Haig Weighs Reply To Soviet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig is weighing a response to the Soviet Union's violation of diplomatic protocol in releasing a confidential communication accusing the United States of interference in Poland and antagonism toward the Kremlin.

The central topic of the message from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko involved the two superpowers' roles in the evolving situation in Poland, where communist leaders are striving to cope with labor unrest that threatens the governmental structure of the nation.

Release of the letter, in which Gromyko accuses the United States of "open interference" in Poland's internal affairs, violated an age-old diplomatic practice that formal communications between governments are not made public without mutual consent.

The Jan. 28 Gromyko letter accuses the Voice of America and other U.S. foreign radio operations of airing "provocative and instigatory" broadcasts aimed at generating "unfriendly sentiments" among Poles toward the Soviet Union.

Its release left U.S. officials literally shaking their heads in disbelief. One official, who asked not to be identified, said the action "certainly runs counter to the long-standing principle of confidentiality with regard to such exchanges."

Another said it left State Department veterans "flabbergasted."

And the man who headed Reagan's State Department transition team said today he believes the Russians made their response public "to frighten us all."

Robert G. Neumann, vice chairman of the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University, told a group of journalists: "There will be a period of very cold relationships for quite awhile. I don't think we will be bluffed by it."

Neumann, a former ambassador to Afghanistan and Morocco, spoke at a conference on defense and foreign policy issues sponsored by the Washington Journalism Center.

Haig was known to be considering whether to respond to the Soviet action or let the matter pass.

One option would be to release the text of his Jan. 24 letter to Gromyko, which was the Reagan administration's first official communication to the Soviets. The letter released by the Soviets was Gromyko's response to Haig.

The Soviet Embassy said the Gromyko text was released because the contents of Haig's letter had been made public by the State Department.

Act To Decrease Deficit

Swim Pool Fees Increased At Session

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

In a move aimed at decreasing the operating deficit for the city swimming pool, the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission voted last night to increase admission fees and charges for pool classes.

Commission members, taking action on an item that was discussed and then tabled at the January meeting, agreed to increase the fee for pool admission from 50 cents to $1 per person and to raise the overall class charge from the present $5 to $10.

Staff member Jim Parker explained last month that while pool operating expenditures have doubled (from $9,900 in 1975 to $18,804 in 1980) since the pool opened six years ago, revenues for the most part from classes and fees have remained basically unchanged (generally around $5,500).

Parker said last night that the pool is not viewed as a break-even operation and he pointed out that he knew of no public pools that make money. He noted that the increase in charges would not reduce the deficit a lot but would help bring it more in line with operating projections.

The pool will continue to reflect a deficit, he said, adding, "we know that." The spokesman, saying that "we don't like to go up at all," said he did not think the increase would outpace anyone from using the facility.

It was pointed out that some hardship cases will probably arise but Dr. Edgar Hooks said he would be willing to help and he felt other local citizens would help in those situations.

Hooks noted in offering his motion to increase the fees and class charges that if the board raised those figures to 75 cents for admission and $7.50 for classes, "in one or two years... have to do it again." Hopefully, the $1 and $10 charges would suffice longer.

Figures presented on the pool revenues indicated that the adopted charges would produce some $10,000 in revenues, based on projected usage. That figure, Parker said, should reduce the operating deficit from the present 78 percent to possibly 48-50 percent. An increase in fees to 75 cents for admission and $7.50 for classes would probably reduce the deficit to 58-62 percent, he said.

Commissioners also discussed the possibility of charging any outside group for use of the facility. Director Boyd Lee said that at the present time, the Greenville Swim Club is the only outside agency using the pool that is not paying a fee.

Hooks said he felt that if the swim club was charged for using the pool, the commission should look at the possibility of charging other special groups for use of local recreation facilities. He said if a baseball group does not pay for lights when it has a tournament here, the swim club should not have to pay when it holds a meet in Greenville.

Commission Chairman Roy Carawan appointed Mrs. Dorothy Woolees, Joe Godette and Dan Earnhardt to take an in-depth look at all recreational activities here in regard to income and expenditures. The committee will study the total program, including special interest groups using the facilities.

In other business, Hooks was appointed to work with Lee in revising a report on department fees and charges for consideration at the March meeting. The City Council had questions regarding the interpretation of certain phrases in the report.

Commissioners received copies of the department's 1980 annual report for review. Lee said that several major accomplishments took place during the year, including the continued management of the Young Adult Conservation Corps grant, construction of the River Birch Tennis Center and the control center at River Park, installation of $65,000 worth of lights at Guy Smith Stadium, the first volunteer appreciation banquet, and increased programming with no additional staff.

Governor Seeks Reduce Cutback In State Jobs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After seeing them eye massive cuts in his "lean but progressive" state budget, Gov. Jim Hunt has persuaded legislative budget leaders to at least delay their efforts to eliminate more than 500 state jobs.

Hunt summoned leaders of House and Senate budget-cutting efforts to a meeting in the Capitol Wednesday. The lawmakers, Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Mount Gilead, and Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh, have led legislative calls for a reduction in 501 state jobs and cuts of $200 million a year in state spending.

The job reductions were to be in addition to 1,002 jobs already ordered eliminated by Hunt.

Hunt was not available for comment after the session, but Adams and Jordan said they had agreed to give Hunt more time to identify the jobs his cabinet secretaries were willing to see cut. They said their insistence on the cuts was still firm, however.

"I think it's safe to say the governor can now tell his department heads we mean business," said Adams.

Adams and Jordan, chairmen of House and Senate base budget committees, had asked the executive branch to identify 501 jobs it was willing to sacrifice by next Monday.

In return for the unspecified delay, the legislative leaders said they expected the administration to be more cooperative in their budget-trimming efforts. They said department heads would now be expected to set priorities on which programs they would be most willing to see cut, if cuts from the proposed 1981-83 budget are ultimately made.

"He defended his budget... but I found his attitude to be cooperative," Jordan said of the governor.

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce said the governor's position was that he had cut all the positions out of state government that could be cut without damaging essential services.

Hunt has defended his budget as both lean and progressive. "The Legislature has a right to do that, but it's going to be difficult to do without cutting essential services," Pearce said.

Marvin Dorman, Hunt's deputy state budget officer, attended the meeting and said the governor was not fighting the legislators' efforts.

Balloonists Depart On Round-The-World Trip

LUXOR, Egypt (AP) — Two daring Americans, bundled against subzero temperatures, lifted off today in an attempt to make the first nonstop, manned balloon flight around the world.

The flight had been delayed repeatedly as the balloonists waited for winds to shift so that they would pass south of Iran after a threat from Tehran that they would be treated as hostile aircraft if they entered Iranian air space.

"We are holding our breath about the winds aloft," Anderson said as he arrived at Luxor airport in his green flightsuit. "It's not that the winds improved today, but that they worsen Friday and Saturday."

Anderson said he and Ida expected to reach an altitude of 30,000 feet in three hours. The beginning of the trip would be slow because winds are light, he added.

They should be over Saudi Arabia 25 hours after launch, said Anderson, who became the first person to cross the Atlantic Ocean by balloon when he piloted the Double Eagle II from Canada to France in 1978.

A malfunction in a key electrical component delayed the liftoff for several hours today. It was the fifth time the flight had been put off.

"They have a problem with a small, essential item," the expedition's weather director, Bob Rice, said in a telephone interview.

CREMATORIUM

I know that my death is not too distant and I would like my body to be cremated. It would be nice to make arrangements in advance and spare my family this responsibility. Where is the nearest crematorium and do I have to go through a funeral home to make these arrangements?

According to John M. Gray, owner and operator of Gray's Crematorium in Raleigh, which appears to be the nearest such facility, you can prearrange your cremation and you do not need the services of a funeral home unless you desire a conventional funeral in advance of the cremation. You can, instead, request that your family or minister or both simply hold a memorial service after the cremation.

According to North Carolina law, Gray said, the body does not have to be embalmed and no casket is required. Urns costing from $10 to $900 can be purchased, but do not have to be. Gray's offers 24-hour pickup service. Current cost of removal of the body, cremation and professional services such as filing of death certificate and the like is $395, he said. There is no law in North Carolina concerning disposition of ashes, he added, and the family can do as they will with them.

For an informational pamphlet, you may write Gray's Crematorium, 401 & U. S. 70 South, Raleigh, N.C. 27603, or telephone, 834-2545.

Charged In Hotel Blaze

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A 23-year-old busboy who told police he turned in the alarm on the Las Vegas Hilton fire has been booked on eight counts of murder in the blaze, which sent a column of flame roaring up the side of the country's largest hotel.

Homicide detectives said Wednesday night they had arrested Philip Bruce Cline after the room service busboy made "inconsistent statements" about his role in the biggest of the four fires deliberately set in the hotel Tuesday night.

The blaze — the second large and deadly hotel fire in Las Vegas in three months — killed eight people and injured 196. Hospitals had said that 242 people were hurt, but officials later said that figure was incorrect.

Cline told The San Diego Evening Tribune before his arrest that he tried to put out the fire on the eighth floor with water carried in a trash can. When that failed, Cline said he ran down the hall, knocking on doors to warn guests.

The busboy also was booked on one count of arson. Officials had no explanation immediately for the three other fires.

Formal charges would be filed at an arraignment, which officials said would take place before the end of the week.

In the aftermath of the blaze, which Fire Chief Roy Parrish termed "definitely arson," scorch marks scarred the side of the Hilton's east tower, where flames burst from eighth-floor windows and shot to the top of the 30-story building.

Knotted bedsheets still hung from broken windows and an army of security guards was on patrol. Police said they had questioned some people about looting but there were no arrests and no immediate reports of large thefts.

Guests who fled rooms in the east wing, most severely damaged in the blaze, were being escorted in today to reclaim abandoned suitcases and other belongings.

Hundreds of people who lined up for hours Wednesday to wait for escorts to their rooms found their doors had been wrenched open during firefighters' room-to-room search for

Texasgulf, Inc. Executives Die In Crash

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Seven people were killed Wednesday night when a small jet owned by a Connecticut corporation crashed in dense woods and poor weather on approach to the Westchester County Airport, authorities said.

The bodies were found among scattered, burning wreckage in the Town of North Castle about a mile away from the airport at 9:21 p.m., about 2½ hours after the four-engine Lockheed Jetstar crashed, police said.

The craft was owned by Texasgulf Inc. of Stamford, Conn., according to the Federal Aviation Administration, which said there were seven people aboard including a pilot and co-pilot. The plane can carry 10 to 12 people.

William Askin, a Texasgulf spokesman, said five top executives of the company, including chief executive officer and board chairman Charles Fogarty, were believed to have been returning from a meeting in Canada when the crash occurred.

Residents of North Castle reported seeing a flash which lit up the sky when the plane crashed and an impact which shook their houses.

The pilot of the plane talked to the tower at the airport at 6:42 p.m. as he approached at 2,000 feet for a landing, said Irving Moss, an FAA spokesman. At that time, the plane was within four miles of the airport, he said.

Three minutes later witnesses told police they had seen a "fireball" in the air in the Cooney Hill section of North Castle near the airport, Moss said.

Weather conditions were said to be poor in the area, with only seven-eighths of a mile visibility.

Moss said the aircraft left Westchester County Wednesday morning for Montreal and was returning at the time of the crash.

The crash was about two miles northwest of the airport, which is on the border of New York's Westchester County and Connecticut's Fairfield County, about 25 miles north of mid-Manhattan.

Hair Styles Forecast: Shorter And Textured

CHICAGO (AP) — Hemlines are inching up for spring, and so are hair lengths.

"Fall fashion's wide-shouldered T-shape is narrower, and clothing is more loosely structured. Hair will follow that silhouette with freer, fuller, shorter looks," says Victor Figueroa, New York-based member of the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board.

The dozen board members, top professionals from across the nation, agree that the basic hair message for spring is short.

"Everyone has wanted smooth hair and straight page styles," says Peter Friedauer in Denver. "But when hair goes short, you need more volume or fullness. We'll see more height on the short hairstyles for spring."

Rosalie Cantrell in Seattle comments, "We've been doing lots of long hair. But people are getting tired of combs, barrettes and hair in the eye. My clients want their hair cut. They want texture — a chunkier, wispier, shorter style. We'll layer it, and give it fullness for spring."

This short-hair look is "close and sleek at the sides, and 'lifted' for height at the top with perming or cutting techniques," according to Darleen Hakola in Portland, Ore. "The focus is the top of the head, almost with a '50s, Elvis look."

"On longer hair," she notes, "the fullness will be low, at the ends. Long hair will still be close around the head, and we'll still see simple side braids for control around the face."

In the past few years, shoulder-length hair has been worn up or back, in straight styles. Now, members of the board predict a flowing look of big waves or curls.

John Dellaria, in Boston, calls it "the romance of the curve," and traces it to fashion interest in Art Nouveau. "It's a soft, pretty, romantic look," he says. And it's important for spring, he adds.

Curl has been softening since the mid-'70s, from tight Afro curls to the undulating "S" curves of spring 1981. "We'll see more of an arc than a wave," says Rocco Altobelli, in Minneapolis. "We're looking for lift and volume without curl."

To add that extra volume, bounce and curvy-style support to hair, the experts are using old and new techniques: lacing or backcombing, razoring, layering, cutting spiky height into the hair, hot roller setting, hair coloring to add the illusion of fullness, body perming for wave, and body amplifier treatments for fullness without curl.

