

Foreign Affairs Focus At Soviet Congress Brezhnev Asks Reagan Parley

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev made a major overture to the new U.S. administration today, calling for a summit meeting with President Reagan and a resumption of U.S.-Soviet negotiations to limit nuclear arms. But he also denounced "bellicose calls" from Washington.

He also proposed that the two superpowers limit their submarine fleets and the deployment of submarine missiles. And for the first time he said that the Soviet Union would discuss Afghanistan with the United States although only as part of talks about the demilitarization of the Persian Gulf region.

Opening the 26th congress of the Soviet Communist Party, the 74-year-old chief of the party said in a keynote address that the state of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union "and the sharpness of world problems demanding resolution ... dictate the necessity of a dialogue on all levels, an active one."

"Experience shows that the decisive element here is meetings on the highest level," he added. "That was true yesterday and remains true today."

Although he offered negotiations, Brezhnev declared that since Reagan became president "candidly bellicose calls and statements have resounded from Washington, specially designed, as it were, to poison the atmosphere of relations between our countries."

According to a Soviet journalist, Brezhnev delivered only a summary of the speech. It apparently was a concession to his age and the state of his health. Soviet television carried about six minutes of the address live then switched to a studio announcer reading the contents. Nearly five hours later, live coverage resumed and Brezhnev was shown delivering the final few pages.

No explanation was offered for the unusual procedure and Western reporters were not allowed to attend the meeting.

Referring to SALT-2, the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty which the U.S. Senate refused to consider after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and which Reagan says favors the Soviet Union, Brezhnev declared:

"For our part, we are prepared to continue the relevant negotiations with the United States without delay, preserving all the positive elements that have so far been achieved in this area. It goes without saying that negotiations can be conducted only on the basis of equality and equal security."

After a 90-second standing ovation from the 4,994 delegates in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, Brezhnev asserted that the Soviet Union is working to "preserve and deepen detente" despite "acutely" more aggressive policies of the United States.

"When thunder clouds gathered on the international horizon by the beginning of the 1980s," he said, "the Soviet Union continued to persevere in efforts to remove the threat of war and to preserve and deepen detente and acted to expand mutually beneficial cooperation with most countries of the world."

He charged that the West, not the Soviet Union, is "slowing the detente process."

Brezhnev said any talks with the United States about Afghanistan could only deal with international aspects of the situation. This apparently meant he was not prepared to discuss the legitimacy of the communist regime there.

Otherwise, he reiterated the Kremlin's previous position on Afghanistan. He defended the Soviet military intervention there, saying "the undeclared war" against the communist government posed "a direct threat to the security of our southern frontier" and "compelled" the Soviet Union to "render military aid."

"We will be prepared to withdraw the military contingent with the agreement of the Afghan government," he continued, "but before this is done, the infiltration of counter-revolutionary gangs into Afghanistan must be completely stopped."

Brezhnev also declared that "we will not abandon fraternal, socialist Poland in its hour of need. We will stick up for it. ... The Polish Communists, the Polish working class and the working people of that country can firmly rely on their friends and allies."

Although he repeated previous charges of "counter-revolutionary" activity directed against the Polish regime from outside, he said it had been compounded by "mistakes and miscalculations in home policy." He said the "Polish comrades" were working to solve these problems.

The speech focused on international affairs, but Brezhnev conceded that the Soviet Union faces "difficulties supplying the population with food."

He said "the task moving to the foreground is that of improving supplies of food and manufactured consumer goods to the population."

Brezhnev Talk Brief

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev walked steadily and spoke in a firm voice today as he opened the 26th Communist Party Congress, but the live telecast of the 74-year-old party leader's keynote speech was cut off six minutes after he began reading it and a TV announcer delivered most of the speech.

Western reporters were barred from the meeting in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, but a Soviet journalist told them Brezhnev read only a brief summary of his speech, and a TV announcer took over to speed things up.

Nearly five hours later, live television coverage from the Kremlin Palace of Congresses resumed and Brezhnev was shown delivering the final portions of the speech. Soviet television did not give a reason for the unusual procedure.

Delegates to the congress presumably were furnished copies of the long statement, it was carried by the official Soviet news agency Tass and will be printed in the country's newspapers. At the last party congress in 1976, Brezhnev read his entire speech, which took five hours and 10 minutes. There was speculation that this time he was not well enough for such an extended performance.

Brezhnev has been reported ill a number of times in recent years and often has appeared to have trouble walking and speaking. He has been rumored to have cancer, heart trouble, and to have suffered a stroke.

Soviet leaders almost always read their main report themselves at party congresses.

Didn't Pay Fee, Lost His House

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — The Rae volunteer fire department is being sued by a homeowner whose dwelling was destroyed when officials told firefighters not to fight a blaze there because he hadn't paid the fee for protection.

Harry Petroff and Farmers Union Mutual Insurance Co. have filed suit for $154,000, including $50,000 in punitive damages, accusing the department of "willful and malicious" violation of a statutory duty to fight the fire.

Firefighters were called to Petroff's house on Feb. 23, 1979, the day after the family moved in. They began putting out the blaze, but then were stopped by department officials because Petroff had not paid the fee.

ALMERIA, Spain (AP) — A U.S. helicopter crashed in southern Spain today killing its two American occupants, civil guardsmen said.

They said the helicopter crashed near Vera, a town 60 miles from Almeria, while taking part in maneuvers of the U.S. Air Force.

Reagan Pondering Aid To Highways

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is considering a 2-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to help state and local governments finance highway maintenance.

The proposal, which would raise about $2 billion annually, would need congressional approval.

Budget director David A. Stockman told the National Governors' Association on Sunday the administration may ask that states be allowed to pre-empt some or all of the additional revenues raised through an increase in the tax, which now is 4 cents a gallon.

Revenue from the gasoline tax now is earmarked for a trust fund used primarily for highway construction.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis acknowledged that Congress had rejected several Carter administration proposals to raise the tax 5 cents to 15 cents a gallon to promote conservation. But he said he thought Congress would approve the measure now as a "user tax" to finance bridge and highway maintenance programs cut in President Reagan's proposed budget for fiscal year 1982.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California criticized the proposal, saying the federal government would increase the tax as a state relief measure and then drop it, leaving the states to re-impose it as a state tax.

"Reagan would have it both ways," Brown told reporters later. "He would get benefit for providing the money for us, and we would bear the blame for the higher tax."

What Brown called the "tax shuffle," and the sparks it struck, provided a vivid example of the problems the governors face with Reagan's economic recovery program. They had an hour-long appointment with the president today to discuss their concerns.

The governors' greatest fear, as expressed in the meeting's opening sessions, is that federal programs and aid will be cut without ensuring that state and local governments will be able to absorb the blow.

"I don't want to transfer the mess in Washington to a mess in all of the states with a lot less money," said Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina.

"We appeal to you to stick with us," begged Gov. James Hunt of North Carolina. "We believe that when it gets to Congress, a lot of people are not going to want the states to have this flexibility."

The governors say they need flexibility in administering federally assisted or mandated programs, less federal regulation, consolidation of categorical grants and, most of all, assurances that programs cut by Reagan will not be dumped on them if they don't have the money to fund them.

One of the best examples is Medicaid, the medical aid program for the poor. Reagan has proposed a cut in the program this year, and a cap for the next several years well below the growth rate of medical costs.

Most states have no latitude in setting reasonable hospital rates. If they approve patient care, they have to pay whatever the hospitals charge.

As a result, Medicaid costs have soared to $30 billion a year, with the states paying 55 percent.

Supreme Court Won't Second-Guess Ruling On 'Proposition 13'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused today to second-guess an interpretation by California's highest court of Proposition 13, the state's famed 1978 tax-cutting measure.

The justices turned down an appeal from the San Diego County Board of Supervisors, who charged that the California Supreme Court interpretation defied voters' intentions.

Proposition 13, overwhelmingly approved in a state referendum June 6, 1978, limited taxes on "real property" to 1 percent of value.

starting with the tax year that began July 1, 1978.

"This measure does not mention county-assessed personal property," said an official voters' guide, "but the Legislative Council advises us that the 1 percent limit would apply to all types of taxable property."

That promise to include "all" property seemed, to many tax officials, to conflict with a provision requiring a one-year delay on any tax-rate change affecting property — usually personal property — which was not "secured" by real estate that could be seized in case of non-payment.

The auditor and the treasurer of San Diego County refused to apply Proposition 13 to this "unsecured" property for the 1978-1979 fiscal year because of the delayed-action provision.

Instead, they applied a higher tax rate called for by that provision.

Some 22 of the state's 58 counties applied the delayed-effect clause, but the San Diego County Board of Supervisors sued for immediate application of the 1 percent tax rate, claiming that some $600 million was at stake statewide.

The supervisors won in state trial and appeals courts, but the State Supreme Court last Aug. 14 reversed those decisions, ruling that the delay clause should be applied.

ORAL HISTORY KNOWLEDGE NEEDED

Response to the appeal published Dec. 18 for participants in the Pitt County Oral History project was minimal, possibly because it came just as school was closing and people were generally busy with Christmas preparations.

Claire Pittman said county students are still in need of interviews with older members of their community about how things used to be. The topics can include crafts, farming practices, superstitions, legends, folk cures and remedies, weather lore, games, ad infinitum. Anyone having photographs of historic interest would especially be welcomed.

A man who fell from a ledge above the highest bleachers in Minges Coliseum to concrete pavement on the ground outside Saturday night during the Jimmy Buffett concert apparently was only slightly injured, East Carolina University Assistant Chief of Police Francis Eddings said.

Eddings said Joseph E. Bass, 18, of Rt. 1, Rocky Mount was apparently situated on a non-load-bearing ledge about 12 feet above and behind the highest bleachers during the concert being attended by approximately 6,000 persons when the concrete under him gave way. He fell through insulation and other materials to the ground outdoors. Greenville rescue personnel were only about 40 to 50 feet away from him and were almost instantaneously on the scene, Eddings said. Bass was alert the whole time and was quickly transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, he said. The rescue call was logged at 9:38 p.m.

"At 11 a. m. that night, emergency room people told me he seemed to be okay but was still being checked," Eddings said.

Congress Begins On Reagan Plan

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress begins intensive work this week on President Reagan's economic proposals with Democrats vowing not to rubber-stamp them, Republicans countering that the nation won't accept foot-dragging and the administration insisting its three-year income tax cut not be gutted.

Legislators from both parties have expressed concern over the economic effects of Reagan's proposal that tax rates be slashed 10 percent a year for three years, starting July 1.

Democrats have said they favor a tax cut, but not the one the administration wants.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Saturday the administration's plan "will not favor the working people, the people who pay taxes and have nothing left. It will make the rich richer and the poor poorer. It is unfair, unreasonable and inequitable."

The tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee opens hearings on the tax package Tuesday and committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said it will take weeks to hear all the anticipated witnesses.

White House budget director David A. Stockman told The Associated Press in an interview that the administration is open to negotiation with Congress on some parts of the tax plan but is insisting on a three-year package.

A one-year tax cut "won't help (the economy) a lot," Stockman said.

"One-year tax cuts do not generate the kind of permanent economic response that we're looking for," he said. "People can't make long-term plans on the basis of only one year."

Stockman, becoming a frequent Capitol Hill witness, was due before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee today to continue his pitch for the plan.

At the same time, Energy Secretary James Edwards was scheduled to lobby for Reagan-backed cuts in energy research programs before the Senate Energy Committee.

The Senate Budget Committee, meanwhile, is beginning to move on a package of spending cuts, with Republican leaders pressing for quick action in an effort to pressure the House into acting promptly.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, is expected to introduce legislation early this week to implement those cuts, getting the process rolling.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said, "It is my expectation that the Senate will act very promptly indeed. ... Every day this is delayed makes it more difficult to pass."

