The Redevelopment Commission said in its annual report to the city that "all four urban renewal projects have been substantially completed as planned and completed within the budget allocation."

The report, submitted each year to the mayor and city council, stated, "The most significant action of the year was the agreement by the city and the commission to close out the remaining urban renewal projects."

According to the report, signed by commission chairman Dave Gordon and approved at last night's meeting, "each of the projects has resulted in a cash surplus now estimated at a million and a half dollars in additional funds for use in the city Community Development program."

"In addition, there is approximately $500,000 in disposal parcels remaining in the Central Business District and the Southside area, the proceeds of which will be turned directly over to the city as the property is closed out," the report continued. The annual document said a complete report will be furnished following close-out of the last project in April.

The report mentioned, "Private investment continues in the redevelopment areas with completion of the North State Savings and Loan Building, the addition to the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association building, completion of the T & C Co. office building at Third and Washington Streets, and construction of a new medical clinic in the Southside urban renewal area."

"In addition, 12 new private homes have been completed in the Southside neighborhood, bringing the total to 47. It is encouraging to note also that construction has started on four new homes in the West Meadowbrook area, indicating the private market is reinvesting in that neighborhood for the first time," the commission reported.

The city officials were told that "total private development generated in the four urban renewal areas is now approaching the $10 million mark, which will have a significant effect in future revenue to the city."

The commission, the report stated, "exceeded the 1979 activity resulting in clearing of right-of-way for construction of 14th Street improvements. The first phase is almost complete and we will be ready to commence the final phase on schedule."

Joe Laney, executive director, told commissioners that the agency is awaiting word from the Department of Housing and Urban Development on approval of close-out procedures for the urban renewal projects here. The final close-out date is scheduled for April 10, he said.

The CPA audit of urban renewal activities has been completed, Laney noted, and no findings or exceptions for (Please turn to Page 8)

Dwyer Flies To Freedom

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — American writer Cynthia Dwyer, convicted of espionage and deported from Iran after nine months in prison, flew to freedom today in a plane packed with Iranian workers and peasants. She landed in this Persian Gulf sheikdom on her way home and was whisked away in a police car, declining to talk to reporters.

Mrs. Dwyer, 49, flew to Dubai, 700 miles south of Tehran on a regularly scheduled Iranair flight after Iranian officials delayed her departure nearly 24 hours. Markus Hirsiger of the staff of the Swiss Embassy in Tehran escorted her, the Swiss Foreign Office said.

U.S. Ambassador William Wollie and the U.S. consul to Dubai, Tom Dowling, met her at the airport.

"Mrs. Dwyer is well, and has expressed a desire not to meet the press," said a U.S. Embassy spokesman. "She has no itinerary, but she is on her way home."

Reporters were not allowed near the plane, but passengers said Mrs. Dwyer sat among the Iranian workers on the jetliner. The plane arrived more than an hour late because of delays at Tehran's Mehrabad airport.

One passenger said Mrs. Dwyer was wearing a skirt and blouse and her head was covered by a scarf.

Reese Hart Is Leaving Pitt Commission

Reese Hart Jr., who has served as executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission for the past six years, submitted his resignation at a special session of the board to be effective March 13.

Hart, it was announced, is leaving the county to become director of marketing services for Peirson and Whitman, consulting architects and engineers of Raleigh.

The chairman of the 16-member commission, Bruce Beasley Jr., commented, "We are very disappointed and we accept his decision to leave with regret. Reese Hart has worked hard to promote the goals and the objectives of our commission and he has accomplished these things in a highly professional manner."

Beasley added, "I know I speak for the commission members and the Board of County Commissioners when I say that he will be missed."

Commenting on his decision, Hart said that, "Leaving Pitt County was a difficult decision but I know that the excellent work being done by the commission members will be carried on. Being able to serve the citizens of this area has been a warm and personal experience, and I will be leaving many close friends who have helped me professionally."

Beasley said that effective immediately, a special three-member executive director selection committee has been appointed to secure applicants for the commission post.

During Hart's tenure with the commission, capital investments to Pitt County in new and expanded industry grew by over $86 million, with over 1,400 new and expanded industrial jobs being added to the area. Such firms as McGraw-Edison, Electrical Utilities Co., T.R.W., Ajax Magnethermic and Procter & Gamble's "Pampers" operation located in the county during this period.

He is presently president of the North Carolina Industrial Developers Association and a member of the board of directors of the Eastern North Carolina Development Association.

Excellence Fund Set Up

Thomas A. Bennett, regional vice president of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., has announced the establishment of a Wachovia Fund for Excellence for the ECU School of Medicine.

Accepting the contribution of $25,000 to initiate the fund were Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer and senior officials of the medical school.

Brewer, in expressing appreciation for the gift, noted the Fund for Excellence will enhance the university's commitment to providing quality medical services to the people of North Carolina, "especially those in our eastern rural region where the need for adequate, modern medical care remains great."

"The university and medical school are dedicated to excellence, and we deeply appreciate the generosity and confidence shown by Wachovia and Tom Bennett in helping us achieve our goals," said Brewer, who also recognized

Bennett as a "distinguished alumnus of ECU."

In his presentation Bennett praised the medical school for the "great benefits it is providing to Eastern North Carolina" and other parts of the state. "We are proud to establish the Fund for Excellence to assist the school in its efforts," Bennett said.

Medical School Dean William E. Laupus said the fund will support the expansion of residency training programs and strengthen programs for disadvantaged students.

Also attending the presentation was Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, president of the ECU Medical Foundation. Monroe acknowledged the continuing interest and support shown by Wachovia's leaders in the development of the medical school.

"As the Fund for Excellence grows, we anticipate that other members of the business community in our region will also join in supporting the medical school and its goals," said Monroe.

Polish Supreme Court Rules Out Independent Farm Union

By ROLAND PRINZ

Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) —

Poland's Supreme Court

ruled today that private farmers could not form the independent trade union they sought but could form an association. The decision came after a government

shakeup in which Defense

Minister Wojciech

Jaruzelski, regarded as a moderate, was named Polish premier.

The court ruling, an apparent attempt to find a compromise between the farmers' demands and

Communist Party leaders

who oppose a union of farmers, followed Warsaw

Radio announcement of the end of a general strike in Jelenia

Gora and suspension of

walkouts scheduled in the Silesian coal mines.

In the complicated

decision, the court said the case was out of its jurisdiction

because farmers work on their own, privately-owned land and are therefore not employees of an organization. It sent the case back to a lower court.

Lech Walesa, head of the Solidarity independent trade union which backs the farmers' demand for a Rural Solidarity, called the decision a "draw." Asked by farmers if they should register as an association, Walesa replied, "of course."

The government shakeup came at a Central Committee meeting Monday. Jaruzelski replaces Premier Jozef Pinkowski who took over in August at the height of nationwide strikes.

At the meeting, Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania warned that Soviet patience was wearing thin. He appealed to the Polish army to "guard our independence" and workers to "stop the anarchy." Kania urged farmers to ignore the call to unionize and "frustrate the designs of those who want to break agricultural self-government."

It was not immediately clear what effect the court ruling would have on the farmers, who had appealed to the Supreme Court after a lower court denied them a union charter. They had spoken of boycotting food supply centers if their demand was not met.

About 5,000 farmers gathered outside the court listened to Walesa explain the decision and then dispersed quickly for a rally planned before the court hearing.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Antoni Filcek said the case would be sent back to a lower Warsaw court and that the farmers' group could be registered as an association. The high court said that based on Polish law, a trade union can only be formed of employees of enterprises.

But Filcek said that Rural Solidarity is in fact a trade union as it groups people of the same profession. However, he added, it is not a trade union of employees and therefore is out of the court's jurisdiction.

Waldemar Kuczynski, legal adviser to Solidarity, said "the situation is not too good in that Rural Solidarity was not registered but this was what we expected all along."

"However, the judge's declaration that the group is a union is important from the point of view of our commission drafting a bill on trade unions."

Judge Filcek is also on that commission and we shall push forward the law so as to be able to cover also Rural Solidarity," he said.

Polish farmers own 75 percent of the land and produce about 80 percent of Poland's food. They are officially represented within the government by the United Peasants party, which has a half million members.

Organizers of Rural Solidarity claimed they have between 600,000 and 1 million members.

Poland's Ministry of Agriculture has been urging for months that farmers form an association rather than a union, but farmers claimed that associations under Polish law lack the status and rights of a union.

Warsaw Radio said the strike in southwestern Jelenia Gora was called off after the government agreed to lease a sanatorium for party and government officials to provincial authorities for use as a public hospital until a new provincial hospital is opened.

As many as 100,000 members of Solidarity were reported to have staged sit-in strikes Monday in their plants and offices in Jelenia Gora.

WITNESS USE OF ANSWERING SERVICE?

Maybe people would be more willing to own up to being a witness to an auto accident, crime or whatever if the courts weren't so wasteful of the individual's time. I know a witness to a wreck here who lives over 100 miles away. Several times he had to get off work and come here for the benefit of a person who had been a total stranger, only to find that the case would not be heard on the appointed day. Isn't there some way that this jury answering service can be used by witnesses in court cases and possibly even for defendants out on bail? It could save much frustration and increase productivity of our society if individuals, especially witnesses, weren't so put-upon by the courts. As a by-product, this measure might even provide for less distraction and more order in the court rooms, which often are crowded, noisy places to be.

Sandra Gaskins, Clerk of Superior Court, Third Judicial District, told Hotline that she would take the matter up with Honorable Robert D. Rouse Jr., Senior Resident Superior Court Judge of the Third Judicial District. She called back this past week to say that Judge Rouse has said that the jury answering service now in use in this district does not seem to him to be the best tool for providing for convenience of witnesses, which he agrees is a legitimate problem. He asks that the district attorney's office, the public defender's office and individual attorneys do everything possible to keep witnesses advised on court dates and on telephone stand-by, rather than have them off the job and in court unnecessarily.

Anyone have other specific suggestions for solutions to this and other problems of the court may contact Sandra Gaskins or Bert M. Montague, P. O. Box 1425, Greenville, N. C. 27834.

ERA Referendum Proposal Offered N.C. Senate

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Legislation calling for a statewide referendum on the

Equal Rights Amendment

was filed for introduction in the state Senate today, and confident ERA opponents

said it was part of their strategy to kill the issue again in North Carolina.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Kings Mountain, an outspoken opponent of ERA, sponsored the bill.

"I introduced this same thing in 1975, 1977 and 1979,"

Harris said of his referendum proposal. "The pro-ERA people have never let it out of committee. They're the ones that have killed it."

The vote would not be binding on the Legislature, which has killed ERA ratification proposals in the four previous General Assembly sessions. The vote would instead be seen as an indication of support or opposition for the amendment by North Carolina voters.

The measure was filed in a brief Monday night session, as both the House and Senate met only briefly and handled little legislation. Among the other new proposals filed were two bills raising legal limits on interest rates on many types of loans.

The ERA proposal would set the referendum in November of 1982 — several months after the deadline for states to ratify the amendment if it is to become part of the U.S. Constitution.

Harris, in an interview, said he would agree to amend the bill to set the referendum this November.

Winterville Gas Line Added To Co. Planning

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — Mayor Walter Dail reported to the town board Monday night a response from North Carolina Natural Gas of Fayetteville had been received concerning a request for a line into Winterville.

Mayor Dail said the letter was sent by William G. Hill, vice-president of sales, and stated, "We reviewed our system studies and the complexities both in construction and financing involved in our system wide expansion plans."

Mayor Dail said the letter went on, "I (Hill) can assure you that Winterville's request will be considered in our long range system expansion plans."

Mayor Dail also commented that it was his understanding that N.C. Natural Gas was planning a line to go toward Kinston, and if that were true, it is probable it would come from Greenville, through Winterville.