"Body treatments add direction and lift, enhance the cut, and create movement without wave," says Michael Swiger in Phoenix, Ariz. "And, like perms, they help sustain the style for weeks at a time. That's important to the client who wants a hairstyle to last."

This look of subtle style support points up the sophistication of new spring hair fashions, board members note. Curl is seldom seen, and curve is barely there. Classic styles are updated in quiet, simple ways: asymmetrical bangs on a pageboy, or a single unadorned braid on one side of long hair. Spring's "fullness" is slight — not a wild, frizzy look of volume, but soft style enhancement.

Coloring techniques too that subtle fashion line for spring. Last year, board members saw brighter, richer, more vibrant hair coloring for the future, to complement more colorful clothing looks. But this year, hair coloring is "very delicate" and close to natural shades, according to Gerald Haynes in Detroit.

"Hair color shouldn't confine a person to constant retouches," he explains, "so we're working with five or eight strands of hair at a time, adding several shades close to the natural hair color. That way, the hair doesn't look grown out at the scalp in a few weeks."

Daytime makeup colors are "clean, natural and tender," says Judith Gordon, Chicago makeup expert. "It's classic makeup, with natural shades and very pale lips. The look is soft and pretty."

Short or long, wispy, spiky or curved, the hairstyling experts say they are coaxing the best out of natural hair looks, rather than designing startling creations.

"Nothing's freaky or wild this spring," says Jerry Gordon in Chicago. "There's a simplicity to the looks. We're trying to bring out the best of what's already there by enhancing the hair — it's like bringing out the fire in a diamond."

SPRING HEADLINES — Gentle curves have replaced curls in the fashion forefront. The look is totally soft, easy care — and very feminine, such as this style by Rocco Altobelli, Helene Curtis Hairstylist Advisory Board member.

Questions Answered

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I am asked a rude or prying question I don't want to answer, I always respond with a question. Examples:

Q. "How much did you pay for that coat?"
A. "Yours is much prettier. How much did you pay for yours?"

Q. "I hear your daughter is getting a divorce. What happened?"
A. "Why don't you ask her the next time you see her?"

Q. "How old are you?"
A. "Why do you want to know?"
Abby, this has always worked for me. And I never offend anyone because I always smile when I say it, and make a good-humored joke of it. Meanwhile I have avoided answering the question without resorting to the equally rude, "It's none of your business."

ON GUARD IN WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR ON GUARD: Beautiful.

DEAR ABBY: I hope this letter makes your column because a lot of people need to get this message. My daughter was married recently, and while I was standing in the receiving line at the reception, a cousin embraced and kissed me, then between sneezes, with an obviously stopped-up nose, said in a croaking voice, "I've been in bed all week with the flu, but nothing could keep me away from this wedding, so I got out of a sick bed to be here."

Abby, the poor dear really thought she had done us a favor by coming. She would have done us a bigger favor by staying home! And would you believe this well-meaning but inconsiderate woman actually kissed the bride?

TYPHOID MARY'S COUSIN

DEAR COUSIN: Yours is a timely letter. Thanks for the opportunity to remind readers that the flu and colds should not be treated lightly — a thorough recovery is essential. A relapse due to returning to work (or school) prematurely can lead to pneumonia, or even prove fatal. And, mothers, please don't send your children to school with coughs and runny noses!

DEAR ABBY: What could be more Shakespearean or more like Ibsen than this real-life drama?

My father, a very handsome and physical man, has had the same mistress all his married life. His wife (my mother) was aware of it, and in her later years she has become morbid and melancholy, until now she is completely senile. She knows nothing. Father is very attentive to her. He has his mistress come to his home every day to take care of Mother. This mistress, who was the object of Mother's most passionate hatred in years gone by, is now the object of poor

Mixed Drinks Best Way

Next Tuesday Greenville voters will visit the polls to determine whether mixed drinks can be served within the city.

There have been campaigns for and against, with the opponents maintaining that liquor-by-the-drink will mean more alcohol consumption and the proponents saying it will mean less.

As alcohol always does, it has become an emotional issue with claims that broken homes will result, along with higher cost to society.

We cannot deny that, for some, alcohol is a problem, but neither can it be denied that alcohol has been with us for all recorded history and is handled properly by most people. National prohibition did nothing to halt the consumption of alcohol and, in fact, brought on the foundation of some of the crime syndicates that apparently are still with us today.

Thus on Tuesday none of us will be voting on the elimination of alcohol. We don't believe it could be eliminated in Pitt County under any circumstances. Nor do we believe that in voting in favor of allowing mixed drinks any citizens will be on the side of more consumption of alcohol.

We have to feel that the serving of mixed drinks is superior to the present method of brown bagging and we believe that voting in favor of liquor-by-the-drink is best for Greenville.

COULDN'T HAPPEN AT A BETTER TIME!

Department Attacks Fraud

Pitt County Social Services Director Ed Garrison says his department is serious about the problem of welfare fraud.

There are five investigators on the staff and three convictions have been obtained this year, he said.

The efforts are sound. Those who obtain benefits fraudulantly not only deprive others who are needy, but also run up the costs of social programs for all of us.

THIS AFTERNOON

Findings Ignored

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The sun has set on a review process which, when seen by dawn's light, promised to help at least slow down, if not halt, the steady growth of governmental activities.

Popularly called "Sunset" because of the basic philosophy which is that governmental programs should expire at a given time unless they could justify their existence, North Carolina tiptoed into a trial run of the method a couple of years ago.

It was the intention of supporters in the General Assembly that the first studies would cover state regulatory and licensing boards as a test to prove the method so it could later be used throughout state government; on entrenched agencies and bureaucracies which go from year to year with no challenge to the fundamental: is the program doing something necessary, and is it doing it well?

The End

It now seems certain that the General Assembly will scuttle the Governmental Evaluation Commission without having given serious attention to the numerous reports issued on a host of licensing and regulatory boards which pointed out duplications, weaknesses, spending problems, and outlined procedures for change and, in certain cases, abandonment of the agency.

The Sunset Commission approached each agency under review with this basic question in mind: is this activity essential to protecting the public's health, safety, or welfare; is it costing the public a fair amount of money for what the public gets; or is it causing the public to pay more for goods or services than it should?

A number of regulatory and licensing activities were spotlighted for action, but when watchmakers and barbers and beauticians and nurses and lawyers and pharmacists and a growing list of other special interest groups began to storm the doors of their elected representatives demanding that restrictive entry requirements which discourage competition be maintained, and that "professional status" would suffer without the numerous boards and commission, the review process was doomed.

Legislators are putting the blame on cost of the Sunset Commission Review — about a quarter of a million yearly. The General Assembly is costing $34,000 daily, so in the wasted opening days of inaction now going on in Raleigh, more than that has already been spent by legislators themselves.

The Future

The more important loss is not that the Sunset Commission was unable to bring about reform in the regulatory and licensing field, but that the experiment has been declared a failure and will not be applied to the agencies and bureaucracies of government itself.

In seeking the dismantle the sunset commission, legislative leaders have hinted that the law-making body may take on the task of running similar review with in-house staff.

Gov. Jim Hunt says he believes the Sunset Commission has done a thorough, hardnosed job on the licensing boards, and "that is precisely the job which the General Assembly wanted them to do."

Perhaps there is not a lot of sympathy in the General Assembly for expanding the sunset concept. The proof will come when legislators are required to put up the money for staff and set up the rules for further study. Says Hunt: "It is absolutely essential that it be done with integrity...thoroughly rather than in a shallow way."

GROWING NEW CLASS

More Upper Americans

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
WASHINGTON (AP) — A class of people who "deplore food that smacks of meat and potatoes" and "shudder at movie heroes" are rising to power in the United States.

Princeton University Professor Eric S. Goldman calls them Upper Americans and suggests their fundamental credo might be: "Let's not be Middle American."

While there is a certain humorous tone to Goldman's observations, the underlying theme is a serious one: The growing influence of Upper Americans, coupled with their disdain for Middle Americans, may make it impossible to develop a national consensus in the United States.

ed States.

Goldman writes about the evolution of Upper Americans in "Reflections of America," a collection of essays issued by the Census Bureau to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Statistical Abstract.

A former presidential consultant, Goldman estimates Upper Americans make up at least 15 percent of the adult population but "they are influential far beyond their sheer numbers."

"They deplore food that smacks of meat and potatoes, brush aside beer or bourbon for vodka or wine. They shudder at movie heroes, advice columnists and TV evangelists, unabashed patriotism, fussy clothes or jewelry, the woman who thinks family is everything, and the man who is a straight arrow."

The impact of Upper Americans, Goldman says, "is particularly great because of their heavy presence in fields that have to do with the projection of ideas and attitudes — radio and television, the powerhouse newspapers, magazine and book publishing, the leading universities and a far-flung array of service organizations that have talent and money."

Upper Americans have brought much to the country, according to Goldman, including their increased knowledge about public policy, receptivity to change, a more humane attitude toward the disadvantaged and a heightening of taste in literature and the arts.

This is somewhat tempered, however, by the possibility of their avoidance of things Middle American becoming simple snobbery. Upper Americans tend to forget that they are just one more special interest group, he says, because they believe they are basing their opinions on superior comprehension.

The Middle American reaction to this new group is displayed in a statement Goldman attributes to a Denver Middle American: "Those people make you feel like some kind of clod. They not only usually have more money; they say your ideas are dumb, going to a hockey game is low class, and your wife has a frowsy hairdo."

Such personal and emotional division between groups, Goldman warns, can seriously hamper the process of reaching a national consensus on public issues.

Goldman's essay reports that the Upper American is the latest group or class in a nation formed by Frontier Americans, developed by Urban Americans and largely populated by Middle Americans.

Upper Americans have not only gone to college, he says, but "to the kind of institution where the dominant climate of opinion was impatience with, if not contempt for, the values of Middle America."

Upper Americans are avidly on the make, economically and socially "but avoid the appearance of sheer moneymaking or sheer caste," he says.

To the editor:

Responding to the scurrilous flyer distributed against Liquor by the Drink, we would like to point out that the issue up for vote is not a moral or religious issue, but an issue, if approved, to permit Greenville to grow and prosper by updating its thinking and re-evaluating its goals as a community. This is one means of progress — a means to expansion.

On the individual items, our comments:

MORE DRUNKS — A "drunk" is a "drunk," regardless of the law, the bottle or the glass. Drinking is cheaper now and easier than it will be with Liquor by the Drink.

MORE BARS — Under the Referendum, an establishment must have 51 percent food business to have a license under Liquor by the Drink.

MORE TRAFFIC DEATHS — At the present people are allowed to carry their bottles with little control.

MORE DIVORCE — Divorce stems from many things. It happens many times where neither spouse takes even one drink!

MORE TEEN DRINKING — Presently any "friend" 21-plus years can purchase a bottle for teenagers. Liquor by the Drink puts controls on who drinks in restaurants.

MORE CRIME AND CHILD ABUSE — This is speculation for an increase in these areas; aren't these caused by other problems?

MORE TAXES — The $10-per-gallon tax is paid by the permit holder, of which $9 stays in the county.

MORE BOOTLEGGING — Doing away with the restriction in liquor will decrease the need for bootlegging.

MORE PROSTITUTION — Our attitudes and concerns and involvements as a community are the only way to "police" — that situation.

The consumption of alcohol is not the issue; it's the manner of distribution. Haven't we forgotten that moral issues are social problems the community needs to cope with or control separately?

To the editor:

I am sure by now that all your readers are aware of the problems the Lyndale residents have been having with the huge numbers of black birds residing in our neighborhood.

I would like to thank the Daily Reflector and WNCN-TV for making the public aware of our community's problem. I would also like to thank the City of Greenville for its efforts in the Jan. 14 clearing of underbrush, although it did not eliminate the bird problem.

It is refreshing for some of us youth to see a group of adults appreciative of local government's help, but not totally dependent on it to solve all of their problems — as seems the trend these days. I urge the residents of Lyndale and other concerned persons to lend support to the Lyndale Neighborhood Association and the Lyndale Development Corporation as they seek to raise funds to hire heavy equipment for clearing the remaining underbrush in the spring.

It is sincerely hoped that no health problems will occur and that the bird will go elsewhere next year.

To the editor:

Last week I read a small editorial comment in this newspaper ("Streamlining a Staff," Feb. 2) on the elimination of 21 government positions. Our own congressman, Walter B. Jones, took over the chairmanship of the House Merchant marine and Fisheries Committee and discovered that it came with a bloated staff, so he eliminated 21 positions and saved the taxpayers $500,000 a year. Those of us who saw the editorial applauded this step in the right direction and watched anxiously for more comments among the other news media. Nothing came! What happened?

We all understand the power of the news media to affect our opinions and sometimes our actions. Many believe that the media coverage of the riots in the 60's spawned more rioting because it became the "in" thing to do.

Recognizing this power, I challenge all the news media to now use it constructively. We have been inundated by the stories of government waste, bureaucracy, and inflation until we finally have been convinced to put those into office who promised us a change. Now the media must make the elimination of waste and bureaucracy the "in" thing to do, encouraging more of the same. Any teacher can tell you the way to encourage good work habits is to strongly encourage the student when he does something right. Our politicians are no different. They will be more likely to make constructive cuts in spending if they know they will receive "good press" for doing so.

We can compare our fight with inflation to a basketball game where the home team is trailing 90-0. Anyone who has ever watched a college ballgame can tell you that, with the home crowd loudly cheering for each point put on the board by the home team, they can come from behind and win, sometimes over seemingly impossible odds. Well, let's all cheer for the first two points on the board and give our politicians the home team advantage.

