efficiency, its finances and its adherence to state budget regulations.

That action came on a day that saw the state House hold its first real debate of the four-week old 1981 session, on whether volunteer firemen should be required to have a special driver's license in order to drive large fire trucks. Both the House and Senate held brief sessions and wrapped up business before noon before recessing for the weekend.

The naming of the select committee comes as the Legislature's first real initiative in dealing with the deep financial troubles facing the state's highway-building program, as contained in the proposed state budget sent to the General Assembly by Gov. Jim Hunt.

It also comes as the Transportation Department is dealing with federal bid-rigging indictments against state paying contractors, which involve collusion in bidding on state highway projects.

Plus, one high-ranking employee in the department has been indicted in connection with the scandal.

"There is a cloud of suspicion hanging over the Transportation Department among the general public and in this Legislative Building," Ramsey told reporters in a rare appearance with Green at a news conference.

Chinese Dishes Discussed

A program of Chinese Cooking was held for the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club recently. Beatrice Yuan, a Cherry Oaks resident, gave the program preparing several Chinese dishes.

Betsy Little announced that Barbara Hall and Geneva Yadav will be co-chairmen for the couples' covered dish dinner on March 28 at the club house.

Laurie Charlton discussed the Tasting Luncheon planned for March 7. Crafts for the Country Store should be turned into Mary Jo Nason by March 3.

Meeting hostesses were Mary Scudder and Kay Fogg.

FAREWELL SERMON

Rev. Jimmie Stokes of Greenville will preach his farewell sermon tonight at 8 p.m. at the Cherry Lane FWB Church. Rev. Stokes, a tenth grade student at J.H. Rose High School, has been in the ministry for three and a half years.

The pastor, Rev. C.R. Parker, invites the public.

"Whether it's justified, I don't know," Ramsey added. "Almost weekly, something appears in the newspapers that reflects on this department."

Green, however, was more cautious and ruled out any investigative activity by the committee involving the bid-rigging scandal.

The panel will include two Republicans, including Sen. Gilbert Boger, R-Mocksville, who last month introduced a resolution calling for a legislative committee to investigate the Transportation Department and its bid-rigging scandal.

No deadline was set for the committee to report back to legislative leaders, and Green said the naming of the panel did not stem from dissatisfaction by legislators with the report of the 18-month study by a commission named by Hunt. That panel recommended higher gasoline taxes.

"Since they told us what the needs are and we're looking for money to meet those needs, I think it's appropriate to do this right now," Green said.

In other legislative action:

Volunteer Firemen
The House voted 81-10 to enact a Senate-passed measure that exempts volunteer firemen from having to hold a special, Class B drivers license in order to drive firetrucks weighing more than 30,000 pounds.

They previously have been required to hold the special, $10 licenses. But with the legislation, only a standard Class C drivers license, costing $4, will be required.

Although the vote was lopsided, it came after lengthy debate, in which Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said volunteer firemen should be required to undergo the training necessary to obtain the special license. Professional firemen must now have the special license, he said.

Taxes

The House approved and sent the Senate legislation raising the interest rates the state must pay on income-tax refunds to taxpayers who overpaid the state. Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, said the rate would be raised from 6 percent to a floating rate set by the federal government, currently at 12 percent.

Lilley said the bill was needed because taxpayers now get an interest rate of only 6 percent on their refunds, but they must pay an interest rate of 12 percent on excess money they owe the state.

The change will be phased in, and is expected to cost the state $375,000 this year and $800,000 or more in successive years.

The measure was approved 90-1, with only Miller dissenting.

Solar Energy

The House approved a bill backed by the Hunt administration, which would extend the current income-tax credit on installation of active solar-energy systems to also cover passive-solar systems.

The credit, for both homes and businesses, would amount to 25 percent of the system's cost, up to a maximum $1,000 credit.

Medicaid
A subcommittee agreed to consider places to cut as much as $30 million from the state's Medicaid program.

The fiscal research staff of the Legislature recommended a delay until later this month so it could draw up some more specific options for the joint base budget subcommittee on Human Resources to consider.

Bob Daughtry, staff analyst, said if the subcommittee wants to meet the 6 percent goal of cuts set by House and Senate leaders, about $30 million a year will have to be cut from the total program.

Since the program is almost two-thirds funded by the federal government, he said about $8.7 million will have to be cut from the proposed state operating budget the first year of the next biennium, and $9.2 million the second year. The rest of the cuts will come in federal money, he said.

Senate

The Senate gave final approval to a House bill that would eliminate the obligation by the state Board of Certified Public Accountants to issue state CPA licenses to someone holding a license in a foreign country. Sen. William Hancock, D-Durham, said it would avoid investigating other countries standards, which is too expensive.

New Bills

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run, filed a bill that would change the financing for area mental health programs. Hardison said the bill would eliminate "outright funding," such as state grants, and restrict all funding to a formula already in use based on population and other factors.

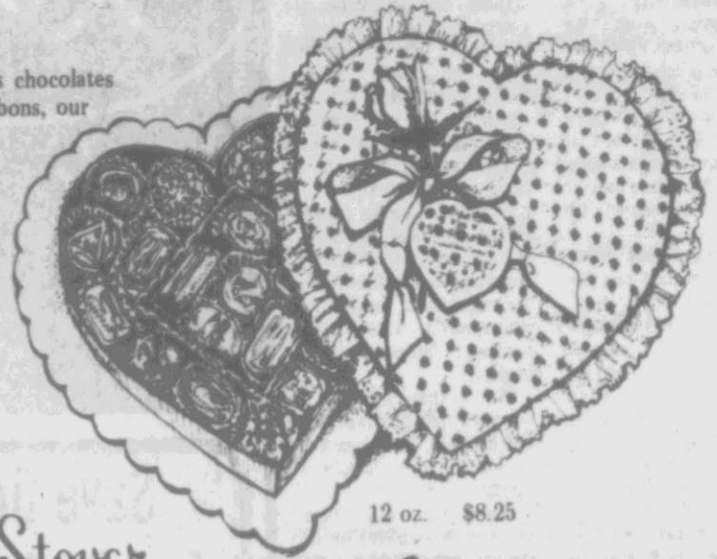

Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Winston-Salem, filed a bill repealing portions of the state's malpractice laws and setting a limit on legal liability actions so that they must be filed within 10 years.

Sen. Cary Allred, R-Burlington, filed a bill that would make it tougher to receive unemployment benefits. The bill would not allow prior training, experience or earnings as factors. Also, being unable to find a job that fits one's customary occupation would no longer come into play.

Banks, Emma Lift Blue Devils Past Maryland, 55-54

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. — Gene Banks scored 19 points and was carried off the Cameron Indoor Stadium floor as Duke captured a thrilling 55-54 basketball victory over 13th-ranked Maryland Saturday afternoon.

But it was Tom Emma who saved the day for the Blue Devils with two game-winning free throws with three seconds remaining. The sophomore guard, however, decided he did not want to be part of the post-game pandemonium and escaped to the lockerroom with the help of Duke football player Marvin Brown.

"I've been squashed before. I got crushed in high school. I didn't want that to happen again," Emma said.

Emma said free throw shooting is his specialty. So when he stepped to the free throw line he wasn't bit worried.

"I knew that I could make the free throws," he said. "Shooting free throws is the best thing that I do."

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said his team did not play well offensively in the first half, which was indicated by Duke's 33 percent performance from the field. But the coach was happy with the final outcome.

"We can't be more pleased with this win. Anytime you beat an ACC opponent it is a big win," Krzyzewski said.

Maryland's frustrating season now includes three losses on Tobacco Road, two of them this week. Coach Lefty Driesell remains perplexed by his team's poor play.

"The players played hard and I coached hard," Driesell said. "(We) just can't get it done. Congratulations on a great win for Duke and a tough loss for us."

The game turned into a series of streaks by both teams. Maryland appeared to have the game in hand when it established a 10-point lead midway through the second half.

But the Blue Devils refused to fold and remained within four points of the Terrapins going into the closing minutes.

With the score tied at 50, Gene Banks hit a follow-up to give a momentary lead, but Albert King tied the score at 52 on two free throws.

After both teams missed chances to score, Kenny Dennard was knocked to the floor and fouled by Dutch Morley. Force to leave the game because of an injury, seldom-used Jim Suddath replaced Dennard at the free throw line and hit one of two free throws. At that point Duke held a 53-52 lead with 45 seconds to play.

Greg Manning gave the Terps a 54-53 lead on a driving, twisting lay-up with 17 seconds remaining. But Manning, a 83 percent free throw shooter, missed a free throw to complete a three-point play and give Duke on last shot.

Emma was preparing to shoot from the right of the lane when he was hacked by Morley. Emma, the top free throw shooter in the ACC, then sank both free throws and decided the issue.

Manning attempted a 30-foot one-hander as the buzzer sounded. The shot rolled around the rim before coming out.

Maryland trailed 8-5 early in the first half when it scored nine unanswered points. Highlighting the spree was a two-shot technical foul converted by Manning. The call was made when Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski protested a non-call.

Duke fell behind by as many as eight points in the opening half and trailed 28-22 at intermission.

Gene Bank led Duke with 19 points, 13 in the second half. Vince Taylor added 17 as Duke raised its overall record to 13-8 and 4-5 in the ACC. For Maryland, Ernest Graham scored 16 points before fouling out with 10 minutes to play in the game. Manning had 14 and King added 10.

The Terrapins dropped their second straight ACC game and dropped to 5-4 in the league. Overall, Maryland is 15-6.

Athletes In Action Level East Carolina By 73-50

The Athletes In Action hit a sizzling 61.3 per cent of their shots in the first half and romped to a 73-50 basketball victory over East Carolina University last night.

For the AIA, the basketball arm of the Campus Crusade for Christ, it was the 23rd victory of the year against only eight losses. For the Pirates, it was simply an exhibition, and will not go down against their record.

The AIA, which ended up with a fine 59.3 percentage on the game, used their much better shooting percentage to do most of the damage. They were helped along by balanced scoring, both from the inside and out, and by good board work. They outrebounded the Pirates, 34-26, led by eight from Gig Sims, former UCLA player, and seven from Dan Frost of Iowa. Tim Hall of Colorado State and Steve Schall of Arkansas each pulled off six rebounds.

East Carolina, shooting only 41.1 per cent for the game, got only 39.4 per cent in the second half, despite closing the gap from 22 down to 16 before the AIA pulled away to as much as a 25-point lead late in the contest.

"We came into the game with the idea of using it as a gauge to see how far we've come and how we can play against top-rated outside competition," Coach Dave Odum said. "And I think I got a pretty good idea of what I wanted to see."

Odum said that comparing the game to the exhibition with Marathon Oil at the start of the season. "And even with the N.C. State game, I can see a lot of improvement. Our defense is better, and we scrapped from beginning to end. All in all I think we are a better team now, but we still have a long way to go."

Odum felt that the Pirate play early in the game got the Bucs into trouble that they never recovered from. "We played well early, before we got in awe of how high they could jump and how strong they were."

"And we played decent defense in the second half. We worked ourselves to death and we still couldn't catch up. When you play like that, you wonder if it's worth it, but if you don't work yourself to death, you get blown out completely," Odum added.

The coach felt that the key was not so much the defense of the Pirates, but the offense. "We got intimidated and went a long time without scoring much. Sometimes when you take a couple of bad shots, it becomes contagious."

Lady Bucs Capture 18th

Special To The Reflector

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — The strong inside play of Mary Denker and Marcia Girven carried East Carolina's 18th-ranked Lady Pirates to a 83-74 win over stubborn East Tennessee State Saturday.

Trailing 46-41 at the half, Denker scored six of her 29 points in 10-0 ECU spurt that gave the Pirates a 51-46 lead with 15:39 left. Girven added 14 of her 21 points in the second half and the duo combined for 17 rebounds.

Marsha Cowart, a 5-10 sophomore, was a one-woman show for the Lady Buccaneers scoring a school-record 35 points. Punky Mills added 16 for the 17-7 Buccaneers.

A pair of free throws by Sharon Allen gave East Tennessee a 60-59 lead with 10:48 left in the game. Then Girven and Denker scored ECU's 18 points to forge 77-72 lead.

A three-point play by foul-plagued Kathy Riley and three one-and-one free throw successes by Laurie Sikes iced the game in the final minute for ECU.

"We didn't play as well as we can play," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We're not jelling as we should. Coming through the way we did against a very good East Tennessee team, the kids did a great job."

"Cowart is fantastic. We had to put Marcia Girven, our six-footer, on her and she was the only one who could control her inside. We didn't deny the ball in the first half. They were getting the ball in front of us and shooting over us. But we changed that in the second half."

Riley and Sam Jones each drew three quick personal fouls in the first half as Cowart led East Tennessee to a five-point halftime advantage. Riley was whistled with her fourth foul just 22 seconds into the second half and sat out until the final six minutes.

Despite this, Riley scored 12 points and gathered four rebounds in her home state.

ECU is now 18-5 and travels to Appalachian State this afternoon.

Wake Forest Buries Georgia Tech, 86-56

ATLANTA (AP) — "When we're playing well, I think we're as good as any team," Coach Carl Tacy said Saturday after his 8th-ranked Wake Forest Deacons buried Georgia Tech 86-56 in a regionally-televised Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

The Deacons, struggling with a 41-36 advantage 14 minutes from the finish, suddenly exploded as Frank Johnson poured in eight points and added an assist during a 20-6 stretch that turned the game into a rout.

"I thought switching defenses was effective and we stayed in the press longer than maybe we should have, but we weren't getting that much out of it," Tacy said. "We were using it to set the tone of play more than anything else."

Tacy also said he had moved Johnson from point guard to the shooting guard spot moments before Wake Forest took command six minutes into the second half.

"You're not happy with losing, but you can't be depressed," said Georgia Tech Coach Dwane Morrison. "Losing a game like this shows our people how hard they have to work and the commitment they have to make to be a winner."

Morrison said Wake Forest was fresher than his tired team and "the key was their pressure in the second half. Their smarts and experience showed. They're a great basketball team."

The Deacons, who never trailed in the game, saw Tech slash a 12-point deficit to only five points, 41-36, before Johnson went to work, quickly hitting five straight points to start the Wake Forest streak.

The Deacons eventually built the lead to 60-40 with eight minutes remaining on a basket by Guy Morgan, the team's leading scorer with 16 points.

Wake Forest, now 18-2 overall and 6-2 in the ACC, stretched the lead to 81-51 with just over two minutes remaining as substitutes played most of the final five minutes.

Johnson finished with 14 points and Danny Young added 15 for the Deacons.

It was the seventh consecutive defeat for Tech, which fell to 4-17 overall and 0-11 in the ACC. It also was Tech's 15th setback in its last 16 games.

George Thomas led the Jackets in scoring with 17 points.

Johnson also had seven assists and two steals during the game.

The Deacons shot 56 percent from the field but a cold 54 percent from the free throw line, connecting only on 14 of 26.

Blue Devils Top Pirate Women, Men Swimmers

East Carolina University's men's and women's swim teams both were defeated by Duke University Saturday afternoon.

Duke downed the male Pirates, 64-49, while the Lady Devils won their half of the meet, 78-60.

The women, even in defeat, turned in some top performances. Dordi Henriksen collected two varsity records and qualified in three events for nationals. "Our women swam a real fine meet," Coach Ray Scharf said.

The men's team also turned in some good times, but not as good as expected. "Jan Wiklund and Doug Nieman swam really well. They have been working hard in practice and the work is starting to show," Scharf said.

The men are now 2-5 while the women are 6-3. Both the men and women will travel to Wilmington for the Seahawk Invitational on Feb. 19-21.

Aguirre Reaches 2,000 Point Mark DePaul Beats UAB

CHICAGO (AP) — All-American Mark Aguirre poured in 30 points Saturday night to become the first player in DePaul history to reach the career 2,000-point level and lead the third-ranked Blue Demons to a 77-66 victory over the University of Alabama-Birmingham.

Aguirre, dominating the boards and scoring from everywhere, hit 10 straight points early in the second half to help the Demons pull into an 11-point lead which the visiting Blazers were unable to overcome.

DePaul, 20-1, never trailed in the contest. The Blue Demons broke an early 44 tie on a basket by Skip Dillard and gradually sent UAB reeling to its fifth loss against 16 triumphs.

Aguirre had 15 of his points in the first half. He scored five straight early in the game to give the Demons a 13-6 lead. Seven minutes later, he scored two baskets in a row to give DePaul a 23-18 lead as he made his 2,001st point.

DePaul opened a 31-20 lead before the Blazers staged a comeback and outscored DePaul 10-2 in the final five minutes of the first half. A basket by Ronnie Spear cut the lead to 33-30 at the half.

Oliver Robinson, who topped UAB with 16 points, scored three baskets early in the second half to keep the Blazers within three points, but that was before Aguirre went on his spree to put the game out of reach.

Terry Cummings finished with 17 points for DePaul and Dillard added 14. Norm Anchrum had 12 for the Blazers.

at 68-68, Smith broke the tie 21 seconds into the overtime with two free throws. After FSU's James Bozeman tied the score on a short jumper with 3:37 remaining, Smith put Louisville out front for good 22 seconds later with another pair of free throws.

Cold-shooting Florida State twice narrowed the lead to one point, but dropped back as Smith added another two free throws and Lester Gordon sank a pair.

McCray led Louisville with 17 points, while Smith and Jerry Eaves scored 15 each and Gordon added 13.

Seminole center Elvis Rolle scored 15 points, guard Bobby Parks added 14, guard Mickey Dillard 13 points, and Bozeman and forward Kris Anderson scored 12 each.

Georgetown 75
 St. John's 68

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown University Coach John Thompson, who watched his team die by the foul shot earlier this year, watched his team thrive by it Saturday as the Hoyas converted 25 of 33 free throws enroute to a 75-68 Big East Conference victory over St. John's.

"A great team effort with everyone keeping their composure, especially at the foul line," Thompson said.

"The Hoyas needed all the help they could muster from the foul line as the Redmen outshot them from the field 49 percent to 41 percent.

Thompson also praised the play of guards Eric "Sleepy" Floyd and Eric Smith. Floyd led all scorers with 27 points. Smith scored 13 points, including 11 in the second half as the Redmen wiped out a five-point St. John's lead.

"Eric played extremely well hitting the baskets when we needed them," Thompson said.

The Hoyas took hold of the game with 3:44 remaining. After St. John's Frank Gilroy put the Redmen ahead 68-67 on two free throws, the Hoyas reeled off the final eight points of the game, including 6 of 7 from the foul line for the victory.

The win, the Hoyas fifth in a row, raised their overall record to 15-8. In the Big East, the Hoyas (5-3) pulled to within a half game of the league leading Redmen (6-3). St. John's is 15-5 overall.

The victory reversed a 68-60 St. John's victory recorded earlier this season in Jamaica, N.Y.

The win also continued the Hoyas' February hex. Thompson coached teams have now won 14 straight games in the month of February.

 Iowa St. 56

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Jon Sundvold hit four straight free throws after Iowa State Coach Johnny Orr was assessed two technical fouls for charging onto the floor and stopping the game and Missouri went on to a 70-56 victory over the Cyclones in Big Eight Conference basketball Saturday.

Missouri was leading 35-33 in the regionally televised game when Orr ran onto the floor waving his hands, stopping play with 14:11 left in the contest. Orr apparently was upset because Missouri's 6-foot-11 Steve Stipanovich stuck the ball in the face of Iowa State's 5-9 Lefty Moore after getting a rebound.

Sundvold made all four free throws after the technicals were called on Orr, giving Missouri a 39-33 lead. Missouri is in complete control after that, running off five straight points to build the margin to 53-41 with 7:18 remaining and going ahead 68-48 on a three-point play by Sundvold with 2:19 to go.

Sundvold and Ricky Frazier each scored 19 points as Missouri sent its record to 16-7 overall and 5-3 in the league. Stipanovich added 17 points and Curtis Berry scored 11.

Iowa State, which fell to 8-12 and 1-7, was led by Ron Harris' 14 points. Robert Estes added 12 for the Cyclones, who lost for the fifth straight time.

Missouri took a 28-26 halftime lead after Iowa State went nearly 5½ minutes without scoring.

Birdie Ties Floyd With Stadler

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ray Floyd birdied the final hole with what he called "a miraculous shot" that finished off a 71 and tied him with Craig Stadler for the third-round lead Saturday in the $250,000 Wickes-Andy Williams San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

Floyd, who counts the Masters and PGA national championship among his 12 career victories, dropped an eight-foot putt on the 18th hole — well after the national television cameras had left the course — to gain his share of the top spot with a 207 total.

But the minor miracle occurred on his third shot to the par-5. He was short and right, in deep rough and in a bad lie with a sand trap between him and the hole.

"The green was hard as a table," he said. "There was no way I could put the ball in the air and stop it close to the hole."

He elected to hood a seven iron and run it through the sand, up a bank and down a slope to the hole. And he pulled it off.

"It was really an impossible shot," said Floyd. "I'll take a bag of balls out there and defy any player to get the ball close. But I wasn't going to give up on it. I had to try something."

Stadler, 30 points lighter than when he won two titles last year, vaulted past 15 players with a 5-under-par 67 and matched Floyd's 54-hole total, 9 strokes under par on the 7,002-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

Tied at 208, a single stroke back, were Jeff Mitchell, George Burns, Tom Jenkins and Ron Streck. Mitchell had a 68 in the cool, sunny weather that produced a light breeze blowing in from the cliffs bordering the Pacific. Burns shot 69 and Jenkins and Streck had 71s.

John Cook, who won the Bing Crosby in a five-man playoff, was another stroke back at 209 and tied with John Schroeder, Doug Black, Bob Eastwood and Jim Simons.

"It's just like last week," Cook said with a look to Sunday's final round of the chase for a $54,000 first prize. "If you can keep it close, anything can happen."

He had a third-round 67, Schroeder shot 69, Black 70, Eastwood 71 and Simons 72.

Johnny Miller, who had the lead halfway through the day's play, took 39 over the back. He finished with a 73 and a 210 total. Cesar Sanudo, who was tied for the second-round lead, took a fat 76 and was at 212. He was tied at that figure with defending champion Tom Watson, who had a 69.

At one time or another, eight men held or shared the lead during the third round, and when it was finished 11 players were within two shots of the top.

"When you have so many players so close, somebody always seems to shoot a good round and pull away from the pack," Floyd said. "It should make for an interesting last round."

Stadler, a native of San Diego, summarized his day's play very briefly: "I birdied all the par-fives; that was the key," he said.

Playing about an hour in front of Floyd, he 2-putted the 18th for birdie-4 and the lead alone.

Floyd started poorly. He made double-bogey on the second hole, missing the green with his second shot and then watching in disbelief when his chip hung up in a clump of grass well short of the putting surface.

He got back to even for the day with birdies on the eighth and ninth, then saved his best for last, the "miracle shot" on the 18th that set up the birdie to tie for the lead.

- SAN DIEGO (AP) — Third-round scores Saturday in the $250,000 Wickes-Andy Williams San Diego Open Golf Tournament on the 7,002-yard, par-72 South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club:

ECU Gymnasts Score 120 But Defeated By Longwood

FARMVILLE, Va. — East Carolina gymnastic coach Jon Rose got his 120 points as his Lady Pirates scored a school record but it wasn't enough as Longwood College held off ECU, 129.75 to 120.4 to take a tri-meet Saturday. Virginia Tech, without a full team, was third with 77.8 points.

The Pirate point total was a regular season record for ECU, breaking the mark set last year. The old record was a 119.7.

"We finally attained that elusive 120," Rose said. "If we had hit a little sharper we could have had 122."

The Pirates passed the 120-point mark despite not having star all-around performer Elizabeth Jackson, who dislocated her elbow. Jackson may be back for the regionals set for March 13.

Freshman Nan George was back for ECU, however, following a knee injury but did not place. She had a 6.45 on the bars.

Lisa Tammaru finished third on the balance beam with a score of 7.65. Jennifer Bell was fifth with a 7.45.

Taking fifth places also were Claudia Hauk (uneven bars, 7.5) and Louise Mathews (vault, 8.2). Freshman walkon Joanie Ford scored an 8.2 on the floor exercise and Tammaru had an 8.0 but neither placed.

ECU travels to Chapel Hill Tuesday to face North Carolina.

Beaten Twice By Smokers

The Winston-Salem Smokers defeated the Greenville Steelwheels twice, 69-60 and 60-50, Saturday afternoon in wheelchair basketball action.

In the opener, the Steelwheels were led by Theron Moye's 24 points and Richard Hudson's 20. In the second game, Hudson had 16 and was the lone Greenville player in double figures.

Greenville is now 8-10 in the conference while Winston-Salem finishes up 19-1 to win the league title.

The Steelwheels play host to Asheville Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Elm Street gym.

Greene Central's 57-55 overtime victory over D.H. Conley Friday night was a classic example of how adversity can bring a team together. Without wing guard David Joyner, ruled academically ineligible two weeks ago, and down by as many as 12 in the fourth period, the Rams rallied to win their most important game of the season.

A win by Conley Friday night would have clinched at least a tie for the league title. The victory never came. From the view of D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh, the reasons were two — poor free throw shooting and one Phillip Hill.

The Vikings hit just four of 10 free throws and missed the front end of one and-ones in the last four minutes that could have sealed the win. On the other end of the floor, as he had done most of the night, Hill was turning in a superb performance.

"Hill came to play," Marsh said afterwards. "Their big man came to play and ours didn't."

For the night, Hill pumped in 25 points and pulled down 12 rebounds. Not bad for a senior who is playing organized basketball for the first time. His counterpart at center, Conley's Sammy Tyson scored six points and pulled down nine rebounds.

"Phillip's been doing it all year for us," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said afterwards. "He's been the nucleus of our club."

Hill, however, had some help from his friends. Forward John Ray scored eight of his 10 points in the final 3:43 of the game, including a jumper from the right baseline with four seconds left that sent the game into overtime. Al Speight also had 10 points and it was he, along with point guard David Shirley, that constantly fed Hill and Ray inside.

And it was Shirley who provided the victory margin when he hit both ends of a one-and-one with 13 seconds left in overtime.

"We wanted 'em," Shirley said as he dressed in the lockerroom. "We were hungry for this game."

Godwin had to agree. "It's not sweet without Joyner," he said, "but it's sweet to win without who I think was the best guard in the league."

It was even sweeter to win after being down by 12 with 4:25 left. But Godwin had become accustomed to his clubs rallying this season.

"To tell the truth, it would have been easy to say I felt the boys could win it after it's over," Godwin said. "But they've never given up this year and I thought we'd come back."

"We were down to North Pitt by 12 in the first half and came back and then got behind by 14 in the second half and got within five. Charles B. Ayecock had us by 14 at our place to start with and we came back to win that one. I just never give up on the boys."

And Friday night the boys didn't give up either.

For an official, judgment is as necessary a requirement as knowledge of the rules. This past Thursday night when East Carolina met North Carolina in women's basketball judgment took a back seat to the rules, one of which is in the rule book and another that is not.

Early on, Tom Salerno asked that the organ now being used to spur the crowd on at Minges be silenced. Fine. That's a rule. It's in black and white.

The same was not so later in the game.

In women's basketball there are, on either end of the court, 30 second clocks on the floor. A team has 30 seconds to shoot. Obviously, it is a necessity that the players be able to see the clock.

Salerno, as a good official should, noticed two or three people standing in front of the 30 second clock and asked P.A. announcer Henry Hinton to have them move. It was what came moments later that left those at the scoring table and Coach Cathy Andruzzi amazed.

"He said, 'I want those people to sit down that are in front of the thirty second clock.'" Hinton said. "I said fine. Then, he said, 'As a matter of fact until we get everybody in the stands we ain't gonna play any more ball.'"

"I said, 'What? Is that a rule?' And he said, 'That's my rule.'"

Coaches have always accused officials of making up their own rules but here's one reportedly admitting to doing just that.

Lendl Overcomes Unseeded Moor

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Second-seeded Ivan Lendl survived four match points in the third-set tiebreaker and pulled out a 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (9-7) victory Saturday night over unseeded Terry Moor in Saturday night's semifinals of the United Virginia Bank Tennis Classic.

Lendl, of Czechoslovakia, will play for top money of $35,000 Sunday against the winner of a second semifinal matching fifth-seeded Roscoe Tanner and eighth-seeded Yannick Noah of France.

In the opening night match, which lasted 2 hours and 35 minutes, Lendl fell behind in every set and was down 6-3 in the third-set tiebreaker, but Moor was unable to cash in on three match points.

Lendl fell behind 7-6 in the tiebreaker but held off Moor again, then went ahead 8-7 on a shot that ticked the net and fell

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dale Ellis, benched for missing a practice, scored 22 points in a substitute's role Saturday night to lead No. 10 Tennessee to an 87-71 Southeastern Conference basketball upset of No. 6 Kentucky.

Ellis, a sophomore forward, scored only 6 points through nine minutes of play in the first half, which Tennessee completed with a 43-39 edge. But the margin quickly widened in the second half as Ellis poured in another 16 points.

Tennessee's 4-point bulge at the intermission came after the Volunteers had jumped ahead 36-25 with less five minutes left. The Wildcats, however, behind sophomore center Sam Bowie and guard Dirk Minniefield, kept things close throughout the contest.

The 7-foot-1 Bowie finished the night with a game-high 26 points. Minniefield added 14 and reserve Derrick Hord, from Bristol, Tenn., added 10. Minniefield fouled out with 3:08 left in the game.

For the Vols, Gary Carter wound up with 18. Howard Wood, a senior center, collected 17, while Michael Brooks got 14 and Ellis' replacement, Dan Federmann had 10.

With the win, Tennessee — unbeaten at home — goes to 16-4 overall, 8-4 in the SEC, while Kentucky slips to 16-4 and 9-3 in conference play.

Swed Falls To McEnroe

Borg Drops 2nd Straight

TORONTO (AP) — The Ice Man remembers the losses. They're so few in recent memory, however, he can almost tick them off on his fingers.

Asked when he last lost two consecutive matches, Bjorn Borg replied: "Impossible."

Borg, 24, admitted he couldn't recall losing in the first round of a tournament or even two straight in exhibition matches.

So, because the Swedish star didn't reach the final of the $500,000 Molson Tennis Challenge, the eight-man round-robin competition at Maple Leaf Gardens may go down as a moment to remember.

The world's top player lost his straight second match Saturday in a marathon semifinal to John McEnroe 6-3, 3-6, 7-6. McEnroe struggled with Borg and a sometimes-hostile crowd to win the third-set tie-breaker 10-8.

McEnroe will face fellow New Yorker Vitas Gerulaitis for the $175,000 top prize.

Gerulaitis, who lost 6-3, 6-3 to McEnroe in round-robin play Friday, upset Jimmy Connors 6-7, 6-2, 6-2 in Saturday's second semifinal. Connors won the 12-point first-set tie-breaker 7-1.

Gerulaitis shrugged off his first-set loss and finished strongly, serving 13 aces at Connors to raise his total to 22 regionally televised Pacific 10 Conference basketball game Saturday.

The Sun Devils never trailed in the game, but they were pressured as the Cougars ran off a 12-2 string which cut a 42-27 Arizona State halftime lead to three points with three minutes gone in the second half.

From there, Scott went to work and senior forward Sam Williams added eight more points as the Sun Devils eased away from Washington State and led 71-60 with 1:30 left.

The victory was Arizona State's ninth in league play against one loss. Senior center Alton Lister had 13 points for the Sun Devils, Williams had 15 and junior guard Lafayette "Fat" Lever with 10.

Arizona State is now 17-2 overall.

Junior guard Ken McFadden took game-high scoring honors with 27 points for Washington State. Sophomore forward Steve Harriell had 19 points for the Cougars.

The loss lowered Washington State's record to 2-9 in the Pac-10 and 9-11 overall.

Indiana 66

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue guard Kevin Stallings hit a pair of foul shots with five seconds remaining Saturday and the Boilermakers, taking advantage of Indiana's poor performance at the free throw line, beat the 17th-ranked Hoosiers 68-66 in a Big Ten basketball game.

Purdue rallied from a 14-point deficit in the first half and from eight points down midway through the final period. Freshman center Russell Cross led Purdue with 20 points, seven of them in a 15-4 burst that put the Boilermakers in front at 65-62 with under four minutes remaining.

Indiana managed only four free throws in 12 second-half attempts, but two of them by Ted Kitchel and one by Randy Wittman tied the game at 65-65 with 2:52 to go. Isiah Thomas stole the ball and was fouled, but he missed the first of a possible one-and-one free throw opportunity. Then Cross put Purdue ahead with a free throw when Indiana's Ray Tolbert fouled out with 1:11 to go.

Thomas, who led the Hoosiers with 20 points, then hit one of two free throws to tie the game at 66-66, and Purdue held the ball until Stallings was fouled in the closing seconds.

The Hoosiers, falling to 7-3 in the conference and 14-8 overall, had a chance to tie the game but Thomas was called for double dribbling with two seconds to go. Purdue then made an inbounds error but a shot by Thomas at the buzzer was off the mark.

For the game, Indiana missed 14 of 26 free throw attempts, while Purdue hit 18 of 22.

Drake Morris added 12 points and Brian Walker finished with 10 as Purdue raised its record to 6-4 in the Big Ten and 13-6 overall. Thomas was backed by Kitchel with 16 points, Tolbert with 14 and Wittman with 13.

Wisconsin 64

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's Mike McGee poured in 24 points before fouling out to lead the 14th-ranked Wolverines to a 71-64 Big Ten Conference basketball victory over Wisconsin Saturday.