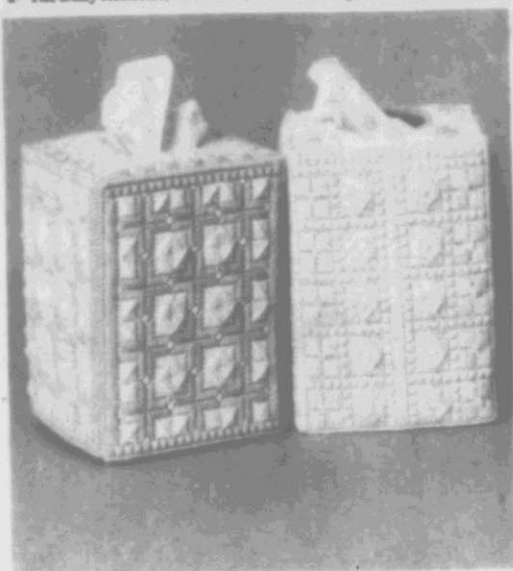

Mayor Dail told the board community watch signs have been placed at the entrances to the town and the job is complete. The signs were placed by the town at the request of the Ruritan Club.

In other business before the board, Mrs. Lois Wilson, representing the Heart Fund requested a permit for door-to-door solicitation, February 22, and for Boy Scouts to sell balloons. Permission was granted.

A public hearing for the annexation of the new Pinewood Village apartments was requested in a letter to the board by Shelton Weeks and Bobby Mellon, of Freedom Family Homes.

NEEDLEPOINT... a special gift in pastel yarn.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Soft pastel yarns and sculptured needlepoint stitches decorate covers for boutique-size tissue boxes, giving an air of understated elegance to bath or dressing rooms.

You may be a beginning needlepointer now, but with Pat's "Learn-A-Stitch" leaflet, you quickly will learn to create charming gift items such as these tissue-box covers using plastic canvas and knitting yarns.

Directions include diagrams and charts for seven pattern stitches plus construction details for a variety of gift, bazaar and prize items.

To obtain your copy of the Learn-A-Stitch Leaflet, send your request for Leaflet No. LS-745 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-745 by sending check or money order for $12 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains the instruction leaflet, three shades of yarn and enough plastic 10-mesh canvas to make as many as four tissue-box covers or a larger number of smaller items. Please specify your choice of any three of the following colors: light or medium blue, baby or shell pink, soft yellow, jade green, light gold, brown, rust, eggshell, coral or off-white.

Plastic canvas is a relative newcomer on the needlepoint scene and is becoming more popular with every year. It does have its own set of advantages and disadvantages, however.

Chief among the advantages is the ease of working and assembling. It does not pull out of shape so it requires no blocking. In fact, blocking with a steam iron is an absolute no-no, as the canvas is likely to melt under the heat of the iron.

For the same reason, don't try to use a fusible fabric (the type that is to be ironed on) for a lining or interlining.

Plastic canvas is not suitable for pillows or other soft items nor would I recommend it for anything you expect to be of heirloom quality. It simply is not as long-wearing as canvas made from traditional fibers. It is particularly well-suited for items that need a certain amount of stiffness, and it is simple to finish and assemble your own projects. For most items, you simply trim away any rough edges and join the pieces together with a simple overcasting stitch.

The more experienced needlepointer may prefer to join pieces with a plaited binding stitch, but the overcast or "lacing" method works equally well. To do this, you simply pass your threaded needle through an edge hole on each of two pieces, take the needle to the back and pass it through the next set of holes, covering the edge as you do so. Simply repeat this process all along the edges to be joined or finished. In some cases, you will need to work with a double strand of yarn to cover the edge completely, and you will need to take two or three stitches at each corner for good coverage.

Still another edging stitch is one I call Terry's "Mistake Stitch." Edging, named for a friend who thought she was doing one type of edging and developed this one instead — by mistake! It turned out to be a very happy mistake, however, as this is a most effective edging. To work this edging, bring needle up in second hole from top; take needle to back of work and bring it up in top hole. For the third stitch, take needle to back, skip over last two stitches made, skip over one empty hole and bring needle up in next empty hole. For the fourth stitch, take needle to back of work and bring it up in the empty hole you skipped when making the third stitch. Keep repeating stitches three and four until edge is covered or joined.

When you are experimenting with new stitches in needlepoint, knitting or crochet, don't automatically rip out a mistake. If you can, repeat the "mistake" several times and see how you like the effect. Who knows? You may become the originator of a new stitch or technique!

Marriage 'In God's Eye' Good Enough

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: If you did nothing more in 1980 than what you did for me, you will have earned your place in heaven.

I wrote to you saying I was the widow of a retired railroad man and that four years ago I had fallen in love with a fine gentleman who had a limited income. We wanted very much to marry, but if we did, I would lose my widow's pension, which I needed to survive. Because both of us were too old-fashioned to "shack up" as some younger couples do, we just went together, each maintaining a separate apartment, although living together would have made more sense.

You advised me to get in touch with Chaplain R.A. Masse in Lawrence, Mass., saying he would perform an "In God's Eye" marriage to accommodate people in our circumstances.

Well, I did. My gentleman friend and I went to see him, and Abby, the ceremony he performed for us was every bit as spiritual and beautiful as my very first!

Now I feel that God has truly blessed this union, and I can't thank you enough.

HAPPY IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR HAPPY: I have heard from couples in Rhode Island, Florida, New York and Maine telling me that they, too, went to Lawrence, Mass., to be married by Chaplain Masse. He has recently enlisted the help of chaplains in every state of the union (and Canada) who will perform the same service. Interested parties may write to: Associated Chaplains, P.O. Box 1077-C, Lawrence, Mass. 01842, for information. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to say a few words about the "May-I-Borrow-Your-Husband-for-This-Dance"-type woman.

There's a lady we know who never waits to be asked to dance. She asks other husbands to dance with her. And as if that's not bad enough, she keeps them on the dance floor for at least three dances! And when the gentleman returns her to her own husband, she says, "Oh no, not yet!"

This lady is at least 60 years old, which is old enough to know better. I might add, there is nothing wrong with her own husband or his dancing, so there's no excuse for her actions.

I can only say, "Enough already," and hope she reads this, as she has borrowed my husband too often for too long. Sign me...

BURNED UP IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR BURNED: If the shoe fits the lady you had in mind, let's hope she wears it — to dance with her own husband.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Valentine Dance Set

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. will sponsor a Pre-Valentine's Day Extravaganza Friday at Wright Auditorium, ECU campus.

Tony Perry of Q97 will be the guest disco jockey.

Admission will be $2.00 per person or $3.00 per couple. A portion of the profit will be given to the United Negro College Fund.

The dance will start at 10 p.m. and continue until two o'clock.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If the American Family is becoming an endangered species, you can bet one of things that killed it is the dinner hour.

When it was conceived, the dinner hour was to be a gathering of every member of the family who would sit around and exchange pleasantries and news of what each had done that day.

I know that's the way it's supposed to be because I saw it once on the Donna Reed Show.

We have never had a family dinner that did not sound like we were hosting a lynching. It was inevitable to touch upon who did what to whom, who did it first, and who would get a room to themselves after they were sentenced.

The criticism of "family meals" is that "this is not a fit topic to discuss at dinner-time." As I see it, no one seems to know what is a fit subject to talk about at the dinner table. There are few things that the entire family can get into.

Children tend to talk about things that take away your interest in food — and living. At one meal alone, I heard a description of the underside of the tongue, a rumor of what popular food contained rat's nostrils, what pureed peas remind you of when you look at them from a distance, and what happens to the dog's stool when he eats leftover chicken.

Men prefer to talk about money. Within minutes they can make you feel guilty for asking for seconds on the salt. They also take the opportunity to lay on the family their famous lectures: "An 'E' on the Gas Gauge Does Not Mean Evacuate." "Why Do We Heat the Front Porch by Gas in the Winter?" "Don't Reach Out and Touch Somebody Unless It's Collect," and the all-time favorite, "When I Go to the Poorhouse, I'll Have to Call a Cab to Get There."

Mothers use the togetherness of the meal to discuss their doormat status ("Why don't you just put a key under my tongue and stand on me?") and to tell their children that no one ever amounted to anything who smoothed a lumpy bed with a coat hanger. I have come to the conclusion there are no "safe" topic areas at the family dinner table. No matter what you hit upon, every member of the family will react in character.

The other night, a guest said at our table, "I read where the Snail Darter is still on the endangered species list."

There was a moment of silence before one child said: "Aren't they the ones that bled through the eyes when they die?"

My husband said, "When they go up to $10 a pound, knowing our kids, they'll develop a Snail Darter deficiency."

I said, "They aren't the only ones who have become endangered. So are women who pick up towels after a 16-year-old."

The family that eats together... shouldn't.

Actions Taken At Meet Of Ayden Commissioners

Winterville Board..

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — A petition for street improvements in the Pines Subdivision was accepted and a piece of property on North Lee Street was rezoned from commercial to residential as the Town Board of Commissioners met Monday night.

A preliminary resolution approving street improvements on Willow Drive, Cedar Lane and Pinewood Drive was passed and a public hearing on the assessments for these improvements was set for March 9, the next monthly meeting.

A small piece of property on North Lee Street was rezoned from B-2 commercial to RA-8 residential after a public hearing was held on the change. According to Town Clerk Ralph Ford, the land is owned by James Tripp, who requested the change to build houses on the property. Ford said the town planning board concurred with the rezoning request.

Commissioner Dixon objected to the change, saying, "We shouldn't rezone just because someone says they plan at some time to build houses on the lots. We should rezone only when the actual need arises."

A motion made by Dixon to not rezone the property was not seconded. A second motion approving the rezoning was accepted.

A public hearing was held to discuss the paving assessments for Boulevard, Turnage and Watermelon streets. Town Clerk Ralph Ford reported that the assessment for Watermelon and Turnage streets amounted to $3.56 per foot and the assessment for Boulevard was slightly higher at $3.92 per foot. These figures were accepted by the board.

The board also voted to hold the town's tax lien sale in May rather than June. "It is my suggestion that we drop down to May so the advertisement of the sale will be in the newspaper in April," said the town clerk. "I have many people that want to know when the sale will be so they can pay their taxes and not have their name in the paper."

An agreement with

Seaboard Coastline Railroad authorizing installation and replacement of a six-inch water line under the tracks on First Street was approved. The agreement included specifications the town must adhere to when replacing the pipe.

In other business, the town board reported the following:

— Bids for the Housing Project will be opened on February 17 at 3 p.m.

— Bids on around 2,000 plastic roll-out refuse containers will be opened on February 23.

— The fuel charge for town residents on next month's bills will be $3 per 1000 KWH.

— Recreation Director Gil Davis reported that the town's bus should be ready to operate by this week. He asked the board to officially express its thanks to Larry Regal for repair work done on the bus, and to the Winterville Jaycees and the Ayden First Baptist Church for offering the use of their buses.

— Approval of a revised underground electric policy was made. According to Utilities Director Mike Finney, the revised policy contains no major changes other than cost updates.

— Tentative approval was made of a low bid from Rigby Electric for electric wire.

Claim Credit Delaying Plant

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Environmentalists have claimed credit for the latest delay in the licensing of Duke Power Co.'s McGuire nuclear power plant near Charlotte.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has scheduled a public hearing on the power plant for Feb. 24 at the Charlotte Public Library.

Jack Riley, a spokesman for the Carolina Environmental Study Group, said the NRC has agreed to hear at least four objections and perhaps two others.

The coalition opposing the nuclear plant includes such groups as Carolina Action, the Audubon Society, the Sierra Club and the League of Women Voters.

Some discussion was heard on the responsibility for street lights in the complex, but alderman E. C. Hines said this could be probably worked out at the public hearing.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles was instructed by the mayor to set a public hearing for annexation of the apartments.

In another request presented to the board, Oscar Edwards, asked that a portion of Division Street be taken into the city limits. Division Street is perpendicular to Church Street.

Edwards said duplex apartments are planned if financing is available, and if not, single family dwellings are planned. A motion for a public hearing was heard by the board, and approved. Town Clerk Nobles was instructed to include the Division Street hearing along with the apartment complex hearing.

Winterville Fire Chief Carlton Branch asked the board to consider the purchase of 1000 feet of three-inch fire hose. Branch said the hose would be purchased on a county contract at $2.10 per foot, from White Enterprises of Winterville. Branch added since there were so many feet involved, this was a quantity price and was very good buy for the department.

Chief Branch also requested the board consider the purchase of four new rechargeable hand lights for the fire trucks replacing older ones that were worn out.

The board approved the request, pending approval by the rural fire association.