He added that if Democrats in the House or Senate block

Reagan's program, "people will rise up in a rage of indignation in (the) 1982" elections.

Byrd's answer to that was that Democrats "don't have a constitutional duty to rubber-stamp everything this president or any president asks for."

In other congressional action this week:

—The House is expected to pass a resolution, probably Tuesday, declaring the seat of Rep. Gladys N. Spellman, D-Md., vacant. Mrs. Spellman, 62, has been hospitalized in a semi-conscious state since suffering a cardiac arrest last Oct. 31. The resolution clears the way for a special election to fill the vacancy.

—The Senate takes up the nomination Tuesday of William V. Clark, a longtime friend of the president, to become deputy secretary of state. Many Senate Democrats have opposed the nomination, claiming Clark has too little experience in foreign affairs.

—A Senate governmental affairs subcommittee plans hearings Tuesday on the Postal Service plan to expand the ZIP code to nine digits.

—The Senate's permanent investigations subcommittee resumes hearings Wednesday in its probe of alleged organized crime influence in the International Longshoremen's Association.

Tobacco Price Supports Said Continuing Under Evaluation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director David Stockman said Sunday that the tobacco price support program remains under review by the Reagan administration and is still subject to reductions under the president's move to cut spending.

"Tobacco subsidies and all the remainder of the farm subsidies are being very carefully evaluated,"

Stockman said. "On March 10th, we will have proposals to save literally billions of dollars over the next four years in those other areas."

"We started with the milk subsidy because it's costing us $2 billion a year and we're up to our ears in excess cheese and powdered milk," he said.

Stockman said he was "personally committed to substantially reducing the cost to the federal taxpayer in the budget of all the farm subsidies."

Stockman made his comments during an appearance on CBS' "Face the Nation."

During his campaign, Reagan expressed the opinion that the tobacco program should not be changed. His agriculture secretary, John R. Block, said the same thing last Friday.

"The tobacco program is not a costly program," Block said at a Washington news conference. "It's making us money, so I'm not going to complain about it. It gets a bum rap sometimes, but it really doesn't deserve it."

That sentiment was repeated Sunday by Fred Bond, head of the Flue-cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a Raleigh, N.C.-based organization which administers the price support program.

"I hear a lot of inference that because Senator (Jesse) Helms comes from North Carolina and because he is chairman of the Agriculture Committee, there has been no attempt to move into the program and make cuts," Bond said.

"But there simply has been no significant capital outlay for the program," Bond said. "Certainly Helms' position and the fact that this is his home state doesn't hurt the program. If the program is not a burden or a drain on the taxpayer, I don't see why it shouldn't be left untouched."

According to the Agriculture Department, the tobacco program has cost taxpayers $56.7 million since it began 44 years ago. That represents about 0.1 percent of the total price support expense for all farm commodities, the department said.

Stabilization Corp. borrows money from a federal agency to pay farmers whose leaf does not sell at public auction for an amount higher than the price support. The tobacco is sold later by the cooperative.

Bond said Stabilization recently has paid about 12 percent interest on the borrowed money. He said it has not lost money since the 1950s.

Treatment of high blood pressure is a lifetime effort, which may include diet or food-choice changes, loss of weight, regular exercise and regular medication.

Hotel Reopens After Blaze

NEW YORK (AP) — It was "business as usual" at the New York Hilton after a weekend fire that badly damaged a second-floor meeting room.

The hotel remained open as investigators searched for the cause of the smoky blaze that broke out Saturday night in the Nassau Suite. The fire sent hundreds of the hotel's 1,665 guests scrambling toward emergency exits, but there were no serious injuries.

Officials said the Nassau Suite, a meeting room which was empty when the fire broke out, sustained heavy smoke and water damage. A spokeswoman said the suite had been closed, otherwise it was back to normal at the 46-story midtown hotel.

Mrs. Gorsuch, 39, is a lawyer with Mountain Bell in Denver, where she also has served as a deputy district attorney.

Hernandez, 51, has served as dean of the College of Engineering at the university and co-director of both the New Mexico Environmental Institute and the Southwest Resources Center for Science and Engineering.

Bundy Reports On Legislature

By SAM BUNDY
N. C. House of Representatives

As of Friday, Feb. 20, 257 bills have been introduced in the House and 137 in the Senate for a total of 394. This is still running behind 1977 and 1979. Some 286 groups or organizations now have registered lobbyists or legislative representatives as they like to call themselves. Bills now dealing with usury rates, day care centers and licensing of social workers are being dropped in the hopper and, as such, are controversial. In some cases, they will cause extended hearings, with final action way down the road.

Proponents of the ERA threw a little fat in the fire this week when many of them refused to vote on a local bill to incorporate the little town of Gamewell in Catawba County. The main reason was that it was introduced by a strong opponent of the ERA. There was some strong language between Rep. Kaplan and Sen. Kincaid, and tempers flared a little bit; however, the ERA proponents relented and the bill passed. It is the opinion of most members of the General Assembly that the ERA proponents did not do their cause any good and that the chances of the passage of the ERA were lessened, even though most legislators say the ERA was dead even before this incident.

The House passed on second reading HB 125 which would put the savings and loan associations on the same basis as banks and other corporations for taxing purposes. This would cost the state about $13 million for the biennium; therefore, action, or third reading, was postponed until such time as the budget picture becomes a little clearer, which will be around June 1.

Courtesy Boat Exams Offered

Courtesy marine examinations will be given by qualified examiners from the Greenville Flotilla of the Coast Guard Auxiliary Saturday, Feb. 28, from 9 a. m. to noon.

Boaters are reminded that day and night distress signal equipment is now required by federal law and must be on board, in addition to all other equipment required by federal and state laws in order to qualify a boat for the courtesy marine examination (CME) decal.

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations on your 25th anniversary as "Dear Abby." I have a very special reason for wanting to wish you well.

Twelve years ago you had a letter in your column signed TOO LATE. Abby, that letter motivated me to visit my aging and ailing mother every day during her last two years in a nursing home. I am ashamed to admit that until that time I thought I was doing quite well to visit her every Sunday for an hour.

I will always be indebted to you, Abby, for selecting that letter for your column. It motivated me to change my ways, and now I can live with a clear conscience.

Please run that letter again, Abby. It might do for someone else what it did for me.

GRATEFUL IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR GRATEFUL: I am grateful to you for reminding me to run it again. I have printed it three times, and each time I have heard from readers expressing appreciation. With pleasure I give it a much deserved rerun:

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same. It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them. I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent college graduate engaged to be married this summer. I became engaged while I was in college last year, and asked one of my school chums to be a bridesmaid. At the time we were good friends. However, we grew apart gradually, until now when we meet, she hardly gives me the time of day. In fact, the last few times we met there seemed to be tension between us. Now I don't even consider her a friend.

Must I include her in my wedding party? If not, how can I gracefully exclude her?

STUCK OR NOT

DEAR STUCK: Tell her candidly that your friendship has faded, and therefore it isn't appropriate for her to be a bridesmaid. It may not be very "graceful," but it beats getting stuck with a bridesmaid who is no longer a friend.

DEAR ABBY: I can't forget that survey you took after having received the letter from TIRED IN NEBRASKA. There must be something wrong with women who are 50 and tired of sex.

I am a woman of 59, and I enjoy my 61-year-old husband more now than I ever have. With our children grown and gone, the setting is ideal for romance. I still race home from the office to bathe and meet him at the door in a lace coat (the type one wears over a bathing suit). There's more to life than cooking, laundry and making beds!

I no longer have to worry about pregnancy or having the children hear us. These are the best years of our lives. I'm saving up for a mirrored bedroom ceiling!

Optical Topics

by Beecher Kirkley

Each eye has six muscles which control movement and position. An imbalance between the eyes can cause you to see double, force the eye to make an extra effort to point in the same direction or cause the brain to disregard the image of one eye. Good depth perception is dependent upon the eyes' ability to work together efficiently and automatically. Overcompensating actions made to correct an imbalance can result in headache, fatigue, irritability and neck tension. If evaluated early, surgery, an eye training program and/or a prismatic corrective lens can often correct the problem.

For complete satisfaction corrective eyewear must perform a definite function. Optimum function is obtained when the eyewear fits properly. Some corrective eyewear involves more complex fitting considerations than others. At CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 8th, Physicians Quadrangle Building A, we are proud of our reputation—a reputation "be-fitting"—an experienced and professional staff capable of meeting your eyewear needs and preferences. ## Loans Need Collecting

It does not speak well for the National Direct Student Loan program that almost one-fifth of the loans have not been repaid.

In North Carolina some $112.1 million have been borrowed since 1958 and over 30,000 students have not paid back $23.7 million.

These are not scholarships, which are earned for scholastic or athletic ability, but loans with money which must come from the taxpayers. The fact that the loan is made should not be considered a free ride through college at the taxpayers expense.

The problem seems to be widespread, ranging from a 53.3 percent default rate at North Carolina Central to seven percent at N. C. State and Duke.

Apparently the former students disappear following their college days and little effort is made in this state to find them.

Well, an effort should be made. Not only should we attempt to collect the loans already in default but more care should be exercised in the future in making the loans and arranging for collecting them.

United Way a Job Well Done

It was obvious that the Pitt County United Way campaign for 1980, under Chairman Gene Taylor, was a remarkable one. It was completed in record time. Even more important, in a recession year, it exceeded its $390,000 goal by $23,770.

Now that effort has been recognized by the North Carolina

United Way. The Pitt United Way was named most outstanding in the $100,000 to $500,000 category last week. The award was presented at the N. C. United Way annual meeting in Greensboro.

It was a job well done on the part of all who worked and contributed to the Pitt United Way.

Riding The Tide?

By BILL NOBLITT

Trying to figure out just where they ought to stand in light of the swing to the right is causing a great deal of frustration and frayed nerves among newly elected officials at all levels lately.

Even Gov. Jim Hunt is not immune. When he had spent some time in Washington the other day talking with President Ronald Reagan and his budget staff about the federal spending cuts, Gov. Hunt came out strong for less spending.

"I want to make it very clear that I will support President Reagan's efforts to balance the budget, just as I supported President Carter."

"I will not be partisan, and I will not criticize for the sake of criticizing," Hunt said.

He might have added that he would not be partisan, and would temper his criticism chiefly because his is a surviving Democrat at a time when conservative Republicans have already swept the field, and are planning future gains.

Privately, elected officials confess that if they managed to squeeze back into office despite the tidal flood to the right, they are well aware that from now on they had best go with the tide or get a through dunking in years to come.

But how do you accomplish that? How strong is the tide, and how far and how long will it run? Talking conservative is one thing. Enacting conservative law is another. That is when specifics must be considered, and when specifics are on the table, it becomes clear who is going to be hurt and who will lose some previous benefit.

The dilemma is causing the 1981 General Assembly to move cautiously into the legislative process, not knowing, really, how far to move and how fast.

The area of criminal justice, for example, illustrates the thicket in which lawmakers find themselves.

Down through the years a combination of factors have gradually eroded public confidence in the system. Defense lawyers who have been legislative leaders have Criminal Code Commission, and the Juvenile Code Revision Commission.

The conservative line is easily perceived in this field: catch the criminals and punish them; enough fooling around with appeal after appeal, enough mollycoddling, enough defendant's rights at the expense of the victim.

Getting tough after years of getting soft is going to prove difficult as legislators seek to determine just how tough. And the other side will

Other Editors Say On The Table

(The Gastonia Gazette)

A couple of bills introduced into the N.C. General Assembly by two Gaston County General Assemblymen deserve comment.

Sen. Helen Marvin's bill calls for a $600 million school bond issue. She believes that the state's schools are in need of help. She figures that $600 million would do it, for the time being at least.