Strength For Today

A HIGHWAY OF HEALTH AND JOY

One of the hardest things we have to face is the necessity of a surgical operation. But these are seldom as fearful as we anticipate when we contemplate them in advance.

Physicians make plenty of mistakes, for they are human. But on the whole the modern scientists, physicians and surgeons have done more to relieve human suffering than any other group that has appeared upon the planet. They can never entirely remove discomfort from surgical operations, but they have succeeded in removing practically all the fear and much of the pain.

If any of us need to undergo an operation, we should remember that nature is always at work trying to bring about recovery — and nature means simply God operating in the physical world. Powers higher than our own are at work for our recovery. Skills greater than those of human hands are at work to set our feet again upon the highway of health and joy. — Elisha Donelass

Farm Drought Impact Awaited

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When winter closes down production in the farm belts, city dwellers tend to forget the severe drought that has plagued those areas since last summer, and which has continued ever since.

Now, with spring planting time approaching, said Lee Schuster, a farmer and farm manager, "We have the potential for an explosive situation." The fallout, he said, might include sharply higher prices.

In this city, and other cities worried about their own water supplies, the bad situation on the farms has been nearly forgotten during the winter, when people see few media photos of crops withered by drought.

But the drought is unabated, said Schuster, executive vice president of Oppenheimer Industries, Inc., a Kansas City-based firm with 800,000 acres under management. In many areas there has been little rain or snow. Over vast areas there is very little subsurface moisture.

The expanse is unusual. Storm tracks in some years might deprive one area of moisture and drench another. This time, said Schuster, "there is no place in this country of agricultural importance that has gained moisture at the expense of another." Aside from the Southeast, most important growing areas are affected to some degree.

Now combine the economic situation. With loans costing 20 percent, many farmers are going to be cautious about borrowing to fertilize their acreage for 100 percent production. Not knowing if water will be available, some may plant for 80 percent rather than optimum yields.

"A farmer can gear up for 100 bushels an acre or he can settle for 80," said Schuster

"If he goes for the maximum things have to work out correctly," he said. "Given the moisture conditions, there's a lot of caution and fear."

If production is curtailed, it would mean higher grain prices not just for consumers but for beef, poultry and other livestock producers. They in turn might be forced to cut back, eventually adding to the upward price cycle.

The balance of supply and demand already is precarious because of last summer and fall's drought, Schuster points out. Corn production last year dropped 17 percent from the year before. Soybeans fell 21 percent. Wheat, harvested early, escaped the drought; it might not this year.

As a result, prices of some grains already are much higher than they were a year ago. Corn, for example, now sells at about $3.45 a bushel compared with $2.67 last year. "If anything happens to disrupt the '81 harvest," warns Schuster, there could be a grain price explosion.

"Anything," of course, includes the possibility the drought will continue. In general, he says, 10 inches of moisture are needed to restore normal conditions between now and spring, which is a lot to hope for in so short a period.

What are the chances? Nobody knows, but with a weather eye and a feel in his bones, Schuster conceded his outlook and hope was for "some relief." This drought, he feels, is "out of sync."

Ask him if he would borrow at 20 percent and fertilize to the maximum and you might get a different answer. Farmers are accustomed to risks, but high money and low water is a formidable combination.

"There's a lot of caution and a lot of fear," he said

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Mild weather is expected for most of the southern tier in the forecast until Friday. Rain is indicated for the Pacific Northwest coastal areas and most of the nation is expected to be chilly. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The recent storms had nothing to do with spring. Instead, they heralded a return of winter to North Carolina Wednesday night and early this morning.

Cold arctic air accompanied by strong northwesterly winds moved into western North Carolina Wednesday. Around the state early this morning temperatures dropped into the single digits in the mountains and into the teens across the piedmont.

Over the eastern half of the state early morning readings dropped into the 20s. At the Asheville-Hendersonville airport an early morning temperature of 6 degrees combined with strong winds gave a chill factor 30 degrees below zero.

High pressure centered over Tennessee early this morning will be the controlling force over our weather today.

This high pressure system will be moving rapidly northeastward today. As it does winds will be diminishing across the state.

By early Friday winds will be turning from north to northeast. This northeasterly flow across North Carolina will combine with an upper level disturbance moving east across the Appalachians to bring cloudiness back to much of the state.

Along with the cloudiness a trough of low pressure along the coast may produce some rain over the coastal sections of north carolina during the day Friday.

The leading edge of this arctic air moved through the mountains shortly after noon Wednesday dropping temperatures from the 50s into the 30s in a matter of an couple of hours. As the cold front moved east through the piedmont during the late afternoon, a few showers developed along the front. The cold front moved off shore during the evening hours Wednesday night.

High temperatures yesterday were in the 50s in the mountains and in the 60s to low 70s east of the mountains. Cherry point was the warmest in the state with a high of 71 degrees.

Mostly sunny skies will be the rule across North Carolina today, but it will be a very cold rule. Some strong winds will make the cold even more noticeable. Highs today will range from the low 20s in the northern mountains to the mid 40s on the south coast.

Travelers advisories have been discontinued in the northern mountains but roads will continue to have some snow and ice on them today.

Friday will have cloudy skies with a chance of rain along the coast. Fair weather will be the rule in the mountains with partly cloudy skies through the piedmont and coastal plain.

High temperatures Friday

Seeks Profit In Woodlands

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Forest researchers at Bladen Lakes State Forest see a gold mine under all those longleaf trees.

Comprising 32,800 acres of bay and sandy land, the forest includes everything from natural regrowth to rows of "super trees" planted for research.

It includes straw production operations, timber harvest management and insect and disease control research.

Forest operations are a major industry in North Carolina, especially in the eastern part of the state.

The American Forest Institute predicts the Southeastern United States will become the major national source of wood by the year 2000, and researchers at Bladen Lakes plan to be ready.

"By the year 2000, we expect to attain our goal of a self-sustaining forest from which four times the present annual cut (of timber) can be harvested," said Claud Hood, chief forester.

"It serves as a demonstration and research forest."

The forest is self-supporting, deriving income from logging, pine straw, firewood and creosote-treated posts. It now grosses from $400,000 to $500,000 per year.

The sale of firewood alone amounted to more than 500 tons this winter.

The pine straw is sold as mulch for plants, and brings in $130 per acre.

The researchers have also managed to increase its forest inventory.

When the project began in 1955, annual timber growth was 40 cubic feet per acre per year. With the help of "super trees" developed at the forest's nursery, the growth rate had increased to 87 cubic feet per acre per year by 1975.

Hood predicts that with a little more work, that can be increased to at least 137 cubic feet of growth per year. And that means more firewood when the demand goes up.

In addition to its research areas, the forest also has camp sites for the military and Boy Scouts, and Hood hopes to have a 2.5 mile demonstration trail completed by next year.

The trail will provide an insight into the history of forest production.

Business Takes Tougher Stance

NEW YORK (AP) — Business executives take more measures against crime and believe in harsher treatment of criminals than the general public, a new survey financed by an Ohio security company says.

The study by A-T-O Inc. found that about 40 percent of the senior executives of top American businesses fear they, family members or associates may be kidnapped or that their businesses may be arson targets.

More than half those surveyed said they have home burglar and fire alarms. It said 92 percent of executives favored the death penalty for murderers, compared to 66 percent of the general public.

Utilities Say Can't Afford To Build New Plants

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's three power companies cannot afford to build new power plants — and that could hinder the state's efforts to recruit new industry, executives of the companies told legislators Wednesday.

"We are feeling such a capital crunch now that we can barely keep our heads above water," said William Lee of the Charlotte-based Duke Power Co.

Robert Fischbach, head of the state Utilities Commission's Public Staff, said electric companies requested $239 million in rate increases in 1980. Fischbach said his staff still is compiling figures on how much of those requests were granted.

That action came on a day that saw state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth tell a legislative committee that the state's inventory tax may also be hurting efforts to attract new industry to the state.

Lee, William Berry of Virginia Electric and Power Co. and Sherwood Smith of Carolina Power & Light Co., all chief executive officers, told the Senate and House Public Utilities committees that it is becoming increasingly difficult to attract investment money for new power plants. That, he said, is because each dollar invested in the power companies when they began about 1900 is worth 69 cents now.

"Investment in the electric utilities serving North Carolina is not very attractive. They've lost their shirts (in the past)," he said. "If we as a state continue our public policy of attracting new industry for new jobs, we as a state have got to make it happen that there is that one dollar of investment."

While investment has decreased, the price of new construction has risen, Lee said. He said that since 1900, electric utilities have invested $17 billion in the state. In the next 10 years, he predicted construction would total $31 billion.

Berry said Vepco is cutting its construction program by $1.8 billion and Lee said Duke will not build six major generating units it had planned to build.

In other legislative action:

Inventory Tax
Faircloth appeared before a legislative budget subcommittee to present his department's spending request and called for repeal of the inventory tax.

Faircloth's statement was warmly received by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, the sponsor of a bill to phase out the tax on inventories over a 10-year period.

But it directly conflicts with Faircloth's employer, Gov. Jim Hunt, who told a business group several weeks ago he opposes efforts to repeal or phase out the tax this year.

The tax on inventories is collected by county governments, and the House bill would gradually phase it out with the state making payments to counties to make up for their revenue loss.

Budget Cuts
Legislative budget committees continued their search for places to cut state operating expenses by 6 percent, and the chairmen of House and Senate base budget committees wrote their subcommittee chairmen a memo reminding them of the seriousness of the task.

"The reasons are twofold," said the memo. "First, to be prepared should our fears become fact and we end up with revenues substantially below estimates and, second, it is the duty of the General Assembly to search carefully for those expenses, programs or policies we want to curtail."

The memo was written by Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh, and Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Mount Gilead. Both held an afternoon meeting with Hunt, who persuaded them to delay their efforts to cut another 501 state jobs.

Richard Petty
A public hearing was scheduled for next Wednesday on a bill establishing districts for county commissioners in Randolph County. The Senate-passed bill would have originally prevented stock car racing king Richard Petty, a Republican Randolph commissioner, from running for re-election. But it has since been amended to delete Petty.

The hearing, by the House Election Laws Committee, will be at 4 p.m.

Assault
The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would make it a felony to assault a handicapped person. Final action was delayed until today.

Education
The state does not have enough money to serve the 15 percent of its students who are mentally retarded, physically handicapped or gifted, a state education official told the House and Senate budget subcommittee on education.

Jerome Melton, deputy state school superintendent, estimated it costs twice as much to care for exceptional children — a category which includes those ranging from the handicapped to the gifted — as it costs to care for the average student. He said it would cost about $1,000 per exceptional child, but the state is paying $700 per child each year.

Taxes
The Senate Finance Committee gave tentative approval to a number of small tax-changing bills already passed by the House. One would extend until April the deadline for applying for the homestead tax exemption.

A bill that would increase the intangibles tax exemption from $1,000 to $2,500 was rejected by the committee. The bill was introduced by Sen. Cary Allred, R-Burlington.

New Bills
Among new bills filed was a House measure specifically allowing cities and counties to spend local tax money in support of the arts. Other new bills would set up licensing standards for social workers, require all health insurance policies to provide coverage for dental treatment of persons with cleft palates, and provide money for defense of charged employees in area mental health centers.

WILLIE MAYS received first aid from school officials after he collapsed during a speech to students in Hamilton Township (N.J.) but just a few hours later, the 40-year-old former baseball great wanted to return to the school to "see the kids". His collapse was attributed to extreme fatigue. (AP Laserphoto)

A CLASH OF RIGHTS

Cameras In The Courtroom

A recent Supreme Court decision helped settle a conflict between two parts of the Constitution. Some states have forbidden cameras in courtrooms because the Sixth Amendment guarantees a person accused of a crime a trial by "an impartial jury." Many judges have ruled that noises and lights from electronic equipment can prevent a fair trial. Others, have argued that the First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of the press, gives reporters the right to use cameras in the courtroom to help tell news stories more accurately. The Supreme Court ruled in favor of the reporters' First Amendment rights, although defendants may appeal a court decision on the grounds that press coverage prevented a fair trial.

Church Spokesmen Say Government Interfering

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the broadest religious gatherings in American history, including Hare Krishnas and "Moonies" as well as Christians and Jews, is hearing speaker after speaker detail growing government intrusion into church affairs.

Some recent instances of it threaten "the silencing of social and political criticism by religious bodies," said Kansas City attorney John E. Stumbo, a United Methodist representative.

He told how an agency of his denomination, under IRS warnings that the church might lose tax-exempt status, dropped out of a coalition working for gun-control legislation.

The Rev. James E. Wood, a Baptist church-state expert at Baylor University, said growing government intervention in religious operations "constitutes a mounting crisis in American church-state relations."

It is a "serious threat to the prophetic role of religion and to the constitutional guarantee of the free exercise of religion," he said. The three-day conference, which opened in suburban Chevy Chase, Md., Wednesday night, is sponsored by Christian and Jewish organizations embracing about 110 million members from 90 percent of American religious affiliations.

They included mainline as well as smaller conservative denominations, Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox.

Such controversial groups as Hare Krishnas, Scientists and Sung Myung Moon's Unification Church also were present because "the least acceptable groups are the most vulnerable victims of government intervention," said conference chairman William P. Thompson.

Thompson, chief executive of the United Presbyterian Church and a lawyer himself, said the meeting probably was the most inclusive religiously in the nation's history.