Mayor Dail also ask the board to release the funds for the water supply grant project for the Sylvania - Church St connector. The board approved the request.

ERA Referendum....

But Harris also acknowledged he would like to see the bill amended even further, to eliminate the referendum and make it an bill calling for outright ratification. That way, Harris said, he believed the full Senate would then kill ERA and lay the issue to rest.

That strategy was followed in 1979, when Harris' bill was amended by a judiciary committee dominated by ERA foes.

The bill seen as the first formal step by opponents of the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution to force the ERA issue before the Legislature, where opponents believe they hold the upper hand over supporters.

"I'd been hoping the ERA folks would put a bill in," Harris said. "But we've been here a month now and they haven't. They want to wait for some of us opponents to be gone."

A leading House opponent of ERA, Rep. Mary Pegg, R-Winston-Salem, said she decided not to introduce a ratification bill in the House — which she had planned to do in order to force a vote. Instead, she said, she hoped the Senate would use Harris' bill to kill ERA.

"I feel like we have the momentum going for us," she said.

The bill is to be referred to a committee this afternoon. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, in an interview last week in anticipation of Harris' bill, said he probably would send it to a judiciary committee again rather than to the Constitutional Amendments Committee, which routinely handles ERA ratification bills.

Ratification by three more states is required if ERA is to become a part of the Constitution.

Interest Rates
A pair of bills that would raise legal limits on interest rates for many types of loans was filed in the Senate. The bills would raise interest rates even further, in some cases, than a pair of bills previously introduced by the same sponsors.

Sen. James Garrison, D-Albemarle, primary sponsor of the legislation, said the bills were requested by the banking industry.

The proposals would raise interest rate limits on second mortgages and installment loans, such as auto loans made by banks, under $25,000, and on contract loans of that amount.

Those type loans now carry rates of 12 percent to 15 percent. The legislation would raise them to as much as 18 percent, along with a floating rate of 6 percent above the Federal Reserve's discount rate to banks, whichever is higher.

The major change in the latest bills is that it would allow that floating rate to go even higher, to include surcharges sometimes added by the Federal Reserve. The discount rate, the rate banks pay when they borrow, is now 13 percent, Garrison said.

There currently are no surcharges being added, but they have gone as high as 3 percent, Garrison said. That means the limit on those loans now would be 19 percent, or as much as 22 percent if surcharges were added.

Cities

The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill allowing cities to sell land or property to the federal government without requiring bids.

Taxes

The House unanimously voted tentative approval to a bill that would make North Carolina tax law conform with federal tax law on capital gains taxes on installment sales.

WHAT TO DO BEFORE THE BURGULAR COMES

— The North Carolina Crime Prevention Van, on display at Pitt Plaza Monday and at Rose High School on Tuesday, had numerous exhibits and pamphlets explaining how individuals, neighborhoods and towns can cut down their crime rate. Sue Harris, above, from the N.C. Crime Prevention Department, checks out one of the messages on the phone displays. "The information is geared towards youth," she said. "We are trying to make them understand the importance of crime prevention and impress upon them the consequences of participating in criminal activities." The van was sponsored in the area by the Greenville Exchange Club, according to President Howard Wilson. "This is our recognition of Crime Prevention Week, February 9-14," he commented. "We feel this van is a valuable aid to communities in protecting homes." The van includes displays on different types of locks, how to mark valuables, and how to report crimes to the proper authorities. (Reflector Photo by Mary Schulken)

Judge Asked To Erase Collaboration Verdict

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C.

(AP) — Prosecutors were going to court today to counter defense contentions that Pfc. Robert Garwood's collaboration conviction should be thrown out because the jury ignored evidence the Marine was driven insane in Viet Cong prison camps.

Judge Col. R.E. Switzer recessed Monday's hearing until today to give prosecutors time to prepare a response to the defense motion.

Switzer was expected to schedule the sentencing phase of Garwood's court-martial today. The defense plans to present several witnesses — possibly Garwood himself — in an effort to persuade the jury to give him a light sentence.

Prosecutors have indicated they will present no witnesses.

Garwood could receive up to life in prison on five counts of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam.

The same five-officer jury of Vietnam veterans that convicted Garwood of collaboration Thursday will sentence him after hearing evidence this week.

The jury also pronounced Garwood innocent of maltreating a fellow prisoner, but found him guilty on the lesser charge of assault.

Garwood's chief defense counsel, John Lowe, told Switzer on Monday that a half dozen psychiatrists who testified during the 12-week court-martial never presented any evidence to refute defense claims that the 34-year-old Indiana native was brainwashed and tortured and did not know his actions as a prisoner of war were wrong.

Arguing the government had the burden of proving Garwood was mentally able to tell right from wrong, Lowe said, "In the question of partial mental capacity, there is no contradiction."

Lowe also argued Switzer should order Garwood acquitted even though the case was decided by a jury last week.

"Taken in the light most favorable to the government, nothing is still nothing," he said. "If the evidence is not sufficient, it doesn't matter if deliberations were made or not."

Garwood was a 19-year-old jeep driver when he was captured by the communists near Da Nang in 1965. He returned to the United States in 1979 after passing a note to a Finnish man in Hanoi.

His lawyers never disputed charges that he acted as an interpreter, indoctrinator and armed guard for other POWs or that he wore the uniform of his captors.

Entire Police Force Disbands

LAC DU FLAMBEAU, Wis. (AP) — The entire police force for this community of 2,100 has left the job — all three of them.

Town Chairman Charles Francis said Monday that the tiny force for the only town within the Lac du Flambeau Indian Reservation was disbanded to save money. The officers were paid about $15,000 a year, he said.

Officials were negotiating a contract to have two Vilas County sheriff's deputies patrol the town from 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. Police calls otherwise would be relayed to the Eagle River sheriff's department 40 miles away, Francis said.

On many hands declarer can assure his contract by selecting a "sure-trick" line of play. But more often such guarantees are not available. The best declarer can do under these circumstances is to make the percentage play and hope that the cards lie favorably.

North's hand revalued to 13 points in support of spades, just enough for a jump raise. With a minimum opening bid, South had no aspirations so he simply went on to game.

The defenders started with three rounds of clubs, declarer ruffing the third. A diamond loser seemed unavoidable, so the fate of the contract appeared to hinge on the trump suit. If trumps broke evenly, there would be no trump loser and the contract would be assured.

Since there was no point in postponing the inevitable, declarer cashed the ace and king of spades. East's discard of a club was a grievous, but not necessarily a mortal blow. Declarer had spotted that he could still make his contract if the defender with the high trump — in this case, West — had started with only two diamonds. Then the hand could be brought home via a partial strip.

To set the scene, declarer cashed his high hearts, discarding a diamond from dummy on the third round. Next came the ace and king of diamonds.

Now West was thrown on lead with his high trump and the result was most gratifying. All he had left was a heart and a club, so he had to concede a ruff-and-sluff. Declarer thus managed to avoid losing a diamond trick.

Note that declarer could not be sure that this line of play would land the contract. West might have started with a third diamond, in which case he would have been able to set the contract by cashing a diamond.

Nevertheless, declarer's line of play cost nothing and yielded a tangible extra chance of success that was realized because of a fortunate lie of the cards.

Federal Cuts Are Sure

The administration is sending up trial balloons on the cuts it contemplates making in the federal budget.

Some of them will bring howls, and some will cause real hardship for some individuals.

Already some people have been caught in the hiring freeze on federal employees, and stories abound about individuals who have given up jobs based on the promise of a federal position only to find they have been frozen out.

There's more to come. Such programs as Social Security, Medicaid, synthetic fuels, funds for the arts and public broadcasting are among those targeted for cuts. Unemployment programs might be reduced and some farm related programs are said to be in for financial paring.

What has been reported in the way of cuts may not be the way the program will shape up in the final analysis. The administration will run into opposition in Congress and some of the fund reductions will undoubtedly have to be modified.

It is clear, though, that cuts are going to be made and virtually all of us will bear some of the pain.

Cuts From Washington

Gov. Hunt has warned that whatever cuts the Reagan administration makes that affect the states will have to be final for North Carolina.

Public service jobs, food stamps, Medicaid and other programs face the possibility of cuts in the federal budget and Gov. Hunt is warning that there is no money in the state budget to pick up the difference.

Gov. Hunt wants the public prepared for the cuts that may come, but he also obviously wants to be certain that the heat generated by the cuts goes to Washington, rather than Raleigh.

Is Bigger Better?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Ask the typical Tar Heel about Research Triangle Institute and you'll likely conjure up an image of some remote "think tank" nestled in the pineywoods near Durham.

It's unlikely that even Gov. Luther Hodges realized just what would happen to his brainchild when he, 20 years ago, pushed the power structure into giving state backing to a scheme involving the Big Three universities at Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill in a non-profit research organization.

Success can be measured in hundreds of contributions over the years since then as the agency played key roles in space exploration, medicine, computer technology, communications, energy ... an extensive list ... performing research for private corporations and governments at all levels.

Success can also be measured in growth and size. Research Triangle Institute expects to do business totalling $53 million and have a total staff close to 1,300 by next September.

Strong Growth
That isolated think tank is in reality 15 laboratory and office buildings of nearly 36,000 square feet on 180-acre campus in Research Triangle Park.

But does bigger always mean better? RTI President George Herbert at a recent meeting of the board of governors turned their attention to the future.

Last year, growth was 19 percent; and average growth in recent years has been 13 percent.

If that continues, the staff would be nearly 2,200 in 1985; and would pass 4,000 at the end of this decade. Such growth would require spending more than $54 million in building added space of between three-fourths and a million square feet in the next 10 years.

If the Institute were a growth industry "we probably would relish such prospects", Herbert commented.

However, he cautioned, the Institute is not a private corporation with access to capital markets. "We are a not-for-profit corporation, solely dependent on the cash we can generate from our own operations."

The prospects of such

enormous investments in buildings and enlarged staff obviously worry Herbert, who told directors he is not predicting that such growth will happen, nor suggesting that is desirable.

Continued growth is important, Herbert said, to maintain vitality, meet challenges in new research areas, and provide growth opportunities for young staff.

"Over the coming months, however, our management council must address the dual questions: what is manageable growth? and, how do we plan for and operate on a model of manageable growth?"

Decisions
Herbert feels that the institute itself and the leaders of the state's educational and political structures should determine what is desirable for RTI in the future, rather than letting "factors external to the Institute" force unplanned and uncontrolled expansion.

Looking ahead to the Republican administration of President Ronald Reagan, Herbert said he expects both the Congress and the administration to put increased emphasis on research in seeking answers to problems in defense, energy, health, the environment, economic competitiveness, and industrial productivity.

"In recent years, both Congress and industry have become increasingly concerned that the nation's capacity for innovation has been weakening. Now the incoming Reagan administration, sharing that concern, provides a mechanism for coupling Congress

To the editor:

I have read a lot lately about this tax and whiskey by the drink. We have to have tax to operate, but many times they are unfair and unnecessary. Department heads and those in authority would just look around, there are many places where money could be saved. For instance, a department needs one or two bolts or screws for some job, many times three to four men will take a truck and drive to the store to pick this up. We have too much waste in labor and materials.

There are some additional places where tax can be collected. I am a full believer in the church being tax-free, that is the church proper and parking facilities. But when a church adds a secular school and labels it a Christian day school and uses its building for such operations, it should be taxed. The Christian spirit is love and concern for the less fortunate. But in these cases, if a parent in a church can't pay that fee of $65 to $100 per month, then their child can't enjoy the same privileges. The so-called Christian day school was born in defiance of the law, which was desegregation.

According to the teachings of the Bible, the church is here for one reason, to preach the gospel of our Lord to every creature for the salvation of the soul. None of the apostles or Christ ever instituted a secular school or instructed preachers to do so.

I understand that preachers and church have lobbyists before the legislature and city governments lobbying for laws and concessions to suit their own personal desires. This is not the church's calling and these organizations should be taxed just like any other business. Remember, Christ asked Peter on three occasions, Peter, lovest thou me? Peter said, Lord, you know I love you. Jesus said, Feed my sheep. It seems that many preachers read this scripture and take Him to say Fleece my sheep. There is more fleeing than feeding going on.