Rep. Graham Bell, on the other hand, has submitted a bill that would provide revenue-sharing from the state to the counties and cities. Presumably such a system would be set up on a similar basis that has roots in Washington.

We don't want to put the bad mouth on the efforts of our local people in Raleigh, but both of these bills are rooted in misery.

Senator Marvin says that the state's schools are in such bad shape that they need the attention that money can give them. Tens of thousands of students, she said, are studying in mobile classrooms without benefit of restroom facilities.

Some students might have to take a few steps out of doors to reach a restroom in the main part of the building. That's not the best arrangement, but it could be a lot worse.

We don't have any recent figures on hand, but the last figures we had indicated that about two out of every three tax dollars spent in North Carolina now go for public education. That does seem to be enough.

Across the way in the State House, Rep. Bell has submitted his proposal to set up a revenue-sharing program.

That means that people would be taxed in Gaston County, the money sent to Raleigh where a percentage would be taken out for "handling and postage", and some of it returned to Gaston County at the direction of people in Raleigh.

A similar program has been operating in Washington ever since LBJ dreamed up the Great Society, and it is just as woeful now as it was when it began.

There can be no denying that certain dollars do come back to the local scene, and those dollars have, in many instances, been put to good use. But the trip to Washington and back, with all of its incumbent shrinking while in D.C. and the reams of instruction as to its use upon returning, has cost the taxpayer dearly. How much better if local problems were handled by local governments. The more government is centralized, the more the cost, the more the taxpayer gets soaked.

Apparently it is that same type of program that Representative Bell has in mind for the state. If that's the case, the senator needs a refresher course in boondoggling, D.C. style.

The best thing that could happen to both of these bills is for a committee to pay its due respects to their contents and then promptly lay them on the table.

Millions Lost To Poor

Somebody did a terrible thing last week. His name is Paul Bloom; he was a Carter appointee who, on his last day in office, gave $4 million to four major charities: the Salvation Army, the National Council of Churches Charities, the National Conference of Catholic Charities, and the Council of Jewish Federations, to help the poor pay their heating bills this winter. What made it such a terrible thing is that the $4 million came from a $100 million fine that an oil company had to pay to the Department of Energy for ripping off the public by over-

DOE knew what they were doing. When the report from the consultant came back, it would be reviewed and then sent back to the particular agency responsible for disbursing fines from oil companies, and then be sent back to the secretary for further action. The poor wouldn't have gotten any money to pay their heating bills, but at the same time the system would not have been endangered.

The new Reagan people in the Department of Energy immediately took the only action they had at their disposal. They demanded that the four charities return the $4 million immediately to

Supply-Side Ideas Faded

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — "Why, this is just a supply-side primer," complained Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, on Friday the 13th, then rolled up his sleeves to rewrite totally the introduction to President Reagan's economic report that had been drafted by best-selling economics writer George Gilder.

When Weidenbaum and the White House staff had finished, no trace of Gilder was left in the report — not even the words "supply-side" describing the economic philosophy Reagan has adopted as his own. It was not just the rhetoric that was killed. Along with it, the White House decided not to mitigate Jimmy Carter's massive tax increase before July 1, and scrapped two alternative methods of encouraging investment by the wealthy.

As the administration correctly reminds everyone, Reagan's tax cut presented to Congress Wednesday night is the largest in the nation's history. What worries its supporters is how much of it will survive on Capitol Hill, given the events of the week preceding the president's address.

To the knowledgeable in Congress, those events are more important than Reagan's stirring words: The Treasury has been downgraded below White House political aides in determining tax policy. Less obvious but equally important, doctrinal justification for tax reduction is put down by everybody in the White House, with the notable exception of Ronald Reagan.

The first defeat of the supply-siders had doctrinal roots. Despite Reagan's campaign promise that Jan. 1, 1981, would begin tax reduction, the effective date was set at July 1 because of concern over "revenue loss."

New economic models authorized at the Office of Management and Budget

(OMB) by its new supply-side director, David Stockman, showed dynamic, revenue-building growth rates generated by tax reduction. But they were rejected as unrealistic by Weidenbaum (agreeing with his predecessor from the Ford administration, Alan Greenspan). That undermines supply-side analysis, which forecasts dynamic growth as the federal government lessens its tax bite.

Next to go was a Treasury-OMB proposal to energize the economy by immediately dropping the 70 percent top tax rate on "unearned" income (dividends and interest) to 50 percent. The White House announcement on Black Friday, Feb. 13, included the extraordinary statement that the Treasury had been overruled, publicly downgrading the supply-side economists placed in charge of tax policy at the Treasury.

A second Black Friday event was the outraged reaction by Weidenbaum when he saw the economic report submitted by OMB. Gilder, author of the widely-acclaimed book, "Wealth and Poverty," had been brought in by Stockman to write the introductory chapter. It was trash-canned. The tax chapter, written at the Treasury, was stripped of supply-side doctrine.

The president's men professed to love the tax cut while disdaining supply-side theory. The one aspect of the tax bill that survived intact and with the Jan. 1 effective date undisturbed, faster tax depreciation for new equipment, is the proposal least likely to stir entrepreneurial juices, according to supply-side doctrine.

Indeed, senior administration briefers on the tax program never mention the word "incentive," which is pervasive in supply-side literature. Their limited knowledge of the doctrine was betrayed when they defended the package's failure to reduce the top

Bureaucracy Of 3 Is Working

By JAMES F. SMITH

Associated Press Writer

MAASTRICHT, Netherlands (AP) — It may be the world's smallest international bureaucracy — three people. More unusual still, the founders want to keep it that way.

Four years ago the West German, Belgian and Dutch provinces surrounding this international crossroads decided that informal, direct cooperation made more sense than commissions involving their national capitals — Bonn, Brussels and The Hague. The provinces each sent one full-time employee to work together to hash out problems of transportation, pollution and other cross-border issues.

"One of the major advantages is that we have a direct communications link between local governments in other countries, and the chance to come to a common point of view and then to find solutions, which is the very shortest route," said Joseph Wouters, one of the three members of the Euro-Region Commission.

"If we had to go through embassies or foreign ministries, we'd have to wait years. That's the way it used to work."

This experiment in informal Pan-Europeanism will be on display March 23-24 for a larger attempt at European cooperation. The 10 heads of government in the European Community will gather in the Maastricht town hall for this year's first Common Market summit under the Dutch presidency.

"We've developed a little piece of Europe here on our own," said the queen's governor of Dutch Limburg Province, J. Kremers. He boasted that the region is nearly borderless after 2,000 years of common tradition, saying these provinces often share more in common with their foreign neighbors than with their own capitals.

Dutch Limburg is a sort of peninsula, at one point just five miles wide, dangling down from the southeast Netherlands and bordered by West Germany to the east and Belgium to the west and south. It has always been isolated from the rest of the Netherlands.

You can use Belgian francs and German marks as well as Dutch guilders at the Saturday market here, and many people can at least get by in all three languages.

The Maastricht patois of Dutch is heavily spiced with German and French words — and often difficult for "foreigners from Holland." Even the terrain of rolling hills contrasts sharply with the characteristic flat, canal-lined countryside of the rest of the Netherlands.

The region was a northern border of Roman rule 2,000 years ago, and the first Dutch poet, Henric van der Veldeke, wrote a poem in the 12th century called "All Roads Meet Here." The area has been ruled by Roman, French, German, Austrian and Spanish governors and kings.

The Euro-Region officials from the four provinces, Dutch Limburg, Belgian Limburg and Liege and Germany's North-Rhine Westphalia, point to several concrete achievements. They have devised a common program for protection of small lakes and have developed a regional helicopter rescue service, based in Aachen, West Germany. With a budget of 100,000 guilders ($80,000) shared equally by the four provinces, they fund cultural and sports exchange programs as well.

Wouters said there are at least two other major regional cooperation efforts in Western Europe: one in the Basel, Switzerland, area involving France and Germany, and one in the German Boden Lakes region including Switzerland and Austria.

That doesn't count the 25 very local cross-border associations, six of which are in this Limburg region. The Euro-Region Commission here plans to approach the summit conference to ask for ratification of a European Parliament plan to grant more authority to the cross-border organizations.

"It's much faster and more effective to work together informally than to go through Bonn and The Hague and Brussels," said Alphonse Baeten, mayor of Maastricht. He and other officials said they want to maintain the current structure to keep the arrangement from growing unwieldy and inflexible.

In a few weeks the three officials here will begin a two-year inventory of the cross-border problems, hoping to chart answers to highway and road needs, canal traffic problems and pollution in the Maas River.

Strength For Today

THE FLUTERING MESSAGE

One of the things which weakens some mainline denominational churches today is a lack of belief on the part of members and an inability on the part of ministers to strengthen belief.

Those branches of the church which hold to firm beliefs are strong, progressive, vigorous in their programs, and appealing to multitudes of people. Preachers whose methods we do not admire but who are forthright in the presentation of the gospel are attracting multitudes.

Belief is not only necessary for a vigorous religious life; it is necessary for practically everything else. The successful man must believe in the product he sells and in the enterprises he supports.

This does not mean that one must have a fully developed theology before he can lead a Christian life. Let anyone start with the belief he already has, and more will be added to him. As our Lord said, "Repent ye, and believe in the gospel!" — Elisha Douglass

Farm Scene

By ROGER COBB
Asst. Agri. Ext. Agent

There has been a great deal of interest shown lately in the production of Maryland tobacco. Several important factors are stimulating North Carolina farmers to increase their production of Maryland tobacco. Maryland tobacco is not under quota, so no lease cost is involved. A second reason for the interest is that curing energy is none or very low, depending on how the tobacco is cured. Maryland tobacco has to be air-cured. Normally it is hung in open barns or sheds to dry to a characteristic tan color.

A third reason for interest in Maryland tobacco is the price. In 1980 Maryland tobacco sold for $1.20 to $1.45 per pound.

Field production of Maryland tobacco is similar to flue-cured. Transplanting should be about a month after flue-cured to avoid having to harvest both at the same time. Plantbeds should be seeded about six weeks after flue-cured beds are seeded.

The nutrient requirements for Maryland tobacco are about the same except for nitrogen. Nitrogen should be slightly increased to 70-90 pounds. Plant spacing is slightly different. Spacing should be 5000-6000 pounds per acre.

If Maryland is to be primed the same sucker control used in flue-cured should be used due to the length of time it will be in the field.

Maryland tobacco and flue-cured cannot be grown on the same farm without getting into trouble with the ASCS. If flue-cured and Maryland are grown on the same farm, the Maryland will be considered as excess flue-cured until the Maryland tobacco is actually classified as Maryland tobacco. The flue-cured must be sold without the benefit of support price. This problem can be avoided by planting only one class of tobacco on a given farm.

You can expect only slightly more than two-thirds the yield usually obtained from flue-cured tobacco (1200-1400 pounds.) Therefore, cost must be kept low to make a profit.

Growers should plan carefully before they plunge into production of Maryland tobacco. Caution should be exercised before any large investments are made with Maryland tobacco. There seems to be a relation between the shortage of burley and the demand for Maryland tobacco. If so, the demand for North Carolina grown Maryland tobacco could change with supplies of burley.

Soybean Meet

There will be a soybean meeting on February 25 at the Pitt County Extension Service (second floor old hospital) from 2-4 p.m.

Discussion at the meeting will center around up-to-date cultural practices in soybeans, the outlook for the crop, the importance of lime, row spacing, and weed control.

Dr. Jim Dunphy, crop science specialist, and Gaylon Ambrose of Pamlico Chemical, will lead the discussions. Refreshments will be served during break.

Corn Growers Referendum On March 3

There will be a Corn Growers Association referendum held on March 3. If approved by two-thirds of those voting, an assessment will be collected for a six-year period and the work of the association will continue.

