Outlook For Legislature

Pitt County's House and Senate members last week reaffirmed that money — or the lack of it — is the largest problem facing the North Carolina General Assembly now in session in Raleigh. Sen. Vernon White, and Representatives Sam Bundy and Ed Warren agree on some other things too: that it is not likely additional taxes will be placed on cigarettes by the Legislature, and that no one, at this time, knows what steps will be taken to bolster the sagging Highway Fund revenues.

Another bill before the House, according to Warren, would enlarge the gift tax exemption from $30,000 to $100,000. White sees the, "not so rapid pace," of the Legislature as good. The "reasonable pace," so far, he said, allows bills to go to committees for study and gives the general public an opportunity to be heard and have "input," hopefully, "making better laws."

will not make any recommendations until May, said the state has, "one of the best road systems in America. I don't think it would be wise to let the roads deteriorate," because it would cost even more, then, to repair them. "We need to find the funds somewhere. Just how, I don't know," he said. Pay increases for state employees and teachers is another big item for consideration, the three noted. But again, the salary question is simply in the talking stage.

Reagan Makes Cuts, Works On Message

By DIANE CURTIS WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Saturday took advantage of the quiet of Camp David to make final budget cut decisions and write the address he will deliver to Congress Wednesday night detailing his "cure" for the economy.

nate those programs where federal dollars are not doing what they're supposed to do," said Baker. "Some programs will be eliminated. I don't think you necessarily equate that with pain." The White House also announced that Reagan has ordered a delay in 37 Carter administration proposals totaling about $1.2 million and including such programs as student loan insurance, the Postal Service and others.

Aftershocks Follow Big Washington Earthquake

SEATTLE (AP) — Hundreds of tiny aftershocks quivered beneath the earth Saturday after the Pacific Northwest's largest earthquake in 16 years rattled dishes and shook pictures on walls from northern California to British Columbia.

said many phones were out of order in the county. The quake, which began at 10:09 p.m. PST, was in an area of known geologic faults

The quake shook Washington, Oregon, Southern British Columbia and Northern California and was centered 4.2 miles underground near Elk Lake in Southwest Washington, said scientists at the University of Washington geophysics center. As a precaution, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers evacuated 65 workers from the debris dam on the Toutle River's north fork beneath Mount St. Helens and 12 miles from Elk Lake. But Saturday crews returned to the site.

currer Saturday at 12:43 a.m. PST. Most of the aftershocks were in the very light 1.5 to 3 range, which can be detected by sensitive instruments but not people. At a seismograph station 24 miles from the volcano, there were 43 aftershocks between 10:09 p.m. and 4:30 a.m., Adams reported. By 1 p.m., he said, the "intensity and frequency" of the aftershocks was decreasing. Adams said it was unusual to have aftershocks in state of Washington but not unknown, explaining there were 70 aftershocks after the 4.2 Bremerton earthquake of 1978.

Risk In Building MX, Greater Risk In Not

By BARTON REPERT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) The MX missile could complicate arms control negotiations, but the military and political risks of failing to build the controversial mobile missile system would be even greater, according to a detailed analysis sent to Congress at the close of the Carter administration. The report, released Saturday, also contends that modernizing NATO's battlefield nuclear forces with high-radiation neutron warheads would have "only slight impact" on arms control, or on the military balance, in Europe.

ongoing arms control negotiations, efforts to stem nuclear proliferation, deterrence and stability in Europe, or the destructiveness of war should it occur." However, the report also said gains in NATO nuclear battlefield capabilities "may increase Soviet propensities to employ nuclear weapons should the (Warsaw) Pact go to war." Neutron warheads are designed to kill tank crews with massive doses of radiation while causing small amounts of blast damage to surrounding areas.

CHIMICAL WARFARE: U.S. arms control policy aims at "a complete, effective and verifiable prohibition of chemical weapons." However, a continuing Soviet buildup means that "Soviet forces are the best prepared and equipped in the world to operate in a chemical warfare environment," the report said. It concluded that constructing a new Army plant in Arkansas to manufacture binary nerve gas weapons would help "keep open an option to upgrade U.S. retaliatory capabilities" without conflicting with arms control objectives.

11 Die In Building Fire

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A fire raced through the lower floors of a 20-story office building in downtown Sao Paulo Saturday, killing at least 11 people and injuring 30, police reported. It was feared the toll would rise.

turned into a blazing inferno and at least 187 people were killed, including scores who leaped from upper windows. It is estimated that as many as 260 people perished in that fire, but only 187 bodies were found. Another February fire in 1972 at a downtown skyscraper claimed 28 lives. Most of Saturday's victims were members of the cleaning staff who were working when the blaze broke out just before noon and the other occupants had left for the day or were out to lunch, police said. Witnesses reported a bank on the ground floor was looted during the confusion, but police declined comment and no details were available. Firemen said the blaze started in the mezzanine and although major damage was contained to the first five floors, flames soared as high as the 19th story and smoke engulfed the building. They had the fire under control at 7 p.m. and began searching for more victims. Hospital officials reported 11 bodies had been received and Deputy Police Chief Romeu Tuma said at least 30 people were injured, 10 seriously. Fire Chief Alcione Pinheiro de Castro told reporters the building did not have fire escapes and it "was unsafe." He said the cause of the blaze was unknown. Sao Paulo has a strong building code, but the city, with a population of 12.5 million, is growing so rapidly it often is not following the chief said. "There's nothing we can do." Fire Department officials said it was the second time the building had been hit by fire. They said it was severely damaged by a fire seven years ago during the final stages of construction, but there were no injuries in that blaze.

EXTENSIVE DAMAGE TO HOUSE — A fire caused heavy damage to a Greenville residence early Saturday morning at 933 Bonner's Lane. According to the occupant of the house, James Rollins, he was asleep, and wakened by the telephone and smelled smoke. Rollins said he went outside and saw flames coming from the second story of the wood frame house. According to Greenville Fire department officials at the scene, firemen at the city's main fire station were changing shifts and spotted the blaze from the department, responding with two pumpers and a rescue vehicle. Firemen said Rollins was outside the home when they arrived, and was not injured. Rollins said he believed the fire started in the rear of the house. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

On the MX, the report argued that the mobile missile would enhance strategic stability "by helping the United States maintain secure, survivable retaliatory capabilities and essential equivalence" with the Soviets. In recent years, American strategic planners have become increasingly concerned over the potential vulnerability of U.S. Minuteman missiles. The MX system, as currently envisioned by the Air Force, would shuttle 200 missiles — with improved accuracy and destructive power — among 4,600 launch shelters scattered over wide areas of Utah and Nevada. This "shell game" is intended to greatly complicate Soviet targeting problems and thus reduce the chances of a crippling first strike.

East Carolina Gift Giving Sets Record

Private gifts to East Carolina University during 1980 totaled over $682,600, according to Donald L. Lemish, Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning. Cash given to ECU, the ECU Foundation and the Alumni Association amounted to $282,583 from a record 6,157 donors, Lemish said. "The annual giving dollar increase was 59 percent higher than the previous year's support, and donors were up almost 65 percent. In addition to the annual giving figures, over $399,950 was contributed in special gifts, securities and gifts-in-kind," Lemish pointed out, emphasizing that the figures do not include 1980 gifts to the Pirate Club. "We are especially pleased with the substantial increase in support," Lemish said, adding that the five-year goal set in 1979 of 30 percent participation in alumni giving is well on its way to being met. In 1978 only 1,647 alumni donors participated, he said, pointing out that "now we are over 5,600. According to Lemish, private gift support provided 40 full tuition and fees honor scholarships this year, and more than $13,000 was used for faculty travel and research, while over $250,000 in valuable artifacts were contributed and special gifts and endowments increased the ECU Foundation assets by more than $100,000. The university seeks private gift support, Lemish said, because, "we have to be more than just good. Our mission at ECU is to achieve the highest level of excellence which only can be achieved through private support. It is the vital ingredient which provides the necessary flexibility so important in building a sound educational program." Lemish, who said full report of fund raising activities will be made to the annual meeting of the ECU Foundation on February 27, indicated that more than 300 volunteers assisted the Alumni Association and Foundation in fund raising efforts last year. He added that more than half of all ECU alumni were contacted by telephone in telefund campaigns conducted throughout the state.

Prince Weds

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — Prince Henri, heir to the throne of tiny Luxembourg, married his Cuban refugee fiancée Maria Teresa Mestre Saturday in a fairy tale that came true on St. Valentine's Day.

The civil and religious ceremonies in the ancient Palace and Notre Dame cathedral were attended by King Baudouin of Belgium, maternal uncle of the groom and Queen Margrethe of Denmark, and a host of princely guests representing most of Europe's remaining royal houses, including Prince Philip of Britain and Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco.

The couple met at Geneva University in 1976, where both Prince Henri and Maria Teresa, now a Swiss citizen, studied economic science and fell in love.

Maria Teresa's father, Jose Antonio Mestre, resettled his family in Switzerland after fleeing Fidel Castro's revolution, leaving behind his banking, cattle-raising and plantation interests in Cuba. He returned to the banking business in Switzerland.

"Maria Teresa is a commoner and there were some doubts at the start as to her suitability as a future Grand Duchess," a source close to the court said before the wedding. "But reservations dwindled rapidly when it became plain that Prince Henri was planning to marry her anyhow," the source said.

Bells and carillons pealed throughout the Grand Duchy, a country smaller than Rhode Island squeezed between Belgium, France and West Germany, as the wedding procession made its way out of the Cathedral to the boom of 101 cannons.

The prince wore his captain's uniform, complete with saber. Maria Teresa wore a silky white gown with a long organza train.

The bride swept a tear

from her eye as she took Henri's arm to open the procession.

Thousands of "Letzeburgers," as the 358,000 inhabitants of Luxembourg call themselves, pressed against the barriers along sidewalks of the quaint old city, cheering the wedding motorcade on its way back to the palace. The weather was frosty with a radiant sun.

Later the newlyweds appeared on the balcony of the Grand Ducal palace to more cheers from the people.

Before flying off to their honeymoon at an undisclosed place, the couple attended a buffet reception in the palace and parliament building for 700 persons, including all diplomats accredited to the Grand Duchy.

The festive program concluded with a giant fireworks display over the Petrusse stream valley bordering the old city.

Prisoner Hangs

RICHMOND HILL, Ga. (AP) — A New York teenager arrested on auto theft charges hanged himself in the city jail and died last week, authorities said Saturday.

Michael Lawrence Tagliocca, 17, was found hanging from his cell window by a piece of material torn from a blanket Thursday, said Bryan County Sheriff Harry Williamson. His hometown in New York was not released.

He was taken to a local hospital, where he died the next morning, a Georgia Bureau of Investigation spokesman said. Williamson said the jail cell was stripped of all but essential items and Tagliocca's boots were taken from him because the teenager asked deputies "to shoot or kill him during the arresting period and through the day."

Salvation Army Awards Given

Organizations who supported and participated in the Army during 1980 were honored Friday night at the Masonic Lodge. Lyman Ormond Jr., chairman of The Salvation Army's Advisory Board, presided over the event.

After Dr. Harold Deitch performed the invocation, about 155 attending were served a buffet dinner catered by the ladies of the Greenville White Shrine.

Service Awards were presented by Jerry Powell to "The Daily Reflector," Greenville Police Department, Pitt County United Fund, WBZQ Radio, WNCT Radio, WNCT-TV, WRQR Radio and Leslie Garner, Christmas chairman for the past 16 years.

Certificates of appreciation were presented by Garner to 11 clubs which participated in the 1980 Christmas Bell Ringer Campaign. Also presented trophies were: Greenville University Kiwanis, first place; Kiwanis Club of Greenville, second; and Golden "K" Kiwanis, third. University City and Golden K Kiwanians have won their awards for four years in a row and will keep their trophies this year.

The annual report was given by Jerry Powell, and he introduced Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Hobgood, candidates for officership in The Salvation Army. They rendered a musical program.

Major Arnold Williford, commanding officer of the Pitt County Corps, introduced the speaker, Major Fred Ruth, divisional commander of the National Capital and Virginias Division.

Major Ruth installed 1981 officers: Lyman Ormond Jr., chairman; Jerry Powell, vice-chairman; Julian Vainright, secretary; James Sullivan, treasurer.

Major Ruth also reinstated member, Janice Buck, and inducted new member, Ed Wyatt. Tommy Edwards, also a new member, could not attend due to prior commitment.

Mrs. Major Arnold Williford was present to comment on the activities of the Ladies Auxiliary during 1980.

Recognizing the Advisory Board, the civic leaders and the local merchants who sponsor the yearly event was Jimmie Brewer, annual meeting chairman.

FARMVILLE — Flames destroyed a Rt. 1, Farmville dwelling early Saturday morning east on U.S. 264. According to Farmville Fire Chief H. P. Norman, firemen were called to the home of Larry Rouse at 8:05 a.m.

The official said Rouse lived in the house alone, and woke when heard crackling in the ceiling. Norman added that the house had no electricity. Rouse escaped injury.

Cause of the fire had not been determined according to Chief Norman.

Members of the Farmville Fire department responded to the call.

'Mr. Lincoln' In Ayden

Lincoln was a humble man and believed himself ugly, others thought he was so homely he was beautiful. But he carried himself with a kind of majesty and inner strength, which at times was shadowed by deep melancholy. These attributes and emotions were portrayed eloquently by Joel McLawhorn. As he sat at the desk on stage in the shadows, one could feel the sadness seeping out of Mr. Lincoln himself.

Lincoln was known for his self-deprecating humor and perhaps this was why so many identified with him. "I always swore if I saw a man uglier than I was, I'd shoot him on the spot," was one of the opening humorous insights McLawhorn gave Thursday night in the Ayden Theatre Workshop's "Mr. Lincoln." The play was a one time event with McLawhorn, dressed as Lincoln, alternating between narration and portraying the man himself. The two hour play was backed by a chorus singing inspirational tunes of the early and middle 1800s.

Spiritual solos by two members of the group, were exceptionally refreshing. The closing number, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," gave one a sense of deprivation and closeness to death, but also gave the feeling that even after death there is life.

Aspects of Lincoln's character not discussed in history books were brought out through reminiscences of his life. The pain and alternating humor on McLawhorn's face made one feel like he personally knew the man. Glimpses into the tragedies of Lincoln's life moved the audience to total silence. His son died during the civil war, and while cries of rage were issuing about the country, "How many more of our sons, must die," he was feeling the same anguish.

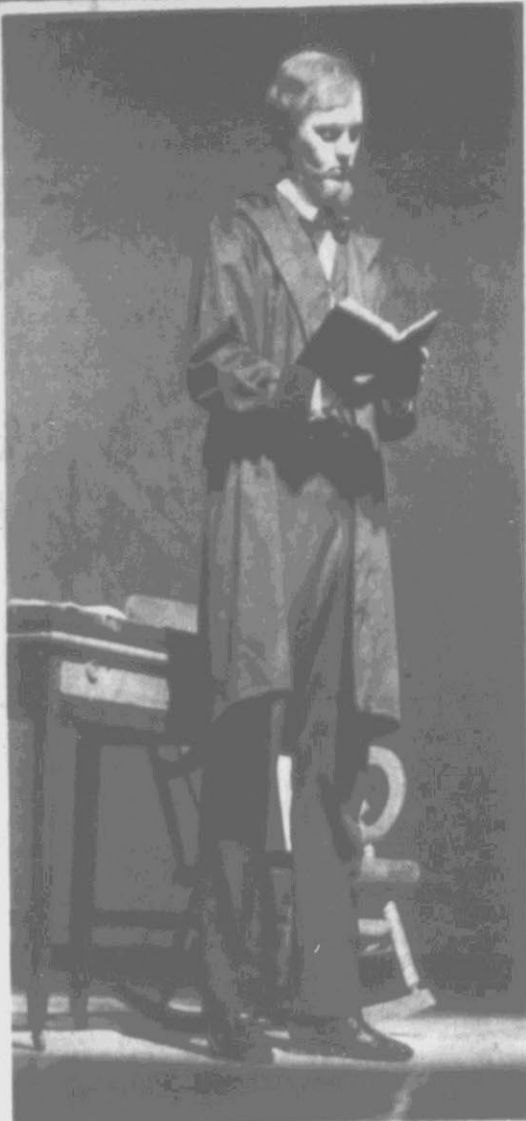

Anecdotes illustrating the character of Mr. Lincoln added to the overall design of the play:

He spoke... "The child was so warm, and loving, everything he did was loving. I could hold his warm little body against mine, he was so good. But now he is cold, all that is left is but a memory. But, you cannot hold a memory in your arms and feel it's warmth."

About God... One day in church the pastor was preaching up a storm and asked all of those who wanted to go to heaven to rise. A few stood up, the preacher raised his arms high in the air and repeated, "All who don't want to go to hell, RISE." Everyone in the congregation rose except Mr. Lincoln. With compelling power blazing in his eyes, the preacher asked Mr. Lincoln if he wanted to go to heaven, and if so, why didn't he stand up. Lincoln replied, "Preacher, I'm going to Congress, and he did."

About Congressmen... One day this little boy was in Sunday school reading about Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego in the book of Daniel. He was having quite a bit of difficulty with the names but ploughed on through. A few passages later, the teacher looked up and saw a pained expression on his face. "What's wrong," she asked. He replied, "Here come those damn three fellas again." That's how Lincoln felt about some of the Congressmen.

About his generals... Public opinion at the time was — the president couldn't pick generals. He finally, however, got a good general in the form of Grant who was said to be cold blooded and drank a bit too much. Replied Lincoln when questioned about this drinking. "Find out what he drinks so I can give some to the other generals." Near the close of the war, Lincoln received a message from one of his war advisors saying that if Jackson were pressed he would give in, he sent a letter to Grant... Press the matter.

At the end of the civil war, Lincoln said to his wife, "The bad times are over. The next four years are going to be easy ones. We'll go back home and live in peace." He was shot that night at Ford theatre.

DAs Push For Photos In Trials

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The gunman, after robbing the convenience store night clerk, shoots him to death. He escapes, leaving no witnesses.

But did the gunman forget about the silent eye of the surveillance camera staring down at him from the corner of the store? Or did he just not care?

Police now have the man's face on film but it won't do much good.

"How can any prosecutor look the detective in the eye and tell him he doesn't have a case and the film is not admissible in evidence?" Joe Freeman Britt, president of the North Carolina District Attorney's Association, asks.

It's exactly such incidents — and many more less dramatic ones — that have prompted the NCDAA this year to propose for the second time legislation providing that photographs and other pictorial representations may be introduced as direct evidence in criminal cases.

That proposal would let jurors consider any part of a photograph as evidence, even if it were not tied to the testimony of a witness. And, as important, the photograph could be introduced as evidence without any other testimony.

Present state law allows the use of photographs solely for the purpose of illustrating or explaining the testimony of a witness.

"Since there is no living witness in the example (above), the photographs are inadmissible," Britt said. "Change the convenience store to a bank and the court from state to federal, and the photographs become admissible in evidence, because the rule is different in that forum."

Britt of Robeson County gave a number of examples where photographs had been ruled inadmissible, including one case in which a photograph showed two thieves laughing and holding store merchandise. A photo in another case showed a defendant harvesting a field of head-high marijuana. A third case involved a photo that showed a drug dealer unlawfully firing automatic weapons.

In each case no witnesses were available to give testimony the photos could illustrate. They were inadmissible.

The difficulty of working within the confines of the present law became apparent during last year's trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis, whose gun battle with communist demonstrators on a Greensboro street corner was recorded on videotape by television cameramen.

Many of those videotapes were played after testimony by the cameramen.

However, at one point, prosecutors sought to introduce 10 photographs which showed three defendants standing in the street actually firing the weapons.

But Superior Court Judge James M. Long, ruling against admissibility, said: "I am in agreement with the argument of the state. I believe actual photos of an event in progress should be admitted as substantive evidence — all the logic is on that side. But I have a sworn duty to uphold the law, and the law says they may not be admitted."

In some instances Long allowed introduction of some photos over defense objections, saying he couldn't believe the state Supreme Court would disallow them.

But Long's rulings were never tested. All six Klansmen-Nazis were acquitted.

Though the district attorneys association sponsored and sought passage of a similar bill in the last session of the legislature to allow such photos to be used as evidence, it was killed in committee.

Britt said the association's new proposal is part of a package that should be in the hands of the legislators in the next three weeks.

Appeal For Calm

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa appealed for labor calm Saturday, warning that the new Polish government was "our last salvation" and must be given a chance to put the nation's strike-crippled economy back into shape.

However, Walesa said that while the independent unions did not want more strikes, labor peace depended "on the government."

Walesa, head of the 10-million member Solidarity labor coalition, made his appeal for calm after meeting with Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski, head of the new government's commission on labor.

Among other issues, they discussed Prime Minister Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's request for a 90-day moratorium on strikes.

"Our position goes even further," Walesa said. "We don't want to strike at all." But he shied away from agreeing to Jaruzelski's request unconditionally, saying "it all depends on the government position."

Young Boy Safe After Abduction

NEWPORT, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities say they don't believe the kidnapping of a 6-year-old child by masked gunmen is related to the unsolved murder of the boy's father two years ago.

Zachary Kent Taylor, still clad in his blue Winnie the Pooh pajamas, was found unharmed in a motel 30 miles west of his home 15 hours after he was abducted.

No arrests had been made, but authorities said they had good descriptions of the kidnapers, who had demanded $200,000 ransom for the boy. The money was not paid.

With FBI agents outside her house shooing away reporters, Evelyn Taylor remained in seclusion after being reunited with her son Friday. A minister from the church where Mrs. Taylor teaches Sunday school and sings in the choir was staying with her.

An investigator who asked not to be identified said Mrs. Taylor, whose husband was slain a few days before Christmas 1978, had suffered "emotional shock" from the incident Thursday night.

"I've got him in my arms," Mrs. Taylor told a friend in a telephone conversation Friday from the Best Western Dumplin Valley Inn near Interstate 40, where motel operator Don Parkhurst had found the boy.

The boy "said two men came to his house last evening, liked him, took him and he spent the night in some motel," Parkhurst quoted the child as saying. "He wasn't hungry. He said they fed him biscuits and gravy."

Mrs. Taylor's husband Kenneth was found dead in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park on Dec. 23, 1978, and his blood-splattered pickup truck was found abandoned four days later.

Federal investigators said Friday they doubted the kidnapping and murder cases were related. "Not that I know of," said W. Douglas Gow, an FBI special agent. The gunmen stormed the house Thursday shortly before 8:30 p.m. EST, bound Mrs. Taylor and business associate Steve Husky with duct tape and began looking for car keys. After they tripped the burglar alarm and threatened to kill the boy, Mrs. Taylor handed them the keys.

They left the house with the boy as his mother screamed for help. She tore loose and chased the kidnapers, authorities said, but the gunmen fled with the child.

Cocke County officers recovered the car an hour later in a rest area along I-40 six miles west of Newport. An unidentified truck driver told police he saw two men leave the car and jump into a pickup truck.

Friday Wrecks

An estimated $3700 property damage resulted from two traffic accidents investigated by the Greenville Police Department Friday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a collision on Dickinson Ave. at 10:05 a.m. involving cars driven by Timothy Brian Avery of Winterville, and Ronald Robert Ruberti of Vineland, N.J.

Police investigators, who charged Avery with failure to yield right of way, estimated damage at $2,000 to the Ruberti vehicle and $1,000 to the Avery vehicle. A passenger in Ruberti's vehicle was injured in the collision and was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

According to police reports, cars driven by Bobby Lee Stainback Jr., 2607 Jefferson Dr., and Jodie Ray Forbes, 506 Church St., collided on S. Elm St. Friday at 3:50 p.m. resulting in estimated damages of $500 to the Stainback car and $200 to the Forbes car. Forbes was charged with a safe movement violation.

Hospital's Happy Birthday

There couldn't be a happier birthday than the 30th one celebrated by Pitt County Memorial Hospital last week.

The county got into hospital operation in 1947 when a bond issue was approved for construction of the old Pitt Memorial on W. Sixth Street.

That facility was expanded until it was recognized that an entirely new plant was needed to serve our county. The new facility was still under construction on a site along the Stan-tonburg Road when an affiliation agreement was developed with the ECU Medical School.

Major structural changes were made before the hospital opened. The Eastern AHEC has become a part of the complex, the medical school building is under construction and a new bed tower is being added to the hospital, itself.

None of us could have dreamed what was ahead when the hospital — now renovated for county offices — was begun 30 years ago.

All connected with the hospital are understandably proud of what has been accomplished. Certainly citizens of Pitt County, who have all played a part in financing what we now have, have every right to be proud, too.

Development Work Is Important

It is with regret that we see Reese Hart depart as executive director of the Pitt Development Commission.

The county's progress in industrial development has been steady since he assumed the position.

A committee has been appointed to choose a new executive director. We hope it will consider a wide variety of applicants. Obtaining quality industry for our area is the best way to provide jobs for our people. The work of the Pitt Development Commission is important, indeed.

Burglar Alarms Costly

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — How many times have you been downtown, or around a sub-urban commercial or shopping complex, and heard the nerve-jarring clanging of a burglar alarm?

Everybody seems to go on about their business, paying little attention to the alarm. Eventually the police or a store operator will arrive and the ringing stops.

A national survey of police departments shows that about 97 percent of all activated burglar alarms to which police respond are false alarms. There are thousands of such burglar alarm systems throughout North Carolina, monitored by police departments or private security agencies.

Asheville Police Chief Alan K. Hyder figured that each response to a burglar alarm costs $24, and that if a police agency answers 4,000 such alarms the cost would be $96,000. ... and 3,000 of the responses would be in answer to a bell ringing because of error on the part of the user, faulty equipment, or environmental conditions.

The cost might be worthwhile if actually 120 burglaries were in progress and police arrived to make an arrest. But in reality, the figures show police make only one arrest at the scene — less than one percent of the valid alarm responses.

Chief Hyder adds that the potential of traffic accidents in responding to an alarm, danger to police officers who develop a complacent attitude after answering so many false alarms, and the time away from more important duties compound the cost of answering false alarms.

Writing in the January issue of "Southern City" magazine published by the N. C. League of Municipalities, Chief Hyder outlines how Asheville put the burden on burglar alarm owners to either keep them in good repair and operate them properly, or face disconnection; and how levying a fee against owners who habitually have false alarms have improved the system.

Hyder suggests that other cities might want to take a look at city ordinances which could make the alarm system more effective.

Rapid Crime

What happens when a quiet, rural area becomes a boom town because of industrial growth? The town of Eden in Rockingham County provides a case study. A brewery was built in 1976, and brought jobs with starting salaries of more than $23,000 a year — double the prevailing wage rate.

With the influx of construction workers and then big-salary jobs, the per capita income increased by 14.7 percent. The crime rate increased by almost 16 percent.

David Jones of the Governor's Crime Commission reports that incident, and adds that in the 10 counties of the state which recorded the highest increases in property crime during 1979, per capita

Sunday Morning Notes

We reported in this column recently that the ECU News Bureau got an inquiry about a student, Magnolia Blossom, after an item appeared in a weekly newspaper. The newspaper, it turns out, was the "West Craven Highlights" and we received a copy of another article on Magnolia.

"Does Magnolia Blossom really exist?" it asked. "Yes, but you could not prove it by officials at East Carolina University."

Magnolia Blossom is the nickname given several years back by some northerners to a girl who is currently a student at ECU. Highlights columnist Jonathan Phillips quoted the girl in a column last week, identifying her by the nickname "Magnolia Blossom."

"Then William Shires of the ECU News Bureau got a call," the article went on. "Someone had seen the reference in the Highlights and wanted to know if Magnolia Blossom really existed. Shires related the incident to Greenville Daily Reflector columnist Alvin Taylor."

"Phillips was asked why he used the nickname instead of the real name in his column."

"I nearly always use a lot of nicknames in the column, for two reasons. One is that this is a small paper in a small town, and everybody knows everybody. If I use actual names, then people tend to concentrate on the people themselves rather than the points I'm trying to make," he said.

Urban Taxes Costly

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — In 1773, a band of disgruntled taxpayers dressed up as Indians and dumped tea in Boston Harbor to protest the British crown's tea tax. Maybe it made tea drinkers happier, but it didn't do much to stop the growth of what became an even more irksome burden in Massachusetts: the property tax.

It was more than two centuries later that modern rebels in "Taxachusetts" got around to dumping the second highest property taxes in the nation. They did it in rousing style last Nov. 4, voting to slash local taxes up to 75 percent.

The weapon was Proposition 2½, a binding ballot referendum that limits taxes to 2½ percent of a property's fair market value. In municipalities where taxes were running 6 percent to 8 percent, the vote has been called a fiscal Armageddon.

Some 10 percent of Boston's fiscal 1981 budget — around $90 million in tax revenue — will evaporate this year. A few years from now, with the law in full force, Boston will have $312 million less to spend.

State law does not permit municipalities to levy other taxes, so the only alternative is to cut spending. Boston faces a 25 percent cut in police and fire department budgets, a 30 percent cut in public works spending and a 50 percent cut in the health and hospital program.

Why did the state's voters eschew their support for liberal spending programs and force elected officials to take such tough measures?

"People were saying, 'We are fed up with property taxes and we want a government that is more efficient and effective,'" says former Gov. Michael

A Tax Counterrevolution

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The staying power of the governing class amidst the menace of the Reagan revolution was demonstrated when one of its audacious operatives, Alice Rivlin, proposed to solve the budgetary crisis with a $156.3 billion, five-year tax increase.

Considering the election returns, it is a wonder that Dr. Rivlin keeps her key post as director of the Congressional Budget Office (CBO). With presumably conservative leadership taking over both the House and Senate Budget Committees, her days seemed numbered after Nov. 4. In a feat of bureaucratic brinksmanship, she has kept her job — and more.

She outdoes the abbe Sieyes who, when asked how he spent the French Revolution, replied: "I survived." Not content with surviving, Rivlin is captain-general of the tax counterrevolution. At a time when anti-tax sentiment is a major element of President Reagan's electoral mandate, Rivlin is using the prestige and facilities of the supposedly bipartisan, non-political CBO to maintain the governing class that lives off big government: bureaucrats and their satellites, plus numerous elected officials.

But she may have gone too far. CBO's 187-page document of Feb. 3 on "reducing the federal budget" is so blatantly counterrevolutionary that it revived efforts to replace her. Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the House Republican Conference and a new addition to the House Budget Committee, says "she must go" — a sentiment many other Republicans privately second.

The Feb. 3 document was in response to a request from the House Budget Committee for possible cuts in both fiscal year 1982 and the next five-

To the editor:

In regard to the letter Mr. Frank Whitaker wrote in the Public Forum Feb. 10, several remarks were made about tax on Christian schools. Mr. Whitaker needs to be reminded that people who send their children to Christian schools still pay school taxes when they pay their real estate taxes.

I have three children. Two went to public schools and the younger one is going to a Christian school. I know from experience that the education received in the Christian school is far superior to that in the public school. That is the reason most people send their children to a Christian school. Also, Mr. Whitaker, let's not forget another important reason — they learn the Word of God.

Mr. Whitaker said the church should be taxed as any other business; however, the church is not just any other business. It is a business to win souls for Christ and to teach the loving Word of God.

Concerning the remarks Mr. Whitaker made about preachers keeping church members out of whiskey stores, I have to say to you, Mr. Whitaker, in my lifetime I have never known a Christian to go to a whiskey store. Now, sir, I said Christian, not church member, which are two different things. A Christian has love in his heart for Christ and has no desire to drink. Anyone can be a church member and not be saved.

Strength For Today

POWER OF ... IT

If we are equipped with a conviction that right makes might, we can face any situation with confidence. Nothing bolsters a man's courage quite so much as to believe that high above the devices of man is a guiding hand which in the end will make all things work together for good, provided we steadfastly maintain the right attitude.

Abraham Lincoln, in his Cooper Union Address in New York City in 1860, said, "Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that

Many Can't Survive For Long

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — How long can a good small business survive while paying interest rates that exceed 23 percent?

The answer isn't precise; it's not like predicting that a certain percentage of the citrus or coffee crops will be ruined if temperatures dip below 27 degrees and stay there for 10 hours on a windless night.

But it is certain that a large number will wither on the vine, so to speak, and that those who survive will have suffered severe, probably lifelong, damage in terms of income, jobs, expansion, and confidence.

Unlike big companies, which enjoy the advantages of volume and the market power to make price increases stick, many smaller businesses have little choice but to absorb the cost of higher interest rates.

"The increases are nothing short of catastrophic," said Professors William Dunkelberg of Purdue University and Jonathan Scott of Southern Methodist University in their most recent analysis of small-business trends.

Survey responses document the problems:

—A Rhode Island trucker: "Interest rates are out of sight. We wish to invest in additional equipment but payments are too high."

—A Pennsylvania plant nursery: "If the prime interest rate continues to climb or stay high, I will be among the small-business casualties."

—An Ohio cleaning establishment: "Holding off new equipment installation due to high interest rates."

—A Kansas retailer: "I think it is unfair that government would guarantee loans for a large company like Chrysler Corp. We cannot get anything. Seems to me the small business does not have a chance."

The last comment has a significance beyond interest rates, since it has been demonstrated that small business has been the primary creator of jobs and the wellspring of innovation. The two professors, who regularly conduct surveys among a sampling of the 540,000 members of the National Federation of Independent Business, found that in the fourth quarter of 1980 the proportion of firms paying 19 percent or more rose from 7 percent to 31 percent of all borrowers.