Concerning whiskey by the drink, I have no use for whiskey at all and I am not pro nor con on this matter. I still contend, if the preachers would spend their time preaching the Word of God and keep the church members out of the whiskey stores, many of the stores and outlets for booze would have to close up. But then I don't reckon they could be able to get free tv appearances, so people couldn't see their faces and enjoy their beautiful smiles.

Strength For Today

GOD'S CLOCK
In this town a man has just entered his 100th year.

We might think that this is a considerable stretch of years, but it is not when viewed in the context of the vast expanse of history. If this man lives through his 100th year, his life will be not one second by God's clock.

So the time is short for every one of us. The Bible calls human life a day of grace. God has put us down into the midst of a struggle and has said to us, "See what

Thunder On The Right

WASHINGTON — Some of my brothers in the conservative cause have come down with the blue and angry blazes. They are suffering the torments known to thousands of despondent high school sophomores. These are the pangs of unrequited love, and my brothers accordingly are sulking.

In their present ill humor, these wounded warriors are not likely to accept advice or consolation from anyone. Their disappointment with Ronald Reagan goes to the very quick. They look at the Washington scene and what do their bloodshot eyes perceive? Retreads and moderates. Used Fords. Middle-agers. They won so much in November! And now, in the winter of their discontent, they have so little.

As gently as possible, let me disabuse them. To listen to Paul Weyrich and Terry Dolan and Howard Phillips and Richard Viguerie, you might suppose that the New Right alone elected Mr. Reagan and transformed the United States Senate. No one doubts that their efforts were influential. Mr. Weyrich is director of the Committee for Survival of a Free Congress. Mr. Dolan heads the National Conservative Political Action Committee. Mr. Phillips runs the Conservative Caucus. And Mr. Viguerie raises great wads of money.

All of them worked like sled dogs in the Republican campaigns. But they tend to forget that others also worked hard for the dear old GOP. More critically, they tend to forget what the presidency of the United States involves. Mr. Reagan cannot be president for the New Right only. If he is to govern effectively, Mr. Reagan must rally support on Capitol Hill from various quarters. And some of these other quarters also have political claims upon him.

One trouble with my far-right brothers — with some of them, anyhow — is that they cannot get used to the idea of governing. They have been out in the cold for so long that they feel uneasy being warm. With them, ideology is everything. This is all very well, so long as the task at hand is winning a debate or pumping up the Young Americans for Freedom. But if the problem is to get Mr. Reagan's tax bill through the House and Senate, ideology isn't everything. Votes are everything.

Let me speak bluntly to my disconsolate brothers. I was fighting for the conservative cause before some of them were born; I was in the trenches while some of them were still in knickers. Out of that experience I would say to them: You're doing pretty damned well.

In Mr. Reagan, conservatives have a principled conservative as president. His instincts, his attitudes, his whole approach to govern-

Committed To Defense

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The surprise presence of Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security assistant, at an unpublicized meeting in Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's Pentagon office Jan. 30 conveyed the unspoken message that Reagan's personal prestige is deeply committed to higher defense spending.

Participants in the closed-door session, held at the unheard of hour of 7:00 that Friday evening were Weinberger, Deputy Secretary Frank Carlucci, David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Stockman's defense aide, William Schneider and Allen.

Allen arrived 20 minutes late, but his presence sent unmistakable word to those two novitiates of military matters, Weinberger and Carlucci. The message: Reagan's plan to boost defense spending almost 10 percent for the next five years is essential not only to rebuild American strength but to inform U.S. allies that after 10 years of retreat, the corner has been turned.

"Reagan wants Giscard and Schmidt to know that his election was not an aberration but a profound change," a top aide told us. "This five-year defense plan proves it. It will set the course of the West for the next 20 years."

That optimistic conclusion could prove premature but it explains the elaborate preparations inside the White House to make certain that Weinberger and Carlucci would make no effort to scuttle the preparedness budget crafted by Stockman, Schneider and the non-political technicians inside the OMB.

The strategy worked. Aside from a whispered remark by Carlucci that the new five-year plan, which adds $200 billion to the spending projected by President Carter, is "one hell of a lot of money," the Stockman-White House proposal was approved. Details on precise numbers and types of new weapons remain to be worked out. But the concept of a 9 percent real defense growth over the five-year period was not seriously disputed.

If Congress buys most of this increase in what Reagan calls the "refurbishing" of depleted U.S. military power, a resource base for weapons procurement will be put in place that simply does not exist today. Unlike some of the defense games played during the early Nixon years, this resource base is not designed by Reagan men for bargaining-chip diplomacy with the Kremlin. It aims at fast production of real weapons.

How strongly dedicated the neophyte defense team of Weinberger ("Cap the Knife" in a previous incarnation as Richard Nixon's budget director) and Carlucci is to this concept is still not wholly clear. But the Pentagon's new overlords do now understand Reagan's personal commitment. Moreover, defense transition chief William van Cleave, even though discarded, is still having an impact. He could hurl damaging verbal warheads at Weinberger from the Republican right in the event of attempts from his office to undermine the 9 percent growth budget.

To Reagan, Allen and Secretary of State Alexander Haig, the substantial Reagan increase in the Carter budget is essential to put flesh on the bare bones of Reagan's new, activist foreign policy. An example is the private talks now starting between the U.S. and France to block Libya's Col. Qaddafi from expanding his new power base in central Africa, possibly from Chad toward Sudan — a state now anchored to the West. French President Giscard d'Estaing, skeptical about the Reagan mandate, talks cooperation with Washington but acts with caution, uncertain of where the U.S. is really going.

Householders Can Understand

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—What's the fuss about raising the U.S. debt ceiling, when to raise it has been one of the more enduring activities of a congressional leadership that often is marked by inconsistency?

Time after time the ceiling has been raised with little more than a sigh from conservative congressmen, and with almost no media recognition. It wasn't controversial; it didn't even seem important.

Now it has become big news, presumably because it is one of the first requests of a president dedicated to cutting federal spending. If he intends to cut, say critics, why does he need a higher debt ceiling?

For one thing, because interest on existing debt is something over which the president has little direct control. If interest rates rise, so does the cost of borrowed money. Any householder knows that.

What they sometimes fail to consider is the magnitude of that debt and the cost of financing it. On Feb. 4 the total public debt was $932.03-billion, or about $3 billion less than the existing ceiling.

If congress failed to authorize a $50 billion increase in the ceiling to $985 billion, the president might have been unable to pay federal workers and contractors, and maybe not even the bankers who lent the money. It's a situation understood by today's indebted householders.

To pay that interest requires an almost incomprehensible sum. In December it took $11.89 billion dollars just to pay interest due; in the first three months of the fiscal year the bill was $24 billion.

No working man or woman can possibly relate his or her household expenditures to sums such as that, but they can obtain a relative measurement by comparing government debt today and yesterday.

In 1939, for example, the total national debt of the United States was only $46 billion, or less than what is now paid in annual interest. And if you go way back to 1902, you will find that the total debt for the year was only one-tenth what was spent last December on interest alone.

Comparisons of that sort, however, can tell a very distorted story, as critics of the national debt often have demonstrated. In making the comparisons, economic growth and purchasing power must be considered.

Since 1939 the U.S. population has grown to 226 million people from 131 million, and the total output of goods and services in real terms — that is, with both 1939 and 1980 measured by the same (1972) dollar — has more than quadrupled from about $300 billion. It's a bigger, more productive economy, and understandably it costs more to run.

The chief distorter of most comparisons is the purchasing power of the dollar. Today's dollar is not even 1939's dollar; it is less, and it continues to fall at a rate of roughly 10 percent a year. To use it for comparison purposes, therefore, is like reading a thermometer that has been improperly calibrated. It can only distort the measurement.

Perhaps the biggest criticism of the U.S. debt is really not its size but the way in which it has grown in recent years. Deficit spending became a way of life, especially in the decade of the 1970s, speeding up the rate at which the public debt has increased.

There is now a pervasive feeling that the debt has gotten out of hand, that it is distorting the marketplace, forcing up interest rates and prices, discouraging private initiative and threatening the democracy.

That fear is sometimes expressed this way: The recent swift growth of the national debt forces up interest rates. Higher interest rates make it more expensive to finance the debt. They force it to grow even more.

The consequences of that spiral can lead only to disaster, says the Reagan economic team, because it reduces the nation's economic options and forces decisions that might otherwise not have been made.

They think they have evidence of it: Because the national debt seems to be growing out of control, in part because of huge interest costs, they asked and received Congress' permission to raise the debt limit.

It must have hurt. Politically, it probably did.

'Sunset' Commission Is Being Quietly Scuttled

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Sunset Commission and its small staff have known for weeks that they were coming under scrutiny from hostile legislators. But what they didn't know was that their demise would come so soon.

Without the Legislature ever taking a vote, legislative leaders have decided to cut off the Sunset Commission's money — effectively firing its staff of four people — at the end of this month.

"They cut us off at the knees," said George Fleming, acting executive director of the commission.

Exercising its authority under the law, the Legislative Services Commission quietly called a meeting late last week where it swiftly and unanimously voted to cut off all state spending, effective March 1, by the Governmental Evaluations Commission.

The evaluations commission is frequently known as the state Sunset Commission. It was begun four years ago in an innovative attempt to review state regulatory boards and agencies with a goal of eliminating those that weren't needed and strengthening those that were.

The Legislative Services Commission is a panel composed of leaders from both the House and Senate with control over the General Assembly staff and building.

"I was opposed to it in 1977 (when it was begun)," said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Charlotte, co-chairman of the services commission and also a member of the Sunset Commission. "We thought the pain was outweighing the pleasure of that thing. We didn't think the results were worth the money."

The Sunset Commission was targeted several weeks ago by House and Senate base budget subcommittees searching for budget cuts. The panels tentatively agreed to drop the commission's $230,000 a year staff budget and let the General Assembly staff do the work. But the cut wasn't to take effect until the fiscal year ends June 30.

"We had no idea there would be a fund cutoff before the end of the fiscal year,"

Fleming said in an interview Monday. "I was surprised the Legislative Services Commission did this."

"It was my understanding that it is unprecedented to have a cutoff of an existing staff in the middle of a year," he added.

The commission has a budget for a staff of six, but currently has only four employees — Fleming, two staff analysts with legal degrees and an office manager. The previous director and a staff analyst left their jobs recently and had not been replaced.

The services commission left the Sunset commission enough money to keep one staff member on long enough to see its 20 legislative proposals through the General Assembly this year.

Lawing said Fleming would be asked to stay on to handle those bills, and might be invited to join the Legislature's staff afterwards. Fleming said he hadn't decided what he would do.

Lawing said a bill would be introduced to abolish the commission itself and replace it with a new one, composed of 10 legislators and four public members.

Most of the Sunset Commission's proposals this year would add public members, appointed by the governor, to boards regulating lawyers, doctors, nurses, dentists and other health professions.

The reviews were required by the 1977 law, but many believe it was the commission's targeting of those professions, with their many influential members, that turned legislative sentiment against it.

Fleming said none of the staff members have lined up other jobs, and there is a feeling of disappointment among the staff. But Fleming said they don't intend to fight the decision.

The services commission held its meeting without publicly announcing it, and only one television reporter was there. Fleming said no one on the staff was aware of the meeting either. In fact, he said he was informed of the decision by one legislator afterwards but didn't get details of the decision until he paid a call on Lawing Monday afternoon.

"It was kind of surprise," Fleming said. "It has not been handled with decorum," Fleming said.

Mock POW Camp For Training Of Marines

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — In the wake of a controversial collaboration conviction for former POW Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, the Marines are building a mock POW camp to train soldiers to withstand possible wartime captivity.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reports the camp, complete with barbed wire, interrogators and prison guards, will feature an intensive five-day training program that may also provide practice for Marine interrogators.

The program, the only one of its kind in the U.S. Marine Corps and one of three in the U.S. military, is scheduled to begin next month.

The training course comes as officers, psychiatrists and others debate the proper behavior of military captives. The debate intensified during the trial of Garwood, convicted in Camp Lejeune last week of collaborating with the Vietcong during two of the 14 years he spent in their prison camps.