According to Roger Cobb, assistant agricultural extension agent, anyone who grows corn to sell in North Carolina is a member of the association. A small assessment is made at the time the corn is sold and these funds are sent to the N.C. Department of Agriculture and turned over to the Corn Growers Association.

The assessment is automatically collected at the first point of sale. Although voted on periodically, participation in the program is voluntary. Anyone may request a full refund upon request.

The money from the assessment helps promote corn through the support of research, extension, marketing and legislation. Some of the activities include N.C. State University research and extension studies in areas of tillage, aflatoxin, billbugs, irrigation, broadleaf signalgrass and nitrogen management.

Sixteen polling places will be set up throughout the county. Anyone having questions may contact the Agricultural Extension Office at 752-2934.

Realtors Committee Has Program

The Make American Better committee of the Greenville-Pitt Co. Board of Realtors has begun its 1981 program of educational and community service projects.

Thelma Whitehurst, committee chairman, said the series of service projects and events was begun recently when realtors addressed and delivered valentine cards to each of the residents of the two local nursing and convalescent homes.

Other projects planned include a fund-raising to benefit the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center expansion, a continuation of landscaping and beautification at the two area nursing homes, cleaning up and landscaping in the Ayden recreation park, assistance and participation in a local blood drive, a voter-awareness educational and poll-transportation program, a fire prevention project, an educational program to combat vandalism, a homebuyers seminar, and an energy-awareness educational program, the last of which includes an energy conservation demonstration project.

Forestry Tour Planned

The Edgecombe County Forestry Association has invited the Pitt County Forestry Association and interested landowners to participate in a forestry tour on March 3.

The tour will start at Parkwood Mall on US 64 by-pass in Tarboro at 10 a.m. and will end around 1 p.m. Various forestry practices as well as a wood-fired tobacco curing operation will be observed.

Interested persons should be prepared to drive. A Dutch lunch will also be served. Registration is limited to the first 20 persons calling the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service at 758-1196, 758-1197, or 752-2934 by 5 p.m. February 25.

marginal rate on "earned" income from the present 50 percent on grounds that lower rate reduction for a family with over $215,000 of such income would mean a $17,000 tax cut over three years anyway; central to supply-side doctrine in motivating greater work effort is not total tax relief but the top marginal rate — how much Uncle Sam takes of the last dollar earned.

Stockman had been sponsored for the Cabinet by Rep. Jack Kemp and other supply-siders as the man at Reagan's elbow to remind him of broad tax reduction. But supply-siders grumble that OMB has co-opted Stockman, bestowing on him a "green eyeshade" mentality that concentrates on budget line items which lack a fraction of tax reduction's economic punch.

When the White House complained about Gilder's and other papers coming over from OMB, Stockman did not defend them but replied, accurately, he had no time to read them. More ominously, Stockman fought against reducing that economically poisonous extra $50 billion in federal revenue for the first half of 1981 inherited from President Carter's tax increases.

The outside voice supposed to monitor supply-side doctrine is Kemp's, but he has proved an uncertain trumpet of late. On Monday, Kemp blasted trimming of the tax bill by the White House that he himself has been lead to accept. But when that blast yielded a 50-minute telephone conversation with the president Tuesday, Kemp was back on the reservation. Joanne Kemp was in the first lady's box to hear the president's speech Wednesday night, but no more substantial victories for Kemp's point of view were apparent.

Kemp's point of view is that the Reagan economic program hinges not on cutting dairy price supports or food stamps but on protecting the president's radical tax cut from congressional slashes and special interest amendments. That seems most difficult without embracing the supply-side philosophy that the president's men at the White House abhor.

the DOE, because you just don't hand out that kind of money to the poor (even if it comes from the oil companies for cheating the public). They explained to the charity executives that they had no right to the funds.

The charity people said that the money had already been given to the poor people, or promised to them, and that there was some question whether they would return it or not.

This was an outrageous response, which got Reagan's Secretary of Energy angry, and he threatened to take them to court.

Through his counsel, he also hinted that Mr. Bloom might be prosecuted for overstepping his authority. Mr. Bloom claims that he had the authority to dispense the money and that he figured the funds would do a lot more good helping people pay their oil bills than sitting in the bank.

Bloom's gesture was an unforgivable action by a public servant, and against everything this government stands for. The charities in question have an obligation to send back the money and even try to collect from the poor what has already been spent.

What every official fears is that the Bloom action could set a precedent for other Washington bureaucrats. Instead of dealing with paper, they will start dealing with people, and pretty soon everyone here will have to begin making decisions.

As long as the oil company fine money stayed in the bank, no one had to decide what to do with it. But as soon as it was given to organizations to help the poor, everyone was forced to take some action.

As we all know, $4 million is a drop in the bucket to help poor people pay their fuel bills, so we're not talking about money, we're talking about principle.

If Bloom gets away with this dastardly deed, the millions of dollars stashed away in the DOE could be lost to the poor forever. We all know the department has far better uses for the money than the Salvation Army.

$25 Million Settlement In TMI Cases Bid-Rigging Trial Poised

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A tentative $25 million settlement for merchants who lost business after the Three Mile Island nuclear accident would still allow people to file claims for physical or mental injuries, a federal judge says.

The settlement would compensate people who lived, worked or operated businesses within 25 miles of the plant during or after the March 1979 accident at Three Mile Island, the worst commercial nuclear accident in the nation's history.

Under the agreement, American Nuclear Insurers and Mutual Atomic Energy Liability Underwriters would put up $5 million to establish a public health fund for improved radiation monitoring, public education on cancer, emergency planning and general research on low-level radiation.

Ken McKee, a spokesman for General Public Utilities Corp., the plant's owner, said Saturday the agreement was reached among attorneys for the accident victims and the two nuclear insurance pools.

The two nuclear insurance pools, which cover certain damages from nuclear accidents under the federal Price-Anderson Act, would pay $20 million in compensation for economic losses.

Those economic losses resulted from lower sales and shut-down plants when people around the nuclear plant fled their homes. Tourism losses after the accident also would be included.

U.S. District Judge Sylvia Rambo gave tentative approval to the agreement, calling the settlement "reasonable and appropriate."

The agreement covers only economic claims and "has no effect on the rights of individuals to make claims for physical or mental injuries believed to have been suffered as a result of the TMI accident," the judge said Friday.

The agreement does not cover claims made by counties, municipalities or the state, she added.

The agreement would settle a class-action lawsuit filed in federal court about a month after the accident. The lawsuit alleged the accident caused economic harm and resulted from negligence by the owners, operators and builders of the plant.

The judge consolidated of the economic claims into one suit in April 1979. She excluded personal injury claims at that time, saying they raised too many legal questions.

The agreement will be filed within a few months, and a hearing then will be scheduled with testimony from economic, radiation and health experts as well as people living near Three Mile Island.

If the judge gives final approval to the settlement, she will supervise distribution of the claims. The court has not worked out how the claims will be screened.

Defendants in the suit are GPU and its three subsidiaries: Metropolitan Edison Co., Pennsylvania Electric Co. and Jersey Central Power & Light Co.; Babcock & Wilcox Co., the plant designer; J. Ray McDermott & Co., Inc.; and Catalytic Inc.

Trial Poised

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Court action in North Carolina's multimillion-dollar highway bid-rigging scandal shifts to Statesville this week as another paving company and two executives go on trial in federal court.

The Superior Paving Co. and one of its officers, Allen C. Johnson, and Carl A. Boggs of The Dickerson Group in Monroe were scheduled for trial today on charges they conspired to rig bids in violation of the federal Sherman Antitrust Act.

If convicted, the company could be fined up to $1 million and the executives could be sentenced up to three years in prison and fined $100,000.

Previous court action has resulted in prison sentences for 18 executives of paving companies. Sixteen companies have been fined since the investigation began last spring.

A separate state investigation also led to the indictment last month of J. Preston Allen, the state's chief highway estimator. Allen was charged with leaking secret highway cost estimates to a Fayetteville paving executive who paved Allen's driveway free.

North Carolina is one of 12 states targeted in a U.S. Justice Department investigation of the asphalt paving industry. So far the probe has resulted in 66 criminal prosecutions in six states and new investigations have begun in six others.

The probe spread to North Carolina's $212 million paving industry after Rea Construction Co. of Charlotte and two other companies submitted suspicious bids on an airport paving project in Richmond, Va. Wilbert B. Siviter, a former vice president for Rea Construction, was among six highway company executives scheduled to go on trial in U.S. District Court in Virginia today on charges related to bid rigging.

There has been little public information about how much the manipulation of bids has cost taxpayers in North Carolina. Arthur A. Feiveson, one of three federal attorneys handling the prosecution in court at Charlotte and Statesville, has said that "millions and millions of dollars" were involved.

Testimony earlier this month by executives of the S.T. Wooten Construction Co. of Wilson and Rea Construction tends to support Feiveson's statement.

Seth T. Wooten, president of the Wooten firm, testified that his firm submitted bids 1 percent to 2 percent higher than competitive bids would have been. William A. Campbell, chief estimator for Rea, said he added 3 percent to 4 percent to Rea's normal markup on "worked-out jobs."

According to state records, Wooten received $51.8 million contracts and Rea $32.9 million in contracts awarded during the 1970s for work done primarily by the two companies in Nash, Wilson, Mecklenburg and Davidson counties.

If the bids were inflated by the amount indicated in the testimony, the total markup for the two companies could have run from $1.18 million to $2.35 million.

Miami Official Held In Cocaine Seizure

MIAMI (AP) — The director of a CETA-funded youth counseling center and another man were going to court today for arraignment on drug charges stemming from what federal agents called the largest cocaine seizure in history.

Agents arrested Angel Alvarez, 43, and Joaquin Cordero, 50, both of Miami, as they were leaving Cordero's house Friday night. Alvarez is the director of Little Havana's Youth Co-op, which is funded by federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds.

The two were jailed on $1 million bond each on charges of possession of cocaine and possession with intent to distribute cocaine, said federal Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Con Dougherty.

Agents said they found 826 pounds of "high-purity" cocaine with a street value of $206.5 million packed inside clear plastic bags in 26 boxes in Cordero's garage.

The seizure was the result of a four-month investigation by agents of the DEA and the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, Dougherty said.

"You can't tell who's who in Miami anymore. I'm so upset it's not funny," said

Willy Gort, chairman of the board of the Youth Co-op, which serves some 30 young people a day on an annual budget of $800,000.

He said Alvarez was suspended.

ANGELE E. ALVAREZ

Alvarez's mother, Ofelia Granado Martinez, who lives with her son in his sparsely furnished home, said Alvarez assured her he had done nothing wrong.

"His friend Alberto invited him to eat," she said. "As they were saying good-bye, police came and found drugs in the friend's house. My son could not do anything like this."

Alvarez came under investigation by the Dade County Public Safety Organized Crime Bureau in 1978 after The Miami Herald reported he collected three paychecks for the same job and had hired the relatives of politicians. Both are violations of federal regulations.

Alvarez was collecting paychecks from CETA, the city of Miami and from a Justice Department grant, The Herald said.

The newspaper said that during the first six months of 1978, Alvarez was being paid an average of $687 a week at Youth Co-op director. That came out to $35,724 on an annual basis — more than the director of the entire CETA program for Dade County and the Florida Keys was earning at the time.

Gort said government auditors determined Alvarez had done nothing wrong. Gort said Alvarez was collecting paychecks from three agencies because his program was funded by all three.

Costs Deter A CETA Grant For Pilot School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A minority-owned airline operated a pilots' training school for seven students at a cost of $165,000 in federal job-training funds but was blocked by state officials when it attempted to open a second school.