Michigan jumped to a 15-7 lead. But the Badgers took a 16-15 edge midway through the first half behind the shooting of forward Claude Gregory, who scored eight points of his 14 points during a 4½ minute stretch.

The Wolverines rallied as Thad Garner converted three steals into easy fast-break baskets and Michigan went into the lockerroom with a 32-29 halftime lead. Garner scored 11 of his 15 points in the first half.

Michigan, 7-3 in the Big Ten and 16-3 overall, led by as many as eight points in the second half as McGee hit on seven of nine shots from the floor.

Although Gregory was held to only two second-half points, junior guard John Bailey kept Wisconsin in the game by pouring in 15 points, including a jumper that cut the Wolverines lead to four, 66-62.

With just 54 seconds left in the game, Garner hit on both ends of a one-and-one foul situation and freshman guard Dan Pelekoudas converted on a three-point play to ensure the victory.

The Badgers, 2-8 in the Big Ten and 8-10 overall, were led by Bailey's 21 points, while center Larry Petty added 15.

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Steve Kraficis' 14 second-half points fueled No. 15 Iowa to a 77-66 victory over No. 18 Illinois in Big Ten Conference basketball Saturday.

The victory avenged last week's 13-point loss to the Illini and pushed Iowa, 15-4 overall and 7-3 in the league, into a three-way tie with Indiana and Michigan for first place in the conference. Illinois dropped to 14-5 and 6-4.

Iowa pulled to a 23-21 lead with just under six minutes to play in the first half and took command with a 34-23 halftime edge.

Two baskets by Kenny Arnold and another by Vince Brookins gave the Hawkeyes their biggest lead of the game, 40-25, with 18:03 to play.

But the Illini refused to buckle. Steady shooting by Mark Smith and reserve Craig Tucker's three long jumpers within three minutes pulled Illinois to 49-45 with 11:34 remaining.

That's when Kraficis, who did not score in the first period, took over. He scored two field goals and a free throw to stretch Iowa's lead to 58-51 with 7:26 left.

Illinois got into foul trouble and Iowa salted the victory with 10 points from the free throw line.

Brookins, Arnold and Kevin Boyle had 12 points each for Iowa and Bob Hansen had 11. Illinois was paced by Smith and Eddie Johnson with 15 apiece and Tucker and Derek Holcomb had 10 each. Iowa out-rebounded Illinois 44-30 and was led by Kraficis' nine.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Herb Williams and Clark Kellogg teamed for 48 points and 21 rebounds Saturday night, sparking Ohio State to a 73-61 victory over Michigan State that kept the Buckeyes in the thick of the Big Ten basketball race.

Williams scored 25 points and Kellogg added 23 points and 14 rebounds as Ohio State ran its league record to 6-4. The Buckeyes are 11-8 overall.

Jay Vincent had 27 points before fouling out for Michigan

State, 9-10 overall and 3-7 in the conference. The Spartans had beaten the Buckeyes 60-54 one week earlier.

Ohio State held Michigan State without a basket for more than seven minutes starting the second half, rolling up a 37-27 lead. Michigan State was never closer than five points thereafter.

Vanderbilt 72

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Sophomore Dominique Wilkins and freshman Vern Fleming combined for 49 points Saturday night and led Georgia to an 80-72 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over the Vanderbilt Commodores.

Wilkins' SEC-leading scorer with a 23.3 average, poured in 27 points and Fleming contributed a career-high 22 as the Bulldogs lifted their record to 13-7 overall and 6-6 in the SEC.

Georgia, shooting a torrid 79 percent from the field in the first half, took a 47-35 advantage at intermission and never led by less than six points the rest of the way.

Vandy cut the margin to six points four times in the second half, the last at 72-66 on a pair of Mike Rhodes free throws with 2:08 remaining, but Wilkins responded with four straight free throws over the next 40 seconds to put the game out of reach.

Farmer, Bruins Shoot Down Rose, 87-75

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last month, when Rose High School and Wilson Beddingfield first clashed, two very important elements of the Bruin game were missing: center Ed Farmer and point guard Mike Branch.

It enabled the Rampants to take a 67-65 overtime victory in the game on the Bruin court.

Friday night, the two teams held a return match in Greenville. This time, Farmer and Branch were whole and healthy. And it showed.

Farmer, who dominated play from the start, dumped in 32 points, including 16 of 17 at the foul line. Branch added 17 points.

It was a close game, however, until a controversial call at the start of the final period turned things around for the Bruins.

Rose entered the final quarter down by just three, 60-57. Almost a minute into the period, Farmer came charging down the lane and smashed into John Sheppard.

It was a call that could have gone either way. Rose coach Jim Brewington felt, "I thought Big John had position, but maybe they (the officials) felt Farmer didn't have enough room to come down."

At any rate, Sheppard was called for blocking - his fifth foul. The unbelieving Sheppard reacted to the referee's pointing hand and squirmed on the floor, rolling over a couple of times in mental agony. That brought on a technical foul.

Farmer then dropped in two free throws on the personal and added the technical. Antonio McCray broke to the basket on the inbounds play, taking a pass to score almost unguarded to complete the five-point swing, and Rose was down 65-57.

They never recovered.

Beddingfield had the hot hand throughout the game, hitting 26 of 42 shots from the floor, an amazing 66.7 per cent. Rose, having trouble with the Beddingfield press, hit on only 30 of 69 shots, 43.5 per cent.

It wasn't that the Beddingfield defense took the ball away that often; Rose had 18 turnovers, and the Bruins had 26. It was just that Rose forced a number of shots trying to get through to the inside.

And when Rose went on defense, it's main play seemed to be the back. Beddingfield went to the line 39 times, connecting on 31. That was the difference in the game, as Rose outshot them from the floor by four points. But Rose made just 15 of 23 free throw attempts.

Rebounding was almost the same, 36-34, in Beddingfield's favor.

"Farmer was the big difference," Brewington said. "He's a super player."

"I thought we played better than in the last two games, but they were just too much for us. We made a lot of fouls, and maybe they called it a little closer than they usually do, I don't know. We were pumped up for the game, but the fouls did us in."

Brewington refused to call it quits, however. "There is still a lot of season left. It's a long way from being over and we're not going to give up."

As to his own players, he singled out Donald Johnson and William Battle for special praise. Johnson led the Rose scoring with 25 points, while Battle tossed in 18. They were the only Rampants in double figures.

Rose got initial basket, but Randy Loftin tapped in a missed shot for Beddingfield for a 6-4 lead. Beddingfield kept the lead throughout the rest of the period, only to lose it in the final 20 seconds. Freddy Cherry tied it up with two free throws with 16 seconds left, and Russell Perkins scored off a fast break with seven seconds left for an 18-16 lead for the Rampants.

Beddingfield regained the lead after a slam dunk by Farmer tied it, and he added a free throw 20 seconds later, 21-20. Rose tied it up twice the rest of the period, 23-23 and 26-26, but behind the scoring of Farmer, the Bruins eased ahead again, moving out to a seven point lead at the end of the period, 40-33.

Late in the third period, Beddingfield boosted its lead to eight, 54-46, but Johnson sparked a comeback for Rose, cutting the lead to 56-55, as the Rampants ran off seven in a row. Beddingfield popped in two to Rose's one basket in the final minute, however, to take a 60-57 lead into the final quarter.

Then, after the call that benched Sheppard and added five quick points to the Bruin score, Beddingfield added two more field goals before Rose could score. During the first five minutes of the period, Beddingfield outthrew Rose, 19-6, and pumped the lead out to 79-63, more than the Rampants could overcome.

In addition to the points of Farmer and Branch, Thomas and Randy Loftin each added ten.

Beddingfield's girls, after having early problems, came back with 17 straight points over the final stages of the first and early stages of the second period to put the game on ice.

Rose got out to an early 4-1 lead on baskets by Jamie Teel and Mary Gay. But Beddingfield, led by 13 points by Sylvia Hill, rolled through 17 in a row while Rose went scoreless. By the end of the steak, Beddingfield had an 18-4 lead with 4:57 left in the half.

They extended that lead to 15 and took a 29-16 lead into the second half.

Things got no better for Rose in that half, as the lead continued to climb to the final 25 point margin.

"I've got to give 'em (Beddingfield) credit," Coach Dennis Gibson said of his opponent. "They are a quick, explosive team. We did a better job against their fast break, however. We took patient shots and set the tempo in the game, something we didn't do in the first game when they beat us by 50 points. I knew we couldn't stay with them in a pressing game, so we stayed with a zone when we were on defense."

Gibson looked at the scoreboard. "We cut it in half this time, so I guess we did better. We didn't give it to 'em this time, we made 'em work for it."

Hill finished with 26 points, while Gloria Burks had 18. Frances Barnhill, coming off a suspension by Gibson for one game, scored 12 points to lead Rose.

The Beddingfield girls are now 8-2 in league play and 14-4 overall. Rose is now 1-9 and 1-14.

The Rampants play host to Bertie on Tuesday.

Crumel Sparks Firebirds Past Chargers, 82-55

LITTLEFIELD — Anthony Crumel poured in 22 points and pulled down 12 rebounds and McCullen Wiggins and Norman Mitchell each added 15 to lead Southern Nash to an easy 82-55 victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton won its first conference game of the season, defeating the Lady Firebirds, 49-48, in overtime.

"We were flat," Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphy said. "We seemed up for the game but that seemed to work against us. It went from bad to worse and it was real contagious."

The Chargers treated the boards as if they were contagious. The Firebirds, who led the league in rebounding averaging 35 a game, out-rebounded Ayden-Grifton, 44-30.

Going into the game, Crumel was the league's leading scorer at 16.1 and second leading rebounder at 10.3. It was his early work that helped pace the Firebirds to a 17-11 lead after the first period.

From there, Southern Nash outscored Ayden-Grifton 20-14 in the second period to take a 37-25 halftime lead. The Chargers, never really in the game, never threatened after that.

The Firebirds outscored Ayden-Grifton 15-8 and 30-22 in the final two periods to hand the Chargers their fourth straight loss. Ayden-Grifton is 8-12 overall and 6-8 in the ECC.

Southern Nash ups its record to 14-7 overall and 11-4 in the league, one-half game back of Greene Central and D.H. Conley, who are tied for first.

Joining Crumel, Wiggins and Mitchell in double figures for the Firebirds was Tony Tayborn with 12 points. The Chargers were led by Timmy Edwards' 12 points and Chris Phillips' 10.

later, Brown took a pass along the right baseline and sank the winning shot.

Ayden-Grifton was led by Angela Griffin's 15 points. Brown added 10. Southern Nash was led by Harrison's 23 points. Betsy Austin had 11 and Melissa Morgan 10 for the Lady Firebirds, who are now 9-12 overall and 6-9 in the ECC.

Southern Nash led after the first period, 9-8, and at the half, 21-17. However, Ayden-Grifton rallied to take the lead in the third period and led, 31-29, going into the final quarter.

The Lady Firebirds battle back and tied it up late to send the game into overtime, where the Chargers finally won it.

Lakers Top Bear Gras

SWAN QUARTER — Mattamuskeet High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt Conference games from Bear Grass Friday night. The Lakers won the boys' game, 58-51, and took the girls' contest, 58-39.

In the girls' game, Bear Grass, already knocked out of contention in both the league and district tournaments, inched out to a 9-8 lead. But Mattamuskeet came back with a 15-8 margin in the second period to take a 23-17 halftime lead.

The Lady Lakers extended that margin to 38-23 during the third period and outscored Bear Grass, 20-16, in the final quarter.

Dora Harris led Mattamuskeet with 18 points, while Celeste Mann had 15 and Joanne Whitaker had 14. Angie Mizelle led Bear Grass with 22 points.

Mattamuskeet managed a slim 14-13 lead after one period, and it stayed close the rest of the half. Bear Grass came back with a 12-11 margin in the second quarter to knot it at intermission, 25-25.

But the third period did in the Bears. They managed only four points while the Lakers dumped through 17, and powered out to a 42-29 lead. Bear Grass came back with a 22-16 margin in the final period but it wasn't enough.

Reece Collins led the Lakers with 23 points, while Vincent Whitfield added 16. Bear Grass was led by William Roberson with 13, while Clay Gardner and Rudy Brown each had 10.

Bear Grass is now 7-11 in league play and 9-15 overall. The girls are 3-15 and 5-19. Mattamuskeet's boys climb to 13-4, 13-4, while the girls are 12-5, 12-5.

Bear Grass plays host to Jamesville on Tuesday.

Roanoke Rolls By Washington

WASHINGTON — Maurice Chance poured in 21 points and Angelo Spruill added 14 to lead Roanoke to an easy 60-44 victory over Washington Friday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, the Redskins dropped their second game this season, losing to the Pam Pack, 36-31.

The win left Roanoke's boys, now 17-3 overall, tied for the conference lead with Tarboro, which defeated Edenton, 69-61, Friday night. Both clubs are 10-2 in the league.

The Redskins led Washington after the opening eight minutes, 18-10, and at the half, 32-22, and then coasted home with the victory, outscoring Washington 17-15 and 11-7 in the final two quarters.

Joining Chance and Spruill in double figures for Roanoke was Ricky Highsmith with 13 points. Washington, now 5-15 and 5-7, was led by Earl Smith's 13 points. Garius Manning had 10 for the Pam Pack.

In the girls' game, Washington, behind Robin McClean's 16 points and Kim Gilford's 12, handed the Redskins their second conference loss in 12 starts. Roanoke is 18-2 overall.

Rams Rebound, Nip Vikings In OT, 57-55

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — When Greene Central lost star guard David Joyner last week and subsequently dropped a 61-55 decision to Southern Nash Tuesday night, the Rams' death notices were beginning to circulate.

Much of the Rams' success this season has centered on Joyner, who was averaging 14 points and 4.3 assists a game before being ruled academically ineligible two weeks ago. Without him, the Rams figured not to be quite as quick nor as deep.

Figure again. The Rams proved there is life — and victories — after D.J. In fact, the Rams may have been born again Friday night.

Phillip Hill led Friday evening's revival with 25 points and 12 rebounds and diminutive point-guard David Shirley chipped in two clutch free throws with 13 seconds left to help lift Greene Central past D.H. Conley, 57-55, in overtime.

Earlier, in the girls' game, D.H. Conley edged Greene Central, 42-41.

ECC, one-half game ahead of Southern Nash and a game ahead of North Pitt.

The Rams, who end the season at home against Farmville Central Tuesday night and North Lenoir Friday, have now beaten Conley twice this season. Thus, if the league race ends with the two teams tied for first the title would go to Greene Central.

This after having struggled Tuesday without Joyner. "We didn't play too well Tuesday night," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "That was the first time without Joyner and we played like we were gonna lose and we lost."

"Finally, we had a little talk and I told the kids if we were gonna win this we were all gonna have to tighten our belts."

The talk must of helped. Down 49-37 with 4:25 left in regulation, the Rams tightened their belts another notch and before scoring 10 unanswered points — all within five feet of the goal — to cut the deficit to 49-47.

Two free throws by Sammy Tucker, who led Conley with 16 points, put the Vikings up, 51-47, but the Rams tied it on two buckets by John Ray, the last a jumper in the midst of three players from the right baseline with just four seconds to go to send the game into overtime.

Conley had its chances to win during regulation. Five times the Vikings went to the foul line with one-and-one opportunities in the last 3½ minutes. Only once did they connect, when Tucker hit two. Twice Keith Gatlin, who finished with 10 points, missed the front end of a one-and-one. Tommy Joyner and Anthony Burney each missed once.

In the three minute overtime, the Rams went ahead, 55-53, on a bucket by Roderick Lane with 59 seconds left. Lane, who was fouled on the play, missed the free throw.

Conley, however, missed two shots on their ensuing trip down court — a short jumper by Burney and a follow by Tucker. Moments later, the Vikings fouled Shirley.

Shirley calmly swished both free throws to put the Rams up by four, 57-53, with 13 seconds left. Tucker hit a jumper six seconds later and when Al Speight's inbounds pass hit the middle support bracket with six seconds remaining the Vikings had a chance. Gatlin, however, was called for walking and moments later the game ended.

"I wouldn't have rather had anyone on the line than Shirley," Godwin said. "He's tough under pressure."

"Coach has told us every day just shoot them in the game like you do at practice," Shirley added. "So I went up there and did it just like I do in practice."

"Yea, I wanted it. When we were in the huddle with six seconds to go I told them to get me the ball and I'd make them (the free throws)."

The same could not be said of the Vikings.

"What happened tonight was what I've told the kids would sometime this season," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "We've not been working very hard on free throws and hitting only four of (11) just ain't gonna win any games for you."

"The reason we're not making them is the kids aren't getting in the gym and practicing. They're suppose to do that on their own and they haven't been doing that."

What the Vikings did do, at least until the last quarter, was hold onto the lead. Conley trailed only once, in the opening minute, until the Rams took the lead early in overtime.

Conley, which finished the night hitting 26 of 52 field goals (50%) led after the first period, 14-11, thanks in part to three long jumpers by Tucker. The Vikings stretched that to 23-16 with 2:19 but led at the half by only two, 25-23.

The Vikings outscored the Rams 16-8 in the third period and led at the close of the quarter, 41-31 — their biggest lead up to that point.

The lead quickly went to 12 (47-35 and 49-37) before two time outs by Greene Central helped get the Rams back into the game.

Working patiently, the Ram guards began to find Ray and Hill, who worked much of the fourth period and all the overtime with four fouls, inside against Conley's 2-3 zone. The Rams, who ended the night shooting 47% (25 of 53) did not miss a shot in the last three minutes of regulation as Ray hit three times and Hill twice in the midst of a 14-2 run that sent the game into overtime before Greene Central eventually won.

"The boys never gave up," Godwin said. "This was a great time to have a great comeback."

The girls' game was just as close. After trailing by as many as five in the first half, D.H. Conley rallied to take the lead midway through the third period and hold on for the victory.

Down 40-36 with 5:33 left, Greene Central tied it up on two jumpers by Beverly Pitt. The Valkyries regained the lead — for good this time — when Irish Barnhill hit a jumper from the foul line, giving Conley a 42-40 lead with four minutes left.

Greene Central, now 8-12 overall and 5-12 in the league, had a chance to tie it with 2:04 left, but Sharon Suggs could connect on only one of two free throws. Neither team scored again.

"I thought this was a real team effort," D.H. Conley coach Joy James said. "Everyone contributed. I thought we played well all over — we hit the boards well, we hustled well and we played together well. This is the best we've played in a while."

It was the Lady Rams who played well in the early going, however. Two jumpers and a free throw by Sylvia Swinson, who finished with a game-high 15 points, gave Greene Central an 11-5 lead with 1:50 left.

Conley cut the lead to three, 13-10, at the end of the period and then went ahead, 18-17, midway through the second period. The Lady Rams countered with three straight buckets and led at the half, 23-22.

Coming out in the third period, Conley, down 27-26 early, outscored the Lady Rams, 9-2, to take a 35-29 lead with 2:52 left. Five straight points — three by Pitt — pulled Greene Central within one, 35-34, at the end of the quarter.

The Lady Rams then tied it up, 40-40, with 4:45 left in the game only to see the Valkyries escape with the win, their 10th in 18 games. Conley is 6-8 in the league.

Jackie Hansley led Conley with 12 points while Brenda Green added 11. Swinson was the lone Lady Ram in double figures.

"We just got outrebounded tonight," Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum said. "That was the difference. I thought we didn't play smart at times, but we played about like we usually do. We needed that win bad but we didn't get it."

Greene Central plays host to Farmville Central Tuesday night while D.H. Conley entertains Charles B. Aycock.

Millrose Games Produce Good Races, Records

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Millrose Games, indoor track and field's Super Bowl and World Series, produced a couple of stirring elbow-to-elbow races and world records in both of them by American Ken Paige and Suleiman Nyambui of Tanzania.

Paige broke the indoor mark for 1,000 yards, timed in 2 minutes, 4.9 seconds to smash the mark of 2:05.1 set by Mark Winzenried nine years ago. Then Nyambui captured the grueling 5,000-meter race in 13:20.3, a fraction of a second better than 13:20.8 set by Belgium's Emiel Puttemans in 1976.

Both men credited the men they beat for making their records possible. For Paige, the key was overtaking longtime rival Mark Belger. And Nyambui's challenge came from Alberto Salazar, reigning king of the New York City Marathon.

Other important winners Friday night were Eamonn Coghlan, who captured his third straight Wanamaker Mile, winning the prestigious event for three fourth time in five years. Renaldo Nehemiah, all but unbeatable in the 60-yard high hurdles, Stanley Floyd, who captured the star-studded 60-yard dash, and Joni Huntley, who broke the American indoor record for the women's high jump.

Coghlan was timed in 3:53, a meet and Madison Square Garden record and the third fastest indoor mile in history. It was four-tenths of a second off his own indoor record. Nehemiah was timed in 6.98 seconds, well off his own record of 6.89. Floyd was caught in 6.15, no threat to his record of 6.04 set last week. And Huntley jumped 6-4¼, one-half inch better than her own record.

Paige and Nyambui both came from behind, well off the early pace, to post their victories.

In the 1,000, Belger, Paige's old buddy from Villanova, scooted off in front and was the man to catch. In the 5,000, it seemed to be Salazar's race early but Nyambui stayed with him and finally wore him down late to capture the race.

Among the night's losers were Houston McTear, who had won three straight 60-yard dashes at the Millrose but never made it past the heats this time, and All-America football star Herschel Walker, who finished sixth in the 60 won by Floyd.

Paige went into the 1,000 favoring a tender left ankle. "I strained the tendons in my ankle in Los Angeles two weeks ago," he said.

As a result, Paige did not work out much in preparation for the race. "I wondered to myself, 'What kind of shape am I in?'" he said.

He soon found out.

"Mark went out and took a big lead," Paige recalled. "When I saw that, I said to myself, I can't panic. I had to keep a cool head and catch him slowly."

Eventually, Paige did just that and when it was over, Belger teased him. "He said to me, 'You owe me one,'" Paige said.

Salazar might have felt the same way about Nyambui.

For 32 of the 34 laps in the punishing 5,000, Salazar led the race. But he simply couldn't shake Nyambui and with two laps to go, the Tanzanian overtook his man.

"I knew if it came down to the final kick, I'd be in trouble," said Salazar, who set an American indoor record with a time of 13:23.1. "I can't be disappointed. I did all I could do, but the man ran a world record time."

"Without him in the race, there would be no world record," said Nyambui, nodding at his foe.

Also in the 5,000 field was Sidney Maree of Villanova, a South African native whose appearance in the meet caused a last-minute walkout by the Soviet Union's team.

Meet director Howard Schmertz said the Russians complained about 15 minutes before the start of the meet, saying they could not compete if Maree were allowed to run.

Schmertz said Maree had been declared eligible by an international body, is a permanent resident of the United States, married to an American girl and intends to become an American citizen.

Breaks Own Record

Joni Huntley of the Pacific Coast Club claps her hands after breaking her own American indoor women's high jump record with a leap of 6 feet, 4 3/8 inches Friday night during the 74th annual Millrose Games at New York's Madison Square Garden. Huntley's previous mark of 6-4¼ was set last year in the meet. (AP Laserphoto)

Knights Rally, Top Goldsboro

GOLDSBORO — Greenville Christian, led by David Hollingsworth's 16 points and Ben Haddock's 13, rallied in the fourth quarter to take a hard-fought 53-52 victory Friday night over Goldsboro Christian. There was no girls' game.

The Knights, now 9-7 overall and 4-1 in the league, trailed by one with three minutes left but regained the lead moments later and held on for the victory.

"They (Goldsboro) played a real good game," Greenville coach Dale Thatcher said. "They stuck close with us even though we had more talent. Our kids kept their poise, though, and that helped."

Greenville led at the end of the first eight minutes, 18-14, and at the half, 32-29. The Knights pushed their advantage to six, 45-39, going into the final period only to see Goldsboro, now 1-6, rally and go ahead.

"It was just one of those nights," Thatcher said. "We just couldn't seem to do anything right."

Ken Malpass and John Tice led Goldsboro with 16 points each.

The Knights travel to Mt. Calvary Tuesday night.

Little Trouble For Tar Heels, Wolfpack

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's Derreck Whittenburg scored 18 points to fuel a strong rebounding

Wolfpack to a 77-60 victory over stubborn Furman Friday night in the second game of the 23rd Annual North-South Doubleheader basketball tournament.

In the first game Friday night, 11th-ranked North Carolina defeated St. Joseph's 87-64.

The North Carolina Tar Heels play Furman tonight, and N.C. State will meet St. Joseph's.

The first minutes of the Wolfpack-Paladin matchup found Furman managing to tie the score several times. But N.C. State waited for the good shots as the Wolfpack held a 15-9 lead with 10 minutes remaining in the first half.

The Pack's deadly shooting from the floor was the key to a halftime lead of 36-27. N.C. State hit 16 of 27 field goals in the first half, while the Paladins were 8 of 24.

The Wolfpack hauled down 18 rebounds to the Paladins' 10, with N.C. State forward Scott Parzych grabbing seven.

N.C. State continued its shooting spree in the second half, leading by as many as 24 points several times. Only Furman's consistently good floor shooting, 18 of 22, kept the Paladins from falling even further behind.

Sophomore Thurl Bailey scored 13 points for State, while Parzych and Craig Watts each added 12.

Furman's Mel Daniel was the game's high scorer with 26 points. Freshman George Singleton added eight points for the Paladins.

N.C. State improves its record to 11-9 while Furman falls to 9-11.

We're not a deep team on the bench." Valvano predicted that the Wolfpack game against St. Joseph's Saturday night will be tough. "St. Joe's is a good team, although they may have had some jitters tonight. But they'll be ready tomorrow night."

Furman coach Eddie Halbrook said State's rebounding and field goal percentage were the keys to Furman's defeat.

"We dug our grave early in the first half and made it almost impossible to dig our way out," he said.

In the first game, North Carolina suffered an occasional ragged zone-defense. But the Tar Heels never fell behind in the match against St. Joseph's, jumping out to a six-point lead in the first half before the Hawks got on the board after three minutes of play.

Both teams turned the ball over 10 times in first half. But North Carolina capitalized on field goal attempts, hitting 15 of 22 in the first half to St. Joseph's eight of 23.

The Tar Heels went out at the half with a 15-point lead at 37-21. Despite hot shooting by the Hawks' Bryan Warrick, North Carolina led by as much as 25 in the final minutes of the game.

High scorer for the Tar Heels was Al Wood with 20 points. James Worthy had 13 points and freshman Sam Perkins added 12 for North Carolina. Boo Williams was high scorer for the Hawks with 19 points and Warrick had 16.

North Carolina ups its record to 17-5 while St. Joseph's falls to 15-4.

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said he was happy with the victory over St. Joseph's.

especially after Tuesday night's overtime loss to Virginia.

"We played very well and I was concerned if we would after Tuesday night," Smith said.

"You've got to hand it to our seniors, all of them. They got the team together."

Tar Heel defense was very active in the first half and forced several turnovers by the Hawks, Smith said. He said Al Wood played an important part in the Tar Heel's tight zone defense.

St. Joseph coach Jim Lynam said he was "very impressed" with the Tar Heels.

"They are obviously very deserving of their national ranking," he said.

North Carolina is currently ranked 11th in the nation.

"A score like tonight's hurts our chances for the NCAA if we don't win our conference, especially considering the caliber of the rest of our schedule," Lynam added.

He said North Carolina "did an excellent job" of keeping St. Joseph's from shooting the ball.

Farmville Nips Hawks In Overtime Fight, 54-53

WHEAT SWAMP — Farmville Central's Ronald Dixon drove inside for a bucket with two seconds and North Lenoir's Kevin Battle missed the second of a one-and-one chance with no time remaining as the Jaguars edged the Hawks, 54-53, in overtime Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, North Lenoir defeated Farmville, 46-42.

Down 48-44 with two minutes to go in regulation, Farmville rallied to send the game into overtime.

Terrance Pettaway's jumper made it 48-46 with 1:47 left and following a North Lenoir turnover Andrew Edwards muscle inside for a basket with 22 seconds left to tie the game at 48-48. Southern Nash then missed a last shot and the game went into overtime.

The Jaguars won the tap and with 1:58 left Dixon, who finished with 15 points and scored all six of Farmville's points in overtime, hit both ends of a one-and-one to put the Jaguars up, 50-48.

North Lenoir's Eugene Conner, who scored a game-high 19 points, drove for a layup to tie the game but was also whistled for charging. Dixon subsequently made the one-and-one and with 1:48 left Farmville led, 52-50. Conner connected on a 12-foot jumper with 1:17 left to tie the game again. The Jaguars then went into their stall and with three seconds left Dixon scored inside to give Farmville a 54-52 lead.

North Lenoir called time, then threw the ball to midcourt and called time again with one second left. Then, the Hawks threw the ball toward the goal and Andrew Edwards was called for pushing Battle. With no time showing on the clock, Battle hit the first free throw but missed second, giving Farmville its second straight victory and third this season in 20 starts. The Jaguars are 3-11 in the ECC.

Joining Dixon in double figures for Farmville were Pettaway with 11 and Edwards with 10. North Lenoir, now 12-8 overall and 8-6 in the league, got 12 points from Danny Wooten and 11 from Battle.

Farmville led after the first period, 13-10, but trailed at the half, 26-22. The Jaguars cut the lead to two, 37-35, at the end of the third period and then rallied late in the final quarter to send the game into OT.

In the girls' game, North Lenoir jumped out to an early lead and then held off the Jaguars to come away with the victory, the Hawks' 10th in 20 starts. North Lenoir is 8-6 in the ECC.

North Lenoir led after the opening eight minutes, 12-9, and at the half, 26-13. Farmville closed to within eight, 32-24, at the end of the third period and cut the four in the final quarter but could get no closer as the Jaguars fell to 8-8 overall and 5-9 in the conference.

Farmville was led by Rose Lang's 17 points and Dana Streeter's 14. North Lenoir was paced by Sharon Gillette's 13 points and Debra Pope's 10.

Farmville travels to Greene Central Tuesday night.

Daytona Quals Start Today

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The speed wizards of NASCAR Grand National stock car racing are hoping to unlock some secrets Sunday in pole qualifying for the Daytona 500 and the $159,000 Busch Clash.

Speeds climbed slowly during practice Saturday as engine and chassis adjustments continued and the top drivers tried to get the feel of their new downsized cars.

But continued handling problems and a damp track kept the new cars under wraps during most of the morning practice period, and a spinout by veteran Dave Marcis in the second turn brought out another yellow flag that helped shorten that session.

NASCAR officials decided at the last minute to allow the new cars onto the track for an extra half-hour practice session late in the afternoon.

Bobby Allison turned in the top unofficial lap of the day, whipping around the Speedway's 2.5, high-banked oval at 193,400 mph in his Pontiac LeMans, a car which caused a stir when it was unveiled in the garage area Friday.

Darrell Waltrip's Buick Regal was right behind at 193,288. Harry Gant turned in a 192,678 in an Oldsmobile Cutlass and Buddy Baker steered his Cutlass to a 192,090.

Allison's car, built by Harry Ranier, falls within the new size restrictions. But it has a sloping rear window similar to the old Grand National cars, while virtually all the other eligible 1981s have a straight-up-and-down rear window that has led to an airflow problem and unstable handling.

"Running faster than Allison doesn't mean anything today," Waltrip said. "Everybody has been all over them since they got here. They're not dumb enough to go out and run 200 miles an hour, and get everybody after them again."

That ain't a bunch of rookies out there."

"The rear end of this car makes it more stable than the Oldsmobile we tested here. That's why we built it," explained Ranier, a coal magnate from Lexington, Ky. "I don't know why nobody else built one — it's been an eligible model right along."

Attesting to the continuing worry over the instability of the new cars is the fact that there still was no drafting (running bumper-to-bumper) going on Saturday.

However, the sun peeked out before the afternoon practice, and speeds began to climb.

Qualifying for the top two spots on the Daytona 500 grid is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. EST Sunday, with a 200-mile race for the old Grand National stockers — sanctioned by the Automobile Racing Car Association — to follow and the third annual Clash slated to close the show at 3 p.m.

The pole position for the Feb. 15 race is worth $6,000, while the winner of the Clash will

Northwestern 62

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Sophomore center Randy Breuer canned four clutch free throws in the final seven seconds Saturday to lead Minnesota to a 68-62 victory over Northwestern in Big Ten college basketball.

Minnesota, improving its record to 5-5 in the Big Ten and 13-6 overall, seemed to lose its shooting touch in the last nine minutes as Northwestern almost overcame a 10-point deficit.

But the Wildcats, losing their ninth conference game against just one win, missed scoring opportunities in the last two minutes, losing to Minnesota for the 10th straight time. Northwestern is 7-12 overall.

Minnesota's Mark Hall, who led all players with 23 points, helped the Gophers build a 59-49 second-half lead.

pocket between $40,000 and $80,000, depending on how many laps he leads.

"Winning the pole and the Busch Clash are important and they're worth a lot of money," said Darrell Waltrip, one of seven drivers to qualify for the Clash. "But we've got to keep in mind that this is just the warmup for the real reason we're out here."