Marine officials insisted Garwood's case had nothing to do with the training program. They said the camp was built at the request of Maj. Gen. David Twomey, 2nd Marine Division commander.

Col. Carl E. Mundy Jr., chief of intelligence activities for the division, said the camp is an extension of the military's Survival Evasion Resistance and Escape training, which trains men to live in the wilderness.

The camp consists of guarded concrete block buildings, originally marked for demolition, on a remote area of the base. It will house about 150 Marines.

Similar compounds during the Vietnam War included bamboo cages and Vietnamese guards. But Mundy said the new camp will not have any particular theme. He said former POWs probably will serve as advisers.

The camp will focus on the psychological torture soldiers may suffer in captivity, teaching "a resistance to interrogation-type things," said Maj. D.H. Ingram, intelligence operations officer for the 2nd Marine Division.

The program will consist of a two-day classroom instruction period and a three-day application of classroom training, with enlisted men and officers receiving the same treatment.

But the emphasis will be on infantry units likely to be on patrol. "Those are the front-line troops, mostly those you would expect to be captured," Mundy said.

The mock captors will teach Marines about the various ways to break down a prisoner's will to resist, he said. Those include segregation, isolation, false information and deprivation of food and privileges.

The course could illustrate how captors block communication to break down leadership. Mundy said an added benefit of the course is that Marine Corps interrogators may get practice in obtaining information.

But physical abuse is not in store for the trainees, he said, because experience has shown that anyone will crack under torture.

"The point is, we are not out to try and break a man," Mundy said.

Former POWs testified at Garwood's court-martial that nearly all of them had cooperated to some extent under torture and deprivation.

Marine's Death Due A Shotgun

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — An autopsy report released Monday indicates that Marine Pfc. Terry M. Gunther, 25, of Fort Worth, Texas, died of shotgun wounds to the head and chest and he also suffered a stab wound.

Gunther's body was discovered Friday by hunters in a wooded area near Verona Loop Road on U.S. 17. Gunther was a member of Battery K, 1st Battalion, 10th Marines.

Two Marine suspects have been apprehended and are being held pending investigation by the Provost Marshal's office and the Naval Investigative Service. Their names were not released.

ment are based in conservative thought. He believes deeply, to cite only one or two examples, that economic matters should be governed more by the marketplace than by the mechanisms of government. He believes deeply in the concept of federalism. He is committed to the libertarian ideal that men and women and businesses should be free to succeed or to fail on their own merits. No candidate on the landscape — no candidate capable of winning an election — could come better equipped to serve the conservative cause.

My friends are aggrieved at the appointment of Caspar Weinberger as secretary of defense. Suppose we face facts. The Pentagon's budget drips with fat. In the MX missile system, beloved of the generals, the taxpayers face the biggest boondoggle of all time — a $60 or $70 billion squandering of public funds. Mr. Weinberger's particular talent is to cut fat without scraping bone. Our national defense will be the better for it.

Is Terrel Bell so awful at Education? Mr. Bell's first substantive action was to scrap the costly and misguided rules that had been proposed for bilingual education. What of Donald Regan at Treasury? If Mr. Regan is an easy-money, free-spending liberal, he surely has everyone fooled. Meanwhile, in Interior, in Labor, at State, in the Office of Management and Budget, in the Council of Economic Advisors, conservative views are solidly represented.

In his first 10 days, Mr. Reagan abolished price controls on petroleum, dismantled the wage-and-price guideline program, put a freeze on federal employment, ordered a reduction in federal travel, and began to whack the '82 budget. Stop the sulkings, gentlemen! The times are better than you think.

Possible Budget-Cutting Targets Are Circulating

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Reagan administration may target foreign aid, farm

support and federal rent subsidies for billions of dollars in budget cuts beyond the $36 billion in proposed reductions now being circulated on Capitol Hill, congressional aides say.

In all, sources said budget director David Stockman is hoping to propose cuts of $40 billion to $50 billion in the federal budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.
Proposed cuts for the current fiscal year may be less than $15 billion, sources estimated.

The congressional aides, who asked not to be identified, said Monday the proposals discussed so far don't include cuts in several areas where they have been told to expect them, including foreign aid, farm support payments and Interior Department programs. Modest cuts in portions of the defense budget also are expected, these sources said.

Some more cuts may be forthcoming before President Reagan's scheduled Feb. 18 address to a joint session of Congress. But aides said full details of the cuts proposed for the current fiscal year and the following one may not be known until formal legislation is sent to Congress on March 10 or later.

While Stockman's notebook of more than $36 billion in proposed cuts circulated in Congress, White House press secretary James Brady said Reagan has made no final decisions. He said documents purporting to show proposed cuts are "working papers"
subject to change.

He said the only instructions Reagan gave the budget-cutters is "reject the business-as-usual approach and don't be timid."

Brady said Reagan will preside over daily budget-cutting strategy sessions before going to Camp David with Stockman and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan next weekend to make final decisions.

Congressional sources said proposals for more cuts are likely in these programs:

—Price supports for dairy farmers, which Stockman has publicly criticized.

—Tobacco subsidies.

—Federal rent subsidies for the elderly and the poor.

—Interior Department programs, possibly including the politically popular water projects that former President Carter vainly tried to cut four years ago.

—Certain health programs, such as community health centers and health maintenance organizations. The National Institutes of Health is another target for spending cuts, sources said.

In addition, one source said he expects Stockman to propose at least small cuts in some areas of the defense budget, so the administration can't be accused of ignoring the Pentagon in its drive to trim federal spending.

These cuts, for unspecified amounts, would be in addition to the list of more than $26 billion in cuts that circulated Monday among House Democrats. Most of the cuts are in social programs.

"I do not think even Dave Stockman knows himself what the exact figures will be," one source said.

A fierce legislative battle is likely over the cuts.

A copy of the administration's proposals circulated by the Democrats Study Group, a research office for House Democrats, predicted opposition from numerous interest groups.

"Most states will object strongly to imposition of a federal cap on Medicaid," which provides health care for the poor, the DSG said.

Also included is a proposal to end Social Security benefits for students aged 18-21 who are dependents of retired, disabled or deceased workers.

"Severe opposition by present and future
beneficiary families, Social Security advocacy groups and the higher education establishment can be anticipated," the document said.

A proposal to reduce extended unemployment benefits to experienced workers in times of high unemployment would face

intensive lobbying, particularly by organized labor, the Democratic Study Group said.

Reagan outlined his philosophy of budget cuts at a White House meeting Monday with state and county officials.

State Rep. Richard Hodes, a Florida Democrat, said the president called for a reassertion of states' authority.

Republican Ross Doyen,
president of the Kansas State

Senate and incoming president of the National Conference of State Legislatures, said one topic was Reagan's anticipated proposal to shift responsibility for some federal programs back to the states.

"We're ready to accept that responsibility, but we made it clear we had to have the flexibility in using these block grants" that the federal government is expected to provide the states to run the programs, Doyen said.

Gold Chain Thefts Spur Subway Crime

NEW YORK (AP) — An epidemic of gold chain-snatching last year was largely responsible for a 17 percent increase in major crimes in New York City subways, the Transit Authority says.

Edward Silberfarb, a spokesman for the authority, released preliminary figures Monday showing there were 13,675 major crimes on the city's 230 miles of subways in 1980, compared with 11,678 in 1979.

Although thefts of gold chains made up much of the increase, there also were more reports of crime in several other categories.

There were 20 murders in the subways in 1980, compared with 16 in 1979. Three of the victims were Transit Authority police officers, two of them shot with their own guns.

Total robberies rose from 4,013 in 1979 to 4,977 in 1980; burglaries from 195 to 239, and larcenies from 6,742 to 7,795.

Slight declines were noted in rapes, down from 30 to 24, and assaults, declining from 682 to 620.

Silberfarb said the increase in underground crime paralleled a rise in felonies in the city and nation. Among 180 victims of subway crime were a young father who was pushed to the tracks and lost a leg after he resisted would-be robbers; a man who suffered burns on

Two Wrecks Result In Damage

An estimated $4,200 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted when a car driven by Willie McKinzy Rountree of 1808B Hopkins Dr. ran off Arlington Boulevard at the Cherokee Drive intersection and struck a fire hydrant.

Police estimated damage from the 6:50 p.m. mishap at $1,000 to the car and $1,000 to the hydrant.

Cars driven by Charles Robert Ambrose of Shady Knoll Trailer Pk. and Mary White Foreman of 709B Mills St., collided about 3:50 p.m. at the intersection of Church and Pitt Streets, causing $1,800 damage to the Ambrose car and $400 damage to the Foreman vehicle.

Officers, who said both drivers and a passenger in the Foreman vehicle received injuries in the collision, charged Ambrose with failing to stop for a stop sign.

A change clerk was cut on the head, arms and hands with a 26-inch sword in revenge because he had identified two youths as fare jumpers.

Autos Robbed

Greenville Police said five cars were broken into at South Greenville Recreation Center last night.

However, the incidents, reported at 10 p.m., netted robbers only $40 in cash from one car and a broken tape recorder from another vehicle. Investigators said nothing was taken from three of the vehicles, although $30 damage resulted to one of them when a window was broken to gain entrance. Investigation of the incidents is underway.

Information Is All Important

The Pitt-Greenville Media Society heard Dr. James H. Batten speak on the role of the librarian as viewed by a person outside the profession during its winter meeting Wednesday evening.

Dr. Batten, who is chairman of the Secondary Education Department of East Carolina University, pointed out that any patron of a library is no longer an outsider, since he becomes a part of the library program. A well-known researcher, he made a plea for librarians to consider each little scrap of information important and to keep seemingly unimportant items for use by future generations in their research. He foresees the continued growth of automation and micro-products to the point where eventually all library holdings will be in micro-form and immediately accessible through the computer.

Noting that no library program is successful unless it reaches its intended patrons, he is encouraging the promotion of scholarship and "human beingness" to foster the use of the library for enjoyment. Dr. Batten challenged the group to find excuses why things can be done, rather than using excuses for not doing them.

Prior to Dr. Batten's speech, awards were made to Anne Gunn of Joyner Library and Debra Kornegay of Pactolus Elementary School, respectively, for submitting the winning entries in the society's contest for a new logo and newsletter name.

Witness Admits To Map Sharing Road Projects

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

The prosecution in the bid-rigging trial of a former president of Rea Construction Co. rested its case Monday after a Rea employee testified that the president told him to draw a map dividing highway projects among three paving companies.

One of seven witnesses testifying against former Rea president Charles B. Wuertenberger, William A. Campbell told a federal court jury that he burned the map after a federal investigation into collusion on road-paving bids began.

Defense witnesses were expected to begin testimony at 9 a.m. today when the court reconvenes. Defense attorney James C. Walker said Wuertenberger may be called to the stand, along with two or three substantive witnesses and several character witnesses.

Defense attorney Douglas Martin moved for acquittal Monday, contending the government failed to show that Wuertenberger continued to conspire to rig bids on paving projects after 1974, when he was no longer president.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow W. Jones denied the motion, saying the jury should decide.

Wuertenberger is charged with two counts of violating the federal Sherman Antitrust Act by rigging bids from 1970 to 1979. His lawyers admit he participated in complementary bidding as president of the Charlotte-based company.

But they contend his involvement ended when he retired as president and became chairman of the board, and that the statute of limitations has expired on any activity before then.

Campbell, who has worked for Rea for 16 years, said Wuertenberger told him to draw up a map of Edgecombe, Nash and Wilson counties dividing up state highway paving projects between Rea, S.T. Wooten Co. of Wilson and Barnhill Construction Co. of Tarboro.

He said Rea took all projects in northeastern Nash County, Wooten got all the work in southwestern Nash County and all of Wilson County and Barnhill was given Edgecombe County.

"I was asked to come up with a plan that would be equitable to all the companies," Campbell said. "We would determine by the map who would be the prime contractor on a certain job."

Campbell, who was a bid estimator for Rea, said when federal investigators began probing the company's involvement in an airport paving project in Richmond, Va., then-Rea president Norman Black told him to destroy the map.

Wuertenberger is one of several construction executives and companies charged with fixing bids on paving projects. Rea and six of its executives already have pleaded guilty to similar charges, as have Seth T. Wooten, president of S.T. Wooten Construction.