The second proposal by Wheeler Flying Services, based at Raleigh-Durham Airport, would have cost $258,885 for 10 students. Warren Wheeler of Durham, a commercial airline pilot and owner of Wheeler Flying Services, proposed both schools as a means of promoting blacks in commercial aviation.

Wheeler received a grant for the first school under the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. His second application also sought a grant from the same program.

Seven students were trained under the first program for $165,000, a cost of $23,600 each.

Jim Summers, assistant secretary of natural resources and community development, said the second application was rejected because of the high cost per student. He said the cost was higher than training programs used by private airlines.

"I think a whole lot depends on the nature of what you are doing, of course, but it should be no more than $10,000 or under that," he said.

"I think it's a very worthy objective and, if it can be done in a reasonable way, we would look very carefully at it," Summers said.

The rejection was made by Summers and Wayne Daves, director of the department's Division of Community Employment. Each has assumed his position since Wheeler's first program was approved with the blessings of department secretary Howard Lee.

In his first proposal, Wheeler said few unemployed minorities would be able to break into the relatively lucrative airline pilot job market without a concerted effort to train them. After 18 months of training, he said the pilots could command jobs with salaries of $12,000 per year.

Seven students completed the course, and four went to work for Wheeler as co-pilots at salaries of between $7,200 and $10,000. The other two went to work for other commercial airlines.

Wheeler said less than 0.01 percent of the nation's 34,000 pilots are black and that commercial airlines actively recruit blacks and other minority pilots when they are hiring.

He said that's why he proposed another co-pilot training program, at a cost of $25,888 each.

Wheeler said he probably would not resubmit his proposal.

"When somebody says to cut it by two-thirds, it's absurd and we're not going to do it. If they can be trained for that, then we must have been lying, cheating and stealing (on the previous contract). I can teach people to fly for $10,000 maybe, but I can't pay them, too," Wheeler said.

Sees Adequate Phosphate Ore

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The operator of a large phosphate mining complex at Aurora says there is no danger in the foreseeable future that its supply of ore will run out.

Bob Upton, a spokesman for Texasgulf Chemicals, said in an interview published Sunday that the Aurora plant could survive hundreds of years at its present rate of production.

"Even if we were to mine it at four times the present rate, our reserves there would hold out for at least a hundred years," Upton said.

Upton's comments followed the announcement last week that East Carolina University geologist Stan Riggs and Dr. Albert Hine of the University of South Florida had found that a previously discovered phosphate deposit off the North Carolina coast was more extensive than originally believed.

Their discovery was announced somewhat jubilantly by the National Science Foundation, which said U.S.

supplies of phosphate were threatened with exhaustion in the next two decades. The foundation welcomed the discovery of the offshore deposit as an indication that this country would not become dependent on imported phosphate, which is an essential ingredient of commercial fertilizers.

Upton said most of the world's supply of phosphate comes from Africa and the United States. He said Florida accounts for 85 percent of the domestic supply and that North Carolina provides about 7 percent.

"The Bureau of Mines says Florida's supply could run out in the year 2000, but there's a lot of disagreement about that. People in the industry says there's plenty of it and it won't run out until long after that," Upton said.

Riggs and Hine discovered the massive deposits below the surface of the ocean's bed while doing follow-up study of surface deposits found in 1965 by geologist Orrin Pilkey of Duke University.

Last-Ditch Try To Save Runner

NEW WESTMINSTER, British Columbia (AP) — Terry Fox, a 22-year-old amputee who tried to run across Canada, is "resting comfortably" as doctors make what they call a last-ditch effort to save the bone cancer victim.

"He spent a fairly good night and is now resting comfortably," a spokeswoman for Royal Columbian Hospital said Sunday. Fox was admitted Saturday after an adverse reaction to an anti-cancer agent.

Fox began a cross-Canada "Marathon of Hope" on April 12, 1980, when he dipped his artificial leg into the Atlantic Ocean at St. John's, Newfoundland.

His run to raise money for cancer research was called off in September at Thunder Bay, Ontario, when doctors found secondary cancer tumors in his lungs.

Fox has vowed to resume the run, although doctors give him only a 10 percent chance of surviving until Christmas.

CARTOONS BARRED KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The government has ordered the Star, an English-language newspaper, to stop publishing the syndicated cartoons of American David Gantz because one of his drawings depicted Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as a devotee of the Marquis de Sade.

One Accident Claims Three

By The Associated Press

Three college students were killed and six other people injured Sunday when their vehicle was struck by an airborne car that had gone out of control on Interstate 40 in Winston-Salem.

The Highway Patrol said the airborne car struck the students' vehicle at windshield level, shearing off the top of their car, after jumping the median strip of the divided highway.

Killed in the accident were Charles Ray Coble III, 18, and Lisa Stellen Tucker, 18, both of Chapel Hill, and Philip Jones Henderson, 18, of Trenton. The patrol said they were en route to Appalachian State University when the accident occurred.

Their deaths pushed to 13 the number of highway fatalities in North Carolina during the weekend.

For the year, North Carolina has now recorded 177 traffic deaths.

Three other people died in separate accidents Sunday.

Kenneth Felton Stewart, 24, of Fayetteville was killed in a head-on collision on a rural road in Cumberland County. James Durwood Edwards, 36, of Rocky Mount was killed in a two-car accident on U.S. 301 south of his hometown. And Judith Claudette Norman, 17, of Hamptonville was killed when her vehicle left a road in Yadkin County and struck a tree.

Earlier in the weekend, David E. Wilson, 64, of High Point was killed when he was struck by a car as he walked along a road in Guilford County.

Vicky Woodell, 19, of Asheboro was killed when she was thrown from the back of a pickup truck that left a Randolph County highway, struck a culvert and overturned.

Another pedestrian, Leonard Wilkey Punch, 22, was killed when he was struck by a vehicle as he walked along U.S. 64 in Catawba County.

Hoyle Heath Kiser Jr., 25, of Indian Trail was killed when his car overturned on a rural road in Union County.

Mark Steven Jerome, 20, was killed when the car in which he was riding struck several mail boxes and a tree in Charlotte.

Raymond Williams Jr., 53, of Madison was killed when he was thrown from the car in which he was riding as it ran off a rural road in Rockingham County.

An Ornum man, Felton Reaves, 45, was killed in a two-car accident at an intersection in Robeson County.

Alvarez's mother, Ofelia Granado Martinez, who lives with her son in his sparsely furnished home, said Alvarez assured her he had done nothing wrong.

"His friend Alberto invited him to eat," she said. "As they were saying good-bye, police came and found drugs in the friend's house. My son could not do anything like this."

Gainers and losers were about evenly balanced in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But analysts said the market continued to be restrained by uncertainties about prospects for President Reagan's economic proposals.

Auto Workers Balk Over Income Tax

DETROIT (AP) - Some 3,500 Flint-area workers, in what the Internal Revenue Service calls "one of the biggest tax protest movements in the country," are directing employers not to make income tax deductions from their paycheck.

Most of the workers are employees of General Motors Corp., where word of the protest has spread by word-of-mouth and through organizations promoting the revolt, the Detroit News reported Sunday.

The workers have been trying to sidestep deductions by claiming as many as 99 dependents on their W-4 forms. Others filed federal W-4E forms, designed for low-income workers who do not plan to earn enough to pay income taxes, he said.

One protest leader contends labor is a personal property traded to an employer for wages and is thus ineligible for taxation.

IRS officials initially became aware of the move when employers, as required by law, began informing the IRS of large numbers of employees changing their filing status last fall.

Nawrocki said many of the workers, feeling there is "safety in numbers," do not expect to be prosecuted for false returns.

"We're trying to alert people and convince them that wages are taxable and they could be subject to penalties, interest and criminal sanctions if they continue to refuse to pay," Nawrocki said.

Dean Hazel of Pontiac, a GM employee who founded the tax protest group "We The People ACT," said an estimated 700 members pay $65 in monthly dues for such benefits as tax law workshops and cassette tapes explaining the rationale for avoiding taxes.

"If Nawrocki wants to haul our guys into court, he'll get his ears pinned back," said Hazel. "The IRS has been losing on 'false and fraudulent' W-4 cases for years. So many people are doing it they'll never be able to keep up."

Nawrocki said the IRS had increased its audits of tax returns and had begun forwarding names of violators to its collection unit to obtain compensation for tax liabilities.

However, only five cases had been referred for possible prosecution and in only one case had the IRS recommended criminal prosecution, the News reported.

Handling Of Big Silver Dollar Sale Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) - A government sale of nearly a million century-old silver dollars, replete with misplaced orders, changing prices and the approval of bad checks, "left a legacy of cynicism, disappointment and mistrust," a congressional study says.

Rep. Chairman Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Banking subcommittee that investigated the sale, called the offering "one of the most horrifying examples of government mismanagement I have seen in my 16 years in Congress."

The General Service Administration made "critical errors" at nearly every turn, he said.

The subcommittee report, released Sunday, criticized GSA for failing to fill all the orders, changing announced prices, putting out misleading press releases and sending coins and refunds worth more than $1 million in exchange for bad checks.

At one point, the study said, 3,865 orders were lost for a month.

Some people purchased 35 coins, while others were denied one, according to the report.

Roy Markon, the GSA official who handled the sale, said problems resulted because of over-response "due to the way the price of silver jumped rapidly. We weren't expecting the kind of response we had to deal with."

Nevertheless, Markon, GSA's commissioner of federal property resources, said the sale raised $52 million, more than double what had been expected.

The report said GSA tried to play down the bad check problem by releasing information it knew or should have known was "misleading or inaccurate."

Calling the check cashing procedures used by the GSA inconsistent with government accounting policies, the report said $200,000 of the bad checks remained uncollected eight months after the first coins were mailed.

Markon said the amount due on uncollected checks has been reduced to less than $100,000.

A half million people requested silver dollars, but only 36 percent of the orders were filled even though there were twice as many coins available as there were orders, said the staff of the

Panel Shorted

WINTERVILLE - An electrical short at Ajax Magnethermic Corp. here this morning resulted in one employee receiving apparent minor flash burns on his hands and a temporary loss of power to operate part of the plant's equipment.

Ed Stanley, plant manager, said that the electrical flash occurred when two employees were working at a lighting panel inside the plant and the panel shorted out. Stanley added that both employees were qualified electricians.

The plant manager noted that the injured employee was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment, while the second man was sent to a doctor as a precautionary measure and then returned to work.

Stanley, who said that the amount of damage to the plant in the incident appeared to be minor, pointed out that officials were trying to determine what caused the ground fault system at the plant to fail, allowing the electrical flash to occur.

The spokesman said that at 11:45 a.m. "we are without some power to run our equipment." He said that "as soon as we can determine the extent of damage, we will go out there."

Winterville fire and rescue units responded to the 10:46 a.m. incident.

Arms Sold By West Germans

By CARL HARTMAN
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - West Germany has emerged as a major seller of arms, particularly for countries in the Middle East and Latin America that the United States refuses to supply, a newly released study by a congressional agency says.

The study by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative agency, was completed last August, but on Pentagon insistence only a summary was distributed. Now a fuller version has appeared, but with many of the 93 pages deleted.

The report says 40 percent of West Germany's weapons sales are to countries the United States refused to trade with, mostly in the Mideast and Latin America.

The United States has refused to sell arms to Iraq, Libya and Syria because of Middle East policy. For other reasons, the report points out, the United States also has refused sales to Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Angola, Mozambique and Ethiopia.

Between 1973 and mid-1978 the West Germans sold $1.08 billion worth of weapons to countries that the United States refused to supply because they were adversaries of Israel.

These sales included:
 -More than $538 million worth of orders from Algeria for plants to build rockets and explosives.
 -$73 million worth of tanks and laser range finders to Syria.
 -$66 million in tank transporters, trucks and tractors to Iraq.