In any case, the breadth of sponsorship rivaled the religious partnerships formed in the civil rights struggles of the early 1960s.

Backers included the National Association of Evangelicals, made up of conservative groups, the mainline Protestant-Eastern Orthodox denominations of the National Council of Churches, the U.S. Catholic Conference, Southern Baptists and the Synagogue Council of America embracing all three wings of Judaism.

Thompson said the Reagan administration was invited to send a closing speaker but declined because it was still new at the job.

Listing 17 recent examples of intervention by government agencies and courts in religious matters, Thompson said the "pattern they form together is an alarming one."

However, he said the conference did not intend any "militant counterattack on the government" nor see any "calculated conspiracy" by it but aimed to review the data and plan ways of responding to the trend.

Attorney William B. Ball of Harrisburg, Pa., a Roman Catholic who has handled numerous church-state cases, said there are numerous instances of "deliberate governmental aggression against religious liberty."

In a keynote address Wednesday night, he cited various state attempts to license religious ministries, the imposition of equal rights laws on religious institutions and IRS rulings intended to define what is and is not religion.

FRANK STEINBECK, Co-Chairman, CONCERNED CITIZENS

FRANK STEINBECK says: "The proposed Liquor-by-the-Drink law does not outlaw brown-bagging. The vast bulk of brown-bagging now done in social establishments; private clubs; parties; professional associations, etc., will continue unabated. Only the very small percentage of over-all brown-bagging now done in restaurants will end. Passage of this law will mean ABC Stores, PLUS brown-bagging, PLUS Liquor-by-the-drink for Greenville. No other state in the nation allows all three means of distribution of the NO. ONE drug—alcohol." GREENVILLE AND PITT COUNTY cannot afford to pay out $12.95 for every $1.00 received in revenue!!!

Destroy Calf With Mechanical Heart

By BOB KUESTERMAN

Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) —

Tennison, a Jersey calf who lived a record 268 days with an artificial heart, has been destroyed because he was suffering from an infection, the University of Utah reported.

The calf was put to sleep Wednesday because "he was suffering," said Pam Fogle, a university spokeswoman.

Tennison had an infection along the drive lines that connect the air-driven heart to its power source, said Larry Hastings, a technician at the heart laboratory of the Artificial Organs Division.

The heart is slightly larger than the model surgeons at the University Medical Center propose putting in a human this year.

Such infections are a problem with animals, but would not be expected with human patients who are more easily kept clean, Hastings said.

The autopsy, which was nearly completed, had found that the animal was suffering from infection complications that were not treatable by antibiotics, Ms. Fogle said.

"He was a much-loved calf, and they're pretty broken up" and exhausted after monitoring Tennison through the night, she said.

The previous record survival by an animal with an artificial heart was 221 days, set by the calf Fumi Joe in 1979.

Tennison was tethered to the compressed air supply by the two 6-foot-long tubes running out of its chest.

Doctors had expected Tennison to die eventually for the same reason other calves with implants died — from outgrowing the hearts. Tennison had grown from 160 to 330 pounds.

After more than 20 years of experimenting with artificial hearts in animals, the researchers have been authorized by a university committee to implant a polyurethane heart in a human patient.

The proposal was to go to the federal Food and Drug Administration for a 30-day review. The agency is empowered to approve or deny the proposal.

The researchers will then begin searching for a suitable patient, a person who would die without the device, and who would be willing to be "tethered to the device forever."

Deadline Near For City Tags

The deadline for displaying Greenville city vehicle license plates is midnight February 15, but motorists may have a day or two grace since the 15th falls on Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that officers will begin issuing citations, "the latter part of next week," to those who don't have their licenses displayed, rather than at midnight Sunday. He said, however, that warning tickets will be issued after the deadline.

Residents of the city are required to purchase and display city vehicle registration tags. Cannon emphasized that the tags are required to be displayed on the vehicle in order to comply with the law.

The chief and other city officials said that motorcycle owners, who have difficulty in displaying both the N.C. state license plate and the metal city plate, may stick the city validation sticker on the front fork of the motorcycle beside the N.C. safety inspection sticker.

Take Steps To Prevent Party

QUENEMO, Kan. (AP) — With memories of the mayhem of Friday, June 13, still fresh, residents of this tiny east-central Kansas town are taking steps to prevent another wild gathering of motorcyclists on Friday, Feb. 13.

Over the years, the town of 400 has become a traditional party site for bikers marking Friday the 13th — and this Friday is the first such date since three people lost their lives when 2,500 visitors, many of them bikers, rumbled into Quenemo last year.

"To be truthful about it, I'd like to take Friday the 13th completely off the calendar," said George Bell, mayor of the Osage County town.

Community leaders have decided to ban the sale or public consumption of beer and alcoholic beverages in Quenemo on Friday. Their decision has been backed by a temporary injunction, issued Monday by an Osage County District Court judge.

State officials, too, are helping Quenemo's residents bring an end to the bikers' parties, which began as small gatherings of friends in the early 1970s and ballooned.

The gatherings usually feature hours and hours of lustily drinking and motorcycle races down Quenemo's main street.

Fed up with the gatherings, town officials went to the statehouse for help after the June 13 party at which one man was shot to death and two people were killed in traffic accidents. Vandals caused $500 in damage to area police cars that weekend.

Gov. John Carlin told town officials the parties could be stopped through a coordinated effort of state, county and local officials.

Attorney General Robert Stephan helped Osage County Attorney Calvin Williams obtain the temporary injunction. Williams said neither of the two Quenemo businesses that sold beer June 13 had violated the law, but he argued that a nuisance and a danger would exist if another party were held Friday in Quenemo.

In addition, Osage County authorities joined other agencies in developing contingency plans for a bikers' gathering.

Bill Muir, a special assistant to Carlin, said one contingency plan involved blocking all roads leading into Quenemo on Friday. However, Muir said intelligence reports gathered from law enforcement agencies in other states indicate motorcycle gangs were not loading up and heading for Quenemo despite publicity about the planned party in several motorcycle magazines with national circulations.

Even if this Friday passes peacefully in Quenemo, officials face another challenge soon. The next Friday the 13th is in March.

Hotel Blaze.....

victims.

Inside, walls and furniture were thick with soot. The sooty, waterlogged carpets looked like mud.

Hilton officials estimated the damage at $10 million but said the hotel could be reopened in a week because some 1,900 of the 2,783 rooms were undamaged by the fire. The first-floor casino was unscathed. The other rooms were damaged, mostly by smoke.

More than 4,000 people fled the building during the fire, including 110 who were plucked from the roof by helicopters. Among the guests overcome by smoke was singer Natalie Cole, who performed at the hotel Monday.

Deputy Chief Eric Cooper said Cline "had given an initial statement last night (Tuesday) and another statement today (Wednesday) and there were inconsistencies."

One of eight people questioned at the scene of the blaze, Cline "stated he was the first one to discover the fire," Cooper said. All eight were released after questioning Tuesday night.

But after two hours of questioning Wednesday, Cline was formally arrested and booked in connection with the main fire.

Cooper said there is "probable cause to determine only that he's responsible for the main fire on the eighth floor. ... We have no explanation yet for the other fires."

Some Hilton guests, still camped on cots at the nearby Las Vegas Convention Center, cheered Gov. Robert List's statement that a person convicted of arson in a fatal fire could be executed under Nevada law.

"This is a destructive criminal act," he said. "This state has a tough law. The penalty for arson that kills someone is capital punishment."

The blaze had four points of origin, Parrish said.

The main fire began in the eighth floor elevator area and "spread from the eighth to the 29th floors by leaping outside," Parrish said. Within 15 minutes, it reached the uppermost floors, bursting windows and lapping back into the building.

The other fires were set in a second-floor uniform linen area, a third-floor service elevator and a ninth-floor fire hose, he said.

Evidence of arson included fire hoses on the ninth floor that were severed and stuffed with a flammable material.

Officials have declined to say exactly how the fire was started.

Hilton Hotel Vice President Henri Lewin, meanwhile, offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to arsonists.

There had been no prior threats to the hotel, he said. But hotel officials did receive a call during the fire from someone who asked: "Is the fire still on? Have they got you yet?"

The scene of destruction was reminiscent of the aftermath of last November's inferno at the MGM Grand hotel two miles away in which 84 people died.

Convict Ten Of Terror Bombing

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal court jury deliberated a little more than two hours before finding 10 suspected members of the Puerto Rican terrorist group FALN guilty of federal charges stemming from bombings and attempted bombings in the Chicago area.

The defendants, who refused to participate in their defense during the six-day U.S. District Court trial, were convicted Wednesday on all counts of seditious conspiracy, armed robbery, interstate transportation of stolen vehicles and violations of weapons laws.

Each of the 10 could be sentenced to up to 90 years in prison.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeremy D. Margolis said he was pleased with the jury's decision, saying it was "the message they sent to people who would use guns and bombs against innocent people — men, women and children."

The 13-count federal indictment stemmed from bombings and attempted bombings on 13 dates between 1975 and 1979, when explosive devices were found in or near 28 public buildings in Chicago.

The defendants also were accused of the armed takeover of the Carter-Mondale campaign headquarters in Chicago's Loop last March 15.

The FALN, a Spanish acronym for Armed Forces for National Liberation, demands an independent government for Puerto Rico and has claimed responsibility for bombings in several major U.S. cities.

The defendants, who were taken from the courtroom at the start of the trial when they caused disturbances, insisted they were prisoners of war and asked that they be tried by an international tribunal.

They did not appear in the courtroom to hear their verdicts announced. However, Judge Thomas R. McMillen said the defendants

Arrest 4 Persons In Vandalism Acts

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Four people were arrested Wednesday on charges of breaking and entering after vandalism Tuesday night damaged more than 100 cars.

Goldsboro police estimated damage at more than $12,000.

Charged with breaking and entering to a vehicle were Robert Warrick, 22, Timothy E. Edwards, 19, Nancy J. Potts, 20, and James W. Farmer, 26.

All were being held at the Wayne County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Police Chief C.M. Gilstrap said more than 100 cars were vandalized and police were still getting reports.

The incidents occurred on several streets in Goldsboro. Gilstrap said it was the worst vandalism he had ever witnessed.

"Cars all over town were hit," Gilstrap said. "These people picked locations where cars were parked on streets such as apartment complexes and government housing projects. Car tires were slashed and windshields and windows were broken out."

Pope Hopes Underline Peace Goal

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, who has visited the Western Hemisphere, Africa and Europe, sets out next Monday on his first pontifical visit to the Far East. In visits to the Philippines, Japan and Guam, he hopes to dramatize his concern for peace and disarmament and stress the universality of the Roman Catholic Church, Vatican sources say.

During his 12-day, 21,000-mile tour, the pontiff will visit Indochinese "boat people," pray for the victims of U.S. atomic attacks on Japan in 1945 and confer with Emperor Hirohito, once referred by the Japanese as the "sun god."

In announcing the ninth and longest overseas trip of his two-year-old papacy, the pope said he will trace the footsteps of Christian martyrs and visit the survivors of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan "to pray for the strengthening of peace and to obtain abundant fruits for the church."

The pope also plans to celebrate Masses on brief stopovers Monday in Karachi, Pakistan, on his way out and Anchorage, Alaska, on his way back Feb. 28.

A Vatican official who worked on plans for the trip said the pope firmly believes the church cannot be foreign to any nation or people and that Christianity should not be regarded as a "Western religion."

The official said there has been a reluctance, especially in Japan, to introduce an Oriental flavor to the church in Asia. On his trips to Africa and Latin America the pope encouraged, within limits, a blending of local customs to help believers feel at home in the church.

Of the 2.5 billion Asians, fewer than 100 million are Christians, half of them Roman Catholics.

Pope Paul VI visited the Philippines in 1970 on an Asian swing, but John Paul will be the first pontiff to tour Japan, where less than 1 percent of the 117 million population is Christian.

The Rev. Robert Rush, the Brooklyn-born Jesuit in charge of the society's activities in the Far East, says a key theme of the pope's trip will be "brotherhood of man, emphasizing that the church is not only prepared to give to the Asians, but also receive from their great cultural traditions."

Reflecting the wishes of the 60-year-old pope, no sightseeing or rest stops are included in the crowded schedule of Masses, addresses and other appearances which call for 16-hour days.

In Japan Feb. 23-26, John Paul is expected to celebrate all Masses and deliver some of shorter speeches in Japanese. He has been taking crash courses — up to two hours daily — in the Japanese language. He also has been studying the main native language of the Philippines, Pilipino, in preparation for his trip and is expected to make some remarks in it during his stay Feb. 17-22.

More than 80 percent of the Philippines' 49 million citizens are Roman Catholics. Colonized by Spain in the 1500s, it is Asia's only predominantly Roman Catholic country.

In Japan, by contrast, the church has made virtually no inroads in nearly 400 years. The church counts fewer than 400,000 Catholics, unchanged from the early 17th century when Christianity was introduced in Japan.

During his island-hopping pilgrimage to the Philippines, John Paul is expected to receive the kind of enthusiastic welcome he got on his visits to his native Poland, the United States, Brazil, Mexico, Ireland and other countries.

Extraordinary security will be in effect when the pope arrives in Manila, where Pope Paul VI survived an assassination attempt at the airport by a knife-wielding Bolivian, judged later to be deranged.

Vatican sources say the papal visit to the Philippines should not be viewed as an endorsement of the policies of President Ferdinand E. Marcos who in January lifted the state of martial law he imposed in 1972.