More than 60 percent of the respondents said they paid 16 percent to 22 percent, and 4 percent said they had paid 23 percent or more. And the figures reported from firms in large urban areas were even worse.

"Loans in rural areas likely include more agricultural loans and loans made by smaller banks with long-term business associations with their customer firms," the professors said. In addition, they noted, operating costs are lower for financial institutions in rural areas.

In all, they said, credit developments were "disastrous" for small business, and they explained:

"Delays in expanding facilities mean that needed jobs are not created in the economy by these small firms. In addition, the jobs that would be indirectly created for producers of inventory equipment and construction materials are lost to the economy. Some small firms have even reported cutting employment in order to generate enough cash to make interest payments on loans."

Complicating the small business predicament, say the authors, is a worsening tax situation that forces firms to borrow at the worst possible time. In other words, one added expense creates another.

How long can small business survive under such conditions? To the limits of the ingenuity and resourcefulness and hope of those involved.

Well known for these and other survival talents, they nevertheless might be nearing their limits unless interest rates drop.

They have used their ingenuity and resourcefulness. They are now, they indicate, tapping their reservoir of hope.

To the editor:

Very few persons would suggest that we can control and decrease the use of drugs by promoting the sale and use of it. Yet, in a sense, this is what is being done in the promotion of liquor-by-the-drink. It just does not make good sense. It used to be in the old days that concern was about the number of men becoming alcoholics, then it got to include the women, then the college age group, then the high school age group, and now the even young age group. It is now considered by many that the use of alcoholic beverages in schools and colleges presents more of a problem than use of drugs. This is because there is so much more consumption of alcoholic beverages, as well as its easy availability. (This does not mean that we should stop dealing with the drug problem; we should continue to eliminate it in every way possible for it continues to worsen like the alcohol problem). It does mean, however, that the sanction and promotion of use of alcoholic beverages must stop somewhere, but where?

If liquor-by-the-drink is passed, please consider the fact that several hundred people in the Greenville area each day will get more and more used to having that midday drink with their meal and will become used to and dependent on it. If you have any reservations, please consider that every alcoholic took his or her first drink some time and somewhere. No doubt there would be many millions of more alcoholics that there are if these persons had taken their first drink.

Please vote no on Feb. 17 against passage of liquor-by-the-drink. We can be a progressive community without more booze consumption.

To the editor:

Our city Budget and Management office claims that the increase from $1 to $5 in our auto tags was... to quote... "basically a budget-balancing measure."

Does this mean that City Council has overspent the current budget? If so... how badly... and where did the money go...?

Or does this mean the current city budget was overblown to begin with by the $80,000 expected revenue from the vehicle tag tax at $5...?

Since balancing the budget is to be an excuse for levying an unreasonable tax... let's try a related subject on for size.

I suggest our Mayor should publicly report to the city taxpayers on the following expenditure of city tax money.

The City recently took a $30,000 building permit to do repairs on the old building at the corner of Fourth and Greene Streets. It is understood that certain Departments have been moved out of City Hall to make additional space for the Police Department and... another... repeat... another... conference room for the City Manager's office.

Mr. Mayor... the questions needing answer are:

1. Where did this $30,000 come from? Is this expenditure a specific line item in the current approved budget?
2. If the money was slipped from another budgeted project... what was that project? And... will next year's budget have to include the same project slipped this year?
3. Can you assure the taxpayers that this is not an expenditure to spend money that might be surplus dollars in the current year budget?
4. Can you assure the taxpayers that the building in question has passed a public building inspection... and that the once existing termite and leaking water problems have been solved? Does this building meet the State Handicap requirements?
5. Since there is no elevator in this 40-year-old building, is it true that it will be necessary to budget as much as $50,000 next year to install one?
6. Does this building meet "save energy" requirements?

All in all, Mr. Mayor... can you assure the taxpayers that the expenditure of these tax dollars on this project, at this time, was necessary, economical and justifiable in what must be an unbalanced City budget.

To the editor:

A grant of $45,000 is being requested from the federal government with an additional $15,000 to be raised locally to determine the feasibility of a civic center for Greenville.

Already publicized as underway was the Capital Fund Campaign to raise funds for the East Carolina Vocational Center Inc. to be funded from federal, state and local monies. This effort deserves our support.

Considering the present state of our economy and the President's efforts to eliminate frills and make sacrifices, is it not imprudent to request another grant at this time for a project which is desirable but unnecessary? All of us throughout this land must act with a unity of purpose and refrain from demands for federal aid in order that the federal budget may be cut, our taxes reduced, while at the same time maintaining a secure and free United States of America. Let's shelve the civic center for the present and take pride in doing our part in the president's effort to hold down federal spending.

IT WASN'T ADOPTED FOR CONVENIENCE!

As I Recall It Julius Irving Scales; N.C. Symbol Of Dissent

By NOEL YANCEY
Julius Irving Scales was an idealistic young man. Like millions of his peers he firmly believed in the right of the working man to organize, to bargain collectively and to strike, if necessary, to achieve decent working conditions and adequate pay, he insisted on equal treatment of blacks and other minorities and he was passionately opposed to war — being almost a pacifist, he said later.

Like millions of young men who grew up during the great depression, young Scales became convinced that the leftists had the solution for the problems which plagued the world. And, like thousands of young people of that generation, his reading of Marx and Lenin convinced him that the Communist Party had the correct answers.

The communists greeted the young convert with open arms. It was not often that its recruits were scions of well-to-do families that had been prominent socially and politically for generations and who could, if they wished, boast of ancestors who included a Revolutionary War patriot who became a Supreme Court justice or a great uncle who served as governor. Young Scales, who grew up in Greensboro, was all these things, he was as blue-blooded as North Carolina could offer.

At 19, he joined the Communist Party, and quickly became the party's "fair-headed darling," to use the words of General Johnson, a North Carolinian who achieved fame as an editorial writer for the Baltimore Sun. During the 19 years he served as a devoted communist, young Scales became the Communist Party chairman in North Carolina and later as the party's district organizer in the Carolinas and Virginia. Like other Communist Party leaders, he "went underground" in 1951 after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the Smith Act under which 11 top Communist Party leaders were convicted of advocating the violent overthrow of the U.S. government. That's what Scales was charged with upon his arrest in late 1954 — violating the Smith Act by advocating "the overthrow of the U.S. Government by force and violence."

Following his conviction on this charge in 1955, Scales was granted a new trial which was a highlight of North Carolina news in February of 1958. In the meanwhile, Scales had become disillusioned with the Communist Party. This began when Khrushchev confirmed reports of wholesale killings after purge trials under Stalin and Russia's savage suppression of the Hungarian uprising was the last straw.

A few days before the second trial began at Greensboro, Scales told a reporter that he had done "some damn fool things," but he did not feel he had violated the law. He said that he had embraced communism because he felt it offered "the ultimate answer of achieving the brotherhood of man" and "of preventing war." At the trial the government offered the testimony of informants and infiltrators and presented reams of communist documents and publications in its effort to show that Scales had personally advocated "the overthrow of the U.S. government by force." The evidence included books by Lenin which Scales had loaned an informant and which the defense scoffed anyone could obtain at a public library. Other witnesses said Scales was present at a party in Carrboro at which the Internationale, was sung, that he attended a picnic at which there was a jujitsu exhibition using a pencil as a weapon, and that at one time Scales had made a remark about doing away with some people "after the revolution." Despite the defense effort to picture Scales as a sensitive young man who had "too much feeling and too little wisdom," and its claim that the courts have ruled that "abstract teaching" of violence against the government is not criminal, the jury found the 37-year-old defendant guilty. Judge Albert Bryan sentenced him to six years in prison. His sentence was commuted by President John Kennedy after he

Culinary Masterpieces Are Difficult To Ignore

I simply cannot seem to make myself ignore the promise of a culinary masterpiece in less than ten minutes. Right now on my coffee table there are six magazines, each boasting 25 to 50 quick, easy, and/or inexpensive recipes.

These include such taste tempters as lettuce soup, lentil tetrazini, tuna pineapple souffle, and clam gumbo.

I can see Phillip's face if I dished out any one of these delights. The last time I served lentils, he said that if God had meant us to eat them, he wouldn't have made them look like insects. I'd rather not sample his reaction to pureed lettuce.

I really wish that just one food editor would come out with a collection of easy recipes for foods that don't sound as if they were inspired by "Star Wars." It would be a godsend for women like me who come from families in which food is considered very important but who can't read the garden variety cookbook without the aid of the Webster's International Dictionary.

I'm not asking for much. All I want is a little relief for those thousands of housewives who think they have to call a plumber to fix a leak. And I want to outlaw artichokes altogether. I'd rather tackle an armadillo.

Surely, putting together a collection like this wouldn't be that hard. There must be dozens of recipes that don't have more than five ingredients, none of which are tumeric. I began to throw out any recipes which called for a spice I couldn't pronounce after I heard that most spices have a shelf life of only one year. I was aghast. I had spices in my pantry that were older than some of my babysitters.

Another criterion for such a collection would be tried and true cooking methods. The last time I ventured out of the boil, bake, or fry arena, I dropped an egg in boiling water and stirred real fast. When Julia Child does that, she gets a poached egg. When I did it, I got very bland egg drop soup.

And I refuse to make my own pastry. I recently saw one food editor on a talk show who swore that making pastry was so easy that once a housewife tried it she would never avoid it again. That was my cue to try a ravioli recipe which has always tempted me. Making the dough was easy, just as the lady said. Unfortunately, when I happened to drop one of the finished product on the floor, it bounced two feet in the air.

This same food editor said that using only fresh ingredients was not only desirable but simple and inexpensive. The camera remained focused on her while a mumur of assent ran throughout the audience.

If you ask me, it had to be canned.

Mrs. Montgomery's Oil Career Started As Joke

BRECKENRIDGE, Tx. — The driller on the Texas oil rig looked Debbie Montgomery straight in the eye and said, "I'm going to treat you just like one of the guys. You can either get it or not get it. If you don't get it, you're fired."

His nervousness stemmed from the long standing taboo against women working in "The oil patch." Mrs. Montgomery's high potential as a reliable employee was evident, but what would her presence do to morale on the rig? What about jealous wives?

Mrs. Montgomery's oil career started as a joke. She was working as a waitress in a restaurant frequented by oil field workers. The drillers complained constantly about roughnecks who worked for one paycheck and then drifted away.

"Why don't you give it a try?" one asked her, with a twinkle in his eye. To his surprise Debbie Montgomery considered the question thoughtfully.

"That's just what I'll do," she answered. When her shift in the restaurant ended at noon, she lined up with the men to be transported to the rig. Surprisingly enough, she was hired right away. She worked for this employer for only a few months and then was hired by her present employer — in Breckenridge, Texas — where she has been working for the past two years.

Since her husband left the family, Mrs. Montgomery has been the sole supporter of her two daughters. They live in an apartment in Bryson, a small oilfield town. Her morning role is that of mother, housekeeper and cook. But, just after lunch, seven days a week, she drives to her driller's house, leaves her children with his wife, and joins the crew for an hour's drive to the well site near Breckenridge.

Once there, the men dress in the traditional "dog-house" while Debbie dons her worn jeans and sweatshirt in her own small trailer. She makes six dollars an hour and time and a half for overtime.

It's nearly midnight when she picks up her daughters. The small one rarely wakes during the ride home.

Machinery today does much of the manual labor once required on an oil rig. However, Mrs. Montgomery's muscles has firmed and she is amazed by her new strength.

"We clean the rig, paint it, and mud it up," says Mrs. Montgomery. "The mud keeps the sides of the well from caving in. Right now we're drilling. Every once in awhile we pull the pipes out of the hole and sharpen the bits.

"At first when I went out they'd try to help me," she recalls. "I told them I wanted to do it myself to learn how."

Debbie Montgomery's dependability record ranks higher than that of most of her male co-workers. "Four of our present crew quit when they got paid," she remarks.

Many new workers who come onto the rig stare in amazement at Mrs. Montgomery. But few seem to resent her presence.

On her first oilfield assignment, the hardest part of the job for Mrs. Montgomery was maintaining strict business relations with the other crew members. Today that problem no longer exists.

Mrs. Montgomery's dad boasts about his daughter's job, and her safety record on the job. Her mother worries, and said at first, "You're going to get your fingers cut off." But Debbie replied, "It's a lot easier work than being a waitress, and I'm very careful."

Debbie Montgomery dreams of making a career of oilfield work. "I want to be a driller myself someday," she comments.

When asked if she ever got a chance to have fun she laughed. "I'm pretty busy, and my hours at home are not the usual dating hours."

Debbie Montgomery has her hands full, supporting her family and paving the way for other women interested in the good pay and the challenging work of a job on an oil rig.

Still Promoting Dead Amendment, Live Issue

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — A delegation of women's-rights turned up on Capitol Hill the other day, still lobbying hard for a dead amendment and a live issue. With deference, it has to be said that theirs is a futile quest. The laws they seek to alter are beyond the parliamentary reach.

The dead amendment, of course, is the long-pending Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution. The live issue — the abiding, eternal issue — has to do with the status that society and the marketplace accord to women. In a word, the issue is discrimination. Like the poor, it has always been with us. The vice, if it is a vice, is intractable.

Mind you, we have come a long way from the relationships that were praised by the early philosophers and theologians. "The male is by nature superior, and the female inferior," said Aristotle, "and the one rules and the other is ruled." Woman, he added, "may be said to be an inferior man." That same chauvinistic spirit runs through most of the world's literature up to the present century. Women were expected to be obedient, subservient and silent. "It is thy place, woman," said Aeschylus, "to hold thy peace, and keep within doors."

No more. The most significant social history of our country in this century is to be found in the struggle against invidious discrimination — discrimination by race, and discrimination by sex. At the last count, federal agencies alone were administering more than 130 statutes and executive orders forbidding it. Half of the states have their own laws to prohibit it. Few principles have been embraced more passionately by politicians than the principle of equal rights. Yet manifestly inequality persists.

Would the Equal Rights Amendment put an end to it? I do not believe it for a moment, but this was the view pressed by Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, in her appearance last month before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. Without ratification of the ERA, she said, "sex discrimination at work will continue." How so? From its very inception back in 1973, proponents of the ERA have imagined that the amendment, if it ever were ratified, would accomplish more than it possibly could accomplish. The amendment would write into the Constitution this commandment: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

But so far as a new order of sexual equality is concerned, the language is illusory. Constitutional amendments are both symbolic and substantive, but they are not self-executing. The history of the 14th Amendment is in point. Back in 1866, the drafters of that amendment may have supposed they were assuring a new order of racial equality. More than a century later, the courts still are struggling to define "equal protection of the laws." So it would be with the ERA. Case by case, year by year, one tested statute at a time, judges would have to grapple with defining "equality of rights under the law."

Laws, rules, regulations, executive orders and constitutional amendments are feeble instruments for altering fundamental human relationships. Deep in the mazes of the Labor Department is an Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs. One of its functions is to enforce an executive order prohibiting sexual discrimination on construction jobs. The office at one point fixed a woman's quota of 6.9 percent of the work force. Despite heroic recruiting efforts by building contractors, and despite a welter of training programs for women, no such quota has materialized. As a general proposition, it appears, women choose not to be plumbers.

Maybe things will be different in the future. Perhaps a unisex work force will one day take shape — but don't hold your breath till it happens. Women can do some jobs better than men, some jobs as well as men, and some jobs not as well as men, and when the marketplace recognizes this truth, it isn't discrimination. It's just the way things are.

had served 14 months.

During the fall of 1976, the Carolina Theatre Company, a Winston-Salem based repertory troupe, which was financed by a $15,000 state grant, toured the state presenting at country courthouses a play entitled "The Limits of Dis-sent." In 90 minutes, the cast presented highlights of the testimony the Scales jury had heard during the three week trial. At each point, a jury of local citizens was chosen to render a verdict based on the testimony.

After the jury returned a "not guilty" verdict at the opening night in Lenoir, the troupe came to Morganton on a rainy night that cut the crowd to 30 people. Because of the tiny crowd, the jury deliberated at a long table in view of the audience.

"If the worst thing they can come up with is the Internationale and a pencil, I think they have a mighty weak case," observed the first juror. Another said the government's case boiled down to "guilt by association." An elderly woman agreed, but reminded the audience, "The times were different then...It seems ridiculous now, but it wasn't funny then."

The troupe brought its play to Greensboro on the night of Oct. 12 and found a crowd of more than 200 persons crammed into the Guilford County courtroom. The audience included A.M. Scales, a Greensboro businessman and father of the defendant in the actual trial. After the jury had filed out to begin its deliberations, an elderly woman, who said she was one of the youth's teachers, told the crowd that "there never was a finer boy," but he was "misled by the tenor of the times."

After the jury had again returned a verdict of "not guilty" reporters questioned Dr. Lewis Lipsitz, a University of North Carolina political science professor who had edited the script. He expressed disappointment because, "The government's case is too weak." He said that at the actual trial the government lawyers had "piled on the evidence, and you really don't get a taste of it here." He explained that in cutting down the testimony presented to the jury during three weeks it had been necessary to eliminate much of the government's documentary material, and the "piled on" effect had been lost.

When a reporter questioned Scales about the play during an interview in his New York apartment where he has lived since his release from prison, Scales said that though he felt it was "well-intended and well-motivated...there is nothing of me in that trial."

Scales, a proof reader for the New York Times, said he would not have minded taking the stand at his trial, but "I don't think it would have made the slightest difference." He said if he had testified, the government attorneys "would have questioned me about every member of the Communist party that I had ever known, and they would have had me refuse to answer a thousand questions, and I would have gone to jail for contempt (of court), and this, of course, is why there was no possibility of presenting a positive case at that trial."

Years before when telling of his renunciation of the Communist Party, a reporter had asked Scales if during his long membership the party had deceived him, he replied, "I guess it was self-deception."

In noting that Scales had "answered truthfully, as far as is known, all questions about his own acts, but named no names," Johnson said Scales had shown he was "a damn fool and a gentleman." He said that in Valhalla, Scales' great uncle "may be snorting in disgust. But he isn't blushing."

Dukakis. Massachusetts' tradition of public funding through property taxes worked well in a rural setting, but as government appetites in dense, urban centers grew, so did the taxes.

"You have to remember we are a highly urban state, with more streets, more sewers and more roads," says Susanne Tompkins, vice president of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Association. "We also pioneered decades ago a series of costly social programs. It all costs money."

Massachusetts homeowners paid the highest property taxes in the nation next to Alaska, doting out $546 per capita, compared to the national average of $285 per capita, and residents carry the 11th highest tax burden in the nation, paying out $175 for every $1,000 they earn. The national average is $156 per thousand.

The state spends 5 percent more than the national average on public education, 30 percent more on fire and police protection and a whopping 40 percent more for welfare programs.

"Traditionally we have paid more for services," Dukakis explains. "We're the only ones with home care programs for the elderly. It's a terrific program, it saves lives, but it costs money."

State and local leaders say a big part of the problem lies in who pays. Municipalities handle 65 percent of public education costs, which have nearly tripled in the last decade. They must also foot the bill for many programs mandated by the Legislature.

Since the property tax is the only source of revenue available, towns and cities have been forced to go to that well more and more.

"At the time those things were passed, no one was paying attention," says former Gov. Dukakis, who also served in the Legislature during the '70s. "The bills would be passed and no one was counting the money."

But they're counting the money now. Cities and towns have imposed a hiring freeze and are contemplating large layoffs of police, teachers and firefighters. Some schools and libraries will be counterrevolution is on Main Street, it gets respectful treatment on Capitol Hill. Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma, the House Budget Committee's supposedly conservative new chairman, commented favorably on ending the deduction on consumer interest.

Friends of Jones had interred from his private comments that Rivlin's head would roll at CBO after a moderate-conservative coalition elected him chairman over liberal opposition in the House Democratic Caucus. But Jones now says he has found Rivlin quite cooperative and has no intention of firing her. That makes the cautious Republican chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, even more fearful about sacking Rivlin, pleading lamely he does not want to "politicize" CBO.

But Kemp, Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah and other Republican budget committee members believe CBO must be scrupulously nonpartisan in a divided Congress, not the vanguard of the tax counterrevolution. Whether they persist or not will be a test of the Reagan revolution's tenacity and future prospects.

Clogging Lessons Are Offered

The Grifton Shad Festival will sponsor a series of four clogging lessons during March to give Eastern North Carolinians an opportunity to learn to clog before the clogging and square dancing features of the 11th annual Grifton Shad Festival.

The classes are open to any interested person. Instructor for the classes will be Mrs. Wanda Hill of Snow Hill, a member of the Green Grass Cloggers of Greenville.

Before the series of classes is completed, Pitt Community College Visiting Artist, Beverly Cotten, will teach basic square dance calls and call a square dance for class members. On Saturday, April 4, class members and other interested persons will be invited to join in clogging and square dancing after demonstrations by area dance groups at the Shad Festival.

The Shad Festival classes will be offered on Monday evenings, March 2-23 from 7:30-9:30 p.m. at the Grifton School auditorium. Fee for the series of four classes will be $2 per person.

The Pitt County Community Schools will cooperate with the Shad Festival in sponsoring these lessons, and the Grassroots Art Program of the North Carolina Arts Council is co-sponsoring the Shad Festival dance and art events.

The Grifton Shad Festival is cooperating with the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival, April 1-16, and Shad Festival clogging, square dancing, art shows, crafts, historical museum, and "Fishy Tales" contest will be part of the Festival.

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democrats and Republicans broke along party lines on Friday, marking the first partisan split of the 1981 session of the General Assembly.

The split came on a bill in the House that would allow registered voters to maintain their voting registration by mail.

The heavy Democratic majority in the House prevailed, passing the bill 95-12, with all the dissenting votes coming from Republicans.

The Legislature wrapped up its fourth legislative week, adjourning before noon for the weekend. But the day was not without some interesting developments, including a move by some members of the House to voice their support for the Equal Rights Amendment. They did that by keeping a local bill from passing. The bill was sponsored by Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Lenoir, a known opponent of ERA.

The voter registration bill, introduced by Rep. Bee Holt, D-Burlington, would make it possible for registered voters to confirm their registration and precinct by mail, rather than by appearing in person. Presently, voters must re-register every four years, if they did not vote in the two previous general elections.

Several Republican expressed concern that the bill would lead to voter fraud and postcard registration. Mrs. Holt dismissed those concerns, and said the split was just that because greater voter registration favors Democrats in North Carolina.

"Most people in this section of the country are Democrats," Mrs. Holt said. "If you increase the rolls, you increase the Democrats. Of course, that didn't help much in the last election."

The purpose of the bill, she said, was to keep purging from being considered a penalty.

"It should be done only in the interest of accuracy," she said. "The idea that you have to make an appearance in person is ridiculous."

Mrs. Holt said there should be no concern about fraud or postcard registration.

"It would only affect those people who have already registered and have been certified," she said of her bill. "And postcard registration speaks to the initial act of registration and my bill doesn't. But I'm not really surprised that it became a party line vote."

In other legislative action: Health Services Cuts

The fiscal research staff of the Legislature told a legislative committee that the federal government, under the Carter Administration, had cut $1.7 million a year from the budget for the Division of Health Services in the Department of Human Resources.

"That means you are already looking a shortfall in receipts," staff member Bob Daughtry told the joint base budget subcommittee on Human Resources.

Association Endorses Delegates

Peter Anderson and Polly Dail were endorsed as delegates to the White House Conferences on Aging at the meeting of the Greenville Chapter of AARP held last week.

Retsy Baker, Anderson and Henry Lofquist volunteered to assist Elizabeth Deal and Mary Robinette with the tax aid program.

Miss Camille Clarke, consulting dietitian with the N. C. Division of Health Services spoke on keeping healthy. She suggested eating sensibly, exercising, learning to handle stress and being safety conscious.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter Cain and Margaret Nelson, new members, Mrs. Cassie Chauncey and Mrs. Blanche Angle, visitors, were welcomed by Vice President Polly Dail.

The invocation, given by the Rev. Lofquist, included a memorial to Mary Bell.

The March 9 meeting will be held at noon at Abram's Restaurant.

UNC Tuition Hike

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Tuition increases and reductions in non-teaching positions are likely for the 16 campuses of the University of North Carolina system because of legislative budget cuts, according to the vice chancellor for fiscal affairs.

The university board of governors Friday also adopted a long-range plan which would emphasize engineering, science, technology and animal science at A&T University in Greensboro.

Concerning finances, the governors were told that the Legislature had requested the reduction of 161 non-teaching positions from the state college and university system.

"These are reductions that would be reflected in appropriations decreases," Felix Joyner, vice chancellor for fiscal affairs said.

The unanimously approved long-range plan grants permission to A&T and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro to begin planning several new degree programs within the next five years at the graduate and undergraduate levels.

Also approved was construction of an animal-research facility at A&T.

David J. Whichard, chairman of the committee that prepared the plan, said the university also will upgrade its five traditionally black institutions.

"This board has previously adopted a broad range of goals and objectives in this area," Whichard told the board.

The long-range plan for 1980-1985 states there will be no major change in mission for either A&T or UNC-G. The plan says priority will be given at A&T to improvements in administrative services, especially fiscal management.

The board authorized for A&T new programs at the undergraduate level in animal science, special education, reading education, chemical engineering, civil engineering and occupational safety.

At the graduate level, new programs were authorized in transportation, architectural engineering, mechanical engineering and applied mathematics.

The first intermediate-level program ever for A&T also was approved. That will be sixth-year program in educational media. An intermediate program is one beyond the master's program.

New programs authorized for UNC-G at the graduate level are in accounting, medical laboratory technology, home decorations, philosophy and liberal studies. Also, a doctoral-level program in music was approved.

The five-year plan calls for enrollment at UNC-G to be at 8,598 by 1985, including 6,625 undergraduates and 1,973 graduate students. Enrollment projections for A&T for 1985 call for 5,102 students — 4,716 undergraduates and 386 graduate students.

The five-year plan also says no action would be taken by the Board of Governors on A&T's nursing program before the fall of 1981, at which time the board will look at the performance of graduates on licensing exams and the accreditation status by the National League for Nursing.

In approving the animal research facility for A&T, the board members learned that the $250,000 required to build the 6,600-square-foot research laboratory will come from a U.S. Department of Agriculture grant.

Two More Children Are Found; Police Speculate On Killer

ANOTHER BODY — Police remove a body from an area in North Dekalb County — across town in Atlanta from where most of the other bodies of black teenagers have been found — Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

ATLANTA (AP) — The discovery of two more slain children Friday — the 16th and 17th such discoveries here in the past 19 months — has led one top police official to speculate that the killer or killers may be trying to get caught.

The body of 11-year-old Patrick Baltazar was found sprawled at the bottom of a ravine about 15 feet from the parking lot of an office complex in suburban DeKalb County in the northeastern section of the metropolitan area.

Less than 30 minutes earlier, investigators combing a heavily overgrown area in southwest Fulton County, near the intersection of Suber and Cascade roads, found skeletal remains which medical examiners later said "definitely" were those of a child.

"From this type situation, that person may be trying to get caught," DeKalb County Public Safety Commissioner Dick Hand said after Baltazar's body was identified.

"He doesn't fully want to get caught, and yet he does. The more cases that occur, the more evidence there is going to be. The more it happens, the greater the chance of apprehension. We've learned more and more with each one of these cases," he said.

While 17 children have been found slain since July 1979, three of those have been discovered in the past eight days, and a total of six have been found since Jan. 9.

Two other children have been missing for more than five months. Medical examiners said Friday night they were trying to determine if the skeletal remains found in southwest Atlanta belonged to one of those two.

Dr. John Feegel, Fulton County's associate medical examiner, said an initial examination of the remains indicated that the victim "probably" was a black male between the ages of 9 and 11. All the other victims have been black between the ages of 7 and 15.

The two missing children are 10-year-old Darron Glass, last seen in September, and 11-year-old Jeffery Mathis, who disappeared in March. Feegel said authorities have dental records on both Glass and Mathis, but neither child had any dental restoration work, making it difficult to establish an identity.

"When there aren't any fillings, all you have is teeth," Feegel said, "and teeth just look like teeth."

The skeleton was found about a mile northwest of the spot where the body of 14-year-old Lubie "Chuck" Geter was found Feb. 5. In all, eight of the 17 child victims have been found within several miles of the spot where the remains were found Friday.

Baltazar's body was the first in the string of child slayings to be found in DeKalb County, and Hand speculated that publicity about the cases may have caused the killer or killers to change the pattern of operation.

But Baltazar, like seven of the other victims, was asphyxiated, Hand said, adding that the youth apparently had been dead at least 72 hours when his body was found.

One of 14 children — most of whom lived with their mother in New Orleans — Baltazar lived with his father in a one-room apartment in a small housing project in downtown Atlanta. He was last seen Friday night in the downtown area.

Described as a street-wise youngster used to making his own way and his own money, the Baltazar boy was said by friends and family to have been as comfortable with adults as with children his own age.

Donald Ray Baltazar, the victim's 20-year-old brother, said the youth "acted and talked like a grown person...if anybody got him into a car, it took two people or someone who was real strong."

Young Baltazar worked at a restaurant, sold newspapers on the street and cotton candy at sporting events — money-making activities engaged in by at least 12 of the child victims.

Hand said Baltazar's body was fully-clothed in basically the same clothing he was wearing when reported missing. He said there were no marks on the body indicating any type of struggle.

Hand said the Baltazar slaying will be investigated individually as a homicide in DeKalb County. But he said the case also will be investigated by the special task force on the child cases.

We endorse mixed beverages in the City of Greenville

As voters and citizens of the City of Greenville, we support the referendum to be held on February 17. We feel that a fairly administered and strictly enforced mixed beverage law would have numerous benefits for the city. Among those benefits, we feel, are:

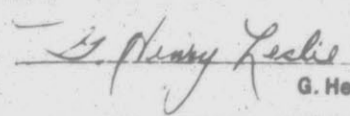

1. Increased revenues in taxes.
2. Increased economy from the ability to attract conventions, etc., from outside the city.
3. A better method of controlling alcohol, in that in restaurants where mixed beverages are served, brown bagging would no longer be allowed under state law.
4. A progressive law for a progressive city.
5. A better environment for restaurants, thus, better restaurants.
6. For those who choose to drink, the freedom to drink the beverage of their choice in small doses, without having to illegally carry an opened whiskey bottle around.

In no way do we support the establishment of walk-in bars and taverns, serving mixed beverages. The referendum that the citizens of Greenville will decide will allow established, sit-down restaurants to apply for mixed beverages licenses so that their customers may choose to have a drink along with a meal.

We urge your support for the referendum on February 17.

Hotbed Of Corruption

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — When a federal grand jury launched an investigation into bid rigging by Tennessee paving companies in 1979, its actions went largely unnoticed except by nervous paving-firm officials.

But seven months after the grand jury convened in August, it became clear the initial probe had uncovered a hotbed of corruption, bribery and collusion involving nearly every major contractor in Tennessee. And it didn't stop at the Tennessee border.

Within a year, the federal investigation had swept into four more Southern states: North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia.

When the probe is over, some state officials predict it may be the largest white-collar criminal investigation ever conducted by the U.S. Justice Department.

So far in Tennessee, the federal government has taken action against more than 40 paving companies and their executives. About six people have been indicted by a federal grand jury. The latest indictments came Thursday when three more companies were charged with violating the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Sources close to the Tennessee investigation predict that as many as 100 companies and individuals may be brought to court before the probe is completed. Others say the figure may be even higher.

In North Carolina, two paving companies and four current and former paving executives were convicted of rigging bids in a federal trial last week in Charlotte. All but one of the executives were given prison sentences, and hefty fines were levied on the companies.

In all, about 15 companies and officials have been indicted and more than three dozen companies have been barred from bidding on North Carolina road projects. Two more bid-rigging trials are scheduled to begin Feb. 23 in Statesville.

In Georgia last week, a Superior Court judge threw out indictments against five paving firms and nine officials, ruling the indictments were based on a law that is vague and unconstitutional. Georgia Attorney General Arthur Bolton has given notice he will appeal the ruling.

Meanwhile, the City of Atlanta has filed a multimillion-dollar suit against 27 paving companies, accusing them of conspiring to rig bids on the city's new $400-million airport.

Eight companies and 15 individuals have been indicted on bid-rigging charges in Virginia as a result of a grand jury probe. Of those, four firms and seven executives have pleaded guilty; the other cases are scheduled for trial.

In South Carolina, three companies have pleaded guilty to bid rigging and eight companies have been ordered by the state highway department to cease bidding on state paving projects.

Bid-rigging investigations also began recently in Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana, Kentucky, Kansas and Arkansas, according to the Justice Department.

Drugs Charged Plant Workers

WAYNESBORO, Ga. (AP)

Fourteen construction workers at Georgia Power Co.'s Vogtle nuclear generating plant were charged with drug law violations, herded into a school bus and hauled off to jail on Friday, officials said.

The arrests were part of a massive drug raid in Burke and Richmond Counties, Burke County Sheriff Greg Coursey said. Thirty-two persons had been arrested by late Friday night and deputies were still trying to serve two more warrants.

The arrests, on various drug charges, climax a four-month investigation, Coursey said. The probe included two undercover agents who bought marijuana and other drugs from construction workers and other persons, he said.

A major problem, he said, was keeping information about the undercover agents at the rural Burke County plant site a secret in his small department.

Coursey said Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents were brought in from all over the state to help in the roundup.

The plan was so secret, Coursey said, that the two agents did not know of each other's existence. One of the men was hired by Waynesboro Police Chief Roy Boston. Both were sworn in as county deputies.