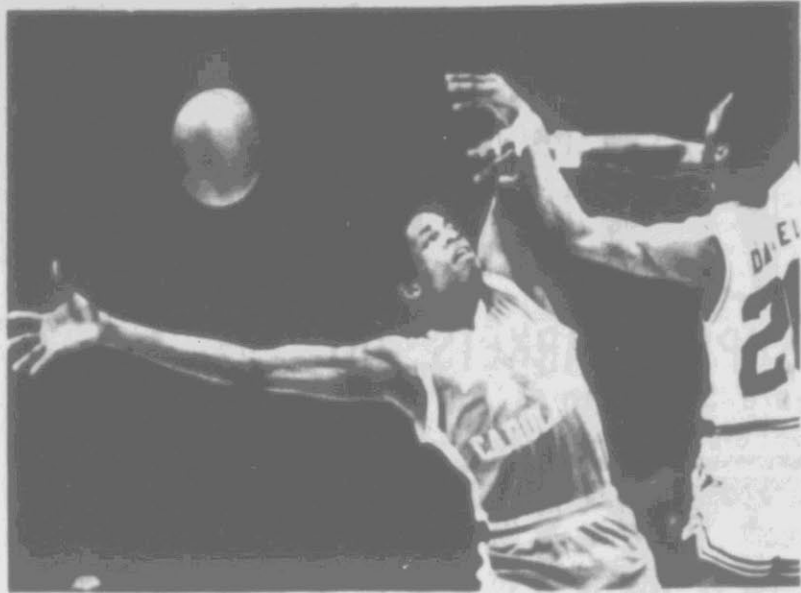

"The race is where the (championship) points and what we're really after, so you don't want to get carried away and break the car on Sunday."

Benny Parsons, whose been in both the previous Clashes, finishing fourth and sixth, said, "This will be the first real test of the new cars under race conditions."

"I'll be able to see how the others are running and handling, see how the new cars react in the draft and determine what we need to do to run well in the 500."

"The key is really learning as much as you can," Parsons added. "We've got a real good shot at winning the 500, and the more we know about these new cars the better we can do in the race."

Pitt Nips Fayetteville St.

FAYETTEVILLE — Frankie Dail hit a three-point play and then Dennis Pitt hit both ends of a one-and-one with three seconds left in overtime to lift Pitt Community College to a 78-74 win over Fayetteville State's junior varsity team.

Trailing 74-73 in overtime, Pitt rallied. Dail drove in for a layup and was fouled. He connected on the free throw to lift Pitt to a 76-74 lead. Fayetteville then missed on two free throws and Pitt hit his two free throws to seal the victory.

Pitt, now 13-4, was led by Jeff Tyson's 15 points. Dail and Pitt both had 12 for Pitt and Calvin Horne added 11. Fayetteville was led by John Sylvester's 16 points and Anthony Hooks' 13. Dino Russell added 11 and Reginald Rouse had 10 for the home team.

Pitt trailed throughout the first half, falling behind by as many as 12 before rallying late to go into intermission down only three, 35-32.

The second half, however, was nearly a repeat of the first.

Again, Pitt fell behind by as many as 12 only to rally, sparked by Tyson, who hit for 10 of his 15 points in a run that brought Pitt the lead in the last two minutes.

Fayetteville, however, tied it up and sent the game into overtime when John Sylvester hit a 28-foot jumper at the buzzer to knot the score at 68-68.

Pitt then moved out to a four-point lead early in the overtime only to have Fayetteville move ahead before the Paladins rallied to win.

"We played tired tonight," Pitt coach Linwood Woodard said. "We came here last week and the officials didn't show up. This time, the other team didn't show up until five minutes before the game was to start."

Pitt travels to Goldsboro Tuesday to play Seymour Johnson.

Pitt (78) — Batts 7 0-1 4; C. Horne 5 1-3 11; Baker 3 2-2 8; Dail 5 2-2 12; Tyson 7 1-5 15; Pitt 5 2-2 12; M. Horne 2 0-2 4; Harris 1 0-0 2; Totals 35 8-17 78.

ECU Wrestlers Win 1, Lose 2

It was the final home wrestling meet before the East Carolina wrestling program is dismantled and the Pirates and the results were anything but pleasing for ECU.

The Pirates defeated the University of Central Florida, 18-16, but dropped a 21-20 decision to Appalachian State and then fell to Virginia Tech, 33-7, in a quad-meet Saturday afternoon.

In other scores, ASA and VPI tied, 21-21. VPI defeated Central Florida, 21-17, and ASU lost to Central Florida, 23-21.

Vikings Edge Patriots For Tourney Title

MOREHEAD CITY — D. H. Conley captured the Coastal Conference Invitational Tournament Saturday, giving the other members of that group the word that things ahead would be difficult.

Conley is slated to move into the Coastal next year from the Eastern Carolina, while East Carteret drops out, going 2-A.

The Vikings ended up with 162 points, capturing four titles, as did West Carteret. The Patriots finished second with 149 points.

Havelock finished third with 125, followed by White Oak with 114, West Craven with 42, and East Carteret with 36.

Individual championships were won by Reginald Moore at 101 pounds, Raymond Small at 129, Alexander Crandell at 135 and Michael Long at 170. The Vikings also had three seconds: William Green at 108, William Bridgette at 141, and Stacey McCarter at 188.

Third place went to Shannon Carson at 115, Greg Tolar at 122, Willie Green at 158 and Paul Menichelli at 198.

Taking fourth at 141 was Andy Majette, replacing Curtis Bridges, who was sick and unable to compete. Conley did not participate in the heavyweight class.

The Vikings will host the Northeastern Sectional Wrestling Tournament on Friday and Saturday. A total of 32 teams from Roanoke Rapids to Jacksonville, and from Raleigh to Cape Hatteras, will be in competition.

Summary:

101: Reginald Moore (C) pinned Billy Flake (WC), no time; decisioned Michael Remetto (WCa), 10-4, for first place.

108: William Green (C) pinned Rob Thomas (H), lost by decision to Wade Sokolowsky (EC), 12-4, for second place.

Scott Breaks

2,000 Mark

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Steve Scott shattered the men's 2,000-meter indoor mark with a time of 4 minutes 58.5 second in the Mason-Dixon Games Saturday night.

Scott, of the Sub 4 Track Club, clipped the eight-year-old mark set by Belgium's Emiel Puttemans' of 5 minutes flat. Steve Prefontaine held the U.S. record at 5:09.4.

Sam James of the Knoxville Track Club set a quick pace and led for seven of the 10 laps. Scott then took the lead with 800 meters to go.

Scott, who finished fourth in the mile run in the Millrose Games Friday night in New York, fought back Steve Lacy the final laps.

Lacy finished second with a 5:02.2 and New Zealand's John Walker was third with a 5:03.8.

Kenya's Mike Boit, now with the Southern California Striders, set a meet record in the 1,000-meter run. Boit's time of 2:21.5 topped the old record of 2:23.8 set by Richard Newman in 1977.

Dan Lavitt of the Pacific Coast Club edged Dennis Brantley of Southern Methodist in the 60-meter high hurdles. Lavitt was clocked in 7.82 and Brantley followed with a 7.95.

Cindy Bremser, representing the Wisconsin United A.C., repeated as winner in the women's mile run with a 4:38.9. Her time was off the meet record of 4:37.0 set in 1980.

Brenda Webb faded in the final 100 meters and finished second with a 4:39.92.

In the women's long jump, Carol Lewis had a 20 foot, 7 1/2 inch leap to win that event.

Tennessee State's Kathy McMillan was second with a 20-2.

A meet record was set in the men's 60-meter dash when Georgia's Mel Lattany turned in a 6.60.

Lattany's effort erased Emmitt King's mark of 6.63 set in last year's games.

Nick Rose, of the Victory A.C., won the men's two-mile run in 8:26.8. A distant second was Tony Staynings at 8:36.9.

Nyambui Sets Indoor Mark In 5,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar burst into the lead at the outset of the 5,000-meter race at the Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden and held it for 32 consecutive laps. Yet, with two laps remaining, he was extremely worried. Lurking right behind him was Suleiman Nyambui, the Olympic silver medalist. "I knew if it came down to a kick, I'd be in trouble," said Salazar. He was right. Nyambui, the cool, 27-year-old Tanzanian, swept past Salazar at the start of the 33rd lap and went on to a 15-yard victory in the remarkable time of 13 minutes, 20.3 seconds, a world indoor best. Salazar wound up second in 13:21.2, an American record. "I was confident all the way I could catch Salazar," said Salazar.

Nyambui, a junior at the University of Texas-El Paso. "I was happy Salazar set the pace for me." Nyambui's time Friday night smashed the world indoor best of 13:20.8, set by Emiel Puttemans of Belgium, Jan. 10, 1976. Salazar's performance obliterated the American mark of 13:41.0, established by Glenn Herold six years ago. "You can't be disappointed," Salazar said. "I did all I could. The other guy ran a world record. An American record is OK." The marks by Nyambui and Salazar highlighted a series of record performances in the 74th Millrose Games. There was Don Paige's world indoor best of 2:09.4 in the 1,000-yard race and there was Joni Huntley's American record of 6 feet, 4 1/2 inches in the women's high jump. There was John Marshall's national scholastic record of 1:50.7 for 800 meters, and there was the world indoor best for the women's 1-mile relay of 3:40.9 by the Atoms Track Club of New York, anchored by Lorna Forde. There was a third consecutive victory by Eamonn Coghlan in the Wanamaker Mile with a time of 3:53.0, third best clocking in history. Coghlan ran 3:52.6 in 1979 and 3:52.9 in 1980. In other significant performances, Jeff Woodard won the high jump at 7-6, best mark in the world this year; Renaldo Nehemiah took his fifth straight 60-yard high hurdles in 6.98; and Stanley Floyd won the 60-yard dash in 6:15. Similar to Nyambui, Paige was helped by a fast early pace, set by his former Villanova teammate, Mark Belger.

"Mark went out and took a big lead which is a different strategy," said Paige, now a postgraduate student at Drexel. "When I saw Mark go out that fast, I said to myself I can't panic and I had to keep a cool head and use my strength and catch him slowly." Paige, after lingering in last place for the first two laps of the 6 1/4-lap race, moved up rapidly and finally passed Belger at the start of the gun lap en route to breaking Mark Winzenriede's indoor best of 2:05.1. Coghlan also was the beneficiary of a "rabbit," in his case Craig Masback. The former Princeton standout set a swift pace for the first eight laps of the 11-lap event, before being overtaken by the rest of the eight-man field. Coghlan charged into the lead with one-half lap remaining and beat his countryman from Ireland, Ray Flynn, by eight-tenths of a second. Thomas Wessinghage of West Germany finished third in 3:54.7, with American record holder Steve Scott fourth in 3:55.0. Only the great Glenn Cunningham, with six victories, has won the Wanamaker Mile more times than Coghlan. The only disquieting note of the night was the withdrawal of four Soviet athletes, including two Olympic champions. They pulled out 15 minutes before the meet in protest of the International Amateur Athletic Federation's decision allowing Sydney Maree of South Africa to run against international competition.

World Record Set In 55-Meter Dash

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Stanley Floyd streaked to a world indoor best in the 55-meter dash at the Knights of Columbus Invitational Track Meet Saturday night, covering the ground in 6.15 seconds. The old mark of 6.16 seconds was set last year by Houston McTear. Floyd, who has transferred from Auburn to the University of Houston, was running unattached. He also holds the world indoor record of 6.04 seconds in the 60-yard dash, set last week in Dallas. Jeff Phillips of Tennessee finished second Saturday night with a time of 6.22, while Ephraim Serrette of Farleigh Dickinson was third at 6.23. A meet record fell in the women's 55-meter dash as Alice Brown of the Los Angeles Shaklee Track Club covered the course in 6.79 seconds to beat out 1980 100-meter gold medalist Lyudmila Kondratyeva of the Soviet Union. Brown's mark bettered the old K of C record of 7.03 seconds set last year by Elaine Jones of the Motor City Track Club. Anthony Hancock of Tennessee took the 55-dash meter high hurdles in 7.22 seconds.

ECU Falls...

(Continued from page B-1) After Marvin Delph of Arkansas put the AIA ahead at the start, the Pirates scored four straight for their own lead of the evening. Michael Gibson tied it up and Charlie Watkins added a jumper for a 4-2 lead. But Hall hit a jumper and Schall scored from inside to put the Athletics ahead, 6-4. Watkins hit to tie it once more, but that was it. Delph drove in for a layup, and Hall hit from underneath for a 10-6 lead. The AIA then stretched it after that, outscoring the Pirates, 14-4, over the next seven and a half minutes for a 24-10 lead. Over the rest of the half, the Athletics built their lead to as much as 20, before it ended at 40-22. In the second half, after trailing by as much as 22, the Pirates trimmed it back to as little as 16, but got no closer. Finally, Dave Johnson of Weber State hit the first of two free throws, with Hall hitting off the rebound. Johnson then hit a basket to up the lead to 65-44. After a basket by David Underwood, Bo Clark of Central Florida hit two baskets around a Austin Sullivan (Hendrix College) layup, to up the lead to 71-46, the largest AIA lead.

"But when you're an independent, you have to take games when you can get them, and that's the way it worked out. Three wins in a row would have been nice to carry down there, though."

The Athletics presented a balanced scoring attack, with Derrick Jackson of Georgetown, L.A. Smith of Arkansas College and Sims each hitting ten, while Delph, Hall and Clark each had eight. East Carolina was led by Gibson, Watkins and Underwood, each with ten, while Barry Wright had eight. "I thought Gibson played well. He accepted the challenge of play against those players. Underwood challenged hard too."

"But we didn't challenge them from the outside. We didn't penetrate with the dribble and pass off. Our post people were trying to dribble in traffic and we can't have that. That creates turnovers, and we had too many turnovers." ECU had 20 to 15 for the AIA. The Pirates left immediately after the game to travel to Norfolk, Va., to make early morning plane connections to Edinburg, Tex., where East Carolina meets Pan American on Monday night. Earlier in the year, the Broncos took an 82-67 win over the Pirates in Greenville, led by their all-America candidate Kenneth Green. Game time is 8:25 p.m., Eastern time. "I would have rather gone into that game with a win," Odom said as he looked ahead.

St. Peter's Boys, Girls Defeated

St. Peter's boys dropped a 38-29 decision to St. Mary's and the St. Peter's girls lost to St. Mary's also, 21-16, in basketball action Saturday afternoon. St. Peter's boys were led by Bryan Bridges' 16 points while the girls were paced by Margaret Kooz's eight. The junior varsity boys won, 23-22, behind Andrew Perry and Hunter Clark, both of whom had seven points. The St. Peter's junior varsity girls also won, defeating St. Mary's 13-0, as Margaret Kooz had six points.

PLAYER HOBBIES
NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League players have some unusual hobbies, according to the league office. Place-kicker Toni Fritsch of Houston collects antiques. Tom Glassie, an offensive guard for Denver, has a collection of toy soldiers. Defensive End Ken Johnson of Buffalo has a lot of old coins. Nose-tackle Steve McMichael of New England harvests rattlesnakes. Tight end Brian Peets of Seattle collects comic books. Assistant coach Jerry Rhome of Seattle deals in trading cards, and wide receiver Wes Walker of the New York Jets has dozens of hats.

Rankin Rallies

To Tie Carner

MIAMI (UPI) — JoAnne Carner faltered with a 73 and Judy Rankin rallied with a 68 Saturday to share the lead after three rounds of the second stop on the LPGA tour, a $125,000 event at Turnberry Isle.

"A really bad round — I'd play a good hole and then hit a bad shot," summed up Carner, who had gone into the day tied for the lead with Pat Bradley.

Rankin said she didn't play as well from tee to green as she has been playing, but somehow managed to score well by sinking some putts.

Rankin and Carner stood at five-under par 211 going into Sunday's finale, one shot ahead of Donna Caponi, who had a 68-212.

Next at 213 were Mindy Moore, playing her second tour event, with a 69, Nancy Lopez-Melton with a 69 and Bradley, who skied to a 74 over the par 72 Turnberry Isle course.

Another shot back at 214 was Jan Stephenson, who fired a 71 Saturday.

The 36-year-old Rankin recalled that she has been playing in the same tournaments with Carner since she was 11 years old, so Sunday's confrontation would be nothing new.

She said she was pleased with the way the day turned out.

"I missed four fairways, but I putted well," she said. "It really is a funny game. I've been playing almost flawlessly tee to green."

She said today happened to be the birthday of both her son, Tudy, and brother.

Tudy, who is at home in Midland, Tex., turned 13, and Rankin complained, "I don't feel like the mother of a teen-ager."

Lopez-Melton said she was "hitting the ball and I feel like I'm putting well.

"But when I got over birdie putts, I felt anxious," she said. "I think it comes down to the last day all the time. I felt a little nervous today but that turned out good for me."

Florida Edges Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Freshman Vernon Delancy chipped in 21 points, including two free throws with 17 seconds remaining, to boost Florida to a 55-50 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Auburn Saturday.

The game evened Florida's record at 10-10 overall and boosted the Gators to 4-8 in the SEC. Ronnie Williams was Florida's only other double-figure scorer with 10.

Darrell Lockhart led Auburn with 12 points and Earl Banks added 11. The defeat extended Auburn's losing streak to 11 straight. The Tigers are now 8-12 overall and 1-11 in the SEC.

Auburn led only once, on the first field goal of the contest by Lockhart only eight seconds into the game.

Florida's Mike Milligan came back and hit a layup, tying it at 2-2, and DeLancy hit one from the deep right corner to make it 4-2. Florida never trailed after that, although the Tigers tied up the contest twice.

Florida led by as much as 11 in the first half, at 26-15 on two free throws by Tim Strawbridge. The Gators led 32-24 at the half.

Auburn pulled within one, at 46-45 with 7:03 remaining, on a layup by Frank Poindexter. Auburn tied the contest with 4:03 to go when Poindexter was fouled while shooting. He missed his first shot and made the second to tie the score 50-50.

Florida went ahead for good with 1:06 remaining when Milligan went to the free throw line for a one-and-one, made his first and missed his second. Auburn pulled down the ball and raced down the court, and Mike Moses fouled Auburn's Darrell Lockhart with 37 seconds to go.

Auburn took the ball out of bounds and threw the ball away on the pass in, handing control to Florida. Lockhart fouled Delancy and sent him to the line to shoot his one-and-one, which put the Tigers ahead 53-50.

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Freshman Marcus Reese hit a 20-foot jumper with 1 second remaining to give the East Tennessee State Buccaneers a 76-75 victory over the Marshall Thundering Herd in a the Southern Conference's regionally televised basketball game Saturday.

Reese, a 6-3 forward from Columbia, S.C., hit his winning basket just 2 seconds after Marshall's Greg White had hit two free throws to give the Herd a 75-74 lead.

After White's two free throws, the Bucs called time out, passed in bounds pass from Troy Mikell and popped the winning basket.

It climaxed a see-saw battle over the last 3 minutes of the game. Marshall had led most of the second half until Winfred Reid hit a 15-foot jumper with 3:14 remaining. From that point the Bucs maintained a narrow margin until White put Marshall 1 point behind with a 3-point fieldgoal with 13 seconds remaining. White then hit both ends of his bonus and it looked very much like a Herd victory.

Navy 51

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Freshman center Dick Mumma tossed in 15 points and freshman forward Mike Lang grabbed 21 rebounds to lead Penn State to a 67-51 college basketball victory over Navy Saturday.

Lang's rebounding was third highest ever at the university's Rec Hall and eighth highest in Penn State history.

The Nittany Lions, 15-7 overall, have won five of their last six games. They visit cross-state rival Pittsburgh on Wednesday.

Sophomore guard Bill Freytag led the Midshipman with nine points. Navy dropped to 7-13 with the loss.

Boston U. 74
Iona 72
NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Tony Simms came off the bench and scored 18 points and Boston University ran off a 12-0 spurt early in the second half to break open a close game as the Terriers edged Iona 74-72 Saturday.

Britt Brown and Dan Harwood added 14 points apiece for Boston University, which evened its record at 9-9.

Freshman Gary Springer paced Iona, 10-11, with a game-high 25 points, while classmate Steve Burt came off the bench to score 20.

Syracuse 81

PROVIDENCE (AP) — Marty Headd and Erich Sauter each scored 15 points Saturday to lead Syracuse to an easy 81-67 victory over Providence College in Big East basketball.

With the teams tied at 10-10, Syracuse went on a 9-2 tear and the Friars never mounted a serious threat.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The jab is not thrown, but flicked at an opponent's face with the wrist turned upward.

Greg Page's jab functioned perfectly Saturday, closing the left eye of Californian Stan Ward and giving him the vacant U.S. Boxing Association's heavyweight title and a round of controversy.

Ward's corner complained that it was a thumb and not a jab which closed their fighter's eye.

"It snaps out and looks like a slap," Page said afterward, demonstrating the jab. "He (Ward's trainer Bill Slayton) was hollering about the thumb being open, but it wasn't."

Page's whip-like jab opened the eye cut in the first round, and he repeatedly reopened the cut during the remaining six rounds. The fight was stopped between the seventh and eighth rounds when Slayton informed referee Paul Venti that Ward was suffering double vision.

Page, of Louisville, Ky., was ahead 5-2 on judge Milo Savage's card and 6-1 by Venti and judge Eva Shain.

"When you get double vision, 90 percent of the time it's the thumb," Slayton said. "It's the old Muhammad (Ali) style. A lot of fighters use it. I think it should be taken into consideration (by boxing officials)."

Page now is 14-0 with 13 knockouts, while

Ward, of Sacramento, Calif., is 13-4-2.

The title was vacated by current World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Mike Weaver.

Ward defeated Weaver in a 12-round decision in 1978. However, Weaver avenged that loss last January with a ninth-round knockout.

The undefeated Page, said by some to resemble Ali in his earlier days, circled the ring during the entire fight. His left jab snapped out like a whip, continually saving him from trouble.

However, his defense was not as tough, and Ward made him pay for keeping his hands at his side. Just before the end of the first round, Ward opened a cut on Page's upper lip with a straight right.

Oregon State Crushes California, 69-54

By DAVID EINHORN
Associated Press Writer
BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — When both Steve Johnson and Ray Blume are on target, Oregon State can be a fearsome basketball team. Just ask the California Bears, who found themselves out-gunned in a 69-54 loss to the second-ranked Beavers.

"They have all the ingredients of a great team. I'd say they're real contenders for the national crown," Cal Coach Dick Kuchen said after Oregon State shredded the Bears' defense in the second half Friday night to run its season record to 18-0.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 7

Utah beat Air Force 48-46. No. 11 North Carolina stopped St. Joseph's, Pa., 87-64. No. 12 UCLA whipped Southern Cal 76-62 and No. 16 Brigham Young turned back Nevada-Las Vegas 86-77.

Johnson, the Beavers' 6-foot-10 center, had seven points in a 13-2 run at the start of the second half that gave Oregon State a 15-point lead. Then Blume took control from his guard position, finishing with 18 points in the second half and 26 for the game as Oregon State improved its Pacific-10 record to 10-0.

Johnson, who finished with 20 points, hit on nine of 12 shots from the floor, while Blume was 11 of 16.

"Steve's been doing a lot of work inside," said Blume, who along with Mark Radford gives Oregon State probably the quickest guard combination in the conference. "Now it's up to us to take care of the outside."

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller admitted his team played a sloppy first half, pointing to six turnovers as the Beavers' fast break sputtered.

"But in the second half, we settled down and played our usual style," Miller said.

It was Oregon State's sloppiness, plus some razzle-dazzle layups by Cal freshman guard Butch Hays, that allowed the Bears to be within four points at halftime.

But the Bears, who took fifth-ranked Arizona State into double overtime before losing on Monday, never recovered from Oregon State's early second-half surge.

The closest Cal got late in the game was nine points with just under seven minutes to play. But Blume doused the Bears' comeback hopes by scoring 10 points in the last seven minutes.

Mark McNamara had 10 points to lead Cal, which fell to 2-8 in the Pac-10 and 10-9 overall. Hays and Michael Pitts had nine points each.

Danny Vranes hit a pair of free throws with 11 seconds remaining as Utah survived a scare by Air Force. Vranes, who led the Utes with 17 points, gave his team a four-point lead, 48-44, with the free throws.

Rick Simmons of Air Force led all scorers with 19 points and teammate Tim Harris finished with 13. Behind Vranes for Utah were Tom Chambers with nine and Karl Bankowski and Scott Martin with eight each.

Utah improved its record to a sparkling 19-1 overall and 9-0 in the Western Athletic Conference.

Plymouth Edges Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Larry Spencer poured in 30 points, including three in overtime, to lead Plymouth to a hotly-contested 58-53 overtime victory over Williamston Friday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Plymouth whipped Williamston, 43-32.

The Tigers rallied from five points down in the final period to send the game into overtime but once there Plymouth took the lead early and then held on for the victory, the Vikings 10th in 17 outings. Plymouth is 7-5 in the conference.

Williamston, now 7-10 overall and 3-9 in the league, led after the first period, 13-4, only to trail at halftime, 21-17. It was 32-29 at the end of the third period but the Tigers rallied to tie the game and send it into OT.

Williamston was led by Vincent Washington and Tom Bennett, both of whom scored 14 points. Woody Sadler added 11 and Chris Peel had 10 for Williamston.

In the girls' game, Plymouth jumped out to a 10-4 lead after the first period and maintained it during the second quarter and led, 21-14, at the half. The Lady Tigers never threatened after that as both teams scored six points in the third period and Plymouth outscored Williamston, 16-12, in the final eight minutes.

Williamston, now 10-8 overall and 5-7 in the league, did not have anyone in double figures. Plymouth, now 14-3 overall and 10-2 in the conference, got 20 points from Louis Bell.

Williamston travels to Edenton Tuesday night.

Villanova, Seton Hall, Fairleigh Dickinson, Virginia, Pittsburgh, Maryland, Princeton, Penn State, Georgetown and Army will be among the leading collegiate track powers competing for individual and team honors.

Carlton Young of Villanova and Clyde Edwards of FDU lead an impressive gathering of the East's middle-distance sprinters in mile, two-mile and sprint-medley relay fields.

Outstanding runners such as Gregorek, Chebor, Paul Steeds of FDU and Amos Korir of Villanova are the leaders in the distance medley relay and the 3,000-meter run.

Maryland's Cornelius Cousins will be competing in the triple jump, and Ward Wilson is in the long jump. National pentathlon leader Gudmund Olson of St. Mary's will be on hand. The high jump is led by freshman Scott Dunham of George Mason.

A tough Rutgers team, led by Walter Kirkland, Jim Westman and Rich Lippert, are the squad to beat in the two-mile relay. The Scarlet Knights also are favored to repeat in the relay hurdles.

The distance medley relay will be one of the big races to watch. Penn State, again led by Alan Scharsu, will defend its crown.

Dantley's Show Overshadowed By Issel

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Adrian Dantley of the Utah Jazz put on a show, but Denver Coach Doug Moe didn't mind — the Nuggets' Dan Issel was pulling on a clinic.

Issel scored 37 points, including two clutch free throws with 12 seconds left, to lead the Nuggets to a 120-116 victory over the Jazz Friday night. That stole the spotlight from Dantley, who scored a career-high 55 points, the most by any National Basketball Association player this season.

"We did a defensive job on Dantley even though he got 55 points," contended Moe. "He didn't score at all when we went from 10 down to 13 up."

The Nuggets trailed 65-55 at halftime but outscored Utah 38-24 in the third period to go ahead to stay. Utah Coach Tom Nissalke said, "The performance by Dantley was the greatest I've ever seen." The 6-foot-5 forward, the NBA's leading scorer with a 31.4 average, hit on 24 of 36 field goal attempts and seven of eight free throws to surpass his previous career high of 51 points and the NBA season-high of 52 set by Indiana's Billy Knight.

"Obviously Issel hurt us," Nissalke said of the Nuggets' 6-9 center. "They know we have problems with a post-up team and they went with their post-up game. Issel just put on a clinic."

Denver led 113-101 with 4:37 to play but Utah rallied with a 13-1 spurt. Jeff Judkins capping it with a three-point goal with 13 seconds left that pulled the Jazz within two at 116-114. But Issel, who grabbed a game-high 16 rebounds, was fouled one second later and made two free throws to clinch the victory.

In other games, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Detroit Pistons 111-102, the Philadelphia 76ers clobbered the San Diego Clippers 129-113, the Boston Celtics beat the Indiana Pacers 111-98, the Milwaukee Bucks trimmed the Cleveland Cavaliers 103-99 and the San Antonio Spurs breezed past the Portland Trail Blazers 122-96.

Also, the Phoenix Suns downed the Houston Rockets 112-99, the Atlanta Hawks edged the Dallas Mavericks 100-98, the New York Knicks beat the Chicago Bulls 112-94, the Washington Bullets defeated the Golden State Warriors 116-110 and the Kansas City Kings topped the Seattle SuperSonics 102-92.

The New Jersey Nets were the only NBA team to have the night off. Lakers 111, Pistons 102. Jamaal Wilkes' basket closing out the first period put Los Angeles ahead 27-26 and the Lakers never trailed, although they led by just 102-98 with 2:15 to go before pulling away to their seventh straight win. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 25 points, Wilkes had 21 and Jim Chones, playing his 500th straight NBA game, had 19 for Los Angeles.

"We're just not good enough to stay with the Lakers, that's all there is to it," said Pistons Coach Scotty Robertson. 76ers 129, Clippers 113. Julius Erving scored 31 points for the 76ers, who outscored the Clippers 47-15 from the foul line and breezed to their 20th consecutive home-court victory. Philadelphia's record at the Spectrum is 26-2, the best home mark in the NBA, and its overall record is also a league-best 47-10.

Celtics 111, Pacers 98. Boston broke its three-game losing streak behind Larry Bird, who has been hampered by a bruised thigh but scored 31 points after being held to an average of just 12.7 in the Celtics' three losses.

Bird had a pair of three-point goals and a layup as the Celtics reeled off 11-straight points to go in front 19-10 midway through the first period. He also scored 15 points in the third quarter when Boston stretched its margin to a commanding 91-72.

COMPLETED SEMINAR
James A. Williams, Greenville area staff manager for the Home Service Division of Pilot Life Insurance Co., completed a one-week staff managers' seminar dealing with training, management and policyowner service. The session was conducted at Pilot's Greensboro home offices.

NEWSERVICE
Greenville Cable TV announced that the movie service, Home Box Office (HBO), has been added to the local cable television program lineup, as well as three more cable channels.

Ray Bell, general manager, said that in addition to the HBO service, offering uncut, commercial-free movies and specials every month, the local lineup has been expanded by offering the NBC affiliate Channel 28 (WPTF) from Raleigh-Durham, CBS affiliate Channel 11 (WTVD) in Durham, and the Cable News Network (CNN) broadcast live 24 hours a day via satellite from Atlanta.

Bell reported that the new channel offerings are part of Greenville Cable TV's Super Service which now includes 21 channels and two movie services. In addition to HBO, the local company also offers the Showtime entertainment channel.

RECORD INCOME
Integon Corp. reported that it posted another year of record income from operations and revenues.

For the year ended Dec. 31, the insurance holding company posted $18.3 million income from operations, compared with $16.3 million in 1979. Consolidated revenues were $252 million compared with $226 million the prior year, a 12 percent increase.

Net income for the year totaled $2.92 per share, 11 percent over $2.62 per share recorded in 1979. There was an average of 6,296,776 shares outstanding in 1979.

C&T COURSES
Seven local employees of Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. recently completed courses offered by the company in Rocky Mount.

The company said that Wilbur H. Potter Jr. and Alan D. Burns, PBX installer repairmen, completed a transmission fundamentals course; Albert E. Burney and W. Kelly Norman, installer repairmen, completed an installation repair course; and Joe E. Martin, Edward H. Cobb and Randall W. Erwin, installer repairmen, completed an electronic key systems installation and repair course.

PROGRAM LAUNCHED
Empire Brushes Inc. announced that in an effort to curb increases in manufacturing costs, it has launched a cost reduction program, called BAD (Buck-A-Day) Month, involving more than 420 employees.

Dianne Wetherington, spokesperson for the firm, said that the objective of the program is to encourage employees to find a way to eliminate at least a dollar a day in unnecessary expenses from their own jobs.

She said that with 250 working days in the year, the goal for each employee is $250. It was pointed out that if all 420 employees respond, the program could produce some $105,000 in annual savings.

The spokesperson said employees are focusing on how to trim expenses by looking at their jobs and coming up with ways to improve efficiency and cut costs.

Sweet Tooth Said A Clue To Origins

NEW YORK (AP) — Experts claim they can tell what part of the country you come from by the kind of chocolate you eat. Your taste buds can often be as eloquent as a regional dialect when it comes to sweets, says R. E. Ferguson, senior candy buyer for a major chain of variety stores. He cites as an example cream-filled chocolate eggs, very popular in Philadelphia at Easter but which "cannot be given away in New York City then or at any time of the year." "While chocolate has its followers from sweet to bitter, tastes can differ from East to West," Ferguson said. "Easterners prefer dark and bitter chocolates over light milk confections. In the Midwest, consumers seem to favor milk chocolate, with the story being the same on the West Coast where chocolate-covered cherries with liquid centers are also big sellers. In San Francisco, cream fillings are highly popular and in Los Angeles it's chocolate in any form, light or dark." Based on the high-volume candy sales of his own company, F. W. Woolworth — about a quarter of a billion pounds annually — Chicago residents buy more nut candies than do consumers in many other cities. Floridians take to sesame-type candies, while New Orleans residents enjoy heavenly hash and gold-brick chocolate bars. "Again, some in this category you cannot give away in New York City," Ferguson notes. "Pittsburgh sells more solid chocolate than the 'hollow-mold' type while 'chunky' chocolates are the big sellers in New Jersey." "Partly responsible for such regional tastes," Ferguson adds, "is the fact that when candy is manufactured in a particular locale, it becomes known and it is often advertised only locally."