Earlier Monday, L.A. Reynolds Co. of Winston-Salem and its president, Jon R. Reynolds, changed their pleas on bid-rigging charges from innocent to no contest.

Prosecutors expressed surprise at the move and told Jones that no plea-bargaining agreement had been made. After accepting the pleas, Jones said Reynolds and the company will be sentenced after the Wuertenberger case is completed, probably on Wednesday.

U.S. Attorney Arthur Feiveson, director of a federal probe into bid rigging, said he did not know whether the conviction of Crowder Asphalt Co. of Charlotte on Friday persuaded Reynolds

A Gun Law For N.J.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The state Assembly, acting to toughen its stand against handguns, approved a bill Monday to impose mandatory prison sentences on persons who commit a crime with a gun.

The measure would impose three-year prison terms on all persons convicted of using a gun during the commission of a violent crime in addition to the term for the crime itself.

"We feel it's the type of bill that will send out the signal to those who use guns in the commission of a crime that we're not going to tolerate it," said Assemblyman Thomas Gallo, D-Hudson.

The Assembly vote was 71-1 on the bill that already was approved unanimously in the Senate. The measure now goes to Gov. Brendan T. Byrne for his signature.

Byrne's approval is expected because he won Senate amendments to restrict the crimes covered by the bill to murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery and assault.

to change his plea. Crowder Asphalt, the first company to come to trial on bid-rigging charges, and two of its executives, were convicted.

"It's hard to say what changed his mind, but it could be that case had some impact," Feiveson said.

Before the Wuertenberger case began, defense attorneys asked that a new jury be selected for the trial, arguing that the jury from the Crowder trial could be prejudiced against Wuertenberger because it heard his name mentioned in testimony last week.

Jones ordered a new jury picked for the trial.

One witness, F.J. Blythe, president of Blythe Industries Inc. of Charlotte, testified Monday that his company and Rea worked out an agreement in the mid-1950s to split all highway projects in Mecklenburg County on a 50-50 basis. He said he made the arrangement with Wuertenberger.

"Rea and Blythe were at each others' throats. Nobody was getting anything out of it because we were turning in bids below cost," Blythe said. "We were all losing money, so we made a deal."

Blythe said the half-and-half arrangement was in effect until 1976, when Crowder bought an asphalt plant in Mecklenburg County.

Blythe has pleaded guilty to bid-rigging charges as part of a plea-bargaining arrangement. He was granted immunity from further prosecution.

Wuertenberger's attorneys said he ended active participation in making bids on road projects when he retired as president in 1974 and became chairman of the board. They said he cannot be prosecuted for activities prior to then because of the five-year statute of limitations.

Conviction for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act carries a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $100,000 fine on each count.

Motorcycle Safety Program Is Planned

A county-wide Motorcycle Responsibility Awareness Program is being offered to all Pitt County Youth nine-19 years old. The program has been organized by the Pitt County 4-H Council and is dedicated to David Dixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Dixon, who was killed in a motorcycle accident in the fall of 1979. He was a member of the Clark's Neck 4-H Club.

The course will be held each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon in March. It offers beginning and advanced classes and will be taught by instructors from East Carolina University Driver and Traffic Safety Education Department under the direction of Dr. Alfred King, coordinator. The program is designed to teach skills, promote safety and develop responsibility awareness in motorcycle riders.

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department, Greenville City Police Department, the North Carolina Highway Patrol, ECU Traffic Safety Education Department, Pitt County Board of Education, Greenville City Schools, Honda of Greenville and Yamaha of Pitt County are assisting in implementing the program.

To be eligible to participate, youth must be between the ages of nine-19, own or have access to a two-wheeled motorized vehicle and be able to transport the vehicle to instruction sites. The cost is $1 per person. Youths 16 and older will be given an opportunity to obtain motorcycle operator's license after completion of the course.

Following the class instruction, an all-day rodeo will be offered in April to class participants and non-participants. The rodeo is coordinated by Hugh Benson of the Greenville City Police Department, Juvenile Division and Johnny Benson, field representative for Coulter Electronics Corporation. The skills test and rodeo events will be implemented through the cooperative efforts of the members of the Frog Level Motorcycle Club, the Brotherhood Motorcycle Club, and the Unaffiliated Free Riders here in Pitt County.

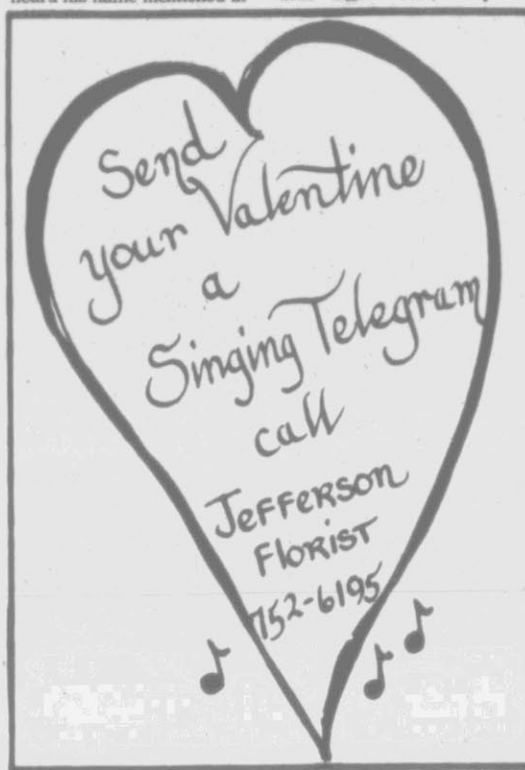

The rodeo will be held at the Jaycee's Park on Cedar Lane in Greenville. The cost is $2 per person and the age limit to participate in the skills event is nine-19 years. Participants must furnish their own bike.

To pre-register for the motorcycle course, call or write the 4-H office by March 27. The address is 4-H Office, 1717 W. Fifth St., Greenville, phone 758-1196 or 758-1197.

Participants must pre-register for each event. A packet of instructions, including rules, exact sites and times the course will be offered in individual communities will be mailed upon registration.

For additional information call Jean Kivette, 4-H program assistant at the 4-H office in Pitt County.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted lower in modest trading today, with concern growing after one major bank's move to cut its prime lending rate was not followed.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 1.79 points to 945.39. Monday's 5.12-point slide ended four consecutive days of gains.

Declines held a 7-4 edge over advances in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth-largest bank, cut its prime lending rate on Monday to 19 percent from 19.5 percent. But this morning, No. 2 Citibank announced its prime rate would remain unchanged at 19.5 percent, and other major banks also have yet to match Morgan Guaranty.

"As long as no one follows Morgan Guaranty down, the market is going to be wary," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. Gordon also said the stock market is in "kind of a holding pattern" as it awaits President Reagan's economic address to Congress next week and looks for indications of how much of the plan will be accepted.

Hold Pair In Fatal Beating

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Two men are being held without bond in connection with an attack on two sisters that left one dead and the other badly injured in their apartment in the back of a family store that was boarded up after a brother was killed eight years ago.

Albert Wilson, 26, was arrested Sunday night on charges of capital murder, robbery, burglary and abduction, police said. Patrick Faison, 25, also was arrested on a charge of being an accessory after the fact of murder.

Police said Sarah Diane Polen, 59, called by her neighbors a "feisty woman" who wouldn't let anyone take something that belonged to her, was beaten to death early Saturday. Her sister Ida, 64, was injured seriously.

Despite the slaying of their brother, Harry, in a 1972 holdup, the sisters — the last white residents in their neighborhood in Campostella — had remained in the apartment in the rear of the family grocery store, the Polen Food Market.

Police would give out few details, but said the sisters were bound and gagged shortly after midnight Friday and beaten. They were found later Saturday by a relative. Police said the two were watching television when attacked. The apartment was ransacked.

Sarah Diane was dead when police went to the apartment. Ida, suffering from shock and bruises to her face, chest, abdomen and legs, was listed in satisfactory condition Monday in a hospital.

The attack was at least the second Ida had survived. Records show she once was pistol-whipped by a gunman in the store.

Police said the two for years had felt they were under a virtual stage of siege in the neighborhood, where Polens had lived for 60 years.

"They have had problems in that area for the past 10 to 15 years. The sisters were constantly calling the police," said Police Sgt. R. F. Miller.

Police records show, there was a fire-bombing at the store, a beating, three burglaries and a shooting in the late 1960s.

Harry Polen, who with his sisters had taken over the store from their parents, was shot to death in August 1972, bleeding to death in the arms of a sister, Mildred, who tried to stop the flow of blood with a paper towel. Mildred died in 1973.

In 1970, someone threw a Molotov cocktail through the store window. The fire put Mildred and Diane in the hospital. Mildred was in critical condition for some time.

Crime in the store was once so bad that police put an undercover crew in the area, but the Polens refused to move.

The old-fashioned market had one room and looked like a country store. It was painted a faded green inside with cans and food left in scattered in boxes.

Reagan Warns Cabinet Policy Debates Private

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, concerned that administration debates are being aired in public, has told Cabinet members in firm language to keep their policy arguments private.

"The Cabinet should not be a sieve and things that people say in there should remain in that room," White House press secretary James S. Brady said Monday. "People should be able to discuss and express their opinions without having them repeated on the street."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan expressed his opinions about news leaks in "firm but not angry" tones at last week's Cabinet meeting.

Exactly what he said hasn't leaked, but Speakes said the president "did express some feelings that we should definitely do our debating among ourselves."

News leaks of White House secrets have been a perennial problem for past presidents, and Reagan has been no exception in his first three weeks in office. The Washington Post reported that Brady and other Reagan aides tried unsuccessfully to trace the source of leaks.

In recent days, a compilation of budget-cutting proposals prepared by David A. Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, was circulated by the administration on Capitol Hill and quickly became public.

There also was a news report that Reagan had decided at last week's Cabinet meeting to continue the Soviet grain embargo, although official spokesmen maintained no decision had been made.

And there were stories of conflicts between Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger over deploying the neutron weapon and between Haig and Stockman over cutting foreign aid.

The budget proposals on which Reagan is working have been the subject of the most leaks, although Brady said that wasn't surprising.

"When you consult that widely with the Congress, it is inevitable," Brady said. "The people on the Hill are indulging in selective leaking."

Speakes said Reagan recognized that differences among Cabinet members occasionally would "break out in the open" and was not asking them to refrain from expressing their views publicly on various issues. But, he added, "the president would hear from them first."

"Otherwise, we will debate among ourselves and announce our decision when it is necessary to do so in public," Speakes said.

There have been other indications the new administration may be trying to clamp down on open press coverage of White House activities.

—One reporter related that sources at the National Security Council told him they were ordered not to speak to journalists.

Pirate Rallies Fall Short Against Broncs

EDINBURG, Tex. — The first time East Carolina and Pan American met, in Greenville earlier this year, the Broncs rolled to an 82-67 victory behind the solid scoring of all-America candidate Kenneth Green.

Last night in Edinburg, Green got only two points, but Reuben Cole was there to step in and lead the Broncs to an 86-75 win over the Pirates.

East Carolina fell behind after the early minutes of the game, and trailed by 19 early in the second half. They cut it back to 11, and finally to nine, but could come no closer as both teams played streaky ball in the second half.

Cole, who finished with a game high 30 points, bombed in 13 of 20 shots from the floor and added four of eight at the foul line in addition to pulling away eight rebounds.

Green, who missed several games with a hip pointer, played only 17 minutes, hitting on just one of four shots, and going zero for three at the foul line. He also pulled off eight rebounds for the Broncs.

The two helped Pan American control the boards — a key factor in the game — as the Broncs held a 51-37 margin in that department. Morris Hargrove pulled off eight for the Pirates.

The Broncs also held a healthy shooting percentage margin, hitting on 52.2 per cent of their shots as compared to 41.7 per cent for the Pirates. The percentages in both halves were virtually the same.

Despite that, East Carolina Coach Dave Odom was very disappointed with the first half and fairly well satisfied with the second.

"We didn't have the proper game attitude going in, which I never would have expected,"

Odom said later. "I was totally shocked."