Police, deputies and GBI agents recovered several pounds of marijuana along with some Valium pills during Friday's raids.

Coursey said the investigation began when security personnel at the plant informed law enforcement authorities of a problem with drug sales and use at the site, where about 3,500 workers are employed.

Former Sheriff Ralph Elliott, Boston and GBI Special Agent Preston Purvis developed a plan to use two agents making undercover buys.

About half of the buys were made on the site, Coursey said. The others were made in Waynesboro, other areas of Burke County and in Richmond County.

The drugs purchased by the agents included marijuana, amphetamines, phenylclidine (angel dust), and quaaludes, Coursey said.

A spokesman for Georgia Power said the utility had no immediate comment on the arrests.

Plant Vogtle is the second nuclear power plant to be built by Georgia Power. The first unit there is scheduled to go into service in 1984. The first nuclear facility is Plant Hatch at Baxley.

C-Highway Contracts, 1st Add. 350

In all the bid-rigging cases heard so far in the five states, defendants have told a common story — that bid rigging and complementary bids are widespread in the industry. They all have testified that highway paving work was divided up so each company got a "share of the asphalt pie."

"Just about everyone in the damned paving industry is involved," said one Tennessee attorney.

During bid-rigging trials in North Carolina, defense attorneys have argued over and over again that bid rigging was a way of life in the paving industry for the past 50 years.

Charlotte attorney Allen Bailey, representing the L.A. Reynolds Co. of Winston-Salem in a bid-rigging trial last week in Charlotte, told the court that small paving companies that refused to go along with rules laid down by larger pavers faced financial ruin at the hands of their competitors.

"My client found that when he got into the industry in the early 1970s, the rules were handed down by the giants of the industry," Bailey said. "And those rules were: Don't invade someone else's territory, don't break your agreement with them, don't take a job unless you are told to be the low bidder and give and take complementary bids.

State officials say they are considering tougher laws to crack down on bid rigging and put an end to decades of collusion within the paving industry. So far, North Carolina is the only state to take the matter before its Legislature.

Three top North Carolina officials appeared before a state House committee last week, urging lawmakers to adopt a bill that would give the state one of the nation's toughest anti-trust laws.

Two Courses Planned At PCC

The Human Services Technology Department at Pitt Community College will be offering two courses, beginning spring quarter, for persons already working in the human services field and who want to upgrade their knowledge and skills.

Departmental Chairperson Margaret J. French announced today the courses, Basic Health Science and Behavior Disorder Theory, both of which will be conducted during the evening sessions.

Basic Health Science, a three-hour course, is designed to introduce the students to the normal structure and functioning of the human body, briefly covering all systems.

Scenic Designer Greg Busch Does Impossible

"CREATE SPACE" . . . EC Playhouse scenic designer Gregory Busch pauses on the prison cellblock catwalk he designed for the set of "Getting Out," a Playhouse production running Feb. 18-21, 23-25. At lower left is the cell, and directly below Busch, the one-room apartment rented by the play's main character, a recently-released prisoner. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines).

ECU News Bureau
"We create a space for the director and actors to perform a play in."
This understatement is how East Carolina Playhouse scenic designer Gregory Busch describes his work. Watching Busch and his crew reveals just how much preparation goes on, not only "behind the scenes," but around, above and in front of the most deceptively simple theatre set.

Buch's design for the Playhouse production of the psychological drama, "Getting Out," features an imposing construction of metal piping which was welded together on the stage area of ECU's Studio Theatre.

The set includes several hundred feet of pipes assembled to form a prison cell, a cellblock catwalk and railings, and a one-room apartment for the main character—a violent woman just out of prison. Four staircases connect the two levels of the set.

Working from Buch's design, technical director Michael Gall and ECU drama students constructed the set, applied paint and plaster where needed and arranged props to furnish the sparse cell and apartment.

The effect is completed by complex schemes for lighting by Playhouse lighting designer David Doyning and appropriate clothing for the characters, the task of Playhouse costume designer Patrice Alexander.

is able to estimate closely how much expense is involved before construction begins. His "Getting Out" set cost the Playhouse $3,000.

"The designer must always adapt his ideas to the director's conception, and occasionally add a whole set if a new play is being rewritten during rehearsals."

"This isn't as difficult as it sounds if you have a good basic idea of how the play should work."

Each component of the set should "work" also. Buch, like other professional theatre people, has known stage disasters firsthand, like the loose doorknob that came off in Mother Superior's hand in a "Sound of Music" production.

Mistimed sound effects, accidental lighting failures, props that fall—these can upset a show as much as the actor who forgets his lines.

However, experience with basic carpentry work on theatre sets during his student days (Washington and Lee University, Smith College) and the 1972 season of the East Carolina Summer Theatre has equipped Greg Buch with the ability to design sets that are mechanically as well as artistically sound.

He is relaxed and patient with theatre students. "I don't get nervous anymore, at least not much," he confided. "We plan, make schedules and somehow, things always get done."

"Getting Out" will be presented by the East Carolina Playhouse Feb. 18-21 and 23-25 in the Studio Theatre. All performances begin at 8:15 p.m. Tickets may be reserved by telephoning 757-6390.)

"We rely heavily on the local antiques dealers who lend furnishings and accessories to enhance the stage. In most stock productions, with each show having a brief run and brief preparation time, we have to work fast and with limited resources," Buch said.

Buch's professional background includes work with several New York and New England theatres and southeastern summer stock companies.

Art On Exhibit

The February exhibit at the Greenville Museum of Art is the work of Robert Dick.

The show, displayed in the North and South Galleries, is representative of Dick's recent work and is titled, "Formalism and Paradox." He recently completed his Master of Fine Arts degree at East Carolina University in painting.

Dick considers himself a formalist, interested in the pure elements of visual art and is not involved with social commentary, literary statement or simply aweing the spectator with meticulously rendered objects. He believes that the content of his current work is influenced by his interest in geometric abstraction and illusion, as well as surrealism.

On display are paintings, drawings and collages which provide evidence of the evolution of Dick's recent work from a simple manipulation of space, utilizing crumpled papers and spray paint to the complex monumental painting that investigate the illusion of space by exploring the paradoxical interplay between abstract underpainting and realistically painted forms such as ribbons and draped fabrics. The direction of Dick's work shows that the artist is sensitive to his own philosophical beliefs and is committed to being authentic in his work, Museum Director Mary Ann Pennington said.

Talented Group In ECU Event

Last weekend a group of talented high school students arrived at ECU to compose the 1981 All-State High School Band, Eastern Division.

After practicing Friday and Saturday, the musicians gave a concert Saturday night in Wright Auditorium.

Participating students from Rose included Beth Congleton, flute, first chair, Holly Rodgers, flute, Mike Pollard, trombone, first chair, Jim Bearden, clarinet, first chair, and Todd Lynch, trumpet. These students played in the symphonic band. Concert band members were Jayne Conway, flute, first chair, Jennifer Mahoney, flute, and Vince Hankins, baritone.

The Food Service Class continues to serve the faculty and students of Rose with its culinary skill. The students prepared a luncheon for the teachers Wednesday.

The menu included homemade chicken soup, salad, Valentine cupcakes and tea. The students hope to use proceeds to finance a trip to the state food show in Charlotte in March. And finally, the class plans to serve a banquet for 40-50 people at a meeting of the International Reading Association to be held Tuesday, Feb. 17, at Hooker Memorial Christian Church. The menu will consist of chicken with sour cream, rice, green beans almondine, homemade rolls, spiced apple rings, applesauce-walnut cake and beverages.

Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, was the scene of the recent Scholastic Art Competition where five Rose students won gold key awards. The winners, John Little, Ana Rita Weber, Melanie West, Elizabeth Garrett and Karen Downes will advance to further competition to be held in New York City. Also recognized in the contest were Eric Bowman, Edie Harrison, Kim Fisher, Ana Rita Weber and John Little who received honorable mention.

Voting for the King and Queen of Hearts took place last week with nominees including John Sheppard, Robert Brown, Donald Johnson, Barry Smith, Chip Little,

School Students Go To Concert

Students in the elementary and junior high levels of the Greenville City Schools will be transported by bus to Minges Coliseum on Wednesday for the special concert to be presented for them by East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra.

According to the Orchestra's conductor, Robert Hause, this is the 13th annual concert of the series, started in 1968 by Professor Hause with the full support of the administration of the Greenville City Schools.

The Children's Concerts provide all students with the opportunity of hearing a symphony orchestra. In addition, students prepare for the special treat of singing with the orchestra. This year they will join together for John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," and for "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America, the Beautiful."

Another special feature of this year's program is the performance of the Overture to "First for Freedom," outdoor drama performed annually in Halifax and written by Dr. Joseph Distano of the ECU School of Music faculty. Other works chosen for this special audience will be selections from "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein, "Rumanian Folk Dances" by Bartok, Bizet's L'Arlésienne Suite, the overture to Johann Strauss Jr.'s comic opera "Die Fledermaus - The Bat," and Leroy Anderson's "Trumpeter's Lullaby."

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LINDA M. STANCILL

Hollywood has exerted an enormous influence on the social fabric of the United States and the world. Its true achievement is now being acknowledged.

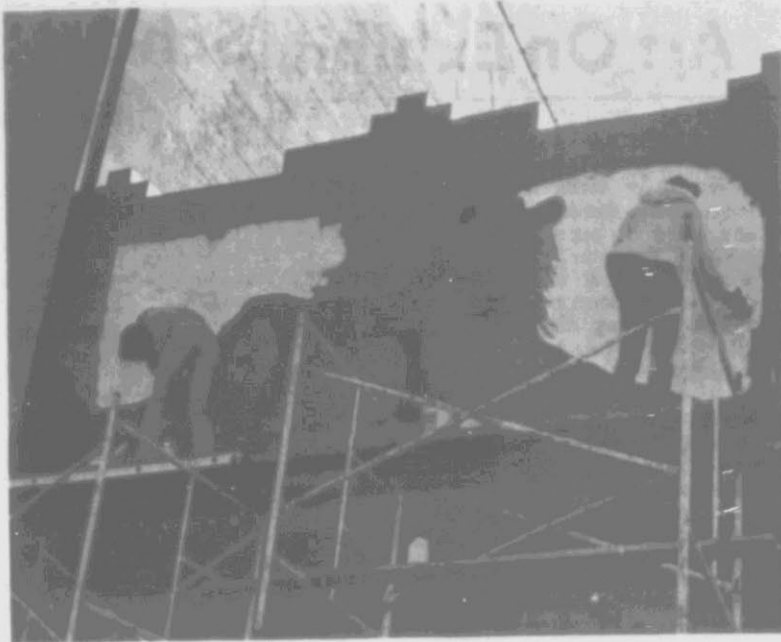

"Hollywood 1920-1970" edited by Peter Cowie explores the five decades that comprise the finest achievement of Hollywood, that suburb of Los Angeles that has become a legend in the minds of millions of moviegoers over the years. Each decade is covered by an expert in his field. David Robinson offers an excellent introduction to the twenties and provides the social, economic and political background so essential to an understanding of the Hollywood character.

John Baxter presents the thirties with skill and intelligence and surveys the genre movies that were to make Hollywood still more celebrated and revered at home and abroad—the horror films, the musicals, the westerns, the biopics. This was the heyday of the major studios when pictures from each were instantly recognizable for their merit.

Charles Higham and Joel Greenburg portray the forties when "Gone with the Wind" became the greatest box-office triumph in history and "Citizen Kane" was to set a standard of American filmmaking unequalled in the years to come. There was a drastic change by 1950 with the advent of television. Gordon Gow traces the desperation and variety of this decade in which Hollywood introduced a whole series of elaborate technical devices such as Cinerama, Cinemascope and 3-D in an attempt to win back dwindling audiences.

John Baxter surveys the sixties in which Hollywood surprisingly recovered much of its old zest and resilience, due to the arrival of talented directors from television. The fading of the Biblical epic gave way to the popularity of the tongue-in-cheek thriller and the more violent films. Producers and directors were no longer looking to Hollywood for their livelihood. London and New York were equally popular as locations and financial bases and by 1970 a pure "Hollywood movie" was a rarity. This fascinating, illustrated history is a comprehensive survey of American films and film makers.

"The New York Times at the Movies" edited by Arleen Keylin and Christine Bent contains the original reviews of over 150 film classics. Perspective and professional reviews of 64 years of film favorites appear together with the original movie ads and hundreds of exciting photographs. It's a delicious mixture of nostalgia and information with a security of recognition, particularly since Hollywood's timeless films and large-than-life stars now enter into the intimacy of our homes via TV.

Rose Art Students Complete Project

Ten Rose High seniors, all advanced art students, have completed their first project in commercial art.

The ten, under supervision of their art instructor, Billy Stinson, last week put the finishing touches on a colorful storefront design for a record company, on Fifth Street downtown.

"The entire project has been carried out by the students," Stinson said. "They worked up the design, chose the colors, everything."

The biggest problem encountered by the group was getting scaffolding put together and in place.

The ten involved in the advanced project are: Eric Bowman, Patrick Day, Kim Fisher, Brad Griffin, John Joyner, Jennifer Mahoney, Sara Sanford, Greg Smith, Tammy Smith, and Jerry Teel.

Stinson and the ten students hoped to be invited by local area businesses to do other art work projects. Interested individuals or firms can contact Rose High School.

Art Exhibit Is To Open At Gray Gallery

ECU News Bureau
Important paintings by nationally prominent American artists will be on view at East Carolina University's Museum of Art/Gray Art Gallery Feb. 15-March 15.

The exhibition is on loan from the permanent collection of the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte.

According to gallery director Randolph Osman, most of the paintings are large in size, averaging four by six feet, and include works dating from the past 25 years. Represented are such noted painters as Robert Natkin, Frank Faulkner, Stanley Boxer, Doris Keeper, Ben Schoenzeit and Carmen Cleoro.

The exhibition will open at 1 p.m., Feb. 15, with a public reception in the gallery. Refreshments will be served to all attending.

Gray Gallery, located in the east end of the Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the main campus, is open each weekday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and on Sunday afternoons from 1 to 4 p.m.

Scenes Are On Display

Scenes from Shackleford Banks, a small hidden island just inside Cape Lookout, are now on display at the N.C. Marine Resources Center, Pine Knoll Shores.

The color photographs are a part of a new exhibit furnished by Cape Lookout National Seashore and portray the island's diverse habitat ranging from beach to maritime forest.

Shackleford Banks has been authorized by Congress to be acquired and included as part of the Cape Lookout National Seashore so that its lonely beauty will be preserved. Negotiations with the island's more than 50 private owners is now under way, and its final turnover to the National Park Service is scheduled to occur in 1983.

Marimbists Will Appear At ECU

Leigh Howard Stevens, America's premier concert marimbist, will present a clinic and recital Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The clinic, to be held from 2-4 p.m., and the recital scheduled for 8:15 p.m., are open free of charge to all interested persons.

Stevens has been a leader in the development of the marimba's literature by commissioning and encouraging composers to write solo and chamber works for the marimba and by transcribing music from the Renaissance, Baroque, and Romantic periods.

Examples of these transcriptions will be heard Monday evening when Stevens performs Robert Schumann's "Album for the Young" and two "Inventions" and a "Sonata" by J.S. Bach. Also programmed are two works composed in this century—Minoru Miki's "Time for Marimba" and John Serry's "Night Rhapsody."

Stevens graduated from the Eastman School of Music in 1975. At that time, he was awarded the coveted Performer's Certificate. Since 1975, he has toured the United States performing solo marimba recitals and lecturing at colleges, universities, and schools of music. He has been invited as guest lecturer and performer at two Percussive Arts Society International Conventions, once in 1975, and again in 1978.

The sponsor for Steven's performance here is the ECU School of Music's 1980-81 Fine Arts Festival.

CONCERT MARIMBIST... Leigh Howard Stevens, concert marimbist, will present a clinic and recital Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The clinic will be held from 2-4 p.m., and the recital is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. with no charge for interested persons.

Fabric Designs Exhibit Set

An exhibition of the printed fabric designs of Shuji Asada, one of Japan's popular textile designers will be on view in the East Carolina Museum of Art/Gray Gallery in Jenkins Fine Arts Center beginning Sunday and will close March 15.

The exhibition will run concurrently with "Contemporary American Paintings: 1960-1980" from the permanent collection of the Mint Museum.

dye artist of his day. Asada recently toured the United States giving workshops in Japanese paste resist techniques. He was also fiber coordinator for the World Craft Conference held in Japan. East Carolina Museum of Art/Gray Gallery is open Monday-Friday, 10-5 and Sunday 1-4. For further information contact Randy Osman, Director.

President's Day Sale

An opportunity for college students to receive experience and training in the work of the local church and parish is provided through the Student Summer Service Program.

Another purpose is to provide additional summer leadership in participating churches. Students earn and learn while spending four to 10 weeks of service with children, youth and adults. Work may include such activities as community and church activities, vacation church school, youth activities, worship, camping and music.

The length of service depends upon the amount of time the student wishes to serve and the amount of service requested by the sponsoring group. An honorarium of $100 per week is paid to the student in addition to transportation, room and board by the agency employing the student.

Each student is placed under the direct supervision of a pastor with the approval and support of the administrative board. Prior to students being sent to the assignments, they must participate in a training period to be conducted May 20-22 at Pfeiffer College.

Students interested in this program should contact the Rev. Dan Earnhardt at the Methodist Student Center, Greenville, as soon as possible.

Bill Held Hostage Over ERA

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It was only a little bill that had nothing to do with the controversy that exploded around it Friday.

In an attempt to make a statement in support of the Equal Rights Amendment some members of the North Carolina House held hostage a Republican senator's local bill to incorporate the community of Gamewell in Caldwell County.

Members of the House agreed the bill was non-controversial and normally would have passed through the House unopposed. But it became a target of ERA supporters because of its sponsor, Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Lenoir, a known opponent of ERA.

It was also a good vehicle for the statement, one member said, because, under the state constitution, incorporation bills need a 60 percent majority to pass, or 72 votes in the House.

ERA proponents were able to gather enough support to keep it from passing. The vote was 71-2.

The failure of the Gamewell incorporation bill set some Republicans against Republicans and left Kincaid saying those involved in killing the measure don't "even belong in the General Assembly."

Rep. Maggie Keesee, R-Greensboro, one of two Republicans in the House to vote against Kincaid's bill, said Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Winston-Salem, was the instigator of the opposition to incorporating Gamewell.

"Kaplan came over to me before the vote and said, 'If you're for ERA, vote against Senate bill 35,'" Mrs. Keesee said. "I said OK, because I am an ERA supporter."

"I was making a political statement, but when I saw I was only one of two votes against it, I felt a little betrayed," Ms. Keesee said.

She said she asked Kaplan about that, and he said "he meant for me to take a walk, not vote against it. But now some of our brethren think we're trying to put the screws to the Republicans."

The Kincaid bill was picked partly because the Lenoir senator is a known opponent of ERA, so the house sent a statement directly to him and the entire Senate, backers said.

The Senate currently has an ERA bill before it that would call for a non-binding referendum in the state to test the strength of the measure.

Kincaid was irate about the action. "I think it's ridiculous," he said. "It shows the immaturity of some members of the General Assembly."

"Whoever instigated it has shown their immaturity and shouldn't even be in the General Assembly."

"If I had introduced the Equal Rights Amendment, it might be different. But this bill is a million miles apart. I hope the voters know what they're doing."

As for Mrs. Keesee and Rep. Dot Burnley, R-High Point, who also voted against the bill, Kincaid said. "If these two ladies voted that way, it just shows their immaturity. As far as I'm concerned, they don't need to come back to Raleigh."

Kincaid said he thinks the move only hurt ERA support.

"We've got enough support now to defeat the issue," he said. "Right now the issue is on the back burner, but this move put it on the front burner."

And Kaplan could face a bit of retribution next week. Mrs. Keesee said she spoke to some senators Friday and they mentioned that one of Kaplan's local bills, ironically to incorporate the community of Clemmons

MOBILE HOME DESTROYED — Winterville firemen battle a blaze that destroyed a mobile home near Winterville Friday night. According to the owner of the home, Johnny Carmon, he returned from work and found the mobile home on fire. Carmon said his two sons had been home earlier that afternoon and there was no evidence of fire. Carmon said an oil heater used to heat the home was on, but was turned down. Firemen arriving found the dwelling engulfed in flames. Value of the home and contents were placed by fire officials at the scene at approximately $7,000. The home was a total loss. Cause of the fire was not determined. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Although the money is for aid to counties, Daughtry said it has been agreed that the cuts would probably come in administrative positions at the division's headquarters in Raleigh. He said the cuts would be in addition to the 1,002 state jobs Gov. Jim Hunt has recommended be cut.

The staff also recommend phasing out the state-operated Pitt County Health Department, and turning over its administration to the county. They made that recommendation because it is the only state-operated department in North Carolina.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Goldsboro, has filed a bill that would clarify the nature of rape and sex offenses in the state. He said in both cases, a person would be guilty if the victim is 12 years old or less and the assailant is more than four years older, or if the victim was forced against her will. Lancaster said current law might be read that both factors are needed for conviction.

Candidates

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill that would make it necessary for a candidate filing for an office to certify the party he is affiliated with, and that he or she is a registered voter. The bill was initiated as a result of the case of J.E.B. Davis, a candidate in the Democratic primary for state auditor. It was discovered after the primary that Davis was a registered Republican. The votes for him were thrown out, which forced a runoff election between the two other Democratic candidates.

Homestead Tax

A bill that would extend the deadline for the Homestead Tax exemption for 1980 until April 15, 1981, received another delay. Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, introduced a technical amendment to the bill that sends it back to the House for concurrence.

Lamp, Raker Shoot Down Tigers, 73-58

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — While the deadly outside shooting of seniors Jeff Lamp and Lee Raker led top-ranked Virginia to a 73-58 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory Saturday over Clemson, Cavalier Coach Terry Holland talked about sophomore Craig Robinson.

"A game like this has to help his confidence," Holland said of Robinson, who finished with eight points and a career-high 11 rebounds despite seeing limited action in the last 10 minutes.

Lamp, pushing his career total to 2,113, finished with 19 points and Raker had 16. Virginia ran its overall record to 22-4, its ACC mark to 11-0 and stretched the nation's longest Division I winning streak to 27.

In the first half, when Virginia built a 39-30 lead, Lamp had 11 points and Raker 10, and they were eight of 13 from the floor.

Sophomore Ralph Sampson, contained most of the game, had 12 points and 12 rebounds and freshman guard Ricky Stokes had eight points.

"I thought we did a good job on defense for most of the game," said Holland. Clemson, which had averaged 62.5 percent accuracy in its last four games, hit only 25 of 63 shots for 39.7 percent to 55.1 percent, 27 of 49, for the Cavaliers.

"They caught on a little bit to what we were doing in the second half and we had to change defenses, but we did a good job in the man-to-man despite their big front line," Holland said.

Holland said, "We were very concerned about controlling the boards. They're big up front and go to the boards very well, but we did a pretty good job ... Virginia had a 37-27 rebound margin."

"They are an awfully good basketball team. They do a lot of things very well.

We did a lot of things well in the first half in nullifying Sampson, but Raker and Lamp hit the jumpers," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster.

Foster was unhappy with the officials, saying Virginia "is too good a team for the three guys who officiated to screw up the game. They were bad. They did not change the outcome of the game, but it made it bad for the spectators."

The Tigers, who fell to 4-7 in the ACC and 17-8 overall, were led by Larry Nance with 16 points and Vince Hamilton with 10.

Clemson never led and was tied only once, at 2-2, before Robinson hit from the foul circle to give Virginia a 4-2 lead with 18 minutes left in the first half.

The Cavaliers, up by 19-16, outscored Clemson 10-4 over the next four minutes, Lamp scoring seven points in the run that gave Virginia a 29-20 lead with 6:59 remaining in the first half.

Clemson got two free throws each from Chris Dodds and Horace Wyatt and two baskets by Clark Bynum sandwiched around jumpers by Lamp and Othell Wilson to narrow the gap to 33-28.

Each team then went five straight possessions without scoring before Nance pulled Clemson within 33-30 on a short jumper with 1:45 left in the half.

But the Cavaliers closed out the half with two free throws each by Raker, Lamp and Stokes for a 39-30 bulge at intermission.

Clemson never got closer than eight points in the last 20 minutes — the first time at 50-42 on a Bynum jumper with 13:25 left and again at 50-42 on a layup by Hamilton with 12:09 remaining.

But Stokes drove the middle for a layup and Jeff Jones then stole ball and fed Stokes for another layup that built the Cavaliers' lead to 56-44 with 11:03 left.

Clemson never got closer the rest of the way, and the Cavaliers built the lead as high as 71-54 with 29 seconds left on two free throws by Terry Gates while reserves played out the string.

Raker hit the first three shots he took in giving Virginia an early 11-4 lead, Robinson scoring two field goals during the streak.

Sampson then made his only significant contribution of the first half with back-to-back dunks after Clemson got within 13-10 on a jumper by Bill Ross and a steal and layup by Hamilton.

A few minutes later, Lamp got his first point, making the second free throw after a technical foul on the Clemson bench, that started the run that sent Virginia up by nine points for the first time.

ECU Closes Out Home Slate Vs. UNC-W Monday

A Staff Report

East Carolina's Pirates close out the 1980-81 home basketball schedule Monday night, hosting UNC-Wilmington in a 7:30 p.m. game at Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates, who were embarrassed by Delaware State on Thursday, 66-63, will be seeking to halt a three-game plunge, including an exhibition game with the Athletics In Action. Their last victory was an 81-59 romp over Campbell.

East Carolina is now 11-12 on the year, and must win each of its remaining three games to be assured of a winning season, and need two wins to finish at even 500.

The other two games are road contests at Richmond and Illinois State, on Feb. 21 and 28, respectively.

Wilmington brought a 9-10 record into a Saturday night game against Maine, and had won seven of their last ten prior to that action.

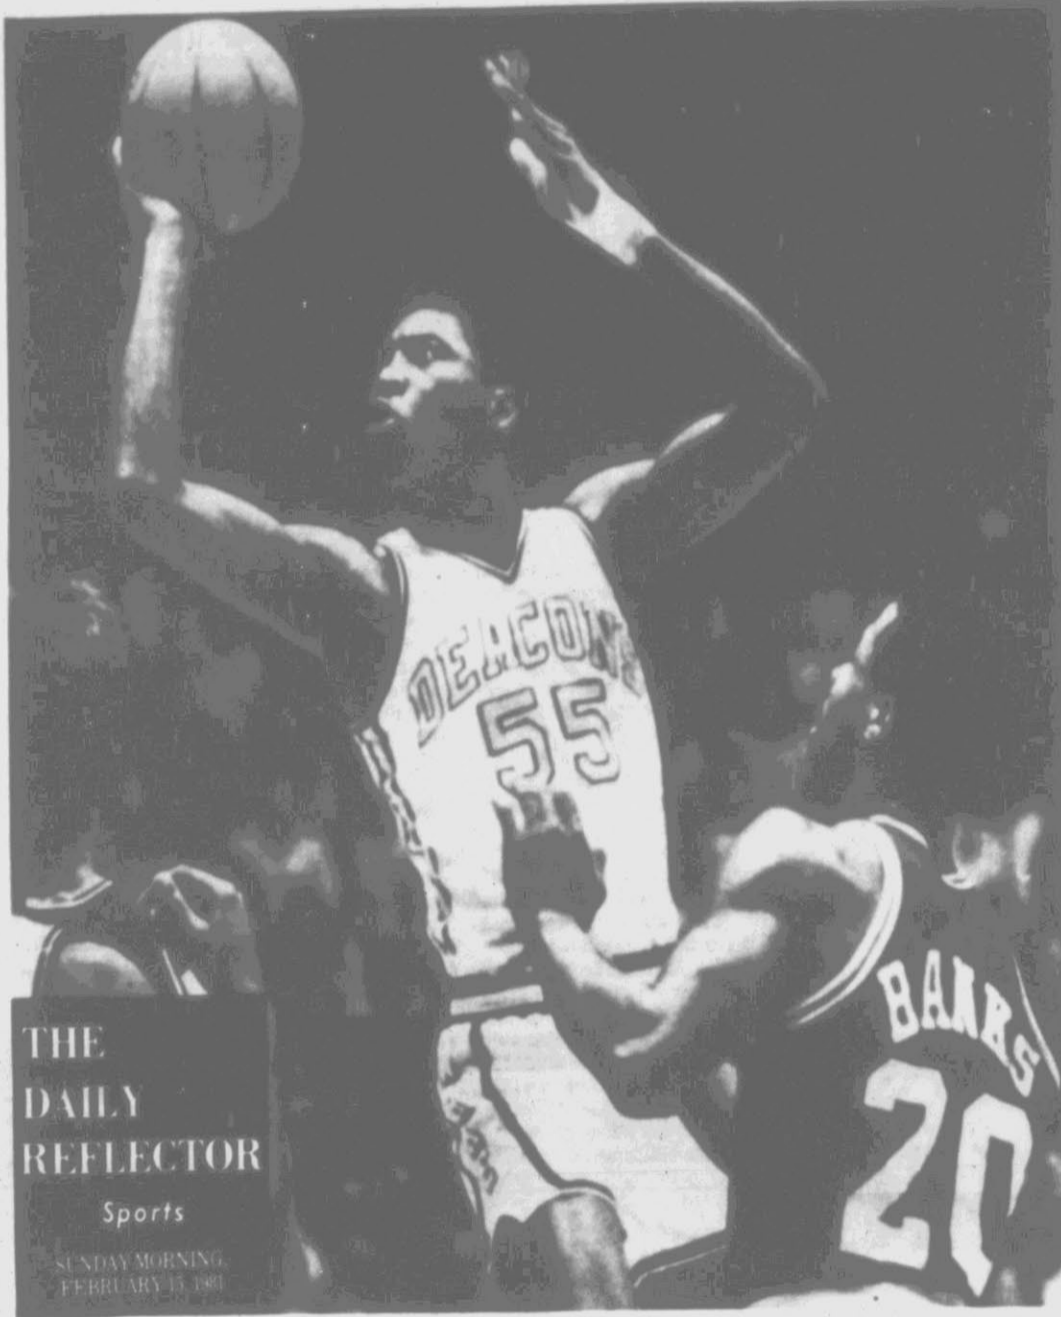

East Carolina won the first meeting of the two, 72-64, in Wilmington, back on January 6, the tenth win in 12 tries against the Seahawks.

In that game, Charles Watkins had 21 points to lead the Pirates, while David Underwood contributed 19. Jimmy Denton led Wilmington with 17 and tough Danny Davis had 12. Davis has been troubled with illness lately, keeping him on the sidelines much of the time, and that hasn't helped the Seahawk effort. He is expected to play against the Pirates, however.

Davis is the leading scorer for the Seahawks, hitting 15.9 per game from his center position. The 6-7 senior is also pulling down 10.1 rebounds a game.

The only other starter in double figures is Washington native Shawn Williams. The 6-4 sophomore is averaging 11.4 points and 5.5 rebounds. Joining him at forward is 6-8 junior Randy McMillan, averaging 4.1. In the backcourt are Edward Timmons, a 6-3 junior, hitting 7.4, and Frankie Dickens, a 6-0 freshman, scoring 6.6 points a game.

Valvano: Irish Finest Around

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State has played a lot of nationally-ranked teams this year, including top-ranked Virginia just a few days ago. But Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano thinks 12th-ranked Notre Dame is at the top of the list.

"Notre Dame is the finest team we've faced," said Valvano, after the Fighting Irish whipped his team 71-55 behind the 24-point performance of forward Orlando Woolridge.

"What you saw was a good, old-fashioned butt-kicking by a good basketball team. It's as simple as that. They put it to us early and they put it to us often. We just didn't have that same intensity or enthusiasm or whatever you call it," he added.

Valvano said that lack of enthusiasm was due to a close loss to the Cavaliers earlier this week.

"I think we've been to the emotional well too much. You play teams like North Carolina, Clemson and Virginia and come up short. It just takes it out of you," Valvano said.

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps also felt the Virginia loss hurt N.C. State, and said the Wolfpack may be a team to contend with in the future.

"We came in here with a lot of respect for State," Phelps said. "They are a team just waiting to explode on somebody. The Virginia loss took a lot out of them. They need to build up their confidence in the next three or four games."

"Everyone knows that crazy things can happen at the tournament. Remember, UCLA was 9-6 in the conference and ended up playing in the national finals," he said.

Phelps was also happy with his team's performance.

"I thought we played well. We rebounded well, kept them off the offensive boards. They were just not shooting well, but we executed very well offensively," he said.

As far as his team's future, Phelps said, "These kids are great. We're a pretty good team now. I'll let you know how good in April."

Notre Dame takes on Virginia next Sunday in a nationally-televised game. Valvano, who has played both teams, said the Irish may have a slight edge.

"I can't say that Virginia is better or that Notre Dame is better. I think (Ralph) Sampson is the best. Both clubs have great senior leadership. If anything, the emotional edge might go to Notre Dame. They tend to win the big national TV game when they're playing No. 1," Valvano said.

N.C. State hit a five-minute dry spell early in the first half and the Irish scored 10 straight points to lead 14-4 with 11 minutes left. The Wolfpack managed to cut that lead to four at one point in the period, but the Irish extended the lead to 11 as they went into the locker room.

In the second half, the Wolfpack could never get closer than 7 and the Irish gradually expanded their lead.