U.S. Lags In Foreign Aid Role

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

U.S. foreign aid, once the gold mine of world development, is in an accelerating decline at a time when such other industrial democracies as Japan and West Germany are setting higher and higher goals for their aid programs.

Among the top half-dozen donor nations of the West, only Britain, under Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's austerity program, has joined Washington in whittling away at its financial assistance to poorer nations.

As a result of the current aid skid, the United States now ranks 15th among 17 nations in ratios of aid-to-wealth. The 17 countries are the major aid donors of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, a grouping of industrialized democracies.

Official American development aid in 1979, the last year for which comparative statistics are available, totaled $4.7 billion, which equaled one-fifth of 1 percent of the U.S. gross national product. Only Austria, with an aid program equivalent to .19 percent of GNP, and Italy, at .08 percent, were lower.

The most generous donors statistically — Sweden, the Netherlands and Norway — all topped the .9 percent-of-GNP level, almost five times the U.S. rate.

The United States remains the biggest single contributor of foreign aid. In dollars, the Swedish, Dutch and Norwegian programs together totaled barely more than half the amount of U.S. aid.

But specialists in the field regard the aid-to-GNP ratio as the most meaningful indicator of a government's generosity.

They point out, for example, that the GNP of the United States equals the GNPs of Japan, West Germany and France combined, but those three countries together spend twice as much on foreign aid as Washington.

In the first decade after World War II, the United States was virtually alone in providing substantial overseas aid. But from more than 5 percent of GNP in the Eisenhower-Kennedy years, the aid program slipped to .32 percent in 1970, and on down to its 1979 low of 2 percent.

In its report for 1980, the OECD's Development Assistance Committee concludes "there appears to be no present chance" that OECD donors will collectively reach the United Nations' goal of .7 percent of GNP in aid by 1985. The committee largely blames the United States.

The outgoing Carter administration proposed a foreign-aid budget of $8 billion for fiscal 1982, which begins next Oct. 1, but President Reagan's Office of Management and Budget has suggested cutting that by $2.6 billion, for a budget of roughly $6.4 billion.

The State Department and OMB have been working on a compromise that is expected to be announced this week.

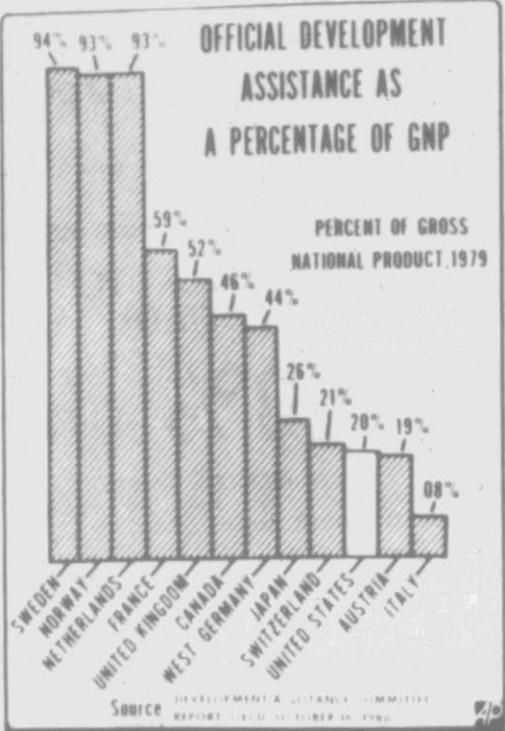

The proposed cuts drew criticism from such U.S. allies as West Germany, France and Canada. Liberals in Congress also assailed the planned cutbacks. Last month, then-Secretary of State Edmund Muskie noted the long decline and said the United States "can no longer afford to act as if foreign aid were charity, and as if diplomacy were a diversion. They are as vital to our long-run security as defense."

Nations with export-oriented economies, such as West Germany and Japan, see an additional motivation: greater development abroad means expanded markets.

The Japanese government announced last month it will try to double its foreign-aid spending over the next five years, from $10.7 billion during 1976-80 to at least $21.4 billion from 1981 to 1985.

Japan's fiscal 1981 budget is one of its most austere in years but still includes an increase of some 65 percent in foreign assistance, to $4.35 billion.

DO YOU REALLY UNDERSTAND WHAT THE MIXED DRINK LAW ALLOWS?

It doesn't simply allow restaurants to serve mixed drinks with meals—it also allows those restaurants to have adjoining bars or lounges that can sell hard liquor long after the restaurant is closed—up until 1:30 and 2:00 in the morning. When can liquor sales begin? At 7:00 in the morning Monday thru Saturday and at 1:00 p.m. on Sundays—7 days a week—19 hours per day on weekdays and 13 hours on Sunday.

How can such an open bar—7 days a week law help anybody in Greenville but the barkeepers?

Sinatra OK'd By Nevada Board

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Frank Sinatra is only one step away from a Nevada gaming license after bringing celebrity pals before the Gaming Control Board to dispel two decades of rumors about reputed mob connections that cost him his first license.

The board voted unanimously Wednesday to recommend Sinatra be granted a six-month limited license as an entertainment and public relations consultant at Caesars Palace, leaving one last hurdle in the entertainer's bid to move from the stage to the board room. The Nevada Gaming Commission will make the final decision Feb. 19.

Character witnesses including actors Gregory Peck and Kirk Douglas and Los Angeles County Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess praised Sinatra, a friend of President Ronald Reagan, during the occasionally tense five-hour hearing.

All lauded his philanthropic works, and all said they had never seen any evidence of the 65-year-old singer's purported ties to organized crime figures.

Pitchess said he had known Sinatra since 1942 and that "if Mr. Sinatra is a member of the Mafia, then I'm the Godfather."

Peck said Sinatra's work for charity "constitutes a separate career in philanthropy." He said he had been with Sinatra on hundreds of occasions "and I've never met or heard discussed any of these characters he is alleged to be associated with."

Tanned, graying and wearing a three-piece suit, Sinatra testified for nearly three hours and spent much of the time answering questions about his relationship with the late reputed Chicago mob boss Sam "Momo" Giancana.

Sinatra was reminded repeatedly of a 1963 incident — which involved Giancana — that led to the revocation of the gaming license he held for the Cal-Neva Lodge at Lake Tahoe. Giancana, listed in Nevada's "Black Book" of people barred from entering casinos, had visited singer Phyllis McGuire at the Tahoe resort.

"I never invited Mr. Giancana to come to Cal-Neva Lodge," Sinatra said. "I never entertained him and I never saw him."

Sinatra said he and his attorney, Milton Rudin, told Cal-Neva executives to ask Giancana to leave when they learned he had stayed in his longtime girlfriend's bungalow.

"I know he didn't invite him," Rudin said, "and we were both upset that he was there."

Sinatra turned testy toward the end of the hearing, snapping "I don't remember" and "I would not like to discuss that" to several questions.

Control Board members said that Sinatra would have to cool his temper and stay away from Mafia figures if he wanted to keep the six-month license.

Applause broke out as the three-member panel announced its decision. "I'm very happy," Sinatra told reporters as he was whisked from the hearing room, surrounded by a cordon of police officers and security guards.

If Sinatra receives final approval from the Gaming Commission, he is expected eventually to seek to buy his own resort.

Frederika

Flown Home

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The body of former Queen Mother Frederika was flown into Athens from Madrid for a private funeral today as tension ran high between opponents and supporters of monarchy.

Police reported two bombs exploded overnight, one at the base of a statue of former King Constantine. Frederika's son who fled abroad after the 1967 coup, and the other at a rightist bookstore. Damage was minor.

The body of Frederika, 63, who died in Madrid following minor surgery Feb. 6, was accompanied on the flight by Constantine and her two daughters, Queen Sofia of Spain and Princess Irene.

The Greek government ordered as short a stay as possible for the royal relatives, and heavy security measures were taken to isolate the former royal estate of Tatoi, site of the funeral.

Retired Adm. Marios Stavrides, who manages the former royal estate, said the government acted "worse than the Papadopoulos' dictatorship." George Papadopoulos was the colonel who took power in 1967, and ruled for seven years.

Zimbabwe Scene Factional Fighting

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe (AP) — Former guerrillas loyal to Joshua Nkomo, the rival of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, were "dug in" today at an army camp where at least 36 soldiers have died in factional fighting, according to the Zimbabwe Inter-African News Agency.

The semi-official agency quoted a police source as saying soldiers loyal to Nkomo, a minister without portfolio in Mugabe's Cabinet, "have dug trenches and are going to take a lot of digging out."

The fighting between Mugabe and Nkomo factions broke out Monday at Conemara army camp, where the guerrillas were being integrated into a new national army.

ZIANA quoted "reliable sources" as saying police found the bodies of at least 36 soldiers in and around the camp, about 120 miles southwest of the capital of Salisbury.

Police said uneasy truces were in effect at two other army camps.

The factional fighting has raised doubts about whether Mugabe, whose forces were allied with Nkomo's during the 7-year civil war that ended in Dec. 1979, will be able to establish unity in the new force. The army also includes black and white soldiers who fought for the white minority government of Rhodesia, as this nation was known until it gained independence from Britain last April.

Fighting broke out Wednesday night in Entumbane township on the outskirts of Bulawayo. The township, which houses ex-guerrillas still to be integrated into the army, was the scene of combat last November that claimed 60 lives.

Mugabe, addressing Parliament Wednesday night, said some of the ex-guerrillas feared reprisals and had taken to "the bush." He said he would order police to "use the sternest measures" to round up the recalcitrant soldiers.

Deacs Rip Heels; Cavs Nip Wolfpack

Getting Away

UNC's James Worthy, rear, and Wake Forest's Will Singleton watch as the ball gets away from both of them during first half action at North Carolina's Carmichael Auditorium last night. Wake Forest defeated the Tar Heels, 84-68. (AP Laserphoto)

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
Coach Carl Tacy obviously isn't one to forget. So when Wake Forest traveled to North Carolina Wednesday night, he was armed with a sure-fire game plan based on his team's previous 74-60 loss to the Tar Heels in Winston-Salem.

"There were a lot of things after our second game that we really wanted to do," Tacy said, not mentioning that one of them was probably avenging a home-court defeat.

The No. 7 Demon Deacons found that revenge in the form of an 84-68 drubbing of the 10th-ranked Tar Heels in once impregnable Carmichael Auditorium.

In Raleigh, Virginia dodged a howitzer and downed North Carolina State 51-46. Hapless Georgia Tech dropped a 54-50 decision to Troy State.

Tacy's plan for a victory included complete concentration on fundamental basketball.

"We needed to do a better job on the boards and we wanted to improve our shooting percentage," Tacy said.

His efforts paid off with the following figures: 59.3 percent from the floor, a 33-27 edge in rebounding and the second worst defeat North Carolina has ever suffered at home.

In addition, the game marked the first time since 1973 that the Tar Heels have dropped back-to-back home contests.

"I can't remember us being dominated like that, especially here," said coach Dean Smith. "We weren't ready to play. That's may fault. Somehow we have to regroup for Sunday at Maryland."

Mike Helms led five Demon Deacons scorers in double figures with 20 points. Al Wood had the same total for the Tar Heels.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano says he doesn't believe in sour grapes. But what he saw in his team's game with the top-ranked Cavaliers was enough to make him see a whole vineyard.

With 2:14 left in the contest, the Wolfpack held a 42-41 lead. Virginia guard Jeff Jones tied up N.C. State's Derek Whittenburg from behind. The officials called a jump ball; Valvano disagreed.

"You can't tell me that was a jump," he said. "It looked to me like they were trying to foul. We were up and time was running down. It was a questionable call. You tell me."

Virginia won the tap as well as the game. Coach Terry Holland said his team was trying to foul, but would not dwell on the Jones-Whittenburg call. He instead discussed how the close ones are still going Virginia's way.

"I really don't know what to say," Holland said. "It has been the same story so many times this season. Our guys just play well down the stretch, and let's face it, we had to do just that tonight."

Lee Raker knocked in two free throws with 13 seconds left and Ralph Sampson added two more with one second left.

Troy State scored nine unanswered points in the last two minutes of play, and Robbie Laing canned four straight free throws to send the Trojans past the Yellow Jackets.

Georgia Tech itself scored the first nine points in the second half en route to a 46-41 lead with 4:22 remaining. From there, however, it was all Troy State.

Laing scored 15 points for the Trojans, now 13-8. Fred Ledford led Tech, now 4-18, with 18 points.

Conley Hosting Mat Sectionals

D.H. Conley will play host to the Northeastern Wrestling Sectionals Friday and Saturday, hoping to move from their unbeaten perch to a sectional title.

The Vikings completed the regular season with a 16-0 record, best in the school's history. However, Coach Milt Sherman isn't looking for any one team to dominate the sectionals.

There will be four sessions of wrestling, two each day. On Friday, first round action gets underway at 2 p.m., with the quarterfinals scheduled for 7 p.m.

Third round action will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday. Then, at 6 p.m. Saturday evening, the consolation finals will be held, followed by the championships.

The top four finishers in each of the 13 weight classes will move into the Goldsboro Regionals, to be held next weekend. The top four winners in each of the four regionals move on to Winston-Salem the following weekend for the state championships.

"I don't expect any one team to dominate the tournament," Sherman said. "There are several legitimate teams who have a shot at the sectional title." Sherman listed those as Wilson Beddingfield, Edenton, New Bern, Plymouth, West Carteret and his own Conley team.