Enjoy Getting Mail By Boat

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
BON SECOUR, Ala. (AP) — There is a place in America, believe it or not, where the people are perfectly happy with their postal service and have even petitioned the government not to change a thing.

Clearly, it is a place like no other. It is along the 25-mile mail route through the lowlands of Alabama's coastal tip. Here, winding waterways, fed by springs, serve as roadways. Here, the postman delivers the mail by boat.

Clifford James — Jamie to his patrons — is the faithful courier on this appointed route, where rain and snow and gloom of night are not nearly as troublesome as fog and wind and nesting alligators.

"As best I've been able to find out," James said, "I am the only remaining water-route carrier in the nation. There are others who carry the mail by boat — one on the Snake River in Idaho, one on the Great Lakes, one at the mouth of the Mississippi — but they deliver bulk mail to post offices.

"I deliver the mail, regularly, six days a week, to individual mail boxes, 110 boxes serving 175 families. The boxes are on river banks, on piers, hanging from trees, you name it. Some of those families have the same names, so you have to know who's who. I know them all and they know me. It's a very personal service."

In this era of the faceless bureaucracy, such neighborly governmental attention is, indeed, remarkable and deserving of praise.

Is it surprising, then, that the U.S. Postal Service is not sure it's worth it?

Two years ago, the department decided to eliminate the water route. The patrons of the post office at Magnolia Springs, Ala.,

36555, and not just those along the water route, raised such a howl that James' contract was renewed, at least until spring of next year.

"I've had to deliver the mail by car three times, because of storms," James said.

"To reach those river houses by land, I have to drive 75 miles on some pretty rough dirt roads. It takes five hours. By boat, it takes 2½ hours and far less gas. They pay me $8,100 a year. I pay all my expenses. I'd say the government has a bargain."

James's customers certainly feel that way. To the inhabitants along the Magnolia River, Esclave Creek, Nettle Creek, Fish River and other points in southern Alabama's watery remoteness, he is their daily link to one another. He brings their letters and mails their packages, but he also passes the news, keeps them in touch.

James is a big, friendly man of 52.

USAF RECRUITER. . .SSgt. Berton Cogdill gave preliminary WAF tests and interviews to Jean Howard of

THEIR WEDDING CEREMONY. . . was performed in Greenville 25 years ago by the Rev. Robert Crawford, Free Will Baptist minister.

Traded WAF For Air Force Husband

BY ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor

Twenty-five years ago Tuesday, Feb. 3, Jean Howard traded Air Force training for an Air Force husband when she married SSgt. Berton Cogdill here. Now living in Orlando, Fla., the couple returned to Greenville this past week to celebrate their wedding anniversary.

Then Sgt. Cogdill was the U. S. Air Force recruiter for eastern North Carolina, headquartered in Greenville. His area covered 13 counties including Williamston, Jean's hometown. She came into the office there to get information concerning the WAFs and was given preliminary testing and interviewed by Cogdill.

Shortly after their initial meeting, he left for a nine-week school in Texas. After finishing school, he returned to North Carolina, stopping in Raleigh at Recruiting Headquarters before returning to Greenville. Jean was also there undergoing further WAF tests. They started talking and he offered her a ride back to Williamston. "We soon started dating and were married about three months later," she said.

Their wedding ceremony was performed in Greenville by the Rev. Robert Crawford, Free Will Baptist minister.

The young couple lived in Greenville 14 months before moving to a new recruiting assignment in Elizabeth City when the eastern area was divided. His next tour was a regular one to Chateauroux, France, followed by a stay of three and a half years at McCoy AFB, Orlando, Fla.

Cogdill then spent a year in Saudi Arabia and a year at Bunker Hill, Ind. He spent his last two years of active duty at Otis AFB, Mass., where he retired with 20 years active service. His family was then living in Orlando.

After his 1969 retirement, Cogdill attended school for a number of months and started working in his current job as a federal protective officer. While he was stationed at Otis, Mrs. Cogdill started her present job with the Orange County School System in the food program. He also graduated from college going parttime over five years.

They have a daughter, Jeannie, a son, Mark, and a granddaughter, Jessica, age six.

"We talked about our anniversary trip to Greenville for about five years. When we started making plans, we wrote to the Chamber of Commerce trying to locate the motel name of where we had spent our honeymoon. We found the name had been changed from the Kenland to Camelot, which I think is a coincidence since Bert and I went to see a production of "Camelot" on an anniversary.

"Another coincidence was when buying our house in Orlando, I found out our next door neighbor had been a childhood friend in Williamston," said Mrs. Cogdill.

"The latest coincidence was when Bert called the newspaper office, he talked to the women's editor whose wedding date was the same as ours," she continued.

"Greenville has changed a lot and we hardly recognized some of its landmarks. We spent some of our time here looking around," said Cogdill.

The Cogdills enjoy camping in their recreational vehicle which they laughingly call the "green monster or Bert and Jean's plaything." "Bert enjoys fishing and I go along and sit in the boat sunning and reading. We especially enjoy babysitting with Jessica," Mrs. Cogdill said.

The Cogdills have family living in Asheville, Williamston and Raleigh.

Before leaving Wednesday to spend a few days touring Georgia, the Cogdills said they hope to return to Greenville to celebrate their 50th anniversary.

Lactose Intolerance Minority Groups Susceptible

CHAPEL HILL — All growing children need milk every day to build strong bones. Right?

Not necessarily. Milk can make some children sick.

For people with a syndrome called lactose intolerance, drinking milk can cause abdominal cramps and severe diarrhea, says Dr. John J.B. Anderson, professor of nutrition in the School of Public Health at the University of North Carolina here.

The syndrome is caused by a deficiency of the enzyme, lactase, which breaks down lactose or milk sugar in the small intestine so that it can be digested.

Lactose is a major component of both animal and human milk. About 30 percent of the calories in cow's milk and 40 percent in breast milk come from lactose.

Although permanent lactose intolerance may occur in infants and young children, it is more common in school-age children and adults.

Primary or permanent lactose intolerance may occur as early as five years of age and is not reversible, Anderson says. "Primary lactose intolerance has to be hereditary because it only occurs in certain ethnic groups but the mechanism for inheritance is not understood."

Sixty to 90 percent of black adults as well as members of other ethnic groups are lactose intolerant, he says, while only five to 15 percent of white adults are intolerant.

For this reason, Anderson has suggested to state officials that school lunch programs include fermented cheses and other alternative sources of calcium for lactose intolerant persons. The fermentation process changes the lactose in milk so that it can be digested by people with the syndrome.

"However, there are relative degrees of lactase deficiency," Anderson adds, "and a half pint of milk shouldn't make anyone sick unless he has a very severe deficiency."

Although in rare instances, babies may be born without any of the lactase enzyme present, the problem more often occurs in young children following a virus infection or some other stress on the gastrointestinal tract, says Dr. Martin Ulshen, assistant professor of pediatrics in the UNC-CH School of Medicine.

This syndrome is known as secondary lactose intolerance. It is thought to be illness-related and is fairly common, Ulshen explains. The child usually will tolerate milk again after fully recovering from the illness.

Babies with viral infection or chronic diarrhea are routinely switched to clear liquids during the illness, he says, and then often to soybean milk formula which contains calcium but no lactose. If lactose intolerance remains after the illness is over the baby may have to continue drinking soybean formula.

Infants with persistent diarrhea not associated with a virus may be lactose intolerant, Ulshen says. If that is the case, the diarrhea disappears when they are switched to soybean formula.

Children over age one who are lactose intolerant may not drink the soybean formula because of its taste, Ulshen says. Therefore, they need to eat other foods rich in calcium or take calcium tablets.

Anderson says lactose intolerance in all ages is simply treated by removing major sources of lactose like milk and other unfermented dairy products from the diet and adding other sources of calcium. He suggests that consumers with lactose intolerance learn to read the food labels to determine which foods contain lactose.

"Dark green, leafy vegetables are the only other major source of calcium (besides dairy products)," Anderson says. Some vegetables that contain relatively high proportions of calcium include spinach, mustard greens, kale, collards, Brussels sprouts, broccoli and dark cabbage. Calcium is also found in sardines and salmon.

SNACKTIME FARE
Raisin Muffins Milk

RAISIN MUFFINS
My friend Veronica Petta developed this "health food" hot bread from one that was a winner at a state fair.

1 cup raisins
1 cup boiling water
1 large egg
1/4 cup honey
1 cup buttermilk
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup regular oats
1 cup all-bran cereal
1 teaspoon baking soda

In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan, simmer raisins and water until raisins are plump — about 5 minutes. Cool. Drain, saving liquid. In an electric blender at low speed whirl together the drained raisins, 1/4 cup of the saved liquid, the egg, honey and buttermilk only until raisins are coarsely chopped — a matter of seconds. In a large bowl, with a wooden spoon, thoroughly stir together the whole wheat flour, oats, bran and baking soda; add the raisin mixture and stir only until the dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into greased muffin-pan cups (each 2 1/2 by 1 inch and holding 1-3rd cup), filling about 3/4 full. (Do not use paper or foil baking cups as liners.) Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 35 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and remove. Serve hot. Makes 12.

SHARON LYNN MOZINGO... is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Henderson Mzingo of Rt. 6, Mount Olive, who announce her engagement to Paul Ford Humphries, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Humphries of Fayetteville. The wedding will take place March 29.

JUDITH LYNN FOULKE... is the daughter of Dr. Charles W. Foulke of McLean, Va., and Mrs. Rose M. Foulke of Arlington, Va., who announce her engagement to Robert Levi Carraway, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Carraway of Greenville. The wedding is planned for April 18.

Card Party Announced

A report on the upcoming card party was given at the Wednesday meeting of the St. Peter's Women's Club.

Making the report was Anne Butler, who said the party will be held Feb. 27. Members are selling tickets for $1.50. Other card games will be played.

Dina Dorney will be chairman for the annual St. Patrick's Day party scheduled for March 14. Tickets will also be sold for this event.

Friendship Sunday will be held Feb. 15. Dot Schlien and Mildred Murphy will distribute hearts at the 8 a.m. Mass while Kitty Tronto and Roberta Brooks volunteered for the 10:30 service.

Members are reminded to bring a can of food for Catholic Social Services at the next meeting which will be held Ash Wednesday.

Two projects were also decided by members. The meeting was conducted by Vice President Eleanor Close.

Wedding Vows Are Spoken

FOUNTAIN — The noon wedding ceremony of Jean Tingle Trevathan of Greensboro and Jeffrey Bruce Caldwell of Raleigh took place here Saturday in the Fountain Presbyterian Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Billie Jean Trevathan and Mr. Henry T. Trevathan of Greenville.

Mrs. G. E. Trevathan Sr., grandmother of the bride, entertained the bridal party at a luncheon after the ceremony at the Colonial Inn, Farmville. Mr. and Mrs. Michael Caldwell of Milwaukee, Wis. and Raleigh held a wedding reception at their Raleigh home at 7 p.m.

The bride was employed as a social worker in Burlington. The bridegroom is assistant vice president of First Citizens Bank and Trust Co., Raleigh.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Raleigh.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

At my age, there are few things that excite me anymore. Laundry that smells fresh doesn't do it. Neither does unclogging my nasal passages or checking out the men's underwear ads at Ward's.

But when I read about a tour of Swiss chocolate factories scheduled to leave New York March 21 and return on March 29, I became quite dizzy and had to lie down.

You are either a chocolate disciple or you're not. If you are, you are shameless in your lust for chocolate. When a stranger unwraps a candy bar and throws the wrapper in a trash can, you will snatch the paper, bury your face in it and lick like something wild until there is nothing left.

You will forget your station at parties and run an unwashed finger around the bottom of the cake plate to get to the excess icing.

You will lie to your children and tell them you washed the pan you made the fudge in when in fact you have hidden it in the oven to eat later.

Worse, you will pilfer bits of chocolate that you have no intention of sharing with anyone. (On a vacation once, I hid a piece of chocolate in the lining of my purse and when the kids saw me chewing on it, I told them it was a laxative.)

You are basically quite disgusting.

As far as I can see, the chocolate tour is a real breakthrough in travel. I have felt for a long time that people have had it with fat angels on cathedral ceilings and statues white from pigeon droppings.

It's not too crazy to assume that: soon there will be pub-crawling tours of Ireland, wine-tasting tours of France, and pasta tours of Italy. (Be still, my beating heart!)

But the Cadillac of tours is bound to be that select, elite group of pacesetters — the chocolate lovers. That rare breed of connoisseurs who leave New York each year as a "single occupancy" and end up nine days later as "doubles." Those gutsy tourists who can finally come out of the closet where they've been eating cupcakes behind the storage bags and go public. Those fun-loving pilgrims who will bring elastic waistbands back into style. Who save their money all year to make the pilgrimage to Our Lady of Bad Skin.

And those who, when someone asks, "How did you find the Alps?" will answer, "It needs more sugar."

Shower Given Bride-Elect

AYDEN — Miss JoAnn Hines was honored with a bridal lingerie shower at the home of Miss Dawn Holland here. Co-hostesses were Miss Alice Hines and Miss Ree Moore.

The gift table was covered with an antique white linen cloth and centered with a blue parasol. An arrangement of mixed cut flowers and lighted tapers were also used.

Miss Hines was remembered with a corsage of white daisies, a gift of the hostesses.

Dear Abby

Boss May Censor Thoughts After Hearing Censure

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband says I am an attractive woman. We are very happy and seldom have an argument. I work in a large office with a dozen other women. My boss, who is manly and attractive, propositioned me. Of course I turned him down, but he isn't the type to be easily discouraged. I understand he has done this to others and those who refused were fired.

My husband's solution: "Tell him your husband will be out of town for a few days, then invite him over for the evening. On that evening, invite his wife over and let her hide (with me) in another room. Wear something 'comfortable,' and lead him on a little. Then when he starts shedding his clothes, his wife and I will appear."

I think this should take care of the situation. What do you think, Abby?

WILLOW IN MASS.

DEAR WILLOW: Why be a party to entrapment? There's a more legitimate solution. Inform your boss that the new Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has put into effect rules making sexual harassment a violation of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. "Harassment occurs," the EEOC says, "when submission to it becomes a condition of employment, when submission or rejection becomes a factor in promotions or raises, or when the conduct interferes with work performance, or creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive working environment." Furthermore, any employer who violates these rules is liable to censure, to say nothing of a lawsuit. That should do it!

DEAR ABBY: Ask anyone who works in a nursing home if men are sexually active in their 90s.

One 190-pound man had to be lifted to bed, to wheelchair, to toilet. This "helpless" old gent, age 93, would pinch and poke at any of us girls who came near him.

After many months of almost breaking our backs lifting him, late one night we found his empty wheelchair in the hallway. He had found his way to a lady friend's bed! We later learned from several ladies that this 93-year-old man was very active indeed.

If you print my letter, use anything but my real name. I'm still working here.

MOUND CITY, MO.

DEAR ABBY: I am an average reader of your column and enjoy it very much. I simply cannot believe a statement that a very dear friend of mine made, so I am writing to you for an answer.

She said that "Dear Abby" is a man, and she heard it from a reliable source. It doesn't make any difference to me either way. I still continue to read and enjoy your column, but I would like to know the truth.

HAZEL IN EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR HAZEL: Tell your friend that Abby says she is a woman. And for verification she has the word of a) her husband and b) her gynecologist.

DEAR ABBY: AL IN OREGON has become my hero of the week (He pointed out the error one makes in saying, "I could care less," when the expression should be, "I couldn't care less.")

Now, please take a firm stand against the currently popular abomination, "Hopefully."

It is appalling to hear an otherwise well-educated person say, "Hopefully, I'll finish the report tomorrow."

He should, of course, say, "I hope to finish the report tomorrow."

MARTHA, THE GRAMMARIAN

DEAR MARTHA: Right on, E.B. White, in "The Elements of Style," explains it this way:

"This once-useful adverb meaning 'with hope' has been distorted and is now widely used to mean 'I hope' or 'It is to be hoped.' Such use is not merely wrong, it is silly. To say, 'Hopefully I'll leave on the noon plane' is to talk nonsense. Do you mean you'll leave on the noon plane in a hopeful frame of mind? Or do you mean you'll leave on the noon plane? Whichever you mean, you haven't said it clearly."

Now I hope it's understood!

Appraisers Set Up Consumer Service

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A consumer information service has been established by the American Society of Appraisers in response to public concern about the value of real estate and personal property.

Dexter D. MacBride, executive vice president, says an estimated 120,000 people in the United States currently practice appraising but "perhaps only 30 percent of them belong to one of the five major testing-certifying societies."

Members must pass rigid written test and appraisal reporting procedures to receive the ASA designation, MacBride said, adding that all the professional societies insist their members be bound by strict codes of ethics.

Only about 12 states require real property appraisers to have a real estate broker's license, he said, and neither the federal government nor the states license, certify or register appraisers.

ASA aims to fill the gap

A DETERRENT?

LONDON (AP) — Eating raw carrots, which contain a form of vitamin A, may help to reduce the risk of lung smokers according to a prominent British professor.

Professional appraiser and pitfalls to avoid.

Pamphlets cover appraisal of everything from small businesses and jewelry to trees and other landscaping to suggestions to help a property owner involved in condemnation proceedings.

Requests should be directed to American Society of Appraisers, Consumer Information Service, Dulles International Airport, P.O. Box 17265, Washington, D.C. 20041.

Colombian Bean Instant Brew

NEW YORK (UPI) — The largest instant coffee processor in Latin America, with a 35 percent share of the Colombian market, is introducing a 100 percent Colombian instant coffee in the United States.

It is made from 100 percent excelsior, said to be the world's most expensive variety of coffee bean.

Colcafe instant coffee is available in jars of about 1 1/4, 3 and 6 ounces, expected to retail for about $1.49 for the smallest size, about $2.39 for the medium and about $4.29 for the largest. They make about 40, 68 and 136 cups of coffee beverage each.

Distribution is beginning in the Northeast and is expected to be national by mid-year.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 8, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early morning finds it necessary to guard against some upsets or unusual conditions that can test your patience. Accept conditions as they are and don't become irritated.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is not a good time for discussions but the afternoon is fine and you can get good results then. Be wise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Keep calm when a close family tie appears itching for a fight. Take time to improve home conditions early in the day.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If a family member becomes irritable, keep silent and then conditions improve. Show that you are understanding.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure to keep promises made to close ties. Study what repairs need to be made at home now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use tact when dealing with others and then you can easily put across your own ideas. Plan the future more intelligently.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be alert to opportunities coming your way at this time. Sidelstep one who is detrimental to your future progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Steer clear of an acquaintance who is too demanding and seek the company of congenials. Take no risks with your reputation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Use tact in dealing with family members and maintain harmony at home. Do what ever will add to your present prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study new ideas that could bring you added income in the future. Follow the philosophy that is best for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideal time to engage in favorite hobby with congenials. Be sure to show thoughtfulness to others today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to study new ways to have added abundance in the days ahead. Make plans to improve your social life.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to please your friends today instead of worrying about personal affairs. Try to comprehend worldly matters better.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can easily understand the importance of making changes for the better in any situation, whether in business or personal matters. Give good religious training and teach to be optimistic.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, FEB. 9, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Start the new week right by developing a plan of action that brings out your true ability and gain more benefits. State your views to those who can help you in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get an early start on tasks that are important to your welfare. The evening can be a most happy time with closest tie.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to get in fine physical shape and improve your appearance. Study new projects that could give you added income.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be more thoughtful and considerate of family members and increase harmony at home. Maintain a cheerful manner.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle your regular routines in such a way to gain the approval of associates. Strive for happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Begin new week properly by scheduling your work wisely, then delve into most important matters first. Study monetary position.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more willing to compromise with an associate for the sake of harmony. You are able to gain a personal aim now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listening to what an adviser has to say about personal problem helps you to solve it. Show that you are a humanitarian.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't be discouraged if there are delays and obstacles in the path of your progress early in the day. Keep plugging away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doing whatever you have committed yourself to can bring high praise and advancement in your line of endeavor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Stop putting off tasks that have to be done eventually. You can impress others now with sparkling conversation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be practical in dealing with others and handle regular routines with more enthusiasm. Be happy and relaxed tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Handle a difficult assignment early in the day when your mind is sharp. Be sure to keep promises you have made.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to handle complicated problems, so give a fine education that will open doors to a most successful future. One who will have a great interest in religious matters. A good marriage is denoted here.

On The Young Side

By Elizabeth Ito

Alison Dixon Keel, a senior at Rose, has won a $250 scholarship in the 1981 North Carolina Junior Miss Pageant.

She was named Greenville's Junior Miss in a candidate-at-large competition held in October in Greensboro for those students whose town does not sponsor a Junior Miss Pageant. She then returned to Greensboro in mid-January for six days of pageant activities. In the contest she and 27 other girls from across the state were judged on an interview, talent in the performing arts, physical fitness, scholastic achievement and poise and appearance.

Sponsored by the Pilot Club of Greenville, she received her award for her outstanding scholastic achievement. The Advanced Art Class, under the direction of Billy Stinson, is painting a mural of the student's own design on the store front of Juda Records, E. Fifth Street. The project is part of the class' unit on commercial art and graphic design.

The field of hopefuls for Rose's 1981 Quiz Bowl team has been narrowed down to eight students. Four of these students will become team members with the remaining four serving as alternates. The finalists, who will participate in several more mock quiz bowls before the final selection, include Joel Mauger, Jeff Prescott, Shannon Stanforth, Daniel Scharf, Alayna Keller, Dorothy Wang, Jeff Jones and Alison Keel.

The team will meet their first opponent in the local competition Saturday, Feb. 14, at the library-recreation complex, Cedar Lane. Participating schools will be Rose, North Pitt, Farmville-Central, D. H. Conley and Ayden-Grifton. The winning team will go on to regional competition to be held in Tarboro, March 14.

The SGA is sponsoring a king and queen of hearts dance Feb. 14 from 8-12 p.m. in the cafeteria. Proceeds from the event will go to the Heart Fund.

Shops Fit In Alleyways

NEW YORK (AP) — An alley is usually wide enough for two garbage cans and five not-too-fat cats to frolic. But some enterprising New Yorkers have discovered that alleyways can be big enough — or small enough — for little shops.

There are three buildings on the block between 69th and 70th Streets on Columbus Avenue. Two are somber monoliths that go unnoticed in the New York skyline. The third is 46 inches wide.

It is the Seashell Boutique, squashed between its two awesome neighbors in what was once an alley.

Further up on Columbus Avenue is Johnny's, another squashed emporium. The four-foot wide interior spills over onto the sidewalk, giving Johnny Dominguez more space to sell his books, magazines and records. His rent is only $125 a month. But then, he doesn't have electricity or running water. Abraham Sadka, owner of the 56-inch wide Golden Key Locksmiths in Greenwich Village, pays a little more in rent — $225. For the money, he has heat, electricity, sink with hot and cold running water, a basement and a storage area above the shop.

Peter Angel Rodriguez, who owns a television-stereo-radio repair shop called Takakos on Broadway, pays an even higher rent — $325 a month. But Rodriguez says his squashed shop easily earns that for him in two days.

WOMEN BANKERS GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American women are having increasingly successful careers in banking, according to the International Labor Organization.

The ILO report indicates that in the United States more than 30 percent of all bank officials and managers are now women.

"Home Owned & Operated For Over 63 Years"

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I know that you have written about reevaluation on several occasions, but it still has me confused. Last night, I picked up the following hand:

♠109xxx ♣x ♣xx ♣AQxx
Partner opened the bidding with one spade. I raised to two spades and that's where we played, making four-odd. I counted my hand as worth 10 points, which is the maximum for a single raise. Partner said that, at the very least, I should add a point for the fifth spade. What's right? —R. Berger, Birmingham, Mich.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
A.—When you value your hand as dummy, you have to look at it differently than if you were making an opening bid. The reason is that, when a fit has been found, your hand increases in value. There are only a few slight adjustments you have to worry about. The first is the distributional count. It now becomes:

Doubleton	1 point
Singleton	3 points
Void	5 points

You should also upgrade trump honors by one point, providing the combined count of these honors is not more than 4 points.

Considering all these factors, your hand values to 12 points—8 in high cards, 3 in distribution and 1 in the trump suit. That is far too strong for a single raise; it is almost good enough to jump to three spades. I would show it by first bidding two clubs and then raising spades.

Note that had partner opened one club, the hand is worth only 11 points. Since your trump support already contains 6 points in high cards, there is no upward reevaluation in that area.

Q.—I have been told that when I am playing duplicate bridge, an opening "short" club bid must be alerted. Since we do not play that one club is forcing, in which case it would certainly be alertable, I can't see why we should have to alert the bid. What is your ruling, please? —W. B. Shanahan, Boardman, Ohio

A.—It depends on what you mean by a "short" club. If you are playing a five-card major system and your opening bid of one club always shows three or more clubs, there is no need to alert. But if your system also prevents you from opening one diamond unless you have at least a four-card suit, in which case your club opening might be made on a singleton or doubleton, then it should be alerted.

MEETING TUESDAY

The next meeting of the Pitt County Agri-Business Association will be held Tuesday, Feb. 10 at 7:30 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant.

Speakers for the meeting will be Howard G. Dawkins and C. Harold Creech from the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center Inc. here.

C. J. Harris, association president, said that the nominating committee will present the 1981 slate of officers for consideration.

New Breed Of Long-Haulers Carry Nuclear Cargo

By JIM McELROY
Associated Press Writer
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — They look like long-haul truckers, and the 18-wheelers they drive blend with the thousands of tractor-trailer rigs that travel the nation's highways each day.

But these drivers and the cargo they carry are far from ordinary. They are the couriers who transport special nuclear material for the government. They must handle any emergency that might arise, including defending a shipment if terrorists attempt to take it.

They are armed with an assortment of weapons, among them M-16s and 40-millimeter grenade launchers. And they know how to use them.

They are military veterans with four years of security-related experience, such as in the military or civilian police. Many have seen combat. Some were Green Berets, Rangers, Navy Seals.

The training they undergo ranges from learning to drive specially designed $500,000 trucks and operate the communications equipment in them to what one official describes as "bloodless combat."

The couriers work for the Transportation Safeguards Division of the U.S. Department of Energy.

"Our people are the best," says Pat Crane, director of the division. "These are hand-picked volunteers... highly motivated people willing to do what is necessary."

The couriers are responsible for the movement of all government-owned plutonium, Uranium 233 and other enriched uranium, all of which are fissionable materials, Crane says. They also deliver all nuclear weapons made for the government to the first distribution points, such as military bases.

"Sometimes I get a little shaky about it, a little concerned," says Bo Donaldson, 44, one of approximately 145 couriers. "But I've got confidence in everything being handled like it should be."

"It's a very meaningful, worthwhile position. You might say patriotic," says another courier, Roger Wilson, 38.

Although the government has used couriers to move nuclear materials for 30 years, the current courier program was started in 1975. Couriers are stationed at three places — Albuquerque, home of Sandia National Laboratories, a prime nuclear weapons research and development laboratory, and training center for the couriers; Amarillo, Texas, where a large nuclear weapons plant is located; and Oak Ridge, Tenn., site of the Oak Ridge National Laboratories.

The Albuquerque headquarters also controls the movement of nuclear materials to about 50 or 60 military installations and 33 DOE operations throughout the nation. Trains and airplanes are also used, but most of the movement is done with the big trucks, Crane says. "We have heavily armed people who go along so there's more flexibility with the trucks."

Little about the appearance of the tractor-trailer rigs distinguishes them from other trucks on the road.

They are exempt from federal regulations requiring a warning sign that radioactive material is on board. The tractor and trailer are "bullet resistant," one official said.

The trucks travel only on highways on which vehicles carrying explosive material are allowed. All told, the division's vehicles traveled 3½ million miles in 1980.

Crane will reveal few details of the movements. An operation is classified from the time a truck or convoy of trucks departs until it arrives. Drivers cannot tell their families where they're going.

He will say that each truck has three people in it — one driving, one operating the communications equipment and one in the sleeper cab. The three rotate periodically.

And, he says, it's "never just three guys riding around in a truck. There's always some friends around somewhere."

Much of the training prepares the couriers to thwart any attempt to grab a shipment, but Crane says there has never been such an attack.

Handling the nuclear materials safely is also stressed in training.

There have been accidents, but they have been few, an average of about one for every 840,000 miles driven, Crane says. There has "never been any contamination from any incident or a situation that posed a threat to health or the environment. There has never been a loss of materials."

Officials at the safety division say the most serious was an accident in southern Colorado in December in which a truck carrying plutonium and other radioactive materials overturned.

Tom Miskowicz, Crane's

deputy, says it was the first time one of the department's 40-foot-long trucks had overturned, although they have jackknifed before. He says the truck's cargo emerged from the accident in "fine shape."

Couriers spend about half of each month on the road. The long hours result in overtime that can push their salaries to about $25,000-$30,000 a year, although the base pay ranges from $13,672 for a first-year courier to $18,585 for a courier commander.

When not on the road, couriers spend their time maintaining equipment and training. They have physical fitness exams every 180 days, quarterly qualifications on the firing range and yearly medical examinations.

Applicants must pass a medical examination, survive an extensive FBI security check and be selected after an interview. Of 165 applicants, only 18 were admitted for the recruit class that began Jan. 12.

Recruits who successfully complete the six-week basic training are on probation for one year. They also must complete two advanced sessions teaching them how to protect their cargo if attacked.

India Staging Biggest Head Count In History

By SANJOY HAZARIKA
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — More than a million census-takers start fanning out across India this week for what may be the greatest head count in history.

India's population presently is estimated at 676 million. Last year, China's population was officially estimated to have reached a billion, but there was no detailed census-taking such as India is undertaking.

An army of about 1.25 million school teachers and government workers have been enlisted to count the people who live in India, and the results should be known in mid-March.

The last census, in 1971, put India's population at 548 million.

"On the day of the census, it will be the single biggest administrative exercise in the world," India's census commissioner, P. Padmanabha, said in a recent interview. A census normally is taken here every 10 years.

Starting Monday, the appointed "head counters" start knocking on the doors of each of their 150 allotted homesteads and begin quizzing the inhabitants about their ages, jobs and religions.

"It is not just a head count," said Padmanabha. "It also is going to be a 100 percent social and economic survey of how people live in our land."

The enumerators have until Feb. 28 to complete their task. After that, there will be a five-day period in which the results will be reviewed by supervisors and any new births or deaths in the 19-day census-taking period recorded.

The enumerators will be armed with two questionnaires. One will be an "individual slip" that everyone will receive which asks questions about a person's age, religion, sex, marital status, education, caste and job.

People will also be asked on that form about their hometown and whether they have migrated. Women will have to answer questions about children, and will be asked whether of their children any have died since birth.

"That will give us an indication of the fertility of women and also help check the national birth rate," Padmanabha said.

The second form is more detailed. But only about 20 percent of the total population will be selected to answer it.

Some questions it asks are whether the family lives in its own house, what materials — bricks, leaves, reeds, thatch — the house is made of, and whether drinking water and other facilities are available.

The information is confidential, but people who give false answers face prosecution and penalties of six months in jail or a 1,000 rupee ($125) fine.

Padmanabha does not expect his army to run into trouble although there are "some sensitive areas" where they will have to move carefully. He cited as examples places where there have been Hindu-Muslim clashes.

However, one area of India which is being left out of the census is the northeastern state of Assam, troubled for more than a year by agitation against millions of alleged aliens.

Padmanabha said that "until conditions improve and there is normalcy," Assam cannot be covered by the enumerators.

The student-led agitation has crippled government functions and provoked clashes between native Hindus and immigrant Moslems from neighboring Bangladesh in which an estimated 250 people have died.

In the last census, Assam had a population of about 15 million. It is currently estimated at about 18 million.

A total of 900 million "personal forms" have been printed, along with the 200 million or so of the longer form.

The Elite Repeat

Linda Tripp hopes the name of her resale shop on Highway 33 east of Greenville conveys the quality and the nature of the merchandise she stocks. She calls the shop, located in a neat beige gray-trimmed farmhouse about two and one-half miles east of Interstate Shopping Center, "The Elite Repeat."

"Most things here are previously owned and sold on consignment," she said, "but we turn down everything that doesn't meet our standards. And, as we grow, we're going to be more and more selective."

The resale shop is owned by Linda and her husband, Randolph Tripp, and is managed by Nancy Galloway. The hours are from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturdays.

Linda said she conceived the name for the shop several years ago while browsing in resale shops in other cities. "I'd like to have a place like this," she mused, "but mine would be newer and it wouldn't smell musty. And I'd try to think of a name that would connote quality at low prices."

"The Elite Repeat." She kept it there for several years till her dream became reality.

"We expect everything brought to our shop to be clean and fresh smelling," she said. "We want it to be un-damaged. Names brands are nice."

"We want this to be a place where people who have bought quality items can get some profit out of them when they get tired of them or when their circumstances change. When you change your decor or your dress size, we hope it'll be nice to know we're here."

"Everything is sold on consignment. We encourage our consignors to keep their prices low. We pay consignors at the end of each month."

"Things that don't sell in a reasonable time are returned to the owners."