Deacons Struggle Past Determined Duke

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Still a little glódy after Wednesday's stunning victory against North Carolina, Wake Forest found itself struggling to take a 58-52 college basketball victory over Duke Saturday afternoon.

"We expected the win we had Wednesday would carry over and affect our play somewhat today," coach Carl Tacy said. "I think our concentration wasn't the greatest and it gave us problems early."

Those problems put Wake Forest eight points down in the first six minutes of play, but the Demon Deacons rallied to tie the score at halftime 22-22.

Wake Forest tried to run away with the game at the start of the second half. But Duke decided to hold the ball and Tacy felt that tactic hurt his team.

"Their going to delay gave us problems and was difficult to play against," Tacy said. "At halftime we felt we were in good shape. We were tired, playing at home and felt like we could come out and take the early lead, which we did."

That early lead drew as big as 7 before Duke whittled the deficit back down to 1. The game was finally decided on a pair of Frank Johnson free throws with 6 seconds left in the game.

Johnson, who scored his game-total of 12 points in the second half, said his team not only was a little flat after Wednesday's test but was also timid at its end of the floor.

"The team wasn't aggressive on the offensive end," Johnson said. "It was pretty much their slow-down."

Duke shot just 44 percent for the game and coach Mike Krzyzewski said that factor proved costly.

"We were just struggling to score all afternoon. Our defense kept us in, but when we needed a couple of buckets, we just couldn't get them," Krzyzewski said.

Johnson's free throws ended a string of 19 free throws attempted by the Demon

Deacons in the last 10 minutes of the game. Anthony Teachey started the streak when he hit one of two free throws with 7:17 left in the game.

Wake Forest took the lead for the first time at the start of the second half, when Johnson scored on a breakaway layup for a 24-22 lead. Later in the half, a three-point play by center Jim Johnstone gave Wake Forest its biggest lead of the game, 41-34, with 11:53 left.

Duke tried for the remainder of the half to get back into the contest, getting as close as one at 51-50 on a Gene Banks follow shot. Banks was fouled on the play, but missed the free throw which could have tied the game. From there, the Wake Forest free throw barrage took its toll.

Duke broke to an early 12-4 lead before a 10-2 Wake Forest spurt tied the score at 14 with 10:45 left in the first half. The teams then traded baskets and the score was tied 22-22 at intermission.

In addition to Johnson's 12 points, Johnstone scored 11, while Teachey and Guy Morgan added 10 each for the Deacons. Wake Forest improved its record overall to 20-2, 8-2 in the ACC.

Banks was the game's high scorer with 18, while Vince Taylor and Tom Emma chipped in 12 each. Duke now is 13-9 and 4-6 in the conference.

D.H. Conley Wins Sectional Title Vikings Nip Beddingfield, 129.5-129

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley, winning two championships and taking one second and two thirds, defeated Beddingfield and some 25 other schools to take the sectional championship.

The Vikings finished with 129.5 points to narrowly beat Wilson Beddingfield, which scored 129 points, for the championship. Plymouth was third with 101½ points followed by Farmville Central with 85 and Hunt with 64. Williamston finished with 35½ points while Rose came in with 20 points.

The top four wrestlers and top four teams advance to Saturday's regional tournament set for Goldsboro. Area Results follow:

"We're very excited to win the tournament," D.H. Conley coach Milt Sherman said. "It was a very well-balanced tournament. At no time did any school have more than a six point lead."

The victory came down to the championship finals at 198 pounds. If Beddingfield won, the Bruins were the champs. If not, Conley took home the crown. Williamston's Calvin Mobley won the match, defeating Barren, 6-4, for the title and at the same time giving the Vikings the sectional crown. Of the area wrestlers, William Green (at 101 pounds) and Curtis Bridges took home titles for Conley while Farmville's Ronnie Locust captured the heavyweight championship. Both Green and Locust pinned all four of their opponents en route to their titles. Green did it in a combined time of just 4½ minutes.

Vikes, Greene Central Favored

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The Eastern Carolina Conference regular season ended Friday night, but the league's second season — the ECC tournament — gets under way Monday night at Ayden-Grifton with four teams having legitimate shots at taking the tournament crown.

D.H. Conley emerged as the league champion with its 60-40 win Friday night over Farmville Central and will enter the tournament seeded #1. But Greene Central, seeded #2, North Pitt, seeded #3, and Southern Nash, seeded #4, all could win the tournament and surprise few in doing so.

The other four schools in the tournament — North Lenoir, Ayden-Grifton, Farmville Central and Southwest Edgecombe — have only an outside chance of winning the five-day tournament.

The top three teams are guaranteed a bid to the districts. The #4 seed also qualifies for the districts unless one of the remaining four teams makes it to the finals.

What follows is a few brief thoughts and comments on the tournament from the five area school coaches.

D.H. Conley
The Vikings entered this past week's play tied with Greene Central for the league lead after having lost to the Rams in overtime at home. To win the title, the Vikings needed to defeat both C.B. Aycock and Farmville Central and the Rams to lose to either Farmville or North Lenoir.

That's just what happened. The Jaguars upset the Rams, 42-40, opening the door for Conley to take the title outright, which it did with its win over Farmville Friday night.

"What I've been looking for all year is a continued improvement from game to game, and we've gotten that," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said. "But we haven't reached our potential yet."

Greene Central
Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin is still stinging from last week's loss to Farmville that ultimately gave the Vikings the ECC title and the #1 seed.

"We don't have anyone to blame but ourselves," Godwin

*Top-seeded teams last year.

"We did the hard things best but couldn't do the easy things."

"We had our chances to win Tuesday (against Farmville) but didn't make the shots. It just wasn't in the cards. We must not be living right."

Don't shed too many tears for Greene Central, though. If Phillip Hill and John Ray continue to play as they've done down the stretch and if Roderick Lane begins to hit from outside, the Rams could find themselves in the finals against, perhaps, D.H. Conley.

"I'd be tickled just to get into the final game," Godwin said. "We've never been there and I'd be happy just to get there."

The Rams, who finished at 16-6 overall and 12-4 in the league, open tournament play Tuesday night against Southwest Edgecombe (4-17, 4-12).

North Pitt
North Pitt won 10 of its last 11 games to end up tied for second with Greene Central. The point differential, however, gave the Rams the #2 seed but the Panthers may be playing as well as anyone in the league right now.

"I'm pretty pleased with the way we've been coming on," North Pitt coach Cobble Deans said. "We've been pretty consistent, except for the first half (Friday night)."

Oh, yes, Friday night. The Panthers traveled to Stanhope to face Southern Nash and promptly fell behind by 15 after the first quarter. It was a 13-point deficit at the half, but the Panthers rallied to escape with the win and a #3 seeding in this week's tournament.

The Panthers must wait until Wednesday to play their first tournament game, when they will face Ayden-Grifton in the 7:15 game.

"We never gave up Friday night," Deans said, "but had we lost I might think different, but I think coming back like we did, with a time like we have, should help us going into the tournament."

Ayden-Grifton
Ayden-Grifton enters the league tournament as the host team and having lost five of its last six games. The Chargers, however, won their last game of the season, stomping C.B. Aycock, 72-57. But Charger coach Bob Murphrey isn't ready yet to claim his club has turned it around.

"We hope so, but it's a little hard to tell from one game," he said. "The win can't do anything but help us, though. And playing at Ayden-Grifton should help us a little, too."

What would really help, though, is to have the Chargers regain their shooting eye which had them hitting upwards of 60 percent in three straight games midway through the season.

"We're in a shooting slump right now," Murphrey said. "I just hope we're beginning to break out of it."

Ayden-Grifton, seeded #6, opens tournament play Wednesday night (7 o'clock) against North Pitt.

Farmville Central

Farmville coach Mike Terrell knows his club will be hard-pressed to win the three straight games it would take to capture the tournament title. But, he also knows the Jaguars have been playing better of late.

"Since Christmas we've been so close to winning. It's been a thin line," Terrell said. "But to beat teams like Conley and Greene Central we've got to play an almost perfect game. We did that Tuesday night (against the Rams)."

The Jaguars lost their first six games before beating C.B. Aycock. Then, Farmville lost 11 straight before having its three-game winning streak ended by Conley Friday night.

It is that same Viking club that the 8th-seed Jaguars will face Monday (7:15 p.m.). Farmville and Southwest tied for seventh but the Cougars defeated the Jaguars twice this

Oregon State 57 St. John's 45

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Steve Johnson said he was disappointed that he and his Oregon State teammates were unable to prove to their first national television audience "what kind of team we actually are."

Despite sitting out 22 minutes in foul trouble, Johnson scored 26 points and almost singlehandedly destroyed St. John's, N.Y., in leading the Beavers to a 57-45 victory Saturday.

"I feel bad because we couldn't show the United States exactly how Oregon State plays basketball," Johnson said. "We weren't ourselves today."

The second-ranked Beavers shot 50 percent for the game, a respectable percentage for most teams, but not for Oregon State, which has shot better than 70 percent from the field against Pacific-10 Conference opponents.

"We've had four or five bad games this year but we've won every one," Johnson said of the undefeated Beavers. "We had our worst game of the year here and we still won by 12 points or so. That's got to say something."

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller blamed part of his team's inertia on jet lag.

"We changed three time zones in two days," Miller said. "I've never known a tired ballplayer who could shoot well, but all I can ask for is victory. That's all I want."

The Redmen let several opportunities slip away because of their own cold shooting. St. John's hit just 34 percent from the field and went a total of 19-43, starting late in the first half, without a basket.

"The shots were there, but we were missing layups," St. John's Coach Lou Caronesca said. "It was a nightmare, but at least it was done on stage."

Johnson sat out 10 minutes of the first half and the big Oregon State center picked up his fourth foul with less than two minutes gone in the second half. Beavers Coach Ralph Miller sat his 6-foot-10½ senior until just 8:48 remained to play, and Johnson scored Oregon State's next 15 points.

In one stretch, Johnson scored eight straight points to give the Beavers a 51-36 lead with 4:13 remaining. Less than a minute later, Johnson fouled out, but the damage already had been done.

St. John's trailed 27-19 at the half but the Redmen went ice cold after intermission, unable to score a basket until 8:35 remained. St. John's center Wayne McKay missed at least twice from close in, but had it not been for the return of Johnson, the normally high-percentage shooting Beavers would not have taken advantage of the situation.

Oregon State saw the lead dwindle to eight, 44-36 with 5:08 to play, but Johnson hit a pair of lay-ins and capped his eight-point tear with a stuff shot and free throw.

St. John's made another run at Oregon State after Johnson fouled out, outscoring the Beavers 7-2 over a two-minute span to trail by just 10, at 33-43, with 1:32 left. But the Redmen again went cold and scored only on a pair of free throws by Kevin Williams in the final minute-and-a-half.

Mark Radford was the only other Oregon State player in double figures with 10 points. Billy Goodwin topped St. John's with 14, and McKay had 12.

The undefeated Beavers upped their record to 21-0 on their first trip out of the west this season, while St. John's dropped to 16-6.

LSU 64 Georgia 62

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — "I just wanted to give it a chance and at first I thought it was going to be an air ball," said Howard Carter, after his desperation shot at the buzzer from the deep left corner over two defenders gave fourth-ranked Louisiana State a 64-62 victory over Georgia Saturday.

"No. It was not a normal shot," Carter said. "I couldn't feel the shot."

Carter may have had his doubts, but Coach Dale Brown of LSU didn't.

"When I saw his hand and elbow I thought she's in," Brown said. "I didn't even watch the ball. He's the money man. He's been all year."

Carter's basket enabled LSU to record its 22nd straight victory and to remain unbeaten in the Southeastern Conference race.

"They don't think they can lose," Brown said of his team which has won 19 of 21 games by five points or less.

"Georgia played a brilliant game," he said. "It looked like they took our game plan away from us in the first half."

Dominique Wilkins, one of the Georgia defenders of Carter at the end, said, "He just threw it up in the air. There wasn't anything we could do about it. It just went in."

Carter, who finished with 19 points, was closely guarded by two defenders when he went up for the shot two seconds after an LSU inbound play from the sideline.

The victory lifted LSU to 23-1 for the season and 14-0 in the SEC. It also was the Tigers' 17th straight road victory against conference foes and their 29th victory in their last 30 meetings with SEC teams.

The Tigers, who trailed by as many as 12 points during a sluggish first half, went to a delay game in the final seven minutes when the score was deadlocked at 60-60.

Greenville's Lee Captures State Gymnastics Crown

FAYETTEVILLE — Greenville Rose sophomore Carolina Lee won the class 3 state gymnastics championship and Judy Brown finished second in the class 2 Saturday afternoon at the state championship meet held at Fayetteville's Westover High School.

Lee took first on the balance beam with a score of 8.6, second on vault (8.45), third on the uneven bars (7.1) and fifth on floor exercise (8.15) for an all-around total of 32.2, good enough for first in the state.

Benson had an all-around total of 31.5 for her second place finish. She was first on the balance beam (8.7), second on the bars (6.25), third on floor exercise (8.65) and fourth on the vault (8.0).

Ginger McLendon finished fourth in the state in class 2 while Jenny Johnsrude was fifth and Tracy Fearrington sixth.

McLendon was first on floor exercise with an outstanding 9.0 and took fourths on bars (5.6) and beam (7.6) and a sixth in the vault (7.5).

Johnsrude took third in vault (8.35) and fifths on the beam (7.4), bars (5.55) and floor exercise (8.5).

Fearrington was second on floor exercise (8.8) and third on beam (8.1) and bars (6.0).

UCLA 64 Arizona St. 61

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sophomore center Cliff Pruitt's 15 points, including three free throws in the last 66 seconds, brought eighth-ranked UCLA a 64-61 victory over No. 5 Arizona State in Pacific 10 Conference basketball Saturday.

The Sun Devils, losing for only the second time in conference play, outscored UCLA 19-8 in the final 7:11 of the game to close within 2 points.

Forward Darren Daye, who had 7 points for UCLA, missed two free throws with 13 seconds remaining and the Bruins leading 63-61. But ASU was unable to get off a shot when they brought the ball down the floor, and Pruitt was fouled as he collared a loose ball.

Pruitt then added a free throw with one second left to complete the scoring.

Arizona State center Alton Lister committed three quick fouls in the first six minutes of the second half, and scored only seven of his 21 points in the second half as he led all scorers.

With the 7-foot Lister out of the game, the Bruins outscored Arizona State 15-2 to take a 56-42 lead. But the Sun Devils made up most of the deficit as their defense, led by ball-hawking play from Johnny Nash and Byron Scott, did not allow UCLA a field goal in the last 8:56.

The Bruins improved their record to 16-4 overall and 9-3 in the Conference.

Indiana 59 Wisconsin 52

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Indiana, paced by Randy Wittman's 15 points, fought off scrappy Wisconsin Saturday for a 59-52 Big Ten basketball victory.

Wittman scored 9 of his points in the second half for the 20th-ranked Hoosiers, now 16-8 over-all and tied with Iowa for the Big Ten lead at 9-3.

The defeat was the sixth in a row for the Badgers, now 2-10 in the Big Ten and 8-12 overall.

Still, the Badgers were in the game until the final minute, pulling to within 55-52 on a 18-foot corner shot by Greg Dandridge with 45 seconds to go.

But Indiana responded with a basket from five feet by Isiah Thomas with 25 seconds to go and a layup by Ray Tolbert with 17 seconds left.

Indiana led 33-26 at halftime and opened 7-point margins, before Wisconsin whittled away and pulled to within 45-44 on a three-point play by Claude Gregory with 8:17 left.

Wittman sank two free throws a minute later, and the Hoosiers nursed at least a three-point lead the rest of the way.

Gregory led all scorers with 21 points and has 1,601 in four varsity seasons. John Bailey added 14 points for the Badgers.

Iowa 82 Northwestern 64

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Steve Krafcsin and Bob Hansen scored 14 points apiece as No. 14 Iowa romped to an 82-64 victory over Northwestern in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

Iowa took control early, outscoring the Wildcats 14-4 in the first 10 minutes. The Hawkeyes coasted to a 38-25 halftime edge helped by Krafcsin's 12 points.

Kenny Arnold of the Hawkeyes exploded with three quick baskets in the first two minutes of the second half and Iowa never led by less than 15 after that as Coach Lute Olson emptied the bench.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Kevin Smith collected 28 points and led Michigan State to a 70-66 Big Ten basketball victory over 13th-ranked Michigan Saturday.

Smith hit 10 of 14 from the field and was eight of 10 from the free throw line.

Jay Vincent, the Spartans' big power forward, added 18 points before fouling out with 4:23 remaining. The Spartans also played most of the second half without senior Mike Brkovich, who suffered an ankle injury at the end of the first half.

Mike McGee led the Wolverines with 23 points while Johnny Johnson added 14 for the Wolverines, who suffered their second defeat in three days.

Michigan jumped out to a 9-4 lead early in the game and both teams exchanged baskets until midway in the first half when the Spartans outscored Michigan 8-0 in a two-minute span to take an 18-15 lead. Smith connected for six points in the last 2½ minutes to give the Spartans a 35-30 halftime lead.

The Spartans shot 67 percent from the field in the second half. They led by as many as 12 points, using a zone defense that effectively kept Michigan out of the middle.

With Vincent out of the game, Michigan outscored the Spartans 8-2 in the last two minutes of play but was unable to overcome the deficit.

The Spartans improved their Big Ten record to 4-8 and 10-11 overall. The Wolverines fell to 7-5 and 16-5.

Vikings Whip Jaguars, Clinch ECC Championship

By RICK SCOPPE
 Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — The last time D.H. Conley won the Eastern Carolina Conference championship Gerald Ford was president and the American Basketball Association was something more than a memory. It has been a long time, but the wait is over. The Vikings used a 21-point performance by Sammy Tucker and outscored Farmville Central by 15 in the final period to defeat the Jaguars, 60-40, Friday night and win the ECC crown for the first time since 1975.

Earlier, in the girls' game, D.H. Conley defeated Farmville Central, 52-46.

"Yeah, it feels great," D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh said afterwards. "I was cautiously optimistic going in because Farmville had won three in a row but I felt the guys would come to play. But I worry all the time anyway."

The win left the Vikings at 17-5 overall and 13-3 in the ECC and the #1 seed going into this week's ECC tournament at Ayden-Grifton. The Vikings will play Farmville Central

Monday night at 7:15. Asked if he liked playing the Vikings again so soon, Farmville coach Mike Terrell said, "If we can beat them then we'll be in good shape. I figure to go all the way you're going to have to face them at some time."

The Jaguars were not in good shape Friday night, particularly in the first and fourth periods, when Conley outscored Farmville 16-4 and 27-12.

Moving the ball crisply, Conley jumped out to a 12-2 lead on a layup by Tucker after a pass from Keith Gatlin. It went to 16-4 on a jumper by the smooth-shooting Tucker, who along with his 10 field goals and one free throw pulled down nine rebounds.

"The slow start hurt us," Terrell said. "We were very tight. We didn't play very relaxed. I don't know if they let the pressure of playing the two best teams in the league get to them."

The Jaguars relaxed enough in the second period to cut the deficit to six, 16-10, with 5:22 left on a jumper by Stuart Gordon, who was out of school since Tuesday with a throat infection. But a three-point play by Tucker pushed the lead back to nine, 19-10. Conley led at the halftime, 23-14.

In the second half, Farmville's 3-2 zone and Conley foul trouble — Conley's 6-7 center Sammy Tyson missed much of the second and third quarters with three fouls — helped the Jaguars cut the Viking lead to three.

Down 27-14 early in the second half, the Jaguars outscored the Vikings 10-0 and cut the deficit to 27-24. Melvin Sutton, who finished with 13 points, and Gordon both hit twice to lead the rally. Meanwhile, the Vikings went six straight trips downcourt without scoring.

Anthony Burney finally ended the drought when he put in a follow shot and the Vikings managed to take a 33-26 lead into the final period. And, oh, what a final eight minutes.

It started with a layup by Gatlin and ended with one by the 6-4 sophomore. In between, Conley used its fast break to outscore Farmville by 15 points and turn a eight-to-ten point game into a rout.

During that final run, Tyson had four buckets and a free throw, Tucker four buckets and Gatlin three. In all, the Vikings hit 12 of 21 attempts (57%) in the final eight minutes while Farmville connected on just five shots in 15 attempts (33%) and had seven of its 17 turnovers. Conley had only nine turnovers on the night.

"We were just able to play our game in the fourth period with Tyson back in there," Marsh said. "When we got our big man in foul trouble we had to alter our game play. In the first and fourth quarter we played our game. In the second and third, I'd have to say we played their game."

"I figured after we had the momentum in the first period and didn't get it again for awhile that we had to get it again in the fourth period."

Joining Tucker in double figures for Conley were Gatlin (16 points) and Tyson (13 points, all but two in the second half).

"Tucker played his game tonight," Marsh said. "He took charge. If he hadn't done that we would have never had that nine-point lead."

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley grabbed the early lead and maintained it the rest of the way, moving ahead by as many as nine in the second half, as the Valkyries captured their 11th game in 20 starts. Conley is 7-9 in the ECC.

"I thought our girls really wanted it tonight," D.H. Conley coach Joy James said. "We kept our poise and kept going at it. We worked together as a team."

Conley led after a slow first period, 8-6, and then stretched its lead to 18-11 midway through the second quarter on a jumper by Darlene Cannon, who led the Valkyries with 14 points.

Two buckets by Rose Edmunds, who scored 10 points, and a jumper by Etta Gorham, who had a game-high 18 points, brought the Jaguars back to within one, 18-17, with 1:40 left. Conley led at the half, 23-17.

that was as close as they could get.

"We just didn't shoot well," Farmville coach Hilda Worthington said simply. The Jaguars, who got 12 points from Dana Streeter, drop to 7-13 overall and 5-11 in the league. Karen Barrett had 13 for Conley to join Cannon in double figures.

Panthers Rally To Beat Firebirds

STANHOPE — Dennis Bradley pumped in 16 points and Greg Hines added 15 and North Pitt rallied from a 13-point halftime deficit to defeat Southern Nash, 54-51, Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Southern Nash nipped North Pitt, 40-38, in overtime.

As a result of the win, North Pitt's boys tied for second with Greene Central but the Rams get the #2 seed because of the point spread. Greene Central defeated the Panthers by 10 early in the season while North Pitt won later by seven, thus a three-point difference in favor of Greene Central.

The Panthers, who end the regular season at 12-10 overall and 12-4 in the league, will play Ayden-Grifton Wednesday at 7:15 at Ayden-Grifton in the opening round of the ECC tournament.

For awhile Friday night, however, it appeared Southern Nash might not ever let the Panthers make it to the tournament. The Firebirds led after the first period, 20-5 and at halftime, 31-18.

Said North Pitt coach Cobbie Deans about the sluggish start, "We were sort of disorganized — poor coaching. But we came back in the second half and showed a lot of character. We refused to die."

It just took them one more quarter. The Firebirds led at the close of the third period, 45-31, but would score only six more points. North Pitt, meanwhile, would pour in 23 for a 17-point advantage in the final eight minutes and come away with a three-point victory.

Southern Nash was led by Curtis Thompson's 15 points. McCullen Wiggins and Tony Tayborn each had 11 for the Firebirds. Anthony Crumel, the league's leading scorer at over 15 points a game, was held to just three field goals.

The Firebirds, the #4 seed, will play North Lenoir at 9 p.m. Tuesday at Ayden-Grifton in the opening round of the ECC tournament.

In the girls' game, North Pitt's Alice Pittman hit a 30-footer at the buzzer to send the game into overtime and the Pant-HERS jumped out to a four-point lead in overtime only to lose it and the game.

North Pitt trailed, 34-32, when Pittman crossed halfcourt and threw up a desperation shot that went in as the buzzer sounded to send her game into an extra period.

The Pant-HERS quickly moved up 39-34 only to see the Firebirds tie it up late in the overtime. Then, with four seconds left, Betsy Alston broke free for a layup to give the Firebirds a 40-38 lead. Moments later, the game was over.

North Pitt, which ends the season at 9-13 and 6-10, is seeded #6 in the league tournament and will play North Lenoir Wednesday at 5:30.

Southern Nash, 10-12 and 7-9 and seeded #4 following a coin flip Saturday morning with D.H. Conley, will play the Valkyries, seeded #5, Monday at 5:30. The Firebirds and Valkyries tied for fourth and each defeated the other by three forcing a coin flip for the #4 seed, which Southern Nash won.

Southern Nash led, 6-0, after the opening period but the Pant-HERS rallied to take a 16-10 halftime lead. Southern Nash trailed 24-22 at the end of the third period and took the lead in the final eight minutes only to have North Pitt rally on Pittman's late shot to send the game into OT.

Pittman led North Pitt with 14 points while Southern Nash was led by Dora Harrison's 16 points and Melissa Morgan's 12.

Rampants Fall To Fike, 84-69

Rose 'Mirrors' Early Success

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
WILSON — Rose High School, which won six of its first seven Division I games, seems to be trying to make a mirror image of that during the second swing through the league.

But like a mirror, everything is in reverse. Friday night, the Rampants went down to their fourth loss in five games since the midpoint of the season, as Wilson Fike rolled to an 84-69 victory. The defeat left Rose with a 7-5 conference mark, and a 13-7 overall record. Fike climbed to 8-4 in the league and 14-6 overall.

Earlier in the evening, the second place Fike girls held off a Rampette rally to gain a 53-41 win. The Rampants took off like a house on fire, sweeping clean the boards on almost every missed shot. But even with that, Fike

ECU Gymnasts 3rd In Tri-Meet At N.C. State

RALEIGH — Hosting N.C. State rolled to victory in a three-way gymnastics meet Friday night. The Lady Wolfpack compiled 130.5 points, while Western Carolina finished second with a 117.65. The Lady Pirates were third at 117.15.

The Pirates were hurt just prior to the meet when Claudia Houck suffered a sprained ankle during warmups and was not able to compete. They were already without Elizabeth Jackson, who now may return to action in time for the state meet in two weeks.

Susan Lawrence placed sixth in the vaulting with an 8.05 score. Ginnie Neff and Louise Matthews each scored 7.8, but did not place.

On the uneven bars, Wendy Meyer and Nan George both scored 7.2, tying for sixth place. Jennifer Bell, 7.1, and Lisa Tammaru, 6.7, did not place.

Tammaru finished fourth in the balance beam with a 7.55 score, while Bell was fifth at 7.5.

No Pirate placed in the floor exercises, with Joanie Ford scoring 8.0, Bell, 7.5 and Matthews, 7.35.

"If we could get all our troops together, we'd be a 120 team or better," Coach Jon Rose said. "Nan George will be back on the balance beam next weekend, and we also hope that Claudia will not be out long either. We did all right in the meet, they just did better."

The Lady Pirates return to action on Friday, traveling to George Washington.

came back to force a 16-16 tie at the end of the period. And from then on, the Golden Demons dominated just about everything.

While Rose enjoyed a 16-5 rebound advantage in the first period, Fike came back to hold a 55-50 overall sway in that department, including a 50-34 margin in the final three periods.

That was one factor in the game.

The other decisive factor was the guys with the whistle. They blew 26 fouls against Rose and 19 against Fike, and the resulting free throws created most of the gap between the two teams.

The Demons trooped to the line 35 times during the evening, hitting on 24 of those. They missed the front end of four one-and-one opportunities, which could have run their shots up to 39.

Rose, in return, made just 13 of 23, trying one less than Fike made. Rose missed the front end of only three one-and-one tries, giving a 16-shot advantage in possible free throws to Fike.

"We spent the whole game in foul trouble," Coach Jim Brewington said. Two of his Rampants fouled out and John Sheppard finished with four — and barely any playing time.

"John seemed to foul just by walking on the court. He played very little, and that hurt us in the rebounding. He's our big gun there.

"Still, our kids kept hustling, and didn't let them blow us away."

Another problem was that Donald Johnson, usually a high-percentage shooter suffered through a poor night. While he finished with 19 points, he was way down in shooting percentage, and made just five of ten free throws.

"I don't know what the problem with him was. One thing I do know, it was awfully hot in here tonight. They had the heat way up and I'm sure that that bothered us.

"It's awfully tough to win a game like this when they're calling such picky stuff when you're on defense. The stuff they were calling tonight won't be called on Tuesday," Brewington added.

Neither team shot well. Fike made just 44.8 per cent of its shots, while Rose canned only 37.3 per cent of its attempts — and still trailed Fike by only four points from the floor.

Rose gained an early 3-0 lead, and moved out by as much as five in the early going, 9-4. But Fike came back and took a 14-13 lead, only to lose it, 15-14, and then gain it right back, 16-15. Johnson then hit a free throw with 16 seconds left to knot it at 16-16 and it stayed that way until the horn.

James Brewington, who had one of his best games, scoring 21 points, put Rose back up, 18-16, and Johnson added a jumper for a 20-16 lead.

But Fike again rallied, moving ahead, 21-20, and after Rose took the lead once more, 22-21, Mo Ruffin tossed in a rebound for a 23-22 lead and the Rampants never caught up again.

Michael Joyner and Kevin Elliott each made baskets to run the lead out to 27-22 before Rose cut it back to one again. But Ruffin helped the Demons pull out to a five-point lead again, 34-29 before a basket by Stanley Williams and a three-point play by Ruffin upped it to 39-29 just before the end of the half. William Battle finally made two free throws for Rose to cut it to 39-31 at the half.

Fike pulled further out in the third period, to 14 at 47-33, before Rose rallied to within six, 51-45, and then to four, 53-49.

But that was as close as the Rampants got. Fike pulled away again, and held a 62-52 lead at the horn. Rose never got closer than eight in the final period, as Fike finally reached the 15-point level on its final basket of the night, establishing the final margin.

Ruffin, hitting ten field goals and adding 10 of 15 free throws, led all scorers with 30. Perry Williams added 19 and Sidney Joyner had 12. Rose was led by Brewington's 21 and Johnson's 19.

"We just have to try and regroup now and win these last two. We still have a chance to finish high in the league, depending on what happens in the final week," Brewington said.

Fike's girls raced out to a 21-8 lead in the first period, and that was the padding they needed to gain their victory.

From a 2-2 tie, Fike, led by Linda Reynolds, who scored 19 of her 22 points in the first half, pushed through 29 points while Rose was getting just seven over the first 14 minutes of play. That carried almost through the half, and gave Fike a 31-9 lead with 2:34 left to go.

But Rose seemed to find life after that, and came fighting back. They cut the lead back to 33-15 by the end of the half.

Then, in the third period, after Fike scored the first six points to take a 24-point bulge, 39-15, Rose again caught fire, outscoring Fike, 13-5, as the lead fell to only 44-28. The Rampettes kept it up in the final period, outscoring Fike 13-9, to draw back within 11 at the end.

"This is one loss that's not hard to swallow," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "They had a blistering first quarter, but we played with them, or outplayed them, the rest of the way.

"Fike has a smart ball club, and they adjusted to all our defenses except for our man-to-man. If we had gone to it earlier, it might have been a different game. If we had played all the way like we did in the second half, it could have been different too," he said.

"Now I think we have a good chance to win our last two games. If we keep this up, we went to the boards well, too, and that helped our comeback."

Jennie Edmundson added 11 points to Reynolds' 22 for Fike, while Frances Barnhill had 15 to lead Rose.

The Rampants close out their home regular season schedule on Tuesday, hosting Wilson Hunt. They then end the regular season on the road against Northeastern on Friday.

Allison, Bonnett Set To Battle

Ready To Go
Neil Bonnett, who will be driving a Puroator Ford in today's Daytona 500, talks with Linda Vaughn in the garage area at the Daytona International Speedway during practice sessions. (AP Laserphoto)

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison is the overwhelming favorite to win the Daytona 500 stock car race today. But his protege from Hueytown, Ala., Neil Bonnett, says he's conceding nothing to his former mentor.

"I'd just like to be in a position to give him a hand signal when he looks in his mirror," said Bonnett in assessing the role he'd like to play in the 23rd running of NASCAR's most prestigious event. "That would make things very interesting."

The 43-year-old Allison, whose sleek Pontiac LeMans has been uncatchable all week, will start the $780,000 event as the polesitter. Bonnett, nine years his junior, will take the green flag immediately behind Allison in third position.

"I could stay with him," said Bonnett of his second-place finish when Allison captured one of the twin 125-mile qualifying races Thursday at Daytona International Speedway. "But only he knows what he's got under the hood."

What Allison has is the fastest car on the track, with the only sloped rear window in the race. That design, selected by car builder Waddell Wilson, has given Allison more speed than the entire field and better handling than most.

But the other teams have been trying to even things a bit. Led by Darrell Waltrip, who will start alongside Allison in the front row, the drivers have convinced NASCAR twice this week to permit increases in the size of the rear spoilers.

Waltrip, who drives a Buick Regal, argued along with other drivers that larger spoilers are needed for better stability. Waltrip, generally accorded the best chance to upset Allison, also could increase his speed as a result of those changes, but that will not be known until the race has been run.

"We'll try them, too," said Allison, who admitted that some frightening accidents earlier this week are evidence that the new down-sized cars could be made safer.

"I'm happy they got them (bigger spoilers) because I don't want to be out there with everybody getting loose all over the track," said Allison. "But I wonder if they won't decide tomorrow that green cars will be allowed to have bigger engines."

Whether Allison was being critical of NASCAR or taking a verbal swipe at Waltrip, whose car is green, he would not say.

Bonnett, whose Ford Thunderbird has handled well all week, also seemed amused by the turn of events.

"I guess I'll just wait until they put all those things on their cars and then test them myself," said Bonnett. "But what they're doing will no doubt help my car."