"There are several others, like Farmville Central and Rocky Mount, who also have solid teams who could come in there, and there are outstanding individuals on nearly every team."

A total of 30 high schools from Roanoke Rapids to Jacksonville, north to south, and from Nash County to Cape Hatteras, west to east, will participate in the tournament, the largest both in number of schools and in geographic area.

"There are some coaches in the section who are unhappy about the number of schools. Fayetteville, for instance, has only 26 teams in its section. The coaches would like to see a little more balance, to give everyone an equal chance."

This year marks the first year that Conley has hosted the sectionals, previously held at Rose High School.

The Kansas City Royals had six stolen bases in seven tries in the 1980 World Series while the Phillies were successful only three times in six attempts.

NCAA Checking SMU's Football

DALLAS (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association is conducting an investigation of the Southern Methodist University football program, according to college President Dr. Donald Shields.

The Dallas Times Herald said today the NCAA notified SMU officials last fall of certain alleged violations and the school is conducting its own investigation.

Shields would not reveal the type of violations alleged, but issued a brief statement to The Times Herald.

"The NCAA has been in contact with the university and has raised some questions which are concerned with possible rules violations in the conduct of SMU's football program," Shields said.

"As is appropriate under these circumstances, the university administration has been conducting a comprehensive fact-finding analysis regarding these questions and will respond to the NCAA when this analysis has been completed," the statement concluded.

Shields would not discuss particulars of the investigation and declined to say whether it involved possible recruiting violations.

Head football Coach Ron Meyer was out of town on a recruiting trip Wednesday and was not available for comment.

The Mustangs finished regular season play 8-3, good enough for a second-place tie with Houston in the Southwest Conference and a trip to the Holiday Bowl. The Mustangs lost to Brigham Young 46-45 in the closing seconds.

SMU Athletic Director Russ Potts was to hold a news conference today to announce his departure to become vice president for marketing for the Chicago White Sox baseball team.

Potts said his departure has nothing to do with the NCAA investigation.

"Under no circumstances was this (Potts' departure) connected to the investigation," an unidentified source told The Times Herald.

The NCAA will not discuss pending investigation.

SMU's football team was on probation between 1974 and 1976 because of allegations that players were paid for such accomplishments as recovering fumbles. The probation kept SMU from appearing in bowl games or on television for two years of the probation.

Coe Races To Record

COSFORD, England (AP) — In his first indoor 800-meter race since winning the European title in 1977, Britain's Sebastian Coe set a world indoor best, Wednesday by covering the distance in 1 minute, 46 seconds.

"I didn't realize I was in this kind of shape," Coe said after the indoor meet between teams from Britain and East Germany, won by the Germans 122-85. He broke the mark of 1:46.4 set almost four years ago by Italy's Carlo Grippio.

The 24-year-old Coe took the lead after the first lap and outdistanced East Germany's Andreas Busse, who was timed in 1:47.1, and Detlef Wagenknecht, 1:47.6. Britain's Mike Whittingham finished fourth in 1:49.8.

Rampants Face Fike In Key Loop Test

Rose High School's Rampants, after finally breaking a three-game losing streak, travel to Wilson to meet the Fike Golden Demons in a key Division I game on Friday.

At stake is at least a share of second place, and the game will probably go a long way toward deciding that spot in the league standings.

Rose, Rocky Mount and Fike all are tied for second with 7-4 records. Rose lost both of its games to Rocky Mount and beat Fike in their only meeting so far, on the Rampant home court.

The game closes out the next-to-last week of Division I play. Rose has only two more games after that, their home finale against Wilson Hunt on Tuesday and a road trip to Northeastern to close out the year.

"These three games are very important to us," Coach Jim Brewington said. "There is a good chance that we could finish in second place if we win all three of them. And there is no reason that we can't if we play well."

A factor would still be Rocky Mount. Should the two teams end up tied for second — with no other teams — Rocky Mount would take second since it won both meetings.

"It really doesn't matter whether we finish second or third, really," Brewington said, "unless Beddingfield were to get upset in the first round of the tournament."

First round games are played at the home court of the higher seeded teams. Rose, in second place, would probably host Bertie, or if in third, Northern Nash, if current places hold. A fourth place finish would likely send Rose up against Hunt.

The rest of the tournament, however, will be played at the home court of the highest seeded surviving boys' team. So finishing second or third would only matter then if Beddingfield, which appears to have first place about sewed up, were to lose its first round game, sending the tournament elsewhere.

"Fike is going to be tough. They've lost only one game since they played us — to Beddingfield Tuesday night," Brewington said. "They know it's a must win situation for them, since they close out with Northern Nash and Rocky Mount."

"Beating them in the first game is a help to us. But Fike plays good ball, and we will have to control the boards to beat them."

Brewington doesn't feel that the three losses prior to the Bertie victory on Tuesday will be a problem. And he expects the shooting slump of the Rampants to improve.

Against Northern Nash, Brewington felt the key problem was the free throw shooting. "Then, against Beddingfield and Rocky Mount, we were up against two of the best teams in the conference, and that's one reason our shooting percentage was down."

Against Bertie, Rose started out with a low percentage, but ended up shooting well over 50 per cent, including a red-hot second half that was over 70 per cent.

"We are capable of getting a good percentage if we settle down, move the ball and hit the open man. If we get caught up in a slow game, however, we tend to get a little frustrated and force the shot."

In the first meeting of the two teams, Fike crashed the boards in attempts to control that area of play. Rose was able to get its fast break going because of this, and Brewington admits that the Fike play surprised him. "They usually try to beat you with their speed. They'll play a zone against us, too. They don't seem to like to play a man-to-man defense."

Brewington said that going against a zone was no problem, although it does slow down the offense some. "We'll count on our speed to overcome this."

Following Fike, Rose will host Hunt to close out the home season.

"They've been having their troubles since we last played them," Brewington said. "I don't know if the will to win is still there. But we'll be up for it since it is our final home game. We should be keyed up for it."

The Rampettes, after winning their second game of the year Tuesday night, will be trying to an upset win over Fike on Friday. Fike, leader of the league most of the season, was upset by Beddingfield on Tuesday and dropped behind Rocky Mount in the championship race, and will be a formidable opponent for the lassies who are trying to escape a last-place finish in the Division I standings. Northeastern, their closest challenger, upset Northern Nash on Tuesday to remain one game back of the Rampettes.

Rose High School's wrestlers, who finished sixth in the Division I tournament last week, will be participating in the Sectionals, to be held at Conley High School Friday and Saturday.

The Rose swimmers go up against stiff competition in the Atlantic Seaboard Swimming and Diving Championships, hosted by East Carolina University, also on Friday and Saturday.

Defense Helps Rockets Soar

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Defense is making the difference for the Houston Rockets.

Wednesday night it was San Antonio's turn to learn that lesson as Houston shut down the Spurs 108-89. It was the sixth time in the last eight National Basketball Association games that the Rockets have held their opponents under 100 points, and Houston has posted a 6-2 record in that stretch.

"I think it's a part of us now to play great defense," said Houston Coach Del Harris. "At halftime we realized they were shooting 60 percent and we felt with an extra step and a little extra pain we could slow that down."

The Rockets almost slowed it to a halt. San Antonio, which led 56-53 at intermission, managed just 13 points in the third quarter. The Rockets went ahead to stay with a 20-4 spurt at the start of the second half and pulled away to win easily.

Bill Willoughby scored nine of his 15 points for Houston in the third quarter, when the Rockets outscored the Spurs 29-13. But he, too, said the difference was defense.

"Anybody can score," said Willoughby, "but that doesn't do any good unless you are playing defense — and we did tonight."

In other games, the Philadelphia 76ers edged the Cleveland Cavaliers 122-120 in overtime, the Boston Celtics beat the Los Angeles Lakers 105-91, the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the Indiana Pacers 107-101, the New Jersey Nets trimmed the Chicago Bulls 135-133 in overtime, the Kansas City Kings topped the Utah Jazz 99-87 and the Phoenix Suns beat the Dallas Mavericks 119-97.

76ers 122, Cavaliers 120
Julius Erving grabbed a rebound of a missed shot by teammate Darryl Dawkins and dunked it in with one second remaining in overtime to cap his 37-point effort for Philadelphia, which won its fifth game in a row.

Cleveland's Roger Phegley

had sent the game into overtime by sinking two free throws with 19 seconds left, capping a comeback from a 15-point deficit.

Mike Mitchell led the Cavaliers with 36 points, while Caldwell Jones grabbed 25 rebounds for Philadelphia.

Celtics 105, Lakers 91

Larry Bird scored 36 points and hauled down 21 rebounds as the Celtics topped the defending champion Lakers in Los Angeles.

Bird, who tied his season high in both categories, played all but the final five seconds after playing 50 minutes in an overtime loss at Seattle Tuesday night. But it was the Lakers who wore down, scoring just 12 points in the fourth quarter as Boston pulled away.

Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led Los Angeles with 32 points, but Robert Parish and Rick Robey, the Celtics' two pivotmen, scored 23 and 19 points, respectively.

Bucks 107, Pacers 101

Milwaukee stretched its Central Division lead over Indiana to 10 games, outrebounding the Pacers 65-50 and putting the game away with a 12-3 spurt in two minutes midway through the final period. Junior Bridgeman scored five of his game-high 30 points in that run, which gave the Bucks a commanding 94-87 advantage with 4:54 to play.

Nets 135, Bulls 133

New Jersey overcame a 10-point deficit in the last 1:14 and sent the game into overtime on three-point goals by Mike Newlin and Darwin Cook in the final 37 seconds, then outscored the Bulls 10-8 in the five-minute overtime period. Newlin led all scorers with 35 points.

Kings 99, Jazz 87

Otis Birdsong scored 20 of his 26 points in the second half as Kansas City handed Utah its fifth straight loss and ninth in a row on the road.

Suns 119, Mavericks 97

Guards Dennis Johnson and Walter Davis combined for 18 points in the third quarter and Phoenix hit 13 consecutive shots to open a 94-75 lead going into the final period. It was the 11th straight defeat for the expansion Mavericks.

Bobby Allison Likes Racing For Big Bucks

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison is usually ready to race cars anytime, anywhere, but he prefers racing for big money.

That's why he's looking forward to Sunday's $700,000 Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race while dreading today's twin 125-mile qualifiers.

"I've never liked qualifying races, and I still don't," explained Allison, who earlier this week clinched the pole position for the 500 with a top lap of 194.624 mph.

That effort also put him on the pole for the first of the two $50,000 qualifying races, although he and second-fastest qualifier Darrell Waltrip already have been awarded front-row spots in the big race.

"Qualifying races are risky and potentially dangerous to our whole effort for Sunday's race," Allison said Wednesday. "There's just not enough profit to be made on this whole effort."

"Actually, I could just take the green (flag), drive one lap and pull it into the pits. But I don't like doing that, so we'll stay out and try to learn everything we can learn about these new cars.

"And this particular time, with the new rules and everything, maybe it'll help us put on a better show Sunday."

Allison was referring to the fact that NASCAR has required all competitors on the Grand National circuit to use the smaller 1981 cars starting with this race.

That, in turn, has created problems. The newer models are boxy, shorter and narrower, thus creating aerodynamic flaws.

NASCAR, agreeing with a host of complaining drivers, is allowing larger rear-end spoilers to be tried during the qualifying races in an effort to stabilize the test cars.

"Neil Bonnett and I went out this morning (Wednesday) and drove together for six or seven laps," Allison said. "He was driving with the bigger spoiler and seemed to be pretty happy with it."

"We're using a bigger spoiler, too, but we're not using a lip on it. We've tried the lip

Barber Gets Lietzke's Respect

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — Miller Barber is overweight, balding and closing in on his 50th birthday.

He has a loop in his swing and a peculiar speaking delivery, and the respect and admiration of the man who currently holds the hottest hand in golf.

"I play practice rounds with Miller quite a lot," said Bruce Lietzke. "And he can play the game."

"He has my respect and admiration. In a lot of respects, I'd like to be like him," said Lietzke, a tall, articulate 29-year-old who has won twice in four starts this year and already has collected more than $100,000.

Lietzke has an unbroken string of 14 consecutive rounds at par or better and ranked as the man to beat in the $325,000 Hawaiian Open that got underway today on the 6,881-yard, par-72 Waialae Country Club course.

"A lot of guys make fun of Miller, and I guess some of it is earned," said Lietzke. "You know, the 'Mr. X' stuff and all that."

"But he won $1 million out here when $1 million was a lot of money. And the key thing is that he won at least one tournament for eight straight years. One a year for eight years.

"That's what I'd like to be able to do, win a tournament every year. I'm not exactly a goal-oriented person, but I guess you could say that's a goal for me."

Another goal is to make the 12-man Ryder Cup team which will play the best European pros in England this fall.

"That's something I'd really like," he said. "I wanted to make the team in '79 but just missed. I don't have a lock on it yet, but with two wins I have enough points that I should be able to make it without too much trouble. Another good tournament could do it."

The Hawaiian Open could be the one.

"I'm playing pretty well right now, driving good and the par-5's can be reached by a medium-long hitter, which is where I'd rank," said Lietzke, a former winner here. "You always feel good coming to a course where you've won before. It helps with the confidence."

His chief opposition was expected to come from Tom Watson, golf's Player of the Year for the past four seasons, Lee Trevino and defending champion Andy Bean. Other standouts include Hale Irwin, Hubert Green, Lou Hinkle, Arnold Palmer and Isao Aoki, Japan's leading player.