Odom pointed out that Pan American changed defenses quite often. "To cope with that, you must have a leader on the floor to call the proper offense, or you must have smart players who will find the open holes in the seams to score. We dug ourselves into a deep, deep hole in the first half. It was the most disappointing first half of the year. We appeared totally disoriented, we didn't scrap, we didn't play smart, we accepted their game plan and style and didn't fight it," Odom added. After Pan American got the initial lead, the Pirates tied it only to see the Broncs take a 6-2 lead.

But a three-point play by Michael Gibson and a basket by Tom Szymanski gave the Pirates a 7-6 lead. Three straight baskets by Pan-American, however, turned it around, 12-7, before Charles Watkins hit from the lane and Barry Wright added four straight free throws for a 13-12 lead with 13:48 left for East Carolina.

It was their last lead.

Pan American came back with three more baskets in a row, two by Tim McGrath and one by Cole for an 18-13 lead. Later Curtis Glasper and McGrath hit to up the lead to seven, 24-17. After another ECU basket, Clinton Cobb and Cole struck again to up it to 28-19, a nine-point spread.

East Carolina cut it back to six with 4:59 left, 30-24, but Cole and Glasper then led a nine-point binge by the Broncs that ran the lead out to 15, 39-24 with two minutes left. They inched that out to 18, 43-25, before taking a 44-27 lead into intermission.

"After some adjustments at the half, along with some soul-searching, we found ourselves," Odom noted. "We had a lot of chances in the second half."

Pan American struck first, moving its lead to 19 before East Carolina went on a 10-2 spree that cut the lead down to 11, 48-3, as Gibson scored six of the ten.

But it got streaky then. Pan Am came back with six in a row for a 54-37 lead before the Pirates cut it back to 12, 56-44 with 10:34 left. Pan Am then poured in nine in a row, as five different players scored to take a 65-44 lead, the largest in the game.

Still, the Pirates fought back, outscoring Pan Am, 14-2, over the next four minutes, to trim the lead back to nine, 67-58. They had the chance to cut it to seven, but missed, and Pan Am pulled away again to 15 before one last charge cut it to nine again, 77-68.

But the Pirates had to begin fouling at that point, allowing the Broncs to run the lead back to 14 before a three-point play by Bill McNair at the end trimmed it to the final 11-point margin.

In addition to Cole's 30, Pan Am got 18 from Glasper, and 12 each from Mike Carroll and McGrath.

East Carolina was led by Gibson with 17, while Barry Wright had 16 and David Underwood added 10.

"Gibson played as well as he has all year," Odom said. "He went out determined to play well against Green and he did."

East Carolina fell back to 11-11 with the loss, while Pan Am upped its mark to 13-9.

The Pirates return to action on Thursday, playing host to Delaware State in Minges Coliseum at 7:30 p.m.

Virginia Increases Lead In Poll; Wake, Carolina Also In Top Ten

By The Associated Press

Virginia, which rallied from a 16-point deficit en route to an 80-79 overtime victory over then-No. 11 North Carolina, retained the No. 1 position in The Associated Press college basketball poll Tuesday, increasing its lead over runner-up Oregon State from 10 to 28 points.

The Cavaliers collected 43 of 62 first-place votes and 1,221 of a possible 1,240 points in the balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Beavers, who defeated both California and Stanford last week, received 18 first-place votes and 1,193 points.

Last week, Virginia, 20-0, collected 35 first-place votes, while Oregon State, 19-0, was tabbed No. 1 on 26 ballots. All 62 members of the poll voted this week.

DePaul, Louisiana State, which got the final first-place vote, and Arizona State retained the Nos. 3 through five positions.

The Blue Demons, who posted victories over Detroit and Alabama-Birmingham, picked up 1,096 points — 25 more than LSU, which is riding a 20-game winning streak. The Sun Devils, who edged California 84-81 in overtime and whipped Washington State 77-63 last week, collected 945 points.

Utah, 20-1, nipped Wake Forest, 19-2, for the No. 6 slot by a single point. The Utes, who squeaked by Air Force 48-46 and downed Nevada Las Vegas, received 882 points. The Deacons posted victories over Maryland and Georgia last week.

UCLA, which got 692 points, jumped four places and took over the No. 8 position in the poll following its nationally televised victory over Notre Dame on Sunday.

Tennessee and North Carolina both moved up a notch in the poll despite losses and rounded out the Top 10. The Volunteers, who were upset by Mississippi early in the week but thrashed preseason favorite Kentucky 87-71 last Saturday, garnered 634 points. The Tar Heels, who beat Furman and St. Joseph's following the loss to Virginia, were six points farther back.

Kentucky slipped five slots and headed the Second 10. Notre Dame, which dropped three positions, was 12th, followed by Michigan, Iowa, Brigham Young, Wichita State, Illinois, South Alabama, Maryland and Indiana.

Last week the Second 10 was North Carolina, UCLA, Maryland, Michigan, Iowa, Brigham Young, Indiana, Illinois, Wichita State and South Alabama.

All 20 members of the poll, which was conducted before Monday night's games, are holdovers from last week.

Lady Pirates Face Wilmington

East Carolina's women return to action tonight, traveling to meet the Lady Seahawks of UNC-Wilmington.

The Lady Pirates, 19-5, will be seeking to move into the 20-victory category for the second straight year. East Carolina, after losing to North Carolina last week, dropped from the Top Twenty, despite having beaten East Tennessee State and Appalachian State.

UNC-Wilmington is led by three freshmen. Forward Sharon McMillan, hitting 17.2 points a game and pulling off 6.6 rebounds a game, leads the way. Center Sherri Crumpler is hitting 16.0 and 13.0 rebounds, while guard Jill Amos is scoring at a 15.4 average.

The Seahawks are averaging 81.6 points a game.

They have faced only one common opponent, Duke, losing by one point, 78-77. East Carolina beat Duke, 79-69.

The Pirates are led by Kathy Riley with a 18.4 average, while Mary Denker is hitting 14.8 and Sam Jones is scoring 13.9. Marcia Girven is at 10.9 and is the leading rebound at 6.6.

The Lady Pirates have a week off after the game before they face N.C. State in Raleigh on Wednesday, Feb. 18.

Strong Jaguar Finish Could Have Effect On ECC Final Standings

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

It has been a long season for Farmville Central. The Jaguars entered the season minus all five starters off a team that won the ECC regular season and tournament title and made it to the district finals. The results have been predictable.

Farmville lost its first six games before defeating Southwest Edgecombe, 48-39. The Jaguars then dropped 11 straight until last week when they put together a modest two-game winning streak.

"It has been a disappointing season," Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said. "I expected to win more games. But we have played better than I anticipated, though. We didn't win as many games, but we've played better. I don't know how you measure that."

"Since Christmas we've played good basketball. We've been only a few points away (from winning). It's been a thin line."

That line broadened last week with wins over Charles B. Aycock and North Lenoir, which left Farmville at 3-17 overall and 3-11 in the league going into the last week of the season. The Jaguars have the unenviable task of facing the league's two top teams this week — traveling to Greene Central tonight and then playing host to D.H. Conley Friday in the season finale for both clubs.

"I feel like we definitely have a chance," Terrell said. "We played Greene Central well at our place for three quarters and I think there may be more pressure on them than on our kids."

"In one sense, a victory over Greene Central for our kids would be like their guys winning the conference championship. But we'll have to play well to beat them."

Greene Central and D.H. Conley enter this last week tied for the league lead with 11-2 conference marks. If the Rams win both games they are the champs, having beaten the Vikings twice this season. A loss by both teams would open up numerous possibilities because Southern Nash is only a half-game out of first and North Pitt a game back.

Thus, the Jaguars have a chance to play the spoiler. To beat the Rams, however, Farmville must control the inside game of Phillip Hill and John Ray. The duo combined for 35 points and 20 rebounds in last Friday's 57-55 overtime victory over Conley.

Ironically, the Jaguars could meet the Rams or the Vikings in the first round of the ECC tournament next week, a possibility that Terrell does not like.

"Next week we'll have to play one or the other and I don't think you should play a team at the end of the season and then play them again in the tournament," Terrell said.

"What could be ironic is that last year we were top-seeded and played Greene Central in the first round. This year it could be the other way around."

The chances of the Jaguars winning the league tournament are slim. Terrell realizes this. But he already preparing for next season, when all but senior Ronald Dixon return from the starting lineup.

"We want to end the season on a good note," Terrell said. "The last couple weeks of the season and the tournament you need to be going out on a good note. You need to be able, when the season ends, to say to the kids that, 'Look, we were only a few points away from the top teams.'"

Allison Grabs Daytona Pole

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison has the fastest car at Daytona International Speedway this week, but that doesn't mean he's satisfied.

Allison toured the track's 2.5-mile, high-banked oval at 194.624 mph Monday to win the pole position for Sunday's Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race.

But, even his Pontiac LeMans, which is so different from all the other new downsized cars mandated by NASCAR that it has caused a flap, didn't draw any accolades from the 1978 Daytona 500 winner.

The LeMans, somehow ignored by all the other Grand National teams when they built the new shorter, narrower cars over the winter, has a sloping back window that apparently helps stabilize the car.

Physically all the other eligible models have straighter rear windows which cause an airflow problem that makes the rear end less stable.

"My car is stable," Allison said. "The tire temperatures are not what we want to see, but I'm still able to go pretty much where I want to go."

"Really, I honestly feel the reason for the problem here is that the problem has not been defined. If we had moved into this thing gradually, nobody would have had to go into any race not knowing what the problems are."

Allison showed he had the fastest car in Sunday's Busch Clash, pulling away to a three-second lead before a tire problem forced him to pit and cost him a chance to win.

"The two things I've found is that the more gentle I am with the steering wheel and the gas pedal, the better off I am," Allison noted. "That's different from last year when I could jump on the gas pedal or crank the wheel to the left or to the right anytime I wanted."

"But I think what we all need is miles on our cars under race conditions to see what's going to happen."

Darrell Waltrip, who eventually won the Clash, nailed down the other front row spot for the Daytona 500. He drove his Buick Regal to a lap of 194.506 mph.

Thirty-five other cars completed qualifying laps Monday, but those speeds — and any turned in during qualifying sessions today and Wednesday — will only be used to establish the field for two 125-mile qualifying races on Thursday.

Seventeen of the cars were over 190 mph, but nobody else was close to Allison and Waltrip. Ricky Rudd was the nearest, running the third fastest lap at 192.959 mph in an Oldsmobile Cutlass.

And neither of the top two approached the qualifying record of 196.049 mph, set by Buddy Baker in February of 1979.

Golfers Plan To Make Field

PARAMUS, N.J. (AP) — Neither rain nor babies nor the side effects of diabetes will stop a pair of determined golfers from competing in this spring's Coca Cola Classic pro golf tournament.

The $125,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament, which Donna Horton White captured from defending champ Nancy Lopez Melton in a driving rainstorm last year, will be held May 11-17 at the Ridgewood Country Club.

White hopes to be back to defend her crown this year, adding her first baby to the spectator list. She expects to deliver the baby in early April, which would give her about six weeks to get back in shape.

Another top golfer aiming for the tournament is Jo Ann Washam, a diabetic forced to drop out of the Elizabeth Arden Classic in Miami last week after suffering a severe reaction to her insulin treatments.

White continued playing professionally until two weeks ago, when her advanced pregnancy forced her to quit temporarily.

"I plan to combine the baby with my career, and have a sitter travel with me. After all, look what (tennis pro) Evonne Goolagong did after having a baby. She came back and won Wimbledon," said White, of West Palm Beach, Fla.

She recalls a time on the tour when her baby kicked as she was taking a swing, "and I hit the ball about six feet beyond the hole." Then, there was the problem of teeing up with a round belly. "I was on my hands and knees teeing four at a time," White said.

"It was nice," he says simply.

Would he like to face Division I opponents?

"I'd love to play against those teams, but I've got to take what I can get."

How about the lack of recognition?

"I wish I could get more attention. I can't do it, so..."

The Medford native takes his lot in stride. But he also realizes he might be where he belongs.

Another difficulty appeared early in the pregnancy, when White discovered she had carpal tunnel syndrome, a condition caused by fluid build-up and resulting in hand numbness.

While Washam, of Dallas, is troubled her insulin reaction could recur without warning, she is determined to go on with the career that in eight years netted her $322,235.