"I was not the only one up on the ledge," Joe Bass said in a telephone interview late this morning. "There were a lot of us up there because there was just no other place to get."

A senior at Southern Nash Senior High School, he added that he remembers little of what happened. "I was in a daze," he said. "One minute I was listening to the concert, the next thing I remember is some people putting me into a rescue truck," he said.

Asked his feelings about the whole incident, he said only, "Everybody over there was real nice to me. And I feel real lucky I wasn't hurt worse."

Bass's brother, Al, said in a telephone interview his brother was sent home about 10 a. m. Saturday. He described Joe's injuries as a broken wrist and one or possibly two broken fingers, plus a scratched eye. Al Bass said the family is thankful that Joe is alive. "He sure gave us a scare," he added.

The ledge on which Bass was perched is not a usual place for spectators to be, Eddings said. It is just under the perimeter of the suspended roof of the coliseum more than two stories from the ground.

A large amount of debris fell with Bass. University official, Rudy Alexander, said no estimate of the damage to the building has been made yet. He emphasized that the Bass was in a place where occupants of the building would have no reason to be. "He couldn't even have got there without being boosted up by someone," Alexander said.

The cost of repair to the building has not been estimated yet, Alexander said. A number of fellow concertgoers said this morning that they were unaware that the accident even

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) - Two children became the accidental victims of their mother's suicide, police said, apparently dying of carbon monoxide poisoning when auto exhaust fumes spread through the house.

The bodies of Jackie Marie Heerd, 33, wife of a city police officer, her 5-year-old son and 10-year-old daughter were discovered Saturday, police said. A suicide note from Mrs. Heerd, addressed to her husband and children, was also found.

Tony Badger, field investigator for the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, said: "We suspect it was a suicide on the part of the woman. The car had been running in the garage and the door to the kitchen was open. It didn't look like she meant to kill the kids."

That Irish Luck Prevails Again Notre Dame Nips No. 1 Cavaliers On Bucket By Woolridge

CHICAGO (AP) — Orlando Woolridge never made a bigger or more important basket in his life than the 16-footer he caved as time ran out to give Notre Dame a 57-56 victory over previously undefeated and top-ranked Virginia.

But he couldn't say as much about Sunday's winning basket as he could about the defensive job he helped do on 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson.

The Irish, who make a habit of springing great upsets and breaking legendary streaks, gambled by double-teaming Sampson and held the Cavaliers' leading scorer to 10 points.

Woolridge played in front of Sampson while Tim Andree or Joe Kleine played behind him and it worked, according to Irish Coach Digger Phelps.

"I was ready to concede him 22 points and 16 rebounds," said Phelps. "I just didn't want him to score 40 points. But I never dreamed we'd hold him to 10.

Even at that, it appeared that Sampson had made the big basket of a pulsating game when he broke a 53-53 tie with 2:01 left to play.

Notre Dame came down the floor, and Tracy Jackson missed with Jeff Lamp grabbing the rebound and Virginia working on the clock. With 35 seconds left, Jeff Jones was fouled and made the first of two free throws.

John Paxson made what appeared to be a pair of token free throws to whittle the lead to 56-55 with 10 seconds to play.

Virginia's Lee Raker tried to inbound the ball but the Irish pressured his teammates, and Raker finally threw it away. Notre Dame took time out and inbounded the ball to Jackson who shot and missed.

Kelly Tripucka grabbed the rebound but was stripped of the ball, which bounced off Sampson's hands and went to Woolridge. Woolridge fired and Notre Dame won, breaking Virginia's 28-game winning streak and handing the Cavaliers their first loss of the season after 223 victories.

"I just grabbed the ball, turned and shot," said Woolridge. "I didn't have time to think about anything until I saw it go through the hoop. I didn't realize the impact until about 800 people jumped on me. I have never made a bigger basket."

At 6-9, Woolridge was giving away seven inches to Sampson and spent much of the game resting his head on Sampson's chest.

"I had him one-on-one a few times but I felt better when we had somebody else behind him," said Woolridge. "I bumped him, I fouled him, I'd get up his face, anything to distract him. I don't like to play that way, but what else could I do?"

Sampson said: "I've seen that defense before. They played well, we didn't."

It was another in a string of Notre Dame streak-stoppers. In 1974, Notre Dame ended UCLA's 88-game winning streak, the longest in NCAA history. In 1973, they stopped Marquette's 81-game home streak. In 1974, they ended South Carolina's 34-game home streak. In 1977, they spoiled San Francisco's 29-game streak and last year handed DePaul a loss after the Blue Demons had gone 25-0.

"The first time is what counts and it's never the same again," said Phelps. "Nothing will compare to the UCLA game of '74. But there's no other way for Notre Dame to do it than the way we did it."

"A lot of people don't understand what Notre Dame is and I can't explain it," said Phelps. "Notre Dame is the greatest underdog institution in the country."

The game was played in The Horizon in suburban Rosemont, and both Phelps and Virginia Coach Terry Holland likened it to an NCAA tournament game as far as the site was concerned.

Although Notre Dame, 20-4, blew repeated chances in the closing seconds when the officials did not call goaltending on Sampson, Tripucka walked, and Bill Barner threw away a pass, Phelps never conceded.

"You never run out of chances at Notre Dame," he said.

Holland called it "a tough game for either team to lose. Notre Dame played a great game and definitely controlled the tempo. We'll try to make something positive out of it. All this season we've been able to put a win behind us, and now I think we can put a loss behind us."

Holland said he thought there were two seconds left on the clock when Woolridge scored and "I'd like to have had them run the clock back, but that's irrelevant now."

The first half was something to behold. The score was tied 12 times at every two-point level reaching 24-24 when Notre Dame twice took four-point leads and settled for a 30-28 halftime advantage.

Lady Pirates Ranked 18th

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, 21-5 this season, returned to the nation's top 20 after a two week absence with a #18 ranking in today's AP poll.

The Lady Pirates, coming off a triple overtime 97-89 victory over N.C. State, ranked 17th this week, were ranked 18th four weeks ago — ECU's first time ever in the top 20. The next week ECU dropped to 19th and then fell out of the top 20 one week later.

Louisiana Tech is ranked #1 while Old Dominion fell to sixth, the lowest ranking for the Lady Monarchs since 1977. ECU opponents ranked in the top 20 include Southern Cal (8th) and Virginia (18th).

Clemson is ranked 19th while Auburn and Stephen F. Austin are tied for 20th.

The Lady Pirates end their home season tonight when they play host to Wake Forest.

Cooper Keys Lakers By Knicks

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

If there has been a silver lining to the dark cloud that was Earvin "Magic" Johnson's knee injury, it has been the rapid development of Michael Cooper of the Los Angeles Lakers.

The slender, 6-foot-6 Cooper, Los Angeles' sixth man in its run to the National Basketball Association championship last season, inherited Johnson's guard spot in the starting lineup after the Magic man got hurt Nov. 18 and has helped the Lakers to a 27-16 record since then.

Cooper had two steals and one blocked shot in the final two minutes Sunday, and fed a perfect pass to Kareem

Abdul-Jabbar for the go-ahead basket with 58 seconds to play as the Lakers edged the New York Knicks 96-93.

"Michael Cooper has always been a great defensive player and he showed that today," said Westhead. "But he helps us in other ways, too. He scores, he rebounds, he moves the ball. He's become an all-around player since Magic got hurt."

The Lakers expect Johnson to return to action Friday night, but will be able to bring him along slowly because Cooper is playing so well. At New York he had 12 points (on 6-for-9 shooting), nine rebounds, seven assists, four steals and one blocked shot.

Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 32 points and Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon added 19 apiece. Reserve guard Mike Glenn was New York's high scorer with 19.

The victory kept the Lakers within 4½ games of first-place Phoenix in the Pacific Division race.

Neither Los Angeles nor New York led by more than nine points in their nationally televised game, and the lead changed hands eight times in the fourth quarter.

Suns 116, 76ers 110
Walter Davis scored eight of his 20 points in the final period as Phoenix beat Philadelphia in a matchup of conference leaders. Davis got six points in a 10-2 spurt that gave the Suns a 94-84 lead with 7:33 to play and the 76ers never caught up.

Mavericks 132, Nets 109
Dallas broke a 15-game losing streak as guard Oliver Mack scored 28 points. Mack, a former East Carolina star, helped the Mavs to a 27-13 lead in the first 8½ minutes and the Nets never caught up.

Dallas' record is now 9-55, and the expansion club needs just one more win in its last 18 games to avoid matching the 9-73 record of the 1973 Philadelphia 76ers, the NBA's losingest team.

Warriors 104, Kings 96
Bernard King scored 17 of his 30 points in the final period as the Warriors beat Kansas City despite the absence of guard John Lucas, who was AWOL for the fifth time this season.

Guards Lloyd Free of Golden State and Phil Ford of Kansas City were both hurt in a first-quarter collision. Free suffered a dislocated right thumb, which should sideline him at least two weeks, and Ford is expected to be out about a week because of a scratched iris on his left eye.

Bucks 102, Bullets 93
Milwaukee built a 56-40 halftime lead and held off the Bullets, who pulled as close as one point in the fourth quarter. Guards Sidney Moncrief and Quinn Buckner and forward Marques Johnson had big baskets for the Bucks down the stretch. Moncrief led all scorers with 25 points.

Hawks 121, Bulls 116
Dan Roundfield scored 29 points as Atlanta built a 15-point lead after three quarters and held off a Chicago comeback bid.

Rockets 111, Sonics 96
Houston took command by outscoring Seattle 27-10 in a 10-minute stretch of the second half. Calvin Murphy scored 13 of his game-high 27 points in the fourth quarter as the Rockets pulled away.

Blazers 113, Pacers 109
Calvin Natt's three-point play with 12 seconds left in overtime clinched Portland's victory over Indiana, which had erased a 20-point deficit behind a career-high 39 points by center James Edwards. Natt finished with 23 points, five of them in overtime.

Spurs 133, Nuggets 129
James Silas hit a 15-foot jumper with 50 seconds left in overtime to snap a 127-127 tie, then made a key save of a loose ball that was headed out of bounds to help San Antonio beat Denver. Silas tipped the ball to rookie Reggie Johnson, who was fouled and sank a pair of free throws to clinch the victory. Johnson finished with a team-high 26 points.

Clippers 108, Jazz 93
Guards Freeman Williams and Phil Smith scored 33 and 22 points, respectively, to lead San Diego to its fourth straight triumph.

Waltrip Survives, Races Away With 400 Victory

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip won a race and proved once again that he's the man stock car fans love to hate.

The 34-year-old driver from Franklin, Tenn., survived a challenge from Richard Petty a near miss and a fender-bender accident late in the race to win Sunday's Richmond 400.

Then the tall, handsome Waltrip, who was the first of the current crop of young lions to make inroads on the success of the old NASCAR favorites, stood in victory circle and listened to an avalanche of boos from many of the about-20,000 fans who showed up at Richmond Fairgrounds Raceway despite a steady morning drizzle and gloomy skies.

"This is the only race I ever won that I hated to win," Waltrip joked moments later.

"Actually, some of my best fans come from this area. Some of my worst fans, too," he added.

The victory, worth $18,800 to Waltrip and the team operated by Junior Johnson, did not come easily.

Rookie Morgan Shepherd, who surprised everyone by winning the pole position for the 400-lap race, dominated the first 150 laps.

He passed everyone in the 30-car field except Waltrip and Petty at least once before a pit stop cost him the top spot for good.

"The breaks just didn't come my way," said Shepherd, the defending late model sportsman champion. "I ran out of gas and had to come in under the green. Then the yellow (flag) came out and I was a lap down."

Waltrip and Petty began their duel at that point, with the 43-year-old Petty — winner of last week's Daytona 500 and the biggest favorite of all on the Grand National circuit — succumbing finally to a broke transmission and a penalty.