Portions of the final two round Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

Brown Planning To Stay At UCLA

By PAUL SIMON
AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA basketball Coach Larry Brown says his criticism of what he considers some of the university's shortcomings doesn't mean he's headed back to the pro coaching ranks.

"I don't mean it that way. I don't want to threaten anybody. I just wanted something better for the kids," he said Wednesday when asked if he was disillusioned about remaining in Westwood.

Brown, whose name has been linked with the New Jersey Nets coaching job, earlier this week spoke of his dismay at delays involved in improving the schools' athletic program, including construction of new facilities. He also said that more seats in Pauley Pavilion should be allotted for students.

"I said what I had to say," said Brown, whose eighth-ranked Bruins host Arizona Thursday night. "I want what's best for the athletic program and I want what's best for the kids."

"I just more or less said they (administration officials) were dragging their feet in a lot of ways and that bothers me."

Earlier, Brown admitted that his criticism sounded like that of a coach "headed for Jersey," but he explained Wednesday that the comment was made in jest.

"The conversation got kind of crazy," he said. "Every week they tell me I'm going somewhere else. I'm not threatening to leave. It's not a threat."

"I'm not angry. I'm frustrated. I'm tired of hearing 'we did it this way and we won without you.' That doesn't answer my question. It's not that I don't respect the way they did it, but things change."

"I'm the guy that Mr. Morgan (the late UCLA

Lawyers Seek Leniency For Judge In Allegations

AGAIN UNDER FIRE — Judge Bill Martin, of Hickory, is under fire again for alleged sexual misconduct. The case is before the N.C. Supreme Court. (AP Laserphoto)

By STEVEN M. EAMES
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lawyers for District Judge Bill Martin of Hickory told the state Supreme Court Wednesday that Marine should be censured but not dismissed for alleged sexual advances toward women defendants who appeared in his courtroom.

While Martin's wife watched, the high court heard arguments on a state Judicial Standards Commission recommendation that Martin be removed from the bench.

In 1978 the justices rejected a recommendation that Martin be removed on grounds the judge mishandled several cases and asked a policeman to lie on the witness stand. The Supreme Court voted to censure Martin instead.

"How many times do you censure a judge before you say, 'Enough is enough?'" asked Associate Justice James G. Exum Jr.

"I'm tempted to say at least twice," replied Martin's lawyer, William C. Warden Jr. of North Wilkesboro.

In recommending dismissal at this time, the Judicial Standards Commission said Martin met Debbie Lail in a Hickory parking lot at night and "attempted to force himself on her during this meeting by attempting to embrace and kiss her."

Ms. Lail had appeared in court before Martin on charges of passing bad checks.

The commission found in a second case that Martin approached a defendant, Carol Birchfield, went uninvited to her home and "made sexual advances toward her by attempting to fondle her breasts and ... kiss her."

Martin has been suspended with pay from his $36,960 per year job since the Judicial Standards Commission held hearings last December.

Martin was hesitant to talk with reporters after the session. But he said, "I know I'm in the will of God. We've just argued before the Supreme Court. If they remove me, then it's the will of God. He may have greater things for me to do."

The commission ruled that Martin's actions with the defendants constituted "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute."

Assistant Attorney General Andrew Vanore Jr. disagreed, saying it would have been clearly willful misconduct had Martin accepted or asked for money from the women.

"It was not money. It was sex," Vanore added, "It was sex. There's just no question about it."

None of the lawyers dwelled on an accusation that Martin presided over court when his own traffic violation came up. Vanore dismissed that charge as relatively "minor."

"It just seems to me that Judge Martin has an affinity for women — and it bothers me," said Justice J. Frank Huskins.

Noting it was Martin's second appearance before the court on a recommendation he be removed, Huskins added: "It just doesn't seem to me he has any sensitivity to his judicial office at all."

Martin is one of the few non-lawyers elected to a district court bench in North Carolina. Voters last year passed a measure which requires that all new judges elected to district benches must be lawyers.

Psychiatrist Is Again Witness

* CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Defense attorneys plan to call their third and final witness today in an effort to win a lenient sentence for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, convicted of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam.

Chief defense attorney John C. Lowe said Wednesday he would call David Hubbard, an Austin, Texas psychiatrist, today on the second day of testimony in the sentencing phase of Garwood's court-martial.

Lowe described Hubbard as "a State Department trouble shooter who has a lot of experience with hostages."

phase of the trial the defense is presenting testimony aimed at winning a light sentence, or no sentence at all, from the jury. The jury of five Marine officers, all Vietnam veterans, also can decide to reverse its verdict up to the time of sentencing.

The prosecution has said it plans to call no witnesses during the sentencing phase. The defense called just two witnesses on Wednesday: a widow who said she loves Garwood, and her 10-year-old son, who called the 34-year-old Marine "a very good friend."

Garwood lives in the home of Mrs. Donna Long, 37, the petite, sandy haired widow of an ex-Marine. She told the jury Wednesday that Garwood is a "quiet, gentle" man.

Hobby Blaming Role By GOP

By STEVEN M. EAMES
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — State AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby said Wednesday his federal indictment for fraud and conspiracy is an attack by state Republican leaders on "labor, on Governor (Jim) Hunt and on me personally."

Meanwhile, the state Republican chairman said Hobby was taking the blame for Howard Lee, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Hobby also said, "I specifically deny each and every charge in the indictment" during a Durham news conference. "There are two sides to every story, and only one side has been told to the grand jury. Indeed, I was not requested nor given the opportunity to tell the true facts to the grand jury."

"It comes as no surprise to me that these charges were brought immediately after the Republicans took office," Hobby said.

He accused Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., unsuccessful GOP gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake Jr. and Helms' political organization, the Congressional Club of spending several million dollars over several years "to destroy Wilbur Hobby and the labor movement in this state."

Hobby was charged with misusing federal job-training funds that went to his printing company, Precision Graphics Inc. Also charged were Mort Levi, former program director for Precision Graphics, and Robert L. Hughes Jr. of the Division of Community Employment of the State Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Hughes was suspended without pay from that job Wednesday, said Wayne Daves, director of the division of employment and training for NRCD, in a prepared statement. Daves said the suspension of Hughes from his post as a manpower planner at $22,000 a year was indefinite.

NRCD Secretary Howard Lee said, "The suspension without pay is the routine action pending further administrative and judicial proceedings." Lee refused further comment "because the matter is under adjudication in the court system and administrative investigation in this department."

If convicted on all counts, Hobby could face a maximum of 18 years in prison and $60,000 in fines; Hughes, five years and $10,000; and Levi, 12 years and $30,000.

The charges concern $34,160 in federal grants under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). The grand jury alleged fraud involving $29,840 for equipment rentals and $4,320 for transporting students, causing ineligible students to knowingly apply for a training program and various alleged incidents of misapplication of funds.

Hobby refused to answer any questions from reporters. But he said as he left the room that he would continue as state president of the AFL-CIO and had felt no pressure to step down.

The indictments followed an FBI investigation begun in June 1980 into contracts awarded to Precision Graphics by NRCD involving training under federal programs.

We endorse mixed beverages in the City of Greenville

As voters and citizens of the City of Greenville, we support the referendum to be held on February 17. We feel that a fairly administered and strictly enforced mixed beverage law would have numerous benefits for the city. Among those benefits, we feel, are:

1. Increased revenues in taxes.
2. Increased economy from the ability to attract conventions, etc., from outside the city.
3. A better method of controlling alcohol, in that in restaurants where mixed beverages are served, brown bagging would no longer be allowed under state law.
4. A progressive law for a progressive city.
5. A better environment for restaurants, thus, better restaurants.
6. For those who choose to drink, the freedom to drink the beverage of their choice in small doses, without having to illegally carry an opened whiskey bottle around.

In no way do we support the establishment of walk-in bars and taverns, serving mixed beverages. The referendum that the citizens of Greenville will decide will allow established, sit-down restaurants to apply for mixed beverages licenses so that their customers may choose to have a drink along with a meal.

We urge your support for the referendum on February 17.

Cynthia Dwyer, Family Reunited After Iran Ordeal

NEW YORK (AP) — Cynthia Dwyer, who said she likes Iran and its people and "would return if possible" despite a nine-month stay in an Iranian prison, returned to the United States today to be greeted by her anxious family.

She was met at the arrival gate by her husband and three children. Airport police hustled them to a nearby conference room.

The Swissair plane carrying the 49-year-old free-lance writer from Zurich, Switzerland, landed on schedule at 2:40 p.m. at Kennedy International Airport. She had left Switzerland at noon — 6 a.m. EST.

Earlier, in an interview with The Associated Press on her flight aboard a Singapore Airlines jet that took her from the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Dubai to Zurich, she said that despite her imprisonment and the anxiety caused to her family, she did not regret her stay in the Islamic Republic.

"I like Iran and its people. I would return if possible," she said.

"It is incredibly good to be out," she said before boarding her flight in Zurich. Mrs. Dwyer, animated and in obvious high spirits, wore a white floppy hat, long red skirt, white sweater with brown and gold trim at the neck, wrists and waist, and brown horn-rimmed glasses.

She refused to give details of the ordeal on arrival in Zurich, telling reporters at the Swiss airport, "I'm a journalist too... This may be the only exclusive I'll ever have." But she talked much more freely with the reporters on the flight to Europe.

"I am not saying it was easy and I am not saying it was hard either," she said. "Besides, I have left people behind and we have made an agreement," a reference to captives remaining in Tehran.

Still in Iranian captivity are naturalized American Zia Nassry, 34, held since March 8 on spying charges and four Britons; businessman Andrew Pyke, medical missionaries Dr. John Coleman and his wife, Audrey, and Jean Waddell, who was secretary to the Anglican bishop of Iran.

But Mrs. Dwyer said she had now seen the worst aspects of the Iranian revolution.

"I went there because I was curious. I thought we needed to understand what was going on in Iran. I felt there had been too much emphasis on the hostages and the situation could have dragged us into another Vietnam. Besides, I was also looking for a good story — I ended up with a very different one."

Mrs. Dwyer, 49, of Amherst, N.Y., fielded questions alertly and without hesitation. However, she looked pale, tired and with five inches of gray showing through her blond hair. She said she was exhausted from her overnight stay in Tehran airport Monday night.

"I could not sleep — I was too excited," she said.

Mrs. Dwyer was arrested May 5, shortly after the abortive attempt to rescue the American hostages. She was tried last weekend, convicted of espionage and other crimes against the revolutionary regime, sentenced to the time she had already spent in prison and deported Tuesday aboard an Iranian airliner to Dubai.

"I never even saw any charges," said Mrs. Dwyer. "Under the Iranian constitution, they were supposed to have presented charges within 48 hours of my arrest but this was not done. It was a very long indictment but in general terms, I was accused of espionage."

"I told them exactly what I had done, what the people had said to me. I just generally corrected the indictment."

Mrs. Dwyer said she was tried by an Iranian mullah, or clergyman, with some assistants and one prosecutor. "I did not have an attorney and my instinct told me that if I had made a fuss about it, I would have been there longer."

The trial took place inside Evin Prison. She had been kept alone from the time of her arrest until July 20 and was later transferred to Evin Prison which she referred to as an "obvious political prison." For a long time, she thought the Iranians might throw her in with the U.S. hostages.

She said her treatment in prison had been "OK."

"No one ever abused me or laid a hand on me. But I did not understand any Farsi — the local language — and that in a way was very frightening."

Greenville Ranks Sixth In Construction

Greenville ranked sixth in the state among 44 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population in the amount of construction activity for November and for the first 11 months of 1980, according to John Brooks, State Labor Commissioner.

Construction permits valued at $4,770,780 were issued here in November, Brooks reported, while the city's total for the first 11 months amounted to $32,686,921.

Construction authorized in Pitt County during November totaled $4,872,343, including $659,639 for 14 single-family units, $96,000 for four multi-family units, $3,710,268 for 15 non-residential units, and $406,436 for 49 additions and alterations.

Raleigh led the 44 cities in November with permits valued at $16,439,785, and also during the 11-month period with a building value figure of $163,438,165.

Permits totals for several neighboring cities for November and the first 11 months included: Elizabeth City, $650,125, $6,439,001; Goldsboro, $1,738,000, $8,181,242; Jacksonville, $448,390, $17,450,907;

Kinston, $723,590, $7,619,689; New Bern, $349,343, $3,929,314; Roanoke Rapids, $182,778, $6,054,338; Rocky Mount, $1,788,308, $16,137,002; Tarboro, $254,300, $2,975,175; and Wilson, $457,904, $12,962,371.

Brooks reported that construction activity valued at an estimated $89,945,974 was recorded in November by the 44 cities, with a total of 2,952 units authorized. He added that valued decreased 12.7 percent from October's $103,077,947, while units decreased 23.3 percent from 3,847.

Winter's Worst Storm Taking Lives

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer
Winter's worst storm was blamed for the crash of a corporate jet in Westchester County, N.Y., that killed seven people, as deadly winds howled across the nation and freezing rains turned snow-covered areas into giant ice slicks today. The storm's death toll climbed to 44.

Tornadoes churned through the South with winds strong enough to lift a 59-year-old North Carolina man from his mobile home, toss him 35 feet through the air head-over-heels and hang him in a Chinaberry tree by his feet. He was not seriously hurt.

Five people froze to death in Iowa, Oklahoma, Colorado and Idaho. Tornadoes ravaged the Carolinas and Texas, leaving at least five dead. Traffic fatalities and weather-related heart attacks claimed lives in several other states.