Unlike most of the General Motors cars being used by all but a handful of the 42 drivers, Bonnett's Ford has sacrificed speed for stability.

"We can't run away from anybody, but we sure can ride in the draft," he said. "I've pretty much resigned myself to the fact that I'll just have to get in behind Bobby and hang on."

While Bonnett realizes he lacks the speed to outrun Allison, he remains convinced he can win the race.

"I'm not conceding anything to Bobby," Bonnett said. "In fact, I'd like nothing better than to come out of the draft and beat all those Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Pontiacs."

Bonnett said had he hoped to put his car to the test in the final lap Thursday but a caution flag forced him to accept his role as bridesmaid to Allison in the first qualifier. He was, however, the only competitive driver in that heat.

Benny Parsons, also driving a Thunderbird and a second-row starter next to Bonnett, narrowly lost when Waltrip won the second qualifier in the final 200 yards. Parsons had passed Waltrip on the third turn of the 2.5-mile, high-banked track, but was unable to match the Regal's horsepower in the final kick.

That slingshot tactic Parsons employed is exactly the strategy Bonnett plans to use should he be within striking distance of Allison on the 200th and final lap of Sunday's race.

"I've got one part of the race track all picked out, but I'm not telling you where it is," said Bonnett.

And he said it won't bother him a bit to spoil the day for Allison, who once employed him in their native Alabama and helped get him started in racing.

"When we get out there on the track, that's just a silver and black car ... the 28 ... not Bobby Allison. But if I beat him, I'll be happy to smile and wave to him. In fact, once the race is over I'll do it anyway, win or lose."

But Bonnett hopes it won't be the 28, but his car, the famed No.21 of the Wood Brothers, being wheeled into Victory Lane.

"Wouldn't that be something," he said with a laugh. "Then they (the other drivers) would have to find something new to complain about next week."

Rams Surge By Hawks, Capture No. 2 Seed

SNOW HILL — John Ray, Roderick Lane and Phillip Hill combined for 45 points and 31 rebounds to lead Greene Central to a 63-51 decision over North Lenoir Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, North Lenoir surged to an early lead to defeat Greene Central, 45-38.

Ray poured in 19 points and grabbed off eight rebounds. Lane scored 15 points and pulled down 10 rebounds and Hill hit for 11 points and a game-high 13 rebounds as the Rams ended the season at 16-6 overall and 12-4 in the league.

Greene Central goes into this week's ECC tournament with the #2 seed and will play Southwest Edgecombe Tuesday at 5:30 at Ayden-Grifton.

"We played well as a team," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "But I felt like we were going to play well. The last two Tuesday night's we've been at home and haven't played well. I told the kids heck, there's no use in us having the home court advantage if we aren't going to take advantage of it."

This past Tuesday night still haunts Godwin. The Rams lost to Farmville Central, 42-40, a loss that with Friday night's results gave D.H. Conley the ECC championship. Had Greene Central defeated the Jaguars, the Rams would be the league champs and have the #1 seed. They didn't, but the victory over North Lenoir did give them a #2 seed.

North Lenoir led after the first period, 14-13, but the Rams were on top at the half, 31-28. The third quarter ended with the Rams still clinging to that three-point lead (42-39) but a 20-12 fourth period sealed the victory for Greene Central.

North Lenoir, now 12-10 overall and 8-8 in the ECC, was led by Eugene Connor's 14 points and Danny Wooten's 10. The Hawks, seeded #5 in the tournament, will play Southern Nash, the #3 seed, Tuesday at 9 p.m.

In the girls' game, North Lenoir led after the first period, 12-4, and at the half, 22-12, and never looked back as the Hawks improved their record to 16-6 overall and 12-10 in the league, good enough for the #3 seed in the tournament. The Hawks will play North Pitt, the #6 seed, Wednesday at 5:30.

Greene Central, which ends the season at 9-13 and 6-10, will be the #7 seed and will play Charles B. Aycock Tuesday night at 7:15.

In the second half, the Rams, who were led by Letha Taylor's 23 points and Sylvia Swinson's 10, edged back, outscoring the Hawks 10-9 and 16-14, but could never take the lead.

North Lenoir was led by Sharon Gillette and Debra Pope, both of whom had 13 points.

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

Tournaments Set To Open In Area

A Staff Report

Tournament action opens on two fronts this week as the Northeastern 3-A Conference and the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference meet to decide post-season honors.

The Northeastern may also be deciding on whether a lower seeded team will make the group of four which will represent the league in the District 1 playoffs against the top four Eastern Carolina Conference teams. The top three automatically qualify for that event, with number four also going unless a lower seeded team wins the tournament.

The Tobacco Belt tournament actually will decide little. The league is a district unit itself, with the exception of independent Cape Hatteras. The top eight teams during regular season move into the league tournament, with the number eight team later facing Hatteras to decide the eighth seeding in the district tournament which starts next week.

Jamesville qualified both its boys and girls teams into the conference event, while Bear Grass got only its boys into the field. The Lady Bears finished in ninth place in the 11-team league, 4-16 (6-20 overall) and did not make the final eight.

The Tobacco Belt opens Tuesday with the first round girls' games. Top-seeded Chocowinity (20-0, 20-0) will host number eight Pantego (9-11, 9-11), while number four Bath (12-8, 14-8) entertains number five Jamesville (10-10, 11-11). In the lower bracket, number two Belhaven (18-2; 20-2) hosts number seven Aurora (10-10, 10-10), while Manteo (10-10, 12-10) visits number three Mattamuskeet (14-6, 14-6). All first round games start at 7 p.m. at the site of the higher seeded team.

The top bracket semifinals will be held Thursday at 7 p.m., with the lower bracket clashing Friday at 7 p.m. The finals are Saturday at 7 p.m., with all games after the first round at Washington High School.

In the boys' bracket, champion Pantego (20-0, 23-0) meets eighth place Jamesville (6-14, 7-15). Mattamuskeet, seeded fourth (14-6, 14-6) takes on number five Chocowinity (13-7, 13-7) in the other upper bracket game.

In the lower bracket, number two Aurora (17-3, 17-3) faces number seven Bear Grass (8-12, 10-16) in one game, while number three Belhaven (15-5, 17-5) faces Columbia, number six (8-12, 10-12).

The first round, also at the higher seeded team's home court, will be played Wednesday at 7 p.m. Upper bracket semifinals will be Thursday at 8:30 p.m., with lower bracket semis at the same time Friday. The championship game is Saturday, with all games after the first round at Washington.

The Northeastern will hold its entire tournament at Williamston. Three games will be played on Monday, three on Tuesday, and two each Wednesday through the finals on Saturday.

In the girls' bracket, top-seeded Plymouth (11-3, 15-4) meets Ahsokie (1-13, 1-17) at 5 p.m. Monday. Then, at 8 p.m., number two Roanoke (10-4, 18-4) faces Roanoke Rapids (2-12, 2-16). On Tuesday at 6:30 p.m., number three Washington (9-5, 10-9) meets Williamston (7-7, 12-8). The first round will be completed on Wednesday at 6:30 when Edenton (8-6, 11-7) meets Tarboro (8-6, 9-13).

Upper bracket semifinals will be Thursday, with the lower bracket playing on Friday. The championships will be Saturday, with all three games at 6:30 p.m. nightly.

In the boys' bracket, Roanoke (12-2, 19-3) tied with Tarboro (12-2, 18-4) for the regular season championship, and a three-way deadlock developed for third. Edenton (7-7, 13-7), Plymouth (7-7, 10-9) and Washington (7-7, 7-15), all ended up together. Coin flips gave Roanoke first seeding and Tarboro second. Washington took third, followed by Edenton and Ahsokie.

Monday at 6:30, Roanoke will face Williamston (3-11, 7-13). Tuesday at 5 p.m., Tarboro faces Roanoke Rapids (3-11, 3-15), with Washington meeting Ahsokie (5-9, 6-12), at 8 p.m. The first round winds up on Wednesday at 8 p.m. with Edenton and Plymouth meeting.

Semifinals will be held on Thursday (upper bracket) and Friday, and the championship will be held Saturday. All games are set for 8 p.m.

17-Year-Old Girl Breaks Chamberlain's Prep Mark

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The great Wilt Chamberlain's 90 points in a high school basketball game have been bounced right out of the city's record books by a 17-year-old girl.

Linda "Hawkeye" Page, a 5-foot-9 senior guard, scored 100 points in Dobbin's Tech's 131-38 victory Friday over Mastbaum — 10 points higher than the legendary Chamberlain scored 26 years ago for Overbrook High in a 123-21 thrashing of Roxborough.

"What I wanted to do was break Chamberlain's record," said Page, who came within 14 of the state record set by Bristol High School's Pete Cimino in 1960.

"I still can't believe it. One hundred points!" she said. "I came home, told my family and they didn't believe me either. They didn't start believing until they saw it on the TV."

Page made 41 of 57 attempts from the field and 18 of 21 free throws before scouts from St. Joseph's, North Carolina State, Old Dominion, Tennessee and Louisiana Tech. Those five schools still are in the running from more than 100 colleges courting her for their teams.

Chamberlain was 36 for 41 from the floor and 18 for 26 at the foul line on Feb. 17, 1955. He sat out the fourth quarter.

Thirteen other girls have scored 100 points in a high school games in the United States. The record of 156 was set in 1924 by Marie Boyd of Lonaconing Central in Maryland. The rules then permitted only three players in the offensive end and three on defense.

"Seventy percent of my shots against Mastbaum were jumpers from my usual spot — about 15 feet from the basket," she said.

Redskins Win 19th, Blast Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Roanoke High School ended up with no worse than a tie for the Northeastern Conference championship Friday night, downing Williamston, 45-31. The Squaws, however, went down to their third loss in the last four games, bowing to Williamston, 31-28.

Roanoke finished the regular season with a 12-2 record in Northeastern play, 19-3 overall. Tarboro was tied with Roanoke going into the final game, and if the Vikings won, a coin-toss will be needed to set the seedings for the league tournament, which begins Monday. The two split during the regular season, each winning by two points.

Roanoke inched out into an 8-6 lead after one period, then outscored the Tigers, 12-9, in the second frame. That gave the Redskins a 20-15 halftime lead. Roanoke extended that to 30-22 by the end of the third period and outscored Williamston, 15-9, in the home stretch.

Ricky Highsmith led Roanoke with 16 points, while Angelo Spruill added 10. Tom Bennett paced Williamston with 13.

In the girls' game, Williamston ran out to a 9-2 lead in the first period, then held off an 11-8 Roanoke rally for a 17-13 halftime lead. Williamston padded that to 25-18 margin as the final quarter started. In that Roanoke rallied, 10-6, but fell short.

Theresa Duffy led Williamston with 12 points, while no one had double figures for Roanoke.

Chargers Roll By C.B. Aycock, 72-57

PIKEVILLE — It was farewell time for two losing teams Friday night when Charles B. Aycock and Ayden-Grifton met. Ayden-Grifton's boys downed Aycock's boys, 72-57, while the Falconettes beat A-G's lassies, 55-31.

In each instance, the loser finished in ninth place in the league and was eliminated from competition in the conference's post-season tournament which begins on Monday.

Ayden-Grifton's boys, now 7-9 in the ECC and 9-13 overall, jumped out to an 18-11 lead over the Falcons. The Chargers came back with a 24-19 margin in the second quarter, powering out to a 42-30 halftime lead. The Chargers continued to pull away in the third period, building the lead to 57-36. Aycock was allowed a 21-15 margin in the final quarter.

Clarence Baker led Ayden-Grifton with 26 points, while Timmy Edwards had 17 and Thomas Anderson had 15. Steve Lewis led Aycock with 19 points.

In the girls' game, Aycock, which finished in second place with a 14-2 league and 16-4 overall mark, fell behind, 11-9 in the first period. But the upset was not to be. The Falcons came back, 16-4, and built up a 25-15 halftime lead.

Aycock again was outthrust in the third, 14-11, but still led, 36-29, as the final period got underway. Aycock outthrust A-G, 19-2, in that period, however.

Alston led Aycock with 12 points, while Lancaster and Williams each had 11. No one scored in double figures for Ayden-Grifton.

Denver 162, Portland 143

By The Associated Press
The sharpshooting Portland Trail Blazers hit their season high with 143 points Friday night.

If you think that was good, you should have seen what the Denver Nuggets did.

"I know it sounds comical, but we won it on defense," said Denver Coach Doug Moe after his team piled up 162 points en route to the highest scoring game of the National Basketball Association season.

The combined point total of 305 not only represented the most by two NBA teams this year, but Denver's 162 was also a single-team high and wiped out two club records as well. The Nuggets' previous high in the NBA was 151 points, and the previous best in the history of the franchise, which started in the American Basketball Association, was 156.

But Moe insisted it was his pressure defense that turned the game into a rout. The Nuggets forced 16 turnovers by Portland in the first half, while committing just three court errors themselves. So even though the Blazers shot 61 percent from the floor in the half, they trailed 81-61 at intermission and never got back in the game.

"The defense won it for us," Moe said. "Gondo (Glen Gondrezick) and T.R. (Dunn) were just out of sight in the second quarter." Gondrezick made four steals in the second quarter, converting them into nine points.

"That has to be a first — they (Portland) shoot 61 percent in the half and are down 20," added Moe.

In other NBA action, it was Washington 104, Philadelphia 102; Utah 104, Boston 89; Los Angeles 114, Houston 105; Kansas City 113, Atlanta 96; New Jersey 103, Indiana 100; New York 120, Detroit 102.

Phoenix 110, San Diego 94 and Golden State 110, Milwaukee 106.

David Thompson scored 30 points and Ken Higgs, Kiki Vandeweghe and Alex English each added 20 or more to pace the awesome Denver offense.

Billy McKinney, Cedric Hordges and Glen Gondrezick were also in double figures for the Nuggets.

Calvin Natt and Billy Ray Bates came off the Portland bench to lead the Blazers in scoring with 23 and 20 points, respectively.

Few teams this season have scored 40 points in any quarter, but the Nuggets did it in three quarters and scored 39 in the other.

Bullets 104, 76ers 102

Kevin Grevey scored 29 points as Washington rallied to defeat Philadelphia and end its 22-game home-court victory string.

Washington trailed 101-96 with 2:57 remaining before scoring eight of the game's last nine points. Grevey was instrumental in the rally and actually scored the winning points with two free throws that gave the Bullets a 104-102 lead.

Julius Erving led the 76ers with 21 points.

"The fellows were asking what we had to do to win this game," said Bullets Coach Gene Shue. "I told them we've got to play hard the last three minutes. They did."

Jazz 104, Celtics 89

Darrell Griffith and Adrian Dantley combined for 73 points as Utah defeated Boston. The Celtics played the final quarter without their leading scorer, Larry Bird, who, along with Utah's Allan Bristow, was ejected at the end of the third quarter for fighting.

Griffith had 38 points, a career high, and Dantley 35 for the game.

Despite his early departure, Bird led Boston with 25 points. Robert Parish finished with 17 for the losers.

Suns 110, Clippers 94

Guards Dennis Johnson and Walter Davis paired for 37 points — 25 of them in the first half — as Phoenix defeated San Diego. The victory, Phoenix's sixth in a row, was also the Suns' 10th straight at home and fifth in five games against San Diego this season.

Warriors 110, Bucks 106

Vilas, McEnroe In Grand Slam Finals

Vilas Takes Opener
Guillermo Vilas strokes the ball during the opening round of play in the Grand Slam Tennis Tournament Saturday. Vilas defeated Vitas Gerulaitis 6-3, 2-6, 6-4 in the first semifinal. (AP Laserphoto)

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — John McEnroe and Guillermo Vilas, who both failed in their last two quests for the championship of the $300,000 Pepsi Grand Slam of Tennis, advanced to the final round with impressive victories Saturday.

McEnroe, the No. 2 ranked player in the world, disposed of Brian Teacher, 6-3, 6-1 in an hour-long match. Vilas beat Vitas Gerulaitis 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

Sunday's nationally televised final is a repeat of the 1979 consolation match in which McEnroe beat Vilas in straight sets.

McEnroe had two aces and broke Teacher's serve six times. He said Teacher seemed unfamiliar with the floor bounce of the clay surface.

"This is the worst surface for me (Teacher) and I," McEnroe said. "He just made a lot more errors than he should have."

Teacher, the winner of the 1981 Australian Open, agreed.

"I wasn't used to the lefty serve that was kicking more up on clay than it would on cement and I haven't practiced against anybody who has a serve like that," Teacher said.

Play was delayed briefly three times when McEnroe and Teacher questioned line calls. McEnroe disputed two of the calls.

When asked if McEnroe's behavior bothered him, Teacher said:

"Yeah, it does a little bit. I know he is not doing it to bother me. He is like a perfectionist out on the court."

Teacher was to meet Gerulaitis in a consolation match at noon Sunday, but tournament officials announced Gerulaitis was withdrawing to go home to New York. Gerulaitis' manager, Bob Kain, said the player initially had agreed to play in the semifinals, but had not committed himself to play in the consolation match.

Kain said Tim Gullikson was named to replace Gerulaitis.

"He said to me yesterday, 'I don't want to play,'" Kain said. "He was here on vacation and he did it as a favor to Joe Block (Pepsi vice president for public relations) and Pepsi ... He did not commit to the consolation match."

Kain said Gerulaitis will receive the $30,000 in prize money which would go to the fourth place finisher. Officials have not said whether Gullikson will receive any prize money.

Gerulaitis, the 1980 runner-up, was asked to replace Bjorn Borg, four-time winner here, when the Swedish star withdrew from the event on Friday because of the flu. Vilas and McEnroe have met nine times in tournament events, with Vilas holding a 6-3 career edge.

McEnroe set the tone of the match when he broke Teacher's serve in the first game. McEnroe jumped out to 2-0 lead, then Teacher fought back in the third game and didn't allow McEnroe to score a point.

In the first set, McEnroe gave up only five points on his service and, in turn, broke Teacher's serve three times.

In the third game of the second set, play was delayed for about a minute when first McEnroe and then Teacher disputed two line calls. In the following game, play was again briefly delayed when McEnroe questioned an out call by umpire Florence Blanchard.

Teacher never regained his composure and McEnroe closed out the set on his service when Teacher hit an easy forehand over the baseline.

Vilas, a clay-court specialist from Argentina, became one of the top five players in tennis four years ago when he won 57 straight matches on clay.

CFL Loses Interest In Ferragamo

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP)—The Hamilton Tiger-Cats have lost interest in acquiring quarterback Vince Ferragamo, said Friday.

In 1979, Cousineau was the No. 1 college football draft choice. The Bills drafted him out of Ohio State but he rejected their offer to play in the CFL.

Ferragamo, his wife Jodi, and his agent, Dave Fisht, toured the Hamilton area Feb. 5 with Ti-Cats' linebacker Ben Zambiasi acting as host and guide. "His wife was negative all the way through," said Zambiasi. "She kept complaining about how cold it was and how she wanted to go to Florida."

No. 11 Kentucky Coasts Past Alabama, 77-62

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie and Dirk Minniefield combined for 37 points as No. 11 Kentucky built a comfortable halftime cushion and coasted to a 77-62 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Alabama Saturday night.

The victory boosted the Wildcats to 18-4 over-all and 11-3 in the SEC. The Crimson Tide fell to 15-7 and 7-7.

Minniefield, Bowie and Chuck Verderber opened with baskets as Kentucky grabbed a 6-2 lead and steadily swelled it through the remainder of the first half.

The half-margin grew to 25 points when Jim Master's 12-footer capped a 7-4 Kentucky run and gave the Wildcats a 30-15 lead with 1:34 before halftime. Two Fred Cowan free throws gave Kentucky a 32-19 halftime lead.

Verderber opened the second half with a tip-in and Minniefield, who scored eight points in each half, followed with a layup that gave Kentucky a 36-19 advantage, and Alabama never changed again.

Bowie scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half, but lost something of a scoring duel in the period with Alabama's Ken Johnson.

Johnson had just one point at halftime but pumped in 10 field goals in the second half and matched Bowie for high-scoring honors with 21 points.

Master finished with 10 for Kentucky and Alabama's Eddie Phillips tossed in 16 points.

(AP) — Gary Carter scored three straight baskets to spark a 10-point Tennessee scoring streak in the first half, and the ninth-ranked Volunteers held off a late rally to beat Vanderbilt 77-72 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The visiting Commodores pulled to within 71-68 on a 3-point play by freshman Jimmy Lenz after a turnover when the Vols could not get the ball in play with just 1:09 remaining.

But Tennessee forced Vanderbilt into five costly one-and-one foul situations the final 45 seconds.

The three baskets by Carter, who finished with 16 points, plus one each by Howard Wood and Michael Brooks gave the Vols a 34-21 lead three minutes before halftime. Wood was the game's leading scorer with 19 and Dale Ellis had 17.

Vanderbilt, after pulling ahead by 13 three times in the first half, came within 5 points six times during the final period behind the shooting of Al Miller, with 16, and Willie Jones, with 15.

Tied at 26 at the half, Missouri took charge and outscored Oklahoma 12-6 to take a 38-32 lead.

Clutch foul shooting in the waning moments by Oklahoma kept the Sooners on top.

SALT II Not In Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Soviet diplomat cautioned on Saturday that U.S. delay in ratifying the SALT II treaty means the strategic arms limitation treaty is "not in force" and Moscow does not regard the 1979 accord's provisions as binding.

Minister-Counselor Vladilen M. Vasev, second-ranking official at the Soviet embassy in Washington, voiced the comments in a Cable News Network interview.

Asked about the fate of SALT II, Vasev alluded to President Reagan's previously expressed opposition to some aspects of the pact and added: "I would say the ball is in the court of the administration."

The treaty was signed at the Vienna summit in June 1979, but in early 1980—after the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan—President Carter asked that Senate ratification be deferred.

Vasev noted that "neither the Soviet Union nor the United States are parties to the United Nations convention on treaty implementation, which has a provision saying that certain treaties ... are de facto in effect from the moment of signature, not awaiting ratification."

This exchange then followed between Cable News Network correspondent Daniel Schorr and Vasev:

Q. You don't regard SALT II as binding?
A. No.

Q. Its provisions?
A. No.
The Soviet diplomat said that with SALT II, "we are in a process of waiting for the United States to do its side of the agreement."

When asked if either side at the moment would do anything to upset that process, Vasev replied: "I don't know ... because the treaty is not in force."

Later in the interview, Vasev pointedly declined to say if the Soviet Union would continue to refrain from moves which could push its strategic nuclear arsenal beyond limits stipulated in SALT 2. This emerged in questioning of Vasev by syndicated columnist Rowland Evans:

Q. ... does the Soviet Union abide by the provisions of SALT II, even though it is not a binding treaty?

A. If you are asking me whether anything was undertaken by the Soviet Union up until now which was contrary to the ...

Q. That's it.
A. I would say no.
Q. How about tomorrow?
A. This I don't know.

On the general tenor of United States-Soviet relations, Vasev took issue with recent sharp criticism of Moscow by Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig. "I would say the beginning" with the Reagan administration "was not very promising, but we will wait," he said.

Ride 'em Cowboy Thrills Gaining

By AUDREY V. IRWIN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bull threw Wayne Morris five feet through the air, and the young man landed with a thump on the thick floor padding. As he got to his feet, polite applause spread through the room.

Morris, a 23-year-old construction worker, shook off his fall and, with a slightly bowlegged walk, ambled over to the bar and downed a beer.

Morris is among the growing number of people who pay their money and take a chance riding mechanical bulls at Western saloons across the nation. In Los Angeles, four clubs boast of mechanical bulls as part of their entertainment.

Country singer Mickey Gilley holds a patent on the bucking machine, which became popular after appearing in the hit movie, "Urban Cowboy," filmed primarily at Gilley's club in Houston, Texas.

Gilley, who manufactures the machines in Houston, has limited the machines' distribution to avoid one on every corner, said one bull-riding expert. However, other firms around the country have come out with modified versions to meet the growing demand.

One Los Angeles area club fortunate enough to have an authentic Gilley bull is S.H. Kickers in Santa Monica. Mike Parsons works as a chef there during the day and runs the mechanical bull at night.

He concedes that the crowd which usually fills Kickers is made up mostly of people who have never set their posteriors in a saddle and are just looking for a good time.

A former avid surfer, the 21-year-old Parsons became acquainted with mechanical bulls while working on a ranch in Colorado last summer.

"I tried a (real) bull once and will never try it again," said Parsons. "He went out (of the shoot) and I fell."

When he came back to Los Angeles, he heard about Kickers and its machine, which was installed last June, and decided to take a job there. After less than six months of bucking experience, he now holds the saloon's record for riding the bull with no hands, 33 seconds at speed seven. The highest on the machine is 10.

Next to practice, protection against the machine's violent bumps and grinds is what is needed to have an extended ride without regretting it the next day. The search for the all-important padding takes on an almost ritualistic quality.

Veteran riders hunt for their favorite piece of Styrofoam to cushion themselves against the mechanical bull's impact.

Most injuries, outside of pride, are prevented due to the watchful eye of the people who run the machines and hastily turn them off when a rider appears in trouble. However, there have been scattered injuries on the bulls and all riders at Kickers, at least, must sign papers which waive the establishment's liability in case of injury.

But despite a tendency to walk bowlegged for a while, most first-time riders are eager to try again.

The bucking-bull craze is part of the overall country and Western popularity boom evident across the land these days. In one recent four-month period, about 30 suburban Orange County clubs, bars and restaurants — many of them one-time discos — converted to country or added country bands to their bills, said David Niederhelm of Stage Management Agency in Tustin.

Before "you had to go to sleazy honky-tonk" to hear country-Western music," he said. "Now we have some real class operations."

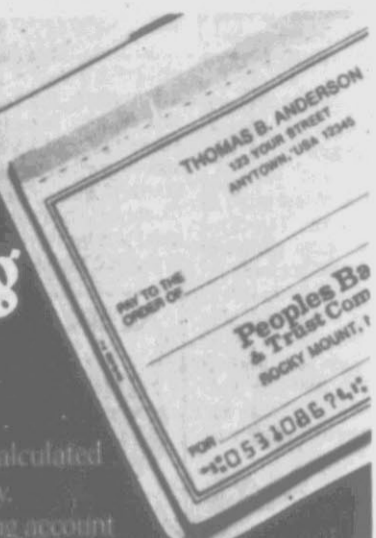

And with the "class" comes a need for proper attire and, predictably, sales of Western clothing are riding high. Here in southern California, clothing retailers report that cowboy hats, for instance, are almost impossible to keep on the shelf.

Back Pay $147,000

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — An estimated $147,000 in back pay could be awarded to Robert Garwood, convicted of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam, if his lawyers succeed in an action they plan to file with the U.S. Court of Claims.

The money has been accumulating since Garwood, a Marine private, disappeared in Vietnam in 1965.

Garwood's base pay at the time he disappeared was about $93 a month, but that amount has grown steadily over the years to more than $550 per month currently.

In addition, Garwood received a $65-a-month combat pay bonus and an $8-a-month overseas pay bonus. He also got a $1-a-day bonus for all the time he was held as a prisoner of war.

All of Garwood's pay from the day he disappeared was invested in savings accounts that earned about 10 percent interest annually.

On Friday, a military jury decided not to send Garwood to prison but ordered him to forfeit the one week's pay that had accrued since his conviction. The jury lacked authority to rule on his back pay.

Crash Probe Continues

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The final taped conversation between the control tower and a Texasgulf Inc. private jet that crashed near Westchester County Airport contains no evidence of trouble aboard the aircraft, the National Transportation Safety Board reports.

Edward C. Montgomery, who heads the NTSB team probing the Wednesday night crash, said Friday that "all communications were routine."

Two pilots and six executives of Texasgulf were killed when the jet, a Lockheed Jetstar, plunged through fog and rain in dense woods near the airport. The executives of the company, based in Stamford, Conn., were returning from a two-day business trip in Toronto.

The federal investigators said they had turned up no major clues to the cause of the crash. But they said they were checking reports that some pilots had encountered turbulence on their instrument approaches to the same runway before and after the accident.

The "moderate" level of air turbulence that was reported,

Montgomery said, "should not have caused the accident." It was not clear whether the tower had been alerted to the turbulence before the airplane burst into a fireball upon crashing.

Montgomery said nothing was said about turbulence on the recorded messages between the control tower and the Texasgulf jet, but added that a Federal Aviation Administration "airport terminal information service" at the field did mention turbulence.

He said the safety board investigators would probably spend "three or four days" at the crash site, but added that he did not know how long it would take to determine the probable cause.

The New York Times reported today that three unidentified employees of a company that operates business jets from Westchester County Airport reported that they had noticed turbulence while landing on the same runway before and after the crash Wednesday night.

Her Aspirations Enriched Sheppard

Elizabeth Copeland grew up loving books. She had an insatiable appetite for knowledge, and she wanted to work with people. Determined to find a career that would allow her to combine these elements, she decided that public library service was the place for her because "a library is where books and people come together."

She retired on Friday after more than 26 years as director of Greenville and Pitt County library services. She still enjoys books, learning new things, and working with people.

When she came here in September 1954, Sheppard Memorial Library had 42,432 books and operated on a budget of $40,111. During her tenure, the book collection increased to 125,095 and the budget is now $462,605.

Sandwiched between the increases in books and budgets were a bond issue, a building program and a continual broadening of services aimed at meeting the needs of a community that experienced tremendous population growth during a period of academic, industrial and technical expansion.

According to longtime library board member Sam B. Underwood Jr., "The growth and development of Sheppard Memorial Library is directly attributable to the push, the verve, the care that Elizabeth Copeland used, and the vision that she contributed to what she thought the library ought to be. To get new programs, she had to get the lay board of trustees to see that the intended move was a wise one."

Underwood, who was chairman from 1958 until 1990, gave her credit for a better collection of books and a better reference section. She originated the record collection and the use of art. She also started the State and Local History Room, which houses manuscripts and books about Greenville, Pitt County, eastern North Carolina and the state. Some are collector's items. Fifty-one Louis Orr etchings, which hang on walls around the upstairs balcony, were obtained at Miss Copeland's suggestion and through the efforts of the late Sen. Robert Lee Humber.

Over the years she made hundreds of talks to city and county organizations to acquaint them with available library services. One former board chairman credited her public relations work with laying the groundwork for support of the 1967 bond issue before it ever took place. Consequently, while tax-wary citizens throughout the rest of the state were rejecting bond issues, Greenville voted to expand its public library systems.

Miss Copeland used the time leading up to the actual implementation of the building program to do research "on what I thought we would need."

William C. Brewer Jr., board chairman from 1968-71, worked with her during the construction years of 1968-69. "She was proud of the Georgian style library building. When the architect was selected to design the additions, she was a diligent overseer of every detail and her conscientious efforts continued throughout the construction, as she wanted the two wings to complement the original building in every way," he said. The expansion included a provision for a separate children's library, which is located on the lower level of the main building.

It was also during Brewer's term that she obtained grants to purchase a new bookmobile for Pitt County and that two branch libraries were established.

In recent years, the library, along with other community facilities, has played a positive role in attracting industry. "Greenville couldn't have been the city it is without the library," Charles Horne, board chairman from 1965-68, said. "A city grows from having many facilities available, not just utilities, water, sewer and public works. A good industry is going to look at the total community — the respect it has for schools, recreation and libraries — its sense of community pride. When you walk into this library, you know there is community pride in it."

Laurence S. Graham, a recent board chairman, feels that "Miss Copeland has done more than anyone to destroy the notion that the library is a depository for books and nothing more. The library provides research assistance to business and professional people and is an information center for the public at large." He praised the librarian's receptiveness to implement innovations, including those suggested by staff and board members, during his term, when the emphasis was on program development.

He pointed out that in addition to the bookmobile, the outreach program today serves people in the hospital, rehabilitation center, jail and area nursing homes, as well as day care centers in the county. In 1974, a public information center was established.

Complementing the fiction, non fiction and reference book collections are newspapers, periodicals, magazines and special business services located in comfortable reading areas.

Sheppard Library also subscribes to the statewide interlibrary loan service and offers a public information telephone answering service.

While many changes have taken place during her 26 years here, Miss Copeland's basic philosophy of what a library is and what public service should be has never wavered.

"This is the only agency that was ever created to meet all the educational needs of all the people. This includes the man who can read and the man who cannot read. This agency has something for every man, regardless of who he is and what walk of life he comes from," she believes.

And, yes, there have been illiterate library users. Miss Copeland recalls, for example, a cabinetmaker who couldn't read a text but who could make a piece of furniture based on a picture she found for him in a library book.

A great many people do not know how to look things up. "The most important thing here is a well trained staff who can show a person how to use books," she noted.

It is people like the cabinetmaker who have made her job rewarding.

"It has always been the one-to-one personal contact with the public that I like to do best," she said. "Every person who comes in the door has a different background and a different need. There is something for everybody here. That's why it is constantly stimulating and challenging here ... to meet the needs of people like this."

Public libraries, in contrast to the more specialized educational libraries, serve "all age groups. They do not start or stop at any certain place," she pointed out.

In spite of changes and increases in the types of services provided by a modern library, books remain the basic ingredient. Shortly after she came to Greenville, she was asked if television would lure people away from books. "I said nothing would ever take the place of books. If anything, television has made people more curious and has increased their interest in books."

"A book is the last thing we have that offers freedom on a personal level. Everything is programmed now, but with books, we can still choose what we want and go at it slow or fast. We have the freedom to proceed as we wish."