Petty's car had to be pushed by his crew after every pit stop. After one such delay, the veteran drove his car out of the pits after the pace car had passed, went quickly around to regain what he felt was his rightful position and wound up being black flagged and penalized one lap for passing the pace car.

"I guess that's one of the reasons they were booing me," Waltrip said. "They probably blamed me for it, but I didn't even know he'd lost a lap. I thought Richard was right behind in second place."

With about 25 laps to go, Petty tried desperately to pass Waltrip and get back into the lead lap with the hope that another caution flag would allow him to come around and make a run at the leader.

"I saw Richard on my tail and I didn't want him going past me," Waltrip said. "I had to drive harder the last 20 laps than I did all day."

Waltrip, who averaged 76.570 mph on the 342-mile oval despite seven caution periods for 57 laps, held off Petty, but still had to contend with careening cars.

On lap 385, Cecil Gordon spun in turn three. Gordon kept his car running and drove back onto the track — right in front of Waltrip.

"I thought I'd had it, but somehow we didn't hit. Then, on the same yellow, No. 79 (Dick May) got down into the dirt and pushed Buddy Arrington up into me. I don't know what was wrong with 79, but then he came around and hit me, too."

The leftside sheet metal on Waltrip's green and white Buick got banged up, but he stayed on top, beating Ricky Rudd's Oldsmobile to the finish line by about 10 car-lengths.

District Playoffs Begin Tuesday

A Staff Report

With conference tournaments out of the way, area high school basketball teams journey to Williamston for the district playoffs, where a loss means the end of the season.

Four boys' teams and one girls' teams from the area will vie for the district championship and a chance to advance to Wilson for the regional tournament.

D.H. Conley, Greene Central, North Pitt and Roanoke are the boys' teams from the area which will compete in the district tournament set to start Tuesday and conclude next Tuesday with the championship game.

Roanoke is the lone team from the area with its girls' team in the tournament.

The Vikings, the Eastern Carolina Conference regular season champion but losers in the opening round of the tournament, will face Edenton Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the tournament's first day. Wednesday, Roanoke's girls and boys will meet Southern Nash, which finished tied for third in the ECC during the regular season but won the tournament.

Thursday, Greene Central's boys will try to rebound from an embarrassing performance in the ECC tournament semifinals against North Pitt when the Rams face Washington.

Friday, North Pitt, which tied for third in the ECC with Southern Nash and then lost to the Firebirds in the tournament finals, will end the first round of district play when the Panthers battle Tarboro.

The semifinals will be held Saturday and Monday nights and the championship games will be played Tuesday evening. Tuesday night's winners will meet Friday's winners Saturday evening and Wednesday and Thursday night's victors will play Monday night.

All games are set for Williamston High School. The girls' game will start at 6:30 each night and the boys' will take the court at 8 p.m. The champions will advance to Wilson for one of the two state regionals where the winner will then travel to Greensboro for the high school championship.

LSU Win Mark Now Longest In Nation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Now that fourth-ranked Louisiana State has the nation's longest active winning streak, basketball Coach Dale Brown has raised his sights to a far loftier mark.

"All year long, I've asked this team to dream along with me," Brown said after his team's 67-57 victory over Texas A&M on Sunday. "And now, I told them about one more."

"Do you realize, if we win our last two regular season games, then win three games in the conference tournament, then win five games in the NCAA, we will have won more games in one season than any major college team in history."

The Tigers are 26-1, with a 25-game winning streak. Top-ranked Virginia's streak was stopped at 28 — 23 of them this season — with a 57-56 loss Sunday to Notre Dame.

If all of Brown's ifs come true, LSU will have won 36 games in a season, become the first Southeastern Conference team in a quarter-century to finish the year with an unblemished conference record, and taken the national championship.

They would have beaten such marks as Indiana State's 33-1 record in 1979, and the 32-0 marks set by Indiana in 1976 and North Carolina in 1957.

The day before beating A&M, Louisiana State took the Southeastern Conference championship with a 65-64 squeaker over Tennessee. The Tigers host Mississippi on Wednesday night and close the regular season at Kentucky on Sunday.

Brown said Sunday that it took a team of dreamers to get LSU where it is.

"How about that — the nation's longest winning streak is in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. That's why you have to be a dreamer. We have a lot of guys who dream, big dreams and work to make them come true."

Steelwheels Lose, 43-41; Season Over

RALEIGH — The Greenville Steelwheels' 1980-81 season came to an end here this weekend when they dropped a close 43-41 decision to the Capital City Hustlers in the conference tournament's first round.

The Steelwheels were led in the scoring by Richard Hudson's 14 points.

None of the Steelwheels made the all-conference team, named this weekend, but Hudson was named coach of the year.

Also this weekend, the league voted to establish a sportsmanship award in the name of Tim Harris, a former Steelwheel player who died of cancer last month. The award will be given each year beginning next season.

Stress Athletes Not Immune

By FRED ROTHENBERG
 AP Sports Writer

Part of being an athlete is being a hero, a superman. And for a long time the culture has assumed that athletes, because they were steely physically, were naturally strong emotionally.

Tradition taught athletes that's what they were supposed to be. Tradition taught fans they could expect it.

But today some athletes and coaches are acknowledging they're mortal. Baseball players like Darrell Porter, Bob Welch and Reggie Jackson, football players like Jim Plunkett and Lynn Swann, and even the young Olympic hockey star, Jim Craig, are casting aside the old cloak of stoicism. They're saying that like most of us, they suffer stress that affects physical and mental well-being, their home lives and their performances.

"It isn't easy being an athlete," said Dr. Bruce Ogilvie, a prominent sports consultant to many amateur and professional teams. "You can't imagine the stresses weighing down on them. They're asked to be excellent every time they put on their uniforms. When we place human beings in front of audiences requiring excellence everytime, it's no wonder they sometimes turn to drugs and alcohol and have a high incidence of psychosomatic disorders."

The lifestyle can be glamorous, the money wonderful. But pro sports careers are short. While most of us have a few decades in which to make our marks, the athlete is driven to make it big quickly. What he's going to do when the cheering stops is another matter. Job security, the nomadic lifestyle, striving for approval from coaches, teammates and a fickle public all intensify the day-to-day stress of his job.

Sports physicians, teams and leagues are beginning to acknowledge the stresses. And some are trying to help athletes cope. In the area of alcohol and drug abuse, the sports leagues generally see their roles as disciplinary, yet some are helping troubled athletes get into drug and alcohol rehabilitation centers.

Some teams are offering psychological counseling for other problems. Some are trying to help athletes make the transition when their sports careers end and it's time for a second career.

The medical profession has taken up sports as a specialized field of treatment. And psychiatrists and psychologists are playing a bigger role.

There is good and bad stress, according to Dr. Hans Selye of the University of Montreal, a leading authority on the subject.

And stress heightens the senses and creates or sustains energy. Good stress is part of being "up" for an event. It can improve performance.

"Stress that helps performance — arousal, getting up for an event — is healthy. It's like a violin string. Tension is good. But too little or too much isn't good for the right note," said Dr. Kenneth Greenspan, director of the center for stress-related disorders at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York.

Bad stress can hamper athletic performance, make athletes more injury-prone, cause depression and family rifts, and it drives some to excessive alcohol and drug use.

Athletes find ways to shield themselves from overdoses of stress. Some use conventional ways of relaxing, like deep-breathing or trying to ignore pressure. Others have more unusual ways of coping.

Before a game, basketball great Bill Russell used to throw up; then he knew he was ready. Chicago Black Hawks goalie Glenn Hall would lose his lunch between periods. Darrell Griffith of the Utah Jazz used hypnosis to help his defense when he played at Louisville.

Other athletes have used transcendental meditation, exercises, religion and drugs to get ready for a competition.

The examples of athletes tensing up and not playing well are legion. So are the cases when an athlete, looking for a milestone goal or victory, presses too much, disrupting his normal game patterns. The goal or victory often takes much longer to achieve.

It cannot be said with any certainty how widespread drug and alcohol use are among athletes, but many coaches and players say that both are common in sports and that some athletes use them to ease the tensions.

Hollywood Henderson, the flamboyant former Dallas Cowboy, now a free agent, recently checked into a rehabilitation center, saying he had a $1,000-a-day cocaine habit that was destroying his career. Terry Furlow of the Utah Jazz was killed in a car crash in 1980. The coroner's report disclosed traces of cocaine and valium in his blood. Last year, baseball's Porter, Welch and Dock Ellis admitted their alcoholism and enrolled in a rehabilitation center.

These are dramatic examples. But even for well-balanced athletes, stress is a fact of life.

"There's no question I don't have as much outward enthusiasm anymore," said veteran Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver. "I found through experience that what I enjoy is the experience of pitching itself. When it's over, it's over. I don't take things as personally as I used to. I keep baseball in perspective. I don't get tremendously high or tremendously low."

All athletes are subject to bouts with nerves. Golfer Tom Watson used to be called a choker. But he was learning how to win; now he's the best player in the game.

Williamston Girls Fall In Title Game

WILLIAMSTON — Plymouth outscoring the Tigers, 14-6, to lead at the end of the period, 36-18, before coasting home with the win.

Theresa Duffy led the Tigers with 10 points.

Williamston (28) — Everett 2 1-2; Edwards 1 1-2 3; Smith 1 0-4 2; Duffy 5 0-1 10; Mills 1 2-2 4; Rodgers 2 0-0 4; Totals 12-4-11 28.
 Plymouth (46) — Rowan 2 1-3 5; Bell 5 5-6 15; Clark 3 0-0 6; Small 4 0-0 8; Chesson 2 5-10 9; Fuller 0 2-2 2; Fenner 0 1-2 1; Totals 16-14-23 46.
 Williamston 8 4 6 10-28
 Plymouth 10 12 14 10-46

The Lady Tigers needed a victory in the tournament championship to go to the districts, but failed to win mainly because of a 15-point effort by Plymouth's Louise Bell.

In the boys' title game, Tarboro defeated Edenton, 72-67. Tarboro, 21-4, will play North Pitt, 15-9, Wednesday night in the first round of the districts and Edenton, 15-8, will play D.H. Conley, 17-6, Tuesday night.

Plymouth edged out to a 10-8 lead after the first period but a 12-4 surge in the second period had the Vikings in command at the half, 22-12. Plymouth added to its lead in the third period,

Miller Returning To Top?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Miller, a star on the PGA Tour in the mid 1970s, and one of its biggest disappointments since, may at last be fulfilling the recurring predictions that he would return to the top.

Miller won the $300,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open Sunday for his second victory of 1981 — the first time since 1976 that he has won more than a single tournament in one year.

During the years immediately following 1976 Miller would have settled for one victory. Not until 1980 did he win again when he captured the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

No wonder the blond from Northern California was down on himself. "I thought about quitting last year, but I didn't want to quit because it would be a bad motivation for my 10-year-old son," he recalled after receiving the $54,000 winner's check Sunday.

Miller shrugged off the despondency of his losing years with that 1980 victory, and came back to win the 1981 Tour opener, the Tucson Open. Now, he has added the Los Angeles event, with a two-stroke margin, and a tournament record score.

On the sixth hole, Miller sank a 12-foot putt that put him a stroke ahead of Weiskopf and he never was headed.

He also birdied the seventh with a 10-foot putt and sank a 40-footer on the 14th to all but wrap up the triumph.

After going to Brigham Young University, Miller burst on the professional scene. He won the U.S. Open in 1973, eight tournaments in 1974 and four more in 1975.

It came fast, and a rocket went up. As fast as when it did, Miller was holding the title.

"I lost some sponsors but some stayed with me, and I'm grateful to them," said Miller, who has six youngsters and lives in Napa, Calif.