"Our customers can come here expecting to pay less than brand-new prices, yet more than they'd pay at a yard sale. Here they have the benefit of a fitting room and are encouraged to return to us anything that doesn't make them happy, regardless of the reason. This, we believe, is something that not even some of the best retail stores offer."

"The Elite Repeat" is located in a house that the Tripps repaired and repainted and renovated themselves. It's divided into areas designated by clever names of Linda's own coining—The Woo Boutique, the Gift Gallery, Yesterday's World, The Clothes Closet, and The Kitchen Cupboard.

Merchandise varies from new items of brass, pewter, cotton and glassware at reduced rates to used small appliances, toys, furniture, household accessories, and clothing of all types and sizes—men's, women's and children's.

We expect to be constantly improving our shop and upgrading our merchandise. And we hope to add new customers and consignors all the time.

Syria Winning A War On Islamic Fundamentalists

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
ALEPPO, Syria (AP) — President Hafez Assad's government appears to be winning a simmering 18-month mini-war with underground Islamic fundamentalists of the Moslem Brotherhood.

The focal point of the conflict has been this ancient city, the nation's second largest urban center after the capital of Damascus 220 miles to the south.

It was here that the Brotherhood, which is outlawed in Syria, launched its first major challenge to Assad's Socialist Baath Party regime with a grenade-throwing attack on an artillery school June 16, 1979. Sixty cadets were killed and many others were wounded.

A wave of assassinations followed in which Syrian officials estimate hundreds of government supporters were killed nationwide. Violence spread south through Homs and Hamma to Damascus itself. Diplomatic sources say Assad was the target of an assassination attempt last June.

With strikes paralyzing the city and factories becoming the target of economic sabotage, a Syrian armored division rolled north to Aleppo to reinforce police last March. The 15,000 troops and several hundred tanks stayed near Aleppo until last November, when a crisis erupted on the border with neighboring Jordan.

Syria's Parliament made membership in the secret society punishable by death last summer and security forces began a campaign to root out Brotherhood cells. Syrian officials contend, and Western diplomats agree, that the challenge to government stability has faded and the crackdown has broken the back of the movement.

At first, said Rafik Akarini, the Baathist leader in Aleppo, "the simple, ordinary people, were deceived by their objectives, by their religious slogans ... Now the man-in-the-street is against the organization."

Akarini and Aleppo's mayor claim the Brotherhood is the creation of Syria's political enemies in the area: Iraq, Jordan and Egypt. Arms, they say, are smuggled through Lebanon, and the leaders are based in West Germany. Western diplomats say at least some aid comes from Jordan, although King Hussein's government denies it is aiding the Brotherhood.

The official Syrian news agency identified the Brotherhood's general guide, or leader, as Adnan Saadine, and its second-in-command as Saide Hawa Saadine, the agency said, was elected in January to replace Issam al Attar.

Little else is known about the leaders or about the group's aims beyond, its stated desire to establish Islamic government in Syria, which supports Iran in the war with Iraq.

"The Moslem Brotherhood is an extremist religious movement made up of fanatics," said Akarini. "It claims to work as a religious movement for the sake of Islam but at its core it is really conceived to ... work in the interest of world imperialism."

The Baathist building is virtually the only government installation here still guarded by military police. A tour of the city of nearly one million people revealed no evidence of tension in the bustling covered market places surrounding the Crusader-era Citadel Castle or any ferment on the university campus at the edge of Aleppo.

Even though newspapers carried page-one accounts recently of police raids on three Brotherhood hideouts in which five persons were killed, not even a traffic cop was to be seen in the streets. Cafes were crowded and shops were open even at night.

"The movement has been defeated and the few who remain are just looking for a place to hide," said Akarini.

The cost has been high on both sides. Aleppo's mayor, Mohammad Nihad al-Qadhi, estimates that 200 Moslem Brotherhood members have been killed in the Aleppo area since the artillery school attack, with 100 government supporters assassinated. In addition, 50 innocent bystanders have been killed, he added.

Al-Qadhi, who says he has been protected by a body-guard since learning of a plot to kill him, contended that only 20 to 25 members of the group were left in Aleppo and "they are well-known" by the police.

As evidence that the Brotherhood had failed to disrupt the economic life of the city the mayor produced a report showing Aleppo's state-run economy achieved 81 percent of its objectives in 1980 compared to only 64 percent the year before.

"This could not have been accomplished without a good atmosphere of security," he commented.

What is worrying the city fathers, however, is a concentrated propaganda campaign by Jordan's official media, focusing on unrest in Syria, and which recently claimed 200 persons were rounded up by police and executed in the streets of Aleppo.

"Nothing of this kind happened in this town," al-Qadhi said. "But it's true there have been rumors and stories about this city" — which has been a trading center since the Hittites moved south from what is now Turkey to set up outposts here about 2000 B.C.

Woodman Prefers To Live A Lonely Life

By JIM MCKAY
Associated Press Writer
MURPHY'S BOTTOM, Pa. (AP) — Marlin Miller is a woodsman, plain and simple. He lives alone, self-sufficient in a three-room shack, growing old among the trees and animals he loves.

"It would drive me nuts to make my home in town," Miller told visitors who hiked through snow to his valley hermitage in western Pennsylvania.

A slight, white-haired, bearded man, Miller lives in seclusion near the Allegheny River town of Kittanning. He does without electricity and modern plumbing and walks wherever he wants to go.

He raises chickens for eggs, keeps bees for honey, tends a garden for vegetables, drinks from a stream, sews his own clothes, scrounges for coal and cuts wood for cooking and heating fuel.

"I don't eat game of any kind. Why, hell, there ain't no game of any kind anymore. I don't know what everyone is trotting around the woods for, hunting for this and hunting for that."

Once a month, Miller walks to Kittanning where he picks up a Social Security check and buys lard, yeast, canned milk, bacon and coffee.

"When he comes into town, he visits, just makes a trip around," says Gordon Brenneman, who acts as Miller's legal guardian. "He hobnobs with most of the eccentric old wealthy ladies he can find."

But Miller's life isn't completely carefree. The land he calls home is leased from a coal company that has plans to expand strip mining operations in the area.

Once work begins, Miller fears his only water supply — a nearby stream — will be polluted and he'll have to move.

Howard Turner of Shawmut Development Co. says mining is planned, but the stream should not be affected and the company has no plans to evict Miller.

But Brenneman is concerned about what will happen to Miller once mining starts, probably this spring.

"The indication I got is that he's in the road," he says. "If they have to blast, I can't see how he won't be in danger. And if they blast, I think that would affect the water supply."

Miller doesn't worry much about leaving. He'd rather tell tall tales or talk about the animals, his friends in the woods.

Besides cats and the several dogs he keeps, Miller nursed four fawns left to die when their mothers were shot by hunters.

"They got to be regular pests, following me every place around the garden," he recalls. "They'd take off and be gone for half a day, then they'd come back at night."

The old man insists he's well over 100. But Brenneman, who met him about a dozen years ago while hunting, thinks he's in his 80s.

Miller delights in telling stories that others find less than credible, mostly set in the remote past.

"We used to call it woods happy when I was a kid," Brenneman says. "He sits down there with nothing to do and makes up stories. But they don't harm anyone."

The possibility of having to move doesn't unnerve him.

"There's lots of land," he says confidently. "I'll have to get me a used pickup truck. I need room for my garden, my chickens and my dogs. Four acres with water is all."

He hugged his visitors when they left and gave them a dozen eggs before calling out, "Maybe I'll have a new place in the spring."

Avers Police Eat Poorly

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A university criminologist and researcher says police officers may be among the poorest eaters in the American workforce.

R. Paul McCauley is collecting data that indicates police officers' diets consist of fast foods, junk foods, irregular eating schedules and fast eating.

"Of the more than 250 officers polled," McCauley says, "94 percent eat at least one fried fast food or junk food daily while on duty."

His preliminary study included interviews with officers from all over the United States who were attending training seminars at the University of Louisville, where McCauley is an associate professor of justice administration.

McCauley believes their poor eating habits are related to job stress and hypertension.

"If an in-depth study, which is on the drawing board, concludes that the correlation is significant between what an officer puts in his mouth and the way he behaves, we'll be seeing some changes in terms of nutrition classes and meal plans for on-duty officers."

Large Savings With Retreads

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Retreaded tires saved American consumers more than $3.5 billion in 1980, a tire-industry association reports.

The 50 million retreaded tires sold last year cost motorists $3 billion less than comparable new tires, the Tire Retread Information Bureau said. Retreading also conserved 400 million gallons of oil, at a savings of $260 million.

Tax savings totaled $276 million: $176 million in Federal excise taxes and $100 million in state sales taxes.

WATER LIGHTS . . . Sunlight through is perhaps one of the reasons Williams loves his ever changing job.

TAU (Beautiful River) . . . Foreshadowed by old trees and spanish moss the Tar and Grimesland draw reflect reasons why area indians named the river Tau.

Draw Bridges . . .

Link To Past

What tales the old Tar could tell if it could sing. Songs of showboats, Blackbeards' treasure, logging companies and bridges. In days gone by there was more than one way to cross the river, boat, swim or ferry.

Today, drawbridges provide the link across the river for our wheeled type of transportation, quite a change from when the river served as the main highway.

The area around the Grimesland draw is steeped in legend. One of which is the possible burial of Susie Smith, Blackbeards' sister, on a bluff somewhere near the bridge. It is told that he used to visit Susie when times got rough out on the sea, and perhaps buried some treasure either in her grave, thought to be located on the Grimes farm, or on the banks of the Tar. Fortune hunters have dug all along the river banks and even in Susie's grave hoping to find the treasure that's location is said to be known only to Blackbeard and the Devil.

Washington, too, has a draw with tales of its own to tell. Apparently a freighter, the "Beta", was coming down the Tar from Greenville one cold foggy November morning in 1888. Gradually the fog lifted and looming up ahead was the Washington bridge. Hanging by a rope from the beams under the bridge was a man, William Parker, who was acquitted twice for the murder of General Bryan Grimes, one of the owners of Grimes farm and Confederate hero. Parker had been drinking the night before and bragged about killing the general and his reprieve. Consequently someone decided to use the bridge as a type of justice.

Some 75 years ago there were over 20 landing places along the Tar, mostly used for lumbering, cotton-gin mills—and it is rumored that some were used for moonshine. These landings were usually named after someone as in the case of Boyd's Ferry, located near or in the place of the Grimesland draw. A wooden ferry loaded down with goods for the store might have been pulled across the river by rope.

Since the Grimesland drawbridge was first built it has undergone quite a few changes. It was torn down in 1954 and a new bridge put in its place, that span originally came from the Neuse River draw at New Bern.

One of the old tenders, Donville Jackson Richardson, now deceased, operated the bridge for about 25 years according to his wife Vivian. He took over the tending job as the result of his brother's untimely death from food poisoning. Richardson, an army veteran, was granted an honorable discharge because of health. "When he was told he wasn't any more good for the army, he left you know, because people don't want to stay around in situations like that," recalled Mrs. Richardson. She said when he was offered the job she told him to go ahead and take it and she'd help him, because she knew he'd get social security for it. They both used to go out when a boat was coming and turn the metal handle around and around until it opened and then around and around until it closed.

"I reckon if there was a job like that open today, I'd take it," said Mrs. Richardson. As for assisting her husband, she says, "I did what I could and what was right and I guess that's all you can do."

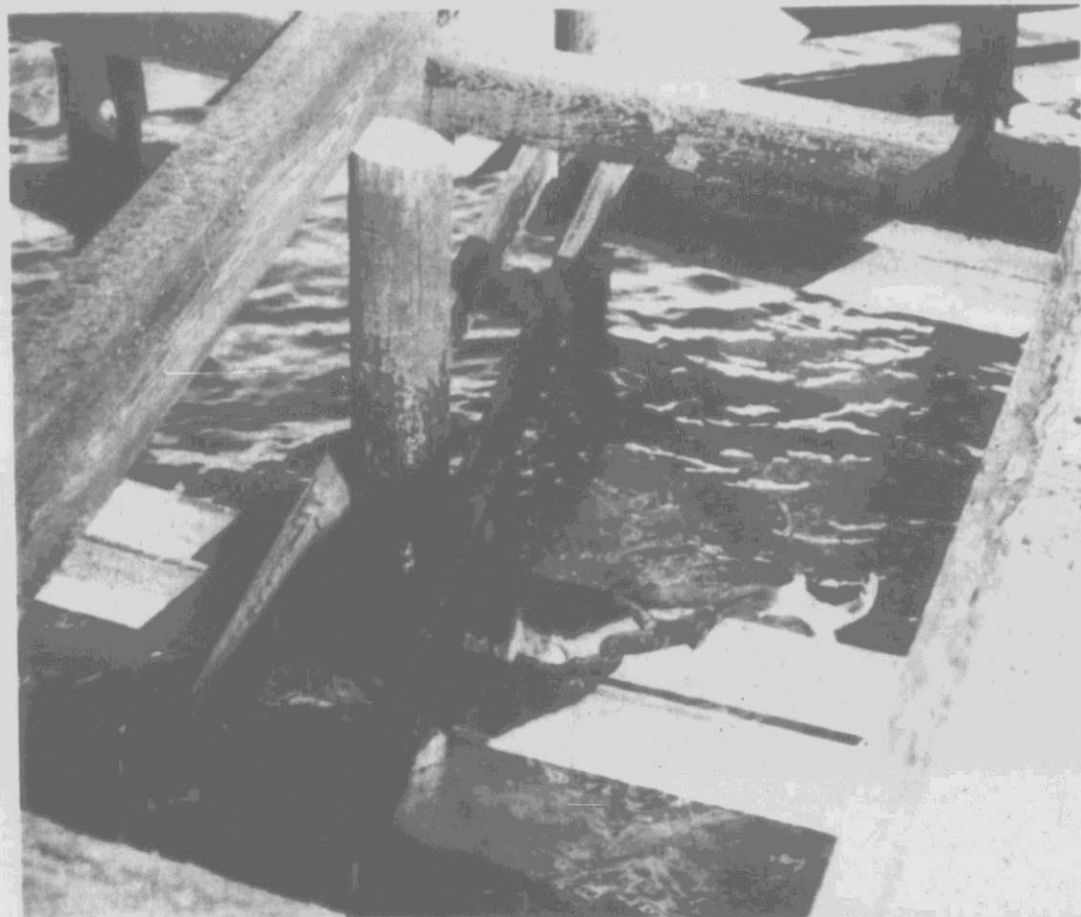

D.J. Richardson died two years ago, June 22, of cancer.

The times of Watkins and Boyd's Ferry, steam boats hissing up the river, and pirates, are gone now but they still linger in the deep of the river.

For the past two years Lonnie Williams has been bridge maintenance supervisor of Beaufort County and the Grimesland drawbridge. "It's sort of like dancing, there's always a challenge," he says of his work of 33 years.

Williams got his start working on the ferry dock at Ocracoke with a floating gang of workers. His work here and in the past involves repairing and constructing bridges, including draw, primary and secondary. Bridge tending never has been and is still no easy task, it requires patience, skill and these days, ear plugs. When working under the Washington bridge the men have to plug their ears to keep from going deaf. The sound will drive you crazy, a large hum that echoes through and around your head, as cars one after another cross over.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The RidgeWay

Passive Solar Multi-level That Is Energy Conscious

By Jerry Bishop

Here is a multi-level design with over 2,000 square feet of finished living space, featuring a family room with built-in fireplace for those cozy family get-togethers, formal dining area, spacious kitchen and a living room with a gorgeous sun room at one end. The upper level shows a master bedroom and private bath with walk-in closet. A second bedroom and bath are also shown on this level. The lower level houses a third bedroom, laundry facilities and bath as well as the family room, making this an ideal home for a growing family. The RidgeWay, is designed for a flat or gently sloping site with an east driveway access to the 2-car garage. North and west access is op-portional. Heating and cooling needs are reduced by insulating sheathing over 2 x 4 wall construction, insulating curtains, an air-lock entry, earth berming, triple-glazed windows on the north, east and west, and double-glazed south windows. About 45% of the home's heating in the Plymouth, Minnesota climate will be provided by passive solar direct gain through the south windows.

In Plymouth, The RidgeWay would cost about $110,000 without lot based on Spring, 1980 construction costs.

New Look In Carpeting

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Things in the home-furnishings industry are constantly changing — yet they always remain the same, to paraphrase the words of a carpet-industry executive.

In other words, every January, floor-coverings retailers attend winter markets and select new styles for their customers. But there are always new items to be inspected and a round of guessing games about what new styles consumers will buy during the coming year.

This January, therefore, it was not surprising to see retailers scurrying through market buildings in Chicago, New York, Dallas, Atlanta and San Francisco to view the new offerings of carpet, rugs and hard-surface flooring. Although all of the rugs and carpets consumers have been accustomed to seeing in retail stores will remain on sale come spring, the news at the markets was the introduction of two styles — a smooth, dense-woven, suede-like carpeting, and a subtly patterned carpet with carving-like identifications. A number of manufacturers showed both styles, in addition to their existing lines.

Carpet manufacturers also showed a great number of colors in the peach family, earth tones and neutrals at the winter markets. Peaches and pinky-beiges seemed particularly plentiful. And, with color the main determinant in carpet choice, manufacturers devoted considerable efforts toward widening the range of colors of their carpeting.

Among trends that were talked of was the growing use of commercial-grade carpet, in residences. The strong style and construction differences that used to characterize floor coverings for the home and for hotel and business places has lessened considerably. Tightly woven constructions, such as Berber-weave carpets which once figured only in offices and lobbies and ballrooms, are now often chosen for residences, especially when interior designers are involved in the decoration.

Nylon continued its increasing domination of the carpet industry, with improvements in the fiber measured against an ever-increasing costliness of wool fiber. A number of manufacturers introduced what they called "fourth generation" nylon. The fiber has been bred to closely resemble the look of wool, delustered to remove an unpleasant shine, treated to remove static-electricity buildup as well as for stain and soil repellency, and improved to take color well.

Naturally, all this attention has resulted in a fiber that is considerably more costly than the old nylon. As one industry observer noted, "the fourth generation nylons are as expensive as wool used to be."

There was a time when it looked as if name designers would be pressed into service to design, or at least lend their names to, wall-to-wall carpeting. Fashion-designer names were not promoted at this year's market. However, one manufacturer introduced two carpet designs by Alessandro, a home-furnishings designer.

His carpet designs (for Karastan) features subtle color gradation with carved effects. The carpet in nylon will sell for about $48 a yard. "If we had made it in wool, it would have been $70 or $80 a yard," said a company spokesman, thus providing a graphic illustration of the reason synthetic fibers now dominate in floor coverings.

Other manufacturers also introduced carpeting featuring subtle color shading and sculpturing. And most of the major manufacturers showed at least one smooth, dense, suede or velours-like carpet. This kind of carpet is gaining popularity as a base floor on which rugs are set.

The use of area rugs on carpeting is not a new idea. But it is an idea that is filtering down to a wider American audience, according to Charles Kalison, president of Concepts International. Kalison says that the style has been popular in Europe for a number of years. It is made on machines developed in Europe and available in the United States only in the last year or so.

Should consumers wish to lay down an area rug on their wall-to-wall carpeting, chances are they will choose an oriental-style rug. Orientals continue to dominate in area rugs. However, some oriental-style rugs have been re-colored so that pastel tones are emphasized.

"We are bringing out orientals that traditionally have deep reds and blues in them in quieter, pastel tones."

Ways to save

By improving the efficiency of your home heating system, you may be able to save up to 25% on fuel costs. In this advertisement, we'll tell you how to find out if your oil system is operating efficiently. And, we'll tell you what to do if it isn't.

How to find out if your home heating system is operating efficiently...

First call us for an Oilheat energy efficiency check. That's the only way you can accurately determine the status of your heating system. An Oilheat technician will conduct a number of tests with modern combustion efficiency instruments to see whether or not your system is burning oil as efficiently as possible.

(Provided your furnace is not a horizontal furnace in the house crawl space.)

Based on the results of these tests, you will receive a list of steps you can take to save fuel and money. These recommendations will include both the cost and the estimated annual savings. (Remember, of course, that the dollar savings will continue to climb as fuel prices increase).

...and what to do if it isn't.

If your heating system is wasting oil, we can help you make some of the following energy-saving changes:

Install a new burner

A modern, energy efficient burner is one of the most beneficial improvements we can make to an older system. New flame-retention head burners can boost your efficiency up to 16% by making your oil burn hotter. And, because they will burn your fuel more completely, your unit will stay clean longer.

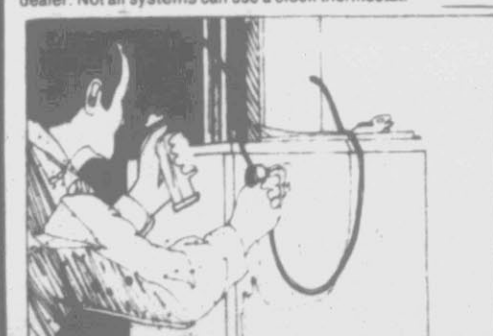

Install a clock thermostat

A clock thermostat will automatically lower the temperature for a set period of time and then raise it again. Generally, most people set the clock thermostat to lower the temperature before they go to bed, and raise it shortly before they're due to get up.

Many clock thermostats can accommodate several setback periods, so you can raise and lower your home's temperature several times during the day. These are ideal for working families.

A clock thermostat can save up to 12% of your fuel bill annually.

Before installing a clock thermostat, consult your Oilheat dealer. Not all systems can use a clock thermostat.

Get a tune-up

Like an automobile engine, an oil burner must receive the right mixture of air and fuel to operate efficiently. And, like the automobile engine, an oil burner can go "out of tune" and start wasting oil.

A simple tune-up of your oil burner may greatly increase its efficiency. An Oilheat technician can clean the heat exchanger (the part of your furnace which transfers heat from the fire box to the air or water that circulates through your house), change the oil and/or air filters, check the unit for air leaks, adjust the combustion air, check the nozzle size, and perform a final efficiency check.

Tests have shown the furnaces that run for long periods of time at a low firing rate tend to use less oil than those that run for short periods of time at a high firing rate. So it may be worthwhile to have our Oilheat technician check to see if he can reduce your burner's firing rate. Typically, this optimizing of the firing rate can reduce your fuel costs about 10%.

Replace your burner-boiler or burner-furnace

If your system is more than 10 years old, you might benefit from a new, more compact furnace or boiler.

Because of recent improvements in heating system design, a new smaller unit can boost efficiency by as much as 25%.

How much will you save?

If your heating system operates below its efficiency potential — and most old systems do — you could realize substantial savings by implementing one or more of the retrofit options described in this advertisement. A check-up by one of our Oilheat technicians will give you your current efficiency rating. And the chart below will give you an idea of how much money you could be saving.

From Original Efficiency of:	To An Increased Efficiency of: (assuming the same heat output)
	65%	70%	75%	80%	85%
50%	$231	$286	$330	$375	$412
55%	154	215	267	312	353
60%	77	143	200	250	294
65%		71	133	188	235
70%			67	125	176
75%				63	118

A tax credit is available

Both the flame retention head burner and clock thermostat are eligible for a 15% energy tax credit. For every $100 you spend on these and other approved energy saving products you can deduct $15 from your federal income taxes. Be sure to check with your local IRS office or professional tax consultants for details.

A few things you can do yourself

Keep radiators and dust filters clean. We'll be glad to show you how.

Keep the furnace area clean and free from pets. Hair and accumulated lint can plug the inlet.

Make note of unusual smells or "too hot" areas in your system. Be sure to report them to us.

Make sure carpeting, drapes, and furniture don't obstruct air flow around radiators, registers, and cold air returns.

All of these suggestions can help cut your fuel consumption. But the single, most effective action you can take is to contact your participating Oilheat dealer—that's us—right away for an energy efficiency check. All you have to do is call.

Prepared by the U.S. Department of Energy in cooperation with your participating Oilheat dealer and your State energy office.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE garden clinic

N.C. Agr. Ext. Service Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. What is the best way to control nematodes in a home planting of strawberries? (Mrs. B.L., Williamston)

A. Use certified plants. Avoid soils infested with root-knot nematodes. Plants grown in root-knot infested soil have roots with swelling or galls on them. Rotation will help to control root-knot nematodes, so avoid planting strawberries in the same location for at least three years. Marigolds can be planted to act as a "trap crop", which will further reduce the nematode population. If rotation is not feasible, fumigate with a methyl bromide or MB-chloropicrin mixture before planting. These chemicals are hazardous. Follow label directions carefully. (Barclay Poling, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. My garden is located near a wooded area and receives limited sunlight. What vegetables would you suggest I plant? (E.C., Asheville)

A. As long as the garden receives six hours of sunlight daily, you can grow any of the cool-season vegetables. These include cabbage, collards, broccoli, cauliflower, and the leafy greens. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. I have a 10-year-old Red Delicious apple tree. It bloomed well last year, but all the apples dropped off when they were small. How can I prevent this from happening again this year? (H.S., Harrisburg)

A. A Red Delicious tree needs pollen from another tree within 100 feet of it. A Golden Delicious will usually do the job. Until you can get a second tree established, you can bring in a bouquet of blooms, put them in water, and tie them in your Red Delicious tree. Bees, hopefully, will do the rest. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. Last year my broccoli heads went to flower rapidly in July and all the stems were hollow. What went wrong? (T.R., Roanoke Rapids)

A. Broccoli is a cool season crop and should be planted early, about February or March in your area. It goes to flower very rapidly when the weather gets hot. The hollow stems were probably caused by boron deficiency. Before planting broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage or turnips, add a tiny bit of borax to your soil. It takes two level tablespoons per 100 feet of row. Any more than this can cause serious problems. You can sprinkle it out uniformly by using a salt shaker, or better still, dissolve the borax in water and spread it out with a sprinkling can. (George Hughes, extension horticultural specialist)

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I feel very frustrated because I just finished removing the varnish finish from an old bedroom bureau, only to find that there are traces of reddish stain in the wood. I have seen questions and answers about that kind of problem in the past, but I guess I just didn't pay too much attention to the replies because I had never run into that trouble before. I used a remover I bought in a hardware store. It came in a can and I used it according to directions. What did I do wrong?

A. — Nothing. When stain is deeply embedded in wood, it cannot be eliminated with a varnish remover. What you have to do now is to bleach the wood. The type that comes in two parts is very effective. Ask your hardware or paint dealer to recommend the bleach you require after explaining what your particular problem is. Follow the instructions carefully, especially about the manner in which the wood should be wiped or rinsed after the stain has been removed. This bleach should produce a whitish, uniform surface. If it doesn't do so the first time, give the wood a second application. When you are satisfied with the result, apply a thin coat of sealer. Allow it to dry thoroughly, then go ahead with the refinishing of the bureau.

Q. — We are getting new carpeting in our living room soon. In our former house, we had trouble once in a while when our dog forgot himself and left a liquid spot on our rug. We never were quite sure how to remove such stains. If it happens again, what's the best way to handle it?

A. — Clean the soiled area as quickly as possible with a carpet shampoo. Next, rub with some white vinegar diluted with water. It's a help, too, to apply an air freshener, used lightly, to the general area.

Q. — It has been many years since I painted the outside of a house. In those days, I used a brush and I remember that one of the principles was to work from a dry space into the wet area. My grandfather taught me to dip in the brush about halfway, pat off the excess on the side of the can and then work toward the wet paint. When I paint the house this spring, I intend to use a roller for the first time. What I want to know is whether the idea of working toward the wet area holds true for the roller as well as the brush?

A. — Yes, it does. As with a brush, be sure to wipe off the excess before you place the roller against the wall. This is done on the corrugated or irregular portion of the paint tray. To prevent splattering, do not spin the roller at the end of a stroke.

Introducing Window Quilt Insulating panel

The new budget-priced Window Quilt for windows you want to keep covered most winter days and nights.

These attractive panels attach magnetically in seconds to pre-mounted metal strips on your window frames. Like standard track-mounted Window Quilt shades, these panels provide amazing thermal efficiency — five layers of insulation and an airtight seal on all sides.

Because there's less hardware, they cost less. And you can easily secure these panels in a half-raised or full raised position.

- Easy to install and remove
- More effective than 4 glass layers in saving heat — makes chilly rooms warmer
- R 4.25 on a single glazing — typical payback 1-3 years
- Perfect for workshop, extra bedroom, starwell — anywhere minimum cost is an important consideration
- Washable — long lasting — warranted
- Available in 4 decorator colors
- May be eligible for up to 40% federal tax credit for passive solar installation

Students In Her Course On Terror

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP)

To Arline Thorn, the human mind is like a haunted house, a maze of winding passages and forgotten rooms where terrible secrets stir in the night.

A strange compulsion to face those secrets brings dozens of West Virginia State College students to Ms. Thorn's classes on terror and the darker side of the mind.

A shy, diminutive woman, she leads her students across a landscape of slaving ghouls and pale, tormented heroines, to the days of the first horror stories.

"In a way, supernatural horror is comforting," she said. "You can always say after you've terrified yourself that vampires don't exist or monsters aren't going to come out of the fog. It's sort of a substitute magic."

Although many students may arrive for the first class expecting to find a cackling witch, Ms. Thorn said she's a bit timid.

"I guess some of my interests are morbid," she said with a smile. "But I don't like to be scared. I don't go to scary movies very often."

An instructor in literature, Ms. Thorn said a growing number of people seem to enjoy shuddering over a ghost story or squirming in their seats while watching one of the horror films that now are flooding the movie theaters.

With a bizarre painting of Frankenstein's monster peering down from a wall of her office, Ms. Thorn explained that the appetite for horror may be linked to the problems of living in a complex world.

"Many people don't understand the technological or scientific explanations of the modern world. That's why faith healers or Abominable Snowmen still exist, because they sound more comprehensible than the truly weird explanations of science," she said.

"When we get into anything emotional that deals with the mind, it's hard to get a scientific explanation," she said. "People demand an explanation and I think they accept the supernatural."

Her students study the classics of Gothic literature first, then consider terror.

"This nightmarish stuff can tell them something about their own minds and society, so it turns an escape into something revealing," she said.

Ms. Thorn said her journey into the world of the lost began when she listened as a child to horror tales told by relatives in her native Mason County.

The old ghost stories, once an indispensable part of an evening's entertainment around the fireplace in Appalachia, later were supplanted by horror films and the tales of Edgar Allan Poe and Mary Shelley, she recalled.

"Really, I'm not a weird person. I may have some weird interests but I think I'm very normal. Those suppressed nightmares come out some way."

Lending A Hand For Adoptions

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Big business is reaching out to help hand for employees wishing to adopt a child.

A typical new adoption policy now offered by Honeywell, for example, provides that the company will pay all direct adoption expenses up to a maximum of $1,000 per child. Typically adoption costs here range from $300 for a stepchild to $3,500 for a foreign child.

"Since the company provides medical coverage to employees who have children through childbirth, we decided it made sense to also help our employees who have children through adoption," explained Ed Lund, vice president of administration.

The policy applies to some 55,000 employees in the United States. Other major firms with similar policies include IBM, Ely Lilly, Hallmark, Abbott Laboratories and Xerox.

Contract No. 1: Water Main Extensions (includes 4-482 plus or minus L.F. of 8-inch water main.)
Contract No. 2: 0-50 MG Elevated Water Storage Tank
Contract No. 3: Elevated Tank Foundations and Site Work
Proposals are being solicited on an individual or combined basis by the specific numbered Contracts listed above and set forth in the deed and described in the contract documents. Bids must be submitted on a complete envelope addressed to the Director of Utilities, Greenville Utilities Commission, Post Office Box 1847, Greenville, North Carolina 27634. The outside of the envelope must be marked "Proposal for 500,000 Gallon Elevated Water Tank and Water System Improvements" and the outside of the envelope must be clearly indicated on the envelope along with the Bidder's name, address and North Carolina license number. The proposal must be submitted on a blank form included in the bound document.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a cash or certified check, drawn on a bank or trust company authorized to do business in North Carolina, payable to the Greenville Utilities Commission, in an amount at least equal to five per cent (5%) of the total amount of the bid, as a guarantee that a contract will be entered into and that a bid bond in the amount of $50,000 per contract shall be submitted by the bidder, as prescribed by G.S. 143-129, at the time of the opening of the bids. Contractors will be observed in receiving bids and awarding contracts.

Plans and specifications are on file and may be examined at the office of the Engineer in Greenville and at the office of the Greenville Utilities Commission. They will also be on file at the Associated General Contractors of America, 1100 S. Salisbury Street, Raleigh. Contractors and others may obtain copies of the contract documents upon application to the Engineer accompanied by a deposit check payable to the Greenville Utilities Commission in the amount of $50.00 per contract. This deposit is refundable in accordance with the following policy:

Contractors who bid will receive a refund in full of their deposit upon return of the Contract Documents in good condition within fifteen (15) days after receipt of bids.

Others who return the documents in good condition within fifteen (15) days after receipt of bids will receive a refund of one-half of their deposit.

The Greenville Utilities Commission reserves the right to reject any or all bids; to waive informality, and to award contract or contracts which appear to be in the best interest. The right is reserved to hold any or all proposals for a period of forty-five (45) days from the opening thereof.

WILSON ACRES
 Passive Solar Design "The Most Apartment For Your Rental Dollar"

The "true" cost of your apartment each month includes not only rent but also your monthly utilities. Wilson Acres Apartments are Greenville's newest. Because of energy saving design features such as heat pumps, thermal pane glass, insulated doors and extra insulation throughout, your monthly utility bill will be considerably less than most apartments in Greenville.