However, the greatest challenge she faced hasn't changed in 26 years: "Trying to get the most that you can with available funds; taking the money you have and stretching it as far as you can and still maintaining the materials and quality of service, especially in an age of inflation." Regarding budgets, she said, "I never lost sight of the fact that I was spending taxpayers' money."

"Today you spend more for fewer books, newspapers and periodicals, but the demand is greater because the public is not buying as much. Businessmen come in at lunch time to read periodicals."

In her opinion, "whatever success we've had has been due to good support from the city and county governing bodies, and support from the public. We've been able to acquire good staff members; and an academically accented community is a stimulating one."

The board chairmen who have worked with her, such as current chairman Dr. J. Edwin Clement, are of the opinion that "a great deal of the success in the planning and operation is directly related to Elizabeth Copeland and her talent."

Horne calls her "probably the most devoted public servant I have ever run into. She wanted the best for the employees and the best for the public she served. She wanted nothing to stand in the way of service and excellence for the public and she never hesitated to stand up for what she believed in. She stood up for the agency she represented and she stood up for it very well."

MAIL TRANSFER . . . A daily activity for Elizabeth Copeland was the mail delivery by Arthur Lee Banks, building custodian for 20 years.

OF ALL TRADES . . . During her tenure as librarian, Elizabeth Copeland did "whatever needed to be done," whether it was a regular book-type activity, watering plants or moving snow, as well as helping to select the molding design for a fire place during the 1968-69 building program.

A native of eastern North Carolina, Elizabeth Copeland grew up in Ahoskie and graduated from East Carolina University. She received the master's degree in library science from George Peabody College and Vanderbilt University.

Her first job experience was doing market research for the Curtis Publishing Company in Philadelphia. She then moved on to do government research for the Bureau of Municipal Research of Philadelphia.

Her desire to return south led to her accepting a position as librarian for the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Regional Library. From there she moved to Greenville as director for the expanding Sheppard Memorial Library, where she remained for 26 years.

She is a former president of the N.C. Library Association; former chairman of the public library section, Southeastern Library Association, and member of the American Library Association. For eight weeks during the summer of 1964 she served as public relations representative for the American Library Association at the New York City World's Fair.

She has participated in the areas of state aid, networking, multi-library cooperation and intellectual freedom for the N.C. State Library.

Soon after coming to Greenville, she helped found the Pitt County Interracial Council and was a member for many years.

She also was a charter member of the East Carolina Art Society and member of its first Executive Board as well as later boards. She is a former president of the Pitt County Historical Society, member of the N.C. Literary and Historical Society, and member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, where she has participated on the Diocesan Executive Board of Episcopal Church Women for eastern North Carolina.

Candlelight Ceremony Performed Saturday

BELVOIR — In a candlelight ceremony, Teresa Ann Pridden and Timothy Wayne Anderson were united in marriage Saturday at 4 p.m. in the Gum Swamp FWB Church here. The Rev. Bobby R. Taylor performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride was escorted by her father. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Pridden of Fountain. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Anderson of Ayden.

The bride wore a satalustre organza gown styled along princess lines with a full skirt. The long bishop sleeves were accented with lace and the cuffs were edged in lace. The bib front was accented with Venice lace and seed pearls. The built-in train and hemline were edged in matching scalloped lace. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was edged in scalloped lace attached to a Juliet cap of lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of blue and white roses and white carnations and forget-me-nots tied with matching ribbon.

Darlene Pollard of Ayden was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of blue organza over taffeta featuring a high neckline encircled with white cluny lace. The tucked bib bodice was outlined in white ruffled lace and centered with a white lace panel and blue covered buttons. The empire waistline was encircled with matching blue satin ribbon. The long sheer shepheress sleeves were trimmed in white lace. She wore blue flowers with a should length veil as her headpiece and carried a white lace bouquet with white carnations, blue roses and matching streamers.

Bridesmaids Diana Nelson and Shelia Pridden, sisters of the bride, and Penny Baldree, cousin of the bridegroom, were dressed identical to the honor attendant and carried white lace bouquets with white carnations and blue streamers.

Barbara Jean Pridden, sister of the bride, and Selina Anderson, sister of the bridegroom, were flower girls and were uacx dressed in a formal gown of white crepe designed with a high neckline encircled with ruffled val lace. Matching lace trimmed the princess waistline with appliques of white chantilly lace beaded with pearls on the bib bodice. The Juliet sleeves were trimmed in lace and appliques. The hemline was edged in a crepe ruffle which extended into a sweep train. They carried baskets of blue roses and forget-me-nots with blue and white streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Scott Bowen of Ayden, J. T. Allen of Cuba and David Baldree of New Bern, both cousins of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride was dressed in a long gown of blue polyester. The mother of the bridegroom wore a long gown of pink polyester. Both wore corsages of white carnations. Grandmothers were remembered with white carnation corsages.

The pianist was Mrs. Rex Wainright of Winterville and Mrs. Sharon Brackins of Winterville sang "More," "The Twelfth of Never" and "The Bond of Love."

Jeanette Dunn, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register and David Pridden, brother of the bride, was rice boy. Mrs./ Dean Manning of Ayden, aunt of the bridegroom, directed the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville High School and works at ECU. The bridegroom is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is a mechanic.

The couple will live in Ayden after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth with pleated skirts. The centerpiece was blue and white roses and white carnations flanked by white candles in silver holders. After the bridal couple cut the first slice, the cake was served by Mrs. Ellen Forlines, aunt of the bridegroom. Mrs. Rex Baldree, aunt of the bridegroom, assisted. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Smith said good-byes.

Light Jewelry In This Spring

NEW YORK (UPI) — Light is the key word for spring jewelry fashions, says Kae McCulloch, fashion director for the Jewelry Industry Council.

Heavy chains, chunky bracelets and big pendants are out, Ms. McCulloch says, and large button or long drop earrings are passe. The new necklaces are shorter, and new earrings are small buttons or fishhook types.

Seed pearl and rice freshwater pearls come in twisted, multiple strands, mostly chocker length.

New spring necklaces and bracelets also feature light-colored amethysts, pink tourmalines, pale aquamarines, pink coral, amber and tiger's eye.

In Affairs of Heart, The Truth Can Hurt

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I find it hard to believe that your mail is running 3 to 1 against informing a friend that her husband is having an affair. Why would anyone want to live in a dream world? Just because they aren't aware doesn't mean it's not going on.

I would want to know if my husband were having an affair. Something in our relationship would have to be terribly wrong if he went looking elsewhere for love and comfort. He should be coming home to me. If I am not made aware of the problem, how can I deal with it? Not knowing is no help at all.

REALISTIC IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR REALISTIC: Your letter makes a lot of sense, but read on for another view, which also makes sense:

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you advised against telling a friend that her husband is having an affair. Why? Because if an affair is really going on, unless the wife is a complete idiot, she doesn't have to be told! All the signs are there for her to read. Suddenly he has a lot of extra "work" to do. He starts coming home very late and very tired. Often he isn't where he says he'll be.

A wife who has had a good marriage can tell from the way her husband looks at her (or doesn't look at her). By the way he touches her (or doesn't touch her). His ardor slowly cools. ("Sorry, dear, I have a lot on my mind these days.")

If a woman pretends she doesn't "know" when her husband is having an affair, she just doesn't want to know, which is also her right.

"KNEW" IN BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

DEAR KNEW: Right!

DEAR ABBY: Last week I took my ladyfriend to a nice restaurant for dinner. I am 58 and she is 56.

She ordered fish, and I ordered a steak—medium. After I cut into it, I discovered that it was rare. I do not care for rare steak, so I started to call the waitress to ask her to please take it back and have it cooked a little longer.

My ladyfriend stopped me, saying if I sent it back it would show that I had no class, and she would be embarrassed.

Not wanting to embarrass her, I didn't send the steak back, I just put it aside and ate the rest of the dinner. Consequently our dinner was spoiled and a small tiff ensued.

Abby, had I sent my steak back to the kitchen to be cooked medium, would it have shown that I had no class?

NO CLASS

DEAR NO CLASS: No. The absence of class was in your choice of dinner companions. But apparently you lacked self-confidence.

...

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother, who is in her 80s, has come to live with us. She's financially secure and draws a nice Social Security check every month.

We have four teen-agers at home and one in college, and with prices so high these days, we barely make ends meet. I added up all the household expenses and divided them by the number of people who live here, and it comes to $275 a month. (Not including clothing.)

Mother thinks $150 a month is adequate for her share. My husband agrees with her. This includes driving her to town to shop, to the doctor and anywhere else she wants to go. She watches TV all day long and we have to keep the furnace higher for her.

I would like the opinion of your readers concerning what Mother's fair share should be. (What would she pay in a nursing home that doesn't offer all these extras?) Mother said she would abide by what Dear Abby's readers say.

WAITING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR WAITING: I'm waiting, too. Readers?

...

DEAR ABBY: You were right in advising GETS LOST A LOT not to be ashamed, that some of our brainiest people get lost a lot. I wonder, however, if you are aware that those of us who have difficulty in remembering directions could be victims of "dyslexia"—a condition which has nothing to do with intelligence.

In addition to losing our way, we have difficulties learning to read, to spell and to do the simplest problems in math. Einstein, Edison and Nelson Rockefeller were dyslexic. There is no known cure, although early diagnosis is helpful in giving a child special training so he can learn to cope with his condition.

I understand this runs in families.

ALSO GETS LOST A LOT

DEAR ALSO: My twin and I were not dyslexic, but we got lost more than any two people we knew. Why? Because when directions were being given, we were always talking instead of listening.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There are some people who say there are no surprises left in the world anymore. They say that everything has become predictable.

We know who wins the election before the polls close.

We can accurately predict the sex of an unborn baby.

We can tell when our appliances will go just by checking the date on the warranty.

And if a woman serves braised parakeet lips over wild rice for dinner, it's a certainty her husband had it for lunch.

Well, adventurers, take heart. There are a few things that will continue to be a mystery no matter how much technology dominates our lives. Some things will never be predictable in our times.

Take the cost of your prescription. I can never anticipate how sick I am until the druggist tells me the cost of my medicine. I can be standing there feverish, nauseated, aching and afraid to start a long novel, when he announces, "That'll be $12.17." "I've paid more for a suntan!

At other times, I've been the picture of confidence as I stand at the counter with loose change in my hand and a simple stitch in my side. The druggist presses a small vial in my palm no bigger than a thimble and announces, "$47.53." I haven't seen that much cash since the garage sale.

And speaking of garages, what about the one where you take your car to be fixed? Don't tell me the world doesn't hold some shockers. The garage I go to is a shrine. It marks the birthplace of the post-dated check. More chest pains have been recorded at a service department of car repairs than at any other single place of business. No matter what estimate has been given, there is always a charge that was not foreseen. I have heard there was a person whose car had to be pushed into a garage only to discover the problem was a 15-cent hose, but I never knew him personally.

The American people are not naive, nor are they without appreciation that services cannot carry a standard price tag, but I watched a young girl recently in the vet's office who had come to claim her puppy. First she had her billfold out and as they tallied up the charges, she got out her checkbook. As they continued adding up the tab, she graduated to her charge card revolving account.

I wouldn't be surprised if that dog had to live to be 137 before he was paid off.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—Last night we held nearly all the cards in the pack on one hand, yet we suffered a loss that was not due to any bad break or anything. It was simply the result of a situation that has never cropped up before and I did not know how to handle it. In third seat I picked up 20 points and while I was trying to work out how to bid the hand, I heard my partner open one no trump! I did not know how to invite him to bid a grand slam, so I just shut my eyes and gambled out seven no trump. Unfortunately, partner held a perfectly balanced 16 points and twelve tricks were the limit of the hand. How should I have bid it?—L. Manson, Pittsburgh, Pa.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—The accepted way to invite partner to bid a grand slam if he is maximum is to leap to five no trump.

Logically, this bid is forcing to six no trump and invites seven. Here's why.

If you think there is no more in the hand than twelve tricks, you would simply bid six no trump. If you want to be in six no trump only if partner has a maximum, you can invite a small slam by raising to four no trump—there is no reason to contract for eleven tricks and perhaps place the hand in jeopardy. Therefore, a leap to five no trump should invite a grand slam.

Partner can accept by simply bidding seven no trump. However, if he has a possible ruffing value, i.e., 4-4-3-2 or 5-3-3-2 distribution, he has the option of probing for a suit fit by bidding his suits up the ladder, starting with his lower ranking suit. If opener bids a suit in which you have four-card support, raise to seven in that suit; otherwise, show your cheapest four-card suit, providing you do not go past six no trump, in the hope of striking four-card support in opener's hand. If you don't locate a fit, the auction could end in six no trump. Opener's willingness to search for a grand slam in a suit contract does not guarantee the values to contract for 13 tricks in no trump!

hearts, and only hearts. The correct response to partner's no trump opening bid is four hearts. The shorter partner is in hearts, the more necessary it is that the hand should be played in your trump suit. If declarer cannot run heart tricks at a no trump contract, your hand will prove worthless to him.

Q.—My partner opened the bidding with one no trump and I held:
♠92 ♣KQ876532 ♦J7 ♣9
I jumped to three hearts and he bid three no trump. Afraid that he had a singleton or void in hearts, I passed. We went down two tricks, but four hearts would have been made—partner held the singleton ace. Where did we go wrong?—R.T., Pompano Beach, Fla.

A.—My, you seem to open strange no trumps in your part of the world! In our games you never open one no trump on a singleton or a void, and if you have a doubleton, you would like it to be headed by at least the queen.

Be that as it may, your hand is suitable to play in

New Selfish Motivation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surveys over the past decade show an increasingly selfish motivation among students entering college, reports researcher Alexander Astin.

He told the annual meeting of the Lutheran Education Conference of North America that beginning in the early 1970's, college freshmen when "asked to state their primary objective expressed a growing interest in money, power and status."

During the same period, "altruistic goals" either stayed on the same level or diminished, he said.

Astin of the University of California in Los Angeles and president of the Higher Education Research Institute said the report was based on surveys of some 4.5 million entering students at 550 institutions over the past 15 years.

Along with the changing motivation, he said, freshmen showed deteriorating levels of academic preparation, especially in verbal skills. "Intellectual competence in general is declining," he added.

Bosses Prefer Encouragement

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — American employees feel higher wages will boost their productivity—but their bosses think giving them more encouragement would work as well.

Almost half the white-collar workers questioned in a recent Lou Harris study felt increased pay was the quickest route, but 51 percent of executives interviewed

Met A Big Python Inside City Sewer

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Bob Piercy always knew there were some strange things in sewers, but he had never encountered a python before.

Piercy, a sewer contractor, and his crew were cleaning out a sewer in downtown Terre Haute when they came across the 10-foot-long, 60-pound snake.

Though very much alive when it was spotted, the reptile was quickly sucked up by the sewer cleaning equipment and died shortly afterward.

To be on the safe side, Piercy called a zoology professor at Indiana State University to find out if he could expect to see more snakes.

Dr. William Hopp reassured him, saying that pythons don't thrive in Indiana's climate and that the snake probably had taken up residence in the sewer duct after it was released or escaped from someone's collection. He added that the snake had probably been living off sewer rats since last fall.

As for the unfortunate snake, Piercy said he would have it stuffed to "show people what's in their sewers."

Volume Is The Secret Of Raising Rabbit Herd

By CARRICK LEAVITT
SEATTLE (UPI) — Small and fuzzy as they are, a rabbit will produce more pounds of meat per year than a beef cow.

How's that?
Let Mrs. Pam Bacon explain.

A doe rabbit, like the New Zealand Whites she raises, is expected to produce nine or 10 bunnies per litter. The rabbits have 31 days of gestation and then are reared at 14 days.

"If everything goes to schedule you can have eight or nine litters a year and your average fryer at the end of eight weeks should weigh between 4½ and 6 pounds. Nine times six is 54 pounds every six weeks and multiple that by nine — it's about 486 pounds of meat a year."

Raising rabbits in the backyard was a $1 million industry last year in five western states — Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and California. It is expected to double this year, says Curt Dunn, field representative for Valley Rabbitry of Hilmar, Calif., the largest rabbit processing plant west of the Mississippi.

"We are probably running about 20,000 rabbits a week total from the five states," said Dunn, "and it's just a drop in the bucket of what we need."

"We're like where the chicken fryer industry was 20 years ago. It's been a hobby and a part-time operation, something you did in the spare corner of the garage or under a tree. Now, we're trying to get people who are seriously interested."

That's good news for people like Mrs. Bacon, 36, and her father and mother, Mr.

and Mrs. Melvin Collins, who started raising rabbits in Ferndale, Wash., as a source of protein a few years ago.

"With all the children (13, including seven adopted), I can't just go to the grocery store," said Mrs. Bacon.

So they started raising rabbits for food.

As rabbits are wont to do, they multiplied at a rapid rate, forcing the owners to seek an outlet for the excess.

Rabbit tastes similar to and is cooked just like chicken.

Couple Enjoys Luxuries In A Home Of The Future

JAMES V. HEALION
GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — Some people don't want to be millionaires. They just want to live like them. Molly and Dean Hendrickson are doing just that.

They are living in the house of tomorrow until somebody pays the asking price of $1 million. It is a third generation solar home built as a new product showcase by the Copper Development Association and 20 companies, the who's who of the building industry.

The other houses built in Houston and Tucson, Ariz., are like it in concept, but not design. Between its active and passive solar systems, the new "SunTronic" house produces 60 percent of the home's heat and hot water.

The Hendricksons manage the house, sort of put it through its paces, welcome visiting professionals, and make an occasional women's group feel right at home.

At first, Molly Hendrickson didn't think the idea of living in a house other than her own was such a good one, even though the furnishings were selected by W & J Sloane.

"Then we decided why pass up an opportunity like this. We rented our house in New Canaan, Conn., and we're here under contract for six months or maybe a year."

Mrs. Hendrickson was the curator for several years of an historical house. Dean Hendrickson is a retired executive who is convalescing from hip joint surgery.

"We wanted to put together a total package demonstration home that would be of interest to the building community across the board, not just architects but interior designers and so on," said Paul A. Anderson, an association vice president.

The 5,400-square foot house with its sloping copper roof and exterior of California redwood, slate, and copper metals settles snugly into the earth to shield it from north winds on a three-acre wooded site overlooking a pond.

The multi-level house has three bedrooms, 2½ baths, living room, dining room, family room, laundry, mechanical room, two-story combination greenhouse and solarium plus a spacious kitchen. Mrs. Hendrickson had 80 guests recently and some of them gravitated to the kitchen.

"You know that old saying, 'No matter where I serve my guests they always seem to like my kitchen best'? I think that works out in this lovely, gorgeous home," she said.

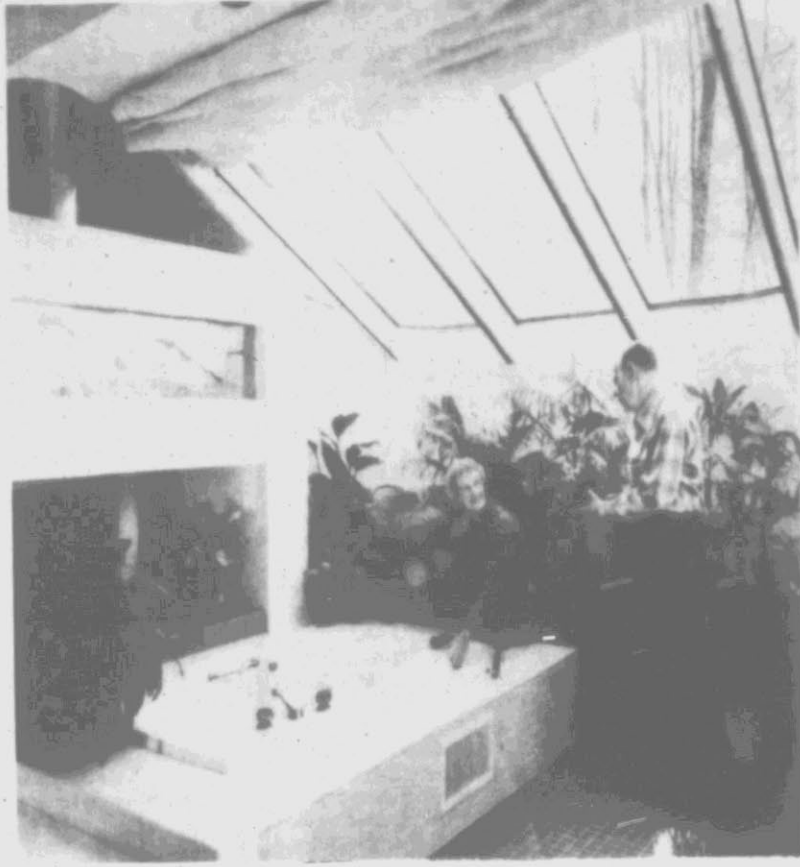

The house is said to be one of the most computerized residences ever built. The Apple II home computer determines when the solar systems should kick in and in what combinations; when to circulate space heating from storage; and when to operate heat pumps, solar cells, and thermostats. It controls the security, fire sprinkler, and smoke detector systems.

With the push of a computer terminal button, the Hendricksons can raise and lower the house's "security shades," and chose either diffused light or none at all in the daytime.

The shades are recessed in the ceiling and work on the same basic principle as a rolltop desk. They descend automatically at night, courtesy of the computer.

"I think these shades could be used in any home. It could be in a traditional home as well as a contemporary. They're attractive from the outside, too," Mrs. Hendrickson said.

There are also insulating shades in the semi-circular library as well as the sumptuous bath areas, covering or uncovering skylights. They contain an inch to an inch and half of a fiber fill similar to that in a sleeping bag, which more than doubles the insulating value of a double pane of insulating glass.

If security is breached, an infra-red beam will pick up the intruder and flash the message to the computer. It will then show up on one of seven General Electric television sets, pinpointing the location of the break as well as activate a police alarm.

The television screen displays a map of the house or a diagram showing where the intrusion is happening. If the set is off, it turns it on, comes to a pre-selected channel, and displays the warning and indicates whether it is a fire or a burglary.

The computer's format is set by the programmer who is teaching the Hendricksons the ins, outs, and, of course, the meaning of blips — those gremlins that sneak into the system and occasionally erase what is on the screen.

In the Apple II system, the Hendricksons can override the format and adjust the computer to changing conditions — which isn't ordinarily the case with home computer setups.

Say it's been a hot day and it has cooled. The air conditioning might continue, but in order to conserve energy, the Hendricksons could use an exhaust fan in the living room ceiling to draw in outside air simply by tapping out a control message on a computer terminal.

The computer can be an all-purpose electronic filing cabinet. Instead of putting written or typed recipes or a wine inventory into a small box and storing it in a cupboard, Mrs. Hendrickson could file the recipes into the computer and have them appear on a kitchen television set. If she wanted a printout, the system is equipped to produce one.

The SunTronic house was designed by the Berkus Group Architects of Washington, D.C., and Santa Barbara, Calif. Anderson said "the architect really wanted to think in terms of a sculptured home."

"I think this is why you run into the curves, the different levels. He wanted the whole house to be quite a work of art, if you will, as opposed to a pedestrian design."

It may be a visual beauty, but it's practical, too.

Two fireplaces contain fans that take outside air and circulate it around the fireboxes, heat it, and discharge it into the related living areas, for example.

There's a lot of glass on the south side of the house and on a normally sunny day, heat is generated through the greenhouse glass and rises into the clerestory.

A sensor behind a louver triggers a fan in the basement at 85 degrees and the fan pulls the warm air through the louver down an 18-foot tall decorative column in the living room. The warmed air then heats the floors of the library and the game room.

The house has both active and passive solar systems. Active solar systems collect, store, and distribute solar heat with the aid of pumps and fans. Passive systems collect, store, and radiate heat without mechanical assistance.

Fifteen percent of the house heat comes from passive solar, another 45 percent from active solar.

The house is equipped to take direct sunlight and convert it to electrical energy. It comes into a battery storage area in the mechanical room where it's converted into alternating current. It's calculated to supply about 6 percent of the electrical requirements. The rest is supplied by the power company, Northeast Utilities.

Anderson said this conversion method is "potentially a very good home energy market. Northeast Utilities is also interested in how they are going to interface with something like this. They proposed certain monitoring devices and evaluating techniques on this array so they can learn a little bit more about it."

"These photo cells could either serve a home or you could sell power back to the electric company with them. If the right safeguards are set up, it's not unlikely you might have a two-way meter where you pay for your power coming in from the power company and then when you have excess from your photo cells you'd reverse that meter and send power back into the power grid."

There's a passive solar water wall between the family room and the greenhouse, consisting of six water filled copper tubes 12 inches in diameter, which are warmed directly by the sun. At night, the water in the tanks radiates heat back into the living areas as needed.

In another wall, the same large copper tubes are filled with Freon behind a copper absorber plate outside. When the sun hits the plate and brings the Freon inside up to a temperature of 95 degrees, it vaporizes and travels up the tube and heats the water.

It condenses and flows back down the tube — transferring the heat — and it keeps the cycle going.

When the sun doesn't shine, the Freon just lies in its liquid form.

Basically, the Copper Development Association is interested in things that enter the building market from a copper standpoint, ranging from the solar to the plumbing systems.

In the SunTronic, they've eliminated one run of pipe in the plumbing and introduced a self-venting drainage method used in hotels, motels, and office buildings but not generally in new single-family residences.

It's one way that copper could become competitive with cast iron in new home construction.

All the intricacies of the SunTronic may not be readily understood by Molly and Dean Hendrickson just yet, but they're learning as they go along. "It's an adventure," Mrs. Hendrickson said.

Drug Trade Flourishing In Alaska's Wilds

By PAUL JENKINS
Associated Press Writer
ANCHORAGE, Alaska
(AP) — Frustrated drug agents on America's last frontier say they are being buried one cellophane bag at a time. Alaska has a drug problem growing along with its population.

the increase of cocaine, marijuana and illicit prescription drugs. "There's absolutely no doubt about it. We're losing the war here," said one officer. "With the manpower and money we have, we don't have a chance. It's all we can do to keep up with the paperwork."

image is more wilderness and fresh air than snorting and shooting up. Agents say the drug trade, which began to flourish during construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline when workers had huge paychecks to spend, is not confined to the rough-and-tumble bars where signs warn prostitutes to ply their trade elsewhere. They say cocaine, marijuana and harder drugs also surface in fashionable city neighborhoods and in the bush villages of Alaska's remote interior.

fiscated 14.4 ounces of cocaine. In November, they seized 20 ounces from a single dealer. In a six-week period in Anchorage late last year, agents seized 75 ounces.

"I sometimes wonder if it's because we're doing a better job," said one agent, asking not to be identified. "But I really believe there are just more drugs out there."

An 18-month-old survey by the Alaska Peace Officers Association indicates there were fewer than 1,300 sworn police officers in the state.

"And that includes park rangers, environmental protection people and fish and game officers," said Ernie Beauchamp, a member of the APOA board of directors. "Only a very small percentage of those officers are working in drugs."

Those few officers depend for help on the "metro units" of the Alaska State Troopers, who run the closest thing the state has to a centralized drug enforcement office. They field six full-time drug agents, and two work part-time at Anchorage International Airport.

The metro units are combinations of troopers, local officers and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration. In 1972, the first year of the metro concept, units in Fairbanks and Anchorage ran on a budget of $350,000. For fiscal 1981, the state allocated $805,000 for those two units and a third on the Kenai Peninsula.

To make a comparison, that is substantially less than the $1 million allotted the 23-member special investigations unit in Portland, Ore., for fiscal 1981. Yet Portland is a city of 370,000 spread over only 93 square miles. And 17 of the 23 special officers there devote their time to drug enforcement.

"It's a drop in the bucket," Michael Daugherty, president of the Alaska Association of Chiefs of Police, said of the drug-fighting budget. "It's not enough to deal with the problem on a statewide basis."

Prosecutors add that the few officers working drugs are often mystified at what one called the "hodgepodge" of state drug laws.

"These are old drug laws," said Rhonda Butterfield, an assistant in the attorney general's Office of Special Investigations. "Some date from the '60s and some from the '70s. They were adopted piecemeal to deal with specific drugs. The drug laws now are inconsistent."

There is, for example, no "intent to distribute" provision in narcotics possession laws, so officers who arrest a suspect with 20 pounds of cocaine can charge him only with the lesser offense of possession, she said.

Sentencing also seems inconsistent. An adult who delivers LSD to a minor commits a felony carrying a punishment of up to life in prison. But delivery of heroin or cocaine to a minor, also a felony, rates only a 10- to 30-year term.

For the past three years, stringent new drug laws have surfaced and sunk in the 60-member Legislature. Gov. Jay Hammond tried to steer a bill through the Legislature last year. It failed in a political squabble over who would get credit.

Hammond plans to try again this year with a law, authored by Ms. Butterfield, which would break drugs into classifications. Alcohol abuse would be the least serious offense while heroin would be classified as the most dangerous drug, with its use receiving the harshest penalties.

Some of the state's drug agents doubt even new laws will change things, and they blame public apathy.

"The average person doesn't see an individual walking down the street with straws up his nose, or a heroin addict with a belt around his arm and a needle sticking in it," said one Anchorage officer. "They just don't want to hear about it."

Vintage Valentines Still Stir Lovers

Text and Photos By Mary Schulken

Love, lace and flowers are passions for Michael Cable of Greenville.

Cable, a fancier of antique valentines, spends his spare time searching for expressions of love from the past. "I collect many different things," he said of his hobby, "and I like paper objects, so the valentines are a special interest."

The collector, a Greenville fireman and appraiser of antiques, runs Cable Crafts and Yarn on Dickinson Avenue with his wife, Annie. He has an assortment of 30-35 valentines, some dating back to around 1880. His favorites are the characteristically ornate valentines from the Victorian era, the "heyday" of the valentine. "Victorian valentines are the fanciest, with lots of lace and hearts," explained Cable.

"My particular favorites are the little cupids with fold-outs, the ones with messages hidden on the card. Many of the ones I have were made by Raphael Tuck and most of them are German and English die-cut greetings." Tuck and Sons were well-known manufacturers of valentines during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Tuck himself was personal valentine designer for the Queen of England. According to Cable, these are the valentines that appeal to today's collectors because of their intricate designs, their workmanship and their beautiful colors.

Cable has accumulated his treasury of love notes over the past 12 years. "I happened to pick up a group of them a few years back and ever since then I get one whenever I run across one," he added. "The average cost of a collectable is about $25."

According to legend, the valentine originated in the ancient Roman Feast of Lupercal. In addition to religious rites performed on the occasion, maidens fashioned love messages and left them in a large urn. Later, the men of the city drew the messages out and courted the girls whose messages they had drawn.

The feast was held on February 15, but the date of the modern celebration is based on the date the Christian martyr Saint Valentine was executed in 270 A.D. Again, according to legend, the saint sent his jailer's blind daughter a farewell note signed "from your valentine."

Although the style and popularity of the valentine has changed through the years, the meaning and the words have remained the same.

"It is the morn of Valentine," reads one of Cable's gems, "And softly steals my heart to thine." Written in the nineteenth century, these words still stir the hearts of lovers.

Cable's favorite valentines are the highly decorated ones of the Victorian era, embellished with lace and hearts like the one above. Many of his are fold-outs, such as the Dutch girl on the left. Her buckets open to reveal a bouquet of flowers and a message that reads "Heart to Heart." The two sweetheart dogs' eyes roll from side to side and the seesaw cupids, at the very top, go up and down. "To My Valentine," reads one of the cards, "My heart is red, your eyes are blue; my love for you is sweet and true."

PLAN YOUR HOME

The SunSource

Exciting Passive Solar 2-Story With Deck

By Jerry Bishop

The SunSource is an exciting contemporary design featuring a centrally located 2-story family room. The upper level kitchen overlooks the family room, highlighted by a 2-story brick fireplace. A deck on this level is accessible from both the kitchen and the dining room, offering a whole range of entertaining life styles from the formal to outdoor casual. The SunSource has a combined living and formal dining room, 3 bedrooms and 2 baths. The master suite on the upper level is indeed a suite. A private deck, luxurious bath and a large walk in closet are just a few of the many features that make this home so exciting. Designed for a flat or gently sloping site, the home has east driveway access to the attached 2-car garage.

Some of the energy conserving features are 2 x 6 exterior walls, double and triple-glazed windows, insulating curtains, an air-lock entry and earth berming. In the Minneapolis climate, 50% of the heating needs will be met by passive solar gain through south facing windows. Overhangs shade these windows in summer.

In metropolitan Minneapolis, The SunSource, would cost an estimated $110,000 without lot based on Spring, 1980 construction costs.

Today's Dream Kitchen Is Modern, Traditional

By BARBARA MAYER
Newsfeatures

Judging from some new statistics, the American dream kitchen has a microwave oven, plastic laminate countertops, vinyl flooring, an electric range and a self-cleaning oven.

It's in traditional style (although modern is coming up fast) and it cost about $7,900 to create out of an old, cramped kitchen with a poor layout and inadequate counter and storage space.

At least that's the picture that emerged when the American Institute of Kitchen Dealers surveyed its 1,200 members on consumer preferences. (Only 20 percent of the dealers filled out questionnaires, but the results are still considered statistically sound.)

Those attending a seminar in New York, where the statistics were discussed, also learned that Americans are staying put in homes and renovating the kitchen more than they used to. The old pattern of trading up to a better house appears to be diminishing because of increasing costs.