"I would never use it (diabetes) as an excuse. You are whatever you want to be, and this has caused me to push myself harder," said Washam. She will visit a specialist in New York before returning to Florida for Wednesday's start of the Fort Lauderdale leg of the circuit.

In the 1940s, tennis pro Bill Talbert showed the world that athletic success can be combined with diabetes.

"It was the first time that happened to me in my career," said Washam, who was the ninth leading LPGA money winner last year with $100,000.

"I spent last Saturday night in the emergency room," Washam said. "It happened while I was on the phone with my mother. I became disoriented."

"The thing that worries me is I was really taking care of myself, and I was doing everything right. It would have been easier to accept if I could be honest and say I ate something I shouldn't have, but that wasn't the case," the 31-year-old golfer said.

Claudia Kohde Pulls Off Upset Of Navratilova

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — West German teen-ager Claudia Kohde upset Martina Navratilova by beating the Czech native at her own game — power tennis.

"I knew it would be a tough match, because she always tries to hit winners and she either hits or misses. Tonight, she didn't miss," Navratilova said after losing Monday night in the first round of the $125,000 Avon Championships of California.

The tournament lost its top seed when the 17-year-old Kohde, ranked 67th in the world, knocked off Navratilova, the two-time Wimbledon champion, in a 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 thriller.

Navratilova had moved into the No. 1 position when Tracy Austin withdrew from the tournament field last week because of a lingering injury. Austin's withdrawal resulted in the sponsor reducing the purse from $150,000 to $125,000 under a formula based on the number of top-ranked players participating.

Kohde had most fans in the small but enthusiastic opening-night crowd pulling for her after she began hitting spectacular passing shots in the second set to turn the match around.

She led 3-1 in the last set, fell behind 5-3 and then went ahead 6-5. She faced two match-point situations in the tiebreaker before winning 9-7.

"I thought I had the match won, but it just wasn't to be," said Navratilova.

"Usually, I hit my backhand too late and the ball flies. Tonight, it was the best part of my game," said Kohde, making it clear that she surprised herself with her performance.

"I never thought I'd beat her. I had booked a flight to Frankfurt for Thursday. I was going to go home," she admitted.

Instead, she called her father, a lawyer in Saarbrücken, with good news and looked forward to her second-round match against South Africa's Rosalyn Fairbank, another of Monday's winners.

The top-seeded player in the tournament now is No. 2 Andrea Jaeger, the 15-year-old from Illinois who is scheduled to begin play Wednesday night.

Tonight's feature match, Leslie Allen of New York will make her first appearance since winning her first major pro title Sunday in Detroit. She will face Candy Reynolds of Tennessee.

"When Chris Evert came along, everyone made a big thing of how young she was. Then Tracy came along, then Andrea. They keep getting younger," said Navratilova.

"It's no big deal any more," she concluded.

Top Division III Player Scores On In Obscurity

BOSTON (AP) — A newspaper picture told the story of Ray Buckland's career.

It showed the Boston State basketball player launching the shot that became his 2,000th college point. But his raised arm hid his face. And the caption called him Ray Borkland.

His career has been remarkably consistent, but his face and name have remained largely unknown. The public and some of the media haven't noticed. Still, he rolls on, giving as much thought to his anonymity as he does to overmatched defenders.

Last season, he was the nation's top scorer in Division III. This season, the latest NCAA statistics have him second. He is averaging 25.5 points per game. He has led the Warriors in scoring in 15 games as they have raced to a 15-4 record.

The 6-foot-5 swingman scored his 2,000th point Jan. 27 at Framingham State. Since the NCAA started keeping national statistics in 1948, only 114 Division I players have reached that milestone. Such records are not kept for Division III.

But who is Ray Buckland?

He is a senior unconcerned by the small crowds and publicity vacuum of a Division III commuter school. He cares more about Boston State reaching the NCAA playoffs than another scoring title. And he doesn't turn cartwheels when point 2,000 fell through.

"I wish I could get more attention. I can't do it, so..."

The Medford native takes his lot in stride. But he also realizes he might be where he belongs.

Associated Press Writer
SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Bruce Simmons has been menaced with a shotgun in Colton, threatened with death in Binghamton and held against his will in the men's room of a Watertown tavern.

And he did it all for people like Carole King, Neil Diamond and Smokey Robinson and the Miracles. Simmons is field representative for ASCAP, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the organization devoted to protecting the royalties and copyrights of songwriters and musicians.

As ASCAP's man in central New York, Simmons is responsible for making sure that any merchant or bartender playing music publicly, even if it's background music in an elevator or a radio turned up for a tavern's patrons to drink their beer by, pays the royalties for the copyright music.

Not all proprietors understand they must pay for the right to use a composer's work publicly, Simmons said. He tells stories of his uncomfortable moments with angry bartenders who didn't believe they should have to pay ASCAP money to play music for their customers.

"I have had very few punches in the nose, but it happens occasionally," said Simmons. An assault case is pending against one village official who struck him when Simmons informed him of ASCAP's rights to royalties for an outdoor concert.

"We guard this right so jealously, to use music privately, but they sometimes don't realize the composer, author or publisher has exclusive rights to public use of that work," Simmons said.

ASCAP operates under the federal copyright laws and, using a sophisticated computer operation, returns the licensing fees from users to the composers, musicians and publishers who own the copyright to a piece of music.

ASCAP's right to collect the licensing fees for the musicians it represents has been upheld by court cases dating to the early 1900s, Simmons said. ASCAP's rival is BMI, which represents its own stable of musicians. Many establishments end up paying fees to both organizations.

The fee a bar with live music owes ASCAP is computed with a formula that takes into consideration factors such as seating capacity, the type of music and any cover charges the bar assesses.

"We are not talking about big dollars for them," said Simmons, who cited the example of a country music tavern in Massena near the Canadian border that pays $320 a year.

Establishments refusing to pay the fee could be fined a minimum of $250 per song, he said.

Simmons says a big part of his job is educating people about ASCAP. He estimates that 25 percent of the people he deals with balk at paying the fee.

"When it comes to that time when a guy is totally refusing and using our property, then it is necessary to take legal action, just like any other case where somebody is using your property."

One restaurant owner who refused to pay the ASCAP fee said he objected on moral grounds. When sued, he settled out of court — but he remains convinced the law is not fair.

The restaurant owner, who did not want to be identified, said there is a feeling among businessmen that paying license fees for the right to play music amounts to "legalized extortion."

He said he thought the price he had paid for the record took care of royalties to the composer and musicians.

Through its national network of field representatives like Simmons, ASCAP generates more than $100 million in royalties from drug stores using piped-in music, office buildings with music in the elevators, taverns with juke boxes and nightclubs with live entertainment, as well as radio and television stations.

Simmons says he knows virtually every establishment that puts music to public use in his region.

"I think I've got 98 percent coverage. There might be one I'm not aware of yet," he said. "I don't know where it is, but I'll find it."

Rock 'n' Roll Pioneer Bill Haley Found Dead

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Bill Haley, who skyrocketed to fame with what was considered the first big rock 'n' roll hit and faded into obscurity as fans crowned Elvis Presley king of the new era, has died, apparently of a heart attack.

Haley's "Rock Around the Clock" blared from jukeboxes in the 1950s as teens discovered a new beat and a new, defiant identity.

Friends and police in this Rio Grande Valley town where Haley lived in semi-seclusion for the past several years said the man credited with inspiring the term "rock 'n' roll" died a private man, perhaps lonely and confused.

Haley was pronounced dead at 12:35 p.m. Monday in his two-story wooden house. A friend had found him lying fully clothed on a bed.

Justice of the Peace Tommy Thompson ruled that the death was from natural causes and said he assumed

"He had problems."

A police officer, who asked not to be named, said Haley called him repeatedly last weekend and appeared to be "hallucinating."

"He called me up again and again to talk five or 10 minutes. He just wanted someone to talk to," the officer said.

William John Clifton Haley Jr. was born in Highland Park, Mich., to a musical family. His mother, a church organist, and his father, who played banjo, encouraged him to learn the guitar.

Haley left home at 15 to travel with a country band, the Down Homers, then formed his own country group, Bill Haley's Saddlemen, which began to record in 1951.

He deliberately mixed rhythm and blues with country music and rechristened his band Bill Haley and the Comets in 1952.

Kuralt Facing Driving Charge

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — CBS television correspondent Charles Kuralt, famous for his "On the Road" series, faces drunken driving charges after being arrested on a California highway, authorities say.

Kuralt, famous for his series of reports from off-beat locations around the country, was pulled over near this community south of San Francisco early Sunday, said Ralph Anderson, spokesman for the California Highway Patrol.

A patrolman spotted Kuralt's rented car weaving from lane to lane at about 45 mph, Anderson said.

Kuralt could not be reached for comment Monday.

The anchorman for the CBS "Morning" news show is scheduled to appear in court March 10, Anderson said.

He was booked into the San Mateo County Jail but was released a short time later on his own recognizance, Anderson said.

'Love Letter' Will Air Just One Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono's four-minute "video love letter" to her slain husband, John Lennon, will be broadcast for the first and last time Thursday, ABC News has announced.

Miss Ono gave ABC correspondent Barbara Walters the videotape as a "gesture of friendship" with the stipulation that it be shown only once, ABC spokesmen said Monday.

Directed and edited by Miss Ono, the videotape is set to the ex-Beatle's song, "Woman," from the "Double Fantasy" album he recorded with his wife before he was shot to death outside his New York apartment Dec. 8.

The film combines scenes of Lennon and his wife taped four days before his death, scenes of the widow alone a month later and many still photographs of their time together from Miss Ono's private album.

ABC said Ms. Walters would show the videotape in its entirety on the network's "20-20" program Thursday.

There is no narration, Miss Ono said, because "the tape says everything there is to say."

FILM SHOWING

GRIMESLAND — The film "The Cross and the Switchblade" will be shown here at the Gethsemane Pentecostal Holiness Church Thursday night at 7:30. The pastor, Rev. Danny Nelson, and congregation invite the public to attend.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals O.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Testifies Link In Handwriting

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A handwriting expert testified Monday that former Columbus County Commission chairman and accused church-bomber Horry J. Watts wrote two threatening letters in the bizarre Sellerstown case.

Phillip White, a handwriting expert with the Federal Bureau of Alcohol Firearms and Tobacco, said the writing on the threatening letters — including one sent to the suspect himself — matched handwriting samples of Horry James Watts.

Watts and two other Columbus County residents are accused of conspiracy in the series of 10 bombings, several shootings and threatening letters directed against Robert F. Nichols, former pastor of the Free Welcome Holiness Church in Sellerstown, a small community south of Whiteville.

Watts, 74, Bud L. Sellers, 70, and Frances L. Powell, 54, are charged with conspiring in the bombings of the church and parsonage and with sending threatening letters during a four year period that began in 1972.

The alleged conspiracy was inspired by differences between Watts and Nichols over the operation of the small church, court records show. Mrs. Powell and Watts also are charged with making similar threats against an acquaintance, Hazel Ward, now deceased.

According to testimony Monday, Mrs. Ward in 1976 received a letter at work — addressed to her daughter, Brenda Bowen — that warned her daughter to help break up a personal relationship of Mrs. Ward's or "We are going to blow you up." At the bottom of the type-written note were the hand written words, "copy to Brenda" which the APT agent said matched samples of Watts' writing.

Mrs. Ward has since died, reportedly of natural causes.

White also testified Monday that a printed note received by Watts in December 1974, soon after the first bombing of the parsonage began, actually was written by Watts.

Gift From the North

Today, stars from 21 National Hockey League (NHL) teams are scheduled to take part in the 33rd annual All-Star Game. Ice hockey developed in Canada during the latter part of the 19th century. According to some accounts, soldiers of the Royal Canadian Rifles created the game one winter when they began to play field hockey on ice. By 1891 the first hockey association, composed of amateur teams in Ontario, was organized. The first professional league was formed in northern Michigan in 1903, but most of the best players remained in Canada on amateur teams. The NHL was formed in 1917 with five teams in Canadian cities. In 1924 Boston became the first U.S. city to join the NHL.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the award given to the team that wins the NHL championship?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — North Korean forces seized the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo in 1968.