Add your monthly rent at Wilson Acres to your greatly reduced monthly utility bill at Wilson Acres and we think it's the most apartment for your rental dollar.

New 2 bedroom apartments. ENERGY EFFICIENT with washer/dryer hook-ups, dishwasher, frost-free refrigerator, self-cleaning oven, Cable TV hook-ups, heat pumps, tennis, pool, saunas, laundry and club house facilities, ample parking, 3 blocks from ECU, $295 per month.

When you're looking for living affordably, can you afford not to look at the energy efficient townhouses at Wilson Acres? 752-8277 evenings 6-10 p.m. and weekends call 756-2766.

Taiwan And China Seeing Trade Boom

By EDITH M. LEDERER

Associated Press Writer HONG KONG (AP) — Although it officially bans trade with China, the Nationalist island of Taiwan is shipping textiles, television sets, radios, electric fans and other goods in record numbers to the mainland through Hong Kong's back door.

In the first 10 months of 1980, re-exports of Taiwan goods to China through this British colony jumped more than 1,200 percent compared with the same period in 1979.

The Hong Kong Trade Development Council said recently that Taiwan's exports rose from about $12.5 million in the first 10 months of 1979 to $164.9 million during the same period in 1980.

The biggest increase was in textile shipments — which accounted for nearly 60 percent of all Taiwan exports — followed by television sets and tubes, synthetic fibers, electric fans and radios.

Last April, China formally lifted all import duties on products made in Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese government. The Peking government explained that since it considers Taiwan a province of China, international trade levies don't apply.

Taiwan — officially called the Republic of China — has had no official relations with the mainland since the Nationalists fled in 1949 and technically all trade with the People's Republic of China is banned. The Taipei government has rejected as a trick Peking's offer of peaceful reunification.

But indirect trade through Hong Kong, the nearby Portuguese territory of Macao and Japan has gone on for years, though on a much smaller scale. Trade experts here credit the official duty-free status for Taiwan goods and China's modernization drive for the upsurge in Chinese imports from Taiwan.

Chinese exports to Taiwan via Hong Kong have also increased but on a smaller scale. In the first 10 months of 1980, the Trade Development Council here said, Chinese exports totaled about $65.6 million compared with $44.4 million during the same period in 1979. The main exports are herbal medicine, minerals, fruits, nuts, vegetables, fish, fish preparations, wool and other animal hair.

Taiwan's textile exports — which totaled $98.5 million between January and October of 1980 — have made Taiwan one of China's major suppliers of textile yarn, knitted fabrics and other textile fibers.

Industrial sources quoted in the newspaper Hong Kong Standard said the competitive price of Taiwan's textiles, because of the absence of duty, and China's booming garment industry are the two major factors contributing to the sudden increase of Taiwan textile exports to China.

China's official Xinhua news agency reported last July that one store in Fuzhou in Fujian Province on China's coast opposite Taiwan received 2,700 yards of polyester made in Taiwan. Xinhua said it was nearly sold out in a month.

Aside from textiles, the largest Taiwan exports during the first 10 months through Hong Kong were TV sets worth about $14.1 million and various types of TV and other cathode tubes valued at $13 million.

Taiwan also exported about $10.7 million worth of synthetic fibers suitable for spinning, $7.8 million worth of household equipment primarily electric fans, $3.6 million worth of radios and $3 million worth of veneers, plywood and "improved" or reconstituted wood.

TOURISM'S GROWTH
PARIS (AP) — Modern tourism is a very big business, according to the U. N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In 1975 over 200 million international visitors spent about $45 billion after reaching their destinations.

Currently about 50 million people are employed in the hotel and restaurant sectors alone. According to some experts, tourism will be the world's No. 1 industry by the year 2000.

Report to the Community

Pitt County Memorial Hospital's 30th anniversary is a fitting time to reflect on the many commitments of the hospital Board of Trustees, the Pitt County Commissioners, citizen support groups, political allies, health professionals employed at the hospital and members of the Medical Staff. Our message to you, this year, calls attention to their contributions but has not listed names for fear of missing so many.

This year's report provides an opportunity to view the past as we renew our commitments to assure a high quality of care for the people of this region. The decade of the seventies may be called the "bricks and mortar period." The decade of the eighties might be considered the "era of development of human resources" as we work to expand the work force to meet the needs of our region. It is also fitting to renew our dual commitment as a community hospital, and a teaching referral center, as part of our celebration of past achievements.

In the Beginning...

It all began in 1946 when Pitt County physicians and community leaders started thinking about expanding hospital services to meet the growing demand for health care in the area. At that time the only hospital available was Pitt General Hospital, a 42-bed facility opened in 1924 by four physicians. Pitt General had admirably served the community for 22 years, but more beds, more equipment and more space were needed. And so it was that the people of Pitt County went to the polls in 1947 and voted in favor of a $452,000 bond referendum that would help finance the construction of a modern hospital.

PITT HOSPITAL BIDS ACCEPTABLE

County Virtually Assured Of New 120-Bed Hospital

Last Obstacle Overcome For Hospital

Pitt County was virtually assured of a new 120 bed hospital yesterday when it was revealed that low bids for construction and the installation of the permanent floor conditioning and refrigeration contract was awarded Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Company of Washington at $87,778, and the Electric company of Raleigh

George Watts Carr, architect of the hospital, estimated two years will be needed to complete the structure after construction begins.

County Authorizes Issuance of $452,000 in Bonds For $900,000 Structure

Greenville, Sept. 17.—Pitt County voters went to the polls yesterday at a special election and overwhelmingly voted in favor of the county issuing $452,000 of bonds as its part of erecting a $900,000 modern hospital building of 140 beds to be located nearest to the center of county's population.

John G. Clark, District Highway Commissioner, is chairman of the County Hospital Committee of 100 representative men and women.

The Federal Government pays one-third of the cost of the building, the State government one third, Pitt County the balance.

At a special registration for the bond election, 3,163 persons registered and 2,705 voted in favor of the hospital bond issue. Reports from several small precincts are missing but these returns will not change the result.

Clippings from the hospital's scrapbook document the county's enthusiasm and support for a new hospital in 1947.

Hailed for its modern design and equipment, the "new" Pitt County Memorial Hospital opened in 1951.

The 'New' Pitt Memorial Opens

Thirty years ago—February 8, 1951—the first patient was transferred from the retiring Pitt General Hospital to the new Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The $1.4 million facility was described as the "most modern medical institution in the eastern part of the state."

Pitt County citizens did in fact have reason to boast about their new 120-bed hospital. At that time, it was the largest hospital in North Carolina to be built under the guidelines of the Hill-Burton Act, a program that outlined the use of federal and state funds for the construction of local hospital facilities. Pitt County financed 39.1 percent of the project, the state 27.8 percent and the federal government 33.1 percent.

But it wasn't just the size of the county's new facility that drew hundreds of local citizens to the hospital's first open house. Area residents were very proud of the hospital's many special features that were considered extremely modern and sophisticated in 1951. For example, the new emergency room contained one examination room and one treatment room and was staffed by one nurse from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m.; at other times, floor nurses announced the arrival of emergency patients. Inter-hospital telephones provided "speedy" communications, and there was an elaborate system of clocks that would keep running 11 hours even if the electricity failed.

The surgical suite had two major and two minor operating rooms, and it was the only unit in the hospital to be air conditioned. Electrical viewboxes on the walls of the operating rooms permitted surgeons to view x-rays during surgery, a real innovation at that time. Modern operating lights also were provided.

Down in the kitchen, all the pots and pans were stainless steel, and an 1800-pound capacity flake-ice-making machine was plugged in every morning to produce the day's supply of ice. The staff dining room contained nine tables with four chairs at each table.

Other hospital features praised were an isolation ward, a ward for the temporary confinement of the mentally ill, staff lounges, modern adding machines for the business office and an autopsy room.

But all this was back in the days when Pitt County Memorial Hospital had only 38 physicians on the medical staff, 50 nurses, and 75 support staff. And also back in 1951, the cost of a private room with a bath was only $11 a day.

Hospital Financed By People

Funds From County, State And Nation Went Into Pitt's Hospital

Thursday the people of Pitt County will dedicate themselves and to the prosperity of the county a new medical institution which cost over $1,400,000. Actually through the fourth day of this month the new Pitt County Memorial Hospital had cost a total of $1,417,000. Of the money which has gone into the construction and equipping of the new 120 bed hospital, Pitt County funds have supplied 39.1 percent. Funds from the state of North Carolina have amounted to $394,211.38, and from the federal government have amounted to $612,577.24.

The cost of the proposed hospital of 120 beds was estimated at $900,000 when estimates on construction and equipment were made back in 1947, before the county voted in favor of a $500,000 bond issue to supply the county's share of the money.

County Pays 39.1 Per Cent
Under the plan of county, state, and federal construction of hospitals, approximately one-third of the total cost is paid by each of the government levels. Actually the Pitt Memorial Hospital has been financed 39.1 per cent by Pitt County funds, 27.8 per cent by North Carolina funds, and 33.1 per cent by the federal government. The $500,000 estimate for the hospital, however, proved to be far below the actual construction cost of the hospital. Even though the local leaders in the hospital movement, estimated approximately $500,000 per bed for the hospital at the time of the bond election when figures available showed cost of $4,000 per bed, rising prices have boosted the cost to approximately $11,500 per bed.

Short Ceremony To Be Conducted On Grounds In Front Of Newly Completed Structure; Kenneth Royall To Speak; Group Of Dignitaries Invited

Thursday morning at 11 o'clock the people of Pitt County will dedicate a project that has been three and a half years in the making—Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The short dedication ceremony will be conducted on the grounds in front of the newly completed four-story brick structure that the public approved through the special bond election in 1947. The short ceremony is expected to attract many hundreds of Pitt residents from all parts of the county, particularly because the building will be open to them for their personal inspection during the afternoon.

Headlines announced the hospital's dedication in January 1951, and the next month—on February 8—the new hospital admitted its first patient.

Started Slowly, Picked Up Speed

At First Only An Idea, Pitt's Enthusiasm Grew As Hospital Sponsors Spread Their Message Of A Step Forward

It was in 1947, a year after the end of World War II, that the idea of a new hospital was first conceived. At that time, the county had only 38 physicians and 50 nurses. The need for a modern hospital was becoming increasingly apparent. In 1947, the county had only 38 physicians and 50 nurses. The need for a modern hospital was becoming increasingly apparent.

It was in the early part of 1948 that J. G. Clark, Jr., of Greenville, was a leader in Pitt County who returned to Greenville from a business trip and brought with him the idea of a Pitt County hospital built from county, federal and state funds.

Clark talked at length with Paul Briccette, of Wilson, a member of the North Carolina Medical Care Commission. The two discussed the Hill-Burton act which at the time was pending in Congress. The bill, if passed, would make available federal funds for the purpose of aiding counties and states in the construction of hospital facilities.

Back in Greenville Clark discussed the idea of a county-owned hospital with officials of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, and the business organization appointed a committee to render with the trustees of Pitt General Hospital on the matter.

From that point the movement got under way—slowly at first, but it gained momentum steadily until a $500,000 bond issue was passed by the people of Pitt County almost 18 months later. The leaders in the movement discussed the matter with various parts of the state, and later in 1949 interested people from every section of the county were invited to a meeting held at East Carolina Teachers College to discuss the matter of a county hospital.

Clark presided at the meeting, and those present decided the most practical method of raising the county's share of the money for the hospital would be through a bond issue. The principal purpose of the meeting was to get a cross-section view of how the people of the county felt about the idea of a county-owned hospital.

Those at the meeting were enthusiastic about the idea, and preliminary committees were appointed to look into the details of such a project.

When officials at East Carolina University and Pitt Memorial Hospital began planning for improved medical care for the people of Eastern North Carolina, they did not consider that one day, today's old hospital would serve as the prime clinical teaching facility for a new four-year medical school at the university.

In 1964 and 1965 a number of influential physicians from across the state urged East Carolina to seek a two-year medical school in an attempt to help meet the health care needs of the people of the state. In following a feasibility study, the 1965 General Assembly authorized the development of a two-year program at ECU and provided initial funding if the school could be planned and accredited within 1½ years.

Consultants were hired and reported six months later that more time and groundwork were needed and recommended that the college develop what is now the School of Allied Health and Social Professions as part of a move to strengthen the college's basic science programs and facilities.

It was in 1967 that the General Assembly granted university status to East Carolina, provided a start-up budget for the allied health school, and renewed its authorization for a two-year school of medicine in Greenville.

In 1967 Pitt hospital officials finally decided something had to be done. More space was needed. The old facility opened in 1961 was no longer adequate with 1,000 beds and 100 operating rooms. The hospital was hired to conduct a feasibility study for the hospital expansion program and to estimate a 300-bed facility with the capacity to become a regional medical center.

Architects were hired to develop an expansion program in March 1968. Meanwhile, the hospital board and all members of the Medical Arts Commission, by the late '60s, proposed a multi-phase renovation of the old building, a major renovation of the old building, and a completely new facility.

The Medical Arts Commission encouraged a new facility in deciding that it would not almost as much to renovate the old building as it would to construct a new hospital.

Two months later, nearly 1,000 trustees and the medical staff approved a $9 million bond issue with which to fund a new facility. At that time a $2 million grant was expected from federal sources, so an $11 million hospital was in the planning stage.

The year 1969 saw many developments at ECU. In that year the General Assembly appropriated $275,000 to plan a two-year medical school and authorized $1.5 million for an allied health building and operating funds for the school.

The next year, 1970, Pitt voters approved a $9 million bond issue for the hospital construction and ECU hired the nucleus of a basic medical science faculty for the two-year program and formulated plans for the renovation.

From Community Hospital to Medical Center

Almost 16 years to the day after Pitt County Memorial Hospital opened, the hospital's Board of Trustees called for a survey to determine future demands on the facility. The survey recommended expanding the hospital from 205 beds to 350 beds, and in 1970 the people of Pitt County once again went to the polls to support a $9 million bond issue to finance construction of a "new" Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Six months later, 97.5 acres of land one block from the hospital were purchased as a site for the new facility.

During this time, plans were also underway to establish a School of Medicine at East Carolina University, an important event in the history of the hospital because it would serve as the school's primary teaching institution. To assure that Pitt Memorial was prepared to fulfill this educational function, the medical staff and hospital and university trustees developed an affiliation agreement in 1975 to guide the hospital's transition from community hospital to regional referral center. Today, the agreement is hailed nationally as a model arrangement that benefits not only the local community in Pitt County but also Eastern North Carolina and the entire state.

A groundbreaking ceremony for the new Pitt County Memorial Hospital was held on Valentine's Day in 1974. The 332,141-square-foot building had a $16.7 million budget in the beginning. Then the State of North Carolina provided $2.2 million for the addition of the regional rehabilitation center, and the ECU School of Medicine provided $5.1 million to enhance the facility's service and educational components.

Three years later in April 1977, a new Pitt County Memorial Hospital opened doors to patients during the same month the School of Medicine received accreditation for a four-year medical education program. The result was the birth of a medical center. Hailed as the most modern and sophisticated medical institution in the region, the "new" Pitt County Memorial Hospital was described in the same glowing terms that were used 26 years earlier to convey the importance of the original facility. Pitt County had done it again, and another chapter was added to the history of medical care in the area.

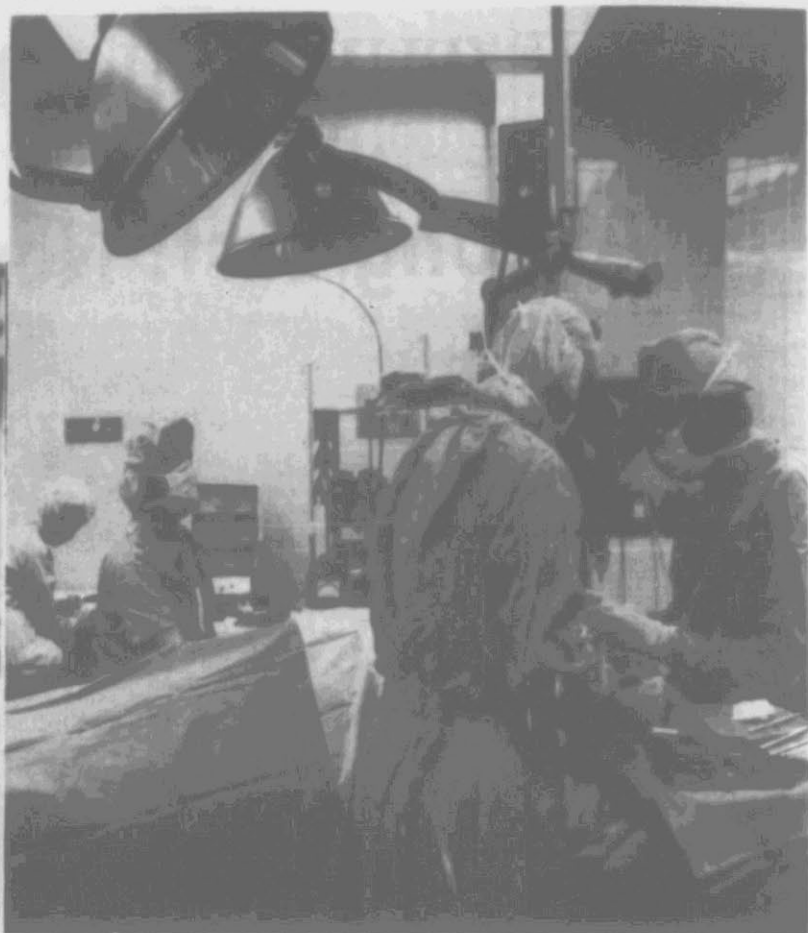

When it opened, the new hospital had more than 100 physicians and dentists on the medical staff, 200 nurses and 850 support staff. Medical and surgical intensive care units had 24 beds with the latest monitoring and therapeutic equipment, and 10 operating rooms in a centrally located surgical suite brought the newest technology to Pitt County. Cathode ray tubes replaced typewriters in the business office, and computers were put in charge of monitoring the hospital's environment, energy consumption and bed status. A pneumatic tube system linking all areas of the facility made hand delivery of reports and records almost a thing of the past, and sparkling equipment in the dietary department aided the staff in preparing 7,000 meals a day.

But the growth didn't stop with the arrival of the first patient. During the last few years, a major expansion program in conjunction with the School of Medicine has provided a 33-bed neonatal intensive care unit and additions to psychiatry, emergency medicine, radiology, nuclear medicine, surgery and the cafeteria. Currently under construction is a new bed tower that will add 144 beds, raising the total number of beds to 569. In all, the School of Medicine has contributed $10.9 million in construction and more than $2 million in equipment to making Pitt Memorial one of the most modern and sophisticated hospitals in the country.

Today the gleaming white medical center stands as a symbol of health care for Pitt County residents and their neighbors in Eastern North Carolina. Pitt County Memorial Hospital is a source of pride for the entire county, and it is a tribute to the community support that has provided a successful history of growth and promises a healthy future of service.

Sophisticated services such as the cardiac catheterization laboratory (below) are now available at Pitt Memorial. Procedures in this lab help physicians diagnose heart and circulatory problems. The use of a microscope in surgery (right) is now standard operating equipment for many delicate procedures, especially eye surgery.

1980: A Healthy Year of Growth for Pitt Memorial

Despite the growth of Pitt County Memorial Hospital during the last 30 years, the mission has always remained the same: the compassionate delivery of quality patient care. And every year we pause to review our accomplishments and share them with the citizens of Pitt County.

This year, Pitt County Memorial Hospital was recognized by a number of national professional organizations. We received a two-year accreditation from the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals and the College of American Pathologists. A Certificate of Recognition from the American Hospital Association acknowledged our efforts to effectively monitor costs and productivity.

But we're especially proud of the high marks the regional rehabilitation center received from the Commission on the Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF). The center earned a full, three-year accreditation from CARF, an accomplishment which confirms that our facility offers comprehensive rehabilitation care. Also of importance is the fact that Pitt Memorial is the second hospital in the state to be CARF accredited.

Saying that we're accredited by certain professional groups may not convey much to those of us who don't work in a hospital, but what it means is that these agencies have given their stamp of approval to the quality and delivery of care at Pitt Memorial. It assures you that your hospital is ranked with the leading medical institutions in the country. It's proof that you can depend on us.

Clinical Services

But in addition to being pleased about the scores we've received on professional reviews, we're also proud of our expanding clinical services. Perhaps the most obvious expansion is the addition of a new bed tower that will add 144 beds to our facility. Construction started in December 1979 and should be completed in early 1982.

This $5.3 million project, which is funded with state appropriations, represents the cooperative planning of hospital and medical school officials to meet the community and regional demands for advanced medical care. Also included in this major project is the expansion of the hospital's psychiatric unit which opened just two months ago. It includes 22 private rooms, two comfortable day rooms and a kitchen for patients, support areas and a centrally located nursing station. The original 14 patient rooms in the unit are under renovation, and when the entire project is completed, the unit will contain a total of 36 beds.

Also highlighting the last year at Pitt Memorial was the development of a renal transplant program by the ECU School of Medicine. This important service will make kidney transplants more convenient and accessible to many patients who now depend on dialysis to rid their bodies of harmful wastes because their kidneys have failed.

In preparation for the start of the new service, surgeons removed more than 30 pairs of kidneys from donors during the last year, and the medical center actively participated in the Southeastern Regional Organ Procurement System, a program that links 136 medical centers across the nation and matches donor kidneys with compatible recipients. Special laboratories for immunological monitoring and tissue matching are already conducting the sophisticated and crucial studies that must be done to support renal transplantation, and medical school surgeons expect to offer the service soon.

In the meantime, the hospital's hemodialysis unit offered more than 2,000 treatments last year. Equipped with the most advanced technology, the unit is open six days a week and provides many forms of specialized dialysis, including portable dialysis to serve patients in other hospital areas who cannot be transported. With the start of the renal transplantation program, Pitt Memorial will be the only hospital east of Durham to offer the full range of end-stage renal disease services.

Ironically, the first patient to land on Pitt Memorial's new heliport was an Elizabeth City resident with renal failure. Helicopters have for years linked citizens in the east with our tertiary care center, but until last June they had only a grassy lot to land on. Now, a $13,000 concrete pad complete with landing lights welcomes patients and pilots safely to Greenville.

A new emergency department entrance leads patients and families by the new heliport, but a new entrance wasn't the only change to take place in that department. The School of Medicine established a formal Department of Emergency Medicine and joined us in our efforts to establish Pitt Memorial as a regional trauma center. In conjunction with the Eastern Carolina Emergency Medical Services System, Inc., medical center representatives began planning for the application of a federal grant to improve emergency medical care in 29 counties in the region. In addition to the establishment of Pitt Memorial as the regional trauma center, the grant would permit the development of new or expanded services for cardiac, spinal cord, psychiatric, burn, poisoning and neonatal patients.

The emergency department treated more than 32,000 patients last year, and to keep pace with the greater demand for emergency care here and at other hospitals in the area, the medical school and hospital began planning a postgraduate program in emergency medicine to train more emergency physicians. Also on the drawing board are plans to sponsor courses in advanced trauma life support and advanced cardiac life support for health professionals throughout the region.

Surgical Services

More patients also visited the 10 operating rooms in the surgical suite, where more than 10,000 procedures were performed. The acquisition of an ocutome fragmatome greatly assisted ophthalmologists in performing delicate eye surgery, especially surgery on the vitreous jelly that fills the body of the eye. 1980 also saw the increased use of microsurgical techniques for nerve and tendon repairs, neurosurgery, gynecology, and ear and eye operations.

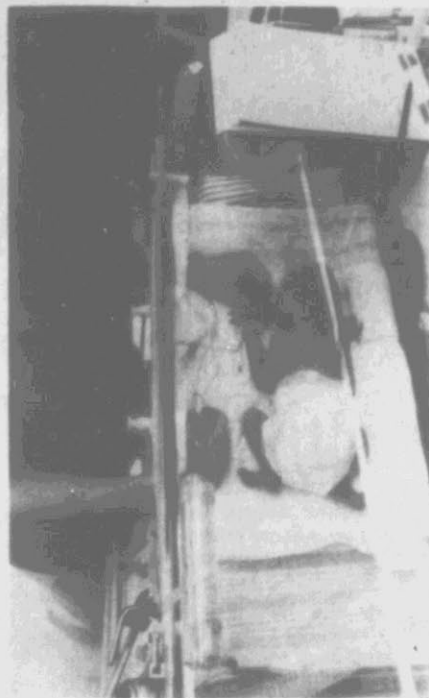

The addition of closed-circuit television in surgery also made possible for students and staff front-row views of delicate procedures without the danger of contamination to the patients. And in the Ambulatory Medical Surgical Unit, more than 200 patients a month enjoyed the convenience and cost effectiveness of outpatient surgery.

Supplementing surgical services were several additions in the radiology department. A new mobile gamma camera permitted radiologists to do bedside radiography and cardiac studies on blood flow. A real time ultrasound unit enabled physicians to view internal structures in motion rather than just still pictures. A motorized film viewer which holds up to 200 films provided physicians with a better look at x-rays.

Because more patients and physicians were selecting Pitt Memorial as their hospital, there was a greater demand for hospital beds during 1980. To meet the demand, we decided to start a new program that would effectively serve a special group of ambulatory patients while assuring that precious hospital beds remained open for critically ill and emergency patients. With the approval of the Board of Trustees, Pitt Memorial leased 20 beds at the Greenville Holiday Inn to provide beds for patients not requiring acute nursing care. Patients may have a room there, rather than a more expensive hospital bed, while they undergo diagnostic testing and recovery from certain surgical procedures. The convenience and lower cost have made this program a very successful alternative to a hospital stay for both patients and physicians.

Also during the last year we implemented several new programs to better serve the 530 patients who were admitted to our regional rehabilitation center. A comprehensive system of program evaluation monitored results of patient care services and assisted us in developing new procedures.

Patients are the most important people at Pitt Memorial. They may be toddlers on the pediatric floor, critically ill infants in the neonatal intensive care unit, or men and women in the rehabilitation center learning to cope with their handicaps.

The opening of an "independent living room," where patients can test their capabilities before discharge, proved to be a valuable resource in preparing patients to leave the center. Major emphasis on follow-up after discharge not only extended the scope of patient care but also educated the staff about the continued effectiveness of certain therapies. The acquisition of a HandiVoice, a computer-based device for reproducing speech, brought language communication within the grasp of patients with speech impairments.

The rehabilitation team, who performed more than 50,000 therapy sessions last year, also renewed their commitment to continuing education and sponsored workshops on rehabilitation research, home health and splinting techniques. We're very pleased that the dedication of our staff prompted them to volunteer their time to organize and direct a Lost Cord Club and a Stroke Club, two valuable community service organizations.

Education and Training

We're also extremely proud of the training we provide to the health care professionals of the future. As the primary teaching hospital for the ECU School of Medicine, we offer future physicians an excellent facility in which to learn and experience the practice of medicine. Last summer the medical school's postgraduate training program brought us 77 residents who provide 24-hour physician coverage for our patients while they are expanding their knowledge of selected medical specialties. And also last summer we joined with the medical school in honoring the first residents to complete all their postgraduate training at Pitt Memorial. The four family practice residents and two dental residents have all stayed in North Carolina to practice their specialties.

Nursing education is very important at Pitt Memorial, and we're especially proud of the bedside training we provide nursing students from the ECU School of Nursing and Pitt Community College. In addition to our nursing and medical education programs, we offered students clinical experiences in more than 60 allied health programs, including physical therapy, occupational therapy, pharmacy services, medical records and radiology technology.

In other areas last year, the search for qualified professionals prompted us to expand our recruitment efforts, and we actively sought candidates for positions in nursing, radiology, social work, medical technology, biomedical technology, physical and occupational therapy, and pharmacy services. We spent a great deal of time and energy on an in-depth computer study to locate new resources for implementing a more efficient management and patient information system. And we moved our business, employment and payroll offices to the Hawkins Building to provide those departments with a quiet, safe working environment while the new bed tower is being connected to the hospital.

Cost Containment

With all our growth, we've had to keep a close eye on expenses, and our employees have played a major role in identifying areas where costs could be cut without affecting the quality of patient care. Changing x-ray film processors in the radiology department from hot to cold water cost only $400 but may save up to $30,000 annually. By saving the excess silver and scrap film from processing, the radiology department also put enough money back in the budget to purchase an additional processor. In the surgical suite, employees tested several brands of surgical dressing for durability and quality and recommended that a new, less expensive dressing be used. Their evaluation will save Pitt Memorial $15,000 a year.

We also managed to cut the cost of our utility bill in a time when the price of electricity is constantly moving upward. By participating in a program sponsored by Greenville

Utilities, we "beat the peak" and decreased our peak electrical demand by 792 kilowatt hours during the summer months. That decrease will save us $48,000 on electric costs.

Our cost containment efforts do save us a lot of money every year, but operating a hospital is an extremely expensive business. Consequently, we depend on gifts from the citizens and civic organizations to support the expansion of our services. Last year, the Greenville Service League, the hospital's medical auxiliary, raised more than $36,000 to purchase equipment and supplies, and the Gift Fund received more than $20,000 in donations. The highlight of our giving program in 1980 was the establishment of the Pitt Memorial Hospital Gift Foundation, Inc., a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation to coordinate our gifts campaign. Governed by its own Board of Trustees, the Gift Foundation directs an endowment fund to supplement the growth of our medical facilities and services.

We hope this summary of our activities has helped you understand the growth of Pitt County Memorial Hospital from a 120-bed hospital to a 420-bed facility that in conjunction with the East Carolina University School of Medicine is now a regional referral center for Eastern North Carolina. Today, we have 200 physicians and dentists on our medical staff, 375 nurses and 1,288 support staff. We care for 18,000 inpatients and another 50,000 outpatients and emergency patients a year. More than 1,900 babies are born here annually, and our cafeteria serves almost 600,000 meals a year to employees, patients and visitors.

We're still Pitt County's community hospital, but as our services have grown, so have our responsibilities to patients who come to us in Greenville from throughout Eastern North Carolina. They're coming to us for specialized care, some of which was previously unavailable anywhere in our region. And they come to us with the knowledge that the care they receive here is delivered professionally, expertly and compassionately.

As in previous years, we continue to provide the highest level of professional standards and technological skills that established and today maintains our status as an outstanding provider of advanced care in our region.

Through your support, our progress is continuing.

New Directions for Nursing Services

Do you know who provides 95 percent of patient care in the hospital? Nurses do, and at Pitt County Memorial Hospital over the last 30 years, our nursing services have changed as much as our building. The addition of modern, specialized patient care services today requires nurses who are specialists, and we are fortunate to have a nursing staff with expert skills in high-risk maternal-fetal care, neonatal intensive care, medical intensive care, surgical intensive care, hematology-oncology and a variety of other areas.

At Pitt Memorial we have always made the recruitment and retention of professional nurses a top priority. During the last year we strengthened our recruitment and retention program even more to keep pace with the shortage of nurses throughout the nation and particularly in North Carolina. We developed a nationwide recruitment campaign that includes using professional advertising, sending representatives to specialty conferences and making personal contact with potential applicants. Our efforts are already providing Pitt Memorial with a pool of experienced specialty nurses, essential employees who are replenishing our nursing staff from normal turnover and expanding the staff to take care of more patients.

To support our recruitment program, we developed a nurse extern program to attract new graduate nurses who demonstrate potential for excellence in nursing services. This program allows students to work at Pitt Memorial during the summer and obtain clinical hospital experience to prepare them for future professional practice. Of course, the program also gives them a first-hand look at Pitt Memorial nursing, and we're pleased that many of our participants have chosen to practice their specialties here.

Another new program started this year also enhances our recruitment of students. We awarded our first Excellence in Nursing Practice Scholarships to five nursing students from East Carolina University and Pitt Community College. The $250 scholarships in support of nursing education will be presented annually in October.

We also started a new program to attract Pitt County nurses not working because of schedule conflicts. A supplemental nursing pool now permits registered nurses to work within the hospital at hours convenient to their personal schedules, and the program is responsible for adding 27 nurses to our staff. These nurses receive special orientation on the units to which they are assigned. The program also allows registered nurses already employed at Pitt Memorial to gain experience in other nursing specialties during their off hours.

The Department of Nursing Services also introduced new clinical specialists last year. Clinical specialists are advanced nursing practitioners who coordinate the nursing care provided to patients with complex health problems. They usually participate in a team of highly skilled physicians, nurses, dieticians and other allied health personnel. Clinical specialists are available in renal transplantation, high-risk obstetrics, neonatology, pediatric hematology-oncology and rehabilitation nursing.

Because of the growth of nursing specialties, a new educational approach is being developed to enhance clinical education of nursing personnel and nursing students. The approach focuses on the role of the clinical instructor in maintaining quality nursing services through education. The clinical instructor role will help Pitt Memorial expand nursing staff skills in specialties where new knowledge and technology are being applied almost daily.

As our nursing staff has increased, so has the number of ancillary personnel who support the practice of the registered nurse. Last year we had dramatic increases in two groups of allied health practitioners—the licensed practical nurse, who provides highly skilled nursing care, and the ward clerk, who coordinates communication between each nursing unit and the ancillary departments that provide patient testing and services. Licensed practical nurses and ward clerks, along with nurses' aides, help registered nurses coordinate services for general care patients and allow RN's to provide comprehensive nursing care for acutely ill patients. Programs at Pitt Community College have been very helpful in meeting Pitt Memorial's demands for well trained personnel.