Thunderstorms charged out of the Great Lakes on Wednesday after slinging more snow on the frozen Midwest.

Heavy rains pounded New England, Florida and North Carolina.

The mercury see-sawed as a burst of tropical air broke heat records for the day in some areas only to be followed by biting cold.

Ken Olivenbaum, a meteorologist at the National Weather Corp. in Teterboro, N.J., said the weather smorgasbord was caused by two storm systems over the upper Great Lakes and the mid-Atlantic states and a cold front sandwiched between them.

In White Plains, N.Y., a Lockheed jetstar crashed and burned during foggy weather Wednesday night near the Westchester County Airport. Authorities blamed the crash on the poor weather and low visibility. The jet belonged Texasgulf

Inc. of Stamford, Conn. Seven people were killed.

Wisconsin reported a dozen weather-related deaths — most of them elderly people who collapsed while shoveling snow, scraping windshields and, in one case, wading through drifts to a bird feeder.

A 77-year-old woman was killed when her mobile home was flattened and at least four others were injured as 50-mph twisters careened across central and eastern North Carolina, causing millions of dollars in damage, officials said.

One child was buried alive in rubble from a toppled house. Neighbors dug him out of the debris and rushed him to a hospital, where he was treated and released.

Milton Massey said his mobile home in Knightsdale was smashed by the winds and exploded like a firecracker, throwing him head over heels through the air. He ended up dangling upside down in a chinaberry tree 35 feet from his home, his legs caught in branches and his head touching the ground. He escaped with scratches and bruises.

"Don't even ask me how we're alive and breathing," said his wife, Eula.

Near Richmond, Va., strong winds ripped the roof off a two-story office building Wednesday night and damaged two other buildings at the Reynolds Metals Co. Bellwood facility. No injuries were reported.

Winds were clocked at 82 mph in the Adirondack mountains of New York state.

A 44-mile stretch of Mich. 28 in the Upper Peninsula remained closed from Munising to Marquette as up to a foot of snow whipped across the highway on 35 mph winds, reducing visibility to zero, police said. Parts of the state were buried beneath up to 17 inches of snow.

As the storm swept out of the state, heavy rains combined with below-zero temperatures to glaze highways with a coat of ice.

Temperatures throughout Illinois hovered around zero or below all day Wednesday as the state dug out from a storm that dumped up to a foot of snow in the Chicago metropolitan area and about 6 inches elsewhere.

Springlike, wet weather set a heat record in New Hampshire, only to be followed by a sudden freeze. The weather service said the cold front that passed through the state Wednesday followed a thaw that saw the temperature rise to 60, the warmest Feb. 11 since 1955, when the temperature was 58. Temperatures plummeted below freezing within hours.

Car Damaged On Tenth

An estimated $950 damage resulted to a car driven by Michael W. Woody of Highland, Ind., from a 10:30 p.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 40 feet south of the Dickinson Avenue intersection last night.

Police Department investigators said the vehicle went out of control and struck the railroad tracks near the intersection of Tenth Street and Dickinson Avenue.

The annual convention of the Student Nurses Association of North Carolina was held recently in Charlotte with members from East Carolina University, Pitt Community College and Beaufort Technical Institute attending from Region IV.

Sherry Davenport from PCC was elected to the association's executive board in the capacity of Region IV coordinator.

Convention activities included a banquet-dinner and program, a uniform breakfast, election of new executive boards members, and guest speakers on various topics. Earnestine Small, NCNA president, addressed the gathering on the "Nurse Practice Act."

Theme of the convention was "Nurses—Who Are We? What Can We Be."

Who Is Really Watching TV For Neilsen?

Identified As Father Of MM

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eighteen years after Marilyn Monroe's death, the widely held belief that the blonde sex symbol was born illegitimate has been disproved by authorities who found copies of her birth certificate at the home of a dead man they believe was her father.

Martin Edward Mortensen, 85, collapsed at the wheel of his automobile Tuesday in downtown Riverside and died of an apparent heart attack, Riverside County coroner's investigator Lisle Ford said in a telephone interview.

Miss Monroe's mother has been in mental institutions since 1953, and early studio biographies reported that her father was dead. Some biographers reported she was born illegitimate.

But Mortensen, who worked as a gas company serviceman for 50 years before retiring in 1965, had told co-workers and his physician he was the late film star's father, giving details of his marriage to her mother that contradict the biographical accounts.

At the modest apartment where Mortensen lived alone in Mira Loma, about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, Ford said he found copies of Miss Monroe's birth certificate as well as marriage and divorce papers for Mortensen and Gladys Baker, Miss Monroe's mother.

The birth certificate states Marilyn Monroe was born Norma Jean Mortensen on June 1, 1926, in Los Angeles. Her father is listed as Edward Mortensen, address unknown, age 29.

The marriage certificate is dated Oct. 11, 1924; the final Los Angeles Superior Court divorce decree is dated Aug. 15, 1928.

Also found at the apartment were several books about Miss Monroe as well as Mortensen's own birth certificate and his parents' marriage certificate. Ford said he is convinced all the documents are authentic.

Miss Monroe, whose cooing voice, voluptuous figure and platinum hair set male pulses racing with such 1950s films as "Some Like It Hot," "The Seven-Year Itch" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," died in Los Angeles at age 36 on Aug. 5, 1962, of an overdose of sleeping pills. Authorities ruled her death an apparent suicide.

Details of her childhood were always cloudy, and a publicist said Miss Monroe wanted the studio biographies to say her father had died.

"It was made up because Marilyn wanted it that way," said Jet Fore, the film publicist who wrote Miss Monroe's first studio biography for 20th Century-Fox. "She told me her father was dead."

Fore said he later heard that her father had abandoned her mother, and was under the impression that Miss Monroe was illegitimate.

"That's what we all thought," he said. "It's in several books."

"If she was legitimate, I certainly have something on my conscience," said Maurice Zolotow, who wrote "Marilyn Monroe," one of the first biographies.

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — There were two very interesting articles, indirectly related, in the television press last weekend, one concerning the viewing habits of the rich and the other giving perspective to the place of television in our society.

This last, written by Boston TV critic Jack Thomas, pooh-poohed what he called the "TeleBabbits" of this world, that joyless breed of people who carefully nurture anti-television airs. Thomas says that those people are not only missing out on a lot of fun, they're isolating themselves from a vital social force. Television, Thomas suggests, is our national hearth.

It's hard to argue with that.

The story on the viewing habits of the rich appeared in the TV magazine, Panorama. The rich, according to this piece, aren't exactly TeleBabbits; that is, they apparently watch television, but are limited in their viewing by the imperatives of their station.

Indeed, the article ultimately narrows into a compendium of program-types that the wealthy won't (or can't) watch: Late-night talk shows and movies, because on weekdays the wealthy party and on weekends, they relax in the country; physical-fitness shows, because the rich have their own instructors; shows with household or kitchen tips, for obvious reasons; middle-class domestic sitcoms, which don't tickle blue-blooded ribs; minority-related programs or police shows, subjects the rich would rather not confront in leisure hours.

However, the rich simply adore "The Lawrence Welk Show," which is unthreatening and reinforces their value system.

The implication of these two articles, considered together, is that if pointy-headed TeleBabbits and the rich aren't warming themselves at the national hearth, then it must be the rest of us, regular folks, so to speak, who compose the viewing audience and who stoke the prime time programming fires through the Nielsen ratings. Obviously.

Still, a theory, however apparent its tenets, must be tested. A survey of regular folks was in order. As my circle of acquaintances comprises a good many regular folks, I assumed the task myself.

Don, local parking lot attendant and football betting partner, said:

"I watch sports, a lot of sports — except some of that garbage like golf and tennis. And I watch animal shows. I love animal shows, especially that 'Wild Kingdom' that comes on Sundays. And sometimes I watch 'The Jeffersons,' but, you know, only if it's on. And I've been looking at that 'Dallas.' I hate all that other comedy stuff, that's garbage."

Maria, cashier at the theater across the street from Don's parking lot:

"I watch 'Mission Impossible' reruns." Is that all? "Yeah. It's a good show."

Forrest, former war correspondent:

"M-A-S-H." On Monday, I get to see it at 6, 7, 9 and 11 o'clock. And '60 Minutes' and David Brinkley's show ('NBC Magazine'). And 'Sunday Morning' with Charles Kuralt. I think 'Hill Street Blues' is going to be good."

Dolores, downtown bank teller:

"Dance shows. I like to watch dancing. All of 'em."

Eula, a waitress: "I watch 'Dallas.' And I watch animal shows, but I think they're going to cancel 'Those Amazing Animals.' And I like old movies."

Hmm. Only "Dallas," "60 Minutes" and "The Jeffersons" of the Nielsen top-20 were named by my regular folks. Who's watching that other stuff? "Dukes of Hazzard," "Love Boat," "Fantasy Island," "Three's Company?"

Who are these Nielsen people, anyway? Whoever they are, they're taking all the best spots in front of the national hearth.

OFFERED HELP — Offers to help Francis Ford Coppola's financially imperiled Zoetrope Studios have come from all over the world, but the biggest boost is Paramount Picture's purchase of an interest in an upcoming Zoetrope film ($500,000) and extended a $500,000 personal loan. (AP Laserphoto)

2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass

3 NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♥.

Appearances can be deceptive! Declarer was lulled into a false sense of security by clever defense, but he must shoulder most of the blame for failing in his contract.

South had no really good bid at his first turn. We are inclined to endorse his decision to open two no trump despite the diamond weakness. The opening surely described both the strength and shape of his hand quite accurately.

North's diamond response was music, and South happily converted to game at no trump.

Declarer won the opening heart lead in his hand and ran the jack of diamonds. East could see that winning the king of diamonds would be tantamount to conceding the hand to South, so he played low smoothly.

Thrilled by the apparent success of the diamond finesse, declarer tried it again. This time East won and exited with a heart. Declarer was locked in his hand with no way to get to dummy. Although he eventually succeeded in getting the defenders to lead a spade, thereby scoring the queen on a finesse, he could come to only eight tricks—two spades, four hearts and one trick in each minor suit.

While declarer could have brought in the whole diamond suit by playing the ace on the second round, there was no sound reason for doing so as the play developed. Declarer's error occurred when he played a low diamond from dummy at trick two!

Declarer had available a line that would have given him a considerable extra chance for the contract at no risk whatsoever. He should have overtaken the jack of diamonds with the table's queen. East's only chance is to hold up, and declarer, who started with seven tricks, is now up to eight.

Before repeating the diamond finesse, declarer should test spades by leading a spade to the queen. When this finesse wins, the diamond finesse becomes superfluous—declarer has nine sure tricks. He can then lead a diamond to the ace and, when the king drops, he will end up with all the tricks!

Cost Of Copies Have Doubled

MOUNT PROSPECT, Ill. (AP) — American business will spend more than $6 billion this year copying documents on office copiers.

Ten years ago, copying costs were half that, according to AM Infotext, which designs and sells copy-machine devices and systems.

A significantly large increase in the number of documents copied as well as inflationary trends were responsible for the doubling of costs, the company said.

Reject Dissolving Rocky Mount's School System

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Edgecombe County commissioners have unanimously rejected a Nash County proposal that would have dissolved the Rocky Mount city school system.

The decision came Wednesday after a public hearing Tuesday night attended by about 400 Rocky Mount residents.

The commissioners also suggested that Rocky Mount's corporate and school district boundaries be made the same.

Last month, Nash Commissioners proposed that Nash and Edgecombe counties each take a portion of the students in Rocky Mount schools into their school systems. Rocky Mount straddles the Nash and Edgecombe county lines.

The proposal was made because a growing population resides outside the Rocky Mount school district and Nash County insists must the students living there must attend the Nash County schools. The proposal was thought to be one possible solution.

The resolution adopted by the Edgecombe board Wednesday called the Nash proposal potentially damaging.

"...We see no educational advantage for any child now attending the Rocky Mount schools that could be derived from such action. We believe that such action would be harmful to the educational processes, would divide the Rocky Mount community, increase racial tensions and the problems of desegregation, adversely affect property values, cause migration and population changes, cause urban blight (and hurt Rocky Mount's downtown) revitalization program, and would open wounds on the body politic that would be slow to heal," the resolution stated.

Unable Acquire Use Of Song

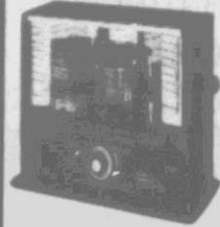

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Lee S. Dreyfus has lost in his attempt to persuade ex-Beatle Paul McCartney to give the state of Wisconsin the rights to the old song "On, Wisconsin."

McCartney's attorney, Lee V. Eastman of New York, told the governor in a letter that the school song is one of several published as an entity, including "Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech," "Hail Minnesota" and the "Notre Dame Victory March."

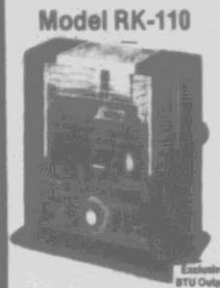

"It would be a great disservice for 'On, Wisconsin' to separate it from such songs," Eastman wrote. "I might add parenthetically that one of the heirs of one of the writers called, having read the story in the press, and was indignant at the suggestion that the song be transferred."

T-SHIRT BAN
SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Zimbabwe's black regime says it is going to ban T-shirts with "provocative, inflammatory and racist" slogans favored by white youths to lament the fall of the old white Rhodesian government.