Movie For 'Evita' Inevitable

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You've seen the musical! Now watch the TV movie! Love, Adventure, Authoritarianism! "Evita Peron!"

Yes, Eva Peron has made it ... again. She was never officially sainted, as her adoring "shirtless ones" of Argentina would have had it, but her memory has attained a status only slightly less lofty — four hours of prime time TV in her honor.

What a curious thing is pop culture, which has resurrected a quarter-century-dead Argentinian enchantress and erected show-biz monuments in her honor.

"Evita," the stunning musical play that chronicles Eva's up-from-rags life, made Evita Peron a household name on the American coasts and in any city in between that happened to be visited by a touring company.

A movie was inevitable. And NBC's "Evita Peron," running tonight and Tuesday, is something to see. It gives flesh and blood to that phantasmic Evita of the musical, going perhaps as far as possible toward explaining Evita's incredible rise to power and near-defecation.

Faye Dunaway, who is herself possessed of a certain burning charisma, makes Evita almost tangible, tempering all that crackling magnetism by suggesting the steely-eyed determination of a manipulative opportunist, which Evita certainly was.

It's here that this movie shines brightest, bothering to illuminate the various aspects of Eva Peron rather than settling for an easy black or white depiction. She fed and clothed the poor, mesmerized the masses. But she did so, at least in part, to nourish her own power base. She gave hope, but her generosity was premised on graft and corruption, and supported by strong-arm tactics.

She was a woman who, being presented her country's highest honor, The Collar of St. Martin, on her deathbed, managed to choke back death long enough to inquire, "How many diamonds?"

It's a fascinating movie, capping a spectacular post-mortem career.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, while studying a comprehensive plan of financial assistance to Poland, will allow the financially troubled country to defer repayment of more than $80 million in debts to the United States, it was reported today.

The Reagan administration's decision was expected to be announced at a Paris meeting of representatives of Poland's Western creditors. The Washington Post reported.

Allow Poles More Time

The newspaper, quoting State Department sources, said the debt deferral was a first step in aiding the Polish government, which has been beset by labor strife and economic ills.

The Post said the deferred debt involves funds of the Commodity Credit Corp., which is part of the Agriculture Department.

A State Department spokeswoman declined comment on the newspaper report.

The Soviet Union last week gave Poland a four-year deferral on the repayment of its debt.

The Post said the Western nations attending the Paris meeting, which begins today, also are expected to make financial pledges to Poland.

Poland owes about $23 billion to Western creditors, mostly European banks and nations. The U.S. share of that debt is estimated at $2.5 billion, mostly in government loans.

Under the terms of its borrowing, Poland is required to pay more than $10 billion annually in principal and interest, according to the Post.

Phillips and his wife Genevieve's heroin and cocaine addictions.

"I know Mackenzie felt she would never be able to live again without cocaine," Phillips said. "And I felt there was no life for me after heroin."

Phillips and his wife checked into the drug rehabilitation program at Fair Oaks hospital in Summit, N.J. in September and were joined two months later by Mackenzie, who weighed but 90 pounds at 5-foot-7 and had nearly died twice from cocaine overdoses.

Program director Dr. Mark Gold says the Phillips family is near recovery under a regimen of psychiatric counseling, rigorous physical exercise, diet control and nonaddictive withdrawal drugs.

Harry Chapin Learned Few Attend A 'Benefit'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Harry Chapin recently turned 38, performed his 2,000th concert and TV's

HARRY CHAPIN

"Midnight Special" on which he performed his 1972 hit "Taxi" for the 2,000th time. In 1980 he had his first hit in 5½ years, "Sequel." It's a sequel to "Taxi."

He made an LP, "Sequel," on Boardwalk Records, after 10 on Elektra, campaigned for five Republicans and 19 Democrats for Congress "who were good on food and hunger issues. World hunger shouldn't be a partisan issue."

With as many statistics easily available as a baseball fan, still Chapin can say, "The news about Harry Chapin is there is no news. I've been doing this a lot of years and I'm going to continue doing it. Some people who didn't like my music now say, 'Whatever else, he's consistent.' There's some virtue in consistency, even in this ephemeral industry."

"Nobody during the past decade so consistently has used the extended narrative form. For stories of ordinary people and cosmic moments in their noncosmic lives, you have to turn back to Harry Chapin."

"And I think I've had the most social and political involvement of any singer-songwriter in America. Jackson Browne has been consistent on the nuclear power thing but there hasn't been much competition for that title."

"I made a speech to the National Association of Record Manufacturers, I called it my 'Dance Band on the Titanic' speech. I told them if all the music industry does is create diversion in the ballrooms and doesn't notice the icebergs outside, it is going to make people not care to listen to music. If all you're doing is entertaining and you don't sensitize, you're only doing half of what music is all about."

"The last two trends, disco and new wave, really haven't convinced people. They left a giant hole where people like Kenny Rogers have put nice songs people relate to."

Last year, Chapin gave 250 concerts, his most ever. More than half, 130 to 135, were benefits. He says, "I don't tell people they're benefits. I do regular concerts and turn over the money and pay my own expenses."

"More people are insecure about supporting a cause than supporting a person's cocaine habit. I believe if you gave two concerts and announced one was a benefit, more people would come to the other one. They hear the word benefit and think they're not going to get their money's worth." Chapin's friendly manner and voice keep his observations from sounding bitter.

In the last three years, bad ones for the record and concert business, he has had increasingly successful years. "Even before 'Sequel' was on the radio, I was having a better year than the last year. The only other people who could say that were people with super hot hits."

"I think when the dollar is low, people want to go for value. They don't want to see the latest flash in the pan. I'm not pandering in terms of what is popular in music; I do what I do. I give away so much, they know I'm not just skimming the cream and getting out of town."

From Jan. 29 to Feb. 16, Chapin gave 15 concerts in England. The last two weeks of May he'll perform in Australia and the first two weeks in July in Japan, the Philippines and Taiwan. He's the biggest, he says, in Canada, the British Isles and Australia, where integration of music and social issues seems natural to listeners.

From the middle of September to next January, Chapin will stay at home — he has once in 10 years taken off 3½ weeks at one time — while his wife, Sandy, goes out to teach poetry, creative arts and education at Adelphi University on Long Island.

"She is getting her Ph.D. from Columbia University. I've recorded 105 songs I've written. She has written lyrics on four.

Father, Daughter In Drug Treatment

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mackenzie Phillips, 21, and her musician father, John Phillips, are undergoing treatment for drug addiction together after squandering their fortunes, their careers and nearly their lives on heroin and cocaine, the two say.

Fired last year from her starring role on TV's "One Day At A Time," Miss Phillips said in an interview in this week's People magazine that she had "always wanted to be like my father ... even though he was a junkie."

"I wanted the weird life, and I went for it, and I got it," she said.

Phillips, founder of the 1960s rock group the Mamas and Papas, which recorded hits such as "Monday, Monday," said he spent more than $1 million a year supporting his and his third wife Genevieve's heroin and cocaine addictions.

A Review Buffett Concert Stirs Overflow Audience Here

With no introduction except "here's Jimmy Buffett," the performer dubbed the "Mayor of Margaritaville" quietly stepped into a blue spotlight at Minges Coliseum Saturday night and spun the magic that earned him his reputation.

Despite a crowd that persisted in standing, (to the chagrin of those behind the first four rows) Buffett and his Coral Reefers Band gave a superb performance.

Buffett, in control from the start, told the too-large-to-begin-with crowd, "Don't be throwing any frisbees up on stage — it scares me to death!" The singer/songwriter then opened the show alone with several numbers on his guitar. "Stranded On A Sandbar" and the usually dynamic "Changes in Latitudes, Changes in Attitudes" became mellow pieces with Buffett's accompaniment.

After this initial interlude, the band joined Buffett in a two and one-half hour recitation of songs from "Pencil Thin Moustache" to "The Good Fight" with equal ease, the Coral Reefers, featuring Greg "Fingers" Taylor on the harmonica, Mike Utley on the electric piano, and vocalist Deborah McCall, gave a hearty and enthusiastic show.

Buffett played a number of songs from each of his albums, featuring "Come Monday," "Trying To Reason With Hurricane Season," "A Pirate Looks At 40," "Volcano," and "Son of a Sailor." At the demand of the crowd, he encored twice, singing "Stars Fell On Alabama," and whipping the crowd into a frenzy with "Fins."

Buffett's sound and light crew are to be commended. The lights especially were handled beautifully, with blue and red lights alternating to spotlight Buffett and his band. Several different backgrounds were used during the show, including a pirate ship mural that matches Buffett's bus, and a striking portrait of a volcano.

Buffett's concert was, despite the crowd, dynamic and powerful. He and the Coral Reefers seemed to enjoy the performance as much as the audience. Smiles crept onto the singer's face at every round of applause, and frequently during songs. In the words of a song from Buffett's latest album, "It's my job to be better than the rest," and on Saturday night at Minges he was.

 Q R X X

Saturday's Cryptoquip — ARMOR SUIT AND HALBERD ARE A BIG LAUGH TO MODERN SOLDIER.
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
 1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q873 ♥J652 ♦8 ♣A85
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♦ 1 ♠
 Pass 2 ♦ Dble. Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—First of all, partner's double is for takeout—you have not yet bid. He must have a pretty good hand and you could hardly have a better hand considering that you have not yet said a word. You want to play in partner's better major. You can get him to show it by cue-bidding three diamonds. Naturally, you intend raising to game whichever major partner bids.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AJ7 ♥8743 ♦K764 ♣92
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North South West
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner is making a general strength game try. In support of hearts, your hand is worth 9 plus points—almost a maximum. Accept his try by all means—bid four hearts.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A62 ♥KQ87 ♦7 ♣K9842
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You started out with a near minimum opening bid. Partner's one heart response has improved your hand quite a bit, but not enough to warrant a jump raise of his suit. Your hand revalues to 15 points, which is only a solid raise to two hearts.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q107 ♥6 ♦QJ65 ♣98543
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1 ♥ Dble. ?

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠872 ♥KJ97652 ♣932
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Give thanks that, so far, you have not been doubled. We would recommend a bid of three diamonds if you could be sure that partner would pass. Unfortunately, he is far more likely to return to three hearts. Pass. Don't rescue partner when he is not yet in trouble. There is time enough to pull to three diamonds if the opponents double.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K10762 ♥7 ♦A5 ♣AKJ75
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 Pass 1 ♦ Dble. Pass
 2 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—If you elected to jump to six spades, we would not blame you one bit. Even though partner passed originally, he has since come to life with two jump bids, and it is hard to place him with a hand that will not offer good play for slam. To be sure, you should check for aces first by bidding four no trump.

FOCUS

Communist Party Convention

The Communist Party of the Soviet Union is scheduled to begin its 26th party congress today. The party, which holds a meeting every 5 years, is the center of power in the Soviet Union. It permits no other political parties to exist. The Soviet Communist Party is highly centralized. Its top leaders make all important decisions for the party and, in effect, for the nation. The party's 14½ million members, and the rest of the nation, must accept their decisions. To join the party, a citizen must be loyal to the government. The party especially recruits teachers, government workers, and members of the military to gain better control over those fields.

HAVE TIMES REALLY CHANGED?

33 Years ago when I entered the life insurance business I felt it was my responsibility to help people provide for their family's security through a life insurance program. That was what my business was all about.

Over the years, the insurance industry and life underwriters, including myself, have become so specialized and sophisticated with programs of Deferred Compensation, Profit Sharing, Pension Plans, Split Dollar and the like, we've almost overlooked the most important people, your widow and your children.

Well, times have changed, but my responsibility to you certainly has not. Your family's security is still the most important thing to me, and "that's the name of the game."

Booger

When you consider your next purchase of Life Insurance call one of us or one of the other 61 fine agents who are members of the Pitt County Life Underwriters Association.