Thirty years ago Pitt County Memorial Hospital had only 50 nurses. Today, we have 298 full-time registered nurses and 77 part-time RN's. This growth in the nursing staff—which is closely linked with our transition from a community hospital to a regional referral center—prompted us this year to take another look at the nursing philosophy, organization and job descriptions. We were especially concerned about retaining the caring environment which is the trademark of Pitt Memorial, and the nursing staff renewed their dedication to a humanistic approach in patient care. In addition, we made a solid commitment to maintaining an educational atmosphere which supports the goals of the health care students who receive their clinical practice here. At Pitt Memorial, the goal is excellence in patient care and excellence in education.

Nursing in a medical center is demanding, frustrating and, ultimately, very rewarding. There is an excitement to working as a member of a highly skilled health care team. Although the addition of medical, nursing and allied health students has increased the complexity of nursing at Pitt Memorial, the stimulation of participating in patient care programs at a teaching hospital is tremendously rewarding. Perhaps a slogan developed by an ECU nursing student best sums it all up: "Pitt Memorial nursing means people care more here."

The Pitt Memorial family gathered last spring for its annual picnic, an event which honors the hospital's move to its new facility in 1977.

Saluting Our Employees

Pitt County Memorial Hospital is proud to be one of the largest employers in Pitt County. It is our employees who give this building its personality, who comfort and care for patients and their families, who keep the facility clean and safe and who work cooperatively together as a team.

The growth of the hospital has had a major impact on our employees. No longer can a nurse or technician walk down the hall and call everyone by first name. The cafeteria has more meals to prepare, the housekeeping staff distributes more linens and the laboratory does more tests. Along with the dramatic increase in the work force—we had only 125 employees in 1951 and have over 1700 now—we have developed new management goals, new policies and new procedures for enriching the work environment and increasing the effectiveness of the hospital team.

During the last year we conducted an extensive employee survey to find out how management decisions were affecting employees and to determine future needs and changes facing us. We were pleased to discover that the survey indicated employees here are satisfied with their jobs, look forward to coming to work every day and would recommend Pitt Memorial as a place to work. But we know we're not perfect, and we're working hard to offer innovative programs to increase communication, job satisfaction and benefits.

One of the things we accomplished during the last year was the development of a management training series to better prepare the more than 70 employees on our management team. The 12-part series is now underway with sessions focusing on organization, management styles, conflict and change, influence and motivation, and other topics. Each four-hour session includes a presentation and discussion and features a talk by a Pitt County business leader on management techniques.

Another addition to our benefit package was the start of a tuition aid program which reimburses employees for educational costs for course work that leads to a degree or established career goals. Also put into effect was an employee assistance program to make it easier for employees with personal or health problems to secure appropriate counseling or medical care. This program is also available to the immediate families of Pitt Memorial employees.

In-service education programs during the year more than doubled, and subjects included everything from typing stencils to arrhythmia interpretations. Five clinical instructors in the central in-service department also began coordinating the efforts of 22 instructors throughout the hospital to meet the increasing educational needs of professionals in a modern teaching setting.

Employee health and safety received special attention during the year, and the speech and hearing department made free screenings available to all employees during Better Speech and Hearing Month. The cafeteria opened a sandwich bar and new food line with daily specials to give employees a larger menu selection and faster service. New parking lots were opened to ease the shortage of parking spaces due to construction and expansion.

Pitt Memorial is also proud that employee contributions enabled us to surpass our $10,000 United Way goal by almost $200. And in May we celebrated National Hospital Week and the 1980 theme, "We're America's health care team."

Like most people, you probably hate to be sick and dread the thought of having to go to the hospital. But when illness and disease strike, you want the best possible medical care available. You want to be cared for by a skilled medical team of physicians, nurses, technicians and health care professionals. You want the benefit of the most modern diagnostic tests and the most sophisticated treatment programs. And you want your care delivered compassionately, expediently and completely.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital cares about you, and we are constantly expanding our service programs to assure we'll be ready to meet all your needs if you are ever one of our patients. You can help us fulfill this commitment by supporting our service programs through donations to the Pitt Memorial Gift Foundation.

This year we need to raise $207,000 to furnish rooms in the new bed tower addition. We hope you'll never have to stay in one of these rooms, but we also hope you'll recognize what an important contribution you can make by helping us be prepared for your family, friends and neighbors who may visit us.

Please support the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Gift Foundation. We care about you, and your donations can assist us in caring for others.

All contributions to the Gift Foundation are tax deductible. For more information, please contact Herb Bailey in our Development Office at 757-4869.

For Week Of February 8 - February 14, 1981

ABC-TV Airs 'John Steinbeck's East Of Eden'

The turbulent lives of four men and the beautiful woman who haunted them are vividly portrayed in "John Steinbeck's East of Eden," to be presented by ABC Sunday, Feb. 8 (8-11 p.m.), Monday, Feb. 9 (9-11 p.m.), and Wednesday, Feb. 11 (8-11 p.m.).

Jane Seymour stars as Cathy/Kate, Timothy Bottoms as Adam, Bruce Boxleitner as Charles, and Lloyd Bridges as Samuel Hamilton. Co-starring are Warren Oates, Howard Duff, Anne Baxter, Richard Masur, Soon-Teck Oh, Karen Allen, Hart Bochner and Sam Bottoms.

Unlike the 1955 theatrical release, which covered only a small portion of the book, this adaptation explores the entire breadth of the Steinbeck novel.

The saga opens in Connecticut shortly after the end of the Civil War and follows the lives of Adam and Charles Trask, sons of the hard-driven veteran of the war, and Cathy Ames. She is the conniving temptress who seduced both brothers and left her evil mark on them as well as her two sons, Cal and Aron.

The role of Cathy Ames is the latest in a long string of important roles Jane Seymour has tackled both here and in her native England.

"This is a very dramatic role and I felt fortunate in having the opportunity to play Kathy," says Seymour. "Everything about this woman is evil. She's a monster, a demon, an animal, and I portrayed her this way. I screamed, I scratched, I clawed and even snarled. In fact, when we viewed the film for the first time, even I was surprised to see myself as this terrible character."

Seymour, whose credits range from such diverse productions as "Young Winston" and "The Captains and the Kings" to "Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders" and "Live and Let Die," in which she played James Bond's love interest, says she's never been typecast. "I refuse to let this happen, and I took that part in 'Cheerleaders' just to prove that I can be as American as apple pie."

The actress says she reads every page of material that is submitted to her. And once she has accepted a role, she never learns her lines until the day before filming begins. "But the moment I'm in makeup, I become that character completely."

JANE SEYMOUR is a star of "John Steinbeck's East of Eden," an eight-hour novel for television premiering Sunday, Feb. 8 (8-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

'Kent State' Based On Actual Events

The fact-based dramatization of the events leading up to the 1970 tragedy on the campus of Ohio's Kent State University are vividly dramatized on "Kent State," to be presented as NBC-TV's Sunday Big Event, Feb. 8 (8-11 p.m.).

The primary focus of "Kent State" is on the personal stories of the young people whose lives were emotionally caught up in the swirl of volatile political events that ended in tragedy for some of them. It was filmed on location in Gadsden, Ala.

The drama unfolds on the campus on Friday evening as President Nixon announces his decision to send troops into Cambodia during a nationally televised address. Concern and growing anguish among several students is immediate, for it is widely believed that this means an enlargement of the Vietnam War.

HISTORICAL REPLAY — The Pulitzer Prize-winning photograph of 14-year-old Mary Vecchio kneeling in horror over a slain student a decade ago at Kent State Univ. was re-created by actress Patty Patiller for "Kent State," airing Sunday, Feb. 8 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

On that night in the city of Kent, Ohio, young people gather and there is a spontaneous festival on a street with several bars and gathering spots that turns into a near-riot.

In contrast, Saturday passes in relative calm until darkness. Then, a night rally is organized by campus radicals. The ROTC building — the only symbol of the government and the military on campus — is singled out as the center of protest and soon, several windows in the building have been broken. In time, the building is set afire, despite the efforts of faculty marshals to calm the crowd. When the fire department arrives, their efforts to fight the fire are frustrated by vandals. Without police protection, they leave. The mayor acts, and within a short period of time, students are confronted with a massive National Guard presence on the campus.

On Sunday, Gov. Rhodes arrives in Kent and holds a press conference, denouncing campus violence. At Kent State, there is casual and friendly interaction between students and young national guardsmen. By night, however, a peaceful demonstration is disrupted when the guard is ordered to disperse the students.

On Monday, a student rally at noon is again disrupted when troops march to disperse the gathering. This time, some students respond throwing rocks at the guardsmen. The guard retaliates with tear gas and a contingent fires on a group of students.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: Have Lisa Welchel and Mindy Cohn, both cast members of "The Facts of Life," been on any other shows? V. COOPER, FT. BRAGG, N.C.

A: Lisa, who came to Hollywood several years ago when she was signed for Disney's "New Mickey Mouse Club," later guested in segments of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Family" and "Diff'rent Strokes." Her film credits include "The Magician of Lublin" and "The Double McGuffin." Mindy, however, is a living example of a Hollywood success story. Not having any professional acting experience, she was spotted by Charlotte Rae while she and 'Facts' producers were at L.A.'s Westlake School in 1979 soaking up atmosphere for the series. Rae urged the producers to hire the gal and develop a part for her.

Q: Who played the oldest girl on "The Brady Bunch"? A STARNES, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Maureen McCormick, now 24-years old, played Marcia in the popular series. I hope you didn't miss the 'Brady Bunch' film last week. It was great to have the clan back on TV!

Q: How old is actor Greg Harrison, who plays Dr. Gates on "Trapper John, M.D."? What other shows has he been on? A FAN IN GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: Greg will be 30 years old May 31, and he is one of Hollywood's most talented guys. Prior to 'Trapper,' he had a starring role in the short-lived "Logan's Run" series and guested in several other shows. Last fall he starred in two excellent telefilms — "The Women's Room" and "Enola Gay." Other TV credits include "Trilogy in Terror," "The Best Place to Be," "The Gathering" and "Centennial."

Q: Please answer a question my family has been arguing about lately. Did Diana Canova play Brenda Morgenstern on "Rhoda"? If she didn't, who did? A BUNCH OF 'KNOW-IT-ALLS' IN LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Diana Canova didn't play Brenda — but Julie Kavner did! Prior to her starring role in "I'm a Big Girl Now," Diana appeared as the madcap Corinne Tate Flotsky on "Soap" for three years, and also guested in "Happy Days," "Starkey & Hutch," "The Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island." She's made two TV movies thus far — "With This Ring" and "Amusement Park."

Q: Who played Keith on "Good Times"? S. BURNEY, BOLIVIA, N.C.

A: Ben Powers played the football 'jock' named Ben Powers, who won the heart of Thelma Evans (BerNadette Stans).

Segment Gives Warning

"The real disaster hasn't happened yet. But maybe our show will help prevent massive casualties," says Jack Klugman, star of the "Quincy" series.

Klugman is referring to the upcoming "Scream to the Skies" segment, set for Wednesday, Feb. 11 (10-11 p.m. on NBC-TV).

"The disaster," Klugman points out, "is a jetliner crashing or ditching into the ocean. Many of the passengers suffer only minor physical injuries but die a short time later from hypothermia."

According to Klugman, hypothermia is the rapid loss of body heat caused when a crash victim is supported only by a life jacket or the floating seat cushion and thus has most of his body submerged in water.

The message "Scream to the Skies" conveys is a call for added safety precautions on airliners, particularly providing rafts on planes which take off over water such as most of the flights out of Los Angeles International as well as both New York and Boston.

"Unless a plane goes 50 miles or more from shore, the Federal Aviation Authority requires that the carrier have only life vests or floatation cushions," Klugman says.

"Something to think about," Jack adds, "is that there are 216 airports in 46 of our states which have significant water hazards. And most accidents happen on approach or departure."

Klugman emphasizes that while the episode on this subject is fiction, "our facts are real and we had an expert with us while filming."

The idea for the show came from Quincy associate producer Maurice Klugman who enlisted Wayne Williams, of the Nova University Ocean Sciences Center in Florida, as technical adviser.

Williams, a survival expert, is a former Air Force pilot, founder of the Air Force Sea Survival School, and Director, Institute for Survival Technology at Nova.

The survival time in water of temperatures under 60 degrees is alarming, Williams reveals, because hypothermia takes its toll

Men and women, locked behind the walls of a prison, are trapped between the rules and their own passions, in "Inmates, a Love Story," the ABC Friday Night Movie, Feb. 13 (9-11 p.m.). Kate Jackson and Perry King star in this gripping drama about the volatile situations that erupt when men and women are bound together. Others in key roles include Tony Curtis and Shirley Jones.

Jackson plays Jane Mount, a street-wise, petty thief, and King's character, Roy Maxon, is an up-and-coming young executive convicted of a white collar crime.

Curtis is seen as Flanagan, a flamboyant small-time hood who befriends Maxon, and Jones is cast as E.F. Crown, the unethical superintendent of the state facility.

Jane and Roy's relationship starts with hostility as these strong opposites clash in a tight world of prison. But, as they come to know each other, they are inevitably drawn together.

Flanagan's near-pathetic desire for big-time status backfires when he attacks another prisoner who has taken over his girl.

Meanwhile, Jane's experiences with Roy and two helpless inmates allow her to discover and value her own worth.

Finally, Roy is forced to confront his own corruption when he uncovers an insidious prison system that thrives by cheating its inmates.

'Ghost' Stars

Fred Astaire, Melvyn Douglas, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., John Houseman, Craig Wasson, Patricia Neal and Alice Krige will star in "Ghost Story." The motion picture is an adaptation of Peter Straub's best-selling novel of the same name.

'Masterpiece' Fest

PBS' "Masterpiece Theater" will celebrate its 10th anniversary with a 22-week "Festival of Favorites," a selection of highlights of a decade of programming which will begin airing in May.

"The Golden Bowl," a six-part dramatization of Henry James' psychological novel, will launch the special programming.

First presented on the series in 1973, "Golden Bowl" stars Jill Townsend as Maggie Verver and Barry Morse is cast as her wealthy father. Others appearing include Cyril Cusack, Daniel Massey and Gayle Hunnicutt.

It's Funny Now

Now that Caroline McWilliams is a 'regular' on "Benson," she can laugh about the time when she was signed by a group of agents who swore they were going to make her a star.

"That was years ago," she recalls, "and I was so excited by their enthusiasm. But the next day they came into the coffee shop where I worked as a waitress, ordered their lunches and never even recognized me."

Cast Is Named

Dennis Weaver, Valerie Harper and Natash Martel will star in an ABC telefilm titled "The Day the Loving Stopped." The focus is on divorce from a child's view.

Andretti Signed

The Patrick Racing Team has signed Mario Andretti to drive in the Indianapolis 500, May 24. The contract also calls for him to drive in at least four other Indy races.

Plans For Bench

According to Cincinnati Reds manager John McNamara, Johnny Bench will start two games per week behind the plate and be used mainly as a pinch-hitter the rest of the time.

"He's an extra player — by his own choosing," says McNamara, referring to Bench's wish to catch only twice weekly and try for another position.

HOLLYWOOD — CAROL BURNETT and JOE HAMILTON are pulling up stakes and moving to the Hawaiian Islands, where they, along with JIM NABORS, will raise horses and Macadamia nuts on their acreage on Maui. Carol's already enrolled the kids in schools there, and Joe vows he's going to 'slow down and turn over my chores to the people who work for me.'

Good things must come in three...In the same week BARRY GIBB'S wife gave birth to the couple's third son, he also received three Grammy nominations!

Production has been halted on CBS-TV's "VALLEY OF THE DOLLS" because of severe injuries RENEE VALENTE sustained in an auto accident. The beautiful actress is hospitalized with a fractured hip, ankle, wrist, dislocated jaw, a concussion and numerous lacerations.

Also on the injured list is NICK NOLTE, who had 15 stitches in his right hand following a freak accident in the biology lab set of "CANNERY ROW."

Skelton Will Sell

Comedian Red Skelton has agreed to offer his television shows for sale, and they will be telecast via syndication.

It isn't known yet which of "The Red Skelton Show" and "The Red Skelton Hour" programs will be sold, but sources believe the first ones offered will be those in color.

How Good Are They—Really?

Food stamps: sharing is losing.

FOR ALBERTA C. FROST, Deputy Administrator for Family Nutrition Programs Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture

Why does an elderly person get taken off food stamps upon moving in with a married child? — L.E.C., Petersburg, Va.

● That is not arbitrarily so. It depends on how the household he or she is moving into is set up. If the elderly person ate meals with the family and the shopping and cooking were done for the family as a whole, the elderly person would no longer be eligible for food stamps. If the elderly person purchased and prepared food separately from other members of the family, he would constitute a separate household for food stamp purposes. Situations have to be described on a case-by-case basis. Contact your food stamp agency.

FOR BYRON JANIS, concert pianist

Do you have any special trick for protecting your hands? — S.R., Lima, Ohio

● I keep them supple and rust-free by the usual, conventional four or five hours a day of practicing. I'm very careful in the way I shake hands (a too-enthusiastic handshake could result in bruised or stiff fingers). What I do is this: I make sure that when I extend my hand, I put my fingers deep into the other's first. That's how I protect my hand and my career.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What romantic overtones did the St. Valentine's Day Massacre have? — C.A., Blount, Miss.

● None. Love was hardly an ingredient of the event which took place on Feb. 14, 1929. That day, a shooting occurred between the notorious Bugs Moran and Al Capone gangs. It is believed that Al Capone's men cornered seven members of the Moran gang in a Chicago warehouse and cut them down with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns. It was the 18th Amendment — Prohibition — that spawned the formation of these gangs of bootleggers who supplied the speakeasies in which otherwise law-abiding citizens would gather to consume illegal whiskey. Gang rivalry led up to this killing, now known as the St. Valentine's Day Massacre.

FOR SENATOR HOWARD BAKER (R.-Tenn.)

Where is the dividing line between conscience and party loyalty? — J.M.W., Lakeland, Fla.

● Each of us has a point of personal principle beyond which we shall not venture. Likewise, each of us has a sense of right versus wrong. And while I may, on occasion, place party loyalty ahead of certain beliefs, there are some beliefs I will not sacrifice for party loyalty. Further, I will never consent to an action I judge to be morally or legally wrong.

FOR ANTHONY HOPKINS, star of A Change of Seasons

Is it a fact that you don't think much of acting as a profession? — M.H., Santa Fe, N.M.

● Now, however did that rumor get started? Perhaps it was my response to getting compared to Charles Laughton (when he was young). When I hear that, I say, "I'm just a short, ordinary Welshman who has got to act. Besides acting, the only other thing I could possibly do would be to run a pub."

FOR CRYSTAL GAYLE, recording star

Why is your speech not nearly as "Southern" as your sister's (Loretta Lynn)? — T.G., Blountville, Tenn.

● Loretta was born and raised in the hills of Kentucky. Although I was born there, the family moved to Indiana when I was very young. My formative years were in a totally different environment from Loretta's. The speech patterns which surrounded us were like night is to day. I think this accounts for the difference in our voices, both in everyday life and recording.

FOR SANDRA KAUFFMAN, author of The Cowboy Catalog

Has the Dallas TV series made any impact on the fashion industry? — S.F., Yuma, Ariz.

● The Western-wear craze was well underway by the time Dallas came along, but J.R. and friends demonstrated that cowboy clothes could be elegant as well as casual. By mixing business suits and formal dress with wide-brimmed hats and fancy boots they took Western wear off the ranch and onto the streets.

FOR BERNARD S. FINN, Curator, Division of Electricity and Modern Physics, Smithsonian Institution

If Thomas Alva Edison came back to life, which modern lighting developments would he marvel at most? — B.R.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● He might not be overwhelmed by anything in today's technical world. But since he enjoyed modifying old devices for new applications, he might get a kick out of the development of high-grade glass optical fibers, which can carry enormous amounts of information.

PRO Senator Daniel P. Moynihan (D.-N.Y.)

Tuition tax credits are not government hand-outs. They simply allow families to keep a little more of their own income to use for educating their children as they think best. Most people prefer the public schools, and that is as it should be. The first responsibility of government is to see that the schools it runs are excellent. But it is reasonable also for government policy to encourage other schools and to remove some of the economic barriers that keep families, who prefer the education they offer, from enrolling in them.

PRO AND CON

Should Tuition Tax Credits Be Granted for Private and Parochial School Attendance?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Virginia V. Sparling, President, National Congress of Parents and Teachers

No! They demonstrate "no confidence" in public education and could cause its disintegration by weakening the system through diverting public monies into private schools. They're unsound, distributing benefits irrespective of need, without any requirements for accountability. No such general aid is available to public schools: Federal funds are for special programs and needs. Efforts should be directed toward improving public schools to provide the best education within the system rather than retreating to "defeatist" alternatives.

Rekindling Desire: Good News About Loving

Spouses often fear that the fireworks of love will cease to sizzle with time. But experts report that with some work, passion can last forever.

Massage can help a couple stay in touch with each other.

By Terri Schultz

At first, he brought her flowers. She wore black silk negligees to bed, and his favorite perfume. Later, when the children came, she was tired and distracted. They were rarely alone, and romance fled.

For many people, this scenario is all too familiar. Passion, we assume, fades with time, and the sight of Romeo taking out the garbage might have dimmed even Juliet's flame. But now there is hope for those of us who long to have romance last. New research suggests that though it may not be possible to sustain weak-in-the-knees passion over the years, a marriage can stay vibrant, healthy and full of zest.

What's more, as time marches on, some marriages even improve like fine wine. "I've fallen in love again and again with my wife," says John, a Tucson, Ariz., father of three who will be married 31 years this month. "The quality of our marriage is better than ever — because in addition to getting older, we're getting smarter."

What is his secret? Marital counselors and others who analyze the recipes of successful marriages are now dishing up some interesting — and controversial — theories. Some say, for example, that one reason marriages turn sour is because we expect too much. We want the fireworks to sizzle forever, and when they don't, we assume something is wrong.

In reality, six to 30 months is about as long as any heart-stopping romantic ecstasy can last, says Dr. Elaine Walster, author of A New Look at Love. This, perhaps, is why brief love is the most vivid, painful and sweet. After that "honeymoon" time, the flame of passionate love quiets down, but that doesn't mean the flame has to die. Instead, it can linger in the glowing embers of companionate love — a combination of tender affection and sensuality.

Some psychologists even believe that a certain amount of sexual burn-out is natural between husband and wife. It's possible to simply get too much of a good thing — which may explain why the number-one complaint among couples who seek marital counseling is "inhibited sexual desire."

In fact, our sex drive may not be as strong as we've been told, insist doctors John Gagnon of Stony Brook, N.Y., and William Simon of Chicago. Much of our "experience of sexual excitement" — of what turns us on — is learned from others around us as we grow up. It is not sheer instinct, as previously believed. The result, these doctors argue, is that those sexy messages we receive from television commercials, clothing styles and popular novels, lure us into trying to live out impossible romantic dreams. It is quite possible that sex is less important after years of marriage than other things, such as security and affection.

Yet, in any good marriage there is a place for passion. The quantity and intensity may change, but "it is possible to find satisfaction and enjoyment and pleasure in the same person, the same body, year after year," says Robert Blood, an

Ann Arbor, Mich., marriage counselor who has been married happily to his wife, Margaret, for 36 years. And in New York City, noted sex therapist Dr. Helen Kaplan is studying couples who have been happily monogamous for up to 40 years. "There's no such thing as sexual boredom — boredom is a sign of hidden anger or mistrust," she insists.

It is even possible to feel a deeper, richer passion as familiarity breeds content. "A wonderful passion comes from knowing what makes each other happy," says Mary, a Santa Barbara mother of two who has been married 15 years. "I have faith in my husband. I trust him. So I am a wonderfully relaxed lover now — more adventurous, more willing to try new things."

The difference between passion that withers like a rose and passion that lingers like a favorite tune, seems to be a little luck and a lot of hard work. "I suspect that if any marriage is going to move from the relatively complacent early phase into a more mature and rich, profoundly meaningful phase, then it has to go through some struggle in order to get there," says Blood. "The passion may ebb and flow along the way. That's normal."

The best of marriages have rough spots and suffer once in a while from neglect. Here are some basic ingredients, gleaned from many experts, that can help keep passion simmering.

- Give each other positive verbal reinforcement. "Don't take anything for granted," suggests one marriage counselor. "Receive everything your spouse does for you as if it were unexpected, as if it were a gift."

- Finish up unfinished business. Apologize for anything you regret having done or neglected to do.

- Be assertive. Speak up for yourself. Accept the fact that you will always have some difference of opinion. But understand that feelings — gut-level emotions — often cannot be changed. You may have to learn to live with a permanent difference of opinion about, say, your mother.

- Spend time away from the children. Hire a baby sitter and see a movie, go dancing or have dinner together. "It doesn't matter what a couple does, as long as it is what they most enjoy doing together," says Blood.

- Allow yourself some time away from your spouse. In her work with couples, Dr. Patricia Aletky of Minneapolis, Minn., encourages each person to spend a half hour every day alone. This might include writing in a diary, doing breathing exercises or just watching the sunrise.

- Use fantasy in your sex life. Fantasy is one way to enrich your sexual experience together, and you shouldn't feel guilty about it.

- Discuss your sexual feelings with each other. "Hang-ups, plus monotony, are a large part of all five-or seven-year itches and between loving and tolerant people are avoidable," reports The Joy of Sex.

- Massage each other; stay aware of your body. "Massage is wonderful therapy and a marvelous restimulation for your sexual relationship," says Blood.

- Accept the hard times as part of growth and change. Many people can work through these struggles on their own or with the help of a mutual friend, marriage counselor or minister, priest or rabbi.

And, above all, remember that just because you don't change partners doesn't mean marriage is an unchanging relationship. One Indiana man who's been married 26 years recently bought his wife another wedding ring to celebrate their third "marriage" to each other. "We didn't want to buy a ring to celebrate the second 'marriage,'" he recalls. "That was a hard one, a struggling one. But we benefited enormously from going through that struggle." He pauses, and affectionately adds: "Now our marriage really flies — because we are thoroughly committed to the idea that we are going to be together as long as we're alive."

By Philip M. Stern

If you've ever had to hire a lawyer — be it to fight the landlord, deal with a collapsing marriage or just draw a simple will — you may have discovered firsthand how steep legal fees can be. Today there's good news and bad news about the situation.

The bad news is that despite the beginnings of change in the legal profession, finding the right lawyer at an affordable price remains, for most of us, a difficult task.

The good news is that there's a pinpoint of light at the end of the legal tunnel. Small changes have taken place and there are now some ways to deal with legal problems less expensively. (Some tips on that follow soon.)

There are around 500,000 lawyers in this country. You'd think that with so many competing for clients, the price of legal help would be more reasonable. Yet when we run into even a routine legal problem, all too often we find ourselves paying hundreds of dollars for an uncontested divorce or the sale of a house, up to thousands for the probating of a will.

How is it that with such a glut of lawyers, legal fees are so high? Because lawyers enjoy a monopoly that spares them from competition with one another.

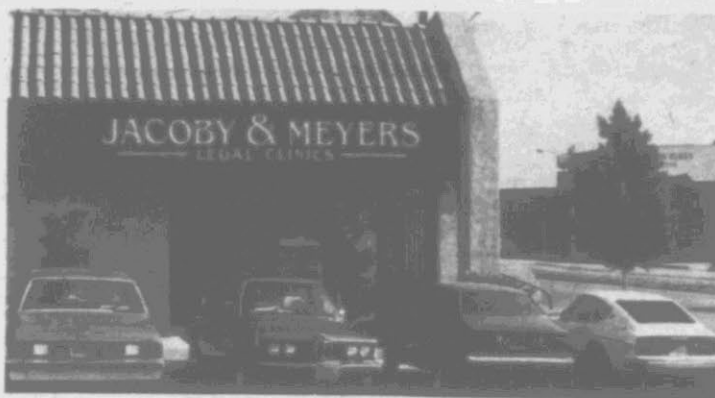

Home sales offer a good example. We pay a billion dollars a year in fees to real estate lawyers; yet many countries around the world have a system that makes home sales as simple — and as lawyer-free — as selling a car. You just sign the title over to your buyer and that's that.

Or take probating a will, which can be 100 times as expensive here as in England. Why? Because the British have made probate a do-it-yourself proposition: The court appoints an heir or friend and lets him handle the matter. Here, our procedures are so intimidatingly complicated that most of us, in despair and ignorance, turn to lawyers and end up paying three times as much in fees to probate lawyers as we pay in funeral expenses.

Uncontested divorce is another area that could be substantially "de-

Lawyers' fees can leave a consumer smarting. But due to innovations such as legal "clinics," prices are now becoming more affordable.

With the help of low prices and advertising, the new legal clinics are busting out all over: here, in a California shopping mall.

Madison Avenue meets the bar: A Wisconsin lawyer...

lawyered" — if the bar would permit it. In Florida, where the legislature simplified the divorce law, Rosemary Furman, a former legal secretary, was helping people carry out the needed steps for $50 — one-tenth the amount most lawyers charge for a divorce. But the Florida Bar Association prosecuted her for the unauthorized practice of law and won. They did that, they claimed, to protect the public against shoddy legal advice. Yet not one complaint came from a dissatisfied Furman customer. The only grumblings came from the lawyers.

In addition to posing problems for the general public, many bar association rules have, ironically, hurt the rank and file of lawyers as well. Take, for example, the long-standing rule forbidding lawyers to advertise — that persisted until the Supreme Court struck it down in 1977 — a rule that not only stifled price competition among lawyers but also prevented attorneys from telling the public what they have to offer.

In Los Angeles, for instance, two young lawyers, Leonard Jacoby and Stephen Meyers, invented the legal "clinic," a new kind of law office using computers, high-speed typewriters and efficient case-handling systems. Tailoring their methods to meet clients' needs, they provided neighborhood offices, permitted credit-card charging and were open nights and weekends. Best of all, their fees were substantially below the going rate in Los Angeles. They believed they had a better mousetrap, but as long as the bar outlawed advertising, they had no way to tell the world how to beat a path to their door.

But the minute the Supreme Court lifted the ban, Jacoby and Meyers launched a major radio and TV ad campaign, and in just six months, they expanded their business from three to 16 offices.

The lifting of the advertising ban has paved the way for clinics and fostered price wars for certain services such as divorces and home-closing. Lawyers have begun to advertise their specialties in the classified ads and the Yellow Pages.

Here are some tips to help you resolve your legal problems as reliably and inexpensively as possible.

First, before hiring an attorney, explore the possibilities of handling the problem yourself. You'll find a growing list of self-help books and kits at bookstores and large stationery stores carry standardized legal forms for, say, a simple will.

If, however, you don't feel comfortable without a certified attorney, here are some suggestions:

- Ask around among friends and relatives for the name of a good lawyer. If you get no leads, call the Lawyer Referral Service (listed in the Yellow Pages just ahead of Attorneys) for several names. Try to get an estimate of each lawyer's fee and insist on a written agreement about what the fee does and doesn't include — just as you would with a home-improvement contractor.

- If your legal problem is a fairly standard one, seek out a legal clinic. In addition to their lower-than-normal fees, most will give you a half-hour's consultation for a nominal sum — around $20. Some clinics are located in department stores and shopping malls.

- If you belong to a group (credit union, fraternal organization, etc.), see if a local law firm will make a group arrangement, providing members with free telephone consultation and offering reduced hourly rates if the problem requires further attention.

- Your best bet is a prepaid legal insurance plan, similar to medical plans. Example: The 90,000 members of one labor union in New York City get a full range of legal services not only for themselves but for their families, all for just $29 per year — clearly a bargain.

How to Ward Off Warts

By Paula Dranov

Probably more superstition surrounds the common, garden-variety wart than any other type of physical affliction. Folk wisdom holds that these pesky eruptions come from handling toads, and there are plenty of folk remedies for getting rid of them: such as touching them with a slice of raw potato or a copper penny or a length of yarn knotted with the number of warts you want removed.

Strangely enough, these odd cures have been known to work, and although most doctors scorn hocus-pocus when it comes to other medical ailments, they concede that in the case of the common wart — which generally appears on the hands and feet — the power of suggestion can be a most effective remedy. If you believe a penny will help, then it just might.

Suggestion and folk remedies aside, warts have plagued us since ancient times and, strangely, science knows little more about them today than it did then. Reassuringly, however, it has been established that the ordinary wart — round or irregular in shape and yellow, greyish or brown in color — is caused by a virus and isn't at all dangerous. And it can't become cancerous.

Children are more prone to warts than adults, possibly because as we grow older we acquire some sort of natural immunity to the papovavirus that causes them. However, because warts are viral infections, they are contagious and can be passed from one person to another. Then, too, they can spread and grow when irritated by scratching. (Touching a toad, by the way, does not cause warts.)

Many doctors prefer not to treat most common warts unless they're painful, tender or so unsightly that they detract from one's appearance.

If you do wish your warts removed, there are several methods: One involves using an electric current (electrosurgery). There is also cryotherapy, which is the freezing of the wart with dry ice or liquid oxygen. And sometimes, acid solutions are used to erode the wart so it can be scraped away. All of these methods must be performed by a doctor — and none is painful. (According to the American Medical Association, over-the-counter wart removal medications have not been proven to be effective.)

Unhappily, any "cure" for common warts may be only temporary — there's a better-than-average chance that they'll recur in exactly the same spot. But there's also the probability that they'll disappear as mysteriously as they arrived. If not, you could just bring out that copper penny. FW

The fever fighter.