Most customers for new kitchens appear to start out with unrealistic expectations when they meet their kitchen planner for the first time. Two thirds bring no rough sketch or floor plan, 88 percent have no photos or ideas of kitchens they like, and 54 percent have an unrealistic idea of how much the whole thing is going to cost.

The old division of labor between the sexes still seems apparent, since the majority of husbands are consulted only when it comes to finances (88.2 percent), and layout and design (54.7 percent). Only 30.7 percent of husbands are involved in color selection; 44.3 percent play a role in appliance selections.

Most families finance their new kitchen with personally-arranged funds or a home-improvement loan. Other methods of paying for the renovation include refinancing the mortgage and borrowing from a credit union.

Typically, a renovation project includes removal of old cabinets (88.3 percent); installation of new cabinets and countertops (100 percent); installation of plumbing (81.7 percent) and lighting (80 percent); fixtures and appliances (89.2 percent), and electrical and plumbing modifications (85 percent). Floor coverings are installed in 64.2 percent of the jobs and new wall coverings in 48.3 percent.

According to kitchen dealers, traditional kitchen cabinetry and design features are most popular. But contemporary designs with natural oak cabinets and plastic laminate countertops are becoming more popular. Light colors and wood and earth tones are most often chosen.

Today's consumer is more adventurous when it comes to kitchen design, said Ellen Cheever, an AIKD member from Sacramento, Calif., who also conducts courses in kitchen design.

"Clients want a room that looks great and works. They expect cabinets to fit the cook, shelves to fit their supplies and a room to fit the family," she said. Convenience features like no-wax, sheet-vinyl floors and laminate surfaces are usually sought.

But when it comes to the visual, they seek a design that makes a personal statement. With more two-career families, the kitchen is a night space shared by husband and wife, often with children who cook, too, she said.

The types of special features desired vary. But the AIKD study turned up a number that are popular extras. Among them are an eating area in the kitchen (65.5 percent); a pantry (58.7 percent); storage shelves that roll out (59.5 percent), and Lazy Susans to take advantage of corner space (76.7 percent). Also in demand, but to a lesser extent, are wine racks, baking centers, a planning desk, a built-in breadboard and a place for spices.

Not surprising, with all the small electric appliances Americans are encouraged to buy, is the demand for a small appliance-storage center.

The kitchen of the future may differ radically from today, according to Albert F. Kimmel, vice president and general manager of the Quaker Maid division of Tappan Co.

Since existing major appliances probably cannot meet mandated energy-efficiency requirements for 1985 in his opinion, there may be changes in appliances that could result in new kinds of cabinetry.

Kimmel predicted that microwave ovens, currently in only 14 percent of American homes, will be in most kitchens of the future. He also foresaw the coming of the computer to the kitchen.

One firm already has a dishwasher that makes use of a self-contained computer to diagnose the problem when something goes wrong, he said. This development should soon be a feature of other major appliances, in his opinion.

The kitchen, which has been the center of many American homes in the past and present, seems unlikely to diminish in importance in the years to come, concluded participants at the seminar.

Q. — We moved into our house seven years ago. It is located over a crawl space which is enclosed but has vents in it. We were having trouble with too much moisture coming into our floors from the crawl space and we took a number of recommended steps to correct the condition. It did so to a considerable extent, but the moisture still comes up from the ground. We were told that this could be eliminated if we placed tar paper or plastic sheets over the soil, but have had differing opinions about which is better. What is your opinion?

A. — Polyethylene ground covers are generally considered the best material for placing over the soil in crawl spaces. Place the sheets of plastic on the ground, which should be fairly smooth. The sheets should be lapped about 4 inches, with sand placed on the lapped areas to hold them in place. Since you have enclosures, carry the sheets right on up the walls, also about 4 inches, again using sand to hold them in place. To cut down on the number of joints, get as wide rolls as are available.

Q. — We have some patio furniture made mostly of steel. The surfaces are beginning to get rusty in a few places where the paint has worn off. How can we treat the metal to prevent future rust?

A. — Use a wire brush and scraper to remove loose rust and paint. A detergent and water will take off any oil or grease, but be sure to rinse thoroughly. While it is not always necessary, priming the metal will help the finish coat to last indefinitely. When the primer is thoroughly dry, apply one or two coats of one of the paints that have rust-resistant ingredients. They now come in decorator colors.

Reflecting A Rosier Outlook

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Colors for home interiors this year reflect a warmer, richer, rosier outlook, says Bonnie Bender, color marketing manager for a paint manufacturer.

Mrs. Bender attributes the trend to, among other things, "Renewed elegance on the Washington scene, a concern for reducing inflation and saving energy ... In general, they (homeowners) are selecting warmer toned colors and muted mid-tones with more color definition and visual class for basic interior design schemes."

Taupe and mauve are becoming popular, she said, and deep tones — such as rich, rusty reds and deep blues — symbolizing the wealth-oriented Victorian era have surfaced.

Mrs. Bender is with the Pittsburgh Paints division of PPG Industries.

Q. Can you recommend a way for me to grow some of the warmer season vegetables before the danger of frost has passed? (G.W., Clinton)

A. You can use the multiple planting technique if you are willing to risk a few seeds. Start two to three weeks before the normal seeding date for the vegetables you wish to grow. Seed a row and then come back the following week and seed another row six or eight inches away. You can do the same thing the next week if you wish, always keeping your rows equal distance apart. After the danger of frost has passed, you can destroy all but the oldest, healthiest and best stand of plants. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. Should trees be cut for firewood during the dormant season before the sap rises? (L.G., Winston-Salem)

A. Trees for firewood may be cut any time of the year. Sap is present in all parts of the tree year 'round. A great deal of moisture would be removed from the wood of the tree if after felling the tree is left intact for at least a week before delimiting and cutting into smaller pieces. (Bill Stanton, extension forestry)

Q. Could you give me the nutrient requirements of lilacs? Mine do not bloom well. (J.K., Greenville)

A. In early spring and again in mid-summer scatter beneath each plant one-half cup of a complete fertilizer (such as 8-8-8) per foot of plant height. Lilacs grow best in neutral or alkaline soil, and most soils in North Carolina are slightly acid. Therefore you may need to apply lime. A soil test will tell for certain. In the absence of a test you might want to apply one cup of agricultural lime underneath the foliage every three or four years. This is the amount you would apply for a three to four foot lilac. The main reason lilacs do not produce heavy clusters of blooms in Eastern North Carolina is because the winters are usually too mild for best flower bud formation. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

Q. When should I plant broccoli, and what are some suggestions for growing it? (E.W., Raleigh)

A. Broccoli is a cool season crop similar to cabbage. Plants are usually set in later march in the Piedmont. They can be set a little earlier in the Coastal Plain and should be set a little later in the mountains. For suggestions on growing broccoli, I would recommend that you call Extension Teletip and ask for Message 2810, which covers broccoli. The Teletip number is 1-800-662-7301. The number is toll-free from any place in North Carolina. (George Hughes, extension horticultural specialist)

The Placebo Effect Being Understood

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The moment did not come until early in this century, centuries after Hippocrates, the father of medicine, had first tried to put the art of healing on a scientific footing.

"Sometime between 1910 and 1912 in this country," said a noted biochemist, "a random patient, with a random disease, consulting with a doctor chosen at random, had, for the first time in the history of mankind, better than a 50-50 chance of profiting from the encounter."

Until then, much of whatever success medicine could claim was due largely to those aspects of therapy known now as "non-specific." The benefits were produced by the still widely misunderstood "placebo" or "placebo effect," a name that comes from the Latin for "I will please."

The common idea of a placebo is that of some medically worthless substance — a sugar pill or salt injection — used to delude a patient into thinking he is being given a real drug. It is often used for patients who demand medication they don't really need.

The most widespread use of placebos though is as the dummy or inert substances that serve as the key to the testing of new drugs and in other research studies. In new drug tests, for example, half of a group of people are given the placebo pill and half the new drug.

But now some doctors say that giving the patient the attention and concern he really needs — the right bedside manner — is enough to produce the placebo effect, to make the patient feel better without medication.

According to Dr. Herbert Benson of the Beth Israel Hospital and Harvard Medical School, a leader in the field of behavioral medicine, the psychological relationship between physician and patient lies at the heart of the placebo effect.

This relationship of mutual trust must explain why some of the more bizarre treatments of the past had any merit at all — treatments that he says included "purging, puking, puncturing, cutting, cupping, blistering, leeching, heating, freezing, sweating and shocking."

These Gothic treatments, were, by today's standards, clearly worthless and, of course, often harmful. So how did the doctor maintain his respected role in society over the generations?

"It is," Benson answers, "apparently due to the profound psychological effect of the physician upon the patient, the confidence he instilled and the solace he provided. From antiquity to this era, the physician himself has been a successful factor in the treatment of the patient."

"Until recently, this was the physician's most potent tool in restoring his patient to good health. Sometimes it was his only effective therapy."

The era of modern medicine and its "miracle drugs" have perhaps led the public to put too much faith in pills and medical technology and to forget the vital role of the mind.

Benson writes in his book, "The Mind-Body Effect: Modern medicine, perhaps due to its own scientific progress, is disregarding one of its most essential elements, the placebo effect."

There is yet another feature of modern medicine — specialization — that has contributed to the artificial distinction between the mind and the body, Benson says. "As this trend toward specialization continues, we are rapidly losing the doctor-patient relationship and thus the potential for a positive placebo effect."

"Have we not lost more than we have gained? We should not be surprised to find that modern medicine, with its potent interventions, has even contributed to ill health."

There is even a medical term for illnesses produced by acts of the physician — iatrogenic disease. For example, Benson notes, campaigns against high blood pressure may actually produce it by stirring up anxiety. If a patient actually has high blood pressure, he adds, the benefits of drug treatment are clear, after an accurate diagnosis.

The placebo effect can work strongly against a patient's worries, and it can be done without resort to deceptive pills and tricks. "A good 'bedside manner,' a warm, sympathetic, trusting doctor-patient relationship will evoke positive placebo effect," Benson says, and "this effect can be translated into healthy changes in the body."

If, for example, the anesthetist is reassuring and confident in describing to a surgical patient what to expect, the patient is likely to have a much easier time during recovery, he says.

In one study, patients who were fully informed and reassured in advance needed only half as many pain-killing drugs as those who went without these psychological benefits. And they were discharged from the hospital an average 2½ days earlier.

Placebo treatment calls for cultivating a relaxation response using techniques of meditation from Eastern mystics. Four basic factors are involved: a comfortable position; a quiet environment; the repetition of a prayer, word, sound or phrase; the adoption of a passive attitude toward other intervening thoughts.

The relaxation response is the opposite to the body's emergency response — the "fight or flight" response — to stress. Under stress, the body's sympathetic nervous system increases its activity in a surge of adrenalin. The relaxation response is marked by decreased activity.

"The relaxation response is therapeutically useful in diseases related to stress and may also be useful in their prevention," says Benson. The response can be effective in mild to moderate high blood pressure, many forms of irregular heart beat and with symptoms associated with tension headache and anxiety, he says.

The mind-body changes that can be produced with these techniques, however, require much more research before the actual physiology is understood, and before it can be more precisely controlled.

Benson had these words for doctors in his book, taken from Dr. Francis Weld Peabody of Harvard who wrote in 1927: "One of the essential qualities of the clinician is interest in humanity, for the secret of the care of the patient is in caring for the patient."

Conference On Success

NEW YORK (AP) — The Women's Institute, an association of psychotherapists, will present a day-long conference on "Ambition and Achievement: Their Meaning for Women" in New York City on May 2.

The conference will include four sessions at which female psychologists, psychiatrists and social scientists who have examined issues of women's achievement and success will present papers on specific aspects of their work in these areas.

Women from the fields of politics, publishing, literature, fashion and sports will also take part in the sessions.

"Since prior to the conference the participants will have received copies of the material to be presented, the discussions should prove thought-provoking," says Dr. Carol Galligan, a clinical psychologist and executive director of the institute. "It is our hope that these shared dialogues can lead to new insights and pose intriguing questions on the meanings and valuation of achievement for all women."

'Awareness' As Stockholders

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious bodies have filed 88 stockholder resolutions this year with 72 companies, reports the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility.

Tiny Verda Horne Isn't Type To Lollygag; Lives Busy Life

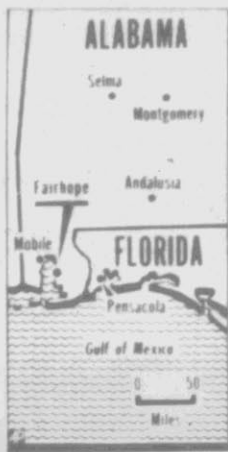

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
FAIRHOPE, Ala. (AP) — The way you describe Verda Horne is tiny. Barely 60 inches separate the top of her gray head and the soles of her small feet. She also is elderly, in her 70s.

But anyone who would call her, patronizingly, a little old lady has encountered neither her energy nor her wit.

Some who follow Verda Horne on her field trips say it is as much a challenge to absorb all the wonders she has to show them as it is simply to keep up.

Her step, like her mind, is quick, agile. Verda Horne was not put on this earth to lollygag.

"There is so much to see, so much to learn," she was saying during a mini-field trip in her back yard. "That's a magnolia. Does it look like a magnolia? Of course it doesn't, but it is. It is a species found only around here."

No greenhouse imports decorate the Horne back yard, only trees and shrubs and flowers native to this area, and they are lovely.

"I guess my goal in life is for everyone on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay to know this environment. To know it is to love it. That's true of any environment, especially your own. When you see a plant, wouldn't you rather know what it is than not know?"

"If everyone knew his own environment, was aware of what is special about it, we would be less inclined to watch it be destroyed."

To that end, Verda Horne teaches a once-a-week class in ecology for the Institute for Lifelong Learning, a local enterprise organized by retired professionals who, like Verda Horne, figure they still have quite a few productive miles left on their aging chassis. They impose no requirements. The courses are free.

She also is working with a group that aims to establish America's third National Scenic Trail, which she believes is as deserving of preservation as the other two, the Appalachian Trail and the Pacific Coast Trail.

It is the trail of William Bartram, the naturalist who roamed the Deep South 200 years ago, studying, painting, recording.

It is easy to see how a William Bartram would interest a Verda Horne.

She, herself, roamed the deserts and mountains of the West as an undergraduate biologist at Utah State University, then, as a graduate student, wandered the wilds near the University of Minnesota.

Then she wandered to Alabama.

"I wanted to see where my grandfather was born, before he moved west, and I was able to get a grant to study crabs on the Gulf Coast. I met my husband, who was doing a survey for the National Park Service. With his help, I learned an entirely new ecology, and loved it.

"We lived in a cabin and were the only ones around for miles. We watched sea turtles swim ashore and lay eggs. Now," she said, icily, "it's all neon. Dune buggies run over the nests."

Verda Horne is not one to mince words, not about the environment.

Recently a reporter asked for her views on a proposed amusement park-type development on Mobile Bay. She was quoted as saying anyone who would do something like that must be insane.

"Actually, she said, "I think what I said was that the project was insane, not the person." She went to fetch an armload of firewood, refusing help, and returned wearing a satisfied smile.

"It doesn't bother me. The reporter wrote exactly what I meant."

THIS FLOOR PLAN wisely uses all available space with the bedroom areas to the right of the entrance, well away from the more active family room. Attic storage space with pull-down staircase. In the generously sized family room with the masonry fireplace and warm wood stain of the moldings create a wonderfully inviting atmosphere. For a sunny look, even on the grayest of days, the bay window in the dining room is a perfect location for house plants. The built-in, recessed serving bar makes efficient furniture unnecessary with the added bonus of more floor space for guests to maneuver around the table. The kitchen features an abundance of custom cabinets with plenty of room for a hutch or desk, and a breakfast area by the bay window (yes, another one!) that takes advantage of the view of the very large, private patio. Of course, all the amenities you would expect in a condominium living, pool, tennis courts, sauna, and exterior maintenance worries. A very luxurious way of life, all at a very affordable $59,500.

'Always Aware' Of A Relationship With Nature

By DION HENDERSON
Associated Press Writer
CABLE, Wis. (AP) — She did not realize for years that there were great ecologists who in their maturity reached the conclusion self-evident to her since childhood: mankind is a part of the community of nature.

"I always knew," she says, "that I was related to the other animals and even the trees and plants and dependent on the same things they were." A pause.

"And even that I was neither more nor less important to the whole than any of the others."

This is Lois Nestel, a woman in jeans and a worn flannel shirt, tails out, who looks 40 and will be 60 her next birthday. Creator, collector and curator of the Natural History Museum that brings environmentalists — and people simply concerned about nature — to this tiny northwestern Wisconsin village for nature lectures, the nature trail, the natural history library, and, of course, the museum itself.

Her day, in the handsome, rambling little museum with its window walls opening on the woods, is a combination of scientific projects and regular interruptions.

Two children come by to look at the posted list of events to watch for this week — the major flower to bloom, a bird and butterfly to watch for.

Then there's a woman with a bucketful of Armillaria mellea, a small genus of popular mushroom that, among other things, spread root rot in oaks. But they are delicious done in butter, or with a steak. Ms. Nestel looks carefully through the bucket. All good, she tells the caller, who calls them cinnamon tops.

She has a large clientele, she says, of women who have listened to the lectures and become committed gatherers. She urges them to bring their findings to her for confirmation, until the edible varieties are positively learned, one at a time.

Ms. Nestel has become a notable natural scientist, one who learned without schooling, an academic outside of formal academia, a scholar who first knew without schooling. One of the first things was articulated elsewhere by Ernest Swift: "I cannot abide human beings who think they can be on the earth without being of the earth; we are all in this together."

Swift, one of the giants of America's ecological awakening, began his career as a game warden in this land of wild hills, beautiful lakes and long winters; his exploits are part of the local folklore.

Ms. Nestel's father brought his family to this northwestern corner of Wisconsin, where the thin soil barely covers the ancient granite bedrock, to wrest a farm from the stump fields left after the great pine forests were logged.

She remembers they planted potatoes around the stumps that were six feet high because they were cut when the snow was deep, and some six feet across. There was no way to pull such stumps in the land booms of the '20s; they could only be burned.

"Smoke was a part of my life as a child," she says. "People trying to burn off pasture and space for fields. I recall especially the pitch pines, the fire would burn down through the root system, burning for years, and afterward the potholes filled with water. It was heartbreaking to see all the work put in on land not fit for farming by people too broke to leave."

"My mother knew a few mushrooms, and in those hard times when we were trying to scabble a living from a farm where no farm should have been, we learned to find anything that was edible in the woods."

Thus began two of what now are her major specialties: the mushrooms of the north, and edible plants of the woods. The Forest Log Nature Library was established in Cable just when she began to read on her own, in 1925. In good time, she acquired a technical competence in botany. Then ornithology. Then zoology — mammalogy and entomology, the branch that deals with insects. More, and still more to be done. "I have a terrible gift of curiosity," she says. "I can't stand it when I run up against something that I don't know. So I keep on digging until I find the correct information, whatever it is."

Now the academically-trained naturalists cherish her. Wildlife ecologist Burt Dahlberg and George Knudsen, Wisconsin's chief naturalist, helped lay out the two-mile Nature Trail on 240 acres eight miles east of town. George Archibald, founder of the International Crane Foundation, is on her lecture series. Financial support has been steady through the years, even though the burden has not been enormous, compared with expenses of larger foundations. Until this year, total operating expenses have never been more than $25,000 a year.

The museum exhibits are designed so that the visitor walks through them, becomes a part of them. There are songbirds awing, an osprey caught in midstoop above the beaver pond. "He drowned," she says sadly. "He dove and fastened his talons in a musky and the fish was too much for him. He either could not or would not open his fins, and the fish took him under water and drowned him. I am never sure which. Afterward, the fish died too."

There is always more to do — a new lecture series to plan for another year, a new wildlife exhibit, repairs to be made where young vandals broke in one night and tore apart a meticulously constructed beaver pond community. And, suddenly, a young grosbeak making a thunk as it struck the window, to be picked up and restored to life.

Did she not even think of taking her remarkable skills elsewhere, to a museum that would reward her more substantially?

No, she says. Never. Not at all. You know what she is going to say then: "I do not do it for the money." And finally, "Even if I retired, it would be right here."

Henning Creates Exciting Magic!!

If one name means magic to most people today, that name is Doug Henning. He's the only man of modern times who can possibly be compared to the great Houdini. In his fifteen years as a professional magician, Doug has taken what was a dying art performed at children's parties and in nightclubs and revived it as a popular theatrical art form.

Now the master illusionist returns for his sixth television special, "Doug Henning's World of Magic," airing Sunday, Feb. 15 (7-8 p.m.), on NBC. Joining him are mime artists Robert Shields and Lorraine Yarnell, Marie Osmond and Ricky Schroder.

Henning is planning 25 illusions, and seven of these are completely originals that have never been performed on TV.

"When I first started, I called myself an illusionist, because no one wanted a magician," Doug said. "Being a magician then was like being a folk-singer, before Bob Dylan. People thought folk-singers sang sea shanties and magicians told corny jokes and pulled wrinkled scarves out of tubes. As I became better known, I called myself a magician again.

"I would like to elevate the term, 'magician,' so that when people think of a magician they will think of him as a truly great artist," said Henning.

Magic, as far as he is concerned, isn't doing tricks.

"A performer who does tricks just presents puzzles to be figured out," he continued. "This inspires mainly curiosity. What I am trying to do, as a magician, is to create mysteries to be experienced with wonder. My purpose is to uplift audiences and enlighten them."

Henning sees magic as "a metaphor for the real magic in the world.

"In watching my magic, people hopefully come to realize that there is more to what they see than meets the senses," he explained.

Henning is concerned with nothing less than the perception of reality through expanded consciousness. This, he believes, will lead to enlightenment.

As a true master of illusion, Doug Henning has made magic fans of all of us. But more than that, his superb performance of his art has helped us renew our wonder for magic of the world around us. And that accomplishment, more than applause or Emmys, is perhaps the greatest accomplishment to Doug Henning, the man and the magician.

DOUG HENNING once again stars in his own special "Doug Henning's World of Magic," airing Sunday, Feb. 15 (7-8 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Vaccaro Replaced
Patrice Townsend has replaced Brenda Vaccaro in "National Lampoon Goes to the Movies."

JOHN BELUSHI is featured in "Animal House," airing for the first time Sunday, Feb. 15 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Belushi Causes Mayhem

The National Lampoon, a long-time favorite reading material for millions of college students, came to life a few years ago in the Universal release, titled "National Lampoon's Animal House." Now the film's coming on television as the NBC Big Event Sunday, Feb. 15 (8-10 p.m.).

The setting is the campus of a small private college, and the focus is on two fraternity houses. One is an organization of well-groomed, suave students who are destined to become successful executives and professional men, while the other is an absolute hell-hole that various faculty members have labeled the "animal house."

John Belushi stars as a puckish, unshaven prophet of mayhem, and although he only has a half-dozen speaking lines, he lets his glazed eyes and wild actions speak for him.

The rest of the cast supports Belushi well. Tim Matheson ably plays the frat brother who manages to seduce the dean's wife (Verna Bloom) over the vegetable bin in a local grocery store, and Donald Sutherland manages to capture the tweed-jacketed college instructor to a T.

Gayle To Help
Crystal Gayle will be one of the performing artists participating in the Country Music Radiothon for the National Kidney Foundation, airing nationwide on about 200 stations March 7-8.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: I'd like to know something about Catherine Bach, who plays Daisy Duke on "The Dukes of Hazzard." T. HIATT, MT. AIRY, N.C.

A: Catherine Bach, of German-Mexican parentage, was born in Ohio, but grew up in Southern California. Her first time before the cameras was with a small part in a Leslie Caron film, "The Widow," and later movies include "The Midnight Man," "Thunderbolt and Lightfoot" and "Hustle." She also guested on several series prior to being cast as the comely lass on "Dukes." Cathy's also an accomplished ballet and jazz dancer, loves to travel and would rather entertain small groups of friends in her home in the San Fernando Valley than "go out on the town."

Q: How old is Todd Bridges, who plays on "Diff'rent Strokes"? Does he have any brothers and sisters? F. MOORE, BLOUNTS CREEK, N.C.

A: Todd, who'll be 15 years old May 27, is from an all-show business family. Mom Betty is an actress who also heads a drama academy, and his dad is an agent. His older brother and sister are actors, too. In fact, Todd's sister, Verda, is his stand-in on "Strokes." The teenager believes he's been extremely lucky to have worked with only the "nicest" stars. "When I was in 'Fish,' I thought Abe Vigoda was the most wonderful man a kid could work with. Now that I'm doing 'Strokes,' I think the same about Conrad Bain," he explains.

Q: I recently saw David Birney in "Testimony of Two Men." Will you tell me a little about him? M. CARTER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Birney has been active in television for a number of years, but he's probably best know for his two series, "Serpico" and "Bridget Loves Bernie." An interesting sidelight to the "Bridget" series is that the two stars, Birney and Meredith Baxter, married each other in real life! They now live in Santa Monica, Calif., with their four-year-old daughter, Kate, and two children by Meredith's previous marriage.

Q: Who played Paul McCartney in the telefilm "Birth of the Beatles"? D.M., TAR HEEL, N.C.

A: Rod Culbertson played Paul, and he's the only member of the cast who was married at the time the movie was being made. He has been a Beatle fan since age 14, is the son of one of the Five Singing Smith Brothers, and started playing the ukulele when he was only three. His other TV credits include a small role in the "S.O.S. Titanic" film.

Comic Likes Being On Road

Bill Rafferty travels a lot, but life on the road as the roving reporter for NBC-TV's "Real People" is never boring.

On one recent eight-day trip, for example, Rafferty visited: a bikini factory in Florida; a chimpanzee that teaches karate in North Carolina; a lover of vampire bats in Ohio; and a man who keeps a pet alligator in his Chicago apartment.

"Being on the road's a lot of fun. I love the spontaneity," he says. "Everywhere we go seems like home because everybody treats us so nice. People really identify with the show, and they're genuinely interested in everyone we profile."

Rafferty says finding new subjects for the hit series is never a problem, "because everybody wants to be on TV. As long as there is life left on the planet, we will never run out of material."

"As a parent I think Northern California is a better place to raise children," he says. "And as a performer, I've seen a lot of comics move down to L.A. and starve. In San Francisco there's not the constant pressure to always be great. You have a chance to learn your craft and develop an act without always worrying whether a producer's in the crowd."

Like most entertainers, Rafferty supported himself during the lean years by holding a conventional job — ever since his high school days in his native New York City when he was a professional bill collector.

Birney Starring

David Birney is starring in "The Five of Me," a drama about a man tormented by a multiple personality, now in production in Los Angeles for future broadcast on CBS-TV.

Dee Wallace, Mitchell Ryan, John McLiam, James Whitmore Jr., and Judith Chapman are other headliners in the film which is based on the book of the same title and based on a true case history.

"When you win, people are fawning all over you," says Keith Erickson, who played on the 1971-1972 Los Angeles Lakers championship team. "It's difficult to remain humble, to think the team is the thing and it's not just you." Erickson is now the Lakers' broadcaster.

Rogers Enjoys Life

George Rogers is fresh from winning the Heisman Trophy, and now its time for him to enjoy life a little before the National Football League draft decides his future for the next several years.

ABC has grabbed Rogers for its Superstars competition. Rogers will be competing against athletes from other sports Sunday, Feb. 15 at 2 p.m.

The Superstars competition has been a combination of athletic event and Hollywood Showcase all at the same time. The program has been eminently successful during its run on ABC and has spawned other shows of the same variety on other networks.

This will be a preliminary competition, and will run for several weeks on ABC television. Grabbing Rogers for this event was a coup for Roone Arledge.

This June, Rogers will graduate from South Carolina, a school he put on the map so to speak because of his prowess on the football field. 1980 was the year of the Southern running back with Rogers of South Carolina grabbing the Heisman Trophy and Herschel Walker of Georgia grabbing honors in his freshman season.

Rogers was the top college rusher of all time, surpassing even the amazing statistics of Tony Dorsett, now a highly thought of running back for the Dallas Cowboys.

Whoever gets Rogers in the draft is probably thinking franchise, much in the way the Houston Oilers were thinking when they got Earl Campbell. Campbell proved his worth early to the Oilers, and helped them to three consecutive playoff berths.

Billy Sims was another franchise making running back. He took the Detroit Lions to within one game of the NFC playoffs, and with a little luck, they might have made it.

There have been reports that the New Orleans Saints will snap up Rogers in the upcoming pro football draft. It might be a wise move. The Saints have recently named O.A. 'Bum' Phillips their head coach, and he has a way of getting things out of highly touted running backs. If the Saints do pick up Rogers, the 1-15 season of 1980 just might be turned around for a couple of years.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — The latest guy to fall head-over-heels for "THAT'S INCREDIBLE" co-host CATHY LEE CROSBY is a handsome French millionaire, CLAUDE RAVIER. He thinks the gal's absolutely...incredible!

MATT DILLON's performance in "LIAR'S MOON" is so terrific that the 16-year old is now being referred to as "Hollywood's youngest leading man."

CATHERINE BACH is being wooed to star in a film titled "RETURN OF BILLY THE KID," which will be filmed while she's on hiatus from "DUKES OF HAZZARD."

On the other hand, the romance between GLEN CAMPBELL and TANYA TUCKER seems to have hit a sour note, and they may not make it to the altar after all. Friends are hoping, however, that they'll kiss and make up so they, too, can be wed Feb. 14th.

In an effort to break out of his "INCREDIBLE HULK" role, BOU FERRIGNO grew a beard during the show's hiatus over the holidays. Now he's hoping casting agents will take a second look and realize he can do something besides crash through walls, etc.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question on a postcard, to Ask, Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE LES ASPIN (D-Wis.)

Why did you disagree with the Government's Fish Reclassification Project's mission to rename fish with unappetizing names such as hogsucker, viperfish, stump-knocker, and toadfish? — E.J. Gold, New York, N.Y.

● I don't disagree at all with the idea of renaming fish with nauseating names. What I have protested is a Government program that has spent a small fortune and many years in "studying" the issue without renaming any fish. This is a superlative example of the worst of bureaucracy in action or, rather, in inaction. By all means, let's rename the fish that the seafood industry thinks consumers avoid because of the names, but don't spend half a decade and reams of paper before coming up with a new name.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What was the serious injury that Shelley Duval sustained during the filming of Popeye? — W.O., Fort Smith, Ark.

● We made enquiries and all we could come up with was this: For her role of "Olive Oyl," Shelley was dressed up in long, flat block-toed shoes. Not too long after she started wearing them, she experienced pain in her calves — caused by the strain of wearing such shoes for long periods — so they were bandaged up to give her additional support. Of course, there were the usual amount of minor mishaps, but nothing of a "serious" nature. Incidentally, Shelley feels that she and this role were tailor-made for each other. "At school I was nicknamed 'Olive Oyl,'" she said. "At 14, I was a string bean — 5 feet 8 inches. And I haven't grown since then."

Next to spinach, Popeye's favorite.

FOR SUZANNE MITCHELL, vice president and director, Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders, Inc.

When a girl wants to be a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader, what are the first things you notice that are in her favor? — L. C., San Leandro, Calif.

● I can watch two young ladies walking and talking together, and one will immediately strike me as being a prospective Dallas Cowboys cheerleader, and the other may not. The way she carries herself when she walks and her poise are what catch my eye.

FOR WILLIAM F. GALLAGHER, executive director, American Foundation for the Blind, Inc.

How do blind people in underdeveloped countries manage without the benefit of modern technology? — R.S., Asbury Park, N.J.

● In many instances, as best they can. However, many of these nations are working to improve life opportunities for their blind citizens. At AFB we receive many delegations annually from countries around the world who are visiting the U.S. to observe and learn.

FOR ROCK BRYNNER, author of The Ballad of Habit and Accident

How alike — and different — are you from your father, Yul Brynner? — E.B., Casper, Wyo.

● Now we are alike in many ways because he taught me so much. As an actor, he taught me discipline in the theater. As an artist, he taught me to trust my imagination. As a gypsy, he taught me always to park in a getaway position. But I am not nearly as methodical or organized as he, though I am trying.

FOR DR. LAURA J. SINGER, author of Stages: The Crises That Shape Your Marriage

Is there such a thing as marital bliss? — H.W., Greeley, Colo.

● Marital bliss? There may be wonderful moments of temporary bliss, but a solid, long-term marriage requires the partners to meet the challenges of life shoulder-to-shoulder. Out of my experience with counseling couples over the past two decades, I've learned that expectations of "bliss" are likely to lead to disappointment.

FOR CATHERINE BACH, star of CBS-TV's The Dukes of Hazard

Since you are a poster girl, I'd like to know whom you admire, now, and who were your pin-ups when you were young? — S.J., Burlington, Vt.

● It was Elvis when I was 8. Then The Beatles. But I never had their posters plastered all over my walls. Today I admire Congresswoman Pat Schroder, for what she has accomplished; and Angela Lansbury, my wonderful mother-in-law.

FOR BOB BARKER, host of TV's The Price Is Right

Do you follow any special routine to keep your youthful appearance? — D.S., Caldwell, Idaho

● I converted my garage into a gym and use it every day. Since you have remarked on my "youthful" appearance, it would appear that I did the right thing in taking this drastic step of putting myself first, before my car. If my workouts are helping me, they are certainly doing nothing for my auto, which sits out front in all kinds of weather and looks awful.