This winter, many people will take Bufferin[®] instead of Bayer[®].

Considering all this, perhaps you should, too.

- Bayer is plain aspirin. And plain aspirin can't reduce fever of colds or flu faster than Bufferin.
- Bufferin has special ingredients to help prevent the stomach upset plain aspirin can cause. This could be especially important when colds and flu call for frequent doses.
- The special Bufferin formula starts pain reliever going to the aches and pains faster than plain aspirin like Bayer.

Maybe you can be more careful to get all this... with Bufferin.

Aspirin and Bufferin are trademarks.

Charles Kuralt Comes in from the Road

As a wry road-runner: "I can't think of a time when I didn't want to be a reporter."

Relaxing on the set of Morning with Charles Kuralt

By Tony Scherman

Well, I roll out of bed at 2 A.M.," remarks Charles Kuralt about his new schedule. "and I hit the office by 3:30 A.M. at the latest." When Kuralt started out in television as a writer in 1956, he worked from midnight to 8 A.M. "It's taken me over 20 years," Kuralt says, looking rumpled in his office at 10 A.M., "but I've finally worked my way full circle back to ridiculous hours."

And worked his way into the awareness — and hearts — of millions of Americans, too. Much of Kuralt's career was spent traipsing across the country doing the On the Road series for the CBS Evening News. Kuralt — balding, plump and unpretentiously witty — became a sort of TV folk hero as he poked around the countryside for intentionally "irrelevant," small-scale stories. Traveling in a 25-foot van, Kuralt and his three-man crew put together vignettes of the lives of hundreds of Americans: a brick maker in North Carolina, a woman who made fiddles in the Ozarks, an Alaskan hermit. "Anyone," says Kuralt, "whom we found to be doing interesting, unlikely things."

In 1979 Kuralt was persuaded to divide his time between On the Road and CBS' Sunday Morning news show. The Sunday program, with Kuralt as anchorman, was a success, and Kuralt reluctantly left the road altogether: This past October he began a stint as anchorman on the daily news program Morning with Charles Kuralt. While Kuralt's presence immediately boosted the show's ratings by some 40 percent, the portly newsman has mixed feelings about his new job. "I miss On the Road already. I'm just not going to be getting out and talking to people anymore. It isn't as much fun to be an anchorman. But — how can I say this without using clichés? — there are plenty of challenges in putting together an hour-long daily news program."

Kuralt, 46, began his journalism career early. "I can't think of a time when I didn't want to be a reporter. As a child, it seemed like a very romantic life to lead." At the University of North Carolina he edited the college daily and then went on to write for the Charlotte (N.C.) News. A "people" column he wrote for the News ("It was a lot like On the Road; about people around town who der wherever we wanted. We'd say things like 'Well, we haven't been to Idaho for a while — let's go.'" Over the years Kuralt compiled some 500 reports. Of all the On the Road stories, Kuralt's favorite is one he did of a black family in Mississippi "who had really been poor, so poor that when the oldest son went off to college, the father hitched up the wagon, drove into town and borrowed two dollars for bus fare. The son ended up as the chairman of the economics department at Howard University, and all eight children succeeded just as extravagantly. We shot their family reunion a couple of Thanksgivings ago; it was also the parents' 50th anniversary. That was just a lovely story. A confirmation of the American idea that you can succeed against the odds."

Filming in a Kansas wheat field: Poking everywhere, searching for the "little" stories.

wouldn't normally be in the news") won the Ernie Pyle Memorial Award for newspaper writing. Shortly afterward, CBS beckoned. "Those were the days of Edward R. Morrow, Eric Sevareid, Howard K. Smith, Robert Trout — real giants — and I was delighted to work at CBS."

Years as a globe-trotting correspondent followed: Latin America, Africa, Asia (including Vietnam) and even the North Pole. Yet, from time to time, Kuralt felt the urge to slow the manic pace and do another type of broadcasting. "I didn't know exactly what I had in mind," he says, "but I told the executives something like 'We're forever rushing around from one great big story to another. Why don't we do some little stories?'" The idea impressed nobody: "I suppose everyone thought it was too frivolous."

This time he was given a green light and a camera crew. In October 1967, Kuralt & Co. wandered around New England and came up with a story about autumn leaves. "It was a big hit back at the office. I started to think, Well, if you can do a piece about autumn leaves, you can do a piece about anything." Kuralt was originally supposed to do his folksy assignment for only three months, but when the period was up he was told to keep rolling.

"What I liked most about On the Road was the freedom. We worked without assignments; we could wander wherever we wanted. We'd say things like 'Well, we haven't been to Idaho for a while — let's go.'" Over the years Kuralt compiled some 500 reports. Of all the On the Road stories, Kuralt's favorite is one he did of a black family in Mississippi "who had really been poor, so poor that when the oldest son went off to college, the father hitched up the wagon, drove into town and borrowed two dollars for bus fare. The son ended up as the chairman of the gave Kuralt an unfeigned optimism about the U.S.A. "You can't get to know the country well and still think of it as an evil or selfish country. I've seen too many instances of goodness and selflessness and the spirit of community. It's hard to generalize about America, but my generalization would be: This is a generous and endlessly fascinating place."

Kuralt still seems slightly dazed by the transition from footloose correspondent to anchorman. He makes sure there's time for his second wife, Petie, and for Lisa and Susan, his two daughters from his previous marriage (both are in their early 20's), but he has little chance these days for socializing. "When you have to get up at 2 A.M., it does seem to dictate being in bed by 6. By the time I finish writing the next morning's show, it's time for a little supper, and that's about it."

He stands up from his desk, hands in his pockets and looks admiringly at a gift he just received this morning — a painstakingly crafted miniature outhouse from the old On the Road van. Made by one of the people Kuralt encountered during his 13-year odyssey, the little wooden trailer comes complete with a dwarf typewriter, tape recorder and good-luck horseshoe. Kuralt loves it. "It isn't easy being tied to a desk," he sighs, "but at least I've got my outhouse to remind me of the great days."

February 14th will soon be here, when we can reach another's heart with a pretty card, a bouquet of flowers or a showy assortment of Valentine candy. The romantic cook with an imaginative, fanciful hand can also produce a sweet love offering.

HISTORY OF VALENTINE'S DAY

Valentine's Day, according to legend, bears a rich heritage stemming back to the third century. During that time, a young Roman, Valentinus, who was sympathetic to the martyr Christians, was condemned to death by Emperor Claudius II.

Awaiting execution, Valentinus devoted his love to the blind daughter of the jailor and, according to legend, restored her sight. The night before his death, he wrote a love message to the girl and signed it "From Your Valentine." And the name has come down through the centuries as the word which stands for love among sweethearts.

DOES CHOCOLATE MEND A BROKEN HEART?

Does chocolate ease the pain of a broken heart? Researchers think so, according to an article published in Modern Medicine.

A chemical, phenylethylamine, present in chocolate, as well as in the human brain, is directly related to the emotional ups and downs of being in love, the article indicates.

Victims of unrequited love often go on a chocolate binge during a state of depression. Since chocolate is high in phenylethylamine, the speculation is that it is an unconscious effort at self-medication.

MYSTERY OF THE RED SATIN HEART

To discover the kind of center that is hidden inside a piece of boxed chocolate candy, check the shape of the confection, as well as the swirly script which is stroked on top of each piece. For example, a "V" usually signifies a vanilla cream center. Flat-topped chocolates with an open "C" often indicate a chocolate butter cream center, while dome-shaped chocolates inscribed with a closed "C" reveal a cherry cordial is concealed inside. Square-shaped chocolates with a "V" indicate a vanilla caramel center. An "O" stands for orange cream; "P," for pineapple cream; and "R," for raspberry cream.

The shapes of chocolate confections are also indicators of the contents. Creams are usually round, caramels are square or oblong, and nougats are oblong.

Sweet Valentine Sweets For Sweethearts and Swains

MARILYN'S COCONUT VALENTINE CAKE

1 pkg. (18½ ozs.) white or yellow cake mix
1 cup cherry pie filling
1 pkg. (7.2 ozs.) fluffy white frosting mix
1 pkg. (7 ozs.) flaked coconut

- Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease and flour 2 heart-shaped layer cake pans. Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Divide batter between pans.
- Bake layers 30 to 40 minutes or until a wooden pick poked in center comes out clean.
- Cool in pans 10 minutes. Invert, remove pans and completely cool layers on wire rack.
- Place bottom cake layer on serving plate. Spread with pie filling. Top with second cake layer.
- Prepare fluffy white frosting mix and frost sides and top of cake. Coat cake completely with coconut.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

SWEETHEART CAKE

1 pkg. yellow or white cake mix
Red food coloring
Pink Swirl Frosting*
Chocolate hearts (about 18)
Candy hearts (about 18)
1 cup cherry jam or pie filling

- Prepare cake mix according to directions. Tint batter pink with a few drops of red food coloring. Use two heart-shaped 8- or 9-inch layer cake pans and bake as directed.

2. Meanwhile, prepare Pink Swirl Frosting according to recipe.

3. Place a dot of frosting in center of each chocolate heart; top with a candy heart, gently pressing together. (Use pastel candy hearts with Valentine sayings.) Allow to set.

4. When cakes are baked, cool thoroughly on wire racks. Fill with cherry jam; frost top and sides with Pink Swirl Frosting. Arrange 10 decorated chocolate hearts around side of cake; place eight hearts on top outlining border.

Makes one 8- or 9-inch cake

*Recipe follows.

PINK SWIRL FROSTING

2 egg whites, unbeaten
½ cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons light corn syrup
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon almond extract
Few drops red food coloring

- Place egg whites, sugar, corn syrup and cream of tartar in top of double boiler. Mix thoroughly.
- Place over rapidly boiling water; cook, stirring, for five minutes. Remove from heat.
- Beat with electric mixer at high speed until frosting stands in peaks. Stir in extract and a few drops of red food coloring.

Makes enough to fill and frost two 8- or 9-inch layers

CHOCOLATE BAR PIE

Chocolate Petal Crust* or 9-inch baked crumb crust
1 milk chocolate bar or milk chocolate with almonds bar (½-lb size)
½ cup milk
1½ cups miniature or 15 regular marshmallows
1 cup heavy cream

- Prepare pie shell; set aside.
- Break candy bar, chopping almonds into small pieces; melt with milk in top of double boiler over hot water. Add marshmallows, stirring until melted; cool completely.
- Whip cream until stiff; fold into chocolate mixture. Pour into crust; chill several hours until firm. Garnish with whipped topping or chilled cherry-pie filling.

*Recipe follows.

CHOCOLATE PETAL CRUST

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1¼ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
½ cup unsweetened cocoa
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt

1. Cream butter or margarine, sugar, egg and vanilla until light and fluffy.

2. Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt; add to creamed mixture. Shape soft dough into two 1½-inch rolls. Wrap in wax paper; chill until firm.

3. Cut one roll into ¼-inch slices; arrange, edges touching, on bottom and sides of greased 9-inch pie pan. (Small spaces in crust will not affect pie.) Bake at 375°F. for 8 to 10 minutes. Cool.

NOTE: Freeze leftover dough; use for pie crust or cookies.

LOVERS' MOUSSE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 cup peanut butter baking chips
2 teaspoons instant coffee granules
2 tablespoons crushed orange-flavored hard candy
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ cups whipped cream or whipped topping

1. In saucepan, combine sugar and gelatin. Blend in milk and egg yolks. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture coats spoon. Do not boil.

2. Place peanut butter chips in bowl. Add half custard mixture to chips. Blend well. Add remaining half and stir until smooth and chips are melted. Stir in coffee and orange candy. Chill until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally.

3. Beat egg whites with sugar until stiff but not dry. Fold into peanut butter mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Spoon into footed dessert dishes. Chill several hours. If desired, garnish with additional whipped cream and peanut butter chips. For added flavor, after whipping cream for garnish, add 1 tablespoon crushed orange hard candy.

Makes 8 servings

Lies, Lies, Lies – Can You Excel in Them?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The adage that "It takes a thief to catch a thief" also applies to lying.
2. It is easy to deceive others, but it is costly to oneself.
3. People who excel in the practice of deception fall into a special personality category.
4. When a person tells a lie, the amount of guilt or stress that goes with it depends on the kind of lie and whether or not getting caught is likely, whether premeditated or not.
5. When a man lies, his eyes behave differently than a woman's do when she attempts a deception.

ANSWERS

1. False. Studies at Harvard University on the psychodynamics of lying and the ability to detect deception in others found that "skill at lying was unrelated to skill at catching others in their lies."

2. True. The Harvard University study also indicated that, unfortunately for those of us who are trusting of others, "the ability to lie successfully appears to be a fairly general one," that a person with the intent to deceive others has a good chance of getting away with it without the other person actually realizing that he has been had. And it is interesting to note a further finding in this connection: People who effectively mask their deception attempts also effectively conceal most of their true feelings and emotions. And this makes it difficult, if not impossible, for them to enjoy a really close relationship with another human being. The individual who gets where he wants to go by manipulating others through deceit and dissembling ends up being a "loner" in its most unrewarding sense:

3. True. As studies sponsored by the National Science Foundation show, they are the Machiavellian type, people who excel in manipulating others and who are very effective in deceiving others when it serves their purpose to do so. The investigators found that "the Machiavellians seem to favor an especially theatrical style of deceiving, particularly when feigning positive regard: They tend to be 'hams' when they lie. Moreover, the hamming strategy appears to work quite well. People who tend to exaggerate sentiments of liking that they do not really feel, as well as people who exaggerate feigned feeling of disliking, are much less likely to get caught in their lies than are the less histrionic sorts."

4. True. It is observed in the same study that "among the many types of lies are ordinary white lies, proffered in the service of smoothing social interaction, lies of self-aggrandizement for purposes of making an impression or for personal gain and lies in which the deceived party is the intended beneficiary, as in physicians' cloaking of grim prognoses or parents' imaginative fabrications about sex and death." It is pointed out that: Lies vary in the degree of guilt or stress that they cause for the deceiver, the degree of involvement that they engender in the topic of the lie, the consequences of getting caught in the lie and whether the lies were planned and rehearsed or unpremeditated.

5. True. A study of the effects of lying, conducted by a team of Western Washington University investigators, cites findings showing an interesting sex difference in the eye contact measurement of subjects when telling a lie or attempting to deceive. It was found that "Males increased their eye contact while lying, but the females' eye contact decreased." FW

Crisis Hot Lines: How Good Are They?

There are over 1,000 hot lines in the U.S. Some are excellent, but others use untrained volunteers. Their "help" can leave callers out in the cold.

By Betty Herbert

A short time ago, a tearful 15-year-old girl called the National Pregnancy Hot Line for what she thought was unbiased counseling on the question of abortion. She says that she listened in horror as a counselor explained in graphic detail what would happen to the "perfectly formed baby" in her womb if she ended her two-month pregnancy.

The National Pregnancy Hot Line is one of over 1,000 telephone crisis lines in the U.S., which respond to callers who need help on everything from rape to child abuse to accidental poisoning. When such hot lines were first introduced in the late 50's and 60's, they were heralded as a revolutionary development in crisis intervention. In many ways, they are, but some individuals have learned that those who man these phone lines are sometimes biased and sometimes unknowledgeable.

The basic idea behind crisis lines is a good one, and many perform their function extremely well. For example, The Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center, the Contact Teleministries (with its 90 chapters nationwide) and the Suicide Prevention League in New York City have their own ethical guidelines and provide rigorous training for volunteers. The noble intent of these and other crisis lines has been to put help only a phone call away from troubled or isolated or desperate individuals.

Such hot lines provide an invaluable service to clients who may never have sought aid before. "The telephone allows the ambivalent patient to achieve closeness at a safe distance," says Dr. Gerald W. Grumet, director of Psychiatric Emergency Services at Rochester (N.Y.) General Hospital. "Those who feel shame or embarrassment in discussing a subject in person are sometimes able to approach it when the therapist's visual presence is screened out by the telephone."

In addition to hot lines for troubled callers, there are those that offer simple straightforward advice on a variety of topics. A caller can receive information on health and sexual problems, money problems and emergency situations such as drug-overdoses and accidental poisonings.

Crisis lines vary considerably, however, in the amount of training and experience they require of volunteers and the treatment they afford callers. At the Philadelphia Hot Line of Women Organized Against Rape, volunteers go through a seven-week training program. They learn about rape and their own reactions to it. Before they man the phones themselves they are paired with an experienced staff person. But volunteers for the National Pregnancy Hot Line receive no formal training other than a briefing from other volunteers about what questions to expect.

And so the unhappy person thumbing through the telephone directory for services like "Dial-A-Friend," or "Help Line," or "Suicide Intervention" is really faced with potluck. And often with disconnected telephones as well. "Ineffective training has been a problem for some of the hot lines," says Dr. James L. Greenstone, president of the Southwestern Academy of Crisis Interveners. "But probably the main problem is lack of funding. They spring up quickly and the intent is good, but then they drop off."

Perhaps the greatest dangers lie with hot lines that receive calls from individuals in some type of psychological crisis. Unquestionably, there are negatives to having basically unidentified voices counseling callers and dangers in allowing untrained volunteers to analyze and advise.

Here's where the ideal of the hot line separates in large part from the reality: While most programs claim to believe strongly in the principles that layman counselors should listen, but not direct or advise, studies have shown that as much as 70 percent of the remarks made by volunteers are advisory. This is a problem for even the major counseling or crisis-intervention services, which may have relatively stringent training programs.

Consider the response that a 30-year-old man named Bill received when he called Help Line, the New York chapter of Contact Teleministries. When he complained that he was extremely lonely and watching television all day, the friendly volunteer turned suddenly disapproving. "There is simply no excuse to be watching television that much. Not unless you're a cripple...Get out and do things...just don't sit there feeling sorry for yourself."

Yet volunteers in this organization are clearly taught to be "non-judgmental." "The whole basis of this is developing listening skills," says Carol, a three-year veteran of Contact Teleministries' national office in Pennsylvania. "If we really put someone down, I don't think they'd call again because they don't call for answers. They want to talk."

The fact that Carol will not give her last name — even in an interview — points out yet another problem in the operation of these services. At the same time that she offers friendship and a sensitive ear to callers, she must distance and protect herself. This anonymity is understandable, given the number of nuisance and sexually manipulative calls that come in to hot lines. But it also shows the limits of these services and how difficult it sometimes is for callers to understand who they're talking to and to weigh any advice they are offered.

Sometimes, difficult callers simply make kindhearted volunteers lose their patience. There are callers who use the services to the point of abuse. For example: Lifeline, a much respected crisis number in Rochester, N.Y., logged more than 1,000 calls in one month from the same woman.

Then what's to be done? It's generally agreed that crisis lines can do good work if they're run responsibly and if callers understand their limits and do a little investigating when they call. "It's always legitimate to ask questions and to find out the qualifications and training of the people who work there," says Dr. Greenstone, whose new reference book, Hotline: The Crisis Intervention Directory is coming out in the spring. Although he believes that volunteers are vital in this field and that academic background is not an important factor, practical training is crucial, he emphasizes.

It also may be a good idea to find out who sponsors the crisis program. These telephone lines are not regulated or licensed by state governments but they do usually receive funding from local organizations, which may establish ethical guidelines and make sure the hot lines are doing a proper job. If you have any complaints, you can call the funding source.

But there's also another reason to check who sponsors the program. It will help you tell whether the organization has any special motivation for wanting you to call. You'll find that it's not always obvious from the name of a hot line, whether it's a business (with something to sell to you along with advice) or a political organization (which wants to push a particular point of view) or a church (which may try to convert you, too).

The main point, says Dr. Grumet, is to remember that a hot line is "just an instrument" and that there are fallible "human beings at both ends of it." [W]

BEDWETTER

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No cost or obligation.

WORD

MAN OF HIS

What does it take to become the best Scrabble player in North America?

Well, Joseph Edley, the man who recently won that title — along with $5,000 from Selchow and Righter Co., the maker of the game — practices by taking words from the dictionary and memorizing their letters in alphabetical order. Then during a game, he always arranges his letters alphabetically and can recognize numerous long words. Edley, a 33-year-old night watchman from San Francisco who has also worked as a teacher, cabbie and computer programmer, spells out these words of wisdom on successful Scrabble:

"The key to winning is making seven- and eight-letter words because getting rid of all your letters in one turn brings a 50-point bonus. To maximize your chances for such words, you must learn how to balance your rack. In other words, get rid of double letters and those that are difficult to use. Also, don't use the s lightly. Don't waste it on a 20-point word; save it for the 80 pointers."

THE DIABETES-IMPOTENCE LINK

A relatively high percentage of impotence may be caused by undetected diabetes, it was reported recently in the Journal of the American Medical Association. A Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center study of 190 men found 12 percent of impotent men had diabetes, despite no history of symptoms.

According to Dr. Stanley Deutsch, who did the study with Dr. Lawrence Sherman, "The traditional view is that impotence is almost always emotional or psychological in origin. Since the turn of the century, however, diabetes has been associated with sexual difficulties. We know that it can impede nerve impulses or the flow of blood to the genital organs. Either or both could be responsible for decreased potency."

A DAY THAT WILL LIVE IN INFAMY

In addition to Valentine's Day, February 14, there's another day of note this week. We mean, of course, that dreaded day of doom — Friday the 13th. It seems that Friday has always been considered unlucky. At one time, criminals were executed on Friday, and it was called "hangman's day." The reason most cited for the infamy of Friday the 13th is the fact that Christ was crucified on a Friday, and there were 13 disciples, including Judas, at the Last Supper.

And if you believe in omens, beware 1981: There are still two more Fridays the 13th to come — next month and in November.

LOVE NOTES

These facts should warm the cockles of your heart this Valentine's Day:

• True love comes to the average American man 1.2

times in his lifetime; 1.3 times for women, reports The "Average American" Book.

• In a May 1978 smoochathon held in Pittsburgh, Pa., Bobbi Sherlock and Ray Blazini kissed for 130 hours 2 minutes, according to Guinness Book of World Records.

• A new book, Curious Facts, reports that the Dani tribe of New Guinea is the only known human culture that appears to take no interest in sex. Courting couples never make love before marriage, and even after their vows, they abstain from intercourse for two more years. After the birth of a child, they abstain from sex for four to six years more. Nobody knows why.

• According to the book American Averages, when 227 husbands and 233 wives were asked to list their favorite recreational activities, more men listed sex than anything else; more women said they would rather read a book.

• And from The Book of Quotes a thought that rings true for the day:

"If love is the answer, could you rephrase the question." — Lily Tomlin

DISTORTED IMAGE

Older persons watch television the most, yet the elderly are portrayed least often on TV. About 11 percent of the U.S. is over 65, but Univ. of Florida professor of broadcasting Mickie Edwardson says, "Only 2 to 3 percent of prime-time TV characters are portrayed as elderly."

Even when they do show up, the elderly are depicted as narrow-minded, in poor health, floundering financially and dissatisfied sexually, says Edwardson, adding that a Univ. of Pennsylvania poll shows the more one watches TV, the more negative his attitude toward the elderly.

Lynne Webb, a University of Florida speech professor, cites sitcoms, such as Sanford and Son, as prime offenders. "Fred Sanford symbolizes all the negative elderly stereotypes," she says. "He's a hypochondriac, he's lazy, and he's a stumbling, bumbling oaf."

WHAT YOU SEE IS WHAT YOU EAT

It now seems that just looking at food can make you fat. According to a report in Rodale Press' Executive Fitness Newsletter, Yale psychologist Judith Rodin has discovered that some people secrete higher than normal levels of insulin in the presence of what she calls "compelling food cues" (like the sight, sound and smell of a sizzling sirlon). Rodin says that such people consume more calories — and thus pick up extra poundage — to satisfy this insulin output.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between the top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check for answers with those below.

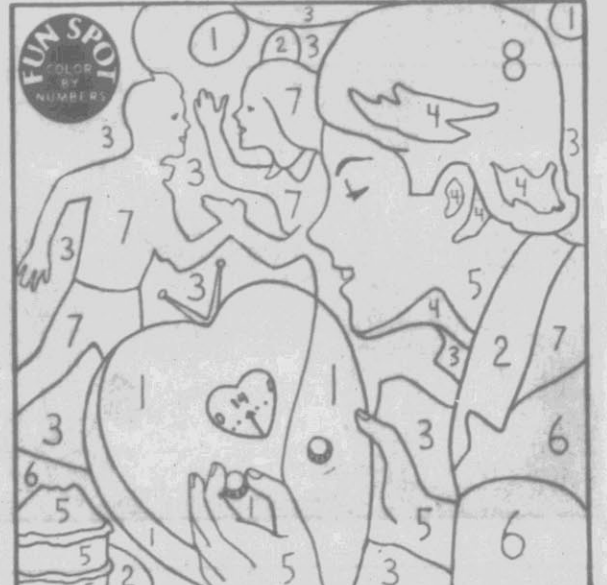

Junior Whirl

- CUPIDITY REIGNS! Study these valentine statements carefully and perhaps you'll find the first name—boy or girl—of each speaker: 1. "I am yours." 2. "My heart hurts." 3. "You're the best ever." 4. "Our love is strong and real." P.S.: Letters run together.
- Type Cast! Invite your friends to read this cryptic inscription: LmQaVnE. What is it all about? Answer quickly, if you can.
- NOW AND THEN. When I was 5 years old, my cousin Ned was 11. Now that Ned is twice as old, I am _____.
- Tongue Tests! Repeat as fast as you can, several times: Daily diet do's and don'ts are driving Daisy dotty. Six sleeping seamen snored.

HOW STRINGS! Just one shot fired by Don Cupid above finds its mark. See if you can follow its path.

HEART THROB! Add the following colors neatly to the timely party scene above: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Dk. blue. 7—Dk. purple. 8—Dk. brown.

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT CLIMBS THE MOUNTAIN IN SEARCH OF AN OLD HERMIT WHO WILL SHOW HIM HUMILITY. HE HAS A VAGUE FEELING THAT HE IS BEING WATCHED, BUT HIS CHIEF CONCERN IS THE GREAT FISSURE THAT YAWNS BEFORE HIM.

HALFWAY ACROSS VAL STOPS IN HORROR: ON THE CLIFFSIDE, STRANGE LITTLE CREATURES ARE UNFASTENING THE LINE. "NO! NO!" HE SCREAMS. THEY SEEM TO HEAR...

... BUT THEY DO NOT LET GO. INSTEAD THE IMPS SPICE LONGER ROPES TO EACH END OF VAL'S LINE. "WISH," THEIR LEADER, COMMANDS IN SOME CURIOUS TONGUE. SLOWLY, STRAINING AGAINST HIS WEIGHT, THEY LOWER PRINCE VALIANT INTO THE ABYSS.

"WELCOME, WELCOME, WELCOME," A VOICE ECHOES FROM BELOW. MOMENTS LATER AN OLD MAN OF INHUMAN STRENGTH PLUCKS VAL FROM THE LIFELINE. THEY ARE DEEP INSIDE THE MOUNTAIN'S BOWELS. "WHAT IS THIS PLACE?" ASKS VAL WHEN HE FINDS HIS VOICE.

THE OLD MAN SMILES SADLY. "UNDER THIS PILE OF ROCK LIE ALL OF MAN'S FOLLIES AND SORROWS. COME, I WILL SHOW YOU."

THE HERMIT FUMBLES WITH HIS KEYS AND SUDDENLY VAL STANDS AT THE EDGE OF A VAST RESERVOIR. A SALTY DRIZZLE COATS HIS FACE. "HERE IS WHERE ALL OF MANKIND'S TEARS GATHER AFTER THEY ARE SHED," THE OLD MAN EXPLAINS. "EVERY DAY I PRAY FOR DROUGHT, BUT IT NEVER COMES."

DO YOU TWO GENIUSES HAVE AN EXHIBIT FOR THE SCHOOL SCIENCE FAIR?

I MADE A CONCENTRATED ROCKET-FUEL PILL!

WHAT DO YOU HAVE, JUG?

A HEADACHE!

I TOOK THIS ASPIRIN WITH A GLASS OF WATER!

ASPIRIN? THAT WAS MY ROCKET-FUEL PILL!

PUT A NOSE CONE ON HIM AND AIM HIM OUT THE WINDOW!

WHAT DO YOU BOYS HAVE FOR OUR SCIENCE FAIR?

WELL, THIS NOON WE HOPE TO PUT A MEATBALL IN ORBIT!

NONSENSE! IT'S TRUE! YOU KNOW HERBERT ORBIT? HE'S HAVING SPAGHETTI AND MEATBALLS FOR LUNCH!

THEN WE MAY DEMONSTRATE OUR ATOMIC REACTOR!

REALLY?

WE FOUND AN OLD MOVIE OF THE ACTOR, TOM MIX! WE'RE GONNA RERUN IT!

GET IT? A-TOM-MIX RE-ACTOR!

OR WE HAVE CLIPS ON PARTIAL TRIPS TO THE MOON--SOON!

YES! NOT A FULL-MOON SHOT! BUT A SORT OF A HALF-MOON SHOT!

IN OTHER WORDS... WHAT YOU TWO ARE SAYING IS... YOU DON'T HAVE A PLAN THING FOR THE FAIR?

WE THOUGHT YOU WOULD GIVE US AN IDEA FOR AN EXHIBIT, SIR!

YEAH!

WELL, THERE GO THE MEN OFF INTO THE CORNER...

THEY DO IT AT EVERY PARTY

WELL, I'M NOT GOING TO STAND FOR IT!

YOU GOTTA HIT HARD!

HÄGAR!!

YOU PROMISED ME THAT AT THIS PARTY THE MEN WOULDN'T GET OFF AND TALK BUSINESS ALL NIGHT!

I'M SORRY, DEAR. I FORGOT...

DON'T DO IT AGAIN!

AXES BEAT SWORDS! JAVELINS! NAW!

HÄGAR!! YOU'RE DOING IT AGAIN!!!

NO, WE'RE NOT...

...WHO IS FROM THE NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE...

BUT IN JUST PENALIZING, NOT EJECTING PLAYERS WHO FIGHT, THE NHL IMPLIES THAT FIGHTING IS A NATURAL ELEMENT OF THE GAME.

FIGHTING IS TACTICALLY APPROVED IN HOCKEY, TANK...

THE GAME IS BY NATURE SO FRUSTRATING THAT WITHOUT THE RELEASE OF FIGHTING, PLAYERS MIGHT INJURE EACH OTHER MORE SEVERELY.

WE THINK OF FIGHTING AS ANOTHER WAY TO MAKE OUR JOBSITE SAFER AND TO ENHANCE THE WORK EXPERIENCE.

SOUNDS GOOD. NEXT TIME I GET FRUSTRATED AT MY JOB, I'LL PUNCH OUT THE GUY SITTING AT THE NEXT DESK.

I GUARANTEE THAT'LL MAKE BOTH OF YOU FEEL BETTER.

*FOR THE GHOST WHO WALKS.

READY, ALL? ER... I'D BETTER RADIO AHEAD THAT WE HAVE AN EXTRA GUEST.

THAT WON'T BE NECESSARY, PILOT.

ON SECOND THOUGHT... YOU'RE RIGHT, MISTER WALKER. ALL ABOARD! HEY...

WE CAN ONLY SEAT TWO PASSENGERS!

WITH ALL THAT LUGGAGE... WE CAN ONLY SEAT TWO PASSENGERS!

YOU'RE NOT LEAVING ME! I PAID!

SO DID I!

NO PROBLEM.

ME... ON HIS LAP? ARE YOU KIDDING?

HE CAN SIT ON HIS LAP.

I NEVER KID.

SO I SEE, MISTER WALKER.

AM I GLAD TO GET RID OF THOSE THUGS, ESPECIALLY THAT MISTER WALKER!

MISTER WALKER... I HOPE YOU KNOW WHAT YOU'RE DOING... THEY'RE A ROUGH CROWD DOWN THERE.

SO I HEAR.

BUZANTA... "CROOKS' HAVEN!"

THERE IT IS!

CONT'D.

WE NEED A DECENT LIGHT IN HERE...

I DON'T KNOW WHY MORE PEOPLE DON'T USE FLUORESCENT LIGHTS.

THEY USE LESS ELECTRICITY...

THEY LAST LONGER.

I CAN'T THINK OF A SINGLE REASON WHY EVERYONE DOESN'T USE THEM...

THERE'S ONE.

FLASH GORDON

by Dan Barry

A WAVE OF POWERFUL ENERGY ASSAILS FLASH'S STARSHIP.

SUDDENLY, THE STARSHIP MAKES A DIMENSION-LEAP FROM HYPERSPACE...

...BACK TO NORMAL THRUST-DRIVERS.

WE'RE STILL IN ONE PIECE, FLASH!

YOU BROUGHT US THROUGH!

OUR SAFETY... THE SHIP'S SAFETY... IS SECONDARY!

WE'VE A JOB TO DO!

THAT THING HAS DESTROYED A STARSHIP... AND ALMOST GOT US!

WE'VE GOT TO STOP IT... BEFORE IT NEARS EARTH!

HOW, FLASH...?

EVEN OUR PROBE VEHICLES HAVEN'T GOTTEN NEAR IT!

TAKE OVER COMMAND, MAJOR! I'LL BE GONE A WHILE!

FLASH! YOU CAN'T GO IT ALONE! THAT'S SUICIDE!

MAYBE! BUT OUR WHOLE PLANET... EVERYTHING WE KNOW... MAY BE AT STAKE!

NEXT: BLIND SPOT!