PRO Robert J. Myers, National Commission on Social Security

Yes, and many experts believe that this should be done gradually beginning in the year 2000. It would take place over 12 years. Such delay is necessary so that people have sufficient notice to make their retirement plans. This change properly reflects the increase in longevity in the past 40 years. The result would be a payroll tax rate at least 2 percent lower than would otherwise be necessary. The nation and its younger workers cannot afford the luxury of early retirement for healthy persons in their early and mid-60's.

PRO AND CON

Should the Social Security Retirement Age Be Raised to 68?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON James M. Hacking, American Association of Retired Persons

No. It would substantially decrease or eliminate benefits for persons between ages 62 and 65 who are involuntarily unemployed or physically unable to work. Impaired health is a major reason for early retirement. The continuing early retirement trend, especially among minorities, indicates that, instead of getting additional work effort, and thus additional tax revenue from the future elderly, raising the age for full benefits would merely cut future Social Security expenditures leaving a large segment of the elderly to subsist in poverty on greatly reduced benefits.

We're looking for people to write children's books

Writing for children is the perfect way to take up writing, says the author of 53 children's books. Your ideas come right out of your own experience. And while it's still a challenge, it's probably the straightest possible line between you and publication — if you're qualified to seek the success this rewarding field offers.

By Alvin Tresselt, Dean of Faculty

If you want to write and get published, I can't think of a better way to do it than writing books and stories for children and teenagers. Ideas flow naturally right out of your own life experience. While it's still a challenge, the odds of getting that first unforgettable check from a juvenile publisher are better than they are from just about any other kind of publisher I know.

Later on, you may get other checks from other publishers. But right now, the object is to begin — to break into print — to learn the feeling of writing and selling your work and seeing your name in type. After that, you can decide if you want your writing to take another direction.

But after 30 years of editing, publishing, and teaching — and 53 books of my own — I can tell you this: you'll go a long way before you discover anything as rewarding as writing for young readers.

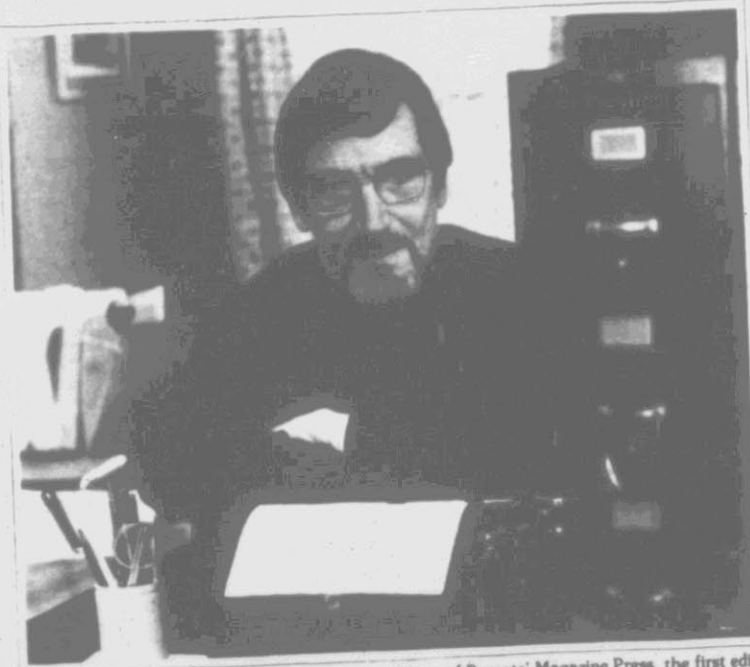

Your words will never sound as sweet as they do from the lips of a child reading your books and stories. And the joy of creating books and stories that young people 'really dig' is an experience you'll never have anywhere else. (In this age of boob tube illiteracy, convenient morality, and plastic values, do you know of a more important audience?)

But, that's not all. The financial rewards go far beyond most people's expectations because there's a surprisingly big market out there for writers who are trained to crack it. More than 130 million young people's books are purchased each year. Between 2,000 and 2,500 new titles appear annually and new authors account for as many as half of them.

There are also 250 monthly magazines looking for material for young readers. You can imagine how much writing it takes just to keep them going!

'Am I really qualified?'

Yet two big questions bedevil nearly every would-be writer: "Am I really qualified?" and "How can I get started?"

Alvin Tresselt was Vice President and Executive Editor of Parents' Magazine Press, the first editor of Humpty Dumpty's Magazine for Children, and has served on the board of the Author's Guild. His 53 books for young readers have sold over two million copies.

This is our definition of a "qualified person": It's someone with an aptitude for writing who can take constructive criticism, learn from it, and turn it into a professional performance. That's the only kind of person we're looking for. The reasons are simple: our reputation is built on success, and if prospective students don't have the earmarks of success, we probably can't help them. And we tell them so. It's only fair to both of us.

To help us spot potential authors, we've developed a revealing test for writing aptitude. It's free, and we don't charge for our evaluation. But no one gets into the Institute without passing it. Those who pass and enroll receive our promise: You will complete at least one manuscript ready to submit to a publisher by the time you finish the Course.

When we teach, you learn

I've learned a lot about writing for children and I love it. Now I'm passing my knowledge on to my students so they can profit from it. When I'm not writing my own children's books I spend my time at The Institute of Children's Literature, a workshop for writers that does only one thing and does it better than any other educational institution I know of: It trains qualified people to write for the young reader.

This is the way I work with my students, and my fellow instructors — all of whom are experienced writers or editors — work more or less the same way.

When you're ready — at your own time and your own pace — you send your assignment to me and I read it and reread it to get everything out of it you've put into it. Then I edit your assignment with a red pencil just the way a publishing house editor would — if he had the time. I return it along with a detailed letter explaining my editorial comments. I tell you what your strong points are, what your weaknesses are, and just what you can do to improve. It's a matter of push and pull. You push and I pull and between us both, you learn to write.

The proof of the pudding

proof of the pudding is that many of our students break into print even before they finish the Course.

Kathleen Huber, New York, N.Y., writes: "Regarding my sale to Highlights for Children for $125, it started out as a story assignment for the Institute, and Highlights was only the second magazine I had sent it to. Certainly your Course made this sale possible. It may be the best investment I ever made."

A.M. Hummel, Danville, Pa., writes "When Highlights for Children accepted my short story — Assignment #8 in the Course, and sent me a $65 check, I could hardly believe it! Then, within a week, I got another check and a go-ahead assignment for a second piece."

'I won first prize of $400 for a Course assignment!'

"Before taking your Course (which I checked out with the National Better Business Bureau), the short stories I scribbled for my two tiny tots never caught an editor's fancy," writes Emily Burns of Salem, Oregon.

"My first sale, to National Catholic Weekly, was a Course assignment. Then I submitted another Course assignment in a creative writer's competition and won first prize of $400!"

Free Writing Aptitude Test offered

At 77, Bob Hope Is Still The King of Comedy

He's cheered troops through three wars, inspired countless comics and lit up the stage for six decades. Surely, Hope springs eternal.

By Mark Goodman

Starting out as a dancer

The Hopes and two of their children

Lamour delouse Crosby and Hope in the Road to Bali.

"Hello, Hope!" It is a serious temptation, to an interviewer who first tuned in Bob Hope on the radio during the 40's, to greet him with the celebrated salutation of his old sidekick, Jerry Colonna. But who wants to try to upstage Hope? Listen to him: "Those were exciting times, during the war, touring all those bases with Colonna and Frances Langford. Lemme tell you a story."

Hope settles in: "We were over in North Africa, and we were going to dedicate a bunch of nightclubs for a B-26 crew. So of course that meant hitting each club for a few drinks. Well, as the evening wore on I got pretty loaded. I was sitting with the skipper, this Colonel Austin, and there are two or three drinks in my hand, my feet propped up on a table, a flyer's cap sitting sideways on my head. I said, 'Colonel, I'm going to Italy with you tomorrow.'

"So the colonel looks at me and says, 'You can't do that, Mr. Hope. We're bombing Italy tomorrow.' I said, 'What the hell, I'm going to Italy with you anyway.'

"So the colonel got kinda white and went off to call the general. He came back a few minutes later, leaned on the table and whispered, 'The general says to put down the glasses and go home.'"

The next day, cold sober, Hope wasn't so courageous. "Can you imagine," Hope asks, "me waking up the next morning and finding myself over Italy?"

Well, come to think of it, it's easy enough to imagine Bob Hope, as he homes in on his 78th birthday, waking up and finding himself in the skies over just about anyplace. How many millions of miles has he flown? He has no idea, of course. But he has a very sharp remembrance of the moment it all began.

"Yeah, it was back in 1928," Hope says. "I was in St. Paul, Minn., playing vaudeville with a team called Evans and Maher, and I went up for a spin in the cockpit of this beat-up biplane. Boy, that was something, hanging on to the side and skimming over those trees... Little did I know I'd someday be flying piggyback over Africa."

Or Sicily or Iceland or Alaska or Korea or Vietnam, anywhere there were lonely GI's or a hospital full of kids or just an audience ready and waiting to be plucked by the master. "Thanks very much, and I wanna tell ya..." became a catch-phrase that has echoed round the world for nearly half a century, a promise of warmth and the respite of laughter. The audience may be comprised of folks lured off the street into a television studio or a bunch of pilots huddled in a shack in some wasted tundra or thousands of homesick soldiers in a vast jungle amphitheater. Or it can be just one interviewer, for that's all it takes to trigger the comic mechanism of Bob Hope. Even dressed up in a sober suit befitting a multimillionaire businessman, Hope is our eternal baggy-pants clown, and he is always on.

"Sure, I give autographs everywhere I go," he says. "I hate to see 'em leave. I give real autographs, too, not like Wayne used to do. When people would bother him, the Duke would pull a slip of paper out of his pocket with his name on it and hand it to them." Pause, beat; on to the next gag. "But I sometimes scare people — especially without makeup. A nice old woman stopped me recently and said, 'Are you real?' 'No, lady,' I said. 'I'm on tape.'"

Hope was born Leslie Townes Hope in Eltham, England, the son of a country stonemason. The Hopes migrated to the U.S. and settled in Cleveland when Leslie was 4. His father's signal contribution to American architecture was the building of the Euclid Avenue Presbyterian Church in Cleveland. "That," says Hope, "is when we switched from the Episcopal Church."

There was a strain of the stage in the family blood; Hope's mother was a concert singer who took young Leslie to see comedian Frank Fay and announced to her son in a loud voice: "He's not half as good as you are." Armed with his new name (it sounded better for the stage) and the patter he picked up from his father, Hope began playing the Cleveland vaudeville houses, and it is vaudeville that shaped Hope's style like a putty nose. For vaudeville operated on a principle of fear. If you didn't get a laugh on one line, you'd better get one the next or you'd be pilloried by catcalls and the dreaded hook.

In 1927 Hope wangled his way onto a Broadway show called Sidewalks of New York with Ruby Keeler. This was during the rococo reign of New York City Mayor Jimmy Walker, who was known occasionally to totter buoyantly to a nightclub stage and sing that very song in top hat and cane (a scene Hope himself would later create in his one semiserious film performance as Walker in Beau James).

In New York Hope found another model of sorts — columnist Walter Winchell, he of the "Good-morning-Mr.-and-Mrs.-America-and-all-the-ships-at-sea" school of machine-gun reporting. Says Hope: "Winchell knew that a long column bored people, so he wrote a lot of fast, short ones. When I started out, people said I talked the way Winchell wrote. It

Bob Hope

Entertaining the troops

The Reagans and the Hopes

was the smarter, more sophisticated way to go. You know, 'Good evening, ladies and gentlemen, this is Bob Pepsodent Hope [Pepsodent was his radio show's sponsor], living by the skin of my teeth.' First I'd run away from them, they'd laugh, and then I'd pause for them. It was an overlapping runaway style."

While playing in Roberta, Hope was taken to a Manhattan cabaret by a fellow actor from the show, a hooper named George Murphy. He wanted Hope to catch a singer, Dolores Reade. Hope caught her, all right, and they've been married now for 46 years, the proud parents of the most celebrated adopted children in the land. Linda, 41, works for Hope Enterprises and produced one of his two recent specials for NBC. (Tony, 40, is an attorney, Kelly, 33, runs a museum in San Francisco, and Nora, also 33, is a housewife. There are four grandchildren.)

Life with Hope on the road hasn't always been easy for Dolores. But as Hope says, "She's been with me all these years. She knows. And I take her along whenever we can manage it." The road show began when Hope and Dolores went to Hollywood in the mid-30s, when director Mitchell Leisen spotted him and put him in a movie called The Big Broadcast of 1938. One of the numbers from that film: a song called "Thanks for the Memories."

Among the fondest of the memories Hope still carries are for the fabled seven Road pictures he made with Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour. "All those wartime performances, they were really exciting," Hope recalls. "But the Road pictures were the most fun of all. I really miss them. Bing and I had that chemistry that's so hard to find in this business. Boy, I knew his style and tempo so well. We were all set to do one more, The Road to the Fountain of Youth, when he passed away."

But before that, there were devilish, delightful roads to Morocco and Rio and Singapore along the way, and these movies made the pair national monuments. They sang, they giped, they fought over Lamour. They even danced, for Hope and Crosby were regular recipients of the old Hollywood award that went annually to the best amateur hooper.

"They used to say," Hope muses, "that I could milk a joke, but Jack Benny could get chicken fat out of it."

Now Hope has seen Bing pass on — as he has seen the Duke die, as he has delivered the eulogy for his old pal and comic rival, Jack Benny. "They used to say," he muses, "that I could milk a joke, but Benny could get chicken fat out of it." And if Hope became our wisecracking pied piper, there was a troubled moment when the children did not dance to his tune. That was during the Vietnam war, when angry youth blasted Hope as a hawk. It is the one memory which rankles him. "I didn't carry bullets with me when I went to Vietnam," he says. "I didn't care what they said, I couldn't let those boys down over there. Look, no one's more antiwar than the guy who's actually doing the fighting — or the guy who's seen as much bloodshed as I have."

Now, however, the war is just a distant throb in the national psyche, and Bob Hope endures. They love him on the campuses once more; he holds more than 30 honorary degrees to complement the 1,000 or so awards and citations for humanitarian and professional efforts. With his rolling eyes and rabbit-punch cracks, Hope set the style for two generations of American comics.

Bob Hope is incontestably the richest ex-vaudevillian ever to wink and leer at an audience. Indeed, he's one of the richest men in the history of the republic. Hope Enterprises, Inc. is itself a thriving conglomerate with interests ranging from television to real estate. He is the largest single property owner in the state of California and pays more than $1 million a year in property taxes alone. Small wonder, since 16,000 acres of bean country he once bought in the San Fernando Valley (he has since sold half for about $40 million) are now known as Sherman Oaks, Encino and Woodland Hills. Hope was once listed among the Fortune 500 companies, but he laughs over the figure Time once published estimating his bankroll at $600 million. Is that close? Hope probably doesn't really know himself, but he will admit, "I have to work hard, and I'm not kidding — to pay taxes on my property. Besides..." favorite gag line... "I've got a Government to support."

And so, the show is still on the road, almost nonstop, relieved only by his family and his permanent floating golf game. "I'm up to a 16 handicap now, and I've got a torn rotator cuff in my shoulder," he admits. And Hope is all set to make another movie. "I've been wanting to," he says, "but I couldn't pass the physical. They're doing things on the screen I didn't even dream of doing on my wedding night."

That's antediluvian humor, of course, but mythic creatures with the right delivery can get away with it. And it is a fitting irony that Hope's next and perhaps last feature film will be a biography of Walter Winchell himself. "We've had trouble getting off the ground," he says. "One screenwriter wanted to whitewash him, another wanted to make him a complete bastard. Well, Walter was a charmer and a bastard. He would come into the Copa with a broad on his arm during his divorce. I want to get the whole thing into this picture."

That will be an extraordinary labor of love, like Errol Flynn's portrayal of John Barrymore. Meanwhile, the gag lines will keep coming, rapid-fire. "Sure I'm glad to have Ronnie in the White House. I never realized what a talent he had for that sort of thing." Pause, beat. "I just wish he had a funny brother."

Hope relaxes for a moment, then picks it back up. "No, I never want to quit. There's just something so exciting about putting a great show together — it's like a great round of golf or writing something really terrific. You pull it off and then you just sit back and bask in it."

And I wanna tell ya, Hope, that if we never meet again — well, many, many thanks for the memories.

ROMANTIC DINNERS FOR TWO

A little treasury of menu ideas that will kindle your own special together times.

By Marilyn Hansen

Today, with so many of us actively sharing the economic work load, time spent together is precious, indeed. We suggest an evening set aside on a regular basis to be just for you as a needed welcome oasis for well-being and conjugal happiness. And where dinner is not possible, a special breakfast or together period after an outdoor activity, might also be deftly worked into a busy schedule.

Our companion in planning is the versatile, tempting apple whose mystique goes back to biblical times. Historically, it is believed that the "fruit" that Adam and Eve ate in the Garden of Eden was an apple. Also, the time-honored custom of bobbing for apples goes back to 18th-century Ireland. Each apple, floating in a tub of water, is named for the bobber's marriage prospects. Whichever apple the blindfolded bobber catches in the teeth reveals the future spouse.

Of course, we are all familiar with the adage, "an apple a day keeps the doctor away." When we look at the apple's own vitamin-mineral score sheet we find that it is quite good to eat and good for you as well. So, "here's to romance, here's to apples, and here's to health," a wonderfully cheery toast, indeed.

The Common Health Problem People Hate to Talk About

By Paula Dranov

It is a medical condition that affects millions of Americans. In fact, its rate of occurrence is second only to the common cold. But most people won't talk about it. They just worry.

The problem is irritable bowel syndrome or IBS, a medical term that encompasses a number of digestive disorders referred to in the past as "spastic colon," "nervous stomach" and "nervous colitis." Irritable bowel syndrome usually means alternating bouts of diarrhea and constipation, often accompanied by some abdominal pain.

Almost everyone has suffered from one or more of these symptoms. And as a nation we tend to be much more alarmed by them than doctors say we should be. The American Digestive Disease Society has stated: You are not constipated just because you don't have a daily bowel movement.

However, frequent constipation is not normal. If there is a sudden change in normal patterns, you may have IBS.

Irritable bowel syndrome comes in two forms: acute IBS stemming from a specific incident such as overeating, food poisoning or the misuse of antibiotics; and chronic IBS, a recurrent set of symptoms usually associated with emotional upheavals and aggravated by poor eating habits, irregular bowel function and overuse of laxatives.

One authority in the field, Dr. J. Loren Pitcher, medical director of the University of New Mexico Hospital, defines IBS as a chronic illness in which the same symptoms appear time after time. There's little doubt that the onset is associated with stress or in some cases with depression — most patients are otherwise in good health.

IBS occurs twice as often in women as in men, and while most patients are middle-aged, children suffer, too. In fact, recurrent abdominal pain is believed to be the childhood equivalent of IBS and is most common among youngsters whose parents have gastrointestinal disorders.

Exactly how stress triggers IBS symptoms is not yet understood, although doctors now think susceptible individuals have slight intestinal abnormalities which somehow alter the rhythm of the colon during stress or even after a big meal.

There is no diagnostic test available, so although a doctor may suspect IBS on the basis of a patient's complaints, the only way to confirm it is via the process of elimination. Dr. Joseph B. Kirsner, professor of medicine at the University of Chicago, noted in a recent medical symposium on the subject that the most important aim is to "eliminate as far as possible any concern the patient might have regarding a cancer or other serious disease." This means a thorough physical examination as well as laboratory tests and a frank discussion of symptoms, eating habits, daily routine and stressful experiences.

Treatment isn't clear-cut, either. There's no drug that cures IBS, and, unfortunately, explanations of the relationship between stress and IBS symptoms have little long-range impact on the disorder. Doctors William E. Whitehead and Marvin M. Schuster of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine suggest that relaxation exercises may help control the tension that triggers recurrences in many victims of chronic IBS. Antidepressants may be prescribed when depression is identified as the culprit.

Changes in diet may help, too. Doctors frequently recommend increasing consumption of foods high in dietary fiber. These include bran, whole grain breads and cereals and such vegetables as string beans, broccoli, brussels sprouts, celery, carrots and kale and such fruits as apples, blackberries and pears. High-fiber foods pass through the digestive system absorbing water and are now recommended for patients with a number of different digestive disorders, including IBS.

For those who suspect that they are susceptible to IBS, the American Digestive Disease Society offers these tips:

- Eat slowly and in a relaxed atmosphere.
- Chew slowly and thoroughly with your mouth closed to avoid swallowing air, which can worsen problems with intestinal gas.
- Add fiber to your diet.
- If you are using laxatives habitually, gradually wean yourself from them.

Observations

Who he? Thank you, Walter Hunt, Whitcomb L. Judson, and Dr. Washington Wentworth Sheffield. Who? Why, the inventors of the safety pin, zipper, and toothpaste tube. They're on our minds because last Wednesday, Thomas Edison's birthday, was—in case you forgot—National Inventors Day. We're very invention-conscious these days because of ZSM-5. ZSM-what? To explain, ZSM-5 is a catalyst developed by Mobil researchers. In the years ahead, it may affect your life much more even than Levi Hutchins' invention (the alarm clock). For with ZSM-5 it's possible to convert methanol (wood alcohol) derived from coal or natural gas directly into high-octane unleaded gasoline.

White magic. ZSM-5's particles look like talcum powder—white and so tiny they seem to flow like water. But each is honeycombed with millions of microscopic pores, giving a single cupful as much surface area as 20 football fields. It's in these teeny tunnels that "magic" occurs: The "chemical water" that makes up half the weight of the methanol is wrung out, and the remaining hydrocarbon fragments are combined to form gasoline molecules.

"Oh, nothing much. Just experimenting with some rabbits."

© 1981 Drawing by Leivo

Beaten path. Said Ralph Waldo Emerson: "If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he builds his house in the woods the world will make a beaten path to his door." The whole world hasn't quite found our door yet, but New Zealand chose our methanol-to-gasoline process for a proposed facility to convert much of that country's abundant natural gas into enough fuel to meet one-third of its gasoline needs. Another version of our process will be tested in a pilot plant to be built in West Germany. And just two months ago, the Department of Energy selected a Mobil proposal for studies that could lead to construction of a 40,000-barrel-per-day coal-to-gasoline plant in the U.S.

Catalyst for conservation. The remarkable ZSM-5 catalyst is based on a series of discoveries so fundamental that university scientists call the new Mobil technology one of the most important advances in the history of catalysis. ZSM-5 not only gives America a better way to make gasoline from coal, it's also improving the manufacture of diesel fuel, lubricants, plastics, and synthetic fibers. It conserves energy because it's more efficient than other catalysts, and it saves crude oil because it upgrades heavy fuel oil into high-grade transportation fuels. That's the sort of conservation we need—the kind that comes from better technology, not bitter sacrifice.

It's a fact: Catalysts developed by Mobil, an international leader in catalysis research for three decades, are used by many companies in oil refineries and chemical plants around the world.

Racing's Lyn St. James: Living in the Fast Lane

By Michael Scott

From her first game of "chicken," with white-knuckled, disbelieving boys cringing beside her, to her days racing a souped-up Mustang around the track, Lyn St. James has been an uncommon woman — er, person.

"I do not choose to be a common man," reads a placard that hangs on the wall of her auto-parts shop in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "It is my right to be uncommon. If I can, I seek opportunity, not security."

St. James is a race-car driver. There's about as much security in a hurtling race car as there is in a flash flood. The opportunity she sees is studded with dollar signs and pasted on the slick pages of racing magazines. "I want to be rich," St. James, fessional race. Higher even than her friend and rival, Indy 500 entry Janet Guthrie.

St. James is driving for the top of auto racing's macho world.

Unlike Guthrie, however, St. James has no immediate plans of racing at Indy — the crown jewel of motor-racing events. For one thing, St. James drives standard sports cars; the Indy involves custom-made specials — more like planes than cars. And besides, as Lyn points out, "I would want to be competitive. I don't want to try it just because I'm a woman."

Born Evelyn Cornwall, Lyn (she took her last name a few years ago from actress Susan) is a striking woman with soft pretty eyes and big, straight, white teeth which she flashes often. Her brown hair is cut in a shag. She wears touches of gold.

Except for some drag racing with male friends as a teen-ager, St. James has not led a life that would seem to pave the way to racing stardom. A small-town upbringing in Willoughby, Ohio. Music school, piano teaching, a stint as a stenographer for U.S. Steel, a job in an electronics firm, marriage.

It was because of husband John Carusso, who also races, that St. James went to driving school. "I was along for the ride," she says, "but I was so taken by it. I loved it... When I get in a race car, I feel good. I am where I should be."

So the graduate of the Andrews School for Girls turned to the speed and grime of the racing world, first in tandem with Carusso, then solo. (Divorced last year, she and Carusso remain friends and work just two blocks apart. Now, her cars and auto-parts business are "all-consuming.")

With that taste of success at Road Atlanta and another impressive spin at the grueling 24-hour Nürburgring race in West Germany, St. James is gearing for a spot at the top in road racing. Only a few make it there — to the fertile land of corporate sponsors, endorsements and wealth. Although St. James says, "I'll never be a world champion," she insists her age is right and says she knows that patience and determination are profitable co-drivers on the circuit.

"She's proven herself," says fellow driver Dan Courtney. "She hasn't proven she's a great driver. She has proven she deserves a chance. She's smooth and technically she's a very good driver. She drives aggressively, more like a man."

Last fall, when she raced again at Road Atlanta, she finished eighth. But again she was the first woman.

For St. James, that was not a victory.

"If I had been a man," she notes, "would they have cared? One thing I do resent is when I do something well but only get publicity because I'm a woman. More than anything, I want recognition for what I've deserved."

RECAPTURING A SIMPLER PLACE AND TIME

THE COUNTRY STORE THIMBLES

A collection of twenty-five fine porcelain thimbles recalling America's golden days.
Each thimble hand-decorated with 24 karat gold.

Available exclusively from Franklin Porcelain
Please order by February 28, 1981

There was always a wood-burning stove, a large cracker barrel and a long wooden counter piled high with bolts of calico and flannel... It was the Country Store. Perhaps the most American of all establishments—and certainly a symbol of some of the most carefree years America has known.

Now you can recapture the simple pleasures of that time—with a very special collection of twenty-five fine porcelain thimbles, bearing original artwork based on the official trademarks of twenty-five companies whose names were household words here in America around the turn of the century. Here are the two "Campbell's Soup Kids"... the Heinz Pickles shield... the two little chicks on the Bon Ami box... each design based on the actual packages and advertisements that our grandparents recognized in the Country Store.

An American collecting tradition

Both individually and as a collection, The Country Store Thimbles provide a fascinating trip back in time—adding a new dimension to an American collecting tradition. For American companies have long regarded thimbles not just as a practical household item, but also as an excellent way to advertise. So they often provided customers with thimbles marked with their company names and slogans.

Adding to their fascination, therefore, each Country Store Thimble bears an original design created exclusively for this collection—not merely a reproduction of an early package or advertisement. And each design has been fully approved for inclusion in the collection by the company involved.

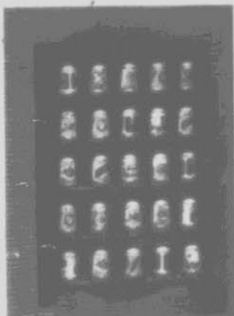

Each design will be fired on a fine porcelain thimble, encircled top and bottom with hand-painted bands of pure 24 karat gold. Each will be crafted by the master artisans of Franklin Porcelain, a Division of The Franklin Mint—and one of the very few facilities in America capable of such painstaking work.

Remarkable quality at a most reasonable price

Yet despite the care and time that must be taken with every thimble, the price for each is just $12.50. And you will receive, at no additional charge, a handsome hardwood display rack, plus specially written commentaries about each product and its maker.

The Country Store Thimbles form a collection that will be treasured by your family for generations to come as a unique reminder of a very special time in our history. But the collection is available only by direct subscription and only through Franklin Porcelain. It will be crafted exclusively for those who enter valid subscriptions for this series.

One fine porcelain thimble will be sent to you each month. But, since it will take time to craft them, it is important that the application at right be postmarked by February 28, 1981.

The Truth Behind 6 Old Wives' Tales

By Carol Ann Rinzier

Remember when you were a kid and Mom warned that if you got your feet wet, you'd get a cold? Or told you to eat your spinach because it would make you strong?

Well, as you may have learned by now, Mom was wrong about those two. The only way to get a cold is to run into a cold virus, and, in order to get all the iron you need from spinach alone, you'd have to eat twice your weight in it each year.

But though those snippets of advise are wrong, there are more than a few old wives' tales that actually are right. Here are six of them and the reasons why they are fact rather than myth.

When your ears are plugged up—swallow.

Any time the air pressure outside your head is different from the air pressure inside, you can end up with a case of temporarily plugged ears. When the air pressure is greater outside, as it can be on a really clear day or when your plane is coming in for a landing, the eardrum is forced inward. When the air pressure is greater inside the ear, as it is on a muggy day or when your plane is taking off, the eardrum bends outward. Either way, the result is that familiar popping or plugging.

Swallowing can help relieve both kinds of discomfort. If the eardrum is being forced out, swallowing can allow some of the air inside the ear to escape into your throat so that the drum returns to normal (flat). If the drum's being pushed inward, swallowing may allow you to bring air up from the throat, although this is harder to do. That's why it's recommended that you chew gum while flying.

Dogs can spread poison ivy.

Yes, indeed. Poison ivy isn't contagious per se; you can't "catch" it by touching someone who's got the itchy rash. The only way you can get it is to come in contact with the exudate (the oozy matter) of the poison ivy plant, and that's how your dog may sometimes be the troublemaker. If he's been wandering through the woods or bushes around your home and on the way has meandered through a poison ivy thicket, he may still have some of that exudate on his coat.

Touch his coat and you can transfer the exudate to your own skin. The result may be a case of poison ivy.

If you're having trouble sleeping at night, drink a glass of warm milk.

Warm milk does have a soothing effect. But there is also a chemical reason why it can send you off to dreamland: Milk and milk products contain tryptophan, an amino acid that is a natural relaxant and sedative.

Don't use anyone else's lipstick.

Or her mascara. Or his roll-on deodorant. Or anyone else's unwashed comb. These items all look innocent, but because they touch the skin, they may spread a whole host of bacterial and viral infections, such as colds, among people.

Illustrations by Mary Beatty

If your hair stands on end while you're outside during a thunderstorm—duck!

Right. That tingling on your scalp or on your skin means that the air around you is highly charged, and lightning may be about to strike. The closer to the ground you are, the less likely it is to strike you.

A good scare cures a case of the hiccups.

Hiccups are involuntary spasms of the diaphragm, and the glottis (that opening at the back of your mouth which leads into your throat).

The spasms can be set off by anything that stimulates the nerves that trigger movement of the diaphragm and glottis, and that includes eating or drinking too much or too fast or experiencing excitement that makes you breathe very quickly.

An ordinary case of hiccups usually responds to a whole panoply of home remedies, some of which go back to the Greeks. All these folk remedies—drinking "upside down" from a glass of water, swallowing a spoonful of sugar, breathing into a paper bag and being scared—are aimed at interrupting the rhythm of the spasms by making you hold your breath for a moment, and most of the time they work like a charm.

CRACKING A MYTH

Next time your mother implores you to stop cracking your knuckles before you destroy the bones in your fingers and lay the foundation for arthritis, you can politely inform her of this — cracking your knuckles doesn't involve the bones at all.

All our joints are lubricated by a fluid that contains tiny gas bubbles. When the fingers are pulled or bent at the knuckle, fluid pressure is reduced and the bubbles burst, causing the cracking sound.

And it's harmless. According to orthopedic surgeon Dr. John Nicholas of the Univ. of Pittsburgh Medical School, your knuckles may hurt after awhile, but they won't grow to elephantine size nor will they crumble the day you turn 65.

ZAPPING THE NEW ZIP

The U.S. Postal Service says it needs to institute nine-digit ZIP Codes to get the most out of its fancy new $887 million automated sorting system. But, at least according to one expert, people simply can't remember that many numbers — not without some help anyway.

Regardless of whether you're Albert Einstein or Joe Blow, it's been established that a person's short-term memory can only handle seven separate pieces of information at one time," says Ronald Salafia, a psychology professor at Fairfield University. "Our short-term memory is like a bucket. If you pour too much into it, the bottom simply falls out."

WHAT WORLD

IN THE

However, all is not lost. Salafia adds. We can learn to "chunk" groups of numbers together, allowing our memories to process three or four digits — a series of consecutive or duplicated numerals, for example — as one piece of information. And the Postal Service says that, in most cases, the new ZIP Code will consist of the old one plus four new digits. Thus, if we've already learned the five old digits, our memories will only have to handle five total items — the old ZIP and the four new digits.

DYSLEXIA: IS IT INHERITED?

Dyslexia is a puzzling reading disorder that affects up to 25 million Americans, mostly males. People suffering from the disorder, which often goes undetected, see words and letters backward and can have a great deal of trouble in school. The causes of dyslexia are unknown but have been thought to be psychological or environmental.

However, new evidence has been uncovered that the disorder

HANKY PANKY YOU CAN TRY

Take out your handkerchief, tie a knot in it. Pull on the ends to tighten the knot, and presto!, the knot is gone.

How it's done: Tie the knot as shown above. Place left thumb inside loop. Bring left forefinger over to X. Grasp hanky with these fingers, and, keeping a firm hold, draw hands apart swiftly.

A nice feature of this stunt is that a handkerchief is the only prop needed, allowing you to do your stuff almost anywhere.
